STC
OFFERS

OPPORTUNITIES FOR PLANNING AND PARTICIPATING IN ITS GOVERNMENT, ITS SOCIAL AFFAIRS, AND ITS CLASSROOM ACTIVITIES

Welcome -- Seniors!

SOCIAL ROOM

Congratulations!!!

This last school year is perhaps one of the thrills of a lifetime for you. You are High School Seniors. The time has come when it is necessary to make an important decision about whether or not to go to college, and if so, to what one.

On Friday, March 19, the High School Seniors who are delegates from their high schools are cordially invited to visit our College. This is the thirteenth consecutive year that a program for High School Seniors has been held here. We have planned this program with the anticipation that it may be of help to you in the selection of your career, as well as to show you what our college and its student government is like.

All organizations of the Student Government Association are planning exhibits and displays to show their work and accomplishments during the year. Constitutions and by-laws will be posted for your convenience. Feel free to ask any college students any question regarding our life and our College. We hope you will spend a day of valuable experiences and realize its benefits in furthering your education.

DR. JEFFERSON D.
BLACKWELL

President of the College

Thirteen years ago Dr. Blackwell came to us from the State Department of Education where he had been State Director of Vocational Education for the same length of time. From the University of Missouri he obtained his B.S. degree, from Teachers College, Columbia University, the degree A.M., and from the Johns Hopkins University the degree Ph.D. During the time that he has headed our college, President Blackwell has furthered its growth and development. In addition to his many administrative duties, he serves as a guide and counselor to each student enrolled in the college.

THEME: Cooperative Living -- An Educational Plan For Peace

Prospective Teachers Look Ahead . . .

One of the underlying principles that has dominated, and will doubtless continue to dominate, the development of American Education is that of change in response to changing conditions and educational needs. As the political, social, religious, and economic conditions of our country have changed, our schools have changed in response to the dominating needs and ideals of the American people.

Today, a democratic way of life is the dominating ideal of the American people. We believe in man's basic disposition to improve the quality of his own living — and further — that this may best be accomplished through voluntary cooperation — or democracy. The fundamental purpose of modern education therefore is to develop the individual potentialities of our youth, so that they may most effectively contribute to the betterment of their democratic society.

As teachers, we will share the responsibilities of the accomplishment of this purpose. And — therefore — as teachers — we will see to it — that our classrooms become centers for participation in vital living experiences planned and directed cooperatively with our pupils. It is through participation in the planning and directing of these experiences that our youth of today may make their greatest contributions as citizens of tomorrow in planning and directing world peace.

STUDENT OPINIONS

WALTER POTTER

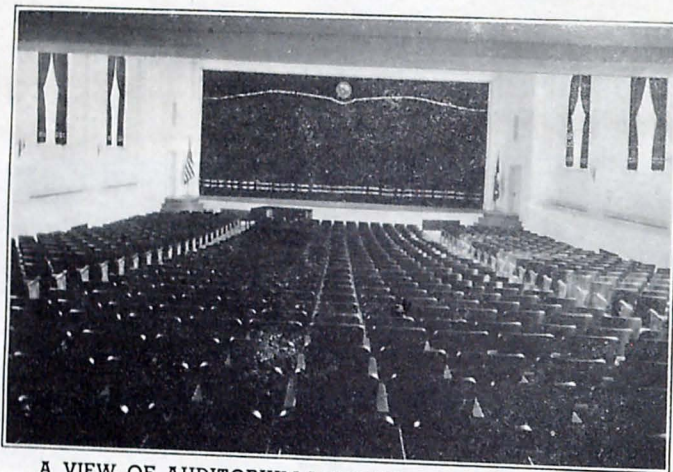

President, Men's Athletic Association

"Parallel with the development of a child's mind is the development of his physical being. Through systematic programs a teacher can readily see that proper instruction in physical education will usually produce a sound body."

MARSHALL W. MOORE

Editor, Publications Staff

"Everyone likes to feel that in his daily work he is accomplishing something worthwhile. There is nothing of more consequence than the guidance of the youth of the nation to knowledge. There is nothing more rewarding than the significant results achieved through education."

A VIEW OF AUDITORIUM LOOKING TOWARD THE STAGE

You want to be a teacher if:

1. You believe in youth.
2. You really enjoy working with people of the age you plan to teach.
3. You have pride in your appearance and are careful to be well-groomed at all times.
4. You are emotionally stable and well poised.
5. You possess the qualities of leadership.
6. You are reasonably strong and in good health.
7. You are ready to give moral as well as intellectual leadership.

8. You are ready and willing to take your part through organization to improve the profession of teaching.

9. You want and plan to be a lifelong student yourself.

10. You are less interested in accumulating great monetary wealth than in giving service to your fellow men.

11. You are broad minded enough to see that education concerns the whole life of individuals.

If you possess all of these qualities you are not even second to perfection; indeed, the teaching profession is crying aloud for your membership. If you have at least some of them, your chances of becoming a successful teacher will be that much easier.

NOLAN C. OWENS

President, Student Government Association

"Education has a close relationship with material production, economic welfare, and standards of living. It is a shared responsibility with the local community, the state, and the federal government. Experience in primary phases of education provides necessary background to expand and to reach one's self for the important business and social contacts of later life."
