WILLIAM HUMPHREYS JACKSON, "THE MAN."

An Interesting Sketch Upon The Life Story And Achievements of the Republican Candidate For Congress From This District.

Early in the last century there arrived in Baltimore on a sailing vessel from New Orleans a bronze faced man in search of a home. He had lived in North Carolina. With his wife he determined to seek a new home. They went to New Orleans where they embarked on a vessel for Maryland. While on the Gulf of Mexico the wife died. The survivor arrived in Baltimore, discouraged and disconsolate. A farmer in North Carolina, he sought a farm in Maryland. He came to the Eastern Shore and established his home near what is now the site of Delmar, a thriving town on the boundary between Maryland and Delaware.

This North Carolina farmer, who took his home in Maryland, was the great-grandfather of Hon. Wm. H. Jackson, who has twice represented the Eastern Shore district in Congress, and who fell a victim two years ago to the manipulation of the unfair election law that ever disgraced the statute books of any State, a law that disfranchises one-third of the voters of Maryland, including thousands of white men. Mr. Jackson has applied to Congress for justice. His case has not yet been decided. It is not within the power of the voters of the Eastern Shore to hasten a decision in the case, but it is within their power, by electing Mr. Jackson, for he is again a candidate for Congress, to place their stamp of disapproval upon an election law that deprives thousands of poor men of their only weapon of defense, the ballot.

His Early Struggles.

But this is a digression to politics and Mr. Jackson was not always in politics. Not until he had passed middle age was he prevailed upon to become a candidate for office and he then consented reluctantly. His boyhood was one of hardships, for eking out an existence on the farm meant toil from early morning until after sunset for every member of a large family who could work. It was not all the year around ploughing in the bleak spring, cultivation of crops during broiling months of summer, gathering of crops during the fall, the cutting of timber and carload during the winter. There was but little time for acquiring an education other than that which could be gained at home during the long winter evenings and even if there had been time for school attendance, there even would not have been opportunities, for public schools were then unknown and private schools were too distant for daily attendance.

The Jackson children, however, remote as were the schools, braving the hardships of winter, were able to obtain the rudiments of an education.

The hardships and struggles and toil which were the lot of Mr. William H. Jackson in his youth were the lot of other boys in the neighborhood and, indeed, of thousands of other boys on the Eastern Shore and throughout this broad land. Those hardships transformed them into hardy men capable of conquering in life's battles for supremacy.

A Constitution of Iron.

When Mr. Jackson began his life struggle he was endowed with muscles of steel, a constitution of iron, and a determination that would tolerate no failure. His field was narrow, his opportunities were limited, his capital small. Under the soil of the Eastern Shore there are no limitless beds of iron ore from which in other sections men have extracted wealth. No petroleum gushed from the subterranean depths at the touch of the divining rod. No veins of coal underlaid the strata of sand and clay. No virgin forests of oak, pine, spruce and hemlock awaited the axe and the circular saw. Indeed, the Eastern Shoreman's opportunities for acquiring wealth from the depths of the earth and from the soil dwindle into nothingness when compared with those of men in other richly endowed regions, but the average Eastern Shoreman is far more richly endowed than are his fellow men with nature's rarest and most precious gifts, brains and energy.

Mr. Jackson's chief capital when he started his struggle for success was his brains and energy. His father had given him and his brother, E. E. Jackson, a small farm. That farm was his kingdom. It was the foundation of his success. He realized that it was too small and its soil too exhausted to yield more than a livelihood and a scant livelihood at that. He looked for broader opportunities. He added stock raising to his operations. He bought and sold cattle and horses. His income increased with each year. He learned that the Eastern Shore was the real paradise on earth and that life here was far more preferable than anywhere else.

His Brother, Ex-Gov. Jackson.

There was another Jackson who was endowed, like Mr. William H. Jackson, with brains and energy. He was Mr. E. E. Jackson, later Governor of Maryland. His opportunities, too, were limited. He quit the home farm when a youth and after accumulating $500 by operating a threshing machine he ventured into a mercantile enterprise in Delmar in a small way. He prospered. He outgrew the village. He sought a wider field. Salisbury attracted him, but hardly had he established himself in business there before he found himself hampered by a lack of capital. Mr. W. H. Jackson, who BUSINESS HURT BY STEAMBOAT STRIKE.

Differences Seem To Hinge On The Recognition Of The American Association of Masters, Mates And Pilots.

The strike between the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway and the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Railway and the masters and mates of the two companies' steamers grows in intensity and damage to business each day. The number of steamers tied up at Baltimore has grown each day.

One steamer, the Tied Avon, Capt. Samuel Stewart, in from Claiborne and out on schedule at 4.10 o'clock in the afternoon, and the steamer Virginia, Capt. W. F. Veasey, in from the Wicomico River; the Calvert, Captain. Bohannon, from the Potomac and the Middlesex Capt. Mason Gourley from the Rappahannock River added to the list of tied up steamers making a total of 24 boats helpless at their docks out of the active fleet of 26 fine vessels controlled by these companies, sums up the situation Thursday.

Captain Stewart and his crew continue impregnable to the influences brought to bear to induce them to leave their boat.

The Steamer Virginia has been making her regular trips during the week until yesterday, when she did not appear. It was stated in Salisbury Wednesday by some of the officers when the vessel was here that the steamer would continue to make her trips, and the shippers here were anticipating no trouble.

They were singing a different tune yesterday, however, and the merchants, farmers, passenger and all shippers were greatly inconvenienced. In other sections of the Shore, where the strike has been in effect longer, there is great loss to business. Next week, unless some agreement is made, the loss to Salisbury people will be even greater.

Just at this time the farmers are possibly the ones most affected, as this is the time of the year when they buy heavily in fertilizers. The fertilizer dealers sent a strong letter to Capt. Thompson, manager of the two shipping lines Thursday telling of the great loss to their business the strike is causing and asking that something be done to relieve the situation.

The main point of contention seems to be that the steamboat companies will not recognize the union of the captains and mates known as the American Association of Masters, Mates and Pilots. Capt. Thompson gave an ultimatum Thursday in which he said:

"We wish it to be distinctly understood that all questions regarding wages of subordinate officers and other employees, and pay of yourself and other captains, can, in the opinion of the company, be quickly and satisfactorily adjusted between the company and its employees if you and the other captains so desire, and that there are no such questions which are not capable of easy settlement."

"The company cannot, however, submit to having you and other captains of its boats members of an association with your subordinates, nor members of any association to which you owe allegiance superior to that you owe to the company. When in charge of one of this company's boats you must be subject to the command of the company only. We cannot have you subject to the commands of any committee from New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Camden."

MILLINERY OPENING.

Many Neat And Handsome Designs Shown at Salisbury Stores.

This was "opening week" in Salisbury, and the drizzling north easter was hardly noticed by the ladies in their eagerness to view the latest styles and patterns in hats and millinery. The displays were beautiful and caused much favorable comment.

At Powell's Large Store.

At the large department store of R. E. Powell & Co., both of their large rooms were very prettily decorated for the occasion, the color effect being red and green. The millinery parlors were, of course, the centre of attraction. In addition to a large display of trimmed hats a great variety of shirt waists and untrimmed hats were shown. Among the many greatly admired were the following:

A very stylish and pretty hat made of Bordeaux velvet, folds on the edge of brim, with a shined plume on top, trimmed with Bordeaux soft silk ribbon and old rose gibbon with one large old rose on top, Bordeaux gibbon underneath with the two shades of ribbon.

A large green Misses felt hat with a large tucked crown of green tulle silk, trimmed with a large green eque on left side with the same shade of green ribbon.

The long loose coats of Scotch effects, large plaids, small plaids, invisible plaids were greatly admired. Powell's assortment is the best they have ever carried.

In the silk department bright and large plaids hold the boards, while in the woolen dress goods department, novelties and plaids were shown very extensively.

Mrs. Taylor's Attractive Display.

Mrs. G. W. Taylor's store was decorated with millinery goods of every description, showing 100 handsomely trimmed hats. The principal shapes are the "Peter Pan" turban, the "Nell Gwynne" hat, the mushroom shape, the "Rob-Roy" soft hat and the "Vesta Tilly," which are made in large PUBLIC RECITAL OF C. E. CONVENTION MUSIC.

A Rare Treat For The Music-Loving People Of Salisbury Next Friday Night—The Complete Programme.

Next Friday evening, October 12, the people of Salisbury will be afforded the best opportunity for hearing good music that has been their privilege for sometime. On that date a public recital will be given in Uman's Opera House, consisting of all the music to be rendered at the various sessions of the Christian Endeavor Convention. In order to hear all this music it would be necessary to attend every session of the Convention. This would be almost an impossibility. So in order that the town people may hear and appreciate the well deserved efforts of the musical people of Salisbury, this recital has been arranged for their pleasure. Since the early summer a chorus of about sixty ladies and gentlemen have been rehearsing one and two evenings every week. They have been working faithfully and untiringly.

From careful investigations it has been found that the expense of the Convention will be over three hundred dollars. This amount will have to be raised in some way, so it is thought that one way to meet a part of it could come by charging the sum of twenty five cents for this recital. The tickets for the recital will be in the hands of some of the Junior Christian Endeavorers, or can be obtained at the box office of the Opera House. The program as arranged by the Music Committee is as follows:

Chorus—"Damasus Triumphant March," from "Nauman," Costa.

Solo—"The Heavenly Story," Jones, Mrs. E. C. Fulton.

Chorus—"Evening Hymn," Buck.

Solo—"Abide With Me," DeKoven, Mr. William A. Sheppard.

Chorus—"Sanctus" and "Benedictus," from "Messe Salenneville," Gounod.

Solo—"Babylon," Watson, Mrs. Harry G. Hayman.

Male Quartette—"The Lord Is My Shepherd," Koschat, Messrs. C. Edgar Laws, Herman W. Murrell, William A. Sheppard and Frederick P. Adkins.

Chorus—"Recessional," DeKoven.

Chorus—"Jubilant Deo in D," from Hayden's "Creation."

Female Quartette—"O, Jesus, Thou Art Standing," Mrs. J. D. Williams, Mrs. J. D. Wallop, Mrs. E. T. Fowler and Mrs. Gardiner Spring.

Chorus—"Home, Sweet Home," Paine.

Prof. W. T. Dashiell has had charge of the chorus and is much pleased with their work. Mrs. J. D. Wallop and Miss Edna Adkins are the accompanists. The accompaniment for the choruses will be played on a piano and a church organ together. The members of the chorus are:

Soprano—Messdames J. D. Williams, James Lank, E. C. Fulton, E. W. Smith, L. A. Bennett, M. V. Brewington, Harry G. Hayman, Robert Leatherbury, Misses Annie Toadvine, Marian Veasey, Carrie Adkins, Sadie Malore, Minnie Wimbrow, Clara Dashiell, Eva Catlin, Nancy Gordy, Blanche Moore, Emma Day Laura Elliott, Alice Toadvine, Alice Johnson and Katie Todd.

Alto—Messdames Gardiner Spring, E. T. Fowler, James Taylor, Robert Grier, W. S. Gordy, Misses May Serman, Clara Walton and Ada Brewington.

Tenor—Rev. W. S. Phillips, Dr. Gardiner Spring, Messrs. Martindale Vickers, C. Edgar Laws, Charles Wilkins, Elmer H. Walton, Marvin Evans and Herman W. Murrell.

Bass—Rev. T. E. Martindale, D. D., Messrs. Arlie Carey, V. S. Gordy, F. P. Adkins, Jay Williams, George W. Phillips, George Williams, Walter S. Dougherty, Jr., Raymond K. Truitt, William A. Sheppard, C. W. Dickerson and Ralph Grier.

The Ushers Committee has also arranged for the following ushers to be in attendance: Messrs. Charles Bennett, James Lank, Ephur Hayman, Raymond Wimbrow, Ryland Taylor, Thomas Howard, Ailie Shockley, William A. Sheppard, Willis Taylor, Charles Holloway, Ralph Grier, George Lankford, Carl Schuler, Dallas Hearn, William Smith, Randolph Serman, Linwood Price and Charles Wilkins.

The Ushers Committee has also arranged for the following ushers to be in attendance: Messrs. Charles Bennett, James Lank, Ephur Hayman, Raymond Wimbrow, Ryland Taylor, Thomas Howard, Ailie Shockley, William A. Sheppard, Willis Taylor, Charles Holloway, Ralph Grier, George Lankford, Carl Schuler, Dallas Hearn, William Smith, Randolph Serman, Linwood Price and Charles Wilkins.

The windows were handsomely decorated with exclusive pattern hats, one in white felts and one in black velvet hats.

Lowenthal's Pretty Designs.

Among the French hats shown at Lowenthal's was a black Gainsboro, with three large white plumes, held in place by exquisite jet and rhinestone pins. Another was a turban made of Bordeaux velvet, with a finely shaded breast encircling its brim, in the back a finish of brown Maline. A mushroom shaded hat, one of the latest novelties, worn, finished off with a large rose and Paradise Algotris, was another much admired. Many beautiful hats in plaid, and many children's hats in all shapes were shown.

DEDICATION OF NEW ST. PAUL A. M. E. ZION CHURCH.

Grand Jubilee Rally To Be Held Tomorrow In New Structure—Bishop G. W. Clinton To Preside.

The dedication and Grand Jubilee Rally of the new St. Paul African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, on East Church street, will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Appropriate services will be conducted during the day and the week following.

This church was organized in 1884 in Jersey by Rev. A. J. Spencer. Since that time it has had many obstacles to overcome. In 1885 a small building was erected on Water street. Four years ago plans were formed to build a new structure on East Church street, and the present building is the outcome of these plans. The church, when completed, will cost $5,000. It is a two-story structure 88 by 60 feet. Rev. G. Melville Oliver is the pastor. The program for the week follows:

Sunday—6:00 a. m., Prayer and Praise service. 10:00 a. m., Class Meeting. 11:00 a. m., Dedication sermon, Bishop G. W. Clinton, D. D., of Charlotte, N. C. Music by the St. Paul choir. 12:30 p. m., Holy Communion. 2:00 p. m., Sunday School. 3:00 p. m., Great Platform Meeting. Fraternal addresses will be delivered by Rev. J. H. Blake, pastor John Wesley M. E. Church; Rev. H. Moore, pastor Mt. Ellen Baptist Church; address by the Hon. J. C. Daney, LL. D., Recorder of Deeds, Washington, D. C.; music by the John Wesley choir. 6:30 p. m., Varie Christian Endeavor Society; music by V. C. E. Junior choir. 7:00 p. m., preaching, Bishop Alexander Walters, D. D., of Jersey City, N. J.; music by St. Paul choir. 8:00 p. m., Report of the captains of organizations. Rt. Rev. G. W. Clinton, D. D., Chairman of the Dedication Service, Presiding Bishop of the Sixth Episcopal District of the A. M. E. Zion Church; Rev. M. L. Blacklock, P. E., Washington District; Rev. G. Melville Oliver, pastor.

Monday evening—Grand Star "Baton-Mil-lar" concert.

Tuesday evening—Preaching, Rev. S. L. Corrothers, D. D., of Washington.

Wednesday evening—Historical paper, "Rise and Fall of Zion," by H. O. Pinkett, followed by short addresses by R. P. Jones, Thomas P. Wilson, John Adams, Perry Wood and others.

Thursday evening—Great Jubilee and Thanksgiving services. Ten minute addresses will be delivered by P. O'Connell, D. D., P. E., of Salisbury district; Prof. Phineas Gordy, Prin. Salisbury Grammar and Industrial School; Rev. J. R. Barnum, of the A. M. E. Church; Dr. W. E. Maske, Dr. B. J. Bolding and Dr. S. L. Corrothers. Brief remarks will be made by Rev. J. A. Jeffers, Rev. A. J. Spencer, Rev. J. E. Jewett, Rev. C. W. Waters, Rev. Moses Sterling, Rev. J. H. Blake, Rev. H. Moore, Rev. G. J. Hawkins and others. The program will be interspersed with solos, duets, choruses, recitations, etc. Commemorial banquet to follow.

ARE OPPOSED TO VICE AND CRIME.

Colored Mass-Meeting Held Monday Night To Consider Needs Of Their Race—Prepare Petition Against Negro Excursions.

In connection with the recent murder of "Billy" Williams, colored, of Crisfield, on the colored excursion about three weeks ago on the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad returning from Ocean City to Crisfield and of the disgraceful conduct of most of the excursionists, a mass-meeting was held in John Wesley African Methodist Episcopal Church Monday night by the colored people of Salisbury and vicinity, and a number of important resolutions that do credit to their race were passed. "What can be done to improve the condition of the colored people?" was the main question considered. Coming under this head was the conduct in general of the colored people in the streets; the congregating of colored people in large crowds on the streets Saturday nights, and the matter of assisting to a better life the large numbers of colored people who come from the country to the town to live.

The meeting was opened with devotions by the pastor of the church, Rev. J. H. Blake, who was made chairman of the meeting. Addresses were made by the chairman, Dr. P. O'Connell, Frank Leonard, John R. Pinkett, Isaac Burris, William T. Jones, Samuel H. Leonard and Rev. J. A. Jeffers. The general sentiment of the meeting was that crime has no color; the criminal no race; that the wrongdoer should be isolated and dealt with as an enemy to society, and that all the forces of law and order, without regard to race, should be solidly arrayed against vice and crime. Regarding the colored excursions the following petition was prepared, which has since been signed by the colored clergy and the most prominent colored people of the town and will be presented to the officials of the railroad named:

"We, the undersigned colored citizens of Salisbury, Maryland, respectfully submit to the Superintendent and General Passenger Agent of the N. Y. P. & N. R. R. the following petition:

"The excursions for our people run over your road do not furnish the honest toller needed rest and recreation, but are the occasions for the coming together of large crowds of our worst people for the purpose of drinking, gambling and committing deeds of violence and shame. The presence of such crowds of ignorant and irresponsible people in any community is always a menace to its peace and order, and in our case there is the added danger of race friction, which all right-minded colored people are anxious to avoid. The conduct of the excursionists is usually a great offense, being the humiliation of the law-abiding colored people and the exasperation of the white people. The coming of an excursion to a place is almost always followed by bitter feelings between the races.

"We, therefore, most respectfully represent to you that the running of excursions to Salisbury or any other town on the Peninsula can do no good, and will do more harm than we believe your co-operation is willing to do in doing for the money involved. And we most humbly pray you to discontinue the running of excursions for colored people."

YEGGMEN NOW SAFE IN PENITENTIARY.

Jury Takes But 23 Minutes To Decide Guilt Of Safe Crackers, And The Court Sends Them Up For 15 Years.

After remaining in their room only 23 minutes the jury in the case of the four yeggmens on trial here brought in a verdict of guilty. The names of the prisoners are Frank Smith, alias Reese, alias Specs; Robert Taylor, alias John Pennell; James Hawkins and Frank Matthews. The fifth yeggmans, James Avery, was not put on trial, as he pleaded guilty when arraigned before the court. Immediately after receiving the verdict from the jury court was adjourned until Monday morning, and sentence was deferred.

In case a verdict of not guilty had been brought in by the jury and the prisoners freed, two detectives from Wilmington and Postoffice Inspector Maxwell were here with warrants for the arrest of Smith and Taylor for a number of other crimes, such as robbing trains, freight stations and postoffices. The crime for which the men were tried was the blowing open of the safe in the passenger station of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway at Salisbury about 2 o'clock on the morning of May 17.

The job was bungled and no money was taken. Avery was badly wounded and was brought a few hours later with a piece of steel in his back that fitted exactly to the broken door of the safe, to the Peninsula General Hospital. The other men, who would not desert their wounded companion until they saw he would be found by people who would care of his wounds, were captured later in the day in the neighborhood of Laurel, Del.

Although he pleaded guilty when arraigned, Avery would not tell on his friends, and they had to be convicted on circumstantial evidence only.

The prisoners were sentenced Monday by Judge Lloyd to 15 years at hard labor in the Maryland Penitentiary. In passing sentence Judge Lloyd gave the criminals a severe reprimand. He told them that they belonged to that worthless class of society known as tramps, in the first place, and as such were of no profit to a neighborhood, but, on the contrary, were a positive menace to any community, and that, so far as was in his power, he was going to rid this community of their presence and of others of their character.

The yeggmens bore the sentence well, and Monday afternoon they were taken to Baltimore to begin their long sentences. Deputy Sheriff Waller, Chief of Police Disharoon and Detective Bradley, of headquarters, Baltimore, took the men to the penitentiary. Detective Bradley remaining over Sunday for that purpose.

It has developed since the trial that Matthews is a native of Wisconsin county having been born and lived to his twelfth year in Nutters district. He ran away from home at 12 years of age and went to the bad.

A Salisbury Case—Many More Like It In Salisbury.

The following case is but one of many similar occurring daily in Salisbury. It is an easy matter to verify its correctness. Surely you cannot ask for better proof than such conclusive evidence.

H. W. Mumford, formerly printer of the Salisbury Advertiser, residing at 227 Newton street, says: "If I was not perfectly satisfied that Doan's Kidney Pills can be depended upon I never could be induced to recommend the remedy. I have the best of reasons for considering them unequalled. On account of kidney complaint and pains in my back I have often been so bad I could hardly move from a chair and every now and then I was compelled to lay off for a day or two. During this last winter I was unable to do any work for three months. One doctor in Baltimore told me I had an incurable case of kidney complaint. I, of course, became very much alarmed about my condition and kept on trying this, that and the other remedy and it was only through reading a very convincing statement in the newspaper that induced me to go to White & Leonard's Drug Store for a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I took according to directions. My opinion of this remedy and it has been amply proven since it came to my notice is that for backache or kidney trouble in any form, Doan's Kidney Pills are without an equal. I am better now than I have been at any time during the past three years."

Letter to W. J. Post, Salisbury, Md.

Dear Sir: We shall feel obliged if you write us how you came-out on your first few jobs Devoe, as to gallons expected and used.

Take Job A. You made your price, expecting to use 25 gallons Devoe, and used 15. Job B. You expected to use 15 and used 10. And tell us what paint you had used before. Of course, you judge Devoe by what you have used before.

Here's how a few came out.

M. A. Thomas, painter, Lynchburg, Va., writes: My first job with Devoe, I estimated 37 gallons; it took 25. Since then I have used nothing else.

C. B. Edwards, Raleigh, N. C., had used 30 gallons paste paint on his house, and bought 30 gallons Devoe; A. E. Glenn, his painter, said it wouldn't be enough. Had 16 gallons left.

Mavor W. W. Carroll, Monticello, Florida, writes: Painter estimated 35 gallons for my house; took 25 gallons Devoe.

Gilmore & Davis Co., contractors and painters, Tallahassee, Florida, say 2 gallons Devoe spreads as far as 3 of any other paint they know, and covers better.

S. A. Bullard, painter, Sanford, Florida, estimated 50 gallons for Odd Fellows and Masonic Halls; they took 29 Devoe.

Jones & Rodgers, Merkel, Texas, estimated 10 gallons Devoe for Mr. Pratt's house and bought 5 gallons for first coat; it painted two coats.

Erb-Springall Co., San Antonio, Texas, painted two houses same size for D. J. Woodward, one lead and oil, the other Devoe. Devoe cost $12 less for paint and labor.

Tom Massey's painter, Walnut Springs, Texas, estimated for his house 10 gallons Devoe; he had 4 left.

You see how it goes. Even the best painters can't guess little enough at first.

Yours truly
F. W. DEVOE & CO., New York.

THE Salisbury Building & Loan and Banking Association

The Building & Loan Department, with its paid-up capital stock of $14,500.00, makes loans secured by mortgages, to be paid back in weekly installments of 30c, 40c, 50c, $1.00 or $2.00 per week, to suit borrower; and has been doing a popular and successful business since 1897.

The Banking Department was added in 1902 under authority granted by the General Assembly of Maryland of that year, to act as agent for the Association's capital stock for banking purposes, receives money on deposit, makes loans on commercial paper, enters into such business transactions as conservative banks ordinarily do, and earnestly solicits the patronage of its friends and the general public. NOTED CASCADE'S PERIL.

Geologists Fear The Destruction Of Minnehaha Falls—Minneapolis Famed Beauty Spot.

Geologists have learned that Minnehaha falls, the famous beauty spot of Minneapolis which is known to nearly every school boy and girl in the United States through Longfellow's "Hiawatha," is in danger of being destroyed, says a special dispatch from Minneapolis to the New York Times. Eating its way through the sandstone ledge over which the water pours, the stream has now worn the rock almost down to the loose drift of glacial deposit. This means that unless this ledge is propped up and the erosion stopped the falls in their present picturesque form will be gone, with nothing in their place but an ugly rapid.

The recession of Minnehaha has been hastened by the heavy rains of the last few seasons. The falls have been uniformly in good volume, and the wearing action of the water has been very rapid. But the more damaging work has been wrought by the frost and the spray attacking the face of the ledge about midway between the foot and crest of the falls. By this insidious action the ledge has been undermined so that the recess back of the falls is fully thirty feet wide.

When the preparation of the wall of sandstone is complete, which may be within a few years, it is inevitable that the stratum which forms the crest of the falls will topple over and Minnehaha falls will be little more than a memory. This toppling over of the upper stratum has taken place once before in the memory of people now living.

The alarming report of the geologists who have been investigating Minnehaha means a lot to Minneapolis. Once before in her history the city faced trouble over a waterfall. Minneapolis was founded just in time to demonstrate that the Falls of St. Anthony were well fitted for the development of water power. Had the settlement been delayed 100 years there would have been little if anything at Minneapolis to prompt the building up of a great industrial center and the biggest flour mills in the world.

At one time, so the geologists say, the Mississippi plunged over a ledge of rock in the neighborhood of Fort Snelling, fifteen miles below the present location of St. Anthony's falls. The action of the water cut the ledge back until the cataract came to the point where the pioneers built a town and named it St. Anthony. This town became Minneapolis.

St. Anthony's falls continued to recede, and the villagers were distressed, fearing the total obliteration of the water power already partly developed and recognized as the one thing that would create a great city. Work was under way to stop the up stream march of the cataract when in a day the ledge crumbled and left the water swirling and foaming in useless fashion about the wreckage. Every able-bodied man in and near the city was drafted as a helper in the work of preservation, and now the continuing power of the falls is assured by a gigantic but unlabeled apron.

In the case of Minnehaha there is no water power at stake, but the cascade made famous by the poet is one of the strongest assets of Minneapolis. Nine out of ten tourists who stop in Minneapolis even for an hour or two go to the place or apologize to themselves for missing it. Long before Minneapolis had become a big city it was known as Minnehaha Falls.

It is held by those who have interested themselves in the project that the recession can be partially if not permanently stopped by a wall of cement, which would insure that the undermining process will go no farther. The wall could be roughened so that it would appear less artificial or it might even be faced with rock from the ledge, so that to the unknowing there would be little or no evidence of man's handiwork.

Quail Getting Scarce.

Quail starved to death by thousands in the winter of 1904-05, but last winter they had an easy time, except in February and March. From Massachusetts to Indiana the quail are so scarce that restocking has become necessary, says Country Life in America. The birds for this purpose are hard to find. More than 100,000 have been captured in Alabama and the southwest, where they still occur in abundance, and have been shipped north for breeding. Even this supply is quite inadequate and may not last long. The quail is perhaps our most popular game bird, and a market will be found for all that can be produced. Complete success has been had in raising them on a small scale. Why should not some one go into the business on such a scale that he could turn out 100,000 quail per year?

Kept Her Word.

"This," said the school friend who had not seen her for a year, "this is the girl who vowed to me that she never would belong to any man, eh?" "I don't," said she who had been married the matter of some few months or so. "He belongs to me."

NOTES OF THE RAILWAYS.

Coral For Ballast Used By Road Through Florida Keys—Great Engineering Project.

There is a section of the United States where coral is exceedingly popular as ballast for railroads, says the New York Tribune. American railroad builders have used nearly every conceivable material for roadbed, from solid granite to the shifting sands of the great southwestern desert, held together by growing vines. But it remained for the Florida East Coast railway to construct a roadbed out of material which, according to a fashion note, is growing in popularity as jewelry.

The portion of the Florida road upon which it has been found feasible to use coral as ballast is in the extension from Miami to Key West, along the Florida keys. The reason for such use is patent to the student of geology. The keys through which the road runs are composed of it. Coral rock is the only thing obtainable except by long transportation. Many of the islets are a long way from the mainland. But a beautiful and exceedingly substantial roadbed is being constructed out of the coral rock. It is glistening white, like a great band of satin ribbon, on which the little islands, with their luxuriant tropical growth, are strung like a necklace of emerald beads. It is more truly a gem studded band, uniting Key West to the Florida shore.

The road, which was conceived in the mind of Henry M. Flagler as a part of his plan to join Cuba with the United States by an all rail route, is remarkable in more than one particular. Much of the roadbed is being constructed in water thirty or more feet deep. Forests of trees are being used for piling, and tons upon tons of concrete are being dumped on top to form a substantial highway through the ocean. When this unique railway is done the traveler will, in places, be speeding along as freely out of sight of land. He will practically go to sea in a railway train. Nothing will greet his eye at times but the wide expanse of blue waters where the Atlantic and the Gulf meet. The new line will cost from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 to build. It is expected to be completed in three years.

The Western Pacific railroad is perfecting plans to enter California, and when the road is completed it will be one of the greatest railroad engineering feats in modern times, says a San Francisco special dispatch to the Brooklyn Eagle. The engineers in charge have instructions to keep one object in view—the straightest line with the least grade. To accomplish this forty-five tunnels will be bored in eastern California between Oroville and Beckwith pass. Instead of going around mountains the Western Pacific is going through them.

The longest of the tunnels is that at the head of Spring Garden, twelve miles east of Quincy. This is cut under the ridge dividing the north and middle forks of the Feather river. It will be more than 7,000 feet in length when completed. The next longest tunnel on the road will be the one under Beckwith pass. This will be over 4,000 feet in length, and it is being bored at both ends. The third tunnel will probably be the most difficult engineering feat of all, as it will be cut through solid rock for a distance of 1,200 feet. This will be north of Quincy, on Spanish creek.

The Pennsylvania railroad is to equip two freight cabooses on each division of the system with a compressed air whistle, similar to those on passenger trains, as an experiment, and if it works well all freight caboos will be similarly equipped, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. The purpose is to make it possible for a flagman to signal his engineer when he has caught up to his train after having been back to give warning while his train was at a standstill. The caboose whistle will also be used for signaling when a stop is desired.

Arrangements have been completed at New Orleans by a company of the City of Mexico to ship 1,000 railroad ties a day to New Orleans for the use of the various railroads which are building there. The ties will all be of the zapote wood, which is harder than mahogany and which is not affected by water, says the New Orleans Picayune. Dr. Lorenzo Syper, who is representing the company, said that the wood had been tried in Mexico for ties, and it had been found that the minimum life of a tie of this wood was fifty years.

With the work that is going on along the tracks of the New York Central road in installing the electric system comes a new development of the use of the megaphone, says the New York Press. Attached to every gang of laborers who are at work on the tracks is a boy who is armed with a fine megaphone, who watches for the approach of a train. As soon as one gets as near the gang of track men as is safe he shouts a warning to them, and they pile out of the way. These boys are always Italians, and they seem to enjoy hugely the authority that is invested in them with the wide mouthed speaking trumpet.

Be of good courage; that is the main thing.—Thoreau.

SATURDAY, OCT. 6, 1906.

Republican Ticket.

For 60th Congress of the United States:
HON. WILLIAM H. JACKSON,
of Wicomico County.

The Necessity Of Mr. Jackson's Return To Congress.

In another column in this issue will be found a splendid sketch of the life of Hon. William H. Jackson, largely from the personal side,—one which appeals especially to the people of this county in whose midst he has spent nearly his entire life. There is in nearly every community a touch of local pride when one of its own citizens attains prominence in the commercial or political world, but the effect of that prominence is heightened when the start was made amid humble surroundings and untoward circumstances, and the rise has been due to the man's own indomitable pluck and enterprise, combined with unusual business sagacity and common sense.

But there are peculiarly important reasons this fall why Mr. Jackson should be elected, reasons which must appeal to the best thought and highest intelligence of the voters of this District.

In the first place the Representative from the Eastern Shore must be in accord with the National Administration if he is to accomplish anything of any consequence for his constituents. It is a well known fact that under every administration, whether Democratic or Republican, the Representatives who are in sympathy with the views of those who are in power, are the ones, and the ones only, whose influence count in the various executive branches of the government. Of course on the floor of the House, the minority member has,—or is supposed to have—equal privileges, but when it comes to a matter of influence in the various departments, it is only a matter of common sense that the officials of those departments are not going to do much, if anything, for a set of men who are constantly antagonizing their every move.

This was conspicuously shown in the case of the rural routes in this district. At the time of Mr. Jackson's first election, hardly a half dozen routes were in operation in the entire territory covered by this District, and yet today there are probably one hundred and twenty-five,—ninety per cent of which are the direct result of the constant and earnest work of Mr. Jackson during his two terms in Congress. This is a matter of practical importance and benefit to the innumerable number of farmers and others in this part of Maryland and during the past two years practically nothing has been done.

