Careful Thorough Prescriptions Work

Sometimes you imagine that you have to wait a long time for the medicine, but if we gave it to you in less time, it would NOT be such good medicine. No matter how busy we are, every prescription is prepared carefully and thoroughly; no part of the work is slighted in any detail. It must be right before we let it go out of our hands.

You may think at the time that we are being too particular, but that is due to your anxiety and impatience. In your corner, thought you will admit that we are right, and will thank us for preparing such RELIABLE medicine. Our methods have won the commendation of all local physicians who have had occasion to know about them.

Friends Were Alarmed—Advised Change of Climate.

Miss Mildred Keller, 718 13th street, N. W., Washington, D. C., writes: "I can safely recommend Peruna for asthma. I had it for years and it would respond to no kind of treatment, or if it did it was only temporary, and on the slightest provocation the trouble would come back."

"I was in such a state that my friends were alarmed about me, and I was advised to leave this climate. Then I tried Peruna, and to my great joy found it helped me from the first dose I took, and a few bottles cured me."

"It built up my constitution, I regained my appetite, and I feel that I am perfectly well and strong."—Mildred Keller.

We have on file many thousand testimonials like the above. We can give our readers only a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements Dr. Hartman is receiving.

THE ENGAGING GRADUATES

Of '06—Sweet Girls And Gallant Lads—Held Captivating Sway In Salisbury This Week. Festivities End In Reception And Banquet Last Night.

This has been Graduates' week, and beginning with Sunday night they have made admirable use of it, and entered into the exercises of Commencement with the zest that encourages a young heart and anticipates a bright future.

Sunday, St. Peter's Church, received the graduates, relatives and friends, and additional seats had to be provided to accommodate the overflow. Rev. Howard was at his best and the sermon he delivered was straight and true, teeming with good spiritual thoughts and ideals.

Tuesday and Wednesday were delightful nights at the Opera House and a large attendance enjoyed the program as announced in last Saturday's Advertiser.

Commencement Night.

Thursday noted the completion of the week's exercises and the final round up to the year's school work.

Particular mention could be made of each part of the program and the highly commendable character of the productions of each graduate, with real justice and without flattery. Indeed the faculty can feel complimented on the fine showing made.

The program—

March—"Salute to Stars and Stripes," Orchestra.

Invocation—Rev. R. C. Granberry, Pastor Division Street Baptist Church.

Salutatory—Miss Irma Boston.

Piano Solo—"Second Mazurka," Miss Sarah Uman '07.

Essay—"Every Nature Susceptible of Good," Miss Alice Dykes.

Selection—"Anvil Chorus," Orchestra.

Medal Oration—"America Supreme," Mr. George Hill.

Quartet—"Shut Yo Eyes Ma Honey," Miss Mattie Windsor, '06, Miss Rena Lankford, '06, Miss Sarah Uman, '07, Miss Della Dashiell, '07.

Essay—"Effect of Good Literature," Miss Margaret Laws.

Piano Solo—"Florence," Miss Edith Short, '07.

Medal Essay—"Not For An Age But For All Time," Miss Rena Lankford.

Piano Solo—"Tannhauser," Grand March and Chorus, Mr. A. Everett Williams, '06.

Valedictory—Miss Ethel Colley.

Farwell Song—"Ninth Grade."

Conferring Diplomas and Medals.

Prof. H. Crawford Bonds, County Superintendent.

Selection—"Around The City," Orchestra.

Address to Graduates—Rt. Rev. Leighton Coleman, L. L. D., S. T. D., Bishop of Delaware.

Benediction—Rev. R. C. Granberry.

Music.

The festivities concluded with a most hospitable reception and banquet at the High School last night which feted out the memorable week of the '06 Commencement.

Class Roll.

Miss Irma Boston, Miss Katherine Bussells, Miss Ethel Colley, Miss Katherine Darcy, Miss Alice Dykes, Miss Frances Hearn, Miss Sula Inley, Miss Dora Jones, Miss Gertrude Killiam, Miss Rena Lankford, Miss Margaret Laws, Miss Beniah Nelson, Miss Mattie Windsor, Mr. Clarence Cordrey, Mr. Vaughan Gordy, Mr. George Hill.

Medals.

The Harper Medal, given annually by Mayor Charles E. Harper for general excellence was awarded to Miss Ethel Colley.

Principal Huntington gave the following merit medals:

For best oration in Tenth Grade, awarded to Mr. George Hill.

For best essay in Tenth Grade, awarded to Miss Rena Lankford.

For best essay on Maryland History from Seventh Grade, awarded to Miss Nellie Smith.

For best declamation from under-graduates, Norman Smith.

Ninth Grade Song.

Words by Miss Annie Todd, Music by Prof. W. T. Dashiell.

1. We're not gay as we come today To sing our parting song To those who were in former years Our friends in right and wrong.

Chorus

To the class of 1906, Farewell, Farewell, Farewell, Farewell. Now we hear the parting bell, Farewell, Farewell, Farewell.

2. We'd gladly spend another year With those we love so well, But as we know that cannot be We'll sadly say, Farewell.

3. While treading life's rough path— The thoughts of these good friends Will brighten and cheer us onward, Safely to the end.

4. So once more to you Farewell, Make your lives a rhyme, Every day leave behind you A good example to the youth of time.

SALISBURY INVITATION

To The Maryland Christian Endeavor Union Has Been Accepted. State Endeavorers Will Meet Here Next October. First Time On The Eastern Shore. Large Plans.

The Christian Endeavor Societies of the Presbyterian and Methodist Protestant Churches, of Salisbury, recently held a joint meeting at which an enthusiastic invitation was extended to the Maryland Christian Endeavor Union to hold its next biennial convention in this city the third week in October—probably the 17th and 18th.

Mr. Frederick Ohrenschall, President of the State Union, was present, and in person delivered the invitation to the State Executive Committee of the Union at its meeting in Baltimore last Friday night. He this week notified the Salisbury Endeavorers that their invitation had been accepted.

At a meeting of the City Council last Monday night the municipal authorities, after a thorough investigation of the matter, were of the opinion that the coming into our midst of such a religious gathering was of sufficient importance to justify them in taking action so they through Mayor Harper seconded this invitation to the State Union, proffering them the freedom of the city.

The Maryland Endeavorers have been holding conventions for eighteen years, and this is the first time in the history of the Union that they have come to the Eastern Shore, and only twice before has a convention been held outside Baltimore City—Cumberland and Westminster having in recent years been thus honored.

The convention, which will be in session two days, will bring together several hundred leading young Christian workers of our State. It will doubtless prove one of the most important religious gatherings ever held in Salisbury. As is generally known, it is inter-denominational, being composed of representatives from all Protestant denominations in Maryland, with 435 Societies, 375 Seniors and 150 Juniors. And the State leaders write, "We propose to spend a large sum of money in advertising the convention, with some new features never before used in Maryland."

Mr. Ohrenschall for the State promises an unusually attractive program in the line of addresses by some of the leading religious speakers of our country. And the Salisbury Committee at this end have begun the formulation of plans which they hope will make the visit of the Endeavorers a memorable one.

The day sessions of the convention will be held jointly in the Methodist Protestant and Presbyterian Churches, and the two night sessions in the Opera House. One of the features of the night sessions will be the singing by a large chorus to be organized. Mr. Richard A. Harris, one of the leaders of the great chorus at the International Convention in Baltimore last July, will assist in training and conducting this chorus.

The officers of the Salisbury Committee of 1906, are: Chairman, Rev. W. S. Phillips; Vice chairman, Mr. Walter C. Humphreys; Secretary, Mr. James Malone; Treasurer, Mr. Wm. E. Sheppard. The remaining members of this committee and the other committees will be appointed soon.

The officers of the Maryland Union are:

President, Mr. Frederick Ohrenschall, of Baltimore; vice presidents, Mr. George K. Mather, Westminster; Mr. Eugene Pennington, Centerville; Dr. John B. Green, Glittings; secretary, Mr. Alfred S. Day, Baltimore; recording secretary, Miss Flora E. Strout, Baltimore; treasurer, Mr. M. E. Reddick, Baltimore, junior superintendent, Mrs. Antoinette Suter, Baltimore.

Mr. W. C. Perkins, of Baltimore, has been appointed transportation manager.

Mr. Marion Dawson To Build The Large Pier At Ocean City.

Mr. Marion Dawson and family, late of this town, are at Ocean City for the season. Mr. Dawson is the construction engineer of the new ocean pier now under construction there and has entire charge of the work. The pier will be partly completed so that it may be used this season, and Mr. Dawson expects to turn it over completed to its owners in August. It will be about 700 feet long and 80 feet wide, and will be housed over, and divided into a skating ring, music hall, cafe and dancing hall, and at the extreme end, which will be beyond the bar, a fishing pavilion will be built.

The plans for the pier were drawn by Mr. Dawson, and they were so satisfactory that the position of construction engineer was offered him. He now has a force of 100 men engaged on it. That a work of such magnitude should be entrusted to our fellow townsman is a distinct recognition of his ability in this line.—New York Herald.

SAN FRANCISCO FIRE

And Earthquake To Be Re-Produced On A Mammoth Scale At Jamestown Exposition. Similar To Johnstown And Galveston Floods.

The destruction of San Francisco by earthquake and fire is to be made the subject of the most elaborate mechanical spectacle ever devised which is to be seen next year at the Jamestown Ter-Centennial, near Norfolk, on the borders of Hampton Roads, Virginia. The spectacle is to be on the lines of the Johnstown and Galveston Flood productions. The New York man who controls a large tract of space for amusement concessions at the Jamestown Ter-Centennial Exposition next year said: "Artists and photographers are already on their way to San Francisco to get the material for reproducing the disaster in miniature, with fidelity of every detail. It is probable that the spectacle will be worked out under the direction of E. J. Austin, the English artist, who made successes of the Johnstown flood at the Buffalo Exposition and the Galveston flood at the St. Louis World's Fair, both of which are now at Coney Island. From a showman's standpoint, the San Francisco disaster offers great possibilities, and we are going to take advantage of them."

The destruction of the great American city with the miraculous escape of the bulk of its 400,000 inhabitants, outcascades in interest and dramatic effect most of the great disasters in the history of the world. The drama of this dreadful event as reproduced in miniature at the Jamestown Exposition will bring it before the mind of the beholder with a vividness seen only to having seen the actual event. In fact it will give a clearer idea of the frightful ruin of a great city in a few moments than could possibly have been gained by being present in the western city at the time of its destruction. This is true because it will be seen in its entirety, a thing impossible to one who was actually in the horror, and it will be seen without the natural fright and unnatural discomfort which accompanied the witnessing of the actual event.

To the visitor to the Jamestown Exposition the drama of ruin will be set forth with all the romantic interest that attaches to the history of the last days of Pompeii and Herculaneum.

Negro Henry To Hang.

John Henry, a negro, was Thursday convicted before Judges Page and Lloyd at the Worcester County Court, of felonious assault upon Mrs. Fred Selby, of Berlin on November 1, and was sentenced to death. Mrs. Selby was returning home from a store in Berlin, where she had been purchasing goods on the night of November 21, when she was grabbed from behind. At first she thought the attack was for robbery, having several valuable looking packages in her arms. These she threw over a fence and turned to face her assailant, and it was then she discovered it was a negro and that his assault was for a more serious offense than robbery.

She successfully resisted the negro's first onslaught and succeeding in grabbing the fence, which she held until she was torn away, but not until 10 boards had been torn off and broken from their places. She fought desperately, and one witness said the ground where the struggle took place looked as if wild horses had been on the stampede across it.

She recognized her assailant as John Henry, a man who had worked for her husband a few days before. She was overcome, but soon gained sufficient strength to go home and give the alarm. Henry was arrested in a short time and carried to the lock-up.

Judge Page said it was proved beyond a doubt that Henry was guilty of the awful crime of which he was indicted. Not until sentence of death was passed did the suppressed excitement, which had caused the postponement of the argument last evening, show its intensity, and then only for a moment when an applause broke forth which interrupted the solemn words of the sentence which was being pronounced upon the prisoner by Judge Page.

The commencement exercises of the Pocomoke City High School, E. Clarke Fontaine, principal, were held in the new School Auditorium on Thursday and Friday evenings. Large audiences were present on both occasions. The graduating class was addressed by Prof. George P. Bible, principal of the National School of Eloquence and Oratory of Philadelphia. Those who received their diplomas of graduation are as follows:

Gladys Blinks, Georgia Byrd, Leah Crockett, Mary E. Dryden, Mary Louise Hayman, Julia A. Harley, Annie Elizabeth Jones, Beniah A. Leocallette, Emma Miles, Katherine Barker, Lois Maude Stevenson, Myra Stevenson, Vivian Elizabeth Stevenson, Julia Bertha Walters, Mande de Wail White, Ida Belle Wilson, Francis Dryden, A. Mervyn Dryden, Stanley Lammie, Columbia Madden, and James Percy Harkness.

SAYS "SPECS" STOLE THEM.

Detective Bradley Recovers Goods in East Baltimore.

Detective Peter B. Bradley, of the headquarters force, recovered a large quantity of goods Saturday evening from a house in East Baltimore, which he says, were shipped to this city by Frank Smith, alias Reese, alias "Specs," one of the five alleged safe blowers under arrest at Salisbury, Md.

The detective said he heard that Emma Fisher, 1410 Mullikin street, had received a letter from him since his arrest in Salisbury. He said he went to the house and the woman admitted that she had a letter and allowed Detective Bradley to copy it.

In the letter Smith is said to have stated that he could not expect any favors from the girl after the way he had treated her, but he declared he was innocent of the charge upon which he is held, and asked her to go to a certain place and get a package which would be there for her.

Detective Bradley went to the place and he got two wooden cases. The cases contained 2 bolts of cloth, 29 shirtwaists, 15 nightgowns, 40 pairs of hose, 10 pairs of suspenders and other articles. All the goods are new, and the detective declares Smith stole them after he left here May 8. He knows the boxes were received here last week, just a short time previous to the arrests. The goods are at headquarters and are being held for identification.—Baltimore Sun.

Death Of James Bussells In Virginia.

After five weeks of struggle against the inevitable, death claimed the soul of James H. Bussells on last Wednesday morning. Old age, decay, had set its watch, and when the hour came no man's hand could stay it. Physician and loved ones had been the end approaching and had done all in their power to alleviate pain and prolong life, but when 80 years of active work is demanded of life's machinery it should not startle one to know that no patching or renewing can indefinitely keep up the motion.

James H. Bussells was a native of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, coming to Lancaster a generation ago when those sturdy seamen and artisans, like Norsemen of old, came over into this sparsely settled section and helped carve fortune for themselves and progress for their adopted country.

Among the many sailors he was one of the few artisans, so his services were in great demand, and up until the past ten years of life he was active and industrious. He reared a family, and most of them survive him—a widow, a son, Jno. L. Bussells, and two daughters, Mrs. G. C. Kirkmyer and Mrs. J. W. Haydon, all of this place. Two married daughters, Mrs. Edwin Malone and Mrs. Joseph Hayman, of Salisbury, Md.

Interment was yesterday afternoon at Irvington Methodist Church. He and all his family were devoted adherents to the Methodist faith.—The Virginia Citizen, Irvington, Va.

Krause—Wimbrough Wedding Takes Place At Berlin.

Miss Annie M. Wimbrough, daughter of Mr. T. L. H. Wimbrough of Berlin, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Clinton D. Krause, of Salisbury, Tuesday morning, Rev. G. C. Williams officiating. The ushers were Mr. Walter Wimbrough, brother of the bride, and Mr. Herbert Powell, of Berlin; Mr. Samuel Krause, of Delmar, brother of the groom, and Mr. Chas. Wilkins, of Salisbury. Lohengrin's wedding march was played by Miss Minnie Lytle, of Berlin. The happy couple left on the 7 o'clock train for an extensive honeymoon North, after which they will reside at the groom's home on Division St., this city. The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Owen Krause, Mrs. Annie Phillips, Misses Minnie and Eva Wimbrough and Mr. Chas. Wilkins, of Salisbury; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Krause, of Princess Anne; Mr. Samuel Krause, of Delmar and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Shockley, of Snow Hill.

Joseph T. Phillips Killed On Warship Kearsarge.

Joe T. Phillips, of Barron Creek District, was struck by a falling anchor beam on U. S. Battleship Kearsarge, anchored off Brooklyn, on Friday, May 4th. He was removed from the ship to the Navy Hospital at Brooklyn. From the blow he remained unconscious until he died on the 12th. Mr. Phillips was the only brother of Dr. Wm. S. Phillips of Chicago and was a Gunner on the ship, having enlisted in 1903, and would have completed four years of service during this month. He was 28 years old, having been born and raised in this County. He was buried with military honors at the Brooklyn National Cemetery on Monday the 14th.

SATAN'S CABINET.

(By J. B. Welch.)

The devil is hell, as the chief of his cabinet. Once summoned his cohorts—to form a new plan. To strengthen his kingdom—and hear the report. Of millions and imps, that attended his court.

The demon of murder was called to the bar. With hands stained with blood—of the rich and poor. He reported a failure—the 'not to relent. Men loathed and despised him wherever he went.

Then lust stood forth who had taken great pains. To snare innocent youth and bind them with chains. Wretched morals and virtue wherever he trod. Yet many escaped him, by the power of God.

Next Avarice arose in his garments of gold. As chief of the staff he was fearless and bold. By hoarding and pinching and starving each day. Most all were disgusted and drove him away.

There was cunning old graft the chum of all crime. He was covered with mud and political slime. His hands filled with greed he stood like a tower. But the prayer of the church had weakened his power.

Pestilence and war, twin brothers of fame. By famine and death had won a great name. All classes were slain, their work was done well. But heaven received many more than did hell.

Then Satan spoke up with his and with sneer. All hell seemed to quake and tremble with fear. He growled and he growled like a tiger, or as a bear. To learn that his power was fitting away.

Be calm said old Bacchus, I've a word to impart. I have found you two allies right after your heart. Their business is potent—there needs be no fear. They're the licensor and seller of liquor and beer.

Eureka! said Satan. We have found it, he cried. The saloon is the bridegroom, and I am his bride. We're wedded together. Our hearts beat as one. Ring the welkin of hades; our work is well done.

A man talks about owning his business. But as a matter of fact, his business owns him. His whole life is regulated by the demands of the business. The time at which he rises, his breakfast hour, the time given to meals, are all determined by business obligations.

He rushes through lunch because he "can't spare the time from business to eat leisurely. He won't take a rest because he is needed at the store or office. He is in fact an absolute slave to business. The results which follow this slavery are to be seen on every hand. Men dyspeptic, irritable, nervous, with drawn faces, and hollow eyes, sit at the desk or stand behind the counter until they collapse in a fit of sickness, or are taken away by heart failure. Those who cannot escape the exactions of business will find a friend in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stomach, increases the action of the blood making glands, increasing the vitality and physical vigor. It makes men strong and prevents those business break downs which so often terminate fatally.

It was Dean Swift who remarked that "he was a bold man that first ate an oyster," but neither Dean Swift nor any other lover of good eating has been able to find records of any time, however ancient, when oysters were not eaten, while there is ample proof that thousands of years ago riparian man not only consumed these bivalves, but was very fond of them. Thus the "kjoekken moedding" or "kitchen refuse" along the Scandinavian coasts exhibits huge hills of oyster shells from which prehistoric man ate this succulent mollusk at their feasts in the days of Thor and Odin. There is, of course, an interesting tradition which relates how, in those prehistoric days a man clad in the skins of wild beasts ran barefooted along the shore of the sea. Suddenly he caught his foot in an oyster shell, which, as it instantly closed upon him, caused him so much pain that he seized a stone to dislodge the strange foe that clung to him so tenaciously. After accomplishing this he put his hand, moist with the juice of the oyster, to his lips, with results that were so pleasing to his palate that he promptly proceeded to eat the entire bivalve. Thus, it is said, man first discovered the gustatory delights contained within an oyster shell.—The Pacific Fisherman.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness, caused by Catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

THE TOMATO HABIT.

New The Plant Has Grown As An Article Of Food. Interesting Story Of Its Entrance To Popular Favor.

What a great discovery the tomato was as an article of food. While most food plants are of comparatively ancient origin, there are plenty of people living today who can remember when it was only an ornament cultivated for the beauty of its dainty blossoms and handsome fruit. While its beauty was admired, it was considered like the poisonous oak, dangerous to even handle except by "dark complected" persons. Years of acquaintance, however, wore off its superstitious and a few "fool hardy" actually owned up to having tasted the fruit.

From this small beginning, has gradually grown a use that makes today an industry with a combined capital of over thirty millions of dollars, which disburses millions of dollars to its employees each year and aggregates an output of two hundred and forty million cans. This product goes into every household in the land and is as familiar an article of diet as any other of the staple products of the soil. Each year sees an increasing consumption and the more intimate the acquaintance the greater the use.

The reason for this is very obvious. There is no better appetizer and as an article of seasoning the tomato imparts a taste that cannot be imitated. It is so distinctive that its presence can be located even in minute particles, yet the pungency has everything that delights the palate and nothing that offends the nostril.

The growth of its general popularity dates back to the time of the first successful pecking houses. When the use of the tomato as a food was established, demand made it necessary to have a cheaper price than the local market gardener could afford, and to meet this the tin can as a distributor of space was called into requisition. It was found much cheaper proportionately to raise one thousand bushels than ten so by the aid of the tin can the consumer's table at a price so reasonable as to enable its daily use.

Moreover, the article put in the can is brought fresh picked from the field, hermetically sealed and immediately sterilized by heat, while the uncaned fruit is frequently shipped for hundreds of miles before it is used as a food. This artificially ripened fruit must be gathered green and the red color it finally assumes is the withering of hungry tissues that should have fed the fruit with the red nourishing juice that comes from the soil and by the aid of Mother Nature is thus transformed. No preservative is used by the canner as the action of heat insures keeping for an indefinite time.

There is nothing so healthy as this rich, ripe fruit dumped out of the clean white can ready for any use. The taste is equal to the fresh fruit and every semblance of waste in shape of rind or core has been removed. Eat it—why the very sight and smell are irresistible, and the most insistent appetite can be sated because of its absolute harmlessness. Its healthfulness never been attacked and the rich juices colored as the life giving fluid set as a tonic even for the invalid stomach. There is no home where its visits are not welcome, and the table of either the millionaire or peasant is alike familiar with its presence. As Indian corn, it is distinctly of American origin and proud indeed can we be of both of these excellent food plants.

It was Dean Swift who remarked that "he was a bold man that first ate an oyster," but neither Dean Swift nor any other lover of good eating has been able to find records of any time, however ancient, when oysters were not eaten, while there is ample proof that thousands of years ago riparian man not only consumed these bivalves, but was very fond of them. ## RICHES OF THE VATICAN

For Sixty Years Rothschilds The Financial Advisors.

SOURCE OF INCOME.

Priceless Treasures of Jewels, Tapestries, Art Works and Plate Stored in the House of Eleven Thousand Rooms—Present Pope Distributes More Charity Than Predecessor.

Considering the mass of information possessed of the reigning Pontiff—of his personal characteristics, appearance, dress and manner of living—the meagre knowledge generally had of the Vatican treasures is surprising. How few people know exactly how the Vatican is financed and maintained as a foremost court of Europe!

For nearly sixty years the Rothschilds have been the principal financial advisors of the Vatican. Pope Leo regarded the great European banking house with such favor that it had absolute supervision of his private fortune and gave carefully headed advice about investing the Papal moneys. But it is rumored that Pius X. is far from being satisfied with the 2 per cent revenues derived from these investments. Indeed, the attitude of His Holiness inspired the report that a prominent Austrian banking house had been invited to remedy the situation. Additional counsel was given the report by Leo's cousin, Cardinal von Hohenhausen, to J. Pierpont Morgan when the latter was in Rome.

Apocryph of the Papal income, it is not generally known that when the church and state were separated in Italy thirty-five years ago a law was passed guaranteeing His Holiness and his successors forever, besides the Vatican and Lateran palaces and the Gandolfo villa, an annual income of $2,250,000 lire. Pius IX. and Leo XIII. have been followed by Pius X. in ignoring this allowance, which still remains unclaimed and unpaid. Its arrears, if not lapsed by prescription, amount now to nearly $22,000,000.

By strict economy the Vatican budget of expenses was reduced during the year 1905 from $1,500,000 to about $1,000,000 even. This was made possible, notwithstanding the sudden diminution in the contributions from France for the Peter's Pence Fund and the expense of restoring the churches and seminaries damaged by the Calabrian earthquake, by a general reduction in the salaries of prelates and nuncios abroad and by the abolition of several sinecures in the Curia.

Several months before beginning to economize in minor household items, the Pope decided that there were too many Cardinals of the Curia, or Cardinals resident in Rome. Each of these resident Cardinals receives a yearly income of $4,200 and their number may be gathered from the fact that Pope Leo paid out to them $100,000 in salaries during the closing year of his reign.

While Pope Pius is economical in administering the affairs of his household, he gives more in charity, considering his resources. It is said, then, did his great predecessor, who was famous for his benevolence. Pius X. keeps practically nothing for himself and his way of living suggests a country curate more than a sovereign Pontiff. His dress costs him nothing—rings make his robes and esteem it an honor and privilege, and pious ladies see that his wardrobe is never lacking in white silken caftans, in velvet shoes worked with pure gold and in girdles embroidered with his arms in jewels and gold.

Nor is any of the money received at the Vatican kept by him. What one hand takes in the other sends out in payment of the Vatican expenses, to the free schools of Rome, to the poor, even to the Catholic press.

The Vatican income has a triple origin. Pius IX. left in the pontifical treasury a capital which for many years has yielded an income of $600,000. This has been invested in Italian bonds, but the income is, though sure, not so large as Pius X. desires. Hence, for a year or more the Vatican has been ridding itself of these securities and buying solid English bonds.

Another source of income is the Peter's Pence, which, though considerably run down since the French secession, amounts to about $750,000 a year, a substantial portion coming from Germany. An average of $200,000 a year is derived from the real estate rentals in Rome and another $100,000 comes from the Dataria tax on bulls and briefs.

The third source of revenue is used for the extraordinary budget. It comes from the apostolic chancery, and amounts to about $100,000 annually. This total is not overmuch for the spiritual head of nearly 250,000,000 souls.

At stated periods—usually four times a year—the Prefect of the Papal Palaces receives a special delegate from the Rothschilds, frequently a member of the family, and is fully advised, in behalf of the Holy Father, of the most promising opportunities for investment. According to reliable information, the Pope for some time past has been favorably disposed toward the United States as a field for investment, but has been restrained from acting upon his conviction.

A few years ago only men of great fortune possessed private cars. Now, days there are so many of these palaces on wheels that their value is estimated at $72,000,000.

THE "BLENDED" VARIETY.

A Whisky Seller's Confession Lets in the Light.

A Philadelphia liquor firm sends out a circular. The firm wants to sell one particular kind of whisky. To persuade customers to buy, it tells the truth about other kinds of whisky. We quote what the whisky firm says:

"Possibly 92 or 93 per cent. of the whisky sold in Philadelphia is what is technically termed by the trade 'blended whisky.' The manner of its preparation is about as follows: For a barrel of 48 gallons spirits are put into a tank—cologne spirits being the ether of the whisky, which passes from the still in the process of distilling, as benzine precedes illuminating oil in the distilling of petroleum. It is a neutral spirit having no taste, but its effect upon the human system is very pernicious, and, when taken to excess, it flies to the brain and produces very unpleasant results. To this 38 or 40 gallons of cologne spirits possibly 4 gallons of straight whisky are added, together with 2 gallons of prune juice, 2 gallons of peach juice, and a little vanilla, pineapple, or some other flavor to give it a distinctive and pronounced character. This compound, or blend, is allowed to stand for some months, until the component parts are all blended. The compound is then bottled or barreled, widely advertised and sold under fancy and alluring names, at prices ranging from 75 cents to $3 a bottle."

This is not whisky from the temperance man's standpoint, but whisky from the whisky seller's standpoint. Did somebody say that a little whisky is a good thing?

