SALISBURIANS WELCOMED

The Advent of the State W. C. T. U. This Week—Many Interesting Meetings.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the State of Maryland was in its thirty-ninth annual session in Salisbury yesterday and the day before. The session was largely attended by the members of the organization throughout the state, and the convention was a success in every respect.

The first session opened on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock in Asbury M. E. Church with a devotional service, after which the president, Mrs. Mary A. Haslup, called the convention to order formally in a short address, in which she reviewed the work of the year and the prospects for the future of temperance in Maryland.

During the forenoon session reports were made by officers and committees as follows: Review of the year's work, Mrs. Annie D. Starr; report of treasurer, Mrs. Wm. F. Jones; report of auditors, Mrs. Wm. M. Winks and Miss Busick; report of superintendent of literature, Miss Cathart; report of Y. P. B., Miss Frances Hetzler; report of L. T. L., Miss Carrie V. Ray.

The following topics were presented by specialists at the afternoon session: Sunday school work, Mrs. E. H. Wright; evangelistic work, Mrs. M. W. Thompson; medical temperance, Mrs. Annie M. Ford; mothers' meetings, Mrs. Rebecca J. Brownell; purity, Mrs. M. V. Green; kindergarten, Mrs. M. B. Taylor; anti-narcotics, Mrs. Flora Hays Hanson; mercy, Mrs. Anna L. Whiteley; prison and jail, Miss M. O. Jackson; soldiers and sailors, Miss Grace Moore.

The afternoon session of Wednesday closed with a program of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

In the evening an address of welcome for the city was delivered by Mr. Elmer H. Walton; the address of welcome for the church was made by Dr. Martindale; the address on behalf of the W. C. T. U. was made by Mrs. L. F. Warner; the response was made by Mrs. Laura Webb Peplow. The president's annual address was read by Mrs. Haslup.

Election of Officers.
The following were elected officers of the state division yesterday: President, Mrs. Mary A. Haslup; vice president, Mrs. Pauline Holme; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Anna Starr; recording secretary, Mrs. Harry Challis; treasurer, Mrs. Wm. T. Jones.

Miss Mariame Hardcastle, president of the Tri-County Union, was made a life member of the State Union, by her three counties, Talbot, Dorchester and Caroline.

The feature of the closing program of the session Thursday night was address by Rev. Don S. Colt, D. D., of Baltimore.

Delegates to the national convention meeting in Atlanta, Ga., in November, were elected, and Mrs. L. L. Warner, of Salisbury, was made delegate-at-large. This ended a very successful convention, and visiting members heartily expressed themselves as well pleased with the beautiful hospitality of the homes of Salisbury.

Death of Mrs. White

Mrs. Gustavus White died at the Peninsula General Hospital, following a recent operation there, early Thursday morning. The news of Mrs. White's death came as a great shock to her many friends in this community, of which she was a well known and beloved member.

Deceased was 68 years of age. She is survived by her husband, Dr. Gustavus White, and two children, Mrs. A. H. Honey, of California, and Dr. E. Riall White, of this city.

The funeral services will be held in St. Peter's Church at 8 o'clock on Saturday afternoon. Interment in Parsons' cemetery.

Additional Locals

Mrs. A. J. Horsey, of Laurel, is a guest of Mrs. L. D. Collier.

Hon. Stevenson A. Williamson, of Belaire, is the guest of F. Leonard Wallis.

Mr. Ernest Disharoon, of this city, and Miss Ethel Brinkley were married at Hampton, Va., Monday evening.

Mr. J. Earl Morris, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Morris, left Monday for Chattanooga, Tenn., to resume his law studies.

Mr. and Mrs. Oswald F. Layfield and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Parker are spending some time in Niagara Falls and Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Messick and Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Brewington moved into their new remodeled homes on Walnut street, Monday.

Mr. L. A. Watson died Friday morning at half past four. Funeral at the home Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The services will be conducted by the Rev. T. B. Martindale.

Mrs. Elias D. Saussey, of Union Bridge, Md., is the guest of Mrs. B. Kild White, Tony Tank Road.

COURT NEWS TO DATE

Second Week's Sitting and the Cases Now Disposed of.

No. 2. Criminal presentment, State of Maryland vs. Wm. Penn Catlin, indicted for bastardy; trial by jury; verdict of jury, guilty; not yet sentenced by court. Geo. W. Bell and Curtis W. Long, attorneys for state; Samuel R. Douglass for defendant.

No. 5. Criminal presentment, State of Maryland vs. Joseph Darby; indicted for manslaughter; plea, guilty; not yet sentenced by the court. Geo. W. Bell, attorney for state; Joseph L. Bailey, attorney for prisoner.

No. 26. Trial. Claude L. Powell vs. Elmer C. Williams; trial by jury; verdict of jury for plaintiff and assess the damages at $225.

No. 57. Trials. The Vance W. Miles Co. vs. Baltimore, Chesapeake & Atlantic Railway Co.; trial by jury; still on trial.

Several important cases have been disposed of and many others are continued to another term since last week.

Probably more interest was manifested by the public in the Jesse H. Bratten case than in any of the others. This case, which was related in this paper last week, was decided in favor of Mr. Bratten.

Following the Bratten case the court held a night session for the trial of James Dutton, a colored man, for an assault upon a white girl with intent to rape. This case held the court into the early hours of Saturday morning. The jury was out but a short time in finding the accused negro guilty, and on Saturday morning he was for the second time sentenced to be hanged. This case had been tried in Dorchester county last spring and sentence was passed there to hang Dutton, but he obtained a new trial on an appeal to the Court of Appeals. It is not generally believed that the negro will ever hang, owing to the fact that he failed of the purpose of his assault, but it is not probable that he will ever again see freedom.

On Monday the case of Arthur Leates was taken up and the prisoner was discharged, having already been in jail six months. He was charged with larceny and indicted last spring for breaking into the building of the Peninsula Bottling Works.

The State of Maryland at the instance and for the use of Edward W. Beathards vs. Jonathan E. Beathards, Elisha W. Truitt and Jos. L. Bailey, suit on guardian bond; verdict for plaintiff; represented by F. Grant Goslee and J. E. Ellegood, for $394.

On Tuesday the cases of the City of Salisbury against certain corporations for the collection of taxes on individual shares of stock in these corporations held by residents of the City of Salisbury came up in the argument of a demurrer filed by the attorneys for the corporations in which the corporations argued that the shares of stock had not been properly assessed. The court held for the defendant corporations that the shares had not been properly assessed against the shareholders and this is taken to indicate that in the opinion of the court further steps must be taken to complete the process of assessment before the corporations themselves will become liable to the city for the taxes.

The several corporations concerned in this litigation will be guided by the court's decision in the one case now being tried which, we understand, is that of the Salisbury Brick Company. It is expected, however, that these cases will be settled beyond further litigation at the present term.

On Wednesday William Penn Catlin was tried for bastardy and a verdict of guilty was rendered by the jury.

The one remaining case in which there is considerable interest is that of Bessie Quinn Allen, for herself and her children, against Wm. B. Duncan, of Pocomoke City for damages on account of the killing of the husband of Mrs. Allen some two years ago. The case is set for today and a large number of witnesses will be heard. The work of the term will probably continue well into next week.

While there has been steady work here for the two weeks which has been very strenuous for many of the attorneys, and especially for the judges and jurymen, Judge Standford has cleared up the docket for Somerset county with the exception of a few cases and returned to assist here.

BUSY WITH REGISTRATION

STATE OUTLOOK FINE

FIRST DISTRICT GOSSIP

All of the politicians of Maryland, regardless of party are just at present much more interested in the outcome of the general registration than anything else political.

Upon its results will depend the fall election, as no party can win unless its followers get their name on the election books. There is no disguising the fact that the Democrats have been more afraid of this new registration than have the Republicans—as a matter of fact, if it had not been for a "slip up" on the part of the Democratic leaders and managers of the last Legislature, there would have been no new registration this fall.

It so happened, however, that this important matter was entirely overlooked until the closing days of the session, and then a bill was introduced postponing it for two years, but too late, the Governor took the ground that a new registration was needed and therefore vetoed the bill postponing it, and it was too late to pass it over his head.

It has been urged by the Democrats that the Republicans would have less trouble to get their vote to come out for registration because a fair percent of it was colored and these thought so much of the privilege of voting that they would need but little urging, while the Democrats would have to work like Trojans to persuade the white vote in their party to get registered.

The tale will soon be told, as next week closes this work up, and then each party will know just where it is "at."

If the prophesy of the Republicans comes true and they succeed in making large gains in the registration, there is but little doubt but that will so encourage them as to make the fight in the state this fall much harder.

So far the registration in this county seems to be satisfactory to the Democrats, but next week will really tell the story, and like conditions exist in every county in the state.

As far the election of Senator John Walter Smith to the United States Senate is concerned, it looks as though he would have as big a victory in the election as he did in the primary. Both the Republicans have nominated candidates for this office, and strange to say, both of the men named were ardent supporters of Mr. Roosevelt in the last presidential campaign.

Here in the First Congressional District, it looks as though the two factions would unite on candidates for the vacant Congressional seat.

If this be the fact, it looks as if a determined fight would be made to wrest this district from the Democrats.

Mr. Duer, of Somerset, the Republican nominee for the long term, has the reputation of being a "hustler," and backed, as he will be, by the united organization of his party, will probably make a game fight.

It looks as though he is leading a forlorn hope, as the chances of defeating the Democrats this year in the First District would seem to be slight indeed. As far as the short term is concerned, it is hard to see much chance for a successful fight against the Democrats being made. The Republicans have not made any nomination for this office, but will support the Bull Moose candidate, Col. Hodson, also of Somerset county. There is but little doubt but what he will receive hearty support from the leaders, but at the same time the colored and ignorant voters in the Republican party will not likely get far away from the "R" that they have been taught to vote by.

LA TENA'S WILD ANIMALS PLEASSED

Best Show That Has Visited City in Long Time; Usual Circus Stunts.

Colonel La Tena's wild animal circus has come and gone and it has left a good name behind it. It was one of the best seen here in a long time and did a fine business. It was a wild animal show, as advertised, and the way some of the denizens of the woods and jungle were made to perform by their trainers was well worth the price of admission.

Of course there were other wild animal acts, such as equestrian numbers, tight wire and trapeze artists, contortionists, trained ponies and seals, and the antics of a bunch of clever clowns, all of which went to make up an offering that pleased hundreds of patrons Saturday afternoon and evening. From Salem the circus went to Haverhill, where it will play today, while Newburyport will be visited tomorrow.

When the parade went through the streets of Salem Saturday morning a familiar face was noticed, that of Arthur F. Norris, former manager of the Salem theatre, now treasurer of the La Tena show. Arthur rode at the head of the parade in a buggy, and was kept bowing all the way along, in acknowledgement of greetings extended to him from the crowds, who numbered thousands all told. Mayor Herley extended him the right hand of fellowship in Town House square, when the procession had to stop a moment while the formalities were going on. Both were applauded by the big crowd about that point.

Some of the feature acts of the La Tena show were big circus offerings, notably the work of the elephants.

Chief and Babe.
Margaret and her lions, Walter Hager's bears and Captain Wesley's trained seals. Walter Allen, who handled the elephants, showed himself a skillful handler of animals, the elephants doing all sorts of stunts from standing on the fore and hind legs to playing musical instruments. His trained pony act was good also.

The Charles proved themselves clever and daring trapeze performers while the contortion act of the Powell family (mother, boy and girl) was "some" act. The Griggs horse and carriage number was a big circus stunt and got a fine hand, as it deserved. These people were with the Barnum & Bailey show for seven years. The wild animal acts of Margaret and her lions, and of Hager's and her lions, and of Hager's bears were at numbers, although many were scared that some thing might happen when the beasts snarled and showed their teeth. The tightrope walking and jumping stunts of the Powells and Charles were of a high class order, while the equestrian work of Blanche Reed was a pleasing feature. The seals were very clever performers.

Following the conclusion of the show, the wild animals were fed in the other tent and some side show numbers given in the shape of Georgia minstrel show by band members; girl sword walker, cockatoo show; Egyptian dancers and other attractions. One of the lions in the menagerie tent is said to have killed four trainers. It can not be used other than for exhibition purposes.

Will exhibit at Salisbury Friday October 9.—Adv.

"Peg O' My Heart".
Fresh from the triumphs of other cities, where it has been playing to the capacity of the theatres, Oliver Morosco's production of "Peg O' My Heart", the comedy of youth, laughter and love, comes to Uman Grand Opera House for an engagement next Friday October 9th. Peg, the winsome little Irish girl, who, in real life is Rea Martin is a character that has strongly gripped the heart of our theatre-going public. It seems that all classes have opened their hearts to Peg, who is a sweet good natured, and decidedly human Irish lass, who the wit of her race. She is also philosophical, and full of quaint notions, with a touch of melancholy sobering the brightness of her laugh.

"Peg O' My Heart" has proven conclusively that theatre-goers of all sections of the country can still laugh as heartily and sincerely at humor which is not coarse—that a story directly and sincerely told is more potent than any fantastic plot conceivable, for this romantic comedy has been playing to tremendous business in New York where it recently closed its remarkable run of 604 consecutive performances, with Laurette Taylor in the principal role.

Associated with Miss Rea Martin, are the members of last season's southern cast, which comprises, Frederick Meade, Harry Calvert, George Mendelsohn, Raymona Brantley, Clara Sidney, Helen Haskell, George Claire and Kittie O'Connor. The management not only here but everywhere absolutely guarantee the full production and exceptional cast. Never has an attraction of higher standard visited this city.

Mrs. Amy Hardcastle Pattison, of Easton, leading field worker for the Just Government League on the Shore, was married on Saturday afternoon of last week to Johnson Gillam Ward, of New York.

LATEST NEWS FROM THE WAR ZONE

Continued progress by the allies at the western end of the battle line is claimed in French official reports.

The official announcement at Paris last night reported that a violent action in the region of Roye had resulted in success for the allies; that in the Argonne progress had been made at several new points, and that "the general situation remains satisfactory."

The British War Information Bureau has made it known that Indian troops were landed in France last Friday.

NEW DRUG STORE OPENS
Next Week—Modernly Equipped With Handsome Fixtures

Dr. A. B. Burris has about completed the fitting out of his new drug store on the corner of Main and Dock streets, and will open it to the public during the coming week. In addition to the usual line of drugs and medicines Dr. Burris will carry a complete line of tobacco and confectioneries.

One of the largest soda fountains in this section has been installed and equipped with an electric carbonator of the latest type. The ceiling and walls are finished in metal, and with the other fixtures make a very attractive appearance.

Dr. Burris has been practicing medicine successfully here for several years, and will have a good trade to start with.

Only Two More Days for Registration.

Remember

It is wise to get rid quickly of ailments of the organs of digestion—of headache, languor, depression of spirits—the troubles for which the best corrective is

BEECHAM'S PILLS

The Largest Sale of Any Medicine in the World. Sold everywhere. In boxes, 10c., 25c.

Possible Application.

An old woodsman was walking through a forest when he saw a large bear approaching him. Realizing his predicament, he exclaimed: "Oh Lord, be with me!" Still the bear came on, when the man again prayed: "Oh Lord, be on my side." Seeing the bear continue to approach, the woodsman, whipping out his knife, exclaimed: "Oh Lord, if you won't be on my side, just declare neutrality, and I'll show you the god-darnedest bear fight you ever saw in your life."

Another Chance for Huffy.

Advertisement in a paper—not in the Hillville Standard—was to notify my husband, who got mad and ran away without saying so much as a word, that if he returns home and acts sensible, like he ought to have been raised to, which he wasn't, about all that I can think of now will be forgiven, provided, as said before, that he is a changed man and will quit railing 'Cain an' a-doin' of nothin'—Atlanta Constitution.

Wise Precaution.

A certain politician desired a diplomatic appointment, says the Washington Star. A friend, in surprise, said to him: "But you don't even speak the language of the country." "Well," replied the determined applicant, "a man isn't nearly so likely to make indiscreet remarks, if he has to get a lexicon and look up the meaning of every word he utters."

Magic for Rust Spots.

To remove rust spots on bathtubs and basins and discolorations in toilet basins and sinks apply muriatic acid with a mop. As soon as the discoloration is removed the acid should be thoroughly rinsed off with clear water. The acid works like magic; it is almost instantaneous in its effect and the labor of scrubbing is saved.

Rather a Nest Rebuke.

"We will now take up our annual collection for the benefit of the heathen," announced the Rev. Dr. Fourth at the close of his sermon, "and I hope those young men making so much noise all through this service will be especially liberal in their contributions."—Boston Herald.

Hearing Heart Beats.

If you hear your heart beat in one ear, as many persons do, it is no proof of anything wrong with the heart. It is much more likely to be a local defect such as a chronic catarrh of the middle ear or stiffness and retraction of the drum. This is on the authority of a leading physician of Chicago.

Vast American Industries.

Private capital invested in timber lands, mills, logging railroads, and other forms of equipment in this country reach an enormous aggregate, and the lumber industry, which employs 739,000 persons and has an annual output valued at one and one-sixth billion dollars, is the third largest.

Beauty of Nature.

Nature is beautiful, always beautiful. Every little flake of snow is a perfect crystal, and they fall together as gracefully as if fairies of the air caught water drops and made them into artificial flowers to garland the wings of the wind.—Lydia M. Child.

Why Wind Them?

Maybe there are people in town who feel that keeping a rooster through the summer is necessary to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, but why wind them, like an alarm clock, every night?—Toledo Blade.

Saltling the Wound.

Artist—"Dobkins, the critic, has roasted my picture unmercifully." His Friend—"Don't mind that fellow. He's no ideas of his own; he only repeats like a parrot what all the others say."—London Opinion.

Some Men Can Be Mean!

Wife—"Everything you have you owe to me." Husband—"That's what Doctor Jones' wife says." Wife—"Who's Doctor Jones?" Husband—"The stomach and nerve specialist."

Don't Be Disheartened.

When a man begins to find himself feeling disheartened and depressed over the slow progress of civilization, he ought to remember that he very seldom sees a patent rocker now.

Diplomacy.

"What did you tell your wife when you got home from the club last night?" "I told her she was the sweetest woman in the world."

Sound Advice.

Treat your friends as you do your bank account. Don't be reckless with them just because you've got them.—Detroit Free Press.

Young Men for Action.

Young men are fitter to invent than to judge; fitter for execution than for counsel.—Boston.

CHILDREN THRIVE

on our bread. It is wonderful the amount of nourishment they derive from it. They like it, too, because it is so pure and wholesome. Acquaint yourself with its excellence by giving it a trial. We are sure that it will convince you of its superiority.

DAIRYMEN STRONGLY FAVOR USING IMPROVED STOCK

Their Association Urges Farmers To Secure Well-Bred Bulls and Offers Prizes For Superior Milk.

At a recent meeting of the State Dairymen's Association in Baltimore, a striking instance was given of "the asleep at the switch" attitude of our milk producers as far as the improvement of their herds is concerned. In 1910, Mr. S. M. Shoemaker made the offer of a pure-bred bull calf to the farmer whose cow would make the highest milk record in the State, no expense to be incurred therewith, and no restrictions except that the contest be supervised by the State Experiment Station. There was not an inquiry—not one! Sixty days after making this offer, Mr. Shoemaker priced this same bull to a buyer at $800 and promptly sold it. Last there should be question as to this offer being widely enough advertised, it should be added that the bull calf, together with its pedigree and a large placard stating the simple conditions of the prize were on exhibition during Maryland Week of that year for all visitors at the Armory to see!

A GOOD SIRE.

Notwithstanding this example, the directors of the Dairymen's Association have offered generous prizes for contestants in a number of dairy product contests.

TAX DITCH NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given to all taxables and persons interested, that the County Commissioners of Wicomico County will take up for hearing and final ratification at their office in Salisbury, Md., the report of the tax ditch commissioners appointed to lay out a tax ditch known as the Gordy tax ditch in Parsons Election District, Wicomico County, Maryland, at 3 o'clock p. m., Tuesday, October 13th, 1914. The proposed ditch to commence at the Gordy mill pond on the north side thereof, on land of Zeno Tingle, and run through the lands of said Zeno Tingle, W. L. Morris, J. M. Morris, Clayton C. Parker and others and to the land of Josiah Hostler and others.

By order of the County Commissioners of Wicomico County,
DANIEL B. CANNON,

uct contests, ending Maryland Week Nov. 16 to 21st, which include a market contest, one for new and one for old contestants, a market cream contest, a prize of $50 for the person organizing the first new cow testing association in Maryland in 1914, and another prize of $50 for the most efficient tester employed by one of these associations and who has served in this capacity for twelve months.

The Association also endorsed the offer of the State Experiment Station to place several Guernsey and Ayrshire Bull Calves as herd sires on selected farms, free of cost, in an effort to improve the type of dairy animals and to encourage the breeding of registered dairy cows. Full information regarding this service may be secured from the Secretary of the Association at College Park.

Foolish Question.

A man charged at the Liverpool (Eng.) police court with fighting stated that the prosecutor hit him first on the jaw. "Did you hit him first?" asked the stipendiary. "No, sir," was the reply. "If I had hit him first he would have been in the hospital, not me."

She Won't Believe It.

We don't suppose that it will ever be possible to convince a woman that a neat little round hole in the sitting room rug, where a small amount of ignited tobacco happened to fall, merely serves to make the place look homelike.—Ohio State Journal.

Wonder Why.

A woman would hardly marry a bow-legged man to reform him, and there are several other varieties of misshapen masculinity that it is just as futile to attempt to mend by means of matrimony.—Detroit Journal.

Buyers to Share in Profits Lower Prices on Ford Cars

Effective from August 1, 1914 to August 1, 1915 and guaranteed against any reduction during that time:

Touring Car	- - -	$490
Runabout	- - -	440
Town Car	- - -	690

F. O. B. Detroit, all cars fully equipped.
(In the United States of America Only)

Further, we will be able to obtain the maximum efficiency in our factory production, and the minimum cost in our purchasing and sales departments if we can reach an output of 300,000 cars between the above dates.

And should we reach this production, we agree to pay as the buyer's share from $40 to $60 per car [on or about August 1, 1915] to every retail buyer who purchases a new Ford car between August 1, 1914 and August 1, 1915.

For further particulars regarding these low prices and profit-sharing plan, see the nearest Ford Branch or Dealer.

VOTING A DUTY

It may not be amiss to again call the attention of all voters to the fact that it is necessary for EVERY man to get registered this fall if he wants to participate in the coming November election, at which we elect a United States Senator and a Congressman to represent the First Maryland District.

The last opportunity to do this will be on Tuesday and Wednesday of the coming week—October 6th and 7th. Every man who has not already availed himself of the opportunity should not fail to go to the registration office in his district and have his name placed on the poll books one of these days.

The SALISBURY ADVERTISER is a strong believer in the policies and principles of the Democratic party, and to some it may seem strange that it is urging ALL, without distinction as to party affiliations, to get registered.

Looked at in its proper light, however, it will be seen that this is the strongest proof of our belief in the merits of the cause, for this fact in itself is enough evidence of our faith; since we are willing that the whole body of voters should pass upon the questions involved, and have not the slightest fear for the result.

But throwing aside all partisanship, and dealing with the question of voting from the broader and better viewpoint of the true interest of our country, we can not help but feel that "voting" is not only a right and privilege, but a solemn duty which no man has the moral right to dodge or neglect.

We have no quarrel with any man, if he differs with us, as long as he is conscientious, but on the contrary, have the highest regard for any man who stands upon his convictions.

He who studies a question and then votes according to his best judgment, is a better man and a truer citizen than he who is influenced by other motives, be they heredity or environment; habit or policy; cowardice or boss dictation; avarice or prejudice.

Nor, as far as the individual himself is concerned, does it alter the case if his vote be on right or wrong side.

It may be put down as an axiom or general principle that he who votes on any other ground than that of principle and conviction, is either indifferent and therefore unworthy of the privilege, ignorant or actuated by avarice, prejudice or cowardice.

If the party which we support can not stand on its own merits, then it is unworthy to live. There is no honor or glory in a victory won by appeals to heredity, custom, avarice or prejudice.

"Politics" may be "politics," and so is right, right, and wrong, wrong, and it is but an easy conscience that can excuse a wrongful act on the grounds that it is "politics."

Right and wrong, as we understand them, are not confined to any particular field of life, but are alike applicable to every phase of activity, and the sooner the "workers," political beneficiaries, and voters of all parties, recognize that they are as much responsible for their political acts as they are for their Sunday school conduct, the better it will be for all concerned.

Let every man who has not already registered do so next week, and then let each and every one settle down to study the situation, and let us hope that intelligence and conviction will be the guiding forces of our actions next November.

Asbury M. E. Church—Reception of probationers into full membership at 11 o'clock a. m. At 7:30 p. m., a special service in the interest of world peace. The President's call for prayer will be read and addresses on the subject will be delivered. All evening meetings at 7:30.

Mr. Herbert Hitch left Wednesday morning for a visit to his sister, Mrs. C. H. Ward, of Asbury Park, and his daughter, Mrs. W. J. Oaks, of Atlantic Highlands, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Disharoon and son Homer are spending some time on the James river at the beautiful residence that was purchased by the C. R. Disharoon Co. They will also attend the Virginia state fair at Richmond, while away.

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Edison, of Morristown, N. J., announce the marriage of their sister, Miss Olivia Folson Travers, to Mr. Henry Danby, of Wilmington, Del. The wedding took place in St. Peter's P. E. Church at Morristown, on Wednesday, September 30. Miss Travers is well known here, where she has frequently visited and has many friends.

Invitations have been received in Salisbury to the marriage of Miss Alice Blanche Carr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Ashby Carr, to Mr. William Penimore Childs, Jr., at Pinkney Memorial Church, Hyattsville, Md., Wednesday evening, October 14th. Mr. Childs is the resident engineer of the State Roads Commission for Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset counties.

Among the Salisbury girls and boys who have recently left for school are Miss Nellie Rider, for Oldfield School, Glencoe, Md.; Miss Annie Humphreys, Centenary Collegiate Institute, Hackettstown, N. J.; William H. Jackson, Jr., Lawrenceville Academy; Phelps Todd, University of Pennsylvania; Miss Louisa Graham, Fairmount Academy, Washington, D. C.; and Miss Annabelle Tilghman, the Baldwin School, Bryn Mawr.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Elsa Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wesley Dunn, of Salisbury, formerly of East Orange, N. J., to Mr. Robert Sherman Stringer, of Rochester, N. Y. The wedding will take place this winter. Miss Dunn, who is a gifted musician, spent a part of the winter here two seasons ago as the guest of Miss Muriel Morse, who with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Morse, was living at the Albion Hotel, Baltimore Sun.

Miss Nellie Horn Mitchell, the only daughter of the Reverend and Mrs. Harry D. Mitchell, of Forest Park, will be married to Mr. Charles E. Day, of Salisbury, early in October. The ceremony will be performed by the bride's father. Miss Mitchell is a graduate of Western Maryland College in the class of 1912, and is an active church worker. The couple will reside in Seaford, Del., after an extensive trip in the North.—Baltimore Sun.

TAKING CARE OF SEED

PREPARE FOR A PROFITABLE CORN CROP NEXT YEAR.

Preference Should Be Given to Plants That Have Produced Most Heavily—Short, Thick Stalks Are Most Desirable.

As soon as the crop ripens, go through the field with seed-picking bags and husk the ears from the stalks that have produced the most corn without having any special advantages, such as space, moisture, or fertility. Avoid the large ears on stalks standing singly with an unusual amount of space around them. Preference should be given the plants that have produced most heavily in competition with a full stand of less productive plants.

In all localities the inherent tendency of the plant to produce heavily of sound, dry, shelled corn is of most importance.

Shelves in a 8-ed-Corn Dry House.

Late-maturing plants with ears which are heavy because of an excessive amount of sap should be ignored. Sapiness greatly increases the weight and is likely to destroy the quality.

In the central and southern states, all other things being equal, short, thick stalks are preferable. Short stalks are not so easily blown down and permit thicker planting. Thick stalks are not so easily broken down and in general are more productive than slender ones. Seed should be taken from stalks that have no suckers.

The same day seed corn is gathered the husked ears should be put in a dry place where there is free circulation of air, and placed in such a manner that the ears do not touch each other. This is the only safe procedure. Frequently good seed corn is ruined because it is thought to be dry enough when gathered and the above precaution unnecessary. Seed corn in every locality, no matter how dry the autumn, will be benefited by drying as suggested. If left in the husks long after ripening, it may sprout or mildew during warm wet weather or become infested with weevils. The vitality of seed is often reduced by leaving it in a sack or in a pile for even a day after gathering. During warm weather, with some moisture in cobs, the ears heat in a remarkably short time.

Use binder twine for stringing the ears. Binder twine will support 15 or 20 ears on a string. Ordinarily the best place to hang these strings of ears is in an open shed or loft. Perforated seed racks are more convenient.

Spared Listeners and Himself. For humor, combined with brevity, it would not be easy to rival the French cleric, who, on the festival of St. James, was called upon to pronounce a panegyric on the saint. "My brethren," he said, "twelve months ago I preached a eulogy on the eminent apostle whose festival you celebrate today. As I doubt not, you were all very attentive to me, and as I have not learned anything new of him, I have nothing to add to what I said at the time."

Smile Right.

When in doubt—smile. It is a safe play at almost any stage of life's game. But be sure it's the right kind of a smile—not the fawning smile, not the smile of fear which is better described as a grin, but the smile which says that the world is a pretty good sort of a place if you don't take it too seriously—the smile that says: "Come on in, the joke's a good one."—Pictorial Review.

New Market for Ivory.

Although in recent years the ivory imported into London has decreased, the falling off has been caused by a new market having been created by the opening up of the Congo free state. The ivory coming from that region is now sold in Antwerp, so that when the quantities sent to both markets are put together the total imports actually show an increase.

Died as He Lived.

"Easeman is gone, poor chap. Died without a struggle." "Just like Easeman; he never was known to exert himself in anything."

Natural Deduction.

"Mamma," queried small Edna the first time she saw a multicolored parrot, "was that chicken hatched from an Easter egg?"

Esthetic.

The Customer—"Oh, but haven't you any other tint in lettuce than this? It won't go with my new blue salad dish a bit!"—Sketch.

As to Fields.

Many a man who is fooling away his time in the literary field might be useful in a potato field.

Easy Way Out of It.

"We know a stenographer," says the Peoria Journal, "who refuses to write letters on pale blue stationery because it doesn't agree with her complexion." In that case, if she is a valuable stenographer, it would be a simple matter for the firm to go to the drug store and buy her a complexion to match the paper.—Toledo Blade.

Late Turkeys.

Late turkeys are really easier raised than early, but more often lost. Late turkeys need all the chance that can be given them, yet they are generally left to roam and take care of themselves. They should be isolated from other poultry at first, and started with all the care given the first hatches. They should be permitted to roost outside and far away from poultry buildings and yards, and should be given free range; but they should be fed regularly and generously, and should be frequently dusted with insect powder to prevent lice.

FARMER'S WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

A Weak, Nervous Sufferer Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Kasota, Minn.—"I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than anything else, and I had the best physician here. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now I feel like a different person. I believe there is nothing like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weak women and young girls, and I would be glad if I could influence anyone to try the medicine, for I know it will do all and much more than it is claimed to do."—Mrs. CLARA FRANKS, R. F. D. No. 1, Maplecrest Farm, Kasota, Minn.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should be convinced of the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health by the many genuine and truthful testimonials we are constantly publishing in the newspapers.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

In the eighteenth century the whole duty and order of Chicago, Scotland, were intrusted to the unpaid and reluctant burglars. Every citizen who was between the years of eighteen and sixty, and paid a yearly rent amounting to $15, had to take his turn at guarding the city. "On touch of drum," says a writer, "the gentleman was at his post at ten at night, and stroked with weary tread and yawning gait along the Trongate and High street, and up the pitch dark lanes, of winter nights till four in the morning. After that hour the city was without a police."

Better Than Politics.
A Pittsburgh boarder is beaten up by his landlady, armed with a flatiron, because he demanded prunes for breakfast. Well, how would one expect a woman to deal with an insane man?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

One of the strangest things in this world is why a woman who can trim a pencil and a pair of scissors is not considered competent to vote alone.

LABOR'S RESPONSIBILITY.

I believe in workmen's compensation. I believe in the eight hour day for men in continuous industries and for women and children everywhere and eventually for all workers in all industries. I believe in social insurance. I believe in minimum wage legislation for those industries in which labor is not itself in a position to enforce fair living conditions. I believe in unions. I believe that labor organizations have been one of the greatest factors in improving the material and moral conditions of the wage earner and in raising the standard of industrial citizenship. The union is as necessary an outgrowth of our modern industrial system as is the corporation. The wise and far-sighted employer will recognize this fact. He will appreciate that the men in the employ of a great corporation have the right of collective bargaining.

But the union must accept the responsibility that comes with power. It must recognize its obligation to the industry and to the community as a whole. It must be judged by its conduct precisely as a corporation is judged by its conduct. It must do its utmost to promote the efficiency of its members, for unless the business is increasingly productive there will be no sufficient reward for anybody, no profit to the shareholders, no adequate wage for the working man, no proper service to the public.—Theodore Roosevelt.

WORDS OF THE WISE.

Slavery is also as ancient as war, and war is human nature. —Voltaire.
It is most true that a natural and secret hatred and aversion toward society in any man hath somewhat of the savage beast. —Bacon.
The gain which is made at the expense of reputation should rather be set down as a loss. —Latin Proverb.
Truth never was indebted to a lie. —Young.
The shoemaker makes a good shoe because he makes nothing else. —Emerson.

NOT BY ONE FALL.

Not by one fall or many be we stayed.
If falls await on yonder fighting field;
Too great the issue that we tamely yield.
Or count the cost until the cost is paid.
Right may be balked and for awhile delayed.
Truth in a mist of falsehood be concealed.
But laws divine are not to be repelled.
Nor love divine forever disbelied.
Not by one fall! But if the triumph go
To doubt and fallacy, delusion, freak.
If for awhile defeated, we shall know
The time will come for highest truth to speak.
Because the high sees farther than the low.
And guidance must be from the mountain peak.
—Arthur L. Salmon in Churchman.

SAID OF WIT.

The next best thing to being witty oneself is to be able to quote another's wit.—Bovee.
He must be a dull fellow indeed whom neither love, malice nor necessity can inspire with wit.—De la Bruyere.
Don't put too fine a point to your wit for fear it should get blunted.—Cervantes.
I am a fool, I know it, and yet, God help me, I'm poor enough to be a wit.—Congreve.
Wit is the salt of conversation, not the food.—Hazlitt.

My Duty.

There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbors good. One person I have to make good: Myself. But my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy.—If I may.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

NEWS OF THE SCHOOLS.

Organization About Completed—Some Who Are Going Away.

When the new wing of the Wicomico County High School building is completed, which will be some time during the winter, it will still be insufficient for the proper accommodation of the work of the school. Undoubtedly the School Board will be compelled to build the proposed east wing of the building much sooner than has been planned. Whether this can be done during the next summer is doubtful, for the county's funds for school purposes are barely sufficient to meet the requirements of the work that is being carried on. Besides, there are demands for better school houses in other parts of the county.

For at least half the present school year a large number of pupils of the higher grades which ought to be housed with the high school will have to go to other quarters.

The literary societies of Wicomico High School held their first meeting on Friday. There are four societies this year. In addition to the Longfellow and the Bryant, the two which have existed for a number of years, are the Whittier, which was organized two years ago, and the Sidney Lanier, which was organized this year.

The societies all opened with very interesting programs, and promise good work for the coming year.

The literary societies of the High School have organized and their officers until January will be as follows:

Longfellow Society—Rexford A. Taylor, president; John W. Perry, vice president; Sydney Johnson, secretary; Carroll Bounds, treasurer; executive committee, Stella Ward, Ed. Downing, Helen Bailey, Mildred Dolby.

Bryant Society—Seth Taylor, president; Cynthia Dryden, vice president;

Virginia Johnson, secretary; Wm. Ingersoll, treasurer; executive committee, Martha Jones, Alice Elliott, Denwood Mitchell, Albert Parker.

Whittier Society—Welton Fooks, president; Joseph Rawson, vice president; William Johnson, secretary; George Lowe, treasurer; executive committee, Sara Moore, Elsie Tomlinson, Joseph Rawson, Addie Harris.

Lanier Society—Thomas Mitchell, president; Helen Duffy, vice president; Julia Potts, secretary; Edgar Phillips, treasurer; executive committee, Preston Short, Helen Duffy, Julia Potts, Susie Whayland.

Information gathered at the High School as to the whereabouts of the members of the graduating class of 1914 is interesting as showing that a very large number of the members of that class are still further pursuing their studies in institutions of higher learning.

Miss Beulah Harris and Mr. Paul Warner won the four-years' scholarship to the Western Maryland College in a competitive examination held by Supt. Holloway.

Mr. Hubert Drummond has received a scholarship from the University of Virginia. This is the first time the Wicomico High School has been accredited by a Southern university.

Messrs. Marion Cox and Fred Ward have been received at St. John's College and will be entered in the sophomore class.

Mr. Vaughn Gray, son of George Gray, and Mr. Vaughn Richardson, son of Mr. Sewell Richardson, both of this city, entered the freshman class at Delaware College.

Mr. Nevins Todd will enter the Tome Institute to take a course admitting him to the Boston School of Technology.

Mr. Eugene Todd entered the Pearce Business College at Philadelphia.

Mr. Sheldon Jones entered the Randolph-Macon College, of Virginia, and Mr. William Lowe entered the Pitt School, of New Jersey.

Misses Margaret Holloway and Margaret Morris, Messrs. John Carlson and Asbury Holloway, all of the commercial course, have engaged in commercial work since their graduation.

Miss Margaret Walls is attending a business college, and Mr. Roland Kendall is taking a post-graduate course in the commercial department of the Wicomico High School.

Clifford Ward and Burton Gordy have entered the Ohio State University at Columbus. Mr. Ward will make law his profession; Mr. Gordy will make agriculture his specialty.

Misses Helen Burton, Marian Messick, E. May Parker, Edna Wilkins, Mildred Walker, Myrtle Bradley and Edna Mae Wright have been appointed to schools in Wicomico county.

The senior class is now the largest ever in Wicomico High School, having 48 members. The officers of the class are as follows: President, Rex Taylor; vice president, Thos. Mitchell, Jr.; secretary, Sara Moore; treasurer, Welton Fooks.

The foot ball squad has a full schedule this season and has quite a number of interesting games listed. The squad has been practicing for the past three weeks and an exciting game is expected today, when our team will meet the Laurel team.

Mr. Vaughn Richardson, who was captain of the undefeated team of last season is captain of this season, and Mr. Welton Fooks is manager. Such a team needs encouragement, and everyone interested in athletics should be present at the first games.

Come out and show the boys you appreciate their efforts. The home games will take place on the athletic grounds in South Salisbury.

The work on the new wing being built to the high school is being rushed through. It is expected that this will be completed by Christmas. Then the eighth grade, which is now at the Chestnut street school, will be situated at the high school. Three extra teachers will then be located at the high school, making the entire force fourteen.

In the new wing there will be several class rooms, a large assembly room and well-equipped sections for manual training, drawing and domestic science. The basement of the main building, which is now being used for manual training, drawing and domestic science, will be used for a gymnasium. The room that was the assembly hall has been divided into two large class rooms and a rest room for teachers.

Advertisements and subscriptions are being solicited for the High school paper. The staff has not yet been elected, but it will be at an early date, and an issue will be made the last of September or the first of October.

Mr. Vaughn Richardson and Mr. Vaughn Gray have returned from Delaware College. Mr. Richardson will resume his work at Wicomico High School and Mr. Gray will take a post-graduate course at high school.

Mr. Roland Kendall has entered St. John's College at Annapolis.

A Hot Bath.

How would you like to take a bath in liquid heated to a temperature of 1500 degrees F.? The metal from which the flues of THE SOUTH BEND MALLEABLE RANGE is made is given a bath in Aluminum. All heated to the above temperature. And the bath does the metal a lot of good, for forever after it will resist rust and corrosion greater than any other metal known in range construction.

Perhaps you are asking: Of what interest is this information? It means a whole lot to you if you are fortunate enough to have a home, for every home must have a range on which to cook the meals. Ever since the first range was made range manufacturers and buyers have been looking for a metal that will best resist rust and corrosion from which to make the inside flues. Now we have it, and the process by which it is made is patented. The makers of SOUTH BEND MALLEABLE RANGE were wise and fortunate enough to obtain the exclusive right to use it for insulating the flues of Malleable Ranges.

There is an exhibition of this range all next week at the store of L. W. Gunby Co. You had better go and see it.

HOPE OF CIVILIZATION.

Today the welfare of the world is in the hands of the American worker. Today civilization's sole hope lies in the spirit and energy of those who labor in America's industries. Today the manhood of America guards the gates of peace to keep the world from famine and to preserve for all mankind the accumulated achievements of centuries of endeavor. With Europe plunged into bloody strife, with its manhood removed from useful production, its intelligence devoted to destruction and its farms and industries lying idle, the burden of human progress at this time rests upon the men and women of America. It is a time that should call forth the best in every American citizen. It is a time for the people of America to stand shoulder to shoulder. It is a time for every class to forget petty differences and to unite to meet the great emergency and the greater responsibility confronting the nation. Governor Glynn of New York at Labor Convention.

FROM THE CLASSICS.

Can any one find out in what condition his body will be? I do not say a year hence, but this evening.—Cicero.

Nothing is more annoying than a low man raised to a high position.—Claudianus.

If matters go on badly now they will not always be so.—Horace.

Our advantages fly away without aid. Pluck the flower.—Ovid.

The plant which is often transplanted does not prosper.—Seneca.

Bodies are slow of growth, but are rapid in their dissolution.—Tacitus.

THE MAN HE KILLED.

Had he and I but met By some old ancient inn, We should have set us down to wet Right many a nipperkin.

But ranged as infantry And staring face to face, I shot at him, as he at me, And killed him in his place.

I shot him dead because— Because he was my foe. Just so: my foe, of course, he was;

That's clear enough, although He thought he'd 'list, perhaps, Offhand like—just as I— Was out of 'work—had sold his trap— No other reason why.

Yes; quaint and curious war is! You shoot a fellow down You'd treat if met where any bar is Or help to half a crown.

—Thomas Hardy.

THOUGHTS ON YOUTH.

Youth is to all the glad season of life, but often only by what it hopes, not by what it attains or what it escapes.—Orrile.

The morning of life is like the dawn of day, full of purity, of imagery and harmony.—Gautier.

As I approve of a youth that has something of the old man in him, so I am no less pleased with an old man that has something of the youth. He that follows this rule may be old in body, but can never be so in mind.—Cicero.

The foreground of human life is the only part of it which we can examine with real exactness.—Froude.

There is a feeling of eternity in youth which makes amends for everything. To be young is to be as one of the immortals.—Hassitt.

RIMED QUOTATIONS.

Think not ambition was because 'tis grave. —Sir William Davenant.

The paths of glory lead but to the grave. —Gray.

What is ambition? 'Tis a glorious cheat. —Willis.

Only destructive to the brave and great. —Addison.

What's all the gaudy glitter of a crown? —Dryden.

The way to bliss lies not on beds of down. —Francis Quarles.

Important to all Women Readers of This Paper.

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints of a prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer a great deal with pain in the back, bearing-down feelings, headaches and loss of ambition. Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

A good kidney medicine, possessing real healing and curative value, should be a blessing to thousands of nervous, over-worked women.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp Root, the Great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy will do for them. Every reader of this paper, who has not already tried it, by enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Rindhampton, N. Y., may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. When writing mention the Salisbury Weekly Advertiser. You can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at all drug stores.—Ad.

Never can tell when you'll wash a flower or suffer a cut, bruise, burn or scald. Be prepared. Thousands rely on Dr. Chamberlain's Electric Oil. Your druggist sells it. 25c and 50c.

JUNE BRIDES

Or the bride of any other month, will find that the presents that are most admired are the dainty creations of the Jeweler's art.

Other things may be as useful, even more useful, but marriage time is the time of sentiment so it happens that articles kept in a jewelry store are the gift of gifts.

There's a suggestive hint in that fact for prospective buyers of presents.

Here's another hint for them after they have decided to make it. THIS STORE offers you a choice of almost innumerable number of presents for the bride.

SUNNET CXLVI.

Poor soul, the center of my spiritual earth, Fool'd by those rebel powers that thee array,

Why dost thou pine within and suffer death, Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?

Why so large cost, having so short a lease, Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?

Shall worms, inheritors of this excess, Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end?

Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss And let that pine to aggravate thy store;

Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross; Within be fed, without be rich no more.

So shalt thou feed on death that feeds on men And, death once dead, there's no more dying then.

—William Shakespeare.

EPITAPH OF AN INFANT.

Many a soul did I wait For admission to the gate Of the living. But to see Much was not vouchsafed to me In my little term and span.

I, that hoped to be a man, Like a snowflake incarnate, Seem for three days' light created.

Two eyes saw I, and the sun, And gold spires of Babylon. But, while voices I forgot Called from cloud and minaret Men to wake, I stood once more With the dreams outside the door.

—Herbert Trench in the Nation.

THE MARSEILLAISE.

Ye sons of freedom, wake to glory! Hark, hark! What myriads bid you rise!

Your children, wives and grand-sires hurry, Behold their tears and hear their cries. Shall hateful tyrants, mischief breeding,

With hireling hosts, a ruffian band, Affright and desolate the land, While peace and liberty lie bleeding?

To arms! To arms, ye brave! The avenging sword unsheath.

March on, march on! All hearts resolved On victory or death.

O Liberty, can man resign thee? Once having felt thy generous flame?

Can dungeons, bolts or bars confine thee? Or whips thy noble spirit tame?

Too long the world has wept, bewailing That falsehood's dagger tyrants wield.

But freedom is our sword and shield. And all their arts are unavailing.

To arms! To arms, ye brave! The avenging sword unsheath.

March on, march on! All hearts resolved On victory or death.

WISDOM.

Wisdom is the only thing which can relieve us from the sway of the passions and the fear of danger and which can teach us to bear the injuries of fortune itself with moderation and which shows us all the ways which lead to tranquillity and peace.—Young.

As for me, all I know is that I know nothing.—Socrates.

The doorstep to the temple of wisdom is a knowledge of our own ignorance.—Spurgeon.

Well, God gave them wisdom that have it, and those that are fools let them use their talents.—Shakespeare.

WATERLOO.

Why have the mighty lived—why have they died? Is it ever thus with idle wreck to strew Fields such as thine, remorseless Waterloo? Hopeless the lesson! Vainly hath ever cried Stern fate to man—"So perish human pride!" Still must the many combat for the few:

Still must the noblest blood fair earth bedew: Tyrants, slaves, freemen, moldering side by side!

On such a day the world was lost and won. By Pompey at Pharsalia: such a day Saw glorious Hannibal a fugitive. So faded 'neath the Macedonian sun Perga's pale star: no empire passed away From Harold's brow, but he disdained to live!

—Sir A. de Vera.

SAVINGS OF SAGES.

I have never had a policy. I have simply tried to do what seemed best each day as each day came.—Lincoln

To live, to work, to help and to be helped: to learn by sympathy through suffering, to learn faith by perplexity, to reach truth through wonder—behold! This is what it is to prosper, this is what it is to live.—Phillips Brooks.

God has connected the labor which is essential to the bodily sustenance with the pleasures which are the healthiest for the heart: and while he made the ground stubborn he made its herbage fragrant and its blossoms fair.—John Ruskin.

AGE OF HUMANITY.

The age of chivalry has gone. An age of humanity has come. The horse, whose importance, more than human, gave the name to that early period of gallantry and war, now yields his foremost place to man. In serving him, in promoting his elevation, in contributing to his welfare, in doing him good, there are fields of bloodless triumph, nobler far than any in which the bravest knights ever conquered. Here are spheres of labor wide as the world, lofty as heaven.—Charles Sumner.

"Peruna Cured Me

MR. ROBERT FOWLER, Of Okarche, Oklahoma.

Mr. Robert Fowler, Okarche, Oklahoma, writes: "To any sufferer of catarrh of the stomach, I am glad to tell my friends or sufferers of catarrh that seventeen years ago I was past work of any kind, due to stomach troubles. I tried almost every known remedy without any results."

"Finally I tried Peruna, and am happy to say I was benefited by the first bottle, and after using a full treatment I was entirely cured."

"I am now seventy years old, and am in good health due to always having Peruna at my command. I would not think of going away from home for any length of time without taking a bottle of Peruna along for emergency."

"You are at liberty to use my picture and testimony if you think it will help any one who has stomach trouble."

A High Opinion

"That's the highest quality paint made," said a customer of ours, and it has proven to be the cheapest and the best. Our paint meets all competition successfully with quality—the high quality that makes it dollars cheaper than the other kind. Paint that lasts last lasts best— isn't that so?

PROCLAMATION.

Proposed Amendment To the Constitution Of Maryland.

WHEREAS, at the January Session of the General Assembly of Maryland, held in the year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fourteen, an Act was passed proposing an Amendment to Section 44, Part VII, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, which said Amendment is designated as Chapter 845 of the Acts of Maryland 1914, and is in the words and figures following:

AN ACT to amend Section 44, Part VII, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, to provide for the submission of said Amendment to the qualified voters of the State for adoption or rejection.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, that the fifth of all the members of each of the two houses concurring in the following action be and the same is hereby proposed as an Amendment to Section 44, Part VII, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, to wit: That the qualified voters of the State, if adopted by a majority of the qualified voters thereof as herein provided, it shall supersede and stand in the place and stead of said Section 44, Part VII, of said Article 4.

Sec. 2. There shall be elected in each county in every second year, one person, resident in said county above the age of twenty-five years, at least five years preceding his election, a citizen of this state, the office of sheriff, to be known as the "sheriff of the State," and to hold office for two years, and until his successor is duly elected and qualified; he shall be ineligible for two years thereafter; he shall give such bond, and exercise such powers and perform such duties as now are or may hereafter be fixed by law. In case of vacancy in said office, resulting from death, resignation, removal, or neglect to serve, or neglect to qualify, or give bond, or by "disqualification," or removal from office, the Governor shall appoint a person to be sheriff for the remainder of the term.

In the City of Baltimore at the General Election to be held in this year 1914 and every four years thereafter, there shall be elected in said City of Baltimore, one person, above the age of twenty-five years, and who shall have been at least five years preceding his election a citizen of this state, to the office of sheriff, to be known as the "sheriff of the City of Baltimore," and to hold office for two years, and until his successor is duly elected and qualified; he shall be ineligible for two years thereafter; he shall give such bond, and exercise such powers and perform such duties as now are or may hereafter be fixed by law. The Sheriff elected in and for the City of Baltimore, in November 1916, shall be eligible for re-election.

Transfers of vacancy by death, resignation, removal, or neglect to qualify or give bond, or by "disqualification," or removal from office, the Governor shall appoint a person to be sheriff for the remainder of the term. The Sheriff hereafter elected in and for the City of Baltimore, on the 7th day of November, 1914, shall from the date of his qualification receive such salary as may be fixed by law, not to exceed six hundred dollars per year; in any case, and such expenses necessary to the conduct of his office, as may be fixed by law, as salaries and expenses to be paid to such mayor and at such times as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted by the General Assembly, that the foregoing Amendment hereby proposed as an Amendment to the Constitution of this State shall be at the next General Election for members of Congress, the same being a general election, to be held in this State, submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article 41 of the Constitution of this State, and at said general election the vote on the proposed Amendment shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be printed the words: "For the Constitutional Amendment," and "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as now prescribed by law, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed Amendment, as directed by the said Article 41 of the Constitution, and if it shall appear to the Governor that the majority of the votes cast at said election on said Amendment were in favor thereof, the Governor shall by his proclamation declare the Amendment adopted, having received the majority of votes, adopted by the people of Maryland as part of the Constitution thereof, and thereupon said Amendment shall be part of said Constitution.

Now, therefore, Philip Lee Goldsborough, Governor of the State of Maryland, in pursuance of the direction contained in Section 1, of Article 41, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, in and in compliance with the provisions of Section 2 of the above recited Act, do hereby order and direct that a copy of said Chapter 845 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1914, shall be published in at least two newspapers in each of the counties of the State and in three newspapers published in the City of Baltimore, one of which newspapers in the City of Baltimore shall be published in the German language, once a week for at least three months next preceding the next General Election for members of Congress, which election will be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1914, and at which election the said Amendment shall be submitted to the people and matter prescribed by the General Assembly, as to legal and qualified voters of the State for their adoption or rejection.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State of Maryland.

Done at the City of Annapolis, this 15th day of July, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and fourteen.

Philip Lee Goldsborough, Governor.

RETAINING EFFICIENT TEACHERS A SERIOUS PROBLEM

Agricultural College Bulletin Points Out Difficulties and Remedies For This Condition in Country Districts.

One of the great problems, at present, is the retention of an efficient agricultural teacher for any great length of time in our rural high schools. This is due to the great demand for these men in other agricultural pursuits and to the limited supply of trained teachers. The problem may be reduced by the employment of home teachers, by the adjustment of salaries, and by increasing the length of the term of service.

The agricultural teacher should be employed for the entire year in order that he may render the greatest possible service to the community. By employing him for a longer term his position will be on an equal footing with other agricultural callings, thus reducing the chance of losing his services when he has become valuable to the school and to the community.

It is as important to consider the personality of the teachers as it is to consider his college training. He comes in closer touch with the life of the country community than any other school official. He, through his exemplary habits, ability to do things, and general culture, must be able to command the respect of the entire community. The boy in the school must feel that his teacher knows of what he speaks, and the parent must be satisfied that the child is being directed by one who is qualified to instill correct ideals of farm life and its possibilities. —J. E. Metzger, in Bulletin No. 3, on Agricultural Education of the Agricultural College which will be mailed free to all requesting it.

POULTRY RUNS SHOULD BE FRESHENED AND SOWN TO RYE FOR SPRING GREEN FEED.

ROY H. WAITE.
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

If you are keeping your chickens in yards, they will need some green feed next spring and the yards ought to be cleaned up so that diseases and parasites will not develop at will. You can perform these two operations at one time if you will dig or cultivate your yards and sow them to rye. If you have a double yard system, you can use one yard or set of yards in the summer and the other set in winter. The summer yards ought to be sown to rye about the first of October, and the hens kept off. Then in the spring when the rye gets a good start they can be turned back and if about 50 square feet is allowed for each bird and they receive a bulky mass, green feed will be provided furnished until the rye is ripe. Other things might be sown but rye is hardy and stands pasturage well.

RYE VALUABLE FOR EARLY SPRING FEEDING.

Will Help Out Shortage in Long Feed if Sown Now.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ.
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Rye when properly used is one of the most valuable crops on the farm. It will produce fair yields on land too poor to grow wheat, corn, clover or barley, and in view of the present shortage of roughage on many Maryland farms, it promises to be especially helpful to stock owners at this time. Where a rolling crop is not desired, it will provide excellent spring pasturage. This method of handling it requires less work than sowing, and while only about one-half as much food, is obtained as from sowing, it can be used over a much longer period of growth.

In fact, instead of furnishing food for only about two weeks as in case of sowing clover, it will furnish good pasture from four to six weeks. Furthermore, it begins to do this two or three weeks earlier than the first cutting can be made when the rye is used as green forage. But this it not all; if sown in early September, it will afford considerable late fall and early winter grazing after the grasses have disappeared. In the spring it is usually ready for light grazing before pasture grasses have made sufficient growth. The cultural and fertilizer requirements of rye are the same as those of wheat.

The Earth's Shadow.
The earth has a shadow, but very few ever see it, except in eclipses of the moon, or else few recognize it when they see it. Nevertheless, many of us have noticed it on fine, cloudless evenings in summer shortly before sunset, a rosy pink arc on the horizon opposite the sun, with a bluish gray segment under it. As the sun sinks the arc rises until it attains the zenith and even passes it. This is the shadow of the earth.

The Gentleman.
As a finished product, the gentleman seems to do everything very easily; but that ease like the case of the habit, can only come by effort. He is socially secure; but whatever his station, he was not born so, for no man ever is socially secure by birth, even if he was born to be a king. The test of a gentleman is the pleasure others take in his society, and not in his wit or his virtue of his learning, but in his ordinary social relations with him. And this pleasure he cannot give merely by being on good terms with himself.

Wisdom of the Bee.
"Our plan is very different," said the bee. "We work in the summer to lay up a store of food against the season when we foresee we shall want it; but those who do nothing but drink and dance and sing in the summer must expect to starve in the winter."—Old Fable.

Mixed Nationality.
Four-year-old Maggie's father is from Germany; her mother from Scotland. One day the conversation turned on nationalities and my husband asked Maggie what she was. With her arm around her little brother Herman she replied: "Mamma and we's Scotch, but papa's he's German."

Tender Hearted.
Aunt Sukey came into the house in high dudgeon. "Wut yu reckon dat crazy boy Jim done, Miss Cassie?" she demanded. "Looke tol' him to cut off dat puppy's tail, an' he says, to mek it easier for 'um, he done cut it off a lil piece at a time!"

Tastes Change.
Funny that the very fellow who begs a girl for a lock of her hair in the courtship days when he kisses it so fondly will swear like a trooper if he finds one of them in the butter after he is married.

"And what is your favorite motto?" asked the reporter who was interviewing the candidate for congress. "Put yourself in his place," replied the candidate.

SOME CHERRY RECIPES

DELICACIES WITH THIS FRUIT AS A FOUNDATION.

Flavor is Improved by Cooking—Excellent Served With Tapioca—Candied Cherries One of the Finest of Confections.

Cherries are among the fruits that are much improved by cooking. Somehow they lose none of their freshness, and are rendered much juicier and more toothsome by slight cooking. Here are some recipes that make use of them:

Cherry Tapioca.—To make a delicious cherry pudding soak one small cupful of tapioca in water over night. In the morning add a pinch of salt and cook until clear. Then add butter the size of an egg, and one cupful of stoned cherries (the sour cherries are preferable). Add to this a half cupful of cherry wine or a little lemon juice and sugar to taste. Flavor with vanilla, and bake until bubbles appear on the top. Serve very cold with whipped cream.

Cherry Pie.—Line a pie plate with rich pastry. Stone the cherries and fill the pie dish. Then pour over them four tablespoonfuls of molasses and dust over all one tablespoonful of flour. Put on an upper crust and bake one-half hour in a moderate oven. When cool dust the top with a generous sprinkling of powdered sugar.

Candied Cherries.—To make a delicious confection, wash, stem and pit one pound of large, firm cherries, putting a pound of sugar to one pound of the fruit. Boil the juice and the sugar to a very thick sirup. Put the cherries in this sirup and let them simmer—not boil—for ten minutes. Then set them away in the sirup until the next day. Then take the cherries out of the sirup and put them in a deep dish. Let the sirup boil up once and pour over the cherries. This operation should be repeated for three mornings. On the fourth morning boil the sirup almost to the thickness of candy, dip the cherries in it and let them get thoroughly coated, then place them separately on flat dishes and dry.

Cherry Cordial.—Very ripe cherries make the best cordial. Bruise the fruit and mash through a colander, sweeten to taste and boil for ten minutes and then strain. Boil again until perfectly clear, skimming off occasionally. To every quart of the cherry juice add one pint of pure brandy. Seal the bottles tightly and keep in a cool dark place until ready to use.

German Cherry Pie.—Make a cherry pie as usual, but omit the upper crust. When almost done, beat one egg until very light, and add to it one quart of rich cream. Pour this mixture over the top of the pie. Put the pie back in the oven and bake until the custard is set. This makes a very attractive as well as an appetizing dish.

