Crops Damaged By Heavy Kains

The heavy rains which have fallen almost daily during the last two weeks have been the cause of heavy loss to the farmers. Wheat was cut and shocked in the fields before the series of rains began. The wet weather, together with the high temperature, has caused the grain to sprout, and in picnic and festival in the camp-meeting some cases whole shocks of wheat have taken on the verdant hue of new growth.

There are numerous other farmers noon. who planted their late potato crop before the rains began, and these have to entertain the visitors in the afterall their work to do over again. List Of Drafted Men Posted

Within a few days 267 men of Somerset county, drawn under the selective draft law, will be called to appear before the local exemption board for examination. This board is composed of Drs. Charles W. Wainwright, C. E. Collins and Mr. W. Jerome Sterling. The official lists of those called for the first army have been received by the exemption board and have been posted in conspicuous places, both in Crisfield and Princess Anne.

Only men rejected for physical reasons will be exempted from service by this board. All men presenting claims for exemption for other reasons will be compelled to appeal to the district exemption board and file their supporting affidavits within 10 days of the time they are called for the first examination.

The district board, which will sit for the entire Eastern Shore, is composed of Curtis E. Crane, Chestertown, chairman; Dr. J. McFadden Dick, Salisbury; Judge W. Laird Henry, Cambridge; Charles F. Rich, Centreville, and Harry A. Roe, Denton. This board will hear cisions of county boards.

The Navy In Need Of Musicians

It is the desire of the Navy Department to recruit the bands of all the fighting ships to their full strength, and musicians in civilian life-and the surroundings of a bandman aboard ship are pleasant and agreeable. The adancement leads to a bandmaster.

Young men with merely a primitive knowledge of music can enlist in the Navy at this time and be sent to the Musicians' School, from which they are transferred to a ship; thus receiving a complete education in band music. Once aboard a man-o'-war, the young musician is afforded not only a chance to serve his country at a critical time, but is enabled to travel extensively while in pursuit of his vocation.

hunting in one of the drawers, a woman. In another moment she caught sight of his reflection in the mirror. Turning, she faced him.

"Madam," he said, "what are you doing here?"

"I came for your wife's jewels. But since I have not found them and have been interrupted in my search I will put in operation a scheme which I devised and for which I prepared before coming here in case I should fail in obtaining the jewels. Your wife is not in the house. I left her some ten minutes ago at the door of a friend of hers with whom she was exchanging a few last words before parting. Knowing the disposition of my sex to prolong those few parting words, I believed I would have plenty of time to come here and at least make a beginning."

Opening a reticule, she took out a bit of paper and handed it to Trevor. It was a note for $1,000.

"Sign it," said the woman.

"I will do no such thing."

"Yes, you will when you have heard my reasons why it would be best for you to do so. Your wife will be here in a few minutes." She had got between Trevor and the door, locked it and put the key in her reticule. "She will find you locked in here with me. I will plead guilty and ask her forgiveness. Your domestic happiness will be locked in here with me. I will plead guilty and ask her forgiveness. Your domestic happiness will be locked in here with me. Unfortunately for this part of the woman's plan, at this moment the front door was heard to close. Mrs. Trevor had finished the "few parting words" with her friend and reached her home. Ascending the stairs, she attempted to open the door of her room and found it locked.

"Open the door," said Trevor sternly. . The woman produced the key and did as she was directed. Trevor threw open the door. The woman cowered in a corner, affecting shame and contrition. Mrs. Trevor stood looking from one to the other, first with amazement, then with pain.

SYNOPSIS.

Baron Huroki, chief of the Japanese secret service in America, conspiring to embroil the United States with Mexico, desires control of the great Channing munitions plants owned by Patria—last of "The Fighting Channings" and sole executrix of a $100,000,000 trust secretly created by patriotic progenitors to combat the national perils inherent in "unpre-paredness." His schemes failing, thanks to the opposition of Patria aided by her fiance, Capt. Donald Parr, Huroki causes a strike at the Channing plants.

Whereas, a certain John E. Holland, County Treasurer for Somerset county, in the State of Maryland, has reported to the Circuit Court for Somerset County. in Equity, a sale made by him to W. Jerome Sterling, of all that lot of land in Fairmount district, Somerset county, Maryland, viz: No. 8—All that lot and improvements in Fairmount district, Somerset county, Maryland, known as the home place of the late Joseph Muir, containing 2 acres, more or less, which was devised to Susie J. Damish (then Susie J. Muir) by will recorded among the testamentary records in Liber T. D., No. 21, folio 134, and later conveyed to G. A. Cox, and assessed to the said Mrs. Dr. John I. ty. Damish on the assessment books for the said election district. for the said year 1914, and sold for the payment of taxes due and in arrears, together with all the proceedings in relation thereto; and, whereas, upon examination it appears to the said Court that the said proceedings are regular, and that the provisions of law in relation thereto have been complied with.

