OFFICE BOOTH & GARRETT LABORATORY, &c.
Philadelphia, March 24th, 1871.

It is our constant practice to make chemical analysis of the Phosphate manufactured by Messrs. WATSON & CLARK, of this city. We analyze the materials employed in the manufacture, the materials in the course of manufacture, and the finished product ready for commerce. We know from our analysis that it is the constant endeavor of W. & C. to throw into market a uniform and reliable fertilizer, which shall not be inferior to the best, but rather surpass them. The average analysis of the phosphate of the year shows the contents of their fertilizer to be:

Soluble Phosphoric Acid about 7 per cent. equivalent to total Bone Phosphate 15 per cent.
Total Phosphoric Acid about 15 per cent. equivalent to total Bone Phosphate 32 3/4 per cent.
Ammonia about 1 per cent., equivalent to Sulphate of Ammonia, 4 per cent.
The Soluble Phosphoric Acid fluctuates from 6 1/2 to 7 1/2 per cent., the total from 14 1/2 to 16 per cent., and the Ammonia, from 1 to 1 1/2 per cent.

As we have made numerous analyses of similar fertilizers, made by other firms, we can assert that the article made by W. & C., is not surpassed by any others on sale that we have examined, but that it is decidedly superior to the greater part of them, and is, moreover, very uniform in composition.

Respectfully yours,
BOOTH & GARRETT.

THE PAST.

IL PASTO, E PASTO, E PER SEMPRE!
The Past is past with many a hopeful morrow,
In error and its good work live with God;
The agony is o'er of joy or sorrow;
The flowers lie dead along the path we trod.

The Past is past in solemn silence taking Alone the sunny and the rainy day,
On the life-star of the fond heart beating Full many an idol built on foot of clay.

The Past is past: in certain still rotation, Deciding and deciding, as it passes by,
Each hope that bounds in glad anticipation,
Each vivid passion and each tender tie.

The Past is past: and our young selves departed Upon the fishing wharf of its swift years;
Its lessons leave us sadder, stronger, wiser,
More slow to live, less proud of tears.

The Past is past: and knowledge, taught in suspicion,
To dim the future with its foul, cold shade;
For many a base and dark thing finds admission
And the wisdom learnt from life and fate.

The Past is past: and in that twilight valley Dwell all repentance and the vain regret;
Fears from the future from those shadows eally,
And hang around the path before us yet.

The Past is past: and oh! how few deplore it,
Or would re-live their life had they the power;
Yet Nature sometimes weakly weeps o'er it,
At memory of some wrong, or happier hour.

The Past is past: in faith and patience taking
Its lesson, let us lay them on our hearts;
The chain, the attenuated link, the breaking
The earnest use the Present ere it parts.

THE HAMILTON BROTHERS.
A LOVE STORY.

We sat and talked in the firelight, my brother Frank and I, just as we had sat and talked a hundred times before in the cozy, backward years which we two brothers had spent together.

Suddenly looking up, Frank met my eyes fixed upon his moody face, and running his fingers lazily through his curly hair, he laughed, but his laugh had not its old warm, careless ring.

"How well Bent seems to be getting on out in Melbourne, Max," he said. "His letter to you is filled with his own prosperity."

"It seems to me merely written to ask if we could send him out an assistant," I answered, speaking lightly.

"Of course you do not know any assistant to send out to Bent," Frank said. "The poorest young surgeons of your acquaintance are ourselves, the Hamilton Brothers, and thank Heaven, we have not fallen quite so low as to exile ourselves voluntarily as drug-misers to Bent. I would not change quarters with him for any consideration, but I fear I envy his success. You must own, Max, that it is hard fighting here."

"So it is anywhere, in any profession, just at first," I answered, quietly. "There is but one thing we can do. However small our income, we can live down to it, and work hard to increase it. That, I take it, is the secret of success, Frank. We canvassed our prospects, and then Frank told me how anxious he was to succeed, that he might win Leticia for his wife. It was Leticia's birthday and we were going to pay our respects to her on this eventful occasion. Frank told me how great a trial it was to him, waiting and struggling for success that he might marry, and I asked: 'Frank, do you feel that the waiting is a trial, too, for—her?'"

"I know what you mean," he answered, slightly pausing. "Yes, Max, I think so."

"Do you know it?" I questioned, in a low voice, whose sadness touched my own heart. And he answered, with no pause at all.

"Yes, Max, I know it."

We had just finished dressing, when I startled Frank by saying, very quietly: "I have made up my mind to go out to Bent."

"To—what?"

"Simply what I said—to go out to Bent, I want a change, and a change holding out some prospect of success. Why should I not seize this opportunity?"

"But—you take me so fearfully by surprise, a far cleverer surgeon than Bent; you go and be his servant."