Cherry Salad.—Here is a delightful recipe that calls for fresh cherries. For a course in a warm-weather luncheon it is very good. Either the large white or the red cherries may be used, and it is most effective to mix the two colors. The fruit should be stoned without breaking the fruit, and in the place of each stone is placed a nut meat. Hazel nuts are the easiest to use, but any sort will do. The cherries should then be spread on lettuce leaves and used, or they may be stewed with sugar, water and a little lemon juice.

Worth Knowing.
The laurel was much in favor in olden days, as it meant "love triumphs." The Greek bride wore a wreath of myrtle. A bride of today may choose her own flower if she wishes, stamping it with her individuality. Some girls take the flower allotted to the month, especially if the time happens to be June, with its wealth of roses. Widows usually wear violets, either white or purple, or a combination of both.

Always Easy to Get Spies.
It is an international law, but an unwritten one, that a sovereign cannot lawfully require a subject to serve as a spy, except in a singular case, and that of the last importance. Nevertheless, no country will ever lack spies, for the work that is required of them is so adventurous and so well paid that thousands of men would jump at the opportunity to become a secret service agent.

Vanity of Life.
It would be difficult to rival the epitaph of Cardinal Onuphrio which, in half a dozen words sums up the vanity of life—"Here lies a shadow—ashes—nothing!" and that of Cardinal Marzaria's beautiful niece, Marie Mancini, who, after draining the cup of worldly pleasure to the dregs, wrote, as she lay dying, her own epitaph, "Marie Mancini, Dust and Ashes."

New Definition.
A class in history in school at Kirwin studying Lincoln's Gettysburg address. The teacher asked the class what was meant by the word "dedicate." One of the small boys volunteered to answer. "Dedicate," he explained, "means raising the money to pay off a church debt."—Kansas City Star.

THE LAST SHOT

COPYRIGHT, 1914, BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

By FREDERICK PALMER

mother's joking reference about her girlish resolution not to marry a soldier often recurred to him. There, he sometimes thought, was the real obstacle to his great desire.

When he alighted from the plane he thrust his left hand into his blouse pocket. He always carried it there, as if it were literally sewn in place. In moments of emotion the scarred nerves would twitch as the telltale of his sensitiveness; and this was something he would conceal from others no matter how conscious he was of it himself. He found the Galland veranda deserted. In response to his ring a maid came to the open door. Her face was sad, with a beauty that had prematurely faded. But it lighted pleasantly in recognition. Her hair was thick and tawny, lying low over the brow; her eyes were a softly luminous brown and her full lips sensitive and yielding. Lanstron, an intimate of the Galland household, knew her story well and the part that Marta had played in it.

Some four years previously, when a baby was in prospect for Minna, who wore no wedding ring, Mrs. Galland had been inclined to send the maid to an institution, "where they will take good care of her, my dear. That's what such institutions are for. It is quite scandalous for her and for us—never happened in our family before!"

Marta arched her eyebrows.

"We don't know!" she exclaimed softly.

"How can you think such a thing, let alone saying it—you, a Galland!" her mother gasped in indignation.

"That is, if we go far back," said Marta. "At all events, we have no precedent, so let's establish one by keeping her."

"But for her own sake! She will have to live with her shame!" Mrs. Galland objected. "Let her begin afresh in the city. We shall give her a good recommendation, for she is really an excellent servant. Yes, she will readily find a place among strangers."

"Still, she doesn't want to go, and it would be cruel to send her away."

"Cruel! Why, Marta, do you think I would be cruel? Oh, very well, then we will let her stay!"

"Both are away at church. Mrs. Galland ought to be here any minute, but Miss Galland will be later because of her children's class," said Minna. "Will you wait on the veranda?"

He was saying that he would stroll in the garden when childish footsteps were heard in the hall, and after a curly head had nestled against the mother's skirts its owner, reminded of the importance of manners in the world where the stork had left her, made a curtsy. Lanstron shook a small hand which must have lately been on intimate terms with sugar or jam.

"How do you do, young soldier man?" chirruped Clarissa Eileen. It was evident that she held Lanstron in high favor.

"Let me hear you say your name," said Lanstron.

Clarissa Eileen was triumphant. She had been waiting for days with the revelation when he should make that old request. Now she enunciated it with every vowel and consonant correctly and primly uttered; indeed, she repeated it four or five times in proof of complete mastery.

"A pretty name. I've often wondered how you came to give it to her," said Lanstron to Minna.

"You do like it!" exclaimed Minna with girlish eagerness. "I gave her the most beautiful name I could think of because—she said her hand carelessly on the child's head and a Madonna-like radiance stole into her face."

"Because she might at least have a beautiful name when—the dull blaze of a revolution now burning in her eyes—when there wasn't much prospect of many beautiful things coming into her life; though I know, of course, that the world thinks she ought to be called Meggie."

Proceeding leisurely along the main path of the first terrace, Lanstron followed it past the rear of the house to the old tower. Long ago the moat that surrounded the castle had been filled in.

The green of rows of grape vines lay against the background of a mass of ivy on the ancient stone walls, which had been cut away from the loopholes set with window glass. The door was open, showing a room that had been closed in by a ceiling of boards from the walls to the circular stairway that ran aloft from the dungeons. On the floor of flags were cheap rugs. A number of seed and nursery catalogues were piled on a round table covered with a brown cloth.

"Hello!" Lanstron called softly.

"Hello!" he called louder and yet louder.

Receiving no answer, he retraced his steps and seated himself on the second terrace in a secluded spot in the shadow of the first terrace wall, where he could see anyone coming up the main flight of steps from the road.

When Marta walked she usually came from town by that way. At length the sound of a slow step from another direction broke on his ear. Some one was approaching along the path that ran at his feet. Around the corner of the wall, in his workman's Sunday clothes of black, but wearing his old straw hat, appeared Feller, the gardener. He paused to examine a rose bush and Lanstron regarded him thoughtfully.

As he turned away he looked up, and a glance of definite and unfaltering recognition was exchanged between the two men. They had the garden to themselves.

"Gustave!" Lanstron exclaimed under his breath.

"Lanny!" exclaimed the gardener, turning over a branch of the rose bush. He seemed unwilling to risk talking openly with Lanstron.

"You look the good workman in his Sunday best to a T!" said Lanstron. "Being stone-deaf," returned Feller, with a trace of drollery in his voice, "I hear very well—at times. Tell me—his whisper was quivering with eagerness—'shall we fight? Shall we fight?'"

"We are nearer to it than we have ever been in our time," Lanstron replied.

The hat still shaded Feller's face, his stoop was unchanged, but the branch in his hand shook.

"Honest?" he exclaimed. "Oh, the chance of it! The chance of it!" "Gustave!" Lanstron's voice, still low, came in a gust of sympathy, and the pocket which concealed his hand gave a nervous twitch as if it held something alive and distinct from his own being. "The trial wears on you! Do you want to go?"

"No!" Feller shot back irritably. "No!" he repeated resolutely. "I don't want to go! I mean to be game—I—"

He shifted his gaze from the bush which he still pretended to examine and suddenly broke off with: "Miss Galland is coming!"

Lanstron started toward the steps that Marta was ascending. She moved leisurely, yet with a certain springy energy that suggested that she might have some on the run without being out of breath or seeming to have made an effort.

"Hello, stranger!" she called as she saw him, and quickened her pace.

"Hello, pedagogue!" he responded. As they shook hands they swung their arms back and forth like a pair of romping children for a moment.

"We had a grand session of the school this morning, the largest class ever!" she said. "And the points we scored off you soldiers! You'll find disarrangement already in progress when you return to headquarters. We're irresistible, or at least," she added, with a flash of intensity, "we're going to be some day."

"So you put on your war-paint!" "It must be the pollen from the hydrangea!" She flicked her handkerchief from her belt and passed it to him. "Show that you know how to be useful!"

He performed the task with deliberate care.

"Heaven! You even have some on your ear and some on your hair; but I'll leave it to you; it's rather becoming. There you are!" he concluded. "Oh my hair, too!"

"I oughtn't to have asked you to do it at all!" she exclaimed with a sudden change of manner as they started up to the house. "But a habit of friendship, a habit of liking to believe in one's friends, was uppermost. I forgot. I oughtn't even to have shaken hands with you!"

"Marta! What now, Marta?" he asked.

He had known her in reproach, in anger, in laughing mockery, in militant seriousness, but never before like this. The pain and indignation in her eyes came not from the sheer hurt of a wound but from the hurt of its source. It was as if he had learned by the signal of its loss that he had a deeper hold on her than he had realized.

"Yes, I have a bone to pick with you," she said, recovering a grim sort of fellowship. "A big bone! If you're half a friend you'll give me the very marrow of it."

"I am ready!" he answered more patently than philosophically.

"There's not time now; after luncheon, when mother is taking her nap," she concluded as they came to the last step and saw Mrs. Galland on the veranda.

After luncheon Mrs. Galland kept battling with her nodes until nature was victorious and she fell fast asleep. Marta, grown restless with impatience, suggested to Lanstron that they stroll in the garden, and they took the path past the house toward the castle tower, stopping in an arbor with high hedges on either side around a statue of Mercury.

"Now!" exclaimed Marta narrowly. "It was you, Lanny, who recommended Feller to us as a gardener, competent though deaf! I have proved him to be a man of most sensitive hearing. I didn't let him know that he was discovered. You brought him here—yes, Lanny, you are the one to explain."

"True, he is not deaf!" Lanstron replied.

"He is a spy?" she asked.

"Yes, a spy. You can put things in a bright light, Marta! He found words coming with difficulty in face of the pain and disillusion of her set look."

"Using some man as a pawn; setting him as a spy in the garden where you have been the welcome friend!" she exclaimed. "A spy on what—on my mother, on Minna, on me, on the flowers, as a part of this monstrous game of trickery and lies that you are playing?"

There was no trace of anger in her tone. It was that of one mortally hurt. Anger would have been easier to bear than the measuring, penetrating wonder that found him guilty of such a horrible part. Those eyes would have confused Partow himself with the steady, willing intensity of their gaze. She did not see how his left hand was twitching and how he stifled its movement by pressing it against the bench.

"You will take Feller with you when you go!" she said, rising.

Lanstron dropped his head in a kind of shaking throbb of his whole body and raised a face white with appeal.

"Marta!" He was speaking to her, very sensitive and yet like ivory. "I've no excuse for such an abuse of hospitality except the obsession of a foolishness work that some man must do and I was set to do. My God, Marta! I cease to be natural and human. I am a machine. I keep thinking, what if war comes and some error of mine let the enemy know where to strike the blow of victory; or if there were information I might have gained and failed to gain that would have given us the victory—if, because I had not done my part, thousands of lives of our soldiers were sacrificed needlessly!"

At that she turned on him quickly, her face softening.

"You do think of that—the lives?" "Yes, why shouldn't I?"

"Of those on your side!" she exclaimed, turning away.

"Yes, of those first," he replied. "And, Marta, I did not tell you why Feller was here because he did not want me to."

CHAPTER VI.

A Crisis Within a Crisis. Following the path to the tower leisurely, they had reached the tower. Feller's door was open. Marta looked into the room, finding in the neat arrangement of its furniture a new significance. He was absent, for it was the dinner hour.

"On my recommendation you took him," Lanstron said.

"Yes, on yours, Lanny, on a friend's! You—she put a cold emphasis on the word—you wanted him here for your plans! And why? You haven't answered that yet. What purpose of the war game does he serve in our garden?"

His look pleaded for patience, while he tried to smile, which was rather difficult in face of the sore, tender muscles, limbers up the back and makes it feel fine. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any drugist and have it in the house—against colds, sore and swollen joints, rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

They were in a passage six feet in height and about three feet broad, which seemed to lead on indefinitely into clammy darkness. The dewy walls sparkled in fantastic and ghostly iridescence under the rays from the lantern. The dank air lay moist against their faces.

"This is far enough." He paused and raised the lantern. With its light full in her face, she blinked. "There, at the height of your chin!"

She noted a metal button painted gray, set at the side of one of the stones of the wall, which looked unreal. She struck the stone with her knuckles and it gave out the sound of hollow wood, which was followed, as an echo, by a little laugh from Lanstron. Pressing the button, a panel door flew open revealing a telephone mouthpiece and receiver set in the recess.

"Like a detective play!" were the first words that sprang to her lips. "Well?" As she faced around her eyes glittered in the lantern rays.

"Well, have you any other little tricks to show me? Are you a slight-of-hand artist, too, Lanny? Are you going to take a machine gun out of your hat?"

"That is the whole bag," he answered. "I thought you'd rather see it than have it described to you."

"Having seen it, let us go!" she said, in a manner that implied further reckoning to come.

"If out of a thousand possible sources one source succeeds, then the cost and pains of the other nine hundred and ninety-nine are more than repaid," he was saying urgently, the soldier uppermost in him. "Some of the best service we have had has been absurd in its simplicity and its audacity. In time of war more than one battle has been decided by a thing that was a trifle, in itself. No matter what your preparation, you can never remove the element of chance. An hour gained in information about your enemy's plans may turn the tide in your favor. A Chinese peasant spy, because he happened to be intoxicated, was able to Kuraki to make full dispositions for receiving the Russian attack in force at the Sha-ho. There are many other incidents of like nature in history. So is my duty to neglect no possible method, however absurd."

By this time he was at the head of the steps. Standing to one side, he offered his hand to assist Marta. But she seemed not to see it. Her aspect was that of downright antagonism.

"However absurd! Yes, it is absurd to think that you can make me a party to any of your plans, for—" She broke off abruptly with staring eyes, as if she had seen an apparition.

Lanstron turned and through the door of the toolroom saw Feller entering the sitting-room. He was not the best, deferential gardener. His features were hard-set, a fighting rage burning in his eyes, his elbows taut as if about to spring upon an adversary. When he recognized the intruders he turned limp, his head dropped, hiding his face with his hat brim, and he steadied himself by resting a hand on the table edge.

"Oh, it's you, Lanny—Colonel Lanstron!" he exclaimed thickly. "I saw that some one had come in here and naturally I was alarmed, as nobody but myself ever enters. And Miss Galland! He removed his hat deferentially.

SALISBURY, MARYLAND, SATURDAY OCT. 10 1914

NO. 43

SALISBURIANS MARRIED

Number of Weddings—Mark This Week's Maps.

On Wednesday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock Mr. Charles E. Day was married to Miss Nellie Horn Mitchell at the home of the bride's parents in Baltimore. The bride is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Harry D. Mitchell and the ceremony was performed by the bride's father.

Mr. Day is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Day, of this city, and is a member of the Day Lumber Company of Seaford, Del., where he is the manager of a large planing mill and lumber business.

The couple are now on a trip to the north visiting New York, Lake George and other points. They will make their home in Seaford.

Grier-Wingate Marriage.

Mr. Calvin Grier and Miss Gladys Wingate were quietly married Saturday evening at 9 o'clock at St. Peter's rectory by the Rev. David Howard. Only a few members of the immediate families witnessed the ceremony. A reception followed at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Grier. The bride is a daughter of the late Albert Wingate, of White Haven, and has been employed in the office of the Home Gas Co. The groom is connected with the firm of F. A. Grier and Son, machinists and foundrymen.

Toadvine-Houston Wedding.

Mr. Stephen P. Toadvine, formerly of this city, but now living at Clayton, Delaware, and Miss Lydia Houston, of Millboro, Delaware, will be married at the home of the bride Wednesday next week. Miss Houston is well-known in society circles of Salisbury, being related to the Misses Houston of this city. Mr. Toadvine was formerly agent of the Adams Express Company at Salisbury, but now has charge of a district of the Delaware division.

YORK FIREMEN IN SALISBURY

They Bring a Big Band and Get a Fine Banquet.

On Wednesday Salisbury was host to the Volunteer Firemen's excursion from York, Pa. York and its environs make a city of about 60,000 people and it is one of the few large cities in the country still having volunteer fire departments.

Some of these companies in York, and there are several, are quite ancient, having been organized early in the last century, but they are thoroughly up to date and well equipped and make a splendid fire fighting force.

Seventy members of the York company arrived from Norfolk, Va., where they had been entertained by the volunteer firemen of that city.

They were met at the train by the citizens' committee composed of ex-Mayor B. Frank Kennerly, Charles R. Disharoon, Fred P. Adkins, Graham Gumbly, John D. Williams, Walter B. Miller, Jesse D. Erice, Robert D. Grier, Marion V. Brewington, Marion A. Humphreys, Captain S. R. Douglas, L. Atwood Bennett, William M. Cooper, ex-Mayor Charles E. Harper, Dr. John M. Toulson, William J. Packson, F. Leonard Wailes, the Rev. T. E. Martindale and the members of the local fire department.

The visitors were escorted to the armory building, headed by a brass band, and then to the citizens' committee, after which Senator Jesse D. Erice delivered the address of welcome to the visitors and presented the keys of the city.

During the afternoon automobiles were provided by the citizens and the visitors were taken through the city and over the state highways.

The visitors left Thursday and will stop off at Wilmington, Del., prior to their return home, after spending 10 days visiting the volunteer fire companies on the middle Atlantic seaboard.

York is a splendid example of the volunteer firemen's organization which well supported. The visit of these men has suggested that a similar trip for our Salisbury firemen would be a very handsome and profitable investment for this city.

At The Auditorium

By a special arrangement with the Western Union Telegraph Company direct wires from the ball parks have been secured and will be connected in Green's Auditorium where the World's Series games each day will be displayed from the stage on an especially constructed electric score board, showing the diamond, lineup and positions of the players. Every movement and play is flashed on the board the instant it is made, thus enabling the spectators to follow the game as though you were seated in the grand stand at the ball park.

Join the "fans" at Green's Auditorium when the championship battle begins. Games called at 2.30 p. m. Admission 25 cents.

WESTERNERS TO ADVISE

Movement Back To Farm—Representatives On Shore.

Six men representing a score and more of persons in Illinois, Michigan and Ohio, who have sent them to the South to inspect lands for individual farms to be bought by their advice on their return, started on a tour of the Shore last Wednesday. During last week they inspected farms in several Virginia counties. One of the gentlemen reported a formidable back-to-the-farm movement throughout the towns and cities of the Middle West, where many moderate salaried employees of railroads, street railways, factories, etc., are returning to the rural districts from which they came. One of the party is the owner of large greenhouses. He thinks that the prolonged warm season in this part of the country will prove a better place to grow vegetables under glass than is Michigan. Another is the son of an owner of an 800-acre tract in Illinois. He finds, however, that in Maryland and Virginia there are as many warm months as there are cold months on his father's farm.

These men are after individual farms, but several other parties now on their way to this state are coming to investigate a new scheme in farming, a plan of farming through a corporation, which has been worked out in all detail. Its object is to bring the "white collar" man back to the farm and practically assure his success in the venture, a practical solution of the back-to-the-farm movement. It is for the clerk and mechanic and other employee who has reached his salary limit, is no longer young, has a family and wants to be his own boss and have prospects of earning something to save up.

Under guidance of a director, a group of about 60 men from one territory or city who want a 100-acre farm of their own will be organized. Under the advice of the director a tract of about 6,000 acres will be bought. These 60 owners will elect an agricultural committee of five men, which will in turn elect a farm manager with the advice of a company. Into the hands of this farm manager, who will be an expert and scientific agricultural man, will be put the entire tract and by a system of gradual payments the owners pay for the land and for the management. At the same time each owner is to be started in a correspondence course in agriculture through the state collector. Within five years the owners will have possession of their farms, of the knowledge sufficient to begin running it, of an expert adviser experienced in the qualities of his own land, and can graduate from their salary jobs into independence with comparative ease.

In each colony it is planned to get families from the same city or section of country—friends and neighbors—if possible. In each colony will be established rural centers, with school, church and other social requirements. It will also form a community marketing and purchasing nucleus, and become a clearing house for farming ideas and will establish a cohesive community interest and make farm life very profitable.

TREE WARDEN FOR SALISBURY AND VICINITY

New Law To Protect Forestry—Mr. Cooper Appointed.

Under a new State Law the trees standing within the right-of-way of public highways and along the sidewalks of incorporated towns become public shade trees, under the care and protection of the State through the State Board of Forestry. Heretofore the authority over such trees has not been clearly defined, generally the property owners who owned the abutting property claimed them as his trees, the town or road supervisors, as the case might be, claimed a certain amount of jurisdiction because they were along the public highway or street, while the pole line companies, which have a franchise or permit to use the roads or street, claimed that whenever such trees interfered with their wires they had the right to cut or trim them. This has led to much ill feeling and many controversies and has proved very unsatisfactory. Now the status of these trees is clearly defined, and they are recognized as part of the improvements of the road or street, belonging not to the individual but to the public generally.

This new law makes it a misdemeanor for any one to cut, trim or in any way injure one of these trees without a permit from the State Board of Forestry. The purpose of the law is to prevent the mutilation or reckless cutting of these trees, which add so much to the attractiveness of the street and roadside and are a source of comfort to the people. It takes many years to grow shade trees and they are worthy of the very best care and protection of the State.

For the town of Salisbury and the outlying sections the Governor of the State upon recommendation of the State Forester has commissioned Mr. Mark Cooper to act as the local Tree Warden. Every one interested in the protection of trees should co-operate with Mr. Cooper in this good work to see that the law is strictly enforced and to see that the community receives the full benefits under its provisions.

BUSINESS MEGAPHONE

And Heavy Artillery So Advertising Is Styled By Expert.

Advertising was termed the megaphone and the heavy artillery of business by Edward S. Babcock, advertising manager of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, in an address before the convention of the Minnesota State Automobile Dealers.

Mr. Babcock's address in part follows: "Advertising is the megaphone of business, and is the great composite voice which speaks the policies of the institution to millions and millions of people who see the publicity country wide. Business executives today appreciate the need of building strong and deep. They realize that their organizations to be permanent must be built on a sound basis. A mushroom grows up overnight, but it takes years to grow an oak tree.

"Well advertised and well established in the general public mind, your sailing will be much simpler than with a brand new unknown product, whether it be automobile, carburetor, spark plugs or tires.

"This general advertising is the heavy artillery of business. But in the makeup of the business army there must be more than artillery, there must be the infantry, which means that there must be specific local advertising and sales assistance if the dealer is to make the most progress."

AUTO DIVED INTO CREEK

A Ford touring car, driven by a Salisbury man, ran into the baluster on the bridge which separates the towns of Queen Anne and Hillsboro, last Saturday morning about 10 o'clock, and was precipitated into Tuckahoe creek. Only by the best of fortune did the driver escape death or serious injury.

The driver had started across the bridge, when a team coming in the opposite direction, drove upon the beam, the automobilist steered too close to the edge of the bridge, and without an instant's warning the front of the car struck the railing and then dashed itself into the water. The machine struck several piling and was thus held partly above the water. The driver was rescued, and later the machine was towed ashore. With the exception of a few minor bruises the man was unhurt.—Centerville Observer.

FOR SALE—One Indian motor cycle, twin cylinder, 7 horse power, 1914 machine, equipped including private light tank, lamp, luggage carrier and horn. As good as new, mileage less than 300 miles, a real bargain if interested. Phone No. 14 Delmar, Del.

CIRCUIT COURT CLOSES

For A While—Decisions Rendered This Week.

On Wednesday the Circuit Court took a recess on account of the necessity of opening court in Snow Hill on next Monday. Since last week the court has passed sentence upon several minor criminals. The most important of these criminal cases was the Darby case from Hebron. Darby was found guilty of setting fire to an old negro whom he had made drunk, and was sentenced to three years in the Maryland penitentiary.

Last week William Pen Catlin was convicted of bastardy and this week was sentenced to give bond for $300 and to pay $8 per month for the support of the child, or failing to do so, to serve a term of two years in the House of Correction.

When the courts meets on October 30th at 9 o'clock it will take up the case of the B. & A. Railroad Company against John H. Tomlinson. This is a proceeding for the condemnation of a piece of ground adjoining the railroad and the Union station properties. This is the property which the City Council some time ago refused to allow Mr. Tomlinson to improve by the erection of a building in which to conduct a restaurant.

The Worcester county term of court is expected to be a short one and when it is finished the court dockets of the district will be about as nearly clear as they have been for many years.

Two important cases will go over until the next term in this county. They are the Malone case from Dorchester and the case of the City of Salisbury against a number of corporations on account of taxes due upon shares of stock in these corporations held by residents of Salisbury.

It is understood now that the city will endeavor to collect not only the 1913 taxes, but also back taxes, not to exceed four years. It is the purpose of the city to hold the corporations themselves as liable for the payment of taxes on these shares.

The Allen-Duncan case came to an end of Wednesday, Oct. 7, when the jury gave a verdict for the defendant. The case was instituted by Bessie Quinn Allen for herself and children, to recover damages from William B. Duncan for the killing of her husband about two years ago. The case was removed here from Worcester county.

JOHN CHATHAM KILLS HIMSELF

Despondent Man Shoots Himself in Head Last Saturday.

Tired of life on account of mental troubles, John Chatham, one of the well-known young men of South Salisbury, fireman at the Jackson Brothers Company big mills, shot himself with a 44-caliber army revolver Saturday morning last, killing himself instantly. The deed was committed in the fire room of the big mill, Mr. Newton Jackson, son of Senator Wm. P. Jackson, having left Chatham a few seconds before he pulled the gun from his pocket and destroyed himself.

Mr. Chatham had been in bad mental condition for some time and a few months ago his family sent him to a sanatorium for treatment. He leaves a wife and two children as well as several brothers living in this city.

BOWLING PARTY

Miss Hilda Bethke entertained some of her friends last Thursday evening September 24th, by giving a bowling party.

The young girls present were the Misses Ella Ellis, Emma Johnson, Pansy Steffens, Olive Wyatt, Nema Parsons, Ella Erdman, Greta Parsons, Iva Mumford and Maude Phillips. The young men were Messrs. Alfred Wharton, Arthur Johnson, Frank Mitchell, Lawrence McDonald, A. G. Wuntz, George Brittingham, "Sunshine Gordy," Mr. Stokes and Mr. Hastings.

After being entertained by music the party was ushered to the bowling alleys, where some very interesting games took place. After bowling for some time the party was bountifully served with refreshments, after which a short act was given entitled "The War Dance." At a late hour the young people departed, all reporting a delightful time.

The bridge over the Pocomoke river on the Salisbury-Ocean City state road has been completed and the company has begun work on the Herding Creek bridge, near Ocean City.

Miss E. June Briemier, of the Byron King School of Elocution, Philadelphia, presented the play "The Toy Shop" under local talent at Federalburg Thursday and Friday evenings of this week.

THERE ARE MARRIAGES IN THE ANIMAL WORLD

Wedding Contracts Known To Man Exist With Beast Or Bird.

Surprising though the statement may seem, it is a fact, born out by the careful study of scientists, that practically every form of marriage contract known to men from free love to the soulmate theory, can be found in the animal world. Male animals even have their bachelor clubs, and that wonderful naturalist, Ernest Thompson Seton, has related how little societies of animals are established among deer and antelope. These societies usually consist of three or four young bucks, which range and feed together in perfect friendship. They are quiet happy until some lady deer intrudes. But once a doe joins the herd, goodbye to peace. The brothers fight among themselves while she does look on and enjoys the sport until one of them drives off the others and goes away with her.

There are four distinct forms of marriage among monogamous animals. The first closely resembles the trial marriage, and is the type represented by the moose. The male selects as she pleases him, and when she no longer charms he promptly divorces her and finds another mate.

The second type of animal marriage is that which lasts during the breeding season only. Some animals seek their mates again next season, but among rats, rabbits and squirrels the separation is permanent, although among foxes, coyotes and smaller animals the father, who presumably hates the worries of domestic life, usually stays away until the children have been reared and then returns.

The third type of animal marriage is that common among wild geese, pigeons and possibly owls. The union lasts through life, and if one of the pair dies the other never seeks a second mate, but mourns disconsolately until death.

The fourth type of marriage is the nearest approach to the deal married life, and, curiously enough, is found most commonly among wolves. Wolves marry for life, and only the death of one leaves the other free to marry again. Furthermore, there is even a genuine display of chivalry and affection between such animals. It is recorded that two wolves in the London zoo were very jealous of each other and frequently quarreled. One day during an unusually furious dispute the male approached the female angrily as if to bite her, as if held back by something within him. The female then approached timidly, gently licked his face and domestic happiness was once more restored.

Aged Citizen Dead

Mr. Lambert Walson, an aged citizen of this community, died Friday morning at his home from Bright's disease. The deceased came to Salisbury from Laurel nearly 15 years ago and bought a tract of land back of the cemetery.

Mr. Walson was born in 1839 in Delaware, where he was one of the largest and most prominent farmers for years. He was the originator of the Walson blackberry and was at one time the largest grower of this berry in Sussex county. He also raised many peaches.

Besides his wife Mr. Walson left three children, Randolph and Miss Lulu Walson of this city, and Carlisle Walson, of New York. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from his late home.

PINE BLUFF SANITORIUM

Opening Ceremonies State Commission Thursday Next, 2 to 5 p. m.

The new Pine Bluff sanatorium will be formally opened to the physicians of the four lower counties, Wicomico, Somerset, Worcester and Dorchester, on Thursday afternoon, October 15th, with ceremonies lasting from 2 to 5 o'clock.

The sanatorium has been opened and in use for two years, but this is the formal affair, like the crowning of a monarch a long time after he becomes king. The doctors will have a look over the institution, being introduced, as it were, a long time after they have become acquainted with the place.

Incidentally—only incidentally—a lunch will be served—a la county commissioners at the Poor House.

The commission is composed of the following gentlemen: Rev. T. E. Martindale, president; Hon. Jas. E. Ellegood, vice president; Wm. M. Cooper, secretary and treasurer; Dr. Wm. H. Welsh, Baltimore; Hon. Jesse D. Price, Hon. John Walter Smith, Judge H. L. D. Stanford, Dr. J. McFadden Dick, Joseph L. Bailey, Dr. George W. Todd, superintendent; Miss Annie McKay, head nurse.

Tried before the circuit court on a charge of extortion, Charles R. Porter, a justice of the peace of Princess Anne, was found guilty by Judge Stanford and sentence suspended for a period of 18 months.

LATE NEWS FROM THE WAR ZONE

The great battle in France, now near the end of its fourth week, continues without sign of a decisive result. On the western wing, where the heaviest recent fighting has occurred, the fronts have been pushed still farther northward, cavalry engagements extending almost to the sea-coast.

Violent engagements, notably in the region of Roye, are reported in the latest announcement from the French War Office, which says that "on the whole the situation is stationary." An earlier bulletin declared that the Germans had gained ground at no point, and at some points had been forced back.

That the Germans in France are "gaining slowly but surely," and that a report of an advance of Russians across the Niemen river, in the district of Suwalki, "is a lie," is declared in a wireless from Berlin to the German Embassy at Washington. To the bombardment of Antwerp with their big siege guns, the Germans have added attacks by Zeppelins, from which bombs have been dropped in many sections of the city, doing great damage. Flight of the inhabitants continues.

The great armies operating against each other in Russian Poland are apparently lining up for battle along the Vistula river. Berlin reports that a large part of the German army under General von Hindenburg has effected a junction with the Austrians on this river at Ivangoed, and that the Russians are concentrating on the right bank of the river.

The declaration from Vienna that the Russians have been driven out of Hungary is denied by the Russian Ambassador at Rome, who asserts that Russians now occupy seven-eighths of Galicia and one-fourth of Hungary and hold all the passes in the Carpathian mountains.

Troops from Canada were landed in England preparatory to being sent to the front.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

At City Hall Monday Night of Public Interest.

At the meeting of the City Council Monday evening the following building permits were issued. W. E. Dorman, addition to building on Bush street; Wm. T. Wilkins, addition to building on Newton street; U. G. Langston, dwelling on Pollitt alley; Hilary W. Davis, dwelling on Hazel alley.

Treasurer Parsons was instructed to pay Lee Johnson the sum of $2,100 on sewerage contract work out of the street improvement fund.

The clerk was instructed to write Hickman & Riggins, of Crisfield, that the Council would be ready to receive shells on or about October 20.

The city solicitor was instructed to write the Maguire Construction Company in reference to their agreement with the Mayor and Council for street paving, etc.

The ordinance providing for grading, curbing, guttering, draining and paving East Main street; also for grading, curbing, guttering, draining and paving West Railroad avenue; also for grading, curbing and guttering Wilson street were passed by the Council and approved by the Mayor.

A new ordinance regulating the licensing of circus shows and other entertainments was received and read the first time and ordered posted, to be acted upon at the next regular meeting of the Council.

On motion the following resolution was passed by the Council:

"Resolved, That W. F. L. Bounds, Mayor of Salisbury, be and is hereby authorized by the City Council of Salisbury and empowered to execute on behalf of the Mayor and Council the agreement with the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad Company relative to the paving by the City of Salisbury of a strip of land six feet and three inches wide in conjunction with West Railroad avenue, said strip of land belonging to the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad Company, and being on the east side of West Railroad avenue aforesaid, between the new Union station and Isabella street."

AID FOR FARMERS

Opportunity to Get Germans For County Work Says Writer.

Editor The Advertiser: Sometime ago I published a letter in your paper calling the attention of the people in the county to the fact that I could readily obtain for them German labor to work on their farms. I have received innumerable inquiries and requests for such labor in reply to this letter.

Most of these inquiries have come from people who only wanted German families, that is, a man and wife with one or two children, all of whom would be able to work. It is next to impossible to get families to leave the city. For some reason when a German has a wife in this country, they try to stay in the city and work there, while there is any hope of obtaining work. Perhaps this is because of the desire on the part of the woman to have the companionship of people of her own race.

It will be very easy, however, for me to secure for farmers individual Germans or three or four men of this nationality to work as farmhands at the present time. Everyone to whom I have sent this labor thus far has advised me that the same is most satisfactory in every way.

It is easy to obtain individual Germans, but it is extremely difficult to get them to leave for work in the country with their families.

Yours truly,

L. WETHERED BARROLL.

In Rally at Mardella

As the weeks of time advance they must carry into the past the events of history. Sunday last carried with it events which should be recorded as history in the lives of many.

The members and friends of Mardella M. E. church agree that Sunday was truly a day of history in the life of the church. In accord with the spirit of the day—the Day of Prayer for Peace—a special program was arranged consisting of an all-day service as follows:

At 9.30 a. m. the Sabbath school observed Missionary Day by appropriate music and an address by the pastor. At 10.30 a. m. the choir rendered a delightful musical program which was followed by a missionary sermon on Gal. 6:2 by the pastor.

The Rev. George S. Allen, of Vienna was the speaker of the afternoon and delighted an unusually large congregation with a masterpiece of a sermon on Mark 16:15.

The evening program consisting of several musical selections and recitations was rendered by the Sunday school and was ably supplemented by solos by Messrs. Gilliss and Taylor. To say that each one took their part well or did credit to self and teacher is putting it mildly.

The program throughout was rendered splendidly and many are free to class it as the best in the history of the church.

The collection, too, is considered the largest missionary collection ever taken in the church. Thus Mardella is making history.

CHAS. W. SPRY, Pastor.

Chauffeur alighted and started to push it down a hill. Suddenly the engine started and as no one was in the car it ran away and crashed into the store window.

Soon after Col. Sisk left for Philadelphia the chauffeur was arrested for reckless driving and the automobile was seized on a claim for damages to the Ellingsworth store.

WM. F. JOHNSON, Solicitor ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

JOSEPH TIBBITT, versus MARY TIBBITT.
In the Circuit Court for Wicomico County. In Equity 2571.

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce a mensa et thoro by the plaintiff, Joseph Tibbitt, from the defendant, Mary Tibbitt. The bill alleges that the plaintiff was married to the defendant about seven years ago in the State of Delaware, and have been residing together in the State of Maryland for more than two years past, until recently when the defendant left the plaintiff and is reported to be now in the State of Delaware; that two children were born in said marriage, namely, Oliver Tibbitt who is now six years of age, and Sophia Tibbitt, who is now four years of age; that while the conduct of the plaintiff towards the defendant has been above reproach, the defendant, Mary Tibbitt, has been cruel, harsh and neglectful of the plaintiff and her conduct towards him has of late become intolerable. Guardianship and custody of the two infant children are also prayed for by the plaintiff and such other relief as his case may require.

It is thereupon this 23rd day of September, 1914, by the Circuit Court for Wicomico County, in Equity, ordered that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Wicomico County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 26th day of October, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object of and substance of this bill, warning her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 1st day of November next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be granted as prayed. LAUNDRY BAG FROM TOWELS Useful Hint for Any Girl Who Desires to Make Something of Real Use for Her Room.

To make this useful and attractive laundry bag two good-sized fringed towels are needed, a 12-inch oval embroidery hoop and either a paper-mache letter or an embroidery pattern of your initial.

Sew the towels together across the end and up the sides to within twelve inches of the top. Then the upper ends out over the hoop. Run a thread along here to form a casing. Embroider the letter as shown in the cut, or the word "Laundry" may be embroidered instead. A piece of white cable cord sewn on each end forms the handle to hang it by. This is very convenient, as the top of it is always open.

SLEEVELESS COAT IS LIKED

Style Has Much to Recommend It, Especially for Wear in the Warm Months.

The sleeveless coat is an adaptation of the military coat. The graceful lines of this cloak design, with the long slant over the shoulder, are responsible for a very charming type of coat and skirt that has just made its appearance among the new models, wherein somewhat the idea of the cape is suggested without either its length or weight, neither of which is needed when merely a walking costume is required.

One of these coats and skirts shows how exceedingly graceful the style can be—the coat being entirely sleeveless, a fact that for summer wear is obviously a great advantage.

The completed model was carried out in navy blue suiting of a fine quality, the coat being made with a long shaped basque, and a round cape effect over the shoulders. The skirt was very original, having a deep slanting hip yoke of the same material, into which the drapery was set and firmly sewn along with a double row of machine stitching.

The coat fastened across the front with a number of small painted china buttons, while beneath it was worn a blouse of navy chiffon, with long, transparent sleeves, completed with a winged collar of white lawn wired upward at the sides.

CHOOSE THE RIGHT FLOWERS

Adornments Must Be Fitting, Depending Much Upon Age and Personal Appearance.

The kind of flowers that are fitting for a woman to wear depends upon her age and personal appearance. Blossoms that are becoming to a young girl look out of place on the elderly woman, and the woman who is tall can wear certain varieties which the one who is short cannot.

Bankia roses are for the quite young girl. Violets are charming for either youth or age. Daisies belong only to youth.

Pansies seem fitted for riper age, though the pansy-eyed girl looks well with them. Chrysanthemums look well on youth or maturity, but do not seem to belong to the old.

Roses belong to all ages, but need to be chosen with care as to their color and size. Lilies can only be worn by a tall figure. Neither are poppies for the petite, nor things that grow in branch form.

Snowdrops that would look foolish on a middle-aged woman look sweet on a young girl. Lilies of the valley are for youth or middle age.

Mignonette does not belong to youth, nor do sweet peas and daffodils belong to age, but anyone can wear the fragrant carnation.

She Won't Believe It. We don't suppose that it will ever be possible to convince a woman that a neat little round hole in the sitting room rug, where a small amount of ignited tobacco happened to fall, merely serves to make the place look homelike.—Ohio State Journal.

Wonder Why.

A woman would hardly marry a bow-legged man to reform him, and there are several other varieties of misshapen masculinity that it is just as futile to attempt to mend by means of matrimony.—Detroit Journal.

A BRIEF RESPIRE

Primaries and elections, elections and primaries, city, county and state, one after the other in a never-ending succession. This is the one lot of the American citizen today. He never gets through, politics—politics all the time. He is hauled this way and that, argued with, begged and threatened, until it is no wonder that he gets indifferent or disgusted with public matters.

And to further rub it in, he has to pay the bills for all these worries—bills often padded in order to pad the pockets of someone close to the powers that "be."

It may be necessary in order to protect our people in their rights of self government, to have an election fairly frequent so that unfaithful or incompetent servants may be gotten rid of; but there is reasonable limit to everything, and our frequent primaries and elections have gone far beyond the reasonable and sensible thing.

Here in Salisbury the voter has been more or less in the throes of a heated campaign since last summer a year, when the primaries were at their warmest; for after last year's primaries came the election, then came the city primaries, then election. Now we are just through with the congressional primaries, and in order to keep in training have had to go to the polls to register. Now we are about to commence the election campaign for a congressman; and in a few weeks' time we must again work ourselves up to the white heat of enthusiasm in order to get a proper United States Senator and a Congressman to represent the First Congressional district in a creditable way.

Our people will no doubt do as they have ever done, rally like patriots to the call, shoulder again the never ending burden and work for their party, their state and nation. When will the break come? Is it not too much to expect that men with a living to make should give all their time to what is usually termed "politics"? Well, the future must take care of itself, for the next few days let the voters forget everything connected with voting and rest.

Orators will soon be with us trying to show how the country must cease to exist unless the voters recognize the dangers ahead and support the right men for Senator and Congressman. And strange to say, both sides seem to be absolutely sincere in the position taken.

This week, at least, we are not going to argue the advantages of supporting this or that party, this or that man, but to urge all of our readers to stop thinking or talking about things political for a few days so they can get a much needed rest.

Let each of us give some attention to our private affairs, and then spend our spare time around our humble "hearthside" where not a whisper of political matters should be allowed to penetrate. On Sunday, when we may be wanted to go to church and talk about a better life instead.

Maybe a close attention to our private affairs, together with a proper amount of time spent within the family circle, and a regular attendance at places of worship, will better prepare us for citizenship than all the oratory, discussion, begging or wheedling of the insincere politician.

May be, we will all see more clearly, the necessity of entrusting the power of government in the hands of those who live right and who think clean and clear. "Laws" to correct every ill of life by legal procedure may not seem so necessary then as now, if we take the proper viewpoint of public life and public men; for the fault is, after all, not so much the fault of the laws or machine as it is the fault of those whom we entrust to carry out the laws or guide the machine. A man who employs a dishonest clerk and then blames the system of bookkeeping for his losses will never find one perfect enough to stop the leaks until he gets clear of his dishonest help. Nor will the people ever find any system of government to accomplish the results mostly to be desired as long as they trust their affairs to dishonest or incompetent officers.

RYE VALUABLE FOR EARLY SPRING FEEDING.

Will Help Out Shortage In Long Feed If Sown Now.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ.

Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Rye when properly used is one of the most valuable crops on the farm. It will produce fair yields on land too poor to grow wheat, corn, clover or barley, and in view of the present shortage of roughage on many Maryland farms, it promises to be especially helpful to stock owners at this time. Where a sowing crop is not desired, it will provide excellent spring pasture. This method of handling it requires less work than sowing, and while only about one-half as much food is obtained as from sowing, it can be used over a much longer period of growth.

In fact, instead of furnishing food for only about two weeks as in case of sowing crops, it will furnish good pasture from four to six weeks. Furthermore, it begins to do this two or three weeks earlier than the first cutting can be made when the rye is used as green forage. But this it not all; if sown in early September, it will afford considerable late fall and early winter grazing after the grasses have disappeared. In the spring it is usually ready for light grazing before pasture grasses have made sufficient growth. The cultural and fertilizer requirements of rye are the same as those of wheat.

As to Fields.

TAGS FOR MEMBERS

By JOSEPH BARNHARDT.

The members of the Commuters' Crochet club were seated as usual in their facing seats on the 7:55. They were very busy and very quiet this morning for Mabel had found a new crochet pattern in a magazine, and they were each working it out. Any one who has had personal experience with a pattern of this sort knows that it takes a great deal of perseverance and concentration to follow it closely, and to achieve the expected result.

"One, two, one, two, single crochet," counted Sadie in a monotone.

"One, two, one, two, single crochet," murmured Mabel to the rhythm of the car wheels.

Mary stopped for a minute and glanced over at Anne. "Why," she exclaimed, "your lace doesn't look a bit like mine."

"And neither of yours is like mine," said Mabel, looking at Mary's and Anne's.

"Why, isn't it queer?" said Sadie. "Here we are all following the same directions and getting such different results."

Mabel laid down her work and looked around at the group with the air of one who has something tremendously important to impart to a listening audience.

"I can't help thinking," she said, "how symbolical this is of all life."

"What's symbolical of all life?" said the round-faced girl, looking up with a blank expression. It was always hard for her to follow Maude's flights of oratory, but she tried her best.

"This crocheting," said Maude. "We are all following the same pattern and yet are all making something different. In the same way, a stranger might look at us sitting here in the train and say: 'How much alike those girls are. They're all about the same age; they're all of the same nationality; all work in New York, and have the same interests, judging from the way they keep up conversation while they crochet.' And yet, each one of us here is very much of an individual."

"I tell you what I think would be a good idea," suggested Mabel, "for people to go around tagged with a description of themselves as they really are. It would save a lot of time and trouble in getting to know them."

"We might make tags for each other," said Anne, and the others seconded the idea.

Pencils and paper were passed and each one but the person to be tagged added a line to each description, and by the time they had reached Jersey City six were done and read as follows:

Maude—Wavy auburn hair and hazel eyes; inclined to be dreamy; fond of poetry; imaginative; artistic temperament; absent-minded.

The Round-Faced Girl—Light hair, almost red; round, blue eyes; round, red cheeks; fat; good-natured, and willing.

Sadie—Medium-colored hair, medium-colored eyes; always up-to-date; fond of statistics; eminently practical.

Mabel—Curly brown hair; brown eyes; much interested in current events, and determined to be well-informed.

Anne—Tall and thin; light hair and blue eyes; wears eye-glasses; a student of psychology and an interested observer of life.

Mary—Small, quiet; a good listener. And as the six walked to the ferry-boat, they compared tags good-naturedly.

The round-faced girl was the only one who was displeased with her description.

"I'm not fat," were her last words, as they parted. "I only weigh 156."

English Coal Fields.

The coal fields of Northumberland and Durham counties claim to be the oldest in production of any coal fields in England. It is a historical fact that these fields have been worked for at least 700 years. Every kind of coal, with the exception of anthracite, is found in these two counties. Northumberland coal is best known for its steam-producing qualities, but it is also used in the homes and in manufacturing plants. Durham coal is used for the same purpose, but it is better known for its gas and coke producing qualities. It is estimated that one-tenth of the population of Durham county is connected, in some capacity, with that industry, and that the county's output of coal in 1913 was valued at the pit's mouth at $100,000,000.

Lover of Strife.

"Did I understand you to say that Topley is a great believer in reform movements?"

"Only as a means of creating discord. Topley enjoys nothing more than seeing lifelong friends turn against each other and families split asunder."

Magic for Rust Spots.

To remove rust spots on bathtubs and basins and discolorations in toilet basins and sinks apply muriatic acid with a mop. As soon as the discoloration is removed the acid should be thoroughly rinsed off with clear water. The acid works like magic; it is almost instantaneous in its effect and the labor of scrubbing is saved.

Rather a Nest Rebuke.

"We will now take up our annual collection for the benefit of the heathens," announced the Rev. Dr. Fourthly at the close of his sermon, "and I hope those young men making so much noise all through this service will be especially liberal in their contribution. They are in duty bound to help their brother heathens."

means what it says. We have a national reputation for fair and square dealing. We want no dissatisfied customers—can't afford them.

The name LESTER PIANO is famous wherever pianos are known. For a quarter century it has been pre-eminent for beauty of tone, splendid durability and thorough musical excellence.

We Save You the Dealer's Profit

If you are looking for a piano, seize this opportunity for saving $75 to $125 and secure a piano whose tone, quality, beauty and all-around musical excellence will grace your home for years. We want to keep our great 20-acre factory running full time through the dull season. That's why we are on these sales and offer these extraordinary bargains.

OUR EASY PAYMENT PLAN.

has enabled hundreds of buyers of moderate means to gratify their desire for a LESTER PIANO. It is the fairest, squarest easy-payment plan known in the piano business. A small payment and easy monthly installments make it possible for every one to take advantage of this great factory sale. BE SURE AND COME EARLY.

Of course, if you're anxious to have the most modern piano made, you'll want a

which is the simplest player piano as well as the most durable, and the one which enables you to reproduce exactly all the fine effects of the best hand playing. A child can play all the world's music on the LESTER PLAYER PIANO.

We'll sell you a Lester on easy terms—much easier than you can obtain elsewhere, and, of course, the Lester prices are moderate—manufacturer's prices—because we sell direct to you.

LIABILITY INSURANCE RATE TO BE RATIFIED

Industrial Commission To Fix The Legal Fees Of The Companies.

At the office of W. Mason Sheban, State Insurance Commissioner, there was held a conference of liability insurance men with the Commissioner and the members of the State Industrial Accident Commission, this week with the purpose of having the Commissioner approve the rate that has been adopted by the companies writing this kind of insurance.

The rates proposed have been adopted by the Workmen's Compensation Premium Bureau, representing the various companies throughout the country. They have adopted a rate for Maryland in order to be ready to write insurance in this State under the new law, but they cannot go ahead without the approval of the Insurance Commissioner, who is given the authority to fix the minimum premium rate in order to protect the insured.

The law creating the Commission also gives authority for employers of labor to organize mutual companies to carry accident insurance under the supervision of the Accident Board, and as a first result of this section of the law the Maryland Mutual Liability Insurance Company has been organized in this city. Such companies have already been organized in Massachusetts, Wisconsin and New York, and it is practically certain that there will be more than one in Maryland.

Those who will incorporate the new Mutual Company are Summerfield Baldwin, Jr., Charles E. Falconer, William A. Riordan, David E. Williams and Lloyd L. Jackson, Jr. The directors of the company will be Messrs. Falconer, Baldwin, Riordan and Jackson and John A. Whitridge, Col. O. Wilbur Miller, Leonard Greif, T. Garland Tinsley and Randolph Burton, Jr.

It is the view of those interested in the formation of the Mutual Company that the stock insurance companies will agree to maintain rates for the various classifications or risks, which will include commissions to their agents and profits to themselves. As the insurance cost will be high, these two items are to be saved.

The expense of administration of mutual companies, it is said, varies from 17 per cent. to 20 per cent. of the premium income. The New York Insurance Department permits 28 1-3 per cent. of expenditure for such purpose; requires 10 per cent. reserve for catastrophe hazard, and the balance of 66 2-3 per cent. for losses.

Some idea of the approximate rates to be charged may be gleaned from the rates now prevailing in the State of New York, where the workmen's compensation act went into effect on July 1 last. Prior to that date, the rates for barrel manufacturing, chair manufacturing and sawmills were 65 cents, 40 cents and $1.80, respectively. The present rates are $1.64, $1.80 and $5.99, respectively.

Police Duty Left to Burghers. In the eighteenth century the whole safety and order of Glasgow, Scotland, were entrusted to the unpaid and reluctant burghers. Every citizen who was between the years of eighteen and sixty, and paid a yearly rent amounting to $16, had to take his turn at guarding the city. "On touch of drum," says a writer, "the gentleman was at his post at ten at night, and strolled with weary tread and yawning gait along the Trongate and High street, and up the pitch dark lanes, of winter nights till four in the morning. After that hour the city was without a police."

WAR.

O'er glories gone, the invaders march,
Weeps triumph o'er each leveled city.

Freedom, such as God hath given Unto all beneath his heaven,

With their breath and from their birth,
Though Gullit would sweep it from the earth.

With a fierce and lavish hand,
Scattering nations' wealth like sand,

Pouring nations' blood like water
In imperial seas of slaughter!

But the heart and the mind,
And the voice of mankind
Shall arise in communion—
And who shall resist that proud union?

The time is past when swords subdued,
Man may die, the soul's renewed;

Even in this low world of care
Freedom ne'er shall want an heir.

Millions breathe, but to inherit
Her forever bounding spirit—
When once more her hosts assemble Tyrants shall believe and tremble.

—Lord Byron.

REAL INDUSTRY.

De congressman, he works all day
A-talkin' 'fob de right;

An' after dat I hear 'em say,
He tells some more at night.

Dar ain' no eight hour law fob him,
Dar ain' no delegate

Explainin' dat de pay is slim
Fob services so great.

His hands is allus full, it's said,
He's gotter do his part.

He mus' be usin' of his head
While speakin' fob his heart.
Admire him I often stan',
He makes me hold my breath,
I's heartin' fob dat congressman
To think 'bout dat death!

—Washington Star.

THE MARSEILLAISE.

Ye sons of freedom, wake to glory!
Hark, hark! What myriads bid you rise!

Your children, wives and grand-sires holler,
Behold their tears and hear their cries.

Shall hateful tyrants, mischief breeding,
With hireling hosts, a ruffian band,

Affright and desolate the land,
While peace and liberty lie bleeding?

To arms! To arms, ye brave!
The avenging sword unsheathe.

March on, march on! All hearts resolved
On victory or death.

O Liberty, can man resign thee
Once having felt thy generous flame?

Can dungeons, bolts or bars confine thee
Or whips thy noble spirit tame?

Too long the world has wept, bewailing
That falsehood's dagger tyrants wield.

But freedom is our sword and shield,
And all their arts are unavailing.

To arms! To arms, ye brave!
The avenging sword unsheathe.

March on, march on! All hearts resolved
On victory or death.

RIMED QUOTATIONS.

Soar not too high to fall, but stoop to rise: —Massinger.

We masters grow of all that we despise. —Crowley.

Oh, then, renounce that impious self esteem. —Beattie.

Riches have wings and grandeur is a dream. —Cowper.

No Aches or Pains

Peruna Did It For Me.

"I find Peruna an excellent spring and summer medicine and am glad to call the attention of my friends to it. I know by experience that Peruna is a good medicine, and always recommend it whenever I have an opportunity. I can truthfully say that I have no traces of my old complaint, and have neither ache nor pain, and enjoy life. Words cannot express my appreciation for the good Peruna has done me."

PERUNA THE SPRING AND SUMMER MEDICINE.

"I used to get cramps in my stomach, I had sick headaches. My stomach nearly killed me. My family physician only gave me temporary relief. I got out of patience and had given up all hopes of recovery. I then wrote to Dr. Hartman and he advised me to take Peruna. I got a bottle of Peruna and commenced using it. Soon got better and am now entirely cured and feel like a new woman. Peruna is my comfort. I will never be without it." Mrs. Thomas M. Morgan, R. F. D. 2, Wadsworth, Ohio.

Important to all Women
Readers of This Paper.

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer a great deal with pain in the back, bearing-down feelings, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

A good kidney medicine, possessing real healing and curative value, should be a blessing to thousands of nervous, over-worked women.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy will do for them. Every reader of this paper, who has not already tried it, by enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Birmingham, N. Y., may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. When writing mention the Salisbury Weekly Advertiser. You can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at all drug stores—Adv.

KING OF MONTENEGRO

MEYER WALDECK

His Excellency Meyer Waldeck is the German governor of Kiauchau, Germany's city in China which Japan is attacking.

Remarkable Promenade.

At a New York hotel a man who had suddenly become wealthy from an oil well venture had left his family, which had accompanied him to the city, in their rooms so long that they had become uneasy about him. At last he returned to the rooms, and to the anxious inquiry of his wife, "Where in the world have you been so long?" he responded, calmly: "I've just been in the Caspian, walking pro and con."

The Mule.

A wise man, in his own estimation, announces that a mule kicks because it doesn't know any better. This will greatly surprise many students of contemporary mule life. If ever there was an animal with low cunning expressed in its eye and its twitching nostril, that animal is the mule. Its ability to place a kick where it will give the greatest offense to its victim is something marvelous.

The Actor's Mistake.

Toole, the English actor, used to get off a good thing occasionally. At dinner at a country hotel he was sitting next to a gentleman who had helped himself to an extravagantly large piece of bread. Toole took it up and began to cut a slice from it. "Sir," said the indignant gentleman, "that is my bread." "I beg a thousand pardons, sir," replied the actor, "I mistook it for the loaf."

Laconic Advice.

When Atticus once discovered a treasure of gold while digging under a house he sent news of his discovery to the emperor, Nerva, from whom he received the laconic reply: "Use it." And when in his diffidence he protested that it was too large a sum for his own personal use, the emperor responded: "Then abuse it."

To the Manor Born.

A lady accented a little girl who was entering one of the fashionable New York flats where she knew the rules were exceedingly strict, and after some little conversation, said: "How is it you live in these flats? I thought they would not take children. How did you get in?" "Why," replied the child, "I was born in."

One as Hard as the Other.

"The training of children is a confessedly difficult task," says an editorial writer. No more difficult than the training of parents. Many children find the task of conquering the prejudices and old-fashioned ideas of father and mother almost hopeless.—Toledo Blade.

Catching Up.

Our efficient way of catching up with our correspondence is to pick out an evening when nothing special is happening and throw away all the important letters that ought to have been answered some time within the last ten or twelve months.—Ohio State Journal.

They Don't Know.

Men talk about what they would do if they had $1,000,000, but nine out of ten live about it. If they had $1,000,000 the first thing they would do would be to lay plans and concoct schemes for getting two.—Toledo Blade.

GERMAN LOOKOUT TOWER

From this tower on top of one of the mountains in the Vosges range, near Howald, Germany, the Kaiser's lookouts can observe the movements of the French at a great distance. The tower, which was erected after the war of 1870, is about twenty-five miles from Strassburg, Alsace-Lorraine.

Salt in the Ocean.

The salt contained in the oceans is estimated at more than 4,800,000 cubic miles, or enough to cover the United States with a layer 1.6 miles deep.

Daily Thought.

"What do we live for if not to make the world less difficult for others?"—George Eliot.

You Know It.

The man who really practices what he preaches does mighty little preaching.

A High Opinion

"That's the highest quality paint made," said a customer of ours, "and it has proven to be the cheapest and the best." Our paint meets all competition successfully with quality—the high quality that makes it dollars cheaper than the other kind. Paint that lasts last lasts best— isn't that so?

HELPFUL WORDS

From a Salisbury Citizen.

Is your back lame and painful? Does it ache especially after exertion?

Is there a soreness in the kidney region? These symptoms suggest weak kidneys.

If so there is danger in delay. Weak kidneys get fast weaker. Give your trouble prompt attention. Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

Your neighbors use and recommend them. Read this Salisbury testimonial.

Mrs. Samuel E. Brittingham, 308 Eighth St., Salisbury, Md., writes: "What I said in the public statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills before still holds good and I am pleased to make the fact known that I have had no further trouble from my kidneys. I was annoyed off and on for over a year by a sharp pain over my back and it always became worse when I caught cold or did much stooping. One box of Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me."

STATE POLITICS LIFELESS

First Congressional District--Probably Stiff Fight

The registration is now all a thing of the past, and as was to be expected both sides lay big claims of gain on the outcome. Looked at, however, from a fair and impartial point of view, it would appear that the democrats have all the advantage. The vote that affiliated with the Party is so much larger than the affiliated with the republicans, it seems a reasonable conclusion to believe that the democratic candidates will have a walk over this fall.

In the State at large there seems to be but little excitement and one would think that the election was distant by months instead of only a few weeks. It is this lack of general interest that is the democrats most concern, for they fear that in the belief of certain success many and many a democrat will stay home. It is safe to say that from now on the efforts of the leaders will be directed toward changing this apathy into one of at least interest, if enthusiasm itself be lacking.

Those who know Hon. John Walter Smith, and are acquainted with his unusual campaign abilities are free in their prophecy that he will arouse the state before he gets through. A strong personality, together with unusual ability, and experience such as few have had, will they surprise the people of the State before it is over.

One thing may be counted on, and that is he will certainly make friends and devoted followers wherever he goes, for he is unquestionably one of the best "mixers" of the country. And the man who sees his smile, feels the friendly grip of the hands, or catches the kindly words of greeting, will go away determined to come out to the polls and give him his vote.

The republicans apparently are giving the major part of their attention to the carrying of the 1st, 5th and 6th Congressional Districts.

Young "Sid" Mudd is making a tremendous fight to get the seat his father filled so long, and it looks as though the democrats will have a pretty stiff fight on their hands to keep him out. D. J. Lewis, one of the strongest men in Congress is also facing a formidable fight, but although representing a constituency that is naturally republican, it seems impossible to defeat him.

