FOR INFORMATION OF VOTERS

Requirements To Be Observed In Marking The Ballot

Three cross marks will suffice to vote for every candidate on the Democratic ticket. Two additional marks are required to vote for the amendments.

To vote for president and vice-president place a cross mark in the square opposite their names. This carries with it a vote for all of the electors in his group. Then place a mark in the square opposite the name of the senatorial candidate—John Walter Smith—and a third cross mark opposite that of the candidate for the House of Representatives—Thomas Alan Goldsborough.

Do not vote for any elector. The law requires that their names be placed on the ballot and if eight are voted for the votes will be counted, but in going outside the presidential box the voter takes a chance of invalidating his ballot. The only sure way is to disregard the electors.

Do not use any pencil other than that in the booth. Marks with a lead pencil or fountain pen will kill the ballot. The law requires an indelible pencil and this is furnished by the election officials.

After marking the ballot be sure it is returned to the same folds as when received, otherwise the ballot will be rejected.

In marking exercise care not to punch a hole in the ticket with the point of the pencil or to make a mark other than the cross mark.

Be sure to place the cross mark within the square. Do not let any part of it go outside.

Carson-Gladden Wedding

Beautifully trimmed with potted plants and evergreens, the home of Mrs. S. Leon Ennis, 204 South Grant avenue, Wilmington, Del., was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, October 23rd, when her daughter, Miss Frances Louise Gladden, became the bride of Allen Carson, of North East, Md. After a wedding luncheon the families of the contracting parties, and invited guests, assembled in the parlor, where the marriage took place. Promptly at 1 o'clock, and to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. C. C. Neese, the happy couple appeared before the Rev. G. R. Neese, grandfather of the bride, who performed the ceremony that made them man and wife. The bride wore a becoming traveling suit of blue silvertone with taupe hat and gloves to match, and carried pink chrysanthemums.

After congratulations from those present and amid showers of rice and "confetti," the young couple were driven to the railroad station, where they boarded a train for New York and other northern points. They will be at home after November 15th at North East, Md. The bride is a daughter of the late Frank C. Gladden and a niece of Mrs. Ashton P. Mills, of Princess Anne.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Ashton P. Mills, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Sterling, of Princess Anne; Mrs. Floyd White, Master Carlson White, Mrs. August Carlson, of North East; Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Thiel, Miss Dorothea Thiel, of Baltimore; Mr. Henry W. Sterling, of Philadelphia; Rev. and Mrs. G. R. Neese, Mrs. Nellie B. Kenney, Mrs. Jane Kenney, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Neese, Martha Neese, Harry Neese, Jr., Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Neese, Mrs. George W. Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Dugan, Mrs. Mary A. McGrath, Miss Kathleen McGrath, Mr. and Mrs. S. Leon Ennis and Frank Gladden, Jr.

County Agricultural Show

The fourth annual Somerset County Agricultural Show will be held in the court house, Princess Anne, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 18th, 19th and 20th.

There will be an attractive premium list and several hundred dollars in cash prizes will be awarded. It is desired to make the show larger than ever and farmers are urged to select their exhibits now.

The show, as usual, will include exhibits of fruit, vegetables, grain, grass, and clover hay, dairy products and household products. There will also be an exhibit of Boys' and Girls' Club work, and the University of Maryland will have a display showing some of the various lines of work being done by the Experiment Station and Extension Service.

Grange Meeting Nov. 11th

All members of the different Granges in Somerset county are requested to meet at the Grange Hall in Princess Anne on Thursday, November 11th, at 10.30 a. m. This request applies to all members, whether in good standing or not. Speakers of reputation will be present and plans will be laid for the reorganization of the several Granges throughout the county.

Mrs. Miles Gives Five O'clock Tea

The most social event of the season was the five o'clock tea given last Friday evening by Mrs. Joshua W. Miles at her home on South Main street. The tea was given in honor of Miss Ellen Dale McMaster whose marriage to Dr. Charles T. Fisher has been announced to take place on December 15th.

The interior of the house was tastefully decorated with potted plants, cut flowers and autumn foliage.

Mrs. Miles was assisted in receiving by Miss McMaster and those who presided in the dining-room were, Mrs. W. H. Gale, Mrs. G. W. Maslin, Mrs. G. H. Myers, Mrs. A. L. Miles, Misses Nell Dashiell, Dorothy Jones and Amanda Lankford.

Among those present were, Mrs. A. L. Miles, Mrs. Weir, Mrs. Hooper Miles, Miss Maria Ellegood, of Salisbury; Mrs. Robert F. Duer, Mrs. Chas. C. Gelder, Mrs. George H. Myers, Mrs. E. Herrman Cohn, Mrs. Laura Fitzgerald, Mrs. T. Jacob Smith, Mrs. W. H. Dashiell, Mrs. Earle B. Polk, Mrs. H. P. Dashiell, Mrs. J. D. Wallop, Mrs. W. A. N. Bowland, Mrs. John B. Roberts, Mrs. W. O. Lankford, Mrs. E. D. Young, Mrs. George W. Maslin, Mrs. Wm. H. Gale, Mrs. Wm. S. McMaster, Mrs. Claude Metzler, Misses Emily R. Waters, Nannie C. Fontaine, Mildred Beauchamp, Nell Dashiell, Berenice Thompson, Amanda Lankford, Dorothy Jones, Dr. Charles T. Fisher, Messrs. Morris H. Adams, Geo. H. Myers and Collector of Internal Revenue Joshua W. Miles.

Shoreland Club Meets

Last Thursday afternoon the Shoreland Club held its first fall meeting at "East Glen," the home of Mrs. J. T. Taylor, Jr. The following members were present: Mrs. W. A. N. Bowland, Mrs. F. M. Cline, Mrs. Wm. H. Dashiell, Mrs. H. Fillmore Lankford, Mrs. W. O. Lankford, Jr., Mrs. G. W. Maslin, Mrs. Earle B. Polk, Mrs. J. Arthur Powell, Mrs. H. C. Robertson, Mrs. Joseph G. Scott, Mrs. J. T. Smith, Mrs. Ralph P. Thompson. The club had as its guest Mrs. Walter Archbold.

Thursday afternoon, November 11th, the club will be entertained by Mrs. F. M. Cline at the "Cherry Grove" farm.

Long-Hale Wedding

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride, 1427 Madison avenue, Baltimore, on Saturday, October 23rd, when Miss Mary Alice Hale became the bride of Mr. Charles Sherman Long. Mr. Long is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin D. Long, of Westover. After a wedding tour to New York city and other northern points Mr. and Mrs. Long will reside in Baltimore.

The "Greatest Mother" concept which was visualized in the famous art poster used by the American Red Cross in its second war fund campaign has had its symbolism adapted to the Red Cross works of the post-war era and will illuminate the main poster to be used in the Fourth Roll Call November 11-23. This adaptation will bear the title "Still the Greatest Mother in the World." Everyone is familiar with the original "The Greatest Mother in the World," the effectiveness of which has been shown in part by the fact that it has furnished a synonym for Red Cross that has come to almost a household term. More than any other symbol, except the red cross itself, the public has made it the trademark of the American Red Cross.

Campaign Expenditures

Figures announced last Thursday by the treasurers of the Republican and Democratic campaign funds show that the Republicans have planned to spend four times as much to elect Senator Warren C. Harding as the Democrats collected to October 25 in furtherance of the efforts in behalf of Governor James M. Cox.

The report submitted by Fred W. Upham, Republican treasurer, to the Senate committee, appointed to investigate campaign expenditures, shows that the Republicans placed the cost of their campaign at $3,442,892.32, and up to the close of business Sunday, October 24, $3,042,892.32 had been expended. Mr. Upham estimated that the closing week of the campaign would cost the $400,000 additional.

Wilbur W. Marsh, treasurer of the Democratic campaign fund, in submitting his report to the Senate committee, placed the total receipts of the Democratic fund to October 25 at $878,831.24. Total disbursements to that date were $823,345.09. The sum collected, Mr. Marsh said, is constituted almost entirely of contributions to the campaign fund, with the exception of $150,000, which was borrowed.

Proposed Memorial Under Way

The effort to raise money for the proposed Memorial Bridge to the soldiers of Somerset county is meeting with great encouragement throughout the county.

The plan is to have the advertising matter distributed as the voters are leaving the polls today (Tuesday), the idea being that every family can be most easily reached that way.

The collection—in which the school children will take a large part—is to be made during Thanksgiving week. The slogan of "A Dollar a Family" seems to appeal to every one.

Marriage Licenses

White—William G. Mills, 47, and Addie Davis, 40, both of Cape Charles, Va. Earl Leslie Henderson, 28, Rehoboth, and Mary Ward, 23, Crisfield.

Colored—William E. Milbourne, 55, and Sallie Carr, 45, both of Marumaco.

Agricultural Society To Meet

The Maryland Agricultural Society, the State farmers' organization with which the Somerset County Agricultural Association is affiliated, will hold its annual meeting, the first to be held on the shore, at Salisbury November 9th, 10th and 11th. This will be the largest farmers' meeting ever held in this section of the State, and the farmers in this county will find it profitable to attend the sessions of the society.

An interesting program has been arranged which includes speakers of national prominence. Among the speakers will be J. R. Howard, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the largest farmers' organization in the country. Secretary of Agriculture E. F. Merdith is expected to be present along with Governors Ritchie, of Maryland, and Townsend, of Delaware. There will also be discussions by representatives of farmers' organizations, and considerable attention will be given to the marketing question.

Besides the talks and discussions there will be auto trips to points of interest including the Harrison and Allen nurseries, Homestead Dairy, Riddle estate, the home of "Man-o'-War," the fastest horse in the world. There will be an oyster roast and a trip to Ocean City. The three days program will be of interest and will afford a splendid opportunity to mix with farmers from various sections of Maryland.

The farmers in Somerset are close to Salisbury and have a good state road, and there should be a large attendance from this county. Get the habit of attending farmers' meetings.

Census Of Methodists

A census of Methodists, compiled by Dr. H. H. Carroll, formerly of the census bureau for the centenary conservation committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, shows 36,622,190 Methodists in the world, according to figures made public at Chicago last Tuesday.

There are 9,832,107 members of the church, the remainder being adherents and probationers who are members of Methodist families.

Canada reports 387,421 members; Great Britain, 1,269,482; Australia, 294,395, and Japan, 20,000.

The increase in the total of Methodists during the last nine years is given as 3,935,341.

PHEASANTS ARE THRIVING HERE

Maryland Soil Is Conducive To Growth of Game Birds

E. Lee LeCompte, state game warden, is in receipt of reports from his deputies in the several counties that the thousand or more pheasants distributed by them are thriving on Maryland soil. According to reports they are taking to the woods. It is also said that they are on friendly terms with partridges. The pheasant is a pugnacious bird. It had not been expected that he would associate with the native bird. Mr. LeCompte reports that the elimination of woodland and sage fields is detrimental to the life of game birds. At the same time he says that reports show an increase in wild birds.

We now have over seven hundred deputy game wardens scattered throughout every section of the State, and it might be well to take note of this fact and not run the risk of being apprehended for violation of the game laws.

Mr. LeCompte's chief deputy, Charles F. C. Smith, is displaying activity in enforcing the fish laws. Mr. Smith said:

We are blessed with one of the largest and greatest bodies of water of the world—the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries. Its production is countless in value, and yet we have among our midst so many who show little if any appreciation for the great gift which we possess.

We have an element which finds great sport in the game and they want the laws upheld, and they are always ready and willing to co-operate with the state game department, in enforcing the laws. That element is the useful element which gets much pleasure out of the game with a clean conscience.

Then again we have another element which has no regard for the laws, and no respect for themselves. I refer to that class who would hook a fish two inches long and put it into their basket rather than throw it back into the water and thereby conform with the law. That is the element we must watch, and those little fish are going to cause a big fine to be imposed on some of the would-be sports. This same element engage themselves at times by hauling seines in violation of the law. They empty their seines on the beach, pick out the large fish and leave the small ones there to die. And sooner or later they are going to pay for this.

Then again we have an element which takes the privilege of gunning without a license, which cost them only $5.10 for a state-wide license, and, rather than to pay this small cost they take the chance of being arrested, which means a fine of $1,500 and costs. This element is termed the cheap element, and it is time for such an element to sit up and take notice, that if they want to enjoy the privilege, it will be necessary for them to comply with the law. State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte is fully determined to break up this practice, by having the force of local deputy game wardens increased, and Chief Deputy Warden Charles F. Smith will be on the job in every instance with his force of deputies to see that the violators are punished to the full extent of the law.

Lord Mayor MacSwiney Dead

Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, Ireland, died at Brixton Prison, London, at 5.40 o'clock Monday morning of last week. His death followed a hunger strike of more than 73 days, eclipsing any in the annals of the medical world. MacSwiney, who had been unconscious for several days, did not recover his faculties before he died.

The story of the self-starvation of Terence MacSwiney probably will become one of the most moving chapters of the centuries-long history of the Irish struggle. No other controversy has stirred Great Britain so deeply as this since the one that centered upon Cecil Rhodes when the Jameson raid was balked by Paul Kruger and the raiders imprisoned.

The Campaign in England for MacSwiney's release from prison has been apart from all political and party considerations, and even the King was drawn into it. The movement in MacSwiney's behalf was mainly humanitarian and enlisted tender-hearted people of all factions, but was urged by others with arguments of party strategy.

October Weather

The weather report for the month of October, compiled by Mr. James R. Stewart co-operative observer, follows: Maximum temperature, 83 degrees on the 15th, 16th and 22nd; minimum temperature, 32 degrees on the 31st; total precipitation, .93 inches. Clear days, 21; partly cloudy, 5; cloudy, 5; light frost on the 30th; killing frost on the 31st. The prevailing wind was northwest.

Support Sought For Crisfield Hospital

Last Friday afternoon a conference was held in the Court House, Princess Anne, between Mrs. Edward W. McCready and a committee of citizens of the county to consider plans for the supporting of the proposed memorial hospital at Crisfield. Mrs. McCready is the widow of Edward McCready, who, together with their only child, was instantly killed in an automobile accident at Westover about two years ago.

Mrs. McCready decided some time ago to erect a hospital in memory of her late husband and to dedicate the gift to Somerset county. Plans were prepared some time ago by an architect. The cost of the hospital will be about $100,000.

The chief question considered was how to support the hospital after it is erected. It was the consensus that Somerset county would be eager to come to the aid of the institution in every possible manner. It was decided that a committee of five members be appointed to consider the formation of an Edward W. McCready Memorial Association.

The Boy Scouts of Princess Anne will hold a pie and cake sale at the office formerly occupied by Dr. Charles T. Fisher on Saturday, Nov. 6th. The patronage of the public will be greatly appreciated. Proceeds for the benefit of Scout treasury.

A Question of Proverbs

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. Pettigrew had at last run out of the small change of gossip which they had been passing back and forth concerning Centerville friends and neighbors. There was yet an hour before Mrs. Jordan's husband would return from Slocum and pick up his wife, whom he had left to visit Mrs. Pettigrew. Meanwhile there was nothing else to do but fall back on personalities—or remain silent. And neither lady was one to remain silent long.

"How's John?" asked Mrs. Jordan, snipping her thread with her teeth.

"He's fine!" and Mrs. Pettigrew's face beamed. Her entire interest and pride centered in her one son, who, according to her, had reached his twenty-eight years unmarried simply because he had never found a girl "like his mother."

"They do say," warily insinuated Mrs. Jordan, viewing the other out of the corner of one eye to see how she took it, "that he's interested in Emma Scoble's cousin that's a-visiting her." "The idea!" flashed John's mother. "The idea!" Then, perhaps because she felt an acquaintance of forty-odd years did not deserve to be treated casually, perhaps because she yearned for a confidant, she burst out excitedly: "Maybe he is a mite—but she's no girl for him—that flighty creature! I hear tell she dances the newest, queerest dances; that she actually has her nails tended to in the city—and look at her clothes!"

The other nodded assent. "I don't know anyhow what the times is coming to. It's awful different than when we was girls!"

"I know John's been going to call on her off and on," continued Mrs. Pettigrew, "and I don't suppose he'd like it if I put my foot down about his doing it." And her intuition was accurate, for John, used as he was to his mother's domination in small things,

"Who is That With Him?"

would of a certainty have rebelled at any attempt to control his comings and goings, at his age. "There ought to be some way to put a stop to it without his catching on."

Whereupon the two elderly ladies put their graying heads together and plotted for the well-doing of John. Martha Jordan even suggested her daughter as counter-attraction, but her friend could not bring herself to see in lanky, freckled, sandy-haired Bessie Jordan a suitable foil to the dancing, manicured siren at the Scobles'.

"Say—look here, Ella!" and Martha fairly bubbled over with excitement. "Can't you send John away? By the time he got back the girl would be gone, and you know the old proverb—'Out of sight is out of mind!'"

Ella looked thoughtful. It certainly was an idea. It wouldn't occur to John to go off himself, just at haying time; but she knew he was often wishing for a chance to "see a little life," and that, urged on by her, he would probably go. "I guess you've hit on a scheme, Martha," she said.

Presently Mr. Jordan arrived, and Martha drove away with him, inwardly content at having assisted her friend out of her dilemma.

That night, across the red-covered supper table, John's mother broached her project. "You're looking sort of peakin', John. How'd you like to go over to Taylor City and visit your uncle's folks for a spell?"

Taylor City deserved its pretentious name only when compared with Centerville and Slocum. But John, good-looking, in spite of a certain restlessness of his eyes and discontented, downward curve of his mouth, looked at her, pleased. Lord, how he hated the dreary round of life in Centerville! Evelyn Thatcher had mitigated his lot for a while, but after Thursday that pleasure would end with her departure for home.

Very willingly he fell in with his mother's plans. Twenty-eight years with that woman who prided herself on "calling a spade a spade" and doing everything "open and aboveboard" had rendered him utterly unsuspicious of any subtleties or concealments on her part.

Mrs. Pettigrew herself had some anxious moments, while John spent the evening before his departure at the Scobles', and the old grandfather's clock ticked away several long hours. She was worried for fear John had committed himself to an engagement with this flyaway girl. Then she consoled herself by the thought that it had taken John's father four years to get to the point of a partial proposal, and John had known this person only a month.

The time after John left passed very quietly. The haying progressed satisfactorily, helped out by a neighbor's son called in to assist the hired man. Martha Jordan dropped in once or twice and the two women congratulated themselves on "saving John." Even when Martha brought the news that Evelyn had ended her visit unexpectedly soon (for John had neglected to mention the fact that Evelyn was leaving on Thursday), their complacency was not disturbed. They figured she had doubtless found Centerville suddenly dull without John around to flirt with.

One letter came from that youth postmarked "Taylor City"—then one stamped "Austin Junction."

"Probably run up to see his father's cousin," remarked his mother. "Very thoughtful of him."

The next letter did not mention his father's cousin, but gave the time of his return. In preparation his mother "got up" a supper fit for the gods—and even for her son. Waffles with golden sirup, feathery biscuits, jellied chicken, lemon pie with flaky, fluted crust; crispy fried potatoes—a collection of all John's favorite dishes, whether customarily served at the table or not. And because she felt she owed a debt she could never repay to Martha Jordan she invited her to come.

When the whistle of John's train blew for the stop at Centerville the two ladies were rocking placidly on the shady porch. Supper only awaited John's arrival. They heard the train slow down, stop, pull out. Up the hill came a man—then two women—then a boy—and last came John—and—and—"For the land sakes, Martha, who is that with him?"

Chattering, laughing, clinging arm in arm, two people came through the gate, up the walk, up the steps.

"Mother—this is my wife—Evelyn!" cried a happy, rejuvenated John.

And, "I hope you'll like me!" said a slim, gayly dressed, sparkling young girl.

Across the red-covered supper table John explained more fully. "Evelyn lives in Austin Junction, you know. We were married there yesterday. I didn't know how much she meant to me until I went away. Then I found out and hunted her up. You know they say, 'Absence makes the heart grow fonder!'"

Later, out in the kitchen, Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. Pettigrew permitted themselves one exchange of glances.

"We hit the wrong proverb," said Martha dolefully.

But between "that Thatcher girl" and "my son's wife" a gulf stretched. "She seems a very nice girl," said Mrs. Pettigrew complacently. "And you know 'all's well that ends well!'"

COMFORT HIS ONLY THOUGHT

Colored Man Was Not at All Engrossed in Any Pursuit of the Finny Tribe.

It was a hot, drowsy day in July, and the heat waves swam steadily upward from cotton field and winding road. In front of a negro cabin, a man sat, clad for the season, and with a fishing pole in his hand, nodding sleepily. The line attached to the pole was dangling into a water barrel that had never raised anything more like a fish than a mosquito larva, known locally as a wiggle tail.

An acquaintance passed by mounted on a packing mule, whose dragging feet kicked up little spurts of dust. Catching sight of the somnolent fisherman, the passerby called: "Hey, Jim, what you doin' fishin' in dat ole water barrel? You know you ain't gwine catch nothin'. Jes' wastin' yo' time."

Jim peered forth from heavy-lidded eyes. "Niggah, I knows Jes' as well as you does, I ain't gwine catch nothin' in dis here bar'l. What does I care if I don't catch nothin' so long as I is comfortable as I is."

The fisherman returned to his nodding, and the packing mule ambled on down the dusty road.

Japan's Seaweed Pulp Industry. That the manufacture of paper pulp from seaweed is proving a profitable undertaking seems evidenced by the fact, reported by Consul General George H. Scidmore, that the only company manufacturing this pulp is building another factory. This concern was organized in December, 1919, and is producing by a secret process, about 50 tons of pulp daily, which is largely used in the composition of cigarette paper. The new plant when completed will have a daily capacity of 150 tons of pulp. The present price is about five cents a pound.—Scientific American.

Stocked.

"Well, we've got a well stocked cellar at last."
"Liquor?"
"No. Coal."

BED NOT POPULAR

Most People Have an Aversion to Seeking It.

Not That They Have Any Objection to Slumber in Itself, but That They Reject the Abject Surrender Involved.

One of the characters in "The Moon and Sixpence" remarked that he had faithfully lived up to the old precept about doing every day two things you heartily dislike; for, said he, every day he had got up and he had gone to bed.

It is a sad thing that as soon as the hands of the clock have turned ten the shadow of going to bed begins to creep over the evening. We have never heard bedgoling spoken of with any enthusiasm. One after another we have seen a gathering disperse, each person saying (with an air of solemn resignation): "Well, I guess I'll go to bed." But there was no hilarity about it. It is really rather touching how they cling to the departing skirts of the day that is vanishing under the spinning shadow of night.

This is odd, we repeat, for sleep is highly popular among human beings. The reluctance to go to one's couch is not at all a reluctance to slumber, for almost all of us will doze happily in an armchair or on a sofa, or even feasted on the floor with a couple of cushions. But the actual and formal yielding to sheets and blankets is to be postponed to the last possible moment.

The devil of drowsiness is most potent, we find, about 10:30 p. m. At this period the human carcass seems to consider that it has finished its cycle, which began with so much courage about 16 hours before. It begins to slack and the mind halts on a dead center every now and then, refusing to complete the revolution. Now, there are those who hold that this is certainly the seemly and appointed time to go to bed, and they do so as a matter of routine.

These are, commonly, the happier creatures, for they take the tide of sleep at the flood and are borne calmly and with gracious gentleness out to great waters of nothingness. They push off from the wharf on a tranquil current, and nothing more is to be seen or heard of these voyagers until they reappear at the breakfast table, digging lustily into the grapefruit.

These people are happy, ay, in a brutish and sedentary fashion, but they miss the admirable adventures of those more embittered wrestlers who will not give in without a struggle. These latter suffer severe pangs between 10:30 and about 11:15, while they grapple with their falling faculties and seek to re-establish the will on its tottering throne.

This requires courage, stout valor unbending. Once you yield, be it ever so little to the tempter, you are lost. And here our poor bard's clay plays us false, undermining the intellect with many a trick and wile. "I will sit down for a season in that comfortable chair," the creature says to himself, "and read this sprightly novel. That will ease my mind and put me in humor for a continuance of lively thinking."

And the end of that man is a steady nasal buzz from the bottom of the chair, where he has collapsed, an unsightly object and a disgrace to humanity. This also means a big bill from the electric light company at the end of the month. In many such ways will his corpus betray him, leading him by plausible self-deceptions into a pitfall of sleep, whence he is aroused about three a. m., when the planet turns over on the other side.—Boston Globe.

Tennyson Home on Market.

Aldworth on Blackdown, Tennyson's home for many years, has been placed on the market. The property of the former poet laureate of England is near Haslemere in the wild Surrey country and stands by a long avenue of scrub oak along which Cromwell and his army are said to have marched from Arundel castle.

Aldworth was built in 1868 and on April 23, when the first stone was laid, the poet's wife made the following entry in her diary:

"Shakespeare's birthday. A. in excellent spirits, 'he was pleased with the inscription on the stone: 'Prosper Thou the works of our hands, O prosper Thou our handiwork!'"

Here in the shade of the ancient trees Tennyson took his morning walks, clad in his great black coat and his famous sombrero hat, which emphasized his long bearded face. T. P. O'Connor once remarked that it was the best make-up for a poet that he had ever seen on or off the stage.

Maine Rich in Tourmalines.

Nowhere is there such a wealth of tourmalines as in the state of Maine, according to a recent statement on the development of the resources of that state. At Mount Mica, in the town of Paris, it says, is a deposit of red and green tourmaline unequalled elsewhere. They are, it would seem, almost inexhaustible in quantity, of rare beauty, and when cut into gems are in good demand, many finding their way into museum collections.

TIBETAN DEAD NOT BURIED

After Slicing Away the Flesh the Bones Are Pulverized and Then Fed to the Vultures.

To bury bodies in the earth is to contaminate them, is the Tibetan view, according to Rev. D. F. McGillicuddy, pastor of St. Stephen's church, of Worcester, Mass., who penetrated this forbidden country in 1906.

Instead of burying their dead they slice the flesh from all bodies and feed it to the birds. After skillfully cutting away the flesh they pulverize the bones and feed them to the vultures.

The temples used by these people for centuries are still standing. In front of many of them are stumps of trees covered with butter, in which devotees stick their offerings of coins.

Tibet is peopled by a branch of the Mongolian race. The 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 population are a mixture of Chinese and Tibetans, as the races intermarried. They believe in both polyandry and polygamy.

It is the most extensive elevated country in the world, containing 750,000 square miles, with an elevation varying from 8,000 to 14,000 feet. Its climate is principally bleak and cold, although the summers in the southern part are mild and pleasant.

The first white man to enter Lhasa, the capital, was Sir Francis Younghusband, who fought his way there in 1904.

Dalai Lama, religious head of the Buddhist faith, which is the national religion, was so overcome by the fact that infidels had trodden the streets of the forbidden city, that he fled the country, and was for many years a wanderer in northern China.

BOOK MANY CENTURIES OLD

New Testament in Manuscript, Marvelously Preserved, Was Brought to New York From Armenia.

One of the oldest New Testament manuscripts in the world, and the oldest, so far as is known, in the United States, was brought from Europe by John Hahn, a Hungarian. A dozen or more full-page colored illustrations of incidents in the life of Jesus begin the volume. These are followed by two pages of historical data and several more comprising a calendar.

Little is known of the history of this ancient Testament. A brief account of its later adventures is given in the center of the book, written in modern Armenian by Jezekiel Arshaguni, who, in 1895, wrote what he knew of its story. During the reign of Abdul Hamid, when the Turks were persecuting the Armenian people, pillaging homes, demolishing chapels and carrying away all the books, this volume was saved because it was hidden in water, doubtless in a well, until the danger had passed. The book was equal to the test. The ink stayed fast and the parchment firm. Only the red leather cover was loosened from the canvas back, showing its wooden foundation and a scrap of silk lining.

Employed Two Parachutes.

Though the design and operation of parachutes have been the subject of practical experiments since the eighteenth century, the American air service is the first, it is believed, to test the action and interaction of parachutes used in pairs, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. In experiments performed at Mitchell field, Long Island, N. Y., a sergeant strapped one parachute on his back, as usual, and a second on his chest. Thus encumbered, he was carried, in a two-seater plane, to a height of approximately one mile. Here he walked out on a wing, pulled the release of the rearward chute, and stepped into space. The white bag opened nicely, and he drifted down to within less than 1,000 feet. Here he pulled the second release, and the second parachute opened above him without entangling or interfering with the first.

Grouchiness Destroys Friendship.

Nobody, of course, expects a man to be eternally radiant with cheerfulness and wreathed in smiles. But people will not tolerate urbanity one day and grouchiness the next in perpetual alternation. People will not tolerate it because they do not have to. Pleasant friends who are more reliable in their manner are not difficult to find. There is no need of putting up with a "grouch."

Consequently the moody, instead of blaming others for their unpopularity extraordinary, would far better reproach themselves. They are the ones with whom the fault lies, and until they overcome their moodiness they may rest assured that solitude and unhappiness will be their portion. — H. Addington Bruce in Chicago Daily News.

Parrot a Brainy Bird.

We may question the veracity of some of the parrot stories that are told by admiring owners, but we cannot doubt that the parrot is endowed with remarkable brain power. A good bird will interpret the moods of those about it in a most uncanny way. A parrot known to the writer somehow seems to know instantly when his mistress is amused, and will join in the laughter after a dinner-table joke with such spontaneity that any stranger might credit him with an accurate appreciation of the humor of the moment.

The Main Question.

"Sir, I came to ask you for your daughter's hand."
"Well, young man, how much are you prepared to put into it each month if I give it to you?"

ARMENIAN REPUBLIC NOT TAINTED WITH BOLSHIEVISM

Reports that bolsheviks are penetrating Armenia, based on the recent establishment of a soviet government in the provinces of Karabakh and Zangezor, are misleading, according to a statement issued by Near East Relief. The two provinces in question are inhabited largely by Armenians, but are not a part of the Republic of Armenia. They consist of a mountainous region, the richest mineral district of the Near East, known to possess gold, copper, sulphur, iron and zinc mines, but which is cut off from the Armenian Republic by lack of roads.

The Armenians, the statement goes on to say, have been opposed bitterly to bolshevism from the start and are now calling all men from 18 to 45 to arms to fight the advance of soviet troops, should any campaign against Armenia be attempted. A brief bolshevik revolution in Alexandropol, Armenia, on May 1 was put down by the government within a few days. The mena lies in the possibility of a only danger of bolshevism is Ar cessation of the relief work now being conducted by the Near East Relief in Transcaucasia, with its resulting starvation of the inhabitants of that country, which might conceivably force them into the arms of Soviet Russia.

As there is no intention on the part of the Near East Relief to cease its activities, this prospect is considered very remote.

CITY OF DEATH IS TRANSFORMED

AMERICAN PHILANTHROPY ACCOMPLISHES WONDERS IN SHORT TIME, NURSE

"American charity is transforming Armenia from a land of destitute, abnormal people, dying by the hundreds from starvation, into a nation of sturdy, normal, well fed citizens," Miss Blanche L. Knox, a Philadelphia nurse, told officials of Near East Relief on her return recently from a year and a half of service in Transcaucasia.

"The transformation of Armenia is best illustrated by that of Alexandropol, its largest city," she said. "When we arrived there early in 1919 conditions were horrible. More awful than the city itself were its inhabitants. Their grain-sack clothing was mud dyed. Along the streets half-mad creatures were digging in the mud for something they could eat, or else laid down in the mud to die. Before we arrived there seemed to have been little or no attempt to bury the bodies of the dead."

"Alexandropol was a far different city when I again passed through it on the way home. The streets were cleaned and the people were well clothed in old American garments or in suits made at the Near East Relief industrial shops. The ragged, abnormal orphans had been gathered in Near East Relief asylums. The mud-colored town that had seemed death itself a few months before was hardly recognizable."

"To make this improvement permanent relief activities must be continued until the political situation clarifies."

Miss Knox's work overseas was not without its thrills. Once she was aroused at midnight by Kurd machine gunners firing on the city of Igdir, and was compelled to flee with the orphans under her care in that city. Last May, in the Caucasus, her train was held up for six hours by Bolshevists.

TENNESSEE URGES THAT GOVERNMENT AID ARMENIA

The general assembly of the state of Tennessee, at its recent extraordinary session, adopted the following resolution endorsing the work of Near East Relief:

"Whereas, the General Assembly of the State of Tennessee has had brought to its attention the serious condition now existing in Armenia and other Near Eastern countries, which menaces the peace of the world; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we urge upon our Government the necessity of immediate affirmative action in bringing to an end the suffering and wrong that still continues within the border of these Eastern countries, and that we express our deep and earnest sympathy for the unfortunate people of Armenia, and that we believe that our Government, consistent with its constitution and principles, should render every possible and proper aid to them in their efforts to establish and maintain a government of their own, and that we heartily approve the work which has been and is conducted by the Near East Relief Committee in relieving these suffering peoples."

"Adopted by the Senate, August 16, 1920."

WHY STATISTICIANS GO CRAZY

Troubles Imposed Upon the Experts of the Census Bureau by the "Scientists."

Experts at the census bureau in Washington often express wonder that more of their statisticians do not go crazy. As an illustration of what these unfortunates have to endure, an official of the bureau cites the following incidents, according to the New York Evening Post: In the census of 1920 there was an enumeration for the first time of mechanically propelled vehicles on farms. The importance of this information as an indication of agricultural progress will be readily recognized, and to the outsider it may seem a simple task to collect and present it.

The "scientific" agriculturists, however, have insisted on a presentation of the facts in a most elaborate form and declare that if they are given in any other way they will be useless. This is what they have demanded: The number of farms having autos, trucks and tractors; the number having autos and trucks, but no tractors; the number having autos and tractors, but no trucks; the number having tractors and trucks, but no autos; the number having autos, but no tractors or trucks; the number having tractors, but no autos or trucks, and the number having trucks, but no autos or tractors.

In like manner they ask for the number of farmhouses having telephones; electric lights and piped water; the number having telephones, electric lights, but no piped water; the number having electric lights and piped water, but no telephones; the number having telephones and piped water, but no electric lights; the number having telephones, but no electric lights or piped water; the number having electric lights, but no telephones or piped water, and the number having piped water, but no telephones or electric lights.

"If this sort of thing keeps up," said a prominent officer of the bureau, "we shall have to erect a special asylum for the care of our employees, who have lost their reason."

"Evening Up."

Dick Carraway was having a sale of his surplus stock. To start the sales he led out a milk cow, one of the best of his herd, and told the auctioneer she was four years old. Lou Carter, a weather-beaten old chap with a shrewd eye, bid in the cow. He gave Dick a check for the amount and said he would come for the cow the next day.

The next morning, however, when he rode up to take home his purchase Dick said:

"I made a mistake yesterday, Lou. I said that cow was only four years old, but when I talked it over with the old lady last night I remembered that the cow is eight years old. I don't want to let a mistake like that go with a neighbor, so I thought the fair thing was to tell you and just let you take your check back, and I'll keep the cow."

Lou squinted his eye approvingly at the cow. She bore every mark of being a good milker. He then looked apologetically at Dick.

"Well, Carraway," he said, "turn about is fair play. You made a mistake yesterday, I'll make one today and just keep the cow."

Polo Two Thousand Years Old.
"Hockey on horseback" was the name given to the first polo match played in Europe. It is the only athletic game which the west has borrowed from Asia. Its very name was unknown to England 50 years ago, though for over 2,000 years it has been played throughout the East. Firdusi, the Persian poet, who lived a century before Omar Khayyam, described a polo match between the Iranians and Turanians, and its name is nothing more than the Tibetan pulu, or ball made from a knot of willow wood. But it was not until India began to settle down after the mutiny that British officers took up polo, learning it from the Manipuris on the north-west frontier.

A Novelty.

"I'm certainly worried," the great politician confided to his friend. "If I tell the people that my business connections with the city administration brought me in twice as much as they did, they'll think I'm a graffer; and if I say I get only half what I did they'll think I'm a dub for not grabbing off what I might have. I don't know what to do about it."

"Why not tell them the truth?"
"Say," the great politician exclaimed in delight. "That's the great idea! Wonder why none of us thought of it?"

A Quaker Oath.

Two small boys in a family of Friends had a disagreement, during which the older boy became very much incensed.

Finally, no longer able to control himself, he took his brother by the shoulders and shook him, with the exclamation: "Oh, thee little you, thee!"

Then, as the enormity of his offense came over him, he said, in a changed voice: "Don't tell mother I swore."

What a Difference.

"Very well, then," sighed the stout suitor as he knelt before his adored one, "if you won't, you won't, but will you be kind enough to give me your hand?"

"Why, I have just positively and definitely refused you!" the fair maid exclaimed in astonishment.

"Oh, I understand that. I'm not agn't asking for your hand in marriage, but to help me to my feet."

It may be a bumper crop, but the prices thereof are still bumping up against the roof.

Well, anyhow, the peanut outlook is said to be good, and that's something to be happy over.

Some of the gasoline buyers of today will be asking for credit on bread and butter before long.

It takes a search warrant the day after election to find any one who voted for the losing candidate.

While the baseball crooks should be shown up they shouldn't be put in jail merely for stealing bases.

Some people in Princess Anne won't clean up their grounds for, if they wait long enough, the wind will do it for them.

Good looking girls will never experience any difficulty in getting all the assistance they need in the voting booth.

It is denied that nothing will be done about the Irish question, as a decision will soon be reached whether to lay it on the table or pigeonhole it.

When the Realist said "All Men are Liars," he must have had some foresight of the exchange of personalities in a presidential election.

With 8,000,000 foreigners wishing to come here it is obvious that this country is going to be well supplied with hand organ men, chewing gum men and bootblacks.

The profiteers regarded the social system as essentially sound while prices were going up, but with the same coming down they are convinced that something is essentially wrong.

The glass manufacturers that for many years got business selling mirrors to offices where the stenographers are employed should have had some trade this fall supplying polling places.

When the wholesale price of anything drops 10 per cent. and the retail price only half of 1 per cent. something must be the matter with the news facilities of the country, or else some folks don't read the newspapers.

Luella says she always knew baseball was a brutal game, as she read the other day about a report of a squeeze play. And Gladys remarks that politics will be highly educational for women, as they may get a chance to go to the electoral college.

DIRT AND DISORDER

The greatest problem in civic improvement is the large number of people who seem to have no sense of cleanliness and order. While this element is most conspicuous in big city slums yet most towns have some representatives of it. Some of the most disorderly dwellings are found in country locations.

A constant state of deadlock exists between these people and owners of property. Landlords won't improve the property because they complain that tenants abuse it. Tenants complain that they are so discouraged by the run down condition of things that they have no interest in improvement.

In some places civic organizations have made a systematic effort to remedy these conditions. At Cincinnati, a visiting housekeeper was appointed to see what she could do in a typical slum district. It was a difficult matter to handle as a tactless approach to these people would meet rebuffs.

But in this case a woman with human sympathy was able to persuade the tenants of the advantages they would gain by taking hold to improve conditions. Then when she had got the co-operation of the tenants, she approached the landlords and persuaded them to make betterments. As a result nearly all the homes were improved, value was added to the real estate and living conditions made far more pleasant.

While conditions would be different in a community like Princess Anne, yet the time will come when efforts to persuade disorderly neighborhoods to clean up will be an essential part of any civic improvement movement. It is merely a question of getting the landlords and tenants to cooperate.

POPULATION GROWTH

Some people on reading that every State in the Union but Mississippi, Vermont and Nevada showed population gains in the last 10 years, think that the country is growing too fast. They do not see how all this teeming population can be supported at this rate of increase. They point to the rise in land prices as a sign that the country is getting too populous.

Yet if the United States would cultivate its broad acres with the same intensive use of the soils as prevails in Western Europe, a population ten times the present figures could live in comfort. If ever there are scarcities of the essentials of life it will come from the stupid failure of the people to apply modern science rather than from exhaustion of resources.

For A Disordered Stomach
When the stomach fails to perform its functions the bowels become deranged, the liver and kidneys congested. The important thing is to restore the stomach and liver to a healthy condition and for this purpose Chamberlain's Tablets are excellent. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter.

A Reliable Remedy For Colds And Croup

It would surprise you to know the number of people who use and recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Mrs. J. N. Rose, Verona, Pa., writes Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used by myself and husband for a number of years for coughs and colds. I also gave it to my little daughter three and a half years of age when she had croup last winter. It broke up the attack at once. I have recommended this remedy to many of my friends and neighbors who have also used it with good results.

that eye strain is the root of many nervous troubles. Nine out of every ten cases of eye trouble can be traced to refractive errors which cause eye strain headaches, nervousness, brain fatigue, sleeplessness, dizziness, spots floating before the eyes, letters running together when reading.

There are some skeptics who do not believe that the above ills that originate from the eyes, could be prevented if glasses were worn in time, but the majority of the people are getting educated to the progress of optical science. Five Minute Chats on Our Presidents

By JAMES MORGAN

(Copyright, 1920, by James Morgan.)

LAST OF THE VIRGINIANS

1817—James Monroe, inaugurated fifth president, aged fifty-eight.
1831—July 4, died in New York, aged seventy-three.

MONROE'S administration was the most serene and yet one of the most important periods in the life of the nation. It was an eight years crowded with glorious and lasting victories of peace, such victories as swords never can win.

By a mere exchange of notes between the United States and England, those two jealous neighbors pledged themselves to disarm forever on the great lakes. By a common-sense business transaction, Florida, which was of little use to Spain, but of much use to the United States, was bought over the counter in 1820, a peaceable conquest that ranks only second to the Louisiana purchase. By a civil notice to the old world, in 1823, the whole new world was set aside under the Monroe doctrine as an immense preserve of international peace. By give-and-take in the Missouri compromise in 1820, North and South were bound together anew, though with false ties.

Monroe's two terms cover what is known as the "era of good feeling." The old Federalist party having given up the ghost, he succeeded to the presidency as the last of the Virginia dynasty almost as easily as an heir apparent receives the crown of his father. Washington's second election would have been entirely unanimous had not a New Hampshire elector cast one dissenting ballot.

Yet that "era of good feeling" really was filled with many bitter feelings aroused by personal ambitions and the quarrels of factions. But Monroe formed one of the strongest cabinets in history, and with John Quincy Adams, William H. Crawford, John C. Calhoun and William Wirt among its members, he succeeded in reconciling to his administration the most divergent elements. In his desire for harmony, he would also have included Henry Clay and Andrew Jackson, but they declined.

One day the British minister glared across the White House dinner table and shouted to the French minister: "Are you biting your nails at me, sir?" The Frenchman responded by drawing his sword, and the two diplomats rushed at each other. But as they were about to clash, the president drew his own sword and stopped them and stopped the fight.

That little incident gives us a picture of the spirit of Monroe and his administration. While he was in the White House, men and factions had to leave their quarrels at the door.

The quiet, modest president was not so successful in keeping the peace among the women of the official circle, and their disputes over social rank and precedence brewed many squalls. Although Jim Monroe, as he was familiarly called, was the last president to cling to the ancient knee breeches, cockade and sword, he was as plain and easy as an old shoe. When a newly arrived European diplomat saw a bald-headed, watery-eyed man in a striped seersucker coat, a dirty waistcoat spotted with ink and with slippers down at the heel writing at a White House desk, he wondered that the president would have such a slovenly clerk until he was dumfounded to find that he was in the presence of the president himself.

In the six years that remained to Monroe after retiring from the presidency, he set himself, as an ex-president, a high standard of conduct. Having received the supreme honor at the hands of all the people, he felt that his name belonged to them and he refused to lend it to any candidate or any party.

Feeling alone after the death of his wife, Monroe sold Oak Hill, his Virginia farm, in the closing months of his life. With the feeling of an exile, the last of the Virginians left his native state to live with a son-in-law in New York city, where he died on July 4, 1831.

A FUGITIVE PRESIDENT

1809—James Madison, inaugurated President, aged fifty-seven.
1812—(June 19) War declared.
1814—(Aug. 24-27) In flight from the British. (Dec. 28) Treaty of peace.
1817—Madison retired from presidency.
1826—Rector in University of Virginia.
1829—In constitutional convention.
1836—(June 28) died, aged eighty-five.

BUT for the smiles of his blooming Dolly, Madison's administration would be a desert without an oasis, over whose dreary expanse the weary biographer would wander athirst for human anecdotes.

Her bubbling spirits relieved the austerity of Jeffersonian simplicity and won her a popularity that has been equaled, if at all, among the mistresses of the White House, only by Mrs. Cleveland. Unless Grant must be excepted, Madison is the only president who found the presidency an anticlimax to his career. One of the really great law-givers of the nation, he was without executive force.

With a weak cabinet, this gentle, sweet tempered, peace loving scholar found himself adrift on the turbid sea of the great Napoleonic wars. Perhaps it was no longer possible to keep us out of the war when at last the United States was the only neutral left in the civilized world. But certainly it was no time for a fair-weather sailor.

After 20 years of kicking and cuffing from both sides in the European conflict, bullied by England and lied to by Napoleon, the country was sore all over when the "warhawks" of congress, under the youthful Henry Clay, seized the tiller of the ship of state from Madison's irresolute hand and recklessly pointed the vessel straight into the teeth of the storm. The sea-board East was more for peace and at that time the military section was the new West, where the Tennesseans and Kentuckians, Indians and Ohioans were lustily shouting "On to Canada!" Overcome by their rash counsels, Madison consented, as he said, to "throw forward the flag of the country, sure that the people would press onward and defend it."

Without competent civilian military leaders, without financial credit without war equipment, the people could not press onward, as any history of the dismal war of 1812 will tell you. Even the capital was left undefended, and Madison, "in a little round hat with a big cockade," ran about in helpless bewilderment as the British marched upon Washington.

With the invaders entering at one side of the defenseless town, the president fled at the other. As he turned he saw the flames shooting up behind him, he fled faster and farther. While the British commander was blowing out candles on his dinner table that he might feast in the light of the burning White House, its fugitive master was hiding in a forest but 25 miles away.

After an absence of three days, a heavy-hearted, shattered, houseless president returned to view the charred walls of his official residence and of the capital. At every turn he was greeted by ugly mutterings of the general disposition to make him the scapegoat for all the national shortcomings in a war that had been thrust upon him. But with victory at New Orleans and the return of peace, the voice of the faultfinder was drowned in the hum of sudden prosperity. And in the closing days of his administration Madison was cheered by many assurances that his countrymen were not forgetful of the 40 years that he had served them in pure devotion.

Like John Adams, he emerged from his retirement to sit in the constitutional convention of his state, where the aged statesman closed his active public life, as he had opened it, with a sentiment of humility for the slaves.

Five Minute Chats on Our Presidents

A MAN AFOOT

1797-1801—Vice president.
1801—Inaugurated third president, aged 57.
1803—Purchased Louisiana.
1807—Enforced Embargo act.
1809—Retired to Monticello.
1826—July 4, died, aged 83.

THE furious storm aroused by the combat between Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton, the greatest gladiators to face each other in the arena of American politics, makes our recent campaigns seem like sunshowers. Hamiltonians scorned to eat and drink, and sometimes even to pray, with the Jeffersonians. To give a daughter in marriage with one of them was almost abhorred as miscegenation.

Nothing else so stirs the angry passions as a conflict of classes or of sections. This was both doubly bitter. An almost solid South united with the Northern masses in a common dread of a strong government and in a common hostility to the old ruling caste in the middle states and New England. The new parties called themselves Federalists and Republicans.

In the first battle, when those parties fought for the chair of Washington in 1796, the result was so close that Jefferson came within two electoral votes of winning the presidency against Adams. In the second battle, which was waged in 1800, he beat Adams.

Contrary to the familiar story of his hitching his horse to the capitol fence, Jefferson walked to his inauguration and afterward walked back to his boarding house, which was only a few hundred yards away. This man, afoot, dreamer and theorist, quietly ushered in that day a more lasting revolution than a man on horseback could have wrought with a sword and whiff of grapeshot.

Believing that revolutions should begin at home Jefferson revolutionized the White House by casting aside the ceremonials which had been adopted in a feeble imitation of kingly courts. Opening the doors to all, without regard to social classifications and without order of precedence, his rule was "first come, first served." Determined that the president, as he said, should cease to be a personage, he stopped the custom of celebrating a president's birthday, never made a public tour, bid his own marketing and went and came like any other citizen. Although no successor has thrown a British minister into a fit of indignation by refusing him in slippers fed, Jeffersonian simplicity rather than Washingtonian courtliness remains the standard of presidential conduct.

It was the strange fortune of this most thoroughgoing pacifist to find himself at the helm in the midst of a world at war. When the globe was bristling with bayonets until it looked like a porcupine, he calmly announced that peace was his passion, and started off by cutting down his little army one-half and by talking of hauling up his seven warships. His only interest in the Napoleonic struggle was to keep out of it.

Nevertheless while the military powers were fighting over little islands and provinces and drenching Europe with their blood, this most unwarlike president, without firing a shot, gathered in far richer spoils than the victors in twenty-five years of warfare and divided among themselves at the congress of Vienna. As Jefferson's election was a bloodless revolution, his purchase of the immense empire of Louisiana, which doubled the territory of the United States, was a bloodless conquest, the greatest peaceable annexation the world ever saw. Having made it, the flag was no more than hoisted on the farther bank of the Mississippi than he dispatched Lewis and Clark and Captain Pike boldly to spy out the unexplored rivers and mountains of the new soil, so honestly won, and from which so many free states were to spring.

Jefferson is the only president who remained the leader of his party after leaving the White House. Indeed, the Democrats never have ceased to swear allegiance to his spirit.

BRIDGING A CHASM

By STANLEY WARNER

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Does, eh?" he snorted. "Then he is either weakening on his grandstand or has something up his sleeve. In either case I won't run after him. Let him come to me if he has any proposition to make."

"Manton is quite as stubborn as yourself," explained the attorney. "Here you have litigated, never speaking to one another, since you had your first quarrel. You've got to give in some, Briston. It's for your own interests."

