INDEPENDENT REFORM.

New Motor Truck To Visit Berlin.

To give prospective motor truck
purchasers an opportunity to make
a thorough inspection of model 12,
the newest creation of the Service
Motor Truck Company, Lieut. H.
R. Newby has started on a transcontinental trip from Wabash, Indiana, to the Eastern Coast, and
will arrive in Maryland the early part of this month. For several years past, service engineers have
been working on a speed truck model,
which would meet the requirements of the present-day demand
for rapid-transit delivery. At the same time the rural districts were given a great amount of consideration, to enable the farmer to transport farm products direct to the city
markets, which would increase their earning power.

To stand the full work that is expected of a motor truck by the
average owner, the following features are embodied in the new model.
The three point suspension springs
that reduce road shocks over 75 per cent, extra heavy chassis construction,
and other improved mechanical devices that help to give the truck long life at an exceptionally low upkeep.

This truck will be in your town
on April 19th. O. E. Bell, sales-manager of the Seitz Auto Company,
of Baltimore, will accompany it to arrange dealer-ships for this territory, and take care of any retail sales
that may be made.

Soybeans for Hay and

Most Maryland soils are well adapted to growing soy beans. To the farmer this crop renders a double service. Not only does it furnish a forage rich in protein for hay
or silage and a concentrated feed for stock as beans after they are threshed but, gathering as it does, most of its required nitrogen from the air, the
plant serves as a soil improver by stocking the soil with this element through the nitrogenous matter forming on the roots.

Liming and inoculation are usually two very necessary factors in the successful growing of the crop,
falling as it does in the legume class.
Particularly is this true in the case
of Maryland soils of which have responded where lime has been used.
In connection with corn, soybeans
are planted in two ways, either with
the corn as silage using two-thirds
corn and one-third soy, the latter being an addition to the usual
amount of corn planted, or sown
between the rows of the last cultivation of the corn. The latter practice furnishes green feed for stock
as well as a green manure when preparing the ground for wheat.

New Steamboat Line.

Announcement is made of a new steamboat line to begin operations

Indigestion and Constipation.
"Prior to using Chamberlain's Tablets, I suffered dreadfully from indigestion. Nothing I ate agreed with me and I lost flesh and run down in health. Chamberlain's Tablets
strengthened my digestion and cured
me of constipation," writes Mrs.
George Stroup, Solway, N. Y.

Worcester Parish.

The services in St. Paul's Church
on Easter Day will be as follows—
A celebration of the Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m.; Morning Prayer

A Farmer Cured of Rheumatism.
"A man living on a farm near here
came in a short time ago completely doubled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment and told him to use it freely,"
says C. P. Rayder, Patten Mills, N. Y. "A few days later he walked into the store as straight as a string and handed me a dollar saying, 'Give me another bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment. I want it in the house all the time for it cured me.'"

The Anchorage of the Soul

By REV. J. R. SCHAEFFER

Acting Sup't. of Men, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—The hope set before us, which
hope we have as an anchor of the soul,
both sure and steadfast, and which enter-
eth into that within the veil.—Hebrews
6:18.

Down on the sands of the Jersey
shore buried deep, lies the broken
portion of what was once a proud, beautiful vessel. Strong of steel, she plied her mission from port to port, carrying a precious cargo of human life and property. At low tide you can step aboard what remains of the battered hull, and walk astern to where half of the steel
mast stands upright. I have often wondered as I watched the vessel
dash over the wreck how that ship
came ashore. A dark night—a fearful storm—a tempestuous wind—a drifting vessel—dangerous shoals—
a place for it to fasten its fukes—
it dragged it won't hold—the ship is doomed. She was wrecked because the anchor would not hold. Two things
are necessary to save a vessel in the storm when drifting at the mercy of wind and wave—an anchor with an anchorage.

This is Paul's graphic picture of the soul's need. When the storms of life
are raging, and the tempest wild sweeps across the sea, we need something to hold and something to hold on. These are needed and these are provided.

First, the anchor. "Which hope we have as an anchor." Our hope is our anchor. What is hope? The combination of desire and expectation. It is that which reaches out and lays hold. Like an anchor it must have size and strength. The largeness of our hope determines the measure of its holding power. But hope is not enough. The world of ungodly men has hope. Every walk of life is filled with it. Hope of health brightens
the room of the sick. Hope of wealth lightens the toil of the poor. Hope
of fame rewards the sacrifices of the explorer. Hope of noble living com-pensates the drudgery of the faithful mother, giving her life for her children in the monotonous struggle.
But hope of itself is not enough. It needs an anchorage. Something to grip. The ship is held by the anchor
cast into the unseen depth where it lays hold upon the rock that cannot be moved. How strong and how true.

Second, the anchorage is Christ.
"That which catcheth the veil." "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus' blood and righteousness." He alone must be the object of hope.
The whole content of Christianity can
be expressed in two simple sentences.
"Christ for me," that is conversion.
"Me for Christ," that is consecration.

We boast not a philosophy, science,
or system. We are united to a Person, united in an organic union, eternally inseparable by His death and resurrection. "He was delivered for
our offenses, and raised for our justification." He is a living Christ. He imparts His life to all who believe.
They are His—He protects and provides. He intercedes. He will come and receive us to Himself. What can separate us from the love of God?
Anchored to the Rock that cannot move, grounded firm and deep in the Savior's love.

That the angry surges roll
On my tempest-driven soul,
I am a vessel for I know,
Whither the winds may blow,
I've an anchor safe and sure,
And in Christ I stand secure!

Warmed With Love of Heaven.
When He went back to Heaven
visits though still present in the Spirit,
with the sound of rushing mighty windows, tongues of fire, down came the Holy Ghost into that home. It became a living home, a living society,
a living people. The perplexed Disciples became the world's Apostles;
the timid people became brave, and
the Divine society started on its glorious progress round the world to be the home of thousands and millions of souls warmed with the love of Heaven.
—The Bishop of London.

Idleness is not rest. It is not work
that is the curse of the fall, but fatigue. Adam worked at tilling and dressing the garden before he fell into
sin; afterwards it was hard, dreary, unblessed work—work in the sweat of his brow which was his curse. Work itself is Godlike and divine, as our Pleasant Lord said, "My Father work-eth hitherto, and I work."—W. C. E.
Newbolt.

Do You Know the "Guldguilt"?
The "Guldguilt" is sometimes described as a barking bird. This term
is applied in tropical America to any small bird that gives a quickly repeated cry, particularly to those which seek their insect food on the "floor" of the forest.

True Friendship.
We do not like one who lends the name because they sometimes give us an opportunity to rail at them
heartily. Their faults reconcile us to their virtues.—Hendrix.

BIG VALUE HOME ORCHARD

No Excuse Country Home Not Having Superb Fresh or Canned All Year.

The value a properly cared-for home orchard hardly be overestimated. Firstly the only value attached to an orchard is the fruit harvested, but this is very important and not the only factor to be considered.

In the orchard, fruit trees will make good use, as well as around
other parts of the premises. A home with lots of trees around it looks much more inviting.

The educational value of a home orchard is a consideration. The setting out of the trees is instructional, again, learning the various characteristics of the different kinds of fruit is valuable. Many people simply do not know that a plum is a plum
and a peach is a peach and do not have the idea of what the variety is.

It is a sad fact that fruit is simply a luxury of the more pernicious. An orchard, however, can be obtained from the home orchard.
Where there is a raised at home it will be more often and in greater quantities, properly selected list of varieties chosen as regards available space, favorable seasons, and further, young peaches from June to October.

The same and high prices of fruit
should certainly stimulate the planting
of home orchards.

The same fruit can be dried,
canned, and sold. Good fruit usually commands a high price. Frequently in towns where trees are more or less protected, the houses, these trees will bear the fruit, where the commercial orchards fail. This is when the fruit is appreciated and when the surplus is a good price.

There is a excuse for a country
home not having a year-around supply

A Sweet-Cherry Tree of the Windsor
Variety in its Second Season.
Growth from Planting—It is Not Well Headed In.

of fresh or canned fruit, especially in
a fruit year.

TREMENDOUS DEATH OF BEES

Preventable Loss of Money Gatherers
Caused by Spraying Trees
White.

Fruit growers who apply lead arse-
nate or other arsenical sprays to trees
in full bloom are accused by beekeepers of causing a tremendous death
rate of bees (see editorial, Francis Jager, chief of the division of bee culture, University Farm, tells of a thorough practical test made by W. A.
Price, Purdue university, and reported
in a bulletin in which Mr. Price said: "Bees work freely on sprayed trees in the open, even where there are unsprayed trees about. The mortality was 60 per cent in the line with sulphur and arsenate of lead and 40
per cent in sulphur and arsenate of
lead dusted on dry."

Limbs of Peach Trees.
Some growers want the main limbs
of peach trees to branch out a foot
or less from the ground, but it is really
better to have them about eighteen inches high, as then it is easier to fight
tree pests.

Setting Gooseberry Bushes.
Gooseberries should be set about five feet apart in the row, and if several rows are to be planted they should be
about the same distance each way.
Currants can be a little closer in the row.

Mrs. Ella Kurtz.

Mrs. Ella Kurtz, the mother of Mrs. H. F. Hammon, died last Friday morning at the home of her daughter, the Atlantic Hotel, where she had resided the past year. She was 78 years old and had been twice married, her last husband being Charles Kurtz, who died many years ago. Besides her daughter, she leaves two sons, Clyde Lingo, of Philadelphia, and Edward Kurtz, now of Berlin.

The Rev. J. Russell Verbruyke conducted the funeral services at the Atlantic Hotel, Monday afternoon at three o'clock. Among those who attended were Clyde Lingo, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. R. D. Lingo, of Daguerre, D. C., and Mrs.
Mable White, of Milton, Pa.
There was a beautiful display of flowers. The remains were laid to rest in Rockingham Cemetery.

God's Help Necessary.

In Thee, therefore, Lord God, I put all my hope and refuge, on Thee I repose all my tribulation and anguish;
for I find all to be infinite and unstable whatever I behold out of Thee. For neither will many friends avail me,
nor strong helpers bring me succor,
nor wise counselors give an useful answer, nor books of learned men console me, nor all precious substance set me free, nor any secret and pleasant place keep me safe, if Thou Thyself stand not by me, help-not, strengthen, cheer, teach and keep me.—Thomas a Kempis.

When Happiness Comes.

There are few days set down in the calendar of a man's life in which happiness comes in her own pure and original beauty. When she does, she is attended by holy affections; she comes as when she first wandered in the garden of Eden, and fills the heart with her presence. Fame, Wealth, and Ambition, the idols of the earth, are not there; but Love and her tender relations and holy ties, at once the image and the boon of his Divine Creator.

Long Day Coming.

The friction set up on the earth
by the tidal drag is acting as a brake,
causing the earth to turn more slowly, thereby increasing the day's length by one two-hundredth of a second in a century. The effect is being eventually a day of 1.400 hours.

Care of Ferns.

One teaspoonful of household ammonia in one gallon of water is an excellent combination for watering your fern occasionally. Use not more than once a month.

Three Methods of Communication

By REV. LEW W. GOSNELL

Assistant Dean, Moody Bible
Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with pen and ink, but I trust to come unto you and speak face to face. The children thy elect sister greet thee.—1st John 12.

We have heard of a woman who wondered what she could do for her Lord, she was not at all others. One day on looking over the death notice
in the newspaper
it occurred to her that she had sent a message
of sympathy,
even while she messages to some of those to whom she was bound by the ties of Christ.

The same spirit, of sympathy and correspondence, was illustrated in the case of the most apostle John, as he writes to the "elect lady" whom he addresses in his second epistle, from which our text is taken.
First of all, he says he would not write with pen and ink, implying the unsatisfactory character of the method of communication, when he has many things to say. If we should allow our imagination to run, we might conclude that, since letters were used in writing, was expensive, long letters. Again, we might easily picture him writing laboriously in his old age and so making his epistle first flow, human it makes him and his near to us it brings him. All of which may cause us to realize that, in the providence of God, the invention of printing was brought about at the time of the Protestant Reformation, thus enabling the common people in possess
the word of God.

Speaking Face to Face.

John desires to speak to the elect lady "face to face." It has sometimes been suggested that, because of the spread of books, preaching will lose its popularity. It has been well replied that this will be the case when conversation is supplanted by correspondence. However, communication by "paper and ink" is no more satisfying now than in the days of the apostle, and we still yearn to talk to one another "face to face." And may we not apply to our relations to our Lord? Sweet is the fellowship we now have with Him through His word, but in His presence will be fullness of joy.

"Oh, the blessed joy of meeting—
All the blessed joy of meeting—
He shall speak at last."
In closing, John says: "The children of thy elect sister greet thee."
This may be considered as a communic

TEXT—Having many things to write to you, I would not write with paper and ink; but I trust to come unto you and speak face to face. The children of thy elect sister greet thee.—11 John 12.

We have heard of a woman who wondered what she could do for the Lord, since she was not gifted as others. One day, in looking over the death notices in the newspaper, it occurred to her that she might send cards containing messages of sympathy, or even write such messages, to some of those bereaved.

We may well covet her reward in the day of Christ!

The same spirit, of sanctifying our correspondence, is illustrated in the case of the aged apostle John, as he writes to the "elect lady" whom he addresses in his second epistle, from which our text is taken.

First of all, he says he would not write with paper and ink, implying the unsatisfactory character of this method of communication when he has many things to say. If we should allow our imagination to run, we might conclude that, since papyrus, which was used in writing, was expensive, the apostle could not afford to write long letters! Again, we might easily picture him writing laboriously in his old age and so making his epistle brief.

How human it makes him and how near to us it brings him! All of which may cause us to rejoice that, in the providence of God, the invention of printing was wrought about at the time of the Protestant Reformation, thus enabling the common people to possess the word of God.

Speaking Face to Face.
John desires to speak to the elect lady "face to face." It has sometimes been suggested that, because of the spread of books, preaching will lose its popularity. It has been well replied that this will be the case when conversation is supplanted by correspondence. However, communicating by "paper and ink" is no more satisfying than in the days of the apostle, and we still yearn to talk to one another "face to face." And may we not apply it to our relations to the Lord? Sweet is the fellowship we now have with Him through His word, but in His presence will be fullness of joy.

"Oh, the blessed joy of meeting—
All the desert part
Of the wondrous words of greeting
He shall speak at last!"

In closing, John says: "The children of thy elect sister greet thee." This may be considered as a communication by proxy, just as we have had those by writing and in person. Some have considered it trivial to think of John conveying the greetings of children to their aunt. But we cannot feel that way about it. Indeed, the simplicity, the gentleness, the power of attracting the affection of the young, which are involved, suggest to us the maturity in saintliness of the apostle whom Jesus loved. Possibly, some of these children were small, and we shall not forget that when Jesus would illustrate true gentleness in the kingdom of heaven, He set a little child in the midst and bade His disciples become like him. John had, by grace, attained to childlikeness.

Longfellow and the Children.
John T. Trowbridge, the well-known writer, tells of a visit to his home by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. When Mr. Longfellow heard the children, he called for them. They were somewhat overawed by his gray hair, beard and venerable aspect, but he soon put them at ease by saying: "Where are your dolls? I want you to show me your dolls! Not the fine ones you keep for company, but those you love best and play with every day." They had soon brought their shabby little favorites with battered noses, and were eagerly telling him their names and histories, while he questioned them with an interest which won their hearts. Mr. Trowbridge could only think of Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

May the Lord sanctify all our human relationships as those of the Apostle of Love were sanctified!

God's Help Necessary.
In Thee, therefore, Lord God, I put all my hope and refuge, on Thee I repose all my tribulation and anguish: for I find all to be infirm and unstable whatever I behold out of Thee. For neither will many friends avail me, nor strong helpers bring me succor, nor wise counsellors give me useful answer, nor books of learned men console me, nor any secret and pleasant place keep me safe, if Thou Thyself stand not by me, help-not, strengthen, cheer, teach and keep me.—Thomas a Kempis.

When Happiness Comes.
There are few days set down in the calendar of a man's life in which happiness comes in her own pure and original beauty. When she does, she is attended by holy affections; she comes as when she first wandered in the garden of Eden, and fills the heart with her presence. Fame, Wealth, and Ambition, the idols of the earth, are not there; but Love and her tender relations and holy ties, at once the image and the boon of its Divine Creator.

Long Day Coming.
The friction set up on the earth by the tidal drag is acting as a brake, causing the earth to turn more slowly, thereby increasing the day's length by one two-hundredth of a second in a century. The effect being eventually a day of 1,400 hours.

One teaspoonful of household ammonia in one gallon of water is an excellent combination for watering your fern occasionally. Use not more than once a month.

Delivered to Serve

By REV. JOHN C. PAGE
Teacher of Bible Doctrine, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—That we, being delivered out of the hands of our enemies, might serve Him without fear.—Luke 1:74.

Something more than political liberty was in the mind of the man who uttered these words. He was thinking of a promise, confirmed by an oath, made to his ancestors long before, a promise having personal and spiritual application as well as a national and political aspect.

The human soul has many spiritual enemies that gather around and settle down upon it. The Bible names seven of these: the guilt of sin, which brings condemnation; the dominion of sin, which brings despair; the thralldom of the world, which brings bondage; the power of the law, which brings righteousness and prohibits unrighteousness; the powers of darkness, subtle and blinding; the fear of death, with its separating power; and the wrath to come as the result of sin.

These create an unholy fear from which there is no human escape. Just as enemies around a fort cause uncertainty and concern unless the fort is held by an invincible force, so does sin produce misgiving and fear. There is no force in the human hand superior to the assaults of sin and Satan. Therefore, there is no human escape from this unholy fear. Neither the boldness of ignorance, nor the boastfulness of presumption, nor the gaze of bluff will avail here. In the last analysis a man is what he is before God, which in common speech means that he is a sinner by nature and practice. "He that committeth sin is the bond servant of sin." The first need of all such is deliverance.

The deliverance provided fully meets the need of the case. Over against sin, in all its aspects, the world with all its glitter; the law with its claims and requirements; the powers of darkness with their subtle delusions; the fear of death and the "wrath to come," one can, if he so will, write the words of I Thess. 1:10, "Jesus which delivered us," or Gal. 1:4, "He gave himself for our sins that he might deliver us from this present evil world"; or Rom. 7:6, "We are delivered from the law," or I Cor. 15:56-57, "The sting of death is sin and the strength of sin is the law, but thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." Here is a great deliverance adequate in every respect, making provision for the guilt of the past, meeting the need of the present and inspiring a glorious hope for the future. "We are delivered from the law," or I Cor. 15:56-57, "The sting of death is sin and the strength of sin is the law, but thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." Here is a great deliverance adequate in every respect, making provision for the guilt of the past, meeting the need of the present and inspiring a glorious hope for the future.

The best service that can be offered to God prior to our spiritual and experimental deliverance through Christ is characterized in Scripture as "dead works." These dead works are the result of the effort to atone for sin. They are the sum total of an attempt to do the best we can with the hope and purpose of making amends for the evil that is in heart and life. Instinctively the human spirit senses the holiness of God and its own unholiness. Conscience reaffirms what Scriptures assert, namely, "that your iniquities have separated between you and your God." Then the question arises, "What must I do to be saved?" Every answer to this question, with the exception of one, has been false and misleading. Reason says: "Do something, work, serve." God's revelation speaks, not of something to do but of something done by another, not of human works but of Christ's finished work, not of service as a way of deliverance but deliverance as a way of service. It points to Calvary as a place of pardon, of peace and of power. Being delivered by the mighty work of Christ in death and resurrection, we can serve without fear.

The service of a delivered soul is a glad, free service. "I gave thee thy liberty," says Christ, and the heart replies: "Master, I will serve Thee forever." Like Saul of Tarsus, who when converted, signed himself, "Paul, the bondservant of Jesus Christ," so does the truly-saved person bring to his Lord, not only his sins but his life. Like the prodigal he asks only to be made a servant, but the Father first gives him place as a son, and then as such he goes about the Father's business. Deliverance, service—this is always God's order.

Think First Upon God.
In the morning, when you awake, accustom yourself to think first upon God, or something in order to His service; and at night also, let Him close thine eyes; and let your sleep be necessary and healthful, not idle and expensive of time, beyond the needs and conveniences of nature; and sometimes be curious to see the preparation which the sun makes, when he is coming forth from his chambers of the east.—Jeremy Taylor.

The Great Master of Souls.
Give yourself away to the great Master of souls. You will have Christ in you, and you will find Him the great secret of progress; you will find you are a different person this time next year.—The Bishop of London.

Really Too Bad.
Betty, who had been at grandmother's on a visit, was informed of the arrival of a new baby brother at the home during her absence. "I just can't leave home without something happens," she exclaimed, somewhat disgustedly.

Origin of Tuning Forks.
Tuning forks are among the most important of acoustical instruments. They were invented in 1711 by John Shore, Handel's trumpeter, and since then have been invaluable to makers of instruments and to musicians also.

EASTER LESSON

LESSON TEXT—John 20:31.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is risen indeed.—Luke 24:6.
PRIMARY AND JUNIOR TOPIC—The First Easter.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why We Observe Easter Day.

I. Jesus Manifests Himself to the Disciples, Thomas Being Absent (vv. 19-25).

He appeared to several of His disciples at several different times during that day. This is the first appearance to the disciples as a body. The reason of His several appearances on that day caused the disciples to assemble to talk over the matter. For fear of the Jews, they met in a private room and, cussing the strange happenings of the day, the Lord mysteriously appeared before them with the greeting of good cheer, "Peace be unto you." He did not come with censure for their failure and desertion. At His birth the angels announced "Peace." Just before He took His death, He said: "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you" (John 14:27). "Let not your heart be troubled" (John 14:1), and now the first word after His resurrection is "Peace." Having calmed their fears, He gave them an unmistakable evidence of His resurrection. "And when He had so said, He showed unto them His hands and His side. Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord." Their doubts needed to be scattered, and His peace needed to be upon them. Consider:

1. The disciples' commission (v. 21).
"As My Father hath sent Me, even so send I you." This commission was not simply to a class, as the eleven, but to all Christians. In Luke 24:33 we find that there were others when that meeting besides the eleven, when Jesus showed himself to them and commissioned them, showing that the commission is not confined to a class or order, but is wide as the Christian body itself. All Christians, therefore, are envoys and representatives of Christ. The exercise of this great function is not merely optional with the individual, but is obligatory upon him. The Lord placed it upon a plane with His own commission from the Father—"As My Father hath sent me, so send I you."

2. The disciples' equipment (v. 22).
"He breathed on them, and said unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost." The mission of the disciple is a very great one, but his equipment is not the power of a new life, the resurrection of his spirit. No one who has this equipment shall ever fail. The Lord's representatives have His life in them. The barrenness of our efforts is due to our failure to take by faith our equipment.

3. The disciples' authority (v. 23).
"Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained." This authority was not by virtue of office, but by virtue of having the Holy Ghost. This would give the spiritual discernment to know who had or who had not repented, and consequently, to pronounce pardon or not.

II. Jesus Manifests Himself to the Disciples, Thomas Being Present (vv. 26-29).
Thomas was absent at the first appearance of Jesus. His absence deprived him of a vision of the Lord. Absence from the assembly of believers always occasions loss. The other disciples go to Thomas at once with the glad news of the resurrection, but he will not believe. His stubborn disbelief is such that he doggedly declares that unless he sees the prints of the nails, etc., he will not believe. It is right to demand evidence, but to prescribe terms is rank unbelief. Note:

1. The Lord's kindness to those who have difficulties. Thomas deserved rebuke, but the Lord kindly supplied the evidence which he demanded.

2. The revelation of the Lord transforms a doubter into a possessor.
III. The Conclusion of the Gospel (vv. 30-31).
In these verses John's arguments are summarized, and an explanation is given as to why he wrote this Gospel. Many other things could have been written, but these he wrote because he judged adequate to prove his point: To prove that (1) Jesus of Nazareth was the expected Messiah; (2) that He was divine—the very Son of God; (3) that those who believe on Him as God's only Son—the Messiah—will receive eternal life. Eternal life is in Him and only as He is appropriated by faith can men be saved.

What Christ Saw in World.
Christ saw much in this world to weep over, and much to pray over; but He saw nothing in it to look upon with contempt.

POUR

STIMULANT AND ME HENS

When Fowls Are Over Fed and Act Dull, Pour a Spoonful of Will Braces Up.

(Prepared by the California Department of Agriculture.)
A flock of laying hens in good health has no need for stimulants, say poultrymen of the United States Department of Agriculture. A hen whose digestive apparatus is good working order needs no stimulation for egg production is provided by a good, well-balanced, proper care and housing. When hens are off their feed and lay small eggs, a little of the ration cause her to pick up and run all cylinders again.

Various snappy pungent condiments are used for purpose, but the following mixture has been found as good as any and can be made up by the flock owner. It cost: Mix equal parts of ground pepper, ground allspice, ground ginger and ground cloves, and half part of ground fenugreek seed. Many of the condiments sold to the owners are largely filler and sell at a high price. In the mixture given is nothing but the essentials. A tablespoonful of the mixture in parts of moist mash 2 or 3 times a week or a teaspoonful in 1 quart of feed should be used.

Don't Keep a Rooster—Hens Lay Better Without the Presence of a Male Bird.

fed until the birds are back in good order.

It is not good practice for poultrymen to feed these things when the flock is in good appetite. When feed attracts hens little more can be done to stimulate the egg organs.

No Oil From the Banana.
The banana oil, which is a preparation known as banana oil, which is used for glazing, etc. It has the odor of the banana and is often termed banana oil.

The World's Bible.

Christ has no hands but our hands
To do His work today;
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in His way;
He has no tongues but our tongues
To tell men how He died;
He has no help but our help
To bring them to His side.

We are the only Bible
The careless world will read;
We are the sinner's gospel;
We are the sinner's creed;
We are the Lord's last message,
Given in deed and word;
What if the type is crooked?
What if the print is blurred?
What if our hands are busy
With other work than His?
What if our feet are walking
Where sin's allurements lie?
What if our tongues are speaking
Of things His lips would spurn?
How can we hope to help Him
And hasten His return?
—Annie Johnson Flint.

Our Own Place.

"It seems as if the constant roar and din of the machinery must weary you; as if all these wheels and shafts and bands would confuse and drive you wild with their ceaseless motion," one said to a worker in a great mill.

How it would simplify life if we all could do the same! The universe is so great and its mysteries so many that we grow troubled and confused in our efforts to comprehend it all. We cannot understand the power that moves and controls, nor see with what the endless bands connect when they pass beyond our sight. We bewilder our brain with the wonder and problem of it all, and break our hearts with the vain effort to discover. But all that is asked of us is to stand faithfully in our own place and watch our own work.—Forward.

ESSENTIALS OF INCUBATORS

Chief Point, Whether Small or Large Machines Used, Is to Have Air Fresh.

(Prepared by the United States Department
of Agriculture)

Incubators are operated successfully in a great variety of places. Small machines generally are set in a room or the cellar of the house. A special cellar or incubator house, though, is more extensive or where mammoth machines are used. The chief points are to have a room which is not subject to great variations in temperature and which is well ventilated, so that the air is fresh and pure, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1103, Incubation of Hens' Eggs, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

If built above ground the walls of the incubator house should be double and the entire building well insulated. Incubators may be operated in buildings with single walls, especially in mild climates, but a well-insulated room is preferable. Good results in hatching are secured in incubator cellars and in incubator rooms which are entirely above the ground level.

The incubator room or cellar should be large enough to allow the attendant to work around the machines conveniently. Many incubator cellars are provided with some system of ventilation in addition to the windows, while in others the ventilation is controlled entirely by the latter method. Muslin screens on the windows provide good ventilation without draft and at the same time keep the direct rays of the sun from the machines. Many incubator cellars have cement floors, which are easier than dirt floors to keep clean and neat.

LICE ARE QUITE INJURIOUS

Parasites Have Been Known to Destroy
Dozens of Turkeys in Short Period of Time.

Experienced turkey breeders agree that lice are the most dangerous to adult turkeys during the fall and winter. They have been known to destroy dozens of birds in a few weeks. The usual reason given is that the turkeys are unable to find dust baths at this season with which to fight the pest in their own way, and consequently, the lice get an unusual foothold.

PROFITABLE TO RAISE DUCKS

Fowls Mature Rapidly and Are Ready
for Market at Ten or Eleven
Weeks of Age.

One of the best sources of profit in poultry raising, particularly where market poultry is concerned, is in the raising of ducks. They mature very rapidly and are generally ready for market at ten or eleven weeks of age. If intended for market purposes. For breeders they bring good prices if matured and held over until the breeding season.

Mrs. A. T. Chance, Gay St., gave the following statement July 20, 1916: "I never lose an opportunity to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as they have done me lots of good, putting my kidneys in a natural condition. Doan's not only stopped my back from aching and pain, but brought me relief from sharp, rheumatic pains in my arms and shoulders, which often nearly kept me from getting my hands to my head. My kidneys caused no end of annoyance, the way they acted. After using Doan's Kidney Pills from Farlow's Pharmacy, I felt wonderfully in power, my back was stronger, the rheumatic pains disappeared and the action of my kidneys was more regular."

On January 15, 1921, Mrs. Chance added: "Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of kidney complaint and the cure has been a lasting one. I have no sign of the trouble now and I never miss a chance to recommend Doan's, when I hear anyone speak of kidney complaint."

THE UNIVERSAL CAR
THE FORDSON $395. F. O. B. Detroit

The list price of the Fordson is now $395. F. O. B. Detroit, Mich. Think of it! There is not a power unit on the market at twice the price of the Fordson that can come anywhere near its quality and all-around dependability and usefulness. Nor are they capable of performing half the tasks which the Fordson "eats up" every day.

This low price makes it possible for every farmer to own a FORDSON—in fact makes it expensive to be without one.

The Fordson now sells for approximately 15 cents per pound. Just stop and consider what this means.

Rough castings cost about 6¢ per lb.
Steel and forgings 8¢ per lb.
Brass, bronze and ball bearings, etc.
average from 25¢ to $1.00 per lb.,

bringing the total material cost of the tractor up to approximately 10¢ a pound, leaving only the extremely small margin of five cents per pound over the bare cost of materials to cover all manufacturing operations, labor and overhead. Surely there is nothing we can say that should more strongly impress the farmer with the fact that the Fordson Tractor at $395 represents the best and most profitable investment any farmer can make.

Substantial reductions have been announced in the price of power farming implements and Fordson equipment. The Ford Dealer's prices are about equivalent to the cost of a team of good horses with horse-drawn equipment. The Fordson outfit will do as much work as two or three teams with an actual reduction in operation and maintenance costs.

Herbert Cooper.

News reached here Sunday night of the death in Cooper Hospital, Camden, N. J., of Herbert Cooper, of Woodbury, N. J., a member of the well-known Cooper family, of this place. He had been ill since December with leakage of the heart and Bright's Disease. He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Ella Mumford, of Ironshire, one son and four daughters, all of Woodbury. They are Mrs. Frank Riley, Alberta, Raymond, Bertha and Beatie Cooper. Also four sisters and one brother, Mrs. Emma Collins, Mrs. Mattie Tubbs, Mrs. Amanda Collins, Mrs. D. W. Brittingham and Charles Cooper, all of Berlin and vicinity.

Funeral services were held at his late home, 350 Mantua Avenue, Woodbury, N. J., Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock, with interment at Clarksboro Cemetery, nearby.

Mr. Cooper was 63 years old. He was born and reared on the Allison Richardson farm, near Berlin, and his early married life was spent at Ironshire, where his children were born, moving to Woodbury about fifteen years ago. He was a kind husband and father, and will be sincerely missed and mourned.

Surviving Mr. Cooper are two brothers: William, of Girdletree, and John Conaway, of Delmar, and four sisters: Mrs. Onley, of Berlin; Mrs. William Jester, of Girdletree, and Mrs. Thomas Johnson, near Girdletree, and Mrs. Caroline Johnson, of Stockton. Mrs. Margaret Mitchell, of Berlin, is an aunt of the deceased.

The funeral of James Conaway, of Girdletree, who died of pneumonia, Saturday, at the Eastern Shore State Hospital, was held Monday afternoon at the M. P. Church, Girdletree, of which he was a member. Among those who attended were Mrs. Cora Onley and Mrs. William T. Quillin, of this place.

"FIGHTING MOONSHINE"

Thrilling Story By a Great Speaker

Hon. John F. Kramer, Ex-U. S. Prohibition Commissioner

BERLIN M. E. CHURCH
WEDNESDAY, APR. 19, 8 P. M.

Come and Bring Your Friends
Do Not Miss It. All Welcome.

This is to be a mass-meeting for the town of Berlin and the upper part of Worcester County. It is hoped that many people from the outlying towns will attend this meeting. Every citizen interested in law-enforcement ought to be present. It is not every day we have an opportunity to hear a man who knows so much about this vital question as Mr. Kramer.

In Memoriam.

In sad, but loving remembrance of my dear daughter, Edith V. Lewis, who departed this life six months ago, Oct. 4th, 1921.

In my heart your memory lingers, sweetly, tender, fond and true; There is not a day, dear daughter, That I do not think of you.

Mother.

In our home you are fondly remembered. Sweet memories cling to your name; Hearts that loved you in deepest affection, Still love you in death just the same.

By Her Sisters and Brother.

B. H. S. Wins First Two Games of Season

The first two games of baseball this season were played Friday, April 7th. The game was played between Buckingham High School and Girdletree High School.

Both sides played very good ball, but there was nothing to stop the B. H. S. boys. They gave Girdletree an absolute "walk-over," the score being 26 to 0, in favor of Berlin.

The second game was played on Tuesday at Girdletree. The game was very close all the way through. The Girdletree boys being at their best, and the Berlin boys being at about their worst, made it an interesting and exciting game. It ended with the score of 9 to 7 in favor of Berlin.

The Amateur Detective

By WINIFRED DUNBAR

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

"This is the office of Mr. Arnold, detective?"

"Yes," bowed Robert Prince, telling the truth but conveying a wrong impression.

Only an hour ago he had been exploring with Arnold, his friend and a man who credibly followed the detective line as a science, the fact that his life had become practically rapid, profitless, almost unendurable.

Robert Prince was world weary because he had no motive in life. He had inherited money, but not a business. He really craved to be of some practical use in the world, but did not know how to begin. He had acted so bored that Arnold had laughingly suggested that he interest himself in some detective case.

"When I get a case that will really stir up your ingenuity and inability and get that idle mind out of its dull beaten track," said Arnold, "I'm going to make you interested in it," and now a case that held his attention had come to the front. Arnold was absent from the office, but Robert allowed his caller to think he was the famous sleuth.

"That is my name," said the young girl, handing a dainty card to Robert bearing a residence address and the name, "Miss Fidelia Blain." "I wish to engage your services, not in hunting down a criminal, but in recovering for me a large sum of money."

It was a clear, simple and yet startling narrative, that of the fair young girl. She had been an art student, her brother a traveling agent for a large steel firm. A sister had recently died leaving two small children. Their father was a dissolute scoundrel who had broken his wife's heart.

An uncle had left an estate to the surviving brother and sister. They had at once liquidated this and had faithfully placed a third of the proceeds in trust for the children.

This had infuriated John Barr, the brother-in-law. To quiet him, Fidelia had given him a thousand dollars. When he had squandered it in gambling he returned and had since been continuously annoying them with applications for small loans.

"I tolerated him," now related Fidelia, "until I had got through some matters in court where I would be appointed the guardian of the children. Mr. Barr kept coming to the house under pretence of a right to see them. Yesterday evening I locked up in my desk nearly four thousand dollars in cash and twenty thousand dollars in unregistered bonds which I received from our broker too late to take to the bank. This morning they were gone. Mr. Barr is missing and near the desk

I picked up a glove with his name written on the inside lining."

"Then he must be the thief?" observed Robert.

"He must be. For the sake of the children I do not want him arrested, but I must get back the money and bonds."

"I will take the case," announced Robert.

Robert was a trifle ashamed of himself as he realized that he was simply eager to keep in the company of his fascinating client as long as possible. Remarkable good fortune rewarded his efforts. Robert finally came across a man who knew Barr who had seen him staggering home early that morning. Where was his home, inquired Robert. An hour later he pushed open the door of a room in a large office building to find lying prone across a bed—the very man he was after.

Barr seemed stupefied, drugged. Robert tried to arouse him, but could not do so.

For hours Robert watched by the bedside of the man.

Towards evening the patient was in a delirium. It seemed that Barr had intended to flee the city, but had got to drinking. He met some associates and bragged of netting a fortune. They had drugged him and had taken a satchel away from him.

"Stuffed with paper—had ha!" gloated the delirious Barr. "The money, the bonds safe. The key—ah, the key! They are baffled—I am rich!"

"The key—the key!" was the mad

burden of the invalid. Robert noticed that he lay on one side, his naked shoulder revealed. He had observed a plaster there at the first but had left it to wear off.

It had done this in part. One edge was turned over. Something glittered. Robert investigated. He detached from under the plaster a small flat key bearing a number and the initials: "U. S. D. V."

Within two hours Robert Prince knew that key unlocked a box rented by Barr in the Union Safety Deposit vaults. Within four he had learned that the bonds and money were contained within it and that all Fidelia had to do was to prove her right to it.

Barr was sent to a country sanatorium, but died within the week and a family scandal was avoided.

A week later Robert went into the office of Arnold and confessed his bold detective exploit.

"I suppose I ought to pay you a fee," he said, "for putting me in a position where I could be of service to the sweetest—dearest—"

"Ah!" smiled the shrewd detective readily—"then you have at last found something worth living for! All right. Bless you, my children, bless you!"

Foiled Again.

Detective Brandenburg's attention was attracted to a blind man on Central avenue Friday afternoon who he thought was watching him.—Arkansas Thomas Cat.

The Double Bank Theft

By MALCOLM BROWN

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

Stevens, the assistant teller, relieved Waterbury between the hours of one and two. On Saturdays Waterbury went home at twelve, when the bank closed, and Stevens remained behind to clean up the work. This occupied about an hour and a half, or longer.

Stevens was getting fifty dollars a week, and his wife was in the hospital. The delicate and difficult operation had been successful, but Stevens owed nearly five hundred dollars. The sharks were pressing him, too.

He had thought over his problem. In his desperation the moral aspect of the projected crime amounted to nothing. He knew that he could walk out of the bank, just before closing time, with four or five thousand dollars in his pockets, in the shape of hundred-dollar bills. Old Wrigley, who superintended the depositing of the money in the safe, was as blind as a bat. The exploit would not call for any remarkable exhibition of nerve.

"What's the matter, Stevens? Why are you looking at me like that?" demanded Waterbury irritably.

"I ask your pardon," stammered Stevens. Waterbury had been very trying of late; he seemed bent on picking a quarrel, and on the slightest of pretexts.

Waterbury was pacing the floor of his cage when Stevens relieved him at twelve o'clock that Saturday morning. "I thought you were never coming," he growled. He nodded curtly, and, without another word, opened the door of the cage, passed out and let it slide to behind him. Stevens watched him with a rather grim smile as he disappeared.

The bank was closed to the public. Stevens remained alone in the tellers' cage. One by one the clerks and assistants went out. Presently nobody was left in the bank except the watchman, Wrigley, the cashier, and himself. Then Stevens hastily transferred five packages of ten hundred-dollar bills apiece to his coat pocket, finished his work and took the money to the safe. Stevens found himself in the street.

He jumped aboard a car and descended half a mile away, at the furnished-room house in which his new home was to be.

That evening for the first time in months he had dinner at a restaurant. He smoked a cigar, strolled about town and finally went home and to bed. Not until next morning did he open the packages of bills.

Everyone except the top bill in each package was a Confederate greenback. Instead of the five thousand dollars which he had imagined was in his possession, he had just five hundred—barely enough to pay the doctor's expenses.

Stevens was paralyzed with dismay. There was only one course now—to go back and smuggle the money into the drawer again. He was not under the slightest watching of Wrigley, but under the eagle planes of Waterbury. A wave of disgust and utter self-contempt passed over Stevens. Stevens spent a miserable night. Remorse, disgust, self-loathing, and a vast pity for his helplessness to make Mary's life happy struggled within him. When at last he reached the bank it was to find the officers gathered together in groups, eagerly discussing something.

"You've heard the news, Stevens?" inquired Wrigley.

"No," answered Stevens. "Waterbury's dead."

The room seemed to swim round Stevens.

"Yes, he was killed in the wreck on the Southern & Eastern this morning. He was then four hundred miles from New York, and his clothes were stuffed with bills aggregating twelve thousand dollars. We've searched the safe and find he had filled it with Confederate bills, with a single good one on top of each package. They're counting up the loss now."

Stevens staggered into his cage. "Mr. Harrison wants to see you," announced a boy presently.

Stevens went into the president's office as if he were drunk.

"Ah, Mr. Stevens, this is a very unfortunate occurrence," said the president. "You have heard of it, of course. Well, Mr. Stevens, we are going to ask you to act in Mr. Waterbury's place for the present, and later possibly, we shall make the position permanent. The salary, you may know, is two thousand five hundred dollars. Good-morning."

Stevens' first act was to slip the packages away where their presence might be discovered later. His second was to pray with all his heart to be made worthy of his fortune.

CIRCLES HELP FARM INCOME

Home demonstration workers realize that before substantial improvements can be made in rural home life there must be more cash income with which to install conveniences, correct defects, beautify the surroundings, or improve clothing. On most farms the production and selling of eggs and poultry offer the best immediate possibilities for increasing the income. The home demonstration agents of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges, therefore have turned their attention to giving help in this field whenever there seemed to be need of it.

The poultry project at Orchard Gardens community, Dakota County, Minn., is an excellent example of the way in which home demonstration work thus meets a real want. The home demonstration agent helped to interest people in poultry raising as a source of income, which would mean income during the winter as well as during the summer.

The poultry project was started by the poultry specialist. During the project the members formed a poultry association. The first work of the association was to pool their orders for feed, thus saving a considerable sum. The second step of the association was to organize an egg circle to make plans for the marketing of the eggs. The egg circle was formed and by-laws adopted, making provision for a guaranty that their product would be of excellent quality. Each member was furnished with a stamp with the name of the egg circle and a number identifying the eggs. In case a bad egg was shipped, it could be traced to the owner.

Through the home demonstration agent a market for the eggs was found with the Women's Community Council of Minneapolis, the office of the Minneapolis home demonstration agent being used as the distributing center. The production from the egg circle soon outgrew this form of marketing and the president of the Orchard Gardens Poultry association then secured a market for the eggs through one of the high-class markets in eggs and butter in Minneapolis.

BAKED BONES FOR POULTRY

Furnish Mineral Matter Which is of Great Importance—Pound into Small Crumbs.

Heavy bones of all kinds may be put in shape for chicken feed by baking until brittle, and then rolling or pounding into small crumbs. These baked bones furnish a mineral matter which is of great importance in nutrition. Green bone is probably the best source of mineral matter, but green bone is not always at hand, and bones for baking are more or less abundant on every farm.

STATE CAPITAL

428 BILLS FAILED IN ASSEMBLY.

Annapolis—

When the 1922 session of the Legislature adjourned sine die, 428 Senate bills died in committee, 103 were killed on the floor.

In the House there were introduced during the session 657 bills, of which about 400 were passed, 150 killed and 107 died in committee. A total of 426 Senate and House bills failed of passage.

In both branches the total number introduced was very much smaller than two years ago, when nearly 1,400 were considered as against 1,001 this year, while in 1918 there were more than 1,600.

The following is a list of Senate bills which died in Senate committees:

2—Bryn Anti-Race-track Gambling Bill.

141—Authorizing Dorchester County Commissioners to license fur dealers.

271—Providing a lien on motor vehicles for storage, repairs and supplies.

280—Creating a State Bureau of Licenses.

296—Providing closed season for muskrats, Dorchester county.

120—Requiring dealers in firearms to keep certain records.

203—Consolidating Baltimore City Courts.

266—Giving equal rights to men.

269—Relating to court costs in Baltimore city.

270—Regulating manufacture and sale of fireworks and explosives.

286—Establishing State Planning Board to regulate municipal zoning.

272—Providing for appointment, compensation and duties of Justices of the People's Court of Baltimore city.

45—Fox Bill, reorganizing Baltimore city police force.

46—Relating to employment and compensation of Baltimore city police chauffeurs.

47—Relating to appointment of matrons for Baltimore city stationhouses.

48—Relating to employment of charwomen for Baltimore city stationhouses.

49—Relating to retirement of Baltimore city police.

145—Relating to apportionment of damages in court actions.

157—Providing for records of bills of sale by clerks of courts.

158—Amending divorce law.

161—Prohibiting fishing in Magoghy river, except with hook and line.

152—Placing men and women on same terms in divorce actions on account of marital unchastity.

157—Directing State Road Commission to construct bridge over Susquehanna river.

290—Amending game law relating to pheasants.

173—Directing State Roads Commission to take over county road work.

326—Relating to policemen's special fund for Baltimore county.

337—Relating to general road and bridge fund of Baltimore county.

109—Relating to Chevy Chase, Norwood and Christ Church parishes of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Montgomery county.

17—Providing that women shall be eligible to serve on grand and petit juries.

133—Making rate of taxation in Old Annex of Baltimore city same as in New Annex.

371—Repealing Judges' Pension Act.

16—Providing for holding State and county elections every second year.

21—Creating State debt of $3,150,000 for post road construction.

22—Relating to public education.

24—Amending State crab law.

27—Amending charter of Goucher College.

129—McIntosh Gasoline Tax Bill.

130—Providing revenue for reconstruction fund of Road Commission.

6—Removing discriminations against women and giving them equal rights with men before the law.

10—Imposing license tax on dealers in motor fuel to raise funds to meet Soldiers' Bonus.

103—Increasing term of office of city and county surveyors.

237—Authorizing Baltimore city to grant additional pay to city judges.

387—Relieving certain former members of State Board of Moving Picture Examiners from obligation to refund certain sums to the State.

230—Reducing cost of making record in Court of Appeal cases.

251—Authorizing appointment of chief clerk and deputy for Circuit Court of Talbot county.

252—Dissolving Talbot County Roads Commission.

135—Relating to appeal bond from justice of the peace.

354—Prohibiting tonging in certain waters of St. Mary's county.

258—Fixing compensation of Calvert county treasurer.

357—Prohibiting racing except at county fairs.

284—Relating to trust clerk to Supreme Bench of Baltimore city.

29—Incorporating the "Edward Memorial Hospital" of Crisfield.

58—Robb Prohibition Enforcement Bill.

66—Defining duties of Treasurer of Talbot county.

202—Prohibiting manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, butterine and other products when colored in imitation of yellow butter.

39—Making uniform fiscal year of various counties.

72—Providing a joint supervision and co-operation of State and County Roads Commission.

104—Relating to guardianship of the persons and property of minor children.

171—Providing that last registration day in counties shall also be revision day.

222—Amending State Forestry law.

292—Relating to power of Public Service Commission over municipal water rates.

272—Empowering municipal authorities to incorporate towns with population of over 5,000 to establish taxi-stands, and authorizing the Public Service Commission to make regulations to govern same.

WORK OF 1922 LEGISLATURE.

The recent session of the Legislature will go down in history as a very expensive one despite the limitations imposed by the budget.

Counting the Soldiers' Bonus Bill, which is to be submitted to a vote of the people, the Legislature appropriated more than $45,000,000 to be expended in the next two years.

Governor Ritchie delivered his message in person at the opening of the session and told of party pledges and the State's finances. Practically all these party pledges have been redeemed and the Governor feels correspondingly happy, but he did not come down into the Legislature hall as he did two years ago and deliver a farewell address.

Notwithstanding the many hard fights in which the Governor had to take a hand, he has gotten out of the Legislature practically all he set out to get and much more than many of the wise ones thought at the beginning that he could possibly get.

Many old-timers here express the view that the Legislature of 1922 was different from any of its predecessors, but the difference was in appearance only; and this difference in appearance has been growing through the last three sessions, the reason being the budget system. Because of the budget system the vast army of legislative employees has been cut down, and now that appropriations originate with the Governor there is no longer the log-rolling lobby that there used to be in the good old days.

From the beginning to the end of the session the House was the center of interest because in that body were to be found the ablest fighters.

Democratic Floor Leader Stephen W. Gambrill, of Howard county, Judiciary Chairman William F. Farnell, of Baltimore city, and Delegate Funkhouser, of Washington county, were the three men around whom the storm raged and the battles in the House were the most interesting of the session.

Mr. Gambrill as a floor leader was a success, but it was not the flashing Gambrill of two years ago whose spear knew no brother. It was no longer "Gambrill the free lance" but "Gambrill the regular party man" fighting for the party organization and the fulfillment of party platform pledges, and in so doing he was fighting the battles of Governor Ritchie who practically wrote the party platform in the last campaign and put in it pledges that almost caused an open rebellion in one branch or the other.

In this session Hall was the free lance and his boldness coupled with his parliamentary skill brought him to the front early in the session, so that he exercised a most powerful influence.

For the first time in a Legislative session the drys put on their fighting clothes and battled to the end, the result being that they put their mark on the race-track bill and on many matters other than dry legislation.

Free Camps For Tourists.

Free camps at points along the State roads of Maryland will be thrown open in a few days for the use of tourist campers and vacationists.

Arrangements already have been completed for five of these camps. It is expected that several others will be secured within the next two weeks.

According to present plans, those to be opened this summer will be along the main roads leading from Baltimore over the mountains of Western Maryland. If the scheme is successful camps will be set up at frequent intervals along all the State roads next summer.

John N. Mackall, chairman of the State Roads Commission, has been arranging for these camps. Sites have been secured near Frederick, near Frederick, near Lisbon on the Frederick pike, near Hancock, and on Conococheague creek. Several other sites in the mountainous section of Maryland are being considered. Mr. Mackall said, and it is probable that arrangements for these will be completed in the near future.

There will be no charge to those who care to camp on the sites, Mr. Mackall explained. Each site will be financed and patrolled by a man, who will be given the concession of running a store on the property. This man will sell canned goods and similar articles likely to be desired by the tourists. Campers will not be compelled to purchase from him, but Mr. Mackall assumes that they will want to buy such things rather than carry these from place to place.

Altitude and Oxygen.

At an altitude of eight miles, which is the limit reached by airplane, the air contains about one-fourth of the amount of oxygen found at the surface of the earth. At sea level, the oxygen content of the air is 21 per cent—at eight miles above it is less than 1 per cent.

Orchard Information

FRUITS FOR HOME ORCHARDS

Little Expense and Time Required for Providing Various Delicacies for Table Use.

An excellent way to become more independent and prosperous is to start a home orchard so there will soon be plenty of fruits for the family to use in the various ways for convenience and for economy in living. Surely the little expense and time required to start a home orchard could not be used to better account these days of stress.

The first step will be to break the land if it has not already been turned, as soon as the site for the orchard has been chosen. Deep, well-drained land with a fair fertility is best. If this land is available near the home it is all the better, for the home orchard ought to be handy so fresh fruits may be gathered and brought in when wanted. The land should be well broken and put in excellent condition before the trees are to be transplanted.

Berries are essential for the home orchard. They bear before other ordinary fruits such as peaches, apples, plums and pears. It requires a small area of land to produce an abundance of berries, but every farmer should plant liberally enough for the needs of his own family.

Of the berries, none are better, none surer than strawberries. Two or three varieties of strawberries will be a good way to extend the season for this delicious fruit. Mitchell, Bloddyke, Aroma, Norwood, Senator Dingley are worthy of place in the berry patch.

Set the strawberry plants in rows about three and one-half or four feet apart. Cultivate very carefully, keeping weeds down and a mulch on the surface during the summer, or until the plants spread so that there is no longer possible.

Dwarfed trees are treated somewhat like strawberries. The rows are, however, a little wider to permit cultivation till the vines extend over the middle.

Blackberries may be set in rows about six feet apart when transplanted.

Some Well Pruned Peach Trees.

for the home berry patch. Plants may be four feet apart in the row.

Peaches will respond to good preparation and good care afterwards. Several varieties will be desirable to afford fruit, early, mid-season and late.

Of the early apples, Red June, Yellow Transparent, Sweet Bough, Maiden Blush, Red Astrachan are suitable. Later varieties or early fall sorts: Jonathan, Grimes, Delicious, Ben Davis, Late: Mammoth Black Twig, Winesap, Stamen. There are many others.

Varities of plums recommended by Prof. J. R. Cooper, Arkansas College of Agriculture, are: Wild Goose, Shropshire, Danson, Red June, Burbank, Abundance, Arkansas. The following raspberries: Red, King or Cuthbert, Kittatong or Snyder; black, Black Pearl, St. Regis are favored.

The orchard land may be prepared, then the trees set any time during late winter when the season is favorable or in spring before the buds swell—usually, the earlier the better, to give the roots a chance to start the half-like roots to nourish the trees and build up tissues in growth.