Is poison flavored with vanilla a good thing? Think of it young man! The whisky that 92 men out of a hundred get—in Philadelphia and elsewhere—is rank, poisonous alcohol, "cologne spirits." No wonder the delirium brought on by whisky is full of snakes and wild things! No wonder the brain saturated with such stuff is driven to murder most foul—Epworth Herald.

FACTS ABOUT WHISKY.

Insurance Figures in Favor of the Abstainers.

In Illinois, where local option prevails and high license is the rule, the average savings bank deposit, per capita, is $20.75. In Maine, the average per capita of savings is $103.76. These figures argue that even from a purely monetary standpoint total abstinence pays.

In 1840 Robert Warner, a Quaker, applied to an English life insurance company for a policy, and was told that, as a total abstainer, he would have to pay an extra premium, the company holding that the moderate use of liquor tended to prolong life. Warner did not believe this theory, and started an insurance company of his own. Warner's company divided the risks it took into two classes, one made up of total abstainers and the other of men who drank in moderation. In the thirty-three years from 1866 to 1898 the deaths in the list of moderate drinkers were 97 per cent. of those expected; in the list of total abstainers the deaths were only 70 per cent. of those expected. In other words, the death rate among moderate drinkers was nearly 40 per cent. more than among total abstainers. During the last thirty years there died in Europe alone of alcoholism a total of 7,500,000 people. That is more people than were killed in all the wars of the Nineteenth century. The authority for these statements is Matti Helenius, a member of the faculty of the University of Denmark, who goes on to show that in Denmark one out of every seven men who die between the ages of thirty-five and fifty-five is a victim of alcoholism.

SALOON ARITHMETIC.

Comparisons Between Tax Levies and "Joint Money."

"The city of Hutchinson furnishes an excellent object lesson. We quote from a recent report of its mayor:

"For the first time in the history of the city the floating debt has been reduced. The street fund has changed from a deficit of $8,000 to a surplus of $4,000 and the general fund from a $15,000 deficit to a $5,000 deficit. Not one dollar of 'joint money' went into the treasury in this time. In the eight years prior, when the saloons were running, the floating debt was increased by $75,000. Of this $55,000 was refunded and $20,000 was left over for us to pay. During part of that time as high as $1,000 a month was collected from the 'joints.' 'In two years the criminal docket of the district court originating from Hutchinson, has practically disappeared. The total cost to county and city of criminal cases originating in Hutchinson for two years will be less than $500, against probably $5,000 to $10,000 for each two years prior under the 'fine' system of allowing saloons to run."

"Tax levies have been reduced, yet we levied 1 mill for a Carnegie Library, increased electric lights from thirty-four to forty-six, and added two miles of water mains to our water plant. We reduced the police force, and our city has been free from the criminal element. A large portion of the money formerly spent in saloons or lost in gambling has gone into legitimate trade, and our merchants all report increased business. During two years not a woman or child has complained that her husband's feet or son's wages were spent in a saloon or gambling den."—Kansas City Journal.

Novel Advertising Method.

A tailor at Boston, England, has thought out one of the most novel advertising schemes which has yet been brought to notice. He has placed ten turtles in his window, and on the back of each turtle is painted one letter of the tailor's name. He has offered a prize of $10 to any one who sees the turtles lined up so that the letters are in the order in which they appear in his name.

There is a profit in anything taken care of, failure, as a rule, is due to negligence.

Interesting to Dickens' Lovers.

Many of Charles Dickens' famous characters have been traced by one of his biographers to their original. Paul Donohoe was Dickens' nephew, Harry Barnett, a pathetic little cripple, who died in his tenth year. Dora Copperfield is supposed to have been a Miss Beadwell, with whom Dickens was in love at the early age of eighteen. The belief that he drew the character of Micawber from his father is not upheld by the biographer, who has discovered in one Richard Chicken of York, a more probable model. This Chicken had an engineer wherein Alfred Dickens, the novelist's brother, was employed for several years. William Shaw, who who unconsciously sat for the portrait of the abominable Squeers, is said to have been in actual life, "a man of kind and humane disposition," after his death his neighbors placed a stained glass window in the village church to his memory. Mrs. Skewton, we are told, was a Mrs. Campbell, "a lady well known at Leamington who indulged in such tight lacing that the slightest exertion caused her to pant for breath." Captain Cuttle, that fine old boy, made his first appearance in Pops' Diary, that gentleman recording that "he met a Captain Cuttle, a sea commander, at the Royal Exchange."

Treasures in Russian Churches. The treasures of the various Russian churches are of fabulous value. St. Isaac's Cathedral in St. Petersburg is said to have cost $10,000,000. Its copper roof is overlaid with pure gold. In the Cathedral of Kazan the name of the Almighty blazes in diamonds from a cloud of beaten gold, under which are solid silver doors twenty feet high. There are 1,400 churches in Moscow, many of which contain priceless treasures. From the Cathedral of the Assumption Napoleon took from the church five tons of silver and 500 weight of gold, but its most precious treasures were concealed. To celebrate the deliverance of Moscow from the deities, the Cathedral of the Holy Saviour was built at a cost of $10,000,000; its five cupolas are covered with pure gold one-eighth of an inch in thickness.—London Tit-Bits.

Long Views.

Persons who wish to put off the evil day of spectacles should accustom themselves to long views. The eye is relieved, and sees better, if, after reading a while, we direct our sight to some far distant object, even for a minute. Great travelers and hunters are seldom near sighted. Sellers discern objects at a great distance with considerable distinctness when a common eye sees nothing at all. One is reported to have such acute sight that he could tell when he was going to see an object. On one occasion when the ship was in a stinking condition, and all were exceedingly anxious for a sight of land, he reported from the lookout that he could not exactly see the shore, but could pretty nearly do so.

No Reason for Comment.

A lady had invited to dinner an old friend who had lost his nose in an accident. Taking her young daughter aside before his arrival, she cautioned her to be very careful to make no remarks about Mr. Robinson's nose, as he was very sensitive about it. At the table everything went well for a time, until Carrie, who had been studying the guest's face in apparent perplexity, turned inquiringly to her mother, and asked:

"Ma, why did you tell me to say nothing about Mr. Robinson's nose? He hasn't got any."—Harper's Weekly.

Cities Growing Population.

Compared with New York and Pennsylvania, New Jersey has been steadily forging ahead in population in the last three decades. In 1880 New York's rate of gain was 16 per cent. Pennsylvania's was 21.9 per cent. New Jersey's was 24.9 per cent. In 1890 the gains were: New York, 18 per cent.; Pennsylvania, 22.8 per cent.; New Jersey, 27.7 per cent.

Oleomargarine and Butter.

Analysis shows that, from a chemical standpoint, oleomargarine varies but slightly from creamy butter; it is made by churning 443 pounds of butter oil, 120 pounds of milk and 37½ pounds of cream-made butter and 1½ ounces Na-carbonate of soda. When this becomes a smooth, creamy mass it is solidified in ice cream freezers, and is finally worked.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Is not a secret or patent medicine, against the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse because of the uncertainty as to their harmful character. A full list of all its ingredients being printed, in plain English, on every bottle wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure glycerine taking the place of the common used alcohol in its makeup. The "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is in fact the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's ailments in plain English on every bottle wrapper; that it is the only medicine especially designed for the cure of woman's diseases that contains no alcohol, and the only one that has a professional endorsement from the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of some of these endorsements will be sent to any address, postpaid, and absolutely free if you request it by mail card or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. Don't forget that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for woman's weaknesses and delicate ailments, is not a patent or secret medicine, being the "Favorite Prescription" of a regularly educated and graduated physician, engaged in the practice of his chosen specialty—that of diseases of women—that its ingredients are printed in plain English on every bottle wrapper; that it is the only medicine especially designed for the cure of woman's diseases that contains no alcohol, and the only one that has a professional endorsement from the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

STREET COMMISSIONERS.

The selection of Messrs. Thomas Perry, W. P. Jackson and W. J. Downing by the City Council as special street commissioners to oversee the building of our new streets will meet with the approval of our citizens. We do not see how better men could have been found to look after this important work. Mr. Perry the president of the new board of street commissioners has been untiring in his efforts for road and street improvements and has given a great deal of his time to the study of building roads. Mr. Jackson and Mr. Downing are two of the most solid and best business men of our town and all will feel safe to leave their interests in their hands. We feel sure, with these men at the helm, that Salisbury will get the streets best adapted to its conditions, and moreover will get at least 50 cents worth of streets for every dollar expended. We congratulate the council on their good judgment in the selection of the Commissioners, and the city, on securing such good men to serve. Our citizens should all show their appreciation and should remember that it means no little sacrifice, and remembering, should do all in their power to aid and help them in their duties.

POLITICAL CAMPAIGN EXPENSES.

In the discussion of the bill now pending in Congress for requiring that all contributions to political committees shall be reported to the Clerk of the House of Representatives, some very interesting statistics were recently brought out. It was shown that from the very beginning of its career the Republican party has relied largely on the use of money in elections, and that in 1896 its national campaign fund amounted to sixteen million five hundred thousand dollars, while that of the Democrats reached only $675,000. In 1900, the Republicans spent $6,500,000; and the Democrats $450,000. Strong efforts have been made to discover how much money Mr. Blaine and Mr. Cortelyou received in 1904; but though it has been proven that they and Mr. Babcock got enormous sums from the life insurance companies, and has been charged, and not denied, that they also received large sums from the trusts and railroads, it has been impossible to discover how much money was expended by the party of corruption and special privilege.

—Two interesting young women of Salisbury, Md., were members of the class which graduated from Fairmount Seminary in this city, this morning. They were Misses Ruth Logan Gunby and Nina Louise Gunby. The exercises took place at 11 o'clock in the hall of the seminary, which is the stone building occupied for some years as the Chinese legation. Others in this class were: Miss Evelyn Cowdery Farmer, of Dothan, Ala.; Miss Nina Louise Gans, of Richmond, Va.; Miss Meggie Hill, of Orange, Texas; Miss Annie Laurie Spears, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Miss Mary Gwynne Harrold, of Tennessee; Miss Cornele Frieder, of Carbondale, Pa.; Miss Ruth Greenwood, of Williamsport, Pa.; Miss Anna Sumpter, of Dallas, Texas; Miss Elizabeth Watt, of Norcross, Ga.; the Misses Faith and Millie Davis and Julia Marie Miller, of Washington. Miss Anna Gunby, daughter of Dr. Street, president of the Baltimore Medical College, a graduate of last year at Fairmount Seminary, came to Washington last week and attended the exercises connected with the commencement week. Class night exercises were held in the hall last evening, when Mrs. Fairbanks, the wife of the Vice President, was the guest of honor. —Washington Dispatch, Baltimore, June 2, 1906.

Salisbury Property

By virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Worcester County, Maryland, passed in the case of J. Edward White and William Henry White vs. J. Roscoe White et al., the proceedings therein having been filed in the Circuit Court for Worcester County, Maryland, undersigned Trustees will sell at public sale to the highest bidder, at the Court House Door, at Salisbury, in Worcester County, Maryland, on at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m., all the following real estate and personal property.

SATURDAY,

"New Hope Mills" and Rights.

FIRST: All that piece or parcel of land, situated in Wicomico Election District, in Wicomico County, Maryland, being all the New Hope Mills with all the privileges thereto belonging, also all the land thereto attached, and described as follows:—
BEING the land at the west end of the old capmill where formerly stood the saw mill, thence in a westerly direction by and with the county road to the east end of the Ebenezer Davis lot to the mill pond, thence with the mill pond to the beginning; also all the land lying between the said county road and the land of Jack Lewis on the south, containing in all about one acre of land, and being the same property which was conveyed to Edward White by Henry Dennis et al., by deed dated May 7, 1887 and recorded among the land records of the said county in Liber F. M. S. No. 2, Folio 206.

Together with all the water rights and privileges appurtenant thereto.

This is a valuable water mill and should command a good price.

Wood and Timber—Pittsburg District.

SECOND: All that valuable tract of wood and timber land, situated in Pittsburg Election District, in Wicomico County and State of Maryland, on the east side of the County road, leading from New Hope to "Pawnee Bridge" on the Potomac River, bounded on the north by the land of Hiram J. Cooper, formerly belonging to Edward White; bounded on the east by the low lands of "River Swamp"; bounded on the south by the lands of John Elijah Truitt, containing 15 acres of land, more or less, and being a part of the same land which was conveyed to Edward White by Levi D. Gordy et al., by deed dated Dec. 28, 1898, and recorded among the land records of the said county, in Liber F. M. S. No. 4, Folio 209.

"Fooks Mills" and Rights.

THIRD: All that lot or parcel of land, situated in Parsons Election District, in said county and state, on the county road, leading from Salisbury to Parsonsburg, and about five miles from Salisbury, being all that valuable water mill property which is commonly known as the Parnell I. Jones Mills, "Hastings Mills," or "Fooks Mills," including all the mill, mill lot, mill privileges, water rights, and all other rights, ways, privileges and appurtenances thereto belonging, the mill lot being bounded on the south by the land of John S. Hastings; on the east by the land of E. M. Watson, George S. Parsons, and land now or formerly owned by D. J. Parsons; on the north in part by the land of John Lamb; and on the west by the land of John S. Hastings, containing five acres, more or less, being the same property which was conveyed to Edward White by Thos. B. Layfield by deed dated May 11, 1898, and recorded in Liber J. T. T. No. 11, folio 382.

This is a desirable mill property and is one of the most valuable water powers in this vicinity.

The Hudson Tract.

FOURTH: All that river swamp land, situated in Pittsburg Election District, in Wicomico County, Maryland, adjoining the lands of Edward White, Robert Shovell, Robert Baker, and the heirs of Benton Whaley, containing 44 acres, more or less, being the same land which was conveyed to the said Edward White by John H. Hudson, by deed dated August 28, 1898, and recorded among the land records of the said county, in Liber J. T. T. No. 12, Folio 16.

Swamp Timber.

FIFTH: All that tract of land, in Dennis Election District, in Wicomico County and partly in Worcester County, Maryland, near "Givans River Bridge," on the south side of and binding on the county road, leading to Givans Bridge and adjoining the lands of James D. Massey, containing 58 1/2 acres of land, more or less, and being the same land which was conveyed to Edward White by King V. White by deed dated Sept. 6, 1897, and recorded in Liber J. T. T. No. 31, Folio 147.

70 Acres Gum, Ash, Pine, Cypress

SIXTH: All that valuable timber land, situated in Wicomico County and State of Maryland, in Dennis Election District, and bounded on the north by the land of Zadock P. Henry; on the west by the land of John S. Hastings; on the south by the lands of Henry T. Rayne and on the east by the Potomac River, containing 70 acres more or less, and being the same land which was conveyed to Edward White by Isaac S. Williams by deed dated July 27, 1896, and recorded in Liber J. T. T. No. 14 Folio 407.

This land is covered with gum, ash, pine, and cypress timber.

Valuable Salisbury Property For Building Lots, Wharfage and Business Sites On Water and Near Rail, Tract Of Fast Growing Timber.

SEVENTH: An undivided one third interest in and to all the following real estate situated in Salisbury Election District, in Wicomico County and State of Maryland, including some valuable building lots, manufacturing sites and river frontage:

Lot No. 1: All that lot of land, situated on Mill Street, and fronting thereon 100 feet, and extending back therefrom 800 feet to the Wicomico River, being designated on the plat filed in the proceedings of the sale of the real estate of Gordon H. Toadvine, by L. E. Williams, Trustee, in No. 871 Chancery as Lot No. 6 of Division No. 7.

This property is well located as a manufacturing site, being immediately on the river, with the railroad passing directly in front of it.

Lot No. 2. All that lot or parcel of land, situated on Lake Street and lying between Lake Street and the Wicomico River, and having a front on both Lake Street and the River of 800 feet with a varying depth of from 300 feet to 350 feet.

This property is sub-divided into smaller lots as will be seen by reference to the aforesaid plat, and is thereon designated as Lots Nos. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, and 13, of Division No. 10, each of which subdivisions or lots has a frontage on the said Lake Street and the said river of 100 feet.

This property will first be offered in accordance with the subdivisions of the said plat and will then be offered as a whole, with the understanding that if the bid for the same as a whole shall be equal to or exceed the sum of the bids received for the several lots separately, the bid for the whole will be accepted; but if the aggregate of the bids for the separate lots shall exceed the bid for the whole, then the separate bids will be accepted.

This is a rare opportunity for manufacturing sites for industries of whatever size and taken as a whole, such an opportunity for acquiring such an extent of river frontage comes few times in one's lifetime.

Lot No. 3. All those two lots or parcels of land, binding on Lake Street, and extending along the same for 905 feet, more or less, from Gordon Street to the property of W. W. Wroten, and extending back from Lake Street to Cypress Street, containing 9 1/2 acres, more or less, and being all of Lot No. 1 and Lot No. 2, of Division No. 14 on the plat aforesaid, except a strip of 40,000 feet, and being all the land sold from Lot No. 2 to David Wroten.

The greater part of these two lots is covered with a fine growth of pine and cypress timber.

Lot No. 4. All those four lots, Nos. 1, 2, 11 and northeast half of No. 7 of Division 18 on the said plat. Lots 1 and 2 are mostly covered with pine and cypress timber.

All these lots platted as aforesaid will be offered as a whole and then separately, with the understanding as given under Lot No. 2.

Valuable Tract of Pine and Clear Land.

EIGHTH: All that farm or tract of land, situated in Wicomico County Maryland, in Dennis Election District, on the east side of and binding on the county road, leading from Powellville to Snow Hill; bounded on the north by the land of Albert Pardee; bounded on the east by the lands of the heirs of Edward White; and bounded on the south by a big ditch separating this land from other land of the heirs of Edward White, containing about 18 acres of timber land, and about 28 1/2 acres of cleared land. The timber is fine white pine and is estimated at 250,000 to 400,000 feet. This is a valuable farm of 60 acres, and will be offered as a whole. The cleared land and timber land will then be offered separately, with the understanding that if the bids received for the separate parcels shall exceed the bid received for the same as a whole, then the separate bid will be accepted; but if the bid for the whole shall exceed the sum of the separate bids, then the bid for the whole will be accepted.

This is a part of the "Home Farm," of the late Edward White, and is in a high state of cultivation.

Farm Well Set in Young Pine.

NINTH. All that farm or tract of land, situated in said district, county and state, adjoining on the north the lands of J. T. Shockley; on the east and south the land of George Hazlison; and on the west the land of Lambert Adkins and William Davis mill pond, containing about 30 acres, being a part of the same land which the said Edward White obtained from Jas. A. Hall, by deed dated May 12, 1881, and recorded among the land records of Wicomico County, in Liber S. P. T. No. 6, Folio 468. A part of this land is well set in young pine timber.

32 Acres of Pine and Oak.

TENTH: All that piece or parcel of TIMBER LAND situated in Dennis Election District, in Wicomico County and State of Maryland; bounded on the south by the land of S. E. Shockley; on the east, by the land of Jas. A. Hall; on the west by the land of Solomon Shockley; and on the north by the county road leading to Salisbury, containing 32 acres, more or less, and being a part of the same land which was conveyed to the said Edward White by George W. Phillips by deed, dated May 12, 1881, and recorded among the land records of Wicomico County, in Liber S. P. T. No. 4, 178.

This land is covered with a fine growth of pine and oak timber and is very desirable property.

"About 30 Acres of "River Swamp" Gum, Cypress And Maple.

ELEVENTH. "All that Lot or parcel of land, lying and being situated in Pittsburg District of Wicomico County being the "River Swamp" land belonging to the Levi D. Gordy place, and bounded on the North by the lands of Frank Gordy, on the East, the land of Robert J. Baker, on the South by the land of Edward White, The Hudson Tract, and on the West by the uplands of Hiram J. Cooper, containing 80 acres of land, more or less, and being a part of the same land which was conveyed to Edward White by Levi D. Gordy at his death dated the twenty third day of December, in the year eighteen hundred and eighty eight, and recorded among the land records of said county in Liber F. M. S. No. 4 folio 209."

TERMS OF SALE.

10 per cent. Cash on day of sale; balance in one and two years with approved security.

Title papers at the expense of purchaser.

WM. HENRY WHITE, J. EDWARD WHITE, Trustees.

Powellville Manufacturing Co., Stock.

At the same hour and at the same place that the above mentioned real estate is sold, there will be offered for sale to the highest bidder, at auction, Four Shares of the Powellville Manufacturing Co., of Powellville, Md., as the stock of the late Edward White. The affairs of the said company are in a flourishing condition, and stock in that corporation should sell for a good price.

WM. HENRY WHITE, J. EDWARD WHITE, Administrators of Edward White.

Sale of All Interests in Salisbury Property.

SPECIAL NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that by virtue of a Power of Attorney from Elijah S. Adkins and King V. White, to the undersigned, the undivided interests of the said E. S. Adkins and King V. White in all the property named in the Seventh paragraph of the Trustee Sale, will also be sold at the same time that the interest of the heirs of Edward White is sold, so that the purchaser or purchasers will get the whole interests in the whole property.

The Passing Of Romance

By W. Crawford Sherlock

Copyright, 1906, by Horatio Wood

"John, I think it is just dreadful," said Mrs. Atkins, looking down at her paper with an ill-suppressed sigh and turned to her husband, who was busily writing on the opposite side of the table.

"There you are again, John," returned Mr. Atkins impatiently. "Frowning like a thunder cloud just because I dared to interrupt your reading that evening paper. It's always the same thing. You have become so settled in your ways as if you were sixty. Now, I think it is dreadful to let ourselves get that way when we've only been married fifteen years."

"What would you suggest, dear?" asked her husband, feeling that the only possible hope he had of resuming his paper lay in mild methods. "I have been under the impression that we were rather a model couple."

"Why, we're lost all the romance of life," retorted his wife. "When we first met, and even after we were married, we used to take nice long walks and drives or go to the theater often. Now we don't do anything but sit around in the evenings, you reading your paper and I sewing until bedtime. It is not right."

Mr. Atkins did not reply, neither did he resume his paper. His wife's remarks had awakened memories of pleasant days of long ago, yet pleasant as those days had been, the present life suited him better. He loved his home. To him it was the oasis where he could come after a strenuous day in the desert of business life. The quiet smoke and the evening paper after supper, when the children were snug in bed, were sources of keen enjoyment. Being a just man, however, he began to consider the other side of the question. His wife had strenuous days, too, in the home, yet evenings brought no change to her, as it did to him. No wonder she yearned for the romance of former days. She must have some relief from the dull monotony of home life, and he resolved to see to it.

Accordingly the next morning Mr. Atkins purchased tickets for the night performance at the theater. Mrs. Atkins just bubbled over with joy at the prospect and became quite girlish as she prepared for the unusual occasion. She clung to her husband's arm as they walked down the street and nestled close to him in the car. The fifteen years of married life were forgotten. The four little Atkins, slumbering peacefully at home, faded away for the first time in their short lives from their mother's thoughts. Once again was a blushing girl seated by her lover's side.

The first act of the play was finished, and Mrs. Atkins still dreamed. Then a horrible thought forced itself upon her. In her hurry to dress she had forgotten to give Tommy his medicine. The boy had been sick, and the doctor had told her on no account to fail to give the usual dose at night. This was enough. A crowd of thoughts of household cares surged upon her mind. Was little Mary covered up or had she thrown her covers off and the careless nurse failed to replace them? Had she placed the dough in a warm spot so that it would be light enough in the morning to bake? Had the butcher brought the mutton for breakfast and the grocer sent the coffee? She could not remember anything pertaining to her home; she had been so hurried in preparing for the theater.

Robustness fled for the time being at least. Mrs. Atkins became once more the mother and the housewife. Upon the plea of a headache she whispered her wish to return home, and her husband, weary of the play and hungry for his cigar and a glance at the evening paper, willingly accompanied her.

The following afternoon, in pursuance of his plan, Mr. Atkins hired a horse and buggy to take his wife out for a drive. Mrs. Atkins, having been previously advised of the arrangement, had so provided for her household duties and the care of the children that no perturbation of mind could possibly arise on these scores. With a bright heart she got into the buggy and they drove to the park. Mrs. Atkins felt that nothing could possibly rather stout woman, and John had likewise developed into a very corpulent person.

The seat of the buggy was too small for the full enjoyment of the trip. Indeed, it soon became simply torture to Mrs. Atkins as they jolted over some rough places.

"John, I can't stand this any longer," she groined as the buggy went over a boulder lying in the road on her husband's side, and his weight pressed her against the side bar of the vehicle so forcibly that she felt sure her hip was dislocated.

"It's pretty rough," assented Mr. Atkins, who was equally as uncomfortable. "Let me slip back, and you sit on the edge of the seat. That'll give you more room."

This arrangement did fairly well for a time until Mrs. Atkins, sitting bolt upright, without any support for her back, began to feel the effects of her strained position. Her husband, thinking only of the days of long ago, placed his disengaged arm around her waist to support her, but his wife decidedly objected.

"It is broad daylight, John," she murmured. "What would people think if they saw us driving in the park in such a way? You forget we are old married people."

"That's what I thought you wanted to forget, Mary," observed her husband, rather relishing the fun affairs had taken.

"Oh, I do," returned Mrs. Atkins severely, "but you know I never allowed you to put your arm around me when any one was present. I think we had better go home."

As they turned into the road that led homeward they noticed a mass of dark clouds that had gathered in the west. Mr. Atkins applied the whip freely, but the liverman had selected a horse suitable for the use of a middle aged couple, and all the efforts at fast driving were in vain. The big drops began to fall, and then the storm broke in all its fury. They were a mile away from shelter, and Mrs. Atkins would not let her husband drive beneath the overhanging branches of a tree for fear of lightning. The rubber laprobe and side and back cushions had been forgotten by the man who harnessed up the team. The result was unpleasant. A hump, disconsolate couple alighted at the Atkins home just as the storm broke, and the sun streamed forth again.

"Mary," said Mr. Atkins the next morning at the breakfast table, "we've tried the theater and the driving, but they didn't seem to bring as keen enjoyment as they did in years past. This evening we'll take a nice, long walk and see how that works."

"Indeed we won't," declared his wife stifling a groan as a twinge of rheumatism made its presence known. "I've had enough, thank you, and, in future, intend to conduct myself as a woman of forty should do. No more playing I'm young and giddy again for me."

"Thank God," returned Mr. Atkins, fervently and piously.

"I'm pretty stiff myself from that ducking I got last night, but I was determined to get romantic again if I could."

A True Ghost Story.

A lady I met in Ireland related the following facts to me just as they occurred. She was staying at a house near Bardon, County Cork. One evening she was walking up the long carriage drive to the house—it was bright moonlight and nearly as light as day—when she saw a tall figure coming down the narrow footpath beside the "drive" toward her. On coming closer she saw it was a man dressed all in black, wearing a tall silk hat, and she wondered who it could be. His head was bent forward so that the face was in shadow, but as they came close to each other he raised his head and looked at her and showed the most horrible face imaginable. With a gasp of terror, she stopped off the path, and at the same moment he did the same and, putting out a clawlike hand, touched her arm, and as she shrieked "out in fear he completely vanished. She did not see him go, but he dissolved like mist. His face was not like that of a human being, and the horror of it was quite indescribable. Her arm that the specter touched was paralyzed and remained so for two weeks after. This apparition had been seen by other people, but only at a distance, and but few believed the stories current about the place being "haunted."—Occult Review.

The Greek Die.

The gold or silver blank, carefully weighed and roughly forged, was heated to redness and laid by tongs on the die. The top was then adjusted and the impression made by mighty blows with a smith's hammer. As no collar was used and all registers neglected, the shape, but not the weight, of each coin varied. Parts of the device were often lost. Sometimes the edge of the metal cracked, and very frequently the impression doubled. Later on a blinged adjustment of the die was used. Greek dies were not made of steel, but of hardened bronze. They soon wore and needed continual restoration and deepening. The die sculptors were therefore constantly at work on them. Careful examinations shows that the dies were mostly cut with a wheel, like grana, not with graving tools. This retooling of the matrices explains the numerous minute variations in duplicated of the same coins. Very few are found exactly alike. On the other hand, it must not be supposed that these exquisite works of art are always much defaced. The boarding to which has concealed many that had just left the mint and that preserve all their original exquisite sharpness. One of the Pericles of the Athenian mint

The Tantalus of the Fire

I must confess I stood at the door with some trepidation. I had not seen Muriel for a year; she had been abroad. Once, indeed, I had heard from her when there came a gift a week after Christmas with her card: "Please accept—Even though I am a little late"—if Muriel had only been speaking of—ah! Muriel—Muriel!

