The state having become a stockholder by subscribing five hundred thousand dollars to the stock of the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road company, for the construction of a Rail Road from Baltimore to the city of Washington, that does not furnish a sufficient reason for the claim to indemnification, and that the giving practical effect to the principle of indemnification as prayed for, would be establishing a dangerous precedent, calculated to defeat the liberal and enlightened support which the state has bestowed in aid of works of internal improvement, suited to the improvements of the age, and the increased wants of the people of the state. Your committee, therefore, unanimously state, that in their judgment, it is inexpedient to grant the prayer of the memorialists, and recommend that they have leave to withdraw the same.

Mr. Miller, of Kent, from the select committee to which was referred the petition of Godfrey Meyer and others, praying for an act of incorporation for themselves and their associates, under the name of the President and Managers of the Thomsonian National Infirmary, delivered the following report:

The committee to whom was referred the petition of Godfrey Meyer and others, for an act of incorporation for themselves and their associates, under the name of the President and Managers of the Thomsonian National Infirmary, respectfully report:

Your committee have given the subject of this petition, a full and deliberate examination, in the view of the many and active prejudices which have at all times opposed the introduction of any new system, and with a deep sense of the responsibility which they would assume in bestowing Legislative sanction, even remotely, upon any system of doubtful utility. They recognise the importance of great caution and much reflection in unsettled old theories and established practice, in a matter so important, as the remedy of human disease; and especially when the transition proposed might possibly be, to the dangers of uncertain empiricism. But, in their present inquiry, they have been aided by the results of the investigations before the legislatures of other states, whereby the Thomsonian system has been justified as worthy of the public experiment; and more than all, your committee has been sustained by that important test, and the daily expanding confidence of the community in the virtues of that mode of treatment and cure of diseases.

The abuse of the theories and practice of Thomson by ignorant persons cannot militate against its intrinsic excellence, any more than violent opposition of learned physicians, to the conflicting theories of each other, should be held as conclusive evidence against the advantages of medical science.

Of all sciences, the knowledge of diseases and the means of cure, must be supposed in due reverence for Almighty Goodness, to have been intended, as most simple and easy of attainment. It is essentially, a science of experience. To day, banishes as unprofitable, if not injurious, the accepted doctrines of yesterday, and those of to-day must yield the palm to the more certain dictates of more enlightened observation. It is, essentially, therefore, a progressive science, to the perfection of which, each day of human life and human observation may bring its tributary of improvement.

Mr. Ely then moved to lay the said order on the table,

On which the question was put and determined in the negative.

Mr. Ely then moved to refer said order to the first day of June next;

Upon which the question was put and resolved in the affirmative.

The clerk of the senate returned the bill, authorizing the Levy court of Frederick county, to levy a sum of money to erect a Bridge over Tom's creek, near the village of Emmitsburg.

Also, the bill, to provide for the erection adopted it, and may win over to its support the talents and learning of enlightened men. If the project fail, and the experiment thus made, in the view of public scrutiny and scientific criticism, result unfavourably; if the practice be ascertained under all these sanctions, to be unfitness for general benefit, and unworthy to have a place among the useful sciences; the legislature will have, even then, occasion to rejoice, that they have not denied to its advocates the opportunity of a full and public investigation.

The public will not then sustain the establishment, and it will fall into a decay, congenial with the ruin of the system, which it is intended to exhibit in an authentic form.

Which was read,

Accompanied with a bill entitled, an act to incorporate the President and managers of the Thomsonian National Infirmary.

Mr. Merrick, (with the leave of the house,) presented a petition of Zachariah Webster and Mildred his wife, of Charles county, praying for a divorce.

The clerk of the senate delivered the following communication from the Treasurer of the Western shore, endorsed, "read and referred to the consideration of the house of delegates."

WESTERN SHORE TREASURY. Annapolis, Feb. 3, 1834—9 A.M.

To the honourable

The General Assembly of Maryland,

Gentlemen,

The Treasurer considers it his duty to inform you that, since the first of December last, when there remained in the Treasury

831,830 28

His receipts have amounted to 35,532 46

Making 67,382 74

And that his disbursements, (including the payment at the bank, of $3,430 12 on account of the Journal,) have amounted to 67,013 98

Leaving in the treasury, only 8368 76

Which will probably have been paid away before noon to day.

The treasury proper will then have been exhausted, and in the absence of other means, can be sustained, only by using the cash to the credit of the school funds and sinking funds which now amounts to $20,201 99.

This he has been forced to do in the recess of the general assembly, on several occasions before, and particularly in October last, when with great anxiety for the result, he was obliged very nearly to exhaust them too, there being but $1400 of them left on the second of November, when the pressure ceased.

It is of course to be understood that, in using such means, the treasurer has taken care not to interrupt the accumulation of the sinking funds, or the payments on account of the school funds.

The recurrence of the necessity, and for the first time so early in the year, admonishes him that he may not safely rely on them any longer, to sustain him through the fiscal year; and as the laws of the state do not sanction such a resort in any circumstances, and certainly should not do so with a prospect of interrupting the operation of the funds, he would hold himself inexcusable if he omitted frankly to apprise you of this state of the treasury, and of the danger he foresees to the credit of the state, without some certain addition to its resources before the close of the present session.

