AEROPLANE RACES

AVIATION WEEK AT ATLANTIC CITY

It is not a far cry back to "Darius Green and his flyin' machine" when aerial navigation was considered impossible.

Today Atlantic City is preparing for a great Aviation Meet from July 2 to 11, when three of the greatest flyers of the modern world will demonstrate their mastery of the air.

Glenn H. Curtiss, the holder of the world's record for speed, will fly daily from July 4 to 11.

Walter E. Brookins, who holds the record high flying, will give exhibitions July 7 to 11 in a Wright aeroplane.

This is the first contest between the Wright and Curtiss machines.

It is also expected that Charles K. Hamilton, the great long distance aviator, will be present and race from July 7 to 11.

There will be prize events each day, including a fifty-mile flight over a five mile circular course, and prize high flying, July 7 to 11, directly over the beach front and ocean.

A committee of Salisbury people have been selected to transport the invited guests from Salisbury and the outlying districts: the committee in Salisbury is composed of William M. Cooper, Walter B. Miller and Alexander M. Jackson; it is the purpose of the committee to use about 40 automobiles for transportation of visitors.

The committee at Sharptown will have the business people of the town to suspend business for the day, and all the business places and residences will decorate their homes. They also appointed a reception committee who will take charge of the invited guests when they arrive in the town. The event as contemplated by the citizens of Sharptown and the surrounding neighborhood expect to make the affair a "Red Letter" day for their little city.

The Sharptown Yacht Building Company are rushing their work on the large and handsome yacht under construction for the German Consul of Philadelphia, Pa., and expect to add another feature to the program by launching this handsome boat.

Invitations will be issued next week to County and State guests.

The Pennsylvania Railroad is the direct route to Atlantic City, and excursion tickets are on sale from all points. Connections are made in Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, with trains over the Delaware River Bridge, all-rail route.

Thirty Head of MISSOURI Horses & Mules FOR SALE.

I am offering at private sale, at the barn of S. P. Woodcock, on East Camden Street, thirty head of young Missouri Horses and Mules, four head of well-broken Horses. This is the fourth load of stock I have sold in Salisbury, and all have given satisfaction. Have broken easy and are maturing good. Would be pleased to have anyone come and look this stock over, whether they wish to purchase or not.

ARRANGEMENTS UNDER

Way For Sharptown's Banquet On July 21 In Honor Of Sen. Price.

A committee of citizens of Sharptown District met last evening, with Walter O. Mann, Chairman, and completed the final arrangements for the reception that is to be given Senator Jesse D. Price, in recognition of his service while in the Maryland Senate last Session in passing a Bill for a bridge to be erected at the city of Sharptown spanning the Nanticoke River at that point.

The day set for the reception and exercises was July 21st, beginning at the hour 2 p. m., which will include speaking followed by a banquet to Senator Price with about 100 invited guests. Supper and other refreshments will also be served on the Camp Grounds to other visitors.

It is the purpose of the Committee to make the entertainment an open air affair, and they have selected the Camp Ground for that purpose.

A committee of Salisbury people have been selected to transport the invited guests from Salisbury and the outlying districts: the committee in Salisbury is composed of William M. Cooper, Walter B. Miller and Alexander M. Jackson; it is the purpose of the committee to use about 40 automobiles for transportation of visitors.

The committee at Sharptown will have the business people of the town to suspend business for the day, and all the business places and residences will decorate their homes. They also appointed a reception committee who will take charge of the invited guests when they arrive in the town. The event as contemplated by the citizens of Sharptown and the surrounding neighborhood expect to make the affair a "Red Letter" day for their little city.

The Sharptown Yacht Building Company are rushing their work on the large and handsome yacht under construction for the German Consul of Philadelphia, Pa., and expect to add another feature to the program by launching this handsome boat.

Invitations will be issued next week to County and State guests.

The Pennsylvania Railroad is the direct route to Atlantic City, and excursion tickets are on sale from all points. Connections are made in Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, with trains over the Delaware River Bridge, all-rail route.

A New Kind Of Ice Cream.

Middletown Farms Dairies at Middletown, Del., are making a new kind of "Ice Cream." It is called "Frost" and is a frozen delicacy that is proving very popular everywhere.

The Farms are making a special price of 40 cents per gallon in lots of five gallons or more. F. O. B. Middletown for the Fourth of July trade. The Farms continue to do a large business in Ice Cream shipping daily to nearly every town on the peninsula.

CONCERNING AUTOMOBILE

Licenses In States Frequented By Our Tourists.

Secretary H. M. Lusins of the Automobile Club of Maryland has just issued a bulletin concerning automobile licenses in States popular with local tourists, and it should prove of value inasmuch as several have recently changed their law regarding the horseless vehicles.

The main features of the State laws regarding licenses as outlined in the bulletin are as follows:

West Virginia—Has no provision for exemption of non residents. Reports indicate that the officials are not very strict in enforcing the law requiring registration in the case of non residents passing through the State in the neighborhood of Harper's Ferry, Charlestown, etc., as the residents of that section welcome tourists from other States.

Virginia—Permits non residents to use its roads for two periods not exceeding seven days each in each calendar year. No registration for Virginia marker of any kind required.

District of Columbia—No registration required in the case of non residents temporarily within the District.

Delaware—For the present recognizes the Maryland registration numbers.

Pennsylvania—Maryland tourists not exempt. License fees $5 to $15.

New York—Until August 1, 1910, when the new law goes into effect, New York requires no registration by non residents. In consequence a New York license will be recognized in Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia and other reciprocal States. The New York registration fee is $3. Hence it will be much cheaper for Marylanders to get a New York license and go to Pennsylvania than to get a Pennsylvania license and go into New York. Strictly speaking, the exemption in the reciprocal States is of residents of New York, not mere license holders residents of the States. But tourists carrying New York numbers are not apt to be questioned. After August 1, the license fees in New York will be $5 to $25 and the exemption of non residents will be operative only to the extent that under the laws of their State like exemption is granted residents of New York. This excludes Maryland.

New Jersey—Special license fee of $1 charged non residents temporarily in the State. Same good on period of eight days, of four periods of two days each in each calendar year.

A Special Service.

Bradley—Wright.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday of this week, when Miss Nannie E. Wright, daughter of Wilson W. Wright, of near Mardela was married to Mr. Elmer Bradley of Sharptown. The marriage took place at Spenthen's Chapel. Rev. Mr. Harriman read the marriage services.

The bridesmaids were Misses Emma Wright, sister of the bride, and Bertha Cooper. The ushers were Messrs. Warner Wright and Wm. Hastings. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Harriman. Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Bradley will make their home at Sharptown.

Miss Nannie Wright was one of the most popular teachers of this County and held a life certificate from the State Board.

—Clerk of Court Ernest Tootin returned Wednesday from a week's visit to Ocean City, recuperating his health, from a recent attack of typhoid fever.

DEMOCRATS SHOULD

Control Next House Says Senator Smith—Maryland Swamp.

United States Senator John Walter Smith, expresses the opinion that the Democrats would control the next House of Representatives. Senator Smith also believes that the Democrats have an exceptionally good opportunity to elect the President in 1912, and is anxious for his party to name the strongest man available.

The record made by the last session of Congress Senator Smith believes greatly strengthens the Democrats. He said:

"The Tariff bill, the extravagance of the Republican administration and the fact that no bills have been passed in the interests of the people should be predominating issues raised by the Democrats. These questions will I believe, appeal to the voters who realize now that the Republican party, as at present constituted, represents special interests and not the general public. The people must look to the Democratic party for relief."

"What will be the influence of William Jennings Bryan in the Democratic party?" he was asked.

"Bryan will have some influence but I do not believe that he will be allowed to dominate the party as he has done in the past. He tried this on the Democrats of Ohio, but they would not stand for it. The trouble with Bryan is that he presumes to be the guardian of the party. He does not give anybody else credit for being able to do things. He will undoubtedly be a factor in the future, but the people will not allow him to dominate."

Democratic Influence.

"The record of the last Congress will show that most of the good in the laws enacted was due to the Democrats. Of course, the Republican insurgents helped greatly, but it was the undivided strength of the Democrats who put them through. Most of the bills as finally passed are better than they were when introduced. If the Republican leaders could have had their way there would have been no amendment to any of the important bills. I was opposed to the Postal Savings Bank bill. It is an attempt to centralize banks in the large cities and will eventually lead to one central bank. The bill was put through the Senate by the influence of President Taft and the administration. Every Democratic Senator opposed it. A majority of the Republican Senators in their hearts were opposed to the bill, but they realized that it was an Administration measure and they supported it. The Democrats were not allowed to touch it. The bill jammed through just as it passed the House. It looks as though the money interests of the country were back of the bill. I suppose that the money will be used for the purchase of $700,000,000 of 3 per cent. bonds, which have been authorized by the Government. Under the provisions of the bill a man puts his money in a bank and the bank in turn buys these bonds in order to get the Government's deposit. The Government is then given first lien on the deposits of the banks to the detriment of the depositor, whose money was originally needed in order to get the Government's deposit."

Says Maryland Fared Well.

"As far as Maryland is concerned we were able to get through all the State asked for. In the Senate we had added to the Krummiller House bill an appropriation of $100,000 for the new Immigration building. The Krummiller bill only appropriated $80,000 for the purchase of a site."

"We were given all we asked for in the Rivers and Harbors bill. The appropriations for harbor and river improvements for the Eastern Shore are larger than they have ever been before. A hundred of new surveys will be made."

"I opposed the establishment of the Court of Commerce because I believe that we already have enough courts to deal with the questions assigned to this court. The court creates more offices. I am pleased that the steamboat companies, which operate direct from one port to another, do not come under this court and I am glad that I helped in eliminating them from its supervision. Had the steamboat companies been placed under the bill it would have worked a great hardship on our local companies."

To Reclaim Swamp Lands.

Senator Smith is much interested in the bill appropriating $200,000 for the purpose of investigating the feasibility of reclaiming swamp and marsh lands in six States. It was upon his motion that Maryland was added to the list. The other States are Mississippi, North Carolina, Florida, Arkansas and Louisiana. The bill will be taken up at the next session of Congress and it is believed will be passed.

Senator Smith will go to his home in Snow Hill at the end of the week. He will be accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Arthur D. Foster, and two grandchildren. As yet Senator Smith has not made any arrangements for the summer.

He said that he was glad that Congress has adjourned.

"You have got to be on the job all the time," said the Senator. "You have got to be watchful and you have got to make friends in order to get measures through for your people and your State."

THE NORTH BRANCH

Of The Wicomico To Be Dredged—Preparations For Expending $29,000.

At a meeting of the abutting property owners on the North Branch of the Wicomico River for the purpose of complying with the request of the Government in regard to the wharfing and dredging of the river, the following committees were appointed to look into the matter and to see the owners of said property—Ex-Mayor Harper, Upshur Folk, B. Frank Komerly.

The Government required of the property owners that they should do to the Government the land as included in the Government Survey for this Branch of the river and also that the owners should put in the wharfage before the dredging is done, since the dredging will be done by a hydraulic process which necessitates the wharf being built to keep the sand from running back into the river. The committee will take this question up with the property owners and immediately proceed to make arrangements with the Government Engineer in Baltimore.

Congress passed the bill appropriating $29,000 for this work, $24,000 for work above the bridge and $5,000 for work below, provided the conditions named should be complied with.

ROADS TO BE OILED

Tarred Macadam From Camden—W. H. Crosby Here—Wicomico Settling The Pace.

Mr. Crosby, chief engineer of the Good Roads Commission was in this County this week and made a thorough examination of the new roads which the County Commissioners have been building. He expressed himself as being very well satisfied with the results and stated that Wicomico County was the banner County of the State in the building of good roads and was setting the place for all others. He gave orders to all the stone road now built. It was further decided to lay a tar macadam road from the corporation limits of the City of Salisbury to Camden to the bridge at Tony Tank. From this point it was decided to experiment on the shell road by giving a treatment of oil and tar. This has never been tried in the State and if successful will be of great value to the shell roads of this County.

The new stone road now being built is certainly a pretty piece of work and our County Commissioners can well point to it with pride as a sample of what can be done in this County. The work has been under County engineer Clark.

TEACHERS TO BE TAUGHT

Program Of Summer Institutes Arranged For Maryland.

The State Board of Education has prepared the dates for holding the teachers' institutes this summer, and as usual, the various county superintendents will visit first one place, then another, and a number of normal school instructors have been secured to assist the local teachers in the work.

Several of the counties have arranged to combine for their institutes. Caroline, Queen Anne's and Talbot Counties will hold a joint institute at Easton, September 5 to 9; Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester county teachers will meet at Ocean City August 25 to September 1, and Charles, Prince George's and St. Mary's Counties will hold a joint institute at Washington September 5 to 9.

County Superintendent Holloway, of Wicomico, has been assigned as visiting Superintendent of Eastern and Cambridge.

The Christian Endeavor Institute and Recreation Assembly which is to be held at Pen Mar July 18 to 23 will bring to this State the many special and delightful features of the larger summer conferences in the North. The great missionary gatherings at Silver Bay, Lake George, N. Y., will be somewhat reproduced in the daily mission study classes at Pen Mar. The Christian Endeavor Summer School at Sassafras Beach, Mass., will be represented in the Schools of Methods, the Northfield Summer Conference will be remembered in the stirring inspirational addresses which will be given each evening in the great auditorium. The geographical location of Pen Mar is as good as any of these Northern summer conference places and a great crowd is expected there this summer.

In addition to the many delegates from the Maryland Societies a goodly number will attend from the Districts of Columbia and the nearby Pennsylvania Counties. Special rates made from all points on the Western Maryland Railroad and a flat rate of $2.50 for the round trip is charged from Baltimore. Board may be had at a low rate making the cost of the entire trip within $10.00.

—Gentlemen, Komerly and Smith, all are willing sure (leave, peace, come) State and Sea soft skirts for this weather.

COOL, CHARMING SUMMER DRESSES FOR WOMEN and MISSES—SPECIAL at $5.00

The illustration gives only a faint idea of the attractiveness of these dresses. They are all copied from high-priced imported models, and embody the newest ideas of the noted foreign designers.

Some are of linen, in white, light blue, pink, lavender and other dainty shades; others are of gingham and madras, in pretty checks and stripes.

All are one-piece models—some are elaborately embroidered; others are trimmed with val lace, tucks or embroideries. They have Dutch neck or high lace collar, skirts are trimmed to match waist, and come in the plain pleated style as well as the new overskirt model.

All sizes for misses and women—14 to 18 years, and 34 to 44 bust measure.

WOMEN'S AND MISSES' SUMMER SUITS OF $5.00

They have perfectly plain-tailored, semi-fitted coats; single-breasted, with smoke pearl buttons, and neat shaped mannish collar and revers. The skirts are in a wide all-over-pleated, high-kilted model.

The material is pure linen crash, in the natural tan color, which looks well, and wears as well as it looks.

All sizes—14 to 18 years for misses, and 34 to 44 bust measure for women.

BALTIMORE

PRIZE INCREASED TO $250

For Essay Showing What High License Costs Baltimore.

The offer last week by the Anti Saloon League of Maryland of prizes of $100 and $50 for the best essays on the question, "What it costs the people of Baltimore morally, physically, mentally financially and industrially to secure the million dollars which it now receives from the liquor traffic under the high License Law," has stirred up so much interest already that a prominent temperance man made a special subscription to the prize fund, which increases the first prize to $250.

The League expects to be able to secure additional prize to at least $500 and hopes to be able by fall to offer $1,000, an amount which the League believes will make the contest noteworthy throughout the country and sufficient to attract contestants of such prominence, and ability that the winning essay will be accepted as "conclusive."

The contest is open to anybody, anywhere, except employees of the Anti Saloon League. January 1, 1911 is the date when all essays, typewritten, must be in the hands of Rev. J. F. Heise, D. D. Chairman of the Headquarters Committee of the Maryland League.

Many Want Space At The County Fair.

Hot days, waving wheat and corn and a few farmers' picnics and the office of the secretary of the New Castle County Fair has begun to show signs of unwonted activity in the summer campaign; already the merchants midway has had reservation enough and by merchants who make attractive displays to assure fair patrons of one very interesting form of amusement. The farm machinery section will be larger than ever before. All the exhibitors of last year have obtained space and new ones are applying for good reservations. This is one of the most instructive features of the county fair and the growth of this department is very gratifying to the management.

Exhibitors who can do so are requested to make early entries in order that proper care may be taken in the writing of record tags. Entries must be made at the secretary's office, No. 1 West Fifth street, Wilmington.

ZION.

Children's Day exercises were held in Zion Methodist Episcopal Church last Sunday evening, June 24th. Mr. George White, Superintendent. The church was beautifully decorated with out flowers and evergreen which ran to the height of the large arch back of the pulpit. The elaborate program prepared for this occasion was fully carried out to the delight of a congregation that more than filled the church. The children did their parts well and every number deserved special mention. The singing of the large choruses under Prof. Nichols elicited high encomiums and is seldom better music enjoyed by any people.

Very great credit is due Misses Nettie and Annie Hearne, the noble ones who worked so diligently in training the children, and in making the service one of the most successful in the history of the Church. The program in full is as follows:

At a meeting of the Quarterly Conference held at Parsonsburg last Friday afternoon, Rev. Geo. P. Jones, District Superintendent in the chair, the salary of our pastor, Rev. E. H. Collins was raised from $850 to $1000.

The reports from the churches were very good. Nelson's new appointment on Parsonsburg charge reporting in full on pastor's salary including District Superintendents and Bishop also, "bravo" Nelson's, keep the good record up. Truly can it be said Zion church is soon to put on new beauty and let us pray for new strength in every department in Church work. An improvement committee consisting of seven of our best Church men with E. Q. Walston as Chairman of the Committee, and that itself means something doing. The work will be done during the month of August, while the Camp meetings of Parsonsburg and Nelson's are being held.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered next Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock. Come.

Beware of Ointments For Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney and Co. Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. OUR NATIONAL HOLIDAY.

On Monday next, Father Time will bring to us once more, the anniversary of the date from which this great Republic dates its birth. On Monday, our liberty will have been enjoyed for one hundred and thirty four years. From the small group of thirteen colonies first settled, we have grown to be a mighty Nation, taking our place among the great powers of the world. Though we have many dates which we honor and celebrate, this has ever been the great National Holiday of the American people. On this day, old and young, men, women and children take a holiday, and in some way try to remember the great men who met in old Philadelphia, and at the risk of their lives, drew up a Declaration of Independence, which ever since has been pointed out as a model to other people seeking civil liberty.

This country was practically the first, as far as we know, in all history, to attempt a government wherein the people should be the sole rulers. At first, it was looked upon as a very doubtful experiment, and philosophers and students of history, the world over, looked upon it as doomed to meet the fate which had befallen all nations that had tried to organize a government on similar lines. That their diverse predictions have not come true, may perhaps be accounted for, partly in the character and the conditions which surrounded our people in the early days of our history. For populated as this country was for the most part, by people too independent in mind and action to tamely submit to the tyranny of their home government, having this natural independence of theirs strengthened and confirmed by the necessity that confronted them in establishing a home for themselves in a country populated only by savages.

Compelled from the first to fight for their life, both in the way of making a living, and from the necessity of protecting themselves, their family and their homes, from the savage attacks of Indians, they naturally grew independent for ages, and confident of their own power to take care of themselves, both at home and abroad. It is well indeed that we, the present generation should recall the trials and the difficulties which confronted the first settlers of this Continent, and for no Nation can exist free and independent unless the ideals of their people are great, noble and self-sacrificing.

Let our boys and girls become thoroughly familiar with the histories of their fathers and their mothers, and let them be taught to emulate and follow the noble examples which they set. As the nation grows stronger and wealthier, it also has a tendency to use its high ideals, and the people in their intense selfishness, forget the duty they owe to their native lands, and it is only in keeping alive the high ideals that a nation can expect to continue to grow in prosperity and power.

There is but one unfortunate feature in our celebration of the Fourth of July, and that is the great loss of life due to the careless handling of fireworks by our boys. Each year this day claims as its victims, thousands of the promising youths of our land, who, carried away by the spirit of the day, carelessly handle firecrackers, by pistols or some other form of fireworks. More attention this year has been given by the States and Cities to this question, and the cry now all over the land is for a safe and sane celebration. The effect of some of these legislative and police regulations can easily be ascertained from statistics, showing the difference from the time of life before and after these precautions were taken. Some of these statistics are very startling indeed. In the city of Washington, where hundreds of lives were sacrificed a few years ago, last year, under the laws and regulations of the Police Department, not a single death from lockjaw was reported as a result of the day.

While in Salisbury and Wicomico County, but few have lost their life, yet it is well that parents should be careful and caution their children against the danger of fireworks. Owing to the efforts of the Wicomico Fair Association, the children of this city and county will have an opportunity to view a good display of fireworks, without in any way imperiling their lives.

Let us all celebrate the Fourth in a spirit becoming the great event of which it is the anniversary. Let us instill in the minds of our children, the great blessing that they are enjoying by living in a country of civil and religious liberty. Let them be taught to carefully guard and protect these liberties from approachment of those who either by means of their wealth, or led by their great ambition may wish to see a more limited form of government than now exists here. Let them be taught that the love of home and the love of Country go hand in hand, and that the protection of one means the protection of the other, and that they should be willing to sacrifice even life itself should either demand it of them.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL EXTRAVAGANCE.

"The whoopers-up for President Taft claimed that he was omnipotent and could force Congress to do anything he desired," declared Minority Leader Champ Clark, reviewing the session just closed in an interview with the writer.

"If that be true one thing must be admitted and that is that Mr. Taft is in favor of the reckless waste of public money."

"The total of appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910, was $1,044,000,000, whereas the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1911, are about $1,058,000,000 an increase of $14,000,000. Such expenditures are absolutely unjustifiable. When the President came into office he declared for economy with a great flourish of trumpets. The newspapers were full of what he was going to do in that regard to relieve the taxpayers of the land. But all such talk turned out to be thundering in the index—as the foregoing totals show."

"I have heretofore stated in the House and out of it that Senator Aldrich said a good business man can run the government just as well as it is run for $300,000,000 per annum less than it now costs. The President himself fixed the amount which could be saved every year at $100,000,000. Other Republican big wigs, notably Senator Carter, of Montana, Senator Hale, of Maine, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee and Hon. James A. Tawney, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, have talked economy; but the fact remains that their economy consists entirely of gab and that they actually increased the appropriations instead of reducing them."

"As they have large majorities in both Houses of Congress and could do as they pleased, one of two things is true: 1. They do not desire to economize; 2. They are utterly incompetent."

ROOSEVELT SNUBBED TAFT.

It has become known in Washington that President Taft endeavored to have Roosevelt pay him a visit at the White House, and that the latter did not accept the invitation. This further emphasizes the story that the Taft administration has been so bad that Roosevelt will not dare to enforce it. It is said that the President's invitation was carried to Roosevelt orally by Captain Archibald Butt, and delivered on the day of Roosevelt's return. Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts and Son-in-law Longworth, according to information which has leaked out, also made strenuous endeavors to have Roosevelt pay his respects to Taft at the White House, but T. R. balked.

FRILLS AND FURBELOWS

At Paris Races. Now The Straight Silhouette Is Relieved.

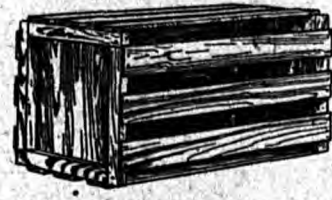

The race course late in June is the place where fashions are exploited. Styles are tried out there and those that meet with that approval denoted by order for similar designs, are apt to be the leading modes for Fall apparel. "Be as slim as you can" is still the motto of the Paris couturiers, though this does not preclude the greatest possible variety of designs, while a certain easy looseness that is yet not clumsy or baggy, makes for a slenderness even where the figure is overfull.

New Fall Colors.

The new Fall color card is out and presages considerable change from present tones. Blues now so prominent occupy an inconspicuous place except for the vivid shades employed principally for contrasts such as Peacock and Wild Duck hues. Purple blues that are more purple than blue appear as "Comet" shades. These are really violets and promise to have great vogue as they fit with the "half mourning" that will be obligatory with the coats set, and hence desirable to a much wider public. Wood pinks and reds with a brownish cast are shown and greens of a decidedly yellow cast are prominent as well as blue greens and softer shades. Grays with a lilac cast are apt to be well endorsed and browns in yellow and daller shades are already being worn more than for several years past.

The Latest Wrap.

The scarf of double satin about two yards long and eighteen to twenty four inches wide, finished at the end with a long black tassel is the newest worn. Often there is a contrasting lining and sometimes the tassels show a mixture of the two colors, but the all black is smartest, and affords considerable protection in changeable temperatures.

The Satin Shoe.

Low shoes of heavy black satin, or those with a leather vamp and uppers of satin are especially modish. Some of the prettiest and most desirable styles are of American make. In fact the imported shoes are veritable orphans with well dressed Parisiennes since they are both more shapely and lasting than their native productions.

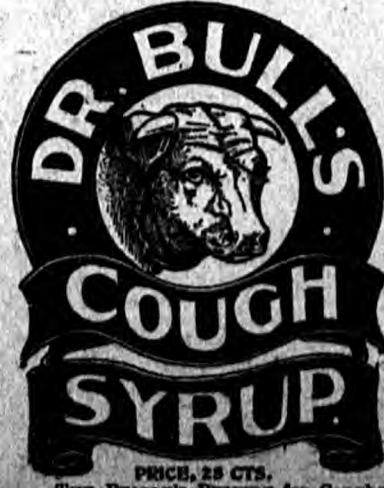

Plumes in Variegated Dyes.

Plumes are one color on one side and a contrast on the opposite side of the midrib are a late idea that was exploited at the races, and hat trimmings of an upstanding sort are placed again at the front of the hat. Motor apparel is responsible for a revival of the Calèche bonnet of silk or other fabric shirred on reeds, such as was used in stage coaching days and for similar reasons. It covers and protects the coiffure, allows one to lean back comfortably and does not act as sail to catch the wind when one is speeding.

Long Coats And Short.

For traveling, motoring and such coats grow more completely enveloping while for all other wear, coats are taking off length, and developing the fancy styles sure to make their appearance when short lengths prevail. A suit of green shantung with bands of black satin embroidered in green, has the straight skirt tucked in narrow widths to the knee a band of similar tucking forming a front panel. The embroidered bands fall in straight stoles on either side of this narrow panel and the jaunty short coat has similar bands forming a fitch trimming at the neck and banding the short peplum at front and sides. A belt of black satin ending with one of the popular flower shaped rosettes finishes the jacket at the waist line; and the inner waist is of silk mullin in matching shade with an Irish lace collar and short gump and a stiff cravat bow of black satin.

BOLGIANO'S RE-CLEANED COW PEAS

WILL MAKE YOU RICH!

Sow them for hay crops—for forage crops after grain crops—on vacant land. Put Cow Peas in every available piece of land you have. They will wonderfully increase the value and productivity of your entire farm. We strongly recommend the sowing of Mixed Cow Peas. They are composed of Blacks, Whip-poor-wills, Clays, Wonderfols, Shinnets, etc. The upright-growing varieties will hold up the vining varieties and will produce much better crops of vines and larger amount of forage.

Eat What

You want of the food you need
Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it. Also you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly.

When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do it is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you. It would bankrupt us.

The dollar bottle contains 2 1/2 times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is made at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

CHAPTER V.

HAGGLETON AT WORK.

"I WILL start fair," said Haggleton briefly to Gentle. "I will keep nothing but the clothes I stand in—and $2. That's what I started with the first time. Moran started with more than that. Two dollars will suffice for me. My clothes I can sell and buy a suit more fitting for a penniless man looking for a job. The difference in price I will add to my capital. You will have to explain me to Moran and make him take me as a boarder. I am Mr. Jackson, a small business man ruined by the trust." Then he added to Philip: "Call my secretary."

The man entered hastily. "I wish to be alone with Mr. Grimes for a few moments."

Philip and Gentle withdrew. "Sit down," motioned Haggleton. Grimes looked at his watch. "The yacht was to sail in twenty minutes," he murmured. "You will lose the tide."

"I'm not going on the yacht."

"Ah! Then I'm to countermand the sailing orders?"

"I mean that the yacht goes, but I stay here—here in this tenement. I'm going to live here."

"Am I to sail on the yacht?"

"Of course. You will take my orders and see that they are executed. I shall write a note for the captain, telling him to carry out exactly the instructions already agreed upon."

"For a three months' cruise?"

"Yes. See to it that the news does not get out that I am not on board. Down here there's not one change in a thousand that I have discovered."

"And Grimes, I have another reason for wanting every one to think me aboard the yacht."

"Another reason besides—besides your son?"

"Yes. You know how Bates went of yesterday. He hates me—hates me—and he'll pay up somehow, but he'll never stop fighting. Grimes, as soon as those fellows know I'm away they'll start some new devilry against me."

"And he leaned forward—"It might be amusing and profitable to be right here in Manhattan watching them."

Haggleton opened the door. "Come in, please," he called.

Gentle and Philip entered.

The old man sat at the bare wooden table and rapidly wrote his instructions. Then he sealed them and addressed the envelope. "There; I think that's all," he concluded, giving it to Grimes, who departed.

A remarkable change had come over Haggleton. His eyes were alert, his face firm, but good natured. He seemed pleased with himself and with things in general. Philip observed this with surprise.

Haggleton looked Philip straight in the eyes.

"I have told you that I am going to show you what John J. Haggleton would do if he had to hustle in a tenement."

He now turned to Gentle and began to fire rapid questions at him. Moran? A morose man, who ascribed his failure to the inequity of a trust. Quite so. After his first failure he had simply stopped struggling? Just so. He was a baker's assistant? Could he get "Mr. Jackson" a place in the bakery? Mr. Jackson thought that he would like to have a try at the bakery business. Jenny? Hard working, but overwhelmed by her dispiriting environment and the privations of poverty. Just as he thought.

Joe Caffrey? Shiftless? Unmoral? Well, well! Joe must become their charge.

In ten minutes John J. knew all he cared to know. As in the organization of his gigantic undertakings, so now here, in this hotel, he had begun by gauging the possibilities of those with whom he would have to deal. He had watched his son and seen the look of interest, growing into admiration, upon his face. Yes, he had made a good beginning.

Haggleton rose and took a final turn of the room.

"When I came here nearly forty years ago," he announced, "this was a clean district. Now it is a dirty one. American cleanliness has been submerged by foreign shiftlessness. Within a week I will have this home of native Americans as neat as a New England farmhouse."

Where was he to sleep? Joe Caffrey would be Philip's guest for a day or two? All right. That nurse had said that the children ought to be in a hospital? Gentle would see to it that they went that very day and got their father's consent? All right.

Gentle went on his mission, Haggleton accompanying him to sell his clothes and buy cheaper ones.

Jenny returned home with her basket of images and welcomed an addition to their resources in the form of a boarder who would be far less trouble than the two children and more profitable. Mr. Jackson, Philip informed her, had seen better days—in fact, until quite recently he had lived in easy circumstances.

Tired as she was, depressed by the knowledge that she had lost Philip, she began to set the hotel to rights.

Margaret Lawrence, entering from the inner room, found her energetically at work making a distinction between the box that contained the coal and the basket that held the potatoes.

Gentle returned, accompanied by an ambulance. The children were bundled off, with much excitement on their part and many farewells, Margaret's final treat exacted from her—riding with them!

Haggleton—now "Mr. Jackson"—returned soon after, having sold his expensive clothes and bought with the proceeds a simple suit, better adapted to the role he was to play.

Jenny shook hands with Mr. Jackson, whom Gentle introduced, and bade him make himself at home. Gentle went.

The new boarder was certainly handy. He took off his coat and offered to help. Without waiting for an acceptance of the offer he began. He was deferential—he had "beautiful manners," Jenny concluded—asking permission even while he set to work.

In this way he brought some order into the chaos of the young woman's domestic economy. It was a mere scraping of the surface, but when it had been accomplished Jenny was firmly convinced that it was she who had made the suggestions. Mr. Jackson who had merely carried them out.

"My, but you're handy," said Jenny, glancing around contentedly at the new arrangement of the room and the various small improvements.

"Well, you see, Mrs. Jenny—may I call you that? They all do. I am an old bachelor and used to doing things for myself. You don't mind?"

"Certainly not. I have so much to do I never seem to get a chance to do any one thing thoroughly."

Jenny looked at the alarm clock. "Father will be home soon for dinner now," she announced, "and Joe, my brother-in-law."

Moran arrived, worn out, in a vile humor. Jenny introduced the new boarder to him.

The baker's assistant looked Mr. Jackson over with listless curiosity, which changed to ill concealed hostility when he saw the neatness of the newcomer's clothes and his well kept hands. He himself had been like that once! Moreover, the man had an insufferable air of distinction. Who and what was he to look like that? Nothing but a failure, endeavoring to find a new foothold in life.

Moran resolved to establish proper relations at once.

"I am Moran," he said, "and you are Jackson. 'Mr.' does not go down here."

"All right, Moran. Jackson it is."

Joe arrived, having lost Jenny's $2, but cheerful as ever.

The new boarder interested him, and he began to make his acquaintance, his method being the not unusual one of asking innocently impertinent questions.

Haggleton saw another opportunity, and, as usual, he took it. He talked to Joe, but at Moran.

Yes; Haggleton was looking for a job. No; he had not saved a penny out of his failure.

But Moran snorted.

"Once you are down and out you stay down and out," he snarled.

"Well, I will try anyhow."

"You won't get the opportunity," persisted Moran.

"I shan't wait for it. I will create it."

"Stupid! Once you are down and out you might as well quit. The capitalists have framed all up."

Haggleton listened attentively, analyzing the man's arguments as they flowed from his now fluent lips. It was the first time that he heard the voice of social discontent direct, instead of giving it a hasty moment of attention as it expressed itself in press reports or magazine articles.

What struck him at once about Moran's tirade was that the man placed upon the shoulders of the rich not only the responsibility for all the wrongs of society, but also the duty of righting them without any assistance from him and his class.

Joe became impatient.

"Stop gassing, Moran," he said tersely. "I always tell him that he's smoking the wrong dope, Mr. Jackson."

"What would you do if you were rich, Mr. Caffrey?" asked Haggleton.

"Oh, say, you just watch me. I'd be at the track every day at 2:45, in the grand stand. Wouldn't I wear the sports clothes? I would put a thousand on every race, one, two, three, and a thousand straight on every hundred to one shot."

"You would soon be rid of your money, Mr. Caffrey."

"Not me. Say, do you think that the millionaires haven't got the races fixed, like everything else? They know the owners and the trainers and the jockeys and the starters—oh, say, it's a joke."

Joe continued his picture of riches beyond the dreams of avarice:

"Not but that I would not own a million dollar yacht, like John J., he continued."

Moran sprang up.

"The thief," he shouted, "the robber, the bloodsucker, the murderer! He has made me what I am. He has killed my daughter's husband. He's—"

The man choked.

"His daughter's husband, my brother-in-law," explained Joe very calmly, "was killed at a grade crossing by a train on a road in which John J. has a lot of stock."

"Dinner," said Jenny tersely.

The three men rose, drew up their chairs to the table and sat down. Haggleton made a pretense of eating, but hardly touched anything. He still devoted himself to Moran. That chance reference to work in the bakery must not be allowed to pass. At last he won from him the admission that a helper in the bakery was sick and that a substitute was needed. A promise to recommend him for the temporary employment was extracted.

And so Haggleton was to be a baker like Moran!

"That's fine coffee," he said. "I used to keep house for myself after a fashion, and, you know, I am just like a woman—I take an interest in prices. What do you pay for this coffee?"

"Eighteen cents," she said, "for a half pound."

"Already ground, I suppose."

"Yes."

"H'm! A pound of good coffee in the bean costs only 28 cents. Ah, yes, we poor people waste a lot of money!" Moran stared at him.

"Waste money?"

"Yes, sir. I believe there's more extravagance down here than in Fifth Avenue. Now, Mrs. Jenny, what do you pay for coffee?"

"Fifteen cents a bucketful."

"How much in a bucketful?"

"You can search me."

"Twenty-five pounds," said Joe.

Haggleton. "That's eighty bucketfuls to a ton. Eighty times fifteen is $12. You pay twice as much for coal as Haggleton does."

"He buys it by the ton," growled Moran. "Where would we get a ton of coal?"

"And where would we get $8 all at once to pay for it?" asked Joe.

"If Mrs. Jenny will allow me," replied Haggleton, "I'll find a place for the coal one of these days, and we may think up some scheme of buying it by the ton."

Jenny's brain was busily at work after dinner as she turned one statuette after the other, her brush rapidly passing over their surfaces. She thought of Philip. Would he come that night? No, of course not! He was over there at the boarding house with the woman he loved. Her heart contracted with pain. Oh, if only she had not—Perhaps, if that episode in her life had never been, he might—She sighed with resignation, bent her head low as the tears blurred her vision and went on with her work. Yet hope would not be denied.

Philip did not come.

Gentle arrived at 9 to see how the newcomer was getting along. The two had a long talk on social conditions, temperate, sensible.

Jenny rose at a quarter to 10, worn out, and went to bed. Gentle went soon afterward.

Left alone, Moran and Haggleton did not find a word to say to each other. The millionaire needed fresh air, but the suggestion of an open window was curtly vetoed.

Moran got up and began to undress. He slipped into bed, retaining his trousers.

Haggleton stretched himself luxuriously upon the clean, fresh sheets upon the hard mattress. It had been a busy day for him, and he felt tired, but he could not sleep. Too much had happened!

He had found his son!

He had started life anew!

He had accepted the challenge to the greatest battle of his career!

And he must learn to do his loving bit—self!

Punishment in Persia.

Among the Persians the usual mode of punishment is the bastinado, from which men of the highest rank are not exempt. It is inflicted with very great severity, frequently so as to render the sufferer almost a cripple for life. The victim is thrown upon his face, and each foot is passed through a loop of strong cord attached to a pole, which is raised horizontally by men, who, twisting it round, tighten the rope and render the feet immovable. Two executioners then strike the sole alternately with switches of the pomegranate tree well steeped in water to render them supple. A store of these switches is generally ready for use in the pond which adjoins the courtyard of the houses of the great. The punishment frequently lasts for an hour or until the unfortunate victim faints from pain.

Hacking Humor.

A parliamentary candidate was holding a meeting in And Keekie at which the becker was much in evidence, and the embarrassed candidate failed to give a single answer which was judged to be satisfactory by the audience. Toward the end of the meeting an elector rose and quietly asked, "Sir, would you tell us what might be the name your second initial stands for?" The unfortunate candidate, greatly puzzled at the purport of the question, asked in what way the information could interest the audience. "In this way," explained the interrogator—"we should be able to see if you could answer one question"—London Tatler.

An Easy Cure.

A correspondent for a local paper writes that his sister sent him four fun lines which are guaranteed to cure any case of strenuousness in the family. The lines are to be repeated three times heartily in the face of any domestic difficulty. Here they are:

The dog is in the pantry.

The cat is in the lake.

The cow is in the hammock.

What difference does it make?

—Nauticus

Spiritism Said To Be Demonic.

A most interesting little brochure has recently come off the press, setting forth with Bible proofs that the communications received by and through Spiritist Mediums is of demonic origin. The writer traces his subject through the Scriptures from the time when certain of the holy angels became disobedient. He proves from the Scriptures that these fallen spirits deal in personating the human dead, with whose past history, spirits, though invisible, are thoroughly acquainted. He shows that they also frequently personate the Creator and the Redeemer, commanding their deceived ones to pray, do penance, etc. This, however, is merely to lead them on and to bring them more thoroughly under demonic control. Sometimes by breaking down the natural barrier, the human will, they obscure their victim and rule him more or less to his ruin—frequently sending such to the mad-house. Numerous illustrations, Scriptural and otherwise, are given. The price of the little book is but ten cents; it should be in the hands of all interested in Spiritism or who have friends interested therein. Enclose five two-cent stamps to the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Difficult Scriptures On Hell.

A little book selling at only ten cents, postpaid, is having a very wide circulation—running up into the millions. It contains some very startling information respecting the meaning of the word Hell. It claims to demonstrate, both from the Hebrew and the Greek of our Bible, that Hell is NOT a place of eternal torment, but merely another name for the Tomb, the Grave, the State of Death. It affects to show that man was not redeemed from a far-off place of eternal torture, but quotes the Scriptures, proving that he was Redeemed from the Grave at the cost of his Redeemer's life, and that the Scriptural hope, both for the Church and the World, is a resurrection hope based upon the death and resurrection of Jesus. The book is certainly worth the reading. The information it furnishes is certainly valuable, far beyond its trifling cost. Order it at once from the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

HEMS TO BE WIDE

HAVE BECOME IMPORTANT PART OF COSTUME.

Are So Made as to Command Instant Attention—Generally in Colors to Match Gown or Dominant Color Note.

It seems quite trivial to lay stress upon a hem. This is a part of the costume that receives scant attention and usually deserves only what it gets.

All this is changed. Everyone, amateur and expert, will pay marked attention to the bottom of the skirt from now on, for the hem has risen into prominence and promises to receive a most unusual degree of respect.

Even wraps, long, voluminous satin and chiffon things in the purple of expensive Hamburg grapes (and the wraps are expensive) have hems that flare and flaunt themselves instantly in the eye of the beholder. These hems are not of the expensive grape purple, but of a contrasting color to the dress, the color of an artist and give the lover of color something new to think about.

So far the hems on frocks are of the same color, or they match the dominant color note in a check or plaid design. It is in the latter combination that one gets every inch of service out of the hem.

Say that the frock is one of those useful, every-hour black and white marquisettes or nylon velvets, which carry these contrasting colors in a subdued way by toning down the spaces in the white. As a rule, these frocks are commonplace if worthy, but the startling new hem brings them out of the "also ran" class and gives them an individual air. This border—for that should be its name—is of black satin from eight to twenty inches deep. The color and idea are repeated in the blouse, where there is a deep-pointed yoke of satin that extends well over the sleeves and is cut to points.

Such a hem is quite plain. It does not need trimming to draw attention to it. It is not braided or embroidered. The one feature about it that will be called queer is that it is narrower by several inches than the skirt to which it is attached.