I scribbled, she—ah! who would give the girl he loves economy for luxury, but perhaps I hoped. Perhaps I should write a novel, the great phantasmic novel—and perhaps phantasies would prove the easiest way to love.

Perhaps—perhaps! And that was why I stood there in trepidation—a year is a long time.

In the library I sat by the fire. The snapping flames built a palace of dreams—the Riviera with blue skies, the green of the grass, the gold of the sunshine, the song of the birds, the soft strings of a mandolin, our villa!

And Muriel, dainty, fragile, innocent, brilliant, a rose, soft perfumed, splendid, God's handiwork, leaning over my shoulder reading the great novel; surely, a palace of dreams—Tantalus of the Fire.

She put her slim hand in mine. "Jarvis it's good to see you."

"I am still the same Jarvis—dear, I hope. And are you still the same Muriel?"

"Yes," she said, very softly, "except that I am the happiest girl in the world. Oh! Jarvis, you shall know first of all—I'm engaged!"

"Engaged?" I asked, quietly, so quietly that I wonder how.

The Tantalus of the Fire smiled as I leaned forward grasping the vanishing Muriel. A log snapped, the blaze died away. Something in me snapped, too—the fire of my life.

"Oh! Jarvis, wish me happiness," she begged almost sadly.

"Happiness!" I said. "I wish you the greatest happiness in the world. We have been such friends, such comrades, that gladly I pray you may have entrance to the land of the Heart's Desire, to keep you, to guard you, to save you from sadness and sorrow."

"Jack's a dear. I have told him about you; he wants to know you; he's upstairs; shall I bring him down?"

"No," I said, "if you don't mind we'll postpone that. Put just in town for an hour, and I must rush in a moment to catch my train; it goes at 5."

"Oh! I'm sorry; can't you stay with us for a time at least; you can elude with Jack."

"I fear not."

"I'm sure you'll like him," she concluded.

"When I'm married," she said, timidly almost, "you must come and spend a month with us."

"How could I? How could I not? Then suddenly the clock began to chime—one-two-three-four-five.

"Oh! you've missed your train," she said.

"There was no train," I said—Heaven forgive me.

"Then you don't want to meet him?" she asked, all sad.

"I could not yet. Good-by!" I said quickly, and I took her hand and kissed it, gently, very, very gently. She drew back half frightened.

"Oh! Jarvis, how could you?"

"How could I not?" I said, brokenly; "but, Muriel, dear, I shall be your friend always—always. I pledge you Godspeed for your future. Forget me, forget that I loved you, because it is my sorrow deep down in my heart that I was not strong enough to be strong."

"Forget you?" she said, and there were tears in her eyes. "Forget my Jarvis, my best friend, the best friend a woman ever had, faithful, honest, strong, true, always unselfish—forget my Jarvis!" and she leaned forward and kissed me on the forehead.

As I walked away I looked back and saw the tears sparkling in her eyes. And the memory of her was so strong upon me that I bowed my head and sobbed and sobbed.

The great novel is still unwritten. Muriel is still dainty, fragile, innocent and Jack is a splendid man. I see them both a good deal, and Muriel still calls me dear Jarvis.

I have given up smoking and I have not been to the theater for many a day, but at least little Muriel and little Jarvis have all manner of wonderful toys and love their Uncle Jarvis.

They climb on my knee and ask me to tell them of my wonderful palace across the sea. And I tell them of the Riviera with blue skies, blue seas, the green grass, the gold of the sunshine, the song of the birds, the soft tremolo of a mandolin, my villa with a lady—dainty, fragile, innocent, brilliant, a rose, soft perfumed, splendid, leaning over my shoulder reading Uncle Jarvis's great novel. Ah! the Tantalus of the Fire.—R. C. M., in Illustrated Bits.

Thinnest Breadplate.

Probably the thinnest and lightest breadplate ever invented has just been brought to the attention of the Italian military authorities by Dr. Guaraldi of Rome, where tests have been made by army experts. It protects the whole front against hand weapons or bullets, and is less than one-eighth of an inch thick. It can be worn under ordinary clothing without causing any observation.

HYPNOTISM IN ALCOHOLISM.

Statistics Showing a Large Percentage of Cures.

In a recent article Dr. Lloyd Tuckey gives statistics from various sources showing the success of hypnotism in the treatment of chronic alcoholism. His own practice gives the number of cases treated as 33, with 75 cures. Miss Brewster shows 76 cases with 33 cures (17 men and 11 women). Both observers record instances of "breaks" in addition to those registered as "cured." Tokarczyk, of Moscow, states that he has treated more than 700 patients, including representatives from all classes of the community, and claims to have cured 50 per cent. of those who wished to be cured and submitting themselves voluntarily to his treatment. He adds 15 to 20 hypnotic sessions to be generally sufficient, but keeps the patient under observation for a year and does not reckon the case a "cure" until at least twelve months have passed without relapse. De Jong, of The Hague, has treated 41 drunkards in 15 years, and reports 19 of them cured; in some instances the cure has been illustrated by ten years abstinence from alcohol.

Dr. Tuckey urges that alcoholic subjects ought to be given the chance of hypnotic treatment, and points out the advantage this method possesses over confinement in a retreat. He finds that most alcoholics are good hypnotic subjects, and places considerable stress upon the desire of the patient to be cured as an important element in successful treatment. It matters little what method of hypnotization is adopted, and any doctor who has the confidence of his patient can practice the treatment with a reasonable prospect of success provided both practitioner and patient take the matter seriously. The suggestions should aim not merely at creating a negative or repellent feeling toward alcohol, but should also propose to restore self-control. It is possible to secure the first and yet to fall in the great object of the treatment. Dr. Tuckey protests against the statement that women drunkards are incurable. He finds, on the contrary, that their chances of cure are at least equal to those of men. With a view to increase the security of the value of hypnotic treatment it would be well that all who have tried it should record experiences.

CRIME EIGHTY PER CENT.

Kansas City District Methodist Conference Resolutions.

"It is our conviction that no greater evil confronts the church of God today than that of intemperance. It degrades the body, debases the intellect, and destroys the soul. The fact that 80 per cent. of the crimes committed by the 2,000 inmates of our state penitentiary can be directly traced to strong drink, and that 5 per cent. of the remainder are indirectly attributable to the same deadly poison, ought to be sufficient to reveal to us the gigantic proportions which this monster of iniquity has assumed. The liquor forces are thoroughly organized, backed by millions of money, and scruple not to carry on their nefarious work, not only to the extent of making drunkards and clothing them and their families with poverty, rags and wretchedness, but of corrupting the ballot, perverting justice and purchasing with money the municipal assemblies of our cities and the legislative bodies of our states and of invading the highest councils of the nation. The duty of our preachers and members is negatively stated in Chapter five of our Book of Discipline, but we are persuaded that something more than total abstinence on the part of the church of God will be necessary in order to secure the overthrow of this accursed business. Nothing short of a positive and continuous hostility will ever win in this fearful conflict.—St. Louis Advocate.

The Profits of Whiskey.

The Wichita (Kan.) Beacon puts much in little, thus:

The distiller from the bushel of corn makes four gallons of whiskey with the aid of various harmful products and adulterations. These four gallons of whiskey retail for $16.40.

The farmer who raises the corn gets from 25 to 50 cents.

The United States Government, through its tax on whiskey, gets $4.40.

The railroad company gets $1.

The manufacturer gets $4.

The drayman who hauls the whiskey gets 15 cents.

The retailer gets $7.

The man who drinks the whiskey gets drunk.

His wife gets hunger and sorrow. His children get rags and insufficient food.

As to Substitutes for Saloons.

Much is being said and written about substitutes for the saloons, but little so far as we know, is being done toward providing bright, cheery places where men may spend their evenings. The rooms of the Y. M. C. A. are good, but there are not enough of them in cities, and in country towns are scarce, and where they are, they are usually upstairs, where only the initiated can find them. There should be rooms fit possible on the ground floor, bright and attractive, free to every one, with books, newspapers, magazines, music, games and occasionally entertainments of an interesting and elevating character.

There is a field for Christian saloons devoted to culture, where money should be well invested, with a view to the betterment of the community.

My Dear Sir:

I am in receipt of your letter of the 14th enclosing a statement and asking me to exercise the options given me under policy.

I have a heavy insurance and the annual premiums are considerable, and for this reason I believe I will accept the second proposition, yet I am somewhat uncertain as to what to do and would really like to hear from you before determining, getting your view of it.

I have policies in a number of different companies. This is the one that I took out and in my opinion is the best policy that I have, therefore, as a matter of course, I must be pleased with it. After insuring for fifteen or more years, it is to be supposed that one may learn something as to how to insure, therefore the fact of the last being the best may in some degree depend upon this.

Upon hearing from you, if you desire me to write a separate letter expressing my satisfaction, I will do so with pleasure. I have $10,000 my life and only wish that all of it was as satisfactory as this.

By Nora Bryant

Copyright, 1908, by E. A. Whitcomb

Ludlow sat on the river bank, with the dog's head on his knee. He was very tired and very much disappointed. He had left the survey camp immediately on receiving Gretchen's letter, telling of her arrival at the De la Rio ranch and had thought to cover the hundred miles between camp and ranch easily, but Indian river had risen inexplicably and Kywak refused to swim the ford, so now, within five miles of the ranch, it looked as if he would miss seeing Gretchen after all, for she did not expect him and her visit was but a three days' affair.

LUDLOW GAVE A GREAT SPRING AND CAUGHT THE DOG'S COLLAR.

asleep or crazy that I let her jerk the bridle from my hand when I let her down to drink?"

The dog looked up sympathetically. The ninety-five miles of racing after Kywak had been nothing to his long boarding legs, but this wild herding of a single clever Indian pony for three hours had been a little strenuous. He had done his best for his master, but when he was not allowed to catch flank or throat in powerful jaws how was he to hold a horse? Bismarck was a boardman, not a collier.

Ludlow glowered at the cheerless heaps of rocks that guarded either bank of the river.

"It is cold enough," he said, "for the river to be frozen. Just my luck to have it twice as deep as usual! Well, Bismarck, old boy, I see nothing for it but for you and me to leave Kywak to her cunningness and swim the river. And I'll be a fine sight to Gretchen after two years! Oh, well, who knows whether she'll care or not?"

Ludlow rose and began to tramp up the river. "It is a bad idea to move away from the ford," he thought, "but I'll go up a way and see if the river isn't narrower. It's too deep now to strike quicksand."

He picked his way carefully over the rocks. Indian river was always cold and always swift, but doubly so today, after the early winter rains. The day was bleak, with a half promise of snow on the air. The plains on the far side of the river were as dim and hopeless as the sky. As he paused at a point where there seemed promise of a shelving bank on either side Ludlow shivered and half turned back toward the Indian Kywak.

"What's the use?" he murmured. "Gretchen half refused me once. She will probably wholly refuse me this time."

He stood in silence with one hand on Bismarck's head. Then he straightened himself with a jerk.

"No, old chap!" he exclaimed. "We'll see her again or drown in the attempt. Now, then, I've no way to get my clothes across except to swim in them. I'm not up to the swim Family Robinson swim of carrying them across on my head. I'll leave my overcoat with Kywak. Come on, old faithful!"

He removed his shoes and tied them about his neck by the laces and walked down the bank into the rushing water, then stood still, with the water swirling about his knees. The current was much swifter than he had imagined it would be. However, the river was narrow at this point, so he took a resolute step forward and plunged in above his depth.

After the first shock the cold was not so bad. But the current! The downward swirling movement of the water was almost as powerful as quicksand.

The pointed rock Ludlow had chosen for a swimming mark was a dozen rods upstream before he had swam as many strokes. Bismarck was swimming beside him, puffing and blowing like an infant thrashing machine. For a moment Ludlow thought of catching the dog's collar, but decided that they both might go down, though Bismarck could have pulled him across easily in quiet water.

The bitter cold of the water began to strike in, but Ludlow swam on with quick, strong strokes. It is not worth while to hear what our neighbors say about our children, what our rivals say about our business, our dress or our affairs.

PRINCESS ANNE, MD.

Blossom's Letter.

James Johnson's name does not carry any special distinction upon its owner. Johnson has long since discovered that in emergencies where his personal appearance is not a sufficient guaranty his card will not help him. All his life he has been receiving other men's bills and letters. His name is the one unopened and the other unopened, except on a rare occasion when his sense of humor got the better of him.

A letter came addressed to James Johnson in a feminine hand. Johnson opened it when it came. As he read the words, "Darling Jimmy," at the top of the page, his expression of dignified preoccupation disappeared. To lay the letter down at this point was more than could be expected of flesh and blood. Johnson read and met with other terms of endearment and protestations of affection. There was nothing to give a clue to the writer's identity. Even the signature, "Your Own Blossom," could hardly be considered definite.

When Johnson had enjoyed the letter to his heart's content he examined the envelope. The name James Johnson was clearly written, as was also the name of the office building. The number of the room was indistinct. Without question the letter belonged to another Johnson in the immediate vicinity.

"I'd give a dollar to see Mrs. Johnson's face if she could read that letter," Johnson remarked to one of the men in the office. Then, his sense of humor being rampant and his guardian angel temporarily off duty, he pocketed the missive.

When Johnson went home to dinner he managed to let the letter fall while he was removing his overcoat. He appeared quite unaware of the incident and also of the fact that his wife had picked up the letter. But when she said, "Who's this from, James?" Johnson proved that he had in him the making of a great actor. With a dramatic start he eluded his hand on his pocket. Then he faced Mrs. Johnson and said, in an intense voice, full of suppressed excitement: "Let me have that letter. It's nothing that will interest you."

The mingling of indifference and appeal in his voice was masterly. "Why, of course it interests me to know what correspondents you have, James dear," said Mrs. Johnson sweetly.

She extracted the letter from the envelope, while Johnson protested with a fine imitation of increasing apprehension. Then he had the experience for which he had professed his willingness to pay cash—the sight of the changing expression on Mrs. Johnson's face as she read the letter.

When she reached "Your Own Blossom," Johnson began to laugh. Mrs. Johnson, however, crumpled the letter in her hand and shrieked for her mother.

Johnson perceived that it was time for explanations. But he met with the unexpected difficulty that no one paid any attention to them. His mother-in-law, who had hurried to the spot, took the letter from her daughter's hand and read it through, while Mrs. Johnson wept stormily.

Finding his wife dead to his words, Johnson tried the older woman, but he had hardly begun on his story when Mrs. Johnson interrupted him. "That was an afterthought, mamma," she sobbed. "At first he was overwhelmed with confusion."

But the special providence which watches over imbeciles did not forget Johnson. Only one thing could have saved him, and that happened. While things were at their worst the James Johnson who was the rightful owner of the letter presented himself. Failing to receive his daily misgiving from a young woman in the suburbs he had called her up by telephone to upbraid her gently. Learning that the letter had been sent as usual, had interviewed the postman. Finally he had traced the other Johnson to his lair.

The new James Johnson was in a state of most ungentlemanly rage. But the more violent his language and the more insulting his demeanor the more intense was the other Johnson's gratitude. When the newcomer shook his fist in his face and threatened him with arrest the other Johnson could have embraced him. Plainly Johnson's namesake formed a very poor opinion of his courage, for he concluded his remarks with the assertion that even if there had not been ladies present he would have hated to soil his hands by "kicking such a poor-spirited cur."

When the caller had departed, Mrs. Johnson fell on her husband's neck. Her mother was less forgiving. But, as Mrs. Johnson said to her afterward, "no man with anything on his conscience would ever dream of playing such a joke on his wife."—Chicago News.

Not Far Wrong.

A school teacher was trying to make the children define the word "bovine."

"It applies to an animal," she said. "Can any one tell me what animal?"

There was the silence of confessed ignorance. The teacher began to throw out leading hints.

"The animal that gives us meat." Still silence. "And shoes," she added. No light broke on the twenty puzzled countenances. "And the straps that you carry your books in." "Oh, I know!" cried a young voice, with explosive eagerness.

"Well, James, what animal is it?" "Father!"

Swedish Postal Customs.

In certain parts of Sweden, where the most absolute confidence is reposed in the honesty of the people, a very informal postal system is in vogue. As the mail steamer reaches a landing-place a man goes ashore with the letters, which he places in an unlocked box on the pier. Then the passenger who expects a letter opens the box, turns over the letters and selects his own, without being watched or questioned by anyone.

A Little Visit.

"I haven't seen you for a week," remarked the elderly woman in black to the young woman in gray as the two entered an elevated train.

"I've been entertaining an old friend," replied the latter with a sigh, seating herself beside the other. "May I tell you about her? It would be such a relief!" she said, plaintively.

"Certainly," said the other. "Two weeks ago," began the younger woman, "my husband went away on a business trip. That same morning I received a letter from an old school friend saying she was visiting in Milwaukee and wished to stop off and see me on her way home to the East. I had planned to spend the coming week with mamma, but, thinking it would be delightful to renew my acquaintance with Lillian, I wrote her to come as soon as possible. Three days of waiting brought a telegram from her saying she would arrive on the 4 o'clock train that afternoon. I had barely time to order a nice dinner; then, leaving the baby with Anne, I hurried to the railway station. Lillian did not appear. Disappointed, I returned home to find a second telegram saying she would come on Friday, and would write in the meantime. This was Wednesday and my week was being spoiled. Friday brought a third telegram saying she could not come until Monday because her 12 year old sister, Jeannette, who accompanied her, had been invited to a party on Saturday.

I then and there decided that the fates should never tempt me under the guise of old friendship to invite myself to another's house. Well, Monday morning came and robbed me of Anne, owing to a death in her family. I telegraphed Lillian that I wished her to postpone her visit until Thursday and told her the reason. She wired back that she'd love to help me out and would take things as she found them. But what woman who has not seen her girlhood friend for years will not work with night and day to make everything in apple-pie order for her? I stayed all day—baby teething too. At 6 o'clock a cab deposited Lillian and Jeannette at my door. Lillian declared, as she embraced me, that I must allow her to feel perfectly at home and thus avoid making extra work for me. She began by sending Jeannette, after they had retired to their room to prepare for dinner, to ask me for a piece of laundry soap. Jeannette said her sister wanted to wash out three or four white waists because it was so difficult when one was traveling to get things laundered nicely.

"I had told them dinner would be ready at 6 o'clock. A few minutes after that hour I tapped on the bathroom door. Lillian opened it and a cloud of steam rushed out. She said she was having the greatest success. She used plenty of soap and rinsed well, which did away with rubbing and was the easiest and most economical way of washing. I wish you could have seen my usually spick and span bathroom.

"At 7 o'clock we sat down to our spoiled dinner. Baby was cross because I had been prevented from putting him to bed at his regular time. Lillian said she could account now for my changed appearance and lack of animation if baby were always as cross as that. The darling! He has a perfectly angelic nature. That evening was a nightmare. After the visitors retired I washed the dishes and crept into bed at 12 o'clock.

"The next morning I was up early because Lillian had told me soon after her arrival that her visit must be short owing to a promise she had made her aunt to go to her that day. I damped the waists Lillian had washed and I had hung them up, ironed them as best I knew how, washed and dressed baby and aroused my guests by 8 o'clock. Lillian appeared at 9 o'clock and said she had coaxed Jeannette to rest an hour longer, she was so tired, and I need not keep any breakfast for her save an orange, a little oatmeal, a cup of coffee and a slice of toast.

"I was preparing baby for his morning nap when Jeannette appeared. Lillian was engaged in ironing anew the linen waists, which it seems I should have ironed on the other side, so I put baby in his chair and served a second breakfast. About 1 o'clock Lillian said she would have an early bit of luncheon. If I did not mind, and then we'd leave for her aunt's. While we were of the table a telegram came from the aunt asking her niece to postpone their visit until Friday. I was delighted to remain with us. I gave the house over to them and was virtually a visitor.

"They left early this morning. Anne came unexpectedly at the same time. I'm going to celebrate my release by shopping and luncheon downtown."

"You've had a trying experience," said the elder woman as she fastened her furs. "Come to see me next week and bring the baby."

"Thank you. I will if I don't stay away. I haven't seen Lillian and I want to stop since she's here and I want to see her about Lillian's visit. I'm going to write to Bertha to-day and see that baby and I will spend a few days next week with her if it is convenient for her to have us come."

Having said this the younger woman wondered at the quizzical smile the other flashed at her as she began to leave the car.

The elephant in his prime stands only five hours a night, and the older he grows the less alert he is.

THE REVOLUTION OF TO-DAY.

Carlisle said that revolution could not be made with rose water. In the good old times they invaded plenty of blood-lust. But modern improvements threaten to change all that. Norway made a revolution of revolution. Now it is said that on the death of the Queen of Holland a little kingdom will quietly become a republic, whether the German Emperor, who has just been elected, will not. The little kingdom is not.

Reaping His Reward.

This happened in a first class carriage of an English train, smoking being prohibited. The American in the corner insisted on lighting his cigar. The indignant Britisher in the other corner protested, and protested in vain. At the next station he hailed the guard, with hostile intent; but the placid American was too quick for him. "Guard," he drawled, "I think you'll find that this gentleman is traveling with a third-class ticket on him." Investigation proved this to be right, and the indignant Britisher was ejected. A spectator of the little scene asked the triumphant American how he knew about the ticket. "Well," explained the imperturbable stranger, "it was sticking out of his pocket and I saw it was the same color as mine."

Lightning's Strange Freak.

"Lightning, when in the mood, has an ugly habit of drilling," writes an English observer. "It will drill the hardest rock—rock which would turn out steel; and not only drill but vitrify it. They have found in Cumberland channels from thirty feet deep and from two to four inches in circumference. The interior was hard and glazed where the solid substance had been melted by the scorching flashes. Artificial experiment has shown that a powerful shock from a battery will vitrify finely powdered glass, but not field-stone or quartz. The lightning, however, does it in the manner described—not in one place, but in many, ground it divided into several branches, each strong enough to penetrate and liquefy the solid rock."

A Strange Coincidence.

Col. L. M. Buchanan writes that his youngest son served in the South African campaign as a trooper in the Rhodesian horse. August 21, 1900, the young man was reported as severely wounded at Hamman's Kraal and his wound was described by the surgeon in attendance as a "comminuted fracture of the left humerus," out of which twenty-one splinters were subsequently discharged or extricated. On the same day in his bedroom in Ireland the mirror fell to the floor and was smashed into many pieces, receiving what the colonel thinks might be called a comminuted fracture." The mirror had been in its usual place on the dressing table and the room was vacant at the time.

Micro-Organism in Butter.

Sometimes butter has a fishy taste, and this led the Department of Agriculture in Victoria, Australia, to make an investigation, which proves that the fishy taste in butter is in no way connected with fish. One or more of four specified micro-organisms may be concerned in the development of fishiness. Rusty cans or any so-called tin utensils from which the thin coating of tin is worn away have a very deleterious effect on the butter made from milk which the cans have contained. The iron or steel which becomes exposed by the abrasion of the tin coating, although it may be polished bright and kept clean, has a bad effect on milk and on cream.

Geese Raising in Hungary.

The plains of Hungary are well adapted for the raising of geese, and travelers in that country are often entertained by seeing, from passing trains, great flocks of geese, feeding in the fields and watched by gooseherds. So many feathers are yielded by these geese that four "bedfeather markets" are held annually at Budapest, and at each market from 600,000 pounds to 700,000 pounds of bedfeathers are placed on sale.

Punishing the Gods in China.

In Northern China, where a drought has long prevailed, officials have visited all the temples and threatened the idols for negligence. Others have been put out into the sun, that they may feel how hot and dry it is. It is not uncommon in San Francisco to see a Chinese joss dragged out into the street and punished for neglect of duty.

Newfoundland's Fisheries.

The mackerel fishery has been practically extinct in Newfoundland waters for the last quarter century, owing to the migration of these fish to the American seaboard. So enormous was the extent of the fishery in former times that over 1,000 vessels of different nationalities carried on the pursuit there.

The Kope to Keep.

The Berkshire hog is an all around animal for the breeder and farmer, ready for market after he is six months old, best quality of meat and attracts attention by his fine appearance. Don't forget the Berkshire when you are choosing your hogs, as he is a money maker.

What Does It Mean

to let Dividends "accumulate" on a Life Insurance Policy? In many companies it means nothing more than an agreement on the part of the policy-holder, to do without dividends for fifteen or twenty years, and then take whatever dividend the company will be willing to give. Dividends are declared every year in the Mutual Benefit and the policyholders use them either to help pay premiums or to buy increased insurance. The policies of the Mutual Benefit Life Ins. Co. contain special and peculiar advantages which are not combined in the policies of any other company. Examining these advantages before placing your insurance. You owe it to your family to have the best.

—Gov. Preston Lee, of Delaware, has proclaimed a call for an extra session of the Legislature to meet on Thursday, for the purpose of electing a United States Senator. On the face of the document it appears that the principal reasons for the call are the necessity for making clear the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution exempting corporation stock outside the State from taxation and the necessity for amending the franchise law. It is thought that the vacant U. S. Senatorship will be filled by the election of Col. Dupont.

—The Allen Base Ball team defeated the Princess Anne team on the Princess Anne High School Campus on May 35 by a score of four to one in the tenth inning. It was a pitchers battle throughout. Colono for Princess Anne, holding the visitors down to scattering hits until the 10th when he weakened and allowed four hits which scored three runs. Townsend for Allen pitched superbly, allowing but three hits throughout the game and striking out 5 men. Townsend's pitching and R. Beauchamp's home run on last ball were easily the features of the game.

—The Board of Election Supervisors for Wisconsin county met Saturday and organized. Mr. Samuel S. Smyth was elected president, Mr. C. Lee Gillis, clerk, and Mr. F. Leonard Wallis, counsel. The Board decided to have the names on the old registration books transcribed to new books, and Mr. Honston H. Rank representing the Democratic party, and Mr. Alan F. Benjamin, representing the Republican party, were selected to do the work. At the same time the names in the new Willard District will be transcribed from the Pittsburgh District book to the new register.

—The close of Mrs. Moore's School was accompanied by a very delightful entertainment. Miss Vera Weisbach, of the fifth grade, was organist. Master Ed. White, orator. "The Quarrel," a duet, was sung by Miss Julia Potts and Master Jack Perry. A short play was rendered by Master Thomas McKoy, Miss Ruth Price and Miss Katherine Towdine. A duet, "You and I," was sung by Misses Isabel Spring and Ruth Price. A banquet closed the exercises. Mrs. Moore announces that she will not teach next year.

With her mother, Mrs. Thos. J. Turpin, she will shortly leave for Toronto, Can., for quite a stay.

—The work of laying the gas mains for the Salisbury Gas Co., has been pushed forward this week. The City contract called for mains to be laid on Dock, Main and Division Streets as far north as Church Street by June. The contract made with the city also requires five miles of mains to be put down by January 1, 1907, and the plant completed and in operation. Mr. John G. Gray, of Wilmington, one of the directors and financiers of the Company, was in Salisbury Monday and Tuesday in consultation with the resident directors. While here he looked over several sites with a view to selecting a location for the plant, but reached no decision.

—Beginning Monday last, the time of trains on the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk Railroad were changed. The north bound train in the morning leaves here at 7.39 instead of 6.52. The Pullman car is discontinued on this train between Delmar and Orisfield. The north bound express in the afternoon leaves Salisbury at 1.55, instead of 1.49 as heretofore. The South bound trains leave Salisbury as follows: 8.01 a. m., instead of 8.07; 7.50 a. m., instead of 7.45; 11.54 a. m., as usual; 1.34 p. m., instead of 1.49 as heretofore. Beginning last Sunday, Sunday trains were put on the Delaware Division.

