ANNAPOLIS:

Thursday, March 6, 1834.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

The President of St. John's College, takes this method to acknowledge the receipt of about two hundred specimens of Minerals, from J. N. Steele, Esq., N. Brewer, Jr. Esq. and other gentlemen, for the Cabinet of Natural Science. Similar contributions are solicited, from all persons who are disposed to aid in forming an extensive collection, at this place. Valuable specimens will be thankfully received, and deposited in the Cabinet, with appropriate labels, bearing the names of the donors; and it is requested, that the locality of every specimen presented, may be designated in writing.

Annapolis, Feb. 22d, 1834.

MR. KEENE'S "Sole Musical," on Tuesday Evening, was crowded with all the beauty and fashion of Annapolis, it went off with great eclat. We perceive by his advertisement that he gives his "Farewell" to-morrow Evening, and finishes the evening's entertainment with a Cotillon—several of our most respectable citizens &c. have kindly volunteered to be Managers—he is sure of a large and fashionable attendance.

At an Annual Meeting of the Taxable Inhabitants of Primary School District No. 12, in Anne Arundel county, held at their school-house upon the first day of March eighteen hundred and thirty-four, the following preamble and resolutions were by them unanimously adopted:

PREAMBLE—

In view of the immense benefit likely to be derived by the present system of primary education, (when properly conducted,) in the general dissemination and diffusion of useful knowledge of practical utility, we feel constrained by the love we have for our common country, for its future respectability and standing, and by the affection we bear for the rising generation, to offer the following resolutions:

Resolved unanimously, as the sense of this meeting, That in their opinion the present system of District Taxation is highly injurious to the plan of universal education—Therefore, Resolved, That the delegates from this county be instructed to make known the sentiments of this district to the honourable body of which they are members, and likewise to use their influence to increase the present county tax for the support of Primary Schools, to $70,000, and entirely to abolish district taxation.

Resolved, That these resolutions be signed by the Chairman, attested by the Secretary, and transmitted by the chairman to the delegates from Anne Arundel county in the legislature now in session.

Resolved, That the editors of newspapers published in Annapolis be requested to publish the foregoing preamble and resolutions once in their respective papers.

THOS. R. CROSS, Chairman.

HENRY H. BROWN, Secretary.

MEMOIR OF THE LATE HONOURABLE CHARLES CARROLL OF CARROLLTON.

In a former part of this memoir, we mentioned that the walnut tree which stood on the hill where it is contemplated to erect a mausoleum in memory of Mr. Carroll, blew down the fourth of July eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, but we were then mistaken as to the date; we have since been informed it was the third of July of that year. We also stated, that the last letter we received from Mr. Carroll was dated the third of October, in the same year; but we have found one of a later date, being the twenty-first of October, eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, which doubtless closed his epistolary correspondence. Having rectified these errors, we proceed to the accomplishment of our task. Mr. Carroll, during the latter portion of his life, intermingled not in the turbulence of party spirits, nor did he enter into the active measures which were either approved of or condemned accordingly as the one or the other party prevailed. Perceiving that our liberties were not endangered by the political strife which raged in all its virulence, he, when applied to, to know what side he took, replied, "I am a native of this country, and I am proud to be so; I am a citizen of this state, and I am proud to be so; I am a member of this church, and I am proud to be so; I am a friend of this country, and I am proud to be so; I am a lover of this state, and I am proud to be so; I am a supporter of this church, and I am proud to be so; I am a defender of this country, and I am proud to be so; I am a champion of this state, and I am proud to be so; ...in the name of God, and that there is no power except that which proceeds from God, which he signs with his name. Cohen asserts such "prophecy," as he called it, and makes this emphatic remark:—"For my part, I should say, I can attach no idea of word God, and cannot consequently be in him." This was printed on Saturday, February 16th, although the paper issues on Sunday; and on Saturday, on the very day such an avowal was made, under the benevolent sanction of his name, he was blown off in his laboratory, while making fulminating powder.

...head, learn, by an understanding of the Free Enquirer, was given to the society for phrenological studies; his arm, which, blown off, has not since, as we are told, found—Thus, his body has gone one his head another, and his limb another—erred, we may say, to the winds. Now, prophets may smile, freethinkers may sneer, and atheists may ridicule the idea of interposition or divine vengeance—all a right to make their comment. We state the fact, and say that they may, a singular coincidence of profession and atrocity. We never have applied the imputation of an atheist to a man who does not, in no matter in what rules of faith, is infidel. We are all infidels in some things, an Atheist believes in nothing—Our laws, in this free country, punish certain offenses against religion, such as blasphemy, indecent railings—they punish, not these offenses against society, but these public feelings—they are contra bonos—but we assume the fact that no law can punish a man for being an Atheist, because human tribunals should assume the power of punishment on a point which belongs to God himself. Besides, if there is no God, from infidelity—from open revellings against religion—there is none from Atheism, for there are seldom made to doctrines against all Nature cries aloud.

...intend no reflection on free inquirers by observations. We know many of them, and know them as worthy men, and we would trust, who have good feelings, moral principles; and while we look with respect and regret at their infatuation on this point, we would not abridge a single right they possess, as citizens, to believe in what they please, so that society and good government are not thereby injured. Paganism was a Jew, a well educated Jew—of nations on earth the last to renounce their chosen and favoured people—he brought them out of the land of Egypt—captivity and bondage—who was their father, and their pillar of fire by night to guide into their safe keeping the great law which now governs every civilized man—he who even now keeps them together distinct and separate nation for great oblation. To disclaim, and renounce, deny that God, is a more rare and extraordinary instance than to so live with him, and die without hope!—to openly the existence of God, and, in the same act, as it were, be hurried into his presence.

...men cannot believe, will not believe, let be silent, and not proclaim to the world thereby with the view of making converts.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.
Washington, Feb. 27th, 1834.
An official communication was this day received by the Department of State, from Mr. Martini, Charge d'Affaires of the Netherlands, announcing the total disappearance of Asiatic Cholera from the ports and other parts of that Kingdom; and expressing the confidence of his government, that any restrictions which may have been laid upon ships or goods coming from the said ports, in consequence of the prevalence of that disease, should be removed.

MURDER.
A man named Minors Cannon, formerly assistant engineer of the steamboat Pocahontas, Potomac, was found dead, in Little West-street, Norfolk, on Friday morning last. He was a severe wound on the body of the deceased inflicted by some sharp instrument; the testimony before the jury of inquest such, as to warrant the commitment of individuals, Wm. Taylor and Abraham Seman, as the supposed perpetrators of the act.

FOREIGN.

PORTUGAL.
Advices from Lisbon are to the 13th of January. The difference between the Government and the Duke of Terceira were settled, and Don Miguel had suffered considerably from sickness. No movement had taken place between the armies. It is stated that Don Miguel's forces were not more than 10,000 men, and that the fortifications are so strong that they could require a much greater force to dislodge them.

The Courier of Jan. 18th, speaks thus of the previous report respecting a contemplated movement in regard to the Portuguese situation:—
We are confident that the information concerning the talk of expedition to Portugal, as we communicated to the public, will be correct. Under the present circumstances, no such expedition will be sent, but should circumstances require it, England will send ready instantly to give any aid that may be necessary to her allies.

There is no truth in the statement which has been circulated in connection with this subject, that the ferocious of the non-committed officers of the Guards have been released.

Advices from Oporto of the 5th of January have been received, but their contents were important.

MR. KEENE.

Jeremiah B. Howard, and Harriet his wife, and others, vs.
Thomas W. Watkins, Adm'r. D. B. N. of Nicholas Watkins, Sen.

THE object of the bill is to obtain an account and settlement of the administration of the personal estate of Nicholas Watkins, Sen. late of Anne Arundel county, deceased. The bill states, that William Pitt Watkins, late of Anne Arundel county, died sometime in August 1828, leaving the orphans, Harriet, who has married the complainant J. B. Howard, and the other complainants W. I. Watkins, J. A. H. Watkins, M. E. S. Watkins, and O. P. Watkins, his heirs and representatives, who are infants; that said W. P. Watkins was the executor of the last will and testament of his father Nicholas Watkins, Sen. and after his death that the defendant became the administrator de bonis hominibus, upon a promise that he would charge no commission, but has since been allowed by the orphans court of said county $403.55; that at the sale of the personal estate of said N. Watkins, Sen. many articles were sold for less than their value by the fraudulent connivance of the said Thomas W. Watkins; that N. Watkins, Sen. by a last will and testament bequeathed to the said W. P. Watkins, all his estate of every kind whatsoever, to hold the same in trust for five years for the use of his children and grand children, and the profits thereof to be equally divided (after deducting all costs, charges, and expenses, and every debt the said executor might be called on to pay, and from and after the period of five years the said trustee and executor to deliver to the six children of his daughter Elizabeth certain negro slaves, and then to divide the rest of his estate after the expiration of five years among the following children, Isaac, Fayette, Sarah and the said William Pitt Watkins, in four equal parts; and that in the corrected final account of W. P. Watkins, passed by F. W. Watkins the said W. P. Watkins was allowed $302.75, which has not been paid by the said T. W. Watkins, who resides out of the state.

It is thereupon ordered, That the plaintiff cause a copy of this order to be inserted at least once in each of three successive weeks in some of the newspapers printed in Annapolis, before the twentieth day of March next, to the end that the said Thomas W. Watkins may have notice of the complainants application to the court, and of the subject and object of this bill, and may be warned to appear in this court in person or by solicitor, on or before the tenth day of July next, to show cause wherefore a decree should not pass as prayed.

ANNAPOLIS, THURSDAY, MARCH 13, 1834.

NO. 11.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JONAS GREEN.
AT THE BRICK BUILDING ON THE PUBLIC CIRCLE.
PRICE—THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM.
LEGISLATURE OF MARYLAND
HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

The clerk of the senate delivered the resolutions in favour of Nancy Jones, Sarah Moore, Nancy Coe, Sarah Simmons, Eleanor Mayhugh, Jane Claggett, Francis Horner, Eliza Nelson, widow of Roger Nelson, Eleanor Evans, Jane Roberts, severally endorsed, 'assented to,' ordered to be engrossed.
And, also delivered a petition of Achilles Albert, of Cecil county, praying for relief.

Mr. Wharton, chairman of the committee on which was referred an order of the house to examine the public property in the city of Annapolis, delivered the following report:
The committee appointed by an order of the house of delegates, to examine the public property in this city, have performed the duty assigned to them, and ask leave to report.

That they found the building adjacent to the state house, in a ruinous condition, and requiring immediate repair; and the wall around the public circle in such bad order, that suitable and prompt measures should be adopted to repair the same.

Your committee also found that it was the intention of the legislature, vide resolution of 30, Dec. session, 1818, 'to cap the wall with stone and to surmount this with an iron railing,' and to which appropriate gates should be added to exclude cattle.

And being fully impressed with the propriety of so improving, and the necessity of repairing the property, your committee recommended the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved by the General Assembly of Maryland, That the governor and council, be, and they are hereby authorized to cause, and let the out houses, and the wall around the public circle, to be improved and repaired in the manner aforementioned; and that the treasurer of the western shore, pay to the governor and council, such sum of money as may be necessary for the purpose.

Mr. Blakistone from the committee on grievances and courts of justice, reported a bill, entitled, an act in favour of Richard William Earle, Rachel Hambleton and Jacob Hambleton, which was read the first and second time by special order and passed.

On motion by Mr. Roberts, the amendments proposed by the senate, to the bill reported by him, entitled, a supplement to the act, to provide for electing the levy court of Queen Anne's county by the people, were taken up for consideration, read the second time and assented to, and the bill ordered to be engrossed.

On motion by Mr. Fountain, the amendments proposed by the senate to the bill entitled, an act for the regulation and improvement of the village of Denton, in Caroline county, and for other purposes, were taken up for consideration, read the second time, assented to, and the bill ordered to be engrossed.

Mr. Long from the committee on corporations, made a favourable report on the bill from the senate to incorporate The Maryland Steam Boat Company.

Mr. Blakistone, chairman of the committee on grievances and courts of justice, reported a bill, entitled, an act for the relief of Henry Johnson, which was read the first and second time by special order and passed.

On motion by Mr. Unkefer, the bill reported by him to authorize the laying out and opening a road through part of Frederick, Baltimore and Anne Arundel counties, was taken up for consideration, read the second time and passed.

On motion by Mr. Pratt, the house took up for consideration the bill from the senate, entitled, a supplement to an act entitled, an act to amend and reduce into one system the laws direct descents, the bill was then read the second time and passed.

On motion by Mr. Blakistone, the house proceeded to take up for consideration the bill from the senate, entitled, a further supplement to the act, relating to sheriffs and for other purposes.

On motion by Mr. Burchenal, the said bill was amended by inserting after the word 'Elior,' wherever it occurs, the words, 'constable or other officers.'

The said bill having been read the second time was then passed with the proposed amendment.

Mr. Palmer from the committee on grievances and courts of justice reported a bill, supplementary to the act, passed at December session, 1831, chap. 313, extending the powers of Executors of last wills, testaments, and for other purposes.

And, also reported a further supplement to the act to incorporate Emmittsburg, in Frederick county.

