To the boys and girls of today—
 To them belongs the world of tomorrow;
 But today they are children
 With children's games and songs,
 Fears and fancies,
 With children's dreams and plans
 For a future in which they will emerge as men and women;

To the teachers of these children,
 The teachers who guide in the way of beauty and truth,
 Of justice and peace,
 And thus prepare the little ones
 For their place in the world of which they dream;

And to Frostburg State Teachers College
 That it may ever send forth teachers—
 Men and women who accept the challenge of America's children,

The NEMACOLIN of 1946 is dedicated.

Seniors

The seniors, being about to enter a new era in the history of their lives, pause for a moment before closing this chapter, look back and recall the yet undimmed past. We recall those first days at State when, as bewildered souls, we roamed the campus, quaked in court before our elders, saluted scowling sophomores, polished shoes, handed out matches, and appeared absolutely ridiculous.

We recall meeting new personalities, those of our fellow students and of the faculty. There was Mr. Dunkle who listened to all our troubles, advised and encouraged, and gave us the push needed to make us loyal to State. And there were the other teachers, Shaffer, Matty, McClellan, Harvey, Hamrick, and Cooper, whose philosophies and methods were frequently strange and hard to grasp.

There were the organizations with their meetings, parties, picnics, and programs; the sailor dances which always carried an element of suspense; the sessions in the day room, arguing, joking, griping, disturbing the faculty, and occasionally cramming for a test.

Sometimes we went to the library where our sense of humor, never asleep anyway, always became very keen. Here we turned the books down in the stacks or signed our names in all the reserved books, hoping that any inspecting faculty member would be bluffed into thinking we did all the work he suggested. At other times we might be found in the dorm, singing in the living room after dinner or loafing an hour away on the campus before remembering the more serious phase of college life.

And as we passed from one class to another, we gained greater responsibilities, greater troubles, and greater loyalties. More teachers were added to the list of people we attempted to understand, among them Diehl, Howard, Gray, Baker, Wellner and a new college president, Miss Compton.

We recall with pleasure the rehearsals for "Athapastusical" and "Patience," trips, assemblies, initiations, dancing in the gym or Matty's room, and fighting for our rights. We remember the ice cream from the corner store, the hot fudge sundaes at the T. and S., Sadie and Gus, the ball games, hayrides, plays, and dinners.

Finally we were seniors; some of our original class had dropped by the wayside, some others had been added to our class. The war was over, the boys were back, and we were student teachers, griping, complaining, acquiring a P. A., and bragging about "our kids." Doc Brown and Miss Shires were added to the list of new friends before the year ended.

Now this last year has disappeared, but when we pick up the 1946 NEMACOLIN, when our names will have passed into oblivion at State, we shall recall it all once again, the studies, the social life, the work on the yearbook which introduced our new friends, Carl and Joe, the faculty, and our friends whom we have not seen for years. And as we read the sentiments written by these friends, and look at their faces again, perhaps then we will do so with eyes much drier than they are now as we make sincere promises not to forget, take our last look, and then cross the campus, no longer as students but as alumni.

Student Government through Student Congress, Day Council and House Council

The self governing bodies of State consist of the Student Congress, the Day Council and the House Council.

It is through the Student Congress that the will of the entire student body is expressed. Through council meetings and recently, through special meetings of all students, problems are discussed and solved as well as possible.

In order to gain new viewpoints, student delegates are sent to the Eastern States Association of Teachers' Colleges. This year Mr. Diehl added to this opportunity by teaching the delegates much about New York City life.

As yet Student Congress has survived "bloodless" revolutions and years of work and will continue to do so.

The Day Council is, of course, particularly concerned with Day Students. Its pet is the Day Room, where anything from pin ups to poor posture prevails. Here you see college students as they are in the rough. A session here is as necessary to our education as a prominent lecturer's session.

The House Council governs the Resident Students in their dorm regulations and behavior. Here, too, all is not serious. There are pajama parties and sessions of "The Fag and Five Hundred Club" in the lounge. The living room is all its name signifies; here we live, and at times sociology experience is conducted.

Little Theatre

This year after several years of relatively little activity, Matty came to the rescue and brought Little Theater once more into its old position of prominence on the campus. Staging, make-up, scenery, costumes, lighting, business management, and directing, all go along with the major role of acting to make this organization a success. On Parents' Night, the Little Theater presented to State's audience several of its new members in "To the Lovely Margaret" with Helen Kerns, Andy DiUbaldo, Jeanne Lippold, Vadne Miller, and Don Morgan as the star performers.

After weeks of midnight rehearsals, usually followed by sandwiches, cokes, and jokes, "The Damask Cheek" was presented in April and was proclaimed one of the most outstanding performances of the amateur stage. Gerry Ort, Betty Schlunt, Helen Kerns, Katie McClain, Irene Middleton, Lois Storey, Cal Lauder, Charlie Cathcart, and Bill Kroll deserved the praise and recognition they received for their very splendid acting.