"I won't," asserted his client stanchly. "I wouldn't step on his ground for a fortune. He has penned me in so I couldn't get out my chopping. He has spoiled two good sales." "Well, Manton wants to tender a proposition to adjust matters amicably."

"Then he can come and see me. I won't go and see him, that is sure." Lawyer Brown looked nonplused. His mission boded failure. He did not wish to lose a liberal fee, and besides that he wished to see two old-time cronies and later enemies get back to first principles like rational human beings.

Again, he had been approached only the day previous by the many, stalwart son of Hugh Briston. The lawyer had always liked the bright cheery lad, Sidney, who had come to early manhood with everybody his friend and well wisher, and especially Eunice Manton.

"We'll take it for granted that we like one another, Mr. Brown," Sidney had said in his clear, open way, "and you may do me a great favor. I understand that there is some chance of father and Mr. Manton getting together on the subject of their lawsuits. It means a lot to me if they do, and to Eunice also," added Sidney, a slight flush coming to his cheeks.

"You needn't say anything, Sidney," replied Brown. "How you have kept your attentions to pretty Eunice from the knowledge of her father and your own I shall not inquire, but I shall now do double duty in trying to heal the breach between two fine eaters."

And now, recalling his promise to Sidney, the lawyer observed to the father: "Well, I suppose you won't object Manton half way?"

"What do you mean by half way?" growled Briston suspiciously. "I wouldn't cross his threshold for a tune, and I'm sure he hates every step and stone about my place."

"Oh, well, I may be able to think out some method by which you two stubborn old men may meet, without either of you feeling that you have lowered your dignity, or given in."

It was two days later when Lawyer Brown called upon Hugh Briston. "Well," he remarked briskly, "I've settled it. Manton is agreeable to the half-way proposition."

"Huh! accommodating ain't he?" sniffed Briston derisively.

"There's the old foot bridge crossing the river that winds in at the rear of your respective holdings. He'll be there at nine o'clock tomorrow morning. Now then, be sensible and human. Four principal sources of conflict are the mill, the thoroughfare. His is the new road. Give in if he does; shake hands, be friends and bury the hatchet."

"He'll make the first advances," sneered Briston. "If he don't, you're wasting our time."

The old bridge spanned a creek grown into river volume during recent spring rains, and on account of a new structure nearer the main thoroughfare it was to be dismantled since the feud between Manton and Briston, it had fallen into disuse. At precisely nine o'clock the next morning Silas Manton advanced from his own land and carelessly lounged against the railing at the center of the decayed structure. Briston approached from his side. As he stepped upon the planking the weakened timbers creaked. Both were heavy men. With a crash the whole rotten structure gave way. Amid snapping timbers the two bulky enemies went down into mid stream.

"I can't swim," yelled Manton thoroughly frightened as the eddy current began to bear him down stream. "No more can I," announced Briston. "I guess we're a-goner. Here, grab the end of the plank I'm holding out. Hi there, oh Sidney! Get us out."

For Sidney suddenly emerged into view from a near shore thicket without his father even suspecting that he had purposely stationed himself there to watch the bridge negotiations.

SWEET SEVENTEEN

By RITA SULLIVAN.

(Copyright, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Peggy, the way you act you'd think that you were six instead of sixteen."

The reproving voice of her older brother aroused Peggy from her absorbing task of fitting together the parts of a picture puzzle.

"Raymond, I'm seventeen! I guess you forgot!" was her indignant answer.

"Well, I do wish that you would act like it, then. What would Dick think of you if he saw you now?"

Her brother spoke with all the dignity and "man of the world" air which he had acquired a short time previous when he had fully realized that he had the right to vote.

Dick was a former schoolmate of Raymond's, and from the first he had been Peggy's champion when she was just a little schoolgirl with "golden curls and short dresses. Now that she was older, their friendship was fast becoming stronger."

"Oh, he wouldn't care, Ray Hardy; he's used to it, and—"

"Now, listen here, Peggy! What would you say if I told you that Dick is getting tired of your childish ways. Why, only the other day—well, I shan't say any more. But really, Peggy, when will you ever grow up?"

Peggy was made speechless by the suggestion that Dick was getting tired of her.

For the rest of that day Peggy was very mysteriously busy in her room, and even her mother was cautioned not to enter; and that evening, with smiling eyes, she again surveyed herself in the mirror.

"Oh, you are perfect!" she told herself frankly in the mirror. "I'd never know you if I met you on the street!"

With a sudden impulse that the thought suggested she started toward her desk and caught up the telephone.

"Oh, mother that—O-o-o." Her voice trailed away as a plan entered her mischievous head, for the calendar showed that the day was April 1. With a happy little laugh, she caught up the receiver and impatiently waited for her number.

"Why didn't I think of it before, it's such a corking idea!"

"Oh! Hello, Dick. Listen. Never mind coming all the way up to the house after me tonight. I'll meet you down at the station. Why? Oh, never mind; I'll tell you tonight. Yes, yes, I'll be on time. Bye."

During the evening meal Peggy was so quiet her brother cast suspicious glances in her direction.

"She's up to something—wonder what it is!" and then the matter entirely slipped his mind until, just as she rose from the table, she calmly told her mother that she was going to meet Dick down at the station, as it was too much for him to come all the way up.

A few minutes later a puzzled young man, comparing his watch with the station clock and finding that they agreed, decided that, in spite of her promise to be on time, Peggy was late.

"Who was that little Jane over there who looked at me so queerly? Looked rather familiar to me," was his thought, as Peggy passed by on the other side of the walk, and he turned to watch the door where she was due to arrive.

Congratulating herself on the success of her little joke, Peggy had retraced her steps and was approaching Dick when a surprising thing happened. Dick had started forward with both hands outstretched to meet a pretty girl who had come up to him with a little exclamation of surprise and pleasure, and, indeed, Peggy watched the warm greeting which passed between the two.

She watched from there while Dick talked to the girl, and repeatedly, guiltily Peggy thought—watched the door.

On reaching home she entered the sitting room, for she had decided that she would "face the music" then and there.

Her surprise Dick was there—and the girl! Then, as no one spoke, she remembered that she was still in the same attire which had so completely fooled Dick.

"Oh, it's only I—Peggy," she exclaimed, throwing her veil back impatiently.

"Why, Peg," came her brother's voice, "I'd never know you! You look stunning."

"That must have been you that passed me when I—oh, I see—"

As the full significance of the thought struck him Dick knew what the trouble with Peggy was, and crossed the room to her side.

"Oh, Peggy," pretending not to notice her icy demeanor toward him. "You've never met my cousin, Vera, have you?"

ARMENIAN REPUBLIC NOT TAINTED WITH BOLSHIEVISM

By RITA SULLIVAN.

(Copyright, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Reports that bolsheviks are penetrating Armenia, based on the recent establishment of a soviet government in the provinces of Karabakh and Zangezor, are misleading, according to a statement issued by Near East Relief. The two provinces in question are inhabited largely by Armenians, but are not a part of the Republic of Armenia.

They consist of a mountainous region, the richest mineral district of the Near East, known to possess gold, copper, sulphur, iron and zinc mines, but which is cut off from the Armenian Republic by lack of roads.

The Armenians, the statement goes on to say, have been opposed bitterly to bolshevism from the start and are now calling all men from 18 to 45 to arms to fight the advance of soviet troops, should any campaign against Armenia be attempted. A brief bolshevik revolution in Alexandropol, Armenia, on May 1 was put down by the government within a few days. The menia lies in the possibility of a only danger of bolshevism is Arcession of the relief work now being conducted by the Near East Relief in Transcaucasia, with its resulting starvation of the inhabitants of that country, which might conceivably force them into the arms of Soviet Russia.

As there is no intention on the part of the Near East Relief to cease its activities, this prospect is considered very remote.

CITY OF DEATH IS TRANSFORMED

AMERICAN PHILANTHROPY AC-COMPLISHES WONDERS IN SHORT TIME, NURSE

"American charity is transforming Armenia from a land of destitute, abnormal people, dying by the hundreds from starvation, into a nation of sturdy, normal, well fed citizens," Miss Blanche L. Knox, a Philadelphia nurse, told officials of Near East Relief on her return recently from a year and a half of service in Transcaucasia.

"The transformation of Armenia is best illustrated by that of Alexandropol, its largest city," she said. "When we arrived there early in 1919 conditions were horrible. More awful than the city itself were its inhabitants. Their grain-sack clothing was mud dyed. Along the streets half-mad creatures were lying in the mud for something they could eat, or else laid down in the mud to die. Before we arrived there seemed to have been little or no attempt to bury the bodies of the dead."

"Alexandropol was a far different city when I again passed through it on the way home. The streets were well cleaned and the people were well clothed in old American garments or in suits made at the Near East Relief industrial shops. The ragged, abnormal orphans had been gathered in Near East Relief asylums. The mud-colored town that had seemed death itself a few months before was hardly recognizable."

"To make this improvement permanent relief activities must be continued until the political situation clarifies."

Miss Knox's work overseas was not without its thrills. One she was aroused at midnight by Kurd machine gunners firing on the city of Igdir, and was compelled to flee with the orphans under her care in that city. Last May, in the Caucasus, her train was held up for six hours by Bolsheviks.

Miss Knox served during the war with the Red Cross.

TENNESSEE URGES THAT GOVERNMENT AID ARMENIA

The general assembly of the state of Tennessee, at its recent extraordinary session, adopted the following resolution endorsing the work of Near East Relief:

"Whereas, the General Assembly of the State of Tennessee has had brought to its attention the serious condition now existing in Armenia and other Near Eastern countries, which menaces the peace of the world; therefore be it Resolved, That we urge upon our Government the necessity of immediate affirmative action in bringing to an end the suffering and wrong that still continues within the border of these Eastern countries, and that we express our deep and earnest sympathy for the unfortunate people of Armenia, and that we believe that our Government, consistent with its constitution and principles, should render every possible and proper aid to them in their efforts to establish and maintain a government of their own, and that we heartily approve the work which has been and is conducted by the Near East Relief Committee in relieving these suffering people."

"Adopted by the Senate, August 16, 1920."

"Adopted by the House, September 1, 1920."

NEAR EAST RELIEF APPEAL FOR MORE FUNDS FOR WORK

MARYLAND IS ASKED TO SUPPORT
4,200 ARMENIAN WAR
ORPHANS.

IS MOST POPULAR PHILANTHROPY

Near East Relief, the American organization whose tremendously successful work in Armenia, Syria, Transcaucasia and Persia has saved the lives of half a million or more people who were starving to death after the close of the World War, is making a new appeal to American philanthropy for funds to continue its work. Practically the whole task now left to it, thanks to the success of the work of the past two years, is the care of war orphans in the orphanages which it has established.

There were about 250,000 of these orphans in Armenia and neighboring lands who were found after the war in roving bands seeking food in the cities and the open country and in all stages of starvation. There are few now to whom some sort of aid has not been given, but there are many thousands who have only America and near East Relief to look to for food, clothing and shelter. It is for the purpose of continuing to provide this support of these orphans and to prevent their again being brought to the verge of death by starvation, that the appeal for money to keep up the work has been issued.

The people of the state of Maryland have been asked, as their share of this orphan support, to provide for 2,084 orphans for a year. Near East Relief is able to feed an orphan for $5 a month and to provide food, clothing, shelter and education for $15 a month, or $180 a year for each.

The Thanksgiving-Christmas period has been set as the time for the campaign in many Maryland counties to obtain the contributions which will support the orphans assigned to them. Every dollar contributed to this cause goes into actual relief work in Armenia and the neighboring Near East countries, no deductions being made for expenses, which are privately borne.

Near East Relief is a federal corporation, chartered by Congress. Its accounts are carefully audited by certified public accountants and reports made to Congress. It has been investigated and endorsed by the National Information Bureau.

Near East Relief provides food for the hungry. For instance, a few weeks ago 150,000 refugees were being fed in one city in the Caucasus. This food had to be provided every day and the funds stopped for a few weeks all of these people would have perished.

Near East Relief provides shelter for the homeless. There are 229 orphanages, with an enrollment of 54,600, and also 56,039 other children cared for outside of these buildings. There were recently acquired an additional 60,000 children from Russia, who came into the Caucasus ahead of the Bolshevik army.

Near East Relief provides healing for the sick. There are 63 hospitals in the various districts and countries of the Near East, with a large staff of physicians, nurses and helpers.

Near East Relief provides rescue for imprisoned women and girls. There are eleven rescue homes full to overflowing. If more funds were provided, more homes could be opened and filled immediately. There are more than 100,000 of these Armenian women and girls in Turkish harems, but their release cannot be demanded until places of shelter for them are provided or their relatives, if any, can be located.

Near East Relief is building up industrial life. There are employed 23,000 men, women and young people in Near East Relief factories.

Near East Relief provides repatriation for refugees, returning them to their homes as far as possible when it is safe to do so.

Near East Relief desires the co-operation of every American. The Armenians are suffering because of their religious convictions, their loyalty to principle, their adherence to the cause of the Allies, for which we are under obligation to them in sacrificing their lives and thus saving American lives by shortening the war.

Near East Relief is perhaps the most popular philanthropy in America because of these facts and also that of all the relief areas in the world the Near East is the only place where no government aid is available. The Armenians are surrounded by neighbors who would rejoice in their extermination. They are the remnant of a martyred Christian race, whose fathers and relatives have died for the Christian faith, but this remnant, and especially the thousands of orphans whom American dollars are now supporting, constitute the hope of the future of the Near East.

If we have heart we will gladly sustain these people in their distresses, save them from starvation and provide shelter and clothing, as well as food, for the many thousands of orphans who look to America for their very existence.

Mr. George W. Brown spent a few days last week in Baltimore on a visit to his son, Mr. G. Elmer Brown.

Mrs. Alonzo L. Miles, of Salisbury, arrived in Princess Anne last Wednesday afternoon to spend several days as the guest of Mrs. Joshua W. Miles.

The sportsmen in this section are in high glee over the prospects of a good hunting season, which opens on the 10th instant, as birds and rabbits are reported to be plentiful.

Miss Lottie M. Walker, of Swansea, Mass., who has been spending a month with relatives in central Pennsylvania, came to Princess Anne last Wednesday to spend three weeks with her father, Mr. T. A. Walker.

Mr. S. Upshur Long, his daughter, Miss Lettie Long, and Miss Bessie Cahill spent the week-end at Norwood, Pa., where they attended the wedding of Mr. Sidney C. Long to Miss Margaret Paul last Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Mills and son, LeRoy, of near Cokesbury; Mrs. George W. Pusey and children, Thelma, George and Joseph, of near Princess Anne, were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. Marion L. Mills, of near Salisbury.

Mrs. E. D. Long and daughter, Mrs. O. Paul Tull, of Kingston, have been spending some time in Baltimore, and were present at the Long-Hale wedding. Mrs. Tull has returned, but Mrs. Long will continue her visit to her daughter, Mrs. Lillian Smink, who resides there.

Mrs. Sophia Hankins, wife of the Rev. I. S. Hankins, died suddenly at her home on Prince William street about 9 o'clock last Tuesday night, aged 59 years. Her remains were taken to Millville, New Jersey, last Thursday morning, accompanied by her husband and daughter, for interment.

Mrs. Henry Page left yesterday (Monday) for Baltimore to visit her daughter, Mrs. Jos. L. Wickes, after which she will spend the winter in Raleigh, N. C. She was accompanied to Baltimore by Mrs. Claude E. Metzler and little son, Claude, who had been spending some weeks with her, en route to their home in Evanston, Ills.

Hallowe'en this year was on Sunday, October 31st, and was observed in most sections on Saturday night with much merriment of children as well as the older ones. On account of the town ordinance against appearing in public with faces masked and the discharging of pistols and firecrackers, Hallowe'en was not observed in Princess Anne as in the days of yore.

Dr. and Mrs. R. G. Norfleet, with their children, Robert, Elizabeth, Nancy and Katharine, left last Friday for New York. They sailed October 30th on the steamship "Colon," of the Panama Steamship and Railroad Line, for the Canal Zone, stopping a day or so at Haiti, and thence on to Cristobol, reaching Pedro Miguel, where Dr. Norfleet has been located for the past several years, about October 8th or 9th.

Mrs. Frank Mills, of Cokesbury, entertained her Sunday school class Saturday afternoon, October 23rd. Those present were: Misses Mary Bundick, Mabel Brittingham, Helen, Margaret and Agnes Griffin, Beatrice Hendrick, Louise Gibbons, Blanche Taylor, Hattie Carter, Valley Cowger, Nellie Cottman, May Saunders, Leona Liller, Daisy Smith and Mamie and Aretta Murphy. A program was arranged by the class which consisted of readings, a duet and a solo. Refreshments were served at 5 o'clock.

About 20 members of Shekinah Lodge, K. of P., of Princess Anne, visited Pocomoke Lodge Monday night of last week. The members of the local order went down in automobiles and were present at the opening of the lodge in Pythian Castle. After the routine of the lodge was completed a delightful smoke was enjoyed in which all present participated. During the evening much speech-making was enjoyed, both the visitors and Pocomoke members entering fully into the spirit of the occasion.

New Fuel Being Used

Owing to the great scarcity of hard and soft coal a new fuel is being received in Princess Anne, but not in large quantities. It is known as A. B. C. Briquets and resembles in shape a Maryland biscuit. It is made of Lykens Valley coal, which is higher in heat units, carbon and volatile and is lower in ash than any anthracite mined. The briquets do not throw off any smoke, soot or odor when burning, do not clinker, nor do they gas and cause injury to flues or grates. While this is something new in this town we understand that quite a lot of it has been used in Crisfield. This fuel is extensively used throughout France and other European countries.

Serious Results From Colds

Colds not only cause a tremendous financial loss but are also a serious injury to every one who contracts them as they lower the vitality and prepare the system for the more serious diseases. It is not at all unusual for people who have serious lung trouble to say "I had a hard cold last winter." Why not take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and cure your cold while you can.

The Quadrennial Terror

Every four years the nation produces a large crop of calamity prophets, but it seems as if this year 1920 has the bumper crop. If we don't keep a firm grip on common sense we shall find ourselves thinking that the country will go to ruin unless this or that candidate is elected.

But it won't. The country has weathered the storms of a good many presidential elections, and at least a dozen of them have been "the most critical since the Civil War."

Leaving the dead parties out of account, the Democrats have held the Presidency sixteen terms and the Republicans eleven terms. Nothing went very wrong in either case.

This is a pretty good old country of ours, and it is going to stay so whether Cox or Harding is elected.

If It Is A Billious Attack

TOO MUCH UNISON

Writer Complains Americans Are Unable to Act Alone.

"Mob-Minded," is Expression He Uses—People as a Whole as Easy to Stampede as a Herd of Texas Steers.

The only way to accomplish the laudable purpose of bringing down the price of clothing would be to start the fashion of being out of fashion and that would be the hardest kind of a lesson to teach the American people. They have learned to act as one—which is a good thing sometimes. They have yet to learn how to act as ones—which is a good thing most of the time.

We are mob-minded and that is the cause of many of our troubles, including the high cost of living. Everybody wants to read the same novel the same week. Consequently the library cannot supply its readers, while equally good novels, a few months old, are stacked up unread on the shelves. There is a worldwide shortage of wheat. "Use other grains," says Hoover. Everybody does for a while, then after a while everybody goes back to wheat and the supply again runs short. All the housewives order the best cuts of meat, but cattle can't be grown that are all best cuts. The department of agriculture advises some other cut and then every housewife orders that and will accept no substitute.

Someone suggests that a few young men and women might learn Spanish to their advantage and immediately 10,000 in a single city start Spanish and there are not teachers and textbooks enough to go around. If an excursion boat tips and the captain calls out, "Too many on one side," the crowd unanimously rushes to the opposite side and the boat lists more than ever. A millionaire, asked for his recipe for riches, said: "Go where everybody is doing the same thing and do something different." He had got his money out of the Klondike by selling groceries.

We declared our independence as a nation, but we have not yet declared our independence as individuals. We do everything in mass movements, by campaigns, drives, booms, crazes, fads and revivals. We cannot even fulfill the simplest civic or family duties without calling on all our fellow citizens to aid. It is only by the proclamation of a "Go to Church Sunday," that we are enabled to make a batting average in religion of one hit out of a possible 52. The rest of the calendar is filled up with "Write to Mother Day," "Clean-Up Day," "Plant a Tree Day," "Be Patriotic Day," "Be Thankful Day," and the like. "All together now," cries our gubernatorial or presidential cheer leader, "one, two, three, let 'er go!" And we all go through the motions of the designated emotions with the precision of a rhythm machine.

"The strongest man in the world," says Ibsen, "is he who stands most alone." That is, I suppose, his way of saying that nobody but a strong man could stand alone in a democracy like ours.

The American people is as easy to stampede as a herd of Texas steers and any one who tries to stand against the rush gets trampled into the ground.—Edwin E. Slosson in the New York Independent.

Powerful Wireless Station.

The greatest wireless station in the world is soon to rise near New York city. It is known as a five-way station. In other words, it will transmit and receive long-distance wireless messages in five directions at the same time. The great masts which raise the antennae to the skies will be 650 feet in height or 100 feet higher than the Washington monument. Messages will be transmitted at once to England and central Europe, to South America and south seas and to the Pacific coast and Japan. The station will be capable of sending 500 words and receiving 300 words every minute. Messages may be sent from the great station for 10,000 miles. The power of the sending apparatus will be so great that the radio messages will penetrate the most difficult weather and static conditions for thousands of miles. It is estimated that the cost of building such a station will be only about one-tenth as much as to lay cables under the Atlantic or Pacific oceans.—Boys' Life.

Following Doctor's Orders.

Speaking of jazz music, which without doubt has a strong appeal to the American public, a writer in Along Broadway tells of a doctor in New York who believes it helps keep his waiting patients in a cheerful frame of mind. This physician said: "I've watched the crowds in my waiting room and it is most remarkable how music affects them. I've seen ten or a dozen people sitting in the room all staring at the floor or out of the window and getting more morose every minute, when suddenly my daughters would start singing and playing. Almost immediately the atmosphere of the waiting room changes from gloom to joy. My daughters are instructed to play only the latest airs including jazz—and the jazzier the better."

Millinery in Miniature

MILLINERY for small girls includes many pressed shapes of beaver or felt and some "made" hats—that is hats of fabrics placed over frames and usually made by hand. The shapes are simple and childish and among the milliner-made hats there are small replicas of a few of the shapes worn by grown-ups with finishing touches that make them amusing miniatures of the headwear which they are patterned after. But the group of hats for small girls shown here is a little different from either of these classes—it contains made hats that are characteristically childish in shape and finishing.

Duvetyn and velvet play as important a part in children's hats as in any other. At the top of this group a round shape with upturned brim is covered with velvet and the brim decorated with two rows of fancy silk braid. It has for trimming a silk tassel that dangles from a cord fastened to the top of the crown, but otherwise left free to dance about as it will. The top crown is soft, the side crown plaited and the brim plain in the hat at the left, finished with a bias band of velvet. Heavy wool yarn is buttonholed to the brim-edge and two small wool pompons nestle together at the front of the crown, posed against a band of ribbon that is finished with a flat bow at the back.

At the right of the picture a little velvet hat indulges in an abbreviated tam crown and contents itself with a silk cord for trimming on the upward rolling brim. The hat at the bottom is as simply trimmed with band and bow of ribbon, but it has a facing of stitched silk and its top crown is plaited. These little models are all of velvet, but they might be of duvetyn or silk.

Pale Pastel Taffetas.

The pale pastel taffetas, sometimes changeable, will challenge any girl to dare try making them up without lace. One of the most fascinating models made of just such materials was in shot green taffeta, with tiny under-skirt of lace and small sleeves of the same. There were two tunics. The first, long and somewhat narrow, was cut shorter than the lace all around but on one side specially curved up in one place to show the lace. It was bound, like the upper draped and paniered tunic, with sky blue taffeta and had a bowknot finishing the highest point. At the girdle a little bouquet of mauve buds gave that knowing touch which all high-class dress-makers know how to give.

Scarlet and Crimson.

In preparation for the anticipated carmine revival in dress, much scarlet and crimson is being used on shoes.

Frocks Express Personality

WOMEN are sure to approve of the new tailored dresses for fall, because there is no chance to grow tired of any one style in them. There is no monotony among them, no tiresome repetition of ideas in construction or trimming, but such a diversity of really good designing that there is a dress for every style, just as there is a becoming hat for every face. They have one very good point in common, however, and that is their simple lines, and designers appear to agree on the neckline, which is rounded in front and low enough sometimes to admit of a chemise, but higher than usual at the back.

Two very smart tailored frocks for fall may be studied in the picture here and both present new features. The frock at the left has a severely straight bodice with long waist line, and sleeves slashed on the outer arm and curved upward to the three-quarter length. They are finished with a flat band of satin and the neck, in the same way. These bands appear across the top of the skirt at the back, where it is plaited and at the bottom of the front portion which is gathered. The skirt joins the bodice with a flat piping of satin and just above this piping satin bands reveal how cleverly they can be used when a designer sets out to do his best with them. Three rows of slashes in the bodice furnish them a chance to slip in and out and form a checker-board pattern that is charming for a cloth dress.

The simplest of straight-line dresses in the second model ought to inspire gratitude in the hearts of plump women, for it is destined to give them long lines. There is an inverted plait down the front and decorations of narrow ribbon in groups of six each, finished with tiny steel buttons. The new collar is interesting, being a tie of silk attached to the neck and finished with a bow, and ends at the front.

FLYING FOX IS REALLY A BAT

Pest of Australian Fruit Growers Has Been So Classified by Scientist Who Studied It.

The flying fox is really a bat of evil reputation. It is more properly called the fruit-eating bat or fruit bat and the Australian fruit growers have long waged war on it, though so far without much success.

Prof. Moseley observed them in the Australian bush and described how, "In a dense piece of bush, consisting principally of young trees, the trees were hung all over with these bats, looking like great black fruits. As we approached," he says in an exchange, "the bats showed signs of uneasiness, and after the first shot were rather difficult to approach, moving from before us and pitching in a fresh tree some distance ahead. The bats uttered a curious cackling sound when disturbed. They were in enormous numbers, and although thousands had been shot not long before by a large party got together for the purpose, their numbers were not perceptibly reduced."

In Malaya the fruit bat is considered a great delicacy, and, cooked with plenty of spices and condiments, is said to taste something like hare. "Flying fox" is really a very good name for them, for the head is exceedingly like that of a fox. Some extraordinary flights of them, always in single file, have been observed over Calcutta.

HAS NO ONE RESTING PLACE

Bones of St. Adrian Are Scattered Pretty Well Over the Whole of Europe.

The most scattered saint in Europe is St. Adrian. Remains of this former Roman soldier are kept in the abbey of St. Adrian, in Geersburg, Belgium, but they are also kept at Raulcourt in the same country, and Ghent has still another full set of remains. The jaw and half an arm are shown at Cologne, a head at Bologna, and various parts of the saint's anatomy are also displayed at Bruges and at Douai. He was formerly held to be the patron saint of soldiers, and was very popular with the wild troops of northern France, Flanders and part of Germany centuries ago. He was also held dear by German brewers.

St. Adrian lived in the early part of the fourth century, and was one of the guard of the Emperor Galerius Maximian. He was superintending the torture of 34 Christians one evening, when their fortitude and patience so impressed him that he became a follower of the faith on the spot. His wife, already a Christian in secret, joined him in openly declaring his views. As punishment he had his limbs struck off one by one on an anvil and was then beheaded.

Ancient Irish Laws in Poetry.

Even a subject so essentially prosaic as the law was interwoven with poetry in ancient Ireland, where justice was administered by the file, or poet, the most important person in the country after the king. In olden times verse was employed when the matter to be recorded was of particular importance, or of a nature that called not only for grace and beauty of expression, but for dignity of language as well.

When the ancient laws of Ireland were revived, says the Christian Science Monitor, under the direction of St. Patrick, a file was summoned "to put a thread of poetry around them." This is believed one of the reasons that so much of the text of the Irish laws is in metrical form. From 12 to 15 years of special study was needed to qualify a file for the legal profession.

Cafes in the Kasbah.

Cobbled steps mark the ways of the Moors in the Kasbah, the native quarter of Algeria, and once the traveler leaves the streets where street cars clang and Europeans walk, says an exchange, he must climb. Peppercorns and onions hang in rosaries beside bazaars. Mosques are hidden here and there in nests of houses and cafes are open to the street with the guttural gossip of the Arab drinkers and the click of dominoes drifting outward.

Sandals of leather, laced and filled with golden threads, are made by black-eyed Arab girls with long, soft eyelashes. Some of these girls are only twelve years old, but married; and they sit on carpets, twittering through their veils at passersby, meanwhile embroidering deftly the things they have to sell for gold.

Fine Workmanship.

Most of us carry two remarkable specimens of minute workmanship. They are both contained in our watch, if that article is of the ordinary pattern.

One is the name of the maker on the dial. This lettering, though only about 1-40 inch in height, is painted on by hand.

We are indebted to machinery for the other microscopic feature. Look, with a glass, at some of the screws, and you may find that the heads of the smallest are only 3-100 inch across and that the threads are sunk merely 2-100 inch.

This is fine work; but much more so is that in tiny watches which are incorporated in rings or earrings.

A Possible Resource.

"Binks, my neighbor, is always borrowing trouble." "Then send him around. I have plenty to lend him."

QUALITIES IN YOUR BLOOD

If You Are Pale and Weak, Without Ambition, You Need a Tonic

TRY TAKING PEPTO-MANGAN

Rich, Red Blood Fights Off Disease and Keeps You Well and Enables You To Work With Pleasure

Serious sickness often comes when you least suspect. You may feel a little over-tired. You haven't been exposed to contagion, yet all of a sudden you are flat on your back and in for a siege of sickness.

Your blood did not have fighting qualities. It was weak and thin. Your vitality and powers of resistance were low.

When you overdo you use up energy. Your blood is driven to do more than it can. It becomes clogged with waste. The waste acts like poison. Disease germs get in your blood and dominate. Don't let yourself get run down. Take that good tonic, Pepto-Mangan. It makes rich, red blood that will resist and rout out disease germs.

Pepto-Mangan is widely and heartily endorsed by physicians. It is effective and easy to take. Comes in either liquid or tablet form. Both have the same effect.

Sold at any drug store. But be sure you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan—"Gude's." Ask for it by the name and be sure the full name, "Gude's Pepto-Mangan," is on the package.—Advertisement.

FOR HEADACHE, LIVER TROUBLE

Black-Draught Is The Best Medicine This Lady Ever Used. Says It Is Only Medicine She Gives Her Children.

Cherry Village, Ark.—In telling of her experience with Theodor's Black-Draught, Mrs. Lottie Ellis, R. F. D. No. 1, this place, said: "I used Black-Draught as a laxative, also for headache, torpid liver and indigestion. It is the best liver medicine I have ever used and is the only medicine I give my children."

"I feel like it has saved me a lot in doctors' bills, for when the children complain of feeling bad or have a cold, I just give them a good dose of Black-Draught and they soon get all right. It certainly cleans the liver and clears up the skin and they are soon out, well again. I wouldn't be without it for anything."

Seventy years of successful use has made Theodor's Black-Draught a standard, household remedy. Every member of every family, needs, at times, the benefit that Black-Draught gives in helping to cleanse the system and to prevent or relieve the troubles that come from constipation, indigestion, and a lazy liver.

To keep well, your stomach, liver and bowels must be in good working order. To help keep them that way, take occasional doses of Theodor's Black-Draught. Thousands of homes are never without it.

For sale by all druggists. The genuine has the name, Theodor's, on the label. Insist on getting what you ask for.

PROCLAMATION

Proposing Amendments To The Constitution of the State, 1920.

Whereas, at the January Session of the General Assembly of Maryland, held in the year 1920, two Acts were passed, to-wit: Chapter 319 proposing an amendment to Section 15 of Article III of the Constitution of the State, title "Legislative Department," regulating the compensation of Members of both Houses of the General Assembly; and Chapter 365 proposing an amendment to Section 37 of Article 4 of the Constitution of the State, title "Judiciary Department," regulating the pay of Clerks of Courts, and which said Chapters 319 and 365 are in the words and figures following:

CHAPTER 319.

AN ACT to propose an amendment to Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, title "Legislative Department," regulating the compensation of the members of both Houses of the General Assembly of Maryland, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of the State of Maryland for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of each of the two Houses concurring), That the following be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, title "Legislative Department," the same if adopted by the legally qualified voters of the State, as herein provided, to become Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland.

15. The General Assembly may continue its session so long as in its judgment the public interest may require for a period not longer than ninety days; and each member thereof shall receive a compensation of three hundred dollars per annum and five dollars per diem for every day he shall attend the session, but not for such days as he may be absent, unless absent on account of sickness or by leave of the House of which he is a member and he shall also receive such mileage as may be allowed by law, not exceeding twenty cents per mile; and the members of the General Assembly shall receive an additional compensation of five dollars per diem. When the General Assembly shall be convened by the Governor, the session shall not continue longer than thirty days, and in such case the compensation shall be the same as herein provided.

SECTION 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland, shall, at the next general election for Members of the General Assembly of the State, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters of the State, for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article XIV of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, and at the said general election the vote on the said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment," and "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as now provided by law, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the State, and the said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Article of the Constitution, and further proceedings hereon in accordance with said Article Fourteen.

Approved April 9, 1920.

CHAPTER 365.
AN ACT to amend Section 37 of Article 4, title "Judiciary Department," of the Constitution of this State, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the legally qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of each of the two Houses concurring), That the following section be, and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Section 37 of Article 4, of the Constitution of the State, and if adopted by the legally qualified voters thereof, as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and in stead of Section 37 of said Article 4 of the Constitution of Maryland.

SEC. 37. There shall be a Clerk of each of the said Courts of Baltimore City, except the Supreme Bench, who shall be elected by the legal and qualified voters of said city at the election to be held in said city on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of November, in the year nineteen hundred and sixty-seven, and shall hold his office for six years from the time of his election, and until his successor is elected and qualified. He shall be re-eligible, subject to be removed by will or otherwise, for any other misdemeanor in office, on conviction in a Court of Law. The salary of each of the said Clerks shall be five hundred dollars per annum, payable only out of the fees and receipts collected by the Clerks of said city, and they shall be entitled to no other salary or compensation. In case of a vacancy in the office of Clerk of any of said Courts, the Judges of said Supreme Bench of Baltimore City shall have power to fill such vacancy until the general election of Delegates to the General Assembly to be held next thereafter, when a Clerk of said Court shall be elected to serve for six years thereafter; and the provisions of this Article in relation to the appointment of Deputies by the Clerks of the Circuit Courts in the counties shall apply to the Clerks of the Courts in Baltimore City.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall, at the next general election for members of Congress to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and twenty, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the direction contained in Article 14 of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on the said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words "For Constitutional Amendment" and "Against Constitutional Amendment," as now provided by law, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Article 14 of the said Constitution.

Approved April 9, 1920.
Now, therefore, I, Albert C. Ritchie, Governor of the State of Maryland, in pursuance of the direction contained in Section 14 of Article 14 of the Constitution of Maryland, do hereby order and direct that this Proclamation containing a full, true and correct copy of the text of said Chapters 319 and 365 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1920, be published in at least two newspapers in each of the counties of the State where so many may be published and where not more than one may be published then in that newspaper, and in three newspapers published in the City of Baltimore, one of which shall be published in the German language, once a week for at least three months next preceding the general election to be held in the State of Maryland on Tuesday, the 2nd day of November, 1920, with the said proposed amendments to the Constitution shall be submitted in form and manner prescribed by the General Assembly, to the legal and qualified voters of the State for their adoption or rejection.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State of Maryland, this 23rd day of July, nineteen hundred and twenty.

ALBERT C. RITCHIE,

By the Governor:
PHILIP B. PERLMAN,
Secretary of State.

WILD YOUNG FOLK

Not Much Worse Than Those of Other Days.

Writer Answers Indictment of "These Wild Young People"—Frankness a Striking Characteristic of the Generation of Today.

"We of the younger generation," says John F. Carter, Jr., in the Atlantic, answering an indictment of "those wild young people," by a certain "Mr. Grundy" in the same magazine, "we are frank with each other, frank, or pretty nearly so, with our leaders; frank in the way we feel toward life and this badly damaged world. It may be a disquieting and misleading habit, but is it a bad one?"

"We find some few things in the world that we like, and a whole lot that we don't, and we are not afraid to say so or to give reasons. In earlier generations this was not the case. The young men yearned to be glittering generalities, the young women to act like shy, sweet, innocent fawns—toward one another. And now, when grown up, they have come to believe that they actually were figures of pristine excellence, knightly chivalry, adorable modesty and impeccable propriety."

"But I really doubt if they were so. Statistics relating to, let us say, the immorality of college students in the eighties would not compare favorably with those of the present. However, now, as they look back on it, they see their youth through a mist of muslin, flannels, tennis, bicycles, Tennyson, Browning and the 'Blue Danube' waltz. The other things, the ugly things that we know about and talk about, must also have been there. But our elders didn't care or didn't dare to consider them, and now they are forgotten. We talk about them unabashed and not necessarily with Presbyterian disapproval, and so they jump to the conclusion that we are thoroughly bad, and keep pestering us to make us good."

"The trouble with them is that they can't seem to realize that we are busy, that what pleasure we snatch must be incidental and feverishly hurried. We have to make the most of our time. We actually haven't got so much time for the noble procrastinations of modesty or of the elaborate rigmarole of chivalry and little patience for the lovely formulas of an ineffective faith. Let them die for a while! They did not seem to serve the world too well in its black hour. If they are inherently good they will come back vital and untarnished. But just now we have a lot of work, 'old time is still a-flying,' and we must gather rosebuds while we may."

"Oh, I know that we are a pretty bad lot, but has not that been true of every preceding generation? At least we have the courage to act accordingly. Our music is distinctly barbaric, our girls are distinctly not a mixture of arbutus and barbed wire. We drink when we can and what we can; we gamble, we are extravagant—but we work, and that's about all that we can be expected to do for, after all, we have just discovered that we are still very near to the stone age."

"Oh, I suppose that it's too bad that we aren't humble, starchy-eyed, shy, respectful innocents, standing reverently at their side for instructions, playing pretty little games, in which they no longer believe, except for us. But we aren't, and the best thing the oldsters can do about it is to go into their respective back yards and dig for worms, great big pink ones—for the Grundy tribe are just about as important as they are, and they will doubtless make company more congenial and docile than 'these wild young people,' the men and women of my generation."

Enough.

A little lad who wanted a small brother was told by his mother to pray for one, and this he did until hope and patience were alike exhausted. Not long after, however, he was called to his mother's bedroom and shown three tiny baby brothers all in the same cradle.

For some time the little fellow stared, then he heaved a sigh of relief.

"Gosh!" he remarked solemnly, "just suppose I hadn't stopped praying when I did!"

Fixed.

"What perfect dears!" the visitor to the Sunday school exclaimed in admiration. "Your class is under perfect control. During your talk on the lesson not a child even moved. You have taught them to love their study."

"Yes," agreed the teacher a bit sadly. "They do very well. You see, I made a rule that every time a child moved or whispered I would talk five minutes longer."

Sheet Mucilage.

One may buy mucilage in sheets nowadays. They are very convenient for office use.

The mucilage is spread on both sides of thin sheets of paper, which are made into a sort of book. If it be desired to stick two things together, a sheet is torn out, moistened on both sides and placed between. That does the trick.

POWER OF WATER

Surprising What It Will Do Under Certain Conditions.

Jet From Nozzle Eats Away Large Piece of Land in Day and Toys With Boulders as if They Were Pebbles.

When a man goes in swimming at the seashore and slaps the water forebly with his hand, or takes a back dive from a pier and lands squarely on his back, he realizes that the unstable liquid offers not a little resistance. Yet it would surprise almost anybody to see what water will do under certain conditions.

A stream from a fireman's hose will knock a man down. The jet from a nozzle used in placer mining in the West eats away a large piece of land in a day, toys with great boulders as if they were pebbles and would shoot a man over the country as though he were a projectile from a cannon.

There is a story of an eastern blacksmith who went West and made a bet that he could knock a hole through the jet of one of these nozzles with a sledgehammer. He lifted his arms, swung the sledge and came down upon the ten-inch stream with a force that would have dented an anvil. But the jet, never penetrated, whisked the massive hammer out of the blacksmith's hands and tossed it several hundred feet away into the debris of gold-bearing gravel beneath a crumbling cliff. After this the blacksmith left out iron when he spoke of hard substances.

There is also a power plant near Durango, Col., where a United States cavalryman one day thought he had an easy job in cutting a two-inch stream with his sword. He made a valiant attack. The result was that his sword was shattered in two and his wrist broken.

A little thinner jet of water descending 1600 feet to a manufactory at Grenoble, France, and traveling at the moderate speed of 100 yards a second, fractures the best blades of Toledo.

Of course some persons will not believe such stories without having seen the thing, and one may think it a proof of the scientific imagination to say that an inch-thick sheet of water, provided it had sufficient velocity, would ward off bombshells as well as steel plate.

Nevertheless, many persons, while traveling, have seen a brakeman put a small hydraulic jack under one end of a Pullman car and lift twenty tons or so by a few leisurely strokes of the pump handle, and the experience of riding every day in a hydraulic elevator tends to remove doubts of the magic power possessed by water hatched to a machine.

Beginning of Japan's Great Navy.

A Confederate ironclad, originally named the Stonewall Jackson, was the real basis of the Japanese navy. It was sold at the close of the Civil war to the Japanese and renamed the Adzuma. When, in 1867, Admiral Enomoto fled with all the Japanese fleet except the ironclad, and attempted to set up an independent government at Hakodate, it was the smelly, grim, wallowing old ironclad that proceeded to tear the rest of the navy to bits, as well as to destroy the forts under the command of the rebel leader.

So thoroughly did the ironclad do its work that the rebellion failed, and its leaders were seized and exhibited in iron cages throughout the country. The work of the ironclad was not lost on the Japanese, and they listened the more willingly to the advice of Henry Walton Grinnell, an American naval officer who entered the emperor's service and rose to the rank of admiral. They began a navy that steadily grew in strength and number, and one that received encouragement from both American and British naval heads.

Car's Glories Had Departed.

"Henry," said Mrs. Gadder, "I must have a new motor car."

"Good heavens, woman!" exclaimed Mr. Gadder. "What's the matter with the automobile I bought you six months ago? Didn't you choose the upholstery yourself and didn't you have every contrivance you could think of put in the tonneau, by which you added nearly $2,000 to the original price?"

"Oh, yes, Henry! But I've been about quite a bit in that car. All my friends and acquaintances have seen me in it repeatedly, and it no longer attracts attention when I go for a spin along the boulevard. Dear me! When I'm in that car I'm beginning to feel as if I were wearing a last year's dress."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Navy's "Mechanical Cow."

The milk problem on the hospital ships of the United States navy is solved in a highly ingenious fashion. On board the Mercury and Comfort there now is a machine which manufactures milk in any desired quantity, although the ship may have been at sea for weeks. The "mechanical cow" needs to be fed with a combination of unsalted butter and skimmed milk powder and it will give milk with any degree of butterfat which is required. It also produces the best quality of dairy milk and cream that can be obtained ashore.

True.

"Peculiar thing about golf."

"What?"

"A man will blame his caddy when he loses a hole, but he seldom gives him credit when he wins a match."

LIKELY TO REMAIN MYSTERY

Little Probability of Identification of Skeletons Recently Dug Up on Texas Prairie.

Further search of the spot near Bishop, Tex., where were found 25 skeletons of human beings early in August revealed 15 more skeletons, making a total of 40 remains of men who were victims of some kind of tragedy of which people of the present day have no knowledge. No proof has come to light to substantiate the theory that the skeletons belonged to members of Jean Lafitte's pirate crew.

That they belonged to some part of the old world, however, is evident from the rust-encrusted relics that have been found close by the spot where the collection of skeletons were discovered. These include a brass incense burner, gold rings and bracelets and an unidentified iron object bearing the words, Cadiz, Spain, upon its surface. The fact that close at hand were found many Indian arrowheads leads to the conclusion that the men who lost their lives may have belonged to a crew of a shipwrecked vessels and were killed by Indians.

J. B. Briscoe of Pecos, Tex., is of the opinion that the skeletons may be those of a party of men who were on their way to Mexico in 1865 to keep from serving in the war between the states. In a letter to a public official of Corpus Christi, Mr. Briscoe said:

"About the first of April, 1865, a bunch of men—38, I think—left the west part of Hunt county to go to Mexico to keep out of the war, and not one of them has ever been heard of since they left. I am quite sure they were all murdered before they got to Mexico. They started from my wife's father's house, and she is the last person living that saw them start. I was in the army at the time and did not get home until the last of May. Now, it is barely possible that those skeletons may have been those men. Several of them were married men and some of the women lived widows 15 years before they married. An old settler about Greenville or the southwest part of Hunt county will remember these men, but there are very few living that were there then."

The skeletons were given a Christian burial at Corpus Christi a few days ago. Search for possible treasure at the place where the grim remains were found is still being carried on.

Proud of City of Their Birth.

The residents of the little town of Amalfi, Italy, consider themselves far superior to the residents of the adjacent city of Naples, even though Naples has a population of 600,000 and the population of Amalfi is less than 6,000. This is because Amalfi was once nearly as powerful on sea as England is today. History shows that Amalfi in the ninth century was one of the chief cities of the world which was carrying on trade with the East, and that in the year 848 its fleet went to the assistance of the pope against the Saracens.

The Amalfi recall the glorious past and, proud of their city and its traditions, classify themselves as much better than other Italians, writes Kenneth L. Roberts. The residents of Bologna also boast of the mighty events in which the city figured in the dark ages, and the same is true of Florence, Venice, Genoa and Pisa. It hurts an Italian to be lumped in with other Italians. He wants his direct classification linked with the town or city from which he comes, and is dissatisfied because the United States immigration bureau divides all Italians as coming either from northern or southern Italy.

Oil Field in the Arctic.

In view of the present widespread interest in the development of the known oil-bearing areas of the world, it should not be forgotten that a totally new and, until the last few years, quite unsuspected source of this fuel may be proved during the present summer in the arctic. The existence of oil-bearing shales in Spitzbergen has been known for some years. It is not generally known, however, that a discovery of much greater portent than the existence of shale was made there last year. Samples of gas which bubbled to the surface of muddy pools have, on analysis, proved to contain an exceedingly high percentage of petroleum elements. Arrangements have been made by the owners of the territory thoroughly to prospect this region at once.

That Dodge Didn't Work.

His wife was one too many for Mr. Hobbs, but nevertheless, he persevered in his efforts to get an occasional night at the club.

"My dear," he remarked the other day, "I have only just realized how imperfect I am in my knowledge."

His wife agreed.

"No man," continued Mr. Hobbs, "ought to assume that his education is finished. As for myself, I am going to forge ahead and take up the study of astronomy."

The look in his wife's eyes became more eagle-like than ever. Her voice assumed a cold, hard tone. Her back stiffened.

"Benjamin," she announced, "you must try again. That excuse for staying out late at night won't do!"

The Kids Know.

"There's no use talking, the children pick up the language very quickly."

"What's the matter now?"

4TH RED CROSS ROLL CALL FOR MEMBERS BEGINS ARMISTICE DAY

National Headquarters Reports Work Done
In Past Year and It's Aims For the Future

ENTIRE PEACE TIME PROGRAM OUTLINED

In making an appeal to the people of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, comprising the Potomac Division, to renew their memberships or to become new members of the American Red Cross, David H. Brown, Division Director of the Fourth Roll Call, which begins November 11 and ends November 26, has issued the following statement, in which is shown the work that has been carried on during the past year, the existing activities, and the entire peace-time program of the great relief organization:

The Fourth Roll Call is not a campaign.

It is merely the yearly opportunity for American men and women to pay their annual dues and renew their membership in their Red Cross.

This Roll Call finds the Red Cross, as much at any time since it entered the great war, in the midst of tremendous concerns.

The world is so full of uncertainty—that which is called modern civilization is so utterly upset—that no sooner is one duty ended than another looms as large.

The present program of the American Red Cross is vastly important and fundamentally essential.

Its primary obligation was to the service men of the Army and Navy. Of that obligation these things still remain:

First, To stay with the Army of Occupation, comprising about 17000 officers and men, and serve as their Red Cross.

Second, To continue in the hospitals of the Army, the Navy and the Public Health Service where there are more than 26,000 men, many of whom will be retained there for months and some of them for years, and carry on their recreational and social work.

Third, To keep in touch as an advisory organization with the discharged men of the Army and Navy, and be ready—not in the way of financial aid, but what is worth far more—to contribute kind advice and friendly assistance.

Fourth, To continue the work that has been going on in connection with the families of soldiers and sailors, and as growing out of this a similar work for the community at large.

The fact that the men have returned does not by any means eliminate domestic problems. In many cases it only intensifies them. This is particularly true in the case of more than 125,000 families whose men are in the number of the dead, where there is a wealth of service that the Red Cross can still render.

Fifth, While the Government itself is carrying on vocational training for maimed and crippled men, it has turned over to the Red Cross the care of those who have been blinded in the crash of war. No more sacred service can be imagined than this.

Work in Europe:

So far as the world at large is concerned the American Red Cross must still stand by to the limit of its possibility and the measure of its ability. On the Western Front its work is now over. Belgium, France and Italy are slowly but surely making progress, with their feet firmly set upon paths of reconstruction.

The Eastern Belt of Horror still remains—not only a menace to civilization, but a challenge to the Red Cross.

The enormity of its want is staggering.

The entire fabric of civilization is tottering into ruin.

Pestilence and famine are stalking in the midst of calamity.

The Red Cross cannot carry the burden that only Western Civilization united can bear. It cannot feed Poland, the Baltic States, Czechoslovakia and the Balkans. It cannot clothe and shelter hundreds of millions of people, were it so inclined.

No voluntary organization can any longer face a task of such dimensions.