Mr. Ely reported a bill relating to free schools in the twelfth election district in Baltimore county.

Mr. Unkefer reported a bill authorizing the laying out and opening a road through Frederick and Baltimore counties.

Mr. Carter, of Caroline, reported a bill to abolish the levy court, and provide for the election by the people of commissioners for Caroline county, and prescribing their powers and duties.

And Mr. Parnell reported an additional supplement to the act, to provide for the appointment of commissioners for the regulation and improvement of Snow Hill, in Worcester county.

The house then adjourned.

Wednesday, March 5th, 1834.

Mr. Maffitt, chairman of the committee on pensions and revolutionary claims made favourable reports on the petitions of Patsy Blake, of Worcester county, William T. Hemphstone, of Montgomery county, Benjamin Fitzgerald, of Kentucky, Aquila Smith, of Kentucky, and Ami Claggett widow of Dr. Samuel Claggett, severally praying for pensions.

Mr. Peregrine made a favourable report upon the bill from the senate, entitled, an act to authorize the Mayor and city Council of Baltimore, to pass ordinances relative to Mount Vernon or Washington places.

Mr. Ely reported a bill, to make public a certain road in Baltimore county.

Also, reported a bill, to incorporate the Livingston Academy, in Baltimore county.

And, Mr. Palmer, from the committee on grievances and courts of justice, reported a bill, for the relief of George Carens, and Rebecca his wife, of Harford county.

The bill reported by Mr. Palmer, to incorporate the New Market Savings Institution, was taken up for consideration, read the second time, passed and sent to the senate.

The bill reported by Mr. Wharton, entitled, an act to incorporate a company to make a Turnpike road from Clearspring, in Washington county, to the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, was taken up for consideration.

The said bill was then read the second time, passed and sent to the senate.

On motion by Mr. Roberts, the house proceeded to take up for consideration the bill reported by him, entitled, an act to prevent the destruction of oysters in the waters of this state.

The said bill was then read a second time, amended, and passed.

The bill reported by Mr. Linthicum, to lay off a primary school district, in that part of the village called Elliott's Mills, being in Anne Arundel county.

And the bill reported by Mr. Carroll, to incorporate the town of Manchester and German town, in Baltimore county, under the common name of Manchester, were severally taken up for consideration, read the second time, passed and sent to the senate.

On motion by Mr. Dulany, with the leave of the house, leave was given to bring in a bill for the relief of Barnaby Brooks, now confined in Frederick county jail.

On motion by Mr. Brewer, the house took up for consideration the bill from the senate, entitled, an act to incorporate the Maryland Steam Boat Company.

The said bill was then read the second time and passed with amendment, and returned to the Senate.

The bill reported by Mr. Moore, entitled, an act supplemental to an act for the preservation of wild fowl in the waters of Swann creek, Spouta Narrows, Rumney creek, Bush River and Gunpowder River, in Harford county.

And, the bill reported by Mr. Horney, entitled, a supplement to an act to make valid a sale of the poor's house and public lands thereto belonging in Talbot county, were severally taken up for consideration, read the second time, passed and sent to the senate.

On motion by Mr. Carroll, the house took up for consideration the bill reported by him, entitled, a further supplement to an act relating to the people of colour in this state, passed at December session, 1831, chap. 281.

The said bill having been read the second time and amended, was passed.

The clerk of the senate returned the bill to unite Middletown, Keller's Addition, Groves Addition to Middletown, and Wise's Addition to Middletown into one, by the name of Middletown, and incorporate the same.

Also, the bill to authorize the levy court of Frederick county, to allow to Richard English of said county, a certain sum of money by him claimed.

And, also the bill regulating fences in Washington county, severally endorsed, 'will pass,' ordered to be engrossed.

Also, the further additional supplement to the act to erect Baltimore Town in Baltimore county, into a city, and to incorporate the inhabitants thereof, endorsed, 'will pass with the proposed amendments,' which amendments were read the first and second time, by special order, assented to, and the bill ordered to be engrossed.

Also, the bill for the reassessment and revaluation of all the real and personal property in Cecil county, endorsed, 'will pass with the proposed amendment, which amendment was read the first and second time, by special Maryland Gazette.

ANNAPOLIS: Thursday, March 13, 1834.

The following preamble and resolutions were, on yesterday, introduced into the House of Delegates of this state and read.

WHEREAS, the sovereignty of each of these United States, rests in the people, and any expression of the sovereign will should emanate, as directly as possible, from the source of power: And whereas, the government of the U. States is a compact among sovereign states, to which certain powers are delegated by a written constitutional charter, and from which all powers are withheld which are not expressly granted, or necessary to carry into effect the powers expressly granted, we, the immediate representatives of the people of the state of Maryland, (one of the parties to the constitutional compact in the formation of the government of the United States,) feel ourselves justified, and indeed called upon to declare, what we believe to be the will of the people of Maryland in the existing struggle between the Bank and the government of the United States.

Therefore, by the House of Delegates of Maryland,

Resolved, That the power of Congress to incorporate the Bank of the United States, if it be one of the powers granted to the general government, must be either so expressly declared in the constitution, or must be a power necessary to carry into effect the powers expressly granted.

Resolved, That no such power is expressly granted, unless it be expressed under the power "to coin money, and regulate the value thereof," which would be to make the word coin, and paper money, synonymous or convertible terms, contrary to the plain and obvious meaning of our language: That if it be necessary to carry into effect the granted powers, it must be to enable the government to collect, keep safe, and disburse the revenue necessary for its support.

Resolved, That in the collection and safe keeping of the public revenue, the Bank of the United States presents no advantages over well regulated State Banks; that it is only in disbursing the revenue by means of its multiplied branches throughout the Union, under the control of one head, by which domestic exchange is facilitated, that its advocates can support the plea of necessity, and justify its creation, under the constitution of the United States; that however much it may promote the general welfare in restraining the issues of state corporations, however much it may facilitate foreign and domestic exchange, and thereby benefit the mercantile community, if its existence be not necessary, and indispensable to the safe and regular operations of the government, the act of Congress creating it, is, in the opinion of the House of Delegates of Maryland, a violation of the constitution of the United States, and absolutely null and void.

Resolved, That while we acknowledge the facilities afforded to the government by the Bank of the United States, in the disbursement of the revenue, we do not admit that equal facilities cannot be obtained through the agency of well regulated State Banks, to which no constitutional objections can arise; and that the intention on the part of the Chief Magistrate of the Union, to give the State Banks a fair opportunity of showing whether or not they can effectually serve the general government, in the disbursement of the revenue, thereby to satisfy, if they be incapable, the constitutional scruples entertained by him, in common with a large portion of the people of the different states, merits the warmest approbation of the friends of state rights, and of a strict construction of the constitution of the United States.

Resolved, That in the very capacity, in which the advocates of the Bank of the United States see its greatest excellence, to wit, in its capacity to retain and regulate the issues of State Banks, the friends of State rights see displayed the most odious of its unconstitutional deformities, as well as the most alarming of its powers—a capacity, which, if Congress have the power to regulate the paper currency of the States, proves that they have transferred that power to an irresponsible corporation, if they have not, that they have thrown over the States a check not known to the constitution, which may be exerted at the will of a few irresponsible individuals, to the total destruction of the monied institutions of the states, or through them, to the ruin of their citizens, and the subversion of their political institutions.

Resolved, That in the existing state of embarrassment into which the whole union is plunged, in the cries of distress from every quarter, which assail the representatives of the people, and the President of the United States, in the memorials and petitions with which the desks of our representatives in Congress have been loaded, whether this embarrassment and distress be real or imaginary, whether they be the necessary consequences of the removal of the Government deposits from the Bank of the United States or not, we have proof, beyond the possibility of doubt, of the great and alarming power of this corporation, a power which, if brought to operate on the institutions and citizens of a single state would be able to control its elections, crush its institutions, or ruin its citizens.

Resolved, That although we believe the distress of the mercantile community, since the removal of the deposits from the Bank of the United States, has been very extensive, yet we believe that the panic endeavoured to be raised by the friends of that institution, has greatly added to the public excitement, that independent of the effort on the part of the Bank to operate on the public mind (by large cuttings of its discounts, and a simultaneous pressure on the State Banks,) and through that medium, on the representations of the people in Congress, thereby to correct its charter, the removal of the Government Deposits would have produced no greater curtailment by that Bank in its discounts to individuals, than could have been easily supplied by the increased capacity of the Deposite Banks to extend their accommodations; that the distress and consternation which have been spread over the whole trading community, have been wholly the work of the Bank of the United States, and its friends, not necessarily consequent on the removal of the deposits, but with the sole view of controlling the operations of the Government, and to prolong its own existence.

Resolved, That in calling the attention of Congress, at an early day after his election, to the unconstitutionality of the act creating, and to the extensive and dangerous powers of the Bank of the United States, when, too, that institution was in the full tide of its popularity, in putting its veto upon the law renewing its charter, and thus placing himself in opposition to this powerful engine of the aristocracy of wealth in our country, our Chief Magistrate has given an example of firmness, patriotism, and devotion to the interests of his country, which has few parallels in the annals of nations; that if there existed at first, a difference of opinion amongst his friends in Maryland, in reference to the removal of the deposits, there now remains none as to the impropriety of their restoration, and that in the struggle now pending between the Bank and the Government, our public functionaries may rest assured of the support of a large portion of the incorruptible freemen of Maryland, whose interest and feelings we represent.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded by the Speaker of the House of Delegates to the President and Vice-President of the United States, to the Secretary of the Treasury, and to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

Communicated for the Maryland Gazette.
MEMOIR OF THE LATE HONOURABLE CHARLES CARROLL OF CALVERTON.

In further developing the biography of Mr. Carroll, we shall advert, for the present, to that eventful period of American history, when great excitement was produced by us, was at that day denominated the proclamation and vestry act. This happened during our controversy with Great Britain being some measure mitigated, ample scope was given, under the then aspect of the country, for the engendering dissensions of an internal or domestic character; and these, like family feuds, which are generally productive of rancour, became considerably fomented accordingly as means were furnished for their existence. Mr. Carroll espoused, amidst those broils, the cause of the people, and with a champion so dauntless, they could not but be successful. Mr. Carroll on this well as other occasions, wielded a ready pen. In this contest he had to grapple with a powerful antagonist; but his cause was just, and however his opponent, Mr. Delany, under signature of Antlion, might have managed the subject, yet Mr. Carroll, under that of First Citizen, gained a signal triumph. In their opposition to the illiberal act, parliament, the inhabitants of Maryland manfully struggled for what they regarded the sheet anchor of their safety, the principle of resisting undue taxation. Goaded as they were by this dreadful state of things, they resolved, as became freemen, to resist the most trivial encroachments upon their liberties; since aware, that should they submit to the least usurpation in the incipient stages of the dispute, their adversary would arrogantly require of them a surrender, at intervals, of their dearest immunities. Here entered into the conflict they determined, possible, to weather the tempest; which did, and with what success, the result is made manifest. The incubus of oppression under the weight of which they groined, existed not so much in the naked imposition, as in the assertion of the parliamentary right of taxing. This circumstance formed one of the most prominent features of the controversy, and the fervour of American patriotism glowed beyond what it had until then experienced. Such was the feeling elicited by this untimely measure, that the colonial government were prepared for revolt. Nor did many years elapse before a revolution broke out, a revolution that in redemptive America, fused the brightest glory over the land—revolution that redounded to the lasting honour of the American people.

When we contemplate these magnificent scenes, designed as they are to perpetuate a nation's fame, we are led to the sublime reflection, that our country occupies an exalted position among the nations of the globe. From the epoch thus spoken of, to that of the American revolution, the public mind was in perpetual agitation; and this commotion chiefly to be ascribed to the then all engrossing topic of the proclamation already alluded to. Nor was any subject calculated to draw forth a greater exhibition of genius or valour, talent. Much invective was mingled with the other matters contained in the communications for the Maryland Gazette. This is the customary mode of waging a paper warfare, though we think argument exclusively, would be preferable.

What gave rise to the proclamation?—the officers' fees; and such was the impracticability of adjusting them, and the public mind and taxes for the support of the establishment, clergy, that the assembly was provoked. In this exigence his excellency Governor Black thought it expedient to regulate the fees; and accordingly issued his proclamation for that purpose.

NOVEL OPERATION.

A gentleman in this city, who has been for some time afflicted with what is called throat consumption, was on Sunday last subjected to a novel operation, under the direction of Drs. Jackson & Draper. The gentlemen had leeches applied by means of silver tubes to the inside of the throat, and the result has been, we understand, very satisfactory.

The application of leeches to the inside of the throat is entirely new, but we have no doubt of its utility in many cases. Philad. Gaz.

A GENEROUS ACT.