We stood under the bare old line-tree, which in summer shaded the doorway, and my hand was on the bell, when Frank stayed it, and spoke a few words in unusual earnestness. "Tell me one thing, Max, before we go in. You do not decide to leave here for my sake—because I have so often complained that our practice is not sufficient for two; and because you know I want to marry, and can not do so as we are? You would not leave your home, and your friends, and me, and go out to drudgery for that reason, Max? I shall not be comfortable unless you tell me that you do it for your own sake."

Knowing that my going would spare me one great pain which, in my cowardice, I shrink from, I answered him with a quick "Yes."

We had a very pleasant evening with Leticia. I did not feel very happy, and my dejected appearance was referred to more than once during the evening. Frank made some remark, when I in reply said: "The fact is, Leticia, Frank can not understand my last new whim—which is to go out to Melbourne to join an old friend of ours."

And this was how I told her; on her birthday night, I, who had worked, and hoped, and waited, for the fulfillment of that bright dream which now lay shattered into fragments in the pretty, cheerful room.

"What do you think, Leticia of this new project of Max's?" asked Frank, laughingly, as she moved by the teatable.

She simply said, "I do not like it; but if Max thinks it is best, I suppose he does well to carry out his project."

"Max" said Leticia's father, as he came in looking curiously at me what's this the little one tells me? You are surely not thinking, in any seriousness, of going abroad?"

"I have decided to do so indeed as soon as Frank and I can arrange matters here."

"I can not believe it. Why, if my own daughter had suddenly told me she was going I could not have been more astonished. What can have decided you?"

I have learned by experience I said trying to force a laugh that Redbury is unfortunately too healthy a place to support so many doctors.

Frank and I walked home that night very silently. I think we had never before passed along the narrow quiet old streets after an evening spent with Leticia, without talking of her and of the home she made so bright and happy. But when we entered our own silent room we both hesitated as if unwilling to separate so.

"Max" began Frank at last, stooping down to push a spill into smoldering fire, this house seems dreary enough to return to even with you. What will it seem I wonder, when you are gone?"

"It depends on who shall live here then dear fellow" answered. No house where you and Leticia live could be dreary in any way."

"I could see the scarlet rush into his face even before he lighted the gas. Then he turned to me with joyous eyes, and leaning on the chimney-piece, asked me laughingly when I would come back and prove that for myself."

"I will come," I said quite cheerfully, "in—let me see—in twenty years, perhaps."

Oh nonsense Max, he cried in his quick earnestness unconsciously laying one hand upon my arm; you will come for my wedding."

"For your wedding?" I echoed as if the words spoken so simply had bewildered me. "Frank, does she really love you?"

"Why, Max, old fellow I never saw you so nervous before. Are you afraid that I am deceiving myself—or that she is deceiving me?"

"No—never afraid of that. You know she loves you, Frank?"

"Yes, Max, I know it."

"Then I will come—unless you marry within ten years' time."

Frank's whistle of astonishment broke in on a hearty laugh. "A nice little waiting time you allow us Max. We shall certainly have had leisure to think it well over."

"If you do not marry until then," I went on laughing too. "I will come. If you do you must have your big brother represented, and I will come to you for a holiday in ten years' time."

"Ten years!" mused Frank; "what a weary time to look on to unless one is anticipating a happy future."

Day after day, until the last hour came, had I shrunk from bidding farewell to Leticia. Then I just went to her, as I had gone many a time before, standing and chatting idly in the pretty room where we had often been so gay together.

"If Frank is to drive home for you in time to catch the express, you allow us a very short time indeed," said Mr. Oldfield.

"And yet it is a long good-bye," added Leticia, jestingly, you are not coming home for a long, long time, are you Max?"

"Frank and I have made an important arrangement about that," I answered, trying to jest, because I fancied she would understand what he had asked me to do. I am going to stay ten years unless he wants me."

"If he does not want you you prefer staying out there?"

Yes. What prospect is there of any one else wanting me?"

"I suppose none she answered quietly, as you say so; but he shall be glad to see you when you return. Not that you will care for that either for you care for nothing you know except fortuitous your life."

Her words in their quiet simple earnest, stabbed me to the heart.

"That is a wide word, Leticia," I said and a word which even yet I have not fathomed.

"But you expect to do so in Melbourne?"

"I hope so."

With an odd little laugh she changed the subject; and very soon Frank drove up to the gate, Mr. Oldfield and Amy went out and stood beside the dogcart, talking to him, while I followed more slowly. Leticia came with me, and stood a minute under the bare old line tree, with the winter sunshine on her bright young face. And I—looking down upon her—knew that this picture would dwell in my heart through all my lonely life.

Her just as; scorn was all gone now only her eyes were a little puzzled, and a little sad.

"You will be quite happy, Max," she said with that happiness which makes others happy too.

"Tell me how Leticia, I cried the strong and passionate love of my heart trembling in my voice. Tell me how to wipe this happiness."