NO ECONOMY IN SMALL TREES

Young Plants Have Had Little Time to Show Their Qualities and Cannot Be Culled.

It is poor economy to buy very small trees. Two-year-olds are best, though an experienced man, with careful attention, can get just about as good results with good one-year-olds, but it takes an expert. One thing is that the younger trees have had less time to show their characteristics, and cannot be culled as closely as the older ones.

PROPER TOOLS FOR PRUNING

Wood Axe Is Essential for Efficient Work—Lop Shears and Saw.

Are Very Handy.

An efficient job of pruning cannot be done with the wood axe. If you feel that you cannot afford a set of pruning tools for the amount of work you have to do, get your neighbor to go in with you and purchase tools together. The two handiest pruning tools are lop shears—shears with handles 2 to 2½ feet long, and a pruning saw.

Big Cigarette Production.

About 100,000,000 cigarettes are made in Guatemala annually, mainly from native and Honduran tobacco.

The Missing Cuffs

By CALVIN HENDRICKS

John Martin, mortgage banker, shrewd and careful man of business, sat facing his bookkeeper, Ralph Terhune, a pleasing, clear-minded young man, in the estimation of Eunice Martin, at least, although the money absorbed father knew nothing of that.

The two men were seated in the private office of the banker. This had an anteroom and both apartments connected with the residence of John Martin. In the anteroom was a lurking figure.

This man was Burton Beale, a bachelor cousin of the banker, who had been the guest of his relative for nearly a month.

"You understand, Terhune," the banker was speaking within the private office.

"Perfectly, Mr. Martin," replied the young office man.

"I have never trusted any employee as I am trusting you. It is necessary that I should for some important transactions have to be handled by you during my absence."

"You will not be gone long, I presume?"

"Perhaps a week. Lean a little closer, Terhune. The combination of the safe is 12-105-12."

Ralph Terhune nodded comprehendingly. While the banker spoke he had carefully scribbled the numerals on a slip of scrap paper. Instantly his employer threw the tell-tale slip from his hand.

"Remember it,"

"To aid me, I will make a temporary notation, then," said Terhune, and he marked the numbers on the white surface of his shirt cuff.

The modest but pretty cuff button holding it together met his glance as he did this, and his eye brightened. These buttons were a birthday gift from Eunice a week ago.

When the banker and Ralph passed through the anteroom, Beale was not there.

"Let us take a little stroll, Terhune," he suggested, as, apparently casually, he later met his intended victim on the street near his hotel.

"Time for a game of billiards, at least," pressed Beale.

"Oh, yes; I have a full hour of leisure."

"Come on, then."

Beale disguised the fact that he was an expert at the game. He made it interesting for his opponent by some clever combinations and Ralph's interest so deepened that he threw off his coat and cuffs and became absorbed in watching his adversary.

Beale allowed Ralph to win, and kept up a chatter of talk. As it neared eight o'clock they left the place. Suddenly Ralph halted upon the public street.

"I declare," he exclaimed, "I left my cuffs in the rack back at the billiard hall."

His face was grave and anxious all the time later while he sat conversing with Eunice or listening to her piano playing at the Martin home. As he arose to leave he looked appealingly into his face.

"Ralph," she said, "what is troubling you this evening? Something, I know, won't you tell me what it is?"

He told Eunice of the loss of his cuffs. She realized how sincerely he deplored the loss of her first gift to him. "I have offered a liberal reward at the billiard hall for their recovery," said Ralph.

He did not tell her of the safe combination which he had scribbled on one of the cuffs. For the life of him he could not recall these numerals.

This put him in a state of anxiety, and to some decided inconvenience. Fortunately no business came in that required reference to the contents of the safe, but large amounts were paid and these Ralph locked up in a strong box.

Mr. Martin returned at the end of ten days. He looked surprised when Ralph made his report. He opened the safe. Then he turned upon his bookkeeper with a dark, suspicious face.

"I left a package containing twelve hundred in cash in this safe when I went away, and it is gone," he said, sat down grimly, wrote out a check for a month's salary and added: "Terhune, you are discharged."

Ralph was given no opportunity to explain.

Two days later Beale borrowed a thousand dollars on a note from a banker. Two days still later Martin learned that the note was a forgery. He began an investigation. At its termination he was satisfied that his fugitive relative was a conscienceless swindler.

Just after the flight of Beale, however, Eunice came to him with flaming eyes.

"Papa," she said, "I want you to send for Mr. Terhune at once and make some atonement for misjudging him so cruelly."

"What do you mean?" began her father.

"This: I can prove who opened that safe," and Eunice placed before him a pair of cuffs and a card covered with figures.

"The maid found these in the waste basket in cleaning the room that Mr. Beale occupied," said Eunice. "The cuffs he stole from Ralph, the card shows how he distributed that missing twelve hundred dollars."

Within the hour Ralph Terhune was restored to his old position—and a new one—as prospective son-in-law of John Martin, banker.

Yes, that's the rub.

"It's our duty," said Uncle Eben, "to love our fellow men. But in order to do so you've got to be terrible for

To give prospective motor truck
purchasers an opportunity to make
a thorough inspection of model 12,
the newest creation of the Service
Motor Truck Company, Lieut. H.
R. Newby has started on a transcontinental trip from Wabash, Indiana, to the Eastern Coast, and
will arrive in Maryland the early part of this month. For several years past, service engineers have
been working on a speed truck model,
which would meet the requirements of the present-day demand
for rapid transit delivery. At the same time the rural districts were given a great amount of consideration, to enable the farmer to transport
port farm products direct to the city
markets, which would increase their
earning power.

To stand the full work that is
expected of a motor truck by the
average owner, the following features are embodied in the new model.
The three point suspension springs
that reduce road shocks over 75 per cent, extra heavy chassis construction,
and other improved mechanical devices that help to give the truck long life at an exceptionally low upkeep.

This truck will be in your town
on April 19th. O. E. Bell, sales-
manager of the Seitz Auto Company,
of Baltimore, will accompany it to arrange dealer ships for this territory, and take care of any retail sales
that may be made.

Soybeans for Hay and Soil Improvement.

Most Maryland soils are well
adapted to growing soy beans. To the farmer this crop renders a double service. Not only does it furnish a forage rich in protein for hay
or silage and a concentrated feed for stock as soon as they are threshed out, gathering as it does, most of its required nitrogen from the air, the
plant serves as a soil improver by stocking the soil with the needed element through the nitrogen gettering bacteria in the nodules that form on the roots.

Liming and inoculation are usually two very necessary factors in the successful growing of the crop,
falling as it does in the legume class.
Particularly is this true in the case
of Maryland soils in which have responded well to lime in the past.
In connection with corn, soybeans
are planted in two ways, either with
the corn as silage using two-thirds
corn and one-third soy, the latter
being an addition to the usual
amount of corn planted, or sown
between the rows at the last cultivation of the corn. The latter practice furnishes green food for stock
as well as a green manure when preparing the ground for wheat.

New Steamboat Line.

Indigestion and Constipation.
"Prior to using Chamberlain's Tablets, I suffered dreadfully from indigestion. Nothing I ate agreed with me and I lost flesh and ran down in health. Chamberlain's Tablets
strengthened my digestion and cured
me of constipation," writes Mrs.
George Stroup, Solvay, N. Y.

Worcester Parish.

The services in St. Paul's Church
on Easter Day will be as follows:
A celebration of the Holy Commu-
nion at 7:30 a. m.; Morning Prayer
with a second celebration at 10:30
a. m.; Evening Prayer at 7:30 p. m.
Sunday School will meet at 9:15 a.
m. All are cordially invited.

A Farmer Cured of Rheumatism.
"A man living on a farm near here
came in a short time ago completely
doubled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's

The Anchorage of the Soul

By REV. J. R. SCHAEFER
Acting Sup. of Men, Moody Bible
Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—The hope set before us, which
hope we have as an anchor of the soul,
both sure and steadfast, and which enter-
eth into that within the veil—Hebrews
6:18, 19.

Down on the sands of the Jersey
shore buried deep, lies the broken
portion of what was once a proud,
beautiful vessel.
Strong of steel,
she plied her mission from port to port, carrying a precious cargo of human life and property. At low tide you can step aboard what remains of the battered hull, and walk astern to where half of the steel
mast stands upright. I have often wondered as I watched the waves
dash over the wreck how that ship
came ashore. A dark night—a fearful storm—a tempestuous wind—a drifting vessel—What does that vessel need? An anchor. Ah, but she has an anchor, great and ponderous. It has long since gone to the bottom of the sea, but still the vessel drifts closer and closer to destruction. What is wrong? The anchor won't hold—no place for it to fasten its tines—it drags—it won't hold—the ship is doomed. She was wrecked because
the anchor would not hold. Two things
are necessary to save a vessel in the
storm when drifting at the mercy of
wind and wave—an anchor with an unbroken hold.

This is Paul's graphic picture of the
soul's need. When the storms of life
are raging, and the tempest wild
sweeps across the sea, we need something to hold and something to hold
to. These are needed and these are provided.

First, the anchor. "Which hope we have as an anchor." Our hope is our anchor. What is hope? The combination of desire and expectation.
It is that which reaches out and lays hold. Like an anchor it must have size and strength. The largeness of our hope determines the measure of
its holding power. But hope is not enough. The world of ungodly men
has hope. Every walk of life is filled with it. Hope of health brightens
the room of the sick. Hope of wealth
lightens the toil of the poor. Hope
of fame rewards the sacrifices of the explorer. Hope of noble living com-
pensates the drudgery of the faithful mother, giving her life for her
children in the monotonous struggle.
But hope of itself is not enough. It
needs an anchorage. Something to grip. The ship is held by the anchor
cast into the unseen depth where it
lays hold upon the rock that cannot be moved. No matter how strong and unbreakable the anchor, it must hold to save.

Second, the anchorage is Christ.
"That which entereth the veil." "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus' blood and righteousness." He
alone must be the object of hope.
The whole content of Christianity can
be expressed in two simple sentences.
"Christ for me," that is conversion.
"Me for Christ," that is consecration.

We boast not a philosophy, science,
or system. We are united to a Person, united in an organic union, eter-
nally inseparable by His death and
resurrection. "He was delivered for
our offenses, and raised for our justification." He is a living Christ. He
imparts His life to all who believe.
They are His—He protects and provides. He intercedes. He will come
and receive us to Himself. What can separate us from the love of God?
Anchored to the Rock that cannot
move, grounded firm and deep in the Savior's love.

How the angry surges roll
In my tempest-driven soul,
I am powerless for I know not how Whirl the winds may blow,
I've an anchor safe and sure,
And in Christ I shall endure!

Mighty deeds about me sweep,
Fierce gusts within my breast,
Angry clouds overshadow the sky,
And the tempest rises high,
Still I stand the conqueror's stock,
For my anchor grips the Rock!

Troubles almost overwhelm the soul,
Griefs like billows over me roll,
Tempests seek to lay me low,
Storms obscure the light of day,
But in Christ I can be bold—
I've an anchor that shall hold!

Warmed With Love of Heaven.
When the vessel back to Heaven
Vladimir still present in the Spirit,
with the sound of rushing mighty wings and tongues of fire, down came the Holy Ghost into that home. It came a living home, a living society,
a living people. The perplexed disciples became the world's Apostles;
the timid people became brave, and
the Divine society started on its glorious progress round the world to be the home of thousands and millions of souls warmed with the love of Heaven.
—The Bishop of London.

Idleness.
Idleness is not rest. It is not work
that is the curse of the fall, but fatigue. Adam was tired at falling and dressing the garden before he fell into
sin; afterwards it was hard, dreary,
unpleasant work—work in the sweat
of his brow which was his curse. Work itself is Godlike and divine, as our Blessed Lord said, "My Father work-eth hitherto, and I work."—W. O. E.
Newbitt.

Do You Know the "Gouldguilt"?
The "Gouldguilt" is sometimes described as a barking bird. This term
is applied in tropical America to any
small bird that gives a quickly repeated cry, particularly to those which
seek their insect food on the "floor" of
the forest.

True Friendship.
We do not like our friends the worse because they sometimes give
us an opportunity to rail at them
heartily. Their faults reconcile us to their virtues.—Harriet.

BIG VALUE OF HOME ORCHARD

No Excuse for Country Home Not Having Supply of Fresh or Canned Fruit All Year.

The value of a properly cared-for home orchard can hardly be overestimated. Frequently the only value attached to a home orchard is the fruit harvested. No doubt this is very important but would not be the only factor to be considered.

In the chicken lot, fruit trees will make good shade, as well as around
other parts of the premises. A home with lots of nice trees around it looks
much more inviting.

The educational value of a home orchard is worth consideration. The setting out and caring for the trees is instructional and, again, learning the variety characteristics of the different kinds of fruits is valuable. Many people simply know that a plum is a plum
and a peach is a peach and do not have the least idea of what the variety is.

It is a recognized fact that fruit is healthful. In case of the more perishable fruits, a much fresher supply can be obtained from the home orchard.
Where the fruit is raised at home it will be eaten more often and in greater quantities. A properly selected list of varieties of peaches as regards available space and favorable season, would furnish you with peaches from Jan. to October.

The scarcity and high prices of fruit
should certainly stimulate the planting
of home orchards.

The surplus fruit can be dried,
canned and sold. Good fruit usually commands a good price. Frequently in towns where the trees are more or less protected by the houses, these trees will bear more fruit, where the commercial orchards fail. This is when
the fruit is appreciated and when the surplus sells for a good price.

There is no excuse for a country
home not having a year-around supply

A Sweet-Cherry Tree of the Windsor
Variety in its Second Season's Growth From Planting—it Is Not Well Headed In.

of fresh or canned fruit, especially in
a fruit year.
Some of our town friends who are garden enthusiasts may think they have not sufficient room for trees. A mistake that many of us frequently make is to try to garden too large an area. A small well-planned and well-kept garden will give better results and be much more sightly than a large poorly kept garden.

Fruit trees may be planted around the sides of the home and even in a portion of the garden. The same cultivation given the garden will answer for the cultivation of the trees. Vegetables and many small fruits may be grown in between the trees for several years.

TREMENDOUS DEATH OF BEES

Preventable Loss of Honey Gatherers
Caused by Spraying Trees
White Blooming.

Fruit growers who apply lead arse-
nate or other arsenical sprays to trees
in full bloom are accused by beekeep-
ers of causing a tremendous death rate of bees from poisoning. Francis Jager, chief of the division of bee culture, University Farm, tells of a thorough practical test made by W. A.
Price, Purdue university, and reported
in a bulletin in which Mr. Price said: "Bees freely on sprayed
trees in the open, even where there
are unsprayed trees about. The mortality was 60 per cent in the lime with sulphur and arsenate of lead and 40
per cent in sulphur and arsenate of
lead dusted on dry."

Limbs of Peach Trees.
Some growers want the main limbs
of peach trees to branch out a foot
or less from the ground, but it is really
better to have them about eighteen
inches high, as then it is easier to fight
tree pests.

Setting Gooseberry Bushes.
Gooseberries should be set about five
feet apart in the row, and if several
rows are to be planted they should be
about the same distance each way.
row.

Three Methods of Communication

By REV. LEW W. GOSNELL,
Assistant Dean, Moody Bible
Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink; but I trust to come unto you, and speak face to face. The children of thy elect sister greet thee.—1 John 12.

We have heard of a woman who wondered what she could do for the Lord, since she was not gifted as others. One day, in looking over the death notices in the newspaper, it occurred to her that she might send cards containing messages of sympathy, or even write such messages, to some of those bereaved.

We may well covet her reward in the day of Christ!

The same spirit, of sanctifying our correspondence, is illustrated in the case of the aged apostle John, as he writes to the "elect lady" whom he addresses in his second epistle, from which our text is taken.

First of all, he says he would not write with paper and ink, implying the unsatisfactory character of this method of communication when he has many things to say. If we should allow our imagination to run, we might conclude that, since papyrus, which was used in writing, was expensive, the apostle could not afford to write long letters! Again, we might easily picture him writing laboriously in his old age and so making his epistle brief. How human it makes him and how near to us it brings him! All of which may cause us to rejoice that, in the providence of God, the invention of printing was brought about at the time of the Protestant Reformation, thus enabling the common people to possess the word of God.

Speaking Face to Face.
John desires to speak to the elect lady "face to face." It has sometimes been suggested that, because of the spread of books, preaching will lose its popularity. It has been well replied that this will be the case when conversation is supplanted by correspondence. However, communicating by "paper and ink" is no more satisfying now than in the days of the apostle, and we still yearn to talk to one another "face to face." And may we not apply it to our relation to our Lord? Sweet is the fellowship we now have with Him through His word, but in His presence will be fullness of joy.

"Oh, the blessed joy of meeting—
All the desert past!
Oh, the wondrous words of greeting
He shall speak at last!"

In closing, John says: "The children of thy elect sister greet thee." This may be considered as a communication by proxy, just as we have had those by writing and in person. Some have considered it trivial to think of John conveying the greetings of children to their aunt. But we cannot feel that way about it. Indeed, the simplicity, the gentleness, and the power of attracting the affections of the young, which are involved, suggest to us the maturity in saintliness of the apostle whom Jesus loved. Possibly, some of these children were small, and we shall not forget that when Jesus would illustrate true gentleness in the kingdom of heaven, He set a little child in the midst and bade His disciples become like him. John had, by grace, attained to childlikeness.

Longfellow and the Children.
John T. Brownbridge, the well-known writer, tells of a visit to his home by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. When Mr. Longfellow heard the children, he called for them. They were somewhat overawed by his gray hair, beard and venerable aspect, but he soon put them at ease by saying: "Where are your dolls? I want you to show me your dolls! Not the fine ones you keep for company, but those you love best and play with every day." They had soon brought their shabby little favorites with battered noses, and were eagerly telling him their names and histories, while he questioned them with an interest which won their hearts. Mr. Brownbridge could only think of Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

May the Lord sanctify all our human relationships as those of the Apostle of Love were sanctified!

God's Help Necessary.

In Thee, therefore, Lord God, I put all my hope and refuge, on Thee I repose all my tribulation and anguish; for I find all to be infirm and unstable whatever I behold out of Thee. For neither will many friends avail me, nor strong helpers bring me succor, nor wise counselors give me useful answer, nor books of learned men counsel me, nor all precious substance set me free, nor any secret and pleasant place keep me safe, if Thou Thyself stand not by me, help not, strengthen, cheer, teach and keep me.—Thomas a Kempis.

When Happiness Comes.

There are few days set down in the calendar of a man's life in which happiness comes in her own pure and original beauty. When she does, she is attended by holy affections; she comes as when she first wandered in the garden of Eden, and fills the heart with her presence. Fame, Wealth, and Ambition, the idols of the earth, are not there; but Love and her tender relations and holy ties, at once the image and the boon of its Divine Creator.

Long Day Coming.

The friction set up on the earth by the tidal drag is acting as a brake, causing the earth to turn more slowly, thereby increasing the day's length by one two-hundredth of a second in a century. The effect being eventually a day of 1,400 hours.

Care of Ferns.

One teaspoonful of household ammonia in one gallon of water is an excellent combination for watering your fern occasionally. Use not more than once a month.

TEXT—That we, being delivered out of the hands of our enemies, might serve Him without fear.—Luke 1:74.

Something more than political liberty was in the mind of the man who uttered these words. He was thinking of a promise, confirmed by an oath, made to his ancestors long before, a promise having personal and spiritual application as well as a national and political aspect.

The human soul has many spiritual enemies that gather around and settle down upon it. The Bible names seven of these: the guilt of sin, which brings condemnation; the dominion of sin, which brings despair; the thralldom of the world, which promises satisfaction and never gives it; the voice of the law which requires righteousness and prohibits unrighteousness; the powers of darkness, subtle and blinding; the fear of death, with its separating power and the wrath to come as the result of sin.

These create an unholy fear from which there is no human escape. Just as enemies around a fort cause uncertainty and concern unless the fort is held by an invincible force, so does sin produce misgiving and fear. There is no force in the human heart superior to the assaults of sin and Satan. Therefore, there is no human escape from this unholy fear. Neither the boldness of ignorance, nor the boastfulness of presumption, nor the game of bluff will avail here. In the last analysis a man is what he is before God, which in common speech means that he is a sinner by nature and practice. "He that committeth sin is the bond servant of sin." The first need of all such is deliverance.

The deliverance provided fully meets the need of the case. Over against sin, in all its aspects, the world with all its glitter, the law with its claims and requirements; the powers of darkness with their subtle delusions; the fear of death and the "wrath to come," one can, if he so will, write the words of I Thes. 1:10, "Jesus which delivered us;" or Gal. 1:4, "He gave himself for our sins that he might deliver us from this present evil world, or Rom. 7:5, "We are delivered from the law," or I Cor. 15:55-57, "The sting of death is sin and the strength of sin is the law, but thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." Here is a great deliverance adequate in every respect, making provision for the guilt of the past, meeting the need of the present and inspiring a glorious hope for the future. Thus "being delivered out of the hands of our enemies" we "should serve Him without fear."

The best service that can be offered to God prior to our spiritual and experimental deliverance through Christ is characterized in Scripture as "dead works." These dead works are the result of the effort to atone for sin. They are the sum total of an attempt to do the best we can with the hope and purpose of making amends for the evil that is in heart and life. Instinctively the human spirit senses the holiness of God and its own unholiness. Conscience reaffirms what Scriptures assert, namely, "that your iniquities have separated between you and your God." Then the question arises, "What must I do to be saved?" Every answer to this question, with the exception of one, has been false and misleading. Reason says: "Do something, work, serve." God's revelation speaks out of something to do but of something done by another, not of human works but of Christ's finished work, not of service as a way of deliverance but deliverance as a way of service. It points to Calvary as a place of pardon, of peace and of power. Being delivered by the mighty work of Christ in death and resurrection, we can serve without fear.

The service of a delivered soul is a glad, free service. "I gave thee thy liberty," says Christ, and the heart replies: "Master, I will serve Thee forever." Like Saul of Tarsus, who when converted, signed himself, "Paul, the bondservant of Jesus Christ," so does the truly-saved person bring to his Lord, not only his sins but his life. Like the prodigal he asks only to be made a servant, but the Father first gives him place as a son, and then as such he goes about the Father's business. Deliverance, service—this is always God's order.

Think First Upon God.

In the morning, when you awake, accustom yourself to think first upon God, or something in order to His service; and at night also, let Him close thine eyes; and let your sleep be necessary and healthful, not idle and expensive of time, beyond the needs and conveniences of nature; and sometimes be curious to see the preparation which the sun makes, when he is coming forth from his chambers of the east.—Jeremy Taylor.

The Great Master of Souls.

Give yourself away to the great Master of souls. You will have Christ in you, and you will find Him the great secret of progress; you will find you are a different person this time next year.—The Bishop of London.

Really Too Bad.

Betty, who had been at grandmother's on a visit, was informed of the arrival of a new baby brother at the home during her absence. "I just can't leave home without something happens," she exclaimed, somewhat disgustedly.

Origin of Tuning Forks.

Tuning forks are among the most important of acoustical instruments. They were invented in 1711 by John Shore, Handel's trumpeter, and since then have been invaluable to makers of instruments and to musicians also.

LESSON FOR APRIL 16

EASTER LESSON

LESSON TEXT—John 20:31.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is risen indeed.—Luke 24:6.

PRIMARY AND JUNIOR TOPIC—The First Easter.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why We Observe Easter Day.

I. Jesus Manifests Himself to the Disciples, Thomas Being Absent (vv. 19-25).

He appeared to several of His disciples at several different times during that day. This is the first appearance to the disciples as a body. The rumors of His several appearances on that day caused the disciples to assemble to talk over the matter. For fear of the Jews, they met in a room and barred the door. While they were discussing the strange happenings of the day, the Lord mysteriously appeared before them with the greeting of good cheer, "Peace be unto you." He did not come with censure for their failure and desertion. At His birth "he angels announced 'Peace.' Just before he took His departure, He said: 'Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you' (John 14:27); 'Let not your heart be troubled' (John 14:1); and now the first word after His resurrection is 'Peace.' Having calmed their fears, He gave them an unmistakable evidence of His resurrection. 'And when He had so said, He showed unto them His hands and His side. Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord.' Their doubts needed to be scattered, and His peace needed to be upon them. Consider:

1. The disciples' commission (v. 21). "As my Father hath sent Me, even so send I you." This commission was not simply to a class, as the eleven, but to all Christians. In Luke 24:33 we find that there were others there in that meeting besides the eleven when Jesus showed himself to them and commissioned them, showing that the commission is not confined to a class or order, but is wide as the Christian body itself. All Christians, therefore, are envoys and representatives of Christ. The exercise of this great function is not merely optional with the individual, but is obligatory upon him. The Lord placed it upon a plane with His own commission from the Father—"As my Father hath sent me, so send I you."

2. The disciples' equipment (v. 22). "He breathed on them, and said unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost." The mission of the disciple is a very great one, but every one who goes forth to its execution He clothes with the power of a new life by the bestowment of His Spirit. No one who has this equipment shall ever fail. The Lord's representatives have His life in them. The barrenness of our efforts is due to our failure to take by faith our equipment.

3. The disciples' authority (v. 23). "Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained." This authority was not by virtue of office, but by virtue of having the Holy Ghost. This would give the spiritual discernment to know who had or who had not repented, and consequently, to pronounce pardon or not.

II. Jesus Manifests Himself to the Disciples, Thomas Being Present (vv. 26-29).

Thomas was absent at the first appearance of Jesus. His absence deprived him of a vision of the Lord. Absence from the assembly of believers always occasions loss. The other disciples go to Thomas at once with the glad news of the resurrection, but he will not believe. His stubborn disbelief is such that he doggedly declares that unless he sees the prints of the nails, etc., he will not believe. It is right to demand evidence, but to prescribe terms is rank unbelief. Note:

1. The Lord's kindness to those who have difficulties. Thomas deserved rebuke, but the Lord kindly supplied the evidence which he demanded.

2. The revelation of the Lord transforms a doubter into a possessor.

III. The Conclusion of the Gospel (vv. 30-31).

In these verses John's arguments are summarized, and an explanation is given as to why he wrote this Gospel. Many other things could have been written, but these that he wrote he judged adequate to prove his point: To prove that (1) Jesus of Nazareth was the expected Messiah; (2) that He was divine—the very Son of God; (3) that those who believe on Him as God's only Son—the Messiah—would receive eternal life. Eternal life is in Him and only as He is appropriated by faith can men be saved.

What Christ Saw in World.

Christ saw much in this world to weep over, and much to pray over; but He saw nothing in it to look upon with contempt.

Happiness in Our Heart.

The happiness that we vainly seek the world over is all the time within us, nestled close to our own hearts.—Bruce Calvert.

Arkansas Philosophy.

Some people seem to think that the bolt weevils, hoppers, bugs, tramps and old bachelors are a nuisance to any community. Please remember that the Bible says all things work together for good.—Nevada County Picayune.

Gnawty Doggie!

Little Boy (to nervous lady afraid of his dog)—Don't be scared, lady. He never bites; he only nibbles.—Boston Transcript.

Weights Coal in Transit.

For power plants an automatic scale has been invented which weighs coal passing from fuel bins to boilers.

POULTRY

STIMULANT AIDS SOME HENS

When Fowls Are Off Their Feed and Act Dullish, a Little Pepper Will Brace Them Up.

A flock of laying hens in good health has no need for condiments, say poultrymen of the United States Department of Agriculture. A hen whose digestive apparatus is in good working order needs no more stimulation for egg production than is provided by a good, well-balanced ration, proper care and housing. But when hens are off their feed and look dullish a little jigger of pepper or something of the sort in the ration may cause her to pick up and run on all cylinders again.

Various snappy and pungent condiments are used for the purpose, but the following mixture has been found as good as any and may be made up by the flock owner at low cost: Mix equal parts of ground red pepper, ground allspice, ground ginger and ground cloves, and one-half part of ground fennel seed. Many of the condiments sold to flock owners are largely filler and sell for a high price. In the mixture given there is nothing but the essentials. A tablespoonful of the mixture in 2 quarts of moist mash 2 or 3 times a week or a teaspoonful in 1 quart daily should be fed until the birds are back in good order. It is not good practice for poultrymen to feed these things when the flock is in good appetite. When feed attracts hens little more can be done to stimulate the egg organs.

No Oil From the Banana.
The bureau of chemistry says that there is no oil manufactured from the banana itself. There is a preparation known as banana acetate, which is used for gliding, etc. It has the odor of the banana and is often termed banana oil.

The World's Bible.

Christ has no hands but our hands
To do His work today;
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in His way;
He has no tongues but our tongues
To tell men how He died;
He has no help but our help
To bring them to His side.

We are the only Bible
The careless world will read;
We are the sinner's gospel,
We are the scoffer's creed;
We are the Lord's last message,
Given in deed and word;
What if the type is crooked?
What if the print is blurred?
What if our hands are busy
With other work than His?
What if our feet are walking
Where sin's alloyment is?
What if our tongues are speaking
Of things His lips would spurn?
How can we hope to help Him
And hasten His return?

—Annie Johnson Flint.

Our Own Place.

"It seems as if the constant roar and din of the machinery must weary you; as if all these wheels and shafts and bands would confuse and drive you wild with their ceaseless motion," one said to a worker in a great mill.

"No'm, not after a little," she answered, quietly. "You soon get used to the noise, and you've just your own little place to stay, and only your own machine to mind; that's all you have to do with. You don't have to understand the rest of the things; somebody else runs them, and you soon quit thinking about it and learn just to watch your own work."

How it would simplify life if we all could do the same! The universe is so great and its mysteries so many that we grow troubled and confused in our efforts to comprehend it all. We cannot understand the power that moves and controls, nor see with what endless hands connect when they pass beyond our sight. We bewilder our brain with the wonder and problem of it all, and break our hearts with the vain effort to discover. But all that is asked of us is to stand faithfully in our own place and watch our own work.—Forward.

With a Long Life Past And a Longer Lived Future

"Hundreds of Gould Batteries, equipped with Dreadnaught Plates, were sold on the job" with service records averaging 4 years, 1 month.

The new Gould Dreadnaught Battery is a super-service battery—Dreadnaught Plates plus the new Dreadnaught Armored Separator.

THERE is but one test by which to judge any battery—its service record of the past, plus its service possibilities of the future.

The Gould of Yesterday—In the recent Gould Endurance Contest hundreds of batteries, with their famous Dreadnaught Plates, showed service records averaging 4 years, 1 month.

The Gould of Today—The new Gould Dreadnaught Battery is now available to every car owner. It has the same record-breaking Dreadnaught Plates, protected with the new acid-resisting Dreadnaught Armored Separators.

This combination insures super-battery service. It insures added life, added endurance, added economy to the battery that has already demonstrated longest life by the test of owners' records.

THE FORDSON $395. F. O. B. Detroit

The list price of the Fordson is now $395. F. O. B. Detroit, Mich. Think of it! There is not a power unit on the market at twice the price of the Fordson that can come anywhere near its quality and all-around dependability and usefulness. Nor are they capable of performing half the tasks which the Fordson "cats up" every day.

This low price makes it possible for every farmer to own a FORDSON—in fact makes it expensive to be without one.

The Fordson now sells for approximately 15 cents per pound. Just stop and consider what this means.

Rough castings cost about 6¢ per lb.
Steel and forgings 8¢ per lb.
Brass, bronze and ball bearings, etc.

bringing the total material cost of the tractor up to approximately 10¢ a pound, leaving only the extremely small margin of five cents per pound over the bare cost of materials to cover all manufacturing operations, labor and overhead. Surely there is nothing we can say that should more strongly impress the farmer with the fact that the Fordson Tractor at $395 represents the best and most profitable investment any farmer can make.

Substantial reductions have been announced in the price of power farming implements and Fordson equipment. The Ford Dealer's prices are about equivalent to the cost of a team of good horses with horse-drawn equipment. The Fordson outfit will do as much work as two or three teams with an actual reduction in operation and maintenance costs.

ESSENTIALS OF INCUBATORS

Chief Point, Whether Small or Large Machine Is Used, Is to Have Air Fresh.

Incubators are operated successfully in a great variety of places. Small machines generally are set in a room or the cellar of the house. A special cellar or incubator house should be provided where the incubator equipment is extensive or where mammoth machines are used. The chief points are to have a room which is not subject to great variations in temperature and which is well ventilated, so that the air is fresh and pure, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1103, Incubation of Hens' Eggs, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

If built above ground the walls of the incubator house should be double and the entire building well insulated. Incubators may be operated in buildings with single walls, especially in mild climates, but a well-insulated room is preferable. Good results in hatching are secured in incubator cellars and in incubator rooms which are entirely above the ground level.

The incubator room or cellar should be large enough to allow the attendant to work around the machines conveniently. Many incubator cellars are provided with some system of ventilation in addition to the windows, while in others the ventilation is controlled entirely by the latter method. Muslin screens on the windows provide good ventilation without draft and at the same time keep the direct rays of the sun from the machines. Many incubator cellars have cement floors, which are easier than dirt floors to keep clean and neat.

LICE ARE QUITE INJURIOUS

Parasites Have Been Known to Destroy
Dozens of Turkeys in Short Period of Time.

Experienced turkey breeders agree that lice are the most dangerous to adult turkeys during the fall and winter. They have been known to destroy dozens of birds in a few weeks. The usual reason given is that the turkeys are unable to find dust baths at this season with which to fight the pest in their own way, and consequently, the lice get an unusual foothold.

PROFITABLE TO RAISE DUCKS

Fowls Mature Rapidly and Are Ready
for Market at Ten or Eleven
Weeks of Age.

One of the best sources of profit in poultry raising, particularly where market poultry is concerned, is in the raising of ducks. They mature very rapidly and are generally ready for market at ten or eleven weeks of age. If intended for market purposes, for breeders they bring good prices if matured and held over until the breeding season.

Mrs. A. T. Chance, Gay St., gave the following statement July 20, 1916: "I never lose an opportunity to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as they have done me lots of good, putting my kidneys in a natural condition. Doan's not only stopped my back from aching and paining, but brought me relief from sharp, rheumatic pains in my arms and shoulders, which often nearly kept me from getting my hands to my head. My kidneys caused no end of annoyance, the way they acted. After using Doan's Kidney Pills from Farlow's Pharmacy, I felt wonderfully in power, my back was stronger, the rheumatic pains disappeared and the action of my kidneys was more regular."

On January 15, 1921, Mrs. Chance added: "Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of kidney complaint and the cure has been a lasting one. I have no sign of the trouble now and I never miss a chance to recommend Doan's, when I hear anyone speak of kidney complaint."

"FIGHTING MOONSHINE"

Thrilling Story By a Great Speaker

Hon. John F. Kramer, Ex-U. S. Prohibition Commissioner

BERLIN M. E. CHURCH

WEDNESDAY, APR. 19, 8 P. M.

Come and Bring Your Friends Do Not Miss It. All Welcome.

This is to be a mass-meeting for the town of Berlin and the upper part of Worcester County. It is hoped that many people from the outlying towns will attend this meeting. Every citizen interested in law-enforcement ought to be present. It is not every day we have an opportunity to hear a man who knows as much about this vital question as Mr. Kramer.

In Memoriam.

In sad, but loving remembrance of my dear daughter, Edith V. Lewis, who departed this life six months ago, Oct. 4th, 1921.

In my heart your memory lingers, Sweetly, tender, fond and true; There is not a day, dear daughter, That I do not think of you.

Mother.

In our home you are fondly remembered. Sweet memories cling to your name; Hearts that loved you in deepest affection.

Still love you in death just the same. By Her Sisters and Brother.

B. H. S. Wins First Two Games of Season.

The first two games of baseball this season were played Friday, April 7th. The game was played between Buckingham High School and Girdlestone High School.

Both sides played very good ball, but there was nothing to stop the B. H. S. boys. They gave Girdlestone an absolute "walk-over," the score being 26 to 0, in favor of Berlin.

The second game was played on Tuesday at Girdlestone. The game was very close all the way through. The Girdlestone boys being at their best, and the Berlin boys being at about their worst, made it an interesting and exciting game. It ended with the score of 3 to 7 in favor of Berlin.

James Collins, O. R.

James Conaway.

The funeral of James Conaway, of Girdlestone, who died of pneumonia, Saturday, at the Eastern Shore State Hospital, was held Monday afternoon at the M. P. Church, Girdlestone, of which he was a member. Among those who attended were Mrs. Cora Onley and Mrs. William T. Quillin, of this place.

Surviving Mr. Conaway are two brothers: William, of Girdlestone, and John Conaway, of Delmar, and four sisters: Mrs. Onley, of Berlin, Mrs. William Jester, of Girdlestone, and Mrs. Thomas Johnson, near Girdlestone, and Mrs. Caroline Johnson, of Stockton. Mrs. Margaret Mitchell, of Berlin, is an aunt of the deceased.

Berlin Woman's Club.

The meeting of the Woman's Club Apr. 7th was one of unusual interest. The yearly election of officers took place, which resulted as follows: Mrs. Brevard, re-elected president; Mrs. Orlando Harrison, vice-president; Mrs. Willinger, secretary; Miss Margaretta Purnell, treasurer.

Mrs. Willinger read a very interesting and up-to-date paper on Prominent Women. A delegation of bankers called relative to the banquet for the Association of Bankers to be given Apr. 27th. After some discussion, the ladies decided to furnish the dinner for this occasion.

The next meeting of the club Apr. 21, will be a dress-making lesson, including the making of a dress form, Miss Walter in charge.

J. E. Shockley, a well-known merchant of Salisbury, died last Friday from a stroke of paralysis received two months before. He leaves a widow and one child.

The Amateur Detective

By WINIFRED DUNBAR

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

"This is the office of Mr. Arnold, detective?"

"Yes," bowed Robert Prince, telling the truth but conveying a wrong impression.

Only an hour ago he had been deploring with Arnold, his friend and a man who creditably followed the detective line as a science, the fact that his life had become practically rapid, profitless, almost unendurable.

Robert Prince was world weary because he had no motive in life. He had inherited money, but not a business. He really craved to be of some practical use in the world, but did not know how to begin. He had acted so bored that Arnold had laughingly suggested that he interest himself in some detective case.

"When I get a case that will really stir up your ingenuity and inactivity and get that idle mind out of its dull beaten track," said Arnold, "I'm going to make you interested in it," and now a case that held his attention had come to the front. Arnold was absent from the office, but Robert allowed his caller to think he was the famous sleuth.

"That is my name," said the young girl, handing a dainty card to Robert bearing a residence address and the name, "Miss Fidelia Blain." "I wish to engage your services, not in hunting down a criminal, but in recovering for me a large sum of money."

It was a clear, simple and yet startling narrative, that of the fair young girl. She had been an art student, her brother a traveling agent for a large steel firm. A sister had recently died leaving two small children. Their father was a dissolute scoundrel who had broken his wife's heart.

An uncle had left an estate to the surviving brother and sister. They had at once liquidated this and had faithfully placed a third of the proceeds in trust for the children.

This had infuriated John Barr, the brother-in-law. To quiet him, Fidelia had given him a thousand dollars. When he had squandered it in gambling he returned and had since been continuously annoying them with applications for small loans.

"I tolerated him," now related Fidelia, "until I had got through some matters in court where I would be appointed the guardian of the children. Mr. Barr kept coming to the house under pretense of a right to see them. Yesterday evening I locked up in my desk nearly four thousand dollars in cash and twenty thousand dollars in unregistered bonds which I received from our broker too late to take to the bank. This morning they were gone. Mr. Barr is missing and near the desk

I picked up a grove with his name written on the inside lining." "Then he must be the thief?" observed Robert.

"He must be. For the sake of the children I do not want him arrested, but I must get back the money and bonds."

"I will take the case," announced Robert.

Robert was a trifle ashamed of himself as he realized that he was simply eager to keep in the company of his fascinating client as long as possible.

Remarkable good fortune rewarded his efforts. Robert finally came across a man who knew Barr who had seen him staggering home early that morning. Where was his home, inquired Robert. An hour later he pushed open the door of a room in a large office building to find lying prone across a bed—the very man he was after.

Barr seemed stupefied, drugged. Robert tried to arouse him, but could not do so.

For hours Robert watched by the bedside of the man.

Towards evening the patient was in a delirium. It seemed that Barr had intended to flee the city, but had got to drinking. He met some associates and bragged of netting a fortune. They had drugged him and had taken a satchel away from him.

"Stuffed with paper—ha! ha!" gloated the delirious Barr. "The money, the bonds safe. The key—the key! They are baffled—I am rich!" "The key—the key!" was the mad burden of the invalid. Robert noticed that he lay on one side; his naked shoulder revealed. He had observed a plaster there at the first but had left it to wear off.

It had done this in part. One edge was turned over. Something glittered. Robert investigated. He detached from under the plaster a small flat key bearing a number and the initials, "U. S. D. V."

Within two hours Robert Prince knew that key unlocked a box rented by Barr in the Union Safety Deposit vaults. Within four he had learned that the bonds and money were contained within it and that all Fidelia had to do was to prove her right to it.

Barr was sent to a country sanatorium, but died within the week and a family scandal was avoided.

A week later Robert went into the office of Arnold and confessed his bold detective exploit.

"I suppose I ought to pay you a fee," he said, "for putting me in a position where I could be of service to the sweetest—dearest—"

"Ah!" smiled the shrewd detective readily. "Then you have at last found something worth living for? All right. Bless you, my children, bless you!"

Foiled Again.

Detective Brandenburg's attention was attracted to a blind man on Central avenue Friday afternoon who he thought was watching him. Arkansas Thomas Cat.

The Double Bank Theft

By MALCOLM BROWN

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

Stevens, the assistant teller, relieved Waterbury between the hours of one and two. On Saturdays Waterbury went home at twelve, when the bank closed, and Stevens remained behind to clean up the work. This occurred about an hour and a half longer.

Stevens was getting fifty dollars a week, and his wife was in the hospital. The delicate and difficult operation had been successful, but Stevens owed nearly five hundred dollars. The sharks were pressing him, too.

He had thought over his problem. In his desperation the moral aspect of the projected crime amounted to nothing. He knew that he could walk out of the bank, just before closing time, with four or five thousand dollars in his pockets, in the shape of hundred-dollar bills. Old Wrigley, who superintended the depositing of the money in the safe, was as blind as a bat. The exploit would not call for any remarkable exhibition of nerve.

"What's the matter, Stevens? Why are you looking at me like that?" demanded Waterbury irritably.

"I beg your pardon," stammered Stevens. Waterbury had been very trying of late; he seemed bent on picking a quarrel, and on the flimsiest of pretexts.

Waterbury was pacing the floor of his cage when Stevens relieved him at twelve o'clock that Saturday morning. "I thought you were never coming," he growled. He nodded curtly, and, without another word, opened the door of the cage, passed out and let it slide to behind him. Stevens watched him with a rather grim smile as he disappeared.

The bank was closed to the public. Stevens remained alone in the teller's cage. One by one the clerks and assistants went out. Presently nobody was left in the bank except the watchman, Wrigley, the cashier, and himself. Then Stevens hastily transferred five packages of ten hundred-dollar bills apiece to his coat pocket, finished his work and took the money to the safe. Stevens found himself in the street.

He jumped aboard a car and descended half a mile away, at the furnished-room house in which his new home was to be.

That evening for the first time in months he had dinner at a restaurant. He smoked a cigar, strolled about town and finally went home and to bed. Not until next morning did he open the packages of bills.

Everyone except the top bill in each package was a Confederate greenback. Instead of the five thousand dollars which he had imagined was in his possession, he had just five hundred—barely enough to pay the doctor's expenses.

Stevens was paralyzed with dismay. There was only one course now—to go back and snuggle the money into the drawer again, one not under the restless watching of Wrigley, but under the eagle glances of Waterbury.

A wave of disgust and utter self-contempt passed over Stevens.

Stevens spent a miserable night. He cursed, disquiet, self-loathing, and a vast pity for his helplessness to make Mary's life happy struggled within him. When at last he reached the bank it was to find the officers gathered together in groups, eagerly discussing something.

"You've heard the news Stevens?" inquired Wrigley.

"No," answered Stevens.

"Waterbury's dead."

The room seemed to swim round Stevens.

"Yes, he was killed in the wreck on the Southern & Eastern this morning. He was then four hundred miles from New York, and his clothes were stuffed with bills aggregating twelve thousand dollars. We've searched the safe, and find he had filled it with Confederate bills, with a single good one on top of each package. They're counting up the loss now."

Stevens staggered into his cage.

"Mr. Harrison wants to see you," announced a boy presently.

Stevens went into the president's office as if he were drunk.

"Ah, Mr. Stevens, this is a very unfortunate occurrence," said the president. "You have heard of it, of course. Well, Mr. Stevens, we are going to ask you to act in Mr. Waterbury's place for the present, and later possibly, we shall make the position permanent. The salary, you may know, is two thousand five hundred dollars. Good-morning."

Stevens' first act was to slip the packages away where their presence might be discovered later. His second was to pray with all his heart to be made worthy of his fortune.

CIRCLES HELP FARM INCOME

Excellent Example of Way in Which Home Demonstration Workers Are Aiding Farmers.

Home demonstration workers realize that before substantial improvements can be made in rural home life there must be more cash income with which to install conveniences, correct defects, beautify the surroundings, or improve clothing. On most farms the production and selling of eggs and poultry offer the best immediate possibilities for increasing the income. The home demonstration agents of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges, therefore have turned their attention to giving help in this field whenever there seemed to be need of it.

The poultry project at Orchard Gardens community, Dakota County, Minn., is an excellent example of the way in which home demonstration work thus meets a real want. The home demonstration agent helped to interest people in poultry raising as a source of income, which would mean income during the winter as well as during the summer.

The poultry project was started by the poultry specialist. During the project the members formed a poultry association. The first work of the association was to post their orders for feed, thus saving a considerable sum. The second step of this association was to organize an egg circle to make plans for the marketing of the eggs. The egg circle was formed and by-laws adopted, making provision for a guaranty that their product would be of excellent quality. Each member was furnished with a stamp with the name of the egg circle and a number identifying the eggs. In case a bad egg was shipped, it could be traced to the owner.

Through the home demonstration agent a market for the eggs was found with the Women's Community Council of Minneapolis, the office of the Minneapolis home demonstration agent being used as the distributing center. The production from the egg circle soon outgrew this form of marketing and the president of the Orchard Gardens Poultry association then secured a market for the eggs through one of the high-class markets in eggs and butter in Minneapolis.

Furnish Mineral Matter Which is of Great Importance—Found in Small Crumbs.

Heavy bones of all kinds may be put in shape for chicken feed by baking until brittle, and then rolling or pounding into small crumbs. These baked bones furnish mineral matter which is of great importance in nutrition. Green bone is probably the best source of mineral matter, but green bone is not always at hand, and bones for baking are more or less abundant on every farm.

INDEPENDENT REFORM.

Weather and Crop Condi- tions in Maryland and Delaware for Week End- ing August 15, 1922.

The week was cool, with a mean temperature about 5 degrees below normal. There was much cloudiness, and a deficiency in the sunshine. Light showers occurred on the 9th, and, except in western Maryland, also daily during the second half of the week.

The weather of the week retarded plant growth, but was favorable for forming operations. Tomatoes and late potatoes show considerable injury from the recent excessive rain
over the southern half of the Eastern Shore. Otherwise, crops and pastures are generally in good to excellent condition, except in western Maryland, where drought continues and crops and pastures are deteriorating.

Corn is good to excellent, except in western Maryland and locally in north-central Maryland and the extreme northern portion of the Eastern Shore, where it needs rain. Corn is maturing in southern Maryland.

Cutting of oats has been completed in Allegany and Garrett Counties. Threshing of grains is still in progress, though it has been completed in some localities.

Digging of early potatoes has ended over the southern portion of the section, and continues in the northern portion.

The harvest of sugar corn, truck
crops, early apples, early peaches, cantaloupes, tobacco, etc., continues to progress favorably.

Except where ground is too dry or too wet, fall plowing has made considerable headway.

Warm, dry weather is needed,
especially for corn, in the regions
where rains have been excessive during the past few weeks.

J. H. Spencer, Section Director.

Home Hunters Take All Except Ghost

It was a haunted house in a gossip neighborhood, related the New York Herald. Residents assembled daily and talked in muted tones of spirits and queer noises. With such advance advertising the real estate agent found it difficult to get a "prospect" near the house. As a last resort he decided to have the place redecorated and to install new electric fixtures and plumbing.

The work had scarcely been completed when the agent heard a "live
one" had visited the property. Rushing off to the caretaker he inquired breathlessly: "Is it true that someone has taken the house?"

"No, sir, not yet," replied the caretaker, "but they've taken the fixtures, piping and doorknobs. Perhaps they'll come back for the house."

Candy and Stages of Love.

The candy man is the first one to know whether Mr. Newkirk's affections are beginning to cool off, according to the New York News. Long before even his wife expects it. He is aware of it—and convinced. That is because of the candy Mr. Newkirk buys her. No longer does he come into the store asking for the "very best candy" and wonder for half an hour whether she will like it in a ribboned or plain container. He walks in and asks for a pound of chocolates
—"any kind." That is the first signal.

When several months later he comes in and says, "She wants a box of assorted chocolates," it shows that things are in a bad way. He is merely repeating her order—and has long since ceased to buy her any candy of his own accord.

Famous Forest of Zurich.

Out of every 100 square miles in Switzerland 37 are covered with forests—the result of a policy now centuries old.

The municipal forest of Zurich, famous throughout the world, has been producing timber continuously during the last 600 years. Crop after crop has been grown and marketed and new crops started.

It is a common saying in Europe
that "Switzerland holds her mountains up and her taxes down" with her forests. These forests, largely municipal, protect farms and towns by preventing landslides. In addition they pay dividends which materially reduce tax levies. Moreover, it is her forests, as well as her mountains, which make the men of Switzerland strong and selfreliant. It is her forests, too, which help to attract and charm tourists.

A Statement by the Bishops

The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in session at Indianapolis, adopted the following statement:

"The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church have noted the present discussion of the Volstead Act and of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution. Such discussion was to be expected. In a democracy would be expected to discover or invent reasons for the repeal of the laws. Allowing that all the reasons anticipated have not been realized, that fact lies not against the law, but against those who have failed in its enforcement and against those who have encouraged the betrayal of administrative trust. When all has been said, the accomplishment in the writing of these particular laws makes the greatest chapter in America's history of moral reform. It has attracted the attention of the world. It has given to our industrial life an advantage recognized by economists everywhere.

"The relation of the drink traffic to crime has long been familiar. We need to see that the disrespect- ful treatment of prohibitory laws is not a mere academic impropriety. The great objectives of civilization can not be gained where lawless- ness goes unpunished and unre- buked. Mob violence is today a menace which demands most care- ful thought and wisest treatment. The ability to suppress or prevent disorder which jeopardizes the rights of property and life is one of the ultimate tests of civilization.

"Obedience to law is not an abso- lute to be rendered or refused on the basis of individual or group choice. This we believe. But it is incon- sistent to inveigh against the spirit of lawlessness in other fields if in our attitude toward prohibitory en- actment we encourage contempt of law.

"Those who make public opin- ion must be held accountable for the total result when inconsiderate criticism of laws induces insult to laws. The press of this country must be made to see its responsi- bility inescapable if its persistent caricature of so-called temperance laws lead the immature to believe that law itself belongs really and only in the comic supplement.

"Where present legislation seems inadequate, let it be perfected. Where the law is ineffectual, find the cause and, as quickly as may be, remedy it. Let us insist upon it that those who are sworn to up- hold the Constitution deal with such occasions not as propagandists of personal judgment, but as defend- ers of the law.

"Let us choose for office those only who have by word or act es- tablished their right of recognition as the friends of prohibitory reform, and in doing this, we would record help given to this cause by the Pres- ident of the United States and by the Chief Justice and we would pay tribute to those in the House of Representatives and in the Senate of the United States and to those in other places of public trust who have taken and held their place on the side of national morality.

"For the sake of the nation and the world, in the interest of indus- trial prosperity as of peace and or- der, for the promotion of all the ends of education and religion, we accept for ourselves and urge upon all our people the solemn obliga- tion to guard jealously the results already gained and to complete the work upon which so many lovers of mankind have wrought, antepat- ing with confidence the day when, despite the cupidity of some and the treacherous instigation of others, the life of the nation shall be lifted to the level of its laws."

Luther B. Wilson, Secretary.
By the Board of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Indi- anapolis, Ind., June 24th, 1922.

The above is respectfully referred to all church people of the State of Maryland.

Same Old Story But a Good One.

Mrs. Mahala Burns, Barnaba, Md., relates an experience, the like of which has happened in almost every neigh- borhood in this country, and has been told and related by thousands of others, as follows: "I used a bottle of Chamber- lain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy about nine years ago and it cured me of flux (dysentery). I had another at- tack of the same complaint three or four years ago and a few doses of this remedy cured me. I have recommended it to dozens of people since I first used it and shall continue to do so for I know it is a quick and positive cure for bowel troubles."

