THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1834.

The Legislature of Maryland convened yesterday. One of the first acts of the Legislature, after its organization, will be to elect a Senator in Congress to fill the place of the Honorable R. F. Chambers, resigned.

Massachusetts.—In the 8th Congressional District Mr. Hoar has been elected, and in the 10th no choice has been made.

A resolution has passed the Senate of Virginia, postponing the election of Senator in the place of Mr. Leigh until the 12th of February.

The House of Representatives of South Carolina, by a unanimous vote, passed a bill to incorporate a new Bank in Charleston, to be called the "Charleston Bank," with a capital of $2,000,000, with the privilege to increase it to $4,000,000.—The bill will probably pass the Senate by a large majority.

Petitions are in circulation in some of the counties of Pennsylvania praying the Legislature to pass an act prohibiting the circulation of Bank notes of a less denomination than twenty Dollars.

Gold.—$100,000 in Gold, arrived at New York on Friday last in the Packet from Havre.

Specie.—The schooner Magnet, from Tampico, has on board $71,078 for different merchants in New York.

We have the pleasure of announcing the arrival at New York, on Wednesday last of the packet ship Emerald, from Havre, with 10,000 gold Napoleons, being the 1st more of the first instalment of the Napoleon Indemnity, which has now been fully paid, and receipts in the country.—Globe.

In the Legislature of Ohio, resolutions have been offered, prohibiting the introduction into that State of slaves for sale or hire, by other than residents, or persons about to become so, and imposing penalties to the amount of $500 on any such humanity.

The Georgia Judge, Hooper, who decided against the constitutionality of the laws of that State in reference to the Cherokee Indians, appears to have incurred himself highly obnoxious to the State authorities. In the Legislature on the 8th inst. the following resolution was passed, and a committee appointed to carry it into effect:

Resolved, That a committee be forthwith appointed, for the purpose of investigating the entire judicial character of the said Judge Hooper, and that said committee have power to send for persons and papers, and should they deem it expedient, to report by articles of impeachment, by address, or otherwise.

A letter from New Castle, Del., says: "Four days after a fool of eight days returned their verdict on the 6th inst. in the Caveat case of T. Chandler's will, which twenty thousand dollars were devised to educate colored children.—Three sons no will. The ground on which the jury rendered this will impious, was that of undue influence, and a departure by the scrivener who wrote it, from the letter of the written instructions given him by the testator. The trial was of considerable interest, and rendered memorable the argument on behalf of the Caveators was in part by a eloquent rhetorician and eugenious lawyer, John M. Clayton, of the U. S. Senate."

A WINDFALL.

McLoughlin's Lottery was drawn on Saturday morning last, and we learn, that the first prize, consisting of the Tatnall Hotel at Elliott's Mills, with the addition upon the Hall-road, the large stone stables, Carriage and fine Horses, and the splendid Garden, which was the Capital Prize, valued at $16,000, was drawn to Sam Stout and Joseph Harling, of this city, who fortunate owner. Mr Harling had recently been engaged in executing some writing for the late owner of the above property, and for his fidelity and attention to the business, with which he had been entrusted, he was presented with the ticket, which had turned out so fortunate for him. We are informed that Mr. Stout, immediately after the drawing, offered $12,000 for the property, which he refused.

Another.—Robert Campbell of this town, lights at the City Hotel, was the fortunate owner of ticket No. 60, which drew the dwelling house, valued at $1,000.

Lieut. C. Ringgold, of the Navy, was the owner of ticket No. 4,695, which drew the elegant Angelo Cottage, valued at $2,000.

And 50 more.—Mr. Thomas Sexton, formerly news collector at the Fort of Baltimore, was fortunate in purchasing a quarter ticket, in the Literators Lottery, drawn on Friday, which drew one quarter of $10,000; but he was as unfortunate as to lose his ticket, on the morning of the day of drawing. Mr Sexton is a large amount not long since in one of our Lotteries.—Balt. Repub.

Foreign News.

LATE FROM FRANCE.

PARIS, Oct. 14.

The old news of the New York Journal of Commerce received by Captain Pell, of the packet ship Normandie, for a Galignani's Messenger of Saturday evening, Nov. 15th—the only Paris paper of that date which was on board. It contains news of the breaking up of the new Ministry, of the Loan just raised here, but precisely from what cause, we are unable to ascertain. The account says, "It is said to be connected with a determination of the King to enforce the law relating to the fulfilment of the treaty with Portugal, by the payment to the Portuguese Government of the sum of 25,000 francs, which the Chamber of Peers has refused to do, unless the Chamber of Deputies shall first vote the money."

THE MINISTRY.

PARIS, Nov. 15.

The Moniteur of this morning is still silent upon the dissolution of the Cabinet.

The Journal des Débats says: "The Minister of the Interior, President of the Council, the Minister of War, and also the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the Minister of Commerce, the Minister of Finances, and the Minister of Marine, have all tendered their resignations to the King, which he has accepted."