In one instance when Mr. Jackson was urging the establishment of a number of routes during his term, he was informed by the Department officials that with one or two exceptions, he had had more routes established during the time he had been in Washington than any Congressman there, and it was further stated that with a few exceptions, none of the districts had more than fifty or sixty routes in them, and there were not very many even of this kind. The Department pointed out the fact that at that very time there were about one hundred routes established. Nevertheless, Mr. Jackson secured the establishment of the proposed routes, and the number steadily increased up to the time of the expiration of his term.

What is true in the Post Office Department is largely true with the various other departments of the government and it can readily be seen that a Congressman in sympathy with the authorities can perform vastly greater services for his constituents than one who is antagonistic to the administration.

Cuba and the United States.

Once more the stars and stripes are floating over Cuba, and the destiny of the little Southern Island is in the hands of the United States. In all the realms of history as it has unfolded the dealings of governments with each other, there is probably no finer touch of human nature in its loftiest conception than in the case of Cuba as it concerns this country.

Less than ten years ago, the Cuban people were struggling at our very doors for liberty against one of the oldest and proudest kingdoms of the old world, and not until conditions had become absolutely intolerable and the voice of humanity demanded a change, did the American Government intervene for the purpose of putting a stop to Spanish oppression and cruelty. In less than 100 days after the declaration of war, Spain had been utterly crushed in the island, and her imperial power forever driven from the Western Hemisphere.

And yet all this, which meant the liberty and freedom of an alien people, and had been accomplished at the expense of some of the best blood of American civilization and the expenditure of untold millions, was brought about solely in the interest of humanity and with the solemn pledge and promise that not one foot of Cuban territory should be acquired by this country; a promise and pledge which was gloriously and magnificently redeemed when on the first day of May, 1902, the stars and stripes were lowered, and over the island's capital there was unfurled the national ensign of Cuba's independence.

And now when the Palma Government has shown its weakness at a critical time and the United States has been compelled once more to take the reins of government for the preservation of law and order in the island, it is exceptionally gratifying that solemn assurances have once more been given the Cubans that the United States has no intention of acquiring the island. The proclamation of Secretary Taft when he assumed control of the government was a splendid specimen of statesmanship and Americanism as well.

Whatever views we may hold in general as to the advisability of annexing Cuba to this country it must be generally conceded that to do so under the present circumstances would subject this nation to the greatest possible amount of criticism. We have always believed that Cuba's size and proximity to our shores would ultimately render it necessary that she should become a part of the United States, but if the island is ever to become American territory it must be freely and voluntarily on her part, and at a time when the Cubans are themselves in full control of the government.

Not only was the proclamation of the Secretary conciliatory in tone, but his public utterances since that time have been even more so, and he has unquestionably committed this government to the policy of relinquishment of its control just as soon as peace is fully restored in the island.

Secretary Taft for years has been recognized as one of the greatest Americans of his time, and this, his latest achievement, has given not only his own name an added lustre but that of the United States as well.

Editorial Jottings.

Next Tuesday is the last registration day.

If you want to see "something doin'" go to Dock street.

It is Governor Taft in Cuba and Secretary Taft in the United States.

Salisbury was fortunate in escaping the tieup on the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway system, for a while, but unfortunately, when it did strike, it struck with a vengeance, and both the river and railway divisions have now been seriously affected.

Do not fail to get registered next Tuesday, if your name is not now on the books and you are entitled to registration. This will be the last opportunity this year, and every citizen having the necessary qualifications should see that he is in a position to vote this fall.

Not many men can be the presiding officer of a great department of government in one country, and at the same time the executive head of a foreign power; but then this is an age of wonders, and besides the Americans have a decidedly unique way of doing things anyhow.

It is an exceptionally good thing that Pennsylvania is a big state with a bigger treasury, or she might be compelled to take advantage of the Federal Bankrupt Act. Think of it! Thirteen millions for a capitol! But then Pennsylvania statesmanship comes high and besides, from all accounts, the edifice will be one of the most magnificent the world has ever seen.

There will be a "hot old time" in New York this Fall, and what the "Journal" will not do to the people of the Empire State before the campaign is over will be a caution. At the same time, it is a sad commentary upon the democracy of New York that the only man that could be found to head the gubernatorial ticket is the most pronounced exponent of the worst kind of "yellow journalism" which has ever afflicted this country.

Serious Problem for Oystermen.

A serious problem now confronting owners and masters of oyster dredging vessels is the inability to get crews to man the large fleet which every fall enter the oyster dredging business in the Chesapeake Bay.

Since the anti-shanghaiing law was passed, which makes it a misdemeanor to advance wages for clothing &c., shipping agents find it impossible to get men to ship on the boats, and the captains are at a loss what course to take. While the law was gotten up to provide protection against shanghaiing and other abuses that have come to light, it is working a great hardship on the masters who every fall go to Baltimore to fill out their complement of crew.

While there are plenty of men who would gladly ship on a dredgeboat, they belong to an improvident class and are not provided with the necessary outfit, such as oilskins, tools, underclothing, &c., to enable them to stand the wet and cold, which they are subjected to, and to start down the bay without these things would bring on the very suffering that the law was supposed to prevent.

It is stated that about 1,500 vessels are annually engaged in the oyster industry, and from present indications only about one-third would be able to get crews to operate the vessels.

It is also a misdemeanor to get a man drunk or drug him to get him aboard a vessel, or to make him pay a fee to the shipping agent.

A number of the oystermen are figuring on installing gasoline engines on their vessels to work the dredges. These are being very successfully operated by a number of parties.

Among the out-of-town guests present were: Mrs. Henry Rowe, of Norfolk, Va.; Misses Helen Moore and Nora Hargis, of Snow Hill; Miss Nellie Waller and Mr. Gordon Tull, of Princess Anne, and Mr. Lynn Perry, of New York.

COURT STILL IN SESSION.

Three Removed Cases Tried During The Week.

The second week of court opened Monday last, and but three cases have been tried all the week.

The first was that of the suit of John R. Gibbons vs. Scarborough, Onley & Co., and occupied all day Monday and Tuesday. The jury brought in a verdict for Gibbons for $285.00. Messrs Miles & Stanford and Ellegood, Freeny & Wailes were counsel for plaintiff; Mr. Robley D. Jones and Messrs. Toadvin & Bell for defendants.

On Wednesday the Johnson will case, removed from Worcester county, was taken up and occupied two days. Property valued at $30,000 to $40,000 is involved. The caveaters who were the two young daughters of Wilmer M. Johnson, were trying to obtain the property, and the jury decided in their favor and upset the will. The caveaters were represented by Messrs. Gordon Tull, Robert Moss and Ellegood, Freeny & Wailes as counsel, the caveaters by Messrs. Miles & Stanford and Toadvin & Bell.

Yesterday, Friday morning, the slander suit of William A. Sterling against John Gandy was commenced. This was a suit for alleged defamatory words in connection with the office held by Mr. Gandy, which is that of Deputy Sheriff. The case was tried before a jury and was decided last evening in favor of the defendant. Messrs. Melvin and Handy and Mr. Henry J. Waters represent the plaintiff, while the defendant was represented by Mr. Clarence P. Lankford, Messrs. Miles and Stanford, and Messrs. Ellegood, Freeny and Wailes.

The Grand Jury made its report last Saturday and was finally discharged. During the session they examined 80 witnesses, and returned 28 true bills, there being among them, six indictments for illegal selling of liquor in the county.

had come back to Maryland, added his capital to that of his brother. That was the beginning of the firm of Jackson Brothers. Mr. E. E. Jackson thus tells the early history of the firm: "While we were engaged in general merchandising in Salisbury we saw the county contained thousands of acres of pine forest. We bought all the timber offered us. We erected mills and sawed the logs into lumber. Along in the seventies we foresaw that the supply of timber in Wicomico would soon be exhausted. A former Salisbury merchant by the name of Dennis, who had visited Eastern Virginia, called our attention to the vast forest of virgin pine in that section. We made an investigation and then made the venture. We bought timber rights, and in some cases the land outright. We built a railroad through the forests. It was the first railroad ever built to carry logs. We were greatly aided by Wicomico county lumber men who had small mills who transferred their mills to Virginia. We built barges and transported the lumber in rough to Salisbury, Baltimore and Washington, where we had our planing mills. We kept all these mills going until we divided our interests about ten years ago.

"In the meantime I became interested with my brother William and some Pennsylvania capitalists in timber lands in Alabama. We bought altogether 140,000 acres. The tract was 22 miles long and 12 miles at its greatest width. My brother subsequently sold his interests. I have retained my one-third interest."

His Interest in Salisbury.

Mr. William H. Jackson has made Salisbury the center of his lumber enterprise. Through his industry it has been transformed in less than a quarter of a century from a village into a thriving town of over 6,000, and through this one man's enterprise and public spirited devotion it is still growing and will continue to grow as long as his hand is at the helm.

What would Salisbury be without Mr. William H. Jackson? Its lumber interests, which have been so profitable to many farmers and mill men, in almost every instance, secured its original capital through Mr. Jackson's liberality.

During the winters of 1880 and 1890, when there was a distinct failure of crops and business was so generally depressed, Mr. Jackson literally carried lumbermen and people needing help through that disastrous period. He established, for the sole purpose of giving employment to the girls of the town, a large short factory, capable of employing several hundred needy persons. This factory went through an experience of financial disaster by reason of inexperience and bad management and was threatened with a general suspension. The result of its shut-down was so disastrous to the labor that was left unemployed, that Mr. Jackson assumed all the debts of the institution, reorganized it and is now conducting it practically under his own management.

In establishing his large planing mill at Salisbury, Mr. Jackson considered the working people of this community at a large expense of the profit of this business. He can make a saving of $20,000 or $30,000 a year in freight and other charges, by moving his planing mills to the South, but he refuses to do so, saying that he is under obligation to the men and women who have for so many years depended upon this employment to continue it as long as he is able.

Readers Aid After The Fire.

When the town of Salisbury was burned in 1886, people were paralyzed by its utter ruin and the uncertainty of rebuilding. Mr. W. H. Jackson promptly took the initiative, and is responsible, by the number of buildings of high class which he immediately began, for the encouragement and hope which stimulated others to follow his example. At that time a friend asked him if he considered his building investment a profitable one. He said, "No, but if I get 2 or 3 per cent upon the capital invested, I shall be satisfied, and even if I should get nothing, I would do what I am doing. The town must be built up. The people must have employment, and I am more able than others to do it."

Mr. William H. Jackson is the largest owner in Salisbury of renting houses, which he built at the request of his workmen, for which he receives but little rent. In fact this statement was proved by a workingman at a political meeting in the Opera House in Salisbury. He asked permission of the audience to tell what he knew about Mr. Jackson. In the course of his remarks, he said he noted a great many of the working people in the audience, and he challenged any of them to deny that Mr. Jackson ever failed to lend an attentive ear during their period of need and necessity to the relief of their actual wants. He furthermore said that the majority of them lived in Mr. Jackson's houses, and if he was not mistaken, the most of them were, like himself, living there by the kindness of Mr. Jackson, without the necessity of paying rent. In conclusion he said, "Boys, when Mr. Jackson dies, you and I will have to seriously consider the necessity of changing our way of living."

—In the South's storm-swept territory is Mobile, Ala., where Ex-Gov. E. E. Jackson has extensive interests. He is one of the largest stockholders and vice-president of the Mobile, Jackson and Kansas City Railroad, which has its terminus in Mobile, and he is interested in the lumber business in the territory about this Southern city. Mr. A. F. Benjamin, of Salisbury, is also engaged in the lumber business at Laurel, Miss., a town in the trouble zone. The reports received in Salisbury indicate that the loss to these gentlemen is very little, if anything.

—Boat load Dry Goods and Shoes. Business excellent; busy night and day. Dulany & Sons, Fruitland.

Letter Of Acceptance.

Mr. G. T. Bell, Secretary, and others.

Gentlemen:—Being unsought and coming as a surprise, yet I am deeply sensible of the honor conferred on me by the Prohibitionists of the First District of Maryland in naming me as their candidate for Congress.

While it is generally understood that a nominee of the Prohibition party means one opposed to licensing the liquor traffic for beverage purposes there are special reasons for sending to the next Congress from this district one pledged to vote, work for and try to secure a majority of the Congress to oppose SELLING FEDERAL TAX RECEIPTS AND INTERSTATE COMMERCE OF INTOXICANTS IN PROHIBITION TERRITORY.

By far the larger part of this shore, which comprises the First District, in area as well as number of voters, has declared against and outlawed the license system in intoxicants, yet though the law of the State is against it, the government through its treasury department, will sell a tax receipt or license to any applicant—man or woman—who will pay $25.00 for it, thus encouraging outlaws to violate our State law.

Again, by interstate commerce permission a license community of another State may in fact, and otherwise, flood our Prohibition territory with intoxicants and the State is powerless to prevent it.

This is a vital matter to our district that concerns all temperance, Anti-Saloon and Prohibition people and the opportunity is presented of strengthening the hold we already have. With such federal legislation secured, short work will be made of getting the Maryland Legislature to pass laws prohibiting Baltimore and other license parts of the State from shipping into local option territory, alcoholic liquor for beverage purposes.

Pledged to the support of these issues, if elected, I submit my candidacy to the voters of this district.

The Bartered Bridegroom.

There are held here many "confidential" weddings, as they are called when the ceremony is kept unusually quiet. But sometimes they are too confidential to please the relatives of the parties. The coroner of prospective brides under such circumstances is a proceeding well authenticated in fact and fiction. A kidnapped bridegroom, however, is unusual, though he happened at St. George's not long ago. He was a gentleman of position, and he wished to marry a lady who had nursed him through an illness. There was no cause or just impediment save social rank. The gentleman was determined, and the lady seconded his plans admirably. But the day and the details leaked out, and before the time fixed the bridegroom's uncle relatives deployed strategically through Maddox street and surrounded the church. He drove up in a hansom cab. With his eyes fixed on the expectant bride, he prepared to alight. An athletic uncle and a brother sprang forward, thrust him back, with a "Glad to meet you, old fellow" manner that deceived the cabman, who obeyed the quick direction he heard and drove the three away. The lady, with tears in her eyes, went into the vestry. "There will be no wedding," she said. "They've run away with him." And that was the last St. George's heard of them.—London Mail.

Bowser Gets Very Nervous

Physician Tells Him He Has Appendicitis, and He Asks Wife to Visit His Grave.

CALLS ON THE DRUGGIST

(Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastment.)

MR. BOWSER didn't seem to enjoy his breakfast the other morning, and Mrs. Bowser, who took mental note of the fact, made up her mind that he should have a good dinner to make even. Knowing how fond he was of an old-fashioned boiled dinner, she ordered corned beef, potatoes, carrots, cabbage and parsnips. The dinner was splendid as to quantity and quality, and it was with considerable pride that she announced the fact when he arrived home at 6 o'clock.

"A boiled dinner, eh?" he replied. "That's very nice of you, I'm sure; but, unfortunately for me, I cannot partake of it."

"But why?"

"I got a little warning today that I think best to heed."

"What sort of warning?"

"Dr. Macready was in the office on some business, and, hearing me utter an involuntary groan as I rose up, he began to question me. It wasn't five minutes before he announced that I would have to be very careful or fall a victim to appendicitis. He said I had all the symptoms of it."

"I don't believe any such talk, Mr. Bowser. I haven't heard you groan, involuntarily or otherwise, for a year. Did he charge you a fee for telling you this?"

"I'M TOO SPIRITUELLE TO STAND MUCH PAIN."

"He made no charge, but naturally—"

"Naturally, you went and banded him over at least $5, while I am in need of a dozen different little things. You have no more cause to be afraid of appendicitis than I have of the Indian plague. Why do you let people work like this?"

Knew It For Months.

"Softly, now—softly," he said as he led the way to the dining room instead of shouting "Woman!" at her. "Mrs. Bowser, I cannot be classed as an alarmist. Thousands of things have ailed me, and I have never said a word to you about them. I wasn't going to say a thing in this case; but, being put on a diet by the doctor, I had to make some explanations. I have known for months and months that the appendicitis was after me. I have figured that when it overtook me at last I would make a sneak for the hospital and have the operation performed before you knew anything about it. That is the way with me. I do my own worrying and planning."

"Well, what symptoms have you felt?" she asked.

"Pains in the back, roaring in the head, wakefulness and all that. There are days when black specks dance before my eyes. The other morning when I got up my teeth seemed too long."

"And this ass of a doctor made you believe those were symptoms of appendicitis?"

"I knew they were before he confirmed me. I have been saved by just one week."

"How?"

"I'm going to follow the directions given me by the doctor."

"Did he tell you to sleep with your feet out of bed and breakfast, dine and sup on catnip?"

"No, ma'am, he didn't. He told me to live on milk and water for the next four days. That boiled dinner smelt to heaven, but I can't touch a mouthful of it. It's either milk and water or death for me."

"Look here, now," she said, determined on one last argument. "I have known of as many as five cases of appendicitis right around here, and not one of them had the symptoms you mention. All that ails you is a little biliousness or rheumatism."

"I have got my warning, my dear."

"But you haven't got it from our own doctor."

"One doctor is the same as another when it's a case as serious as this. I'm as hungry as a wolf, but don't tempt me. One full meal would mean the ambulance and the hospital. I might possibly come out alive, but the chances are only one in a hundred. I seem to be fat and solid, Mrs. Bowser, but as a matter of fact I am too spirituelle to stand much pain."

Mrs. Bowser had to laugh. She would have had to had he been standing over her with an ax. She led the way upstairs and was for dropping the subject, but Mr. Bowser hadn't had his say yet.

"In case this milk and water diet doesn't stave off appendicitis and the results are fatal you will find all my business papers in the safe," he observed as he walked up and down. "Very well."

May Marry If She Wishes.
"You will not be forced to marry to keep a roof over your head."

"No."

"Naturally I would rather you would not marry at all, but I am not going to exact any promise. I do wish, however, that you would visit my grave once in a while. I shan't know it, of course, but it will help you not to forget me."

"I shall visit it once in two weeks during good weather," she replied as she saw his lip trembling.

"That is all I ask. The doctor assured me that milk and water would stave off the impending danger, but I have a presentiment, Mrs. Bowser—a presentiment that appendicitis will come and terminate fatally."

"And I have a presentiment that I shall some day meet that fool of a doctor and tell him what I think of him. It's just biliousness that ails you, and a dose or two of calomel would set you to singing. There are yellow streaks under your eyes, and those mean biliousness and nothing else."

Mr. Bowser shook his head and heaved a sigh that finally terminated in a groan and brought the cat out from under the piano. Then he started down the hall and put on his hat.

"Are you going out?" was asked.

"I'm going after a quart of milk. I may wake up in the night and want a drink. I may also talk with the druggist if he isn't busy. I am sure he would help you about the funeral arrangements."

Druggist Diagnoses Case.

Mrs. Bowser was glad to have him go. She knew the druggist was a blunt spoken man and would diagnose the case pretty speedily. She therefore ran into a neighbor's for an hour. Mr. Bowser made his way to the druggist's, and, not finding him rushed, he began:

"Doc, take a careful look at my face, will you?"

"Cert. Thinking of trading it off for a new one?"

"Does my phiz tell you anything?"

"Not much. It never did. The yellow streaks under your eyes show that you are bilious."

"What do pains in the back signify?"

"Rheumatism, generally."

"And roaring in the head?"

"A cold."

"And when your teeth seem too long?"

"A little neuralgia in the jaws. Why, what do you think ails you?"

"I was told by a doctor this morning that those symptoms heralded an attack of appendicitis."

"Herald your grandmother! Somebody has been making a fool of you again. You may have appendicitis some day, but it won't come on that way. What did the so called doctor tell you to do?"

"Drink milk and water," sighed Mr. Bowser.

"You ought to be kept on that diet for the rest of your natural life. Didn't Mrs. Bowser say the fellow was a hum bug?"

"Well—er—you know—"

Tells Him to Go Eat.
"Of course she did, and of course he is. Go home and eat a hearty dinner. Eat as much as you want tomorrow, and then take some calomel. Say, man, if you hadn't the wife you have some body would get the socks off your feet."

Mr. Bowser didn't jaw back. He was too elated. Ten minutes later the cook was heaping the remains of that boiled dinner on the table, and he was eating like a Michigan lumberman. Mrs. Bowser came home and surprised him at it.

"Well, you saw the druggist?" she queried as he refilled his plate.

"The druggist? What about?"

"About your threatened appendicitis."

"I hadn't heard anything about being threatened."

"But you gave up $5 to a fool of a doctor this morning to tell you to live on a milk and water diet for the next four days."

"My dear woman," said Mr. Bowser between huge bites, "please go away. You are laboring under a hallucination. You have somehow got me mixed up with your Uncle Joe or your brother Sam. Go away while I get a few mouthfuls to eat."

A Great Gun

By GRETCHEN GRAYDON

Copyright, 1906, by Homer Sprague

"Oh, yes! Billy has it again, and this time very bad," Mrs. Wheat said, nodding across at her son. "But you won't wonder at it when you hear the new sweetheart's name—Sarah-Susan—Miss Sarah-Susan Gunn."

Billy turned all colors. Connor, his claim, laughed explosively and said as soon as he could speak: "Billy, I call that positively immoral! You had better be courting twins. How ever will you fix it? You may propose to Susan and be rejected or accepted by Sally. You may even be married wrong. Think, too, of being always a mere gunner's mate."

"Shut up!" Billy interjected, his face scarlet, but grinning in spite of himself. "Wait till you've seen her at least. Mother makes fun of her names because she can't find fault with her any way else. And Sue isn't to blame. She didn't name herself or choose the family she had to be born in."

"No, but you do choose the family you marry into," Mrs. Wheat cooed. She was less than twenty years older than Billy and still a very pretty and very lively woman.

Connors thought her stunning. So did his Uncle Tim. Harking back suddenly in his mind to something a year old, he whistled aloud and asked abruptly: "Say, Mammy Wheat, is it the same way with Tim? Did you turn him down because you wouldn't be Mrs. O'Toole?"

It was mammy's turn to blush. The blush made her younger and prettier than ever. "Who says I had the chance to be Mrs. O'Toole?" she began, but stopped as both the youngsters growled derision and unbelief.

"Tim was the worst ever," Connors said decidedly; "couldn't eat or sleep; used to hang out of the windows all 'prom,' week just to stare up the street toward where you were staying; in the greatest fidget, too, to get his place fixed up new. And then, after he'd walked about with you one teeny half hour, he quit—cut out everything except my allowance and scooted across the pond with just half a steamer kit. Don't say you don't know why, mammy! It won't do any good—not with us two. We know. He wanted—because you sent him. Poor old Tim! You have a heap on your conscience, mammy! How could you do it?"

"Don't you understand, Larry, dear?" mammy said, still blushing. "It was all on your account. I couldn't bear to supplant you." Her eyes laughed, but Larry Connors saw under the laughter.

"If that was your game you went blind," he said. "Don't you see, Tim is so near the years of indiscretion they begin at forty-five—he'll sure fall victim somehow somewhere. You ought to have taken him, mammy. Then, indeed, my future would have been secure."

"Where is he? Have you heard from him lately?" mammy asked, her eyes suddenly downcast.

Larry shook his head. "He was tearing around toward the midnight sun—thought maybe the icebergs would remind him of you," he said. "But that was six months back—long enough for him to be buried or married."

"He always talked of Ireland," mammy began, sighing faintly.

"But he didn't care for it unless you were there to see it with him," Larry interrupted. "I think I'll cable him to come back right away. Maybe he will be ready to sacrifice himself for your whim—carry off the adorable Gunn and so save Billy."

"I had rather—almost—she had Billy," mammy said inconsequently. "Tim is a dear, but—Hon. Mrs. Timothy O'Toole! Dear me, I could cry when I think of it! Why wasn't he born something else?"

"Smith, Jones, Brown or Robinson," Larry commented.

Mrs. Wheat got up and walked quickly away.

Billy went to the window. Larry, staring after the vanishing lady, was amazed to see her head droop and her bosom swell. Clearly she was on the point of sobbing. He followed her softly and said as she flung herself on a couch: "Tell me, mammy! You're playing a game. What is it?"

"How did you guess?" mammy said, speaking very low, with her finger on her lip. "You mustn't ever let Billy guess it," she said. "He doesn't know about our money. It came to me from my uncle, the dearest, straitlaced soul. He thought second marriages sinful—spiritual blemish, he called them. So I kept my fortune, which will be Billy's fortune, on condition of remaining always a widow. Now you see why I had to send Tim away."

"As if he cared for your money! And he'd never let Billy lose," Larry said exultantly. But he bent his head reverently to kiss mammy's hand as he added: "But, oh, you are a brick! You made up all this about the name to blind that blessed boy?"

"I had to—there wasn't anything else. Tim was such a gentleman," Mrs. Wheat said, smothering a sob. "You won't tell him, Larry, but all this teasing over his sweetheart's name is just to keep him from suspecting. I don't really oppose him, although I think he is making a mistake. He has promised to wait a year—long enough to find it out for himself."

"What's wrong with her?" Larry asked.

"Everything, but mostly that she's too old and wise and hard," Mrs. Wheat said comprehensively. "I mean that she was born too old; actually they are but a month apart. She is much too clever to care really for my dear, big, blundering, pretty boy, but she cares a whole lot for what he can give her. You ought to see her eying my pearls. I could forgive her a little if she had no pearls of her own. To be rich and grasping is so much worse than to yearn for what one never has had. I could break up the match tomorrow by letting her know I hold the purse strings, but that would lose me my boy, and he's everything."

"She shan't have him, and you shan't lose him, Listen! I've got an idea," Larry said.

Mammy bent toward him, her brimming eyes shining. They talked in whispers for two minutes, then Larry rushed away, headed for the telegraph office.

Exactly three weeks later Mammy Wheat, with Larry in attendance, went up to the city upon a steamer day. The pair got back late to Fernbrook and slipped into the hotel by the side entrance wholly unseen. But soon there was inscribed upon the register in Larry's most sprawling hand, "Mr. and Mrs. F. T. O'Toole-Merrion, Mount Merrion, County Meath, Ireland." And underneath, in Greek letters, "They've found it."

"What's all that about?" Billy said, coming up and leaning over Larry's shoulder.

Larry laid hold on him, saying, "Get your Gunn and come see." As he dragged Billy toward the main stairway he added: "Don't you get heart failure. You'll come out all right, if only you live through it."

Sarah-Susan, in wait for Billy, was easily carried along. As the three entered mammy's private parlor they saw her standing beside a tall, handsome fellow, baldish and grayish, to be sure, but ruddy and with the happiest merry eyes. Shamelessly he put his arms around mammy, not even giving Billy a finger until he had said: "I had to have her, even if it meant changin' me name and nation, son. Sure, life was no life without her. Wish me joy, lad, of me new home and a wife in it."

"I do," Billy said heartily, wringing the tardy hand; Mammy detached herself from Tim and flung herself upon Billy's breast, half sobbing, half laughing out: "Wait, son, until you know! Are you willing to be poor to make me happy?"

"Sure," Billy said, giving her a hug. Sarah-Susan bridled. Larry in his most innocent fashion began to explain. Before he had said fifty words she wheeled upon mammy:

"As you have beggared your son, madam, for your whim, understand I refuse to countenance your duplicity. I agree with your late uncle. Such conduct is positively immoral."

As she spoke she had been stripping herself of Billy's ring, a simple affair of thready gold with a diamond spark on it. But she quite forgot the diamond pendant at her throat, the circle of brilliants about her arm, not to name many more jewels resting upon her dressing table. Majestically she tossed the ring to Billy—poor crestfallen Billy, who stood at his mother's side.

But when Mrs. O'Toole-Merrion drew his head to her breast and patted it as she had done when he was three years old, he lifted it bravely and smiled up at her, saying: "It hurts, mammy, but I'm not going to cry. And I'm not going to starve either. Tim will see to that."

"Sure," Tim said, hugging his new son. Mammy and Larry considerably looked away.

Berlin's Economy Flats.

In a good part of Berlin—that is, in one of the most desirable locations—one can get a flat for anything from $20 to $50 a month that could not be had in New York for less than $150 if it could be found at all. I have such an apartment in mind, and it is only one among thousands in Berlin. It is on the third floor, and German flathouses are seldom more than four or six stories high. It does not lie in a straight, unbecomingly line along a narrow, dark hallway, but is built around a big square entrance that might be used for a reception room if it were needed. The rooms are enormous and each has outside windows. The bathroom is as large as an ordinary "inside" bedroom, as we know bedrooms, and it is fitted up with every modern luxury conceivable, including a splendid shower. The kitchen is too nice to be true, says a writer in Leslie's Weekly. It is lined halfway up with beautiful blue and white tiles. It has a white tile floor, and its gas range is made of blue and white tile to match the walls. It has a blue and white tile refrigerator built in the wall, and there are rows of white porcelain jars upon white tile shelves to keep things in. It would be absolutely impossible for such a kitchen to be dirty.

ROYAL Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Healthful cream of tartar, derived solely from grapes, refined to absolute purity, is the active principle of every pound of Royal Baking Powder.

Hence it is that Royal Baking Powder renders the food remarkable both for its fine flavor and healthfulness.

No alum, no phosphate—which are the principal elements of the so-called cheap baking powders—and which are derived from bones, rock and sulphuric acid.

On Thursday he left Williamstown N. C. in an automobile for several miles ride, and with two others in the car, was going about thirty miles an hour, when suddenly one of the rear wheels struck a stump and Mr. Robinson, who was alone on the rear seat, was thrown several feet and picked up unconscious. He remained unconscious for nineteen hours. He had two physicians in attendance and all was done that could be to alleviate his sufferings. On Monday morning he started home, a distance of more than three hundred miles. He reached home from Laurel Tuesday afternoon. A thorough examination by his physician revealed the fact that his shoulder blade and three ribs were broken. It required great courage as well as strong powers of endurance, to make such a long trip in such a condition. He has suffered a great deal, but is now slightly improved.

From School Teacher To Governor.

In Samuel Whitaker Pennypacker, Governor of Pennsylvania, the International Policeholders' Committee has secured a veteran campaigner to help in its fight for clean management in the New York and Mutual Life Insurance Companies. Governor Pennypacker began his fighting in the Civil War and has kept it up ever since, reaching the top of State politics and having no little influence in national affairs. From school teacher in the little town of Mont Clare, Pa., he has steadily won his way up the ladder. When the Civil War broke out he became a volunteer in the Union forces. Here he learned the tactics of campaigns; here he obtained his first knowledge of the great contest between powerful forces. This very training assisted him greatly during the struggle in the political fields in which he has figured so prominently.

SAMUEL WHITAKER PENNYPACKER recently and successfully. After leaving the army with a most credible record, young Pennypacker commenced the study of law in the University of Pennsylvania, where he distinguished himself in the intellectual contests between the cleverest of the country's students. He graduated in 1866 and two years later became the President of the Law Academy. His fight for position in the arena of law made him a member of the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States in 1887 and in 1889 won him a judgeship in the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia. He was elected for a term of ten years to this position and in 1899 was re-elected for a similar term. He was President of the Court of Common Pleas No. 2 at the time of his nomination for the Governorship of Pennsylvania.

"The One Woman."

"The One Woman," a new play by ex-Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr. was given Saturday night in Ulman's Opera House before a large and very appreciative audience. While quite a number found criticism with the play and the radical position it took with regard to Socialism, all united in giving the utmost praise to the art of every actor. There was not a weak character in the whole representation. The audience was lavish with its applause and Mr. Dixon was called at the end of the third act. He responded in a neat and graceful speech, saying that he did not need to make an extended talk, as he had been speaking all the evening to those present through each actor, and asking pardon if he had painted some of the characters too boldly, as he had done so in order to teach a lesson.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MR. ALBERT J. BENJAMIN.

Was Superintendent of B., C. & A. Ry. and M., D. & V. Ry. and One of the Most Highly Respected Citizens of Salisbury.

Mr. Albert Jefferson Benjamin, one of the most prominent and highly respected citizens of Salisbury and superintendent of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway and Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Railway Companies, died Thursday morning shortly after 6 o'clock of heart failure, at his home on Park avenue.

He had been confined to his room with fever and rheumatism since Saturday. Up to Wednesday night his condition had been all that could be expected, and no great alarm was felt as to the ultimate result of his illness. In the early hours of Thursday morning, however, heart trouble began and breathing became difficult. From then on to 6 o'clock he gradually became worse until the end.

About 20 years ago, while Mr. Benjamin was employed as the station master of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at Chester, Pa., the boiler of a locomotive exploded and demolished the station building. Mr. Benjamin, who was standing between the engine and the building, was knocked to the ground, the bricks and timbers falling on and about him. He was badly bruised and crushed and scalded by the steam. His heart was also pushed out of position and weakened, and he never fully recovered from the injuries. His life was spared of, and but for his wonderful vitality, he would not have pulled through the ordeal.