This does and will continue to cause comment. It's an odd trick that has not been satisfactorily explained by its designers.

Like all Adams they put the blame on the eyes. The women wanted it in that fashion is their excuse. Women have grown happily accustomed to narrowness around the feet, and they intend to continue the custom. Wide hems are in their way, and, though they consented to width or fullness above the shoptops, they wouldn't consent to it below.

Now some of these hems are only a yard wide, but it is the experience of all those who deal in clothes, or watch them carefully, that the designers always exaggerate the new fashions at their initiation, and then they, or the public, modify them later.

A cloth wrung out of hot vinegar and water and laid on the forehead as hot as can be borne will relieve a headache.

The hair is often improved by heating the hair brush before brushing the hair. Frequently hold the brush to the fire, then brush the scalp.

A home-made lotion that is excellent for the skins and will prevent premature wrinkles is made by boiling 12 tablespoonfuls of pearl barley in a quart of water until gluten is extracted. Strain through a fine linen and add to the liquid a teaspoonful of tincture of benzoin.

A glass of milk just before going to bed is highly recommended by physicians to build up over thin persons who are consequently lacking in vitality. It has benefited numbers of girls with this trouble of lack of flesh. Local massage, with almond oil or cocoa butter, is also good if applied regularly.

A bunion cure is made of one dram each of glycerin, carbolic acid and tincture of iodine. Mix and paint the spot several times daily and at night. It is necessary to wear low heels and broad shoes, that there may be no pressure on the joint, which should be covered by a corn protector made of a ring of felt.

A Good Feature.

A feature of the shirred skirt is that it can be let down and fashioned in straight length later on. At present many fear to have a good material made into these skirts, fearing the style will soon change. It may and it may not, that remains to be seen, but the chances are that these skirts will be worn throughout the summer. There are hundreds of modish ways to gather the skirt and hold it to the underskirt. It is useless to attempt it with textiles that will not drape gracefully.

Why He Didn't.

Two gentlemen, shooting in Scotland, sat down to lunch. On taking a bottle of whisky out, one of them noticed that the cork had been tampered with, and, knowing the character of their guests, at once accused him of having been at the lunch basket.

"I fear that you have been drinking the whisky, Sandy."

"No, sir, I have not, for the cork wouldn't come out!"

WORK WEAKENS THE KIDNEYS.

Doan's Kidney Pills Have Done Great Service For People Who Work in Salisbury.

Most Salisbury people work every day in some strained, unnatural position, bending constantly over a desk, riding on jolting cars, doing laborious housework; lifting, reaching or pulling, or trying the back in a hundred and one other ways. All these strains tend to wear, weaken and injure the kidneys until they fall behind in their work of filtering the poisons from the blood. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, put new strength in bad backs. Salisbury cares prove it.

A. R. Lohner, 318 William Street, Salisbury, Md., says: "I feel safe in saying that anyone who uses Doan's Kidney Pills according to directions will find relief from kidney trouble. For at least thirty years my kidneys were disordered and as I am obliged to work in a draught and do much heavy lifting, it was hard for me to escape kidney ills. My back often became very weak and lame and the kidney secretions annoyed me by their irregularity in passage. It was finally my good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a supply at White's and Leonard's drug store. They brought me prompt relief. I have used them off and on during the past ten years, always finding great benefit."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and taken no other.

"Tabernacle Shadows Of The Better Sacrifices."

This little book is not for the ordinary readers, but most decidedly it is what every advanced Bible student and earnest Christian should possess and study thoroughly. It costs but ten cents, is illustrated and draws its lessons on the higher life from the types and shadows of Israel's typical Atonement Day and other sacrifices. Surely every earnest Christian should have this little book and find in it a mine of spiritual wealth, health and refreshment. Order it now from the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Many Women who are Splendid Cooks

dread having to prepare an elaborate dinner because they are not sufficiently strong to stand over an intensely hot coal range. This is especially true in summer. Every woman takes pride in the table she sets, but often it is done at tremendous cost to her own vitality through the weakening effect of cooking on a coal range in a hot kitchen.

It is no longer necessary to wear yourself out preparing a fine dinner. Even in the heat of summer you can cook a large dinner without being worn out.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New-Perfection."

New Perfection Oil Cook-stove

Gives no outside heat, no smell, no smoke. It will cook the biggest dinner without heating the kitchen or the cook. It is immediately lighted and immediately extinguished. It can be changed from a slow to a quick fire by turning a handle. There's no draggery connected with it, no coal to carry, no wood to chop. You don't have to wait fifteen or twenty minutes till its fire gets going. Apply a light and it's ready. By simply turning the wick up or down you get a slow or an intense heat on the bottom of the pot, pan, kettle or oven, and nowhere else. It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot, drop shelves for coffee, teapot or saucepan, and even a rack for towels. It saves time, worry, health and temper. It does all a woman needs and more than she expects. Made with 1, 2, and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner sizes can be had with or without Cabinet.

SUB-MARINE CABLE LAND

An Unusual Engineering Feat Just Completed By Which Telephone Conversations Between Baltimore and Eastern Shore Will Be Improved.

It has long been the hope of the telephone engineer to successfully construct a cable which would satisfactorily carry telephone messages for a great distance. While "open wires"—that is, those pairs of wires strung on poles—transmit the messages satisfactorily, they become bulky when used in large numbers and are easily placed out of service during sleet storms.

With the best known apparatus and high engineering skill it was possible to transmit conversations successfully through not more than twenty miles of cable.

New Process Discovered.

However, about ten years ago there was invented a process by which it was made possible to use telephone cables over long distances.

First Sub-Marine So Equipped.

The first sub marine cable, using this method of operation, that has ever been installed in this country, and the first practical one in the world, has been installed across Chesapeake Bay to serve Bell Telephone subscribers in Delaware and on the eastern shores of Maryland and Virginia in their service with Baltimore City and Maryland.

This cable was developed by a corps of expert engineers in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore—a corps of fifteen or twenty high-grade men who spent two or three months working on its development. The result is that, across Chesapeake Bay, there is now the best sub marine cable in the world—a cable which makes telephone conversation from Baltimore to Cape Charles or other peninsula points equivalent to a conversation over a land line fifty miles shorter than by way of the former route. The difficulty of laying this cable was excessive. At several points, special apparatus, weighing 1,400 pounds, was fastened to the cable. These appliances being very delicate, had to be lowered with great care. The difficulty of handling apparatus weighing 1,400 pounds and dropping it to the bottom of the bay without injuring it, with a thunderstorm looming up in the distance—as it happened in this case—need not be described in order to be appreciated by readers of this paper.

Proceedings Of The School At Friday's Session.

Permission was granted the teachers of Oak Grove School to add the seventh grade to the curriculum.

Reports are still coming in to the County Superintendent of money raised by teachers the last scholastic year by means of entertainments. The amounts up to Friday totaled $337.

The examination for the vacant scholarship in Western Maryland College resulted in Clifford Ryall, of Fruitland, getting the highest mark. There were four applicants. Young Ryall was one of the graduates of the Wicomico High School this year.

The vacant scholarship in the Maryland Institute was awarded to Miss Dorothy Mitchell, of Salisbury, a graduate of the 1910 class of the Wicomico High School.

Three scholarships are vacant in the State Normal School, Baltimore, and up to Friday there was but one applicant, Miss Mary Pusey, daughter of B. S. Pusey, Esq., who was appointed. Miss Pusey was a member of the 1910 graduating class of the Wicomico High School.

The Board having decided to change the location of Jones' Schoolhouse, in Parsons District, changed the name of the school to Mt. Hermon School.

Twenty eight teachers took the examination last week, with this result: 6 earned new certificates, 4 full certificates, 4 earned renewals, 4 failed, and 10 raised their general standing.

The contract to paint the Chestnut Street and Bell Street school buildings was awarded Clifford H. Adkins, his bid being $310.00 for both buildings.

Something New in Art

Not so new either. For KARNAK BRASS found its inception in the Temple of Karnak, built by Seti I on the banks of the Nile, some fifteen centuries ago.

This old temple inspired one of the designers of the Benedict Studios to reproduce in articles of modern utility the ideal features of Egyptian ornamental art.

Each piece of KARNAK BRASS is Egyptian in form and decoration, the decorative motifs being the Lotus Flower, Isis, the Sphinx, the Papyrus, Scarabeus.

This class of goods has true artistic merit and is of a substantial make that insures its lasting a lifetime.

ON SPRING THOUGHTS

By WILL BRADSHAW

Long before this you will have, no doubt, met some one in your travels who, when introduced into conversation on the beauties of this season of the year, that lovely old saying about a young man's thoughts lightly taking a few turns in the direction of love. We cannot get away from it. It is a quotation that will live as long as man is imbued with the same ideas he has today. It blossoms on the tip of our tongues in the springtime with the regularity of the pussy-willow and the lilac bush. Who would ever think the staid old world would show so much interest in a young man's thoughts, anyway? And especially putting so much stress each spring on a little quotation that is in itself most misleading in its meaning.

We all know, or at least most of us have learned from actual experience, that in the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love. The statement is as true as truth can make it. But why state that it is in spring a young man's fancy turns in that direction? So far as we know, a young man's fancy is turning in that general direction in summer; in the lovely autumn; and if an investigation was made around about the time the snow begins to fly in December, it would be found that the young man's fancy was revolving with astonishing rapidity in a love-ward direction. So, as far as a young man is concerned, it may be truthfully said that the open season for his fancies in this line extends from January 1 to January 1.

Another mistake may be shown to prove that the author of this beautiful gem in the purest English was "in wrong" on the subject when told about the young man's fancy.

If a young man's fancy, after a long cold winter, turns, as he states, lightly to thoughts of love, and these thoughts of love sent out upon the world are not reciprocated, of what value or purpose are they? It cannot be that they were meant to wander in the broad expanse and like the handle of the pump, neither touch heaven or earth. Oh, no! The statement is very misleading. In spring, also, a young lady's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love. If she is acquainted with a young lady and can rely on her for an answer to your query (some are very reticent on the subject), you will find that a young lady's fancy does the same fancy turns as the young man's when love is the point of destination.

It has never been known just why spring was chosen by this poet as the particular season for a young person's fancy to somersault in the direction of love. While all four seasons are well adapted to the playing of the game, one would think the beautiful summer had the most to offer in this line. One would think a moonlight night in July, or August, or September would be far more conducive to these thoughts.

Pleasant as summer seems, the autumn can hold its own in furnishing the setting for many a pretty little scene. What is there any more melodramatic than when walking through the woods you pick up a withered leaf and, much to your young lady's embarrassment, apparently, you start a discourse on a love that will never wither or die. Then the young lady, recovering from the shock and wishing to repay the compliment, tells you that even when you are antiquated as you oak you can still feel assured that she is yours sincerely.

The fall, for stunts of this kind, is, in the estimation of some, almost as pleasant as the winter time. The winter advocates champion their season until one is almost won over. A sleigh ride is a fine thing. Then skating offers great possibilities for the work in mind. It always gives the young man, when putting on her skates, the opportunity of suggesting that she slide through life over the glassy surface of love together. There are others who prefer, of all the opportunities winter offers, the occasion when, as the music ceases and you drape the opera cloak over those lovely white shoulders and lead her to the taxi cab, you make known the fact that you are listed in the "Situations Wanted" as a protector of beautiful femininity.

We can now see that the poet made an awful mistake when he told about the fancy of the young man and completely ignored the young lady, who has similar thoughts and fancies, and claimed spring as the time of year for these fancies, when they are the same in all seasons.

As a contemporary of the poet, a village cory with a broader knowledge of the ways of the young folks than the esteemed poet, put it: "The spring is the time for the lovin' ones. Likewise the summer and fall; But if these have all passed, And you're still in that class, Then the winter's the best of all." (Copyright, 1909, by W. G. Chapman.)

High Prices Paid for Apples. Apples are greater luxuries in New York than oranges. While single oranges of the finest variety can be bought for 5 cents, the best apples are being sold for 12 cents each.

Perfected Cash Register. A Minnesota inventor has been granted a patent on a cash register that carries a photograph to announce the figures indicated when its keys are pressed.

ENTIRELY IMPERSONAL

The young man with the maroon necktie was absentmindedly thoughtful amid the idle chatter. Suddenly he spoke.

"It's queer how time changes a fellow," he said. "I've noticed it in lots of my friends. They change their ideas, you know. I've noticed that if they don't get married ridiculously early they generally wait till it is ridiculously late."

"What a great truth!" cried the young man with the gray tie. "If it isn't dark it is sure to be light! Even so!"

"Let him alone!" ordered the hostess. "But why matrimony?" she inquired of the young man with the maroon tie. "We were talking of golf, you know!"

"Were we?" asked the absentminded one. "I don't believe a man really falls in love after he is 30, say. Do you? Lose his head and all that, you know—or be willing to fly to the end of the earth, regardless of his next week's business engagements. He uses sense. And you can't use sense about falling in love!"

"Few people do," observed the hostess. "Look at the individuals they pick out to fall in love with! You aren't doing it, are you, Richard?"

"Of course not," said the young man with the maroon tie, gruffly. "How absurd! I was just speaking generally. I observe things, you know. And a fellow doesn't feel sure he's got the right girl unless he does lose his head a bit, does he?"

"Why, I can remember," went on the young man with the maroon tie, "when I was 19 or 20 of two love affairs, in both of which I was clean crazy. I was so desperately mad over those girls—at separate times, of course—that life absolutely was not worth living contemplated apart from them! I remember I wanted to die and so avoid the dark and dreary future stretching before me when Evelyn turned me down. And it was actual anguish, too! Now, if I can laugh at anything as real as that just because a few years have intervened, how the dickens could I ever be sure any infatuation I might tumble into now wasn't just as ephemeral?"

"I thought," observed the young man with the maroon tie, "you said you weren't personally interested in the subject. It begins to look to me—"

"Rubbish!" interrupted the young man with the maroon tie. "It's farthest from my thoughts. I don't know anybody care particularly about, though I do know some mighty nice girls! You just change that's all! It becomes a matter of calm judgment and—and—er—all that. You stop to think whether the girl is really suited to you and consider her disposition and tastes, and her mother, and whether you like her brother."

"Now, that destroys all the romance, doesn't it? It makes the whole affair humdrum and casual. There's absolutely nothing spontaneous about it."

"Why, I remember when Evelyn was the light of the world to me I wouldn't have cared if her mother had smoked a pipe or made platform speeches, and as for Evelyn's tastes—well, to this day I know not whether I miss my to Wagner or my, or my preferred Shakespeare to Laura Jean Libbey. I didn't care—and that's the point. I would care now. You couldn't consider a wife without considering what your friends would think of her. And you want to be sure, too, that you really care!"

"This sounds suspicious," observed the hostess.

"Not at all!" protested the young man with the maroon tie. "Not at all! I just got started on this subject, that's all! No, I don't think I shall ever marry. In the first place, I'm not in love, and I don't think I ever shall be."

"I really can't take such an absorbing interest in a girl nowadays that I miss my meals in my abstraction. And, somehow, I wouldn't die for any of them. Yet I know two or three fascinating girls. I don't think it would be wise to run the chance of making myself and the girl miserable when you weren't quite sure. Do you think there is anything in this theory of learning to care more after you are married? It doesn't seem rational to me. I suppose the only really happy man is the one who marries Evelyn when he is 20 years old and too young to know better."

"But consider what Evelyn might be when you were 30!" suggested the hostess. "Probably not at all a congenial person or the one you would then pick out!"

"That makes it all the more complicated, doesn't it?" said the young man in the maroon tie, mournfully. "A fellow doesn't stand much show any way you put it. This falling in love is all nonsense, anyway! I'm glad I've kept out of it!"

"See here," said the hostess, "don't you feel blue. She's all right—the right one, I mean. You just go ahead!"

"Yes, go on and take the plunge!" advised the young man with the gray tie. "And meanwhile, tell us her name—among friends, you know!"

The young man with the maroon tie tried to look indignant, but succeeded only in looking foolishly pleased.

"Oh, come now!" he said. "I don't see why you two should think—well, maybe I will have something to tell you soon. That is, I rather hope so. I'm going to see her to-morrow night!"

NOVEL MONEY BOX

PLEASING TRIFLE EASILY PUT TOGETHER.

Idea Sent to Us From England is Worth Consideration -- Good Scheme to Cover Receipts With Postage Stamps.

A money box is a thing that should rank among the possessions of all children, and though they may be purchased very cheaply, it is always nicer to have one that we have made ourselves, and especially so, when there is something uncommon about it, to say nothing of the pleasure that will be derived in making it.

We give a sketch of a useful and practical money box that was made with the aid of an old cigar box. A small square box should be chosen and the lid firmly fastened down with thin sharp nails, or glue,

to prevent the temptation of spending the contents, and a slit cut in the top to admit the coins.

Any superfluous paper on the outside of the box may be removed, and the whole of the exterior covered with old postage stamps. So save all the old postage stamps you can, foreign,
as well as English, and soak the paper
from them and gum them one by one upon box, until it is entirely covered.
After that, the box may be either varnished with a transparent varnish, or coated with gum, and left to dry.
The greater the variety of the stamps used, the more pleasing will be the effect of this little novelty when completed.—London Mail.

AGAIN THE SEPARATE COAT

Survival of Fashion That Has Much Much to Be Said in Its Favor.

There is a revival of the separate coat, though it has departed emphatically from the long top coats, and now it is a part of a costume that is composed of a skirt of checked material, with one of the colors recurring in the plain short jacket.

A blue and tan check is particularly modish when worn with a jaunty blue coat, perhaps trimmed with braid, embrodered plaques or stitching. The costume can be changed by wearing a biscuit-colored jacket of the short length so much in vogue, but cut on an entirely different line.

Blue and green, black and white, different tones of gray are some of the checks within the reach of every one.
For traveling suits or for business,
the checked skirt with its separate coat is to be welcomed.

For Croup.

Lobelia is a sovereign remedy for croup. Get a small bottle of it and when a child awakes in the night with a dry, hoarse cough, which mothers who have croupy children soon learn to recognize, begin giving the lobelia in small doses until the child vomits. The druglist will tell you how to give it. Vomiting removes the mucus from the throat.

To Wash Clotheslines.

A good way to wash clotheslines is to wind them on a long board and scrub them with a scrubbing brush.
You will find this is the way you keep them from getting tangled. It is as hard to wind them when you wash them in the tub.

WIDE CHOICE OF PARASOLS

Season's Offerings Give Every Woman
an Opportunity to Have a Distinctive Design.

The assortment of parasols this year is almost endless. One manufacturing concern is showing over 600 designs, and this does not take into account the variety of colorings under each design.

The plain coaching parasol again
has the field to itself. Of ruffles, flounces and drapery effects there are practically none.

In point of number of ribs the buyer can get what she pleases. The samples shown have seven, eight, nine, ten, 11, 12 and 16 ribs. The early demand has been for parasols made with nine or more ribs. The split spreaders with the gold finish are again favored in the Japanese effects having 12 or 16 ribs.

Handles are long, some of them measuring fully 18 inches. Under the skillful manipulation of the handle makers, many ingenious conceits are brought out. Even to a more remarkable degree than last year, large numbers of these handles splendidly match the covers, with which they combine to form the finished parasol.
Among the novelties in handles are those whose ends are finished with disks or are of a mushroom shape.
This particular type of handle is finished in a variety of ways, many are carved, some are enameled, others are inlaid with jet and stone.

The novelties of the season include a pagoda shaped parasol, having 12 ribs curved upward for two or three inches near the tips. This parasol is covered with a variety of silks and colorings, but invariably is finished at the edge with a fluted border of some silk of a contrasting color about an inch and a quarter wide. Canopy tops have also appeared after an absence of many years. A decided novelty coming under the latter head is a double canopy effect, which is produced by constructing a duplication of the top canopy finish, which extends from the lower edge of the extra long runner up to and covering the hatches to which the spreaders are secured. The material of which this second canopy point is made is continued as a lining to the parasol below and covering the spreaders.

EASILY AND CHEAPLY MADE

Roses for Trimming Hats May Be Produced at Home by Any Clever Girl.

One of the loveliest of the early showings of new hats was trimmed with roses made in soft shades of shiny silk combined with folds of silk in the same tone.

Though this hat was straight from Paris the roses upon it could easily be fashioned by any girl who has ever made paper flowers. Each petal was distinct, cut from ovals of double silk wired on the edges inside, and grouped around a center of pistils and stem-mens that can be bought from any milliner.

It is well for the novice to experiment on paper petals before cutting into the silk. Should she have any old silks, make a complete flower by way of sample. It helps toward good shading to draw a sketch of the coloring on water-color paper and work from that.

FIRST OF THE SEASON.

This attractive waist is of voile,
made with groups of tucks and trimmed with shaped bands of the material, which are ornamented with buttons and straps of soutache.
The sleeves are trimmed to correspond; the little gumples is of lace.

Watch Shaped Like a Cuff Button.

Some very smart new motor coats have been sent home, with tiny watches shaped like a campaign button and alighted through a buttonhole worked in the sleeve cuff. Thus the tiny watch face is always visible to the fair motorist, and there is no necessity of fumbling within the coat with benumbed fingers when it is desirable to know the hour. The watch may be also worn in a buttonhole in the coat lapel, but inserted in the cuff it is more easily consulted by its wearer. The little timepiece is said to keep remarkably good time, though the dial is but half an inch in diameter.

Short Skirts.

The salient features of the smartest tailored utility suits are a short, narrow skirt which, although not precisely clinging below the hips, certainly falls in at the ankles, while the single-breasted, low-cut front coats clearly define the figure, when not absolutely close-fitting—and are inches shorter than they have been for years.

Her Idea of Farming.

Hubbard—Well, I went out to see that little country place we saw advertised and I've made up my mind to buy it.

Wife—Oh, then, we'll move away from the hateful city for good?

Hubbard—Yes, it's a fine place, but there's only 13 acres of ground, and half of that is covered by a pond of water.

Wife—Say, that will be nice. We can raise good wheat and watermelons in it.

Making Him Feel at Home

"It was perfectly dreadful!" said
the girl with the imitation Irish lace collar, as she straightened the bolts of ribbon on her counter.

"It must 'a' been funny! What was it?" said the girl who was marking the price tags.

"I just shriek whenever I think of it!" pursued the girl who was straightening the ribbons. "Jim calling me up like that when I hadn't seen him in such a time! You see, I've been keeping steady company now with Mr.
Sykes for several weeks, so Art and me haven't seen much of each other."

"I think Art is better looking than James Sykes," interrupted the girl who was marking tags. "He has more style!"

"Well, he hasn't got the salary if he has the style!" said the young woman who was straightening the ribbons.
"Not that money makes a particle of difference to me, but there's much more to Mr. Sykes than you'd think.
And any one who makes fun of his nose doesn't know what she's talking about, and—"

"I ain't got no grudge against Mr.
Sykes' nose," said the girl who was marking tags. "He can have any kind of a nose he wants and welcome.
What'd he do?"

"Oh, Mr. Sykes didn't do anything," said the girl who was arranging ribbons. "You see, he generally comes over on Wednesday evening, so when somebody called me on the phone I supposed it was Mr. Sykes."

"Hello!" he said. "Going to be home this evening? All right, I'll be over."

"I had on my blue dress and I got out the chafing dish and the stuff to make fudge. You wouldn't believe how fond of chocolate fudge Mr. Sykes is! He likes it with nuts in it, and—"

"So does everybody else," said the other girl, ruthlessly. "He ain't so different from the rest of the world, when you come right down to it, even though you may think so!"

"Well, anyhow," pursued the girl with the ribbons, "when I heard the bell ring I ran out part way down the stairs to meet him. He sort of likes to have me act as though he was welcome, you know."

"Huh!" said the other girl. "Why don't you have it woven on a door mat?"

"Maybe you think you're funny!" indignantly said the young woman at the ribbon counter. "Just as I made the turn in the stairs I ran right into him. And who do you suppose it was?
It was Art!"

"Well," said the other girl, pausing in the operation of marking tags,
"what'd you do?"

"If you could 'a' seen his face!" giggled the girl at the ribbons. "Sort o' bewildered and scared and uncertain!
There was I rushing down the stairs
in my eagerness to meet him, as he supposed, and I guess he thought at first I'd been just sitting at home all these months waiting to hear him ring
the door bell! Why, I just hung hold of the newel post and burst out laughing, and after I started I couldn't stop! I simply shrieked! I wish you could 'a' seen him!"

"What'd he do?" asked the other girl.

"He got hold of my shoulder and shook me and wanted to know what on earth was the matter," giggled the girl at the ribbon counter. "And of course I couldn't tell him that I wasn't expecting him. He kept asking what was so funny, and whenever he did I'd start laughing again. When he saw the things out for the fudge he sort of proved that I did expect him,
but then he'd get doubtful again."

"Lizzie," says he, finally, after figuring it all out, 'I bet you thought I was someone else!'

"Why, Art! I cried, just as mournful as I could, 'didn't you telephone you were coming?' And then I got to laughing again."

"He's bright, Art is. But I forgot to say who I was," he insisted.

"Then I told him that I'd know his voice among a thousand and he told me I was just as much of a jollier as ever, and most of the fudge boiled over, and it was just like old times."

Art got real cheerful until I took some of the fudge and put it away, because I wanted to save it for Mr. Sykes. I told him I was saving it for father.

"Father be blowed!" Art said then.
'Your father'd rather have some fine-cut any day than chocolate fudge!'
You're stringing me, Lizzie—you've got some one else up your sleeve!"

"I thought I might as well make a good job of it, so I told him so, and like that there wasn't another man on earth but himself, honest!"

"Did he believe you?" inquired the girl who was marking tags.

"I think he had his doubts," giggled
the girl who had finished assorting the ribbons. "But he is coming to see me again to-night."

Heraldry.

According to the highest authorities, heraldry finds its starting point in the totemism of prehistoric man. In the barbaric custom of painting or carving the totem on oars, the bows and sides of canoes, weapons, pillars in front of houses, etc., and in tattooing it on the various parts of the body, as we have the real origin of the insignia that are so precious to the upper-tension of to-day. It was in the ignorant superstition of the savage that he sprang from a crane or a bear or some other animal that the various "coats of arms" of the "big families" of the present time found their inception.—New York American.

Doubtful Compliment.

"By the way," drawled Percy Pickle
as he removed his hat with the rainbow band and sought a shadowy spot on the front porch, "what has become of your father?"

"Pepet" laughed the pretty girl.
"Oh, papa has invented an airship.
And do you know, he actually named it after you!"

"After me? Gracious! What a compliment!"

"And he said it was an airship."

BIG FOURTH IN SALISBURY

The Wicomico Fair Association has arranged for a number of attractions for Fourth of July at the Salisbury Fair Grounds

RACES

Among others, arrangement has been made for four races on this day, three class races for a purse of $250 each and one Farmers race open to the farmers of Wicomico county. Good horses are expected and interesting races anticipated.

Balloon Ascension

Two balloon ascensions will be made; one in the afternoon and the other in the evening. TWO TRIPLE PARACHUTE DESCENSIONS.

Money Thrown Away

While the balloon is in the air, close to A THOUSAND DOLLARS IN CASH AND CASH VALUES will be thrown out of the balloon.

Here is a Chance For Everyone.

Music and Vaudeville

Arrangements have been made for other amusements during the day and a band has been engaged to furnish music.

Big Fireworks Display

During the evening a fine display of fireworks will be given. The management has tried to make this display a feature of the day. The balloon will make an ascension ablaze with lights and fireworks.

Make your arrangements to come to Salisbury on the Fourth. Everybody will be here; everybody will have a good time. More attractions the anywhere else offered.

Salisbury, Md., July 4th
Program Will Start at 1.30 P. M.

Day Admission 25 Cts Night Admission 10 Cts

THEY WENT ROWING

"Us wants to go rowing, Tommy!" called one pretty young woman of the group of three.

Tom Hurd looked up from the camp fire with a comical expression of deprecation. "But, Marjorie, I can't take you now," he said. "I've got to tend to this cooking. Wouldn't after supper do?"

"Didn't say we wanted you to take us rowing, Tommy. Much as we enjoy your society, it isn't required this time. All we want is to have you get that heavy old boat into the water, and then we'll row. We know how."

"Sure you do, Marjorie?"

"Of course. I've rowed just millions of times."

Marjorie gathered her dainty skirts about her and looked down on Tom with the pretty pout that had won her checkered way through life so successfully.

Tom rose to his feet. In a moment the Idler was out of the boathouse and run down to the water. The girls gathered around him, expectant.

"Me-me-me for the front end!" squealed Gladys, with a flash of bronze shoes and pink petticoats, as she skipped nimbly across the seats, assisted by Tom's long arm.

"I'll go in the back," said Marjorie, hesitating on the string piece.

"I thought you were going to row," commented Tom.

"Oh, yes! You row, Margie," protested Gladys. "I can't and Sybil doesn't know how. You used to row up at the lakes."

"Well, all right. Oh, how it wiggles! I shall fall, I know I shall! Tommy! Be careful! Oh!"

"And I'll steer," said Sybil, languorously descending into the cushioned stern seat and picking up the tiller lines with an air.

"What do I do now, Tommy?" asked Marjorie.

"Put your ears into the rowlocks and pull while I push off," he explained as a small wave broke over his tan shoes.

"Rowlocks? Oh, these things like parentheses! All right. You do it like this, don't you?" and Marjorie nearly capsize the boat with a vigorous sweep.

"That's fine—but wait till you're off. Now—sit tight!"

An incoming wave broke as Tom pushed them off, and the three girls shrieked in unison. Marjorie made a mad gesture with the oars and caught two crabs. Another wave, evidently the wash of a distant steamer, rolled in and slewed the Idler sidewise.

"Oh, girls! Look where we're going! Oh, that horrid wave! Oh, Tommy!"

"Why don't you go ahead, Marjorie?" asked Gladys.

"I am—but the boat won't. I wonder if I'm doing it right?"

"Pull on your right oar, Marjorie!" protested Tom from the shore. "No, the right one—right, right! You're pulling on the left one, Margie. For goodness' sake get her around!"

"Well, I've been pulling on it for hours and it didn't make us move a speck," retorted Marjorie.

"You're pulling on the left oar. Pull on the right and you'll go ahead."

"Oh, how silly! So I have. There!"

"Correct. Now keep straight ahead and use both oars."

Marjorie pulled on both oars, but made the little mistake of backing water, and the Idler serenely proceeded back to the beach, stern first, while all the youngsters on the beach hooted and Tom danced helplessly on the sand. With a soft bump the Idler grounded on the sandbar and stuck fast.

"Oh, Tommy. What'll I do? I can't get us off," wailed Marjorie, making feeble prods with her oar.

"Come and rescue us!" cried Gladys.

"Oh, do! That would be exciting," drawled Sybil, looking around with a smile.

"I can't get it off!" wailed Marjorie again.

There was nothing else to be done. Tom waded out 15 feet, sacrificing his immaculately creased trousers and tan oxfords, and shoved while Marjorie pulled, incidentally hitting him on the shin with an oar blade.

"Now pull straight ahead," he said curtly, sending them into deeper water with a final jab.

The Idler began to progress in 18-inch jerks. Disgustedly Tom waded back to the beach, poured the water out of his shoes and discovered that his batch of biscuits were burned to a crisp. Muttering something under his breath, he set out the flour sack and proceeded to stir up another pan-fry.

Out at the end of the pier Marjorie laid down her oars. "Don't let's go any farther," she said. "All I wanted was to get where I could powder my nose without all the boys looking at me. Put up that sunshade, Sybil, and don't let anybody look around it, or I shall die."

And the House Adjourned.

"Of all the perfectly silly things I ever heard of, it's this idiotic agitation for postal savings banks," said Mrs. Fynahedd, with much spirit.

"And women should have votes!" growled Mr. Fynahedd. "What's your pet aversion to the scheme, Mrs. Morandell?"

"Why, you know," warmly retorted Mrs. Fynahedd, "what would be the sense in putting postals in savings banks? Aren't albums the proper place for them?"

Two Different Causes.

"Oh, dear," sighed the pretty hair-ess. "I'm so awfully miserable!"

"Why are you miserable?" queried the maid who was both kindly and peevish.

"I'm afraid some one will marry me for my money," answered the pretty hair-ess.

"And I," rejoined the poor girl, "am miserable because I'm afraid no one will marry me because I haven't any money."

GRANDEUR OF YOSEMITE VALLEY

YOSEMITE VALLEY, CALIFORNIA

NUMEROUS are the descriptions that have been published of the Yosemite Valley, but none is complete, nor will pen ever express in adequate manner the grandeur of so marvelous a place, of which one might well say that it is a terrestrial paradise.

The Yosemite Valley is situated in the heart of the Sierra Nevada, almost in the middle of the state of California, and between the eastern and western foothills of the mountains, the distance between them being a little more than 120 kilometers.

The word Yosemite is an English corruption of the Indian expression "Ajomital" (Big Gray Bear), which, it is supposed, was the nickname of an Indian chief, and is the name applied to a tribe that lived in the region stretching eastward from the valley to the plains. However, the word was not the name which the Indians gave the valley, for they called it "Awasatch," which is equivalent to the Spanish word "cañon."

Formerly the valley was inaccessible for almost half the year, because the snows in that region fall with so much abundance that they completely obstruct passage over the highway.

At present a railway line goes to El Portal, which is distant only some twenty kilometers from the valley, this distance being covered by stage coach over a magnificent highway constructed by the federal government, under whose control is the valley.

Thus then have been eliminated the obstacles which formerly made the trip so disagreeable, and that beautiful point can be visited at any period of the year. The railroad goes from Merced to El Portal, the distance between the two points being 12 kilometers, more or less. It traverses the picturesque valley of the Merced river, and crosses it at various points.

On reaching the foothills of the mountains the railway follows the course of the river, which at times is at a very great depth below the road and at others almost on a level with it. The line from El Portal to the Yosemite is traveled, as has already been said, by means of a stage coach, and is very comfortable as well as picturesque.

On the way to the valley, still at some distance, there are presented to the sight of the spectators huge rocks and mountains of the most capricious forms; one is like an elephant, farther on another has the aspect of a camel; still another has the form of a castle; and from all these stand out sharply those called "El Capitán," "The Sentinel," "The Cathedral Spire" and "The Three Brothers."

As the road ascends the grandeur and beauty of the landscape are enhanced; look whatever way one will he sees foaming rivulets falling from high rocks; old and mysterious pines sigh to the measure of the music of the waters; here and there are seen mountains, gigantic rocks and precipices, the contemplation of which inspires admiration mingled with awe.

While the mountains constitute the element of grandeur in the landscape, the streams of water give it the touch of beauty; nothing more picturesque can be conceived than the torrent, the pools, the falls of the Merced. In some places it flows sweetly below leafy trees, in others it rests in placid pools, that it may precipitate itself afterward with vertiginous rapidity in cascades like mantles of foam and drift of diamonds. At many points enormous rocks obstruct the course of the river, fragments of the tall rocks that lie on either side of it; surrounding them or leaping over them, the water follows its indefatigable way.

There are no two sights alike; and the journey is for the eyes of the traveler a succession of delight after delight, such is the variety of the landscape.

Finally a presentiment tells the traveler that he is near the valley. A little later there presents itself to his eye "The Bridal Veil," one of the finest waterfalls of the valley; farther on, at the right, stands out the rock "El Capitán," which majestically ascends to the height of 1,000 meters, and on the left rise elegantly to an elevation of 800 meters "The Cathedral Spire," these two rocks forming what might appropriately be called the southern door of the valley. Once in it are discovered the countless marvels which it shuts in, such as "Washington's Column," a rock on the left of 700 meters altitude, which shoots its twilight shadow across the Hall Dome, whose height is 1,500 feet above the level of the Merced. "The Sentinel" is perhaps the greatest and most picturesque rock of the valley, and whose point, in form of an obelisk, reaches a height of more than 1,000 meters. At its left the falls of the same name, which are active only during the summer, feeding from the melting snow, and such is the strength and volume of the water rushing down that at the foot of the rock has been hollowed out a deep ravine. Then, there are the fall of Lillouette, which waves gently like a ribbon in the air; the Nevada Falls, one of the most beautiful, whose current rushes down with tremendous noise; the lovely Vernal Falls, which, in the midst of a landscape supremely enchanting, seem a broad sheet of silver, and many other imposing rocks that appear like gigantic sculptures modeled by the Titans of mythology.

It is difficult to say which is the best period of the year in which to see the valley, since in each season it possesses its own peculiar attractions. In summer, naturally, the vegetation is in all its vigor, the cataracts are innumerable. But in the winter the valley assumes an aspect supremely imposing, which leaves in the mind of the traveler an imperishable impression.

INDIAN CHIEF'S NOVEL GIFT

Malden Cannot Be Found to Claim "Beaver Foot"—Mail Clerk Anticipate Bad Luck.

Somewhere in South Dakota lives a mighty chief, copper-skinned as are the braves he has led through the wars of a lifetime. Somewhere in Minnesota lives a daughter of a farmer's race, a pale-faced maiden, whom the post office clerks are trying to find, and thus far they have been unsuccessful, for the hand of the mighty warrior is not skilled in the art of the white man's pen.

Chief High Eagle of the Sioux had trapped a beaver, and, remembering some kind word or a smile bestowed upon the feat, he had made from the fat, pay of the animal a purse heavily beaded, with all overworked into the tough hide of the foot. Wrapping it carefully in coarse brown paper, he scrawled the name upon the outside and mailed it, and that is why the inquiry department of the St. Paul post office had an unusual find to record in the mail sacks.

Not that they were surprised, for anything may turn up in the inquiry department, but they are grieved because the chief made his return address legible, a beaver's foot, as is well known, has got all over the work of the rabbit for genuine good luck, and yet it must be sent away. Sending away an amulet is worse than killing a black cat.

"We have had enough luck, anyway," said one of the clerks. "We are thankful if we can tell the names of the articles which come in."

Policemen and Whiskers.

While a Chicago policeman was escorting a woman to a patrol wagon the other day she suddenly turned upon him and fastened her fingers in his whiskers. When other policemen succeeded in rescuing him from the perilous position into which she had forced him against the side of the patrol wagon the woman held two handfuls of whiskers and the officer bore a striking resemblance to a partially plucked chicken. It is not surprising that, instead of accompanying the prisoner to the station, the policeman hurried to a barber shop, and unless he wears them for the purpose of hiding a weak chin or protecting a sensitive throat we may suppose that he will give up his whiskers, at least until such time as he may retire on a pension. Whiskers may be all right if their wearer is able to choose his environment, but policemen should try to get along without them.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Vindicated Poet.

"The duchess always loses at bridge. She never gets a good heart hand."

"Yes," answers Mrs. Flimgilt, "she says being a duchess doesn't compensate her for her ill luck, and that the poet knew what he was talking about when he said: 'Kind hearts are more than coronets.'"—Washington Star.

A Cue-Rouse Fact.

"I notice that the Chinese have discovered a new comet."

"Yes, but they don't speak of it as having a tail."

"Of course not. A Chinese comet has a cue."—St. Louis Star.

Doubt.

Doubt is the vestibule which all must pass before they can enter into the temple of wisdom; therefore, when we are in doubt and puzzle out the truth by our own exertions, we have gained something that will stay by us, and which will serve us again. But if, to avoid the trouble of the search, we avail ourselves of the superior information of a friend, such knowledge will not remain with us; we have not bought but borrowed it.

HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM.

It is An Internal Disease
And Requires An Internal Remedy.

The cause of Rheumatism and kindred diseases is an excess of uric acid in the blood. To cure this terrible disease this acid must be expelled and the system so regulated that no more acid will be formed in excessive quantities. Rheumatism is an internal disease and requires an internal remedy. Rubbing with Oil and Liniment will not cure, affords only temporary relief and causes you to delay the proper treatment, allows the malady to get a firmer hold on you. Liniment may ease the pain, but they will no more cure Rheumatism than paint will change the fibre of a torn sock. Science has at last discovered a perfect and complete cure, which is called "Rheumicide." Found in hundreds of cases, it has effected the most marvelous cures; we believe it will cure you. Rheumicide "gets at the joints from the inside," sweeps the poisons out of the system, tones up the stomach, regulates the liver and kidneys, and makes you well all over. Rheumicide "strikes the root of the disease and removes its cause." It is sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere at 50c and a bottle. In initial stages, it is sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere at 50c and a bottle. In initial stages, it is sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere at 50c and a bottle.

The Liberty Bell of the Soul

By REV. A. C. DIXON, D. D.,
Pastor of the Chicago Ave. (Meady's) Church, Chicago.

"Proclaim liberty throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof."—Leviticus 25:10.

A few pounds of bronze in the shape of a bell with a crack in it were some time ago paraded through the streets of Boston and gazed upon by thousands. The bronze was not especially valuable, but it was associated with a great event in history. This bell rang out for liberty on the day the Declaration of Independence was signed in Philadelphia. The words of the text are inscribed upon it: "Proclaim liberty throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof." These words refer to the year of jubilee, when the trumpet was sounded and liberty proclaimed to all the land of Israel. Jesus evidently thinks of this great event when he says: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor and the acceptable year of the Lord." Just as the trumpet sounded liberty to the Israelites, so the gospel proclaims liberty to all through Jesus Christ our Lord.

There is the liberty of release from bondage. On the day of jubilee every slave was freed except those who had agreed to be slaves for life and had allowed their masters to bore their ears. Only those can be made free who desire liberty, but every one who will can have through Christ freedom from the bondage of sin.

There is also the liberty of release from bruises, "to set at liberty them that are bruised." There is a difference between the bondage of slavery and the bondage of bruises. A prisoner behind iron bars is deprived of liberty, as is the wounded man on the cot in the hospital. He might walk out if he could, but he cannot. His inability is the bars that inclose him. Through Jesus Christ we have liberty from the bondage of guilt and liberty from the bondage of disease, the result of the bruise made by sin. He can break the bars and set us free, and he can heal the disease and give us the liberty of health.

There is also the liberty of release from debt. When the trumpet of jubilee sounded every debtor was released from the obligation to pay. In the Lord's Prayer is the petition "Forgive us our debts," and sin is a debt to justice. We are all bankrupts. From the time we accept him as Saviour there is a perpetual jubilee of freedom from the debt of sin.

