Four Negro Laborers Hurt When The Train Was Derailed

A work train, composed of five flat cars, caboose and engine 23, which had been distributing new rails on the branch of the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad, between King's Creek and Crisfield, jumped the track between Marion Station and Kingston Monday afternoon of last week, and the tender and several cars were thrown into the ditch. A number of laborers on one of the flats were thrown a considerable distance and buried under the heavy rails with which the car was loaded.

When opposite Whittington's carning factory near Marion the rails spread, derailing the entire train. The cars were demolished, the tender torn from the engine and the engine damaged. The engineer and fireman escaped with out injury, but four of the crew, all negroes, who were on one of the flat cars, were crushed under the rails with which the car was loaded. The injured are Arthur King, George Wales and Herbert Smith, of Delmar, and James Hadler, of Princess Anne.

Dr. I. A. B. Allen, of Marion, had the men taken to the General and Marine Hospital at Crisfield for treatment.

The southbound mail and express train which leaves King's Creek at 2:25 was held up by the wreck and automobiles from Crisfield were summoned to convey 68 passengers and the mail to that place and other points on the road.

County Demonstration Agents Meet

The first annual conference of the County Demonstration Agents of Maryland opened on Monday last at the Agricultural College, with State Agent G. H. Alford as chairman. Ten counties were represented.

Those attending the conference were: H. S. Lippincott, the recently appointed county agent for Somerset; G. H. Drury, Calvert; H. S. Kocher, Queen Anne's; W. R. Luthieum, Charles; G. F. Marsh, Cecil; John McGill, Jr., Allegany; J. F. Monroe, Worcester; G. R. Porter, Dorchester; E. P. Walls, Talbot, and G. F. Warthen, St. Mary's.

Chief speaker and his subject was "Man's Duty to Man."

The conference was addressed by Dr. H. J. Patterson, president of the Agricultural College; District Agent Jesse M. Jones, of the United States Department of Agriculture; Prof. Nicholas Smith, Director T. B. Symons and other speakers.

L. T. Beauchamp Dead

Mr. L. T. Beauchamp, a highly respected citizen of Dublin district, Somerset county, died at his home near Cokesbury on Tuesday morning last of paralysis, aged 61 years. Mr. Beauchamp was paralyzed some time ago but he was able to be around and attend to business until a few weeks ago when he suffered the second stroke from which he never rallied.

He had experienced considerable trouble of late, it being only as far back as December last that he lost two children on the same day of pneumonia. Besides a widow he leaves three small children and five children by his first wife, viz: Mrs. Byrd Brittingham, Mrs. W. A. Cottman, Mrs. George Dorsey and Messrs. Herbert Thomas and Vernon Beauchamp. Messrs. C. Gordy, Asbury and George W. Beauchamp, of Pocomoke City, are brothers of the deceased.

Funeral services were conducted at Emmanuel Church on Wednesday afternoon, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Derrickson, officiating. Interment was made in the adjoining cemetery.

Mr. Armstrong Gives Dutch Supper

From the Worcester Democrat of Pocomoke City: "Mr. D. C. Armstrong gave a Dutch supper to his friends on Monday evening last. It was held on the second floor of the Beauchamp Building on Clarke avenue and covers were spread for about seventy-five persons. It was the most enjoyable affair ever held in our town. In addition to the townspeople present there were about a dozen of Mr. Armstrong's Princess Anne friends in the company. Everybody gave Mr. Armstrong a vote of thanks for his royal entertainment."

Tonging Without License

Fred. Elzey, Gus. Muir, R. A. Jones, Elmer Chelton, Charles White, Stephen Miles, Samuel White, Gus. Douglass and Walter White, all colored, of Orle, Maryland, were arrested by Capt. George W. Windsor and brought to Princess Anne last Tuesday, charged with tonging without license. They were taken before Justice Charles R. Porter and were fined the sum of $20 and costs each. The fines and costs were all paid.

Birthday Social

A George Washington birthday social was given at the home of Miss Roxie Colgan on Monday, February 22d, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of Antioch M. E. Church.

The house was tastefully decorated, the most striking decoration, and the one which attracted the most attention, was the picture of Woodrow Wilson framed in small American flags, with the flags of the neutral nations around it. On the blue of the bunting which was draped above all was the word "Neutrality," written in large gilt letters, thus connecting it as it were the of the day. In a tent in the corner of the hall, Miss Inez Lano, as Madam Zola, made clever guesses of the future to those who consulted her. Everywhere were national emblems, the shield, bunting and flags. General and Mrs. Washington (Miss Lizette Lano and Mr. Clarence Lano) in colonial costume cordially greeted all who paid their respects to them. The program was as follows:

Instrumental solos and vocal duets by the Misses May and Nellie Hinckley; phonograph selections, conducted by Master Leland Johnson; address, entitled "True Greatness and its Origin," by Rev. D. J. Givan; vocal and instrumental solos; Mr. Clarence Lano; address, entitled "Heroes," Mr. J. R. Gentry; instrumental solo, Miss Olive Johnson; reading in negro dialect, Miss Susie Collins; instrumental solo, Miss Lillian Nichols.

Refreshments were served in the dining-room. The table was beautifully decorated with cherries, blossoms and hatches. About two hundred and forty guests were present. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Malone, of Salisbury, and Mr. and Mrs. Hudson, of Kingston.

The proceeds amounting to about $95 or over, will be given to the new church fund.

Big Mill Fire In Salisbury

At about 9 o'clock on Wednesday evening the Salisbury Milling Company's plant on West Main street, near the B. C. & A. landing, was discovered to be on fire and within an hour was a total loss. The Salisbury Milling Company consists, we understand, of Messrs. Warren R. Pusey and Hubbard Dennis. Mr. Pusey resided in Princess Anne for a number of years before he engaged in the milling business in Salisbury. In addition to their plant, Messrs. Dennis and Pusey lost about 3,000 bushels of wheat, over 1,000 bushels of corn, close to 100 barrels of flour. The cause of the fire is unknown, as the mill was not run up stairs during the day at all. Dennis and Pusey had just had the mill overhauled, putting in new rollers and other improvements and were in shape to take care of the big business that is coming on.

Burglars At Crisfield

At an early hour last Friday morning burglars entered the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk Railway station at Crisfield, and secured about $9 in cash. They then broke into the office of the Postal Telegraph Company, but got nothing. They crossed the street to the general store of J. P. Tawes & Brother, where they bored a hole through the door just under the lock, but did not succeed in getting in.

HARRINGTON UP FOR GOVERNOR

State Comptroller Makes Formal Announcement Of His Candidacy

A large mass-meeting in the interest of the candidacy for Governor of Comptroller Emerson C. Harrington was held last Tuesday afternoon at Cambridge, Mr. Harrington's home town. Large delegation from all parts of Dorchester county were present.

Former Judge Henry Lloyd, who was Governor of Maryland a generation ago, having served out the term of Gov. Robert M. McLane, when the latter resigned to become Ambassador to France, presided at the meeting. Mr. Harrington's brother, Benjamin E. Harrington, was on the platform. Judge Lloyd was introduced by Zorah H. Brinsfield, acting chairman of the Country State Central Committee. Although not in the best of health, Judge Lloyd made a spirited speech, in which he told of his acquaintance with Mr. Harrington dating back to the days when he was in the State Senate at Annapolis and the comptroller was a student at St. John's College. He praised Mr. Harrington as a man of solid attainments, sterling character and capacity for affirmative leadership.

Resolutions indorsing Mr. Harrington because of his general fitness and particularly because of his excellent record as Comptroller and the stand he is making for better conduct of the State's finances were enthusiastically adopted, after which a committee, composed of Senator Shepherd, former Senator J. Hooper Bosley, James M. Sherman and Edgar S. Gore, was appointed to elect Mr. Harrington to the hall. He was cheered heartily upon his arrival and introduced by Judge Lloyd. Mr. Harrington then addressed the meeting, making the first direct statement that he would be a candidate for the Democratic nomination and declaring that, if defeated, he would give the successful candidate his ardent support.

"My heart is filled with gratitude that my own people, those among whom I have lived and worked, have so honored me," said Mr. Harrington, in part. "I had resolved not to be a candidate, but my people were with me. I have gone for Governor and expect to win. I go into the fight with the determination to win. That is my habit, once I am in a fight, and this instance I would be untrue to my friends, my country and myself were I not resolute in my purpose to use every honorable means in my power to achieve victory."

"I shall not discuss the issues of the campaign at this time, but it may be proper to refer briefly to an important question before the people of this State, I mean the financial condition of our State Government. It shall be my unalterable purpose, if nominated and elected, to practice the most rigid economy and at the same time to seek the greatest efficiency for the several departments and agencies of the State Government. The task will be not to restrict the development of the State, but to lead that development along the most rigidly economical lines and to compel the application of sound business methods in the management of State affairs."

Lecture By Dr. James T. Dennis

At the monthly meeting of the Academy of Science held at the Museum Hall, Baltimore, on Monday evening of last week, Dr. James Teackle Dennis, a former resident of Princess Anne, but now of Baltimore, gave an illustrated lecture on Lesser-known Egypt, which has been his field of archeological researches for several years.

Dr. Dennis pointed out many of the scenes shown by Professor Newman and other travel-talkers, and which are, therefore, familiar to those acquainted with Egyptian history and archeology, but using some of these as bases of departure; he exhibited many scenes near them which are seldom if ever exhibited. Among these were parts of the Temples of Carnak, Isis and Osiris, Horus and others which were new even to Baltimoreans who had traveled. A rare view was the photograph of a sky full of storks, which are at home in Egypt. But the lecturer said he took good care to look for the famous hounds they are supposed to carry, but was frank to confess that he did not see any, although the head and feet of the storks were very plainly visible. Mr. Percy M. Reese presided over the meeting and introduced the lecturer as a former member of the Maryland Academy of Sciences.

A Youth Of Loretto Dies

William Logan Pollitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Pollitt, of near Loretto, this county, died at an early hour last Thursday morning of diabetes, aged seventeen years.

Funeral services were held last Friday afternoon in Manokin Presbyterian Church, conducted by the Rev. Henry E. Spears, rector of St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal Church and the interment was in the church cemetery adjoining.

BLACKS WANT SPOILS

Negroes Speak Out Plainly In Republican Conference

A conference of Republican workers and leaders was held on Monday night of last week in Baltimore. The meeting was presided over by City Chairman George W. Padgett, who made the first talk. He was followed by Mr. Stone, Mr. Thompson, Stephen R. Mason, representing the Heintzman forces; the Rev. Dr. Ernest Lyon, colored; the Rev. Dr. J. A. Alexander, colored; former State Senator Albert M. Sproesser, George W. Cameron and others.

Two colored preachers—Dr. Lyon and Dr. Alexander—made vehement speeches in which they "laid down the law" and demanded offices from the Republican party members of their race. Dr. Lyon was lovely until Dr. Lyon, who is Minister to Liberia under the McKim administration, spoke. In fact, he did not seem especially unlovely to the present while he was speaking, for he brought forth applause at times and a tidal of apparently sympathetic applause. After referring to the present situation, in which much stress was laid upon the "openness" of the party and the right of all Republicans to aspire to Republican nomination, he said unflinchingly:

"I am sorry that a black man has not the right to be Mayor. It may not be now for one to enjoy the office. My friend Heintzman had the office. I am referred to his 'friend' and went on to state what was the demand of the Republican party. I said that they number thousands in Baltimore; that they have worked faithfully; that they have been ignored. His remarks were to be an attack upon the Goldsborough administration. He has been criticised severely by leaders for not giving recognition to the race."

John Jennings Bryan, the great orator of the century, has come to Maryland for his friends," said Dr. Alexander. "He can demand spoils, then."

Dr. Lyon was followed by Alexander. The former had mixed savagely with his references. The latter did not bother to mix in the savagery. He said that he had been working for the Republican party since the Lowndes campaign of 1896 and that the negroes had been faithful. Without mentioning the Goldsborough administration directly, he bitterly denounced the failure of the negroes to obtain patronage.

"I expect to work for the Republican ticket," he continued, "but I want to say and have it understood that if a man is nominated who has not and will not treat the colored man right, and I hear one being mentioned, then I shall openly fight him. (This reference to one being mentioned was taken to be the talk of Governor Goldsborough for renomination.) The Republican party cannot elect without the black man, and the next time the Republican party wins some one, at least, of our race must be recognized."

Washington Monument Suicide

Breaking away from several frightened women who tried to hold her, Mrs. Mae Cockrell, wife of W. F. Cockrell, an employee of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad shops at Covington, Ky., plunged to her death from the 470-foot landing in the Washington Monument, in Washington, last Tuesday afternoon. A note found on the body showed that suicide was her motive. She and her husband formerly lived at Del Ray, Va., a suburb of Washington. Mrs. Cockrell was 32 years old and had been in ill health for a long time, a sufferer from nervous trouble.

The suicide is the first in the long history of the Washington Monument, though millions have been in it since it first opened in 1888, and had not Mrs. Cockrell left the observation platform and chosen the elevator shaft for her plunge it could have been prevented. Ten years ago a painter working in the shaft fell to his death.

Fraternal Congress Dines

The thirteenth annual meeting and banquet of the Maryland Fraternal Congress was held in the exhibition hall of the Hotel Emerson, Baltimore, last Wednesday evening, with the following organizations represented:

Columbian Fraternal Association, Improved Order of Heptasoph, Independent Order of B'nai Shalom, Modern Woodmen of America, National Union, Shield of Honor, Supreme Tribe of Ben Hur and the Union Fraternal League.

Following the banquet a business session was held and officers were elected. Mr. J. L. Cowger was recently elected a delegate to the Methodist Protestant Conference by the members of Quinton M. P. Church. The Conference meets at Washington in April.

FOREST TREES FOR SPRING PLANTING

State Board Of Forestry Will Furnish Men To Supervise The Work

The approach of spring and the planting season will suggest to many farmers not alone the cultivation of their usual crops, but perhaps one of trees for planting where no other crops will grow. What to plant on soils exhausted through long use, and how to cultivate the waste places on many farms, constitutes a problem which most Maryland landowners have, at one time or another, been called upon to face.

Though forest planting attains its greatest measure of utility and value when carried on primarily for the purpose of reclaiming waste farm lands and fields, much good can often be accomplished through the establishment of well planned shelterbelts and windbreaks. Homes so screened are more comfortable at all times, and their appearance is at the same time much improved. Along the boundaries of the fields it is possible to plant for live fence posts, a post that won't wear out, and in many other ways it is entirely feasible to add much to the average farm through the planting of forest trees.

This year, for the first time, residents of Maryland are given an opportunity to secure State-grown forest trees at cost. Free advice is at the same time given the purchaser as to just when, how and what to plant, and when desired the State Board of Forestry, at Baltimore, Maryland, offers to furnish trained men for supervising and laying out such work within the State.

One year ago the Board established at College Park a nursery for the growing of forest trees. Though begun so recently this nursery contains at the present time close to a quarter-million trees which are of suitable size and age for planting in the spring. Among the varieties available to landowners of Maryland are White and Loblolly Pines, Norway Spruce and Douglas Fir, Black Walnut, Black Locust, White Ash, Tulip Poplar and Red Oak. All are valuable timber trees, and species of rapid growth. The conifers, in common with the deciduous trees, are excellent for planting on waste farm lands. As to the White Ash, Black Walnut and Tulip Poplar, these trees, while requiring somewhat better planting sites, are all well known for their value both as shade and timber trees. In price they range from $2.50 per thousand for Locust seedlings to $5.50 for White Pine transplants, and all orders are packed and boxed free of charge.

Whether for commercial, ornamental or protective planting, suitable trees are obtainable at the new State Nursery. It is important, however, to order early, for the supply of some species is already exhausted. Orders received now will be filled in good season for planting, and it is hoped that residents of Maryland will not overlook an opportunity of making their farms more productive, and adding to the attractiveness and comfort of their homes.

Lee To Get Busy After Congress

A dispatch to one of Baltimore's evening papers last week from Washington says:

"Senator Blair Lee will not begin his campaign for the gubernatorial nomination in Maryland for about a month after the adjournment of the present session of Congress. He said that as soon as his duties are over at the Capitol in March he will devote his attention for several weeks to private affairs, which necessarily he has not been able to attend to during the long hours of the session."

"Considerable interest is shown by his colleagues in the Senate in his candidacy. Coming to Washington as the first member of the Senate elected under the constitutional amendment providing for the direct vote for members of the upper branch, he attracted attention from the first. The one thing that his fellow-Senators unable to understand, however, is his willingness to resign from the Senate to run for Governor, especially since the salary for the latter position is little more than half what he receives as Senator."

"I tell them," said the Senator, laughing, "that if they would only live in Maryland about a year they would appreciate the fact that the Governorship of that State is something worth fighting for."

"While it is not expected that President Wilson will depart from his policy of not interfering in State primary fights to the extent of indorsing Senator Lee's candidacy, it can be said that the President keenly appreciates the assistance which the junior Senator from Maryland has given him in matters of legislation. During the ship purchase bill fight the President on several occasions conferred with him on the subject, and valued his advice highly."

OUR STATE ROAD SYSTEM

The Great Amount Of Work Accomplished On Maryland Highways

We have received from Governor Goldsborough of Maryland a very neat little pamphlet giving in detail the work done by the State Roads Commission—which consists of the Governor, ex-officio, chairman, O. E. Weller, and Commissioners W. B. Miller, Andrew Ramsey, Thomas Parran, John M. Perry and J. Frank Smith, and chief engineer Henry G. Shirley—which will prove very interesting reading.

We reproduce in part what the Governor says:

"It is believed that at the end of this year Maryland will be the first State in the Union to have completed a continuous, connected, main-arterial system of modern State highways, radiating from the industrial and geographical center of the State at Baltimore, and connecting the county seats of each of its twenty-three counties with each other and with Baltimore. This will soon include the longest practically continuous section of modern road in the United States, being nearly 400 miles from Oakland in the heart of the Allegheny Mountains, at the western border of the State, to Ocean City, on the Atlantic Ocean, at its southeastern extremity."

"This great enterprise was inaugurated by the late Gov. Austin L. Crothers in 1908, with an initial appropriation of $5,000,000. In 1909, a system of 1,235 miles was adopted after numerous public meetings throughout the State. The first contract was awarded on June 9 of that year for one mile of road. In 1910 an additional $1,000,000 was provided. In January, 1912, the writer succeeded Governor Crothers, and on April 8, following, $3,170,000 more was appropriated. To this the Legislature of 1914 added $6,600,000. This makes the total appropriation to date $15,770,000."

"In 1910, 46 miles of road were constructed; in 1911, 87; in 1912, 154; in 1913, 203, and in 1914 and 1915 the system will be substantially completed, except as to certain spurs and secondary gaps."

"The average cost per mile of these roads, including surveys and plans, grading, surfacing, bridges and culverts, underdrains, inspection and superintendence, and rights-of-way, besides overhead and miscellaneous expenses of every character, was $10,481 in 1910; $12,296 in 1911; $10,333 in 1912; and $8,286 in 1913; with a general average of $9,986 for the aggregate of 466 miles finished on the main system proper."

"The average cost of total maintenance per mile, including oiling, patrol service, and all other expenses connected therewith, was $340 in 1912, and $434 in 1913."

"These roads are constructed and maintained exclusively by the State. The funds are provided by the sale of 15-year State road bonds. Maintenance is provided for by the receipts from the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, with a direct State tax of one cent per $100 to supplement the deficiency."

"The building of our State road system has been conducted on business principles and entirely free from politics, and it has had the support and commendation of our citizens, irrespective of class or party. The roads have increased the value of property, and the sentiment of the State is almost unanimous for the continuation of State road building. Our people, including the farmers, have been educated up to the advantages of good roads, as well as to the comparatively high cost of modern thoroughfares, and they are willing to pay the price for them, if satisfied that they are getting good value for their money."

Taft Commends Wilson

Strong commendation of the attitude of President Wilson in the serious crisis presented to the nation was made last week by former President William H. Taft in a stirring patriotic address to the annual meeting of Washington Association of New Jersey at Morristown. Mr. Taft not only gave the President's policy warm indorsement, but likening it to that of President Washington under somewhat similar circumstances, also sent out a rallying call for support for that policy, laying aside all pride of race, all prejudices, all animosities and standing together as one great nation. "And when the President shall act," said Mr. Taft, with marked impressiveness, "we must stand by him to the end. In this determination we may be sure that all will join, no matter what their previous views, no matter what their European origin. All will forget their differences in self-sacrificing loyalty to our common flag and our common country."

When a woman's husband annoys her she always gets square with him by cleaning house.

The Empty Sleeve

An Episode of the European War.

By MARTHA V. MONROE.

A young man in khaki uniform stepped toward a cab standing by the curb in Oxford circus, London, and was met at the cab door by a tall, athletic looking man in a cutaway coat and silk hat. The gentleman looked about him for another vehicle, but, not seeing any, said to the young soldier:

"Perhaps if we happen to be going the same way we can both use the cab."

"I'm going to Westminster abbey."

"And I go to Downing street. That will be very little out of the way if at all. Get in."

The youngster entered the cab, followed by the other, who first gave some directions that the soldier did not hear.

"Are you a resident of London?" asked the young man by way of opening conversation.

"I am."

"I'm a stranger. I'm from Canada. I came over with the troops that landed the other day. I've got leave for the day to go sightseeing. I shall take in the abbey first."

"You'll find it very interesting."

"By the bye, you, being a Londoner, can perhaps tell me how to get to this place." And he handed the gentleman sitting beside him a paper on which was written the name of a suburban town.

"To go there you take the Paddington station. Tell the driver. He'll know."

"I can't go today, I have so much to see. When I go back to Montreal—if I live through the war—everybody will ask me. Have you seen this and have you seen that in London? and I don't want to say I haven't. So I told the young lady who lives at that address she must come to camp to see me instead of my taking up the time granted me for leave to go out of town on a railway."

"Which means that you are engaged to her?"

"That's just what it does mean. She was brought up in Canada. Her father came to England a year ago. When the war broke out and our fellows over here called on us Canadians to help you out I thought it would be a good opportunity to come over and see her. So I enlisted."

The gentleman cast a side glance at his companion, but said nothing.

"Do you think it will be much of a fight?" asked the youngster.

"A very big fight."

"Well, I don't mind seeing some service. I dare say it will be a valuable experience. Of course I don't want to get killed. Gladys—I mean Miss Arkright; she's my fiancée, you know—she don't like the idea."

"Arkright?" interrupted the gentleman—"Samuel Arkright's daughter?"

"Yes. Do you know him?"

"Quite well."

"My name is Glover—James Glover of the —the Canadian foot. I suppose you have met my fiancée?"

"Oh, yes, I know Gladys Arkright."

"Nice girl, isn't she?" looking up wistfully for the stranger's approval of the girl he loved.

"Gladys is a lovely girl."

By this time the cab had stopped and the gentleman got out.

"To the abbey," he said to the cabman, handing him the fare, then to the Canadian: "Much obliged for accommodating me. When you see Gladys give her my love."

"Who shall I say?"

But before the other could reply he was buttonholed by a man, and as he entered the building for which he was headed half a dozen others surrounded him.

Private James Glover visited Westminster abbey, the Tower of London and various other sights. Wherever he was recognized as a Canadian soldier he met with kindly greetings. Every inquiry he made was responded to with alacrity, and an old gentleman of seventy volunteered to take him to see several curiosities of which he had not heard. When he returned to camp he was informed that his regiment would be moved the next day to a channel port to be carried to France. He had barely time to write a brief goodbye to his sweetheart before he turned in for the night and was up before the sun the next morning.

Young Glover found the trenches indeed an experience. Having come from a cold climate, he stood winter weather fairly well. His introduction to natural war was like that of most other men who for the first time listened to the din of battle. He was badly scared. But they were making veterans rapidly in those days, and the Canadian soon got that control of himself which marks the difference between a raw recruit and a veteran.

Then, too, when in the thick of it he lost consciousness of everything but what he and his comrades were doing. When he shot at the enemy he shot as he would at a flock of birds, not because he had any animosity toward them, but because of the excitement he was under.

One day after a long cannonading on the part of the allies the order was given to charge the trenches. Glover was back of a line of bayonets moving at double quick pace across a field when suddenly he was turned completely round, then fell in a heap. The Germans' fire was so murderous that his comrades, reaching a depression in the earth, dropped while myriads of all sorts of missiles passed over them. Then re-enforcements came, passed on and were driven back to the allies' trenches, leaving their dead and wounded behind them.

That night Glover lay on the battlefield. Now and again the glare of searchlights fell on objects about him, giving a ghastly hue to everything and intensifying that on the faces of his dead and wounded companions. Toward morning there was a lull in the firing of cannon, and after daylight another dash was made from the allies' lines, and the ground captured was held long enough to remove some of the wounded. But Glover was not among the number.

During the day many things were running through his brain, among others his words to the gentleman who had ridden with him in the cab from Oxford circus to Downing street. The wounded man remembered the flippancy in which he had spoken of war and the experience it would give him. Experience! Call it rather a taste of inferno.

During the day the field on which Glover was lying was fought over, being lost and retaken by each side half a dozen times. On one of these advances by the English he was carried back to their trenches and in due time sent to England with a load of wounded comrades. Arriving in London he was placed in a hospital, where his life hung in the balance for awhile; then he began slowly to mend.

One of the strangest features of war is that one who has experienced its sufferings and its terrors when out of it has an unconquerable desire to get back to it again. Though Glover was as comfortable as a wounded man could be made, though he received frequent visits from his sweetheart, he was constantly making inquiries of the surgeons as to how soon he would be able to return to the front.

One morning he was told that during the day the hospital would be honored by a visit from a member of the cabinet. Thinking it about time he tidied himself up, he asked his nurse for a basin in which to wash his hands and face, and when the barber came to make his daily round Glover received the first shave since he was wounded.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon there was a stir among the attendants, the door of the ward in which Glover was lying was thrown open, and a tall man with a black mustache attended by a number of officers and citizens entered. Advancing to the nearest cot, he spoke a few words to the invalid, then went down the aisle between the beds, addressing a word here and a word there, till he reached Glover. The Canadian looked at him, feeling sure that he had seen him before. Then it flashed upon him that he was the man who had ridden with him in a cab when he was seeing the sights of London.

By this time Glover had learned the difference between a private and an officer and the difference between a subaltern and a general. While the stranger was advancing he had asked who he was and was told that he was Lord Kitchener, secretary for war and acknowledged to be the greatest living organizer of an army. Glover, remembering how he had talked familiarly with one so far above him in rank, would have pulled the covers up over his face to avoid recognition, but he realized that this would not be allowable. The secretary for war approached his bedside, spoke to him and passed on. He had been too preoccupied by the mighty task before him when riding in the cab in Glover's company to recognize him on meeting him again. Glover was more thankful than if he had missed an exploding shell.

Not long after this Glover was informed that he was to be discharged from the service on account of disability. He was as much disgruntled as his fiancée was pleased. As soon as he was well enough he was removed to her home, where he received her constant attention. He had spoken to her of having met one who knew her, but she could not identify the person by his description. He was so embarrassed at having conversed familiarly with the secretary for war that he could not bring himself to tell her of the episode. At any rate, he put off doing so.

As soon as Glover was as well as he would ever be—he'd lost an arm—a wedding day was fixed for his and Gladys' marriage. One day when the pair were shopping together in London they met on the street the man who had shared a cab with Glover—in other words, the secretary for war. He stopped to speak to Gladys and to tell her that he was sorry he had not the time to attend her wedding.

Glover looked the other way, but Gladys insisted on introducing him to her friend. This time the secretary looked at Glover with a more fixed attention and remembered him.

"I think," he remarked, "that I have seen you before. Did we not some months ago ride in the same cab?"

"We did, and since then I have had sufficient experience in war to last me a whole lifetime."

"So I observe," remarked the secretary, looking attentively at the empty sleeve.

Mr. and Mrs. Glover have returned to Canada, where the husband is the recipient of much attention. His friends do what they can to get him to tell of his service at the front, and he will sometimes accommodate them. Fortunately for him they would rather hear about this than the sights of London. At any mention of the latter subject he shuts up like a mouse trap.

SEARCHLIGHTS IN WAR

How They Are Worked by Distant Control in Land Operations.

In modern warfare the searchlight is invaluable. On dark nights at sea it is the only means of guarding against torpedo boats, which its beams will reveal at a distance of two miles and more.

On shore it is the electric eye of the army. It is carried to all parts of the field of action by motor truck, and the motor that propels the vehicle drives the electric generator that supplies the current for the light.

Most of these field searchlights are not directed by hand, for each instrument is fitted with what is known as the distant control. Two small motors govern the vertical and the horizontal movements of the light. From them an electric cable runs to the station of the operator, who, although he may be several hundred feet away, can send the rays of the light in any direction he pleases.

According to the Navy and Army Illustrated, one advantage of this distant control is that the objects picked up by the beam of light can be sighted more quickly and more definitely, for if the operator stands behind the light and looks along the beam his vision is hampered by a luminous haze. A second advantage is that the light can be placed in an exposed position without endangering the men who run it. Were the operator and officer beside the apparatus they would be certain to receive the fire that is sure to be poured upon a searchlight and would suffer the instant the range was found.

Common Law.

The early settlers brought with them the laws and system of courts which they had been used to in England. These laws had grown partly out of men's sense of right, also out of men's dealings in trade and in holding property. As new questions rose in the courts the decisions became precedents to help decide other cases. The common law is the accumulation of such decisions through many generations. New York American.

To The Housewife.

Madam, if your husband is like most men he expects you to look after the health of yourself and children. Coughs and colds are the most common of the minor ailments and are most likely to lead to serious diseases. A child is much more likely to contract diphtheria or scarlet fever when it has a cold. If you will inquire into the merits of the various remedies that are recommended for coughs and colds, you will find that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy stands high in the estimation of people who use it. It is prompt and effective, pleasant and safe to take, which are qualities especially to be desired when a medicine is intended for children. For sale by all dealers. [Advertisement]

WOMEN SOLDIERS.

They Posed as Men and Fought With the British Army.

The British army has had its women soldiers, and two of them are buried in the cemetery of Chelsea hospital. One of these dames—Hannah Snell, a truc-ulent looking person, whose portrait is preserved in the great hall of the hospital, served in the siege of Pondicherry and was badly wounded, her sex being discovered when she was removed to the hospital. She became a pensioner and wore on occasions the three cornered hat and uniform coat of Chelsea and was at her own request buried in the graveyard of the hospital.

Christina Davis was the other female soldier buried in this cemetery. She is described as a "fat, jolly woman."

Another Englishwoman who successfully posed as a man and enlisted as a soldier was Phoebe Hessel, who was a private in the Fifth foot regiment and fought at Fontenoy in 1745, under the Duke of Cumberland, being severely wounded. Ultimately she died at Brighton in 1821 at the age of 108.

The most famous Englishwoman
"soldier," however, was "Dr. James Barry," who joined the medical corps in 1813 and served at Waterloo and in the Crimea. In 1863, after many promotions, she became Inspector general, and it was not until many years later that the fact that she was a woman was discovered.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

ELECTRICITY AND WATER.

Little Danger in Turning a Hose on Heavily Charged Wire.

The slight danger that firemen run through the electric current passing from heavily charged wires up the stream of water they are squirting is proved by an experiment conducted by Ugo Tartaglini and reported in La Scienza per Tutti.

A trolley car wire charged with a direct current of 525 volts had one end grounded; on the other end he directed a stream from a hose with a nozzle fifteen millimeters in diameter. At 2.20 meters distance a voltmeter attached to the nozzle registered twenty volts. At sixty-five centimeters distance it registered seventy volts and at twenty centimeters 210 volts. The average man can stand a current of fifty volts without serious shock, so a fireman who holds his nozzle five or six feet from a live wire runs no great danger.

Mr. Tartaglini made the same experiment on two lines of alternating current, one with 2,800, the other with 4,900 volts, and the voltmeter did not register any current in the stream of water, although a slight shock was perceptible when he put his hand into it.
With a chemical extinguisher he got a current of 1,550 volts at 225 millimeters from a wire with a current of 2,000 volts.

Ypres and Death.

In Holland and Flanders, according to the Manchester Guardian, Ypres is connected in the mind of the people with the idea of death. If a Dutchman or a Fleming wishes to describe a particularly lugubrious person he will say,
"Hij ziet er uit als de dood van Ypre-en" ("He looks like the death of Ypres"). This expression has been proverbial since Ypres was ravaged by the plague in 1349; "the death of Ypres" is a vivid expression like our "black death." But it is also taken literally, for Ypres is in sober truth one of the dead cities of Flanders. It is more dead than "Bruges la morte," which owes its reputation in this respect more to George Rodenbach's novel and the reveries of other artists than to actual fact. "Ypres sleeps and Bruges slumbers," says a Dutch writer of travel pictures.

Making Matches.

The manufacture of matches is a complicated and elaborate process, in which are used a succession of ingenious machines and devices which must work at all times with the utmost precision and delicacy. It is now possible to turn out from a single dipping machine about 600,000 square matches an hour. A green log is made into matches and packed for shipment in less than two hours.

Foresight Defined.

The children had read the word foresight in the reader, and the teacher was endeavoring to make it plain.
"Foresight," she said, "is looking ahead. Now, Freddie, you give me an example of foresight if you can."
"Well, foresight would be not to eat too much breakfast when you know you were going out into the country to your grandmother's for dinner," explained the boy.—Indianapolis News.

Hopelens.

could turn over a whole library and decent."—Kixchappe.

VICTOR HUGO AT LIEGE.

His First Impression of the Busy City
as Seen at Night.

Shortly after the Franco-Prussian war Victor Hugo, the French poet, visited Belgium and subsequently wrote of his journey:

"The shades of evening drew near—
the wind ceased blowing; lights burned dimly in neighboring houses; everything became half lost in the dusk. The passengers said, 'We shall be in Liege
in an hour.'"

"At that moment, at the foot of the hills, which loomed dark and scarcely visible, two round balls of fire suddenly glared like the eyes of tigers.
By the roadside rose a frightful dark slender tower, surmounted by a huge flame that cast a sinister reflection upon forest, rock and ravine. Beyond, hidden in the shadows, was a mouth—
a mouth of live coal which suddenly opened and shut, and with hideous roarings spouted forth a tongue of fire. It was the lighting of the furnaces."