INDUSTRY CALLS ON SCIENCE

Chemist Today Plays a Highly Im- portant Part in Enterprise of Every Description.

It is said that whenever a car wheel breaks on a certain great trunk line the fragments are taken to the com- pany's laboratory and carefully stud- ed, so that when the next order for car wheels is made up, if structural weakness caused the accident, it may be avoided against. All the purchases by the railroad of iron, steel, on- lumber or what are tested by the chemists to make sure they draw up the required tests to which every wheel who sells the road supplies must con- form. This is not an isolated in- stance. It illustrates the practicality of applied science, and the reliance of acute business men upon the ex- pert opinion that comes from against wasting material, time and money.

A class graduated from one of our largest technological schools and numbered almost two hundred young men and women. Eleven of them took up special studies in this institution or employment within a year. They en- gaged in the service of electric com- panies, railroads, cotton and paper mills, mines, machine works, iron and steel foundries and others of our most important industrial enterprises.

Ignition of Escaping Hydrogen.

There have been so many cases of spontaneous ignition of hydrogen gas when charging balloons that an in- vestigation has been carried on to determine the cause. By observing in the dark a lot of hydrogen escaping through a pipe flange, it was found that a brush discharge of static elec- tricity was plainly visible. When the pipe was taped to stop the dust, an explosion occurred. From the in- vestigation it would seem that the spontaneous ignition was due to the friction between the hydrogen and the dust of iron rust and to the brush discharge of static electricity from the electrified particles. — Popular Me- chanics Magazine.

Order of Publication.

McCabe vs. McCabe, et al. No. 3210 Chancery in the Circuit Court for Worcester County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree declaring Tilghman Barnes and Archibald Earl Barnes, Jr., the legally adopted children of William Whaley McCabe and changing their said names to Tilghman McCabe and William Hol- loway McCabe, respectively.

The petition states that William Whaley McCabe and Harriet Tilghman Mc- Cabe were married on June 18th, 1913, and are residents of Ocean City, Wor- cester County, Maryland; that the said Harriet Tilghman McCabe has two infant sons, namely, Tilghman Barnes, born September 28th, 1908, and Archi- bald Earl Barnes, Jr., born May 17th, 1910, both of whom have been in her sole care and custody since November 25th, 1912, and both of whom are now and have been continuously living with her and her said husband since their respective marriages; that the said chil- dren were born of a former marriage of the said Harriet Tilghman McCabe with one Archibald Earl Barnes, Sr., which said marriage was dissolved by a decree of the Second Judicial District Court of the State of Nevada, in and for the County of Washoe, on the 28th day of November, 1912, and by which decree the custody and control of the said children was awarded and granted to their said mother, all of which will more fully appear by reference to an exemplified copy of said decree to be filed herein when and as required by this Honorable Court; that the said William Whaley McCabe desires to legally adopt the said Tilghman Barnes and Archibald Earl Barnes, Jr., as his children, and that they may legally bear the names of Tilghman McCabe and William Holloway McCabe, re- spectively, without, however, affecting or in anywise disturbing the natural and legal kinship existing between them and the said Harriet Tilghman Mc- Cabe; that since the marriage of the said William Whaley McCabe and Har- riet Tilghman McCabe, in expression of the love and affection which the said William Whaley McCabe has borne for said children, he has endeavored at all times faithfully to perform the duties and functions of a father to them, which they have reciprocated with re- spect, obedience and loyalty and their genuine love and affection; that the said William Whaley McCabe believes that the best interests and welfare of the children, as well as their permanent happiness and tranquility, will be materially promoted and advanced if this Honorable Court shall by its decree constitute the said legally adopted children, and that the said known place of residence of the said Archibald Earl Barnes, Sr., and the said known place of residence of the said Harriet Tilghman McCabe, and he is now a resident of Maryland.

It is upon this last day of July, 1922, ordered by the Circuit Court for Worcester County, Md., in Equity, that the petitioner by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some news- paper published in said Worcester County once in each of four successive weeks before the thirty-first day of August, 1922, give notice to the said Archibald Earl Barnes, Sr., of the ob- ject and substance of this petition, and warning him to be and appear in this Court, in person or by Solicitor, on or before the fifteenth day of September, next, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

The Vacuum Man

By ROSE MEREDITH

© 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The young man with the vacuum cleaner paused at the foot of the steps and raised his straw hat.

"May I—?" he was beginning, when Barbara smiled negatively.

"I am sorry, but we do not need a cleaner," she said pleasantly.

"Everybody needs one of these—"

that is, every household should have one. He pulled out a little book and studied it carefully. "It removes all the dirt from carpets, stuffed furniture, walls, bedding, curtains, clothing, without leaving a trace of dust behind. It is sanitary, speedy and saving."

He paused breathlessly. "It is very warm today," he apologized, as he drew out an immaculate handkerchief.

"It is, and it must be very exhausting to talk to people and persuade them to buy," said Barbara primly, for she had been taught not to enter into conversation with strangers, and yet he had a very engaging manner and resembled Alice Westery so strongly that she wanted to ask him if they were related. This was hardly likely, because Alice belonged to a rich and fashionable family and all the members of the family were affluent and very prominent.

Barbara was pouring out a glass of lemonade—it was a tall, thin glass, frosty and inviting, with the yellow rind of lemons and a long straw floating on top. She brought the glass to the edge of the porch. "I am sure you must be thirsty," she said, "and it must be hard to sell vacuum cleaners around Meadowbank."

He drained the glass with a little bow as he handed it back. "It is delicious, thank you. Perhaps you will tell me why I cannot sell the cleaners around here."

"Why there are no houses wired for electricity."

"The dickens!" he ejaculated, growing very red. "Anyone but an idiot at the game would have known that before starting out. Who is the local agent for the nearest power station?"

"My father. He has tried to interest the people, but they cling to their of stoves and heaters and lights. There is gas in the village."

"Thank you. I am going to talk to your father. If I can persuade some of the people to petition for electric service, then I'll come back in a month and sell cleaners to them. Will you save your order for me?"

"Of course," laughed Barbara. And, with a businesslike air he lifted his canvas bag, raised his hat and strode down the brick walk to the white gate.

It was pleasant, sitting there on the porch, looking down the red path between the sweet-scented boxes and watching the man's straight form stepping briskly down the road toward the village. She hoped her father would do business with the stranger. She rather liked him for his gentle courtesy, his evident refinement, and she may have woven him into her daydreams as she waited for her friends.

THE UNWRITTEN LAW

By HUBERT RAY

Copyright, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.

"Do you believe in the unwritten law?"

"I do not. I believe in the law of the land, and I intend to do my part in enforcing it."

The prosecuting attorney beamed, the judge sighed gratefully. Ten jurors had been dismissed because they would not give a satisfactory answer to the question. The defendant's counsel also beamed, though the juror's answer had been damaging to his client's chances.

"And above all, gentlemen, you will remember that the unwritten law plays no part in the jurisprudence of this country."

The prosecuting attorney wiped his forehead and sat down. Mrs. Ellice, in the dock, wiped her eyes with her little handkerchief. She had killed her husband in cold blood because of another woman. He had been a brute. He had mistreated her. There seemed no way in which she could escape the penalty which the law enforced impartially upon men and women who take life. Mrs. Ellice would undoubtedly go to the electric chair. Never was there a clearer case.

The defending counsel did not plead the unwritten law at all. What was a man? Every one knows that it was a man. Two men? Women had killed. Law must be enforced. A life for a life.

He had a different defense. Mrs. Ellice, it appeared, according to her own statement, had a twin sister. The twins were devoted to each other. Her sister, Karoline, had visited the flat and shot her husband.

Had anybody seen the twin? No, unfortunately, she always passed for Mrs. Ellice. They had been estranged for years, and never met.

Had they had her sister arrested? Why could not evidence be brought to prove the existence of this mythical sister? The jurors smiled. It was pretty thin. It was ridiculous. Surely the defending counsel could have thought of a better line of defense than that!

Yet he was one of the leaders of the criminal bar. Well, the wisest men make mistakes sometimes. He had underestimated the intelligence of the jury. So Mrs. Ellice had to go to the chair.

The judge was speaking. "Gentlemen, you will acquit my maids of all sentiment and remember that the laws of this country must be upheld. You will deliver your verdict in accordance with the evidence."

The jury were in their room. "Well, gentlemen," said the foreman, "suppose we begin by taking a ballot."

They balloted, each holding his opinion to the foreman, who opened his paper and smiled as he thrust it into his pocket. "Of course we are all decided that the unwritten law shall play no part in our deliberations," he said. "Now about this twin sister."

The jury were coming into court. The verdict was a foregone conclusion. They were all hard-headed men, business and professional. Yet there was a shade of anxiety on the judge's face, all eyes turned toward the steps that led up to the dock.

Mrs. Ellice was coming up between two guards. She was a little, fair-haired woman, with thin hands and feet. It seemed incredible that that little hand could have committed murder. She was very brave, very calm.

"Damn the law!" shouted a man in the courtroom.

The judge nodded to the deputy sheriff, who removed the man. Mrs. Ellice was crying quietly into her handkerchief. She swayed. One of the guards supported her.

The members of the jury were looking at her. A buzz ran through the courtroom. Condemnation was on their brows. She had taken a life. There was no room for sentimentality.

"Gentlemen, are you agreed upon your verdict? Do you find that the prisoner, Madge Ellice, is guilty or not guilty of the murder of—?"

"Not guilty," said the foreman.

Cheers ran through the courtroom. The defending counsel tugged at his collar and smiled. He had avoided disaster to his future by the narrowest squeak. The prosecuting attorney smiled and nodded. Strange how calmly he took it. The shade of anxiety on the judge's face disappeared. He was smiling. He looked like a happy man. Perhaps he really believed in the twin sister.

Mrs. Ellice was recovering from her swoon. She came to just in time to shake hands with the juryman.

Like Roads of Ancient Egypt. The stone or macadam road, which was such a favorite until recently, is not new to our civilization. We are told that explorers in Egypt, endeavoring to find out how the ancient Egyptians were able to build the pyramids, were astounded at the remains of roads discovered.

"These roads were constructed originally very much as our roads are built today," says Doctor Fisher of the University of Pennsylvania. The right of way was leveled; the large stones were packed in. On top of these were placed layers of stones gradually diminishing in size until the newly ground stone of the surfacing was placed. This was wetted and pounded, probably by hand, until the top presented a smooth surface.

The bunch of straw in Continental Europe has as many meanings as a Chinese word. It is quite a little language in itself. When seen in the midst of a field tied to a post far from human habitation it is a warning against trespass. Woe to the sportsman or traveler who fails to understand this sign language.

Colony of Georgia. Georgia, the thirteenth colony, was founded in the spirit of benevolence for the poor. The laws of England permitted imprisonment for debt. Thousands of English laborers, who through misfortune and thoughtless contracts had become indebted to the rich, were annually arrested and thrown into jail. Whole families were destitute of clothing. To provide a refuge for these down-trodden poor of England and the distressed Protestants of other countries, James Oglethorpe, the philanthropist, a member of parliament, appealed to George II for the purpose of planting a colony in America. The petition was favorably heard and June 9, 1732, a royal charter was issued by which the territory between the Savannah and Altamaha rivers and westward from the upper mountains of those rivers, the Pacific was granted to a company for twenty-one years, to be held in trust for the poor. In honor of the king of England the province was named Georgia.

Tribe That Devours Its Children. "Since the doctor came here we have seen the most wonderful things happen. First of all he kills the sick people; then he cures them, and after that he wakes them up again." So a native girl wrote of Dr. Albert Schweitzer, author of "On the Edge of the Primeval Forest," who went out in 1913 to the Congo lowlands of the French colony of Gabon, there to maintain for and a half years a surgical and medical clinic for the negroes.

"Our country devours its own children," was the sage remark of an old chief. A vicious climate, a plentiful lack of proper food, overindulgence in rum and strong tobacco were killing off the natives rapidly when Doctor Schweitzer arrived. One of the worst problems was chronic nicotine poisoning, producing acute constipation and nervous disturbances. The tobacco comes from America in the form of leaves, frightfully strong, and is so highly prized by the natives that it is used as money—a single leaf buying two fine pineapples.

Fine View of Waterpout. It is rarely that an opportunist occurs to make a truly scientific observation of a waterpout. Yet an engineer on board an American schooner had what is said to be a unique experience of this kind off the coast of New South Wales. Fourteen complete waterpouts formed off the shore where he was at work with a theodolite, and he made careful measurements of them. The largest spout consisted of two cones, connected by a pipe-shaped spout. The top of the upper cone, which was inverted, was 5,014 feet above the sea. Each cone was about 100 feet in diameter at the base, diminishing gradually until it tapered into the spout. The length of the cones was about 250 feet each, leaving 4,500 feet for the length of the spout connecting them.

Each cone was about 100 feet in diameter at the base, diminishing gradually until it tapered into the spout. The length of the cones was about 250 feet each, leaving 4,500 feet for the length of the spout connecting them.

Weather Affects Wireless. A curious thing about wireless telegraphy is the way it is affected by sunrise and sunset. Transatlantic signals during the day are invariably clear, but those received at sunrise and sunset are said to be barely distinguishable.

Has Variety of Meanings. In Continental Europe, bunch of straw speaks "little language of its own."

The bunch of straw in Continental Europe has as many meanings as a Chinese word. It is quite a little language in itself. When seen in the midst of a field tied to a post far from human habitation it is a warning against trespass. The peasant knows that he will be arrested or punished if found within the boundaries of a field so marked, for the field has been lately sown with seed. Woe to the sportsman or traveler who fails to understand this sign language.

A small upright sign scarcely ever more than two feet long and much like a miniature torpedo boat standing on end is not a sign, as the first glance would cause one to suppose. To be sure, it hangs outside a cigar shop and resembles a had imitation of a cigar, but is in truth shaped and tied about like the original packages of tobacco brought to the country.

These packages, called "cigarettes," were of a given size, were large in the middle and tapered towards the ends. Such signs originated when many of those who had learned to smoke had not learned to read.

Red lights, which shine from afar at night, show to all smokers how they can replenish their stock. But the unwary stranger may bring up some night in the police station, for the red light is not only a sign of the tobacconist, but of the watchhouse as well. —New York Herald.

Colony of Georgia. Georgia, the thirteenth colony, was founded in the spirit of benevolence for the poor. The laws of England permitted imprisonment for debt. Thousands of English laborers, who through misfortune and thoughtless contracts had become indebted to the rich, were annually arrested and thrown into jail. Whole families were destitute of clothing. To provide a refuge for these down-trodden poor of England and the distressed Protestants of other countries, James Oglethorpe, the philanthropist, a member of parliament, appealed to George II for the purpose of planting a colony in America. The petition was favorably heard and June 9, 1732, a royal charter was issued by which the territory between the Savannah and Altamaha rivers and westward from the upper mountains of those rivers, the Pacific was granted to a company for twenty-one years, to be held in trust for the poor. In honor of the king of England the province was named Georgia.

Hot Weather Diseases. Disorders of the bowels are extremely dangerous, particularly during the hot weather of the summer months, and in order to protect yourself and family against a sudden attack, get a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. It can be depended upon. Many have testified to its excellence.

Lafayette Edward Wimbrow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sampson A. Wimbrow, died last Sunday at the George Washington Hospital, Washington, D. C., following an operation for acute appendicitis. Reports of his condition were very favorable, and members of his family received with great shock the news of his death. The young man was 25 years old and had spent the last four years in Washington.

Funeral services were first held in Washington, where many friends and his comrades of the Stewart Walcott Post, American Legion, gathered to pay their last tribute of respect to a young man who had radiated sunshine and cheered himself to them.

The body was brought to Salisbury by his sister, Miss Maude Wimbrow, and cousin, Mrs. Horace Mitchell, accompanied by Miss Bennington, of Baltimore, and Mr. Maurice Kneen and Mr. Carl Bogardus, of Washington. Funeral services were held at the home of his parents Wednesday at 2 p. m., by Dr. J. T. Herson. The body was borne to its last resting place by Mr. Kneen and Mr. Bogardus and his four brothers, W. Frank, Peter S., Oliver and David. Besides these and his parents, he leaves two sisters, Miss Maude Wimbrow, of Baltimore, and A. Virginia. The community extends sympathy to the family in this, their hour of deep sorrow.

IN OCEAN CITY HEIGHTS

The New Addition to OCEAN CITY MARYLAND

Beginning
TUESDAY, AUG. 22nd, 10 A. M. to 6 P. M.

Continuing

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 23rd, 10 A. M. to 6 P. M.

This Superb property fronts the South side of the New Concrete Highway and is the first high and dry ground West of the New Bridge leading into Ocean City. It is within 5 minutes walk or 1½ minutes by auto from the Ocean Beach. It is also the most elevated land between Ocean City and Berlin. Every foot we sell is high, dry and well drained.

As there are practically no available desirable building lots left in Ocean City East of the Bay, we are of the unreserved opinion that,

Ocean City Heights Is The Key To All Future Growth & Development of Ocean City.

Every lot and camp site will be sold unreservedly for the High Dollar on terms easy and attractive to every one who desires a permanent home, a summer cottage or a camp site, at the seaside, for vacation time. Every lot and Camp Site fronts a broad street, with a fine view of the Bay, town and Ocean; close enough for comfort and far enough away to be rid of the annoyance during the summer season, of the noise of the crowds and vehicles that fill this popular resort. It will pay you to visit Ocean City Heights before the sale to inspect this property either from a point of home building or investment. We will be pleased to see you, or to mail you a map of the property free, together with particulars of the Big Event etc.

SPECIAL ENTERTAINMENT FEATURES OF THE GREAT SALE.

The Famous Dixie Twin Auctioneers in action, selling a lot a minute; The Merry Band, of Cambridge, conceded to be the best spontaneous aggregation of Musical Genius in Maryland. $100.00 in Gold awarded as prizes in the free-for-all contests of the occasion, and four Ideal Vacation Camp Sites given away free, one at each morning and afternoon session each day.

We invite you to Our Camp Office on the grounds of Ocean City Heights to see one of our demonstration Vacation Camp Tents; it is cozy and complete from cot to cook stove. It is a dandy. Ladies are cordially invited to the Auction.

REPUBLICANS OF MARYLAND

Your Duty To Your Party Is To SEND

John W. Garrett
 to the United States Senate!

Senator France, on March 2, 1922, on the floor of the United States Senate, repudiated the Republican Party.

Here is the Actual Proof!

This is a photographic reproduction of a section of Page 3616 of the Congressional Record of March 2, 1922. Read where Senator France turned his back on the Republican Party:

"If you Democratic Senators stand steadfastly and determinedly for these principles which my party seems to be now repudiating you will meet with your reward at the hands of the American people, and I hope to God that you do have a party to call you to account."

Mr. Garrett insists that the Republican Party has NOT departed from its high principles; nor has it become apostate, as Mr. France charged on the floor of the Senate on March 20, 1920.

VOTE FOR

John W. Garrett

And send to the Senate a true Republican, one who will adhere to the principles for which the Republican Party stands.

DAIRY HINTS

PLAN FOR THROWING ANIMAL

Necessary at Times to Have Cow or Bull on Ground to Perform Necessary Operations.

For performing surgical operations, dehorning, ringing or castrating, it is often necessary or desirable to throw a bull and hold him on the ground. The accompanying sketch shows a very effective method to use in casting a cow or bull. It requires 35 or 40 feet of rope. With borisless animals the first loop will need to be around the neck instead of the horns, as illustrated. The next step is a half hitch just back of the forelegs and another in front of the hind quarters. Pulling on the main rope to the rear and toward the side on which it is desired to have the animal lie will get results. Pregnant cows should not be so thrown. Once the animal is down turn its head back, nose up, with neck to the ground. A hand held on the side of upper lip will usually enable one man to hold the animal down, another man keeping taut the casting rope.—Dairy Farmer.

ECONOMICAL FEED FOR HERD

Most Important Item That Enters Into Cost of Milk Production—Analysis of Figures.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

How to feed his herd economically and profitably is an important thing for a dairyman to know. In all sections of the country where investigations have been carried on, the United States Department of Agriculture has found that feed is the most expensive item that enters into the cost of milk production; and intelligent feeding, in either summer or winter, offers the biggest opportunity to reduce costs.

The analysis of many figures by the department shows that in Vermont the winter costs of keeping a herd were made up of 63.1 per cent feed and bedding, 17.5 per cent labor and 19.4 per cent other costs. In summer, feed and bedding represented 41.6 per cent of the total expense, labor 23.7 per cent and other costs 31.7 per cent.

In the South the costs are distributed somewhat differently. Figures obtained in Louisiana show that in winter 20 per cent of the expense is for feed and bedding, 22.5 per cent for labor, and 21.5 per cent other costs. The summer costs in that region do not differ from the winter costs so much as they do in the North. The figures for summer in Louisiana show that 50.5 per cent of the total cost of milk is for feed and bedding, 23.2 per cent for labor and 23.3 per cent for other costs.

Although it is advisable for a farmer to economize wherever he can wisely do so, these figures show that the dairyman who studies feeds and feeding has an excellent opportunity to increase the profits of his dairy herd.

SOY BEANS FOR DAIRY COWS

According to Tests at Iowa Station Plant Furnishes Most Palatable Protein Feed.

Soy beans as a feed for dairy cattle have shown their value in replacing oil meal in the ration, according to a recent experiment conducted by the Iowa agricultural experiment station. Cracked soy beans, it was found, made a palatable protein feed worth one-third more than the same amount of oilmeal.

Two years' experiments were conducted with the soy beans in replacing protein supplements, and the results show that dairy farmers can produce this supplement to advantage.

BALANCED RATION IS URGED

Corn Fodder Is Not Satisfactory for Dairy Cow Because It Is Lacking in Protein.

A cow may consume large quantities of feed, and still lack the essential elements for milk production. This is why the use of a balanced ration is both economical and satisfactory. Corn fodder, fed alone, for example, is not a satisfactory feed, because the ration lacks protein, and hasn't sufficient succulence to promote a satisfactory flow of milk.

Keep Utensils Clean.

Milking machine, pails and covers should be thoroughly washed and sterilized with steam after every milking.

Milking Preparations.

In preparing the cows for milking, the same care should be used as in milking by hand. It is necessary that the teats be very clean if a clean milk is to be obtained.

Increase Dairy Profits.

Systematic feeding of good cows will increase dairy profits.

How She Did It.

Two housewives were exchanging confidences as to their help.

"What I can't see," exclaimed the first, "is how you manage to get so much work out of Ruth. I can't do it. She gets your work done much quicker than mine, and does it just as well or better, too."

"Well," exclaimed the second housewife, "I just put jazz pieces on our electric player piano all the time she is working. Simple, isn't it?"

"Yes, I'd love to do it, but father doesn't approve."

"Jack Stamford! Isn't it your duty you want to put into this business, and aren't you of age, and haven't you enough sense to do a little thing for yourself once in a while? Sometimes you make me so mad, I could cry."

Vivian Shippe jumped up from the davenport where she had been sitting beside her fiancé and hurried toward the door. In one stride he was beside her and had her in his arms.

"Oh, but you don't understand," he pleaded. "I'm all right, and he's watching over me and caring for me, and advised me ever since I was a kid. It would kill him if I went against his wishes. I always consult him about everything."

"I see you do," she answered dryly. "That hurts, Vivian," he said quietly.

They were nearer a quarrel than they ever had been, and in a rash sentence, Vivian put her arms around him.

"Forgive, Jack; I'm a little hot today. I know how hard your position must be, but he isn't fair to you."

"He's wonderful to me. He's the finest father a chap ever had," Stamford defended.

"Well, even if you lost the money, I'd rather you'd plunge in and see what you can do for yourself. It looks like a good chance to me even if I don't know much about business."

Almost imperceptibly the man shook his head and sighed. "I don't know what to do; heaven knows I don't. Well, I promised dad I'd be back by ten. He wants a game of chess to-night, and his old cronies at the club's gone back on him."

Reluctantly they parted, and Vivian went up to her room more depressed and discouraged than she had been in weeks. What sort of man was Jack's father, anyhow, she wondered. She had not lived in Morristown long, and only knew a few people there, and she had always dodged when Jack had suggested bringing his father around. Somehow she dreaded this man she had never met. He must be an overbearing, domineering sort of creature, she reflected, or he wouldn't try to rule his son the way he did.

What could be done to break Jack loose? As things were now he would never be a man. How she would love to tell the old man what she thought of him! As the idea flashed through her mind her lips straightened out into a grim little line of determination.

The next morning at breakfast her family noticed that she seemed to be preoccupied, and just a little excited. "I'm going uptown," she told her mother, after breakfast.

"What for, dear?"

"Oh, it's a secret mission—some reform work," she answered lightly.

A moment later she was deftly backing the little green car out of the garage and planning her campaign. As she stopped in front of the tall office building her courage almost failed her, but she went bravely in and let the speeding elevator rush her to her destiny.

"What for, dear?" she began, as she confronted a rather handsome middle-aged man in the president's office of the Longacre Iron works. "I'm Vivian Shippe, Jack's fiancée."

"Jack's what? Why, he never told me!" ejaculated Stamford senior.

"I don't blame him," answered the girl, coolly, feeling her composure coming back. "And that's just what I've come here to talk to you about. You are simply ruining Jack. He hardly dares to breathe without your consent, and he has about as much initiative as a three-year-old. He's a mollycoddle, that's what he is, and it isn't his fault, either—it's yours, all yours. You think you're a devoted father, instead of which you're a leech sucking the marrow out of your own son. He has no worse enemy in this whole world than his father."

Stamford, red and spluttering, opened his mouth to speak, but Vivian silenced him with a look and went on: "He wanted to start out in business for himself, but you discouraged him. What if he did fail and lose a few thousand? I'd rather have a man penniless who had tried and who had a backbone of his own than one who was scared to venture anything. I'm going to marry him because I love him, but I'd almost do it if it was only to save him from you, his devoted father."

"That's all I have to say," she ended. "I don't care how much you hate me—that'll do you good, but think over what I've said, will you?" With a nod she was gone. Once back in her car an outburst of pent-up emotion swept over her and her hands on the steering wheel trembled so that she could hardly drive. Reaching home, she rushed up the backstairs to her room and locked herself in. Two hours later the telephone rang. "Say, dearest, got to see you right away. Coming now?"

In a flash he had hung up and the girl had just time to dab some powder on her tear-stained face and straighten her tousled hair.

"Whoops! The best news. It's a corker. Dad's a trump—always told you he was—called me up and we just had an interview and he told me he'd reconsidered the matter about my going into business and thought it was a good plan. Just as if that wasn't knockout enough he calmly handed me a check for $10,000 so as to give me a good start."

"What a perfect dear he is!" exclaimed Vivian.

"Yes, but he acted awfully funny. I was a little worried for a while. After we got through he said: 'Son, if you have a best girl or anything of that sort, tell her that love is often blind, but not always incurably so. I tried to get him to explain, but he just laughed and put out his hand. 'The dear,' said Vivian softly. 'I believe I'd like to meet him now. I just know I'm going to love him.'"

WOMAN'S WILES AND GUILTS

Mr. Dove Ceded Her Satisfaction After Richard Had Cornered—Can You Beat It?

"O Richard, how fine you look to-day," cried Mrs. Dove before she gave her husband a smacking kiss on his left cheek. "I do believe I have the best-looking husband in Mudtown!" And she gave him a resounding kiss on the other cheek.

Richard Dove looked steadily into his wife's eyes. What he saw was admiration and love—love and admiration, nothing else.

"I have the smarter, husband, too," went a Mrs. Dove proudly, stealing another glance at him. "Mr. Dove started to speak, but stopped."

"And the loveliest and kindest, also," finished Mrs. Dove. There was nothing more she could add.

"I'm sorry, Nazimova," said Mr. Dove, "but I can't afford to buy a new dress. If it was a hat, now, I might—"

"Oh, dear!" sighed Mrs. Dove. "Well, then, I will have to be satisfied with a hat!" she said, looking down to hide the light of satisfaction in her eyes. As she went upstairs, that evening to put little Willie to bed she laughed softly to herself.

Esquimo Not Dainty Feeder.

The Eskimo is not particular about the cut of his meat. He eats everything physically possible of a reindeer or fish or polar bear (and what he does not eat he wrens or makes into houses or tools). Particularly does he seem to relish the frozen stomach of the reindeer. This stomach, full of finely chewed reindeer moss, he freezes solid and stores away, according to Doctor Marquis, until he is violently hungry, when a piece is sliced off, thawed out and eaten as a rare delicacy.

Wholesale Cost OF Shoes Advances

We are in receipt of a communication from the Friedman Shelby Shoe Co. advising us of an advance of 5c to 25c on each pair of several dozen kinds of shoes.

Since April 1st, there has been a material advance in the price of hides due to their scarcity.

This information makes certain facts stand out prominently and are of interest to all purchasers of shoes.

- 1— The largest manufacturers of shoes in the United States having found it necessary to advance prices, the smaller manufacturers will be forced to do likewise for the cost of production for a small concern is greater than for a large one.
- 2— The outlook is for a permanent rise; otherwise, the Manufacturer would bear the loss.
- 3— Our Manufacturers are maintaining the same excellent wearing qualities and are using no substitutes which would obviate an increase in cost.
- 4— Our fall and winter shoes were purchased before any increase became effective and this will enable us to maintain prices just as if hides were plentiful.

Bear in mind that "It takes leather to stand weather."

STATE CAPITAL

Legislative Business Finished.

Annapolis.—Governor Ritchie made a clean slate of legislative business by acting on all the bills left in his hand by the General Assembly, signing 399 and vetoing 30. With the bills previously acted on the Governor signed a total of 511 and vetoed 28. The Legislature passed 549 bills and 20 joint resolutions, about 100 less than two years ago.

In vetoing the thirty bills, most of them of local interest only, the Governor gave out a statement relative to each measure and giving his reasons for withholding his signature.

The vetoed bill of the most general interest was that relating to marriages in Cecil, Somerset and Montgomery counties. This measure provided that no marriage license should be issued to applicants who had not resided in the State for the preceding 48 hours. It was designed to break up the marriage mart at Elkton and was originally state-wide in its application but was so amended as to include only the three counties mentioned. The opposition to the bill seems to have come mostly from the residents of Harford county, who claimed that the result would be to send runaway couples from other States to Harford de Grace where the same situation as now prevails at Elkton might be renewed. The opposition was led by State Senator Tydings, of Harford, who was present and thanked the Governor for his veto.

In his statement relating to this bill the Governor said: "If jittery drivers act in an unseemly manner, if ministers of the gospel disregard their calling—and they do, if the conditions have been correctly described to me these are not sound reasons for making unseemly discriminations and for introducing non-uniformity in the marriage laws among counties of the State, particularly a discrimination which, while relieving Cecil, would in all probability simply transfer these kind of marriages from Cecil to other neighboring counties, where similar restrictions do not exist. As evidence of this, Senator Tydings, John L. G. Lee, Speaker of the House, and the people of Harford county, have the strongest possible protest against the bill on the ground that it will simply result in transferring the present conditions at Elkton to Harford de Grace.

Among the important bills signed by the Governor were the $500,000 Soldiers' Bonus Bill, the Full-Crew Law Repealer, which was fought to the last ditch by the labor organizations, the Child Hygiene Bill, the State Budget, the State Road Loan, the Southern Maryland Road Loan, the Maryland Bureau Bill, the amendment to the Moving Picture Censor Law, the State Building Loan, the Power Elections amendment, and the bill for the purchase by the State of the Susquehanna River bridge.

In regard to the signing of the Full-Crew Repeal Bill, the Governor said in his statement:

"The arguments for and against Senate Bill No. 74, known as the 'Full-Crew Law Repealer,' have related mainly to the necessity for the additional brakeman, and that question involves considerations of safety, automatic devices, grades, weight and length of trains, and other practical operating problems, as well as cost. "As to these questions the opinions of competent and sincere men differ, and the proper solution of them, the task would be a very difficult one. But it does not because the Bill does not itself dispense with the additional brakeman, but with the legal necessity of having him, and then places jurisdiction in the Public Service Commission, after a hearing upon its own motion or upon complaint, to determine the number of men required for safe and efficient operation. "I will, therefore, request the Public Service Commission to investigate and ascertain in just what cases and on just what trains and under just what circumstances the railroad companies contemplate dispensing with the additional brakeman. "These investigations can begin at once, so that the Commission will be in possession of the facts when the law becomes effective, on June 1 next, and will thus be in a position, not only on complaint, but also on its own motion, to place an order at once upon any of the railroads to show cause why the men dispensed with or transferred, or intended so to be, should not be restored to their present positions in every case where the Commission has reason to believe that this should be done. "I think that this should assure fairness both to the men and to the railroads in the operation of the law, and with this statement I feel it my duty to accept the decision of the Legislature and to approve the bill."

Among the bills vetoed was one of the two bills creating an additional judge for Baltimore city, the Governor considering one new judge enough; the amendments to the motor vehicle law giving an appeal to the court in case of revocation of licenses and eliminating minimum fines; requiring the Motor Vehicle Commissioner to notify list of registered cars to the County Commissioners of each county; the bill reducing the license fees on motor trucks; the bill authorizing special markets on automobiles; bill creating a Roads Engineer Commission, for Anne Arundel county; special road bills for Somerset, Prince George's and Wicomico counties; the Baltimore county tax exemption bill; the bill enlarging powers of the Bank Commissioner; the sales in bulk bill; the bill regulating counsel fees in cases before the Industrial Accident Commission; several local pension bills relating to Baltimore city, local fish, oyster and game bills relating to Washington, Frederick, Charles and St. Mary's counties and a bill creating the office of Road Director for Allegany county in place of the Board now in charge of the roads.

Road Plans Soon.

Maryland's road-building program for the next two years under its State budget of $2,150,000 is expected to be mapped out in the next few weeks by the State Roads Commission after conference with the various county commissioners.

In addition to this program, Roads Chairman John N. Mackall announced that the commission expected to have the contract for the first year's work on the Baltimore and Southern Maryland road, known as the "Robert Crin road," ready to let on August 1, the day the first $250,000 of the $1,000,000 loan becomes available.

"The justification for this Southern Maryland road is to furnish a direct connection with Baltimore, the commission expects to make it as straight as possible within reason," Mr. Mackall said. "It will start at Mattawoman, in Charles county, and run through Upper Marlboro across the Patuxent river at Priest bridge to Benfield, in Anne Arundel county, on the Old Light Street road, just below Glenburnie.

"There are about 33 miles of road to be built, at about $30,000 a mile, or a little more than eight miles a year for four years. We are at liberty to start at both ends simultaneously, or at the middle and work both ways, or any other way found expedient. It all depends upon how easy the acquiring of rights of way will be. But we intend to have work on the road started immediately after August 1."

Two contracts were awarded by the commission, one going to the next lowest bidder because the lowest bidder was considered irresponsible. This is the first time such a thing has occurred in the history of the present commission.

Road Bids Drop $5,000.

Bids on the first road construction contracts to be let this season were opened by the State Roads Commission. While prices were generally high with construction difficulties, the low bids average about $5,000 a mile under last year. The range of bids was not great and in some cases there were several very close to the low figure.

The section of road and low bids are as follows: Baltimore County—York road, 5.34 miles to Pennsylvania line. May Bros. & Piles; $25,600 a mile. Harford County—Philadelphia road, 4.19 miles. E. R. Griffith Construction Company; $26,000 a mile. Carroll County—New Windsor road, 5.88 miles. Thomas Bros. & Hunter; $34,000 a mile. Frederick County—Urbana pike, 1.99 miles. L. R. Wassche; $25,000 a mile.

Annapolis.—The Annapolis City Council unanimously adopted a day-light-saving ordinance, to take effect at 2 A. M. on the last Sunday in April and to continue until the same hour on the last Sunday in August. Rear Admiral Wilson, superintendent, and other Naval Academy authorities heartily favor the movement.

Hagerstown.—Resolutions calling upon Governor Ritchie to remove from office members of the Board of Education for Washington county were adopted at an indignation meeting of taxpayers held in the Courthouse here. The meeting was called to order by Daniel W. Doub, who criticized the members who make the taxpayers of the county support the public school system, and allows them no voice in the administration. Mr. Doub reviewed what he termed the inefficiency of the Board, and suggested the appointment of a chairman.

NINE VILLAGES INUNDATE.

Lower Mississippi Floods Towns And 250 Acres Of Farm Land.

Vicksburg, Miss.—At least nine villages are inundated or surrounded by water and upward of 250 square miles of farm land are under water as a result of flood stages on the Lower Mississippi and its tributaries.

Reports to headquarters of the levee district here indicated that the most severe flood conditions were centered for the time being in the Arkansas and White river basins, but the Mississippi itself approached new high records at Vicksburg and Greenville. At many points engineers were at work reinforcing the levees.

Most of those driven out of their homes by the water are negroes. Numerous refugee colonies have been established in the flood district, and the Missouri Pacific Railroad has distributed 250 box cars along its route for use of the homeless.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

TWELVE YEARS OF SCOUTING

In a recent issue of the Survey, Chief Scout Executive West writes of his twelve years' experience as a leader of boys. Among other things, he mentions the fact that what seems most remarkable in scouting is the responsibility of the boys themselves, their power and willingness to assume responsibility and to live up to the obligations of the scout oath and law.

"When we said that a first-class scout must know what to do in case of fire," he writes, "probably none of us remotely imagined that during one year 5,778 scouts would qualify in firemanship; that in fifty or more cities scout troops would be regularly authorized aides to the local fire departments; that in one state alone—Pennsylvania—scouts would be cited for having in less than a year saved from destruction by fire a million dollars' worth of valuable timber. Nor could we in any way have visualized the large number of driving instructional institutes where scouts or groups of scouts have been voluntarily to meet the emergency of the hour in fighting fire, rescuing persons from burning buildings, rendering first aid to persons overcome by fumes of smoke, besides their signal services in helping prevent fire by conducting city clean-ups, distributing fire-prevention literature and reporting fire hazards and violations of fire laws."

"I want particularly to stress that word co-operative; for, contrary to the ideas of those who do not fully comprehend scouting and its motives, the movement is dedicated to co-operation with all other forces working for public betterment. It has no wish to supersede the work of church, or school, or home, or of any social service agency. It merely places its splendid boy program, its organized and trained power for service, its large and enthusiastic active membership, at the disposal of the community and the nation, to help wherever help is needed or desired."

"We have learned in our twelve years of experience with boys that the Scout movement is a force for good in the world so long. Our boys, given half a chance, will, in nine cases out of ten, rise to whatever we expect of them; they go beyond what we expect of them, if only we men will in turn do our duty—provide for them the opportunity for clean, happy, useful, healthy life, which is their birthright as young Americans."

The Early Hatched Pullet is the One That Begins to Lay Early in the Fall.

It was ascertained that previous to the practice of selection the average hen in the flock was broody 3.55 times a year. After painstaking selection was practiced for five years, this tendency to broodiness was reduced so that the average egg producer in the flock developed broodiness only 0.58 times a year. A study of the correlations between broodiness and egg production shows that pullets that are very broody tend to lay relatively few eggs between their broody periods.

There is no one dominant cause of broodiness, but a number of factors are involved, and one of broodiness is a slight tendency to broodiness being in the same class as the early hatching fowls, as each has about the same proportion of broody offspring. The determination of broodiness is complicated by the fact that birds that are not broody during the pullet year may become broody during their second or third laying season.

THE TEN-YEAR MEN IN SCOUTING

National council officers who have served the movement consecutively at least for ten years are President Colin H. Livingston of Washington, Chief Justice Taft, honorary vice president; Daniel Carter Beard, author, artist, outdoor man and boy worker, who is a vice president of the organization as well as its scout commissioner and chairman of the national court of honor; Vice Presidents Mortimer L. Schiff of New York, Benjamin Dulaney of Bristol, Tenn., and Milton A. McIlwain of Detroit and San Diego; George D. Pratt of Brooklyn, treasurer; John Sherman Hoyt, Jeremiah W. Jenks and Frank Freshney of the executive board, and James W. West, chief scout executive, in whose capable hands the boy scout movement has prospered in 12 years beyond the dreams of anyone who was present at the birth of the organization.

HE EARNED HIS DOLLAR

Scout Sebastian Lubomirski, of Troop 91, Washington, D. C., is the son of the Polish minister to the United States, and is a scoutmaster here. He is an earnest worker in scouting and passed all his second-class tests with ease except one; the requirement which demands that the candidate must "earn and deposit $1 in a public bank." Earning money was totally out of range of the little prince's experience, but he was game. He earned his dollar by selling papers on the street. Sebastian will soon return to Poland, where he means to go on scouting.

PRIDE FOR SCOUT MOVEMENT

Under the "Live Topics of the Day" heading a Hoboken (N. J.) newspaper printed the following on the boy scout birthday:

"It is hard to believe that the boy scout movement is only twelve years old today. Few organizations boast of a better record of honorable achievement in so short a time."

SCOUTS FAVOR PEDESTRIANS

Boy scouts of San Francisco are frequently called upon to help in traffic duty and on these occasions it is said that they tend to favor the struggling pedestrian rather than the cocky motorist, especially when there is a driving rule in progress. These humane young men hold up automobiles and street cars to give the wayfarer man a chance to keep at least moderately dry. But was to the "day-walker" who tries to dart across the street at the wrong moment or angle.

POULTRY CACKLES

LESSEN BROODINESS OF HEENS

Every Ambitious and Enthusiastic Poultryman Tries to Restrict Its Development.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Broody hens, like wayward children, are a great discredit to their parents and a source of annoyance to all who have to do with them. That is why one of the greatest concerns of every ambitious and enthusiastic poultryman is to restrict the appearance and development of broodiness in his flock. The United States Department of Agriculture has found that broodiness can be reduced very markedly by careful, rigid and persistent selection.

At the Massachusetts experiment station, where a detailed experimental study of broodiness has been made, it was ascertained that previous to the practice of selection the average hen in the flock was broody 3.55 times a year. After painstaking selection was practiced for five years, this tendency to broodiness was reduced so that the average egg producer in the flock developed broodiness only 0.58 times a year.

PROPER EGGS FOR HATCHING

California College Institutes New Project for Improvement of Poultry Flocks.

For the improvement of poultry by careful selection of breeding stock, the poultry department of the division of extension work of the California College of Agriculture has instituted a new project with the hatcherymen of Alameda county. Previous to this time, the assertions of the egg dealer were the only guide to those who bought eggs for hatching and dealt in baby chicks, as to the quality of the eggs they were getting. There was opportunity for frequent abuse or confidence in the business.

Under the present plan about 20,000 birds have been inspected by poultry experts, and those which have met the requirements decided upon for weight, egg production, size and shape of eggs, and other points, have been accepted as eligible for the production of eggs for hatching. Hatcherymen have agreed to use no eggs except those from tested flocks.

EXERCISE CARE IN CULLING

One Is Liable to Discard as Many Good Layers as Poor Ones Late in Winter.

Be careful about culling birds. You are liable to get rid of as many good ones as poor ones. As long as you've got them during the winter, it would be safer to feed them another few weeks, when any old bird will produce eggs; then do your culling in the summer, from June to September.

POULTRY NOTES

Feed a dry mash.

A fat hen is not a good layer.

Feed grain once or twice a day.

Feed table scraps and kitchen waste.

Brooder lamps should be cleaned every day.

Powder the chicks occasionally during the first eight weeks.

The flock with shelter from storms and with clean surroundings has the best protection against disease.

SUDDEN CHANGE OF OPINION

Or Possibly the Lady Had Really Been Enjoying Herself and Wasn't
Aware of It.

At one of those banquets where almost every one is called on to make a short speech or to tell a funny story, a woman who sat near the speaker's table was heard to remark after nearly every story told:

"My goodness, that's another old one. Why don't they tell some new ones?"

Regardless of whether the speaker got a good laugh, she complained to her companion of the antiquity of the stories.

"I've never been to a worse affair. I wish they would cut it short. I'd rather have stayed home than come," she bitterly asserted.

In the midst of her harangue, the toastmaster beamed in her direction, and said:

"Now, there is Mrs. ——. She is one of the most charming women in our organization, and I know we would all be glad to hear her speak."

Dimly, Mrs. — managed to get on her feet, and addressed the guests thusly:

"I really don't know what to say, only that I am so glad to be here with you. I just said to the lady sitting next to me what a perfectly splendid time I was having. I didn't know we had so many clever people in the organization who could tell such funny stories."—Indianapolis News.

Curiosity Satisfied.

I have been in the habit of patronizing a printing shop near home, and on each occasion I have noticed a man in particular who never spoke to me. He always had a scowl on his face. Recently I went to a nearby town by interurban and sat in the smoker. A man across the aisle spoke to me:

"You patronize the Thomas print shop, don't you?"

I said "Yes."

He said, "I thought I had seen you in there several times."

I said "Tell me, who is that heavy-set man with the white mustache who is such an infernal brogue?"

"I guess you must mean me. I just had the mustache shaved off this morning," said he.—Chicago Tribune.

Bold South American Thieves.

Two ingenious thieves, finding the streets of Buenos Ayres, Argentina, too well policed for daylight holdups, recently succeeded in using police headquarters for one of their operations. According to a middle-aged man of prosperous appearance, they showed him detective badges and announced they must accompany them to headquarters and there explain how he came by the gold watch and other valuables he carried. To avoid a scene the man accompanied them. They took him to an unused room at headquarters and relieved him of everything of value. Then, indicating a door of a room where his protests of innocence would be attended to, they vanished.

Boy scouts of San Francisco are frequently called upon to help in traffic duty and on these occasions it is said that they tend to favor the struggling pedestrian rather than the cocky motorist, especially when there is a driving rule in progress. These humane young men hold up automobiles and street cars to give the wayfarer man a chance to keep at least moderately dry. But was to the "day-walker" who tries to dart across the street at the wrong moment or angle.

Contentment isn't a matter of geography, and it is seldom a good plan to go away from home in search of happiness. One can't purchase happiness, or find it at the end of a rainbow. If one doesn't contrive happiness out of his own common he will never know what happiness is.—Robert Quillen.

SEASONABLE DISHES

If one has never eaten carrot salad made by grating a carrot and two and a stalk or two of celery through the meat grinder and mixing with a few nuts and a good salad dressing, there is something yet to try.

Pea Soup.—A good pea soup is one which is hard to equal in tastiness and wholesomeness.

Take one-half cupful of dried peas soaked at least twelve hours, cook until tender, then put them through a sieve. Melt two tablespoons of butter or pork drippings in a saucepan, add two tablespoons of flour and cook a few minutes, then add one quart of milk. Add one teaspoonful of salt, a little chopped onion or onion juice, one-half teaspoonful of celery leaves powdered, and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper.

Peanut Fendous.—Grind through the meat grinder one cupful of peanuts carefully shelled and the brown skin removed, add one cupful of soft bread crumbs, one and two-thirds of a cupful of milk, one and one-half teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. Mix well, then stir in the white of an egg beaten stiff. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven for one-half hour.

Peanut Dumplings.—Melt three tablespoons of butter, add three tablespoons of flour and cook until well blended, then add two cupfuls of water, salt and pepper and cook until thickened, then add three cupfuls of milk and one-quarter of a cupful of ground peanuts. When it boils drop in the dumplings and cook covered from ten to twenty minutes, according to the size of the dumplings. Use any good dumpling recipe.

Graham Muffins.—Take one cupful each of graham flour, wheat flour and sugar, add one teaspoonful of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-quarter teaspoonful of soda. Mix the dry ingredients. Add the sour cream into which the soda has been stirred. Beat thoroughly and bake in graham pans in a quick oven. Serve hot.

Sentimentality.

Are we sentimental—do we cultivate the finer feeling? Is life worth living without sentiment—sympathetic feeling and the love of the beautiful in character, morals and manners?

Can intelligent man be happy in groveling—in sordid living—in only
looking down in the dirt and seeking only material for the gratifica-
tion of the body?

Good sentiment that we see and

hear, written, spoken or sung, and

in conduct and manners, brings

much happiness into our lives.

In a debate between Senator

Martin and Gov. Montague, of Virginia,

candidates for election to the U. S.

Congress, Mr. Martin said, "Gov.

Montague is a gentleman of the highest type of noble character,

but is too sentimental to get down

to the business of getting the big

slice from the Government 'pork

barrel' that can be had for the constituency." Gov. Montague replied,

"that he appreciated the high compliment as to being a man of refined

feeling, as he believed that without

sentiment life is not worth living."

I heard a sound at my heart's dark door,

And was roused from my slumber

within;

It was beauty that knocked, (it had knocked before)

Now I said "let it come in."

Open, open

And the heart will be bright

With a heavenly light

When we let the beauty in.

Berlin Loses To Pocomoke.

Berlin was very badly defeated in the game played with Pocomoke.

At first, it looked as if it was going to be a very interesting game,
but Pocomoke soon began to make runs, while Berlin "stood still."

The Berlin boys seemed to be at
their worst the whole way through.
The game ended with the score of 7 to 1 in favor of Pocomoke, Berlin's run being a "home" made in the third inning by H. Rayne, Berlin's 3rd baseman.

$2,000,000 Fire
At Pocomoke City.

Business Section Wiped Out
Monday Afternoon.

Ten acres in the heart of Pocomoke City were burned last Monday,
destroying practically the entire
business section, and about fifty residences on Front and River Streets
and Linden Avenue. The loss is estimated at more than $2,000,000,
and many families are homeless.

The fire started at noon in the
hay-loft of the stables and lumber
yard of F. M. Wilson, on Maple St.
It was soon beyond the control of the Pocomoke firemen and help was summoned from other towns, several
of whom responded. Snow Hill
was the first to arrive, but by this time the strong southwest wind was sweeping the flames down Market Street to the river, and the fire was
not subdued till four o'clock.

The women of the town served
sandwiches and coffee to the workers.

Much praise was given the five
telephone operators for heroism in remaining at their posts until the last moment possible. By six o'clock two long-distance wires were again got in operation, and about
half of those in the city.

Realizing that the town would be
in darkness and in danger of thieves,
Mayor Tull telephoned to Governor
Ritchie for State troops for guard duty. A number of state policemen
were sent from Belair, and fifty men
of the First Regiment from Salisbury.

Law-Enforcement Meeting
At M. E. Church.

We regret that the rain kept any
person in this community from hearing Hon. John F. Kramer, although
the audience was much larger than
was expected on account of the weather.

He dwelt on the great task before
the people of this country in undertaking to uproot a great evil that
was instituted when Noah left the
ark. He said every woman knew how hard it is to change a man's course of living, and that was what happened when the Eighteenth Amendment went into effect. Millions were told to face about and
march in the right direction. He is not afraid of the stupendous job.
What he feared most was that the workers would become discouraged
at the greatness of the work. "The question was asked in New York,
"How long should the people be
given to try out the prohibition
law?" The reply was, two hundred years, as the liquor business had thousands of years. Mr. Kramer
stated that it was impossible for the U. S. Government to enforce the work.

Mr. Crabbe stated that Mr. Kramer
will be in Maryland two weeks,
and in as meetings will be followed
up by organizing Law-Enforcement
Associations in the community.

Mr. Crabbe, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, told the audience some of the inside workings of the Maryland Legislature.

He informed us that the office of the Speaker of the House was the headquarters for the wets. He told
how members were driven and
bought to vote against the enforcement law, against their own conscience.

He gave another instance
in Ohio where a member was told
that his son should be liberated
from prison and be able to visit his ack mother if he would vote with the wets, but he took time to visit his son in prison, and tell him how
he could be liberated, and told his boy to vote as he said. The boy told his father to vote for the bill. The wets' boy was allowed by the Governor to remain in that prison. We trust the people will heed his advice in regard to the prohibition law, and the U. S. L. S. to keep your children attended the meetings.

Showell Roller Mill

The roller mill of the Showell
Milling Company, managed by Harvey P. Catheil, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin, Monday night. It was already well under way when discovered about ten o'clock by Charles C. Mumford,
and there was no chance of saving
it. It is not yet known whether it will be replaced. The insurance
was for $5,000, and the value probably as much more. It was an up-to-date roller mill and will be a great loss to the community.

Everything Needed For Building

THE FORDSON $395. F. O. B. Detroit

The list price of the Fordson is now $395. F. O. B. Detroit, Mich.

Think of it! There is not a power unit on the market at twice the price of the Fordson that can come anywhere near its quality and all-around dependability and usefulness. Nor are they capable of performing half the tasks which the Fordson "eats up" every day.

This low price makes it possible for every farmer to own a FORDSON—in fact makes it expensive to be without one.

The Fordson now sells for approximately 15 cents per pound. Just stop and consider what this means.