He has the honour to be,

Most respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

GEORGE MACKUBIN.

Treas. W. S. Md.

Which was read, and referred to the committee on ways and means.

Mr. Jones of Somerset, chairman of the committee on ways and means, submitted the following resolution, which was read the first and second time by special order, and assented to.

By the House of Delegates,

February 3, 1834.

Resolved by the General Assembly of Maryland, That the Treasurer of the Western Shore, be, and he hereby is authorised to sell and transfer upon such terms as he may deem advantageous, the reserved right of the state to invest in shares in the capital stock of the Union Bank of Maryland, and to apply the avails of such sale to the common uses of the Treasury.

The house then adjourned.

Maryland Gazette.

ANAPOLIS: Thursday, February 6, 1834.

To

"Sancti non appellantur mortui sed viventes."

O let thy tears be tears of joy existed among the bands. Very little work has been done, and a state of alarm and like preparation has taken place. On Friday last, we are informed, a party of citizens committed excesses along the line of the canal. Yesterday morning a small party were seen approaching this place from the south, and were met on the aqueduct and driven back by an opposing party of their countrymen in the town. In this affray one was very seriously beaten and wounded. Citizens of the town, with commendable energy, soon put themselves in military array, under arms, for the protection of the place, and remained under arms the balance of the day, and the greater part of the night.

This scene was soon followed by another which resulted in a disastrous battle and several deaths. A party of Fardours or Longfords, consisting of about three hundred men, led by intrepid leaders, were announced as approaching from below. Their design was stated to be, to pass up the line of the canal to the upper dam, for the purpose of exciting their strength, and not to commit a breach of the peace unless attacked. They advanced in part with guns, but principally with clubs, &c. They passed up the canal, with a view of reinforcing their friends, the Corkonians, at Middlekauff's dam. Col. Dall was immediately apprised of their movement and caused Captain Hollingsworth to meet this force at Holliman's dam—they were made acquainted with the terms of compromise, gave up their arms, and manifested a willingness to return quietly to their work, down the river.

The prisoners, in our jail, connected with the disturbances, amounting to about forty, will probably be recognized to appear to our next county court, and set at liberty without delay.

The following is a copy of the Treaty of Peace, made and concluded, at Williamsport, on the 27th day of January, 1834, between the Corkonians and Longford men, the two contending parties on the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal.

Whereas great commotions and divers riotous acts have resulted from certain misunderstandings and alleged grievances, mutually urged by two parties of labourers and mechanics engaged on the line of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, and natives of Ireland; the one commonly known as the Longford men, the other as the Corkonians; and whereas it has been found that these riotous acts, are calculated to disturb the public peace, without being in the least degree beneficial to the parties opposed to each other, but on the contrary are productive of great injury and distress to the workmen and their families—

Therefore, we, the undersigned, representatives of each party, have agreed to, and do pledge ourselves to support and carry into effect the following terms of the agreement:

We agree for ourselves, that we will not either individually or collectively, interrupt, or suffer to be interrupted in our presence, any person engaged on the line of the Canal, for or on account of a local difference, or national prejudice, and that we will use our influence to destroy all these matters of difference growing out of this distinction of parties, known as Corkonians and Longfords; and we further agree and pledge ourselves in the most solemn manner, to inform on, and bring to justice, any person or persons, who may break the pledge contained in this agreement, either by interrupting any person passing along or near the line of Canal, or by secretly counselling, or assisting any person or persons, who may endeavour to excite riotous conduct among the above parties; and we further bind ourselves to the State of Maryland, each in the sum of twenty dollars, to keep the peace towards the citizens of the State. In witness whereof, we have hereunto signed our names, at Williamsport, this twenty seventh day of January, eighteen hundred and thirty-four.

On motion of Mr. Wardell it was resolved that one hundred copies of the foregoing agreement be printed for distribution along the roads.

Irish deputies. He enjoined them the solemnity of the obligation they had just executed in the presence of the magistrates. The necessity of their preserving intact the pledge they had thus entered into; and at the same time he apprised them that in case the agreement was violated, it was the determination of the citizens and the military to unite with the opposite side and drive entirely from the county the party who were guilty of the infraction.

On motion, the meeting then adjourned.

O. H. WILLIAMS, Chairman;

T. P. PURCELL, Secretary.

During the day, on Monday, Gen. Williams brevetted Capt. Hollingsworth, Capt. Holliman, and Capt. Allen. Capt. Hollingsworth immediately organized a fine troop of horse—and Captains Holliman and Allen enrolled about one hundred and fifty citizens of Williams Port, in their respective companies—the whole of which force was placed under the command of Col. Dall, and is now ready, on a moment's warning for energetic action.

Early on Tuesday morning, Gen. Williams received intelligence, by express, that a force of upwards of 100 men had passed Harpers Ferry, on Monday evening, on their way up the canal, with a view of reinforcing their friends, the Corkonians, at Middlekauff's dam. Col. Dall was immediately apprised of their movement and caused Captain Hollingsworth to meet this force at Holliman's dam—they were made acquainted with the terms of compromise, gave up their arms, and manifested a willingness to return quietly to their work, down the river.