"I can not," she answered, softly. I can not teach you what you know so well. "Leticia" I said, my one dearest friend this is the last moment. Give me some few words of help to take with me—as a sister would have given them to me.

Very softly, while her clear, sweet eyes looked bravely into mine, she whispered the little verse which had been over with me since, and has helped me often, as her voice could help me in those far off days.

There is a cross in every lot,
And an earnest need of prayer;
But a low's heart that leans on God,
Is happy everywhere.

From the gate I looked back wistfully to where she still stood under the winter branches, and she smiled one bright, quick smile and ran in.

Then I sat down beside Frank and Amy sprang up and gave me with tear-filled eyes, the only kiss among all my sad good-byes.

Later on in the frosty winter morning, we two brothers who had been together all our lives parted on the dock of the great waiting vessel, with only a few broken words, and one long, close, lingering hand-grasp.

"The ten years are passing and you must keep your promise, Max, and come."

I read the words over and over again. It was not yet ten, but over seven years since I had set foot in Melbourne and in every letter Frank had sent me through those long years I had expected him to tell me what he had told me at last. Yet now that it was told the lines seemed to swim before my eyes, and my fingers would not write the glad and congratulatory words I wished to send him.

"Now that my reward come" he wrote has I claim your promise. We only delay our marriage for your arrival. Max, old fellow, you would have felt happy for me indeed, if you had seen how willingly Mr. Oldfield gave my darling to me. I had been a son to him for years he said; I could hardly be nearer when I was his daughter's husband. And now my cup of happiness will be full when you come. How soon can you be home?"

So upon a bright spring morning Frank and I met once more in England; and tired with a tiredness which I had never felt before in all my life I rested that evening in my own old chair beside the cherry home fire, striving to look back joyfully into my brother's beaming face.

"You are very tired Max," said Frank in his quick glad tones.

"A little; but I was not thinking of that I was thinking how utterly content you are Frank."

"So I ought to ought I not? because I am so utterly content. Do I look changed in any other way?"

"No none."

"So I look utterly content. Do I yet I have had trouble too. You ought to say you see the traces Max."

"What trouble has it been I asked?"

"A trouble of five years ago Max," he answered quietly. "a trouble I never felt that I could tell you in a letter. When I first asked Leticia to be my wife she—refused me Max."

"I feared so Frank," I said so low that he stooped forward to catch the words. I had never said a word of this kind to her. But never mind, dear fellow, as it has ended so brightly, as you say."

It seemed like a dream to be walking once more by Frank's side along the shadowy streets, and still more like a dream to be entering unannounced the pretty familiar room, where Leticia sat alone at the window sewing in the twilight.

"Leticia," cried Frank in gay eagerness, here's Max."

I was standing opposite her looking down upon her with still calm eyes; the grave elder brother of her affianced husband. She dropped her work, and put her two hands into mine in quick greeting; and I spoke to her just as I knew Frank would wish me to speak to her, watching all the while his face as well as hers. She was changed more than he was. The face that had been almost childlike in shy sunny beauty was a woman's face now; deeper and graver, but infinitely more beautiful. I thought as I saw it old bright sunny smile still there. She looked up at Frank, a wonderful light shining in her eyes.

"Now you have all you wish, Frank," she said. And I felt that she was as happy in his love as he was in hers. I stood beside them talking in laughing, genial tones; hoping that she could never guess how hardly I had schooled myself to this.

Presently Frank passed out through the open window, and Leticia, looking after him, raised her eyes questioningly to me.

"You think us all changed, I suppose, Max," Frank said, absently.

"But you have not seen sister Amy yet she went on smiling. She of course is most changed of all. Frank is gone to fetch her I fancy. He says she is

The perversion of the message was immediately telegraphed to Russia by the Russian Minister, and the Czar was so indignant that he immediately declared war.

Just at this time President Greeley undertook to write some letters to Prince Bismarck upon the subject of potato rot, after giving his singular views at great length, he concluded with the statement that if the Emperor William said that subsoil plowing was not good in light soils, or that guano was better than bone dust, he was a liar, a villain and a slave!

Of course the Emperor immediately declared war, and became an ally of Russia and of England, against which latter country Mr. Greeley had actually begun hostilities already, because the Queen in her speech from the throne, had declared the Tribune's advocacy of a tariff on pig iron incendiary, and calculated to disturb the peace of nations.

Unhappily, this was not the full measure of our disasters. The President had sent to the Emperor of Austria a copy of his book "What I Know, &c.," with his autograph upon a fly-leaf. The Emperor mistook the signature for a caricature of the American Eagle, and he heartily joined in the war against the United States; while France was provoked to the same act by the fact that when the French Minister came to call upon Mr. Greeley to present his credentials, the President, who was writing an editorial at the time, not comprehending the French language, mistook the ambassador for a beggar, and without looking up handed him a quarter and an order for a clean shirt, and said to him, "Go West, young man—go West."