"After passing the spot called Flemalle the sight was inexpressibly magnificent. All the valley seemed to be in a state of conflagration, smoke issuing from that place and flames arising from that; in fact, we could imagine that a hostile army had ravaged the country, and that twenty districts presented in the night and darkness
all the aspects and phases of devastating conflagration—some just catching fire, some shrouded in smoke, others swept or encircled by flames."

"This aspect of war is caused by peace—this terrifying similitude of destruction is the effect of industry."

ITALY'S NATIONAL GAME.

Marra is Played With the Fingers and Is Older Than Chess.

We are apt to look on marbles as the most economical of games, but "marra" is perhaps the most economical game in the world, for it demands nothing but a pair of hands.

The players each throw out the right hand, with a number of fingers extended. Then each has to call "five,"
"three," "eight," or any number that he considers equal to the number of fingers extended by himself and his opponent added together. In this lies the test, for an old hand can divine by the very turn of his opponent's fingers
how many he is going to extend.
Whenever a player guesses the right total in any throw he counts it on his left hand by folding in a finger of that hand. It takes nine such correct guesses by one player to make a game.

This game is proscribed by law if practiced in public; hence the devotees make themselves to allers and byways. From the silence of these retreats comes the tell tale bowling of the rascals players. As game marra is confined, the play becomes more intense, the cries more hoarse and loud, so that one would imagine they were doing boxing.

The game is older than this—even chess must yield the palm for antiquity—and yet it is as popular and as primitive today as when first played on the banks of the Nile.—Strand Magazine.

The Piano's Seven Octaves.

Pianos of standard size have a keyboard of seven octaves and three notes
—fifty-two white keys. There is a reason for this limit. As it is, the keys at either end of the keyboard are rarely used, and the tones that can now be produced, from the lowest to the highest, include all that have any definite musical value to the human ear. If the compass of the keyboard were extended the added keys would produce sounds or noises without any musical significance. It is possible for the human ear to perceive sounds over a range of about eleven octaves, but the production of musical sounds is confined to the seven and one-third octaves.—Boston Herald.

A Shortened Visit.

"Did the little girl from next door have a good time?" Inquired the fond mother.

"I'm not sure, mamma," said the child. "Her nurse said she could stay two hours, but I gave her some lessons on how to behave when on a visit, and I read to her several chapters from that dear little book you gave me called 'Punctilious Points for Polite People,' and she went home an hour earlier."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Strong Resemblance.

"What a funny looking man that conductor is," said Mrs. Jiggles on the trolley.

"Yes," said Jiggles. "I've been trying to think who he looks like! His face is very familiar to me."

"Oh, I know who it is," said Mrs.
Jiggles. "It's our goldfish."—Judge.

The Senses.

If you shade your eyes you weaken your sense of hearing. If you sip a glass of cold water you will increase for a short time your power of vision.
If you fill your mouth with water you will greatly strengthen your sense of smell.—Indianapolis News.

His Job.

"What is your occupation?" asked the judge of a witness.

"Same old thing, judge—praying" for rain or shine as they're needed an "predicting the end of the world whenever the signs point thataway."—Atlanta Constitution.

The Insanity.

"How was he acquitted?"
"Insanity."
"He doesn't seem crazy."
"He isn't. It was the jury that was insane."—Kansas City Times.

BUNKOED BY A GREEK

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The pair of us had been in Athens three or four days when a party of English excursionists who were making a tour arrived. Among them was an antiquary who was looked up to and respected for his knowledge of ancient history and ruins.

Professor Himstead, as he was named,
had been charged to pick up all the old Greek manuscripts to be had for money, and it was his inquiries for such documents that doubtless led to our undoing. One day a man named Talanti, who had somewhat the manners and dress of a gentleman, brought the professor two ancient manuscripts as a present, and to show his further good will he announced a valuable discovery which had just been made on the island of Aegina, about forty miles distant. He was the owner of the island, and while his workmen were getting out some stone they had come across some rare treasures in art, but had developed only a small portion of them.
They had partly uncovered a stone box which he believed held a large number of manuscripts and valuable coins, but he had delayed the opening of it that some of his friends might be present.
Three or four of them were going to his island home tomorrow, and he would be glad to have on his yacht as many of us foreigners go along as could make it convenient.

Aside from the English party, there were Americans, Germans and Frenchmen to the number of twenty in Athens, and when the list was made up we numbered over forty, of whom ten were ladies. When we went on board there was considerable surprise at finding her the craft she was. She was nothing more than a trader, and her accommodations were of a primitive character.

My friend the professor could speak
Greek, but when he entered into conversation with Mr. Talanti's friends he found them sulkily enough. This excited our surprise, as they were supposed to be gentlemen. When we came to look them over we began to get a little suspicious.

As we approached the island we saw it was fairly covered with trees, yet it did not have a hospitable look. As we made a close approach we could see a couple of rude huts and a primitive jetty, but Mr. Talanti explained that his castle was hidden by the forest and that he was landing at that point to save us a long walk.

As soon as the craft was made fast
the three eminent friends of Mr. Ta-lanti suddenly appeared, and they knives and took their station by the gangway. The jollies divided into two parties, and, handling their naked knives in a menacing fashion, they drove the people into line.

When Professor Himstead had rubbed his eyes, scratched his head and got it into his brain that something not down on the program was going on Talanti mounted a box and smilingly observed:

"Ladies and gentlemen, you are now about to pass ashore to behold my wonderful discoveries, but each one of you is required to leave all money and jewelry behind you. I will see that everything is safely cared for!"

The men cried out in anger, but what could they do? I do not think there was a firearm among them, while the Greeks seemed overanxious to use their knives. There were protestations and threats of the law, but Talanti only smiled at them and ordered the work to go on. Each man in the crowd was regularly held up—that is, his pockets were thoroughly searched and everything of value taken. The women were requested to hand over, and each one had her watch and rings in hand as she moved up. In the course of half an hour every one was ashore, and then Talanti took off his hat, made a sweeping bow and sailed away with his piratical crew. He had no sooner gone than half a dozen villainous looking men came down from the hut.

They told us they were fishermen,
but their actions belied their statement. Their first move was to demand cash, and great was their indignation and disappointment at being told that Talanti's crowd had taken the last coin. When sure of this they left us, and an hour later two genuine fishermen came ashore in their boat.
There were a dozen vessels within five or six miles of us, and a dollar would have been big pay for them to go out and notify the nearest one of our situation; but, realizing our helplessness,
they demanded the sum of $100.

It was almost dark when a battered old schooner came sailing up to take us off, and the terms were $2 a piece to be paid in Athens. We spent a dreary night on deck and landed in the city at noon next day. Immediately notice was given to the various consuls and to the Greek government, but no one had any faith that anything would be accomplished. The government made loud promises and seemed to be making all possible efforts; but, as a matter of fact, Mr. Talanti was not even pursued. He never could have put up such a job without a number of officials standing in with him, and each and every one of them doubtless shared in the plunder when it was divided. It was said that the money and jewelry amounted to about $6,000, and the only consolation any of the victims had was the privilege of abus-ing a country where such things could be carried out.

THE WHY OF WORRY.

Those Who Live Only in the Present
Have No Fear of the Future.

We worry because we are afraid of something. Worry is fear of the consequences of something that has occurred or something that may happen.
A curious thing about it is that it is never associated with the immediate present. It is generally in the future, though sometimes in the past.

Animals and babies who are conscious of nothing but the present cannot worry. As all creatures, except human beings, live only for the moment, they do not worry because they have no recollection of what has happened and can form no conception of what may happen.

Human beings having the capacity to look back or forward, mentally, are susceptible to the fear that causes worry, and, as most persons live more in the past or future than in the present, this tendency affects for worry or not, according to our viewpoint of life in other respects. Worry is mental fear of an impending something.

Persons afflicted will be less worried about their condition than relatives or friends who sympathize with them. A person may worry in anticipation of a sickness or operation, but when they have the sickness or the operation is performed, the worry disappears, and, though they may fear, they cannot worry in the present.—Boston Herald.

BEST PAYING RAILROAD.

It's a Little One, Built of Scrap Iron
on Wooden Rails.

The railroad that pays the biggest dividends on the capital invested is,
according to the Technical World magazine, the Grand Island railroad. It is in northern Alberta, Canada, 200 miles from any trunk line or feed.

It is only a quarter of a mile long and built of scrap iron on wooden rails. Its rolling stock consists of two battered freight cars, which are pushed along the road by the men who ship
the freight, no locomotives being used.

The freight that is handled on this road consists principally of furs, which are towed up the Athabaska river on scows hauled by men, are laden on the cars, pushed down the railroad and shipped again on other scows, thereby circumventing the dangerous Grand rapids. Returning, the scows carry all sorts of freight for the Hudson Bay company's factors and are floated down the river.

The Hudson Bay company charges
$2.50 a ton for all freight on this little railroad, and the shipper must handle his own goods and push the cars himself.

Where East Sees West.

Those who have crossed the line into the southern regions of our globe are aware that in Chile the sun seems to rise in the west and set in the east.
In spite of knowing the contrary to be the fact, it is well nigh impossible to shake off the strange illusion. And this because our senses conspire to tell us the reverse. As in north temperate latitudes the sun never attains the zenith in its Phœbus driven course, we instinctively face the sunward half of the sky when we look south and below the equator, and we are abetted in our deception by the cold winds which blow, as at home, from the opposite quarter. To all our senses north is south and south north. The sun, rising on our right to set upon our left,
seems therefore to travel daily backward from west to east in a thoroughly upsetting way.—Pervical Lowell in Bermuda Fish.

There are 238 species of Bermuda
fish, but of course all are not edible and many are too insignificant in size to excite the angler. But there are quite enough large ones to make exciting sport for the most fastidious fisherman. For fishing in shallow water the native uses a dinghy, but when he goes to the reef he travels in a whaleboat or motorboat. In almost every Bermuda bay one finds ponds that are stocked with fishes that are being fattened for the market like Thanksgiving turkeys.—Exchange.

OUR NEW LIGHTING SYSTEM

The town of Princess Anne is to be congratulated upon its electric lighting system which has been in use since last Christmas. For many years before kerosene had been tried and gasoline lamps were subsequently substituted. Both systems were expensive and unsatisfactory. The latter still stand ready for use in case of an emergency.

Not only is the town handsomely lighted with electric lamps suspended high above the principal streets but also most of the stores, churches and dwellings are having electric lighting installed. Mr. E. C. Cannon, who is the manager, is delighted with the success which has followed his enterprise. He is a man who is an efficient engineer and who knows well how to handle a plant and to make it pay.

The cost of lighting the town and of pumping the water, as an adjunct to his contract, will be a less burdensome expense to the corporation than heretofore. The corporation will accordingly have more money to put upon other needed improvements.

So far the county, which owns the Court House, the most important public building in town, has done nothing to assist in promoting this enterprise. Attention has been called heretofore to the importance of having the Court House wired and furnished with suitable fixtures to take the place of the scattered coal oil lamps that are now the only source of lighting offices or Court Room. It seems to us the County Commissioners ought to attend to this matter. It is often necessary for many of the offices to be open late in the evening and very often the Court Room is needed for evening sessions of court and frequently night sessions of juries are required in their respective rooms.

The cost of preparing for electric lights in the Court House would never bankrupt the county and besides a permanent lighting system would be established and the danger of fire from lamps would be avoided.

We understand that the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad Company is already considering plans for installing electricity at the railroad station. This would be a marked change for the better and the general appearance of the town and approach to it would be improved.

The permanence of the new lighting plan ought to be well considered by all who believe in improvements. In some towns lighting plants have been discontinued because of lack of suitable patronage. That should not occur in Princess Anne which is fast developing into a fine place of business. The town should go ahead and every step forward that is possible ought to be taken.

LEE AND VICTORY

The strongest reason to be assigned in favor of the nomination of Blair Lee as the Democratic Candidate for Governor, is the fact that he is a winner and his nomination would make certain the election of a Democratic Governor of Maryland.

The fact that Lee is popular with the Democratic masses was shown in the Democratic Primaries of 1911, when he carried fifteen of the twenty-three counties of the State against the combined efforts of the State and City organization, and divided almost evenly with his opponent, Senator Gorman, the delegates to the State Convention, and the popular vote of the State outside of Baltimore city. More than ten thousand independent Democratic voters of Baltimore marched to the polls and cast their ballots for Lee in that memorable Democratic Primary with no thought that a single legislative district in the city could be carried for their candidate. More than seven thousand Eastern Shore farmers quit their farms to go to the polls and give him their votes and five of the nine Eastern Shore counties sent delegates to the State Convention to vote for his nomination. Again in 1913, when Lee was the Democratic candidate for United States Senator, he secured a plurality of more than forty thousand over his Republican competitor, Thomas Parman, and a clear majority of more than twenty-five thousand, over the combined vote of the Republican, Progressive and Prohibition candidates. At the same election he received over six thousand more votes in the State than his Democratic Associate, Hon. Emerson C. Harrington, the Democratic candidate for Comptroller of the Treasury. This is a record for vote getting without a parallel in the whole history of the State. It is simply marvelous, in view of these figures and the lesson they teach that so called Democratic leaders anywhere in the State should attempt to argue against the wisdom of the nomination of Lee for Governor, or should flatter themselves that the Democratic masses will follow them in any scheme to repeat the blunder of 1911. Here and there Anti-Lee politicians have been heard to raise the cry that "Lee has weakened" and no longer retains his hold upon the Democratic voters of the State, but this feeble and senseless cry is more than answered by very significant signs of the Junior Senator's actual growing strength, which are cropping out in unexpected quarters since the announcement of Lee's candidacy.

In this part of the State, for instance, the reading public takes note of the fact that very forceful arguments and earnest appeals in behalf of Senator Lee's nomination for Governor, without opposition on the part of the organization leaders, or in spite of such opposition, were recently made in the Wicomico News, a Democratic journal that gave its support to Senator Gorman in the campaign of 1911. Ex-Senator Marion V. Brewington, of the editorial staff of the News, is himself an able and astute politician, and few political leaders, in this section of the State, have a keener appreciation or a better understanding of the temper of the Democratic voters in the nine counties of the Eastern Shore.

The attitude of the News argues well for a good showing for Senator Lee in this section of the State in the approaching Democratic primaries. Daily the signs are increasing that if war is waged a second time against Blair Lee as a candidate for Governor, in the next State-wide primaries by organization politicians, the winning battle cry of "Lee and Victory" will go up from the Democratic masses in every corner of the Eastern Shore and make certain the nomination and election of the people's choice for Governor of Maryland.

ANIMAL TOILETS.

Cleanliness Rules and Some Creatures Wash Each Other.

Most animals love cleanliness. We have all seen sparrows fill their feathers with dust and then shake themselves until they are clean. This is one of their ways of washing. And we have all watched the cat lick herself till she is spotless and shining. For her toilet the cat makes use of her tongue, tail and her paws. A cat's tongue is rough, having all over it tiny horny papillae that are directed inward. Pussy brushes herself all over with her tongue, using the hard rough pads under her paws upon those parts that are beyond the reach of her tongue. Her claws she uses as a comb to take tangles and matted foreign substances out of her fur. She also picks her teeth with her claws. The cat uses the pads of her feet like a sponge, moistening them with saliva and passing them repeatedly over her head and face. Finally, to complete her toilet, she gives herself a few whisks with her tail. Some animals wash each other. Condors, vultures and eagles after a feast of carrion fly to the nearest water and splash about in it until their feathers are clean. The care that animals which live together in communities take to keep their homes clean is astonishing and is well seen in the nests of moles and especially among the bees and ants.—New York World.

SAFETY FROM FIRE.

A Method For Insuring Escape From a Crowded Building.

In discussing the best means of emptying a loft or factory building of its occupants in time of fire or panic, H. F. J. Porter, expert on safety from fire and known as the father of the fire drill, points out a method for solving the escape from a crowded building.

This method is a fire wall so arranged on a building as practically to bisect it. This wall must be continuous from cellar to roof and be provided with doorways on each floor, closed by automatic fire doors. The building must be designed with two sets of egress facilities of ample proportions, one set located on each side of the wall accessible from each floor.

No fire is at all likely to occur on both sides of this fire wall simultaneously, unless it is of incendiary origin. Should a fire occur the alarm sounds, and the occupants of the building on the side where the fire is merely have to pass through them and be perfectly safe.

A fire drill will empty either side of a building so equipped, no matter how many stories high, in a minute. The refugees remain in the safe side of the building until the fire has been put out, or they may at any time without haste use the egress facilities provided there, which would be free from smoke or fire.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Just Why We Sneeze.

Sneezing may be due to one of a number of causes. A bright light may cause many people to sneeze, as also the pollen of certain plants, while there are few people but will sneeze in the presence of dust. When you have a cold the sneezing is due to an attempt by nature to cure you. She is trying to make you sneeze for the same purpose that she wants you to shiver—to generate heat for warming the blood and preventing you from taking more cold—to help relieve the cold you have. For one does not sneeze with his nose, but with the entire body. During the act every muscle of the body gives a jump, as it were. It goes into a sort of spasm that warms the entire system.—New York American.

Forget Her Sister.

A woman from a small town, in the city to do some shopping, stepped up to a clerk at the hostelry counter in one of the department stores.

"Say," she said, "I want to get two pairs of stockings like my sister from Kentucky bought here last August."

"I don't know your sister, and I probably would not remember what she bought, even if I were acquainted with her," explained the clerk.

"You must remember my sister," insisted the customer. "She is a little, heavy set woman."—Indianapolis News.

The Duke's Walk.

"To meet one in the duke's walk." This is an invitation to fight a duel. In the vicinity of Holyrood house, Scotland, there is a place called the duke's walk, so called from its being the favorite promenade of the Duke of York, afterward King James II. This walk is said to have been the common rendezvous for settling affairs of honor, as the site of the British museum was in England.

OUR WILD TURKEY.

It Was the Progenitor of All Kinds of Turkey the World Over.

Among the aboriginal inhabitants of America the turkey was a favorite fowl. It had its habitat over all that section where grew its favorite food, Indian corn. When Cortes in 1519 first reached the realm of the Aztecs, Montezuma entertained him with royal splendor, and among the delicious viands set before the Spanish invaders was roasted turkey. It was found that the Aztecs had domesticated the fowl to quite an extent and that it was also plentiful in its wild state.

North of the Rio Grande the bird was equally well known, and the adventurous Coronado found it among the cliff dwelling Indians and other tribes he met on his expedition through what is now Texas, Arizona and New Mexico. The Zuni Indians seem to have known of the turkey for centuries, and some of their earliest traditions deal with this interesting bird.

The wild turkey of America is without doubt the progenitor of all kinds of turkey the world over. Ornithologists in general accept the view that all turkeys have descended from the three forms known today as the North American, the Mexican and the Honduran (Ocellata) varieties. The bird found in certain forest regions of South America known as the curassow, although sometimes called the South American turkey, in reality belongs to a different family, and scientists hold that any real turkeys found in that continent are immigrants.

In the United States six standard varieties of the domesticated turkey are recognized and grown. These are the Bronze, Narragansett, Buff, Slate, White and the Black. The differences are chiefly in size and coloring.—Exchange.

CULLODEN MOOR.

The Last Battle Fought on the Soil of Great Britain.

The last battle fought on the soil of Great Britain took place in the middle of the eighteenth century.

While George II. of England was engaged in the war of the Austrian succession Charles Edward, who was called the Young Pretender, a grandson of King James II. of England, landed in Scotland and made two attempts to obtain the throne of his ancestors. He was victorious in the battle of Falkirk, but the Duke of Cumberland, son of George II., having been recalled from the continent to take command of the king's forces, the Pretender was entirely defeated at Culloden moor, a plain in Scotland, four miles from Inverness. This was the last battle fought on the island of Great Britain and took place April 16, 1746, and it was also the last attempt on the part of the Stuart family to recover the throne of Great Britain.

Women Who Make Living Dearest. Woman's abuse of a shopping privilege adds tremendously to the cost of operating department stores, and places a needless burden upon every buyer. One of the large merchants of New York city is authority for the statement that 25 per cent of the articles sent out to charge patrons are returned, not occasionally, but habitually. We are not thinking of the woman who returns garments that have been worn and declares they have never been used. She belongs in a class by herself and demands special treatment. But the woman who orders goods sent home without considering whether she needs them or not ought to be amenable to reason.—Francis Freer in Leslie's.

Farm and Garden

HERD IMPROVEMENT POINTER

Calves Worth More When Cows Are Bred With Good Beef Bull.

Common sense is expressed in a recent bulletin concerning improvement of the farm herd. It states that calves will be worth double the value if the cows are bred with a good beef bull rather than a scrub. When good calves are eight or nine months old men who feed cattle will pay $20 to $30 each for them. The buyers like to find a large number of calves and of the same breed in the same neighborhood. Then, in order to make the enterprise most profitable, the individual farmer interests his neighbors in the work and the community works together, each grower raising only a few animals, or according to his farm conditions.

The cheapest way a farmer can get a good beef bull, which costs about $150, is by co-operation with his friends, organizing a bull club with enough members to represent the ownership of 200 animals. Four bulls are needed for this number of cows. If the membership of the club is divided into four sections or blocks with members in each block living near each other, the bulls may be changed each two years, and under average conditions the club will not need to purchase a new sire for eight years. The old bulls can be fattened and sold, the money going toward the purchase of new animals. Under these conditions the necessity of having bulls and cows of the same breed is readily apparent. In the purchase of a bull it is wise to solicit the advice of the county agriculturist or the state college.

Hints for the care of the bull are summarized as follows: The bull club should take the responsibility of caring for the animals; do not allow them to be kept in the stable or in a dry lot without exercise, but rather give them a good pasture where they can graze and exercise; during the breeding season let them have enough grain (two parts corn and one part oats) by weight to keep them in good condition, and at other times plenty of pasture in summer and a liberal allowance of cowpea hay in winter. About twenty to thirty pounds of silage a day are further recommended with the hay in winter. These pointers apply equally well for the care of a bull whether or not farmers are organized into a club.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Snow In the Garden.

If snow falls and weighs down the shrubs and evergreens go into the garden immediately after the fall stops and knock the snow off the branches. Some trees are much more liable to injury than others, but even if they do not break the continued weight of snow may bend the branches out of shape. Snow on the flower beds and lawn is a good thing—it acts as a mulch. Do not hesitate to throw any quantity of it on the beds when clearing walks and driveways.

Look to the Roots in the Cellar.

If you have cannas, dahlias and other roots of similar character stored in the cellar look them over frequently. If any have molded remove them before decay sets in and others become diseased by contact. If they appear to be drying up it will be well to put them in a place where there is more moisture. It is generally damper near the cellar bottom than anywhere else.

THE ORCHARD IN WINTER.

There are several types of winter injury that have to be met in different ways.

Low winter temperatures have to be met by preventive measures. These consist chiefly in sending the orchard into the winter season under the best physical condition and in the best vigor.

Root freezing can be prevented only by some covering on the soil, such as mulch or snow. This type of injury is not very common, but may be disastrous at times.

Moderately high elevations on rolling land with good air drainage offer one of the most general and effective preventives.

Good cultivation and the retention of adequate water supplies in the soil of other means of insurance.

Late fall drought is to be looked upon as a distinct danger. In sections where irrigation is possible it may be best to soak the soil just before freezing.

The killing of fruit buds by late spring frosts is a phenomenon by itself and can be met by special means. The commonest of these are whitewashing, smudging and heating from oil pots, of which the last named is distinctly the best.—Country Gentleman.

RAISE THINGS.

The way to raise things is to get fertility, and the way to get fertility is to raise things. Let us become searish in the whirl of this idea let us hasten to elucidate. The first thing to do with a worn or tired soil is to get plants to grow on it. The way to do this is to feed them, by putting available plant food where the roots can find and use it. These plants will in turn put fertility into the soil, some of them better than others, but all will do it if they are allowed to remain in or on the land. So get fertility in sacks, in barns or anywhere. With that fertility get plants, and with those plants get more fertility. This is a primary lesson, but some who are called wise men have not learned it. They dream of releasing and using the fertility the chemist can find in even an impoverished soil instead of buying a little and starting something. The practical man will never mind these iridescent dreams, but get the stuff and take the easiest, shortest, cheapest route toward the reality of raising things.—Farm Progress.

PANAMA CANAL AND FARMERS.

What the Great Ditch Is Doing and Will Do For Agriculturists.

Judson C. Welliver has an article in the Farm and Fireside in which he tells in part as follows what the Panama canal is doing and will do for American farmers:

I am told that wheat from Montana and other northwest regions is this year moving to the coast in a volume never before dreamed of. Why?

Because the canal is open, and it is possible to haul grain from a great distance inland to the Pacific terminals, and there put it on ships for eastern and European ports cheaper than it can be taken east by rail.

This all adds to the westbound traffic of the railroads. As time sees more development of the canal's possibilities the Pacific ports will draw more and more from inland; they will reach farther and farther east, and the railroads will profit.

The great west will develop under this stimulus; the middle west will find both Atlantic and Pacific and also gulf ports bidding for its products. Every railroad that goes west that formerly went east will be that much subtracted from the flood of agricultural products that in the past has swept eastward and submerged the agriculture of the eastern states. Eastern cities and industrial districts will need new supplies. They will have to get them nearer home, and getting them nearer home means that they must raise them. That means a huge impetus to the agricultural revival in the east and southeast.

Door Button For Wet Weather.

When a door button is fastened upon the casing with a nail or spike it is often unreliable. In rainy, damp weather it sometimes becomes so water soaked that it can hardly be turned, while in dry weather it contracts and turns so easily that it will not stay as it is left. To eliminate this trouble the best way is to insert a bolt which is long enough to just reach through the door casing where the button is to be placed through both the casing and the button. Drill a hole in the button, a small enough so that the bolt will be tight when driven through, as in sketch.

Make a hole through the casing where the button is to be fastened, boring it large enough so the bolt will be loose in wet weather. On the inside where the nut comes against the casing, cut a square hole a little larger than the nut and about one-quarter inch deep. This will keep the nut from turning. The nut is placed in the square insertion, and the bolt is run through. Then instead of turning the nut the button is revolved, thus bringing the button tight to the casing. If the button sticks after a rain or turns, hard a turn or two to the left will loosen it. When it becomes dry or turns too easy a turn or two to the right will tighten it, thus making a satisfactory adjustable button.

To Grow Shallot.

Shallot is one of the crops that is never absent in European gardens. small holdings and allotments. The bulbs are easy to manage—indeed, it might be said that they manage themselves. The ground is merely dug and then somewhat firmed, and the little offsets or bulbs are pressed with the fingers into the surface of the soil to half their depth. This operation is done in the southern half of England in January, for the winter there is rarely so severe that outdoor operations are stopped even then. In any case the planting is done at the earliest opportunity after the second or third week in January. Ten or twelve degrees of frost, 20 to 22 degrees above zero, will not injure them. In the middle states the end of March would possibly be early enough to plant them, and they would mature faster than in England.

July is the month of harvesting, by which time the original bulb will have developed half a dozen others around it in a cluster.

NO TAX PAID ON WALBANK ESTATE

Case Argued Before The County Commissioners Last Tuesday

Last Tuesday the Board of County Commissioners of Somerset County was engaged in a hearing involving an assessment of $212,000 against the estate of the late Kenneth S. Walbank, of this county, and of whose estate Joshua W. Miles and Robert T. Walbank are executors.

After the death of Mr. Walbank, and at the time the executors filed their account in the Orphans' Court for Somerset County, the local supervisor of assessments, Archibald Todd, acting under direction of the County Commissioners, reported to the County Commissioners that there was no assessment of this property on the books of Somerset county, and that Mr. Walbank had never paid taxes during his lifetime on the bonds and foreign stocks held by him, and which, under the laws of Maryland, are subject to the local tax rate of 30 cents, and, in addition, the State tax.

The executors were given notice that the County Commissioners would assess all omitted taxable property of the deceased for past years. Under the act creating the State Tax Commission all doubt is removed as to the right to assess all missed or omitted property for four years. At the hearing it was shown that all of this estate had been distributed by the executors with the exception of $1,000, which was retained to meet disputed claims.

The Board contended that the $1,000 now held by the executors was applicable to the payment of the assessment for the last four years, provided the disputed claimant was unsuccessful, but that it was too late to hold the rest of the estate, which has been distributed. The amount of taxes involved is $4,700.

A Slight Fire

A slight fire occurred in Princess Anne last Thursday afternoon. A stable belonging to Mr. E. G. Newton and in the rear of his store, was discovered to be in flames. Quick work on the part of the bailiff and a few helpers soon subdued the fire. Fortunately no wind was blowing and the damage was confined to the one building. Had conditions been otherwise, there is no telling how far the fire might have spread, as it occurred in a vicinity close to other buildings, all frame structures. The origin of the fire is unknown.

DRASTIC DRUG LAW NOW IN EFFECT

National In Its Scope And Directed Against Use Of Narcotics

The drastic law enacted by Congress to prohibit the sale of narcotic drugs became effective on March 1st. It is aimed against the sale of all injurious drugs, and imposes heavy penalties upon druggists and others found guilty of violations.

The new statute relates specifically to the handling of opium and coca leaves, or any compound, manufacture, salt, derivative or preparation thereof. It therefore, includes morphine, codein, heroin, cocaine, eucaine, etc.

Under this law physicians prescribing and druggists selling these preparations must register with the collector of internal revenue and pay a special tax of $1 per year. It is unlawful for any person to produce, deal in, dispense, sell, give away, or have in his possession any drugs coming under the law without registering.

Druggists, or any other dealers must purchase from the collector of internal revenue order blanks, in lots of ten or more, at the rate of $1 per 100. Whenever they wish to purchase narcotic drugs coming under this law, they must make out their orders in duplicate, retaining one on file. Druggists must make a correct inventory of all stock of narcotic drugs and preparations coming under the law on March 1, and must verify same under oath not later than March 5.

Druggists must also keep an account of all purchases and sales of these drugs thereafter. These drugs cannot be sold by druggists or other dealers except upon the regulation form, and duly signed by a person properly registered. All prescriptions must be dated and signed with the full name of the physician, stating his registry number, the location of his office, and the name and address of the person for whom prescribed. Jersey Elopers Found Near Salisbury

Deputy Sheriff Densen interfered last Tuesday with what he supposed was a honeymoon when he went to the home of William Acker, near Salisbury, and placed him and his supposed wife under arrest. The woman admitted she was Miss Josephine White, the young school teacher who about ten days ago eloped from Centerville, N. J., with Acker, who was married.

Detective Cushing, of New Jersey, a brother of Mrs. Acker, identified the runaway couple. He gave the following account of the elopement:

"Mr. Acker, who is 40 years old, disposed of his property in New Jersey a few weeks ago, stating that he was going to purchase a larger farm. Miss White, 21 years old, taught school near Centerville and boarded at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Acker. About two weeks ago Acker drew all his money, $4,300, from the bank, and disappeared. Miss White disappeared about the same time."

Descriptions were sent broadcast, which led to the arrest Tuesday. Ten days ago Acker purchased a little truck farm for $3,000 a short distance from Salisbury. He refused to return to New Jersey with the State detective without requisition papers. Miss White is detained as a witness. They had fitted up their new home with much care and taste, and were prepared to enjoy their future lives there had not the stern hand of the law found them out and broken up their happiness.

Candidate For State Senator

Hon. L. Atwood Bennett, of Wicomico county, last week announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for State Senator. Mr. Bennett is the first to announce his candidacy for this high and honorable position. He has never held but one public office, having served one term in the House of Delegates. He is one of Salisbury's prominent young lawyers, a man of fine ability and learning and capable in every way to fill this position with credit to the county and himself.

Mr. Bennett is a native of Somerset county, a son of the late James L. Bennett, who resided at Chance. Mr. Bennett is well-known in this county and his many Democratic friends will be pleased to read of his announcement.

COUNTY AGENT H. S. LIPPINCOTT

Teach Best Methods Of Sowing Largest Yield Of Field Crops

H. S. Lippincott, the recently appointed County Agent, was a welcome visitor at the Marylander and Herald office last Friday. Mr. Lippincott has already taken up his work in Somerset county. His work, being of a field character, will naturally take him more or less away from his office which will be in Princess Anne. Mr. Lippincott will be glad to meet farmers or those interested on Tuesdays and Saturdays.

County Agent G. H. Alford in charge of demonstration work, has sent us the following letter which will be of interest to the farmers of this community, who are asked to co-operate with Mr. Lippincott, the county agent, in agricultural work:

Mr. H. S. Lippincott has been appointed County Agricultural Agent for Somerset county and will begin work within the next day or two. Mr. Lippincott is a graduate of Cornell University and has been in New Jersey and North Carolina. He was agriculturist for the Pennsylvania Railroad for six years. He is recognized as one of the most prominent agriculturists of the East.

Now, the officials in charge of this county believe that the County Agricultural Agents of Maryland have the greatest opportunity for agricultural development, social uplift and greatness in this State. Their work is to assist the farmers in working out their own problems in their own fields and obtaining the answer in the crib. We all now realize that there is nothing that teaches so much as actually doing the work with his own hands on his own farm. Mr. Lippincott will gladly co-operate with the farmers of your county in teaching the best methods of sowing the largest yields of field crops and the greatest economy.

It is important at the outset that the people of your county realize that Mr. Lippincott does not pose as an expert or as even a specialist. He is a practical man, a County Agricultural Agent, and he will be glad to help you in your own field.

The agricultural interests of the county, primarily though not as separate from its other economic activities. He realizes fully that his function is not merely to give information to the farmers but also to receive information from them and the stimulus to greater activity that comes from being in close touch with the many difficult problems of successful farming.

"Mr. Lippincott is your hired man, your servant and at your command but it is not to be expected that he will be subjected to the call of every individual for no matter what or how trivial the service. Any such conception of his duty will result in the mere frittering away of his time without rendering much permanent benefit to Somerset county."