Now, therefore, it is hereby ordered.

Bacteria Long Lived.

How long some bacteria may live under proper conditions is brought out by M. W. Lyon, Jr., of George Washington university in a letter to Science. He tells of a culture of organisms of paratyphoid beta kept for more than ten years sealed in a test tube at Howard university, which, when transferred to another medium, produced the reactions that proved the bacteria to be alive and active.

All indications point to an extraordinary demand for fire wood this coming winter and probably also for the following winter. This is due to the increase in cost of coal and particularly to the difficulty in securing it, especially in the small towns, owing to the shortage of cars. This difficulty is certain to increase. The situation offers a splendid opportunity to farmers and woodland owners generally to cut and utilize trees killed by the Chestnut Blight, tops and laps resulting from lumbering opperations, as well as the taking out of inferior trees in the nature of thinnings and improvement cuttings in the wood-

"In northern Wisconsin there are hundreds of thousands of acres of unon which sheep could be raised to the set to throw it toward the corn. It is owners' bank accounts. Sheep make excellent land cleaners, and it is splendid plan to pasture them on cutover land.

"Sheep raising can be carried on without much hired help, which is now very scarce and very expensive. During the grazing season, if the flock has all the pasture it needs and pure, fresh water and salt, it is satisfied.

"It is hoped that, in view of the adaptability of sheep raising to emergency farming and its relation to the president's appeal to every man and woman who can do so to produce food and clothing this year, 'more weo' and mutton' will be a phrase in constant use in many farm homes."

Clover hay worms destroy many tons of alfalfa each year. The work of these pests is often mistaken for a tivated to a depth of more than three

These insects have increased in numbers in Kansas due to the extensive growing of alfalfa. They are found in almost all parts of the United States where alfalfa, clover or timothy is

The worms work in the hay during the fall, winter and early spring. In the late spring they pupate and spin a thin silken cocoon about

CULTIVATION OF CORN.

Too Frequent Stirring of the Ground When Dry May Do Harm.

Cultivation is of greatest importance in the early growth of corn, according to L. E. Call, professor of agronomy in the Kansas State Agriculture col-

The harrow may often be used to advantage after planting on both listed and surface planted corn, but when the shoots of the surface planted corn are just out of the ground it is not best to harrow again until the corn is there is a shortage of practically all two or three inches high. Weeds that foodstuffs, the demand for both wool are just germinating or that have not and meat is large. Ordinarily it is used twice, once with the disks set to throw the soil away developed stump and partly brush land from the corn and once with the disks important that the cultivator be set to kill or cover all the weeds in the row. Those which escape the early cultivation cannot, as a rule, be destroyed

> The shovel cultivator is used in cultivating corn after it becomes too high to harrow or, in the case of listed corn, after the ridges have been worked down with the lister cultivator. The number of cultivations depends on the type of soil, on the distribution of the rainfall and on whether the weeds are unusually numerous.

Experiments show that from three to six cultivations are as many as are practical. Too frequent stirring of the ground, especially when it is dry, may do harm, in that the dusty condition of the soil is effective in keeping rainwater from entering the soil readily. The ideal condition in which to maintain the soil is to have a mulch two or three inches deep, composed of One To Convince The Most Skept Clean the haymow and burn the old small lumps mixed with small granules

BOTH PLAYED FAIR.

Story of a Railroad President and Labor Leader. When Matthew C. Brush, president of the Boston Elevated railroad, found his men were getting restless he settled the trouble in characteristic fash ion. In the American Magazine Alfred Grunberg says:

"Constant argument did not appeal to Brush. It was not his way of doing business. He buckled up his belt and plunged into the muddle. His first move was to call W. D. Mahon, head of the National Carmen's union, into his office and lock the door.

"'Now, Mahon,' he said, drawing up a chair and leaning forward with his friendly smile, 'we're here in my office. The doors are locked. There are no stenographers concealed anywhere, no dictagraphs, no one to listen. The curtains are drawn. We're here alone. But before we can do anything I've got to know you and you've got to know me. You tell me all about yourself, and I'll tell you who I am and what I've done.'

"And thus the labor leader and the frank, friendly railroad official drew back the curtains of reticence and suspicion and showed each other the goods that were within them. Mahon saw Brush the newsboy and Brush the apprentice as well as Brush the vice president. Brush saw Mahon as a fellow man whose heart was bound up in the welfare of labor.