On Saturday week before last, as the Rev. F. E. Pitts, of this city, was a passenger on board the steamer Tobacco Plant, Captain Organ, a scene occurred, the description of which cannot fail to touch every generous heart. The boat was rounding to for the purpose of effecting a landing about 16 miles above Clarksville. The curvature in the course of the boat had made a proud swell in the water and a whirlpool near the wheel of the boat. The Rev. Mr. Pitts had just stepped out from breakfast upon the guards of the boat with a sear in his mouth, and saw a child about four years old, belonging to Mrs. Rama, Capt. Organ's sister, playing on the guards. The child was suddenly precipitated into the boiling waves near the wheel of the boat. Without waiting to give an alarm or a thought to his own danger, the Rev. Mr. Pitts plunged in after the child. As he struck the water the child had sunk; and while he was somewhat embarrassed with his overcoat floating up upon the waters, he watched the diving, caught the child as it came to the surface, and swam ashore with the senseless little sufferer, and had the happiness to see its suspended vitality return, and place it in the hands of its mother. Such was his possession of mind, that he kept his sear in his mouth until he reached the shore. The grateful feelings of friends at such a rescue may be imagined—they can never be described.

We are informed (says the Columbian Telescope), that on the 6th of this month, seven negroes belonging to Mr. Moses B. Livingston, of St. Matthew's Parish, were burnt to death, the cabin in which they dwelt being consumed in the middle of the night. The cause of the accident is not known. Mr. Livingston, was himself considerably injured, in endeavouring to rescue them, after the fire had made much progress.

The New York Journal of Commerce states that out of forty-six packet ships plying between New York and London, Liverpool and Havre, but two are now in port, (on Thursday last) both of which, in the ordinary course of things, ought to sail on Saturday. Our latest dates from Liverpool are 71 days old, London 72, Havre and Paris 75.

FROM OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT.

London January 25, 1834.

The political horizon of Europe is certainly overcast, and a tempest would seem to be brewing in the north, but a gleam of sunshine has just appeared, and given hopes that the storm will yet pass harmless over us. Every incident having the least political tendency is so fully discussed in the numerous papers, which I know you regularly receive from this country, that I shall not trouble you with further observations of my own, but proceed to the more peaceful theme of domestic affairs.

A death has of late been busy in high places, and several individuals are called to their last reckoning. Lady Lyndhurst, the wife of the former Lord Chancellor, died suddenly at Paris, in consequence of inflammation following a premature accouchment. The event was unexpected, and the courier who was sent expressly from Paris to apprise her noble husband of the sad misfortune, found the learned peer on the beach dispensing the laws of his country. The shock was most severe, as he was much attached to her; his Court was being conveyed to Lord Brougham, and immediately removed, although a publicist, and Lord Lyndhurst afterwards went to the King, and procured leave of absence for the afflicted husband, who immediately departed for Paris, to attend the funeral obsequies. The express performed the journey from Paris to London in 30 hours, and reached the metropolis in a chaise and four. Lady Lyndhurst was the widow of Lieut. Col. Thomas, who was killed at Waterloo; she was a very fashionable woman, and an efficient leader of the female Tory politicians. She has left three children. Lord Lyndhurst, it is well known, is the son of John Singleton Copely, the celebrated American artist.

Lord Grenville, formerly a distinguished politician, has also paid the debt of nature. He served many years in the Cabinet with Mr. Pitt and other eminent persons. You will find a sketch of his life in all the papers. Col. Wardle, the person who made himself so notorious in bringing charges against the Duke of York in reference to the noble Duke's acquaintance with Mrs. Clarke, has also died recently. He was latterly much reduced in his circumstances, and lived near one of the watering places, obtaining his support by procuring ass's milk for the invalids. Mr. Richard Martin, too, many years a member of Parliament, for Galway, in Ireland, is also dead. He was the person who procured the enactment of a law against cruelty to animals, and took such unwearied pains to carry the provisions of the law into effect. His humanity to the brute creation was singularly strong and romantic, and in him the poor donkeys have lost a good friend, and their drivers a great enemy.

A number of marriages in high life have lately taken place; but that which has caused the greatest sensation is that of Lady Ellenborough, celebrated for her beauty and her errors. It is of course known to you that she was divorced from her former husband in consequence of an affair with the Austrian Prince Schwarzenberg. She has since resided at Munich, and enjoyed the special friendship of his Majesty of Bavaria, and is now united to a nobleman (Count Benningau) attached to the diplomacy of that capital. She has been received by all the courts except the wife of the British Minister.

The Queen of the Belgians is again in an interesting situation, but reports are once more revived that she is not happy; happily, it is supposed, was strongly attached to an English lady at the time of his marriage with the French Princess. The Duke of Orleans is supposed to have expressed his displeasure on the subject to King Leopold, which led to some coolness.

The murderer of poor Caspar Hauser is still undiscovered. The King of Bavaria has offered a reward of 20,000 francs for the apprehension of the villain. Lord Stanhope, the foster-father of Caspar, has also offered a large reward for the same purpose,—he is deeply afflicted.

There are an immense number of English fashionables in Paris this winter—many of distinguished rank and beauty; the fair dames of Britain's isle bear away the palm from all others in their personal attractions, the profuseness of the expenditure, and the splendour of their equipages and appointments.

Several persons of some note are about to visit the United States—Sheridan Knowles being one; it is said that large offers have been made to him by Mr. Price for the American managers. Mr. K. you of course know, is an excellent actor as well as author. Miss Martinez will be positively with you in the course of the year. Your Bank question will afford much scope for her active and clever pen.

The Duke of Orleans is determined to visit the new world. He will depart in the spring, and pass seven months in America. Several distinguished savans accompany him. Joseph Bonaparte also returns.

[From the New York Commercial.] A LITTLE AT A TIME.

London papers two days since, that we announced yesterday, have been taken up from the ship Francis Dupau, Capt. Robinson. We add such items to the summary given yesterday, as appear to be worth noting.

PORTUGAL.

The latest accounts from Lisbon, which are to the 14th of January, are decidedly of a favourable nature for the constitutionalists, both with regard to the present conditions of the contending armies, and likewise the prospect of an immediate settlement of party differences, which have so long existed amongst the courtiers in Lisbon.—Some movements of an important and active nature, were expected shortly to be made against Santarem, where much discontent and sickness existed.

The following is from the correspondent of the London Courier, dated, Lisbon, Jan. 11.

'Some movement of importance is evidently in contemplation. The Duke de Terceira went to Cartaxo the day before yesterday, to take command of the army; and Saldanha, it is said, is to be the Minister of War. Others say that the latter is to take the command of a division intended to cut off the retreat of the Miguelites on the north side of Santarem, should they attempt to move that way instead of crossing the river in Alemtego. In the meantime the dissatisfaction of the foreign troops is hourly increasing, not only at the tardiness of pay, but at the small quantity and very inferior quality of their rations. Thursday morning the Scotch recruits at Val de Pereira paraded outside the barracks with pieces of rancid bacon stuck on the points of their bayonets, as for their rice they threw it out of the windows into the streets. Upwards of 200 of them have been sent to prison. Colonel Dodgin continues very ill, but is likely to recover. General Nepomuceno, the officer who commanded the attack upon the wind mills at Fozes and Torres Novas, is coming to Lisbon to be tried by Court Martial. It appears that on the night of the 3d inst. his troops were surprised by a strong body of Miguelite cavalry, and suffered very severely. On the 5th inst. 1500 Miguelites showed themselves in the neighbourhood of Alcobaca, but retired again on the advance of the constitutional forces.

'According to the report given by the Chronica, there were but a few shots fired, and no killed or wounded on either side. At present I can give you no further information; but next week will probably be very fertile in events, as there is every appearance that something important is intended to be done.—No hostilities have taken place on the south of the Tagus.'

The reported intention of England to intervene in the affairs of Portugal, gathers strength from the confirmatory tone of the Paris journals, which add a statement that the intervention is to be made in concert with the French Government—England to furnish six thousand troops towards the expedition.

SPAIN.

It is not certain that a new ministry had been formed in Spain, but the Paris journals of the 17th and 18th of January, contain reports that the Marquis de las Amarillas will be called upon to form a new Administration in Spain, and will be enabled by possessing also a seat in the council regency, to give a unity to the system of Government which the opposition of the council to the Ministers, has sometimes destroyed. There is as yet, however, no confirmation of the report, that he has actually received the appointment.—According to letters from Madrid, his accession to office would go a long way towards reconciling all parties, except the Carlists, and consolidating the Queen's government.

In regard to the movement of General Leander, a Paris paper, referring to previous advices, says—'We can now add as positive, that when the Queen's answer arrived at Barcelona, Gen. Llaner called together the Ayuntamiento, and laid the answer before it, which not being conformable to the wishes of the Catalonians, the Ayuntamiento resolved itself immediately to arm the 8th battalion of the National Guard, and to send a second message to the Queen, to declare to her that they were resolved no longer to obey the Government unless the present Ministry are changed, and unless the Queen gave a constitution.'

A letter from Madrid announces that the Queen, alarmed by the spirit which she sees manifested around her, has intimated an intention, to apply for the assistance of France to protest at the same time against the opposition of public opinion and the resistance of her Captains-General. This would be a foolish idea, to which the French Cabinet would give a suitable answer. We have nothing to sacrifice either to the Queen or to M. Zea, if the Queen and M. Zea will not act with Constitutional Spirit.

Several letters from Barcelona speak of the establishment of a Constitutional Regency in Catalonia.

GERMANY.

A letter from Vienna, December 30th, states, that the Austrian Government has concluded a treaty with Russia, containing precautionary stipulations, connected with possible changes in the Sublime Porte.

THE ADRIATIC.

A sweeping hurricane occurred in the gulf of Venice, on the 24th of December, doing great damage in the Road of Trieste. A Greek brig that was secured by a cable resisted for a long time the violence of the waves; but the cable at length breaking, she was driven on shore, went to pieces and sunk, all in a few minutes; the crew, partly swimming, partly holding by ropes, went to them, kept above water till the boat saved them. The water was filled with wrecks; fifteen ships were sunk, and very few escaped injury. Of the number of boats that were put out scarcely a single boat escaped. To judge by the quantity of wreck, a great number must have perished. The hurricane continued for three hours.

THE JOURNAL OF BELLES LETTRES.

A NEW AND STARTLING CHARACTER ADDED TO WARDIE'S CIRCULATING LIBRARY.

The Proprietor of this work, anxious to gratify his readers to as great an extent as his means will allow, respectfully announces to the public that the very liberal patronage he has received has enabled him to add a new feature to this periodical, which he believes cannot fail to prove interesting and valuable.

THE JOURNAL OF BELLES LETTRES, embracing three to four pages of additional new matter, will be given every week as an accompaniment to the Circulating Library, and will contain:

1. Early reprints of the reviews and notices of new books, from the weekly and monthly periodical press of London, &c. These reviews will be carefully selected with reference both to imparting correct information respecting such new books as are reprinted in America, and to convey literary intelligence in regard to works which rarely find their way across the Atlantic. As great exertions will be used to make this department instructive and entertaining, the proprietor is confident that it will be considered an important addition, by means of which his numerous subscribers will frequently avoid the expense of purchasing such books as are printed on the calculation that their titles or the reputation of their authors will sell the edition. This part of the Journal will embrace a considerable amount of extracts from new books of travels, memoirs, biography, novels, and in fact present a bird's eye view of new publications, early diffused through the Union, by means of the facilities of mail transportation.

The London Literary Gazette will be culled for this purpose, while the "Critical Notices," of the London Metropolitan, the Monthly New Monthly, the Gentleman's Blackwood's, &c., Edinburgh, Fraser's, and other Magazines, already regularly received by the editor, will be freely used.

2. Varieties, embracing literary anecdotes, new discoveries in science and the arts, sketches of society and manners abroad, literary and learned transactions, short notices of new books, and every species of information interesting to lovers of reading, with occasional specimens of the humorous departments of the London press, which are within the bounds of good taste, and are now published in no other journal in America.

3. A regular list of the new books published in progress in London and America.

4. Occasional original notices of new American publications, with extracts embracing their prominent features of excellence or defect.

No additional charge will be made for this great increase of reading matter. It will be contained on the pages of the cover of the Library, and therefore subject subscribers who receive their numbers by mail to no additional expense of postage.

A. WALDIE.

Several applications having been made to ascertain the manner in which the original department of notices of new books will be conducted, we take the present early opportunity of stating that, at least they shall most unequivocally be UNBOSSED. The presentation of a copy by the publisher shall not be a passport to praise, when the merits of the work do not warrant it; nor that our readers may be assured of two things: First—books shall not be noticed the next day after they are received; and, secondly, they shall not be reviewed before they have been read. We have no royal road to puffing, and will be the less likely, therefore, to fall into the error of an unlucky writer, who in his anxiety to be the first to blow the bellows of criticism, read the preface only of a duodecimo, and gravely entered his approbation of two chapters which, unfortunately for his critical acumen, had been omitted, while the prefatory reference to them had been, by mistake, retained! This predicament was worse than that of the London editor, who criticised some passages of Cook's acting, and found when he rose next morning, and his paper was all over London, that the play had been postponed.

For the rest, time must develop our course and our capabilities; in cases where the usual courtesy of the trade is not extended to this journal, unlike most of our contemporaries, we shall buy what books we want, and give to such as deserve it a careful perusal.

The prospectus, and some technical difficulties always attending the first issue of a new journal, make the present number but a partial specimen of its future promise.