"I feel that Mr. Lippincott is well qualified for the position of County Agent but his success will depend mainly upon the hearty co-operation given him by the people of your county. He will need the friendly advice and suggestions from your County Commissioners, the farmers' organizations and other individuals. I sincerely hope that all the people of Somerset county will co-operate with Mr. Lippincott in agricultural work."

A Birthday Party

Miss Matilda Simpkins was tendered a reception last Tuesday evening by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Simpkins, of Mt. Vernon, in honor of her 18th birthday. Games, music and conversation were indulged in until 10.30 o'clock when the guests were invited to the dining-room, which was tastefully decorated with potted plants and the rainbow colors, where refreshments were served.

Among those present were: Dr. and Mrs. H. A. Barnes, Mrs. A. C. Moore, Mrs. W. S. Moore, Mrs. J. Geoghegan, Mrs. John Whitelock, Mrs. W. W. Simpkins, Mrs. F. Thomas, Mrs. E. E. Cole, Mrs. M. E. THE CHAUTAUQUA FESTIVAL A SUCCESS

Will Be Continued During The Next Fall Or Winter

The Chautauqua festival held in Princess Anne on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of last week was in every sense a complete success. Not only did the people of the town flock to the Auditorium but also many from Fairmount, Westover, Mt. Vernon and other sections of the county were present. It was a gala season in Princess Anne and all who attended felt assured that their money for admission had been well expended. The Auditorium was filled with people at each session and in the evenings the hall could scarcely hold the crowd. This was especially true on Wednesday night when every available spot was taken and chairs had to be brought into requisition.

The cost of season tickets for the three day entertainments was but $1.00 each. The guarantors had each to raise the small sum of 34 cents to liquidate expenses. The festival will be continued during the next fall or winter and to make sure of having means enough to defray expenses, season tickets will be sold for $1.25 each, and that sum will be asked at all future festivals wherever held. On Tuesday evening the audience present unanimously stood for a return of the entertainments and already more than enough guarantors have signed the agreement to that effect. Slips were passed around the hall and the returns showed that about 175 tickets had already been bargained for, so that but 75 more are required to make up the necessary number. The success that has attended the first festival will undoubtedly insure the sale of these.

The program given last week is here appended:

First Day—Afternoon—Series Lecture—"Burns, the People's Poet," Miss Meddie Ovington Hamilton, superintendent; concert—The Four Bostonians. Evening—Concert—The Four Bostonians; illustrated lecture—"The Battleground, Belgium and the Rhine," by Frank Stephens, followed by motion pictures.

Second Day—Afternoon—Series Lecture—"The People's Poet," Miss Meddie Ovington Hamilton, superintendent; concert—The University Quintette. Evening—Concert—The University Quintette; lecture—"Rebuilding Your Town," by Dr. A. E. Turner, followed by motion pictures.

Third Day—Afternoon—Series Lecture—"Riley and the Middle West," Miss Meddie Ovington Hamilton, superintendent; concert—The Festival Trio; pianist, impersonator. Evening—Concert—The Festival Trio; entertainment—Springer, magician, cleverest sleight-of-hand and disappearance acts, followed by motion pictures.

It is impossible to give a detailed account of each performance or of those who took part. Every part of the program was well sustained. Miss Hamilton, the superintendent, performed her duties in a faithful, systematic way and in all her talks showed that she is a broad minded, cultured scholar. Mr. E. R. Phelps is the business manager and had his hands full in attention to his share of the festival. The Four Bostonians, the University Quintette, the Festival Trio, Mr. Stephens, Dr. A. E. Turner, and Springer, the magician, all gave emphasis to the occasion and helped to make the festival varied and agreeable. Motion pictures wound up each evening's entertainment and were of a class to merit commendation for their value as well as amusement.

The bride is a graduate of Western Maryland College also an accomplished musician. The groom is one of the Maryland Agriculture College graduates and is now engaged in the mercantile business besides being postmaster and assistant cashier of Deal's Island Bank.

The bride wore a gown of blue broadcloth with hat to match and carried a bouquet of bride roses. Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw are taking an extensive trip through the North, touching Niagara Falls, New York, Atlantic City and Philadelphia. They will reside at the home of the groom at Deal's Island.

Rev. W. F. Freund, pastor of Manokin Presbyterian Church, returned to Princess Anne for his regular services last Sunday, after an absence of several weeks occasioned by the illness and death of his father, Mr. Louis Freund, of Princeton, N. J.

The Town of Hollowell

By EUNICE BLAKE

Edgar Wharton when he came of age inherited $10,000. He did not consider the amount sufficient to compete in trade with the larger concerns doing business in the city and formed a plan to go west and grow up with the country. But with the whole west to choose from he was at a loss where to betake himself.

One day he received a circular directing his attention to the town of Hollowell, in a new fabled state beyond the Missouri river. The circular named numerous advantages that Hollowell possessed. The climate was a perpetual summer; the earth was so rich that seeds dropped anywhere would produce in abundance; the water was as clear as crystal.

"That's just what I'm looking for!" exclaimed Edgar, and he went right off to his fiancée to tell her about it. She was so delighted with the description of Hollowell that she said nothing would please her better than to live in such a place, whereupon Edgar proposed that since the distance there and return was great they be married and go there to remain. To this the young lady agreed. They were wed, and prepared to settle in Hollowell, they started west.

The circular was signed by one Alphonse Honeydieu, a real estate agent who was selling town lots in Hollowell like hot cakes. Wharton wrote him that he was coming, and Mr. Honeydieu, who proved to be a French Canadian, met him at the station, a handsome brick structure that bespoke prosperity for the town. He took them to his house in a $3,000 auto and insisted on their being his guests while they looked about them. After a rest overnight he took them on a tour of inspection, calling their attention to various properties that he had sold and resold at rising prices, making a number of persons rich. On the outskirts of the town was a very large factory surrounded by a forest of noble trees, a part of which had been cut down and the timber removed. Mr. Honeydieu explained that the factory was used for the manufacture of wood paper and employed 2,000 hands. It was shut down at the time for the purpose of putting in additional machinery, but would be started again in a week or two.

Then the couple were driven back to the town and stopped at the library, which had been founded by Mr. Gardner Hollowell, the president and principal owner of the wood paper company. There was no one in the building except the librarian, a young woman who was spending her time embroidering. Mr. Honeydieu explained that books could be taken from the library and the citizens of Hollowell usually read them in their luxurious homes.

Mr. Honeydieu told Wharton that there was a tract of land that he thought he could get for him at a bargain in the direction toward which the town was growing. The owner had recently died and his estate must be settled within a given period. There was but little time to effect a sale, and he thought the property could be bought for a song. In a year or two it would be worth a fabulous sum. He drove the bride and groom out to look at it, and they were much pleased.

Wharton told Honeydieu that he wouldn't trouble him to take him and his wife in his auto any more. They would walk about and see the town for themselves. The real estate agent protested against this, saying that his car was especially intended for his clients; that he expected a dozen or two at once in a few days, but just now there was an interval. He couldn't think of permitting them to walk. Edgar insisted, and Honeydieu, when he found that he couldn't prevent Wharton from having his own way, reluctantly consented.

When they were alone Mrs. Wharton remarked to her husband that for such a prosperous place Hollowell looked very quiet. Mr. Wharton said that there were not so many persons in the streets as might have been expected. Meeting a man, Wharton stopped him and was on the point of asking him some questions about the location when Honeydieu swung around a corner in his car, interrupting the conversation by telling Wharton that he had got a price on the property he had shown him so low that it fairly took his breath away.

Mrs. Wharton expressed a desire to do some shopping and insisted on her husband accompanying her. This shut off Mr. Honeydieu, and the couple were left to themselves. Entering a dry goods store, a clerk who had evidently been asleep came forward.

"What's the matter with this place?" asked Mrs. Wharton. "There are a number of attractive buildings, and it looks prosperous, but there are few people in the streets, and there is an absence of hurry."

"I don't mind telling you," said the clerk, "since I'm going away tomorrow, that the town was built by the Wood Paper company. For some reason or other, tariff or trust, the plant has been left to rot away, and every one who bought property here at high prices is trying to sell out for what he can get."

The Whartons had left their baggage at the station. There they proceeded and took the next train for home. Wharton accepted a clerkship and invested his inheritance. He is doing very well.

VIRTUE OF AN APPLE.

At One Time the Fruit Was Called the "Food of the Gods."

The apple has become so familiar as the commonest of all fruits that its value as man's greatest friend in the vegetable kingdom may not be fully realized. It was called the "food of the gods" because it was believed to be the magic renewer of youth to which the gods resorted when they felt themselves growing old and feeble.

There have been many mystic traditions about the apple, which has been credited with varied potency. It is the healing fruit of the Arabian tales. Latin chronicles and institutes and early English poems contain many references to it. Scientific analysis of late years has justified all the ancient glorification of this fruit, which has been found to contain albumen, sugar, gum, malic acid, gallic acid, fiber, water and phosphorus.

Malic acid of apples neutralizes the excess of chalky matter caused by too much meat and thereby helps to keep us young. Apples are good for the complexion, as their acids drive out the noxious matters which cause skin eruptions. They are good for the brain, which those same noxious matters, if retained, render sluggish. The acids of the apple diminish the acidity of the stomach that comes with some forms of indigestion.

The phosphorus, of which apples contain a larger per cent than any other fruit or vegetable, renews the essential matter of the brain and spinal column. —Boston Herald.

Does Your Spine Shiver?

"A shivering spine," said a psychologist, "is the one infallible proof of an artistic temperament. Does a shiver run up and down your spine when you listen to beautiful music or read a lovely poem or look at a superb painting? If not the gates of art are closed to you forever. All great artists and all good critics experience this shivering sensation of the backbone before a worthy work of art. Some of these men use the shiver as a measure. The work that does not evoke it they pronounce a failure. My own spine shivers best to music. The violin solo that precedes the last act of Massenet's 'Thais' sets up in me a tremulous movement that wrinkles the back of my coat." —Exchange.

Napoleon as an Editor.

The Almanach de Gotha was already of sufficient importance over a century ago to prompt a dispatch from Napoleon. On Oct. 20, 1807, he wrote to Champagny, his foreign minister, complaining that "the latest edition of the Almanach de Gotha is full of errors, no account having been taken of the changes wrought by me in Germany. Tell the minister from Gotha to call on you and inform him that his must be set right in the forthcoming edition. Insist on seeing the section devoted to Germany before the edition is published."

The Supreme Test.

"So you think Grace Brown is perfect, my son?"
"Why, yes, mother."
"Have you given her temper the supreme test?"

"What's that, mother?"
"Calling up a wrong number on the telephone with a cross operator at the other end and somebody trying to break in on the line." —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Twixt Scylla and Charybdis.

"What are you so worried about?"
"My rich uncle wants to see me about his will and I'm afraid if I tell him that I am doing well that he will leave his money to his poor relations, while if I say that I am not doing well he'll leave it to a worthier one than myself." —Philadelphia Ledger.

At the Station.

"How dare you kiss me, sir?"
"Yes, and he has kissed me too!"
"Beg your pardon, ladies! I am all confused. I'm looking for my wife." —Munich Fliegende Blätter.

Strong Motive.

"Are you familiar with the motive of Blink's new play?"
"Yes; he needed the money." —Birmingham Age-Herald.

THE GERMAN POTASH EMBARGO

From the United States Department of Agriculture Circular Letter, Feb. 5, 1915

"With the complete embargo which Germany has put against exports of potash, the rising hopes of American consumers have been blasted and has sent the prices up to former prohibitive levels of from three to four times normal quotations. It looked a while back as if America was going to get a fair stock of potash but now the foreign potash embargo is complete."

"The United States consumes 3,500 tons of potash salts per day. Up to January 1st, the shortage in this country, due to the war, was over 375,000 tons, and it is estimated that by May 1st, the shortage will have increased to about 725,000 tons. The potash embargo will work a severe hardship on our fertilizer companies who have to move on a pre-arranged plan of manufacture. A number of companies announced months ago, shortly after the war started, that their spring fertilizers would contain on the average 50% of normal potash contents. Now, this sudden embargo on potash has made these 50% potash fertilizers appear very attractive."

"Reasons for Germany's imposition of the potash embargo may be based on several conditions. One theory is, that Germany does not care to furnish an important plant food to raise grain crops in the United States to feed her enemies. This shows, from a German standpoint, one of the most reliable from an agricultural

point of view, what a valuable plant food potash is.

"From reports received from fertilizer dealers, potash fertilizers have been advanced in price ten per cent, for example, potash fertilizer that cost $20 a ton before the war started now costs $22, with the 50% lesser amount of potash, and there is a possibility of still further reduction of the potash element in the fertilizers constituent of plant food."

"Our leading agricultural scientists advise the use of lime as a means through which the insoluble potash in the soil can be made soluble and available as plant food. Almost all soils contain potash and most all have enough for present plant requirements while some contain an excess beyond these requirements. If this valuable store of potash can be liberated and made available by the application of lime, the average farmer can readily make up the balance of potash needed to insure a good growth of the better paying crops, which are the grains. The lime should be applied to the soil evenly, with a lime spreader if possible, and let the harrow follow shortly after. If the soil should be sour, and a good many are more or less so from the overuse of vegetable and animal matter, the lime will, in addition, neutralize the acidity resulting in a more healthy growth of the plant."

LONG HAIR AND LONGEVITY.

A Theory That There May Be Some Relation Between Them.

Did it ever occur to you that there was any relation between a fine, bushy head of white hair and the long life of the owner?

I believe that I can claim without fear of successful refutation that a very large majority of men who have passed the age of eighty years have or had a goodly show of hair on the crown or top of their heads. I by no means claim that this is universal, for it is easy to recall men who lived to even greater age than eighty who were quite bald.

Without any attempt at a chronological list, I jot down a few names that come to mind as I write. John I. Blair, known at his time as New Jersey's richest man, ninety-four; Daniel Drew,
New York capitalist and college founder, ninety-one; Hon. William E. Glad-

RIGHT AND LEFT HANDED.

A Series of School Tests and an Am-bixtious Failure.

Ever since it was proved that in all right-handed people the speech center of the brain—the place from which talking is controlled—is on the left side of the brain and that in left-handed people it is on the right side there has existed a suspicion that if a person became ambixtious, or able to use both hands equally well, the speech center might be doubled, and consequently talking ability might be improved.
Very elaborate tests have shattered this hope.

A German specialist obtained the assistance of the school authorities and tried it out on nearly 3,000 school children. After a careful record was taken of each child's hand preference, speech ability and general capability all the children were told to try to use both hands. For many months an effort was made to have all the children become ambixtious.

At the end of the test all the teachers and other observers agreed that though some of the children had succeeded in becoming ambixtious, the effort had worried them all and had shown no advantage manually or in speech that in any way recompensed for the trouble taken. Consequently the scientist has decided that nature is doing pretty well with her own system of left side speech and right hand preference.—Saturday Evening Post.

The Horse Thief

How He Was Saved.

By M. H. WORSLEY.

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

The winter had broken earlier than usual, and between the nearest point of civilization and the shack stretched a waste of gleaming snow.

As the girl came from behind the shack, hauling the brushwood after her, the soft yet distinct pad-pad of a runner's feet in the snow caused her to throw her head back and listen intently.

Slowly the girl, her face almost as white as the snow, dropped the brushwood and crept into the shack, and her fingers felt for the bolts on the door.
But she was too late!

A man's arm was thrust into the opening between the door and the jamb. She pushed at the door with all her strength, but did not utter a word.
"For God's sake, give me a fighting chance!" the man groaned.

She stepped back.
"The sheriff! Hide me!"

"They're here!" she said quickly as the shouting of a dozen men was heard. "Get behind that curtain. I'm going to light the lamp. Don't move or get skeroed into shooting."

"No tricks, mind!" said the man.
"This isn't a kid's game I'm playing.
I've got you covered, and if you give them so much as a wink!"

A thundering at the door closed his mouth. He stepped quickly behind the curtain, a slit half an inch in length affording him a view of the scene at the door.

The girl lit the lamp, then carefully drew back the bolts.

The man at the door leaped lightly from his saddle and politely raised his hat. His companions drew back their horses and waited.

"I apologize for having disturbed a woman at this time of night, but we're looking for an ex-freighter by the name of Joe Greger. 'Lifted' a horse some miles back and not the first by a good many. He's given us a mighty good run for the money, but I reckon we've traced him."

"You're the new sheriff, aren't you?"
There was biting irony in her voice.
"We've heard about you in these parts.
Something brand new from Boston, eh? Came out here to show them how to rope in Brunte Heath, didn't you?"

"Is Brunte that you're after?"
"Brunte can wait. We'll take Greger to go on with. Like as not they're one and the same."

"Is your sense of manliness as great as your sense of justice? Perhaps you'd like to search my shack?"
"It's my duty," he stammered, "much as I may regret it."

She stepped back from the door and walked slowly to the other side of the room. She stooped over a shakedown, then turned and glanced at the man in the doorway.

He was watching her curiously.
Something beneath the clothes on the shakedown stirred uneasily. She whispered soothingly and drew down the sheet. The man at the door saw the flushed face of a suffering girl child.
The woman recrossed the door.

"Is that your man?" she asked brokenly. "Would you like to search further?"

"No," he said. "I'll take your word if you'll take my apologies. What is it? Can't be fever this weather, but her face is flushed."

"Broke her arm," said the woman,
"and it's set badly."
The man behind the curtain waited till the sheriff had gone and then came from his hiding place.

"Why didn't you tell me?" he asked, nodding at the shakedown. "Is it your kiddy?"

"No, my niece."
"Let me have a look at her arm."

He went over to the shakedown and gently turned aside the clothes. The child looked up into his face and seemed satisfied.

"Are you the doctor man?" she asked.
He nodded reassuringly and commenced tenderly to remove the bandage.

"Set!" he muttered. "It hasn't had a chance to set. Who made these splints?"

"I did," said the woman. "It was the best I could do."

"You can't expect a woman to be clever at everything," he mused. "Give me that box." With the aid of his jackknife he fashioned the splints and cast round for a sling. "Now that belt," he commanded, indicating a man's cartridge belt hanging behind
the door.

Mechanically she handed it to him,
and though the muscles of her face did not move, she saw the look of surprise that came into his eyes as he took the belt in his fingers and turned it over.
Within half an hour the child was sleeping peacefully.

"I'm obliged to you," said the woman. "Are we quits?"

"I should like to think so," he replied, moving toward the door.

"There are a couple of horse rugs in the other room," she said quietly. "The drifts would give you less of a chance than the sheriff did."

Embarrassment showed itself in the twinkling of his fingers.

"I shall sit up with the child," she added.

"Thanks." His hand was on the door leading into the other apartment.

"I hope that Brunte Heath, whoever he is, will have half my luck."

"I hope so," she whispered. "He deserves it."

"You seem to know something about Brunte?" he said.

She was sitting on the side of the shakedown, and her eyes met his fairly and squarely.

"I know that he's never had a square deal, if that's what you mean."

"He's married, isn't he?"
"So I've heard."

"Wealthy woman too?"
"Wealthy—but she isn't much of a woman. He was a good and straight man when she left him."

"And then he took to horse lifting?"
"In all his life he's taken one horse, although he's been blamed for many."

"Was there another man in the trouble between him and his wife?"
"So they say," she answered.

"Is Brunte looking for him?"
"A man can't afford to take the law into his own hands when he's got"—
"What?"

"A sick child." And she nodded in the direction of the shakedown.

The man leaped to his feet. His eyes were riveted on hers.

"Do you mean to say that she—she is Brunte Heath's child?"

"Yes," said the woman deliberately.
"Where is he?"

"He has gone to fetch the doctor."
"And the doctor is thirty miles away
if he's a foot!" He went to the door and looked out. "And it's snowing ferce!" he added in a whisper.

"How's he mounted?"
"On the horse the sheriff wanted him for. It was his only chance. His own horses died a month ago, and he was waiting till the spring before buying more."

The face of the man was a study in bewilderment. He crossed the floor to the shakedown and looked at the sleeping child.

"Lifted a horse to ride thirty miles in this weather to save his kid!" He turned away from the bed. "And good luck to you, Brunte!" he muttered.

"You'd risk your own neck for him?"
said the man presently.

"For him and the kiddy, yes."

For a moment their eyes met and spoke. And there was something more than admiration in his. Then his lips opened, and the question that had been disturbing him for some time refused longer to be controlled.

"What's Brunte Heath to you?" he asked. And the silence that followed was charged with fears and doubts for both of them.

"I'm his sister," she said at last. And it was impossible to misunderstand the deep breath that left his lips.

"And a sister whom he ought to be proud of," he said without reserve.

"Bet the sheriff wouldn't think so."

"I'm not so sure," he said thoughtfully.

He was sitting there gazing at her when suddenly the strained call of a dog came from the street. With a cry of joy she sprang to the door and threw it open.

A man, slight of stature, yet seeming of strength, judging by the way in which he hauled his tired horse through the snow, was coming toward the shack. The woman ran to meet him, kissed him affectionately and drew him into the humble apartment.
The man already there rose to meet him, but the woman was the first to speak.

"A man by the name of Joe Greger, Brunte," she said. "He came here with the sheriff on his heels, and I gave him a chance. I knew that you'd say it was the right thing to do."

"Mebbe it was, mebbe it wasn't," he said, staring hard at the stranger.
"How's the gal?" His eyes were still fixed on those of the other man. "How long have you been in this country?"
he asked in a suspicious voice.

"Long enough to know a man when I see one. Your horse has slipped his halter, Brunte Heath."

Two heads were turned to the open door simultaneously, Heath's and the woman's. And a cold official voice turned them back again.

"Put up your hands, Brunte Heath.
I've got you covered, and it wouldn't be easy to miss from this distance!"

"I thought that I recognized you,"
said Brunte, stretching his hands above his head and smiling bitterly at the barrel of the revolver almost brushed his nose. "Nan, little gal, they've played it low down on you this time. Have you been properly introduced to the new sheriff?"

The sheriff thrust his revolver into its holster and held out his hand to the man.

"I did manage to take you without firing a shot, Brunte," he said with a laugh. "Bear that in mind, will you?
Because one of these days you may hear the fellows chipping the new sheriff, and then you can—well, you can butt in and say that he wasn't quite as green as he looked. I don't know what you've got in the pack for with it will do her more good than medicine. Keep her arm in the splints for a couple of weeks and keep your heart up for good. That little girl on the shakedown is worth working for—honest work! I shall come back one of these days"—he glanced meaningly at the woman—"to see how the patient is progressing."

He walked to the door and looked back.

Brunte Heath was bending over his little girl. The woman was standing transfixed in the center of the room.

The sheriff held up a finger, and she went to him as one in a dream.

"It is probable that they'll be wanting a new sheriff," he laughed, "but I want you to believe that I feel it was worth it."

She gave him a sweet smile, and all that she said was:

"Come back!"

A BABEL OF TONGUES.

The World's Languages Now and What May Be in the Future.

How many men, if asked how many languages there are in the world, could give anything like an accurate answer? The average man's knowledge or ability to speak languages rarely exceeds two besides his native tongue.

It may appear strange, but it is nevertheless true, that there are over 4,000 languages spoken by mankind, while the number of dialects exceeds this.
There are more than sixty vocabularies
in Brazil, and in Mexico the Nahuia is broken up into some 700 dialects. There are hundreds in Borneo, and in Australia there is no classifying the complexities. Let us assume that fifty dialects, on an average, belong to each language and we have the colossal total of 200,000 linguistic abilities.

A century hence the probability is that there will only be four languages of importance in the world. Central Europe may produce a newer and more straightforward German language. Imperial English may reign alone over the North American continent, while a more businesslike Spanish will be used in South American states. Then Russia may take on some more rich Slavonic dialect, which will blend the races of eastern Europe and central Asia into a harmonious federation. So that in future these four languages will enter into what may be a never ending competition.—Exchange.

ERRORS OF SCULPTORS.

Statues in England Noted For Crude Blunders in Modeling.

Some of the statues in public places in England are notable for certain unique symbols or glaring errors in modelling. One of the former kind is the statue of Sir Anthony Ashley at Wimborne, Dorset. Carved out of a stone at the feet of the figure is a faithful representation of a cabbage, indicating that Sir Anthony introduced the vegetable from Holland into England.

Even more peculiar is the carving on one of the four panels on the Queen Victoria statue in George square, Glasgow. The subject is the knighting of James Anderson, the lord provost of that city. As no sword was available the ceremony was performed with an umbrella, and the substitute has been copied by the sculptor. This same statue is incorrect in one important detail. The stately pose of the horse is negated by the position of the hind legs—a position which is only possible
when a horse is racing at full speed.

Perhaps the worst equestrian statue in the world is that erected in front of Trinity college, Dublin, to the memory of King William III. Among other faults, one of the forelegs of the horse is straight and the other curved considerably, yet both hoofs rest side by side on the pedestal.—London Spare Moments.

Our Longest Canal.

The longest canal in the United States is the Erie canal, which covers a distance of 387 miles. The Florida East Coast canal is 350 miles long and runs from Mayport, Fla., to Miami.
The Miami and Erie canal, between Cincinnati and Toledo, O., is 274 miles long. There are three canals in Pennsylvania, the Schuylkill Navigation company, between Mill Creek and Philadelphia, 108 miles; the Pennsylvania, between Columbia, Northumberland and Wilkesbarre, 193 miles, and the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company, between Coalport and Easton, 108 miles long. The longest canal in Europe is the Berlin-Stettin, 120, and the next longest, the Suez, 103 miles.—Philadelphia Press.

Beauty of Zambesi Falls.

To realize fully the wondrous beauty of the Zambesi falls, Rhodesia, one must have time to linger and watch the ever changing scene. The depths of the chasm below are veiled from sight by the rising columns of opalescent mist, and above the yawning abyss the sun glints and sparkles, weaving the drops into a magnificent rainbow. Three hundred feet below roars and boils the swirling flood as it emerges from the Boiling Pot, rushing on down the zigzag gorge between towering cliffs of rock, narrow, fierce and of unfathomable depth.—African World.

She Was Frank.

The moving picture director was having trouble in getting one of the scenes right. The girl was supposed to resist an attempt to kiss her, but the rehearsal was far from satisfactory.
"Think now," said the director, coaching her, "haven't you ever tried to stop a young man from kissing you?"
"No," was the girl's frank reply.—

FARM DEMONSTRATION

Mr. H. S. Lippincott, the recently appointed Farm Demonstrator, or Agent, for Somerset county has come to Princess Anne and he will be heartily welcomed by all who wish to see the county take first rank as a participant in scientific research and work.

Mr. Lippincott is no novice in farm demonstration. He has had wide experience. The county is indeed fortunate in securing his services. He will at once secure a home with us and open an office for the dispatch of his important business.

DR. TURNER'S LECTURE

The lecture of Dr. A. E. Turner on Tuesday evening last, upon "Rebuilding Your Town," was one of the most instructive that has been in Princess Anne for a long time. Dr. Turner knows how to handle himself upon the platform and as a keen observer of human nature, he has few equals. The lecture was far from dull; on the contrary it was full of spice and wit. Any reflections made by the lecturer were upon "our neighbors" and not upon ourselves. It is a great question, "Who is my Neighbor?" Perhaps many of us are our own neighbors. It is well to reflect.

IT WAS A SUCCESS

The Chautauqua festival held in Princess Anne last week was a complete success. The people got behind it and the hall could scarcely accommodate the crowds.

It is gratifying to know that it was the unanimous wish of those present on Tuesday evening that the entertainments should be continued and in consequence of such a wish the festival will again occur during the coming fall or winter. It is more than likely that the date will be in January, at which time no other entertainments will obstruct. The class of work accomplished by the Chautauqua was elevating and very helpful. The proceedings were of a dignified character and at the same time were very entertaining. In addition to this the festival brought many people to town and helped to make the town bright and lively.

After all a live town needs plenty of employment, plenty of business and last, but not least, plenty of good moral entertainments.

Unpreparedness for War

Notwithstanding the great war in Europe has demonstrated the absolute folly of the long-maintained precept that "preparedness for war is the best preventive of war," it is being urged with persistency by those who favor war preparations on a large scale in this country. It is nothing to them that their theory has been demolished. They stand amidst its ruins and shout forth their demands more vehemently than ever.

The world now sees that preparedness for war is an invitation to war. Germany was prepared for war, to the limit. And nothing but war would satisfy her. Had she not been so thoroughly prepared for war the world would have been at peace today.

Every nation that prepares for war thereby invites war, and the world now knows what war is. But suppose the reverse should be the case—every nation in the world unprepared for war. Manifestly, there would be no war.

The problem, therefore, that involves the welfare of all the world is how to bring about an international condition of unpreparedness for war—of each nation maintaining only an army sufficient for police purposes and a navy sufficient for sea patrol to enhance the safety of its commerce. We all know, or should know, that with this condition prevailing no nation would even think of attacking another nation.

And why should nations war with each other?—Wilmington Every Evening.

Rheumatism Yields Quickly To Sloan's

You can't prevent an attack of Rheumatism from coming on, but you can stop it almost immediately. Sloan's Liniment gently applied to the sore joint or muscle penetrates in a few minutes to the inflamed spot that causes the pain. It soothes the hot, tender, swollen feeling, and in a very short time brings a relief that is almost unbelievable until you experience it. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c. of any Druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

Congress Adjourned Last Thursday

Concluding the first half of President Wilson's administration, the Sixty-third Congress adjourned sine die at noon last Thursday. The Capitol re-echoed with cheers when the gavel of Vice-President Marshall and Speaker Clark sounded "taps."

The President and his entire Cabinet witnessed the close in the President's private chamber adjoining the Senate. The President's signature on the last bill was the signal for the concluding ceremonies in accordance with time-honored custom. Among the last to receive approval was the seamen's labor bill.

While Congress adjourned at noon, officially, it was some minutes afterward before the final gavel sounded. The House stopped its clock and adjourned at 12.20.

The Senate did not resort to this subterfuge, but Vice-President Marshall held that body until 12.04 to finish his "good-by" address.

Adjournment came after practically continuous sessions of both Senate and House since Tuesday morning. It also marked the end of almost constant meeting for Congress since the President's inauguration, two years ago. As the life of Congress ebbed away, the usual dramatic and historic scenes were re-enacted. Then members dashed for trains.

It has been a remarkable Congress in many ways. It passed more new laws than any former Congress, and some of them were laws of the greatest importance. It appropriated more money than any other. Its debates fill more pages of the Congressional Record than those of any other Congress. It has been in session more days and more hours than any former Congress, having been at work almost continuously since early in April, 1913.

No. 2285, Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree, divorcing the plaintiff from the defendant a vinculo matrimonii. The bill states that the plaintiff and defendant were married during the month of November, 1906, and lived together in Somerset County, until the 28th day of April, 1907, at which time the defendant, plaintiff, toward the defendant was always kind, affectionate and above reproach, the said defendant, without any just cause or reason, abandoned and deserted the plaintiff and declared her intention to live with him no longer, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that no children were born to the said parties from said marriage; that the plaintiff has been a resident of Somerset County continuously since November, 1906, and that the defendant is a resident of the City of Philadelphia and State of Pennsylvania.

It is thereupon this 5th day of March, 1915, ordered by the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Somerset County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 7th day of April next, give notice to the said non-resident defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning her to be and appear in this Court, in person or by Solicitor on or before the 22nd day of April next, to show cause, if any she has why a decree ought not to pass as prayed.

Eastern Shore Early History

The following article pertaining to Somerset county is from an address made by Hon. James Alfred Pearce at the meeting of the Eastern Shore Society, of Baltimore:

"If Somerset county had produced no other public character than Samuel Chase, its fame would have been secure. He has been fitly called the Demos-thenes of Maryland; the Carnot of the Revolution; and was characterized by Hampton L. Carson in his history of the Supreme Court of the United States, as 'An American Thurlow, one of the most singular yet striking figures in our judicial history.' But there were others whose names were cherished by Somerset with just pride. The Dennises, the Handys, the Gunbys, the Woolfords, the Slaters, the Jones, the Polks, the Stewarts, and others, always kept their county in line with her sisters.

"Princess Anne is like Auburn, 'The loveliest village of the plain.' The Teackle mansion, standing in quiet dignity at the head of its leafy street, reminds one of William and Mary College, at the head of Duke of Gloucester street, in Williamsburg, Va.; and Beckford, the old Dennis home, and Beechwood, the old Waters home, on either side of the little town, shine like jewels in its setting.

"The history of Somerset is, in its early period, the history of Worcester and Wicomico, both of which were carved out of its original territory. Snow Hill, the county seat of Worcester, was one of the early town sites, designated by the act of 1686, chapter 2, confirmed in 1706, chapter 14, and laid out anew under chapter 11 of 1742. It still retains many of its old and handsome homes, relics of the past, but largely modernized, and is an admirably kept town. The Spences, the Tingles, the Richards, the Furnells, the Bishops and the Parkers, were the leaders always in thought and action, and their descendants have not lowered the standard. My knowledge of the country homes of Worcester county is limited, but here is one that is among the loveliest in the State, Beverly, on the Pocomoke river, just above the Virginia line, the home of the Dennises for many generations, where as a boy and man I have spent some of the happiest hours of my life, in the company of a friend who was the soul of honor, hospitality and manly virtue."

Mrs. Lillian Corbin Campen, of Westover, gave a theater party at the Arcade, Salisbury, last Friday evening. Her guests included Mr. and Mrs. Everett E. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. John Tomlinson, Miss Giles of Dames Quarter, the Misses Dunn and Messrs. Robert and Wallace Dunn.

Anarchist Plot Caught in Act
Detective work along old-time melodramatic lines slipped early last Tuesday an anarchist plot that embraced the wholesale destruction of property, looting of Wall street, assassination of many wealthy men and a general reign of terror in New York city.

The first blow was to be struck in St. Patrick's Cathedral, and there the detectives Tuesday morning lay in wait for the principals in the most daring and extensive anarchist outbreak ever planned in this country. As a result there are now in police custody the following:

Frank Abarno, 24 years old, No. 234 Elizabeth street, the man who threw the bomb.

Charles Carbone, 18 years old, No. 218 East Sixty-seventh street, believed to be the bomb-maker.