The prisoners, in our jail, connected with the disturbances, amounting to about forty, will probably be recognized to appear to our next county court, and set at liberty without delay.

The following is a copy of the Treaty of Peace, made and concluded, at Williamsport, on the 27th day of January, 1834, between the Corkonians and Longford men, the two contending parties on the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal.

Whereas great commotions and divers riotous acts have resulted from certain misunderstandings and alleged grievances, mutually urged by two parties of labourers and mechanics engaged on the line of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, and natives of Ireland; the one commonly known as the Longford men, the other as the Corkonians; and whereas it has been found that these riotous acts, are calculated to disturb the public peace, without being in the least degree beneficial to the parties opposed to each other, but on the contrary are productive of great injury and distress to the workmen and their families—

Therefore, we, the undersigned, representatives of each party, have agreed to, and do pledge ourselves to support and carry into effect the following terms of the agreement:

We agree for ourselves, that we will not either individually or collectively, interrupt, or suffer to be interrupted in our presence, any person engaged on the line of the Canal, for or on account of a local difference, or national prejudice, and that we will use our influence to destroy all these matters of difference growing out of this distinction of parties, known as Corkonians and Longfords; and we further agree and pledge ourselves in the most solemn manner, to inform on, and bring to justice, any person or persons, who may break the pledge contained in this agreement, either by interrupting any person passing along or near the line of Canal, or by secretly counselling, or assisting any person or persons, who may endeavour to excite riotous conduct among the above parties; and we further bind ourselves to the State of Maryland, each in the sum of twenty dollars, to keep the peace towards the citizens of the State. In witness whereof, we have hereunto signed our names, at Williamsport, this twenty seventh day of January, eighteen hundred and thirty-four.

Ducat, accompanied by a map of the examinations and topographical and geological researches and surveys, made by them in virtue of the resolution of the last general assembly, relative to a new map of the state.

We have derived much satisfaction from the perusal of this highly interesting report, and from an examination of the beautifully executed accompanying map. The evidence which they afford of the patient industry, judicious research and scientific attainments of the gentlemen appointed to carry into effect the laudable object of the general assembly, reflects great credit upon them, and proves their selection to have been fortunate and judicious.

It will rest with you to make such further provision as may be necessary to obtain the additional information which may be desirable and useful with a view to a complete delineation upon the proposed map of the topographical and geological features of the state.

Dreaming this an important and highly desirable object we shall cheerfully co-operate, so far as may be required of us, in carrying into effect such measures as you may desire for attaining it, and for the ultimate and speedy completion of the proposed map, in a manner to be useful and creditable to the state:

We have the honour to

PLAN

For compromising the Bank question.

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Having read the several schemes which have been submitted to the legislatures of Massachusetts and Pennsylvania for the establishment of a National Bank, and rummaged upon the points and bearings of this much vexed question, I am induced to present a plan which may succeed to the present charter in case that it shall be concluded to continue an institution of such a character.

My object is to put an end to the controversy which is agitating and distressing the country. Apart from that consideration I would not admit the intervention of corporators for the regulation of the monetary system which is given to Congress by the constitution.

I have indeed, been long convinced that a simple bank of DEPOSIT and EXCHANGE, without the power of lending money or of circulating notes, would answer all the purposes of a fixed agent of the General Government, and sufficiently subserve the common convenience of every class, and that, together with an adequate creation of NATIONAL CURRENCY to be equitably APPORTIONED AMONG THE STATES would constitute the most secure and substantial basis of circulation, if not the true and only mode of improving this essential PREROGATIVE in just and harmonious accord with the genius and principles of a free Republic.

In the presentation of this proposition I shall in part employ the bases and arguments which have heretofore appeared upon this subject by enlightened citizens of another state.

Let the new institution be established for the term of twenty years, with a capital of fifty-six millions of dollars, whereof the seven millions held by the government, and the twenty-eight millions held by private stockholders in the present Bank of the United States to be included, and the remaining twenty combinations which the Bank, with a view to its own temporary convenience, or supposed advantages, may occasionally set on foot, may often produce injurious fluctuations in the rates of exchange, which if unhampered by schemes purely artificial, they would not be exposed to.

But to its natural operation, the course of exchange would serve as an indication of the relative amount of imports and exports forewarning the merchant of any pecuniary loss of the former, and guarding him in season against the effect of specie shipments, to make up the deficient value of property exported; but while the Bank, holding its enormous means and credit, nearly monopolizes that branch of business, the merchant is deprived of that sure and faithful monitor, in the vicinage, who is obliged to yield his skill, his intelligence, and his interests, to those who are empowered to dispense and unwilling to entrust him with the exercise or use of either.

10. The amount of Discounts and loans not to exceed sixty six millions of dollars, but if from the aggregate statements of the Bank and its offices it be at any time found that this sum has been exceeded, the excess in that case to be reduced within ninety days.