But to the best of its ability the American Red Cross can do what it did during the months before America's armies came to take their part in the great conflict.

It can, by its very presence, give promise of assistance.

It can carry on at least a hopeful fight against pestilence and epidemic. It can minister to the extreme of emergency.

It can try to protect and care for the children who are the one hope for the future.

More than this, in the present condition of its funds and its personnel, it dare not undertake.

Far more than this it is willing to undertake, if the American people choose again to make it the repository of their confidence and to contribute for the relief of suffering millions of fellow men.

What the American Red Cross does for Europe depends upon what the American people ask it to do.

It knows how. The experience of the past is invaluable. The American Red Cross is ready. It is up to the American people to decide.

Red Cross Work At Home:

America calls to the Red Cross for service.

It spent thirty billion dollars in the world fight for Democracy.

That was an average of $300.00 per capita from our entire population.

The United States owes twenty-eight billion dollars as a war debt.

That is an average of $280.00 per capita for our entire population.

The average American community spent last year about $9.00 per capita for education and about $3.50 per capita for fire and police protection.

As a nation we spent last year $10.00 per capita for candy, 50 cents per capita for chewing gum, $215.00 per capita for tobacco, 75 cents per capita for perfume.

Last year the American nation spent less than 29 cents per capita protecting and developing the health of the country.

And yet—Last year 1,250,000 American people died of sickness.

Seven hundred and fifty thousand of them died of preventable disease.

Two hundred thousand adults died last year from tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis is neither hereditary nor necessary, but is a disease of defective civilization.

Last year 300,000 American babies died before they were one year old.

One hundred and fifty thousand of them did not live a month.

This slaughter of the innocents was largely the result of ignorance, indifference and economic inhumanity.

The records of the war show that our civilian population is blighted with Venereal Disease.

The Public Health Service indicates that one-tenth of our American life is thus contaminated.

The American Red Cross does not claim responsibility to analyze and solve these great questions of Public Health.

It only recognizes that under its Charter it is compelled to "devise and carry on measures for mitigating the suffering incident to pestilence and disaster."

It seeks, therefore, merely to aid existing agencies, to co-operate with organized effort, and to place its organization and its workers alike at the disposal and the service of the community.

In furtherance of such a program the Community Public Health Nurse is destined to play an important part.

One thousand of these—most of them returned army nurses—have prepared themselves for this new crusade for higher standards of physical life and the expansion of our national strength and vigor.

The Roll Call contemplates practical demonstration and instruction in Domestic Sanitation, Community Hygiene, Dietetics and Child Welfare.

The establishment of Public Health Center is as most important feature of this work for a better America.

This will be exactly what its name signifies—bringing to a definite place in each community a combination of all the agencies that may promote health, in order to maintain a high standard of physical manhood and womanhood in our country.

A distinct line of usefulness will be the formation of classes in First Aid, teaching people how to meet the emergency of accidents and to make possible the saving of life.

The continuation, enlargement and co-ordination of the Junior Red Cross as related to our American public schools is an item so vast as to be incalculable.

The whole fabric, not only of our American democracy but of the future civilization of the world, rests upon the child and the school.

The ideal out of which the Junior Red Cross springs is that of Service—self-sacrificing service for others.

Fifteen million American children, trained in the philosophy of unselfishness, schooled to a life of service, vowed to the furtherance of international understanding and good will, can save the world.

Finally, the American Red Cross must broaden and make more permanent its preparedness for the Disaster Relief that has been so great a part of its history.

Tempest and flood; earthquakes and fire; accident and calamity—whatever of these fall into the machinery of life throughout the world, the American Red Cross holds itself ready to go and minister in the name of humanity and mercy.

There is still room for the Red Cross.

FIRST VENTURE OF LIPTON

Friend Tells How He Took Chance
With Patrons of a Rundown Grocery.

Dr. J. H. Ostrander, a personal friend of Sir Thomas Lipton, told recently for the first time the story of Lipton's initial business venture, an exchange states.

Lipton's first business venture was an event in one little corner of Glasgow. He bought for a few pounds a sorry old rundown provision shop that had changed hands a score of times; everybody had failed. It was in a neighborhood where profits were meager and housewives close traders, and where sharp practice and indifferent ethics precluded credit. So when Lipton announced that he would trust any decent neighbor once all foresaw his doom.

Lipton, however, did not mean that he would carry accounts 30 days, for at this period five such accounts would have swamped him. As he himself put it: "In misfortune I will carry any decent chap till Saturday night. I will be a friend to you in spite of prevailing business rules; but if you break faith with me you will lose a friend and I will lose my business." Thus he put them on their honor. And it won; won because sympathy and fellowship dominated the boy and excited like attributes in others.

Of the Eye of a Frog.

The smallest camera in the world which has actually "taken" pictures is doubtless the eye of the frog, says Boys' Life. It has been found that if a frog is kept in the dark for some time the retina of the eye, on being dissected, is found to have a purple reddish color which fades away or becomes bleached on exposure to daylight. If the eye be placed in front of a window and left there, or "exposed" for some time, and then fixed in a 4 per cent solution of alum the optogram is partially fixed and retains an inverted picture of the window. It is claimed that by a similar photographic process the last picture or image retained by the eye of a dead man or animal may be preserved.

DON'T DELAY

Some Princess Anne People Have Learned That Neglect Is Dangerous

The slightest symptom of kidney trouble is far too serious to be overlooked. It's the small, neglected troubles that so often lead to serious kidney ailments. That pain in the "small" of your back; that urinary irregularity; those headaches and dizzy spells; that weak, weary, worn-out feeling; may be nature's warning of kidney weakness. Why risk your life by neglecting these symptoms? Reach the cause of the trouble while there yet is time—begin treating your kidneys at once with a tried and proven kidney remedy. No need to experiment—Doan's Kidney Pills have been successfully used in thousands of cases of kidney trouble for over 50 years. Doan's Kidney Pills are used and recommended throughout the civilized world. Ask your neighbor! Endorsed at home. Read Princess Anne testimony.

Mrs. C. A. Young, Beechwood street, says: "I was in a bad way from a rundown condition of my kidneys. My hands and ankles were swollen and there were puffy sacs under my eyes. I was subject to dizzy spells and when I stooped over sharp pains caught me in the small of my back. I simply felt miserable. After using one box of Doan's Kidney Pills I was rid of all symptoms of kidney trouble."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mrs. Young had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

"The Man Who Is Contented Is No Longer of Much Use To Me"

Said one of the greatest business executives in America a few days ago.

For twenty years this store has never been contented.

It takes a reasonable pride in its advancement and a satisfaction in its ability always to furnish BETTER CLOTHING at LOWER PRICES than other stores can furnish.

It is always dreaming of better things, better Clothing, better methods and a greater business.

Twenty years of this sort of discontent has, therefore, been twenty years of continued advancement.

Therefore, in spite of all unfavorable conditions and scarcities, we can, this season, offer to men first-class and unblemished stocks of fine Fall and Winter Suits and Overcoats, strictly all wool and hand tailored.

We realize full well that in these days of intense competition we must offer as good, or better, values than prevail elsewhere, if customers are to buy our wares, and AND WE ARE DOING IT—attested by the largest sales in our twenty years of business.

Our prices are at their best right now on

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Notice is hereby given that the levy of the year 1920 for State and County Taxes has been made in Somerset county.

Pursuant to said levy the taxes are now in my hands for collection. A discount of three per cent will be allowed on all county taxes paid on or before October 31st, 1920, and a discount of two per cent, if paid during November, 1920. No discount will be allowed on county taxes paid after November 30th, 1920.

The law allowing discounts on State taxes has been abolished, therefore no discount will be allowed on State taxes.

The law provides that both County and State taxes must be paid in order to obtain the discount.

State taxes bear interest from October 1st, 1920, at the rate of six per centum per annum. County taxes bear interest from January 1st, 1921, at the rate of six per centum per annum, and interest is charged for the full month from the first day of each month.

SOLDIER'S BODY BROUGHT HOME

William W. Disharoon Brought From Germany And Buried Wednesday

Last Tuesday the body of William W. Disharoon, who died of pneumonia at Luxemburg, Germany, on December 18th, 1918, was brought to Princess Anne from New York and taken to All Saints Protestant Episcopal Church, Monie, where services were held on Wednesday afternoon conducted by the Rev. Walter Archbold, D. D., rector of Somerset Parish. Interment was in the cemetery adjoining Monie Church.

Private Disharoon is the son of Mr. Samuel J. Disharoon and Mrs. Annie Wheatley Disharoon now residing in Wicomico county, but formerly resided at Venton, Somerset county. He was the grandson of the late Thomas J. Wheatley, of this county. He is survived by two brothers, Messrs. Harry and Scott Disharoon, both of whom were members of the 115th Maryland Infantry. He is also survived by the following aunts: Mrs. Major Reid and Mrs. William Bennett, of Somerset county, and Mrs. Wm. L. Scott and Mrs. John T. Daniels, of Baltimore.

The deceased soldier was inducted into service by the local board for Wicomico county, Md., on August 7th, 1918. He was a member of Company G, 56th Pioneer Infantry, and was sent to France in September, 1918. After the armistice he was in the Army of Occupation and was stationed at Luxemburg, Germany, at the time of his death. This is the first soldier's body from overseas to be brought to this county for burial.

Wilson Chapter, No. 54, American Legion of Honor, of Salisbury, were represented by the following former service men at the funeral: Messrs. John L. Morris, Walton J. Willing, Percy S. Daubell, Ralph Dulany, Bernard J. Dougherty, Roland Johnson, George E. Brown, Navis W. Todd and Alexander T. Grier.

Meeting In Interest Of The Blind.

Several weeks ago Miss Lillian E. Latimer, Assistant Field Officer of the Maryland Association of Workers for the Blind, spent a few days in Princess Anne arranging for a meeting in the interest of the blind at the Court House on November 10th.

The object of the Maryland Association of Workers for the Blind is to educate and train the blind so that they may be self-supporting citizens. To this end, this meeting, as well as others of the series, consists of a lecture, illustrated by slides, showing various phases of the work and an exhibit of hand work done by the blind.

Several years ago many residents of Princess Anne were members of the association, but the more exciting calls of the recent war have overshadowed the needs of this cause and pushed it into the background. We trust that this meeting will reawaken the interest of the old members and stimulate enthusiastic support from others.

Long-Paul Wedding

Miss Margaret Reed Paul, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Paul, of Norwood, Pa., and Mr. Sidney C. Long, son of Mr. S. Uphur Long, of Princess Anne, were married Saturday evening, October 30th, at the home of the bride by the Rev. Stanley Billmyer.

The maid of honor was Miss Helen Clinges, of Norwood, Pa., and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Edw. Kennedy, of Norwood, Pa., and Miss Elizabeth M. Cahill, of Princess Anne. The groom was attended by Mr. Marion Pollitt, of Norwood, Pa. The bride was attired in white satin and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. The maid of honor wore pink satin and carried pink chrysanthemums. Mrs. Kennedy wore blue satin and carried yellow chrysanthemums and Miss Cahill wore orchid satin and carried orchid chrysanthemums. The house was tastefully decorated with palms and yellow chrysanthemums. After a reception Mr. and Mrs. Long left for a trip to northern cities.

Epworth League Convention

The thirty-fifth annual convention of the Salisbury District Epworth League is now being held in Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, Fairmount, November 9th, 10th and 11th. A splendid program has been prepared. The convention bids well to be one of the best the district has ever held. Among the speakers are Bishop Wm. F. McDowell, of Washington, D. C.; Rev. Dr. Wm. H. Dawson, pastor of First Church, Baltimore; Rev. Dr. J. W. R. Sumwalt, pastor of Grace Church, Wilmington, Del.; Rev. Dr. V. S. Collins, Rev. W. F. Dawson, Rev. John Wooten, Rev. Emory McDowell, Messrs. Ralph Dulany, Harry Bradford, William Dix and Miss Margaret Powell.

HARDING SWEEPS THE NATION FOR PRESIDENT

"Solid South" Is Broken By G. O. P. Drive—Republicans Now In Full Control—Senator Smith Goes Down In The Tidal Wave

Piling up the greatest plurality ever accorded a candidate for President, Warren G. Harding, of Marion, Ohio, has been selected by the American people to preside over their destinies for four years, beginning March 4th, 1921. It was what might be termed a political tornado, beginning at California and sweeping across the nation to the shores of Maine, which named Harding and Coolidge by the largest electoral vote ever given candidates for office in this country.

Caught in the same tidal wave, Senator John Walter Smith, of Maryland, went down to defeat before Ovington E. Weller. Although Smith received the largest majority he ever won at the polls on the Eastern Shore, Baltimore and Western Maryland gave Weller enormous majorities. Senator Smith's defeat was the shock of the campaign to Maryland democrats.

The Eastern Shore did better for the Democratic candidates than any other section of the State. The Republicans had the Congressman, William N. Andrews, but the Democrats defeated him with T. Alan Goldsborough.

The tables show how Maryland voted by counties and how Somerset county voted by districts.

THOMAS ALAN GOLDSBOROUGH

Mr. Goldsborough's victory for Congress from this District proved to be a walk-away. He defeated the incumbent, Wm. N. Andrews, of Dorchester, by a majority of 2100. Mr. Goldsborough is one of the most successful lawyers on the Eastern Shore. His home is in Lenton.

Report Of Woman's Auxiliary

The 27th annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Episcopal Church of the Diocese of Easton was held Wednesday and Thursday, October 20th and 21st, in St. Paul's Church, Berlin.

Delegates from nineteen of the twenty-three auxiliary branches were present. The Junior and Woman's Auxiliaries were divided, the former now belonging to the Church School League and the latter to the Church Service League. Miss Lindley of the Church Missions House gave a talk on the Task of the Auxiliary—how we must first care, then see, and do. She answered any questions asked relating to the Auxiliary's duties.

Bishop Davenport was also present during the day services and in the evening talked to large congregations both Wednesday and Thursday. The next meeting is to take place the last week of October, 1921, at Chestertown.

Col. Waters Appointed Chancellor

Bishop Davenport last week appointed Col. Henry J. Waters, of Princess Anne, to be chancellor of the Diocese of Easton. Col. Waters has accepted the honor and has been qualified for the office. The diocese has had but one chancellor since the office was created in 1883—Judge James Alfred Pearce, of Chestertown. Judge Pearce resigned the office weeks ago, due to the condition of his health, and it has been Bishop Davenport's task to find a worthy successor to Judge Pearce. This has been done in Col. Waters, the appointment having been highly commended throughout the diocese.

Marriage Licenses

The following is a list of marriage licenses issued by the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Somerset county:

White—Reginald H. Wilson, 24, Princess Anne, and Mabel Alice Webster, 22, Mt. Vernon. Horace E. Kelley, 33, and Reva M. Poulson, 25, both of New Church, Va.

Colored—Hurley Jones, 23, and Edith Wigfall, 19, both of Dames Quarter. Charles Smith, 22, and Emma S. Burton, 18, both of Exmore, Va.

A plate showing the proposed Memorial Bridge to soldiers of the county has been received by the committee and will be printed on the envelopes used by the collectors.

THURSDAY A LEGAL HOLIDAY

Governor Ritchie Issues Armistice Day Proclamation

Governor Ritchie has issued a proclamation declaring Thursday, November 11th, Armistice Day, a legal holiday. Next Thursday will be the second anniversary of the surrender by the German troops, who for four years prior had threatened to overrun the world.

In his proclamation the Governor recalled the circumstances of the ending of the war, said that the victory marked the triumph of civilization and continued:

"Whereas, the people of the State of Maryland contributed to the glorious victory by their untiring efforts in support of the military and naval forces of the United States and its Allies, and

"Whereas, some of the bravest sons of Maryland made the supreme sacrifice on foreign soil, and thousands of others, by their heroic deeds on the field of battle, added immeasurably to the glory and honor of this State; and

"Whereas, the General Assembly of Maryland at the regular session of 1920, by the passage of Joint Resolution No. 13, resolved that Armistice Day be fittingly observed by the people of the State.

"Now, therefore, I, Albert C. Ritchie, Governor of Maryland, do hereby proclaim November 11, 1920, Armistice Day, a legal holiday throughout the State of Maryland, and I urge that the people celebrate this day by giving thanks to God Almighty for his many blessings and by expressing gratitude to those who gave their lives that we might continue to enjoy those blessings in freedom and safety.

Colored Agricultural Exhibition

The fourth colored annual agricultural exhibition for Somerset county will be held at the Metropolitan M. E. Church, Princess Anne, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, November 17th, 18th and 19th, 1920.

Classes of exhibits will include fruits, vegetables, dairy and farm products, besides the household department, which includes exhibits of canned fruits, vegetables, preserves, marmalades, jellies, pickles, needle work, bread, cakes and pies. An interesting program will be rendered each evening and the exhibit is expected to be very largely and widely attended.

On behalf of the colored citizens of Somerset county the local county agent wishes to thank the public for its interest in and support of these community agricultural shows, which help very much in raising and holding up the standard of better livestock, increased farm products and improved canned fruits and vegetables, besides creating friendly rivalry between the schools and clubs.

To Lay Off 1,000 Road Hands

In line with the determination of the State Roads Commission to contract for no more work until after January 1, Chairman John N. Mackall announced last Thursday that 1,000 employees of the Commission will be laid off November 15. After New Year lower prices of construction material are expected to prevail, and work probably will be resumed. The majority of the men are laborers who were employed in the city and sent into the country on 30 jobs in progress this fall.

Our citizens are urged to make prompt and hearty response to the subscriptions for fire apparatus, as the committees are to make reports the first of next week.

WARREN G. HARDING AND CALVIN COOLIDGE ELECTED BY A GREAT MAJORITY

Record-breaking Pluralities in Many States Show That the Republicans Have Received the Greatest Popular Vote

G. O. P. RETAINS CONTROL OF BOTH SENATE AND HOUSE BY INCREASED MAJORITIES, WINNING NEARLY ALL OF THE STATES IN WHICH REAL CONTESTS WERE MADE.

New York.—In the largest vote ever polled in a Presidential contest in this country, the Republican party achieved an unprecedented victory.

Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge, the Republican nominees for President and Vice-President were elected by the largest popular plurality ever recorded. They carried all the Northern States east of the Rocky Mountains and California west of them, with the prospects favoring further acquisitions that will give the Republican candidates in excess of 320 votes in the Electoral College.

Harding carried the electoral vote from the following States: California, Connecticut, Colorado, Delaware, Idaho, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Because of the participation of women voters, which increased the electorate to probably 28,000,000, the pluralities given all candidates were without precedent in the political annals of America. In the State of New York, for instance, the Harding-Coolidge ticket received a plurality over the Cox-Roosevelt ticket exceeding 1,100,000.

The Republican landslide in the Empire State did not, however, extend to the gubernatorial contest the latest figures available showing that Miller received pluralities totaling 370,575 in districts north of the Bronx, while Smith, his Democratic opponent, carried the city by an indicated plurality of 314,000. The Republican Presidential ticket has achieved for the second time in the political history of the State, the feat of carrying every borough in this city, Brooklyn alone giving it between 150,000 and 180,000.

The same story was told in returns from every other State north of the Potomac river. Pennsylvania gave the Harding ticket more than 600,000. California provided an unprecedented majority. Massachusetts contributed 400,000; Nebraska from 75,000 to 100,000; Indiana by 75,000; Michigan by 150,000; Illinois by 500,000, of which Chicago contributed 350,000.

The States from which returns were too meagre to justify actually placing them in either the Harding or Cox columns were: Arizona, 3; Minnesota, 12; Missouri, 18; Montana, 4; Nevada, 3; New Mexico, 3; Oklahoma, Tennessee and Utah, 4.

The States which were certain for Cox were Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia, a total of 127 votes in the Electoral College. Returns leave little room to doubt that the Republicans elected the ma-majority of their Senate candidates in all of the contested States, the individual plurality for Wadsworth exceeding 400,000 in New York. Moses in New Hampshire, Brandegee in Connecticut, Willis in Ohio, Watson in Indiana, Lenroot in Wisconsin, Cummins in Iowa, Shortridge in California and Ladd in North Dakota won easily. The Republicans will control the House of Representatives. Substantial gains were made by them in New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, West Virginia, Massachusetts, Missouri and one or two other Western States.

The Democrats apparently carried Kentucky for both their Presidential and Senatorial candidates. With one-tenth of the vote of Missouri tabulated, Harding had a lead over Cox of 1,500.

The New York State Legislature will be overwhelmingly Republican.

In addition to carrying the city of New York, Harding carried 22 up-State New York cities.

The vote for the Socialist candidates fell below the estimated number.

HARDING PRAYS FOR STRENGTH.

President-Elect Says He Does Not Regard Victory As Personal.

Marion, Ohio.—Convinced of his election to the Presidency, Warren G. Harding issued a statement saying that instead of being exultant over the result he was "more given to prayer to God to make me capable of playing my part."

Receiving the election returns at his home here, Mr. Harding declined during the early evening to make any comment and issued his statement only after the figures had piled up majorities for him which his advisers declared made his election certain.

At the same time it became known that the Senator and Mrs. Harding had made plans for a vacation trip, to be carried out regardless of the election, taking them for a rest next week in Texas, and after that for an ocean voyage to the Panama Canal Zone. They will return to Marion during early December.

COOLIDGE SEES NEW PERIOD NEAR.

Says Victory Means Returns To The Constitution.

Boston.—Governor Coolidge received returns from the election with friends at the Hotel Touraine. Early in the evening he issued a statement thanking the voters for their support and expressing assurance of victory. The statement follows:

"It is with a great deal of gratitude that I have seen by the incoming returns the extent of the victory and have realized its source. While I rejoice in its great proportions, I rejoice even more in the nature of the support we have received. It means the end of a period which has seemed to substitute words for things, and the beginning of a period of real patriotism and true national honor. It means a return to the Constitution, and an end of extravagance, and a Government by the people at home"

A "Pig" in the Bed.
Many words in everyday use have quite another meaning in remote corners of the country. An auction is a dirty or untidy place; and some rustics, when unwell, tell you that they feel "comical." A pig or piggy is a hot-water bottle—hence the story of the traveler who returned to civilization with a tale that in Northumberland the people slept with a pig in the bed for warmth.—London Express.

Stuck Up for His Pa.
Parson Blank took his little son to prayer meeting for the first time. During the prayer one of the deacons uttered a loud "Amen." Willie suffered this to pass without remark, but when the "Amen" was presently repeated he could stand it no longer, and rising in his seat he exclaimed, "Don't mind him, papa, you pray just as long as you want to."—Boston Transcript.

NATIONAL AND STATE ELECTIONS

Many Women Nominees Feature of Day

ILLINOIS BANNER STATE

Large Number Of Parties In Field Also Feature Of National And State Voting—34 Senators And 34 Governors.

New York.—The national and State elections were held Tuesday were notable for the number of women nominees and the large number of parties who had tickets in the field.

Six parties had national tickets for President and Vice-President, though by no means in all the States. These tickets were Republican, Democratic, Socialist, Prohibition, Farmer-Labor and Single Tax. About 13 other parties had candidates either for State tickets or for representatives in Congress, bringing the total of all parties to nearly a score.

In the Presidential election there were chosen 531 members of the Electoral College, of which 266 was necessary to the election of a candidate, as President. In the last election President Wilson had 277.

The present membership of the United States Senate is 96, composed of 47 Democrats, 43 Republicans and 1 Progressive. Thirty-three States elected 34 Senators, the terms of 32 members of that body expiring on March 3, 1921, while the other two were selected to fill unexpired terms up to March 4, 1925. Of the 32 Senators whose terms expire next March, 17 are Democrats and 15 Republicans. The two additional vacancies were caused by the deaths of Senators Bankhead of Alabama and Martin of Virginia, both Democrats. One Senator was chosen in each of the 33 States except in Alabama, which elected two.

The only States which did not elect Senators were Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, West Virginia and Wyoming.

Women candidates for the Senate were voted on in six States—by the Prohibitionists in Indiana, New York and Pennsylvania; by Socialists in California, by the Farmer-Labor party in New York and Connecticut and by Independent in Nevada.

Socialists had candidates for the Senate in 11 States—Alabama, (2), California, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, New Hampshire, New York, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Washington. The Farmer-Labor party has Senatorial candidates in seven States: Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Missouri, New York and Washington.

At least eight other parties had candidates for Senator in one or more States. These are Progressive, Socialist, Labor, Single Tax, Independent, Industrial Labor, Independent Republican, Labor and Non-Partisan League.

The total membership (435) of the next House of Representatives was elected. Of this number 218 is necessary for a majority. The present membership is: Democrats, 190; Republicans, 232; Independent Republicans, 2; Independent, 1; Prohibitionist, 1; vacancies, 9. Women had candidates for Representatives in at least 11 States, including Alabama, California, Idaho, Iowa, Michigan, Nebraska, Massachusetts, New York, Oklahoma, Oregon and Missouri.

Governors were elected in 34 States as follows: Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

Constitutional amendments were voted upon in 29 States. There were referenda in 12 and initiatives in 4. Arkansas voted on amendments granting suffrage to women and the powers of the initiative and referendum to the people. California had a referendum on five questions, including the Harris prohibition enforcement act and the sale of poison act. One of the most notable of the initiatives was that in California, where the voters were called upon to decide the fate of Japanese farmers by amending the alien land law so as to withdraw the land leasing privileges from aliens who are ineligible to American citizenship.

SEALEVEL, NORTH CAROLINA

California had an initiative vote also on prohibition of vivisection. Voters also passed upon several constitutional amendments, including the single tax measure and prohibition of compulsory vaccination.

Georgia voted on a constitutional amendment authorizing pensions to Confederate veterans or their widows. In Kansas the voters passed on an amendment to provide State aid in the purchase of farm homes.

Nebraska had a referendum on a law substituting nominating conventions for primaries for all State offices except Governors. New Hampshire voted on questions of levying a State income tax, granting the Governor right to veto items in appropriation bills and reducing the size of the House of Representatives.

New York voters passed on a proposed $45,000,000 bond issue. North Carolina voted on a proposed State income tax, while North Dakota decided whether to grant woman suffrage. Ohio had a referendum on an act providing for the enforcement of prohibition.

No State elections were held in Maine, Maryland, Mississippi, New Jersey or Virginia.

Probably the banner State for the number of candidates for Governor was Illinois, where 10 parties had candidates for that office, including the Democratic, Republican, Socialist, Socialist Labor, Farmer-Labor, Single Tax, Prohibition, Co-operative party of America, Liberal party and Harding-Coolidge Republican.

OIL CONSUMPTION INCREASED.

New High Record Made in September, With Output Lower.

Washington.—Consumption of petroleum reached the high record figure of 48,670,000 barrels in September, while production decreased slightly, the Geological Survey reported in its monthly statement. The average daily production was placed at 1,261,500 barrels, as compared with 1,270,870 barrels in August.

The deficiency in domestic production, the survey stated, was offset by net imports of 10,914,000 barrels, the largest ever recorded in a single month.

Decreased production was ascribed by the survey to lessened returns from Central and North Texas and North Louisiana.

California, in September, attained the record daily production of 304,267 barrels, supplanting Oklahoma as first in rank. Montana went ahead of Colorado.

$800,000 FOR NEAR EAST RELIEF.

Will Be Spent in Armenia, Persia And Other Sections.

New York.—Appropriations totaling nearly $800,000 for relief work in the Near East were voted at a meeting here of the executive committee of the Near East Relief.

A gift of $150,000 from Armenians, resident in the United States, was received and the committee appropriated $300,000 for immediate purchase of supplies for Armenia.

A total of $200,000 was appropriated for the Constantinople district, $125,000 for relief in Trans-Caucasia, $115,000 for Syria, $55,000, for Northern Persia and about $12,000 for Greek refugees in these countries.

Bayard Dodge of this city, son of Cleveland H. Dodge, was appointed to direct relief activities in Syria with headquarters in Beirut.

CENTRAL AMERICA TO UNITE.

Salvador Receives Favorable Reports Of Plan To Form Union.

San Salvador.—Dispatches from the capitals of Central American nations indicate keen interest in the conferences to be held at San Jose, Costa Rica, early in December for the purpose of establishing a program for uniting the five republics into a Central American Union. The objects of the conference, which were outlined in a note to the Salvadorean Government from the International Central American Bureau on August 18, are declared to have been favorably received, and there is great promise that the meeting will be harmonious.

RAILROAD TRAFFIC AT PEAK.

Reported Heavier Than During Troop Movements in 1918.

New York.—Members of the Association of Railway Executives, meeting here reported the heaviest traffic during the last few weeks of any period in the history of the roads, even exceeding the height of the troop movement operations in 1918. Co-operation on the part of shippers, increased efficiency of labor and efforts by railroad officials to get the utmost out of the available facilities were given as the reasons of the improvement.

It has been our aim from the first to earn for this Company and the Nash Six the confidence of motor car buyers

We wanted more and more people to feel that this is a good company to do business with; one that manufactures efficiently and honestly; prices its cars honestly and gives good service to its owners.

To that end we devoted all of our resources and energies.

Year by year a constantly increasing number of people have come to regard this company and its product in just that way.

Nash owners have learned to know the Nash Six as a car of uncommon goodness. They have for it that friendly, enthusiastic regard which good service merits and earns.

And we feel that today, in these unsettled conditions, the sound policies of the Nash Motors Co. and the exceptional worth of the Nash Six are apparent to a widening circle.

Those who know this company best know the principles that guide us—our determination to build a big business on a solid foundation; to win confidence and good will by making a thoroughly good product and by selling it at the lowest possible cost.

NASH MOTORS

A MARYLAND GIRL IN ALBANIA.

Miss Beatrice Moore, of Sandy Springs, Md., is here shown riding a military narrow gauge railroad from Bazar Schak, Albania, to Vora. Though it is a delightful experience scenically there is not much comfort in the jolting little cars with their hard pine benches. The party is en route to the American Red Cross relief station at Vora. The railway is operated by the Italian army of occupation. Miss Moore is the young woman at the right of the photo next to the Red Cross doctor. Join or renew your membership in your local Red Cross chapter.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

One Hundred Per Cent. "Pep"

When your Ford car or your Ford truck doesn't display its usual quantity or quality of "pep" and dash, it's time to have a repairman who understands the Ford mechanism give it the "once over"—then make the necessary adjustments or repairs. And return it to you full of its old time power, "pep," energy, pull and service. You'll notice the difference.

We employ only skilled Ford mechanics—men who know how Ford cars are made, and how they should be kept in order to give the most efficient and economical service. And our shop equipment boasts a great many specially designed tools and time-saving devices and machinery. In our stockroom is a complete assortment of repair parts—genuine Ford parts—that are exactly the same as their tough, sinewy originals in the Ford car.

For prompt repair work or adjustments, phone or drive to our garage. Don't risk chances, play fair with your Ford car. Keep it in the hands of its friends, the authorized Ford dealers. Insist on genuine Ford parts.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Notice is hereby given that the levy of the year 1920 for State and County Taxes has been made in Somerset county.

Pursuant to said levy the taxes are now in my hands for collection. A discount of three per cent. will be allowed on all county taxes paid on or before October 31st, 1920, and a discount of two per cent. if paid during November, 1920. No discount will be allowed on county taxes paid after November 30th, 1920.

The law allowing discounts on State taxes has been abolished, therefore no discount will be allowed on State taxes.

The law provides that both County and State taxes must be paid in order to obtain the discount.

State taxes bear interest from October 1st, 1920, at the rate of six per centum per annum. County taxes bear interest from January 1st, 1921, at the rate of six per centum per annum, and interest is charged for the full month from the first day of each month.

IT COSTS TOO MUCH TO BE SICK

Keep Your Blood In Good Condition and You Throw Off Disease

PAY ATTENTION TO YOUR HEALTH

No Need to Take Chances With It. Pepto-Mangan Makes Rich, Red Blood

When you first feel a tired, all-gone feeling and look pale, your blood is losing in quality. Weak, impoverished blood has no power to fight disease. It takes red blood to keep you well.

If you keep your blood in good condition it will fight off disease. You will not be such an easy prey to long and expensive sickness. With thin blood you take chances every day.

There's no need doing that. You can take Pepto-Mangan and build up rich, red blood. With red blood you are able to win in the fight against prevailing diseases. Try Pepto-Mangan. It comes in tablet or liquid form. Take either kind. The tablet has the same medicinal value as the liquid. But be sure you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan. Ask for "Gude's" and be sure that the name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" is on the package.—Advertisement.

WON PRAISE FOR HISTORY

Work of Charles Rollin, Famous Frenchman, Was for Many Years a Standard Book.

No less a personage than Voltaire praises the work known as "Rollin's Ancient History," which, though now obsolete, was for years in its English translation the standard work on the Egyptians, Carthaginians, Assyrians, and other ancient nations.

Voltaire, while praising the work highly, alleges that it would have been better if the author had been more of a philosopher, able to distinguish better the false from the true, incredible from the probable, and to sacrifice the useless. Notwithstanding, he said it is the best compilation in any language, because compilers are seldom eloquent, and Rollin was.

Charles Rollin was a Frenchman, and he died at Paris, the place of his birth, on Sept. 14, 1741. This celebrated man rose from poverty and obscurity to a position of the greatest dignity.

Transylvania trail, the path that ran through the Cumberland and opened the beauties and richness of Kentucky to the pioneer hordes from the Atlantic seaboard.

If You Are Ambitious.

I have noticed that men who have climbed to great heights, as a rule, have chosen the job which held the larger future, regardless of what it might give in immediate returns. It was not the larger salary they were after, but the larger opportunity. It was the job which gave promise of the greatest future that they wanted, not a "soft snap" with easy money and no future. Many vocations which pay the most money at first have the least future in them. If you must make sacrifices make them when you are first starting out in life. You will find it much easier to make them later. What you need at the outset is, the most of all, the biggest opportunity for growth and development, the job that has the larger possible future in it. If you are ambitious you won't look for a "soft snap" and "easy money."—New Success.

Barrel Racing.

Barrel racing is a favorite amusement among the workmen in a suburb of London. Some forty cellar men, cooper and others competed in one race of this description. Then followed a double-barreled race, the men engaged being obliged to push before them two empty barrels instead of one.

At present prices of wool the growers claim they are getting badly fleeced.
For the politicians the hand shaking season is now over and the plum shaking season begins.

There are a lot of folks whose only idea of making a noise in the world is to keep knocking all the time.

Many people who long for the good old days couldn't be persuaded to buy a house without modern improvements.

A lot of people who sit in stuffed chairs in city offices are urging other folks to go back on the land and dig in the dirt.

One way to induce a man to attend strictly to business and shut his mouth is to have him run for office and get defeated.

No wonder that a lot of people won't go to church as the minister might give out a hymn with such obsolete sentiments as "Work for the Night is Coming."

One can't help saying that the absence of political speeches the day after election was one of the sweetest sounds the American people have heard for many a day.

In spite of the terrible evils that were going to rack the country in case the right ticket was not elected, so far no election losers are reported to have arranged to sell their real estate and move elsewhere.

When leather is high, shoe manufacturers can't make any money because the cost of raw material takes all the profit and when leather is low they can't make anything because the public expects to buy for so little.

Sen. Smith and Congressman Coady
Tidal waves are no respecters of persons, and the just suffer with the unjust when indiscriminating democracy starts to clean house and break up the old furniture. But for this Senator Smith and Congressman Coady would have been re-elected. They were swept away in the general deluge. As it is, the vote they polled was a splendid tribute to thoughtful men and women to their fine official records, a personal triumph that is flattering and consoling. The disassembled wets in Baltimore had not a little to do with the result in Senator Smith's case, and had not Colonel Hill been awfully set he would probably have been left "high and dry" at home. The vote polled in Baltimore for Iverson would have made the State safe for Senator Smith.

The defeat of Senator Smith and Congressman Coady is a greater loss to Maryland than to them. Both of them have served the State well and can retire with the consciousness that they have been good and faithful officials. Their successors will have to strain every nerve to come anywhere near equalling their performances.—Baltimore Sun.

For A Disordered Stomach
When the stomach fails to perform its functions the bowels become deranged, the liver and kidneys congested. The important thing is to restore the stomach and liver to a healthy condition and for this purpose Chamberlain's Tablets are excellent. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter.

A Reliable Remedy For Colds And Croup
It would surprise you to know the number of people who use and recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Mrs. J. N. Rose, Verona, Pa., writes Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used by myself and husband for a number of years for coughs and colds. I also gave it to my little daughter three and a half years of age when she had croup last winter. It broke up the attack at once. I have recommended this remedy to many of my friends and neighbors who have also used it with good results.

Eminent Authorities Agree—
that eye strain is the root of many nervous troubles. Nine out of every ten cases of eye trouble can be traced to refractive errors which cause eye strain headaches, nervousness, brain fatigue, sleeplessness, dizziness, spots floating before the eyes, letters running together when reading.

There are some skeptics who do not believe that the above evils that originate from the eyes could be prevented if glasses were worn in time, but the majority of the people are getting educated to the progress of Optical science. I correct all errors of Vision by properly fitted glasses, and do not use drugs. Having had twenty-five years experience assures you of satisfaction.

THE HELPING HAND

People with sympathetic hearts must be deeply impressed by the tales of suffering coming over from Europe. The condition of orphan children in most of the warring countries is the most terrible feature of the situation. It is estimated that 10,000,000 such little ones are without homes or proper care.

In many districts such children are running entirely wild. Through the summer they would wander around the woods and fields and pick up something to eat. But God knows what they can do through the winter. In some of the Baltic countries there are said as a result of such exposure to be practically no children between the ages of one and four.

The American Red Cross has done a noble work for these unfortunate, probably more than any other one agency. The first step toward further help is for everyone to take out his membership in this splendid organization during the roll-call period of this month.

Serious Results From Colds

Colds not only cause a tremendous financial loss but are also a serious injury to every one who contracts them as they lower the vitality and prepare the system for the more serious diseases. It is not at all unusual for people who have serious lung trouble to say "I had a bad cold last winter." Why not take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and cure your

LIE SAVES LIVES

Chief Steward Quiets Refugees on Endangered Ship.

Lights Pipe With Steady Hand and Tells Passengers There Is No Danger—Riot Would Have Doomed Vessel.

This is a story of a white lie, which was told in the White sea. It was told by the chief steward of a White Star liner, says the Montreal Star.

During the evacuation of the Murmansk coast, when tens of thousands of refugees and troops were being taken away from north Russia to escape the bolshevik firing squads, one of the liners, a white Star vessel, was blown onto a reef close inshore with a thousand troops and 1,500 refugees on board. It happened at eleven o'clock at night, and until 4 a. m. the ship pounded on the reef, tearing her bottom plates to pieces, also making considerable water in all her holds.

The captain held a final consultation in his cabin, himself, the chief engineer, purser, chief steward and other department heads being present. The captain stated coldly that in his own opinion when the ship got off the reef, with the rising tide, she would take water in so quickly that it would simply be a nose dive into deep water.

The chief steward then reported that every man, woman and child on the ship wore a life belt, even the babies. The soldiers were also equipped. He also stated that he had the passengers fairly well in hand. "Well," said the captain, "we may as well make preparations for the worst."

"If she takes water the way I think she will, it will simply be a case of every man for himself."

The conference was over and the chief steward left the captain's cabin and stood at the top of the stairs above the upper deck. Two thousand pairs of eyes were peering up at him to read the fate of the ship and themselves. Chief Steward Robinson did not waver. He took out his pipe and lit it with a steady hand, then turning to the milling crowd below, that needed only a word to turn it into a seething mob, he said:

"There is no danger at all. You can all go to bed." They went and the ship slid off but did not sink. She was a new vessel and her patent double bottom had saved her. Later on she was forced to dock at Cromarty, a naval base in the north of Scotland, and this was safely managed. All the passengers, mostly maimed of Russian towns and their dependents, were landed without mishap. Had a riot occurred on board ship the ship's staff could never have handled her in the skillful way which prevented her from leaving half her bottom on the reef. Chief Steward Robinson, with his pipe in hand, had told the biggest lie in his life, but it was a white one and did the trick.

He stated afterward that the reason his hand did not shake was for two and a half years he had slept aboard ship above ammunition cargoes and had become quite fatalistic in the presence of supreme danger.

Reinforced Concrete Pipes.

Interesting methods of manufacturing reinforced concrete pipes have lately come into use in the mining districts of South Africa. Discarded wire ropes from a great accumulation are separated into their strands, and re woven into a cylindrical mesh for the inside of the pipe molds. The centrifugal process is used, the molds being revolved until the concrete, made with crushed stone from the mines, is evenly distributed and the water separated out. Not over nine minutes is required to make six four or six-inch pipes, 15 minutes for four 15 or 18-inch pipes, and 20 minutes for the 60-inch size. The finished pipes stand pressures up to from 210 to 350 pounds per square inch, according to size, and then fall only by becoming porous.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Pain in Old Wound Imaginary.

The pain felt in the scars of wounds long after they have healed is, according to Dr. Arthur F. Hurst, physician and neurologist to Guy's hospital, London, due to the impression made on the patient's mind by the original pain. In spite of the fact that the cause of the pain has gone, his mind has got so accustomed to feeling the pain that he continues to feel it.

"It has generally been ascribed," said Dr. Hurst in a recent lecture before the Royal College of Surgeons, "to nerve fibers becoming involved in scar tissue, but nothing abnormal may be found at operation." Such patients are rapidly cured when the matter is thoroughly and carefully explained to them.

Bouncing Clocks.

The newest thing in clocks is made of rubber, and is meant especially for travelers.

This kind of clock, being incased in rubber, has an almost inaudible tick. If it falls, it bounces and suffers no injury. It is, in fact, proof against ordinary shocks.

This characteristic makes the rubber clock suitable for mounting on an automobile, a motorboat, an airplane or wherever vibration or shock might disturb the mechanism of an ordinary timepiece.

Its Meaning.

"Is there any meaning in the show of bouquet which brides carry?" "Of course; it means they are going to reign."—Baltimore American.

"THE AMERICAN RED CROSS DESERVES A HEARTY RESPONSE," SAYS PRESIDENT IN ANNUAL MESSAGE.

The Roll Call Is A Fitting Season To Take Counsel With Our Inner Selves And To Reaffirm Allegiance To The Great Relief Organization.

Washington, Nov. 7.—The following message from President Wilson, who is also President of the American Red Cross, to the American people, was issued from the White House today:

"The American Red Cross deserves a hearty response to its fourth invitation to annual membership, which will be issued during the fortnight beginning November the Eleventh, Armistice Day.

"Under the stimulus of war and through the co-operation of our people, this organization grew into immense size, enlarged its range of activity, served not only our fighting forces, but also civilians involved in the hardships of war in our own nation and in the nations associated with us in a great common enterprise, and gave to the world an example of effective mercy through co-ordinated effort.

"Since the cessation of hostilities the organization has faced a dual duty: First, to fulfill obligations created by the war, and secondly, to adapt its experience and machinery to the needs of peace.

"It is, today, still assisting government agencies in the care and cheer of our disabled soldiers and sailors, in replacing those able to work in civilian occupations, and in counseling and aiding the families of former combatants; and it is still assisting, with diminished resources, the process of rehabilitation in some of the more prostrated countries of our former associates.

"While continuing these manifest obligations, the Red Cross has been accommodating methods and applying lessons learned in war to the normal needs of our own people in times of peace, especially in regions where provisions for public health and welfare were imperfectly developed. It has placed public health nurses in many localities, and has endeavored to enlist greater numbers of young women in the nursing profession in order that the supply might more nearly equal the steadily increasing demand for community nurses. It has devised a scheme of 'public health centers' for the relief of maladies and for instruction in hygiene, dietetics, and general principles of disease-prevention. With its nurses and nurses' aids it has rendered incalculable service in the serious epidemics of influenza. It has carried instruction in hygiene and first aid into schools, the women's clubs, and the homes of our country. It has taught young and untutored mothers how to care intelligently for their babies, and has done much in many ways to promote child welfare, upon which the welfare of the nation ultimately rests. It has made it a fundamental principle to avoid futile duplications, to co-operate with public agencies when its co-operation was sought, and to supply deficiencies where such agencies had not yet been established.

"It has continued its educational work among the school children through its Junior Red Cross branch, and it has, as one result of its war experience, put preparation for disaster-relief on a scientific foundation, so that it is now equipped to meet disaster emergencies promptly in almost every part of our country.

"By systematic plans and practical performances, it has given a clear answer to the question why the Red Cross should be continued and carried over from war activity into peace-time activity. The answer is in the record.

"Additional to these obvious aspects of the matter, there is another reason why I, as President of the United States and President of the American Red Cross, urge my fellow-countrymen to join the Red Cross in impressive numbers: Reaction follows emotion, and after great effort comes perilous lassitude. Sound patriotism and genuine human service are continuous not intermittent, not contingent merely upon the excitement of war. If there is in some of us an inward cooling of the fine fervor which animated us in the crisis of the nation's stress and peril, a contraction of the spirit which ennobled us as individuals and as a nation, now, during the 'Red Cross Roll Call,' is a fitting season to take counsel with our inner selves, to rekindle the old flame, to reaffirm allegiance to practical patriotism and practical humanitarianism, and to symbolize the regeneration of our better thoughts and handsomer selves by re-enlistment in a great army mobilized for the common good.

HAMLET MODEL YOUNG MAN

Writer Declares That Melancholy Dane Was "Perfect Lady's Perfect Gentleman."

We are told in so many words that he was a model young man. He has presented the English language with two of its stereotyped phrases for the marking of a standardized perfection; he is called "the glass of fashion and the mold of form." The utterance of these words by Ophelia is as illuminative as the words themselves. It is plain that the youthful Hamlet lives up meticulously, not only to conventional, but to feminine, to maidenly, standards of propriety and excellence. He is the perfect lady's perfect gentleman, O. W. Firkins writes in the North American Review.

But we do not need Ophelia's testimony; listen to the young man himself. His mother urges him not to return to college. "I shall in all my best obey you, Madam," he replies with a filial decorum which Samuel Richardson or Hannah More could not have mended. Observe the nature of his objections to suicide:

Oh, that the Everlasting had not fixed His canon 'gainst self-slaughter.

He condemns the act, not because it is cowardly or simply immoral, but because it is uncanonical, unscriptural. Here is a young man in whom his catechist or confessor may rejoice. With such a person it is obviously hazardous to joke. When Horatio, his fellow student, calls himself a truant, Hamlet solemnly defends him against the charge:

I would not hear your enemy say so.

Clearly this is a young collegian who never "vex the souls of deans." We see him assiduous at lectures, methodical in his notes. Shakespeare has not forgotten to inform us that he kept a note book. Within two minutes after his father's ghost has ended the appalling tale of the murder in the garden, the young prince is jotting down by moonlight an invaluable memorandum about the relations of smiles to villainy. Do I mean that Hamlet is a fool? Not at all. Hamlet has a strong mind, but its strength is shown at the outset in the docility and thoroughness of its assent to the proposition of its teachers.

A Pious Man's Consolation.

Dr. Lyman P. Powell gives some examples of the lengths to which petty bitterness between sects will sometimes carry men. "A visitor in a certain town which had four churches and adequately supported none asked a pillar of one poor, dying church, 'How's your church getting on?' 'Not very well,' was the reply, 'but, thank the Lord, the others are not doing any better.'"

Tired

"I was weak and run-down," relates Mrs. Eula Burnett, of Dalton, Ga. "I was thin and just felt tired, all the time. I didn't rest well. I wasn't ever hungry. I knew, by this, I needed a tonic, and as there is none better than—"

CARDUI The Woman's Tonic

"... I began using Cardui," continues Mrs. Burnett. "After my first bottle, I slept better and ate better. I took four bottles. Now I'm well, feel just fine, eat and sleep, my skin is clear and I have gained and sure feel that Cardui is the best tonic ever made."

Thousands of other women have found Cardui just as Mrs. Burnett did. It should help you.

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative power of Hall's Catarrh Medicine that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. VICTORIES OF PEACE EQUAL THOSE OF WAR

Whether the task is the construction of a colossal harbor improvement project, or the administration of a newly acquired insular possession, the Department of War is always prepared to bring to the task a high degree of skill and masterful judgment. How "peace hath her victories no less renowned than war" for the military department of the nation is interestingly described and illustrated in one of an instructive series of articles on Our Government now being distributed exclusively by this Institution.

FUNNY SIDE OF WET WEATHER

Elements the Occasion of More Humor and Ill-Humor Than Any Other Earthly Institution.

The weather, more especially our British variety, has probably been the occasion of more humor and ill-humor than any other earthly institution, London Tit-Bits says.

"What you need," once remarked a doctor to his patient, "is a change of climate." "Change of climate?" cried the man. "That's what's the matter with me. If the climate would only keep the same a few days running I would be all right!"

"The mutability of the weather reminds one of the indignant customer who returned to the shopkeeper, saying: 'Look here, that barometer you sold me a month ago has got out of order. It won't work.' 'No wonder, sir,' replied the shopkeeper, 'look what a lot of weather it's had lately!'"

There is nothing to beat the story of the American tourist who came across a man out West sitting on a stump. "How's the weather treating you?" he was asked. "Pretty tolerable stranger," replied the man. "I had some trees to cut down, but a cyclone came along and leveled them for me." "That was a piece of luck," cried the tourist. "Yes; and then," continued the man, "there was a storm, and the lightning set fire to the brushwood and saved me the trouble of burning it." "Remarkable! But what are you doing now?" "Oh, I'm just waiting for an earthquake to come along and shake the potatoes out of the ground."

Once an old weather prophet at Whittingham informed Mr. Balfour that "It's gann to rain seventy-two days, sir." "Come, come!" said the statesman. "Surely the world was entirely flooded in forty days?" "Aye, aye," was the response, "but the world wasn't sate weel drained as it is noo."

NO HAY IN THE PHILIPPINES

Because of Great Humidity Grass Cannot Be Cured, So It Is Cut Every Day.