Frank Baldo, 20 years old, a detective, his right name being Emilio Polignani, the nemesis of the plotters. The arrests were made in St. Patrick's Cathedral while 700 persons were assembled at Mass, and so perfect were the plans that few realized what a tragedy had been averted by careful work of Police Commissioner Woods and his staff.

Ought To Paint

I ought to have painted last year, but I hated to pay $2 a gallon. I've got to paint this year; it'll take a little more paint; I suppose 1 gallon in 10; and a little more work, I suppose 1 day in 10.

My job would have cost last year about $50; it is going to cost this year $55.

$5 gone. I suppose it'll be the same again, if I wait again.

What if paint goes down to $1.75 a gallon? $2.50 on the job!

I shan't wait; what a fool I was! DEVOTE.

C. H. Hayman sells it.

In Memoriam

In loving remembrance of my dear beloved wife, Belle A. March, who departed this life five years ago March 6th, 1910.

In the courtyard softly sleeping,
Where the flowers quietly wave,
Lies the one I love so dearly,
In her lonely silent grave.
Rest on dear wife, thy labor o'er,
Thy willing hands will toil no more.

M. P. Conference April 7th.

Thousands of Methodist Protestants in Baltimore and State are looking forward with interest to the coming session of the Maryland Annual Conference of that denomination, which convenes in Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Protestant Church, Washington, D. C., on April 7th. On account of the central location of this church it is expected that the attendance at this year's sessions will be unusually large and, although the church itself is one of the largest in the Conference district, arrangements are being made for overflow meetings. This is generally the case at the night meetings, when visitors turn out to hear the addresses and the fine music rendered by the Conference choir.

Rev. Louis Randall, who is pastor of the Conference church, has been at Rhode Island Avenue for two years, having gone there from Crisfield, when he and Rev. Frank T. Benson exchanged places. Rev. Mr. Randall is one of the leading ministers of the Methodist Protestant Church, and the charge in Washington which he now serves is considered one of the most important. Word has been received from him that the Conference program will be ready by the middle of March.

MARCHING TROOPS

Caring For the Feet of an Army
Is a Vital Matter.

AS IMPORTANT AS FIT FOOD.

The Manner In Which the Sock and Shoe Problem Was Solved by Our Military Men Has Given Uncle Sam the Best Shod Soldiers in the World.

The cure of soldiers' feet is one of the important things in war. A soldier is no better than his feet. Many things enter into the sum total of military efficiency, but two of the great factors making for efficiency in troops are marksmanship and marching power. Infantry that cannot march would be as unfit as infantry that could not shoot. It may be because of the importance of the feet in infantry that the men of that branch of the service are called "foot troops." Infantry without good feet would be more useless than cavalry without mounts, artillery without cannon or a flying corps without an aeroplane.

Napoleon has been credited with saying that an army marches upon its stomach, which, of course, is true as far as it goes. Soldiers to bring or maintain their efficiency at the highest point must be adequately fed, and a world of endeavor has been put forth by brainy men to insure the proper supply of food, to put into the ration the constituents needed by the human system and to have the food well cooked. But it is just as true, figuratively as well as literally, that an army marches on its feet.

When a recruit or a prospective recruit comes up for his physical examination the examining surgeon gives just about as much attention to the applicant's feet as to his lungs, heart, kidneys, teeth, vision and hearing. He will not pass a man with flat feet, because that man could not march. He will insist on a certain amount of arch to the foot. Too high an arch, which, however, is rare in men, would result in his rejection. Any defect in the feet which would militate against his endurance on the march would be a cause for rejection of the man.

With the recognition of the importance of the soldier's foot came long and earnest study and experimentation with the soldier's sock and his shoe. The sock question was soon satisfactorily adjusted. The necessity of frequent bathing of the feet, especially on the march, was early determined on, and woolen socks, light or heavy, according to the season, were decided on for marching men. Fresh and clean socks are insisted on, and a sock with a hole in it or a sock that has been darned is not to be worn. At least that is the idea as developed in the American military service. In the matter of the fit of a soldier's socks it is prescribed in regulations that "the socks will be large enough to permit free movement of the toes, but not so loose as to permit of wrinkling."

When it came down to the study of the shoe the military men had a serious problem which it is believed in this country to have been correctly solved and with the result that the men of the American army are the best shod troops in the world. The cost of the United States army shoe, garrison or marching, is in round figures $3, and so popular is it with the men of the army that they rarely buy a pair of private shoes for use when absent from post on pass or on furlough. The quartermaster shoe of the present day is considered an excellent specimen of the shoemaker's art and is vastly different in fit and finish from the army shoe of a generation ago.

In those states where these shoes are issued by the national government to the organized militia it is one of the perplexities of the national guard officers to keep their men from wearing the shoes in civil life.

Before the foot and shoe fit question came under the study of men concerned with the efficiency of troops there was always a great deal of foot soreness among the soldiers on the march.

This trouble was always severe and annoying among new troops and among old troops with new shoes. The old idea was to equip a soldier with a pair of shoes that would wear long. The sturdiness and durability of the shoe was the main consideration. There was very little consideration for the foot that went inside the shoe. If the shoe was large enough and not very much too large for the man the matter was thought to be settled. Foot trouble among regular troops on the march has been greatly reduced, but of course has not been eliminated. Probably that ideal never will be attained.

A soldier's marching efficiency depends not alone on the size or what is commonly called the "fit" of the shoe, but on the shape. It has been said that Dr. Herman Meyer was the first to formulate the theory that the great toe must lie in such a position that its axis when carried backward shall pass through the center of the heel. The foot is a lever of the second class; the fulcrum is at the ball and great toe and power at the heel, which is transmitted through the tendo-Achilles from the calf muscles and the weight of the body between. This lever is the prime factor in walking or marching. The leg and body muscles balance the load or shift the levers, which are the feet. —Washington Star.

FALLING A MILE.

Curious Effect of Dropping Rocks Down a Deep Mine Shaft.

In reference to the deep mine shafts at Calumet some experiments conducted by members of the faculty of the Michigan College of Mines are interesting. It had been noticed that in the vertical shafts at the Tamarack mine if some ore or rock were spilled near the surface men working in the bottom of the shaft a mile below were not much bothered and sometimes only observed "a little dust." It is stated that a car of broken rock could be dumped into the shaft without injury to a man standing directly underneath a mile down.

The reason is that the rock would never reach the bottom, but would lodge in the sides of the shaft on the timbers that protrude a few inches at intervals—that is, the rock would not fall straight, since these shafts are exactly vertical.

In the experiments conducted two round metal balls were dropped into the center of a shaft by burning threads by which they were suspended, so as to give them no lateral motion. It was tried to catch the balls in a box of clay in the bottom of the shaft. None of them was caught. One ball was never found afterward. The other was found in the east wall of the shaft only a few hundred feet below the surface.

The explanation is that the earth is revolving from west to east, which gave the ball an eastward component in its fall because a particle on the surface of the earth is traveling at a higher rate of speed than one nearer the center, although at the same angular velocity. Thus a ball or rock dropped in the shaft will strike the east wall a few hundred feet from the surface, possibly then rebounding several times in its drop until it lodges on a ledge or on a level. —Engineering Magazine.

The freezing of light. Radium Rays Congel at a Temperature of Minus 312 Degrees.

The world stood with gaping mouth and bafled breath when science announced the phenomenon of frozen air, but wonderment has probably reached its limit when one learns that such an intangible and weightless thing as light has been frozen.

It is customary to speak of the enormous generative power of heat, but more astounding still is the fact that by means of cold a force may be imprisoned and retained when liberated traverses space at a velocity of 186,000 miles per second.

Like all great discoveries, the process is exceedingly simple and based upon formulas that one marvels at not having been employed long ago. Radium emits light which is called "emanation," and this "emanation" is nothing more or less than a gas. It is possible to freeze all gases, and when "emanation" is subjected to a temperature of 312 degrees below zero it becomes congealed.

The strangest feature of the phenomenon, however, is to be observed when the "emanation" commences to thaw, when from the surface of the surrounding liquid air brilliant spangles of light stream upward, producing a most beautiful and dazzling effect. —Birmingham Age-Herald.

Fine Language. As a rule the educated native of West Africa, like his Indian brother, loves high flown language. A clerk some time ago sent a report complaining that the carabine of the police at his station often misfired. This is how he put it: "It is ridiculous to report that the firearms of the police when pointed at the armament refuse to give explosive sound." —London Saturday Review.

Of the Past. Geologists say that several species of man have entirely disappeared from the earth. Doubtless these last species include the nice old gentleman who used to pull off his boots on an evening with the help of the bootjack. —Chicago News.

The Fourth Estate. The expression "fourth estate" was first used by Thomas Carlyle and was applied to the editors during the period of the French revolution.

Impudent. Registrar—How old are you, madam? She—I've seen nineteen summers, sir. Registrar—How long have you been blind? —Brooklyn Eagle.

HOOKING A SHARK.

It's an Exciting Sport Even if One Doesn't See the Fish.

Fishing for sharks off the pier at Palm Beach is a Brobdingnagian sport. You fish with clotheslines and a hook the size of a split anchor. Half of some great fish is slipped on your hook for bait. You throw it off the pier and fasten the end of the line to the railing and then take out your detective story and read.

Sometimes you get a bite; sometimes you don't. At evening the colored gentleman in charge of the shark fishing on the pier goes around and takes in the lines. That in itself is on rare occasions an exciting sport.

Once a New York vacationist was standing on the pier enjoying the sunset after a day's fruitless angling when he heard a shout from the colored gentleman, who had discovered a shark on one of the lines that had been left out. The colored gentleman was having trouble in handling the beast, so the New Yorker went to his assistance. Together they pulled and hauled at the line in vain. Another man on the pier joined in, and then the three braced their feet against the rail and tugged for all they were worth. But in spite of all they could do the line slipped gradually through their fingers.

Finally all the slack was used up, and the rope, coming taut against the rail, snapped like a thread. The New Yorker has always wished he could have had just one look at that shark. —New York Post.

MARTEL AND POITIERS.

The Man and Battle That Saved Europe From the Saracen Yoke.

A traveler approaching the city of Poitiers, France, would hardly believe that it was around the site of that small city that the battle which saved all Europe from the Saracen yoke was fought. The man who commanded the French in that great battle was Charles, who afterward received the surname Martel, "the hammer," from his mighty prowess in that fight.

He baffled the Saracen invasion by his great victory at Poitiers. The Saracens had mastered all Asia and conquered Spain. Nothing could withstand their arms, and the Crescent bore death and desolation before it wherever it went. The Mohammedans determined to conquer all Europe in the name of the Prophet. Spain had fallen, and France was next. The two armies met at Poitiers. The strife was bloody, for the Saracens had the prestige of former victories and the advantage of numbers; France had the wisdom of Martel. That wisdom triumphed, and the Mohammedan was hurled back, a broken power. This victory saved Europe from want and desolation, for the brave people would have suffered anything sooner than have seen Mohammedanism, the great triumph of Christian civilization, triumph in nine years after its famous triumph at Poitiers and died in the year 741. —Irish World.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for this very purpose.

Here is testimony to prove their merit. Luther E. Walston, Landoville, Md., says: "I was in poor health for several months and doctors told me my kidneys were badly affected. I took treatment for a long time but there was a persistent pain over my kidneys that nearly overcame me. I had dizzy spells and felt all out of sorts. Doan's Kidney Pills were so very highly recommended that I began using them. They removed the trouble. I have had no kidney complaint since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me several years ago. The Baltimore Star The Leading Evening Paper of the South

The Baltimore Star, established August 17, 1908, by the publishers of The Baltimore American, has won its place as the representative evening paper of the South. It gives more news and more reading matter than any other afternoon paper in Maryland. It is especially rich in departments—financial, sporting, society, children, women, and to these departments the best writers of America are regular contributors. The Star is the great home paper, with something for every member of the family. It is a cheerful newspaper, with plenty of entertainment. Those who try it keep on taking it.

The Star is elaborately illustrated. It has the first photographs of important events. Its portraits of leading men and women are unequalled.
The Star has two great news services, with wires direct to its offices from all parts of the world. The Star has a wireless equipment. It uses every modern invention and the best enterprise to get all the news.

The Star is different from other Southern papers.
It has a quality of its own.

Just Doubles The Yield

Better Than Stone Ever Was Boligiano's "Greater Baltimore" Tomato just doubles the yield of many of the best canning tomatoes you have ever grown. Smooth, well-formed and deep from stem to blossom. Ripens evenly to the stem and is entirely free from ridges, cracks and blemishes. Unrivaled shippers, due to its solid and firmness. Fruits in large clusters at every second joint. Joints are short and sturdy. Vigorous, compact, healthy vines. Brilliant red color, one of the handsomest tomatoes you have ever seen.

THE NEW STANDARD
"It is largely the EARLINESS and UNIFORM-ITY with which the plants bear a LARGE NUM-BER OF LARGE, SMOOTH FRUIT throughout the growing season, that makes Boligiano's "Greater Baltimore" superior to Stone which has been the Standard canning variety for many years."

"During our Picking Season from July 25th to October 1st, Boligiano's "Greater Baltimore" yielded nearly 25 tons per acre."

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

People are just beginning to grasp the idea of succession crops. Land properly handled may be made to do double duty and greatly add to acreage profits without decreasing soil fertility.

This kind of intensive work is especially important on little farms, where it is necessary to secure a living income from five, ten or twenty acres.
Even in the extreme north two or three crops can be produced on a piece

THE ANNUAL MOVING HABIT.

Already in local newspapers are appearing announcements of the thousands of farm sales that occur each year as tenants make their annual or biennial shifts.
If the facts were known it would probably be realized that the cost in shrinkage of values brought about by such sales amounts each year to millions of dollars,
a sum the tenants can ill afford to lose.

With many this annual transfer is purely habit. They go from one farm to another, year after year, apparently chasing a vain hope that sooner or later they will strike a place where they can succeed with less labor than they have put into their work in the past. This moving prevents their accumulating equipment, familiarity with a particular soil and locality and capital that they need to become farm owners. To the moving tenant a farm in the next township always looks a little more attractive than the one he is now operating, but the deception is just as positive as the mirage that the traveler pursues in the desert. Stick-to-it-iveness is a decided asset to the tenant who will carefully cultivate that attribute, and tenants who have become prosperous farm owners give abundant testimony to this fact.

There is plenty of evidence to show that the farmer who sticks succeeds, while he who moves usually fails.—Country Gentleman.

USING A HYDRAULIC RAM.

Many Farms Possess Running Streams
Which May Be Utilized.

[Prepared by Ohio Agricultural College.]
There are thousands of farms possessed of a running stream of good,
clear spring water which is so far from house or barn as to be entirely useless for domestic purposes. It is possible in the majority of these cases, with a very small cash outlay, to lift
this water from the spring and force it to the point where it can be used. The hydraulic ram furnishes the means.
Given a spring flowing at least three gallons a minute as far as 300 to 500 feet from the house and as much as 100 feet below the level of the house, it is possible to raise a fair amount of this water, and to force it in a running stream through the kitchen.

Here is a diagram of a hydraulic ram. A is the feed pipe leading from the spring to the ram. B is the waste

HYDRAULIC RAM.

valve out of which part of the water may escape. D is a ball valve leading to the air chamber C. E is the delivery pipe leading to the point of delivery.

Its action is as follows: Water rushing down the drive pipe enters the base of the ram, and since valve B is naturally in an open position, will flow out.
Soon the force of this flowing water is sufficient to close the waste valve by pressure from beneath, and the water thus entrapped is forced up into the air chamber through D. The flow into C will continue until the pressure in the chamber is equal to the force of the water from below, when D will close, and there will be a sufficient backward flow to allow B to open and water will again escape through this valve. As soon as sufficient momentum is gained by the flowing water, B is again closed, and the operation is repeated. At each beat a small portion of water is forced up through the delivery pipe. The action is entirely automatic and seldom gives one trouble.
F is a shifting valve through which a small amount of air is sucked at each backward beat, thus preventing the air in the air chamber from becoming waterlogged.

For Better Butter.

One of the most common causes of poor quality butter is the lack of immediate, thorough cooling of the cream after separation. The dairy division of the United States department of agriculture has made a careful investigation of conditions on a large number of dairy farms, and the data obtained show that if properly cooled cream of the best grade can be produced with but little extra labor or expense. The principles involved are very simple and are easily understood.

A liberal use of ice which has been stored in winter to be used the following summer is one of the requirements for the solution of the poor butter problem. Farmers who are already successfully delivering good products to the creamery have usually provided for themselves a convenient source of supply for the ice, suitable houses for storing the ice and ice water tanks for the immediate cooling of the milk and cream. In parts of New England, although the dairymen often hold cream on the farm four days in the summer and seven days in the winter,
they deliver practically all their product while sweet. After it reaches the creamery it is pasteurized and shipped a distance of from 50 to 300 miles and may still be sold in these remote localities in the form of sweet cream.

Manure For Hotbeds.

Fresh horse manure, containing a liberal amount of straw or other litter, is the best material to furnish heat in the hotbed. If manure is saved from the home stable it should be collected and preserved under cover. It requires about one two horse load for every two sash.

Court Of Appeals Recesses

The judges of the Court of Appeals finished the work of January term last Tuesday and adjourned until the April term. The case of the School Commissioners of Caroline county against Wesley Breeding and others, the last on the docket, was submitted on brief for the appellant.

The judges will reassemble on April 6 and will spend a few days in consultation and filing opinions, after which arguments for the April term will begin. There are about 45 of the January term cases yet to be decided, among them the appeal involving the authority of the State Tax Commission to appoint more than one general counsel and the payment of the salaries of State Senators Edward M. Hammond and W. W. Beck, who were appointed and served several months.

For men who love the better things of life

Morris' tailoring opening is for you. It is a custom tailor's exhibit of the best things—the authentic things in men's wear for 1915

George, the traveling representative of M. Moses & Son, tailors of the better class, will be in charge of the opening and take all measures on March 18th, 19th and 20th, 1915

Some men have a "natural eye" for the beautiful and the harmonious. Almost instinctively they can tell the difference between the "false" and the "true"—between clothes that are merely showy, and clothes that are artistic, individual, distinctive and correct.

Morris' Tailoring Opening is Princess Anne's official Spring Fashion Show for men of this caliber.

Men who take pride in wearing clothes that are irreproachable in "Vogue" and "Mode."

There are some men, of course, who are quite content with the conventional in dress. To them clothes are but a covering. Such men may not care for this very advanced Custom Tailor's Exhibit.

But for men who order their clothes as an expert epicurean orders an important dinner, for men fit, fashion, form and grace—for men who are pace-setters and initiators in dress among their associates—for these men Morris' Tailoring Opening will prove a delight.

The Christmas Savings Club provides the easiest possible method for the beginning of saving and for continued systematic saving.

DREDGING SEASON NOW CLOSED

Tongers Will Continue To Work Until April 25th

Yesterday (Monday) was the last day for oyster dredging in the waters of Maryland. This, however, does not mean that the season on that day is closed, for tongers are permitted to operate until April 25 to supply the local demand. After that date five days is allowed for the disposal of the cargoes on the market.

According to those in close touch with the business the present season has not been as profitable as heretofore. This is largely attributed, it was stated, to the depression in business as a result of the European war.

Throughout the season select oysters have always been in good demand and prices were satisfactory. Small oysters, or, what is called steam stock, have seldom been as plentiful and cheap as during the present season. The yield of oysters on the beds and rocks has been good, and it is declared that at the termination of the season there will be an abundant supply of small oysters left on the beds which next season will be of good marketable size.

Dredgers and Bay boatmen have suffered the most on account of the depression in the market for steam stock. In a number of instances cargoes of that grade have been sold for as low as 25 cents a bushel. Oysters of good grade last week ranged in price from 60 to 75 cents a bushel in the Baltimore market.

Anniversary Of Blizzard

Twenty-seven years ago last Friday a sixty-mile gale was piling the falling snow into huge, shifting drifts, and the temperature was biting at fifteen.

That was the great blizzard of 1888, the famous "white hurricane" which paralyzed traffic, halted business, caused great suffering and a number of deaths. The storm began on the night of March 11, after a driving northeast rain. On March 12, the thermometer dropped to 8. There were ten inches of snow on the level.

Philadelphia and New York were the cities most affected by the blizzard of '88. Six horses were often unequal to the task of dragging a fire engine through the snowbanks that filled the streets of New York and Brooklyn. Ambulances crawled. Street cars were left deserted in the impassable drifts. Railroad transportation ceased. Schools closed. The delivery of fuel and groceries and milk was suspended for days. Funerals were postponed. Those who were caught in factories and shops and offices could not go home, and those at home could not go to work.

The handsome new home of Mr. Howard L. Sterling, general manager of the Crisfield Ice Manufacturing Co., was destroyed by fire about 3 o'clock Wednesday morning. The house, which was of brick, had only recently been completed, and was one of the most attractive residences in Crisfield. Both Mr. and Mrs. Sterling were away from home at the time, the former spending the night with a friend at the Colonial Hotel, and the latter being in Baltimore.

It is supposed that the fire originated from the fire in the basement, as that section of the building adjacent to the heater was in a steady flame when the fire was discovered.

Mr. Sterling's home, together with his entire house furnishings, was totally destroyed.

ATHLETIC MEET FOR COUNTY BOYS

In-Conjunction With Field Day Exercises On May 7th

Dr. William Burdick, director of the Public Athletic League, Baltimore, has sent us the report of the committee to plan athletic events for the counties of Maryland. The date scheduled for the schools of Somerset county is May 7th. There may, however, be conflicts of dates, in which event the Somerset date may have to be changed.

Report of special committee appointed by the County School Superintendent at Ocean City, July 2nd, 1914.

A meeting of this special committee held at the City Club, Baltimore, on August 28th, there were present Messrs. Albert S. Cook, William J. Holloway, Ernest J. Grimes, George T. Morelock and Woodland C. Phillips.

The committee recommends that the cooperation of the Public Athletic League in the conduct of athletic meets, particularly in connection with educational school "Rally Days," be accepted.

The Public Athletic League is to furnish the medals as prizes for the athletic meet. They are also to send score sheets, entry blanks, and necessary instruction and forms. The county is to furnish the programs and officials and also send the winners of the different athletic events, at the county's expense, to a meet to be held in Baltimore when the League will try to secure entertainment for the boys in the homes of the local school boys. The plan is to have each county conduct an athletic meet in the spring, with the cooperation of the Public Athletic League, and then to have a "state meet" in Baltimore.

It was agreed that the boys should be divided in accordance with their weight and age, the dividing line of age being set on years on or before January 1st, 1915. The weight classifications are to be as follows: under 96 pounds and under 115 pounds and under, junior unlimited weight and senior unlimited weight. Boys will be weighed on the day of the meet in the costume in which they will compete.

The meet will be held on May 7th, at the City Club, Baltimore, and will be in conjunction with the field day exercises.

J. O. Freeny Dies In Baltimore

The remains of Mr. John Oscar Freeny, who died Sunday at the home of his son, Mr. Morris Freeny, in Baltimore, were brought to Salisbury Tuesday afternoon, and after services in Wicomico Presbyterian Church were interred beside those of his first wife, who died many years ago.

Mr. Freeny was about 70 years old and twice married. His first wife was Miss Maggie Whitlock, who died many years ago, leaving one son, Morris. The second union was to a Miss Wells, of Baltimore city. This marriage proved an unhappy one, she securing a divorce several years ago. She survives with two daughters. Deceased is survived by one sister, Mrs. J. P. Campbell, of Baltimore city.

Mr. Freeny attended the public school and completed his academic course in the old Salisbury Academy. He then entered Princeton (N. J.) University, from which he was graduated. Mr. Freeny entered the journalistic field, and with Albert L. Richardson purchased the Salisbury Advertiser, which they conducted successfully for several years. Retiring from the business Mr. Freeny took up farming, residing on one of his farms located on the Rockaway road. He was elected school examiner for Wicomico county several years ago and occupied the position eight years, being succeeded by the late Thomas H. Williams.

POTASH, LIME AND THE POTATO SCAB

Judicious Liming Will Help Raise Potatoes Free From Scab

In a journey through Long Island collecting soil samples for lime requirement analysis, the writer found that the potato-growers of the eastern section were bitterly opposed to liming, though their soils were very acid. The same was found to be the position of farmers in New Jersey. The attitude was based on positive experience that sweetening the soil greatly increased potato scab. Long Island farmers have had the same experience with Canada wood-ashes, also a soil sweetener and a potash fertilizer.

The writer was accompanied on this trip by Mr. C. G. King, of York, Pa., who actively opposed the farmers' view as an unwarranted prejudice because in York and Lancaster counties, Pennsylvania, the farmers raise scab free potatoes on well limed soils. The same view was held by Mr. Fullerton, Superintendent of the Long Island Railroad Experimental Farm, who raised and exhibited at the Mineola and Riverhead, L. I. fairs, fine scab-free potatoes.

In view of the contradictory experience, we resolved to take testimony. It was found that the Pennsylvania farmers, whom Mr. King knew, sterilized their seed potatoes with formaldehyde. The Long Island and New Jersey farmers, interviewed, did not. It was further found that the prize potatoes at Riverhead, L. I. fair all showed traces of scab, though insufficient to check healthy development. The upshot of the investigation indicated, that sour land checks the development of potato scab more than it hinders potato growth, if the land is otherwise well fertilized. But, the average potato crops, under such circumstances, are not more than half those of Europe.

The tentative conclusion on the check to scab developed in sour land, is confirmed by statements of Professor Co-ville of the Department of Agriculture. The result of Mr. King, Mr. Fullerton and my inquiries was the suggestion, that where the soil was undoubtedly infected with scab, this might be controlled by keeping the soil partially sour for some seasons and checked by sterilizing all seed planted, until this fungus pest had died out. On the other hand, potato growth might be encouraged, meanwhile, by partial liming. This being most desirable at present, because the potato is a strong potash feeder and we are forced, through the war, to make our potash resources in the soil go as far as possible. This, as is well known, is in a measure possible through judicious liming. The plan was considered worthy of trial by half a dozen Long Island potato growers and their soils were analyzed for lime requirements and each promised to lime one field to the extent of two-thirds of the lime-needed found, sterilizing all the seed planted.

It is gratifying, in this connection, to state that the plan was laid before Dr. Otto Appel, professor of Plant Diseases at Berlin University and Privy Counselor to the German Government, invited to investigate our potato troubles. Since August last, he has traveled over all our potato sections on this mission. We are at this time prevented from going fully into his views, as he naturally prefers to complete his report to our authorities and we are equally unwilling to incur any risk of misquoting him. He seemed pleased at the prospect, however, that the lime producers of this country, were interested to give intelligent aid to the farmers on this question, and he stated positively, that all potato land in Germany was limed, and would have to be here, but thought it would have to be done gradually as I have herein outlined.—Carl Langenbeck, of The Lime Service Bureau.

One Of The Evils Of War

The destruction of the American steamship Evelyn, bound for Bremen, in German waters and in all probability by a German mine, is simply one of those many evils which always attend war whenever it is entered upon. Looking at the incident from the standpoint of reason, it is not conceivable that the disaster was the result of a deliberate German attack upon the vessel by a submarine. The vessel was loaded with cotton and bound for a German port. That cargo of cotton was greatly desired by Germany, whose shipping has been so closely confined to home ports by the English and French blockade that her people are no doubt suffering greatly for the lack of those articles of commerce which before the war freely entered her ports. The American shipload of cotton would have been welcomed, not repelled, and so it is reasonable to believe that a floating mine struck the unfortunate vessel and destroyed it. Fortunately, all the officers and crew were rescued.

Here we have simply another evidence of the evils of war. Deadly mines are laid in the sea at points where it is presumed vessels of hostile countries may attempt to navigate, with the deliberate purpose of bringing about their destruction. These fatal agencies threaten peaceful vessels as well as war vessels, and those which attempt to reach German ports with much-needed cargoes are endangered as well as vessels of war. It is some recompense, therefore, to reflect that the destruction of the Evelyn is not likely to be a cause of serious trouble between Germany and this country, as would undoubtedly be the case should one of our merchant vessels be deliberately attacked and destroyed by a German war vessel.—Wilmington Every Evening.

WHY RIVERS OVERFLOW.

Some Streams Make Their Beds Too Small For Flood Tides.

"A river is not made to order. It is nothing more nor less than the accidental path made by water in following the line of least resistance," writes Arthur E. Morgan in an article on "Why Rivers Overflow," published in the Scientific American. Mr. Morgan goes on to show that the average river has found or made a channel that suffices for it in ordinary times, but that in flood tide is not large enough to carry off the water. Some of the figures he gives explain perfectly why certain rivers are in the habit of overflowing.

The Coldwater river, where it enters the flat lands from the hills in northern Mississippi, has a capacity of 900 cubic feet per second when full to the top of its banks. At maximum flood, however, 100,000 cubic feet per second pour down it, and it has to overflow.

The St. Francis river on the boundary between Arkansas and Missouri can take care of from 500 to 5,000 cubic feet per second, but in flood time it has 100,000, and the surplus must overflow. The Miami river in Ohio has a normal capacity, varying at different points from 6 per cent to 5 per cent of its maximum overflow. The Mississippi, near the mouth of the Red river, has a normal flow of 200,000 cubic feet a second; when full to the top of its banks it can carry about 1,000,000 cubic feet. When all its tributaries are in flood it has to carry 2,500,000 cubic feet a second. As its banks are higher than the surrounding plains, these inevitably receive the overflow.

A Mother's Pride.

Pride, said Charles Dickens, is one of the seven deadly sins, but it cannot be the pride of a mother in her children, for that is a compound of two cardinal virtues—faith and hope.

There is no better ballast for keeping the mind steady on its keel and saving it from all risk of crankiness than business.—Lowell.

THE GERMAN POTASH EMBARGO

"With the complete embargo which Germany has put against exports of potash, the rising hopes of American consumers have been blasted and has sent the prices up to former prohibitive levels of from three to four times normal quotations. It looked a while back as if America was going to get a fair stock of potash but now the foreign potash embargo is complete.

"The United States consumes 3,500 tons of potash salts per day. Up to January 1st, the shortage in this country, due to the war, was over 375,000 tons, and it is estimated that by May 1st, the shortage will have increased to about 725,000 tons. The potash embargo will work a severe hardship on our fertilizer companies who have to move on a pre-arranged plan of manufacture. A number of companies announced months ago, shortly after the war started, that their spring fertilizers would contain on the average 50% of normal potash contents. Now, this sudden embargo on potash has made these 50% potash fertilizers appear very attractive.

"Reasons for Germany's imposition of the potash embargo may be based on several conditions. One theory is, that Germany does not care to furnish an important plant food to raise grain crops in the United States to feed her enemies. This shows, from a German standpoint, one of the most reliable from an agricultural

point of view, what a valuable plant food potash is.

"From reports received from fertilizer dealers, potash fertilizers have been advanced in price ten per cent. for example, potash fertilizer that cost $20 a ton before the war started now costs $22, with the 50% lesser amount of potash, and there is a possibility of still further reduction of the potash element in the fertilizers constituent of plant food.

"Our leading agricultural scientists advise the use of lime as a means through which the insoluble potash in the soil can be made soluble and available as plant food. Almost all soils contain potash and most all have enough for present plant requirements while some contain an excess beyond these requirements. If this valuable store of potash can be liberated and made available by the application of lime, the average farmer can readily make up the balance of potash needed to insure a good growth of the better paying crops, which are the grains. The lime should be applied to the soil evenly, with a lime spreader if possible, and let the harrow follow shortly after. If the soil should be sour, and a good many are more or less so from the overuse of vegetable and animal matter, the lime will, in addition, neutralize the acidity resulting in a more healthy growth of the plant."

PRINTING—We Do It—PRINTING

CHLOROFORM IN FICTION.

It Acts in a Manner That Surprises the Medical Experts.

Every now and then stories appear about individuals and even whole households being chloroformed by enterprising burglars. A report of that kind in New York city induced the New York Herald to interview a number of experts on the subject with the result of obtaining a verdict that should effectively dispose of that sort of fiction for all time, but probably will not, as previous exposures have failed.

These medical witnesses pointed out it generally requires the undivided attention of two surgeons and several nurses to induce a willing patient to yield to the fumes. If, it is suggested, the burglars have found a more expeditious mode of administration the medical world would be glad to hear of it. Dr. James J. Walsh, an authority on anaesthesia, said that the application of a chloroform soaked cloth to a victim's nostrils would produce a burning sensation that would at once arouse the sleeper.

Dr. J. T. Gwathmey, author of a text book on anaesthesia, said bluntly that it is not possible to chloroform a grown person while asleep. Another expert said he could not see how a person could be anaesthetized without realizing the fact and instances a slight woman patient who required four attendants to hold her while being put under the influence of chloroform on the operating table.

Tales of wholesale chloroforming, either by saturated cloths or atomizers, may therefore, in view of this testimony, be relegated to the realm of the imaginary.

His Comparison

"When you eat be careful to leave off hungry," is advice that is very often given to children at the dinner table, but seldom received in an obedient spirit.

The caution was repeated not long since to a youngster of vigorous appetite.

"Pshaw!" he said. "You might as well tell me to wash my face and be careful to leave off dirty."

A Feminine Failing

"Sometimes my little girl says she is eight; at other times she says she is six. I don't understand it; there must be something wrong with her."

"I wouldn't worry. I know plenty of older females who can do no better."—Kansas City Journal.

Disappointed

She—I'm disappointed in Jack; he's tried to put his arm around my waist. He—and he couldn't get it round!—Baltimore Sun.

THOUGHTLESS FRIENDS.

They Mean Well Enough, but They Will Do Such Queer Things.

"Most of the annoyances of life are caused by friends," writes James Montgomery Flagg in the American Magazine. "It doesn't annoy you when your enemy tries to get you in bad. You don't expect anything else from him. It's his regular business. You'd feel that he was a pretty measly sort of enemy if he didn't try to puncture one of your tires! Then you can think and speak about him as a leprous horned toad. But you can't think or speak about a friend that way when he gets under your skin. He's your friend! That's all there is to it—he did it, and he's a feeble minded ant eater, but he's still your friend!"