Born at Lancaster, Pa., July 12, 1843, Mr. Benjamin removed to Cecil county, Md., where he spent his youth. Taking up the study of telegraphy in his younger days, his whole life was spent in railroad service, and he built up a wide reputation for careful and progressive management. He was an old-time Civil War telegraph operator, and assumed his first position in 1862 as war telegraph operator at the Old Wooden Bridge station, over the Susquehanna river.

Came To Salisbury In 1867.

In 1867 he was made the Salisbury agent of the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad. The next year he married Miss Aline Nalby, of Philadelphia, who survives. Remaining in Salisbury for nearly 30 years, he was transferred to Georgetown, Del., in 1888, and made assistant to the superintendent of the Maryland, Virginia and Delaware Railroad. The following year he went to Baltimore in the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and was shortly after placed in charge of the railroad's station at Chester, Pa.

He returned to Salisbury in 1888, and was made superintendent of the Baltimore and Eastern Shore Railroad, which had just purchased the rights of the old Wicomico and Pocomoke Railroad. This line at that time ran only from Salisbury to Ocean City. Together with Gen. Joseph B. Seth, of Eastern, he had charge of extending the line to Claiborne to connect with Baltimore.

Hardly had this line been completed when the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company was formed and embraced Mr. Benjamin's road. He continued with the new company as superintendent of the railroad division, and has been in charge ever since. Two years ago the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic assumed control of the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Railway, and Mr. Benjamin was placed in charge of the management of both lines. Under his care the business of the two corporations has steadily increased each year.

Had Large Business Interests.

Mr. Benjamin was a man of wide influence, and was identified with every movement of progress in the city for the last 25 years. A number of large enterprises and conveniences of Salisbury, in a large measure, owe their existence to him. He was connected with business and other interests, as follows:

Superintendent and division freight and passenger agent of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway.

Superintendent and division freight and passenger agent of the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Railway.

President and director of the Salisbury Electric Light, Heat and Power Company.

Vice-president and director of the Salisbury Water Company.

Vice-president and director of the People's National Bank of Salisbury.

Director and examiner of the Wicomico Building and Loan Association of Salisbury.

Vice-president and director of the Eastern Light and Fuel Company, of Eastern.

Director of the Shipuxent Bridge Company.

Director of the new Ocean City Steel Pier Company.

Member of the building commission which erected the new high school building of Salisbury.

A member of the first commission to look into the paving of the streets of Salisbury.

Member of the Board of Election Supervisors for Wicomico county.

Elder and clerk of the sessions, and for 40 years a member of the choir in the Wicomico Presbyterian Church. For a number of years it had been his custom to give the members of the choir and their friends an annual outing to Claiborne.

Director and treasurer in the board of the Home for the Aged, in Salisbury.

He was former president and was largely

IN JAIL ON THE CHARGE OF MURDER.

Salisbury Boy Implicated In The Murder Of Capt. Joseph Hilton, Of Pleasantville, N. J., On The Elk River Monday.

Charged with the murder of Capt. Joseph Hilton, of Pleasantville, N. J., Robert Ryall, 20 years old, of Salisbury, and Thomas Wilcraft, 35 years old, of Philadelphia, were placed in the Elkton Jail Monday night. The crime was committed the same afternoon on the Elk river about three miles North of Turkey Point.

The three men were aboard the sloop Golden Light, bound from Atlantic City to Baltimore, where they expected to get a cargo of oysters. The men under arrest claim that the captain had been drinking heavily for several days past, and was under the influence of liquor when they passed through the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal.

According to the statements made by the prisoners, everything went along pleasantly until about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when Captain Hilton accused Ryall of stealing some of his money. Ryall denied having taken anything belonging to him, whereupon the Captain struck the young man. The quarrel occurred in the cabin. Being unable to cope with the Captain, Ryall ran out on deck, and was pursued by his assailant. Wilcraft at this juncture ran in to stop the quarrel, and the Captain drew a knife on him.

In the meantime Ryall jumped over board and started to swim ashore. In the fight between Captain Hilton and Wilcraft several blows were struck. Wilcraft was stabbed in the left breast, about to inches over the heart. He grabbed a piece of wood and struck Hilton on the head, knocking him overboard.

Wilcraft ran the sloop aground after the deed had been committed, and he and Ryall walked to North East, where they gave themselves up to the authorities.

At the jail Wilcraft at first refused to tell anything about the crime, but later talked quite freely. He said he had been in Captain Hilton's employ only a few days, but had known him for sometime. The murdered Captain was about 35 years of age, and leaves a wife and several children.

The body of Capt. Hilton was recovered Wednesday afternoon by William Arrants and Joseph McKinney. Its condition would lead to the assumption that life was extinct before it went into the water. The skull was crushed in, evidently the result of a heavy blow from a club or iron bar. Captain Hilton's right arm was raised above his head, as though warding off a blow. The left trousers pocket was turned inside out, and as the captain was a left-handed man the supposition is that this is the pocket in which he carried his money. A search of his person showed that the $200 which the Captain had when he left home Sunday was gone, nothing of value being found.

When found, his shoes were missing and his coat off. The theory advanced in Elkton is that the captain was asleep on deck when he was attacked, but before he was killed he made a hard fight. The boat, from stem to stern, was bespattered with blood and the cabin disarranged. Articles in the cabin, as well as the floor, gave evidence of a struggle. The rail near the wheel had blood marks upon it showing that the body had gone over the stern at that point.

Instrumental in building the Salisbury Telephone Company, afterward purchased by the Diamond State Telephone Company.

Large owner of Salisbury and Washington, D. C., real estate, leaving in all an estate of more than $80,000.

A widow and three children survive. The children are: Mr. Alan F. Benjamin, formerly editor of The Courier, but now engaged in the lumber business at Laurel, Miss.; Mrs. Hugh J. Phillips, of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. J. Douglass Wallop, of Salisbury. There are seven grand-children, as follows: Mr. Howard W. Phillips, Master Hugh J. Phillips, Jr., Master Albert B. Phillips, Miss Aline Wallop, Master J. Douglass Wallop, Jr., Master Alan F. Benjamin, Jr., and Master James Leonard Benjamin.

Three brothers and one sister also survive. Mr. Allison Benjamin, of Bayview, Md.; Mr. Oscar Benjamin, of Baltimore; Mr. George Benjamin, of Wilmington, and Mrs. George Lynch, of Bayview, Md.

Funeral Sunday Afternoon.

Funeral services will be conducted at three o'clock Sunday afternoon in Wicomico Presbyterian Church, Rev. S. W. Reigart, D. D., pastor emeritus of the Church, and Rev. T. E. Martindale, D. D., pastor of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, officiating. The following will be the active pallbearers: Messrs. John D. Williams, Walter B. Miller, Vaughn S. Gandy, Charles R. Disharoon, George E. Sharpley and William M. Cooper. The honorary pallbearers will be composed of the session of the Wicomico Presbyterian Church, which is composed of Dr. F. M. McKinney, Dr. H. Laird Todd, Capt. McKim Porter, Messrs. L. W. Gandy, John T. Ellis and Thomas Morris; Gen. Joseph B. Seth and Mayor Martin M. Higgins, of Eastern, Mr. Louis Dahms, of Philadelphia; Capt. Willard Thompson, Messrs. T. A. Joyner, T. Murdock and W. L. Rothstein, of Baltimore; Messrs. A. A. Gillis, M. V. Brwington, Walter C. Humphreys, Leonard Wallis, W. U. Polk and R. D. Grier, of this city.

The members of the choir will attend in a body, and music will be furnished by a quartette composed of Mrs. E. C. Fulton, Miss Clara Walton, Mr. W. T. Dashiell and Mr. F. P. Adkins. Miss Sallie Tondyne will preside at the organ. The church will be draped in mourning. Interment will be in the yard of the Wicomico Presbyterian Church.

WILLIAM H. JACKSON. THE SELF-MADE MAN.

Always Cared For Widows And Orphans Of His Workmen And To Everyone Whom He Knew Suffered Actual Want.

Mr. W. H. Jackson, the Republican candidate for Congress in the First district, is not only a self-made man, but he has aided others to attain success. If he had been content to pursue the even tenor of his way, without giving a thought to others, as most men would have done, he would have been a man of far greater success. But to accumulate property has not been the mainspring of his life. He has shared his opportunities with others. All of his brothers were admitted to the partnership in the firm of Jackson Brothers. They prospered as the firm prospered. There were others, including many lumbermen and sawmill owners of the Eastern Shore, who linked their business lives with those of the Jacksons and have thrived.

It is an odd trait in human nature that as soon as a man climbs the rungs of the ladder to success there are other men less fortunate who are anxious to pull him down. They are nonconstructive statesmen who can tear down, but who cannot build up. They could be employed at $1 a day to tear down a building, but what would be the pay of the architect, of the bricklayers, of the carpenters and of the decorators employed to rebuild the house? Mr. Jackson has been the target for the arrows of the envious and the jealous. These arrows are puny; are aimed at Mr. Jackson by puny men, and will fall short of their mark.

Mr. Jackson has performed his life work undisturbed and unmoved by the arrows of the envious. His religion, which is that of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has always enjoyed a generous and liberal support from him. In addition to subscribing a large sum to the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, of Salisbury, he has rendered large assistance to nearly all Methodist Episcopal churches of Wicomico county and to many on the Shore of other denominations.

Mr. Jackson's gratuities have always assumed an unostentatious form, in which he exemplifies the injunction that the right hand should be in ignorance of the actions of the left hand. The only ostentatious gift that he has ever made is that of the Peninsula General Hospital in Salisbury, known as the "Jackson Memorial." His ostentation, even in this point, extends no further than attaching his name to one building of this most valuable charity. As a member of the board of directors, he is absolutely silent and refuses to take the initiative in anything that has for its purpose the conduct of this work.

Mr. Jackson has supported many of the widows of his work men for years, or until their families were large enough to become self dependent, and has furnished homes and assistance during times of financial depression and climate distress to everyone whom he knew suffered actual want.

In all of his relations with the renters of houses in Salisbury, Mr. Jackson has never issued a writ of distraint, or introduced a suit of action against a delinquent tenant, with one exception, and that exception was a very aggravated case, but even in this one instance, Mr. Jackson was true to his charitable nature and compromised the case to the advantage of the debtor. In the course of his business life he has never been sued on any contract nor has he sued anybody.

Measured by any standard Mr. Jackson is the "biggest" man in Wicomico county, if not the biggest man on the Eastern Shore. By the word "big" is meant he has attained by his superior business ability a large success by correct methods, and he has used his means for the greatest relief of those who needed his help. He has contributed to education, spiritually and intellectually, more than any other man, and his human interest in his fellow men is equal to that of any of our other many good citizens.

Those who have directed their onslaughts against Mr. Jackson because he has made his life a success, will find their attacks to be boomings that will return to strike themselves. The average Eastern Shoreman doubts his hat to the successful Eastern Shoreman whether he achieves his success at home or elsewhere, and whenever he goes, the Eastern Shoreman applauds rather than condemns the successful man. Mr. Jackson has been successful in his chosen field. He has been the organizer of a tremendous business enterprise. In the organization and development of that business his judgment has been accurate and unerring and his accumulation without a taint.

The appointments of cadet officers, non-commissioned officers, field staff band, non-commissioned staff and color sergeant, national and state, of St. John's College, Annapolis, were announced Monday. Edwin Warfield, Jr., son of the Governor, is one of the corporals. Mr. Marvin A. Melson, of Rock-awalkin, is the fifth sergeant and Mr. Wallace Powell, of Salisbury, the seventh corporal of Company A. Mr. George M. Austin, of Mardela Springs, is the third sergeant and Mr. Pratt D. Phillips, of Hebron, the fifth corporal of Company B. Mr. Linden Allen, of Salisbury, is the second corporal of the band.

A Grand Old Man Of Many Parts.

One of America's grand old men is General Benjamin Franklin Tracy—lawyer, statesman, soldier and hero. He has worked hard and brilliantly all his life, and though now seventy-six years of age is still numbered among the busiest men in New York City. Especially busy is he as a member of the International Policyholders' Committee, that remarkable body of distinguished men who are fighting strenuously to purge the two largest insurance companies in the world of graft, corruption and Wall-street influence. Nothing could be more repugnant to a man of General Tracy's character than the methods of the Trustees of the New York Life and Mutual Life Insurance Companies. This grand old man was born at Owego, N. Y., in 1830. At the early age of twenty-one he was admitted to the bar, and two years later became District Attorney of Tioga County, a post which he held for six years. Having helped to organize the Republican Party in New York, he became an Assemblyman in 1860, but politics and law were forgotten when the bugle call to arms resounded in 1862. He raised the 104th and 137th N. Y. volunteer regiments and was commissioned Colonel of the former. His bravery in battle and skill in tactics were such that in 1865 he received the medal of honor for gallantry and was raised to the rank of Brigadier-General. Since those great but awful days, honors have fallen thick and fast upon General Tracy. Among others are his judgeship in the New York Court of Appeals, to which he was appointed in 1881, and his position in the Cabinet of President Harrison as Secretary of the United States Navy, which he occupied throughout Harrison's reign at the White House. New Yorkers in particular owe a debt of gratitude to the gallant General, for he was president of the Commission which drafted the Charter for the Greater City.

BENJAMIN F. TRACY

ARTIST'S QUEST FOR IDEAL GIRL.

M. Jules Dupree, artist and romanticist of Paris and the whole wide world, has ended his quest for his ideal girl, says the Philadelphia Press.

After a year of traveling in all parts of the globe, from the gay boulevards to the pyramids, from the prosaic streets of Philadelphia to the boundless plains of the far northwest, all the while carrying with him a tiny snapshot photograph as his only clew, he has found her.

Better yet, he has married her. They recently sailed on a transatlantic steamer for the French capital. The living, smiling woman has replaced the snapshot in Dupree's glad heart, and he is proud and happy beyond words at the wonderful end of an almost hopeless search.

The girl was Miss Constance Moquard Leaming. The artist found her at last in the doorway of her father's ranch house outside of the little town of Wolf, in Wyoming, just over the border line of Montana among the Big Horn mountains. Two Philadelphians who had scoffed with every one else when Dupree's story became known in Philadelphia three months ago were the means to his end—the well known lawyers Joseph P. Rogers and John R. K. Scott, who were roughing it at Wolf and met him by chance.

"Things like that don't happen nowadays," said those who read of the Frenchman's love quest when he was in Philadelphia in July. "The age of romance is over. He'd best give up and go back to Paris."

But it seems things like that do happen, and here and there a struggling glimmer of romance remains.

It was on July 7 when a tall, shapely Parisian, with exquisite raiment and black vandyke beard, registered at the St. James' hotel as "Jules Dupree, Paris." That evening he called Manager Miller of the hotel into a quiet corner and showed him a photograph. Had Miller ever seen the original? he asked. Perhaps at dinner, at a dance or a function in the hotel. She had been there once? No?

One October day in the previous year, M. Dupree told Mr. Miller, he was standing in front of the tomb of Napoleon, in his native city (Paris) when a party of American tourists chanced along. Among them was a young girl just entering womanhood. When the artist's gaze rested upon her he realized that here was the ideal he had been dreaming of all his life. He made a quick sketch of her from memory as her party passed on.

A week later he again encountered the tourists. They were at a drinking fountain on one of the boulevards in the city's suburbs. This time Dupree had a camera. He snapped the girl's head as she was raising a cup to her lips. The next moment she entered a big motor car and was whisked from sight.

As the days passed the girl's image proved more and more alluring to Dupree. He made a resolve to find her and meet her if it took him all the rest of his life. He got upon the track of the party and followed them to Calao. But he arrived there just three days after they had left for parts unknown.

Then he returned to Paris disheartened, but he met several Americans there, among them Julian Story, the artist, and his wife, Mme. Emma Eames, the opera singer, who told him that the little snapshot resembled a Philadelphia girl whom they had met, but whose name they could not recall. And hence Dupree was in Philadelphia at the St. James, looking for her. But several persons who know all the society girls of Philadelphia said that this girl was a stranger. Dupree spent a day or two in Atlantic City in another vain search and then went to Chicago, where cold avarice tried to take advantage of his sentimentalism. A couple of bunko steers told him they knew the girl and would divulge her name and address for a large consideration. But Cupid took care of the artist, and he escaped with his well filled wallet.

It was late in August when one day Rogers and Scott, the Philadelphia lawyers, came galloping across country some forty miles from Wolf, Wyo. They saw a lonely figure sitting on a rock. With a wild yell intended to scare the man they rode directly at him and pulled their horses back on their launches, but the man did not scare. He merely looked up with a tired expression upon his black bearded face.

Recognizing him as a gentleman, the young men apologized. They talked with him for a couple of hours, and then he made himself known as Jules Dupree and showed them the picture.

"That girl," said Rogers after a close scrutiny of the snapshot, "is Miss Constance Leaming or her double? She lives over the border line here—a good gallop in Wyoming."

They were then in Montana. Dupree excitedly jumped to his feet and implored his acquaintances to get him a horse, to take him at once to the girl's home.

"I got a pony for him," said Rogers, telling the story at his home the other day. "And you never saw a man ride as he did. He had Paul Revere and those chaps bent a mile. He was wild, and he never quit beating that horse for hours. We got to the Leam ing place, and there stood Miss Constance in the doorway wondering what this galloping cavalcade wanted.

"We presented Dupree and then went away. What he said or what she said I don't know. But the girl did not recognize him. She had not noticed him in Paris and was absolutely ignorant of his worldwide chase.

"Anyhow, in a couple of days it was all fixed up. Dupree presented his credentials to old man Leaming, who is a typical westerner and had to be 'shown.' And the old man was not any too eager to let his daughter go. But the romance of the thing caught the girl in a second, and Dupree proved himself to be a mighty good fellow in every way, and so finally Dad Leaming consented to a marriage, and there was a quiet ceremony performed, I understand, a few weeks ago.

"Before we got away Dupree wanted to embrace Scott and me in the French fashion, but we side stepped and let him shake hands instead. He fairly cried with gratitude. I laughed at his story when he was here last summer, but he certainly seems to have won out, and I think he deserves to.

"The Leamings have a pile of money, but so has he, I believe, so the marriage is different from the usual international affair. I wish them both all sorts of luck."

Mr. Rogers and Mr. Scott said that they understood an elaborate wedding, according to the French custom, would be celebrated as soon as the happy young people arrive in Paris.

The World's Wheat Crop.

The London Economist asserts that "the world's cereal harvest of 1906 can not fail to prove one of the greatest ever produced." The wheat crop is above the average in the north of France, but it has suffered from drought in the south and west. France will need to import very little if any wheat. Spain has reaped a good harvest generally, while Germany has good crops of barley and oats as well as of wheat and rye. Austria-Hungary will produce a much larger wheat crop this year than last. In Russia the winter wheat crop has been officially reported to be a good one, while the more important spring wheat crop is poor in all but a few provinces. Roumania is now expected to produce a record wheat crop, and Serbia and Bulgaria have good crops. The Canadian wheat harvest will not prove very abundant. India's wheat crop harvested last spring was the greatest but one ever known.

Considerate.

Mrs. Dove—Henry, I think you are positively cruel. Here I've tried so hard to cook you a nice dinner and you haven't had a word to say to me about it. Mr. Dove—Darling, I love you too much for that. If I said what I thought, you'd never speak to me again.

Painfully Economical.

Husband—You are not economical. Wife—Well, if you don't call a woman economical who saves her wedding dress for a possible second marriage, I'd like to know what you think economy is?

Invention Needed.

The twentieth century overflows with gadgets and gizmos. But there is room, we all agree, for one inventor more.
 While airplanes soar and autos make pedestrians into mutton,
 By wireless telegraph we pray
 For a lossless collar button.

Letter to J. A. Jones & Co., Salisbury, Md.

Dear Sir: Our agent ought to tell nine-tenths of the paint of his town and region; no use to try for the other tenth. The proportion of men, who won't take good advice, and use the least-gallons paint, is about one in ten among even owners of houses and stores and shops and barns and fences.

One man in ten will buy a gold brick or green goods, if he has the money and gets a good chance.

Devote at $175 a gallon is better than gold; adulterated and short-measure paints are green goods and gold bricks.

Devote saves half, more or less, of the labor and wages of painting; it is all paint; full strength and full measure. There is no other such paint within ten percent. Ten per cent of labor and paint is worth saving; and ten is the least. There are scores of paints that throw away half of both gallons and labor on whitening, china-clay, ground stone, barytes, benzine, water—all they are good for is to make gallons of nothing and look like paint in the can; more gallons to buy and more gallons to pay for putting on—gold bricks and green goods. Here's how they work.

Judge L. D. Partridge owns two houses exactly alike in Lufkin, Texas. J. H. Torrence painted both houses; one Devote, 15½ gallons; the other with another paint sold at same price; 25 gallons. That 25 gallon paint is weak and 15 per cent whitening; that's why it took 25 gallons more.

Yours truly,
 F. W. DEVOTE & CO.,
 New York.

COMFORTING WORDS.

Many A Salisbury Household Will Find Them So.

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed; to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. To tell how this great change can be brought about will prove comforting words to hundreds of Salisbury readers.

W. A. Britton, Deputy U. S. Marshall, living on Main street, Crashed, Md., says: "I consider Doan's Kidney Pills to be a remarkable remedy for kidney troubles and backache. I tried them some time ago. The use of the pills gave me the highest appreciation of this preparation, and I know it to be a very effective kidney regulator and remedy."

Plenty more proof like this from Salisbury people. Call at White & Leonard's drug store and ask what customers report.

Resolutions Of Respect.

To the memory of our beloved brother, Spencer E. McAllister, of Good Will Lodge, No. 112 I. O. O. F., Mandela Springs, Md., whose death occurred at his home in Vienna, Dorchester county, Md., September 18th 1906.

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God in his wise providence to remove from our midst our beloved brother, Spencer E. McAllister, who has been a faithful member for the past 35 years, therefore be it

Resolved, That in our sorrow we realize that our loss has been his gain, as Brother McAllister had been a faithful and devoted member of the M. E. Church for more than a half century, and a true Christian man. And we rejoice to know for whom we mourn has gone from labor to reward, and he is further

Resolved, That we sincerely sympathize with the bereaved family of our departed brother and commend them to the care and protection of Him who is the God for all his faithful servants, and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Lodge and a copy be sent to the family of our deceased brother, and a copy be sent to the county papers for publication.

A Fruitarian Diet.

A fruitarian diet consists of the fruits of trees (like apples, oranges, bananas and olives), the fruits of bushes (like currants and raspberries), the fruits of plants (like strawberries and melon, lentils and beans and cucumbers), the fruits of grasses (like wheat and barley and maize and oats), the fruits of nut trees (from filbert to coconut), together with some earth fruits (like potatoes), and a modicum of vegetables and salads. To these may be added butter, milk, honey and cheese, although their production is not so free from risk of contamination and animal infection as is the case with the products of the vegetable kingdom and the world of fruits. Grown under healthy conditions, with diseased specimens easy to detect and remove, it is far more possible to live healthily and well upon a fruitarian dietary than upon the products of the slaughter house.

Making It Plain.

In the lower Amazon country the temperature ranges about 87 degrees in the shade all the year round, says the author of "Ten Thousand Miles in a Yacht." At Manaus, 1,000 miles up the river, the temperature is six or eight degrees higher. Thermometers are little used in that country and little understood. So when a yachtman returned down river and was asked by an official at Para, "How is the temperature at Manaus?" his reply, "Eight degrees hotter than here," elicited a stare of noncomprehension.

"At Manaus," said the yachtman in explanation, "I used to wear six collars a day; here in Para I only need three a day."

This was perfectly clear to the Brazilian, whose face lighted with understanding.

THE Salisbury Building & Loan and Banking ASSOCIATION

This Association has two separate and distinct departments: "The Building &
Loan Department" and "The Banking Department."

The Building & Loan Department, with its paid-up capital stock of $14,500.00, makes loans secured by mortgages, to be paid back in weekly installments of 30c, 40c, 50c, $1.00 or $2.00 per week, to suit borrower; and has been doing a popular and successful business since 1897.

The Banking Department was added in 1902 under authority granted by the General Assembly of Maryland of that year, to set apart $25,000.00 of the Association's capital stock for banking purposes. It receives money on deposits, makes loans on commercial paper, enters into such business transactions as conservative banks ordinarily do, and earnestly solicits the patronage of its friends and the general public. Open an account with

MAINE HUNTING SEASON.

Good Sport Promised In The Big Game Country — Deer And Moose Both Numerous.

The lawful season for shooting deer in Maine, which recently opened, continues through till Dec. 15, says a Bangor correspondent of the New York Tribune. The moose season opens Oct.
15 and continues until Dec. 1. Hundreds of men and not a few women, mostly residents from other states, visit Maine during the hunting season.

Reports from all parts of the big game country say that deer and moose are numerous, while bears seemed to have greatly increased in numbers.
One bull moose at least one year old and two deer constitute the legal allowance of big game to each hunter.
Cow moose are perpetually protected.
There are no caribou in Maine. The penalty for illegal killing of deer is $40 fine for each deer so killed, for illegal killing of moose a fine of $500 or $1,000 or four months' imprisonment for each moose. Nonresidents must pay a $15 license fee for the privilege of hunting big game. They may ship their legal allowance out of the state and need not accompany it if the game bears tags or coupons detached from the license.

So many people have been killed or wounded by reckless gunners in the woods that the legislature has enacted this law:

Whoever while on a hunting trip or in the pursuit of wild game or game birds negligently or carelessly shoots and wounds or kills any human being shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding ten years or by fine not exceeding $1,000.

Violations of the game law are becoming more and more numerous every year, and the wardens are kept on the jump rounding up poachers of all classes. There are four classes of poachers. First there is the man who shoots merely for the sake of killing something, it matters not what. It may be a bird or a squirrel or just as likely a cow moose or deer, and the wanton killer often leaves his game to rot where it falls. Then there is the hide hunter, who kills hundreds of moose and deer in season and out simply for their hides. The hide hunters do most of their killing in the far North woods along the Canadian border, and it is difficult and expensive to catch them.

A third class is composed of trappers who kill deer or moose for meat to bait their traps with. Then come the so-called summer hunters, who live in the woods all through the fishing season and subsist largely upon deer meat. It is also claimed that the lumbermen kill many deer every winter to supply the camp tables with fresh meat, but as a rule this killing is exaggerated.
Most loggers care little for venison, preferring the pork and beef which are now supplied plentifully by the lumber operators.

How many deer has Maine? That is a question which no man can answer positively, although the lamented Jock Darling of Enfield, long regarded as king of Maine woodsmen, used to say that 100,000 deer roamed the forests of this state.

How many are killed annually? That is another question difficult to answer with much accuracy, although there is some basis for estimate. Deer are to be found in nearly all of the sixteen counties of the state, but there are three principal regions where they most abound — first and most important, the great region north of Bangor, around the Penobscot river and Moosehead lake; second, the coast counties of Washington and Hancock, and, third, the Rangeley lake region.

Since the construction of the railroad from Bangor into the great North woods an accurate account has been kept of the game shipped out of that region by rail. Last year the number of moose thus transported was 216 and of deer 4,791. Some authorities estimate that not more than one-half the game killed is sent out by rail, the reminder being eaten in the woods, wasted or transported by native hunters to their homes by other means of conveyance.

Assuming that this is a fair estimate, then in the region north of Bangor about 10,000 deer were killed last sesson, and allowing an equal number for all other parts of the state combined, the total kill would be about 20,000.
As for moose, few of these animals were killed outside of the Penobscot and Moosehead regions, although some handsome specimens are taken at Rangeley, and the total number killed last year in Maine probably did not exceed 300; that is, the number legally killed, for there is no way of finding out the extent of the slaughter by poachers in the far north.

Railroad Has Many Bridges.

A railroad with 728 bridges has just been opened in Austria by the Archduke Franz Ferdinand. The reason for the multiplicity of bridges is the mountainous country through which the railroad runs. It connects Trieste with Assing, passing through the Tyrol.
It is the first section of a new railroad which is to connect southern Germany with Trieste, passing over the Alps.
Besides the 728 bridges there are forty-seven tunnels on this wonderful road.
The bridge over the Isodro river, one of the forty-nine largest bridges, has a span of 270 feet and is the biggest stone arched railroad bridge in the

LIFE IN WELLMAN CAMP.

Indiana Doctor Tells How North Pole Seekers Are Faring—Arctic Hardships Not So Bad.

Dr. W. N. Fowler of Bluffton, Ind., American physician with the Wellman north pole expedition, writes the following account of the "hardships" he and his fellow scientists are enduring while preparing for their expedition, which has been postponed until next year, says a Bluffton correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Their airship, in which the effort is to be made, could not be got in trim for a northward flight before frost, hence the postponement:

"Tune's Island, Spitzbergen, Camp
Wellman, Aug. 4-1 am writing this that our Indiana and Ohio friends may know the privation and isolation we are undergoing for the sake of science and the discovery of the long sought pole. We are encamped in a frame house substantially built, consisting of a house within a house, large and commodious, with a fine dining room, which will accommodate twelve men.

"The living room within the house proper has a live air chamber within its walls, with a circulation of air warmed by the kitchen range and by natural draft brought warm and fresh into each bunk. Said bunks are arranged in tiers, one above the other, at the sides of the room, nine on one side, starting from the floor, and three on the opposite side, suspended from the ceiling. The bunks are equipped with good mattresses and pillows, sheets, pillow cases and wool blankets.
They have large curtains sliding on large brass rods, so that each member of the staff has the privacy of his own bunk.

"The kitchen is equipped with a fine steel range and every necessity for good, clean cooking, a fine enameled sink at one end of the range for washing dishes and a sixty gallon copper tank for warm water at the other.
This tank sits against the wall between the kitchen and lavatory, and a tap is placed in the lavatory for obtaining warm water for bath and washing.
The luxury of a bathtub in a living house in the arctic is found for the first time in the house of our present abode.

"As most of you have doubtless settled opinions about our daily diet, thinking it possibly consists of bear's bosom, bread and bad coffee, of course I am loath to disturb them, and to show my respect for these same opinions I will mention only a few of the things we have to eat in our simple life and will state that our bill of fare changes each day, so that we never tire of our diet. Breakfast consists of fruit, breakfast foods, ham, bacon, eggs, with buckwheat or wheat cakes, cookies, bread, butter and coffee in quantities.

"For dinner, soup, roast beef or boiled ham, with fresh potatoes and boiled onions, peas, corn, asparagus or tomatoes, bread and butter, apple or mince pie, with coffee or nuts. Meats and vegetables changed each day. Pickles, olives, tomatoes and all kinds of game, chocolate or gelatin puddings are on the table. We have tea at 2:30, at which tea, coffee or chocolate, with jam, cheeses and crackers are served.
Then supper at 7:30, consisting of one hot meat and one hot vegetable, with frequently baking powder biscuits with maple sirup or honey or fruit. This is often changed to give variety, and from the articles mentioned you must see the great privations we undergo.

"Then, too, the intense cold of the arctic, from which I was going to perish, has compelled me to make many additions and then again as many subtractions to my body covering.
When I left Tromsø I put on two suits of underwear, two pairs of socks, a woolen shirt, sweater, winter coat and hunting boots and an oilskin suit. I was advised that as soon as I got to sea it would be very cold. Our boat is not a large one, and the weather was rough—so was the sea—and when I came to on the third day and we were among the floating ice I imagined I was nearly frozen to death. For two days I could not get rid of this horrible imagination, but when I did I began to peel off clothing until I got down to one suit of summer flannels, with ordinary woolen under shirt, coat with no vest and ordinary trousers, bare handed and oftener bareheaded and always comfortable.

"Now as to the awful isolation. We had been here less than two weeks when the sister ship to the Frithjof, the Laura, chartered for the summer
by Max Fleischnann of Cincinnati, dropped anchor in our little harbor on the evening of July 4. In his party were Fleischnann and wife, Dr. and Mrs. Holmes, also of Cincinnati, and a Mr. Lamouth, an Englishman. They stayed two days and then left for Greenland. Then on July 17 an excusion steamer, the Oohama, a German boat with sixty-five tourists, was here for four or five hours. Then on July 18 a French tourist boat, the Ile de France, with 180 tourists on board, was here ore whole day. The Prince of Morocco, with his yacht and a se-lentific expedition, was at anchor for several days in Virgo bay and made several short calls.

SATURDAY, OCT. 13, 1906.

Republican Ticket.

For 60th Congress of the United States:
HON. WILLIAM H. JACKSON,

Additional Reasons For Mr. Jackson's Election.

Last week we had occasion to refer to the large number of Rural Routes in this district which were established through the recommendation and work of Honorable William H. Jackson while he was a member of the Fifty-Seventh and Fifty-Eighth Congresses. As we stated, nearly the entire Rural System which now prevails on the Eastern Shore of Maryland was brought about by the indefatigable work of Mr. Jackson during that period, and the constant increases which were made during his last term were made notwithstanding the fact that he had had more routes established up to that time than had been established in any other district in the country.