Because of the great humidity grass can't be cured in the Philippines. As a consequence it is cut fresh every day and brought into the towns and cities for sale at a stipulated price per cargo, two bundles weighing about 125 pounds. It is cut with a small home-made knife and washed in running water before being placed in the bundle. American horses cannot live on it, but native horses eat it and grow fat. Guinea grass and Bermuda are the commonest kinds of grasses grown for horse roughage in the islands, according to a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger. For American horses and mules hay is imported into Manila from the Pacific coast states and brings about $75 per ton. Oats sell for about the same price. On account of the excessive rains oats cannot be grown in the islands; rust affects it. Corn grows well; Filipino farmers can harvest three crops a year from a single piece of ground. To keep it, it is necessary to leave it in the husk; otherwise weevils destroy it. It is tied in bundles and hung on bamboo poles, then husked and shelled as needed. Corn mills are now being established in Visayan islands, where the natives prefer cornmeal to rice as a staple food.

More Musical Drums.

It is a well-known fact that percussion instruments as a class give inharmonic overtones, and so are musically defective. A special type of drum used in India is a remarkable exception to that rule, says Nature, for it gives harmonic overtones that have the same relation of pitch to the fundamental tone as is found in stringed instruments. The drumhead produces five such harmonics, inclusive of the fundamental tone. The first, second and third harmonics are especially well sustained in intensity and give a fine musical effect. The result is attained through the use, on the drumhead, of a symmetrical distributed load that decreases in density from the center outward. The load consists of a flexible composition of finely divided metallic iron. A second membrane in the form of a ring is superimposed round the edge of a drumhead. The fundamental pitch and the octave are derived from the modes of vibration of the membrane. The center load improves the musical effect by increasing the energy of vibration, and thus prolonging the duration of the tones.—Youth's Companion.

Many Bridal Beliefs.

One is inclined to believe that the job of the folklore collector would have been greatly curtailed had it not been for the fund of material that is wrapped around the bride. Every little move she makes, every stitch in her gown, the flowers in her bridal bouquet, and the jewels she dons on her wedding day all have secret portents.

If the first flower a bride sees on her wedding morn is white, say the folkloreists, she will lead a happy life; if red she will know sorrow and care. If a bunch of pink roses is given to a bride it is lucky.

Assurance.

"One of those campaign 'money diggers' would like to see you," said Mr. Grabola's secretary.

"Fluneration! Didn't you say I was out?"

"Yes, sir. He said he knew you would be out, and he just dropped in to tell you how much."

BEING FAT IS REAL TRAGEDY

To Modern Woman It is a Worry That Frequently Leads to Ruined Health and Insanity.

A fat man is usually a jolly sort of an individual who accepts the world as the same sort of a joke as the world considers him. Girth, says the New York Sun, may worry a man occasionally because it is an annoyance, but with the modern woman it verges upon tragedy. As physicians—if they would talk freely—can tell you, it is a worry to them that frequently leads to ruined health, insanity or the grave.

It is possible for a man to grow fat gracefully. At least he can subdue his habits, stop running for trains, give up his golf and spend most of his time in ponderous poses. His tailor can easily arrange his clothing into well-known and accepted lines.

The case of the woman is different. Fashion binds her as with a chain. There are no stylish frocks for stout women. The fashion of today calls for slim figures and trim ankles. Waists and hips are taboo. There are no sleeves capable of concealing over-fleshed arms. Man can adapt his clothes to his figure, but woman must adapt her figure to the clothes, or else shamelessly admit that she cannot wear what is fashionable.

It was not always so. In another generation the stout woman had a well defined place—the "dowager type." It was sometimes called. The woman who made the best biscuits and cooked the most savory chicken was always a rotund sort of person who never minded it when people came unexpectedly around dinner time. She was the one children flocked to for sympathy and the one who seemed to make the world brighter wherever she went.

FORKS FIRST USED IN 1574

Occasion Was Dinner Given by Henry III of France—Account Given by Royal Guest.

It is hard to believe the sensation produced when forks first came into use. It was in 1574, at a dinner given by Henry III of France. Here is an account by a royal lady guest, the Ladies' Home Journal recalls: "The guests never touched the meat with their fingers, but with forks, which they carried to their mouths, bending their necks and bodies over their plates."

"There were several salads. These they ate with forks, for it is not considered proper to touch the food with the fingers. However difficult it may be to manage it, it is thought better to put the little instrument in the mouth than the fingers."

"Then artichokes, asparagus, peas and beans were brought. It was a pleasure to watch them try to eat these with their forks, for some, who were less adroit than the others, dropped as many on their plates and on the way to the mouth as they were able to get to their mouths."

"Afterward a great silver basin and a pitcher of water were brought and the guests washed their hands, though it seems as if there would not be much scent of meat and grease on them, for they had touched their food only with those forked instruments."

Too Much Candor.

My traveling companion had been carrying an old black bag which barely held together. I had told her that she would have to carry a different piece of baggage if she were going to travel with me, but it made no impression.

One early morning we sat down in a small waiting room in a branch line station in central Oregon. Next to me was an old black bag with which I began to fumble. Finally I put my finger through a rip in the side and began to pull out some wearing apparel and at the same time turned to my friend and said: "Pauline, you certainly ought to be ashamed of yourself to carry such a ramshackle contraption as this bag is."

"I beg your pardon," said a woman seated on the other side of me, "but that is my bag."

Brazil's Big Snake Nursery

There are said to be more snakes in Brazil than in any other country of the western hemisphere, an exchange remarks. At Batutuan, near Sao Paulo, there is a great snake garden where scientists are studying the mysteries of snake biology. The original season for the establishment of the garden, which is a huge nursery for snakes, was to obtain serum enough for those bitten by snakes throughout Brazil. The garden is 600 acres in extent and divided into three departments, two of which are devoted to cobras, crotalids and bothrops, the most poisonous snakes known; while the third department is given to the nonpoisonous snakes.

CUT OUT THE EAVESDROPPER

New Device Is Expected to Eliminate "Listening in" on Wireless Messages.

Successful demonstrations of a new wireless invention, which marks a step toward the secrecy of wireless telephone and telegraph messages, have taken place in Great Britain, and Signor Marconi is at present conducting further tests at sea in his yacht Elettra with a view to its wider application.

Details of the invention are secret, but it may be stated that, according to the Continental edition of the London Daily Mail, an apparatus has been devised which, by what experts call an "electrical method of concentration," propagates the electric wireless wave in a "beam" in any desired direction and in that direction only. Hitherto the electrical waves sent out from wireless stations have spread out in all directions and all who "listened in" could hear. The new invention will mark the end of the wireless "eavesdropper." When it is perfected a wireless station will be able to send out Morse or spoken messages which will be heard only by those for whom they are intended.

The new apparatus which is being worked at an experiment station in Great Britain with a short wave length, has recently been demonstrated by a number of experts who expressed the greatest interest in the discovery.

It is known that German wireless research has been lately closely directed to this problem of the "eavesdropper," for the Germans realized that we were able to pick up with our listening sets much valuable information about Zeppelin movements during the war.

HOW DOLLAR WORKS FOR YOU

Benjamin Franklin's Fund of $5,000 Grew to $431,383 in One Hundred Years.

How the dollar invested works for the individual himself has been best illustrated by that first great American teacher of thrift, Benjamin Franklin. In 1791, he bequeathed $1,000 ($5,000) to the commonwealth of Massachusetts and to the city of Boston as a mark of his appreciation for having appointed him as agent in England at the "handsome" salary of $2,000 ($10,000) and to make his bequest really valuable with his great foresight, Franklin provided in his will that this $1,000 should be put out at 5 per cent interest for one hundred years; that at the end of that time $1,131 of the fund accumulated should again be put out at interest for another hundred years and then the fund be divided one-fourth to Boston and three-fourths to the state.

Let us show how well that $1,000 of Franklin's has worked. At the end of the first hundred years it had grown to $431,383.62. It was then divided in accordance with the will; $329,300.48 was set aside for "public work" and $102,083.14 was started on its course of earning interest for another hundred years. That was in 1891. January 1, 1918, this sum had grown to $267,805.15 and at this rate of increase the fund should amount to at least six million dollars when the second period is completed, and may be considerable more.—World's Work.

Title Fits the Duties.

The colored caretaker of a small town library boasted the title of "Custodian," which he had embroidered on the front of his cap, a source of lasting pride. Having marked diplomatic ability, he deserved a four-syllable title. One morning while he was sweeping off the front walk a wandering loafer, also of African extraction, paused in front of him and scrutinized the cap closely.

"Custodian?" he ejaculated. "Down what I came from they call common niggers like you janitahs."

"Ye-es," observed the chon-hued diplomat, pausing a moment from his labors, "dat's all right in Memphis. But on a job like dis, 'custodian' is mo' appropriate. You see, you hat to cuss half de patrons and toady to de rest of 'em."—Judge.

Not All Blind.

Two charming sisters are engaged to two brothers, and their neighbors have been interested in this dual love affair. The young girls live in the second flat of a house on the south side of the street, and the other day the elder sister was stopped in the street by the young scion of the family who occupy the second flat in the house just opposite.

"Oh, Miss Miggs," said the boy, "my papa said last night that someone ought to tell you to pull down the blinds, 'cause if love is blind, the neighbors are not!"—London Tit-Bits.

From Ear to Ear.

Willie was away from home for the first time, staying with some friends. He was allowed to "sit up" for dinner. The servant came round with a plate of slices of melon, and the hostess noticed Willie hesitate about helping himself. "Don't you like melon?" asked his hostess encouragingly. "Very much, thank you," replied Willie, "only they make your ears so wet."

Joan—It might, so I always have it dry cleaned.—Detroit News.

PERFORMER IN HARD LUCK

Youthful Acrobat Deeply Humiliated in the Presence of the Girl of His Heart.

A group of neighborhood youngsters had organized a circus at the home of a boy whose 8-year-old sister was my girl. I was to be the star trapeze artist and was all dressed up in a bathing suit with a window curtain sash around my waist.

The circus was held in a vacant lot; all the dogs and cats in the neighborhood were the menagerie. The trapeze hung from a tree.

In due time my act was announced. I climbed the rope to my perch in approved fashion and went through a few minor stunts with generous applause from the audience. Then I made ready for the final act, which was to astound them all, especially my girl. I began to swing violently to get the trapeze going as high as possible, and with a last look into the fair one's eyes I swung out over the heads of the assembly. But I didn't swing back. The bar of my trapeze—a section of broom handle—broke, and I sailed on in a beautiful curve to the feet of my fair lady.

From this painfully embarrassing position I was hauled by the actors, actresses, and spectators. The extent of my injuries was a cut lip, a ruined window curtain sash, and a severely lacerated pride.—Exchange.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN PRESIDENT

Ambitious Party Leaders Prevented the Nomination of Judge David Davis in 1872.

In 1872, David Davis of Illinois missed his chance for the presidency through the overweening ambition of Horace Greeley of New York, and B. Gratz Brown of Missouri. The Liberal Republican convention met at Cincinnati, with thousands of prominent Republicans in revolt against Gen. Grant, and the powers in the Republican party which controlled it. Davis, who had been a former Democrat, had become a Lincoln Republican, and Lincoln put him on the Supreme bench. He would have had a great deal of the Lincoln support and a large Democratic following, if he had been nominated; but Greeley was ambitious—and so was Brown—and they formed a combination to nominate themselves, defeating Davis, who might have been elected over Grant. The business interests of the country were distrustful of Greeley, but they had confidence in Davis. That the Grant administration and the Republican party, as then controlled, was unpopular, was shown in the great Democratic congressional triumph of 1874, after Grant had been elected a second time.—Detroit News.

Useful Seaweed.

From seaweed when reduced to ashes are gained some of the most beneficent preparations in use today. Some of these are iodine, bromide, hydriodic acid, iodides of sodium, mercury, potassium, magnesium and calcium. From it are extracted coloring matters, volatile oil, and its ingredients are used in photography. It is further employed for coverings for flasks in the packing of glass, china and other brittle wares; for packing furniture, stuffing pillows and mattresses, and in upholstering. The claim is made that furniture stuffed with seaweed is kept free of moths and other insects, owing to its salty flavor. Seaweed is one of the best non-conductors of heat and finds use in thermotics, especially in the insulation of refrigerators and in refrigerating plants. It is also used between walls and floors to prevent the transmission of sound. The demand for this article has grown to such an extent that it is now being gathered in large quantities by farmers and fishermen along the shores of Prince Edward Island, where it is dried and prepared for shipment to the United States.

Pretty Legend.

The Koreans explain why sparrows hop on both feet and why flies rub their feet together when they alight, in the following way: The sparrow and flies had a quarrel and decided to ask the governor of the Korean province to arbitrate the matter. He found them both wrong, and ordered them both whipped, and it made the sparrows jump up and down with pain and the flies put their hands together and prayed to be forgiven. The governor forgave them both, but as a sign he decreed that sparrows should always hop and that flies should rub their feet together when they alighted.

The "Scaup-Duck."

Willoughby says in his work on ornithology that the duck is so called "because she feeds on scaup, broken shellfish," but later authorities state that the name of the bird is properly derived from the "mussel-scaups" or "mussel-scaups," the beds of rock or sand on which mussels are aggregated. There are three species of the scaup-duck in America, which bear numerous names, mostly local, as broadbill and bluebill (both with various qualifying words prefixed), blackhead and black neck (with qualifying words), raft-duck, mussel-duck, greenhead, grayback, flock-duck, flocking duck, troop-fowl, shuffler, etc.

A Fitting Theme.

"Rimer showed me his new poem. It is called, 'Sonnet to But One.'"
"Humph! By rights he ought to have called it 'Owed to Everybody.'"

HALF OF THE RED CROSS DOLLAR STAYS AT HOME

Special attention is invited by David H. Brown, Director of the Fourth Red Cross Roll Call for the Potomac Division, American Red Cross, which division comprises Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, that one-half of every membership dollar works at home, the other half being used for national purposes. Fifty cents of every dollar received from annual membership dues is retained by the local Red Cross chapter for one or more of the following uses as the case may be:

1. To fight disease, and make the community a healthier, safer place for the individual and the family.

2. To teach emergency aid in case of accident.

3. To save the babies and guard the family health by teaching Home Hygiene. Care of the Sick and Dietetics.

4. To give immediate relief to victims of epidemics, explosions, floods, fires or similar calamities.

5. To aid in the care of crippled children, deserted mothers, financial straits, etc.

The balance of all dollar membership dues is forwarded to the Red Cross National Headquarters at Washington. National funds are composed principally of voluntary contributions. They include amounts still on hand for uncompleted war projects. There is also included the amounts received from membership dues. These National funds are used partly for relief work in foreign lands and partly for relief work in the United States, including assistance to soldiers, sailors and marines in camps and hospitals; to families of service men; in sudden disasters; for the public health and nursing service and for the development of the Red Cross service program in the United States.

The management cost at National Headquarters and the fourteen Divisions is less than 4 per cent of the total expenditures. Thus when the Red Cross spends, it spends patriotically, conservatively and wisely. In joining the American Red Cross, each member is assured that he or she can do so without misgiving, armed with the knowledge of just where and how each membership dollar will be expended.

There will be a large number of individuals, who will wish to do more for the Red Cross than to give it a dollar for an annual membership. There are those who will wish to become contributing members, the fee for which is $5.00, and those who will wish to become sustaining members, the fee for which is $10.00. Eighty per cent of the money received from such memberships remains in the chapter. Every member is entitled to a receipt.

The Roll Call begins November 11 and ends November 26.

Sand Generates Electricity.

A curious phenomenon of the Sahara is the charging of motorcar bodies with electricity. Lorries running in the vicinity of Gabis are reported to be often affected, and drivers grasping the starting handle after a stop are liable to receive severe shocks. The electrification is supposed to be imparted to the chassis from charged sand blown against it, the rubber tires serving as insulation to retain the charge. By trailing wires, ground connection is made, and the charge dissipated.

Square Musical Notes.

Shaped notes, that is, notes of square, lozenge, round and other forms than the conventional notes, are hardly known to most people of the musical world. Yet they were strongly indorsed and introduced by Lowell Mason to help in teaching sight singing, and they are still used in enormous quantities in the South in rural districts. The scheme of the shaped note is to represent the different degrees of the scale by means of a different shape note. For any one who has passed the most elementary stages in scale study the plan is quite useless in understanding tonalities, intervals, etc., and it is not used in the large music centers to any appreciable extent.—The Etude.

Stonehenge Remains.

Thus far, excavations have failed to solve the mystery of the origin of Stonehenge. It had been hoped that its passing into the hands of the government would finally shed light on this mystery, for excavations have been previously forbidden by the private owners of the property. Thus far, however, we do not know whether Stonehenge, battered and broken as it is today by centuries of exposure to the winds and rains, was originally a Roman temple or a Druidical shrine, the work of the Phoenicians, the Saxons or the Danes, or whether it was, as has been claimed, a center of serpent worship, of sun worship, a place of sacrifice or of gallows for the execution of eminent criminals.

Not Disinterested.

"You can't judge a map by what his relatives say of him," remarks an exchange. No, nor by what he says of himself.—Boston Transcript.

A BALTIMORE MAN IN THE BALKANS.

Lieut. Col. William Warfield, director of the American Red Cross unit to Albania, is the most popular man in that country. Under his charge are such varied activities as hospitals, public nursing, playgrounds, dispensaries and schools. He is known in the most remote mountain villages and many Albanian feuds have been discontinued at his request in order that the Americans under him could carry on their relief work in safety. Join or renew your membership in the Red Cross during the Fourth Roll Call, November 11 to 26.

Arctic Cold Misunderstood.

There is a great deal of misunderstanding relative to the cold of the Arctic regions. The absence or presence of water and altitude are important factors in determining temperature. As the altitude increases going North, the bite of the weather is lessened so that there is little or no inconvenience to be experienced from the cold.

Real Fall of Prices At Last

Prices in many lines of trade have started to come down. More lines are added to the list every day. As always happens in a time of falling prices, those who have things to sell are displeased while those who have to buy are glad.

Farmers' organizations are urgently appealing to the Secretary of the Treasury, and to the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board to do something to stop the fall of food prices—the same fall for which consumers have been praying. The sellers have had a long innings and now it is the buyers' turn to go to bat.

DON'T DELAY

Some Princess Anne People Have Learned That Neglect Is Dangerous

The slightest symptom of kidney trouble is far too serious to be overlooked. It's the small, neglected troubles that so often lead to serious kidney ailments. That pain in the "small" of your back; that urinary irregularity; those headaches and dizzy spells; that weak, weary, wornout feeling, may be nature's warning of kidney weakness. Why risk your life by neglecting these symptoms? Reach the cause of the trouble while there yet is time—begin treating your kidneys at once with a tried and proven kidney remedy. No need to experiment—Doan's Kidney Pills have been successfully used in thousands of cases of kidney trouble for over 50 years. Doan's Kidney Pills are used and recommended throughout the civilized world. Ask your neighbor! Endorsed at home. Read Princess Anne testimony.

Mrs. C. A. Young, Beechwood street, says: "I was in a bad way from a run-down condition of my kidneys. My hands and ankles were swollen and there were puffy sacs under my eyes. I was subject to dizzy spells and when I stooped over sharp pains caught me in the small of my back. I simply felt miserable. After using one box of Doan's Kidney Pills I was rid of all symptoms of kidney trouble."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mrs. Young had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

When Soap Was Made in Every Home

In 1837—when the first cake of Kirkman's Soap was made—nearly every household made their own soap.

They soon found that Kirkman's Soap was not only better, but was more economical.

Today—the soap which does the most washing with least effort is Natural Thermometer.

It was a wonderful sapphire, so it is said, that led the celebrated Doctor Sorby to the discovery of the nature of the liquid sometimes found inclosed in the cavities of crystals.

The gem in question contained a tube-shaped cavity, a quarter of an inch long and an eighteenth of an inch in diameter, which was so regular in its bore that it served, by means of the liquid partially filling it, for a thermometer. The contained liquid half-filled the bore at 50 degrees, F., and completely filled it at 80 degrees. A study of the rate of expansion of the liquid led to the conclusion that it must be carbonic acid.

Orchid Hunting Profitable.

Orchid hunting is a business that engages the efforts of many courageous adventurers, who explore the wildest and most remote parts of the world in the hope of finding rare or new varieties. Success in this kind of enterprise may bring large reward, inasmuch as a single plant may have a market value of thousands of dollars.

Small Wonder!

"I trust, sir, that you have not been indiscreet enough to speak to my daughter about marriage," said the stern parent to the youth who had just asked for his daughter's hand. "I have not, sir," replied the youth, "but I was strongly tempted to do so last evening when she kissed me good night."

"The Man Who Is Contented Is No Longer of Much Use To Me"

Said one of the greatest business executives in America a few days ago.

For twenty years this store has never been contented.

It takes a reasonable pride in its advancement and a satisfaction in its ability always to furnish BETTER CLOTHING at LOWER PRICES than other stores can furnish.

It is always dreaming of better things, better Clothing, better methods and a greater business.

Twenty years of this sort of discontent has, therefore, been twenty years of continued advancement.

Therefore, in spite of all unfavorable conditions and scarcities, we can, this season, offer to men first-class and unblemished stocks of fine Fall and Winter Suits and Overcoats, strictly all wool and hand tailored.

We realize full well that in these days of intense competition we must offer as good, or better, values than prevail elsewhere, if customers are to buy our wares, and AND WE ARE DOING IT—attested by the largest sales in our twenty years of business.

Our prices are at their best right now on

Mrs. Lankford "Called Home"

Mrs. Rachel D. Lankford died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Albert E. Krause, on south Main street, last Wednesday morning, aged 83 years.

Mrs. Lankford was born near Princess Anne in 1837 and was a daughter of Jacob and Mary Bailey. She was one of the pioneer members of Somerset county and a devout member of the Methodist Church. She is survived by one son (Mr. J. J. Lankford, of Accomac, Va.) and three daughters (Mrs. A. E. Krause, of Princess Anne; Mrs. Georgia Layfield, of Norfolk, Va.; and Mrs. Newell J. Hayman, of Clarksburg, W. Va.). She is also survived by one sister (Mrs. A. C. Thomas, of Baltimore).

Funeral services were held in Antioch Methodist Episcopal Church last Friday afternoon, conducted by the Rev. W. F. Dawson, pastor of the church. Interment was in the church cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs. E. I. Brown, Irving Brown, Wilnot Brown, of Annapolis; Carve Lankford, of Accomac, Va.; A. E. Krause and W. O. Lankford, Sr., of Princess Anne.

Those who attended the funeral from out-of-town were: Mrs. J. T. Golt, of Easton, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Lankford and Mr. Carve Lankford, of Accomac, Va.; Mrs. Georgia Layfield, Misses Rachel and Emily Layfield, of Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. N. J. Hayman, of Clarksburg, W. Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Irving Brown and Messrs. E. I. Brown and Wilnot Brown, of Annapolis, Md.; Miss Leona Lankford, of Aberdeen, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Byrd Lankford, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Bounds, Mrs. Albert Lankford, Mrs. Elmer Walton, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Krause, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Krause, of Salisbury.

Gift To Girls' Club Work

Owing to the splendid generosity of Dr. Edward E. Tull in giving one hundred dollars to Girls' Club work of Somerset county, it is now possible to give prizes at the County Fair for the best individual work in canning, sewing, gardening, bread making, poultry raising, record book and writing histories of the year's work. This has never been made possible before for lack of money. It is hoped that others may appreciate what is being done for the future home-makers of the county and give encouragement.

The women of Somerset county are urged to exhibit at the County Fair, November 18th, 19th and 20th, all pantry products, bread and cake, butter, eggs and needlework, without waiting for a personal invitation. Please send them to the Court House not later than Wednesday, November 17th.

Shoreland Club Entertained

The Shoreland Club was delightfully entertained at "Cherry Grove," the home of Mrs. Frank M. Cline, last Thursday afternoon. Those present were: Mrs. W. A. N. Bowland, Mrs. Wm. H. Dashiell, Mrs. John E. Holland, Mrs. H. Fillmore Lankford, Mrs. W. O. Lankford, Jr., Mrs. George W. Maslin, Mrs. Earle B. Polk, Mrs. J. Arthur Powell, Mrs. H. C. Robertson, Mrs. Joseph G. Scott, Mrs. J. T. Taylor, Jr., Mrs. T. J. Smith. The Club will meet with Mrs. W. A. N. Bowland Friday afternoon, November 26th.

ASPHALT FOR MACADAM ROADS

This Is The Policy Adopted By The State Roads Commission

The State Roads Commission has decided on the policy of covering all macadam roads with asphalt. The work has already begun on a small scale and will be pushed as vigorously as funds in hand will permit. The building of macadam roads has been abandoned.

The move is an economic one. The cost of maintenance has mounted to $800 per mile per annum. Even with this large expenditure the results have not been satisfactory. The maintenance fund is derived from motor vehicle licenses. This fund has been $1,350,000 this year. It is possible to divert a part of this fund to the gradual spreading of asphalt over the stone roads. When the work shall have been completed, the maintenance fund will be insufficient as compared with present expenditures.

Sixty-four thousand dollars which the State Roads Commission had understood would be available for its work during the current year will not be forthcoming as the result of an opinion filed with State Comptroller E. Brooke Lee by Attorney General Alexander Armstrong. The money was figured by Chairman John N. Mackall, of the commission, as due for this year's maintenance fund from the 1919-20 budget of former Governor Harrington. Doubtful of his right to pay it under the law Comptroller Lee referred the matter to Mr. Armstrong, who has ruled that the Roads Commission's view is a mistaken one.

During the present year the commission has constructed 130 miles of roads at a cost of $5,000,000.

Washington High School Notes

A meeting of the Literary Society was held Friday morning, November 5th, and a very enjoyable, as well as instructive, program was rendered by the second section of the Junior Class.

The Girls' Athletic Association has been reorganized with the following officers: Nannie Bounds, president; Charlotte Fitzgerald, vice-president; and Nell Gibbons secretary and treasurer. At the same meeting Helen Gooden was made captain of the Basketball team. This association bought a new basketball which, no doubt, will be a great inducement for the girls to get out and get busy practicing.

The faculty has arranged a new schedule with six 50-minute periods and fifteen minutes each for chapel and morning recess. This is a very great benefit to the Domestic Science and Manual Training instructors, since it allows them a whole afternoon a week for that work.

On election day the Senior Class held an election with sample ballots. Out of a class of fifteen there was found to be one Republican and ten Democrats, the remainder of the ballots having been thrown out.

On Friday evening, November 5th, there was a Halloween party at the high school for the benefit of the Domestic Science and English departments. All were masked and attired in various kinds of fancy costumes. A parade was held and the prize for the best costume was awarded by the High Spookety-Spooks to Marshall Scott, who personated an old darkey woman.

Hunting Season Now Open

Last Wednesday the hunting season opened for partridge, male pheasants, ruffed grouse, woodcock, rabbits, wild turkey and squirrels. The law prohibits the killing of the female Chinese Pheasant at any time. Many Princess Anne sportsmen took advantage of the good weather and got out early in the morning with dog and gun and before noon had bagged much game. It is evident from the unusually large number of gunners licensing that the supply of game will soon be much diminished.

In order to prevent violations of the game laws, the Conservation Commission has named hundreds of deputy game wardens, and these will enforce the game laws to the limit. Hunters, therefore, had better be careful to obey the game laws.

It is unlawful to hunt on property other than that which is owned or tended by the hunter without a hunting license. The law requires every person hunting to have in their possession their license and in addition to same display in plain view on the left arm between elbow and shoulder an arm tag, which is furnished at time of purchase, free. The numbers on the tag must correspond with the license.

The home for nurses being built at the Emergency Hospital, Easton, and which cost over $25,000, will be ready for occupancy early in December. It is constructed of brick in accord with the architecture of the main hospital.

TIMBER CUT ON FORESTRY PLAN

Messrs. Armstrong And Gladden To Work On Modern Methods

Dr. Edward E. Tull, of near Princess Anne, Md., has recently sold the timber on 800 acres of land, to be cut under a plan suggested by the State Board of Forestry.

This is one of the finest stands of timber in the State, consisting of about 75 per cent. loblolly pine and 25 per cent. of hardwoods of various kinds. Since pine is the most valuable species and this ground is to be devoted to timber growing, it was realized that the most important consideration in regulating the cutting was to secure satisfactory pine reproduction. To secure them, four pine seed trees, approximately 12 inches in diameter, are to be left per acre, as evenly distributed as possible, all other trees to be cut clean. The seed trees are to be marked by the State Board of Forestry. The limit of time allowed for cutting the 800 acres is 10 years, with the provision that at least 80 acres in a solid block shall be cut and turned back to the owner each year. The owner has arranged to dispose of the brush after cutting, either by burning or scattering, depending upon the amount of natural reproduction upon the area.

The operators, Messrs. Armstrong and Gladden, will use modern timber methods in handling this tract, with some novel features, such perhaps as war tanks, purchased from the War Department, for skidding timber.

This is one of the largest operations, considering the area involved, the amount of timber and the purchase price, of any conducted in the State for many years. The saving of seed trees, the clean method of cutting and the disposal of the brush will serve as an interesting demonstration of what can be done in securing pine reproduction after cutting and should be of special interest to all those who own woodland of this type.

White-Kay Wedding

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in the presence of a few relatives and friends at Grace Protestant Episcopal Church, Mt. Vernon, last Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Miss Grace Kay, daughter of Mr. James Kay, of Pennville, Indiana, became the bride of Mr. D. Jay White, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel W. White, of Mt. Vernon. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. A. Brown, of Princess Anne.

The bridal party entered the church, which was beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums, ferns and autumn leaves, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, and was met at the chancel steps by the groom and his best man, Mr. Mark L. Costen, of Princess Anne. The bride was beautifully attired in navy blue georgette crepe, beaded over blue satin, with white gloves and wore a large black picture hat. She carried a shower bouquet of white chrysanthemums and ferns. Her only attendant, Miss Lila White, sister of groom, wore blue satin with hat to match and carried pink chrysanthemums and ferns. The ushers were Messrs. S. Joseph Bounds and Harold H. White, brother of the groom. Miss Sophie Grosoup rendered the wedding march and played softly during the service.

Immediately following the ceremony a dinner was served at the home of the groom's father. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. D. W. White, Mr. and Mrs. D. Jay White, Mr. and Mrs. Roger White, Mr. and Mrs. R. Mark White, Mr. and Mrs. Omar Reading; Misses Lila, Fannie, Leona, Margaret and Retta Belle White, Ruby N. Bounds, Sophie Grosoup and Messrs. W. E. J. Bounds, S. Joseph Bounds, Harold H. White, Frank Barbon, Mr. Mahaffy and Master Joseph Reading.

Mr. and Mrs. White will remain in Mt. Vernon until after Thanksgiving when they will go to Pennville, Ind., to reside.

Record Year For Foreign Missionaries

The largest number of new missionaries ever sent to foreign fields in any one year in the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church was sent during the fiscal year ending November 1st, 1920, according to announcement by Bishop Wm. F. McDowell. The largest previous year was 1917 when 96 recruits were appointed and sent out by the Methodists. During the fiscal year just concluded, 275 new missionaries were appointed, of which 80 were assigned to South America, 69 to China, 50 to India and Burma, 30 to Africa, 30 to Malaysia, 6 to Mexico, 5 to Japan, 2 to Korea and 2 to Europe. This list does not include relief workers in European war areas. The 1920 increase marks the first year of the five-year centenary program of the Methodists which includes the expenditure of $115,000,000 in war reconstruction and general expansion of church activities.

EMPLOYES TO BE CLASSIFIED

Marylanders Will Be Placed In 14 Groups, According To Work

Employees of the State will be placed in 14 groups, according to the plan of classification agreed upon by the experts working under Governor Ritchie and State Employment Commissioner Yellott. These groups for the present will not be compared as to salary, but it is regarded as likely that a readjustment of salaries will be suggested based on the relative importance of the classes. Disparities in salaries are being noted unofficially in connection with the survey and classification. The question, however, is not open for the experts or Mr. Yellott to decide.

The simplest of groups are those that have to do with the essential service in the State institutions. Cooks are in this class, which also includes housekeepers and others to be classified as domestics. Custodial and maintenance forces will form a second group, which will include janitors, caretakers, charwomen and those doing similar work. There will be classes for engineering service, medical service, nursing and attending, educational work and clerical work. Under these 14 classes there may be as many as 200 definitely described positions. For each position there will be a description of the duties, qualifications and lines of promotion. The next logical step would be to fix the salary, but this is not to be included in the report.

The classification for Mr. Yellott and the survey for the Governor will lead up to the salary question in a way that will make that possibly the subject of recommendations by the Governor in a special message to the next Legislature. The findings of the experts will no doubt furnish ammunition for candidates for the Legislature in coming fights. The recommendations are certain to arouse opposition from those who oppose changes in present alignments.

The exact number of employees of the State cannot be given as yet, but it is thought to be about 4500. Many are exempt, of course, from classification.

Maryland May Gain One Congressman

Under the Seigel reapportionment plan Maine, now having four members of the House, would be reduced to three, and Missouri, also would lose one congressman, reducing its representation in the House to 15.

The states which would make gains are: Alabama, 1; Arizona, 1; Arkansas, 1; California, 5; Connecticut, 1; Georgia, 1; Illinois, 2; Maryland, 1; Massachusetts, 2; Michigan, 4; Minnesota, 1; New Jersey, 2; New Mexico, 1; New York, 4; North Carolina, 2; Ohio, 4; Oklahoma, 1; Oregon, 1; Pennsylvania, 4; South Carolina, 1; Tennessee, 1; Texas, 3; Washington, 1; West Virginia, 1; Wisconsin, 1.

The total gain under the plan most likely to be adopted is 47, but offset by the Maine and Missouri losses the net gain would be 45, placing the total membership of the House in the future at 480.

The total electoral vote of the 11 Cox states under the Seigel plan would be 136. The states which Senator Harding carried would have an electoral vote in the future totaling 440 instead of 404, as in the election just past.

Brittingham-Murray Wedding

Miss Georgia Brittingham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Brittingham, of Salisbury, and Mr. George Murray, of Philadelphia, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Murray, formerly of Selbyville, Del., were married at the home of the bride Wednesday evening, November 3rd.

The wedding was a quiet affair owing to the illness of the bride's mother, only a few relatives being present. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. L. Shipley. The bride and groom were attended by Mr. William Brittingham, brother of the bride, and Miss Virginia Owens. The bride wore a dress of dark blue and carried a bouquet of roses and ferns. Mr. Murray was in the United States army for about two years, spending fifteen months of that time overseas. The happy couple will make their future home in Philadelphia.

Col. Sweezey New Warden Of "Pen"

The Board of Prison Control at a meeting Monday of last week unanimously elected Col. Claude B. Sweezey, former commander of the 318th Infantry, warden of the Maryland Penitentiary, to succeed Patrick J. Brady, who has been acting warden since the death of John F. Leonard.

Last Tuesday a telegram from Monterey, Cal., where Col. Sweezey is stationed, was received by Chairman Marbury, of the Board of Prison Control, advising that the Colonel's acceptance, provided he was retired from the army, was received. The Colonel stated that he would be able to report in about two weeks.

GOV. RITCHIE NAMES COMMISSIONS

Personnel of Bodies Created By Legislature At January Session

Appointees to State Commissions authorized by the Legislature at its regular session were announced last Thursday by Governor Ritchie. First among them is a committee to revise the insurance laws of the State and report the result of its work to the General Assembly of 1922. It is to be composed of: John M. Reardon, of Baltimore city; W. Mason Shehan, of Easton; Emory L. Coblenz, of Frederick; Chas. O. Hall, of Baltimore city; Douglas H. Rose, of Baltimore city; F. D. Leizear, of Montgomery county; Hazelton A. Joyce, of Baltimore city.

Industrial and Welfare Commission—John K. Shaw, Baltimore city, representing the general public; J. Sloan Hoskins, Baltimore city, representing merchants; Eli Strouse, Baltimore city, representing manufacturers; Frank Novak, Baltimore city, representing contractors; Henry F. Broening, Baltimore city, president Baltimore Federation of Labor, representing labor.

State Office Buildings in Baltimore—(The Governor is ex-officio member of the State Office Building Commission). The four members selected by the Governor are: Heyward E. Boyce, James C. Fenhagen, Samuel Leibowitz and George Gunther, Jr., all of Baltimore.

War Claims Commission—Albert S. J. Owens, of Baltimore; George L. Hopper, of Havre de Grace, and W. Beatty Harlan, of Belair.

Annapolis Sewage Commission—Mayor John J. Levy, of Annapolis, is named as the head of this commission, with Elliott H. Burwell, a civil engineer of Annapolis, and Robert B. Moore, engineer of the State Board of Health, as his associates.

Governor Ritchie also announced the following appointments recently made to fill vacancies on the boards of State institutions:

Springfield State Hospital—Frank H. Gunther, Baltimore city.

Spring Grove State Hospital—Thornton D. Rollins, Baltimore city.

Eastern Shore State Hospital—J. Ramsey Spear, Trappe.

Maryland School for the Deaf—Leonard Weinberg, Baltimore city; Marion G. Hargis, Worcester county; Walter W. Mobley, Montgomery county.

St. Mary's Industrial School for Boys—Edward Davis, Baltimore city, proprietor of the Hotel Rennet.

The Woman Member Of The House

One woman was elected to Congress. She is Mrs. Alice M. Robertson, of the Second Oklahoma district. Running on the Republican ticket she defeated an able and experienced Congressman, Will Hastings.

Mrs. Robertson is one of the pioneers of Oklahoma. Sixty years ago, when a child, she came there in a "prairie schooner" drawn by oxen. Her father was a missionary who came to teach the white man's religion to the red children of the prairies. His daughter, the future Congresswoman, taught in the Indian schools, and about thirty years ago started a boarding school for Creek Indian girls. At this time Oklahoma was the "Indian Territory." Later she opened a school at Muskogee for girls of any of the Five Civilized Tribes—the Creeks, Seminoles, Comanches, Choctaws and Chickasaws.

In 1912 President Taft appointed her postmistress at Muskogee. It was the first time a woman had been appointed to a presidential post office. Of late years she has been running a cafeteria.

The Greatest Mother In The World

Quietly, but effectively, the American Red Cross—"Greatest Mother in the World"—is giving aid to those who need it most. She has not forgotten the crippled, blinded remnants of the war, who are still in army and navy hospitals.

She does more. She takes to her arms the victims of disaster in peace, the victims of floods, fire, tornadoes and other catastrophes. Over 30,000 such unfortunates were shielded and sheltered by her this year. The Greatest Mother in the World is keeping faith, keeping it not merely in this country, but in devastated Europe as well.

Keep faith with her. The good she has done in the past has been made possible entirely through the membership. Join the Red Cross or renew your membership during the 4th roll call which ends on November 25th.

Youth is a sprinter, but Old Age overtakes us in the long run.

FARMERS MAKE NEW RECORDS

Corn Crop Totals 3,199,126,000 Bushels—Advance In Five Crops

American farmers broke production records of five crops this year.

Preliminary estimates announced Monday of last week by the Department of Agriculture show the corn, tobacco, rice, sweet potatoes and pear crops surpassed in size those of any previous year in the country's history.

In addition, very large crops were grown—in some instances closely approaching records—of oats, barley, rye, potatoes, apples and hay. The buckwheat production record, however, has stood since 1866 with this year's crop more than 8,000,000 bushels under it. Final crop production figures will be announced next month.

Corn, king of all crops and of which the United States grows more than 70 per cent. of the world's output, reached the enormous total of 3,199,126,000 bushels. This is 75,000,000 bushels more than ever before grown in any year. This is the third corn crop to exceed 3,000,000,000 bushels, the previous record having been made in 1912, while the crop of 1917 was the second largest.

Production corn, according to the preliminary estimate in the principle producing States, follows:

Ohio, 154,105,000 bushels; Indiana, 190,431,000; Illinois, 302,634,000; Minnesota, 115,050,000; Iowa, 441,660,000; Missouri, 211,898,000; South Dakota, 100,800,000; Nebraska, 250,988,000; Kansas, 151,038,000; Kentucky, 96,624,000; Texas, 172,250,000.

Production of other crops, as shown by the preliminary estimates, follows:

Buckwheat, 14,321,000 bushels, compared with 15,532,000 bushels forecast last month and 16,301,000 bushels produced last year.

Potatoes, 421,252,000 bushels, compared with 414,986,000 bushels last month and 357,901,000 last year.

Sweet potatoes, 105,678,000 bushels, compared with 103,779,000 last month and 103,579,000 last year.

Tobacco, 1,476,444,000 pounds, compared with 1,478,788,000 last month and 1,389,458,000 last year.

Flaxseed, 10,736,000 bushels, compared with 11,704,000 last month and 8,919,000 last year.

Apples, 236,187,000 bushels, compared with 227,978,000 last month and 147,457,000 last year.

Sugar beets, 8,812,000 tons, compared with 8,970,000 last month and 6,421,000 last year.

Peanuts, 37,499,000 bushels, compared with 39,217,000 last month and 32,263,000 last year.

Weight per measured bushel was announced as follows:

Wheat, 57.4 pounds, compared with 56.3 last year.

Oats, 33.1, compared with 31.1.

Barley, 46.0, compared with 45.2.

Bankers' Meeting In Crisfield

A meeting of the associated banks of Somerset, Worcester and Wicomico counties was held in Gibson's Hall, at Crisfield, last Friday and was represented by 125 bankers from the three counties.

The officers elected for the ensuing year were: President, W. E. Bratten, of Snow Hill; secretary, John T. Keas, of Berlin; treasurer, J. G. W. Perdue, of Delmar.

The following resolution was passed by a rising vote:

Whereas, our friend and co-laborer, Mr. Wm. B. Spiva, cashier of the Bank of Somerset and President of the Deal's Island Bank, has recently suffered a terrible loss in the death of his wife, and he, himself, has suffered greatly due to an automobile accident which occurred on August 2nd last; and therefore be it

Resolved, That this Association desires to express its heartfelt sympathy to Mr. Spiva in his recent bereavement as well as for his own affliction. We desire to extend to Mr. Spiva our wishes for his complete and speedy recovery. Second, We desire to extend to Mr. Spiva our congratulations upon this anniversary of the 31st year of his entry into the banking business with the hope that he may continue for many years to serve the institutions with which he is connected, and which he has served so loyally.

After the meeting the visitors were entertained at a banquet given by the banks of Crisfield.

HIS RIDE FAMOUS

Remarkable Feat of Freight of the Early Days.

Traversed Eight Hundred Miles, on Horseback, in Five Days and Thirteen Hours, a Record Never Since Equalled.

Alexander Majors, a pioneer freighter, whose determined foresight established Kansas City as the great trading post of the Southwest, and to whose memory the erection of a monument was suggested at the time of his death, Jan. 14, 1900, gave the following description of F. X. Aubrey's famous ride:

"One of the most remarkable feats ever accomplished was made by F. X. Aubrey, who traveled the distance of 800 miles, between Santa Fe, N. M., and Independence, Mo., in five days and thirteen hours. This ride, in my opinion, in one respect was the most remarkable one ever made by any man. The entire distance was ridden without stopping to rest, and having a change of horses only once in every one hundred or two hundred miles. He kept a led horse by his side most of the time, so that when the one he was riding gave out entirely, he changed the saddle to the extra horse, left the horse he had been riding and went on again at full speed.

"At the time he made this ride, in much of the territory he passed through he was liable to meet hostile Indians, so that his adventure was daring in more ways than one. In the first place, the man who attempted to ride 800 miles in the time he did took his life in his hands. There is perhaps not one man in a million who could have lived to finish such a journey.

"Aubrey was a Canadian Frenchman, of low stature, short limbs, built like a jackscrew, and was in the very zenith of his manhood, full of pluck and daring.

"It was said he made this ride upon a bet of $1,000 that he could cover the distance in eight days.

"One year previous to this, in 1852, he made a bet he could do the same distance in ten days. The result was he traveled it in a little over eight days, hence his bet he could make the ride in 1853 in eight days, the result of that trip showing he consumed little more than half that time.

"I was well acquainted and did considerable business with Aubrey during his years of freighting. I met him when he was making his famous ride at a point on the Santa Fe road called Rabbit Ear. He passed my train at a full gallop without asking a single question as to the danger of Indians ahead of him.

"After his business between St. Louis and Santa Fe ceased, his love for adventure and his daring enterprise prompted him to make a trip from New Mexico to California with sheep, which he disposed of at good prices, and returned to New Mexico.

"Immediately upon his return he met a friend, a Major Weightman of the United States army, who was a great admirer of his pluck and daring. Weightman was at that time editor of a small paper called the Santa Fe Herald. At their meeting, as was the custom of the time, they called for drinks. Their glasses were filled and they were ready to drink, when Aubrey asked Weightman why he had published a damned lie about his trip to California. Instead of taking his drink, Weightman tossed the contents of his glass in Aubrey's face. Aubrey made a motion to draw his pistol and shoot, when Weightman, knowing the danger, drew his knife and stabbed Aubrey through the heart, from which blow he dropped dead upon the floor.

"The whole affair was enacted in one or two seconds. From the time they started to take a friendly drink till Aubrey was lying dead on the floor less time elapsed than it takes to tell the story."

Not Enough Time.

Sir Thomas Lipton told at a New York luncheon a story about a profiteer.

"A profiteer," he said, "bought a magnificent steam yacht and went yachting in the Mediterranean. Off the Spanish coast the yacht hit a rock and sank. The profiteer had a very narrow escape from drowning.

"Yes," he said afterward, "I had a narrow escape. I thought I was done for. However, some Spanish fishermen rescued me at last, and I was put ashore at Alicante."

"Tradition has it," said the profiteer's companion that when a man is struggling hopelessly in the water for his life he remembers every single evil deed he ever committed. Was this so in your case?"

"Well, not altogether," said the profiteer. "You see, I was only struggling about eleven hours."

Wintering Geranium Plants.

Take an old plant out of the border in the autumn before frost has injured it. Do this on a dry day. Shake all the earth from the roots, and suspend plant, head down, in a cellar or dark room, where it will not freeze. It will become yellow and sickly, but when potted about the end of May and exposed to gentle warmth will recover and grow well.

Health and Travel.

"Would you advise me to travel for my health?"

"No," replied the doctor. "A man wants to be in first-class physical condition before he takes on the worries of travel nowadays."

WITHOUT PROCESS OF LAW

Cowboy Quickly Settled Matter in Dispute, and No One Appealed From the Decision.

For some time after the opening to regular passenger service, the Central Union Pacific railroad's subordinate departments were rather crude. The sleeping cars were comfortable, but there were no dining cars, and the facilities at the "restaurant" stations were decidedly primitive.

When the eastbound train arrived at Cheyenne one morning, the passengers in the sleeper, all but one small group, responded promptly to the summons, "Thirty minutes for breakfast!" They passed into the large tent which was equipped as a dining room; long planks on rather high "horses" covered with white "domestic" for tables, and single planks on smaller "horses" for benches at the sides. But the food was excellent, varied, bountiful, and admirably cooked, while the flapjacks and maple syrup were delicious.

The one group that had not left the sleeper consisted of Colonel Templeton, his young wife, and their six-months-old baby. When all who intended to take breakfast were seated and had served themselves or been served, the colonel reached over and took a milk jug, from which he filled the baby's mug and proffered to the proprietor a dollar, the price of a full meal.

The proprietor refused the money and with needless emphasis said: "You ken eat all you want, but yer can't take nothing away!" "But I've eaten nothing and am taking only a cup of milk for my baby."

While the proprietor was emphasizing his indifference to the baby's needs, there was a commotion on the side of the table toward the exit and presently a typical cowboy swung himself over and drawing his gun, marched up to the proprietor and pointing the muzzle of the pistol at his face, said, "Let the baby have his milk!"

The proprietor did not hesitate, but said to the colonel, "All right, go on!" Then the colonel extended the dollar bill, whereupon the cowboy swung upon him and shouted, "Are you goin' to give a dollar for a cup of milk? Get outen here!" The colonel got, nor did the proprietor offer to detain him. The crowd cheered, while the cowboy returned and ordered a plate of fresh flapjacks.—Exchange.

"Life" for Song Leader.

Aroused to enthusiasm by the good work he had done for them the inmates of the county workhouse at New Castle, Delaware, requested the warden to give Emerson Stone, song leader of the Wilmington Community service, a life sentence in the institution.

"Warden, keep that guy!" called out one of the prisoners when Mr. Stone was about to leave after conducting a "sing" in the workhouse recently. "Give him life. He's too good to get away from this place. We want him all the time."

Mr. Stone, formerly a cowboy in Montana, arranged with the warden for weekly sings in the workhouse, with special Sunday song services in addition, and he is considering the organization of glee clubs and a band among the inmates.

"I was certainly delighted with the music those men made," said Stone to the warden after the first entertainment. "There is no reason why we could not organize at the workhouse with such material, a really fine glee club. We did that out in Montana, where we have an honor system for penal institutions admirably worked out."

Mounting a Print Without Buckling.

How many times have you pasted down a paper or mounted a print to find that when it dried it had buckled disappointingly? The Scientific American gives the following instructions as to how to avoid this difficulty:

Keep the mount flat and with a small wad of cotton wetted in clean water, slightly dampen the approximate area to be covered by the print. Cover the back of the print with paste—preferably arabol—smooth and thin. Apply the print to the mount, and with aid of a paper blotter and a small roller smooth the print from its center outward. No paste will appear outside the limits of the print; any dampness exceeding these limits will evaporate. Any paper shreds left by the blotter, etc., may be wiped clean from the print's surface with the same damp wad of cotton.

Testing Strength of Concrete.

As the strength of a concrete mixture is much affected by the amount of water contained, the novel apparatus of the United States bureau of standards is designed to give an accurate test of the fluidity of flow. A circular table-top mounted on a plunger is raised and dropped half an inch by a cam on the shaft of a hand-crank. A sample of the mixture, molded into a truncated cone 6 inches tall and 8 to 12 inches in diameter, is placed in the center of the table, and the crank is given 15 revolutions. The average diameter to which the sample is spread out is divided by the original diameter and multiplied by 100. The result is the flowability number—150 indicating a strong material for bricks, and 225 one suitable for reinforced concrete.