So all these nations joined in making war upon the United States. They swooped down upon our coasts, and landed without opposition, for these exposed portions of our unhappy country were absolutely deserted. The President was afraid to call away the army from Kansas at first, for fear the outraged people upon the plains would come East in spite of him. But at last he did summon the army to his aid, and it moved to meet the enemy. It was too late. Before the troops reached Cincinnati the foreigners had seized Washington and all the country east of the Ohio, and had hung the President, the Cabinet and every member of Congress. The army disbanded in alarm, and the invaders moved to the far West, where they found the population dying of starvation because they had followed the advice of Greeley's book to "Try, for your first crop, to raise lions, and don't plant more than a bushel of quicklime in a hill!" Of course these wretched people were at the mercy of the enemy who—to his credit be it said—treated them kindly, fed them, and brought them back to their old homes.

You know what followed—how Prince Frederick William of Prussia ascended the American throne, and the other humiliations that ensued.—It was a fearful blow to Republicanism—a blow from which it will never recover. It made us, who were free men, a nation of slaves. It was all the result of our blind confidence in a misguided old man who thought himself a philosopher, but who was actually a fool. May heaven preserve you, my children, from the remorse I feel when I remember that I voted for that bucolic old editor.

The Rainbow.

A little after a thunder storm a beautiful rainbow bridged a portion of the sky. A little boy, called Henry, saw it from the window, and cried out full of joy, "Such wonderful and lovely colors I never saw before, Yonder, by the old willow on the stream, they reached from the clouds to the earth. Surely the leaves are trickling down with the beautiful colors. I will run and fill all my color shells in my paint box with them."

He ran as fast as he could to the tree; but, to his annoyance, the poor boy found himself standing there in the rain, and could no longer perceive a single color. Wet through and out of heart, he turned back and complained of his disappointment to his father. His father smiled and said, "These colors cannot be caught in any shell, they are only the rain drops, which so brightly painted for the little while in the rays of the sun. But so it is, my dear boy, with all the splendors of the world, though they may seem to be very beautiful, they are only empty show."

If outward show thy foolish heart deceives, Instead of joy, it will be thine to grieve.

[From the German.]

—Just as a traveller was writing his name on the register of a Leavenworth hotel, a bed-bug sallied out and took his way across the page. The man paused and remarked: "I've been bed-bitten by St. Joe fleas, bitten by Kansas City spiders, and interviewed by Fort Scott graybacks, but I was never in a place before where the bed-bugs looked over the hotel register to find out where your room was?"

—One of the old elegants of Boston advised a parish committee looking about for a pastor to take a young man, on the ground that every church should do its share of taming theological colts.

—A Duluth paper says one of the streams running into Lake Superior from the north is called "Temperance river," because it is the only one of the tributaries of the lake that has the mouth of it.

SEASON OF 1870-71. MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS.

Important Improvements.

Patented June 21st, and August 23, 1870.

Reduction of Prices.

The Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., have the pleasure of announcing important improvements in their Cabinet Organs, for which Patents were granted them in June and August last. These are not merely meretricious attachments, but enhance the substantial excellence of the instruments.

They are also enabled by increased facilities for manufacture, to make, from this date, a further reduction of prices on several leading styles.

Having completed and added to their former facilities a large new manufactory, they hope hereafter to supply all orders promptly.

The Cabinet Organs made by this Company are of such universal reputation, not only throughout America, but also in Europe, that few will need assurance of their superiority.

They now offer FOUR OCTAVE CABINET ORGANS, in quite plain cases, but equal according to their capacity to anything they make, for $200 each. The same, Double Reed, $250. Five stops, with Kne swell and Tremulant, in elegant case, with several of the same Extra, with new Vox Humana, Automatic Swell, &c., $300. Five Octaves, Three Sets Reeds, Seven Stops with Euphone; a splendid instrument, $325.

A new illustrated catalogue with full information and reduced prices, is now ready, and will be sent free, with a testimonial circular, presenting a great mass of evidence as to the superiority of these instruments, to any one sending his address to the Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., 134 Tremont St., Boston, or 390 Broadway New York.

DOTY'S WASHING-MACHINE.

LATELY MUCH IMPROVED—AND THE NEW UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER.

Improved with Rowell's Patent Double Cog-wheels, and the Patent Stop, are now unquestionably far superior to any apparatus for washing clothes ever invented, and will save their cost twice a year, by saving labor and clothes.