11. The Stock of the Bank appropriated to any one State not to be less than $600,000, and after as igning a sufficient capital for the Bank or its office in the District of Columbia, the remainder to be appropriated among the other states according to the provisions of the first article, and the capital may be increased, on the admission of each New State into the Union, to the extent of $300,000, if desired by such new State.

12. If the capital assigned to an office be more than the amount of Bank Stock appointed to the State in which such office is located, the excess may be taxed at the same rate, as State Banks in the same State.

This provision is introduced on the presumption that the Bank will pay dividends at the rate of six per cent, per annum, being 2 per cent, more than the interest on the State Stock issued in payment of the Stock of the Bank, will yield to the States an equivalent for the highest rate of tax imposed upon double the amount of the capital of the State Banks.

13. The Bank to render the same services to government in the collection and distribution of its funds, and on the same terms prescribed and provided for in the charter of the existing Bank.

14. The twenty eight millions held by the private Stockholders to be reimbursed to its proprietors in ten equal annual instalments, commencing at the end of ten years from the commencement of the new charters and, in succession, to be apportioned among the States as provided in section 1, and the direction to be changed accordingly.

By the adoption of this process the entire institution will become eventually in actual truth a Bank of the United States; and may be continued, modified or otherwise disposed of according to the legislation of Congress.

Such provisions, in the existing charter of the Bank of the United States, as have not been alluded to in these remarks, are those which, if necessary, would, it is believed, require no essential modification to render them suitable for the adoption of any new Bank.

The illusions made to the present Institution have certainly proceeded from an improper feeling, but have been unavoidable in pursuing to their results the actual operations in which it has been engaged.

While, therefore, it is admitted that many circumstances connected with the Bank of the United States, and affecting its course of policy, may have existed, of which no account has been taken in the arguments submitted with the foregoing plan, they cannot, it is thought, be arranged on the score of prejudice, whether personal or political; the most scrupulous endeavours having been made to confine the reasoning of this important subject to events known to have occurred.

At the first view it may appear that the capital allowed to the proposed Bank is excessive; but that objection will disappear upon an inspection of the rigid restrictions imposed upon its operations—the utmost limit of its discounts and loans being within the amount which has been extended to the present Bank of the United States. The entire augmentation of capital as proposed is indeed, a mere addition of STATE STOCK, by way of ASSURANCE TO THE INSTITUTION, and indemnity to the PEOPLE AT LARGE, for a GREAT AND VALUABLE GRANT to PARTICULAR INDIVIDUALS.

The privilege of dealing foreign exchanges goes to say the least, a very discreet and judicious exercise, and the expediency of confining it on any incorporated body has long been questioned. It is believed the regulation of foreign exchange had better be left to the general operations of trade, and therefore recommended into the hands of those whom it concerns, and whom, it is presumed, will be the best guardians of their own interest.

In promoting the particular views of the Bank, the interests of the mercantile community must often be lost sight of, the very

THE JOURNAL.

A NEW AND STRIKING CHARACTER ADDED TO WALDIE'S CIRCULATING LIBRARY.

THE Proprietor of this work, anxious to gratify his readers as great an extent as his means will allow, respectfully announces to the public that the very liberal patronage he has received has enabled him to add a new feature to this periodical, which he believes cannot fail to prove interesting and valuable.

THE JOURNAL OF BELLES LETTRES, embracing three to four pages of additional new matter, will be given every week as an accompaniment to the Circulating Library, and will contain:

1 Early reprints of the reviews and notices of new books, from the weekly and monthly periodical press of London, &c. These reviews will be carefully selected with reference both to imparting correct information respecting such new books as are reprinted in America, and to convey literary intelligence in regard to works which rarely find their way across the Atlantic. As great exertions will be used to make this department instructive and entertaining, the proprietor is confident that it will be considered an important addition, by means of which his numerous subscribers will frequently avoid the expense of purchasing such books as are printed on the calculation that their titles or the reputation of their authors will sell the edition. This part of the Journal will embrace a considerable amount of extracts from new books of travels, memoirs, biography, novels, and in fact present a bird's eye view of new publications, easily diffused through the Union, by means of the facilities of mail transportation.

The London Literary Gazette will be called for this purpose, while the "Critical Notices" of the London Metropolitan, the Monthly New Monthly, the Gentleman's, Blackwood's, Taft's, Edinburgh, Fraser's, and other Magazines, already regularly received by the editor, will be freely used.

2 Varieties, embracing literary anecdotes, new discoveries in science and the arts, sketches of society and manners abroad, literary and learned transactions, short notices of new books, and every species of information interesting to lovers of reading, with occasional specimens of the humorous departments of the London press, which are within the bounds of good taste, and are now published in no other journal in America.

3 A regular list of the new books published and in progress in London and America.

4 Occasional original notices of new American publications, with extracts embracing their prominent features of excellence or defect.

No additional charge will be made for this great increase of reading matter. It will be contained on the pages of the cover of the Library, and therefore subject subscribers who receive their numbers by mail to no additional expense of postage.