LAND FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers at private sale a Tract of Land, near the city of Annapolis, containing about Eight Hundred Acres of Land more or less. This land adjoins the Farm of the late Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Esq. and is bounded on one side by Severn River, and Creeks, constituting good landings for vessels to take wood from the shore; there are on this land an almost inexhaustible quantity of wood, principally Pine, intermixed with Oak and Hickory; it has been estimated that thirty thousand cords of wood may be cut from this land for Market, and from its proximity to the different landings upon the river, will make it a desirable property to Gentlemen engaged in the wood business, or Farmers requiring this most indispensable article. The improvements upon this estate are indifferent, the soil is well adapted to the growth of Indian Corn, Rye, and fine Tobacco may be made upon it. Any person who may be inclined to purchase, is invited to view the premises; and the Terms, which shall be accommodating, can be known by application to me on Elk Ridge near Elliott's Mills, or to Robert Welch, of Bop, in the city of Annapolis, who will at any time show the premises.

MEMOIR OF THE LATE HONOURABLE CHARLES CARROLL OF CARROLLTON.

In resisting the proclamation of the Governor, Mr. Carroll added another to the laurels that composed the wreath of his name—a crown that was purchased at the price of his immense wealth. But he, regardless of self when the liberties of his country were endangered, boldly advanced in defence. Such was the man who has been assailed by the prejudices of party, and was early pursued as a victim on account of his religious tenets.

Mr. Carroll's progenitors settled in the then province of Maryland anterior to the present succession. His grandfather, Charles Carroll, emigrated to Maryland a little before the accession of the Prince of Orange, and during the continuance, as the historians inform us, of the regal government, he rose to high in the confidence of the Lord Proprietary, as to have conferred on him, at the year seventeen hundred and eleven, the office of Receiver General of the revenue.

Mr. Carroll, whose death was somewhat remarkable, he transmitted an inheritance, and an honourable name, by improvement of which the former acquired commanding respect and influence with the Catholic brethren of the colony. The subject of the present memoir has proved himself worthy of such an ancestry, as the tenor of his life has fully evinced. Blessed with a family whose will concurred with his fortune, bestowed upon him advantages in education, and by few at that day, he imbibed his classic instruction in the most approved manner of France, and derived his legal acquirements from the Temple at London.

By the means thus afforded him for the pursuit of that erudition which was to direct the councils of the nation, in conjunction with his similarly situated, he displayed that ardour, so essential in times of difficulty, and of dissipating his hours in frolic or dissipation, and squandering his energies in the pursuit of idleness and its attendant vices, he employed himself in the nobler pursuit of honour and usefulness. He possessed, it seems, every impulsion to allure him from academic shades to the pursuits of his countrymen, were he inclined to the seducing spell. It was as a soldier, fortunate for him, that his mind was a different and more laudable bias; had he followed the tempter, he might have become so infatuated that he would have never, when too late, to resist would have been practicable. Rarely do we find an instance of a young man rolling as it were in ease, passing his days in the storing his mind with scientific knowledge—in vindicating the rights of the people—in sustaining the rights of the people—in sustaining the rights of the people—in sustaining the rights of the people.

Completing his studies, Mr. Carroll resided to the land of his nativity in seven hundred and sixty four, when about thirty-seven years of age; and although his impressions, as is said, excluded him at that time, from the provincial councils, yet participated in the popular sentiment that led the province in regard to the obnoxious stamp act, and the no less odious tax on commerce. These measures met with a successful opponent in so experienced an adversary; nor had Mr. Carroll to contend with measures themselves alone, but to enter his likewise against the assertions, Mr. Carroll's rival when combating the proclamation of his excellency Governor Eden. A year over a half holding the station, or occupying the eminence which Mr. Dulany did, something for Mr. Carroll's friends to be proud of.

MAJOR ANDRE.
Editor of the Albion:
I request as an act of justice that you give an early insertion to the letter herewith, which I had the honour to receive from Mr. Thatcher. It not only, in my mind, should have been in the minds of all who may read my narrative, or have through other means heard the charge, render inaccurate all whose duty required their attendance at the trial referred to. Through this medium I tender my sincere thanks to Mr. Thatcher for his well timed communication. I shall forward to the Editor of the U. S. Service Journal, in London, so that the nation may circulate wherever the state has reached.

I have the honour to be, &c.
JAMES BUCHANAN.
Consulate, New York, March 7, 1834.

South, Mass., February 25th, 1834.
Mr. Buchanan, Esq. British Consul.
I beg you will pardon this intrusion of a stranger, since the object is an explanation of a circumstance in which I perceive you, in common with the community at large, have taken a deep interest. I allude to the execution of the late Major Andre, and within melancholy scene with emotions of sympathy which will never be obliterated from my mind. In a journal in which I recorded occurrences at the time, and since published, I asserted that he was dressed in his royal regimentals, and buried in the same. This was my impression till recently it has been called in question, in consequence probably of a publication from you, stating that when the remains were disinterred under your direction, no indications were found corroborative of the fact. Hence you readily inferred that Major Andre was outrageously robbed of his uniform. Anxious as well to establish my own correctness, as to remove the opprobrious imputation from my countrymen, I was induced to enter promptly into the investigation of the subject. And it affords me infinite satisfaction that I have been enabled to procure a document that will exonerate those concerned in the transaction, and place the whole affair in its true light. In the "Continental Journal and Weekly Advertiser," Oct. 28th, 1780, printed in Boston, by John Gill, there is a letter dated Tappan, Oct. 2d, the very day of the execution, detailing the particulars, in which it is expressly said, "He was dressed in full uniform, and after the execution his servant demanded his clothing, which he received. His body was buried near the gallows." This confirms the correctness of my assertion that he suffered in his regimentals, but not that they were buried with the body. I had retired from the scene before the body was placed in the coffin, but I have a perfect recollection of seeing him hand his hat to his weeping servant, while standing in the cart. It is well known that Major Andre was indulged with permission to send into New York for his clothes, and that they were brought to him by his servant. It was perfectly natural that the servant should desire to be possessed of his master's clothing, and there could be no kind of objection to his receiving them. I have been highly gratified by the perusal of an extract of your letter, published in the New York Albion, which contains a very interesting detail of circumstances attending the exhumation of the remains of the Major Andre, in the year 1821. We are not to be surprised that you felt an anxiety to ascertain the fact, whether the remains of this distinguished officer were deposited in the uniform dress, as a rumor was prevalent that he had been stripped, and from the result of your close examination you justly infer the negative, for undoubtedly metal buttons would have been in a state to be recognized, although forty one years had elapsed; but your consecutive inference must be considered entirely gratuitous. Your words are, "How far these facts accord with the rumors adverted to, others may judge; but it is useful that all these facts should be brought to light, as it may reasonably be inferred, that if stripped, those who permitted the outrage, or who knew of it, had no idea that the unfeeling act they then performed would be blazoned to the world near half a century after the event; or that the future historian should hold up such a procedure to all honorable men." It is now rendered unquestionable that the uniform was delivered to the servant and returned to New York, if therefore, in your view, Sir, any stigma is still attached to those concerned in that memorable transaction, let me entreat that the above statement may induce you not only to obliterate the impression, but to promulgate a conviction to the "future historian" that no part of that procedure can appear censurable in the view of "honourable men."

I subscribe myself with respect,
Your very humble servant,
JAMES THATCHER, M. D.

STEAM BOAT WILLIAM PENN.
The undersigned a committee of the Board of Directors of the New Castle & French Town Rail Road Company, having examined into the circumstances connected with the destruction by fire of their fine boat Wm. Penn, on the evening of the 4th inst. which was unfortunately attended with the loss of four lives, submit the following as the result of their investigations:

About half past 5 o'clock on the evening aforesaid, the William Penn, on her return from New Castle, having on board about one hundred and fifty passengers, and being about one mile this side of Gloucester Point, was discovered to be on fire, the flames bursting out with great violence on the windward side of the larboard boiler, near the after end of it. The Committee are satisfied that it was communicated to the wood near the boiler by means of a fissure through the sheet iron work of one of the return flues of the furnace which had either escaped the vigilance of the workmen, by whom it had been examined two days previously, or which was of still more recent origin.

The wood which first became ignited was unusually dry, and therefore burnt with great rapidity, and the combustible nature of the bulk heads, and slight upper deck of the boat, together with a strong westerly wind, aided its progress, so that in a few minutes but little hopes were entertained of being able to save the boat. The efforts of Captain Jeffries, and his crew to do so seem nevertheless, not to have been abated while the slightest chance of success remained. A hole was cut through the upper deck, and a large quantity of water was thrown on the fire, without producing any sensible effect: the hose was rigged to the forcing pump near the bow of the boat, but so great was the pressure of passengers in its vicinity, that it could not be worked, and in the mean time the progress of the flames and the alarm had reached such a pitch, that nothing remained to be done but to run the boat ashore, in order to preserve the lives of the individuals on board. The tiller rope having been burnt, this was promptly effected by means of the starboard engine—when all the passengers (except three, who jumped overboard into deep water and were drowned) were safely landed. The bodies of those who threw themselves into the water, were immediately recovered and conveyed to the city, where every effort was made that medical skill could devise to reanimate them, but in vain.

One of these unfortunate persons was in the bow of the boat out of danger, and rushed towards the stern through the flames, to meet his death by precipitating himself into the water, although begged by Captain Jeffries to remain where he was.—The fourth passenger who is deceased was in feeble health and died the day succeeding the disaster. It is supposed in consequence of having been in the water.

Several horses, a portion of the mail, and the largest part of the baggage, were saved, and no doubt exists in the minds of the committee that all the passengers might have been rescued without difficulty but for the panic which is natural, and perhaps unavoidable on such an occasion. It appears, however, that the greatest presence of mind was preserved by engineers, firemen and crew generally, one of whom held up a portion of the bulk head which the fire had forced out, and called to the passengers to go forward, whilst he thus confined the flames and prevented the passage from being interrupted.

As soon as the fire was discovered, the safety valves were raised, to prevent the additional danger of explosion of the boilers. Captain Jeffries remained on board exerting himself to save the property of the passengers after all were out of the boat, and was himself the last person to leave her.

The committee, in giving these details of the above melancholy disaster deem it their duty to express their thanks, on behalf of the company, to the master-ferryman and captains and crews of the steam and other ferry-boats, both of this city and Camden, as well as to many others, who so promptly repaired to the William Penn, and rendered every assistance which the nature of the case would permit.

The committee, after a very close investigation, are enabled to state their decided conviction, that the persons already announced as dead, are all that lost their lives on this distressing occasion. On the whole, the committee consider the fire to have been entirely accidental; and while they are of opinion that it ought to induce additional care on the part of those engaged in steam navigation, they are unable to perceive that any want of prudence or caution can be attributed to Captain Jeffries, or the persons employed under him, on the contrary they deem Capt. Jeffries entitled to every confidence, and believe that his conduct in the trying circumstances in which he was placed was deserving of the highest praise.

JAMES LEFEVRE, S. NEVINS, WM. D. LEWIS, WM. J. WATSON. Committee.

SAGACITY OF THE HORSE.
We learn that several horses were on board the William Penn, at the time of the conflagration. Among them was one noble animal who, when the flames spread, appeared to be completely conscious not only of his danger, but that his only dependence was on human aid. He followed the Capt. Jeffries, who was the last to leave the boat, like a dog from one side to the other of the boat. At every movement of the Captain the intelligent animal was at his side, manifesting, with singular intelligence, his apprehension and dependence on the aid of Capt. Jeffries. The latter, at length noticed him, and leading him to the side of the boat said, "my noble fellow you must leap this railing or be lost." To the surprise of the captain, the animal appeared to understand him, and leaping the railing plunged into the river and swam to the shore and escaped.

Six houses on Hudson street, New York, were destroyed by fire on Saturday morning. Five of them were the property of Mr. J. M. Graham, and one was owned by Mr. A. L. Lough.

The South Carolina Court of Appeals have appointed a Committee, composed of five among the most distinguished of the members of the bar of that state, to draw up a report prescribing the course of study for law students to prepare them for admission to the bar.

The Lord Nugent, said to be since the death of Lord Greenville the deputy of the secret of Justice, is Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands, and now at his post in the Mediterranean.

We have seen a Letter from an officer on board the U. S. ship Delaware, to a Member of Congress, dated at Port Mahon, Dec. 22, which says—"We are anxiously waiting the arrival of Comm. Patterson, in the frigate United States, who will transfer his broad pendant to this noble vessel. The last intelligence of him left him at Malta, bound to Smyrna. We are also waiting for the arrival of the schooner Shark and sloop of war Concord, (from the United States,) by which arrivals we are eagerly expecting news."

$60 REWARD.
RAN AWAY from the subscriber living on the north side of Severn river, Anne Arundel county, on Monday 17th March inst. a NEGRO MAN named Lewis Giles, about five feet seven or eight inches high, 35 years of age, black complexion; he is very much addicted to drink, and when drunk has a very simple expression, and is remarkably humble. His clothing consisted of a black frock Coat very much worn, likewise a Roundabout and Pantaloons made of Devonshire kersey. The said Lewis had a wife living with Mr. Richard Crisp on the Patapsco, with whom he parted some time ago, and likewise two or three children on the farm of Mr. Charles R. Stewart. He is no doubt lurking in the neighbourhood of one of the above places. He has many relations in Baltimore where he is very well acquainted, having been my market man for several years. He has likewise some ten or twelve Dollars, resulting from the sale of my wool, which he has no doubt appropriated to his own use. I will give Thirty Dollars if taken in the county, and the above reward if taken in the state, and all reasonable charges paid.