The former Editor of this paper, who purchased a Washer and Wringer, thus testifies as to their value:

"We can knowingly recommend these machines to be just what their manufacturer represents them. We have had them in regular use in our own family for over six months, and we find that all the really hard labor and drudgery of washing is entirely dispensed with by their use. Washing is a neat and pleasant employment for a lady with one of Doty's Washing Machines and Wringers, and we have thought that a millionaire, with no dependent heirs on whom to bestow his fortune, would become one of the greatest benefactors of his race by endowing a fund with which to give one of these Washing Machines to the thousands of overworked washerwomen which we have in our land. Notice the liberal offer made by Mr. Rowell in his advertisement. There is no deception in this offer, and we would be willing to guarantee its fulfillment to the letter. Let every family which can possibly do so buy Doty's Washing Machine and Wringer."

PRICES—A Fair Offer.

If the Merchants in your place will not furnish, or send for the Machines, send us the retail price, Washer $14, Extra Wringer $9, and we will forward either or both machines, free of freight, to place where so one is selling; and so sure are we they will be liked, that we agree to refund the money if any one wishes to return the machines free of freight, after a month's trial, according to directions.

No husband, father or brother, should permit the drudgery of washing with the hands, fifty-two days in the year, when it can be done better, more expeditiously, with less labor, and injury to the hands, by a Doty's Clothes Washer, and a Universal Wringer.

Sold by dealers generally, to whom liberal discounts are made.

Natures Gifts

Scientifically Developed.

As mankind, from indolence or other causes, has been doomed to suffer from disease, so also has remedy for disease been provided. Our bills and valleys abound with roots and herbs, which if scientifically prepared and used, will restore health and vigor to the invalid. To find such a remedy we should seek one that has stood the test of age.

Will be given for any case of this disease that accords to any case that uses the Bitters or Tonic as a preventive.

Those who have the Fever and Ague will find, after the chills have stopped, that by using a few bottles of the Bitters or Tonic, that the disease will not return.

These remedies will rebuild their Constitution faster than any other known remedy.

The remedies were before the public thirty years ago, with all the prejudices of so-called "patent medicine" operating against them, but gradually their virtues became known, and now, to day, they stand at the head of all preparations of their class, with the indorsement of eminent judges, lawyers, clergymen and physicians.

Read the following symptoms, and if you find that your system is affected by any of them you may rest assured that disease has commenced its attack on the most important organs of your body, and unless soon checked by the use of powerful remedies, a miserable life, soon terminating in death, will be the result.

OFFICE BOOTH & GARRETT LABORATORY, &c.
Philadelphia, March 24th, 1871.
It is our constant practice to make chemical analysis of the Phosphate manufactured by Messrs. WATSON & CLARK, of this city. We analyze the materials employed in the manufacture, the materials in the course of manufacture, and the finished product ready for commerce. We know from our analysis that it is the constant endeavor of W. & C. to throw into market a uniform and reliable fertilizer, which shall not be inferior to the best, but rather surpass them. The average analysis of the past year's work shows the contents of their fertilizer to be:

Soluble Phosphoric Acid about 7 per cent.
equivalent to total Bone Phosphate 15 per cent.
Total Phosphoric Acid about 15 per cent.
equivalent to total Bone Phosphate 32 1/2 per cent. Ammonia about 1 per cent., equivalent to Sulphate of Ammonia, 4 per cent.

The Soluble Phosphoric Acid fluctuates from 6 1/2 to 7 1/2 per cent., the total from 14 to 16 per cent., and the Ammonia, from 1 to 1 1/2 per cent.

As we have made numerous analyses of similar fertilizers, made by other firms, we can assure that the article made by W. & C. is not surpassed by any others. We are, therefore, decidedly superior to the greater part of them, and is, moreover, very uniform in composition.

Respectfully yours,
BOOTH & GARRETT.

Original Poetry.
Written for the "Advertiser."

The Barque.
On the waters lonely and dark,
I catch a glimpse of a sailing bark,
With proud masts cleaving the misty air,
With snowy canvas and pennon fair.

Outspread to lure the favoring wind;
The fair proud ship, 'till it disappears—
Away—away, 'till the setting sun
Where sea and sky seem blended in one.

Oh! gallant, and brave, and strong and free,
Thou proudly ride'st o'er the sunset sea,
Thou waves on waves of opaline light
Hide it for eyes, from my yearning sight.

Hide it for eyes, from my yearning sight,
Hide it for eyes, from my yearning sight,
I'd like to come to the shore again,
I've looked my last on the fair proud bark.

And the years henceforth will fall so dark,
With no gleam of hope or light
To brighten for me the night.
I risked my all on the venture lone,
What I have lost, will never be known.

Some shared with me the fair hope of gain—
The loss is mine, and mine, be the pain!
The loss is mine, and mine, be the pain!
The loss is mine, and mine, be the pain!

SUSAN LIPPE;
OR, THE LAWSUIT.
"I tell you what it is, gal," said old Mr. Lippe to his daughter Susan, "I'm determined never to hev a educated feller for my son-in-law; that's a fixed fact."

"But, father," said Susan, "education don't make or unmake a man any more than riches do. It's the soul, the principle, that constitutes a man."