"'Mahon found out that I was square,' Brush said afterward, 'and I found out that he was square. He was open and honest; so was I. We were both convinced that neither one was trying to play tricks on the other.' "For nineteen hours the two men behind locked doors, debated the complex problems, each zealous for the interests he represented. At the end of that time the labor leader walked out with a mutual agreement in his hand. Not only was this agreement satisfactory to the company, but unions have called it one of the finest documents of its kind ever drawn up."

Changing the Story. "Anyhow, we can change the story to our children a little."

"What do you mean?" "We can tell them that when we were married I was making $75 a week, and we had a mighty hard time of it to get along at that."-Detroit Free Press.

Turkeys are subject to most of the diseases and ailments affecting fowls. Of these the most common infectious diseases are blackhead, chicken pox (sore head) and roup. Limber neck and impaction of the crop are noninfectious ailments quite often found among turkeys. Of the parasites lice are the most injurious, especially among young turkeys, and unless some effective means has been taken to destroy them they can usually be found on every turkey in the flock.

Of the infectious diseases, blackhead is the most destructive among turkeys. This disease first became seri-of preventing turkeys from flying over fences. A thin piece of wood is placed across the back and tied under the wings with soft strips of ous in the New England states about twenty-five years ago. It has now spread to a greater or less extent throughout the middle west and is occasionally found in the south and ou the Pacific coast. Blackhead occasionally affects grown turkeys, but it mostly occurs among young turkeys between the ages of six weeks and four months. When a flock becomes infected and nothing is done to prevent its spread 50 per cent or more of the turkeys in the flock usually die.

The symptoms of blackhead are such that unless the bird is killed and an examination of the internal organs made it is difficult to tell whether the disease is blackhead or some other ailment. The bird drinks a great deal, but refuses to eat and grows steadily weaker until its death, which usually occurs a few days or a week after the weakness is first noted. Diarrhea commonly occurs, and the droppings vary in color from white to brown, but are usually a bright yellow. The head of the turkey sometimes turns dark, and it is from this symptom that the name blackhead originated. This is an unfortunate term, as the head often does not turn dark, and even though it does it merely indicates that the bird is sick from some ailment that may or may not be blackhead. On opening a turkey that has died of blackhead one or both of the ceca, or "blind guts," are found to be enlarged and plugged with a cheesy material, and the liver is more or less covered with spots, varying in color from gray. ish white to yellow.

No positive cure for blackhead has been found. As in the case of all other infectious diseases, the sick bird should immediately be removed from the flock to prevent a further spread of the disease, and if very sick it is best to kill it and burn the body. Clean out the roosting place and spread lime in places most frequented by the turkeys. Keep a disinfectant in the drinking water. Potassium permanganate is a good antiseptic, a sufficient quantity of the crystals being added to give the water a wine color, which for every gallon of water will take about as much of the chemical as can be placed on a dime. If the turkeys are being fed heavily their ration should be reduced, as overfeeding predisposes to the disease. The feeding of sour milk has been found of advantage in keeping turkeys' in good health and in reducing the activities of the organism causing blackhead.

Unless a postmortem examination is made the symptoms of this ailment are misleading. A bird so afflicted is unmistakably sick, but it is difficult to distinguish this trouble from other forms of disease. When examined

CHEKATION MILITIS CITY LULING STATE

No plaything will better amuse a small boy than a piece of rubber. The way the elastic material will stretch to suit his fancy is a perpetual source of joy to him.

The Annexationists of Baltimore seem to get fully as much delight in playing with the State Costitution. They quote with much gravity the sections which suit their purposes, but they say the section which prohibits annexation without a referprohibits annexation without a referendum has no force. They stretch the Constitution to suit themselves.

An article sent out by the Greater Baltimore Extension League in an endeavor to blind the voters of Maryland to the danger of giving Baltimore city a majority of the Baltimore city a majority of the population of the State (which effect it is admitted annexation as proposed will have) asserts that Baltimore city would have no more power after annexation than now, for power comes from the Legislature, and the representation of the city and the representation of the city and the counties is fixed by the Constitution. Baltimore city now has four Senators and twenty - four members of the House of Delegates. It has not been very many years since the city had three Senators and eighteen members of the House How did the increase come about? a constitutional amendment. Constitutional amendments have become so usual that the ordinary voter thinks there is something ig with his b find one on it.