Here in the First Congressional District it looks as though the republicans had made up their mind to put up as strong a fight as they know how. They claim to be more than satisfied with the registration results, as a whole, in the Counties comprising the District.

They have made a strong bid for Somerset County by nominating Robert F. Duer from that County and also endorsing Mr. Hodson, of Somerset, the Bull Moose candidate for the short term. The Bull Moose all over the District have fallen in line and have in return endorsed Mr. Duer for the long term.

As to the short term it is a foregone conclusion that Senator Price will win with hands down, for even if the republican leaders support Mr. Hodson it will be impossible to coach the negroes and ignorant voter to get away from the R.

The fight that is being made for the long term, looks like a forlorn hope also, for even if they succeed in placing the united strength of the Republican and Bull Moose behind Mr. Duer, it will still be impossible to win unless they at the same time receive considerable support from the Democratic ranks.

They claim there is a large number of disaffected democrats in the First District and that this year they will go to the polls and support Mr. Duer. On just what this claim is based it is hard to say; for admitting the truth that there are a large number of democrats who are not at all pleased with the way things have been run, there is apparently no more sign of these breaking away from the party this year than there has been in the past—and results have almost always shown that the people of the First District take their politics straight. As far as surface indications go there seems to be but little basis for the opinion that this year will be different—and it does look like some signs would appear if the democrats were going to desert their standard in numbers sufficiently large to reverse the results.

It must not be overlooked however that the republicans are confident—or at least making a big bluff at being so—and spurred on by the hope of carrying the District will make a very game fight.

Senator Price in making his announcement for Congress placed himself fairly and squarely on his own record and on it he expects to make his fight. Mr. Duer accepted this stand and said that on the Senator's record he would make his fight. So the issue seems to be drawn on this line.

THE OYSTER SITUATION

In Somerset Cases Now Being Tried Of Importance.

The first test of the Shoemaker oyster law in the courts will come in cases started in Somerset county last Saturday when arguments were made as to the constitutionality of the law. Should the law be decided unconstitutional then the "planters" would lose their leases and the tongs would get the grounds.

Should the law be upheld then the court must go ahead taking testimony to ascertain whether or not the grounds are barren or productive. Two test cases, out of over 30 suits instituted to out the lessee, were selected for argument. One is that of George A. Cox, on Carmel bar, in the Manokin river, and the other is that of Lavinia Harwood, of Baltimore, in Tangier sound.

The proceedings were preliminary to condemnation suits under the Shepherd act, by which the lessee to be compensated by the state if the suits are decided in their favor.

Alonso L. Miles of Salisbury, is the counsel for George A. Cox; W. C. Coleman represents Baltimore lessees, and W. M. Maltbie, a member of the Shellfish commission, argued for the commission; W. Thomas Kemp of Baltimore and Harry J. Waters of the Princess Anne bar, represented the Tongs and the Oystermen's Protective association.

Witnesses were on hand in Princess Anne Saturday to give testimony, but they were not called. After completion of the argument for and against the validity of the Shepherd act, the court had to decide, of hand, the important question, to take time. In order to expedite the case, Chief Judge Pattison and Associate Judge Stanford suggested that their decision be held an abeyance, and that the taking of testimony proceed. Mr. Miles would not consent to this course, on the ground that the taking of testimony from his viewpoint would be useless.

Judge Pattison then ordered an adjournment of the court until Saturday the 10th, and that it meet on each successive Saturday until the two cases shall have been decided. The decision of the lower court will not be final, as the announcement was made in open court that, whatever the decision, there will be an appeal to the court of appeals.

The grounds on which Mr. Miles attacks the constitutionality of the Shepherd law were that it impairs the obligations of a contract, in violation of the Constitution of the United States, and that it takes property without due process of law, both of which points Messrs. Waters and Kemp disputed.

Sherman Shepherd of Dorchester county, the author of the Shepherd oyster law whose fate is hanging in the balance; State Comptroller Emerson C. Harrington, the champion of the dredgers and tongs, and Zora H. Brinsfield of Dorchester county, were among those in the crowded courtroom who closely followed the proceedings.

Great excitement prevails along the Manokin river section of Somerset county. It was learned at an early hour this morning that Comptroller Harrington had granted licenses to the Cox firm and that Armiger, the watchman, had left for Baltimore the night before to ship crews for the Cox boats. This the tongs claim is a violation of the truce. They say they will not hesitate to shoot to kill if the effort is made to dredge Carmel bar. The police schooner has been notified to leave, under penalty of being fired upon. Trouble is looked for within the next 24 hours.

The oystermen claim that they have moved no buoys nor committed any act of violence, but have been waiting and expecting to get action in the case by the Somerset county court, and feel that the Cox firm should have been content to wait. They claim the state should issue no licenses to dredge on the disputed bottoms until this decision has been made. They claim that at the session of the court on Saturday last nothing was done but to argue the constitutionality of the Shepherd law, and that the state and Cox are acting in bad faith. They say that if the other side will not wait for a decision, neither will they.

Salisbury Wins Position

Port Deposit, Md. October 16.—Navis Todd of Salisbury has won a position as right tackle on the Tome School football team by his round of work both on the offense and defense. Todd has won the distinction of being one of the best line men on the squad. By an injury sustained last week he was compelled to stay out of the Baltimore City College game, but he is now entirely recovered and is ready to fight against the B. P. I. on Saturday.

World's Series Baseball

The world's series baseball games were shown at Green's Auditorium during the past week by means of an electric score board, operated by the Western Union Telegraph Co. Quite a large crowd was present each day to "root" for their respective favorites in the struggle for the title of "world's champions." The series this year was between the Boston National League team and the Philadelphia Athletics, of the American League. Although the Athletics were the favorites before the series began, the Boston team surprised the country by winning the series in four straight games. The score board on which the spectators were enabled to follow every play by means of electric lights was brought to this city by Messrs. Wright and Hall of Seaford, Del.

Boost Salisbury

"Boost Salisbury" is the latest slogan of "The Woman's Shop." This enterprising establishment has had printed a large number of Booster Labels, which may be attached to letters and packages going through the mail and thus spread the name and fame of our city over a wide area. These labels will be given free in any desired quantity to anyone who calls for them. Surely this is a good opportunity to give our city an upward push and we should all co-operate in this plan.

The annual celebration of Harvest Home Day will take place at Ashbury M. E. church tomorrow, October 18. The usual autumnal decorations will adorn the sanctuary as reminders of God's goodness. Special music appropriate to the day will be rendered. Rev. William White, pastor of the M. E. church at Easton, Md., will preach in the morning and make one of the addresses in the evening. This is the day when all the benevolent collections of the year, excepting missions, will be made of the people. All are requested to return their envelopes with gifts.

Put a Salisbury Booster Label on every letter. They are free at The Woman's Shop.

Chauffer Was Badly Hurt.

To avoid running over what appeared to be the body of a man lying in the road, E. V. Perkins, chauffeur of an automobile bearing a New Jersey tag, stopped his car so suddenly Tuesday afternoon that his head was driven through the windshield, cutting his face and head in a number of places. Other occupants of the car escaped with a few slight bruises.

The affair occurred at a bend in the road near Middleford, where a number of men are at work on the bridge.

Some boys had secured a suit of overalls and jumper, and stuffing them with leaves left the dummy lying in the road.—Exchange.

FOR MEMORIAL TO MRS. WILSON

Model Block of Houses in Washington Proposed by Women.

A movement to build a memorial to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in the form of a model block of sanitary houses in the slum district of Washington has been started by Mrs. Archibald Hopkins, who interested Mrs. Wilson in slum work here; Mrs. Ernest Bicknell, wife of the director of the American Red Cross, and other prominent women. The plan is to raise money for the block by subscriptions from the women of the country and to call it the Ellen Wilson Memorial block.

Mrs. Wilson's dying wish was that a bill for the elimination of the unsanitary alleys of Washington be passed. Since her death this has been done.

Mrs. Hopkins will submit the plan this week to a meeting of various women's organizations to be held in Pittsburgh.

Put a Salisbury Booster Label on every letter. They are free at The Woman's Shop.

PEG O' MY HEART

On Friday night, October 9th, the theatre goers of Salisbury witnessed one of the finest productions ever staged in this city, when Oliver Morosco's presentation of "Peg O' My Heart" was played before a large and appreciative audience at Ulman's Grand Opera House.

Miss Bea Martin, in the title role, gave a masterful representation of Peg, the little Irish girl, and won the hearts of the audience. Miss Martin was ably assisted by the other members of the cast, who also made a favorable and lasting impression.

That the theatre-going public of this community appreciates high class productions was well attested by the packed house which witnessed the performance.

BRIDGE WORK PROGRESSING

The work on the new bridges on South Division street and Camden avenue is still in progress and a large force of workmen are employed in their construction. The builders have been considerably delayed in their work because of the failure of the steel portions of the structures to arrive on time, but these parts have now been shipped and should be here in the course of a few days. The South Division street bridge is ready for the resumption of work as soon as the steel arrives. The working force has been busy on the Camden avenue bridge and are now ready to begin the concrete work.

Although it will not be possible for the work to be completed in contract time, an application has been made to the War Department for an extension of time, which the officials think is sure to be granted.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

At City Hall Monday Night of Public Interest.

The City Council at its session on Monday evening instructed the clerk to pay Engineer P. S. Shockley $125 and L. P. Coulbourn $800 on street work from the street fund.

The communication from Mr. Louis Delmas, of the Salisbury Water Co. in reference to laying the six inch pipes out South Division street was referred to the city solicitor for reply.

Mayor Bounds, City Solicitor Benjamin A. Johnson and Councilman L. Thomas Parker were named as a committee to look into the matter of laying sidewalks and erecting poles on East Main street.

A resolution was passed that the Council would meet on Monday, November 2, in the City Hall at 7:30 o'clock, for the purpose of making changes, adding to and taking from the assessment lists and for the purpose of striking the levy for 1914. The Council will hear complaints and requests for changes in the assessments up to Monday, October 26.

The City Clerk was ordered to notify Mr. Louis Delmas of the Salisbury Water Co. to make temporary connection of a six inch pipe across Camden street opening within one week, otherwise the city would do the work and charge it to the water company.

Ordinance repealing Ordinance No. E 8 and re-enacting the same regulating the licensing of circus shows and other entertainments was passed by Council but rejected by the Mayor.

The tomato pack at Delmar is about one-half the usual quantity. J. T. Wilson will put up about 5,000 cases, his usual pack being from 10,000 to 12,000 cases. The Delmar Packing Co. closed work last week.

An Armed Posse.

It is said in some quarters that on the return of Armiger with the men an armed posse will go aboard the boat, take the men and convey them to Westover, where they will be shipped back to Baltimore, if they desire to go, and if they make any fuss about it, they will ride on a rail to the county limits and there be hastened away with a shower of bullets.

Armiger and the men are expected to arrive tomorrow.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY SATURDAY, OCT. 24

Will Be Big Day in Salisbury For The Democrats of The County.

The Democratic State Central Committee has designated Saturday, October 24th, as the day for the big Democratic Mass Meeting in Salisbury. There will be two meetings, one at 2:00 on the afternoon and the other at 8:00 P. M. Both meetings will be held in the Ulman Grand Opera House. Plenty of good music will be provided for both meetings and prominent speakers will be on hand to address the audiences both afternoon and evening.

Senator Jesse D. Price, Democratic nominee for Congress from the First Congressional District, will address the afternoon meeting in company with several other speakers. Senator John Walter Smith will be here for one of the meetings, either in the afternoon or evening. As Senator Price is Wisconsin's candidate for Congress it is the hope of the Democratic State Central Committee that one of the largest gatherings of Democrats ever seen in Salisbury will gather for the occasion. Senator Price is especially desirous that the Democrats of the County turn out in force and make this gathering a demonstration which will carry its influence on to election day, and help the party in the County to roll up one of the largest Democratic majorities which the County has ever given.

The Democrats of the County need to do some extra hustling now that the registration is over and the decks are cleared for the campaign. The State Central Committee will arrange for a full list of district meetings in all the districts of the County following immediately on the big meeting in Salisbury on the 24th, and an extra effort will be made to have these district meetings arranged so as to draw the Democrats to them. There is nothing that so helps a campaign as the getting together of the people in district meetings and arousing some enthusiasm for the ticket.

While the registration has been very satisfactory to the Democratic leaders there is no reason why there should be any let up in the effort to get out a full vote. The Republicans will endeavor to make a quiet campaign but will have their voters at the polls on election day, and that is just what the Democrats want to keep in mind. Now that the Democrats have been registered we want them to take enough interest in the campaign to come out and vote and the best way to prepare for this is to attend the big Democratic meeting in Salisbury on the 24th, and then follow it up by attending the district meetings so as to keep in close touch with all the details of the campaign, and thereby become more and more interested in the success of the success of the Democratic candidates.

Don't forget the date of the big meetings in Salisbury, Saturday, October 24th, afternoon and evening.

LATE NEWS FROM THE WAR ZONE

Gains on the extreme western wing of the battle line in France, where the Allies have been fighting to check the German movement toward the French coast, are reported at Paris in an official announcement which states that the Germans have been driven from the left bank of the River Lys. Gains by the Allies at other points on the line are claimed.

According to a wireless dispatch from Berlin, the German troops in Belgium have been divided, part of them moving toward Ostend and part toward the French frontier.

Przemysl has been relieved, according to an official announcement at Berlin, which reports receipt of news from Vienna that an Austrian cavalry force has entered the fortress from the west, and that two Russian infantry divisions fled, after attack in the direction of the River San.

The Russian General Staff announces the defeat of an Austrian force south of Przemysl and says that on the East Prussian and Central Vistula fronts there has been no change. Unofficial reports from Petrograd tell of a Russian victory near Warsaw.

The Cathedral at Rheims is reported to have been further damaged by German shells.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

In Session Tuesday Last—Inspecting Roads And Bridges In County.

The County Commissioners in session Tuesday last transacted routine business. A petition for a tax ditch at Walston's Switch was filed. In the afternoon the Commissioners visited the road running around the farm of Mr. S. E. Gordy to look at the condition of the bridge with a view of having some permanent structure put in as this road is much used by the public in getting from the Parsonsburg road to the Delmar road. The bridge across the stream at the Gordy farm is badly in need of repairs.

The Commissioners also examined the road and surroundings leading to the State Sanatorium to see if it was possible to secure enough clay in the neighborhood to make a good dirt road from the city limits to the Sanatorium. The Commissioners do not feel able at this time to shell this road and think it can be repaired with clay and dirt to make a very serviceable highway.

At the session of the County Commissioners on Tuesday only a few matters of business were taken up.

One of the matters which is perplexing the Commissioners' office, is the necessity of providing the new Tax Supervisor, Mr. White Lowe, with adequate office room and assistance. It does not seem to have dawned upon the county solons that a new office more important than any other except that of the clerk and treasurer has been created by law and that he must have a place to work. So far Mr. Lowe has been allowed only a desk in the Treasurers office. This desk is sure to develop into a "full-grown office" as soon as Mr. Lowe's work has fairly started. What provision is to be made for it is some puzzle to the new official and to those in the Commissioners' office.

On account of the dangerous crossing of the B. & C. & A. R. R. at Glass Hill, between Pittsville and Parsonsburg, the Commissioners passed a resolution notifying the railroad company that on next Tuesday they will take up for consideration the ordering of the appointment of a flagman by the railroad company at that crossing.

Mr. Daniel Perdue was granted $5 for cleaning out the Horse Bridge Tax ditch.

A committee from Willards in the interest of the Willards-New Hope Mill road was before the board in behalf of this road and Engineer Clark was ordered to investigate cost of the work proposed.

A petition was presented for a tax ditch near Walston switch.

The board ordered the president and treasurer to advance the Fay Hunt Erecting Company $1,000 on bridge work in Salisbury.

An order was passed to enable the president and treasurer to borrow $10,000 to pay the first quarterly allowance to the school board.

Mrs. Effie Parsons was allowed a pension of $3 per month in favor of Thomas Davis.

TOO MUCH SHIFTING

By Too Many Who Till The Soil—Wise Suggestions.

In compiling data for the federal census, the enumerators asked every farmer in Maryland this question: How long have you lived on the farm you now occupy? This question was answered by 44,836 of the 48,923 farm operators in this state. More than 8,000 stated that they had occupied their farms only one year or less; 9,868 from 2 to 4 years; 8,310 from 5 to 9 years, and 17,994 10 years and over. The most restless class of people in this state is the tenant who operates his farm on the share basis. There are 10,322 of these farmers in this state; 9,962 of them made answer to the query and their replies indicated that 2,735 or about 26 per cent of them moved every year.

An official of the federal census bureau in discussing the report dealing with the term of occupancy of farms in the United States, said:

"This frequency of moving from farm to farm, or restlessness of occupancy, very likely, forms one of the chief causes for the decline of rural property, or is a hindrance to greater progress. Frequency in removal of farmers results in general shiftlessness; the roads and bridges are generally in a poor condition because the farmers, moving at frequent periods, are not particularly interested in their upkeep. Farm buildings on such farms are not usually kept in good repair, as the farmer who is about to move will leave the repairs to the next farmer to make. The same reasons will apply for lack of interest by the 'unstable' farmer in the schools, churches and general welfare of the community. They move frequently; they do not remain on a farm long enough to get the best result from it, consequently they are usually in a poor financial condition."

This is one of the greatest problems the Eastern Shore in particular has for solution. Some of these "shiftless" farmers were once on the way to prosperity, but "The rolling stone gathers no moss," and failure to get ahead has resulted in an endless shift for a streak of luck which is never found. Few, if any, successful farmers are to be found who have been "movers" every year or two. Few failures are to be found among those who have stuck to any kind of proposition year after year.

WORCESTER TRANSIT COMPANY

Incorporated to Run Motorbus From Pocomoke to Snow Hill.

The Worcester Transit Company has recently been incorporated for the purpose of operating a motorbus line between Pocomoke City and Snow Hill. The capital stock is $8,000, and is held chiefly by the stockholders of the Worcester Steamboat Company which has been successfully operating a line of boats between the two towns named for the last 12 years. It is proposed to put the bus line in operation about the 20th of October, at which time it is expected the state road will be completed. The present intention of the promoters of the new enterprise is to run the bus line on a schedule which will be the most convenient to the public, leaving Pocomoke City at a somewhat later hour in the morning and returning from Snow Hill at about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, making the trip in about 50 minutes. The boat line will continue to run as usual in connection with the bus line, thus giving the public the choice of two routes. The present rate of fare on the boat will be charged on the bus line, and tickets will be good for either.

THE QUEST OF IKY

By JANE WATTS.

When the substitute teacher hung up the keys of the room of which she had been in charge that day and left the office she wore the smile that one wears when one has completed an irksome duty. She joined two of the regular teachers who were also departing.

"Did you have any adventures today?" queried sympathetically a gray haired but kindly veteran of countless schoolroom battles.

"Forty-eight of them," responded the substitute. "All first graders who can't even write their own names. Oh! And that reminds me. There were really 49 adventures, counting Iky." And the young teacher broke into an infectious laugh.

"Tell us about Iky," the others urged.

"Well, I had just set half the room to modeling the story of the three bears, and had successfully settled the rest in their little chairs before the phonics chart. They had begun to chant rhythmically, 'I-I-o, blow, grow, a-n-o, snow, n-o, know,' when the door opened slowly and a shiny bright face framed in a black shawl peered in and demanded, 'I want my Iky Erbsteln!'

"Naturally, the little people all stared open mouthed at the visitor and suspended operations on their work, while I asked the owner of the shawled head to come in and pick out her offspring.

"Mrs. Erbsteln was a large, vigorous woman. She entered timidly, and looked helplessly up and down the rows of children. She even walked among them, but failed to find her Iky. By this time I had looked up the list of names. There was an Iky Wolf and an Iky Mastinwi, but of Iky Erbsteln there was neither hide nor hair nor record.

"At this crisis, a little miss—whose blue bow rode on top of her head like a sail on the billows that had weathered many a storm—stretched an eager head aloft and volunteered the information that Iky Erbsteln was 'at the water'.

"There can be no great smoke arising from a small fire," said Iky Erbsteln, after the name of other people. "I am a

"Mrs. Erbsteln was thoroughly excited by this time, so I left her in my chair while I went to make inquiries. It soon appeared that the only Iky in room 21 bore the surname Glwasch. At this, Mrs. Erbsteln grew frantic and began to pour forth tears and broken English simultaneously. Her little boy, she was sure, had been kidnapped, murdered."

"Fortunately, the recess bell interrupted her moans of anguish, and I suggested that she step out into the hall and look for her son among the regiments of children marching by. She followed the suggestion. Suddenly she gave a cry of joy and flung herself at a little curly haired fellow in the ranks of room 21. She hugged him violently, much to his embarrassment, for every one was looking on and wondering what it was all about. Meanwhile she wept and thanked heaven for his recovery.

Room 21's teacher and I looked at each other for mutual explanations. "So you did have Iky Erbsteln, after all?" I asked.

"But he told me his name is Glwasch," she said. Then the light of understanding dawned on her. "Oh, I begin to see!" she exclaimed. Then she told me the story.

"Two weeks ago, one of the children in my room brought Iky to enter him for the new term," said she. "But neither he nor any of the others knew the boy's last name. I asked him, 'What other name have you besides Iky?'"

"'Jun' Iky,' he replied with bewilderment in his big eyes."

"'What else does your mother call you?'" Iky—Iky what?"

"'Just Iky.'"

"'But what else does she say to you?'" Iky—Iky what?"

"'Then he seemed to understand, for he answered quickly, 'She says, 'Iky Glwasch.''"

"'So I entered his name as 'Iky Glwasch' on the books.'"

"'Well! I said, 'For I was as mystified as ever.'"

"'Why, don't you see? His mother says to him, daily, no doubt, 'Iky, go wash.''"

"'And that is as much as most of few folks know of their names,' concluded the substitute teacher. 'It's no wonder that children get lost.'"

Coins of Small Value. Doubtless the smallest coin in the world circulates in the Malay peninsula, simply a thin wafer made from the resinous juice of a tree, and has current value of about 1-10,000th of a cent. In the southern parts of Russia the peasants use a coin of such small value that a quarter of a million of them are worth no more than $1.25. The old Japanese mousons was worth 1-112th of an American cent. In Portugal the reis is the lowest standard of value, but no 1-reis pieces are coined. A 3-reis piece is equivalent to 6-100ths of a cent.

APPLE CROP WILL REQUIRE CAREFUL HANDLING

Conditions Abroad Will Make Quality Fruit More Than Ever Necessary in Securing Profits.

T. B. SYMONS,
Maryland Agricultural College.

There is a large apple crop throughout the country this fall, but not nearly so large as at first thought, and not nearly so large as the 1912 crop. Further the unusual conditions existing by virtue of the war in Europe affect the apple market chiefly through a feeling of uneasiness among the dealers, who have usually bought apples for exportation or for distribution in our markets through the winter. Yet even if Europe does not take a single barrel, the crop can be marketed in this country if judiciously handled, with satisfaction to all.

Growers should be extremely careful to see that the apples are picked properly. Proper picking and handling has great value in the sale of apples. With some varieties the trees should be picked over two or three times. Do not allow the fruit to remain in piles in the orchard exposed to the sun. Fruit should be hauled on wagons, equipped with springs. Indications are that poor grades of fruit will bring practically nothing on the market. It also has an effect on the market of good apples. It will be better to keep this class of fruit at home. I have seen several growers who have sold their good apples for a fair price. Jonathans and Grimes at $3 per bbl. and Yorks at $2.50 and $2. Don't ship your fruit to a market where it would bring not more than $1.25.

The Office of Markets, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, makes the following suggestions:

1st—That growers pick and handle fruit in such condition as to insure it against deterioration.

2d—That growers, associations and operators who use the barrel as a container adopt the standard barrel, and uniformly grade and pack the crop in compliance with the standards of the Suler Law, branding their packages accordingly.

3rd—That all inferior grades be eliminated from the green fruit markets, and diverted as far as possible, to cider mills, canneries and evaporators.

4th—That only long-keeping, standard-packed varieties be placed in cold storage.

5th—That a special effort be made to fully supply small towns by direct sales, for the purpose of securing equitable distribution and avoiding the suggestion of large markets.

6th—That all growers, operators, dealers and associations early recognize themselves to the conditions, and arrive at an estimate of true values in order to assure quick movement of the crop from producer to consumer.

HELP OF MARYLAND POULTRY KEEPERS IN SUPPRESSING NEW DISEASE IS REQUESTED.

ROY H. WAITE,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

A peculiar poultry disease has been reported in several parts of Maryland. The symptoms are very characteristic and well defined, but I have been unable to find the disease recorded in any of the poultry publications. Losses have been very heavy in flocks affected therefore, all poultry raisers should co-operate to learn the cause of the disease and methods of combating it.

SICK WITH NEW DISEASE.

The symptoms and characteristics of the disease are as follows:

1. Old and young, both male and female, die.
2. Attacks come in cycles.
3. Hens in laying conditions die, many die soon after laying.
4. Head natural colors until death.
5. Eyelid swollen (yellowish). Sit around with eyes closed.
6. Marked and persistent diarrhoea (scanty white—sometimes yellowish).
7. Birds appear weak and don't move much after attack commences.

In order to help determine just how widespread the disease is, report all outbreaks to the Poultry Department, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station, College Park, Md.

NOT TOO LATE TO PLANT RYE FOR SOIL IMPROVEMENT.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Rye can still be profitably planted as a cover and green manure crop. Its late fall and early spring growth enables it to use and return to the soil much nitrogen and other plant food that would otherwise be lost. On bare, steep, hilly land the loss of plant food from washing is more than that removed by crops each year. The most economical way to reduce this waste is to keep the soil covered with vegetation of some sort. Where the hillside is producing clean culture crops, such as corn or potatoes, they should not be allowed to go into the winter without a growth of rye.

Difficulties of Astronomy.

"Is it hard to learn the use of a telescope?" asked the student. "Not very," replied the candid professor. "The hardest thing about astronomy in guessing what something is after you manage to see it."

Sharpens the Appetite.

Jokeleigh, (visiting Subbubs)—"And you have a grindstone, too. Will it put an edge on a dull appetite?" Subbubs—"Certainly! If you turn the handle long enough."

Select Your Seed Corn Before Storing

Proper Curing and Storage Will Insure a Better Stand.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Now is the time to take the first important step in preparing for a profitable corn crop next year. Don't consider seed good simply because it will grow. It should also retain its full vigor. The only way full vigor can be retained is to take care of the seed properly. This can be done by selecting the seed before storing it. The superiority of properly preserved seed over that picked from the crib, even though the crib seed germinates well, has been proven over and over again. The increase in yield if the well-preserved seed over crib picked seed usually running from 10 to 30 per cent.

The farmer can secure good seed from his own field if it has matured well and he has variety that has proven generally successful in his neighborhood. The best way to select seed is from the stalk in the field as soon as it has ripened. But if this has not been done the next best thing to do is to select carefully in the field at the time of husking and hauling to the crib.

SELECTING SEED CORN.

The most important step in seed selection, however, is to place the ears selected, in a dry place with free circulation of air so that they will dry out quickly. The storage room may be any place where air circulates freely, such as a wagon shed, barn loft, or attic. But do not throw the seed on a pile; that would not be much improvement over the crib. Tie the ears in bunches on a string or in some other way, placing them so that there is free circulation of air around each ear. The seed should be left in this manner until it is as "dry as a bone" which usually takes about two months. After this it may be stored in mouse-proof boxes or barrels or crates if desired, or they may be allowed to remain where they are.

ALL LAYERS SHOULD BE KEPT THIS WINTER.

ROY H. WAITE, Poultryman,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Keep all the laying stock you can handle properly this year for there is bound to be a shortage in eggs due to the economic condition brought about by the European war. It should all most be considered a crime to sell healthy, well-matured pullets for table purposes, and if you are short of pullets, year-old hens that are vigorous and healthy should be kept to fill up. Even good, strong two-year-old hens may be profitably kept over the third year according to the results of experiments at the Cornell and Utah Experiment Stations.

Just at present, profits on egg production are rather discouraging on account of the low production at moulting time, the high price of feed, and the large amount consumed by the moulting hens and the maturing pullets. Stick through this depressing period and I am sure you will be repaid later on.

WHY REMAIN ON THE MARYLAND FARM?

According to a notice being issued by Secretary T. B. Symons, of the Maryland Week Exhibition, which is to be held in the Armory, Nov. 17-21 two essay contests are to be held in connection with the exhibition, one for farm boys and the other for farm girls. The boys will have the chance to tell why they would prefer to remain on a Maryland farm when they grow up. And the girls, how they think country life can be bettered so that it may be more attractive to them. A prize of $30 each is offered for the winner in either contest, and the boy and girl getting second place will each have a gold medal presented to them. All essays to enter the contest must be in the hands of Secretary T. B. Symons, College Park, Md., by 6 P. M., Monday, November 23th. One judge in these contests will be State Superintendent of Education Dr. M. Bates Stephens.

PRINCIPLES AND MEN

There is no one who questions the value of a noble heritage, but that heritage must be one of qualities and not of name; nor must it be overlooked that in the veins of every Founder of a name flowed the blood of those "to fame and fortune unknown."

Nor must we forget that the line of demarcation between glorious success and ignoble failure, is often so closely drawn that a detraction from or an addition to, of a very small per cent of the qualities that go to the making of success possible, would reverse the results.

Thus the inheritance of a part but not enough, together with the failure to properly cultivate the talents received, will explain the pitiable failure of many a descendant from a noble sire.

Recognizing these facts, the world has come to judge the man, not for what his ancestors were, but for what he himself is.

To hear our orators talk, to read the literature sent out by party organizations, one would think that the main reason for supporting this or that party, is one of ancestry.

But what is true of an individual is even more true of a Party for through its veins there flows not one drop of ancestral blood.

A Party to be worthy of support must have more than ancestry behind it; for no matter how great it has been in the past, it is only worthy of support today in just such a proportion as it stands for the growth, prosperity and happiness of the people.

As a matter of pure sentiment, it is right and proper to point with pride to the great and noble patriots who in their day guided the destinies of a party and through it the destinies of a nation; but let us stop there, for no reflected light, even, rests upon the banners which we today are spreading to the breeze.

As the leaders of the past are no longer the leaders of to-day neither are the policies of the past the policies of the present.

Conditions have changed, and to meet these changed conditions, the principles and theories of our government have changed.

Place a Party's platform of to-day by the side of the same Party's enunciation of principles in the past, and it will be seen that they are as wide apart as are the poles.

The thing for the voter of to-day to consider is not how his father and grandfather, before him, voted, nor how he himself has ever voted, but for what party and what men stand for the best government.

In this connection it must be remembered that a Party is only as great as its Present leaders are great; it is only as fit to be entrusted with power as its Present leaders are fit to rule.

A party whose main argument for being entrusted with power is an appeal to stick by its ancestors, a plea for party regularity and loyalty, an attempt to again blow into a living flame the dead ashes of a long lost prejudice, a resort to bribery and corruption, a campaign of personal appeal, and the hundred and one ways that the slick and sly politician of the "old school" tries to keep in power is unworthy of the support of decent citizenship.

A party to be worthy of success must be led by men of high character, by men of experience, by men of ability to both formulate and execute; and happy will be this land when all voters recognize and act in accordance therewith.

Before asking the voters of Wicomico County to support the nomination of the democratic party, this fall, we shall first ask them to study the principles and policies of the party, to size up its leadership under the President, Woodrow Wilson, and then if they find its principles of government are sound, and its leadership capable, we will ask them to give to it their support, regardless of what their political affiliations have been in the past. And if they find it wanting, after a careful weighing, we say to them in all frankness that it is not only their privilege but their bounden duty to withhold their votes on election day.

The new concrete road from Sharptown to Brookville, a mile of which has been closed for 10 days, is now open. This is said to be one of the finest pieces of road in the state. It connects the two rivers, Marsh Hope and Nanticoke, and connects upper Dorchester county with Cambridge and points below.

Man of True Charity.

The man who is always abusing the motives of others is never quite certain of his own—or perhaps he is only too certain of his own, knowing them to be selfish and interested. He who can fervently cherish a certain opinion and yet believe that a believer in the exact contrary may be equally sincere is the man of a genuine charity.

More Than He Needed.

"At the end of five hours and a half, if you are in town," said the judge, "you will be arrested on the same charge." "You may have five hours," said the lawyer.

TEST OF FRIENDSHIP

By JULIE CARSON.

"I think," said Phyllis to her husband as they were packing their trunks preparatory to taking their annual vacation trip, "that I shall ask Sue to take care of the chickens while I am gone. I know that she will be glad to do that much for me and—"

"Well, inasmuch as she lives next door and has only to cross the yard to feed them and seeing that she will probably get about a dozen and a half eggs a day from them, I don't think that you are putting her regard to a very severe test," replied Phyllis's husband.

"I wonder, John Billingsby, why it is that packing always seems to have such a disagreeable effect upon you," commented Phyllis, as she watched him starting helplessly at a bunch of neckties from which he was vainly trying to choose the best to put in his trunk. "You never seem to be able to pack a trunk without unpacking your bad temper at the same time. You know very well that Sue doesn't like chickens; she says that their habit of always eating makes her nervous, and as for the eggs, she would rather buy them at the store than get them at the cost of caring for the chickens."

"And have you thought whom you would inflict that Angora kitten upon?" questioned her husband.

"Oh, that's all settled," declared Phyllis, triumphantly. "Ruth Comfort is going to take the kitten. You know she adores cats, but her husband has an antipathy for them and won't let her have one, but he has consented to allow her to borrow mine while we are gone and Ruth is as happy as if she had come into the possession of a fortune and has promised me to treat it as her own. Ruth is really devoted to me and I think that if she hated cats she would be just as conscientious in her care of my kitten, simply out of pure friendship."

"Pure friendship!" echoed Billingsby, as he folded and unfolded, then folded again a white flannel outing

"Just Getting Acquainted."

coat that he had bought in a moment of reckless determination to make this trip the gayest one in his experience. "I'll be willing to wager this coat that Sue will be so sick of her chickens and Ruth so disgusted with that cat's sly ways that they will be heartily glad to see you back. It's a pity people cannot go away on vacations without unloading all their responsibilities and possessions on their friends and neighbors. By the way, where did you send our Kirmanshaw rug? That's worth more than a bushel of chickens and kittens."

"Oh, the rug is over at the Stevens'; they were delighted to have it."

The next day the Billingsbys went on their way. At the end of three weeks they returned with a thick coat of tan on their faces, and a very thin layer of bills in their purses, and in their hearts the deepest of thankfulness to be back.

Mrs. Billingsby's first act was to go over to Sue's to get the key to the chicken coop.

"Oh, are you back so soon?" said Sue with badly concealed consternation and disappointment in her face. "I had just got the chickens used to my ways and in another week I know I could have done wonders."

She yielded up the key unwillingly and Mrs. Billingsby felt that her return was anything but welcome. She sadly betook herself to the Comfort home, where more consternation awaited her.

"Why, it seems as if you had just gone!" declared Ruth, with no attempt to hide her dismay. "Kitty and I were just getting acquainted, and she is so used to her new basket that I am sure she will be quite unhappy if you take her away at once."

The vacant place on the floor of the Shaw's living room where the loaned rug was removed was another reproach. By the time Mrs. Billingsby reached her own home the gladness had faded from her face.

"They all seemed sorry to have me back," she confessed, "and they made me feel like a cruel impostor when I asked for the return of my own belongings."

"It is curious," commented Billingsby, "how a warm and pure friendship for a person—for a very nice person I might say—can be supplanted by an impersonal affection for a chicken, or a kitten, or a rug. But at least you have put your friends to the test and know the depth of their regard."—Chicago Daily News.

In Solon's Time.

During the time of Solon, the famous lawmaker, he secured the passage of a statute compelling every able-bodied adult man in the nation to give proof once a year that he was earning a decent living and was self-supporting. Somebody has written to us suggesting that this would not be a bad example for Uncle Sam to follow, since the class of those who have learned to live "graciously in idleness" is constantly on the increase.—Chicago Daily News.

PROFIT IN DAIRYING DEPENDS ON WISE FEEDING

Silage Or Legume Hay Needed In Ration To Lessen Cost Of Feeding.

G. E. WOLCOTT,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

During the summer months, when cows are on pasture, the dairyman is not troubled with the problem of supplying the herd with a ration which will maintain the flow of milk and also be economical.

To the farmer who has a loft full of alfalfa or clover, and a store full of silage, the problem is simple; he will need comparatively little grain to make a balanced ration.

If cut fodder, alone is available for roughage, it will be necessary to supply a large part of the nutrients, required to maintain the production of the herd, in the form of a grain mixture which will necessarily be expensive. This is the season when the farmer realizes, more than ever that silage and some legume hay are necessary for the profitable production of milk and butter. Two-thirds of the nutrients required for a normal production can be supplied in the form of rough feed; but where neither silage nor legumes are available two-thirds of the daily feed must be supplied in the form of grain. This necessitates the purchase of large amounts of high priced concentrates; which will make the cost of production very high and probably unprofitable.

In selecting the feeds for his grain mixture the dairyman should choose those that are to be had at the lowest cost; and use only enough of each so that the mixture will, when fed with what roughage is available, supply the nutrients that are required for a given production. This is a balanced ration.

WELL-FED COW.

The following grain mixtures may be found helpful; others may be obtained by writing direct to the writer at College Park, Md.:

When 10 lbs. of alfalfa, or 12 lbs. of clover hay are fed with 35 lbs. of corn silage, the following grain mixture, fed at the rate of one pound per head of cows, will produce 14 pounds of 4 per cent milk, will be about right for a cow weighing 1,000 lbs.

400 lbs. corn chop.
200 lbs. bran.
100 lbs. cotton seed meal.

400 lbs. corn chop.
200 lbs. dried brewers' grs.
50 lbs. cotton seed meal.

200 lbs. corn chop.
300 lbs. ground oats.
100 lbs. cotton seed meal.
50 lbs. gluten feed.

IMPROVEMENT OF SCHOOL GROUNDS IS VERY DESIRABLE.

B. W. AUSPON,
Maryland Agricultural College.

Many of our rural schoolhouses are so situated that they wholly lack protection from inclement weather. Consequently, the teacher and pupils are often subjected to trying conditions in severe weather. When it is almost impossible to keep the building warm.

Not only are the winds of winter trying, but those of spring are equally so, while the intense rays of the summer sun often have similar effect. By the judicious planting of trees and shrubs marked changes can be secured. The severe winds will be checked from striking the building, thus mitigating the temperature to some extent. In spring the trees will give that refreshing shade so welcome at that season of the year.

In addition to serving as a protection and adding beauty to the school grounds, such planting proves of great educational value. By planting and caring for trees the children are given some knowledge of tree culture, which will prove useful in later years. The writer will gladly co-operate with local teachers in planning school grounds and selecting trees and shrubs.

DRIVE POULTRY GENTLY.
ROY H. WAITE,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

It pays to be gentle with poultry at all times, but especially during the late fall when the pullets are just developing into laying condition. At this time a sudden scare or excitement will set them back in egg production. When putting them into winter quarters, be as careful as you can. If they have been kept tame, as they should be, they can usually be driven into their house very easily. An easy way to drive them is for two or three persons to get around them, each with a long, light board or pole, held in the middle. This is used to gently usher them along without the necessity of running them down.

RETAINING EFFICIENT TEACHERS A SERIOUS PROBLEM

Agricultural College Bulletin Points Out Difficulties and Remedies For This Condition in Country Districts.

One of the great problems, at present, is the retention of an efficient agricultural teacher for any great length of time in our rural high schools. This is due to the great demand for these men in other agricultural pursuits and to the limited supply of trained teachers. The problem may be reduced by the employment of home teachers, by the adjustment of salaries, and by increasing the length of the term of service.

The agricultural teacher should be employed for the entire year in order that he may render the greatest possible service to the community. By employing him for a longer term his position will be on an equal footing with other agricultural callings, thus reducing the chance of losing his services when he has become valuable to the school and to the community.

It is as important to consider the personality of the teachers as it is to consider his college training. He comes in closer touch with the life of the country community than any other school official. He, through his exemplary habits, ability to do things, and general culture, must be able to command the respect of the entire community. The boy in the school must feel that his teacher knows of what he speaks, and the parent must be satisfied that the child is being directed by one who is qualified to instill correct ideals of farm life and its possibilities.

POULTRY RUNS SHOULD BE FRESHENED AND SOWN TO RYE FOR SPRING GREEN FEED.

ROY H. WAITE,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

If you are keeping your chickens in yards, they will need some green feed next spring and the yards ought to be cleaned up so that diseases and parasites will not develop at will. You can perform these two operations at one time if you will dig or cultivate your yards and sow them to rye. If you have a double yard system, you can use one yard or set of yards in the summer and the other set in winter. The summer yards ought to be sown to rye about the first of October, and the hens kept off. Then in the spring when the rye gets a good start they can be turned back and if about 50

CHAPTER VII.

Making a War.

Hedworth Westerling would have said twenty to one if he had been asked the odds against war when he was parting from Marta Galland in the hotel reception room. Before he reached home he would have changed them to ten to one. A scare bulletin about the Bodlapoo affair compelling attention as his car halted to let the traffic of a cross street pass, he bought a newspaper thrust in at the car window that contained the answer of the government of the Browns to a dispatch of the Grays about the dispute that had arisen in the distant African jungle. This he had already read two days previously, by courtesy of the premier. It was moderate in tone, as became a power that had 3,000,000 soldiers against its opponent's 5,000,000; nevertheless, it firmly pointed out that the territory of the Browns had been overtly invaded, on the pretext of accusing a deserter who had escaped across the line, by Gray colonial troops who had raised the Gray flag in place of the Brown flag and remained defiantly in occupation of the outpost they had taken.

As yet, the Browns had not attempted to repel the aggressor by arms for fear of complications, but were relying on the Gray government to order a withdrawal of the Gray force and the reputation of a commander who had been guilty of so grave an international affront. The surprising and illuminating thing to Westerling was the inspired statement to the press from the Gray foreign office, addressly appealing to Gray chauvinism and justifying the "intrepid" of the Gray commander in response to so-called "pin-pricking" exasperations.

At the door of his apartment, Francois, his valet and factotum, gave Westerling a letter.

"Important, sir," said Francois.
Westerling knew by a glance that it was, for it was addressed and marked
"Personal" in the premier's own handwriting. A conference for ten that evening was requested in a manner that left no doubt of its urgency.

Curiosity made him a little ahead of time, but he found the premier awaiting him in his study, free from interruption or over-sleeping.

In the shadow of the table lamp the old premier looked his years. From youth he had been in politics, ever a bold figure and a daring player, but now beginning to feel the pressure of younger men's elbows. Fonder even of power, which had become a habit, than in his twenties, he saw it slipping from his grasp at an age when the downfall of his government meant that he should never hold the reins again.
He had been called an ambitious demagogue and a makeshift opportunist by his enemies, but the crowd liked him for his ready strategy, his genius for appealing phrases, and for the gambler's virtue which hitherto had made him a good loser.

"You saw our communique tonight that went with the publication of the Browns' dispatch?" he remarked.

"Yes, and I am glad that I had been careful to send a spirited commander to that region," Westerling replied.

"So you guess my intention, I see."
The premier smiled. He picked up a long, thin ivory paper knife and softly patted the palm of his hand with it.

"Certainly!" Westerling replied in his ready, confident manner.

"We hear a great deal about the president and power of modern arms as favoring the defensive," said the premier. "I have read somewhere that it will enable the Browns to hold us back, despite our advantage of numbers. Also,
that they can completely maneuver every part of their frontier and that their ability to move their reserves rapidly, thanks to modern facilities, makes a powerful flanking attack in surprise out of the question."

"Some half-truths in that," answered Westerling. "One axiom, that must hold good through all time, is that the aggressive which keeps at it always wins. We take the aggressive. In the space where Napoleon deployed a division, we deploy a battalion today.
The precision and power of modern arms require this. With such immense forces and present-day tactics, the line of battle will practically cover the length of the frontier. Along their range the Browns have a series of fortresses commanding natural openings for our attack. These are almost impenetrable. But there are pregnable points between them. Here, our method will be the same that the Japanese followed and that they learned from European armies. We shall concentrate in masses and throw in wave after wave of attack until we have gained the positions we desire. Once we have a tenable foothold on the crest of the range the Brown army must fall back and the rest will be a matter of skillful pursuit."

The premier, as he listened, rolled the paper knife over and over, regarding its polished sides, which were like Westerling's manner of "facile statement" of a program certain of fulfillment.

"How long will it take to mobilize?"
"Less than a week after the railroads are put entirely at our service, with three preceding days of scattered movements," answered Westerling.

"Deliberate mobilizations are all right for a diplomatic threat that creates a furore in the newspapers and a depression in the stock market, but which is not to be carried out. When you mean war, all speed and the war fever at white heat."

"You would have made a good politician, Westerling," the premier remarked, with a twinging uplift of the brow and a knowing gleam in his shrewd old eyes.

"Thank you," replied Westerling, "a man who is able to lead in anything must be something of a politician."

"Very true, indeed. Perhaps I had that partly in mind in making you vice-chief of staff," responded the premier.

"Then it all goes back to the public —to that enormous body of humanity out there!" He swung the paper knife around with outstretched arm toward the walls of the room. "To public opinion—as does everything else in this age—to the people—our masters, your and mine! For no man can stand against them when they say no or yes."

"You know the keys to play on, though," remarked Westerling with a complimentary smile. "No one knows quite so well."

"And you are sure—sure we can win?" the premier asked with a long, tense look at Westerling, who was steady under the scrutiny.

"Absolutely!" he answered. "Five millions against three! It's mathematics, or our courage and skill are him a good loser."

"The train was late, sir," Lanstron replied, "and I have some news about our thousandth chance."

"Hm-m!" What is it?" asked Partow.
When Lanstron had told his story,
Partow worked his lips in a way he had if he were struck by a passing reflection which might or might not have a connection with the subject in hand.

"Strange about her when you consider who her parents were!" he said. "But you never know. Hm-m! Why don't you sit down, young man?"

"The way that the Grays gave out our dispatch convinces me of their intentions," Partow said. "Their people are rising to it and ours are rising in answer. The Grays have been transferring regiments from distant provinces to their frontier because they will fight better in an invasion. We are transferring home regiments to our frontier because they will fight for their own property. By Thursday you will find that open mobilization on both sides has begun."

"My department is ready," said Lanstron, "all except your decision about press censorship."

"A troublesome point," responded Partow. "I have procrastinated because two delicate plans were fully worked out. It is a matter of choice between them: either publicity or complete secrecy. You know I am no believer in riding two horses at once.
My mind is about made up, but let me hear your side again. Sometimes I get convinced by proving another man's."

Lanstron was at his best, for his own conviction was intense.

"Of course they will go in for secrecy, but our case is different," he began.

Partow settled himself to listen with the gift of the organizer who draws from his informant the brevity of essentials.

"I should take the people into our confidence," Lanstron proceeded. "I should make them feel that we were one family fighting for all we hold dear against the invader. If our losses are heavy, if we have a setback, then the inspiration of the heroism of those who have fallen and the danger of their own homes will impel the living to greater sacrifices. For the Grays are in the wrong. The moral and the legal right is with us."

"And the duty of men like you and me, chosen for the purpose," said Partow,
"is worthily to direct the courage that goes with moral right. The overt act of war must come from them by violating our frontier, not in the African jungle but here. Even when the burglar fingers the window-sash we shall not fire—no, not until he enters our house. When he does, you would have a message go out to our people that will set them quivering with indignation?"

"Yes, and I would let the names of our soldiers who fall first be known and how they fell, their backs to their frontier homes and their faces to the foe."

Our very liberality in giving news will help us to cover the military secrets which we desire to preserve," Partow said, with slow emphasis. "We shall hold back what we please, connot equal to theirs. Absolutely! We have the power, why not use it? We do not live in a dream age!"

From a sudden, unwitting exertion of his strength the knife which had been the recipient of his emotions snapped in two. Rather carefully the premier laid the pieces on the table before he rose and turned to Westerling, his decision made.

"If the people respond with the war fever, then it is war," he said. "I take you at your word that you will win!"

"A condition!" Westerling announced. "From the moment war begins the army is master of all intelligence, all communication, all resources. Everything we require goes into the crucible!"

"And the press—the mischievous, greedy, but very useful press?" asked the premier.

"It also shall serve; also obey. No lists of killed and wounded shall be given out until I am ready. The public must know nothing except what I choose to tell. I act for the people and the nation."

"That is agreed," said the premier.
"For these terrible weeks every nerve and muscle of the nation is at your service to win for the nation. In three or four days I shall know if the public rises to the call. If not—" He shook his head.

"While all the information given out is provocative to our people, you will declare your hope that war may be averted," Westerling continued.

"This will screen our purpose. Finally, on top of public enthusiasm will come the word that the Browns have fired the first shot—as they must when we cross the frontier—that they have been killing our soldiers. This will make the racial spirit of every man respond. Having decided for war, every plan is worthy that helps to victory."

"It seems fiendish!" exclaimed the premier in answer to a thought eddying in the powerful current of his brain. "Fiendish with calculation, but merciful, as you say."

"A fast, terrific campaign! A ready machine taking the road!" Westerling declared. "Less suffering than if we went to war carelessly for a long campaign—than if we allowed sentiment to interfere with intellect."

"I like your energy, your will!" said the premier admiringly. "And about the declaration of war? We shall time that to your purpose?"

"Declarations of war before striking, by nations taking the aggressive, are a disadvantage," Westerling explained. "They are going out of practice. Witness the examples of Japan against Russia and the Balkan allies against Turkey. In these days declarations are not necessary as a warning of what is going to happen. They belong to the etiquette of fencers."

"Yes, exactly. The declaration of war and the ambassador's passports will be prepared and the wire that fighting has begun will release them," agreed the premier.

"Yet if we did lose! If when I had given you all you ask your plans went wrong! If our army were broken to pieces on the frontier and then the nation, kept in ignorance of events, learned the truth—the premier enunciated slowly and pointedly while he locked elbows with Westerling—that is the end for us both. You would hardly want to return to the capital to face public wrath!"

"We must win though we lose a million men!" he answered. "I stake my life!" he cried hoarsely, striking his fist on the table.

"You stake your life!" repeated the premier with slow emphasis.

"I do!" said Westerling. "Yes, my life. We cannot fall!"

"Then it will be war, if the people want it!" said the premier. "I shall not resist their desire!" he added in his official manner, at peace with his conscience.

Partow was a great brain set on an enormous body. Partow's eyes had the fire of youth at sixty-five, but the pendulous flesh of his cheeks was pasty. Jealousy and faction had endeavored for years to remove him from his position at the head of the army on account of age. New governments decided as they came in that he must go, and they went out with him still in the saddle.

Let officers apply themselves with conspicuous energy and they heard from a genial Partow; let officers only keep step and freeze of courts martial, and they heard from a merciless taskmaster. Particularly human, peculiarly dictatorial, dynamic, and inscrutable was Partow, who never asked any one under him to work harder than himself.

Lanstron appeared in the presence of Jove shortly after eight o'clock the next morning after he left La Tir.
Jove rolled his big head on his short neck in a nod and said:

"Late!"

"The train was late, sir," Lanstron replied, "and I have some news about
our thousandth chance."

"Hm-m!" What is it?" asked Partow.
When Lanstron had told his story,
Partow worked his lips in a way he

THE NEW INSTITUTION OUTSIDE OF SALISBURY

For Patients Had Formal Opening On Tuesday

The Pine Bluff Sanatorium, located about two miles west of this city, held its formal opening Thursday with a large number of guests present. The institution is a State affair, under the supervision of a State commission and is unique from the fact that it accepts patients only in their advanced and chronic stages of tuberculosis.

Special note was made by the visitors of the open-air treatment which is given the patients in single apartments located on the grounds. Other special features were demonstrated by the superintendent.

The institution can accommodate at the present time about 40 patients but are preparing within the next year to double that number. Dr. George W. Todd stated that any person in Maryland suffering with advanced or chronic tubercular trouble and without funds will be admitted to the institution upon the certification of a reliable physician.

The doctors of the adjacent counties were invited and about twenty or twenty-five were present in response to the invitation. A large number of the old stockholders also attended. The guests walked about the grounds until three o'clock, when a meeting was held in the auditorium. Dr. T. E. Martindale, President of the commission, presided. The Rev. Mr. Jones offered prayer, after which there were speeches by the Hon. James Ellegood, Vice-President of the commission, Judge Stanford, Senator J. D. Price and Mr. William M. Cooper. Responses were made on the part of the visitors by Dr. Holland, of Berlin, and Dr. Potter and Professor Mamey, of Salisbury. At four o'clock an elaborate luncheon was served by the Sunshine Committee of Civic League under the supervision of its president, Miss Louise Tilghman. A feature of this luncheon was a quantity of new fall straw berries, supplied by Mr. W. F. Allen. Regrets were received from Governor Goldsborough and several state officials who were unable to be present. It was a very successful opening and the visiting doctors expressed their surprise at the complete equipment of the sanatorium.

RESULT OF FREQUENT CHANGE BY FARMERS

Washington, D. C., Oct.—An official of the Federal Census Bureau, in discussing the report recently issued by the government, dealing with the result of occupancy of farms in the United States, said:

"This frequency of moving from farm to farm, or instability of occupancy, very likely, forms one of the chief causes for the decline of rural prosperity, or is a hindrance to greater progress. Frequency of removal of farmers results in general shiftlessness; the roads and bridges are generally in a poor condition because the farmers, moving at frequent periods, are not particularly interested in their upkeep. Farm buildings on such farms are not usually kept in good repair, as the farmer who is about to move will leave the repairs for the next farmer to make. The same reasons will apply for lack of interest by the 'unstable' farmer in the schools, churches and general welfare of the community. They move frequently; they do not remain on a farm long enough to get the best results from it, consequently they are usually in a poor financial condition."

Young Couple to Wed

Invitations have been sent out for the marriage of Miss Mary Emma Scarborough, of Girdletree, to Mr. Frank H. Peters, of Salisbury. The wedding will take place in Spring Hill M. E. Church at Girdletree on Wednesday evening, October twenty-first. Miss Scarborough is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Scarborough of Girdletree, and Mr. Peters is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Peters of "Fairfield," near Salisbury.

MARYLAND FARMERS MOVE FREQUENTLY

Washington, D. C., Oct.—In compiling data for the last Federal Census, the enumerators asked every farmer in Maryland this question: "How long have you lived on the farm you now occupy?" This question was answered by 44,836 of the 48,923 farm operators in this State. More than 8,000 stated that they had occupied their farm only one year or less; 9,808 from 2 to 4 years; 8,810 from 5 to 9 years and 17,994 10 years and over. The most restless class of people in this State is the tenant who operates his farm on the share basis. There are 10,322 of these farmers in this State; 9,962 of them made answer to the query and their replies indicated that 8,735, or about 86 per cent of them moved every year.

INFORMATION ABOUT MARYLAND FARMS

Maryland has 48,923 farms; of this number 84,607 are operated by owners and managers and 14,416 by tenants. Seventy-one per cent of the farms of this State are operated by owners and managers and 29 per cent by tenants.

The farm home owners and managers of Maryland cultivate 2,013,000 acres of land and the tenants till 1, 245,000 acres in this State. The value of the land and buildings of the tenants of this State is $1, 245,000,000.

BEACHEY LOOPS LOOP OVER CAPITOL'S DOME

President Wilson A Witness.

Recently Lincoln Beachey in an aeroplane looped the loop four times over the dome of the Capitol today, while President Wilson watched the performance from a White House window.

The aviator then made such an abrupt landing on the lowlands of the Potomac river near the Washington monument that observers in the tall wireless towers at the Arlington radio station reported he had fallen. Beachey then finished the performance by turning two loops over the White House and then more loops, flying low over the business section of the city, while Government officials and thousands of spectators held their breath.

Postmaster General Burleson has recommended the supplanting of horses on rural routes by automobiles. Along with the recommendation goes a suggestion for an increase in the length of standard route to 50 miles. The present length is 24 miles. The House committee on postoffices and postroads incorporated these recommendations in a bill which it reported to the House, proposing to pay rural carriers with automobile routes of 50 miles in length $1,800 per year for their work. The present pay is $1,200 with no allowance for horse or equipment. The additional $600 is put in the new bill for the purchase and maintenance of automobiles of the cheaper grade. Another recommendation is to put these routes out under contracts, as star routes are now let.

Home Maker Clubs For Farm Girls

State and National Demonstration Workers Plan Home Demonstrations For Maryland Daughters.

What is known as the Girls' Demonstration Work, began in 1910, with the organization of Canning Clubs in two States. Today there is an organization of more than 40,000 girls under the supervision of nearly 400 women agents. In 1913, 4,302 girls belonging to the Canning Clubs of the Southern States, according to their reports, canned 1,032,115 cans of tomatoes, and 532,147 cans of other products, in all valued at $180,420. They also formed Poultry Clubs, there being now 3,090 Poultry Club members. Bread Clubs have also been organized and in some counties some home improvement work has been done.

MARYLAND FARM GIRL.

In all of these activities, the women on the farms have given much help. Frequently, they have enrolled to receive the instructions, and have regularly attended the meetings and demonstrations. They have eagerly followed the instructions of the county women agent and have urged that a special work be organized for them. This work is now being extended into some Maryland counties and should be well understood by farm women and girls.

Wherever possible the women of the neighborhood will be enrolled in the Home Division of the State Demonstration Work, and under the direction of the County Woman Agent, they will join in the work of the Girls' Clubs and help teach their daughters the preparation of attractive dishes from the products of the Canning, Poultry and Garden Clubs. This will soon grow into demonstrations in the preparing of other foods, such as breads, etc., which are necessary to make up a wholesome meal.

In addition to the use of these products, the women will have demonstrations in the use of labor saving devices and conveniences, many of which shall be home made. The first one of importance will be a fireless cooker in which many new dishes will be prepared. As rapidly as possible, these conveniences will be added so as to cause both a saving of labor and improved sanitary conditions in the farm home. Farm women interested in these plans should write in to the Director of Extension, Maryland Agricultural College, College Park, Md.

STORING WINTER VEGETABLES PROPERLY.

T. H. WHITE, Vegetable Gardener, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

If a cellar like this is not handy for use and you have only a small amount of vegetables to be stored, the kiln method should be used. The kiln is simply a hole dug in the open ground, circular in shape and less than a foot deep. Into this the roots are poured until they form a conical pile a couple of feet high. A layer of straw or covering material should be placed directly on the vegetables and the roots are poured until they form a conical heap as a final cover. White potatoes, turnips, and beets will all keep perfectly this way. Carrots and celery should be laid away more carefully. These will last much better if instead of being dumped into the pile they are placed in alternate layers with sand between. All vegetables that are to be stored should be kept in the garden as late as possible. Do not, however, let them become very severely frozen. Parsnips and celery will keep very well in the garden where they have grown, but are some times very difficult to reach when snow is on the ground.

CONDITIONS MAKE ECONOMICAL POULTRY FEEDING NECESSARY.

ROY H. WAITE, Poultryman, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

The economical use of feed for poultry should be practiced at all times, for in the poultry business, a penny wisely saved is better than a penny earned. During the present high price of feed, there is more reason for being economical, but being economical does not mean cutting down on feed, unless the fowls are too fat. It does mean balancing the amount of feed fed and the eggs or meat produced, so that the largest returns in the shape of profits will be realized. I have known people who have fed their hens only the cheapest feed, thinking they were being economical and who could have, by adding a small amount of some high protein feed, turned their total loss into at least a small gain.

To Counteract Tannin in Tea. One of the marked characters of tea is the tannin contained in it. Indian tea has about twice as much as the Chinese growth. It has a marked effect on the digestion, even in the presence of other fluids. In all cases it retards the digestive process to an extent that would astonish those who have not inquired into the matter; and it has been recommended that a pinch of bi-carbonate of soda should be added to the brew of persons with weak digestions so as to make the infusion alkaline.