Again, there is the liberty of law. The command was that during the jubilee year "Ye shall do my statutes and keep my judgments, and ye shall dwell in the land in safety." Safety is always linked with law. Anarchy means danger. The savage, where there is no law, is under the bondage of fear. He dreads assassination. He must protect himself. All the time he is exposed to the anarchy that is about him. Righteous law, which imposes limitations, gives really the largest liberty.

It is an interesting historic fact that the liberty bell was cast for the first time in England, during the reign of George II., in the year 1752. The above text was then inscribed upon it, and it proclaimed throughout all the land the liberty of English law. After the bell was brought to America it was recast, and the same words inscribed upon it. When its notes rang out on the first Independence day, they made a proclamation of liberty under American law. It rang the first time for England, it rang the second time against England; but its notes proclaimed liberty on both occasions. The liberty of the first was limited and protected by English law and the liberty of the second by American law.

Jesus Christ was made the "end of the law to every one that believeth." Grace gives liberty within the limitations of law. The Christian's delight is in the law of the Lord, "and in his law doth he meditate day and night." Legalism imposes outward observances and makes salvation dependent upon them. Grace releases us from bondage through Christ, and obeys him as the result of a loving spirit.

All this liberty can be obtained through simple faith in Christ. "If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." It can be maintained through the presence and power of the Holy Spirit. "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." Let us ring every day this liberty bell of the soul and "proclaim liberty throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof." The joy of giving liberty to others is equalled only by the joy of receiving liberty ourselves. Wilberforce, who freed the slaves of Great Britain, did not, like the slave, sit up all night singing before emancipation day, and with the rising sun assist in burying the coffin full of shackles and whips, but his joy as he thought of the part he took in liberating the poor slaves was akin to theirs in fullness, and had the element of unselfishness which enhances all joy. Tell to others your liberty in Christ, that liberators and liberated may rejoice together.

Scald the Water Utensils.

Utensils and troughs for food and water should be frequently scalded with boiling water, afterwards being thoroughly cleaned. Though a little extra work may be required, this cleaning up is a good preventive of many diseases and may save work and loss later.

Good Profit in Orchard.

Many farmers consider their orchards as strictly a side issue. If they would give the trees proper attention they would derive a good profit.

A CORNER IN ANCESTORS

By FRANCIS COWLES

Atwood Family

(Copyright by McClure Syndicate)

From the time they were first heard of in England the Atwoods were of a good deal of prominence. In 1313 three brothers, Peter, John and Geoffrey were tenants of the Abbey of Chertsey. They leased an estate "at the wood," a place still in existence, and now called Wood Place, and from this place they took their surname, Atte Wode. But for 300 years the name appears in a great many forms, as often Wood as Atwood, and it is not until the time of the immigration of the family to this country that it is finally fixed as it is now spelled. One of the family who was sergeant-at-arms to Edward III. is referred to in several ways, as Ricardus or Richard del Wode, Atte Wode and of the Wode. The name also appears At Wode, Attwood, Attwood, At Wood, a Wood, de Wood, de Wude, and Awood.

In 1457 Peter Atte Wode obtained a license from the bishop for a private chapel at Wood Place. Fifty years before that the family had succeeded to Sanderstead Court, a manor house not far from Wood Place. One of the earliest records now in the church at Sanderstead village reads: "Here lyeth Nicholas Wood, the third son of John Atwood of Sanderstead Corte, who served Queen Elizabeth sens the second year of her rayne, and deceased the 14 of May, 1585, leaving behind him a wife and children." Some, Har- mon, John, Nicholas, Thomas, James, John, Richard, Allis and Susan."

Nicholas' eldest son, Harmon spelled the name Atwood, and since that time it has always been so spelled. One of the brothers, John, was the first immigrant to America, and the other is supposed to have been the father of the permanent settler here. About 1635 one John came to Plymouth to join the colony of Pilgrims here. He died without children nine years later, and in his will he gave all his possessions to his wife, and said: "My brothers are as able as I am and more so, and their children be many."

One of these children, named Harmon, and supposed to be the son of Nicholas' second John, came also to Plymouth because his uncle was there. In 1642 he is listed as a townsman of Boston, and in 1645 as a freeman and voter. In 1644 he joined the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company. Harmon died in 1650, and left only two children, John and Sarah. He had married Ann, the daughter of William Copp, in 1644. The gravestone of Ann's mother, "Goodith (Judith) Copp," is still standing.

John Harmon's only son was baptized in 1647, and died in 1714.

John's children, the third generation of the Atwoods here, were all dead in 1729 save four; and the descendants of only one child, another John, can be traced. This John was born in 1694, and married Hannah Bond of Haverhill, Mass. He obtained a grant of land on the Merrimac river for a shipyard and prospered as a shipbuilder. The next generation of Atwoods was more fortunate as far as long life was concerned. John had eight children. The oldest married Mary Wood, and was killed about 1755 near Crown Point by an Indian in the French and Indian war. He left three children: William, the second son, had seven children, and Joshua had 13. His youngest son, Moses, went to Haverhill to live. Just after the Arnold treason he volunteered to serve in the army, and went to West Point, where he died in 1808.

One of the Atwoods, David, who was born a few years after the death of Moses, was a pioneer of Wisconsin. He was born at Bedford, N. H., and worked as a boy on his father's farm. The names of the children of old Nicholas of Sanderstead are still usual among the Atwood family—only now Allis is spelled Alice. Harriet, Joshua, Henrietta, Edward and William have also been a good deal used.

The arms of the family, which are carved over the door of the old manor house at Sanderstead are: Ouzes a lion rampant argent between three acorns or.

The crest is: An arm erect holding a battle ax.

For the Housewife. Stuffed potatoes are made by mixing cheese and bread crumbs in with the contents. When boiling fresh potatoes try putting a sprig of mint in the water to give a delicious flavor to the vegetables.

Plaster figures in hard or alabaster finish are easily cleaned by dipping a stiff toothbrush in gasoline and scrubbing into all the crevices.

A FARMER'S COMPLAINT.

They say the farmers git it all. They claim we live in princely style, but still my income's pretty small. Though I keep workin' all the while, the Sunday suit I have to wear would hardly please a millionaire.

They're blamin' us because they pay so much for meat and other things; To judge by what they have to say, You'd think the farmers all were kings. And yet I have to scheme, my friend, To git out even at the end.

My wife ain't wearin' costly furs, And on her hands no jewels blaze; I'll tell you honestly that here Are pretty much all busy days; Yes, it is true that eggs are high, But so are all the things we buy.

There may be farmers who have learned The knack of layin' by a bit From what, by workin' hard, they've earned. But I am not a Croesus yet, And wouldn't you want durned good pay To be a farmer, say, my friend, As E. B. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

HE RAN AWAY.

She—Was it a runaway match? He—Oh, yes! They were married on Christmas day, and he left her on New Year's day.

The Horrid Thing. Kermit shot a female bongo in some Africa jungle shady; She was the bringin' up of Kermit. That's no way to treat a lady!

Not So Bad. "And you want to marry my daughter?" growled the grim old father. "Do you think you can support her in the luxury to which she is accustomed?" "Well, sir," modestly replied the youth, "I think I can guarantee that we will have meat on the table at least once a day."

Merely a Suggestion. He had managed to accumulate a lot of money by more or less questionable methods. "I should like to do something for the benefit of the town," he said. "Well," suggested the poor but otherwise honest citizen, "you might move out of it."

A Cruel Dilemma. "Bangs is in an awful stew about making up his mind whether or not to pay a holiday call at the Smiths." "What's the trouble?" "Well, they make the best punch going, but he saw the old maid daughter of the house, buying mistletoe Christmas Eve."

His Personal View. "In a few million years there will be no coal," said the man who looks on the dark side of life. "Great Scott!" answered the nervous friend. "If I thought I could postpone the scarcity in my cellar that long I'd be tickled 'most to death!"

Both at Once. "Perhaps," mused the small arms dealer, as he wrapped up a revolver which he had just sold and loaded according to the request of the purchaser, "I am about the only man who can sell his goods for cash and chat them at the same time."

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it, Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have been afflicted with indigestion, have been cured by it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headache, dizziness or chronic tired feeling, you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you in digestive ailments. Peptic is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all. Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say, "I feel better than I did when I first began to use Kodol," we will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to best use in a family. The large bottle contains three times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of M. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

CHAPTER VI.

TOILETS AND WRECKERS.

ON being awakened by the alarm clock the next morning Haggleton found, to his surprise, that he had slept quite well. The close air of the room had given him a headache, but he shook this off by going down into the street and taking a brisk walk around "lung block." Inspecting his property closely as he formed part of his enormous real estate holdings.

On his return he found Jenny ready with the breakfast and Joe and Moran already devouring theirs. It was bread and coffee—nothing more.

After breakfast Moran hurried away to his day of toil in the cellar bake-shop. Joe, after various adroit but vain attempts to borrow a dollar from Jenny or the new boarder, drifted out, and Haggleton, after repeated offers of service to Jenny, resolved that the best thing he could do would be to take a look around and familiarize himself with the condition his property was in. Philip Ames, who was "off" that morning, came in, driven by curiosity, and offered to pilot "Mr. Jackson" through that unfamiliar part of the town. The offer was accepted with alacrity.

It was now a quarter to 8 as they joined the throng of hurrying toilers. They passed at the Bowers and Canal street and watched the crush of men and women fighting their way up the elevated stairs and packing themselves into the cars. Then they turned to the east and walked against the surging river of humanity.

"You call these the poorest people in New York?" asked Haggleton.

"I suppose so."

"Then New York makes a pretty good showing. Do you see any rags or misery? Look at these men. They all wear leather shoes, don't they? In Europe the poorest people wear wooden shoes. That's something, isn't it? And they all wear derby hats and starched shirts and neckties and watch chains and overcoats with velvet collars."

"You can't judge by appearances," objected Philip.

"Yes, you can too."

Philip shook his head. "You see only those who have work and are able to work. You don't see those who are left at home. You don't see the sick and the old and the young. You don't see the wrecks."

"No, but I see what makes the wrecks, or some of them," answered Haggleton. "It's extravagance. Most of these men smoke—that's bad—and a lot of them go into saloons, which is worse. And look at the cheap jewelry on the women. Why, they all wear imitation pearls! Look at the banners across the streets with 'bills' and 'concessions' at 25 cents in big letters! I tell you, they waste their money."

"These people must have some pleasures," Philip said.

"Not at first. They must cut out pleasures at first. I did. If they want to escape from these tenements they've got to save."

"So you think they can escape by saving? Do you know that New York has miles and miles of streets like these, with a million human beings herded in foul, dark rooms? Can they all escape by saving?"

Haggleton started to reply, but Philip went on quickly, his voice rising with intense feeling:

"I'll tell you how one man escaped by saving. He pointed down Orchard street. 'He lived in that second house. He was a poor carpenter, and he shot himself because he was out of work and couldn't bear to see his wife and little children suffer. He knew they would get the insurance money, anyway. That's how he saved. And two years ago, over there on Eldridge street—he pointed again—I found a family of poor Jews living in a dark corner of the hallway under the stairs. There was no window, no door. It wasn't a room at all—only a narrow slanting space roughly boarded off. And the landlord made them pay $8 a month for it. There the mother had a baby. That's how they saved.'

"These tenements are nothing like as bad as they were forty years ago," replied Haggleton. "What do you think they did with the garbage forty years ago? Threw it into the streets for the pigs to eat. Yes, sir! Pigs were the public scavengers. This whole region was so filthy that—well, it was cleaned out by cholera and yellow fever more than once. You know that, didn't you? And smallpox was the regular thing. Why, the health wardens used to stand on the sidewalk and shout to people upstairs who had to put camphor in their clothes and burn some in the stove. That's how they fought disease!"

"Who told you that?" questioned Philip.

"Nobody told me. I saw it. I lived here," answered Haggleton. "And there were slaughter houses every where, and fat boilers, and such vile tenements that—They're all gone now—'Bone Alley' and 'Kerosene row' and the 'Big Flat' in Mott street and 'Bandits' row—but I tell you it was worth a man's life to go past them at night. Now you can go anywhere."

Philip smiled.

"I'll show you a few places where you won't enjoy yourself at night. Still, I admit, we've improved in some things, but we've gone back in others. There may not be as many pigs and murderers about, but there's a lot more consumption and overcrowding. Do you see that little block just ahead? It's only 75 by 200 feet. How many people do you suppose live in it?"

"Seventy-five feet by two hundred," reflected Haggleton, studying the front of the block, with its swarms of children. "Let's see—a thousand?"

"Two thousand nine hundred and sixty-nine by actual count, and that was five years ago—the population of a good sized town in the space of one of your streets!"

"Good Lord!" exclaimed Haggleton. "How many would that give to a house?"

"From a hundred to a hundred and fifty. We're passing through the most densely populated region in the world, and—your own about half of it."

"Not that block?"

"No, but you own enough others. I'll show you some presently."

Haggleton stopped and laid a kindly hand on Philip's shoulder.

"My boy, you think too much about the weak. Think about the strong. Don't you see that this tenement struggle makes men stronger? You know it does. Would you be the man you are if you'd been coddled in luxury, with everything made easy? I tell you half the big fellows in this country owe their success to being born poor. I tell you, young man, poverty's about the finest school we've got."

Haggleton watched him swing off the ladder and disappear.

He paused and then added impressively, "I'm one of the graduates."

"I know," said Philip, "but there are other graduates, and—speaking of wrecks." He stopped and looked at his watch. "That reminds me I must telephone."

He turned into a drug store and called up the Atlantic Wrecking company. "Too bad," he exclaimed after a brief communication. "There's a grail boat sunk in the East river off Grand street; I've got to see about it."

Haggleton accompanied Philip and got a glimpse of life on the big boulevards and several thrills of pleasure as he noted the young man's quick resourcefulness and a pang of apprehension as he watched him swing off the ladder in his ugly suit and disappear beneath the bubbling river.

As there was a cold rain falling, they spent the waiting hours in the cozy cabin of the Dunderberg, and the crew told stories about perils of the deep.

They had supper with the crew and then started back for New York, taking the ferry to Twenty-third street, where there was something Philip wanted to show Haggleton.

"We'll look in here first," he said and stopped before a large building on First avenue. "This is the Municipal Lodging House. They take in two or three hundred homeless men every night."

"How many homeless men are there in New York?"

"Twenty thousand or so."

"Twenty thousand homeless men?" repeated Haggleton. "And what do the others do, those who can't stay here?"

"About 3,000 walk the streets," replied Philip.

"Not on cold nights like this?"

"On cold nights and on hot nights. They huddle in alleyways, out of the wind. They crawl over gratings above engine rooms and get the warm air. They stand in the midnight bread lines and then go back to their holes."

"There are 3,000 like that in New York?"

"Yes."

"And the rest?"

"The rest pay 10 or 15 cents in cheap lodging houses. You'll see."

"What do they pay here?"

"Nothing, but the same man may not come more than three times in a month. If he does he goes to the stone pile. So they're careful. Come in."

The office attendants nodded pleasantly to Philip.

Downstairs they saw these men stripped of their clothes (some of them peeled off two or three sets of garments—their whole wardrobe) and scrubbed under a hot shower bath.

One man's legs were clothed with sores (from low vitality, the doctor said), and one had a deeply ulcerated heel from walking on his uppers.

Philip now led the way into another lodging house, in the opposite block. "This place accommodates about 400, and the men pay from 15 to 25 cents a night. There's no compulsory bath, and as for cleanliness—look!"

Philip pointed out that each cot had a small, dirty locker for the men's clothes, where abundant cracks encouraged the free circulation of vermin.

"They get no nightgowns," continued Philip, "and the sheets are changed only once or twice a week. Many of the men have loathsome diseases, many have consumption, and there's no doubt consumption and other diseases can be transmitted from man to man by the contamination of sheets."

"How many of these lodging houses are there?"

"About 140, and you've seen the best. The others are so filthy that—well, I asked an attendant once how often they washed the towels, and he said, with a grin: 'Wash 'em! We never wash 'em. We use 'em until they break.'"

They went to Grand street and visited more of these sinister asylums on the Bowery where bunks are offered to human wrecks at 20 or 15 or 10 cents a night or less. In one hideous room on Mulberry street, where the charge was 7 cents, they found men ranged along in hammocks, with neither sheets nor covers, and dozens sleeping on the bare floor.

"Pretty bad," muttered Haggleton. "But what's your idea in showing me all this?"

"It's a problem for you to solve. We have ideas, but you'll have better ones before you get through."

"Why do you say that?" asked Haggleton.

"Because you have a great brain. You know how to organize. Well, organize these wanted lives, and some place for them. It's up to you."

Haggleton shook his head.

"I'm not responsible for these lodging houses."

"You are responsible," flashed Philip, "because it's men like you who own them; it's men like you who take the dimes and pennies of these poor devils—talk about tainted money—a million dollars in lodging house money paid every year in New York city by your fellow graduates in poverty!"

"No, no," objected Haggleton. "It's not poverty that brought them where they are; it's drink and laziness."

Philip paused, and his eyes met the old man's in steady defiance. Then he said slowly: "No; you are wrong. These men are products of conditions. It's years of bad air in your tenements and of underfeeding at your wages that make them crave drink. It's a childhood wasted in brutalizing labor that has weakened their bodies and dulled their minds. There are 20,000 of them in New York, Mr. Haggleton, who are bruisers, wrecks, lodging house loafers, but don't forget that they are victims of a cruel order which for the vast majority gives poverty as the only reward of toil."

"Nonsense!" said Haggleton.

Siberian Camels.

The native camels of Siberia are a source of constant wonder to travelers. On the Mongolian plateau, for instance, the thermometer often registers a temperature of 40 degrees below zero, but the camels do not mind it at all, walking about as blithely as if the weather were as balmy as spring. On the other hand, the temperature on the Gobi desert in summer is sometimes 140 degrees above zero, and the beasts mind that heat just as little as they do the extreme cold.

Spiritism Said To Be Demonism.

A most interesting little brochure has recently come off the press, setting forth with Bible proofs that the communications received by and through Spiritist Mediums is of Demon origin. The writer traces his subject through the Scriptures from the time when certain of the holy angels became disobedient. He proves from the Scriptures that these fallen spirits deal in personating the human dead, with whose past history, spirits, though invisible, are thoroughly acquainted. He shows that they also frequently personate the Creator and the Redeemer, commanding their deceived ones to pay, do penance, etc. This, however, is merely to lead them on and to bring them more thoroughly under demoniacal control. Sometimes by breaking down the natural barrier, the human will, they obey their victim and rule him more or less to his ruin—frequently sending such to the mad-house. Numerous illustrations, Scriptural and otherwise, are given. The price of the little book is but ten cents; it should be in the hands of all interested in Spiritism who have friends interested therein. Enclose five two-cent stamps to the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Difficult Scriptures on Hell.

A little book selling at only ten cents, postpaid, is having a very wide circulation—running up into the millions. It contains some very startling information respecting the meaning of the word Hell. It claims to demonstrate, both from the Hebrew and the Greek of our Bible, that Hell is NOT a place of eternal torment, but merely another name for the Tomb, the Grave, the State of Death. It affects to show that man was not redeemed from a far-off place of eternal torture, but quotes the Scriptures, proving that he was redeemed from the Grave at the cost of his Redeemer's life, and that the Scriptural hope, both for the Church and the World, is a resurrection hope based upon the death and resurrection of Jesus. The book is certainly worth the reading. The information it furnishes is certainly valuable, far beyond its trifling cost. Order it at once from the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Is There a Personal Devil?

By REV. JAMES M. GRAY
Dean of Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

I have been asked to speak to you upon the theme, "Is There a Personal Devil?" but assume that the interrogative form was used as a matter of convenience and not as a suggestion of doubt. I do not assume that Christian men learned in the Bible, and who accept it "not as the word of men but as it is in truth, the word of God," have any doubt about the personality of the devil.

The dictionary tells us that personality is synonymous with self-consciousness, or the power to identify one's self. That which can contrive or design must be a person. Dr. Paley tells us, for such capacities imply consciousness of thought. But that the devil possesses these capacities just as man does, or indeed just as God himself does, is very evident from the inspired record.

That record in this case in progressive. At first the devil is presented only as a serpent, although the whole narrative of Genesis III., and especially the spiritual nature of the temptation. "Ye shall be as God"—suggests more than a mere animal agency at work. So clearly indeed is this suggested that we are quite prepared for the identification of the serpent with the devil and Satan which we find in Revelation XII, 9.

But when we come to the new Testament the veil is lifted, and his real and awful character is portrayed in vivid colors.

It is to the old Testament, however, that we are indebted for the word "Satan," which, as you know, means an "adversary"—but one possessing hate, great hostility and a purpose to injure. Genesis is authority for the statement that when this word is preceded by the article it assumes the nature of a proper name.

Reaching the new Testament, we find the personality of Satan suggested in several ways, as, for example:

1. By the titles given him. He is called 'the accuser of the brethren,' 'the angel of the bottomless pit,' 'Apollyon,' or he that exterminates; 'the father of lies,' 'the man murderer,' 'the prince of the devils,' the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience, 'the God of this world,' 'the unclean spirit,' 'the wicked one' and 'the evil one.'

2. By the characteristics ascribed to him. He is called presumptuous, proud, powerful, malignant, deceitful, cruel, always active in doing and promoting evil and yet cowardly. He is compared to a fowler setting snares for unwary souls, a sower scattering tares by night, a wolf ravaging the flock and a lion restlessly wandering about for prey.

It is astonishing in the light of such testimony that Christians of intelligence should be found doubting, much less denying, the personality of the devil. If personality means the essential characteristics of a person as distinguished from a thing, is not Satan rather more than thing?

But if it be astonishing that men should deny his personality in the face of testimony like this, what shall we say of their folly who, accepting it in a sense, treat the subject of the devil in the spirit of levity and crack jokes at his expense and make merry with his proclivities—as even ministers have been known to do. How such conduct testifies at once to the ignorance of the natural heart and the power which the archdeceiver has obtained over it!

Let us continue the proof of his personality by considering the elements of his power. Dr. Ormiston, in his valuable work on the subject, classifies it in four kinds.

There is first the physical element. He is an angel, although a fallen one, and it is said of such they 'excel in strength.' Take the history of Job as an illustration of this. In his case a great fire fell and burned up his sheep and oxen. Then a wind from the wilderness smote the four corners of his house, killing the young men who were within, and then at last Job himself is smitten with sore boils from the sole of his foot to the crown of his head.

There is, secondly, Satan's intellectual power. He has a mind and will to think, contrive and devise. His knowledge, too, is very great, for the reason, among others that he is very old—old but not infirm.

He was in existence before Adam, and has had the advantage of this long period of observation to add to his original stock of information. With unremitting attention he has studied the evidences of time, and doubtless there is not an individual on earth and never has been, with whose power and peculiarities he is not familiar.

He is ever 'going to and fro and walking up and down, in the earth,' scriptural language which means, we are told not merely a careless passing from one place to another, but a going about to spy and search and observe anything diligently.

Moreover, in Satan's knowledge, there is not only his age and experience, but the access he has to the most high. When the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, Satan came also among them. This mystery, many another, we cannot explain, but there it stands as a mighty fact to be reckoned with. Jehovah and Satan holding a conference concerning the integrity of a man!

Why He Didn't.

Two gentlemen, shooting in Scotland, sat down to lunch. On taking a bottle of whisky out, one of them noticed that the cork had been tampered with, and, knowing the character of their guests, at once accused him of having been at the lunch banquet.

"I fear that you have been drinking the whisky, Sandy."

"Na, na, sir, I ha not, fur the cork wouldna come out!"

WORK WEAKENS THE KIDNEYS.

Doan's Kidney Pills Have Done Great Service For People Who Work in Salisbury.

Most Salisbury people work every day in some strained, unnatural position, bending constantly over a desk, riding on jolting cars, doing laborious housework; lifting, reaching or pulling, or trying the back in a hundred and one other ways. All these strains tend to wear, weaken and injure the kidneys until they fall behind in their work of filtering the poisons from the blood. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, put new strength in bad backs. Salisbury cures prove it.

A. R. Lohner, 318 William Street, Salisbury, Md., says: "I feel safe in saying that anyone who uses Doan's Kidney Pills according to directions will find relief from kidney trouble. For at least thirty years my kidneys were disordered and as I am obliged to work in a draught and do much heavy lifting, it was hard for me to escape kidney ills. My back often became very weak and lame and the kidney secretions annoyed me by their irregularity in passage. It was finally my good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a supply at White's and Leonard's drug store. They brought me prompt relief. I have used them off and on during the past ten years, always finding great benefit."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and taken no other.

"Tabernacle Shadows Of The Better Sacrifices."

This little book is not for the ordinary readers, but most decidedly it is what every advanced Bible student and earnest Christian should possess and study thoroughly. It costs but ten cents, is illustrated and draws its lessons on the higher life from the types and shadows of Israel's typical Atonement Day and other sacrifices. Surely every earnest Christian should have this little book and find in it a mine of spiritual wealth, health and refreshment. Order it now from the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

A Storekeeper Says:

"A lady came into my store lately and said: 'I have been using a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove all winter in my apartment. I want one now for my summer home. I think these oil stoves are wonderful. If only women knew what a comfort they are, they would all have one. I spoke about my stove to a lot of my friends, and they were astonished. They thought that there was small and smoke from an oil stove, and that it heated a room just like any other stove. I told them of my experience, and one after another they got one, and now, not one of them would give hers up for five times its cost.'"

The lady who said this had thought an oil stove was all right for quickly an all stove was all right for quickly a heating milk for a baby, or boiling a kettle of water, or to make coffee quickly in the morning, but she never dreamed of using it for difficult or heavy cooking. Now—she knows.

Do you really appreciate what a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove means to you? More coal to carry, no more coming to the dinner table as tired and hot as you are? Just light a Perfection Stove and immediately the heat from an intense blue flame shoots up to the bottom of pot, kettle or oven. But the room isn't heated. There is no smoke, no smell, no outside heat, no draft in the kitchen where one of these stoves is used.

New Perfection Oil Cook-stove

It has a Cabinet Top with a shelf for keeping plates and food hot. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive to the eye. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

NEXT YEAR'S PRIMARIES.

In a letter to Hon. M. V. Ervingson, of this County, Attorney General Strauss has given an opinion on the primary law as it refers to a vote on the direct nomination plan. According to this opinion the vote as to whether or not we are to make our nominations under the direct plan or under the old convention system will not be taken until next year instead of this as was supposed. This means that our next ticket will be nominated by a convention. It is not believed that this will prove satisfactory to a large part of Wicomico's Democrats.
While perhaps not binding under the law why cannot the State Central Committee hold a primary under the direct plan and let a gentleman's agreement be made that the successful candidates be nominated at the regular convention? This was done in the Smith-Wagfield contest for United States Senator and we believe the plan could be tried here with good results from a party standpoint.

WEST POINT AND LYING.

West Point Military Academy has come in for considerable censure at times for the extreme point to which some of the cadets have occasionally carried out their ideas of bringing the newcomers or "plebes" to a proper understanding of the position they are to occupy while at the Academy. There has been one code however at the Point which has been overlooked by the general public although it is the most important one both in the eyes of the authorities and in the young cadets themselves at the Academy.
This code is "Thou shalt not lie."

The student at the Academy who lies to escape punishment may for the time being, get clear of the authorities, but better by far would it have been for him to have told the truth and taken his medicine for he will at once be ostracized by his class mates, who will leave no stones unturned to make his life so unpleasant for him that he will in the end be compelled to resign and get out. The cry is, that a liar will not be tolerated and their code makes no exception to this rule.

Tale-bearing and things of that kind are as much despised by the students of West Point as they are at other places, and the students called upon to give their companions away are expected to refuse to answer taking their punishment for so doing, unless the matter is grave and serious enough for a court of inquiry and then they are supposed to go before it—and tell all they know. Under no circumstances is a lie excused. This code has been brought into strong relief by the action of the Superintendent in dismissing two cadets from the service for lying about some minor misconduct. They are dismissed on the ground that any man who will lie is unfit to serve his country in the position of an officer of the army.

That the majority of the people of this country will endorse this action is certain, and it is to be hoped that the publicity given the matter will help to bring back the old code of honor in which lying was not tolerated.

Parents today are often careless in training their children to love and tell the truth, but on the contrary often train them to lie in order to escape parental punishment. The value of truth even from a mere worldly point of view has been recognized by all philosophers and Lord Chesterfield who could hardly be accused of being a moralist any farther than morality was the best course to pursue in order to make life a worldly success, enjoined his son to always tell the truth, saying it is "The first duty of religion and morality and whoever has it cannot be supposed to have any good quality, and must become a detestation of God and man."

And again "I know of nothing more criminal, more mean, and more ridiculous than lying. It is the production either of malice, cowardice or idiotism; and generally misuses its aim in every one of these views; for lies are always detected sooner or later."
While God alone knows who has told the truth is something that every man should.

Miss Helen Hughes of Hebron, were their parents.

GIRLS FORM CLUB

To Snub Bachelors—Give Eligibles Chance,
Is Plan They Set Up.

The girls of Paterson, N. J., have organized a Boycott Club. It isn't like a great many clubs organized by women against young men. There is nothing in the sour-grape line in the organization. There are no old maids, and the club is noted for its pretty girls.

The young women are not against the young men. Far be it from them.
They are for them, but they have decided that if Paterson young men can form a bachelors' club, why, then,
there are two ways of looking at it,
and any man who prides himself on the fact that he is going to be a bachelor can be one, but that less him out.
He can't come around and play at being friends and that sort of thing, and waste a girl's time. For the man who has declared even secretly that he is going to be a bachelor there will be no invitations to lawn parties, no girls to dance with at the picnics and no invitations to call and take Sunday supper and to dance when the season opens in the fall for whist and dances.

Begin Early Bachelorhood.

If he wants to flock by himself in his old age—fine; he can begin flocking early and give eligibles a chance right away.

The trouble came about when it leaked out that several young men in Paterson had a secret organization pledged to a series of fines for infractions of the rules consistent with their Bachelor Club.

These rules provide that when a member of the club sees a girl coming, he doesn't see her. He has that far-away look in his eyes and is intently trying to read the time by the City Hall clock as though he were in a hurry to catch a train. If he fails to get away with this and is seen tipping his hat, it is a five cent fine.

Now Fines Increase.

If he speaks to the young woman,
the fine is doubled, and if he calls on a girl he is placed on probation. If he calls twice, he is expelled and ostracized by the other members.

When the facts of this became known the Paterson girls decided the thing to do was to show that this organization could not thrive. So the young women organized. Miss Florence Cook, one of the prettiest girls in Paterson, was elected president, and Miss Anne Henkle, a belle of Hoboken, was named as vice president.

The girls have adopted no by laws to punish their members for infractions of rules. They say they do not need them, as their members are all loyal.

CLEANING GOLD AND SILVER

Soap and Water Cannot Be Improved
On Unless Articles Are Very Much Tarnished.

With all its trials the wedding ring
is bright, for hand washing suits it, there being no better treatment than soap and water for either plain gold or silver jewelry, unless it be much tarnished. Warm water, a little soapy lather and a soft brush for articles of intricate workmanship, with a brisk rub at finish on tissue paper, are the recipe for brooches, chains and bangles.

Considering its simplicity it seems a pity that many women appear contented to wear chains and necklaces
so dirty that they not only soil white and light gowns, but the flesh itself.
For cleaning all pieces of jewelry, after repairs or otherwise, fine boxwood sawdust is ordinarily employed. To use this the trinket is shaken in it, care being taken that it is well embedded in the soft dust. A final polishing is administered with tissue paper, not camellia leather—the latter being usually reserved for watch cases, chased smelling bottles, stoppers and what may be called large surfaces.—Woman's Life.

Washing Gingham.
It is not what to do, but what not to do, to save your gingham. Avoid strong soap, hot water, too much rubbing, hot starch, and do not dry ginghams in the hot sunshine or, if you must, take them indoors as soon as dry. Whatever you do, do not use hard water and alkali to wash them.
The colors are set with turpentine in water. Sometimes salt and alum are used. Some gingham fade in spite of all precautions. Avoid using thick starch on red gingham. Red often turns a red-black when ironed, but it resumes a more natural color when exposed to the air. Pinks fade an ugly yellow, blues fade a clear white and greens likewise. Yellow washes nicely, browns look clear and mixed white and blue looks fresh and bright even when slightly faded. Most lavenders and tans wash nicely.

Macaroni with Nuts.
Cook some macaroni in boiling water until tender. Put a layer of the macaroni in the bottom of a buttered baking dish, cover with a layer of chopped nuts, sprinkle with salt. Place another layer of macaroni, then nuts, and so on until the dish is full. Make a sauce of one cup of boiling milk
thickened with one teaspoon of flour;
season with salt and pepper and one teaspoon of butter. Pour this sauce over the macaroni and nuts in the dish. Cover with buttered bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven
for half hour, or a little longer.

New Cooking Utensil.
It bakes and boils at the same time.
It may be used over gas, coal or oil stove.
The top of the cooker is perforated

WILL MAKE YOU RICH!

Sow them for hay crops—for forage crops after grain crops—on vacant land. Put Cow Peas in every available piece of land you have. They will wonderfully increase the value and productiveness of your entire farm. We strongly recommend the sowing of Mixed Cow Peas. They are composed of Blacks, Whip-poor-wills, Clays, Wonderfals, Shinnys, etc. The upright-growing varieties will hold up the zining varieties and will produce much better crops of vines and larger amount of forage.

MILLIONS IN SWAMPS

Government Experts Say Maryland Salt Marshes Can Be Reclaimed.

All of the swamp lands of Maryland, both salt and fresh, can be reclaimed and rendered productive and valuable, is the opinion of the experts in charge of drainage experiments of the Department of Agriculture. Government officials would like to see the State itself, or private enterprises in the State, begin this work of reclamation. They believe it would add tremendously to the taxable basis of Maryland as well as to its general wealth and prosperity. That the salt marshes of the State are not beyond redemption has been well established by the experiments of the department and by what has actually been done in New Jersey, North Carolina and other States. "Does salt marsh have a real value from a practical standpoint and can all salt marsh be reclaimed? was the question asked of Mr. A. D. Morehouse, chief office engineer of the Department of Drainage.

Can Reclaim Salt Marsh.

"Yes decidedly," was the reply. "All salt marsh can be made productive of an income of from $10 to $40 per acre annually and all salt marsh can be made of actual value. It takes time to get rid of the saline qualities. The reclaimed land has to be sweetened by the rains and by fresh water, gradually, if properly reclaimed so that the tides do not reach it, the salt will disappear and the land will be fruitful. Our engineers have been experienced along these lines for a long time and the facts show beyond question that the salt marshes can be made productive. In Delaware, New Jersey and North Carolina it has been done. Drainage is not as expensive as a general thing as irrigation and is a simple proposition."

In a report made to the Agriculture Department on this subject by Mr. George M. Warren, assistant drainage engineer, the amount of salt marsh now wholly unproductive in Maryland is given as 185,650 acres. "These marshes, which have been built up by the alluvial deposit of tidal streams and rivers, are unusually very productive," says Mr. Warren. "Timothy, clover, red top, corn, rye, potatoes, tomatoes, strawberries, asparagus, cabbage, celery, beets, onions, melons, and rice have all shown splendid yields. Wheat has not done well on the marshes but this is probably due to climatic conditions rather than to any deficiency in the soil. As a general proposition, the marsh soils will produce in abundance those crops adapted to the latitude and longitude. It is largely a question of thorough drainage and tillage of the soil. A thick deposit of salty clay would render a marsh soil especially adaptable to grass and pasture. In a muck soil, celery, onions, cabbage and potatoes do well, while in a lighter sandy type, if well drained, should produce early garden truck in abundance.

Should Be Diked against High Tides.

If, upon inspection and test, a soil seems fertile, the marsh must be embanked or diked to prevent the entrance of high tides and freshets. The interior lands must be ditched to collect seepage and rainfall, which must be collected and discharged either by tidegates or by pumping. Marshes which are less than three feet above mean low water must be exceptionally well located as regards upland drainage water to be successfully drained by gravity. The soil must be freed of its sudden and saline condition. The usual method is to clear the land of all vegetation, burn the woods, brush and rank sod, and offer every facility for air, rain, sunlight and frost to enter and act upon the soil. Where fresh water is available and can be promptly removed, much of the saline matter can be washed from the soil. Marsh soil generally shows an acid reaction and lime does much to correct this and hasten the condition necessary for healthy plant growth. Corn is a favorite crop on the newly reclaimed marshes, as it withstands considerable acidity. Asparagus, onions, sorghum and beets are salt resisting crops.

What Reclamation Costs.

Cost of complete reclamations vary greatly. There is no fixed price. It may range from $10 to $75 per acre. Short shore lines inclosing comparatively large areas of marsh, protected locations and small amounts of upland water are all favorable conditions to profitable reclamation.

Under average conditions it will probably cost from $25 to $30 per acre. Plans for the construction of levees, sluices, ditches and pumping plants should be carefully considered, as it is possible to squander much money through hasty ill-advised and poorly constructed work.

Mr. Warren says that in three years the land properly drained, whether salt or fresh marsh, should become productive. Some returns are possible in two years, but the amount and certainty are not assured, he believes all salt marsh that can be drained can be made productive. "There have been many examples of successful reclamation," he says, "and there have been many failures due to a variety of causes, such as lack of co-operation among land owners, faulty design and construction of sluices, levees and ditches and failure to regard farming and the maintenance of drainage works as an enterprise that requires sound business judgment, continual study and well directed effort."

Of Only Nominal Value Now.

"Unimproved, the salt marshes have merely a nominal value along the Atlantic Seaboard, save as they may be affected in certain locations by commercial possibilities. Their value in Delaware, New Jersey and North Carolina will range perhaps from $1 to $5 an acre. In New England they are rendered more valuable because of denser population and the scarcity of good upland farms. In the South opposite conditions make the marsh lands of less value. Embanked and improved, these same lands in Delaware and New Jersey are worth from $50 to $70 an acre and I know of particularly favorably situated marshes that cannot be purchased for $500 an acre, the owner, a man of large affairs, declaring, "They are the best investments I have."

(Report On The Pocomoke.

Some time ago Mr. G. A. Griffin under the direction of C. G. Elliott chief of drainage investigations made a survey and examination of the Pocomoke river in Maryland to determine the feasibility of its improvement for a drainage outlet for the Cedar swamp in Sussex county Delaware. An elaborate report upon the river recommendations as to its improvement, both for this purpose and for the better drainage of the cultivated lands through which it runs in Maryland, was made and is on file at the Department of Agriculture.

At the department doubt is expressed as to the probability of securing a Federal appropriation for the purpose of draining Maryland swamp lands.

Government officials hold that this should be the work of the State, itself or of private individuals. No doubt, however, is entertained that the proper drainage of its vast area of swamp lands, both fresh and salt, would add greatly to the prosperity of the State.

Beware Of Ointments For Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. The Glorious Liberty of the Children of God.

"The creature also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God" (Romans viii, 21)

Brooklyn, July 8.—Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle preached today in Brooklyn's largest Auditorium, the Academy of Music, from the above text, to a crowded and attentive audience. He said:

Tomorrow will be celebrated as "Liberty Day" by Americans in all parts of the world. To some, of course, it means a holiday, a time of recreation, but to others of us it speaks eloquently of "Liberty enlightening the World." Even the enemies of the Republic must concede that an influence has gone forth from these shores to the uttermost bounds of earth—an influence against tyranny, and in a broad, general way in line with the Golden Rule, which respects the liberties of others as it desires its own to be respected. It is difficult to estimate the weight of influence attaching to the numerous letters going from these shores to every country under heaven, to every hamlet and village, and city. It is difficult to estimate the influence of the newspapers and magazines which go forth from this land breeding the love of liberty. And yet, dear friends, every day and every year, as our ideas mature, we come to see more and more distinctly what constitutes true "liberty," and to distinguish this from "license," which sometimes steals the liberty of liberty, to grossly misrepresent it.

It is not surprising that many who come to our shores from lands where personal liberty is almost unknown are inclined to expect more liberty than we can safely accord them. They are obliged to learn gradually the lesson that social liberty signifies, not personal license, but the permission to do only those things which will not interfere with the rights and liberties of others. Indeed, this is the lesson which all must learn in order to be good, useful citizens of this Republic; a lesson therefore to be learned by all who would enjoy true liberty. It is the lesson of self-control; the lesson of minding one's own business; the lesson of speaking evil of no man; the lesson of doing good unto all men as we have opportunity; the lesson of intruding on the proper rights and privileges of no one else. But alas, how few of the world have come to rightly view the liberty of which we boast!

In the School of Christ. It is in the School of Christ that the pupils or disciples of the Lord Jesus may learn of him, the Great Teacher. The important lesson of self-control and the proper exercise of our own liberty, without encroaching upon the rights and liberties of others. Alas, dear friends, we must concede that remarkably few of the Lord's people have learned this lesson and are qualified to graduate along this line! Many followers of Christ continually practice injustice in the little things of life, neglecting to regard the liberties and rights of others. In the Church, in the home, in business, the rights of others are all too frequently ignored or only partially recognized. It is more important that we learn to recognize the rights and liberties of others than to insist upon our own rights. The former course tends to make us Godlike; the latter cultivates selfishness and frequently gets us into difficulty unnecessarily. The Apostle's instruction is that so far as possible, we should live peaceably with all men, which often necessitates the yielding of our own rights for the sake of peace.

This matter of insisting upon rights and liberties is moving the world more and more toward contention and strife, and hastening it toward the great time of trouble which shall engulf the whole social structure. Doubtless the great majority will be claiming their individual rights while almost totally disregarding the rights of others. We argue, therefore, that kind of love and liberty which is willing to sacrifice as respects its own privileges, that it may be helpful to others in maintaining their proper liberties. Nor does this signify that the people of God should ignore their own liberty and fight for the liberty of others. Rather we should stand for the principles of righteousness, and both by word and precept refrain from stirring up violence, or jeopardizing the interests of others. Liberty of conscience we should maintain in ourselves and should encourage in others.