—The work of laying the gas mains for the Salisbury Gas Co., has been pushed forward this week. The City contract called for mains to be laid on Dock, Main and Division Streets as far north as Church Street by June. The contract made with the city also requires five miles of mains to be put down by January 1, 1907, and the plant completed and in operation. Mr. John G. Gray, of Wilmington, one of the directors and financiers of the Company, was in Salisbury Monday and Tuesday in consultation with the resident directors. While here he looked over several sites with a view to selecting a location for the plant, but reached no decision.

—Beginning Monday last, the time of trains on the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk Railroad were changed. The north bound train in the morning leaves here at 7.39 instead of 6.52. The Pullman car is discontinued on this train between Delmar and Orisfield. The north bound express in the afternoon leaves Salisbury at 1.55, instead of 1.49 as heretofore. The South bound trains leave Salisbury as follows: 8.01 a. m., instead of 8.07; 7.50 a. m., instead of 7.45; 11.54 a. m., as usual; 1.34 p. m., instead of 1.49 as heretofore. Beginning last Sunday, Sunday trains were put on the Delaware Division.

—The Allen Base Ball team defeated the Princess Anne team on the Princess Anne High School Campus on May 35 by a score of four to one in the tenth inning. It was a pitchers battle throughout. Colono for Princess Anne, holding the visitors down to scattering hits until the 10th when he weakened and allowed four hits which scored three runs. Townsend for Allen pitched superbly, allowing but three hits throughout the game and striking out 5 men. Townsend's pitching and R. Beauchamp's home run on last ball were easily the features of the game.

—The Board of Election Supervisors for Wisconsin county met Saturday and organized. Mr. Samuel S. Smyth was elected president, Mr. C. Lee Gillis, clerk, and Mr. F. Leonard Wallis, counsel. The Board decided to have the names on the old registration books transcribed to new books, and Mr. Honston H. Rank representing the Democratic party, and Mr. Alan F. Benjamin, representing the Republican party, were selected to do the work. At the same time the names in the new Willard District will be transcribed from the Pittsburgh District book to the new register.

—The close of Mrs. Moore's School was accompanied by a very delightful entertainment. Miss Vera Weisbach, of the fifth grade, was organist. Master Ed. White, orator. "The Quarrel," a duet, was sung by Miss Julia Potts and Master Jack Perry. A short play was rendered by Master Thomas McKoy, Miss Ruth Price and Miss Katherine Towdine. A duet, "You and I," was sung by Misses Isabel Spring and Ruth Price. A banquet closed the exercises. Mrs. Moore announces that she will not teach next year.

With her mother, Mrs. Thos. J. Turpin, she will shortly leave for Toronto, Can., for quite a stay.

For SERGE Or Any Other Kind Of Suit The Man Who Wants The Most For His Money Must Go To Thoroughgood

Every American man loves Blue Serge. Blue Serge is the national choice for men's summer wear in America. Blue Serge meets perfectly the climatic conditions of our country. It is cool on hot days, and yet, unlike a lighter color, isn't too summery-looking when a NO"TH"easter knocks the temperature down to 60°. When made right—of standard grades—a Blue Serge is the longest-lasting and most serviceable suit a man can buy. Prices, $10.00, $12.50, $15.00, $16.50 and $18.50, single or double breasted. If you looked for a Blue Serge last summer in July or August, you could not buy one to save your life. Why? Because the mills did not make enough goods to supply the demand. The same thing will happen this summer, except with us. We have today in stock ten lots, twenty suits in each lot, making 200 suits—the grandest assortment of Blue Serge you ever saw.

We also have Blue Serges for Boys 15 to 18; Long Pants and plenty of Blue Serges for Children; Short Pants Suits 5 to 16 years. We are head-quarters for Blue Serge Clothes this season.

When you want Hats and Gents' Furnishings, we have the best lines in Salisbury—TWO STORES

A BROKEN-HEARTED CRY.

June 8, '06—(Mark 7:24-30.)

Parentage is a great joy; it is also a vast responsibility. There is nothing that so agitates the great deity of the heart as to bend over an infant in the cradle, with the knowledge that his whole future career depends upon you, and that you will be the architect of its destiny in a very real sense. In view of all the perils that hover about the feet of innocent childhood, the wonder is that so many turn out well.

One of the saddest incidents in the life of Christ is his interview with the Canaanite woman in the region of Tyre and Sidon. Most of those who sought the Great Physician were themselves afflicted with disease. They came because they were in pain, or helpless and distressed. They were deaf or blind or leprosy or they pleaded for personal relief. This woman came for an absent daughter, and so great was the grief of the mother for her suffering child, that she made her case her own, crying, "Have mercy on me," as if what was done for the sick one would be accepted as a personal benefit. So great was her distress, and so important her plea, and so magnificent her faith that her desire was granted and a grateful mother clasped to her heart a recovered daughter.

But that Syro-Phoenician home is not the only household darkened and saddened by a child's calamity. There are tens of thousands of homes all over this broad land, in which the mothers could truthfully say: "My daughter is grievously vexed with a devil." Whether we accept the doctrine of demoniacal possession or not, we are all conscious of the fact that there are all about us children who act as if they were possessed of devils.

In the very first family of which there is any record, the first born son was a murderer, and his hands were stained with his own brother's blood. What was Eve's anguish as she looked for the first time into the pale face of death? Jacob had a large family, but his boys nearly broke his heart by their deception and jealousy. Solomon had but one son, Rehoboam, but he was a conceited, spoiled child, and the first act of his reign was to split the kingdom in two. Solomon is credited with being the author of the proverb "Spare the rod and spoil the child," and he evidently practiced what he preached. David's son Absalom broke his heart with his perfidious behavior, and the centuries have thrived with his bitter wall. "O Absalom! my son, my son Absalom! would God, I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!"

History is full of such instances. Fathers searching for wandering boys. Mothers weeping in silence, refusing to be comforted over wayward daughters. Homes are darkened that would otherwise be bright, hours are wasted that would otherwise be light, lives are wet with tears that should be soft. There are sick, and aching hearts, and broken-down spirits, because some son or daughter is grievously vexed with a devil. The devil of drink, the devil of lust, the devil of disobedience, the devil of ingratitude, the devil of wandering, the devil of temper, a whole brood of demons enamped upon the soul!

Oh, if youth, hot-blooded and inconsiderate, could for a moment realize "how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is, to have a thankless child," if they could feel for an instant the point of one thorn, a whole crown of which they are plaiting for their parent's brows, they would change their course of evil doing before another sunset. They would steady those aged limbs instead of digging pitfalls for trembling feet. They would lift the burdens from bending shoulders rather than add to the weight. They would make the present peaceful and the future roseate with hope. The prodigal son came home, it is true, in time to receive his father's dying blessing, but not until he had wasted his substance in riotous living, had lost his reputation and his character, had ruined his health and been cast out from the society even of his old companions in vice. The mighty, forgiving father here is shown in the reception that he received but there is little to commend in the career of the man who stayed away just as long as he could get a crust to eat and a rag to wear, and dragged his poor, miserable, wretched and ruined body home when starvation was staring him in the face for his poor old father to take care of. That he came home at all was something; that he did not come before was despicable.

Oh, the height and depth and length and breadth of parental love. In overleaps all barriers, it palliates where the world condemns; its mantle of charity covers a multitude of sins. That child must have gone very far astray whose mother turns against him. Courts may pronounce him guilty, but to her he is her baby still, and she will go with him to the gallows, forgiving and forgetting all. She only knows how many mothers are this moment prostrate, crying, out of the bitterness of their spirit, "Have mercy upon me, my child, I am grievously vexed with a devil."

Women Workers in Japan. I have encountered and never novelty in Japan—their and my room at 8 p. m., and dinner at 7:30 o'clock, were a treat in Japan. The champagne at the hotel are all men. I haven't seen a woman about the place. The women are probably out gathering rice and wading in mud up to their thighs. The women are not only ornamental here; they are useful as well. American women who visit Japan are often asked to take pictures of the women in their condition that they are so clean and beautiful. Our American women are not so clean and beautiful.

RAISING FROGS FOR PROFIT.

Five Years From the Spawn to the Finished Frog Leg.

Not many of the people who sit down to a nice order of frog legs know where they come from, how they are raised, caught and marketed, or, in fact, know anything about them, yet frog legs are considered one of the most dainty of dishes. Not many know that Pennsylvania raised frog is one of the best on the market.

People who have made the study of animals, especially water animals, a life work, know that the frog possesses almost as many peculiar characteristics as a human being.

The bull frog, the estate species, comes from the lakes and low lands of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Louisiana and along the marshes of the Great Lakes. It is said that there is more trouble and less money about a frog farm than there is about any other business. Still many people living in the low lands and swamps of the States mentioned depend entirely upon this novel but interesting work for a livelihood.

The better class of frog farmer has from two to six ponds where he breeds and raises his frogs. In this way he can keep the frogs of different ages in different ponds.

Frog eggs are about the size of pin heads, and are laid in a slimy, jelly-like substance that partially protects them. From 400 to 800 eggs are the spawn of a single female. The eggs hatch the tadpole or pollywog. This in turn becomes a baby frog. Between the time of change from tadpole to frog about a year elapses, and it takes the frog about two and a half or three years to grow large enough for market. They are better around the age of five years than at any other time; after that they become tough. It is a very hard matter to separate the frogs at different ages for they must have mud in the bottom of their pools or they will not hatch, so no floor can be placed there, and they easily dig under any wall that can be built.

After he is big enough for market the frog is caught with a bull's eye lantern. This is flashed in his eyes at night, blinding him long enough to be captured. In the daytime the animal is shy and will not allow a person to approach, but when he is once scared from a place it is safe to say he will return there as soon as the person has gone. When caught and worried or teased he will cry almost like a baby.

In a hard season, when small fish and insects are scarce, the frog eats his own families. It being a case of the biggest frog getting the most to eat. It is no uncommon thing to catch a bullfrog that has another in its stomach half its own size that it has devoured in a hungry moment. They can stay under water from 20 to 30 minutes, when they come to the surface for air. Their worst enemy is the large fish. In ponds where fish are also raised the fish live almost entirely on the frogs.

Another peculiarity of the frog is that it will seldom touch a dead carcass. The beetle or other insect must move before the frog will touch it.

There is one other species of the eatable frog that is known as the spring frog. It grows in the spring on farms and ranches and is considered to be more palatable than the bull frog, but is smaller. Farmers who have these frogs in their springs refuse to allow them to be killed, claiming that they purify the water. This makes them harder to get and they are more expensive than the other variety.

The tree, or marsh frog, is noted as being one of the best weather prophets that lives. He always cries before a rain. He is about three inches in length, but not fit for food. Some are sold as weather prophets, but the demand does not pay one to raise them.

The last of the common species is the horned frog. It lives in the Southwest on the dry, arid regions of Arizona, Utah and New Mexico, and lives on desert mice and insects. They have never been known to drink water and, like the toad, is good for nothing.

TOI TOI TO THE CZAR.

From a Translation of a letter to the Czar.

Dear Brother—I think it more fitting to call you "dear brother" because in this letter I am addressing myself less to the Czar than to the man and brother; and more than that, I am no longer of this world, but standing at the threshold of the tomb. I do not wish to die without telling you what I think of your present activity—telling you what activity is, and what it ought to be for the greater good of millions of men and for your own good; and also telling you what a source of evil your conduct may be for these and for yourself if your activity continues to follow its present course. It is evident that you are deluding yourself as to the people's attachment to autocracy, and to its representative, the Czar, because you in all the cities are greeted by crowds who cry, "Hurrah!" and run behind your carriage. Such manifestations are far from being an expression of the people's fidelity. The crowds are nothing but inquisitive people who follow all uncommon sights with the same eagerness; and, generally, they whom you take for the people's messengers of affection are nothing but needy wretches mastered by the police to make a show in your honor. ## DAIRY CREAMERY

CREAM SEPARATOR ON FARM.

A Few Objections Formulated Against Its Use.

One of the objections made to the farm separator is the first cost, but when we stop to figure on the profit there is in the investment, the cost is not worthy of much consideration, beside that they must be well made of the very best material and the best workmanship to run well and be durable at the high rate of speed at which they must run, says the Indiana Farmer.

Some creamery men object to the introduction of the farm separator at first and condemn them in a great many ways, but as a rule, they object to them because they do not care to make preparations for handling the cream or it generally comes in small quantities at first. It necessitates different apparatus for testing and more work for the comparatively small amount handled.

Again some object to the use of the farm separator on the claim that butter made from farm separators is not of as good quality as that made from whole milk. The cause of the poor butter is not in the use of the farm separator system but in the abuse in not taking proper care of the cream, not delivering the cream often enough, and not keeping the separator cleaned. Right here is where a great many short sighted separator agents have done a lot of harm to the system by claiming for their respective machines that it is unnecessary to wash them more than once a day, and sometimes not so frequently. If there is any milk utensil that needs washing it is the bowl of the separator. It gathers filth from the milk and holds it and if the milk is run through this bowl after it has stood for twelve hours; it will undoubtedly cause bad flavor.

New Insect Catcher.

A Texas farmer has introduced an insect catcher which is designed especially for destroying cotton-boll weevil and other destructive insects. The insects are first dislodged from the plants upon which they are found and then subjected to a bath of coal oil or other liquid. The shape of the casing is shown in the illustration. Above the bottom is a space for the coal oil. The sloping edges of the end walls serve as a proper opening for the admission of the insects, and the general shape of the device is such as to permit the insects to be readily caught when they drop from the bushes or other plants upon which they are found. It is intended to use a paddle to dislodge them from the plants. Above the liquid in the receptacle is a piece of lattice-work which is pivotedly connected to the bottom to allow of the removal of all dead insects. An adjustable handle is secured to the back of the receptacle and connected with a strap around the waist, so arranged as to be readily grasped by the operator.

How Renovated Butter is Made.

The process may be briefly outlined as follows, says the Farmer's Bulletin: Melting of the butter and settling of the curd and brine, skimming off of froth and scum, drawing off and discarding of the curd and brine, blowing of air through the molten fat to remove faulty odors, mixing of milk very thoroughly with the molten fat, rapid cooling and "granulating" of this mixture by running it into ice-cold water, draining and ripening of the granulated mass for a number of hours, salting and working out of the excess of milk, packing or making into prints. By this process, when used upon comparatively fresh raw material, butters of low grade are materially improved, the value are enhanced in short, a good thing is done. Here begins only when the renovated is sold for the genuine article, for they are not the same thing. While the fats in the two are practically the same chemically, the nitrogenous portions are not. Moreover, since the article known now and for ages past as "butter" is an article the last step in whose manufacture is the churning of cream, it is evident that the product of an elaborate subsequent process, a process entirely foreign to the manufacture of "butter," should be designated by a distinctive name.

Corn stalks applied to land will improve the physical condition of clay soils by developing a supply of humus. Otherwise they are of little value.

Useful in Summer.

A recent invention is a refrigerating box, as it might be called. It is an oval capsule of nickel-plated copper, about the size of a hen's egg, hollow and nearly filled with water. For use it is frozen, so that its contents become ice. If you have a glass of milk that is not cold enough, you do not like to put ice into it, because it will spoil the beverage, but if you have one of these boxes, you can drop it into the glass, and the milk will be cold and the box will not have spoiled the milk.

CRUDE STYLE OF DENTISTRY.

Modern Methods Date from the Sixteenth Century.

In a dental school in Boston, is a collection of hundreds of old dental instruments, the fathers, grandfathers and great-grandfathers of the instruments with which we are all more or less familiar in the hands of modern dentists. The ancient tools are more suggestive of wood carving than of dental operations, and a person uninitiated on the subject would handle the old "keys," as they were called, and guess almost any purpose in the world for them rather than the real one of wrenching a tooth out of a human jaw. One of the most ponderous of these instruments was made by an American blacksmith, little more than fifty years ago, and used by him to extract teeth—a curious commentary on the then general condition of a science that is now so widespread.

Less than a century ago there were only a hundred practicing dentists on this side of the water. There is reason to believe that the number of rough and ready surgeon dentists was much greater than we may have any idea of. The famous Aesculapian, patron of physicians, is said to have been the first tooth puller in Roman history and there are records also of the presence of dentists in Egypt more than 2300 years ago. How they worked, however, is one of the interesting secrets that remains kept, although it is known that they had some method of filling teeth and even used gold for that purpose. The first known mention of the toothpick was made during the first century of the Christian era—and so far as may now be judged, it very much resembled the little wooden instrument that modern politeness declares should never be used in public. There are also dentifrices—an "Arabian produce—brightener of the mouth," for example, which was evidently confined to comparatively few users.

Modern dentistry and modern dental instruments date only from the sixteenth century. The superstition of the Middle Ages evolved a host of charlatans, whose pictures may still occasionally be seen in the city prints and who charmed away toothache by forms of magic which show that the teeth of their patients could hardly have been in such very serious condition. From these charlatans the modern dentist has descended very much as the all-important scientist of to-day may be traced back directly to the ancient alchemist. Among other things they bought living teeth and transplanted them—a horrible instance of which in later times may be remembered by anyone who has read Victor Hugo's "Les Misérables."

One of the first printed books on dentistry was published about the middle of the sixteenth century in Paris. The book was called a "Brief and Compendious Colloquy on the structure of the Denture and the Wonderful Construction of the Mouth. With Many Remedies and Necessary Advice. Together With the Mode of Treating and Beautifying the Teeth," and ended with an engraving of St. Apollonia—the patron saint of dentistry because her martyrdom had included the extraction of her teeth. This one book embraced all that was then known of dentistry.

It was not until 1723 that Perri Fouchard, the most celebrated dental operator of the time in Paris, began to give the first dental chair, in which he sometimes performed the curious and practical hygienic operation of extracting a tooth, treating it for decay and then putting it back again—an operation that, however expeditiously performed, could never have been invariably successful, although it is still done in emergencies. One of the modern cases of dentistry, for example, comes in this category.

Inconsistent. The summer girl is willing quite proposals to exhort. Yet she wants to have very little and will not have less than.

"THERE'S A CURE FOR RHEUMATISM!"

Not the mere temporary relief that the old "remedies" gave, not the little help that the doctor's prescriptions give; but ABSOLUTE AND COMPLETE CURE. That is what Rheumacide does. Rheumatism is caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood. It is an internal disease and requires a strong and vigorous internal remedy that will cleanse the blood of all its germs and yet act through such natural methods that it builds up the entire system.

SWEEPS ALL POISONS OUT OF THE BLOOD.

CURES TO STAY CURED.

Different from any other remedy. The result of the latest scientific discoveries. At the same time it cures Rheumatism it sweeps out of the blood the germs of all other blood diseases, and cures Indigestion, Constipation, Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Troubles, La Grippe and Contagious Blood Poisons.

CURED AFTER 16 YEARS. Baltimore, Dec. 10th.

For 16 years I have suffered terribly with Rheumatism. I was treated by leading physicians but got no relief. Long since I despaired of ever being well again. But hearing of RHEUMACIDE, I decided to give it a trial. I have taken two bottles, and, thanks to this wonderful medicine, I now feel that I have gotten a "new lease on life." Every vestige of the disease has been driven from my system. MRS. LAURA D. GARDNER, 1301 James St., Baltimore.

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR THE FINE

BREAD AND PIES

MADE BY THE American Bread & Pie Co.

OF BALTIMORE.

The product of this famous bakery is now handled by nearly every retail grocery store in Salisbury, and is the only city goods delivered fresh every day. If your grocer does not handle it, insist on him getting it. You will have no other if you give it a trial.
Be sure and look for the label.

Under Your Thumb

Is to have it all your own way. It's about as when you order a suit of us. We build your suit, but you have it your way in buying. Any cloth you want to select we can supply. In your way, too, as to the price, as our range of prices is as great as our variety of suitings.

Now Is The Time To Buy.

THE CHAMBERLAIN REMEDY

Ready the Man, Chamberlain and St. Jacobs Oil.

All the organs have special definition. The first symptoms of a cold are a dry, loud cough, a profuse watery discharge from the nose, and
a thin, white coating on the tongue.
When Chamberlain's cough remedy is taken every hour on the first appearance of these symptoms, it counter-acts the effect of the cold and restores
the system to a healthy condition within a day or two. For sale by G.
L. Dickerson and G. Hearn.

A clergyman owing allegiance to the Church of England in Canada cannot hereafter solemnize the marriage of a divorced person as long as the other party to the divorce is living.

If The Baby Is Cutting Teeth.

Be sure and use that old and well-tried remedy, Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Wife's Vanity Secret.

The vanity of women often leads them to do curious things. There is a Fifth Avenue dentist who has a high class clientele, including a married woman of rare beauty and still young whose upper teeth are false.
They carry a gold filling, which further stimulates their character as the original set by being in evidence.

The woman's husband is entirely unaware that her teeth are false, and view-to keep him in ignorance of the fact. As accidents may occur to the false set, she keeps a duplicate of them at the dentist's. When, as occasionally happens, this takes place she files to the dentist in her automobile and effects the exchange.
So guarded is she that she will not have the extra set in the house where her husband might accidentally find them. They have been married twelve years and he is still in ignorance of the harmless secret she has guarded so scrupulously.

But suppose the secret were really important, or her future life should include one that was serious, what a school of dissimulation she would have been graduated from.

Care of Cut Glass.

Cut glass is sensitive to sudden changes of temperature. Do not hold the cut glass bowl that has had ice cream in it, under the hot water faucet. Do not take a piece of cut glass from a hot room into a cold one suddenly. Pieces of ice knocking against the sides of a punchbowl will sometimes cause it to crack. A block or piece of ice should be firmly anchored in the center of the bowl. To temper a cut-glass dish before filling it with ice cream, punch, etc., pour cold water into it, then a piece or two of ice, very small pieces. When the dish has been gradually chilled, put the ice cream into it. To clean cut glass wash with a mild soap and dry in sawdust, carefully brushing the crevices with a brush made for the purpose.

Clocks are now being made which speak the hours, instead of striking them, through an ingenious application of the phonograph. They are arranged to call out in various degrees of modulation, some loud enough to arouse the soundest sleeper.

The Very Best Remedy For Bowel Trouble.

Mr. M. F. Borrowage, an old and well known resident of Balton, Ind.,
says: "I regard Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as the very best remedy for bowel trouble. I make this statement after having used the remedy in my family for several years. I am never without it." This remedy is almost sure to be needed before the summer is over. Why not buy it now and be prepared for such an emergency? For sale by G. L. Dickerson and G.
Hearn.

A good home made barometer can be made with a piece of strong, fine cord with a weight suspended against a board. Moisture causes the cord to stretch, and when it dries the weight is lifted. By observing and marking height on board a good barometer is completed.

Unknown Friends.

There are many people who have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera
and Diarrhoea Remedy with splendid results, but who are unknown because they have hesitated about giving a testimonial of their experience for publication. These people, however,
are none the less friends of this remedy. They have done much toward making it a household word by their personal recommendations to friends and neighbor. It is a good medicine to have in the home and is widely known for its cures of diarrhoea and all forms of bowel trouble.
For sale by G. L. Dickerson and G.
Hearn.

BEST TIME TO GET WELL.

All Patients Can Be Driven Out Of The System Now.

Right now is the best season of the year to get rid of the blood, liver and kidney ailments that have been troubling you. You need building up now in order to stand the strain of
the hot weather of summer. Let Rheumatism, Scurvy, Gout, Catarrh, Indigestion or Constipation run through these months and they become chronic and hang on for years.

A regular course of Chamberlain's taken at the present time will thoroughly cleanse the blood, tone up the stomach, set the liver and kidneys to doing their normal work again, and will build up the entire system.

While it is the most wonderful blood purifier in the world, yet Chamberlain's is a purely vegetable preparation that operates through entirely natural methods. It has been tested on the delicate stomach of a baby without
the slightest harm.

Better get a bottle today and start to get well. Chamberlain's has cured hundreds of stubborn cases after all other remedies, noted physicians and even the great Johns Hopkins Hospital have failed. Chamberlain's has cured thousands of cases and we believe it will cure you. Your druggist sells it.

Rheumatism "gets at the joints from the inside" and "makes you well all over."

In Australia several kinds of snakes are eaten roasted. They are said to be equal in delicacy and flavor to the finest stewed eels. An English traveler declares the steam from the roasting reptiles is by no means unavory.

Cocaine which dulls the nerves never yet cured Nasal Catarrh. The heavy feeling in the forehead, the stuffed up sensation and the watery discharge from eyes and nose, along with all the other miseries attending the disease, are put to rout by Ely's Cream Balm. Smell, taste and hearing are restored, breathing is normal. Until you try this remedy you can form no idea of the good it will do you. Is applied directly to the sore spot. All druggists 50c. Mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

The increase of Christians in Japan during the year 1904 was about 10 per cent. In round numbers the Christians of Japan—Protestants, Roman Catholic and Greek—number about 14,500 church members, with a community of about 450,000.

To Mothers in This Town.

Children who are delicate, feverish and cross will get immediate relief from Mother Gray's Sweet Powders for children. They cleanse the stomach, act on the liver, making a sickly child strong and healthy. A certain cure for worms. Sold by all druggists, 25c. Sample Free. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

A PLEA.

Cook of oaks, before we part,
Say a moment ere you start!

Don't you think that it were best,
Just to give us one more rest?
Please consider ere you go!
Cook of oaks, we need you so!

Stay a week! We'll let you play
On the piano day by day.
Stay a month! We'll welcome all Your acquaintances that call!
Stay a year or two, for oh!
Cook of oaks, we need you so!

Stay! The parlor we'll give up;
With the family you shall sup!
Stay! and, if you chance to find Anything not to your mind—
You have but to let us know—
Cook of oaks, we need you so!

Stay! for we have tried a score
And we can't stand any more!
Take, oh take the blessed earth,
'Tis no more than you are worth.
Spate this culinary blow!
Cook of oaks, we need you so!

—La Touche Hancock, in Exchange.

IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS.

Don't Mistake The Cause Of Your Troubles.

A Salisbury Citizen Shows How To Care Them.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness. And so it is with all the other symptoms
of kidney disorders. That is just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they lead to diabetes of Bright's Disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kidney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys.
Salisbury people testify to permanent cures.

Wm. M. Gordy, carpenter residing corner of Ann and E. Church Streets, says: "I have had backache for several years, was sore in the morning when I got up and if I caught cold
it settled in my kidneys and caused my back to ache severely. I have been so bad that I could scarcely step down from one step to another, and when I arose from a chair I could not straighten for some time. I was having considerable pain in my back at the time I noticed Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and I got a box at White & Leonard's drug store. They acted directly on my kidneys and soon stopped the trouble. My son also took some of the remedy and
received good results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster—Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and
take no other.

Owing to the great demand for cream and milk in Mexico, American butter finds a good market, Kansas apparently being the principal source of supply. Arkansas also finds a market in the republic for some of her butter.

Impure blood runs you down—makes you an easy victim for organic diseases. Burdock Blood Bitters purifies the blood—cures the cause—builds you up.

"Doan's Ointment cured me of eczema that had annoyed me a long time. The cure was permanent."— Hon. S. W. Matthews, Commissioner
Labor Statistics, Augusta, Me.

Clark Russell, who may almost be credited with having created the sea novel, has about decided to stop writing. For years he has been an invalid, suffering severely from rheumatic afflictions.

Regulates the bowels, promotes easy, natural movements, cures constipation—Doan's Regulants. Ask your druggist for them. 25 cents a box.

MARDELA.

The unexpected has happened. Our farmers and truckers have shipped large quantities of strawberries from this station. Best of all, they have realized good prices. Other crops in these parts were apparently hopeless but the rain came in time to save some of them. The good Lord still proves to us that He will answer prayer. Many Christian hearts were going up to him in earnest pleadings for rain. Some Christian congregations met in their houses of worship to pray for rain and while they were praying the rain came, and they turned their meeting into a praise service. Men still believe in God.

The other night there was an interesting wedding in the Baptist parsonage. The contracting parties were Mr. Elmer Robinson and Miss Ada Bradley. Rev. B. G. Parker, officiated. After the ceremony was over, the young couple received the congratulations of those present, and then went on their way rejoicing. Many well wishes will follow them on their way.

Rev. E. P. Perry has been away from home for several days, but is expected back soon. Rev. Mr. Murphy supplied his pulpit last Sunday to the satisfaction of those who heard him. Mr. Murphy is a favorite in these parts. He is a good speaker and a down-right, out-right good man. No wonder, for he married a good woman and generally good women make the men good.