"Only a dear friend would greet you when you're feeling peculiarly gay and fit with 'Sa-a-y! What's the trouble? You look positively green, old horse! Don't you feel well? You ought to take a long rest, that's right; I don't like that hollow eyed look of yours, perhaps it's your heart.'"

"Or come up behind you when you are looking calmly at some old prints in a window on the avenue and forgetting there are such things in the world as idiotic friends, and let his enormous flat nine pound hand down on you between your shoulders so that you think for the moment that a prehistoric mule with hoofs on him the size of the rubbish receptacles on the corners has planted them in the interior of your lungs! Only a friend could inspire such diabolical and streaming hatred that rises up in the wreck of your breast, when you manage to turn and see what hit you!"

"Or if you happen to ask certain friends to go motoring several times and have them to dinner quite often, and you let two or three Sundays go by without asking them, it is only dear friends who would, on meeting you next time, greet you with a Hudson Bay expression and a bucket of sarcasm."

"Or, speaking of the sex that is responsible for all the poets, who but a true and tried friend would put over to her friend, 'Oh, Camilla, you were such a pretty girl as a young girl, and you did have the loveliest clothes!'"

Abram—man—

It was at one time the practice to allow the inmates of the Abraham ward of Bethlehem hospital, London, to go about begging for the benefit of the hospital. Certain vagrants imposed on the charitably inclined by pretending to be actual inmates and were therefore known as 'Abram-men'; hence the term 'Abram-man', one who obtains money by shamming sickness.—London Express.

Donations Asked For The Blind

You know, of course, all about the splendid work that is done for the blind children of Maryland through its school; you know something of the work that is done for adult blind persons in the Maryland Workshop for the Blind.

But have you heard how the adult blind who may be reached only in their own homes fare in this State of ours? Did you know that week after week in Baltimore and the surrounding counties blind persons who have been useless driftwood in the course of the workaday world are being sought out and taught to take their places in the onward march of industry? And that, even at this moment, a survey is being carried on through the Eastern Shore to discover the adult blind who hitherto, in that part of the State, have been left to stumble along as best they might in useless dependence?

The Maryland Association of Workers for the Blind stands for the improvement of the condition of the blind of this State along all lines. To accomplish this, it is necessary:

(1st) To thoroughly investigate every case of serious eye trouble.

(2nd) To take steps to alleviate the condition of those found to be wholly or partially blind.

It is the purpose of the Association to continue recent investigations throughout the city and State. In order to do so it will require an additional outlay of money. The only revenue available is from the annual dues of the members (one dollar a year each) which is insufficient to carry on the work. Donations of any size are earnestly solicited, and may be sent to the treasurer, Geo. W. Conner, 501 W. Fayette street, Baltimore, Md.

Government Issues 1914 Crop Report

The crop reporting board of the Federal Department of Agriculture has just made public its estimate of the 1914 farm crops of the United States. Fourteen crops, covering 800,782,000 acres or 92 per cent of the nation's cultivated area included in the report and the combined farm value of all products is estimated at $4,946,000,000.

Although the 1914 production of crops is 10 per cent greater than the previous year the aggregate farm value is $20,000,000 less.

Both the wheat and the cotton crops of the nation in 1914 were the largest on record. The cotton crop was nearly 16,000,000 bales and the wheat production was approximately 891,000,000 bushels. While the 1914 cotton crop was approximately 1,800,000 more than the one of 1913 the value was $306,000,000 less. Cotton in 1913 averaged $22.20 per acre against $14.14 in 1914. The yield per acre in 1914 was 25 pounds more than in 1913 but the price per pound in 1914 was 6.8 cents and 12.2 cents in 1913.

Dr. Jones Commended

At the Fourth Quarterly Conference of Fairmount charge, on March 4th, the following resolutions of appreciation of the services of the Rev. Geo. P. Jones were passed:

Whereas, The term of our District Superintendent, the Rev. Geo. P. Jones, D. D., expires with the close of the coming session of the Wilmington Conference;

Whereas, This is the last Quarterly Conference of Fairmount charge over which he will preside;

Whereas, Dr. Jones has proven himself an official, brotherly and companionable; an administrator, wise and judicious; a preacher scholarly and spiritual, "rightly dividing the word of truth," a servant of the church, industrious and faithful; a follower of Christ, zealous and consecrated; therefore, be it resolved, That we express our highest appreciation of the services of Dr. Jones, and heartily commend him and his work to the favorable consideration of Bishop Cooke. We do not ask for a better superintendent, we only hope for as good a one.

Resolved, That this resolution be recorded in our minutes, and a copy presented to Dr. Jones.

Paint Now

If you ought to have painted last year and waited, how much do you think you made?

You'll buy an extra gallon this year. There's $5 or $6 for paint and labor. You think you won't, but you will; you can't stretch paint.

It is always so; the longer you wait, the more paint and wages. Besides what paint is for. What is it for?

STRATEGY IN WAR

Retreats to Lure the Enemy From His Base of Supplies.

KNOWN AS FABIAN TACTICS.

Methods That Have Been Used by Warriors Since Long Before the Christian Era—George Washington
Was Called the American Fabius.

After the great war in Europe had broken loose in the summer of 1914 and the allies fell back from their first line in northern France to the Marne a good deal was said and written of "Fabian tactics," and when the Germans fell back from the line of the Marne to the Aisne more was said of "Fabian tactics." In this country when Washington and the heroic Continental army fell back before the English in superior force and of superior equipment and perhaps superior discipline, his tactics were called "Fabian." In fact General George Washington was called and by historical writers is still referred to as "the American Fabius."

It is probably true that many Americans long parted from their school books have forgotten about Fabius, even though whenever an army makes an orderly retreat for the purpose of gaining time or reaching a more favorable position they speak fluently of "Fabian tactics." It is a phrase that comes trippingly off the tongue. Fabius, as might easily be guessed from his name, was a Roman. He commanded the legions of Rome against the powers of Carthage 200 years before the Christian era. The tactics which came to be called after Fabius were no doubt employed centuries before Rome was born. Fabian tactics without doubt have been used ever since bodies of men made war, but it may be that Fabius so refined or systematized those tactics that it is just and worthy they bear his name. Fabius in 217 B. C. stood opposite to the hosts or hordes of Carthaginians under the brilliant leadership of Hannibal. In battle before Fabius Maximus was called to the supreme command of the Roman troops in the field the Carthaginians had been victorious. Fabius, protesting by what had befallen his predecessors in command, avoided a pitched battle in the open and retreated, fighting as he fell back, holding off the enemy with what are now described as rear guard actions. Drawing the enemy farther and farther from base or the sources of supplies, wearing his troops more than he wearied his own and delaying a battle until he reached ground where his position would give him a great advantage—a position against superior numbers—where the loss in men and morale of the assailants must be great and where at the proper moment the counterstroke could be delivered with high promise of success, the tactics of Fabius won.

In some ways the phrase "Fabian tactics" has been diverted from its original and proper significance and is made to comprehend any tactics of a particularly shrewd or "fox" nature. In this connection it has been said that Napoleon employed "Fabian tactics" with brilliant success at Austerlitz. The combined Austrian and Russian armies greatly extended their line in an effort to turn the right flank of the French army and cut his communications. It seemed as though this move would succeed, for Napoleon permitted it to develop without serious resistance. Then he suddenly concentrated his whole strength at the center, with the exception of a portion of Bernadotte's corps, which he left to deal with the Austrian turning force, and burst through the line, destroying one wing of the Austrian army as it retreated.

Historians of Rome deal at considerable length with a family called the Fabii. It is narrated that this ancient and renowned family undertook the duty of defending Roman territory against incursions by the Volturnians and for this purpose established themselves at a place on the Cremera river. The Fabii were drawn into ambush and were all killed. The date of that event is given as B. C. 477.

A boy of the family Fabii had been left in Rome, and he became the second founder of the family. Fabius Maximus, who won his laurels and his spurs in the second Punic war, was descended from that boy, and there was another famous member of the family whose name was Fabius Pictor, who wrote a history of Rome and who is often referred to as the earliest Roman historian.—Washington Star.

In a Quinary.
"It—er—seems," said he, regarding the unfortunate with scientific interest, "that the attacks of fever and chills appear on alternate days. Do you think—is it your opinion—that they have, so to speak, decreased in violence, if I may use that word?"
The patient smiled feebly. "Doc," said he, "on fever days my head's so hot I can't think, and on ague days I shake so I can't hold an opinion."—New York Globe.

Holland's Waterplant.
Holland has a department of state, with a cabinet minister at the head of it for her "waterplant," an untranslatable word, which means practically the state of all waters from the field drain in the polders to the Rhine at winter level. They are all linked up in one scheme in an office at The Hague.—London Express.

Good deeds ring clear through heaven like a bell—Jean Paul Richter.

Have you Catarrh?

Is nasal breathing impaired? Does your throat get husky or clogged?

Modern science proves that these symptoms result from run-down health. Snuffs and vapors are irritating and useless. The oil-food in Scott's Emulsion will enrich and enliven the blood, aid nutrition and assist nature to check the inflammation and heal the sensitive membranes.

Shun Alcoholic mixtures and insist upon SCOTT'S.

Elephant's Ears.
The African elephant is equipped with enormous ears, while his brother in India has only small ears. Both animals have small, inadequate eyes and are forced to trust to scent rather than vision in the battle of existence. The Indian elephant lives in the jungle, where odors are pungent and easily discernible, but the African elephant is a native of the plains, where the air is dry and hot and barely circulates. The heat dries the moisture out of the tiny hairs in the nostrils which connect with the sensory nerves, and it is only through flapping his enormous ears that he can create the currents of air which enable him to discern any odor at all.
Travelers are prone to ascribe the flapping of an elephant's ears to fury, but this is a mistaken notion.—Philadelphia Ledger.

ARCHIMEDES AND HIS LEVER.

The Feat of Raising the Earth From a Scientific Viewpoint.

"Give me a fulcrum and a place on which to stand and I will raise the earth from its place." That is a saying popularly attributed to Archimedes. If the required conditions were possible, the feat might be performed, but in addition to providing a fulcrum and a place on which to stand Archimedes would also have to be furnished an indefinite lease of life.

To raise the earth a height of one inch by the force which Archimedes would have been capable of exerting would take not only an extremely long lever, but an extremely long time, as can be readily shown.

We shall assume the following data in our calculation: That the earth is a sphere 7,926 miles in diameter and that 5.5 is its mean density; also that the lever has no weight. Should we design a real lever it would be of such enormous size and weight that Archimedes' weight would be a negligible quantity.

If the earth is 7,926 miles in diameter, the volume is about 261,000,000,000 cubic miles, or 38,400,000,000,000,000 cubic feet, and if the density is 5.5 the weight per cubic foot would be about 344 pounds, which multiplied by the volume would give as the weight of the earth 13,208,600,000,000,000,000,000 pounds. We shall assume, further, that Archimedes weighed 150 pounds and that "the place on which to stand" was some distant star; then, if the fulcrum is one mile from the point of application of the lever to the earth, the length of the power arm of the lever, or the distance of Archimedes' "standing place," would have to be 88,064,000,000,000,000,000,000 miles.

To move the earth a distance of one inch, Archimedes' end of the lever would have to move through a distance of 1,388,000,000,000,000,000,000 feet. Now, if Archimedes should take hold of the end of the lever and apply his weight of 150 pounds to it and should move off into space with the velocity of light, or 186,000 miles a second, it would take him 237,000 years to finish the job he proposed, so that now, nearly 2,300 years after making the famous dictum, he would barely have started the undertaking.—C. O. Sandstrom in Scientific American.

Unnecessary Alarm.
When Frederick the Great, at the beginning of the Seven Years' war, was in possession of Dresden he went to view the works of art in the royal picture gallery. The gallery director, Reidel, took the king through all the rooms and explained each picture as they went along. Frederick expressed his unreserved admiration for all the pictures, but when he came before a certain painting by Correggio he stopped, viewing it with particular interest. "If you are willing," he said suddenly, "I should like to have that picture."

Reidel gasped, for he expected the king to say that he wished the picture for himself. But the king noticed his anxiety and, striking him on the shoulder, said, laughing: "If you are willing I should like to have that picture copied!"—Youth's Companion.

Bore and Caliber.
The bore of a shotgun is determined by the circumference of any one of a given number of lead balls of equal weight, the total weight of which is one pound. For instance, the circumference of the barrel of a ten bore shotgun is equal to the circumference of any one of ten lead balls of equal weight, the total weight of which is one pound.

The caliber of a rifle is the diameter of the bore of its barrel measured in hundredths of an inch. The diameter of the bore of a .32 caliber rifle is thirty-two hundredths of an inch.—Philadelphia Press.

Financial Strabismus.
"I'm afraid our new treasurer will ruin this concern," remarked the head of the trust.

"What is he doing?"
"Why, he talks of paying our debts instead of refunding them."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Wedding.
"This poor girl was simply sold to a rich husband."
"Oh, you're mistaken, I was there and saw her father give her away."—Baltimore American.

Guns' Patron Saint.
Why was St. Barbara chosen to be the patron saint of all gunners? It is one of those things which are to be known and which one ought to know, but does not. Meanwhile there is the fact that she does intercede for all gunners by land or sea.

In the old French navy the Ste. Barbe was the gun room, and the name may be found with that meaning attached to it in all dictionaries. Moreover, in France she is the saint not only of gunners, but of all fire brigades. The sappers pompiers hold their holiday on the day of her feast.—Westminster Gazette.

A Musical Tyrant.
Gluck as a conductor is said to have been an unmerciful tyrant. Frequently the musicians would have to repeat a passage twenty times before he was satisfied. The members of the Vienna court orchestra complained of this hard usage to the emperor, Joseph II, who appeased them by agreeing to give them 2 ducats instead of 1 ducat for every performance at which Gluck should conduct.

A Prophetic Writer.
In practical science the most marvelously prophetic writer was the Marquis of Worcester, who in his "Century of Inventions," published in 1633, described the steam engine, the telegraph, the torpedo, the range finder, the hydraulic press, portable military pontoons, matches and many other things which have come into use within the last hundred years.—St. James' Gazette.

Boligiano's "Greater Baltimore" Tomato

Just Doubles The Yield

Better Than Stone Ever Was

Boligiano's "Greater Baltimore" Tomato just doubles the yield of many of the best Canning Tomatoes you have ever grown. Smooth, well-formed and deep from stem to blossom. Ripens evenly to the skin and is entirely free from cracks and blight. Unrivaled shipper, due to its solidity and firmness. Fruits in large clusters at every second joint. Juicy, firm and sturdy. Vigorous, compact, healthy vines. Brilliant red color, one of the handsomest tomatoes you have ever seen.

THE NEW STANDARD

"It is largely the EARLINESS and UNIFORMITY with which the plants bear a LARGE NUMBER of LARGE, SMOOTH FRUIT throughout the ripening season, that makes Boligiano's 'Greater Baltimore' superior to Stone which has been the standard variety for many years."

During our Picking Season from July 25th to October 1st, Boligiano's 'Greater Baltimore' yielded nearly 22 Tons Per Acre.

Force of Drops of Water.
It seems almost incredible that so small a thing as a drop of rain should injure the propeller of an aeroplane, but such is the case. At so great a speed does the propeller revolve—1,200 revolutions a minute as a matter of fact—that a rain drop hits it with such enormous force as to chip a piece of the wood away. Some idea of the hardships entailed by flying through the rain at sixty miles an hour may be gathered from the fact that an aviator who recently went through such an experience, alighted with the edge of his propeller fretted as though it had been gnawed by rats. The rain drops had chipped pieces out of the blades and also bruised the aviator's face, owing to the force with which they hit against his flesh.—London Spectator.

Antiquity of "A Regular Shindy."
The antiquity of many familiar terms is surprising when it is known. Many people are not aware that "What the dickens?" occurs in Shakespeare, but that the phrase "a regular shindy" is found in an author's note to a poem called "The Popish Kingdom," published in 1570. A writer quotes this note, which refers to the celebration of Maundy Thursday. "Midnight services are held in church, the lights are put out, and a regular shindy follows, men being beaten and wounded."—London Globe.

Care Required.

"No," said the weary writer, "but it takes eight pages to tell her I can't."—New York Times.

Tight.

"I should say he is. Why, man, he won't even give up any of his bad habits."—Detroit Free Press.

"It was I who passed the plate around."—Judge.

An Ingenious Courtship

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

Mrs. Martindale, realizing the dangers which beset young persons who step into matrimonial traps, desired that her daughter should be settled matrimonially while her mother lived and that she should marry a good man. Edward Sawyer was the person on whom Mrs. Martindale had fixed her intentions for her daughter. One day she said to him:

"Edward, I have noticed that you seem pleased with Gwen. I wish to see her settled before I leave her. If you wish to marry her I will help you to win her. If not, I shall try to make a match for her elsewhere."

"You have not been deceived in my partiality for Gwen, Mrs. Martindale, but I don't see that Gwen has any special partiality for me."

"Gwen is romantic and needs to be won by romance. That is why I fear for her. Some worthless fellow is liable to appeal to her in that way and marry her. I value that which is practical in you and wish that you might sink it temporarily, be a bit sentimental, catch Gwen and marry her. After marriage I am sure your good sense and wisdom will hold her."

Mr. Sawyer sat evidently turning something over in his mind, then assured Mrs. Martindale that, although he would be glad to win her daughter, he feared that he was too matter of fact to please her.

One day Gwen received a note which put her in a flutter. The writer declared that he had known her for some time; that he had loved her from the moment he first saw her; that he had forborne to give her the slightest liking of his affection because he had not observed any predisposition on her part for him. He was a believer in love from the beginning. He knew the woman he wanted the moment he met her and felt sure that if she wanted him she would know him. While he would not make himself known, he could not refrain from telling her that he loved her.

In a few weeks came a second letter. In it her correspondent said that he was impelled to write to her, though he had no information of himself to communicate. He had met her once since he had written the first letter, but had observed nothing in her greeting to give him any reason to think that she had chosen him as he had chosen her. Nevertheless he had a faint hope that there might be some subtle medium of transference which would enable his love to kindle its like in her.

SITE OF PEACH ORCHARDS.

How Locations Should Be Selected With a View to the Surroundings. [Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

It may relate to transportation facilities, markets, climatic conditions and the geographical position of the district or region in which an orchard is placed or, in other words, its local geography. The site has to do with the particular piece of land occupied by the trees. It relates to the soil, slope, atmospheric drainage and other natural factors which affect the suitability of a given area of land for peach growing.

It should be obvious that a location so far as its position in a state or region is concerned may have every natural advantage as to climate, soil and other local conditions for the successful growing of peaches, and yet because of its remoteness from a shipping station, distance from suitable markets or even the impracticability of supplying ice for refrigerator cars it may be impossible to grow peaches there and market them profitably. Moreover, a location may have all of these advantages to a satisfactory degree and yet not be a desirable one for commercial peach growing because the markets within its logical radius for distribution are already abundantly supplied with peaches from districts which in some important respects are more advantageously placed.

It is the current opinion that the peach should be planted on sandy or some of the lighter types of soil. While it is true that excellent results may follow the planting of orchards on such soils, it is equally true that peaches do well on a wide range of soil types, including even some of the moderately heavy clay loams and clays. But, whatever the type, a soil must be thoroughly well drained to be suitable for peaches. They will not succeed on poorly drained soils. It follows that the heavy clay types which are so hard and impervious that water does not percolate through them readily are to be avoided as a rule. Moreover, a soil should be moderately fertile. One very rich in nitrogen is not to be desired as a general rule since it is likely to induce an excessive growth of foliage. On the other hand, the impression which is somewhat common that a poor, unfertile soil is "good enough for peaches" is erroneous.

In districts in which alkali soils occur sites should be selected with a view to avoiding them. While the peach tree can be grown where there is a limited amount of the alkali salts they cause disaster if present in large quantities. It is safer, therefore, to avoid them as far as possible.

As a general proposition a site that is elevated considerably above the surrounding areas is to be preferred for an apple orchard. Relative elevation is generally of greater importance than actual elevation above sea level.

It is a well recognized fact, though one too often overlooked in selecting sites for orchards, that cold air settles to the lower levels. For this reason it is often colder at the lower elevations than it is at higher points in the same locality. This is what is meant by "atmospheric drainage." The occurrence of frost in low places when there is none in elevated areas is thus explained. For the same reason peach buds are often winter killed or the blossoms are injured by frost in the spring in low places when nearby orchards on higher elevations are injured much less or even escape entirely.

Where an orchard occupies a site that is adjacent to a large body of water the importance of a relatively high elevation largely, perhaps entirely, disappears. To be a factor in the matter, however, a body of water must be of sufficient size and depth to have an appreciable influence on the local climate. Because the water warms up in the spring more slowly than the atmosphere it acts in effect as a refrigerator, making the temperature in its immediate vicinity colder than it is at points somewhat distant from it. For this reason vegetation within the zone of this influence advances more slowly in the spring than it does outside of that zone. The tendency, frequently very marked, is for the blossoming of peach trees situated within the zone to be delayed until after the season of spring frosts.

GROWTH OF THE WAR DEBTS

How They Have Piled Up In The Last Few Months

That the war has added more than $10,000,000,000 to the debts of the five principal belligerents up to the end of February is the estimate of the London Economist. Of this total, $2,500,000,000 each is allowed Russia and Germany, $1,800,000,000 each to France and Austria-Hungary and $1,500,000,000 to Great Britain. In the case of Great Britain this means an increase of nearly 50 per cent. over the total of roughly $3,300,000,000 outstanding at the outbreak of the war. The percentage increase for France is less, for that nation was in July last already carrying a debt of more than $6,500,000,000. For Russia the increase is about 57 per cent. Germany shows the sensational rise of 215 per cent., but this comparison hardly fair for the national debt of Germany—which last July stood at $1,200,000,000—is of comparatively recent origin and should be considered in the light of the heavy indebtedness of some of the German States. Austria-Hungary's debt, which was $2,400,000,000 at the outbreak of the war, is now placed at $4,200,000,000. These figures do not include loss of revenue, which is estimated at $250,000,000 for each of the belligerents except Great Britain.

Basing computations on recent estimates of Mr. Lloyd-George and assuming a continuance of war for 10 months more, the Economist places the debts of these five powers December 31, 1915, roughly as follows: Great Britain, $7,800,000,000; France, $11,000,000,000; Russia, $9,600,000,000; Germany, $7,500,000,000; and Austria-Hungary, $6,600,000,000. Here, then, is a total of $42,500,000,000, as against a total last July of $17,500,000,000, an increase in 17 months of $25,000,000,000, or almost 150 per cent.—Boston Transcript.

Figures That Don't Lie

Publication of the unfilled tonnage statistics of the United States Steel Corporation, showing an increase of over 500,000 tons in December, has also brought out the interesting fact that the low point in the business of this great company was in the closing months of 1910, when the orders on its books dropped to only 2,674,757 tons or nearly 1,200,000 tons less than they were on December 31, 1914. In 1910, a Republican, William Howard Taft, occupied the White House, and a Republican Congress, disregarding its pledges to the people, but had a few months before pushed the tariff upward. Still the steel trade languished and from unfilled orders of nearly 6,000,000 tons on December 31, 1909, the business fell off in a year nearly 2,300,000 tons. During the Roosevelt regime the unfilled orders dropped from 8,469,719 tons on December 31, 1906, to 3,642,636 tons on March 31, 1909, shortly after the Colonel had made his exit from the Presidency.

What could demonstrate more clearly than such figures the absurdity of the Republican claim that the prosperity of the iron and steel trade is dependent upon high tariffs and Republican rule? Under these two Republican administrations the business of the United States Steel Corporation was subjected to great vicissitudes, along with the general trade of the country, and fell to the lowest point in its history. Under a Democratic administration it is now enjoying a steady revival, and 1915 promises to be a year of much activity for it. The simple truth is, of course, that this great industry is amply able to stand upon its own feet and goes up and down with general business. When Republicans claim that it is exceptionally prosperous under their tutelage the official statistics give the lie to their assertion.

Education

Education is the whole effect of environment. The individual is in some way affected by everything with which he comes in contact, from the first moment of life until the end. Teaching is therefore a factor in evolution. It is a means of carrying on the development of the individual. Man is as yet incomplete; it is likely that all his best exercises still lie before him. He must be ready for what is to come.

Something the Public Misses

"They were picked up in the open sea," says the Times, "just after their vessel, the schooner Marjorie Brown, which had sprung a leak, was about to sink." That's the trouble with an un-illustrated paper. The public is deprived of seeing a picture of a vessel just after it is about to sink.—New York Mail.

Madam, if your husband is like most men he expects you to look after the health of yourself and children. Coughs and colds are the most common of the minor ailments and are most likely to lead to serious diseases. A child is much more likely to contract diphtheria or scarlet fever when it has a cold. If you will inquire into the merits of the various remedies that are recommended for coughs and colds, you will find that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy stands high in the estimation of people who use it. It is prompt and effective, pleasant and safe to take, which are qualities especially to be desired when a medicine is intended for children. For sale by all dealers.

Times Here To Swat Fly

Now is the time to kill off the flier. Don't wait until summer, for then it will be impossible to exterminate the pests. It is the left-overs that keep alive the spark of insect life. Every warm room holds out an inducement to his flyship to spend the cold winter days where he can enjoy an artificial summer without molestation.

Too frequently the fly has the freedom of the city, and country, too, throughout the cold months. The "swatter" seems to be resting on his laurels, and "Why not?" he says to himself. Has he not slain his thousands? He even pities the few remaining relics of the summer as they fit drowsily about at meal time in the hope of sharing a drop of milk and then winging their pestiferous mouths and feet on a tempting slice of bread and butter.

The deadly microbe is on the fly, and can be seen wiggling about when placed under the object-glass of a high-power microscope. Interesting little things they are, too, as they wiggle and kick and devour one another and wage war just as if they were enlightened Christians. They live in colonies, and have race prejudice, and go forth in battle in great numbers, and sometimes they fight against those immense giants known as men and kill them.

The fly distributes these little microbes more regularly than newsboys distribute papers. Therefore, kill the fly when it is few in numbers, for if you destroy the seed there will be no crop. If this warning could be heeded throughout the country, at least one hundred lives would be saved in a year, and surely they are worth saving.

Probably the best weapon for attacking the fly is the wire handle "swatter" with a piece of wire gauze on the end, an instrument which resembles a toasting fork as much as anything else. This weapon is very effective, as it can be moved very rapidly by merely twisting the wrist, and as it causes very little air movement, owing to the open work construction, the fly is not frightened until too late for escape.

Thaw Again In Court

For the third time Harry Thaw is on trial in the courtroom that has witnessed the two prior epochal trials in the great case in which the brain-storm theory of irresponsibility featured for the first time in criminal jurisprudence. The stage is set for the contest and whether this shall be a trial upon the charge of conspiracy to make his escape from Mattewan or whether it shall at once or presently be turned into a lunacy proceeding, the fact remains that the Thaw case is passing through a distinct stage of its multiplex evolution. It may be, and the public will fervently hope it will prove to be, the final stage.

The striking feature is the absence of William Travers Jerome, the friend of the man murdered by Thaw. He has followed doggedly the prosecution of Thaw, always with the man held in the leash of his remorseless hand.

It is no wonder that Thaw and his friends believe this elimination of Jerome to be a good omen. The case has thinned out to such technicalities that it does not appear to the average person that any further determination of the fate of Thaw would be in the interest of justice; but however his destiny may now swerve it will be wholly due to the satisfaction of one or another legal insistence, without justice itself being prominent.—Baltimore American.

Back Stamping Needed

During the present national administration, the Postoffice Department "in the interest of economy" ordered the omission of the back stamping of letters, that is, the recording, on the back of each letter, of the time of arrival at the office of destination. This order, of course, did away with a considerable amount of labor.

But this change has been noticeably attended by a large increase in delay in the mail transportation and delivery service. Especially serious are the complaints of poor service in the Philadelphia postoffice. The complaints, however, can not comprehensively reveal the extent of the slowness in delivery, as many persons, owing to the absence of the back stamp showing the hour of arrival, are not aware there has been delay.

The back stamping was a check on delay and other inefficiency, as it served as a "tell tale." When a man received a letter long after the time of arrival indicated on its back, he was apt to make complaint at once. It would be well to order a return to back stamping, in the interest of a more effective mail service.—Wilmington Every Evening.

THRIFT IS FOSTERED

The plan as endorsed by leading banks throughout the country has become popular because of two-fold reasons. The Clubs were originally organized to provide an easy method of accumulating money during the year for Christmas needs. This original idea has resulted in a general thrift movement and has been the means of promoting and teaching the public the benefit of systematic saving of small sums of money.

The Christmas Savings Club provides the easiest possible method for the beginning of saving and for continued systematic saving.

THE CHRISTMAS SAVINGS CLUB OF THE BANK OF SOMERSET

is for every man, woman and child in Somerset County, no matter what is his or her income. It is not beyond the reach of anyone. Save in amounts according to your means.

But it is highly important to start at the beginning of the Club.

TO SPREAD OIL ON STATE ROADS

Over A Million Of Gallons Will Be Required For The Work

The Public Service Commission is preparing to spread crude oil on State improved roads. The total mileage to be covered is 475. For this work it is estimated that 1,278,300 gallons of oil will be required. Contracts for hauling stone chips to be used in the oiling process already have been awarded and the work is now under way. In this connection the commission last Wednesday morning gave out the following statement:

We are now busily engaged in hauling out stone chips in the various counties of the State for oiling purposes. This work was advertised to be done by contract for the first time this year, and we know of no other State having pursued this method for doing this work before. On January 25th bids were opened for the hauling out of stone chips in the nine counties on the Eastern Shore and in Montgomery, Howard and Carroll counties on the Western Shore, amounting to approximately 12,000 tons. We received a total of 114 bids for this work from 44 separate contractors. A contract for the nine counties on the Eastern Shore and for Carroll and Howard counties on the Western Shore was awarded to the Clark-Hayward Company, they being the lowest bidder.

Capt. E. H. Ford Dead

Capt. Edwin Henry Ford, 62 years old, member of the well-known East Baltimore firm of Webster, Ford & Co., oyster commission merchants, died early Wednesday morning at his home, 2206 East Pratt Street, Baltimore, from a complication of diseases.

For more than 30 years Captain Ford was a member of the firm of Webster, Ford & Co., which concern he founded in Baltimore and established headquarters at 2301 Boston street, with T. B. and E. V. Webster. He became ill about a year ago and was forced to go to his home. After he had been confined to the house for several months an operation was performed. Following the operation Captain Ford apparently regained his strength and returned to his business. About four months ago, however, he again became ill and was compelled to leave the management of the firm's affairs in the hands of his partners.

Capt. Ford was a native of Dames Quarter, Somerset county.

Sister Found After 20 Years

Rudolph and William Klatt, of Princess Anne, recently visited a sister in Baltimore city whom they had not seen for nearly 20 years. She is Miss Ella Klatt, who lives with Mrs. Tina Nemeyer at 411 South Bentalou street and had been separated from her brothers since she was 8 years old.

Their parents died and they were adopted by different families and lost track of each other until a few weeks ago, when the boys learned the address of an aunt, Mrs. Augusta Soienens. She it was who had adopted Miss Klatt, but the boys did not know this.

Mrs. Soienens died two years ago and since then Miss Klatt has been living with Mrs. Nemeyer. When the letter addressed to her dead aunt arrived she opened it and so learned the whereabouts of her brothers. She immediately wrote them and the letter resulted in the reunion of the family.

School Funds Distributed

Comptroller Emerson C. Harrington announced on Monday last week a quarterly distribution of funds for education throughout the State. The total amount distributed is $369,525, made up of three funds: Public school tax, $300,000; free book fund, $37,000, and amounts for approved high schools, $32,525.

Somerset apportionment is as follows: Public school tax, $6,959.95; school book fund, $866.88; approved high schools, $325.00.

Rev. W. W. Johnson Resigns

Blaze At Ocean City

A two-story frame dwelling, belonging to James W. Lynch, situated on Baltimore avenue, Ocean City, Md., was destroyed by fire about 2 o'clock Tuesday morning. The Ocean City volunteer fire department did good work in saving adjoining property. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

The next best thing to making light of your trouble is to keep it dark.

GOOD CRAB SEASON PREDICTED

This Industry Has Grown To Large Proportions On Eastern Shore

There will be plenty of crabs in the waters of the Chesapeake Bay this year, according to some of the dredgers on the Eastern Shore. The season will open about the first of next month and already preparations are being made to care for the crab industry, which has assumed large proportions on the Eastern Shore within the last few years.

Large shipments of soft and hard crabs are made to Philadelphia and New York from the Eastern Shore every day and the crabs from Maryland have found a ready market.

Several of the crab concerns on the Eastern Shore have extensive plants for the picking of the crabs, and the meat is sold in one, two and five pound cans in distant parts of the country.

Hundreds of small sailing vessels, with their sails spread to the wind, can be seen at daybreak wending their way in and out of the rivers and creeks every morning when the crab season is at its height. Tangier Sound and Holland Straits are two of the best crabbing fields in the Bay and afford a livelihood to hundreds of persons in that vicinity.

A little vessel arrives at one of the crab concerns and is met by a man who knows all the earmarks of a crab and just the state of growth of each crab. Each crab, according to its age and growth, is put in a floating lattice box. Day by day the crabs are watched, are graded until they reach the soft crab stage, when they are taken up and prepared for shipment.

The crab-picking department is equipped with several very large steam tanks which are buried in the ground. Each tank has four compartments in which the crabs are placed. After the crabs are thoroughly steamed they are taken out and placed at the trough of the pickers.

After the crab meat is picked it is graded, the larger flakes being called No. 1 grade. The crab meat is then placed in cans and heavily lead. When the cans of meat are prepared and sealed they are boxed.

Swenson Earle Honored

The second day's session of the National Shellfish Convention ended in a reception at St. Charles Hotel, New Orleans, last Thursday night tendered by citizens of New Orleans. The delegates spent several hours on the Mississippi viewing the large terminals and steel piers.