From the Tusculoosa (Ala.) Intelligencer.
POETIC CORRESPONDENCE.

Although the following lines are copied from a Lady's Album, let not the grave reader pass them over as "trifles light as air." The name of the gentleman will be sufficient to induce the reader to peruse his verses with interest. The name of lady we are not permitted to expose before the Gazette-reading world; but her lines will recommend themselves without a name. We think indeed they deserve nothing from comparison, in being placed alongside of those of the author of the Star-spangled Banner.

TO MR. F. S. KEY.

Soft, gentle fairy, now my Album take
I place it on his table e'er he wake,
Whisper that a maiden, all unknown,
From the poet's hand a trifling boon
Has perchance to him, but oh! not so
Her whose heart has thrilled long ago,
His inspiring lays came to her ear,
And the stranger's name an interest dear
And girl may yet be bold to admire
A poet's fervor, and the Patriot's fire—
"Not she," though magical their power,
By cannot brighten woman's sudden hour;
She, the happiest, has sudden's bliss,
Her life's pathway are heretofore flowers,
And her heart's spirit feels as if by thee,
At her own will, on this earth would be
Thine—for all—no happy destiny.
At Patriot! Thou mayst write for fame,
By a tender and holier name
All these—Christian! write thou here one lay,
To me to read and treasure when thou'rt away.
Tusculoosa, 10th Dec. 1833.

TO MISS

Is it not a thousand miles apart,
Lay of mine e'er touched a gifted heart?
Gleamed the eye of beauty? won her smile?
Remembered for all the poet's toil?
But facing smile, that brighten'd eye,
Tells the heart's ecstacy,
And not a word I need to see—
A maiden's smile the gift shall be—
More esteemed and cherished prize
Than first smiles or brightest eyes.
This trophy of the poet's power,
Lies on many a lone and distant hour
From the fair, howe'er bestow'd, 'tis great,
And looks, outspeaking words, 'tis sweet,
When she breathes in bright and polished lay,
From a kindred heart, this is praise.
Are not strangers—in our hearts we own
That must ever beat in unison;
Same touch wakes them; in all we see,
Joy or fear, we owe a sympathy.
Look where Nature's charms in beauty rise,
The same transports gladden in our eyes.
Joys of others cheer us, and we keep
Joy to reap with those that weep.
In this, that in the impassioned hour,
Lives to the sound of the power,
Sweeth flows the stream of song,
And make it, captive to his will,
With all his emotions thrill.
We tie that binds us—'tis the glow,
'Gleaming warmth' of heart that Poets know.
Are not strangers—Well thy lines impart
Patriot's feelings in the Poet's heart.
Even thy praise can make me vainly deem
I was the Poet's power and not his theme.
From below they are lost, owing to being Thrown back by the length of the Latin cross,
And consequently sunk behind the mean elevation of the front, so that this noble dome is perhaps no where seen to so little advantage as from that point, in which it should appear to the most—advantage the piazza of St. Peter's.

We ramble about and rested ourselves on the marble seats which are commodiously placed upon the leads; and we might make no doubt, have made many grand and sublime meditations; but a ridiculous idea, which unluckily entered some of our heads, that the great cupola, with all the little ones about it looked like a hen with a brood of chickens, completely put all such ideas to flight. What simpletons must they have been that they could find nothing better to think of on the top of St. Peter's! Methinks I hear you say.

We commenced the ascent of the great dome by a succession of staircases, ingeniously contrived, and from which passages lead out both upon its internal and external galleries. One of the former, like the whispering gallery of St. Paul's—as if to verify the proverb that walls have ears,—carries round a sound, inaudible to the nearest bystander, clear and distinct to a listener on the opposite side of its vast circumference.

We began to have some idea of the immense height we had already gained. The mosaic figures of the saints and apostles emblazoned on the vaulted roof, were now so near as to stare upon us in all their gigantic proportions, and from the highest gallery we looked down into the fearful depth of the church below, upon the minute forms of the human beings, who like embeisms, were creeping about in it. How contemptible did they look from hence! And is that diminutive speck—that insignificant nothing—lost even in the nightness of that fabric himself has raised—is it that he who has called forth these wonderful creations of art, and made nature subservient to his will, to adorn it with beauty and with majesty? Is that the being whose ambition would embrace the universe—whose littleness and greatness at once call forth contempt and admiration? Strange compound of a divinity and a brute—made equally to the worm and to the god—made but a little lower than the angels; and yet, but a little raised above the beasts that perish; a creature of clay, endowed with a heavenly soul—a mortal, destined to immortality—Man is, indeed, "the glory, jest and riddle of the world!" But if I begin to moralize about man, we shall never get to the top of St. Peter's.

In the course of our progress, we walked round the external cornice of the dome, which is so broad, that though there is no fence round its edge, three or four persons might walk abreast with perfect safety. We were informed that it is half a mile in circumference; but I would not guarantee the truth of this statement.

At last by flights of very narrow stairs, and long bending passages, sloping inwards to suit the inclination of the rapidly narrowing curve, we reached the summit of that astonishing dome, to which we had so often looked with admiration from below; and, perched at a height above the flight of the fowls of heaven, we enjoyed the far extended and interesting prospect over mountains, flood and plain.

The beautiful amphitheatre of hills, which encloses the Campagna, stretching round the blue horizon on three sides; the pointed summits of the loftier Apennines behind which alone were wreathed with snow—as if winter had enthroned himself there, looking sullenly down on the plains and verdant hills not subject to his sway;—the Tiber, in its long sinuous windings through the waste,—like a snake coiled up in the desert, betrayed by its patening surface, far beyond it, the desolate silver where Ostia once stood; and where the spot waters of the Mediterranean were now gleaming in the sunbeams; Rome at our feet—her churches, her palaces, her dark and distant ruins; the rich verdure and golden fruit of the orange gardens of her convents, far beneath us, contrasting with the deep shade of the mournful cypress;—such a scene as this, fanned with the pure fresh blowing gale, as mild and soft as the breath of summer, that delighted every sense, and comforted by that clear blue sky of ethereal brightness and beauty, that words can never paint—Such a scene as this would surely awaken some admiration, even in the coldest heart!

We enjoyed it in perfect security, the top of the dome being surrounded by a railing, which is indiscernible from below. We were at the base of the ball, which surmounts the dome, and forms its upper ornament, and certainly had no wish to emulate the adventurous French lady, recorded by Eustace, who climbed to the top of it, but unfortunately for our peace, we had in our party a naval officer, who, clambered up the aerial looking ladder that is fixed round it, with as much ease as he would have run up the shrouds of a man of war, and not satisfied with this exploit, contrived, by some extraordinary process, to hoist himself up the smooth polished sides of the metallic cross, and actually seated himself upon its horizontal bar!

For his safety we entertained no fears. He had been fished on the giddy mast, and cradled in the storm; but we trembled to see his example followed by almost all the gentlemen who were with us; not that there was any thing to be gained, or seen by it, but that they would not on any account be outdone; and then there was the future dear delight of boasting that they had stood on the top of the ball of St. Peter's—cheaply purchased at the risk of breaking their necks. We were therefore doomed to see these silly men, one after another, go up this terrible place about half of the way round the lower convexity of the ball, in a posture nearly horizontal, with their heads downwards, much as fly creeps along a ceiling; we observed the secret fear and agitation painted on their countenances, and knew that a moment's giddiness, a single false step, most precipitate them down a height that it was agony to think of—but we durst not speak. More lucky than wise, however, they all descended in safety, and we, resolved to do something in our turn, went up into the inside of the ball—an enterprise by no means difficult or dangerous, but somewhat tedious; one person only being able to ascend at once; and as our party was rather numerous, by the time the last had got up, the first was nearly baked to death; for this great brazen globe was heated by the powerful rays of an Italian sun, to the temperature of an oven. In this delightful situation we began to "God save the king," in full chorus, but long before it was concluded, the loyalty of most of us had melted away, and we were almost tumbling over each other's head down the narrow ladder—far more eager to get out than we had ever been to get in.

Although this ball looks from below no larger than an apple, it can contain in the inside about eighteen people, and we calculated that even more might be packed in it,—if they did not suffocate.

It is impossible to form any idea of the immensity of St. Peter's without going to the top. The long-winding paved road that ascends to the leads, as if to the summit of a mountain; the amazing extent of roof; the vast scale on which every thing is constructed; the endless height to which you afterwards climb by staircases and ascending passages to the top of the dome, from which, as if from heaven, you look down on the earth, scarcely able to discern the human beings upon its surface; all this, indeed, may give you some idea of its stupendous size, which from below you can never conceive, and which I am sure, my description will never make you understand.—So adieu!

ON CUTTING WOOD FOR VARIOUS USES.

There has been much diversity of opinion relative to the time of the year most proper for cutting wood for timber or fuel. Godsell's Farmer of the 20th ult. observes that where durability is the object, timber should be cut at that season when there is least sap in it, say in February; but where it is for the purpose of clearing land, and the timber to be cut is of a kind likely to sprout, then it is desirable to have it cut when there is most sap in it, as that not only prevents the stumps from sprouting, but they rot much sooner than when cut in February.

The opinion of Mr. Godsell is corroborated by a writer from the New York Farmer, in a communication republished in the N. E. Farmer, vol. 10, pp. 237, 238. In this it is stated, "we do not seem sufficiently aware of the range of expansion and contraction of green and growing wood, or the extent of variation in bulk expanded or contracted by heat or cold. When occupying the least space the wood is of course most dense and compact, and it has then the least possible quantity of sap in it. More than fifty years ago my father had occasion for a barn floor, for use in winter, the British having been so managed that the farmers of the north could return to their farms, on doing which his was destitute of a barn floor. In the depth of winter, as the only alternative, he cut down—felled as the paper farmers say, large red oak trees, had them sawed into two and a half inch planks, and laid his floor, perfectly green, expecting to lay them over again when they got seasoned and shrunk as he supposed they would do. This was all done in the severe cold of a northern winter, and that floor has never yet been overhauled, nor have the planks opened a seam. The sap was all in its winter quarters in the roots under the blanket of the muck, and of course could not be in the tree, which was compacted into the smallest possible space. The troops of winter, in these days, were driven with tremendous force.

From all these considerations, and facts, (I could cite multitudes of similar facts,) I come to the conclusion that the proper time to cut wood for timber is when the sap is least in quantity in such wood, and when this is least likely to lead to a fermentation. The more saccharine matter it has in it, the more likely it is to lead to this process, as well as generally, the more sap. The sugar maple, which abounds in this quality, if cut immediately after the growth of wood of the year and stripped of its bark, becomes even very durable as fence posts, if not set till thoroughly seasoned. The same is also true of hemlock; and several other kinds of wood, but they must be well seasoned, before set into the ground, as all fence posts should be. When wood occupies its least possible space, it is a good time to cut it both for fuel and timber.

The late Col. Pickering, in an essay on "The Felling of Trees for Timber," published in the New England Farmer, vol. 1, page 17, gave certain facts which led him to believe that the best time for felling timber trees, for durability, was when their sap was vigorously flowing." Other writers, too numerous to be here quoted, have also recommended May and June, as the proper months for cutting down timber trees, where durability is the object. We will, however, quote another passage from Col. Pickering's essay above referred to.

"Accident threw in my way the late Oliver Evans' book on the construction of mills," to which was subjoined a treatise of a Mr. Elliot, a mill-wright, on the same subject.—Turning over some of the leaves of this treatise, I lighted on the passage in which the author directed hickory timber, intended for the cogs of wheels, to be cut when the sap was running, that they might not become powder post."

Col. Pickering adverts to the case of a farmer, the well pole (or sweep) of whose well happened to break at a very busy time, and to supply its place he cut down the first small tree, which came to hand; and this was a white birch. The sap then running freely, he put up his pole, and it lasted seventeen years. Had he put it up with the bark on, it would probably have rotted in a year; the closeness of the bark would have prevented the escape of sap. A close coat of paint laid on unseasoned wood operates like the close bark, by confining the sap, and hastening the decay."

Dryness is favourable, and moisture unfavourable to the durability of timber. Green and growing timber has less moisture in winter than in spring or summer; but its pores being less open in cold than in warm weather, it cannot so well become dry before it becomes rotten. But in spring, summer, and perhaps the forepart of autumn, the pores of green wood are comparatively open, the moisture more easily exudes or escapes, provided said pores are not sealed by the bark. If one wishes to cut wood, and proposes to let it lie, without being deprived of its bark, winter is his time with reference to durability. But if it is proposed to strip the bark from the tree, the time when the bark peels most easily, will, be believe, be the season in which other things being equal, the timber will endure longest.