Some of our half grown boys have gotten a little bolder in their mischief making. They do not seem willing to stop at their fun making, but are willfully destroying property. They do not seem to realize the penalty at law for malicious mischief. Heretofore persons whose property has been destroyed have let the young culprits go, because they did not want to put the parents of these boys to any expense. But forbearance has ceased to be a virtue. The law will most certainly be resorted to. It has been whispered that there is no need of informing the parents, for they will get mad at the informer, and take the part of the boys, thus emboldening them in their acts of depredation. Parents who really do this, are themselves the law breakers. It is no excuse for them to say they do not know what their boys are about. They ought to know, and in the eyes of the law they are responsible for the doings of their boys. For the last two Sunday nights at each of the churches in town, the windows from the outside have been forced up while the ministers were preaching and tobacco smoke blown in, to the great annoyance of ladies seated near the windows. Complaints have been made of this offense and there are those who are laying for the offenders and if caught it will go hard with them.

Rev. B. G. Parker will deliver his third sermon in the series on the Book of Jonah, in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday night. The special subject is "A Hurried Court Scene on the High Sea, and its Verdict."

DELMAR.

The Delmar Base Ball Club met its first defeat on the Seaford grounds on Wednesday. Seaford scoring four runs by Delmar three. A number of Delmar players, among them several ladies, witnessed the game.

Painters are at work on the passenger station and other railroad buildings.

Mr. Norman L. Hayman has secured the appointment as mail carrier of R. P. D. No. 8, from Delmar vice D. B. White, deceased.

Rev. R. C. Penney will preach in the Missionary Baptist Church, Sunday, June 3rd. Services 10:30 a. m. and 8 p. m.

Much excitement has prevailed in the berry market for several days. Prices were good and many growers were ready to sell for a certain sum than take risk in shipping. The numerous buyers made the situation interesting.

Money To Put On Show.

Few people have an idea of the amount of money necessary to equip a first class moving picture show like that of the San Francisco horror which comes to the Opera House in Salisbury, Saturday, June 2. It is no exaggeration to say that this show cost more to equip than any dramatic company which has appeared here in some time. It must first be understood that the machine used in projecting these pictures is the finest which is made. It has to be. The operator is an expert electrician as well as operator. There is a big royalty on the pictures in addition to the cost of the films.

Practically a mile of films containing about fourteen pictures to a foot of film are necessary in order to give this show. These films were covered with pictures by operators of Miles Bros. of San Francisco who were on the ground when the calamity occurred and in taking them one man, James Scaroni nearly lost his life for he was taken for a looter while he carried a box of films out of a burning building to save them and was shot by a soldier. The films are therefore valuable and the firm which produced them is compelled to charge prices which would be usually prohibitive. The cost of this show in actual figures is about ten times that of an ordinary picture show. It is the greatest exhibition of modern times however and a triumph of photography. Spectators simply live amidst the exciting scenes of San Francisco for two and one half hours.

Notice.

There will be services, D. V., in Spring Hill Parish on Sunday next June 3rd, as follows: St. Paul's Church, Spring Hill, 10:30 a. m. St. Philip's Chapel, Quantico, 8:00 p. m. Franklin B. Adkins, Rector.

Amusements of the Blind. With closed eyes, two young men in the blind asylum were playing chess. The board they played on had the black squares raised and the white ones sunken, while the black pieces were rough and the white ones smooth.

"Give us this handicap on account of our blindness," said one of the young men, "and we will play as quick and accurate a game of chess as anybody. Give us checkers and a checker board constructed on the same plan, and there, too, our playing will equal yours."

"I would rather be blind than deaf," he went on. "Blindness doesn't rob you of much. The blind are excellent anglers. They play a good game of euchre, of poker, of bridge. They use cards that have embossed pips."

"The blind are good runners, good gymnasts. In our last sports the hundred yards were done in under twelve seconds, and on the horizontal and parallel bars the giant swing, the corkscrew, the straight arm balance and the finger balance were executed in a way that elicited salves of applause."

Walking for a Thousand Hours. The latest remarkable feat in walking has just been accomplished in Manchester. For forty-one days and nights William Buckler, aged fifty-six, an ex-sailor, tramped round the track at the Ardwick Athletic Ground, and completed his two miles fifty-eight yards each consecutive hour, the total distance traversed in the thousand hours being over 2,025 miles.—London Tit-Bits.

"Wild Silk" Is Best. It has been discovered that the wild silk worm produces a silk with more luster than does the pampered worm of captivity. Those who are up on silk culture claim that the tame worm has lost most of its power because it is taken care of so well.

PILOT OF THE CHARLESS DEEP.

By Henry Jerome Stockard.

Pilot of the charless deep, this is a sad and stark tale. In thy knowledge thou dost keep Every tale and rest and bar.

What vast tides see or prevail, What dead calm of central zone, These will hold thy certain sail Safe along the rift unknown.

Though forever sink astern The dumb capes of the Main Land, And where become never burn Straight thy craft to seaward stand—

Soon or late beyond the void Lights on friendly shores will gleam Where in heavy undestroyed Lives the soul's dear purer dream.

Motor Boat Racing.

The growth of interest in motor boating has now reached a point where there is obvious need of an organization to unite the motor boat owners of the entire country for the purpose of defense against hostile legislation, the framing of common sense and easily comprehended racing rules, the holding of authoritative championships, both national and sectional, the encouragement of cruising, the improvement of waterways, and in general the encouragement of the sport of motor boating and the promotion of good fellowship among motor boatmen.

No such organization now exists, and accordingly it is proposed to form one under the title of the American Motorboat Association and upon the following general lines.

The organization to consist of individual motorboat owners, who shall pay dues of $1 a year, with no initiation fee.

Sectional organizations to be formed wherever twenty five or more members unite for the purpose, these to take the names of adjacent waters, such as the Hudson River Division, Delaware River Division, etc. Each division to have entire control of both racing and cruising within its territory, under the general rules of the association. Each division to be officered by a commodore, vice and rear commodore, and a secretary, together with an executive board representing both local clubs and unattached members.

The general governing body of the association to consist of a commodore, vice and rear commodore, secretary and treasurer and a board of representatives from the various sectional organizations. The national board to have charge of all national championships, to pass upon all claimed records, decide disputed decisions of divisional boards, direct a campaign against proposed adverse legislation, and for improved waterways, obtain and disseminate information regarding cruising to establish official repair and gasoline stations, etc.—Philadelphia Ledger.

—WANTED—Boys and girls to take orders for a new Maryland song; liberal commission allowed. Send 10 cents for a sample copy to Local Editor, "Ledger Enterprise," Pocomoke City, Md.

—WANTED—Lady or gentleman of fair education to travel for firm of $250,000 capital. Salary $1,075 per year. Payable weekly. Expenses advanced. Address, George G. Olows, Salisbury, Md.

DIOCESE OF EASTON

In Annual Session At Easton. The Year's Work Shows Increase And Improvements In Many Parishes. Two New Churches.

A large congregation attended Christ Church, Easton, Tuesday morning when the convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church for the Diocese of Easton began its sessions.

The convention was called by Bishop William Forbes Adams, of the diocese, and was opened with morning prayer, after which Rev. A. J. Vandenberg, of Salisbury, preached the convention sermon. This was immediately followed by the celebration of the holy communion by Bishop Adams, assisted by Rev. James A. Mitchell, of Centerville, president of the standing committee of the diocese.

The Bishop reports that during the year there have been two new churches built and consecrated, one at Berlin, Worcester county, and the other at Millington, Kent county. He also reports that the two churches which were burned have been rebuilt and one of them is completed, paid for and ready to be consecrated. There have also been added during the year one rectory and two new parish houses, and valuable improvements have been made to the churches in Shrewsbury parish, Kent county, and South Elk parish, Cecil county. He reports that all the parishes in the diocese, with the exception of Angustine parish, Chesapeake City, have rectors and are in a good and flourishing condition.

Cambridge and Port Deposit both gave invitations for the convention of 1907, and that of Port Deposit was accepted.

Bishop Adams announced to the convention of the Diocese of Easton, Wednesday, that during the last year the Woman's Auxiliary of the church had collected for missions, $1,842.66; the Junior Auxiliary, which is composed of young ladies, $418.11, and the babies' branch which is composed of small girls, $128.36; making a grand total collected during the year for missions of $2,447.63, which was a substantial increase over the collections of last year in the diocese for the same cause.

Wednesday afternoon the delegates to the convention and friends of the Bishop were entertained from 4 to 6 o'clock at the Episcopal residence, corner of Goldsborough and Aurora streets. Many citizens of Easton and Talbot county, not members of the convention, called to pay their respects.

At the afternoon session the following officers and committees were elected:

Chancellor of the Diocese—Judge James Alfred Pearce, of Oshkottown. Registrar—Rev. William G. McCreedy, D. D., of Easton.

Treasurer of the Convention—William H. Adkins, of Easton.

Treasurer Board of Diocesan Missions—Col. Henry Hollyday, of Easton.

Treasurer Diocesan Clergy Relief Fund—Edward B. Hardcastle, of Easton.

Diocesan Agent for Appointment Plan—Rev. W. G. McCreedy, of Easton.

Board of Missions—Revs. E. R. Rich, W. G. McCreedy, of Easton; Thomas B. Barlow, of Cambridge; Col. Henry Hollyday and William Reddie.

Standing Committee for the Coming Year—Revs. James A. Mitchell, David Howard, William Scholer, W. Y. Beaven and W. G. McCreedy.

On Episcopal Residence—Francis G. Wrightson, Louis W. Trall and Pieston B. Spring, all of Easton.

The following trustees of the Episcopal Fund were elected, with Bishop Adams, president ex-officio: Judge William R. Martin, William H. Adkins, John T. Rathall, Col. Edward Lloyd, J. Harry Covington and Louis W. Trall. Of diocesan clergy relief—Rev. F. B. Adkins, M. T. Earle, Edward B. Hardcastle and T. Harbless Henry.

Of Trinity Cathedral, Easton—Judge William R. Martin, William Reddie, Charles S. Seymour, S. E. Whitman, Oliver P. Barton and Alexander Fontaine.

Board of Managers of the Trust Funds of the Diocese—Rev. W. Y. Beaven, S. E. Whitman, Judge William Martin and William Adkins.

Examining Chaplains—Revs. George F. Beaven, James A. Mitchell and W. Y. Beaven.

A bright chubby faced boy in a Canadian village dreams of the riches and pleasures of life in a large city. He has heard and read of such a place and longs to try his fortune.

The simple life of his forefathers has no charms for him. Not content to spend the years in a country village he must see the great world beyond. Never for an instant does he give up his cherished plans. A few years glide by; the boy is a youth; the day comes when he bids his loved ones goodbye, and as he looks for the last time upon the dear old home and the scenes of his childhood his eyes fill with tears. He bids his loved ones goodbye, and as he looks for the last time upon the dear old home and the scenes of his childhood his eyes fill with tears.

It is the holidays away from those we love that makes us sad in fancy we recall the jolly Christmas times. Ambition is a cruel master for it often separates us from those we love best, and not all who follow in her footsteps are favored. Some struggle on through long years worn and weary sometimes it is almost within the grasp. Again, like the Southern will-o-the-whip, we follow the light and presently it leaves us in darkness. It is alluring when once we taste its pleasure. Home ties, friends, and the sweetest joys of life are forgotten, akin as the wind that blows. It leads us on until life itself is weary and we long for rest. Like the great Napoleon on the island of St. Helena, when the star of his hope had faded, memories of home and loved ones filled his thoughts as he said, "My desire is that my ashes repose on the border of the river Seine among the people whom I love so well."

Flowers That Turn To Fish.

Facts as strange as fairy tales abound in the sciences. There is a flower for instance, that turns into a fish. That is one of the fairy like facts of science.

The flower in question is the stone lily, which grows to the size of a small tree in South American waters, though it is very small off more northern coasts. The stone lily is a marine flower; it lives under the sea, and that is a luck and convenient thing for the fish it ultimately becomes.

The fish it becomes is a starfish. There is a certain starfish born at the end of a tentacle, an actual plant tentacle, that is attached to a stone or rock in the sea. This plant grows, and its stony body acquires size and strength. Finally, when it is capable of taking care of itself, the blossom detaches from its plant stem and floats away—a flower no longer, but a fish.

This is the encrinurus, or stone lily, a fishplant with a pedigree that shames the proudest human pedigree, for distinct traces of it have been found in rocks a million years old.

DISFIGURING SKIN HUMOR

Impossible to Get Employment, as Face and Body Were Covered With Itching Sores—Scratched Till Flesh Was Raw—Spent Hundreds of Dollars on Doctors and Hospitals and Grew Worse

CURED BY CUTICURA IN FIVE WEEKS

"Since the year 1894 I have been troubled with a very bad case of eczema which I have spent hundreds of dollars trying to cure, and I went to the hospital, but they failed to cure me and it was getting worse all the time. Five weeks ago my wife bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap, and I am cured and well."

"It was impossible for me to get employment, as my face, head, and body were covered with it. The eczema first appeared on the top of my head, and it had worked all the way around down the back of my neck and around to my throat, down my body and around the hips. It itched so I would be obliged to scratch it, and the flesh was raw."

"I would first wash the affected parts with warm water and Cuticura Soap, and then apply Cuticura Ointment and let it remain on all night, and in the morning I would use Cuticura Soap. I am now all well, which all my friends can testify to, and I will be pleased to recommend the Cuticura Ointment to any and all persons who wish a speedy and permanent cure of skin diseases." Investigate Our Claims of Superiority

DIFFERENT AND BETTER—that is the keynote of our claims for the STEWART SPECIALIZED $15.00 SUITS FOR MEN.

We can easily PROVE our claims. If we could not substantiate all we say about their unusual excellence, it would be worse than folly to persistently call your attention to these clothes.

THE DIFFERENCE AND BETTERNESS OF OUR $15.00 SUITS does not depend on first prettiness, but on outside and inside quality features that afford SATISFACTION after months of hard service.

WE COULD SELL CLOTHES AT LESS, and they would have all the distinctive appearance when first tried on, but they would not STAND THE TEST. The tailor's hot iron gives poorly made clothes a temporary appearance of being well tailored, but the first rainstorm to which they are exposed will dispel it all.

THE STEWART SPECIALIZED $15.00 SUITS are made of selected and tested high-grade cloth, designed on correct and snappy lines and tailored with exacting thoroughness—all of which makes them an excellent investment. They are indisputably superior to the clothes generally sold at the price.

FARM AND GARDEN

CULTIVATING THE ONION.

Comparison of Open Ground Seeding and Transplanting.

The seed bed for onion should be mellow and the soil well pulverized. There should be sufficient moisture to insure germination. A cold, heavy, wet soil destroys the vitality of seeds and is not congenial to onions, says the Farmer's Bulletin. With all the conditions favorable about five pounds of seed will plant an acre. Twelve inches between rows is the most favorable distance to plant. After preparing the seed bed the land should be marked for the rows. Some prefer to plant and mark for the next row at the same time. This manner of working will usually prove unsatisfactory as it is extremely difficult to secure straight rows.

The seed drill should be a reliable dropper and must be run with a steady hand to secure even seeding. The best depth to plant will be determined by the character of the soil. Usually a half inch is about right.

Many growers who have practiced both seeding in the open ground and transplanting claim that about the same amount of labor necessary to thin plants to their proper distance.

Open Ground Seeding.

The sled runner construction after the fashion of the old corn marker is a good tool. The runners should be made about eighteen inches in length and spaced 12 inches from center to center, and the marking edges beveled to a V shape. These runners will mark two rows at a time by letting the third runner track with the last completed mark. The use of a garden line work a guide will start the first row straight. By walking backwards and pulling the marker by hand will secure perfect results.

The seed drill should be a reliable dropper and must be run with a steady hand to secure even seeding. The best depth to plant will be determined by the character of the soil. Usually a half inch is about right.

Many growers who have practiced both seeding in the open ground and transplanting claim that about the same amount of labor necessary to thin plants to their proper distance.

Transplanting.

by the first method will be required for transplanting.

Some of the advantages claimed for transplanting are, certainty of a full stand, earliness of maturing, uniformity of size, more perfect shape, and the ability to raise and mature the large foreign varieties which always bring best prices in the market.

Onions should be harvested early and cured while the weather is dry. In wet seasons sheds are provided with drying racks. Cool dry storage is necessary to favor the keeping qualities of bulbs. Unless the grower is well provided with storage capacity he will find early marketing most advantageous.

Melons in the Soil.

Experience and experiment have taught that when the soil is well stocked with water in the spring most plants will go through the season successfully without much irrigation. Especially is this true of all planted crops. In confirmation of this statement recall the success of arid farming as carried on all over the West. This method of farming depends almost wholly upon the success with which the soil may be stored with moisture before the opening of the hot season.

Of course, in spring the farmer must see to it that the top soil is not allowed to dry and thus lose moisture. Seeding, if done in the spring, should be early and in any case the top soil should be stirred as early as possible to form a mulch to prevent the escape of water.

Early cultivation can be given in the spring and rich harvests of fruit secured as a result of the husbanded moisture.

Time to Sow Clover.

The proper time to sow seed for a good stand of clover is early spring. Scatter 15 pounds to the acre, with soil in good order. The new or first bloom of clover when wet will blight the stock. The gases from the wet bloom cause the swelling. The bloom of the small or the white blossom will cause horses especially to slobber.

In 1905 Indiana raised 160,000,000 bushels of corn on 4,000,000 acres, an average of 40 bushels an acre.

THE MATRIMONIAL MARKET.

A German baron, who is also a partner in an international marriage, has written an article for a Cleveland paper asserting that foreign titles have a value in American money. Proclamation of this fact was hardly necessary, but in attempting to justify it the baron uses the parallel that a hawk horse can be had for a song, while a thoroughbred costs money; that cures can be picked up on the streets, but that pedigreed dogs command good prices. His father-in-law fairly reports that this is the only investment of the kind he ever made, and he has not received any dividends yet.

It was speculatively a purchase, just as the baron says one would buy a horse or a dog, not as an investment or with any hope of cash return, but simply for the pleasure of possession, or perhaps the hope of winning a prize at the horse show or dog show. It also suggests the idea, which is offered free of charge to New York society, that an exhibition of titled husbands would eclipse the horse show as a social event much as a searchlight would compare with a tallow dip. There ought to be some way for those who pay good American money for foreign titles to get some return.

PEDIGREED POULTRY.

"Pedigreed Poultry" at a dollar a pound is to be supplied by a Jersey corporation to exclusive New York tables, says the Chicago News. It is to be even a more carefully selected proposition than certified milk, because the certificate will cover the heredity strain of the product, as well as its environment. The certificate is to be in the form of a silver disk attached to the fowl, giving the facts of its ancestry, the particulars of its bringing up, its age, and so on. It is surmised that these high-priced birds are to be fed on cocoa, giving them a flavor of their own, as Florida hogs are fed on oranges, and canvas back ducks on celery. For most of us the ordinary barnyard fowl will continue to be a satisfactory medium. Roving wide, roosting high, subsisting on worms, grasshoppers, garden sass and wayside pebbles, he contrives to incorporate into his plebeian frame all the favored graces of the American home-steed. Fried, broiled or served with stuffing, he is good enough for us.

THE CHINESE AWAKENING.

Appropos of complaints against the Japanese for educating Chinese students, in order eventually to turn them against western civilization, Minister Takahira replies that the education of the Chinese is only encouraged in order to enable that country to take care of itself and develop its own resources.

That their education is going on very rapidly there can be no doubt. The two Chinese students who were being educated in Japan eight years ago, are now replaced by 3,441. They come from every every part of China, except remote Kan-Su; are, as a rule, somewhere between twenty and thirty years of age; although one of the present freshmen was sixty-four on his last birthday. There is a prosperous Chinese students' club in Tokio. They publish four periodicals, which are regularly distributed through China, by Japanese agents, and spread an anti-propaganda of "China for the Chinese."

Some of the students are sent by the imperial government, others by local authorities, and a few pay their own way. So much for the new education in China.

DIGGING FOR DIAMONDS.

The report that diamonds have been discovered in California is not accompanied by sufficient details to warrant a rash of fortune-seekers to the coast like that of 1849, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. The question is whether the deposits are of sufficient value to justify mining operations. Thus far this has not been the case in the country, the stones being found only occasionally in alluvial material and drift. The discovery of extensive diamond fields in the United States would be most appropriate, since this country leads the world in the purchase of brilliant stones. Geologists say there is no reason why diamonds should not be found in paying quantities in this country, but it would take a great many of them to equal in value even Pennsylvania's annual production of that more useful mineral popularly known as black diamonds.

GRAFT IN THE COLLEGES.

Another example of the influence of the overdone craze for college athletics is pointed out in some remarks of President H. C. Klay of Oberlin college at Mansfield. He said that "the spirit of graft which seems to have pervaded the country has made its way even into colleges and universities. How far this can be carried is indicated by a story which comes from a Western university of a young man who presented an expense account of a trip to arrange dates for a college organization, the fact being that he had not taken the trip at all but had made the arrangements by mail. When exposed he was nothing abashed, claiming that he was entitled by his position to the trip, but if he chose to forego that pleasure and commute the expense into cash it was the business of no one but himself."

DOMESTIC TRAITORS.

Wife desertion, the most despicable of social crimes, is declared to be on the increase in this country, says the Pittsburg Gazette. In Chicago alone it is said there are 14,000 women who have been deserted by their husbands and are struggling to make a living. According to a school superintendent, wife desertion is one of the principal causes of truancy. The education of the children is neglected and they become acquainted with vicious companions, eventually drifting into lives of crime.

Efforts are under way to increase the penalty for the offense and stimulate arrests and prosecutions. The husband who is faithless to his trust should be given punishment sufficiently severe to serve as a deterrent to others.

PASTURING BY ELECTRICITY.

Keeps Sheep Quiet and Results in Saving of Pasture.

A new way of pasturing sheep has come to light, good for the grass and good for the sheep—that is, pasturing them by electricity.

In recent years nearly every town of any size has been provided with an electric generating plant, and frequently the wires are strung along country roads from town to town.

This fact led Mr. McNair, the inventor of the machine, to attempt the use of electricity on the farm. For sheep feeding he devised a curious pen some 15 feet square, built of wire and mounted on broad, flat wheels. This pen is designed to run in any pasture, even though it be hilly. Wires connect with a small motor stationed at one side of the pasture; this in turn being connected with the electric wires from which power is derived. A turn of a button and the pen slowly creeps across the field. This is the essence of the invention.

Two lambs and part of the time an old ewe have been pastured in the pen during the summer at the station at Lansing, Mich. The field is planted in lucerne, growing thick and heavy. The pen is so arranged that it crawls the full length of the pasture in one month, traveling about two feet an hour; at the end of this time it is switched around and travels back again.

As it moves the sheep eat every bit of the fodder, eagerly cropping next the forward side of the pen as it runs over new ground. A bit of canvas duck is hung over one corner of the pen, so that the sheep may be well sheltered, and, curious as it may seem, they have become so accustomed to the moving of the pen that when they lie down to sleep they snuggle up close to the forward end of the pen, so that they may lie as long as possible without being disturbed by the rear end of the pen as it creeps toward them.

The advantage of this electrical pen is that the sheep are kept from running over, half eating and trampling down a large amount of pasture, and it keeps the sheep quiet, so that they take on flesh rapidly.

Feeding for Wool Production.

No special ration when fed to sheep will produce wool of great strength, nor can we say that any special feed is to be recommended to produce a large quantity of wool. It has often been observed that sheep and lambs which have been on full feed for long periods, shear heavy fleeces of wool. This would indicate that any ration calculated to keep the sheep in thrifty condition is suitable for growing large quantities of wool. Wool growers understand that it is highly desirable to provide proper nourishment throughout the year, permitting no periods of neglect to intervene to destroy the strength of the fibers of the fleece. Liberal and judicious feeding does not change the quality of wool, but it does affect the strength and the quantity produced by a given sheep. The weight of wool produced is naturally affected both by increasing the length of fiber and by increasing the amount of yolk and natural oil in the fleece.

Proper Stabling of Cows.

The Department of Agriculture received a report from the Illinois Experiment Station giving a statement of efforts made by that station to obtain information from practical dairymen of the results of allowing cows the freedom of a closed shed or covered barn yard instead of confining them in stables. The very favorable results reported by the dairymen led the station to put the method into actual operation in the University of Illinois.

Twenty-two cows were kept much cleaner than when stabled, the milking stable was in a more sanitary condition, and consequently it was easier to produce clean milk. The cows were believed to be more vigorous and healthy than when kept in the ordinary stable. The saving of labor and also of manure are other strong points advanced in favor of this practice.

Habit-forming Medicines.

Whatever may be the fact as to many of the so-called patent medicines containing injurious ingredients as broadly published in some journals of more or less influence, the fact is that there have been of great benefit in arousing needed attention to this subject. It has, in a considerable measure, resulted in the more intelligent people avoiding such foods and medicines as may be fairly suspected of containing the injurious ingredients. Recognizing this fact some time ago, Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., "took time by the forelock," as it were, and published broadcast all the ingredients which his popular medicines are composed. Thus he has completely forestalled all harping critics and all opposition that might otherwise be urged against his medicines, because they are now of known composition. Furthermore, from the formula printed on every bottle wrapper, it will be seen that these medicines contain no alcohol or other habit-forming drugs. Neither do they contain any narcotics or injurious agents, the ingredients being purely vegetable, extracted from the roots of medicinal plants found growing in the depths of our American forests and of well recognized curative virtues.

Instead of alcohol, which even in small portions long continued, as in obstinate cases of rheumatism, becomes highly objectionable from its tendency to produce a craving for stimulants, Dr. Pierce employs chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine, which of itself is a valuable remedy in many cases of chronic disease, being a superior demulcent, antiseptic, and purgative, and supporting nutritive. It is the curative action of the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherrubark and Bloodroot, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery," in all bronchial, throat and lung affections attended with severe coughs. As will be seen from the writings of the eminent Dr. J. C. Jackson, of New York; Marshall, of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia; Scudder, of Cincinnati; Ellingwood, of Chicago; Hale, of Chicago; and many who stand as leaders in their several schools of medicine, the foregoing again are the very best ingredients that Dr. Pierce could have chosen to make up his habit-forming medicines for the cure of all such ailments, throat and lung troubles, and all of chronic disease in all

NOTE—Mr. Cross has kindly consented to the publication of this letter. SEVERAL PERSONS WILL WRITE HIM, ENCLOSED A 2c STAMP FOR REPLY. This is the fastest and most valuable remedy ever given, combined as it does, a conservative and permanent habit.

HARRY W. CROSS &amp; Co. BANKERS 114 N. BROAD ST. CHICAGO, ILL., U. S. A. JOHN H. PHELPS, Scranton, Pa. LUIS BENTLEY, Telephone 3023 Main Street, Scranton, Pa. MAY 18TH, 1906.

Dear Sir: Night Caps were almost thrust upon me by a friend who evidently knew a thing or two. Shortly after the middle of last January I was in a state of almost complete nervous exhaustion, arising from excessive business effort, resulting in insomnia, sleep and mental depression. My physician for two months treated me. At a large expense, for nervous prostration, advised complete rest for an indefinite period. At that time a vacation was impossible. Fortunately for me, I was then introduced to Night Caps. (Enclosed I tried them.) One box had seemed to brace my nerves within a week I could sleep. With sleep came a return of normal health and I feel like myself again. I have recovered my normal vitality. You may be very sure that I have been very much benefited by them, particularly as an assistant in case of over-indulgence in tobacco. If, at any time, you should deem it wise, or to your advantage, to order more to me, I will be very glad to write you about it. I would suggest, however, that you do not trust to anyone else's word for the quality of the capsules. I have reason to believe that I feel most grateful for the capsules I have used. I would suggest, however, that you do not trust to anyone else's word for the quality of the capsules. I have reason to believe that I feel most grateful for the capsules I have used.

Very truly yours, HARRY W. CROSS.