Matter of Taste.

Overheard at "The Mikado."

He—I don't think much of this show. It isn't as good as "Listen, Lester."

She—But it's not the same kind of show.

He—I know it. But it hasn't any catchy tunes.

FLUES IN HISTORY

Evolution of the Chimney From the Middle Ages.

Not Until the Sixteenth Century Was There Anything Like the Modern Contrivance for Leading Smoke From Buildings.

A decision arrived at in the rebuilding of the crown lands properties in Regent street, London, to eliminate wholly chimneys from the new buildings, marks a new stage in the evolution of flues and smokestacks. It is the modern application of central heating and hot-water pipes which has done this thing. But we are not to suppose that this new departure will rid London, to eliminate wholly chimneys and her array of tin crows and ugly "tail-boys," those desperate contrivances for curing chimneys which smoke internally and which confer upon urban skylines, under certain lights, a fantastic Dantesque appearance. Fires and coal smoke will survive for many a long year; particularly in the small domestic house, says a London letter to the Christian Science Monitor.

The history of chimneys is interesting. Not until the sixteenth century did they come into general use. Before then, smoke was allowed to escape through a hole in the roof, just as it had done in those remote times when the ancient Britons inhabited their rude stone beehive huts. It is true that the hole in the course of the centuries had progressed from the original simple orifice and had become an architectural feature and an actual adornment to the roof, for, just as the untutored savage had built his domestic fire on the floor of his hut, so did the nobles and the great personages of medieval times have their fires lighted on an open hearth in the midst of their baronial halls.

From these hearths the smoke ascended into the timbered roof of the hall and escaped by what was essentially a hole in the roof, even though it were disguised as that ancient and picturesque feature, the "louvre." Such ancient baron's halls as that at Penshurst survive, to show us alike the hearth and the louvered roof opening; and we have at Stanton Harcourt, in Oxfordshire, a fourteenth century kitchen with an existing roof of this nature. It has for centuries past been disused, but it yet remains in its primal condition. Indeed, so conservative were some of our colleges that they long continued the use of the open hearth, instead of the fireplace with flue and chimney, when private persons had wholly forgotten such antiquities. At Westminster school this ancient usage was maintained until the middle of the nineteenth century; until, that is to say, about 70 years ago.

This practice was easy enough in buildings of no more than one story; but not possible in those of more than one floor. Hence in ancient castle-keeps and structures of that nature, we find early fireplaces at the side of the apartments. For instance, in the Norman keep of Castle Hedingham, the great first-floor fireplace of that period is seen, with a wide flue gradually diminishing to an outlet in the side wall.

Asking Too Much of Him.

In trying to give Donald the proper early training, his mother has always insisted that he should eat everything that was on his plate.

One day, when Donald had reached the important age of 5 years, he accompanied his father and mother to a restaurant. They were ushered to a table and a neat waitress dressed all in white immediately filled the water glasses in front of each member of the family and took their orders.

The place was crowded and the service was slow, consequently the waitress made several visits to the table and filled up the glasses of water. Just before the dinner was served she filled Donald's glass, which was entirely empty. Donald, after two or three tries, drank the water, and then remarked: "If she fills it up again I won't drink it."

Looking to Brazil for Cotton.

Recent notices from London state that an important British mission will soon visit Brazil to study the districts where cotton is planted, and to recommend the formation of British companies for the purpose of stimulating there the development of the cotton industry. Besides studying the soil and the general conditions for planting, the mission will investigate the means of transportation in the cotton zone. Since the beginning of the current year, British purchasers of cotton have acquired in the different world markets £200,000,000 of the fiber, £124,000,000 from the United States and but £4,000,000 from Brazil. It is stated that there are fine prospects for great expansion in the cotton business between Brazil and Great Britain.

The Wrong Pencil.

Mrs. A., aged sixty, was very proud and haughty. Her hair was a beautiful snow white color, but her eyebrows were usually penciled quite black.

On one occasion she was attending a fashionable reception. She had been there some time when her daughter came in. "Looking at her mother, the daughter said, 'Oh, mother, how you look—you have blue eyebrows.'"

Some one had dropped a blue pencil in the drawer where she kept her black eyebrow pencil and, in a hurry, she had used the blue one.

All Nash Models Are Now Equipped With Cord Tires

The ability of the big Nash organization to offer unusual values is again indicated by the adoption of cord tires as standard equipment on all Nash models, both open and closed.

This extra value is made possible only because of efficient factory methods and volume production, which result in unusually low manufacturing overhead.

Cord tires insure extra mileage, dependable service and added satisfaction and are in keeping with the high standard of every other detail embodied in the building of Nash Passenger Cars.

A Love Set

By FREDERICK HART

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Now what do you think of that?" asked Mrs. Maria Johnson, regarding the athletic set-up figure of their summer boarder as he walked across the lawn in front of the comfortable old farm house. "The young man's taking Carrie out to teach her to play tennis."

Mr. Johnson looked up from the farm catalogue he was perusing and grunted, which was as near as he ever came to making a direct reply to any question of his wife's. Undiscouraged, she continued:

"Tain't right, in my mind, for him to fill the girl's head with a lot o' high-falutin' city nonsense. Tennis! Why, the girl didn't know nothin' at all about it, an' first thing you know she'll be settin' herself up like a regular debutant like we read about in the papers. Why don't you say somethin', Jobiah?" This last to her spouse, exasperated at his apparent lack of attention.

Thus admonished, Mr. Jobiah Johnson put down the catalogue with a regretful sigh and betook himself to speech.

"I don't see 's it's goin' to do her any harm to get a little knowledge o' a game like tennis," he began. "Slides, that there boarder of ours 's a real likable young feller. You let them young 'uns alone, Maria; 'tain't no harm goin' to come out o' our Mary playin' with him. You jest let 'em alone."

Mrs. Johnson could think of no adequate reply, so she contented herself with a sniff, which expressed a world of doubt of the correctness of her husband's judgment. But a glance at the a remarkable aptitude for the game, and Edgar soon found himself regretting that there was no regular court for them to play on. An idea suddenly presented itself to him.

"Mary," he said, "why don't you get your mother to let you come over to the Country club with me some afternoon and practice? You are good enough now to play a regular game, but we have no court here, and I want you to have the experience of playing with the net and lines. What do you say?"

"Oh, I'm afraid mother never would let me go. She—doesn't want me to be with you so much."

A blush and averted eyes accompanied these last words.

Edgar's heart leaped. In her admission that her mother did not approve of their companionship he found an indication that Mary herself did not altogether disapprove. He pressed his point.

"Perhaps your father would drive us over," he suggested. "It's not very far, and surely he's as good a chaperon as one could find. Do ask him tonight and see what he thinks."

Mary waited till after dinner and then approached her father on the subject. What she said and what he said were never known, but bright and early the next morning the buggy was at the door, and a very excited Mary and a secretly thrilled Edgar sat demurely beside Mr. Jobiah Johnson as they started for the Country club.

On the courts Mary blossomed out into a really brilliant player. The lines bothered her at first, but she soon became accustomed to them. "You're a natural player, Mary," said Edgar. "You play as though you were born with a racket in your hand. Now we'll practice for another half hour, and then have lunch; and after lunch I'm going to play a full set with you."

During lunch Mr. Johnson announced that he thought he would go down to the village to buy a little "truck for your man," as he put it. Mary looked surprised, but Edgar was secretly delighted. Mr. Johnson departed, promising to return early.

The set began, Edgar, of course, had no difficulty in winning game after game, and soon the score became five-love in his favor. As they passed each other to change courts for the next game Mary said defiantly, "I'm going to beat you this game—and you can't take a love set from me."

"We'll see about that," laughed Edgar, and sent the first ball whistling into court. Mary returned it, and there was a fierce but brief rally. The point went to Edgar. He went back to serve again.

Mary failed to return this ball, and the score was thirty-love. In the right-hand court Edgar managed to take the next point, too. Mary went back for her last chance to save the set. Edgar's serve was straight and swift, but she returned it—a high lob that fell well back in Edgar's court. He bent far back and swung his racket; there was a white streak through the air and the ball struck the ground close to the back line. Edgar thought that it was out, and walked to the other court to serve again, but Mary came toward him.

"That shot was in," she said in a faltering voice. "That's game—and set." Edgar approached the net, and as she came up to him he held out his arms. "Yes," he said. "That's game and set—a love set, Mary. Do you know what that means?"

With a little sigh she rested her brown head on his shoulder.

"Yes, Edgar," she whispered. "It means—I love you."

"CLASSES" IN PORTO RICO

American Chief of the Insular Police on Island Identifies Them by Shape of Their Feet.

The American chief of the insular police on the island of Porto Rico divides the people into four categories for the purpose of identification, according to the shape of their feet. The minority, mostly town dwellers, wear shoes. Of the great mass of countrymen, those with broad, flat feet live in the cane lands around the coast. The coffee men have over developed big toes, because they use them in climbing the steep hillsides from bush to bush. In the tobacco districts, according to Harry A. Franck, writing in the Century, where the planting is done with the feet, they are short and stubby.

Despite the ruggedness of the island it is easy to travel about it, as there are hundreds of miles of excellent railroads covering Porto Rico with a network of quick transit that reaches all points. A railroad encircles the western two-thirds of the island, with trains by night as well as by day. It is doubtful if there is any state in the Union that can rival this detached bit in extent of roads, and there is none that can rival it in the scenic splendor that so generally flanks them.

The Whole Show.

Just as the train was about to start a very stout man struggled into a carriage and sank into a seat, breathing heavily.

A small boy who sat opposite appeared to be fascinated. His ardent gaze eventually began to annoy the fat man who demanded angrily: "What are you staring at me for?" "Please, sir," replied the lad, "there's nowhere else to look."

Fitted For It.

"I have a friend who is very anxious to be a baseball player. He is a strong, athletic fellow, who stands six feet in his stockings."

"Then why doesn't he join the White Sox?"

Mary Returned It.

TUESDAY MORNING, NOV. 16, 1920

The coasting season began early this year with the Republican landslide of November 2nd.

If fuel is scarce this winter the price of coal will keep a lot of people feeling pretty hot.

This election was called an avalanche, but it violated all the speed regulations and traffic rules of the avalanche law.

The "back to the farm" movement so far is mostly exemplified by the country boys who turn their backs on the farm.

The Bible tells about beating swords into plowshares but the populace seem more inclined to beat them into jazz band instruments.

It is claimed that people don't buy on the installment plan any longer as it doesn't enable them to get rid of their money fast enough.

A lot of furnaces they put in nowadays won't heat a dwelling, but they require such incessant shaking that the householder keeps warm.

Paper producers can't afford to reduce prices any further. Just what the sugar speculators said when they were getting 25 cents a pound.

It was reported a few days previous to election that the pendulum was swinging toward Cox. Must have swung hard enough to hit him an awful clip.

The long time between drinks is being experienced by a lot of people who are now lying in the cemetery as the result of wood alcohol concoctions.

The United States claims to be a healthy country, but you would not know it judging by the amount of whiskey being prescribed for sick people.

If the president-elect keeps his promises the inauguration parade will be completed by a long procession of discharged office holders walking home.

In view of the election results the politicians will probably respond with great promptness hereafter when invited to address the ladies sewing society.

BOOSTING YOUR TOWN

People who travel a good deal say that there are a good many men who seem to make it their business to boom their home towns with all the people they talk with on the way. They get into conversation in pullman smoking rooms and hotel lobbies and they soon begin to tell these chance acquaintances about the beauties of their home town. They ask what people's business is and then suggest what good chances for those lines of business could be found in their communities.

One may laugh at the persistence these fellows show, but one can't help admiring it. They may waste a good deal of breath. They may talk to a hundred men before they find one who would have the least idea of changing his residence or moving to the place they suggest.

At the same time when people are filled with that spirit you begin to see why some towns go ahead. A town that has even a dozen men travelling around who use spare moments in publishing abroad the advantages of that community is going to make an impression. Men who have that determination to push their towns ahead are going to succeed in doing so.

A town grows by its reputation. A small town with a lot of active and ardent boosters stands a better chance of growth than a large one which is simply satisfied and whose people never make any effort to build it up.

People of Princess Anne do you want your home town to grow? Then talk it up. Speak about it when you see your friends and relatives from other sections and States. Don't be afraid to brag about it a little. It is worth it. If you make it a continuous policy to do this it will bring new people here and it will create an impression that it is a live town of enthusiastic hustlers.

CAN'T KEEP IT DOWN

You can't keep a good man down, says the old phrase. No more can you keep a good country down. Many business men have been talking in a rather blue way, seeing certain immediate difficulties in the way of prosperity.

The American temperament does not trifle with the problems it meets. Its buoyant enthusiasm, its unbounded energy goes to work whenever difficulties present themselves and it thinks out ways to meet these obstacles and remove them.

So it will be with all the problems that confront the United States at this moment. Inflated credits, high prices, class feeling, social unrest, all these obstacles have to be faced and conquered. The same spirit that cut down the forests and built railroads and laughed at all impediments will not be daunted by the economic and civic problems of these times.

THE WORCESTER SAVINGS PLAN

What is called the "Worcester Savings Plan" of encouraging thrift among wage earners was presented to the recent convention of the American Bankers Association at Washington, as a scheme that might well be adopted all over the country.

This plan has been tried out for a year at Worcester, Mass. By consent of factory employees, as a result of a campaign conducted by savings bank officials in the factories, the workmen consent to have a regular portion of their wages deducted and put on deposit to their credit in some local savings bank.

There are now 5000 operators who are co-operating in this plan. It greatly increases deposits in the banks. It creates a fund out of which houses can be built and which can be loaned to assist manufacturing and farm operations in the neighborhood. Such a plan should be of great benefit to any community where it is energetically pushed.

ELECTION OVER

Business men always used to dread presidential year as it used to be considered that political discussion interfered with business. Relief is felt when an election is over because people know then what they can depend upon and can go ahead and make plans.

The differences that separate the two leading parties do not go so deep as some people think. The aims of the two parties are much alike, the differences arising over questions of the best policies to be pursued to attain those ends.

A better prosperity can be attained only by a union of all elements in behalf of efficient government and business expansion.

For the next few years the people may well forget that they are Republicans or Democrats and think of themselves merely as Americans anxious to work unitedly for community progress.

Farm Bookkeeping

Farmers, as a rule, are highly individualistic in their methods and farm business conditions vary widely. Accordingly, ready-made systems of farm accounts seldom bring out all the facts that the farmer ought to know. Systems must be developed to fit each man's requirements, and efforts to shape one's needs according to a prepared system not based primarily on these needs will almost inevitably result in failure. Write the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for Farmers' Bulletin 511, containing an outline of the principles of simple farm bookkeeping.

A Reliable Remedy For Colds And Croup

It would surprise you to know the number of people who use and recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Mrs. J. N. Rose, Verona, Pa., writes: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used by myself and husband for a number of years for coughs and colds. I also gave it to my little daughter three and a half years of age when she had croup last winter. It broke up the attack at once. I have recommended this remedy to many of my friends and neighbors who have also used it with good results."

Some Princess Anne People Have Learned That Neglect Is Dangerous

The slightest symptom of kidney trouble is far too serious to be overlooked. It's the small, neglected troubles that so often lead to serious kidney ailments. That pain in the "small" of your back; that urinary irregularity; those headaches and dizzy spells; that weak, weary, wornout feeling; may be nature's warning of kidney weakness. Why risk your life by neglecting these symptoms? Reach the cause of the trouble while there yet is time—begin treating your kidneys at once with a tried and proven kidney remedy. No need to experiment—Doan's Kidney Pills have been successfully used in thousands of cases of kidney trouble for over 50 years. Doan's Kidney Pills are used and recommended throughout the civilized world. Ask your neighbor! Endorsed at home. Read Princess Anne testimony.

Mrs. C. A. Young, Beechwood street, says: "I was in a bad way from a run-down condition of my kidneys. My hands and ankles were swollen and there were puffy sacs under my eyes. I was subject to dizzy spells and when I stooped over sharp pains caught me in the small of my back. I simply felt miserable. After using one box of Doan's Kidney Pills I was rid of all symptoms of kidney trouble."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mrs. Young had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Colored—James Turner, 35, and Lovie King, 18, both of Somerset county; Luther H. Matthews, 24, of Chalybette, Va., and Helen Smith, 19, of Crisfield.

State Loses Case

At Washington last week the United States Supreme Court decided that mail drivers who use automobiles and other motor vehicles on Maryland roads are not required to take out licenses.

The case was a test one and centered on charges against William E. Johnson, a mail driver in Frederick county, who declined to take out a license. State Motor Vehicle Commissioner Baughman took the case before the federal courts. The point at issue was whether the state had a right to require drivers of government-owned vehicles to obtain licenses from the state authorities. The government maintained that such a requirement was an "invasion of the constitutional freedom of federal operations from state control."

Serious Results From Colds

Colds not only cause a tremendous financial loss but are also a serious injury to every one who contracts them as they lower the vitality and prepare the system for the more serious diseases. It is not at all unusual for people who have serious lung trouble to say "I had a hard cold last winter." Why not take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and cure your cold while you can. (Advertisement)

LANKFORD'S DEPARTMENT STORE

Forced Sale —ON— Ladies' Ready-to-Wear Clothing

MILD WEATHER, with a general apprehension of a decline in all kinds of Merchandise, shows to the retail trade that it is time to set up and take their medicine. We are in it with hundreds of others, and while we hate the dose just as bad as the others, we are game and will, right here, in the opening of the winter season, sell our entire line of Ladies', Misses and Children's Suits, Coats, Wraps, Furs, Etc., at prices that we will guarantee to be below the lowest. Can you beat it? Ask your neighbors or your own experience if we are not lower in prices for the same goods at any time. Now we go still better and offer to match prices with any one on the Shore. We are not waiting to be forced down, but are here with the Goods and Price while they last at surprising figures.

Sale Opens Tuesday, Nov. 9th

U. B. JUDGE Will Conduct the Sale

Our ONE PRICE POLICY for years is still the same, but that price will be very much lowered to all on the start. We could spread a lot of printer's ink and give you rows of figures, but you will HAVE TO SEE TO BE CONVINCED.

IN WHITE HOUSE

Biographical Data Concerning Chief Executives.

Most of the Men Honored With Highest Position Were Emphatically "of the People"—Virginia Leads in Number.

The following composite record of facts about Presidents may have interest, remarks a writer in the New York Evening Press:

Of the twenty-seven Presidents of the United States fifteen were of English ancestry, six of Scotch-Irish lineage, three of Scotch, two of Dutch and one Welsh.

In their early lives fourteen were lawyers, five were teachers, three were professional soldiers. Fillmore and Johnson were tailors, Roosevelt was a public official and Abraham Lincoln a farm hand.

In the time of their elections many of them had changed their vocations—at that time nineteen were lawyers, three statesmen, two soldiers, one a farmer, one a planter, one a surveyor and four were Presidents by succession.

That most of our Presidents spent their childhood days on farms and plantations is proved by the fact that of their fathers six were planters and nine were farmers. The other twelve fathers were: Three clergymen, three merchants, two lawyers, one statesman, one iron manufacturer, one sexton and constable and one tanner.

Harvard and William and Mary rank highest as alma maters of Presidents, with three each. Princeton graduated two; West Point, Miami, Union, Williams, Kenyon, Dickinson, Bowdoin, Hampton-Sidney, Yale and the University of North Carolina one each. Nine of the Presidents were not college graduates.

Seven Presidents-to-be first saw the light of day in Virginia, six in Ohio, two in Massachusetts, three in North Carolina, one each in Vermont, New Hampshire, Kentucky and New Jersey. Three Presidents were born in New York city.

When elected, however, five were legal residents of Virginia, five of Ohio, four of New York, three of Tennessee, two of Massachusetts, and Indiana, Illinois, Louisiana, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New Hampshire each sent one President to Washington.

Six Presidents married widows, James Buchanan was the only bachelor who served as President, while President Wilson is the only one who married twice.

William H. Harrison had the largest family, six sons and four daughters. Hayes came next with seven sons and one daughter. The total number of children of the twenty-seven Presidents of the United States is sixty sons and forty-five daughters. Only six Presidents were childless.

Eight Episcopallians served as President, seven Presbyterians, four Unitarians, two members of the Dutch Reformed and one Disciple and one liberal.

The Republican party elected fourteen of its candidates to the presidential chair, the Democrats eight, while the Whigs elected three and the Federalist party two. Ten of the Presidents served more than four years. William Henry Harrison's service was shortest, as he had been in office only one month at the time of his death. Only five Presidents have served two full terms, four of them being among the first seven Presidents elected. John Adams lived the longest of all the Presidents, dying at ninety. Garfield died youngest, at forty-nine. Washington was the only President inaugurated in New York, for the capital was established at Philadelphia during his first administration.

The sixth President, John Quincy Adams, was the son of the second President, John Adams, and the twenty-third President, Benjamin Harrison, was the grandson of the ninth President, William Henry Harrison. The Harrison family were direct descendants of the Indian Pocahontas and John Rolfe, the early Jamestown settler.

Eighteen of the Presidents were at some time during their lives soldiers in active service. Adams and Jefferson signed the Declaration of Independence and Washington and Madison signed the original Constitution of the United States.

250 Pictures a Second.

Designed particularly for making motion pictures of birds and animals, a new French camera, with a speed of 250 exposures a second, is remarkable for its ingenious method of keeping the moving object in the field of the lens, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The sighting arm is so connected to the pivoted mirror that they move together in geometrical relation, and an image in the center of the finder is always reflected into the center of the camera lens, regardless of its position. The flight of birds, and even of projectiles, may thus be recorded for further study, the object being in about the same position on each picture.

Cattle Not Milked in China.

Trade Commissioner C. C. Batchelder writes of the increasing use of canned milk among the Chinese upper and middle classes, and, to a limited extent, among the coolies, inasmuch as cattle are not milked in China proper. The price varies widely, usually from 30 to 40 copper cents per can (1188 copper cents to a silver dollar, a gold dollar equaling $1.37 in silver).

Sweaters Follow Devious Ways

SWEATERS—that worn must have a broad interpretation to cover all the varied garments that are called by it—are going by many paths this fall. But all lead in one direction and their goal is to furnish more warmth and less color, apparently, than their forerunners of the past season. There are so many variations of the principal models that every one can be suited. Slip-over and coat designs find about equal favor, both in short and fingertip lengths and in snug-fitting or loose adjustment. Some of the snug slip-over sweaters are only a little longer than a blouse. They are usually knitted with a band about the bottom and long enough to extend about six inches below the waistline where they turn jauntily upward in a narrow cuff.

Another short model appears in the surplice sweater and comes in the brighter colors. This is waist length also, open at the front with attached knitted belt extended so that it can be brought round the waist and tied at the back. Knitted or braided belts and sashes of the same wool as the sweater are the rule. Colors are quiet with the exception of some strong blues and greens and in many coat models no contrasting colors are introduced, but borders and bands are accomplished by varying the stitch in the knitting.

An attractive slip-over sweater is shown in the picture. Its neck and sleeves are unusual, the former having a square opening at the front and the latter deep-knitted flounces. The border at the bottom is of the same color as the sweater and so is the long knitted sash. This model fits snugly about the hips and is a trifle longer than its forerunners.

THIS IS SOME DICTIONARY

Arabic Affair Used by Scholars Is in 20 Volumes and Weighs About 100 Pounds.

The ponderous dictionaries of Europe, even the famous many-volumed etymological index of Larousse, which is the monumental work of all modern tongues, are more than surpassed, says the New York Sun, by the Arabic dictionaries of 500 years ago, which are still the great authority for students in that language.

The Arabic dictionary most used by scholars who are familiar with no other language is in 20 quarto volumes and weighs close to 100 pounds. There is a 50-pound ten-volume abridgment of it, presumably for use at home. This and virtually all the Arabic dictionaries were made in the time of the Harun-al-Rashid.

The Islamic empire is credited by Moslems with two great eras. The first was that of conquest, when the only history was written with the sword. Then came centuries of Mohammedan domination, when the Moslems peacefully held the empires they had conquered in Asia and in the Iberian peninsula. During these art and literature flourished and the Arabic dictionary was born. In Arabia the flower of this period was in the golden time of Caliph Harun-al-Rashid.

Each of the words that have been familiar in the daily life of the nomad Arabs for centuries has an enormous number of synonyms. The lion, for example, was feared by villagers and hunted not only for sport but as a matter of necessity. Therefore in the Arabic dictionary the lion has more than a hundred different names. The camel was the sole means of transportation across the thirsty deserts and is characterized in 122 different ways.

But above all, the horse and the sword were the two great stand-bys of the Arab. There are more than 200 words that convey ideas of "horse" and "sword." All other familiar words, such as tent, flock, herds, water, woman, sun and air, have long lists of synonyms that are interchangeable and in constant use. This affords some slight explanation why Arabic dictionaries are of so large size.

Arabic, so the Arabs say, was the language of the Babylonians, and it is also contended by them that it was the tongue which Abraham spoke.

Arctic Cold Misunderstood.

There is a great deal of misunderstanding relative to the cold of the Arctic regions. The absence or presence of water and altitude are important factors in determining temperature. As the altitude increases going North, the bite of the weather is lessened so that there is little or no inconvenience to be experienced from the cold.

Natural Thermometer.

It was a wonderful sapphire, so it is said, that led the celebrated Doctor Sorby to the discovery of the nature of the liquid sometimes found inclosed in the cavities of crystals.

The gem in question contained a tube-shaped cavity, a quarter of an inch long and an eighteenth of an inch in diameter, which was so regular in its bore that it served, by means of the liquid partially filling it, for a thermometer. The contained liquid half-filled the bore at 50 degrees F. and completely filled it at 80 degrees. A study of the rate of expansion of the liquid led to the conclusion that it must be carbonic acid.

SOOR STOMACH INDIGESTION

Thedford's Black-Draught Highly Recommended by a Tennessee Grocer for Troubles Resulting from Torpid Liver.

East Nashville, Tenn.—The efficiency of Thedford's Black-Draught, the genuine, herb, liver medicine, is vouched for by Mr. W. N. Parsons, a grocer of this city. "It is without doubt the best liver medicine, and I don't believe I could get along without it. I take it for sour stomach, headache, bad liver, indigestion, and all other troubles that are the result of a torpid liver.

"I have known and used it for years, and can and do highly recommend it to every one. I won't go to bed without it in the house. It will do all it claims to do. I can't say enough for it."

Many other men and women throughout the country have found Black-Draught just as Mr. Parsons describes—valuable in regulating the liver to its normal functions, and in cleansing the bowels of impurities.

Thedford's Black-Draught liver medicine is the original and only genuine. Accept no imitations or substitutes. Always ask for Thedford's. E. M.

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS IN PEACE TIME

About 12,000,000 boys and girls, composing nearly half the school population of the United States, are members of the Junior Red Cross, which is helping the children of Europe, while at the same time it is doing an important work here at home. Kaitlan Chetworf, who wears the engaging smile shown in this picture, is the son of an Indian guide and trapper. He is the youngest Junior living in the neighborhood of Juneau, Alaska—and he sends greetings to fellow Juniors of the United States.

Red-Blooded Men and Women Are Seldom Sick

WATCH YOUR BLOOD CONDITION

If You Look Pale, Feel Gloomy and Run-Down, Take Pepto-Mangan and Build Up

You see men and women who are never sick. They work hard, look robust, eat heartily and enjoy life. They have plenty of rich, red blood. That is why they are never ill.

People who try to get along with weak, impoverished blood always have a struggle. They go from one sickness to another. Children the same way.

If you keep your blood rich and red you'll enjoy full vigor. Disease has little chance to develop in healthy blood. As soon as you feel run-down take Pepto-Mangan for awhile. It will feed your blood with the ingredients needed to create a good supply of red corpuscles.

Pepto-Mangan is sold in both liquid and tablet form. Take either kind you prefer. Both have the same medicinal value. But be sure you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan—"Gude's." The full name, "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" should be on the package. Advertisement.

Estimates Furnished

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Notice is hereby given that the levy of the year 1920 for State and County Taxes has been made in Somerset county.

Pursuant to said levy the taxes are now in my hands for collection. A discount of three per cent. will be allowed on all county taxes paid on or before October 31st, 1920, and a discount of two per cent. if paid during November, 1920. No discount will be allowed on county taxes paid after November, 30th, 1920.

The law allowing discounts on State taxes has been abolished, therefore no discount will be allowed on State taxes.

The law provides that both County and State taxes must be paid in order to obtain the discount. State taxes bear interest from October 1st, 1920, at the rate of six per centum per annum. County taxes bear interest from January 1st, 1921, at the rate of six per centum per annum, and interest is charged for the full month from the first day of each month.

JUST MENTIONING HARD LUCK

Here Are a Few Instances on Record Which It Would Seem Hard to Beat.

There was a case described in the papers recently in which a man, hurrying to seek his bride who had failed to keep her appointment at the church, slipped, and a revolver which he had in his pocket went off. He was wounded, and to increase the injury the police summoned him for carrying arms without a license. And, of course, the wedding was interfered with.

Almost on a par was the case, which happened some time ago, of a little boy—of course, a naughty little boy—who was comfortably and happily engaged in stealing apples from a farmer's orchard. He was getting along very nicely, with pockets that were really bulging, when a cow strolled under the tree. The animal's appearance startled the boy; he slipped, and fell on the back of the cow.

The impact scared the cow, and it made straight for home with an exceedingly unwilling passenger clinging tightly to its back. The farmer happened to be at home to receive the cow, and, as the boy fell off his pockets emptied themselves of their store of apples. Let us draw a veil over the ensuing tragedy of the farmer and the naughty little apple stealer.

The scene was Hyde Park corner. A very well-dressed man, evidently hurrying to Victoria station, cut across the road. He slipped and fell. His bag strongly objected to this rough treatment, and promptly emptied itself of its week-end contents. The man was nearly run over; some of the things out of the bag were quite run over, and the only consolation the man got was the remark of a passing woman, who said that she admired his taste in pajamas!

And the last example of hard luck. It happened on the east coast. He was an enthusiastic fisherman. He had had a very successful day, and proudly exhibited his catch to a stranger. Then he got another bite. In his excitement he overbalanced. Fortunately the water wasn't deep. He touched bottom and came up with an enormous crab clinging viciously to his leg.

When he crawled out he found that the stranger had disappeared with his catch of fish, and that his fishing rod had gone for a trip to sea. But what really broke his heart was the action of a facetious pier attendant, who threatened to run him in for bathing without a proper costume!—From Answers, London.

Electrified "Chicken Factory."

The largest electric hatching plant in the world is located in southern California, near the little town of Artestia. It is said to be the first establishment of the kind that has fully and satisfactorily solved the problem of bringing chicks into the world on a wholesale scale by electricity.

The plant has an output capacity of 30,000 chicks a week, and it works full blast seven months in the year. A thermostat of special construction regulates the temperature of the incubators automatically and so reliably that the percentage of eggs hatched successfully is extraordinarily high.

There is no danger of fire; no loss of chicks from chilling or overheating—the brooders being electrically warmed; no lamps to be filled or adjusted no gas burner to go out and asphyxiate the downy birds. All that is necessary is to turn a switch and the machine attends to the rest of the business.

The electric mother hen does her work at a cost of 1 cent a chick. Even the coops are illuminated by electricity, getting the laying fowls on the job earlier in the French Art Loss by War.

One of the most interesting items in the latest inventory of the losses of France through the war is that which tells of the extent of the damage to her art treasures and historic monuments. The estimate for this loss, which has been obtained by the Paris information service of the Bankers' Trust company, is placed at over 125 million dollars.

This figure has been arrived at after an exhaustive examination of the ruins of historic monuments, statues, churches, museums and their contents. The irreparable nature of these losses is indicated by the sum of 600 million francs, which is set against "moral injury."

"This sum of 600 million," explains the official text, "is an approximation of the loss the French people have sustained by having lost forever works of peculiar value because of their beauty and historic associations."

Motor Alcohol From Molasses.

"Motor alcohol," a substitute for gasoline, made from molasses on the Hawaiian sugar plantations, which has been allowed to run to waste or burned for the recovery of potash, is a new automobile fuel which it is said gives more power, greater mileage, easier starting, and more freedom from carbon than gasoline. Hawaii has molasses enough available to produce 9,000,000 gallons of "motor alcohol"—enough for all the automobiles on the islands.

Music.

We love that most human of instruments, the violin, and also the flute, the trombone, the tenor, the alto horn, the ukulele, the player piano and the coloratura soprano, but of all the music that is dreamt of in your philosophy, Horatio, we are fondest of the shrill squeal of the profane.—Ohio State Journal.

THEIR DAY OF GLORY GONE

Writer Sees Pathos in Vehicles, Displaced by the Victorious Automobile, Meekly Awaiting Dissolution.

The garage stood in the heart of the city. That was not strange. A great many garages stand in the heart of a great many cities. What was strange was the building which stood opposite the garage. This was a tumble-down, rambling edifice, with a large and rambling back and front yard, and in the yards were old carriages.

I do not know if it was a junk shop or a repair shop, says a writer in the Christian Science Monitor. I do know that nowhere else could one see so many equipages of an ancient date. One might sit in one's car and buy gasoline and oil and while these commodities were being stored away one might examine at leisure that motley old fashioned crew huddled out in the yards.

There is a buggy—the kind of buggy that wheels softly down country lanes in the moonlight and stops easily as the driver alights to let down the bars. There is the remnant of what was once a smart, high-wheeled yellow dog cart, used to go bowling down the fashionable avenue in the fashionable hour. The hayrack—its bright blue worn by now—has carried many a wholesome load of fragrant hay in its day, with barefooted boys sprawling on the top of the load.

Look at yonder queer old contraption! It was a shoe wagon and the shoe dealer plodded along the rural districts fitting every one's feet with no trouble at all.

That decrepit vehicle was a hansom cab, and a very nobby one, too, in its day—quite a novelty in the community, no doubt, when it made its first appearance. Now it stands cheek by jowl with a three-wheeled dump cart, whose social standing was never anything but low.

What a queer old crowd they are—these outworn, outgrown vehicles of another day. They give up their iron and bolts to the junkman quite willingly, for the streets no longer tempt them to roll along their wide ways. No—another, newer, swifter method of transportation has come in—and the old wagons in the old yard tremble a little as a huge motor truck roars victoriously by. They tremble a little, but it is only that they have waited so long, standing out there in all weathers, on three wheels or two, with one shaft off and their paint in disrepair. They tremble a little, but wait meekly until some one shall come and wheel them away into oblivion.

Waste Paper.

Few of us realize the importance of saving waste paper. Today when the country is threatened with a wood and paper famine and our forests are disappearing so rapidly every effort should be made to save every scrap of paper. It is estimated that the saving of paper would make it possible to save over 1,000,000,000 feet of lumber each year. Waste paper, such as old magazines, books, all kinds of printed matter and paper books, takes the place of wood pulp and saves millions of trees. Such material is used for paper, making paper boxes, roofing and building boards and paper shipping containers of all kinds, which carry as much as 100 pounds. If every one would save the waste paper in his home it would not be necessary to use a single tree for such material. It would require more than 500,000,000 feet of lumber each year to make the paper shipping cases used throughout the country.—Boys' Life.

Hard to Understand.

Happiness is to be found in many places. A few years ago a very rich young man was a favorite in his clubs and in his social circle. He married a beautiful and accomplished girl. Then his father's business went to smash during the war. Nothing was left. The young couple moved to a small farm in New Jersey. He resigned from all of his clubs and they have not been seen by friends for three years until the other day. He was in town shopping. He met a friend and said: "I am just learning that life is worth while." His expression showed that he meant it. His friend went to the clubs that night and told the news. "I can't understand it," he said. "He looks and is happy. Why, his nails haven't been manicured for months!"—New York Correspondence Indianapolis Star.

Why Not Kill the Fire Bugs?

Elizabeth and her beau ran ten long squares to see the fire in Massachusetts avenue. Also, she stood around watching it for more than an hour with her feet "just killing" her.

She was sure this was one fire that she was interested in so the next day she read about it. As she finished the story she looked up and said: "Well, I can't say much for the board of health of Indianapolis."

Father stopped drinking his coffee long enough to ask: "What on earth has the board of health got to do with the fire?"

Elizabeth replied: "That is the second big fire in the last two weeks and I think that the board of health should be able to disinfect the lumber yards and kill those fire bugs."—Indianapolis News.

Fire Yield Much Turpentine.

Forty gallons of turpentine from a Douglas fir tree is not uncommon yield, according to men engaged in the industry. This branch of work is a new one in British Columbia, but the success attained by the company now engaged is such that many more similar undertakings are expected to arise. The trees are not injured, according to forestry experts.

Redemption of Doughnuts

By E. RAY BAKER

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Virginia, in her twentieth year, was an accomplished young lady, in addition to being the village belle. She played the violin, was an athletic young woman, and the histrionic ability she displayed in amateur theatricals made many a sage forecast a life of fame for her in the films.

Wayne was the only young man to be shown partiality in her distribution of favors. She treated all her suitors very sweetly, but to Wayne she gave her love, and it was certain that his financial or social standing had nothing to do with his being honored.

Wayne was an orphan, but his uncle had adopted him and left him all his property when death stepped in a few years back. The property consisted of a piece of scrub land on the village outskirts and a ramshackle house on it. Wayne, at twenty-three, dwelt in the shack and clerked in Hannaford's grocery.

The death of Virginia's father put her in the orphan class with Wayne. When the probate court got through Virginia had the family roof over her and that was all. In order to make a living she opened a bakeshop in the front of the house. And that was where the trouble started.

Wayne objected to the bakeshop. He had higher ideas for his fiancée. Why couldn't she teach music or become a gymnasium instructor, or even go to California and get into the films? He wanted to know.

"Because none of those things appeal to me as a means of support," she retorted. "I like music and athletics and theatricals as a pastime, but for making money I prefer mixing dough."

The Haggard bakeshop did a good business, and the big, brown sugared and made him sleepy, so he dozed with an elbow on the window sill.

When he awoke from his nap it was night and he felt a sharp gnawing in his stomach. He looked at his watch and saw it was 11 o'clock. To his surprise the car was not in motion. He could hear voices outside and saw two men whom he remembered as fellow passengers, pacing beside the track, cigars glowing in their mouths. Wayne was alone in the car except for a woman who sat some distance away with her back toward him.

Wayne roused himself, went outside and accosted the two men.

"Have we gone past Carlton?"

"I should say not," one of them answered. "We aren't half way there yet. We haven't any power. The third rail's absolutely dead—has been for five hours. The conductor's gone on a ten-mile hike to the nearest telephone. Believe me, this is a dismal place to be dumped. Right out in the wilderness fifteen miles from any road. We're out of luck."

Wayne growled. Next to grabbing money he liked eating, and his stomach had been out of a job eight hours.

"I'm starving," he complained. "Isn't there a chance for a feed?"

The two men smiled.

"There's just one way I know of," said one of them. "There's a lady in the car who has some provisions with her, and she'll feed us up. I've seen her before on this run. She has a store in Rose City and another at Carlton. Perhaps if you'd ask her she'd give you some doughnuts."

Wayne winced and tried to convince himself he wasn't hungry. Doughnuts! Not for 10 years had he eaten one.

He returned to the car and never looked at the lady in front of him. He resumed his place at the window and tried to sleep, but his stomach wouldn't let him. He pictured mentally a nice, large, brown, sweet doughnut with a hole in it, and his mouth watered.

"I'll not do it," he said determinedly, and shifted his position. He closed his eyes, but the action had no effect on his stomach.

"I'm starving," he groaned. "Shoe leather would taste good."

Wayne heard a noise at his side and turned to see the lady passenger holding out a cardboard box in which reposed a half dozen tempting-looking doughnuts.

"Have one," she said with a dazzling smile. She could not have been more than thirty-five.

Wayne still tried to resist temptation.

"No—no, thanks," he said shortly, but she smiled again and held out the box, and he surrendered.

As he munched a doughnut he couldn't help feeling there was something familiar about the handsome passenger. The light had been dim, and except when her radiant smile re-enforced it, he had not got a good look at her. He had eaten two doughnuts, but still he was hungry, and he left his seat and walked to the one in which sat the lady.

"Pardon me," he said, lifting his hat. "Could I presume further on your charity?"

She made room for him beside her and held out the doughnuts.

"Certainly—Wayne," she said. "Won't you sit down and talk it over?"

And so they made up after 15 years—Virginia Haggard and Wayne Wilson.

Doughnuts were the reason.

TRIED BEYOND HIS PATIENCE

Long-Suffering Man Reasoned That He Simply Had to Draw the Line Somewhere.

"Could I Presume Further on Your Charity?"

doughnuts made there proved his principal advertising medium. People came from all over the country to buy Virginia's doughnuts.

The greater the prosperity of the bakeshop business the stronger became Wayne's protests.

"Why don't you get into something else yourself?" she flared up at him one night when he was a caller. "You don't seem to be doing so much. Clerking in a grocery isn't much ahead of mixing dough."

It was Wayne's turn to flare.

"All right; all right. Have it your way. I'll show you," he grated, and he seized his hat and walked to the door.

Virginia protested, but he opened the door and strode out into the night and out of Virginia's life.

The next morning an outbound interurban car carried among its passengers one Wayne Wilson with a dismal looking suitcase in his hand and a fire in his heart. He flung all other thoughts but success to the winds, and in ten years he was owner of a string of prosperous grocery stores in Portland. He had needed just some such taunt as the one Virginia hurled at him to make him get out and hustle.

Fifteen years after he left Carlton Wayne was a sordid money maker. The romance of his life was all but forgotten. A hardened bachelor of thirty-eight was Wayne Wilson—not a woman hater, because women did not play a sufficiently important part in his life to be hated.

Then he decided it was time to take a vacation and he traveled along the coast from Vancouver to Lower California. On his way back to Portland he decided to visit Carlton—not for any particular reason, but just to look things over and see if he knew anybody. If he gave Virginia a thought it was to vision her indistinctly, perhaps as the wife of Bud Jenkins or Jimmie Upton.

At Rose City he left the train and transferred to a cheap interurban car.

The ancient car rattled and groaned, and shook the ambition out of Wayne

Lawyer T— was being solicited for a donation to help bring a child welfare worker to his community. He refused rather brusquely. The woman who was soliciting was amazed. He had always been generous before this time. And because she was insistent he gave his reason for being otherwise now.

"Well, first you came to me for money to bring a specialist on food here. I gave and for almost a year after she was here I ate all sorts of miserable stuff, which my wife learned was healthy at those lectures. Next you brought an interior decorator here. After those talks she moved the furniture in all sorts of positions, changing it every day until I had stubbed every toe and skinned every shin I had. And now—well, I love my children too well to give to this new fund and have them experimented on."

The Eyes of the Mordella.

There is a beetle, which entomologists call the mordella, that is provided with enough eyes to outfit a company of ordinary animals. It possesses 25,000 little eyes, and it can see out of the back of its head.

Under a lens these multitudes of eyes are very beautiful. They give off gleaming prismatic colors. A microscopic examination reveals what looks like a section of honeycomb, and each of these seemingly unlimited number of eyes has a perfect lens system.

Probably next to the magnificent mordella beetle the ordinary common dragon fly ranks for its remarkable supply of eyes. This insect is said to have no less than 20,000 eyes.

The horselly, too, has eyes by the thousand, and its head is one mass of microscopic optics.

DR. DENNIS TRAVELING IN EGYPT

Will Leave Rome To Become Commercial Attache In London

As our former citizen, Dr. Alfred P. Dennis is so often inquired for it may be interesting to his friends in this vicinity to have some information of him.

Dr. Dennis left Princess Anne the latter part of February, 1919, to take the position of Commercial Attache to the American Embassy at Rome, Italy. He has been there ever since and, during this time, has done a great deal to promote trade between Italy and the United States. He has also traveled considerably in Italy and has written interesting articles for the leading magazines of the United States, giving accounts of the agricultural conditions of Italy, and of the need there of American methods and implements. He has made many friends among his fellow countrymen in Rome, also among the Italians, so that his stay in Italy has been pleasant and profitable. Recently, however, he has been appointed to fill the office of Commercial Attache in London, England. This is a position not to be refused, as it is one of promotion, increased salary and many advantages.

At present Dr. Dennis is taking a trip to Egypt. On his return he will go to London to make preparation for taking his family and in the near future will make his residence there. We express to him our sincere congratulations and best wishes for his continual success.

State School Officials Visit Somerset

On Tuesday and Wednesday last Mr. A. S. Cook, State Superintendent of Schools, and Mr. Samuel M. North, State High School Supervisor, made a visit to the high schools of Somerset county and included in their visit several of the elementary schools between Princess Anne and Crisfield.

This was Mr. Cook's introduction to the county and he was cordially welcomed by the county superintendent and teachers. Mr. North had been in the county a number of times before and his present trip was for the purpose of reviewing high school conditions and acquainting the principals and teachers with the requirements of the revised high school law.

On Wednesday these gentlemen, accompanied by the County Superintendent, visited the schools at Westover, Burnettsville, Marion and the Crisfield High School in the afternoon. At Marion Mr. North made an investigation, which satisfied him that the school was ready to be made a high school of the second or third group, and the matter will be finally determined after the meeting of the Board of Education on December 14th.

Upon the conclusion of their visit to Somerset Mr. Cook and Mr. North went to Pocomoke City.

Death Of Mrs. Mary E. Jones

Mrs. Mary E. Jones, wife of Mr. E. Frank Jones, died at her home on north Main street last Sunday morning about 11 o'clock, after an illness of four months of diabetes. She was 70 years old and had been in failing health for several years.

Mrs. Jones was born near Snow Hill, Worcester county, April 30th, 1850, and was a daughter of the late Robert H. Dryden, of Salisbury. Had she lived until January 10th, 1921, she would have been married 50 years.

She is survived by her husband, four daughters (Mrs. T. S. Horner, Mrs. G. N. Pusey, Misses Lula W. and Olivia A. Jones) and four sons (Messrs. Oscar F., Robert S., Omar J. and Elmer A. Jones, all of this county). She is also survived by 17 grandchildren and one brother, Mr. James R. Dryden, of Snow Hill.

Funeral services will be held this (Tuesday) afternoon at 3 o'clock at Manokin Presbyterian Church, conducted by the pastor, the Rev. W. L. Freund. Interment in the church cemetery.

Real Beer And Pretzels In Museum

Real beer has taken its place with the things that are extinct. Two bottles, one dark and the other light, with a plate of large pretzels, have been placed under a glass case and are on display at the Milwaukee Public Museum at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, preserved for the gaze of future generations.

People who claim that news travels fast should reflect on the time it takes the retailers to learn of wholesale price reductions.

It is recommended by an expert to drink more water. What else is there left for a thirsty population to do?

The kids ought to be interested in forestry as you make base ball bats out of trees.

AGRICULTURAL SHOW BIG SUCCESS

Court House Swamped With Farm And Household Products

The Fourth Annual Somerset County Agricultural Show which was held in the Court House Thursday, Friday and Saturday, was one of the largest ever held in the county, as it included products of the farm, home and schools from various communities in the county. It was well attended by farmers and their families from various sections.

The agricultural products were of very good quality and compared favorably with other shows held on the Shore. The apple display was one of the largest and best ever held in this section of the State. The display consisted of over one hundred plates and baskets of the leading varieties of apples in the county. Mr. F. E. Matthews had a large plate and basket display of apples which received very favorable comment.

The displays of white potatoes and sweet potatoes were large and of good quality. The corn, wheat, grass and seed exhibits were numerous, of good quality and compared favorably with the grain and grass exhibits of former shows.

The Boys' Agricultural Clubs had a large exhibit of corn and potatoes. The display of butter was pronounced by a representative of the University of Maryland as the best seen in the State this fall.

One of the features of the show was the large and attractive display of the Junior Home Makers' Clubs. The sewing exhibits of the club members were fine and included many dresses, aprons and caps of the finest quality. This exhibit, including canned products, jelly and preserves, gave the girls' clubs of the county a place with the leading counties of the State in the character of work being done in the girls' clubs in a number of the rural schools in the county. The fancy work and pantry products exhibited by the women were of good quality.

The Domestic Science and Manual Training Departments of the Washington High School had a very creditable display of cooking, canned products, jellies and wood working. The Marion, Quinton and Oriole schools had attractive displays of art work.

The Boys' and Girls' Clubs had a booth from which club members gave circulars concerning club work. The music from a Victrola loaned by W. O. Lankford & Son was much enjoyed.

An Appeal To Colored Citizens

The State of Maryland has done a very laudable thing in passing an ordinance for the construction of a bridge across the Manokin river at Princess Anne. The information is widely circulated through the pulpits, school rooms and other organizations that through the raising of $4,000 by the white and colored citizens of Somerset county this is to be known as a memorial bridge to the soldiers of the county in the World War. To accomplish this, each colored family is asked to contribute one dollar to the treasurer of each of their community organizations by Thanksgiving Day.

Prof. T. H. Kiah, as chairman of the committee of the colored citizens of Somerset county, wishes to urge the colored families to be prompt in their responses to this praiseworthy cause, and to show their interest in it as an expression of their appreciation for the heroic deeds of the noble boys who sacrificed all to defend the principles of our democracy.

Relative To The Sale Of Game

On account of the great number of inquiries which have been made relative to the sale of rabbits, birds, etc., we direct attention to the provisions of Chapter 520 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1920.

After providing the open season to be from the 10th of November to the first day of January in each year and forbidding hunting upon Sunday and when the ground is covered with snow and at night, the law goes on to provide as follows:

"And it shall be unlawful to sell, offer for sale, purchase, or offer to purchase or buy such named birds and animals at any time, whether same are caught or killed within the State of Maryland, or any other State, territory or country."

Now squirrels, rabbits, otter and muskrat and deer are certainly animals and the law forbids the purchase or sale of any of those animals at any time, in explicit language.