If it is wished that when wood is cut, the tree may sprout, and reproduce another cutting of timber or fire wood, it is best to conform to the practice of General Newhall, of Lynfield, Massachusetts, who observed as follows:

"Having woodland, from which I have cut, annually, for several years past, from twenty to fifty cords of wood, it has been my practice to have it cut at the time and in the manner that would best insure a strong and vigorous growth of sprouts. To effect this purpose, I never allow a tree to be cut till after the autumnal frosts have caused the leaves to fall, and the sap to descend to the roots, nor later in the vernal season than in the month of April. The manner of cutting, is to leave the stumps nearly on a level with the surface of the ground, from which the suckers are much more strong and vigorous, and less liable to be injured by high winds, than a growth from stumps cut twelve or fifteen inches high, as is the practice of some.

"Pursuing this course, I have never been disappointed; and have now on land from which trees were cut in the midst of winter, a growth of sprouts, of the most vigorous and promising appearances.

"Respecting large trees, the growth of centuries, cut them at whatever season you please there is scarcely one stump in a thousand that will produce suckers."

In the community where fuel is an expensive article, every proprietor of woodland should manage it in such a way, as not only to be profitable to himself, but, as shall preserve the growth for the generation to come.

THE SOLDIER'S RETURN.
BY J. M. WILSON.

Seven or eight years ago, I was travelling between Berwick and Selkirk, and, having started at the crowing of the cock, I had left Melrose before four in the afternoon. On arriving at Abbotsford, I perceived a Highland soldier, apparently fatigued as myself, leaning upon a walking stick, and gazing intensely on the fairy palace of the magician, whose wand is since broken, but whose magic still remains. I am no particular disciple of Lavater, yet the man carried his soul upon his face, and we were friends at the first glance. He wore a plain Highland bonnet, and a coarse gray coat, buttoned to the throat. His dress bespoke him to belong only to the ranks; but there was a dignity in his manner, and a fire, a glowing language, in his eyes, worthy of a chieftain. His height might exceed five feet nine, and his age be about thirty. The traces of manly beauty were still upon his cheeks; but the sun of a western hemisphere had tinged them with a sallow hue, and imprinted untimely furrows.

Our conversation related chiefly to the scenery around us; and we had pleasantly journeyed together for two or three miles, when we arrived at a little sequestered burying ground by the way side, near which there was neither church nor dwelling. Its low wall was thinly covered with turf, and we sat down upon it to rest. My companion became silent and melancholy, and his eyes wandered anxiously among the graves.

"Here," said he, "sleep some of my father's children, who died in infancy."

He picked up a small stone from the ground, and throwing it gently about ten yards, "that," added he, "is the very spot. Thank God! no grave stone has been raised during my absence! It is a token I shall find my parents living—and," continued he, with a sigh, "may I also find their love! It is hard, sir, when the heart of a parent is turned against his own child."

He dropped his head upon his breast for a few moments, and was silent; and, hastily raising his forefinger to his eyes, seemed to dash away a solitary tear. Then, turning to me, he continued, "Your may think, sir, this is weakness in a soldier, but human hearts beat beneath a red coat. My father, whose name is Campbell, and who was brought from Argyleshire while young, is a wealthy farmer in this neighbourhood. Twelve years ago, I loved a being, gentle as the light of a summer moon. We were children together—and she grew in beauty on my sight, as the star of evening steals into glory through the twilight. But she was poor and portionless, the daughter of a mean shepherd. Our attachment offended my father; he commanded me to leave her forever; I could not, and he turned me from his house; I wandered, I knew not, and I cared not whither. But I will not detain you with my history. In my utmost need I met a sergeant of the forty second, who was then upon the recruiting service; and in a few weeks I joined the regiment of proud hearts. I was at Brussels when the invitation to the wolf and the raven rang at midnight through the streets. It was the herald of a day of glory and of death. There were three Highland regiments of us—three joined in one—joined in rivalry, in love, and in purpose; and, thank Fate! I was present when the till then invincible legions of cuirassiers

LIBERIA.

Those who are anxious to promote the cause of Education in Liberia, and of Christianity in Africa, are respectfully informed, that on the 20th of May next, a FAIR will be held at Cedar Park for those objects. Friends are invited to attend, and any contributions will be thankfully received.

Mr. GREEN.—You will please say through your paper, that a great favour will be conferred on the community, by any person who will discover and make known to any Justice of the Peace in Annapolis, the person or persons who were engaged most wantonly in breaking some of the Windows in the Court-house on Sunday evening last. It is high time that legal measures should be taken for the punishment of such offenders, and I have no doubt but that the proper authorities would give a handsome reward for their conviction. Query. Should not our police be very vigilant?

A CITIZEN.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE MANAGERS OF THE FEMALE ORPHAN SOCIETY OF ANNAPOLIS.

To the Female Orphan Asylum of the city of Annapolis.

The managers of your institution, in laying before you their sixth annual report, beg leave first to congratulate you on the encouragement, which, year after year, has been extended to their efforts for the promotion of the best welfare of the needy and destitute children of poverty committed to their charge. They receive from it the stimulating hope, that He who numbers the very hairs of our heads, has been pleased to accept their humble efforts, and to acknowledge them as instruments in fulfilling his promise of protection to the needy.

A legislative act has empowered them to bind out until the age of eighteen the Orphans received into the Asylum, thereby extending to them a two-fold blessing, by securing to them a moderate compensation for the services of the two last years of their apprenticeship, and at the same time throwing around them the mantle of protection and friendly vigilance at an age when these are all important.

Situations have been severally offered to Mary Ann Reeves, Louisa Price, Ellen Golder, and Mary Jane Jordan, of whom your managers have availed themselves, and they are ready as it enabled them to receive into the Asylum others equally claiming sympathetic regard.

The lady with whom Eliza Jane Fratis has been placed, returned her to the Managers she had not been bound in consequence of that lady expressing a wish to wait until the passage of the act of the Legislature, which has subsequently been bound to another lady.

The disadvantages attending such a course of eve it have determined the board of Managers, in future, to dispose of no child until the indenture could be delivered with full satisfaction at the result of the efforts of the Matron, whose co-operation in this benevolent scheme has been too often the theme of grateful acknowledgment to need a repetition here. A Fair was held on the 28th of January; we take pleasure in stating that the liberality of the public on that occasion has enabled us to add, for a brief period, another to our list of "rescued ones." In thus extending to a seventh orphan the protection and comforts of a home, we conceive that we are offering you the most substantial thanks, and the best evidence of grateful acknowledgment which the opportunity offers to our choice. The amount received at the Fair and the available funds of the Society together with the expenditures, may be seen by a reference to the Treasurer's Report.

The fact that since the last annual meeting ten helpless and needy children of poverty have been supplied with comfortable homes and virtuous friends, should stimulate us to be "not weary in well doing," believing that we already "receive our reward" in the consciousness that we contribute our little mite to the welfare of society—to the present comfort of individuals, and, may we not hope, in becoming instrumental in some distant degree, to their future and ever-ascending felicity. In the success of this institution hitherto, we may be permitted to discern the approbation of Him who gathers the young lambs in His bosom, and says with all the benignity of a Father "suffer little children to come unto me"—of him who covers them with the shadow of His hand, and permits us also to trace the impressions of His love, who alone softens the obdurate heart into pity and melts insensibility and indifference into tenderness and compassion. If His approbation, His tender regard, His love, may be discerned in the past, may we not, in reminding you that the poor ye have always with you," feel an assurance that your future assistance and continued efforts will be extended to the promotion of the happiness of this destitute portion of community? May we not confidently appeal to your generosity, your influence, your efficient sympathy? Permit us, in conclusion, to use the language of inspiration—may it sink deep into every heart: "If thou draw out thy soul to the hungry and satisfy the afflicted soul, then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as noonday"—permit us to add the high and holy motive furnished by Him who speaks and it is done—"The Lord shall guide thee continually and satisfy thy soul in drought and make fat thy bones; and thou shalt be like a watered garden and like a spring of water whose waters fail not. There is yet another most tender, elevating inducement which will plead with the gentleness of Christ—"Inasmuch as ye do it unto one of the least of these, ye do it unto me."

Mrs. Smith,

It will be seen that at the late commencement of the University of Maryland, the Gold Medal was again awarded to a Young Gentleman of this city (Mr. Hughes) for the best dissertation in the Latin Language. This is the third time within a few years past that the same honour has been conferred on meritorious gentlemen of our city, and speaks Volumes in behalf of our Literary Institution, St. John's College.

(Communicated.)

ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE ANNAPOLIS.

The benefits derived from this institution, begin rapidly to develop themselves, both within the state and in the United States. Several of the Graduates and Elders have within the year distinguished themselves and reflected honour on the College where they had received their education.

Dr. JOHN B. WELLS, who with the exception of eighteen months during which he studied in Baltimore, completed his studies here, was at an examination of army surgeons at Philadelphia returned first on the list out of (we believe) twelve.

Dr. NIXON FISKEY a graduate of 1830, at an examination of applicants for the situation of a naval surgeon at Washington, was returned second on the list out of thirteen.

Dr. ELLIS HUGHES a graduate of 1830, obtained the medal for the best Latin thesis at the University of Maryland, being the third prize from that institution by alumni of St. John's within the last few years.

JOHN H. ALEXANDER, Esq., a graduate of 1828, is appointed by the Executive of Maryland, State Engineer, after presenting the State with part of a map executed by him in a most masterly manner, and which received a silver medal both in the Governor's Message and the report of the Committee of our last General Assembly.

The annual commencement of the medical department of the University of Maryland, was held yesterday, in the Hall of the Institution. After a solemn and appropriate prayer by the Rev. Dr. Wyatt, the degree of Doctor of Medicine was conferred, by Nathaniel Williams, Esq. Vice-President of the Board of Trustees, on those gentlemen who had passed their examinations, and complied with the requisitions of the institution. The ceremonies were concluded by an eloquent and impressive valedictory address by Professor Dauphins.

The following are the names of the gentlemen on whom the honour of the doctorate was conferred, together with their residence and the subjects of their theses.

A SCENE AT SEA.

A melancholy story is told by a correspondent of the Albany Evening Journal, recently from Europe. It appears that before the vessel in which he took passage left the port of New York, application was made to her Captain by a young Englishman, for the station of Second Mate. He was unable to obtain the berth, and afterwards shipped as a common sailor. Before he was many days at sea it was ascertained that he was a "land lubber" and no sailor at all, and the officers of the vessel as well for mischief, as in punishment for the imposition practised upon them, frequently ordered him to the highest point of the mast to do some trifling service, which they thought at his awkward attempts to gain the proud eminence. It appears from the following passage in one of the letters that the unfortunate Englishman lost his life on one of these occasions: "We all arose this morning with light hearts, in hope to see Cape Clear, which, according to our reckoning, we passed at seven o'clock, but at ten a great distance to allow us to see the land. A distressing incident has thrown a shade over the brightness of feeling, produced by the anticipation of seeing the coast of freedom. I have already mentioned the unsuccessful attempt of one of the sailors (Poor Ben) to climb the main royal-mast. It appears that the day after his disgrace, he renewed, of his own motion, the effort, and was successful. This morning he went aloft with three others, on the fore-royal mast to unfurl the fore-royal-sail. He again endeavoured to climb the uppermost ropes without the aid of rattings, but his foot slipped, and laying hold of a slack rope to save himself, the weight of his body was thus thrown upon one arm. Unable thus to sustain himself, he fell backward. His head struck the fore-topmast, and in his further fall, his back was, undoubtedly broken across one of the yards, from whence he fell into the sea. The body was seen to rise once by the side of the ship, and then it sank for ever! The ship was going at the rate of ten miles an hour. No effort, of course, could have been made to take up the poor sailor, had there been any doubt of his death. I have given this painful incident as described to me by some of the passengers. I was in the cabin at the time it occurred, and thus was spared so painful a scene. How forcibly was Washington Irving's description of the Grave recalled to my recollection, when each of the passengers began to reproach himself for the levy he had exhibited at the expense of the poor sailor, a few days before. For myself, I had not already recorded the incident, which I allude, I should not now have mentioned it. Poor Ben! instead of looking out anxiously for land, we have all been employed in endeavoring to obtain some clue to his destiny. He was enlisted under the name of Benjamin Pope, of Pennsylvania, but was in fact an Englishman, who, in order to effect his return to his friends and country, undertook the perilous employment of a common sailor.

OUTRAGE UPON AMERICAN CITIZENS AT NASSAU, N. P.