A. WALDIE.

Several applications having been made to ascertain the manner in which the original department of notices of new books will be conducted, we take the present early opportunity of stating that, at least they shall most unequivocally be UNBOUGHT. The presentation of a copy by the publisher shall not be a passport to praise, when the merits of the work do not warrant it; so that our readers may be assured of two things: First—books shall not be noticed the next day after they are received; and, secondly, they shall not be reviewed before they have been read. We have no royal road to puffing, and will be the less likely, therefore, to fall into the error of an unlucky wight, who, in his anxiety to be the first to blow the bellows of criticism, read the preface only of a duodecimo, and gravely entered his opinion of two chapters which, unfortunately for his critical acumen, had been omitted, while his unfavorable reference to them had been, by his sake, retained! This predicament was worse than that of the London editor, who criticised some passages of Cooke's acting, and found when he rose next morning, and his partner was all over London, that the play had been postponed.

For the rest, time must devote our course and our capabilities; in cases where the usual courtesy of the trade is not extended to this journal, unlike most of our contemporaries, we shall buy what books we want, and give to such as deserve it a careful perusal.

The prospectus, and some technical difficulties always attending the first issue of a new journal, make the present number but a partial specimen of its future promise.

ANNAPOLIS:

Thursday, February 20, 1834.

It is with sincere regret that we announce the melancholy intelligence of the death of one of our most distinguished, patriotic and estimable fellow citizens, the Hon. WILLIAM WINTER. He expired at Washington yesterday, at eleven o'clock, A. M. Perfectly conscious of his approaching end, his last hours were marked with that calmness and resignation which a well tried christian hope can alone impart.—Balt. Amer. of yesterday.

Communicated for the Maryland Gazette, MEMOIR OF THE LATE HONO. R. CHARLES CARROLL, OF CARROLLTON,

The General Assembly of Maryland, apprised of the death of the venerable Charles Carroll of Carrollton, would, at the close of a career of such distinguished patriotism and private worth, solemnly record their sentiment of his impressive merits, and offer every tribute of reverence for those excellencies which have proved themelves to Maryland in presentment benefits, strengthened the councils of the fathers of our freedom, and mingled in the lustre of our revolutionary renown;—it therefore,

Resolved by the General Assembly of Maryland, That we cherish for the memory of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, the deepest respect; indulging with pride the reflection that Maryland, to whose dignity and advantage were devoted his zealous and accomplished mind, and the energy and weight of his pure character, was the fand of his birth, and the home of his long and interesting life.

Resolved, That the resolute patriotism of Charles Carroll, when, at the hazard of his brilliant private interests, he dedicated himself to the cause of American Independence, consecrates his life among the memorials of civil heroism, to adorn and enforce the history of human liberty.—That his patriotic sacrifice, and the continued and cogent efforts of his mind, and all his earnest labours in advancing the consummation of our independence in awaking the people of Maryland to the sense of their rights and their power, and in sustaining their ardour in their vindication, through the crisis of our revolution, command our admiration and our gratitude.

Resolved, That permanently to indicate to posterity a noble model of public spirit, and to keep alive to future ages of the republic the image of a useful life and a glorious example, the governor be, and he is hereby requested, to procure to be painted a full length likeness of the departed Charles Carroll of Carrollton, to be placed in the senate chamber, the scene of his legislative labours, the theatre of that body whose peculiar constitution he framed, and the site of the sublime surrender of military authority by the father of our country, with whose honours the descents of Carroll are entwined.

Resolved, That in testimony of the respect we have expressed for the deceased, the members of the assembly wear badges of mourning for the remainder of this session, and that the council and senate chambers, and the hall of the house of delegates be hung with mourning for the same period.

Resolved, That the governor be, and he is hereby requested, to transmit to the family of the deceased, copies of these resolutions.

On motion by Mr. Turner, it was Ordered, That said report be entered on the journal as unanimously assented to.

HORRID MURDER NEAR NORTHWICH.

We have this week the painful duty to record the murder of a respectable young female at Doffwich, near Northwich, which has naturally caused considerable excitement in the neighbourhood where the shocking deed was perpetrated.

Mary Pemberton, an interesting young woman, about twenty-one years of age, resided with her widowed mother on a farm at Doffwich, which is situated between Northwich and Davenham, a mile and a half from the latter place. About twelve months since she became acquainted with Samuel Thorley, a gardener, and nursery and seedman, of Northwich. Their intimacy soon ripened into an acquaintance of a more tender nature than mere friendship, and Thorley made preparations for their union. He furnished a house for the reception of his intended bride, provided clothes for the wedding, and obtained from her a ring she wore, in order to buy a wedding ring of the same size. In consequence of some secret whispers, or anonymous slanders to Mrs. Pemberton, chiefly, it is supposed, respecting Thorley's circumstances, for his general character was unexceptional, the family objected to the match, and Thorley's visits were prohibited. In consequence, his whole conduct and appearance underwent a complete change, which was fully perceptible to all his friends; deep sorrow and a settled gloom took possession of his hitherto cheerful countenance, and he appeared as if he had given himself up to despair.