The Gazette de Francinions with four others, says, "Marshal Gérard, the Duke de Broglie, Count d'Argout, and Count Montalivet, have tendered their resignations."

The Gazette says, "On Thursday evening a Council of Peers, chosen from the Council of Ministers, was held at the Tuileries."

There is not important question, said to be before the new Cabinet, the bill for the amnesty, passed by the Chamber of Peers, although it has not yet received the royal sanction, is the Chamber of Deputies, which is to assemble on the 24th inst. The Chamber of Peers, on the 10th inst. by a majority of 120 to 30, rejected the bill for the Indemnity to the Portuguese, which was passed by the Chamber of Deputies, by a majority of 10 votes. The Chamber, was crowded.

This was enough to enable the new Ministry to form a Cabinet, but it was not so easy to form the Ministry, when mention was made of the Count Montalivet, Minister of Finance, and Count Molé, Minister of Foreign Affairs, it was found that the Duke de Broglie, Count d'Argout, and Marshal Gérard, would not accept office, unless the Ministry should be reconstructed, and the Count Molé, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and the Count Montalivet, Minister of Finance, should be retained in their offices. The Ministry, as it now stands, is composed of the following persons:

Count Molé, President of the Council and Minister of Foreign Affairs.
Count Montalivet, Minister of Finance.
Marshal Gérard, Minister of War.
Count d'Argout, Minister of Commerce.
Duke de Broglie, Minister of Interior.
Admiral Rosamel, Minister of Marine.

The Count Montalivet, Minister of Finance, is the son of a Member of the Convention, who was proscribed by the Directory, and died in exile. The Count Molé, Minister of Foreign Affairs, is the son of the celebrated Count Molé, who was guillotined during the Revolution. The Duke de Broglie, Minister of Interior, is the son-in-law of the celebrated Madame de Staël. Marshal Gérard, Minister of War, is the celebrated Marshal Gérard, who was created a Marshal of France by Louis Philippe, for his services in the Revolution of 1830, and who commanded the French troops in the Belgic Revolution, and was created King of Belgium by the Congress of Belgium, which place he declined. Count d'Argout, Minister of Commerce, is a Peer of France, and was Minister of Finance in the Cabinet of Count Molé, in 1832. Admiral Rosamel, Minister of Marine, is a Peer of France, and was Governor of Algiers, and Minister of Marine in the Cabinet of Count Molé, in 1832.

The Paris correspondent of Lloyd's, says, "The prospect of a change, for the worse, of the Ministry, has caused a fall of 20 centimes, perhaps also the prospect of the Coming fall of members of the Peace Party, all had concurred to cause the fall. Upon the whole, the aspect of Europe's disarming, the Marshal's resignation, and the Ministerial crisis, is not a cheering one."

The Paris correspondent of the Courier says, "The Ministerial crisis, which was expected, has at last arrived. The Ministry, as it now stands, is composed of the following persons, viz. Count Molé, President of the Council, and Minister of Foreign Affairs; Count Montalivet, Minister of Finance; Marshal Gérard, Minister of War; Count d'Argout, Minister of Commerce; Duke de Broglie, Minister of Interior; Admiral Rosamel, Minister of Marine. The Count Molé, Minister of Foreign Affairs, is the son of the celebrated Count Molé, who was guillotined during the Revolution. The Duke de Broglie, Minister of Interior, is the son-in-law of the celebrated Madame de Staël. Marshal Gérard, Minister of War, is the celebrated Marshal Gérard, who was created a Marshal of France by Louis Philippe, for his services in the Revolution of 1830, and who commanded the French troops in the Belgic Revolution, and was created King of Belgium by the Congress of Belgium, which place he declined. Count d'Argout, Minister of Commerce, is a Peer of France, and was Minister of Finance in the Cabinet of Count Molé, in 1832. Admiral Rosamel, Minister of Marine, is a Peer of France, and was Governor of Algiers, and Minister of Marine in the Cabinet of Count Molé, in 1832. The Count Montalivet, Minister of Finance, is the son of a Member of the Convention, who was proscribed by the Directory, and died in exile

POETRY.

The lines which follow are taken from the "Minstrel Girl," by Thos. G. Walsh. They are beautiful, both from the tenderness of their imagery, and the [illegible] of their numbers.