Political Situation Unchanged Interest Slowly Awakening Democratic Success Certain

The political situation of the State taken as a whole seems to be in about the same condition as of a week ago. Now as then, the usual interest and enthusiasm preceding an election, seems to be lacking, although there are signs of an awakening which probably presages a marked change. It is looked upon as being so certain that Senator John Walter Smith will sweep the State, that many are giving their attention to the war and other things. In this feeling of security lies the only danger to the Democrats this year, but it is safe to predict that before the campaign is closed much of this seeming indifference will be changed to enthusiastic work.

Senator Smith is taking the stump and will make an earnest appeal to the voters, based upon his own record in the United States Senate. This record is one that Maryland can feel proud of and one that the Senator need not fear to stand by. Col. Carrington, his opponent, has tried to throw some ginger into his campaign by issuing a challenge to Senator Smith for one or more joint debates. Outside of a courteous answer it is not likely that Senator Smith will pay much attention to this.

As was stated last week in The Advertiser everything points to the Republicans making their main fight in the First, Fifth and Sixth Congressional districts, recognizing that the State fight is already lost.

Young "Sid Mudd" is making the fight of his life, and while the Democrats express confidence in the result, it is known that the aggressive fight being put up by Mudd is giving Johnson and his friends considerable uneasiness.

Congressman Lewis is also opposed by a strong and popular man in Senator Zihlman. Beside this he is in one of the strongest natural Republican districts in the State. Notwithstanding both of these facts, it looks as though he is holding his own, and will probably be elected, but by a small majority. This however depends somewhat upon the attitude of the leading "Bull Moose" men, from whom he has in the past campaigns received help. Congressman Lewis is too valuable a man to lose, and the people of his district know his worth, and it is this fact that his friends are looking to pull him through.

PUZZLING ATTITUDE OF REPUBLICANS

The fight that is being put up in the First Congressional district is puzzling many who are trying to see what encouragement they are receiving. To make a fight at the present time in a district as strongly Democratic as is the First seems foolish unless unusual conditions exist.

It is believed that they are making their fight on the theory that a great deal of dissatisfaction exists in the rank and file of the Democratic party.

Close observers however fail to see any reason for believing that the voters will desert their party standard this year in any number.

That there is a strong undercurrent of unrest in many of the counties in this district it is useless to deny, but this unrest is due to local and not national conditions, and if it comes to the surface at all it will probably wait until it can strike a blow at the conditions at home.

This unrest and dissatisfaction is not due to antagonism to the principles of the Democratic party, but has been brought about by the arbitrary abuse of power by some men in the party. These discontented voters are said to be enthusiastic admirers of Woodrow Wilson, and it is safe to say that they will not take any steps that can in any way be interpreted as a blow at him or his administration, and a failure to elect either a Democratic Senator or Congressman would be hailed in the state as a repudiation of the administration by the First District. It seems now a safe prediction to say that the First District will roll up a large majority for the Democrats.

BIG DAY IN HEBRON

On Thursday—Move to Get State Grange to Meet Here in 1915.

Thursday was Pomona Grange day at Hebron and as the weather was especially favorable there was a large attendance of farmers from all over the county. All the Granges were well represented except Powellville, but the shortage was more than well made up by a large contingent from Salisbury.

Mr. Theo. S. Hearne, master of the county or Pomona Grange, called the routine work, Mr. Thos. A. Melson of the Hebron Grange arose and gave the visiting Granges an address of welcome that was very much appreciated. Mr. Melson enumerated the great number of good things that have accrued to the benefit of the farmer through organization. A short response was made by Mr. W. C. Mitchell, the retiring secretary.

Dr. Aug. Stabler of Washington, was present and gave some good advice on starting up a co-operative business in the Pomona Grange and after getting a synopsis of his plans and those formulated by local committee, the Grange ordered them sent to the different lodges.

Prof. C. E. Temple from the Maryland Agricultural College made an address in the afternoon and showed how, in the far west, the young people are not running after the white-handed jobs, but are staying on the farm, which there is regarded with more favor and more honor than clerks.

There were other short talks made which altogether made the day a very pleasant one and it must not be forgotten that the good old Hebron Grange was not lacking in hospitality for the tables were loaded with all the delicacies that the season and the farm and garden could afford.

Among the other things discussed was the effort to have the State Grange meet at Salisbury next year, 1915. As Salisbury is located in a central position we don't see why the state session could not be held here as well as in Baltimore, and the secretary was instructed to try to get the assistance of all the Eastern Shore Granges and as many on the Western Shore as possible. There is no doubt, but it would be beneficial to the town and the Grange also, and we are sure we could have a much larger attendance than they have at the Baltimore meetings.

This meeting was especially interesting for it was the occasion of the annual election of officers. The old officers had been in for two years and it was thought that most of them might be retained, but upon a canvass of the votes it was found that the old slate was nearly wiped off, only Mr. B. J. D. Phillips of Hebron, and Mrs. Chas. Jones of Willards, remaining. After a spirited contest which lasted for more than two hours, the following were elected for the year 1915 and will be installed at Salisbury the fourth Thursday in January: Mr. Jas. A. Waller of Hebron, master; Mr. W. H. Brittingham of Willards, overseer; Mr. Thos. A. Melson of Hebron, lecturer; Mr. Fulton Allen of Salisbury, secretary; Mr. J. A. Lowe of Maryland, steward; Mr. Chas. Jones of Willards, assistant steward; Mr. W. K. Dennis of Powellville, chaplain, Mr. B. J. D. Phillips of Hebron, treasurer; Mr. D. C. Bailey of Powellville, gate keeper; Mrs. Katie Ellis of Hebron, Flora; Mrs. Mary Sexton of Salisbury, Pomona; Mrs. Chas. Jones of Willards, lady assistant steward.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION

The United States Civil Service commission announces an open competitive examination in Salisbury on November 21 to provide a register of eligibles from which to make certification for filling vacancies as they may occur in positions requiring the qualifications of stenography, typewriting, or stenography and typewriting in the Federal classified civil service in the vicinity of the places of examination.

Women will not be admitted to this examination nor to other stenographer and typewriter examinations for the field service in the Fourth Civil Service district until February, 1915, unless the needs of the service require otherwise.

Age 18 years or over on the date of examination.

The examination is open to all persons who are citizens of or who owe allegiance to the United States and who meet the requirements.

THE MARYLAND M. P. CONFERENCE

Will Be Held in Washington, D. C., in 1915—Expect Big Attendance.

When the last session of the Maryland Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant church adjourned at Milford, Del., on April 7th last, President John S. Bowers announced that there was no invitation on the table for the entertainment of the 1915 session.

The entire matter was then turned over to the standing district committee with instructions that, in case no invitation had been received by October 1, it would devolve upon the committee to select a place for its next meeting and proceed to arrange for paid entertainment. The question of a paid entertainment for the conference had been up for discussion several times during the last few sessions, but the older ministers have so vigorously protested against the plan that several papers that have been presented with that end in view have failed of passage.

After six months of anxious waiting it was definitely announced Monday by Rev. Frank T. Little, pastor of Alnutt Memorial Methodist Protestant church and chairman of the standing district committee of the Maryland Conference, that the next annual conference of the Methodist Protestant church would be held in Rhode Island Avenue church, Washington, D. C.

While not altogether unexpected, the announcement will be received with universal pleasure among the ministers and laymen of the church, many of whom had already expressed the hope that it would either meet in Baltimore or in Washington in 1915. The Rhode Island church is one of the handsomest and most suitable for such a purpose within the confines of the Maryland Conference district, and its large membership is well known for its hospitable entertainment of banner conferences. Rev. Louis Randall is pastor of the Rhode Island Avenue church.

It is understood that there were several other invitations received by the entertainment committee, one of which was from the church in Delta, Pa., and the other from a church in Baltimore.

The place selected by the committee is considered a central one and will insure a large attendance. According to Dr. Little, chairman of the committee, the invitation from the Washington church came to the committee with the hearty endorsement of the pastors of all churches of the denomination in the capital, and it was unanimously accepted by the committee.

PAYNE-PARSONS

On Wednesday, October 21st, at 2 p. m., a very quiet and pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. C. Parsons, No. 801 Popular Hill avenue, when their daughter, Miss Edna Florence, became the bride of Mr. Ira M. Payne, of Philadelphia. Rev. L. F. Warner of the Methodist Protestant church officiated at the ceremony. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Payne left on the north bound express for Niagara and other northern points.

—The Home Coming services with special music will be held at the M. P. Church at Frandland on Sunday, Oct. 25th at 10:30 a. m. Everybody is cordially invited to be present.

LARGE GATHERING HERE

On Wednesday When Over 100 Bankers Came to Salisbury

The meeting of the Associated Banks of Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester Counties, in this city on Wednesday, October 21, was largely attended, over 150 members of the association being present. A great many of the bankers came from the adjoining counties in automobiles.

The day's program began with the afternoon session. This session was opened by an address of welcome by Capt. E. S. S. Turner, to which a response was made by Col. George M. Upshur of Snow Hill. Papers were then read by Messrs. Wilbur F. Turner, John W. Staton and C. E. Byrd. The principal address of the meeting was delivered by Mr. William W. Allen of Philadelphia, whose topic was "The Work of the American Institute of Banking." The meeting adjourned after the election of officers and the reports of committees. The following officers were elected to serve during the next term:

President, Col. George M. Upshur; vice president, Warren T. Sterling; secretary, H. W. Ruark; treasurer, William E. Bratton. The executive committee consists of the following: William B. Spiva, Wilbur F. Turner and John W. Ennis.

At night a banquet was held at the Peninsula Hotel. The large dining room was well filled and an attractive menu was served by Caterer Phillips. Mr. L. E. Williams was toastmaster of the occasion. Toasts were responded to by Col. Upshur, Snow Hill; Wm. W. Allen, Philadelphia; John B. Parsons, Philadelphia, and James J. Jung of Baltimore. It was a very successful and enjoyable meeting and on all sides were expressions of delight from those present. The meetings were in charge of the following committees:

Entertainment: W. S. Gordy, Jr., chairman; George R. Hill, G. C. Bounds.

Reception: Wilbur F. Turner, chairman; James H. Waller, John P. Wright, Minos H. Davis, T. W. H. White, Jr., S. A. Graham, W. B. Miller, Jay Williams, C. R. Disharoon, W. B. Tighman Jr.

Arrangements: W. S. Gordy, Jr., S. A. Graham, H. James Messick.

Barbers Raise Price

The barbers of Salisbury met during the past week to discuss and arrange prices for their work. As a result of the meeting the price of hair cutting took a raise of 10 cents, which change will be in effect after Nov. 1. After that date those desiring to have their locks shorn will pay 25 cents, instead of the former price of 15 cents. Not only in Salisbury has this change been made, but in other towns of this section. In Cambridge, Snow Hill and other towns of the Shore the barbers have agreed on this uniform price.

Entertainment at Armory

An evening of entertainment awaits those who go to the Armory on Halloween night. A benefit program will be held for Company I, the proceeds of which will be added to the fund for the outfitting of the gymnasium in the Armory basement. Music and dancing will constitute the larger part of the entertainment. Pie and milk will be on sale. Come one and all to the Armory on Halloween night and help with your patronage.

Maryland Poultry Raisers Should Increase Flocks.

Conditions Abroad Promise Heavy Demand for Poultry Products During the Winter.

(Special Correspondence)

College Park, Md., Oct. 23—

In an interview Prof. Roy H. Waite, Poultryman at the Agricultural Experiment Station, urges that poultry keepers in the State aim to increase their production during the coming year owing to conditions abroad. He said in part, "Production has been seriously crippled in a large area of the world and there is going to be a sudden demand for poultry products some time during the coming winter."

Will the Maryland Poultry raiser be prepared to step in and help furnish food for the world? Present low prices cannot long continue. The markets report that the movement of poultry is sluggish and the fact that the prices today are lower than usual at this time of year seem to indicate that poultry is being dumped on the market on account of the rising cost of feed. Hold on to all the pullets and year old hens you can for there is bound to be a reaction, but of course don't over stock and run too much risk of disease.

On account of the present high cost of feeds it will be necessary for you to practice the most rigid economy in the matter of feeding. Economy, however, doesn't always mean cutting down on feed, but it does mean adjusting the outlay and income so that the most profit will be realized. Utilize all available waste products and when you buy, purchase the lower priced feeds, providing their feeding value justifies their use."

"THE VIRGINIAN"

One of the Most Interesting Stories Ever Dramatized Coming to Ulman's.

The story of "The Virginian," a dramatized version of Owen Wister's remarkable novel which will be seen here on Thursday, October 29, at Ulman's, is a tale of love, hate, sacrifice and romance. The Virginian is a young cowboy of exceptional gifts, and wild primitive passions and modern civilized conventions which are continually at war within him, until he meets and falls in love with a pretty Vermont school teacher of superior education and refinement than his own. He has never before been thrown in contact with such women and his rescue of her from a perilous predicament, which is their first meeting, has awakened in him a strain of native fineness that has hitherto had no chance of development. She is attracted by his virility and at the same time repelled by his roughness. Quite against her intentions she is won by him, but not until he has shown himself to be her master in some surprising ways, which with some displays of amazing courage and sacrifice he convinces her of his undying love. The action is fast and filled with surprising and thrilling situations, and is replete with humorous comedy, making a brilliant as well as entertaining evening at the theater.

Powell-Evans Wedding.

Mr. Walter J. Powell and Miss Marian Evans were married at the home of the bride on Wednesday morning at half-past six o'clock, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. B. L. Rhodes, of the Division Street Baptist Church. The parlor, where the ceremony took place, was decorated with flowers and autumn leaves. The bride wore a traveling suit of blue broadcloth and carried bride's roses. She was given away by her brother, Mr. Walter K. Evans, of Washington. Mr. Len Williams attended the groom as best man. After the wedding, the bride and groom left on the 7:30 train for a trip through some of the northern states. They will be at home after November 15, at 222 Camden Avenue. Repairs will be made to the Powell residence on the corner of North Division and West Chestnut streets, after which it will be occupied by the young couple.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Powell are well known in this community. Mr. Powell is one of Salisbury's young business men, being a member of the firm of R. E. Powell and Co. Mrs. Powell is a daughter of the late Sewell T. Evans.

MARDELA NEWS

Last Sunday was Rally Day at the M. P. church here. The church was filled to overflowing morning, afternoon and night. The speakers present were Rev. Mr. Krause, Mr. Atwood Bennett. They delivered very instructive and impressive addresses, which were highly appreciated by both pastor and congregation. The music rendered by the choir was enjoyed by all.

Dr. and Mrs. Betson are spending the month of October with friends in Greensborough and Wilmington. Mrs. Ida Langedale entertained last Friday afternoon and evening Mrs. Chas. E. Williams, Mrs. I. R. Jones, Mrs. W. S. Sharpley, Mrs. W. S. Lane, Mrs. G. W. Phillips, Mrs. L. A. Wilson, Mrs. G. W. Donaldson, Mrs. Anna Robertson. After spending a pleasant afternoon and evening with Mrs. Langedale the party left for their homes, feeling that the heavy downpour of rain was no obstacle in getting to and from Marдела to Salisbury, as the mode of conveyance is so convenient.

We are sorry to report that Mr. Bratton has been on the sick list this week.

Resolutions of Respect

At a meeting of the Men's Club of St. Peter's church, Salisbury, held October 12, 1914, a committee was appointed to draft a suitable minute on the death of one of its members. The Men's Clubs is called upon to mourn the death of Mr. Thomas Perry, who died suddenly June 17, 1914. The deceased had endeavored himself to every member of the club by his genial manner, his readiness to accept every task committed to him. His simple and unaffected piety was characteristic of a life of devotion to the services of the church of which he was a life-long member.

His wise counsel and willing aid in the affairs of the parish will be deeply missed by his fellow clubmen and co-workers.

Keenly realizing our loss, and in profound sympathy with the bereaved, we order that the above be spread upon the minutes of the club, and copies be sent to the family of the late Mr. Perry and to the local papers.

New Drug Store Opened

The A. B. Burris Drug Co. opened its new drug store on the corner of Main and Dock streets this week and are prepared to give the public prompt and satisfactory service. Dr. J. Ferris Belt, a graduate druggist, will attend to the prescription work. The new store is up to date in all respects. A full line of tobacco will be carried as well as the famous Samoset chocolates. One of the largest soda fountains in this section is also in operation to supply all the latest fountain drinks.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Business Transacted at the City Hall Monday Night Last.

The city Council in session Monday night granted building permits to G. J. Hearne, coal and wood house on Park street; Jerry Morris, porch on East Church street.

The clerk was instructed to pay Mr. U. W. Dickerson $4.60 as witness in the L. A. Parson case.

Councilman Parker and Supervisor Serman were appointed a committee to examine Spring street and report on same at next meeting.

Mrs. Louisa Collier was appointed a delegate to represent Salisbury at the meeting of the Federated Charities held at Easton, Md.

The clerk was instructed to refund to Mrs. Martha Perdue the sum of $25 paid for tapping sewer, but which was not tapped, and to pay to the heirs of Martin Henry the sum of $89 proceeds from the sale of property belonging to said Henry for taxes in 1909.

The city solicitor was instructed to take up the matter of curbing being done by Contractor Coulbourn, with a view of getting a more satisfactory finishing of the work.

The report of Chief Disharoon of the fines collected for the month of September was received, showing $41 collected. Same was ordered placed on file.

HIRONS-WALLS.

At 7 o'clock last Sunday morning, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Walls on West Chestnut street, Mr. John Wilbur Hirons and Miss Bernice May Walls were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Frank Talmage, D. D., pastor of the Christian church of Roswell, New Mexico, an uncle of the bride, who came from the far west especially to perform this ceremony. A wedding breakfast followed the marriage and the happy couple motored to Chestertown, where they took a train for a tour north.

The young couple are well known in this city. The groom is at the head of the Beacom Business College in Salisbury. The bride graduated from the college in 1912 and is one of the assistants to Mr. Hirons.

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT

AMENDMENT to Section 44 of Article 4 of the Constitution, subtitle "Sheriffs".

SECTION 44. There shall be elected in each county in every second year, one person resident in said county, above the age of twenty-five years, and at least five years preceding his election, a citizen of the State, to the office of Sheriff. He shall hold office for two years, and until his successor is duly elected and qualified, shall be ineligible for two years thereafter; shall give such bond, exercise such powers and perform such duties as now are or may hereafter be fixed by law. In case of a vacancy by death, resignation, refusal to serve or neglect to qualify or give bond, or by disqualification, or removal from the county the Governor shall appoint a person to be Sheriff for the remainder of the official term.

In the City of Baltimore at the General Election to be held in the year 1915 and every four years thereafter, there shall be elected in said City of Baltimore, one person, who shall be a resident of said City above the age of twenty-five years, and who shall have been at least five years preceding his election a citizen of this State, to the office of Sheriff. He shall hold his office for four years, and until his successor is duly elected and qualified; shall be eligible for re-election; shall give such bond, exercise such powers and perform such duties as now are or may hereafter be fixed by law. The Sheriff elected in and for the City of Baltimore in November, 1913, shall be eligible for re-election.

In case of vacancy by death, resignation, refusal to serve or neglect to qualify or give bond, or by disqualification or removal from said City, the Governor shall appoint a person to be Sheriff for the remainder of the official term. The Sheriff hereafter elected and the Sheriff elected in and for the City of Baltimore on the 7th day of November, 1913, shall from the date of his qualification receive such salary as may be fixed by law, not to exceed six thousand dollars per year in any case, and such expense necessary to the conduct of his office, as may be fixed by law, such salaries and expenses to be paid in such manner and at such times as may be prescribed by law.

THE YOUNG MEDICO

By CLARENCE PUGH.

"There goes Doc Rogers up to the Wheeler place," remarked one gossip of Tarboro to another.

"I guess the Doc will be glad to have his bill paid," remarked the other. "That Miss Lucy's always ailing, ain't she?"

Dr. Frank Rogers, the young medico of Tarboro, was in no very pleasant state of mind as he dismounted from his vehicle in front of the ornate, luxurious, but rather unattractive mansion on the hill. The Wheelers were a wealthy New York family who made Tarboro their summer residence. They were the summer despots of the little town, in which old Cyrus Wheeler had large interests. And the doctor knew that there was nothing the matter with Miss Lucy.

He was shown into the living room, where a pretty, dark-haired girl lay on the lounge. Though she was such as to cause any ordinary observer to look twice at her, the mouth drooped petulantly, and there was a dissatisfied look on the features.

Her mother, a society woman of the common type, welcomed the doctor with cold cordiality.

"I can't imagine what is the matter with Lucy," she said. "She has been under the care of the best specialists for years. Can't you tell me frankly, doctor?"

"Yes, madam," answered Doctor Rogers sharply—and his tone was not the less sharp in that he had felt himself unusually interested in the girl, "she needs to occupy her mind and body."

"What do you mean?" questioned the elder woman, sharply.

"She is an imaginary invalid, Mrs. Wheeler," replied the young man boldly. "I should be false to my duty if I did not tell you so. There is nothing at all the matter with her except boredom and distaste for mental and physical occupation."

"Why, how—how—dare you!" exclaimed the girl, sitting bolt upright up on the lounge.

"I seem to have dared successfully, for already you are looking better, Miss Wheeler," answered Doctor Rogers. "You need stimulation. Plenty of exercise, less eating, and something to occupy yourself with."

And he pointed to a lurid society novel upon the lounge.

"The man's a perfect boor!" declared the girl, furiously.

"I am a physician, and I treat the sick, not the well," replied the young man.

"Well, I guess you won't have many more people to treat, sick or well," answered Mrs. Wheeler, significantly. "My husband has a few friends in Tarboro, and he will see to that. Now you can take your fee and go."

"There will be no fee because there were no services," replied Frank Rogers, bowing himself out of the room.

Lucy Wheeler had never been crossed in her life before. What added to her anger was the fact that she believed the doctor had discovered her motive in sending for him. For she had been distinctly impressed by his appearance and it was to while away an idle hour that she had summoned him to attend her for her imaginary complaint.

A woman scorned has been the same since immemorial time. All the energies of the Wheeler family were devoted to making life in Tarboro impossible for him. Cyrus Wheeler, hearing a garbled story to the effect that Rogers had insulted his daughter, vowed that he would drive the young man out of town.

The busy season was the summer. During the winter the few cases requiring medical attention were mostly handled by the older practitioners. Frank Rogers hung on that winter hoping that his relentless enemies would have forgotten their grudge when the next summer came; but it was soon evident that they had returned bent upon giving him the coup de grace. Lucy Wheeler cut him dead in the street; her mother tittered when she passed him. By July it seemed as though the young man would have to pull up stakes and get out.

But with July came the crash of a dozen banks in the East, and Cyrus Wheeler's capital was wiped out in a day. Worse than that, he was caught short on the exchange. He had just figured out that the sale of all his holdings and property, including the big house, would about liquidate his debts and leave him free to start life again when a fit of apoplexy seized him.

Frank Rogers was passing at the foot of the hill when the terrified mother, who had been unable to locate any of the other physicians on the telephone, came rushing out and summoned him.

A brief examination was sufficient of recovery. Frank stayed with him all that night until the next morning, when he died. Then he remained to care for the prostrated mother. And for days thereafter he attended her at the big house, from which the servants had all fled when they realized that there was no money to pay them.

Frank Rogers was the only friend the Wheelers had in those dark days, for malice breeds malice, and the sentiment of the town, which had been maliciously set against the young doctor, now automatically swung round against the Wheelers in their poverty.

"I don't know how to thank you for your conduct, doctor," faltered Lucy one day. She was looking very different now from in the old days. There were no novels and hard work about the house had brought the color into her cheeks.

"You know—we may not be able to pay you for a little while," she continued. "We don't know where we are going to get any money. The house has to be sold next week. Mother is going to live with her sister, but I suppose I shall have to try to find some employment."

Frank felt that he was more than repaid by the privilege of seeing Lucy every day—two or three times a day, for he was indefatigable in his attendance. People in Tarboro began to speak of it in their gossiping way.

And then a second catastrophe occurred, for one morning Mrs. Wheeler called her daughter and, when the girl arrived, tried to speak, could not speak, and died. She had been unable to survive the shock of her husband's death and bankruptcy.

A week later Lucy Rogers stood in her traveling dress upon the steps of the house that she was never to enter again. At her feet was a suitcase.

"I have waited for you—to say goodbye," she said, when the doctor called.

"Yes, I am going away. You have suffered a good deal from us Wheelers, but we are going out of your memory with my departure, and—won't you forgive me and try to think better of me?"

"But I don't want you to go," stammered the young man. "You have come to fill my life so much—won't you think about remaining permanently in it?" he continued.

Then each of them understood that it had not been really hatred. And, though she went away, she returned two months later as Frank Rogers' wife. It was a very happy homecoming, in spite of the shadows that lay behind them.

TAX DITCH NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given to all taxpayers and persons interested, that the County Commissioners of Wicomico County will take up for hearing and final ratification at their office in Salisbury, Md., the report of the tax ditch commissioners appointed to lay out a tax ditch known as the Gordy tax ditch in Parsons Election District, Wicomico County, Maryland, at 3 o'clock p. m., Tuesday, October 13th, 1914.

The proposed ditch to commence at the Gordy mill pond on the north side thereof, on land of Zeno Tingle, and run through the lands of said Zeno Tingle, W. L. Morris, J. M. Morris, Clayton C. Parker and others and to the land of Josiah Hosmer and others.

By order of the County Commissioners of Wicomico County, DANIEL B. CANNON.

SOME DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES

The fair minded voter who refuses to give his support to any party until he is convinced that its present policies are such as will best conserve the country's welfare, and its present leaders men of high moral character, sincere, honest and capable, will do well to study the accomplishments of the Democratic party since it was entrusted with power.

It was the belief of the Democrats that the small business men were being crushed by the overwhelming power of strong groups of men banded together for the purpose of controlling the markets. They further believed that these trusts were charging the consumer more than a fair price for their outputs, after gaining control.

To remedy these conditions certain remedial and constructive legislation was formulated and passed.

The first of these was the tariff; it being held that while the tariff itself did not materially add to the cost of various necessities of life, by giving certain preference, it did provide the foundation upon which the gigantic monopolies were able to build and thrive.

In order to take this preference given to special interests away and thus strike a body blow to the trusts themselves, a new tariff law was enacted which was designed to provide a sufficient income to run the business of the government and at the same time low enough to minimize the support long given to special interest.

Unfortunately for all the European war has given rise to such unusual conditions here that it is impossible to give any idea as to whether or not this low tariff will accomplish its purposes without at the same time upsetting business.

It is useless to argue this question for the admitted business depression of the present, will, by the Democrats be attributed to the war, while the Republicans will claim it as a natural result of tariff meddling. The question of revenue will also be argued the same way—the Democrats claiming that the war caused less goods to be shipped in, thus lowering the tariff receipts, while our Republican friends will claim that the necessity of passing another revenue measure is the result of the lower tariff. Argument on these points is futile for neither side can prove its case. The only appeal to the voter is to his sense of fair play, and to ask him to give the low tariff a fair trial under normal and natural conditions before condemnation.

But it was not only necessary to knock the foundation of the trusts away, but as they had become so strongly entrenched, it was necessary to enact certain other legislation, aimed at the unfair methods of market control, used by monopolies.

To this end the Clayton anti-trust bill was passed, and is generally recognized as a fair bill which though as yet untried, will probably bring good results.

It was however not only necessary to pass these two bills aimed at the monopolies, but the power of controlling the money market was also in their hands, and they could crush at will any independent industry that dared to contest the field. To remedy this was enacted what today is regarded as one of the greatest constructive pieces of legislation passed in generations—the currency bill.

This bill is designed to open the money market to any man, be he big or little, provided he is entitled to credit. It is also designed to make a uniform and stable financial system in this country.

uneasiness to students of finance for generations.

It will be admitted that the plan to relieve this country from high prices; to break the hold of unfair trusts and monopolies; to protect the small borrower from being squeezed by his powerful business competitor; to place the finances of this country on a safe and stable basis; is one much to be desired—if safe and feasible.

The Democrats have made their try and their plans seem reasonable and safe, and the voter should be willing to give it a fair and square trial, for if it works it means the country's liberation from trust oppression, and gives the small business man a chance to fight without having to meet unfair competition with a competitor fortified with tariff protection, trade understandings, and money control.

It is too early too say that they have either failed or succeeded, the only thing to be argued is the "probability" of success or failure.

We believe the objects in view are "consummations" much to be desired. We believe the bills have been carefully thought out, carefully constructed and will be honestly and efficiently executed.

The voters of this county will not make any mistake in deciding to give the Democratic party a vote of confidence, both for what it has done and for what it yet has to do. And it will be well to remember that in its whole program the Democratic party has no desire to hurt any legitimate business, be it little or big—it only wants the little fellow to have a fair deal. Nor will any business that prospers now on its own merit be injured, only those in business that depend upon unfair methods, or unjust protection will suffer.

CLOSE-FISTED REYNOLDS

By GEORGE E. STREETER.

(Copyright.)

One of the odd people of his town, and the subject of much discussion, was "close-fisted Reynolds," as he was called—a man supposed to be well-off, but looked upon as extremely mean. Like a lot of other folk, he had his good points, but was evidently much misunderstood.

Every man has a hobby, and that of James Reynolds related to the poor and needy. He had a theory (not quite his own) that the execution of the poor, by some painless method, would settle forever the whole question of pauperism.

If poverty were made a crime, punishable with death, a poor person would soon become a rarity. Such was his idea.

But as he found that the world, however anxious it might be to adopt such a drastic measure, was not yet quite ready to do so, he carefully considered other means.

Being strictly a theorist, he gave away nothing to the distressed, because he looked upon indiscriminate charity as a huge mistake, and considered the existing alms-giving organizations as dismal failures.

He was enthusiastic in the pursuit of knowledge of the poor and their habits.

When a hungry widow with eight or nine children called upon him, he would give them all a warm welcome, take down a big book, enter their names, ages, diseases, pedigree, etc.; express the greatest sympathy; warn them against extravagance, and the pomps and vanities of this wicked world; then promise the fullest investigation.

Mr. Reynolds was just as hearty in receiving a call from the ordinary tramp of the day. Such a one would be invited to a seat by the stove, and his history, secured by means of much questioning, would be entered into one of the books.

The caller would be asked for his views on the tariff, trusts, single tax, etc. After keeping the poor fellow on the rack until every tavern had been closed, Mr. Reynolds would send him out in the cold world, moneyless.

Reynolds, assisted by his wife, formed a "Girls Club," and got the members to practice scrubbing, sewing and other household pleasures, at his own home. He took down their names, etc., etc., and sent them away with his blessing. But this organization was short-lived.

One day there called at the Reynolds homestead a respectfully dressed man, selling collar buttons. He was greeted by the owner as though he were a long-lost brother, and seated in one of the easiest chairs.

Mr. Reynolds got down to the seventeenth volume of the "Mendicant Register," and asked the weary traveler all about his ancestors, habits, age, and so on, as usual, but when he wanted to weigh the peddler, the latter evidently thought it time to call a halt. He plainly told his host that it was not the year for taking the census, intimating strongly, in oddly shaped sentences, that he was there entirely in the shirt-fastening interest.

Mr. Reynolds explained, by way of reply, that only the previous day he had bought no less than three collar buttons at the shop, which would last him for some months to come, and that his wife did not use such things.

He then started in to compare the present times with the days of the old Greeks and Romans, when they fastened their shirts with rope. At this the collar button vendor got vexed and saw that he had been merely the victim of statistics.

His sense of humor being dull, he forthwith proceeded to handle "Brother" Reynolds rather roughly. Having placed the statistician on the floor, he sat on him, took away his watch and other valuables, and, after kicking the dog, departed.

In time the editor of the "Mendicant Register" came to himself. After adjusting his clothing he sat down to think things over.

Had he made a mistake? Was it true that his efforts to learn all about the poor—their troubles, their views and their aims—had been in vain?

The pugilistic collar-button salesman had told him some plain truths, and had brought them right home in a rather unpleasant manner.

As a result of a long, serious "think," Reynolds finally came to the conclusion that he would let the poor work out their own salvation. As for his books of record, he removed them to the cellar, and they were used as fuel for his furnace.

Slight Formalities.

"There's no use of you hanging around here unless you're willing to work," said the energetic woman.

"Lady," replied Plodding Pete, "I'm willing to work. But I belong to the Association of Industrious Inspectors. If you'll tell me what chores you want done and how much you'll pay, I'll go to town and ask our secretary to O. K. the contract. Only you'll have to advance me $7.44 to pay the expenses of the trip."

MONUMENTS

In erecting a monument, one should remember that it is not a mere mass of stone, but a memorial of honor that is to perpetuate the memory of the departed. Therefore, select the material to be had. Look to its beauty, design, and the quality of material. Many years in the monument business has taught us that good monuments cannot be made at cut prices, but it has also taught us how to make the best monument at the lowest possible price.

We have on hand a complete assortment of designs, which we place at your disposal. We use nothing but the best stones, come in and look at our stock of monuments built of Winnabow Blue Granite, "The Silk of the Trade." The ideal monumental granite.

WAS MISERABLE COULDN'T STAND

Tesifies She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lackawanna, N. Y.—"After my first child was born I felt very miserable and could not stand on my feet. My sister-in-law wished me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and my nerves became firm, appetite good, step elastic, and I lost that weak, tired feeling. That was six years ago and I have had three fine healthy children since. For female troubles I always take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it works like a charm. I do all my own work."—Mrs. A. F. KREMER, 1574 Electric Avenue, Lackawanna, N. Y.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard remedy for female ills.

Women who suffer from these distressing ills peculiar to their sex should be convinced of the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health by the many genuine and truthful testimonials we are constantly publishing in the newspapers.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Coins of Small Value.

Doubtless the smallest coin in the world circulates in the Malay peninsula, simply a thin water made from the resinous juice of a tree, and has current value of about 1-10,000th of a cent. In the southern parts of Russia the peasants use a coin of such small value that a quarter of a million of them are worth no more than $1.25. The old Japanese money was worth 1-112th of an American cent. In Portugal the reis is the lowest standard of value, but no 1-reis pieces are coined. A 3-reis piece is equivalent to 6-100ths of a cent.

seats, but around me on the platform. It will be more intimate. "That's grand!" came in chorus. They did not bother about chairs, but seated themselves on the floor around Marta's skirts.

The church clock boomed out its deliberate strokes through ten, the house set for the lesson, and all counted them—one—two—three. Marta was thinking what a dismal little effort theirs was, and yet she was very happy, tremblingly happy in her distraction and excitement, that they had not waited for her at the door of the chapel in vain.

She announced that there would be no talk this morning; they would only say their oath. Repeating in concert the pledge to the boys and girls of other lands, the childish voices peculiarly sweet and harmonious in contrast to the raucous and uneven sounds of foreboding from the street, they came in due course to the words of the concession that the oath made to militancy:

"If an enemy tries to take my land—"

"Children—I—" Marta interrupted with a sense of wonder and shock. They paused and looked at her questioningly. "I had almost forgotten that part!" she breathed confusedly.

"That's the part that makes all we're doing against the Grays right!" put in Jacky Verther promptly. "As I wrote it for you! I shall appeal to his sense of justice and reason with him!"

Jaws dropped and eyes bulged, for above the sounds of the street rose from the distance the unmistakable crackling of rifle fire which, as they listened, spread and increased in volume.

"Go on—on to the end of the oath! It will take only a moment," said Marta resolutely. "It isn't much, but it's the best we can do!"

CHAPTER IX.

The Baptism of Fire.

All the landscape in front of Fracasse's company seemed to have been deserted, no moving figures were anywhere in sight; no sign of the enemy's infantry.

Faintly the town clock was heard striking the hour. From eight to nine and nine to ten Fracasse's men waited; waited until the machine was ready and Westering should throw in the clutch; waited until the troops were in place for the first move before he hurled his battalions forward.

They did not know how the captain at their back received his orders; they only heard the note of the whistle, with a command familiar to a trained instinct on the edge of anticipation. It released a spring in their nerve-centers. They responded as the wheels respond when the throttle is opened. Jumping to their feet they broke into a run, bodies bent, heads down, like the peppered silhouettes that faced Westering's desk. What they had done repeatedly in drills and maneuvers they were now doing in war, mechanically as marionettes.

"Come on! The bullet is not made that can get me! Come on!" cried the giant Eugene Aronson.

Nearly all felt the exhilaration of movement in company. Then came the sound that generations had drilled for without hearing; the sound that summons the imagination of man in the thought of how he will feel and act when he hears it; the sound that is everywhere like the song snatches of bees driven whizzing through the air.

"That's it! We're under fire! We're under fire!" flashed a crooked lightning recognition of the sound through every brain.

There was no sign of the enemy; no telling where the bullets came from.

Whish-whish! Thip-whip! The refrain gripped Peterkin's imagination with an unseen hand. He seemed to be suffocating. He wanted to throw himself down and hold his hands in front of his head. While Pilzer and Aronson were not thinking, only running, Peterkin was thinking with the rapidity of a man falling from a high building. He was certain only that he was bound to strike ground.

"An inch is as good as a mile!" He recoiled the captain's teaching. "Only one of a thousand bullets fired that he might watch how each man used his rifle, he drew back of the line, his slim body erect as he rested on one knee, his head level with the other heads while he fingered his whistle. The instant that Eugene Aronson sprang over the white post a blast from the whistle began the war.

It was a signal, too, for Stransky to play the part he had planned; to make the speech of his life. His six feet of stature shot to its feet with a Jack-in-the-box abruptness, under the impulse of a mighty and reckless passion.

"Men, stop firing!" he howled thunderously. "Stop firing on your brothers! Like you, they are only the pawns of the ruling class, who keep us all pawns in order that they may have champagne and cavare. Comrades, I'll lead you! Comrades, we'll take a white flag and go down to meet our comrades and we'll find that they think as we do! I'll lead you!"

The appeal was drowned in the crackling of the rifles working as regularly as punch-machines in a factory. Every soldier was seeing only his sight and the running figures under it. Mechanically and automatically, training had been projected into action, anticipation into realization. A spectator might as well have called to a man in a hundred-yard dash to stop running, to an oarsman in a race to jump out of his shell.

The company sergeant sprang for Stransky with an oath, but Stransky was in no mood to submit. He felled the sergeant with a blow and, recklessly defiant, stared at Dellarme, while the men, steadily firing, were still oblivious of the scene. The sergeant, stunned, rose to his knees and reached for his revolver. Dellarme, bent over to keep his head below the crest, had already drawn his as he hastened toward them.

"Will you get down? Will you take your place with your rifle?" demanded Dellarme.

Stransky laughed thunderously in scorn. He was handsome, titanic, and barbed, with his huge shoulders stretching his blouse, which fell loosely around his narrow hips, while the flat that had felled the sergeant was still clenched.

"No!" said Stransky. "You won't kill much if you kill me and you'd kill less if you shot yourself! God Almighty! Do you think I'm afraid? No—afraid!"

His eyes in a bloodshot glare, as uncompromising as those of a bull in an arena watching the next move of the red cape of the matador, regarded Dellarme, who hesitated in admiration of the picture of human force before him. But the old sergeant, smarting under the insult of the blow, his sandstone features mottled with red patches, had no compunctions of this order. He was ready to act as executioner.

"If you don't want to shoot, I can! An example—the law! There's no other way of dealing with him! Give the word!" he said to Dellarme.

Stransky laughed, now in strident cynicism. Dellarme still hesitated, recollecting Lanstron's remark. He pictured Stransky in a last stand in a redoubt, and every soldier was as precious to him as a piece of gold to a miser.

"One ought to be enough to kill me if you're going to do it to slow music," said Stransky. "You might as well kill me as the poor fools that your poor fools are trying to!"

Another breathless speech; a breath released from a bar that seemed to have come straight from hell. The fire control officer of a regiment of Gray artillery on the plain, scanning the landscape for the origin of the rifle-fire which was leaving many fallen in the wake of the charge of the Gray infantry, had seen a figure on the knoll. "How kind! Thank you!" his thought spoke faster than words. No need of range-finding! The range to every possible battery or infantry position around La Tir was already marked on his map. He passed the word to his guns.

The burst of their first shrapnel-shell blinded all three actors in the scene on the crest of the knoll with its ear-splitting crack and the force of its concussion threw Stransky down beside the sergeant. Dellarme, as his vision cleared, had just time to see Stransky jerk his hand up to his temple, where there was a red spot, before another shell burst, a little to the rear. This was harmless, as a shrapnel's shower of fragments and bullets carry forward from the point of explosion. But the next burst in front of the line. The doctor's period of idleness was over. One man's rifle shot up as his spine was broken by a jagged piece of shrapnel jacket. Now there were too many shells to watch them individually.

"It's all right—all right, men!" Dellarme called again, assuming his cheery smile. "It takes a lot of shrapnel to kill anybody. Our batteries will soon answer!"

His voice was unheard, yet its spirit was felt. The men knew through their training that there was no use of dodging and that their best protection was an accurate fire of their own.

Stransky had half risen, a new kind of savagery dawning on his features as he regained his wits. With inverted eyes he regarded the red ends of his fingers, held in line with the bridge of his nose. He felt of the wound again, now that he was less dizzy. It was only a scratch and he had been knocked down like a beef in an abattoir by an unseen enemy, on whom he could not lay hands! Deafeningly, the shrapnel jackets continued to crack with "ukung-sh-ukung-sh" as the swift break of the shrapnel missiles spread. The guns in war ever kills a man—but he was certain that he had heard a million already. He looked around to find that he was still keeping up with Eugene and felt the thrill of the bravery of fellowship at sight of the giant's flushed, confident face reveling in the spirit of a charge. And then, just then, Eugene convulsively threw up his arms, dropped his rifle, and whirled on his heel. As he went down his hand clutched at his left breast and came away red and dripping. After one wild backward glance, Peterkin plunged ahead.

"Eugene!" Hugo Mallin had stopped and bent over Eugene in the supreme instinct of that terrible second, supporting his comrade's head.

"The bullet is not made—" Eugene whispered, the ruling passion strong to the last. A flicker of the eyelids, a gurgle in the throat, and he was dead.

"Here, you are not going to get out this way!" Fracasse shouted, in the irritation of haste, slapping Hugo with his sword. "Go on! That's hospital-corps work!"

Hugo had a glimpse of the captain's rigid features and a last one of Eugene's, white and still and yet as if he were about to speak his favorite boast, then he hurried on, his side glance showing other prostrate forms. One form a few yards away half rose to call "Hospital!" and fell back, struck mortally by a second bullet.

"That's what you get if you forget instructions," said Fracasse with no sense of brutality, only professional exasperation. Keep down, you wounded men!" he shouted at the top of his voice.

The colonel of the 125th had not looked for immediate resistance. He had told Fracasse's men to occupy the knoll expeditiously. But by the common impulse of military training, no less than in answer to the whistle's call, in face of the withering fire they dropped to earth at the base of a knoll, where Hugo threw himself down at full length in his place in line next to Peterkin.

"Fire pointblank at the crest in front of you! I saw a couple of men standing up there!" called Fracasse. "Fire fast! That's the way to keep down their fire—pointblank, I tell you! You're firing into the sky! I want to see more dust kicked up. Fire fast! We'll have them out of there soon! They're only an outpost."

Hugo was firing vaguely, like a man in a dream. Pilzer was shooting to kill. His eye had the steely gleam of his rifle sight and the liver patch on his cheek was a deeper hue as he sought to avenge Eugene's death.

Drowned by the racket of their own fire, not even Peterkin was hearing the whish-whish of the bullets from Dellarme's company now. He did not know that the blacksmith's son, who was the fourth man from him, lay with his chin on his rifle stock and a tiny trickle of blood from a hole in his forehead, running down the bridge of his nose.

Young Dellarme, new to his captain's rank, watching the plain through his glasses, saw the movement of mounted officers to the rear of the 125th as a reason for summoning his men.

"Creep up! Don't show yourselves! Creep up—creep up—creep up!" he kept repeating as they crawled forward on their stomachs. "And no one is to fire until the command comes!"

Hugging the cover of the ridge of fresh earth which they had thrown up the previous night, they watched the white posts. Stransky, who had been ruminatively silent all the morning, was in his place, but he was not looking at the enemy. Cautiously, to avoid a reprimand, he raised his head to enable him to glance along the line. All the faces seemed drawn and clayish.

"They don't want to fight! They're just here because they're ordered here and haven't the character to defy authority," he thought. "The heaven is working! My time is coming!"

For Dellarme the minute had come when all his training was to be put to a test. The 3aves on the other side of the white posts were rising. He was to prove by the way he directed a company of infantry in action whether or not he was worthy of his captain's rank. He smiled cheerily, in order

Finally Found Relief

Having suffered for twenty-one years with a pain in my side, I finally found relief in Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. Injections of morphine were my only relief for short periods of time. I became so sick that I had to undergo a surgical operation in New Orleans, which benefited me for two years. When the same pain came back one day I was so sick that I gave up hopes of living. A friend advised me to try your Swamp-Root and I at once commenced using it. The first bottle did me so much good that I purchased two more bottles. I am now on my second bot. and am feeling like a new woman. I passed a gravel stone as large as a big red bean and several small ones. I have not had the least feeling of pain since taking your Swamp-Root and I feel it my duty to recommend this great medicine to all suffering humanity. Gratefully yours, MRS. JOSEPH CONSTANCE, Rapides Par. Echo, La. Personally appeared before me, this 15th day of July, 1911, Mrs. Joseph Constance, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact. WM. MORROW, Notary Public.

Use More Cotton
America First

Sixty days ago the South was jubilant over the prospect of a magnificent yield of fifteen million bales. Then the great powers clashed and the rich cotton export market was snatched away.

Our first duty as Americans, is to teach ourselves and others to USE MORE COTTON. Let us work to so greatly increase the consumption of cotton that all the spindles in all our cotton mills will be kept at work day and night. This will give courage to our mill owners to increase their capacity and go after the export trade in earnest.

It should not be that American cotton, sent to Europe in the raw state, made up in the manufactured form in the mills of England and Germany, and by them exported to Asia and South America.

The opportunity is here to put American men and women at work in American mills making into goods for all the world to wear and use the cotton grown in American fields.

We will do our part by giving to the cause the greater part of our profits on many items of cotton goods, during the first week of November when we hold a great

Cotton Goods Sale

Everything made of COTTON will be sold during that week at prices so close to cost of production that you can afford to buy heavily for future needs, and so while helping boost the South, help your own savings account as well.

Next week will give you the details, watch for them.

SPECIAL TO WOMEN

The most economical, cleansing and germicidal of all antiseptics is

Paxtine

A soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed.

As a medicinal antiseptic for douches in treating catarrh, inflammation or ulceration of nose, throat, and that caused by feminine ills it has no equal. For ten years the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. has recommended Paxtine in their private correspondence with women, which proves its superiority. Women who have been cured say it is "worth its weight in gold." At drug stores. 50c. large box, or by mail. The Paxton Toilet Co. Boston, Mass.

Infection and Insect Bites Dangerous

Mosquitoes, flies and other insects, which breed quickly in garbage pails, pools of stagnant water, barns, musty places, etc., are carriers of disease. Every time they bite you, they inject poison into your system from which some dread disease may result. Get a bottle of Solan's Liniment. It is antiseptic and a few drops will neutralize the infection caused by insect bites or rusty nails. Solan's Liniment disinfects Cuts, Bruises and Sores. You cannot afford to be without it in your home. Money back if not satisfied. Only 25c. at your Druggist.

A High Opinion

"That's the highest quality paint made," said a customer of ours, "and it has proven to be the cheapest and the best." Our paint meets all competition successfully with quality—the high quality that makes it dollars cheaper than the other kind. Paint that lasts last lasts best— isn't that so?

BUSINESS METHODS SPELL PROFIT FOR FARMERS

Should Improve Production By Use of Simple Tests in Co-operation With the Country School.

J. E. METZGER,
Maryland Agricultural College.

It is estimated that the average cow produces only about 4,000 pounds of milk and 150 pounds of butter fat per year. The cows from herds, where some attention has been given to selection, breeding and care, produce on an average from 5,000 to 8,000 pounds of milk and from 200 to 300 pounds of butter fat annually.

The important question to each farmer is how can he determine what each cow is doing? Only three things are necessary, a circular spring balance, record sheet and a testing outfit. The first two should be owned by each farmer since they may be had at a small cost, and the last should be purchased by the school district and placed in the local school room.

The making of the test for butter fat is quite simple, and may be done very accurately by boys and girls of the sixth and seventh grades. This would make a very valuable school exercise for one day in each month. In schools where agriculture is not taught it could be made a part of the work of the physiology class. Each boy and girl should learn how to make the test quickly and accurately and should be given school credit for the work done. The results obtained from the test will make valuable lessons in arithmetic, language and sanitation, and what is more important, it will give the boy or girl a new interest in the farm business. In addition, the patron of the school will be receiving monthly valuable information regarding his herd.

The apparatus necessary to make the test is:

- 1 dozen test bottles.
- 1 acid measure.
- 1 pair of dividers.
- 1 tester (8 bottles).
- 1 pipette.
- A supply of 90 per cent. pure sulphuric acid.
- A gallon kettle in which to heat water.

This is only one of the many ways in which the school can be of valuable service to the community. While the school is not in session, one of the boys or girls may be engaged to make the tests at home, and be paid a reasonable amount for the service. Full directions for testing milk for butter fat will be sent on application to the Agricultural College, College Park, Maryland.

TURKEY SEASON.

ROY H. WAITE,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.
At this season of the year when shipping poultry to market, one often has occasion to know the size coop to use and the number it will carry properly. The following table is based on the information given in posters put out by the Maryland Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Cut it out and keep in a convenient place for future reference.

One of the best places to store vegetables is in a cellar with an earth floor and without the usually ever-present furnace. This, or some modification of it, is used almost always for the storage of such vegetables as white potatoes, turnips, carrots, parsnips, celery and in fact, anything that requires cool or moist conditions. An earth floor is a necessity for vegetables that must be kept from wilting. Parsnips, carrots and turnips are vegetables of a class that will quickly if placed in a dry atmosphere. On the other hand, sweet and white potatoes and onions do better and retain their quality longer in a drier air.

Farmers Should Raise Well-Bred Horses

Should Plan To Meet European Demand—Fall Breeding Recommended.

R. H. RUFFNER,
Maryland Agricultural College.

To meet the probable European demand for horses during the next few years, Maryland farmers may well turn their attention to the possibilities in raising well-bred horses, although they are not advised to undertake the business too hurriedly or to too great an outlay of capital for breeding stock. It is urged, however, that the farm work should be done whenever possible by good mares which should be bred to good stallions. Only horses of first quality may be profitably raised today.

A GOOD MOTHER.

Interior horses are a drug on the market, and their production is to be discouraged as much as the production of good horses should be encouraged.

There is no better time than the present for the ambitious farmer to breed his good mares with a view to supplying the market that the next few years will open up to him. Some may no doubt object to fall breeding. As a matter of fact, the fall is a better time for breeding a work mare than the spring. The colt dropped a year from now will not, it is true, be on pasture for some months. On the other hand, he will be suckling his dam at a time when she is not as hard worked as she is in the open season.

The colt also during this time depends far more on its dam for its nourishment than on what feed it can pick up. By the time he is ready for grain and hay feeding the winter will be well over and the spring pasturage will be coming on at the very time when the growing colt needs it the most in making growth. The dam at this time also is needed for heavy farm work, yet the colt will not suffer as he would when still a few weeks old if his mother is overworked or not quite up to her best condition.

Most of our horses must be produced by the small farmer rather than the owner of a breeding farm. Such a farmer cannot always afford to give the dam as good a chance as she should have for giving her offspring the very best of nourishment. This plan avoids to a great degree any setbacks to the colt or loss of the use of the mare at a busy time. It also enables many farmers whose main business is grain production to breed a few well-bred workers, that will pay well for the time and effort expended on their raising.

GET RID OF ROUP IN YOUR FLOCK
ROY H. WAITE,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.
A number of cases of roup have been reported recently. The immediate cause of this disease is one or more of a number of different bacterial organisms. It is probable that most of these germs are present and available to the fowls at all times. As a rule, however, they cannot get a foothold and a chance to put in their deadly work until the birds become weakened in some way so that they cannot ward off the attacks. Drafts, dampness, sudden changes in temperature, faulty feeding, uncleanness, lice, and mites, in fact, anything which depresses the birds, tends to weaken them and at the opportune time, the germs get in their work. After the bacteria have gone through a few birds they gain virulence or strength and are then able to attack stronger birds. The symptoms of roup are not very clearly defined. It is hard to tell where colds leave off and roup begins, but when your birds are coughing and sneezing, having inflamed mouths, nostrils or eyes, a running at the nose or swollen eye socket, it is time to see what is going on. Look for the cause and remove it, separate and isolate all affected birds and keep them in a dry, clean place. Get rid of all weak birds, and if you simply must give some medicine, give the whole flock a dose of Epsom salts—a teaspoonful to each two birds. The whole amount of salts can be dissolved in water and the water used to moisten a feed of mash. Put a few drops of carbolic acid in the drinking water. Birds can stand a good deal of carbolic acid.

"After Using Peruna Many Years"

J. O. METCALF, Mabel, Mo.

I can say that Peruna is a fine remedy for catarrh and many other ailments. It is manufactured by a well-known company, who are perfectly reliable.

A Tonic with slight laxative qualities.
"I have noticed a great many others taking this remedy, and I have yet failed to see a case where the continued use of Peruna did not complete a satisfactory cure in reasonable time."

Proves By The Pikes Peak Test

No where else in all the world is there such a test of the time keeping quality of a watch as on the famous Pikes Peak Cog Railway in Colorado, where the steep grades of the mountain necessitate the use of cog wheels to control the train, and vibration often so injures ordinary watches that an expert repairman must readjust them.

A conductor on the Pike's Peak road made a ninety-day test of the South Bend Watch last Summer. No adjustment of the watch was made for the whole period, but at the end of the test, examination showed a variation of less than one-half second per day. Do you think the watch you carry could stand a test like this?

We will be pleased to show you our line of these guaranteed accurate watches and explain to you how a South Bend Watch adjusts itself to every temperature automatically.

These watches are sold in Salisbury by

DESERT OF LUXURY

By JOHN FILSON.

John Sharpless unlocked the door of his flat and let himself in. He hung up his hat in the hall and went slowly into his library. The maid was dusting; at the sight of him she gathered up her broom and pan and hurried toward the door.

"Mrs. Sharpless said she'll be home to dinner, sir," she said.

John Sharpless was conscious of a slight sense of annoyance. The bank's sensation; however, during the past few days things had occurred which had given a new turn to his thoughts. And he found himself scrutinizing his relations with Winifred with greater care than usual.

He had been married five years, and his marriage had been a failure; there was no doubt about that. Winifred's parents had been poor. She was country-bred, too, and the plunge into New York's social life had been a change. Indeed, she ought to have been grateful, at least, even if she had no love for him.

John thought rather grimly about those past five years. There had never been a child. There might have been, only Winifred was lazy and luxurious, and seemed to think of nothing but her woman's clubs and tea-parties. John had nothing in common with any of her friends. And she never hesitated to sacrifice his comfort to her own.

Yes, it was strange, her coming home to dinner. Usually she dined alone, before he came in. He was a very busy man, and had been busier than usual until that evening. In future he did not expect to be so busy.

Half an hour later he was seated opposite his wife at the table. He noticed that she was looking at him with a strange expression.

"I Am Going to Leave You,"

John's flushed cheeks; Winifred was still as still as a statue when he married her. A sudden pang shot through his heart. How different things might have been! But was he to blame for the coldness, the estrangement?

After dinner Winifred did not withdraw, but sat watching him while he drank his coffee. John Sharpless felt dimly that something was impending. Winifred had something to say to him, as he to her. He would let her speak first, he said.

"John, if you have finished your coffee, I want to tell you something," she said. "I am going to leave you."

The banker quietly set down his cup. So the blow had fallen at last! And he was glad—very glad! Under the circumstances—but that could come later.

"I am going to leave you tomorrow, John," she continued. "I have made all my arrangements. I am going abroad with my sister. She approves of my decision. I presume there need be no vulgar squabbles about money. You have taken the best of me and destroyed it, and I shall have no hesitation in accepting alimony from you."

John nodded. "I will give you half my income," he said, and an amused smile crossed his features. His wife saw it, and it infuriated her. "Do you want a divorce?" she asked. "I hope so!" she cried. "I don't want to be tied to you one minute longer than I can help. You are laughing! You are laughing at me, after all these years of misery. It has been anything but amusing to me."

"And to me," answered her husband. "I don't know why you married me," she pursued. "You have never given me care, love or attention. You have sat all day in your office, working, leaving me to mope alone."

"You haven't seemed to mope very much of late, Winifred," said her husband.

"No! Thank heaven, my friends rallied around me when you understood," she flashed back at him. "They have long been urging me to get a divorce."

"So I suspected," answered John Sharpless, quietly.

"Oh, they were actuated solely in my best interests," she answered. "They saw how unhappy I was. They knew that I was a bird in a gilded cage. They wanted me to make something of my life. And I am going to. I am going to study art."

"You could have made something of your life, Winifred," said her husband.

sharply, and his voice was stirred with the first trace of feeling that he had shown. "You could have devoted your life to motherhood. It is a profession that has fallen upon evil days, I know," he added, sneeringly, "but still, believe me, you will never know how much you missed when you decided—"

"To have brought him up to be like you!" she said, with withering scorn. The man was stirred as he had not been before. "Winifred, I have been to blame, I know," he cried. "But if I devoted myself so hard to work, it was in the hope of retiring with you—"

"Oh, yes, I know! To some beautiful country spot, where we could emulate the rural rustics!" she cried. "That was the life I was meant to lead, John, not this life here—amid luxuries I never chose—"

"Winifred," said her husband quietly, "I don't want to urge you to change your decision. But I want you to realize that your decision will be irrevocable. I am ready to try to atone for the past."

"No atonement is possible," she answered. "Then I shall tell you now—" he began.

"Tell me!" she cried. "What more is there to tell? What can you have to tell me, except about your banking business, as always, your sole topic of interest—"

"It is about my banking business," answered John Sharpless. "You have hit the nail on the head very accurately. Winifred, in fact, I should have told you weeks ago, had you seemed to have any interest beyond spending the money. I am ruined and bankrupt, and my assets are—our furniture."

"What!" she cried, coming toward him. "Are you speaking the truth?"

"The absolute truth. So, I am afraid your projected trip will have to be deferred, at least, so far as I am concerned. I shall probably be able to command $50 a week, however, and, when that happens, if you think you can live on $25, I can gratify my country tastes on as much. To be frank, Winifred, I am unforgottenly glad that this has happened. I see what a will-o'-the-wisp I was pursuing. I hope to accumulate enough to support me comfortably in my old age, and—"

"John! Don't!" There was pain in her voice. She came beside him. "John! You have lost everything! You are going to begin life again!"

"Yes, Winifred," he answered, scarcely daring to give vent to his new-born hope within him. "Something in her tone, her look, had brought back the poignant memories of five years ago."

"John, when I told you no atonement was possible," she began. "And then the man knew that, deep beneath the arid soil of luxury, self-will, the tiny plant of love survived, ready to be nursed, with patient care, into a fruitful tree."

He sprang from his chair and clasped her hands in his. "Winifred—will you try?" he whispered. "To live our lives together—in all—henceforward."

And in her look he saw his answer. (Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman.)

SIMPLY STATED THE FACTS

Mr. Peaslee, Averse to Slander, Tells Why He Considers Lathrop's Bull an Unruly Beast.

"Is that bull over in Mr. Lathrop's pasture good-natured?" inquired the new schoolmistress, with some apprehension in her voice. "I ask because I wanted to cross the pasture last night, and I was afraid he might be ugly."