Amendments Easily Passed The Annexationists tell you the Constitution can not be amended except by an act which passes the Legislature by a three-fifths vote in both houses and is then ratified by the people. Since they have announced that they will make everything else subservient to annexation and are freely using threats and cajoleries to swerve members of the Legislature to their favor, and have shown that they can swing practically the entire vote of the city delegation in both houses in any political deal or barter, it is easy to see that they would not have much trouble in securing equal representation for the city in the Legislature. Give the city a numerical majority of the voters of the whole State, and the ratification of the amendment would be a matter of

Bullying Both Sides

But the Annexationists are attempting to deceive the people when they claim that Baltimore could they claim that Baltimore could only assert its power through the Legislature. Three is always more than two, and party leaders will be practically compelled to yield to the will of the majority in making party platforms and influencing nominations. Just now, as they did two years ago, the Annexationists are imperiously demanding that both parties insert in their platforms to be adopted the coming fall ironbe adopted the coming fall ironclad planks favoring annexation without a referendum. Threats are freely made of what they will do to any political leader who opposes them. Not Bound by Parties

Can it be imagined that the same men and influences which are now attempting to rule both political parties will not in a similar way endeavor to dictate nominations if given a majority of votes with which to back their demands and threats? And if their wishes are not heeded in making the nominations, can any one doubt that they will be able to take their revenge by defeating any candidate not acceptable? They have already shown their willingness to do so. Facts do not bear out the assertion that when they become the assertion that when the become citizens of Baltimore, Democrats remain Democrats and Republicans remain Republicans. Most of them work together to rule the rest of the State. No political party can be sure of their fealty, for they are avowedly out to gain their own ends by any sort of temporary expedient. Give the city a majority of the population of the State and you will give it absolute control. No deserving man of either party in any part of the State will be able to obtain a State office without the approval of the city boss. No law which does not sult the "city crowd" will stand any chance of being passed.

• And if such a law should slip through, the city would have, and through, the city would have, and without any increase in Legislative membership, the power to veto it. In 1915 the people ratified the Referendum amendment to the State Constitution. Under this amendment a majority of the voters may nullify any law passed by the Legislature except laws regulating the sale of liquor and the regular appropriation bills. Under this amendment the city could override any law of the State hereafter passed, except as noted, that is, provided Mayor Preston's scheme for the aggrandizement of the city by overriding the Constitution and grasping one-half the population and wealth of Baltimore county and a fat slike of Anne Arundel county is successful. through, the city would have, and

PRECAUTIONS FOR HOME CANNING

Miss Rhea Morgan, Demonstration Agent for Somerset County, gives the owing suggestions about home canning: following suggestions about home canning:

following suggestions about home canning:

In sterilizing or processing do not allow the water to cover the cans, but only to come within 2 or 3 inches of the top of the jars. If the container is kept covered the steam retained above the jars will successfully sterilize the products. When the process of sterilization is complete and the jars are removed from the container, they should be sealed at once without removing the cover. In sterilizing food materials in the jars some liquid always evaporates or cooks out. If the cover is removed to fill the jar level full with boiling water the air coming in contact with the food material in the jar may carry organisms to it which will later cause the contents of the jar to spoil. When the rubber and cover are placed on the jar and the jar is sterilized the contents of the jar are sterilized. This includes not only the food material, but also the liquid and any unfilled space. Therefore, even if a portion of the food material in the jar is not covered with liquid it cannot spoil because the entire contents of the jar not covered with liquid it cannot spoil because the entire contents of the jar and to toghther the cover after the jars with contents have become cold. When the process of sterilization is complete and the jar removed from the container the rubber is moist and warm. Warm rubber compresses readily and sticks. When the cover, therefore, is screwed down tightly the seal is made. If an attempt is made to tighten the cover, after the contents of the jar are cold, the cover will be loosened from the rubber and the seal broken; thus the air will get into the jar and as a result the contents spoil.

will be loosened from the rubber and the seal broken; thus the air will get into the jar and as a result the contents spoil.

Sometimes, in screwing down the cover, the rubber will push out from under the edge of the cover. Do not remove the coyer, but unscrew it a little, push the rubber back into place and hold it in place with the thumb and fingers of the left hand while screwing down the cover with the right hand. If for any reason the cover should have to be removed the only safe thing to do is to put on a new rubber and cover and return the jar to the canner for further sterilization.

Twenty or thirty minutes ought to be sufficient for a second sterilization.

Retort Caustic. A tourist was having his boots polished by an Irish shoeblack, and as the latter was administering the finishing touches his patron rudely tossed two coppers on the pavement as a reward. This insult, added to no doubt by the fact that the reward was the mere rec. ognized twopence, caused the shoeblack to exclaim:

"Thank ye, sir. The only polish you have is on your boots, and I gave you that."-London Telegraph.

"The United States Government needs, and needs badly, great numbers of Stenographers and Typewriters, both men

"Students just starting a course of study may, be informed that there is now practically no limit to the number of stenographers and typewriters the Government needs.

"The Commission believes that the study of stenography and typewriting by a great number of persons with a view of entering the Government service will be justified. The usual entrance salary ranges from $900 to $1200 a year."

The business demand for secretaries, stenographers and bookkeepers is also very urgent, and all students beginning a course with us during the next few months can be sure of employment promptly upon graduation at salaries higher than ever paid before,