THE PROPOSED MEMORIAL BRIDGE OVER THE MANOKIN RIVER

An effort is being made this week to raise the necessary funds to build the Memorial Bridge to the soldiers of Somerset county who were in service during the World War. The bridge will be located where the State stone road crosses the Manokin at Princess Anne. In crossing the Manokin river the State will have to build a bridge and the desire is to raise enough money to pay for the additional part over and above what the State would do, thus making a memorial to the nine hundred men who went into the army from this county.

You will see by the above picture of the proposed bridge that it will have four columns built in monumental form, with two large lanterns on each of the columns at the top, and at the base of each column there are places for four tablets, making sixteen tablets in all, on which the names of all the soldiers will be placed. A dollar from each and every family in the county will be needed to pay for this memorial.

The Committee has been to the schools of the county and the plan is to have the children take to every house an envelope that has on it a picture of the bridge, the names of the executive committee and a place for the name of the contributor, and it is the desire that you have your dollar in the envelope when it is called for.

Some former residents of the county who have heard of the plan to build the Memorial Bridge are sending a contribution to the chairman of the Committee and, of course, it is highly appreciated.

The Committee in charge of the proposed memorial is: Hon. Joshua W. Miles, Judge Robert F. Duer, Major R. R. Norris, Captain S. P. Fuller and Mr. G. W. Maslin, chairman.

G. O. P. TO AID THE FARMERS

Provision For Credits To Be Asked At Coming Session

Congress will be called upon early in the coming session to provide adequate credit facilities to farmers, for it was pointed out last Wednesday by Republican leaders at Washington that agriculture is the biggest and most vital business in this country and farmers have been caught in a financial crisis.

A short while ago the farmers made frantic but futile appeals to the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of Currency for relief from the stringent regulations of credit in order to get funds to market the crops to advantage. When the Federal Reserve Board established its rules to restrict credit in an effort to cut down inflation and reduce the cost of living the farmers were hard hit, for it has been their custom to go to the banks and secure loans on crops just harvested or in the fields. The new rules blocked that courtesy, leaving the farmers in desperate plight for fertilizer, machinery and other farm needs.

It was estimated by experts that the drop in prices of farm products between July 1 and September 1 cost the farmers of the United States not less than $1,782,276,350.

Michael Somers Dead

Mr. Michael Somers died at his home near Jacksonville, this county, last Wednesday aged 55 years. Death was due to stomach trouble from which he had been a sufferer for several months.

Mr. Somers was a lifelong Democrat and was connected with the clerical force of the Comptroller's office when Dr. Gordon T. Atkinson was State Comptroller. In 1915 he was the Democratic candidate for Register of Wills but was defeated by a small majority, while the rest of ticket went down with heavy majorities. In 1919 he was nominated as the Democratic candidate for county commissioner, but retired from the ticket because of the condition of his health.

Funeral services were held at Immanuel Methodist Episcopal Church last Friday afternoon. Interment was at Mariners. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Annie Somers, and the following children: Dr. Grover Somers, of Marion; Miss Hazel Somers and Mr. Milton Somers, of Washington, D. C., and Mr. Irving Somers, of Crisfield. He also leaves the following brothers: Dr. J. F. Somers, Messrs. John, Charles, George and Bates Somers, all of this county.

M. E. South Pastors Appointed

The appointments were recently announced at the closing of the conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in session at Norfolk, Virginia. Among the assignments of pastors were: Allen, F. R. Holland, supply; Cambridge, J. B. Peters; Cambridge Circuit, O. L. Gillam; Pocomoke, H. L. Hastings; Salisbury, T. R. Reeves.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

President Says "Lessons Of The War Are Rapidly Healing"

President Wilson has issued his Thanksgiving proclamation setting aside Thursday, November 25th, for the usual observance. His proclamation is beautifully phrased and sets out the many reasons that Americans have for being unusually grateful to the Divine Providence. The text follows:

"The season approaches when it behooves us to turn from the distractions and preoccupations of our daily life, that we may contemplate the mercies which have been vouchsafed to us, and render heartfelt and unfeigned thanks unto God for His manifold goodness."

"This is an old observance of the American people, deeply imbedded in our thought and habit. The burden and the stresses of life have their own insistence."

"We have abundant cause for thanksgiving. The lessons of the war are rapidly healing. The great army of freemen, which America sent to the defense of liberty, returning to the grateful embrace of the nation, has resumed the useful pursuits of peace, as simply and as promptly as it rushed to arms in obedience to the country's call."

The equal justice of our laws has received steady vindication in the support of law-abiding people against various and sinister attacks, which have reflected only the baser agitations of war, now happily passing."

"In plenty, security and peace, our virtuous and self-reliant people face the future, its duties and its opportunities. May we have vision to discern our duties; the strength, both of hand and resolve, to discharge them, and the soundness of heart to realize that the truest opportunities are those of service."

"In a spirit, then of devotion and stewardship we should give thanks in our hearts and dedicate ourselves to the service of God's merciful and loving purpose to His children."

"Wherefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do hereby designate Thursday, the twenty-fifth day of November next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and I call upon my countrymen to cease from their ordinary tasks and avocations upon that day, giving it up to the remembrance of God and His blessings, and their dutiful and grateful acknowledgment."

Wood Using Industries Of Maryland

The State Board of Forestry reports that there are 1,168 establishments employing 16,790 men engaged in producing wood and timber products, ranking second in the State in value of products and number of dependent wage earners. This includes production of lumber, ties, poles, posts, piling, mine props and similar forest products and other concerns which carry further the manufacture of wood products such as wooden boxes, interior finish, ship building, furniture, musical instruments, carriages, cigar boxes, baskets, cooperage and miscellaneous manufacture. These industries convert into finished products nearly 300,000,000 feet board measure annually.

There are 282 plants in the State employing nearly 11,000 men engaged in manufacturing articles from wood. Considerably more than half are located in Baltimore, while the remainder are scattered over the State, being centered somewhat around Salisbury on the Eastern Shore and Hagerstown in Western Maryland.

Investigations of the Board of Forestry have shown that in many cases woods which grow in Maryland are apparently overlooked and the same species imported from other States at great expense. It is also shown that there is a splendid market for all wood products and that the woodland owners and saw mill and timber operators of the State are not taking the fullest advantage of the home market.

Funds For Washington College

Old Washington College at Chestertown is reported badly in need of funds to keep it functioning. Its indebtedness is said to be well above $60,000 and it needs revenue for current expenses. Some months ago, the trustees of the institution visited Baltimore in an effort to obtain relief and while a large number of alumni were interested in the proposition and a start was made, little has been done.

A drive to raise $250,000 is now contemplated, and the public will be called upon to subscribe that amount, which is to be used not only to clear off the indebtedness but to form an endowment. The college is one of the oldest educational institutions in the United States. Dr. M. Bates Stephens, a graduate of the college, and a former superintendent of public instruction, is secretary of the executive committee in charge of the drive.

Look At The Date On Pink Label

The little pink label on your paper does more than bring this paper to you faithfully week after week, giving you the news of your friends, your county, of your State. It tells you at a glance just how many more weeks will elapse before your subscription expires. Look at the label today and see if you are in arrears and renew your subscription. By doing this you will render a great service to the Marylander and Herald and at the same time will assure yourself of the satisfaction of receiving the paper promptly and without interruption. If the label shows that your subscription is out or in arrears, mail a money order or check for $1.50, as all subscriptions must be paid in advance.

Survey Of Colleges Arranged

As part of Governor Ritchie's plans for putting the whole educational system of the State on a sound basis, the General Education Board will soon begin a survey of the colleges and higher institutions of learning in Maryland.

Announcement of the survey was made last Thursday night by the Governor. He said that the investigation into the public schools is being made personally by State Superintendent Albert S. Cook and Assistant Superintendent George H. Reavis, but that the consensus of opinion of his advisers was that a study of the colleges should be made by some agency outside the State.

The Governor has been in communication with the General Education Board some time, and in the near future he will settle with the board's officers the details of the survey. It will be the second time the board has started the work. Soon after it completed the survey of the elementary schools in the counties some years ago, out of which grew the school law of 1916, a survey was begun of the colleges, but the war came on and it was abandoned.

Governor Ritchie's educational plans contemplate such reorganization and coordination of the colleges, supported or aided by the State, as will enable every boy or girl in the State to begin in the primary school and go straight through until a college education has been received. He also wants to uphold the professional schools of the State, as a feature of the educational program.

Horticultural Society Meeting

The Peninsula Horticultural Society is holding its annual meeting this year in the Hotel duPont, Wilmington, Del., November 30th and December 1st and 2nd, a month earlier than usual. The program will include the discussion of practical matters connected with fruit growing by the best practical growers; a full discussion of the use of fertilizers by Dr. W. D. Hurd, of Washington, D. C.; Dr. W. C. Rhode, of Baltimore, and Professor Anthony, of the Pennsylvania State College; a full discussion of marketing problems, which will include a discussion of the community packing house and the selling and distribution of farm products; the control of such diseases as apple scab, and such pests as codling moth and other insects, and many other topics.

Both Governor Townsend, of Delaware, and Governor Ritchie, of Maryland, are expected to make addresses. In a word the three days—Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday—will be taken up with the most lively and interesting discussion of the live problems connected with the production and distribution of fruit and vegetables. It will be worth any man's while to take off three days to attend this meeting. The fruit and vegetable show itself will be too valuable for anyone to miss.

Mr. Seipp Heads Masons

At the annual session of the Grand Council Wednesday night, held at the Masonic Temple, Baltimore, the following officers were elected: Warren S. Seipp, grand master; George W. Livingston, deputy grand master; Dr. G. Guy Shoemaker, of Cumberland, senior grand warden; Thomas A. Wonder, junior grand warden, and George Cook and Peter E. Tome, grand secretary and treasurer, respectively. Harry A. Romley, William Schmidt and Charles C. Homer were elected as the board of managers.

The forty-seventh annual assembly of the Grand Council, of Royal and Select Masters, was also held Wednesday at the Temple. At the election of officers, Wilson Ward, of Rockville, Md., was elected grand master; William Mohr, deputy grand master; Charles Lee Merriken, principal grand conductor of work; George Cook, grand treasurer, and Gustav A. Eitel, grand recorder.

A SONG FOR THANKSGIVING

Summer is gone,
Autumn is here;
This is the harvest
For all the year.

Corn in the crib, oats in the bin,
Wheat is thrashed, barley drawn in;
Apples are barreled, nuts laid to dry;
Frost in the garden, winter is nigh.
Father in Heaven, thank Thee for all.
Winter and springtime, summer and fall.

LET ALL REJOICE

Taking Courage From the Spirit of the Pilgrims.

Surely the People of Today Have More Causes for Thankfulness
Than They Possessed.

To us it certainly seems as though the Pilgrims had little to be thankful for. If the settlers in Plymouth could "sacrifice the sacrifices of thanksgiving" in 1621, what, pray, ought we to do in this year of our Lord? Think of the blessings which we enjoy as the commonplaces of the day, of which the Pilgrims never even dreamed! A vast territory mastered, surveyed and thickly settled—abundant treasures of farm, mine, forest and mill poured out for human uses—Innumerable inventions harnessed to the service of human efficiency and comfort—a great republic "conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal"—free political, educational and religious institutions, hitherto unknown and unparalleled, successfully established—a higher grade of material well being, a wider diffusion of culture, a nobler ideal of happiness, a finer conception of democracy, achieved for all the people, than the world has ever seen before! It is true, of course, that not all ills have been suppressed, nor all blessings won. But because we have not yet achieved everything is no reason why we should not be glad that we have achieved much! Because we have not yet won the goal of life is no reason why we should not rejoice that we have advanced! The world today is better than it ever has been before. Men have less suffering, greater happiness and nobler opportunity than in any epoch past. Humanity is still fighting the same persistent ills and seeking the same elusive goods, but in new fields and on higher levels. The goal still lies far ahead, but behind is a long road of miseries conquered and battles won.

A Thanksgiving Offering From a Grateful Heart

Lord, we who set the furrow deep,
And sow the seeds of industry,
For the rich garden that we reap
Give thanks to Thee!

Lord, we who make the anvils ring,
Who rive and weld laboriously,
For all the wage our labors bring
Give thanks to Thee!

Lord, we who watch the spindles ply,
The shuttles flying dizzily,
For every bonnet our efforts buy
Give thanks to Thee!

Lord, we who build with busy hand
Of wood or stone unceasingly,
For whatsoever our arts command
Give thanks to Thee!

Lord, we who delve in under-earth
Far from Thy sunlight fair and free,
For whatsoever we win of worth
Give thanks to Thee!

Lord, we who hoist the straining sail,
And plow the green waves of the sea,
For what our stormy tasks avail
Give thanks to Thee!

Lord, we the toilers of the brain,
Who clutch at dreams that cling or flee,
For whatsoever heights we gain
Give thanks to Thee!

Lord, we Thy children, small and great,
Beneath Thy care, where'er it be,
The while Thy grace we supplicate,
Give thanks to Thee!

—Clinton Scollard, in the Outlook.

Therefore, Give Thanks.

Thanks to the providence of God as it has worked in history and to the work of brave men who believed they were children of God, the petty colonies are now one nation. Of that nation the meanest citizen, the most foolish, the weakest and the poorest, has every right and privilege before the law which belongs to the strongest, the richest and the wisest, though he were born in the purple of luxury.

A GLOOMY OUTLOOK
Turkey: I'm afraid they're feeding me too well. Thanksgiving must be coming.

Thanksgiving.

By T. C. Harbaugh.

In the twilight of November,
With its foliage of gold,
Comes again the glad Thanksgiving
Blest with customs dear and old;
And beneath the starry banner
As it floats from sea to sea,
We a happy people gather,
Fears at rest, for all are free.

Not a hand in all the nation,
In the East or in the West,
Bars the mansion or the cottage
To the glad Thanksgiving guest;
From the balmy, kindly Southland
To the nodding pines of Maine,
Nature, filled with joy and triumph,
Spreads her annual feast again.

We are thankful for the blessings
That have crowned our cherished land—
Fruitful orchards, golden harvests,
Peace and love from strand to strand;
'Neath November's robes of beauty
Hidden lies the warrior's sword,
And the olive branch is hanging
O'er the nation's festive board.

Aye, from mountain unto mountain
'Neath the Union's starry dome
To the feast we spread this autumn
Bid the absent welcome home;
Round the board where all are merry
Let the brightest sunlight play;
With the love-key of Thanksgiving
Open every heart today.

Hail the hallowed Thanksgiving
Which the Pilgrim Fathers gave;
'Tis their legacy forever
On the land and on the wave;
Then, as Freedom's chosen people,
We our destiny fulfill,
May the Future's sweet Thanksgivings
Find us grander, greater still.

PEOPLE MUST HAVE TURKEY

Always Willing to Pay High Prices for the Chief Feature of Thanksgiving Dinner.

New York spends about $3,000,000 on its Thanksgiving dinner, with turkey as its chief feature. The dealers say if it cost a dollar per pound they would sell just about as many. Turkey on Thanksgiving is traditional in America, and the farmer knows it. He fattens his best birds and saves them for this day. Without realizing it the farmer thus corners the market until the price gets high enough. Then he sells. But the people will have their turkey and this year the dealers expect a greater demand than ever, although they are selecting smaller birds in order to meet it.

The great part of the city's turkey supply comes from the Middle West—Indiana, Ohio and Michigan. Maryland and Kentucky send large consignments. This year "turkey specials" are run from St. Louis. A year ago one of these trains brought 32,000 birds for the local market.

Vast numbers of turkeys are raised in Missouri and Texas. The product of the latter state, where the birds feed on sage and sunflower seeds, is highly regarded. According to reports, however, the output of both of these sections has been effectively cornered this year.

Not Forgetting the Pumpkin Pie.

John's Thanksgiving.

By Willie Brooks.

John Eddy shamed the laggard night,
So early was his day begun,
He breakfasted by candle light,
And toiled awhile till set of sun.
Then by the glow a lantern alight
His cows were milked, his stock
Was fed,
And all his evening chores were done
Before he tumbled into bed.

One autumn morning, on his way,
The parson stopped and urged him so
To come to church Thanksgiving Day
That John at last resolved to go.
But to the parson's deep regret,
He still denied Creation's debt.
"What thanks," said John, "do farmers owe
For working hard for all they get?"

In church that day John Eddy dreamed
He saw the sun in splendor rise,
Yet from a thankless world, it seemed,
No welcome went to greet the skies;
No chirping insect voice was raised;
The birds in heedless silence gazed;
And there, before his wondering eyes,
A morning came unsung, unpraised.

Then rolling thunder shook the "Ungrateful world!" it seemed to say;
And from above a mighty hand
Swept down and bore the sun away.
Too late the field and forest vied
In pleading song; in vain they cried
For one sweet hour of blessed day,
Which tardily they glorified.

John Eddy, waking, spoke as one
Who entertained a novel thought:
"How little man himself has done!
How much for him has Nature wrought!
What lavish gifts of sun and shower
Thanksgiving comes, or come it ought,
To fructify the field and flower!
Not once a year, but every hour!"

WHY GIVE THANKS

Manifold Blessings Accorded to This Nation.

Surely One Needs Only a Few Moments'
Reflection to Realize the Causes for Gladness.

It is written of Plato that, "looking through the dim spectacles of nature, he gave thanks to God for three things: First, that he was created a man and not a beast. Second, that he was born a Grecian and not a barbarian. Third, that he was born a possible philosopher."

If this represents the pagan ideal of gratitude, it is in marked contrast to the Christian ideal. A boastful spirit has no place in true thanksgiving to God. The Pharisee who went up to the temple to pray and thanked God that he was not as other men, was roundly rebuked by Christ for his presumption. The last place for one to display his egotism should be before the throne of God. "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister," said Christ. It is a time for true humility of spirit.

Now that this nation has grown rich beyond the dreams of the austere pioneers, do Americans of today recognize the source of their manifold blessings, and will they with true humility acknowledge their gratitude to the giver of all good gifts, "forgetting not all his benefits?"

America is today the richest and most powerful nation of the earth, and it is this very opulence that leads the people, most liberally blessed of all, to neglect to remember the source of good. In days of opulence and power men are prone to put their trust in themselves and to underestimate those influences that have made them great.

Ingratitude has been called the most popular sin in the world, because it is the result of selfishness, or egotism or ambition or whatever the case may be. Nations, being an aggregation of individuals, in their days of power have a tendency to trust in themselves and to disregard the laws of God.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Joys to Come.

The pudding bubbled in the pot,
The turkey in the oven
Puffed up so high; the pumpkin pie
Cried out, "Hey, stop your shovin'!"
The taters in the saucepan
Danced a jig against the lid.
Cranberries popped and skipped and hopped
And savored the rest—they did.
The kitchen thus was all agog;
The kettles all a-humming;
No wonder—boy and girl alive!
Thanksgiving dinner's coming!

Another King Who Is About to Lose His Crown.

OLD TALE RETOLD

Origin of the American Thanksgiving Day.

Will Bear Repetition Annually as Something of Which Every Citizen May Be Proud.

The ancient Thanksgiving did not, as some have fancied, skip down the ages to find its home in America. In one way or another it seems to have always been observed. Throughout Europe, before the Reformation, special days were set apart as days of religious thanksgiving. The American Thanksgiving day is traced back to the Pilgrims.

Shortly after the landing of the Pilgrims, while searching for a suitable place in which to build their homes, they one day came upon some deserted Indian huts, in which they found some baskets filled with corn. From this supply they succeeded in saving enough to plant their first year's crop.

In the spring of 1621 the seed corn was sown and its growing watched anxiously by the people of the little colony. To their great joy, the harvest of the following October was a bountiful one. Governor Bradford ordered a three days' feast in celebration thereof. Wild turkeys, geese, ducks and water fowl, corn bread and vegetables no doubt formed the chief constituents of their feast, not to speak of the five deer brought in by a tribe of friendly Indians.

This festival is supposed to be the first real Thanksgiving day from which we date our celebration. This celebration, although without doubt the origin of our national Thanksgiving day, may be looked upon as merely a local observance, being held by the Plymouth colony only. They were the forerunners of less local celebrations in Massachusetts and gradually in other colonies, for in 1630 a public Thanksgiving day was observed in Boston by the Bay colony, and again in 1631.

During the next fifty years there were as many as 22 public Thanksgiving days appointed in Massachusetts, usually in October or November, after the gathering in of the harvests, or to celebrate some public benefit. It did not become a regular holiday until a long time afterward.

In 1789 Washington issued the famous Thanksgiving proclamation recommending Thursday, November 26, as a national day to be devoted to prayer and Thanksgiving. Washington's example was followed by other Presidents.

In 1863 President Lincoln appointed the fourth Thursday in November as the national Thanksgiving day. Since then the day has been observed annually without interruption.

REFLECT UPON YOUR PRESENT BLESSINGS—OF WHICH EVERY MAN HAS MANY; NOT ON YOUR PAST MISFORTUNES, OF WHICH ALL MEN HAVE SOME.

A Day of Nature.

Thanksgiving day is our one national festival that turns on home life. It is not a day of ecclesiastical saints. It is not a patriotic anniversary. It is not a day celebrating a religious event. It is a day of nature. It is a day of thanksgiving for the year's history. And it must pivot on the household. . . . Remember God's bounty brought the year. String the pearls of His goodness. Give this one day to thanks, to joy, to gratitude.—Henry Ward Beecher.

The Thanksgiving.

By Eugene C. Dolson.

Work of the harvest ended,
Now, as the year grows old,
Granaries overflowing,
Full as the bins can hold.

Peace and plenty surround us—
Each has a bounteous share;
Thanks to the fertile farmlands,
Opulence everywhere.

Thanks to the sturdy toiler,
Answering duty's call;
Thanks to the gracious Giver,
Infinite Lord of all.

Brothers, once more united,
Brothers from far away,
Each of us yet remembers
This—our Thanksgiving Day!

WITH THE DAY'S WORK DONE

Thanksgiving Day May Be Likened to the Beginning of a Long and Pleasant Evening.

As each Thanksgiving day approaches it becomes more and more apparent to those who are in the habit of meditating upon affairs in general that the spirit of the occasion is one to inspire individual sensation, and that expression of that sensation falls short of the mark.

There is in the Thanksgiving season a sort of benign pause to the energies of the year, a subconsciousness of filled granaries and of hay packed in the barn loft, the cattle crunching in the stalls, and the drapery of the trees laid by for the approaching winter. It is the twilight of the year; the chores are done and the men folks come stamping at the doorstep. The dinner is steaming on the table and soon, the food eaten, we will settle down for the long evening.

It has been a big day. The men folks have finished a mighty harvest in Europe and come home. We give thanks for those that come home because they are the living symbols of the nation's courage; and for those that will not come again save in the spirit, for they have been transfigured in the flame of the great conflict.

And there will be our thanks for the stout hearts of American mothers who bore in silence and fortitude the burdens of their agonies; for these are the symbols of the nation's devotion to pure ideals.

HIS THANKSGIVING WISH

Boy—Jenny, I'd like to be found Dead wid dat whole turkey in me stummick an' dat bill o' fare for a tombstone!

Thanksgiving Time.

When brimming barns reward the work-filled year,
When fuel-piles and bins bring indoor cheer,
When life and health have clung to those we love,
The normal human heart will look above
And thank a blessed Source for what He sends
In basket, store and intercourse with friends.

When through another year our nation's soul
Has triumphed though the war-waves madly roll;
When in our lives still live the patriot fires
To fan the which each loyal heart aspires;
When we all unashamed can face the world
And Stars and Stripes unblemished are unfurled—

Then and then always shall we deem it meet
To send aloft a prayer as incense sweet
For grateful hearts to feel and tongues to say
Feelings and words that fit Thanksgiving Day.
Sing on! God's goodness never can be told—

"The good die young," for good cannot grow old!

HAS BEEN CHANGE

Oldtimer Talks of Past Thanksgiving Days.

Thinks Religious Character of Celebration Not So Generally Dwelt On as It Was—Grandma's Pies.

"Thanksgiving weather may be the same as it always has been," said the gray-haired, young-looking man. "My own recollection is that I used to go skating almost every year on that day, but the weather bureau insists that the climate has not changed and I don't dispute the point."

"But one thing I'm sure of—Thanksgiving day is not generally celebrated now as it used to be when I was a boy. For one thing, I don't believe many people have family prayers on that day, or any other, for that matter, but 50 years ago it was a very irreligious family indeed who did not hold a special Thanksgiving service of that kind.

"Thanksgiving meals were things to remember. Those were the 'good old days' when doughnuts were made as big as bricks, and 'was not thought necessary to eat as many as six,' but the doughnut came between meals, and on Thanksgiving day they were not greatly in demand."

"For breakfast we always had chicken with many 'fixins' and pan-cakes and sweet cider for dessert. It was a meal for all day, but not long after noon we all gathered for the feast, and it was a small family that did not muster at least twenty strong. We all went home to grandma's, the last one of us. Commonly every living member of four generations would be together for that day, no matter how scattered their homes might be."

"After dinner there'd be enough outdoor sport to raise an appetite for six o'clock supper, and after supper indoor games among the young people till bedtime, but even the oldest were dragged into the games until they were tired out."

"There may be families that keep up the old customs even yet, but I wouldn't know where to look for them. Even if I did, I don't suppose I'd be able to get any of the mince and pumpkin pies. And if I should get any of them they wouldn't be such as grandma used to make."

THANKSGIVING AT ITS BEST

City Boys and Girls Don't Make as Much of the Day as Do Their Country Cousins.

The joys of Thanksgiving are not partaken in the fullness thereof by many city boys and girls. They stupidly know that it is a holiday, when the pleasures and trials of school life are temporarily laid aside, when churches are open for those who want to return devout thanks for the manifold blessings with which they may have been showered, and when the farder fairly groans with uncommon delicacies.

It is in the country that the manifold blessings of Thanksgiving day reach their full fruition. It is not a mere episode there, as it is in the city, but an event that is anxiously looked forward to for weeks before it dawns. In its celebration it differs from the ways of the city as widely as does day from night. In the thickly populated towns the religious aspect of the holiday has been lost sight of to a great extent, and in its place there has grown up the habit of feasting and making merry. It is a time for family gatherings, for balls, for football, for theatricals and the thousand and one pleasures city life is beset with.

Count Your Blessings.

The last Thursday in November will not mean much to you, unless you have got in the way of counting up your blessings.

GAY TIME AHEAD

Mexican With Much "Gilt" Nears La Belle France.

Twelve Million Francs in His Jeans Will Compensate for Discomfort of Passage—Is Said to Have Betrayed Carranza.

A stoker with 12,000,000 francs in his jeans—enough to pay for at least one square meal and the covert charge in any Paris restaurant—is nearing the shores of France today bent on having his fling in the land of "light wines and dancing" while his franking privilege holds out.

Being a member of the high Mexican traitocracy the man is traveling incog, and not even his nom de stoke can be made public at this time. All well-informed Mexicans in this city, however, know his name and his history, and the only mystery is how the hotel bell hops and taxi drivers of New York ever let him get away with all that gilt-edged tippage, says the Evening Post of that city.

As an indication of the exalted position he formerly held, it need only be said he was the man who had personal charge of the safety of Carranza when the late president made his recent exit from the Mexican mise en scene. It is not known just where he was when the body fell but soon afterward he arrived here in town with money enough to set him up for the rest of his natural (Mexican) life.

Some one connected with the hotel on Herald square where the visitor stopped recognized him and is said to have given him the Mexican equivalent of the chaqueta salute, but the man who had done so much to make Carranza safe for the undertakers failed to reply in kind. He even put himself down in the hotel register as somebody else—but those who knew knew.

For days and days the generalissimo—for he was one of those—fired vainly to get the necessary O. K. to book passage for France. The city was filled with representatives of all Mexican governments, but none of them would do the honors. The Carranza agents turned him down because they didn't exactly like the way he had looked after the safety of their chief. The Obregonistas refused to function either because they didn't like his technique or because they thought he had more money than an ex-safety commissioner ought to have with but one president to his credit. Something of the same train of thought is said to have affected the de la Huertistas.

At about this point those who had reason to feel friendly towards the ex-generalissimo came forward with the suggestion that he ship as a stoker. At first he was not inclined to take the tip, but when they told him how nice and warm it would be down in the stoke hole and how near he would be to the part of the ship where the revolutions take place he decided it was worth trying—once.

Stokers were scarce and full-fledged Mexican traitocratic stokers were extremely hard to get, so he had no difficulty in landing a job. All the fine jewels and precious silk shirts which he had bought while here were cashed in before sailing. When he took to the high seas he had nothing but his stoke clothes and the 12,000,000 of French currency.

When he gets shore leave at Havre or Brest or Bordeaux, it is expected the company will have to advertise for a new stoker. But Paris will have a new Latin-American spender to conjure with.

Electricity to Restore Youth.

No little interest is being taken in the electrical instruments for the use of dentists and surgeons, and in this connection it is permissible to refer to the worldwide curiosity which is felt relative to the claim made by Dr. Eugen Steinbach of the University of Vienna that he can restore youth to the aged by the X-ray.

The full merits of this treatment are yet to be determined, as is the efficacy of the patent taken out by young Edward M. Hubbard of Seattle for a process of generating electricity from the air by means of a dynamo weighing only forty pounds. Hubbard says his invention will revolutionize the uses of electricity in the home, office, etc., for by it every householder shall be able to make his own heat for cooking and house heating and shall be dependent on nothing but air for his supplies.

Girls Studying Economics.

According to statistics compiled by the bureau of education, there are now 19,000 American girls pursuing the study of home economics in schools and colleges, and these students will ultimately bring within the scope of their influence as teachers approximately 1,000,000 pupils, as home economics education begins in the fifth grade in the more progressive cities. It includes food and nutrition, textiles and clothing, house construction and furnishings, household management and sanitation, child care and training, household administration, and financial management.

Airplanes to Foil Smugglers.

The Chinese government is about to make an effort to combat the activities of bandits and smugglers by the use of airplanes from which these persons will be observed and hunted. It is also proposed to transport precious ores and stones in this manner.

One Hundred Per Cent. "Pep"

When your Ford car or your Ford truck doesn't display its usual quantity or quality of "pep" and dash, it's time to have a repairman who understands the Ford mechanism give it the "once over"—then make the necessary adjustments or repairs. And return it to you full of its old time power, "pep," energy, pull and service. You'll notice the difference.

We employ only skilled Ford mechanics—men who know how Ford cars are made, and how they should be kept in order to give the most efficient and economical service. And our shop equipment boasts a great many specially designed tools and time-saving devices and machinery. In our stockroom is a complete assortment of repair parts—genuine Ford parts—that are exactly the same as their tough, sinewy originals in the Ford car.

For prompt repair work or adjustments, phone or drive to our garage. Don't risk chances, play fair with your Ford car. Keep it in the hands of its friends, the authorized Ford dealers. Insist on genuine Ford parts.

PLUMBER BOUGHT A COROT NO MORE GOOD OLD GHOSTS

And Art Deal Which Family Condemned Netted a Profit of $71,000 for His Estate.

It would seem that the plumber's capacity for making money is not necessarily confined to his business.

William B. McCormick, writing in Arts and Decoration, tells of one with nothing except his instinct to guide him who bought a superb Corot that enriched his estate by many thousands of dollars.

During the exhibition of a famous collection of art objects in New York, twenty-five years ago, the attendants in the gallery where the collection was shown noticed an unfamiliar and not very well-dressed man spending a considerable time each day in front of Corot's "Lake Nemi," one of the pictures in the collection. On making inquiries they found he was a little-to-do plumber, wholly unknown in the picture-buying world. It appeared later that he told his family he intended to buy the painting if possible and there was a fine family row over the matter. But he stuck to his plan and on the night the canvas came up for sale it was knocked down to him for $14,000. As long as he lived his family never forgave him for his extravagance. But they were forced to change their opinion of his action later. For when the painting was sold after his death it brought $85,000. No single investment of this man's lifetime ever brought him so large a profit.

HAD A DEGREE OF MERCY

Executioners of Chinese Robber, Sentenced to Be Buried Alive, Shortened His Agony.

A correspondent in China sends the following:

In Ha Tony, a little village just north of Canton city, there lived one Tsao Ah Sum. There was shrewd suspicion that he had stolen many oxen—fifteen, to be precise. The ox is a sacred beast of burden, and under village law to steal one is a capital offense. Tsao Ah Sum stole his last ox a month or two ago, and when the hue and cry went out he fled. He was eventually caught and he had to face trial before the elders of three villages, for he had not confined his depredations to his immediate neighborhood. He was found guilty and given the maximum penalty, namely, to be buried alive. On the day of execution the village watchmen beat the gongs and all the young men of the village gathered around a rectangular eight feet deep. Before Tsao Ah Sum was invited to make his resting place in the hole he was feasted with wine and meat while the elders performed sacrifices for the benefit of his soul. The rite being ended two watchmen lowered Tsao Ah Sum into the hole, head downward, and while all the young men and spectators shouted the watchmen of another village shot at the convict with a native gun loaded with shot which pierced the body of the victim in numerous places.

Coral Reefs Far From Ocean.

Mention of coral reefs naturally brings to one's mind a picture of palm-dotted inlets girt with white sands in a tropical sea, but geologists have found coral reefs in the middle of the great continents. These, of course, belong to the past ages of the earth's history, and Paleozoic corals have been found on the Timan-Trais and in the Salurian rocks of the New Siberian Islands, but the most striking characteristics of these fossil corals are similar to those of the corals of today. It is assumed that you refer to a number of remarkable coral reefs that within recent years have been explored near Bainbridge, on the Flint river, in Georgia. These reefs are ascribed to the Tertiary age, and in one case a very large portion of the reef exposed consisted of coral heads, some of which were more than a foot in diameter. Between 25 and 30 species of coral have been recognized in these reefs.

No Husband Is Perfect.

Don't expect all the virtues in one man. If he is good natured he may be lazy; if he is scholarly, he may be cold; if he is thrifty, he may be stingy; if he is generous, he may be wasteful; if he is smooth, he may be deceitful. The man who charms you with his immaculate appearance is likely to be something of an old maid; the man who is careful to pick threads off your skirt is prone to pick flaws in you; the man who takes an undue interest in the selection of your hats may take an undue interest in the bill which comes home; the man who, before marriage, jumps to open the door, lest your fingers be contaminated by the knob, may after marriage, allow those same fingers to be contaminated by the washboard.—Woman's Home Companion.

What Size Do You Take?

Few people understand the meanings of the numbers and sizes on articles of clothing, says London Answers.

In hats and caps the size is one-half the sum total of the long and short diameters of the head. In other words, if your head measures 13½ inches, your size in hats is 6½.

The size in gloves indicates the number of inches round the knuckles when the hand is closed.

The length in inches of your foot is the "number" you take in socks. In women's hose the length of the leg is usually three times the length of the foot.

Modern Substitute, It Must Be Admitted, Is More or Less Flabby and Unsatisfactory.

How long is it since you shivered at a ghost story? You have read scores of them in the last few years, stories of seances and trances, of cross messages and spirits trying to "break through," but did a single one have that hair-raising, marrow-chilling quality we are justified in demanding from a real ghost story? What is the matter with our modern spirits, anyway? In a day when the world has gone mad on the subject of efficiency, why do we find our ghosts so utterly incompetent, so unequal to their jobs?

Their great trouble is their lack of definite purpose. There is no reason whatever for their being, and consequently they are insipid, puerile, uninteresting things. They don't even call themselves ghosts; they are spirits, a much flabbier term, and the same general debility runs through their entire make-up. They have no will of their own. They wait respectfully till they are summoned by the very mortals they ought to terrify. They answer, like bell boys, to the call of such silly devices as ouija boards.

Can you imagine a Shakespearean ghost waiting to be summoned? Those were specters with minds of their own. They appeared when it pleased them to appear, uninvited and more often than not undesired. You might shout "Avant thee!" till you were hoarse; you might call them "fool spirits" or any other uncomplimentary terms you could think of, but until their job was done not one inch would they budge. The modern spirit vanishes if you give him half a chance, but then he only came in the first place to oblige you, out of politeness and weak-mindedness.—Margaret L. Ferrand in the New York Evening Post.

VERBENA HELD AS SACRED

Romans Believed That Leaves of Plant Would Protect the Wearer From Injury.

The verberna plant was held in the greatest veneration by the ancient Romans, who believed that a few leaves of it worn on the person would protect against injury, and Roman brides who gathered and wore a wreath of verberna were considered fortunate.

The plant came by its name from an old Roman custom. Whenever a dispute was had with another nation an official called verbernerius was sent to discuss it with the offending country. This official wore a wreath of verberna. If war was decided upon an iron-tipped spear with a sprig of verberna tied to it was shot into the enemy territory as a declaration of war.

The Druids dedicated the verberna to their priestess, gathering it at the full moon. No one was allowed to touch it with the hands. It was uprooted by being tied to the foot of a young girl. Hungarian gypsies believe that if a cut is made in the palm of the hand and a tiny piece of verberna leaf is placed in it and the wound allowed to heal over the person will be able to open all locks with a single touch.—Detroit News.

Pretty Chinese Legend.

One of the prettiest legends of Chinese mythology is that of the weaver girl and the herd laddie who are said to be two stars in the sky.

In far off days, Jove took pity on their loneliness and married them. They were so happy in their communal bliss—this proves the date to have been very long ago in the days of "once upon a time"—that they neglected their tasks and were banished to opposite sides of the Milky Way, where they wink at each other all the year round, but are only allowed to cross for a brief spell of happiness on the seventh day of the seventh moon.

On that night shy maidens place a few sticks of incense with some sweets and fruit on a table in the inner courtyard as an offering to the two stars, perhaps with an unexpressed prayer that in their own case the course of true love may run more smoothly than it did for the immortal lovers in the sky.

Varieties of "Smokes."

The Japanese maidens do exactly what Kipling says they do in his "Road to Mandalay" for they smoke a cigar ten inches long and as fat as a good-sized candle, and with a white paper covering. The longest pipes known are those used by the natives of the Belgian Congo. These pipes have stems ten or twelve feet long, with small bowls. Matches were used to light them; a friend would be needed to apply the flame, but the native gets his light by merely thrusting the bowl into his camp fire. In Liege, in parts of Ireland, and in the southern United States, pipe-smoking by old women is common.

Armenian Language Is Old.

The Armenian tongue, however much it has changed in the course of centuries, is descended from the language that Priam and Hector spoke. The Armenians hail, like Homeric Trojans, from Thrace, which subsequently became incorporated in the Byzantine or eastern Roman empire. Erzerum, capital of Armenia, has retained the deathless name of Rome. It was founded in the year 514, by Theodosius, a sebastos, that is, emperor, of eastern Rome. He called it Theodosiopolis; but its native name is Erzerum, or "Armenian Rome."—Ernest P. Horowitz in Asia.

Determine the True Value of The Nash Six Sedan by Comparing It With Other Sedans Considerably Higher in Price

THE price of the Nash Seven Passenger Sedan with cord tires is $2895 f. o. b. Kenosha.

Compare it with other sedans costing $300 to $600 more.

You will find, as others have found, that the Nash Sedan not only equals but actually surpasses many sedans costing hundreds of dollars more.

It has more power, due to its Perfected Valve-in-Head Motor, giving it the quick responsiveness of a touring car.

It is a beautifully designed car, roomy and luxurious and evidencing its high quality in every particular of finish and appointment.

The ladies of the Presbyterian Church will hold a sale of delicacies for the Thanksgiving dinner at the home of Mrs. W. O. Lankford on Tuesday evening, November 23rd, at 7.30 p. m.

The Rt. Rev. George W. Davenport, Bishop of the Diocese of Easton, and the Rev. S. A. Potter will hold services in Grace Church, Mt. Vernon, this (Tuesday) evening at 7.30 o'clock.

Last Friday night two young men of Princess Anne hired an automobile to go to Mt. Vernon—where they make frequent visits to see two young ladies—and the chauffeur, becoming restless, took up other passengers to replenish his pocket-book, and the young men were compelled to walk 7 miles to their home. If you see two young men limping around the streets ask them why their feet are sore.

Last Tuesday afternoon Miss Ellen Dale McMaster entertained at cards at her home on South Main street. Those present were: Mrs. E. Herrman Cohn, Mrs. Robert F. Duer, Mrs. L. Creston Beauchamp, Mrs. C. C. Gelder, Mrs. Gordon Tull, Mrs. John B. Roberts, Mrs. W. A. N. Bowland, Mrs. Vernon D. White and her guest, Miss Martha Lawton, of Harrisburg, Pa.; Misses Mildred Beauchamp, Irene W. Taylor, Berenice Thompson, Amanda Lankford, Jane D. Wilson and Emily R. Waters. The house was tastefully decorated with autumn leaves and after cards the guests were invited to the dining room, where choice refreshments were served.

Mr. J. Edwin Lawes, of Crisfield, was a visitor to Princess Anne last week.

Miss Anna Rose Cohn, of Norfolk, Va., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Cohn.

Miss Martha Lawton, of Harrisburg, Pa., is the guest of Mrs. Vernon E. White.

Messrs. Wade H. Ford, of Crisfield, and Charles O. Melvin, of Pocomoke City, spent last Friday in Princess Anne.

Mr. John E. Holland has improved his office building with a fresh coat of paint, which enhances the appearance of the property once owned by the late John W. Crisfield.

Mrs. Oliver Mitchell and daughter, Geneva, of Cambridge, Md., and Mrs. John Foley and son, Earl, of Hurlock, Md., spent the week-end with their sister, Mrs. Hiram C. Waller.

Dr. R. N. Brackett, Director and Chief Chemist of the Department of Chemistry of Clemson College, South Carolina, spent several days last week with his sister, Mrs. Albert B. Fitzgerald.

The American Legion will hold a Thanksgiving dance at the First Regiment Armory, Salisbury, on Friday, November 26th. The hospital will serve refreshments during the intermission. Madden's orchestra will furnish the music.

The management of the Auditorium will have special attractions for movie lovers on Thursday night. The photograph of the novel by Emerson Hough, "The Sagebrusher," will be presented by Benjamin B. Hampton, and Fatty Arbuckle in a "Reckless Romeo."

Among those who attended the annual convention of the Grand Masonic Lodge in Baltimore last week were Messrs. Thomas H. Bock, Benjamin H. Sterling and Omar J. Crowell. Mr. Bock was also present at the meeting of the Eastern Shore Society at the Hotel Rennett.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Atkinson, of Cokesbury, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lena M. Atkinson, to Mr. John A. Hostetter. The wedding will be solemnized in the church at Cokesbury and will take place Wednesday, November 24th, at high noon.

The regular monthly meeting of the Civic Club will be held at the home of the president, Mrs. G. W. Maslin, tomorrow (Wednesday) afternoon at 3 o'clock. Final arrangements for the Christmas gift sale will be made at this meeting. All members are urged to be present.

Mr. Clarence R. Lano returned from Baltimore Saturday morning, where he had been in daily attendance with his sister, Miss Lezette, at the University Hospital. While in the city he was the guest of Mr. H. Everett Cannon at the Kappa Sigma House, of Johns Hopkins University.

Mrs. Joseph G. Scott left last week for Washington, D. C., where her son, Mr. Joseph Scott, who is a student at the Maryland State College, was operated on at a hospital in that city for appendicitis. The young man is getting along nicely and will soon be able to resume his studies.

On Thanksgiving night at the Armory Hall, Pocomoke City, the young Jewish ladies and young men of the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia will give a dance and banquet. This is expected to be one of the finest social functions of its kind ever held in this section of the country.

The Ladies' Aid of Rehoboth Baptist Church will hold a "cobweb" social at the home of Mrs. James H. Davis, near Rehoboth, on Thanksgiving evening. Ice cream and cake will be on sale. The public is cordially invited to attend. A jolly good time is expected. Proceeds for a new church organ.

Miss Lezette M. Lano, who underwent an operation at the University Maryland Hospital on November 13th by Dr. Hundley, a noted Baltimore surgeon, is reported to be out of danger. Miss Lano has been ill for many weeks and her many friends will be glad to learn that her condition is so favorable.

Steamer Virginia Runs Aground

Five passengers on the steamer Virginia, of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company's lines, which ran hard aground on the bar off Hooper's Island Point last Tuesday night during the severe storm, were put ashore on the island last Thursday, while the remaining passengers and crew were left on the boat.

The Virginia sailed from Baltimore Tuesday bound for Salisbury, carrying but a few passengers and a cargo of freight. She ran into foul weather when she left the bay, but continued on her course. About 1.30 a. m. Wednesday the vessel ran on the bar off Hooper's Island Point, due, according to a member of the crew of the steamer Avalon, which made port in Baltimore Thursday afternoon, principally to the fact that the "bug light" on the bar was out. A heavy sea was running and the tide was extremely high. It was due to this, it is said, that the helmsman lost his exact bearings. The vessel was at high tide in three feet of water and at low tide high and dry. She was not damaged to any considerable extent. Relief boats were sent out to float her.

Officers of Eastern Shore Society

At its annual business meeting at the Hotel Rennett, Baltimore, last Wednesday night the following officers were elected by the Eastern Shore Society of Baltimore City: Dr. Henry D. Hynson, formerly of Kent county, president; Walter Gale, also a native of Kent, secretary-treasurer, to succeed J. H. K. Shanahan, who declined re-election after continuous service since the organization of the society in 1913.

The following chairmen of county chapters, who are also vice-presidents of the society, were elected: Caroline—Alexander Hardcastle. Cecil—Dr. McDonald, of College Park. Dorchester—Franklin P. Cator. Kent—W. Hordman Schwatka. Queen Anne's—G. Clinton Roberts. Somerset—F. A. Davis. Talbot—J. H. K. Shanahan. Wicomico—John T. Lowe. Worcester—E. K. Wilson. Dr. Hynson made an address accepting the presidency.

OLD NORSE MYTH

Describes the End of All Visible Creation.

Ample Warning to Be Given Before the Great Day of Destruction—New Heaven and New Earth to Arise.

Ragnarok, the twilight of the gods, is an old myth of the Norse gods. It was a firm belief of the northern nations that a time would come when all the visible creation, the gods of Valhalla and Nifheim, the inhabitants of Jotunheim, Elfhelm and Midgard, together with their habitations, would be destroyed. The fearful day of destruction will not, however, be without warning. First will come a triple winter, according to the myth, during which snow will fall from the four corners of the heavens, the frost severe, the wind piercing, the weather tempestuous and the sun will impart no gladness. Three such winters will pass without being tempered by a single summer, the story goes. Three other smaller winters will follow, during which war and discord will spread over the universe. The earth itself will be afraid and begin to tremble, the sea will leave its basin, the heavens will tear asunder; men will perish in great numbers, and the eagles of the air will feast upon their still quivering bodies. Then the wolf Fenris will break his bonds, the Midgard serpent will rise out of his bed in the sea and Loki, released from his bonds, will join the enemies of the gods. Amidst the general devastation the sons of Muspelheim will rush forth under their leader Surter, before and behind whom are flames and burning fire. And, according to the myth, they will ride onward over Bifrost, the rainbow bridge, which breaks under the horses' hoofs. But they, disregarding its fall, direct their course to the battlefield called Vigrid. Thither also repair the wolf Fenris, the Midgard serpent, Loki, with all the followers of Hela, and the Frost giants.

Heimdall now stands up and sounds the Gjallar horn to assemble the gods and heroes for the contest. The gods advance, led by Odin, who, engaging the wolf Fenris, falls victim to the monster. Fenris is, in turn, slain by Vitthar, Odin's son. Thor wins great renown by killing the Midgard serpent, but, recoiling, falls dead, suffocated with the venom which the dying monster vomits over him. Loki and Heimdall meet and fight till they both are slain. The gods and their enemies having fallen in battle, Surter, who has killed Freyr, darts fire and flames over the world, and the universe is consumed. The sun grows dim, the earth sinks into the ocean, the stars fall from the heavens and time is no more, so the story runs.

After this Alfadur, the Almighty will cause a new heaven and a new earth to arise out of the sea. The new earth, filled with abundant supplies, will produce its fruits without labor or care. Wickedness and misery will no more be known and the gods and men will live happily together, so says this myth of the Norsemen.

When Calm Seas Are Dangerous.
Sometimes, when to the landsman, there seems no sign of an approaching storm, a glassy sea is moved by a gentle swell. But the sailor knows that those quiet undulations are a warning of the deadliest danger. Upon a perfectly calm day ships have been caught by a gentle roll of the water and later dashed to pieces on the rocks by the "ground sea." On the Atlantic, waves rise forty feet high. Driven before the gale they travel 30 miles an hour, and soon pass out of the storm area. These waves roll on settling into long, rolling ridges that travel in three parallel lines. And the further they go the lower they sink. As the ground sea advances it creates a false tide. And the waves break in full force within an hour of the warning swell. A wave caused by a ground sea may be 20 feet high; when you remember that it strikes a boat with a force of a ton to the square inch, you will understand the necessity for pulling ashore while there is time.

China's Deposed Editor.
When, in 1912, that old monarchy China was transformed into a republic, the title as well as the life of the little emperor was retained by the royal prisoner. With the end of empire, what was known as "republicanism" took possession of the state and trickled down into the little kingdom of Siam, directly beneath. Now, in Siam's capital, Bangkok, there is one Chinese to four Siamese, and to them it seemed that what was good for big China would adequately suffice for the needs of little Siam. But the agitators had counted upon neither the king nor his 9,000,000 lovers, and the republican breeze died out over night. Siam, possibly, is the isolated example in history where, in time of disturbance and strife, the people have followed and not led. It has been a land of leaders and not a realm of revolutionists. The giants of the kingdom were not of the street, but set on thrones.

Historic Spot for Sale.
With 24 acres of ground, Cliff's End hall, Ebbesfleet (the place near Ramsgate where Hengist and Horsa landed about 45 A. D. with the first Saxons to settle in England), was offered for sale by auction recently. Bidding reached $44,000 and the property was withdrawn.