Mr. Peaslee surveyed the young lady with kindly eyes, and hesitated before he replied.

"Well," he conceded, at length, "it might be a little risky—you with that red sweater on, and all—to undertake to cross that pasture when he's right handy. He might take a notion to chase you, and then again he mightn't."

"I ain't one to slander any of my neighbors' prop'ty," he went on, apologetically. "but I d'know as Lathrop can blame me if I don't say more'n recite facts to you. I ain't givin' any opinion, y' understand. I'm jest tellin' you what's happened, and lettin' you make up your own mind to suit yourself."

"When Lathrop fust got that animal, he had a Swede workin' for him, and he had the care of the bull 'bout all the time while he stayed here. That Swede was a kind of stupid critter, and I guess he got careless. 'T any rate, one day we heard a bellerin' goin' on up there in the pasture, and the Swede hollerin' at the top of his voice, so we all grabbed pitchforks and put up there as hard as we could pelt, and we didn't any more'n get there in time, as 'twas."

"After we men—there was five of us, with pitchforks—had bradded the bull away from the man, we got him—the man, I mean—over the fence, and kinder went over him for injuries. He had one broken arm and two broken legs, and besides that he was trod up considerable. And while we was sortin' him over, it took three men to keep the bull from gettin' over the fence and havin' another go at him."

"And ever since that time," concluded Mr. Peaslee, judiciously, "I've sort of had my doubts about that animal. In fact, I can't help thinkin' that he's a kind of unruly beast."—Youth's Companion.

MORE AIR NEEDED HERE.

ROY H. WAITE.

Many poultry raisers are too much afraid their chickens will not be warm enough. When the air gets a bit chilly they close all the doors and pull down the windows to keep the heat in. It's all well enough to keep the house as warm as possible, but when you attempt to get it warm by closing it up, you introduce a factor which is many times more detrimental to the birds. Fowls can't stand dampness any more than you can, and when you "bottle up" a lot of them in a close room the moisture they breathe out soon fills the air and causes a damp, disagreeable house; one that induces colds, roup, rheumatism and other ailments.

If your house is like the one in the above picture, get out your saw or axe or maul and make a good generous opening, one at least taking up half the front. Then cover it with wire netting and hinge up a muslin curtain to let down on the coldest nights, if you wish. The ventilation will then be good and the moisture will have a chance to get out.

smoke and dust, as they fired through a fog at bent figures whose legs were pumping fast in dim pantomime.

But the guns of the Browns, also, have word that the charge has begun. The signal corporal is waiting for the gesture from Dellarme agreed upon as an announcement. The Brown artillery commander cuts his fuses two hundred and fifty yards short. He, too, uses percussion for moral effect.

Half of the distance from the foot to the crest of the knoll Fracasse's men have gone in face of the hot, sizzling tornado of bullets, when there is a blast of explosions in their faces with all the chaotic and irresistible force of a volcanic eruption. Not only are they in the midst of the first lot of the Browns' shells at the shorter range, but one Gray battery has either made a mistake in cutting its fuses or struck a streak of powder below standard, and its shells burst among those whom it is aiming to assist.

The ground seems rising under the feet of Fracasse's company; the air is split and racked and wrenched and torn with hideous screams of invisible demons. The men stop; they act on the uncontrollable instinct of self-preservation against an overwhelming force of nature. A few without the power of locomotion drop, faces pressed to the ground. The rest flee toward a shoulder of the slope through the instinct that leads a hunted man in a street into an alley. In a confusion of arms and legs, pressing one on the other, no longer soldiers, only a mob, they throw themselves behind the first protection that offers itself. Fracasse also runs. He runs from the flame of a furnace door suddenly thrown open.

The Gray batteries have ceased firing; certain gunners' ears burn under the words of inquiry as to the cause of the mistake from an artillery commander. Dellarme's men are hugging the earth too close to cheer. A desire to spring up and yell may be in their hearts, but they know the danger of showing a single unnecessary inch of their cranial above the sky-line. The sounds that escape their throats are those of a winning team at a tug of war as diaphragms relax.

With the smoke clearing, they see 20 or 30 Grays plastered on the slope at the point where the charge was checked. Every one of those prostrate forms is within fatal range. Not one moves a finger; even the living are feigning death in the hope of surviving. Among them is little Peterkin, so faithful in forcing his refractory legs to keep pace with his comrades. If he is always up with them they will never know what is in his heart and call him a coward. As he has been knocked unconscious, he has not been in the pell-mell retreat.

His first stabbing thought on coming to was that he must be dead; but, no; he was opening his eyes sticky with dust. At least, he must be wounded! He had not power yet to move his hands in order to feel where, and when they grew alive enough to move, what he saw in front of him held them frigidly still. His nerves were searching from his head to his feet and—miracle of heaven!—found no point of pain or spot soppy with blood. If he were really hit there was bound to be one or the other, he knew from reading.

Between him and the faces of the Browns—yes, the actual, living, terrible brows—above the glint of their rifle barrels, was no obstacle that could stop a bullet, though not more than three feet away was a crater made by a shell burst. The black crests of every muzzle on the crest seemed to be pointing at him. When were they going to shoot? When was he to be executed? Would he be shot in many places and die thus? Or would the very first bullet go through his head? Why didn't they fire? What were they waiting for? The suspense was unbearable. The desperation of overwhelming fear driving him in irremediable impulse, he doubled up his body and with a cat's leap sprang for the good, for he had a glimpse of blue sky. No, that could not be, he had been alive when he leaped for the crater, and there he was pressed against the soft earth of its bottom. He burrowed deeper desperately. He was the nearest to the enemy of any man of the 128th, and he certainly had passed through a gamut of emotions in the half-hour since Eugene Aronson had leaped over a white post.

"Confound it! If we'd kept on we'd have got them! Now we have to do it all over again!" growled Fracasse distractedly as he looked around at the faces hugging the cover of the shoulder—faced asking. What next? Each in its own way; faces blank and white; faces with lips working and eyes blinking; faces with the blood rushing back to cheeks in baffled anger. One, however, was half-smiling—Hugo Mallin.

Of one battery of that Gray regiment of artillery, each firing six 14-pound shells a minute methodically, every shell loaded with nearly two hundred projectiles, were giving their undivided attention to the knoll.

How long could his company endure this? Dellarme might well ask. He knew that he would not be expected to lie he saw Fracasse's men drop for cover at the base of the knoll and then, expectation fulfilled, he realized that rifle-fire now reinforced the enemy's shell fire. His duty was to remain while he could hold his men, and a feeling toward them such as he had never felt before, which was love, sprang full-fledged into his heart as he saw how steadily they kept up their fusillade.

Strangely, eager in response to a new passion, springing forward into place and picked up his rifle. "If you will not have it my way, take it yours!" said the best shot in the company, as he began firing with resolute coolness.

"They have a lot of men down," said Dellarme, his glasses showing the many prostrate figures on the wheat stubble. "Steady! steady! We have plenty of batteries back in the hills. One will be in action soon."

But would one? He understood that with their smokeless powder the Gray guns could be located only by their flashes, which would not be visible unless the refraction of light were favorable. Then "thur-eesh-thur-eesh" above every other sound in a long wail! No man ever forgets the first crack of a shrapnel at close quarters, the first bullet breath on his cheek, or the first supporting shell from his side in flight that passes above him.

"That is ours!" called Dellarme. "Ours!" shouted the sergeant. "Ours!" sang the thought of every one of them.

Over the Gray batteries on the plain an explosive ball of smoke hung in the still air; then another beside it. "Thur-eesh—thur-eesh—thur-eesh," the screaming overhead became a gale that built a cloud of blue smoke over the offending Gray batteries—beautiful, soft blue smoke from which a spray of steel descended. There was no spotting the flashes of the Browns' guns in order to reply to them, for they were under the cover of a hill, using indirect aim as nicely and accurately as if firing pointblank. The gunners of the Gray batteries could not go on with their work under such a hailstorm; they were checked. They stopped firing and began moving to a new position, where their commander hoped to remain undiscovered long enough to support the 128th by losing his lightnings against the defenders at the critical moment of the next charge, which would be made as soon as Fracasse's men had been reinforced.

There was an end to the concussions and the thrashing of the air around Dellarme's men, and they had the relief of a breaking bubble in the ear. But they became more conscious of the spits of dust in front of their faces and the passing whistles of bullets. In return, they made the sections of Gray infantry in reserve rushing across the levels, leave many Gray bullets behind. But Fracasse's men at the foot of the slope poured in a heavier and still heavier fire.

"Down there's where we need the shells now!" spoke the thought of Dellarme's men, which he had anticipated by a word to the signal corporal, who waved his flag one—two—three—four—five times. Come on, now, with more of your special brand of death, fire-control officer! Your own head is above the sky-line, though your guns are hidden. Five hundred yards beyond the knoll is the range! Come on!

He came with a burst of screams so low in flight that they seemed to brush the back of the men's necks with a hair broom at the rate of a thousand feet a second. Having watched the result, Dellarme turned with a confirmatory gesture, which the corporal translated into the kwagwag of "Correct!" The shrapnel smoke hanging over Fracasse's men appeared a heavenly blue to Dellarme's men.

"They are going to start for us soon!" Oh, but we'll get a lot of them!" whispered Stransky gleefully to his rifle.

Dellarme glanced again toward the colonel's station. No sign of the retreating flag. He was glad of that. He did not want to fall back in face of a charge; to have his men silhouetted in the valley as they retreated. And the Grays would not endure this show-er-bath without going one way or the other. He gave the order to fix bayonets, and hardly was it obeyed when he saw flashes of steel through the shrapnel smoke as the Grays fixed theirs. The Grays had 500 yards to go; the Browns had the time that it takes running men to cover the distance in which to stop the Grays.

"Well, speak any of the who has the luck to get this far!" whispered Stransky to his rifle. The sentence was spoken in the midst of a salvo of shrapnel cracks, which he did not hear. He heard nothing, thought nothing, except to kill.

The Gray batteries on the plain, having taken up a new position and being reinforced, played on the crest at top speed instantly the Gray line rose and started up the slope at the run. With the purpose of confusing no less than killing, they used percussion, which burst on striking the ground, as well as shrapnel, which burst by a time-fuse in the air. The rain of sod and dirt that met the descending sprays of the concussion of the earth's surface, the aim of Dellarme's men.

The good, for he had a glimpse of blue sky. No, that could not be, he had been alive when he leaped for the crater, and there he was pressed against the soft earth of its bottom. He burrowed deeper desperately. He was the nearest to the enemy of any man of the 128th, and he certainly had passed through a gamut of emotions in the half-hour since Eugene Aronson had leaped over a white post.

"Confound it! If we'd kept on we'd have got them! Now we have to do it all over again!" growled Fracasse distractedly as he looked around at the faces hugging the cover of the shoulder—faced asking. What next? Each in its own way; faces blank and white; faces with lips working and eyes blinking; faces with the blood rushing back to cheeks in baffled anger. One, however, was half-smiling—Hugo Mallin.

"I'll warrant, Mallin!" said Fracasse excitedly, venting his disgust on a particular object.

"Yes, sir," answered Hugo. "It was very hard to maintain a semblance of dignity. Yes, sir, I kept near you all the time. Wasn't that what you wanted me to do, sir?"

Three or four men burst into a hysterical laugh as if something had broken in their throats. Everybody felt better for this touch of drollery except the captain. Yet, possibly, it may have helped him in recovering his poise. Sometimes even a pin-prick will have this effect.

"Silence!" he said in his old manner. "I will give you something to joke about other than a little setback like this! Get up there with your rifles!"

He formed the nucleus of a firing-line under cover of the shoulder, and then set the remainder of his company to work with their spades making a trench. The second battalion of the 128th, which faced the battalion, was also digging at the base of the slope, and another regiment in reserve was deploying on the plain. After the failure to rush the knoll the Gray commander had settled down to the business of a systematic approach.

And what of those of Fracasse's men who had not run but had dropped in their tracks when the line halted? They were between two charges of fire. There was no escape. Some of the wounded had a mercifully quick end, others suffered the consciousness of being hit again and again; the dead were bored through with bullet holes. In torture, the survivors prayed for death; for all had to die except Peterkin, the pasty-faced little valet's son.

Peterkin was quite safe, hugging the bottom of the shell crater under a swarm of hornets. In a surprisingly short time he became accustomed to the situation and found himself ravenously hungry, for the strain of the last 12 hours had burned up tissue. He took a biscuit out of his knapsack and began nibbling it, as became a true rodent.

CHAPTER X.

Marta's First Glimpse of War. As Marta and the children came to the door of the chapel after the recitation of the oath, she saw the civil population moving along the street in the direction of the range. There was nothing for Marta to do but start homeward. The thought that her mother was alone made her hasten at a pace much more rapid than the procession of people, whose talk and exclamations formed a monotone audible in its nearness, despite the continuous rifle-fire, now broken by the pounding of the guns.

"It's all done to beat the Grays, isn't it, Miss Galland?" They are trying to take our land," said Jacky Werther as Marta parted from him. "Yes, it is done to beat the Grays," she answered. "Good luck, Jacky!"

Yes, yes, to beat the Grays! The same idea—the fighting nature, the brute nature of man—animated both sides. Had the Browns really tried for peace? Had they, in the spirit of her oath, appealed to justice and reason? Why hadn't their premier before all the world said to the premier of the Grays, as one honest, friendly neighbor to another over a matter of dispute:

"We do not want war. We know you outnumber us, but we know you would not take advantage of that. If we are wrong we will make amends. If you are wrong we know that you will. Let us not play tricks in secret to gain points, we civilized nations, but be frank with each other. Let us not try to irritate each other or to influence our people, but to realize how much we have in common and that our only purpose is common progress and happiness."

At the turn of the road in front of the castle she saw the gunners of the batteries making an emplacement for their guns in a field of carrots that had not yet been harvested. The roots of golden yellow were mixed with the tossing spade-furrows of earth.

A shadow like a great cloud in mad flight shot over the earth, and with the gunners she looked up to see a Gray dirigible. Already it was turning homeward; already it had gained its object as a scout. On the fragile platform of the gondola was a man, seemingly a human mite aiming a tiny toy gun. His target was one of the Brown aeroplanes.

"They're in danger of cutting their own envelope!" They can't get the angle. The plane is too high!" exclaimed the artillery commander. Both he and his men forgot their work in watching the spectacle of aerial David against aerial Goliath. "If our man lands with his little bomb, oh, my!" he grinned. "That's why he is so high. He's been waiting up there."

"Pray God he will!" exclaimed one of the gunners. "Look at him volplane—motor at full speed, too!"

"Into it! Making sure! Oh, splendid!" cried the artillery commander. A ball of lightning shot forth sheets of flame. Dirigible and plane were hidden in an ugly swirl of yellowish smoke, rolling out into a purple cloud that spread into a prismatic mist over the descent of hovering human bodies and broken machinery and twisted braces, flying pieces of tattered or burning cloth. David had taken Goliath down with him in a death grip.

An aeroplane following the dirigible as a screen, hoping to get home with information if the dirigible were lost, had escaped the sharpshooters in the church tower by flying around the town. However, it ran within range of the automatic and the sharpshooters on top of the castle tower. They failed of the bull's-eye, but the bullets, riving the target, crippling the motor, and gutting braces, brought the crumpling wings about the helpless pilot. The watching gunners uttered "Ah!" of horror and triumph as they saw him fall, gliding this way and that, in the agony of slow descent.

"Come, now!" called the artillery commander. "We are wasting precious time." Entering the grounds of the Galland house, Marta had to pass to one side of the path, now blocked by many wagons and engineers' materials and tools. Soldiers carrying sand-bags were taking the shortest cut, tramping the flowers on their way.

"Do you know whose property this is?" she demanded in a burst of anger. "Ours—the nation's!" answered one, perceiving freely at the work. "Sorry!" he added on second thought.

Already parts of the first terrace were shoulder-high with sand-bags and one automatic had been set in place. Marta observed as she turned to the veranda. There her mother sat in her favorite chair, hands relaxed as they rested on its arms, while she looked out over the valley in the super tranquility that comes to some women under a strain—as soldiers who have been on sieges can tell you—that some psychologists interpret one way and some another, none knowing even their own wives.

"Marta, did any of the children come?" Mrs. Galland asked in her usual pleasant tone. So far as she was concerned, the activity on the terrace did not exist. She seemed oblivious of the fact of war.

Marta's monosyllabic assent answering the question was expressive of her wonder at her mother. Most girls do not know their mothers much better than psychologists know their wives.

"Marta, whatever happens one should go regularly about what he considers his duty," said Mrs. Galland. "They have been as considerate as they could, evidently by Colonel Lanstron's orders," she proceeded, nodding toward the industrious engineers. "And they've packed all the paintings and works of art and put them in the cellar, where they will be safe."

She Looked Up to See a Gray Dirigible.

The captain of engineers in command, seeing Marta, hurried toward her.

"Miss Galland, isn't it?" he asked. "I have been waiting for you. I—I well, I found that I could not make the situation clear to your mother."

"He thinks me in my second childhood or out of my head," Mrs. Galland explained with a shade of tartness. "And he has been so polite in trying to conceal his opinion, too," she added with a comprehending smile.

The captain flushed in embarrassment. "I—I can't speak too strongly," he declared when he had regained his composure. "Though everything seems to be safe here now, it may not be in an hour. You must go, all of you. This house will be an inferno as soon as the 53d falls back, and I can't possibly get your mother to appreciate the fact, Miss Galland."

"But I said that I did appreciate it and that the Gallands have been in inferno before—perhaps not as bad as this one that is coming—but then, the Gallands must keep abreast of the times," replied Mrs. Galland. "I have asked Minna and she prefers to remain. I am glad that I am glad now that we kept her, Marta. She is as loyal an old maid and the butler and the cook were to your grandmother in the last war. Ah, the Gallands had many servants then!"

"This isn't like the old war. This place will be shelled, enfiladed! And you two—" the captain protested desperately. "I became a Galland when I married," said Mrs. Galland, "and the Galland women have always remained with their property in time of war. Naturally, I shall remain!"

"Miss Galland, it was you—your influence I was counting on—" The captain turned to Marta in a final appeal.

Mrs. Galland was watching her daughter's face intently. "We stay!" replied Marta, and the captain saw in the depths of her eyes, a cold blue-black, that further argument was useless.

Now came the sweep of a rising argo from the sky with the command to attention of the rush of a fast express-train past a country railway station. Two Gray dirigibles with their escort of aeroplanes were bearing toward the pass over the pass road. The automatic and the riflemen in the tower banged away to no purpose, but the central sections of the envelope of the rear dirigible had been torn in shreds; it was buckling. Clouds of blue shrapnel smoke broke around its gondola. A number of field-guns joined forces with a battery of high-angle guns in a havoc that left a drifting derelict; the remainder of the squadron had completed its loop and was pointing toward the plain.

From a great altitude, literally out of the blue of heaven, high over the Gray lines, Marta made out a Brown squadron of dirigibles and planes descending across the track of the Grays.

The Gray dirigibles, stern on, were little larger than umbrellas and the planes than swallows; the Brown dirigibles, however, were much larger and the planes much more numerous. The Brown dirigibles, however, were much larger and the planes much more numerous. The Brown dirigibles, however, were much larger and the planes much more numerous.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS IN SESSION

Transact The Usual Amount of Public Business—Rapid Transit for Salisbury

A delegation of citizens in the interests of the proposed improvement of the Powellville-Willards road waited upon the County Commissioners on Tuesday and placed before them a proposition that if the county would aid in the construction of the proposed road, the citizens would undertake to carry a larger share of the expense than they would be required to pay if the road were constructed under the Shoemaker law.

The delegation has, in fact, raised about $2,500 and proposes to place the shells for the road if the county will pay for the shells.

They call attention to the urgent need for the road and to the fact that it cannot be built under the Shoemaker law for several years.

Powellville was originally the point intended for the Berlin-Salisbury link to touch, instead of the railroad points, and it is generally claimed that the original route is the one that should have been followed.

That section of the county has some heavy roads both in very dry and very wet weather and is certainly deserving of assistance at once. Commissioner W. B. Miller appeared later and suggested to the delegation that he would have the road surveyed and placed on the map as a part of the State Highways system, and to wait for a short time until he could arrange matters and the state construct the road.

A committee from Hebron was before the board asking for shells to repair the roads in that town.

A committee composed of Messrs. C. R. Disharoon, W. F. Callaway and others appeared before the board asking for shells to complete the shelling of Brown street.

Mr. George W. Parker appeared before the board asking for shells to complete 1,200 yards of road on the Parsonsburg-Pittsville road.

All requests for shells were laid over for future consideration and will be acted on when the board finds how the finances are running.

Mr. M. L. Tilghman appeared before the board asking permission to erect telephone poles on Fooks and Dykes road.

City Council Proceedings.
The City Council in session Monday night granted to Donald Graham a building permit for storage house on William street.

Councilman White was appointed to investigate the lighting of East William street and report.

President Jones was instructed to contract for curbing and guttering Upton street from Division street to the High School property, and Engineer Shockley to give the grade for sidewalks on the north side of said street.

The committee appointed to assess benefits to Mr. Walter C. Humphreys for strip of land on East Main street reported the amount assessed Dr. Humphreys to be $125, which was accepted by the Mayor and Council.

The city solicitor was instructed to notify Mr. P. H. Doody to vacate his present premises on December 1.

The clerk was instructed to notify the Salisbury Light, Heat and Power Company to turn on the street lights at sun down and keep them on until sun rise as per agreement with the city.

The city solicitor was instructed to prepare an ordinance to prohibit the hitching of teams or the standing of automobiles on St. Peter's, Water and Bond streets.

The new bond and contract of the McGuire Paving Company was approved by the Council at $1.25 per square yard for street work.

The clerk was instructed to notify Louis Dalmas of the Salisbury Water Company, to clean out the stand pipe and place a wire screen over the top of the same as per agreement in franchise.

Several bills were passed and ordered paid.

Rapid Transit Proposed.
A system of automobile streetcars is proposed for Salisbury, to start in a small way and be developed as traffic warrants.

Messrs. George L. Vealander of Baltimore, and Wm. P. Lawson of Crisfield, were before Council with their counsel, Woodcock & Webb, and asked for a franchise to operate a motorbus line on all the streets of Salisbury and suburbs. These gentlemen are chief officers of the Peninsula Rapid Transit Company, which is now operating in Somerset County.

They asked for a franchise to put on several White motor trucks, lighted by electricity and each carrying about 17 passengers. The fare will be 5 cents for adults and 3 cents for children under 12 years of age, to all parts of the city with liberal transfer privileges. It is the intention of the company, if permission is granted to operate here, to place a regular schedule in effect, cars leaving certain points at definite times, so that travelers may know exactly where they can make connections.

NEW BANK BUILDING TO BE OPENED

Public Invited To Inspect New Structure

The handsome new building of the Salisbury Building, Loan and Banking Association on the corner of Main and Division Streets, will be thrown open to the public for inspection on Wednesday, November 4th, and for the remainder of the week all are invited to go and look over the building. The Officers and Directors of the Association accepted the building from the contractors, Hoggson Brothers, last Friday.

This building is not only the finest public structure in this city, but also far surpasses any other building in this section. The equipment is complete from the lowest floor to the roof. On the ground floor the quarters of the Building, Loan and Banking Association are located. These quarters are fitted out in a splendid manner. All the furnishings are of the best material and are well arranged. A large vault has been installed with burglar proof doors, and safe deposit boxes will be added. A feature of the banking quarters is a handsomely equipped retiring room for ladies. In addition to the banking room, there are located on the same floor two store or office rooms, said to be already rented. On the second, third and fourth floors are office rooms, fitted out in handsome style, all having steam heat and both gas and electric lighting equipment. Each floor has a lavatory. An electric elevator will convey people to any floor they may desire to go. This will be a great convenience to those who may have need to go to any of the upper floors of the building.

The structure was erected under the management of Mr. Barrette and has been put up in a most systematic and thorough manner. In the course of a few months the old building formerly on this site was torn down and this handsome edifice placed on the same ground, and it was all done in such a way as to cause no blocking of the heavy traffic about this busy end of Main Street. The cost of the building was about $55,000 which with the cost of the site makes the complete cost reach the $70,000 mark.

It is hoped by the Officers of the Association that the public will respond to their invitation for the opening days. For the convenience of those who will be unable to go during the daytime, the building will be open during the evenings and every corner will be extended to those who may desire to inspect the banking rooms.

SMITH SPEAKS AT HAGERSTOWN CAMPAIGNS BEST ARGUMENT DEMOCRATIC SUCCESS CERTAIN

Senator John Walter Smith lays no claim to being a great orator but whenever he decides to speak one can be sure to hear something well worth listening to. He has the faculty of getting right down to his subject without any fuss or feathers, and when he gets through he always succeeds in clearing up the matters under consideration. He made his first speech of the campaign at Hagerstown this week and as usual it is a statement of facts in a clear and concise way, and shows a deep reasoning capacity and an unusual understanding of questions the people are asking.

In the course of his speech he gives much space to the merits of his Congressional associates—especially to the Hon. David J. Lewis, who is fighting hard for re-election and who, despite the large normal Republican majority of his district will most likely win, though by a reduced majority.

In the Fifth district young Mudd is still making an active and aggressive fight, taking around with him his own brass band. It is very hard to predict the results in this district, though the Democrats are claiming it by a safe majority, basing their claims on the affiliated vote. The district however may be put in the doubtful columns.

In the First district Senator Price seems assured of a majority of over 2,000 and some estimates give him more than 3,000. His election at least seems safe and certain as anything ever seems in politics.

Senator Smith will probably win by over 25,000 in the state, unless the sanguinity of the Democrats cause many to remain away from the polls.

Returning to Senator Smith's address at Hagerstown, we are giving below some points taken from it, and advise their careful perusal by Wicomico county voters.

In spirit and in logic the speech is well worth reading in full, and we regret that we are unable to so print it.

Yet how quickly order was brought out of chaos!

not been on the stump in this campaign is that there was work to be done in Washington—the people's work. Lewis had been on the job for 18 months; so have we all. And we have been doing things—all helping.

Time was when the Democratic party bore the taunt of the "opposition party without power;" the "do-nothing party," with time and chance to promise much and with opportunity and capacity to do nothing.

The charge was partially true then. There is not a shred of truth in it now.

The Democrats came into power with Woodrow Wilson. There was plenty of opportunity for constructive work. And Congress set to work in April, 1913, in extra session. That Congress has probably done more of real help to the people than any other Congress since the Revolutionary war ever did.

This is no season for the display of narrow partisanship, and whatever the results I can promise you that during my term of service as your representative in the Senate, I shall, without regard to any personal or political influence or consideration, dedicate the best that is in me to the service of the people and the preservation and perpetuation of our national safety and welfare.

Though I am a part of the team I want to say that Maryland has sent men to the House and Senate who have stood with the President, and who have aided to their uttermost to bring about the success of Democratic measures, every one. And it was principle, not patronage, which inspired your men in Washington to Democratic loyalty.

As I have said—as matters now stand—we have accomplished more than our predecessors. To a business man like myself such practical service and directly tangible results are most gratifying and encouraging.

I had much to learn when I went to the Senate. I had to break ground and acquire friends. Since then I have secured much experience and have formed some associates which, I am encouraged to hope, will be of ever-increasing value during my second term. Therefore, I believe I can count on making you a more influential and useful Senator as time advances—certainly that is my ambition and aim.

TUBERCULOSIS DAY

During Week of November 29.—Churches, Schools and Lodges Will Observe It.

By sermons, lectures, motion pictures, exhibits, and many other methods The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis will enlist thousands of churches, schools and lodges of the country in a simultaneous educational movement against tuberculosis during the week of November 29th. The campaign is to be known as the Fifth Annual Tuberculosis Day Movement.

A special circular entitled "What is Tuberculosis Day?" has been prepared and is being widely distributed. The plan of Tuberculosis Day, as explained in the circular, does not necessarily comprehend a special sermon on tuberculosis on November 29th. If a church, school or lodge gives the subject attention in any way during that week, this will help in the national educational movement.

Outlines for lectures or sermons on tuberculosis and "stock" talks on this subject will be furnished free to ministers and others who can use them. Literature for distribution in the churches, schools, lodges, and elsewhere will also be given away in large quantities. Persons wishing such literature, either for the preparation of sermons or talks on tuberculosis, or for distribution in public meetings on Tuberculosis Day, should get in touch with their local anti-tuberculosis society, or if that is not possible, with The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, 105 East 24th Street New York City.

On November 1 a new law firm will open in Salisbury, known as Williams & Williams. The firm will consist of Mr. Jay Williams, one of Salisbury's best known lawyers, and his son, Mr. Arthur E. Williams, a graduate of St. John's College and the University of Maryland.

Mr. Curtis W. Long, who for a number of years has been associated with Mr. Jay Williams in the law practice, has retired and will open a law office of his own in the Holland building on the corner of Division and Water streets.

We don't send men to Congress simply to please them. We want service.

The situation is typical of the whole country. Woodrow Wilson, the college professor and student of history, has demonstrated a genius for diplomacy, a mastery of the art of leadership. To him I feel more than to any other influence we owe the fact that our country is at peace.

I have sought no personal favors at the hands of the administration. I have received none.

In the tremendous sorrows which now overcast the most of the world it seems petty and insignificant and unworthy for any man, for any personal or selfish reason, to stand back, to spare an atom of his best effort, his best talent, his most loyal support, in aid of the measures and in support of the man behind the measures which make for industrial peace and domestic prosperity here; or which can in the least serve to preserve us as a nation from the horrors of such a conflict as rages across the sea. I am no better, no worse, than the average man. I claim no credit—am entitled to none. But I will sink every personal feeling, every hope and ambition relating to political life sooner than stand back or stand in the way of any man or measure which will safeguard our people from sorrow or from disaster in their internal or foreign relations.

It is well for our nation that Wilson is president. His management of the intricate and troublesome situation in Mexico, fruitful of so many direful results, has been magnificent. The least mistake and I am satisfied our men would be today facing the Mexicans in open warfare.

The end is not yet. We need him still. With this most terrible European war, surpassing anything the world has yet seen, can a host of new complications. Scarcely a family or a business in the United States remained which was not in some way thrown out of the usual course by the war. Americans were in Europe left destitute; importations are almost cut off; questions of seizure, contraband, ocean transportation and neutrality and so on arose without end. The business of the country was utterly demoralized; ruin stared many sound business men in the face. It was indeed a time which might well tax the resourcefulness of any men, any nation.

Americans were in Europe left destitute; importations are almost cut off; questions of seizure, contraband, ocean transportation and neutrality and so on arose without end. BIG NIGHT COMING Hallowe'en Will Be Hugely Celebrated in This City This Eve.

Once more Hallowe'en has rolled around and we are all again under the grip of the magic spell of "witches," "goblins" and "ghosts." The air is full of the mystic spirit of this short season of mirth and jollity. The religious significance attached to this occasion is not observed at the present day as forcefully as in former years. All Hallowe'en, as it was called in earlier days, is the evening before the festival of All Saints' day.

The present day conception is, of fun and pranks, and it is in this spirit that people mask and go from door to door in search of fun. Salisbury is always crowded with the jolly maskers and on Hallowe'en night it is a real treat to watch the many grotesque and comic costumes to be seen parading the streets of the city. Last year's celebration was one long to be remembered. The streets were thronged with both onlookers and those engaged in the actual celebration of the festive occasion. The interest manifested this year points to an equally as great, or even greater, exhibition of the season's pranks. There will be several entertainments held on this occasion. On Friday and Saturday nights the members of Company I will hold entertainments in the new Armory.

THE COTTON SITUATION

Mr. Steel Reports Business Conditions Approaching the Normal.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Steele returned Friday afternoon from New York where they spent the week selecting new things that will be offered later to the customers of "The Model." They report that business conditions in New York are rapidly approaching the normal, and the wholesale houses and manufacturers look forward to a good fall. The winter trade, as while the European war has had a bad effect on some lines, the enormous crops that have been harvested in every section of the country increased business for the merchant and the manufacturer.

New York is very enthusiastic over the Buy a Bale movement, as it recognizes that the cotton situation is the only serious drawback at this time to this country's entering upon its greatest era of prosperity made possible by the cessation of industry in the warring European countries.

Never before has the average family had it so clearly in their power to contribute to the country's welfare, as in this "Use More Cotton" movement, and New York's largest stores are helping the good work along by making special sales and pricing cotton goods so that their customers can all help along the movement and themselves, too.

Come of Small Value.

Doubtless the smallest coin in the world circulates in the Malay peninsula, simply a thin wafer made from the resinous juice of a tree, and has current value of about 1-10,000th of a cent. In the southern parts of Russia the peasants use a coin of such small value that a quarter of a million of them are worth no more than $1.25. The old Japanese mousang was worth 1-112th of an American cent. In Portugal the reis is the lowest standard of value, but no 1-reis pieces are coined. A 3-reis piece is equivalent to 6-100ths of a cent.

Must Not Whistle in Russia. In certain cities of Russia street whistling by civilians is a penal offense, the privilege being reserved for the police; who exercise it, however, not in order to make tunes with their mouths, but to send signal blasts to each other. The whistling habit being hereditary, it soon disappears, and in these cities no difficulty is experienced in dealing nowadays with the few who offend.

Good Idea at Any Time. The following from an English paper will apply to many other places besides the sick room: "Whatever happens, do not keep on saying, 'Now, I am sure I am tiring you. I had better go.' Only a sick bear would have the courage to take this literally. Get up, say good-by, and go."

Greatness of Man. The greatness of man does not show itself in its ability to build cathedrals, to sculpture, to paint, to write, to invent, to discover, to control men, to found nations, etc., but in its ability to commune with God and do his bidding. —Western Methodist

AMENDMENT to Section 44 of Article 4 of the Constitution, subtitle "Sheriffs".

SECTION 44. There shall be elected in each county in every second year, one person resident in said county, above the age of twenty-five years, and at least five years preceding his election, a citizen of the State, to the office of Sheriff. He shall hold office for two years, and until his successor is duly elected and qualified; shall be ineligible for two years thereafter; shall give such bond, exercise such powers and perform such duties as now are or may hereafter be fixed by law. In case of a vacancy by death, resignation, refusal to serve or neglect to qualify or give bond, or by disqualification, or removal from the county the Governor shall appoint a person to be Sheriff for the remainder of the official term.

In the City of Baltimore at the General Election to be held in the year 1915 and every four years thereafter, there shall be elected in said City of Baltimore, one person who shall be a resident of said City above the age of twenty-five years, and who shall have been at least five years preceding his election a citizen of this State, to the office of Sheriff. He shall hold his office for four years, and until his successor is duly elected and qualified; shall be eligible for re-election; shall give such bond, exercise such powers and perform such duties as now are or may hereafter be fixed by law. The Sheriff elected in and for the City of Baltimore in November, 1913, shall be eligible for re-election.

In case of vacancy by death, resignation, refusal to serve or neglect to qualify or give bond, or by disqualification or removal from said City, the Governor shall appoint a person to be Sheriff for the remainder of the official term. The Sheriff hereafter elected and the Sheriff elected in and for the City of Baltimore on the 7th day of November, 1913, shall from the date of his qualification receive such salary as may be fixed by law, not to exceed six thousand dollars per year in any case, and such expense necessary to the conduct of his office, as may be fixed by law, such salaries and expenses to be paid in such manner and at such times as may be prescribed by law.

Buyers to Share in Profits Lower Prices on Ford Cars

Effective from August 1, 1914 to August 1, 1915 and guaranteed against any reduction during that time:

Touring Car	-	-	$490
Runabout	-	-	440
Town Car	-	-	690

F. O. B. Detroit, all cars fully equipped.
(In the United States of America Only)

Further, we will be able to obtain the maximum efficiency in our factory production, and the minimum cost in our purchasing and sales departments if we can reach an output of 300,000 cars between the above dates.

And should we reach this production, we agree to pay as the buyer's share from $40 to $60 per car [on or about August 1, 1915] to every retail buyer who purchases a new Ford car between August 1, 1914 and August 1, 1915.

For further particulars regarding these low prices and profit-sharing plan, see the nearest Ford Branch or Dealer.

PROFIT IN DAIRYING DEPENDS ON WISE FEEDING

Slilage Or Legume Hay Needed in Ration To Lessen Cost Of Feeding.

G. E. WOLCOTT,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

During the summer months, when cows are on pasture, the dairyman is not troubled with the problem of supplying the herd with a ration which will maintain the flow of milk and also be economical.

To the farmer who has a loft full of alfalfa or clover, and a silo full of silage, the problem is simple; he will need comparatively little grain to make a balanced ration.

If cut fodder, alone is available for roughage, it will be necessary to supply a large part of the nutrients, required to maintain the production of the herd, in the form of a grain mixture which will necessarily be expensive. This is the season when the farmer realizes, more than ever that silage and some legume hay are necessary for the profitable production of milk and butter. Two-thirds of the nutrients required for a normal production can be supplied in the form of rough feed; but where neither silage nor legumes are available two-thirds of the daily feed must be supplied in the form of grain. This necessitates the purchase of large amounts of high priced concentrates; which will make the cost of production very high and probably unprofitable.

In selecting the feeds for his grain mixture the dairyman should choose those that are to be had at the lowest cost; and use only enough of each so that the mixture will, when fed with what roughage is available, supply the nutrients that are required for a given production. This is a balanced ration.

WHY REMAIN ON THE MARYLAND FARM?

According to a notice being issued by Secretary T. B. Symons, of the Maryland Week Exhibition, which is to be held in the Armory, Nov. 17-21, two essay contests are to be held in connection with the exhibition, one for farm boys and the other for farm girls. The boys will have the chance to tell why they would prefer to remain on a Maryland farm when they grow up, and the girls, how they think country life can be bettered so that it may be more attractive to them. A prize of $20 each is offered for the winner in either contest, and the boy and girl getting second place will each have a gold medal presented to them. All essays to enter the contest must be in the hands of Secretary T. B. Symons, College Park, Md., by 6 P. M., Monday, November 9th. One judge in these contests will be State Superintendent of Education Dr. M. Bates Stephens.

THE PRESENT LEADER

In previous editorials The Salisbury Advertiser has discussed, to a certain extent, the policies and principles of the Democratic party, attempting to show that these, if properly carried out will result in the betterment of present conditions. These principles and policies are of course essential factors in the determining of whether or not the party is worthy of support; but it must not be forgotten that principles are of no avail unless lived up to and that policies will not put themselves into effect.

To be of any use they must have behind them a living force, strong, honest and capable; and it is to our leaders or leader we must look to find whether or not it is reasonable to expect good to come out of them.

As the approaching election is a national one, in which local or state issues have no legitimate part, we must look to the national leadership for guidance.

There may have been periods when it was hard to definitely decide on whom the title of national leader should be bestowed, but fortunately for all, there is no question about that at the present time; for all will agree that to the President, Woodrow Wilson, must be given the title—and not only the title but the full power that goes with it.

As an efficient general makes an efficient army, so does capable and wise leadership make a great and useful party; therefore it is an important thing for the voters to consider whether or not Mr. Wilson meets their idea of a leader.

It will be remembered that during the past presidential campaign the political opponents of Mr. Wilson did not fail to point out his lack of practical experience in public matters, calling him a theorist, a pedagogue, a dreamer; and predicting dire evils for the country in case of his election. Since his election and inauguration as president he has dumfounded foe and amazed friends by his mastery grasp of public affairs, and his display of unsuspected qualities of effective leadership.

In helping to draw, frame and perfect legislation, putting into effect the Democratic promises, his great constructive powers were shown; his quiet but persistent and insistent fight to pass these bills through Congress proved his qualities as a leader; his conduct of the office of Chief Magistrate has emphasized his executive ability; his handling of delicate and intricate questions of international affair has shown a grasp of conditions, and a wisdom in solving that has both surprised and pleased the whole country.

And shining through it all, giving it beauty and strength, can be seen a strong, Christian upright character, filled with a great love and sympathy with his fellowman—a character such as can only be built and formed by a decent, upright Christian life.

This, voters, is the National Democratic Leader, and it is to uphold his hand that we ask you to give to the Democratic nominees your support next Tuesday.

Hon. John Walter Smith, the nominee for United States Senator, has been at Washington ever since the inauguration of President Wilson, and has given him loyal and hearty support in every single measure advocated. President Wilson himself has asked the people of Maryland to return him to the Senate, and it is but right that he be given a big vote in this county as a reward for his great services already rendered, and as a vote of confidence for those to come.

As a man, all who know Senator Smith know that he is a plain, straightforward, honest and honorable man, who never betrays friend or foe.

His love for the Eastern Shore—his native section—his love for his state and his loyalty to his party can not be questioned, fairly, by anyone.

His ability to serve his country as a United States Senator has been tested and proved out, and add to that the experience gained by years of faithful service and it will be seen that his return to Washington will be of incalculable benefit to state and nation.

He is going to win beyond a reasonable question of doubt and we believe that Wicomico county voters want him to know that his services have been appreciated by them, and will take the best and only way of showing this—that of coming out to the polls on Tuesday next and give him their vote.

For Congressman, the Democrats have nominated Jesse D. Price of this county.

Senator Price is as well known to the readers of this paper as he is to the editors, and anything we could say would only be a repetition of what is already known.

His record in the state senate, of which he served as president for two terms, is a creditable one. The experience gained there will be a valuable asset when he takes his place in Congress. He has pledged himself to support President Wilson and the legislation he desires, and if elected—and there is not the slightest doubt but what he will be elected—he will always be found supporting the administration. A vote for him is a vote for Democratic policies and is a vote to uphold the hands of the administration. Wicomico county voters need no urging to give him their support.

In Stationery as in Clothes and Hats there are certain styles in standards which are constantly shifting—certain fashion requirements which have to be met, if your letters are to have that distinctive air or good taste and refinement.

Our stationery stock is modish and up-to-the-minute, in all that is newest, best and most chic. The fashionable finishes, the newest shapes, and correct sizes for every occasion. Colors too—new, beautiful shades and by the way, colored papers are getting more popular every day.

Correspondence Cards are the thing now. Few people nowadays use a sheet of paper for short notes. We have them in all the best finishes, sizes and colors. Ask to see

NEWS is the truth concerning men, nations and things. That is, truth concerning them which is helpful, or pleasant, or useful or necessary for a reader to know.

THE ADVERTISER will be pleased to receive items such as engagements, weddings, parties, tests and other news of personal interest, with the names of those present, for this department. The items should be indorsed with the name and address of the sender—not for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

Miss Agnes Malone of Allen is now recovering from a recent illness.

Hallowe'en festivities will be enjoyed by the young people tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Costen Goslee were present at the Fontaine-Lankford marriage in Pocomoke City last week.

The King's Daughters will meet Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. C. W. Bradley on Bush street.

Mr. Ernest Hallberg of Kingston Hall, Somerset county, spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. Thomas B. Walston.

Mrs. Levin Moore of Plymouth, N. C., has taken apartments on Camden avenue and will make her home in Salisbury.

The owner of the quilt that was exhibited at Fair Grounds and left at the Wicomico Fair Association Office, ill please call for same.

The Prohibitionists failed to hold their meeting at Salisbury, Wednesday night because Mr. Miller, their state organizer, was sick in Baltimore.

Mr. Curtis W. Long will sever his connection with the law office of Mr. Jay Williams this week and has located in the Holland building at the corner of Division and Water streets, where he will practice alone.

Dr. J. I. T. Long is seriously ill at his home in Fruitland. He has been confined to his bed for several weeks with muscular rheumatism and has been growing slowly worse for several days.

At Bethesda Methodist Protestant church the pastor, Rev. L. F. Warner, will speak Sunday morning on "Pure and Undeveloped Religion," in the evening the subject will be "A Saloonless Nation in 1920." The public cordially invited.

Mr. Jay Williams has associated with him in his law practice his son, Arthur E. Williams, who graduated recently at St. John's College and from the law department of the University of Maryland. The style of the firm will be Williams & Williams.

A fire broke out Wednesday a little after noon in a closet in the home of Mr. Chas. Nock on Maryland avenue. The closet was one in which a colored servant kept her belongings. The fire was discovered by her and was extinguished without assistance, doing damage only to her clothing and two pieces of furniture.

Preston Short, son of Mr. Samuel Short, recently underwent a difficult operation in the Methodist Hospital in Philadelphia. His was one of the rare operations in which a piece of healthy bone from the leg was transplanted to the back. The operation is said to have been a success and the young man is now at home.

On Friday last 25 members of the Order of Odd Fellows of Sharptown visited the lodge at Mardela and were given a fine reception. Nine members of the order from this city and some from Galestown lodge were also present. After several speeches from the home and visiting members, ice cream and cake were served.

On Saturday night Martin Rider of Sharptown was thrown from his carriage while coming home from an oyster supper at Riverton and had his collar bone broken. The same evening his brother, G. H. Rider, was driving down Main street, his horse became frightened at an automobile and ran into E. H. Cooper, assistant cashier of the bank, and hurt him very badly.

Mrs. Harry Messick of Fruitland, met with a painful accident Monday evening of last week while on a visit to the home of Mrs. George T. Porter. As she was departing for home Mrs. Messick made a misstep off the front porch and fell, breaking a ligament in one limb. She was carried home and Dr. Tull of Salisbury, summoned, who placed the limb in a plaster cast. Mrs. Messick will likely be confined to her bed for a couple of weeks.

Letters advertised Oct. 31, 1914, at Salisbury, Md. Sent to Dead Letter Office Nov. 14, 1914: Clarke, A. H.; Edwards, R. G.; Langrall, S. B.; Linwood, Frank; Meel, Mack; Pearson, R. D. W.; Revel, Washington; Revelle, R. W.; Roberts, Jane and Geo.; Walker, John T.; Walter, Chris; Bradley, Mrs. Charles E.; Dodge, Mrs. F. G.; Rimon, Mrs. Annie C.; Jackson, Mrs. Wm. J.; Robinson, Mrs. Dallas; Revelle, Mrs. R. W.; Trader, Mrs. Cora; Truitt, Miss Ruby; Taylor, Miss Rosie; Wiles, Mrs. Gertrude.

—Mr. Elmer C. Williams is doing a large amount of development work on the Malone tract, fronting on Newton street. He has contracted for the laying of several thousand square yards of cement sidewalks, more than 5,000 square yards having already been completed. Mr. Williams has recently disposed of several building lots and it is expected there will be quite a building boom in that section next spring.

—The Ladies of St. Peter's P. E. Church will hold a bazaar and supper in the sample rooms of the Peninsula Hotel, November 27 and 28. Remember the date.

—Mr. John R. Parsons of Philadelphia, who spent several days here last week renewing acquaintances with old friends, was much pleased to see that Salisbury is forging ahead all the time. Mr. Parsons always talks with delight the progress which he notes on his yearly visits to his old home town.

—Messrs. James E. Ellegood and F. Leonard Wales, of the Wicomico Bar, attended the meeting of the American Bar Association held in Washington last week. Mr. Wales attended the banquet at the New Willard, Thursday evening, where 800 were seated at the tables in the great banquet hall on the tenth floor.

—Mrs. H. L. Brewington and Miss Mary O. Brewington and Miss Mary O. Brewington are spending several days in Baltimore this week.

—After an illness of only three days of pneumonia, Nathan, the six-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan G. West, of Delmar, died Sunday night at the home of Capt. W. K. Leathery, on Camden avenue, Salisbury. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon. There is much sympathy for the young couple in the loss of their only child.

—In making up his committee for the annual meeting of the Peninsula Horticultural Society to be held in Wilmington, Delaware, January 12th to 15th, President Shallcross named Mr. W. F. Allen, of this city, on the Committee of Small Fruits and Transportation, and Irving Calver, of Delmar, on the Committee on Cantaloupes.

—Express companies operating throughout Maryland have filed with the Public Service Commission tariffs changing the rate charged by the respective companies, the new rate to become effective December 1st. The new rates effect reductions in charges for packages weighing up to about 75 pounds which weight is far in excess of the average weight of express shipments, the Interstate Commerce Commission having compiled statistics showing the average weight of all shipment to be 34 pounds.

CLOSE-FISTED REYNOLDS

By GEORGE E. STREETER.

(Copyright.)

One of the odd people of his town, and the subject of much discussion, was "close-fisted Reynolds," as he was called—a man supposed to be well-off, but looked upon as extremely mean.

Like a lot of other folk, he had his good points, but was evidently much misunderstood. Every man has a hobby, and that of James Reynolds related to the poor and needy. He had a theory (not quite his own) that the execution of the poor, by some painless method, would settle forever the whole question of pauperism.

If poverty were made a crime, punishable with death, a poor person would soon become a rarity. Such was his idea. But as he found that the world, however anxious it might be to adopt such a drastic measure, was not yet quite ready to do so, he carefully considered other means.

Being strictly a theorist, he gave away nothing to the distressed, because he looked upon indiscriminate charity as a huge mistake, and considered the existing alms-giving organizations as dismal failures.

He was enthusiastic in the pursuit of knowledge of the poor and their habits.

When a hungry widow with eight or nine children called upon him, he would give them all a warm welcome, take down a big book, enter their names, ages, diseases, pedigree, etc.; express the greatest sympathy; warn them against extravagance, and the pomps and vanities of this wicked world; then promise the fullest investigation.

Mr. Reynolds was just as hearty in receiving a call from the ordinary tramp of the day. Such a one would be invited to a seat by the stove, and his history, secured by means of much questioning, would be entered into one of the books.

The caller would be asked for his views on the tariff, trusts, single tax, etc. After keeping the poor fellow on the rack until every tavern had been closed, Mr. Reynolds would send him out in the cold world, moneyless.

Reynolds, assisted by his wife, formed a "Girls Club," and got the members to practice scrubbing, sewing and other household pleasures, at his own home. He took down their names, etc., etc., and sent them away with his blessing. But this organization was short-lived.

One day there called at the Reynolds homestead a respectably dressed man, selling collar buttons. He was greeted by the owner as though he were a long-lost brother, and seated in one of the easiest chairs.

Mr. Reynolds got down to the seventeenth volume of the "Mendicant Register," and asked the weary traveler all about his ancestors, habits, age, and so on, as usual; but when he wanted to weigh the peddler, the latter evidently thought it time to call a halt. He plainly told his host that it was not the year for taking the census, intimating strongly, in oddly shaped sentences, that he was there entirely in the shirt-fastening interest.

Mr. Reynolds explained, by way of reply, that only the previous day he had bought no less than three collar buttons at the shop, which would last him for some months to come, and that his wife did not use such things.

He then started in to compare the present times with the days of the old Greeks and Romans, when they fastened their shirts with rope. At this the collar button vendor got vexed and saw that he had been merely the victim of statistics.

His sense of humor being dull, he forthwith proceeded to handle "Brother" Reynolds rather roughly. Having placed the statistician on the floor, he sat on him, took away his watch and other valuables, and after kicking the dog, departed.

In time the editor of the "Mendicant Register" came to himself. After adjusting his clothing he sat down to think things over.

Had he made a mistake? Was it true that his efforts to learn all about the poor—their troubles, their views and their aims—had been in vain?

The pugilistic collar-button salesman had told him some plain truths, and had brought them right home in a rather unpleasant manner. As a result of a long, serious "think," Reynolds finally came to the conclusion that he would let the poor work out their own salvation. For his books of record, he removed them to the cellar, and they were used as fuel for his furnace.

Slight Formalities.

"There's no use of you hanging around here unless you're willing to work," said the energetic woman.

"Lady," replied Pudding Pete, "I'm willing to work. But I belong to the Association of Industrious Inspectors. If you'll tell me what chores you want done and how much you'll pay, I'll go to town and ask our secretary to O. K. the contract. Only you'll have to advance me $7.44 to pay the expenses of the trip."

IN STERLING LIVES A GIRL

Who Suffered As Many Girls
Do—Tells How She Found Relief

STERLING, Conn.—"I am a girl of 22 years and I used to faint away every month and was very weak. I was also bothered a lot by female weakness. I read your little book 'Wisdom for Women' and I saw how others had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it, and it has made me feel like a new girl and I am now relieved of all these troubles. I hope all young girls will get relief as I have. I never felt better in my life."—Miss BERTHA A. PASQUIN, Box 116, Sterling, Conn.

Massena, N. Y.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I highly recommend it. If anyone wants to write to me I will gladly tell her about my case. I was certainly in a bad condition as my blood was all turning to water. I had pimples on my face and a bad color, and for five years I had been troubled with suppression. The doctors called it 'Anemia and Exhaustion,' and said I was all run down, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me out all right."—Miss LAVISA MYRES, Box 74, Massena, N. Y.

Young Girls, Heed This Advice.

Girls who are troubled with painful irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Too Good an Excuse.

A young man, having broken an appointment with Doctor Franklin, came to him the following day and made a very handsome apology for his absence. He was proceeding when the doctor stopped him with: "My good boy, say no more; you have said too much already; for the man who is so good at making an excuse is seldom good at anything else."—Life.

gibles, side on, were big saucages and their planes specks. To the eye, this meeting was like that of two small flocks of soaring birds apparently unable to change their course. But imagination could picture the fearful clash of forces, whose wounded would find the succor of no hospital except impact on the earth below.

Marta put her hands over her eyes for only a second, she thought, before she withdrew them in vexation—hadn't she promised herself not to be cowardly?—to see one Brown dirigible and two Brown aeroplanes ascending at a sharp angle above a cloud of smoke to escape the high-angle guns of the Grays.

"We've got them all! No lips survive to tell what the eye saw!" exclaimed the engineer captain, his words bubbling with the joy of water in the sunlight. "As I thought," he continued in professional enthusiasm and discrimination.

With high-power binoculars glued to his eyes, he then turned to see if the faint brown line of Dellarme's men were going to hold or break. If it held, he might have hours in which to complete his task; if it broke, he had only minutes.

Marta came up the terrace path from the chrysanthemum bed in time to watch the shroud of shrapnel smoke billowing over the knoll, to visualize another scene in place of the collision of the squadrons, and to note the captain's exultation over Fracasse's repulse.

"How we must have punished them!" he exclaimed to his lieutenant. "How we must have mowed them down! Lanstron certainly knew what he was doing."

"You mean that he knew how we should mow them down?" asked Marta. Not until she spoke did he realize that she was standing near him.

"Why, naturally! If we hadn't mowed them down his plan would have failed. Mowing them down was the only way to hold them back," he said, and seeing her horror made haste to add: "Miss Galland, now you know what a ghastly business war is."

MONUMENTS

IN erecting a monument, one should remember that it is not a mere mass of stone, but a memorial of honor that is to perpetuate the memory of the departed. Therefore, select the material to be had. Look to its beauty of design, and the quality of material. Many years in the monument business has taught us that good monuments cannot be made at cut prices, but it has also taught us how to make the best monument at the lowest possible price.

We have on hand a complete assortment of designs, which we place at your disposal. We use nothing but the best stone. Come in and look at our stock of monuments built of Wisconsin Blue Granite, "The Silk of the Trade." The ideal monumental granite.

It will be worse here than there.

"Yes," she said blankly. Her colorless cheeks, her drooping underlip convinced him that now, with a little show of masculine authority, he would gain his point.

"You and your mother must go!" he said firmly. This was the very thing to whip her thoughts back from the knoll. He was thunderstruck at the transformation: hot color in her cheeks, eyes aflame, lips curving around a whirlwind of words.

"You name the very reason why I wish to stay. Why do you want to save the women? Why shouldn't they bear their share? Why don't you want them to see men mowed down? Is it because you are ashamed of your profession? Why, I ask?"

The problem of dealing with an angry woman breaking a shell fire of questions over his head had not been solved in the captain's curriculum like other professional problems, nor was it mentioned in the official instructions about the defenses of the Galland house. He aimed to smile soothingly in the helplessness of man in presence of feminine fury.

"It is an old custom," he was saying, but she had turned away. "Lanny's plan—mow them down! mow them down! mow them down!" she went on, more to herself than to him.

Was there nothing for her to do? Could she only look on in a fever of restlessness while action roared around her? The sight of several automobile ambulances in the road at the foot of the garden stilled the throbs of distraction in her temples with an answer. The wounded! They were already coming in from the field.

She hurried down the terrace steps. The major surgeon in charge, in a white coat, was standing in the vicinity, was about to tell her so automatically; then, in view of her intensity, he waited for her to speak.

"You will let us do something for them!" Marta asked. "We will make them some hot soup."

He was immediately businesslike. No less than Dellarme or Fracasse or Lanstron or Westerling, he had been preparing throughout his professional career for this hour. The detail of caring for the men who were down had been worked out no less systematically than that of wounding them. "Thank you, no! We don't want to waste time," he replied. "We must get them away with all speed so that the ambulances may return promptly. It's only a fifteen-minute run to the hospital, where every comfort and appliance are ready and where they will be given the right things to eat."

"Then we will give them some wine!" Marta persisted. "Not if we can prevent it! Not to start hemorrhages! The field doctors have brandy for use when advisable, and there is brandy in all the ambulances."

Clearly, volunteer service was not wanted. There was no room at the immediate front for Florence Nightingales in the modern machine of war.

"Then water?" The major surgeon aimed to be patient to an earnest, attractive young woman.

"We have sterilized water—we have everything," he explained. "If we hadn't at this early stage I ought to be serving an apprenticeship in a village apothecary shop. Anything that means confusion, delay, unnecessary excitement is bad and unmerciful."

Marta was not yet at the end of her resources. The recollection of the dying private who had asked her mother for a rose in the last war flashed into mind.

"You haven't any flowers! They won't do any harm, even if they aren't sterilized. The wounded like flowers, don't they? Don't you like flowers? Look! We've millions!"

"Yes, I do. They do. A good idea. Bring all the flowers you want to." The major surgeon's smile to Marta was not altogether on account of her suggestion. "It ought to help anybody who was ever wounded anywhere in the world to have you give him a flower!" he was thinking.

She ran for an armful of blossoms and was back before the arrival of the first wounded man who preceded the stretchers on foot. He was holding up a hand bound in a white first-aid bandage which had a red spot in the center. Those hit in hand or arm, if the surgeon's glance justified it, were sent on up the road to a point a mile distant, where transportation in requisitioned vehicles was provided. These men were triumphant in their cheerfulness. They were alive; they had done their duty, and they had the proof of it in the coming souvenirs of scars.

Some of the forms on stretchers had peaceful faces in unconsciousness of their condition. Others had a look of wonder, of pain, of apprehension in their consciousness that death might be near. The single word "Shrapnel!" by a hospital-corps corporal told the story of crushed or lacerated features, in explanation of a white cloth covering a head with body uninjured.

Many of the wounded looked at Marta even more than at the flowers. It was good to see the face of a woman, her eyes limpid with sympathy, and it was not what she said but the way she spoke that brought smiles in response to hers. For she was no solemn ministering angel, but high-spirited, cheery of the sort that the major surgeon would have chosen to distribute flowers to the men. Every remark of the victims of war made its distinct and indelible impression on the gelatin of her mind.

"I like my blue aster better than that yellow weed of yours, Tom!"

"You didn't know Ed Schmidt got it? Yes, he was right next to me in the line."

"Say, did you notice Dellarme's smile? It was wonderful!"

"And old Bert Stransky! I heard him whistling the wedding march as he fired."

"Miss, I'll keep this flower forever!" "They say Billy Lister will live—he's cheek was shot away!"

"Once we got going I didn't mind. It seemed like as if I'd been fighting for years!"

"Hole no bigger than a lead-pencil. I'll be back in a week!"

"Yes, don't these little bullets make neat little holes?"

"We certainly gave them a surprise when they came up the hill! I wonder if we missed the fellow that jumped into the shell crater!"

"Our company got it worst!"

"Not any worse than ours, I'll wager!"

"Oh—can't you go easier? Oh—b—b—the groan ending in a clenching of the teeth."

"Hello, Jake! You here, too, and going in my automobile? And we've both got lower berths!"