Following President Lee's paper against Federal control of migratory fisheries a resolution declaring in favor of co-operation and conservation of the sea foods of the nation by the Federal Government and the assistance of the Federal Government in carrying on a campaign of education in the States controlling the fisheries of the nation, another resolution changing the name of the association to the National Association of Fisheries Commissioners was passed.

The following officers were elected: M. L. Alexander, Louisiana, president; Swenson Earle, Maryland, vice-president; Frederick L. Perry, Connecticut; secretary; Brayton A. Round, Rhode Island, treasurer, and executive counsel, W. McDonald Lee, Virginia; John Craft, Alabama; J. Hyde Pratt, North Carolina; Dr. George W. Field, Massachusetts; Charles R. Bacon, New Jersey; Charles H. Atkinson, Rhode Island, and B. K. Green, Maryland.

Death Of Rev. T. L. Tomkinson

Rev. T. L. Tomkinson, aged 78 years, died suddenly at his home in Wilmington, Delaware, last Friday afternoon. He seemed to be in his usual health up to the moment when his death occurred. He retired from active ministerial work about five years ago and decided to make Wilmington his home. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Laura Hayman, a sister of Mrs. Rowena Stevenson and Miss Nora Hayman, formerly of Princess Anne, and two sons and a daughter.

Mr. Tomkinson joined the Philadelphia, Pa., Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1860 and when the Wilmington conference was formed he became connected with it.

Later on he became a member of the Central Pennsylvania Conference, serving with distinction in many important churches. His remains were taken to Harrisburg, Pa., for interment.

Potato Planters Take Warning

Truck growers who annually plant a considerable acreage of potatoes are warned by the United States Department of Agriculture that there was, on January 1st, 1915, a very much larger supply of northern-grown potatoes in the hands of growers and dealers than was the case January 1st, 1914. Experience has demonstrated that a large hold-over crop of northern-grown potatoes which is in good condition and selling at reasonable prices when the early truck crop potatoes reach the market means low prices—sometimes so low that the shipment of such crops net a loss to the grower. Under such conditions a small acreage means a smaller loss than a large acreage.

With 43,000,000 more bushels of potatoes in sight January 1st, 1915, than were available at the same time last year and with a 1915 price of 43.2 cents as compared with 66.2 cents a year ago, a price which under the existing conditions did not improve before the truck crop began to move, there is little hope that the conditions will be better this year. The price now is just about 33 per cent less than it was a year ago. The distribution of the crop is much better than last season so there is little likelihood that the price of hold-over stock will reach last year's mark even by the end of the cold storage period.

Odd Fellows Have A Big Day

Thursday and Thursday evening was a big day for the order of Odd Fellows, in Salisbury, and over the Eastern Shore. The Eighteenth District, representing all the lodges on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, held their meeting there, and each lodge brought with it its candidates for membership for initiation. More than 50 candidates made the proverbial goat and the ladies order, "The Helping Hand," took in about fifteen as well. Altogether seven lodges were represented in the meet; the Grand officers of the order from Baltimore were also present.

Draining The Everglades

The State of Florida has contracted with a Baltimore firm for a canal twenty-four miles long, which will cost $1,600,000. The canal will connect Okeechobee, the great lake of southern Florida, with the St. Lucie river. The canal is expected to drain the Everglades, those vast watery plains of southern and central Florida, where our Government once carried on a costly war with the Seminoles. The lake is the largest in the southern states, its surface is 23 feet above sea level.

S. S. PENNSYLVANIA LAUNCHED

Coldest Warship In The World Takes To Water At Newport News

The new battleship Pennsylvania was successfully launched at Newport News, Virginia, last Tuesday morning shortly after 10 o'clock. The largest engine of naval warfare in the world slid down the ways while a prayer was uttered that she might be a messenger of peace rather than a weapon of destruction.

Christened by Miss Elizabeth Kolb, of Germantown, Pa., as Secretary Daniels gave a signal, the monster hull slid into the James river, and the swell tossed the German converted cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich, less than a hundred yards away.

When the new superdreadnaught slipped from the ways into Hampton Roads she took her place in the lead of the names of the world as the mightiest fighting machine afloat.

Size and gun power the Pennsylvania is greater even than the Queen Elizabeth of the British Navy, which is leaving the terrific assault on the Dardanelles. While the British monster carries larger guns, her main battery is only two-thirds the size of that of the Pennsylvania in number and the American battleship is 3000 tons greater in size.

The main battery of the Pennsylvania will consist of twelve 14-inch 45-caliber rifles, set in four turrets, the plan of big-gun arrangement adopted in the sister ships which preceded her, the Nevada and Oklahoma and the Queen Elizabeth. The latter, however, carries only 16-inch rifles, 45-caliber, while the Nevada and Oklahoma have ten 14-inch rifles each. In all these ships, including the Pennsylvania, the turrets are all on the center line to concentrate their fire on either broadside.

From her enormous main battery the Pennsylvania will be able to burst with the pressure of a single firing lever, 7½ tons of steel on either broadside. In addition she will carry a secondary battery of 22 five-inch rifles for defense against torpedo boats. She will be fitted with 100 machine guns.

The ship measures 608 feet over all and 97 feet beam and her mean draft is 28 feet 10 inches, almost the limit in size for the Panama canal and present navy dry docks. When completed the Pennsylvania will have cost the Government more than $13,000,000. She will be ready for commission, under contract, by February 28, 1916. Her keel was laid October 27, 1913.

Smith And Gorman Confer

United States Senator John Walter Smith and former State Senator A. P. Gorman, who, four years ago, was the Democratic candidate for governor, held a lengthy conference Thursday afternoon in the Senator's office in the Union Trust Building, Baltimore. While both gentlemen were loath to talk about the outcome, it was generally understood that their preferences did not coincide. The general tenor of Senator Smith's argument was favorable to the nomination of State Comptroller Emerson C. Harrington, of Dorchester county. While Senator Gorman did not express views partial to any candidate, he took a decided stand against the candidacy of Mr. Harrington. During the interview, which was amicable, Mr. Gorman reminded Senator Smith that the Baltimore Democrats are also opposed to Mr. Harrington, a fact of which Senator Smith has been informed on several occasions by the city leaders, who have heretofore supported the Senator in his contests.

It is generally understood among Democratic leaders in the counties, as well as in Baltimore that Senator Smith is not irrevocably committed to the candidacy of Mr. Harrington.

It is understood that Senator Smith would be willing to support Douglas H. Thomas, Frank A. Furst or some candidate in Baltimore if the Democrats there agree upon one. If the Baltimore Democrats line up solidly behind Congressman Linthicum for governor Senator Smith and his lieutenants in the counties may not make a fight there against him.

Jobless Men And Womanless Jobs

The U. S. Department of Labor has inaugurated a system of labor distribution which it is hoped that the jobless man may be put in touch with the manless job. Blank forms are prepared for all those who are in need of workmen. These may be secured by addressing Commissioner of Immigration, Department of Labor, Washington, D. C. The department will in turn make every effort to put employers thus applying in touch with the kind of labor wanted. Special blanks are prepared for application for farm help.

METHODISTS TO HAVE A NEW CHURCH

Antioch M. E. Church Being Taken Down And New Edifice Erected

Last week workmen began to take down the Antioch Methodist Episcopal Church, corner of Main street and Antioch avenue, Princess Anne, to make room for a new church. Several years ago Mr. Thomas H. Bock offered to give $5,000 provided the church would provide the remaining $5,000. The latter amount having been fully subscribed and nearly all paid, the new church will soon be erected. Drawings from several architects have been examined by the trustees and those of Leon Wilde Crawford, of Wilmington, Del., have been approved and he will draw plans and specifications. The new church will be a model of beauty and a great improvement to that part of the town. The trustees of the church are Thomas H. Bock, Charles W. Long, Wm. H. Dashiell, E. I. Brown, James A. McAllan, A. E. Krause, Dr. C. T. Fisher, George W. Brown and L. L. Pusey. The pastor Rev. D. J. Givan is also ex officio a member.

Antioch Church began in 1832, when a deed was given by John Dennis to John Waters, Levin Ballard, James Phoebeus, Stephen Drura, Richard E. Waters, Daniel Ballard, Lewis Phoebeus, Arnold H. Ballard and William Sudler, as a board of trustees. In 1856 an act was passed by the Legislature incorporating Antioch Church vesting the title conveyed by said deed in the following trustees: John V. Pinto, James Brittingham, Josiah S. Crockett, Alfred Whitney, William H. Fisher, William Hinman, George C. Dixon, William Locates and Seth D. Venables. The act of 1856 was amended in 1876 as to the method of electing trustees.

The old brick structure, which is now being torn down, stood for many years in its plain form, with two entrances in front and a gallery in the rear of the church, until 1875 when the church was remodeled, the gallery removed and a brick tower was erected at the north-east corner. A few years after it became necessary to remove this tower as it was a danger of its falling and tearing out the church walls. In 1885, the church was again remodeled and a Sunday School room was built in front and a recess pulpit was erected in the rear. A bell was also purchased and rang from a southeast belfry which has just been taken down. In 1895 still another change was made, the ceiling being removed, exposed rafters work taking its place. A choir gallery behind the pulpit was also erected and a few years ago a pipe organ was installed. The congregation of Antioch Church has greatly increased until it is again necessary to build an entirely new church, including a Sunday School room in addition to the main auditorium. During the building the congregation will worship in the court room.

Have You Named Your Farm?

The movement to have every American farmer select a name for his farm and use the name as a trade mark, is meeting with great success in some parts of the country. Many of our exchanges have published lists of the names selected for the farms of their neighborhoods, the publication acting as a sort of patent or copyright. It has been said by some unthinking persons that the plan is not American, but a little reflection will convince anyone that the point is not well taken. Washington called his home "Mt. Vernon," Jefferson, the great Democrat, named his place "Monticello" and any schoolboy can give you a dozen other instances.

So name your farm and put the name out where everyone can see it. Make it a trade mark. A well known, advertised trade mark is worth thousands of dollars to the owner. Your farm and its products are your stock in trade. Name them and you have added real cash value to everything you sell. Choose a name well suited to surroundings, a name that will tell in its very sound some of the characteristics of your business home; then come to us and have some letterheads made for correspondence with the name of your farm on them and your name and your wife's name and your postoffice address beneath. Of course you want your wife's name on your stationery. She is your partner and the best and the truest, and the hardest working, and the most interested party in the whole concern. Once you were glad to get the chance to endow her with all your worldly goods, now make your promise real.

The congregation of Antioch M. E. Church held services last Sunday in the Court Room. At the close of the morning service a vote of thanks by a rising vote was tendered to the County Commissioners for the use of the Court House.

ARBOR AND HIGHWAY DAY APRIL 9TH

Free Trees For Planting To Aid In Making It Of Value To The State

Arbor and Highway Day—by proclamation of the Governor Friday, April 9th—has this year a special significance, because it is the first anniversary of the passage of the Roadside Tree Law by the Legislature of 1914. This law places all trees now growing beside the roadways or along the streets of incorporated towns under the supervision of the State. In addition to the care and protection of existing trees, the law provides for the planting of new ones.

The State has spent approximately $15,000,000 in constructing improved roads which compare favorably with any in the country. The next step in their improvement is to beautify them and make them more attractive by the planting of shade trees. What is more attractive than a well-shaded street or roadway, particularly if the trees are uniform in size and kind, giving a distinctive character that cannot be obtained except by systematic effort and the execution of carefully thought out and well executed plans? The State Board of Forestry, which is charged with the administration of the Roadside Tree Law, is prepared to co-operate with towns, associations and individuals in the work of planting trees along the streets and highways.

Suitable trees can be purchased and planted along Maryland's highways at a cost of $1 to $2 each. Trees that grow to a large size should be spaced not less than 50 feet apart, while those that do not reach as great a size should be spaced from 30 to 40 feet apart. In the first case it would take about 200 trees to the mile, and in the second 300 to 350 to the mile. Is there any other investment that would bring a better return in public benefit or would there be a more appropriate way of celebrating Arbor Day? So many people would be directly benefited by the planting of the trees that a small contribution from a large number would easily pay the cost of the work, and give each a financial interest in an investment for the welfare of the community.

In order to assist in this movement and furnish demonstrations of well-shaded highways, the State Board of Forestry will furnish free either Locust or Tulip Poplar trees for a mile of planting in each county in the State, also supplying a competent man to supervise the work under the following conditions: The mile to be planted must be along an improved road outside of the corporate limits of any town, and the abutting property owners must all have given their approval of the planting; the trees will be planted within the right-of-way of the road; where Tulip Poplar is used they shall be not less than 50 feet apart, where Locust is used not less than 30 feet. The applications will be considered in the order in which they are received, but the State Board of Forestry reserves the right to accept the proposition that offers the best opportunity for demonstration in each county.

This offer is open to County Commissioners, associations or individuals that may be interested. With Arbor Day and the planting time at hand, it is important that quick action be taken.

Captured Negro Wanted In Somerset

In the arrest of a negro, who gave his name as John Wood, aged 28 years, by Delaware Detective McCoy on Thursday afternoon in a house near Townsend, Detective McCoy learned that the negro is wanted in Crisfield, on three charges of breaking and entering that many stores in that town and that he is known as the most desperate negro in this part of Maryland. Detective McCoy also learned that Wood is not the negro's right name but that his name is Dudley Brooks.

Brooks, alias Wood, is now at the workhouse at Greenbank, awaiting trial on three or four charges of breaking and entering, alleged to have been committed at Townsend recently. The Delaware authorities will not turn the negro over to the Maryland authorities until he has been punished there.

The last robbery Brooks committed at Crisfield he had a pistol duel with some officers who were after him and according to Sheriff Townsend, Brooks was shot, but was not seriously wounded, so he managed to make his escape. This was the last seen of Brooks, but later the Maryland authorities heard that he was in Philadelphia. They had a search made of a house in that city, where Brooks was supposed to live, but they did not locate him although they found a letter which he had written to a friend who lived there telling about his pistol fight with the Crisfield authorities and as to his being shot.

That was the last the Maryland authorities heard from Brooks until he was arrested at Townsend on Thursday afternoon.

John Blunt's Infatuation

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

John Blunt, gentleman's valet by profession, just now out of a position, was going up to his room on the fourth floor of a tenement house when he noticed a dainty glove on the stair before him. Seeing a figure in skirts ahead of him, he picked up the glove and, hastening on, asked the comely young woman he overtook if the glove belonged to her. She smilingly acknowledged that it did and thanked Mr. Blunt accordingly. Moreover, he noticed or fancied he noticed a look of admiration in the young woman's eyes, which was not surprising, for he was a good looking man.

"I haven't seen you in the building before," said John. "Ave you been 'ere long?"

"Only a few days. Me and my mother 'ave a couple o' rooms on the next floor above, but I'll not be 'ere very long. I'm looking for a place."

"What kind of a place?"

"A lady's maid."

"Mebbe I can 'elp you to that. I'm a 'valley' myself when I'm at work and know a lot o' swell folks."

"If you do, please let me know. I'm in No. 9 on the next floor above."

The very next day Mr. Blunt rapped at No. 9 and was admitted by an elderly woman, who called out "Susan," and in came the young woman he had met the day before. He said he had called to get some information as to what wages she would expect and other items of like nature, but in reality he was desirous of forming Susan's acquaintance.

There are widows among the lowly as well as among the swells, and Mr. Blunt was bent on an affair with the pretty lady's maid. He called often, and his attentions appeared to be highly appreciated. Susan seemed a bit fond of finery and jewelry, and Mr. Blunt considered himself fortunate in being able to gratify her, especially in the matter of jewelry. He made her presents of a few inexpensive ornaments, but they did not seem to satisfy her. John found her very fascinating and in order to gain her good will produced articles of greater value. Finally he found himself so deeply infatuated that he proposed marriage.

To his surprise Susan refused him. Nevertheless from time to time she gave him encouragement to hope that she might reconsider her refusal. She said that she had expensive tastes and was afraid that he would not be able to gratify them. She hinted at a suit, or a plumber, who had made a great deal of money, but she did not love him. Nevertheless she was thinking of marrying him because he could give her what she craved—jewels.

Upon this John shied off for awhile. Susan didn't seem to mind the change in his attentions to her a bit. Indeed, she scarcely noticed him when they met. One day she told him that she was in receipt of handsome presents from the plumber and she expected a proposal.

Soon after she had told John this he came to her one day with a brooch containing several large diamonds, telling her that his last master, a stockbroker, had given him a tip by which he had made a lot of money. He had spent a part of it for his beloved Susan.

Susan's eyes sparkled with pleasure at seeing the ornament. She put it on and admired it and herself in a mirror. "You look fine in it, Susan," said her lover. "I'm so 'appy at my luck in making the money to buy it for you, seeing as 'ow now you needn't 'ave to give yourself to the plumber."

But Susan did not quite accede to the proposition. John begged her to end his suspense and agree to marry him, but she said that the expense of living was rising every day and she was afraid that without a permanent income they would come to grief. She would rather remain single and be a lady's maid than be married and in poverty.

But John did not despair, for her love for jewelry seemed to him to have been born in her, and his old master, the stockbroker, gave him another tip and he made more money. This time he gave Susan a bracelet, a serpent with ruby eyes. Again Susan was delighted and seemed to warm; but, though on the verge of consenting, she did not consent.

One day John called to see his love when she was not at home. Her mother received him and said to him: "I'm doing all I can for you, John, with Susan. Persevere and you'll win. It's the jewels that's doing it."

After this John became reckless in his gifts, and before long Susan possessed jewels enough to decorate a duchess.

One day when John called at No. 9 he elicited no response. He tried the door and found it locked. The same evening he tried it again with a like result. When a couple of days had passed and No. 9 was still locked John made up his mind that something was wrong. He disappeared himself.

Susan had returned to the home of a wealthy woman with whom she lived as her maid. A friend of this lady, also wealthy, had lost valuable jewels and had suspected her son's valet. Averse to publicity, she would have stood her loss without appealing to the police had not Susan, hearing of the case from her mistress, volunteered to make an attempt to wheedle them out of the thief.

John was not troubled, but the jewels were returned to their owner, and Susan was well rewarded.

MEDICINE HAT.

The Indian Chief From Whom the Canadian City Was Named.

Not many persons know what was the origin of the strange name borne by the Canadian city that Mr. Rudyard Kipling once called "the city born lucky."

The word "medicine" means more to an Indian than to us. We think of it as meaning something nasty that is good for us, but the Indian distinguishes as "good medicine" and "bad medicine" anything that he fancies will change his fortunes for better or for worse. Imagine that Lo is hunting antelope and meeting with no success. Presently he finds an empty cartridge shell or the top of a tomato tin, and shortly afterward he gets a shot at his game. Can he doubt that the piece of tin or the shell gave the luck? Not he. He wears that fragment of tomato tin or empty shell about his neck with his other jewelry, and it is "good medicine."

Several years ago there was a Blackfoot chief who lived in the vicinity of Seven Persons River, where now stands the city of Medicine Hat. He and his tribe were fond of hunting and of making war on their enemies, the Crees. This chief always wore a head-dress of feathers that he called his "medicine hat," for he thought that it brought him good fortune.

It was a dark day for the chief when he last met the Crees at the place where now stands the growing city. He and his men fell upon the enemy with great bravery and even put them to ignominious flight. But just then a gust of wind whirled out of the west, caught the magic hat and tossed it into the swift running Saskatchewan river. Instantly the poor chief lost all confidence in himself and his cause, and with victory in his hand he forbore to grasp it, but fled over the plains toward the Rockies, followed by his tribe—Youth's Companion.

Repudiated.

"I am a self made man," said Mr. Cumrox.

"Didn't your wife have something to do with your career?"

"She used to say so. But after seeing how I behaved in society she refused to take any of the blame,"—Washington Star.

Questions and Answers.

"You are thoroughly familiar with public questions, of course?"

"I know 'em all by heart," replied Senator Sorghum. "But I must admit that as time goes by I don't feel quite so certain about some of the answers."—Washington Star.

W. S. DICKINSON & SON
POCOMOKE CITY MARYLAND

John Blunt's Infatuation

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

John Blunt, gentleman's valet by profession, just now out of a position, was going up to his room on the fourth floor of a tenement house when he noticed a dainty glove on the stair before him. Seeing a figure in skirts ahead of him, he picked up the glove and, hastening on, asked the comely young woman he overtook if the glove belonged to her. She smilingly acknowledged that it did and thanked Mr. Blunt accordingly. Moreover, he noticed or fancied he noticed a look of admiration in the young woman's eyes, which was not surprising, for he was a good looking man.

"I haven't seen you in the building before," said John. "Ave you been 'ere long?"

"Only a few days. Me and my mother 'ave a couple o' rooms on the next floor above, but I'll not be 'ere very long. I'm looking for a place."

"What kind of a place?"

"A lady's maid."

"Mebbe I can 'elp you to that. I'm a 'valley' myself when I'm at work and know a lot o' swell folks."

"If you do, please let me know. I'm in No. 9 on the next floor above."

The very next day Mr. Blunt rapped at No. 9 and was admitted by an elderly woman, who called out "Susan!" and in came the young woman he had met the day before. He said he had called to get some information as to what wages she would expect and other items of like nature, but in reality he was desirous of forming Susan's acquaintance.

There are differences among the lowly as well as among the swells, and Mr. Blunt was bent on an affair with the pretty lady's maid. He called often, and his attentions appeared to be highly appreciated. Susan seemed a bit fond of finery and jewelry, and Mr. Blunt considered himself fortunate in being able to gratify her, especially in the matter of jewelry. He made her presents of a few inexpensive ornaments, but they did not seem to satisfy her. John found her very fascinating and in order to gain her good will produced articles of greater value. Finally he found himself so deeply infatuated that he proposed marriage.

To his surprise Susan refused him. Nevertheless from time to time she gave him encouragement to hope that she might reconsider her refusal. She said that she had expensive tastes and was afraid that he would not be able to gratify them. She hinted at a suit, or, a plumber, who had made a great deal of money, but she did not love him. Nevertheless she was thinking of marrying him because he could give her what she craved—jewels.

Upon this John shed off for awhile. Susan didn't seem to mind the change in his attentions to her a bit. Indeed, she scarcely noticed him when they met. One day she told him that she was in receipt of handsome presents from the plumber and she expected a proposal.

Soon after she had told John this he came to her one day with a brooch containing several large diamonds, telling her that his last master, a stockbroker, had given him a tip by which he had made a lot of money. He had spent a part of it for his beloved Susan.

Susan's eyes sparkled with pleasure at seeing the ornament. She put it on and admired it and herself in a mirror.

"You look fine in it, Susan," said her lover. "I'm so 'appy at my luck in making the money to buy it for you, seeing as 'ow now you needn't 'ave to give yourself to the plumber."

But Susan did not quite accede to the proposition. John begged her to end his suspense and agree to marry him, but she said that the expense of living was rising every day and she was afraid that without a permanent income they would come to grief. She would rather remain single and be a lady's maid than be married and in poverty.

But John did not despair, for her love for jewelry seemed to him to have been born in her, and his old master, the stockbroker, gave him another tip and he made more money. This time he gave Susan a bracelet, a serpent with ruby eyes. Again Susan was delighted and seemed to warm; but, though on the verge of consenting, she did not consent.

One day John called to see his love when she was not at home. Her mother received him and said to him: "I'm doing all I can for you, John, with Susan. Persevere and you'll win. It's the jewels that's doing it."

After this John became reckless in his gifts, and before long Susan possessed jewels enough to decorate a duchess.

BREVITY OF ENGLISH.

Its Advantage in This Respect Over French and German.

In an international report, printed in parallel columns in French, German and English, the three versions being exact translations of each other, the English report invariably finished first; sometimes it won by a whole page. As a rule, the French report was the most diffuse.

This brevity of English is partly explained by the fact that English is made up to an extraordinary extent of words of one syllable. Its nouns having (unlike the German) lost all their inflections except the possessive "s," have become mere roots, a very large proportion of them monosyllabic. In the second place English has little of the elaborate and explicit machinery of structure that French has, so it saves space in prepositions and such paraphernalia. Instead, English has what the grammarians call implicit agglu-tination—that is, sticking words together in groups without either prepositions or case endings to connect them.

An example of the former kind of brevity is a word like "earthquake,"
two syllables, compared with the German "erdbeben," three syllables, and the French "tremblement de terre," five syllables. An example of the terseness of English would be a phrase like, "I have been to the house and have now come back;" every word a single syllable. In a telegram this would be just as intelligible in the form
"Been house now back." You cannot carry that sort of thing far in any other European language.—Manchester Guardian.

The Earth's Shadow.
The earth has a shadow, but few ever see it except in eclipses of the moon. Nevertheless, many of us have noticed on fine, cloudless evenings in summer, shortly before sunset, a ray or pink arc on the horizon opposite the sun, with a bluish gray segment under
it. As the sun sinks the arc rises until it attains the zenith and even passes
it. This is the shadow of the earth.

A Wise Selection.
Grubbs—How do you like my new umbrella? Smith—Fine, fine. You seem to have picked up something good.—Richmond Dispatch.

The blood more struts to rouse a man than to start a hare.—Shakespeare.

MARYLANDER AND HERALD

An Eastern Marriage Law

It Is Especially Adapted to Sailors.

By DWIGHT NORWOOD.

Jack Haversham was a sailor boy back in the latter part of the last century. He was a lovable sort of fellow with a pair of mild blue eyes and an engaging smile. Moreover, there was a lot of strength in his muscles, of the value of which he was unconscious.
Such men are attractive to women,
and Jack was especially so.

One fine morning while his ship, the Albatross of New York, was at anchor in the harbor of Tokyo Haversham set out from the shore a member of a liberty party. They all made for a tea house where tea is but a small part of the entertainment. In these houses are young girls who have been educated to dance and sing for the entertainment of those who frequent them.
The sailors spent some time in this manner, finally breaking into small groups of two or three with a view to seeing other sights.

Jack Haversham was finally left alone in the tea house. One of the girls had noticed the stalwart sailor, and the sailor had noticed the girl. Words are not needed to express admiration. Indeed, they are not to be compared for the purpose to looks. While the geisha girl was dancing and singing her liquid eyes were occasionally thrown toward Jack, and, as for Jack's eyes, they never left the geisha girl.

Other persons came and went, but Jack did not move on. However, his remaining where he was so long was not remarked upon. The place was a public one, and the more persons and the longer they stayed the better—that is, so long as they spent money.

Japan is full of marriage brokers,
who make a living by uniting couples.
One of these brokers was in the tea house and noticed Jack's eyes bent ad-miringly on the geisha girl. Thinking there was a chance to make a fee, he approached the sailor. He knew that Jack was either British or American and that he would not understand the Japanese language. But he knew enough of the English tongue to make himself understood. He remarked upon the beauty of the geisha girl, her grace, her melodious voice, then began to extol her many virtues. Jack listened to him, wondering what might be the cause of the man's interest in her and why he praised her to him.
The reason came out when the broker asked Jack if he would like to marry her.

While Jack had no intention of marrying any one, he was not averse to pursuing the subject so far as it pertained to the pretty geisha girl. He asked the broker whether he thought she would like to marry him, to which the broker responded that he did not know, but he would undertake for a consideration to discover whether she would or not.

Jack consented to an introduction to the girl, whose name translated from the Japanese was Apple Blossom. So it was arranged that the sailor, whose leave ended that night at 9 o'clock, should remain in Tokyo, taking what punishment would be meted out to him when he returned to his ship. The introduction to Apple Blossom took place, and Jack's return to his ship was delayed so long that she sailed without him.

Whether it was the persuasive eloquence of the broker or the affection of the young couple, which grew by bounds, a contract of marriage was drawn up by the broker and signed by the sailor and the geisha girl. Then Jack was called upon to make a payment. When he had come ashore he had brought all his wages during a long voyage, expecting to spend them on the liberty party. But his meeting with Apple Blossom had turned him into a different channel from his shipmates, and he had spent very little.
So he produced the money, considering it a marriage portion that would remain in the family. So it did—in the wife's family, for Jack was informed that in the marriage by which he had been tied to Apple Blossom a fund was required by the groom, which was paid to the parents of the bride.

This was unwelcome news to Jack,
who so far as he had looked into the future expected that this money would at least last him through the honeymoon. However, the amount required for his father and mother in law was not large, and he was assured that he would not be expected to take care of them any further or be bothered with them in any way. He had enough money over to last him two weeks, and he gave himself up to the sweets of incipient matrimony.

When his money was gone, Jack realizing that there was no way for him to make a living in Japan—or on land anywhere for that matter—was obliged to return to the sea. His bride as well as he bewailed the situation, but there was nothing else to be done. So he signed with an American ship trading between the east and the west and bidding adieu to his Apple Blossom, sailed away to be gone the greater part of a year at least and possibly indefinitely.

It has been said that a sailor has a sweetheart in every port. Jack Haversham had a wife in Tokyo, and it was not long before temptation came to have another in his native country.

The truth is that for constancy everything was against him. He was,
as has been said, especially attractive to women and was constantly beset by them. On returning to America the crew of the vessel in which he had sailed from Tokyo was discharged, and Jack concluded to pay a visit to his birthplace on Long Island before shipping again.

The day he arrived at home the first person he met was Maggie Pixley, whose complexion of white and red had been ripened under the sun and sea breezes. Maggie noticed the handsome young sailor, and there was admiration in her eyes. They had known each other as children, but had greatly changed since Jack was a boy of fourteen had gone to sea. But each saw something familiar in the other and turned at the same time for another look.

"Aren't you Jack Haversham?"
"Yes. And you are Maggie Pixley." Jack turned from the way he was going and walked Maggie's way. That was the right way for him, because they had been lovers as children, and when he had parted with her years ago he had sworn to be true to her.
He did not consider it necessary to say that he had left a wife in Japan.
He walked on, chatting glibly, asking after this person and that person, Maggie the while looking up into his face through her brown eyes, revealing by her smiles a dimple in each cheek and her white teeth.

The loves of an inconstant man are very much the same. Jack's were assuredly so. He fell in love as easily as a ship will rise and fall on a gently undulating sea. Naturally he was troubled at remembering that there was a barrier between him and Maggie in his marriage with the geisha girl, but anything that interferes with what we desire only renders that desire more keen.
Jack couldn't stay at home forever,
for, in the first place, he had nothing laid up and, in the second, we all need occupation. He and Maggie became lovers, she knowing nothing of his marriage till he left her to sign on a new ship; then, when she naturally showed that she expected him to speak
his mind and intentions toward her, not being able to do so honorably, he made his confession.

It was a great blow to Maggie. She did not blame him. She only regretted the barrier that existed between them.
The parting was very sad, both declaring that there was no use trying to forget each other. They must simply endure their mutual misfortune.

Six months after his departure Jack found himself in Tokyo. It was not his wish to be there. He could not help himself since his ship went there.
He did not avail himself of permission to go ashore for some time after his arrival, but finally was ordered ashore on some duty. The first man he met was the broker who had made the match for him with Apple Blossom.

"Ah, Mr. Haversham!" exclaimed the man. "How you like to marry again?
I and you a fine wife."

"Marry? You son of Satan, I'm married already. You know that as well as I."

"You marry for six months. That marriage has expired."

"What?"

"You no know our laws in Japan.
We have a law that a man marries a woman for some time. He pay the money to go to the wife's father and mother. That all right in this country.
Do you suppose I marry a sailor forever?"

"Great Scott!"

"I marry Apple Blossom again—twice since I marry her to you."

"Say it again, you heathen!" cried Jack, gripping the man on each shoulder and shaking him till his teeth rattled.

"I say it a hundred times. I show you the contract."

"Show it—right off!"

An investigation ensued, which convinced Jack that he had made a limited marriage recognized by the laws of Japan and considered there perfectly honorable to both parties. He secured papers to show that he could be married again in his native country without committing bigamy.

"Well, you satisfied?" asked the broker.

"Yes; I am mighty well satisfied."

"Then I get you another wife."

"No, you won't!"

"Our law very fine law for sailorman," said the broker urgently.

"I dare say it is. It has proved the best kind for me, but I have no further use for it."

"You like to see Apple Blossom?"

"No. Why would I want to see her?"

"Apple Blossom not married now. I make a new marriage for you with her cheap."

Jack took the little man by the collar and the seat of the breeches and threw him up into a cherry tree, where he clung to the branches while his client walked away.

On his way home Jack took very good care of himself, declining to go ashore lest he fall under the spell of some fair damsel, for though his heart was really true to Maggie, he knew that it was not wise to expose himself to temptation.

When he and his regular sweetheart met he took her to his arms, she resisting till he assured her that he was free to marry her. After more transports he explained the Japanese law
by which he had been married.

"That's a very good law," she said,
"for sailors."

Nevertheless Maggie would not consent to marry Jack Haversham till she had made inquiries and learned that there is in Japan such a marriage law as he had been married under without knowing it. Then she consented, but only when Jack had promised to leave a seafaring life and remain at home,
where she might watch him.

Many a man has been married in a frock coat who is soon longing for a cutaway.

We can always give advice to the people who are anxious to get something for nothing.

It sometimes seems as though nature can make a fool of a man almost as easily as a woman can.

Leading fruit growers and fruit produce brokers on the Peninsula are unanimous in the opinion that all fruits so far are safe. It is claimed that all kinds of fruit and cereals have so far been greatly favored by this winter, and do not think anything is far enough advanced at the present time to be killed by an ordinary cold spell.

We are in receipt from the Bureau of Immigration, Baltimore, a volume entitled "The Ideal Home for The Immigrant." The volume is profusely illustrated with views from different portions of the State, together with fine descriptions of the various sections. It is a book that ought to please those desiring to make homes in Maryland.

This winter has been remarkable for its scarcity of snow. The snow storm on Christmas Day is the only one worthy of mention. There has been an abundance of rain, however, and on two or three occasions it has been mixed with snow and hail for short periods. A scattering of big Mother Goose flakes fell on Thursday of last week, followed by a few spits of finer snow, which soon disappeared in the sunshine which conquered the clouds. This week has been clear but cold and wintry. Wednesday was an ideal St. Patrick's Day, clear, but with falling temperature and gusts of wind. While agreeable to men, generally, farmers say the scarcity of snow during the past winter has not been so beneficial to the wheat, which is always helped by a thick blanket of snow.