But another matter which was of even greater importance to the people of this district than the rural system itself, was the unusually large number of appropriations which were secured by him during the time he was in Washington. All reference to his magnificent work along this line has been carefully and studiously avoided by his opponents, and yet constitutes one of the most lasting memorials of his work and interest in this district which can possibly be imagined. Nearly every county in the district has received immense and lasting advantages from the appropriations secured at that time, and few districts in the entire country fared better so far as appropriations were concerned, than the First Congressional District of Maryland.

Mr. Jackson worked early and late in his endeavor to secure for the various harbors and rivers in this part of Maryland an adequate appropriation and with a single exception, which was due to inadvertence on the part of the committee, he secured every appropriation which he recommended. The one item which was omitted from the entire list as recommended by Mr. Jackson, was the one for the survey of the North-West Fork of the Nanticoke River. This was even recommended by the committee, but by an oversight at the time the bill was finally passed, the appropriation was omitted. The omission was supposed to have been brought about by reason of the fact that there was a large appropriation for the Nanticoke River itself, and the two items were supposed to have been duplicates, and one was omitted. With this slight exception, however, every single appropriation as recommended by Mr. Jackson became a law, and the immense advantages which have accrued to the people of this district by reason of his interest in these matters has been felt throughout the length and breadth of the district.

As it is well known, the Wicomico River has been dredged and the harbors in the lower part of the river, especially around Tyaskin have been navigable where they were not navigable before. Large appropriations were secured for the Claiborne harbor and the Choptank, Nanticoke, Elk, and practically all of the large rivers in the district and not a single one of these would have been secured, had it not been for the constant work and effort of Mr. Jackson before the committee.

All that has been accomplished in the past can be accomplished in the future, and as we stated last week, the Congressman in sympathy with the administration can do vastly greater work for his constituents than one who is antagonistic to it.

If you want a man from this district who can accomplish something and be of some advantage to the district, vote for Honorable William Humphreys Jackson.

Mr. Benjamin's Death.

The recent deaths of Dr. Levin D. Collier, Mr. Amos W. Woodcock and Mr. Albert J. Benjamin have removed from our town three of the most prominent figures known in Salisbury for many years. All were men of exceptionally high character and have been prominent in the various commercial and business enterprises connected with the growth of the city, and their deaths occurring so close together, have come as a decided shock to the entire community, especially in view of the sudden character of each.

The announcement of Mr. Benjamin's death Thursday morning was hardly credited for sometime, for large numbers hardly even knew that he was ill, and people were loathe to believe that his familiar form would no more be seen upon our streets. Only a few days before, he had been at his desk, apparently in his accustomed health, and it seemed impossible that he could be dead.

Mr. Benjamin's demise leaves a vacancy in this community which will be exceedingly difficult to fill. For many years he has been in the front ranks of the commercial life and activity of Salisbury, and has constantly aided in the growth of the town. His high character and rare attainments combined with his unusual business knowledge soon made him a potent factor in the various enterprises which have been connected with the constant development of the city, and he was ever ready to perform his full share of work, and assume whatever responsibility was incident thereto.

Personally, Mr. Benjamin was of a quiet and unassuming disposition, and was seldom seen upon a public platform but when fully aroused in a matter, he subordinated his personal inclinations to the welfare of the community, whose interest he had so much at heart.

A notable instance of this character occurred several years ago, at the time of the Anti Saloon League fight, and his voice was repeatedly raised for temperance during that memorable struggle. His addresses, which were carefully prepared, were cogent and powerful, and while delivered in a quiet manner without any oratorical effect whatever, were always listened to with marked attention.

Mr. Benjamin was a man of great liberality and wonderful breadth of character. His lofty conception of duty to his fellow man was one of his marked characteristics, and for years he was one of the recognized leaders in the various benevolent and charitable enterprises of the city.

By the death of Mr. Benjamin, this community has sustained a keen loss, and one which will be felt for many years. Right in the midst of life's duties almost at his very desk, he has been summoned by the invisible hand, whose mysterious touch will sooner or later fall upon us, and beckon us to that "bourne from whence no traveller returns."

Happy will we be if we leave behind us, as he has done, a record of life's duties faithfully and honestly performed.

Cuba is all right again! All she needed was a good dose of Uncle Sam's Soothing Syrup.

There is not much danger that any one will split his ticket this Fall—It's a straight ticket or nothing.

And now for the great Christian Endeavor Convention! Salisbury is putting on her gala attire and will extend to her numerous visitors a royal welcome.

The man who can make a success of a mammoth business as Mr. Jackson has done is the man who can make a successful Congressman, and he has already demonstrated that fact.

The streets have been in a fearful condition again during the week, but that simply makes us appreciate the work that is being done all the more; and besides, "It's always darkest just before dawn".

The glorious weather during the last few days has robbed us of one of our standing causes of complaint. However we can still talk about it, for goodness knows what people would do if the subject of the weather were ever taken from them.

Our people are very much interested in the man who can lay 15,000 bricks in a day—and decidedly more so, in one who, it is said, can lay 27,000 in the same time. We can guarantee these men a magnificent audience when they get to work, and if an admission fee can be arranged, they will make more through that source than they will laying bricks.

An Early Settlement Of Strike Expected.

Observers of the situation in the bay tie-up are of the opinion that indications point to a speedy settlement on the part of Captain Thompson, representing the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia and Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railways, or, in the case of falling in this, the taking of such action by the masters and pilots that the few vessels now moving will be tied up and public indignation will force action of some kind on the part of the railway and steamboat companies.

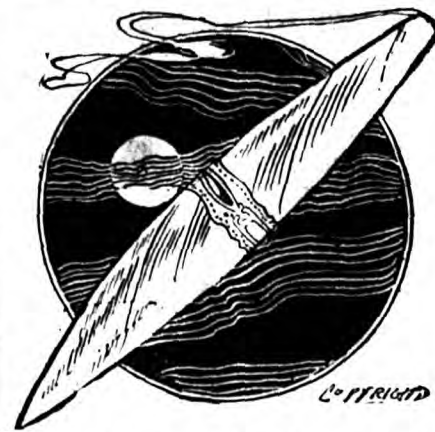

The masters and pilots have had it in their power since the very beginning of the tie-up to stop every steamer of the line by having the marine engineers go out it is stated. Unless something develops looking to a settlement within a day or so, this movement can be looked for.

Chief Charles J. Fox and his assistant, Mr. Jacob G. Schonfarber, of the Maryland Bureau of Statistics and Information, issued their report Wednesday upon the evidence brought out Monday at the conference, between the management of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic and the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Steamboat Lines and their captains, and blamed Capt. Willard Thompson, vice-president and general manager of the companies, for the tie-up.

They said they were justified in suggesting to Governor Warfield that he take steps to compel the corporations to perform the public service for which they were chartered or cause them to vacate their franchises. The strikers were jubilant when this news was received.

The crux of the situation seems to be the union—whether it shall be recognized by the Company or not. The masters and mates declare that they are determined not to break away from their organization, and the steamboat officials have as broadly declared that they will not treat with the men except as individuals. All other differences can be readily adjusted to the satisfaction of both parties.

—The Frank A. Robbins Circus is making its way toward Salisbury, and will likely show here Wednesday, October 31.

—The teacher and pupils of Parsonsburg school will hold an oyster-supper on Parsonsburg camp-ground this Saturday afternoon and evening.

—Mr. G. M. Fisher, who has purchased the jewelry store of the late A. W. Woodcock, moved to Salisbury Tuesday and has now opened up for business.

—Company I, of the First Maryland Regiment, will be inspected November 28 by Col. Charles D. Gaither, Adjutant General of the First Brigade.

—The hotel at Marietta Springs has been purchased by ex-Sheriff E. L. Austin, who will make many improvements in the place. The price paid was $4,000.

—On and after Monday evening October 15th, my two stores will be open evenings. Lacy Thoroughgood, James Thoroughgood.

—A special meeting will be held Monday night at 8 o'clock in the rooms of the Salisbury Athletic Club to organize a football team. This is a call for candidates, and all members are requested to be present.

—Rev. D. L. T. Weideman, agent for the Maryland Bible Union, will preach in the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock and at the Wisconsin Presbyterian Church at night at 7:30 o'clock.

—Mr. L. P. Coulbourn has built an addition to his large building on East Church street, 50x75 feet, 16 foot pitch, which will be used for a skating rink. The rink will be fitted in an up-to-date manner and opened on the 20th inst.

—Wild geese flying southward the first of this week presaged the coming of cold weather. It has arrived. Thursday morning the temperature was down to freezing point, and a light skin of ice was noticed. Snow was reported in many places.

—Ex-Senator W. T. P. Turpin and August F. Trappe, superintendent and secretary, respectively, of the Maryland Bureau of Immigration are on a tour of Southern Illinois, Missouri and Eastern Kansas. They are trying to induce farmers to settle in Maryland.

—The Sunday School of the Wisconsin Presbyterian Church will hold Rally Day services tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Rev. Dr. S. W. Reigart will deliver an address. The usual exercises of the Sunday School will be held at 9:30 a. m. A full attendance is especially requested.

—Dr. Essenden Fairfax Hicks, a grandson of Thomas Holliday Hicks, war Governor of Maryland, married Miss Helen Shepherd, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Shepherd, at Christ Protestant Episcopal Church, Cambridge, Wednesday morning. The pastor, Rev. Thomas B. Barlow, performed the ceremony.

—Through the solicitation of Solomon T. Huston, a member of the board of trustees of Princess Anne Academy, ex-Gov. Jackson made a contribution of $500 and Hon. Wm. H. Jackson $500 to the college. The money is being used to build a dining room and laundry to the Academy, the work on which is in charge of Solomon T. Huston.

—Mr. W. S. Parker is erecting a new residence on North Division Street, the material used being the concrete blocks made by the National Concrete Vault Company of Salisbury. The building will be three stories, including basement, 28 feet square, and will have front and back porches. This is the first residence of the kind erected in Salisbury.

—September Court for Wicomico county adjourned Saturday, and Judge Holland left Monday for Princess Anne to preside over the Somerset Court. Saturday morning two cases were disposed of by the Court—Nos. 4 and 5, Criminal Presentments, State vs. Mowbray Highland, indicted for larceny and receiving stolen goods. Court paroled the prisoner for two years, he having already served four or five months in jail here.

—The report on the distribution and migration of North American ducks, geese and swans, issued by the Department of Agriculture, says water fowl, formerly abundant over the whole United States, are diminishing in numbers and some species appear threatened with extinction in the not distant future. Their value for food is great, and they have formed in the past, and for all future time should continue to form, a valuable asset and an important source of revenue to the several States which harbor them. The preservation of the numerous species of ducks, geese and swans is becoming an important matter of legislative enactment, and the present report is intended to furnish information as to present range, abundance and migration of the several species with reference to practical legislation.

—Engine No. 5 of the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Railway, Frank Maloney engineer, smashed through the pier at Love Point Monday and is now in the bay. No. 5 is the largest engine on this division of the road, and while shifting on the pier some weak timbers were encountered about 30 yards from shore. The engine sunk through on one side and turned completely over in 10 feet of water. So quickly did it turn that the engineer barely had time to spring from the cab into the water and keep himself from being caught under the machinery. He swam ashore. The fireman was not on the engine at the time. Twelve cars loaded with fertilizer were standing on the siding on the pier, but none of these went into the water. The pier is a wreck, the steamboat landing being entirely cut off from shore. The damage to the pier is estimated at about $2,000.

—Mr. B. D. Maddox, a prominent citizen of Westover and related to a number of persons in Salisbury, is being treated at the Peninsula General Hospital.

—A Japanese Tea was given Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. George Phillips, on Camden avenue, for the benefit of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

—The Young Ladies' Missionary Circle of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church held their first monthly meeting this season Tuesday night at the home of Miss Maria Ellegood. An enjoyable program was rendered.

—Miss Minnie W. Spies and Mr. E. Milton Wells, organist of the St. Barnabas Episcopal Church, both of Baltimore but well known in Salisbury through their frequent visits to the home of Rev. and Mrs. Adam Stengle, were married Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock in the church where Mr. Wells serves as organist. The ceremony was performed by the pastor Rev. Thomas Atkinson. Mr. Cawthorne Carter, organist of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, presided at the organ.

—Mr. Willey Elzey, of Sharptown, was brought to the Peninsula General Hospital about 4 o'clock Saturday morning for an operation for gangrene of the bowels. Four months ago this young man was operated on here for appendicitis and fully recovered. Friday he ate very heartily of cabbage at dinner, which caused intense nausea and violent vomiting. This caused a rupture of the bowel and an operation had to be resorted to by Dr. J. McF. Dick. Four inches of the bowels were removed. He is doing nicely now.

—The first of the winter monthly business meetings and entertainments of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church was held Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Lambert A. Walston. Mrs. M. P. Trussell had charge of the program. Mrs. Trussell and Mrs. L. A. Bennett sang a duet and Mrs. Trussell and Miss Ruth Kennerly played a piano duet. By request, Mrs. Trussell also sang two solos. Mrs. Adam Stengle, the president of the Society, spoke. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Margaret Cooper.

—About 60 or 75 of the members of the Salisbury Lodge of Elks will go to Crisfield next Friday to assist in instituting a new lodge of Elks at that place. There are 37 charter members. A special train will leave Salisbury at 3:15 o'clock that afternoon, instead of 1 o'clock, as has been announced. The lodge at Crisfield has made big preparations for the occasion. An elaborate banquet will be given the visitors, which will be served by Caterer R. H. Phillips, of the Peninsula Hotel, Salisbury. A large delegation of Elks from Baltimore and Washington Lodges are expected to participate in the ceremonies.

—Ground was broken this week for an addition to the office building of Mr. Jay Williams, on North Division street. The present two-story building will be raised another story, and an addition, three stories high, 16x28 feet, will be built on the rear. The two upper stories will be arranged for dental parlors and residence for Dr. Annie F. Colley. The building will be heated by hot water and will have all modern conveniences. On the ground floor Mr. Williams will have another law office, giving him three offices on this floor. The work will be done under the supervision of Mr. Thomas H. Mitchell.

—Samuel Blake, colored, aged 92 years, the oldest person in Wicomico county, died Saturday at his home in Salisbury. Sam was born in Worcester county and in slavery days he was a free-born citizen. He was connected with a prominent family in that county, in the capacity of servant. He came to Salisbury 75 years ago and was a resident of the town until his death. Sam, always contended that he was born in 1804, and that he was 102 years old at the time of his death; but white friends of his who have read the papers given to Sam, showing his freedom, gave the date of his birth on February 1, 1814.

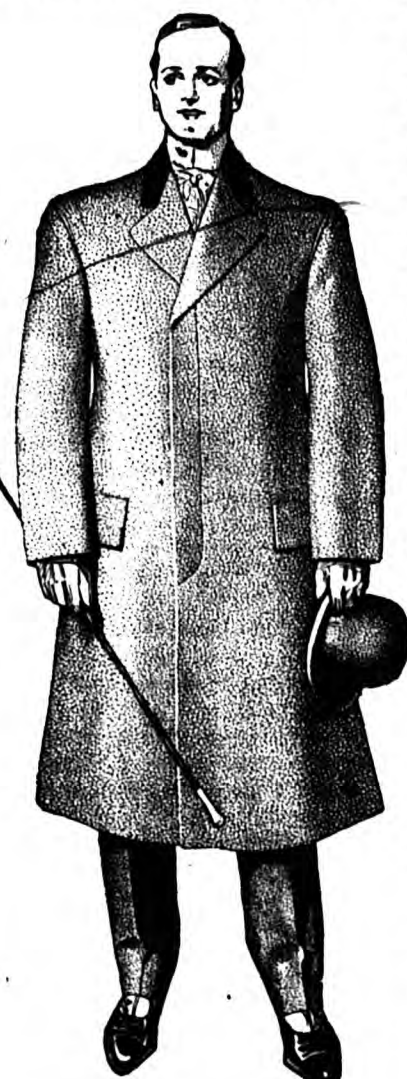

—Richard P. Jones, one of the best-known colored residents of Salisbury, died Saturday evening at his home on East Church Street, of diabetes, aged 66 years. The deceased was a slave in the family of the late Dr. Jones, of Somerset county. He enlisted in the Union Army during the war, and lost one arm. Several years ago he came to Salisbury and opened a store in Georgetown. By industry and frugality he accumulated property worth $4,000 to $5,000. He owned a very comfortable home on East Church Street, a storehouse and four small dwellings and was drawing a substantial pension from the Government at the time of his death.

—The general staff of the Army has issued the order for the abandonment of Fort McHenry, at Baltimore. The changes is to take effect March 31, 1907. The Thirty-ninth Company of Coast Artillery is ordered from Fort McHenry, Md., to Fort DeSoto, Fla. When the Thirty-ninth Company leaves Fort McHenry in next March the famous fort will be abandoned as a military post and turned over to the care of the Engineer Department, and only a few noncommissioned officers will be left to care for the ordnance and buildings that cannot be moved. General McKenzie, chief of the Engineer Corps, U. S. A., said today that no plans had been made for the future of Fort McHenry.

—"Along the Kennelbee," a New England comedy, comes to the Grand Opera House, Thursday evening, October 18th. The piece is now in its third successful season and has met with popular approval wherever presented, and has been used as a text by two ministers in their sermons. The play is full of comely hits. It is comely that a girl or woman can laugh at and not blush at the same time. The burlesque duel scene in the third act between Zeke Dasher and Banliek Tubbs is said to be one scream from start to finish. Special scenery is carried for the production, and it is said to be strictly a scenic production from the first act to the last. Some pleasing singing and character specialties are introduced during the action of the piece. Prices 25, 35 and 50 cents. Tickets are now on sale at the box office.

Lacy Thoroughgood Keeps The Clothes That are Worth Coming After at Prices That Nobody Objects To.

People get at Thoroughgood's what they can get nowhere else in Salisbury and everybody is beginning to realize that fact, the truth about clothes is that they must be of good quality or they are expensive at any price. The material as well as the tailoring must be right or the clothes will not stand wear and tear. Thoroughgood's clothes fulfill to the limit these requirements, and not only are they guaranteed by Lacy Thoroughgood but by the maker. Our clothes have a style and individuality not obtainable in ordinary ready-to-wear clothes. In the long run you'll find it pays to buy clothes from Lacy Thoroughgood. People say we sell clothes of a higher grade than others. At no other store in this city can you buy clothes made by B. Kruppenheimer & Co., Chicago—Alfred Benjamin & Co., New York—Michaels, Stern & Co., Rochester, N. Y.—Ab. Kirschbaum & Co., Philadelphia. These are the kind of clothing that you see advertised in all the leading magazines and newspapers. We sell these clothes not a cent higher in price than our competitors charge for much lower grades. They know—so will you if you'll try us just one time.

—We would like to call to the business men of Salisbury, favorable attention to the matter of decorating the fronts of their business places next week from Monday until Friday, Oct. 15 to 19, on account of the Christian Endeavor State Convention. We would suggest that the C. E. colors, red and white, and the Maryland colors, black and yellow, together with the U. S. flag be used. Hoping that every one will see their way clear in this matter and decorate their respective business places on Monday Oct. 15.

—The Maryland State Horticultural Society will hold its annual meeting and exhibition December 5 and 6 next at the Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore. It is expected to be the greatest meeting in the history of the organization. There will be plenty of room for a splendid exhibit, and every member is expected to compete for the attractive prizes offered. Besides, all fruit, vegetable and flower growers in the State have been urgently requested to make exhibits. Mr. Orlando Harrison, of Berlin, is vice-president of the Society, and Mr. W. F. Allen, of Salisbury, is a member of the executive board and the representative for Wicomico county.

—Commissioner Larnore reported to the County Commissioners Tuesday that he had examined the best trees along the roadside below Royal Oak and had sold the trees to Elisha Owens for $2 each. The board agreed to send the county surveyor to Fook's Mills to survey and lay out the county road at that place, as asked by Mr. E. M. Walston and others. Surveyor Shockey was also authorized to estimate the cost of grading the county road near the farm of Mr. Stanford Culver. To relieve the county roads of water in wet weather an experiment is to be tried and the board gave Commissioner Larnore the authority to have a number of wells sunk in the county road near Hebron under his supervision.

MARYLAND GIRL DECEIVED.

Induced To Go To Washington By Promise Of A Position.

Lured from her home at Crisfield, Md., by promise of a good position when she reached Washington, D. C., Miss Tillie F. Lowe, a pretty 16-year old girl, arrived in the Capitol City Friday afternoon, only to find that she had been deceived by one she thought was her friend.

Several weeks ago a young man, who said he was solicitor for a picture-enlarging house in Washington, visited Crisfield and made the acquaintance of Miss Lowe. She says he described the beauties of the city to her and told her he would get her a position. He returned to Washington, she said, and a few days ago she received a letter giving the address 606 W street, northwest, telling that on recommendation of the picture man the writer had decided to give her a place in his confectionery store, $3.00 being enclosed in the letter to pay her railroad fare.

She left her home Friday morning with her father, Mr. W. F. Lowe, who accompanied her as far as Baltimore. Arriving there at 1:15 o'clock, she searched the railway station for her future employer. In the letter it was stated that he would meet her and would know her by the description furnished by her friend. Not being able to locate him and being without money and disheartened, she appealed to the police. An investigation by the police developed the fact that there is no such address as 606 W street, and that neither the name the picture solicitor gave nor that of the alleged employer is in the City Directory.

Itching, bleeding, protruding or blind piles yield to Doan's Ointment. Chronic cases soon relieved, finally cured. Druggists all sell it.

Personal.

—Mr. Howard Scott, of Philadelphia, is visiting friends in Salisbury.

—Miss Eva G. Trice, of Seaford, Del., who has been the guest of Miss North M. Whiteley, returned home last Wednesday.

—Rev. and Mrs. James Coloma, of Princess Anne, visited Mrs. Coloma's parents, Rev. and Mrs. Adam Stengle, this week.

—Miss Landonia Pilehard, of Greenbackville, Virginia, is visiting her sisters, Mrs. John W. Davis and Mrs. Claude Serman, of this city.

—Mr. Harry Meginnis, of Chicago, visited relatives in Salisbury this week. This is the first time that Mr. Meginnis has been here since 30 years ago, when he left for the West to make his fortune. He is at the head of a large wholesale notion house. He says that Salisbury has built up so much during his absence that he would not recognized the place.

Public School Notes.

To relieve the congested condition in the lower grades of the Salisbury schools County Superintendent Bounds and School Commissioner Brexington have secured the school room on Gay street, formerly used by Mrs. Alice Durham with her private school, who has rented a room in the residence of Mrs. Thomas Seabrook, on North Division street, and last Monday morning the new school was opened with 50 scholars under the care of Miss Mollie Betts, who has taught for three years at Bivalve.

The 50 pupils were selected from the rooms of Misses Mildred Dougherty and Grace Darby, which were overcrowded, an effort being made to choose those scholars who resided on the east side of the town.

The Principals' Club, composed of the principals of the county's two or more room schools, seventeen in all, will hold its first monthly meeting this year, this afternoon at 1:30 p. m. in the Assembly room of the high school building. Each of these principals is a leader in a local association at his home school of the district and assistant teachers and the work these leaders will be expected to do the present year in their district associations will be outlined by Superintendent Bounds at this meeting. Principal Thos. H. Truitt of the Pittsville school is president of the Club, and Mr. N. Price Turner, science teacher in the Wicomico High School, is secretary.

Champion of Pure Food

Side Lights on Dr. Harvey W. Wiley and His Tireless Crusade

Commander of the "Poison Squad" is Somewhat of a Humorist, Who Says Americans Have the Worst Cooks and Get the Least Out of Their Foods — Has Ridden His Hobby For Twenty Years, Not to Death, but to a New Lease of Life

IN the course of human events and under the benign influence of the new pure food law the people of the United States may eat and drink and be merry, giving no thought to the horrible probability of having taken into their systems various poisonous substances in their food and drink, the one man chiefly to be thanked for that delightful consummation is Dr. Harvey Washington Wiley. Officially Dr. Wiley is chief of the bureau of chemistry in the department of agriculture; unofficially he may be called commander in chief of the allied and amalgamated armies of the pure food crusade in America.

For twenty years Dr. Wiley has had a hobby and ridden it hard. At times this Pegasus of his has leaped over appalling precipices of human prejudice and tracked wearily through marshes of misunderstanding, but the doctor has ridden his hobby to a new lease of life rather than to death, for today he appears to have arrived very near the shining portals of success—the prevention by federal law of the use of poisonous substances as preservatives or colorings for food and drink, that is Dr. Wiley's hobby. By the passage of the measure known as the pure food law last June congress finally approved the efforts of Dr. Wiley and the thousands of other earnest workers in the cause of preserving the human stomach from premature decline.

Somewhat of a Humorist.

Dr. Wiley takes great joy in his work. Why not? It is something worth while to devote one's life to the protection of the health of 80,000,000 people of his unique gastronomic experiment, though he never permitted his sense of humor to interfere with his strict scientific observation of the results produced by the consumption of a certain quantity of "loped" food or drink by a certain member of his free boarding squad.

That remarkable experiment of Dr. Wiley's is no longer regarded as a joke, even by the most hopelessly jocular person. By years of patient, tireless observation the devoted chemist has proved what he set out to prove—that the use of substances such as boracic acid, salicylic acid and formaldehyde as preservatives for food or drink are positively injurious to the human system. By feeding his class of young men various kinds of food preserved or colored with the drugs employed by manufacturers he deduced scientific facts which, embodied in his official reports, had much weight in securing the pure food law.

Incidents of Food Reform.

Since Dr. Wiley first made himself a popular national figure by thus testing the actual results of the eating of drugged food and boiling those results down to a scientific certainty many events of importance in the matter of food reform have taken place in the United States. Quite recently we have had Upton Sinclair's expose of packing house horrors in "The Jungle," followed by the passage of the meat inspection law, which requires that after Oct. 1 the manufacturers of canned meats, hams and other packing house products on their labels must call a spade a spade and not de-

"I never drink anything but the real Scotch," said two or three of the guests.

"Do you drink over bars?" asked the doctor, and they said they did.

"Then you never drink Scotch whisky at all. Not a bottle of Scotch whisky is to be had in this country except in clubs and private houses. Scotch is made of barley malt cured over a peat fire. In Great Britain I have seen so called Scotch made of Indian corn alcohol with a little dash of Scotch, which is sold to American dealers as real Scotch whisky by well known distillers."

The conversation turned to good old fourteen-year-old whisky. American brand.

"Humph!" said Dr. Wiley. "I'll make you some fourteen-year-old whisky in five minutes."

Turning to his chemical apparatus, the doctor took a bottle of alcohol, some burned sugar and other things and five minutes later had concocted a beautiful red liquor, which he passed around. All pronounced it fine old whisky.

"It isn't whisky at all," said Dr. Wiley. "It's the stuff that is often called whisky. By the use of what is known as 'aging oil' the greater portion of the stuff labeled 'fourteen-year-old whisky' is made in less than fourteen minutes."

Hams Smoked While You Wait.

As a member of the government's pure food law commission, sitting at New York during the latter part of September, Dr. Wiley adduced the fact that hams may be smoked while you wait. One witness testified that his house used a "patent smoke" for making smoked hams. This is a sort of paint, with which the ham is smeared, giving it the appearance of having been cured in the dear old smoke-house at home, as your grandmother used to do it.

Directly as a result of Dr. Wiley's investigations some very astounding facts regarding the true identity of the stuff we put into our stomachs from day to day have been brought to light. Just one item will suffice here. Your stomach may be too weak to stand more. The patient and long suffering mule that pulls the garbage cart past your door is more important than he looks. Do not scorn him. Next year he may be silent, alas, in death, and you may be eating his hoofs metamorphosed—stupendous change!—into "pure apple jelly" or "pure peach marmalade." But the fact that you are eating the hoofs of the defunct mule is not the most serious part of the proposition. The coloring matter used to deceive you into mistaking prepared mule hoof for a peach or apple product is the serious thing. That is what does the damage.

Dr. Wiley has estimated and declared that about 90 per cent of the manufactured foods sold in America contain deleterious substances introduced for the purpose of deceiving the public as to the true character of the product. "Barnum made a colossal fortune," remarked Dr. Wiley on a recent occasion, "by acting on the principle that the American people like to be humbugged. To be cheated, fooled, bamboozled, cajoled, deceived, pettifogged, demagogued, hypnotized, manhandled and chicaned are privileges dear to us all."

Even the operation of the new food law, if rigidly enforced, will not rob the American people of their cherished privilege of being humbugged if they continue to believe the statements of some manufacturers that certain drugs are good for their health, but the law will reduce the humbuggery very appreciably by insisting upon the proper labeling of all products, so that if one wants pure apple jelly he may buy a jar so labeled and if he prefers mule hoof he may go around looking for a label to indicate the animal.

It should be remembered that the new law relates not only to food, but to liquors and medicines, so that there must be government inspection of everything that goes down the human gullet provided that it is sold from state to state and thereby comes under the head of interstate commerce.

A Disadvantage of Health.

A visitor among the poor of the east end of London found unexpected testimony to the disadvantages of health in one of his calls. Mrs. B. had a family of a dozen children, and like most of her class, she had her tale of woe to tell. "How are the children, Mrs. B.?" inquired the caller. "All very well, indeed, sir; very well, indeed," was the answer. "You ought to be thankful, I'm sure, with so much sickness about." "Yes, sir; I suppose I ought to be thankful; but, I tell you, when they're well they eat an awful lot."

DR. HARVEY W. WILEY.

people. It is provocative of joy to succeed in inducing the enactment of legal measures calculated to tone up the multitudinous American stomach, casting out such evils as dyspepsia, indigestion, typhoid and other ills too numerous to mention. Among his intimate friends the good Dr. Wiley is known as something of a humorist, and this quality sometimes displays itself upon public occasions when he discusses his hobby. Once Dr. Wiley was dispensing his chemical wisdom before the committee on agriculture of the house of representatives when a rural congressman scornfully asked the distinguished chemist to define a "scientific agriculturist."

"A scientific agriculturist," replied the doctor, "is a gentleman in the employ of the government who can make $2 grow on an appropriation bill where only $1 grew before."

Had not Dr. Wiley possessed a keen appreciation of humor he could not have run the gauntlet of the joke makers during the four years of his "poison squad" boarding house in Washington and come forth fat and jolly, his usefulness unimpaired. If he had been one of those solemn and serious savants of the story books who fly into a rage or grind their teeth when any body happens to take a jocular view of a highly important proposition the good Dr. Wiley long ere this must have succumbed to nervous prostration. As it was, he seemed thoroughly to enjoy the tests made at the ex-celve the public by sending out canned veal or pork with a picture of a spring chicken on the label.

Dr. Wiley's work has dispelled several misconceptions. For instance, he has shown that it is not necessarily the food adulterants, but the preservatives and colorings, which do the damage to the human stomach. The fact that frequently we buy and eat something sold under a certain name which is really something else in whole or in part because that something else is cheaper for the manufacturer than the thing he pretends to sell is disgusting, to be sure, but unless it looks like what we intend to buy we do not buy it, and right there is where the wily manufacturer gets in his devilish work. He colors it with aniline or coal tar dyes to make it look like the real thing, and that coloring matter does the damage. For a like purpose of deception certain drugs called preservatives are used. These serve to impress the innocent purchaser with the notion that he is buying wholesome meat, for instance when as a matter of fact the stuff would be putrid but for the "embalming fluid" it contains.

Whisky in Five Minutes.

Dr. Wiley has stirred up not only those who eat food, but those who drink alcoholic liquors. One evening in Washington, who began to discuss their favorite brands of whisky, Scotch whisky seemed to be the most popular, Pressed to Death.

An English court has sentenced a woman to imprisonment because she refused to speak during a trial. The old penalty for remaining mute under similar conditions was being pressed to death. The form of sentence set forth "the prisoner shall be laid in some low, dark house, where he shall lie naked on the earth and one arm shall be drawn to one quarter of the house with a cord and the other arm to another quarter, and in the same manner let it be done with his legs, and let there be laid upon his body iron and stone, as much as he can bear—or more." There the man had to lie. On the following day he was given three morsels of bread without water, on the following water, but no bread. And this was his diet until he died.

Great Discovery.

The editor of a Kansas paper states that he once borrowed a Winchester rifle and started up the street a few days after to deliver the weapon to its owner. The delinquent subscribers got it into their heads that he was on the warpath, and every one he met insisted on paying what he owed him. One man wiped out a debt of ten years' standing. On his return to his office he found a load of hay, fifteen bushels of corn, ten bushels of potatoes, a load of wood and a barrel of turnips that had been brought in. We would like to borrow a Winchester for a day or two. —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

SOUTH'S NEED OF MEN.

Europe Being Ransacked to Provide Farm Laborers.