"Very true, Susan," rejoined dad-dly Lippe, "and I've found precious little principle in college-bred fellows.
I tell you that I've got along well enough, and allus made my mark."

As the old man said this, his eye raved out of the window, over his broad and well-improved homestead with a glint of self-satisfaction.

Susan's father was no exception to men of his class, who, when they imagine an idea, are pig-headed in their adherence to it. Susan understood this trait of her father, and letting the argument drop, relapsed into silence.

While old Mr. Lippe entertained such notions of letters, and, by the way, was always taking pains to inform everybody concerning them, he had devoted somewhat with respect to his only child, Susan, who had improved the advantages bestowed by an excellent public school, situated in Stanhope, a small village adjoining her father's farm. Her mind, too, being naturally of a studious cast, she had stored it with an unusually large amount of information, which displayed itself in a refined conversation and well-bred vivacity of manners. To these graces of the intellect, was added a beautiful person, and, as a matter of consequence, her hand was the coveted prize of more than one young man in the neighborhood.

To the blameworthy of the sterner sex, however, Susan turned a deaf ear. The young Stanhoppers loved her father's broad acres just as well as they did his daughter, who, with the quick instinct of a woman, penetrated the shallowness of their protestations of love. Besides, there was a young lawyer who had entered suit for her heart, and won his case, while teaching school a short time previous to his admission to the bar. It would have been singular if the daughter of the obstinate Lippe had not been equally obstinate in the constancy of her affection for Henry Coverdale, her litigious lover.

Of this attachment, however, daddy Lippe was blissfully ignorant. He had never seen young Coverdale, and that young gentleman, being well aware of the antipathies of his contemplated father-in-law towards schoolmasters and their like, prudently refrained from visiting Susan at her home. The accommodations of the house of a maternal aunt of Susan's in Stanhope were vouchsafed them, her uncle, the harnessmaker, rather liking, than otherwise, their clandestine visits. In this way the lovers managed to keep the fire on the altar of their hearts fanned to a bright flame.
The impatient Coverdale desired to bring his suit to an issue, but the dutiful Susan would not consent to an elopement. With the hope of modifying her sire's views on the subject of education, she had introduced the theme, with what success is recorded above.

That night, after the family prayers, quite an animated colloquy took place between Susan's parents. The door of Susan's chamber being ajar, she became an innocent listener to the conversation, which, as it concerned herself alone, proved rather interesting. Mother Lippe was in Susan's secret, and favored it with all her might.

"Now, old man," said she, as that functionary was covering up the fire, the last thing before going to bed, "it's downright mean in you to oppose Susan's ties about learning. I'd not hav any ignorant scallawag rooting around after my daughter."

"I rule this roost," responded dad-dly Lippe.
"And I'll make the roost hot for you," rejoined the dame. "Times ain't now what they was when we was youngsters. Just think of mating Susan to Mat. Awi; or yet to Chris.
Gabby, the shoemaker, who has about as much of an ijee of books as a hog has of meeting."

"There's no might of use argufying about it old woman; I'm sot."
"And so am I," replied the irate dame; and we'll see who'll sit to the most purpose. If Susan can't marry the kind of man she wants to, she can stay at home, and that's the end of it."

With this clincher, mother Lippe turned her face to the wall, and refused to say another word.
In the meantime, Henry Coverdale was gradually winning his way to eminence. As a speaker, he stood head and shoulders above any of the young men, his associates at the bar. The result of his efforts also began to flow in upon him in a golden stream. Yet he still remained a bachelor, though many wondered. Still there were no signs of old Mr. Lippe relaxing in the least from his views on "education."

However, things were destined to shape themselves entirely different to what a mere observer might reasonably hope to expect.
This grew out of Coverdale's love for Susan, which now assumed the cast of impatience.

One day a young man, in homespun garb, presented himself at the house of old Mr. Lippe, and inquired if he wanted to hire a hand on the farm.
The old farmer eyed him for some moments, and finding him remarkably well favored and knit together, said:
"Where are you from?"
"I live at Monroe when at home," replied the young man.
"Yes, sir."
"About how much do you want a month?"
"Whatever you think is right."
"You'll never get along in the world unless you drive a better bargain than that," said Mr. Lippe. "But I'll tell you what I'll do. You shall work a month for twenty dollars, and after that, if we suit one another, we'll bargain for a year."

"Agreed," said the young man, and was installed forthwith as a hired hand.
As the reader guesses, the hand was none other than Henry Coverdale, who had commenced to put into operation a plan to gain the old man's consent to his union with Susan.

Time wagged along. Old Lippe was mightily pleased with his hired hand, and often praised him to the women folks. Indeed, he looked with a degree of complacency on his attentions to Susan, which began to be marked—and Coverdale was on the point of popping the question, when a circumstance occurred which induced him to postpone it for a short season.