WELL DONE, COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

The people of Wicomico County have good reason to congratulate themselves that the tax rate for this year as levied Tuesday is no higher than 85¢ cents on the $100. With the extraordinary expense that the Board of County Commissioners have had to contend with the past months and the flattering extension of good roads, it is indeed an evidence of financing capability that the rate does not exceed what it is.

Nowhere could money have been spent to better advantage than where it has—on the public highways—an investment, the returns of which will be hard to estimate even at present, and will appreciate more and more in the future.

WICOMICO HAS THE BEST OF MATERIAL.

The appointment of a successor of the late Sen. A. R. Gorman falls to the lot of Gov. Warfield. When looking over Maryland men who measure up to senatorial timber, we want to call his Honor's attention to Wicomico County. Ex-Gov. Jackson is too well known all over the state to need any comments from us. Whether or not the condition of his health, and his large business interests are such as to make the arduous duties of a senator possible for him or not, we are not prepared to state.

Then Wicomico has the Hon. James E. Ellegood, a man that in every respect measures up to the high office of United States Senator. Mr. Ellegood is one of the purest men in politics today, and has always been found fighting corruption wherever he could find it. A regular democrat all his life, devoted to the principles of his party, but fighting with all his might to clear it of all stains and taint of corruption. He is first a citizen and then a Democrat and has done more to purify elections on the Eastern Shore than all other men combined. The spirit of the day is in favor of cleaner men and purer politics, and no man in the state of Maryland can better comply with this spirit than Mr. Ellegood. Moreover he is a political clique. His appointment would meet with the approval of the entire Eastern Shore and we believe with the approval of the entire state, especially with all those who believe in clean honest men, as the servants of the people. He will challenge corruption in ability and honesty in every man in the state.

Gordy—Robinson.

Prof. Wade Hampton Gordy and Miss Daisy Twilley Robinson were married at Sharpsburg Thursday, June 24, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Robinson, by Rev. J. Barry Wilson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. James Adams and Miss Alice G. Robinson, cousins of the bride, received the guests. Mrs. Grace Calkins Brady officiated at the wedding march.

Miss Audrey Wimbrow gave a party Monday evening at the home of her uncle, Mr. L. W. Wimbrow, in honor of her sister, Miss Lillian Wimbrow, who was married to Mr. Charles D. Wimbrow, of Pittsville, Md., at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Robinson, by Rev. J. Barry Wilson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. James Adams and Miss Alice G. Robinson, cousins of the bride, received the guests. Mrs. Grace Calkins Brady officiated at the wedding march.

Among the Salisburyans at the White-Holland wedding at Powell's on Tuesday were Mrs. E. S. Holland, Mrs. O. B. Disharoon, Mrs. M. E. K. White, Dr. and Mrs. E. A. White, Dick, Misses Helen, Victoria, Edna, Misses Bolen, Ruth Gordy, Edna Adkins, Mrs. Sheppard and Mr. E. Dale Adkins.

IN WORCESTER COUNTY, VENEERING MACHINERY, ETC., ETC.

By virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Worcester County, sitting in equity, passed in a cause wherein J. Edward White and William H. White are plaintiffs, and J. Roscoe White and others are defendants, the same being a proceeding for the sale of the real estate of a certain Edward White, deceased, the undersigned trustees will sell a public sale to the highest bidder, at Court House, in the town of Snow Hill, Md., on Tuesday, June 26th,

1906, at 1.30 o'clock p. m., all the following real estate, to wit:

Valuable Snow Hill Building Lot.

FIRST: All that vacant lot lying and being situated on Bank and Green Streets, in the town of Snow Hill, Md., having a frontage of 110 feet on Bank Street and 121 1/2 feet on Green Street, and is the same real estate which was conveyed to the said Edward White, deceased, by Charles P. Trullitt and others, by deed dated the 19th day of December, in the year 1893, to a certain Mary E. Baham, by deed dated July 6th, 1905, and recorded among the land records of said county in Liber F. H. P. No. 4, folio 619 as by reference thereto will more fully appear. This valuable real estate is located in the business section of Snow Hill, and is suitable for business purposes. Immediate possession will be given.

A Desirable Snow Hill Residence.

SECOND: All that valuable house and lot situated on the west side of Hill Street, in the town of Snow Hill, at present occupied by Thomas Morgan, described as follows, to wit: Beginning on said Hill Street at the Northern corner of the lot conveyed by the heirs of the said Edward White to a certain Mary E. Baham, by deed dated July 6th, 1905, and recorded among the land records of said county in Liber F. H. P. No. 23, folio 248, and running from thence in a northerly direction by and with Hill Street, a distance of 25 feet; thence in a westerly direction in a line parallel to the north line of the said Baham property to the lot of Dr. John S. Aydelotte; thence by and with said line in a southerly direction to the Baham property aforesaid; thence by and with the Baham property aforesaid to the place of beginning. A right of way, 9 feet wide, is hereby reserved over the alley lying to the north of the Baham property aforesaid, for the use of the said Baham property, and specifically reserved in the said deed to the said Mary E. Baham.

The property referred to in this paragraph of the advertisement is a part of the same which was conveyed to the said Edward White in his life time by a certain Clayton J. Farrell and wife, by deed dated August 10th, 1898, and recorded among the land records of said county in Liber F. H. P. No. 4, folio 176.

A Commodious Snow Hill Dwelling.

THIRD: All that valuable house and lot situated on the corner of Hill and Market Streets, in the town of Snow Hill, Md., at present occupied by James B. Parnell, having a frontage on Hill Street of 100 feet, more or less, and on Market Street, 125 feet, more or less. This is also the remaining portion of the property conveyed to the said Edward White, by the said Clayton J. Farrell and wife, by deed above referred to. The office located on the property and occupied by C. Y. White, with privilege of removing the same within thirty days from day of sale, is hereby reserved. The purchasers of the property named in the second and third paragraphs hereof will receive rent from the same from July 1st, 1906, and will be required to pay the taxes on the same for the current year.

30 Acres of Land Near Libertytown.

FOURTH: All that tract or parcel of land lying and being situated on the east side of the county road leading from Newark to Libertytown, adjoining the property of Henry J. Dennis on the north, the property of Mrs. Savannah Bowen on the east, and the property of Elijah Foreman on the south, which was sold to the said Elijah Foreman by Edward White in his life time, but for which no deed has been executed, part to be sold hereunder containing 30 acres of land more or less, and is a portion of the real estate which was conveyed to the said Edward White in his life time by Albert Vale and wife, by deed dated November 24th, 1893, and recorded among the land records of said county in Liber L. E. M. No. 10, folio 85.

About Half A Million Feet of Pine Timber.

FIFTH: All that tract or parcel of land situated on both sides of the county road leading from Newark to Libertytown, the portion on the east side of said road being bounded on the north by the lands of the said Edward White, known as the Libertytown Farm, which was conveyed to the said Edward White by James S. Burdette and wife, in the year 1891, and on the east by the lands of Philip Timmons, on the west by the lands of Henry J. Dennis, on the south by the said Edward White, which was sold to the said Edward White in his life time; said portion being conveyed by him to the said Edward White, by deed dated February 27th, 1895, and recorded among the land records of said county in Liber F. H. P. No. 2, folio 182, excepting from the sale under this paragraph all the swamp land between the highland and the Pocomoke River, the right of way over the said land hereunder, being hereby reserved to the purchaser of the swamp aforesaid for the purpose of conveying timber from said swamp to the county road.

76 Acres of Timbered Swamp Land.

TENTH: All that tract or parcel of land in the Ninth Election District of Worcester County, being a part of what is known as Franklin Branch, adjoining the lands of the heirs of Wm. Shovel, heirs of Littleton P. Franklin and James P. Dickinson, lands, and is the same which was conveyed to the said Edward White in his life time by Ryda Shovel Bowman and husband, by deed dated September 28th, 1894, and recorded among the land records of said county in Liber F. H. P. No. 8, folio 152, containing 76 acres of land, more or less. All the white and black gum upon this tract down to ten inches, is hereby reserved, the same having been heretofore sold by the said Edward White in his life time to the Diamond Tray & Basket Company of Frankford, Delaware, and a privilege is hereby also reserved for the said Diamond Tray & Basket Company to enter upon said swamp land, on or before the 1st day of May in the year 1911, for the purpose of cutting and removing said timber.

40 Acres of Timbered Swamp Land.

ELEVENTH: All that tract or parcel of river swamp in the Ninth Election District of said county, on the east side of the Pocomoke River, adjoining the lands of Hargis Jones and Dr. Freney, and is the same which was conveyed to the said Edward White in his life time by Zadok P. Henry and wife, by deed dated October 18, 1897, and recorded among the land records of said county in Liber F. H. P. No. 10, folio 124, containing 40 acres of land more or less. All the white and black gum upon this tract down to ten inches is hereby reserved, the same having been heretofore sold to the said Edward White in his life time to the Diamond Tray & Basket Co., to enter upon the said lands till the seventh day of May in the year 1911, for the purpose of cutting and removing said timber.

81 Acres of Timbered Swamp Land.

TWELFTH: All those tracts or parcels of land situated in the Ninth Election District of said county on the east side of the Pocomoke River, one of which is known as "Grape Island," containing 40 acres of land more or less, and the other two known as "Confirmation," containing 41 acres, in all 81 acres more or less, and are commonly known as the George W. Smith land, and is the same which was conveyed to the said Edward White in his life time by Lewis L. Disickson, Jr., Trustee, and others, by deed dated October 13, 1897, and recorded among the land records of said county in Liber F. H. P. No. 10, folio 12, containing 81 acres of land more or less. All the white and black gum upon this tract down to ten inches, is hereby reserved, the same having been heretofore sold by the said Edward White in his life time to the Diamond Tray & Basket Co., of Frankford, Del., and a privilege is also hereby reserved for the said Diamond Tray & Basket Co., to enter upon the said land till the seventh day of May in the year 1911, for the purpose of cutting and removing said timber.

Four Valuable Tracts of Gum, Ash, Cypress & Maple, Containing Severan Million Feet

THIRTEENTH: All that valuable tract or parcel of land lying and being situated in the Fourth Election District of said county, situated on the east side of the Pocomoke River, adjoining the property of Dr. Charles P. Jones, Isaac W. Shockley and Abbott Chesapeake, and is the same which was conveyed to the said Edward White, deceased, by Charles P. Jones and others, by deed dated June 30th, 1896, and recorded among the land records of said county in Liber F. H. P. No. 1, folio 297, containing 100 acres of land, more or less. This tract of land is well set in gum, ash, cypress and pine.

176 Acres of Valuable Timber Lands.

FOURTEENTH: All that valuable tract of river swamp lying and being situated in Worcester and Wicomico Counties, and on the west side of the Pocomoke River, and extending from Newark, and running to the lands known as Duncan Lands, and being bounded on the west by the highlands of the heirs of Edward White and Albert Perdue, it being all the swamp land which was conveyed to the said Edward White at the time of his death, lying west of said river, and north of said road leading from Whitton to Newark, a portion of which was acquired by the said Edward White under the will of his grandfather, Henry White, and referred to in deed to Edward White from King V. White, perfecting an absolute title to the said Edward White in the same, and the same being a portion of the swamp land which was conveyed to the said Edward White in his life time by John T. Farrell and wife, by deed dated September 28, 1896, and recorded among the land records of Worcester and Wicomico Counties, aforesaid, containing 176 acres of land, more or less. This tract has large quantities of gum, cypress and ash. A right of way over the highlands adjoining this tract is reserved in perpetuity for the purpose of removing the timber from the lands herein referred to.

169 Acres of Valuable Timber Lands.

THE WARP OF A CONSCIENCE

By EVELYN MORRIS

Mrs. Josiah Hawkins stood at the kitchen stove with poked brow, peering into a sauce pan of boiling water, wherein two eggs bubbled merrily, all unconscious of the careworn face bending over them.

"Forty cents a dozen," she repeated softly. "I never remember a winter when eggs were so dear. It goes to my heart to boil them; it isn't right." She was a little woman with snow white hair, in striking contrast to her bright, brown eyes and general air of alertness. To a keen observer there were lines of self-repression about her mouth and at odd times a world of passion in the brown eyes. It was whispered that she was breaking her heart about her son Sammie, a better-looking fellow who lived in the city. If so, she never told it, but held a high head and spoke of "my son Sammie" with such an air as to command respect. In secret she deprived herself of the very necessities to send him an odd dollar, for his father, an elder in the church, had, literally speaking, washed his hands of him and bade him never pollute the home with his presence. Perhaps the elder was right, for, in truth, Sammie was a bad egg, but his mother never believed it, and thought his father unnecessarily harsh.

Mrs. Josiah had one vanity—she put her hair in crimpers every night to give it the natural soft wave which nature had denied it. In consequence, the neighbors thought her high-toned—they had no time for such vagaries. Outside, Ben, the Scotch cook, with his nose pressed against the frost-bound window of the porch, his hot breath thawing it, gazed wistfully in at the preparation of the morning meal, now and then giving vent to sharp little yelps, indicative of hunger. Beyond him the big gray barns loomed darkly against a background of white and a giant pine, gleaming with icicles, alone a thing of beauty in the morning sunlight.

Mrs. Josiah lifted on a chair and placed them on the table, on the top of the stove. She proceeded to take the crimpers out of her hair before a small patch of looking glass, perched for convenience above the sink, and she presented herself to Miss Sophy Teddington, the new school teacher, her latest boarder, whom Providence had thrown in her way.

"Well, I declare," she cried, as a shadow passed the looking glass, "if that's not Mrs. Henry peering in! I expect she's most mad at me getting the teacher." She turned sharply around and looked toward the gate. A round figure, muffled in a woollen shawl, was approaching the house. The path from the gate was white with frozen snow and so slippery that the newcomer had difficulty in maintaining her footing, consequently her progress was slow. From her vantage point the little woman watched her. "I guess she's come to try round. Most like she can't understand how I got Miss Teddington, and I'm not likely to inform her. Five dollars a week, not speaking of the cost of the buggy when she sees a visit, is something of a windfall, especially when you're not expected it. I never thought Miss Teddington would mistake my house for Mrs. Henry's. It was just the Lord sent her, particularly when I wanted the money so badly. I was most surprised when she took the parlor bedroom. I'll be able to send Sammie the money; poor boy, he wants it badly." The lines about her mouth took a softer curve and her eyes looked less metallic in their brightness.

"Good mornin', Eliza," said a soft voice.

Mrs. Josiah, with a feigned little start of surprise, turned around. "Lan! make Mrs. Henry how frightened me. It's dreadful cold this mornin'. Sit down and I will put some more covers of wood in the stove."

Mrs. Henry Hawkins was a feisty woman, about 60 years old. Her face was yellow and lined with wrinkles, and when she threw back her woolen hood side streaks of gray hair were revealed, drawn tightly back into a scanty topknot, but the eyes that twinkled beneath the bushy black brows were so full of the light of human kindness and so fraught with humor and the wide-lipped mouth was so benevolent that the homeliness of her countenance was forgotten.

"You're out early this mornin' Susan," said Mrs. Josiah. Her voice had an inquiring ring in it. "Is Henry keepin' well?"

"Henry's fast rate," said the newcomer, as she settled herself comfortably in a rocker, while Mrs. Josiah busied herself about the stove, now and again glancing surreptitiously at her visitor.

"I hear you're a new boarder," said Mrs. Henry, her gaze involuntarily resting on the eggs. "My, but you are lucky, Eliza! How many hens are laying? Mine stopped a fortnight ago; and there's Henry, he's a dreadful fond of eggs. I hear they are fifty cents in New York. Is Miss Teddington the name of the new teacher? If so, I have a letter for her. I guess by the writing it is from Mrs. Manning, who stopped with me last term." She unfolded her shawl as she spoke and in a voluminous skirt searched valiantly for her pocketbook.

Mrs. Josiah's lips took a greenish tinge. She turned her back to her visitor to hide her agitation. In fact, she saw herself bereft of her boarder, Miss Manning's letter would surely enlighten Mrs. Teddington as to the white-haired old woman's real name, and she would be able to tell her that Sammie was a bad egg, and that his father was right.

She whipped up the gray and went quickly from the kitchen.

In the meantime Miss Sophy Teddington, all unconscious of the little drama in which she was the center-piece, stood at the window overlooking the breakfast table and stared disconsolately over the more covered fields and wished for the thousandth time that she had never left the delicious clamor and exhilarating atmosphere of New York. The tedious monotony of her surroundings sickened her. She had no love for country life; it was only an exceptional inducement in the way of salary that led her to settle for the winter in the little out of the way place in Long Island, fifty miles from New York. As Mrs. Josiah entered the room she turned round, a discontented look on her bright face. "Any mail?" she inquired eagerly.

There was a catching in Mrs. Josiah's throat, which also verged on to the semblance of a cough. "No, Miss Teddington; we're never sure of mail here. I have been expecting a letter from my son Sammie for the past week, the last I had from him was made me terrible uneasy; he tells me he has chills and fever. It's high time there was an improvement in the mail delivery. The country people should be as well attended as the city folk. Josiah generally stops at the postoffice when passing that way and brings mine and the Weekly Methodist; I've been a subscriber to it for the past seven years."

"How far is it to the postoffice?" inquired Miss Teddington. "I am very anxious about a letter I was expecting. It was not too far." She hesitated.

"The road's in a dreadful state," said Mrs. Josiah hastily. "What with the snow knee deep in some parts and the road not been tracked it wouldn't be safe. Besides, it's a good two miles to the store; in the summer it's a pleasant walk, but in the winter—"

"Don't think of it, Miss Teddington," said Mrs. Josiah, earnestly. She left the room as she spoke.

"My, you do look bad, Eliza; are you ill?" said Mrs. Henry, when Mrs. Josiah returned to the kitchen. "I hope you're not going to take the grip; it's dreadful prevalent. Robbie Duncan brought it into the school and it has come over most of the scholars."

"I do not feel a bit chilly," said Mrs. Josiah, her eyes resting on the letter, which lay, Nemesis-like, on Mrs. Henry's lap. She looked at the clock. In another five minutes Miss Teddington would pass through the kitchen and the two women would meet. If she could only have Mrs. Henry's departure. A bright inspiration struck her. "Are you going to the store this mornin', Susan?"

"Well, I was thinkin' of it," acknowledged her visitor. "Do you want anythin'?"

"Hush," said Mrs. Josiah, emphatically. "You see, I didn't see my mailin' done last week, and it has left me a bit behind. I particularly want some tea for Miss Teddington's luncheon."

"I'll just go and hitch up the buggy," said Mrs. Henry good naturedly. "It's all the same to me to go now, or an hour later." She rose to her feet.

"Thank you, Susan; it ain't very hospitable to drive you out, and you just in. I'll give the letter to Miss Teddington."

She opened the porch door, and in her eagerness to see the check of her visitor fairly pushed her forward. It was none too soon. A sound of footsteps warned her that Miss Teddington was approaching. Hastily concealing the letter in her pocket she busied herself about her pots and pans.

"Mrs. Hawkins, if your husband would drive over to the store I would feel more satisfied," said Miss Teddington abruptly. "I am very anxious about my letter. I am sure it is there; I gave the correct address, care of Mrs. Henry Hawkins."

Now or never was the time for Mrs. Josiah to make a clean breast of it, without losing her self-respect. It would be so easy to say, "You have made a mistake, Miss Teddington; I am Mrs. Josiah, not Mrs. Henry." But no; the first wrong step had left a deep furrow, and the ground thus trampled on was hard to make smooth.

"I'll tell Josiah soon," she came in to hitch up the mare. "I saw 'em tinkerin' 'bout the barn 'while ago. I'll call him to go right away."

"Thank you," said Sophia Teddington, gratefully. "If he would just leave it at the school when passing I could read it at lunch time."

Mrs. Josiah heaved a sigh of relief as she watched the light, springy figure of her boarder disappear to her daily occupation. She slipped the letter from her pocket, gazing long and earnestly at the address, then with a sudden movement threw it into the crackling wood fire, watching it until it became a heap of feathery ashes.

"For Sammie's sake," she murmured with quivering lips.

A sudden change passed over her face; it became drawn and haggard. "What have I done?" she thought, affrightedly. "Gotten a letter and burned it." Visions of Uncle Sam passed before her as in a mirror she saw herself before a jury charged with stealing United States mail. It was no joke, then, last week that a carrier was sentenced to several years' imprisonment for just such an offense. A look of terror crept into her eyes; she glanced around like a hunted thing. What if the letter were traced? Mrs. Henry would swear that she had delivered it safely into her hands. She felt like fleeing to the far ends of the earth. "This conscience makes cowards of us all."

In the meantime Miss Teddington waited patiently the advent of Josiah with the letter. Every time the sound of wheels came on the silliness she would retreat to the window, only to be disappointed. (To be continued.)

turn homeward without her letter. The truth was she expected a check in it, and wanted the money badly; first, to pay Mrs. Josiah her week's board, and secondly, to pay her bills. She knew that thought of having to ask her husband to wait, but there was nothing else for it if the letter did not come. It was an awkward predicament to be in. She was a stranger in a strange country and had no one to help her out of her dilemma. It was not a very pleasant frame of mind she re-entered the farm house. A glance at her husband's face told her the important message had not arrived.

"I sent Josiah to the postoffice, but there was no mail for you," said Mrs. Josiah glibly. "I'm sorry."

"I should not mind it so much," said the young lady gaily. "Only I expected a check."

Mrs. Josiah clutched at the table for support. Her head swam. A check in the letter! Good God! and she had burned it.

All unconscious of the effect of her words, Miss Teddington continued. "To be candid with you, Mrs. Hawkins, I cannot pay you until it comes. Are you ill?" she cried, catching a glimpse of the sickly pallor of her visitor's face. "I hope you do not feel the want of money so badly; if I thought so why I would send a dispatch."

"No, don't," cried Mrs. Josiah, quickly. "There is nothing the matter with me; only a sudden pain at my heart."

She leaned for support against the table. Inevitable ruin stared her in the face. Should she throw herself on Miss Teddington's mercy, confessing what she had done, or leave it to Providence? It was her first great temptation, and she succumbed. She saw herself disgraced, branded as a thief—the who had been held up in a model of rectitude in the neighborhood—and poor Josiah would be dragged down along with her. She shrieked aloud at the vision that floated mentally before her.

"Mrs. Josiah!" cried Miss Teddington in alarm. "are you ill; tell me what I can do to relieve you." She stared helplessly around the kitchen for some means to alleviate the woman's suffering. As if in answer to her unspoken appeal she saw the figure of a man approaching with a bag slung over his shoulder. She beckoned wildly at him to listen.

"Who is it?" said Mrs. Josiah, her senses all on the alert despite her sufferings, and she raised a miserable white face toward the porch. "Why," she murmured faintly, "it's Jimmie, the mail carrier, who sometimes brings special deliveries."

"Oh! perhaps he has my letter!" cried Miss Teddington, a note of relief in her voice. "And you will get your money."

Mrs. Josiah groaned, hiding her face in her apron.

"Mornin', Mrs. Hawkins," said the newcomer. "I've got a special mail for you, or someone stoppin' with you."

Miss Teddington in her eagerness almost snatched the letter from the man's hand. "It is for me!" she cried delightedly, while Mrs. Josiah stood looking at her, picture of dumb misery.

To watch Miss Teddington's face as she read her letter was a study; joy succeeded amazement and incredulity. "Mrs. Hawkins," she cried excitedly, "here it is!" She waved triumphantly aloft a slip of paper. "What do you think, my friend Miss Manning thought she mailed it in a letter she wrote me two days ago, which I have not received as yet; and now she sends me a registered letter, enclosing the check."

"Thank God," said Mrs. Josiah, fervently.

Only a narrow alley separates the press rooms of two of the afternoon papers of Chicago. Both go to press at the same hour. When the warm copies of the three o'clock edition of one paper come forth, a copy is taken at once to the city editor of the other paper, who scans it closely, to catch for his own later edition anything he may have missed. Meanwhile a similar scene is enacted across the alley.

One afternoon, as the city editor of one of the papers sat at his desk, a young man walked briskly in and addressed him.

"City editor?" he asked.

The editor nodded.

"I'm from the Mail," said the young man. "Mr. Smith sent me over to see what you had that we haven't got about that school story."

The city editor sat aghast. "Hey! What?" he stammered. "Say that again, young man."

"Mr. Smith wants to know what you've got about that school story that we haven't."

"Say—here—get out, you!" exploded the city editor. "I don't know who you are, but get out of my office!" Then taking down his telephone and calling up his rival across the alley, he asked:

"Say, Smith, who did you send over here?"

"I didn't send anybody over. Why?"

The editor of the Newsletter related the incident.

"What did he look like? Oh, I say, here, I know. That was my 'wild man,' I hired him yesterday. It's his first job, I told him to 'look in the Newsletter, and see what they'd got on the school story that we hadn't.' He looked in, did he?"

There was a roar of laughter in both offices, but it was turned to the "wild man's" side when the managing editor who heard the story, declared that a man who went ahead when he thought he was right, was worth a higher salary.

The City Editor, who is mentioned in the above story, is not the same as the one mentioned in the above story.

The Atonement

Remington tossed his cigar stub into the grate, and lighted a cigarette.

"I don't know why I am telling you all this," he observed. "I was always one to contend against confidences."

He looked at me in a half-quintessential, half-tentative way, as though unconsciously pleading for encouragement.

I waited a second before I spoke. "And I am at a loss to understand why you haven't told me before, considering what good friends we've always been."

I regarded him almost hopelessly. I had never seen a fellow change so. Up to the time of his marriage, five or six years before, he was the jolliest, most open-hearted, ingenious fellow I had ever known. The wedding took place in Ireland, and to an Irish girl, she was reputed to be beautiful, and as good as she was beautiful. They lived together just three months. After the separation Remington was never the same.

No one ever knew the real cause of the rupture. Neither vouchsafed any explanation, and the public was too wise, for once, to invent one. When he came back home everything he said to me was:

"Don't ask me any questions. Tom, I loved her—and I'm a broken hearted man."

To me, for the first time he had given me his confidence.

"She was young—very young, I didn't give her a chance—not even half a chance. I don't believe she was guilty, after all! He broke out suddenly."

I looked at him closely. The expression on his face showed me that he had suffered, and would continue to suffer as few men do.

"I can almost believe that you are still in love with the woman," I reflected, after a silence.

Remington, too, was silent for a time.

"At least," he remarked finally, "I shall never care for any other."

"Yet you divorced her," I observed, curiously.

"My entire course was marked out by impulse—fierce, passionate. Had I loved her less, things might have been different."

As he spoke, he pulled out his watch, and started with a little gesture of surprise.

"You mustn't think of leaving without seeing my wife," I objected, laying a protesting hand on his arm. "I want you to meet her; I want you to see what admirable taste I have in selecting a companion. We've been married just one year, and I think I can truthfully say that she has proven my ideal of a perfect woman."

Remington smiled and passed a reflective hand across his forehead.

We smoked away in silence for several minutes, and presently the door opened and my wife softly entered the room.

She wore a dinner gown of pretty pale yellow stuff that fell about her in graceful scallops and made a faint musical swish as she moved.

As she came further into the light toward us, Remington stood up and

My wife had left the room to give some order about the dinner, and Remington turned to me with an abrupt excuse for leaving.

"You will make my apologies to your wife, old man! I'm positively ill—to tell you the truth, I'm positively ill. I've been feeling knocked out all day, and wouldn't give in. When I feel better, I shall be glad to drop in on you both at some future time."

Several months after leaving London, Remington wrote the following letter:

"Dear Old Tom—I do not need to remind you of the conversation we had on that last night at your house. Do you remember all I told you about her? You will recall that I was more than half inclined to condemn my own action all the way through. Well, since then certain facts have come to my knowledge establishing her complete innocence, beyond the question of a doubt."

"God! how I've suffered! But it is too late now for me to make any reparation. She is married again—married to one of the finest fellows I know."

"If you should ever chance to run across her, I want you to remember that she is innocent."

"Innocent yours,"

"Remington."

"And my wife, with her pretty dress, her hair, her eyes, her smile, her voice, her—"

My Dear Sir:

I am in receipt of your letter of the 14th enclosing a statement and asking me to exercise the options given me under my policy.