The voice of the south comes on every breeze. Scarcely one of the southern states but has sent its agent abroad to try to direct immigration to its own particular boundaries. Whole colonies of immigrants are being planted along the railway lines, and still the cry is for more.

Already several hundred German farmers have been located along the Southern railway between Richmond and Danville, Va. Hungarians, Germans and Poles are to be found on farms between West Point and Richmond. These settlements are growing constantly, says the Charleston News and Courier, and the farmers are sending to the mother country for their friends and relatives.

At Valdese, N. C., fifty families of Italian farmers have been organized into a profitable community, and they, too, are including colonies of their countrymen to come out to America. Russian farmers are now engaged in trucking at Alton, S. C., and near Summerville a little band of French-Canadian farmers are in similar pursuits, with most encouraging results. At Lumber City, Ga., Italian farmers and woodworkers have found the country and sawmills in that vicinity so remunerative that they are urging their countrymen to come there.

From Birmingham, Ala., to Greenville, Miss., Italians have been secured as cotton growers. From Mobile to Birmingham there are scattered settlements of German, Hungarian and Polish farmers, whose abilities and energies have made a marked difference in the neighborhood where they have established themselves.

Marksmanship Won by Woman.

Officials of the recent national shooting tournament at Sea Girt, N. J., are in a quandary as to whether to certify a woman to the war department as an expert marksman, says the New York Herald. The woman is Mrs. Elizabeth Toppervain of San Antonio, Tex., the only competitor of her sex on the range. She earned a marksman button and got it, but the question of certification must be settled by the national board for the promotion of rifle practice. Mrs. Toppervain was excluded by their conditions from the big matches, but she entered the national marksmanship match, a continuous competition, which entitles those making 50 points out of a total of 75 to be enrolled in the war department as a national marksman. She shot with an automatic rifle and made a total of 50. She was congratulated on all sides.

The Arab War Chant.

Captain Von Herbert describes how the sacred chant was sung by Osman Pasha's force in that last dreadful sortie from Plevna. He knows, for, as he says, "as a youngster of seventeen, being then in the Turkish service, I took part in the charge." It is a solemn four part chant for deep male voices, with intervals, the melody recurring again and again, of alternating harmonies hummed almost pianissimo, to the words "Alla Akbar," and then again rising "to a great outburst on the fifth note." There is more than a suggestion of plain song, that song which drifted westward from the east.—Fall Mail Gazette.

At a banquet held in a room, the walls of which were adorned with many beautiful paintings, a well known college president was called upon to respond to a toast. In the course of his remarks, wishing to pay a compliment to the ladies present and designating the paintings with one of his characteristic gestures, he said, "What need is there of these painted beauties when we have so many with us at the table?"

Signs of Brain Exhaustion.

A doctor says that when a person begins to have doubts about the spelling of common words, to write an unusually small hand that shows a tendency to waver above and below a straight line and to grasp the pen with unnecessary force, especially at the end of a long word, then that person is suffering from brain exhaustion and ought either to take a complete rest or else to find work of an altogether new and different kind.

An Old Proverb.

The proverb, "Necessity is the mother of invention," can hardly be traced to one independent source. The idea was expressed by Persius, the Roman satirist, about 60 A. D., and is found in the precise form now quoted in Richard Francis's "Northern Memoirs" (printed in London in 1694) and in various later English writers.

Thrashers' Pink Tea.

The wife of a farmer had a sister come from Chicago to make a visit, says the Emporia (Ill.) Gazette. One day recently the thrashers came, and the guest insisted on doing the work alone and sent her sister away to rest. When twenty-seven thrashers filed in to supper that night they found a sandwich, tied with ribbon; one chicken croquet, one cheese ball the size of a marble and a buttonhole bouquet at each plate.

Republicans, Do Your Duty.

(Communicated)

Say, Republican, are you going to do your duty this fall? Are you going to be out among them and hustle votes for a party that preserved the Union? We are saying, and saying boldly, that every man who has a wife he loves, every man who has children who must join in the battle for bread, owes it to himself to aid in the victory of the grand old party.

The grand old party—what a name—and how much it implies. It is the party that gave us free homes, that gave pensions to the wounded and remembered the widow and the orphan when their support was gone.

When you go to vote, remember that a Republican congressman means much for the Republican President—the greatest we have ever had. Do not tie the hands of the chief executive by sending to represent us a crowd of Democratic congressmen who would, if it was sufficient in number, paralyze trade and knock the stuffing out of the splendid commercial prosperity now on tap. Vote for a Republican congressman this fall and try and convince all your neighbors it is the right thing to do.

They tell us that trusts are in favor of Republican principles. The trusts are in favor of prosperity—the same as every individual should be. That is the only reason. The first step of Democracy makes capital tremble. It means destruction of great enterprises; it means empty pockets; it means hunger and financial cyclone; it means more than that. It means that the rag-tag and bob-tailed element which wants free lunch and which never prospered, would take control—with Democracy in control it means a panic. No one wants another panic like the one we had a few years ago. Democracy gave us that, and to put it in power again means that the panic must come.

It is up to you. Will you continue to scurry through the alley, gnawing the hard-times bone, or will you drop it and get on the land wagon—the wagon of prosperity and progression? The other name for this wagon is the Republican wagon—the wagon which hauls peace and plenty throughout the land. The Republican party has been weighed and not found wanting. Do not swap horses while crossing a stream, and now in the time of our prosperity, do not be guilty of such a thing as sending a Democrat to Congress to defeat the splendid program of the Republican President.

Regardless of platform, regardless of what he thinks, Democracy just now is insisting that Bryan is the only man left who can lead to victory the pie-eating forces of Democracy. A party must be in a bad shape when there is only one man left among ten thousand who is altogether lovely—and he really doesn't know just where he stands.

This fall every man who wants to see prosperity continuing, who believes in majority rule, who wants to see that the stars and stripes float proudly and bravely on every breeze, should vote the Republican ticket—not because your father was a Republican, not because you have home tradition, but because it means bread and butter for yourself and your children.

School Board in Session.

The Wicomico County School Board was in session yesterday and appointed Mr. Elbert Bonds, of Maryland Springs, to the scholarship to the Maryland Agricultural College made vacant by the recent resignation of Mr. W. I. Nicholson, of Salisbury. The resignation of Miss Jennie Bonds, assistant teacher at Quantico, was received. Her successor will be appointed later. A question of adjusting the grades in the Oak Grove, Pine Grove and Nanticoke schools came up and was referred to County Superintendent Bonds and Commissioner Brewington. The Board decided in the future to allow to the teachers three days for personal illness, illness in the family or in the family of the home where they board, instead of just the three days for personal illness, as the limit allowed by the law.

STEAMBOAT STRIKE ENDED.

Controversy Between Masters And Mates And The B. C. & A. Ry. Co. Finally Adjusted Saturday.

The controversy between the masters and licensed deck officers of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic and the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Railway Companies, which for nearly two weeks resulted in the stoppage of the 31 steamers of the two lines involved, was settled at a conference between a committee representing the steamboat men and Captain Thompson in the office of Mr. Nicholas P. Bond, counsel for the companies, at 11 o'clock last Friday night, and the men, whose resignations had been handed in went to work Saturday morning.

The settlement was made virtually on a basis of the demands of the men, though it is conceded that to a certain extent a give-and-take policy marked the conferences held Friday afternoon and night. No reference was made during the final conferences to Rescue Harbor, No. 14, which, it is insisted by Captain Thompson, was the bar to a settlement during the past two weeks. The men appeared as a committee representing themselves and the former employees of the two companies.

The trouble which culminated in the strike began June 29, when the new wage scale was presented Captain Thompson by a committee of captains. He refused to recognize the committee.

Another call was made September 16, when Captain Thompson again refused to deal with them. The resignations of all the captains, mates and pilots were handed in at that time.

The tie-up began October 1, when the men left their vessels at the docks. Three days later the men made charges before Collector Stone that Captain Corkran took out a steamer without a license. The case was settled. Captain Thompson issued letters that day asking the men to resign from the Masters and Pilots' Association.

On October 5 the Bureau of Statistics' offer to arbitrate was refused. Monday last the investigation, which resulted in a finding blaming Captain Thompson for the strike, was held. The findings were announced by Mr. J. H. Schenckler Wednesday. The offer to discuss the matter was accepted Friday by Captain Thompson after several other ineffectual attempts to bring about a reconciliation had been made.

A SPLENDID OUTING.

Magnificent Hunting Trip Through Texas, Which Will Begin About The Fifth Of November.

A magnificent outing is planned by the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railway Company, being the Third Annual Mid-Winter Hunt, organized under the auspices of the Passenger Department, Sunset Route, in Texas. The trip will commence about November 5th and will last thirty days although it will not be necessary for any member of the party to join in the start or to remain the entire time. In 1904, a party of eighteen was conducted over one thousand miles of West Texas territory, hunting the game to be found in that section, but going more for the recuperative effects, physically, of a thousand mile journey through that country. Last year a party of twenty-five Northern and Eastern business men were conducted through the big thickets of Brazoria and Matagorda counties, upon which occasion the party killed seven deer, about eighteen deer, innumerable ducks, quail and prairie chicken and other wild fowl.

With the experience gained on these two trips, a magnificent trip is contemplated this year. The party will have at their command a private hunting preserve of 50,000 acres. This preserve is located along the shores of Matagorda Bay, an arm of the Gulf of Mexico, and abounds in deer, ducks, prairie chicken, quail and other wild fowl, as well as bear and bob cats. It is traversed by several pretty streams and a number of lakes may also be found on the premises as well as inlets from the bay, giving ample fishing facilities.

It is the intention to limit the size of the party to twenty-five, exclusive of guides, chefs and the management. As this is strictly an out-of-doors event, the party will be housed in waterproof tents and we have arranged to have at our command every facility for the proper entertainment of the party as regards personal comfort, commissary arrangements and transportation facilities.

The expense of this trip will be $7.00 per day for each person, which amount includes transportation from Bay City, where the party leaves the railroad, the use of one horse, if so desired, during the entire trip, comfortable tent room with camp, bed and board, the services of guides camp porters, etc.

Anyone inclined to take advantage of this opportunity to gain a month's rest from business cares, to be able to shoot plenty of game, to be able to enjoy a pleasant trip all around, and return home refreshed and recuperated, should write at once to O. J. Anderson, General Passenger Agent, Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railway Company, Houston, Texas.

Letter to Harper & Taylor, Salisbury, Md.

Dear Sirs: You know, diamonds don't go by size. So with paint.

We make paint, one gallon of which goes as far as two of another and lasts twice as long: that's four to one.

You know it is true in diamonds; they don't go by the gallon, do they?

If you're going to paint your house, you go first to your painter and say: "I'm going to paint; do you want the job? and what'll it cost?"

If he happens to know, he'll say: "Depends on the paint. I can do it for somewhere about $100 or $200, whichever you like; $100 will make a good job; $200 a poor one."

And you, if you happen to have your wits, "I'll say: 'I'll take the good one, when'll you do it?'"

Painters ought, all, to know about paint, and jewelers ought to be able to get a good job. We do what we can to help both.

One gallon Devco is better than two of average paint, goes as far—that is, your house will take about 20 gallons Devco and 40 of average paint—and Devco will wear a long time; the life of average paint is very uncertain, it may be a year, it may be five.

Why is it that painters don't know about paint? Do jewelers know about diamonds? They know more than they tell sometimes. There are painters and painters; so there are jewelers; so there is paint, and the least gallons-paint is Devco.

Yours truly F. W. DEVCO & CO., New York.

P. S.—L. W. Gunby Co. sells our paint.

A Curious Tomb.

The most curious tomb in England is that of Lady Anne Grimston, daughter of the Earl of Thanet, who died nearly two centuries ago and was buried in Tewin churchyard. Upon her deathbed she disregarded the efforts of those who sought to administer spiritual comfort. An atheist she had lived, an atheist she would die. "It is as likely that I should rise again from the dead," she said, "as that a tree should grow out of the middle of my coffin." A tree has grown out of the middle of her coffin—an oak—and by its side a yew more. The vault is square, of brick and granite. The two trees first shed the interior before they could find a way out. When they did burst through the masonry they so spread and completely to envelop the grave.

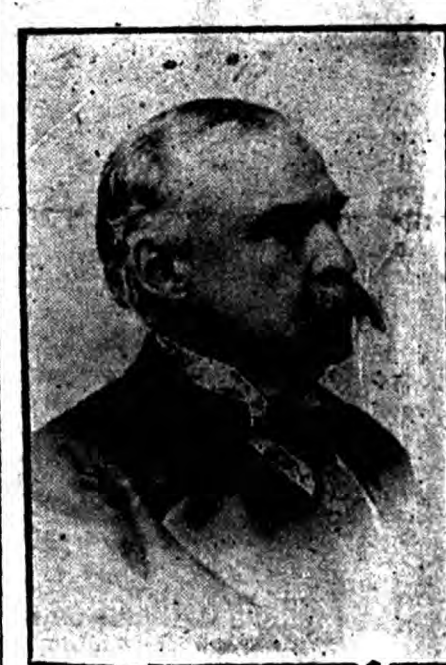

THE TRIBUNAL OF NATIONS.

A Pageant Feature Of The Frank A. Robbins Company Great Feature Shows.

The big railroad aggregation of all new great feature shows, announced to pitch its city of tents in Salisbury on Wednesday, October 31, promises, in its "Tribunal Of Nations," to introduce a pageant novelty of notable historic and spectacular splendor and interest. On a number of great ornate floats drawn by sextuple blue ribbon teams of splendid thoroughbreds, are introduced representations of the most famous conquerors and kings of ancient and modern times, each living substitute in form, feature and costume being respectively a wonderfully accurate double of his or her prototype. For example, we may look upon Frederick the Great of Prussia, just as he is immortalized in bronze in the statue of him presented to our country by his loyal descendant, the Emperor of Germany, and recently unveiled on the esplanade of the new war college at Washington. We may see, too, the counterpart of Napoleon as he appeared on the field of Austerlitz, or sailing with his army the dreadful passes of the Alps, of Caesar, Rome's great dictator and Conqueror of the then known world, of the Emperor of Austria, the Kings of Sweden, Spain and Italy, of Wilhelmina, the beloved young Queen of the Netherlands, and of others, arrayed in armor or royal robes. Such a living portrait gallery as this surely must be well worth seeing, in connection with the wild beasts, arctic and hippodramatic attractions of which it forms a brilliantly conspicuous feature.

A Famous Son Of Princeton.

Princeton is the Alma Mater of many brilliant scholars who have justified their university career in after life, and one of the most prominent of these is Judge George Gray, of Delaware. It is not too much to say that Judge Gray's reputation as a jurist is unsurpassed, and Princeton was proud to honor him in 1889 when he was given the degree of Doctor of Laws. But though it was at Princeton that he graduated, his legal studies were pursued at Harvard, and from there he was called to the bar in 1868. For six years he practiced at New Castle and then went to Wilmington. Attorney-General of Delaware between 1879 and 1885 he was United States Senator from 1885 till 1899, and since then has been Judge of the United States Circuit Court. Much though he has distinguished himself as an advocate, a politician and a judge, his abilities shine most conspicuously as an arbitrator, and it will be remembered that when in 1902 the business of the country was near to disorganization through the anthracite coal strike he was appointed Chairman of the strike commission. As a Senator he was a member of the Foreign Relations and Judiciary Committees; and as a jurist was one of the Peace Commission which met at Paris in 1898, was president of the Joint High Commission at Quebec, 1898, and in 1900 was appointed member of the International Permanent Court of Arbitration under the Hague Convention. When Judge Gray was invited to join the International Policyholders' Committee he accepted at once, for he is a relentless enemy of graft and corruption and would see the funds of the New York Life and Mutual Life Insurance Companies controlled by honest men.

A Few Corrections.

A few things picked up from a child's schoolbook: Never say, "I don't think it will rain." What you mean is, "I do think it will not rain." "All over the world" is bad; say "Over all the world." "The reason why" is not only incorrect, but doesn't sound as well as "The reason that." In the King James version of the Bible, quoted by some authorities as a standard of pure English, one may find the following, which occurs in Isaiah xxxvii, 36: "Then the angel of the Lord went forth and spote in the camp of the Assyrians a hundred and fourscore and five thousand, and when they arose early in the morning, behold they were all dead corpses." In other words, the corpses arose early in the morning and found themselves dead. Don't say "A man fell off a dock." A man might fall off a dock, but to say that he fell off a dock is no better than to say he fell off a hole.

COMFORTING WORDS.

Many A Salisbury Household Will Find Them So.

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed; to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. To tell how this great change can be brought about will prove comforting words to hundreds of Salisbury readers.

W. A. Britton, Deputy U. S. Marshall, living on Main street, Crisfield, Md., says: "I consider Doan's Kidney Pills to be a remarkable remedy for kidney troubles and backache. I tried them some time ago. The use of the pills gave me the highest appreciation of this preparation, and I know it to be a very effective kidney regulator and remedy."

Plenty more proof like this from Salisbury people. Call at White & Leonard's drug store and ask what customers report.

New Church Opened.

The new St. Paul A. M. E. Zion Church, on E. Church street, was opened and dedicated on Sunday Oct. 7, 1906. Bishop G. W. Clinton, D. D., L. L. D., of Charlotte, N. C., delivered the "Dedication Sermon" at 9 p. m. Other preachers taking part in the services during the day were Rev. J. F. Moreland, Ph. D., Rev. J. H. Blake, Rev. C. W. Waters and Rev. G. M. Oliver, pastor of the new church. Dedication services continued each evening during the week.

At the various services $820.19 was raised towards paying off the debt on the church. Of this amount $100 was donated by Hon. W. H. Jackson, $25 by Mr. E. S. Adkins, $10 by Mr. W. B. Miller, $10 by Bishop G. W. Clinton and $12 by Dr. J. F. Moreland.

THE Salisbury Building & Loan and Banking ASSOCIATION

The Building & Loan Department, with its paid-up capital stock of $14,500.00, makes loans secured by mortgages, to be paid back in weekly installments of 30c, 40c, 50c, $1.00 or $2.00 per week, to suit borrower; and has been doing a popular and successful business since 1887.

The Banking Department was added in 1902 under authority granted by the General Assembly of Maryland of that year, to set apart $25,000.00 of the Association's capital stock for banking purposes. It receives money on deposits, makes loans on commercial paper, enters into such business transactions as conservative banks ordinarily do, and earnestly solicits the patronage of its friends and the general public. Open an account with us, no harm can possibly result.

CHURCH "TYING BEE."

Dekalb Young People Sell Old Papers And Magazines To Enrich Their Church Treasury.

The town of Dekalb, Ill., has a church that handles old newspapers and magazines to enrich its treasury for charitable and other purposes, says the Chicago News. The pastor, the Rev. George H. Wilson, originated the idea. He asked the church people to save all of their old reading matter and to search the house from basement to attic for the accumulations of years. The papers and magazines are then collected and stored in a big shed in the churchyard.

This custom resulted in a happy gathering of young people called a "tying bee," and it is believed to be a strategy of Dan Cupid, for, as one of the incidents of the festivities, the pastor soon may have several jobs of tying matrimonial knots. At stated intervals the young men and women of the congregation meet in the back yard of the church and proceed to tie up the great mass of newspapers and magazines that have been hoarded.

A local factory in Dekalb receives a great number of parcels tied up with stout cord. The factory people do not save this twine, but cut it off the parcels and then throw the pieces into a barrel. The boys and girls of the Rev. Mr. Wilson's church untie the knots and take out the tangles, and with the cord they tie up the bundles of newspapers.

When the church collects a carload of paper it is sent to Chicago. The papers bring 20 cents a hundred pounds and the magazines more. The church expects to realize $50 from a single carload, and the money will be spent where it will do the most good. All the pictures in the magazines are sold at the rate of 1 cent for the output of each magazine, a portrait collector of Dekalb contracting to take them.

INNOVATIONS OF A BANK

Bedroom in a Chicago Trust Company's Building.

Probably few persons ever thought of making a bedroom a feature of a bank. Chicago has one financial institution at least with such an adjunct, the Northern Trust company, which recently moved into its new building at Monroe and LaSalle streets, says the Chicago Post.

The building, one of the finest of its kind in the United States, has many innovations, but perhaps the most remarkable is the bedroom. The apartment is complete in its appointments. It contains two brass bedsteads, with downy coverings, cabinets, dressing tables, mirrors and shower baths. Should any director be kept late at the office or should any employee suddenly become ill this chamber would be at his service.

The building has luxurious smoking and club rooms also, and the women's rest room on the fourth floor, through the portals of which no masculine foot dare trespass, is said to be a model. The room is darkened, and the modulated light striking on the soft green carpet suggests nothing but peace and slumber. Spacious divans and perfumed sofa pillows invite rest and repose.

A Poet's Curious Compliment.

It was the habit of Richard Henry Stoddard, the poet, to always speak well of every one. No matter how bad the character of a person, the good gray poet invariably found some trait to praise. One day in his office on Park row some friend entered and asked him whether he knew so and so, and, if so, what was the man's reputation. It happened that the man had a shady reputation and was well known as a "gold brick" operator. The aged poet lighted his pipe and answered: "Yes, I know him. He is the most energetic, progressive, irrepressible, good natured, artistic kind of an unmilitated rascal that I ever met."—Leslie's Weekly.

Cold Storage in Irish Bogs.

For long it puzzled me to know what the poachers did with the birds they shot in July. There is no cold storage in the north of Ireland, but they have discovered an excellent substitute. The birds are buried four or five feet deep in dry peat, and, I am told, come out perfectly fresh at the end of two or three weeks. When one remembers the bog butter dug out of the peat bogs in a comparatively fresh state after being buried for probably 200 or 300 years, it is not difficult to believe that grouse might keep, under the same circumstances, for two or three weeks.—Letter in Country Life.

The Tact Market.

Chancellor James R. Day was once advising a young undergraduate of Syracuse university to cultivate tact. "But, alas," he said, "I fear that advice on such a subject must always be wasted. On tact the last word was spoken by Barbey d'Aureville when he said:

"If tact could be bought, only those already possessed of it would want to buy it."

Well Supplied.

Singleton—I suppose your wife has a lot of will power. Wedderly—Yes, but she has a lot more won't power.—Chicago News.

An angry man is again angry with himself when he returns to reason.—Publius Syrus.

FISH FOR MANY STREAMS.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Undertake Novel Experiment Of Distributing Minnows In Mountain Streams.

Early in this year the Pennsylvania railroad undertook a rather novel experiment, that of assisting in stocking the mountain streams of Pennsylvania with fish, says a Philadelphia special dispatch to the Pittsburgh Dispatch. The experiment has proved so successful that henceforth it will be continued with increased vigor. The company in this work is co-operating with the United States government and the state of Pennsylvania.

More than 150,000 minnows, none of them more than an inch long, have been turned over to the railroad by the state of Pennsylvania. The state department of fisheries did not have enough money at its command to distribute properly all the fish it had to dispose of, and when all the clubs and individuals that wanted any had finished putting in their applications it looked as if the other thousands would have to be thrown away.

It will take three years for the fish to grow to maturity, and then those that haven't died will be from six to ten inches long. Before the three years are up, though, many more fish will have been distributed in the same way by the Pennsylvania. It is expected that the scheme will result in developing a very fine line of fish in the streams of the Allegheny mountains.

DEPOSITORY FOR WILLS.

Brooklyn Surrogate Says Safe Place Should Be Provided For Them.

Surrogate James C. Church of Brooklyn in refusing to admit to probate the will of David Halstead suggested recently a public or private depository for wills, says the New York Times. He said there should be some place designated where they could be safely kept until the death of the testator.

Mr. Halstead's will, which had been in existence several years prior to his death, was destroyed and never offered for probate. As both witnesses to the document are now dead, Surrogate Church found that there was not sufficient evidence of its execution and refused to admit it to probate.

Foldhu Signals Reach the Alps.

One of the curious possibilities of wireless telegraphy, and one also that shows how much remains to be accomplished in the way of perfecting detail before wireless telegraphy can command public confidence for public use, has recently been brought to light in Switzerland, says the London Globe. There is at Fort Stoeckli, on Mount St. Gothard, a wireless telegraphy station which during the hot summer months has been subjected, especially during the hour immediately following midnight, to strange influences which for some time baffled the operators. These influences became stronger as the heat became more intense, and then the receiving apparatus solved the mystery by reproducing nightly, especially between midnight and 2 a. m., a series of messages—in English. The explanation was that owing to the marked presence of electricity in the atmosphere of the Alps during the high temperature messages from Foldhu, in Cornwall, were reproducing themselves on Mount St. Gothard.

Colors That Cure Consumption.

The value of light as an agent in curing diseases is becoming increasingly recognized, says the Chicago Journal. The latest development of the idea is the assertion of a medical man that the clothes worn by consumptives should be of a color which will allow the light to penetrate the body. White materials, it is found, are the best for this purpose, and consumptives are consequently advised to clothe themselves in snowy raiment, either of linen, velvet, cotton or cloth. Silk, however, is barred.

Far Enough.

One day when William M. Evarts, secretary of state under President Hayes, was a college student he was called on to read Virgil in class.

He started out bravely. "Three times I strove to cast my arms around her neck, and— and"—adding lamely—"that's as far as I got, professor."

"Well, Mr. Evarts," said the professor, "I think that was quite far enough."

Grumbling.

Grumbling is a potent cause of ill health. It keeps the sensitive nerves constantly vibrating with discordant emotions and not only hurts the grumbler, but every one who hears it. It really prepares the system of the grumbler for an attack of any malady that happens to be prevalent.

Slight Mistake.

"Walter, what does this mean? Twenty-five francs for two hard boiled eggs?"

"Very sorry, sir. Slight mistake, sir. I've given you the bill intended for the American at the next table."—Pele Mele.

An Air Brush.

Dottie was asked, "What is a fan." After a moment's thought Dot replied, "A fan is a thing to brush warm air away with."

But human bodies are sic fools, for at their colleges and schools, that when nae real ills perplex them they make enow themselves to vex them.—Burns.

SATURDAY, OCT. 20, 1906.

Republican Ticket.

For 60th Congress of the United States:
HON. WILLIAM H. JACKSON,
of Wicomico County.

Mr. Jackson's Splendid Record.

The campaign in the First Congressional District of Maryland is nearing a close, and has been up to this time one of the most quiet campaigns ever conducted in this State. That the voters are now becoming thoroughly aroused, however, to the necessity of decisive action, is very apparent, and from now on until the election a lively interest will be taken in matters political throughout the district.

Hon. William H. Jackson today represents a party who has given this country the splendid and unparalleled prosperity which it is now enjoying, and it is absolutely essential for the welfare of the people that the same magnificent policies and splendid principles which have actuated and permeated the government under the present administration, shall be continued. Mr. Jackson is the only candidate now before the voters of the District pledged to a continuation of the matchless record which has been made by the country in recent years.

But apart from this, his own record, as we have had occasion to point out heretofore, in the Fifty-Seventh and Fifty-Eighth Congresses, is one of actual and splendid results,—results which have been felt from one end of this district to the other, and few men have ever represented the Eastern Shore whose actual accomplishments have been greater or of more pronounced benefit to the entire people. True, we have had more brilliant men, more polished speakers, more commanding figures, but brilliant oratory and finished rhetoric and magnificent specimens of manhood never secured a single rural route or obtained a solitary appropriation. The people want results, and are content that some one else shall be represented by the spectacular. Mr. Jackson's accomplishments along the line of rural routes and appropriations will endure long after he has passed away and long after his critics have been forgotten, and will be a lasting memorial of his indefatigable toil in behalf of the people of this District. The time has long since passed when men can ride into prominence and power upon "flower bedecked wings" of a "silver tongued oratory," and decidedly more is required than the peculiarly potent gift which can hold men "spell-bound" by a glittering display of rhetorical pyrotechnics. Indeed, if this were a condition precedent to election, this district would be destined to go unrepresented in the Sixtieth Congress of the United States, for whatever may be the gifts and graces or faults and vices of the three candidates who have been nominated, oratory can certainly not be placed in their list of accomplishments.

The opponents of Mr. Jackson may be able to search in vain through the Congressional Record for speeches upon the various problems which confronted Congress during his terms, but when it comes to hard work and faithful service there were few who did better work and service throughout the entire time than he did. Indeed, as a matter of fact, the business of the House of Representatives is not conducted amid the limelight, under the inspiration of crowded galleries and interested listeners, but in the numerous Committee Rooms, where hard common sense, business judgment, cool calculation and mastering genius are the dominant elements which mould and shape the legislation which eventually weaves itself into the law of the land. In this work, Mr. Jackson's remarkable business qualifications stood him in excellent stead, as well in the thousand and one routine matters of vital import to his constituents, all of which were faithfully and zealously attended to.

Born and raised amid humble surroundings, he has risen to prominence, power and wealth by his own delving toil and struggle and the activity of his own fertile brain. No rich ancestor poured into his lap the accumulated fortunes of years nor the prestige of a public career. What William H. Jackson is today has been wrought out by his own hand amid a thousand and one discouragements, not one of which was ever allowed to interfere with the constantly increasing scope of his daily activity.

Not only does he today stand upon a platform pledged to the continuation of the Republican policies and principles which have made glorious the history of this country in the last decade, but he stands upon his own platform of work well and faithfully performed, of splendid achievements and magnificent results; with the solemn pledge and promise that with his return to Washington the same work, the same fidelity, the same conscientious discharge of duty which have ever characterized his service in the past, will continue to dominate and permeate the record of his public life.

Editorial Jottings.

The election will soon be here.

The American "rainy season" is at hand again.

All strangers in town this week were credited with being Christian Endeavorers.

Not a ray of sunshine pierced the leaden skies during the entire time the Christian Endeavor delegates were with us.

The "North-Easter" and the Christian Endeavor delegates arrived in town simultaneously, and stuck to each other manfully.

Well we have all seen it! Dock street is actually paved, and the man who can lay 27000 bricks in a single day had a tremendous audience around him all the time he was at work.

Secretary Taft says he is not a candidate for the Presidency, but it is "ten to one" that the head of the War Department wouldn't run very hard if he really thought the Presidency were actually pursuing him.

It is a pity they do not try Thaw. By the time the trial takes place, the public will almost have forgotten the man he murdered. But that is an old trick of lawyers. The farther away from the crime, the better the chance of an acquittal.

It is too bad the Carnegie Hero Fund Commissioners cannot come to Salisbury for a while. Any man who can travel up and down the streets of Salisbury and successfully avoid the thousand and one pitfalls, is entitled to the highest class medal which can be awarded at the hands of the commissioners.

The numerous banners flying above the streets of Salisbury during the last week and the gaily decorated stores on Main street have given the city quite a gala appearance. It is unfortunate that the weather was inauspicious, but then the weather always has had a decided peculiarity of being utterly and totally oblivious to our most pressing wants and heartfelt desires.

Mr. Hearst is running his campaign full blast and the vengeance with which the Journal has been soaring on its yellow striped wings is a caution. But he seems to be getting the decidedly cold shoulder from his own people, and the chances at this time are most emphatically against him. It would be exceptionally unfortunate if a man of his calibre should be elected to the Governorship of New York.

The boxing contest between McGovern and Corbett on Wednesday was another magnificent specimen of Twentieth Century enlightenment and civilization(?). In the second round, McGovern opened a gash over Corbett's left eye from which the blood poured in a perfect stream, and by the end of the round, both fighters were covered with blood from head to foot. But Philadelphia always could distinguish itself in a most successful manner!

The Fifteenth Annual Convention of the Maryland Christian Endeavor Union, which has been in session in town during the week, has been a decided success, and Salisbury has had an exceptionally rare treat. The proceedings of the convention have been intensely interesting and profitable, and quite a number of speakers of national prominence have spoken to large and appreciative audiences. The presence of this large body of Christian workers in Salisbury proved a veritable blessing and benediction, and when the delegates left yesterday they left with the best wishes of our people, and the heartfelt desire that peace, plenty and prosperity should ever attend them.

It is the easiest thing in the world to object to the method things are being done when the "other fellow" is doing the work, but we confess we are totally at a loss to understand how a single valid reason can be assigned for reducing the width of North Division street to the extent that is now being done. Just north of Main street the curb is being placed seventeen inches away from the present cement pavement and there will be about as much waste space on the other side of the street. In addition to this, the curb is six inches wide, which will make a total reduction in the width of the street of nearly four feet. After having passed through every conceivable stage of mud and slime in all its most hideous forms and horrible shapes upon the public streets of this place during the last year, we are too profoundly thankful for the dawn of a glorious relief to do very much strenuous "kicking." But at the same time we fancy the time will come when the city fathers who are now so flippantly extravagant with the public highways will seriously regret the loss of so much valuable space upon a thoroughfare already entirely too narrow, and at times even congested.

The business of the company, as given in the articles of incorporation, is to own, lease, construct or operate a telephone line or lines through Hoopers Island to the storehouse of William F. Applegar, in Lakes district, and to points in Dorchester county from Hoopers Island. The principal office is to be at Golden Hill. The capital stock is $2,500.