Rough castings cost about 6¢ per lb.
Steel and forgings 8¢ per lb.
Brass, bronze and ball bearings, etc.
average from 25¢ to $1.00 per lb.,

bringing the total material cost of the tractor up to approximately 10¢ a pound, leaving only the extremely small margin of five cents per pound over the bare cost of materials to cover all manufacturing operations, labor and overhead. Surely there is nothing we can say that should more strongly impress the farmer with the fact that the Fordson Tractor at $395 represents the best and most profitable investment any farmer can make.

Substantial reductions have been announced in the price of power farming implements and Fordson equipment. The Ford Dealer's prices are about equivalent to the cost of a team of good horses with horse-drawn equipment. The Fordson outfit will do as much work as two or three teams with an actual reduction in operation and maintenance costs.

PRIMARY TOPIC.—The Story of a Proud King.
JUNIOR TOPIC.—A Man Who Forgot God.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Pride Goeth Before Destruction.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—The Perils of Prosperity.

1. Uzziah Made King (vv. 1-5).
1. His Age (v. 1). He became king at the age of sixteen.
2. Length of His Reign (v. 5). He reigned fifty-two years. His mother's name was Jecoliah, which means "Jehovah is able," or "Made strong of Jehovah."
3. His Character (v. 4). He did that which was right in the sight of the Lord.
4. His Prosperity (v. 5). He definitely sought God while Zechariah lived, and because he sought him God made him to prosper as long as he continued to seek him. He like Josiah before him, turned aside when the influence of the man of God was removed.
11. Uzziah's Achievement (vv. 6-15).
1. He Built Eloth (v. 2). This was a port on the Red sea which had been lost to Judah. No doubt it was the aim of the father to get possession of this port, so the son makes its restoration his first duty. It was an important trading point and the commercial interests of the nation would be greatly increased by its possession.
2. He Had Military Success (vv. 6-8). (1) He conquered the Philistines (v. 6). After subduing them he dismantled their fortified cities and built new cities in their stead. (2) He defeated the Arabians (v. 7). (3) He made the Ammonites across the Jordan pay tribute (v. 8).
3. He Fortified Jerusalem (vv. 9-15). He took advantage of the peace which was now enjoyed because of the subjugation of his enemies to fortify Jerusalem. He placed in the towers great engines of war for hurling stones.
4. His Civic Improvements (v. 10). In the regions south and west of Jerusalem he built towers which served a threefold purpose, namely: observation, defense and shelter for his cattle. This enabled him to carry on his stock-raising enterprises.
307. It was then carefully equipped and drilled. God was with him, and his fame spread far and wide. The source of his strength was God.
111. Uzziah's Transgression (vv. 16-18).
The prosperity bestowed upon him by the Lord was too much for him—his heart was lifted up with pride. This is always so unless counteracted by divine grace. In his pride he presumptuously intruded into the priest's office. This act was not because of forgetfulness, but of deliberate purpose. Azariah and eighty other priests remonstrated with him, but this only made him angry. This act was a trespass against God.

IV. Uzziah's Punishment (vv. 19-21).
While raging in his wrath and about to burn incense he was smitten with leprosy, a dreadful, incurable and unclean disease. This judgment came upon him as a consequence of his overweening pride and vanity. He was thrust out of the sanctuary—excluded from God's house. Indeed, his conscience smote him, and he hurriedly went out because he knew that the Lord had smitten him. He not only was excluded from the place of worship, but was dethroned. His son Jotham was made regent. His judgment was:

1. Sudden. The Lord smote him while he was as proud as a cedar. 2. Severe. The leprosy broke forth upon his forehead. The same judgment befell Miriam for speaking against Moses (Num. 12:10), and Gehazi for lying to Elisha (II Kings 5:27). Great sins demand severe punishment. 3. Conspicuous. Azariah and all the priests looked up and beheld the leprosy (v. 20). 21. A spot on Uzziah's forehead proclaimed him as the object of God's wrath. How many today are bearing about the marks of sin—God's judgment! 4. Humiliating. He was henceforth unclean—cut off from the congregation. This is what sin always does. 5. Fatal. It ended in death. "The wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23).

Cause and Upholder.
God alone . . . is in Himself, and is the Cause and Upholder of everything to which He has given being.—Pusey.
Praise the Lord.
Oh, that men would praise the Lord for His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men!—Bible.
The Blockhead.
A blockhead cannot come in nor go away, nor sit, nor rise, nor stand, like a man of sense.—Hemery.
Protest Against Washing Ears.
The recent stories in the Companion about the difficulties that mothers have had in persuading their children to have their ears washed has led a contributor to tell what happened when her small boy was asked whether he should prefer to go to a picture show or to a concert. The boy really wanted to go to the concert, but he chose the picture show instead. When asked why, he said that going to a dark room would make washing his ears unnecessary.—Youth's Companion.

If she had saved her breath;
But she feared her hay wouldn't last all day,
So she choked herself to death."

HELPFUL HINTS WORTH NOTING

Walnut meats which have become rancid may be freshened and sweetened by pouring over the nut meats boiling water in which a little soda has been dissolved. Rinse in cold water and dry in a towel.
Nuts in the shell which have become too brittle to crack without breaking, if treated to a bath of boiling water, will crack and seem like fresh nuts.

Keep the smallest candle ends and put into a small muslin bag. Use to polish the irons or keep the kitchen range clean and bright.
A broom which is badly worn may serve longer if all the rows of stitching are ripped out except the top row. Then the broom after soaking in soap suds and drying thoroughly.
A bit of ginger added to doughnuts will keep them from soaking fat, which is both a saving of fat and indigestion.

The amount of bacon to be used for seasoning may be lessened if it is put through the meat grinder before adding to the dish. It is more evenly mixed through the dish in this way.
Stale bread put through the meat grinder, then browned in the oven, makes a fine breakfast cereal served with milk. This is especially good for an invalid.

A rap in a silk stocking may be taken back with a crochet hook. Old stockings may be cut in strips and used for braided rugs.

Old inner tubes from auto tires make fine elastic for rompers, bloomers and shirt sleeves. Such elastic will survive several washings without losing its elasticity.

When making mayonnaise, if it curdles, beat another egg and add the curdled mixture very slowly, beating well between each addition. Have all materials cold.

Lemons placed in the oven and heated hot will render their juice more freely.

MADE DOG CARRY KITTENS

Mother Cat Had No Compunction at All in Making Friend Do All the Work.

An English lady, says a contributor to The Cornhill Magazine, having received a kitten and a puppy as gifts, determined to bring them up together. She put them into the same bed, fed them from the same saucer, and they became fast friends.

In time the kitten arrived at maturity. She presented the world with little ones and chose for their nursery a remote and quiet room in the house. But in a few days she evidently decided that there was a better place for them in a room on the floor above. Instead of removing the kittens herself, she trotted off to her friend the dog and got him to follow her to the spot where the kittens were lying. When he had looked at them she started off to the upper room, and he followed her; but, seeing that he was so to speak "empty-handed," she doubled back and returned to the kittens; and eventually, after two or three more false starts, he understood her and, picking up one of the kittens in his mouth, followed her up the stairs to the new place. That was as far as his understanding went, and she had to conduct him back to the other kittens and repeat the whole performance again and again until in the end he had removed them all, and she was happy in her new quarters.

But it was not the ideal spot after all; she was happy there only for a day. Again she summoned the dog, and he moved all the kittens again, but more readily than at first. Again the cat became dissatisfied, and the dog moved the kittens again. From first to last there were so many removals that the lady lost count of their number.

Weak, Weary Women

Learn the Cause of Daily Woes and End Them.

When the back aches and throbs,
When housework is torture,
When night brings no rest nor sleep,
When urinary disorders set in,
When the lot is a weary one,
Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

Have proved their worth in Berlin.

This is one Berlin woman's testimony:

Mrs. Joie A. Bunting, Bay St., says: Doan's Kidney Pills are an old remedy with me. I have used them off and on for years and have found them to be a splendid medicine. My kidneys were weak and I felt weak and run down and was without ambition or energy. In bad weather I had rheumatic pains in my limbs. The action of my kidneys was irregular, too. Doan's Kidney Pills have never failed to help me and I felt better in every way after using them. I will recommend Doan's to anyone as a reliable remedy. I keep them on hand all the time.

Price 60¢, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Bunting had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

WHY OUR SHOES ARE POPULAR

In making the claim that our shoes are popular we wish to prove why this is and has continued to be so ever since last September when we received our first shipment of Freidman-Shelby shoes. Since that time we have experienced a constant increase in our shoe business and this could not have been but for certain reasons.

Several Reasons

Our shoes are made by the largest Manufacturers of shoes in the world. Large production means low cost of Manufacture.

There are 36 factories with a DAILY output of 142,000 pairs.

Aside from the shoe factories there are many other factories that produce incidentals such as boxes, cartons, chemicals, etc. Their printing establishment is the largest west of New York City.

Freidman-Shelby shoes are known as the "All Leather" line. They are built for all kinds of weather and hundreds of our regular customers can testify as to their quality.

These shoes Manufactured at a minimum of cost come direct from the factories to us and we sell them on a small margin of profit. This accounts for our success.

OCEAN CITY.

A member of the Summer Congregation of St. Paul's, Ocean City, Md., who desires his name withheld, has arranged to present each year a silver Cross of Honor to the member of St. Paul's Choir who has given the most faithful and efficient service during the year.

This is following the custom of St. Paul's, Baltimore, and is greatly appreciated by the members of the Choir by the Sea.

The first cross was presented this year to Mrs. Robert J. Showell, who for more than thirty-five years has rendered to St. Paul's Choir and Church the most faithful, loyal, and efficient service.

The entire congregation is one in according to her this high honor, and is glad to thus express to her their appreciation of her pure and unselfish devotion to the Church which owes a large measure of its present success to her untiring zeal and devotion.

The Easter Day offerings at St. Paul's-by-the-Sea amounted to over $400.

The vestry elected on Easter Monday, were Charles A. Parke, William I. Purnell, L. F. Purnell, Edward M. Scott, George W. Parker, Charles Ludlam, Daniel Trimper, Jr., John P. Whaley, John Dale Showell, Edgwin Calhoun, William Turner, Dr. F. J. Townsend.

The Fish-Hook Girl

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Josephine understood men. She was sympathetic, a good listener, and other girls said she actually purred when she had her own way, which was equivalent to saying that she scratched when she did not have it. Ralph was attracted by her vivacity and her quick intelligence. That she was very pretty as well only added to his pleasure. Her fair hair was fluffed over her ears and drawn down over her forehead, and her blue eyes looked at him through this tangle of curls with alluring charm.

"I have always wanted to meet you," gushed Josephine frankly, after a while.

"Why—why?" stammered Ralph.

"Because you were engaged to a girl I used to know at boarding school."

Ralph stared at her, a dull flush rising to his bronzed face. "You know Dorothy Faye?" he asked.

She nodded brightly. How very cute she was, only he would have liked her better if she had not worn so much jewelry, and he would like to see her forehead—if she had any!

"You are staring at me, rude man!" she pouted cutely. "Am I such a wonder because I know Dorothy?"

"Forgive me—I was surprised for a moment. What shall we do, Miss Josephine? Shall we dance?"

"I would rather talk, please. I want to ask you about Dorothy—she used to be so pretty at school. Is she pretty now?"

Ralph regarded the girl at his feet. "Pretty?" he repeated, "I think she is—very lovely," in a strained tone.

"Say It Right Out!"

"Is she fair?"

"Oh, no; her hair is black and soft."

"I remember—and it was soft about her face, like a dark mist. Does she wear it that way now?"

A vision of Dorothy's broad, white forehead and the saucy curl over one eyebrow came to Ralph's late fiancée.

"She wears it very plainly," he said with an effort.

"Not in a psyche?" she shrieked.

"I don't know what you call it, but she wears fishhooks."

"Fishhooks?"

He nodded. "Horrible little curls at the side over her eye."

Josephine snatched a laugh.

"Do you like them?" she asked stichly.

"They are idiotic," he blurted forth.

"Oh! Did you tell her that?"

"Something of the sort."

"How she must detest you," murmured Josephine, suddenly sorry for the foolish girl who had quarreled with Ralph Parker over the way she wore her hair. "The way she wore her hair was right if it was the way she liked it. Even in a bun," said Josephine firmly.

"A bun?" he repeated, searching for her mischievous eyes. He was rather tired of trying to find her eyes in the thicket of fair hair over her forehead. Suddenly he seemed to see Dorothy's sweet pale face, as he had last seen it, pure and serene in its flawless beauty, with the dark hair smoothed softly back and the little curl hooked invitingly over her eyebrow.

It wasn't so bad after all. Dorothy certainly looked a lot better than these thatched ladies who pecked at him so roughly from behind their fringes. How many of them were there? Only one, after all, Josephine herself.

"So you quarreled over the fishhook curl?" insisted Josephine.

"Yes, if you must know," he said rudely.

"You poor thing, I am so glad I met you," murmured Josephine.

"Why?"

"Promise not to tell Dorothy?"

"It isn't likely that I shall have a chance to speak to her again," he said, and he didn't know that his tone was hopeless and that the hurt in his eyes was plain to be seen.

"I am glad I met you, because Dorothy wrote me that you had quarreled with her and she did not believe it possible that it was just the way she wore her hair—she thinks there is another girl and that you picked a quarrel about the curl just to break the engagement!" The blue eyes behind the barricade were very bright indeed.

"Nonsense!" he cried. "There was only one girl for me—she knew it!"

"Don't believe she did. Anyway, she just hates the curl; cut it off right away, she said."

Ralph's bloom vanished. "If you could only excuse me, I believe I would run down to Oakdale—there is bush—down there—"

"About a fishhook curl?" mocked Josephine?

"Yes."

"Don't go down there—settle it here."

—Dorothy only arrived half an hour ago—I think she is waiting in the sun parlor. Mercy! the man has gone already!" Josephine leaned back in her chair and brushed back the hair from her forehead. "Ugh, how I hate this way of doing my hair—I believe I will try fishhooks myself!"

BELIEVE IN LOST CONTINENT

Eminent Students of South Sea Geography Firmly Convinced That Vast Tract Was Submerged.

A fascinating theory which is just now enjoying the attention of students of South sea geography is: Was there once a mighty continent in the South seas?

Many firmly believe that what is now the "milky way" of the Pacific—the isle-dotted sea—was at one time a vast coral and volcanic continent; that it has subsided in one place and been upheaved in another, until broken into a myriad fragments. And the day may still come when Nature will raise them from the deep, welded once more into a mighty whole.

Ralph Stock, in his book, "Cruise of the Dream Ship," while admitting that he is no scientist, points out many facts that support this theory.

There is, for example, a wall on Easter Island, not unlike the great wall of China, but which runs for a short distance and then plunges aimlessly into the sea. Where did it begin? Where did it end? What mighty city did it embrace?

On Ulitha there are the remains of a former and highly advanced civilization.

On Lord Howe Island, a mere rock sprouting three thousand feet out of the sea, four hundred and eighty miles from the Australian coast, there are sixty different species of land shell, fifty per cent of which are not to be found anywhere else in the world. How do they come to be on Lord Howe?

In the Carolines you may look down into the water of lagoons and see mosaic floors and broken walls, the remains of a submerged city.

Legal to Change One's Name.

Many people keep the names they have inherited not because they have any special affection for them, but because they do not realize how easy it is to get rid of them. They are under the impression that they would have to take the matter to court when as a matter of fact, all they have to do would be to make the announcement. The possession of the name-changing privilege was definitely confirmed in New York state in the case of South versus South. Casualty company when Judge Vann, who handed down the opinion, quoted an historical example to substantiate it.

"A predecessor of Honore de Balzac," he wrote, "was born a Guez, which means beggar, and grew to manhood under that name. When he became conscious of his power as a writer he did not wish his works to be published under that lowly name, so he selected the surname of Balzac from an estate that he owned."—Frederic J. Haskin in Chicago Daily News.

"Halifax"

Two derivations are given for the name of the capital of Nova Scotia, Halifax. According to Camden it means "holy hall," and he accounts for the origin of the name from the fact that two heads of state who had been slain by a wicked clerk was suspended on a tree in the neighborhood of an English town called Halifax, which place came to be much resorted to by pilgrims.

According to another account, the name means "holy face," and is derived from an image of St. John once preserved in a neighboring hermitage.

"FAIRY PRINCE" VERY HUMAN

Once More Illustrating the Wide Gulf Sometimes Existing Between Romance and Reality.

As the crowded elevator car swooped down from eighteen to ten she became aware that there was a man just behind her left elbow. Her consciousness of him was somehow intensified by the exhilaration of the moment. Curiosity counseled looking around. Pride forbade it. She felt a burning sensation in the part of her left cheek which was visible beneath her hat brim. Elizabeth's thoughtless writes in the New York World.

Bump, slam, swoop! the car inched its way down. Ten floors are not too few for the crowd of a fairy prince. At the eighth floor she was tall and slender with a lock of hair falling over his forehead, at the seventh he had rather deep-set eyes and stern, straight brows.

As they passed the fifth she decided that he wore a necktie of grayish blue which undoubtedly matched the peculiar tone of his eyes. Just then a fat man pushed his way in and forced her against the wall. But she hardly noticed this.

She was planning the encounter. Daintily she would step from the car, adjusting her fur collar so that the worn lining should be hidden—he would follow closely, and in well-modulated tones ask if he might take her home.

"Main floor—last stop!" bawled the elevator boy. She found herself hurrying madly along the marble floor, hearing the tap, tap of her own heels and a heavy tread close behind! It was, it must be the fairy prince! At the door of the big office building she stopped, a little breathless.

"Hello, Cuthbert," smiled caressingly in her ear. "Want an arm across the street?"

A tiny figure in a grotesquely rakish green plaid cap strolled up at her, disclosing in the front of his mouth a gleaming gold tooth!

ENGLISH ARCHERS LOSE HOME

Ancient Organization Puzzled as to the Disposition of Its Relics of Days Long Past.

There is a Royal Toxophilite society in England, which has had its headquarters in Regent's park for many years. Now, however, the society has to move, and is concerned as to the future resting place of the wonderful treasury of archery relics now in Archers' hall.

One bow and set of arrows are more than 4,000 years old. These were taken from the tombs at Saqqarah, in Egypt, and are believed to have been in use about 2000 B. C.

Another bow was given to the society by Mahomet Effendi, "ambassador from the Sublime Porte," in 1794, when he came to England for the first time, bringing his bow and arrows with him. When this Turkish official saw the ground at Regent's park he said it was much too small, so he went into a street outside the park and shot his arrows into a field. The distance was measured and found to be a quarter of a mile. Mahomet was so pleased with this shot that he presented his bow and arrows to the society. The bow is beautifully carved and is of immense strength.

Just Like a Woman.

A Fullerton man says he sets two eggs from a single hen. His plan is ingenious and might be worth trying on a larger scale, so we print it for the benefit of some of our suburban readers.

He has arranged a mirror opposite Biddy's nest, so that when she hops off and cackles she sees in the glass what she supposes is another hen cackling. This arouses her jealousy and not to be outdone by a supposed rival she jumps back on the nest and lays another egg.—Los Angeles Times.

STATE CAPITAL

Legislative Business Finished.

Annapolis.—
Governor Ritchie made a clean slate of legislative business by acting on all the bills left in his hand by the General Assembly, signing 399 and vetoing 30. With the bills previously acted on the Governor signed a total of 511 and vetoed 33. The Legislature passed 549 bills and 29 joint resolutions, about 100 less than two years ago.

In vetoing the thirty bills, most of them of local interest only, the Governor gave out a statement relative to each measure and giving his reasons for withholding his signature.

The vetoed bill of the most general interest was that relating to marriages in Cecil, Somerset and Montgomery counties. This measure provided that no marriage license should be issued to applicants who had not resided in the State for the preceding 48 hours. It was designed to break up the marriage mart at Elkton and was originally state-wide in its application but was so amended as to include only the three counties mentioned. The opposition to the bill seems to have come mostly from the residents of Harford county, who claimed that the result would be to send runaway couples from other States to Havre de Grace where the same situation as now prevails at Elkton might be renewed. The opposition was led by State Senator Tydings, of Harford, who was present and thanked the Governor for his veto.

In his statement relating to this bill
the Governor said:
"If it were drivers act in an unseemly manner, if ministers of the gospel discredit their calling—and they do, if the conditions have been correctly described to me these are not sound reasons for making unbridled discriminations and for introducing non-uniformity in the marriage laws among counties of the State, particularly a discrimination which, while relieving Cecil, would in all probability simply transfer these kind of marriages from Cecil to other neighboring counties
where similar restrictions do not exist.
As evidence of this, Senator Tydings,
John L. G. Lee, Speaker of the House, and the people of Harford county, have made the strongest possible protest against the bill on the ground that it will simply result in transferring the present conditions at Elkton to Havre de Grace.

Among the important bills signed by the Governor were the $9,000,000
Soldiers' Bonus Bill, the Full-Crew Law Repealer, which was fought to the last ditch by the labor organizations, the Child Hygiene Bill, the State Budget, the State Road Loan, the Southern Maryland Road Loan, the Immigration Commission Bill, the Mining Bureau Bill, the amendment to the Moving-Picture Censor Law,
the State Building Loan, the Fewer Elections amendment, and the bill for the purchase by the State of the Susquehanna River bridge.

In regard to the signing of the Full-Crew Repeal Bill, the Governor said
in his statement:

"The arguments for and against Senate Bill No. 74, known as the Full-Crew Law Repealer," have related mainly to the necessity for the additional brakemen, and that question involves considerations of safety, automatic devices, grades, weight and length of trains, and other practical operating problems, as well as cost.

"As to these questions the opinions of competent and sincere men differ, and the proper solution of them, the task would be a very difficult one.
But it does not because the Bill does not itself dispense with the additional brakemen, but with the legal necessity of having him, and then places jurisdiction in the Public Service Commission, after a hearing upon its own motion or upon complaint, to determine the number of men required for safe and efficient operation.

"I will, therefore, request the Public Service Commission to investigate and ascertain in just what cases and on just what trains and under just what circumstances the railroads contemplate dispensing with the additional brakemen.

"These investigations can begin at once, so that the Commission will be in possession of the facts when the law becomes effective, on June 1 next,
and will thus be in a position, not only on complaint, but also on its own motion, to place an order at once upon any of the railroads to show cause why the men dispensed with or transferred, or intended so to be, should not be restored to their present possions in every case where the Commission has reason to believe that this should be done.

"I think that this should assure fairness both to the men and to the railroads in the operation of the law, and with this statement I feel it my duty to accept the decision of the Legislature and to approve the bill."
Among the bills vetoed was one of the two bills creating an additional judge for Baltimore city, the Governor considering that new judge enough;
the amendments to the motor vehicle law giving an appeal to the court in case of revocation of license; requiring the Motor Vehicle Commissioner to annually list of registered cars to the County Commissioners of each county; the bill reducing the license fees on motor trucks; the bill authorizing special markets on automobiles; bill

creating a Roads Engineer Commission for Anne Arundel county; special road bills for Somerset, Prince George's and Wicomico counties; the Baltimore county tax exemption bill;
the bill enlarging powers of the Bank
Commissioner; the sales in bulk bill;
the bill regulating counsel fees in cases before the Industrial Accident Commission; several local pension bills relating to Baltimore city, local fish, oyster and game bills relating to Washington, Frederick, Charles and St. Mary's counties and a bill creating the office of Road Director for Alle-gany county in place of the Board now in charge of the roads.

Road Plans Soon.

Maryland's road-building program
for the next two years under its State budget of $3,150,000 is expected to be mapped out in the next few weeks by the State Roads Commission after conference with the various county commissioners.

In addition to this program, Roads
Chairman John N. Mackall announced that the commission expected to have the contract for the first year's work on the Baltimore and Southern Maryland road, known as the "Robert Crain road," ready to let on August 1, the day the first $250,000 of the $1,000,000
loan becomes available.

"As the justification for this Southern Maryland road is to furnish a direct connection with Baltimore, the commission expects to make it as straight as possible within reason," Mr. Mackall said. "It will start at Mattawoman, in Charles county, and run through Upper Marlboro across the Patuxent river at Priest bridge to Benfield, in Anne Arundel county, on the Old Light Street road, just below Glenburnie.

"There are about 33 miles of road to be built, at about $30,000 a mile, or a little more than eight miles a year for four years. We are at liberty to start at both ends simultaneously, or at the middle and work both ways, or any other way found expedient. It all depends upon how easy the acquiring of rights of way will be. But we intend to have work on the road started immediately after August 1."

Two contracts were awarded by the commission, one going to the next lowest bidder because the lowest bidder was considered irresponsible. This is the first time such a thing has occurred in the history of the present commissioners.

Road Bids Drop $5,000.

Bids on the first road construction contracts to be let this season were opened by the State Roads Commission at 10 o'clock yesterday morning.
With construction difficulties, the low bids average about $5,000 a mile under last year. The range of bids was not great and in some cases there were several very close to the low figure.

The section of road and low bids are as follows:

Baltimore County—York road, 5.34 miles to Pennsylvania line. May Bros.
& Piles; $25,500 a mile.

Harford County—Philadelphia road,
4.13 miles. E. R. Griffith Construction Company; $26,000 a mile.

Carrall County—New Windsor road,
6.63 miles. Thomas Bros. & Hunter;
$34,000 a mile.

Frederick County—Urbana pike,
1.99 miles. L. R. Waesche; $25,000 a mile.

Annapolis.—The Annapolis City Council unanimously adopted a daylight-saving ordinance, to take effect at 2 A. M. on the last Sunday in April and to continue until the same hour on the last Sunday in August. Rear-Admiral Wilson, superintendent, and other Naval Academy authorities heartily favor the movement.

Hagerstown.—Resolutions calling upon Governor Ritchie to remove from office members of the Board of Education for Washington county were adopted at an indignation meeting of taxpayers held in the Courthouse here.
The meeting was called to order by Daniel W. Doub, who criticized the laws which make the taxpayers of the county support the public school system and allows them no voice in the administration. Mr. Doub reviewed what he termed the inefficiency of the Board, and suggested the appointment of a chairman.

NINE VILLAGES INUNDED.

Lower Mississippi Floods Towns And 250 Acres Of Farm Land.

Vicksburg, Miss.—At least nine villages are inundated or surrounded by water and upward of 250 square miles of farm land are under water as a result of food stages on the Lower Mississippi and its tributaries.

Reports to headquarters of the levee district here indicated that the most severe food conditions were centered for the time being in the Arkansas and White river basins, but the Mississippi itself approached new high records at Vicksburg and Greenville. At many points engineers were at work reinforcing the levees.

Most of those driven out of their homes by the water are negroes. Numerous refugee colonies have been established in the flood district, and the Missouri Pacific Railroad has distributed 250 box cars along its route for use of the homeless.

What She Wanted.

Last Saturday we were eating lunch and Madeline had just finished eating a ham sandwich. In asking for another she turned to her mother and said: "Mamma, I want some more meat, but don't wrap it up."—Chicago Tribune.

BOY SCOUTS

Twelve Years of Scouting

In a recent issue of the Survey, Chief Scout Executive Vent writes of his twelve years' experience as a leader of boys. Among other things, he mentioned the fact that what seems most remarkable in scouting is the responsiveness of the boys themselves, their power and willingness to assume responsibility and to live up to the obligations of the scout oath and law.

"When we said that a first-class scout must know what to do in case of fire," he writes, "probably none of us remotely imagined that during one year 5,778 scouts would qualify in firemanship; that in fifty or more cities scout troops would be regularly authorized aides to the local fire departments; that in one state alone—Pennsylvania—scouts would be cited for having in less than a year saved from destruction by fire over a million dollars' worth of valuable timber. Nor could we in any way have visualized
the large number of strong individual instances where scouts or groups of scouts have been voluntarily to meet the emergency of the hour in fighting fire, rescuing persons from burning buildings, rendering first aid to persons overcome by fumes of smoke, besides their signal services in helping prevent fire by conducting city clean-ups, distributing fire-prevention literature and reporting the hazards and violations of fire laws."

"I want particularly to stress that scout co-operation; for, contrary to the ideas of those who do not fully comprehend scouting and its motives, the movement is dedicated to co-operation with all other forces working for public betterment. It has no wish to supersede the work of church, or school, or home, or of any social service agency. It merely places its splendid boy power, its organized, its trained power for service, its large and enthusiastic active membership, at the disposal of the community and the nation, to help wherever help is needed or desired.

"We have learned in our twelve years of experience with boys that there is no boy problem that terrible world as we know it. Our boys, given half a chance, will, in nine cases out of ten,
rise to whatever we expect of them;
they go beyond what we expect of them, if only we men will in turn do our duty—provide for them the opportunity for clean, happy, useful, healthful life, which is their birthright as young Americans."

THE TEN-YEAR MEN IN SCOUTING

National council officers who have served the movement consecutively for at least ten years are President Colin J. Livingston of Washington, Chief Justice Taft, honorary vice president;
Daniel Carter Beard, author, artist, outdoor man and boy worker, who is a vice president of the organization as well as its scout commissioner and chairman of the national court of honor; Vice Presidents Mortimer L.
Schiff of New York, Benjamin Dulaney of Bristol, Tenn., and Milton A. McLean of Detroit and San Diego; George D.
Frait of Brooklyn, treasurer; John Sherman Hoyt, Jeremiah W. Jenks and Frank Presbury of the executive board, and James W. West, chief scout executive, in whose capable hands the boy scout movement has prospered in 12 years beyond the dreams of anyone who was present at the birth of the organization.

HE EARNED HIS DOLLAR

Scout Sebastian Lubomirski, of Trop, Ill., Washington, D. C., in the of the Polish minister to the United States, and a sure enough prince.
He is an earnest worker in scouting and passed all his second-class tests with ease except one; the requirement which demands that the candidate must "earn and deposit $1 in a public bank." Earning money was totally out of range of the little prince's experience, but he was game. He earned his dollar by selling papers on the street. Sebastian will struggle return to Poland, where he means to go on scouting.

PROSE FOR SCOUT MOVEMENT

Under its "Live Topics of the Day" heating a Hoboken (N. J.) newspaper printed the following on the boy scout birthdays:
"It is hard to believe that the boy scout movement is only twelve years old today. Few organizations can boast of a better record of honorable achievement in so short a time."

SCOUTS FAVOR PEDESTRIANS

Boy scouts of San Francisco are frequently called upon to help to traffic duty and on these occasions it is said that they tend to favor the struggling pedestrian rather than the cocky motorist, especially when there is a driving rain in progress. These humane young cops hold up automobiles and street cars to give the wayfarer man
a chance to keep at least moderately dry. But way to the "jay-walker" who tries to dart across the street at the wrong moment or angle.

LESSEN BROODINESS OF HENS

Every Ambitious and Enthusiastic Poultryman Tries to Restrict its Development.

(Prepared by the United States Department
of Agriculture.)

Broody hens, like wayward children,
are a great discredit to their parents and a source of annoyance to all who have to do with them. That is why one of the greatest concerns of every ambitious and enthusiastic poultry-man is to restrict the appearance and development of broodiness in his flock. The United States Department of Agriculture has found that brood-iness can be reduced very markedly by careful, rigid and persistent selection.

At the Massachusetts experiment station, where a detailed experimental study of broodiness has been made, it was ascertained that previous to the practice of selection the average hen

in the flock was broody 3.88 times a year. After practicing selection was practiced for five years, this tendency to broodiness was reduced so that the average egg producer in the flock developed broodiness only 0.36 times a year. A study of the correlation between broodiness and egg production shows that pullets that are very broody tend to lay relatively few eggs before their broody periods.

There is no one dominant cause of broodiness among poultry. Generally speaking, there occur four distinct types of broodiness and one of broodiness.

It is believed that birds showing only a slight tendency to broodiness belong in the same class as the nonbroody fowls, as each has about the same proportion of broody offspring. The determination of broodiness is complicated by the fact that birds that are not broody during the pullet year may become broody during their second or third laying season.

PROPER EGGS FOR HATCHING

California College Institutes New Project for Improvement of Poultry Flocks.

For the improvement of poultry by careful selection of breeding stock, the poultry department of the division of extension work of the California College of Agriculture has instituted a new project with the hatcherymen of Alameda county. Previous to this time, the assertions of the egg dealer were the only guide to those who bought eggs for hatching and dealt in baby chicks, as to the quality of the eggs they were getting. There was opportunity for frequent abuse or confidence in the business.

Under the present plan about 20,000
birds have been inspected by poultry experts, and those which have met the requirements decided upon for weight,
egg production, size and shape of eggs,
and other points, have been accepted
as eligible for the production of eggs for hatching. Hatcherymen have agreed to use no eggs except those from tested flocks.

EXERCISE CARE IN CULLING

One Is Liable to Discard as Many Good Layers as Poor Ones
Late in Winter.

Be careful about culling birds. You are liable to get rid of as many good ones as poor ones. As long as you've fed them all during the winter, it would be safer to feed them another few weeks, when any old bird will produce eggs; then do your culling in the summer, from June to September.

POULTRY NOTES

Feed a dry mash.

A fat hen is not a good layer.

Feed grain once or twice a day.

Feed meat scraps and kitchen waste.

Brooder lamps should be cleaned
every day.

Powder the chicks occasionally during the first eight weeks.

The flock with shelter from storms and with clean surroundings has the best protection against disease.

Too Familiar.

"This air is very familiar," said the musician as a gust of wind whisked his hat off.—Boston Transcript.

SUDDEN CHANGE OF OPINION

Or Possibly the Lady Had Really Been Enjoying Herself and Wasn't
Aware of It.

At one of those banquets where almost every one is called on to make a short speech or to tell a funny story, a woman who sat near the speaker's table was heard to remark
after nearly every story told:
"My goodness, that's another old one. Why don't they tell some new ones?"

Regardless of whether the speaker got a good laugh, she complained to her companion of the antiquity of the stories.

"I've never been to a worse affair.
I wish they would cut it short. I'd rather have stayed home than come,"
she bitterly asserted.

In the midst of her harangue, the speaker, looking in her direction,
said:

"Now, there is Mrs. ——. She is one of the most charming workers in our organization, and I know we would all be glad to hear her speak."

Dismayed, Mrs. ——— managed to get on her feet, and addressed the guests thusly:

"I really don't know what to say,
only that I am so glad to be here with you. I just said to the lady sitting next to me what a perfectly splendid time I was having. I didn't know we had so many clever people in the organization who could tell such funny stories." — Indianapolis News.

Curiosity Satisfied.

I have been in the habit of patronizing a printing shop near home, and on each occasion I have noticed a man in particular who never spoke to me. He always had a scowl on his face.

Recently I went to a nearby town by interurban and sat in the car. A man across the aisle spoke to me:

"You patronize the Thomas print shop, don't you?"
I said "Yes."

He said: "I thought I had seen you in there several times."

I said: "Tell me, who is that heavy-set man with the white mustache who is such an infernal grouch?"

"I guess you must mean me. I just had the mustache shaved off this morning," said he.—Chicago Tribune.

Bold South American Thieves.

Two ingenious thieves, finding the streets of Buenos Ayres, Argentine,
too well policed for daylight holdups,
recently succeeded in using police headquarters for one of their operations. According to a middle-aged man of prosperous appearance, they showed him detectives' badges and announced
he must accompany them to headquarters and there explain how he came by the gold watch and other valuables acquired. To avoid a scene the man accompanied them. They took him to an unused room at headquarters and relieved him of everything of value.
Then, indicating a door of a room where his protests of innocence would be attended to, they vanished.

Lost Forty-eight War Vessels.

During the period when the United States was actually at war, April 6, 1917, to November 11, 1918, the loss of navy vessels was 48 of all classes.
On these vessels 1,150 lives were lost.
The list includes one battleship, the Minnesota, transports, tankers, submarine chasers, yachts, etc.

Palm Tree of Scripture Nature's Gift.

The palm tree of Scripture is understood to have been the date palm. For all the centuries that man has lived on earth the date palm has furnished food and shelter. Its timber and its foliage have their uses even now.
Sugar, date sugar, is made from its sap just as maple sugar is made from the sap of the maple tree. Its sap has been fermented into wine for scores of centuries, and that sap for many ages has been distilled into a brandy that is as fiery and overwhelming as apple brandy, peach brandy and grape brandy.

Sentimentality.

Are we sentimental—do we cultivate the finer feelings? Is life worth living without sentiment—sympathetic feeling and the love of the beautiful in character, morals and
manners?

Can intelligent man be happy in
groveling—in sordid living—in only
looking down in the dirt and seeking only material for the gratifica-
tion of the body?

Good sentiment that we see and
hear, written, spoken or sung, and
in conduct and manners, brings
much happiness into our lives.

In a debate between Senator Martin and Gov. Montague, of Virginia,
candidates for election to the U. S.
Congress, Mr. Martin said, "Gov.
Montague is a gentleman of the highest type of lovable character,
but is too sentimental to get down
to the business of getting the big
slice from the Government 'pork
barrel' that can be had for the constituency." Gov. Montague replied,
"that he appreciated the high compliment as to being a man of refined
feeling, as he believed that without
sentiment life is not worth living."

I heard a sound at my heart's door,
And was roused from my slumber
within;
It was beauty that knocked, (it and knocked before)
Now I said "let it come in!"
Ours open
And the heart will be bright
With a heavenly light
When we let the beauty in.

Berlin Loses To Pocumoke.

Berlin was very badly defeated in the game played with Pocumoke.

At first, it looked as if it was go-
ing to be a very interesting game,
but Pocumoke soon began to make
runs, while Berlin "stood still."

The Berlin boys seemed to be at
their worst the whole way through.
The game ended with the score of 7 to 1 in favor of Pocumoke, Berlin's run being a "homer" made in the third inning by H. Rayne, Berlin's 3rd Baseman.

$2,000,000 Fire At Pocumoke City.

Business Section Wiped Out
Monday Afternoon.

Ten acres in the heart of Pocomoke City were burned last Monday,
destroying practically the entire
business section, and about fifty residences on Front and River Streets
and Linden Avenue. The loss is estimated at more than $2,000,000,
and many families are homeless.

The fire started at noon in the
hay-loft of the stables and lumber
yard of F. M. Wilson, on Maple St.
It was soon beyond the control of
the Pocomoke firemen and help was summoned from other towns, several
of whom responded. Snow Hill
was the first to arrive, but by this
time the strong southwest wind was
sweeping the flames down Market Street to the river, and the fire was
not subdued till four o'clock.

The women of the town served
sandwiches and coffee to the workers.
Much praise was given the five
telephone operators for heroism in
remaining at their posts until the last moment possible. By six o'clock two long-distance wires were
again got in operation, and about
half of those in the city.

Realizing that the town would be
in darkness and in danger of thievery,
Mayor Tull telephoned to Governor
Ritchie for State troops for guard
duty. A number of state policemen
were sent from Belair, and fifty men
of the First Regiment from Salisbury.

The following business buildings were

Law-Enforcement Meeting At M. E. Church.

We regret that the rain kept any
person in this community from hearing Hon. John F. Kramer, although
the audience was much larger than
was expected on account of the weather.

He dwelt on the great task before
the people of this country in under-
taking to uproot a great evil that
was instituted when Noah left the
ark. He said every woman knew
how hard it is to change a man's
course of living, and that was what happened when the Eighteenth Amendment went into effect. Millions were told to face about and
march in the right direction. He is not afraid of the stupendous job.
What he feared most was that the
workers would become discouraged
at the greatness of the work. The question was asked in New York,
"How long should the people be
given to try out the prohibition
law?" The reply was, two hundred years, as the liquor business had
thousands of years. Mr. Kramer
stated that it was impossible for the U. S. Government to enforce the
work.

Mr. Crabbe stated that Mr. Kramer
will be in Maryland two weeks,
and that meetings will be followed
up by organizing Law-Enforcement
Associations in the community.

Mr. Crabbe, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, told the
audience some of the inside workings of the Maryland Legislature.

He informed us that the office of
the Speaker of the House was the
headquarters for the wets. He told
how members were driven and
bought to vote against the Enforcement law, against their own conscience. He gave another instance

in Ohio where a member was told
that his son should be liberated
from prison and he had to let it be so, but he took time to visit
his son in prison, and tell him how
he could be liberated, and told his boy he would vote as he said. The boy told his father to vote for the bill. The noble boy was allowed
by the Governor to remain in that prison. We trust the parents will have his advice in regard to having their children educated in the L. E.

L. See to it that your children attend the meetings.

Showell Roller Mill Destroyed By Fire

The roller mill of the Showell
Milling Company, managed by Hervey P. Calhoun, was destroyed
by fire of unknown origin, Monday
night. It was already well under way when discovered about ten
o'clock by Charles C. Mumford,
and there was no chance of saving
it. It is not yet known whether it will be replaced. The insurance
was for $5,000, and the value probably as much more. It was an up-to-date roller mill and will be a
great loss to the community.

Just Received

A carload of WHITE CEDAR SHINGLES 5 x 20 and 6 x 20. This shingle was once very popular in this vicinity, but war times almost took it off the Market. They can now be bought at a reasonable price, and may now be found on our yard again.

Quick Deliveries

Are very essential at this time of the year. You must have the stock in order to sell it. We got it and at prices that will surprise you.

THE ADKINS CO.,

Everything Needed For Building

THE FORDSON $395. F. O. B. Detroit

The list price of the Fordson is now $395. F. O. B. Detroit, Mich. Think of it! There is not a power unit on the market at twice the price of the Fordson that can come anywhere near its quality and all-around dependability and usefulness. Nor are they capable of performing half the tasks which the Fordson "eats up" every day.

This low price makes it possible for every farmer to own a FORDSON—in fact makes it expensive to be without one.

The Fordson now sells for approximately 15 cents per pound. Just stop and consider what this means.

Rough castings cost about 6¢ per lb.
Steel and forgings 8¢ per lb.
Brass, bronze and ball bearings, etc.
average from 25¢ to $1.00 per lb.,

bringing the total material cost of the tractor up to approximately 10¢ a pound, leaving only the extremely small margin of five cents per pound over the bare cost of materials to cover all manufacturing operations, labor and overhead. Surely there is nothing we can say that should more strongly impress the farmer with the fact that the Fordson Tractor at $395 represents the best and most profitable investment any farmer can make.

Substantial reductions have been announced in the price of power farming implements and Fordson equipment. The Ford Dealer's prices are about equivalent to the cost of a team of good horses with horse-drawn equipment. The Fordson outfit will do as much work as two or three teams with an actual reduction in operation and maintenance costs.

LESSON FOR APRIL 23.

UZZIAH'S PRIDE AND PUNISHMENT.

LESSON TEXT.—II Chron. 26:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT.—Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall.—Prov. 16:18.

REFERENCE MATERIAL.—Num. 12:3-6; Deut. 31:1-9; II Kings 19:37; Dan. 4:2-3.

PRIMARY TOPIC.—The Story of a Proud King.
JUNIOR TOPIC.—A Man Who Forgot God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Pride Goeth Before Destruction.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—The Perils of Prosperity.

1. Uzziah Made King (vv. 1-5).
1. His Age (v. 1). He became king at the age of sixteen.

2. Length of His Reign (v. 3). He reigned fifty-two years. His mother's name was Jecoliah, which means "Jehovah is able," or "Made strong of Jehovah."

3. His Character (v. 4). He did that which was right in the sight of the Lord.

4. His Prosperity (v. 5). He deftly sought God while Zechariah lived, and because he sought him God made him to prosper as long as he continued to seek him. He, like Joseph, turned aside when the influence of the man of God was removed.

11. Uzziah's Achievement (vv. 6-15).
1. He Built Edin (v. 2). This was a port on the Red sea which had been lost to Judah. No doubt it was the aim of the father to get possession of this port, so the son makes his restoration his first duty. It was an important trading point and the commercial interests of the nation would be greatly increased by its possession.

2. He Had Military Success (vv. 6-8). (1) He conquered the Philistines (v. 6). After subduing them he dismantled their fortified cities and built new cities in their stead. (2) He defeated the Arabians (v. 7). (3) He made the Ammonites across the Jordan pay tribute (v. 8).

3. He Fortified Jerusalem (vv. 9-10). He took advantage of the peace which was now enjoyed because of the subjugation of his enemies to fortify Jerusalem. He placed in the towers great engines of war for hurling stones.

4. His Civic Improvements (v. 10). In the regions south and west of Jerusalem he built towers which served a threefold purpose, namely: observation, defense and shelter for his cattle. This enabled him to carry on his stock-raising enterprises.

5. His Army (vv. 11-15). It numbered 400,000. It was thoroughly equipped and drilled. God was with him, and his fame spread far and wide. The source of his strength was God.

111. Uzziah's Transgression (vv. 16-18).
The prosperity bestowed upon him by the Lord was too much for him—his heart was lifted up with pride. This is always so unless counteracted by divine grace. In his pride he presumptuously intruded into the priest's office. This act was not because of forgetfulness, but of deliberate purpose. Azariah and eighty other priests remonstrated with him, but this only made him angry. This act was a trespass against God.

IV. Uzziah's Punishment (vv. 19-21).
While raging in his wrath and about to burn incense he was smitten with leprosy, a dreadful, incurable and unclean disease. This judgment came upon him as a consequence of his overweening pride and vanity. He was thrust out of the sanctuary—excluded from God's house. Indeed, his own conscience smote him, and he hurriedly went out because he knew that the Lord had smitten him. He not only was excluded from the place of worship, but was dethroned. His son Jotham was made regent. His judgment was:

1. Sudden. The Lord smote him while he stood as priest, with censor in hand. Frequently God's judgments are speedy.

2. Severe. The leprosy broke forth upon his forehead. The same judgment befell Miriam for speaking against Moses (Num. 12:10), and Gehazi for lying to Elisha (II Kings 5:27). Great sins demand severe punishment.

3. Conspicuous. Azariah and all the priests looked up and beheld the leprosy (v. 20). The spot on Uzziah's forehead proclaimed him as the object of God's wrath. How many today are hearing about the marks of sin—God's judgment!

4. Humiliating. He was henceforth unclean—cut off from the congregation. This is what sin always does. 5. Fatal. It ended in death. "The wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23).

Cause and Upholder.
God alone . . . is Himself, and is the Cause and Upholder of everything to which He has given being.—Pusey.

Praise the Lord.
Oh, that men would praise the Lord for His goodness and for his wonderful works to the children of men!—Bible.

The Blockhead.
A blockhead cannot come in nor go away, nor sit, nor rise, nor stand, like a man of sense.—Bryce.

Protest Against Washing Ears.
The recent stories in the Companion about the difficulties that mothers have had in persuading their children to have their ears washed has led a contributor to tell what happened when her small boy was asked whether he should prefer to go to a picture show or to a concert. The boy really wanted to go to the concert, but he chose the picture show instead. When asked why, he said that going to a dark room would make washing his ears unnecessary.—Youth's Companion.

The KITCHEN CABINET

"The worry cow might have lived till now, if she had saved her breath; but she feared her hay wouldn't last all day, so she choked herself to death."

HELPFUL HINTS WORTH NOTING

Washout meats which have become rancid may be freshened and sweetened by pouring over the meat meats boiling water in which a little soda has been dissolved. Rinse in cold water and dry in a towel.

Nuts in the shell which have become too brittle to crack without breaking, if treated to a bath of boiling water, will crack and seem like fresh nuts.

Keep the smallest candle ends and put into a small muslin bag. Use to polish the irons or keep like kitchen range clean and bright.

A broom which is badly worn may serve longer if all the roots of sitching are ripped out except the top row. Tie the broom after soaking in soap suds and piling thoroughly.

A bit of sugar added to doughnuts will keep them from soaking fat, which is both a saving of fat and indigestion.

The amount of bacon to be used for seasoning may be lessened if it is put through the meat grinder before adding to the dish. It is more evenly mixed through the dish in this way.

Scale bread put through the meat grinder, then browned in the oven, makes a fine breakfast cereal served with milk. This is especially good for an invalid.

A rug in a silk stocking may be taken back with a crochet hook. Old stockings may be cut in strips and used for braided rugs.

Old inner tubes from auto tires make fine elastic for rompers, bloomers and shirt sleeves. Such elastic will survive several washings without losing its elasticity.

When making mayonnaise, if it curdles, beat another egg and add the curdled mixture very slowly, beating well between each addition. Have all materials cold.

Lemons placed in the oven and heated hot will render their juice more freely.

Mend a torn hair net in an emergency with a hair from your head threaded through a needle.

Weak, Weary Women

Learn the Cause of Daily Woes and End Them.

When the back aches and throats. When housework is torture. When night brings no rest nor sleep.

When urinary disorders set in. When the lot is a weary one. When the kidneys are for weak kidneys.

Have proved their worth in Berlin. This is one Berlin woman's testimony:

Mrs. Joie A. Bunting, Bay St., says: "Don's Kidney Pills are an old remedy with me. I have used them off and on for years and have found them to be a splendid medicine. My kidneys were weak and if I took a cold it settled on them. I felt weak and run down and was without ambition or energy. In bad weather I had rheumatic pains in my limbs. The action of my kidneys was irregular, too. Don's Kidney Pills have never failed to help me and I felt better in every way after using them. I will recommend Don's to anyone as a reliable remedy. I keep them on hand all the time."

Price 60¢ at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Don's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Bunting had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

WHY OUR SHOES ARE POPULAR

In making the claim that our shoes are popular we wish to prove why this is and has continued to be so ever since last September when we received our first shipment of Freidman-Shelby shoes. Since that time we have experienced a constant increase in our shoe business and this could not have been but for certain reasons.

Several Reasons

Our shoes are made by the largest Manufacturers of shoes in the world. Large production means low cost of Manufacture.

There are 36 factories with a DAILY output of 142,000 pairs.

Aside from the shoe factories there are many other factories that produce incidentals such as boxes, cartons, chemicals, etc. Their printing establishment is the largest west of New York City.

Freidman-Shelby shoes are known as the "All Leather" line. They are built for all kinds of weather and hundreds of our regular customers can testify as to their quality.

These shoes Manufactured at a minimum of cost come direct from the factories to us and we sell them on a small margin of profit. This accounts for our success.

OCEAN CITY.

A member of the Summer Congregation of St. Paul's, Ocean City, Md., who desires his name withheld, has arranged to present each year a silver Cross of Honor to the member of St. Paul's Choir who has given the most faithful and efficient service during the year.

This is following the custom of St. Paul's, Baltimore, and is greatly appreciated by the members of the Choir by the Sea.

The first cross was presented this year to Mrs. Robert J. Showell, who for more than thirty-five years has rendered to St. Paul's Choir and Church the most faithful, loyal, and efficient service.

The entire congregation is one in according to her this high honor, and is glad to thus express to her their appreciation of her pure and unselfish devotion to the Church which owes a large measure of its present success to her untiring zeal and devotion.

The Easter Day offerings at St. Paul's-by-the-Sea amounted to over $400.

The vestry elected on Easter Monday, were Charles A. Parks, William I. Purnell, L. F. Purnell, Edward M. Scott, George W. Parker, Charles Ludlum, Daniel Trimmer, Jr., John P. Whaley, John Dale Showell, Edwin Calhoun, William Turner, Dr. F. J. Townsend.

Easter in the Churches

Easter Sunday was a pleasant spring day, and large congregations enjoyed the church services.

Beautiful flowers, attractive music and fine sermons appropriate to the occasion made it a memorable occasion for those who were privileged to go, while fervent prayers in behalf of the sick and feeble reached the Throne of Grace.

At the Methodist Church a "Tithing Week" collection in church and Sunday School brought in $236.

Another special feature was the receiving into full membership of four probationers and four more by letter from other churches, whom the whole church was invited to welcome in, according to the old-fashioned custom.

At the Episcopal Church, five girls, Dorothy and Catherine Coffin, Cornelia Potter, Gertrude Purnell and Charlotte Bethards, were given by Rev. S. A. Potter their choice of a nice Bible or a gold cross, for attending Church service and choir practice at least three fourths of the time since last September. The three former, selected the Bible, and the two latter, the cross. On Monday the members of the Vestry were all re-elected. They are: Dr. Z. P. Henry, K. P. Jarvis, William Whaley, T. M. Purnell, H. C. Bounds, J. R. Phillips, Jr., H. T. Davidson, E. L. Coffin. Dr. Z. P. Henry is Sr. Warden; J. R. Phillips, Jr., Jr. Warden; K. P. Jarvis, Treasurer; E. L. Coffin, Registrar, and Miss E. P. Purnell, Treasurer of Mission Fund.

Our L. T. L. meeting for this week was held Tuesday, April 18, Monday being a holiday for the school. We had an attendance of twenty-one members. Three new members were added to our list. A very interesting program was rendered.

We wish to make our Legion a Victory Legion, so we have sent one dollar and seventy-five cents ($1.75) to Headquarters, for the Anna A. Gordon missionary fund, this being one of the first steps toward our goal. We also appointed girls for the flower mission department.

Adults may be enrolled as honorary members or patrons of the Legion by the payment of ten cents dues; we are very glad to say we have eight honorary members and hope to enroll many more. It has been planned for the L. T. L. to meet with the W. C. T. U. next Wednesday night, April 26, at the home of Mrs. Ida Cropper, on William Street, at the Rayne Homestead. We hope that the parents of the L. T. L. children will attend and bring the children with them.