Phosphate Shortage and Prices Up

Phosphate manufacturers in Baltimore city are face to face with a crisis due to the fact that they are unable to get the rock which forms the basis for the product from the mines in Florida, as the schooners, which heretofore have been used in that business have turned to the South American trade.

Vessels, which took care of the South American trade in the past are now engaged in traffic across the Atlantic, having been influenced to make the change by the increased freight rates now prevailing.

Because of the prospects of a shortage in rock, the prices of phosphate have already advanced from $1 to $1.50 per ton to the farmers, and the indications now are that the advance will be $2 per ton or more in the near future. Due to the gloomy outlook the plants there refuse absolutely to quote prices to the farmers for futures.

Mad At Paint

25c a gallon for paint is about $2.50 on the average job, and lots of men waited last year for that; but they didn't reckon; they got mad; wouldn't pay it. There are times to get mad and refuse to pay; but when one's property needs protecting is no time to get mad and not paint.

Besides, it costs more to get mad and wait than to paint. Getting mad doesn't do any good to your property; paint does it good by keeping out water; no water no rot; no paint, some water and rot; and a little rot is more than enough to make a man liberal towards his painter and paint. Paint costs not a cent. All the paint in the world, so long as it keeps out water, costs not a cent.

Good Roads Notes

No other citizen realizes the value of good roads as does the farmer.

Production must cease when the transportation costs eat up the profits.

A community can safely be judged by the kind of highways it maintains.

The greatest chasm between the producer and the consumer is the mud hole.

There is something radically wrong with the farmer who is opposed to good roads.

Without good roads there can be no development that will be permanent and enduring.

Bad roads keep children away from school and impair the efficiency of church work in a community.

The elementary principles involved in improved highways are social and domestic happiness and business economics.—Homer D. Wade, of the National Farmers' Union.

Health Promotes Happiness

Without health, genuine joy is impossible; without good digestion and regular bowel movement you cannot have health. Why neglect keeping bowels open and risk being sick and ailing? You don't have to. Take one small Dr. King's New Life Pills at night, in the morning you will have a full, free bowel movement and feel much better. Helps your appetite and digestion. Try one tonight. (Advertisement)

American Telephone Annual Report

The annual report of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company was issued Tuesday. While this company controls the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of this State, there is no separate mention made of the Baltimore company in the report. The figures for the year are combined in the operations of the entire system and show as follows:

Net earnings for the year, $40,557,977.29. The interest charges were $8,223,163.23 and the dividends at the regular rate of 8 per cent. per annum were $27,572,674.72. Of the resulting balance there was carried to reserves $2,500,000 and to surplus $2,262,139.34.

Going Your Own Way

Life has never been an easy matter for those who go in earnest about it. Perhaps that is one reason for not taking it seriously. Still, for those whose eyes have been opened to their own responsibilities the way will always be smoother when they realize the hopelessness of trying to regulate other lives than their own, and refuse to allow that outer world, which can not be ruled, to act the part of a tyrant. Is not the dust of the road of life thick enough as it is without blinding ourselves yet more by following in track of another's wheels.—Exchange.

About Advertising

The man who does not advertise simply because his grandfather did not should wear knee breeches and a wig.

The man who does not advertise because it costs money should quit paying salaries for the same reason.

The man who does not advertise because he doesn't know how to write an advertisement should quit eating because he can't cook.

The man who does not advertise because somebody said it did not pay should not believe the world is round because the ancients said it was flat.

To The Housewife

Madam, if your husband is like most men he expects you to look after the health of yourself and children. Coughs and colds are the most common of the minor ailments and are most likely to lead to serious diseases. A child is much more likely to contract diphtheria or scarlet fever when it has a cold. If you will inquire into the merits of the various remedies that are recommended for coughs and colds, you will find that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy stands high in the estimation of people who use it. It is prompt and effective, pleasant and safe to take, which are qualities especially to be desired when a medicine is intended for children. For sale by all dealers.

The Baltimore Star

The Leading Evening Paper of the South

The Baltimore Star, established August 17, 1903, by the publishers of The Baltimore American, has won its place as the representative evening paper of the South. It gives more news and more reading matter than any other afternoon paper in Maryland. It is especially rich in departments—financial, sporting, society, children, women, and to these departments the best writers of America are regular contributors. The Star is the greatest home paper, with something for every member of the family. It is a cheerful newspaper, with plenty of entertainment. Those who try it keep on taking it.

The Star is elaborately illustrated. It has the first photographs of important events. Its portraits of leading men and women are unequalled.

The Star has two great news services, with wires direct to its offices from all parts of the world. The Star has a wireless equipment. It uses every modern invention and the best enterprise to get all the news.

The Star is different from other Southern papers. It has a quality of its own. One month, 25 cents; three months, 75 cents; one year, $3.

Pure Bred Arab Horses.

In Cairo there is a society for preserving the pure bred Arab horse. It is said that recent changes in the lives and habits of the Bedouins have resulted in the deterioration of these horses. A practical horseman of wide experience says that as a rule the Arab horse is now no better treated than our own horses, whatever may have been true of the old days when such poems as "The Arab to His Steed" were written.

A Troublemaker.

"Why did you tell my wife that before I met her I promised to love you forever?"

"Well, didn't you?" "Sure I did, but that's no kind of conversation to go to a man's wife with."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Fulfilled.

Mrs. Gnaggs—Before we were married you used to say you could listen to my sweet voice all night. Mr. Gnaggs—Well, at that time I had no idea I'd ever have to do it.—Judge.

Not a Bout Winner.

Tramp—Once I was well known as a wrestler, mum. Lady—And do you wrestle now? Tramp—Only wid poverty, mum.

DELAWARE LEGISLATURE ENDS

Appropriations For Two Years Total Over $1,500,000

The biennial session of the General Assembly of Delaware, at Dover, last Tuesday afternoon after appropriations of more than $1,500,000 for the ensuing two years had been sanctioned. This provides for general claims and attaches of the Senate and House. Coupled with the Omnibus Appropriations bill is authority for the State Treasurer, with the consent of the Governor and Secretary of State, to borrow money by issuing certificates of indebtedness to make up any deficit that may occur within the next two years.

For 1915, the estimated revenues are $804,774 and appropriations $765,324. For 1916 the estimations receipts are $70,122 and appropriations $723,154.

The House adopted a resolution introduced by Representative Downward, of Wilmington, urging Delaware's Representatives in Congress to use their influence in having the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal made a free waterway.

New Facts About History Of The Earth

New details are continually being added by geologist to the known history of the earth, including the development of plants and animals. However, that history, which is recorded in the rocks, is still fragmentary, like a badly mutilated book. One of the great defects in the record in the Atlantic and Gulf Coastal Plain regions of this country is the absence of the latter part of the Cretaceous and the early part of the Eocene chapters—perhaps 8 to 10 million years ago.

A paper recently issued by the Geological Survey as Professional Paper 90-J, entitled "The Cretaceous-Eocene Contact in the Atlantic and Gulf Coastal Plain," by L. W. Stephenson, discusses this missing part of the record and shows that the break must cover a very long period of time. It is known that at that time the continents were at least as large as and probably larger than they are now, and the oceans were accordingly smaller. Any rocks that were then formed in the sea seem to have been weathered and washed away.

Hundreds of kinds of plants and animals lived before and hundreds that lived after this great period are known, but not one that lived during the period. Strange to say, few if any of the species which existed before the unknown period lived through it. It is like a play in which the places of one act remain the same as in the preceding but the characters are all new, and yet many of the new players resemble the old ones so much that one is compelled to admit that they are close relatives.

In each of the States bordering the Atlantic Ocean south of New York, and the Gulf of Mexico, are layers of rock which were formed before and after the period whose record is missing. In these layers are entombed sea shells of many kinds, but apparently not one species lived through from Cretaceous to Eocene time.

Where Is The Republican Moses?

Never in all its history did the Republican party, on the eve of an election for President of the United States, find itself with so little material of real Presidential calibre from which to make a selection of the party's national leader.

With a single exception it has not an available man of national character and reputation who, under ordinary conditions, would be considered for an instant in such a matter as making a selection which may mean the next President of the United States.

This single exception is ex-Senator Elihu Root of New York. He is admittedly the ablest Republican in the country, with an experience as Secretary of State, Secretary of War and United States Senator which would go far to insure a successful administration of the office should he be nominated and elected. But Elihu Root was 70 years of age last February, and will be two years older when the time comes for the inauguration of the next President. Also, he is adverse to accepting the nomination. "All talk of my being a candidate is nonsense; such a thing is impossible," he declared in Albany, on Monday, when the proposition was suggested to him.

Who is there aside from Root that amounts to anything? Roosevelt? Impossible. The country has had far too much of him. Taft? It would be political suicide to name him again. Senators Borah of Idaho or Cummins of Iowa? They are far from political heavyweights. Senator La Follette? He is no longer a Republican of the right stripe. Ex-Governor Herrick of Ohio? Practically a political stranger outside of his own State.

Possibly some Republican Moses may be discovered in time to relieve the situation before the nominating convention is held. But it is doubtful. Mediocrity prevails among prominent Republicans, and there does not seem to be one of Presidential size or suitability in all the land—Wilmington Every Evening.

Parent-Teacher's Association

The following excellent article on co-operation and the part of the public in securing it, was handed to us by Mr. J. R. Gentry, one of the teachers of the Washington Academy and secretary of the Parent-Teacher's Association:

Every child of the Washington High School was needed at the last meeting of the Parent-Teacher's Association, which was held March 5th. Several questions, vitally concerning you, were discussed and some of you were not there to give your opinions. One of these questions was "More interest in the school; you want to see it effective, you want it to be operated at the maximum efficiency, you want it to be by far the best school in the county; and there is just one way for the school to become what you would have it, and that is by co-operation. Unless you co-operate with the other patrons and with the teachers it can never become the thoroughly alive working organization you would have it. Unless you come to the meetings of the Parent-Teacher's Association, and lend ideas for discussion, and co-operate with your presence, thoughts and words, you will not know whether we are trying to make the highest type of citizens of your children, or whether we draw only our breath and salary. Come and see what we are doing, and if we require and deserve more room, co-operate with us in getting it. The next meeting of the Association will be held on Thursday, April 1st, and every patron, every citizen, interested in any way in community welfare, in public schools, in boosting every thing good, is invited. Show by your presence that you are interested."

The Educational-Entertainment Committee has arranged for a free-for-all discussion on such questions as: Corporal punishment, More Room for the School, Field Day Exercises, A New and up-to-date program for Commencement this year, etc. Bring your ideas and have a part in this greater and bigger effectiveness—co-operation.

Death Of Dr. C. H. Weaver

Dr. C. H. Weaver, formerly rector of Somerset Parish, died at his home in Toccoa, Ga., last Thursday evening, of Bright's disease. Dr. Weaver was about 56 years of age. He came to Princess Anne in 1908 and remained until 1914, when he went to Milledgeville, Ga. He remained there but a short time and afterwards removed to Toccoa, in the northern part of Georgia. He had been ill for several months and was finally taken to a hospital and subsequently to his home where his death occurred.

Dr. Weaver was a man of more than average ability. He practiced medicine several years before entering the ministry. His conduct of the services at St. Andrew's Church, in Princess Anne, was always highly spoken of. He was a beautiful reader and as the leader of the church choir, his rich tenor voice was always in evidence. He was a kind-hearted and affectionate man, a good neighbor and an agreeable companion.

Dr. Weaver is survived by his wife and two daughters, Miss Carrie Weaver, of New York, and Miss Jane Weaver, who resides with her mother at Toccoa. Funeral services were held yesterday (Monday) after which his remains were removed to his old home at Manchester, Conn., for interment.

HAS ORDER IN FOR SEVEN NEW CARS

The Fairmount Line Will Get The First One To Arrive

The Peninsula Rapid Transit Company which began business the first of January has been very prosperous as the business of the corporation has grown steadily. The company now has one car running from Fairmount to Salisbury making three round trips daily a distance of 180 miles, this car has only missed three trips in nearly three months; it also has a car running from Salisbury to Berlin making three round trips daily, a distance of 150 miles on this line, only one trip has been missed in sixty days. The service given by this company has been of the best—the cars nearly always being on time.

The company has an order in for seven new cars, the bodies of which are now nearing completion by the J. G. Brill Co. of Philadelphia, makers of streetcar bodies. It is understood that these are the finest cars ever turned out by the above named company. The first one to arrive will be put on the Fairmount line. The company will soon put on a line from Fruitland to Delmar thus saving the extra trip in to Fruitland made by the Princess Anne car. The five cars to be put on the streets of Salisbury will be installed before April 20th. The company has all the earmarks of being very prosperous.

On our second page this company presents a financial statement which is most flattering and which shows that the enterprise is paying from the start. With but two cars in operation, and running during the first quarter, the gross receipts of the first quarter are $3,171.07. Of this amount the Salisbury-Fairmount line earned $1,948.41 and the Salisbury-Berlin line $1,222.66, gross. The expenses have been kept down to the minimum, the managers say, leaving a margin sufficient to pay a dividend, after providing liberally for maintenance fund. The directors will meet on April 7th to declare a dividend for the first quarter. The directors advise those who have not already purchased stock to do so at once, as the company has a great deal of business in prospect.

No Extra Session Says Wilson

Formal announcement was made at the White House last Tuesday that at present President Wilson has no intention of calling an extra session of the Senate or Congress before the beginning of the regular session next December. It was said that the President sees no prospects of any contingency arising which would cause him to alter his present intention. Several senators had suggested that the President call a special session of the Senate in October to consider ratification of the Colombian and Nicaraguan treaties. Other suggestions were that an extra session of Congress be called during the summer to take up the question of giving the President authority to declare an embargo on the exportation of munitions of war and foodstuffs to the belligerent nations of Europe. It was announced Tuesday that the President would not carry out either suggestion.

Easter Day At St. Andrew's Church

Next Sunday will be Easter Day. The services at St. Andrew's will be: Choral Celebration of the Holy Communion at 7 o'clock; Sunday School at 9:45; Morning Prayer, Holy Communion and sermon at 11 o'clock, and Evening Prayer and special music again at 7:30 p. m. The public will be made welcome and booklets containing the services, just as they come, will be distributed among visitors, so they can easily follow the services.

Liberal offerings from all members of the Parish are asked for. There are fully 125 communicants in the Parish and each is asked to give, at least, $2 as an Easter Offering, so the Vestry can approach meeting outstanding obligations.

Dies Encased in Steel

Joseph F. Lee, 44 years old, died last Wednesday in the Germantown Hospital, Philadelphia, Pa., after living for eight days with the lower part of his body encased in a coating of steel which had poured over him while hot and hardened.

The accident happened on March 16, at the Midvale Steel Works. Lee, with several other men, was lifting a huge ladle of molten metal when it overturned upon him. He was hurried to the hospital, but by the time he reached there his body from the waist down was bound in the steel, which had burned away clothing and flesh. Surgeons tried to chip the metal away, but to no avail.

Early gardeners are busily engaged preparing their ground and getting their early seed planted. Sweet peas should now be planted.

EASTERN SHORE STATE HOSPITAL

First Of Group Near Cambridge Completed And Accepted

The board of directors of the Eastern Shore State Hospital met on Saturday in Cambridge, to accept the first group of buildings which have just been completed at a cost, including site and first year's maintenance, of approximately $300,000, that amount having been appropriated by the Legislatures of 1912 and 1914.

The present group consists of a mess-hall building, with a laundry and power plant, to which it is expected six dormitory buildings, an administration building and a sewage disposal plant will be added later. The hospital is slightly over a mile from Cambridge on the Choptank river. The grounds comprise more than 200 acres and lie on the State road.

The mess hall is 300 by 165 feet and contains two stories, with a basement under the entire building. It has two wings, one for men and one for women. Each wing contains three dining-rooms, with a serving-room for each group, the latter being connected with the kitchen by a corridor. On the second floor of each wing are two large dormitories, eight private rooms for nurses and attendants, a hospital room, bath-rooms and toilets.

Of brick, the building is laid in Flemish bond, the second story being finished in stucco, with slate roof. All the interior floor construction is of reinforced concrete laid with tile on the lower floor and the bath-rooms on the second floor, the dormitory floors being finished in Georgia pine. The building has six iron stair-cases provided with terrazzo tile steps. In construction and finish no effort has been spared to make the building fire-proof, and an excellent fire-fighting system connected with Shoal creek, an estuary of the Great Choptank, has been installed.

In the basement, which has the same number of rooms as the first floor, workshops and store rooms will be located.

The mechanical equipment, consisting of the kitchen, bakery and everything of like character have a capacity sufficient for the finished scheme. The first board of directors was composed of Senators Bosley, Beck, Dodson, Goalin, Harper, Moore, Milbourne and Price; members of the House of Delegates William T. Warburton and Governor Goldsborough, Comptroller Harrington and Treasurer Vandiver as ex-officio members.

State Grangers To Meet In Salisbury

The State Grange will meet in Salisbury some time in December this year. The convention is one of the largest State institutions and will call together at least 500 delegates from all over the State of Maryland. Besides the State delegates there will be National delegates and prominent Grangers from all over the United States. This will be one of the most important meetings ever held in Maryland as it will be the meeting just prior to the assembling of the Legislature and the Grangers propose to have several important measures before the Legislature at the next session.

The convention will be in session for about three days and it is proposed to secure the First Regiment Armory for the meetings. As lunch will be served each day to all the delegates by the local granges the Armory will be an ideal place for the meetings, because there is ample room in the basement to set a luncheon for five hundred people with ease, the big auditorium will accommodate fifteen hundred people for the meetings and the stage will accommodate a large number. There are plenty of rooms for committee meetings both on the first and second floors.

Sunday Left Philadelphia With $51,136

Like a dazzling comet, Billy Sunday passed out of the vision of Philadelphia, but not out of its heart and its mind on Sunday night the 21st inst. The train for the West, which took him and "Ma" away at 10:51 o'clock, left behind a trail of trail-bitters, numbering more than 40,000.

In his wallet Billy carried a certified check for $51,136.35 as a practical testimonial of the appreciation in which the city's people hold the efforts which he had put forth for the cause of religion during the 11 weeks that he was there.

At Broad Street Station was a crowd of thousands, gathered there to bid Godspeed to the little man who had spoken to more than two million people since he came to that city Jan. 2nd.

Every rose must have its thorns, and every shade its bones.

Love is a game of auction, in which hearts are frequently out-bid by diamonds.

THE WEATHER FOR APRIL

As forecast By Rev. Irl R. Hicks Will Be Warm And Stormy

Regular storm period is in progress as we pass from March into April. The Moon is in perigee on the first, passing to south declination. The vernal equinox is still in full force, Mars is in perihelion and Jupiter is in conjunction with Mercury and Earth. A low barometer, followed by marked change to warmer, with storm clouds, rain, hail and thunder, need not surprise any one from the 1st to the 3rd.

Regular storm period is central on the 6th, reaching from about the 4th to 9th. The Moon is at extreme south on the 5th, and at last quarter on the 6th with Earth's vernal equinox still backing up the regular Vulcan period.

Regular storm period is central on the 11th and 12th. The Moon is on the celestial equator on the 11th, which fact indicates greatly increased warmth, with rattling thunder and lightning on and about that day. The Moon, or Moon's conjunction with Sun and Earth, on the 14th, will tend to prolong storm conditions, with showers and storms, throughout the period between the 11th and the next period. Possibly a short, sharp rise of the barometer, with brief change to cooler, may appear on and touching the 13th.

Regular storm period covers the 15th to 20th inclusive, having its center on the 17th. The Moon's conjunction with Sun and Earth on the 14th, will probably throw its perturbing force into this period, it being also in apogee on the 15th, and farthest north on the 19th. The regular Vulcan period is also at the center of a Mercury period, with Earth's equinox nearing its close.

Regular storm period is on the 22nd, 23rd, 24th and 25th. During these days storm conditions will increase, beginning in the west and passing in regular progressive order eastward to the Atlantic coast regions. The Moon is at first quarter on the 22nd, and on the celestial equator on the 25th. Wind, rain, hail and thunder squalls will center on the 23rd and 25th, which squalls will be severe.

Regular storm period is central on the 29th, extending from April 27th to May 2nd. The Moon's opposition to Earth and Sun on the 29th, and at its perigee, or its nearest approach to the Earth, on the 30th, blended directly with the regular Vulcan period, are the prime causes of disturbances at this period. The planet Venus is in aphelion, or at her greatest distance from the Sun, on the 23th. The strain in her turning point may add to the magnetic and electrical potentials, thereby increasing the probability and force of storms and other phenomena at this time. At all events, look for falling barometer, change to warmer, humid atmosphere, all followed by rain, and possibly high winds and thunderstorms, as we pass from April into May.

Widow Of Stonewall Jackson Dead

Mrs. Mary Anna Jackson, widow of Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson, noted Confederate leader, died at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. E. R. Preston, at Charlotte, N. C., last Wednesday at the age of 83 years, after an illness of several months.

Mrs. Jackson had been ill for months with heart trouble, and though she realized that she could not recover, she was cheerful to the end. When it was realized, in January, that her illness would probably be fatal, her only grandson, Lieut. Jackson Christian, who was stationed in the Philippines, was called home. He had married in San Francisco and had gone from there to Manila, and the dearest desire of Mrs. Jackson's heart was to greet "Jackson" again and to see his bride. Her wish was gratified.

Mrs. Mary Anna Jackson was the second wife of the famous Confederate general. She was the daughter of the Rev. Dr. R. H. Morrison, first president of Davidson College, near Charlotte. All the Morrison sisters married noted Confederate officers—"Stonewall" Jackson, Gen. D. H. Hill and Gen. Rufus Barringer finding their brides in the family of this Presbyterian minister.

It was on July 16, 1857, that Professor Jackson, of the Virginia Military Institute, at Lexington, Va., was married to Miss Morrison at Cottage Home, the handsome old country place of the Morrises in Lincoln county, North Carolina. The Rev. Dr. Lacey performed the ceremony. The bridal trousseau, which had been made in New York, was delayed in transit, and it was only a few hours before the ceremony that the wedding gown arrived.

METHODISTS IN ANNUAL SESSION

Wilmington Methodist Episcopal Conference Meets In Laurel, Del.

The forty-seventh session of the Wilmington Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church began last Tuesday in Centenary Church, Laurel, Del., with addresses by the Rev. Dr. J. W. Hancher, of New York, secretary of the Church Board of Education, and the Rev. Dr. J. O. Spencer, president of Morgan College, Baltimore. Dr. Spencer spoke in the interest of the Freedman's Aid Society. Dr. Hancher appealed for better educational advantages. The Rev. Dr. J. W. Easley presided.

Victor C. Hitchens, secretary of the official board of Centenary Church, delivered the address of welcome on behalf of the local church authorities.

Bishop Richard J. Cooke is presiding over the Conference. He spent Sunday afternoon in conference with the District Superintendent. The board of examiners and the young ministers who took the examination Tuesday arrived Monday.

The territory of Wilmington Methodist Episcopal Conference comprises the entire Delmarva Peninsula—the State of Delaware, the nine counties of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, and the two counties of the Eastern Shore of Virginia. It is divided into four districts—Wilmington, Easton, Dover and Salisbury. Wilmington district comprises that portion of the peninsula north of the Chesapeake and Delaware canal. Easton and Dover districts divide the territory from the canal to about the lower Delaware line, and Salisbury district embraces the Peninsula territory south of Delaware.

The real work of the Conference began Wednesday morning with the celebration of the Lord's Supper, administered by Bishop Richard Cooke, of Portland, Ore., assisted by the four district superintendents.

The service was impressive, more than 600 communing. Bishop Cooke then addressed the Conference, admonishing the preachers not to worry about appointments or anything else. "Let me hear more of the religious side and not too much of the business side."

The roll call showed all but 14 of the 250 members of the Conference present. The Rev. W. A. Wise, of Wilmington, secretary; H. G. Westerfield, statistical secretary, and J. W. Colons, of Georgetown, treasurer, were re-elected.

The Conference got into a tangle over the first motion introduced. The Rev. Dr. Collins wanted a committee on legislation appointed, but after a long wrangle the motion was withdrawn.

The question of appropriating 9½ per cent. of pastoral salary for conference claimants stirred the members, and so many amendments were offered that Bishop Cooke exclaimed, "You are playing fool with the question; get down to business." The resolution, offered by Dr. Harry Budd, president of the Wilmington Conference Academy, was passed.

J. W. Hancher, of New York, spoke in the interest of the educational board. President J. O. Spencer, of Morgan College, Baltimore, made an appeal for Conference support of the college's branch at Princess Anne. Dr. Wagaman, of Baltimore, spoke in the interest of the Maryland Bible Society.

The exercises on Thursday began with an old fashioned prayer and praise service, led by the Rev. Dr. Thomas E. Martindale, of Salisbury. The reports from the Easton and Dover districts showed growth along all lines. They reported more than 4,000 conversions. It predicted the total conversions in the conference will reach 10,000.

Bishop Cooke remarked "we ought to give thanks that Methodism has not lost the power of the Holy Ghost. There are great revivals today; greater than these ever were. You have a wonderful time on this peninsula. It is worth while to be a member of this conference."

Dr. John Krantz, of the Methodist Book Concern, New York, turned over to the conference through Bishop Cooke a check of $3,151, its share of the Rev. W. W. Davis, of the Baltimore Conference, on Sabbath observance. The following officers were elected: President, ex-Congressman Walter Hofferker; vice-presidents, Dover district, John R. Price, Easton; Joseph Mallilien, Salisbury; Judge Robly D. Jones, and Wilmington, T. B. Ridgeway; secretary, Prof. C. A. Short, Newark, and treasurer, Irving Culver, Delmar.

Four Legs Pull Chick Apart

The town of Cheshire, Conn., has developed a most remarkable chicken. Joseph Wheeler, a poultry raiser, found among a recently hatched Rhode Island Red brood a chicken perfectly formed except that it had four legs. All went well for nearly a week. Then it was discovered that the two sets of legs were arranged for locomotion in opposite directions. The result was that the chicken pulled itself apart.

TEN YEARS AFTER

By F. A. MITCHEL.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Aldrich were dining at a restaurant. They had been married ten years. Mrs. Aldrich sat looking about her, admiring or condemning the apparel of the ladies at other tables, while her husband read an evening paper.

"Tom," said the wife, "there's a bridal couple over there."

Tom looked about him.

"Where?"

"At the table by the middle window."

"Oh!"

"She has a lovely hat."

"How do you know they are bride and groom?"

"How do I know? Everything indicates it."

"What, for instance?"

"Well, in the first place, she is conscious. She looks just as I felt when you and I dined at the Summerhouse the day after we were married."

"What else?"

"Look!"

The bride's glass stood midway between her and the man. He took it up and sipped the wine in it. The light shone in the eyes of both. He gently moved his own glass toward her, and she, too, sipped, with a repetition of the love glances.

"Very interesting," grunted Mr. Aldrich, resuming his paper.

The waiter brought the dinner. Mr. Aldrich was in the midst of the financial article, and his wife, not caring to wait for him to finish it, helped him to the viands, then helped herself. They ate the first course in silence, and while waiting for the second Mr. Aldrich resumed his paper.

"Tom," said Mrs. Aldrich.

"What?"

"Look!"

He followed her eyes in the direction of the supposed bride and groom.

"Well?"

"Don't you see?"

"No, I don't."

"They are holding hands under the table—on the other side—next to the window."

"Touching," said Mr. Aldrich and resumed his paper. A page of advertisements of women's wear was exposed to his wife. She bent forward and scanned it.

When the next course came on Mr. Aldrich had finished the commercial reports and helped the viands. The only remark made during this course by the husband was, "The market closed strong; the only one by the wife was, 'Is my hat straight?'"

Between the third and fourth courses Mr. Aldrich looked at his watch, toyed with his wineglass and made one remark: "I shall sell Mop tomorrow. Good sale, I'm sure." The wife replied, "I bought one yesterday."

Meanwhile the wife's attention was divided between the ladies' hats—she was thinking of buying one—and the bride and groom.

"Tom," she said presently, "look."

Again he turned his eyes, peering a mushroom on his fork while doing so. The bride and groom had risen, and the groom was holding the bride's coat for her. As she slipped it on her he folded it about her in a manner to denote excessive tenderness. She looked up into his eyes dove-like.

"Why don't you ever show me such attention?" asked Mrs. Aldrich.

"Because I don't wish to attract the attention of a restaurant full of people."

But Mrs. Aldrich did not hear. She had caught sight of a hat that pleased her.

"Just the thing to go with my tailor made suit. I wonder where she got it."

But at that moment the bride and groom saluted past her, the bride looking as if she were facing a battery of all the eyes in the restaurant, as indeed she was, and the groom looking defiant.

"I wonder," remarked Mrs. Aldrich, "why brides and grooms are so conscious of being observed and yet so bent on giving themselves away, especially in public places."

"Because they can't help it," replied her husband.

When the repast was finished and the bill was called for Mrs. Aldrich said:

"Do you remember that first dinner we had together after our wedding at the Summerhouse?"

"The Summerhouse?" trying to remember.

"Yes. You said to me, 'Anything more, sweetheart?' and when I replied 'Nothing,' you said, 'Don't you think you would like an ice?' and when I said 'No' again you said, 'A little cordial to top off with?' And when I declined that you kept on asking me if I would have this and have that."

"How I must have bored you!"

As he made the last remark the waiter laid the bill before him. He did not dispute it, but looked as if he would like to, though the charge was moderate.

"Do you remember, dear," asked his wife, "how at the Summerhouse, knowing that we were a bride and groom, they stuck you for $19.55 when the cost wasn't more than $7.25?"

"For heaven's sake, Edith, how have you managed to keep those figures in your head so many years?"

Mrs. Aldrich made no audible reply, but she made one inwardly. It was this:

"How is it that men so soon forget that which should be nearest to their hearts?"

THE STATE OF FRANKLIN.

It Had a Short Life In What Is Now Eastern Tennessee.

In 1784 North Carolina, growing impatient of the burden that her western settlements had imposed upon her treasury and irritated by the complaints of the people of those sections, passed an act conveying to the federal government all the lands that now constitute the state of Tennessee.

The people of the country that is now eastern Tennessee, feeling themselves left without a government, made haste to organize themselves into an independent commonwealth, which they called, as a tribute to the illustrious philosopher, the state of Franklin. These people applied for admission into the Union; but, the federal government being slow and unwilling to act and North Carolina having repealed the act of cession of her western province to the Union, the state of Franklin came into very troubled waters for some years.

Some efforts were made to persuade the Kentuckians to join themselves to the state of Franklin, a provision having been made for such co-operation in the constitution of the experiment, but they came to nothing. The new state gradually fell to pieces, and in 1787 its brilliant and able governor, John Sevier, was put on trial for high treason. He was released by a daring rescue and subsequently pardoned and restored in name to the leadership, which he never lost in the affections of his people. In 1787 the last legislature of the state of Franklin held its session at Greenville.—Philadelphia Press.

Horse Sense.

The phrase "horse sense" was discussed in class, and the teacher told one of the boys to write a sentence containing that phrase. The boy labored for ten minutes and produced this: "My father didn't lock the barn door, and he ain't seen the horse sense."

The Spinster's Hint.

A maiden well advanced in years used to wait every morning for the postman, a bachelor of about her age, and ask him if there were not a letter for her. Several weeks passed thus, but the anxiously expected letter did not arrive. Finally one morning the postman said to her:

"Well, tomorrow you shall get your letter if I have to write it myself."

"That's right; do it," replied the old maid. "I shall be delighted to accept it."

"Well," said the postman, smiling, "what do you want me to write—a business letter or a love letter?"

"If you mean business, please write a love letter," was her blushing reply.

Napoleon's Confidence.

Just before his marriage Napoleon received the appointment of commander in chief of the army of Italy. He was then twenty-six. "You are rather young," said one of the directors, "to assume responsibility so weighty and to take command over veteran generals."

"In one year," Napoleon replied, "I shall be old or dead."

"We can place you in command of men only," said Carnot, "for the troops are in need of everything, and we can furnish you with no money to provide supplies."

"Give me only men enough," Napoleon answered, "and I ask for nothing more; I will be answerable for the result."

Bolgiano's
"Greater Baltimore" Tomato
Just Doubles The Yield

Better Than Stone Ever Was
Bolgiano's "Greater Baltimore" Tomato just doubles the yield of many of the best Canning Tomatoes you have ever grown. Smooth, well-formed and deep from stem to blossom. Ripens evenly to the stem and is entirely free from ridges, cracks and blight. Unrivalled shipper, due to its solidity and firmness. Fruits in large clusters at every second joint. Joints are short and sturdy. Vigorous, compact, healthy vines. Brilliant red color, one of the handsomest tomatoes you have ever seen.

THE NEW STANDARD

"It is largely the EARLINESS and UNIFORMITY with which the plants bear a LARGE NUMBER OF LARGE, SWOOTH FRUITS throughout the ripening season, that makes Bolgiano's 'Greater Baltimore' superior to Stone which has been the Standard Canning variety for many years."

During our Picking Season from July 25th to October 1st, Bolgiano's "Greater Baltimore" yielded nearly 22 Tons Per Acre.

TWO TONS PER ACRE MORE

On January 30th, Mr. Wm. B. Plummer, of Kent Co., Md., writes as follows: "I have planted many varieties of Tomatoes but have not found any other to do as well for me as the Greater Baltimore. The past season we gathered over two tons per acre more than any other varieties. It is one of the best varieties that can be planted for canning purposes on account of firmness, standing through or wet weather. They are the first to ripen and continue firm and good-sized until frost."

"Have used your Liniment very successfully in a case of rheumatism, and always have a bottle on hand in case of a cold or sore throat. I wish to say I think it is one of the best of household remedies. I would not have used it only it was recommended to me by a friend of mine who, I wish to say, is one of the best boosters for your Liniment I ever saw."—J. W. Fuller, Denver, Col.

"Just a line in praise of Sloan's Liniment. I have been ill nearly fourteen weeks with rheumatism, have been treated by doctors who did their best. I had not sleep for the terrible pain for several nights, when my wife got me a small bottle of the Liniment and three applications gave me relief so that I could sleep."—Joseph Finkbeiner, 618 Commerce Street, McKeesport, Pa.