—Commander Thomas C. B. Howard having recently reported to the Board of Public Works that his investigation of the oyster bars of the bay and rivers has shown a remarkably large increase in the quality of small and unmarketable oysters, the board has determined that these oysters must not be caught and destroyed by being dumped on the shell piles of the oyster-houses throughout the State, and has just issued, through the Commander, emphatic orders to all inspectors and measurers to enforce the cull law rigidly, and that all who are found negligent in this respect may look for their dismissal.

—Snow Hill Messenger: "Mr. and Mrs. Martindale M. Vickers, of Palatka, Florida, spent several days of this week at the Hotel Parnell of this town. Mr. and Mrs. Vickers are on their wedding trip, and have spent several weeks visiting friends and relatives on the Eastern Shore and in Delaware. Mr. Vickers is editor of the Palatka News, and is ex-Mayor of Palatka, which is a thriving town, having a population of about 6,000 inhabitants. Mr. Vickers is a graduate of Snow Hill High School, and learned the printing business in the office of the Democratic Messenger." Mr. and Mrs. Vickers, who have spent a large part of their honeymoon in Salisbury as the guest of Mr. Vickers' sister, Mrs. D. J. Elliott, on Park avenue, left yesterday afternoon on the steamer Virginia to return to Palatka. Mr. Vickers has a fine tenor voice and took a prominent part in the Christian Endeavor Convention music this week, singing a solo in one of the choruses. During his stay here he has also sung a solo at both the Salisbury Methodist Protestant Church and the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church.

Lacy Thoroughgood Keeps The Clothes That are Worth Coming After at Prices That Nobody Objects To.

People get at Thoroughgood's what they can get nowhere else in Salisbury and everybody is beginning to realize that fact, the truth about clothes is that they must be of good quality or they are expensive at any price. The material as well as the tailoring must be right or the clothes will not stand wear and tear. Thoroughgood's clothes fulfill to the limit these requirements, and not only are they guaranteed by Lacy Thoroughgood but by the maker. Our clothes have a style and individuality not obtainable in ordinary ready-to-wear clothes. In the long run you'll find it pays to buy clothes from Lacy Thoroughgood. People say we sell clothes of a higher grade than others. At no other store in this city can you buy clothes made by B. Kruppshimer & Co., Chicago—Alfred Benjamin & Co., New York—Michaels, Stern & Co., Rochester, N. Y.—Ab. Kirschbaum & Co., Philadelphia. These are the kind of clothing that you see advertised in all the leading magazines and newspapers. We sell these clothes not a cent higher in price than our competitors charge for much lower grades. They know—so will you if you'll try us just one time.

MR. BENJAMIN'S FUNERAL.

Large Concourse Of People At Presbyterian Church Where Services Were Held.

The funeral services of the late Mr. Albert J. Benjamin, for years one of the most prominent and widely known citizens of Salisbury, took place Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Wicomico Presbyterian Church, of which he had been a member for many years. To accommodate the large number of railroad employees of the two railroads of which Mr. Benjamin was the superintendent, two specials were run along the line of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway, stopping at all points. A third special was also run and connected with the steamer Cambridge from Baltimore, bringing a number of the officials from the Baltimore offices of the two transportation lines.

The floral offerings were numerous and of surpassing excellence and beauty. Tributes were received from the general offices in Baltimore and the office in Salisbury and from the different departments of the railway service of the two lines. Other organizations in which Mr. Benjamin was interested also contributed their silent, but beautiful, testimonial to the esteem and honor in which the deceased was held.

The officiating clergymen were Revs. S. W. Reigart, T. E. Martindale and W. S. Phillips. In naming the honorary pallbearers last week in The Courier, the name of Mr. W. Irving Todd was inadvertently omitted from those composing the session of the church. Mr. Todd has been an elder, and therefore a member of the session of the church, for 50 years, and during that time has helped to bury nine other elders. He is the oldest member of the church.

The following action was taken Monday night in connection with the death of Mr. Benjamin by the session of the church:

Whereas, It has pleased the Great Head of the Church to remove from the midst of us our colleague in the eldership, the Clerk of the Session, Mr. Albert J. Benjamin, we would put on record our high appreciation of his labors among us. As a member of session, he was prompt and regular in his attendance upon his meetings; deeply interested in the promotion of the peace and prosperity of the church, taking an active part in the work of the Sabbath School and the improvement of its choir. As the clerk of the session, he was efficient and painstaking—taking pride in the recording and preservation of the history of the church. While we mourn our great loss, we yet acquiesce in the Divine Will, recognizing in it a call to increased fidelity on our part praying that the consolation of God may be multiplied to the bereaved family of our brother, and that this Divine Providence may result in the quickening of the piety of the church and drawing the membership more closely in the bonds of christian love.

S. W. Reigart, Moderator.
L. W. Gunby, Clerk.

At a meeting of the Committee of the Wicomico Presbyterian Church held Tuesday evening, the following resolutions appropriate to the death of Mr. Benjamin were adopted:

Whereas, It has seemed good to the Almighty Disposer of Events to remove from our midst our late worthy and esteemed colleague Albert J. Benjamin, and

Whereas, The intimate relations long held by the deceased with the members of this Committee render it proper that we should place upon record our appreciation of his services to the Church and his merits as a man, therefore be it

Resolved, That we deplore the loss of Albert J. Benjamin, our associate, with deep feeling of regret, softened only by the confident hope that his spirit is with those who, having fought the good fight here, are reaping their reward in a better world.

Resolved, That we tender to his bereaved family our sincere condolence and our earnest sympathy in their affliction at the loss of one who was a good citizen, zealous christian, and an upright man.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes, a copy thereof be transmitted to the family of the deceased, and that they be published in the local papers.

H. Laird Todd, Chairman,
F. Marion Slemmons, Secretary.

The will of the deceased was probated in the Orphans' Court for Wicomico county, last Tuesday. The will was drawn by Mr. Benjamin in 1889, and was witnessed by Mr. Jay Williams and Mr. W. B. Miller.

It bequeaths to the widow of the deceased the income from all the real and personal property during her widowhood, and if she should marry again she is to have one-half absolutely; at her death the real and personal property is to be divided equally between the three children—Mr. Alan F. Benjamin, Mrs. J. D. Wallop and Mrs. Hugh J. Phillips.

The entire estate is valued by the heirs at about $40,000. The life insurance and stocks are placed at $18,000 and the real estate at $22,000. The widow is left sole executrix, without bond.

The Adventure of Mrs. Niggsworth

HEARING a noise in the lower hall, Mrs. Niggsworth got out of bed, grasped a pillow and rushed toward the stairs.

"Ma, ma, don't!" cried little Rosie Niggsworth. "Please stay here with me."

"Be quiet, child," her mother replied, "and stay where you are!"

With wonderful nimbleness the lady went down the stairs and at the bottom leaped upon a man who was crouching behind the newel post as if to escape her notice. There was no light save for a small streak that came from an electric lamp on the corner and found its way through a chink in the window shade.

"Oh, you will, will you?" the lady cried, fairly leaping upon the intruder and clapping her pillow over his head and face. "I'll teach you a lesson that I don't think you'll forget in a hurry!"

Then by a dexterous twist she succeeded in getting her fingers into his hair. With a quick jerk she swung his head against the sharp corner of the newel post before he could recover from the shock he had sustained when she had flung herself upon him and he collapsed, rolling over on the floor as if he had been felled with an ax.

At that moment little Rosie and the hired girl got downstairs and the lights were turned up.

"Merciful heaven!" cried Mrs. Niggsworth as she looked at the upturned face of the unconscious housebreaker.

"I thought it was pa!"

After which she fainted, and before they could revive her the thief made his escape.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Caddie's Reply.

Walter J. Travis, the golfer, set up his ball and then made half a dozen swishes at the short grass with the driver.

"I am not in good form," he said. "I am playing like a broker we have here last week."

"This broker played once around, making a dreadful exhibition of himself. Of this, though, he was not aware. He was doing pretty well for him."

"The man's caddie was an unusually quiet, stolid lad, a boy with a freckled face, quite devoid of expression."

"And since the caddie never once laughed or sneered at his bad play the broker took a fancy to him. And he said at the end of the round, in the hope of getting a compliment:

"I have been traveling for the last six months. I am quite out of practice. This is why I am in such bad form today."

"The caddie replied calmly: 'Then you've played before, have ya, sir?'—Kansas City Independent.

All-looked Alike.

Uncle Eph had long boasted that he had never needed the services of a doctor, but now he was ill, and his neighbor felt that the time had come when a physician should be called.

"Come, now, Uncle Eph," said she, "we will call whoever you wish. You know there's a good allopath and a good homeopath, and there's a new doctor, an osteopath. Now, who'll you have?"

"Waal," drawled Uncle Eph, "I dunno ez it matters. They do say that all paths lead to the grave!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Particular.

"Why do you bring a strainer with the glass of milk?"

"Some people are so particular about a few flies."—Ellegende Blatter.

No Needless Waste.

The goldfish in the little aquarium had thrived quite well until a few weeks after they had been entrusted to the care of the new maid, when they were found feebly floating almost on their backs.

"Harriet," called the anxious mistress, "have you given the fish any fresh water lately?"

"No, ma'am," answered Harriet, "they haven't drunk the water I gave them last month yet."—Woman's Home Companion.

The Hornet.

"I love to sit," he softly said, "On banks of velvet grass, Where crystal streamlets ripple by, Still singing as they pass. I love to watch the velvet bee Suck honey from the flower, And purple harebells bud and blow Within a woodland bower."

"I love to sit"—But here he rose With more of speed than grace, A look of great surprise and pain Upon his startled face. No more he speaks a sylvan seat To gracefully adorn it, Because on that occasion he Sat down upon a hornet. —Edna Irving in New York Herald.

The Power of a Ring.

She was homely and to most persons unattractive, yet as she entered the train a sort of halo seemed to surround her as one set apart from common mortals. There was no indication of exceptional talent, ability or endowment about her, no evidence of superiority, but a certain indefinable distinction. It was not quite an air of conquest, though suggestive of satisfactory achievement. She bore her head high and wore a Buddha-like expression of proud serenity.

Only a moment was she settled in her seat when off came her gloves, and then the key to the problem was evident. The long, joyous look bestowed upon the sparkling ring on the third finger of her left hand told the story.

That left hand had a busy time. It investigated the lingerie hat poised coquettishly over the face of one no longer young. It made sure that her brooch was fastened. It pulled her silken skirts closer about her. It tightened the straps to her traveling bag sitting in the aisle, and so on indefinitely, occasionally pausing for a caressing glance from the tired but beaming eyes.

The gay little scintillations from the diamond flashed out the song, "Engaged, engaged, engaged!"—New York Press.

Things That Happen Only Abroad.

She was an obvious American, and she brought a breath of hominy into the coffeeur's in Hanover street. Said she, "I want you to send a man, right away, down to the Cecil to shingle my daughter's bang."

M. Toupet—Madam, I am a coffeeur, not a building contractor.—Pall Mall Gazette.

What He Meant.

Little Harold had been directed by the teacher to write the word folly. "I can't," said Harold, "cause my pencil's busted."

"Why, Harold! What did you say was wrong with your pencil?"

"It's busted." "Degr me! Children, can any of you tell what Harold means? I'm sure he hasn't used the right word."

Up went the hand of little Marjorie. "Ah, Marjorie, dear, I thought you would know. What does Harold mean?"

"He meanth that hith penhith ith buththith."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Wise Man.

Dashaway—I want you to meet Miss Hopper. Stunning girl. Just back from Europe.

Clevertown—Her first visit? Dashaway—Yes.

Clevertown—Well, old man, if it's all the same to you, I'll wait until she's got through telling about it.—New York Life.

Popularity.

"You will admit that he is a very popular man."

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne, "but it is sometimes with people as with musical compositions—their popularity is in inverse ratio to their merits."—Washington Star.

Chauffeur Versus Chiffonier.

Mrs. Uppson—I suppose you have a first class chauffeur?

Mrs. Nearch—Yes, indeed; we have one of solid mahogany, with five drawers and a French plate glass mirror on top.—Detroit Tribune.

Subjective Drowning.

The dentist's chair was tipped so far back that escape for the village seamstress, a lady of remarkable conversational ability, was impossible. Wads of absorbent cotton were tucked beneath her tongue, some patent appliance held her jaws apart, and all the lower half of her countenance except one back tooth was concealed under a decidedly damp rubber dam. The patient's mouth was full of water, speech was impossible, and the poor, naturally talkative lady was suffering agonies of discomfort.

The engrossed dentist paid no heed to her squirmings or to the appeal in her eyes. Fortunately, however, the patient's hands were free. Groping in the reticule that hung from her belt, she brought forth paper and pencil and wrote:

"Help! Help! I'm drowning."—Youth's Companion.

The Blind Historian.

William Hickling Prescott, who was born at Salem, Mass., on the 4th of May, 1796, was the son of a prosperous lawyer, entered Harvard college in 1811 and graduated in 1814. Early in his college career he had his left eye blinded by a piece of bread playfully thrown at him by a fellow student, and the other eye soon became sympathetically affected. He traveled in England, France and Italy and then devoted himself to severe study, but it was not till the beginning of 1826 that he found the work of his life within the range of Spanish history. Fortunately his means were ample, so that he was able to procure the services of assistants and to live amid conditions of comfort. By constant habit he gained the power of carrying a great deal in his memory, and after he had reviewed the whole of a chapter in his mind he quickly transferred it to paper by means of his stylus and an ingenious writing case especially constructed for the blind. He published his "History of Ferdinand and Isabella" in 1838, which carried his name across the ocean to the old world. This was followed by his "History of the Conquest of Mexico" in 1843, and of "Peru" in 1847. These gave him a great reputation.

Suffering Will Not Help Your Disease, but Will Weaken Your Nerves.

Folks who think it is better to bear pain than soothe it—are wrong. Old-fashioned doctors used to say it was better, because they had nothing with which to ease pain but dangerous, heart-paralyzing drugs.

But now, that a safe remedy has been found, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, it is wrong to suffer, for nothing can be gained but weakened nerves.

A safe rule to remember is: When in pain, take an Anti-Pain Pill. This will soothe your quivering nerves.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills relieve pain by restoring the natural secretions, in which they differ from opium and similar narcotic drugs, which relieve pain by checking the action of the glands.

They are sure and harmless, and are the latest medical treatment for the cure of Headache, Neuralgia, Backache, Rheumatism, Dismisses, Toothache, Stomachache, Menstrual (Monthly) Pain, Also nerve irritations like Sea-Sickness, Car-Sickness, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, etc.

Pleasant to take, quick in results. "I have used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for sick, nervous headache, and have received the best results. I heartily recommend their curative properties, for they are successful."—RAY A. WATROS, D. D., Iowa City, Ia. Sold by druggists, at 25c. Money back if first box does not help. Never sold in bulk.

Nurse Helen

By ISOLA FORRESTER

Copyright, 1906, by Ruby Douglas

The first recollection Derrick had of her was very hazy.

There had been the fight outside of Kid Murray's. He remembered that, every detail of it. For nearly a week he had been waiting for it to come off, on a tip from the union secretary. And it had all come true. The very night that Barker had landed from Pittsburgh they had prepared his reception in memory of the speeches he had made before the coal barons. He had been faithful, Barker had. He had dabbled and parleyed and dined and hobnobbed and, as Murray said, played the fool generally, and the wine of it all had made him heady, and this while thousands of strikers waited on his word and their children and wives waited for daily bread.

It was not wise of Barker. Even Derrick could see that, and Derrick was merely reporter for what Murray called the "pink sheet." So the night that Barker returned to make his explanatory address in Central hall Derrick was on hand to see the fun. He saw it. Not only that, but he was right down in the middle of it, and when the boys made a dash for Barker as he tried to glide out the back window he went with them, not knowing exactly why, but crazy with the sight of the running fox, like the rest of the hounds.

They caught him outside of Murray's, and those who could not get their hands on him began to throw things. Some of the things went astray, and when the melee was cleared and Barker had been thrown up by the tide into an ambulance Derrick, the "pink sheet" reporter, was beside him with a battered cranium and a faintly riotous sense of victory, as he dropped into unconsciousness, of having got a "beat" on the other papers.

But the "beat" never came out, because for days the "pink sheet" reporter lay up at Bellevue, and the world spun round him in gray circles like a view of the fifth heaven. Then gradually out of the circling grayness he distinguished one shape that came and went with more tangibility than the other dreams. And one morning he opened his eyes and saw two real objects clearly, without the gray film. They were Nurse Helen and Barker.

Barker lay a couple of beds away from him. He could see the face on the pillow. The redness had left it, and some of the untoward mildness. The outline of the profile looked harsh and almost forbidding against the white pillow. And he was asleep.

Derrick glanced up at the nurse. She was dressing the wound on his head swiftly, deftly, easily, impersonally. A ward surgeon in white came by, stopped and bent forward to examine the wound.

"He can leave tomorrow," he said briefly and went on.

And suddenly Derrick changed his mind. He did not want to leave. He wanted to stay there forever and let this girl in gray and white pat him and wrap him up and ease him. Then he thought of Barker.

"Is he badly hurt?" he asked.

The nurse looked startled for an instant. At least her eyes lost their impersonal look and met those of Derrick. Then she understood.

"Yes. He will not be out for several weeks," she said quietly.

Derrick remembered swiftly. Several weeks! That would carry him past the 10th, and the 10th was the decisive day in Pittsburgh. And if Barker were not on hand at that arbitration meeting to daily and parley and fool around generally something definite might result. There was only one man to send in his place, Strogund, and if Strogund went there would be no parley, no fooling. He would win the strike.

"Have I been here long?" he asked. The nurse was clearing the table beside the bed of bandages and bottles. Derrick noticed that her hair was reddish brown beneath her cap. He could see the little curls around the edges.

"Two weeks ago yesterday you were brought in," she replied. "It is the 9th."

Derrick tried to sit up in bed. "Two weeks!" he gasped and dropped heavily back on his pillow.

"You must not do that," said the girl severely. "You have had a high fever and are still very weak. Don't you sit up again."

She went on, and Derrick closed his eyes. The grayness swept around him, circling, wheeling, waving, until he could not stop himself and was lost in its void. When he awakened it was night. There were two figures standing beside him, the girl nurse and an older woman.

"He is worse," the girl was saying. "Dr. Ingraham said he might leave tomorrow. I will be on again at 7. You had better not let them take him before Ingraham sees him again."

"Nurse."

It was barely above a whisper, but she heard and came to the bedside. "Will you send a telephone message for me?"

"To your friends?" The nurse was used to such requests, and this particular patient had seemed particularly friendly.

"Yes," Derrick tried to think clearly, to keep his grip on things before the grayness should come again. "Call up 3008 Main, ask for the 'City' room—for Yates. Tell him that Barker is laid up in Bellevue with a smashed head and can't go to Pittsburgh tomorrow. Tell him—oh, hang it, if I could only get on the wire for half a minute!"

"You must not excite yourself," said the nurse calmly. "You could not possibly travel to Pittsburgh tomorrow. You must be quiet and not worry."

Derrick stared at her. She thought he was Barker. And her eyes were dark blue, almost hazel, and she was young.

"I will send the message tonight," she said and walked away.

And Derrick smiled for the first time in many days and went to sleep without the gray void around him. She would keep her word. Yates would attend to the rest. They would be able to follow up the tip. He wondered vaguely which of the boys would be sent to Pittsburgh to cover the barons' end of the story, and then he smiled again, remembering the little nurse with the close curved lips and dark blue eyes who thought that he was Barker.

The next day Yates came to see him, Yates himself, clean shaven and cold blooded, but with the glimmer of appreciation in his eyes as he saw Barker two beds away.

"It went in this morning," he told Derrick. "There has been a general kickup over Barker's disappearance. Some said he was dead. But they thought he was simply laying low, to turn up high and dry at the meeting. Now they've sent Strogund since the extra came out."

Derrick grinned happily. He had had an idea it would be that way. And Barker was watching them, grimly, understandingly, his face looking oddly incongruous in its halo of white bandages. Yates nodded to him.

"Badly knocked out, Barker?" he asked pleasantly.

"But not done for yet," muttered Barker.

When he rose to go Yates gripped Derrick's hand.

"It was a very decent, timely thing to do, Derrick," he said. "The old man will appreciate it."

That was all, but it left Derrick radiantly joyous. When the nurse came around he couldn't help it. He had to tell some one, and he told her while she dressed his head. It was after 6 then. At 7 she went off duty for the night. When he had finished she was smiling, too, and her eyes were bright.

"I am glad for you. Yesterday I thought that you were Barker, and I didn't want to send the message. I am from Pittsburgh, and we know about Barker there," she added seriously.

"But you sent it?"

"I knew it didn't matter so long as he couldn't go."

Derrick laughed. The dear, delicious, foolishness of her. Didn't matter! He looked over at Barker and rejoiced over the smashed head that did not matter.

"They had an extra out again tonight," the little nurse was saying. "The strike has been settled by arbitration, but the strikers won."

"God bless Strogund!" said Derrick fervently, and Barker heard him. The nurse added gently:

"You are to leave in the morning, perhaps before I come on. Don't work hard at first and you'll be all right. Goodby."

"What's your name, nurse from Pittsburgh?" asked Derrick, looking up at the dark blue eyes.

She flushed. It is against the rules for nurses to flirt with fellow nurses or doctors in Bellevue, but they have not passed any rule barring patients as yet.

"Helen," she said—"Helen Hayward."

"Mine's Derrick—Wilfred Derrick." He lowered his voice so that Barker could not hear. "I'm going to see you, Nurse Helen, after I get out of this place tomorrow, because you and I broke that strike. You don't know how we did it, but I do, and I think you're a brick. May I, Nurse Helen?"

"Yes," said Nurse Helen under her breath. And Derrick held one of the slim white hands close to his lips and kissed it. There was no one to deny him, for Bellevue had not barred love from the patients yet, and Barker was looking the other way.

Measured the Time.

An old sailor was being examined in an assault case by a cute young lawyer, who questioned his veracity regarding a matter of time.

"You had no watch, and yet you are positive that the defendant was only ten minutes absent. I doubt if you are able to estimate ten minutes of time correctly," he said.

"Try me," said the old tar. The lawyer drew his watch from his pocket and said, "When I call out 'Now' you allow ten minutes to pass, and when it is up call out 'Time's up.'"

The old salt nodded, and the lawyer called out "Now." Slowly the time passed, and the lawyer, with watch in hand, tried to wheedle him into an admission that time was up. The sailor paid no heed and exactly at the end of the ten minutes shouted, "Time's up."

The bewildered lawyer turned round confused at the court's loud laughter, and his eye lighted on the courtroom clock behind him, which had assisted the old sailor in his task.

A Monster Musical Instrument.
The most gigantic harp ever constructed, as far as the record goes, was that made by Veritan, the provost of Burkli, near Basel, Switzerland, in 1787. That was a long while ago, but the fame of M. Veritan's gigantic harp was such that it is still occasionally mentioned by writers on the rare and the wonderful, just as the sea serpent, bloody rain, live mastodons, etc., are. M. Veritan's colossal musical instrument was 320 feet in length, and, on that account, was constructed in an open lot instead of in a harp factory. It was most simple in construction, consisting of fifteen wires strung tightly between two poles. These wires were of different sizes, the largest being one-sixth of an inch in diameter and the smallest one-twelfth of an inch. They were stretched north and south and inclined in such a manner as to form an angle of from twenty to thirty degrees with the horizon. This queer instrument was not intended as an exaggerated toy, but was constructed for the express purpose of foretelling changes in the weather, which were calculated by Professor Veritan according to the different tones the instrument made when the wind was blowing through it.

As You Please.

In the ancient times there lived a wonderfully wise man, of whom it was said that he could answer correctly any question put to him. There was one, however, who thought himself clever enough to outwit the sage. This man took a poor, captive bird and clasped it so closely in his hand that only the head and tail were visible.

"Tell me," said he to the renowned guesser of riddles, "is the bird which I hold in my hand alive or dead?"

If the answer were "Dead," thought this artful glotter, he would just open his hand and let the bird fly. If the answer were "Alive," he would with one little squeeze crush the poor bird to death.

But the wise man proved himself equal to the occasion and replied, "It is as you please."

Each one holds within his or her grasp the fair bird of life. Which is it to be? A blessing or a bane? It is "as you please."

Rossini's Laziness.

Rossini was one of the most indolent of men and in his younger days used to do most of his composing in bed. Once he had almost completed a trio, when the sheet fell out of his hand and went under the bed. He could not reach it, and, rather than get up, he wrote another. The lazy man, if he works at all, does so by spurts, and Rossini, working against time, wrote "The Barber of Seville" in thirteen days. When Donizetti was told of this he remarked, "It is very possible. He is so lazy!" The overture to the "Gazza Ladra" was written under curious circumstances. On the very day of the first performance of the opera not a note of the overture was written, and the manager, getting hold of Rossini, confined him in the upper loft of La Scala, setting four scene shifters on guard over him. These took the sheets as they were filled and threw them out of the windows to copyists beneath.

Evolution of the Sword.

During the first twelve centuries of the Christian era the sword varied little in the essential features from the lines of the broadsword. The blade was lengthened, it is true, and less curved, but the crosspieces of the hilt were usually straight, and the simple, workmanlike look was preserved. The change to the elaborate hilts of several centuries later was made gradually. There were slight changes in the crosspieces from time to time—the stiff straight lines little by little began to curve gently toward the blade. The knob at the end of the handle, usually a simple disk or ball of metal, was varied into a trefol, a fluting or a small Maltese cross. Blades and scabbards were engraved with inscriptions, a practice which had indeed been found in Danish barrows bearing unmistakable Runic characters cut in the bronze blades. The cross hilted sword the crusaders carried on their pious errands to the Holy Land not infrequently displayed the sacred monogram either carved or inlaid.

Making New Rubber Plants.

From a rubber plant which is growing in a living room, the best way to get plants is by scoring the bark of the limb where you want the roots to grow and covering the injury with sphagnum moss, which must always be kept damp. Roots will soon permeate the moss, when the limb should be cut off and potted.—Garden Magazine.

Couldn't Wait a Minute.

A Pittsburg man who suddenly acquired riches was desirous of purchasing a fast horse. He went to a dealer, who sold him an animal and guaranteed that he could trot a mile in 2:10. He took his purchase home and the next day drove down to the track to try him. Much to his disgust, the best the horse could do was a mile in 2:10. He returned to the dealer in a rage and said:

"You told me this horse could trot a mile in 2:10. He can't go a mile better than 3:10."

The dealer looked at him a minute and said:

"Well, what of that? Are you in such a terrible hurry you can't wait a minute?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Nanticoke.

A very pretty, but quiet, wedding took place at Nanticoke Tuesday, October 9, at 8 p. m., at the home of Mrs. George H. Travers, sister of the bride. The contracting parties were Miss Florence Bedworth and Mr. Charles Horner, of Cambridge. The bride was handsomely attired in a gown of smoke pearl silk with white trimmings and hat and gloves to match and carried a white prayer book. There were no attendants. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. R. Neese. After the marriage a reception was given by the bride's sister, attended by a few relatives and friends. The happy couple left next day for Cambridge, where they will reside.

HOW MR. JACKSON WAS HANDICAPPED.

welfare. He was elected to the Senate, and, among his other acts, he voted, in 1899, for Col. John Walter Smith for United States Senator. That was proper, and when Col. Smith became Governor he rewarded Mr. Smith's loyalty by placing him at the head of State Bureau of Statistics, a position which paid $3,500 per annum for four years. He named as his assistant Jacob G. Schonfarber, once prominent in the Federation of Labor, and now Mr. Schonfarber, who is a Baltimorean, to reward his former chief, is interfering in the campaign in the First district. He is sending circulars to workmen, telling them to vote for Mr. Smith for Congress.

By what right does Mr. Schonfarber tell the Eastern Shoremen how to vote?

Who has been the greater friend of the workmen, as demonstrated by their respective good deeds, Mr. Smith or Mr. Jackson? Ask the people of Wicomico county. Ask the hundreds of men employed by Mr. Jackson. It is true that Mr. Jackson has had more opportunity to aid the workmen, and he has done so, but suppose he had chosen to be a hard taskmaster and to grind his men down to the lowest wages for which he could secure their toil. He could have thousands of dollars annually by employing cheaper labor, but he has not done so. He could add to his income by exacting every cent for rent, but he does not do so.

While Mr. Smith has been willing and anxious to hold every office that came his way, Mr. Jackson avoided office. When he was prominent in Democratic politics prior to the Bryan campaign of 1896 he could have obtained any office which he desired at the hands of the same Democrats whose chief delight now is to throw slurs at him. But Mr. Jackson did not desire an office. He was content to aid his party without seeking the emoluments which come with party service. Even after he had cast his fortunes with the Republican party he was anxious, he has said, to serve as a private in the rear ranks, but he was prevailed upon by the state leaders of his party to become a Republican candidate for the state Senate in 1899 in order that he might do his part in placing the Republicans in control of the Senate to enable them to carry out the campaign pledges of 1896. After his defeat for the Senate he again retired to the rear ranks of his party, where he would have remained but for the demand which was urgent alike by Republicans and certain Democrats that he become a candidate for Congress in 1900. He accepted and was elected. Again in 1902 he was elected. In 1904, when again a candidate, he would have been elected if the tickets had been counted as cast, but the election law was manipulated to his disadvantage and the certificate of election was awarded to the Democratic candidate.

Speaking of the result of the election of 1904 as returned by the election supervisors, Mr. Jackson, in a recent interview said: "My sense of justice and the demands of my party friends, who had worked hard for me, required that I ask Congress to award to me the seat which had been given to my Democratic opponent on the face of the returns. I was not as anxious to occupy the seat as I was to expose to the people of Maryland and especially to the people of the Eastern Shore, the gross injustice and unfairness of the laws under which elections are held in this state. I was anxious to show that probably as many white as colored men are disfranchised under the present law. In that undertaking Mr. Rose, as my counsel, brought to the surface the injustice of the election law, and, I believe, paved the way for the movement in the last legislature for an improved election law. That movement would have been successful had the Democratic leaders been willing to stand up to their promises to amend the law. On the last night of the session, even after the midnight hour had passed, the Democrats brought in a bill which was only a semblance of what had been promised."

"I tell you this unjust election law is the crying evil of this state, and its repeal or amendment will be the issue which the people will make next year, whether the Democratic politicians want it or not."

Williams—Jacobs.

One of the prettiest fall weddings was solemnized Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock when Miss Emma E. Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo L. Williams, was married to Mr. J. Edwin Jacobs of Baltimore.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride by Rev. J. H. Geoghegan, of Quantico, in the presence of the immediate families of each, the bride and groom taking their position in the parlor, which was beautifully decorated with palms and out flowers. Mr. A. Everett Williams, cousin of the bride, played Lohengrin's wedding march at the entrance, and "Hearts and Flowers" during the ceremony with Mendelssohn afterwards. The bride wore a gown of white French batiste handsomely trimmed with baby Irish lace.

Immediately after the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served, after which Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs drove to Salisbury, where they left on the two o'clock express for an extended wedding trip North. Upon their return, they will reside in Baltimore.

Dorchester May Give Jackson Majority, Ity Of 1000.

A dispatch from Cambridge Monday to the Baltimore American says:

Hon. Thomas A. Smith, the Democratic candidate for Congress, has within the last few days asked several citizens of this county if they could explain to him the lack of interest in the present campaign by the party leaders in this county. Mr. Smith, of course, is more interested than any other individual, but hundreds of Democrats here are asking like questions, but nobody seems able or willing to throw any light on the matter.

If the party central committee for this county has not disbanded, it certainly seems to have abandoned all effort in Mr. Smith's fight. The only thing the committee has done so far as the public has any knowledge was to call the primaries and the county convention. The registration was neglected and no district meetings as yet have been arranged for.

On the other hand, the Republicans, under the guiding hand of their leader, Phillips Lee-Goldborough, are as thoroughly organized in every district and voting precinct as it is possible for them to be. They worked up their registration thoroughly, making large gains, and the numerous campaign committees are doing effective work in all directions.

The only matter now annoying the party organization in this county is the office of postmaster of Cambridge. The Phillips-Leons and influences, which are behind Capt. James Leonard as successor to Sewell M. Moore, the present postmaster, are very strong, and will have to be considered by Mr. Jackson and his friends. But with all the course of the Democrats in such that any little disturbance of this sort will not effect the majority of Mr. Jackson very seriously at this stage of the campaign. The most conservative Democrats say that Mr. Jackson will get 700 majority in Dorchester, but it will really be no surprise if his majority reaches 1,000.

REMINISCENCES OF CUTTER

"Poet Lariat" of "Innocents Abroad," Who Wrote Rhymes.

As the original of the "Poet Lariat" of Mark Twain's "Innocents Abroad" the late Bloodgood H. Cutter, the lovable old "Farmer Poet of Long Island," was placed among the immortals years ago, says the New York Sun. His other claim to fame is the collection of verses he has written for many years, doggerel fired at any object in sight at the drop of the hat and read with amusement all over the country. Also there was a romance in his life, but that happened so long ago that few are left to tell of it.