The packet brig Encomium, Sheffield, from Charleston for this port, with passengers and 43 slaves on board, when 56 hours out, was wrecked on the N. East part of Abaco reef. The passengers and crew amounting in all to sixty-nine souls, after being on the wreck six hours in a suffering condition, were enabled to reach the shore in safety through the humane exertions of some poor fishermen living on the island. They remained on this desolate spot four days and nights, subsisting during that time on rice that was saturated with salt water, and such fish as they could catch. They were then taken by the wreckers to Green Turtle Key, and from thence to the inhospitable shores of Nassau, N. P. where they arrived on the 11th ult. Soon after their arrival, they were boarded from the shore by a boat under the command of one Thomas Pindar, visiting health officer in the service of his Britannic Majesty, who came for the purpose of ascertaining whether they were in a healthy condition. He was informed by the passengers that they were in want of the common necessities of life, that they were worn out by fatigue and loss of rest, and respectfully requested him to wait on the Governor and obtain permission for them to land. He left them with the remark that perhaps they might hear from him shortly. Soon after, another boat came alongside, having on board one Alexander Macvey, his Majesty's searcher of the port, who seized, in the name of the King, 45 negro slaves, the lawful property of American citizens. He then took his departure, and Pindar returned saying that they would not be permitted to land until the next morning between ten and eleven o'clock. The passengers remonstrated with him, and stated that they had been living on rice wet with salt water for several days at which he laughed heartily, and insultingly replied, that they looked remarkably healthy, that wet rice was good enough for them, and that it would not kill them to live another night on such food. While thus insulting the passengers and crew, he was uncommonly civil to and familiar with the slaves, to whom he remarked—"well, my lads, you are now freemen," and pointing to a black fellow in the boat, he said to the passengers—"there is one of your Yankees who was liberated by us about four years ago." After Pindar ceased speaking the negro became very insolent. When Pindar left, and while they were discussing the propriety of going ashore at all hazards, another order was received commanding them to have no intercourse whatever with the shore, under the penalty of being fired into, and directing them to weigh anchor and place themselves under the guns of his Britannic Majesty's sloop of War Pearl, which was accordingly done.

After remaining here some time, permission to land was granted, through the intercession of one of the passengers, a merchant, who had formerly resided on the island. The next morning the slaves were landed and conducted to the Custom or Police Office, and declared to be free and independent subjects of William the Fourth. While walking about the streets attending to their own concerns, the passengers were insulted in the grossest manner by the free negroes of the town, and were told by the white inhabitants, who treated them with the most marked politeness, that if they attempted to chastise them, they would be handled severely by the Police. In a day or two several of the slaves returned to their masters with tears in their eyes craving pardon, and soliciting in the most humble manner to return to the United States with them, declaring that they would prefer being slaves in America to being freemen in Nassau. Their masters then waited on the American consul and desired to know whether they could be taken back to the States; the consul thought it advisable to have the opinion of the Governor on the subject, and accordingly addressed him a polite note, intimating that some of the slaves were extremely anxious to return with their masters. B. T. Balfour, Lt. Governor, returned an answer to this effect, "that if those gentlemen presumed to remove the negroes, they will be hanged, and all accessories will be considered equally implicated and meet a similar fate." Thus, these "free and independent subjects of William the Fourth," but a few hours after their elevation to the rank of freemen, were denied the first and highest boon of liberty—the right of going where we please.

This is the second outrage of the kind upon persons and property of American citizens whose misfortunes have obliged them to put into Nassau, and it is confidently expected that the strong arm of the Government will be immediately put forth in order to insure redress.

Also, the bill entitled, a further supplement to the acts of Assembly regulating the inspection of tobacco in the city of Baltimore.

Also, the bill to provide for the appointment of a wood corder at Easton Point, in Talbot county.

Also, the bill for the benefit of Thomas W. Morgan, late sheriff of St. Mary's county, severally passed.

The unfavourable reports of the committee on grievances and courts of justice in relation to the mayor and city council of the city of Baltimore, praying for the salaries of the mayor, judges of the city court, mayors of Harford county, and of Joshua Morris of the State of Indiana, and of William Chambers of Richard, of Queen Anne's county, and James Kerr and others, and of Lany M. Lin, of Allegany county, and of sundry citizens of Caroline county, and of the order of the house requiring them to examine into the expediency of the more speedy payment of state's witnesses, in the several counties in this state, were severally taken up for consideration, read the second time, and concurred in.

The house then proceeded to the consideration of the preamble and resolutions submitted by Mr. Spencer, relative to the laws of the United States, and the removal of the deposits.

Mr. Crabb moved to strike out the preamble, and on the question being put, it was solved in the affirmative.

Mr. Sellman moved to postpone the preamble and resolutions until the first day of June next; and the question being put, it was determined in the negative.

The question was then put, will the house assent to the resolutions; resolved in the affirmative. On motion by Mr. Merrick, the yeas and nays were ordered and appeared as follows:

AFFIRMATIVE.

Messrs. Wright, speaker, Miller of Kent, Hutt, Lanthum, Snowden, F. Smith, Wailes, Hellen, Ely, Horney, Spencer, Jones of Somerset, Long, Griffith, Evans, Malt Knight, Day, Crabb, Roberts, Larimer, Fassitt, Dale, Purnell, Schley, Unkefer, Palmer, Sibbald, Johns, Sutton, Nelson, Foxman, Peregrino, Mann, Wharton, Grove, Harwood, Lantz—38.

NEGATIVE.

Messrs. Heard, Southon, Blakistone, Oak Hayne, Sellman, Layliffe, M. F. Smith, Merrick, Hawkins, Dulany, Miller of Charles, Price, Carroll, Bruff, Dudley, Handy, H. land, McNamara, Wright, of Dor. H. land, Gartz, Pratt, Brewer, Burgess, Moore, Charles, Carter, of Car. Burchenal, Jones of Balt. Willson, Carter of Mont. White, G. ther, Bruce, Ridgely—36.

So the resolutions were adopted. The bill reported by Mr. Johns, chairman of the committee on divorces, entitled, an act to divorce Catherine Boss, of the city of Baltimore, from her husband Samuel S. Boss, was taken up for consideration, read the second time and passed.

In four counties of the western district of Tennessee, the sum of $67,000, was subscribed in a few days to the stock of a new road company.

The address of the Parliament of Lower Canada, to the King of Great Britain, accompanying the resolutions impeaching Governor Aylmer, &c. was finally settled by the assembly on the 1st instant, and Mr. Martin appointed the bearer of the paper to London.

More meetings have been held, and are called, in the mountain counties of South Carolina, hostile to the enforcement of the military bill, and the test oath act.

LAW AND PHYSIC IN FRANCE.

A French Almanac for 1834 calculates that there are now in Paris and the departments 1,700,843 physicians, although it says, according to a very exact calculation, there are only 1,400,631 sick. Speaking of lawyers, it says there are 1,900,403 pleaders, but only 300,000 causes to plead. "If," it adds, "there were 1,000 idle barristers do not fall ill with grief the small quantity of law business which there is for them, we shall have 500,199 physicians who will have nothing in the world to do."

FOREIGN.

FROM ENGLAND.

The packet ship Virginia, at New York brings London papers to the 8th ult.

The Congress of Vienna was, we find, opened on the 13th Jan. by a long speech from Prince Metternich on the subject of the internal affairs of Germany, but nothing transpired in regard to the intentions of the despots.

It is stated that the Russian Cabinet through its Ambassador at the British Court has addressed a note to Lord Palmerston, the effect that if the British Government would force into Portugal, Russia would immediately march troops into Turkey.

Reports are current in London that Col. de Bra has surrendered to the Pedruites, and the Portuguese funds have again advanced.

Accounts from Brussels are to the effect of February, inclusive. The Chambers were in session. The person sometime since arrested for threatening the life of Leopold, died of a disease of the brain.

Lord Brudenell, Lieut. Col. of the 11th Hussars, had been tried by a Court-martial and removed from the command. Major Walter Scott, who was one of the principal witnesses against him, would, it was reported, succeed to the command of the regiment.

In the debate in the House of Commons the address in answer to the King's speech, a serious altercation took place between Lord Althorp and Mr. Shiel. The former stated that the Irish members who voted against the coercion bill, did in conversation use very different language.

Speaker then directed the sergeant to

After a short interval, on the assurance of the gentlemen that they would neither coming out of this altercation, they were re-

On Monday Feb. 3, Marshal Soult came to the Chamber of Deputies, and revealing all he had promised in the way of very reductions, increased his demand to original amount of 571,000 men and 76-pieces. Thus, of course, excited confidence in the chamber, which was

THE NEW-YORKER.

UNDER this title, a new Literary Journal, of the largest imperial size, was issued by the subscribers on Saturday, the 23d of March. Its leading features are as follows:—

"The New Yorker" is equal in size and execution to any of the literary weeklies of this city, and at the same time afforded at a much lower rate than the cheapest of them.—It will combine more completely than any of its immediate rivals the distinguishing characteristics of a literary journal, with those of a regular and systematic chronicle of passing events. In short, it is designed to commend itself as a general newspaper, alike acceptable to the lover of literature, the devotee of business, and the gleaner of intelligence. It will contain—

I. LITERATURE OF THE DAY—embracing Reviews of New Publications, Original Tales, Essays, Poems, &c. with selections from the whole range of English and American periodical literature.

II. GENERAL INTELLIGENCE—comprising the current news of the day, foreign and domestic, whether civil or political—carefully avoiding, however, the least semblance of partial bias in politics, and confined strictly to the presentation of a general and impartial account of the movements of all parties whatever, without discrimination and without the exhibition of personal preference.

Should their journal receive the approbation and the support of the public, the undersigned pledge themselves to spare neither exertions nor expense to render its literary character and general interest at least equal to those of its contemporaries; and whatever may be the measure of their encouragement, they confidently assert that it shall be excelled by few in quantity of matter, or in the variety and originality of its contents.

II. GREELEY & CO.
New York, March 22, 1834.

The New Yorker has no connection whatever with an ephemeral affair with the same title, which was published last season, but, in order to free our good name from all obloquy, we hereby agree to send our paper gratuitously to all the patrons of that concern for the whole term for which they have paid the publisher thereof.

Office 114, Fulton street.

CONDITIONS.

THE NEW YORKER is published every Saturday morning, on a large imperial sheet, containing twenty four wide and closely printed columns, and forwarded to its patrons, whether in the city or country, at the rate of TWO DOLLARS per annum, payable in advance. When payment is delayed till the end of the second quarter, fifty cents will be added.

Any person procuring six subscribers in the country and forwarding $10 free of postage, will be entitled to the magazine for a year, trouble, and in the same proportion for a larger number. Companies uniting in a remittance will be supplied on the same terms.

Postmasters, Booksellers, and General Agents for the circulation of periodicals are respectfully solicited to interest themselves on behalf, and are hereby assured that they shall in all cases receive the highest remuneration which the low price of our paper will enable us to give.

March 27.

BRUCE'S

ACT.
An act, entitled, an act making it penal to sell a certain description of property under certain circumstances.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland That whenever an action of replevin shall be brought in this State, and the property in dispute shall be any mulatto, negro, or negro slave, it shall not be lawful for either plaintiff or defendant, or any other person, in whose possession such mulatto, negro, or negro slave shall be, to sell such mulatto, negro, or negro slave, until such action of replevin shall first have been determined; and any sale thus made shall be void, unless an order of the Court authorizing such sale be first had and obtained.

Seco 2. And be it enacted, That every person, his, or her counsel, aiders, or abettors, who shall be duly convicted of selling or transporting such mulatto, negro, or negro slave, beyond the limits of this State, before the final decision of said action of replevin, or without an order of the Court as aforesaid, shall be deemed guilty of felony, and shall be sentenced to undergo a confinement in the Penitentiary for a period of time not less than two nor more than ten years, to be treated as the law directs; Provided nevertheless, this second section shall not extend to any person or persons who by the finding of the jury in such action of replevin, shall be determined to be the rightful owner or owners of such mulatto, negro, or negro slave.