The circumstance was as follows:
The farm of Mr. Lippe was a part of a tract, the title of which had formerly been in dispute, though it was in deed and in equity his. Just at this time one of those land sharks that infect the country raked up a worthless claim, and entered suit for possession.

This proceeding was so obviously absurd and rascally, that Mr. Lippe merely laughed at it, although, at the advice of his hired hand, he appeared at court to refute the claim, supposing however, that his bare word would be sufficient to dispose of the scoundrel of a land shark. His hired hand also concluded to lose a day and go with him, in order, he said, "to see what a judge and court were like."

Old Mrs. Lippe and Susan accompanied them for the purpose of making some purchases, as they could get better bargains in the county town than in Stanhope.

The conversation of the family had placed Henry Coverdale in full possession of the facts in the case, and he manifested such an interest in the affair, and appeared to be so anxious as to the result, that the old man was not astonished to see him enter the bar and take a chair by his side. He noticed also that his dame and Susan were among the spectators in the court room.

The case was called, and the lawyer for the plaintiff arose and made out so plausible a statement that it enraged the old man dreadfully, so much so that he could scarcely contain himself until the lawyer concluded.

The moment he sat down the old man sprang to his feet.
"See here," exclaimed he. "Here are deeds and every man in this court room knows me well, enough to know that I never got them by rascality, or claimed more than what was justly mine."

"All that may be true," replied the judge, "but the court demands legal proof relative to the points at issue."
I presume you have an attorney, Mr.
Lippe?

"Never said a single word to a single one. I never thought it worth while," said the old man, perfectly aghast at the turn matters were taking.

"May it please the court, I will undertake the case for Mr. Lippe," said he.

"A pretty case you'll make of it," said the old man. "You can plow corn a wonderful sight better."

"I assure you Mr. Lippe that Mr.
Coverdale is perfectly competent to the task," said the judge, who was well acquainted with the young lawyer, and who, though ignorant of his present relations, fancied he smelt a joke in the actions of the parties.

"Mebbe your honor is right," said Mr. Lippe; "but plague take me, if you don't find him a likely sight better farm hand than lawyer."

A general titter ran around the bar.
The suit proceeded. The young attorney having previously mastered the whole ground, entered into its merits with such force and clearness as astonished even the court. But how shall we paint the surprise of old Mr. Lippe?
It took him by storm. At every word of the young lawyer he seemed to dis-tend with astonishment, until his amazement was something so ridiculously appalling as to convulse the entire audience with laughter. Peal after peal resounded, and even the fat sides of the judge, forgetting their gravity, seemed ready to shake to pic-ces with merriment.

"Who—who—who are you?" at last gasped the old man.
"Sit down Mr. Lippe," said Coverdale. "I am attending to the case."

Then stooping, he whispered in his ear,
"I am trying to win Susan."

"She's yours," shouted the old man, regardless of the bystanders or the court, which, having now an inkling of the matter, gave a loose rein to their jubilant feelings. How Susan felt, however, can be better imagined than described. She blushed like one of her mother's peonies, and hastily hid her face in her veil.

When the merriment had subsided, and old Mr. Lippe had secured his equanimity, the happy attorney proceeded, and finally made so clear a case for his involuntary client, as caused the judge to dismiss the suit. The old man left the court in triumph, and with his hired hand, proceeded forthwith to the clerk's office, where a license was procured. The judge gave the court a short recess and united the happy pair in the bonds of matrimony.

Since that event, Mr. Lippe has changed his views on educational matters.
The other day, as Judge Coverdale was leaving home for Congress, he said to his son:

"Lippe Coverdale, get your lessons well, and who knows but what you'll go to Congress, too."
"Who knows!" exclaimed the happy Susan.

WALKS, TALKS AND OBSERVATIONS.
STRAWBERRY CORNER,
August 24, 1871.
The hot dry weather of the last few weeks, has had a most distressing effect upon thoughts, as well as upon Strawberry plants. We have felt inclined to be content with simple existence, leaving the world and its cares to wag as seemeth it best. From appearances it has been dry here at the corner as well as elsewhere, yet I hope not so dry but you have kept alive the new resolves which had taken root and which were so full of promise.

I suppose that all who are assembled here this morning, are either engaged in Strawberry growing, or have made up their minds to do so, or else are contemplating doing so.

In what we have to say then we shall endeavor to keep before our mind "Those who are not," for it is for them and theirs that we have written and for them that we propose to continue these scribbles by the wayside of life.

When last we met at the corner it was promised that at our next meeting the kind of soil most congenial for the growth of Strawberries, and the kind of manures which have given most satisfaction in the same, should be considered. To this then, we propose to draw your attention.

We shall first, make some general remarks upon soils.