I have a heavy insurance and the annual premiums are considerable, and for this reason I believe I will accept the second proposition, yet I am somewhat uncertain as to what to do and would really like to hear from you before determining, getting your view of it.

I have policies in a number of different companies. This is the last one that I took out and in my opinion is the best policy that I have, therefore, as a matter of course, I must be pleased with it. After insuring for fifteen or more years, it is to be supposed that one may learn something as to how to insure, therefore the fact of the last being the best may in some degree depend upon this.

Upon hearing from you, if you desire me to write a separate letter expressing my satisfaction, I will do so with pleasure. I have $12,000 on my life and only wish that all of it was as satisfactory as this.

Yours truly,

A CRITICAL PERIOD

INTELLIGENT WOMEN PREPARE

Dangers and Pain of This Critical Period Avoided by the Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many women realize that the most critical period in a woman's existence is the change of life, and that the anxiety felt by women at this time draws near is not without reason?

If her system is in a deranged condition, or she is predisposed to apoplexy or congestion of any organ, it is at this time likely to become active and, with a host of nervous irritations, make life a burden.

At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more likely to begin their destructive work. Such warning symptoms as a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, dizziness, headache, dreading of impending evil, sounds in the ears, timidity, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period of life when woman's great change may be expected.

We believe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the world's greatest remedy for women at this trying period.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism, and builds up the weakened system as no other medicine can.

Mrs. A. E. G. Hyland, of Chester town, Md., in a letter to Mrs. Pinkham, says:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had been suffering with a displacement for years and was passing through the change of life. I had a good deal of soreness, dizzy spells, headaches, and was very nervous. I wrote you for advice and commenced treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as you directed, and I am happy to say that all those distressing symptoms left me, and I have passed safely through the change of life a well woman."

For special advice regarding this important period women are invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. She is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years has been advising sick women free of charge. Her advice is free and always helpful to ailing women.

One advantage of such a canteen is that it cannot possibly leak. A second is that it is clean. When the receptacle of tinned iron has begun to lose its coating of tin it is not easily kept clean. The same remark applies, of course, to other articles of the same material which go to make up the soldier's "mess kit."

The all important point, however, is its lightness. Five thousand aluminum cups have just been ordered, as a first batch for our troops, to take the place of the tinned iron ones now in use. They will have iron handles, however, because that metal does not retain its heat so long as aluminum.

To the latter this has been an important objection, inasmuch as the soldier does not want to burn his fingers at meals. There is still a question whether the cup when filled with coffee will not be too hot to drink out of, but hope is entertained that such will not prove to be the case.

The soldier's life is to have an aluminum handle, but his fork and spoon are to be made, as at present, of steel, because of the superior strength of that metal. As for the all important "mess kit"—a small frying pan in which the man in khaki cooks his bacon—it is also to be of aluminum.

The cover of the mess kit serves as a plate, and its handle turns down over the cover, gripping the edge of the pan and making it tight as a receptacle for ready cooked provisions.

It is obvious that for such a small aluminum, which is not affected by acids, possesses exceptional advantages.

In studying out the problem of lessening the soldier's load the War Department has collected many data in regard to the equipments of the fighting men of foreign armies. As might be expected, there are many and marked differences in such matters, so far as details are concerned, though the essentials are much alike. Thus, for example, in every army the soldier carries a canteen, but in England the indispensable water bottle is of glass, in Italy it is of wood, and in Spain it is of goatskin. In our army, again, there is little individual cooking, but in Europe each soldier commonly prepares his own meals, carrying on that account a much bulkier and more elaborate culinary outfit.

During our civil war each soldier carried forty rounds of ammunition, but, thanks to the development of the rifle, the soldier of today carries one hundred cartridges in his belt. In other words, his reduction in the size of the bullet and in the quantity of powder to throw it gives him more than twice the killing power that he had a generation ago.

Our soldiers, like those of most of the armies of Europe, are provided with stockings. In France, however, the men in the field are obliged to furnish their own stockings. If they choose to wear any, and the same is true of the Italians and Russians, who are supplied with pieces of linen to cover their feet. The Germans have stockings, but carry foot linen to supplement them.

Toilet necessities, including brush, comb and piece of soap, are provided in European armies, but not in our own. The American soldier being expected to buy them for himself. The French soldier has a towel in peace, but no towel at war, while the German has no towel at any time. Other European nations supply their men with towels at all times, taking it for granted that they will want themselves at least occasionally, and considering that in large assemblages of men the elementary rules of hygiene ought to be most carefully observed.

Origin of Prepaid Letters.

The idea of a prepaid envelope originated in France early in the reign of Louis XIV., with M. de Valper, who, in 1663, established, under royal consent, a private penny post, placing boxes at the corners of the streets for the reception of letters wrapped in envelopes, bought at offices established for that purpose.

Drinking Between Meals.

If we do not wreck, we disturb the process of digestion by drinking alcohol and other beverages between our meals. Nothing can be worse than the introduction of alcohol into the stomach—not at the time of taking food, but when the digestive juices have been at work. The practice is an utter discouragement and demoralization to nature, which merely wants a chance to do her duty without impudent interference.

Guard Against Evil.

As evil laws are slain in us, by the power of the Lord in his Word, his power also abundantly to bless them will appear. Does he not tell us: "Blessed are they that have the word of God, and keep it" (John 14:23).

THE SOLDIER'S PACK

Governments Test to Economize Size and Weight.

THE ALUMINUM CANTEEN.

Pack of Other Countries Compared to Ours—The English Water Bottle is of Glass—During the Civil War Each Soldier Carried 40 Pounds of Ammunition.

With a view of lightening the "pack" carried by soldiers, the War Department has been making a study of the loads borne in the field by the fighting men of foreign armies. It has decided to adopt certain expedients for cutting down the weight of the burden which our boys in khaki during a campaign are obliged to transport. By this means their effectiveness will be augmented, inasmuch as the troops will be rendered more mobile—a most important point where military operations are concerned.

To begin, the canteen, which today is of tinned iron, is to be made of aluminum. The latter metal weighs only about one-fourth as much as iron. But it was necessary that the water vessel should be moulded in one piece, without seam or joining, and this problem for a while presented difficulties which bade fair to prove insurmountable.

One advantage of such a canteen is that it cannot possibly leak. A second is that it is clean. When the receptacle of tinned iron has begun to lose its coating of tin it is not easily kept clean. The same remark applies, of course, to other articles of the same material which go to make up the soldier's "mess kit."

The all important point, however, is its lightness. Five thousand aluminum cups have just been ordered, as a first batch for our troops, to take the place of the tinned iron ones now in use. They will have iron handles, however, because that metal does not retain its heat so long as aluminum.

To the latter this has been an important objection, inasmuch as the soldier does not want to burn his fingers at meals. There is still a question whether the cup when filled with coffee will not be too hot to drink out of, but hope is entertained that such will not prove to be the case.

The soldier's life is to have an aluminum handle, but his fork and spoon are to be made, as at present, of steel, because of the superior strength of that metal. As for the all important "mess kit"—a small frying pan in which the man in khaki cooks his bacon—it is also to be of aluminum.

The cover of the mess kit serves as a plate, and its handle turns down over the cover, gripping the edge of the pan and making it tight as a receptacle for ready cooked provisions.

It is obvious that for such a small aluminum, which is not affected by acids, possesses exceptional advantages.

In studying out the problem of lessening the soldier's load the War Department has collected many data in regard to the equipments of the fighting men of foreign armies. As might be expected, there are many and marked differences in such matters, so far as details are concerned, though the essentials are much alike. Thus, for example, in every army the soldier carries a canteen, but in England the indispensable water bottle is of glass, in Italy it is of wood, and in Spain it is of goatskin. In our army, again, there is little individual cooking, but in Europe each soldier commonly prepares his own meals, carrying on that account a much bulkier and more elaborate culinary outfit.

During our civil war each soldier carried forty rounds of ammunition, but, thanks to the development of the rifle, the soldier of today carries one hundred cartridges in his belt. In other words, his reduction in the size of the bullet and in the quantity of powder to throw it gives him more than twice the killing power that he had a generation ago.

Our soldiers, like those of most of the armies of Europe, are provided with stockings. In France, however, the men in the field are obliged to furnish their own stockings. If they choose to wear any, and the same is true of the Italians and Russians, who are supplied with pieces of linen to cover their feet. The Germans have stockings, but carry foot linen to supplement them.

Toilet necessities, including brush, comb and piece of soap, are provided in European armies, but not in our own. The American soldier being expected to buy them for himself. The French soldier has a towel in peace, but no towel at war, while the German has no towel at any time. Other European nations supply their men with towels at all times, taking it for granted that they will want themselves at least occasionally, and considering that in large assemblages of men the elementary rules of hygiene ought to be most carefully observed.

Origin of Prepaid Letters.

The idea of a prepaid envelope originated in France early in the reign of Louis XIV., with M. de Valper, who, in 1663, established, under royal consent, a private penny post, placing boxes at the corners of the streets for the reception of letters wrapped in envelopes, bought at offices established for that purpose.

Drinking Between Meals.

If we do not wreck, we disturb the process of digestion by drinking alcohol and other beverages between our meals. Nothing can be worse than the introduction of alcohol into the stomach—not at the time of taking food, but when the digestive juices have been at work. The practice is an utter discouragement and demoralization to nature, which merely wants a chance to do her duty without impudent interference.

Guard Against Evil.

As evil laws are slain in us, by the power of the Lord in his Word, his power also abundantly to bless them will appear. Does he not tell us: "Blessed are they that have the word of God, and keep it" (John 14:23).

CIVIL RIGHTS COURTESY.

A Victory for Temperance in Waterloo, Iowa.

The city of Waterloo, Iowa, has just passed through the most notable fight for righteousness in its history. Two months ago the promoters of a brewery began the circulation of a petition of consent. Those who were opposed to it, acting under the direction of the Citizens' League and the ministers of the city, began a systematic campaign to defeat the measure. Personal letters were sent; petitions of remonstrance were circulated and nearly every block of the city canvassed by faithful women; a mass-meeting was called and a challenge sent to the promoters to enter a joint discussion and give reason why the citizens should support the proposed institution. No one appeared to represent the brewery, the ministers swept away every vestige of argument that had been made for it and from that time it has had no public advocates.

While forced to contend with the base methods used by the liquor element, with the entire press of the city encouraging the enterprise, the temperance workers succeeded in withdrawing so many names that at the meeting of the city council, though the majority of that body was in favor of the brewery, they were compelled to acknowledge that the petition of consent was insufficient. The long fight was ended, while the interest of the contest will be largely local its influence and encouragement will be as wide as the state and the principles on which the victory has been won may aid others in like struggles. Several elements have made success possible. The pastors of the evangelical churches of the city have stood as one man and have given much of their time to the struggle. The Roman Catholic Church has taken a worthy stand; a ringing letter from Archbishop Keane, of Dubuque, had a large part in bringing final success. The W. C. T. U., composed of the best women of the city, was ready to lend any assistance and make any sacrifice but the most significant factor of all was the attitude taken by the prominent business and professional men who left their offices and secured the withdrawal of so many names that the petition was declared insufficient.

So completely has the sentiment been aroused against the liquor business that the friends of the brewery acknowledge that it will be years before another petition is circulated. Several elements of large significance have been brought into prominence; the power of a united Christian ministry standing for a necessary reform; the influence of determined business men in a righteous cause; the weakness of the liquor traffic. The forces of the evil are in many cases overestimated; here the advocates of the brewery and their counsel have not shown themselves a company of shrewd business men but have been outgeneraled at every turn by the leaders of righteousness.—Hubert G. Beeman.

ROADS AND ROAD MAKING.

AUTOMOBILES AND GOOD ROADS.

Influence of the Horseless Wagon in the Making of Highways.

The crowning glory of automobile touring, however, lies in the demand it has created, in all parts of the world where motor cars are being used for pleasure or business purposes, for good roads, writes H. F. Burchell in the Outlook Magazine. Here in America the good roads movement, within recent years, has become a question of national importance. With the exception of a few States, notably New Jersey and Massachusetts, the subject of better roads was the last thought that gave the legislators the least particle of trouble. The Automobile Club of America, in its younger days expended a tremendous amount of argumentative energy in endeavoring to convince the lawmakers of New York that money expended on good roads was a good business investment. Their appeals brought out a few thousand dollars, somewhat grudgingly given. Finally the generous sum of $100,000 was appropriated.

Agitation has been productive of similar good results in other States. The Governor of Illinois, in his message, gave a marked illustration of the growing demand for better roads in the West when he made a strong plea for the expenditure of more money and careful thought upon road building. His statement that barely 1 per cent. of the Illinois roads were suitable for traffic at all periods of the year was no exaggeration and scores of other states could show no higher average. Departments of highways have been established in California, Idaho, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Oregon, Tennessee, North Carolina, Nebraska and in several of the Eastern states in which the good roads movement has languished. Florida appropriated $500,000 for good roads, and it is confidently predicted that within a short time there will not be a State in the Union that will not manifest a just pride in the increasing mileage of its serviceable roads good all the year round.

Elimination of Grade Crossings.

Grade crossings are admittedly a menace to public safety as they are a danger to the operation of trains and to people crossing the tracks, says the Good Roads Magazine. They should, then, it is conceded, be done away with, for the number of accidents resulting from them are constantly increasing in number. The latter is due principally to increased traffic on the country roads. When the railroads were first built in sparsely settled communities the element of danger was not the factor that it is to-day. In foreign countries grade crossings are not tolerated, and they will eventually have to go in this country. No comprehensive plan of road improvement can be successfully carried out without doing away with them. In connection with the bonding plan in the State of New York for highway improvement, it has been proposed by certain railroad interests that a part of the money thus appropriated should be used in removing grade crossings. While such a suggestion is open to the criticism of selfishness on the part of the railroads, there is much to be said in regard to the justice and equity of their claim. At any rate the grade crossing should be eliminated.

The Result of Experience.

The Massachusetts highway commission has decided, after years of the most intelligent observation, record and study, that it does not pay to put on the macadam thick enough to withstand any possible development of springs, but that when building the road the effort should be made to intelligently protect it where evidence can be seen of the probability of springs and then, having built the road in the most approved way, it should be watched with great care through the first winter, and the weak spots, if any, which develop should, in the spring, be treated as seems best in each case; underdrainage being essential in springy ground.

In many instances the Massachusetts highway commission has been satisfied with only four inches of finished macadam in the center and even as light as three inches on the side, but those were cases where the sub-grade had already been partially prepared and traffic was light.

Improving Dirt Roads.

In speaking of the split-log process, a Chicago paper says: "The split-log is so simple as to appear ridiculous. Yet it has proved to be a most effective device for converting bad dirt roads into good roads. The drag has received the endorsement of leading railroads which are interested in developing good roads along their lines."

An Iowa paper speaking of an unusually bad road, says: "It is now one of the finest and most delightful roads in the country." It was made so by the split-log drag. Our farmers ought to give this simple, cheap device a thorough trial, in all localities where they are not able to improve the roads in a more expensive and permanent manner.

A Missouri man claims he cured a horse of heaves by feeding him with pebbles and waste materials from horse radish.

CHAUFFEURS AND LIQUOR.

Only Total Abstainers Employed by the German Emperor.

The growing prejudice of the Emperor of Germany against strong drink is becoming known to all the world. He has not only frequently and energetically protested against the excessive use of beer by the German people, but has taken many steps toward abating it in the German army. Some of the despatches from Berlin have represented him as driven almost beside himself at times by the spectacle of the ruin being wrought in the fatherland by the use of strong drink. The universal and medical men of Germany have contributed to this attitude of the Emperor's mind by their fearless and faithful delineation of the progressive ruin of the German people by alcoholic beverages. It is lately pointed out by the military authorities that the physique of the German soldiers is nothing at all like what it was in the Franco-Prussian war, and that a steady deterioration seems to have seized the average young man of the Empire.

The last symptoms of the Emperor's resistance against strong drink is an order that only total abstainers are to be employed in the running of the royal automobiles. He will have none but clear heads to navigate the horseless machines. No chauffeur is to drink either while on or off duty.

Well, it looks like a reasonable requirement. If railroad men have to keep clear heads, if the pilots of ferry boats need to retain their wits unimpaired by liquor, if a drunken driver is ruled off an express company wagon, surely the still more critical and, in some respects, difficult work of a chauffeur demands the complete possession of all his faculties. The drunken automobile driver is about as dangerous an animal as can be at large. Emperor William's order is based upon common sense.—American Issue.

Evil Effects of Pulque.

A contractor and very large employer of labor remarked a few days ago that the greatest blessing that could happen to Mexico at the present moment would be the appearance of some bug or fungus that would destroy the pulque-producing maguery throughout the republic. "I am fully willing to acknowledge that pulque, when at its best, is perhaps the most healthy, cheapest, and pleasantest to drink of light alcoholic beverages, but the fact of the matter is that it rarely gets into the hands of the consumers when at its best. Pulque is usually sold over the counters of pulquerias in Mexico as a sour, whitish, semi-purulent drink, with just enough alcohol mixed with the various toxic results of its decomposition to produce a semi-lethargy which appears to bear the same relation to the jovial alcoholic drunk that a night mare does to a pleasant reverie. It takes a good deal of time and but little money to get drunk on pulque and more time and often money to get over the effects of the drink. The brain is softened, the digestion ruined and the nerves paralyzed by the long-continued use of this subtle poison." It is said that $30,000 a day is spent for pulque in the City of Mexico, and as each dollar spent involves at the smallest estimate the loss of time and other results costing $3, the pulque-drinking habit makes the working class of the City of Mexico poorer to the extent of $1,800,000 a month, leaving entirely out of consideration the disastrous moral and social results of pulque drinking. No large employer of labor will get his men from pulque districts if any other is available.—Modern Mexico.

Temperance in England.

In England, the drink habit has long been painfully on the increase, but a reaction seems now to have marked falling off since the statistics of 1898 were made public in the per capita consumption of spirits. It is still uncomfortably large, but shows that the tide has turned. Public sentiment against hard drinking grows. It is bad form socially, and drunkenness at a social event is now reckoned as an almost unpardonable crime. The decline in the per capita consumption cannot be attributed wholly to hard times; for, as a matter of fact, the income of the middle and upper classes has increased about 50 per cent. in ten years. England, as in the United States, competition in business has increased, and this is also making for sobriety. There has also been much temperance agitation in labor circles, and English economists have pointed out repeatedly that the inability of the British workingman to contend successfully with American workmen is owing to his drinking habits, and these must be corrected, or England will lose her commercial supremacy. All these things are tending to a better state of affairs.

Care of Linen.

Tablecloths and napkins should never have a touch of starch in them, yet many housewives will add a little to get an imitation "starch" in place of the burnish that nothing but careful ironing can bring out. Damp should be sprinkled until it is just a little damp all over and then iron until not a suspicion of moisture is left in it.

With a tablecloth after you have ironed the whole cloth, placing your clothes basket under your ironing board to catch the cloth as it works over, fold it carefully, so that the edges meet and the crease is exactly down the middle, and iron as you crease it. Then lay the cloth on a table, or somewhere it will air a little before putting it away in the linen drawer or shelf.

Centerpieces and dollies that are embroidered in colors or made of drawn work should never be allowed to get very soiled before washing, not only because everything that belongs to a table should be kept spotlessly clean, but because they are valuable things and should never be rubbed hard.

WEST POINT'S KITCHEN

Machinery Used to Prepare the Cadets' Food.

BOYS' GAIN IN WEIGHT.

Service That Cadets Out to Be Kept Down to Forty-Three Cents Daily.
Bread Made, Roast Beef Carved, Potatoes Peeled by Machines.
Guarding Against Typhoid.

The West Point kitchen is a food laboratory and a food factory combined. Every thing possible is done by machinery, says the New York Sun.
The roast beef is carved by a machine
—200 cuts of it in less than five minutes. This machine does the work of five men. Potatoes are peeled by machinery.

The West Point boys gain in weight fast the first year. Each year afterward they put on more weight, but more slowly than the first year. For the first three months of their stay they lose weight.

When the boys march in to dinner they go to their places with precision and each one folds his overcoat on the back of his chair. A plate of soup is at each one's place.

At a certain moment the roast beef cutters, if they have roast beef, start up. The waiters, each with his own set of dishes, stand in a row. The meat is served on hot plates just taken from the warmer.

The waiters, still in line, get the vegetables on the trays and before the soup is finished the first man appears through the doors that open automatically and the cadets have their solid food before them.

When they are finished they march out and certain receptacles for scraps are brought in. The scraps are classified, and through the use of machinery in preparing the food the waste has been reduced from two cartloads a day to one-half cartload.

One of the most interesting of the kitchen machines is the potato parer.
It consists of a big hopper into which a bushel of potatoes is dumped. In the bottom and along the sides are what a housewife would call nutmeg graters. The skin is buried off the potatoes and a saving of 80 per cent is made over ordinary potato peeling.
The eyes are removed by hand. The potatoes glisten almost as if they had frosting on them.

In the kitchen every useful device has been adopted. By experiment it is determined exactly how many pounds of flour and water are needed to make a certain batch of bread. The gauges are set and the flour and water flow together into a big kneading trough where rotating shafts and big wooden kneaders, that look like Indian clubs, mix and knead the mixture.

No hand touches it. Then it is put into a moulding machine where the loaves are rolled out and slipped into pans. The loaves are exactly two feet long and round with crust all around them.

The boys like crust, and the shape of the loaves is such that there is less waste in sliced pieces than in any other form. So little waste is there that oftentimes the cooks have difficulty in getting enough to make bread crumbs from.

Then the bread is put into an oven.
After each baking the bread is weighed, so that the relative value of brands of flour can be tested. The bread is sliced by machinery just before the boys go to their meals.

Most hotels use machines for making ice cream, but they are of the old fashioned sort, with salt and ice to finish the product. The West Point machine uses the brine from the re-frigerating plant. The ice cream is pushed out when a telltale device announces that it is frozen, and then is made up into moulds.

The authorities at the Point are especially proud of their sterilizing plant for milk. All the milk used is purchased from a dairy across the river, which Capt. Franklin inspects regularly. The milk is subjected to a heat of 180 degrees at first and then passes to another tank heated to 100 degrees, and then to another heated at 24 degrees. All this is done in three minutes and the flavor of the milk gives not the slightest indication of the treatment it has received.
What makes the authorities proud is that not a single case of typhoid or any other disease that can be traced to cow's milk has occurred at the institution since this sterilizing plant was put in.

The dish washing machines consist of two parts. In the first part the dishes are washed and in the other they are rinsed.

All the knives are cleaned and sharpened by a little electric machine and the silver is polished by an apparatus with a brush that makes 3,000 revolutions a minute.

In order to feed the cadets as cheaply as possible all the supplies are purchased in large quantities. The meats are brought direct to the place by the carload from Chicago. A month's supply is bought at one time.
Groceries are purchased from the wholesalers as cheaply as any retail grocer can get them. The fruits and vegetables are bought in New York and other places at wholesale prices only.

The butter, a thing which does not improve with keeping, is purchased in the summer, and usually a year's supply is obtained. It has to be of the best grade.

The esteemed Dr. Wiley now says that whisky has food properties. The doctor is quite right—food for thought.

CRIME GROWS IN LONDON.
London is paying the penalty paid by all large cities. Crime is inside her gates. In round numbers she has to pay nearly $5,000,000 to keep criminals in check; for that is the sum paid out to her police, courts, prisons and prosecuting officers, it falls to include stolen property, loans due to the millions of criminals, losses to injured parties, etc.
Serious crimes, such as burglary, housebreaking, counterfeiting, etc., are increasing.

AN EXPENSIVE PASTIME.

The ocean steamship companies, it is said, will take concerted action to abate the evil of professional gambling on board ship, says the Boston Globe.

Pirates are but a memory nowadays, but robbers of a different kind, whose business is even more profitable, continue to travel the high seas.
Gamblers are not unknown on land.
It is true, but their operations are more successful on board ship.
Steamship passengers are usually well supplied with money and time hangs heavy on their hands. Thus they are easily beguiled into the spider's parlor and caught in the web. An instance is cited of four young fellows, fresh from college, who landed at Liverpool with five dollars between them, having been stripped of their cash on the last day of the voyage by a pair of smooth strangers, whose unfair methods of play were apparent to lookers-on.

THE CHARITABLE AMERICAN.

During 1905 American benefactions to charity and education in sums of $5,000 or more reached a total of $65,000,000. The corresponding sum for 1901 was $107, 000,000. Such statements afford but a partial idea of the national spirit of benevolence and beneficence. One cannot help thinking of the host of smaller benefactions, many of them made at far greater sacrifices to the givers than the huge donations of those rich in worldly goods. The American people are not only great money-makers and spenders, but great givers.

THE DECREASE OF LYNCHING.

It is gratifying to discover among the gloomy statistics of crimes and violent deaths one decided evidence of improvement, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. That is in the decrease of lynchings, the total number of which during 1905 was 66, not much over half the average for the past ten years, and the lowest number for twenty years.

Of the 66 victims of lynching 55 were negroes. But of the 65 less than a quarter were in revenge for the crime which is alleged in the South as the justification for lynching. This shows the hollowness of the pretext, but that phase is less salient than the remarkable diminution in mob murder due to the improved public sentiment of the South. It seems that just about the time when such appeals to race hatred as "The Cossacks" are reaching literary and dramatic form the intelligence of the South is realizing that government by law is infinitely preferable to the rule of mob violence and race insanity.

AGAIN THE CANAL QUESTION.

There has recently taken place a great change in public opinion with respect to the Panama Canal, says the New York Post. When the rights of the French company were purchased eighteen months ago there was a feeling of glee. The motto was "Make the Dirt Fly." With perdonable national pride we projected great things and spoke rather contempuously of the French failure.
But experience has been sobering and as formerly we were too optimistic, now we need to guard against pessimism and to be alert against the discouragement that the lobby that desires no canal constructed is diligently fostering. The thing is no summer holiday, and we may indeed congratulate ourselves if the channel is open by the time the babies of this year become voters.

CO-OPERATIVE SERMONS.

Four Chicago clergymen of as many different denominations will begin putting a unique plan into operation, delivering what will be practically the same sermon, on the same day.

The scheme is of interest as illustrating the co-operative spirit of the age. The tendency of all businessmen and the professions is "get together." The "community of interest" idea is working along many different lines. It is not strange that it has reached the church. The collaboration of authors has not always proved fortunate, but there have been some very happy combinations.
The success of the Chicago scheme will depend in great measure upon the congeniality of the co-operating clergymen. An important feature will be the bringing of the denominations represented into closer relations. The experiment is sufficiently novel and interesting to attract careful attention from the general church-going public.

Thought Reading.

Stuart Cumberland, "thought reader," tells how he "read" Mr. Gladstone's mind in the smoking room of the house of commons. Mr. Gladstone understood to think of some figures, and it was Cumberland's task to discover and write them on a blackboard.
He wrote a 3, which was correct, then a 6, which was also correct, and then he began to write 5. "At this moment I found that Mr. Gladstone had changed his mind and was thinking of a 6.
I at once paused and begged him to concentrate his thoughts entirely on the exact figure he had decided upon.
He did so, and I unhesitatingly turned the 5 into a 6." He asked Mr. Gladstone why he had at first thought of a 5 and afterward changed it to a 6. Mr.
Gladstone answered that he had at first thought of the number of years in a year, but in the middle of the experiment he recollected that that particular year was leap year, which caused him to change his figure to 66.

Joseph Chamberlain, the British conservative leader, is a great lover of tobacco. Stuart Cumberland tells an anecdote of him. He was "thoughtreading" the "Irish reform leader, but somehow the experiment failed; there seemed to be something wrong somewhere. He begged Mr. Chamberlain to concentrate his thoughts entirely upon the test. "It is no good," said Mr. Chamberlain, "my thoughts keep going to my pipe. I have not finished my smoke, and I really cannot concentrate my thoughts without it."
He resumed his pipe and the experiment was carried to a successful conclusion.

A COINCIDENCE

Mr. Denholme had a strong aversion to evening parties; he continually tried to impress upon his wife that when he returned home after a hard day's work from his downtown office he fully deserved a quiet evening.