The following is the AdVERTISEMENT of the London Publishers
UNIFORM IN SIZE WITH DR. LARDNER'S CYCLOPEDIA, THE SUNDAY LIBRARY, &c.
PRICE ONLY THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.
On the 1st of January, 1834, will be published Vol. I. of a Series of the Standard Theological Works of England, under the general title of
THE SACRED CLASSICS, OR, CABINET LIBRARY OF DIVINITY:
 With an original Introductory Essay to each Author.
EDITED BY THE REV. RICH'D. CATTERMOLE, B. D.
 AND
THE REV. HENRY STEBBING, M. A.
NO other country is so rich as England in Sacred Literature. Her greatest Poets and Philosophers have shared with her Divines, in setting forth and establishing the truths of Revelation; while her Divines have been distinguished alike by the copiousness and the depth of their learning.
 The soundness of charac. er thus given to the standard Theology of England has, thro' a variety of circumstances, been happily prevented from degenerating into the barrenness of scholasticism; and thus the whole series of our "Sacred Classics," is a well of truth and consolation, as open to the general reader as to the most learned student.
 It is intended to comprise in this collection, the best works of all the most celebrated writers, whose labours have been devoted to the elucidation and practical enforcement of the principles of revealed truth, whether in their application to the immortal interests of individuals or to the order and well being of society. Treatises on the Doctrines, Morality, and Evidences of Christianity, which have received the permanent stamp of general approbation; select Sermons of the most eminent Divines; the most interesting specimens of Religious Biography; and the choicest examples of Devotional and Sacred Poetry, will succeed each other in the order which may be judged most conducive to the benefit and gratification of the reader.
 To the productions of each author, or to each separate production, as the case may seem to require, will be prefixed an Introductory Essay, pointing out their characteristic excellencies; and, in some instances, comprehending a biographical sketch of the Author, with remarks on the state of religion in his times.
 It is the desire of the Proprietors, in undertaking "THE CABINET LIBRARY OF DIVINITY," to present this collection to the public at such a price, that he who purchases at present the cheapest of voluminous publications, may, for the same money, possess himself of works which cannot fail to afford him guidance and support in the highest exercises of his faculties; and under every circumstance of life.
The work will be handsomely printed in Fcap. 8vo. on good paper, cut pressed, neatly bound in Morocco Cloth, lettered, and published (in Volumes of about 400 pages each) on the first day of every month.
Price, Three Shillings and Sixpence.
 Forming the cheapest series of works ever offered to the public.
 The following names of Authors whose works are intended for publication is submitted in evidence of the impartiality of the selection:—
 Jeremy Taylor, Bp. Boyle, Baxter, Owen, Cudworth, Thomas à Kempis, Burnet, Howe, Butler, Wilson, Bunyan, Fennel, Doddridge, South, Bull, Hammond, Barrow, Tullotson, Sherlock, Justin, Vireton, Horsley, Hale, Strigglethorpe, Porteus, Locke, L'Estrange, Cave, Collier, Hall, Jewel, Jackson, Flavel, Charnock, Wesley, Skelton, Watts, Law, Romaine, Waterland, Whitehead, Bagey, Parsons, Ken, Newton, Stannope, Aubrey, Hammond, Burkitt, Herbert, Dougl., Merrick, &c. &c.
Vol. I. (to be published on the 1st of January, 1834, will contain)
THE LIBRARY OF PROPHECYING by Jeremy Taylor—with an Introductory Essay, by the Rev. Richard Cottemole, B. D.
Vol. II. (to be published on the 1st of February, 1834, will contain)
CAVE'S LIVES OF THE APOSTLES—with Notes, and an Introductory Essay, by the Rev. Henry Stebbing, M. A.
Vol. III. (to be published on the 1st of March, 1834, will contain)
BATES'S SPIRITUAL PERFECTION; UNFOLED AND ENFORCED—with an Introductory Essay, by the Rev. John P. Smith, D. D.
LONDON: John Hatchard and Son, Piccadilly; Whitaker & Co. Ave Maria Lane; Simpkin & Marshall, Stationers' Court; D. Talboys, Oxford; J. & J. Deighton, Cambridge; Oliver & Boyd, Edinburgh; and J. C. Cummins, Dublin.
 And to be had of every Bookseller throughout the Kingdom. March 4th, 1834.
 The English copy will cost in England, about ten dollars. We propose to issue an American edition, under the superintendence of a learned American clergyman, in seven numbers, on a single sheet of superfine paper, giving ninety-six large 12mo. pages, to be folded and stitched, and covered with strong envelope paper, at the rate of five dollars an annum.

Gauls rushed, with their war horses neighing destruction, upon a kneeling phalanx of Scottish hearts, shielded only by the plaid and the bare bayonet from the unheated sabres of the duffed glory of France, as they poured the torrents of death on the waving plumes of our devoted band, to extirpate our name from the annals of Scottish heroism. Then, then, in the hour of peril and of death, the genius of country burst forth through the darkness of despair, like the first flash of the young sun upon the earth when God said "let there be light!"—as the Scots Greys lying to our aid raised the electric shout, "Scotland forever!" "Scotland forever!" returned our tartan-clad men; "Scotland forever!" reverberated as from the hearts we had left behind us; and "Scotland forever!" re-echoed "Victory!" It was a moment of inspiration and triumph. Forward dashed our "highland heroes, fearless as their fathers, resistless as our mountain cataraacts! The proud steed and its mailed rider quailed at the shout. Home and its world of unutterable joys—yes, home and the fair bosom that would welcome its hero—glory and the spirit of our fathers—all rushed upon our imagination at the sound. It was a moment of poetry, of patriotism, and of inspiration at the sound. Heavens! added he, starting to his feet, and grasping his staff, as the enthusiasm of the past gushed back upon his soul, to have joined in that shout was to have lived an eternity in the vibration of a pendulum!

In a few moments the animated soul that gave eloquence to his tongue drew itself back into the chambers of humanity, and resuming his seat upon the wall, continued: "I felt my regiment with the prospect of promotion, and have since served in the West Indies; but I have heard nothing of my father—nothing of my mother—nothing of her I love!"

While he was speaking, the grave digger, with a pickaxe and spade over his shoulder, entered the ground. He approached within a few yards of where we sat. He measured off a narrow piece of earth—it encircled the little stone which the soldier had thrown to mark out the burial place of the family. Convulsion rushed over the features of my companion; he shivered—he grasped my arm—his lips quivered—his breathing became short and loud—the cold sweat trickled from his temples. He sprang over the wall, and rushed towards the spot.

"Mind!" he exclaimed in agony, "whose grave is that?"

"Hout! aw!" he said, the grave digger, starting back in this manner, what a way is that to glit a body? are ye daft?"

"Answer me," cried the soldier, seizing his hand, "whose grave is that?"

"Merry on me!" replied the man of death, "ye are surely out o' your head! it's an auld body ye call Adam Campbell's grave; now as ye say anything the wiser for spirits!"

"My father!" cried my companion, as I approached him; and clapping his hands together, he bent his head upon my shoulder, and wept aloud.

I will not dwell upon the painful scenes. During his absence, adversity had given the fortunes of the father to the winds; and he had died in an humble cottage, unattended and unnoticed by the friends of his prosperity.

At the request of my fellow traveller I accompanied him to the house of mourning. Two or three poor cottagers sat around the fire. The coffin, with the lid open, lay across a table, near the window. A few white hairs fell over the white face of the deceased, which seemed to indicate that he died from sorrow rather than from age. The son pressed his lips to his father's cheek. He groaned in spirit and was troubled. He raised his head in agony, and with a voice almost inarticulate with grief, exclaimed inquiringly, "My mother?"

The wailing peasants started to their feet, and in silence pointed to a lowly bed. He hastened forward—he fell upon his knees by the bedside.

"My mother! O, my mother!" he exclaimed, "do not you, too, leave me! look at me—look at me! I am your own son—your own Willie; have you too forgot me, mother?"

She, too, lay upon her death-bed, and the tide of life was fast ebbing; but the remembered voice of her beloved son drove it back for a moment. She opened her eyes—she attempted to raise her feeble hand, and it fell upon his head. She spoke, and he alone knew the words that she uttered; they seemed accents of mingled anguish, of joy, and of blessing. For several minutes, he bent over the bed and wept bitterly. He held her withered hand in his, he started; and as we approached him, the hand that he held was lifeless! He wept no longer he gazed upon the dead body of his father to that of his mother—his eyes wandered wildly from one to the other—he smote his hand upon his brow, and threw himself on a chair, while misery transfixed him, as if a thunderbolt had entered his soul.

I will not give a description of the melancholy funerals and solitary mourner. The fathers obsequies were delayed, and the son laid both his parents in the same grave.

Several months passed away before I gained information respecting the sequel of my little story. After his parents were laid in the dust, William Campbell, with a sad and anxious heart made inquiries after Jeanie Leslie, the object of his earliest affection, to whom we have already alluded. For several weeks his search was fruitless; but at length he learned that considerable property had been left to her father by a distant relative, and that he now resided somewhere in Dumfriesshire.

In the same path which I have already described the soldier set out upon his journey. With little difficulty he discovered the house. It resembled such as are occupied by the higher class of farmers. The front door stood open. He knocked but no one answered. He proceeded along the passage—he heard voices in an apartment on his right again he knocked but was answered. He entered uninvited. A group were standing in the middle of the floor, and among them a minister, commencing the marriage service of the church of Scotland. The bride hung her head sorrowfully, & tears were stealing down her cheeks—she was his own Jeanie Leslie. The clergyman paused. The bride's father stepped forward angrily, and inquired, "what do you want Sir?" but instantly recognising his features, he seized him by the breast, and in a voice half choked with passion contended, "Sorrow take ye for a souldier! what's brought you here—and the mair especially at a time like this! Get out o' my house sir I say, Willie Campbell, get out o' my house and ne'er darken my door again wi' your ne'er-dowell countenance!"

A sudden shriek followed the mention of his name, and Jeanie Leslie fell into the hands of her bride-maid.

"Peace, Mr. Leslie!" said the soldier pushing the old man aside; "since matters are thus, I will only stop to say farewell—for auld lang syne—ye cannot deny me that."

He passed towards the object of his young love. She spoke not; she moved not; he took her hand, and she seemed unconscious of what he did, and as he gazed upon her beautiful countenance absence became as a dream upon her face. The very language he had acquired during their separation was laid aside. Nature triumphed over art, and he addressed her in the accents in which he had first breathed love and won her heart.

"Jeanie!" said he, pressing her hand between his, "it's a sair thing to say farewell, but at present I must say it. This is a scene I never expected to see for this Jeanie! I could have trusted to your truth and to your love, as the farmer trusts to his seed time and harvest and is not disappointed. I thought it was all enough when hoping to find my father's forgiveness, I found them digging his grave; or when I reached my mother's bed-side, and found her only able to stretch out her hand and say—'It's my ain bairn!—it's my ain bairn! but I mair bid ye farewell, Willie, farewell already! it's sair, it's sair! But oh, may the blessing o' the God of Abraham!' As she said this, the death rattle grew louder and louder in her throat—for a moment her eyes became bright as diamonds—I thought it was the immortal spark leaving the body; and before I could speak, the cold film of death passed over them, and the tears I saw gathering in them, while she was speaking, rolled down the cheeks of a corpse! But oh, Jeanie, woman, it was no a trial like this! this is like separating the flesh from the bones, and burning the marrow; but ye mair be another now, farewell, farewell!"

"No! no! my ain Willie!" he exclaimed recovering from the agony of stupefaction; my hand is still free, and my heart has been your slave me, Willie save me! and she threw herself into his arms. The bridegroom looked from one to another inquiring them to commence an attack upon the intruder, but he looked in vain. The father again seized the old great coat of the soldier, and almost rending it in twain, discovered underneath, to the astonished company the richly laced uniform of a British officer! He dropped the fragment of the outer garment in wonder and at the same time dropping his wrath, exclaimed, "Mr. Campbell!—or what are you! will you explain yourself?"

A few words explained all. The bridegroom, a weak but middle-aged man without heart, left the house gnashing his teeth. But by his own military honours are conferred, merit is not always overlooked even in this country where money is every thing, and the Scottish soldier had obtained the promotion which he deserved. Jeanie's joy was like a dream of heaven. In a few weeks she gave her hand to Captain Campbell, of his Majesty's—regiment of infantry, to whom, long years before she had given her young heart.

PRINTING

Neatly executed at this

OFFICE.

THE JOURNAL OF BELLS LETTERS.
A NEW AND STRIKING ORIGIN.
WALDIE
The Proprietor of this work, anxious to satisfy his readers to as great an extent as possible, will be carefully selected with reference to imparting correct information, such new books as are reprinted in America, and to convey literary intelligence in works which rarely find their way across the Atlantic. As great exertions will be made to make this department instructive and entertaining, the proprietor is confident that it will be considered an important addition, by those of which his numerous subscribers will frequently avoid the expense of purchasing books as are printed on the calculation of their titles or the reputation of their authors will embrace a considerable amount of new books of travels, memoirs, biographies, novels, and in fact present a bird's eye view of new publications, early diffused through the Union, by means of the facilities of mail transportation.

The London Literary Gazette will be sent for this purpose, while the Critical Notices of the London Metropolitan, the New Monthly, the Gentleman's Magazine, &c., &c., already regularly received by the subscriber will be freely used.

2. Varieties, embracing literary news, new discoveries in science and the arts, tales of society and manners, abstracts of learned transactions, short notices of new and every species of information likely to interest the reader, with occasional extracts from the humorous department of London press, which are within the reach of good taste, and are now published in a journal in America.

3. A regular list of the new books published, and in progress in London and America.

4. Occasional original notices of American publications, with extracts from their prominent features of excellence or defect.

No additional charge will be made for this great increase of reading matter. It will be contained on the pages of the current Library, and therefore no subject subscribers receive their numbers by mail, to avoid the expense of postage.

Several applications having been received to ascertain the manner in which the correspondence of notices of new books will be conducted, we take the present opportunity of stating that, at least, they shall not unequivocally be UNBROUGHT. The position of a copy by the publisher's bill of parcels to 16, Prince Street, the merits of the donor warrant us on that point, to be assured of two things: First, that it will be noticed the next day after they are received, and secondly, they shall not be referred to pulling, and will be the last in the file, to fall into the error of an unwelcome, who in his anxiety to be first in the bellows of criticism, read the review of a doctored, and gravely entered in the probation of two chapters, which, under his critical acumen, had been noticed in the prefatory reference to them had been made. This predicament, worse than that of the London editor, criticized some passages of Cook's writing, found when he rose next morning, and he was all over London, that the play had been postponed.

For the rest, time must develop our own capabilities in cases where the courtesy of the trade is not extended to a journal, unlike most of our contemporaries, shall buy what books we want, and give as deserve it a careful perusal.

The prospectus, and some technical details always attending the first issue of a journal, make the present number but a specimen of its future promise.