"Liberty of Children of God." St. Paul speaks in our text of the "liberty of the children of God." This, primarily, signifies our deliverance from our taskmaster, Sin, and the surrender of our wills to God and righteousness. It means a repudiation of liberty to wrong and the grasping, through Christ, of liberty from bondage to Sin. But as the Apostle elsewhere explains, we find it impossible to conquer fully the fallen flesh. We will find it impossible as "New Creatures" to attain the full liberty of Sonship under present conditions, because, as St. Paul declares, "The flesh justeth against the Spirit, and the two are contrary the one to the other" (Galatians v, 17). We have a constant fight to resist the enslaving influences of Sin—to maintain our liberty as sons of God. The victory will be fully attained until our resurrection, when "this corruptible must put on incorruption." Then our new minds will receive new, perfect spirit bodies, through which they can operate perfectly, and exercise, to the full, true liberty, true freedom.

The full liberty of the Children of God, therefore, is not attained in this present life, but will be attained in the resurrection, when we shall be perfected in the Master's likeness. And in this connection it is well to note that this is the liberty of the angels also—liberty of freedom from Sin, from the power and domination of error and superstition and weaknesses through heredity. All the angels were Made Subject to Vanity.

The Apostle reminds us that the slavery of mankind to Sin and Death came upon the world through vanity, or frailty, unwillingly. Our frailties are the result of sin and of the Divine sentence. Father Adam was disobedient and our Creator, in sentencing him to death, made the dying condition such that all of his children would be involved with him, sinners, through heredity, and thus sharers in his dying condition. But God did not subject our race to this dying condition, this slavery to Sin and Death, with the intention of blasting the hope of humanity to all eternity, much less with the expectation of sending Adam and his race to eternal torture. Rather, we are to understand that when God pronounced the death sentence upon our race, intermingled with it was the hope, the desire, on the part of the Creator, that the result of that death sentence should not be man's absolute and eternal destruction, after the manner of the brute beast. In the Divine purpose there mingled a hope—a desire and intention that all of Adam's race who will learn the lesson of righteousness may ultimately be delivered from the bondage of Sin and Death, into the true liberty of children of God. It was to secure, in God's due time, for Adam and his race, liberty from Sin and Death, that Christ died for our sins.

The Creation to Be Delivered.

Our minds now turn to the liberty which, by God's grace, came to this nation in 1776; and, similarly, some of our nation look to the liberty that was accorded them by the "Emancipation Proclamation." But these emancipations are nothing in comparison with the great Emancipation which God purposes shall come to all the world of mankind through Christ. Enslaved to Sin, through Father Adam's disobedience, "Sold under sin," the purchase of the race by the precious blood of Christ is to be announced by the Great Judge who pronounced the sentence. This is a glorious hope, a glorious prospect, but as yet it is merely a prospect. Only the true Church has as yet been set free; and she waits for perfect freedom through the "First Resurrection." "The whole world lieth in the Wicked One," and still are slaves to Sin and Death conditions in every way. The arrangement of Divine Providence for this great liberation of the captives of Sin and Death is to be established and to exercise his reign or rule of righteousness amongst men for a thousand years! Satan is to be bound during that period, that he may deceive and entrap humanity no more. The knowledge of God and the assistance of Divine power are to be extended to every creature, bond and free, rich and poor, of every tongue and nation. Not only will the living nations enjoy this privilege of release from slavery to Sin and Death, through the great Redeemer, but, additionally, all who are in their graves will have the glorious opportunity of being awakened and of being brought to a knowledge of the Truth, that they may be saved by laying hold thereon by conforming heart and life to the rules of the Kingdom of God's dear Son, and thus attaining eternal life.

Truly, that will be a glorious epoch, when to the great Deliverer "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess, to the glory of God." It will be grand, indeed, to witness during the thousand years of Christ's reign the gradual liberation of the slaves of Sin and Death—their gradual attainment of full mastery over their weaknesses and imperfections by the assistance of the great Emancipator! Many of these poor slaves went down to the tomb in fearful anticipation of a future of eternal torment. How glad they will be when they awake from the sleep of death, realizing it as only a momentary interim! They will be advised of the fact—that the Redemption price has been paid by Jesus and that, therefore, he is fully qualified and empowered to set them free in every sense of the word—not only from the condemnation of death, but also from the actual might of death—the mental, moral and physical weaknesses, which are elements of the death sentence.

True, the Scriptures intimate that all will not appreciate the privilege of emancipation from the dominion of Sin and Death. It is not for us to speculate as to the number who will ultimately be set free. It is sufficient for us to know that all will be brought to a full opportunity of attaining or receiving the emancipation privileges. All will be free in the sense that none will die the Second Death, except by his own will, self-chosen sympathy with sin and rejection of the righteous and liberal terms of the Great Liberator.

Not Only They but Ourselves.

Pursuing this subject, the Apostle marks the Church of the Gospel Age as separate and distinct from the world. He shows that those who receive the begetting of the holy Spirit now, are already children of God, and already enjoying full freedom, full liberation from the condemnation of Sin and Death. He says, "And not only they (the groaning creation, the world), but ourselves also (the spirit-begotten Church of this age), which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption (deliverance) of our Body"—"the Body of Christ, which is the Church" (Verse 23; 1 Corinthians xii, 27).

The Apostle is here pointing out that while the world is groaning under its share of the Adamic condemnation, believers in Christ also groan—though in a different manner. The world groans and travails, waiting for the Church's manifestation—"the manifestation of the Sons of God." The Church groans, not outwardly, but inwardly, while waiting for something different. The world is waiting for the manifestation of the Sons of God, because "Now are we the Sons of God" (1 John iii, 2). Our salvation will come, therefore, before this manifestation of the Sons of God, which will bring release to the world. The elect Church is waiting for the adoption, the deliverance of the Body in the First Resurrection. Our Heavenly Father has already granted us the spirit of adoption whereby we can cry, "Abba, Father," but our adoption is not yet accomplished, completed. We are already set free in our minds from the Law of Sin and Death, but will not be entirely free until our adoption shall be completed by our resurrection change. The adoption of the Church by the Father will be her full entrance into the liberty of the Sons of God, her full entrance into perfection, "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye" (1 Cor. xv, 52).

The Apostle continues, "same thought, pointing out that the salvation of the Church at the present time is not her actual or complete salvation, but a hope—salvation or a faith-salvation. He points out that what we hope for is to be brought unto us at the revelation of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, at his second advent. He points out that, in the meantime, if we have this hope as an anchor to our souls, it will lead us to be patient in waiting for the glorious things of the Divine arrangement. It will lead us to wait patiently for the Lord's time for our own blessing and further opportunity for service in bestowing God's blessings upon the world. We are to wait for our deliverance, with patience, and in the meantime, by exercising and developing one of the graces of the holy Spirit necessary for our perfecting. It is not sufficient that we learn to love liberty; we must learn full submission to the Divine will and to receive our liberty, in kind and in time, according to the good pleasure of the Father.

The expression, "The redemption of our Body," does not refer to the Lord's people, individually, for each of us will have a separate body in the resurrection. The Apostle's thought is that of the Scriptures in general, namely, that there is one Body, which is the Church; and that, so far as our complete adoption by the Father is concerned, this must be done in union; he will not receive the Church separately, member by member, but altogether, at the close of this age. Then so many as shall have fought the good fight of faith and finished their course, so many as shall be found worthy a place with our Lord in his throne will be "changed" in the "First Resurrection." These will be presented together as one glorious Body, or "Church of the living God, whose names are written in heaven."

So far, then, as the world is concerned, let us think less of assisting them to individual and personal liberty than to freedom from the yoke of Sin. Let us rejoice in the privilege and opportunity which, if faithful, we will have by and with the Master, of delivering or setting at liberty from sin and death the entire groaning creation. Let us remember that to attain this we must become members of the glorified Kingdom, which will extend this blessing to all the families of earth.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and better health in that organ is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root, if you do you will be disappointed.

Something New in Art

Not so new either. For KARNAK BRASS found its inception in the Temple of Karnak, built by Seti I on the banks of the Nile, some fifteen centuries ago.

This old temple inspired one of the designers of the Benedict Studios to reproduce in articles of modern utility the ideal features of Egyptian ornamental art.

Each piece of KARNAK BRASS is Egyptian in form and decoration, the decorative motifs being the Lotus Flower, Isis, the Sphinx, the Papyrus, Scarabeus.

This class of goods has true artistic merit and is of a substantial make that insures its lasting a lifetime.

ECONOMY IN DRESS

FOR THE WOMAN WHOSE MEANS ARE LIMITED.

Idea Should Be to Have One Frook Which Can Be Made to Do Duty for Many Occasions—An Illustration.

The woman who can only afford one gown of a dressy nature each season naturally looks out for a model and material which will permit the costume being worn for many different sorts of occasions.

The great virtue of silk allows this all-round use for a fine frock, especially if the gown is made of satin foulard, for this shimmering and handsome texture may be made to look as plain or as elegant as one wishes. Where the dress is to do some duty for evening, it is well to have a round décolletage, which would be filled in on day occasions with a high, long-sleeved guimpe. Then, since no dress can be done without a tunic of some sort, if one happens upon a short pattern of silk, it is the easiest thing in the world to make it out with an overdress of marquisette, veiling or chiffon. The marquisette is first cousin to chiffon, and is of so diaphanous a texture, indeed, that it is sometimes used for automobile veils.

With a walking skirt—for the more dressy of the tunic dresses are slightly trained—the overdress may be the dinkiest little affair, no more than an apron, in fact, and with the lower edge cut with a fish-tail curve. A distinct madness of the moment is a bunched overskirt effect, which is made by gathering the outside skirt very full over the foundation one, and then tying it about below the knees with a ribbon sash. This is a very good design for a foulard dress, and there is always the comfort that the next year there will be enough material in the gown to make it over in a new style.

Figured and plain pongees and shantung silk respond excellently to the limp lines and tailored effects of the moment, and a well made dress in any one of these materials is both a comfort and a valuable possession. For such textures are delightfully cool, and old dresses in them may always be dyed and cut down for children. Natural colored shantung—a brownish yellow—is very stylish and washes like a rag. The one-piece dresses in this effective material look very pretty with the white lace and net yokes which still enliven everything.

The illustration shows a girlish model which would adapt itself charmingly to all bordered materials, such as muslin, pongee, marquisette, chiffon, etc., but the dress could also be made in a plain goods with an applied bordering of ribbon or lace entredeux. As illustrated, the little dress is of novelty veiling, black spots on a dead white ground, and it is put over silk tulle or ribbon bands, and have the yoke of a modest rather than a flamboyant nature. There are some fancy nets, which respond most charmingly to well made yokes and guimpes, and to my mind these are far prettier for summer than yokes of richer lace.

A more practical gown in this design—for this combination strikes the last note of elegance—could be of any of the little silks now used, and which may be bought for from 40 cents a yard up, and still seem smart and fine; for it all depends on how you treat these cheap silks whether the dress is exquisite or tawdry. My own taste would be to trim them very plainly with tucking or ribbon bands, and have the yoke of a modest rather than a flamboyant nature. There are some fancy nets, which respond most charmingly to well made yokes and guimpes, and to my mind these are far prettier for summer than yokes of richer lace.

How It Happened.

"How's this?" remarked the tall office boy with the newspaper. "Here is where an educated monkey ran a sewing machine."

"Aw, that's nothing," sneered the short office boy. "Yesterday I saw a mouse run a typewriter."

"Come off! What are you giving me? Where did this happen?"

"Right in the old man's office. The mouse came from under the desk and made for the pretty typewriter, and she's running yet."

From the Cottage Window

By Dorothy Douglas

Gavin Cuthbert tossed feverishly about his great four-post bed, muttering broken sentences. His mother strained every nerve in an effort to catch the words. Perhaps her mother love could fashion some slight longing in her son's ravings.

As she bent over him to smooth his rumpled hair she caught the word "music." It was repeated again and again with an accent of longing.

Mrs. Cuthbert stood suddenly erect. Why had she been so dense? Gavin loved music and through his delirium his very soul was calling for it.

She quickly enumerated her musical friends and realized that her task would be difficult; it was August and the city's population was scattered broadcast. She and Mr. Cuthbert had returned from the Isle of Wight at the first intimation of their son's illness. They were now in "Kingscroft," their country estate in Mottlingham.

To find some one who could wield the power of song? Mrs. Cuthbert's hand was on the bell to order the landau for her drive to the station when she stopped. An idea had suddenly presented itself.

Often when driving down the lane, Mrs. Cuthbert had heard a woman's voice emanating from a tiny, wistaria-covered cottage that nestled just off the road. Beyond the fact that a Mrs. Wallace and her daughter from America occupied "The Cottage," Mrs. Cuthbert's knowledge was limited. Feeling that the voice that came from the cottage would appeal to Gavin she did not hesitate in her purpose.

Ten minutes later, the heavy gate of the cottage swung back, admitting her to the sweet-smelling gardens. When a young girl with two thick braids of golden hair answered the fall of the brass knocker, Mrs. Cuthbert faced a very beautiful picture framed in the low doorway. The wild-rose cheeks of the girl deepened in color; it was seldom that a stranger from seemed to be all delft blue and gold; an aureole of sun shone on her head and trailed down her back where it ended in two silky tassels. Gavin raised himself on one arm and tried to see if the eyes of this picture matched the gown. His concentrated gaze drew her attention and she turned to meet his eyes.

"Yes, they are blue—a tone darker than—Come here!" he called. Then, when she stood beside him: "Are you—real?" With a whimsical smile he stretched out a doubting hand.

Ruby smiled. "Oh, yes, very, very real."

"You know," he continued, holding fast to her hand, "I imagined that I was entering another world and that you were there to welcome me with your music, but you have brought me to life in our own world." He raised her hands to his lips before letting them go. "Where is mother?"

His mother had risen at sound of her name and dropped on her knees beside the bed. "My son."

"Little mother—it is good—to be back with you," he said.

The girl went quietly out. The following days saw Ruby at the patient's piano very often. And it was not long before he was ushered back to the glory and strength of life.

Late one afternoon when they had finished tea and the twilight shades added harmony to a ready great friendship, Gavin voiced a well-matured thought. Under the lightness of his words his voice rang with a steadiness of purpose.

"Miss Wallace, I am going to infuse a heavy punishment on your arts for having wielded their powers over me when I was too ill to resist." He looked up to meet an interested glance from his mother and a startled one from the girl. "I shall send you to some terrible music master who will make you breathe from your diaphragm and place tones in your head until you are completely his slave. When that is accomplished—you are to come back and show the world of art what a really great voice is."

The girl was silent; two large tears gathered in her eyes. When she spoke her voice was low but the quality spoke volumes. "I can say nothing—at present—you have made too much possible—all at once. I have longed for what you have put before me and now—I want only—to cry."

"There, there," said Mrs. Cuthbert, rising. "If you must cry—cry here on my shoulder."

"But I'm not going to," came a muffled voice. "I am too happy to cry."

Not many twilights had come and gone before Gavin and his mother were again alone; each knew a great longing for the music of one voice. For in the heart of the mother Ruby Wallace had wrought a great love—and in the man's.

Something told Gavin that it was best not to tell the girl until such time as she herself beckoned him. Her letters from Germany were filled with humorous, and sometimes tearful, accounts of her studies and always, intermingling, were little phrases of love and gratitude for those who were her benefactors.

Somehow these letters invariably found a place in Gavin's desk until the day came when he had to resort to his steamer trunk—for sheer lack of space. Such was the passage of time.

One evening, after three years had passed, Gavin stepped into the drawing room looking so handsome in his evening clothes that even his mother stopped to caress him before putting the question uppermost in her mind. Gavin thought her wonderfully lovely, radiant with some inner excitement.

"Have you any engagement to-night, dear?" she asked.

"None; anything special?"

"Would you mind taking me to the opera to-night?"

"The opera! I thought you—mother! What is it?—you are hiding—!" Then suddenly: "I know! She is—"

"Yes, boy—Ruby is singing Juliet. She sent me word to-day with this."

Mrs. Cuthbert drew a scarf from her neck, disclosing an exquisite necklace. It represented a few bars of music; the lines were fine golden strands held together by the bars of tiny diamonds; each note was a matchless pearl.

"It is beautiful!" Gavin turned away his head quickly—the girl seemed suddenly very near and a great gladness thrilled him.

"My boy," said his mother, tenderly, "you need not hide it from me—I have always known."

He turned and caught her in his arms.

Gavin sat far back in the box. He seemed to be chained down waiting for the entrance of Juliet—only the sight of her could release him.

His heart gave a great bound for she was there and his whole being went out to meet her. Every note, every gesture was like a long drawn breath from a garden of flowers to the man who waited.

She was the same Ruby whose voice had coaxed him back to life. Now she stood leaning over the balcony with a moon casting its light on her head and trailed down her back—and yes—it ended in two golden tassels. Gavin's hands clenched on the velvet of the box railing when the Romeo of the opera clasped Juliet in what looked like an unconsciously close embrace, but that memory vanished when, afterward, Juliet sat beside him in the carriage so close that the soft down of her cheek was warm against his arm.

He slipped that arm under the coat and drew her to him. "I have waited three years—dear," he said.

She did not speak, but somehow there in the darkness of the carriage, he knew that he need wait no longer.

Mrs. Cuthbert Stood Suddenly Erect.

the golden world called at the cottage. However, she led Mrs. Cuthbert into a miniature drawing room which expressed the artistic temperament in every detail.

"I hope introductions are unnecessary in so small a community," began the elder woman with a smile.

"I have come on a peculiar mission," she continued, "but many things are permissible where illness calls—I am going to ask a very great favor of you, Miss Wallace."

"I hope Mr. Gavin is no—"

"No—he is no worse, but—he calls for music incessantly and I was at a loss what to do when I remembered having heard a glorious voice creeping through these little casement windows."

Mrs. Cuthbert turned with a charming gesture to indicate the window, around which rose buds were peeping.

When her gaze returned to the girl she was startled by the change in her. The eyes glowed with an intense fire, the slight figure was drawn and tense while her entire being expressed latent emotion. Mrs. Cuthbert was no longer in doubt as to the owner of the voice; this girl was music incarnate. She arose and went to the girl.

"Will you come and sing to my son?" she asked.

"The wistful appeal in the mother's eyes went straight to the girl's heart."

"I shall come with you as soon as I can wind up my hair."

"It looks so pretty as it is," coaxed Gavin's mother, running a hand down two silky braids, "and—it can't have been up very long."

She had her way and a few moments later Ruby Wallace was sitting at Gavin's piano which was visible through the doorway of his private sitting room. Like the ripple of a woodland brook, the prelude to an old negro melody drifted into the room. Her voice was not ordinary; in fact, it was very rare, possessing the quality of one that goes right to the heart and lightens the shadows of life. As she sang, the patient became interested, then calm, and finally the dull apathy shed from his eyes and they closed into tranquil sleep. A deep sigh of relief escaped Mrs. Cuthbert and she too was soon lost in a long-needed rest. A tear glistened on her cheek and Ruby Wallace, seeing it and the sleeping man, knew that she had won one of the greatest triumphs of her life. She played on, from one melody to another.

Gavin's eyes opened slowly; they rested on the profile of a girl who

POULTRY

POULTRY NOTES.

Watch the flock carefully.
Feed the fowls regularly.
Perfect cleanliness from now on will out short the louse crop of June.

If you stamp a date on your eggs,
sell them before the date gets old.

Fried chicken and fresh eggs are the rewards for care in poultry raising.

Chicken stew and roasted chicken are some of the delicacies in store for poultry raisers.

Feed the little chicks ground grain and skimmed milk. Do not let the hen lead them into wet grass.

When the brooder chicks seem very thirsty, wild for water, let them drink and feed very lightly while so feverish.

Fowls need green food at this season of the year. Better results will be obtained if you allow them to graze
a portion of the day.

Many a setting of eggs has been spoiled by making the nest on the floor where the wind can come up through the cracks under the old mother hen.

April is a good month to hatch goose eggs. It is also an excellent time for getting out ducklings. Stock hatched now will be best for next year's breeding.

Now is the time to begin if you wish to have turkeys for Thanksgiving and Christmas. Few fowls are more profitable than turkeys when properly managed.

Does that old hen lay? Try this if she does not: Feed her all the chopped clover she will eat, with an ounce of lean meat every day. If there is any lay in her that will bring it out.

FEEDER FOR CHICKS USEFUL

Constructed of Poultry Fencing, Will Accommodate 150 Birds—Little Ones Have Chance.

One of the handiest devices that can be had on a farm is a chicken feeder. To make it take a piece of poultry fencing (not netting) about 20 feet long and fasten the ends together, forming a small park. This Chicken Feeder.

will accommodate 150 chicks. The area of this fencing are just the right width apart to let the little chicks through and keep the old hens
out. This gives the chicks a chance to pick at the feed a long time safe from the interference of the old hens.

GEESE ARE VERY PROFITABLE

Gray African Variety Grow Heaviest in Shortest Space of Time—Are Nicely Flavored.

Gray African geese are very profitable to keep. They grow the heaviest in the shortest space of time and

Pair of Gray African Geese.

are ready for market in ten weeks,
weighing at that age between eight and ten pounds. For table purposes they are esteemed very highly, their flesh being fine and nicely flavored.

Demand for Good Breeds.

There is a strong demand at good prices for good breeding stock and eggs of pure bred strains of poultry.
As you need to do is to get some good breed and grow enough of them to make it worth while and the rest is easy. Only let people know that you have them by advertising a little and there will be no trouble in disposing of all you can raise. It is the least trouble and the safest to keep only one breed. There is too much chance of mixing if more than one breed is kept.

Money in Little Chicks.

There is a growing demand for pure bred young chicks and baby chicks just hatched. It has been found that baby chicks can be shipped by express for long distances with perfect safety. If you are in a position to hatch some of the pure-breds let people know that you have them. It is a good business when once learned.

Food for Confined Fowls.

A moment's study of the habits of fowls should show anyone that their diet when running loose is largely composed of flesh in the form of bugs and worms. Therefore when fowls are confined and not able to choose their feed they should be supplied with their natural rations in the form of chopped meat and bone meals.

Iron Rust.

For iron rust, soak the stain with lemon juice, sprinkle with salt and bleach for several hours in the sun.

ALAMO, HISTORIC ADOBE FORT

ALAMO PLAZA

THE defenders of the Alamo had known that the holy fathers who constructed the old adobe fort had also dug a secret tunnel several miles long they might have saved their lives and the celebrated massacre would have no place in history. Such a tunnel exists, but, strange to say, it has never been explored.

The mysterious excavation leads in two directions from beneath the ancient Alamo building. It is known that one branch of the tunnel runs south to the old Conception mission, and that another branch of the antiquated stone blockhouse which stands in what is now San Pedro park. It is about two miles from this blockhouse to the Alamo.

The early historic accounts of the string of ancient missions which are situated along the San Antonio river make no reference to the system of tunnels, which was evidently constructed about the time the buildings were erected. It is evident that the existence of these tunnels was not known to the early settlers.

When the American garrison of the Alamo was surrounded by the Mexican troops it knew of the way of escaping the death that surely awaited it. So well did the Franciscan fathers, who built and inhabited these missions, keep the secret of the existence of the tunnels that this knowledge did not even come to the early Mexican of San Antonio. It was not until about 20 years ago that the discovery was made that a tunnel led from the Alamo to the Conception mission. It was quite by accident that the underground passage was found.

out and conduct an exploration, so far as known. The same condition is true of the entrance beneath the blockhouse and at Conception mission. Since the discovery was made by Mr. Teborah several years ago the tunnel has been encountered at several other points on its course. While excavating for the outfall sewer that leads south of the city the tunnel was broken into and considerable difficulty was experienced in building the brick sewer across it. It not infrequently happens that the tunnel is struck while excavating for the foundations for houses.

It is considered remarkable that no systematic exploration of this ancient relic of the Franciscan fathers ever has been attempted. It is believed by many people that the tunnel does not stop at the Conception mission, but that it extends all the way to the San Francisco de la Espada mission, situated nine miles south of San Antonio, connecting en route the San Jose and the San Juan missions. All these ancient structures are built close to the San Antonio river and are surrounded by little villages of Mexicans.

These mission buildings were erected nearly two centuries ago, and it is supposed that the tunnel which probably connects all of them was constructed about the same time. The blockhouse in San Pedro park was built at a later date, and it is considered likely that the branch tunnel which leads to it was built some time after the passage way to the missions was finished.

There is much speculation as to the original object of the system of tunnels. It is considered likely that Indian labor was used to dig the tunnel, and if this is true it could not have

when the picks of the workmen struck a hard substance that proved to be adobe plaster, such as the Franciscan fathers taught the Indians of this section to make in the early days. A few strokes of the pick made an opening in this concrete wall, and a cavern was exposed to view. Mr. Teborah and the laborers who were digging the well descended into the opening and found that it was not a cave, as they supposed, but a tunnel, with a width of about five feet and a height of seven feet. The concrete layer of two or three inches in thickness formed the walls and arched roof, while the floor or bottom of the passageway was of dirt.

The tunnel was explored by Mr. Teborah and others for a distance of several hundred yards in both directions. Further progress was blocked by cavings which had occurred, filling the passage with dirt and debris.

One end of the explored tunnel crossed under the San Antonio river. In order to get a safe distance below the bed of that stream the tunnel was lowered several feet at the crossing point, flights of stone steps connecting the two levels. It is thought that the tunnel runs in almost a direct line between the blockhouse on the north to the Conception mission on the south, by the way of the Alamo, and if this is correct the river crosses above it no fewer than a dozen times.

The opening into the tunnel in the Alamo is situated in one of the cells of the monks. Centuries of disuse have caused it to fill with debris and no effort has ever been made to clean it been kept a secret from the tribesmen. It is considered probable that the real object of this tunnel connecting some, if not all, of the missions along the San Antonio river was to afford the monks an opportunity of visiting each other without the knowledge of the Spanish military and civil authorities, who made their headquarters in San Antonio.

If this theory is correct the monks did not lead the strict life of a recluse that has heretofore been generally supposed. Instead of being alone in their cells, they were probably off on a visit to some of their brothers at one of the other missions without the outside world being any wiser.

An exploration and rehabilitation of this ancient system of tunnels might lead to many interesting discoveries. It is claimed. In the imaginative minds of the people the treasure room of the Franciscan monks is situated at some point on this line of the underground passageway, and perhaps it may still contain a store of great wealth. The Mexican inhabitants of the little village situated adjacent to the missions have a superstitious dread of the mysterious tunnel. None of them could be induced to enter the dark and gressome passageway.

Mrs. Youngwife—Dear me, I've forgotten the size; but he wears a fifteen collar, so he would take a twenty-two hat, wouldn't he?

Doubt.

Doubt is the vestibule which all must pass before they can enter into the temple of wisdom; therefore, when we are in doubt, and puzzle out the truth by our own exertions, we have gained something that will stay by us, and which will serve us again. But if, to avoid the trouble of the search, we avail ourselves of the superior information of a friend, such knowledge will not remain with us; we have not bought but borrowed it.

It's Experience.

Sapient—Yess, several years ago I fell in love with a girl, but she we-fected me, doucher know—made a regular fool of me.
Miss Kneel—Now, that what I call a meanly shame. I've often wondered how it happened.

HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM.

It is An Internal Disease
And Requires An Internal Remedy.

The cause of Rheumatism and kindred diseases is an excess of uric acid in the blood. To cure this terrible disease this acid must be expelled and the system so regulated that no more acid will be formed in excessive quantities. Rheumatism is an internal disease and requires an internal remedy. Rubbing with Oil and Liniment will not cure, affords only temporary relief at best, causes you to delay the proper treatment, allows the poisons out of the system, comes up the stomach, regains the liver and kidneys, and makes you well all over. Rheumatism "strikes the root of the disease and removes its cause." This splendid medicine is sold by druggists and delivered by mail at 25¢ and 50¢ a bottle. In rubber form at 25¢ and 50¢ a package. What Everybody Says

The following is what it is said after the engagement is announced of almost any girl to almost any man:

The Girl Herself—I'd like to see Lillian's face when she reads the society news—If she ever does anything so intellectual as to read! She's always been perfectly crazy about Bob and she'll be utterly furious! She'll try to make people think she could have had him if she'd wanted him, but every one knows how she has chased him for months. I wonder if any one will send Arthur a paper. Poor boy! It will be such a blow to him! If ever a man was devoted to a girl he was to me. I'll always feel that I've ruined his life. He's one of the constant kind that never gets over such a disappointment. I wish I could decide whether I want a white satin or a crepe meteor wedding dress.

The Man Himself—Yes, they've got my name spelled right, after all. Gee! It's something like reading your own obituary notice, it's so formal! Anyhow, it's nobody's business but ours and I don't see any use of all this foolishness in print! Every idiot I know'll be around to see me to-morrow and tell me how to be happy though married! Well, it will settle McKenzie all right—he won't be sending Edith flowers now in that airy, oh-ye-got-a-chance-yet way of his. I always wanted to kick him. Robert Rogerson Fairburn—yes, that's me, all right. Well, life begins to look real and earnest now. I wonder if Ethel won't kind of think when she reads this that maybe she wasn't so bright after all running off and marrying Smith just because she had quarreled with me. She's had three years of pretty rough sledding with him. Of course it's all for the best so far as I'm concerned, but—I wonder!

Lillian—What! You don't tell me Bob is really engaged to Edith! Well, what do you think of that! It's most remarkable how men do these weird things when they are reduced to desperation, isn't it? Poor Bob! Of course Edith is a very nice girl—so capable and domestic and all that—but, my dear, did you ever see a girl so dowdy, and with so little style? I am sure Mrs. Noah did her hair up in precisely that same way in the days of the ark. Bob always did love pretty things—that's one reason he hung around me so much. Some men never notice a new gown or a smart hat, but he always does. No, I'm awfully fond of Bob, but mercy! I never could fall in love with him! Never! I suppose he realized it at last! Poor Bob!

Arthur—Hello! Edith's going to marry Bob Fairburn! Well, well! Nice little girl, Edith! Seems to me I had a crush on her myself once. She had the biggest brown eyes—no that wasn't Edith—it was Mabel. I remember now that Edith's eyes were blue. Or were they hazel? Where in creation did I put that tobacco? Hey—Ferguson! Got any tobacco?

McKenzie (who sent flowers to Edith)—One by one the roses fall! So Edith is going to shake us all for Bob Fairburn! It was worse the florist's bills, getting him mad. He seemed to think that every one was in a conspiracy to take his girl away from him. Edith's too quiet for me. But it paid to stand in with the family—her father's tips on the stock market were all right.

Ethel (who married Smith)—Oh, Teddy! Guess who's going to get married now—one of my old beaux! No, not that one—Bobbie Fairburn! Why, of course you remember him! He took me to that party where I first met you and was crazy mad because you had four dances! I used to think I rather liked him, but that was before you came along! I can't imagine why I ever was so foolish. Goodness! What if I had really married him! I had an awful time working up a quarrel with him so as to let him down easily. I hated to be downright brutal and drop him, so I seized on the first chance for a fight. It was awfully funny, now that I think of it! Well, Bobbie was a nice boy in his own way. I wonder who she is—I never heard of her.

Edith's Relatives (Individually and collectively)—Well, I suppose this means another wedding present. It was perfectly idiotic of grandfather to start that custom of always giving the brides in the family solid silver. Something less expensive would do exactly as well. I suppose Edith will expect a huge tray just because her cousin got one from us. Maybe we can make a sale. Anyhow, she is throwing herself away on Bob Fairburn. His family are simply nobodies. Well, she's 26 and I suppose she had to take what she could get.

Bob's Relatives—And when he had such a good chance to marry Senator Goldmine's daughter! And her shaky social position and her father and all! Why, he's simply burying himself. Bob always was stubborn. What can he see in Edith? She simply angled for him, that's all, and a man is so helpless! Poor Bob!

This country could no doubt be run a great deal better if it wasn't for the constitutional objection an American has to letting anyone run him.

Scald the Water Utensils. Utensils and troughs for food and water should be frequently scalded with boiling water, afterwards being thoroughly cleaned. Though a little extra work may be required, this cleaning up is a good preventive of many diseases and may save work and loss later.

Good Profit in Orchard. Many farmers consider their orchards as strictly a side issue. If they would give the trees proper attention they would derive a good profit.

A GOOD CLAIMER.

"I claim," said William Henry Jones, (Bill Jones the grocer man), "That I am just as much account as any other man."

"I claim I know my bis'is here," said he, with rising voice, "Es well as Carnegie knows his," said William Henry Jones.

"I claim that we are equals all. Each in a different line: An' Roosevelt, an' his career, An' I'm ahead uv mine. For all I ain't no college man. I don't make any bones Uv tallin' people what I claim," said William Henry Jones.

Then William claimed a good deal more, An' claimed it good an' strong; An' emphasized it with a look Of scorn upon the throng. Then some one nudged Jed Martin, who Said calm as ever wuz: "I've allus noticed 'claimin' The best thing William does!"

THE CAT.

Miss Oncewas—He is so thoughtful. He could not have sent me a more appropriate birthday present.

Miss Paprika—What was it? A volume of classics?

Less Majesty. A chap in Cincinnati seems More brave than other men; He has some words to say about The "overrated hen."

Followed Directions. "Gimme my dorg," said the tall one angrily, doubling up his fist. "Give yer de dog?" retorted the other one sarcastically. "Why, yer can whistle for it."

"Can, eh? Well, that's just what I'm going to do. Come on, purp." And the next moment the tall boy and the dog were vanishing around the corner.

Just Reversed. "What building is that over there?" they asked the guide. "Oh, that is the fish commission. They are always looking for water to stock."

"And the big building to the left?" "Oh, that is the stock exchange. They are always looking for stock to water."

Quite So. Mrs. Brooklyn—The idea of an educated man like Mr. Curious looking for a gas leak with a lighted candle! It is the last thing I would ever think of doing.

Mr. Brooklyn—The coroner says it was the last thing that Curious thought of doing.

Necessary Violence. "How did William get along at his friend's, when he played Santa Claus there?" "I understand he was decidedly put out."

"Indeed! What happened to have him put out?" "He set himself on fire."

Unseemly Interruption. He—My dear Miss Flip would you have me— She—I wouldn't have you as a precious gift.

He—You did not let me finish. I was going to ask you if you would have me such a fool as to want you to?

COULD STAND TORTURE.

She—Are you musical? He—Yiss; but if you feel like playing, don't mind me for an instant.

Ere You Flutter. The whole wide world's preparing. So the papers say, to fly: But before you do your flying You must be prepared to buy.

Just Before the Battle. "John," queried her husband's wife, "If some bold, bad man were to kidnap me, would you offer a reward?" "Sure thing," replied the wife's husband. "I always reward those who do me a favor."

A Sound Inference. "The saloon business ought to be very profitable." "Why so?" "Because its profits are all bar rain."

For the Housewife. Stuffed potatoes are made by mixing cheese and bread crumbs in with the contents.

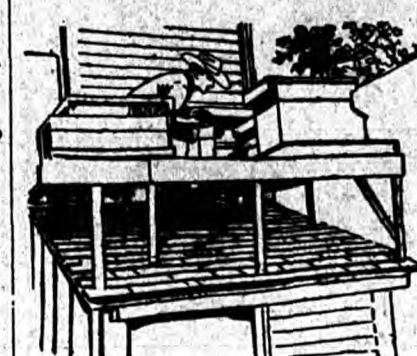

When boiling fresh potatoes try putting a sprig of mint in the water to give a delicious flavor to the vegetables.

Plaster figures in hard or alabaster finish are easily cleaned by dipping a stiff toothbrush in gasoline and scrubbing into all the crevices.

BEES ON TOP OF WOODSHED

Four Colonies Placed on Roof Make Profitable Returns to Owner—Not Troublesome.

For some time I have owned a couple of colonies of bees, but have done very little with them, writes Percy G. Sherman in Gleanings in Bee Culture. We have no ground space for them and beside we live in a double house with a neighboring house within 20 feet of us. Though such conditions are unfavorable for beekeeping the thought of putting the bees on the roof of a woodshed occurred to me, and, though the idea was laughed at, I built some framework and placed upon it my two hives with two additional.

Colonies on Woodshed.

Though the bees were just over the door as shown in the picture, the only time they gave us any trouble was after I had robbed them. Then they would be "numerous" for a short time. I reached the hive by way of an apple tree close by, or through the window above, in which the screen was hung on a hinge.

From this roof I took about 300 pounds of honey from four hives, (quite good returns from a roof seven feet square, ordinarily considered useless for producing anything).

length and width you want your gate, nail them across each other as shown in the illustration, making about three inch cracks.

Then take the same size and width pieces and double the crosses, nailing securely. A half pound of No. 8 nails will do the work.

Use ordinary light hinges. I use seven cross pieces, and then by doubling these, which is absolutely necessary, you will have to use 14, with four pieces lengthwise, making a total of 18 pieces. This makes a cheap and very durable gate. In making the latch, use any convenient method.

The Baby.

Too little attention has been given to baby, and his medicinal needs by the manufacturing chemists of today. It has usually seemed sufficient to manufacture a remedy for the disease of adults and direct that this same remedy be administered to children "according to age."

Realizing, as we do, the urgent need of a line of remedies of unquestionable merit for the treatment of such ailments, we have obtained the exclusive sale of Mother Kroh's Remedies.

Soothing Syrup,
Diarrhoea Remedy,
Worm Syrup,
Colic Remedy,
Croup Remedy,
Laxative Syrup,

SENATOR JESSE D. PRICE.

PRICE FOR GOVERNOR

Boom Started At Sharptown—A Most Enjoyable Day in His Honor Thursday.

The citizens gathering at Sharptown Thursday to honor State Senator Jesse D. Price for his record in the Senate and for his successful effort in obtaining a State appropriation for the bridge spanning the Nanticoke River at that point, was one of the largest gatherings of its character ever held in Wicomico County. Representative Democrats and Republicans from all over the Eastern Shore and from other parts of Maryland were present. Fifty automobiles were used in transferring people and before the reception and dinner an automobile parade was held, in which were all the machines, including those from Dorchester and Sussex County, Delaware, numbering more than a hundred, all beautifully decorated. All the business places of that little city were closed and points of interest were inspected by the 2000 visiting guests.

It was a red-letter day for the city. Over 1000 people were served with a first-class dinner, comprising all the good things from the land and water of the Eastern Shore, with plenty of Maryland fried chicken and corn bread and maddy beautiful Eastern Shore girls to care for the wants of the happy visitors.

The speakers of the day included Joseph P. Cooper, address of welcome; response, William M. Cooper; address, Congressman J. Harry Covington, former Senator M. V. Brewington, Senator Arthur P. Gorman, Jr., and Senator Jesse D. Price.

Mr. White, cashier of the Sharptown Bank struck the popular keynote of the visitors, when, after naming up the record made by Senator Price and his ability, urged him as a candidate for Governor, and the announcement met with tremendous and prolonged applause.

Mr. Covington took for his subject "Citizenship," and spoke at some length on the duty of the individual to the town, county and State, paying Senator Price some very high compliments in his rapid progress as a leading citizen and public officer and stated that he was sure that his future would be a very prominent one as a leading figure in public life.

Mr. Brewington spoke at some length upon the development of Wicomico county, and more especially the permanent road system, and also spoke in glowing terms of Senator Price.

Senator Gorman followed, and during his speech held the closest attention of the large audience. He spoke at considerable length upon the road construction in the State and the question of State aid to the counties in giving inter-communication by highways. He paid a high compliment to the energetic people of Sharptown, and he spoke of Senator Price in high terms and said that he foresaw a great future for him and assured the people of Wicomico county that the ability of Senator Price was not confined and known by his people only, but he was considered a high-class citizen throughout the State. He also said that Senator Price's leadership and statesmanship, demonstrated during the last session of the State Senate, would unquestionably be considered whenever the people as a whole or a party were looking for a man to fill a public trust without fear or favor.

Senator Price in a most able address thanked the people of Sharptown and the surrounding country for the grateful and large reception.

Many of the leading citizens at the reception and many of the people of Salisbury are talking of the boom of Mr. Price for Governor next year, saying that his unique place in the Democratic politics of Maryland would

MANY BUILDINGS

In Course Of Construction In Salisbury.

The growth of our little town, Salisbury, the little city of which all Wicomico Countians are justly proud is certainly phenomenal. At present the undertaking now under active operation, the project to dredge out the upper part of the Wicomico River will without doubt bring to our little city more commercial enterprises, since it will furnish more wharfage and more facilities for an active commercial campaign. This work is nearing very rapidly a completion. In anticipation of the completion of the momentous undertaking people are getting busy and building houses after houses in our little city. A busy reporter for this paper was out on a scouting expedition one day this week and enumerated in this town, north of Main Street somewhere in the neighborhood of sixty houses being built at that time, and understood from very reliable sources that this number will run in the ratio of 1 to 2 in comparison with the number under course of erection in the Northern part of the city. At this rate we can justly and conservatively put down the number of houses built in this city in a year as in the neighborhood of four hundred.

Not only have the people in Salisbury realized the thrift of the people in this county and in Salisbury, but the people of Baltimore have awakened from their lethargy with a shock that stirred them up to a certain extent, and are making rapid strides in the direction of securing the Eastern Shore trade, which at present is wending its way to Philadelphia. It certainly looks like business when the Attorney-General and the Public Utilities Commission of Baltimore are argued to the importance of the Eastern Shore trade, and have the matter of building a Railroad line from Baltimore through the Eastern Shore counties under consideration at present. And this commission generally means business, and very seldom fails in accomplishing its object when once in the field of labor. It is to be hoped that they will carry through their project of building another road down through this section as it will be better for all concerned, since it will furnish a little competition for the Penn. R. R. Company, which will cause them to put into effect a more efficient service for the public.

Not only have the people in Salisbury realized the thrift of the people in this county and in Salisbury, but the people of Baltimore have awakened from their lethargy with a shock that stirred them up to a certain extent, and are making rapid strides in the direction of securing the Eastern Shore trade, which at present is wending its way to Philadelphia. It certainly looks like business when the Attorney-General and the Public Utilities Commission of Baltimore are argued to the importance of the Eastern Shore trade, and have the matter of building a Railroad line from Baltimore through the Eastern Shore counties under consideration at present. CONGESTED MAIN STREET

A Question Which Will Require Some Future Provision.