"Sh—b! That poor chap's dying!"

Worst of all to Marta was the case of a shrapnel fracture of the cranium, with the resulting delirium, in which the sufferer's incoherence included memories of childhood scenes, moments on the firing-line, calls for his mother, and prayers to be put out of misery. A prod of the hypodermic from the major surgeon, and "On the operating table in fifteen minutes" was the answer to Marta's question if the poor fellow would live.

Until dark, in groups, at intervals, and again singly, the wounded were coming in from a brigade front in the region where the rifles were crackling and the shrapnel clouds were hanging prettily over the hills; and stretchers were being slipped into place in the ambulances, while Marta kept at her post.

"We shan't have much more to do at this station," said the major surgeon when a plodding section of infantry in retreat arrived.

CHAPTER XI.

At the Galland House.

Every unit engrossed in his own work! Every man taught how a weak link may break a chain and realizing himself as a link and only a link! The captain of engineers forgot Marta's existence as an error of his subordinates caught his eye, and he went to caution the axmen to cut closer to the ground, as stumps gave cover for riflemen. For the time being he had no more interest in the knoll than in the wreckage of the dirigibles which were down and out of the light.

After all, the knoll was only a single point on the vast staff map—only one of many points of a struggle whose progress was bulletined through the sifting of regimental, brigade, division and corps headquarters in net results to the staff. Partow and Lanstron overlooked all. Their knowledge made the vast map live under their eyes. But our concern is with the story of two companies, and particularly of two companies, and that is story enough. If you would grasp the whole, multiply the conflict on the knoll by ten thousand.

There had been the engrossment of transcendent emotion in repelling the charge. What followed was like some grim and passionless trance with triggers ticking off the slow-passing minutes. Dellarme aimed to keep down the fusillade from Fracasse's trench and yet not to neglect the fair targets of the reserves advancing by rushes to the support of the 125th. Reinforced, the gray streak at the bottom of the slope poured in a heavier fire. Above the steady crackle of bullets sent and the whistle of bullets received rose the cry of "Doctor! Doctor!" which meant each time that another Brown rifle had been silenced. The litter bearers, hard pressed to remove the wounded, left the dead. Already death was a familiar sight—an article of exchange in which Dellarme's men dealt freely. The man at Stransky's side had been killed outright. He lay face down on his rifle stock. His cap had fallen off. Stransky put it back on the man's head, and the example was followed in other cases. It was a good idea to keep up a show of a full line of caps to the enemy.

Suddenly, as by command, the fire from the base of the knoll ceased altogether. Dellarme understood at once what this meant—the next step in the course of a systematic, irresistible approach by superior numbers. It was to allow the ground scouts to advance. Individual gray spots detaching themselves from the gray-streak began to crawl upward in search of dead spaces where the contour of the ground would furnish some protection from the blaze of bullets from the crest.

"Over their heads! Don't try to hit them!" Dellarme passed the word.

"That's it! Spare one to get a dozen!" said Stransky, grinning in ready comprehension. He seemed to be grinning every time that Dellarme looked in that direction. He was plainly enjoying himself. His restless nature had found sport to its taste.

The creeping scouts must have signaled back good news, for groups began crawling slowly after them.

"Over their heads! Encourage them!" Dellarme commanded.

After they had advanced two or three hundred yards they stopped, shoulders and hands exposed in silhouette, and began to work feverishly with their apades.

"Oh, beautiful!" cried Stransky. "That baby captain of ours has some brains, after all! We'll get them now and we'll get them when they run!"

But they did not run. Unfalteringly they took their punishment while they turned over the protecting soil in the midst of their own dead and wounded. In a few minutes they had dropped

DELMAR WANTS

A NEW STATION

A few months ago we were promised a remodeling of the station at this place, and as it sometimes goes, we are still living on the promise.

Delmar has more passenger traffic than any station its size on the line and we are compelled to put up with the least accommodation. We doubt if there is another station anywhere of any size that has no room for the accommodation of the ladies. At Delmar, we have but one room for all; men, women and children, and while the men usually show respect toward the ladies, nevertheless they want and feel that they are deserving of the same respect as is shown the ladies of other towns, viz: A ladies' waiting room.

We feel that it is nothing but right that the important subject be taken up with the railroad officials and a request be made that the ladies of this town shall have the same accommodations here as they are tendered at other stations along the line.

We have waited a long time and have taken promises for such an improvement until we have about given up anything being done.

We could mention several places along the line where they have all the latest devices and accommodations, the waiting rooms, and all necessary conveniences for both men and women, and with a separate waiting room for each. But Delmar is far from being in the list.—News-Herald.

MARLEY, THE CLOWN

By ELIZABETH SCHOEN COBB.

From a distance Marley, circus clown, worshiped the daring female equestrienne, Gloria. It was no wonder. She was unlike any dainty-toed, sylph-fashioned girl who had ever awayed trippingly across the platform back of a trained ring steed. There was none of the slithering praise seeker in her smile or of flailing audacity in her pose. She was simply a lively, delighted girl, full of vivacity and loving the sawdust atmosphere because she had been brought up in it. Her father having been a ringmaster for over a quarter of a century.

Gloria's father watched his motherless child as the apple of his eye. He was jealous of any attention bestowed upon her by her fellow actors. When her part was over, her chaperone took charge of her.

"A new clown, eh?" he remarked to the manager the day Marley appeared to succeed the one he had replaced.

"Yes, and a good one," was the response. "He will have to learn the antics, but as to the face and voice, he is a genius."

So it proved. All the players knew that Marley had been an actor, then a teacher in a school of mimicry. Then the new-comer turned out to be a mystery. He acted strange and unsocial. One would almost guess he was striving to hide himself from somebody or something.

"He leaves the show and disappears, and you never see him on the street," said Mr. Rice one day to the manager.

"What matters, so he fills the bill and draws the crowd?" retorted the manager.

"Yes, he does that, all right," was conceded.

Then there happened something that awoke both gratitude and uneasiness in the old ringmaster. One night, just as Gloria was rounding the ring with tip-toe elegance, a gasoline chandelier fell across the head of the steed she rode.

The horse screamed, reared and backed. Gloria sprang lightly to the sawdust floor of the arena. A whirl of the scattering flames, however, had caught her light gauzy dress.

A shriek of alarm rang from the audience at this vivid picture of impending destruction.

"She is doomed!"

"Save her—oh, quick!"

The ringmaster stood petrified with helpless dread. Others in the ring moved forward, but stupidly gazed, with no plan of aid or rescue. A quick figure suddenly flew past dressing-room curtains. It was Marley.

His face was white as death, his eyes glowed eager fire. He had torn down a drapery in his mad rush. How he did it, he himself could not tell afterwards, but in a flash he had enveloped that beloved form, extinguished the flames and Gloria, her hair barely singed, bowed and smiled to the audience, while Marley tottered back out of view, face and hands seared and blistered.

But the audience would not have it that way. They yelled and clapped their hands and shouted until the manager forced Marley into the ring. Gloria, radiant, had caught his hand, and both stood bowing amid the deafening plaudits.

The thrill of that sweet contact rewarded Marley for all he suffered. Then after that, whenever she came to the tent, Gloria lingered always a few moments by the side of her hero.

This was that the ringmaster resented, fearing a growing attachment between the two. He need not have worried, however. Marley held Gloria as high above him as the stars. Besides that, a certain secret in his life oppressed him, crushed him, shut him away from appearing as the true man that he really was.

It was one morning, about a week after this episode, that a few of the actors met to rehearse a new act. The ringmaster, for a wonder, was absent, but his daughter and Marley were both on hand.

They had drawn aside in the dressing-room entrance to await their call in the act being rehearsed, and were conversing casually, she with interest as always in her companion, he with glowing eyes, for her presence was a sweet balm to his loneliness and trouble, when two men came through the main entrance and approached the manager.

"You have a man here named Marley," spoke one of them.

"Yes, what of it?" snapped the manager, ruffled at the intrusion.

"We are officers of the law, and we have a warrant for his arrest as Charles Page."

Gloria fixed her startled eyes upon her companion. Marley had paled. He shrank back slightly.

"He is a criminal, an embezzler," continued the officer.

"I shall go with him," spoke Marley, quickly. "I am neither Charles Page nor an embezzler, but duty demands that I should be the scapegoat for both."

"Oh, I knew you were innocent!" cried Gloria, her hands clasping his arm fervently. "No, you shall not sacrifice yourself. Quick—this way!"

It was with considerable wonderment that a search for Marley began, the manager noting that he had disappeared. It was with irascible defeat that the officers realized that their prey had escaped them.

Gloria's heart fluttered for hours after that. More than once her eyes glanced toward the cage where her performing tiger, Hudah, was confined. She learned that a guard of officers hung around the outside of the tent.

And there within, in the cage, hidden by the great canvas cover of the cage wagon, Marley lurked. He was at the mercy of the ferocious Hudah, but he held his silence, made the animal gentle as a kitten towards him—the scarf Gloria always wore when in the cage. When the great circus caravan wended its slow, gaudy way from the city the next day, the watching officers again missed it in finding a clue to the man who had vanished.

The show made a long trip across four states. That evening they settled at their fixed stand, Rice called Marley into his room at the hotel.

"Now, then, I want your story," he said, mandatorily.

"Why?" challenged Marley.

"For Gloria's sake."

That was enough. If Gloria was interested, Ah! was it friendship, gratitude only? But Marley recalled all the details of an event, where, to save a sorrowing mother, he had assumed the blame of the crime of another.

"I have an offer for a long tour in Europe," said Rice. "There you would be safe."

"But why should I trouble you thus?" began Marley, and the old ringmaster answered:

"I think Gloria will wish to go where you go. She believes in you. Are you dense, man? She loves you, and I know you to be a man of honor, and so—"

And so the circus romance ended in a quiet, happy wedding, and peace, and security and love.

LIKES TO ENCOURAGE BORES

Formerly Man Shunned Them, But Now He Listens and Smiles Graciously.

"A friend of mine," said Maj. Jasper Bulwinkle, according to the Indianapolis News, "has taken on a new fad, of which he is likely for some time to come to have a monopoly. For some time it has been in my mind that he was in some fashion making a study of me. He was not long since a person of somewhat triscent temper and listened badly to some, I may say to nearly all of my best stories. Now he smiles encouragingly and listens as a lamb meekly to any narrative, no matter how ancient, how long or how dreary it may be."

"No matter how anecdotal an anecdote, in the telling he remains smiling to the end. I have recently found out that I am not the only person to whom he is so gracious, that half a dozen persons whom you and I know to be out and out bores are being assiduously fostered and encouraged by my strange friend, and I no longer enjoy the monopoly I supposed was mine."

"It is a whim, a fad," he admitted to me the other day, "that I have taken up and out of it I get not only amusement—and some little instruction—but a discipline in patience that I have long needed. It is teaching me to be kind, gentle and considerate of certain of my fellow creatures who heretofore I have shunned as a pestilence and to whom has been given the unlabeled designation of bores. Thus far in this new cult I believe I am without competition. I have entered a neglected field, a field from which other students of mankind have been too willing to escape. I am only sorry that the greatest commonwealth of boredom has been overlooked, nay, positively shunned by me so long. My fear now is that when these bore friends make the discovery that I am actually finding enjoyment in their fatiguing wearisomeness they will set up a quarantine against me."

Process of Evolution.

The evening primrose of Lamarck is a flower which, Hugo de Vries has discovered, most easily proves Lamarck's theory that evolution proceeds by "leaps" and not by slow and imperceptible changes over millions of years. De Vries announced at the University of Brussels that one or two in every hundred evening primrose seedlings would produce new races that are readily kept pure during their succeeding generations. He predicts that the principle of variability discovered here and in other plants and animals shows the way into a "vast new domain of investigation."

A Happy Home

"My health was so miserable for years that I was practically an invalid. We had no family, owing to my ill health. I was induced to give Peruna a trial, and found very quickly that it was helping me.

I am now well and happy. We have a baby boy. He is our first and only child.

"I am now well and happy. We have a baby boy, which we believe is the direct consequence of my improved health. He is our first and only child, and if Peruna had not cured me of my ailments we should never have had him. I hope every suffering woman will give Peruna a trial, the same as I have."

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

Proves By The Pikes Peak Test

No where else in all the world is there such a test of the time keeping quality of a watch as on the famous Pikes Peak Cog Railway in Colorado, where the steep grades of the mountain necessitate the use of cog wheels to control the train, and vibration often so injures ordinary watches that an expert repairman must readjust them.

A conductor on the Pike's Peak road made a ninety-day test of the South Bend Watch last summer.

No adjustment of the watch was made for the whole period, but at the end of the test, examination showed a variation of less than one-half second per day. Do you think the watch you carry could stand a test like this?

We will be pleased to show you our line of these guaranteed accurate watches and explain to you how a South Bend Watch adjusts itself to every temperature variation.

THE FRINGED GENTIAN.

Thou blossom bright with autumn dew.
And colored with the heaven's own blue,
That openest when the quiet night
Succeeds the keen and frosty night.

Thou comest not when violets lean
O'er wandering brooks and springs unseen,
Or columbines in purple dressed
Nod o'er the ground bird's hidden nest.

Thou waitest late and comest alone,
When woods are bare and birds are down,
And frosts and shortening days portend
The aged year is near its end.

Then doth thy sweet and quiet eye
Look through its fringes to the sky.
Blue—blue, as if that sky let fall
A flower from its cerulean wall.

I would that this, when I shall see
The hour of death draw near to me,
Hope blossoming within my heart
May look to heaven as I depart.
—William Cullen Bryant

SENTENCE SERMONS.

The soul has this proof of its divinity: The divine things delight it.—Seneca.

Righteousness tried by adversity has good grounds for glorying in its sorrow.—Ovid.

Nothing is more deceitful in appearance than false religion.—Livy.

Piety and holiness of life will propitiate the gods.—Cicero.

Punishment, though late, comes on with silent steps.—Tullius.

EVEN AS THE BEASTS.

There is no hope for nations! Search the page
Of many thousand years—the daily scene,
The flow and ebb of each recurring age,
The everlasting to be which hath been,
Hath taught us nought or little; still we lean
On things that rot beneath our weight and wear
Our strength away in wrestling with the air.

For 'tis our nature strikes us down, the beasts
Slaughtered in hourly hecatombs for feasts
Are of us high an order—they must go
Even where their driver goads them, though to slaughter.

Ye men, who pour your blood for kings as water,
What have they given your children in return?
A heritage of servitude and woes,
A blindfold bondage, where your hire is blows!

—Lord Byron.

LOVE OF KNOWLEDGE.

I solemnly declare that but for the love of knowledge I should consider the life of the meanest beggar and ditcher preferable to that of the greatest and richest man in existence, for the fire which the Persians burn on the mountains at night and day and is immortal and not to be quenched. Upon something it must act and feed—upon the pure spirit of knowledge or upon the foul dregs of polluting passions.—Sydney Smith.

LIFTED BURDENS.

The camel at the close of day,
Kneels down upon the sandy plain
To have his burden lifted off
And rest again.

My soul! Thou, too, shouldst to thy knees
When daylight draweth to a close
To have thy Master lift the load,
And grant repose.

The camel kneels at morning dawn
To have his guide replace the load,
Then rises up anew to take
The desert road.

So shouldst thou kneel at morning dawn,
That God may give thee daily care,
Assured that he no load too great
Will make thee bear.

A brave man's country is wherever he chooses his abode.—Rufus.

Our native land charms us with inexpressible sweetness and never allows us to forget that we belong to it.—Salust.

No government is safe unless protected by the good will of the people.—Nepos.

DECISION AND ENERGY.

For success in life it is essential that there should be a fixedness of purpose as to the object and designs to be attained. There should be a clear conception of the outlines of that character which is to be established. The business of life, in whatever pursuit it may be directed, is a great work. And in this, as in all other undertakings, it is important in the outset to have a clear conception of what is to be done. This is the first thing to be settled. The only rule for determining this is natural ability and natural aptitude or suitability for the particular business selected. The decision in such case should always be governed by that ideal of character which a man with high aspirations should always form for himself.—Alexander Stephens.

THE SITE OF WATERLOO.

Forbear! This plain is still too deaf with cries,
This soil too sanguine for thy stucco lies.

Shall earth where reeled the guard thy villa pen,
Where nations groaned be heard the cackling hen?

A mansion mark where in the gathering murk
Those terrible gray horsemen so did work?

Here wilt thou dare to live,
where such men died
And on that memorable dust re-lid?

Here only ever let the solemn moon
Uninterrupted weave a spirit noon.

Here only falter down a pensive dew
From skies too wistful to be purely blue.

But shouldst thou build on consecrated ground,
Then be those houses filled with spectral sound

Of clashing battle and the ghostly war
Of charging hosts against the battered door!

Let solemn bellow of hollow cannon boom,
A dreadful cavalry invade the gloom!

Until in awe of those who fell or fled
The living flee from the more living dead!

That silence now too conscious is for sound,
It broods upon itself and is self-bound.

Then let no builder of this field have lease,
'Tis let to time, the property of peace!

—Stephen Phillips in Poetry Review.

WAR.

War is the concentration of all human crimes. Under its standard gather violence, malignity, rage, fraud, rapacity and lust. If it only slew men it would do little. But it turns men into a beast of prey. Here is the evil of war—that man, made to be the brother, becomes the deadly foe of his kind; that man, whose duty is to mitigate suffering, makes the infliction of suffering his study and end.—William Ellery Channing.

APHORISMS ON COURAGE.

The soul, secured in her existence, smiles on the drawn dagger and defies its point.—Addison

Where life is more terrible than death it is then the truest valor to dare to live.—Sir Thomas Browne

The charm of the best courage is that they are inventions, inspirations, flashes of genius.—Emerson

Courage is, on all hands, considered as an essential of high character.—Hume

Suffered Twenty-One Years—
Finally Found Relief

Having suffered for twenty-one years with a pain in my side, I finally have found relief in Dr. Kline's Swamp-Root. Injections of morphine were my only relief for short periods of time. I became so sick that I had to undergo a surgical operation in New Orleans, which benefited me for two years. When the same pain came back one day I was so sick that I gave up hopes of living. A friend advised me to try your Swamp-Root and I at once commenced using it. The first bottle did me so much good that I purchased two more bottles. I am now on my second bottle and am feeling like a new woman. I passed a gravel stone as large as a big red bean and several small ones. I have not had the least feeling of pain since taking your Swamp-Root and I feel it my duty to recommend this great medicine to all suffering humanity. Gratefully yours,

PROCLAMATION.

Proposed Amendment To The Constitution Of Maryland.

WHEREAS, at the January Session of the General Assembly of Maryland, held in the year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fourteen, an act was passed, proposing an Amendment to Section 44 Part VII. of Article 4, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, which said Act is known and designated as Chapter 366 of the Acts of Maryland 1914, and is in the words and figures following:

CHAPTER 366

AN ACT to amend Section 44, Part VII. of Article 4, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, that the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Section 44, Part VII. of Article 4, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, to read, to-wit:

Sec. 44. There shall be elected in each county in every second year, one person, resident in said county above the age of twenty-five years, and at least five years preceding his election, a citizen of the State, to be the sheriff of said county, who shall hold office for two years thereafter; shall give such bond, exercise such powers and perform such duties as now are or may hereafter be fixed by law. In case of vacancy by death, resignation, refusal to serve, or removal from office, the Governor shall appoint a person to be sheriff for the remainder of the term.

In the City of Baltimore, at the General Election to be held in the year 1915 and every four years thereafter, there shall be elected in said City of Baltimore, one person who shall be a resident of said city, above the age of twenty-five years, and who shall have been at least five years a resident of said city in the State, to be the sheriff of said city.

He shall hold his office for four years, and until his successor is duly elected and qualified; shall be eligible for re-election; shall give such bond, exercise such powers and perform such duties as now are or may hereafter be fixed by law. The Sheriff elected in and for the City of Baltimore in November 1914, shall be eligible for re-election.

In case of vacancy by death, resignation, refusal to serve, or neglect to qualify or give bond, or by disqualification or removal from said City, the Governor shall appoint a person to be sheriff for the remainder of the term. The Sheriff appointed in and for the City of Baltimore shall receive such salary as may be fixed by law, and such expenses necessary to the conduct of his office, as may be fixed by law, and shall be paid in such manner and at such times as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State shall be at the next General Election for members of Congress, the same being a general election, to be held in this State, submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article 11 of the Constitution of this State, and at said General Election the vote on the proposed amendment shall be by ballot, and upon such ballot there shall be printed the words, "For the Constitutional Amendment," and "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as now prescribed by law, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Article 11 of the Constitution, and if it shall appear to the Governor that the majority of the votes cast at said election, on said amendment, were in favor thereof, the Governor shall by his proclamation declare the said amendment, having received the majority of votes, adopted by the people of Maryland, and the Constitution of Maryland shall be amended accordingly.

borough, Governor of the State of Maryland, in pursuance of the direction contained in Section 1, of Article 11, of the Constitution of Maryland, and in compliance with the provisions of Section 2 of the above recited Act, do hereby order and direct, that a copy of said Chapter 366 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1914 aforesaid, be published in at least two newspapers in each of the counties of the State and in three newspapers published in the City of Baltimore, one of which newspapers in the City of Baltimore shall be published in the German language, once a week for at least three months next preceding the General Election for members of Congress, which election will be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1914, and at which election the said above proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be submitted, in the form and manner prescribed by the General Assembly, to the legal and qualified voters of the State for their adoption or rejection.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State of Maryland, this 17th day of July, in the year of our Lord One thousand nine hundred and fourteen.

TEST OF FRIENDSHIP

By JULIE CARSON.

"I think," said Phyllis to her husband as they were packing their trunks preparatory to taking their annual vacation trip, "that I shall ask Sue to take care of the chickens while I am gone. I know that she will be glad to do that much for me and—"

"Well, inasmuch as she lives next door and has only to cross the yard to feed them and seeing that she will probably get about a dozen and a half eggs a day from them, I don't think that you are putting her regard to a very severe test," replied Phyllis' husband.

"I wonder, John Billingsby, why it is that packing always seems to have such a disagreeable effect upon you," commented Phyllis, as she watched him staring helplessly at a bunch of neckties from which he was vainly trying to choose the best to put in his trunk. "You never seem to be able to pack a trunk without unpacking your bad temper at the same time. You know very well that Sue doesn't like chickens; she says that their habit of always eating makes her nervous, and as for the eggs, she would rather buy them at the store than get them at the cost of caring for the chickens."

"And have you thought whom you would inflict that Angela kitten upon?" questioned her husband.

"Oh, that's all settled," declared Phyllis, triumphantly. "Ruth Comfort is going to take the kitten. You know she adores cats, but her husband has an antipathy for them and won't let her have one, but he has consented to allow her to borrow mine while we are gone and Ruth is as happy as if she had come into the possession of a fortune and has promised me to treat it as her own. Ruth is really devoted to me and I think that if she hated cats she would be just as conscientious in her care of my kitten, simply out of pure friendship."

"Pure friendship!" echoed Billingsby, as he folded and unfolded, then folded again a white flannel outing

"Just Getting Acquainted."

coat that he had bought in a moment of reckless determination to make this trip the gayest one in his experience. "I'll be willing to wager this coat that Sue will be so sick of her chickens and Ruth so disgusted with that cat's sly ways that they will be heartily glad to see you back. It's a pity people cannot go away on vacations without unloading all their responsibilities and possessions on their friends and neighbors. By the way, where did you send our Kirmanshaw rug? That's worth more than a bushel of chickens and kittens."

"Oh, the rug is over at the Stevens'; they were delighted to have it."

The next day the Billingsbys went on their way. At the end of three weeks they returned with a thick coat of tan on their faces, and a very thin layer of bills in their purses, and in their hearts the deepest of thankfulness to be back.

Mrs. Billingsby's first act was to go over to Sue's to get the key to the chicken coop.

"Oh, are you back so soon?" said Sue with badly concealed consternation and disappointment in her face. "I had just got the chickens under my wings and in another week I know I could have done wonders."

She yielded up the key unwillingly and Mrs. Billingsby felt that her return was anything but welcome. She sadly betook herself to the comfort home, where more consternation awaited her.

"Why, it seems as if you had just gone!" declared Ruth, with no attempt to hide her dismay. "Kitty and I were just getting acquainted, and she is so used to her new basket that I am sure she will be quite unhappy if you take her away at once."

The vacant place on the floor of the Shaw's living room where the loaned rug was removed was another reproach. By the time Mrs. Billingsby reached her own home the gladness had faded from her face.

"They all seemed sorry to have me back," she confessed, "and they made me feel like a cruel impostor when I asked for the return of my own belongings."

"It is curious," commented Billingsby, "how a warm and pure friendship for a person—for a very nice person I might say—can be supplanted by an impersonal affection for a chicken, or a kitten, or a rug. But at least you have put your friends to the test and know the depth of their regard."—Chicago Daily News.

Select Your Seed Corn Before Storing

Proper Curing and Storage Will Insure a Better Stand.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ,
 Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Now is the time to take the first important step in preparing for a profitable corn crop next year. Don't consider seed good simply because it will grow. It should also retain its full vigor. The only way full vigor can be retained is to take care of the seed properly. This can be done by selecting the seed before storing it. The superiority of properly preserved seed over that picked from the crib, even though the crib seed germinates well, has been proven over and over again. The increase in yield if the well-preserved seed over crib picked seed usually running from 10 to 30 per cent.

The farmer can secure good seed from his own field if it has matured well and he has a variety that has proven generally successful in his neighborhood. The best way to select seed is from the stalk in the field as soon as it has ripened. But if this has not been done the next best thing to do is to select carefully in the field at the time of husking and hauling to the crib.

SELECTING SEED CORN.

The most important step in seed selection, however, is to place the ears selected, in a dry place with free circulation of air so that they will dry out quickly. The storage room may be any place where air circulates freely, such as a wagon shed, barn loft, or attic. But do not throw the seed on a pile; that would not be much improvement over the crib. Tie the ears in bunches on a string or in some other way, placing them so that there is free circulation of air around each ear. The seed should be left in this manner until it is as dry as a bone, which usually takes about two months. After this it may be stored in mouse-proof boxes or barrels or crates if desired, or they may be allowed to remain where they are.

HELP OF MARYLAND POULTRY KEEPERS IN SUPPRESSING NEW DISEASE IS REQUESTED.

ROY H. WAITE,
 Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station

A peculiar poultry disease has been reported in several parts of Maryland. The symptoms are very characteristic and well defined, but I have been unable to find the disease recorded in any of the poultry publications. Losses have been very heavy in flocks affected therefore, all poultry raisers should co-operate to learn the cause of the disease and methods of combatting it.

Everyday Virtues.

An intrepid courage is at best but a holiday kind of virtue, to be seldom exercised, and never but in case of necessity, wrote John Dryden. Affability, mildness, tenderness and a word which I would fain bring back to its original signification of virtue, I mean good nature, are of daily use; they are the bread of mankind, and staff of life.

APPLE CROP WILL REQUIRE CAREFUL HANDLING

Conditions Abroad Will Make Quality Fruit More Than Ever Necessary In Securing Profits.

T. B. SYMONS,
 Maryland Agricultural College.

There is a large apple crop throughout the country this fall, but not nearly so large as at first thought, and not nearly so large as the 1912 crop. Further the unusual conditions existing by virtue of the war in Europe affect the apple market chiefly through a feeling of uneasiness among the dealers, who have usually bought apples for exportation or for distribution in our markets through the winter. Yet even if Europe does not take a single barrel, the crop can be marketed in this country, if judiciously handled, with satisfaction to all.

Growers should be extremely careful to see that the apples are picked properly. Proper picking and handling has great value in the sale of apples. With some varieties the trees should be picked over two or three times. Do not allow the fruit to remain in the orchard exposed to the sun. Fruit should be hauled on wagons, equipped with springs. Indications are that poor grades of fruit will bring practically nothing on the market. It also has an effect on the market of good apples. It will be better to keep this class of fruit at home. I have seen several growers who have sold their good apples for a fair price, Jonathans and Grimes at $3 per bbl. and Yorks at $2.50 and $2. Don't ship your fruit to a market where it would bring not more than $1.25.

The Office of Markets, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, makes the following suggestions:

1st—That growers pick and handle fruit in such condition as to insure it against deterioration.

2d—That growers, associations and operators who use the barrel as a container adopt the standard barrel, and uniformly grade and pack the crop in compliance with the standards of the Sultz Law, branding their packages accordingly.

3rd—That all inferior grades be eliminated from the green fruit markets, and diverted as far as possible, to cider mills, canneries and evaporators.

4th—That only long-keeping, standard-packed varieties be placed in cold storage.

5th—That a special effort be made to fully supply small towns by direct sales, for the purpose of securing equitable distribution and avoiding the suggestion of large markets.

6th—That all growers, operators, dealers and associations early reconcile themselves to the conditions, and arrive at an estimate of true values in order to assure quick movement of the crop from producer to consumer.

SELECTION OF SEED CORN.

The most important step in seed selection, however, is to place the ears selected, in a dry place with free circulation of air so that they will dry out quickly. The storage room may be any place where air circulates freely, such as a wagon shed, barn loft, or attic. But do not throw the seed on a pile; that would not be much improvement over the crib. Tie the ears in bunches on a string or in some other way, placing them so that there is free circulation of air around each ear. The seed should be left in this manner until it is as dry as a bone, which usually takes about two months. After this it may be stored in mouse-proof boxes or barrels or crates if desired, or they may be allowed to remain where they are.

Judging Religious Sincerity.

"Brother Philander," said I to our head deacon the other day, "how do you judge a man's religious sincerity?" "Well," replied the old fellow with a smile, "if they belong to our church I consult my ledger. If they belong to some other church I go to the treasurer of that church."—Kansas City Star.

SICK WITH NEW DISEASE.

The symptoms and characteristics of the disease are as follows:

1. Old and young, both male and female, die.
2. Attacks come in cycles.
3. Hens in laying conditions die—many die soon after laying.
4. Head natural colors until death.
5. Eyelid swollen (yellowish). Sit around with eyes closed.
6. Marked and persistent diarrhoea (feces white—sometimes yellowish).
7. Birds appear weak and don't move much after attack commences.

In order to help determine just how widespread the disease is, report all outbreaks to the Poultry Department, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station, College Park, Md.

NOT TOO LATE TO PLANT RYE FOR SOIL IMPROVEMENT.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ,
 Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Rye can still be profitably planted as a cover and green manure crop. Its late fall and early spring growth enables it to use and return to the soil much nitrogen and other plant food that would otherwise be lost. On bare, steep, hilly land the loss of plant food from washing is more than that removed by crops each year. The most economical way to reduce this waste is to keep the soil covered with vegetation of some sort. Where the hillsides are producing clean culture crops, such as corn or potatoes, they should not be allowed to go into the winter without a growth of rye.

spades for rifles, and other sections either crawled or ran forward precipitately and fell to the task of joining the isolated beginnings into a single trench.

Again Dellarme looked toward regimental headquarters, his fixed, cheery smile not wholly masking the appeal in his eyes. The Grays had only two or three hundred yards to go when they should make their next charge in order to reach the crest. But his men had fifteen hundred to go in the valley before they were out of range. After their brave resistance facing the enemy they would receive a hail of bullets in their backs. This was the time to withdraw if there were to be assurance of a safe retreat. But there was no signal. Until there was, he must remain.

The trench grew; the day wore on. Two rifles to one were now playing against his devoted company, which had had neither food nor drink since early morning. As he scanned his thinning line he saw a look of bloodlessness and hopelessness gathering on the set faces of which he had grown so fond during this ordeal. Some of the men were crouching too much for effective aim.

"See that you fire low! Keep your heads up!" he called. "For your homes, your country and your God! Pass the word along!"

Parched throat after parched throat repeated the message hoarsely and leaden shoulders raised a trifle and dust-matted eyelashes narrowed sharply on the sights.

"For the man in us!" growled Straneky. "For the favor of nature at birth that gave us the right to wear trousers instead of skirts! For the joy of hell, give them hell!"

"For our homes! For the man in us!" they repeated, swallowing the words as if they had the taste of a stimulant.

But Dellarme knew that it would not take much to precipitate a break. He himself felt that he had been on that knoll half a lifetime. He looked at his watch and it was five o'clock. For seven hours they had held on. The Grays' trench was complete the breadth of the slope; more reserves were coming up. The brigade commander of the Grays was going to make sure that the next charge succeeded.

At last Dellarme's glance toward regimental headquarters showed the flag that was the signal for withdrawal. Could he accomplish it? The first lieutenant, with a shattered arm, had gone on a litter. The old sergeant was dead, a victim of the colonial wars. Used to fighting savage enemies, he had been too eager in exposing himself to a civilized foe. He had been shot through the throat.

"Men of the first section," Dellarme called, "you will slip out of line with the greatest care not to let the enemy know that you are going!"

"Going—going! Careful! Men of the first section go!" the parched throats repeated in a thrilling whisper. "Those who remain keep increasing their fire!" called Dellarme again. "Cover the whole breadth of the trench!"

Every fourth man wormed himself backward on his stomach until he was below the sky-line when his stiffened limbs brought him to his feet and he started on a dead run down into the valley and toward a cut behind another knoll across the road from the Galland house. The others followed at intervals.

Once across a road and up three series of steps of the other garden terrace, behind a breastwork of sandbags, the company rested. Most of them had fallen asleep on the ground after finishing their rations, logs of men in animal exhaustion. Some of those awake were too weary to give to each other more than a nod and smile. They had witnessed too much horror that day to talk about it. But Straneky foraged.

Marta, coming out on the veranda, saw him.

"You are tired! You are hungry!" she said with urgent gentleness. "Come in!"

He followed her into the house and dropped on a leather chair before a shining table in a room paneled with oak, wondering at her and at himself. No woman of Marta's world had ever spoken in that way to him. But it was good to sit down. Then a maid with a sad, winsome face and tender eyes brought him wine and bread and cold meat and jam. He gulped down a glassful of wine; he ate with great mouthfulness in the ravenous call of healthy, exhausted tissues, while the maid stood by to cut more bread.

"When it comes to eating after fighting—"

He looked up when the first pangs of hunger were assuaged. Enormous, broad-shouldered, physical, his cheeks flushed with wine, his eyes opened wide and brilliant with the fire that was in his nature—eyes that spoke the red business of anarchy and war.

"Say, but you're pretty!"

Springing up, he caught her hand and made to kiss her in the brushness of impulse. Minna struck him a stinging blow in the face. He received it as a mauling would receive a bite from a pup, and she stood her ground, her eyes challenging his fearlessly.

"So you are like that!" he said thoughtfully. "It was a good one, and you meant it, too."

"Decidedly," she answered. "There's more where that came from!"

Then little Carlissa Eileen entered and pressed against her mother's skirts, subjecting Straneky to childhood's scrutiny. He waved a finger at her and grinned and drew his eyes together in a squint at the bridge of his nose, making a funny face that brought a laugh.

"Your child?" Straneky asked Minna.

"Yes."

"Where's her father? Away fighting?"

"I don't know where he is!"

"Oh!" he mused. "Was that blow for him at the same time as for me?"

He pursued thoughtfully.

"Yes, for all of your kind."

"M-m-m!" came from between his lips as he rose. "Would you mind holding on your hand?" he asked with a gentleness singularly out of keeping with his rough aspect.

"Why?" she demanded. "I've never studied any books of etiquette of polite society, and I am a poor sort at making speeches, anyhow. But I want to kiss a good woman's hand by way of apology. I never kissed one in my life, but I'm getting a lot of new experiences today. Will you?"

She held out her hand at arm's length and flushed slightly as he pressed his lips to it.

"You certainly cut thick slices," he said smiling. "And you certainly are pretty," he added, passing out of the door as jauntily as if he were ready for another fight and just in time to see the colonel of the regiment come around the house. He stood at the salute, half proudly, half defiantly, but in no wise humbly.

"Well, Major Dellarme!" was the colonel's greeting of the company commander.

"Major!" exclaimed Dellarme. "Yes, Partow has the power. Four of the aviators have iron crosses already and promotion, too; and you are a major. Company G got into a mess and the whole regiment would have been in one unless you held on. So I let you stay. It all came out right, as Lanstron planned—right so far. But your losses have been heavy and here you are in the thick of it again. Your company may change places with Company E, which has had a relatively easy time."

"No, sir; we would prefer to stay," Dellarme answered quietly.

"Good! Then you will take this battalion and I'll transfer Goller to Alvery's. Bad loss, Alvery—shrapnel. The artillery has been doing ugly work, but that is all in favor of the defensive. If we can hold them on this line till tomorrow noon, it's all we want for the present," he concluded.

"We hold them! Don't worry!" put in Straneky.

If a private had spoken to a colonel in this fashion at drill, without being spoken to, it would have been a glaring breach of military etiquette. Now that they were at war it was different. Real comradeship between officer and man begins with war.

"We shall, eh?" chuckled the colonel. "You look big enough to hold anything, young man! Here! Isn't this fellow that Lanstron got off?"

"Yes, sir," answered Dellarme.

"Well, was Lanstron right?"

"Yes, sir."

"Wonderful man, Lanstron!"

"He knows just a little too much!" Straneky growled.

As Fracasso's men rose from their trench for the final charge and found that the enemy had gone, an officer of the brigade staff brought instructions to the colonel.

"The batteries are going to emplace here for your support in the morning. You will move as soon as your men have eaten and occupy positions B-31 to B-35. That gives you a narrow front for one battalion, with two battalions in reserve to drive home your attack. The chief of staff himself desires that we take the Galland house before noon. The enemy must not have the encouragement of any successes."

"So easy for Westerling to say," thought the colonel; while aloud he acknowledged the message with proper spirit.

Before the order to move was given the news of it passed from lip to lip among the men in tired whispers. Since dawn they had lived through the impressions of a whole war, and they had won. With victory they had not thought of the future, only of their hunger. After the nightmare of the charge, after hearing death whispering for hours intimately in their ears, they were too weary and too far thrown out of the adjustments of any natural habits of thought and feeling to realize the horror of eating their dinners in the company of the dead.

New they were to go through another hell, but many of them in their exhaustion were chiefly concerned as to whether or not they should get any sleep that night.

The satire of war makes the valet's son a hero; the chance of war kills the manufacturer's son and lets the day-laborer's son live; the sport of war gives the latent forces of a Brannsky full play; the glory of war brings Dellarme quick promotion; the glamour and the spectacular folly of war turn the bolts of the lightning which man has mastered against man. Perhaps the savage who learned that he could start a flame by rubbing two dry sticks together may have set fire to the virgin forest and wild grass in order to destroy an enemy—and naturally with disastrous results to himself if he mistook the direction of the wind.

Marta Galland's thoughts at dusk when she returned up the steps to the house were of the wreckage of the hot whirlwind of war left. She was seeing fathers staring and mothers weeping. Her experience with the wounded drawing deep on the wells of sympathy, heightened her loathing of war and of all who planned and ordered it and led its legions. She had been engaged since dark in completing the work of moving valuable articles from the front to the rear rooms of the house, which had begun early in the day by Minna and the coachman.

She was at the door of her mother's room, which was like an antique shop. Old plates lay on top of old tables, with vases on the floor under the tables. Surrounded by her treasures, Mrs. Galland awaited the attack; not as a soldier awaits it, but as that venerable Roman senator of the story faced the barbarous Gauls—neither disputing the power of their spears nor yielding the self-respect of his own mind and soul. She had lain down in her wrapper for the night, and the light from a single candle—she still favored candles—revealed her features calm and philosophical among the pillows. Yet the magic of war, reaching deep into hidden emotions, had her also under its spell. Her voice was at once more tender and vital.

"Marta, I see that you are all on wire!"

"Yes; jangling wires, every one, jangling every second out of tune," Marta acquiesced.

"Marta, my father"—her father had been a premier of the Browns—"always said that you may enjoy the luxury of tussling over little things, for they don't count much one way or another; but about big things you must never fuss or you will not be worthy of big things. Marta, you cannot stop a railroad train with your hands. This is not the first war on earth and we are not the first women who ever thought that war was wrong. Each of us has his work to do and you will have yours. It does no good to tire yourself out and fly to pieces, even if you do know so much and have been around the world."

She smiled as a woman of sixty, who has a secret heart-break that she has never given her husband a son, may smile at a daughter who is both son and daughter to her, and her plump hand, all curves like her plump face and her plump body, spread open in appeal.

Marta, who, in the breeding of her generation, felt sentiment as more or less of a lure from logic, dropped beside the bed in a sudden burst of sentiment and gathered the plump hand in hers and kissed it.

"Mother, you are wonderful!" she said. "Mother, you are great!"

After a time, her ear becoming accustomed to the firing as a city dweller to the distant roar of city traffic, Mrs. Galland slept. But Marta could not follow her advice. If, transiently at least, she had found something of the peace of the confessional, the vigor of youth was in her arteries, and youth cannot help remaining awake under some conditions. She tiptoed across the hall into her own room and seated herself by the window. The symbol of what the ear had heard the eye saw—war, working in tones of the landscape by day with smokeless powder; war, revealed by its tongues of flame at night. Ugly bursts of fire from the higher hills spread to the heavens like an aurora borealis and broke their messengers in sheets of flame over the lower hills—the batteries of the Browns sprinkling death about the heads of the gunners of the Grays emplacing their batteries. Staccato flashes from a single point counted so many bullets from an automatic which directed by the beams of the searchlights, found their targets in sections of advancing infantry. Hill crests, set off with flashes running back and forth, demarcated infantry lines of the Browns assisting the automatics.

There were lulls between the crashes of the small arms and the heavy, throaty speech of the guns; lulls that seemed to say that both sides had paused for a breathing spell; lulls that allowed the battle in the distance to be heard in its pervasive undertone. In one of them, when even the undertone had ceased for a few seconds, Marta caught faintly the groans of a wounded man—one of the crew of a Gray dirigible burned by an explosion and brought in his agony softly to earth by a billowing piece of envelope which acted as a parachute.

Fighting proceeded in La Tir in stages of ferocity and blank silence. The upper part of the town, which the Browns still held, was in darkness; the lower part, where the Grays were, was illuminated.

"Another one of Lanny's plans!" thought Marta. "He would have them work in the light, while we fire out of obscurity!"

Soon all the town was in darkness, for the Grays had cut the wire in the main conduit shortly after she had heard the groans of the wounded man. There the automatics broke out in a mad storm, voicing their feelings at getting a company in new order in the street for the space of a minute, before those who escaped could plaster themselves against doorways or find cover in alleys. Then silence from the automatics and a cheer from the Browns that rasped out of steel files.

From the line of defense, that included the first terrace of the Galland grounds as the angle of a redoubt, not a shot, not a sound; silence on the part of officers and men as profound as Mrs. Galland's slumber, while one of the Browns' searchlights, like some great witch's slow-turning eye in a narrow radius, covered the lower terrace and the road.

Marta gave intermittent glances at the garden; the glances of a guardian. She happened to be looking in that direction when figures sprang across the road, crouching, running with the short, quick steps of no body movement accompanying that of the legs. The searchlight caught them in succession almost and the automatic and the rifles from behind the sandbags on the first terrace let go. Some of the figures dropped and lay in the road and she knew that she had seen men hit for the first time. Others, she thought, got safely to the cover of the gutter on the garden side. Of those on the road, some were still and some saw were moving slowly back on their stomachs to safety. Now the searchlight laid its beam steadily on the road. Again silence. From the upper terrace came a great voice, like that of the guns, from a human throat:

"Why didn't we level those terraces? They're creeping up on one to the other!" It was Straneky.

In answer was another voice—Dellarme's.

"Perhaps there wasn't time to do everything. If they get as far as the first terrace—well, in case of a crisis, we have hand-grenades. But, God knows, I hope we shall not have to use them."

After an interval, more figures made a rush across the road. They, too, in Straneky's words, paid a price for seeing the garden. But the flashes from the rifles and the automatic provided a target for a Gray battery. The blue spark that flies from an overhead trolley or a third rail, multiplied a hundredfold, broke in Marta's face. It was dazzling, blinding as a bolt of lightning a few feet distant, with the thunder crash at the same second, followed by the thrashing hum of bullets and fragments against the side of the house.

"I knew that this must come!" something within her said. If she had not been prepared for it by the events of the last twelve hours she would have jumped to her feet with an exclamation of natural shock and horror. As it was, she felt a convulsive, nervous thrill without rising from her seat. A pause. The next shell burst in line with the first, out by the Linden-trees; a third above the veranda.

"We've got that range, all right!" thought the Gray battery commander, who had judged the distance by the staff map. This was all he wanted to know for the present. He would let loose at the proper time to support the infantry attack, when there were enough dribbles across the road to make a charge. The dribbles kept on coming, and one by one, the number of dead on the road was augmented.

Marta was diverted from this process of killing by piecemeal by a more theatrical spectacle. A brigade commander of the Grays had ticked an order over the wires and it had gone from battery to battery. Not only many field-guns, which are the terrors of the artillery, but some guns of siege caliber, the massifs, in a sudden outburst started a havoc of tumbling walls and cornices in the upper part of the town.

Then an explosion greater than any from the shells shot a hemisphere of light heavenward, revealing a shadowy body flying overhead, and an instant later the heavens were illuminated by a vast circle of flame as the dirigible that had dropped the dynamite received its deathblow. But already the Brown infantry was withdrawing from the town, destroying buildings that would give cover for the attack in the morning as they went. Two or three hours after midnight fell a silence which was to last until dawn. The combatants rested on their arms, Browns saying to Grays, "We shall be ready for the morrow!" and Grays replying: "So shall we!"

Marta, at her window, her eyes following the movements of the display, now here, now there, found herself thinking of many things, as in the intermissions between the acts of a drama. She wondered if the groaning, wounded man were crying for water or if he were wishing that some one at home were near him. She thought of her talk with Lanstron and how feminine and feeble it must have seemed to a mind working in the intermissions between the acts of a drama. She wondered if the groaning, wounded man were crying for water or if he were wishing that some one at home were near him.

HORSE KILLED WHEN STABLE COLLAPSED

Building Gives Way Under Weight of Baled Hay, Killing Truck Horse.

About 8 o'clock Thursday morning the second floor of the stable of T. L. Ruark & Co. fell through, killing one horse and slightly injuring another. The accident was discovered by one of the drivers when he went to the stable to feed the horses early in the morning. A large quantity of baled hay was stored in the upper floor of the barn and it was the weight of this hay which caused the floor to collapse. There were five horses in the stalls when the accident occurred and it is considered remarkable that only one was killed. The horse that was killed was one of the best work horses in the lot. The injured horse was not badly hurt and will be ready for work in a few days. The other horses in the barn escaped without a scratch.

Democratic Majority In House And Senate

Democratic administration leaders claim a substantial majority in the house and continued control of the senate as a result of the elections for the next congress. On returns which were not yet complete the Democrats asserted that their majority in the senate had been increased from 10 to 15. In the house the returns indicated that the present overwhelming Democratic majority of 140 had dwindled to 95 or less.

With this the Democratic leaders professed themselves satisfied, declaring that it was the greatest majority "ever returned by any party in an off year election a tariff revision." The Democrats also asserted that the returns showed that the Progressive party had practically disappeared and that therefore the Democratic victory was a triumph over a reunited Republican party.

Three western states were aligned in the dry column, according to latest returns. Oregon, Arizona and Colorado voted for state wide prohibition by close margins, says anti-liquor people. In addition the claim was made by anti-liquor workers here that the majority of Illinois legislators as a result of the election, are dry in sentiment.

National prohibition headquarters professed most interest in the Arizona outcome, but admitted no more information than that furnished by press returns, which estimated a majority for anti-liquor principles. The Anti-Saloon League and the Women's Christian Temperance Union claimed victory in Colorado.

A majority of 10,000 was evident for prohibition in Oregon on the face of early returns. Ohio, however, went overwhelmingly against prohibition, as did California and Washington.

BEACON COLLEGE NOTES

New Students at Beacon's and Other Happenings.

Mr. Lee Tucker has left school to accept a position in the city. Interest in the night school continues. Those in attendance are regular and doing splendid work. Several new ones come in on Monday evening of nearly every week.

Misses Marian and Martha Stanford, daughters of Judge H. L. D. Stanford, Princess Anne, have enrolled in the stenotypy department.

Mr. Walter H. Long, son of Mr. Wood Long, and Mr. Pittman Carey, son of Mr. Lee Carey, who live in Somerset county near Pocomoke City, have entered the bookkeeping department.

Mr. Royston Covington of Pocomoke City, a graduate of the bookkeeping department, has taken up shorthand.

Mr. Leibig M. Turner, Harborton, Va., and Mr. Clifford Twilley, Quantico, Md., have begun the secretarial course.

Mr. Carl Pusey has been doing some stenographic work for Mr. Cavanaugh, Washington patent attorney. Several of the students are taking the civil service course with a view to entering the government service in Panama and Washington.

Perry--Fowkes

Mr. Clarence D. Perry of Salisbury, and Miss Alice G. Fowkes, of Cheltenham, Md., were married in Baltimore this week. Mr. Perry is one of Salisbury's popular young men and the news of his marriage came as a complete surprise to his many friends in this community. He is a son of the late Thomas Perry of this city. For some time Mr. Perry was connected with the claim office of the N. Y. P. & N. railroad at Princess Anne, and it while there that he met Miss Fowkes at the home of Mr. C. C. Waller. For several months Mr. Perry has been in the office of the clerk of the court for Wicomico county.

RESULTS OF ELECTION

Sen. Smith Returned in Maryland—Price Elected in District—Senate and House Democratic.

Returns from the state election show that Senator Smith won over Carrington, Republican by over 15,000. The congressional district returns show the election of Mudd in the Fifth district, being the only Republican congressman elected, while Lewis carried the Sixth by a good "working" majority. Price overwhelmingly defeated Hodson, the Bull Moose candidate, for the short term, while, according to the figures thus far available, he only defeated Duer by 218 votes. The official count may increase his lead over Duer slightly.

Maryland Democrats Are Successful.

Affiliated Vote Surprises—Independent Voting Grows.

As was expected the Democrats in Maryland, as a whole, were successful. Hon. John Walter Smith was re-elected by a majority in excess of 15,000, which while not as large as had been prophesied, was a tremendous endorsement of the Senator when the results in other states is considered and when it is remembered that he faced against the united forces of the Bull Moose and old line Republicans. Before the split in the Republican ranks Maryland seldom, even on a state election, gave more than 8,000 to 10,000 majority while on national questions it was a very doubtful state. Senator Smith's victory by over 15,000 is a strong endorsement of his course while in the Senate and a vote of confidence in his work to come. As far as the Congressmen are concerned the Democrats also have grounds to be well pleased, as they have succeeded in landing five out of the six. The biggest victory of all, and one that will give more genuine pleasure to the Democrats of state and nation than any other, is the election of David J. Lewis in the Sixth district. Lewis is located in a normally strong Republican stronghold, and his fight was a hard one. He won on his own merits, though he had the hearty support of every faction in Maryland as well as the strong personal endorsement of President Wilson.

His victory stands out as one of the many won by a clean, honest man who has shown that he is worthy of the place he holds, and whose ability is such as to put him in the front rank of his party in the nation.

In the Fifth district, Sidney E. Mudd, Jr., succeeds to the place so long filled by his father, winning over his Democratic opponent Johnson by a safe majority. Here local conditions entered into the fight as well as national issues. Johnson's nomination is another example of the ability of an organization to name its man in the primary but fail to land him in the election. While personally, a strong and popular man, the friends of Frank O. Smith, who was shelved to make way for Johnson did not forget the slight, and resented the action by their votes on election day. Young Mudd was in addition to this helped by the popularity of his late father as well as aided by the dissatisfaction in Southern Maryland over the business situation. Here the staple crop is tobacco and its chief buyer France. Owing to the war France has not taken her usual quantity and as a result the farmers are still holding the major part of the crop. This has caused hard times in Southern Maryland, and as is usually the case when things are not going well the people voted for a change.

Senator Jesse D. Price was elected in the First district by over 10,000 majority for the short term and a little over 200 for the long term.

The surprising strength of his opponent, Robert F. Duer, for the long term was entirely unexpected, by even the best informed men. It was known the Republicans were conducting a quiet but determined fight in the First district even with an enormous party affiliation against them. It was openly stated that they were depending on the manifest spirit of unrest and dissatisfaction with local conditions to help them win the fight.

While no one who is at all in touch with public sentiment doubted the existence of this unrest, yet few believed that it would come to the surface at that time, but would wait until a chance could be had of hitting at those who had brought about conditions that were unpopular. What happened is well known, but just what influences were primarily the cause is harder to tell—probably a culmination of many things.

The upper tier of counties, Cecil, Kent and Queen Anne alone saved the day for the Democrats, for in practically every other county a big slump took place.

Senator Price wins however, by a safe majority, and will take his seat in both the next and the following sessions of Congress. His experience in the Senate of Maryland and his general knowledge of public affairs will give him a distinct advantage in the way of experience over many who have filled Congressional seats for the first time.

One thing which this election has demonstrated very clearly is the worthlessness of the affiliated vote as a guide to an election vote. Here in Wicomico the Democrats have an affiliated vote in excess of the Republicans of over 1,300, yet the county was carried by only a little over 200, surly 1,100 Democrats did not stay away from the polls. The truth is that affiliation only means the party that a person would like to take part in the primaries of, and has but little connection with the way in which they will afterwards vote.

Wicomico county has now a large independent vote and it is getting larger each year. They probably hold the balance of power already, and either party may have a hard time to win in the future unless their candidates measure up to the requirements of these voters.

Democrats Win In Wicomico By Nearly 400 Majority

Tuesday was one of the quietest election days ever experienced in Wicomico. The net results showed the over-confidence of the Democrats, who felt sure of a good majority without unduly exerting themselves, while the Republicans, keenly alive to the situation, were out to make as good a showing and as much capital as possible out of the Democratic apathy. The outcome evidenced that they succeeded so far—but not quite enough to land their candidates. Then again the "Pubs" were back at their old game of having their large cohorts of negroes vote for a single name—Duer—and letting Hodson get what he could. Therefore Senator Price carried the county for the long term by 209 plurality. He has 1,500 plurality for the short term, which shows that the Republicans concentrated their entire efforts in favor of Duer.

Senator John Walter Smith carried the county by nearly 400. Some of the most stalwart Democratic districts gave only slight Democratic majorities, and several of them went for Duer which should have been Democratic. The official count follows:

NEW MINISTER CALLED

For Presbyterian Church—Rev. Harold, Of Lewis, Asked.

Monday evening the congregation of the Wicomico Presbyterian church called Rev. Julius A. Herold of Lewes, Del., to be pastor of that church. The committee to present the call to the New Castle Presbytery is composed of Messrs. Robt. D. Grier and L. W. Gunby. Mr. Herold is expected to accept, though not a candidate for the place. He has held prominent pastorates in several places and went to Lewes on account of his wife's health, which has been restored. He has been at Lewes for eight years. He is 50 years of age and is regarded as one of the most capable men in the Presbyterian ministry. Rev. Thomas Kerr of Berlin has acted as moderator.

SHOOTING CONTEST HELD IN SALISBURY

Large Number of Crack Shots, Both Professional and Amateur.

The Peninsula shooting contest was held in Salisbury last Friday. The Berlin Gun club carried off the trophy for team work, defeating the Salisbury and Seaford teams.

The entries for the contest and the scores out of a possible 100 were as follows:

Hagan 91, Cooper 83, Layton 82, Ludlam 81, Taylor 81, Wright 80, Manning 76, Peters 76, Wright 76, Shockley 76, Purnell 75, Conaway 75, Owens 74, Jines 73, Richardson 73, Livingston 73, Jenkins 72, Burris 71, Briddell 70, Morgan 69, Cottingham 67, Morris 64, Lankford 63, Colburn 63, Ennis 63, Peters 63, Lank 60, Thompson 43, Chatham 39, Kenney 31.

The team race was hotly contested by the gun clubs from Berlin, Seaford and Salisbury, with the following result:

Berlin club—Hagan 91, Layton 82, Ludlam 81, Peters 76, Purnell 75; total 405.

Salisbury club—Cooper 83, Taylor 81, Shockley 76, Owens 74, Livingston 73; total 387.

Seaford club—A. Wright 80, I. Wright 76, Manning 76, Conaway 75, Morgan 69; total 376.

The shooting by two of the professionals was brilliant, each making almost perfect scores. The result was German 96, Worthington 95, Slear 86, Wolf 74.

The shoot was the most largely attended ever held in Salisbury and drew quite a crowd of spectators.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

The Limit of Rate Allowed by Law—Anti-Hitching Ordinance Will Be Passed.

The council struck the annual levy for 1914 Monday night. The rate will be 40 cents on the one hundred dollars for regulars and 10 cents on the one hundred dollars for special purposes. This 10 cents is supposed to take care of the bond issue and interest for street improvements. This is the same rate as last year and the rate cannot be increased by the council unless it gets authority from the legislature, the rate being fixed in the charter.

The assessors added about $170,000 of new property on the taxable basis of the city by the assessment made in September. The revenue which will be collected will be about $30,000 with which to run the city, pay the interest on the bonds and provide for the sinking funds. While this sum is much larger than it used to be, it is barely enough to skin through on and keep up the improvements necessary to provide for the growth and development of Salisbury at this time.

The following building permits were granted: Robert W. Jones, dwelling on Cypress street; A. L. Vickery, barn and garage on N. Division street; T. L. Ruark, dwelling on North Division street.

The ordinance to prohibit the hitching of teams and stopping of automobiles on Bond, St. Peter's and Water streets was read and ordered posted and will be passed Monday night next, which will relieve these streets of the present congestion of teams and automobiles.

The Salisbury Light, Heat and Power Co. was instructed to erect a new street light on E. William street and to move a pole on Hazel avenue and relocate same under the direction of Councilman White.

The council held a special meeting on Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock to take up the question of granting a franchise to the Peninsula Rapid Transit Co.

BRIDEGROOM

COMMITTS SUICIDE.

Visiting His Parents at Quantico on Honeymoon Trip.

The many friends of Henry Gillis of near Hebron, Md., were shocked to learn of his death by a bullet shot by his own hands on Saturday afternoon. Henry, who spent his boyhood days in and around Hebron, was on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Greensbury Gillis, and had brought home with him his young bride of two weeks. According to his friends and relatives he and his bride seemed to be perfectly happy and no reason can be given for his unexpected act.

He was down town with his bride on Saturday afternoon and excused himself for a few minutes in order to get shaved. Instead of going to the barber shop as was presumed, he went home. Going to his room in his father's house, he took off his top clothing and getting a blanket, went to the attic, which had no floor laid. Here he laid down between the rafters on the blanket and shot himself. After waiting down town for his return, the parties with him went on home, in order that they might not keep dinner waiting. On going to his room they discovered his clothing and a search resulted in the finding of the body in the attic. Mr. Gillis was a young man of about 23 years of age. He was popular and well thought of by all who knew him. He was married about two weeks before his death, to a young lady in Camden, N. J., and was with his bride visiting his parents. There seems to be no reason for his act unless he was temporarily deranged.

THE NEW BIRD LAW

State and National Laws to Be Enforced. Federal Inspector Is Alert.

The state game warden has just issued special instructions to his deputies regarding the enforcement of the game laws, and a federal inspector is now on the Shore and is expected in Wicomico any time, if not already here.

Guns are invited to read the following carefully and also to see the advertising columns for those properties whose owners forbid trespassing.

The game warden furnishes the following official opening and closing dates and other data relating to hunting wild game in Talbot county:

Duck, goose and brant, November 1 to January 31.

Quail or partridge, rabbit, squirrel, woodcock, November 10 to December 24.

Wilson or jacksnipe, September 1 to December 15.

Reedbird and water rail, September 10 to October 31.

Yellowlegs, September 1 to December 15.

Summer or wood duck, November 1 to January 31.