A short program will be rendered by the L. T. L.

The Fish-Hook Girl

By CLARISSA MACKIE

© 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Ralph Barker stared at the dark hair, brushed smoothly back from the broad forehead, and then at the flat curl above the right eyebrow.

"You look like the—" he hesitated. "Say it right out," sobbed Dorothy with bitterness.

"You—look like the very dickens!" exploded Ralph.

"Thank you—here is your ring—don't come near me, I never want to see you again," breathed Dorothy passionately and tossing the flashing diamond toward him she whisked out of the room and, as she intended, out of his life.

Ralph stared at the ring in a rage. How little it meant to her—she tossed it aside just for a mere quarrel. He wondered how he could ever have dreamed they would be happy together. There were many other girls who would gladly have accepted his attentions, but he had selected Dorothy because he honestly loved her. If his thoughts fled to other girls now it was because he was so desperately hurt.

That evening he met Josephine Hart.

Josephine understood men. She was sympathetic, a good listener, and other girls said she actually purred when she had her own way, which was equivalent to saying that she scratched when she did not have it. Ralph was attracted by her vivacity and her quick intelligence. That she was very pretty as well only added to his pleasure. Her fair hair was fluffed over her ears and drawn down over her forehead, and her blue eyes looked at him through this tangle of curls with alluring charm.

"I have always wanted to meet you," gushed Josephine frankly, after a while.

"Why—why—" stammered Ralph. "Because you were engaged to a girl I used to know at boarding school."

Ralph stared at her, a dull flush rising to his bronzed face. "You know Dorothy Fayer?" he asked.

She nodded brightly. How very cute she was, only he would have liked her better if she had not worn so much jewelry, and he would like to see her forehead—if she had any!

"You are staring at me, rube man!" she pouted cutely. "Am I such a wonder because I know Dorothy?"

"Forgive me—I was surprised for a moment. What shall we do, Miss Josephine? Shall we dance?"

"I would rather talk, please. I want to ask you about Dorothy—she used to be so pretty at school. Is she pretty now?"

Ralph regarded the rug at his feet. "Pretty?" he repeated. "I think she is—very lovely," in a strained tone.

"Say, It Right Out!"

"Is she fair?"
"Oh, no; her hair is black and soft."
"I remember—and it was soft about her face, like a dark mist. Does she wear it that way now?"

A vision of Dorothy's broad, white forehead and the saucy curl over one eyebrow came to Ralph's late fiancée.

"She wears it very plainly," he said with an effort.

"No! In a psyche?" she shrieked. "I don't know what you call it, but she wears fishhooks."

"Fishhooks?"

He nodded. "Horrible little curls at the side over her eye."

Josephine smothered a laugh. "You like them?" she asked archly.

"They are idiotic," he blurted forth. "Oh! Did you tell her that?"

"Something of the sort."

"How she must detest you," murmured Josephine, suddenly sorry for the foolish girl who had quarreled with Ralph Fayer over the way she wore her hair.

"The way she wore her hair was right if it was the way she liked it. Even in a bun," said Josephine, firmly.

"A bun?" he repeated, searching for her mischievous eyes. He was rather tired of trying to find her eyes in the thicket of fair hair over her forehead.

Suddenly he seemed to see Dorothy's sweet pale face, as he had last seen it, pure and serene in its flawless beauty, with the dark hair smoothed softly back and the little curl hooked invitingly over her eyebrow.

It wasn't so bad after all. Dorothy certainly looked a lot better than those flatted ladies who pecked at him so regally from behind their fringes. How many of them were there? Only one, after all, Josephine herself.

"So you quarreled over the fishhook curl?" insisted Josephine.

"Yes, if you must know," he said rudely.

"You poor thing, I am so glad I met you," murmured Josephine.

"Why?"

"Because now, to tell Dorothy?"

"It isn't likely that I shall have a chance to speak to her again!" he said, and he didn't know that his tone was hopeless and that the hurt in his eyes was plain to be seen.

"I am glad I met you, because Dorothy wrote me that you had quarreled with her and she did not believe it possible that it was just the way she wore her hair—she thinks there is another girl and that you picked a quarrel about the curl just to break the engagement!"

The blue eyes behind the barricade were very bright indeed. "Nonsense!" he cried. "There was only one girl for me—she knew it!"

"Don't believe she did. Anyway, she just hates the curl; cut it off right away, she said."

Ralph's gloom vanished. "If you could only excuse me, I believe I would run down to Oakdale—there is bush—a down there—"

"About a fishhook curl?" mocked Josephine.

"Yes."

"Don't go down there—settle it here!"

—Dorothy only arrived half an hour ago—I think she is waiting in the sun parlor. Mercy! the man has gone all ready!" Josephine leaned back in her chair and brushed back the hair from her forehead. "Ugh, how I hate this way of doing my hair—I believe I will try fishhooks myself!"

BELIEVE IN LOST CONTINENT

Eminent Students of South Sea Geography Firmly Convinced That Vast Tract Was Submerged.

A fascinating theory which is just now enjoying the attention of students of South sea geography is: Was there once a mighty continent in the South seas?

Many firmly believe that what is now the "milky way" of the Pacific—the isle-dotted sea—was at one time a vast coral and volcanic continent; that it has subsided in one place and been upheaved in another, until broken into a myriad fragments. And the day may still come when Nature will raise them from the deep, welded once more into a mighty whole.

Ralph Stock, in his book, "Cruise of the Dream Ship," while admitting that he is no scientist, points out many facts that support this theory.

There is, for example, a wall on Easter Island, not unlike the great wall of China, but which runs for a short distance and then plunges aimlessly into the sea. Where did it begin? Where did it end? What mighty city did it embrace?

On Pitcairn there are the remains of a former and highly advanced civilization.

On Lord Howe Island, a mere rock sprouting three thousand feet out of the sea, four hundred and eighty miles from the Australian coast, there are sixty different species of land shell, fifty per cent of which are not to be found anywhere else in the world. How do they come to be on Lord Howe?

Legal to Change One's Name.

Many people keep the names they have inherited not because they have any special affection for them, but because they do not realize how easy it is to get rid of them. They are under the impression that they would have to take the matter to court when as a matter of fact, all they have to do would be to make the announcement. The possession of the name-changing privilege was definitely confirmed in New York state in the case of Smith versus State Casualty company when Judge Vann, who handled down the opinion, quoted an historical example to substantiate it.

"A predecessor of Honore de Balzac," he wrote, "was born a Guez, which means beggar, and grew to manhood under that name. When he became conscious of his power as a writer he did not wish his works to be published under that humble name, so he selected the surname of Balzac from an estate that he owned."—Frederic J. Haskin in Chicago Daily News.

"Halifax."

Two derivations are given for the name of the capital of Nova Scotia, Halifax. According to Camden it means "holy hair," and he accounts for the origin of the name from the fact that the head of a virgin who had been slain by a wicked clerk was suspended on a tree in the neighborhood of an English town called Halifax, which place came to be much resorted to by pilgrims. According to another account, the name means "holy face," and is derived from an image of St. John once preserved in a neighboring hermitage.

"FAIRY PRINCE" VERY HUMAN

Once More Illustrating the Wide Gulf Sometimes Existing Between Romance and Reality.

As the crowded elevator car swooped down from eighteen to ten she became aware that there was a man just behind her left elbow. Her consciousness of him was somehow intensified by the exhilaration of the moment. Curiously counseled looking around. Pride forbade it. She felt a burning sensation in the part of her left cheek which was visible beneath her hat brim. Elizabeth Houghton writes in the New York World.

Bump, slam, swoop! the car inched its way down. Ten floors are not too few for the creation of a fairy prince. At the eighth floor he was tall and slender with a lock of fair falling over his forehead, at the seventh he had rather deep-set eyes and stern, straight brows.

As they passed the fifth she decided that he wore a necktie of grayish blue which undoubtedly matched the peculiar blue of his eyes. Just then a fat man pushed his way in and forced her against the wall. But she hardly noticed this.

She was planning the encounter. Daintily she would step from the car, adjusting her fur collar so that the worn lining should be hidden—he would follow closely, and in well-modulated tones ask if he might take her home.

"Main floor—last stop!" bawled the elevator boy. She had herself hurrying madly along the marble floor, hearing the tap, tap of her own heels and a heavy tread close behind! It was, it must be the fairy prince! At the door of the big office building she stopped, a little breathless.

"Hello, Cutie!" smote raucously in her ear. "Want an arm across the street?"

A tiny figure in a grotesquely rakish green plaid cap snatched up at her, disclosing in the front of his mouth a gleaming gold tooth!

ENGLISH ARCHERS LOSE HOME

Ancient Organization Puzzled as to the Disposition of Its Relics of Days Long Past.

There is a Royal Toxophilite society in England, which has had its headquarters in Regent's park for many years. Now, however, the society has to move, and is concerned as to the future resting place of the wonderful treasury of archery relics now in Archers' hall.

One bow and set of arrows are more than 4,000 years old. These were taken from the tombs at Sakkarah, in Egypt, and are believed to have been in use about 2000 B. C.

Another bow was given to the society by Mahomet Effendi, "ambassador from the Sublime Porte," in 1794, when he came to England for the first time, bringing his bow and arrows with him. When this Turkish official saw the ground at Regent's park he said it was much too small, so he went into a street outside the park and shot his arrows into a field. The distance was measured and found to be a quarter of a mile. Mahmoud was so pleased with this shot that he presented his bow and arrows to the society. The bow is beautifully carved and is of immense strength.

Just Like a Woman.

A fullerton man says he gets two eggs from a single hen. His plan is ingenious and might be worth trying on a larger scale, so we print it for the benefit of some of our suburban readers.

He has arranged a mirror opposite Biddy's nest, so that when she hops off and cackles she sees in the glass what she supposes is another hen cackling. This arouses her jealousy and not to be outdone by a supposed rival she jumps back on the nest and lays another egg.—Los Angeles Times.

STATE CAPITAL

Legislative Business Finished.

Annapolis. Governor Ritchie made a clean slate of legislative business by acting on all the bills left in his hand by the General Assembly, signing 299 and vetoing 30. With the bills previously acted on the Governor signed a total of 511 and vetoed 38. The Legislature passed 549 bills and 20 joint resolutions, about 100 less than two years ago.

In vetoing the thirty bills, most of them of local interest only, the Governor gave out a statement relative to each measure and giving his reasons for withholding his signature.

The vetoed bill of the most general interest was that relating to marriages in Cecil, Somerset and Montgomery counties. This measure provided that no marriage license should be issued to applicants who had not resided in the State for the preceding 48 hours. It was designed to break up the marriage mart at Elkton and was originally state-wide in its application but was so amended as to include only the three counties mentioned. The opposition to the bill seems to have come mostly from the residents of Harford county, who claimed that the result would be to send runaway couples from other States to Harford de Grace where the same situation as now prevails at Elkton might be renewed. The opposition was led by State Senator Tydings, of Harford, who was present and thanked the Governor for his veto.

In his statement relative to this bill the Governor said:

"If thirty drivers act in an unseemly manner, if ministers of the gospel discredit their calling, and they do, if the conditions have been correctly described to me these are not sound reasons for making unsound discriminations and for introducing non-uniformity in the marriage laws among counties of the State, particularly a discrimination which, while relieving Cecil, would in all probability simply transfer these kind of marriages from Cecil to other neighboring counties, where similar restrictions do not exist. As evidence of this, Senator Tydings, John L. G. Lee, Speaker of the House, and the people of Harford county, have made the strongest protest against the bill on the ground that it will simply result in transferring the present conditions at Elkton to Harford de Grace.

Among the important bills signed by the Governor were the $5,000,000 Soldiers' Bonus Bill, the Full-Crew Law Repealer, which was fought to the last ditch by the labor organizations, the Child Hygiene Bill, the State Budget, the State Road Loan, the Southern Maryland Road Loan, the Immigration Commission Bill, the Mining Bureau Bill, the amendment to the Moving-Picture Censor Law, the State Building Loan, the Power Elections amendment, and the bill for the purchase by the State of the Susquehanna River bridge.

In regard to the signing of the Full-Crew Repeal Bill, the Governor said in his statement:

"The arguments for and against Senate Bill No. 74, known as the 'Full-Crew Law Repealer,' have related mainly to the necessity for the additional brakeman, and that question involves considerations of safety, automatic devices, grades, weight and length of trains, and other practical operating problems, as well as cost.

"As to these questions the opinions of competent and sincere men differ, and the proper solution of them, the task would be a very difficult one. But it does not because the Bill does not itself dispense with the additional brakeman, but with the legal necessity of having him, and then places jurisdiction in the Public Service Commission, after a hearing upon its own motion or upon complaint, to determine the number of men required for safe and efficient operation.

"I will, therefore, request the Public Service Commission to investigate and ascertain in just what cases and on just what trains and under just what circumstances the railroads contemplate dispensing with the additional brakeman.

"These investigations can begin at once, so that the Commission will be in possession of the facts when the law becomes effective, on June 1 next, and will thus be in a position, not only on complaint, but also on its own motion, to place an order at once upon any of the railroads to show cause why the men dispensed with or transferred, or intended so to be, should not be restored to their present positions in every case where the Commission has reason to believe that this should be done.

"I think that this should assure fairness both to the men and to the railroads in the operation of the law, and with this statement I feel it my duty to accept to approve the bill."

Among the bills vetoed was one of the two bills creating an additional judge for Baltimore city, the Governor considering one new judge enough; the amendments to the motor vehicle law giving an appeal to the court in case of revocation of license and eliminating minimum fines; requiring the Motor Vehicle Commissioner to compile a list of re-licensed cars to the County Commissioners of each county; the bill reducing the license fees on motor trucks; the bill authorizing special markets on automobiles; bill

creating a Roads Engineer Commission for Anne Arundel county; special road bills for Somerset, Prince George's and Wicomico counties; the Baltimore county tax exemption bill; the bill enlarging powers of the Bank Commissioner; the sales in bulk bill; the bill regulating counsel fees in cases before the Industrial Accident Commission; several local pension bills relating to Baltimore city, local fish, oyster and game bills relating to Washington, Frederick, Charles and St. Mary's counties and a bill creating the office of Road Director for Allegany county in place of the Board now in charge of the roads.

Road Plans Soon.

Maryland's road-building program for the next two years under its State budget of $5,150,000 is expected to be mapped out in the next few weeks by the State Roads Commission after conference with the various county commissioners.

In addition to this program, Roads Chairman John N. Mackall announced that the commission expected to have the contract for the first year's work on the Baltimore and Southern Maryland road, known as the "Robert Crain road," ready to let on August 1, the day the first $250,000 of the $1,000,000 loan becomes available.

"As the justification for this Southern Maryland road is to furnish a direct connection with Baltimore, the commission expects to make it as straight as possible within reason," Mr. Mackall said. "It will start at Mattawoman, in Charles county, and run through Upper Marlboro across the Patuxent river at Brant bridge to Benfield, in Anne Arundel county, on the Old Light Street road, just below Glenburnie.

"There are about 23 miles of road to be built, at about $30,000 a mile, or a little more than eight miles a year for four years. We are at liberty to start at both ends simultaneously, or at the middle and work both ways, or any other way found expedient. It all depends upon how easy the acquiring of rights of way will be. But we intend to have work on the road started immediately after August 1."

Two contracts were awarded by the commission, one going to the next lowest bidder because the lowest bidder was considered irresponsible. This is the first time such a thing has occurred in the history of the present commission.

Road Bids Drop $5,000.

Bids on the first road construction contracts to be let this season were opened by the State Roads Commission. Bids were priced very conservatively with construction difficulties, the low bids average about $5,000 a mile under last year. The range of bids was not great and in some cases there were several very close to the low figure.

The section of road and low bids are as follows:
Baltimore County—York road, 5.34 miles to Pennsylvania line. May Bros. & Piles; $25,000 a mile.
Harford County—Philadelphia road, 4.19 miles. E. R. Griffith Construction Company; $26,000 a mile.
Carroll County—New Windsor road, 5.63 miles. Thomas Bros. & Hunter; $34,000 a mile.
Frederick County—Urbana pike, 1.99 miles. L. R. Waesche; $25,000 a mile.

Annapolis. The Annapolis City Council unanimously adopted a day-light-saving ordinance, to take effect at 2 A. M. on the last Sunday in April and to continue until the same hour on the last Sunday in August. Rear Admiral Wilson, superintendent, and other Naval Academy authorities heartily favor the movement.

Hagerstown. Resolutions calling upon Governor Ritchie to remove from office members of the Board of Education for Washington county were adopted at an indignation meeting of taxpayers held in the Courthouse here. The meeting was called to order by Daniel W. Doub, who criticized the laws which make the taxpayers of the county support the public school system and allows them no voice in the administration. Mr. Doub reviewed what he termed the inefficiency of the Board, and suggested the appointment of a chairman.

NINE VILLAGES INUNDED.

Lower Mississippi Floods Towns And 250 Acres Of Farm Land.

Vicksburg, Miss.—At least nine villages are inundated or surrounded by water and upward of 250 square miles of farm land are under water as a result of flood stages on the Lower Mississippi and its tributaries.

Reports to headquarters of the levee district here indicated that the most severe flood conditions were centered for the time being in the Arkansas and White river basins, but the Mississippi itself approached new high records at Vicksburg and Greenville. At many points engineers were at work reinforcing the levees.

Most of those driven out of their homes by the water are negroes. Numerous refugee colonies have been established in the flood district, and the Missouri Pacific Railroad has distributed 250 box cars along its route for use of the homeless.

What She Wanted.

Last Saturday we were eating lunch and Madeline had just finished eating a ham sandwich. In asking for another she turned to her mother and said: "Mamma, I want some more meat, but don't wrap it up."—Chicago Tribune.

BOY SCOUTS

TWELVE YEARS OF SCOUTING

In a recent issue of the Survey, Chief Scout Executive West writes of his twelve years' experience as a leader of boys. Among other things, he mentioned the fact that what seems most remarkable in scouting is the responsibility of the boys themselves, their power and willingness to assume responsibility and to live up to the obligations of the scout oath and law.

"When we said that a first-class scout must know what to do in case of fire," he writes, "probably none of us remotely imagined that during one year 5,778 scouts would qualify in firemanship; that in fifty or more cities scout troops would be regularly certified as to the local fire department; that in one state alone—Pennsylvania—scouts would be cited for having less than a year saved from destruction by fire over a million dollars' worth of valuable timber. Nor could we in any way have visualized the large number of striking individual instances where scouts or groups of scouts have risen voluntarily to meet the emergency of the hour in fighting fire, rescuing persons from burning buildings, rendering first aid to persons overcome by fumes of smoke, besides their signal services in helping prevent fire by conducting city clean-ups, distributing fire-prevention literature and reporting the hazards and violations of fire laws.

"I want particularly to stress that word co-operative, for contrary to the ideas of those who do not fully comprehend scouting and its values, the movement is dedicated to co-operation with all other forces working for public betterment. It has no wish to supersede the work of church, or school, or home, or of any social service agency. It merely places its splendid boy program in co-operation with the best of the community and the nation, to help wherever help is needed or desired.

"We have learned in our twelve years of experience that boys that are properly trained and supervised, and who have a right attitude of mind, there occur four distinct types of nonbroodiness and one of broodiness. It is believed that broodiness belongs in the same class as the nonbroodiness, as each has about the same proportion of broodiness offspring. The determination of broodiness is complicated by the fact that birds that are not broody during the pullet year may become broody during their second or third laying season.

PROPER EGGS FOR HATCHING

California College Institutes New Project for Improvement of Poultry Flocks.

For the improvement of poultry by careful selection of breeding stock, the poultry department of the division of extension work of the California College of Agriculture has instituted a new project with the hatcherymen of Alameda county. Previous to this time, the assertions of the egg dealer were the only guide to those who bought eggs for hatching and dealt in baby chicks, as to the quality of the eggs they were getting. There was opportunity for frequent abuse or confidence in the business.

Under the present plan about 50,000 birds have been inspected by poultry experts, and those which have met the requirements decided upon for weight, egg production, size and shape of eggs, and other points, have been accepted as eligible for the production of eggs for hatching. Hatcherymen have agreed to use no eggs except those from tested flocks.

EXERCISE CARE IN CULLING

One Is Liable to Discard as Many Good Layers as Poor Ones Late in Winter.

Be careful about culling birds. You are liable to get rid of as many good ones as poor ones. As long as you've fed them all during the winter, it would be safer to feed them another few weeks, when any old bird will produce eggs; then do your culling in the summer, from June to September.

HE EARNED HIS DOLLAR

Scout Sebastian Lubomirski, of Troop 91, Washington, D. C., is the son of the Polish millionaire to the United States, and a sure enough prince. He is an earnest worker in scouting and saved all his second-class tickets with each except one, the requirement which demands that the candidate must "earn and deposit $1 in a public bank." Earning money was so truly out of range of the little prince's experience, but he was game. He earned his dollar by selling papers on the street. Sebastian will soon return to Poland, where he means to go on scouting.

PRIDE FOR SCOUT MOVEMENT

Under its "Live Topics of the Day" heading a Hoboken (N. J.) newspaper printed the following on the boy scout birthday:

"It is hard to believe that the boy scout movement is only twelve years old today. Few organizations can boast of a better record of honorable achievement in so short a time."

SCOUTS FAVOR PEDESTRIANS

Boy scouts of San Francisco are frequently called upon to help to traffic duty and on these occasions it is said that they tend to favor the struggling pedestrian rather than the cocky motorist, especially when there is a driving rain in progress. These humane young cops hold up automobiles and street cars to give the wayfarer man a chance to keep at least moderately dry. But woe to the "jay-walker" who tries to dart across the street at the worst moment or angle.

Surely Would.

Many a surgeon would be insulted if you called him the village cut-up.

POULTRY CACKLES

LESSEN BROODINESS OF HENS

Every Ambitious and Enthusiastic Poultryman Tries to Restrict Its Development.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Broody hens, like wayward children, are a great discredit to their parents and a source of annoyance to all who have to do with them. That is why one of the greatest concerns of every ambitious and enthusiastic poultryman is to restrict the appearance and development of broodiness in his flock. The United States Department of Agriculture has found that broodiness can be reduced very markedly by careful, rigid and persistent selection.

At the Massachusetts experiment station, where a detailed experimental study of broodiness has been made, it

The Early Hatched Pullet Is the One That Begins to Lay Early in the Fall.

It was ascertained that previous to the practice of selection the average hen in the flock was broody 3.88 times a year. After painstaking selection was practiced for five years, this tendency to broodiness was reduced so that the average egg producer in the flock developed broodiness only 0.86 times a year. A study of the correlations between broodiness and egg production shows that pullets that are very broody tend to lay relatively few eggs between their broody periods.

Sudden Change of Opinion

Or Possibly the Lady Had Really Been Enjoying Herself and Wasn't Aware of It.

At one of those banquets where almost every one is called on to make a short speech or to tell a funny story, a woman who sat near the speaker's table was asked to remark after nearly every story told:

"My goodness, that's another old one. Why don't they tell some new ones?"

"I don't know," she complained to her companion, "but the speaker seems to have a great store of them."

"I don't know what to say, only that I am so glad to be here with you. I just said to the lady sitting next to me what a perfectly splendid time I was having. I didn't know we had so many clever people in the organization who could tell such funny stories."—Indianapolis News.

Curiosity Satisfied.

I have been in the habit of patronizing a printing shop near home, and on each occasion I have noticed a man in particular who never spoke to me. He always had a scout on his face. Recently I went to a nearby town by Interurban and sat in the smoker. A man across the aisle spoke to me:

"You patronize the Thomas print shop, don't you?"

"I said 'Yes.'"

"I said, 'I thought I had seen you to there several times.'"

"I said, 'Tell me, who is that heavy-set man with the white mustache who is such an infernal grouch.'"

"I guess you must mean me. I just had the mustache shaved off this morning," said he.—Chicago Tribune.

Bold South American Thieves.

Two ingenious thieves, finding the streets of Buenos Ayres, Argentine, recently succeeded in using police headquarters for one of their operations. Accosting a middle-aged man of prosperous appearance, they showed him detectives' badges and announced he must accompany them to headquarters and there explain how he came by the gold watch and other valuables he carried. To avoid a scene the man accompanied them. They took him to a unused room at headquarters and relieved him of everything of value. Then indicating a door of a room where his protests of innocence would be attended to, they vanished.

Lost Forty-eight War Vessels.

During the period when the United States was actually at war, April 6, 1917, to November 11, 1918, the loss of navy vessels was 48 of all classes. On these vessels 1,150 lives were lost. The list includes one battleship, the Minnesota, transports, tankers, submarine chasers, yachts, etc.

Palm Tree of Scripture Nature's Gift.

The palm tree of Scripture is understood to have been the date palm. For all the centuries that man has lived on earth the date palm has furnished food and shelter. Its timber and its foliage have been used even now. Sugar, date sugar is made from its sap just as maple sugar is made from the sap of the maple tree. Its sap has been fermented into wine for scores of centuries, and that sap for many ages has been distilled into a brandy that is as fiery and overwhelming as apple brandy, peach brandy and grape brandy.

Sentimentality.

Are we sentimental—do we cultivate the finer feelings? Is life worth living without sentiment—sympathetic feeling and the love of the beautiful in character, morals and manners?

Can intelligent man be happy in groveling—in sordid living—in only looking down in the dirt and seeking only material for the gratification of the body?

Good sentiment that we see and hear, written, spoken or sung, and in conduct and manners, brings much happiness into our lives.

In a debate between Senator Martin and Gov. Montague, of Virginia, candidates for election to the U. S. Congress, Mr. Martin said, "Gov. Montague is a gentleman of the highest type of lovable character, but is too sentimental to get down to the business of getting the big slice from the Government 'pork barrel' that can be had for the constituency." Gov. Montague replied, "that he appreciated the high compliment as to being a man of refined feeling, as he believed that without sentiment life is not worth living." I heard a sound at my heart's dark door, And was roused from my slumber within; It was beauty that knocked, (it had knocked before) Now I said "let it come in."

Open, open—let it come in!
And the heart will be bright
With a heavenly light
When we let the beauty in.

Berlin Loses To Pocomoke.

Berlin was very badly defeated in the game played with Pocomoke.

At first, it looked as if it was going to be a very interesting game, but Pocomoke soon began to make runs, while Berlin "stood still." The Berlin boys seemed to be at their worst the whole way through.

The game ended with the score of 7 to 1 in favor of Pocomoke, Berlin's run being a "homer" made in the third inning by H. Rayne, Berlin's 3rd baseman.

$2,000,000 Fire
At Pocomoke City.

Business Section Wiped Out
Monday Afternoon.

Ten acres in the heart of Pocomoke City were burned last Monday, destroying practically the entire business section, and about fifty residences on Front and River Streets and Linden Avenue. The loss is estimated at more than $2,000,000, and many families are homeless.

The fire started at noon in the hay-loft of the stables and lumber yard of F. M. Wilson, on Maple St. It was soon beyond the control of the Pocomoke firemen and help was summoned from other towns, several of whom responded. Snow Hill was the first to arrive, but by this time the strong southwest wind was sweeping the flames down Market Street to the river, and the fire was not subdued till four o'clock.

The women of the town served sandwiches and coffee to the workers.

Much praise was given the five telephone operators for heroism in remaining at their posts until the last moment possible. By six o'clock two long-distance wires were again got in operation, and about half of those in the city.

Realizing that the town would be in darkness and in danger of thieves, Mayor Tull telephoned to Governor Ritchie for State troops for guard duty. A number of state policemen were sent from Belair, and fifty men of the First Regiment from Salisbury.

The following business buildings were destroyed or badly damaged: Pocomoke City National Bank, Citizens' National Bank, Postoffice, Lloyd & Blain drug store, R. J. Landen shoe store, Market Street Pharmacy, W. H. Schofield & Co., Eastern Shore of Maryland Produce Exchange, Parker House, Empire Theater, I. H. Merrill's clothing store, Matthews & Lanford's hardware store.

A. H. Stevens ice-cream manufacturing company, American Stores Building, Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Exchange, Western Union Telegraph Company office, Store of N. Davis & Son, Law offices of Ewell & Child, Municipal Building, T. F. Hargis department store, building owned by Milton L. Yeasey, Stores of H. W. Callahan & Sons, W. H. Clarke and Co. Drug Store, Offices known as King Block, Law offices of Crockett & Crockett, Downtown Office of Electric and Ice Manufacturing Company, Offices of Peninsula Produce Company, Confectionery store of David Wiltbank.

Store of J. T. S. Miller, Jr., Hardware store of Picken & Hall, M. I. Helwig, men's furnishings, W. M. Sartorius, jewelry, Cliff & Coulbourne, hardware, Bunting Garage.

Law-Enforcement Meeting
At M. E. Church.

We regret that the rain kept any person in this community from hearing Hon. John F. Kramer, although the audience was much larger than was expected on account of the weather.

He dwelt on the great task before the people of this country in undertaking to uproot a great evil that was instituted when Noah left the ark. He said every woman knew how hard it is to change a man's course of living, and that was what happened when the Eighteenth Amendment went into effect. Millions were told to face about and march in the right direction. He is not afraid of the stupendous job. What he feared most was that the workers would become discouraged at the greatness of the work. The question was asked, "New York, 'How long should the people be given to try out the prohibition law?' The reply was, two hundred years, as the liquor business had thousands of years. Mr. Kramer stated that it was impossible for the U. S. Government to enforce the work.

Mr. Crabbe stated that Mr. Kramer will be in Maryland two weeks, and these meetings will be followed up by organizing Law-Enforcement Associations in the community.

Mr. Crabbe, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, told the audience some of the inside workings of the Maryland Legislature. He informed us that the office of the Speaker of the House was the headquarters for the 7-18. He told how members were driven and bought to vote against the Enforcement law, against their own consciences. He gave another instance in Ohio where a member was told that his son should be liberated from prison and be able to visit his sick mother if he would vote with the wets, but he took time to visit his son in prison, and tell him how he could be liberated, and told his boy he would vote as he said. The boy told his father to vote for the bill. The noble boy was allowed by the Governor to remain in that prison. We trust the parents will heed his advice in regard to having their children educated in the U. S. L. See to it that your children attend the meetings.

Showell Roller Mill
Destroyed By Fire

The roller mill of the Showell Milling Company, managed by Harvey P. Cathell, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin, Monday night. It was already well under way when discovered about ten o'clock by Charles C. Mumford, and there was no chance of saving it. It is not yet known whether it will be replaced. The insurance was for $5,000, and the value probably as much more. It was an up-to-date roller mill and will be a great loss to the community.

The Sensation of The Shows

This car, with high grade Flasher Body on the celebrated New Superior Model Chevrolet Chassis, is the most sensational value ever offered in motoring.

Its artistic lines, harmonious two color finish, refined appointments and mechanical efficiency make it the most desirable car for all who seek year round service combined with small investment and economical operation.

Illustrations and description convey but a poor idea of this 1922 leader in value and desirability. You must see it to realize what a wonderful buy it is at $875, F. O. B. Flint, Mich.

Your Family's Private Car

This beautiful, four-door sedan offers the privacy and luxury of a limousine at less than the cost of most open cars.

All that has kept the majority of motorists from owning closed cars has been the high prices heretofore charged for this type of automobile. The closed car defies snow, rain and cold; yet is cool and clean in summer. At all times it has more style and quality than an open car. It is the ideal family car.

No matter what priced car you own or are considering, it will pay you to inspect this pace-maker in values.

When Friends
Move Away

IT is possible to keep the ties of friendship close even when friends move out of town. By telephone you can get in touch with them no matter where they live.

You can enjoy a chat with out-of-town friends or relatives at small cost and they will appreciate your thoughtfulness.

The rates are less at night. Between 8.30 P. M. and midnight, the station-to-station day rates are reduced approximately one-half. These reduced rates apply only on station-to-station calls and the minimum reduced rate is 25 cents.

Why not let your friends know you think of them by calling them up this evening? You can talk a hundred miles for a small amount. See front of telephone directory for complete information.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR
THE FORDSON $395. F. O. B. Detroit

The list price of the Fordson is now $395. F. O. B. Detroit, Mich. Think of it! There is not a power unit on the market at twice the price of the Fordson that can come anywhere near its quality and all-around dependability and usefulness. Nor are they capable of performing half the tasks which the Fordson "eats up" every day.

This low price makes it possible for every farmer to own a FORDSON—in fact makes it expensive to be without one.

The Fordson now sells for approximately 15 cents per pound. Just stop and consider what this means.

Rough castings cost about 6¢ per lb.
Steel and forgings 8¢ per lb.
Brass, bronze and ball bearings, etc.
average from 25¢ to $1.00 per lb.,

bringing the total material cost of the tractor up to approximately 10¢ a pound, leaving only the extremely small margin of five cents per pound over the bare cost of materials to cover all manufacturing operations, labor and overhead. Surely there is nothing we can say that should more strongly impress the farmer with the fact that the Fordson Tractor at $395 represents the best and most profitable investment any farmer can make.

Substantial reductions have been announced in the price of power farming implements and Fordson equipment. The Ford Dealer's prices are about equivalent to the cost of a team of good horses with horse-drawn equipment. The Fordson outfit will do as much work as two or three teams with an actual reduction in operation and maintenance costs.

LESSON FOR APRIL 23.

UZZIAH'S PRIDE AND PUNISHMENT.

LESSON TEXT.—II Chron. 26:1-32.
GOLDEN TEXT.—Pride goeth before destruction and an haughty spirit before a fall.—Prov. 16:18.

REFERENCE MATERIAL.—Num. 12:1-15; Deut. 32:1-14; II Kings 5:20-27; Dan. 4:2-3.

PRIMARY TOPIC.—The Story of a Proud King.
JUNIOR TOPIC.—A Man Who Forgot God.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Pride Goeth Before Destruction.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—The Perils of Prosperity.

1. Uzziah Made King (vv. 1-5).
1. His Age (v. 1). He became king at the age of sixteen.

2. Length of His Reign (v. 3). He reigned fifty-two years. His mother's name was Jecoliah, which means "Jehovah is able," or "Made strong of Jehovah."

3. His Character (v. 4). He did that which was right in the sight of the Lord.

4. His Prosperity (v. 5). He definitely sought God while Zechariah lived, and because he sought him God made him to prosper as long as he continued to seek him. He, like Joseph before him, turned aside when the influence of the man of God was removed.

II. Uzziah's Achievement (vv. 6-15).
1. He Built Cloth (v. 2). This was a port on the Red sea which had been lost to Judah. No doubt it was the aim of the father to get possession of this port, so the son makes its restoration his first duty. It was an important trading point and the commercial interests of the nation would be greatly increased by its possession.

2. He Had Military Success (vv. 6-8).
(1) He conquered the Philistines (v. 6). After subduing them he dismantled their fortified cities and built new cities in their stead. (2) He defeated the Arabians (v. 7). (3) He made the Ammonites across the Jordan pay tribute (v. 8).

3. He Fortified Jerusalem (vv. 9-15). He took advantage of the peace which was now enjoyed because of the subjugation of his enemies to fortify Jerusalem. He placed in the towers great engines of war for hurling stones.

4. His Civic Improvements (v. 10). In the regions south and west of Jerusalem he built towers which served a threefold purpose, namely: observation, defense and shelter for his cattle. This enabled him to carry on his stock-raising enterprises.

5. His Army (vv. 11-15). It was thoroughly equipped and drilled. God was with him, and his fame spread far and wide. The source of his strength was God.

III. Uzziah's Transgression (vv. 16-18).
The prosperity bestowed upon him by the Lord was too much for him—his heart was lifted up with pride. This is always so unless counteracted by divine grace. In his pride he presumptuously intruded into the priest's office. This act was not because of forgetfulness, but of deliberate purpose. Azariah and eighty other priests remonstrated with him, but this only made him angry. This act was a trespass against God.

IV. Uzziah's Punishment (vv. 19-21).
While raging in his wrath and about to burn incense he was smitten with leprosy, a dreadful, incurable and unclean disease. This judgment came upon him as a consequence of his overweening pride and vanity. He was thrust out of the sanctuary—excluded from God's house. Indeed, his own conscience smote him, and he hurriedly went out because he knew that the Lord had smitten him. He not only was excluded from the place of worship, but was dejected. His son Jotham was made regent. His judgment was:

1. Sudden. The Lord smote him while attired as priest, with censer in hand. Frequently God's judgments are speedy. 2. Severe. The leprosy broke forth upon his forehead. The same judgment befell Miriam for speaking against Moses (Num. 12:10), and Gehazi for lying to Elisha (II Kings 5:27). Great sin demands severe punishment. 3. Conspicuous. Azariah and all the priests looked up and beheld the leprosy (v. 20). The spot on Uzziah's forehead proclaimed him as the object of God's wrath. How many today are hearing about the marks of sin—God's judgment! 4. Humiliating. He was henceforth unclean—cut off from the congregation. This is what sin always does. 5. Fatal. "It ended in death." "The wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23).

Cause and Upholder.
God alone . . . is in Himself, and is the Cause and Upholder of everything to which He has given being.—Pusey.

Praise the Lord.
Oh, that men would praise the Lord for His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men!—Bible.

The Blockhead.
A blockhead cannot come in nor go away, nor sit, nor rise, nor stand, like a man of sense.—Blyss.

Protest Against Washing Ears.
The recent stories in the Companion about the difficulties that mothers have had in persuading their children to have their ears washed has led a contributor to tell what happened when her small boy was asked whether he should prefer to go to a picture show or to a concert. The boy really wanted to go to the concert, but he chose the picture show instead. When asked why, he said that going to a dark room would make washing his ears unnecessary.—Youth's Companion.

HELPFUL HINTS WORTH NOTING

Walnut meats which have become rancid may be freshened and sweetened by pouring over the nut meats boiling water in which a little soda has been dissolved. Rinse in cold water and dry in a towel.

Nuts in the shell which have become too brittle to crack without breaking, if treated to a bath of boiling water, will crack and seem like fresh nuts.

Keep the smallest candle ends and put into a small muslin bag. Use to polish the irons or keep the kitchen range clean and bright.

A broom which is badly worn may serve longer if all the rows of stitching are ripped out except the top row. Trim the broom after soaking in soap suds and drying thoroughly.

A bit of ginger added to doughnuts will keep them from soaking fat, which is both a saving of fat and indigestion.

The amount of bacon to be used for seasoning may be lessened if it is put through the meat grinder before adding to the dish. It is more evenly mixed through the dish in this way.

Stale bread put through the meat grinder, then browned in the oven, makes a fine breakfast cereal served with milk. This is especially good for an invalid.

A run in a silk stocking may be taken back with a crochet hook. Old stockings may be cut in strips and used for braided rugs.

Old inner tubes from auto tires make fine elastic for rompers, bloomers and shirt sleeves. Such elastic will survive several washings without losing its elasticity.

When making mayonnaise, if it curdles, beat another egg and add the curdled mixture very slowly, beating well between each addition. Have all materials cold.

Lemons placed in the oven and heated will render their juice more freely.

MADE DOG CARRY KITTENS

Mother Cat Had No Compunction at All in Making Friend Do All the Work.

An English lady, says a contributor to the Cornhill Magazine, having received a kitten and a puppy as gifts, determined to bring them up together. She put them into the same bed, fed them from the same saucer, and they became fast friends.

In time the kitten arrived at maturity and chose for their nursery a remote and quiet room in the house. But in a few days she evidently decided that there was a better place for them in a room on the floor above.

Instead of removing the kittens herself, she trotted off to her friend the dog and got him to follow her to the spot where the kittens were lying. When he had looked at them she started off to the upper room, and he followed her; but, seeing that he was—so to speak—"empty-handed," she doubled back and returned to the kittens; and eventually, after two or three more false starts, he understood her and, picking up one of the kittens in his mouth, followed her up the stairs to the new place. That was as far as his understanding went, and she had to conduct him back to the other kittens and repeat the whole performance again and again until in the end he had removed them all, and she was happy in her new quarters.

But it was not the ideal spot after all; she was happy there only for a day. Again she summoned the dog, and he moved all the kittens again, but more readily than at first. Again the cat became dissatisfied, and the dog moved the kittens again. From first to last there were so many removals that the lady lost count of their number.

Weak, Weary Women

Learn the Cause of Daily Woes and End Them.

When the back aches and throbs,
When housework is torture,
When night brings no rest nor sleep,
When urinary disorders set in,
When women's lot is a weary one,
Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

Have proved their worth in Berlin.

This is one Berlin woman's testimony:

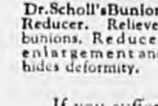

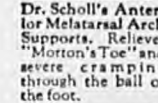

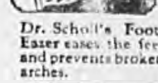

Mrs. Joie A. Bunting, Bay St., says: Doan's Kidney Pills are an old remedy with me. I have used them off and on for years and have found them to be a splendid medicine. My kidneys were weak and if I took a cold it settled on them. I felt weak and run down and was without ambition or energy. In bad weather I had rheumatic pains in my limbs. The action of my kidneys was irregular, too. Doan's Kidney Pills have never failed to help me and I felt better in every way after using them. I will recommend Doan's to anyone as a reliable remedy. I keep them on hand all the time.

Angels' Food vs. Onions and Garlic

By REV. GEORGE E. GUILLE
Extension Department, Moody
Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Who shall give us flesh to eat? We remember the fact, which we did not in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions and garlic. But now our soul is dried away; there is nothing at all, beside this manna, before our eyes.—Numbers 11:4-6.

The Psalmist is decanting upon God's gracious provision for the wilderness and says: "He had rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them of the corn of heaven. Man did eat angels' food." (Psalm 78:23-25). What is this they are despising? It is God's supply of their daily need and witness of His unfailing care. The manna, so sweet to the taste, bread from God's own hand out of heaven. Onions and garlic preferred! Alas! what a revelation of the human heart!

We are not left to interpret for ourselves the holy symbolism of the manna. The Lord Jesus has told us what it is. It is His body. "My Father giveth you the true bread from heaven, for the bread of God is He who cometh down from heaven and giveth life unto the world. . . I am the bread of life" (John 6:32). And the wilderness journey has no sooner begun than this voice of the living God breaks out in the camp. But observe with whom it begins. And as the story is, the soul that has found the manna to be its all-satisfying portion is somewhat relieved to discover the source of this complaint: "The mixed multitude that was among them fell a-lusting." There they are! Camp followers of the hosts of the Lord. Unconverted church members or, at best, but half-hearted in their allegiance to the Lord Jesus. Manna they despise. It is too "other worldly" for their unregenerate hearts. Onions and garlic are more to their liking. They must have oyster suppers, bazaars and amusements, to "hold the young people." Hold them where? Hold them to what? The fare of Egypt may hold them to an organization, but manna alone can hold them to Christ. Christ alone can hold them to Himself.

"Our soul is dried away," they murmur, "there is nothing at all beside this manna before our eyes." And this is the language that Christians have learned to repeat. Christ, God's one provision for His people, is not enough for the heart. We must have the things of Egypt, too. Oh, Christian, say it to His face, if you can! Get down on your knees at His feet and tell Him so! Lord Jesus, I have no taste for manna; onions and garlic please me better. These are tastes, but Thou art not enough for my heart. I cannot be occupied with Thee alone, my heart must have other occupations. This is what thousands are practically saying to Him every day.

There follows one of the most pathetic portions of Scripture in which the Spirit of God turns aside to describe the manna once more. Already there has been a full description of it in connection with the account of its first appearance in Exodus. Now He must tell it again—must let us know what it is they are despising; and one can almost hear the tones of infinite sadness as He writes down the words: "And the manna was as coriander seed and the color thereof as the color of bellum, and the taste of it was like the taste of fresh oil. And when the dew fell upon the camp in the night the manna fell upon it."

It was on the ground, they must stoop to gather it. And it is on one's knees that Christ is found. The dew brings the manna, and exhaling, leaves it for their use. So the Holy Spirit ministers Christ. The taste is as the taste of fresh oil, reminding us again that it is only by the Spirit of God that Christ can be apprehended. Oh, who that knows the Spirit's blessed ministry does not know this taste of fresh oil? It is this that forever satisfies the soul. Nothing else can do so. "Oh, taste and see that the Lord is good!" "Eat, oh friends; yea, drink abundantly, my beloved." Does not Christ satisfy the heart of God? Why not yours, too? Is He not filling all the heavens with His glory? And is not your being with Him the consummation of all Christian hope? Then why should He not be enough for you now? One good taste of the angels' food and your taste for garlic and onions will be gone.

The Child of Hope.

The child is the type of the citizens of the kingdom of God. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ flows to all Christians what is most lovely in the life of the child, its faith, and love, and hope; and offers those things transformed and glorified. The hope of the Christian is not the untutored hope of the child; he knows why he hopes. He is the child of hope because through Jesus Christ he is the child of God.

As in a Looking Glass.

If any be hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass. For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was.—James 1:23-24.

Disintegrating, As It Were.

One day while on the street I met one of the most prominent and dignified business men of our town. As he passed me he raised his hat and in doing so he knocked his cigar from his mouth. Trying to catch the cigar, he knocked his hat off. Also trying to keep that from falling, his nose-glasses slipped from his nose, fell to the walk and broke. Gathering up his scattered belongings, he remarked that it looked as if he were coming to pieces.—Exchange.

THE MAN pictured here is JOSEPH P. DAY, the nationally known real estate expert. He has sold more real estate at auction than any man in the world. He knows that a house heated with American Radiators sells or rents for much more than a house heated by a hot-air furnace or stoves.

Read his letter:

"One of the first things the buyer of a house asks about is the heating. An ARCOLA hot-water heating outfit can easily add from three to five times its cost to the selling value of the house."

OCEAN CITY.

A member of the Summer Congregation of St. Paul's, Ocean City, Md., who desires his name withheld, has arranged to present each year a silver Cross of Honor to the member of St. Paul's Choir who has given the most faithful and efficient service during the year.

This is following the custom of St. Paul's, Baltimore, and is greatly appreciated by the members of the Choir by the Sea.

The first cross was presented this year to Mrs. Robert J. Showell, who for more than thirty-five years has rendered to St. Paul's Choir and Church the most faithful, loyal, and efficient service.

The entire congregation is one in according to her this high honor, and is glad to thus express to her their appreciation of her pure and unselfish devotion to the Church which owes a large measure of its present success to her untiring zeal and devotion.

The Easter Day offerings at St. Paul's-by-the-Sea amounted to over $400.

The vestry elected on Easter Monday, were Charles A. Parke, William I. Purnell, L. F. Purnell, Edward M. Scott, George W. Parker, Charles Ludlum, Daniel Trimmer, Jr., John P. Whaley, John Dale Showell, Edwin Calhoun, William Turner, Dr. F. J. Townsend.

Easter in the Churches

Easter Sunday was a pleasant spring day, and large congregations enjoyed the church services. Beautiful flowers, attractive music and fine sermons appropriate to the occasion made it a memorable occasion for those who were privileged to go, while fervent prayers in behalf of the sick and feeble reached the Throne of Grace.

At the Methodist Church a "Tithing Week" collection in church and Sunday School brought in $286.

Another special feature was the receiving into full membership of four probationers and four more by letter from other churches, whom the whole church was invited to welcome in, according to the old-fashioned custom.

At the Episcopal Church, five girls, Dorothy and Catherine Coffin, Cornelia Potter, Gertrude Purnell and Charlotte Bethards, were given by Rev. S. A. Potter their choice of a nice Bible or a gold cross, for attending Church service and choir practice at least three fourths of the time since last September. The three former, selected the Bible, and the two latter, the cross. On Monday the members of the Vestry were all re-elected. They are: Dr. Z. P. Henry, K. P. Jarvis, William Whaley, T. M. Purnell, H. C. Bounds, J. R. Phillips, Jr., H. T. Davidson, E. L. Coffin. Dr. Z. P. Henry is Sr. Warden; J. R. Phillips, Jr., Jr. Warden; K. P. Jarvis, Treasurer; E. L. Coffin, Registrar, and Miss E. P. Purnell, Treasurer of Mission Fund.

L. T. L. Meeting

Our L. T. L. meeting for this week was held Tuesday, April 18, Monday being a holiday for the school. We had an attendance of twenty-one members. Three new members were added to our list. A very interesting program was rendered.

We wish to make our Legion a Victory Legion, so we have sent one dollar and seventy-five cents ($1.75) to Headquarters, for the Anna A. Gordon missionary fund, this being one of the first steps toward our goal. We also appointed girls for the flower mission department.

Adults may be enrolled as honorary members or patrons of the Legion by the payment of ten cents dues; we are very glad to say we have eight honorary members and hope to enroll many more. It has been planned for this L. T. L. to meet with the W. C. T. U. next Wednesday night, April 26, at the home of Mrs. Ida Cropper, on William Street, at the Rayne Homestead. We hope that the parents of the L. T. L. children will attend and bring the children with them.

A short program will be rendered by the L. T. L.

The Fish-Hook Girl

Ralph Barker stared at the dark hair, brushed smoothly back from the broad forehead, and then at the flat curl above the right eyebrow.

"You look like the very dickens!" exploded Ralph.

"Thank you—here is your ring—don't come near me, I never want to see you again," breathed Dorothy passionately and tossing the flashing diamond toward him she waded out of the room and, as she intended, out of his life.

Ralph stared at the ring in a rage. How little it meant to her—she tossed it aside just for a mere quarrel. He wondered how he could ever have dreamed they would be lousy together. There were many other girls who would gladly have accepted his attentions, but he had selected Dorothy because he honestly loved her. If his thoughts fled to other girls now it was because he was so desperately hurt.

"That evening he met Josephine Hart.

Josephine understood men. She was sympathetic, a good listener, and other girls said she actually purred when she had her own way, which was equivalent to saying that she scratched when she did not have it. Ralph was attracted by her vivacity and her quick intelligence. That she was very pretty as well only added to his pleasure. Her fair hair was fluffed over her ears and drawn down over her forehead, and her blue eyes looked at him through this tangle of curls with alluring charm.

"I have always wanted to meet you," gushed Josephine frankly, after a while.

"Why—why—?" stammered Ralph.

"Because you were engaged to a girl I used to know at boarding school."

Ralph stared at her, a dull flush rising to his bronzed face. "You know Dorothy Faye?" he asked.

She nodded brightly. How very cute she was, only he would have liked her better if she had not worn so much jewelry, and he would like to see her forehead—if she had any!

"You are staring at me, rude man!" she pouted cutely. "Am I such a wonder because I know Dorothy?"

"Forgive me—I was surprised for a moment. What shall we do, Miss Josephine? Shall we dance?"

"I would rather talk, please. I want to ask you about Dorothy—she used to be so pretty at school. Is she pretty now?"

Ralph regarded the rug at his feet. "Pretty?" he repeated. "I think she is—very lovely," in a strained tone.

"Say It Right Out."

"Is she fair?" "Oh, no; her hair is black and soft." "I remember—and it was soft about her face, like a dark mist. Does she wear it that way now?"

A vision of Dorothy's broad, white forehead and the saucy curl over one eyebrow came to tease Dorothy's late fiancé.

"She wears it very plainly," he said with an effort.

"Not in a psyche?" she shrieked.

"I don't know what you call it, but she wears fishhooks."

"Fishhooks?"

He nodded. "Horrible little curls at the side over her eye."

Josephine smothered a laugh.

"Do you like them?" she asked archly.

"They are idiotic," he blurted forth.

"Oh! Did you tell her that?"

"Something of the sort."

"How she must detest you," murmured Josephine, suddenly sorry for the foolish girl who had quarreled with Ralph Barker over the way she wore her hair.

"The way she wore her hair was right if it was the way she liked it. Even in a bun," said Josephine firmly.

"A bun?" he repeated, searching for her mischievous eyes. He was rather tired of trying to find her eyes in the thicket of fair hair over her forehead.

Suddenly he seemed to see Dorothy's sweet pale face, as he had last seen it, pure and serene in its flawless beauty, with the dark hair smoothed softly back and the little curl hooked in, lying over her eyebrow.

It wasn't so bad after all. Dorothy certainly looked a lot better than these chattering ladies who peered at him so roguishly from behind their fringes. How many of them were there? Only one, after all, Josephine herself.

"So you quarreled over the fishhook curl?" insisted Josephine.

"Yes, if you must know," he said rudely.

"You poor thing, I am so glad I met you," murmured Josephine.

"Why?"

"Because not to tell Dorothy?"

"It isn't likely that I shall have a chance to speak to her again!" he said, and he didn't know that his tone was hopeless and that the hurt in his eyes was plain to be seen.

"I am glad I met you, because Dorothy wrote me that you had quarreled with her and she did not believe it possible that it was just the way she wore her hair—she thinks there is another girl and that you picked a quarrel about the curl just to break the engagement!" The blue eyes behind the barricade were very bright indeed.

"Nonsense!" he cried. "There was only one girl for me—she knew it!"