One of the most difficult questions which has been confronting the Mayor and Council of Salisbury for some time past, the obstruction of Main Street on Saturday nights by teams and automobiles, will certainly have to be taken up and solved, and that very quickly for unless something is done to correct the present conditions, serious accidents are sure to happen on the street which may result in the loss of life, in which the City might figure in law suits for damages, and other complications.

This is a matter in which the merchants and the Mayor and Council do not agree. When the street was improved two years ago and the awnings along the North side of the street had to be reconstructed, it was then suggested by the Mayor and Council that the awning posts be removed, which would have settled the question of hitching teams on the street. The merchants objected to this move saying it would hurt their business and probably keep customers from the country from coming to Salisbury. The City authorities did not push the matter and the awning poles were allowed to remain. On Saturday nights from the News office to the pivot bridge, on the North side of Main Street there are a hundred or so teams hitched. The carriages project out to the middle of the street and it is impossible for pedestrians to get across the street or down Dock Street. On the South side of the street almost the entire length there will be a line of automobiles standing from sunset until midnight, thus making it impossible almost for a team to get through the narrow space left in the middle of the street. The sidewalks being also crowded by the thousands of people who are out shopping, doing business with the stores and going to the moving picture theaters, completely jams the streets and sidewalks until traffic is impossible.

Several times of late narrow escapes have been made from accidents by automobiles and frightened horses on the street and it is only a question of a short time when something serious will happen unless some different arrangements are made regarding traffic conditions on Main Street.

The whole matter seems to be up to the Mayor and Council. The solution of the problem will be the establishment of a public hitching pound somewhere near the center of the business section of the city, that will be large enough to accommodate the teams of the people from the country and where they can have free use of the same. The merchants will fight any move which carries with it the taxing of the country people for a place to hitch their teams. If a central place can be found, where a long shed could be built and hitching stands erected, the merchants would probably not object to an Ordinance making it an offense to leave a team on the street unattended. Such an arrangement would probably be welcomed by the customers and people from the country because their teams would then be protected from the weather.

The finding of a proper place to erect such a public pound will probably tax the Mayor and Council to their utmost, but it is certain that this question will have to be dealt with and some move should be made at once towards solving the problem.

In Baltimore, where the streets are much wider than in Salisbury, any person driving a team and stopping it on the left side of the Street or an autoist for the same is fined and in Berlin people are fined for hitching to telephone poles and no one kicks.

Until the Mayor and Council can make arrangements for a public pound the matter of congested streets can be solved by having all persons, hitching horses or stopping automobiles on the street, to make it compulsory that the teams shall be hitched parallel to Main Street. Heretofore it has been a habit to hitch the horses perpendicularly across the street which only leaves a very crooked channel of about six feet, where proper economy of space enough room could be furnished for two teams to pass in the center of the street, and there could be no chance for a kick against this.

Another idea for the present, would be to have the teams all face the head of Main Street and none to be hitched or no automobiles to be stopped on the South side of the Street.

SENATOR PRICE MAKES

Some Strong Points in His Address At Sharptown Thursday—In Part It Follows.

The people of Wicomico County have been good to me. You have twice elected me to places of honor and trust—once as Treasurer of your County, and again as Senator, and I can never repay you for the confidence reposed in me and the honor conferred upon me, and though I should live to be old, will never be able to do enough to repay you for your kindness to me, and no matter whether as an official or as a private citizen I am yours to command as long as I live. By this event today you have placed me under renewed obligation to strive to do more for you, if possible.

This great scheme of road building in the State is destined to contribute more to the general development of the State than any movement heretofore inaugurated and will be more universal in the benefits derived. It affects all classes of our people and all classes of property. It will prove a good investment to the people in the increased value of land, made more valuable by becoming more accessible to the markets of the world.

We have only begun in this great work, and we must not allow our interests to lax, or our enthusiasm to subside, until we can start in the mountains of Western Maryland on a stone road crossing the beautiful hills and valleys of Western Maryland, spinning across streams and rivers, and even the great Chesapeake itself, traversing county after county through this beautiful Eastern Shore until we are stopped by the waves of the great Atlantic.

Only a few years ago things that were regarded as legitimate in government officials is now known by the name of graft or in plainer terms theft. The people are more and more demanding honesty on the part of public officials and some of them with unsavory reputations in past years rewarded with even higher honors, but recently we are sending them to the penitentiary.

The time is short since it was thought to be legitimate for men of wealth to buy their way into office, and the man with the largest barrel secured the political prizes.

I am glad to say that all this is changing as is seen in our Corrupt Practices Act and Anti bribery laws, and in the purification of our election, and it is no longer considered respectable for a man to bribe his fellowmen.

And I am also glad to say it is fast becoming possible for a man of limited means, or even with no means at all to aspire to public office. This is as it should be, because bribery, an election strikes at the very foundation of our republican institutions and civilization and our dearly bought liberty.

A few years ago prize fighting and gambling were allowed to flourish everywhere, and we have but recently witnessed a brutal fight between a white brute and a black brute; but not until it had been fought out of one State into another. And I venture the prediction that the last of the race has taken place on American soil and that never again will the day on which we celebrate our national independence be thus desecrated.

In order to be fully prepared for the battles of liberty which must be constantly fought, if the people are to retain their title of sovereign, it is necessary for all of us who hold these liberties dear to participate actively in government. It is no light thing to be a citizen of this great republic, and it is no place for drones.

Many good men do not rightfully conceive their duty as citizens but hesitate to engage in political warfare and strife preferring to sit idly by and delegate to others, duties they should perform themselves. This is all wrong, and it is this very spirit and conception of citizenship which is responsible for many of the evils of our body politic today.

It is your duty, my young friends, to take an interest in the government of your State and of your country and of your country. You should be a politician, not in the sense of being an office seeker, but in keeping yourself informed regarding the needs of the government, and taking an active interest in the solution of all public questions.

Personally I favor the fullest expression of the people as to their choice of candidates and am in hearty sympathy with the principle of direct nomination as applied to political division in the State.

To my mind one of the greatest reforms that could be accomplished in this State would be to lessen the number of our elections, and hold them every two years instead of annually. It would save the people more money each year than any single reform that I can conceive of.

THE FLODDERS

Oh, brother Reggie's not like us. We have to work all day, And never mix up in a fuss. Nor get a special pay. We've got to hustle more or less And save up every cent. Because we others don't possess Artistic temperament.

Old Bill an' Bob an' Jake an' me Wear ordinary hair. An' each keeps busy as his be A-doin' of his share. But Reggie, easy-going lad, Ne'er thought of food nor rent, Because he was the one who had Artistic temperament.

He's owing alimony now, I wonder if he'll pay. He seems to start another row With creditors each day. An' though we often feel a lot Of solid discontent, We're kind o' glad we haven't got Artistic temperament.

CHARITY AT HOME.

"Are you going out to-night, John?" "Yes, my dear; we are going to form a charity organization society."

"Well, won't you give me five dollars before you go? You know charity begins at home."

When He Shakes Off the Chains. "McGooker, the first baseman, is puttin' up a big holder because baseball players are slaves."

"Is he? What's his salary?" "Forty-five hundred."

"Well, it is quite being a slave he has his old profession to fall back on."

"What's that?" "Washing bottles in a pop factory at seven dollars a week."

Lunch Counter Chaff. "I beg your pardon, sir. You seem to be having trouble with your spaghetti."

"Well, what if I am? It's none of your business!"

"Quite right. And none of my spaghetti, either. If it was, I'd try to put it down my throat instead of the back of my neck."

Perhaps. "I see where a minister somewhere says he will not marry any couple where the bridegroom has not at least an income of $2,000 a year. Why do you suppose he says that?"

"Perhaps he thinks the marriages he refuses to perform are not feasible."

All Negotiations Off. "What is your objection to the apartment?"

"Why there is not room in it to swing a cat."

"Oh, well, if you amuse yourself by swinging cats I don't believe I care to have you for a tenant."

WAS'NT PARTICULAR.

Spats—What brand of cigars do you smoke?

Boles: Oh! any kind anybody happens to have.

Been Trimmed. The milliner can now be classed With other rascals: She's known to "trim" some other things When she is trimming hats.

Always Behind. Blinks—That fellow Snailby is rather slow, isn't he?

Jenks—You have said it. Why, every time he stands around wondering what will happen he is three or four events behind.

Politics. "There's only one way I can think of to head off this suffrage movement," said the mere man.

"What is that?" asked his wife.

"Make the legal age for voting 25 instead of 21."

A Difference in Words. Willy—What's the difference between lunch and luncheon?

Willy—About $2.—Yale Record.

Shall We Rejoice

Gladness comes with a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed and assisted by the pleasant laxative remedy Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

TOOK GOOD FATHER'S FANCY

Simple Explanation of Incident That Was a Puzzle to the Housekeeper.

Father O'Connor was feeling uncomfortable.

A friend, calling, advised him to see a physician.

"My doctor," said his reverence, "is out of the city."

"But," said his friend, "there is Dr. Bailey."

"Yes," replied the priest, "but Dr. Bailey is a drinking man."

"Nevertheless," said the friend, "he can prescribe for you."

So Dr. Bailey was sent for, and after the diagnosis he said: "Father O'Connor, I find the pulse normal, the heart beats regular, and no organic difficulty whatever."

"But what ails me?" asked his reverence.

"Simply overworked," replied the doctor.

"And what, sir, is your remedy?" Thus asked Father O'Connor.

"Hot punch," responded Dr. Bailey. "I have two objections to that," said his reverence.

"In the first place I never try any punch, and secondly I would not like to have my housekeeper know that I use it."

"I can dispose of both objections," said the physician, "for I can furnish the punch and the hot water we'll ask Mary for will be for shaving."

So the priest consented, the doctor supplied the punch, secured the hot water, found two tumblers and prepared the remedy.

The doctor tried it and the good father inquired: "How is it, doctor?"

Said the doctor: "Father O'Connor, it is a drink fit for the gods."

The good father then experimented and greatly relished it.

It was a week later. Dr. Bailey met Mary, the housekeeper, in the street.

"Mary," asked the doctor, "how is his reverence?"

"Doctor," said Mary, "his reverence, is, as well, yes, intirely so, but there is this that's peculiar about the case of his reverence ever since the afternoon when you came asking for water: Father O'Connor has been shaving himself ten times a day—Sunday Magazine of the Los Angeles Herald.

Irishman's Clever Trick.

The story of how an Irishman overreached a Jewish broker was related at a Glasgow court recently.

The Jew owns two brokers' shops which are situated immediately facing each other in the same street, so that, during the absence of his wife, who attends to one, the Jew can keep his eye on both shops.

One night James Duffy visited the first shop and sold the Jew several articles of his attire for sixpence. While the Jew was crossing to his other establishment Duffy lifted a kitchen chair, which he a few minutes later carried into the Jew's second shop, and coolly offered to sell for a shilling. The Jew said he could not give more than tenpence.

Duffy accepted, remarking that "times were hard." A neighboring broker, who had seen Duffy's movement, informed the Jew, who, on examining his purchase, was amazed to discover that he had bought his own chair.

The magistrate said the story sounded more like comic opera than a police court case, and passed a sentence of 60 days.

Tragedy of a Joke.

An extraordinary thing happened at Glasgow, N. J., one day recently, which proves once more that truth is often stranger than fiction.

A man named Wesley Sweet was owing a merchant, Eugene Doughty, a little bill of 50 cents, and told the clerk that if he was alive he would certainly call and pay it that night. He failed to show up. "I guess Sweet must be dead," said the clerk, to Mr. Doughty, in a jocular way. Next morning Mr. Doughty and his wife were at the store, when in walked Mr. Sweet.

"Why, hello!" said Mr. Doughty. "I thought you were dead."

"Why, no, I'm not," replied Sweet. "But you are," jokingly replied Mr. Doughty. "You are a man of your word, and you said last night that if you were alive you were coming in to see me; so you must be dead."

Just then a friend of Mr. Doughty's came in, and as he turned to greet him Mr. Sweet reeled suddenly and fell dead.

The Growth of Languages.

There is an interesting and from the national point of view a satisfactory statement in the statistics lately published in an Italian paper concerning the growth of modern languages, says the Westminster Gazette. According to the figures given the English language, which a century ago was spoken by 20,000,000 individuals, is now the means by which no less than a hundred millions give expression to their views of things. French, on the other hand, has spread less than any of the chief European languages, for whereas it was used by 34,000,000 men at the beginning of the nineteenth century, it is now spoken by 46,000,000. Seventy million individuals speak German to-day, against 36,000,000 a hundred years ago; 69,000,000 Russian, against 30,000,000; 32,000,000 Italian, against 18,000,000; and 44,000,000 Spanish, against 30,000,000.

A Great Help.

"So you think you will go into the American matrimonial market," said Miss Cayenne.

"I shall marry an heiress, if that is what you mean," said Count Pucanah.

"I have a title to be admired and envied."

"True. And a good title goes a long way toward making a best seller."

How It Happened.

"How's this?" remarked the tall office boy with the newspaper. "Here is where an educated monkey ran a sewing machine."

"Aw, that's nothing," sneered the short office boy. "Yesterday I saw a mouse run a typewriter."

"Come on! What are you giving me? Where did this happen?"

"Right in the old man's office. The mouse came from under the desk and made for the pretty typewriter, and she's running yet."

WHEN DUTY CALLED

MASSACHUSETTS HERO PROMPT
IN HIS ANSWER.

Gallant Deed of Long Ago, Whereby Many Lives Were Saved, Is Recalled—Daniel Collins Graves Deserves Monument.

Thirty-five years ago on May 16
next a man whose sense of danger and love of his fellow man were well developed achieved immortal fame in western Massachusetts. His name was Daniel Collins Graves. For something like a year his name was on every tongue in the country. He was the subject of pulp and platform orators.
John Boyle O'Reilly of the Boston Pilot, immortalized him in stirring verse, which included these stanzas:

No song of a soldier riding down
To the rising east from Winchester town;
No song of a time that shook the earth
With the nations' throes at a nation's birth;
But the song of a brave man, free from fear
As Sheridan's self or Paul Revere; Who risked what they risked, free from
trife,
And his promise of glorious pay—his life.
When heroes are called for, bring the crown
To this Yankee rider; send him down
On the stream of time with the Curtiss old.
His deed, as the Roman's, was brave
and bold,
And the tale can as noble a thrill
awake,
For he offered his life for the people's sake.

And then the country seemed to forget, but Graves remained the hero of his section and his death at the age of 70 in his old home village of Williamsburg brings him once more into the public eye. Mill river, the most eastern branch of the Westfield, had been dammed three miles above Williamsburg, thus securing an additional head of 24 feet for power purposes. Above a long, narrow valley, thickly dotted with villages, hung a body of 1,000,000 gallons of water.

Collins Graves had been on an early morning errand on the morning of May 16, 1874. As he drove into his yard a neighbor hurried past shouting: "The dam is giving way!" Instantly Graves knew what this would mean. He tore the harness from his horse, sprang to its bare back and dashed down the valley on the run, shouting the alarm and telling the inhabitants to take to the high ground.
Fifteen hundred lives were at stake and Graves' horse was not of the racing type and ill-fitted with wind and limbs to make time against a roaring cataract with a fall of 100 feet to the mill, but he served for all but 150.
A large part of Williamsburg with a button factory, woolen mill, saw and grist mill were carried away. A still mill at Skinnerville and 15 houses were swept along. At Haydenville the brass works and several dwellings,
the entire village of Leeds was destroyed and considerable damage was done at Florence and Northampton.
The financial loss was $1,500,000. The Mill river disaster was a notable event in history until the more palling flood occurred at Johnston, Pa. Daniel Collins Graves deserves a monument to perpetuate the memory of his famous ride.

Broke Down in Maiden Speeches.
Of the many members of the British parliament who have broken down in their maiden speeches there is no more distressing instance than that of Gibson Craig in 1877, thus graphically described by Disraeli: "Gibson Craig, of whom the Whigs had hopes, rose,
stared like a stuck pig, and said nothing. His friends cheered, he stammered, all cheered; then there was a dead and awful pause, and then he said, and that was his performance."

Another broken down in a maiden speech was by a happy thought turned into a success. This was by Lord An-ley, who was a staunch supporter of a bill to grant the services of counsel to prisoners indicted for high treason, but when he rose to make his maiden speech he found himself devoid of language. The house cheered encouragement. At last he managed to blurt out: "If Mr. Speaker, sir, I who now rise only to give my opinion on the bill, am so confounded that I am unable to express what I proposed to say, what may be the condition of that man who without any assistance is pleading for his life and is apprehensive of being deprived of it?" The elaborate speech he had prepared would have been less effective.

False Pretenses.
Mrs. Jones—These tradespeople are so unreliable in their representations.
You cannot place any dependence in their advertisements at all.
Mrs. Brown—Poor dear! What's the matter now?
Mrs. Jones—Why, when we bought our automobile we paid an extra sum to have one of Mr. Valentine's shock absorbers attached to the axles.
Mrs. Brown—And did it work?
Mrs. Jones—Did it work? Why, when Mr. Jones was out along the other day the machine slid over a 20-foot embankment and turned turtle.
Poor dear Mr. Jones was shocked terribly. Mr. Valentine's attachment did not work at all. It is perfectly shameful.—Rochester Herald.

Success.
Brother Elbow—How are you getting along in his new job as a Pullman portah?
Brother Smoot—Fine, sah! Dat kin make a few passes and put me dust on a pussion dan he brushes off and it didn't take him two weeks to learn to aim a do' in de way dat body but a railroad man kin aim in Yassah, Grace is sho' de'st gant.—Pack.

PRICE FOR GOVERNOR.

The suggestion made at Sharptown on Thursday's celebration, that an ideal candidate for Maryland's next Governor could be found in Senator Fiske, is one that will be received here with great enthusiasm: and we believe that the Democratic party would make a wise choice in selecting him as the standard bearer of his party
next year.

His record in the Senate has been one that he and his friends can point to with pride and his ability in his lying position as floor leader in the Senate fully demonstrated his qualifications as a masterly leader.

With his acknowledged ability, his clear record, his high character, and his likeable personality, together with his well-known campaign qualities, makes an ideal man for the Democratic of this State to rally around in the next state campaign.

EASTERN SHORE TRADE.

All Eastern-shoremen are very much interested in the discussion now going on in reference to the trade between this section and Baltimore City, and the suggestions that are being made as to the best methods to adopt in order to draw these two closer together.

In regard to the trucks and other similar crops our people in this immediate section are paying but little attention to this, as it is well known that under any circumstances these would go to the northern cities where they will bring a better price. When it comes to freight rates from Baltimore, that is another matter, and a lower rate would do much to encourage our people in buying their goods in their home city. When it comes to passenger service then all would enjoy if any way could be found to lessen the time between points on the shore and Baltimore. The B. O. and A. R. R. has expressed a willingness at least some of its officials have,
to co-operate in any possible way to accomplish this much to be desired end.

The Bay is a natural barrier between the Eastern and Western Shore and it would seem that the key to the situation will be some plan to lessen the time taken to cross it. If it was a feasible thing to bridge the bay,
then this would be the best possible solution. If not then to make the time shorter, the crossing might be made at the narrowest practical point and then very fast ferry boats put on to make the trip. It is a pretty big problem, and one which the railroads will be glad to see solved.

Girl In The Moon IS Eski- mos' Belief.

Prof. Wilhelm Verbeek returned to New York aboard the Florist of the Mad Cross Line, after spending the winter in North Labrador, where he studied the folk lore, traditions and ethnology of the Eskimos. He left Indianapolis late last fall, and in company with Frederick Forman, of Grand Rapids, Mich., reached Labrador before the close of navigation. Prof.
Verbeek spent the winter among the Inuits.

"According to their belief," he says, "there is a girl in the moon, instead of a man. A young Inuit named Hoop-Loo-Mik became angry at his sister, Hoop-Mah-Nah, because she laughed at his efforts to paddle his canoe through the broken ice. He gave chase and she fled.

"Over hills and ice she ran, with increasing speed, until she came to one particularly steep hill. At the top of it she shot off into space, and did not stop until the moon got in her way, and she's been there ever since."

The Eastern Shores Trade.

The business people and residents of the Eastern Shore have at length become aroused against the unjust discrimination of the railroads travers-ing the Eastern Shore and diverting the bulk trade to Philadelphia.
What has just been undertaken to bring about a change in favor of the Eastern Shore should have been inaugurated a long time ago, and now the facilities wanted would be an established fact.

Baltimore is logically the centre of the trade of the Eastern Shore, it because the commercial and mercantile life of Maryland, and all the facilities necessary to meet the requirements of the people of the Eastern Shore should be directed toward the commercial city.

$32,000 FEE TO WOMAN

Lawyer—Largest Ever Granted A Female Attorney In America.

Mrs. Mary E. Miller, a woman lawyer of Chicago, won a decided victory
before Judge Gibbons in the Circuit Court, when, after deliberating an hour and a half, the jury that heard her suit for $50,000 attorney fees against the three Lloyd brothers,
grand-sons and heirs of John Cross,
once Lieutenant Governor of Illinois, voted for a verdict of $32,500. This is the largest fee ever granted, a woman lawyer in America. The case had been on trial nearly three weeks, and arguments were completed this week.

Mrs. Miller was retained by the Lloyd brothers to conserve and protect their younger brother, John Cross Lloyd, of Boston, who was supposed to be under the control of a designing woman known as the "college widow." Attorney Henry Scott, representing the brothers, declared in his argument that John Cross Lloyd is still with the woman.

Mrs. Miller contended that John Cross Lloyd, while a student at Harvard, had become enamored of a woman, and had conveyed several hundred thousand dollars to her. The lawyer said she recovered much of this property and kept him from squandering much more. Mrs. Miller also showed that she had administered the affairs of the estate in a business-like manner and that the property had increased in value during her administration. Several leading members of the Chicago bar testified that her charge of $50,000 for legal services against the estate was reasonable and fair.

Judge Gibbons, in instructing the jury, ordered that Mrs. Miller should receive the same consideration as a man. "If she has performed valuable services for her clients," said the Judge, "she is worthy of her hire."

BLACK LIST ON

"Medicine"—Revenue Officials Give Out
List Of Legal Stock.

A class of people of this section of the Eastern Shore were delivered a hard blow recently when Commissioner of Internal Revenue Cabell delivered a list of intoxicants, essences and medicines that can be handled by druggists hereafter. Some beverages have been used by "topers" as intoxicants, when the real article could not be obtained from "wet" territory.

The Government officials said they believed many of those preparations
now on the market were concocted mainly for sale in "dry" territory where the prohibition laws made it impossible to obtain legally anything of over two per cent alcohol.
In the past this territory has been flooded with essences, medicines, etc.
In this class of forbidden goods the druggists will be compelled to get a Government revenue license to sell to the trade, and further they will be compelled to comply with the local county law and sell nothing containing alcohol without a physician's prescription. Secretary MacVeagh will issue an order fixing the standard of medication to all the revenue officers in this territory, and all druggists will be compelled to barter this class of goods under an Internal Revenue license.

Death of Mrs. Ellis.

The many friends and relatives of Mrs. Rebecca Ellis, widow of the late Thos. Ellis, were shocked and grieved to learn of her death on Tuesday, July 19th. Mrs. Ellis was the mother of Mr. John T. Ellis of this city.

The deceased was 87 years of age
and is survived by three children:
Mrs. Joseph Doward, of Newark, N.
J.; Mr. John T. Ellis, of this city, and Mr. Ernest Ellis, of Wilmington,
Del., and several grand children.
Funeral services were held at her late home Thursday afternoon at three o'clock, conducted by Rev. Mr. Heale.
The remains were interred in Parsons Cemetery. We extend to the bereaved relatives our heartfelt sympathies.

Havre de Grace Neighbors Thought He Lived There.

Another early evening robbery was committed at Havre de Grace Monday night when the home of E. C. Wells was entered between 8 and 9 p. m. during the absence of the family. So far only $2 is missing. Two ladies living across the street saw a man enter the yard and mistaking him for the young man of the house, called to him, but received no reply. Later he was seen running with a light. An alarm was given but only two men were available, one of these being an elderly gentleman.

While the younger man went for more help the intruder made good his escape.

THE FATAL EXCHANGE

By REV. CHAS. D. W. BROWER

Pastor of Fifty-Second Avenue Congregational Church, Seattle, Ill.

For what shall I profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?

Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?—Mark 8: 36-37.

Few words are more familiar in the business world than profit and loss. Men go into business for profit; it is the object of their thought, of their toil. They deal in the good which they believe will produce profit, and if anything is handled at a loss it is for the sake of maintaining a market or for some future advantage. Will it pay? Is the question ever on the lips, or, What is there in it for me?

Now, one of the striking characteristics of Jesus Christ was that he looked back of the things that are seen, back of the material to the unseen and spiritual. He knew absolutely the right value of things. Money had a value, pleasure had its place, food must be considered to its degree of necessity, but these all were secondary to the soul. The person using these things was of infinite value. We deal too much with the superficial, we are taken up with the things that perish, we become involved with the lesser, even worthless things of life; Jesus Christ never.

He was the light of the world and sorely did the work of his day and of our day need the illumination which he brings to the relations of life. We need to see as he saw if we are to be saved from fatal mistakes. So in this matter of profit and loss Christ realized perfectly the comparative value of the soul and the things to which men gave their thought and their lives, and it was out of his infinite wisdom that he uttered the warning conveyed in the question: "What shall I profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

Men were making the fatal exchange every day when the question was asked, and he who came to be their Saviour saw and felt as no one else. His question implied that the soul of man has a greater value than the whole world of things.

The soul is the immortal part of man. We understand by it here the spirit, which has a body. We are children of God, with capacities for knowing him, fellowshiping with him, growing in grace and knowledge, serving his cause, rejoicing in heavenly places. There can be friendship with Christ here and forever, companionship everlasting with all who love him. So the spirit of man has capacity for degradation, suffering, uselessness in separation from the Father.

And man has free will and can choose the evil, throw himself away in quests of worthless and destroying things. The loss of the soul is a theme on which we naturally dread to dwell. The awfulness of such a tragedy is beyond our powers to express. But Christ, who is infinite wisdom and love, solemnly warned men of the danger of such a loss.

The soul is lost when it is away from its place with Christ, like the sheep that wandered away from the flock. It is lost when it is out of service, useless, doing no good in the world, like the coin that rolled away. The soul is lost when it is indifferent to the Father and off in some far country of evil wasting its strength and goodness in shame, soon with remorse to be seeking for food with the swine, like the prodigal son.

We do not have to look far for examples of the folly of men in exchanging their souls for that which brings no profit, but only loss. There was the rich young ruler, who went away sorrowful from Jesus when the Teacher showed him the way to eternal life as the way of love of others. He loved his money too much. There was Judas, who, for a paltry handful of silver, betrayed his Lord. Did it pay? There was Pilate, who preferred power and reputation and applause to justice. He saved these things for a few days and has been branded as infamous ever since. In the early history of the church, Ananias and Sapphira made the same exchange—for money. Paul writes of one who had been his companion and had known the truth. "Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world."

If one gained the whole world what would be the profit if the soul interests were forgotten, God ignored? A dozen men we are told control the transportation facilities of the United States. Suppose it were three, or one? Unless the life is Christ's, what shall it profit? Envy, hatred, sickness, death, apart from the fear and love of God, what is the profit? Shall a man exchange his soul for lust, for fame, his health of body and soul for things which nourish not the immortal part?

But Christ came to seek and to save the lost. He was tempted like as we are, but never yielded. The devil offered him the whole world, fame, pleasure. Christ sympathizes, yearns over us. We all have sinned, but in him is forgiveness and strength for the new life.

The fundamental work of Christ's church is to preach and to witness to the gospel of his grace; to herald the truth that by repentance and faith in him the soul once exchanged for the lusts and pleasures and love of money can come back to the Father and be restored to beauty and service.

Why He Didn't

Two gentlemen, shooting in Scotland, sat down to lunch. On taking a bottle of whiskey out, one of them noticed that the cork had been tampered with, and, knowing the character of their guests, at once accused him of having been at the lunch basket.

"I fear that you have been drinking the whiskey, Sandy."

"No, no, sir, I'm not, for the cork wouldn't come out!"

WORK WEAKENS THE KIDNEYS.

Doan's Kidney Pills Have Done Great Service For People Who Work in Salisbury.

Most Salisbury people work every day in some strained, unnatural position, bending constantly over a desk, riding on jolting cars, doing laborious housework; lifting, reaching or pulling, or trying the back in a hundred and one other ways. All these strains tend to wear, weaken and injure the kidneys until they fall behind in their work of filtering the poisons from the blood. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, put new strength in bad backs. Salisbury cures prove it.

A. R. Lobner, 318 William Street, Salisbury, Md., says: "I feel safe in saying that anyone who uses Doan's Kidney Pills according to directions will find relief from kidney trouble. For at least thirty years my kidneys were disordered and as I am obliged to work in a draught and do much heavy lifting, it was hard for me to escape kidney ills. My back often became very weak and lame and the kidney secretions annoyed me by their irregularity in passage. It was finally my good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a supply at White's and Leonard's drug store. They brought me prompt relief. I have used them off and on during the past ten years, always finding great benefit."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and taken no other.

"Tabernacle Shadows Of The Better Sacrifices."

This little book is not for the ordinary readers, but most decidedly it is what every advanced Bible student and earnest Christian should possess and study thoroughly. It costs but ten cents, is illustrated and draws its lessons on the higher life from the types and shadows of Israel's typical Atonement Day and other sacrifices. Surely every earnest Christian should have this little book and find in it a mine of spiritual wealth, health and refreshment. Order it now from the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

rests, towel rack, and every up-to-date feature imaginable. You want it, because it will cook any dinner and not heat the room. No heat, no smell, no smoke, no coal to bring in, no ashes to carry out. It does away with the drudgery of cooking, and makes it a pleasure. Women with the light touch for pastry especially appreciate it, because they can immediately have a quick fire, simply by turning a handle. No half-hour preparation. It not only is less trouble than coal, but it costs less. Absolutely no smell, no smoke, and it doesn't heat the kitchen.

The nickel finish, with the turquoise blue of the enameled chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

Something New in Art

Not so new either. For KARNAK BRASS found its inception in the Temple of Karnak, built by Seti I on the banks of the Nile, some fifteen centuries ago.

This old temple inspired one of the designers of the Benedict Studios to reproduce in articles of modern utility the ideal features of Egyptian ornamental art.

Each piece of KARNAK BRASS is Egyptian in form and decoration; the decorative motifs being the Lotus Flower, Isis, the Sphinx, the Papyrus, Scarabaeus.

This class of goods has true artistic merit and is of a substantial make that insures its lasting a lifetime.

The list includes:

Vases Smokers' Sets
Candle Sticks Tobacco Jars
Candelabra Clocks
Jardiniere Fern Dishes
Jewel Boxes Book Ends, Etc.

Fiftieth Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts.

On Monday, July 18, Mr. and Mrs. J. Massey Roberts, of Clara, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. They are the devoted parents of seven children, all of whom are married, the grand parents of ten and great grand parents of two. One son and one daughter were deprived by sickness, of sharing the pleasure of this festivity. Those present with their families were his oldest son, Wm. S. Roberts, of Jestersville, Mrs. Andrew B. Phillips, of Quantico, Mr. John B. Roberts, of Princess Anne, Mr. Henry W. Roberts and Mrs. John F. Phillips, of Clara. The other guests included Mrs. Emily Kennerly, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Gillis Twilley, of Quantico, Miss Anna Roberts, of New York, Hon. and Mrs. H. James Messick, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Travers, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Travers, of Nanticoke, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Roberts, of Princess Anne, Hon. and Mrs. John W. Wingate, Dr. and Mrs. Wm. Cassin, Mrs. Lottie Robertson and son, Mr. G. Harry Robertson, of White Haven, Mr. and Mrs. Jno. A. Hearn, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Robertson, E. C. Robertson, Mrs. S. T. Robertson, Mrs. Fannie White, Miss Jane Roberts, of Clara, Mr. Jay Inaley, of Tyaskin.

Refreshments consisting of loaves and fruits were served in their spacious dining room which was tastefully decorated for the occasion. The color scheme was yellow with a touch of white and green. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts received many beautiful presents also many letters and telephone messages of congratulation from friends who were deprived of the privilege of being present by the inclemency of the weather.

For fifty years they have lived congenially together. Alternatively they have had sunshine and clouds, but their life has been one of pleasure and prosperity mingled with misfortune and tears. Many heart-aches yet much happiness for fifty years.

This anniversary finds each the same old sweethearts. True to their vow in 1860 to love "till death shall them part."

The parents of seven children, each when infants regarded a treasure. The companionship with us now seems to give them much pleasure.

The rearing of us must have been a great burden and care, for often, so often I have found them in prayer.

And I know they were pleading with Him on the throne, for special blessings on us and our dear, sweet home.

Father has taught us honesty, industry and how to save. With the unceasing love of a heart true and brave.

Mother's patience and tenderness we never can measure. In her purity and sweetness sacrificing for our pleasure.

Both have walked uprightly in the "straight, narrow way." Setting us an example of integrity and goodness each day.

We feel very grateful our circle has not had a sever. May the Lord continue to bless us and keep us forever.

In our hearts we are praising God from whom blessings flow. And praying that each of us the joys of heaven may know.

May our dear parents be spared to us many years more. And may their declining days be happier than ever before.

—Loretta Roberts Phillips.

THE CITY COUNCIL

The Proceedings At Last Monday's Session.

The City Council was in session Monday evening and transacted the following business:

Building permits were granted as follows: To R. G. Richmond, dwelling on Race Street; to E. P. Downing, concrete factory on Imbelle St. The City Solicitor was instructed to prepare an Ordinance for licensing automobiles and vehicles carrying passengers to and from the Fair Grounds, and regulating the price to be charged passengers.

An Ordinance was passed, and approved by the Mayor, requiring all property owners on East Camden St. to lay cement sidewalks 30 feet wide, to conform to the new grade. The clerk was instructed to notify property owners to do this work within 30 days from time of serving of notice by Street Supervisor.

A delegation of property owners on East Chestnut Street was before the Council to protest against widening said street for the present.

The appointment of Mr. Wm. D. Long as assistant Policeman, to succeed the late James Kennerly, was confirmed by Council. The salary was fixed at $35 per month, an advance of $5. The salary of the Chief of Police was also raised from $35 to $40 per month.

The Council refused to confirm the appointment of Irving Russell as Chief of Police. With this exception all of Mayor Bonds appointments have been confirmed by Council.

The Husband Explains

She threw the letter on the table and looked over at her husband.

"That's just like a woman," she said. "Anybody would suppose that I had been trying to do her a mean trick from the tone of her letter, and I thought I was doing her a favor."

He went right on reading the newspaper, devoting the rest of his attention to his coffee.

"Don't take enough interest in my affairs to read the letter, I suppose," she went on, getting dangerously near the teary stage. "Well, you needn't, then."

"You just tell me what's in it, dear," he said. "That will be sufficient."

She seemed mollified and picked up the rejected letter.

"I can tell you what's in it," she went on. "It's just in answer to what I wrote her about the flat. You know Jenny Smith told me that she would always like to take this flat off our hands if we were tired of it; that she had never seen a flat anywhere so good; that she would regard it as a great favor if we did let her know and that she wanted just such an apartment."

"I did that and now she writes back that she is very appreciative of my offer, but that under the circumstances she thinks she will not be able to take it off our hands, much as she would like to be of service to us. She writes as if I had implored her to rent it as a great favor to me."

"That's just the way with people when you ask them to do what they have said they are very anxious to do, once they get the idea that they are doing you a favor. It's just the same thing that happened when I asked the Joneses if they wanted my cook."

"Every time they came to the house last winter they used to rave over Emily. They would be so happy if only they could get such a cook, they said."

"Yet when I wrote to them that we were giving up keeping house and that they could have her if they wanted, they seemed to be actually embarrassed about the matter, as if they were having a servant forced on them willy nilly."

He had not indicated any great interest at the beginning, but listened more attentively as his wife's narrative proceeded. Then he put down the paper and began to talk himself.

"Don't you remember the time you bought that old side table at auction and Mary asked you to let her have it if you ever wanted to sell it?"

"She nodded."

"Don't you recall also how patronizing she was when you told her that because you didn't want to crowd your dining room? Surely you have not forgotten how she tried to wriggle out of taking it just as if you were determined to hold her to a bargain."

She admitted that she had not forgotten a detail of this transaction. Then she also admitted how provoked she had been when her cousin Helen had asked her to give her the refusal of her old horse Sally if she decided to sell her when they went to town in the autumn.

"Then how can you," he asked, "with these things fresh in your mind, put yourself in the way of being patronized again in such fashion? You ought to learn that what they do not possess often seems very attractive to persons so long as it remains the property of others. It is quite a different thing when it becomes attainable to them."

"It almost invariably happens that they have ceased to care for it and it is only human nature for them to give themselves the satisfaction of showing the owners that they are now in possession of the situation. So remember that trait the next time you offer to anybody a similar kindness."

A Monkey Trick.

Curator Raymond L. Titmars, of the New York zoo, was praising the intelligence of monkeys.

"A Philadelphia man," he said, "was hurrying out Powellton avenue one afternoon when, all of a sudden, an organ grinder's little monkey dropped dead. The poor grinder's grief was pitiful. The Philadelphia touched, gave him a half dollar and hastened away."

"An hour later, returning through Market street, he saw the same organ grinder, and, just as he passed, the monkey again dropped dead, and the grinder's grief was even more pitiful than before."

"The Philadelphia gave a loud laugh. The grinder, recognizing him, laughed, too, but made no motion to return the half dollar."

Two Sides to Great Actress.

Mrs. Siddons was on and off the stage, "two different people." On the stage she was a pythoness, nightly hypnotized into passionate emotions by the sight of the drop curtain and the boards, says a writer. In her home she was, at all events to the casual observer, more than a thought too much a mere mother and British matron, loving to be seen and of good report, shut in the tower of an unimaginative nature. Had she not been an actress she would have made (such an observer might have said) an ideal bishop's wife.

WOMEN CAN KEEP SECRETS

Chicago Magistrate of Experience Offers Testimony to Shatter Old Tradition.

A Chicago police magistrate, after long years of observation and experience, declares unequivocally that women keep secrets much more surely than men, jokesmiths, philosophers and alleged history to the contrary notwithstanding. He avers that in the smaller things, the relatively unimportant matters, it may be true that woman is the more loose tongued, that she is naturally somewhat gossip, and her domestic status, uneventful as is usually is, inclines her to small talk. But when it comes to the things that actually count—the vital, compelling, tremendous things—woman is so far beyond man that comparisons are all but ridiculous. Moreover, he says that nine out of ten police officers know this to be true, whatever the aspect of the question may be in other walks of life.

Doubtless it is all as the Chicago man says. It seems likely enough, when contemplated in connection with certain characteristics of woman that are universally admitted. Take the matter of bearing physical pain, for instance. There is scarcely a physician anywhere who will not tell you that the average woman will bear without a murmur pain that would drive men to suicide. Woman shrinks shudderingly from the slightest impending danger, but she faces a real crisis when it is upon her in a way man rarely rises to.

If we could get the wives, sisters, mothers and sweethearts of Chicago to tell their secrets, we should soon clear up hundreds of seemingly impenetrable mysteries that have baffled us for many years. But we cannot do it. Methods that drag the miserable truth from men, time and again, fail utterly when applied to women. There may be a way to get them to tell the secrets we know they possess, but we have never discovered it, and never expect to.

All of which seems to ring true. It is so like a woman, anyhow!

Romance of an Earthquake.

As a result of the late disastrous earthquake at Messina a pointman at the Messina station, Scarinelli by name, has become the possessor of two wives. In the catastrophe he lost his wife and children, and every effort to find them, either living or dead, was fruitless. He gave up all hope, became resigned to his fate, and ten months later married a beautiful Messinese. The other day a well-dressed woman arrived at the Messina station and inquired for Scarinelli. He went to her, and was surprised to find himself in the presence of his first wife. She explained that she had been badly wounded, and had been rescued by sailors and taken to a Russian cruiser. She had been taken in the vessel to Russia, whence she had just returned, her recovery having been a very long one. As she did not know how to write, and had not succeeded in making herself understood in Russian, she had been unable to send any news of herself.

Wedding Guests in Masque.

Poulbot, a Paris caricaturist, having determined upon so commonplace a step as getting married, decided that he would be married in no commonplace way. He asked all his friends to the wedding, but there was a sine qua non condition attached to the invitation. You had to go with "made-up head" or you would not be admitted. Preferably you were requested to make up as a country cousin at a village wedding. Some guests arrived as ancient peasants, others as village idiots. There were several bluff squires and rural elderly gentlemen with means, a number of retired officers and exuberant uncles from the south, besides fierce military gentlemen from the hottest stations of Algeria. The only persons who wore their natural physiognomies were the couple most concerned. They had drawn the line at making up themselves as a burlesque bride and a comic bridegroom.

Life Saved by Handcuffs.

Handcuffs were put to an unusual use at Hull one day recently, being instrumental in saving the life of Walter Fairweather, skipper of Leeds barge, from drowning. Fairweather was going aboard his vessel when he fell into the dock. The incident was noticed by a constable, who jumped on board the vessel from the quay, and, leaning over the side, managed to fasten the handcuffs on Fairweather's wrist. By this means the skipper was held above water until assistance arrived and he was pulled out.—London Mail.

Doing His Best.

"Do you whistle or sing or recite?"
"No."
"Can you do nothing to entertain the guests?"
"Well, I can name all the vice-presidents we've ever had. The accomplishment has been mentioned as unusual."

Gratifying His Taste.

"You take a great deal of interest in gardening?"
"Well," answered Mr. Crosslots, "I send for all the seed catalogues. It is not so much that I like gardening as that I enjoy art and literature."

Damon to His Pythias.

PLANNING A GARDEN

"Just what father will say I have no idea," began Doris, swinging a pink-checked sun-bonnet over the porch railing. "But it was his letter that really started me. So he is partly to blame if he doesn't quite approve. And he does want me to stay outdoors."