A famous traveler and friend of monarchs, he had filled the old Cutter home at Douglaston with interesting mementoes of his wanderings. There, too, was a collection of one horse shays and other vehicles that antedated the civil war by many years, and it was amid these old relics of early days that the farmer consciously or unconsciously added to the gaiety of things by sending forth his verses.

Pens and ink were not necessary to the poet. Even in the white heat of anger he would stop to saddle Pegasus. Only those who knew his thriftiness and frugality can appreciate his anger when he once discovered several small boys stealing the incomparable Cutter apples. Nevertheless, in the middle of his wrath over the theft he did not forget his gift of poetry, but thundered forth from the orchard fence these memorable lines, of which he was not the author:

He who takes what is not his'n
Surely shall be sent to prison.

Disaster did not daunt him. On one occasion the horse he was driving along a Long Island road grew skittish. The ramshackle buckboard was too debilitated to stand the strain to which it was being subjected, and just as Mr. Cutter was passing a field in which were working two German farm hands the carriage broke down with a crash. From amid the wreckage of the old buckboard the poet sang to the Germans:

Here, ye lovers of sauerkraut,
Come here quick and help me out.

When Mr. Cutter accompanied the famous Innocents abroad he amused the travelers during the journey by reading nightly epics on anything that had happened since the last effusion, from peeling potatoes to a storm at sea. Twain offers this sample of the poet at his best:

Save us and sanctify us and finally then See good provisions we enjoy while we journey to Jerusalem.
For so man proposes, which it is most true,
And time will wait for none, nor for us too.

This is one of the few examples of the poet's verse in which the verbs are not preceded by the word "did." He wrote thirty stanzas about Mrs. Mackay's election to the Roslyn school board. He wrote 100 separate "poems" on the subject of George Washington's coach, which he owned.

Old Fashioned Campaigning.

Charles Scott, one of the candidates in the Mississippi governorship race, will carry on his fight in the old fashioned way, says the New York Tribune. He will make his trips from town to town on horseback, riding with his campaign committee. Whenever the party fall to reach a town at night they will camp out. Colonel Scott, who probably will be the next governor of Mississippi, says that the people of the state like the simple life and that he is determined to show them that he is willing to live it both now and after he is elected.

CHILDREN MEET WITH BAD ACCIDENTS.

Elsie Hastings Falls Twenty Feet On Her Head And Flora Parker Is Hit On Skull With A Heavy Iron Wheel.

Two children in Salisbury met with accidents yesterday at different places that might be termed marvelous escapes from death. The first took place in the morning at the primary school building on Chestnut street. Elsie Hastings, about 10 years old, daughter of Mr. Job Hastings, while sliding down the banister leading from the first to the second floor, lost her balance and fell to the floor 20 feet below, barely escaping the sharp corners of a wash stand, on the first floor. Although the child landed on her head, she does not seem to be seriously hurt, with the exception that her face and lips are badly cut. Dr. J. McF. Dick rendered medical assistance.

The second accident took place at the home of Mr. W. S. Parker, on North Division street, during the noon hour. Mr. Parker is having a new house erected, and the workmen are putting on the slate roof had an iron wheel and rope arrangement for lifting the slate to the roof. The rope connecting with the wheel dangled about the ground where Mrs. Parker's four-year-old daughter, Flora, and some other children were playing. In some unaccountable way the wheel became unfastened and fell, striking the little girl directly on the head. She fell to the ground, screaming. The wheel weighs at least five pounds, and the fall was not less than 30 feet. Notwithstanding this, the skin on the child's head was not broken, and unless the skull is fractured or complications set in, Dr. F. M. Slemmons, who was called in attendance, thinks there will be no danger.

Annual Visitation Of Masonic Grand Officers.

The annual official visitation of the Grand Officers of the Grand Chapter, Royal Arch Masons of Maryland, to the local Royal Arch Chapter took place Tuesday evening last in the Masonic Temple at which time a large attendance was present.

The Grand Officers who were in town for the occasion were Grand High Priest, James T. Allen of Rockville, Grand Scribe, Rev. Dr. Wroth, and Grand Secretary, John H. Miller, both of Baltimore. Dr. Linthicum, also of Baltimore, who is quite prominent in the Grand Chapter accompanied the party, all of whom were quite complimentary in their references to the character of the work being done by this Chapter.

After a most excellent address by the Grand High Priest, and remarks by the other members of the party, the annual election of officers took place and resulted as follows:

High Priest, H. J. G. Byrd.
King, E. C. Fulton.
Scribe, E. H. Walton.
Treasurer, S. A. Graham.
Secretary, A. R. Leonard.

At the close of the chapter, a meeting of Gilbum Council, No. 12, the next highest Masonic body was held, and after initiating a large number of candidates, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Three Illustrious Master, H. J. G. Byrd.
Deputy Three Illustrious Master, E. H. Walton.
Principle Conductor of the Work, R. D. Grier.
Treasurer, W. H. McConkey.
Secretary, A. R. Leonard.

Mrs. B. Manko Dead.

News was received in Salisbury Thursday morning telling of the death in Philadelphia of Mrs. B. Manko, after an illness of a number of years' standing. Mrs. Manko was afflicted with cancer of the stomach, and some of the most prominent surgeons and specialists of the country had treated her, but in vain. The hopeless case and the strong and sad fight for life caused widespread interest and sympathy as Mrs. Manko, after trying one hospital, was removed to another and on to another, now seeming to gain a little and now losing in the battle for supremacy.

Mrs. Manko is survived by a husband and one child, Master Stanley Manko. The funeral services and interment will probably take place in Philadelphia.

Mr. Manko was well-known and respected in Salisbury, where for many years, until recently, he conducted a clothing store.

Death Of Miss Alice Rounds.

Miss Alice Rounds, aged 18 years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Purnell Rounds, died at her home on North Division street, early yesterday afternoon, after several week's illness of typhoid fever. She was a member of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church. Besides her parents, Miss Rounds is survived by four brothers and four sisters. Funeral services will be conducted at the home Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. T. E. Martindale, D. D.

Mr. William Goslee Passes Away.

Mr. William Goslee 37 years old, died Saturday night at his home at Whayland of typhoid fever. His condition seemed to be improving, but a relapse set in, and death was the result. Mr. Goslee was a merchant, his store being located near Whayland. Funeral services were conducted Monday in the Siloam Methodist Episcopal Church by Rev. W. W. White. Interment was in the burying ground in the church yard. Funeral arrangements were in charge of Mr. George C. Hill, of Salisbury.

CHORAL SOCIETY ORGAN- IZED IN SALISBURY.

Enthusiastic Meeting Is Held Tuesday Evening By Singers Of The Town, And Plans Are Laid For A Busy Winter.

Feeling that the excellent reputation gained at the Christian Endeavor Convention should be maintained, the chorus that rendered most of the special music at the Opera House meetings last Tuesday night organized a choral society to continue their musical efforts.

Prof. W. T. Dashiell, who so successfully directed the chorus at the convention, has offered to take charge of the new society, and the members are entering into the matter with much enthusiasm. It is the intention to produce an elaborate cantata this coming Christmas and Stalner's "Circus" at Easter. One other concert may be given in the early spring.

The music for the first entertainment has been ordered, and is expected to be here by next Tuesday night, when the first rehearsal will be held in the rooms of the Eastern Shore College, the use of which has been kindly donated by President M. T. Skinner. Out of town soloists may be engaged to take the principal parts in the concert.

Just such an organization as the Salisbury Choral Society will be a great help to the musical culture of the town. That Salisbury is not at all behind her sister cities of greater size is evidenced by the flattering comments made upon the convention music by some of the famous speakers at that gathering.

A number publicly remarked that, while they had heard larger choruses sing, they never heard one that excelled the one in Salisbury.

The membership of the society is not limited to the members of the convention chorus, but everyone that can sing fairly well and that will attend the meetings regularly are invited to become members.

Salisbury District Epworth League.

The seventeenth annual convention of Salisbury district Epworth League was in session at Laurel, Del., Tuesday and Wednesday, Rev. George C. Williams of Berlin, district president, being in charge.

Tuesday evening an address was delivered by Dr. Robert Forbes, secretary of the Board of Church Extension, Philadelphia, in which he briefly outlined practical plans for making the league more useful and interesting. Wednesday morning there was an interesting discussion on "Measuring up to Expectations," which was joined in by Rev. J. W. Fogle, Rev. J. W. Coloma and others, after which the district president read his report showing a hopeful growth in both members and interest.

In the afternoon, officers were elected as follows: President, Rev. George C. Williams, Berlin; vice-presidents, Mrs. J. W. Coloma, Princess Anne; Rev. J. W. Fogle, Girdlestone; Mrs. O. L. Martin, Parkley; Miss Maria Ellegood, Salisbury; secretary, Rev. T. R. Van Dyke, Deal's Island; treasurer, W. T. Townsend, Cape Charles; junior superintendent, Mrs. Adam Stengle, Salisbury.

The Juniors, led by Mary Holt, conducted a half hour meeting, demonstrating their method of work. Discussions on "Promotion of Temperance" occupied the remainder of the session.

In the evening Mr. Williams conducted a song service, which was followed by an address by Rev. T. E. Martindale.

Mrs. L. Atwood Bennett and Miss Clara C. Walton represented the local chapter at the convention.

On Inspection Tour.

Capt. Willard Thomson, vice president and general manager of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic and the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Railway Companies, accompanied by his official staffs, this week made his annual inspection tour of the lines of the two companies. The party left on the steamer Cambridge at 4.10 o'clock Wednesday afternoon for Calborne, the Eastern Shore terminal of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic route, where they spent the night. A special train was taken at Calborne Tuesday morning for the inspection.

The commissary department was well supplied, and while the journey was a purely business one, the bodily comfort of the party was carefully provided for. Caterer Harry Phillips of Salisbury was in charge of this feature. Those in the party besides Captain Thompson were Messrs A. H. Seth, chief clerk to Captain Thomson; W. L. Rothstine, auditor; T. Murdoch, general passenger and freight agent; T. A. Joyes, superintendent of steamer lines; R. H. Saulsby, W. H. Brown, E. P. Saxton, D. W. Downey, W. L. Little, M. O. Benjamin, J. H. C. Williams, J. M. Thomson, W. H. Thomson, A. S. Neely, J. A. St. Clair, W. U. Polk, G. F. Sharpley, I. E. Jones, F. Stratton, G. N. Brittingham, J. T. Porter and M. F. Young. The inspection was completed yesterday.

The Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company last week declared another 3 per cent. dividend on their preferred stock, 63 per cent. still being due the stockholders.

WHY MR. JACKSON WILL BE ELECTED.

Reports From All Points Of The First Congressional District Of Maryland Show Large Republican Gains In Registration.

All straws point to the election of Hon. William H. Jackson to Congress in the First District on Tuesday, November 6. This conclusion is arrived at after a careful canvass of the voters of the district and after a comparison of the gains and losses at registration, the Republicans showing a net gain of over 700. Voters anxious to see Mr. Jackson elected must not, however, take his election for granted. Overconfidence has lost many a battle on the eve of victory. Every voter on the Eastern Shore of Maryland who favors fair play, who favors honest elections and who wants in Washington a congressman in touch with the national administration, and, therefore, able to aid the Eastern Shore, must not only go to the polls on election day and vote his sentiments, but must also see that those who share his sentiments vote with him.

Mr. Jackson will be elected to Congress because the people of the Eastern Shore of Maryland delight to honor a man who has carved out his own career, who has met every obligation of life, who has striven to uplift his fellowmen by liberal endowment of churches, and who, by endowing at Salisbury one of the best-equipped hospitals in Maryland, has done his part in relieving the sick and the suffering. If Mr. Jackson's generosity in aiding others and in the rebuilding of his home town, Salisbury, after the disastrous fire of 1896, were not sufficient to insure his election to Congress—and it ought to be, and is—he would be elected because the people of the Eastern Shore love fair play, that fair play which can be brought about only by honest election laws. Here is the plain question: Shall the people of the Eastern Shore, shall the people of Maryland, instill in their sons the lesson that public honors are to be won by the manipulation of a dishonest election law or by the free and untrammelled expressions of the people? Is an honor worth the having if won by a dishonest election law?

"Our election laws must be amended," said Hon. William H. Jackson, in a recent interview. "The people are demanding that honest methods be employed in politics as in business. If a man does not pay his debts he loses his credit. If a political party is not honest with the people it loses its standing with them."

Just look at the election farce in this district two years ago. Four thousand ballots of legally qualified voters, white and colored, were thrown out. Is not this an imposition upon the people of this district? If those ballots had been counted as marked, I would have been elected by a good-sized majority. I did not get fair treatment at the polls. If I had, I would have been content to accept the result as claimed. I do not believe that men who know me can accuse me of 'kicking.' I always take my medicine. In Somerset county there was a deceitful fold of the ballot by which the names of the congressional candidates were concealed. The Democratic voters were forewarned. In every county of the district it was made easy for the most stupid and ignorant man to vote the Democratic ticket. Wide black lines were placed under the names of the Democratic candidates, or the names of Democratic candidates placed were either at the top or bottom of each group, while the names of Republican candidates were sandwiched in. Was this fair? Was it honest? The congressional committee has not yet decided how far it can go in reviewing the action of the supervisors of election who purposely make it easy for Democrats and hard for Republicans to vote. The question for the people of the First district to settle is whether they shall elect a congressman or whether he shall be elected for them by the men who constitute a majority of the boards of supervisors of elections.

Mr. Smith has occupied a seat in Congress during one part of a session. He has done as well as any other Eastern Shore Democrat could probably have done. A Republican could have done more because he would have been in touch with the leaders who dominate in every branch of the government, legislative and executive, at Washington. That fact is demonstrated by what was accomplished by Mr. Jackson during his two terms. He outstripped every congressman and every senator in the race for rural delivery routes for his district. He got these favors by going after them. He got every appropriation for the rivers and harbors of the Eastern Shore which he went after, except one, and that was passed upon favorably by the committee, but was left out of the general bill by the mistake of a clerk. He got these appropriations by constant effort and by daily visits to the homes of the members of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors. He followed up these visits by visits to the committee-room. Mr. Jackson can accomplish more for the Eastern Shore during the next two years than Mr. Smith or any other Democrat, because as a Republican he will be in closer touch with the President, with the leaders of his party in Congress and in the departments.

—The Republican State Central Committee for Wicomico county submitted the following names to Gov. Warfield, Tuesday, from which to select a successor to the late Albert J. Benjamin on the Board of Election Supervisors: Robert D. Grier, Samuel A. Graham, Walter B. Miller, Thomas H. Williams and John H. Tomlinson.

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed; to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. To tell how this great change can be brought about will prove comforting words to hundreds of Salisbury readers.

W. A. Britton, Deputy U. S. Marshall, living on Main street, Crisfield, Md., says: "I consider Doan's Kidney Pills to be a remarkable remedy for kidney troubles and backache. I tried them some time ago. The use of the pills gave me the highest appreciation of this preparation, and I know it to be a very effective kidney regulator and remedy."

Plenty more proof like this from Salisbury people. Call at White & Leonard's drug store and ask what customers report.

Corn husking is general throughout the community, and the work is being pushed rapidly while the weather is favorable. The yield this year, while no general complaint is heard, is not near so good as last. The long wet spell in the summer, just when corn needed attention most, prevented its proper cultivation and as consequence the ears did not mature as fully as they would otherwise. And where the land was inclined to be low and, flattery water stood a large portion of the time and the grain was drowned out. The average yield, however, is said to be about three-fourths.

Out Of Politics, But Working Hard.

The Hon. Alton B. Parker has let it be known that he is, for time being, out of politics, but there is nothing political in his works as a member of the International Policyholders Committee. There are other things in life besides politics and ex-Judge Parker has a future as well as a distinguished past. Honors come to him quite as a matter of course, the latest being his election to the Presidency of the American Bar Association. His career is a matter of common knowledge. Every American who is interested in public affairs knows that he had a brilliant career at the bar and on the bench crowned by the Chief Justiceship of the Court of Appeals of New York, which he held for six years and resigned only to accept the great honor which his party bestowed upon him at the St. Louis Convention of 1904, when he was nominated Democratic candidate for the Presidency. Moreover, it is admitted, even by his political opponents that had he been sent to the White House he would have upheld those traditions of integrity of character and purity of purpose which become associated with the office of America's Chief Executive. The fact that he identifies himself with any public movement is strong recommendation that the movement is an honest one, and well worthy of support. In the matter of the Policyholders' Committee his aim is nothing else than the protection of the savings of the 1,500,000 policyholders of New York and Mutual Life Insurance Companies, which can only be secured by bringing to an end the present managements, notorious for their greed and corruption. No member of the Committee has hung himself more ardently into the work in hand than the ex-Judge, who, as chairman of the Executive Committee, has indeed much to do.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our Records, one sent to the bereaved family, and published in the "Pathfinder" and county papers.

A BEASTLY BIG THING.

A Whole Performing Menagerie In One Arena.

When The Frank A. Robbins & Co. All New Great Feature Shows were being organized, the New York Clipper spoke of them as "The Birth of the Big One," and that description may be extended to that stupendously sensational feature which involves the introduction in one arena in simultaneous performances of almost every species of wild and domesticated beasts that can be safely handled in the open before an audience, and with enough brains to learn every trick possible to the limitations of quadrupedal anatomy. This colossal cosmopolitan assemblage of wise mammoths and cute and cunning creatures includes elephants, zebras, water buffalo, camels, dogs, goats, horses, llamas, ponies, donkeys, drumedaries, mules, bears, monkeys and sacred cattle and has cost its originator, Manager Robbins, a big lot of both "the long green" and trouble, but the years of expenditure, experiment and patient training have at length found ample reward in most impressive, surprising and amusing results. This millennium-like feature and all the other wild beasts, circuses and hippodrome ones of the enterprise named will be brought to us by special railroad trains on Wednesday, October 31.

Who Are Our Leading Dramatists?

"The foremost dramatists writing in English, Arthur Wing Pinero and Henry Arthur Jones, dominated the beginning of the active theatrical season in New York, the chief honors going to the lesser light," says the writer of "The Players" in the November Everybody's. "It seems to me that the work of James M. Barrie is really more important than that of these two wheel-horses of contemporary English drama, because he has greater imagination, greater feeling, and because his plays have more real significance; but in popular estimation and in the minds of those who are supposed to speak with authority, Pinero and Jones come first."

Local Rate Two and One-Half Cents A Mile on Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company announces that beginning November 1, the maximum rate for one-way tickets over its lines East of Pittsburgh and Buffalo will be reduced to two and one-half cents per mile.

Beginning same date the Interchangeable Thousand Mile Refund ticket, now sold for $30 with a refund of $10, will be sold for $25 with a refund of $5, when used in accordance with the conditions. As at present, this ticket will be good in the hands of the original purchaser only.

The sale of thousand mile tickets, good for any one and any number, on the lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad only east of Pittsburgh and Buffalo, will be continued at rate $20.

A Man's House Is His Castle

It should be fortified—protected with good paint. Ten houses are burnt up by sun decay, from not being properly painted, to every one that is destroyed by fire. And it costs but little to keep a house well-painted, if the right kind of paint is used. The best painter in the world cannot do a good job with poor paint, but give a good painter pure white lead and linseed oil and you will surely get a job that will look well and wear well. They are economical paints, because they cover so much surface and wear so much longer than ordinary paints. Let me give you an estimate on the best.

THE Salisbury Building & Loan and Banking ASSOCIATION

This Association has two separate and distinct departments: The Building & Loan Department and The Banking Department.

The Building & Loan Department, with its paid-up capital stock of $14,500.00, makes loans secured by mortgages, to be paid back in weekly installments of 30c, 40c, 50c, $1.00 or $2.00 per week, to suit borrower; and has been doing a popular and successful business since 1897.

The Banking Department was added in 1902 under authority granted by the General Assembly of Maryland of that year, to set apart $25,000.00 of the Association's capital stock for banking purposes. It receives money on deposits, makes loans on commercial paper, enters into such business transactions as conservative banks ordinarily do, and earnestly solicits the patronage of its friends and the general public. Open an account with us, no harm can possibly result.

NEW DIETETIC THEORY.

Made Good Or Bad By Food, Says
Bishop Fallows—Advocates
Scientific Feeding.

A brown bread egg sandwich for the Latin student and cereal salads for the kindergarten.

These are some of the propositions in the new dietetic philosophy expounded by Bishop Samuel Fallows of the Reformed Episcopal church, says a Chicago dispatch. The first announcement was made in a sermon by Bishop Fallows on the topic, "My People Are Perishing For Lack of Knowledge."

"There are more children literally starving in well to do families than there are in the homes of the really poor," said Bishop Fallows. "If every child was scientifically fed we'd have no moral baseness, no mental depravity, no spiritual ignorance."

"Feed the children for their needs; feed the little ones scientifically."

Here, according to the plan of Bishop Fallows, is a list of the good foods, classified according to the needs of all kinds and conditions of children:

For the thin, anaemic genius two generations ahead of his age, a milk diet, fat meat and plenty of butter.

For the stout lad who can whip the teacher, but can't do long division, beans, well baked; apples, boiled rice and cereals.

For the thin girl that giggles at everything, but gags at spelling words like "deceit," a glass of milk and cream, beans and a slice of brown bread buttered thickly.

For the model boy of the class that is just too good to live, pie, candy, pickles and hard doughnuts.

(Bishop Fallows says if anything will incite to crime it is a diet like that.)

For the nervous girl whose health is breaking down, rice, eggs, brown bread, good butter, fat meat and apples.

Would you be virtuous?

Here in a word or in a list, then, are the foods to which you must cling. Stick to a diet like this, says the famous churchman, and the world is yours:

BREAKFAST.

Cereal. Milk (pure).
Brown Bread and Pure Butter.
Rice. Fruit.

LUNCH.

Baked Beans. Potatoes.
Egg Sandwich (Brown Bread).
Milk. Cocoa or Chocolate.

DINNER.

Soup. Plenty of fish. Rice.
Meat (the fatter the better). Potatoes.
Salads (all are good).
Fruit.

Milk. Cocoa or Chocolate.

But if you want to induce crime, if you want everything good to leave your nature or any one else's nature, here, says Dr. Fallows, are the foods that bring about that result: Pie, pickles, cake, doughnuts, impure candy, cream puffs, pastry of any kind.

There'll be little chance for you if you eat this, says the bishop.

"When I was superintendent of instruction in Wisconsin, a good many years ago," said he, "I studied the effects of food upon the students."

"I believe—in fact, I am certain—that food given to the child determines more than anything else the future man. A child that is fed improperly will live improperly. Virtue can be fed into a growing child, and by the same reasoning vice can be fed into children through their stomachs."

Keeping the Navy Up to Date.

United States naval officers do not admit that the monster battleships planned by Great Britain and Italy are necessarily more effective than warships of the Connecticut, Louisiana, Michigan and South Carolina types, says Harper's Weekly. Now that fuller details have reached the United States regarding the Cuniberti battleship, with which Italy expects to outclass the Dreadnought, there is less disposition than ever to overestimate the importance of Italy's move. The assumption that the biggest battleship can whip one of a few hundred tons smaller leaves out of account the matter of seamanship, brains, courage, marksmanship and relative efficiency. American warships may not be as big as the biggest, but in personnel and equipment they equal anything afloat. Our newest warships have a steaming radius of 5,000 miles, much greater than that of any other battleship afloat. This is a very important element in the fighting efficiency of all war vessels and one in which the large English and Italian battleships are likely to fail.

Too Much Exercise.

Unfortunately a good many men have the conviction that they must keep exerting themselves all the time. They call every moment wasted which is not spent in activity of some kind, either physical or mental. Such men are taking the quickest means to burn themselves out. You cannot live well and keep happy under a constant and tyrannical sense of effort. There must be times of play, times to let up the tension and to do easy and natural things which don't require conscience and exact attention. Horace Bushnell, the great Connecticut minister, recognized this when he said, "Let's go sin awhile." Sinning has the advantage of being easy, and there are times when the easy thing is the right thing. A man who takes no time off for one kind of play or another, but who keeps the anxious, conscientious look on his face day in and day out, may be on the road to heaven, but he will find that the sanitarium is a way station.—Dr. Luther H. Gulick in Good Housekeeping.

STORIES OF SAM JONES.

Notable Incidents In The Georgia Evangelist's Career—How He Reformed A Drunkard.

Some years ago the late Rev. Sam P. Jones, the noted Georgia evangelist, told in Atlanta at the First Methodist church the following story:

"I was making a prohibition speech in Robertson county, Tenn., and noticed on the right of the platform a bloated, bloated fellow who was about three parts drunk, each part a third. As I talked he would screw his fist into his eyes and wipe away the tears. After the speaking I went to a friend's house perfectly exhausted and lay down. The lady of the house called at the door in a few minutes that a man wanted to see me."

"Tell him I am tired," I said, "and please excuse me."

"That's all right," she said, "anyhow, because he is a drunken, ragged vagabond."

"I said: 'If he is that sort of a fellow let him in. I used to belong to that gang myself, and I never go back on them.' The man came in, and I found he was the drunken fellow who had listened to me speak."

"He said: 'Mr. Jones, I don't want any money. Money can do me no good. I am a ruined man. Drink has made me a wreck. A short time ago I had a happy home and household. A few weeks ago I buried my wife, having crushed every drop of blood out of her heart before she died. My two boys are at the orphan's home in Nashville. One of them is a little blind fellow. My two girls are in Murfreesboro, and this [here he pulled a little black cap out of his pocket], this is the last thing that is left to remind me that I ever had a household. It is my little blind boy's cap. Now, I do not want any money from you, but I just got an idea from the way you talked that maybe you had some sympathy for me. If you have, pray for me. Good-by.' And he started off."

"Hold on here," said I, and I called up Mr. Taylor, my secretary, and said, 'Frank, go uptown with this man and wash him all over with soap and put a new suit of clothes on him from head to foot and bring him back.' In an hour or two he came back, and I did not know him. I had to be introduced to him over. I took out $1 and handed it to him and said: 'Railroad fare in this state is 3 cents a mile. Here is $1. Now, you get on a train and ride thirty-three miles, no matter in what direction, and get the conductor to put you off in the woods when your thirty-three miles are out, and then you strike out through the woods for a new life.'"

"The fellow did exactly as I told him. I got a letter from him the other day, and he said that he got into the woods and struck for a new life. He got a school, sent for his children, rented him a home and was doing well."

An amusing incident occurred at the close of Sam Jones' sermon at Pulaski, Tenn., one day, says the Hartwell (Ga.) Sun. Stepping down from the pulpit, folding his hands across his breast and looking solemnly over the audience, the great revivalist said, "I want all the women in this crowd who have not spoken a harsh word or harbored an unkind thought toward their husbands for a month past, to stand up." One old woman, apparently on the shady side of sixty, stood up.

"Come forward and give me your hand," said the preacher. The woman did so, whereupon Jones said, "Now turn around and let this audience see the best looking woman in the country."

After taking her seat the revivalist addressed the men:

"Now I want all the men in this crowd who have not spoken a harsh word or harbored an unkind thought toward their wives for a month past to stand up." Twenty-seven great big strapping fellows hopped out of the audience with all the alacrity of champagne corks. "Come forward and give me your hands, my dear boys."

Jones gave each one a vigorous shake, after which he ranged all of them side by side in front of the pulpit and facing the audience. He looked them over carefully and solemnly, and then, turning around to the audience, he said:

"I want you all to take a good look at the twenty-seven biggest liars in the state of Tennessee."

The Rev. Sam Jones was at all times, to say the least, forceful in his language, says Success. Above all things he objected to a pretense of supernaturalism, his religion being something on the "shirt sleeves" order. On one occasion the revivalist had taken for his text "Vanity" and to point his moral said:

"Now, if there is a woman in the congregation this morning who didn't look into the mirror before coming to the meeting I want to see her. I want her to stand up!"

A single woman arose and stood with meekly downcast eyes. To describe her in a kindly way, one would say homely. The Rev. Mr. Jones rested his earnest eyes upon her.

"Well, God bless you, sister," he said. "It certainly is a pity that you didn't."

SATURDAY, OCT. 27, 1906.

Republican Ticket.

For 60th Congress of the United States:
HON. WILLIAM H. JACKSON,
of Wicomico County.

The Vital Import Of The Present Campaign.

Within a few days the voters of the First Congressional District will be called upon to choose their representative in the Sixtieth Congress of the United States.

Under our present form of government, there can come to the citizen no higher civic duty nor greater responsibility than that which rests upon him in the discharge of political obligations.

The man who could qualify himself to vote and yet deliberately fails to register and thereby robs himself of the right of franchise, is unworthy of citizenship in a free country, and absolutely incapable of estimating the blessings which come to him by reason of our present governmental system.

It is the duty of every citizen to exercise the right of suffrage in the interest of his district and cast his ballot for that candidate who will best be able to subserve its numerous interests, and we feel confident that a careful canvass of the situation this year will convince any non-partisan, representative, conservative, unbiased and independent voter that his best interest is being subserved this year by the election of Honorable William H. Jackson. Not only is his record, as we have had occasion to show, in his favor but every political consideration requires his election to the Sixtieth Congress of the United States. The present Administration is Republican and must remain so for at least two years, and it is a notorious fact that a minority Congressman is almost a complete and absolute figurehead in the various executive Departments at Washington.

Not only this, but in the legislative work itself, his hands are tied, as all the committees are in the hands of the Republicans, who must, as long as they are in a majority, bear a large part of the responsibility of the legislative work performed. It is therefore absolutely essential that the voters elect a man in sympathy with the Administration and one who is pledged to carry out the policy of the Republican Party. Mr. Jackson is not only pledged to the great principles of the Republican Party, but he is especially interested in the people of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, whose interests he has always had at heart.

In addition to these great political reasons and considerations for voting the Republican ticket this year, many a personal vote will be influenced for Mr. Jackson because of the abiding conviction on the part of a large number of people throughout the District, regardless of political lines, that he was elected two years ago, and it will be for the purpose of effectually placing their stamp of disapproval upon fraudulent and deceitful election methods that they will give Mr. Jackson their support. There is in this country no one quality more prominent than what might be distinctly called the spirit of "American fair play and square dealing" and the people have an utter disregard and contempt for those detestable methods by which a man can be placed in official power and station through the fraudulent manipulation of official ballots.

As the mighty Lincoln said, "You can fool some of the people all the time and all the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time," and while the manipulators of trick ballots may be able to accomplish their desired result once, the day of reckoning is at hand, and the people of this District will rise in the grandeur and majesty of their constitutionally ordained powers, and triumphantly elect the Honorable William H. Jackson to the Sixtieth Congress of the United States, regardless of technical laws and nefarious trick ballot schemes.

Salisbury The Garden Spot Of The World.

The Baltimore American in an editorial during the week made exceptionally complimentary references to Salisbury and among other things said:

"The Sunday American presented a number of picturesque views of the Eastern Shore town of Salisbury, taken while the Maryland branch of the Christian Endeavor Association was recently in session there. Members of the association from Baltimore and from Western Maryland went to Salisbury expecting to find the average straggling village of the average rural section and were generally surprised when they encountered an embryo city, not only set in a most attractive environment of arboreal greenery, but lit with electric lights, paved as to the main thoroughfares, or in readiness to be paved with vitrified brick, a city of fine churches, beautiful homes and possessing, all in all, that evidence of caring about appearances, which distinguishes ever the progressive community from the unprogressive, whether the community in consideration be one of less than 10,000 population or more than half million."

"William Jennings Bryan, it is related, said of Salisbury when he visited the town, in 1900, that it was the most beautiful town he had ever seen. Mr. Bryan's opinions on some other topics are not accepted in Salisbury without a division, but there is a universal agreement there that in picking out the fairest town in the whole United States, Mr. Bryan's good taste and acuteness of judgment are unimpeachable. Salisbury is a very up-to-date town in all ways lovely, and Salisbury knows it."

We are profoundly thankful that Baltimore and Western Maryland have at last awakened from their long slumber of blissful ignorance as to the actual conditions of modern progressiveness existing on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, and we are quite sure that Salisbury is willing to make a graceful bow after this most charming speech.

True, the awakening process has been slow and tedious, and even laborious, but if the dawn of a glorious enlightenment is at last breaking upon a benighted people, we are highly gratified, and most devoutly thankful that our labors have not been in vain.

We confess we have often been surprised at the careless ignorance frequently exhibited by our city friends, in public print and private conversation, as to the general conditions which now exist on this side of the Bay, and not infrequently have we been compelled to throw around them the "broad mantle of our charity" and bury their numerous errors in total oblivion.

They know—we know they do—in fact, every one knows, that the Eastern Shore of Maryland is "the garden spot of the world" and with proper humility, and due deference to our sister towns, we may add that Salisbury is the garden spot of the Eastern Shore.