"Don't believe she did. Anyway, she just hates the curl; cut it off right away, she said."

Ralph's gloom vanished. "If you could only excuse me, I believe I would run down to Oakdale—there is business down there."

"About a fishhook curl?" sneered Josephine.

"Yes."

"Don't go down there—settle it here!"

Dorothy only arrived half an hour ago—I think she is waiting in the sun parlor. Mercy! the man has gone already!" Josephine leaned back in her chair and brushed back the hair from her forehead. "Ugh, how I hate this way of doing my hair—I believe I will try fishhooks myself!"

BELIEVE IN LOST CONTINENT

Eminent Students of South Sea Geography Firmly Convinced That Vast Tract Was Submerged.

A fascinating theory which is just now enjoying the attention of students of South sea geography is: Was there once a mighty continent in the South seas?

Many firmly believe that what is now the "milky way" of the Pacific—the isle-dotted sea—was at one time a vast coral and volcanic continent; that it has subsided in one place and been upheaved in another, until broken into a myriad fragments. And the day may still come when Nature will raise them from the deep, welded once more into a mighty whole.

Ralph Stock, in his book, "Crust of the Dream Ship," while admitting that he is no scientist, points out many facts that support this theory.

There is, for example, a wall on Easter Island, not unlike the great wall of China, but which runs for a short distance and then plunges aimlessly into the sea. Where did it begin? Where did it end? What mighty city did it embrace?

Of Pitcairn there are the remains of a former and highly advanced civilization.

On Lord Howe Island, a mere rock sprouting three thousand feet out of the sea, four hundred and eighty miles from the Australian coast, there are sixty different species of land shell, fifty per cent of which are not to be found anywhere else in the world. How do they come to be on Lord Howe?

In the Carolines you may look down into the water of lagoons and see mosaic floors and broken walls, the remains of a submerged city.

Legal to Change One's Name.

Many people keep the names they have inherited not because they have any special affection for them, but because they do not realize how easy it is to get rid of them. They are under the impression that they would have to take the matter to court when as a matter of fact, all they have to do would be to make the announcement. The possession of the name-changing privilege was definitely confirmed in New York state in the case of Smith versus State Casualty company when Judge Vann, who handled down the opinion, quoted an historical example to substantiate it.

A predecessor of Honore de Balzac, he wrote, "was born a Guetz, which means beggar, and grew to manhood under that name. When he became conscious of his power as a writer he did not wish his works to be published under that humble name, so he selected the surname of Balzac from an estate that he owned."—Frederic J. Haskin in Chicago Daily News.

"Halifax."

Two derivations are given for the name of the capital of Nova Scotia, Halifax. According to Camden it means "holy hair," and he accounts for the origin of the name from the fact that the head of a virgin who had been slain by a wicked clerk was suspended on a tree in the neighborhood of an English town called Halifax, which place came to be much resorted to by pilgrims.

According to another account, the name means "holy face," and is derived from an image of St. John once preserved in a neighboring hermitage.

"FAIRY PRINCE" VERY HUMAN

Once More Illustrating the Wide Gulf Sometimes Existing Between Romance and Reality.

As the crowded elevator car swooped down from eighteen to ten she became aware that there was a man just behind her left elbow. Her consciousness of him was somehow intensified by the exhilaration of the moment. Curiosity counseled looking around. Pride forbade it. She felt a burning sensation in the part of her left cheek which was visible beneath her hat brim. Elizabeth Houghton writes in the New York World.

"Bump, slam, swoop!" the car inched its way down. Ten doors are not too few for the creation of a fairy prince. At the eighth floor he was tall and slender with a lock of hair falling over his forehead, at the seventh he had rather deep-set eyes and stern, straight brows.

As they passed the fifth she decided that he wore a minkie of grayish blue which undoubtedly matched the peculiar blue of his eyes. Just then a fat man pushed his way in and forced her against the wall. But she hardly noticed this.

She was planning the encounter. Daintily she would step from the car, adjusting her fur collar so that the worn lining should be hidden—he would follow closely, and in well-modulated tones ask if he might take her home.

"Main floor—last stop!" bawled the elevator boy. She found herself hurrying madly along the marble floor, heaving the tap, tap of her own heels and a heavy tread close behind! It was, it must be the fairy prince! At the door of the big office building she stopped, a little breathless.

"Hello, Cattle!" snorted raucously in her ear. "Want an arm across the street?" A tiny figure in a grotesquely rakish green plaid cap smiled up at her, disclosing in the front of his mouth a gleaming gold tooth!

ENGLISH ARCHERS LOSE HOME

Ancient Organization Puzzled as to the Disposition of Its Relics of Days Long Past.

There is a Royal Toxophilite society in England, which has had its headquarters in Regent's park for many years. Now, however, the society has to move, and is concerned as to the future resting place of the wonderful treasury of archery relics now in Archers' hall.

One bow and set of arrows are more than 4,000 years old. These were taken from the tombs at Saqqarah in Egypt, and are believed to have been in use about 2000 B. C.

Another bow was given to the society by Mahomet Effendi, "ambassador from the Sublime Porte," in 1794, when he came to England for the first time, bringing his bow and arrows with him. When this Turkish official saw the ground at Regent's park he said it was much too small, so he went into a street outside the park and shot his arrows into a field. The distance was measured and found to be a quarter of a mile. Mahmoud was so pleased with this shot that he presented his bow and arrows to the society. The bow is beautifully carved and is of immense strength.

Just Like a Woman.

A Fullerton man says he gets two eggs from a single hen. His plan is ingenious and might be worth trying on a larger scale, so we print it for the benefit of some of our suburban readers.

He has arranged a litter opposite Biddy's nest, so that when she hops off and cackles she sees in the glass what she supposes is another hen cackling. This arouses her jealousy and not to be outdone by a supposed rival she jumps back on the nest and lays another egg.—Los Angeles Times.

STATE CAPITAL

Legislative Business Finished.

Annapolis. Governor Ritchie made a clean slate of legislative business by acting on all the bills left in his hand by the General Assembly, signing 399 and vetoing 30. With the bills previously acted on the Governor signed a total of 549 bills and 20 joint resolutions, about 100 less than two years ago.

In vetoing the thirty bills, most of them of local interest only, the Governor gave out a statement relative to each measure and giving his reasons for withholding his signature. The vetoed bill of the most general interest was that relating to marriages in Cecil, Somerset and Montgomery counties. This measure provided that no marriage license should be issued to applicants who had not resided in the State for the preceding 48 hours. It was designed to break up the marriage mart at Elkton and was originally state-wide in its application but was so amended as to include only the three counties mentioned. The opposition to the bill seems to have come mostly from the residents of Harford county, who claimed that the result would be to send runaway couples from other States to Harford de Grace where the same situation as now prevails at Elkton might be renewed. The opposition was led by State Senator Tydings, of Harford, who was present and thanked the Governor for his veto.

In his statement relating to this bill the Governor said: "If jitney drivers act in an unseemly manner, if ministers of the gospel discredit their calling—and they do, if the conditions have been correctly described to me these are not sound reasons for making unsound discriminations and for introducing non-uniformity in the marriage laws among counties of the State, particularly a discrimination which, while relieving Cecil, would in all probability simply transfer these kind of marriages from Cecil to other neighboring counties, where similar restrictions do not exist. As evidence of this, Senator Tydings, John L. G. Lee, Speaker of the House, and the people of Harford county, have signed the bill on the ground that it will simply result in transferring the present conditions at Elkton to Harford de Grace.

Among the important bills signed by the Governor were the $3,000,000 Soldiers' Bonus Bill, the Full-Crew Law Repealer, which was fought to the last ditch by the labor organizations, the Child Hygiene Bill, the State Budget, the State Road Loan, the Southern Maryland Road Loan, the Immigration Commission Bill, the Mining Bureau Bill, the amendment to the Moving-Picture Censor Law, the State Building Loan, the Fewer Elections amendment, and the bill for the purchase by the State of the Susquehanna River bridge.

In regard to the signing of the Full-Crew Repeal Bill, the Governor said: "The arguments for and against Senate Bill No. 74, known as the 'Full-Crew Law Repealer,' have related mainly to the necessity for the additional brakeman. But the question involves considerations of safety, automatic devices, grades, weight and length of trains, and other practical operating problems, as well as cost.

"As to these questions the opinions of competent and sincere men differ, and the proper solution of them, the task would be a very difficult one. But it does not because the Bill does not itself dispense with the additional brakeman, but with the legal necessity of having him, and then places jurisdiction in the Public Service Commission, after a hearing upon its own motion or upon complaint, to determine the number of men required for safe and efficient operation.

"I will, therefore, request the Public Service Commission to investigate and ascertain in just what cases and on just what trains and under just what circumstances the railroad's complete dispensing with the additional brakeman.

"These investigations can begin at once, so that the Commission will be in possession of the facts when the law becomes effective, on June 1 next, and will thus be in a position, not only on complaint, but also on its own motion, to place an order at once upon any of the railroads to show cause why the men dispensed with or transferred, or intended to be so, should not be restored to their present positions in every case where the Commission has reason to believe that this should be done.

"I think that this should assure fairness both to the men and to the railroads in the operation of the law, and with this statement I feel it my duty to accept the decision of the Legislature and to approve the bill.

Among the bills vetoed was one of the two bills creating an additional judge for Baltimore city, the Governor considering one new judge enough; the amendments to the motor vehicle law giving an appeal to the court in case of revocation of license and eliminating minimum fines; requiring the Motor Vehicle Commissioner to issue a list of registered cars to the county Commissioners of each county; the bill reducing the license fees on motor trucks; the bill authorizing special markets on automobiles; bill

creating a Roads Engineer Commission for Anne Arundel county; special road bills for Somerset, Prince George's and Wicomico counties; the Baltimore county tax exemption bill; the bill enlarging powers of the Bank Commission; the sales in bulk bill; the bill regulating counsel fees in cases before the Industrial Accident Commission; several local pension bills relating to Baltimore city, local fish, oyster and game bills relating to Washington, Frederick, Charles and St. Mary's counties and a bill creating the office of Road Director for Allegany county in place of the Board now in charge of the roads.

Road Plans Soon.

Maryland's road-building program for the next two years under its State budget of $3,150,000 is expected to be mapped out in the next few weeks by the State Roads Commission after conference with the various county commissioners.

In addition to this program, Roads Chairman John N. Mackall announced that the commission expected to have the contract for the first year's work on the Baltimore and Southern Maryland road, known as the "Robert Crain road" ready to let on August 1, the day the first $250,000 of the $1,000,000 loan becomes available.

"As the justification for this Southern Maryland road is to furnish a direct connection with Baltimore, the commission expects to make it as straight as possible within reason," Mr. Mackall said. "It will start at Mathawan, in Charles county, and run through Upper Marlboro across the Patuxent river at Priest bridge to Benfield, in Anne Arundel county, on the Old Light Street road, just below Glenburnie.

"There are about 33 miles of road to be built, at about $30,000 a mile, or a little more than eight miles a year for four years. We are at liberty to start at both ends simultaneously, or at the middle and work both ways, or any other way found expedient. It all depends upon how easy the acquiring of rights of way will be. But we intend to have work on the road started immediately after August 1."

Two contracts were awarded by the commission, one going to the next lowest bidder because the lowest bidder was considered irresponsible. This is the first time such a thing has occurred in the history of the present commission.

Road Bids Drop $5,000.

Bids on the first road construction contract to be let this season were opened at the State Roads Commission at 10 o'clock yesterday morning with considerable difficulties. The low bid average about $5,000 a mile under last year. The range of bids was not great and in some cases there were several very close to the low figure.

The section of road and low bids are as follows:
Baltimore County—York road, 5.34 miles to Pennsylvania line. May Bros. & Piles; $25,600 a mile.
Harford County—Philadelphia road, 4.19 miles. E. R. Griffith Construction Company; $26,000 a mile.
Carroll County—New Windsor road, 6.63 miles. Thomas Bros. & Hunter; $24,000 a mile.
Frederick County—Urbana pike, 1.99 miles. L. R. Waesche; $25,600 a mile.

Annapolis. The Annapolis City Council unanimously adopted a day-light-saving ordinance, to take effect at 2 A. M. on the last Sunday in April and to continue until the same hour on the last Sunday in August. Rear Admiral Wilson, superintendent, and other Naval Academy authorities heartily favor the movement.

Hagerstown. Resolutions calling upon Governor Ritchie to remove from office members of the Board of Education for Washington county were adopted at an indignation meeting of taxpayers held in the Courthouse here. The meeting was called to order by Daniel W. Doub, who criticized the laws which make the taxpayers of the county support the public school system and allows them no voice in the administration. Mr. Doub reviewed what he termed the inefficiency of the Board, and suggested the appointment of a chairman.

NINE VILLAGES INUNDED.

Lower Mississippi Floods Towns And 250 Acres Of Farm Land.

Vicksburg, Miss.—At least nine villages are inundated or surrounded by water and upward of 250 square miles of farm land are under water as a result of flood stages on the Lower Mississippi and its tributaries.

Reports to headquarters of the levee district here indicated that the most severe flood conditions were centered for the time being in the Arkansas and White river basins, but the Mississippi itself approached new high records at Vicksburg and Greenville. At many points engineers were at work reinforcing the levees.

Most of those driven out of their homes by the water are negroes. Numerous refugee colonies have been established in the flood district, and the Missouri-Pacific Railroad has distributed 250 box cars along its route for use of the homeless.

BOY SCOUTS

TWELVE YEARS OF SCOUTING

In a recent issue of the Survey, Chief Scout Executive West writes of his twelve years' experience as a leader of boys. Among other things, he mentioned the fact that what seems most remarkable in scouting is the responsiveness of the boys themselves, their power and willingness to assume responsibility and to live up to the obligations of the scout oath and law.

"When we said that a first-class scout must know what to do in case of fire," he writes, "probably none of us remotely imagined that during one year 5,778 scouts would qualify in firemanship; that in fifty or more cities scout troops would regularly authorized aides to the local fire departments; that in one state alone—Pennsylvania—scouts would be credited for having in less than a year saved from destruction by fire over a million dollars' worth of valuable property. Nor could we in any way have visualized the large number of scouting individuals in the various branches of the nonbroody scouts have risen voluntarily to meet the emergency of the year in fighting fire, rescuing persons from burning buildings, rendering first aid to persons overcome by fumes of smoke, besides their regular services in helping prevent fire by conducting city clean-ups, distributing fire-prevention literature and reporting fire hazards and violations of fire laws.

"I would particularly stress that work co-operative; for, contrary to the ideas of those who do not fully comprehend scouting and its motives, the movement is dedicated to co-operation with all other forces working for public betterment. It has no wish to supersede the work of church, or school, or home, or of any social service agency. It merely places its splendid boy program, its trained and trained power for service, its large and enthusiastic active membership, at the disposal of the community and the nation, to help wherever help is needed or desired.

"We have learned in our twelve years of experience with boys that there is no such thing as a scout who is not a citizen. On the contrary, a scout will, in nine cases out of ten, rise to whatever we expect of them; nay, go beyond what we expect of them, if only we men will in turn do our duty—provide for them the opportunity for clean, happy, useful, healthy life, which is their birthright as young Americans."

THE TEN-YEAR MEN IN SCOUTING

National council officers who have served the movement consecutively at least for ten years are President Collis H. Livingston of Washington, Chief Justice Taft, honorary vice president; Daniel Carter Beard, author, artist, outdoor man and boy worker, who is a vice president of the organization as well as its scout commissioner and chairman of the national court of honor; Vice Presidents Mortimer L. Schiff of New York, Benjamin Dulaney of Bristol, Tenn., and Milton A. McLean of Detroit and San Diego; George D. Pratt of Brooklyn, treasurer; John Sherman Hoyt, Jeremiah W. Jenks and Frank Presbury of the executive board, and James W. West, chief scout executive, in whose capable hands the boy scout movement has prospered in 12 years beyond the dreams of anyone who was present at the birth of the organization.

HE EARNED HIS DOLLAR

Scout Sebastian Lohmiska, of Troop 31, Washington, D. C., by son of the Polish minister to the United States, and a sure enough prince. He is an earnest worker in scouting and passed all his second-class tests with ease except one; the requirement that demands that the candidate must "earn and deposit $1 in a public bank." Earning money was so totally out of range of the little prince's experience, but he was game. He earned his dollar by selling papers on the street. Sebastian will soon return to Poland, where he means to go on scouting.

PRAISE FOR SCOUT MOVEMENT

Under its "Live Topics of the Day" heading a Hoboken (N. J.) newspaper printed the following on the boy scout birthday: "It is hard to believe that the boy scout movement is only twelve years old today. Few organizations can boast of a better record of honorable achievement in so short a time."

SCOUTS FAVOR PEDESTRIANS

Boy scouts of San Francisco are frequently called upon to help to traffic duty and on these occasions it is said that they tend to favor the struggling pedestrian rather than the cocky motorist, especially when there is a driving rain in progress. These humane young men hold up automobiles and street cars to give the wayfarer man a chance to keep at least moderately dry. But woe to the "jay-walker" who tries to dart across the street at the wrong moment or angle.

Surely Would.

Many a village would be included if you called him the village cut-up.

POULTRY CACKLES

LESSEN BROODINESS OF HENS

Every Ambitious and Enthusiastic Poultryman Tries to Restrict Its Development.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Broody hens, like wayward children, are a great discredit to their parents and a source of annoyance to all who have to do with them. That is why one of the greatest concerns of every ambitious and enthusiastic poultryman is to restrict the appearance and development of broodiness in his flock. The United States Department of Agriculture has found that broodiness can be reduced very markedly by careful, rigid and persistent selection.

At the Massachusetts experiment station, where a detailed experimental study of broodiness has been made, it was ascertained that previous to the practice of selection the average hen in the flock was broody 3.28 times a year. After painstaking selection was practiced for five years, this tendency to broodiness was reduced so that the average egg producer in the flock developed broodiness only 0.86 times a year. A study of the correlation between broodiness and egg production shows that pullets that are very broody tend to lay relatively few eggs between their broody periods.

There is no permanent cause of broodiness, but there are certain types of nonbroodiness, and one of broodiness. It is believed that birds showing only a slight tendency to broodiness belong in the same class as the nonbroody fowls, as each has about the same proportion of broody offspring. The determination of broodiness is complicated by the fact that birds that are not broody during the pullet year may become broody during their second or third laying season.

PROPER EGGS FOR HATCHING

California College Institutes New Project for Improvement of Poultry Flocks.

For the improvement of poultry by careful selection of breeding stock, the poultry department of the division of extension work of the California College of Agriculture has instituted a new project with the hatcherymen of Alameda county. Previous to this time, the assertions of the egg dealer were the only guide to the hatcherymen for hatching and dealing in baby chicks, as to the quality of the eggs they were getting. There was opportunity for frequent abuse or confidence in the hatcherymen.

Under the present plan about 20,000 birds have been inspected by poultry experts and those which have met the requirements decided upon for weight, egg production, size and shape of eggs, and other points, have been accepted as eligible for the production of eggs for hatching. Hatcherymen have agreed to use no eggs except those from tested flocks.

EXERCISE CARE IN CULLING

One Is Liable to Discard as Many Good Layers as Poor Ones Late in Winter.

Be careful about culling birds. You are liable to get rid of as many good ones as poor ones. As long as you're fed them all during the winter, it would be safer to feed them another few weeks, when any old bird will produce eggs; then do your culling in the summer, from June to September.

POULTRY NOTES

Feed a dry mash.

A fat hen is not a good layer.

Feed grain once or twice a day.

Feed table scraps and kitchen waste.

Brooder lamps should be cleaned every day.

Powder the chicks occasionally during the first eight weeks.

The flock with shelter from storms and with clean surroundings has the best protection against disease.

Too Familiar.

SUDDEN CHANGE OF OPINION

Or Possibly the Lady Had Really Been Enjoying Herself and Wasn't Aware of It.

At one of those banquets where almost every one is called on to make a short speech or to tell a funny story, a woman who sat near the speaker's table was heard to remark after nearly every story told: "My goodness, that's another old one. Why don't they tell some new ones?"

Regardless of whether the speaker got a good laugh, she complained to her companion of the antiquity of the stories.

"I've never been to a worse affair. I wish they'd cut it short. I'd rather go home than come." she blurted out.

"Not there is Mrs. —. She is one of the most charming workers in our organization, and I know we would all be glad to hear her speak." Dismayed, Mrs. — managed to get on her feet, and addressed the guests thusly:

"I really don't know what to say, only that I am so glad to be here with you. I just said to the lady sitting next to me what a perfectly splendid time I was having. I didn't know we had so many clever people in the organization who could tell such funny stories."—Indianapolis News.

Curiously Satisfied.

I have been in the habit of patronizing a printing shop near home, and on each occasion I have noticed a man in particular who never spoke to me. He always had a scowl on his face. Recently I went to a nearby town by interurban and sat in the smoker. A man across the aisle spoke to me:

"You patronize the Thomas print shop, don't you?"

I said "Yes."

He said, "I thought I had seen you in there several times."

I said "Tell me, who is that heavy-set man with the white mustache who is such an infernal grouch?"

"I guess you mean me. I just had the mustache shaved off this morning," said he.—Chicago Tribune.

Bold South American Thieves.

Two ingenious thieves, finding the streets of Buenos Ayres, Argentine, too well policed for daylight holdups, recently succeeded in using police headquarters for one of their operations. According to a middle-aged man of prosperous appearance, they showed him detective's badges and announced he must accompany them to headquarters and there explain how he came by the gold watch and other valuables he carried. To avoid a scene the man accompanied them. They took him to an unused room at headquarters and relieved him of everything of value. Then indicating a door of a room where his protests of innocence would be attended to, they vanished.

Lost Forty-eight War Vessels.

During the period when the United States was actually at war, April 6, 1917, to November 11, 1918, the loss of navy vessels was 48 of all classes. On these vessels 1,150 lives were lost. The list includes one battleship, the Minnesota, transports, tankers, submarine chasers, yachts, etc.

Palm Tree of Scripture Nature's Gift.

The palm tree of Scripture is understood to have been the date palm. For all the centuries that man has lived on earth the date palm has furnished food and shelter. Its timber and its foliage have their uses even now. Sugar, date sugar, is made from its sap just as maple sugar is made from the sap of the maple tree. Its sap has been fermented into wine for scores of centuries, and that sap for many ages has been distilled into a brandy that is as fiery and overwhelming as apple brandy, peach brandy and grape brandy.

Sentimentality.

Are we sentimental—do we cultivate the finer feelings? Is life worth living without sentiment—sympathetic feeling and the love of the beautiful in character, morals and manners?

Can intelligent man be happy in groveling—in sordid living—in only looking down in the dirt and seeking only material for the gratification of the body?

Good sentiment that we see and hear, written, spoken or sung, and in conduct and manners, brings much happiness into our lives.

In a debate between Senator Martin and Gov. Montague, of Virginia, candidates for election to the U. S. Congress, Mr. Martin said, "Gov. Montague is a gentleman of the highest type of livable character, but is too sentimental to get down to the business of getting the big slice from the Government 'pork barrel' that can be had for the constituency." Gov. Montague replied, "that he appreciated the high compliment as to being a man of refined feeling, as he believed that without sentiment life is not worth living."

I heard a sound at my heart's dark door,
And was roused from my slumber within;

It was beauty that knocked, (it had knocked before)

Now I said "let it come in."

Open, open . . . . .

And the heart will be bright

With a heavenly light

When we let the beauty in.

Berlin Loses To Pocomoke.

Berlin was very badly defeated in the game played with Pocomoke.

At first, it looked as if it was going to be a very interesting game, but Pocomoke soon began to make runs, while Berlin "stood still." The Berlin boys seemed to be at their worst the whole way through.

The game ended with the score of 7 to 1 in favor of Pocomoke, Berlin's run being a "home" made in the third inning by H. Rayne, Berlin's 3rd baseman.

$2,000,000 Fire At Pocomoke City.

Business Section Wiped Out Monday Afternoon.

Ten acres in the heart of Pocomoke City were burned last Monday, destroying practically the entire business section, and about fifty residences on Front and River Streets and Linden Avenue. The loss is estimated at more than $2,000,000, and many families are homeless.

The fire started at noon in the hay-loft of the stables and lumber yard of F. M. Wilson, on Maple St. It was soon beyond the control of the Pocomoke firemen and help was summoned from other towns, several of whom responded. Snow Hill was the first to arrive, but by this time the strong southwest wind was sweeping the flames down Market Street to the river, and the fire was not subdued till four o'clock.

The women of the town served sandwiches and coffee to the workers.

Much praise was given the five telephone operators for heroism in remaining at their posts until the last moment possible. By six o'clock two long-distance wires were again got in operation, and about half of those in the city.

Realizing that the town would be in darkness and in danger of thievery, Mayor Tull telephoned to Governor Ritchie for State troops for guard duty. A number of state policemen were sent from Belair, and fifty men of the First Regiment from Salisbury.

The following business buildings were destroyed or badly damaged: Pocomoke City National Bank. Citizens' National Bank. Postoffice.

Law-Enforcement Meeting At M. E. Church.

We regret that the rain kept any person in this community from hearing Hon. John F. Kramer, although the audience was much larger than was expected on account of the weather.

He dwelt on the great task before the people of this country in undertaking to uproot a great evil that was instituted when Noah left the ark. He said every woman knew how hard it is to change a man's course of living, and that was what happened when the Eighteenth Amendment went into effect. Millions were told to face about and march in the right direction. He is not afraid of the stupendous job. What he feared most was that the workers would become discouraged at the greatness of the work. The question was asked in New York, "How long should the people be given to try out the prohibition law?" The reply was, two hundred years, as the liquor business had thousands of years. Mr. Kramer stated that it was impossible for the U. S. Government to enforce the work.

Mr. Crabbe stated that Mr. Kramer will be in Maryland two weeks, and that meetings will be followed up by organizing Law-Enforcement Associations in the community.

Mr. Crabbe, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, told the audience some of the inside workings of the Maryland Legislature. He informed us that the office of the Speaker of the House was the headquarters for the wets. He told how members were driven and bought to vote against the Enforcement law, against their own conscience.

He gave another instance in Ohio where a member was told that his son should be liberated from prison and be able to visit his sick mother if he would vote with the wets, but he took time to visit his son in prison, and tell him how he could be liberated, and told his boy he would vote as he said. The boy told his father to vote for the bill. The noble boy was allowed by the Governor to remain in that prison. We trust the parents will have their children educated in the L. T. L. So to it that your children attend the meetings.

FRIENDSHIP. WICOMICO COUNTY.

Mr. Howard Wells and family and Mr. Ratliff Farlow, of near Pittsville, were visitors at the home of Mr. Dell White, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Jackson and children, Richard and Everett, of Parsonsburg, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Jackson.

Mr. and Mrs. William White and children, spent Sunday with relatives at Willards.

We are sorry to report little Lois Baker, who has been ill for two weeks, still very sick at this writing.

Miss Mae Parker spent the Easter holidays with her sister, Mrs. Roscoe Farlow, in Philadelphia.

Miss Rada Dennis spent Saturday and Sunday with Miss Rada Lewis, at Mt. Pleasant.

Mr. Willie Dennis, who was operated on at the hospital for appendicitis, a few days ago, is home very much improved.

There will be Sunday School Sunday morning, at the usual hour. All are invited.

A Former Cured of Rheumatism.

"A man living on a farm near here came in a short time ago completely doubled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment and told him to use it freely," says C. F. Rayner, Fatten Mills, N. Y. "A few days later he walked into the store as straight as a string and handed me a dollar saying, give me another bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment, I want it in the house all the time for it cured me."

Showell Roller Mill Destroyed By Fire

The roller mill of the Showell Milling Company, managed by Harvey P. Cathell, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin, Monday night. It was already well under way when discovered about ten o'clock by Charles C. Mumford, and there was no chance of saving it. It is not yet known whether it will be replaced. The insurance was for $5,000, and the value probably as much more. It was an up-to-date roller mill and will be a great loss to the community.

The Road to Happiness.

You must keep well if you wish to be happy. When constipated take one or two of Chamberlain's Tablets immediately after supper. They cause a gentle movement of the bowels.

Varities Of John Smith.

In Latin John Smith became Johannes Smithus; in Italian he is known as Giovanni Smith; in French he becomes Jean Smith; the Russians call him Jonoff Smithonski; the Poles know him as Jan Smithowski; the Welsh as John Schmidt; the Hollanders as Hans Schmidt; the Greeks as Ion Smithon and the Spaniards as Juan Smithus, while in Turkey he is "disguised" as Yusef Seef.

The Sensation of The Shows

This car, with high grade Fisher Body on the celebrated New Superior Model Chevrolet Chassis, is the most sensational value ever offered in motoring.

Its artistic lines, harmonious two color finish, refined appointments and mechanical efficiency make it the most desirable car for all who seek year round service combined with small investment and economical operation.

Illustrations and description convey but a poor idea of this 1922 leader in value and desirability. You must see it to realize what a wonderful buy it is at $875, F. O. B. Flint, Mich.

Your Family's Private Car

This beautiful, four-door sedan offers the privacy and luxury of a limousine at less than the cost of most open cars.

All that has kept the majority of motorists from owning closer cars has been the high prices heretofore charged for this type of automobile. The closed car defies snow, rain and cold; yet is cool and clean in summer. At all times it has more style and quality than an open car. It is the ideal family car.

No matter what priced car you own or are considering, it will pay you to inspect this pace-maker in values.

When Friends Move Away

It is possible to keep the ties of friendship close even when friends move out of town. By telephone you can get in touch with them no matter where they live.

You can enjoy a chat with out-of-town friends or relatives at small cost and they will appreciate your thoughtfulness.

The rates are less at night. Between 8.30 P. M. and midnight, the station-to-station day rates are reduced approximately one-half. These reduced rates apply only on station-to-station calls and the minimum reduced rate is 25 cents.

Why not let your friends know you think of them by calling them up this evening? You can talk a hundred miles for a small amount. See front of telephone directory for complete information.

THE ADKINS CO.,

Everything Needed For Building

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR
THE FORDSON $395. F. O. B. Detroit

The list price of the Fordson is now $395. F. O. B. Detroit, Mich. Think of it! There is not a power unit on the market at twice the price of the Fordson that can come anywhere near its quality and all-around dependability and usefulness. Nor are they capable of performing half the tasks which the Fordson "eats up" every day.

This low price makes it possible for every farmer to own a FORDSON—in fact makes it expensive to be without one.

The Fordson now sells for approximately 15 cents per pound. Just stop and consider what this means.

Rough castings cost about 6¢ per lb.
Steel and forgings 8¢ per lb.
Brass, bronze and ball bearings, etc.
average from 25¢ to $1.00 per lb.,

bringing the total material cost of the tractor up to approximately 10¢ a pound, leaving only the extremely small margin of five cents per pound over the bare cost of materials to cover all manufacturing operations, labor and overhead. Surely there is nothing we can say that should more strongly impress the farmer with the fact that the Fordson Tractor at $395 represents the best and most profitable investment any farmer can make.

Substantial reductions have been announced in the price of power farming implements and Fordson equipment. The Ford Dealer's prices are about equivalent to the cost of a team of good horses with horse-drawn equipment. The Fordson outfit will do as much work as two or three teams with an actual reduction in operation and maintenance costs.

LESSON FOR APRIL 23.

UZZIAH'S PRIDE AND PUNISHMENT.

LESSON TEXT.—II Chron. 26:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT.—Pride goeth before destruction and an haughty spirit before a fall.—Prov. 16:18.

REFERENCE MATERIAL.—Num. 12:1-15; Deut. 32:1-4; II Kings 19:37; Dan. 4:32-34.

PRIMARY TOPIC.—The Story of a Proud King.
JUNIOR TOPIC.—A Man Who Forgot God.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Pride Goeth Before Destruction.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—The Perils of Prosperity.

1. Uzziah Made King (vv. 1-5).

1. His Age (v. 1). He became king at the age of sixteen.

2. Length of His Reign (v. 3). He reigned fifty-two years. His mother's name was Jecoliah, which means "Jehovah is able," or "Made strong of Jehovah."

3. His Character (v. 4). He did that which was right in the sight of the Lord.

4. His Prosperity (v. 5). He definitely sought God while Zechariah lived, and because he sought him God made him to prosper as long as he continued to seek him. He, like Joseph before him, turned aside when the influence of the man of God was removed.

II. Uzziah's Achievement (vv. 6-15).

1. He Built Elath (v. 2). This was a port on the Red Sea which had been lost to Judah. No doubt it was the aim of the father to get possession of this port, so the son makes its restoration his first duty. It was an important trading point and the commercial interests of the nation would be greatly increased by its possession.

2. He Had Military Success (vv. 6-8). (1) He conquered the Philistines (v. 6). After subduing them he dismantled their fortified cities and built new cities in their stead. (2) He defeated the Arabians (v. 7). (3) He made the Ammonites across the Jordan pay tribute (v. 8).

3. He Fortified Jerusalem (vv. 9-15). He took advantage of the peace which was now enjoyed because of the subjugation of his enemies to fortify Jerusalem. He placed in the towers great engines of war for hurling stones.

4. His Civic Improvements (v. 10). In the regions south and west of Jerusalem he built towers which served a threefold purpose, namely: observation, defense and shelter for his cattle. This enabled him to carry on his stock-raising enterprises.

5. His Wealth (vv. 11-15). Uzziah was thoroughly equipped and drilled. God was with him, and his fame spread far and wide. The source of his strength was God.

III. Uzziah's Transgression (vv. 16-18).

The prosperity bestowed upon him by the Lord was too much for him—his heart was lifted up with pride. This is always so unless counteracted by divine grace. In his pride he presumptuously intruded into the priest's office. This act was not because of forgetfulness, but of deliberate purpose. Azariah and eighty other priests remonstrated with him, but this only made him angry. This act was a trespass against God.

IV. Uzziah's Punishment (vv. 19-21).

While raging in his wrath and about to burn incense he was smitten with leprosy, a dreadful, incurable and clean disease. This judgment came upon him as a consequence of his overweening pride and vanity. He was thrust out of the sanctuary—excluded from God's house. Indeed, his own conscience smote him, and he hurriedly went out because he knew that the Lord had smitten him. He not only was excluded from the place of worship, but was dethroned. His son Jotham was made regent. His judgment was:

1. Sudden. The Lord smote him while attired as priest, with censor in hand. Frequently God's judgments are speedy. 2. Severe. The leprosy broke forth upon his forehead. The same judgment befell Miriam for speaking against Moses (Num. 12:10) and Gehazi for lying to Elisha (II Kings 5:27). Great sins demand severe punishment. 3. Conspicuous. Azariah and all the priests looked up and beheld the leprosy (v. 20). The spot on Uzziah's forehead proclaimed him as the object of God's wrath. How many today are hearing about the marks of sin—God's judgment! 4. Humiliating. He was henceforth unclean—cut off from the congregation. This is what sin always does. 5. Fatal. It ended in death. "The wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23).

Cause and Upholder.

God alone . . . is in Himself, and is the Cause and Upholder of everything to which He has given being.—Pusey.

Praise the Lord.

Oh, that men would praise the Lord for His goodness and for his wonderful works to the children of men!—Bible.

The Blockhead.

A blockhead cannot come in nor go away, nor sit, nor rise, nor stand, like a man of sense.—Bryere.

Protest Against Washing Ears.

The recent stories in the Companion about the difficulties that mothers have had in persuading their children to have their ears washed has led a contributor to tell what happened when her small boy was asked whether he should prefer to go to a picture show or to a concert. The boy really wanted to go to the concert, but he chose the picture show instead. When asked why, he said that going to a dark room would make washing his ears unnecessary.—Youth's Companion.

HELPFUL HINTS WORTH NOTING

Walnut meats which have become rancid may be freshened and sweetened by pouring over the fat meats boiling water in which a little soda has been dissolved. Rinse in cold water and dry in a towel.

Nuts in the shell which have become too brittle to crack without breaking, if treated to a bath of boiling water, will crack and seem like fresh nuts.

Keep the smallest candle ends and put into a small muslin bag. Use to polish the floors or keep the kitchen range clean and bright.

A broom which is badly worn may serve longer if all the rows of stiching are ripped out except the top row. Trim the broom after soaking in soap suds and drying thoroughly.

A bit of ginger added to doughnuts will keep them from soaking fat, which is both a saving of fat and indigestion.

The amount of bacon to be used for seasoning may be lessened if it is put through the meat grinder before adding to the dish. It is more evenly mixed through the dish in this way.

Cake bread put through the meat grinder, then browned in the oven, makes a fine breakfast cereal served with milk. This is especially good for an invalid.

A run in a silk stocking may be taken back with a crochet hook. Old stockings may be cut in strips and used for braided rugs.

Old inner tubes from auto tires make fine elastic for rompers, bloomers and shirt skirts. Such elastic will survive several washings without losing its elasticity.

When making mayonnaise, if it curdles, beat another egg and add the curdled mixture very slowly, beating well between each addition. Have all materials cold.

Lemons placed in the oven and heated hot will render their juice more freely.

Mend a torn hair net in an emergency with a hair from your head threaded through a needle.

MADE DOG CARRY KITTENS

Mother Cat Had No Compunction at All in Making Friend Do All the Work.

An English lady, says a contributor to the Cornhill Magazine, having received a kitten and a puppy as gifts, determined to bring them up together. She put them into the same bed, fed them from the same saucer, and they became fast friends.

In time the kitten arrived at maturity. She presented the world with little ones and chose for their nursery a remote and quiet room in the house. But in a few days she evidently decided that there was a better place for them in a room on the floor above. Instead of removing the kittens herself, she trotted off to her friend the dog and got him to follow her to the spot where the kittens were lying. When he had looked at them she started off to the upper room, and he followed her; but, seeing that he was—so to speak—"empty-handed," she doubled back and returned to the kittens; and eventually, after two or three more false starts, he understood her and, picking up one of the kittens in his mouth, followed her up the stairs to the new place. That was as far as his understanding went, and she had to conduct him back to the other kittens and repeat the whole performance again and again until in the end he had removed them all, and she was happy in her new quarters.

But it was not the ideal spot after all; she was happy there only for a day. Again she summoned the dog, and he moved all the kittens again, but more readily than at first. Again the cat became dissatisfied, and the dog moved the kittens again. From first to last there were so many removals that the lady lost count of their number.

Town in Class by Itself.

George, a new town on the Columbia river, in Washington, will be in a class by itself for when coupled with the name of the state it regards itself as the most patriotic place in the United States. Another acquisition of names is a little crossroads village in Killekat county called Jazz.

Weak, Weary Women

Learn the Cause of Daily Woes and End Them.

When the back aches and throbs, When housework is torture, When night brings no rest nor sleep, When urinary disorders set in, When a lot is a weary one, When's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys, Have proved their worth in Berlin.

This is one Berlin woman's testimony:

Mrs. Joie A. Bunting, Bay St., says: Doan's Kidney Pills are an old remedy with me. I have used them off and on for years and have found them to be a splendid medicine. My kidneys were weak and I took a cold it settled on them. I felt weak and run down and was without ambition or energy. In bad weather I had rheumatic pains in my limbs. The action of my kidneys was irregular, too. Doan's Kidney Pills have never failed to help me and I felt better in every way after using them. I will recommend Doan's to anyone as a reliable remedy. I keep them on hand all the time.

WHY OUR SHOES ARE POPULAR

In making the claim that our shoes are popular we wish to prove why this is and has continued to be so ever since last September when we received our first shipment of Freidman-Shelby shoes. Since that time we have experienced a constant increase in our shoe business and this could not have been but for certain reasons.

Several Reasons

Our shoes are made by the largest Manufacturers of shoes in the world. Large production means low cost of Manufacture.

There are 36 factories with a DAILY output of 142,000 pairs.

Aside from the shoe factories there are many other factories that produce incidentals such as boxes, cartons, chemicals, etc. Their printing establishment is the largest west of New York City.

Freidman-Shelby shoes are known as the "All Leather" line. They are built for all kinds of weather and hundreds of our regular customers can testify as to their quality.

These shoes Manufactured at a minimum of cost come direct from the factories to us and we sell them on a small margin of profit. This accounts for our success.

Angels' Food vs. Onions and Garlic

By REV. GEORGE E. GUILLE
Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Who shall give us flesh to eat? We remember the fish, which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions and garlic. But now our soul is dried away; there is nothing at all, beside this manna, before our eyes.—Numbers 11:4-6.

The Psalmist is descending upon God's gracious provision for the wilderness and says: "He had rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them of the corn of heaven. Manna did eat angels' food." (Psa. 78:24-25). What is this they are desiring? It is God's supply of food and life.

need and witness of His unflinching care. The manna, so sweet to the taste, bread from God's own hand out of heaven. Onions and garlic preferred! Alas! what a revelation of the human heart!

We are not left to interpret for ourselves the holy symbolism of the manna. The Lord Jesus has told us what it is. It is Himself. "My Father giveth you the true bread from heaven, for the bread of God is He who cometh down from heaven and giveth life unto the world. . . . I am the bread of life" (John 6:32). And the wilderness journey has no sooner begun than this voice of murmuring breaks out in the camp. But observe with whom it begins. Said as the story is, the soul that has found the manna to be the all-satisfying portion is sorely relieved to discover the source of this complaint: "The mixed multitude that was among them fell a-lusting." There they are! Camp followers of the hosts of the Lord. Unconverted church members, at best, but half-hearted in their allegiance to the Lord Jesus. Manna they despise. It is too "otherworldly" for their unregenerate tastes. Onions and garlic are more to their liking. They must have oyster suppers, banquets and amusements, to "hold the young people."

There follows one of the most pathetic portions of Scripture in which the Spirit of God turns aside to describe the manna once more. Already there has been a full description of it in connection with the account of its first appearance in Exodus. Now He must tell it again—must let us know what it is they are desiring; and one can almost hear the tones of infinite sadness as He writes down the words: "And the manna was as coriander seed and the color thereof as the color of bdellium, and the taste of it was like the taste of fresh oil. And when the dew fell upon the camp in the night the manna fell upon it." It was on the ground; they must stoop to gather it. And it is on one's knees that Christ is found. The dew brings the manna, and exhaling, leaves it for their use. So the Holy Spirit ministers Christ. The taste is as the taste of fresh oil, reminding us again that it is only by the Spirit of God that Christ can be apprehended. Oh, who that knows the Spirit's blessed ministry does not know this taste of fresh oil? It is this that forever satisfies the soul. Nothing else can do so. "Oh, taste and see that the Lord is good!" "Eat, oh friends; yea, drink abundantly, my beloved." Does not Christ satisfy the heart of God? Why not yours, too? Is He not filling all the heavens with His glory? And is not your being with Him the consummation of all Christian hopes? Then why should He not be enough for you now? One good taste of the angels' food and your taste for garlic and onions will be gone.

The child of hope. The child is the type of the citizens of the kingdom of God. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ offers to all Christians what is most lovely in the life of the child, its faith, and love, and hope; and offers those things transformed and glorified. The hope of the Christian is not the untutored hope of the child; he knows why he hopes. He is the child of hope because through Jesus Christ he is the child of God.

As in a Looking Glass. If any be hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass. For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was.—James 1:23-24.

Disintegrating, As It Were. One day while on the street I met one of the most prominent and dignified business men of our town. As he passed me he raised his hat and in doing so he knocked his cigar from his mouth. Trying to catch the cigar, he knocked his hat off. Also trying to keep that from falling, his nose, glasses slipped from his nose, fell to the walk and broke. Gathering up his scattered belongings, he remarked that it looked as if he were coming to pieces.—Exchange.

Rawleigh's PURE SPICES

THERE is a big difference in spices and no matter how much or how little you use, they should be Rawleigh's Spices because Rawleigh's are absolutely pure, full strength, economical to use—a little goes a long way.

The most ordinary cakes, puddings, etc., become irresistible through the use of Rawleigh's Pure Spices. For pickling and making spiced preserves Rawleigh's Spices are unsurpassed. They are the finest flavored, the most wholesome spices grown; and are so good, so superior in every way, that you will like them the minute you open the can.

Black Pepper, Mustard, Red Pepper, Nutmeg, Ginger, Sage, Cloves, Cinnamon, Allspice, Whole Mixed Spices.

In sifter-top, hygienic cans. Always uniform in strength. Ground and sealed at the big sanitary Rawleigh factories, untouched by human hands. Unsurpassed for cooking, baking, pickling, and wherever pure spices are needed. I will soon call with a complete line of Rawleigh's Good Health Products. Hold your orders for me, write or phone.

ARCOLA

"will add from 3 to 5 times its cost to the selling value of your home."

THE MAN pictured here is JOSEPH P. DAY, the nationally known real estate expert. He has sold more real estate at auction than any man in the world. He knows that a house heated with American Radiators sells or rents for much more than a house heated by a hot-air furnace or stoves.

Read his letter:

"One of the first things the buyer of a house asks about is the heating. An ARCOLA hot-water heating outfit can easily add from three to five times its cost to the selling value of the house."

Make a profit on your foresight. ARCOLA costs less this month, NOW, than ever before.

Don't wait for Fall. Telephone your Steamfitter or Plumber for an estimate today—NOW.

OCEAN CITY.

A member of the Summer Congregation of St. Paul's, Ocean City, Md., who desires his name withheld, has arranged to present each year a silver Cross of Honor to the member of St. Paul's Choir who has given the most faithful and efficient service during the year.

This is following the custom of St. Paul's, Baltimore, and is greatly appreciated by the members of the Choir by the Sea.

The first cross was presented this year to Mrs. Robert J. Showell, who for more than thirty-five years has rendered to St. Paul's Choir and Church the most faithful, loyal, and efficient service.

The entire congregation is one in according to her this high honor, and is glad to thus express to her their appreciation of her pure and unselfish devotion to the Church which owes a large measure of its present success to her untiring zeal and devotion.

The Easter Day offerings at St. Paul's-by-the-Sea amounted to over $400.

The vestry elected on Easter Monday, were Charles A. Parke, William I. Purnell, L. F. Purnell, Edward M. Scott, George W. Parker, Charles Ludlam, Daniel Trimmer, Jr., John P. Whaley, John Dale Showell, Edwin Calhoun, William Turner, Dr. F. J. Townsend.

Easter in the Churches

Easter Sunday was a pleasant spring day, and large congregations enjoyed the church services.

Beautiful flowers, attractive music and fine sermons appropriate to the occasion made it a memorable occasion for those who were privileged to go, while fervent prayers in behalf of the sick and feeble reached the Throne of Grace.

At the Methodist Church a "Fitting Week" collection in church and Sunday School brought in $236.

Another special feature was the receiving into full membership of four probationers and four more by letter from other churches, whom the whole church was invited to welcome in, according to the old-fashioned custom.

At the Episcopal Church, five girls, Dorothy and Catherine Coffin, Cornelia Potter, Gertrude Purnell and Charlotte Bethards, were given by Rev. S. A. Potter their choice of a nice Bible or a gold cross, for attending church service and choir practice at least three fourths of the time since last September. The three former, selected the Bible, and the two latter, the cross. On Monday the members of the Vestry were all re-elected. They are: Dr. Z. P. Henry, K. P. Jarvis, William Whaley, T. M. Purnell, H. C. Bounds, J. R. Phillips, Jr., H. T. Davidson, E. L. Coffin. Dr. Z. P. Henry is Sr. Warden; J. R. Phillips, Jr., Jr. Warden; K. P. Jarvis, Treasurer; E. L. Coffin, Registrar, and Miss E. P. Purnell, Treasurer of Mission Fund.

Our L. T. L. meeting for this week was held Tuesday, April 18, Monday being a holiday for the school. We had an attendance of twenty-one members. Three new members were added to our list. A very interesting program was rendered.

We wish to make our Legion a Victory Legion, so we have sent one dollar and seventy-five cents ($1.75) to Headquarters, for the Anna A. Gordon missionary fund, this being one of the first steps toward our goal. We also appointed girls for the flower mission department.

Adults may be enrolled as honorary members or patrons of the Legion by the payment of ten cents dues; we are very glad to say we have eight honorary members and hope to enroll many more. It has been planned for the L. T. L. to meet with the W. C. T. U. next Wednesday night, April 26, at the home of Mrs. Ida Cropper, on William Street, at the Rayne Homestead. We hope that the parents of the L. T. L. children will attend and bring the children with them. A short program will be rendered by the L. T. L.

The Fish-Hook Girl

By CLARI-SA MACKIE

Josephine understood men. She was sympathetic, a good listener, and other girls said she actually purred when she had her own way, which was equivalent to saying that she scratched when she did not have it. Ralph was attracted by her vivacity and her quick intelligence. That she was very pretty as well only added to his pleasure. Her fair hair was fluffed over her ears and drawn down over her forehead, and her blue eyes looked at him through this tangle of curls with alluring charm.

"I have always wanted to meet you," gushed Josephine frankly, after a while.

"Why—why?" stammered Ralph. "Because you were engaged to a girl I used to know at boarding school."

Ralph stared at her, a dull flush rising to his bronzed face. "You know Dorothy Faye?" he asked.

She nodded brightly. How very cute she was, only he would have liked her better if she had not worn so much jewelry, and he would like to see her forehead—if she had any!

"You are staring at me, rude man!" she pouted cutely. "Am I such a wonder because I know Dorothy?"

"Forgive me—I was surprised for a moment. What shall we do, Miss Josephine? Shall we dance?"

"I would rather talk, please. I want to ask you about Dorothy—she used to be so pretty at school. Is she pretty now?"

Ralph regarded the rug at his feet. "Pretty?" he repeated. "I think she is—very lovely," in a strained tone.

Ralph regarded the rug at his feet. "Pretty?" he repeated. "I think she is—very lovely," in a strained tone.

"Say It Right Out."

"Is she fair?"
"Oh, no; her hair is black and soft."
"I remember—and it was soft about her face, like a dark mist. Does she wear it that way now?"

A vision of Dorothy's broad, white forehead and the saucy curl over one eyebrow came to tease Dorothy's late fiancé.

"She wears it very plainly," he said with an effort.

"Not in a psyche?" she shrieked. "I don't know what you call it, but she wears fishhooks."

"Fishhooks?"

He nodded. "Horrible little curls at the side over her eye."
Josephine smothered a laugh.
"Do you like them?" she asked archly.

"They are idiotic," he blurted forth.

"Oh! Did you tell her that?"

"Something of the sort."

"How she must detect you," murmured Josephine, suddenly sorry for the foolish girl who had quarreled with Ralph Parker over the way she wore her hair.

"The way she wore her hair was right if it was the way she liked it. Even in a bun," said Josephine firmly.

"A bun?" he repeated, searching for her mischievous eyes. He was rather tired of trying to find her eyes in the thicket of fair hair over her forehead.

Suddenly he seemed to see Dorothy's sweet pale face, as he had last seen it, pure and serene in its flawless beauty, with the dark hair smoothed softly back and the little curl hooked invitingly over her eyebrow.

It wasn't so bad after all. Dorothy certainly looked a lot better than these thatched ladies who pecked at him so vexingly from behind their fringes. How many of them were there? Only one, after all, Josephine herself.

"So you quarreled over the fishhook curl?" insisted Josephine.

"Yes, if you must know," he said rudely.

"You poor thing, I am so glad I met you," murmured Josephine.

"Promise not to tell Dorothy?"

"It isn't likely that I shall have a chance to speak to her again!" he said, and he didn't know that his tone was hopeless and that the hurt in his eyes was plain to be seen.

"I am glad I met you, because Dorothy wrote me that you had quarreled with her and she did not believe it."

"Other girl and that you picked a quarrel about the curl just to break the engagement!" The blue eyes behind the barricade were very bright indeed.

"Nonsense!" he cried. "There was only one girl for me—she knew it!"

"Don't believe she did. Anyway, she just hates the curl; cut it off right away," she said.

Ralph's vision vanished. "If you could only excuse me, I believe I would run down to Oakdale—there is business down there."

"About a fishhook curl?" mocked Josephine.

"Yes."

"Don't go down there—settle it here!"

—Dorothy only arrived half an hour ago—I think she is waiting in the sun parlor. Mercy! the man has gone already!" Josephine leaned back in her chair and brushed back the hair from her forehead. "Ugh, how I hate this way of doing my hair—I believe I will try fishhooks myself!"

BELIEVE IN LOST CONTINENT

Eminent Students of South Sea Geography Firmly Convinced That Vast Tract Was Submerged.

A fascinating theory which is just now enjoying the attention of students of South Sea geography is: Was there once a mighty continent in the South seas?

Many firmly believe that what is now the "milky way" of the Pacific—the isle-dotted sea—was at one time a vast coral and volcanic continent; that it has subsided in one place and been upheaved in another, until broken into a myriad fragments. And the day may still come when Nature will raise them from the deep, welded once more into a mighty whole.

Ralph Stock, in his book, "Crucible of the Dream Ship," while admitting that he is no scientist, points out many facts that support this theory.