"Everybody finds me out here, and I don't pretend to apologize for enveloping aprons and garden tools. I've cringed up enough porch furniture so that I can entertain people and now I don't interrupt things to dress. Out here gingham does very nicely."

"It is a charming porch," remarked Louise, with a slight shiver, as she carefully rolled off her delicate gloves and lifted her fawn-gray skirts slightly. "But the yard— isn't it a bit dirty, even for gingham?"

"Now, for goodness' sake, don't be snobbish," pleaded Doris. "It's lovely. And weren't you the very person who advised me to give up the winter term at school and come home, where I could get well making flower gardens? That was the very day father came for me with the news that this house in the suburbs was ours. I came on to find snow everywhere and no possible chance to do anything but plan. Just when things began to get sunny father was called away on this tiresome business trip. Through my conscientious efforts mother's life was made a nightmare until she got father to send a long list of instructions and plans for the garden."

"I started that very day in earnest. Father wrote: 'Have the garden spaded and arranged according to these plans, and when I come Doris can do all the planting under my instructions.' I can see his smile as he wrote that. What will he say to this, I wonder?"

"You see, I had already made plans of my own. He had sent for lots of horticulturists' magazines and in one of them I found a glorious plan for a formal garden—just the size of ours. Of course father wasn't specially interested in the flower side of it at all. He is so busy over sweet corn and summer squashes that he can't think of other things. When he told me how much of the ground could be mine I kept the plan to myself, for there seemed such oceans of time to discuss it. After he went south I talked it over with mother, and she wrote him about some of my plans. That was why he sent his. So we started in, making every now and then a few changes that didn't really matter."

"Mother protested for a time, but she hasn't said a word for a week—not since I started to dig the pool for my irises and goldfish. Yes, that's it. In the center will be a bank of gravel, but there will be a mud bottom for the long roots. And I had pipes laid, so there will be a continual flow of water across the pool. Of course there is the water tax to think of, as mother says, but maybe we can get a special rate, since we want to use so much water. Most things are cheaper at wholesale, you know."

"Along the sunny fence I've planted hollyhocks and cosmos and coreopsis, because they 'make amiable comrades when shoulder to shoulder,' as my book says. Father's corn was to have been there, but it can go somewhere else just as well, and think of the difference in the looks—and on the most prominent side of the yard, too!"

"The beds all circle about the iris pool and the paths are to be of grass, with a four-foot border with sweet alyssum, pansies and foliage plants just like the parks. And there are my poppy beds—'nymphs even in the heart of flowerdom,' my book calls them."

"That pillar? Oh, that is my sundial. Isn't it sweet? I had to have one, for this article says: 'About the sundial clusters all the romance of the ages. It is enveloped in an atmosphere of poetry.'"

"Mother and I had our most serious discussion over that bed on the north side of the yard. I have to wait for father before I shall know about my summer house. There I shall serve tea, with ramblers roses and clematis and wisteria climbing all about! Father had selected that side for his asparagus beds and they were already started, so I yielded to mother in that. I love asparagus, don't you? And if I must do without the summer-house I'll have the vines over the porch, as mother suggested."

"Other vegetables? Well, yes, father wants them, and I am worried to think where he can put them. Why, he even wanted pumpkins and cantaloups. I have left a bed for lettuce and radishes and such pretty things as that. The book advised it. As for the rest, we can buy all the vegetables we want from the truck farmers around. I inquired about that."

"I haven't written father my entire plan. It will be such a nice surprise for him, I think. Besides, it is so complicated that he couldn't have understood it in a letter. I did write about moving the tomato beds away from my hollyhocks and he telegraphed me to let them alone, so that discouraged me."

"I have a suggestion, though. If he can't find room for his corn here, why can't he buy this empty lot next to us? He could have a regular farm there. He is coming home to-night and that is the first thing I want to talk to him about. Don't you think he'd like all that space for vegetables?"

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have suffered with indigestion, have been cured by it. When nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows from abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and gasping, pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headache, dizziness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia" tablets, "physics," etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Peppin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all. Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

CHAPTER VIII. AFTER THE BATTLE.

A FEW nights later Philip kept his promise to Jenny Moran and accompanied her to one of the numerous balls that form so important a factor of the social life of the lower east side of New York in winter.

As they entered the hall about 200 couples were doing a slow waltz with set and serious faces, most of the girls chewing gum in time to the measure and many of the young men holding lighted cigars or cigarettes between two fingers, while the other two clasped the lady's hand.

One look at Philip's face showed Jenny that he did not care much for this, and as she turned to look at herself (what she wanted was to get him alone she suggested that they go up into the gallery and look on, and if Philip felt like ordering two glasses of beer, why, that would be very nice. Philip ordered the beer, and they took seats in the gallery.

Presently the music struck up an inviting waltz with a languorous, intensified beat, and Jenny leaned forward with a half sad, half longing expression which, she knew very well, heightened her beauty, especially in profile. Then suddenly she turned to him with a warm, appealing look. "I suppose I must give it all up, mustn't I, Philip?"

She was like a disappointed child, and he felt sorry for her. "You mean dancing? Why, no! There's no harm in dancing."

They danced the next waltz, and as Philip held the little young creature and felt her graceful, supple movements he realized vaguely that she was not created for factory toil and a dull tenement life. And Jenny, gliding to the delicious measure, forgot all but one thing—that she was here in Philip's arms.

On their way home Philip tried to have a serious talk with her, but it was not so easy to say just the right thing.

They did not talk much after that, but Philip thought for a long time about this evening, with its apparently trivial happenings, and somehow they filled him with a vague uneasiness.

In the morning he awoke pale and unrefreshed, and when he joined the Moran household after breakfast Haggleton observed that he looked tired.

"It's nothing," said Philip; "I'm not accustomed to balls."

Haggleton went out with Philip. He, too, had slept badly. He had been awakened when Jenny came in, and for more than an hour he had thought about this boy, his son. He did not like the idea of his going out with Jenny Moran.

The old man began by talking about Margaret.

"She looks to me like a fine girl," he approved, "but if I know anything about women she's got a bit of spirit in her, and you'd better cut out anybody else."

"You mean Jenny?" said Philip, who started to explain the situation as well as he could without revealing Jenny's previous life, but Haggleton interrupted him: "I know about that. I have lived sixty years with my eyes wide open. It's not so hard to guess as you think, young man."

"Then you must approve of my doing what I can to help her?"

"Does it help her much to dance with her?" replied Haggleton dryly.

"If other people had felt their responsibility toward her I don't, she wouldn't be where she is now."

"What do you mean by that?" asked Haggleton.

"You control the New York Midland, don't you?"

"Why, I—I suppose so," answered Haggleton, surprised at this sudden turn.

"Well, the New York Midland killed her husband at one of its grade crossings. The law commands you to put gates at these crossings, but you laugh at the law, and every year you kill hundreds of innocent citizens."

"You killed her husband. Then you refused to pay her a cent of damages, and as she was a poor woman, she couldn't press the suit. So she was left without a dollar in the world, and she had a little baby, and—well, the end of it was she went to the bad."

"I didn't know that," said Haggleton.

"There's a good deal you rich men don't know and don't want to know. I tell you, Jenny Moran would be a good woman today if she had a fair chance. And, if you think I'm going to turn my back on her as your criminal railroad did, then you're very much mistaken."

One morning, a day or two after the millionaire's second tour with Philip among his tenements, a boy arrived from the bakery to tell Moran that he was to take charge of the night shift and must report that evening at 6. Moran sent him back with word that he could bring the assistant he had already spoken about if he were needed, and the answer came shortly afterward by the same carrier that he must not fail to do so. The helper had "completely given out." It was typhoid he yawned doubt.

Having warned Haggleton to take a good rest in the afternoon, the baker disappeared, as usual. The millionaire, with the beginning of his new career before him and anticipating busy days to come, decided to pay another visit of inspection to his tenements, but this time alone. Philip was known and welcomed wherever he went, but the owner of all this shameful property earning blood money had the strange experience of having doors slammed in his face and of being ordered out of his own houses by his own janitors, who looked upon him with darkest suspicion. Yet when ever he went he could not help seeing that conditions, bad as they were in themselves, were aggravated at least 50 per cent by the shiftlessness, the neglect, of his tenants. Haggleton was beginning to formulate his own plans of tenement reform. He would keep them to himself until the proper moment came to lay them before his son. At least they would be practical. By 1 he was back home and at Jenny's suggestion lay down to get some sleep. By 5 Moran came in and, after another tirade against capital, bade him prepare to accompany him.

The plumbing in the bakeshop was all defective. Moran explained as they made their way to the place, the traps to sink and soil pipes being out of order, so that the water was in danger of contamination.

"Not the water you use in making bread?" questioned Haggleton.

"That's the only water we have," replied Moran; "it's the only water John J. gives us."

"Haggleton? What has he to do with it?"

"Just a little—he owns the property." They stopped before a six-story tenement on Market street.

"Careful, now," cautioned Moran. "Hold on to the railing. It's steep."

He led the way down into a deep hole under the street, the iron steps slanting like a ladder and slippery with mud and ice. Haggleton followed cautiously and found himself in a long, low basement lighted here and there by flaming gas jets. As the door opened he felt a hot, foul breath as from a sour and moldy cavern. The air was full of white dust, the walls were damp and greenish-white, bare bricks showing in places where the plaster had fallen off, and the wooden floor was sifted over with a mealy mixture of flour and dirt.

It was about 6 o'clock, and already two men were preparing for the night's work, stripping off filthy clothing down to the undershirts and throwing the garments upon convenient flour barrels. The men were mild and lowly eyed. One, in a red shirt, coughed constantly; the other chewed tobacco.

As Haggleton's eyes became accustomed to the dust and the uncertain light he discovered a grayish figure lying on a pile of bags behind a steaming vat. It was a man asleep, his head resting on a sack of flour.

"That's the sick helper," said Moran.

"The one who has typhoid fever?"

"We don't know what kind of fever it is."

"But he ought not to be here. He ought not to be sleeping on that sack of flour. You won't use the flour, will you?"

Moran laughed. "The flour he's sleeping on? Sure, we'll use it. We don't mind a little thing like that."

Haggleton took off his coat and prepared to work.

"I'll start you at something easy," said Moran—"dough here."

They went to the ovens, where the "third hand" was taking out a batch of finished loaves, about 150 of them ranged along in yellow circles on the hot brick floor. He stood at the iron door, thrusting in a long handled, flat wooden shovel, on which by a quick movement he would slide two or three of the crackling loaves and then draw them out.

"Now," said Moran to Haggleton, "as he takes 'em out of the peel you put 'em in these boxes." He pointed to a pile of wooden trays. "When you get a box full brush 'em over with the stuff in that can. It's potato water, to give 'em a good color."

Moran illustrated this operation once and then left the old man to continue it, while he did to the best of his ability. Occasionally the "third hand" would lay down his peel and stop to cough. Then he would spit on the floor and go back to his work.

"Now run 'em up to the shop," ordered Moran when they had finished—"there, on that dumb water. A boy'll take 'em off."

"You're a pretty fair helper," chuckled Moran; "ought to be worth $6 a week."

"More than that," replied Haggleton. "Where did you get the potato water I put on those loaves? I mean the water, not the potatoes."

"There, at the sink. Yes, the one with no trap in it—the typhoid fever sink. You're thinking it won't do people any good to eat that bread. Maybe not. Huh! Now you can do some kneading."

They went to a long trough where the tobacco chewer was in hand to hand conflict with a great mass of dough, three or four hundred pounds, that seemed to writhe and quiver in his arms like a live creature.

"You watch him awhile, and then a rest," said Moran.

Haggleton watched the "second hand" and presently took his turn at the trough and struggled with the dough. For twenty minutes he turned the sticky, sodden mass over and over upon itself, kneading it and crushing it down and tearing it apart until his whole body ached.

"That'll do," related Moran to Haggleton. "What are those brown stains in trough?" asked Haggleton.

Moran examined the stains and frowned. "That fool has been dripping tobacco juice in the dough again. Haven't I told you to spit on the floor if you have to spit?"

"We'll make a baker of you yet, Jackson," grinned the foreman. "Before the loaves go into the oven we brush 'em over with eggs to get a nice brown. You can do that. Here's the can and brush, and the eggs are in that box. Break half a dozen in the can and go ahead."

Haggleton obeyed, but presently came back to Moran, holding the can at arm's length and wrinkling his nose with little sniffs. "These eggs are bad."

"Are, eh? Well, what do you expect for 20 cents a hundred?"

"I didn't think you would use bad eggs," said the old man.

"You're not here to think, Mr. Jackson. I told you what to do. Now do it."

So the night advanced, and Haggleton worked with scarcely a pause. He rolled barrels and dragged bags as fresh flour was needed; he carried coals for the fires and split wood; he helped at the sponging tubs; he sifted flour; he bent over the kneading trough; he carried boxes; he drew water at the sink; he worked the dumb waiter; he stood by at the ovens, and he never complained. At 10 o'clock he thought his strength had failed him; he was sore all over and sick and weak, but he forced himself to keep on.

At midnight he asked for a few minutes' rest, but Moran shook his head; he must do his work; another batch of loaves was ready—ready for the eggs. The eggs! His stomach at last revolted, and he had a violent fit of vomiting.

"Knocked out, eh?" said Moran. "Lie down there."

The old man lay down on some bags of flour. He groaned, and for a long time he did not move.

Presently Moran came over to him. "It always makes a new man sick. You'll get used to it."

"I hope not," said Haggleton. "Are there many bakeshops like this in New York?"

"Doseus, and some worse."

"Not worse than this?"

"Huh!" retorted Moran. "I'd like to show you one on Allen street, dogs and chickens all about, and—liey, Petro," he called, "roll that barrel here."

Petro rolled over a barrel filled with crumbs of sour bread and moldy dough and sweepings from the floor.

"See that?" continued Moran. "We let it go as garbage, but there are bakers who use it. Yes, sir; they soak it in stuff that takes away the smell, then they dry it and put in currants and molasses and bake it into cakes. And heaven knows who eats 'em."

"That's an outrage!"

Moran leaned toward him with a gleam of hatred. "I'll tell you another outrage. Mr. Jackson—it's when a landlord takes big rent for a rotten cellar like this and won't fix the plumbing. No wonder we're sick. I worked in a cellar bakeshop on Hester street where the plumbing was so bad we got a back flow from the sewer every time it rained hard, and the whole floor was—well, I'll cut out the rest."

"Great Scott!" muttered Haggleton, "but all this must be against the law."

Moran laughed harshly. "That's the law enforced against trusts and rail roads? Because somebody has might got grating reasons for not enforcing them. It's the same here."

"H'm," said Haggleton. "How many bakeshops are there in New York?"

"Twenty-five hundred or so. There must be 15,000 bakers in New York now."

"Haggleton went on quietly, "You say there's a lot of sickness among them?"

"Sickness!" burst out Moran. "Of course there's a lot of sickness! There's rheumatism and asthma and fever and consumption. That's the worst—consumption. He paused, and a grin spread over his thin face.

"Go on," said Haggleton.

"You know bread is spongy stuff and takes up anything near it—germs and dirt and bad water. Well, we make the bread, but they eat it—the millionaires!"

"Not this bread?"

"How do you know who eats this bread? How do you know who makes the bread you eat? A quarter of a million loaves and cakes are made every day in New York by sick bakers—that's putting it low—and somebody eats 'em, germs and all. Well?"

"The germs are killed in the baking."

"The heat in the middle of a good sized loaf is away under 200, and it takes 212 to make sure of killing germs. I read how a London doctor tried it and found thirteen different kinds of microbes in a loaf that had been baked! Yes, sir, found 'em alive and kicking!"

Haggleton's face took on such a look of purpose and resourcefulness that Moran marveled and said in jest, "I suppose you're going to show us how to run these bakeshops?"

"Yes," said Haggleton, with a snap of decision, "I think I am."

"Drop in All Times"

One of the pitfalls of friendship is the standing invitation. It is easy and pleasant to say, "Come whenever you like, my dear. We shall be delighted to see you at any time; don't stand on ceremony—come whenever you are this way." But let those who receive such invitations beware. It stands to reason that an unexpected visit cannot always be convenient—the hostess is in the midst of something or other and "not fit to be seen," or her husband has rushed home to take her out somewhere and she would rather go than stay at home and entertain her dearest friend, or the luncheon or the dinner is a makeshift—very nice, so far as the family is concerned, but not exactly suitable to set before visitors.

The hostess tries to be nice, but can't help showing her vexation or embarrassment. The guest perceives something indefinable in the atmosphere and is accordingly constrained, and every one is uncomfortable. Yet people still go on giving and accepting standing invitations—New York Tribune.

NOTICE

To The Property Owners On Main Street Extended from Fitzwater St., To The East Line of Delaware St., of the proposed passage of an Ordinance for the Grading, Curbing and Draining of said Street with Concrete and Cement.

Pursuant to the provisions of Section 158 F. of the Public Local Laws title "Wicomico County, sub title 'Salisbury,' by order of the Mayor and Council of Salisbury, notice is hereby given to all persons interested therein that an Ordinance has been prepared and is on file at the office of the Mayor and Council of Salisbury, Md., entitled: "An Ordinance to provide for grading, curbing and draining of Main Street Extended from Fitzwater Street to the East line of Delaware Street."

The said ordinance provides that the cost of the work on said street, as aforesaid, is to be paid for by assessing one half of the expenses on the abutting property in proportion to the frontage of said property on said street, and the other half of the cost together with the total cost for street intersections, to be paid by the Mayor and Council of Salisbury.

The above mentioned Ordinance is proposed to be passed by the Council of Salisbury on Monday, the 26th day of July, 1910, at a special meeting called for that purpose to the City Hall, Salisbury, Md., on said date, convening at 8 o'clock, p. m.

All persons in any way interested in the subject matter of said Ordinance are hereby notified that the Council of Salisbury will meet as above stated, at the time above stated, for the purpose of considering said Ordinance, and giving a hearing to all those who may appear before them relative thereto.

By order of the Mayor and Council of Salisbury.

WOMEN MAKE CLEVER SPIES

Are Regularly Employed by European Countries to Secure Each Other's Secrets.

It may be remembered that a short time ago some valuable admiralty plans disappeared from Chatham, says London Tit-Bits. Mr. McKenna, the first lord of the admiralty, admitted that they had been stolen, but a mystery surrounded their disappearance. It is now suggested that a well-known international woman spy, who is ever ready to sell her services to the highest bidder, be it the Russian, German or French government, was responsible for the disappearance of those plans. It is known that she was in this country for some weeks prior to the incident and it is supposed that during that time she engineered the plot which resulted in the vanishing of the important papers.

Whatever truth there may be in the story it is a very feasible one, for it is usually women who prove the most successful spies. "When it comes to trickery and cunning," said a well-known detective to the writer on one occasion, "there is no match for a clever woman. If she is pretty into the bargain, I would back her to beat the cleverest men at Scotland yard nine times out of ten." And, judging from the success of women in secret service work, it would seem that the tribute is in no way exaggerated.

It is only a short time ago that a beautiful and fashionably dressed teacher of languages, Fraulein Peterson, about 25 years of age, was arrested at Kiel, in Germany, on suspicion of being a French spy. She was said to have entered into a love affair deliberately with a noncommissioned officer named Dietrich, of the explosive department, for the purpose of inducing him to divulge important German naval secrets.

Dietrich, flattered by the attention of such a beautiful woman, could say nothing, and at the time of the arrest was said to have been supplying her with the formula for the manufacture of the German smokeless powder (one of the most effective yet invented) and the situation of the port mines. To disguise her true occupation she posed as a teacher of languages. Suspicion was directed against her on account of the ample funds with which she was always provided and of her fear of giving the police the customary notice of her frequent changes of address.

A Comic Tragedy.

The people on Broadway, New York, were startled one night recently by hearing the screams of a child coming apparently from a dress-suit case which a dark, smooth-shaven man was carrying up. So piercing were the cries that the man was watched with increasing suspicion, and in time a crowd surrounded him and insisted on his opening the bag. He kept his lips tight shut, and continued to walk up Broadway, clinging to his dress-suit case, from which the screams apparently continued to come. Eventually a constable put him under arrest, and hurriedly opened the bag. He expected to find a baby doubled up in it, but instead he found a grinning stone image called a manikin. The prisoner proved to be a ventriloquist engaged in a Broadway concert hall, who had adopted this unique method of cheap advertisement.

Frank Had Tragic Ending.

An extraordinary affair is reported from La Amora. Eighty fierce Spanish bulls were penned in the station waiting to be conveyed to various parts of the country for bull-fighting purposes. A party of carnival revellers bent on mischievous fun saw some explosives among the animals, causing them to stampede. The infuriated beasts broke down the frail wooden fence and bolted out of the station, making for the town, about a mile distant. The townsfolk heard the trampling of the approaching herd, and as many as could make for shelter. The beasts rushed through the town like a whirlwind, knocking down and killing three persons, and more or less seriously injuring 18 others. A force of the civil guard was sent out to scour the country with orders to shoot the bulls on sight.

Fogs Made to Order.

Among the means of protecting fruit trees against frost practiced in California is the production of fog by a generator in the form of a wagon. The wagon carries a sheetiron tank, the upper part of which is filled with wet straw or similar material, kept moist by the automatic injection of water from a cask, while near the bottom is a grate upon which tar is burned, a blast, operated by a revolving fan, serving to maintain the combustion. All the heat is compelled to pass through the wet straw before reaching the air and in consequence the wagon is buried in a dense fog, and as it passes between the rows of low trees it envelops them in a mist so thick that the driver is frequently compelled to lead the horses.

May Demolish Helligoland.

A strange proposal has been made in Germany with regard to the island of Helligoland, which, despite vast expenditure, still continues to crumble away. The proposition is—unless some scheme of preserving it can be found—to blow up the entire island. Apparently the idea is, in the event of war, Helligoland would need to be very strongly defended, lest it should be seized and used as an advance base of operations against Germany. The trouble does not lie with the risk of its being seized so much as with the certainty of having to defend it.

Said the Water Utensils.

Utensils and troughs for food and water should be frequently scalded with boiling water, afterwards being thoroughly cleaned. Though a little extra work may be required, this cleaning up is a good preventive of many diseases and may save work and loss later.

Good Profit in Orchard.

Many farmers consider their orchards as strictly a side issue. If they would give the trees proper attention they would derive a good profit.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Cold weather never affects a sheep but dampness is fatal in time.

Red clover in bloom is not good for hogs but when young it makes a fine pasture.

If you are feeding your hogs for fat you can give them more corn than if feeding for bacon.

A well bred mule colt will bring on an average of $200 when broken at three years of age.

Peanuts form an important item in the diet of the hogs that give us the famous Smithfield hams and bacon.

Never feed rye straw to pregnant ewes. It generally contains more or less ergot which produces abortion.

Neither rape nor clover alone will do for growing, fattening hogs. They must have some grain twice a day for best results.

It is estimated that ten sheep can be kept where one cow can, and the risk is much less. It may be said that the sheep always carries her pocketbook with her.

Northern farmers who own large, rangy but smooth mares can breed them to advantage to a good sized Jack and find ready market for the young mules all over the south.

UGLY BULL SAFELY GUARDED

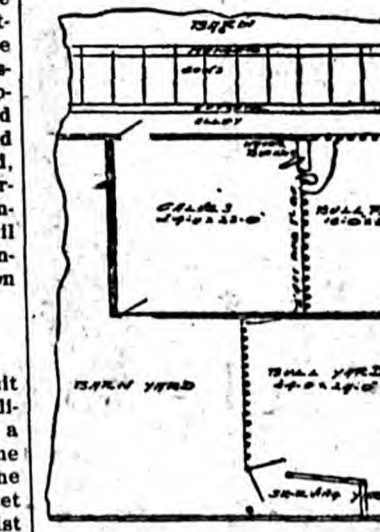

Animals Are Gentle as a Rule, But Psychological Moment Must Be Looked After.

Almost every day some one gets killed with a gentle bull. Bulls are all gentle, but sometimes the bulls don't know it. There comes a time in the history of most bulls when they are not safe. The psychological moment may happen when an old man, a defenseless woman or possibly a promising child is in the inclosure, and it sometimes happens that active farmers are caught unawares and killed or lamed for life. A little precaution is worth a great deal of regret.

There is a corner in your barnyard where you can build just such a bull pen as the one here outlined. The fence is made with two heavy rails bored through for pickets made of two-inch gas pipe on the front or barnyard side. Select good posts and set them six feet apart, use 12 foot boards for the north and east, well nailed to the posts outside. Use the same kind of boarding inside, but make it solid up to three feet in height so the bull can't get his horns in between the boards. To prevent the boards from warping set two by fours, upright half way between the posts and nail through from the boards into the two by fours to make them all solid together.

The gates are all boarded solid and fastened with sliding bolts on the outside in such a way that the bull can't possibly work a bolt loose with his horns or with his tongue, as some learn to do. There are two bolts on each gate. When the bolts are in place they drop behind notches and are held down by springs. The outer gate opens both ways to either post so that it is shut when it is open.

The small V-shaped yard is built for a service yard. The cow may be let in the outer gate swung to the outer post and the bull turned through. Then he may be put back in the inner gate, both gates shut against the inner post and the cow released. The outside gate of the service pen must be kept shut to keep animals out, otherwise you would have a bad corner where a weakling might get hooked to death.

The pen is also connected with the winter stall in the cow stable. There is a sliding door outside and a swinging door inside that may be shut tight in cold weather. It will be noticed that all doors open in such a way that they may be operated without going into the bull pen.

Feeding Corn Fodder.

When corn stalks are given to hogs they should be used to prevent cattle from having access to the woody ends which the hogs will leave after chewing the stalks. Pigs relish chaffing the stalks for the sweetness in it, but have enough saccharine matter in the stalk to make it attractive to cattle, especially the younger stock. This is indigestible, and the cattle, if allowed to pick it up, will frequently eat a sufficient quantity to cause indigestion and harmful if not fatal results. It is not safe to let cattle into yards where swine are given corn stalks.

For the Housewife.

Stuffed potatoes are made by mixing cheese and bread crumbs in with the contents.

When boiling fresh potatoes try putting a sprig of mint in the water to give a delicious flavor to the vegetables.

Plaster figures in hard or alabaster finish are easily cleaned by dipping a stiff toothbrush in gasoline and scrubbing into all the crevices.

Washing Furniture.

Can furniture be washed? It certainly can, and it is a pity more is not washed before applying polishes or varnishes. It is almost impossible to clean finger marks from furniture unless they are washed off with tepid water and white soap. Polish dry with a clean cloth. You will find a few drops of muriatic acid added to your favorite polish excellent for removing grease spots. Equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine, with a little muriatic acid, makes one of the cheapest and best polishes.

Codfish and Eggs.

One tablespoonful of butter and one of flour. Mix thoroughly and stir over the fire. Add half a cupful of water and one cupful of shredded codfish. The codfish should previously be freshened. Cook slowly five minutes and stir in two beaten eggs. Cook five minutes or less and pour in the middle of a dish or platter edged with a border of mashed potatoes. Dot with bits of butter, set in the oven a minute, and serve.

Pillet of Haddock.

Remove all the bones from a fresh haddock weighing two or two and one-half pounds. Cut in four pieces, season with salt and pepper, and squeeze over the juice of one lemon and slice of an onion. Cover the fish and let stand for an hour. Wipe dry and dust with flour, dip each piece separately in beaten egg, cover with rolled cracker crumbs and fry a light brown.

Carrot Pudding.

One and one-half cups flour, one cup sugar, one cup suet, one cup raisins, one cup of currants, one cup potatoes, grated; one cup carrots, grated; one teaspoon soda. Steam or boil three hours. This is best and cheapest of carrot puddings.

Bran Biscuits.

Two cups of bran, two cups of white flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two tablespoonfuls of butter melted, one-half teaspoonful of salt. Beat all together and bake in gem pans from one to one and one-half hours.

SALISBURY PLANS BIG

Fair. A Large Airship On Grounds. Motor-cycling Friday's Feature.

Arrangements have been made this year for one of the most interesting meets ever held in this section on a Fair Ground.

In addition to the racing, which,
according to reports, will be better than seen on the Peninsula for sometime, the management has engaged from the United Airship Co., one of their large airships. This mammoth bird of the air will be 65 feet long,
and is to make two flights daily during each day of the Meet. This is the first time that the people on the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia have ever had an opportunity to see an airship in actual flight. Doubtless thousands of people who seldom, if ever, attend the regular meetings of the Fair, will come to Salisbury at this time to see the navigator of the air make its flight over and around the Fair Grounds.

Another new feature will be seen on the Grounds this year, and that is a race between Motorcycles. arrangements have been effected for this motorcycle race to take place on Friday, August 19th, and as these machines have the reputation of making one of the fastest and most exciting races, the on-lookers will have an opportunity to see some real sport. There will be in this motor-cycle race, at least five participants, among whom will be Ohio Thomas, the Motor-cycle Champion of the State. Mr. Thomas, in 1907, with a 2 1/2 horse power motorcycle, made a record time of several miles in less than a 1:30 minute gait. Since that time, he has been able to clip several seconds in this record.

The Farmers Race, which proved so popular on the Fourth of July, will be duplicated on Friday, August 19th, on which day the Association has offered a purse of $50.00 for horses in Wilcomie County. These horses must be eligible to a 3:00 Class Trot or Pace, and must be driven by a farmer. All hoppers are barred. No entrance fees charged. As Rover Queen and White Tips won the race on the Fourth of July in time less than 3:00, they will be barred from this race, thus leaving the field open to all other horses in the County.
This race is expected to prove one of the most exciting and interesting from local standpoint, of any given at the Fair.

In addition to these attractions, it is stated that the exhibits on the Grounds this year will be far superior to those of previous years, a special effort having been made to get a large and fine display of live stock and agricultural products. Good watermelons will bring a big price at the Fair, and a premium of $10.00 is offered for the best collection. Fancy Work, Domestic and Flower Departments are also expected to make a very good showing.
Altogether the Fair promises to provide plenty of amusements for the thousands of visitors on the Grounds.

LOUIS J. BAUS DROWNED

While Bathing At Ocean City. Prominent Business Man.

Sunday was the scene of the third drowning at Ocean City this year, when Mr. Louis J. Baus, Jr., manager of the Salisbury Hardware Company, lost his life while bathing in the surf at Ocean City. It was reported by eye witnesses as follows:

Mr. Baus and wife, Henry Davis, Jr., and Miss Alma Vincent, of Berlin, went into the surf about two o'clock. They had not been in the water over ten minutes when Mrs.
Baus asked Mr. Davis, who was to take her ashore. At this moment they heard some one call for assistance and looking around saw Mr. Baus being carried through the pilings under the pier, by the current which seemed to be running diagonally under the pier.
At this moment Miss Vincent cried for help. Mr. Davis went to her and managed to get a firm hold on one of the pier pilings until a rope was thrown to him by William Brittingham. Mr. Davis fastened the rope around Miss Vincent, who was lifted to the pier in a completely exhausted condition.

Charles Johnson, son of Chief of Police Samuel Johnson, was standing on the pier and saw Mr. Baus passing under it. He jumped from the pier and swam to the drowning man, but the tide was so swift that he could not get Mr. Baus ashore. He managed to hold on, however, until others reached them and brought both on land. Mr. Baus could not be revived.
Mr. Johnson is represented as deserving great credit for his heroic effort in trying to save Mr. Baus.

Mr. Baus was but 28 years of age and was one of Salisbury's most promising young business men. He resided at Mr. Hermon, where he had a pretty home. Deceased is survived by a widow, a daughter of E. M. Walston, and a son about eighteen months old.
The remains were brought over on the 10 o'clock train Sunday night and carried to his late home, from which the funeral took place Tuesday morning.

Justices Advertise For Cupid's Trade.

Kittanning, Pa., has three justices of the peace and business has been poor. Their offices are on the same block, and when Justice Isaac Miller, tired of waiting for business, decided to advertise he put up a sign in the window reading: "You can get married here."

Justice Edward Lee saw the sign and promptly displayed this one: "Married while you wait;" while Justice
A. D. Mobley, not to be outdone by his competitors, displayed a more commercial but with this sign: "Why wait? Get married here."

No increase of business at the marriage license office is yet reported.

CAMP MEETING WEEK.

Big Crowds Expected. Siloam, Hebron, Parsonburg.

The trustees and managers of the Siloam Camp are busily engaged in repairing tents and getting the grounds ready for the coming encampment, which will open August 5, and will continue for ten days. Billy Smith and A. L. Bonade will have charge of the boarding tent where ample provisions will be made for all.
Also the gasoline boats will run from Salisbury and other points to carry the people to the camp ground and back. The following ministers will be present to assist in the services.

Saturday morning 6 a. m. Sunrise service conducted by the pastor. At 10:30 song and praise service led by R. E. Simms. At 8 p. m. preaching by E. W. Simms, of Powellsville.

Sunday morning 6 a. m., family prayers led by R. G. Humphreys. At 9 a. m. love feast conducted by R. E.
Simms, senior. 11 a. m. preaching by Rev. O. S. Martin, of Salisbury. 3
p. m. Children's meeting. 8 p. m. preaching by A. J. Bunting of Marion Station. At 7 p. m. song and praise service led by James Wilson of Dennis Island. At 8:30 preaching by William S. Williams, of Georgetown, Del.

The services of the week will be continued at the usual hours day and night by the following brethren. Rev.
Geo. L. Hardesty, of Kent Island and
W. S. Williams of Georgetown, Del.
Rev. Geo. P. Jones, our district superintendent will preach for us Thursday at 8 p. m. Bro. Wm. E. Gandy, of Princess Anne will preach Friday
at 3 p. m.

ning meeting conducted by R. E. Simms and R. G. Humphreys. 10:30 a.
m. preaching by the pastor. 3 p. m.
Rev. Wm. H. Revell, of Quantico will preach. 8 p. m. preaching by J.
H. Bosman, of Mardela.

The choir will be assisted by the noted singer, James Jones, of Wilmington, Del. Come and attend an old fashioned camp meeting.

The Camp Meeting at Hebron will commence today. This already popular camp has been greatly improved this season. The circle of tents have been made larger and several new outcamps have been built. The ground will be lighted with electric lights which will greatly add to the beauty and convenience of the ground. The boarding tent has been rebuilt and will be under the direction of Mr. Lee German, who wishes to assure all who come of a square meal, consisting of the delicacies of the season.

The music this year will be an especially pleasurable feature of the camp, the committee having secured a capable leader, who will be assisted by a large choir. The instrumental music will consist of an organ, cornet and violin. If you wish to see your friends come early and often to the camp and you will have a pleasant time and not go away disappointed.

The committee have adopted the following rules for the government of the meeting.

ORDER OF SERVICES.

1. Family prayers at the stand at 7 a. m. daily.
2. Preaching at 10:30 a. m., 3 p. m.
and 8 p. m. daily when practicable.

the ground Sunday.
12. Promiscuous and boisterous conversation to cease during preaching.
13. No blowing of whistles or loud cracking of whips allowed inside the circle of tents.
14. Parents are requested to see that their children do not thoughtlessly make unnecessary noise, or disarrange
the seats or disturb the religious services.
15. All persons are requested to cease loud and boisterous conversation by 12 o'clock midnight, so as to give persons who desire to do so a chance to sleep.

WADE TO SAFETY.

Courage Of Women Passengers On Yacht
"Wissahickon" Averts A Tragedy.
Flight Flames With Skirts.

A panic that was offset by individual feats of bravery followed a slight explosion and fire on the power yacht,
"Wissahickon," owned by A. Guilbert Longaker 313 Righter St., Wisa-hickon, during a moonlight sail on the Nantuxee river, near Federal-burg, Md., Saturday night.

In the party were twenty-five persons, men and women, from Wilmington, Baltimore and Federalburg. Three of the party of pleasure seekers leaped overboard and several women were assisted ashore by strong swimmers from the yacht to shallow water and at the end of it all was a tramp of five miles through thickets and marshes for the entire party.

The blaze was caused by a break in the feed pipe on the yacht, which led from the engine to the gasoline tank.
A spark set fire to the leaking gasoline and soon the entire length of the feed pipe was blazing.

The women aboard the yacht all of whom wore light and inflammable summer dresses were frightened and a majority were with difficulty restrained from leaping into the river which at that point is about twenty feet deep.

Miss Norma Brower, daughter of Professor C. A. Brower, principal of the Federalburg High School did jump overboard and was followed by Horace and Hiram Longaker, son and brother of the owner of the yacht.
They were assisted into the boat.

Theodore Adams the engineer although painfully burned about the hands in his effort to extinguish the flames kept his nerve and steered the boat for the shore. He was successful in getting the yacht into water sufficiently shallow to permit of wading and the entire party took to the water, the men bearing up the women until such time as the decreasing depth of water reassured them.

Women Prove Heroines.

Not all of the women on the yacht gave way to fright. A number remained their outer skirts with which Adams, the engineer, and other men beat down as heat they could the flames that threatened to destroy the yacht. The women also gave further proof of courage by standing in shallow water until their rescuers returned to put out the flames on the boat.

While the yacht was saved the damage was such that all thought of the party returning to Federalburg aboard it had to be abandoned.
Neither was there any settlement near where small boats or vehicles could be secured to take the frightened, wet and tired members of the party to the starting point. It was a bedraggled and exhausted party that reached Federalburg early Thursday morning.

In the party were:
A. Guilbert, Horace and Hiram Longaker 313 Righter St. Wissahickon;
William O. Leslie 5308 Ridge
Ave.; Clarence Handy and Floyd
Williams, 63d St. and Haverford Ave.; Orlando McCall and Benjamin Nichols, Baltimore; Louise Wilson, Cambridge, Md. Harvey Williams, Ralph Brown, William C. Smith, Theodore Adams, Henry Muller, Charles
Wright, Norma and Yeva Brower, Ethel, Iva and Laura Davis, Eva and Virginia Williams, Ruth and Agnes Elliot and Eva Wright, of Federal-burg.

Mr. Longaker owner of the yacht,
is a member of Longaker and Pennington Engraving Company, 611 Commerce St. He has a cottage at Fed-eralburg and for several years past he and his family, consisting of his wife and three sons, have spent the summers there.

The "Wissahickon" was a recent purchase. It is twenty eight feet long and was built to accommodate twenty four persons. It was a well known craft on the Schuylkill river, where it was known as the "Helmar." Mr.
Longaker renamed it.

John Longaker, 267 Kalos St., Wis-sahickon, a brother of the yacht owner, declared Thursday that he had not received word of the accident and expressed confidence that none of the party was the worse for their trying experience. He said that the Longak-ers with the exception of Mr. Longaker, went to Federalburg about July 4, for the summer. Mr. Longaker followed them on Friday last. The Longaker home on Righter St., is closed.

THE AUTOMOBILE ACT.

Attorney-General Confident That New Law
Is Constitutional. Question Raised.

Every point in the constitutionality of the new automobile law governing the issue of licenses will be fought for by Attorney General Straus if there is any appeal in the test case of John T. Hendrick, the insurance man, at Hyattsville, according to a statement of the Attorney General.

Whether the Attorney General will be called upon is a question. He believes that the law is such that his services will not be required and that the State is fortified sufficiently to do without his services. Yesterday Mr.
Hendrick, submitted to fines of $25
and $15 at the hands of Magistrate Hunter at Hyattsville on two charges
after two months to quash the warrants had been overruled. Jackson
H. Ralston, C. L. Bouve and Lawyer
Siddons appeared for the Washington insurance man and they said that the case would be taken to the highest courts. Even the United States Supreme Court was spoken of.

Confident Of Constitutionality.

The Attorney General is of the opinion that the test cannot go much further than the Circuit Court of Prince George's county although he would not give the opinion as final.
"Of course," he said, "Mr. Hendrick has the right of appeal to the Circuit Court. Whether he can go as far as the Court of Appeals is a question which I am not just now prepared to answer. I will have to give the matter a more careful study. You can say for me, however, that I feel confident that the law is Constitutional, despite the attack upon it, and I am ready to defend any point on the question of Constitutionality."

"Should there be an appeal to the Circuit Court, it would mean that the State's Attorney of the county must look out for the interests of the State.
I can only be admitted into it by order of the Governor."

Unconstitutional Is Claim.

As set forth by Jackson H. Ralston, one of the counsel retained by the National Automobile Association in his motion at Hyattsville yesterday to quash the warrants under which Mr. Hendrick was arrested, the Association takes the ground that the new Maryland automobile law is contrary to the Constitution of the United States because it constitutes an unlawful attempt on the part of Maryland to regulate commerce between the States and imposes a direct burden on such commerce.

The Association also holds that the law particularly acts as an obstruction to passage to and from the National Capital and is an illegal discrimination against the residents of the District of Columbia. Furthermore, that it is an improper use of the police and revenue powers of the State.

"If a charge for use of the roads of the State were contemplated," contends the Association, "it is not based upon the value of such use to the person to whom it is given, or the detriment to the road arising from such use, but is unequal, unfair and is class legislation, granting such use according to differing scales of payment."

SNAKE IN HAIR "RAT"

Bites Woman's Head. A Richmond Miss Endures Agony All Day.

Bitten several times by a small moccasin snake which nested in her
"rat" when she had laid that creature beside her as she rested in a hammock
in her front yard in the evening, Miss Mary Wood, of West End, is reported to be in a serious condition, though she will recover from the venomous bites.

The girl is a department-store clerk,
and on the day of the strange occurrence she went to work as usual behind the counter. Her head began to itch and pain her in a short time, and taking another girl with her, Miss Wood went to the dressing-room, where the hair was taken down.

Several small red and swollen sores were discovered on her scalp,
but little thought was given to them.
Enduring the pain all day, the girl went home at closing-up time and told her mother of her discomfort.

The hair was again taken down and the scalp examined, and drops of blood with more incisions were discovered.
The mother then asked for the "rat"
upon which the young woman was accustomed to do up her tresses, and taking it began squeaking it. What was her horror to feel something wiggle inside the fuzzy thing. Hastily tearing it to pieces, the mother was surprised when a six-inch moccasin snake dropped to the floor and wiggled away, after striking at her without effect several times.