The above open seasons for quail, rabbit, squirrel, woodcock, geese and ducks of all kinds apply throughout the state. All county laws in conflict with these dates are repealed. The federal regulations, which cover ducks, geese and brant, and other migratory species, fix the open seasons named for these. Under these regulations swan are protected at all times until 1918. The federal law also prohibits shooting between sunset and sunrise, and the minimum penalty for violation of any of the federal regulations is $100, and a prison sentence may be given in addition to the fine.

All the migratory insectivorous birds, including robins, meadowlarks, killdeer, nighthawks or bullbats, flickers and woodpeckers are protected at all times by the federal law. The cranes and herons are also protected under this law.

The state law also protects practically all the song and insectivorous birds.

The sale of game is prohibited in this county except to a resident of the county for his or her personal use, and game must not be shipped out of the county. The penalty is $10 for each bird or animal sold, shipped or received for shipment. This law is a new law and entirely cuts out the sale of game to dealers.

It is unlawful to hunt game on Sundays or when there is snow on the ground; also unlawful to trap, net or snare any game bird or waterfowl. The state law bag limits, which apply in Wicomico county are: Quail, 15; woodcock, 12; squirrel, 12; rabbit, 12; jacksnipe, 12. Penalty $5 for each bird or animal killed in excess of these limits.

Non-residents must have a license to hunt in Wicomico and the fee is $10. Licenses are obtained of the clerk of the court.

It is unlawful for any person to buy, sell or have in possession any wings or plumage of protected birds. The state wildfowl law should be carefully noted, as the penalty for its violation is extremely severe. It is unlawful for any person to unnecessarily disturb wild fowl on their feeding grounds, or when bedded in the

OYSTERMEN AT WAR

Fifty Men Rise in the Tall Sage on a Nearby Marsh and Shoot—Raid Most Serious Offense Yet.

Crisfield, Oct. 31.—Trouble in the Manokin river between planters and oyster tongs broke out again Friday. The A. E. Tull Oyster Co. of which A. E. Tull is president, has under lease a large area of bottom in the Annapessex river, known as Crane Point. Friday afternoon while the oyster vessel Mary and Susie, owned by the Tull Company, and commanded by Captain Thomas Taylor, was dredging on the Tull ground, it was attacked by riflemen from the shore.

With a crew of three men, Captain Taylor was dredging the vessel near the Crane Point shore when, without warning a large number of men, at least 50 in number, arose in the tall sage on a nearby marsh and opened fire with rifles on the vessel. Bullets riddled the hull of the boat and one shot knocked a dredge crank handle out of the hand of one of the dredgers. The second charge of bullets came fast and thick, and the dredgers were compelled to cut loose their dredges and flee to the shore. They ran their vessel aground on a point in the river and escaped from the firing oystermen.

As soon as the dredgers were able to communicate with Mr. Tull they advised him of the trouble, and he communicated with the county authorities. Mr. Tull showed a letter, which he received, postmarked "Upper Fairmount," which warned him that oystermen of Fairmount and Manokin were planning an attack upon Crane Point planting ground. The letter was unsigned, but Mr. Tull believes he knows the author, and is of the opinion that it came from a friendly oysterman who desired to place the planters on their guard, yet feared to let his name be known.

The letter stated that a number of oystermen had formed a plot to shoot up the Tull dredging boat, and that they had stored a large number of rifles with big quantities of ammunition on the marsh back of a Mr. Davy's home on the Annapessex river.

APPLE CROP WILL REQUIRE CAREFUL HANDLING

Conditions Abroad Will Make Quality Fruit More Than Ever Necessary in Securing Profits.

T. B. SYMONS,
Maryland Agricultural College.

There is a large apple crop throughout the country this fall, but not nearly so large as at first thought, and not nearly so large as the 1912 crop. Further the unusual conditions existing by virtue of the war in Europe, affect the apple market chiefly through a feeling of uneasiness among the dealers, who have usually bought apples for exportation or for distribution in our markets through the winter. Yet even if Europe does not take a single barrel, the crop can be marketed in this country, if judiciously handled, with satisfaction to all. Growers should be extremely careful to see that the apples are picked properly. Proper picking and handling has great value in the sale of apples. With some varieties the trees should be picked over two or three times. Do not allow the fruit to remain in piles in the orchard exposed to the sun. Fruit should be hauled on wagons, equipped with springs. Indications are that poor grades of fruit will bring practically nothing on the market. It also has an effect on the market of good apples. It will be better to keep this class of fruit at home. I have seen several growers who have sold their good apples for a fair price. Jonathans and Grimes at $3 per bbl.

and Yorks at $2.50 and $2. Don't ship your fruit to a market where it will bring less than $1.25. The Office of Markets, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, makes the following suggestions:

1st.—That growers pick and handle fruit in such condition as to insure it against deterioration.
2d.—That growers, associations and operators who use the barrel as a container adopt the standard barrel, and uniformly grade and pack the crop in compliance with the standards of the Federal Law, branding their packages accordingly.

3rd.—That all inferior grades be eliminated from the green fruit markets, and diverted as far as possible, to cider mills, canneries and evaporators.
4th.—That only long-keeping, standard-packed varieties be placed in cold storage.

5th.—That a special effort be made to fully supply small towns by direct sales, for the purpose of securing equitable distribution and avoiding the suggestion of large markets.

6th.—That all growers, operators, dealers and associations early reconcile themselves to the conditions, and arrive at an estimate of true values in order to assure quick movement of the crop from producer to consumer.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Rye can still be profitably planted as a cover and green manure crop. Its late fall and early spring growth enables it to use and return to the soil much nitrogen and other plant food that would otherwise be lost. On bare, steep, hilly land the loss of plant food from washing is more than that removed by crops each year. The most economical way to reduce this waste is to keep the soil covered with vegetation of some sort. Where the hillsides are producing clean culture crops, such as corn or potatoes, they should not be allowed to go into the winter without a growth of rye.

Horses digest their feed less thoroughly than other farm animals. In order to insure thorough digestion of all the food eaten, and to make your horses ready for next day's work, add to their evening feed a teaspoonful of—

Bee Dee STOCK MEDICINE

It will lessen your feed bills.
It will increase your profits.

I am using Bee Dee STOCK MEDICINE with my horses regularly and find it a saving proposition on feed. It also makes them healthy, thriving and clean.

THE PUBLIC IS INVITED TO SEE THE DRILLING FOR OIL.

Invites all stockholders and the public generally to visit Parsonsburg and witness the drilling now in progress.

In the minds of a great number of people the last doubt has been eliminated. The stock of the Company is now worth $1.25 per share. If you are broad minded, if you are public spirited, if you are patriotic and not penny wise and pound foolish you will help your own pocket book and help the Company by subscribing for what you can afford to take before the next advance in price.

Buyers to Share in Profits Lower Prices on Ford Cars

Effective from August 1, 1914 to August 1, 1915 and guaranteed against any reduction during that time:

Touring Car	-	-	$490
Runabout	-	-	440
Town Car	-	-	690

F. O. B. Detroit. all cars fully equipped.
(In the United States of America Only)

Further, we will be able to obtain the maximum efficiency in our factory production, and the minimum cost in our purchasing and sales departments if we can reach an output of 300,000 cars between the above dates.

And should we reach this production, we agree to pay as the buyer's share from $40 to $60 per car [on or about August 1, 1915] to every retail buyer who purchases a new Ford car between August 1, 1914 and August 1, 1915.

For further particulars regarding these low prices and profit-sharing plan, see the nearest Ford Branch or Dealer.

PROFIT IN DAIRYING DEPENDS ON WISE FEEDING

Slilage Or Legume Hay Needed in Ration To Lessen Cost Of Feeding.

G. E. WOLCOTT,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

During the summer months, when cows are on pasture, the dairyman is not troubled with the problem of supplying the herd with a ration which will maintain the flow of milk and also be economical.

To the farmer who has a lot full of alfalfa or clover, and a silo full of silage, the problem is simple; he will need comparatively little grain to make a balanced ration.

If cut fodder, alone is available for roughage, it will be necessary to supply a large part of the nutrients, required to maintain the production of the herd, in the form of a grain mixture which will necessarily be expensive. This is the season when the farmer realizes, more than ever that silage and some legume hay are necessary for the profitable production of milk and butter. Two-thirds of the nutrients required for a normal production can be supplied in the form of rough feed; but where neither silage nor legumes are available two-thirds of the daily feed must be supplied in the form of grain. This necessitates the purchase of large amounts of high priced concentrates; which will make the cost of production very high and probably unprofitable.

In selecting the feeds for his grain mixture the dairyman should choose those that are to be had at the lowest cost; and use only enough of each so that the mixture will, when fed with what roughage is available, supply the nutrients that are required for a given production. This is a balanced ration.

TAX DITCH NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given to all taxables and persons interested, that the County Commissioners of Wicomico County will take up for hearing and final ratification at their office in Salisbury, Md., the report of the tax ditch commissioners appointed to lay out a tax ditch known as the Gordy tax ditch in Parsons Election District, Wicomico County, Maryland, at 3 o'clock p. m., Tuesday, October 13th, 1914.

The proposed ditch to commence at the Gordy mill pond on the north side thereof, on land of Zeno Tingle, and run through the lands of said Zeno Tingle, W. L. Morris, J. M. Morris, Clayton C. Parker and others and to the land of Josiah Hosmer and others.

By order of the County Commissioners of Wicomico County.

Automobilists Visiting Neighboring Towns.

The new state highways and the automobile are responsible for a much closer union between the people of the various towns on the shore and it won't be long before this entire section will be almost like one big family. Since the completion of the highways between Salisbury, Easton and Cambridge, Centerville, and Chaptown, our people seem to be getting better acquainted.

Hundreds of visitors go from one community to another that would not without improved roads, even be able to get over the ground and make new friendships.

This visiting gives one a wider viewpoint and is of benefit to the people able to enjoy it. The roads are at present in almost perfect condition, most of the bridges are of concrete and modern in every respect, making travel a pleasure, where a few days ago it was a hardship. As a civilization there is nothing that beats a good road through a community.

LESSON OF CAMPAIGN

It is but human of men, who are not doing well, to desire a change. Nor will these stop to argue the question as to the exact causes of their misfortune; it being sufficient that present conditions are not as they would have them.

Admittedly, business is now much less active than formerly; many have suffered from the slack up, resulting in the loss of employment in all large manufacturing centers; and it is to the desire of both the business men and their employees for a change that the present reverses of the democratic party can be attributed.

That present conditions were brought about entirely by the large World War now being waged across the sea, entered but little into the question; for while believing this to be the fact nevertheless the man pushed by necessity will vote always for a change, under the theory that even if it does no good it can not make things any worse—and there is always a possibility—rather a hope—that by some unforeseen reason it may do good.

It is to this business depression that one must look to explain the general result of last Tuesday's election, yet it cannot be overlooked that local conditions have in many places overshadowed every other issue.

Maryland, as a whole has done well, her voters have re-elected Senator John Walter Smith with a very flattering majority, even in a normal year, and one that must be considered as unusual when regarded in the light of the vote cast in other states. She has elected five out of her six Congressmen from the democratic party though it is true in most cases by a greatly reduced majority.

As far as the result in the First Congressional District is concerned, we do not pretend to be over satisfied; for though we have elected Senator Price for both the short and long term, yet by such a narrow margin, in the latter case, as to make one stop to consider just why in a District so largely democratic as this First District has ever been, the majority should be so small. A part of it may be explained to the general feeling of unrest throughout the country; but we are of the opinion that in no section of the State did local conditions play as great a part as it did here.

That there has been a great deal of unrest and dissatisfaction in the mass of democratic voters, has been evident to those who were familiar with the situation; but that the time for many of these to put this dissatisfaction on record by their votes was a very unexpected happening, to even the best informed.

It is a warning fairly given to the democrats in this County and this District that if they wish to continue in power they must so conduct themselves, as will convince the people of their worthiness to be entrusted with power.

If the tendency of the time points to any one thing political more than to another it is to the great growth of Independent sentiment.

A man no longer goes home after splitting his ticket, and gets on his knees humbly asking the good Lord to forgive him for the grievous sin which he that day has committed. But rather, there is noticeable a pride of manifest manhood in the man today who votes as his judgment and conscience dictates. There are those who are so blind that they cannot see and others so partisan that they refuse to believe but what they think or say will not alter facts, and they together with all others who hope to continue to serve the people in public office, had better so cut their "cloth".

There was a time in this County when the merest excuse of a man could be elected if he chanced to be nominated by the democratic party, but that day is passed; and if the party wants to meet with success at the polls hereafter it must be careful with its candidates.

It may be possible to so manipulate the primaries as to bring about nominations, but the election is to follow.

Owing to the big majority on party affiliation—about thirteen hundred some have talked and acted as though the party was invincible, but party affiliations have proved to be a very poor guide every where it meaning nothing more or less than the natural inclination of the declarer; which every thing else being equal he will follow with his vote at the election, but if in his opinion conditions are such as to make a vote for the opposite party more advisable, he will not hesitate one moment to so vote.

It is full time that level headed counsel is taken by the democrats, here and everywhere or else the party may find itself in such a position as to make success impossible. It is true that through and by means of the open "envelop system of voting" it is comparatively easy for a group of men to control primary elections but let them continue to nominate men through and by means of "paid workers," "party hangers-on," bribery and other schemes that the "open envelop system" of primary voting invites and makes easy, and they will find the independent spirit grow stronger and stronger until at last it will wipe out entirely any majority the party may have—if indeed this time has not already arrived.

There is nothing in this editorial intended to be personal nor to cast any reflection whatsoever on any man, but simply an analysis of condition as we see them, and a warning to the responsible men of our community on whom must devolve to a great extent the burden and responsibility of the next ticket to be placed in the field. There is no reason why the democratic party in this State and County should not continue to be the dominant force, and if it will see to it that strong men of character, ability and experience be nominated it will have nothing to fear.

Mrs. Ada McDaniel spent the week under their racket store to accommodate their many new things in imported and domestic toys, which they have added this season and also notify us that it is a mistake about there going to be any shortage of toys for Christmas. In the past week they have gotten in 20 large cases of dolls and games direct from Germany.

Some thief made a raid on the clothes lines in Jersey last week and cleaned out many of the prominent households of Salisbury of their bed and table linen and clothes which were being washed by the different colored washwomen who do the family wash for the town people. Some families lost as much as $25 worth of linen, and as the washwomen are too poor to pay for the same, it looks like the householders will have to stand the loss. The same night a cow belonging to a colored man by the name of West was also stolen.

While at work in the basket and crate factory of the Allen Manufacturing Co., Seaford, Saturday afternoon, Lewis Jefferson, the 16-year-old son of John Jefferson, of Blades, lost his left hand, being cut off by a circular saw. He had crawled under a work bench in the mill and was attempting to clear away the sawdust when his hand came in contact with the saw.

So many books were borrowed and never returned from the writer's home that she purchased a script stencil on which she wrote her own name and a "please return" stamp. To date this plan has proven satisfactory in returning her books.

TEST OF FRIENDSHIP

By JULIE CARSON.

"I think," said Phyllis to her husband as they were packing their trunks preparatory to taking their annual vacation trip, "that I shall ask Sue to take care of the chickens while I am gone. I am sure that she will be glad to do that much for me and—"

"Well, inasmuch as she lives next door and has only to cross the yard to feed them and seeing that she will probably get about a dozen and a half eggs a day from them, I don't think that you are putting her regard to a very severe test," replied Phyllis' husband.

"I wonder, John Billingsby, why it is that packing always seems to have such a disagreeable effect upon you," commented Phyllis, as she watched him staring helplessly at a bunch of neckties from which he was vainly trying to choose the best to put in his trunk. "You never seem to be able to pack a trunk without unpacking your bad temper at the same time. You know very well that Sue doesn't like chickens; she says that their habit of always eating makes her nervous, and as for the eggs, she would rather buy them at the store than get them at the cost of caring for the chickens."

"And have you thought whom you would inflict that Angela kitten upon?" questioned her husband.

"Oh, that's all settled," declared Phyllis, triumphantly. "Ruth Comford is going to take the kitten. You know she adores cats, but her husband has an antipathy for them and won't let her have one, but he has consented to allow her to borrow mine while we are gone and Ruth is as happy as I am she had come into the possession of a fortune and has promised me to treat it as her own. Ruth is really devoted to me and I think that if she hated cats she would be just as conscientious in her care of my kitten, simply out of pure friendship."

"Pure friendship!" echoed Billingsby, as he folded and unfolded, then folded again a white flannel outing

"Just Getting Acquainted."

coat that he had bought in a moment of reckless determination to make this trip the gayest one in his experience. "I'll be willing to wager this coat that Sue will be so sick of her cat's cats and Ruth so disgusted with that kitten's sly ways that they will be heartily glad to see you back. It's a pity people cannot go away on vacations without unloading all their responsibilities and possessions on their friends and neighbors. By the way, where did you send our Kilmanshaw rug? That's worth more than a bushel of chickens and kittens."

"Oh, the rug is over at the Stevens'; they were delighted to have it."

The next day the Billingsbys went on their way. At the end of three weeks they returned with a thick coat of tan on the faces, and a very thin layer of bills in their purses, and in their hearts the deepest of thankfulness to be back.

Mrs. Billingsby's first act was to go over to Sue's to get the key to the chicken coop.

"Oh, are you back so soon?" said Sue with badly concealed consternation and disappointment in her face. "I had just got the chickens used to my ways and in another week I know I could have done wonders."

She yielded up the key unwillingly and Mrs. Billingsby felt that her return was anything but welcome. She sadly betook herself to the Comfort home, where more consternation awaited her.

"Why, it seems as if you had just gone!" declared Ruth, with no attempt to hide her dismay. "Kitty and I were just getting acquainted, and she is so used to her new basket that I am sure she will be quite unhappy if you take her away at once."

The vacant place on the floor of the Shaw's living room where the loaned rug was removed was another reproach. By the time Mrs. Billingsby reached her own home the gladness had faded from her face.

"They all seemed sorry to have me back," she confessed, "and they made me feel like a cruel impostor when I asked for the return of my own belongings."

"It is curious," commented Billingsby, "how a warm and pure friendship for a person—for a very nice person I might say—can be supplanted by an impersonal affection for a chicken, or a kitten, or a rug. But at least you have put your friends to the test and know the depth of their regard."—Chicago Daily News.

CLOSE-FISTED REYNOLDS

By GEORGE E. STREETER.

(Copyright.)
One of the odd people of his town, and the subject of much discussion, was "close-fisted Reynolds," as he was called—a man supposed to be well-off, but looked upon as extremely mean.

Like a lot of other folk, he had his good points, but was evidently much misunderstood. Every man has a hobby, and that of James Reynolds related to the poor and needy. He had a theory (not quite his own) that the execution of the poor, by some painless method, would settle forever the whole question of pauperism.

If poverty were made a crime, punishable with death, a poor person would soon become a rarity. Such was his idea. But as he found that the world, however anxious it might be to adopt such a drastic measure, was not yet quite ready to do so, he carefully considered other means.

Being strictly a theorist, he gave away nothing to the distressed, because he looked upon indiscriminate charity as a huge mistake, and considered the existing alms-giving organizations as dismal failures.

He was enthusiastic in the pursuit of knowledge of the poor and their habits.

When a hungry widow with eight or nine children called upon him, he would give them all a warm welcome, take down a big book, enter their names, ages, diseases, pedigree, etc.; express the greatest sympathy; warn them against extravagance, and the poms and vanities of this wicked world; then promise the fullest investigation.

Mr. Reynolds was just as hearty in receiving a call from the ordinary tramp of the day. Such a one would be invited to a seat by the stove, and his history, secured by means of much questioning, would be entered into one of the books.

The caller would be asked for his views on the tariff, trusts, single tax, etc. After keeping the poor fellow on the rack until every tavern had been closed, Mr. Reynolds would send him out in the cold world, moneyless.

Reynolds, assisted by his wife, formed a "Girls Club," and got the members to practice scrubbing, sewing and other household pleasures, at his own home. He took down their names, etc., etc., and sent them away with his blessing. But this organization was short-lived.

One day there called at the Reynolds homestead a respectably dressed man, selling collar buttons. He was greeted by the owner as though he were a longlost brother, and seated in one of the easiest chairs.

Mr. Reynolds got down to the seventeenth volume of the "Mendicant Register," and asked the weary traveler all about his ancestors, habits, age, and so on, as usual; but when he wanted to weigh the peddler, the latter evidently thought it time to call a halt. He plainly told his host that it was not the year for taking the census, intimating strongly, in oddly shaped sentences, that he was there entirely in the shirt-fastening interest.

Mr. Reynolds explained, by way of reply, that only the previous day he had bought no less than three collar buttons at the shop, which would last him for some months to come, and that his wife did not use such things.

He then started in to compare the present times with the days of the old Greeks and Romans, when they fastened their shirts with rope. At this the collar button vendor got vexed and saw that he had been merely the victim of statistics.

His sense of humor being dull, he forthwith proceeded to handle "Brother" Reynolds rather roughly. Having placed the statistician on the floor, he sat on him, took away his watch and other valuables, and, after kicking the dog, departed.

In time the editor of the "Mendicant Register" came to himself. After adjusting his clothing he sat down to think things over.

Had he made a mistake? Was it true that his efforts to learn all about the poor—their troubles, their views and their aims—had been in vain? The pugilistic collar-button salesman had told him some plain truths, and had brought them right home in a rather unpleasant manner.

As a result of a long, serious "think," Reynolds finally came to the conclusion that he would let the poor work out their own salvation. As for his books of record, he removed them to the cellar, and they were used as fuel for his furnace.

Slight Formalities.

"There's no use of you hanging around here unless you're willing to work," said the energetic woman.

"Lady," replied Plodding Pete, "I'm willing to work. But I belong to the Association of Industrious Inspectors. If you'll tell me what chores you want done and how much you'll pay, I'll go to town and ask our secretary to O. K. the contract. Only you'll have to advance me $7.44 to pay the expenses of the trip."

Sick Women Attention

Is it possible there is a woman in this country who continues to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, which proves beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other one medicine in the world?

We have published in the newspapers of the United States more genuine testimonial letters than have ever been published in the interest of any other medicine for women—and every year we publish many new testimonials, all genuine and true. Here are three never before published:

From Mrs. S. T. Richmond, Providence, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—"For the benefit of women who suffer as I have done I wish to state what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I did some heavy lifting and the doctor said it caused a displacement. I have always been weak and overworked after my baby was born and inflammation set in, then nervous prostration, from which I did not recover until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The Compound is my best friend and when I hear of a woman with troubles like mine I try to induce her to take your medicine."—Mrs. S. T. Richmond, 199 Waldo Street, Providence, R. I.

A Minister's Wife Writes:

CLOQUET, MINN.—"I have suffered very much with irregularities, pain and inflammation, but your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has made me well and I can recommend the same to all that are troubled with these complaints."—Mrs. JENNIE AKERMAN, c/o Rev. K. AKERMAN, Cloquet, Minnesota.

From Mrs. J. D. Murdoch, Quincy, Mass.

SOUTH QUINCY, MASS.—"The doctor said that I had organic trouble and he doctored me for a long time and I did not get any relief. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and I tried it and found relief before I had finished the first bottle. I continued taking it all through middle life and am now a strong, healthy woman and earn my own living."—Mrs. JANE D. MURDOCH, 25 Gordon St., South Quincy, Mass.

The Last Shot

By FREDERICK PALMER

taking position in answer to a low-spoken command. The scarlight yielded its vigil to the wide-spread beam out of the east, and the detail of the setting where Marta was to watch the play of one of man's passions, which he dares not permit the tender flesh of woman to share, grew distinct. Bayonets were fixed on the rifles that lay along the parapet of sand-bags in front of the row of brown shoulders. Back of them in the yard was a section of infantry in reserve, also with bayonets fixed, ready to fill the place of any who fell out of line, a doctor and stretchers to care for the wounded, and a detachment of engineers to mend any breaches made in the barrier by shell fire.

The gunner of the automatic sighted his barrel, slightly adjusted its elevation, and swung it back and forth to make sure that it worked smoothly, while his assistant saw that the fresh belts of cartridges which were to feed it were within easy reach. In straw hat and blue blouse, shuffling with his old man's walk, Feller came along the path from the gate. He was in retreat from the enticing picture of the regiment of field guns in front of the castle that was ready for action. As the infantry had never interested him, he would be safe from temptation in the yard.

"This is no place for you!" said one of the engineers.

"No, and don't waste any time, either, old man!" said another. "Back to your bulba!"

Feller did not even hear them. For the moment he was actually deaf.

"Fire!" said Dellarme's whistle.

"Thurr!" went the automatic in soulless, mechanical repetition, its tape spinning through the cylinder, while the rifles spoke with the human irregularity of steel-tipped fingers pounding at random on a drumhead.

All along the line facing La Tir the volume of fire spread until it was like the concert of a mighty loom.

The Gray batteries having tried out their range by the flashes of the automatic the previous evening, were making the most of the occasion.

"T-kung-nng!" the breaking jackets whipped out their grists. The reserves, the hospital-corps men and the engineers hugged the breastwork for cover. The leaves clipped from the trees by bullets were blown aside with the hurricane breaths of strained bursts, bullets whistled so near Marta that she heard their shrillness above every other sound. She was amazed that the houses still remained standing—that anyone was alive. But she had a glimpse of Dellarme maintaining his set smile and another of Feller, who had crept up behind the automatic, making impatient "come-on!" "come-on!" what is the matter with you? gestures in the direction of the batteries in front of the castle.

"Thur-eesh—thur-eesh!" As the welcome note swept overhead he waved his hands up and down in mad rapture and then peeped over the breastwork to ascertain if the practice were good. The Brown batteries had been a little slow in coming into action, but they soon broke the precision of the opposing fire.

Now shells coming frequently fell short or went wide. The air cleared. Then a chance shell, striking at the one point which the man who fired it six thousand yards away would have chosen as his bull's-eye, obscured Feller and the automatic and its gunners in the havoc of explosion. Feller must have been killed. The dust settled; she saw Dellarme making frantic gestures as he looked at his men. They were keeping up their fusillade with unflinching rapidity. Through the breach left in the breastwork she had glimpses, as the dust was finally dissipated, of gray figures, bayonets fixed, pressing together as they came on, fiercely toward the opening. The Browns let go the full blast of their magazines. Had that chance shell turned the scales? Would the Grays get into the breastwork?

All Marta's faculties and emotions were frozen in her stare of suspense at the breach. Then her heart leaped, a cry in a gust of short breaths broke from her lips as the Browns let go a rasping, explosive, demoniacal cheer. The first attack had been checked!

After triumph, terror, faintness, and a closing of her eyes, she opened them to see Feller, with his old straw hat—brim torn and crownless now—still on his head, rise from the debris and shake himself like a dog coming ashore from a swim. While the engineers hastened to repair the breach he assisted Strinsky, who had also been knocked down by the concussion, to lift the overturned automatic off the gunner. The doctor, putting a hand on the gunner's head, shook his head, and two hospital-corps men removed the body to make room for the engineers.

For once Dellarme's cheery smile deserted him. There was no one left to man the automatic, so vital in the defense, and even if somebody could be found the gun was probably out of commission. As he started toward it his smile, already summoned back, was shot with surprise at sight of the gun in place and a stranger in blue blouse, white hair showing through a crownless straw hat, trying out the mechanism with knowing fingers. Dellarme stared. Feller, unconscious of everything but the gun, righted the cartridge band, swung the barrel back and forth, and then fired a shot.

"You—you seem to know rapid-firers!" Dellarme exclaimed in blank incomprehension.

"Yes, sir!" Feller raised his finger, whether in salute as a soldier or as a gardener touching his hat it was hard to say.

"Put how—where?" gasped Dellarme.

This time the movement of the finger was undoubtedly in salute, in perfect, swift, military salute, with head thrown back and shoulders stiff. Feller the gardener was dead and buried without ceremony.

"Lanstron's class, school for officers, sir. Stood one in ballistics, prize medalist control of gun-fire. Yes, sir, I know something about rapid-firers," Feller replied, and fired a few more shots. "A little high, a little low—right, my lady, right!"

Strinsky was back in his place next to the automatic and firing whenever a head appeared. He rolled his eyes in a characteristic squint of scrutiny toward the new recruit.

"Beats spraying rose-bushes for bugs, eh, old man?" he asked.

"Yes, a lead solution is best for gray bugs!" Feller remarked puntingly, and their glances meeting, they saw in each other's eyes the joy of hell.

"A pair of anarchists!" exclaimed Strinsky, grinning, and tried a shot for another head.

As if in answer to prayer, a gunner had come out of the earth. Sufficient to the need was the fact. It was not for Dellarme to ask questions of a prize-medalist graduate of the school for officers in a blue blouse and crownless straw hat. His expert survey assured him that before another rush the enemy had certain preparations to make. He might give his fighting smile a recess and permit himself a few minutes' relaxation.

Looking around to ascertain what damage had been done to the house and grounds, he became aware of Marta's presence for the first time.

"Miss Galland, you—you weren't there during the fighting?" he cried as he ran toward her.

"Yes," she said rather faintly.

"If I had known that I should have been scared to death!"

"But I was safe behind the pillar," she explained.

"Miss Galland, you're such a good soldier—please—and I'm sure you have not had your breakfast, and all good soldiers never neglect their rations, not at the beginning of a war!" Miss Galland, please—Yes, as he meant it, please be a good fellow.

She could not resist smiling at the charming manner of his plea. She felt weak and strange—a little dizzy. Besides, her mother's voice now came from the doorway and then her mother's hand was pressing her arm.

"Marta, if you remain out here, I shall!" announced Mrs. Galland.

"I was just coming in!" Dellarme, his cap held before him in the jaunty fashion of officers, bowed, his face beaming his happiness at her decision.

"Come!" Mrs. Galland slipped her hand into Marta's. "Two women can't fight both armies. Come! I prescribe hot coffee. It is waiting, and, do you know, I find a meal in the kitchen very cozy."

Being human and not a heroine fed on lotos blossoms, and being exhausted and also hungry, when she was seated at table, with Minna adroitly urging her, Marta ate with the relish of little Peterkin in the shell cracker munching biscuits from his haversack, but the movement of the minute hand on the clock-face became uncanny and merciless to her eye in its deliberate regularity. Dellarme had been told to hold on until noon, she knew. Was he still smiling? Was Feller still happy in playing a stream of lead from the automatic? Was the second charge of the Grays, which must have come to close quarters when the guns went silent, going to succeed?

Mrs. Galland had settled down conscientiously to play solitaire, a favorite pastime of hers; but she failed to win, as she complained to Marta, because of her stupid way this morning of missing the combination cards.

After a long intermission came another outbreak from Dellarme's men, which she interpreted as the response to another rush by the Grays, and this yelping of the demon was not that of the bound after the hare, as in the valley, but of the hare with his back to the wall. When it was over there was no cheer. What did this mean? Without warning to her mother she bolted out of the kitchen. Mrs. Galland sprang up to follow, but Minna barred the way.

"One is enough!" she said firmly, and Mrs. Galland dropped back into her chair.

In the front rooms Marta found havoc beyond her imagination. A portion of the ceiling had been blown out by a shell entering at an upstairs window, the hardwood floors were littered with plaster and window glass and ripped into splinters in places.

But she hurried on, impelled by she knew not what, through the dining-room, and, coming to the veranda, stopped short, with dilating eyes and a cry of grievous shock. Two of his men were carrying Dellarme back from the breastwork, where they had caught him in their arms as he fell. They laid him gently on the sward with a knapsack under his head. His face grew whiter with the flow of blood from the red hole in the right breast of his blouse. Then he opened his lips and whispered to the doctor.

"How is it?" Something in his eyes, in the tone of that faint question, required the grace of a soldier's truth in answer.

"Had!" said the doctor.

"Then, good-by!" And his head fell to one side, his lips set in his cheery smile.

His company was a company with his smile out of its heart and in its place blank despair. Many of the men had stopped firing. Some had even run back to look at him and stood, caps off, backs to the enemy, miserable in their grief. Others leaned against the parapet, rifles out of hand, staring and dazed.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

A Day for Contemplation of the Blessings of Peace and the Bounties of Nature to Be a Holiday.

President Wilson last Wednesday issued a proclamation designating Thursday, November 26th, as Thanksgiving Day.

The President's proclamation, which refers to the fact that the United States is at peace while the rest of the world is at war, follows:

"It has been the honored custom of our people to turn in the fruitful autumn of the year in praise and thanksgiving to Almighty God for His many blessings and mercies to us as a nation. The year that is now drawing to a close since we last observed our day of national thanksgiving has been, while a year of discipline because of the mighty forces of war and of changes which have disturbed the world, also a year of special blessing for us.

"It has been vouchsafed to us to remain at peace, with honor, and in some part to succor the suffering and supply the needs of those who are in want. We have been privileged by our own peace and self control in some degree to steady the counsels and shape the hopes and purposes of a day of fear and distress. Our people have looked upon their own life as a nation with a deeper comprehension, a fuller realization of their responsibilities as well as of their blessings, and a keener sense of the moral and practical significance of what their part among the nations of the world may come to be.

"The hurtful effects of foreign war in their own industrial and commercial affairs have made them feel the more fully and see the more clearly their mutual interdependence upon one another, and has stirred them to a helpful co-operation such as they have seldom practiced before. They have been quickened by a great moral stimulation. Their earnest pity and disinterested sympathy for those who are suffering, the readiness to help and to think of the needs of others, has revealed them to themselves as well as to the world.

TO CURE HOG CHOLERA

An Effective Remedy Discovered by Department of Agriculture.

A careful estimate shows that in 1913 more than 6,000,000 hogs, valued at $65,000,000, died of hog cholera in the United States. This means that over 700,000,000 pounds of dressed meat and lard, or enough to furnish every family in the land with about 35 pounds were lost on account of the presence of a preventable disease.

Some years ago an effective serum for the cure and prevention of the disease was discovered by the Department of Agriculture. However, steps to make the discovery generally available—to use it on a large scale—were not taken until $75,000 was appropriated by the Sixty-second Congress for the study of methods by which to bring about a complete eradication of the pestilence.

So satisfactory were the results achieved with the small appropriation that in February of this year a bill was passed setting aside a fund of $500,000 for nation-wide application of the eradication work. Besides a saving for the farmers amounting to many millions, this promises to give all the people a greatly enlarged meat supply.

are different.

Of course, aluminum is aluminum; but utensils may differ in purity, in thickness, in handles, in finish.

Purity. "Wear-Ever" utensils are 99 per cent. pure.

Thickness. They are made thick enough to prevent denting readily; thick enough to guarantee a lifetime of satisfactory service.

Handles. The handles of "Wear-Ever" utensils are made of the best tinned steel. Aluminum handles would become too hot—wooden handles would burn off or break. The handles of "Wear-Ever" utensils are gripped to the utensils by aluminum rivets with large heads. The heads are not sunk into the side of the utensil—the side remains of uniform thickness, strong enough to hold the handle on firmly for years.

Finish. The outside is polished. The inside is hardened by an electrical process which makes the metal harder, smoother, less liable to be discolored by food or water containing alkali or iron, and more easily cleaned than would be possible if the utensils were not so finished.

Farmers Should Raise Well-Bred Horses

Should Plan To Meet European Demand—Fall Breeding Recommended.

R. H. RUFFNER,
Maryland Agricultural College.

To meet the probable European demand for horses during the next few years, Maryland farmers may well turn their attention to the possibilities in raising well-bred horses, although they are not advised to undertake the business too hurriedly or at too great an outlay of capital for breeding stock. It is urged, however, that the farm work should be done whenever possible by good mares which should be bred to good stallions. Only horses of first quality may be profitably raised today. Inferior horses are a drag on the market, and their production is to be discouraged as much as the production of good horses should be encouraged.

There is no better time than the present for the ambitious farmer to breed his good mares with a view to supplying the market that the next few years will open up to him. Some may no doubt object to fall breeding. As a matter of fact, the fall is a better time for breeding a work mare than the spring. The colt dropped a year from now will not, it is true, be on pasture for some months. On the other hand, he will be suckling his dam at a time when she is not as hard worked as she is in the open season. The colt also during this time depends far more on its dam for its nourishment than on what feed it can pick up. By the time he is ready for grain and hay feeding the winter will be well over and the spring pastures will be coming on at the very time when the growing colt needs it the most in making growth. The dam at this time also is needed for heavy farm work, yet the colt will not suffer as he would when still a few weeks old if his mother is overworked or not quite up to her best condition.

Most of our horses must be produced by the small farmer rather than the owner of a breeding farm. Such a farmer cannot always afford to give the dam as good a chance as she should have for giving her offspring the very best of nourishment. This plan avoids to a great degree any setbacks to the colt or loss of the use of the mare at a busy time. It also enables many farmers whose main business is grain production to breed a few well-bred workers, that will pay well for the time and effort expended on their raising.

It pays to be gentle with poultry at all times, but especially during the late fall when the pullets are just developing into laying condition. At this time a sudden scare or excitement will set them back in egg production. When putting them into winter quarters, be as careful as you can. If they have been kept tame, as you can, they should be, they can usually be driven into their house very easily. An easy way to drive them is for two or three persons to get around them, each with a long, light board or pole, held in the middle. This is used to gently usher them along without the necessity of running them down.

Infection and Insect Bites Dangerous

Mosquitoes, flies and other insects, which breed quickly in garbage piles, ponds of stagnant water, barns, musty places etc., are carriers of disease. Every time they bite you, they inject poison into your system from which some dread disease may result. Get a bottle of Solan's Liniment. It is antiseptic and a few drops will neutralize the infection caused by insect bites or rusty nails. Solan's Liniment disinfects Cuts, Bruises and Bore. You cannot afford to be without it in your home. Money back if not satisfied. Only 25c. at your Druggist.

BUSINESS METHODS SPELL PROFIT FOR FARMERS

Should Improve Production By Use of Simple Tests in Co-operation With the Country School.

J. E. METZGER,
Maryland Agricultural College.

It is estimated that the average cow produces only about 4,000 pounds of milk and 150 pounds of butter fat per year. The cows from herds, where some attention has been given to selection, breeding and care, produce on an average from 5,000 to 8,000 pounds of milk and from 200 to 300 pounds of butter fat annually.

The important question to each farmer is how can he determine what each cow is doing? Only three things are necessary: a circular spring-balance, recordsheet and a testing outfit. The first two should be owned by each farmer since they may be had at a small cost, and the last should be purchased by the school district and placed in the local school room.

The making of the test for butter fat is quite simple, and may be done very accurately by boys and girls of the sixth and seventh grades. This would make a very valuable school exercise for one day in each month. In schools where agriculture is not taught it could be made a part of the work of the physiology class. Each boy and girl should learn how to make the test quickly and accurately and should be given school credit for the work done. The results obtained from the test will make valuable lessons in arithmetic, language and sanitation, and what is more important, it will give the boy or girl a new interest in the farm business. In addition the patron of the school will be receiving, monthly valuable information regarding his herd.

The apparatus necessary to make the test is:

- 1 dozen test bottles.
- 1 acid measure.
- 1 pair of dividers.
- 1 tester (8 bottles).
- 1 pipette.
- 1 supply of 90 per cent. pure sulphuric acid.
- 1 gallon kettle in which to heat water.
- 1 sample bottle for each cow.

This is only one of the many ways in which the school can be of valuable service to the community. While the school is not in session, one of the boys or girls may be engaged to make the tests at home, and be paid a reasonable amount for the service. Full directions for testing milk for butter fat will be sent on application to the Agricultural College, College Park, Maryland.

One of the best places to store vegetables is in a cellar with an earth floor and without the usually ever-present furnace. This, or some modification of it, is used almost always for the storage of such vegetables as white potatoes, turnips, carrots, parsnips, salsify, celery and in fact, anything that requires cool or moist conditions. An earth floor is a necessity for vegetables that must be kept from wilting. Parsnips, carrots and turnips are vegetables of a class that will quickly if placed in a dry atmosphere. On the other hand, sweet and white potatoes and onions will do better and retain their quality in a drier air.

Proves By The Pikes Peak Test

No where else in all the world is there such a test of the time keeping quality of a watch as on the famous Pikes Peak Cog Railway in Colorado, where the steep grades of the mountain necessitate the use of cog wheels to control the train, and vibration often so injures ordinary watches that an expert repairman must readjust them.

A conductor on the Pikes Peak road made a ninety-day test of the South Bend Watch last Summer.

No adjustment of the watch was made for the whole period, but at the end of the test, examination showed a variation of less than one-half second per day. Do you think the watch you carry could stand a test like this?

We will be pleased to show you our line of these guaranteed accurate watches and explain to you how a South Bend Watch adjusts itself to every temperature automatically.

THE FRINGED GENTIAN.

Thou blossom bright with autumn dew.
And colored with the heaven's own blue,
That openest when the quiet night
Succeeds the keen and frosty night.

Thou comest not when violets leave
O'er wandering brooks and springs unseen,
Or columbines in purple dressed
Nod o'er the ground bird's hidden nest.

Thou waitest late and comest alone,
When woods are bare and birds are flown,
And frosts and shortening days portend
The aged year is near its end.

Then doth thy sweet and quiet eye
Look through thy fringes to the sky.
Blue—blue, as if that sky let fall
A flower from its cerulean wall.

I would that thus, when I shall see
The hour of death draw near to me,
Hope blossoming within my heart
May look to heaven as I depart.
—William Cullen Bryant.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

The soul has this proof of its divinity: The divine things delight it.—Seneca

Righteousness tried by adversity has good grounds for glorying in its sorrow.—Ovid.

EVEN AS THE BEASTS.

There is no hope for nations! Search the page
Of many thousand years—the daily scene,
The flow and ebb of each recurring age.

The everlasting to be which hath been,
Hath taught us nought or little; still we lean
On things that rot beneath our weight and wear.

Our strength away in wrestling with the air;
For 'tis our nature strikes us down; the beasts
Slaughtered in hourly hecatombs for feasts.

Are of as high an order—they must go
Even where their driver goads them, though to slaughter.

Ye men, who pour your blood for kings as water,
What have they given your children in return?

A heritage of servitude and woes,
A blindfold bondage, where your hire is blows!

—Lord Byron.

LOVE OF KNOWLEDGE.

I solemnly declare that but for the love of knowledge I should consider the life of the meanest hedges and ditcher preferable to that of the greatest and richest man in existence.

For the fire of our minds is like the fire which the Persians burn on the mountains—it flames night and day and is immortal and not to be quenched. Upon something it must eat and feed—upon the pure spirit of knowledge or upon the foul dregs of polluting passions.—Sydney Smith.

LIFTED BURDENS.

The camel at the close of day,
Kneels down upon the sandy plain
To have his burden lifted off
And rest again.

My soul! Thou, too, shouldst
To thy knees
When daylight draweth to a close
To have thy Master lift the load,
And grant repose.

The camel kneels at morning dawn
To have his guide replace the load,
Then rises up anew to take
The desert road.

Be shouldst thou kneel at morning dawn,
O God may give thee daily care,
Assured that he no load too great
Will make thee bear.

DECISION AND ENERGY.

For success in life it is essential that there should be a fixedness of purpose as to the object and designs to be attained. There should be a clear conception of the outlines of that character which is to be established.

The business of life, in whatever pursuit it may be, is a great work. And in this, as in all other undertakings, it is important in the outset to have a clear conception of what is to be done. This is the first thing to be settled. The only rule for determining this is natural ability and natural aptitude or suitability for the particular business selected. The decision in such case should always be governed by that ideal of character which a man with high aspirations should always form for himself.—Alexander Stephens.

THE SITE OF WATERLOO.

Forbear! This plain is still too deaf with cries.
This soil too sanguine for thy stucco lies.

Shall earth where reeled the guard thy villa pen,
Where nations groined be heard the cackling hen?

A mansion mark where in the gathering muck
Those terrible gray horsemen so did work?

Here wilt thou dare to live,
where such men died
And on that memorable dust relied!

Here only ever let the solemn moon
Uninterrupted weave a spirit noon.

Here only falter down a pensive dew
From skies too wistful to be purely blue.

But shouldst thou build on consecrated ground,
Then be those houses filled with spectral sound
Of clashing battle and the ghostly war.

Of charging hosts against the battered door!
Let solemn bellow of hollow cannon boom.

A dreadful cavalry invade the gloom!
Until in awe of those who fell or fled

The living flee from the more living dead!
That silence, now too conscious is for sound.

It broods upon itself and is self bound
Then let no bulwer of this field have lease.

'Tis let to time, the property of peace!
—Stephen Phillips in Poetry Review.

WAR.

War is the concentration of all human crimes. Under its standard gather violence, malignity, rage, fraud, rapacity and lust. If it only slew men it would do little. But it turns man into a beast of prey. Here is the evil of war—that man, made to be the brother, becomes the deadly foe of his kind; that man, whose duty is to mitigate suffering, makes the infliction of suffering his study and end.—William Ellery Channing.

Suffered Twenty-One Years-- Finally Found Relief

Having suffered for twenty-one years with pain in my side, I finally have found relief in Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. Injections of morphine were my only relief for short periods of time. I became so slow that I had to undergo a surgical operation in New Orleans, which benefited me for two years. When the same pain came back one day I was so sick that I gave up hopes of living. A friend advised me to try your Swamp-Root and I at once commenced using it. The first bottle did me so much good that I purchased two more bottles. I am now on my second bottle and am feeling like a new woman. I passed a gravel stone as large as a big red bean and several small ones. I have not had the least feeling of pain since taking your Swamp-Root and I feel it my duty to recommend this great medicine to all suffering humanity. Gratefully yours and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.

MRS. JOSEPH CONSTANCE, Echo, La. Personally appeared before me, this 16th day of July, 1911, Mrs. Joseph Constance, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.

"You engineers, take your rifles—and bayonet into anything that wears gray!"

"Get back, you men by the tree, to avoid their hand-grenades! Form up behind them, everybody!"

"No matter if they do get in at first! Back, you men, from under the tree!"

There was not a single rifle-shot. In a silence like that before the word to fire in a duel, all orders were heard and the more readily obeyed because Dellarme's foresight had impressed their sense upon the men in his quiet way.

The sand-bags by the tree were blown up by the Grays. Then, before the dust had hardly settled, came a half score of hand-grenades thrown by the first men of a Gray wedge, scrambling as they were pushed through the breach by the pressure of the mass behind. In that final struggle of one set of men to gain and another to hold a position, guns or automatics or long-range bullets played no part.

"You, There, in Your Straw Hat and Blue Blouse."

It was the grapple of cold steel with cold steel and muscle with muscle, in the billowing, twisting mob of wrestlers, with no sound from throats but straining breaths; with no quarter, no distinction of person and bloodshot eyes and faces but with the effort of brute strength striving, in primitive desperation, to kill in order not to be killed. The cloud of rocking, writhing arms and shoulders was neither going forward nor backward. Its movement was that of a vortex, while the gray stream kept on pouring through the breach as if it were only the first flood from some gray lake on the other side of the breastwork.

Marta had come to the edge of the veranda, at once drawn and repelled, feeling the fearful suspense of the combat, the savage horror of it, and herself uttering sounds like the straining breaths of the men. What a place for her to be! But she did not think of that. She was there. The dreadful alchemy of war had made her a stranger to herself. She was mad; they were mad; all the world was mad!

One minute—two, perhaps—not three—and the thing was over. She saw the Grays being crushed back and realized that the Browns had won, while the last details of the lessening tumult fixed her attention with their gladiatorial simplicity. Here, indeed, it was a case of man to man with the weapons nature gave him.

"I thought so!" cried Feller. "Attacks on frontal positions by daylight are going out of fashion!"

It was he who mercifully arrested the shower of hand-grenades that followed the exit of the enemy. Two of the guns of the castle batteries, having changed their position, were making havoc enough at pointblank range, with a choice of targets between the Grays huddled on the other side of the breastwork and those in retreat.

One of the Grays, his cheek bearing the mark of a boot heel, raised himself, and, in defiance and the satisfaction of the thought to his bruises and humiliation, pointing his finger at Feller, Marta heard him say:

"You there, in your straw hat and blue blouse, they've seen you! A man fighting and not in uniform! If they catch you it will be a drumhead and a firing squad at dawn!"

"That's so!" replied Feller gravely. "But they'll have to make a better job of it than you fellows did if they're going to—"

He turned away abruptly but did not move far. His shoulders relaxed into the gardener's stoop, and he pulled his hat down over his eyes and lowered his head as if to hide his face. He was thus standing, inert, when a division staff-officer galloped into the grounds.

"Where is Major Dellarme?"

When he saw Dellarme's still body he dismounted and in a tide of feeling which, for the moment, submerged all thought of the machine, stood, head bowed and cap off, looking down at Dellarme's face.

"I was very fond of him! He was at school when I was teaching there. But a good death—a soldier's death!" he said. "I'll write to his mother myself." Then the voice of the machine spoke. "Who is in command?"

"I am, sir!" said the callow lieutenant, coming up. But the men of the company spoke.

"Hert Stranky!" they roared. "It was not according to military etiquette, but military etiquette meant nothing to them now. They were above it in veteran superiority."

"Where's Stranky?" demanded the staff-officer.

"You're looking at him!" replied

Stranky with a benign grin. Seeing that Stranky was only a private, the officer frowned at the anomaly when a lieutenant was present, then smiled in a way that accorded the company parliamentary rights, which he thought that they had fully earned.

"Yes, and he gets one of those iron crosses!" put in Tom Fragini.

"Yes—the first cross for Bert of the Reds!"

"And we'll let him make a dozen anarchist speeches a day!"

"Yes, yes!" roared the company.

"The apex have it!" the officer announced cheerfully. He lifted his cap to Marta. With tender regard and grave reverence for that company, he took extreme care with his next remark lest a set of men of such dynamic spirit might repulse him as an invader. "The lieutenant is in command for the present, according to regulations," he proceeded. "You will retire immediately to positions 48 and 49 A—J by the castle road. You have done your part. Tonight you sleep and tomorrow you rest."

Sleep! Rest! Where had they heard those words before? Oh, yes, in a distant day before they went to war! Sleep and rest! Better far than an iron cross for every man in the company! They could go now with something warmer in their hearts than consciousness of duty well done; but this time they need not go until their dead as well as their wounded were removed.

Feller started to pass around the corner of the house; he was confronted by Marta, who had come to the end of the veranda. There, within hearing of the soldiers, the dialogue that followed was low-toned, and it was swift and palpitant with repressed emotion.

"Mr. Feller, I saw you at the automatic. I heard what the wounded private of the Grays said to you and realized how true it was."

"He is a prisoner. He cannot tell."

"I feel that I have no right to let you go to your death by a firing squad," she interrupted hurriedly, "and I shall not! For I decide now not to allow the telephone to remain!"

"I—he looked around at the automatic ravenously and fearfully—"

"It is all simply arranged. There is time for me to use the telephone before the Grays arrive. I shall tell Lanny why you took charge of the gun."

"I've changed my mind! Exit gardener! Enter gunner! I'm going with you!" he cried in a jubilant voice that arrested the attention of every one on the grounds.

CHAPTER XIII.

From Brown to Gray.

"You, Marta—you are still there!" Lanstron exclaimed in alarm when he heard her voice over the tunnel telephone. "But safe!" he added in relief. "Thank God for that! It's a mighty load off my mind. And your mother?"

"Safe, too."

"Well, you're through the worst of it. There won't be any more fighting around the house, and certainly West-ering will be courteous. But where is Gustave?"

"Gone!"

"Gone!" he repeated dimly.

"Wait until you hear how he went," Marta said. With all the vividness of her impressions, a portion for the moment of him and Dellarme, she sketched Feller's part with the automatic.

As he listened, Lanstron's spirit was twenty again.

"I can see him," he said. "It was a full breath of fresh air to the lungs of a suffocating man. I—"

Marta was off in interruption in the full tide of an appeal.

"You must—I promised—you must let him have the uniform again!" she begged. "You must let him keep his automatic. To take it away would be like separating mother and child, like separating Minna from Clarissa Elleen."

"Better than an automatic—a battery of guns!" replied Lanstron. "It is where I will use any influence I have with Partow for all it is worth. Yes, and he shall have the iron cross. It is for such deeds as his that the iron cross was meant."

"Thank you," she said. "It's worth something to make a man as happy as you will make him. Yes, you are real flesh and blood to do this, Lanny."

Her point won with surprising ease, when she had feared that military form and law could not be circumvented, she leaned against the wall in reaction. For twenty-four hours she had been without sleep. The interest of her appeal for Feller had kept up her strength after the excitement of the fight for the redoubt was over. Now there seemed nothing left to do.

"That's fine of you, Lanny!" she said. "You've taken it like a good stoic, this loss of your thousandth chance. You really believed in it, didn't you?"

"Forgotten already, like the many other thousandth chances that have failed," he replied cheerfully. "One of the virtues of Partow's steel automations is that, being tearless as well as passionless, they never cry over split milk. And now," he went on soberly, "we must be saying good-bye."

"Good-bye, Lanny? Why, what do you mean?" She was startled.

"Till the war is over," he said, "and longer than that, perhaps. If La Tir remains in Gray territory."

"You speak as if you thought you were going to lose!"

"Not while many of our soldiers are alive, if they continue to show the spirit that they have shown so far; not unless two men can crush one man in the automatic-gun-recall age. But La Tir is in a tangent and already in the Grays' possession, while we act on the defensive. So I should hardly be flying over your garden again."

"But there's the telephone, Lanny, and here we are talking over it this very minute!" she expostulated.

"You must remove it," he said. "If the Grays should discover it they might form a suspicion that would put you in an unpleasant position."

The telephone had become almost a familiar institution in her thoughts. Its secret had something of the fascination for her of magic.

"Nonsense!" she exclaimed. "I am going to be very lonely. I want to learn how Feller is doing—I want to chat with you. So I decide not to let it be taken out. And, you see, I have the tactical situation, as you soldiers call it, all in my favor. The work of removal must be done at my end of the line. You're quite helpless to enforce your wishes. And, Lanny, if I ring the bell you'll answer, won't you?"

"I couldn't help it!" he replied.

"Until then! You've been fine about everything today!"

"Until then!"

When Marta left the tower she knew only that she was weary with the mind-weariness, the body-weariness, the nerve-weariness of a spectator who has shared the emotion of every actor in a drama of death and finds the excitement that has kept her tense no longer a sustaining force.

As she went along the path, steps uncertain from sheer fatigue, her sensibilities livened again at the sight of a picture. War, personal war, in the form of the giant Stranky, was knocking at the kitchen door. His two-day-old beard was matted with dust and there were dried red spatters on his cheek. War's furnace flames seemed to have tanned him; war seemed to be breathing from his deep chest; his big nose was war's promontory. But the unexposed space of his forehead seemed singularly white when he took off his cap as Minna came in answer to his knock. Her yielding lips were parted, her eyes were bright with inquiry and suspicion, her chin was firmly set.

"I came to see if you would let me kiss your hand again," said Stranky, squinting through his brows wistfully.

"I see your nose has been broken once. You don't want it broken a second time. I'm stronger than you think!" Minna retorted, and held out her hand carelessly as if it pleased her to humor him.

He was rather graceful, despite his size, as he touched his lips to her fingers. Just as he raised his head a burst of cheering rose from the yard.

"So you've found that we have gone, you brilliant intellect!" he shouted, and glared at the wall of the house in the direction of the cheers.

"Quick! You have no time to lose!" Minna warned him.

"Quick! quick!" cried Marta.

Stranky paid no attention to the urgings. He had something more to say to Minna.

"I'm going to keep thinking of you and seeing your face—the face of a good woman—while I fight. And when the war is over, may I come to call?" he asked.

His feet were so resolutely planted on the flags that apparently the only way to move them was to consent.

"Yes, yes!" said Minna. "Now, hurry!"

"Say, but you make me happy! Watch me poke it into the Grays for you!" he cried and bolted.

Within the kitchen Mrs. Galland was already slumbering soundly in her chair. Overhead Marta heard the exclamations of male voices and the tread of what was literally the heel of the conqueror—guests that had come without asking! Intruders that had entered without any process of law! Would they overrun the house, her mother's room, her own room?

Indignation brought fresh strength as she started up the stairs. The head of the flight gave on to a dark part of the hall. There she paused, held by the scene that a score or more of Gray soldiers, who had riotously crowded into the dining-room, were enacting. They were members of Fracasse's company of the Grays whom Marta had seen from her window the night before rushing across the road into the garden.

When, finally, they burst into the redoubt after it was found that the Browns had gone, all even the judge's son, were the war demon's own. The veneer had been warped and twisted and burned off to the raw animal flesh. Their brains had the fever itch of callouses forming. Not a sign of brown there in the yard; not a sign of any tribute after all they had endured! They had not been able to lay hands on the murderous throwers of hand-grenades. Far away now was barrack-room geniality; in oblivion were the ethics of an inherited civilization taught by mothers, teachers and church.

But here was a house—a house of the Browns; a big, fine house! They would see what they had won—this was the privilege of baffled victory. What they had won was theirs! To the victor the spoils! Pell-mell they

Emergency Value Plus Convenience

The Bell telephone has two qualities which recommend it for both home and office—emergency value and convenience. Unlike many things of emergency value, the telephone does not lay idle for most of the time, waiting. It is also useful between emergencies.

Its emergency value does not detract from its daily convenience in shopping, in talking with one's friends, in transacting general business.

Telephone service costs only a few cents a day. You should not be without it.

CRISFIELD SUFFERS BIG LOSS BY FIRE.

$100,000 Damage Done to Business Section Sunday Night.

On Sunday night a disastrous fire wiped out a portion of Crisfield, causing a loss of property valued at $100,000. The fire started in the lumber mills of the A. B. Cochrane Co. and spread rapidly to other buildings along the waterfront. The seafood establishments of Fred Thornton & Co., Ralph Rignin & Bro., Langdon Bros. and G. E. Boone & Co. were all burned to the ground, after which the fire spread to a row of brick buildings on Water street, soon reducing them to ashes and ruin.

Those losing property in this block of buildings were the Tangier Packing Co., seafood packers; N. R. Lockerman & Co., A. G. Sterling & Co., seafood dealers, and Joseph Poleyett.

Dana's marine railway was partially destroyed by the flames, which burned down a portion of the ways and workshops. The fire spread to the lumber yards of W. C. Muir & Co., across the street from the Cochrane Co.'s plant, and destroyed a quantity of lumber and a shed.

A great deal of damage was done to shipping. Several vessels were burned at the docks while others were damaged to such an extent as to render them useless. The plant of the Crisfield Electric Lighting Co. was endangered by the blaze and the lights in the town were extinguished by the burning of a number of poles.

Those who lost heavily by the fire are:

A. B. Cochrane Co.	$20,000
Fred Thornton & Co.	5,000
N. R. Lockerman & Co.	5,000
Tangier Packing Co. and Crisfield Ice Cream Co.	35,000
Jos. Poleyett, building.	10,000
Ralph Rignin & Bro.	5,000
A. G. Sterling & Co.	5,000
Dana's Marine Railway	5,000

Including the loss of several vessels and other property the total damage done was over $100,000.

Helping the Blind to Help Themselves.

Helu Keller once said, "To be without occupation and without sight is the worst punishment that can befall humanity."

More than 100 such persons on the Eastern Shore of Maryland could be made happy if taught to read the raised letters and trained to make useful articles in their homes.

Miss Margaret E. Cavanaugh, a graduate of the Maryland School for the Blind, has been selected to undertake this work, with headquarters at Salisbury. Although entirely blind, Miss Cavanaugh travels without a guide from Crisfield to Easton, bringing hope and good cheer by her genial spirit to this unfortunate class. Already she has made many friends and good results are sure to follow.

Arrangements are being made to exhibit early in December, at the Court House, the various products of the Maryland workshop for the blind. At that time suitable articles for Christmas presents may be purchased.

ULMAN'S OPERA HOUSE

The Long Acre Square Producing Co. Offers "The Turning Point."