Soils as you know, are arranged under different heads, we have

1.—Clay soils.
2.—Sand
3.—Clay loam.
4.—Sandy

5.—And in this country, you have black gum lands which abound in black Sand Soils, for Strawberries should possess a good proportion of those elements which give firmness and should be of good quality and in good condition. Any dry soil which will bring good wheat and corn crops will bring your handsome berry crops if properly manipulated. There are lands however which will grow fine crops of corn, which if planted with strawberry plants would not be profitable. Take your black gum lands which this year have produced such fine corn and plant them with this berry, and they will bring you only disappointment.

Soils possessing good fruit producing qualities may vary, but generally they must be dry, mellow and rich in vegetable mould—the absence of which constitutes barrenness—and possess a moderate degree of firmness.

It should also be deep as well as dry, though the Strawberry delights in plenty of heaven's moisture. It has no liking for a bed of stagnant water.
A soil which has a hard substratum of of pan hardened clay, should be loosened to the depth of 15 or 18 inches by using a good subsoil plow in the Fall of the year, preceding the setting of plants,

Emissions, Sexual Debility, and Impotency, with a full and complete description of the various causes, symptoms, and effects of this disease, and the most effective means of curing it. By J. C. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of the "Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the sexual system is the most delicate and susceptible of the human system, and that the slightest neglect or abuse of it will result in the most serious and permanent impairment of the system, and that the only safe and effective means of curing it is by the use of the lecturer's "Lecture on the Nature, Treatment & Prevention of Spermatorrhea," &c.

ORGANS.
Important Improvements.
Patented June 21st, and August 23, 1870.

Reduction of Prices.
The Mason & Hamlin Organ Co. have the pleasure of announcing important improvements in their Cabinet Organs, for which Patents were granted them June and August last. These are not merely meretricious advancements, but enhance the substantial excellence of the instruments.

They are also enabled by the increased facilities for manufacture, to make, from this date, a further reduction of prices on several leading styles.

Having completed and added to their former facilities a large new factory, they hope hereafter to supply all orders promptly.

The Cabinet Organs made by this Company are of such universal reputation, not only throughout America, but also in Europe, that few will need any of their superiority.

They now offer FOUR OCTAVE CABINET ORGANS, in quite plain cases, but equal according to their capacity to anything they make, for $50 each. The same, Double Reed, $75. Five-Sixths with case, $100. Tremu-

DOTY'S WASHING-MACHINE.
LATELY MUCH IMPROVED—AND THE NEW UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

Improved with Rowell's Patent Double Cogwheels, and the Patent Stop, are now unquestionably far superior to any apparatus for washing clothes ever invented, and will save their cost twice a year, by saving labor and clothes.

The former Editor of this paper, who purchased a Washer and Wringer, thus testifies as to their value:

"We can knowingly recommend these machines to be just what their manufacturer represents them. We have regularly used them in our own family for over six months, and we find that all the really hard labor and drudgery of washing is entirely dispensed with by their use. Washing is a great and pleasant employment for a Week and a half, and it gives one of these Washing Machines to the thousands of overworked washerwomen which we have in our land. Not one of these ladies made by Mr.
Rowell in his advertisement. There is no doubt that this machine will be well recommended to the letter. Let every family which can possibly do so buy Doty's Washing Machine and Wringer.

PRICES—A Fair Offer.
If the Merchants in your place will not furnish, or send for the Machines, send us the retail price, Washer $14. Extra Wringer $20, and we will forward either or both machines, free of freight, to place where no one is selling, and so sure are we that we will be able to agree to refund the money if any one wishes to return the machines free of freight, after a month's trial, according to directions.

No husband, father or brother should permit the drudgery of washing with the hands, fifty-two days in the year, when it can be done better, more expeditiously, with less labor, and no injury to the person, by a Doty's Clothes Washer and a Universal Wringer.

Sold by dealers generally, to whom liberal discounts are made.

Scientifically Developed.

As mankind, from indolence or other causes, has been doomed to suffer from disease, so also has remedy for disease been provided. Our hills and valleys are covered with roots and herbs, which if scientifically prepared and combined, will restore health and cure the invalid. To find such a remedy we should seek one that has stood the test of age.

HON. G. W. WOODWARD,
Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pen-sylvania, writes:
Philadelphia, March 16th, 1867
I find "Hooiland's German Bitters," is a good Tonic, useful in diseases of the digestive organs and of great benefit in cases of debility and want of nervous action on the system.
Yours truly,
Geo. W. Woodward.

Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.
Philadelphia, April 22d, 1868.
I consider "Hooiland's Bitters" a valuable medicine in case of attacks of indigestion or Dyspepsia. I can certify from my experience of it. Yours, with respect, JAMES THOMPSON.

HON. GEO. SHARPSWOOD,
Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.
Philadelphia, June
I have found by experience that "Hooiland's German Bitters," is a very good tonic, allaying dyspeptic symptoms almost directly.
GEORGE SHARPSWOOD

JOHN EUTERMARSH, Esq.,