Utility Skirts and Blouses

THE most important of our clothes are those we wear oftentimes and are least conscious of. Unobtrusive things that are made for daily service have a character and charm of their own that are lasting (like the steadfastness of a sincere and dependable friend), and better than all else. The creators of utility skirts and blouses have kept all the requirements of these clothes in mind for the coming season, and after disposing of such essentials as good materials, irrepensible workmanship and smart style, have added little graces—as ingenious combinations of materials, novel finishing touches and fine management of colors and patterns in material.

Holding first place in the procession of blouses come the strong, fine white voiles, made with long sleeves and trimmed with tucks and lace, or hand needle work. These blouses, and the skirts to be worn with them, commend themselves to the home seamstress. Good voile blouses wear like iron and come from the laundry looking like new. The abiding charm of neatness belongs to them even though they had no other, but drawn work, fine tucks, hemstitching and other stitchery is more effective on voile than on any other blouse material.

Educational Tests.
Six tests of knowing whether you are educated were put forward by Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, when he addressed the students from all the schools of the Morningside institution at the first college assembly of the term. By these six tests, said Doctor Butler, one may determine whether he is being educated, or whether he is accomplishing in the university what he set out to do, or whether the university is doing what is expected of it.

"Ask yourselves, am I gaining in correctness and precision in the use of the mother tongue? Am I gaining in those refined and gentle manners which are the expression of fixed habits of thought and conduct? Am I gaining in the power and habit of reflection? Am I gaining in sound standards of feeling and appreciation? Am I gaining in the power of growth? Am I gaining in the power to do merely efficiently?"

"If so, we can say: 'Thank God, at last I am being educated.'"

Milk by the Pound.
That the time is rapidly approaching when household milk will be all sold in dried form is the contention of an English dairy expert. Dried milk contains, he says, instead of millions of bacilli to the cubic centimeter, fewer than thousands. With fresh milk the organism has a chance of multiplying from the time it reaches the towns, but by the process of drying there is no opportunity for the organism to grow, and to a very large extent it is killed. Furthermore, there is quite as much nourishment in dried milk, and certainly much less chance of sickness and disease. Usually in the warm weather we have a good deal of diarrhea, which can to a large extent be attributed to fresh milk. This is partly due to contamination at the source, partly to its contamination during transit, and also to the conditions under which fresh milk is kept in many houses.

Kingdom Going A-Begging.
King George of the South Pacific island of Tonga, would like to be annexed by some civilized country so that he might be relieved of his debts. King George awoke one recent morning to find that his treasurer of state had departed with $8,000 which was in the treasury. Then all the members of his official cabinet resigned because their wages were three weeks overdue. To add insult to injury, a German policeman stole the royal yacht, which was the only thing the imperial highness had left, and wrecked it on a rock in the harbor.

Two of the new utility skirts in the group above show one made of a combination of plain and plaid materials. Panels at each side and a wide border of plaid goods, applied at the back and front of the first skirt, leave a narrow space at each side that accommodates a small mannish slit pocket, set in with a narrow binding of the plaid material. This model is easy sailing for the home dressmaker, for it is gathered at the waistband and has a plain belt of the material fastened with a button at the front. The second skirt is plaited at each side of the front and across the back. The most interesting feature appears in three small pointed tabs set on with a large button, at each side; the buttons having a light center and dark rims corresponding with the stripes in the material.

True Standard of Manhood.
Man comes to himself only when he has found the best that is in him and has satisfied his heart with the highest achievement of which he is capable. That alone to him is the real measure of himself, the real standard of his manhood.—Griff.

A Tonic For Women

"I was hardly able to drag, I was so weakened," writes Mrs. W. F. Ray, of Easley, S. C. "The doctor treated me for about two months, still I didn't get any better. I had a large family and felt I surely must do something to enable me to take care of my little ones. I had heard of

CARDUI The Woman's Tonic

"I decided to try it," continues Mrs. Ray. "I took eight bottles in all. I regained my strength and have had no more trouble with womanly weakness. I have ten children and am able to do all my housework and a lot outdoors. I can sure recommend Cardui."

Take Cardui today. It may be just what you need. At all druggists.

REVERE'S BELL PRESERVED

Still Hangs in King's Chapel in Boston —Was Man of Many Accomplishments.

In the belfry of King's Chapel, built when Boston was in its infancy, still hangs a bell which was cast by Paul Revere. It was his 161st bell. Besides being a bell caster, Revere was also an engraver, a goldsmith and a dentist. Rising above the modest houses in the Italian district on Hull street is the old North church, from which Revere received his signal previous to his famous midnight ride.

Christ church, the Second Episcopal church of Boston, is situated in the north end, and is an offshoot of King's Chapel. Its spire, designed and built in 1723, has served as a landmark to guide ships into the harbor.

In 1804 this spire was blown down by a great gale, and was shortened by sixteen feet. The chime of bells, now silent, which hangs in the tower, was made in 1774, in the foundry of Abel Ruddall, of Gloucester, England. Each bell has engraved upon it an inscription denoting its history. The bells were supposed to possess the power to dispel evil spirits.—Detroit News.

Never Stuck.

My neighbor boasted proudly that his car was superior to any in the country. According to him, it was always in good working order and never got stuck.

One day in early spring we passed him stuck in a mud hole not far from town.

We could not resist the temptation to call out and say, "Hey, there, are you stuck?"

Still he would not own up to it and answered: "Nope, just having a little trouble getting enough power to get out of here."

A curious phenomenon of the Sahara is the charging of motorcar bodies with electricity. Lorries running in the vicinity of Gahes are reported to be often affected, and drivers grasping the starting handle after a stop are liable to receive severe shocks. The electrification is supposed to be imparted to the chassis from charged sand blown against it, the rubber tires serving as insulation to retain the charge. By trailing wires, ground connection is made, and the charge dissipated.

"THEY SAID I HAD T. B. AND WOULD NOT LIVE THREE MONTHS"

Mr. Harold W. Schmidt, Box 88, Breese, Clinton Co., Ill., believes he has reason to praise Dr. Hartman's Remedy for Catarrhal conditions.

"I used Per-na eight months for Chronic Bronchial Catarrh. I do not get tired, feel like a giant, am six pounds over normal weight and able to work every day. In March, 1918, I contracted a severe cold with spitting and took to my bed. They said I had T. B. and would not live three months. After taking a couple bottles of Per-na and a box of Mac-a-lin Tablets, I could walk around and in seven months went back to work. My trouble was due to Chronic Catarrh of the nose and throat, which I had ten years, extending down into the bronchial tubes. 'Per-na was my life savior.'"

PERCHED ON A HIGH STOOL IN AN OFFICE

Many a Brain Is Trying To Work With Weak, Thin Blood

MORE RICH, RED BLOOD NEEDED

Pepto-Mangan Gives You the Health To Tackle Your Daily Work With Vigor

If you sit at a desk all day in an office, whether you are perched on a high stool or seated in an upholstered chair, your body is inactive. You can't get much fresh air and outside exercise. Your blood becomes poor. You look pale and feel weak.

The great tonic, Pepto-Mangan, is what you need for awhile. It makes rich, red blood. It restores your vital energy. Your color comes back.

When your blood is good, full of red corpuscles, you are better able to resist disease. You go about your daily work with the optimism of good health.

Try Pepto-Mangan and notice how you improve.

Pepto-Mangan is sold in both liquid and tablet form. Take either kind you prefer. Both have the same medicinal value. But be sure you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan—"Gude's." The full name, "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" should be on the package.—Advertisement.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Notice is hereby given that the levy of the year 1920 for State and County Taxes has been made in Somerset county.

Pursuant to said levy the taxes are now in my hands for collection. A discount of three per cent. will be allowed on all county taxes paid on or before October 31st, 1920, and a discount of two per cent. if paid during November, 1920. No discount will be allowed on county taxes paid after November, 30th, 1920.

The law allowing discounts on State taxes has been abolished, therefore no discount will be allowed on State taxes.

The law provides that both County and State taxes must be paid in order to obtain the discount.

State taxes bear interest from October 1st, 1920, at the rate of six per centum per annum. County taxes bear interest from January 1st, 1921, at the rate of six per centum per annum, and interest is charged for the full month from the first day of each month.

DESERTED POET FOR EARL

Shakespeare's Lady Love Missed the Opportunity of Sharing in His Fame.

Shakespeare, writer of a hundred romances, had but one in his life, and that was an unhappy one. It was with a certain Mary Fitton, a lady in waiting to Queen Elizabeth, who, according to all accounts, must have been a most unworthy young minx. She was beautiful enough, with large black eyes and a wealth of black hair that framed a face of healthy pallor, and gave excuse for Shakespeare's reference to her as the "dark lady."

Shakespeare loved her with all his heart, and she returned his love for a little space, and then became attracted to the earl of Pembroke, Shakespeare's dearest friend and patron. Probably because she feared what the poet might say, she proceeded to lure him away from Shakespeare and the young writer sunk in gloom and despair. This was about the year 1601, and his sonnets written between 1598 and that date tell the story clear enough. However, lovers of the bard may have the satisfaction of knowing that the earl and the lady were caught in their amour, and she was dismissed from the court, while the earl was sent to the Tower of London. She was the daughter of Sir Edward Fitton, and at the time of her affair with the dramatist was 20 years old. She afterward married a mere army captain, and history promptly lost sight of her.

HAD LITTLE USE FOR BOOKS

Friend of Grover Cleveland Boasted That He Practiced Law "Entirely by Ear."

Grover Cleveland had a friend in his early days as a lawyer, and the friend was also a lawyer, although a lazy one. Whenever it became necessary for him to use a decision bearing upon any case he lounged in Cleveland's office and casually worried the desired information out of his friend's mental storehouse. Cleveland was not dull to appreciate the fact and resent it chiefly because his friend was capable of better things, and could, if spurred to it, get along quite well by himself.

One day the friend came in on his usual errand, and when Cleveland had heard the accustomed preliminaries to the pumping process, he told him plainly that the fount of information was closed, but said Cleveland to him: "There are my books and you are quite welcome to use them. You can read your own cases." The friend, who was an excitable man, retorted quickly: "See here, Grover Cleveland, I want you to understand that I don't read law. I practice entirely by ear, and you and your books can go to thunder."

Tough Angora Goats.

On a bleak little island in Mono lake, Cal., over a mile and a quarter above sea-level, and surrounded by America's loftiest mountains, the Sierra Nevada, is a herd of Angora goats, totaling about a thousand. The water of the lake is said to be poisonous, but on the island there is a large spring, which supplies the goats with all the water they need. For the most part the pasturage is merely rough scrub, and the winter climate decidedly trying.

In 1848 nine of the finest Angoras from the royal herd in Turkey were sent by the order of the then Sultan as a present to Dr. James B. Davis, of South Carolina. They were the nucleus of the vast herds that now roam over America, totaling some 60,000. The animal is very hardy and practically immune from disease. It will thrive and prosper where sheep and cattle would starve to death.

Interesting Prehistoric Relic.

A discovery that throws light on prehistoric times has been made in central France. In the cave of the "Three Brothers," at Montesquieu, a wall painting, made in elemental colors of black and yellow, has been found by savants. It is apparently 15,000 years old. It represents a man, walking to the left, naked and bearded with stripes. His body is leaping forward, with his arms in front, and hands joined. On his head is a sort of mask representing a stag, and a horse's tail is bound on his loins. Professor Begoen believes it represents a primitive sorcerer in the exercise of his mysteries, and that the cave in question was a prehistoric wizard's den.

It is conjectured the cave was walled up with its occupants during a volcanic eruption countless thousands of years ago.

Truly an Enchantress.

A writer of her times describes Mary, Queen of Scots as follows: "Other women might be beautiful, other women might have the same smooth, open brow; the same chiseled features and penciled eyebrows, the same delicate chin and white, full neck and bosom; ay, even the same long, soft, hazel eyes, and rich, dark, chestnut hair; but where was the woman in Europe whose glance, like hers, raised from under those sweeping eyelashes, found its way straight to the heart, whose smile seemed at once to entreat aid, to command, to extort obedience and bestow reward, like sunlight penetrating the coldest object and warming and brightening all within its sphere?"

SEES WEAK POINT

Old Man Sykes Recognizes Flaw in Optimistic Armor.

Little Run-In With His Better Half at the Breakfast Table, However, Showed Him the Road to Victory.

Old Man Sykes has become enamored of the cult that enthrones mind over matter and teaches that a man's happiness or misery in the world is determined by his mental outlook. Sykes reaps happiness from the mere fact of telling himself that everything is all right whether it is or not.

We are all, of course, merely having a little run-around here on earth between the cradle and the grave, and we are sure to meet with much unhappiness. Knowing this, and that no matter what happens in the meantime, we shall all make the same earthly finish, one might as well be good natured about it and get all the joy out of existence consistent with the laws of health and longevity. So Sykes is probably quite right about it, Glenn M. Farley writes in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. From a peevish and irascible individual, exceedingly sensitive to contact with every small unpleasantness, he has acquired an elephant hide for trouble. He was knocked down by an automobile the other day, sprawling on a muddy crossing, and picked himself up blithely, remarking smilingly to the careless driver that it was a beautiful day, but that it would probably rain before morning. The driver thanked his stars that the man was a nut and drove on. Sykes has passed through many of these tests and concluded that he had his armor all on.

But one morning the coffee was a bit off and Sykes remarked upon it pleasantly; Mrs. Sykes let him have the whole coffee pot in the neck. Her stomach has been bothering her lately, and she was in no mood for levity. And the regrettable part of the whole business was that Sykes let go of himself and swore fluently. Mind stepped out for a few minutes and matter reasserted itself. It was an awful fall! But it taught Sykes a lesson.

He sees now that he can do nothing with the mind-over-matter theory unless he leads Mrs. Sykes along the same path, and it is hard to argue with her when her stomach is not working right. She often comes to breakfast feeling that she could bite a spike in two if she had it; and then Sykes springs his mechanical smile and rids himself of some persiflage, and if there is anything handy she throws it at him. Sykes is now intriguing craftily to get her on a bread-and-milk diet and slip in a few charcoal tablets, feeling that she will have one of the sunniest dispositions in the world when her stomach is right. So the happiness of the Sykes family is tied up to the possibilities of bread and milk and charcoal tablets.

Upon such trifles as these hang the happiness and content of whole nations.

Preserving Forest of Marmora.

Two Englishwomen, Oxford forestry students, pay a tribute to the work done by the French in the protectorate of Morocco during the last nine years.

The very valuable forests of Marmora, which is the largest and most productive known forest of cork oak, has been surveyed, divided into compartments, they report, and fire-breaks have been made in it, which are used as motor roads, the first roads in the protectorate. Destruction of the forests by natives fighting for possession, by fires, and by indiscriminate charcoal burning has been stopped. Gangs of native charcoal burners have been organized under French foresters, and native opposition conciliated by monthly grants of charcoal.

In the Mogador and Agadir district, the forests of Argan, trees resembling the olive and bearing a similar fruit, yielding oil, were suffering from inroads of sand. These have been stopped by plantations of tamarisk and Aleppo pine. In the treeless districts trees have been planted in and near the towns for ornament and shade. These included eucalyptus, mulberry, plane, Aleppo pine and young poplars.

Tales of the Weird and Horrible.

A symptom of the renaissance of medievalism in Europe is the appearance of a magazine devoted entirely to the horrible and uncanny. Der Orchideengarten, published by Munich. In this "Garden of Orchids" are to be found the most slivery tales of Poe, Maupassant, Hawthorne and Hugo. Intermingled with modern psychic stories, while the old "Dance of Death" woodcuts find congenial companions in the futuristic monstrosities. There is a book department for the review of fantastic literature of all countries and ages. It would seem that the people of central Europe would have had enough of horrors during the last six years, but apparently they, like their ancestors of the middle ages, seek relief from the pain of the present in weird imaginings.—New York Independent.

Tracing River's Course to Sea.

A block of wood was cast into the Yellowstone river 11 years ago, by a resident of Glendive, Mont. It is slowly drifting to the sea. The inscription made upon it by the man who started it has been added to by two other persons, who picked it up and started it again on its way. It was last seen at Washburn, N. D.

Seven-year-old Mary Jane has an aunt, who is a schoolteacher and who is also very self-willed. At Mary Jane's home whenever the little girl displays any evidence of stubbornness, her parents straightway call her Aunt Mary.

One day she was over to auntie's and with her was discussing her future occupation. "You'll probably be a schoolteacher like me," auntie said. CYCLES OF LIFE AND DEATH Interesting Speculation Concerning Possible Composition of Corporeal Atoms of the Body.

Did you know that perhaps somewhere in your body is a bit of Julius Caesar, or perhaps King Solomon. John Phil, scientist, in his "Seven Follies of Science," says: "From birth to death we have been continually borrowing, continually paying back. Part of our physical organization may have come from the fruit of the tropics, part from the mosses of the frozen North. We may hold in our bones, muscles and brains materials which once formed parts of sheep, wolves, and in all the millions of years during which composition and decomposition of organic matter has gone on, it is quite probable that some portion of our physical system may have formed part of the material organization of thousands of other animals, men included. The hubbelle may have in his body atoms which once formed part of Homer, of Plato and of Archimedes. In the frame of the beggar may be built material which once formed part of Solomon, and some atoms which enabled Alexander or Bruce to achieve their fame, may now form part of the body of a leper. Even among the corporeal atoms which now make up our own bodies may be particles which helped to incarnate the person of Jesus Christ, or which lent physical energy to the burning eloquence of St. Paul. Organic life has gone on unceasingly for untold ages in ever-recurring cycles. We cannot move a muscle, or give way to an emotion, or even think a thought without burning up some part of our corporeal frame, and the used-up material is speedily ejected and then transformed into the clothing of a new life."

NO OLD MAIDS IN BABYLON

Ancient City Had a System Which Assured the Marriage of All the Females.

The first known auctions of the world were held in Babylon many centuries before Christ. The articles auctioned consisted of all the virgins in the city, and the sale was held once a year. On the day selected the girls were brought to the market place and there ordered to remove their garments. All the young men of the city were also gathered and the maidens, one by one, were led to a block where the youth of the city could inspect them. The beautiful girls were sold first and every effort made to get as much as possible for their charms.

The young men of those days were as eager to win the fairest maid possible by bidding as men of a later age were to win them by brave deeds or pleadings. As a result fortunes were in the hands of the auctioneer by the time the homely girls were reached. This fortune was then divided up and the auctioneer took a new life. The homeliest girl was given the largest part of the money collected from beauty and many a poor man found himself with a very homely wife but a comfortable start in business. The system at least did away with old maids and bachelors and insured a steady growth of population and few dependents on the state.

When Diners Ate Their Plates.

The word fritter, which with cooler weather will become popular once more, originates from an old French word meaning to fry, which comes from the Latin past participle of the verb frigere, to freeze.

Similarly, friandise takes its name from the same Latin verb or from the French "franciser," meaning to break into pieces, or, as some experts believe, from the Latin "fricare," to rub. Any meat fried in a pan is friandise, according to French culinary definition.

Another word of French and Latin birth is tart. Tart is a culinary corruption of the word "tourte" (French), derived from "tarteine," a slice of bread. This comes from the Latin "tortuere," to twist, hence the word "tortie" means a twist or roll of bread. In the middle ages there was a deficiency in plates, and so, for a substitute, an undercrust of bread served as a plate. For a long time in France this undercrust of the "tourte," or "tarte," was the most common of plates. After everything had been served diners ate even their "plates."

In time these dinner plates, made of dinner rolls, came to be prepared specially and developed into a cake-like batter, which was filled with dainty food. And so they were called tarts and tartlettes, and were served as a distinct dish.—Gas Logie.

Stradivarius Violins.

Stradivarius was born in 1644 and died in 1737. He worked until he was over 90 years of age and turned out a large number of violins and violoncellos. Altogether it has been estimated that about one thousand violins are attributed to him and about three hundred other instruments, among them different kinds of viols, some bass viols and also some lutes, guitars and mandolins, very exquisitely wrought. Eugene Ysaie and Jan Kubelik are both the owners of genuine Stradivarius violins. The label in a genuine instrument is supposed to have been made of paper.

Two Views.

"We'll never be rich, if you keep on spending all I earn," said a young man. "That's true, and we'll never get rich if you don't hustle a bit and try to make a little more than I can spend."

OBJECT LESSON ON TRAFFIC

Accident Added Weight to New York Traffic Policeman's Order to Pedestrians.

On a road on Long Island there is a dangerous spot where five main roads come together. It is said that more than 100,000 automobiles pass there on Sunday. A stocky-built little policeman, known to nearly all New York motorists, stands there all day long regulating traffic. His arms are continually going like semaphores, but he always manages to say something pleasant—or caustic—to passers-by. This little policeman is very proud of his responsibility, and is imperious of gesture.

At a busy moment on a Sunday afternoon not long ago a pedestrian started to cross the road among the turning cars. Out of the corner of his eye the little policeman had just noted the approach of a woman driving a flivver.

"Stand back there!" he called to the pedestrian. "Don't you dare to step off that curb!" This with an imperious wave of his white-gloved hand. "Stop!" he again ordered as the man started again. "There's a woman driving a car—never can tell what they'll do!"

At that very moment, while the policeman's back was turned, the woman driver became confused, and with a dull plunk her car hit the officer squarely in the back, knocking him down and shattering his arms and face. Luckily, he was not run over. His dignity, though, was terribly upset. Painfully rising, he brushed himself off, but said not a word to the woman. "Now," he called out, shaking his fist at the pedestrian on the sidewalk, "now, I reckon you'll stand back when I tell you!"—Saturday Evening Post.

PROFIT GOES TO UNCLE SAM

All Paper Money That Goes From the Treasury and Fails to Return Is "Velvet."

If you subscribe to the philosophy that one man's loss is another man's gain, to whom do you suppose, does the profit accrue when you forget to take your package from its hiding place in the parlor stove before lighting the fire in the fall? If you drop a dollar bill and it blows into the gutter and is never recovered, who profits?

If you fall into the river and drown and your remains take their place permanently in Davy Jones' locker, who is to the good to the extent of the modest roll in your vest pocket?

The answer to one and all of these questions is, Uncle Sam. Every piece of paper money that goes out from the treasury and fails to return, profits the government to the extent of its face value. If it is a gold or silver certificate the metal which was placed in the treasury for its redemption is never called forth.

If it is a federal reserve note or a national bank note, the securities that have been deposited as a guarantee at the time of its issue, or their equivalent, remain in the treasury. So is there solace to the patriot who so loses his wallet that if it is not found by another its contents are applied to the expenses of the government.

Doublings Now Merely Bullion.

Should one find a pirate's buried treasure he would have to dispose of his Spanish gold at its bullion value, for, since August 1, 1908, when the commoner made proclamation from the steps of the Royal exchange of London that after that date the doubloon would cease to be legal tender in the West Indies, including British Guiana, the doubloon has not been the precious thing it was.

In 1730 and for a century after, it was worth 88, more or less. It has ceased to be coined in its native country, Spain, and since 1908 it has been unpopular in the West Indies, where for a long time it figured in a mixed circulation embracing British, United States and Spanish coins. In the interest of romance, however, the name must survive. It signifies nothing more than that the coin was double the value of a pistole, but the doubloon was never such a mouth-filling mockery as pieces of eight, which suggests great riches, but means only Spanish silver dollars, pieces equivalent to eight reals.

Invitations Came, All Right.

Elizabeth's second birthday was to be celebrated, so father got the job of mailing the invitations. In his hurry he forgot to do so, and dropped them in the mail box in Terre Haute. Returning late that evening, he told his wife how he remembered to mail the invitations, but not until he was out of town. With a withering glance she said: "You poor boob! I guess you didn't notice they were all marked 'City.'" Time being scarce, she at once set to work to mail a fresh batch of invitations, which arrived on the same mail as the first, the Terre Haute postmaster taking a chance on what had happened and sending them to the Indianapolis office.—Indianapolis News.

Acquired Hauteur.

"Miss Graham has returned from an expensive finishing school."

"What do you suppose she learned there?"

"For one thing she learned how to keep her chin at the correct altitude for a young woman whose father is worth in the neighborhood of 20 million dollars."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

BACKING UP PROF

The Kind That Princess Anne People Cannot Deny

Many an earnest Princess Anne man or woman has publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills.

Week after week, month after month you're read their statements.

Would these Princess Anne people recommend any medicine if it were not good?

Would they confirm and repeat their statements after years had passed?

Local proof is good evidence. Testimony confirmed years after is better evidence.

The following Princess Anne statement leaves no room for doubt.

It must convince every kidney sufferer who reads it.

If your back aches—if your kidneys are weak, profit by the experience of Thomas H. Heath, 114 Beckford ave.

He says: "I suffered from severe pains through my back and loins. I was unable to rest well at night and mornings felt tired and worn out. I suffered from frequent dizzy spells and at times they were so severe I could hardly stand. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me in every way and my system was entirely rid of kidney complaint." Over five years later Mr. Heath said: "Nothing has changed my good opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills. I always recommend them when I get a chance."

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Heath had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgs., Buffalo, N. Y.

PART PAY ON THEIR BOARD

Good Thing If Some Other Idlers Would Follow the Example of This Briefless Lawyer.

Still, /one must conclude, humanity is progressing. A lawyer who is occupied most of his days in smoking a briar pipe with his feet higher than his head got ashamed of himself and is raising a patch of potatoes. Now, that will be all clear gain to the useful production of the world. Suppose all the men who are principally engaged in polishing the seat of their pants come to a similar state of mind!

Suppose all the fellows who are camping around the streets and offices waiting to snare a vagrant dollar should get the idea that they ought to produce something useful and help pay their board to the world. Suppose this impossible situation—suppose that they all become ashamed of themselves and produce a few potatoes or beans, or even spinach or carrots. Why, the bins and granaries of the world would be simply bursting with food. We might be short many things, but not food.

A lot of people who are paying their board with talk could make a wonderful increase in food production if they decided to go to work.

We would not only have more food, which is highly desirable, but we would have less talk; the service would cut two ways.

The other morning a man in a car came down the street at about 50 an hour and blew me off the crossing. It looked like a case of emergency. I thought, at the least, that he was taking somebody to the hospital, or it might have been a body to the morgue, or a case of murder and he was going after the police. So I checked him down into the next block and watched him go into his office, take off his coat, light a cigar, and sit down at his desk and read a magazine.

What do you suppose was his hurry?

This man could handle ten acres of potatoes handsily on his lost time, and at the same time cease blowing people off the street crossings. That would cut two ways, too.

Winsted Breaks In Again.

Folks of Winsted, Conn., still are carrying jugs and milk pails to Fred Helmer's place on Platt Hill, and standing in line to buy a pint or so of milk, though most of the kick is gone from the milk now.

The "insiders" who got around the first day or two after Fred's cows got soused on cider apples, say that the beverage was a most exhilarating milk punch with a remarkably delicate flavor.

In spite of the impetus the cows' spree gave to his milk business, Fred has strung some barbed wire to keep the cows away from the cider apples. It's no joke, he says, to have a lot of bilious cows come reeling home long after sundown, milk 'em by lantern light and improvise a Turkish bath in the cow stable by draping each roystering creature with burlap bags soaked in boiling water. Even though Fred took every possible precaution, one of the cows died and he says he is going to stick to running a dairy farm and not try to combine it with a distillery and a sanatorium.—New York Tribune.

Sunken Vessels "Speared."

A device recently patented for raising sunken vessels promises to be fairly effective. The principle underlying the invention is the firing into the vessels a novel form of grip. This, after penetrating the hull, automatically opens out two extending arms like our hay unloaders, which firmly grasp the plates. The grips are discharged from a special gun by means of compressed air. After being loaded on the surface, the gun is submerged to the level of the vessel, and is then fired by electricity, magnetic power being employed to keep the muzzle of the gun pointing toward the vessel. The gun can be raised and reloaded as often as is necessary. When a sufficient number of grips have been placed in position, the vessel, if it is not at too great a depth, can be refloated by means of the cables attached to them. If, however, the water is too deep cylinders are slid down the cables, and compressed air is pumped into them until they are buoyant enough to raise the vessel.

Smash-Up Didn't Occur.

James B. Regan, former proprietor of the Hotel Knickerbocker, has just returned from England after a successful test of his electrical device to prevent accidents on railroads. The test was made on the Great Eastern railway. Mr. Regan said the device was attached to a 14-car train and with no one on board the locomotive, at a speed of 60 miles an hour, approached a stalled train. It automatically stopped when several hundred yards away. Mr. Regan added that the test took place before J. H. Thomas, head of the Railroad Workers of England, and several moving picture operators, who figured there might be a wreck.

"If the device had failed to work, it would have been some picture," Mr. Regan said.—New York Times.

Whisky in Pig Carcasses.

Canada is no oasis in the American Sahara and illicit liquor trafficking is being developed into a fine art, according to an illustrated article in Popular Mechanics Magazine. All manner of clever dodges are resorted to by the whisky runners, possibly one of the most original being the shipment of a large consignment of liquor packed in the carcasses of pigs. The liquor was discovered by officers as the "pork" was being unloaded from the freight cars.

Four Billion a Year For Taxes

One of the things which the coming short session of Congress will have to wrestle with is the problem of the nation's finances.

It is easy for politicians glibly to promise a reduction of taxes, but not so easy to fulfill the promise. Secretary Houston makes a statement that for at least three years to come the national government must raise at least four billion dollars a year by taxation. While he urges, as he did last year, that the taxes be readjusted so as to bear less oppressively upon industry, and less unfavorably on the cost of living, he sees no possibility of reducing their total amount below $4,000,000,000 a year.

For, besides paying the government's running expenses, which even before the war were a billion a year, we must now pay another billion for interest on the public debt. And that is not all. In the next three years eight billion dollars of debt falls due, consisting of Victory notes, War Savings Stamps and floating loans at the banks. Only by strict economy can the government make $4,000,000,000 a year pay these debts and expenses.

A Reliable Remedy For Colds And Croup

It would surprise you to know the number of people who use and recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mrs. J. N. Rose, Verona, Pa., writes: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used by myself and husband for a number of years for coughs and colds. I also gave it to my little daughter three and a half years of age when she had croup last winter. It broke up the attack at once. I have recommended this remedy to many of my friends and neighbors who have also used it with good results."

We Welcome Honest Comparison

We have nothing to fear from the man who visits every store on the Shore before he buys his Overcoat or Suit—he usually comes back to us.

At the very beginning of the season we made up our minds to absorb the drop in the wholesale market, and all our prices represent rock-bottom figures.

The styles and tailoring of our Suits and Coats are beyond comparison. As to value (although "how good," not "how cheap" is our standard), we eagerly invite comparison.

You'll find our claim true—we offer the utmost in value at every price.

Now is the Time To Buy Shoes

NAVY "ACTS" IN THRILLING FILM

The greatest serial picture ever produced, "Bride 13," has been booked by the management of the Auditorium for Saturday night, December 4th. This is a William Fox production in 15 episodes—not a war picture—and is far ahead of any other serial ever presented by the management.

"Bride 13" is so packed with thrills and action, with daring deeds, deep-dyed villainy and enduring love, that it is a question how to describe in a few words the wonder and interest of the picture.

First of all, for the first time the United States Navy co-operated with a film corporation, an entire fleet of warships and other units having taken part in the filming of the serial. Think of it—American dreadnaughts, cruisers, submarines, sub chasers, destroyers, seaplanes and "blimps," and other components of a modern fleet engaged exclusively for months in producing a great motion picture.

"Bride 13" is presented with a super-fine all-star cast. The staging is nothing short of gorgeous, ranging from the home of a millionaire in fashionable Newport to the Northern Coast of Africa, over sea and over land.

If you are a lover of serials you must not miss this picture. If you never have followed serials go and see episode No. 1 of "Bride 13," on the opening date and you will be clamoring to see the remaining chapters.

"Joshua Simpkins" Coming

The New England comedy drama, "Joshua Simpkins," will be produced at the Auditorium Friday night, December 3rd. This is a rural play in four acts, bound together by an interesting plot and produced with special scenery carried by the company.

This play contains an interesting and intelligible plot, but it is not allowed to interfere with the fun, which is said to be in abundance. During the run of the play some startling scenes and situations are seen, the principal of which is the saw-mill in the third act, shown in complete operation cutting up real timber. The saw used is the genuine article, the same as usually seen in large country saw-mills. An excellent band and fine orchestra accompany this attraction. The band will parade at noon, when some good music may be looked for, all being dressed in burlesque make-ups.

Murray-Richardson Wedding

Miss Ruby Mildred Richardson and Mr. William James Murray were married last Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Richardson, near Loretto. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Holland under an arch of evergreens and mistletoe in the presence of their immediate families and a few friends.

The bride wore a gown of blue chiffon over blue satin and a blue panen velvet hat. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses and fern.

After a reception Mr. and Mrs. Murray went to the home of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. John Murray, at Allen, Md., where they will make their home.

James E. Sudler Dead

Mr. James Emory Sudler, son of the late Jubner Sudler, and a brother of the late John S. Sudler, fish commissioner under Frank Brown, died last Wednesday night at the old homestead at Fairmount, of general debility. Mr. Sudler was born and lived all his life, 89 years, on the old homestead and was a member of one of the oldest and most prominent families in Somerset county.

Mr. Sudler never married. During his early life he was a farmer. He was a staunch Democrat, but never held any political office. He was buried Friday from St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church, of which he was a member.

Judge and Mrs. Robert F. Duer entertained at cards at their home on south Main street last Tuesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Duer's sister, Miss Ellen D. McMaster. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. E. Herrman Cohn, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Gelder, Mr. and Mrs. Omar J. Crosswell, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Myers, Mr. and Mrs. L. Creston Beauchamp, Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Dashiell, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. N. Bowland, Misses Ellen D. McMaster, Mildred Beauchamp, Jane D. Wilson, Anna Rose Cohn, Amanda Lankford, Irene W. Taylor, Dr. Charles T. Fisher and Mr. Morris H. Adams.

Maryland's Official Vote

The State Board of Canvassers has completed the count of the vote in Maryland at the November election. The official figures show that Mr. Harding received 55,491 more votes than did Governor Cox and that Mr. Weller received 15,799 more votes than Senator Smith. The vote for United States Senator was as follows:

Weller, Republican, 184,999.
Smith, Democrat, 169,200.
Iverson, Independent, 21,345.
Hawkins, Independent, 6,532.
Lang, Labor, 2,569.
Toole, Socialist, 6,559.

The total figures show that Mr. Weller lacked 21,202 votes of having a majority over all the candidates in the field, as the combined vote of the Democrats, Socialists, Laborites and Third party people aggregated 206,221.

The constitutional amendment to increase the pay of the members of the Legislature was defeated by the following vote: For, 76,367; against, 116,762.

On the proposition to increase the salary of the clerks of the Circuit Courts the vote was: For, 58,081; against, 127,638.

Washington High School Notes

On Wednesday morning, November 24th, the literary society was rendered by a section of the sophomore class, which was very interesting and appropriate for the occasion, it being Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Fitzgerald spent the holidays in Baltimore.

Miss Ashby spent her Thanksgiving in Washington.

Miss McAllen has been visiting friends in Wilmington, Del.

Several members of the High School spent Thanksgiving with their friends and relatives.

Miss Frances Moore, our former Domestic Science teacher, was married to Mr. Elmo Powell on Wednesday evening, November 24th.

Democratic Campaign Expenses

Dr. J. Hubert Wade, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, last week filed in the Court House at Hagerstown a statement of the receipts and expenditures of the committee during the recent campaign. Total receipts were $57,889.63 and expenditures $57,858.20. The report covered 21 typewritten pages.

The largest contributors were: Samuel Leibowitz, $3,500, and Frank A. Furst, $3,000. Other contributors were: Senator John Walter Smith, $1,780, and an additional contribution of $1,918 for printing, telegrams and other expenses.

Mrs. E. J. Carey is spending a few weeks with her sister, Mrs. Edward Gibbons, in Cambridge, Md.

PUBLIC RECEPTION AT RECTORY

For Bishop Davenport, The Rector And His Family Thursday Night

A public reception will be held at St. Andrew's rectory, 82 Prince William street, Thursday evening, December 2nd, from 8 to 10 o'clock, for the Bishop of the Diocese, the Rt. Rev. George W. Davenport, and also the rector, Rev. Dr. Archbold and Mrs. Archbold. The citizens of Princess Anne are hereby invited to attend, so as to meet Dr. and Mrs. Archbold, as well as the Bishop.

Dr. Archbold and family came to Princess Anne on October 1st, from Lakefield, Toronto, Canada. Since that time he has been conducting services in St. Andrew's Church. He was born in England, where he received his early education. As a young man he went to Canada and finished his theological training at Trinity University, Toronto. He was ordained in St. Alban's Cathedral in 1901.

Tuberculosis Christmas Seals

Organization has already been begun in the towns and counties of Maryland for the sale of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals. Already prominent women in every community are making preparations to sell as many of these as they can by personal solicitation. The stores have announced their willingness to help by placing them on sale; the women's clubs all over the state are eagerly lending their aid to the good cause, and even some of the school children have announced their intention of contributing their mite by investing their pennies in the brightly colored seals and urging their companions to do the same.

Heretofore the little stamps have been known to many people as Red Cross stamps and they have bought and used them with the idea that in doing so they were helping that great international organization. This year when they see the stamps they will find that instead of bearing the Red Cross they are adorned with a double-barred cross, the insignia of a work that touches every home and is of first importance to every individual in the State.

The money secured from the sale of Christmas Seals forms the only source of income of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association, that wonderful society which seeks to protect every man, woman and child among its inhabitants from the most insidious danger with which they are confronted in their daily life.

Colored Agricultural Exhibition

The Fourth Annual Colored Agricultural Exhibition which was held in the Metropolitan M. E. Church was one of the grandest ever held in the county, as it included a large number of first-class exhibits from the farm, homes and schools. It was well attended by farmers, their families and town people of Princess Anne and Salisbury, Dr. and Mrs. Hargiet, of Bridgeville, Del., and a number of white friends attended the show. The Domestic Art and Science display of the Princess Anne Academy was a credit to the county and the Academy. The judges spoke of this work as being very good. The Boys' Agricultural Clubs had a large exhibit of corn and potatoes. One feature of the show was the sewing and the canning by the girls.

On behalf of the colored citizens of Somerset county the local county agent wishes to give credit and thanks to the banking institutions, merchants and friends for their assistance and interest in these agricultural shows which are helping to hold up, besides raising the standard of farming and home-making in the county.

Dinner In Honor Of Mr. Munsey

The dinner of welcome to Frank A. Munsey, now owner of the Baltimore American and The Star, which will be given at the Hotel Rennert, Baltimore, this (Tuesday) evening by the civic, commercial and financial interests of Maryland, will be a real old Maryland feast. There will be Maryland oysters, chicken gumbo, breast of Guinea hen, Smithfield ham and all the fixin's.

Preceding the dinner Mr. Munsey will be presented to all of the guests. The dinner will be served at 7.30 o'clock. All of the speakers, excepting Mr. Munsey, will be limited to 10 minutes each. The speakers are: James H. Preston, chairman, introducing the toastmaster; Hon. Frank I. Duncan, toastmaster; Hon. Albert C. Ritchie, Governor of Maryland; Hon. William F. Broening, Mayor of Baltimore; General Felix Agnus, Stuart Olivier, Mr. Munsey.

The Civic Club will hold a bazaar at the home of the president, Mrs. George W. Maslin, on Wednesday afternoon, December 8th, at 3 o'clock. Attractive and inexpensive gifts on sale, also groceries, cakes and hot chocolate.

REV. WALTER ARCHBOLD, D.D.
Will Be Instituted As Rector Dec. 3d

The service of Institution of the Rev. Dr. Archbold as Rector of Somerset Parish will be held in St. Andrew's Church, Princess Anne, next Friday, December 3d, at 10.30 a. m. The Right Rev. George W. Davenport, Bishop of the Diocese, will be assisted in this service by visiting clergy. The public is cordially invited to be present at this impressive service.

STATE EDUCATION BOARD MEETS

Tuition For Pupils Living In Adjoining Counties Must Be Paid

The cost of county school operation is mounting rapidly and is likely to mount even higher, according to a report made to the State Board of Education at its meeting last Wednesday in Baltimore. The report showed the school section of virtually every one of the county tax rates this year is much heavier than last, and indications of its further increase is presenting a problem to the board. It probably will be up to the State Board of Education, therefore, to do a large part of educational work among the citizens of the counties to convince them of the need of more money if the schools are not to deteriorate.

The report presented shows that Worcester county leads in the amount of the tax rate for schools, $1 of the $1.50 rate there being for that purpose. Somerset is second, with 93 1/2 cents, out of a total rate of $1.95, and Wicomico is third, with 92 1/2 cents out of a rate of $1.63. Baltimore city, with only 57 1/2 cents appropriated last year to the schools out of a total rate of $2.97, falls far behind the counties.

Representatives of Somerset, Worcester, Wicomico and Dorchester counties were before the board in a controversy over payment of tuition for pupils living near the dividing lines of counties and going to counties other than their own for schooling. The board decided that the old law, permitting children to do this, could be applied to high schools which did not exist when the law was passed. It ordered the counties owing the money, therefore, to pay the counties which presented the bills.

The State Board created a new position of chief clerk, to relieve Assistant Superintendent Reavis from office details so he can devote more time to field work. Thomas A. Murray, of Baltimore, for 10 years a clerk in the City Comptroller's office, but more recently a traveling salesman, was named for the position. Mr. Murray will have entire charge of the office work. The salary is $2,500 a year.

Army Service Schools

So far as military education in the Army is concerned, Maryland during the last fiscal year had located within its confines more special service schools than any State. That fact is referred to in the annual report by Gen. P. C. March, chief of the General Staff of the Army, who mentions them as follows: Tank Corps at Camp Meade, Chemical Warfare School at Edgewood Arsenal, Ordnance School of Application at Aberdeen Proving Ground and Motor Transport School at Camp Holabird.

In this connection General March says that work at all these service schools was carried out vigorously during the year, but with this qualifying comment: "It was satisfactory as far as the facilities of a depleted organization would permit."

Miss Margaret L. Dixon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Upshur Dixon, of Princess Anne, and Mr. Samuel S. Barnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Barnes, of King's Creek, were married Monday afternoon of last week. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Littleton E. H. Smith, at the Presbyterian Manse, Philadelphia. The newlyweds came home on Thanksgiving Day and are spending some time at the home of the groom's parents.

From the Hilltop

(© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

He saw her for the first time as he stood on the threshold of his office, turning the key in the door. It was the closing hour for the office force and likewise the end of one of the shifts. Consequently, the narrow, ill-paved street was crowded with the jostling outpourings of stoop-shouldered men and somber women, among whom she, in her plain but well-fitting suit, with her lithe, impetuous walk, stood out conspicuous.

John Colt had been some days now in this grimy mushroom village grown up about his father's factories. Fresh from college, he was looking things over, learning the ropes in preparation for the time when the vast business would be his.

If at times he sickened with the reek of engine oil, of soft coal smoke, of humanity bent over the machines, he bolstered his resolution with reminders of Duty or of Beatrice, the girl back home—and went for a walk on the hills beyond the town.

It was on one of those walks that he saw the girl again. She was coming out of a tumble-down shack on the outskirts of a quarry. At her side trotted an unkempt youngster of indeterminate gender who was screwing two unsanitary fists into his eyes.

"That's all right, Jimmy," he heard her say. Then, as she caught sight of him she came quickly over. "Oh—I thought you were the company doctor. But I guess you are the son of the man who owns all this," she indicated the shanty with a wave of her hand and in her voice John fancied he detected a note of scorn. "I must get a doctor. Jimmy's brother was working

"It is Dreadful, isn't it?"

In one of the condemned freight elevators when the car slipped and he hurt his back. No one was around at the time and he managed to crawl home.

It was but natural for John to offer his services, and the girl, dispatching Jimmy to report to his mother that the doctor would be sent as soon as found, fell into step at John's side.

Their conversation was desultory. But gradually John learned that she was the teacher of the one small school maintained for the factory children, and he gathered further, although she was reticent on the subject, that she spent her leisure hours in various kindly services among the families of her flock—reading aloud to Tony Valeska, the cripple, showing Mrs. Donahue how to keep alive the three babies left out of seven, teaching Jimmy's brother how to spell and do simple sums. And he discovered that her name was Frances Warren.

Dating from that walk, John sought rather than avoided opportunities to meet her, although his conscience sharply recommended the latter course of action. For between them, as far as any further intimacy was concerned, stood the great barrier of his engagement to Beatrice Hammond, unannounced as yet, but none the less binding.

Until recently he had been tremendously satisfied with Beatrice's capitulation. Yet now that he had met Frances, he was forced to admit that too late he had learned the difference between infatuation and the strong deep love it is given a man to know but once.

Then Beatrice wrote that she was going through on her way to Bar Harbor. Would he meet her train—she was very anxious to see him. John read into her words a possible intention to consult him about making public their engagement, perhaps about setting the wedding date itself—questions she would undoubtedly prefer to discuss in person rather than trust to the cold channels of correspondence.

As he waited for the train, John made an effort to assume the look of expectant fiancé and to drive from his thoughts the picture of Frances as he had last seen her, saying good-by to him on the schoolhouse steps. She had not known that he was considering it a final farewell, that he had made up his mind to be true to Beatrice in thought as well as in deed. She had just been relating some funny remark of Jimmy's and he recalled her low, delicious laugh and the sparkle in her eyes. Frances—Frances—Frances—

Then the train drew in and presently John found himself holding a slim hand, while Beatrice's mother considerably withdrew a little. It was only a five-minute stopover, hardly enough to bother with—yet during so brief an interval the destinies of nations may be changed.

"Jack," Beatrice spoke hurriedly. "This must seem brutal, but the time is so short. And I am making it my punishment to tell you face to face instead of writing. Our engagement was a mistake. I thought I loved you, but since you went away—oh, I am ashamed! But Harvey Wilson came home and found—oh, don't take it so badly!"

Afterward John remembered that last remark. He must have acted better than he knew. At the moment, he murmured assurance of forgiveness, patted her hand in a brotherly manner, and, as the brakeman signaled, helped her aboard the train.

That afternoon he and Frances climbed the hill as the westerling sun flung its radiance abroad. Reaching the summit, they paused in the lee of a wind-bent group of trees.

Suddenly, John spoke. "Frances, I know what you think I am—a careless dog, spending money right and left with never a sense of responsibility. And I'll confess that is what I have been. But somehow, being down here in the heart of things, and above all knowing you, has changed me. I begin to see that a man can do more than install spotless lunchrooms in his plant, put mirrors in the cloakrooms, and pay a fair wage. I want to do my little bit to change conditions such as those below." He indicated the smoke-darkened huddle of buildings in the valley.

"It is dreadful, isn't it?" Frances said sadly, and quoted slowly, "Not that they starve, but that they starve so dreamlessly." For she saw not a vague cluster of shanties, but the homes of Jimmy and Mrs. Donahue and Tony Valeska.

"Yes," agreed John, "but look!" She followed his eyes to the far horizon where a smoke-free world began—green meadows, clean woods, and, at the very rim, the blue-penciled line of an inland sea. "Our generation is like this hilltop. From it we glimpse the world as it might be. It is something at least, to have the vision."

Then he turned to the girl. "Oh, Frances, I love you beyond words—love you for waking in me what little idealism I have, love you for your beautiful self! Will you marry me and work with me to make our visions come true?"

Frances was silent for a moment. Then she raised happy eyes to his. "Oh, John!" she cried. That was all, but the way she said it promised all he wished.

AMERICAN LEGION IN 1792

First Regular Army Was Patterned After That of the Fighters of Old Rome.

The first "American Legion" was founded in 1792, and its existence, by that name terminated in 1796. War department records show that when the regular army was reorganized in 1792, following the Revolutionary war, it was first officially designated the "Legion," and was divided into four "sub-legions," of which the Fourth United States Infantry was part, the Detroit News states.

The idea of designating the United States army as the legion originated with General Knox, secretary of war under George Washington. The army was patterned after the Roman legion, the old military organization under which Julius Caesar and his successors conquered as much of the world as was then known.

The "American Legion" was commanded by Gen. Anthony Wayne ("Mad Anthony") and was organized under his direction at Pittsburgh in May, 1792. President Washington instructed General Wayne "not to spare powder and lead, so that the men be made marksmen." The legion fought its only battle as the legion at Miami Rapids, in the Kentucky-Ohio Indian country, August 20, 1794, engaging a force of hostile Indians. In 1796, it having been decided that the Roman formation was not suitable for fighting Indians, the legion was disbanded and reorganized into four regiments of infantry.

Justified.

"My friend," said the uncouth stranger, "do you go in much for this uplift stuff?"

"Yes," replied the prosperous-looking citizen. "I've made millions out of it."

"Just as I thought. I suspected somebody was getting a rakeoff from all the money donated for first one thing and then another. What's your line?"

"I manufacture TNT."

Literal Cure.

"Why have you left your own physician and gone to Doctor Fakem, who hasn't half the experience and skill?"

"Because Doctor Fakem, who has registered, can always supply a remedy for that all-gone feeling."

MAKE OUT GIFT LIST EARLY

Thoughtful Shoppers Start Task Several Weeks Before Rush Begins in Busy Stores.

THE buyer who really puts some altruism into her Christmas gifts makes out her list several weeks in advance. If she be a canny somebody she has kept her list of the year before and is able to see what were her gifts the preceding season, and thus avoid the risk of repeating herself. Still more canny is she if she has made mental or written notes from time to time of various articles for which she has heard a desire expressed by friends. Such note taking will greatly lessen her labors.

For it is no light thing to choose Christmas gifts judiciously. The whole secret of their acceptability lies in their appropriateness. Not only must they be appropriate to the person from whom they come and to whom they go, but to the circumstances in which the latter is placed. For an instance, there are few housekeepers who do not welcome an addition of fine linen to their store. But if to a housekeeper who lives plainly in simple surroundings one sends a superb lace-trimmed tea cloth or dollies that throw all her other possessions into the shade, there is an unsuitability about the gift that robs it of much of its charm.—Harper's Bazar.