She leaves Lagan's bower for under the [illegible]
The golden sunlight in long thin [illegible]
The tangled branches, as the breeze
And every pinioned bird is silent
Around the bower and at the [illegible]
Awaking with a [illegible]
Is unseen spirit set to [illegible]
Earth's perfume to the [illegible]
That nice lay before her [illegible]
Like a broad fisher, [illegible]
The scattered beams of day [illegible]
To one [illegible]
And broad and [illegible]
As quickened by some spirit [illegible]
In very wanton dancing [illegible]
To music [illegible]

And there she [illegible] that minstrel lay
The breeze [illegible] wanton [illegible]
Where curls [illegible] and [illegible]
Or parted lip and [illegible]
Her dark and [illegible]
In battle [illegible]
And round her [illegible]
Was like [illegible]
Forgetful of closing [illegible]
Had [illegible]
And on the [illegible]
The fever [illegible]

And early she had [illegible]
Each holy chord [illegible]
The changing early [illegible]
Were power [illegible]
She [illegible]
Like music [illegible]
The stirring [illegible]
The stations [illegible]
The fall of [illegible]
The sighs [illegible]
At even [illegible]
The [illegible]

But chief [illegible]
Its golden [illegible]
To form the [illegible]
Of music [illegible]
The sun went down [illegible]
One moment, [illegible]
Rested his front [illegible]
A glory round [illegible]
And sunset, [illegible]
A banner from [illegible]
A wave of hazy glory [illegible]

THE YOUTH, THE SERPENT AND THE COW AND ASS.

An Arabian youth, [illegible] to the custom of [illegible] sure fabled camel, [illegible] vast desert of Kerman, [illegible] of the caravan, and [illegible] on the borders of a [illegible] er of Allah, and [illegible] destruction. He looked about [illegible] distance from him, [illegible] young element, a large [illegible] as it seemed, in its [illegible] bound and extended [illegible] of the flames.

On observing the approach [illegible] ler, the serpent [illegible] "Oh youth! pity my miserable condition, and although we are, at [illegible] enemies, yet extend a helping hand, and save me from the wretched fate which [illegible] out assistance, instantly awaits me."

The youth had drunk deeply of the bitter cup of adversity, and from experience [illegible] learned the value of kindly [illegible] sion. He said, "[illegible] mazion, that to serve the wicked is to injure the good," yet thy condition and plea [illegible] and thy destruction so [illegible] I have [illegible] thee, that I will for once act contrary to the advice of the wise." Having said this, he fixed his wallet to the point of his spear, and stretching out the hand of assistance, advised the serpent to take speedily advantage of the means of escape offered to him. The serpent lost no time in coiling himself upon the bag, and was drawn safely out of his perilous situation.

"Go," said the youth, "whenever thy inclination may lead thee, and henceforth, out of gratitude for the service now rendered thee, abstain from injuring mankind."

"Stay!" asked the serpent, "[illegible] require me to abandon the obstacles of my very nature? Knowest thou not that it is an inherent principle fixed within me, which bids—nay, commands me to do all the harm I can to every son of man? I cannot and will not give up that disposition, which is now planted within me by my Creator; and I will not go from this spot, till I have inserted my deadly fangs both into thee and the camel."

"Do! but this instant," replied the youth, "render thee an important service? And among what class of God's creatures is it the custom for such a evil for good? and with what reason it shall [illegible] such a [illegible]

"[illegible]" said the youth, "[illegible] reached the [illegible] his attention to the bag hanging at the saddle-bow; by means of which he had been drawn out of the flames.—"Now," said the fox, "I know thou speakest what is false; for how could a serpent of thy great size be contained in so small a compass?"

Ere he indeed arrived foot on the destined [illegible] the youth, was anxious to prove to the [illegible] truth of the assertion, and offered to convince him by again placing himself within the bag. The fox said, that if indeed he would [illegible] it with his own eyes, he [illegible] would, and would then fairly [illegible] the middle circle between them." Upon the young man stretched open the mouth of the bag, and the serpent, decoyed by the wiles of the wily fox, coiled himself in it as it was before.

The fox instantly called, "O youth, thus [illegible] with the cruelty of the power give him a [illegible] lesson to his Lord, spare him not."

The youth, with all speed, closed the mouth of the bag, and dashing it with violence to the ground [illegible] himself and [illegible] the serpent [illegible]

FORCE OF IMAGINATION.

A few years ago a celebrated physician, author of an excellent work on imagination being desirous to add experimental to his theoretical knowledge, made application to the Minister of Justice to be allowed as opportunity of proving what he asserted, by an experiment on a criminal condemned to death. The minister complied with his request, and delivered over to him an assassin, a man who had been born of distinguished parents. The physician told him that several persons who had taken an interest in his family and obtained leave of the minister that he should suffer death in some other way than on the scaffold, to spend the disgrace of a public execution, and that the easiest death he could the would be by blood letting. The criminal agreed to the proposal, and counted himself happy in being freed from the painful exhibition which he would otherwise have been made of, and rejoiced at thus being able to spare his friends and family.

At the time appointed the physician repaired to the prison, and the pain of bleeding been extended on the table, his eyes bound, and every thing ready, he was slightly pricked near the principal veins of the legs and arms with the point of a pin. At the four corners of the table were four [illegible] filled with water, from which rows of small [illegible] falling into basins placed to receive them. The patient, thinking [illegible] had that was trickling into the basins became weaker and weaker by degrees, and [illegible] marks of the medical man in attendance in reference to the spirits and appearance of the blood (made with that intention) increased the delusion, and he [illegible] and soon [illegible] death ensued [illegible] audible. The professional [illegible] which [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] the