On Friday last, Miss Pemberton attended Northwich market, and saw Thorley. In the evening she called at Mr. C. Cooper's shop for some articles, and on going out, Thorley took hold of her basket and carried it, and she walked away leaning on his arm. Nothing is known as to the distance he accompanied her on her way home, but later in the evening he called at Mr. Gibson's, the Angel Inn, and drank two glasses of brandy and water, which were numerous spots of blood; also a bag in one of the drawers, in the shop, on which it is supposed he must have wiped his hands, &c., as it was very bloody.

Turn we now to the murderer. Without waiting the return of the boy, he set out on his way to Chester, about four o'clock in the morning, to deliver himself into the hands of justice. He arrived at the Queen's Head, Foregate street, between nine and ten o'clock, and called for a glass of porter, but he did not drink the whole of it. After viewing the pictures in the room for some minutes, he left the house and went to the Castle. He presented himself at the lodge and said to the person in attendance, that he came to surrender. He was respectfully dressed, and had nothing singular in his appearance, besides a little wildness of his eyes. He was asked (supposing he was a debtor come to surrender) if he had an order or a commitment in his possession? He replied, 'No,' 'Do you surrender for debt?'—he was asked, 'No,' he again replied, 'but for murder.' He then detailed the circumstances, and, on seeing the persons to whom he was speaking incredulous, or conceiving him to be mad he said, 'I assure you it is true.' 'Then,' said the attendant, 'you better had make your statement to a magistrate.' 'I care not how soon I go,' he replied, 'for I wish to get it over.' A Magistrate was sent for, and he repeated the melancholy tale, and persisted in his guilt. Shortly after the Chaplain of the gaol was sent for, and to him another confession was made; the Reverend gentleman administered spiritual consolation to his mind, and offered up a prayer, in which the wretched man joined with great devotion, and he has since requested that he may be put into a cell where he can be kept quiet, that he may spend the short time he will have allotted him to live in this world in religious duties and preparations for another state.

His calmness and composure since his committal are most astonishing. On Wednesday he was attended by a professional gentleman, and made the necessary arrangement of his temporal affairs with as much coolness as if he was about to go on a journey. He gave the ring belonging to the deceased, previously alluded to, to his brother, with a request that it might be buried with him.

Shortly after the Chaplain of the gaol was sent for, and to him another confession was made; the Reverend gentleman administered spiritual consolation to his mind, and offered up a prayer, in which the wretched man joined with great devotion, and he has since requested that he may be put into a cell where he can be kept quiet, that he may spend the short time he will have allotted him to live in this world in religious duties and preparations for another state.

While doing this, he heard a man say, to his sister in rather an irritated tone of voice, 'You know I always told you so.' After listening again, being convinced that it was Thorley who was talking with his sister, he went to bed.—About half past eleven, Mrs. Pemberton, who slept in a room over the laboratory or passage to the front door, heard the door shut with a tremendous noise; she felt greatly alarmed, quickly arose and down the front stairs into the passage, which ran in a direct line through the house, and on arriving at the foot of the stairs, there being no light, she stumbled over the body of her daughter. Much alarmed at this circumstance, though not at all suspecting the horrid deed that had been committed on her child, she screamed out, 'Oh my daughter, faint, and fell on the floor. Miss Pemberton's brother, alarmed by his mother's screams, jumped out of bed and ran down stairs; he left for his sister, took her up by the waist, and carried her into the house place; he sat down, placed her upon his knees, and on looking at her, to his horror he discovered by the faint glimmering light which the few dying embers remaining in the fire place emitted, her throat was cut, and that to all appearances she was quite dead.

Terrified, and almost in a state of frenzy, he laid his sister, who was literally bathed in her own blood, on the floor, and hastened to carry into another apartment his afflicted mother.

Mr. Pemberton then alighted his brother and the rest of the family, and immediately despatched a messenger for Mr. Hunt, surgeon of Northwich. On that gentleman arriving and examining the body, he discovered a wound in the throat five inches long. The upper part of the windpipe, and the upper part of the gullet, with the root of the tongue, were completely divided; the carotid artery on the left side was half cut across, the internal jugular vein was nearly severed; the fore part of the bone of the third vertebrae of the neck was cut into on the right side, and the right carotid artery was lying bare to an inch or more, but uninjured. A foamy bloody fluid, issued out of the divided windpipe from the lungs in great quantities. The clothes of the unfortunate young lady were completely soaked in blood, and an immense quantity of blood was on the floor, on the wall, and the stairs to a considerable extent were covered with it. The razor with which the fatal deed was committed was found in a carpet-bed close by the house.

Immediately after the commission of the murder Thorley returned to Northwich, where he arrived a little before twelve o'clock; he knocked at his house door until he awoke his shop boy, who let him in. As soon as he entered the house, he told the boy that he had murdered Miss. Pemberton. He said, 'I must clean myself quickly, for they will be here for me directly.' His hands, face and shirt were covered with blood; he took his collar, cravat and flannel waistcoat off, and threw them into the fire, and that they might be rapidly consumed, he thrust them down with a poker. His shirt, which was bloody, he laid down, and then told the boy to go up the stairs, and get him some clean linen. The boy did so, and on his return he missed the shirt, which he supposes Thorley burnt also while he was up stairs.