ART AND SCIENCE IN TOYS

Playthings for the Kiddies Necessary to the Proper Conduct of Their Society.

WHILE the making of toys is an art that is probably practically as old as the world itself, it has been only within recent years that science has bothered itself about them. Less than half a century ago they were regarded merely as playthings—amusing diversions for children that were by no means necessary to their well-being. Today, however, science insists that there is a well-defined philosophy underlying the use of toys; that they are the tools with which the little ones ply their trade; the paraphernalia necessary to the proper conduct of their society; that dolls, for example, are more to them than the associates that help to entertain them in that they aid them in the attainment of their mental growth by stimulating the natural emotions which must be experienced in later life.

Whether this theory of the scientists is correct or not, the fact remains that children have always had the playthings requisite for their imitations of the domestic life and business affairs of older people; that they have always required their elders to provide them with such inventions, and that, when they could not obtain these toys by any other means they themselves have sought and found objects that might be made to suit their purposes. Even the somnolent middle Ages did not put an end to their pastimes. The toys in which they found diversion may have been more simple, but, as they met the demands of nature, they played their allotted part in the scheme of human development.—Public Opinion.

Ancient Christmas Custom.

Many quaint customs are observed at Christmas time in various English country parishes. In that of Cumnor, in Berkshire, of which the living is a vicarage and the church a beautiful specimen of an old English parochial edifice, all who pay tithes repair, after evening service on Christmas day, to the vicarage where the vicar is held in duty bound, by a usage centuries old, to regale them with four bushels of malt brewed into ale or beer, two bushels of wheat baked into bread, and half a hundred weight of cheese. Any remnants of this feast are distributed among the poor of the parish after morning prayer the next day.

POOR THINGS

Tramp Birds: They might throw us a few crumbs on Christmas morning.

Traditions of Christmas Festival.

In the records of every nation we find traditions of the Christmas festival, traditions which have been handed down from generation to generation in oft-told tales which thrilled the hearts of the listeners with alternate fear and delight. Sir Walter Scott tells us that they who are born upon Christmas or Good Friday will see spirits, and will have the power of commanding them. He also adds that the Spaniards imputed the downcast looks of their monarch, Philip II, to the disagreeable visions to which this privilege subjected him.

Bring Smiles of Gladness.

It is not so much the thought of receiving the customary holiday gifts which most pleases the fancy, but rather that pleasure the heart derives from dwelling upon joyful surprises it may bestow upon others. To bring a smile of gladness upon another's face is, indeed, a boon more precious than a Christmas gift, and the joy of bestowing can never be equaled by the receiving.

THE GREATEST FARMER IN THE WORLD

One-fourth of the wheat we grow is the result of the researches of the Government. After years of untiring experiment and investigation, the Government, through the Department of Agriculture, was enabled to introduce into this country the remarkable Durum wheat through which our production has been increased fully twenty-five per cent. This has been only one of many surprising but little-known accomplishments of the Government, which are covered in the interesting series of stories for which we have the exclusive right of distribution in this community.

WALKING AND TALKING DOLLS

Lifelike Forms Gracefully Step Across the Floor Saying "Mamma" or "Papa."

DOLLS that walk and talk and wink and roll their eyes are Parisian Christmas novelties in toyland. These dolls seem almost human, as they walk in sprightly style across the floor saying "mamma" or "papa" just as real children would.

Walking dolls being a new invention, seem wonderful and bring screams of delight from little girls and boys, too, who watch with intense interest every step of the lifelike dolls as they are exhibited in the shops.

The machinery that moves the doll's legs is set in motion by a key that is inserted in the works at the waist line.

The voice is made active by works that are wound with a key.

The eyes move as the body sways from side to side, just as the real children's eyes roll and blink, etc.

CHRISTMAS WEEK IN ENGLAND

Time When Scattered Families Are United and Tender Memories Are Revived.

MANY and great are the changes which have occurred in England since Dickens wrote "A Christmas Carol," but they have not affected the national love for the festival and the determination to preserve unimpaired the traditional warmth and heartiness of its celebration. Christmas week is still the great week of the year for the English people. It is the one week when scattered families are reunited, when tender memories and old associations are revived, when friend greets friend with a cheery expansiveness in striking contrast with the characteristic reserve of the English nature, so, undemonstrative to those who do not know it well, apparently so distant and unsympathetic.

From Wednesday all business will be suspended, not to be resumed till Monday morning. The whole nation will give itself up to good cheer and good fellowship, and for a brief season, all strife and controversy are hushed, and peace, charity and concord reign supreme.

Substitute for a Tree.

We are not going to have a Christmas tree, writes a correspondent. To make them brilliant many pretty little ornaments are needed and they cost a good deal. My plan is for a barrel in place of a tree. I have the barrel now in a closet. It is covered with old dark green cambric and the day before the great holiday I am going to pin sprigs of evergreen and holly over it. It will look pretty gay, I think, when it is filled with the gifts that are going into it now, all prettily tissue and tied, and my son as jolly Old Santa Claus stands over it to deliver into its mysteries and to proclaim the names of those who are to solve them. I am sure we will enjoy our barrel as much as we would a tree.

Best of All Holidays

TAKING it all in all, it may be safely asserted that Christmas is the merriest and the best of all holidays, and one which is likely to be observed for ages yet to come. Nations may rise and fall, new beliefs and religions may sweep away the old, but that would seem, indeed, a dreary and empty year which brought no merry Christmas in its annual round. May old Father Time long spare his holiday to mankind to gladden the hearts of all with its coming, and may each Christmas be still merrier than the last.

An Ancient Christmas Dish.

An indispensable Christmas dish of ancient times was "frumenty" or "frumante." Here is the recipe for making the dish according to a faithful old chronicler: "Take clean wheat and bray it in a mortar until the hulls be all gone off, and seethe it until it burst, and take it up and let it cool; and take clean, fresh broth and sweet milk of almonds or sweet milk of kine and temper it all; and take the yolks of eggs. Boil it a little and set it down and mess it forth with fat venison or fresh mutton." Frumenty was often served alone without venison or mutton. When served by itself it was well sweetened.

A Form of Generosity.

"That fellow is kind of hard to depend on."

"He seems to be very generous."

"Yes. He's a regular Santa Claus."

"I don't understand."

"He is willing to take the credit for giving you anything you want provided someone else stand the expense."

NAME FEW WOULD RECOGNIZE

But It Was Miguel Saavedra Who Gave the Immortal "Don Quixote" to the World.

That Miguel Saavedra wrote the immortal "Don Quixote" is not known by many. Ask the man on the street and he will tell you Cervantes was the author. This is for the reason that his full name, Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra, is not popularly known.

He was born on October 9, 1547, and the age which gave Shakespeare to England gave Cervantes to Spain. In 1599 he made an ineffectual application to the king for an appointment in America, "a shelter for the poor and a refuge for the unfortunate." From Seville he moved to Valladolid, and tradition runs that he was imprisoned there as a debtor or a defaulter, and that while in prison he commenced writing "Don Quixote," the second part of which did not appear until 1615. Three weeks before his death he formally entered the Franciscan order and was buried in the convent of the nuns of Trinity, Madrid.

There are two events in the history of Cervantes that are most remarkable: The first that, nominally though not actually, he died on the same day as Shakespeare—April 23, 1616—the difference in computing the calendar causing the apparent similarity.

The second point of importance coupled with wonder is that no monument was raised to his memory till 1835, when a statue of heroic proportions was cast in Rome and set up in Madrid.—Chicago Journal.

NUMEROUS PHASES OF LIFE

Existence May be Likened, with Considerable Truth, to Any One of Many Things.

Life, says the Ladies' Home Journal, is very much like a savings account in the bank. You get out all you put into it, and considerable interest besides.

A winding country road. Although one cannot see far ahead, zest is given to the journey by the fact that something new and interesting will be revealed at every turn of the road.

The new spring bonnet. A great deal of its charm depends on the kind of a face that peeps out beneath it.

An old-fashioned quilt. Requires both light and dark patches to carry out the design successfully.

Your wife. You find it very trying at times, but all things considered, you would not want to do without it.

An education. In order to make it really worth while one must share it with others.

A garment. It has its seamy side, but it is not policy to wear it inside out.

Rode Horseback 5,000 Miles.

The record for the longest individual ride of which an authentic account has been given is held by Lieut. Penckhof of the Russian cavalry. In 1882 he rode from his station in distant Siberia, a place with an unpronounceable name, to St. Petersburg, a distance of over 5,000 miles, in 193 days. This was more of an endurance than a speed test. Riding an ordinary pony of Siberian breed, carrying no baggage or provisions, he averaged thirty-seven miles a day and often made more than fifty-six miles a day. He rested at night. He used the same horse throughout the trip. Starting every morning at 7, he generally made but one stop for rest during the day, simply loosening the girth of his saddle while resting, but retired every night at 9. As he approached St. Petersburg after his long ride a life guard regiment with two bands met him and escorted him into the city, where he was received by the czar and knighted for his achievement.

Record Horseback Rides.

There is a reliable account given of an Englishman, Squire Osboldstone, having ridden, in 1881, 200 miles in ten hours. In doing this, however, he rode 16 horses and changed every four miles. A wonderful test of endurance and pluck was the case of Capt. Charles Townley, another English cavalryman, who, in 1849, rode with dispatches from Belgrade to Constantinople, 820 miles. He remained in the saddle five days and 11 hours without rest, except on one occasion for six hours and the time consumed in changing to fresh horses. Twice the horse he rode dropped under him from exhaustion. It was a historic ride, for upon the event of his arriving in Constantinople ahead of all other couriers hung the decision of the war, which by his accomplishing the feat was averted.

Land of Fire and Ice.

Geological map of Iceland by Dr. Thoroddsen, who has spent many years on the work, gives much information about one of the world's most wonderful islands which few visitors ever see.

An example of the strangeness of Iceland is furnished by the volcano Katla. This is buried under immense snow fields, but from time to time its fires burst through the glittering blanket, and then such floods are poured from the melting ice that a great stretch of country between the volcano and the sea is inundated and huge masses of ice are carried out into the ocean.

It is unsafe to cross the territory lying between Katla and the sea, so suddenly come the floods.

Glass Flowers.

Before very long, instead of bouquets of flowers being presented to ladies upon occasions of ceremony, it will become the custom to present bouquets of glass. Glass flowers for table decoration are becoming more and more popular, for, while the necessary brilliancy of coloring can be embodied in these glass flowers, they do not fade as do real flowers, and, therefore, do not need renewing unless a breakage occurs. An extension to the use of glass bouquets is only a step. Not only is glass extending its use from the decorative point of view, but it is also finding wider scope. The very latest use to which glass has been put is in the manufacture of baths of colored glass, which will harmonize with the scheme of decoration favored in the bathroom.

Starving Rats Rout Cats.

Hordes of rats made savage by starvation—a means instituted by quarantine officials to eradicate them—have attacked and put to flight a large cat family, it was learned today, and otherwise played havoc aboard the steamship Leviathan, formerly the German liner Vaterland. Since the Leviathan has been tied up at a Hoboken pier, her rodent population has multiplied into legions. After the feline army was gone, the rats attacked the ship's furnishings, luxurious leather cushions, panels and other fittings being gnawed beyond repair. Quarantine officers say, in their battle for life, the rodents will soon destroy one another.—New York Times.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Notice is hereby given that the levy of the year 1920 for State and County Taxes has been made in Somerset county.

Pursuant to said levy the taxes are now in my hands for collection. A discount of three per cent. will be allowed on all county taxes paid on or before October 31st, 1920, and a discount of two per cent. if paid during November, 1920. No discount will be allowed on county taxes paid after November, 30th, 1920.

The law allowing discounts on State taxes has been abolished, therefore no discount will be allowed on State taxes.

The law provides that both County and State taxes must be paid in order to obtain the discount.

State taxes bear interest from October 1st, 1920, at the rate of six per centum per annum. County taxes bear interest from January 1st, 1921, at the rate of six per centum per annum, and interest is charged for the full month from the first day of each month.

R. MARK WHITE, Treasurer and Collector of State and County Taxes.

"MAY YOUR NOSE GROW FAT"

Persian Salutation That Has Odd Sound—Graceful Hospitality Extended to Foreigners.

The Persian hospitality to the European is graceful. When you enter the house they tell you that your presence has brought happiness to your slave; or if they are sufficiently Europeanized not to use the oriental hyperbole, still they make you feel that your arrival has brought happiness. If you comment on the sweetness of a child they reply, "She kisses your hand." If you do any service for the poorer people they are likely to say, "May your hand never pain you." And—suggestive, this, of the famous menace: "May your shadow never grow less. May your nose grow fat."

The rich and well-to-do give you many cups of tea, generally followed by coffee, and the more sugar they put in the more polite they are trying to be. The more you eat the happier they are. Even the poor wish you to drink tea. When at a roadside cafe you buy your tea the cafe keeper serves it to you with the air of a host. The Persians have that truest essence of hospitality, that which makes you feel it has given them pleasure for you to stop beneath their roof. They are said to be greedy for money and hard at a bargain, but these traits they never show their guests.

YOUTH HAD NOTHING ON DAD

Old Gentleman's Memory Also Went Back to the Time He Spent in Hot Brazil.

Among the members of a firm having South American connections are the Joneses, father and son. Recently Jones Junior, who had just returned from Brazil, was relating some rather tall stories of life down there, when he asked:

"Now, during that awful heat, what do you suppose it was, aside from the temperature, that made it impossible for us to take our after-dinner siesta?"

"Why, what?" asked a gullible sister.

"The peculiar noises," continued Jones Junior. "You see, the coffee was popping on the trees. The sun was so hot the grains just roasted before they were picked."

Whereupon dad yawned.

"Rather warm down there," he admitted. "But when I was in Brazil you couldn't sleep nights. Every once in a while there would sound the most extraordinary noise that ever fell upon human ear."

"What were the sounds, dad?" asked Jones Junior, with a grin.

"The rubber trees were stretching themselves," answered dad.

Uses of Mica.

The stuff we call mica has been used since very ancient times in India for many odd purposes. Washermen employed it to give a sparkle to cloth. It is the material out of which "unbreakable" lamp chimneys are manufactured and is used for windows and glazing material for pottery, and for the backs of mirrors. Artists in India utilize it largely for paintings.

Mica, ground to a fine powder, has a high reputation in India as a medicine. It is prescribed as a tonic. Native physicians are said to have a secret process for dissolving mica—which, supposing it to exist, would be an enormously valuable discovery, inasmuch as it would mean that mica could be used for making unbreakable tumblers, decanters and other dishes.

By far the most important deposits of mica in the world occur in a belt which lies in the northern part of the Hazaribagh district in India. There it is commonly found in plates large enough to have marketable value.

Dignified Rebuke.

The captain of a battleship recently in New York harbor is celebrated throughout the fleet for his dignity and his conscientious efforts to set in his own behavior a good example to his men. Among other rules he made for himself while in port was one which, when he went ashore, brought him back to his ship every night before midnight. On one occasion a combination of circumstances delayed him and he did not get aboard until near 1 a. m. The lieutenant on duty saluted the skipper with professional smartness and cheerfully said:

"Good morning, captain."

The captain returned the salute punctiliously and replied thus to the greeting:

"Good evening, Mr. Blank; you have a great deal to learn of your profession, sir."

Shakespeare's House.

Washington Irving, who paid a visit to Stratford-on-Avon and whose soul was stirred to its depths, in speaking of the various stories which were told about the authenticity of the claimed location of Shakespeare's house, said: "What is it to us whether these stories be true or false, so long as we can persuade ourselves into the belief of them, and enjoy all the charm of their reality." By public subscription the house which was claimed to be the birthplace of William Shakespeare was purchased on Oct. 22, 1861, as one of the means of perpetuating national interest in the great dramatist.

Ladies' Ready-to-Wear Clothing

MILD WEATHER, with a general apprehension of a decline in all kinds of Merchandise, shows to the retail trade that it is time to set up and take their medicine. We are in it with hundreds of others, and while we hate the dose just as bad as the others, we are game and will, right here, in the opening of the winter season, sell our entire line of Ladies', Misses and Children's Suits, Coats, Wraps, Furs, Etc., at prices that we will guarantee to be below the lowest. Can you beat it? Ask your neighbors or your own experience if we are not lower in prices for the same goods at any time. Now we go still better and offer to match prices with any one on the Shore. We are not waiting to be forced down, but are here with the Goods and Price while they last at surprising figures.

Sale Opens Tuesday, Nov. 9th

U. B. JUDGE Will Conduct the Sale

Our ONE PRICE POLICY for years is still the same, but that price will be very much lowered to all on the start. We could spread a lot of printer's ink and give you rows of figures, but you will HAVE TO SEE TO BE CONVINCED.

DISTILLING ATTAR OF ROSES

Business in Which a Great Part of Bulgaria's Population is Viciously Interested.

Every year in Bulgaria there is an immense harvest of roses in which the people take a good deal of interest. This rose crop, says a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, is the support of one hundred and seventy-three villages and amounts to some twenty-five million pounds of rose flowers. It is for the world's supply of that rare perfume, attar of roses.

From all these million pounds of blooms, however, the average yearly distillation of pure attar amounts only to about one hundred and twenty thousand ounces. It takes from one hundred and sixty to two hundred pounds of rose flowers to make one ounce of attar, and there are about three hundred roses to the pound.

The distillation of rose flowers is carried on, during the progress of the harvest, in copper boilers with condensing attachments; the first product of distillation is redistilled into what is known as "second rose water." This double-distilled water is very strong in odor and very turbid in appearance. It is full of tiny, yellow-white, oily globules, and when the long-necked bottles in which the rose water runs are filled they rise to the top. These globules are the real attar of roses. They are skimmed with little conical spoons and put into separate bottles that have little holes in the bottom large enough to let the water run out, but not the oil.

OBJECT IN MYTHICAL SUIT

Oriental "Faked" Case Before English Magistrate to Settle Quarrel Over a Woman.

Two Indians came before an English magistrate, one complaining that the other had allowed his cattle to stray off the path through his cornfield, whereby the crop had been greatly damaged.

The defendant replied that he certainly had driven the cattle along the said path, there being right of way, but that he had taken care not to allow the crops to be damaged. Both brought witnesses to support their case.

The magistrate, with the intuition which comes from experience with Orientals, adjourned the case, and rode out many miles to see the field and the damage done. He found on the one hand that no such field existed, and on the other that the defendant had no cattle!

Further inquiry disclosed the fact that the two Indians had quarreled over a woman. Not caring to bring her name into court, they had decided to put up a mythical case to the magistrate, the victor to have the woman!

China's Miracle.

The miracle of South China is associated in my mind with a certain landscape in northern China. Near Chinglungshan, on the Peking-Kalgan section of the Chinese government railways, it was necessary for a section of the great wall of China to be demolished in order to let the locomotive pass through. At a point where one instinctively pauses to enjoy an impressive view of the historic barrier which winds up the precipitous sides of the mountain like a huge dragon, the eye drops back to the foreground and to the familiar switch signal that indicates a sidetrack. There it stands in the very gap made in the great wall, this prosaic emblem of modern progress. This switch signal and a huge billboard on the crest of the mountain to remind the visitor of the merits of a certain brand of cigarettes are my most vivid memories of the great wall of China.—Edgar Allen Forbes in Leslie's.

Pretty Japanese Custom.

Since the earliest days and in every land, the launching of a ship has been the occasion for a ceremony of some kind, usually resembling in a general way the ceremony of christening a child peculiar to the particular country. Of all the launching customs, however, that of the Japanese is undoubtedly the prettiest and most symbolic.

When the Japanese ship is ready for launching a large cage filled with birds is hung over the bow, and as the ship glides into the water the birds are released. The Japanese sailors firmly believe that by no other means may a ship be insured good luck. The birds, they say, will, in gratitude for their liberty, guide the ship to safety in times of peril.

At a Party.

There had been a party at Lightleigh's house and Lightleigh was bored. Said he to his wife:

"My dear, I have a splitting headache. Can't you manage, in some delectable way, to get rid of these people, nice as they are?"

"I can't very well show them the door," said Mrs. Lightleigh. "Certainly not," rejoined Lightleigh, with an ingratiating smile, "but, my dear, you can show yourself at the piano."

What People Quarrel Over.

"What was the quarrel about?" "I said if I ever inherited money I'd build an opera house. My wife said she wouldn't let me."

"Have you any prospects of inheriting money?"

"No." "Then why quarrel?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

COULDN'T HAVE FIRST OPTION

As Girl Remarked, That Was a Matter in Which "Business" Didn't Cut Much Figure.

There was no sentiment about Herbert Jones. He met the girl he wished to marry; and he proposed like this: "Mary Dugh, will you be my life partner? I am a business man. If you are agreeable, I will draw up a marriage contract, we'll both sign, before witnesses, and then we can carry on with the world's work."

She gasped, but presently regained her composure.

"Fortunately," she said, "I've had a little business training myself, so we can discuss this proposed contract properly and dispassionately."

"I'm so glad to find you so sensible," he told her.

She smiled sweetly.

"I regret I can give you nothing better than second option," she said.

"What?" he exclaimed.

"I'm afraid I have to inform you I am already engaged—that is to say, the first option is already taken. But a first option does not necessarily mean a closed contract. If you don't want to take a chance on a second option, say so; if you do, I'll drop you a line if I find myself on the matrimonial market again."

"That's cold blooded," he complained.

"It's business," she averred.

"I'd rather have first option," he pleaded.

"A first option in such a case never has been and never will be secured by business methods," she replied.

DUXBURY HAS ALDEN HOUSE

Massachusetts Town Proud of Historic Abode That Dates Back to the Year 1653.

One of the most important of the old-time houses that are associated with the Pilgrims of the Mayflower is the Alden house at Duxbury, Mass., lately acquired by the Alden kindred of America.

The Aldens, John and Priscilla, with seven others of the Mayflower Pilgrims, went from Plymouth to settle in Duxbury in 1627, seven years after the landing of the Mayflower and three years before the founding of Boston. They built a house that stood on a knoll not far away from the existing one, and there their children were born.

The present house was built by the oldest son, Jonathan, in 1653, and has the remarkable record of having been in the possession of Aldens from that day to this.

A notable feature of the house is the existence of certain secret passages and hidden stairs whose location would never be suspected. The house dates back to the days of witchcraft and Indian wars; and notwithstanding the new freedom brought by the Pilgrims, there was no saying when opportunities for concealment and escape might come in handy.

Odd Mixtures in Bermudas.

Hamilton, largest town and capital of Bermuda, is a curious mixture of the quaint and the modern. Consulates jog elbows with the oldest and largest India rubber tree at Parla-ville, and tourist agencies hobnob with cathedrals of native limestone. Americans in thousands are all visible on the well-kept streets, and there are not a few English who have come to escape the rigors of a northern winter and wander, while suited, up Front street and down Queen and around to Reid. To an American, one of the strangest matters is the speech of some of the negroes of the island. One is quite startled with surprise when for the first time one hears a negro cabbie sing out in tones of cockney London: "Keb, sir! 'Ere you are, sir," and to be assured by another negro that the view from the peak is "a little bit orl right" is too much.

Japan's Famous Mountain.

Fuji is 12,365 feet in height, and only 200 years years ago was an active volcano. There are still signs of fire in the jets of steam that spurt from parts of the cone, though one may now descend the crater with safety. All about the base are great boiling springs, hot enough to cook an egg in a minute. These are known as Ojigoku, or "Great Hell." Whether the idea was taken from the Bible or not is not known. But Buddhism has plenty of hell of its own. Some 300,000 pilgrims ascend the cone every year; and this year, being a special one in sixty, according to the Japanese calendar, the number was much greater than usual.

Not Exciting.

"How was the movie?" "Rather dull," said the jaded patron. "No thrills, eh?"

"Well, the heroine jumped from a train traveling 60 miles an hour to an airplane, was carried over a precipice in a motorcar, was left standing on the deck of a submarine when it submerged, but there wasn't anything you could really call exciting."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Complete Transformation.

"I understand one of your former waitresses is now a motion picture star?"

"That's so," said the proprietor of the Elite restaurant for ladies and gentlemen.

"Any change in her?"

"I should say so! She's changed her name, her hair and her disposition."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

QUICK TO SEE OPPORTUNITY

Really Clever Way in Which Thief Got Away With Watch Belonging to English Judge.

A gentleman once fell asleep on a train from Bournemouth to London. When he arrived at Vauxhall he found that his watch and chain were gone. The complications that followed make an interesting story, which Montagu Williams tells in his book, "Leaves of a Life." The gentleman's sole companion in the carriage was busily engaged in reading a newspaper.

"Has anyone entered this compartment while I have been asleep?" asked the gentleman, turning to him.

"No," was the answer.

"Then, sir, I must request you to tell me what you have done with my watch?"

The other traveler protested his innocence and said he had seen no watch and that he knew nothing about the matter. When the train arrived at its destination the suspected man was taken to the police court, where a charge was laid against him before Sir James Ingham. He was remanded until the next day.

The next morning, when the prisoner was put in the dock, the prosecutor entered the witness box. The latter wore a very dejected appearance and, before any questions were put to him, said he wished to make a statement.

"I do not know," he began, "how to express my regret for what has occurred, but I find that I did not lose my watch after all. I communicated my loss by telegram to my wife at Bournemouth, and she has written to say that my watch and chain are safe at home."

Sir James did all he could to throw oil upon the troubled waters.

"It was a most remarkable occurrence," he said. "To show, however, how liable we all are to make these mistakes, I may mention, as an extraordinary coincidence, that I myself have only this morning been guilty of precisely the same oversight as the one in question. I was under the impression when I left my house in Kensington that I put my watch into my pocket, but on arriving at this court I found that I must have left it at home by mistake."

When the business of the court was over, Sir James Ingham wended his way home. On entering his drawing-room he met one of his daughters, who exclaimed: "I suppose you got your watch all right?"

"Well, my dear," replied the chief magistrate, "as a matter of fact, I went out this morning without it."

"Yes, I know, papa," his daughter replied, "but I gave it to the man from Bow street who called for it."

There had been an old thief in the back of the room who heard Sir James giving his experience. He had slipped out, taken a hansom and driven to Sir James Ingham's residence, and representing himself to be a bona fide messenger, obtained the valuable watch, which was never heard of again.

Natural Thermometer.

It was a wonderful sapphire, so it is said, that led the celebrated Doctor Sorby to the discovery of the nature of the liquid sometimes found inclosed in the cavities of crystals.

The gem in question contained a tube-shaped cavity, a quarter of an inch long and an eighteenth of an inch in diameter, which was so regular in its bore that it served, by means of the liquid partially filling it, for a thermometer. The contained liquid half-filled the bore at 50 degrees F. and completely filled it at 80 degrees. A study of the rate of expansion of the liquid led to the conclusion that it must be carbonic acid.

Not Disinterested.

"You can't judge a man by what his relatives say of him," remarks an exchange. No, nor by what he says of himself.—Boston Transcript.

WEAK, NERVOUS, ALL RUN-DOWN

Missouri Lady Suffered Until She Tried Cardui.—Says "Result Was Surprising."—Got Along Fine, Became Normal and Healthy.

Springfield Mo.—"My back was so weak I could hardly stand up, and I would have bearing-down pains and was not well at any time," says Mrs. D. V. Williams, wife of a well-known farmer on Route 6, this place. "I kept getting headaches and having to go to bed," continues Mrs. Williams describing the troubles from which she obtained relief through the use of Cardui. "My husband, having heard of Cardui, proposed getting it for me."

"I saw after taking some Cardui... that I was improving. The result was surprising. I felt like a different person. "Later I suffered from weakness and weak back, and felt all run-down. I did not rest well at night, I was so nervous and cross. My husband said he would get me some Cardui, which he did. It strengthened me... My doctor said I got along fine. I was in good healthy condition. I cannot say too much for it."

Thousands of women have suffered as Mrs. Williams describes, until they found relief from the use of Cardui. Since it has helped so many, you should not hesitate to try Cardui if troubled with womanly ailments. For sale everywhere. E.33

PE-RU-NA

For Coughs, Colds and Catarrh

Mr. E. W. Marshall, Brampton, Michigan, suffering from Systemic Catarrh involving Head, Nose, Throat and Stomach, claims a complete cure. His letter is convincing: "For the past two years I have been troubled with systemic catarrh. I used several boxes of Pe-ru-na tablets and they have effected a complete cure. I do not hesitate to recommend Pe-ru-na for all catarrhal conditions."

Mr. Marshall is just one of many thousands who have been benefited by Dr. Hartman's famous medicine in the past fifty years.

It is by stimulating the digestion, enriching the blood and toning up the nerves that Pe-ru-na is able to exert such a soothing, healing influence upon the mucous membranes which line the body. It is a wonderfully effective remedy to restore strength after a protracted sickness, the grip or Spanish Influenza.

Blouses Presented for Autumn

SO FAR nothing radically different from the styles of summer, or particularly new in details of finishing, has come to light in the blouses presented for fall and winter. Colored georgette crepe remains the favorite material for making them, and bead and silk embroidering the favored embellishments. Sleeves are lengthened to the three-quarter mark at least and the high-necked blouses have long sleeves, but there are few models that have high necks. White voile is forging to the front for daily wear, its daintiness and durability commending it to women who love the charm of freshly laundered and hand-made waists. So far the new models reveal less vivid coloring than those of the past season, but many colors.

The blouse shown in the illustration is typical of the most popular style. It is made of dark georgette crepe—dark blue continues a favorite—and decorated with bead embroidery in soft red, green and blue. The three-quarter length sleeves are of the flowing variety and the neck cut in regulation style. It has a band of satin set in at the front, matching the crepe in color, and taking the place of the popular little chemisette of white lace. But this white touch at the neck is wonderfully becoming to most faces; it will not disappear altogether.

So far there are many more blouses than smocks in the displays of new models, but tomorrow may tell another story, for the styles are not thoroughly established, and smocks have proved to be the most useful of garments.

BLADE QUICKER THAN PISTOL

Expert Gunmen Meet More Than Their Match in the Knife Throwers of the Argentine.

The danger zone encircling a gauchito (cowboy of the Argentine) with his knife in his hand is by no means limited to the circle he sweeps with his extended arm. I am not sure just how far it does go, nor have I the least desire to find out. I heard, however, a crack revolver shot, a man who could blot out the spots on a ten of spades at a dozen paces, say that he would be extremely reluctant to take his chance at a draw-and-let-go with a gauchito at any distance under 20 yards.

An illuminative case in point came to my attention in Buenos Aires. As a class the American agricultural machinery experts sent to Argentina are as handy with slushshooters as any I have ever met. They are mostly westerners, have used revolvers from their childhood, and their arms, from which they never separate themselves for a moment while in campo, are always of the best and latest pattern.

Not once or twice, but on dozens of occasions, have I seen one or another of these men with his Colt's or Mauser "automatic," after a preliminary shot or two to get the range blow over a rabbit running at full speed across the pampa. This is good shooting, as will be appreciated by anyone who has had experience with the revolver. Yet the case I have in mind is that of a thrashing machine expert from Texas—a crack shot—who had trouble with his Argentine maquinista, had an even break on a draw at 25 or 30 feet, and was retired from action with a knife through his shoulder before his revolver was clear of its holster.—Lewis R. Freeman in the Cornhill Magazine.

USE OF ETHER IN SURGERY

Youthful Dentist Said to Have Been Responsible for Its Introduction to General Practice.

While various experiments had been made with so-called "laughing gas" or nitrous oxide gas in America prior to 1846, it was some 74 years ago that the first practical operation under ether was performed in the Massachusetts General hospital in Boston, and the peculiar part of it was that the sulphuric ether was given, not by one of the house physicians, but by a young dentist who had been experimenting on himself and had gone to sleep for eight minutes. He rushed over to the hospital and asked a chance to demonstrate his discovery. A man about to have a tumor removed from his neck gave permission to have the "new-fangled dope" applied. Dentist Morton went to work and the tumor was removed. The patient opening his eyes after the operation cried, "Gentlemen, this is no humbug," and with that remark ether was given to the medical world.

Oliver Wendell Holmes came forward with names for the process and the liquid, and the dictionary gained "anesthesia" and "anesthetic." In three months the drug was being used throughout the civilized world.

Fallen Fruits Never Good.

The difference between humans and fruits lies in the fact that the human is largely the master of his own destiny. A man does not need to fall if he does not want to. He may have the taints that imperfect hereditary leaves, but even they are not bound to cause him to fall. If he can be surrounded with the right environment much of what is in the blood can be turned to good account. But if the fellow himself wants to fall the world is only too ready to make the way easy for him. And there are many that seem to want to try everything that any one else has ever done. It may lead them to the lowest pit, but they are always sure they can worm out somehow. Only after it's too late do men and women realize that fallen fruits have not real rating among good products.—Exchange.

Archeologists Interested.

That the remote ancestors of the American Indians may have lived in Spain in prehistoric days is indicated by some very remarkable discoveries of rock paintings that archeologists have made at El Bosque, in the hilly country north of Aleria, a Spanish town about half way between Albacete, situated in the plains of La Mancha, and Alicante, on the Mediterranean. Anthropologists also say that these discoveries throw a fresh light upon the life of prehistoric man in southwestern Europe during the Magdalenian period of the great ice age. These Paleolithic tribes, when not compelled by the rigor of the climate to find their dwellings in caverns where they obtained protection against both the intense cold and the attacks of ferocious animals, lived under rock shelters on the sides of valleys.

Relation of Doctor and Patient.

The relations between a doctor and his patient are absolutely confidential and are safeguarded by law, which forbids a physician from testifying to what he has learned in treating the patient, unless the latter expressly waives his right to secrecy. If, however, a patient has employed several doctors, and has at a trial called some of these to testify to his condition as the result of an injury, the other side has a right to call the other doctors, as the calling of some of the physicians by the plaintiff is a waiver of his rights.

LEADERS NOT GREAT TALKERS

Jefferson's Testimony Is That Neither Washington Nor Franklin Wasted Words in Debate.

More than a century ago Thomas Jefferson said: "I served with Gen. Washington in the legislature of Virginia, before the revolution and during it, with Dr. Franklin in congress. I never heard either of them speak ten minutes at a time, nor to any but the main point, which was to decide the question."

"They laid their shoulders to the great points, knowing that the little ones would follow of themselves. If the present congress errs in too much talking, how can it be otherwise? In a body to which the people send 150 lawyers, whose trade is to question everything, yield nothing, and talk by the hour? That 150 lawyers should do business together ought not to be expected."

Multiply the above by four, add several hundred new subjects for debate, divide into two parties and you have the national legislature in the year of grace 1920, remarks the Home Sector. Probably it could be calculated by an efficient expert that the amount of energy, time, money and lung power wasted in one session by congress would be enough to drain every swamp in this country, irrigate every barren acre and rescue and educate every child laborer, with enough left over then to support and train every wounded doughboy.

As it is, small wonder that gentle knocks at the door of congress are drowned out by the oratorical uproar inside.

CHARGED WITH DESERT SAND

What Is Known as the "Red Wind" Makes Life Miserable Along the Mediterranean.

Sojourners in the Mediterranean for any length of time see the red wind as well as feel its oppressive influence. It blows from the deserts of Africa and derives its name from the particles of red sand with which it is charged. Should rain descend while this wind prevails, the sand becomes mud, and thence arise the "mud showers."

In its dry state it is more oppressive by far than any other wind known to the Mediterranean, not excepting the black "sirocco." Its effects are in many ways remarkable. The sand, of excessive fineness, enters between your eyelids and your eyes; it gets into your nostrils and down your throat; it adheres to your skin and works itself into your watch; it increases the annoyance of mosquitoes, and it is so dry that, as you write or read, the paper curls up as if exposed to fire heat. Tables and chairs of seasoned wood and of old manufacture, crack with a report almost like a pistol shot, and no quantity of drink has much effect on your raging thirst. All this time your skin is hard and dry, and without the relieving influence of perspiration.

Collecting Truffles.

"Truffles?" said the boy. "Why! They're a sort of mushroom that don't come up." Accurate enough, excepting that truffles are not mushrooms. However, they are fungi (and are cousins to the mushroom) and they taste and look (inside) a good deal like mushrooms. The best truffles in the world grow in France. Other species grow in Italy and Spain and even in England.

Truffles grow underground, much like potatoes, except that they grow individually and not on the roots of a plant. In appearance they are globose, bright brown and black, and are covered with polygonal warts, not so very unlike the eyes of a potato. Their flesh is a blackish gray, seamed with white veins. They smell mighty good when they are ripe—something like crushed strawberries. Later the smell grows stronger, but it doesn't recall the perfume of the strawberries then—far from it.

Oldest of Industries.

Perhaps the oldest of all industries is sheep raising, for it was practiced even before agriculture. Wool is the product of cultivation or domestication, for there are no wild animals which closely resemble the wool-bearing sheep. Floyd W. Parsons in the Saturday Evening Post says that with the discovery that cloth could be made from wool came an effort to improve the fleece by selection and breeding. The early Romans were most successful in this pursuit, and their endeavors along this line resulted in developing a fleece of great fineness. After the conquest of the Iberian peninsula, Roman sheep were introduced into Spain, where they so greatly improved the native flocks that even during the Roman supremacy Spanish wool led the world's markets, a prestige held for many centuries.

Japs Hold Fuji Sacred.

Fuji is the name of Japan's most famous mountain, and, writes the Japanese correspondent of the London Morning Post, no Japanese thinks anything of himself until he has made some effort to ascend its sacred heights. To climb Fuji is a religious duty to most Japanese, while only a pleasure to some and a boast to others. Its graceful cone, like an inverted fan, is so familiar to all admirers of Japanese art that it needs no description here. But in Japan every mountain has a spirit; and the spirit of a beautiful or awe-inspiring mountain is to be strictly respected.

MARYLANDER AND HERLAD

The Harvest of 50 Years

Your Grandfather and your Father faced ruin. War then had just ended. Consumers then clamored for cheaper food. Prices fell—farm prices most of all. Farmers sought aid in cooperation, in organization. They founded the National Grange—the first national farmers' organization to survive fifty years.

The Grange began the fight for better conditions for farmers; for better marketing; better homes; better schools and better government. Today you have agricultural colleges, experiment stations, extension, rural delivery, parcel post, postal savings and a lot of other things your Grandfather did not have, but needed, following the Civil War.

The Grange is fighting the fight the same today as it did fifty years ago. Another war has ended. Again the farmer is expected to stand the first shrinkage of prices.

You need the Grange and the Grange needs you. You need its experience in cooperation, in checking radical tendencies and in stabilizing the nation. You need its voice at Washington. It needs your prompt support.

For this advertisement we are indebted to THE COUNTRY GENTLE-

MAN, which is even older than the Grange and which reflects the wisdom of years as well as the news of progress in farming. For farmers it believes in active, practical organization such as the Grange affords. It presents a weekly review of the sweeping progress of farm cooperation in organization which is the hope of the future. By subscribing for a full year of 52 issues you receive for only one dollar a farm-news service that will repay you many times over. Our secretary will forward your order.

Working Hard Every Day Without Let-up Wears You Out in Time

SOMETIMES YOU NEED A TONIC

Pepto-Mangan Makes Rich Red Blood and Lifts You Out of Bad-Health Ruts

There are days when you feel downright sick. You think you couldn't feel any worse. Yet, as far as you know, there's nothing the matter with you. From the time you get up in the morning till you go to bed at night you are tired. You feel as though you'd like to sit down and do nothing. You look tired and pale and haggard. You get careless about your dress.

No wonder! Your blood is all clogged up with poison. Your power of resistance is at a low ebb. Your blood needs food. It needs the help that the vitalizing tonic, Pepto-Mangan, will give it. Instead of feeling exhausted and tired out for months, you will soon pick right up and feel well and strong again. And with good red blood you are able to fight off ailments.

Pepto-Mangan is widely and heartily endorsed by physicians. It is effective and easy to take. It is prepared in both liquid and tablet form, and you can take one or the other and receive the same benefits.

Sold at any drug store. But be sure you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan—"Gude's." Ask for it by the full name and be sure the full name, "Gude's Pepto-Mangan," is on the package.—Advertisement.

Opinions of Opinions.

"Bliggins has his own opinions." "I don't blame him for that," replied Mr. Growcher. "Opinions sometimes happen to men the same as bow-les or receding chins. What I object to is the exaggerated opinion Bliggins entertains of the importance of his opinions."

Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The Chinese Jar

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Helena Bradford threw her gloves on the table, her hat and jacket on the window seat, and herself into the deep armchair drawn up before the comfortable blaze. She was definitely through with thoughts of marriage and home and children—not that she didn't want them. Heavens, no! But they so evidently weren't coming her way that it would be the part of wisdom to stop thinking about them.

Two recent occurrences had brought Helena to these conclusions. One was the wedding of Winifred Wood, her dearest friend and the last of the old crowd, excepting Helena herself, to discard single blessedness. Until recently she and Winifred had mutually condoned with one another and brazenly flaunted the advantages of the unwed. But somehow Helena could not see herself carrying on the tradition alone—particularly when every fiber of her being ached to acquire some masculine creature whose possession entailed wonderful trousseaus and beautiful weddings and romantic honeymoons and happiness "forever after."

The second occurrence which had caused Helena to banish once and forever her hopes was the news that Curtis Enderby had gone out to the Pacific coast. Curtis was really her last and only chance Helena felt sure. And he had been at least a very attentive friend for years. Yet now, without a word of farewell, he had gone, and rumor hinted that his departure was connected with the opening of a branch office in Oregon.

Why was it, Helena wondered, as she sat gazing thoughtfully into the heart of the smoldering embers, that no man had ever asked her to be his wife? She was not bad-looking. In fact she was supposed to have an "air," which is often more valuable than mere prettiness. She flattered herself that she could dress—certainly her clothes were always very up-to-the-minute. She could discourse on art or politics quite as intelligently as any other married friends. And finally—not, however, that she wanted it to prove a drawing card—she had considerable money.

Well, she was through. For her own peace of mind she would never again think of marriage. It was evidently her lot to be a spinster, and the quicker she made up her mind to it the better. At any rate, these days, no obloquy attached to the name of maiden lady.

But if domesticity was not to be her destiny she must find something to take its place. The question was, what? For Helena had many little talents, but none of them developed greatly.

Glancing idly about the room her gaze fell upon a squat little Chinese jar standing on the top shelf of an ungainly "what-not." It was an odd little piece of pottery—a dull blue background flecked with bits of black and rose and gold. "It's the most beautiful thing in the room," said Helena to herself, half-unconsciously. Then, in surprise, "Why, it's the only beautiful thing!"

Helena, along with the legacy from her aunt, had inherited the prim New England house with its accumulations of stiff horsehair and grotesquely carved black walnut, and so accustomed was she to its clumsy ugliness that never had it occurred to her to change it.

But now suddenly she sat upright. "If I can't marry I am going to have a hobby. And if this is the only home I shall ever know I am going to make it as beautiful as possible to live in." To signify to herself the seriousness of her intentions Helena rose, went over to a shabby marble-topped table, picked up a glass-encased wreath of hobby wended his way toward the office. When there he was met with a scene of excitement. The chief called him into his office at once.

"Old man, I'm sorry, I intended you to go off today, but, thank goodness, you're here. Tompkins is laid up—acute indigestion—and that Darlington matter's got to be settled today. You're the only man who can handle it. Go ahead, put it over, and you can have a week to rest up in. It's tough, but it can't be helped. Be a sport—we need you now as we never needed you before."

Davidson hesitated. It would be agony for him to meet her; but he could not desert the company in its need. He squared his shoulders.

"All right, chief, I'll take it," he said quietly.

"Good man! Tompkins made an appointment with her for 10:30; you'll just about have time to get there. Good luck!"

Davidson left the office and made his way to the subway. All the way downtown he mentally steeled himself against the meeting. In the busy outer office of the Darlington Company he waited; then a girl brought him his card which he had sent in and said, "Miss Darlington will see you now."

He rose and entered the inner office. The slender girl seated at the big desk at the side of the room did not look up at first, but he knew that he had not been mistaken in the voice—that it was indeed his lost love. The knowledge that she was out of his reach forever made him sick and shaky, but he steadied his voice and said:

"Miss Darlington, I called to see you about the matter of the J. H. Day account."

At the sound of his voice she whirled suddenly, cheeks flushed, eyes shining. Her hands clasped themselves over her heart. Then the flush died, and a deadly whiteness took its place. "You!" was all she said.

"Yes—too late!" Davidson could have killed himself the next moment for uttering those words, but the strain had been too much. That was no way to talk to a girl who had married some one else. He tried to revert to business.

"About that account—" he began, but he never finished. She had reached her arms to him, and he, forgetting all else, held her close, kissing her cheeks, her eyes, her lips and murmuring old half-forgotten pet names in her ear. In a moment he released her, his face stern.

"You tempted me," he said. "I should not have done this. Your—your husband—"

"Why, I'm not married."

"Not married?" stupidly.

"No—I went into business when you—when you left, and took the name of Darlington so that my old friends wouldn't find me. I never wanted to see anybody else in the world, except—"

"Except me! Why, dear, after what I said that day—"

Her lips stopped the words. In a moment she murmured, "Oh, my dear, I knew when I thought it was too late that we never should have quarreled! It was so foolish—and so needlessly cruel. And oh, but I have wanted you to come back to me. And till you spoke I didn't know."

"But the card I sent in—"

She showed it to him. He read in amazement, "W. W. Tompkins." He had caught it up from the desk when he left the office and used it by mistake.

"Poor Tompkins!" he said, between a sigh and a laugh. "I ought to be sorry for him, for he's mighty sick—but I can't help thinking that it was his sickness that let me find you again. May I use the 'phone?"

"Of course." She was mystified. He called his office.

"Hello! That you, chief? Say, I fixed that Darlington matter up."

"Good work! Everything O. K.?"

"You bet! Everything! And say, chief—I'm going to ask for a month off instead of a week. I'm going on my honeymoon."

The Song Birds Hate Jazz.

The Ohio State Journal discovered at its state fair this year that the song bird hates jazz. When musical melodies were played, it says, the scores of canaries and other song birds joined in, or tried to rival instruments, as you prefer. But when the air was jazz, the birds fell silent.

The song birds' protest won't end jazz. Not even the protests of the outraged worker who finds his midnight strident but unmelodious will do that. But it's pleasant to learn that the song bird, whose title to an ear for music has been established since long before men put the strings to harp and lute, is backing up the feelings of a good many of the rest of us, who recognize that what the age likes they must expect to hear, but enjoy a few votes on their side none the less.

Potatoes as Currency.

Potatoes are now used as the standard currency in certain remote agricultural districts of Poland, since the value of the potato fluctuates less than that of paper money. In the district around Grodno, for instance, the American Red Cross reports, all the local help employed in warehousing or in the activities of the field units is remunerated in a weekly wage of potatoes.

Strictly Practical.

"There's a great deal of romance in business," remarked the dilettante. "Maybe there is," said the hard-headed man of affairs, "but personally I haven't the slightest intention of falling in love with my stenographer." —Birmingham Age-Herald.

Mail Order Houses' Big Profits

$20,328,692 is a big amount, but that is exactly the average yearly profits of the Sears, Roebuck & Co. for the past four years.

Big as this seems it falls far short of what their profits for 1920 will be, figuring on the basis of their net returns for the first six months of the year, which were $15,447,285.19.

And this is not all, for Sears, Roebuck & Co. held sufficient undivided profits to warrant a stock dividend in July of this year amounting to 40 per cent. of their common capital stock. This stock dividend issue totaled $30,000,000, raising the common capital stock issue from $75,000,000 to $105,000,000.

And these millions of profits are made possible through the millions of dollars this gigantic concern takes yearly from small communities needing every possible dollar for their own up-building—our own community included.

Consider these millions of dollars that should have gone to up-building homes, thereby increasing the taxable resources of each community and making possible numberless improvements that we now must do without, that a deluded public has concentrated in the hands of this single firm.

You, Wage Earners, think of the bigger and better home business that could be affording you more and better jobs if this community's share of those millions had been kept at home.

You, Farmers, think of the bigger, better towns assuming a greater share of the taxation burden of this community, consequently lightening your share, and the increased value your land would command through being situated near more desirable towns if your share of these millions had been spent at home.

And just a final word—this is to You, Mr. Merchant—it is best to fight fire with fire and beat to combat printers ink with printers ink. Just remember the sooner the merchants generally learn to advertise regularly and extensively, the sooner will the millions Sears, Roebuck & Co. now garner annually be reduced.

Connecticut leads the record with five women legislators. If they all develop the New England conscience, the legislation is booked for a lively time.

BACKING UP PROOF

The Kind That Princess Anne People Cannot Deny

Many an earnest Princess Anne man or woman has publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills.

Week after week, month after month you're read their statements.

Would these Princess Anne people recommend any medicine if it were not good?

Would they confirm and repeat their statements after years had passed?

Local proof is good evidence.

The following Princess Anne statement leaves no room for doubt.

It must convince every kidney sufferer who reads it.

If your back aches—if your kidneys are weak, profit by the experience of Thomas H. Heath, 114 Beckford ave. He says: "I suffered from severe pains through my back and loins. I was unable to rest well at night and mornings felt tired and worn out. I suffered from frequent dizzy spells and at times they were so severe I could hardly stand. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me in every way and my system was entirely rid of kidney complaint." Over five years later Mr. Heath said: "Nothing has changed my good opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills. I always recommend them when I get a chance."

Serious Results From Colds

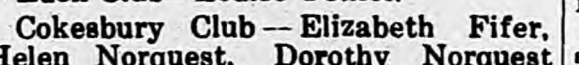

Colds not only cause a tremendous financial loss but are also a serious injury to every one who contracts them as they lower the vitality and prepare the system for the more serious diseases. It is not at all unusual for people who have serious lung trouble to say "I had a hard cold last winter." Why not take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and cure your cold while you can.