America's best character actor, Will E. Culhane, supported by a clever company of actors, who know how, will present for the first time in this city at Ullman's Grand Opera House, on Tuesday, Nov. 17, "The Turning Point."

When a manager hunts around and finds a good play, engages a company of clever, capable people to present same, mounts and equips the play in a lavish manner, both in a scenic and electrical way, and offers the same to the public for their approval and patronage, he should receive the support of the theater-goers. The acting company that will play "The Turning Point" in this city is made up of the same artists who presented "Paid in Full" in this city last fall. That alone should be a guarantee of its worth, as no better acting company has appeared here in years. Will E. Culhane, who has made so many admirers by his artistic handling of the part of Captain Williams, will be seen as Mortimer, a part that was written expressly for him.

If you want to laugh, don't miss "The Turning Point." Prices are 25, 35 and 50c. Seats on sale at the box office.

I have a nice line of Fall and Winter hosiery and underwear samples from the World's Star Hosiery and Underwear Co., the kind that wears. I would be pleased to show them to you any time. Call phone No. 883, or at my residence on Brooklyn Ave. Mrs. W. G. Bowdoin.

DELAWARE CAN NOW GO

Forward in Building Roads—Du Pont's Plan Held Legal.

Not often is it necessary for a philanthropist to fight a strenuous legal battle in the courts and conduct a vigorous campaign to overcome public prejudice against his plan to give two million dollars to the state, but that has been the novel experience of General T. Coleman duPont of Delaware, who has finally cleared the last obstacle out of the way of his scheme to build a boulevard from the Pennsylvania to the Maryland line, pay for it out of his own pocket and turn it over to the people. Under a decision of the United States supreme court just handed down, the general is now free to proceed with the unique idea which he first proposed four years ago.

When he announced to the people of Delaware that he desired to construct a fine modern highway 110 miles long, stretching directly through the heart of the little Commonwealth and forming a main artery for the transportation of the truck and other farm produce which is the principal foundation of its wealth, it was naturally supposed that the generosity of the offer would make instant appeal. But not so. Curiously enough, an adverse sentiment sprang up immediately, especially among farmers whose land would have to be crossed. Some saw an ulterior motive, an attempt to get control of a valuable franchise under guise of granting an improvement to the people. It was suggested that the general might want to build a continuous string of tenement houses from end to end of the boulevard, overlooking the fact that at many places it would have to pass through swamps and wild woodlands where tenements would remain tenanted for years. Others thought that it would give him too much power. It was even advanced that to permit a private person to conduct such a great public work would be detrimental to the dignity of the state. Then, too, it was said that it was prompted by vanity and love of self-advertising, and intended to emphasize the wealth of the donor at the expense of the taxpayers, who could not be induced to assume the burden. No opinion seemed too fantastic or ridiculous to voice as an objection. General duPont was flooded with letters from all parts of the state, and even outside points, many congratulatory, others contemptuous, and a few threatening. But none of them disturbed his good nature or caused him to turn aside from the project.

The first step was to have the legislature pass the necessary legislation, which was accomplished without much difficulty, once the leaders at Dover were made fully acquainted with the plans. Then came the lawsuits. The attack was made on every possible ground, but especially on the constitutionality of the law. This question was threshed out in all the courts of Delaware and up by slow degrees through the United States courts, until finally it resulted in the victory of last week. The legality of the project has been sustained and General duPont is expected to renew his active operations for the actual construction of the road where they were abruptly terminated at the beginning of the litigation. He means to superintend the work himself. He has not been in the best of health for sometime and has been retired from active business. But he believes the outdoor work will benefit him and has been looking forward with keenest pleasure to the exercise which it will furnish him in the open. He has had a special automobile, with sleeping quarters and a kitchenette attachment, built for his use, so that he can camp right at the scene of operations when they get out of easy access to the towns. It is estimated that the work will result in the expenditure of many thousands of dollars weekly in wages and give long and steady employment to some 3000 men.

LARGE TOY DEPARTMENT IS OPENED.

Ullman Sons Have Completed Extensive Improvements in Their Store.

The work on the basement of Ullman Sons' store has been completed and it is now fitted out as a first-class toy department. A large consignment of toys of all kinds and sizes has been received and with such a varied assortment in stock the toy buyers will have ample opportunity to get whatever kind of toys they desire. An idea seems to be prevalent that there will be a shortage of toys this year on account of Germany being at war, but such is not the case, the supply this year being as bountiful as ever.

WILLARDS CAMPGROUND DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Blaze Causes Loss of About $5000 on Sunday Last.

The campground at Willards was destroyed by fire on Sunday last. All the buildings in the campground, consisting of 41 tents, the tabernacle and boarding house, were burned, a strong southwest wind causing the fire to eat its way through the camp in a very short time.

Many of the tents were torn down in the hope of stopping the advance of the flames, but in spite of all efforts made, the fire continued to gain headway and it was thought for a while that the entire town of Willards would be destroyed. A large number of automobile parties, who were out on the new state road, were attracted by the smoke from the fire and rushed to render assistance.

The Willards camp was one of the most popular camps in this section. It was dedicated about 16 years ago and has been a success from the start.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

At City Hall Monday Night of Public Interest.

The city council in session Monday evening granted the following permits: To George B. Rignin, garage on East William street; to Laura E. Davis, store and dwelling on East Locust street; Willie C. Fields, wood and smoke house on Washington street.

The ordinance granting the Peninsula Rapid Transit Co. a franchise to operate motor busses on the streets of Salisbury for a term of five years was received and was ordered posted, to be finally acted upon at the next meeting of the council.

This is the first step in what may prove to be one of the most important developments on the Eastern Shore for years.

This is one of the largest areas of densely populated country in the United States that is not already netted with electric lines of railroad. There is not an electric railroad south of Wilmington, although the population is far more dense than in many sections where there are hundreds of miles of such road in similar areas.

With our wonderful system of state roads, far superior to any other in the country, and with the development of self-propelling vehicles for travel on such roads, it is doubtful if there will ever be any need for local traffic, however heavy, which cannot be met by the auto trucks and cars which will be multiplying rapidly every year.

This new project is one of the most promising enterprises that has ever been considered for our part of the country. It gives all the service and convenience of a system of electric lines, and does it at a very much smaller investment.

The clerk was instructed to send to Mrs. Martha Perdue a bill for tapping sewer on Poplar Hill avenue; also to notify the Salisbury Light, Heat and Power Co. to repair at once the sidewalk on Newton street in front of S. F. Melson's residence property, broken up by them in planting a pole on said street.

Mayor Bounds and Councilmen White and Hitch were appointed a committee to investigate and make the necessary changes in the assessment of Patrick H. Dooey's lot on Camden avenue and make report at the next meeting of the council.

The clerk was instructed to pay to Mrs. W. A. Crew the amount of interest due her on note she holds against the city. Bills amounting to $882.52 were approved and ordered paid by the treasurer.

On motion Mayor Bounds was authorized to execute on behalf of the mayor and council, a deed to P. H. Dooey for so much of the Jackson property at the corner of Main and Mill streets as is not required by the city for widening Mill street, for the sum of $2500, this price to include the brick building located thereon.

The council passed a resolution authorizing the Downing Concrete Co. to dig the trenches on South Division street for the laying of new water mains, when ordered to be done.

County Commissioners

The county commissioners were in session Tuesday and transacted considerable routine business.

The board received a letter from the war department granting an extension of time for the completion of the two lift bridges in Salisbury until December 31.

The board authorized Commissioner W. C. Mitchell to have the ferry house and dock at the upper ferry repaired.

Mr. I. W. Parker was before the board asking for the improvement of about 400 yards of the road south from Parsonburg. The board promised to investigate the matter at once.

John T. Melson was appointed constable for Sharpton district.

The board instructed the roads engineer to request of the state roads commission, through Mr. W. B. Mil-

MAY TEST LIQUOR LAW

On Shore—Plan Said to Under Way To Try Case in Court.

The limited shipping bill, passed at the last session of the legislature of Maryland, which prevents residents of the Eastern Shore of Maryland from receiving more than a gallon of whiskey in any one month, is soon to be tested. Plans are under way to test the law, and those behind the movement assert that beyond a single doubt the constitutionality will be proven invalid when it reaches the court of appeals.

A representative of the firm of Anthony Keyser, Philadelphia, was on the Shore last week making a quiet but thorough investigation into the machinations of the law.

The alleged weakness of the law according to the Keyser people is that it interferes with interstate trade, and the fight will be conducted on that line, and the arguments used against the Hazel law of Delaware will be applied against the Eastern Shore anti-whiskey bill.

The Keyser people have conferred with Attorney General Edgar Allan Poe and some time within the next few days a shipment of five gallons of whiskey will be made to some resident of one of the Eastern Shore counties. The express or freight company handling the shipment, will, of course, refuse to make the delivery, and then the Keyser people will make a demand for the delivery, backed by a like demand from the consignee. When the transportation company refuses to make the delivery, the Philadelphia firm will then institute proceedings to compel its delivery.

Even should the law be declared unconstitutional, however, it would still be impossible for Eastern Shore residents to obtain more than a gallon a month from any firm in Maryland, but they could order as much as they desired from any firm in Delaware or Philadelphia. This naturally would turn the Eastern Shore's whisky trade from Baltimore to either Wilmington or the Quaker city.

Run or has it that the same interests that fought the Hazel law in Delaware are behind the movement to overthrow the Eastern Shore law. In any event, the fight will, no doubt, prove interesting from a legal point of view, and many are wondering just what the outcome will be. Chester town Enterprise.

Appeal for Literature

The Salisbury Society, a part of the Salisbury Civic Club, would like to make a general appeal for reading matter for the Tuberculosis Sanatorium. The Sanatorium has no library, whatever—the six or eight books that have been taken there by thoughtful individuals have been read and returned from cover to cover by the patients, who are now eager for something new.

An interesting collection of books and magazines is particularly needed at an institution of this kind, where the patients are almost isolated and are not strong enough for any occupation much more strenuous than reading.

We feel sure that there are numerous novels in every household that have been read, gone round the circle of friends, and returned to a secluded bookshelf, no further amusement there and a dust catcher. Of these or any books you choose to send we would most glad. Old magazines would be equally welcome. Don't throw them away—send them to the Sanatorium.

We would suggest as a Christmas present to the Sanatorium, to give one so including a subscription to a newspaper or a magazine.

Will those replying to this appeal help the giving of a little something kindly send their books and magazines direct to the Sanatorium or to Miss Louise Tilghman on Camden Avenue, or simply notify Miss Tilghman of your willingness to help—telephone 75.

Mardela News

Mr. George Waller, Mr. Loran Langsdale, Mr. G. C. Bounds and Miss Stella Bounds of Quaticco motored over to Chestertown last Friday in Mr. Waller's new Buick to attend the football game. They returned Monday afternoon. Miss Aldridge of Chestertown accompanied them home.

Miss Jennie Robertson of Philadelphia, who has been spending several weeks with friends here, returned to her home Saturday.

Mrs. L. A. Wilson and Mrs. Ida Langsdale spent the week-end with Mrs. Jones in Salisbury.

There are several new buildings going up in our town and we are glad that they are nearing completion as Christmas will soon be here.

A survey and estimate of cost of construction of the Morris Corner—Mt. Hermon road in connection with their application for state aid on section of road previously filed with the state roads commission.

Board adjourned to meet November 17th.

DAMAGE TO CATTLE

Wicomico Farmers Should Be Posted About Foot and Mouth Disease.

The meat and milk supply of the country is threatened by the spread of a highly contagious disease known as the "Hoof and Mouth Disease." This disease was a curious matter some years ago, especially in Pennsylvania, where hundreds of cattle were killed as a matter of prevention of the spread of the infection throughout the country.

What the Disease Is. This plague among domestic animals, especially cattle, sheep, swine and goats, is characterized by sensitive sores on the tongue, palate and hoof of the animal, according to the Department of Agriculture. The sores become red and raw within a very short time and cause the disease to spread "like lightning" to other cattle. Lameness appears and the milk ducts dry up. It takes two years to cure an animal. The only way to stamp out the disease is to destroy all animals afflicted.

Extension of the livestock quarantine because of this epidemic to Canada, Rhode Island and Delaware was decided upon Monday by the Department of Agriculture and further extensions will be made as soon as it is found necessary.

The disease has made its appearance in upper Delaware, but has not been discovered elsewhere on the Peninsula. Should it reach the Middle-town section from which the entire Eastern Shore gets a great deal of its butter, milk and ice cream, this whole section of country would be in danger.

The disease is destroying cattle in the middle western and western states and New Castle county will be quarantined.

Four or five well developed cases of the scourge have been located in a herd which was shipped to farmers in Mill Creek hundred from Lancaster, Pa. The discovery was made by Dr. Charles A. Schaeffer, Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, and Dr. H. P. Eves, Delaware state veterinarian.

As a result of their investigations the experts have been summoned to appear before the Live Stock Sanitary Board which met early Monday, to consider the situation and devise ways and means of preventing the spread of the disease. Both Dr. Schaeffer and his colleague admit that the presence of the foot and mouth disease demands drastic action and it is not improbable that all movements of cattle in New Castle county will be prohibited.

That the situation demands drastic action to prevent a spread of the disease, is the statement of Dr. H. P. Eves, who will be in charge of the fight against the scourge in Delaware.

"We have discovered five developed cases of foot and mouth disease among the cattle belonging to Leslie Derrickson and shall kill his entire herd at once," Dr. Eves said.

"We shall also destroy other stock he has on his place as well as house cats. His dog will not be killed, but the pigeons he has will have to be done away with at once. Mr. Derrickson received his cattle from Lancaster, Pa., and in the same shipment were cows for Reuben Satterthwaite and Thompson Bailey. We have not discovered the disease among herds on the Satterthwaite or Bailey farms, but as the cattle came into the county with those on the Derrickson farm, they are being closely watched.

"The situation here requires that we act at once. Veterinarians from all parts of the state will meet with Governor Charles R. Miller, members of the Live Stock Sanitary Board and myself at the Hotel Dupont to discuss plans for preventing further spread of the disease."

Farm Laborers Supplied

L. Wethered Barroll, 609 Keyser building, Baltimore, Md., announces that he will be in his office November 16 and 17, and on those two days will be prepared to furnish an unlimited number of Germans—farm laborers—to the farmers of this county.

Mr. Barroll does not make the slightest charge for his services in securing this labor. He suggests that you either call him over the telephone on these two days or else call at his office in person and select your own laborers and bring them home with you.

Mrs. White Passes Away

Mrs. Annette J. White, widow of the late Mr. John H. White, died early Wednesday morning at her home on Camden avenue, after three weeks' illness.

Mrs. White was born in Chestertown and was a daughter of the late United States Senator George R. Vickers. She lived in Salisbury ever since her marriage to Mr. White, who died a little over a year ago.

She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Hartog of Baltimore, and the following children: Mrs. William S. Gordy, Jr., Mrs. S. R. Douglass, Messrs. G. Vickers White and J. Cleveland White.

BUY AT HOME

Money Spent at Home Will Create a Home Market.

The dollars spent with the home merchant are the dollars that help build up the community. Nobody ever heard of a mail order house in a distant city making a contribution for the improvement of this town. The merchant in the city pays nothing toward the support of the school in which our children are educated, nor toward the support of the churches in which our people worship. In fact, the dollar sent to the merchant in the big city is gone forever, so far as any good to your community is concerned. Is it fair to deprive the home merchant of your cash trade and thus deprive the community of the benefits to be derived from keeping this money at home? Civic pride is a virtue to which that citizen can not rightfully lay claim who makes a practice of sending away from home for his purchases just for the sake of saving a few pennies on each. Let's all band together in an effort to build up the community by patronizing the home merchants.

Is your town a "back yard" town? The impression a traveler gets as he passes through the small towns and hamlets, while it is fleeting in its nature, in many others it is lasting. Most small towns are centered about the railway station, and little or no separation between their business and residence districts is apparent.

The traveler receives a good or bad impression accordingly as he sees neat rows of well-kept residences and business buildings or tumble-down ramshackle buildings close up to the tracks, the yards covered with debris and rubbish. Can you say frankly and with pleasure that your town is well-kept and unworthy of the allusion "a back yard town"? If not, clean up, so that the visitor can say nothing detrimental. Let him go away with a pleasing, lasting impression of the beauties and the business-building opportunities to be found in your town.

Don't expect the impossible of your town and its merchants. Be sure first, before you complain of the goods and prices of home merchants, that you haven't had a hand in making it impracticable for our merchants to handle the kind of goods you want at the prices you can pay. Merchants are not mind readers, nor are they blind to their own best interests. If they haven't what you want they will get it for you at as low or lower price than you can get it anywhere else. They deserve to be given an opportunity to do so anyhow; but if they do not deserve it you will be doing yourself a bigger favor than you will them to deal face to face with men you know and that can be held personally accountable for their promises and performances. Try this for a rule of trading hereafter.—The Banker-Farmer.

Hastings-McGehee

The wedding of Miss Blanche Tallian McGehee, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. E. A. McGehee, to John Erman Hastings, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hastings, of Salisbury, Md., was solemnized Thursday evening at the home of the bride's parents, 7 north Thirteenth St. The ceremony took place at 9 o'clock, Rev. James L. Green officiating. The lower floor was decorated in palms, potted plants and lighted candles. Mrs. Harry C. Daesherry sang "Believe me all those Endearing Young Chorus," just before the bride party entered. Harry C. Daesherry accompanied by Eugene Leidy on the violin played the wedding march from "Lohengrin." The bride entered the parlors on the arm of her father, who gave her away. She wore a travelling costume of blue chiffon broadcloth, with hat and gloves to match and carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Beale McGehee, who attended her sister as maid of honor, wore blue chambray draped in chiffon, with Dutch lace and carried a big bouquet of Killarney roses. Little Nellie McGehee, in a dainty dress of white silk and chiffon carried the ring in the heart of a colla lily. Richard Holmstoller was the bridesmaid's best man. Mr. and Mrs. Hastings left at once for a southern wedding tour. Some of the guests from a distance attending the marriage were Clifton McGehee of Portsmouth; Mrs. Scott from Norfolk; W. T. Van Pelt of Norfolk and Misses Maude and Nellie Hastings of Salisbury, Md.

The Maryland Agricultural College Extension Department has issued No. 1 of Volume 1 of an interesting little pamphlet entitled "Farm Adviser." It is filled with interesting bits of information regarding the work of the department and of progressive agriculture in general. Its field will be to keep the farming public advised as to what the college is trying to accomplish and as to what it is really doing. Prof. T. B. Symons is the director of the Extension Department.

"OLD SPORTS" WIN

In Annual Football Game With the Wicomico High School.

On Wednesday, Nov. 11, the annual game of foot-ball between the Wicomico High School and the Old Sports was played on the athletic field in South Salisbury. The game was won by the Old Sports by the score of 10-7. This was the first defeat of the year for the High School as they have won every other game played from high schools in this section.

The Old Sports were the first to score when Dashiell ran eighteen yards for a touchdown after receiving a forward pass. Dashiell kicked the goal. The Old Sports scored again in the second quarter by a goal from the field. It was not until the last quarter that the High School scored, when Ingersoll intercepted a forward pass and ran twenty-five yards for a touchdown. Ingersoll kicked the goal.

The line-up:

Old Sports	W. H. S.
Grier	L. E. White
Farlow	L. T. Byrd
Todd	L. G. Todd
Stitch	C. Tindle
Turner	R. G. Mitchell
Ames	R. T. Heston
Gunby	R. E. Ingersoll
Dashiell	Q. B. Richardson
Ward	L. H. B. Fooks
Douglass	R. H. B. Guthrie
Howard	F. B. Hayman
B. Ferec, Dr. Harris, Washington; Umpire, White, Western Maryland.

Touchdowns—Dashiell, Ingersoll. Goals from touchdown—Dashiell, Ingersoll. Goal from field—Dashiell, Ingersoll.

CORN LESSONS

Suggestions for Stud; by Children in the Rural Schools.

For the benefit of children in rural schools suggestions for a series of lessons on corn are about to be issued by the United States agricultural department. The average production per acre of corn in the United States is still below 23 bushels, despite the fact that in almost every section of the country yields of more than 100 bushels have been obtained. The difference indicates in a measure the value of proper instruction in growing corn. The spread of boys' corn clubs all over the country has also emphasized the need of corn study in rural schools.

The forthcoming bulletin contains outlines of 12 lessons covering such important points as the different kinds of corn, ways of judging corn seed, corn crop rotation, best kind of fertilizers, proper cultivation and the food value of the crop. Suggestions for the proper observance of corn day have received consideration. Rural school teachers, especially in the great corn growing states, will find the bulletin a valuable aid in the work of stimulating in their charges a healthy interest in sound agriculture.

Went for a Walk; Lost?

TEST OF FRIENDSHIP

By JULIE CARSON.

"I think," said Phyllis to her husband as they were packing their trunks preparatory to taking their annual vacation trip, "that I shall ask Sue to take care of the chickens while I am gone. I know that she will be glad to do that much for me and—"

"Well, inasmuch as she lives next door and has only to cross the yard to feed them and seeing that she will probably get about a dozen and a half eggs a day from them, I don't think that you are putting her regard to a very severe test," replied Phyllis' husband.

"I wonder, John Billingsby, why it is that packing always seems to have such a disagreeable effect upon you," commented Phyllis, as she watched him staring helplessly at a bunch of mackintosh from which he was vainly trying to choose the best to put in his trunk. "You never seem to be able to pack a trunk without unpacking your bad temper at the same time. You know very well that Sue doesn't like chickens; she says that their habit of always eating makes her nervous, and as for the eggs, she would rather buy them at the store than get them at the cost of caring for the chickens."

"And have you thought whom you would inflict that Angora kitten upon?" questioned her husband.

"Oh, that's all settled," declared Phyllis, triumphantly. "Ruth Comfort is going to take the kitten. You know she adores cats, but her husband has an antipathy for them and won't let her have one, but he has consented to allow her to borrow mine while we are gone and Ruth is as happy as if she had come into the possession of a fortune and has promised me to treat it as her own. Ruth is really devoted to me and I think that if she hated cats she would be just as conscientious in her care of my kitten, simply out of pure friendship."

"Pure friendship!" echoed Billingsby, as he folded and unfolded, then folded again a white flannel outing coat that he had bought in a moment of reckless determination to make this trip the gayest one in his experience.

"I'll be willing to wager this coat that Sue will be so sick of her chickens and Ruth so disgusted with that cat's sly ways that they will be heartily glad to see you back. It's a pity people cannot go away on vacations without unloading all their responsibilities and possessions on their friends and neighbors. By the way, where did you send our Kirmanshaw rug? That's worth more than a bushel of chickens and kittens."

"Oh, the rug is over at the Stevens'; they were delighted to have it."

The next day the Billingsbys went on their way. At the end of three weeks they returned with a thick coat of tan on their faces, and a very thin layer of hair in their purses and in their hearts the deepest of thankfulness to be back.

Mrs. Billingsby's first act was to go over to Sue's to get the key to the chicken coop.

"Oh, are you back so soon?" said Sue with badly concealed reluctance, and she handed the key to her face. "I had just got the chickens used to my ways and in another week I know I could have done wonders."

She started up the key unwillingly and Mrs. Billingsby felt that her return was anything but welcome. She stole a look at the key to the chicken coop, where more consternation awaited her.

"What, it seems as if you had just gone!" declared Ruth, with no attempt to hide her dismay. "Kitty and I were just getting acquainted, and she is so used to her new basket that I am sure she will be quite unhappy if you take her away at once."

The vacant place on the floor of the Shaw's living room where the loaned rug was removed was another reproach. By the time Mrs. Billingsby reached her own home the gladness had faded from her face.

"They all seemed sorry to have me back," she confessed, "and they made me feel like a cruel impostor when I asked for the return of my own belongings."

"It is curious," commented Billingsby, "how a warm and pure friendship for a person—for a very nice person I might say—can be supplanted by an impersonal affection for a chicken, or a kitten, or a rug. But at least you have put your friends to the test and know the depth of their regard."—Chicago Daily News.

SEPARATION DANCES STYLISH THIS SEASON

Close-Holding Not Exactly Au Fait In New Order of Things Polka Threatens To Return

Knees are to be most unsociable on the dancing floor this winter. At least the dancing teachers hope their efforts to segregate them will be successful. And if their instructions are followed the welfare board will have no complaints about propriety or body movements.

This season's steps must be danced with the hips and shoulders dormant, says the Kansas City Star. Even the "bobbing up and down" of the Castle walk has been succeeded by the gliding trot of the one-step. Smoothness and finish in all the dances is the teachers' edict.

"The good dancer this year will be judged not by the number of steps, but by the way they are executed," says Miss Vera Nelson, who studied dancing in New York this summer. "This year the changes in the dances are not nearly so revolutionary as they were last fall. Dancers will not have to start all over again, but may use the steps they have learned as a foundation."

The new steps cannot be danced well close together. Close position is the sign of a poor dancer, anyway. Poor dancers cling to their partners in order to keep their balance, while they would be unable to do alone.

"Twelve inches is not too far to keep apart. In some of the new dances the man and woman perform different steps at the same time, so that considerable space between them is essential. Many, many times women cannot dance their best because they are held so tightly."

"This season's dances will do away with much of the trouble, I believe, because in a way they are more stately and dignified than for several years. Some of the old-fashioned dances, such as the polka and the valse, are coming back. They may not be popular this season, but they will art in time. At present it looks as if the fox trot and the canter would prove a lot popular. In New York they are dancing many of the one-step figures to each other."

"Both the one-step and the canter will remain with us at least another season. Some excellent new one-step figures, among them the box turn and the wave, will keep this dance in vogue. The hesitation has been standardized so that everyone may now dance its four figures in the same order."

The tango, Miss Nelson believes, could be revived if given another name. Only the prejudice against it as danced last year will keep it out, says she. It also has been standardized and simplified and a so-called "summer tango" was the rage in the East during the hot weather.

"But of the great variety of new things in dancing the maxixe is my favorite," Miss Nelson said. "Its several figures have also been standardized and should not prove difficult for good dancers to learn."

"The half-and-half, while apparently very simple, is one of the hardest to dance correctly because if done smoothly it must be danced off the rhythm. This will prove hard to those who have been taught from the first the necessity of keeping in time with the music."

Prospects Bright For Business Improvement The Country Over.

It is of great interest at this time to hear from headquarters regarding the financial and commercial conditions of the United States, and noteworthy to hear the feeling of optimism which prevails in authentic sources. See what John Skelton Williams, comptroller of the currency and member of the federal reserve board says:

Reports have been received up to November 1 by the comptroller of the currency from national bank examiners in every part of the country upon the state of business in their respective districts and a summary of their impressions and observations arrived at by actual contact with the commercial and industrial interests gives us a most reassuring promise for the future. These reports are now upon file for the month of October and a feeling of substantial optimism runs through a vast majority of them.

Moreover, these reports provide us with a very accurate review of the conditions as they obtain today. They not merely point to great improvement in the business of the future, but they furnish the causes for any depression that may prevail locally or generally throughout the country. They show whether or not business is steady, or improving or declining.

No Failures of Moment.
Perhaps as significant as any phase of these investigations is the fact that no failures or suspensions of moment have been reported to the treasury. This does not apply merely to banking institutions, but it applies to all lines of business endeavor.

Of all the sections of the country only the South appears at this time to be seriously crippled. This is due, as is well known, to the over-production of cotton, coupled with the breaking down of the export cotton market.

Improving in the South.

Even so, small loans are to a large extent being paid throughout the South as they fall due.

All southern crops are reported in fine condition. The recent harvests have never been more abundant. Rice, a staple of the southwest, has been particularly productive, as are the cereals where they have been raised to any extent. Reports from Atlanta are to the effect that the commercial houses are finding conditions greatly improved. In Texas unusual activity is noted in stock shipping.

Depression in the East.

In the east the inquiries of the bank examiners show that the European war has produced abnormal conditions generally. In some lines there is especial activity, the result, in large measure, of orders for war materials. In yet other lines there is a depressed state. It is worthy of remark, however, that but few manufacturing enterprises in the east have closed down entirely and only a small number are now working on reduced time.

Middle and Far West Prosper

The middle west, the intermountain states and the Pacific coast sections are even now showing symptoms of great prosperity. The bank examiners have found, for instance, that in the agricultural sections the great crops are being marketed at high prices; that in all the staples conditions have steadily improved for weeks and that the shipping facilities in some states are being taxed to meet the demands upon them.

On the Pacific coast the commercial demand for money is very strong. Withdrawals on account of the uneasiness produced by the European war have almost ceased.

In the intermountain country it is reported that practically all mills and factories are in full operation.

As for the middle west the fall season has had a most stimulating effect upon all lines of business.

Expansion More Than a Prospect

This is, briefly, the condition of American business today as found by the host of national bank examiners.

But, as previously stated, these officials find throughout the country a feeling that domestic prosperity for the American people is inevitable; that trade expansion at home and abroad is more than a mere prospect, and that with the federal reserve system effective, with all energies—governmental and otherwise—trained to the same end, national business will assume great proportions whether the European struggle is long or short.

can people is inevitable; that trade expansion at home and abroad is more than a mere prospect, and that with the federal reserve system effective, with all energies—governmental and otherwise—trained to the same end, national business will assume great proportions whether the European struggle is long or short.

To Counteract Tannin in Tea.
One of the marked characters of tea is the tannin contained in it. Indian tea has about twice as much as the Chinese growth. It has a marked effect on the digestion, even in the presence of other fluids. In all cases it retards the digestive process to an extent that would astonish those who have not inquired into the matter, and it has been recommended that a pinch of bicarbonate of soda should be added to the brew of persons with weak digestions so as to make the infusion alkaline.

That the cabbage worm is doing considerable damage in Wicomico is evidenced in nearly every direction where cabbage patches are to be seen. In some instances part of the cabbage is destroyed, while in some cases entire patches are completely ravished. There seems to be no adequate remedy for the plague.

Mrs. William J. Downing and Mrs. L. F. Warner will attend the national gathering of the W. C. T. U. to be held at Atlanta, Ga., as two of the representatives from the state of Maryland. These ladies will go to Atlanta on the Special White Ribbon Express over the Pennsylvania railroad from Baltimore.

Sugar has dropped to seven cents per pound. Sugar in bulk, wholesale, was selling last week as low as 5 1/2 cents a pound, which is a drop of 2 1/2 cents from the highest price this year which was reached on August 14. Sugar merchants say the indications are that the drop will continue until the new year at least. This reduction applies almost entirely to the standard granulated brands, but a reflected lowering in the prices of the fancy grades is expected.

Isaac J. Truitt Dead

Mr. Isaac J. Truitt, one of the best known citizens of the eastern part of the county, died Sunday morning, Nov. 8, at the home of his son, Wm. E. Truitt. The funeral services were held at the home of his son, Wm. E. Truitt, Nov. 10, at 1 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Mr. Roberts. Six of his grandsons acted as pallbearers.

The deceased was about 83 years of age, and had been a member of New Hope M. P. church since he was 16 years old. Deceased is survived by eight children as follows: Annanias B. E. Dora, Thomas M., George W., I. Henry, Laury T., Mrs. J. R. Freney and Wm. E. Truitt. He also had 34 grandchildren and 6 great grandchildren. He survived his wife about four years.

He will be greatly missed by his many relatives and friends.

Mrs. G. Vickers White and bride have returned from their honeymoon trip and are residing on North Division street at the home of the groom's aunt, Mrs. Hannah White.

Miss Lizzie Powell is home again, much improved in health, after treatment several weeks in a Philadelphia hospital.

Mrs. Frank Wilkins, of Rehoboth, Somerset County, is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. Coston Goslee, near town.

Mr. Walter Powell began work this week on the Powell home, corner of North Division and West Chestnut streets. These improvements will include hardwood floors, hot water heat, repainting, inside and outside. Mr. Powell and bride, who are now boarding will occupy the property.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Bowdoin spent last Sunday at Hebron, with Mr. Bowdoin's cousin, Mr. John Townsend.

The fire department was called out Wednesday morning at 1.30 to respond to an alarm from Martin street in East Salisbury. The fire proved to be a dwelling owned by Charles Campbell and occupied by a family named Wells. The building was partially destroyed. A portion of the furniture was saved.

Former Senator W. P. Jackson has received his new Pierce Arrow Limousine. This is the handsomest car ever seen on the streets of Salisbury. It is beautifully appointed and has all the very latest attachments for comfort and safety. In fact it is the highest type car manufactured in the United States. It is a five passenger Limousine which can be changed into a seven passenger touring car by the substitution of the open body.

The usual services at Bethesda M. P. Church Sunday. The pastor will speak at both services. A cordial invitation to worship with us.

The usual services at Asbury M. P. Church to-morrow. Preaching by Dr. Martindale morning and evening.

SHORT SERMONS.

As a simple naturalism takes the place of the old pessimistic supernaturalism, the faith of the world—that in every man which helps him to realize his aspirations—has an optimistic glow.—E. E. Newbert.

It is a grand thing to find joy in one's work. If you have found that, you have found the heart of life. Glad service is better than great service unless that be glad too.—James Buckham.

Of course we have a duty to distinguish between the good and the bad, but we have a duty to discriminate also among the things that are good. We are made not for the good only, but for the best.—Robert Speer.

EVILS OF IGNORANCE.

Nothing is more terrible than active ignorance.—Goethe.

The living man who does not learn is dark, dark, like one walking in the night.—From the Chinese.

The most ignorant are the most conceited. Unless a man knows that there is something more to be known his inference is, of course, that he knows everything. * * * But let a man know that there are things to be known of which he is ignorant, and it is so much carved out of his domain of universal knowledge.—Horace Mann.

BRILLIANTS.

Still, still with thee, when purple morning breaketh,
When the bird waketh and the shadows flee;
Fairer than morning, lovelier than the daylight,
Dawns the sweet consciousness, I am with thee!
—Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Teach me then
To harmonize the discord of my life
And stop the painful jangle of these wires.

That is a task impossible, until
You tune your heartstrings to a higher key Than earthly melodies.
—Longfellow.

And they were canopied by the blue sky,
So cloudless, clear and purely beautiful
That God alone was to be seen in heaven.
—Byron.

CUPID'S ADVERTISEMENT.

Cupid is a busy elf,
You can see this for yourself.
Yet perhaps he'll find it wise
Presently to advertise.
Somewhat in this style maybe,
"Hearts extracted painlessly."
He'll, of course, omit to state
That the after pain is great.
And when heart is gone, 'tis said,
Man is apt to lose his head.
Gladly would he bear some pain
If his heart he could regain.
—New York Sun.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

In adversity it is easy to despise life; he is truly brave who can endure a wretched life.—Martial.

Nothing is well ordered that is hasty and precipitate.—Seneca.

Without your knowledge the eyes and ears of many will see and watch you as they have done already.—Cicero.

The belly is the teacher of art and the bestower of genius.—Petrus.

The uncertain multitude is divided by opposite opinions.—Vergil.

LOVE'S PHILOSOPHY.

The fountains mingle with the river,
And the rivers with the ocean,
The winds of heaven mix forever
With a sweet emotion;
Nothing in the world is single;
All things by a law divine
In one another's being mingle—
Why not I with thine?

See the mountains kiss high heaven,
And the waves clasp one another;
No sister flower would be forgiven
If it disdained its brother;
And the sunlight clasps the earth,
And the moonbeams kiss the sea;
What are all these kisses worth
If thou kiss not me?
—Shelley

Better Than Poulitice.
If at any time you have a gathered finger or person hand, take a cabbage leaf, roll it out with a bottle until the juice comes, and tie it on the affected part. This will draw and cleanse it far better than a poultice.

Must Report All Tuberculosis.
In Great Britain physicians are obliged to report every case of tuberculosis.

END OF MILITARISM.

When the mass murders of the insane soldiery are done there will be a day of reckoning for kings. Civilization is in travail. A new child is about to enter the human family. It will be more enlightened than its elder brothers and will advance the cause of all mankind. Its mother, European monarchy, may pay for its advent with her own life, or she may drag along for a time in invalidism, but her end is not far distant.

The people as a whole hate war. Their being forced into it will drive out of the minds all vestige of devotion to monarch. The time is not remote when militarism will end and wars cease. The masses are already of a mind to strip autocrats of their power to send armies to death and countries to ruin.—Danish Democrat.

SERBIA'S BATTLE HYMN.

Rise, O Servians, swift arise!
Lift your banners to the skies.
For your country needs her children.

Fight to make her free.
Rise, O rise, and crush our enemy.
Rise and fight for liberty.
Free the Save and Drina flow.
Let us, too, unfetter'd go
O'er the wild Moravian mountains.
Swift shall flow sweet freedom's fountains.
Down shall sink the foe.
Rise, O rise, and crush our enemy,
Rise and fight for liberty.

GERMAN APHORISMS.

Better go to bed without supper than rise with debts.

Honor the old, instruct the young, consult the wise and bear with the foolish.

Heavy work in youth is sweet repose in old age.

Towns and countries are never more ruined than when counsel is taken from foreigners.

Trust not too much in a new friend and an old house.

CORONACH.

He is gone on the mountain,
He is lost to the forest,
Like a summer dried fountain,
When our need was the sorest.
The font reappearing,
From the raindrops shall borrow.
But to us comes no cheering,
To Duncan no morrow!

The hand of the reaper
Takes the ears that are hoary,
But the voice of the weeper
Wails manhood in glory.
The autumn winds rushing
Waft the leaves that are seared.
But our flower was in flushing
When the blighting was nearest.

Fleet foot on the corral,
Sage counsel in lumber,
Red hand in the foray.
How sound is thy slumber!
Like the dew on the mountain,
Like the foam on the river,
Like the bubble on the fountain,
Thou art gone, and forever!
—Walter Scott.

BITS OF WISDOM.

Therefore well does Agathon say, "Of this alone is even God deprived, the power of making that which is past never to have been."—Aristotle.

There is, however, a limit at which forbearance ceases to be a virtue.—Burke.

This nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth.—Abraham Lincoln.

In the lexicon of youth, which fate reserves for a bright manhood, there is no such word as fall.—Bulwer Lytton.

BARCAROLE.

Small fingers on the silken strings;
Sunset and rising moon;
Far hills of lapla, whirl of wings
Of homing birds in June;
And thou wert there, the twilight on thy brow—
O bitter is the biwa's music now!

Beneath the scented tamarinds
On some celestial trail
We drifted with the purple winds
That filled our sampan sail;
The purple winds blow once and and not again—
O bitter is the biwa's tender strain!
—Harper's Weekly

Must Not Whistle in Russia.
In certain cities of Russia street whistling by civilians is a penal offense, the privilege being reserved for the police; who exercise it, however, not in order to make tunes with their mouths, but to send signal blasts to each other. The whistling habit being hereditary, it soon disappears, and in these cities no difficulty is experienced in dealing nowadays with

TAX DITCH NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given to all taxables and persons interested, that the County Commissioners of Wicomico County will take up for hearing and final ratification at their office in Salisbury, Md., the report of the tax ditch commissioners appointed to lay out a tax ditch known as the Gordy tax ditch in Parsons Election District, Wicomico County, Maryland, at 3 o'clock p. m., Tuesday, October 13th, 1914. The proposed ditch to commence at the Gordy mill pond on the north side thereof, on land of Zeno Tingle, and run through the lands of said Zeno Tingle, W. L. Morris, J. M. Morris, Clayton C. Parker and others and to the land of Josiah Hosmer and others.

By order of the County Commissioners of Wicomico County,
DANIEL B. CANNON,
Clerk.

MONUMENTS

In erecting a monument, one should remember that it is not a mere mass of stone, but a memorial of honor that is to perpetuate the memory of the departed. Therefore, select the material to be had. Look to its beauty, design, and the quality of material. Many years in the monument business has taught us that good monuments cannot be made at cut prices, but it was also taught us how to make the best monument at the lowest possible price.

A NURSE TAKES DOCTOR'S ADVICE and is Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Eden, Ohio.—"Because of total ignorance of how to care for myself when I went into womanhood, and from taking cold when going to school, I suffered from a displacement, and each month I had severe pains and nausea which always meant a lay-off from work for two to four days from the time I was 16 years old.

"I went to Kansas to live with my sister and while there a doctor told me of the Pinkham remedies but I did not use them then as my faith in patent medicines was limited. After my sister died I came home to Ohio to live and that has been my home for the last 18 years. "The Change of Life came when I was 47 years old and about this time I saw my physical condition plainly described in one of your advertisements. Then I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I cannot tell you or anyone the relief it gave me in the first three months. It put me right where I need not lay off every month; and during the last 18 years I have not paid out two dollars to a doctor, and have been blest with excellent health for a woman of my age and I can thank Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it.

"Since the Change of Life is over I have been a maternity nurse and being wholly self-supporting I cannot over-estimate the value of good health. I have now earned a comfortable little home just by sewing and nursing. I have recommended the Compound to many with good results, as it is excellent to take before and after childbirth."—Miss EVELYN ADELIA STEWART, Euphemia, Ohio.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

The Last Shot

By FREDERICK PALMER

(Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons)

anism would respond. The reserves from this position would be transferred to that; such a position would be felt out before dark by a reconnaissance in force, the reserves would be transferred to the 20th; despite the 37th Brigade's losses, it would still form the advance; General So-and-So would be superseded after his failure of yesterday; Colonel So-and-So would take his place as acting major-general; more care must be exercised in recommendations for bronze crosses, lest their value so depreciate that officers and men would lack incentive to win them.

Marta was having a look behind the scenes at the fountainhead of great events. Power! power! The absolute power of the soldier in the saddle, with premier and government and all the institutions of peace only a dim background for the process of war! Opposite her was a man who could make and unmake not only generals but even the destinies of peoples. By every sign he enjoyed his power for its own sake. There must be a chief of the five millions, which were as a moving forest of destruction, and here was the chief, his strength reflected in the strong muscles of his short neck as he turned his head to listen to Turcas. Marta recalled the contrast between Westerling and Lanstron as they faced each other after the wreck of the aeroplane ten years ago; the iron invincibility of the elder's sturdy, mature figure and the alert, high-strung invincibility of the younger figure of the younger man.

He had taken up a paper thoughtfully after Turcas withdrew, when he looked up to Marta in answer to a movement in her chair. She had bent forward in a pose that freed her figure from the chair back in an outline of suppleness and grace; her eyes were parted, showing a faint line of the white of her teeth, and he caught her gaze at him in a kind of wondering admiration. But she dropped her eyes instantly and said deliberately, less to him than to herself:

"You have the gift?"

No tea-table flattery that, he knew; the reflection of a fact whose existence had been borne in on her by observation.

"The gift? How?" he inquired, speaking to the fringe of hair that half hid her lowered face.

She looked up, smiling brightly. "You don't know what gift? Not the pianist's! Not the poet's! Why, of course, the supreme gift of command! The thing that made you chief of staff! And the war goes well for you, doesn't it?"

Delicious morsel, this, to a connoisseur in compliments! He tasted it with the same self-satisfied smile that he had her first proposal. To her who had then voiced a secret he had shared with no one, as his chest swelled with a full breath, he bared another in the delight of the impression he had made on her.

"Yes, as you foresaw—as I planned!" he said. "Yes, I planned all, step by step, till I was chief of staff and ready. I convinced the premier that it was time to strike and I chose the hour to strike; for Bodlapoo was only a convenient excuse for the last of all the steps."

The subjective enjoyment of the declaration kept him from any keen notice of the effect of his words. Lanny was right. It had been a war of deliberate conquest; a war to gratify personal ambition. All her life Marta would be able to live over again the feelings of this moment. It was as if she were frozen, all except brain and nerves, which were on fire, while the rigidity of ice kept her from springing from her chair in contempt and horror. But a purpose came on the wings of diabolical temptation which would pit the art of woman against the power of a man who set millions against millions in slaughter to gratify personal ambition. She was thankful that she was looking down as she spoke, for she could not bring herself to another compliment. Her throat was too chilled for that yet.

"The one way to end the feud between the two nations was a war that would mean permanent peace," he explained, seeing how quiet she was and realizing, with a recollection of her children's oath, that he had gone a little too far. He wanted to retain her admiration. It had become as precious to him as a new delicacy to Lucullus.

"Yes, I understand," she managed to murmur; then she was able to look up. "It's all so immense!" she added. "Your ideas about war seem to be a great deal changed," he hinted casually.

"As I expressed them at the hotel, you mean!" she exclaimed. "That seems ages ago—ages!" The perplexity and indecision that, in a space of silence, brooded in the depths of her eyes came to the surface in wavering lights. "Yes, ages! ages!" The wavering lights grew dim with a kind of horror and she looked away fixedly at a given point.

He was conscious of a thrill; the thrill that always presaged victory for him. He realized her evident distress; he guessed that terrible pictures were moving before her vision.

"You see, I have been very much stirred up," she said half apologetically. "There are some questions I want to ask—quite practical, when you the war lasts the greater will be the loss of life and the misery?"

"Yes, for both sides; and the heavier the expense and the taxes."

"If you win, then we shall be under your flag and pay taxes to you?"

"Yes, naturally."

"The Browns do not increase in population; the Grays do rapidly. They are a great, powerful, civilized race. They stand for civilization!"

"Yes, facts and the world's opinion agree," he replied. Puzzled he might well be by this peculiar catechism. He could only continue to reply until he should see where she was leading.

"And your victory will mean a new frontier, a new order of international relations and a long peace, you think? Peace—a long peace?"

Was there ever a soldier who did not fight for peace? Was there ever a call for more army-corps or guns that was not made in the name of peace? He had his ready argument, spoken with the forcible conviction of an expert.

"This war was made for peace—the only kind of peace that there can be," he said. "My ambition, if any glory comes to me out of this war, is to have later generations say: 'He brought peace!'"

Though the premier, could he have heard this, might have smiled, even grinned, he would have understood Westerling's unconsciousness of inconsistency. The chief of staff had set himself a task in victory which had no military connection. Without knowing why, he wanted to win ascendancy over her mind.

"The man of action!" exclaimed Marta, her eyes opening very wide, as they would to let in the light when she heard something new that pleased her or gave food for thought. "The man of action, who thinks of an ideal as a thing not of words but as the end of action!"

"Exactly!" said Westerling, sensible of another of her gifts. She could get the essence of a thing in a few words. "When we have won and set another frontier, the power of our nation will be such in the world that the Browns can never afford to attack us," he went on. "Indeed, no two of the big nations of Europe can afford to make war without our consent. We shall be the arbiters of international dissensions. We shall command peace—yes, the peace of force, of fact! If it could be won in any other way I should not be here on this veranda in command of an army of invasion. That was my idea—for that I planned." He was making up for having over-shot him in his confession that he had brought on the war as a final step for his ambition.

"You mean that you can gain peace by propaganda and education only when human nature has so changed that we can have law and order and houses are safe from burglary and pedestrians from pickpockets without policemen?" Is that it?" she asked.

"Yes, yes! You have it! You have found the wheat in the chaff."

"Perhaps because I have been seeing something of human nature—the human nature of both the Browns and the Grays at war. I have seen the Browns throwing hand-grenades and the Grays in wretched disorder in our dining-room directly they were out of touch with their officers!" she said sadly, as one who hates to accept disillusionment but must in the face of logic.

Westerling made no reply except to nod, for a movement on her part preoccupied him. She leaned forward, as she had when she had told him he would become chief of staff, her hands clasped over her knee, her eyes burning with a question. It was the attitude of the prophecy. But with the prophecy she had been a little mystical; the fire in her eyes had precipitated an idea. Now it forged another question.

"And you think that you will win?" she asked. "You think that you will win?" she repeated with the slow emphasis which demands a careful answer.

The deliberateness of his reply was

Coins of Small Value.

Doubtless the smallest coin in the world circulates in the Malay peninsula, simply a thin water made from the resinous juice of a tree, and has current value of about 1-10,000th of a cent. In the southern parts of Russia the peasants use a coin of such small value that a quarter of a million of them are worth no more than $1.25. The old Japanese mouseng was worth 1-112th of an American cent. In Portugal the reis is the lowest standard of value, but no 1-reis pieces are coined. A 3-reis piece is equivalent to 6-100ths of a cent.

Greatness of Man.

The greatness of man does not show itself in its ability to build cathedrals, to sculpture, to paint, to write, to invent, to discover, to control men, to found nations, etc., but in its ability to commune with God and do his bidding.—Western Meth.

Good Idea at Any Time.

The following from an English paper will apply to many other places besides the sick room: "Whatever happens, do not keep on saying, 'Now, I am sure I am trying you. I had better go.' Only a sick bear would have the courage to take this literally. Get up, say good-by, and go."

Returned to Life in Coffin.

To be buried alive in the cemetery of Hochwald, in the canton of Soleure, was the fate of an elderly Swiss lady. After the burial ceremony the grave diggers were about to fill in the grave when they heard knocking in the coffin. Instead of rendering immediate help they fled in terror to inform the doctor and the priest. When the doctor arrived at the grave the coffin was opened and it was found that the woman, who had turned over, had

"The Thinkers of the Country Are the Tobacco Chewers" said one of the greatest thinkers this country ever produced.

Says the Judge:

"My brain grasps the points of a case more easily when I'm chewing PICNIC TWIST. I suppose it's because of the gentle stimulation that PICNIC TWIST gives without the after effects of 'strong' tobacco."

"Have you ever noticed how many great jurists chew? Well, there's nothing better to oil the wheels of justice than PICNIC TWIST."

Have you ever wished for a tobacco that you could keep on chewing without feeling that you were over-chewing?

For a long time you've really been looking for PICNIC TWIST, with its lasting sweet taste, and true tobacco satisfaction with no "come-back."

Compare PICNIC TWIST in taste, looks, convenience or any other way, with any dark "heavy" tobacco. Then you'll know the advantage of chewing the light, mild, mellow part of the leaf, the only kind that goes into PICNIC TWIST.

There are few better preservatives of the teeth than PICNIC TWIST.

One of the best places to store vegetables is in a cellar with an earth floor and without the usually ever-present furnace. This, or some modification of it, is used almost always for the storage of such vegetables as white potatoes, turnips, carrots, parsnips, salsify, celery and in fact, anything that requires cool or moist conditions. An earth floor is a necessity for vegetables that must be kept from wilting. Parsnips, carrots and turnips are vegetables of a class that will quickly if placed in a dry atmosphere.

On the other hand, sweet and white potatoes and onions will do better and retain their quality in a drier air.

Roman Villa Unearthed.

A Roman villa has recently been unearthed in the grounds of Limerhouse, Compton, near Guilford, Eng.

the house of Mrs. G. F. Watts, widow of the painter.

The digging was undertaken by the Surrey Archaeological society and the complete plan of the villa has been revealed. The north wall is about sixty feet in length, the west 53 feet and the south about seventy-six feet. The villa contains seven rooms and some baths.

There is a veranda on the south and a corridor on the north. Several Roman ornaments have been found.

To Get Rid of "Prickly Heat."

The vast areas at present lying waste in Queensland, Australia, owing to the spread of the cactus called

"prickly heat" are to be restored to cultivation. The plan is to kill the cactus with gas, burn the plants, and extract the potash from the ashes. Potash is worth between $100 and $125 a ton, and the poorest lands will probably be cleared at a profit. The work will start next March.

Infection and Insect Bites Dangerous

Mosquitoes, flies and other insects, which breed quickly in garbage piles, poison of stagnant water, barns, musty places, etc., are carriers of disease. Every time they bite you, they inject poison into your system from which some dread disease may result. Get a bottle of Solan's

Lintment. It is antiseptic and a few drops will neutralize the infection caused by insect bites or rusty nails. Solan's Liniment disinfects Cuts, Bruises and Sores.

DESERT OF LUXURY

By JOHN FILSON.

John Sharpless unlocked the door of his flat and let himself in. He hung up his hat in the hall and went slowly into his library. The maid was dusting, at the sight of him she gathered up her broom and pan and hurried toward the door.

"Mrs. Sharpless said she'll be home to dinner, sir," she said.

John Sharpless was conscious of a slight sense of annoyance. The bank-er was not a man given to analyzing his sensations; however, during the past few days things had occurred which had given a new turn to his thoughts. And he found himself scrutinizing his relations with Winifred with greater care than usual.

He had been married five years, and his marriage had been a failure; there was no doubt about that. Winifred's parents had been poor. She was country-bred, too, and the plunge into New York's social life had been a change. Indeed, she ought to have been grateful, at least, even if she had no love for him.

John thought rather grimly about those past five years. There had never been a child. There might have been, only Winifred was lazy and luxurious, and seemed to think of nothing but her woman's clubs and tea-parties. John had nothing in common with any of her friends. And she never hesitated to sacrifice his comfort to them.

Yes, it was strange, her coming home to dinner. Usually she dined alone, before he came in. He was a very busy man, and had been busier than usual until that evening. In future he did not expect to be so busy.

Half an hour later he was seated opposite his wife at the table. He noted her flushed cheeks; Winifred was still as pretty and girlish as when he married her. A sudden pang shot through his heart. How different things might have been! But was he to blame for the coldness, the estrangement?

After dinner Winifred did not withdraw, but sat watching him while he drank his coffee. John Sharpless felt dimly that something was impending. Winifred had something to say to him, as he to her. He would let her speak first. She said:

"John, if you have finished your coffee, I want to tell you something," she said. "I am going to leave you."

The banker quietly set down his cup. So the blow had fallen at last! And he was glad—very glad! Under the circumstances—but that could come later.

"I am going to leave you tomorrow, John," she continued. "I have made all my arrangements. I am going abroad with my sister. She approves of my decision. I presume there need be no vulgar squabbles about money. You have taken the best of me and destroyed it, and I shall have no hesitation in accepting alimony from you."

John nodded. "I will give you half my income," he said, and an amused smile crossed his features. His wife saw it, and it infuriated her.

"Do you want a divorce?" he asked. "I hope so!" she cried. "I don't want to be tied to you one minute longer than I can help. You are laughing! You are laughing at me, after all these years of misery. It has been anything but amusing to me."

"And to me," answered her husband. "I don't know why you married me," she pursued. "You have never given me care, love or attention. You have sat all day in your office, working, leaving me to mope alone."

"You haven't seemed to mope very much of late, Winifred," said her husband.

"No! Thank heaven, my friends rallied around me when they understood," she flashed back at him

MEAD'S CAFE

Division Street, Salisbury, Md.

THE WHIPPOORWILL.

Oh, meet me when daylight is faded
And is darkening into the night.
When songbirds are singing their vesper
And day has far vanished from sight.
And then I will tell you, darling,
All the love I have cherished so long
If you but meet me at evening,
When you hear the sweet whippoorwill's song.

And in the long years of the future,
Though our duties may part us awhile,
And by the return of this evening
We be severed by many a mile;
Yet deep in our hearts we will cherish
The affection so fervent and strong
We pledged to each other this evening
When we heard the first whippoorwill's song.

CHORUS.

Whippoorwill, whippoorwill,
When you hear the sweet whippoorwill's song,
Oh, meet me, oh, meet me,
When you hear the sweet whippoorwill's song.

WAR AND KINGS.

We do not want others' blood, and we refuse to shed our own.
George K. Kirkpatrick.
Let those who make the quarrel be the only ones to fight—
Alice L. Park.
They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks.—Isaiah II. 1.
And they shall build houses and inhabit them, and they shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them, and they shall not build and another inhabit. They shall not plant and another eat.—Isaiah LXV. 21, 22.
If any will not work neither shall they eat.—Thess. III. 10.

MY FRIENDS.

I tried to count my friends one day—
Since that day I have walked in awe.
I stepped my counting in dismay.
For, stretching far, in long array,
Still friends and friends I saw.
And then I said, all chokingly,
And faint with weight of happiness,
"Dear God, I pray that I may be
The man they think me—nothing less.
Oh, let me be until life ends
The man they think me, these my friends."
—Mary Carolyn Davies in Youth's Companion.

HONOR DEFINED.

The sense of honor is of so fine and delicate a nature that it is only to be met with in minds which are naturally noble or in such as have been cultivated by great examples or a refined education.—Addison.

Glory is sweet when our heart says to us that the wreath of honor ought to grace our heads.
—Krumpholtz.

That chastity of honor which felt a stain like a wound—Burke.

Honor and fame exist for him who always recognizes the neighborhood of the great, always feels himself in the presence of high causes.—Emerson

THE SERENADERS.

A dabbler tried a serenade;
She didn't smile on him.
She scorned the music that he made—
Zim-zim

A fellow with a banjo came;
The dabbler didn't think it worth courting for his time.
Plink plink

The third arrival won the girl,
Although his tune was plunk
He drove up with a noisy whirl.
Honk honk!
—Puck

INFLUENCE.

Just as soon as you begin to think or do something you begin to have influence. Influence is something you can't keep at home. And when it gets away from you you can never recall it.
Your influence makes you something of somebody else.
Influence has no boundaries.
Once started, though it may seem ever so trifling, yet it may have as its destination the farthest corners of the earth.
If you would get a conception of power, realize the influence of a strong man, George Matthew Adams.

HUNGARY'S WAR SONG.

Lord of heaven, bless our land,
Joy and plenty here bestow;
In our need lift thine hand,
Strong to shield us from the foe.
Hungary in days of old,
Proud and fearless, staunch and free
Call'd her sons from field and fold
To die for liberty;
Call'd her sons from field and fold
To die for liberty.

Hail, all hail, holy land!
Crown'd with lonely mothers' tears;
Onward lead, hero band,
Onward ever through the years.
Peace shall follow after pain.
Love shall garner in her store,
Freedom rises once again,
Shall live for evermore;
Freedom rises once again,
Shall live for evermore.

RUSKIN ON PAINTING.

Painting, with all its techni-calties, difficulties and peculiar ends, is nothing but a noble and expressive language, invaluable as the vehicle of thought, but by itself nothing.

If it is the love of that which your work represents—if, being a landscape painter, it is the love of hills and trees that move you—if, being a figure painter, it is love of human beauty and human soul that moves you—if, being a flower or animal painter, it is love and wonder and delight in petal and in limb that moves you, then the spirit is upon you, and the earth is yours and the fullness thereof.

RURAL JOYS.

Sing a song of winter time,
Cold and bitter weather;
Meet it with a cheery rhyme,
All of us together!

Shut the window, light the lamp,
To the hearth draw nigher;
Thaw out all the frost and damp
At the open fire.

Take a backlog on the blaze,
Spread the circle wider,
Talk and talk of other days—
Fetch a jug of cider.

Crack the nut and crack the jest
Mid the laughter lusty,
Now and then among the rest
One is stale and musty.

Mother, fetch the gingerbread
And the apples mellow;
Even lovers must be fed—
Sally's got a fellow!

Sing a song of ice and snow,
Goodness, how we pity
Them that pleasure never know,
People of the city!

GOLDEN THOUGHTS.

That is never too often said which is never sufficiently learned.
—Seneca.

What the law insists upon let it have of your free will.—Terence.

Let no man love himself more than his neighbor.—Cicero.

Life is given to no one for a lasting possession, to all for use.
—Lucilius.

Live without envy, pray for pleasure and glorious years and form friendships with your equals.—Ovid.

Suffered Twenty-One Years—
Finally Found Relief

Having suffered for twenty-one years with a pain in my side, I finally found relief in Dr. Kilmor's Swamp-Root. Injections of morphine were my only relief for short periods of time. I became so sick that I had to undergo a surgical operation in New Orleans, which benefited me for two years. When the same pain came back one day I was so sick that I gave up hopes of living. A friend advised me to try your Swamp-Root and I at once commenced using it. The first bottle did me so much good that I purchased two more bottles. I am now on my second bottle and am feeling like a new woman. I passed a gravel stone as large as a big red bean and several small ones. I have not had the least feeling of pain since taking your Swamp-Root and I feel it my duty to recommend this great medicine to all suffering humanity. Gratefully yours,
MRS. JOSEPH CONSTANCE,
Rapidan, Va., Eno, La.
Personally appeared before me, this 15th day of July, 1911, Mrs. Joseph Constance, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.