After he had dressed himself, he drew a sofa near the fire, and sat upon it, and the boy went to bed again. A little after four o'clock he called up the boy again, and said to him, 'come with me; I will go with you to the place where I have done the deed.' Thorley and the boy then left the house together, and they proceeded on the road towards Mrs. Pemberton's house. Thorley, when he had got a little way, told the lad to go forward to Mrs. Pemberton's house, and ask whether Miss. P. was alive, and he would wait on the road until he returned. The boy proceeded only a little way, when he became so alarmed that he returned back to the spot where he left Thorley, but he was not there.

On Saturday morning the utmost consternation and dismay spread through Northwich and the neighbourhood. As Thorley had the key of his premises in his possession, it was conjectured that he had returned into the house and destroyed himself; and, therefore, about half past ten o'clock on Saturday morning a few individuals came to the resolution of breaking into the house. They did so, and proceeded to examine every apartment; and, after a most minute inspection, they found his trousers and black coat, on both of which were numerous spots of blood; also a bag in one of the drawers, in the shop, on which it is supposed he must have wiped his hands, &c., as it was very bloody.

Turn we now to the murderer. Without waiting the return of the boy, he set out on his way to Chester, about four o'clock in the morning, to deliver himself into the hands of justice. He arrived at the Queen's Head, Foregate street, between nine and ten o'clock, and called for a glass of porter, but he did not drink the whole of it. After viewing the pictures in the room for some minutes, he left the house and went to the Castle. He presented himself at the lodge and said to the person in attendance, that he came to surrender. He was respectfully dressed, and had nothing singular in his appearance, besides a little wildness of his eyes. He was asked (supposing he was a debtor come to surrender) if he had an order or a commitment in his possession? He replied, 'No,' 'Do you surrender for debt?'—he was asked, 'No,' he again replied, 'but for murder.'

He then detailed the circumstances, and, on seeing the persons to whom he was speaking incredulous, or conceiving him to be mad he said, 'I assure you it is true.'

'Then,' said the attendant, 'you better had make your statement to a magistrate.'

'I care not how soon I go,' he replied, 'for I wish to get it over.'

A Magistrate was sent for, and he repeated the melancholy tale, and persisted in his guilt.

the person, and discovered the intention to "make him" who filled the seat of Mr. Randolph with honour to himself and usefulness to the country. But the day before he sat down in the midst of his usefulness, he met me in this Hall, and had a free and candid conversation, which left nothing on her side, unexplained. And I am confident that, if he had been spared but few weeks more, he would have left no room for understanding the relations in which we stood to each other.

My object in making the allusion which I made to the death of Mr. Randolph, was solely what I professed at the time, sincere disclaiming any personal reflection upon my late colleague; who I never doubted, had good and sufficient reasons for failing to perform what seemed to be his appropriate duty. These reasons have since been made public. He said he would announce them fully when he came to speak on the despatch question. Alas! he did not anticipate that death would seal his lips and bury him too in silence, before he should finish what he meant to have said about the death of his predecessor! I have the consolation to know, that he died with a full knowledge that I intended no wound to his feelings, and no reproach to his conduct. And it becomes me to pay my humble tribute to a memory, when dead, as I paid him the homage of my respect, and confidence, and admiration, when living. I became acquainted with his fate in the session, and from that time until the moment he expired in the public service on this floor—a glorious death it was—I have the proud satisfaction of believing that I daily increased in his good will, and still knew he grew in my affections and my estimation, as a noble, generous, and unshamed friend, an able and honest and valiant man, and bold and true patriot, who had done the state some service. He is now lamented by none here more than by his wife, who is, comparatively, a stranger to all his merits, his high worth, and exalted virtues; and whose fervent prayer to Heaven is, that his departed spirit is reposing peace in the bosom of his God!

OPENING OF THE FRENCH CHAMBERS.

PARIS, Nov. 23.

The extremely unfavourable state of the weather this morning—ordered the crowd as usual to witness the Royal procession from the Tuilleries to the Chamber of Deputies, on occasion of the opening of the legislative sessions, much less numerous than upon former occasions; but the spectators in the windows and other places which afforded a shelter to the curious and commanded a view of the cavalcade, we are in consequence more crowded than we recollect to have seen them. The page for the procession, was as usual, lined with detachments of National Guards and the Line.

After Majesty and the Princesses, with their suite, and escorted, as on similar occasions, at the Palace in the Royal Carriages a short time previous to the King, who quitted the Tuilleries at one o'clock, surrounded by a numerous staff. His Majesty, owing to the inclemency of the weather, went in a carriage, as was received with cries of "Vive le Roi!" which were frequently repeated by the crowds during his passage to the Chamber.

At 1 o'clock, cannon of the Invalides being heard, announcing the King's departure from the Tuilleries, the Corps Diplomatique entered the Tribune reserved for them, and in a few minutes after the Queen accompanied by Madame Adelaide, and the younger branches of the Royal Family made their appearance. All the Ministers, in grand costume, several Marshals, and Admirals, and a deputation of twelve members of the Council of State were present. The attendance of Peers and Deputies was very numerous—there being about three hundred of the former, and three hundred of the latter present.