If the great Christian Endeavor Convention achieved no other result than the general enlightenment of the people of the State of Maryland upon the "up-to-date-ness" and progressiveness of our beautiful city nestling upon the banks of the "picturesque Wicomico" and acquaint them with her charms, we would have had every reason to be highly gratified that the meeting of 1906 was held within our gates.

The Narrowing Of North Division Street.

Pretty strong comment is being indulged in at the present time in relation to the decided change in the width of North Division street. As yet, no one seems to be able to give even a half way plausible and reasonable explanation of the apparently decidedly foolish and entirely unnecessary narrowing of one of the most important streets and thoroughfares of the city. After the fire, the town was compelled to condemn several feet of space on both North Division street and Main street in order that better facilities could be obtained on these prominent thoroughfares, and now to deliberately reduce the width of one of the most narrow and yet, one of the busiest streets of the entire town seems like absolutely trifling with the rights of the public. It has been said that there will be as much actual driveway now as before, in view of the fact that no crossings will be required. This is not only entirely untrue as a matter of fact, but if it were, it in no way lessens the responsibility for the deliberate waste of four feet of space. Instead of making the streets of Salisbury narrower, they should be made wider, and there will evidently be no saving of money in this method of doing the work.

The present cement or brick pavements must be either extended to the curb in proper manner, or a useless, dirt catching, unsightly strip left between the two. If the contractors are to make the extension, and the expense charged to the street paving fund, then the whole arrangement is still more inexplicable as the same money could have been used in making the street the width it now is. If on the other hand, the property holders will be compelled to do this additional paving of the sidewalks, then it is an unjust burden and imposition upon them.

At any rate, it is a decidedly interesting subject, and the people would be more than delighted to know the exact psychological reasons which brought about the offending change.

Editorial Jottings.

It is fall theoretically but not actually.

Mud and plenty of it is still the order of the day in Salisbury.

Old Sol was a welcome visitor in town Thursday, and his long absence made his appearance all the more thoroughly appreciated.

During the last week a good mud scow in Salisbury would have been the best means of conveyance and decidedly the easiest method of navigating the streets.

New members are joining the club every week, and the financial condition is excellent. The Swoboda system of physical development is used in the class work.

—Mr. "Cozy" Waltz, who sleeps in the City Hand Laundry, thought he heard someone trying to break in about 11 o'clock last Monday night. It is stated that the burglar and the watchman both became frightened and the former ran and the latter hid in a "cozy" corner. Another story told about the affair is that Mr. Walter Mobray, an enterprising and dashing young composer of The Courier force, was passing the place at the time and that "Cozy" thought he was the burglar. When "Cozy" raised the gun and shouted, "Hands up," it is said that Mobray fell to his knees and cried out, "Oh, kind sir, please don't shoot." His piteous appeal softened the tender heart of the doughty "Cozy," and he lowered the gun.

—The directory for 1906 of the shops for the sale of the Singer Sewing Machines throughout the world was received this week by The Courier. The book contains about 210 pages and is bound in boards. There are 5559 of the Singer shops, an addition of 1007 to the list for 1905. The list is arranged by "hemispheres, continents and countries"; the sun is always shining on a Singer shop. These factory plants occupy more than three hundred and fifty acres of land and the buildings contain more than one hundred and twenty-five acres of floor space, their annual output exceeding two million sewing machines. To turn out this immense quantity of machines, there are nine manufacturing plants located in different parts of the world.

—Some of the musical people of Salisbury have secured Prof. Richard B. Meyer, of Baltimore, to make weekly trips to Salisbury and take charge of a class of vocal and instrumental music pupils. Mr. Meyer, who is the son of the late Barthold Meyer, who met with such success in Salisbury two years ago, was in Salisbury Thursday and enrolled a number of ladies and gentlemen in the class. He will be in Salisbury again next Thursday, and will be prepared to begin his lessons in a vacant room at the home of Mrs. George H. Weisbach, on Bush street. Any information concerning the class can be obtained in the absence of Mr. Meyer from Mr. William A. Sheppard. Mr. Meyer is one of the best solo pianists of Baltimore, and teaches the old Italian method of voice culture.

—The Democrats of Wicomico county expect to have a big meeting in Salisbury this afternoon and evening. Congressman Smith, Hon. L. Irving Handy, of Delaware, and Hon. A. S. Goldsborough, of Baltimore, will speak. Music will be furnished by the Salisbury Concert Band. Mr. George W. Bell and Mr. Charles R. Disharoon will preside at the different sessions.

—Mrs. C. M. Brewington attempted suicide about 3 o'clock Thursday morning by jumping into the Wicomico river near the warehouse of L. E. Williams & Co. As soon as she struck the chilling waters, however, she began calling for help, and Capt. John White and Capt. Albert Hurley, who heard her, hastened in a small boat to her assistance. She was pulled out of the water, attired in male garb.

—The management of Uman's Opera House have arranged for what they believe to be one of the star attractions on the American stage today to appear in Salisbury Wednesday, November 7. This is an entertainment given by Mildred and Rouclere with their own supporting company of singers, dancers and comedians. Mildred and Rouclere perform feats in hypnotism, telepathy, illusory disappearances and general magic that are said to be wonderful. A most enthusiastic account of the appearance of the company in Patterson, N. J., last Tuesday evening is given in the Patterson Morning Call, a copy of which, Manager Uman has on display at the Opera House. A show of the character of the one given by this company has always taken well in Salisbury, and seldom fails to create a sensation. The prices will be 25, 35 and 50 cents. Tickets are on sale at the box office.

Annual Meeting Of State Baptist Union

The seventy-first annual meeting of the Maryland Baptist Union Association was held in Baltimore this week in the First Baptist Church, Rev. Curtis Lee Laws, pastor, corner Lafayette and Fremont avenues. That the Maryland Union is in a flourishing condition was indicated by the application of seven newly organized churches for admission to the union.

In the report of the committee of letters, statistics and contributions of churches and Sunday schools for the year ended October 10, 1906, the statistics for the 79 churches in the three Maryland districts were given. These churches have a membership of 10,746, against 10,333 of last year. The total contribution of the churches was $146,306.09. The total contributions of 79 Sunday Schools was $9,486.77, and the total average attendance was 5,493; the scholars enrolled, 9,765. The report of the treasurer, Mr. Richard J. Biggs, was read. This report showed receipts, $19,392.76; disbursements, $18,908.16; balance, $894.60.

The following officers were elected: President, Mr. Joshua Levering; vice presidents, Mr. George Miller and Mr. J. Harry Tyler; secretary, Rev. W. H. Baylor; assistant secretary, Rev. W. R. Owen.

About 400 delegates were in attendance at the convention. Among the ministers present were Rev. R. C. Granberry, of Salisbury. The other delegates from Salisbury were: Mr. and Mrs. James Price, Miss Cora Twilley, Miss Stella Smith and Mrs. Isaac White.

Jackson Is Confident.

Mr. William H. Jackson, Republican candidate in the First district, went to Baltimore Friday to hold a second conference with the Republican chairman in the different counties of the Eastern Shore district. Present at the conference were Mr. Phillips Lee Goldsborough, chairman of the campaign committee for the district; Ex-State Senator McCullough of Cecil, W. C. Orrell of Queen Anne's, Sidney P. Townsend of Kent, R. R. Walker of Talbot, A. G. Towers of Caroline, Walter B. Miller of Wicomico, C. C. Mamford of Worcester and A. Lincoln Dryden of Somerset.

The object of these meetings was to thoroughly review the situation in the different counties and devise plans for strengthening the ranks wherever there is any indication of weakness.

Asked about the situation on the Eastern Shore, Mr. Jackson said:

"Why, it is getting brighter every day, but we are not counting any of our chickens before they are hatched. The fight will be continued until election day."

Mr. Jackson has been somewhat handicapped in the race, owing to his wife's illness, so he has been compelled to make his fight by proxy. Those looking after the campaign evidently regard victory as assured. Mr. Goldsborough seems to be absolutely sanguine. He says the Republicans have gotten the best of the registration, and everything indicates a decisive victory for the Republican candidate.

Art In McClure's.

The November McClure's is a memorable art number, reflecting all the color and abundance of the Indian summer. Three full-page color illustrations, from paintings by Howard Pyle, interpret with great power and feeling Basil King's historical romance, "The Hanging of Mary Dyer." Jessie Wilcox Smith has made a poetical color-drawing for "Night and the Curtains Drawn," and Alice Barber Stephens illustrates "The Reforming of a Bridegroom," with a number of spirited studies which are charmingly reproduced in tint. The cover design, a brilliant and thoroughly American conception, is by N. C. Wyeth.

Bowser Goes To the Club

Attends a Reception of the L. O. C. P.'s and Comes Home the Worse For Wear.

HAS TO MAKE A SPEECH

This Is Merely an Incident of the Evening, Which Proves Exciting to the Old Man.

[Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastment.]

"OUR church is giving an entertainment this evening," said Mrs. Bowser as Mr. Bowser reached home from the office the other evening, "and I have promised that we will both attend. There will be moving pictures, a lecture, ice cream, cake and so on."

"Sorry, my dear, but you will have to go alone," was the reply.

"But you haven't got an appointment, I hope?"

"That's just what I have got. The L. O. C. P.'s give a reception this evening in honor of three of the cabinet officers, and I wouldn't miss it for a fortune. In fact, I am on two of the committees."

"For goodness' sake, what club is that? I never heard you mention it before."

"I may have neglected to mention it, but I have belonged to the Lively Old

"HE DEPARTED AT 8 O'CLOCK."

Cockadoodledoo Patriots for a year past. It ranks as the leading social club in America. No one without a strain of Revolutionary blood in his veins can belong."

"But you haven't got any."

"What!" shouted Mr. Bowser as his face turned red in an instant. "I haven't gone around bragging about my blood, as some folks do, Mrs. Bowser, but I'd have you to understand that I had no less than three relatives in the war for Independence. You may have incidentally heard of General Putnam, Paul Jones and John Hancock?"

Wife Was Skeptical.

"It's very funny that if those men haven't let it out long ago, I don't believe they were. I don't believe there was a Bowser in the war. If there were any Bowsters ever here then, they were buying furs or keeping groceries."

Mrs. Bowser was disappointed at not attending the church entertainment and spoke with feeling. For a moment Mr. Bowser was stunned. Her words were more than sacrilegious. He gasped for breath as his knees trembled under him, and then whispered:

"Woman, if a man on the street had insulted the Bowsters in that fashion I would have stretched him dead at my feet! History would have told you long ago, had you read it, that no family in America sacrificed more for independence than the Bowsters. Who led at Lundy's Lane, Cowpens and King's Mountain? Who guided Washington across the Delaware? Who led the charge at Saratoga? You can find your sarcasm at me, Mrs. Bowser, but by the thirty thousand thinkers of thirty thousand earthquakes, don't you attempt to belittle my ancestors!"

"Well, I'll stay home, and you can go to your club, and I hope you will have a pleasant time," answered Mrs. Bowser as she turned away.

Dropped the Subject.

Mr. Bowser did not pursue the subject further. He wanted to, but the thought flashed across his mind that it would be just his style to get down the "History of America" after he had left the house and try to find where the Bowsters came in. She wouldn't be able to even find their names mentioned and might reopen the subject again. When the time came she offered to help him get ready, but he waved her aside. He got a bad part of his hair, a bad knot in his tie and his vest was buttoned up without regard to programme, but she let him go without remark. She didn't think that the Cockadoodledoo Old Patriots, after their hardships and sufferings on many fields, would be very particular about how their shoestrings were tied.

"It may be 2 o'clock in the morning when I get in," he said.

"Very well. If you can't find the house some policeman will probably know you. Give my love to the cabinet officers."

"Woman!"

But he could say no more. He had sat down on her hard, and yet he had the feeling that she had the best of him. He went off with his cane and silk hat and patent leather shoes, and she sat down to read. He departed at 8, and it was half past 11 when the doorbell rang. She opened it to find a boy on the step. He pointed to Mr. Bowser sitting on the lowest step and whispered:

"I found him hugging a shade tree and telling how the Bowsters licked the British. I knew him, and so I brought him home. I'll help you up the steps with him."

Bowser's Legs Wobbled.

Mr. Bowser's legs wobbled, and his head kept bobbing, but he was got into the house and deposited in a chair. Mrs. Bowser wanted to give the boy a quarter, but he backed off and said:

"I couldn't think of it, madam. We all know what a hard time you have with him and are sorry for you."

When he had departed she got out the camphor and smelling salts and let Mr. Bowser sniff and bathed his face. In a few minutes he rallied sufficiently to ask:

"Is that you, Mrs. Bowser?"

"Yes, dear."

"Is this my home—my dear old home?"

"Yes."

"Well, I want to tell you all about it. Shay, they made a fool of me. Yesh, shir, they made a fool of me."

"You can tell me all about it in the morning. We will be going up to bed now."

"No, we won't. I won't go to bed till I tell you all about it. If I do I'll bust. You know, I went to a reception given by the L. O. C. P.'s."

"You said it was the L. O. C. P.'s."

"Did I? Whash zhat?"

"The Lively Old Cockadoodledoo Patriots."

"Oh, yesh. What did I go for?"

"The club was to entertain three members of the president's cabinet, and I suppose it did so."

He Was Only Guest.

"No, I didn't, Mrs. Bowser—no, it didn't. Zhat was all a lie. It just entertained me, and I'll live 10,000 years to get revenge. Think of the way they used your poor husband, Mrs. Bowser; think of it!"

Mr. Bowser began to weep, and it was five minutes before he could be quieted. The camphor rubbed on the back of his neck finally aided him to control his emotions, and he went on:

"There wasn't any cabinet officers there. Wasn't nobody there 'cept a lot of fellows who wanted shone fun. They made me drink shaven cocktails."

"Not seven, Mr. Bowser."

"Seven great big cocktails, my dear, and when my head began to swim they made me try to turn handsprings. Think of Mr. Bowser turning handsprings!"

"And what else?" asked Mrs. Bowser as she and the cat smiled at each other.

"Made me hop around on one foot. Shald I was hopping after the British at Trenton. Think of your husband hopping around a room and everybody yelling!"

"It was awful, Mr. Bowser. What happened next?"

Had to Make a Speech.

"They said I must make a speech. I told 'em I wanted to come home to my dear wife, but they only roared and squirted water on me—me, Mr. Bowser."

"And then what?"

"They said I was no patriot, but that my grandfather sold embalmed beef to the American army. I denied it and called 'em liars, and then they threw flour in my face and made me jump over chairs and swear to eat the constitution of er United Shitals."

At this recollection Mr. Bowser had another crying spell, during which the cat meowed in sympathy and the night breezes moaned dismally. When he had recovered Mrs. Bowser suggested bed, and he rose up to try it. His legs doubled under him, however, and he sank down on the floor and a minute later was asleep. She brought a pillow and a quilt to make him comfortable for the night and then turned the gas low and left the Lively Old Cockadoodledoo Patriot to his sleep and his dreams.

Snarl of Envy.

SOME RELICS FROM THE NILE

By C. B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1906, by M. M. Cunningham

Any one of the reading public of London could have told you that the Hon. Charles Bingham was a man seventy years old; that he had wealth; that he was democratic and rode around on top of omnibuses; that he had fads; that the greatest of his fads was picking up relics and presenting them to museums of natural history throughout the kingdom. There was seldom a week that his name was not in the papers, and enter any museum you might and you would be sure to run across cases labeled with his name and filled with his gifts.

At his own expense the Hon. Bingham had sent expeditions to the four quarters of the globe, and the only reason he had not purchased some of the largest pyramids of Egypt was because of the difficulties of transportation. If the chief of an African tribe had warclubs for sale the Hon. Bingham bought them; if a child in the east end of London found a petrified bone it could be turned into cash in twenty-four hours.

Hundreds of persons had taken the Hon. Charles Bingham for an easy mark and sought to work him. Man, woman or child could find access to his house at any hour of the day, but as for taking the old man in with imitations, that was different. He had made a few mistakes early in his career, as might have been expected, but after he had passed fifty his decisions settled the question with all museums in Europe. There was a weak spot in the armor, however, and it was curious that no one found it out for many years.

One day there came to London an American who had been exploring the Nile for years. He had letters from American and British consuls abroad. He even had one from the secretary of the khedive himself. He had gathered many wonderful things during his stay on the banks of the historic stream. He must have known of the Hon. Charles Bingham, but he did not call upon the man or open correspondence. He dropped in at a club or two, said very little, charmed everybody with his modesty and refused all interviews with reporters. It was not until the Hon. Charles had sent one messenger and then written a letter over his own signature that Explorer Blake grudgingly consented to a meeting. At that meeting he named a few of his souvenirs, but only a few. Nothing whatever was for sale. The whole bag was to go to the New York Museum of Natural History.

The attitude of Explorer Blake was cheerful, and yet after a few days he softened enough to invite the Hon. Charles to a private inspection of his treasures. This invitation would not have been extended to any other man in the world. He appointed the hour when he would call with a carriage, and he was there to the minute. It was the general idea that his stock of finds was in a warehouse, and he was supposed to be stopping at a hotel, but no one was certain of these things.

The Hon. Charles didn't care where he was taken, so long as the relics of the Nile were at the other end of the journey. He paid no attention to the streets they passed through and very little to the house at which they finally arrived. He was ushered to the top story, talking as he went, landed in a room about twelve feet square lighted by a skylight, and when he looked about for the stock in trade he failed to find it. The only furniture in the room was two old chairs. Explorer Blake took one and lighted a cigar, and the Hon. Charles took the other and wondered what was coming next. He soon ascertained.

"My dear sir, I shall be very sorry to put you to any trouble," began the explorer, "but the fact is I am hard up and must raise $25,000. That is $25,000 in your money. I don't want to turn burglar or murderer. I want to be gentle and nice about it."

"How long have you been planning this thing?" asked the Hon. Charles as he looked around the empty room and "tumbled" to the fact that he had been taken in.

"All of six months, and it has cost me considerable hard cash."

"And your figure is $25,000, is it?"

"Not a penny less. When you have given me a check for the amount and the same has been cashed, you will be restored to liberty. I shall not demand as one of the provisions that you promise not to go to the police about it. In the first place, I have made any arrangements to dodge them, and in the next you won't care to give yourself away and be made a laughing stock of."

"You reason logically," replied the Hon. Charles as he also lighted a cigar. "I have had this house hired for the last five months. I am supposed to be a bachelor and fairly well off, having only a man to cook and wait upon me. His name is Thomas, and he is an excellent servant. You can rest assured that he never will bring you into ridicule over this affair."

"To sum up, my friend, this is a put up job. I have been lured here in order that I may be forced to buy my liberty. You want $25,000. I must confess that, while the price is not extravagant, I cannot see my way clear to paying it just now. What conclusion I may come to after three or four days I cannot say."

"Very well," replied the explorer. "It is thirteen feet to the partly opened skylight, with no chance whatever of your reaching it. Thomas will bring you bread and water three times a day, and at night you shall have a mattress to rest on. Three days hence I shall appear again. There is no hurry about this thing. After my next appearance the price of your liberty will be added to at the rate of $100 per day. You can afford to pay, and I can afford to wait."

It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon when the Hon. Charles Bingham was left alone in the garret room. He did not waste his energies by crying out or tramping round. He did not look up at the skylight except at long intervals. The American was no fool. He had taken his precautions before bringing a prisoner to the house. At 6 o'clock the man Thomas came in. One look at him was sufficient to prove that he was loyal to his master. He had a frank and honest face, but he also had a keen eye and was stoutly built. He brought bread and water. He was respectful in his demeanor.

"Sorry for your poor fare, your honor," he observed, "but it only depends on you to get better. The evening papers may help you on a bit. I'll bring in the mattress later. Also a candle."

"A faithful servant is a jewel of rare value," replied the captive as he ate and drank and seemed very much at home.

Later on the mattress and a light were brought in, but not another word was spoken. The Hon. Charles was not a man who jumped at conclusions. That $25,000 could be paid without feeling the loss, but he wanted to think things over a bit. Was he worth the ransom money to himself or the public? Was the American prepared to proceed to extremities in case he did not get his money? The Hon. Charles held that the London detective was the sharpest man on earth. The great man would be missed and a hue and cry raised. Would the sleuths strike the trail and follow it up?

The room was rather warm that night, it being summer, but the captive managed to put in a very comfortable night. He was up and ready to bow to Thomas when the bread and water and morning papers were brought in, and he was in fairly good spirits at the end of the third day, when the explorer called for his answer. It was not ready for him. On the contrary, the captive pleasantly observed:

"You see, my dear sir, this experience is so unusual with me that I must have a little more time to think it over. At the end of another three days I shall doubtless be prepared to give you a definite answer."

He was told that the three days would add $300 to his ransom, but there was no argument over that. His captor retired, the same food and old mattress were brought in, and as the evening grew old the prisoner stretched out for a rest. He was falling asleep when he heard the skylight softly raised. Then he caught sight of a head and heard a voice asking:

"Is there anybody down there?"

"Only me," answered the honorable as he realized that the voice belonged to a young girl.

"Are you rich or poor, old or young?"

"I am fairly rich, and I am a man seventy years old."

"That won't do," said the girl. "I am an orphan, living with my aunt in this row, ten doors below. If I am to rescue anybody, he must be young and rich and ready to marry me, the same as it is in the books. I'm sorry for you, but I must say good night."

"But hold on a minute," called the captive. "I can't turn myself into a young man, but I can give some nice young man money to marry you on. That will amount to the same thing, won't it?"

"Why, yes; I suppose so. Will you give $5?"

"Yes—a hundred."

The girl ran away without another word, but fifteen minutes later she dropped a rope down the opening, with one end made fast to a chimney, and the captive soon stood beside her. He found her a girl of only thirteen, but he dowered her liberally. He did not go to the police, but straight home. He did not seek the arrest of the explorer, but wrote him a polite note to say that, owing to unforeseen circumstances, it would be impossible to make any further appointments with him regarding the Nile relics.

The crested rat of East Africa is remarkable, first because of the great length of the black and white hairs down the ridge of the back, which are rendered the more conspicuous because the hairs along the sides of the body are so short and so differently colored, being brownish gray and looking for all the world as if some one had taken a pair of scissors and maliciously shorn off the decorative hair, leaving only a dull underfur. Secondly, it is remarkable because the skull has a roofing of bones exactly resembling that of some turtles, while, furthermore, this roof has a granulated appearance recalling that presented by the skulls of certain fishes. In its habits it appears to be arboreal while from the structure of its teeth it would appear to be at least partly insectivorous.

Our Voices Deepen.

The primitive inhabitants of Europe were all tenors; their descendants of the present time are baritones, and future generations will have bass voices. The voice has a tendency to deepen with age. The tenor of twenty becomes the baritone of twenty-eight and the bass of thirty-six. The inferior races have higher pitched voices than the more cultured. The negro has a higher voice than the white man. Among white races, the fair complexioned man has a higher voice than his darker skinned brother. The former is usually a baritone or a tenor, the latter a contralto or bass. It is asserted that tenors are usually of slender build, whereas basses are stout, but there are too many exceptions to such a rule for it to be reliable. The same remark applies to the statement that thoughtful men have deep toned voices and vice versa. The tones of a voice are perceptibly higher before than after a meal, for which reason tenors are generally careful not to sing too soon after dinner.—Pearson's Weekly.

Henry Clay's Popularity.

The greatest popular idol in a political sense the country has ever known was Henry Clay. Only one other American statesman ever possessed the quality called personal magnetism to the same extent that he did, and no other ever had a more enthusiastic personal following. He was an aspirant for president from 1824 to 1848, but never reached the goal. He received 37 electoral votes in 1824, 49 in 1832 and 106 in 1844, but never enough to elect him. Clay was elected speaker of the house of representatives on the first day of his term in that body and was five times re-elected. He was twice elected United States senator, once unanimously by the Kentucky legislature, and held several other high offices. If there was ever a popular idol in the politics of this country, it was Henry Clay, but he could not be elected president.—Indianapolis Journal.

The Old Plane Tree of Coa.

In the island of Coa, in the Aegean sea, there stands, jealously guarded, a huge plane tree measuring nearly eighteen yards in circumference. It is surrounded by a podium, or raised platform breast high, doubtless built to support the trunk of the tree after it had become hollow and weak from age. The lower branches are still well preserved and have been shored up by pieces of antique columns, over the upper ends of which the branches have grown like caps in consequence of the pressure of their own weight. Close by the tree is a solid marble seat, which is said to be the chair of Hippocrates, the father of medicine, and it is supposed that he taught the art of healing from that seat. He was born at Coa 460 B. C. This gives a clue to the age of the celebrated plane tree, which must be considerably more than 2,000 years old.

This Peculiar World.

This is a peculiar world, says an exchange. One is struggling for justice and another is feeling from it. One man is saving to build a house and another is trying to sell his for less than cost to get rid of it. One man is spending all the money he can make in taking a girl to the theater and sending her flowers, with the hope of making her his wife, while his neighbor is spending what gold he has in getting a divorce. One man escapes all the diseases that flesh is heir to and gets killed on a railroad. Another escapes with a scratch and dies with the whooping cough. One man stands off his creditors and goes traveling while another pays his debts and stays at home.

Consoling.

A New England congressman once went to Franklin Pierce demanding an office for a constituent. Pierce sent him to James Guthrie, secretary of the treasury. By and by the congressman returned to the president in great dudgeon.

"What did Guthrie say to you about appointing your friend?" inquired the president. "He said he would be hanged if he would."

"Did Guthrie talk that way to you?"

"He did."

"Well, that's the way he talks to me, too," was Pierce's consoling reply.

Golf or Croquet?

It was a twosome. The player who drove off first had bandy legs. The second in driving off did not notice that his opponent had got in front of him and the ball ran through between the opponent's legs. Turning around in anger the bandy legged one said, "Here, mun, that's no golf!" "Weel," said the other, "if it's not golf it's croquet."—Scottish Referee.

An Inch or So Below.

"It's funny," began the long winded bore, "but nobody ever seems glad to see me."

"Well, and have you never found out the cause of your unpopularity?"

"No, I can't discover it."

"That's strange, because it's right under your very nose."—Philadelphia Press.

A Contingency.

"Haven't I a right to do as I like with my money?" inquired the multimillionaire.

"You have," answered the sardonic person, "if your lawyer is smart enough to draw up a will that can't be contested."—Washington Star.

Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Gravenor and daughter were in Baltimore this week.

George Clark and family have moved here from Baltimore and are occupying the Drennen property.

George C. Murphy and family, of Ocean City, N. J., are the guests this week of relatives and friends in town.

Farmers are digging their potatoes and putting them in S. J. Cooper & Son's large potato house for winter market.

Ethel H. Rider has purchased R. H. L. Bradley's farm, and Mr. Bradley will move to town. He has purchased the property where F. S. Bounds now lives.

District Deputy, W. L. Plummer, was in town this week and on Tuesday night organized a Camp of Modern Woodmen of America with a membership of nineteen and others to join later. The following officers were elected: Consul, J. O. Adams; Advisor, Irving Owens; Clerk, P. T. White; Banker, Ned. R. Bounds; Escort, Carl Bennett; Watchman, Austin Bennett; Sentry, Noah W. Owens; Physician, William N. Gassaway; Board of Managers, O. N. Bennett, W. J. Fletcher and J. P. Cooper.

Mrs. Irene Smith.

Mrs. Irene Smith, wife of Capt. William J. Smith, a retired pay captain, died at her home at Sharptown on Monday afternoon, after a lingering illness of nearly two years, at the age of sixty-five years.

She had a great many friends and was held in high regard by all who knew her. She lived a quiet life and was above the average in literary attainments. She found much pleasure in books, and read those of a high character. She was a close Bible student, and exemplified its teachings in the purity of the life she lived.

Her funeral was preached on Wednesday morning at her late residence by Rev. H. W. D. Johnson, from the following text: Romans 8:18, "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us."

After funeral services, her remains were laid to rest in the Methodist Protestant Cemetery. The floral tributes were very beautiful, among them being a vacant chair, a pillow, with the word "mother." The pillow was from her daughter, Mrs. J. P. Cooper, and the chair from her son, Oscar. Mrs. Gertrude Phillips, Mrs. Flora Collinson, Mrs. Laura Robinson and family, and Mrs. Sarah J. Twilley, a life-long friend, sent very pretty floral designs, and Miss Lena Cooper, a beautiful bouquet of roses.

Besides her husband, she leaves one daughter, Mrs. Margie Cooper, wife of Jos. P. Cooper, secretary and treasurer of the Sharptown Marine Railway Co., and of S. J. Cooper & Co., and one son, Capt. Oscar T. Smith, at present quartermaster on the Steamer Cambridge.

Sharptown Marine Railway Bay.

The Sharptown Marine Railway Company is doing a great deal of work and is gaining a reputation for good material, workmanship and beauty of model. The new vessels built by the company are proving a good advertisement. The company now has a large schooner in course of erection for Capt. E. G. Bennett and others, and also a new gasoline boat for Capt. W. W. Almond, of Almond, Va. This boat is seventy feet long and sixteen feet wide and will be equipped with three twenty-five horse power gasoline engines and three wheels. She is to be completed

Wednesday is Hallowe'en.

As the 31st of October draws near, many begin to think of Hallowe'en, with its many possibilities for the weird and merriest of entertainments. This is not the most dignified of social functions—it is one of frivolity, merriment and telling of fortunes. If the young girl does not find out who she is going to marry on that night, she may have to wait another year before making this very important discovery.

Those who live in the country will find their barns an ideal place for a Hallowe'en party, while those living in the city will have to be content to turn their living or drawing room into something to resemble a greenwood, and for the fun that is sure to follow, very few of them object to doing this.

As to decorating the rooms, red, yellow and brown are the prevailing autumnal tints, and these may be combined in a variety of ways.

Ancient customs and legendary superstitions furnish the basis for most of the fortune-telling games.

Before each young person retires on Hallowe'en night she should place her shoes at right angle, and say:

Hoping this night my true love to see,
I place my shoes in the form of a T.

Holiday Crowds.

For some men it is sufficient recreation to have no work. The moment that the "knapsack of custom" falls from their backs they are happy. Not to awake in the morning with the thought of what must be done in the day is in itself a sufficient recreation. Naturally, they have no very definite taste in holidays. They go where it suits their purses or their wives or their children. To such men, though they may spend all their working days in the thick of a town, the sight of nature never becomes a necessity. It is a luxury, an agreeable augmentation of the sense of doing nothing. A holiday maker of this type very often goes to a watering place, one of those resorts which it is now the fashion for cultivated people to despise. Such contempt is affectation. A number of happy people create, no doubt, an exhilarating atmosphere. Well behaved pleasure seekers make an agreeable and ever changing picture. A well kept public garden, a good band and a fine view form attractions which no continental affects to despise, and English people do not despise it either if only the brightly dressed crowd should happen to talk in a foreign tongue.—London Spectator.

The Englishman Abroad.

An English observer says that he finds the American abroad both civil and genial: "I climbed to the top of Notre Dame in Paris and found there a party from across the Atlantic enjoying lunch. The day was hot, and a young man in the group offered me a refreshing drink. At the top of the lacework in marble which is the spire of Milan cathedral three English speaking men met accidentally—an American, an English clergyman and myself. He who hailed from the land of the stars and stripes offered me his field-glass; the other did not even return our good morning salutation. In a beer garden at Lucerne I followed the custom of the continent and asked permission before sitting at a table of those already seated there. The only one who did not raise his hat and reply was an Englishman, and the only one to make excuses for him was a young man who prefixed his words with 'I guess.'"

Parchment.

Parchment is the skin of sheep or other animals prepared in sheets to render them fit for being written upon. The heavier parchment, used for drumheads, is made from skins of asses, older calves, wolves and goats. All these are similarly prepared. The skin, being freed from the hair, is placed in a lime pit to cleanse it from fat. The pelt is then stretched upon a frame, care being taken that the surface is free from wrinkles. The flesh is then pared off with a circular knife. It is then moistened and whitened spread over it. The workman then with a large pumice stone rubs the skin. He next goes over it with an iron instrument and rubs it carefully with pumice stone, without chalk. The skin is gradually dried, tightening being occasionally required.

A Literary Prize.

The largest amount ever offered as a prize for a literary contribution is 1,500,000 rubles, which is still open for competition and will be awarded at St. Petersburg on Dec. 1, 1925, to the writer of the best history of Alexander I. of Russia. Arakcheiev, founder of the military colonies of Novgorod, left a fortune of 50,000 gold rubles to provide for this unique prize. The prize giving day is the centenary of the Czar Alexander's death, by which time the money will, it is estimated, have increased to 2,000,000 rubles. One-fourth of it will be used to defray the cost of publishing the work which wins the prize.

At Which Age?

An amusing discussion recently took place between an artist and an author as to which period of her life a woman was the most fascinating. According to the artist a woman should not be painted between the ages of twenty-five and forty, as she was in the greatest transition period of her life. The author, on the other hand, declares that she is at the height of her fascination and beauty between the ages of thirty and forty. The question is still unsettled.—Bremen Zeitung.