The girl fainted at sight of the repsile, and was carried to bed, where she is now under the care of a physician.

QUESTION OF DISCRIMINAtion Of Railroads Against Baltimore. Claim

Up To Utilities Commission.

Specific charges to the effect that the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia and Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic railroads discriminate against Baltimore were filed with the Public Utilities Commission by the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association. Accompanying these was a mass of data prepared by Secretary Thomas G. Bogge giving facts and figures of alleged discrimination in both time and rates.

The Commission passed an order requiring the two companies concerned to make answer to the complaint
by August 15, and directed that copies of the complaint be inclosed with a copy of the order and sent to the corporations at once.

Suggests Changes in Route.

In addition to filing charges, the Association suggests changes to improve the communication between Baltimore and the Eastern Shore. The most important of these is that Love Point be used as the ferrying point to Baltimore for all service which would mean the abandonment of Claiborne.

By running Eastern Shore trains direct to Love Point it is claimed one hour could be saved in the running time to Baltimore. The Pennsylvania Railroad controls the lines to both Love Point and Claiborne, and the local business men want the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic trains run over the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia tracks.

Would Reduce Travel Time.

In addition to changing the ferrying point from Claiborne to Love Point, Secretary Bogge says make the ferry time between Baltimore and Love Point one and one half to one and three quarters hours instead of two hours and eighteen minutes, which is the present schedule. The distance is only twenty four miles and could easily be made in little over an hour
by a fast boat.

The charges are that at present it is impossible for persons living in certain sections of the Eastern Shore to arrive at Claiborne or Love Point in time to catch a boat which will give them more than three hours in Baltimore and return to their homes the same day.

The suggestion is that the Railway Company run an early train from the southern part of the peninsula to the Love Point branch, where connection is made for Baltimore. The boat could leave Love Point as to arrive in Baltimore about 11:30 o'clock in the morning and leave Baltimore at 4:45 in the afternoon and make connection with a train leaving Love Point at 6:15.

Still Another Improvement.

It is claimed that the suggested schedules could be arranged without any additional trains and at the same time it would be a great benefit to Baltimore and the people of the Eastern Shore.

A further improvement suggested is that the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company run its trains, or a part of them, from Ocean
City via Salisbury, Burlock and Easton to Queen Anne Station and the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad, Oxford branch, to Love Point. The distance would not be much greater than that to Claiborne and at the same time twenty miles of sailing on the water would be abandoned.

Slow boat is also another drawback to the present conditions. It is claimed faster boats should be placed on the routes between the ferrying points and considerable time could be saved
in that manner.

In closing the report, Mr. Bogge says concentrate all the suggested schedules at Love Point and Baltimore and the Eastern Shore will ac-cure the service they ought to have and which they demand.

How To Keep Girls From Leaving The Farm.

The Still Pond Farmers' Club held their May meeting at the country home of Edward B. Pennington, near Ken-nedyville. Every member of the Club was present, as were 50 guests, to hear the important question discussed:
"How Can We Keep Our Daughters on the Farm?" and "How Can We Prevent Her Accepting the First Offer of Marriage She Receives?"

The gentlemen members of the Club were given the questions by the women members, and after two hours' discussion the opinion was handed down that the best way to keep the girls on the farm was to "Give her a substantial allowance, and she will be willing to stay at home."

COOL, CHARMING SUMMER DRESSES FOR WOMEN and MISSES—SPECIAL at $5.00

The illustration gives only a faint idea of the attractiveness of these dresses. They are all copied from high-priced imported models, and embody the newest ideas of the noted foreign designers.

Some are of linen, in white, light blue, pink, lavender and other dainty shades; others are of gingham and madras, in pretty checks and stripes.

All are one-piece models—some are elaborately embroidered; others are trimmed with val, lace, tucks or embozettes. They have Dutch neck or high lace collar; skirts are trimmed to match waist, and come in the plain pleated style as well as the new overskirt model.

All sizes for misses and women—14 to 18 years, and 34 to 44 bust measure.

WOMEN'S AND MISSES' SUMMER SUITS OF STYLISH LINEN CRASH $5.00

They have perfectly plain-tailored, semi-fitted coats; single-breasted, with smoke pearl buttons, and neat shaped mannish collar and revers. The skirts are in a wide all-over-pleated, high-kilted model.

The material is pure linen crash, in the natural tan color, which looks well, and wears as well as it looks.

All sizes—14 to 18 years for misses, and 34 to 44 bust measure for women.

DAY WAIST TO MATCH GOWN

Or May Be Made a Splendid House Affair, If Such a Garment is More Desired.

This day waist is in a dim shade of plum crepe de chine, and it gives the horizontal disposal of the trimming. The garment fastens in the back under a narrow stitched plait, no part of the trimming other than tucks showing there. At the front there is a lavish treatment with insets of net-laces, tucks, embroidery and small silk buttons. The small mutton-leg sleeves display the amount of fullness now admitted the long arm covering, and the stock is in the form of a straight band of the embroidery between two of the lace.

Such a waist could be developed very prettily in any thin veiling that would match the gown color, or else be made quite a splendid house affair, if made in all-white. Where time must be economized, the embroidery could be left off, as the box plait upon which this appears are in themselves decorative.

With the trimming further simplified, this model would be excellent for a practical waist in any wash material.

LENGTHWISE LINE IS LIKED

Promises to Be Much in Evidence on All the Summer Blouses—Graduated Tucks.

The girl who has begun to make her own blouses for summer will find that lengthwise lines are much in favor. A pretty model has a series of grouped and graduated tucks that give an elaborate effect without much work.

The center of the blouse has a strip of swiss embroidered insertion with two rows of material in fine thread tucks run crosswise from a band on either side. These are edged with another row of insertion on the opposite side.

Beyond the trimming is a quarter-inch tuck run from neck to bottom of blouse, then three thread tucks, another quarter-inch one, three more thread tucks, then two quarter-inch tucks on outside for fullness. This is repeated on other side.

The back is finished with insertion on each side of opening, then narrow band of cross tucks, another row of insertion, and two quarter-inch tucks with group of three thread ones between.

The sleeves have three-quarter inch tucks with two groups of thread ones between. It is cut to be slightly full just below elbow, and the cuff is made by a square of insertion mitered at top corners with a band of cross tuck material on the inside. The bottom of cuff is finished with a narrow embroidered edging which also finishes the top of insertion collar.

The New Sleeve. It is now definitely fixed that the sleeve with the long shoulder, the full middle piece and the elbow cuff tight to the arm is to be in favor. It is seen on all the best models, and it evidently will prevail.

The upper sleeve, or cap, is a bit loose on the arm, but has no tendency to be square. It is cut in one with the bodice and drops over arm, and is usually attached to the second division, which is made of thin fabric, gathered top and bottom. This just turns the elbow, and is somewhat fuller under the arm than top of it. It is there gathered into the third division, which is in the shape of a long tight cuff, wrinkled or plain.

No matter what the modifications are, this seems to be the sleeve of the day.

Prints. We are approaching a season of prints, and while it is needless to include the much-in-evidence foulard, we see in it the keynote.

Its figures have been copied on dimity, organdie, barred muslin, crepe, net and on cotton foulard.

Every variation of the floral pattern is shown on these washable stuffs, and many of them have the added richness of the satin or mercerized stripe.

Pongees, too, are printed, and the whole tale has not been told without mention of the stamped and figured chiffons, which show forth a perfection not found in any other fabric.

AN OLD MAID'S DIARY.

At 16, began to have some idea of the tender passion.

Seventeen, talked of love in a cottage.

Eighteen, fancied myself in love with some handsome man who flattered me.

Twenty-one, felt great confidence in my own attractions and expected a brilliant marriage.

Twenty-two, refused a good offer because he was not a man of fashion.

Twenty-three, flirted outrageously.

Twenty-four, wondered why not married.

Twenty-six, began to think a large fortune not quite so indispensable.

Twenty-eight, wished to be married in a quiet way, with a comfortable home and children.

Twenty-nine, almost despaired of marriage.

Thirty, fearful of being called an old maid.

Thirty-one, an additional lover of dress.

Thirty-two, professed to dislike balls, finding it difficult to get good partners.

Thirty-three, wondered how men could leave the society of sensible women to flirt with chits.

Thirty-four, quarreled with friend who had been lately married.

Thirty-five, liked talking of my acquaintances, who are married unfortunately, and found endless consolation in their misfortunes.

Thirty-six, contented old maid.—Home Notes.

FOURTEEN ERRORS OF LIFE.

Not to yield to unimportant trifles.

To endeavor to mold all dispositions alike.

To look for perfection in our own actions.

To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.

To look for judgment and experience in youth.

Not to alleviate if we can all that needs alleviation.

To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

To try to measure the enjoyment of others by our own.

Not to make allowances for the weaknesses of others.

To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied.

To consider anything impossible that we cannot ourselves perform.

The fourteen mistakes of life, Judge Rostoul told the Bartholomew club, are:

To live as if the moment, the time, the pay, were so important that if would live forever.

To expect to set up our own standard of right and wrong and expect everybody to conform to it.

To estimate people by some outside quality, for it is that within which makes the man.—London Evening Standard.

CLEOPATRA'S CODE.

(Revised for the twentieth century.)

Put up with sarcasm—don't practice it.

Always finish everything artistically.

Always keep imagination under control.

Never let matters come to an open rupture.

Know how to get your own price for things.

Know how to keep people for a time in suspense.

Know when to change the tone of a conversation.

Live for the present. The future takes care of itself.

Let each man think he is the one man—for the time.

Cultivate friends. They lend a pleasing background.

Remember nothing depreciates a man more than to show him he's like other men.

Don't try to mold another to your ideal, but remold your ideal according to what he is.

Remember that life is not a fulfillment of one's ideals, but an eternal compromise with them.

How it Happened.

"How's this?" remarked the tall of-see boy with the newspaper. "Here is where an educated monkey ran a sewing machine."

"Aw, that's nothing," sneered the short office boy. "Yesterday I saw a mouse run a typewriter."

"Come on! What are you giving me? Where did this happen?"

"Right in the old man's office. The mouse came from under the desk and made for the pretty typewriter, and she's running yet."

WOMAN SUFFRAGE IN SALISBURY.

While the question of the right of women to participate in our elections is being debated all through the land, and a number of our neighboring towns have organized clubs looking towards the time when "the women are recognized as the equal of man in every way," we are proud to say that in Wicomico County we have heard no rumor of any such a movement among our better halves. We congratulate our ladies upon their good judgment and common sense. Not that we think they are not the equal of man intellectually; not that our politics would not be lifted upon a higher plane by their participation in them, but because we think they are too good to stoop to the dirty plane of politics. While women may be physically weaker than man, in many spheres of life they have fully demonstrated that they are his equal in intellect, while in moral character they are so much his superior that this question is no longer debated anywhere but universally acknowledged. We, of the opposite sex, are frank to admit these things and instead of doing so in humility, we boast of it with pride and it is because of our pride in the nobility of their character that we would dread to see them plunged into the degrading pool of practical politics. We are afraid that while they would doubtless improve the moral tone of our body politic, that they could not escape its baneful influence altogether. We need them as they are to counteract, as far as possible, the evil influence of our daily lives, the desire to be worthy of their love and respect is today by far the greatest and strongest influence for good that man has. Selfish, we admit, to want them to live for us, but we truly believe they themselves will be happier and more contented outside the game of politics than they would within.

DEMOCRATS' OPPORTUNITY.

It is hard to see how the Democrats can fail to win a sweeping victory at the polls this year, if they use anything like good judgement in drawing the issues of the campaign. While there are of course some differences in the Democratic ranks, yet for the main part they are but local and should amount to but little; on the other hand the Republican party seems to be hopelessly divided both on the tariff and conservation issues.

Mr. Roosevelt, despite his claims of keeping his hands off, is certainly taking a big part in his party's affairs, and is probably the most feared man the Democrats have to contend with. It is hard to tell just what effect his influence will have upon the platforms and nominees of his party in the country, but he is both a great man and a shrewd politician and if his advice is followed the Democrats can rest assured that the fall election will not be a walkover for them. There is however a large number of influential men in his own party who would be immensely pleased to see Mr. Roosevelt down and out, and if the same tactics are adopted elsewhere as were used in Ohio, where, according to press reports, the regulars lined up solidly against progress, he may lose a considerable amount of his prestige, and his party will be a big loser by it.

Here in Maryland the outlook for Democratic success is of the brightest and it now looks as though the chance of sending a solid delegation to Congress is something more than a dream.

Beware of Ointments For Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

Mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney and Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney and Co., Reasonable free. Sold by Druggists. Price 75c. per bottle.

Send Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

RHUBARB NOT FOOD

Really Poisonous—Famous Doctor Declares It Injurious And Contains Oxalic Acid.

Not only injurious, but positively poisonous is the verdict pronounced upon rhubarb by a famous London physician. Recently in that city many persons have been violently ill with every symptom pointing to some form of poison. "There's nothing new or mysterious about the epidemic," states the physician. "The injurious, even poisonous, after effects of rhubarb are well known to the medical faculty."

"The harm is due to the abundance of oxalate of lime in the vegetable, in the form of oxalic acid crystals, which are hidden away in the center of bundles of cells in the rhubarb. These crystals, which are known as raphides, and are practically insoluble, set up irritation of the stomach and intestines, and finally in the kidneys. And when the mischief spreads to the kidneys, the position is serious indeed."

"Anyone suffering from goitre should never dream of touching rhubarb. The oxalate of lime causes the swelling to become bigger and very painful."

"The crispier the rhubarb the more injurious it is. Crispness implies the presence of oxalic acid crystals in great quantities."

"It is improbable that the 'weed killer' used in the cultivation of rhubarb is at all responsible for its poisonous after effects. Most weed killers contain arsenic, and rhubarb containing arsenic, or even tainted with it, would be of a very inferior quality, and not at all salable."

"Of course, all partakers of this particular dish are not always attacked by symptoms of poisoning. But during the rhubarb season they often suffer from strange internal pains, colic and inexplicable disarrangement of their digestive organs, which they never dream of attributing to reckless indulgence in this poisonous vegetable."

THE WAY OF RUBBER

How This High Priced Article is Increased in Value.

In reporting to this Government on opportunities in Malaysia for rubber growing enterprises, Consul General James T. Dabois, at Singapore, cited as follows an instance to show how the investing public is sometimes taken in in the exploitation of the rubber industry there:

"An estate was sold to promoters for $150,000. The syndicate got an old planter who knew the estate to put a notation value on it. He named $250,000. The promoters were not satisfied. Another expert examined and reported. His price was $350,000. British and American gold was pouring into the country and the get-rich quick spirit was born. Another expert was called in. He was told of the former valuations and that they were unsatisfactory. He valued the estate at $500,000. Just at this time rubber took a big jump in the London and New York markets, and another expert was asked to report and he placed the notation price at $750,000, and the syndicate, in order to have it in round numbers, made it an even $800,000 and floated it at this price."

People fought for the stock, the share issue was oversubscribed and many of them immediately sold at a good advance. All this was done within a few months without the slightest improvement in the property except the natural growth of the few hundred acres of para plants which had been planted there."

Trained white supervisors on the rubber estates are in demand, the Consul General reports, and there is a scarcity of labor and consequent high wages.

Havre de Grace Neighbors Thought He Lived There.

Another early evening robbery was committed at Havre de Grace Monday night when the home of E. O. Wells was entered between 8 and 9 p. m. during the absence of the family. So far only $3 is missing. Two ladies living across the street saw a man enter the yard and mistaking him for the young man of the house, called to him, but received no reply. Later he was seen upstairs with a light. An alarm was given but only two men were available, one of these being an elderly gentleman. While the younger man went for more help the intruder made good his escape.

ALL IN ADAM
Even so
ALL IN CHRIST

Text:—"Since by man came death, by man also comes the resurrection of the dead; as also all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive. But every man in his own order; Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's during his presence" (1 Corinthians xv, 21, 23, R. V.).

July 24.—Once we considered most unjust, unduly, the Bible declaration that our Creator condemned all of Adam's race with him on account of Adam's "Original Sin." But now, in the light of the clearer unfolding of God's Word, we are privileged to see differently. Now we perceive, not only that God did no injustice to Adam's children, but, contrariwise, that in this very particular, He did them a kindness—that it was in the interest of humanity in general. We are aware that this statement appears paradoxical to those who have not yet gotten the proper focus upon the Divine Plan. The key which unlocks the difficulty is the proper appreciation of the penalty imposed upon Adam and his race.

The erroneous, unscriptural view of this penalty which came down to us from the "dark ages" teaches that God damned father Adam, mother Eve, and every child born to them to an eternity of torture at the hands of devils. It is this unscriptural and irrational view of the wage of Original Sin which caused all our difficulty. Indeed, it is safe to say that no other false doctrine held by God's people ever drove away from God, from the Bible and from the fellowship of the Church so many intelligent minds. Thousands of bright, honest minds, after seeing this teaching of the Christian creeds formulated in the dark ages, have quietly as our first parents evidently had difficulty. The sentence upon Adam for disobedience was, "Dust thou shalt die." "Dust thou art, unto dust shalt thou return"; "Curse is the ground for thy sake"; "Thou and thine seed shall it bring forth until thou return unto the ground, from which thou wast taken" (Gen. III, 2, 3, 16-19, 24).

Thus we see that the penalty for upon Adam and his race was that it should return to the dust. As we read again, "Thou turnest man to destruction" (Psalm xc, 3). And this penalty is sufficiently aware when we think what it means to die, to lose mental and physical perception, to gradually go into the tomb—into the Bible hell (sheol, throughout the Testament). And this sheol, the great tomb, to which the Bible says we go, good and bad, rich and poor. And unholy, was the only hell amongst any of the people of God the more than four thousand years represented by the teachings of Old Testament. Then came the Testament times and the teaching of Jesus and the Apostles to the same effect. In the New Testament the Greek word hades, representing the tomb, the death state, takes the place of the Old Testament sheol. The passage translated from the Old Testament into the New Testament

Withdrew from them in heart, if not outwardly, saying to themselves, Evidently my reasoning faculties are of a different kind from those of many others prominent in the Church: Without disputing the point, I simply conclude that I must think for myself and that, in so doing, I am forced out of sympathy with the majority of my fellow-Christians on this basic doctrine.

Where Lies the Difficulty?

The difference is that while the majority of Christians readily repudiate these misrepresentations of God and His Word, nevertheless the subject is not clear to them and they fear that to repudiate this doctrine would be to repudiate the Bible and to become open infidels. And just here is their mistake. The majority of them are not Bible students. Even amongst ministers of the Gospel comparatively few have any degree of knowledge of God's Word. They know what they think about the Bible, but they believe their notions; what they have been told that it teaches; what the catechisms say it teaches; but they have never made critical investigations of the Bible themselves to ascertain its teachings. It is a part of our endeavor to arouse Christian people every where to search and study the Scriptures and to assist them with Bible study helps, Bible keys, etc. And, thank God, there are thousands in Spiritual Israel who are not bowing in submission to Babylon, but anxious to know the rightly understood Word of God clearly

It was nearly three hundred years after Jesus and the Apostles, after the writing of the New Testament, before the doctrine of Purgatory was introduced. And for this reason, the word "Purgatory" in the Purgatorialism that is expressed in the Scriptures But Bibles were few, and the people could not have read them even if they had possessed them; hence for centuries the teachings of the centuries were accepted without Bible proof and the doctrine of Purgatory spread all over Christendom. All of our fathers believed in it. It became the teaching of Christians everywhere, the mere handful of saints, instead of dying when they came to die, to be tortured, and that the great majority of humanity, instead of dying when they seemed to die, went in some mysterious manner to a mysterious place called Purgatory, of which no one knew anything except what they were taught. The teaching is that practically all of humanity go to Purgatory to be roasted and otherwise tortured for centuries—ultimately to be released from the torture, when they are ready to go to heaven. Upon this doctrine is sprung the doctrine that says that the "lost" who were believed to be dead but intensely alive, were in Purgatory drew the people's fear of the priests as the supercounselors of the Almighty and mass money drew the priests close to the people. They were honestly intentioned, but all de-

In Bible study are springing up all over the world. These have recently adopted the name of "International Bible Students Association." God is blessing them, not only with the opening of their own eyes more and more widely, but also in using them to bring others "out of darkness into his marvelous light" (1 Peter II, 9).

The Scriptures speak of a "famine, not for bread nor for water, but for hearing of the Word of the Lord." This famine is upon us now. Not only are Christian people hungry and thirsty for the bread of life and the water of life, but many of the worldly are name Protestants. These Protestants were unduly afraid of their protest, and were afterwards, hence their own, against the very doctrines once they had proclaimed. Truth, Their mind» were full thought that a dead person is not but more alive than before he and that some of these at death to heaven while the great n went to Purgatory. They did the teaching of the Bible, the wages of sin is death"—that all death, good and bad, and the death state is the sheol and the Bible. Instead of getting the light upon God's Word, they from darkness into greater darkness on this point. Here we wish to size the thought that all these men, Catholics and Protestants their day, like all true people held a measure of Truth in relation with errors. It is the measure of Truth possessed and enjoyed given any power and force to rigorous Christian systems, and refreshment, strength and new life.

"The Wages of Sin is Death."

However we read our Bibles in the past we read into them from the creeds of a darker time the mischievous error that when the Bible declares a death penalty for sin it really means the reverse of this—life—eternal life in eternal future. —Who is right? —Right to twist the inspired words in such a devilish fashion? Who had the right to add to the Word of God and to make void its true teaching in this manner? Hear the words of the Apostle. "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Romans vi, 23). What statement could be more definite? The wicked will not be granted life at all, either in pleasure or in pain. They are under sentence of death—destruction. Eternal life is a gift. And it will be given only to those to whom it will be a blessing—to those who will accept it through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Let us turn to Genesis and note the statements made to our first parents respecting sin and its penalty. "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Gen. ii, 17). "Thou shalt surely die" should have meant that of our errors.

Starting from their misunderstanding of Bible teachings respecting wages of sin, Brother Luther and noble companions battled bravely many truths, but made one great error. When they concluded that purgatory was contrary to the Scriptures and threw it away, not see Bible hell, the tomb, they added another hell and thereby went far to worsen on this subject. The heathen and the masses of the Middle Ages were not saints; they do not follow in the footsteps of Jesus—surely, therefore, they are of his spiritual flock. Could these could not be taken on, they said, We must take to Purgatory anyway, wherever there, because we have found there is no such place as Purgatory. After Conferences, seriousling to make out God's character than they formerly supposed said under their breaths, "We take them out of Purgatory and put them into hell." The sure and sure was a little about as they would have said. They were the great man, living to eternal torture. He explained that God had fore-ordained and predestinated these awful results—that he might show his wisdom and his power. As to a

"Love divine, all love excelling,"

Brother Calvin seems never to have thought of that. Brother Wesley and others since, though less logical and theological, did stand up for and declare the Love of God, even though rather absurdly they claimed that he was neither wise enough nor powerful enough to do more than rescue a mere handful of Adam's race from the eternal torture to which they thought God damned them all because of the disc-

"All In Adam—All In Christ."

In the light of our better Bibles and Bible Study Helps and minds freed from the ignorance, and superstitions of the past we may understand the Apostle's words and find in them, not only justice and love, but harmony and beauty. Instead of all mankind going to eternal torment for Adam's sin, all go into the Bible bell, the grave, on account of his sin—all and all of the mental, moral and physical blemishes of our race are a part of this heredity.

There would have been no hope of a future life, good or bad, had not God in his mercy provided the Savior, the "Life-Giver," by the Sympathetic Sunders the word. In God's due time he set before his Son, the opportunity of becoming man's Redeemer. The Logos was made flesh (John 1, 14) and obediently gave himself in death—"tasted death for every man." As by one man's disobedience the sentence of death passed upon all of the race, even so by the obedience of the man Christ Jesus unto death justification to life passed for all of that race. Now we see the wise reason for permitting the sentence to pass through one man's disobedience to all of his posterity. It was in order that one sacrifice for sin might make possible the reconciliation of the entire race.

my life was a misery to me. I suffer from irritable, terrible nervous system, extreme nervousness, and the gone feeling in my stomach. I have given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I felt as if I had new life in me when I was given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. 2207 W. Franklin St., Baltimore

The most successful remedy in the country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and to many more widely and successfully used by any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope. You can have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lowell, Mass., for it. She has given

Now read our text and drink in its depths and beauty and force. The resurrection of mankind from the sin and death and tomb condition to the full perfection and image of God from which the race fell is the salvation which God has provided for all. Whoever will be faithful to the full recovery from sin and death conditions will have himself to blame because of rejection of the glorious arrangements which God made in and through Christ.

"The First Resurrection"

God divides the salvation of mankind into two parts—the Church to spirit nature and the world to perfected human nature. The first he is accomplishing during this Gospel Age; the second he will accomplish through Christ and the Church during Messlah's reign of a thousand years.

The Church, the "little flock" of saints, called, tried, tested, in the narrow way during this Age, are to constitute the "First Resurrection" class and to become "the Bride of Christ," "the Church of the First-Born."

These are to be associated with the great Redeemer in his future work. These shall be like him, changed from earthly to heavenly nature and made sharers of his glory, honor and immortality. The Kingdom of God under the whole heavens will be inaugurated after the glorification of the Church and then will begin the blessing of the salvation, the uplifting, the resurrecting of mankind in general—from sin and death conditions—not to spiritual conditions, but to perfect earthly conditions.

All the willing and obedient shall be blessed by the great Life-Giver who eighteen centuries ago died. The Just for the unjust, and who, during the period since, has been selecting the Bride class. With his Bride he will reign to bless the world, to make the whole earth beautiful. As it is written, "It will make the place of thine glory." The whole earth will then be as the Garden of Eden and the restored race like our perfect first parents. But as for the intelligently wicked, we read, "All the wicked will be destroyed" (Psalm cxiv, 20). He will not preserve them in torture or otherwise. They will die the Second Death. But none will die the Second Death for Adam's transgression. He died but not for transgression and will release Adam and all his race therefrom, even while he will hold them responsible for every wilful transgression and give stripes or punishments therefor to teach them to love righteousness and to hate iniquity (Acts iii, 10-23).

FARM NOTES.

Plant breeding is not a new science. No farmer should buy shelled corn for seed.

The hardy vegetables can be sown as soon as the ground is ready.

As a fertilizer, the peanut is almost as valuable as when raised for food.

Cowpeas and soy beans sown the latter part of May make good green manures.

Portable trellises of wood or wire are convenient for peas, running beans and tomatoes.

All of the cabbage family do very well if the seed is planted in hills, then thinned out.

The peanut crop is extensively grown in five continents, but first used as a delicacy in America.

The larger vegetables, as peas, corn, tomatoes, etc., need rows three to four feet apart, and melons even more.

There should be a great abundance of peas, lima and bush beans, and tomatoes, for these are easily grown.

For use as a fertilizer, ground limestone should be fine enough to pass a sieve having 50 meshes to the linear inch.

There is as much work, sometimes more, seeing a weakly plant through the season as there is caring for a robust, strong one.

The better the arrangement of crops with good provision for the supply of humus to the soil, the greater the profit from farming.

As garden tools, it is best to own a plow, a harrow, and a horse cultivator. If one can afford to, even if the horse must be hired.

Peas, corn, beans, tomatoes, the melon family and potatoes, should be grown from seeds selected year after year from the best specimens in one's own garden.

Many of our best farmers practice the system of sowing some clover seed with all grain crops and they find that splendid returns are received on money invested in this way.

GOOD SUPPORTER FOR REINS

Keeps Lines From Getting Beneath Horse's Tail and Makes Driving Easier and Safer.

More than a mere matter of convenience is the rein supporter devised by a California man. It not only makes driving easier, but safer, for it eliminates the danger of a fractious horse holding the lines under its tail and getting the bit in its teeth.

A base strap with an arched frame connected extends over the crupper straps and fastens to them. A wire rod, bent to form a gutter for the reins, rises from the arched frame and over this the lines pass. Supported in this way they never become tangled nor get under the horse's tail. Anyone who has ever driven to any extent knows how annoying it is to get the reins caught under the horse's tail as the animal switches it.

Sometimes, too, the beast will hold its tail down tight for several minutes, preventing the driver from getting the reins free for guidance, and, indeed, many a runaway has resulted from this common and apparently innocent accident.

Successful Hired Man.

The hired man who is working for wages alone and has no ambition to become an expert in his business has no sympathy from me. If he has the opportunity to learn the secrets of the successful farmer who employs him and does not do so he will be a failure.

The secret of any successful business is information and the man who knows his business from every angle, whether he is a farm hand or a railroad president and then puts ginger and common sense in his work, will win as he deserves.

Cultivator for Garden.

The horse tool which stirs the soil several inches deep especially during the early period of growth, is the only cultivator to use in gardening, both for saving of valuable labor and the improvement of the physical nature of the soil.

Bacteria on Roots.

Within comparatively recent years it has been demonstrated that bacteria growing upon the roots of the legumes maintain a laboratory in which the indifferent nitrogen of the air is wooed into a happy union with the legume.

Why He Didn't.

Two gentlemen, shooting in Scotland, sat down to lunch. On taking a bottle of whisky out, one of them noticed that the cork had been tampered with, and, knowing the character of their guests, at once accused him of having been at the lunch basket.

"I fear that you have been drinking the whisky, Sandy."

"No, no, sir, I have not, for the cork wouldn't come out!"

WORK WEAKENS THE KIDNEYS.

Doan's Kidney Pills Have Done Great Service For People Who Work in Salisbury.

Most Salisbury people work every day in some strained, unnatural position, bending constantly over a desk, riding on jolting cars, doing laborious housework; lifting, reaching or pulling, or trying the back in a hundred and one other ways. All these strains tend to wear, weaken and injure the kidneys until they fall behind in their work of filtering the poisons from the blood. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, put new strength in bad backs. Salisbury cures prove it.

A. R. Lohner, 318 William Street, Salisbury, Md., says: "I feel safe in saying that anyone who uses Doan's Kidney Pills according to directions will find relief from kidney trouble. For at least thirty years my kidneys were disordered and as I am obliged to work in a draught and do much heavy lifting, it was hard for me to escape kidney ill. My back often became very weak and lame and the kidney secretions annoyed me by their irregularity in passage. It was finally my good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a supply at White's and Leonard's drug store. They brought me prompt relief. I have used them off and on during the past ten years, always finding great benefit."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and taken no other.

Napoleon's Grill.

Was the unconquerable never say die kind, the kind that you need most when you have a bad cold, cough or lung disease. Suppose troubles, coughs, colds, liver oil or doctors have all failed, don't lose heart or hope. Take Dr. King's New Discovery. Satisfaction is guaranteed when used for any throat or lung trouble. It has saved thousands of hopeless sufferers. It masters stubborn colds, obstinate coughs, hemorrhages, is grippa, croup, asthma, hay fever and whooping cough and is the most safe and certain remedy for all bronchial affections. 50c $1.00. Trial bottle free at All Drugists.

This little book is not for the ordinary readers, but most decidedly it is what every advanced Bible student and earnest Christian should possess and study thoroughly. It costs but ten cents, is illustrated and draws its lessons on the higher life from the types and shadows of Israel's typical Atonement Day and other sacrifices. Surely every earnest Christian should have this little book and find in it a mine of spiritual wealth, health and refreshment. Order it now from the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mothers!

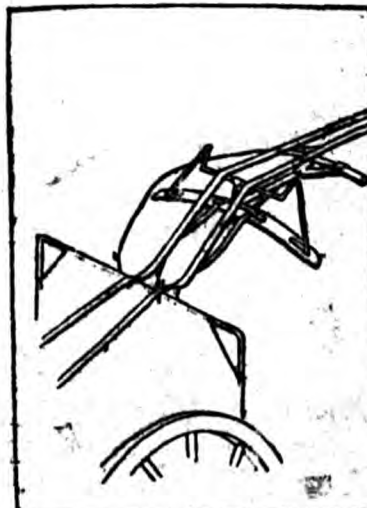

Don't fail to procure Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for your Children while cutting teeth. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Twenty five cents a bottle.

Many Women who are Splendid Cooks

dread having to prepare an elaborate dinner because they are not sufficiently strong to stand over an intensely hot coal range. This is especially true in summer. Every woman takes pride in the table she sets, but often it is done at tremendous cost to her own vitality through the weakening effect of cooking on a coal range in a hot kitchen.

It is no longer necessary to wear yourself out preparing a fine dinner. Even in the heat of summer you can cook a large dinner without being worn out.

New Perfection Oil Cook-stove

Gives no outside heat, no smell, no smoke. It will cook the biggest dinner without heating the kitchen or the cook. It is immediately lighted and immediately extinguished. It can be changed from a slow to a quick fire by turning a handle. There's no drudgery connected with it, no coal to carry, no wood to chop. You don't have to wait fifteen or twenty minutes till its fire gets going. Apply a light and it's ready. By simply turning the wick up or down you get a slow or an intense heat on the bottom of the pot, pan, kettle or oven, and nowhere else. It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot, drop shelves for coffee, teapot or saucepan, and even a rack for towels. It saves time, worry, health and temper. It does all a woman needs and more than she expects. Made with 1, 2, and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner sizes can be had with or without Cabinet.

Something New in Art

Not so new either. For KARNAK BRASS found its inception in the Temple of Karnak, built by Seti I on the banks of the Nile, some fifteen centuries ago.

This old temple inspired one of the designers of the Benedict Studios to reproduce in articles of modern utility the ideal features of Egyptian ornamental art.

Each piece of KARNAK BRASS is Egyptian in form and decoration, the decorative motifs being the Lotus Flower, Isis, the Sphinx, the Papyrus, Scarabeus.

This class of goods has true artistic merit and is of a substantial make that insures its lasting a lifetime.

The list includes:

Vases Smokers' Sets
Candle Sticks Tobacco Jars
Candelabra Clocks
Jardiniere Fern Dishes
Jewel Boxes Book Ends, Etc.

SURPRISING.

After an "Uncle Tom's Cabin" performance in a tent down in Arkansas one of the women from the mixed audience strolled around to the dressing tent to catch a glimpse of the performers.

"Dear me!" she exclaimed excitedly, as she noticed a little tot in a huge yellow wig. "What little angel is this?"

"That is Little Eva, ma'am," responded Uncle Tom, as he mopped the black from his face and started washing dishes.

"Well, well! And what is Little Eva's name of the stage? Something poetical like Evangeline or Mirra I'll wager?"

Uncle Tom grinned and kept on washing dishes.

"No, ma'am, it's Mike," he said, simply, "Little Eva is a boy."

Sure to Yell.

"What's the matter, Bill?" asked the first confidante man. "You look downhearted."

"I don't want any more to do with you," snapped his former friend; "you told me that relieving those joys of their wallets would be like taking candy from a baby. I started and they set up a wall that could be heard for a block."

"Well, old pard, don't be mad. Don't that happen when you take candy from a baby?"

One on the Boss.

"But while yer have yer feet on de desk and are puffing at a cigarette suppose de boss should call up?" asked the timid office boy.

"Oh, I have dat all fixed up," confided the bold office boy. "Ya see, me an' de telephone god are chums, and when de boss is out and calls up de office she says: 'Line's busy.'"

"And what does dat mean?"

"Why, it means dat I ain't busy. See?"

Hundreds of Money-Saving Opportunities for July Shoppers

THE REASON WHY we can present unusual Money-saving Specials, and the reason why our business has grown year after year, and continues to, is because our buyers go direct to the manufacturers and importers and buy in such quantities we cut out waste, that's all; we cut out needless expense in buying as well as selling, and the saving goes to the consumer. That's the reason why we can compete and undersell the large city retail store or the Western and Northern catalogue houses. Bring your catalogue and compare values and prices. We will save you the freight and give you better values for the same money. Our Free Mail and Freight System: We deliver FREE of charge (or mail if available) by freight to your nearest railroad station any mail order amounting to $3.00 or more. AS THE DAYS OF HEAVEN UPON THE EARTH

By REV. HUGH BLACK

Therefore shall ye lay up my words in your heart and in your soul. . . that your days may be multiplied in the land. . . as the days of heaven upon the earth.—Deut. 32:13, 21.

The permanence of the life promised springs from the quality of the life lived. The continuance of Israel's national existence as the seed shall be as "the days of heaven upon the earth." This has been the dream of man always: this the hope of the faithful, the vision of the seer, in some form or other, the great consummation that inspires the work of the reformer, the philanthropist and the missionary, the hope of the future, "as the days of heaven upon the earth." These words aptly describe that reaching forward which we trace in every page of the Bible, from start to finish; through the history of the chosen people of Israel, through the visions of the prophets, even through the years of their sorrow and despair, as they cry out, "O Lord, how long, how long?" Nothing else will satisfy them, nothing else will they strive for but "the days of heaven upon the earth." There is no single phrase which can sum up in our own life the aim of the people. Think how it explains, for instance, the books of the Old Testament; or think how it gives the moral of all the historical books of the Old Testament. And this is no less true when they tell us, as they so often do, of days that were as hell upon earth. Trace the content of this very promise that it should be different, that it should be or might have been as "the very days of heaven upon the earth."

Think how it expresses the prophetic books, so varied in time, in temper, in language, and yet one and the same in their possession of this idea, warning, threatening; all inspired by the same thing and all sustained by their sense of the days that shall be "the very day of heaven upon earth." Think, also, how it covers and expresses the whole new Testament, from that message of John the Baptist, from his announcement that the kingdom of heaven was at hand, from the birth of Jesus Christ at Bethlehem, to that vision of the holy city.

Think how it expresses our Lord's teaching about the gentle life, about forgiveness, about love and humble piety. His teaching about the kingdom of God which in the body he came to found; his prayer, which he taught his disciples to pray, that God's will might be done on earth "as it is in heaven," and that his kingdom may be entered into upon earth. You can trace it from the very cradle of Bethlehem, where he was born, that our salvation by grace might be accomplished, and from the cross where he died that we might live and be reconciled to God and "put on the new man." Is not the whole promise of Christian faith just a picture of the words, "as the days of heaven upon the earth." That is what makes a reformer and gives him patience and courage to work. He strikes a telling blow for the next point of vantage that will bring him nearer that good time coming, which is "the days of heaven upon the earth." In business and politics, true hearts look forward toward a finer type of living, and in all these things we are inspired by the hope of a time when it shall be as "the days of heaven upon the earth."

Even in this life we live much in the future, and if our thoughts of the future are right, and our prospects are based on right intentions, that future of which we dream may be a source of inspiration to us individually as well as socially. When we wish man well, are we not dealing with this dream which we have traced through the Bible and which we have traced through human life at its very best; are we not asking that this dream shall be realized? As men, we dare not let go of hope; we must work for this or we slide back to lower levels. When our hearts are warm and our minds are full of generous thoughts, we can always use these very words of our text, "as the days of heaven upon the earth."

What does that mean? What does that prayer mean? It does not mean just the usual elements of what we call blessings, long life and prosperity. These things should not be excluded. It is not intended that we should exclude these things from religion, but they are not defined by the words of our text. The barns may be full to bursting, and yet a cloud be there to hide the sunshine, and at the same time a man may be without hope, without joy, without love. With all the other things that the world terms good, such a man is without prosperity.

The days of hope are found sometimes where there seems to be little of what we call happiness. Some things for which men long and strive are only won through vexation of spirit. Again and again it has been seen through human history that a palace has been a very hell where human hearts wear themselves out in pain and unattained desire. That life may be as the very "days of heaven upon the earth," it must aim at things beyond.

THE BACK PLATFORM.

Little Bobby took a ride on a street car the other day and then wrote the following composition on "The Back Platform:"

"The back platform is a bully place for pickpockets and cigarette smokers. That's why you always find them there. Some men stand on the back platform because they are too mean to go inside. They are afraid they might have to give up their seat to a lady. Other men stand out on the back platform because they are foxy and think the conductor might forget their nickel in the rush. The only time a woman stands on the back platform is to raise her umbrella or give the conductor a piece of her mind."

Kind Old Duffers.

"The aged president of a college has been deposed because he was 'too affectionate' in his conduct toward lady teachers and co-eds."

"Hum!"

"His friends are highly indignant, and declare his kindness has been misunderstood."

"Hum! hum! I'll bet I've heard of aged millionaires who were kind to chorus girls in just the same way."

Useless Popularity.

"It 'ud be a great thing," said Farmer Cornsossel, "if we lived in the times that feller lectured about, when people carved what they had to say on stone inste'd o' writin' them."

"I don't see what good that 'ud do us," replied his wife.

"I could build a house with the valentines our daughter Jerusha has been gittin' these last four or five years."

Healthy, Too.

Gunner—The idea of that professor's saying we should boycott meat by living on peanuts. It is preposterous.

Guy—Oh, I don't know. I've heard of babies living on peanuts and thriving.

Gunner—To the woods! What kind of babies?

Guy—Why, baby elephants.

AN EYE TO BUSINESS.

"Did Sam gib his bride a ring fo' a weddin' present?"

"No, indeed; he done got her a big tub wid a patent wringer on it."

Hubby's Specialty.

My wife sure has me fazed When it comes to talk; But when it comes to listening I've got her beat a block.

Consistency.

"Mrs. Coldspring is such a temperance advocate I wonder she would appear in such a gay red dress."

"What has her dressing to do with it?"

"Well, naturally, you would expect her to dress in sober colors."

A Stupid Rooster.

"Have you heard the latest barnyard gossip?"

"No; but I'm listening with both ears."

"Dorothy Pullet jilted Jack Cochin because he kept calling her 'his dear little duck.'"

As a Friend.

"I understand she's engaged to a millionaire."

"But she says there's no truth in the rumor."

"Well, she ought to know."

"Yes, but she may have started it."

Probably.

"Miss Marjorie Gould is deserving of credit."

"If she were marrying a foreign duke instead of an American she would probably need credit before she died."

Tommy Knew.

Teacher—Tommy, do you know anything about mythology?

Tommy—A little, ma'am.

Teacher—Well, what happens when Pan arrives and announces spring?

Tommy—We have panaches, ma'am.

Vigilant Watch.

Helter—I woke up at 8:10 this morning and got to chapel.

Skelter—Impossible! How could you?

Helter—Easy—my watch was fast.

Yale Record.