In 1940 the Benjamin Franklin Chapter of the Future Teachers of America received its charter as an organization on State's campus. The F. T. A. is a national organization and claims the title of "the student's only professional club at the college." Through the F. T. A. the members become acquainted with various phases of the profession which they soon will enter and benefit by the professional literature which they receive. The F. T. A.'ers are interested in encouraging those studying to be teachers and in attracting more people to study. To add to their year's program the F. T. A. sponsors parties and other activities and closes each meeting with a song, which, although not original in the melody, is, nevertheless, unique and startling.

International Relations Club

Russia, Japan, compulsory military training, and many other problems of national and international importance are discussed at the meetings of the International Relations Club. This organization, composed of those students who take an active interest in current events, occasionally presents assembly programs for the College and frequently presents panel discussions at club meetings held in several near-by towns. The greatest thrill of an I. R. C. member is his chance to attend conferences at other colleges or universities, different places being selected each year.

Phi Omicron Delta Sorority

Initiations and banquets, dances, picnics, teas, programs, and parties of many kinds make the Phi Omicron Delta Sorority the most active social organization on the campus. But it is more than a social sorority offering fun to its members. Since loyalty to the college is an attribute of Phi Omicron Delta girls, we find them supporting the college in all its activities and at the same time working hard enough to maintain that degree of scholarship worthy of college students and necessary to continue as members of the sorority.

By encouraging high-school seniors to enter the competitive music scholarship contest, sponsored each year by the sorority, these girls not only campaign for students, but also emphasize their interest in the fine arts.

State has reason to be proud of Phi Omicron Delta as it completes its eighth full year of life.

Student Christian Association

OFFICERS

President	-	Emmamae Morgan	Secretary	-	Betty Poffenberger
Vice-President	-	Darleen Warnick	Treasurer	-	Lois Storey
Advisor	-	-	-	-	Miss Jones

The well-rounded person recognizes the need of a spiritual force to give him those things which cannot be found except through a Supreme Being. The Student Christian Association is State's religious organization to which men and women of all religious faiths are welcome to belong. Recently inaugurated into the S. C. A. program is their sponsorship of the Community Thanksgiving and Easter services, in which the ministers of many churches heartily participate, and to which the townspeople of all faiths come. Each year delegates from S. C. A. attend the regional conference, usually held at Jackson's Mill, W. Va. This year the S. C. A. conducted a drive for the World Student Service Fund, the results of which amazed even the most optimistic.

Through the S. C. A. the students endeavor to understand and appreciate the views of fellow students, the social and religious problems of the world, and at least once a year to eat the best of food at the home of the advisor, Miss Jones.

Student Publications

Publications has become increasingly active during the past year. Two issues of the magazine "Frostateco" were published, assistance was rendered to the freshmen in getting out the weekly "State to Date," and, of course, this yearbook, edited by a small group in the Publications Organization, is our principal contribution. Our primary aim during the year has been to interest as many of the student body as possible in contributing to the various publications and in this respect we were very successful.

Maryland Singers

Few indeed are the times when the Maryland singers are not on hand to add to programs both in the college and in community undertakings. Twice a week this group gets together down in the basement where those outside the club will not suffer so severely from the resulting noises. They meet in a spirit of relaxation and fun, learning to give or take as is required at the moment, to laugh with the group, and silently pray that Matty will not call upon them to sing or direct.

But the results of their efforts are seen in the finished product on Parents' Night, on Senior Day, at the Christmas Carol Service, at the S. C. A. Thanksgiving and Easter programs, at college banquets and parties, and on numerous occasions when all or part of the Maryland Singers leave the campus to perform at schools, club meetings, churches, and even at cemeteries. The climax of their year, however, is their Music Day Program which, this year, besides consisting of special selections by the chorus and a few of the more brilliant stars, featured a one act comic opera, "Bastien and Bastiene," by Mozart, starring Jean Weller, Miriam Orndorff, and Don Morgan.

Men's Athletic Association

With the reappearance of men on the campus in February, it was not very long before the M. A. A. was reorganized and officers for the year were elected. Not to be discouraged too much by the lack of a coach, the boys put all their effort into a basketball team and proved their worth by keeping their opponents well in hand. Running a close second with the Student Publications in its constant plea for more money, the M. A. A. sponsored a successful May Dance. The baseball team was organized in the Spring and played a number of games, (the scores of which we gracefully ignore) both at home and away. Between Manager Mowbray and Booster (Doc) Brown, and, of course, the female force the men ended the season ready to try again.

Our Thanks

The staff of the 1946 NEMACOLIN takes this opportunity to thank all those who have made the publication of this yearbook possible. We gratefully acknowledge the support of the faculty and students and of the campus organizations; the cooperation of our printer, Mr. John F. Rose, of the Herald Printing House; the time and effort of our photographer, Mr. Harold Carl; and the loyalty of our patrons. We also thank those people who, although they were not photographers for NEMACOLIN, contributed pictures that are seen in this yearbook.

The successful publication of this issue of NEMACOLIN is due to the support and cooperation of all those people we mention here and of others whom we may forget at present. They have our unreserved thanks and appreciation.