There is, for example, a wall on Easter Island, not unlike the great wall of China, but which runs for a short distance and then plunges aimlessly into the sea. Where did it begin? Where did it end? What mighty city did it embrace?

On Pitcairn there are the remains of a former and highly advanced civilization.

On Lord Howe Island, a mere rock sprouting three thousand feet out of the sea, four hundred and eighty miles from the Australian coast, there are sixty different species of land shell, fifty per cent of which are not to be found anywhere else in the world. How do they come to be on Lord Howe?

In the Carolines you may look down into the water of lagoons and see mosaic floors and broken walls, the remains of a submerged city.

Legal to Change One's Name.

Many people keep the names they have inherited not because they have any special affection for them, but because they do not realize how easy it is to get rid of them. They are under the impression that they would have to take the matter to court when as a matter of fact, all they have to do would be to make the announcement. The possession of the name-changing privilege was definitely confirmed in New York state in the case of Smith versus State Casualty company when Judge Vann, who handed down the opinion, quoted an historical example to substantiate it.

"A predecessor of Honore de Balzac," he wrote, "was born a Guiz, which means beggar, and grew to manhood under that name. When he became conscious of his power as a writer he did not wish his works to be published under that humble name, so he selected the surname of Balzac from an estate that he owned."—Frederic J. Haskin in Chicago Daily News.

"Halifax."

Two derivations are given for the name of the capital of Nova Scotia, Halifax. According to Camden it means "holy hair," and he accounts for the origin of the name from the fact that the head of a virgin who had been slain by a wicked clerk was suspended on a tree in the neighborhood of an English town called Halifax, which place came to be much resorted to by pilgrims.

According to another account, the name means "holy face," and is derived from an image of St. John once preserved in a neighboring hermitage.

"FAIRY PRINCE" VERY HUMAN

Once More Illustrating the Wide Gulf Sometimes Existing Between Romance and Reality.

As the crowded elevator car swooped down from eighteen to ten she became aware that there was a man just behind her left elbow. Her consciousness of him was somehow intensified by the exhilaration of the moment. Curiosity counseled looking around. Pride forbade it. She felt a burning sensation in the part of her left cheek which was visible beneath her hat brim, Elizabeth Houghton writes in the New York World.

Bump, slam, swoop! the car inched its way down. Ten floors are not too few for the creation of a fairy prince. At the eighth floor he was tall and slender with a lock of hair falling over his forehead, at the seventh he had rather deep-set eyes and stern, straight brows.

As they passed the fifth she decided that he wore a necktie of grayish blue which undoubtedly matched the peculiar blue of his eyes. Just then a fat man pushed his way in and forced her against the wall. But she hardly noticed this.

She was planning the encounter. Daintily she would step from the car, adjusting her fur collar so that the worn lining should be hidden—he would follow closely, and in well-modulated tones ask if he might take her home.

"Main floor—last stop!" bawled the elevator boy. She found herself hurrying madly along the marble floor, hearing the tap, tap of her own heels and a heavy tread close behind! It was, it must be the fairy prince! At the door of the big office building she stopped, a little breathless.

"Hello, Cutie!" smote raucously in her ear. "Want an arm across the street?"

A tiny figure in a grotesquely rakish green plaid cap smiled up at her, disclosing in the front of his mouth a gleaming gold tooth!

ENGLISH ARCHERS LOSE HOME

Ancient Organization Puzzled as to the Disposition of Its Relics of Days Long Past.

There is a Royal Toxophilite society in England, which has had its headquarters in Regent's park for many years. Now, however, the society has to move, and is concerned as to the future resting place of the wonderful treasury of archery relics now in Archers' hall.

One bow and set of arrows are more than 4,000 years old. These were taken from the tombs at Sakmarah, in Egypt, and are believed to have been in use about 2900 B. C.

Another bow was given to the society by Mahomet Effendi, "ambassador from the Sublime Porte," in 1794, when he came to England for the first time, bringing his bow and arrows with him. When this Turkish official saw the ground at Regent's park he said it was much too small, so he went into a street outside the park and shot his arrows into a field. The distance was measured and found to be a quarter of a mile. Mahomet was so pleased with this shot that he presented his bow and arrows to the society. The bow is beautifully carved and is of immense strength.

Just Like a Woman.

A Fullerton man says he gets two eggs from a single hen. His plan is ingenious and might be worth trying on a larger scale, so we print it for the benefit of some of our suburban readers.

He has arranged a mirror opposite Biddy's nest, so that when she hops off and cackles she sees in the glass what she supposes is another hen cackling. This arouses her jealousy and not to be outdone by a supposed rival she jumps back on the nest and lays another egg.—Los Angeles Times.

STATE CAPITAL

Ritchie To Seek Second Term.

Albert C. Ritchie made the announcement that he would be a candidate for re-election as Governor of Maryland in 1923. This eliminates him as a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator France.

His election would establish a precedent, no Governor of Maryland ever having served two successive terms.

For some time Governor Ritchie has been regarded as the keystone to the political situation in this State, so far as the Democratic party is concerned, and great pressure has been brought upon him to declare himself without delay. In other words, it was his move, and many other moves depended upon his action. The statement of the Governor follows:

"During the past few weeks I have been approached by many men and women of Maryland who have, with very great kindness, asked whether I desired to be a candidate for the United States Senate, and who generously offered me their political and personal support for that office.

"I am conscious, too, that there are others who are expecting a decision from me in the matter, because my possible candidacy for the Senate has recently been discussed by the press of the State, in many instances favorably.

"It has been represented to me and also publicly stated that should I announce my candidacy for the Senate I would in all probability have the support of the Democratic party for the nomination, and that, at a time when the men and women of the State are turning again to the Democracy to represent them in public affairs, I would have a fairly certain chance of election.

"I would not be human did I not feel truly grateful for all this, and I have not had a more difficult decision to make. If it is true that the situation is at all what it has been represented to me, then a possible Senatorial candidacy could hardly face a more favorable prospect; and when problems so tremendous are facing the nation, the temptation cannot but be strong to ask the people of Maryland for the privilege of representing them at Washington, and of doing my best to have Maryland be a constructive help in solving the problems which confront the people.

"I have determined, however, that my job is here in Maryland, finishing, as I hope to be able to do, the tasks which I set for myself and to which the Democratic representatives in the Legislature gave such loyal support.

"I asked the aid of the best thought of my party in this State in outlining certain reforms in our State government. This aid was generously and effectively given, and the party's honor pledged that the legislation which had been planned should be enacted, and this pledged word was kept. But this is not enough. I feel that when the Legislature adjourned it left me the task of putting these plans in operation and thus finishing the job.

"And that is what I have determined to do. The changes in the State government brought about by the reorganization plan are effective January 1, 1923. Were I to run for the United States Senate not only would I have to give the campaign first place until November, but were I to be elected, then two months after January 1 I would have to relinquish the office of Governor, and with it the duty of completing the task we all began so many months ago by helping the new order to function in the spirit of the reorganization plan.

"It is not, of course, that there could be any doubt of the ability of another to complete that task. President Norris, of the State Senate, who would succeed me in the event of my election as Senator, was wholeheartedly in favor of the reorganization plan, and I am glad to say to the whole State, in this public way, that had it not been for his generous, unselfish and capable support the past legislative session could hardly have made the record it did, and wherever else the credit ought to go a full share must be his.

"But a man ought to finish the job he starts out to do, and I think I owe it to the people of the State to finish the job I started out to do, and to devote all my energies for the rest of my term to the State Government of Maryland instead of putting that aside for a campaign which may advance my own political fortunes.

"After that has been done, then, the people and my party willing, I will have the right to look ahead to whatever public office I might deserve as the result of having done my best in the office I now hold, and it will be perfectly proper for me to be a candidate, as I intend to be, to succeed myself as Governor.

"The next election for Governor is more than a year and a half in the future. During all that time I shall be constantly subjected to the scrutiny of the people of Maryland. There will be many decisions affecting our people which I will be called upon to make. Situations which no one can now foresee may arise to lessen or even take from me the generous and helpful support of my party and my friends which I now have and which I am so anxious to deserve.

"But I am willing, for the sake of doing what I believe is the right thing by the high office with which I have been honored, to take my chance; and if conditions should combine to prevent my succeeding myself as Governor, I shall still believe that I did the right thing in not entering the Senatorial contest.

"But I hope that, working as hard and as seriously as I can and striving to do all I can for the benefit of Maryland, I may retain the friendship and support of the people of the State, and deserve from them the privilege of serving them for another term as Governor.

Prison Board Given Free Hand.

In a letter to Ogle Marbury, chairman of the State Board of Prison Control, Governor Ritchie says he "sees no reason" for sitting with that board "for the purpose of hearing specific complaints" against the conduct of affairs at the House of Correction.

"That is the duty of your board," says the Governor in his letter, "and if I did not feel that you had handled such complaints properly and were competent to continue doing so, it would become my duty to make changes in the board. . . . I have been advised of nothing which would justify any such action or desire on my part."

The Governor's letter concludes: "I may add that should subsequent developments make me feel it my duty to intervene in any way, I hardly think that this would be by sitting with the board at a public hearing of these charges relative to the conduct of the institution. I did, of course, sit with the board at the Penitentiary investigation, but that came as the result of complaints from the Federal Government.

"There is, however, no such official background to the present charges against the House of Correction and, with nothing to shake my confidence in the board; and in view of the circumstances I have stated, I feel that intervention on my part, should occasion arise, ought rather to take the form of an independent survey through competent assistance. No thing has been brought to my attention to justify that now."

Tomato Industry Menaced.

Unless the Fordney Tariff Bill, recently reported to the Senate, is amended to increase the duty on imported canned tomatoes and similar products, the canning industry in Maryland will be seriously menaced.

Representatives of the Maryland tomato interests are beseeching members of Congress to exert all possible influence to secure an increase in the tariff to at least 50 per cent. on canned tomato paste, and 25 per cent. on prepared natural tomatoes. The present Underwood tariff provides for a 25 per cent. ad valorem duty on all prepared tomatoes.

In communications which have reached Representative Zibelman and other members of the Maryland delegation it is pointed out that only a comparatively small quantity of tomatoes are consumed in their natural state, practically the entire harvest in Maryland being made up of canned tomatoes, tomato paste, tomato catsup, etc.

Fear is expressed that the present tariff on tomatoes will greatly benefit Italian competition. The Italian Chamber of Commerce, it is pointed out, is now seeking to have the American duty reduced on these products. Consequently, members of Congress have been advised that it is of the utmost importance to American canners not only to prevent the reduction of the tariff provided in the Fordney bill, but to increase it as a means of throttling foreign competition.

It is argued by the Maryland canning interests that the Italian products, as shown through investigation by the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture some years ago, are manufactured under conditions directly contrary to those governing the American production.

Women To Honor Ritchie.

Plans for the luncheon to be given Governor Ritchie on May 1 at the Remont Hotel by the Democratic Women's Club in commemoration of the administration's reorganization program were completed at a meeting of the club held at the St. George Hotel, 816 Cathedral street.

In the absence of Mrs. S. Johnson Peck, chairman of the club, Mrs. Chas. Hatter presided. An impromptu address was given by A. S. Goldsborough, executive secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association. He spoke on the subject of "Women in Politics."

The following women were named as a reception committee for the luncheon, to which more than 500 invitations have been sent: Mrs. Chas. W. Hatter, Mrs. S. Johnson Peck, Mrs. Frank Phillips, Mrs. A. O. Moisan, Mrs. Rupert L. Hoopes and Miss Mary R. Wilcox.

Elkton.—The following candidates have been nominated for president and town commissioners of Chesapeake City at the coming municipal election to be held in the town next month: For President—William T. Harriott, Charles Banks and James Kirk; for Town Commissioners, two to be elected—William G. Harrington, William Borger, Harry W. Kibler and George C. Filligame.

Babylon, the Great Test.

"Tis an inestimable hint that I owe to a few persons of fine manners that I make behavior the very first sign of force—behavior, and not performance, or talent, or much less, wealth.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

POULTRY

INTEREST IN LAMONA BREED

White-Egg-Laying General Purpose Fowl Developed by Department of Agriculture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The Lamona, the new white-egg-laying general-purpose fowl originated and being developed by the United States Department of Agriculture, made its first public appearance at the Madison Square Garden poultry show, held in New York from January 25 to 30, where 15 of the birds were shown in the open class. In addition to the Lamona, and other government-bred fowls of standard breeds, the department put on an extensive exhibit consisting of models of poultry houses, a display of feathers of the standard breeds, appliances such as feed hoppers, brooder cages, and a fattening battery. A series of panels, made up of photographs, charts, and placards, showed the more important standard breeds, the feeding of hens for egg production, the preparation of birds for exhibition, the advantages of early hatching, the improvement resulting from the use of a high quality sire, capons and caponizing, culling the farm flock, and the pedigree breeding of poultry.

Typical Lamona Hen.

A number of department representatives took part in the program of the show and gave information to the visitors concerning the educational exhibits. They reported an extraordinary interest on the part of the public and various poultry breeders in the Lamona breed, many persons desiring to obtain breeding birds. The department believes it necessary to perfect them still more as regards certain points before releasing them to the public.

GRADING EGGS IS ESSENTIAL

Ungraded, Unstandardized Product Is More or Less of an Uncertain Quantity.

When pullets begin laying, their eggs are not up to standard weight. There, too, grading eggs is essential, not only from the producers' standpoint but from the buyers', for an ungraded, unstandardized egg is more or less of an uncertain quantity. The marketing of such a product is never advised since it puts an unnecessary handicap on the buyer who never knows what quality he will receive. The buyer in order to protect himself against loss must pay a correspondingly low price.

Fresh eggs should be graded by size to meet the requirements of the market. The first grade of eggs ordinarily consists of clean, fresh, reasonably full, strong, sweet eggs with an average weight of 45 pounds net per standard 30 dozen case or over 24 ounces to the dozen. The second grade must weigh 44 pounds or more net per 30 dozen case. The third grade must weigh 41 pounds or more net per 30 dozen case. They also make a grade of pullets' eggs which weigh 34 pounds or more net for 30 dozen or 16 ounces per dozen.

POULTRY NOTES

Apoplexy and egg-bound are almost always the result of excessive fatness among the hens.

The young chick drinks a great deal of water and plenty of it is necessary for its health and development.

The first food the chick should receive after being removed from the nest or incubator is clean, fresh water with the chill removed.

Don't feed any more mash at one time than the fowls will eat up perfectly clean. To allow more is not only wasteful but promotes unsanitary conditions.

Variety in rations is one of the most important things connected with good feeding. Sometimes even a faulty ration will give fair results because of the variety that enters into it.

Don't expect the fowls to find grit for themselves. No matter how much grit they may have it is best to keep grit, charcoal, oyster shells, etc., constantly before them.

Accumulated moisture in the poultry house and an overcrowded condition are directly responsible for the colds and coughs which weaken the vitality of the birds and lead to easily susceptible to other diseases.

Daily Thought.

A thing of beauty is a joy forever; its loveliness increases; it will never pass into nothingness.—Keats.

PLANTS GET OWN MOISTURE

Ingenious Device That Will Assuredly Be Welcomed by All Absent-Minded Husbands.

Stay-at-home husbands are prone to forget to water the flowers that adorn the sitting room, even though specially charged to do so by absent wives. They will doubtless welcome a device just invented by a Frenchman, M. Pison, which enables plants literally to water themselves and to do so with efficiency, taking neither too much nor too little to drink. This device, which obtained a gold medal in France, consists of a flower pot of the usual shape, but having a double wall. The description runs, according to the Literary Digest:

The space between the two walls constitutes a reservoir of water. Into this there extends two to four curved tubes, according to the shape of the pot. Each of these tubes contains a wick. The lower end of the tube dips into the reservoir of water while the other end is bent so as to dip beneath the surface of the soil in the inner pot. Consequently, we really have a set of siphons which are set in action by the capillary attraction which causes the water to rise in the wick. Thus there is a gentle but steady flow of moisture to the plant.

In order to adapt the apparatus to the needs of any individual plant it is only necessary to remove the inner pot after the end of 24 hours and note whether the outer pot still holds any water. If so, the plant is overwatered, since the excess of water has been drawn by gravity to the bottom of the inner pot and escaped through the hole in the center into the outer pot.

'FOR LOVE, NOT BY PURCHASE'

New Attitude Toward Marriage Is Seen to Be Awakening Among the Women of China.

Closely related with the new home idea in China is the new idea on marriage; that is, individual choice rather than family choice; "for love, not by purchase."

"Like the new home this will be a matter of slow evolution. For in China the individual is not thought of or looked upon as an entity; he is but a part of a family which is the unit, the entity and which all costs must be preserved and perpetuated. Hence, individual desires must be subsidiary to the wishes or the benefit of the family.

The practice of this principle throughout the long centuries has instilled in children a submissiveness to parents, to family, that is, a submissiveness to the will of the elders. The submissiveness is more than a conscious obedience; it is involuntary surrender.

Consequently, though the new young woman may advocate the theory of personal choice in marriage, only the most radical really desire it or would dare wholly to follow it. Emma S. Xue writes in Scribner, "In matters touching the soul centers, inheritance and tradition are always stronger than imported ideas, no matter how forcible their appeal to reason. Miss China still feels that in the matter of a husband the parents' judgment is the better."

For Religion's Sake.

The confirmation class slowly filed into the pews. Angelic little faces of earnest mischievous youngsters bore rare expressions, many due to the serious occasion and partly to fright. Little gasps of pleasure and delight were uttered by fond parents and friends.

"My dear, I thought we were a half hour too early and here they are beginning the service! Something is amiss." My curious friend sought an usher.

"Yes, madame, the bishop was kind enough to come earlier to officiate. One of the youngsters being confirmed is due at the theater by eight. She is a mermaid."

"No, I was not perplexed," she told me afterward, "but, 'The world do move.'—Chicago Journal.

Pelican Ate Golf Ball.

A pelican, one of those huge, long-banked marine birds that police themselves a hundred feet above the water, close their wings and with beaks open dive head foremost into schools of small fish, finished a golf game in St. Petersburg, Fla., recently "one down." The Coffee Pot course is along the shore of Tampa bay and on the eleventh hole is a small brackish lake forming a water hazard, which must be crossed to reach the green.

One member of a foursome drove from the tee and a strong wind carried the ball into the lake. A pelican flying lazily above the lake evidently took the ball bobbing on the surface for a new variety of fish, for he suddenly closed his wings, dropped with terrific speed and gobbled it.

What Counts.

There was a gleam of triumph in the young man's eyes as he gazed at the woman he loved. "I'm going to write a great novel that will make me famous," he said. The beautiful girl remained seated and made no reply.

"Then I have a scheme to bring peace and happiness to the world," he continued.

She still remained seated. "In order to carry out this scheme I needed money," he went on, "so I played the market and won over a million."

She jumped up and fell into his arms. Decidedly Blue. The blue and the gray—a woman with her first white hair.

POSTAL IMPROVEMENT WEEK IS OBSERVED

May 1 Sees Inaugurated First General Campaign of Kind in Service.

Without the Postal Service, business would languish in a day, and be at a standstill in a week. Public opinion would die of dry rot. Sectional hatred or prejudice only would flourish, and narrow-mindedness thrive.

It is the biggest distinctive business in the world and it comes nearer to the innermost interests of a greater number of men and women than any other institution on earth. No private business, however widespread, touches so many people as the postal service. It reaches into so many souls, flatters so many pulses, has so many human beings dependent on its ministrations.

"Postal Improvement Week" has been set for May 1, by the Postmaster General. This is the first general campaign of its kind in the Postal Service for several decades. Business men and their organizations, large users of the mail, newspapers, motion pictures, advertisers, and the entire organization of 325,000 postal workers are to be enlisted in this country-wide campaign of interest in postal improvements. Your help is vital. Address your letters plainly with pen or typewriter. Give street address. Spell out name of State, don't abbreviate. Put your return address in the upper left hand corner of envelope (not on the back) and always look at your letter before dropping in the mail to see if it is properly addressed. This care in the use of the mail is for your benefit and speeds up the dispatch and delivery of mail matter.

If you have any complaints of poor service make them to your postmaster. He has instructions to investigate them and report to this Department.

COURTESY

It sticks in human relations like postage stamps on letters. The POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT expects it to be used by its postmasters and employees in dealing with the public.

Help them in its use beginning with POSTAL IMPROVEMENT WEEK, May 1-6, 1922.

THANK YOU

WITHOUT STREET ADDRESS YOUR MAIL IS DELAYED AT OFFICE OF DELIVERY

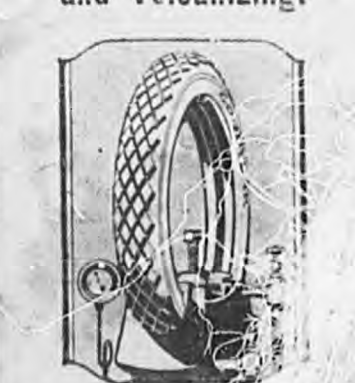

The Dead Letter Office has been in existence ever since Ben Franklin started our postal service. Even then people addressed mail to Mr. Ezekiel Smithers, "Atlantic Coast," and expected Ben to know just where Zeke lived.

Perhaps they had Zeke's address in letters up in the garret, maybe a chest full of 'em, but then it was easier to let Ben hunt Zeke. Today people are addressing letters to John Smith, New York, N. Y., or Chicago, Ill., thinking Uncle Sam can locate him, which is just as incomplete as was Zeke's address of yore. The Postoffice Department asks you to put the number and street in the address. It helps you.

"MORE BUSINESS IN GOVERNMENT"

This apt phrase was used in President Harding's first message to Congress and applies particularly in postal management where postmasters are being impressed with the fact that they are managers of local branches of the biggest business in the world.

HERE COMES A STRANGER!

Let's make our post office look neat. Mr. Postmaster, straighten up the rural letter box, Mr. Farmer. Tidy up your Mr. Rural Carrier. First impressions are lasting. Maybe Mr. Stranger, taking notice of these improvements, will come back, bringing you benefits. Start these with "POSTAL IMPROVEMENT WEEK" May 1-6.

HUMANIZING THE POSTAL SERVICE

"There is no unimportant person or part of our service. It is a total of human units and their cooperation is the key to its success. In its last analysis, postal duties are accommodations performed for our neighbors and friends and should be so regarded, rather than as a hired service performed for an absentee employer."—Postmaster General Hubert Work.

Napoleon Relic Stolen.

The sofa on which Napoleon I rested on the day before the Battle of Jena has been stolen from the Grunewald museum in Berlin. This is not the first time that relics of the great emperor have been stolen. In 1864, the saber presented by the city of Paris to Napoleon on the occasion of the birth of the King of Rome was stolen from the castle of Stolzenfels. This saber had been found, it is said, by the Prussians in the imperial coach after the Battle of Waterloo. The hilt and scabbard were of solid gold, encrusted with precious stones. At the same time the robber made away with Prince Murat's sword, which was very valuable, and several other souvenirs, including Blucher's sword.—From Le Petit Parisien. (Translated for the Kansas City Star.)

Negro Blood in Alexandre Dumas.

Alexandre Dumas, the great French romantic novelist, was born at Villers-Cotterets, Aisne, France, July 24, 1802. His father Gen. Alexandre de La Fayette Dumas was the natural son of the Marquis Alexandre D'Arny de La Fayette, a rich colonist of Santo Domingo, and of a negress whose name was Dumas.

The Value of the Book

By REV. B. B. SUTCLIFFE
Extension Department, Moody
Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—The people pressed upon Him to hear the Word of God.—Luke 11.

Much criticism is being directed against the Bible, and by many it is thought to be out of date. However, there are, among others, the following seven facts that reveal its value for the present times:

First, it is by the Word of God that souls are born again. "Being born again, not of corruptible seed but of incorruptible, by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever."—1 Peter 1:23. "Of His own will begat he us with the Word of Truth."—James 1:18. The instrument the Holy Spirit is pleased to use to produce regeneration is the Word of God. Without it there may be reformation, but there cannot be regeneration.

Second, it is by the Word of God that faith comes. "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God."—Romans 10:17. Many Christians are continually asking the Lord to increase their faith; if they would spend more time reverently studying the Word of God, their faith would be daily increased and strengthened. Perhaps slowly and perhaps unconsciously, but nevertheless surely, faith grows as the Word of God is obediently studied.

Third, it is by the Word of God that the Christian is built up in his spiritual life. "As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby."—1 Peter 2:2. "And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the Word of His promise, which is able to build you up."—Acts 20:32. No Christian who habitually omits the study of the Word of God will ever enjoy spiritual strength. It is God's appointed medium for building up and establishing the saints, and the neglect of it is seen in carnality and the loss of all spiritual power.

Fourth, it is the Word of God that keeps from sin. "Thy Word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against Thee."—Psalm 119:11. The only sure and certain guard to keep from falling into sin is to have the heart filled with the Word of God. Then when sin rises on the door it is met, and turned aside by the thrust of the "Sword of the Spirit"; that sharp two-edged sword which is the Word of God.

Fifth, the Word of God keeps from error. "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God."—Matthew 23:23. "This was the reply Jesus made to the Sadducees, who were the rationalists of their day, and with supercilious assumption of wisdom, thought to place Jesus on the horns of a dilemma. But there was no dilemma to the One whose mind was stored with the Word of God. There are countless errors abroad today, so subtle and deceptive that, to be guarded from their fatal teachings, the Christian needs to be like the Bereans of old, who 'searched the Scriptures daily, whether these things were so.'—Acts 17:11. 'If they speak not according to this Word, it is because there is no light in them.'—Isaiah 8:20. Obeying the exhortation to 'search the Scriptures' (John 5:39) will result in hearing 'a word behind them, saying, 'This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left.'—Isaiah 30:21.

Sixth, the Word of God brings joy to the heart irrespective of circumstances. "Thy words were found, and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of my heart."—Jeremiah 15:16. Jeremiah's circumstances were all calculated to bring the exact opposite of joy and rejoicing. The secret of his joy was the Word of God within his heart. The one whom God considers "blessed," is one who "walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night."—Psalm 1:1, 2.

Seventh, the Word of God brings prosperity and success. "This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do all that is written therein; for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success."—Joshua 1:8. In this commercial age we are prone to think of prosperity only in the terms of dollars and cents, but the prosperity that might be ours by the Word of God, endures through all time and through eternity as well. The possession of it depends on our treatment of the Word of God.

Paul gave a word to the people centuries ago which might well be given to all Christians today, namely: "And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the Word of His grace, which is able to build up to a give you an inheritance among all them that are sanctified."—Acts 20:32.

Admired.

There is nothing in the world so much admired as a man who knows how to bear unhappiness with courage.

Small Birds Form Great Colony.

Extraordinary methods are adopted by the little society birds of South Africa in building their nests. The birds are no bigger than a canary, and each pair builds a mud nest of diminutive size. But thousands of them nest in the same tree, and each year a new nest is built, until the branches are covered. Eventually the weight of the nest becomes too great for the tree, and the colony falls; or all available space is occupied and a new colony is started on a tree that is situated nearby.

LESSON FOR APRIL 30

ISAIAH'S SUMMONS AND RESPONSE.

LESSON TEXT.—Isa. 6:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT.—Here am I; send me.
REFERENCE MATERIAL.—Gen. 12:1-4; Ex. 2:14-15; Josh. 1:1-9; Jer. 1:4-10; Matt. 10:2-5.

PRIMARY TOPIC.—God Calls Isaiah to Help Him.
JUNIOR TOPIC.—A Young Man Who Was Ready.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Our Response to the Call for Service.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—The Service to Which God Calls Us.

I. Isaiah's Vision of Glory (vv. 1-4).
The prophet remembered the very time of its occurrence. It meant so much to him that he could ever look back to it as a day when his ministry took on a new meaning.

1. He Saw the Lord on His Throne (v. 1). Though the death of Uzziah left Judah's throne empty it was made clear to the prophet that the throne of God was occupied. The Lord was high and lifted up, showing that He is above all kingdoms. This was a peculiar preparation of Isaiah for his work. The one who has really seen God can never be the same again; life has a fuller meaning ever afterward.

2. He Saw the Seraphims Above (vv. 2, 3). Just who these beings are we do not know. The word signifies "burning." They were glorious beings whose business was to wait upon the Lord, to go on errands for Him. They had six wings—two for flight; two to cover their face, showing reverence; and two to cover their feet, showing humility. These three pairs show that reverence and humility are of equal value before God, with activity. The song of the seraphims shows that they saw holiness as God's supreme attribute. The three "holy" perhaps refers to the Trinity. The first choir sang, "Holy, holy, holy," and the second choir responded to this by saying, "The whole earth is full of His glory."

3. The Manifestation of Majesty (v. 4). "The posts of the door moved at the voice of him that cried, and the house was filled with smoke." The smoke, no doubt, signified God's wrath against man's sinfulness (see Psalm 18:24; 74:1).

II. Isaiah's Conviction of Sin (v. 6).
The vision of God brought the prophet to see himself. It is only in the light of God's holiness that we see our unholiness. When Peter got a glimpse of who Christ was he begged Him to depart from him, saying, "Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord."—Luke 9:33. The prophet not only realized that he was a sinner, but that the nation was a nation of sinners. What the world needs today above all things is a vision of God.

III. Isaiah's Cleansing From Sin (vv. 6, 7).

The taking of the coal from the altar shows that it was connected with sacrifice. The fire that consumed the sacrifice was holy fire. When a sinner gets a vision of God in Christ, the Holy Spirit applies the merits of Christ's shed blood and cleanses from all sin.

IV. Isaiah's Call (v. 8).
Immediately following his cleansing came the call. Men must be cleansed from sin before they shall be called to God's service. Though God has many angelic beings who willingly go on errands for Him, yet He has errands upon which only cleansed human beings can go. The only ones who can really declare the gospel of God's grace are those who have experienced His saving power. God is asking this same question of men and women. Isaiah readily responded to his call by dedicating himself to the task. He said, "Here am I; send me."

V. Isaiah's Commission (vv. 9-13).
1. The Sending (vv. 9, 10). He had a most discouraging task before him. He is assured that the people will hear his message, but be unmoved by it. They will even increase in blindness and deafness to the divine warnings—they will neither be converted nor healed. Such a hopeless task would only be undertaken by one who had had a vision of God.

2. The Encouragement (vv. 11-13). Facing the most discouraging outlook the prophet raised the inquiry, "Lord, how long?" The Lord in His reply assured him that it would not last forever. The land would be desolate, the cities without inhabitants, and the houses without occupants; but as the oak retains its vital substance even long after it has been cut down, so from Judah shall a remnant be saved. The holy seed is the substance which shall constitute the basis of the kingdom which shall come when David's son shall be king.

Must Look to Jesus.

If I want to repent, if I want to change my mind and get more and more determined to be good, I must look to Jesus Christ. I must notice how perfectly faithful, perfectly loving, perfectly patient, perfectly ready to suffer, He is. He is the service of others. He is. The Bishop of London.

The Deceitful Tongue.

For the rich men thereof are full of violence, and the inhabitants thereof have spoken lies, and their tongue is deceitful as their mouth.—Micah 6:12.

Inbreeding of Species.

In an experiment with 600 white rats belonging to the sixteenth to the twenty-fifth generations of brothers and sisters from the same litter, it was found, says Science, that close inbreeding produced no deterioration.

Thrift.

Thrift is such a simple thing—and it means so much. It is the foundation of success in business, of contentment in the home, of standing in society.—Russell Sage.

Horticultural News

SELECT BEST ORCHARD SITE

Most Important Factor to Be Considered Is Subsoil as Trees Are Deep Rooted.

By an orchard site is meant the exact location of the orchard on the farm. Location in general does not interest the farmer since he has his farm, but the thing which interests him is, "Where on the farm is the best place to set the trees?"

One of the most important factors to be considered is the subsoil, says D. C. Mooring, extension horticulturist of the Oklahoma A. and M. college. A tree is a deep-rooted plant under favorable conditions, but under adverse subsoil conditions, the tree may be shallow rooted and consequently short lived. Most of us recall that during the past few years during the dry years, many orchards, forests, and lot trees have died. When they were grubbed out it was rather surprising to see many trees 10 to 15 inches in diameter whose root systems were confined almost entirely to a stratum of soil not more than 12 to 16 inches deep. Thus it is readily seen why they were killed by drought, and the importance of an open porous subsoil is readily suggested. Where a tree is planted in a soil with an open porous subsoil the tree roots will not suffer nearly so much for lack of moisture and food.

The subsoil may vary on a comparatively small farm, hence the importance of digging down with a spade or, better and easier, bore down into the subsoil with an old worn-out shovel or a hand auger. Where the soil has been welded a piece of iron or a piece of pipe.

No doubt many have noticed in passing through a valley after sundown, that the valley is much cooler than the sloping ground or the hill. This is due to cold air being heavier than warm air and consequently having settled in the valley. Therefore, frost is more apt to be formed in the valley than on upland. So, in selecting an orchard site, avoid the valleys.

A Few Peaches, Pears, Plums and Cherries Make an Agreeable Variety.

In case of variation of surface or top soils, plant the stone fruits such as peaches, plums and apricots, on the light soil and plant the pome fruits such as apples, pears, etc., on the heavier soil, giving peaches the preference of the lightest and pears of the heaviest soils.

Since it very frequently happens that the women take part in the harvesting of the fruit at irregular times in order to prepare it for meals, it is important to have the orchard near the house. Another reason which might be advantageous is that the orchard could be better watched. In case of planting trees on city lots avoid planting too close to the side of the house on the windward side. Too much shade has a tendency to cause the trees to grow tall and slender.

MAKE WAR ON APPLE MAGGOT

Minnesota Orchardists Urged to Make Extra Spray to Control Destructive Pest.

To the three sprayings urged for Minnesota orchards by horticulturists of University Farm, A. G. Rogers, state entomologist, would add another when it becomes necessary to fight the apple maggot to a finish. The full spraying program as recommended is as follows: First, when the center bud of the flower cluster begins to show pink; second, just after the petals fall; third, about July 1, and fourth, for the special benefit of the maggot, soon after the middle of July.

PEACH TREES NEED PRUNING

Surplus Growth in Heads Should Be Cut Out—Also Remove All Straggling Branches.

Peach trees will need pruning if this work was not done earlier. Cut out the surplus growth in the heads, remove the growth on the trunks below the heads and cut back straggling branches that shade or interfere with others that promise to produce more fruit.

Her Idea of a Show.

Wherever two or three are gathered together the current plays are sure to be discussed. A luncheon the Women attended the other day was no exception to the rule. One enthusiast waxed eloquent over the merits of a play at a downtown theater. Turning to the country cousin who was visiting the friend on her right, the Woman asked if she had enjoyed it. Sotto voce came the reply: "Can not say I liked it much. Why, there wasn't an evening gown in the whole show."

The KITCHEN CABINET

Let not him who is homeless pull down the house of another, but let him labor diligently to build one for himself.—Abraham Lincoln.

THE DAILY MEAL

An unusual way of serving potatoes provided by the following recipe:

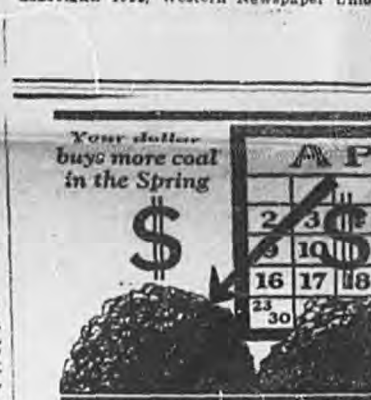

Potato Timbales.—Wash and boil potatoes with their jackets on in boiling water well salted. Cool and peel, chop and season with salt and pepper and moisten with cream. Brush timbale molds generously with butter and sprinkle with soft bread crumbs, using none of the crusts. Pack into the mold the potato mixture, place in a dish and put into a hot oven until the crumbs are well browned. Remove to a serving dish and garnish with sprigs of parsley.

Imperial Salad.—Wash scraps and chop celery to measure one-half of a cupful. Add an equal measure of chopped pineapple. Soak one and one-fourth tablespoons of gelatin in one-fourth of a cupful of cold water five minutes and dissolve in one-fourth of a cupful of boiling water. Strain and add to the first mixture, then add one-fourth cupful each of vinegar and sugar, two-thirds of a cupful of canned pineapple shreds and one tablespoonful of lemon juice with a few grains of salt. Turn into individual molds and chill in cold water and chill thoroughly. Remove from the molds to a plate of crisp lettuce and accompany with mayonnaise dressing.

Fruit Salad Dressing.—Beat two eggs until very light, add gradually three tablespoons of melted butter, beating well, three tablespoonsful of lemon juice and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly until it thickens. Add one cupful of heavy cream beaten stiff, one-fourth of a cupful of powdered sugar, one-half teaspoonful each of celery salt, vanilla and a few dashes of cayenne, three drops of onion juice and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of paprika. Chill thoroughly.

Somerset Sandwiches.—Mix one-half cupful of canned shrimps, one-half cupful of cold cooked chicken livers, one-half red pepper and one-half of a Bermuda onion, both chopped. Force through a meat chopper. Season with salt and pepper, moisten with mayonnaise and spread on thin slices of buttered bread. Cut in fancy shapes.

ARCOLA means an American Radiator in each room—no more cold rooms; no more spotty heat.

It means better health for the children, for it gives the same healthful radiator warmth that florists insist upon for their delicate flowers.

And it pays for itself in the fuel it saves.

ARCOLA Saved these Coal Dealers One-Third

"About a year ago we installed ARCOLA. Formerly we used two large stoves which required constant attention and gave us poor service. Today we have uniform heat and the saving of fuel was a revelation to us. We are not using as much coal by one-third."

FORMER SALOON NOW CHURCH

Remarkable Transformation for Which the Congregation is Very Literally Responsible.

The Bronx, New York's famous residential section, has a home-made church. It began life as a saloon in the period antedating the year 1, A. V. (ante Volstead). That followed a spell as a billiard parlor. Rev. A. V. Vos, an Episcopal clergyman, next appeared upon the scene. He rented the ex-saloon, organized a congregation, and with a big shoe-case for an altar and a dozen rude benches for the accommodation of his flock, which included Germans, Italians, Hungarians, Irish and Americans, the initial service was held. In course of time the little congregation increased to about fifty, bought the place, paid off the debt in sums of $15 and $20 at a time and at length laid aside a reserve fund. And this is what they did with it: Including in their number carpenters, bricklayers, cement workers, electricians, etc., they had a church meeting, parceled out the work among themselves, and on the night of December 3 last they began tearing out the front of the building. Each night thereafter, as soon as supper was disposed of, the volunteer workers got back on the job and by working every night save Sunday—sometimes well into the morning—they have succeeded in making over the place into a pretty little concrete edifice of the old Spanish mission type. It includes not only the chapel proper, but a dining hall, social hall, kitchen, etc. Rev. Mr. Vos says: "It isn't a cathedral, but to us it is the finest church building in the world because we have reared it with our own hands." Plans are being formed for the consecration of the building by Bishop Manning at an early date.

Buddhism's Sacred Place.
Diamond mountain, in Korea, is a sacred place of Buddhism, the priests of which coming from China in proselyting endeavor, settled there several centuries ago. Because, says the Christian Science Monitor, the Buddhists are tree lovers, E. H. Wilson, on his exploration trip to Korea for the Arnold Arboretum of Boston, found that no woodsman's ax or modern sawmill had invaded this area, and he discovered many new varieties of trees and flowers with which the United States and other countries will be enriched.

To Tell Cow's Age.
It is more difficult to determine the age of a cow than of a horse, say the livestock men at the State College at Ithaca, N. Y. They agree that some estimate of a cow's age may be made from her teeth and horns. The number of "annual rings" on the horns, plus two, for example, usually gives the animal's age, but remembering that the pairs of permanent teeth come nine months apart will help to verify it.

YOU NEED A TONIC!

FOR that tired, worn out, depressed feeling most everyone has in the Springtime or when you are easily fatigued and feel generally rundown, there is nothing quite so helpful as a good tonic.

Freedom Or Slavery.

By John B. Gough.

A man said: "I won't sign the pledge because I won't sign away my liberty." "What liberty?" "Liberty to do as I please" Is that liberty? Any man that does as he pleases, independent of physical, moral and divine law, is a mean, miserable slave. There is not so pitiful a slave that crawls the face of this earth as the man that is the slave of evil habits and evil passions. What is it to be free? To be capable of self-government is to be free. To abandon every habit that you consider to be wrong, is to be free. To fight against that which holds you in bondage, is to be free. A man that overcomes an evil habit is a hero.

I knew a man who said he would give up the use of tobacco. He took his plug of tobacco out of his pocket and threw it away, and said: "That is the end of the job." But it was only the beginning. He found the very tip of his tongue clamored for it. He said: "I will go and get another. I will buy another plug, and when I want it awfully, then I will take a little." And he did want it awfully, and took his knife and his piece of tobacco, and then he thought it was God's spirit striving with him. He held the tobacco in his hand and said: "I love you and I want you. Are you my master, or am I yours? That is a question I am going to settle. You are a weed, and I am a man. You are a thing, and I am a man. I will master you if I die for it. It shall never be said of me again: 'There is a man mastered by a thing.' I want you, but I will just take care of you. I will fight you right through." He said it was six months before he could get over the desire for that tobacco; but he fought it right through.

That man was a hero. A hero has to battle against an enemy. Cocks can fight and dogs can fight; but for a man to battle against himself, to conquer every evil desire and wicked passion in the secret name of duty, that is to be brave.

Indigestion and Constipation.
"Prior to using Chamberlain's Tablets, I suffered dreadfully from indigestion. Nothing I ate seemed to do me any good, and I lost flesh and run down in health. Chamberlain's Tablets strengthened my digestion and cured me of constipation," writes Mrs. George Stroup, Solway, N. Y.

A WORD OF WARNING!

The coal strike now in effect and no end in sight, will, if it continues very long, doubtless affect the prices of some very important building materials, such as Lime, Cement, Bricks, Sewer Pipe and other products depending upon kiln burning.

If you expect to build soon, take this bit of advice for what it may be worth to you and your interests.

PIGMIES OF POULTRY WORLD

Bantam Breeds Have Distinct Utility Value for Egg Production for Family Use.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The Bantam breeds gained their popularity as ornamental fowl and as playthings for children and grown-ups, but, says the United States Department of Agriculture, they have also a distinct utility value for egg production for family use. There is also a good demand for eggs for hatching and for breeding stock of good quality. Because of their small size these pigmy breeds often have the advantage over larger fowls where only a very small space is available for the flock. They are easy for children to handle, and the ownership of a few Bantams often is the beginning of a real interest in poultry raising.

The various breeds of Bantams, their characteristics, and methods of management are discussed in Farmers' Bulletin 1251, The Bantam Breeds and Varieties, the fifth of a series on Standard Varieties of Chickens. The various breeds, says the bulletin, have not been raised with the idea of egg production and, as a result, the average is not very high, probably around 175 eggs in a year. The eggs vary in size, as do the different Bantam breeds, ranging from 12 ounces a dozen to 18 or 20 ounces. The color of the eggs runs from white to dark brown. Some of the breeds have a tendency to lay for a fairly long period, but the Brahmas, Cochins and Silkies are apt to be broody. Since many of these kinds have been developed from the larger standard breeds they have many of the same characteristics.

Reports collected from Bantam owners show that from 25 to 35 pounds of food in a year, which is about one-half as much as a hen of the Mediterranean breeds or one-third as much as a hen of the larger breeds would eat.

A copy of the bulletin may be obtained free by addressing the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C.

FIND HIDDEN TURKEY NESTS

When Confined in Pen Until Late in Day, Laying Hen Will Go Straight to Her Eggs.

A quick and easy way to find stolen nests of turkeys is to confine the birds from early morning to late afternoon. The laying hens will then go straight to their nests to lay the eggs which they are holding, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. When turkey hens have free range they most usually in obscure places and often wander a half mile or more from home before they find a nesting place that suits them.

If attractive nesting places are prepared about the barnyard, the turkeys sometimes lay in them. Such nests are easily made from boxes or barrels, or by scooping out a little earth in the shape of a shallow bowl, piling brush round it to satisfy the hen's desire for seclusion. The nest most preferred by turkeys consists of a barrel laid on its side, in which straw or hay is placed. When confined in a breeding pen several turkey hens may lay in the same nest, but on free range each bird usually makes her own nest. Turkeys do not range far during cold weather. In the north, where the laying season often begins when there is still snow on the ground, the hens are more likely to select their nests near home.

LEAKY POULTRY HOUSE ROOF

More Annoyance From Damp Quarters in Spring Than in Winter on Account of Rain.

There is usually more annoyance from leaky poultry house roofs in the spring than in the winter, because more rain occurs. Also, in winter, ice and snow may remain for weeks on a roof without melting, and really assist to protect against the winds; but in spring any leaky places will be open to heating rains. Roofs should be repaired at once, if there are any cracks or leaks at all or the result will be damp quarters and the flock will probably be ravaged by colds and roup.

Stars in Daylight.

Photographs of stars down to the sixth magnitude can be taken in broad daylight. If the photographs are taken through a deep red screen, the stars appear with distinctness. Important results are expected from experiments.

The Elephant's Foot.

The elephant is a good traveler. On level ground a fast horse can outrun him, but on rough ground he would leave the horse behind. His foot is encased in a bag-like skin, with a heavy padded bottom.

MAN OF FAITH AND LEARNING

Origen, surnamed Adamantius, who lived from 185 to 254 A. D., is considered by some authorities as the greatest of the early church fathers. Alexandria, in Egypt, the great seat of learning of the time, is thought to have been his birthplace. He was a teacher and deep student of philosophy and of the Scriptures, and he became a great defender of the Christian faith. His literary productions were numerous and several have come down to the modern world, among them being a treatise on theology, a few sermons or discourses of that nature, parts of commentaries on the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. John and St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. His greatest work is his defense of Christianity against the attacks in the writings of Celsus, an Epicurean philosopher of the Second century. Celsus' work is not extant, but the character of it is made clear in Origen's refutation, which contains many quotations, and Origen's line of argument indicates clearly the line of attack followed by Celsus. The attacks upon Christianity by many critics are simply repetitions of Celsus' objections, which Origen answered about seventeen hundred years ago.

Where Business Moves Slowly.

Business methods are invariably slow in the Near East, according to Miss Grace Willis who has returned recently from a period of service with the Y. W. C. A. in Constantinople, Stambul and Beirut. "It takes at least a half a day to deposit a check and even longer to draw one out," says Miss Willis. "The general condition that exists in business houses is undoubtedly due to the fact that so many nationalities, each with their own way of doing things, are gathered under one roof. The girls of the Near East are particularly keen for business courses and there is a tremendous demand in the many commercial houses for well-trained clerical workers and stenographers. I consider that when, from the business courses given by the Y. W. C. A., efficient business women have been turned out after nine months' training, a remarkable piece of work has been accomplished."

Veteran.

After working 50 years in steel mills, Edward Quilty retired on pension. He was the oldest employee of the American Steel and Wire company. He started to work before the Bessemer converter and open-hearth process were invented.

Looking backward over his life, Quilty is amazed most at the way traveling cranes and other machinery have relieved human muscles.

He says: "The men have more brains than they used to."

Average intelligence will steadily increase, as machinery gradually frees man from drudgery.

Energy, now consumed by muscular effort, will flow into the brain, generating thought, developing a race of philosophers.

She Just Analyzed Him.

A colored woman hurried into the adult probation offices of the juvenile court at Chicago.

"I tell you, I'm mad," she said to the adult probation officer.

"It's my husband," she continued. "That man is drivin' me crazy."

"What is he doing now?" she was asked.

"What he doesn't do is easier to answer. We just can't seem to get along," she pouted.

"But he says you don't love him."

"Love him?" the woman replied, surprised. "Love him? Why, I just analyze that man."

Victory Made a Difference.

During the allied occupation of Germany, an amusing encounter took place between a British soldier and a German baroness.

The baroness, writes Miss Violet R. Markham in "Watching on the Rhine," told a British officer that one of his men insulted her. Indeed, she declared, she had never been so insulted in her life. The officer at once began inquiries and finally learned that the lady had found two British soldiers whistling and sliding down the banisters of her back stairs.

She had told them sharply that whistling and sliding on the banisters were verboten. Whereupon Thomas Atkins, equal and undefeated, had turned to her and remarked pleasantly, "Aye, missus, but yer should have won the war, and then yer could have come and slid down our back stairs and whistled."

To use a three-wheeled platform for the purpose of picking figs, was the timely idea of a grower of that fruit, in order to harvest his crop quickly, as described in a scientific journal.

Weak, Weary Women

Learn the Cause of Daily Woes and End Them.

When the back aches and the head throbs, when housework is torture, when night brings no rest or sleep.

When urinary disorders set in, when women's lot is a weary one, when the kidneys are for ailing kidneys.

Have proved their worth in the past.

This is one Berlin woman's testimony:

Mrs. Joie A. Bunting, Bay St., says: "Don's Kidney Pills are a real remedy with me. I have used them off and on for years and have found them to be a splendid medicine. My kidneys were weak and I felt weak and run down and without ambition or energy. I had weathered I had rheumatic pains in my limbs. The action of the kidneys was irregular, too. Don's Kidney Pills have never failed to help me and I feel better in every way after using them. I will recommend Don's to anyone as a reliable remedy. I keep them on hand all the time."

W. C. T. U.

The Berlin W. C. T. U. met Wednesday, Apr. 26th, with Mrs. Everett Cropper. The meeting was opened by singing "Christ For the World." Mrs. E. F. Downing read Psalm 34 for the Scripture lesson, which was followed by prayer voiced by Mrs. E. F. Teas. The secretary then called the roll, the text word being work, the most of the members answered to their names by repeating a verse from the Bible containing the word work.

The secretary read a letter from Mrs. J. S. Taylor, of Salisbury, requesting that a delegate be sent from Berlin W. C. T. U. to attend the Institute, or School of Methods, which is to be held in Easton May 2nd. A delegate was then elected.

Reference was made to State's Attorney William G. Kerbin's notice in the Advance of last week, which was made by the request of the W. C. T. U. Many persons have arranged for dandelion wine according to their former custom, some perhaps without realizing that it is forbidden by law like other wines and liquors which contain one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol. All such persons are liable to arrest and the punishment prescribed by law.

As a wreath of flowers had been bought by the Union for Mr. Francis M. Crooks, who was an honorary member for nine years, and one who had made sacrifices for the work, the bill was presented, and the members that were present paid their proportional part.

Mrs. E. P. Downing read from the Union Signal the plan of the third campaign for the million members by 1925, which began Monday, Apr. 24th, and ends May 14th. We trust that every member will do their best to win a member.

Mrs. J. E. Brazier, the General L. T. L. Secretary, having resigned the work, Mrs. S. S. Lecates, her assistant, was elected General Secretary in her place. As the meeting was a joint meeting of the Union and L. T. L., Mrs. Lecates had prepared a program for the occasion which consisted of singing "Work For Enforcement Where You Are." Mary C. Beam gave a recitation entitled "Put It Through" and Oris Boggs "A Bow of Blue." The dialogue "How Does Your L. T. L. Grow?" was rendered by several girls, each taking her part well. The Rally Cry was given. The L. T. L. salute, The Salute to the Flag, was nicely given. Law Enforcement was then sung by the children. Mrs. S. S. Lecates recited "Temperance is Nothing to Me."

The meeting closed by singing the Temperance Doxology. The lesson on Civil Government was not studied as was planned, on account of the lengthy program.

The hostess served refreshments consisting of several kinds of homemade candy, which was enjoyed by all. The members departed thanking the hostess for the pleasant evening. There were 6 visitors. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. E. P. Downing May 17th.

Roy's Drastic Punishment

By JANE OSBORN

© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"It's real punishment for Sally," that is what Mrs. Burton told Professor Burton early on the afternoon of one of their at-homes in late winter. "Every Friday afternoon she has to stay at home, to pour tea for a handful of miserable tongue-tied students, while the other girls she knows skate or play hockey or something."

"But I thought Sally liked students," protested Professor Burton as he assisted in the preparations of the comfortably furnished drawing room of the Burton homestead for the undergraduate at-home.

Mrs. Burton said that of course Sally liked students, but there were students and students, and obviously students that would choose to come to afternoon tea at the house of a philosophy professor weren't normal.

"You know it is part of the new system," explained Professor Burton.

"We give the students these opportunities of becoming better acquainted with us socially. There are some of the students who are really at a disadvantage because of their lack of familiarity with ordinary social usages. That is why they seem tongue-tied and bashful. They are rather left out of undergraduate social life—that's why it's so important for us to give them this chance, to bring them out and give them confidence in themselves."

"Oh, I don't mind," said Mrs. Burton. "I can stand it. It's Sally I was thinking about. Sally is popular. She has one and sometimes two or three chances to go to every game or dance

in college, and it will do her good to take it all in for a year or two. It's unfair to make her give up every Friday when there are always so many other things to do."