Its Consequences.

"This fame given President Taft's dancing will have a confusing effect on congress."

"Why will it?"

"Because now every member of the senate and house will want to take the floor."

WEDDING GIFTS

"Oh, Fred!" exclaimed the engaged girl to the engaged young man who had just entered the hall door. Then she threw herself into his arms and burst into tears.

"Why, Kathie," gasped the mystified Fred, "what's up?"

"Oh, Fred!" moaned Katharine amid strangled sobs. "Did you ever see anything more hideous in all your life?" She held up something round, smooth and pearly white in color. "Think of wearing it! Think of it, Fred! Oh, of all spiteful creatures, girls are the worst!"

Katharine sniffed recuperatively and dabbed a bit of lace upon her discolored eyes. Presently she was in a condition to tell her story.

"The Alpha Zeta girls did it just because it makes them jealous to think that I'm about to marry such a splendid man as you. They are, Fred," she insisted as the young man smiled a bit incredulously. "Though in fairness to them, I will admit there is the smallest chance possible of their having actually imagined that I'd like this frightful thing."

"You see," began Katharine confidentially as she settled herself comfortably beside the young man, "when Clara Frazier was married last June the Alpha Zetas decided to give her a handsome bracelet. And I gave in my little $1.50—I, who love Clara as I should love a viper. Do you remember, Fred, when you both happened to be on the same train going to Detroit a year ago? Of course, I know that you were merely polite to her, but she actually made so much out of your attentions to her when she told about them that the girls thought you and I were on the point of quarreling. Since then Clara and I have kept up a perfect fiction of friendship. If we meet as often as three times a day she always kisses me on both cheeks and, opening her eyes wide, inquires sweetly, 'How's Fred?'"

"Well, to get back to Clara's wedding present, I was one of the committee of three appointed to select the bracelet. For some reason or other we put off making the purchase till the last day. By that time Carrie had sprained her ankle roller skating and Helen had to help her mother pack for a trip to New York, so I was left to choose the gift all by myself."

"I had a perfectly miserable time, Fred. All the way downtown I juggled impossible designs up and down in my mind. By the time the salesman began bringing out tray after tray of bracelets for my inspection I was utterly confused."

"Of course, some of them were dreams. There were gay Parisian designs and hand-wrought orientals. I saw a silver bracelet set with turquoise, native drilled and warranted never to fade. There was a beauty in rose gold with enamel flower tracings and studs of pearls. But did I select one of these? Never!"

"I waved aside all the lovely ones and chose a silver beaded affair. It was an ugly Wall of Troy pattern set with eight lapis lazulis and three cream jades. There wasn't a bit of high light on the article. Altogether it was the ugliest bracelet I ever saw in all my life—except this one here."

"I was ashamed to think what the handsome young salesman might conclude about my intellect, so I told him that the bracelet was not for me, but for an elderly person of peculiar tastes. Of course he is elderly, and if Clara weren't odd she never would have dreamed that she could make that sweet-minded Billy Thompson happy for life."

"As I expected, the girls all looked rather shocked when I opened the white velvet box for their inspection; but though the praises were tame, no serious complaints were lodged, so the bracelet was sent to Clara."

Tears were in Katharine's voice as she went on. "Fred, we received a wedding present to-day!" She crushed tightly in her hand the white velvet box. "Inside was an Alpha card. There were also the same beaded silver, of course, and the Wall of Troy, with eight lapis lazulis and three cream jades! A twin monstrously to the bracelet I selected for Clara!" Tears rolled down her cheeks.

"Oh, I'm nearly through crying," she declared, "but I want to tell you, Ferdinand Augustus Milton Stoll, that you can just make up your mind to use this bracelet to chain on the cover of the ash can or bolt the kitchen door. It may do to tie up the bull pup. As for my wearing it—"

She rose impulsively and the white velvet box went spinning across the room. The bracelet rolled out and lay on the rug.

"Oh, Fred," sobbed Katharine, as she sank pathetically back on the divan, "wouldn't you be awfully afraid to marry me to-morrow if I were as spiteful as some girls?"

"How a Disappointment Feels." "Yes, sir," Uncle Eben said to his nephew, "there are all kinds of disappointments in this world, Charley, and some of 'em are worse'n others. But they're all just ways of feelin' bad for a minute, I guess."

"But the disappointin' disappointin' I ever have is when I feel and feel like acesin' and it won't meesse! That kinder gives you a notion of how all disappointments feel all you get over them."—Youth's Companion.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it, Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have been afflicted with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia. Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol. When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dizziness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it. Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia" tablets, "physics," etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Peppin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all. Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do. Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

CHAPTER IX.

HAGGLETON TAKES COMMAND.

MORAN jeered at Haggleton when he announced his determination to throw up the job. The millionaire, however, had selected Sunday morning to make an announcement of importance.

"You asked me that first night," he said to Moran, "if I was going to show you how to run these bakeries, and I told you that I was. Well, I am going to do it. Listen, all of you, I am going to take you in with me."

"Not me," said Gentle.

"I am going to listen to what he has to say," was Philip's answer.

Haggleton saw that he had won a victory—he had succeeded in interesting Philip.

"If you're not in a hurry, Moran," he remarked as they finished breakfast, "I'd like to ask some questions. Does your boss make much out of his business?"

Moran shook his head. "When he's paid rent and wages there's just enough left to take care of his family—in a tenement."

"What's the rent of that basement?"

"Thirty dollars."

"Suppose I offered him the basement rent free and guaranteed as much business as he does now. Do you think he'd go into a scheme I've got?"

"Yes."

"Well, there's money in these bakeries—money for all of us. What kind of a man is your boss anyway?"

"Italian—once a rascal."

"I'll be his manager."

"He can if he wants to," growled Moran, "but you've got to show him first."

"I'll show him right."

"Huh!" grunted Moran. "What do you know about running a bakery?"

Haggleton smiled. "What do you pay for flour?" he asked.

"Six or seven dollars a barrel."

"Whom do you buy it from?"

"Jobbers."

Haggleton looked at him steadily, his eyes showing half pity, half contempt. "No wonder you people are poor! You—don't know any more about business than children in the street."

Haggleton asked more questions, going into details of the breadmaking industry, wages, methods of work, cost of equipment, etc., moving rapidly from point to point, until presently he came upon one fact of master importance—that there was a machine for kneading dough, a machine run by electricity which would do the work of six men and turn out better bread than could be made by hand.

"Ah," exclaimed the old man, "now we're getting at it! I'd like to see that machine."

"You'll have to go uptown to a big bakery."

"None down here?"

Moran scowled. "A machine like that costs $500."

Haggleton looked pleased. "Good! Now, how many bakeries are there near yours, say within two or three blocks?"

"Eleven."

"That's enough. We'll make a combination with six or eight; we'll sell them flour for less than they pay the jobbers and—"

"How will you do that?" interrupted Gentle.

"We'll get it by the carload direct from the mills. Then we'll have one of those machines and do all the kneading for the combination. We save on wages and materials; we do a bigger business because we sell better bread, so we make money both ways."

"It's a regular trust," said Gentle.

"Yes," admitted Haggleton, "it's a bakery trust."

"What capital have you got?" asked Philip.

"Ever hear of promoters?" asked the millionaire tersely. "Well, I am promoting this. The bakers need that machine; the manufacturer is perfectly willing to supply it on terms that guarantee him his money, even if he has to wait for it. A chattel mortgage given by the members of the trust I am about to organize will be good security unless I am much mistaken. I could use $300 to advantage right now."

"Three hundred dollars?" sniffed Moran. "What can you do with that?"

Haggleton bared his teeth like an old wolf. "With $300 you can get a grip on Manhattan Island and—never let go, if you know how."

Philip was deeply impressed. He was stimulated, yet vaguely alarmed. Haggleton was awakening in him qualities of mind and vague longings that had lain dormant thus far and that he recognized now with some uneasiness. He had sometimes wondered if he possessed business ability, but had given the matter little thought, feeling sure that his work lay in quite another field. So it was with strangely mixed motives that he exclaimed impulsively:

"I can furnish the $300!"

Haggleton suppressed the feeling of exultation that rose within him as he recognized himself in his son. He quietly said: "That will hasten things somewhat."

In the morning Philip was to buy one of those kneading machines, paying $100 down, the balance being arranged for in successive monthly payments, secured by a chattel mortgage. He—Haggleton—would get the bakery to be jointly responsible here with them.

Then Philip must find a bakery shop with electric street connections for the machine. Did Moran know of one? Yes, in Osharline street. Good! They must get the boss there into the combination, show him all the advantages and, if necessary, give him a boost. The kneading machine was a new thing. The baker's old tool was the wooden trough and the hand.

man a cent, as the combination would assume all expenses.

The rest would be easy. Six other bakers must agree to buy from the combination the flour for their bakeries, flour a week, or whatever quantity they usually bought, on the express stipulation that they got it at 10 per cent off the jobber's price. And they must make themselves responsible for this amount of flour, so many car loads, by signing a joint note payable to the mill owners in thirty days.

Philip thought that the mill owners might refuse to accept such a note, but Haggleton was sure the thing could be accomplished.

"How can one machine knead the dough from half a dozen bakeries?" related Philip.

"That's easy," said Haggleton: "we'll have a horse and truck."

"What to carry the machine?"

"No, to carry the dough. The baker will mix his own flour in his own sponging trough, and then we'll put the troughs on a truck and haul them to the place where we run the machine. When the flour is kneaded we'll haul them back."

"How long will the kneading take?" questioned Philip.

"Ten minutes for one batch of loaves," answered Moran—"say five pounds of dough. That's with the machine. It would take a man an hour."

"What we save," remarked Haggleton.

"Are these troughs on wheels?" asked Philip.

"Sure," said Moran.

"Allowing half an hour for each batch," calculated Haggleton—"I mean for kneading and hauling both ways—that gives us twenty-four batches of twelve hours—say 4,000 loaves. That's 8,000 pounds of flour, four tons a day, or twenty-eight tons a week for the combination. There's a nice profit that when you get it by the carload."

"It sounds good," mused Philip, "are you sure of enough bakeries to run the combination?"

"We'll have six before the week's out—that is, if you fix it so that we'll be trusted for flour by the carload. You'd better get busy."

Philip turned in surprise.

"That's right," said Haggleton, "look to you to get us four direct from the mills. We're going to cut out the jobber's profit."

"And you're going to risk all in the scheme?"

"What are we risking?" answered the old man. "Flour has a permanent value, and so has a kneading machine."

"Suppose these bakers refuse to join your combination?"

"Refuse? Does a man refuse money if you offer it to him? We'll be within ten days all the little bakers around here will be offering premiums for a chance to come in with us."

Meanwhile Haggleton had not forgotten that other host of his that would make the neglected Moran as clean and orderly as a New England farmhouse.

The iron beds had been replaced by sleeping couches, neatly covered; the cooking stove was hidden behind a homelike screen; Joe's handiwork, and all around the room ran shelves with muslin curtains, behind which were kept the many things that formerly had littered the floor and been piled in corners, in hopeless confusion. Under one of the couches a tin bathtub was snugly put away. It was the pride of all but Moran, who looked upon it with disdain.

Brightened though her life now was in many external ways, Jenny passed her days in profound unhappiness. She loved Philip—oh, how she loved him! Yet how could a man love a girl from the Haymarket? Still, she was pretty, very pretty at her best, and, after all, Philip was a man. The taste of her past was seared in her soul. She thought that she knew men and their besetting weakness; she was pretty; she knew. But, alas, what availed her beauty if it made no appeal to Philip? Ah, that was the point! Perhaps it did appeal to him. Several times she had felt his eyes on her in a way that, well, she could not be sure; he was finer than most men.

Then there was the evening when, believing her absent, he had entered her bedroom. How he had started back in confused apology, although there was really no offense. Every one knew that there was no privacy in a tenement, so why make such a fuss over a glimpse of bare arms and shoulders?

These reflections had gradually led her to conceive a definite plan—she must talk to Philip alone, she must find some way of getting him to the flat in the afternoon when the others were away. She could never ask him herself—that would spoil everything. Joe must help her in getting him there.

This plan was busily working in her brain one morning shortly after the launching of the bakery trust as she and Joe were setting things to rights in the room and discussing Mr. Jackson's achievements.

Joe suddenly startled Jenny with a momentous announcement.

"Say, Jen, beginning today, I draw ten bones a week if I cut out pool rooms."

"How?"

"In the bakery scheme," repeated Jenny thoughtfully. "That's what Phil is talking about all the time now."

"Phil listens to what Mr. Jackson has to say, all right. He takes a lot of interest in him."

"Yes, he's here most of the time. Jenny looked at the diver's picture on the wall, her eyes widening a little.

"You remember what I told you Joe?"

"About Phil? Sure. Little Jenny wants him all to herself. And if she can't have him for herself then the trained nurse lady that took away our dear little star boarders to the hospital had better look out for herself."

"I will tell you one thing," he observed. "If I was Miss Margaret, you'd not see me driving below Twenty-third street. No, ma'am. I'd make brother cough up. He's got nothing but money, or his wife has."

"How do you know that she has a rich brother?"

"Why, you know it too."

"I do not."

"Why, Jenny, weren't you sure of it?"

"Good God!"

Jenny stared at her with wide eyes.

eyes, then shifted her gaze to him. She began to walk up and down restlessly, gesticulating, muttering to herself.

"What's the matter?"

"Oh, nothing, nothing! You say Margaret is the sister of Mr. Lawrence, up in Sixty-third street?"

"Yes."

Suddenly Jenny stopped. She reached a decision. The time came to put her stratagem into execution.

"Well, what about Lawrence?" asked Joe.

"Oh, nothing. I thought it strange that—that his sister should be here among us. That's all."

"Is it?" thought Jenny. "Not by a shot. You can't fool me."

"What time is it?"

"Half past ten."

"Listen, Joe," pleaded Jenny. "I said that you would help me. Now you must. I want to be alone with Philip. I have an idea."

"I will help you."

"I want you to write Phil a note explaining Jenny feverishly. Tell him that you are in great trouble and must see him at once here. And tell him to come alone—do you understand, alone?"

Poor Jenny's thoughts flew back to her blithering won knowledge of the old life she had left for Philip's sake. She was beautiful; she knew it. She should know it too. Her beauty and this strange discovery which she had suddenly made concerning Margaret Lawrence's relationship—she held two cards now. She would play them!

Joe read her thoughts fairly accurately. Whatever it was that she knew about Howard Lawrence was to be used as an argument to win Philip's love, or at least to weaken Margaret's hold upon his affection.

"But say, Jenny," said Joe, "what is there in it for me? I am not asking you to give me money—I'm only asking for the loan of a dollar until I begin to draw my salary from Mr. Jackson." She gave him the money.

"Make the note strong," she said. "He must come."

Joe reassured Jenny and hurried away.

Haggleton entered briskly and found Jenny gazing fondly at the picture of his son.

"He's a fine young fellow, that Philip Ames, isn't he?"

"Phil? Indeed he is. But if anybody tells you that he is easy to understand—"

"Gentle seems to understand him."

"Gentle thinks he does. Say, Mr. Jackson, you have Gentle worried, all right."

"I? How?"

"Oh, with all this bakery business. Before you came it was nothing but the wrongs of the poor. Now it's nothing but money making schemes."

"You think Philip is interested?" he asked casually.

"Interested? You know he is interested. Why, yesterday, Gentle was trying to talk tenement house reform to Phil, but he hardly listened. He was figuring out the profits of that electrical machine for kneading bread."

"Good!"

Haggleton was immensely pleased. "I never saw Phil that way before," continued Jenny slowly.

"You like him, don't you?"

"Everybody likes him. I love him." Jenny continued.

"Yes, he is changed. And this sort of encourages me."

"How so?"

"You have made me see," the young woman was saying, "that there are two Philips—the one Gentle knows and the one you know."

She gazed at the picture.

"Yes," she added, with a contented smile, "that's it—two Philips. You have waked up the one that Gentle does not know. Why shouldn't I?"

"Two Philips? What a strange fancy!"

Haggleton spoke merely to make her go on.

"I tell you there are two Philips," she insisted. "One Philip loves this trained nurse. What's the matter with the other Philip loving me?"

She smiled up confidently.

"Here is a new complication," thought Haggleton—"still another battle to be fought over Philip!"

"Do you really think that you can win him away from this girl?" he asked.

The answer staggered him.

"Do you really think that you can win him away from Gentle?"

"What did this young woman know? Not that he was Philip's father, of course. But the rest of it she had gauged pretty accurately by intuition, no doubt."

Is the Universe Running Down? It is absolutely certain that the machinery of the solar system is running down. The earth, with its mass of three thousand trillion tons, moving through space a thousand times faster than the express train goes, is being retarded by the friction of the atmosphere and tides to the extent that it loses about an hour in 16,000 years, a very slow process. It would seem, but one that will inevitably bring the earth to a standstill ultimately. And what is true of the earth is true of all bodies in space suffer retardation and that their velocity is steadily becoming less and will finally cease. Solar systems, like everything else, have their time to be born and their time to die.—New York American.

How Scott Bore Adversity. Once when I was staying with Mr. Rankin he took delight in showing me his Scott manuscript. He took down "Woodstock" from the shelf, and turning the leaves over slowly and lovingly, he said: "I think this is the most precious of them." Scott was writing this book when the news of his ruin came to him. He was about here, where I have opened it. Do you see the beautiful handwriting? Now look as I turn over the pages toward the end. Is the writing any less beautiful? Are there more errors than before? That amply shows how a man can and should bear adversity.—London Chronicle.

NOTICE

To The Property Owners On Main Street Extended from Fitzwater St., To The East Line of Delaware St., of the proposed passage of an Ordinance for the Grading, Curbing and Draining of said Street with Concrete and Cement.

Webster's NEW INTERNATIONAL Dictionary, (G. & C. Merriam Co., Springfield, Mass.) surpasses the old International as much as the book surpasses its predecessor. Editor in Chief, Dr. W. T. Harris, former U. S. Sec. of Education. The definitions have been rearranged and amplified. The number of terms defined has been more than doubled. The Etymology, synonyms, pronunciation, have received unparagoned scholarly labor. The language of English literature for over seven centuries, the terminology of the arts and sciences, and the every-day speech of street, shop, and household, are presented with fullness and clearness. In size of vocabulary, in richness of general information, and in convenience of consultation, the book sets a new mark in lexicography.

Buick! AND NOTHING BUT Buick!

From the INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY, July 24:

"Cut this out and put it in your scrap book: Unless the Buick repeats itself, you will never see such a two days' racing record again. No car ever has, no car except the Buick ever can, give such an astounding exhibition of efficiency. Indianapolis stands amazed to-night at the most impressive clean-sweep ever recorded on either side of the ocean."

5, 10, 15, 50 Miles. In Every Event, In Every Class Buick—Buick—Buick

FRIDAY'S NET RESULTS: In six events entered, BUICK showed five firsts, three seconds and one third; with phenomenal time recorded in eight different instances by Burman and Chevrolet.

SATURDAY'S showing even eclipsed the day before; one victory crowding hot, hard and fast on the heels of another, and culminating in the capture of the Remy Brassard and trophy by Burman, who defeated the Marmon, National, Great Western, Black Crow and Fal in this hundred-mile race.

From Lucile's Diary

When father announced that he and his new young business friend, Walter Dare, were going to leave Friday before last for a flying trip to Washington, I immediately proposed myself as a member of the party.

"I don't think that would do at all," protested mother. "Your father and Mr. Dare will have a great many matters to attend to and you would be in the way."

"Daddy, dear," I said, after kissing the tiny bald spot on father's head, "is your little girl ever in your way?" "No, of course not, child," he replied. "Your mother simply meant that Dare and I are going to Washington on pretty important business, and will be too much occupied to devote much time to your entertainment."

"Oh, there are so many interesting things to see in Washington that I can entertain myself," I said. "Father," I remarked, gayly, Thursday night. "My trunk is packed for Washington."

"Why, Lucile, you're not really expecting to go, are you?" asked mother. "Of course I am," I answered, good naturedly.

"But your father did not say you could."

"He did not say I couldn't; did you, daddy?" "No," answered father, "but I fear, my dear, that you'd better not go."

"I haven't been out of town for a long time, father," I urged, "and I love to travel with you. I shall be dreadfully disappointed if you don't take me." I could not keep back the tears as I spoke.

"Oh, well," said father, "if the child's heart is set on the trip I suppose she'll have to go."

Mr. Dare proved a delightful traveling companion. We had some long talks while father was in the smoking compartment. We disagreed just enough to make our discussions spicy, and by the time we reached Washington we were on the footing of old friends without having worn off the novelty of our short acquaintance. He had told me who were his favorite authors and I had named the actors I admired most and had laughingly confessed that my two passions were the theater and automobilism.

"I'm sorry we can't go to some play to-night, Miss Lucile," he said, as we were breakfasting at our hotel Saturday morning. "Unfortunately, business in the order of the evening, but we won't let anything interfere with a nice little theater party Monday night."

"That will be lovely!" I exclaimed, enthusiastically.

When I went to my room after dinner Saturday evening I found a big bunch of roses, a box of candy, a thick new novel and a tiny note from Mr. Dare expressing the hope that I would not be lonely during the evening. I must say I think Mr. Dare was very nice in some ways. He was especially thoughtful about automobiles. Sunday he took father and me around Washington in a big touring car. Monday he suggested that I go to the concert at the marine barracks.

I was greatly astonished and delighted to meet my old school friend, Laura Burnett, after the concert. I had not seen her for years, for she married a marine officer when she was a mere child.

"Jack is stationed here now," she explained, "and we are having a lovely time. We are going to Fort Myer to a hop to-night, and you must go with us. Jack and I know a lot of bachelor officers who will make it pleasant for you."

Just then a perfectly stunning-looking young man joined us and she introduced him as Capt. Blossom, and he begged to be my escort to the hop.

At first I hesitated, but it seemed to me that it would be foolish to miss a military hop just to go to the theater, so I accepted the invitation. Laura and I went down to the hotel in the taxicab and I got an evening dress out of my trunk and wrote a few lines to father asking him to tell Mr. Dare that I was dreadfully sorry to miss the play and that I hoped he and father would have a good time without me.

Capt. Blossom and I dined with the Burnetts and then we all went over to Fort Myer and had a perfectly delightful evening. I certainly think there are no men so handsome on a dancing floor as officers in uniform.

"Where is Mr. Dare?" I asked father the next day at luncheon, for I did not get up to breakfast.

"He took the midnight train for New York," said father. "I'm very much afraid that your absence from the play last night offended Dare, for he went away very unceremoniously."

"Oh, daddy, he never could have missed poor little me," I said, laughingly, but father still looked grave.

The trip home was awfully dull. Father was engrossed in his business papers and when he did talk he kept saying that he feared Mr. Dare's feelings had been hurt.

"Goodness, father," I said, at last, "don't worry. Surely Mr. Dare isn't a sensitive plant. When he calls on me, as he said he would, you'll see that he's just as cordial as ever."

But, strangely enough, although he has been at home several days, Mr. Dare has not yet called. Neither has Capt. Blossom sent me the photograph of himself in full-dress uniform that he promised to forward at once. Sometimes I think men are all faithless creatures.

His Experience.
Peckers, who had loved and won. Once let this sentence fall: "The better to have loved and lost. Than never to have loved at all."

Rubbing It In.
Ensign—Yess, several years ago I fell in love with a girl, but she rejected me, doncher know—made a regular fool of me.

Miss Kean—Now, that what I call a meanly shame. I've often wondered how it happened.

NEW AND ARTISTIC SHAPE

Bodice Made of Petals is One of the Distinct Novelties of the Season.

Among the startling bodices that are worn in the afternoon with the high-waisted, long skirt is one that is made of petals. It is quite interesting and very artistic. The gown is a dull purple satin cloth, the skirt made with four scanty circular flounces that are sloped sharply across the figure from right to left. The material is slightly draped at top of high waist line and caught at the left side with a buckle of amethysts.

The bodice is full over the chest. It is made in tones of purple. There is a satin lining of dull purple, covered with silver fish net, then white Lierre lace. Over this there are petals in one tone of purple that run downward from collar bone to bust, and other petals of black velvet that run from top of skirt to bust. The sleeves are made in the same way, and the stock is of the lace edged with a bit of gold.

ANTIQUE SETTINGS IN FAVOR

Designs for Necklaces Go Far Back to the Days of Our Ancestors.

One sees on every hand wonderful necklaces, antique or imitation. These are worn by women who could put on a row of pearls or diamonds without depleting the jewel casket. Some are worn by women who have no other kind of jewelry to display.

Of course, the jewellers are remounting stones into this fashion, and offering new ones to catch the artistic buyer.

Small pearls are very much in favor strung in festoons, caught with medallions of quaint workmanship. Many of these have been planned by the metal workers, who are now widely in demand. Even diamonds or emeralds are set in odd mountings, with the gem partly covered, so that all attention is given to the metal workmanship.

DAINTY BATISTE WAIST.

This dainty waist is of fine batiste, made with clusters of tucks and trimmed with bands of swiss embroidery and with valenciennes lace.

WHEN AFRAID TO SHAMPOO

Hair May Be Brushed and Soaped Rubbed if One is Sensitive to Cold.

Some women whose hair is thick and who are sensitive to cold dread having their hair shampooed frequently. To keep the scalp clean under such conditions, great care is necessary.

Brush the scalp carefully, dividing the hair into strands. This loosens all dandruff, which should be shaken from the hair by loosening it and holding it at arm's length.

Rubbing the scalp with a sponge dipped in witch hazel is a good substitute for a regular shampoo. There are also certain proprietary preparations for scalp cleansing and dandruff removing which do not necessitate wetting the long hair.

The Use of Crash.

When heavy Russian crash, such as is now used for portieres, is too narrow in width, don't be dissuaded from the use of this beautiful colorless material, but just overcast its width together, after the manner of the Bagdad portiere. You will find no hangings more effective for studio and library use than those of soft-toned crash, and the heavy linen overcasting down each seam will render them even more attractive. To do the overcasting use the coarsest of carpet thread or a flax that is sold in skeins.

Crepe Meteor.

Crepe meteor is excellent for an evening dress for spring and summer wear. Countless, perhaps, are the methods of fashioning this goods, for it looks becoming shirred, gathered, plaited, tucked or left severely plain. It demands a showy trimming for rich results, something easily supplied in embroidered nets, fringes and the like. Laces and gold net enhance such materials. It is one material on the market with an excellent substitute, for its imitation is beautiful, soft and glossy, though it shows a poor backing.

Two Different Causes.

"Oh, dear," sighed the pretty heiress, "I'm so awfully miserable!" "Why are you miserable?" queried the maid who was both kindly and penniless.

"I'm afraid some one will marry me for my money," answered the pretty heiress.

"And I," rejoined the poor girl, "am miserable because I'm afraid we shall marry the heiress I know of."

CORNER IN ANCESTORS

By FRANCIS COWLES

Hill Family

(Copyright by McClure Syndicate)

There have been Hills in England for ages. The first man who bore the name got it because he lived on a hill and the medieval form of the word was Atte, signifying on or of a hill. There were also other early forms of the name in England. The Hills of Sattington, Staffordshire, are descended from a man of Worcester named De Mone or De Mont. They retained the French form of the name until the fifteenth century, when they adopted an Anglicized form, Hyll. And the Hills of Hawstone are descended from Hugh de la Hulle.

A good many early settlers in this country bore the name of Hill, and it is rather difficult to tell which of them was here first. This honor is claimed, however, by the family of John Hill of Guilford, Conn. Although the first recorded date of his presence in this country is 1854, when he was a resident of Guilford, he may have been in this country for a good many years before he settled there. Anyway, whether or not another man of his name preceded him to America, John of Guilford established an interesting family.

Bill

This Goodman Hill came from Northamptonshire, England. Before 1657 he was a freeman of Guilford. He was a small planter and a thrifty and prosperous citizen of the community. He was twice married and left five children, John, James, Hannah, Elizabeth and Sarah.

One of the most interesting members of this family was Samuel, son of John of the second generation and grandson of the first John. Samuel was a man of great activity. He was a landholder, and he served as town clerk, as clerk of the probate court, and from 1725 to his death in 1752 he was a judge. Whatever he did he did with thoroughness and energy, and to this day we sometimes say, "He works like Sam Hill," or "I'll have to hurry like Sam Hill."

Another of the early Hills in this country was John, of Dorchester, Mass. He was probably a landholder there as early as 1632, two decades earlier than the first definite date of John of Guilford. John of Dorchester is first mentioned in 1634, when "it is agreed that the great lots from Mr. Rosseter's to John Hill's (ward) Napocet in breadth, and eight score in length shall be forthwith enclosed by a good sufficient pale." He was born about 1602 and it is supposed that he came from Chard, Somersetshire, England. In that place there was a family named Hill, in which, in 1628, a John is mentioned as being of age, but as yet unmarried. Five years later the records state that this John had "removed," and it is supposed from this that he was the immigrant to Dorchester, Mass.

He was married in Ireland to Susanna Armstrong. Their son, Peter, born in 1751, was a captain in the revolutionary war when he was only 25 years old. He was in Col. James Clinton's regiment and took part in the defense of Fort Montgomery in 1777, when it was attacked by Clinton.

The big branch of the Hill family in the south was founded by Col. Edward Hill of "Shirley," Charles City county, Va.

His son, Col. Edward the second, was as prominent as his father. He, too, was a member of burgesses. From 1697 to 1700, when he died, he was judge of the admiralty court for Virginia and North Carolina.

The late Nathaniel P. Hill, United States senator from Colorado, a public man of some note, was descended from Nathaniel Hill of Dwaarskill, N. Y. He was born in the north of New York in 1705 and 25 years later came to America. He settled on the western frontier of the Scotch-Irish settlements then already established west of the Hudson river.

Of course a family of this size was well represented in the revolution. There was one colonel of the name, the captain above mentioned, 11 lieutenants and many non-commissioned officers. And the number of private who served their country in that war was very large.

The arms of the Hills of Virginia are blazoned: A lion passant, with the crest. A demi-lion.

Spiritism Said To Be Demonism.

A most interesting little brochure has recently come off the press, setting forth with Bible proofs that the communications received by and through Spiritist Mediums is of Demon origin. The writer traces his subject through the Scriptures from the time when certain of the holy angels became disobedient. He proves from the Scriptures that these fallen spirits deal in personating the human dead, with whose past history, spirits, though invisible, are thoroughly acquainted. He shows that they also frequently personate the Creator and the Redeemer, commanding their deceived ones to pray, do penance, etc. This, however, is merely to lead them on and to bring them more thoroughly under demoniacal control. Sometimes by breaking down the natural barrier, the human will, they obsess their victim and rule him more or less to his ruin—frequently sending such to the mad-house. Numerous illustrations, Scriptural and otherwise, are given. The price of the little book is but ten cents; it should be in the hands of all interested in Spiritism or who have friends interested therein. Enclose five-cent stamps to the Bible and Truth Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Difficult Scriptures On Hell.

A little book selling at only ten cents, postpaid, is having a very wide circulation—running up into the millions. It contains some very startling information respecting the meaning of the word Hell. It claims to demonstrate, both from the Hebrew and the Greek of our Bible, that Hell is NOT a place of eternal torment, but merely another name for the Tomb, the Grave, the State of Death. It affects to show that man was not redeemed from a far-off place of eternal torture, but quotes the Scriptures, proving that he was Redeemed from the Grave at the cost of his Redeemer's life, and that the Scriptural hope, both for the Church and the World, is a resurrection hope based upon the death and resurrection of Jesus. The book is certainly worth the reading. The information it furnishes is certainly valuable, far beyond its trifling cost. Order it at once from the Bible and Truth Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

HER NEW SUIT

"The only time I really wish I were a man," said the girl who likes to talk,
"is when I have to order my new spring suit! All a man has to do is drop in at his tailor's, run through a few samples, say 'I'll take that,' and saunter out!"

"It's different with a girl. Way back in the winter she begins to worry about that suit. The color bothers. She decides on blue and everybody shrieks in horror. 'Blue! Why, you had a blue suit last year!'"

"Her brother begins to tell of the handsome suit he saw on a girl downtown made of black and white checks.
He says she looked perfectly stunning,
and you should have seen her eyes."

"Then her sister vetoes the check because one gets so tired of anything pronounced. A gray would be good.
"Then your best friend comes in with a sample of lavender homespun and you long for lavender, though you know down in the bottom of your heart that it isn't practical, and you'd have to buy a million lavender accessories to go with it, and anyhow, if you did get it your chum would be madder than a hatter."

"When you really go to the tailor's
you are in a very low frame of mind and the world looks dark. The tailor is very glad, indeed, to see you, and as for samples—ah! when once you see his sample books you will lose yourself in wonder and amazement.
because, really, there never were such samples as he has this spring! You begin to cheer up while he opens the books. There are several hundred samples and surely among all of them—

"But hold! Isn't there anything but gray and blue samples in the world?
Have they forgotten how to make any other color? He assures you positively that nothing will be worn this spring but gray and blue. Instantly you decide that you wouldn't have a suit of either if it were given you, and at the same moment you know what you want. You want a light tan and you say so."

"Artfully the tailor shows you more gray and blue till you rise in wrath and shriek for tan. Then he admits that maybe you are enlightened enough to desire tan, and reluctantly gets out some. For some mysterious reason a tailor always balks at whatever color you choose. He invariably wants you to have something else."

"After you've decided on an English worsted you remember that Alice had a worsted and it wore shiny. That cuts out worsted. The homespun look heavy and the basket weaves look pulpy. By this time you have a tearing headache and go home with your handbag full of samples and your heart full of bitterness."

"On the way you meet Genevieve, and when you tell her where you have been she says, 'My dear! Whatever you do, don't go to that tailor! Why, he simply ruined my sister-in-law's suit! And tan will get so soiled!'"

"Your family likewise elevates its eyebrows in pity when you murmur that tan is your choice. Each member inters that of course if you have taken leave of your senses it is sad but can't be helped, and each will conceal your affliction from the world as long as possible. As for a basket weave—horrors! Don't you know it will sag and pull and look horrible before you've had it a week? Mercy on us!"

"When you retire for the night you cry yourself to sleep and wish you could wear a potato sack and let it go at that. You don't care if you never have a suit."

"The next day when you wearily say maybe you'd better get gray, because it doesn't matter how you look anyhow if everybody else is satisfied, your mother asks reproachfully if you've forgotten the expensive tan pamphlet she bought you on your earnest solicitation last year? Don't you intend to wear it again this season, and how, pray tell, can you wear it with a gray suit? Have you no consideration at all for your family?"

"Well, you finally order a tan suit,
feeling terribly reckless as you do so.
There is some trouble over the fact that your idea of a longish coat conflicts with the current mode. The tailor nearly has apoplexy because he says every coat this spring is short and jaunty, and the fact that jauntyness does not appeal to you as an ideal state makes no impression on him."

"After a battle you win the length of coat you want, but you also win the tailor's sniffling disapproval. After several thousand fittings and fights over pockets or no pockets, lapped seams or plain seams, cloth buttons or bone buttons, long skirt or short skirt,
your suit is finished and sent home,
but you are too sick of the sight of it to open the box and when you attire yourself in it you somehow do not have that gay and blithesome cheeriness which should attend a brand-new outfit."

"Still, you look pretty well. A little bird is beginning to sing somewhere down in your heart as you start out, and you observe that the sky is actually blue—when around the corner you run into a girl who always has hated you."

"Oh," she says, "How well your season-before-last suit looks, all pressed and brushed up! You'd never know it wasn't—what? You don't mean to say it is new? Why, how stupid of me, but I never dreamed of such a thing!"

"That's what a girl goes through when she gets a new suit!"

Soiled the Water Utensils.
Utensils and troughs for food and water should be frequently scalded with boiling water, afterwards being thoroughly cleaned. Though a little extra work may be required, this cleaning up is a good preventive of many diseases and may save work and loss later.

TEA BALL INSIDE THE POT

New Idea Has Much to Recommend It —Makes Presence of Grounds Impossible.

A tea or coffee pot with a tea ball attachment inside has been designed by two Connecticut men. The advantage of this device is that the drink has the full flavor of the tea or coffee used in the ball without having any grounds in it. A hole is bored through the knob of the pot and a chain running through this keeps the ball suspended. When not in use the ball can be drawn up into the lid, but to make the tea or coffee it is filled with either of these ingredients, lowered into the water in the pot and kept there until the water has boiled long enough. Penetrating the perforations in the ball
the water becomes as fully flavored as if the tea or coffee was lying loosely in it, but there is no danger of the liquid getting "groundy," as the grounds are safe in the ball. Any person who has a tea ball could make this attachment to a tea or coffee pot by simply boring a hole in the top of the pot.

REASON FOR FALLING HAIR

Physical Condition Must Be Made Perfect Before Much Improvement
Can Be Expected.

Physical condition has much to do with the appearance of one's hair. Excessive fatigue, poor circulation, worry, or dyspepsia will quickly make itself visible in the hair. If it does not fall badly, it grows dull and luster-less or so brittle that it is hard to arrange.

An excessive amount of oil in the hair is often to be traced to ill health.
Also the scalp is sore to the touch, especially when accompanied by falling hair.

This last condition is generally due to sluggish circulation, and the hair drops out for want of nourishment.
Often the scalp is so thin and tight it cannot be easily moved by the finger tips.

Systematic treatment is the one cure for such conditions if you wish to keep your hair. Preferably it should be given by the most successful scalp doctor you know; if this is out of the question, massage the scalp regularly twice a day to revive capillary action and conquer the sluggish condition.

When going to a hair specialist you can help in the cure by building up your general health. Remember there is nothing like air, exercise, simple food, and plenty of sleep to make and keep one well.

When having hair treated avoid rich foods, late hours. Take brisk walks daily or twice a day if inclined to weakness that prevents much walking at a time. Do not exercise to point of fatigue. Rest when you feel tired, but if possible take your daily rests on a porch, or better yet, on a sunny roof.

KIMONO SLEEVE COMES BACK

Vogue Somewhat Hard for the Amateur to Handle—Where It Is at Its Best.

The sleeve of raglan or kimono cut is coming again. In fact, it is here and one has the advantage of having partially mastered it during its last stay.

It is none too easy of accomplishment and there is no cause for dissatisfaction on the part of the amateur who is not wholly successful in her first attempt, for this loose type of sleeve requires experience.

It needs, too, a certain breadth of shoulder and should be avoided by those who would gain width, in effect, at least. The raglan sleeve has, in the main, a narrowing effect, but is admirably suited to the woman of comfortable proportions and generous shoulder measurements.

When made with embroidered or galloon bands it is at its best, providing its decoration is justified by the elegance of material.

This waist is of the simplest possible cut, the goods being folded over the shoulder, the neck cut out and an under-arm seam so taken as to leave room for arm movement.

House Frocks.
The new materials that are being shown are for the most part decidedly heavier, though quite as soft and pliant as they were last year. Among them, however, in spite of the prominence given to heavy cloths, silks, velvets and cashmeres of all weights and weaves, there are many new materials admirably adapted to house gowns and negligees. Marquisette in soft, bright colors makes the most delightful sort of tea gown.

For the Housewife.
Stuffed potatoes are made by mixing cheese and bread crumbs in with the contents.

When boiling fresh potatoes try putting a sprig of mint in the water to give a delicious flavor to the vegetables.

Plaster Figures in Hart or Alabaster
Knobs are easily cleaned by dipping a soft toothbrush in gasoline and scrubbing into all the crevices.

A LITTLE ABOUT EVERYTHING

Some Labor Savers for the Housewife
—Wooden Bowl the Best for Washing Glass.

Have a wooden bowl for washing glass if possible, and keep it specially for the purpose, for it is impossible to polish glass if there be any trace of grease in the water used for washing it. Some people like hot water and some use cold for washing glass. Good effects may be obtained with either if the polishing be done carefully with nice dry soft towels.

Window glass, lamps and lamp glasses, marble and stone vases or mantels, granite sills, etc., if rubbed with salt are quickly cleaned.

Always keep the inside of your coffee pot bright and insure good coffee.
Boil it out occasionally with soap, water and wood ashes and scour thoroughly.

When eggs are scarce and they are needed for puddings, a dessertspoonful of cornstarch may be substituted for one egg.

Bread dressing may be served with a pot roast as well as one put in the oven. The bread should be baked separately in a cake tin.

When vells are washed at home they usually come out quite limber and flimsy. To give them stiffness add a pinch of sugar to the rinse water.

If when ironing anything white you find a soiled spot, dampen a piece of white cloth and put a little cream of tartar on, then rub the soiled spot;
you will be surprised to see it disappear.

When using stale bread for puddings always soak it in a cold liquid.
Bread that has been soaked in cold
milk or water is light and crumbly, whereas that soaked in hot liquids is heavy.

The Home.

Cracks in the woodwork around sinks may be filled with melted paraffin or bits of wax candle that are too small to use as lights.

Sandstarrs will get stale much sooner if they are put in a stone jar. They should go in airtight tin. Ginger snaps, on the other hand, are improved by keeping in stone.

The mother who does her own sewing saves her own time and the children's tempers by keeping a memorandum of their different measurements, instead of taking them for each garment to be made.

Before muffs are put away for the season they should be held by the cord and twirled so the hairs come straight. They should then be put in their boxes and a piece of paper pasted over the crack between the lid and the box.

If tissue paper is wrapped around silver before it is slipped into the canton flannel bags it will need much less cleaning.

Silver polishing is made less laborious if badly tarnished articles are boiled in soda water before whitening is used.

Eggs a La L'Espagnol.

Tomatoes, green pepper and cream
are other ingredients for this delicious and filling dish. Drain a can of whole tomatoes of superfluous liquid, put them in a baking dish and add two green peppers, denuded of seeds and pith, a gill of pure cream, a little butter, cayenne, salt and a shaving of garlic if this taste is liked. Let the dish bake slowly three-quarters of an hour, adding cream or good milk if it gets too dry. Then, a few minutes before serving, carefully break six eggs, side by side, on top and let the dish bake further until these have poached. Serve on crisp buttered toast made of white bread.

A Fixed Belief.

"My dear woman, is your husband
an altruist?"
"Law, no, mum. He and his folks has always been homeopaths."