Ownership of the Air.

Our ancestors must have foreseen the aeroplane or they would not have embodied in the law the principle that he who owns the land owns the column of air above "usque ad coelum," or up to the skies. This can be traced back as far as the reign of Edward I. and from this time every authority to the present court of appeal has emphasized the right of every citizen not only to be king of his own castle, but of the sky above it.—London Chronicle.

Perfect Happiness.

Grubbs—What is your idea of perfect happiness? Stubbs—Well, if my wife would stop telling me what she thinks of me, and I had the privilege of telling my respected employer what I think of him it would seem about right.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Homemade Silver Polish.

To make the best silver polish and cleaner known, take a bottle of ammonia as sold in most grocery stores, and to this add two ounces of whiting, and just a few drops of oxalic acid. In this way you will procure for the expenditure of 15 cents as much of the best silver polish as can be purchased for $1 in most of the prominent drug stores. This same polish is so cheap when homemade that the housewife will not find it too expensive to use in polishing all of the cutlery and also the brass doorknobs or any other bright metal fixtures about the house.—National Magazine.

When men are rightly occupied their amusement grows out of their work, as the color petals out of the fruitful flower.—Ruskin.

Strength of Insects.

The insects are provided with muscles of enormous power as compared with men. If a fly be held by the wings it can pick up and carry a match, and this is as if a man were able to pick up a beam twenty-eight feet long and one-half inches square.

An ordinary little ant can pull eight matches on rollers, which would equal a load of 330 beams the size of a man when its weight is compared with that of a horse.

The flea jumps 200 times its own height, which is about the same as if a man were to jump over the nearly thousand foot high Eiffel tower.

An oyster opposes being opened by exerting a force of over thirty pounds, and for a man to show the same power he would have to take up eighty large locomotives and bear them Atlas-like upon his shoulders.

From a purely physical point of view man is the weakest of animals. It is only by the use of his mind and the application of the laws of mechanics in the machinery he has invented that he has been able to dominate the world.—Boston Herald.

The Yosemite.

The best authorities have now agreed upon the spelling of Yosemite as recorded in Hodge's "Handbook of the American Indians." The following forms have been employed in various publications: Oosomite, Oosomite, Soemite, Yosemite, Yaseemine, Yoaimit, Yohamite, Yohamittis, Yosemety, Yosemetus, Yosemety, Yositimities and Yosomite. It never was used by the Indians as the name of the valley, for the Awan division of the Miwok tribe, who made their home in the valley, called their principal village and the whole valley by their name Awan. The name Yosemite may have derived from the Awan village of Lesamaiti, but Powers regards it as a distortion of the Miwok word uzmaiti, meaning grizzly bear.—New York Sun.

The Squirrel.

Innocent in all his ways, harmless in his food, playful as a kitten, but without cruelty, and surpassing the fantastic dexterity of the monkey, with the grace and brightness of a bird, the little dark eyed miracle of the forest glances from branch to branch, more like a sunbeam than a living creature. It leaps and darts and twines where it will. A chatouille is slow to it and a panther clumsy. Grotesque as a gnomie, gentle as a fairy, delicate as the silken plumes of the ruff, beautiful and strong like the spiral of a fern, it haunts you, it enters for you, hides from you, looks for you, loves you, as if the angel that walks with your children had made it himself for a heavenly plaything.—John Ruskin.

Palace of the Popes.

The Vatican is the papal palace and contains the most famous collection of art in the world. It is a collection of magnificent buildings, which occupy a space of 1,151 by 767 feet. The most ancient of the present structures date from the time of Nicholas V., about 1447. The various popes from time to time added new buildings, in which are many works of art of a historical character. The Sistine chapel, one of the Vatican edifices, contains Michelangelo's first masterpiece in painting, "The Last Judgment." The Pauline chapel possesses Michelangelo's frescoes of "The Conversion of St. Paul" and "The Crucifixion of St. Peter."

Troops and Winter.

When Napoleon went to Moscow and back it was found that the French soldiers stood the intense cold better than the Poles and north Germans. It is quite wrong, by the way, to suppose, as is often done, that that fatal winter set in early with exceptional severity. Napoleon invented that explanation to palliate the disaster into which he plunged his army. But the autumn was so exceptionally mild that the peasants believed that God was favoring Napoleon, and the first snowstorm did not come until Nov. 4, an unusually late arrival.

Decorations For Women.

There are few decorations for women in Europe, the most ancient order coming from the Austrian throne. It is the decoration of the Star and Cross and is given to women of high rank. Another is the Laken, founded in memory of the beautiful queen of Prussia whom Napoleon insulted. This order is given to all classes of women who subject themselves to any great self sacrifice.

To Clean Watch Chains.

Gold or silver watch chains can be cleaned with a very excellent result, no matter whether they be matt or polished, by laying them for a few seconds in pure aqua ammonia. They are then rinsed in alcohol and finally shaken in clean sawdust free from sand.—Medical Herald.

Naval Mines.

The first recorded appearance of mines as instruments of naval warfare was at the siege of Antwerp in 1585, when they were employed by the Dutch against the Spaniards.

Look the Hint.

A wearied young lady hastened the departure of a tedious caller by remarking as she looked out of the window, "I think we are going to have a beautiful sunrise."

Reverse Conditions.

Flushman: I say, old man, I'd like change for a five. De Bruke: Would you? I'd like five for a change.—Boston Transcript.

A Mind Reading Craze

By MARTHA V. MONROE

A mind reader had come to town and had given some astonishing public exhibitions. But this had not the effect on the beau monde of an exhibition he gave at the house of Mrs. MacGruder, one of society's leaders. This private entertainment made him fashionable, and every young man who had shaken his brains down into his heels at cotillion parties and every young girl whose aristocratic manners and conserved beauty had given her the right to look down on her sisters who had the brains to take down the dictation of a scientific constructor or a merchant prince was talking about mind reading.

Pete Barnical and Lucy Witridge were sitting together, she on a sofa, he in a chair opposite her. He was holding a skein of yarn on his hands which she was winding into a ball. "I have heard," said Mrs. Witridge, "that Mrs. MacGruder is very much displeased at her by giving that mind reading exhibition at her house. You see, all society is talking about it. Of course it is greatly to Mrs. MacGruder's credit to have introduced the matter."

"Did the mind reader find out who had the most mind?"

"I don't think that was his object. He told what people were thinking about."

"What were they thinking about?"

"What a question! It wasn't that which was wonderful; it was that he could tell without knowing what they were thinking about."

"How could he tell what he didn't know?"

"She lifted her big brown liquid eyes from a tangle in the yarn she was straightening out to his with a kind of puzzled wonder."

"I didn't mean to say," she replied when she had given her brain time to work out an answer, "that he could tell what a person was thinking about without knowing it, but he didn't know it until—until—"

"He found it out," supplied Pete.

"No, not that either. The remarkable feature of his performance was the way he found it out."

"How did he do it?"

"How did he do it? Why, he did it by—"

"Perhaps he didn't know himself."

"That's it. He said he didn't know how he did it."

"What did he do?"

"He took Billy Perkins' hand and, blindfolded, led Billy to what he was thinking about. Then Mr. Perkins wrote something on a piece of paper, folded it, put it in an envelope, put the envelope in a book, put the book on the top of the library, and then the—"

"Where did he put the library?"

"The library? He didn't put that anywhere. It was there already."

"Well, then what happened?"

"The mind reader told what was written on the paper, though he had been blindfolded all the time."

"That's nothing remarkable. I'll bet I can tell what you're thinking about this minute."

"I don't believe you can do any such thing."

"Try me. Think of something, and I'll tell you what it is."

"Very well; I've thought of something."

"A pumpkin."

There was contempt in her expression as she looked at him and replied that she wasn't thinking of any such thing.

"Yes, you were. You were thinking of Tom Baxter. You couldn't think of Tom Baxter without thinking of Tom Baxter's head. Tom Baxter's head is a pumpkin!"

"How ridiculous!" But she did not smile. Indeed, she made the exclamation because she didn't quite grasp the logical conclusion.

"I'll tell you what you do," he proceeded, not giving her time to think it all out. "You fix your mind on something and I'll lead you to it."

She spent some time selecting an object, then told him she was ready. He took her hand and led her to the piano. "I didn't think of that at all," she said.

"I'll try again," he said, still holding her hand, and he led her to a clock on the mantel.

"Wrong again."

He led her to a tete-a-tete in the center of the room. She didn't say whether he was right or not, not did he ask her. They sank into their respective seats on the tete-a-tete. He still held her hand.

"I can tell you what you are thinking about," he said.

"What?"

"Tom Baxter."

"I'm not."

"Me."

She did not reply to this. She lowered her eyes.

"And I can tell you," he went on, "what you think I'm thinking about."

"What?"

"You're thinking that I'm thinking that I—that I love you."

There was a great deal more of this intellectual conversation, but at this point it became what the world has heard very often, though it is a question if it trespassed. The mind reader had at least given a young man a reasonable excuse to propose.

But why he went so far out of his way to tell a simple truth that she wanted to hear only persons endowed with sentiment know, and they can't tell.

A new rule established by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, designed to protect passengers from injury on alighting from trains at various stations, is as follows: Where a station platform does not accommodate all the exits of a passenger train, trainmen will direct and require passengers to pass through the train, either from the front or rear, to a location where they can descend from the train to the station platform.

Miss Bayly is well known in Boston, where she often visited friends.—Easton Ledger.

Political Points
There have been some signs during the week that the city people are not warming to Mr. Harrington. Allowing for the usual jockeying, there still is significance in their attitude. Generally the idea that Preston, Mahon and the others are sincerely opposed to a Smith candidate is founded upon past differences between the Smith organization and the city people, especially as to matters before the Legislature.

There is a suggestion, however, that opposition from the city people to a Smith candidate for Governor is based upon consideration for the future. The Preston borough plan, some people believe, is involved.

Now, Mr. Talbott is the boss of Baltimore county and Dr. Wells is the boss of Anne Arundel county. Both are dead set against giving Baltimore city any part of their domains. And both are on the most intimate terms with Senator Smith—such intimate terms that there is hardly any chance that Smith, if in control at Annapolis next winter, would allow the passage of any borough bill to which Talbott and Wells were opposed.

If Preston is as interested in the borough plan as he is reported to be, it is not hard to see his reason for not wanting a Smith candidate for Governor; nor is it hard to imagine him behind Senator Lee.

Banner To School Board
The executive committee of the Maryland State Teachers' Association has decided to present a banner to the county having the largest percentage of teachers enrolled in the association for 1915. The banner will be the property of the county school board winning it for one year only.

H. H. Murphy, of the State Normal School; Supt. W. J. Holloway, of Salisbury; Secretary Hugh W. Caldwell, of Chesapeake City, the committee on enrollment, have sent a number of letters to the superintendents and school officials, enlisting their aid in the campaign for a larger association. Dr. M. Bates Stephens, State Superintendent of Education, has issued a circular letter to the superintendents and school principals of the State urging them to cooperate in securing members.

The association will meet at Ocean City June 29th to July 2nd. The feature of the program will be the dedication of the new educational building.

Now Paint
The first coat of a good job of paint—Devco—is $50 (average size of course). The first coat of a second or third or fourth rate job, $65 to $100.

The wear is likewise. The better you paint, of course, the longer it wears. And the more you pay for your job, the shorter it wears!

Devco is one of a dozen good paints. There are hundreds of bad ones. As likely as not, Devco is the only good one in this town.

More Interest In Tuberculosis

Although no city or town in Maryland individually won a pennant offered by the American Red Cross and the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in the Red Cross Seal competition this past season, yet the increase in the sale in the State according to the Maryland Tuberculosis Association, the State Agent for the seals, was 225,149 seals or 46.13%. The total sale in 1913 was 488,097 seals and in 1914, 713,246 seals. The sale of 1914 was 108,995 seals in excess of the next highest year, 1911, an increase of 18.04%, and 178,190 seals or 33.33% over the average of the three previous years, 1911, 1912, and 1913.

Of the 713,246 seals sold the past season, 323,567 were disposed of in the counties by the county agents, and 9,380 by individuals in the sections of the State where there were no regular county agents; in Baltimore City 206 agents, mostly stores, sold 94,416, and the various booths disposed of 121,713, solicitors 3,805, and 160,410 were sold in the city by mail from the offices of the Maryland Association. The proceeds of the sale will go towards paying the salaries of some half-dozen tuberculosis nurses in the counties during 1915, and will provide a part of the "sinews of war" for the State-wide campaign of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association.

The Maryland Association for Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis takes this means of expressing its thanks to all those good citizens throughout the counties and in Baltimore City who have made the past season's sale a success, either by purchasing the seals themselves, or by contributing their services and energy to the campaign.

Early Spring Lawn Treatment

It is now time to give attention to the lawn if a good healthy, thick and even growth is desired during the coming summer. If you spread manure on the lawn last fall and it has been allowed to stay on the ground all winter, rake off the coarse material as soon as the grass begins to grow. The lawn should then be rolled thoroughly with a heavy roller, and about a week thereafter, apply broadcast from 500 to 1000 pounds of hydrated or other well slaked lime per acre. The lime will soon get in its work by neutralizing the acids and stimulating to active work the different plant foods in the soil. The same practice can be applied to lawns treated with stable manure in the early Spring or Winter, but care should be exercised not to apply the lime sooner than a week or ten days after raking off the manure else you will lose some of the valuable ammonia which was stored up by manuring. It is to be understood that sour soils will not grow a good lawn, and many lawns become sour through excessive fertilizing and bad drainage.

It is interesting to observe, in connection with the above advice on the maintenance of a good lawn, that the hiving of the lawns of the Agricultural Department at Washington is being done at the present time. Visitors to Washington will probably recall what beautiful grass is grown each year in front and to each side of the main buildings of the Agricultural Department. Good results can be obtained in lawn cultivation by giving a little time each Spring in the proper care of your grass plots and its well worth the outlay of time and money expended for the pleasure that follows in having a pretty front yard.—Karl Lagenbeck, Lime Service Bureau, Washington.

BORROWING MONEY.

Be Sure Deferred Charges Can Be Met Before Incurring Them.

One reason why corporations have not been looked upon with friendly eyes is the fact that they have adopted financial methods of which we don't approve.

You and I have been taught to believe that we'd better do without a thing unless we have the money to pay for it. To us that seems to be safe and sane thrift doctrine.

But when corporations became numerous they adopted another plan. They decided not to wait until they could pay for what they wanted if they could borrow money with which to make the purchase. They began to load upon themselves "deferred charges."

Certain charges of this kind, of course, are justified; when it can be proved without the shadow of a doubt that what will be earned by borrowed money is more than the cost of the loan, borrowing is justified. But not otherwise.

So intelligent thrift practice in the home and the family can be measured by the same test. If you're going into debt to buy a home you should be able to demonstrate mathematically by borrowing money to buy a home you will in the end save more in rent than the cost of the land and house, repairs and taxes and insurance.

You have no business to place any "deferred charge" upon your individual resources or those of your family that those who come after you will not cheerfully pay because they recognize that it is a just charge. The test ought to be:

"If I should die tomorrow would my heirs prefer to go on meeting these charges rather than allow them to be defaulted?" It is when the answer of either the individual or a new board of corporation directors is in the negative that we see the unwisdom of much borrowing in anticipation of benefits or earnings.

If you're honest, "deferred charges" have to be met, and if you have had much experience you will know that it isn't often that the future develops as well as you think it will.—John M. Oskison in Chicago News.

PRISONERS OF WAR.

Code of Honor by Which Their Treatment is Governed.

In ancient times prisoners of war were killed unless, of course, the belligerents found it more profitable to exchange or liberate them for ransom. But today nations are bound to one another by a code of honor which forbids inhuman treatment of prisoners.

Prisoners are subjected to no punishment in any form. Neither must they be placed in a convict prison, although they may be detained in a fortress, camp or town. A reasonable supply of nourishment must be provided them by their captors, and they are regarded as being in the power of the government of the captor and not under the control of those who actually capture them.

All personal belongings remain in the custody of the prisoner, but arms, horses and military papers can be confiscated, these constituting booty.

Governments can put their prisoners of war to work, but only such work as accords with the prisoner's rank and capacity; also the work must not be excessive or relate to military matters, and in all cases must be labor be paid for.

A prisoner always lives in hope of being exchanged for a prisoner of his own government. The exchange is effected in accordance with agreements. In which time, place and method of exchange are fully detailed. This is generally that of strict equivalents, man for man, rank for rank, disability for disability.

An officer can obtain a greater freedom of movement or certain privileges while being a prisoner of war if he makes out a parole, a written or verbal promise. An officer giving his parole pledges his honor to refrain from a particular course of conduct, and if he makes a breach of this guarantee he is liable to the extreme penalty.—Pearson's Weekly.

Battleships Now and Then. A battleship today is not the same as a battleship in Nelson's day. The old wooden three-decker could only be destroyed by long and desperate close quarter fighting. It would stand hours of battering. It would take hundreds of shot and still be capable of fighting. But today one unlucky shot, one blow from a torpedo, and the great fighting machine is a heap of scrap iron.—London Graphic.

Weeping Willows. The weeping willow, so called (scientific name S. babylonica), is a native of China, from which country it has been taken over most of the civilized earth. It varies in height and dimensions according to climate and soil and invariably maintains its drooping habit, the chief cause of its attractiveness.—New York American.

Not Always Suppressed. "Times have changed for the better. Torture, for instance, is no longer allowed."

"I don't know about that. There are now families in this apartment whose children take music lessons." — Baltimore American.

The Duke Struck It. "The duke was about bankrupt when he married Miss Millym." "Then you don't think it was a love match?"

"It was a safety match from the duke's point of view." — New York Globe.

THAT COLD YOU HAVE

may bring sickness, doctors bills and loss of work; you know that serious sickness usually starts with a cold, and a cold only exists where weakness exists. Remember that.

Overcome the weakness and nature cures the cold—that is the law of reason. Carefully avoid drugged pills, syrups or stimulants; they are only props and braces and whips.

It's the pure medicinal nourishment in Scott's Emulsion that quickly enriches the blood, strengthens the lungs and helps heal the air passages.

And mark this well—Scott's Emulsion generates body-heat as protection against winter sickness. Get Scott's at your drug store to-day. It always strengthens and builds up.

14-51 Scott & Downe, Bloomfield, N. J.

What a Dreadnought Costs. Some idea of the fighting power of a Dreadnought may be gathered from the fact that the extreme range of its guns is twenty-five miles, while they can be very effective at a range of twelve miles. They are most deadly, however, at a range of between five or six miles.

The twelve inch gun of a Dreadnought is fifty feet long and if set up on end would be higher than many a country church tower. The cost of each gun is about $100,000, while each time it is fired $100 vanishes into the air.

As a protection against the guns of the enemy a Dreadnought is covered with armor costing $120 per ton, and as something like 4,800 tons are used in covering the vessel this means an expenditure of close upon $600,000.

Boilers and machinery at $225,000, motor and steamboats at $8,000, torpedo tubes at $3,000 each and torpedoes at $500 each, and $20,000 for searchlights and electrical fittings are other items in the bill which go to make a Dreadnought the costliest vessel afloat.—Pearson's.

Beds and the Kill. In his book, "Forty-one Years in India," Lord Roberts tells the following amusing story:

"A curious incident happened at the Alambagh. I was employed inside the inclosure when all at once I heard a noise and commotion some little distance off. Getting on to the roof, I looked over the plain and saw our troops firing in every direction. There was no firing, no enemy in sight, but evidently something was wrong; so I mounted my horse and rode to the scene of confusion, where I found that the innumerable flight of our troops was caused by infuriated bees, which had been disturbed by an officer of the Mulla's forces thoughtlessly thrusting a lance into their nest. There were no serious consequences, but the highlanders were heard to remark on the unsuitability of their dress for an encounter with an enemy of that description."

A Tinker Inspired Wagner.

A tinker has established himself opposite our house and stunned my ears all day long with his incessant hammering. In my disgust at never being able to find a detached house protected from every kind of noise I was on the point of deciding to give up composing altogether until the time when this indispensable condition should be fulfilled. But it was precisely my rage over the tinker that, in a moment of agitation, gave me the theme for Siegfried's furious outburst against the bungling Mime. I played over the childish quarrelsome Polter theme in G minor to my sister, furiously singing the words at the same time, which made us all laugh so much that I decided to make one more effort. This resulted in my writing down a good part of the first scene by the time Liszt arrived, Oct. 13 (1856).—Richard Wagner in His Autobiography.

Recreation and Mental Diseases. The problem of fatigue and its relation to efficiency is becoming more and more appreciated in our industrial institutions, so much so, indeed, that we may truthfully say that, in the United States at least, the art of work is being mastered to a degree little short of perfection. Not so much can be said with reference to our mastery of the art of play. Let us not forget that the art of play presents an important problem which requires serious effort for its solution. Relaxation from the stress and tension of modern American city life means much for our future physical, mental and moral health and efficiency. This is a dread nation, perhaps the most tired nation on earth.—New York Medical Journal.

British Life Guards. England's famous life guards were organized just after the restoration. They were recruited from the old cavaliers who fought for Prince Charles Stuart, and in 1661 they were formed into three troops, then known as the King's Own, the Duke of York's and the Duke of Albemarle's. At that time it was always demanded that one troop should be raised in Scotland in honor of the house of Stuart.—London Times.

One Way to Use a Poultice. "Did that onion poultice I sent you do you any good?" "Did me a heap of good."

"These external applications are of less efficiency." "I applied it internally. The onions smelled so good that I ate it."—Kansas City Journal.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

England's Army Rifle. Quite a number of people believe that cartridges are served out to the soldiers separated from one another. Cartridges are, however, usually given out fastened together in clips of five. The modern rifle used by the British army is known as a magazine rifle and holds two clips or ten cartridges in the magazine itself as well as an extra cartridge above the magazine, eleven rounds in all.

When the cartridge clip is forced into the magazine the fastening is removed, so that each cartridge when it reaches the magazine is separate from the others.

The magazine of the army rifle is nothing more than a detachable box containing a spring. This spring forces up one cartridge at a time into its position ready for firing. As a rule the ten cartridges in the magazine are only used in great emergency, as when the order for rapid firing is given to stop an enemy's charge. In the ordinary way the magazine, with its ten cartridges, is shut off from the rest of the rifle by means of a metal slide called the "cut off."—London Standard.

Spoiled the Scoop. The newspaper special, although always the cutest of the cut, is sometimes "scored off" by a colleague. For instance Sir W. H. Russell represented the London Times at O'Connell's trial in Dublin.

In those days the telegraph was unknown, and as his paper wanted to go one better than the Morning Herald, its great rival, Russell hurried back to London by special boat and train immediately the verdict was pronounced. As he got out of the cab in Printing House square a man in shirt sleeves, apparently a printer from the Times, came up and exclaimed: "So glad to see you safe over, sir. So they have found him guilty?" "Yes, guilty, my friend," replied Russell.

The Morning Herald came out with the news of the bare fact as well as the Times. The shirtless man was a smart representative of the rival paper.—London Father.

Mental Arithmetic. Reggie—My father, you know all about arithmetic, don't you? Father—Naturally. What is it you want to know? Reggie—Well, how many times what makes eleven? London Sketch.

OUR FIRST ELECTION.

Methods in the Days When Washington Was Chosen President.

At the first national election at which General Washington was chosen president only eleven of the thirteen states voted, North Carolina and Rhode Island not yet having entered the Union, and in only three—Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia—were popular elections held. In the other eight states the legislatures chose the electors. New York did not choose electors because of a feud between the anti-Federalist house and the Federalist senate.

One exciting incident was caused by the fear on the part of Alexander Hamilton that John Adams, who was on the ticket for vice president with Washington, was plotting to tie the vote, and thus by throwing the election into the national house of representatives elect the Father of His Country for president. So real was this fear in Hamilton that he dispatched messengers on horses to Virginia, Connecticut and New Jersey to stampede the legislatures of the latter two states to Washington.

So long did it take to gather news that Washington was actually inaugurated president before some of the remote counties in Virginia had sent in their returns. In this first election there was only one ticket and there was no campaigning. There were only about 3,000,000 inhabitants in the country at that time, and the whole cost of setting up the machinery of this presidential election is estimated at less than $100,000.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

No Time to Waste.

"Pa, if Mrs. Brown should come over and tell you that I had given her little boy a black eye, what would you say?"
"I really don't know, young man."
"Well, you'd better make up your mind quick; she's at the door now."—Detroit Free Press.

Too Generous.

"Do you like Miss Prattle?"
"Yes, she's so generous. Never keeps anything to herself and is always ready to give away even her best friend."—London Tit-Bits.

Rheumatism Yields Quickly To Sloan's

You can't prevent an attack of Rheumatism from coming on, but you can stop it almost immediately. Sloan's Liniment gently applied to the sore joint or muscle penetrates in a few minutes to the inflamed spot that causes the pain. It soothes the hot, tender, swollen feeling, and in a very short time brings a relief that is almost unbelievable until you experience it. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c. of any Druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

GLORIOUS INAUGURATION OF WORLD'S GREATEST INTERNATIONAL CELEBRATION ASSURES CONTINUED SUCCESS

WITH an attendance for the first week greater than the combined attendance for the same period of the world's expositions at Chicago and St. Louis, the Panama-Pacific International exposition at San Francisco has started on a career that the most conservative judgments predict will break all records for exposition success.

The exposition opened on February 20, 1915, 100 per cent complete structurally, and opened to an attendance of one quarter of a million people. From every state of the United States and from the nations of the world came critical visitors to pass on the merits of the celebration that had been so widely heralded. They found nothing to criticize. Every claim made by San Francisco and the exposition was fulfilled. It is safe to say that not a single visitor went away disappointed. The result has been that the advertisement by word of mouth, and by letters home and to friends—the most powerful form of advertisement—has been given the exposition. In consequence the transportation companies report a constantly increasing booking for travel to San Francisco both by land and water.

Exceptionally low rates have been given by the transportation companies from all points within the United States to San Francisco, offering many people an opportunity that could not otherwise be taken, of combining a pleasure journey to the exposition with a sightseeing tour through California and the West.

A feature of the exposition that has called for universal comment is the "action" that marks exhibits, every exhibit capable of operation by steam or electricity being shown in motion.

A flood of inquiries concerning rates and hotel accommodations has been received by the information bureau of the exposition since the news of its successful opening was flashed around the world, all such inquiries being given prompt attention. San Francisco and California are fulfilling their host duties and living up to the reputation the West has always had for hospitable treatment for the stranger.

HANDSOME SIXTY-PAGE BOOK ON THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION SENT FREE OF CHARGE TO ANY ADDRESS.

Those who are interested in this great exposition may obtain free of charge a handsomely illustrated book of sixty pages, reproducing the exhibit palaces in their natural colors and giving essential data about the exposition, San Francisco, California and the Panama canal. To obtain this book send a letter to the Manager, Bureau of Publication, Panama-Pacific International Exposition Grounds, San Francisco, Calif.

DURING A LULL IN THE OPENING DAY CEREMONIES AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION

The Panama-Pacific International exposition was opened by a wireless spark, dispatched by President Woodrow Wilson at Washington, and caught on the tendrils of a wireless aerial on the lofty Tower of Jewels at the exposition. Instantly the power was released in the mighty Palace of Machinery and the portals of the exhibit palaces opened. The scene is on the grand stand after the ceremonies had ended, Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane, Gov. Hiram Johnson of California, Mayor James Rolph, Jr., of San Francisco, President C. C. Moore of the exposition and a notable group of visiting dignitaries being seen in animated discussion of the epochal event. In the press box the correspondents are seen flashing to the world the news that the exposition had opened.

WHEN A QUARTER OF A MILLION OF PEOPLE INAUGURATED THE VAST PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION AT SAN FRANCISCO

Transportation reports show that every state in the United States and most of the nations of the world were represented in the great throng of 250,000 people who inaugurated the Panama-Pacific International exposition at San Francisco on February 20. This picture, showing the mighty South gardens, gives a glimpse of a small fraction of the opening day throng. In the first five days of its progress the exposition had an attendance larger than the combined totals of the Chicago and St. Louis expositions and the ratio continues in a degree to justify predictions of the most spectacular success for the exposition.

A Good Man For Comptroller

From the Wisconsin News, Salisbury, Md., March 18th, 1915.

While there are several candidates in the field for the nomination for Governor, no Democrat of State importance has yet been put forward for the Comptroller's nomination, notwithstanding the great importance of the office, especially at this time. There has been no period in the State's history when more care should be exercised in the selection of a competent man for this position than now. The finances of the State seem to be in a deplorable condition, and while the Comptroller is not responsible for the many extravagant laws which have been passed in the past four years calling for expenditures which have crippled the Treasury Department, a careful man in the Comptroller's office can have great effect in handling the funds available and in seeing to it that the different offices of the State do not waste the State's portion of the fees, but that the returns to the Comptroller's office shall be full and true. There has always been opportunity for extravagance in the various clerk's offices and other fee offices in the way of extra clerks and liberal allowances for many things which might have been done without and the Comptroller has it in his power to regulate all these things.

While we have not heard his name mentioned in this connection and we have no reason to believe he would consider the subject if presented to him, there is a most excellent man in the person of Mr. W. B. Copper, cashier of one of the largest banks at Chestertown, Kent county, for the position of Comptroller. Mr. Copper is one of the best known cashiers in the State. He has never held public office, but he has helped to build up one of the most substantial banking institutions in Maryland, and is known to the banking fraternity throughout the State. Mr. Copper is the kind of a man who would handle the finances of the State in an admirable manner. He is conservative and not allied with any of the State's political factions and could enter the office with hands free to give his full time to the duties. He would make a most excellent member of the Board of Public Works as he comes from a county with a large oyster interest and could be relied upon to treat this subject in a fair and impartial manner.

Mr. Copper is a man of fine personal appearance and would present a splendid appearance on the hustings. He has a manner which would serve him to good effect in making his campaign throughout the State, and he is rightly located as it is an acknowledged fact that the Eastern Shore should have either the Governor or Comptroller. As the last two Governors have come from the Eastern Shore it is very evident that Baltimore City and the Western Shore will make a most strenuous fight for this place on the ticket this year, hence the importance of the Eastern Shore having a strong candidate before the people for the position of Comptroller.

There may be other available material on the Shore for this place, but to find all the elements in one man to as completely fill the present needs of the Democratic party as can be found in Mr. Copper will be unusual and cause the party leaders much thought and work. If Mr. Copper could be induced to make his announcement as a candidate of the party for the Comptroller's position, the Democratic party would be most fortunate and the party leaders could be congratulated on their good fortune in securing such material.

To show the great importance of having the right kind of a man in the Comptroller's office at this particular time, when the present Comptroller, Mr. Emerson C. Harrington, has called the attention of the people of Maryland to the almost empty condition of the State Treasury, we quote the following editorial clipped from the Baltimore News of recent date, which in speaking of the sad condition of the Treasury said:

"How much of the blame shall be made to rest with the Legislature that has made appropriations without thought cannot be said. Some of it rests with the State's accounting agency that has so skillfully concealed the actual condition of the Treasury from the Legislature by its unintelligible analysis of the State's resources. To anyone who turns to Pages 22 and 23 of the State Comptroller's report for 1914, statements of probable receipts and disbursements during the present fiscal year, and endeavors to ascertain therefrom the probable amount of revenue available for administrative expenses, the obscurity will become apparent."

"Mr. Harrington now proposes, it is said, to adopt a modern, intelligent form of report. Better late than never; but meanwhile much damage has been done."

This shows very conclusively that for the next two years we need a man in the Comptroller's office with such experience in banking and business matters as will enable him to conduct the office in a way that would be free from such criticism and place the Legislature and the people in a position at all times to judge as to the effect of proposed measures involving taxation and expenditures.

Steamer Will Not Be Rebuilt

Mr. W. Heyward Myers, president of the Baltimore, Chesapeake & Atlantic Railway Company, one of the subsidiary lines of the Pennsylvania system, in the annual report of that company, just issued, says that in view of the company's financial condition and the unfavorable operating results of the year, it would be difficult, if not impossible, for the railroad to obtain on reasonable returns the $50,000 new capital to replace its steamer Maryland, which was recently burned, and that the Board of Directors has decided that "in view of this situation, and the questions arising as to the ownership and operation by railroad companies of steamship lines under the Panama Canal Act, to defer all steps looking to the rebuilding of the steamer, as the incurring of a future debt for that purpose under existing conditions would be unjustifiable."

Many Fires Caused By Locomotives

Of the 508 fires reported by the forest service as having occurred in 1914 on the national forest purchase areas in the White Mountains of New England and the Southern Appalachian, 319 or 60 per cent. were caused by sparks from locomotives. More than half of these fires, or 272, occurred in Virginia alone, and of these 227 were from locomotive sparks.

Three hundred and seventy-nine of the fires were confined to areas of less than ten acres each, and 296 were extinguished before one-quarter of an acre had been burned. The total loss amounted to $2,192 and the cost of fire-fighting to $1,300, an infinitesimal sum compared with the value of the timber and reproduction protected. As the areas swept by fire were mostly cut-over, the greater part of the damage was suffered by young growth.

Signs of Spring

It's not far off to Easter and every man and boy is thinking clothes. We thought out all your necessities a long time ago—we've solved your clothing problems in advance and offer you the answer any time you may call.

Is it a Spring top coat, as well as one of the very smart light weight suits which we are showing in a splendid variety of newest fabrics and styles? Is it a new supply of shirts, collars, scarfs, socks or shoes? And is it a new hat for the rusty old one—a hat to top the proudest array that any modern young King Solomon ever paraded in? Come here for whatever you need for Easter.

Hundreds of hard working people throughout the country will always remember Jared Flagg, Jr.

All that he asked was that you send him your money and he would make it pay 52%.

Many people believed Mr. Flagg and withdrew their money from the bank to send to him. Then the United States government closed in on Mr. Flagg and millions in savings were lost.

There is but one safe way to keep your money intact—deposit your earnings in our bank where it will draw compound interest.

We pay 3 per cent on Savings Deposit