PARIS, Dec. 24.

We learn by the Neapolitan journals, that, up to the 1st inst. Vesuvius continued to emit flames and liquid fire. There have been two new openings formed in the old crater towards Camaldules and Torre del Greco. One of the currents of lava has taken direction towards the plain of Genetta, and the other towards Bosco tre Case. The subterranean reports have, however, ceased, and a thick column of smoke issues forth, forming itself at the top into the shape of a mushroom, and the clouds of which, carried away by the currents of air, present a very curious appearance.

THE subscriber offers at private sale a Tract of Land, near the city of Annapolis, containing about Eight Hundred Acres of Land, more or less. This land adjoins the Farm of the late Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Esq., and is bounded on one side by Severn River, and Creeks, constituting good landing for vessels to take wood from the shore; there are on this land an almost inexhaustable quantity of wood, principally Pine, intermixed with Oak and Hickory; it has been estimated that thirty thousand cords of wood may be cut from this land for Market, and from its proximity to the different landings upon the river, will make it a desirable property to Gentlemen engaged in the wood business, or Factories requiring this most indispensable article. The improvements upon this estate are indifferent, the soil is well adapted to the growth of Indian Corn, Rye, and fine Tobacco may be made upon it. Any person who may be inclined to purchase, is invited to view the premises; and the Terms, which shall be accommodating, can be known by application to me on Elk Ridge, near Ellington's Mills, or to Robert Welch, of Ben, in the city of Annapolis, who will at any time shew the premises.

THE JOURNAL

OF BELLES LETTRES.

A NEW AND STRIKING CHARACTER ADDED TO

WALDIE'S

CIRCULATING LIBRARY.

THE Proprietor of this work, anxious to gratify his readers to as great an extent as his means will allow, respectfully announces to the public that the very liberal patronage he has received has enabled him to add a new feature to this periodical, which he believes cannot fail to prove interesting and valuable.

THE JOURNAL OF BELLES LETTRES, embracing three to four pages of additional new matter, will be given every week as an accompaniment to the Circulating Library, and will contain:

1 Early reprints of the reviews and notices of new books, from the weekly and monthly periodical press of London, &c. These reviews will be carefully selected with reference both to imparting correct information respecting such new books as are reprinted in America, and to convey literary intelligence in regard to works which rarely find their way across the Atlantic. As great exertions will be used to make this department instructive and entertaining, the proprietor is confident that it will be considered an important addition, by means of which his numerous subscribers will frequently avoid the expense of purchasing such books as are printed on the calculation that their titles or the reputation of their authors will sell the edition. This part of the Journal will embrace a considerable amount of extracts from new books of travels, memoirs, biography, novels, and in fact present a bird's eye view of new publications, early diffused through the Union, by means of the facilities of mail transportation.

The London Literary Gazette will be called for this purpose, while the "Critical Notices," of the London Metropolitan, the Monthly New Monthly, the Gentleman's, Blackwood's, Taft's, Edinburgh, Fraser's, and other Magazines, already regularly received by the editor will be freely used.

2 Varieties, embracing literary anecdotes, new discoveries in science and the arts, sketches of society and manners abroad, literary and learned transactions, short notices of new books, and every species of information interesting to lovers of reading, with occasional specimens of the humorous departments of the London press, which are within the bounds of good taste, and are now published in no other journal in America.

3 A regular list of the new books published and in progress in London and America.

4 Occasional original notices of new American publications, with extracts embracing their prominent features of excellence or defect.

No additional charge will be made for this great increase of reading matter. It will be contained on the pages of the cover of the Library, and therefore subject subscribers who receive their numbers by mail to no additional expense of postage.

A. WALDIE.

Several applications having been made to ascertain the manner in which the original department of notices of new books will be conducted, we take the present early opportunity of stating that, at least they shall most unequivocally be UNBOUGHT. The presentation of a copy by the publisher shall not be a passport to praise, when the merits of the work do not warrant it so that our readers may be assured of two things: First—books shall not be noticed the next day after they are received; and, secondly, they shall not be reviewed before they have been read. We have no royal road to pell-mell, and will be the less likely, therefore, to fall into the error of an unlucky wight, who, in his anxiety to be the first to blow his bellows of criticism, read the preface only of a dudemond and gravely entered his approbation of two chapters which, unfortunately for his critical acumen, had been omitted, without prefatory reference to them had been, by mistake, retained!

This predicament was worse than that of the London editor, who criticised some passages of Cooke's acting, and found when he rose next morning, and his paper was all over London, that the play had been postponed.

For the rest, time must develop our course and our capabilities; in cases where the usual courtesy of the trade is not extended to us, journal, unlike most of our contemporaries, we shall buy what books we want, and give to such as deserve it a careful perusal.

The prospectus, and some technical difficulties always attending the first issue of a new journal, make the present number but a partial specimen of its future promise.