"It won't hurt Sally," was all the comment that Professor Burton would give, and then the door bell rang and the first student came. He was what Sally spoke of as a "regular." He never missed a Friday, sat on the same chair, always dropped his spoon

once or twice and came near dropping his cup and saucer, too, when he was faced with the embarrassing situation of being offered a second piece of cake when he was holding his first piece in his right hand and his teacup

in his left.

Some of the students were showing improvement under the tutelage of Mrs. Burton and the kindly hospitality of Professor Burton. Some of them even seemed to be getting so they enjoyed these afternoons. There was the glow of the open fire and candles burning on the mantelpiece

when twilight came. Sometimes Sally played and once or twice she had sung a little, something very sedate or classical. Professor Burton mentioned incidents in the classroom in a casual manner that seemed to give the students immense satisfaction.

About half past four Roy Yates arrived. He had been coming for a month, and he, too, always did practically the same thing, though he showed no evident confusion. He bowled and shook hands with formal and pronounced courtesy to Mrs. Burton, shook hands gravely with Professor Burton, bowed to Sally and then took a seat on the window seat

—where for the rest of the afternoon

he said practically nothing—or at least as little as would be compatible with fairly good breeding.

Professor Burton had taken his quiet manner for one of intense embarrassment. After the day of his appearance he had suggested to his wife that if the boy ever came again she should do her best to "scare him out."

Mrs. Burton had tried, but succeeded not. The young man continued to sit on the window seat, to answer in polite short sentences and to take a single cup of tea, clear, and to decline

all other refreshments. After this failure the professor had called on Sally.

"If that Roy Yates comes again, do something to him. You can even break our custom at these at-homes and sing something a little light if you think it would liven him up. He isn't in any of my classes. I don't know anything about him."

Sally had made some observation.

She said, with a tone of being much impressed, that he wore a Lambda Chi phi. She didn't know any of the

Lambda Chis. They were all students with some money and new: asked town girls to dance and sing, but imported them from home.

The next Friday Roy Yates arrived

again, and Sally, following instructions, was already seated on the window seat when he came. He took his place before he saw her, and then,

finding no chance to escape, did his best to retain his air of polite indifference. But he melted, as who wouldn't under the circumstances?

Quite without intent, Sally could touch the heart of most undergraduates; if not at first sight, at least on second sight. And, if Sally tried, she could make anyone fall in love with her. She was trying now. Her father and mother had asked her to be nice,

and that meant to Sally to be as fasinating as possible.

Then she sang. Professor Burton had suggested something a little light.

So she selected an old-time favorite of her father's that her mother had sung

in courtship days and looked straight

at the student sitting on the window seat when she came to the refrain that "she was looking right into the eyes of the only man she loved." So effective was her song when she came to these words that several students

turned around to see where her eyes

rested, and Roy Yates, now really embarrassed for the first time, rose with apparent listlessness, and, after pretending to look at one or two pictures

on the wall, stood beside the piano.

When Sally finished her song he said something to her that made Sally as much embarrassed as he had been.

Then came tea. Mrs. Burton poured and Sally helped the students who were too awkward to help themselves.

Sally passed Roy a cup of tea, which he accepted with much gravity and without a smile. "How many lumps of sugar?" she asked, holding the sugar tongs over the teacup.

"None, thank you," he said.

"Cream or lemon?" she asked.

"Neither," he said, and sighed a little.

Then Sally hovered about him with a plate of little cakes. She begged him to take one. She had made them herself, but he declined them. "And I frosted this one just for you," she pleaded. Still he declined. She was no more successful with the nuts and honeybuns.

It seemed like a coincidence, though probably it was the result of careful planning, that Sally happened to sit beside Roy Yates at a basketball meet a few nights later. He was alone and she was with her mother on the invitation of one of the men who played on the team.

After the first intermission Roy looked quite intently at Sally and said

clearly, though in a tone that was audible only to themselves: "I don't know what you meant by torturing me so, Sally Burton. You deliberately set out to make me—love you—and you succeeded. Tell me now why you did it?"

"I did it," faltered Sally with her eyes lowered, "because you seemed so bored. Father said I ought to try and make the students feel acquainted and—well, so few of the students at those tea parties seem worth getting acquainted with."

A few days later Sally was Roy

Yates' guest at one of the Lambda Chi dances. Roy broke an unwritten rule by bringing a town girl. But then the rule is always broken in favor of engaged men. Roy told the committee he was as good as engaged.

He told Sally the circumstances. "I couldn't tell the committee definitely,"

he said, "because I haven't proposed,

and I can't propose now because it isn't good form to propose to a girl

away from her own home, is it?"

Sally said she didn't know, that she never thought about such things.

They danced with Roy Yates'

roommate. He asked for a second dance and she promised just one if he would tell her something she wanted to know. "Why did Roy Yates come to father's at-home?" She rather expected that Roy had seen her somewhere and had sought this means of getting acquainted.

"Oh, that was funny," replied Roy's roommate. "We had to penalize Roy in some way. He dropped a lighted cigarette in the waste basket one day and nearly set the house on fire.

Something had to be done. So we sent him to those tea parties for—

I'm sorry to have to tell you—for penitence. One of the conditions was that he must drink tea clear—he hates it, anyway—and never take cake or candy, which he loves."

"Oh, I'm so glad!" cried Sally. "I never want to marry a man who didn't have a sweet tooth."

Roman System of Names.

The system of naming in ancient

Rome is well worth a brief description. The Roman, who was a free citizen, had three names, and sometimes several additional ones, but only the three were obligatory. First came the praenomen, which corresponded with our Christian name, or baptismal name, the special designation of the individual; next the gens, or clan,

name, which covered a great deal

more than our family name, since it included several related families all bound together in a group, and last

the cognomen, which resembled our surname or family name—Garrett P.

Servais.

STATE CAPITAL

Ritchie To Seek Second Term.

Albert C. Ritchie made the announcement that he would be a candidate for re-election as Governor of Maryland in 1923. This eliminates him as a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator France.

His election would establish a precedent, no Governor of Maryland ever having served two successive terms.
For some time Governor Ritchie has been regarded as the key stone to the political situation in this State, so far as the Democratic party is concerned, and great pressure has been brought upon him to declare himself without delay. In other words, it was his move, and many other moves depended upon his action. The statement of the Governor follows:

"During the past few weeks I have been approached by many men and women of Maryland who have, with very great kindness, asked whether I desired to be a candidate for the United States Senate, and who generously offered me their political and personal support for that office.
"I am conscious, too, that there are others who are expecting a decision from me in the matter, because my possible candidacy for the Senate has recently been discussed by the press of the State, in many instances favorably.

"It has been represented to me and also publicly stated that should I announce my candidacy for the Senate I would in all probability have the support of the Democratic party for the nomination, and that, at a time when the men and women of the State are turning again to the Democracy to represent them in public affairs, I would have a fairly certain chance of election.

"I would not be human did I not feel truly grateful for all this, and I have not had a more difficult decision to make. If it is true that the situation is at all what it has been represented to me, then a possible Senatorial candidacy could hardly face a more favorable prospect; and when problems so tremendous are facing the nation, the temptation cannot but be strong to ask the people of Maryland for the privilege of representing them
at Washington, and of doing my best to have Maryland be a constructive help in solving the problems which confront the nation.

"But, with all this, I have determined that my job is here in Maryland, finishing, as I hope to be able to do, the tasks which I set for myself and to which the Democratic representatives in the Legislature gave such loyal support.

"I asked the aid of the best thought of my party in this State in outlining certain reforms in our State government. This aid was generously and effectively given, and the party's hospitality to the legislation which has been planned should be enacted, and this pledged word was kept. But this is not enough. I feel that when the Legislature adjourned it left me the task of putting these plans in operation and thus finishing the job.

"And that is what I have determined to do. The changes in the State government brought about by the reorganization plan are effective January 1, 1923. Were I to run for the United States Senate not only would I have to give the campaign first place until November, but were I to be elected,
two months after January 1 I would have to relinquish the office of Governor, and with it the duty of completing the task we all began so many months ago by helping the new organization plan.

"It is not, of course, that there could be any doubt of the ability of another to complete that task. President Norris, of the State Senate, who would succeed me in the event of my election as Senator, was wholeheartedly in favor of the reorganization plan, and I am glad to say to the whole State, in this public way, that had it not been for his generous, unselfish and capable support the past legislative session
could hardly have made the record it did, and wherever else the credit ought to go a full share must be his.

"But a man ought to finish the job
he starts out to do, and I think I owe it to the people of the State to finish
the job I started out to do, and to devote all my energies for the rest of my term to the State Government of Maryland instead of putting that aside for a campaign which may advance my own political fortunes.

"After that has been done, then, the people and my party willing, I will have the right to look ahead to what ever public office I might deserve as the result of having done my best in the office I now hold, and it will be perfectly proper for me to be a candidate, as I intend to be, to succeed myself as Governor.

conditions should combine to prevent my succeeding myself as Governor, I shall still believe that I did the right thing in not entering the Senatorial contest.

"But I hope that, working as hard and as seriously as I can and striving to do all I can for the benefit of Maryland, I may retain the friendship and support of the people of the State, and deserve from them the privilege of serving them for another term as Governor.

Prison Board Given Free Hand.

In a letter to Ogle Marbury, chairman of the State Board of Prison Control, Governor Ritchie says he "sees no reason" for sitting with that board "for the purpose of hearing specific complaints" against the conduct of affairs at the House of Correction.

"That is the duty of your board," says the Governor in his letter, "and if I did not feel that you had handled such complaints properly and were competent to continue doing so, it would become my duty to make changes in the board.

"I have been advised of nothing which would justify any such action or desire on my part."
The Governor's letter concludes:
"I may add that should subsequent developments make me feel it my duty to intervene in any way, I hardly think that this would be by sitting with the board at a public hearing of these charges relative to the conduct of the institution. I did, of course, sit with the board at the Penitentiary Investigation, but that came as the result of complaints from the Federal Government.

"There is, however, no such official background to the present charges against the House of Correction as there was in the case of the Federal Government, and in view of the circumstances I have stated, I feel that intervention on my part, should occur
at all, ought rather to take the form of an independent survey through competent assistance. But nothing has been brought to my attention to justify that now."

Tomato Industry Menaced.

Unless the Fordney Tariff Bill, recently reported to the Senate, is amended to increase the duty on imported canned tomatoes and similar products, the canning industry in Maryland will be seriously injured.
Representatives of the Maryland tomato growers are beseeching members of Congress to exert all possible influence to secure an increase in the tariff to at least 60 per cent. on canned tomato paste, and 25 per cent. on prepared natural tomatoes. The present Underwood tariff provides for a 25 per cent. ad valorem duty on all prepared tomatoes.

In communications which have reached Representative Zihlman and other members of the Maryland delegation it is pointed out that only a comparatively small quantity of tomatoes are consumed in this State, and state, practically the entire harvest in Maryland being made up of canned to-matos, canned paste, tomato catsup,
etc.

Fear is expressed that the present tariff on tomatoes will greatly benefit Italian competition. The Italian Chamber of Commerce, it is pointed out, is now seeking to have the American duty reduced on these products. Consequently, members of Congress have been advised that it is of the utmost importance to American canners not only to prevent the reduction of the tariff provided in the Fordney bill, but to increase it as a means of throttling foreign competition.

It is argued by the Maryland canning interests that the Italian products, as shown through investigation by the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture some years ago, are manufactured under conditions directly contrary to those governing the American production.

Women To Honor Ritchie.

Plans for the luncheon to be given Governor Ritchie on May 1 at the Rennett Hotel by the Democratic Women's Club in commemoration of the administration's reorganization program were completed at a meeting of the club held at the St. George Hotel, 815 Cathedral street.

In the absence of Mrs. A. Johnson
Poe, chairman of the club, Mrs. Chas.
Hatter presided. An impromptu address was given by A. S. Goldsborough, executive secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association. He spoke on the subject of "Women in Politics."

The following women were named as a reception committee for the luncheon,
to which more than 600 invitations have been sent out: Mrs. Chas.
W. Hatter, Mrs. B. Johnson Poe, Mrs.
Frank Phillips, Mrs. A. G. Moisan, Mrs.
Rupert L. Hoopes and Miss Mary R.
Wilcox.

Elkton.—The following candidates have been nominated for president and town commissioners of Chesapeake City at the coming municipal election
to be held in the town next month:
For President—William T. Harriott, Charles Banks and James Kirk; for Town Commissioners, two to be elected—William G. Harrington, William Borger, Harry W. Kibler and George
C. Filligame.

Babylon, the Great Test.

"This is an inevitable hint that I owe to a few persons of fine manners that they make behavior the very first sign of force—behavior, and not performance, or talent, or much less, wealth."
—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

INTEREST IN LAMONA BREED

White-Egg-Laying General Purpose
Fowl Developed by Department
of Agriculture.

As reported by the United States Department
of Agriculture.

The Lamona, the new white-egg-laying general-purpose fowl, originated and being developed by the United States Department of Agriculture, made its first public appearance at the Madison Square Garden poultry show, held in New York from January 25 to 30, where 15 of the birds were shown in the open class. In addition to the Lamona, and other government-bred fowls of standard breeds,
the department put on an extensive exhibit consisting of models of poultry houses, a display of fowls of the standard breeds, appliances such as feeders, brooder cups and a fat-

Typical Lamona Hen.

tening battery. A series of panels, made up of photographs, charts, and placards, showed the more important standard breeds, the feeding of hens for egg production, the preparation of birds for exhibition, the advantages of early hatching, the improvement resulting from the use of a high quality seed, capons and expediting culling the farm flock, and the pedigree breeding of poultry.

A number of department representatives took part in the program of the show and gave information to the visitors concerning the educational exhibit. They reported an extraordinary interest on the part of the public and various poultry breeders in the Lamona breed, many persons desiring to obtain breeding stock. The department believes it is well to perform them still more, and that the certain improvement in the quality of the any will be for sale during the coming year.

GRADING EGGS IS ESSENTIAL

Ungraded, Unstandardized Product Is More or Less of an Uncertain Quantity.

When pullets begin laying, their eggs are not up to standard weight. Therefore, grading eggs is essential, not only from the producers' standpoint but from the buyers'. For an ungraded, un-standardized egg is more or less of an uncertain quantity. The marketing of such a product is never advised since it puts an unnecessary handicap on the buyer who never knows what quality he will receive. The buyer in order to protect himself against loss must pay a correspondingly low price.
Fresh eggs should be graded by size
to meet the requirements of the market. The first grade of eggs ordinarily consists of clean, fresh, reasonably full, strong, sweet eggs with an average weight of 40 pounds net per standard 30 dozen case or over 24 ounces to the dozen. The second grade must weigh 44 pounds or more net, per 30 dozen case. The third grade must weigh 41 pounds or more net per 30
dozen case. They also make a grade of pullets' eggs which weigh 34 pounds or more net for 30 dozen or 16 ounces per dozen.

POULTRY NOTES

A pteryx and egg-bound are almost always the result of excessive fatness
among the hens.

The young chick drinks a great deal of water and plenty of it is necessary for its health and development.

The first food the chick should receive after being removed from the nest or incubator is clean, fresh water with the chill removed.

Don't feed any more mash at one time than the fowls will eat up perfectly clean. To allow more is not only wasteful but promotes unsanitary conditions.

Variety in rations is one of the most important things connected with good feeding. Sometimes even a faulty ration will give fair results because of the variety that enters into it.

Don't expect the fowls to find grit for themselves. No matter how much range they may have it is best to keep grit, charcoal, oyster shells, etc., constantly before them.

Accumulated moisture in the poultry house that is overcrowded condition is directly responsible for the colds and roup which weaken the vitality of the birds, and for their easy suc-
cumbence to other diseases.

Daily Thought.

A thing of beauty is a joy forever;
its loveliness increases: it will never pass into nothingness.—Keats.

PLANTS GET OWN MOISTURE

Ingenious Device That Will Assuredly Be Welcomed by All Absent-Minded Husbands.

Stay-at-home husbands are prone to forget to water the flowers that adorn the sitting room, even though specially charged to do so by absent wives.
They will doubtless welcome a device
just invented by a Frenchman, M. Fin-son, which enables plants literally to water themselves and to do so with efficiency, taking neither too much nor too little to drink. This device, which obtained a gold medal in France, consists of a flower pot of the usual shape, but having a double wall. The description runs, according to the Literary Digest:

The space between the two walls constitutes a reservoir of water. At the bottom of the pot, there extends two to four curved tubes, according to the shape of the pot. Each of these tubes contains a wick. The lower end of the tube dips into the reservoir of water while the other end is bent so as to dip beneath the surface of the soil in the inner pot. Consequently we really have a set of siphons which are set in action by the capillary attraction which causes the water to rise in the wick.
Thus there is a gentle but steady flow
of moisture to the plant.

In order to adapt the apparatus to the needs of any individual plant it is only necessary to remove the inner pot after the end of 24 hours and note whether the outer pot still holds any water. If so, the plant is oversupplied, since the excess of water has been drawn by gravity to the bottom of the inner pot and escaped through the hole in the center into the outer pot.

'FOR LOVE, NOT BY PURCHASE'

New Attitude Toward Marriage Is Seen to Be Awakening Among the Women of China.

Closely related with the new home idea in China is the new idea on marriage; that is, individual choice rather than family choice; "for love, not by purchase."

Like the new home this will be a matter of slow evolution. For in China the individual is not thought of or looked upon as an entity; he is but a part of a family which is the unit, the entity and which at all costs must be preserved and perpetuated. Hence, individual desires must be subsidiary to the wishes or the benefit of the family.
The practice of this principle throughout the long centuries has in-dured in children a submissiveness to parents, to family, that is equalling that of the Chinese nation. The submissiveness is more than a con-suetude; it is involuntary surrender.

Consequently, though the new young woman may advocate the theory of personal choice in marriage, only the most radical really desire it or would dare wholly to follow it. Emma Scepta Yule writes in Scribner's. In matters touching the soul centers, inheritance and tradition are always stronger than imported ideas, no matter how forcible their appeal to reason. Miss China still feels that in the matter of a marriage the parents' judgment is the better.

For Religion's Sake.

The confirmation class slowly filed into the pews. Angelic little faces of earthly mischievous youngsters bore rapt expressions, partly due to the solemn occasion and partly to fright.
Little gasps of pleasure and delight were uttered by fond parents and friends.

"My dear, I thought we were a half hour too early and here they are beginning the service! Something is amiss." My curious friend sought an answer.

"Yes, madame, the bishop was kind enough to come earlier to the office.
One of the youngsters being confirmed is due at the theater by eight. She is a mermaid!"

"No, I was not perplexed," she told me afterward, "but the world do move."—Chicago Journal.

Pelican Ate Golf Ball.

A pelican, one of those huge, long-beaked marine birds that police themselves a hundred feet above the water, closed their wings and with beaks
open dive head foremost into schools of small fish, flushed a golf ball in St. Petersburg, Fla., recently "one down." The Coffee Pot course is along the shore of Tampa bay and on the eleventh hole is a small brackish lake forming a water hazard, which must be crossed to reach the green.

One member of a foursome drove from the tee and a strong wind carried the ball into the lake. A pelican flying lazily above the lake evidently took the ball bobbing on the surface
for a new variety of fish, for he suddenly closed his wings, dropped with terrific speed and gobbled it.

What Counts.

There was a gleam of triumph in the young man's eye as he gazed at the woman he loved.

"I'm going to write a great novel that will make me famous," he said.

The beautiful girl remained seated and made no reply.

"Then I have a scheme to bring peace and happiness to the world," he continued.

She still remained seated.

"In order to carry out this scheme
I need money," he went on, "so I played the market and won over a million."

She jumped up and fell into his arms.

POSTAL IMPROVEMENT WEEK IS OBSERVED

May 1 Sees Inaugurated First General Campaign of Kind in Service.

Without the Postal Service, business would languish in a day, and be at a standstill in a week. Public opinion would die of dry rot. Social hatred or prejudice only would flourish, and narrow-mindedness thrive.

It is the biggest distinctive business in the world and it comes nearer to the interests of a greater number of men and women than any other institution on earth. Private business, however well conducted, is a small affair.

Church, reaches into so many souls, flutters so many pulses, has so many human beings dependent on its min-istrations.

"Postal Improvement Week" has been set for May 1, by the Postmaster General. This is the first general campaign of its kind in the Postal Service for several decades. Business men and their organizations, large users of the mail, newspapers, motion picture advertisers, and the entire organization of 320,000 postal workers are to be enlisted in this country-wide campaign of interest in postal improvements.

Your help is vital. Address your letters plainly with pen or typewriter.
Give street address. Spell out name of State, don't abbreviate. Put your return address in the upper left hand corner of envelope (not on the back) and always look at your letter before dropping in the mail to see if it is properly addressed. This care in the use of the mails is for your benefit and speeds up the dispatch and delivery of mail matter.

If you have any complaints of poor service make them to your postmaster.
He has instructions to investigate them
and report to the department.

COURTESY

It ticks in human relations like postage stamps on letters. The POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT expects it to be used by its postmasters and employees in dealing with the public.

Help them in its use beginning with POSTAL IMPROVEMENT
WEEK, May 1-6, 1922.

THANK YOU

Without STREET ADDRESS
YOUR MAIL IS DELAYED
AT OFFICE OF DELIVERY

The Dead Letter Office has been in existence ever since Ben Franklin started our postal service. Even then people addressed mail to Mr. Ezekiel Smithers, "Atlantic Coast," and expected Ben to know just where Zeke lived.

Perhaps they had Zeke's address in letters up in the garret, maybe a chest full of 'em, but then it was easier to let Ben hunt Zeke. Today people are addressing letters to John Smith, New York, N. Y., or Chicago, Ill., thinking Uncle Sam can locate him, which is just as incomplete as was Zeke's address of yore. The Postoffice Department asks you to put the number and street in the address. It helps you.

"MORE BUSINESS IN GOVERNMENT"

This apt phrase was used in President Harding's first message to Congress and applies particularly in postal management where postmasters are being impressed with the fact that they are managers of local branches of the biggest business in the world.

HERE COMES A STRANGER!

Let's make our post office look neat.
Mr. Postmaster. Straighten up the rural letter box. Mr. Farmer. Tidy up some. Mr. Rural Carrier. First impressions are lasting. Maybe Mr.
Stranger, taking notice of these improvements, will come back, bringing you benefits. Start these with "POSTAL IMPROVEMENT WEEK" May 1-6.

HUMANIZING THE POSTAL SERVICE

"There is no unimportant person or part of our service. It is a total of human units and their co-operation is the key to its success. In its last analysis, postal duties are accompanied by human relations and should be performed as a hired service performed for an absent customer."— Postmaster General Hubert Work.

Napoleon Relics Stolen.
The sofa on which Napoleon I rested on the day before the Battle of Auster-litz has been stolen from the Grammabaum inn by Germans. This is the first time that relics of the great captain tempted the cupidity of "collectors." In 1804, the ruler presented by the city of Paris to Napoleon on the occasion of the birth of the king of Rome was stolen from the castle of Stolzenfels. This relic had been found, it is said, by the Prussians in the imperial coach after the Battle of Waterloo. The hit and scabbard were of solid gold, encrusted with precious stones. At the same time the rubric made away with Prince Murat's sword, which was also very valuable and several other valuables, including Bucher's sword—from La Pelté-Parthen. (Translated from the Kansas City Star.)

County Farmers' Federation to Hold Its Annual Meeting.

A meeting of the Worcester County Farmers' Federation will be held in the Court Room on Tuesday afternoon, May 2nd, at 2.30 P. M.

This will be the annual meeting of the organization and the election of officers will take place for the coming year. Farmers, and those interested in farming from all sections of the county, are invited.

The Federation, since its organization, has accomplished some excellent results, and it is important that this annual meeting be one of the best held.

President E. E. Nock will also report on the Maryland Agricultural Society meeting held last week in Baltimore.

Great Young People's Conference

Young men and women are we interested in ourselves? If an opportunity was given us of catching a great vision of the real purpose and worth of life, would we take it? Are we longing for bigger and better things, but find ourselves unable to attain to them? The best opportunity for meeting such a recognized need that has probably ever come to Worcester County, will be given next Saturday, May 6th, at the Buckingham Presbyterian Church, Berlin, when the first County Young People's Conference will be held, from 1 to 9.30 P. M. Colonel Cudlipp, who has given to our Convention last fall, will be with us the whole day—a splendid programme of study, inspiration, wholesome games, and music! A conference supper in the evening! Each Sunday School in Worcester County will send four delegates, between the ages of 16 and 21. Ask your Superintendent or Pastor on Sunday if you can't be one of the delegates. Remember the day Saturday, May 6th.

Special Notice

I have written and spoken to parties doing business the past year without a license, and this is to notify all such persons that unless such a license is taken out before May first, next, I shall begin criminal proceedings.

This is also to notify persons that licenses must be taken out May the first, next, before the clerk of the court if they intend doing business next year.

It is not fair to those who take out licenses for some people to do business without a license, and some of them seem to pay no attention to my letters or verbal notices.

WILLARDS.

Mrs. Gertrude Dennis spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Joel Rayne.

Mrs. Larry Davis and two children, Ethel and Andrew, of Whaleyville, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lull Richardson.

Mrs. Edward Donaway, Mrs. John Morris and daughter, Catherine, and Miss Josie Cooper, of Whaleyville, spent Sunday with Mrs. George White.

Mr. N. T. Rayne spent Monday and Tuesday in Wilmington.

Dr. James Truitt spent Sunday and Monday in Bowie, Md.

Mr. Everett Fuller has returned to Baltimore, after spending the week-end with his wife.

Misses Iona and Onetta Williams returned to Washington, Friday, after spending some time with their aunt, Mrs. James Truitt.

Mr. and Mrs. Stiney Dennis and a party, of Wharton, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hearne.

Mr. Grover Nicholson left Sunday for Philadelphia, where he expects to accept a pastorate.

Those who spent Sunday in Baltimore were Messrs. Homer Adkins, Grover Dennis, John T. Jones and Kerbin Mitchell.

Miss Ethel Hearne spent Tuesday and Wednesday with Miss Agnes Rayne.

Captain and Mrs. William Purnell, of Ocean City, spent Tuesday with Mrs. Martha Duncan.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Mumford and children, Edward and Richard, and Mr. and Mrs. Benjie Dennis motored to Pocomoke, Sunday, to view the ruins by the recent fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones Workman, of Berlin, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson.

Mr. Mitchell Parker made a business trip to Wilmington and Philadelphia, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Joel Rayne had as their guests, Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dennis, Miss Agnes Rayne and Mr. Paul Richardson.

Mr. and Mrs. Noah Rayne and Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Fuller spent Sunday as the guests of Mrs. M. J. Duncan, of New Hope.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Perdue, of Snow Hill, spent part of last week as the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Truitt.

Berlin Woman's Club.

When the club chose for its year's study, America's interests it chose a comprehensive subject. Surely America's interests are many but none more vital than the welfare of her children.

The club members feel that they are indeed fortunate in having Mrs. Verbycke address them Friday, May 5th, on "Child Rescue Work."

The subject has been of special interest to Mrs. Verbycke for several years, and we are sure that her talk will be both interesting and helpful.

Mrs. Brevard will contribute a short reading, "The Lady of Shalott," by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps. Friends of the club will be made welcome.

Rattan Furniture.

Many people imagine that rattan and willow furniture are the same. Rattan, however, is the Chinese importation, brought direct from Singapore, and is susceptible of bending double without even cracking. It possesses, besides, great firmness and strength. Rattan is therefore used for such articles as baskets and light ornamental furniture. Each wood has its use, the rattan being better adapted for working up into intricate designs, so eagerly sought in modern artistic furniture.

The Bishop's Error.

The bishop was very tired. There were an unprecedented number of candidates for confirmation, and the church grew hotter and hotter. At last, when he was nearing the end of his labors, a baldheaded man knelt down in front of him. The bishop, suppressing a yawn, put both his hands on the shining head and muttered, "I declare this stone to be well and truly laid."

Keep a Historical Scrapbook.

Start a historical scrapbook for your boy. Put in it pictures of important public characters and items of unusual interest. When the child is old enough let him do the pasting. If he is encouraged he will complete the work when he is grown, and will have a book of much interest and information.

Milk Products.

There are no substitutes for milk and its products. Milk, butter, cheese and ice cream are protective foods, indispensable to growth and health, and essential in the perpetuation of the human race. If you use them freely, you will avoid many physical ailments and escape disease resulting therefrom.

Successful Musical.

A crowd that taxed the Globe Theatre to its utmost capacity greeted the combined orchestras of the M. E. and Presbyterian churches on Monday night, in their first public appearance, under the leadership of Prof. John Hopkins, of Salisbury, Md., the results of the twelve weeks training exceeded the highest expectations of the friends of the young musicians. Everybody was pleased. The orchestras of our town are deeply indebted to the splendid young orchestra of the Wisconsin School of Music which assisted in making the musical success that it was. In the tradition of several selections, Miss Hopkins, daughter of the Professor, won the commendation of all lovers of music present, by her skill as an accompanist; in this, she has talent of unusual promise. The orchestras of Berlin owe much to Professor Hopkins for his untiring patience in instructing them, and leading them over the hard places. The professor is exceptional in his teaching ability. The orchestras are greatly appreciative of the kindness and courtesy of Mr. Frank Bartlett in aiding in every way possible the occasion which was so much enjoyed by our people of Berlin and elsewhere. May these orchestras continue large, and faithfully work up to great proficiency. They have our best wishes.

A Chance to Help.

Every kind heart in Berlin will want to do something for the famished and destitute of the Near East. Here is a chance for everyone. On May 10th, barrels of clothing will be packed to be sent to the Near East. Women and children are destitute of all kinds of clothing and shoes.

When clearing out the closets pack a bundle of things you do not want, and leave it at Mr. Williams' 10 cent store, prior to May 10th. "As much as you do it into one of the baskets of these, you do it into Mr. Williams'."

Preventative Medicine.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventative measures. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. Pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, often follows a cold or attack of the grip. The cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the pneumonia germ. The longer the cold hangs on, the greater the danger. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the first indication of a cold appears so as to get rid of it with the least possible delay. It is folly to risk an attack of pneumonia when this remedy may be obtained for a trifle.

Field Day and Musical Contest.

The colored Athletic meet at Pocomoke last Friday was a great success for Berlin. The Berlin Grammar School won the county championship in all games and races. Numerous gold medals were won by our pupils, also a great number of silver and bronze ones for those just entered.

The school won 83 points for the day. Of the three years of the athletic meet, Berlin has brought laurels to her town for two years. The county musical contest held at Snow Hill was won by Berlin. Stockton came second. The faculty is proud of the school and wish greater success than ever in the future. A banquet was given in honor of the seniors at the schoolhouse Tuesday night, April 25th. All present appeared to enjoy themselves.

Give Berlin a fair chance and she will come second to none, for she has proven her ability by her talented products, Rev. Chas. Tindley, Rev. David Henry, Rev. R. J. Williams, Rev. Daniel Quillen, and the honorable supervisor, Rev. E. J. Henry—Contributed.

A Farmer Cured of Rheumatism. "A man living on a farm near here came in a short time ago completely doubled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment and told him to use it freely," says C. F. Rayder, Patten Mills, N. Y. "A few days later he walked into the store as straight as a string and handed me a dollar saying, 'give me another bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment, I want it in the house all the time for it cured me.'"

WHALEYVILLE.

Mr. Ramsey, of Millsboro, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas I. Wells.

Mr. Charles Cooper is spending some time with his sons, in Salisbury and Parsonsburg.

Mrs. Thomas Wells made a business trip to Salisbury, Thursday of last week.

Misses Virgie Davis and Josie Cooper are visiting Mrs. Lloyd Hudson, of Delmar.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Davis and son, Bayard, Mr. Charles Cooper and Mrs. Audrey Cooper, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Cooper, of Salisbury.

Miss Mabel Powell spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Powell, of Berlin.

The young people of Whaleyville will give a comedy-drama entitled "Uncle Rube," Saturday evening, Apr. 29th, in the Mechanics Hall. Everybody come and enjoy a good hearty laugh.

W. C. T. U. Institute.

The Maryland Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold an Institute for the eastern part of the State at Eastern, next Tuesday, May 2nd, to which all Union members are invited to send representatives. There will be morning and afternoon sessions for the study of methods of work, and a good speaker for the evening with a fine program. Several of the State officers and superintendents are expected. Everybody is invited.

The Sensation of The Shows

This car, with high grade Fisher Body on the celebrated New Superior Model Chevrolet Chassis, is the most sensational value ever offered in motoring.

Its artistic lines, harmonious two color finish, refined appointments and mechanical efficiency make it the most desirable car for all who seek year round service combined with small investment and economical operation.

Illustrations and description convey but a poor idea of this 1922 leader in value and desirability. You must see it to realize what a wonderful buy it is at $875, F. O. B. Flint, Mich.

Your Family's Private Car

This beautiful, four-door sedan offers the privacy and luxury of a limousine at less than the cost of most open cars.

All that has kept the majority of motorists from owning closed cars has been the high prices heretofore charged for this type of automobile. The closed car defies snow, rain and cold; yet is cool and clean in summer. At all times it has more style and quality than an open car. It is the ideal family car.

No matter what priced car you own or are considering, it will pay you to inspect this pace-maker in values.

Lester F. Adkins,

Are You Wealthy?

If so, You can probably afford to neglect the painting of your residence and other buildings; that is, providing you do not care about their appearance.

If you are not wealthy and must conserve your resources, or if you have a sense of pride it would be well to invest in preservation.

Bad weather and poor paint make a combination that will ruin any building, no matter how well constructed.

Consult us and we shall prove how we can save you money.

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR

THE FORDSON $395. F. O. B. Detroit

The list price of the Fordson is now $395, F. O. B. Detroit, Mich. Think of it! There is not a power unit on the market at twice the price of the Fordson that can come anywhere near its quality and all-around dependability and usefulness. Nor are they capable of performing half the tasks which the Fordson "eats up" every day.

This low price makes it possible for every farmer to own a FORDSON—in fact makes it expensive to be without one.

The Fordson now sells for approximately 15 cents per pound. Just stop and consider what this means.

Rough castings cost about 6¢ per lb.
Steel and forgings 8¢ per lb.
Brass, bronze and ball bearings, etc.
average from 25¢ to $1.00 per lb.,

bringing the total material cost of the tractor up to approximately 10¢ a pound, leaving only the extremely small margin of five cents per pound over the bare cost of materials to cover all manufacturing operations, labor and overhead. Surely there is nothing we can say that should more strongly impress the farmer with the fact that the Fordson Tractor at $395 represents the best and most profitable investment any farmer can make.

Substantial reductions have been announced in the price of power farming implements and Fordson equipment. The Ford Dealer's prices are about equivalent to the cost of a team of good horses with horse-drawn equipment. The Fordson outfit will do as much work as two or three teams with an actual reduction in operation and maintenance costs.

POULTRY

PIGMIES OF POULTRY WORLD
Bantam Breeds Have Distinct Utility Value for Egg Production for Family Use.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

The Bantam breeds gained their popularity as ornamental fowl and as playthings for children and grown-ups, but, says the United States Department of Agriculture, they have also a distinct utility value for egg production for family use. There is also a good demand for eggs for hatching and for breeding stock of good quality. Because of their small size these pigmy breeds often have the advantage over larger fowls where only a very small space is available for the flock. They are easy for children to handle, and the ownership of a few Bantams often is the beginning of a real interest in poultry raising.

The various breeds of Bantams, their characteristics, and methods of management are discussed in Farmers' Bulletin 1251, The Bantam Breeds and Varieties, the fifth of a series on Standard Varieties of Chickens. The various breeds, says the bulletin, have not been raised with the idea of egg production and, as a result, the average is not very high, probably around 175 eggs a year. The eggs vary in size, as do the different Bantam breeds, ranging from 12 ounces a dozen to 18 or 20 ounces. The color of the eggs runs from white to dark brown. Some of the breeds have a tendency to lay for a fairly long period, but the Brahmas, Cochins and Silkies are apt to be broody. Since many of these kinds have been developed from the larger standard breeds they have many of the same characteristics.

White Cochins Bantam.

Reports collected from Bantam breeders show that the average hen will lay from 25 to 35 pounds of food each year. The United States Department of Agriculture. When turkey hens have free range they nest usually in obscure places and often wander a half mile or more from home before they find a nesting place that suits them.

FIND HIDDEN TURKEY NESTS

When Confined in Pen Until Late in Day, Laying Hen Will Go Straight to Her Eggs.

A quick and easy way to find stolen nests of turkeys is to confine the birds from early morning to late afternoon. The laying hens will then go straight to their nests to lay the eggs which they are holding, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. When turkey hens have free range they nest usually in obscure places and often wander a half mile or more from home before they find a nesting place that suits them.

If attractive nesting places are prepared about the barnyard, the turkeys sometimes lay in them. Such nests are easily made from boxes or barrels, or by scooping out a little earth in the shape of a shallow bowl, piling brush round it to satisfy the hen's desire for seclusion. The best most preferable turkey consists of a barrel laid on its side, in which straw or hay is placed. When confined in a pen several turkey hens may lay in the same nest, but on free range each bird usually makes her own nest. Turkeys do not range far during cold weather. In the north, where the laying season often begins when there is still snow on the ground, the hens are more likely to select their nests near home.

LEAKY POULTRY HOUSE ROOF

More Annoyance From Damp Quarters in Spring Than in Winter on Account of Rain.

There is usually more annoyance from leaky poultry house roofs in the spring than in the winter, because more rain occurs. Also, in winter, ice and snow may remain for weeks on a roof without melting, and really assist in protecting against the winter; but in spring any leaky places will be openings for heating rains. Roofs should be repaired at once, if there are any cracks or leaks at all or the result will be damp quarters and the flock will probably be ravaged by colds and rots.

Stars in Daylight.
Photographs of stars down to the sixth magnitude can be taken in broad daylight. If the photographs are taken through a deep red screen, the stars appear with distinctness. Important results are expected from experiments.

The Elephant's Foot.
The elephant is a good traveler. On level ground a fast horse can outrun him, but on rough ground he would leave the horse behind. His foot is encased in a bag-like skin, with a heavy padded bottom.

MAN OF FAITH AND LEARNING

Origen, surnamed Adamantius, who lived from 185 to 254 A. D., considered by some authorities as the greatest of the early church fathers. Alexandria, in Egypt, the great seat of learning of the time, is thought to have been his birthplace. He was a teacher and deep student of philosophy and of the Scriptures, and he became a great defender of the Christian faith. His literary productions were numerous and several have come down to the modern world, among them being a treatise on theology, a few sermons or discourses of that nature, parts of commentaries on the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. John and St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. His greatest work is his defense of Christianity against the attacks in the writings of Celsus, an Epicurean philosopher of the Second century. Celsus' work is not extant, but the character of it is made clear in Origen's refutation, which contains many quotations, and Origen's line of argument indicates clearly the line of attack followed by Celsus. The attacks upon Christianity by many critics are simply repetitions of Celsus' objections, which Origen answered about seventeen hundred years ago.

Where Business Moves Slowly.

Business methods are invariably slow in the Near East, according to Miss Grace Willis who has returned recently from a period of service with the Y. W. C. A. in Constantinople, Istanbul and Beirut. "It takes at least a half a day to deposit a check and even longer to draw one out," says Miss Willis. "The general condition that exists in business houses is undoubtedly due to the fact that so many nationalities, each with their own way of doing things, are gathered under one roof. The girls of the Near East are particularly keen for business courses and there is a tremendous demand in the many commercial houses for well-trained clerical workers and stenographers. I consider that when, from the business courses given by the Y. W. C. A., efficient business women have been turned out after nine months' training, a remarkable piece of work has been accomplished."

Veteran.
After working 50 years in steel mills, Edward Gully retired on pension.

sion. He was the oldest employee of the American Steel and Wire company. He started to work before the Bessemer converter and open-hearth process were invented.

Looking backward over his life, Gully is amazed most at the way that modern machinery have relieved human muscles.

He says: "The men have more brains than they used to." Average intelligence will steadily increase, as machinery gradually frees man from drudgery. Energy, now consumed by muscular effort, will flow into the brain, generating thought, developing a race of philosophers.

She Just Analyzed Him.

A colored woman hurried into the adult probation office of the juvenile court at Chicago.

"I tell you, I'm mad," she said to the adult probation officer.

"It's my husband," she continued. "That man is drivin' me crazy."

"What is he doing now?" she was asked.

"What he doesn't do is easier to answer. We jus' can't seem to get along," she pouted.

"But he says you don't love him."

"Love him?" the woman replied, surprised. "Love him? Why, I jus' analyze that man."

Victory Made a Difference.

During the allied occupation of Germany, an amusing encounter took place between a British soldier and a German baroness.

The baroness, writes Miss Violet R. Markham in "Watching on the Rhine," told a British officer that one of his men insulted her. Indeed, she declared, she had never been so insulted in her life. The officer at once began inquiries and finally learned that the lady had found two British soldiers whistling and sliding down the banisters of her back stairs. She had told them sharply that whistling and sliding on the banisters were verboten. Whereupon Thomas Atkins, sexual and undefeatable, had turned to her and remarked pleasantly, "Aye, missus, but yer should have won the war, and then yer could have come and slid down our back stairs and whistled."

To use a three-wheeled platform for the purpose of picking figs, was the timely idea of a grower of that fruit, in order to harvest his crop quickly, as described in a scientific journal.

Weak, Weary Women

Learn the Cause of Daily Woes and End Them.

When the back aches and throbs, When housework is torture, When night brings no rest nor sleep.

When urinary disorders set in, When life is a weary one, When's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

Have proved their worth in Berlin. This is one Berlin woman's testimony:

Mrs. Joie A. Bunting, Bay St., says: "Don't's Kidney Pills are so old a remedy with me. I have used them off and on for years and have found them to be a splendid medicine. My kidneys were weak and I felt weak and run down and was without ambition or energy. In bad weather I had rheumatic pains in my limbs. The action of my kidneys was irregular, too. Don't's Kidney Pills have never failed to help me and I felt better in every way after using them. I will recommend Don't's to anyone as a reliable remedy. I keep them on hand all the time."

Spring Weather Means Activity

YOU CAN Save Money on the children's shoe expense by buying only "ALL-LEATHER" RED GOOSE SHOES. Genuine leather shoes always outwear shoes that are made from other materials.

Spring weather causes folks to be out doors. The grown-ups are busy in their work and children are playing outside.

All this activity lays a greater stress on shoes and if they are to meet all requirements they must be made entirely of leather. When our shoes are backed by a guarantee why run the risk of buying shoes that may contain paper?

Our prices are the most surprising feature, our Motto being, "Better shoes for less Money."

Our line of oxfords for men, women and children is complete. Ask to see the oxford equipped with an arch support, making the purchase of additional fixtures unnecessary.

HOSIERY

Good shoes and poor hosiery make a poor combination. We carry a full line of silk hosiery for men and ladies.

W. C. T. U.

The Berlin W. C. T. U. met Wednesday, Apr. 26th, with Mrs. Everett Cropper. The meeting was opened by singing "Christ For the World." Mrs. E. P. Downing read Psalm 34 for the Scripture lesson, which was followed by prayer voiced by Mrs. E. F. Teas. The secretary then called the roll, the text word being work, the most of the members answered to their names by repeating a verse from the Bible containing the word work.

The secretary read a letter from Mrs. J. S. Taylor, of Salisbury, requesting that a delegate be sent from Berlin W. C. T. U. to attend the Institute, or School of Methods, which is to be held in Easton May 2nd. A delegate was then elected.

Reference was made to State's Attorney William G. Kerbin's notice in the Advance of last week, which was made by the request of the W. C. T. U. Many persons have arranged for dandelion wine according to their former custom, some perhaps without realizing that it is forbidden by law like other wines and liquors which contain one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol. All such persons are liable to arrest and the punishment prescribed by law.

As a wreath of flowers had been bought by the Union for Mr. Francis M. Crooks, who was an honorary member for nine years, and one who had made sacrifices for the work, the bill was presented, and the members that were present paid their proportional part.

Mrs. E. P. Downing read from the Union Signal the plan of the third campaign for the million members by 1925, which began Monday, Apr. 24th, and ends May 14th. We trust that every member will do their best to win a member.

Mrs. J. E. Brazier, the General L. T. L. Secretary, having resigned the work, Mrs. S. S. Lecates, her assistant, was elected General Secretary in her place. As the meeting was a joint meeting of the Union and L. T. L., Mrs. Lecates had prepared a program for the occasion which consisted of singing "Work For Enforcement Where You Are." Mary C. Beam gave a recitation entitled "Put It Through" and Orla Boggs "A Bow of Blue."

The dialogue "How Does Your L. T. L. Grow?" was rendered by several girls, each taking her part well. The Rally Cry was given. The L. T. L. salute, The Salute to the Flag, was nicely given. Law-Enforcement was then sung by the children.

Mrs. S. S. Lecates recited "Temperance is Nothing to Me."

The meeting closed by singing the Temperance Doxology. The lesson on Civil Government was not studied as was planned, on account of the lengthy program.

The hostess served refreshments consisting of several kinds of homemade candy, which was enjoyed by all. The members departed thanking the hostess for the pleasant evening. There were 6 visitors. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. E. P. Downing May 17th.

Roy's Drastic Punishment

By JANE OSBORN

© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"It's real punishment for Sally," that is what Mrs. Burton told Professor Burton early on the afternoon of one of their at-homes in late winter. "Every Friday afternoon she has to stay at home, to pour tea for a handful of miserable tongue-tied students, while the other girls she knows skate or play hockey or something."

"But I thought Sally liked students," protested Professor Burton as he assisted in the preparations of the comfortably furnished drawing room of the Burton homestead for the undergraduate at-home.

Mrs. Burton said that of course Sally liked students, but there were students and students, and obviously students that would choose to come to afternoon tea at the house of a philosophy professor weren't normal.

"You know it is part of the new system," explained Professor Burton. "We give the students these opportunities of becoming better acquainted with us socially. There are some of the students who are really at a disadvantage because of their lack of familiarity with ordinary social usages. That is why they seem tongue-tied and bashful. They are rather left out of undergraduate social life—that's why it's so important for us to give them this chance, to bring them out and give them confidence in themselves."

"Oh, I don't mind," said Mrs. Burton. "I can stand it. It's Sally I was thinking about. Sally is popular. She has one and sometimes two or three chances to go to every game or dance in college, and it will do her good to take it all in for a year or two. It's unfair to make her give up every Friday when there are always so many other things to do."

"It won't hurt Sally," was all the comment that Professor Burton would give, and then the door bell rang and the first student came. He was what Sally spoke of as a "regular." He hens, was already seated on the window seat when he came. He took his place before he saw her, and then, finding no chance to escape, did his best to retain his air of polite indifference. But he melted, as who wouldn't under the circumstances?

Quite without intent, Sally could touch the heart of most undergraduates; if not at first sight, at least on second sight. And, if Sally tried, she could make anyone fall in love with her. She was trying now. Her father and mother had asked her to be nice, and that meant to Sally to be as fascinating as possible.

Then she sang. Professor Burton had suggested something a little light. So she selected an old-time favorite of her father's that her mother had sung in courtship days and looked straight at the student sitting on the window seat when she came to the refrain that "she was looking right into the eyes of the only man she loved." So effective was her song when she came to these words that several students turned around to see where her eyes rested, and Roy Yates, now really embarrassed for the first time, rose with apparent listlessness, and, after pretending to look at one or two pictures on the wall, stood beside the piano. When Sally finished her song he said something to her that made Sally as much embarrassed as he had been.

Then came tea. Mrs. Burton poured and Sally helped the students who were too awkward to help themselves. Sally passed Roy a cup of tea, which he accepted with much gravity and without a smile. "How many lumps of sugar?" she asked, holding the sugar tongs over the teacup.

"None, thank you," he said. "Cream or lemon?" she asked.

"Neither," he said, and sighed a little.

Then Sally hovered about him with a plate of little cakes. She begged him to take one. She had made them herself, but he declined them. "And I frosted this one just for you," she pleaded. Still he declined. She was no more successful with the nuts and bonbons.

It seemed like a coincidence, though probably it was the result of careful planning, that Sally happened to sit beside Roy Yates at a basketball meet a few nights later. He was alone and she was with her mother on the invitation of one of the men who played on the team.

After the first intermission Roy looked quite intently at Sally and said clearly, though in a tone that was audible only to themselves: "I don't know what you meant by torturing me so, Sally Burton. You deliberately set out to make me—love you—and you succeeded. Tell me now why you did it?"

"I did it," faltered Sally with her eyes lowered, "because you seemed so bored. Father said I ought to try and make the students feel acquainted and—well, so few of the students at those tea parties seem worth getting acquainted with."

A few days later Sally was Roy Yates' guest at one of the Lambda Chi dances. Roy had been selected as the only man to bring a town girl. But then the rule is always broken in favor of engaged men. Roy told the committee he was as good as engaged.

He told Sally the circumstances. "I couldn't tell the committee definitely," he said, "because I haven't proposed, and I can't propose now because it isn't good form to propose to a girl away from her own home, is it?"

Sally said she didn't know, that she never thought about such things.

Then she danced with Roy Yates' roommate. He asked for a second dance and she promised just one if he would tell her something she wanted to know. "Why did Roy Yates come to father's at-home?" She rather expected that Roy had seen her somewhere and had sought this means of getting acquainted.

"Oh, that was funny," replied Roy's roommate. "We had to penalize Roy in some way. He dropped a lighted cigarette in the waste basket one day and nearly set the house on fire. Something had to be done. So we sent him to those tea parties for—I'm sorry to have to tell you—for punishment. One of the conditions was that he must drink tea clear—he hates it, anyway—and never take cake or candy, which he loves."

"Oh, I'm so glad," cried Sally. "I never want to marry a man who didn't have a sweet tooth."

Roman System of Names.

The system of naming in ancient Rome is well worth a brief description. The Roman, who was a free citizen, had three names, and sometimes several additional ones, but only the three were obligatory. First came the praenomen, which corresponded with our Christian name, or baptismal name, the special designation of the individual; next the gens, or clan, name, which served a great deal more than our family name, since it included several related families all bound together in a group, and last the cognomen, which resembled our surname or family name—Garrett P. Service.

The Modern Way.

Blinkums needs a new motor car. The old bus is about jod. It rattles in the transmission and jumps in the rear. The engine pumps oil like a gusher. The valve taps sound like a battle of snare drums. The top is as handsome as an old umbrella, and he has stopped risking bumps with his tires.

The mortgage is overdue on the house, which needs a roof, and the company is doing pretty slow business this year. His wife is wearing last year's clothes, and his one suit has long forgotten the feel of a nap. They are eating storage eggs and buying butter seconds, because the grocery bill is something fierce.

But Mr. Blinkums needs a new car, and this prophet lays ten to one he gets it.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Each One Has His Work.

Men are not alike and cannot be made so. Probably nothing worth while would be accomplished if they could be, while possibly much might be lost to the world. Every man has his peculiar work to do and should do it the best he can.—Orin.

Shook Hands Gravely.

never missed a Friday, sat on the same chair, always dropped his spoon once or twice and came near dropping his cup and saucer, too, when he was faced with the embarrassing situation of being offered a second piece of cake when he was holding his first piece in his right hand and his teacup in his left.

Some of the students were showing improvement under the tutelage of Mrs. Burton and the kindly hospitality of Professor Burton. Some of them even seemed to be getting so they enjoyed these afternoons. There was the glow of the open fire and candles burning on the mantelpiece when twilight came. Sometimes Sally played and once or twice she had sung a little, something very sedate or classical. Professor Burton mentioned incidents in the classroom in a casual manner that seemed to give the students immense satisfaction.

About half past four Roy Yates arrived. He had been coming for a month, and he, too, always did practically the same thing, though he showed no evident confusion. He bowed and shook hands with formal and pronounced courtesy to Mrs. Burton, shook hands gravely with Professor Burton, bowed to Sally and then took a seat on the window seat—where for the rest of the afternoon he said practically nothing—or at least as little as would be compatible with fairly good breeding.

Professor Burton had taken his quiet manner for one of intense embarrassment. After the day of his appearance he had suggested to his wife that if the boy ever came again she should do her best to "draw him out." Mrs. Burton had tried, but succeeded not. The young man continued to sit on the window seat, to answer in polite short sentences and to take a single cup of tea, clear, and to decline all other refreshments. After this failure the professor had called on Sally.

"If that Roy Yates comes again, do something to him. You can even break our custom at these at-homes and sing something a little light if you think it would liven him up. He isn't in any of my classes. I don't know anything about him."

Sally had made some observation. She said, with a tone of being much impressed, that he wore a Lambda Chi pin. She didn't know any of the Lambda Chis. They were all students with some money and never asked town girls to dance and things, but imported them from home.

The next Friday Roy Yates arrived again, and Sally, following instruc-
