we look at the other side of this.

Mrs. —— Ind always been delicate.

When a girl she could never sew long at a time without getting a pain in her side. She married a hard working industrious mechanic, whose trade was not very lucrative, yielding barely enough for a support. Her health, after her marriage, was but this before she would; and that until she was paid she could not get them any narriage, was but thing better than what they had.

The little things all stole silently and without a Ittle improved, and when with several small children she was left a widow, she yielded in her first keen anguish of bereavment to despair. But a mother cannot long sit in idleness when her dear bakes are about her. She could think of no way of getting a living for them but by her needle; and one she was a neat sewer, she hoped to get work. A tear would often gather in her eye, of getting a living for them but by her needle; and one she was a neat sewer, she hoped to get work, and earn food and scauch clothing at least. and earn food and scaat clothing at least. But she could get no work. No person new her who wants of swing done. She applied to several, and was still without the means of carning a dollar when her last one was spont. Just at this sad moment, the fact of her destitution becoming more known, Mrs. T—— sont for her.

As she carried home her work the day after the interview, she was glad at heart with the thought that now there was a way of escape at least from "I chall to ghal to do it for your," said she, "I want you to make and fit this called a specific to the same." And now having found you," said she, "I want you to make and fit this called dress for me, if you do such work."