"My greatest pleasure," he declared, "is to sit down to a snug little tea-table evening with my wife and watch her pretty face while she tells me all she has been doing during the day."

Mr. Denholme had the good fortune to marry a charming girl fifteen years younger than himself, and the only fault his family found with Mrs.
Denholme were her excessive good looks and love for smart clothes.

One night they had been to a crush at Mrs. Parnwood's in order to listen to an acrobatic German pianist and rub shoulders with many smart people, and Denholme was waiting patiently for his wife in the supper room, beguiling the time with cold quail and champagne, when a young man, who stood next to him at the crowded supper table, remarked that there were "a lot of people present."

"There are," replied Denholme;
"have you been here long?"

"Oh, no, this sort of thing isn't much in my line; one never can talk to the people one wants to."

"I quite agree with you," said Denholme, "however, my wife likes this sort of thing, and it's all very well for the women."

"The fact of the matter is," continued the young man, "I've come here to find a little woman I met up the river the other day; said she'd be here to-night; a rare little sporting woman with a good figure. I took her out in a row boat."

"Have you looked upstairs?" inquired Mr. Denholme.

"Not me," was the reply, "I should be pounced on and made to take some elderly female into supper. I told her I'd wait in the supper room for her. I didn't catch the name when they introduced us."

"It sounds quite romantic," said Denholme, feeling amused by the young man's confidence.

"Rather! and I believe she's a widow, and there's nothing like a young widow. I intend to take her to the Carlton or somewhere for supper; she ought to look splendid tonight."

"What makes you think she's a widow?" queried Denholme.

"Oh, I don't know, only she was certainly a Mrs. something, and she never mentioned a husband, and proposed all sorts of plans, such as a ball, or another day on the river.
She's full of ideas and thoroughly enjoys life, just what a woman ought to be, and understands man, none of that stand-off rot about her; there's only a month before I have to join my battalion at G. I, and I don't mean to let the grass grow under my feet."

"She sounds very attractive," said Denholme.

"If she may be divorced," continued Denholme, "or perhaps she divorced her husband, one never can tell."

"She may have married some awful brute," was the reply, "and it served him jolly well right if she divorced him, but I'm quite certain no one divorced her, it's impossible."

"My dear sir," replied Denholme,
"I am a lawyer. I see actualities."

"No wonder," said the young man; "I expect you've come across heaps of wrong 'uns; lawyers always see the worst of women, and men, too, coming to that, but I'll bet you any money you like that the lady I met the other day is a real good sort, and by Jove! there she is coming into the room now; she looks simply great, and I say, what a dress! over there in pink."

Denholme followed the young man's gaze and saw it was concentrated on his wife. She was dressed in one of the latest creations of a Paris dressmaker; her long opera cloak was thrown over her shoulders, she seemed the incarnation of perfectly equipped modern femininity. She revealed in her personal appearance, and as she entered the supper room many eyes turned in her direction.

"Simply great!" muttered the young man. "She doesn't see me yet.
Good! she's coming over our way."
Then he stepped forward and bowed to the beautiful Mrs. Denholme. She drew back and looked beyond him toward her husband.

"You are mistaking me for some one else," she said, with a queer little smile; then, to her husband,
"Tom, I've been looking for you everywhere. I'm so tired; let's go home."

"The young man's jaw dropped, and before Mr. Denholme had time to introduce him formally, he disappeared.

"I wonder who that pushing young man was, who bowed to me in the supper room?" said Mrs. Denholme, on their way home.

"I wonder!" replied her husband.

When Ice Catches Fire.
Strange as it may seem, it is possible to light your cigar by means of ice. Take a piece of clear ice, about one inch thick, cut it into the shape of a disc, and with the palms of the hands melt its two sides convex, giving it the form of a double convex lens, or burning-glass. Now, if the sun will only condescend to shine, focus his rays on the end of your cigar, and the feat is done.

Accommodating.
"Very sorry," all my daughters are already engaged."
"Ah, well, never mind; I'll call again next time there's a vacancy."
—Sphere.

As a mitigating circumstance it may be said for the terrorists in Russia that the Czar will not let them agitate in any other way. It might be noted that he will not let them agitate in that way either, whenever he has anything to do with the letting.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.
Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.
It is the greatest medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, uric acid, catarrh of the bladder and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything, but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work and in private practice, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.

When writing mention reading this advertisment offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all good druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

HEBRON.

Mr. Henrietta Byrd Hopkins, widow of the late Samuel Hopkins, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Cooper, near Quantico, Sunday last, aged seventy-one years and six months. Mrs. Hopkins had been a great sufferer, having had the kidneys to fail and dislocate both hips about three years ago, since which time she has had to remain seated in her chair, being unable to lie down to sleep. But through all her sufferings she was bright and cheerful and seemed untroubled to her fate. Funeral services were held at her home Monday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Mr. Johnson, of the M. P. Church, of Hebron, after which the remains were laid to rest by the side of her husband at Green Hill. The deceased is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Charles Cooper, two sisters and one brother, viz: Mrs. John W. Holloway, Mrs. Maria Conly, and Mr. B. Harvey Hearn.

The Hebron Base Ball team held a meeting on last Wednesday night and the players signed for the season. The line up is: pitcher, John Clouser, catcher, Clarence Clouser, 1, Marion Conly, 2, Paul Wilkinson, 3, Harry Wayland, 4, Kid Taylor, right field, Thomas Leates, left field, Norman Phillips, center field, Roll Cordrey, and for Captain, Garfield Cordrey, William H. Phillips, Manager.

A Hair Dressing

Nearly every one likes a fine hair dressing. Something to make the hair more manageable; so keep it from being too rough, or from splitting at the ends. Something, too, that will feed the hair at the same time, a regular hair-food. Well-fed hair will be strong, and will remain where it belongs—on the head, not on the comb!

The best kind of a testimonial—

COUNTY TAX RATE .85

For The Year 1906. Levy Struck By County Commissioners Tuesday. 10 Miles Of New Shell Roads Added In County.

The County tax rate was fixed at .85% for the current year when the County Commissioners struck the levy last Tuesday.

Many extraordinary expenses had to be met at this time, chief among which was an addition of ten miles of new shell roads, costing the Commissioners about $13,000.

Barren Creek District, 1 mile.
Tyaskin District, 1/2 mile.
Parsons and Salisbury Dis'ts. 6 1/2 miles.
Trappe District, 2 miles.
The cost of this ten miles of new shell roads was about $30,000, the people of the County living along the lines of the road making up the difference in work and grading. Besides this, all the old shell roads were repaired and put in first class condition.

Another unusual expense was the repairs to the Court House, which cost about $3,500.00.

The basis of real and personal property for taxation is $7,950,188.77, which is an increase over the assessment of last year of $1,189,533.00. The stocks of Corporations foot up to $987,706.77. ## Careful Thorough Prescription Work

Sometimes you imagine that you have to wait a long time for the medicine, but if we gave it to you in less time, it would NOT be such good medicine. No matter how busy we are, every prescription is prepared carefully and thoroughly; no part of the work is slighted in any detail. It must be right before we let it go out of our hands. You may think at the time that we are being too particular, but that is due to your anxiety and impatience. In your calmer thought you will admit that we are right, and will thank us for preparing such RELIABLE medicine. Our methods have won the commendation of all local physicians who have had occasion to know about them.

THE CONVENTION CITY

Maryland's Ocean Resort Will Entertain Several This Summer. Preparations Indicate A Big Season. B. C. & A. Summer Schedule Starts Today.

Ocean City will be the Maryland convention city this summer. The Maryland Bankers' Association will meet there June 19, 20 and 21. Then will come the State Teachers' Association. The Democratic Convention of the First Congressional District will meet there on July 12. At the same time the Maryland Bar Association will be in session there.

August will bring the more than usual crowd, and before its conclusion the Tri-county Summer School, and possibly the physicians of the State will hold their annual convention there. It is also expected that Ocean City will be selected as the meeting place for the Republican Convention of the First District. These events will be supplemented by numerous outdoor amusements, among which will be an ocean race of motor boats, for which upwards of 50 entries are already secured.

Arrangements have already commenced in anticipation of an "old time" Independence Day celebration. Some distinguished person will be invited to deliver an oration, the Declaration of Independence will be read and patriotic songs sung, concluding, at night, out on Sinepuxent Bay, in a splendid display of Pains' fireworks.

The dates will soon be selected for the proposed invitation rowing and sailing regatta on the bay, and it is anticipated that entries will be made from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and elsewhere. This regatta will occupy two days, with fully 15 different events in singles, doubles and fours.

Nearly all the boarding houses and some of the smaller hotels opened up June 1, but the Atlantic will not throw open its doors until the 16th, on which date will commence the full summer schedule on the B. C. & A. Railway, which promises fast trains and many new cars.

MANY BAPTISTS HERE

Attendance At The Meetings Of The Eastern District, Respectfully Entertained By The Division Street Baptist Church. Proceedings.

The Eastern District Baptist Association was entertained by the Division Street Church on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week. Nearly every one of the twenty-two churches in the Association were represented by delegates. This Association was the most successful ever held on the Eastern Shore by the Baptists. About one hundred delegates were in attendance, and the interests manifested in the reports submitted was keen.

The Committee on digest of letters reported a general advance. One of the churches showed an increase in membership of 105, 61 being by baptism. Never has the Baptist work been in such a promising condition. There is at present only one pastoral field in the Association. Two new churches were organized during the past year, and were recognized by the Association—Athol, and Stockton. A building has been erected at the former place under the leadership of Rev. B. G. Parker, while Stockton has a lot and is ready to build.

The annual sermon was preached by the Rev. Theo. W. Gayer, of Glendale. His subject was the "Holy Spirit." Rev. Walter Rhodes, D. D., of the Second Church, Baltimore, preached the doctrinal sermon.

The delegates in attendance upon this Association expressed themselves as charmed with the hospitality of the Division Street Church and with the city of Salisbury. Everyone returned to his home saying it was good to have been there.

On Thursday morning the women organized a Society, which will work in connection with the Committee of the Association. Mrs. Gault, of Baltimore, has conducted a Women's Missionary Rally, the previous day in the lecture room of the Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Oscar Lee Owens, of Cambridge, was chosen as president of this Women's Work and Miss Grace W. Jones, also of Cambridge, Secretary.

Next year the Association will meet with the Cordova Church, by special invitation. The Rev. J. B. Pruitt, of Pocomoke City was chosen to preach the annual sermon, and Rev. R. C. Granberry, of Salisbury, the Annual Doctrinal Sermon.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT

By A Negro Of Somerset On Mr. Barnes, A Prominent Citizen Of That County, Negro Nearly Lynched At Pocomoke.

Edward Watson, a negro farm hand, was severely beaten and wounded at Pocomoke Tuesday by an infuriated crowd of Somerset county people for a murderous assault he made upon his employer, Mr. Samuel S. Barnes, in the afternoon. The negro narrowly escaped lynching.

Mr. Barnes is at the Peninsula General Hospital here in a critical condition. The assault took place on the Barnes farm, about a mile from King's Creek, Somerset county. Mr. Barnes who is one of the most prominent farmers of Somerset county, had a dispute with the negro over some farm work, when the negro struck him with a piece of scumming, dealing several blows over the head, after which he stamped upon him and kicked him in the face several times. Watson then hurriedly left the place going toward Virginia. News of the assault soon spread over the neighborhood and a posse of white men, armed started in pursuit of the negro, while Drs. Fisher and Lankford hurried to Salisbury with Mr. Barnes, who was operated on by Drs. Dick and Tall for fracture of the skull.

The negro was caught at Pocomoke City, near the railroad station at 8 o'clock Tuesday night and almost in an instant a large mob gathered around.

Balliff Stroud demanded that he be given up to their care and a determined effort was made by the authorities to get the negro off to Princess Anne on the 8.30 train, but the violence of the mob which was pressing closely on all sides prevented the attempt. The negro was then quickly rushed up Clarke avenue and placed in the lockup, which was surrounded by a mob numbering nearly 500 persons.

While on his way from the station the negro was beaten severely on the head by clubs and bricks thrown at him by the mob and received also a bullet wound. He is not dead, however, as had at first been reported.

CHURCH PHILANTHROPY

Ex-Gov. Jackson Donates $50,000 To A Baltimore Building, Handsome Edifice Planned.

Former Governor E. E. Jackson, of Salisbury, will give $50,000 toward building a new church for the congregations of the Trinity and Calvary Southern Methodist Episcopal Churches in Baltimore. This offer and the conditions attached to it were made public by the former Governor Saturday morning.

There are only two conditions attached to the offer. The first is that the church shall be called "The Albion W. Wilson Methodist Episcopal Church South." The second provides that the congregation must raise at least $100,000 in addition to the $50,000 mentioned in the offer, in substantial pledges or cash and must provide the site.

There is no doubt, however, that the offer will be accepted, as the two churches decided to unite to build a handsome new church in a growing section of the city several months ago. The two congregations are now worshipping at Trinity Church, Madison avenue and Preston street. The old Calvary Church, south-east corner of Greene and Lombard streets, which was used for many years was sold a few months ago to the University of Maryland. The membership of the two congregations is about 450. The present church is a substantial brick building, and with the parsonage occupies a half block on Preston street.

The offer is the result of one made several weeks ago, but which was later withdrawn. Before the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South met it was suggested that the General Church Extension Society erect two big new churches—one in Baltimore and one in Washington. Former Governor Jackson heard of the plan, and promised Rev. Dr. W. L. Bond, presiding elder of the East Baltimore District, to give $50,000 toward the project. During the sessions of Conference the plans were changed, and it was decided to erect only the church in Washington. On this account he withdrew the offer. The former Governor, in talking about the matter Saturday, said:

"I made an offer to Rev. Dr. Bond shortly before the General Conference met, at that time I promised to give $50,000 toward building two churches—one in Baltimore and one in Washington. The Church Extension Society dropped the Baltimore end of the project and I withdrew the offer. I have made no offer since then, but am willing, and will make an offer to the Baltimore church. If the congregation of Trinity and Calvary Churches will raise $100,000 toward building a new church and provide the site, I will give $50,000. The new church must also be called the Albion W. Wilson Methodist Episcopal Church South, in honor of Bishop Albion W. Wilson. No other name, nor any addition to the name, will be allowed. The site must be provided by the congregation, as it already owns one church and site, the sale of which will provide for the new one. To secure this offer the new church building alone must cost $150,000. I will make this offer, but the conditions must be strictly observed."

TEACHERS OF THE STATE.
To Convene In Annual Session At Ocean City June 26. Tri-County Institute In August.

The thirty ninth annual session of the Maryland State Teachers' Association will be held at Ocean City on June 26th, 27th, 28th and 29th. The morning sessions at 9.30 a. m., and the evening sessions at 8 p. m., will be held in the Casino. Committee meetings will be held at the Ocean City Public School. The executive committee has made every effort to arrange an interesting and attractive program and hopes that the members of the Association will show their appreciation by a large and enthusiastic attendance.

In order to get the benefit of reduced rates to Ocean City during the meeting, members must present orders for the same at railroad offices, and the same can be obtained from county superintendents and assistants in Baltimore.

The Tri-County Teachers' Institute for Worcester, Worcester and Somerset, will be held at the same place, beginning August 27th.

EX-GOV. WHITE APPOINTED

To Succeed Mr. Gorman In The United States Senate. A Worby Citizen, Whose Public Service Honors Maryland.

All speculation as to the successor of U. S. Senator Gorman was laid to rest Friday by Governor Warfield's appointment of Ex-Governor W. Pinkney Whyte.

For some years he has been affectionately referred to by his friends as the "Grand Old Man" of Maryland. While recently he has not been active in public life, his interest in politics and in public questions has never flagged. Both his Democracy and ability are alike above question. It is a matter of general satisfaction that the State is to have in the Senate as Mr. Gorman's successor a man with the capacity, experience and mental equipment to grapple with the vital questions that are before Congress at the present time, and that the representation of Maryland in the highest legislative body in the country will be a worthy one. The fact that the personal relations between Ex-Governor Whyte and Senator Isidor Rayner are of the most cordial kind is also regarded as fortunate, as it will insure co-operation in their work in the Senate.

Life Sketch Of Mr. Whyte.
Born in Baltimore August 9, 1824. At the age of 18 entered the counting house of Peabody, Riggs & Co., founded by George Peabody, and remained there about two years.

In the winter of 1845 entered the law office of Brown & Brune, and in 1844 went to the Harvard Law School. Admitted to the bar in 1846 and was elected to the Legislature in 1847; elected Comptroller of the Treasury in 1853.

Represented the Maryland Democracy in the National Democratic Convention in 1868.

Appointed to succeed United States Senator Beverly Johnson in 1868. Elected Governor of Maryland in 1871 and served till 1874, when he was elected United States Senator for the full term.

Retired from the Senate in 1881 and was elected Mayor of Baltimore the fall of the same year.

Became Attorney-General of Maryland in 1887, serving four years.

Became chairman, of the City Charter Commission in 1898, and in 1900 accepted his last public office—that of City Solicitor under Mayor Hayes.

DEATH OF DR. COLLIER

After A Short, Sudden Illness At His Home On Division Street. Loss Of One Of The City's Most Prominent And Useful Citizens.

The death of Dr. Levin D. Collier, came as a sudden blow to his friends here. He had been ill only a few days when the end came at 3 o'clock, Tuesday morning.

For many years he had been a well known resident of Salisbury where he conducted a large drug business. He was highly esteemed for many excellent qualities. A man of firm convictions and keen intelligence, he was courteous and kindly in his many associations. The city loses in his death one of its most substantial and polished citizens.

He leaves an estate of about $22,000 conveyed to his wife by will. He carried a benefit certificate for $9,000 in the Royal Arcanum and one for $2,000 in the Heptastroph, both of which are payable to his wife. Besides this he owned building & loan and bank stock.

Levin D. Collier was born in Salisbury September 20, 1830. He was a son of Levin Collier. At an early age the family moved to Baltimore and young Levin was placed in a wholesale drug house. He applied himself diligently and soon learned the business. In 1848 he returned to Salisbury and entered the employ of Dr. Wm. Thomas in the drug business. A few years later Dr. Thomas moved to Cambridge and young Collier went with him, remaining until 1854, when, upon the death of Dr. Shipley, Mr. Collier returned to Salisbury and purchased the drug business conducted by Dr. Shipley. This he continued until the present time. During this time Mr. Collier took a course of lectures at the University of Pennsylvania and graduated. He practiced his profession until 1871, when he gave it up.

During the Civil War Dr. Collier was Provost Marshal for the Eastern Shore, and for some years after the war was deputy collector of internal revenue.

Dr. Collier was twice married. His first wife was Laura Humphreys, daughter of the late George Washington Humphreys, whom he married March 25, 1858. By this union three children survive—Mrs. Wm. E. Dorman, Mrs. J. R. T. Laws and Mr. George R. Collier. The second marriage was to Louisa Bratton, daughter of the late Joseph Bratton, of Maryland Springs, May 23, 1876, who survives. Four children also survive by this union—Misses Lillian, Pauline and Mary Collier and Mr. Levin D. Collier, Jr. Deceased also survived by one sister, Mrs. Louisa A. Graham, widow of the late Col. Samuel A. Graham.

The funeral took place from his late home on Thursday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Dr. Reigart and Rev. David Howard. The pall bearers were Messrs. Joseph A. Graham, Samuel A. Graham, Donald Graham and Wm. A. Graham, Mr. Walter R. Miller and Mr. Louis W. Gandy.

A very large concourse of friends and relatives attended the service and followed the remains to Forest Cemetery, where interment was made.

FELONIOUSLY ASSAULTED

Two Ladies Of Near Kingston Attacked While On Their Way Home From Church. Negro Caught. Trial Wednesday.

Mrs. Gordon Barnes, of Kingston and Miss Frances Powell, of Maryland, were criminally assaulted Sunday afternoon by a negro known as "Kid," but whose name is said to be William Simmons or William Lee.

Not only Somerset county, but the whole section of the Peninsula is aflame with horror and indignation at the crime. The people have been looking for the officers to bring him in to the jail at Princess Anne. It is safe to say that he would never have reached it.

The negro is now in jail at Norfolk, where he was taken to prevent lynching.

The assault took place about 6 o'clock Sunday evening. Mrs. Barnes and Miss Powell, the 16 year old daughter of Mr. Louis Powell, who was visiting Mrs. Barnes, had been to St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal Church, at Kingston, and were on their way home. Mrs. Barnes was carrying a baby. The ladies noticed a strange negro walking a short distance ahead of them, but did not pay any attention to him. As they approached a strip of wood, about 300 yards from Mrs. Barnes' home, they noticed that the negro had disappeared.

When they were about in the center of the woods the negro, with a long knife in one hand and a pistol in the other, jumped in the road and ordered the ladies to go into the woods with him. The ladies at first attempted flight, but were told by the negro that he would cut their throats from ear to ear if they refused to follow him or made any outcry.

The brute led them far into the woods with pistol pointed at them, then beat and feloniously assaulted both the ladies. At every movement made that the negro thought might be an effort to escape they were told he would shoot them dead if they tried to escape.

After the crimes were committed the negro fled kept the two women in the woods with him until about eight o'clock at night, when, after threatening them with death if they made any outcry or left the woods until he had made his escape, the negro left them.

Stole Big And Drove Away.

He made his way on foot to Rehoboth, went to the Rehoboth Baptist Church, where Children's Day services were in progress, and stole the horse and carriage of Mr. Charles Briddell, which he found hitched outside the church and drove to Pocomoke City. After fastening the horse and buggy on the railroad track at a crossing about one mile from Pocomoke City, he boarded a southbound freight, which landed in Cape Charles at 6.30 Monday morning.

Soon Caught.

Hours before this, however, the entire neighborhood had become acquainted with the details of the crime and telegrams were sent to every station between Pocomoke and Cape Charles warning the authorities to be on the watch. So when the negro landed in Cape Charles he was arrested.

Identified By Edward Townsend.

It seems that on Sunday afternoon a mistle was seen prowling round the home of Mr. Edward Townsend, near Kingston, and after Mr. Townsend and his family had gone to church the house was broken open and robbed. When Mr. Townsend heard of the arrest of the negro in Cape Charles he went there and identified the negro as the man he had seen near his home. When it was made known that the negro had been caught—and there is no doubt about his being the man wanted—people in Somerset and Worcester counties began to talk of lynching, and when it was announced that he would be brought to Princess Anne, the county seat of Somerset, and lodged in jail to await trial, crowds commenced to meet the train.

The man is a strange negro, but has been making Oriskany his home for about two months. He says he is from Yorktown, Va.

Confesses.

On the boat over from Cape Charles to Norfolk, Lee made the confession of the double crime with which he is charged. The details of it are revolting. He told how at the point of a revolver and huge knife he frightened his victims into a wood, they being almost insensible from fright and utterly helpless.

He ordered the women on pain of death to remain quiet and not to make the word until he had secured what he wanted, and he had secured it. They were too weak not to obey.

The negro will be arraigned at the Maryland authorities whenever Governor Warfield may make requisition for him.

Quick Justice.

Judge Page has called a special session of court, which is to convene at Princess Anne, the county seat of Somerset, on Wednesday next for the purpose of trying the negro. The court would probably have been convened earlier were it not for the condition of Mrs. Powell, who is it stated, would not be able to appear in court before Wednesday. The State's Attorney, Mr. J. B. Seay, has the Governor that an appeal from Somerset county had left Princess Anne for Annapolis, to get the necessary regulation papers.

All the officers of Somerset county, and the county seat of Somerset, are at Princess Anne, and the county seat of Somerset, are at Princess Anne, and the county seat of Somerset, are at Princess Anne.

Regulations Of Respect Upon The Death Of Mr. Alfred Jones By Local Knights Of Pythias.

Whereas our Comrade Alfred Jones has again felt the touch of the remorseless hand of death, and removed from our midst our brother, Alfred D. Jones.

Now, therefore, be it resolved by Salisbury Lodge No. 66, Knights of Pythias, that we deeply deplore the peculiar and untimely death of our brother, which is a potent and forceful reminder of the fact that sooner or later all must pass through the dark river of the shadow of death to that bourne whence no traveler returns.

Resolved that we bear testimony to those innate qualities of heart and mind which in the better moments of his life constantly exhibited themselves to those around him, by which he proved himself a true and tried friend, and one who never forgot the kindnesses bestowed upon him by those with whom he came in contact.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Brother Jones' relatives, and that copies be sent to the local press for publication and be spread upon the minutes of the Lodge.

Excursion Grounds At Love Point---Don't Trespass.

The Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Railway Company and the Love Point Company, owning the resort of that name, are at odds, and as a result excursionists, carried there by the former are not allowed the use of the grounds. The situation may cause the Railway Company to make some change in its excursion plans.

Saturday a crowd went to Love Point on the steamer, B. S. Ford, expecting to spend the afternoon on the grounds. Instead they waited around on the pier until it was time for the boat to return to the city. When they started to leave the wharf they found barred wire fences before them, and the sign "Don't Trespass," were posted in conspicuous places.

It seems that last year the Railway Company leased the ground, but this year doesn't like to spend the money, and until it can come to some agreement with the corporation owning the land it appears that the excursionists are to be inconvenienced.

Order of Publication.

Thomas Perry, Executor of the last will and Testament of Mary Virginia Dashiell, late of Wisconsin County, deceased, vs. Charles Huntman, Henry Huntman, Louis Huntman, Mary Louise Huntman, Louise Perry, Neill Waller, Maria W. Stanford.

No. 1635 Chancery in the Circuit Court for Wisconsin County.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree or order of the Circuit Court for Wisconsin County, in Equity, whereby the further administration of the trust estate mentioned in the above entitled cases may be conducted under the supervision and direction of said Court.

The bill states that Mary Virginia Dashiell, late of Wisconsin County, deceased, died in 1904, leaving a last will and testament, and that said will was duly admitted to probate by the Orphans Court of Wisconsin County, and that letters Testamentary thereon were granted by said Orphans Court unto the above named complainant, the executor named in said will, and that said executor has since that time administered the said estate in accordance with the provisions of said will, and that the distribution of the balance or remainder of the estate has been made by said Orphans Court, that by the residuary clause of said will, an undivided one-sixth part of said remainder was bequeathed to said executor in trust, to invest the same and to collect the interest therefrom, and to pay the net income from the same to the children of Mary Louise Huntman, late of Washington City, deceased, and at the time the youngest survivor of said children shall attain his or her majority, then the principal of said trust shall become vested in said children equally, share and share alike, the descendants of any deceased child of said Mary Louise Huntman, to stand in the place of said child deceased, and if no such child or descendant be then living, the said principal to become vested in the above named defendants, Virginia Dashiell, Louise Perry, Neill Waller and Maria W. Stanford, equally, share and share alike, to the survivor or survivors of them; and that the said children are the defendants, Charles Huntman, Henry Huntman and Louis Huntman, all of whom reside in the city of Washington, D. C., and are infants and unmarried; and that under the aforesaid distribution the said undivided one-sixth part of the aforesaid remainder, bequeathed as aforesaid, for the benefit of said children of said Mary Louise Huntman, amounts in the net sum of $111.47, with which net sum the said Executor charges himself to be accounted for in accordance with the trust created in said residuary clause of said will, and that the said Charles Huntman, Henry Huntman and Louis Huntman are non residents of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon this 12th day of June, 1905, ordered by the Circuit Court for Wisconsin County, in Equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Wisconsin County once in each of four successive weeks, before the 1st day of August, 1905, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor on or before the 20th day of August next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed in favor of the plaintiff.

COLONIAL VIRGINIA.

Chaste Architecture Characterizes The Virginia Building At The Jamestown Exposition.

While not the first, Virginia is among the first of the states to accept the designs and plans for the building at the Jamestown Exposition and as it is at present her's will probably be the first state building to be erected and occupied. On May 24, at Norfolk, Governor Swanson and the other members of the Virginia Commission examined the plans and diagrams of many competing architects each architect appearing before the commission to explain his plans or answer questions. The decision when rendered was in favor of Messrs. Breeze and Mitchell well known architects of Norfolk.

The building will represent a large type of the Colonial Mansions of original design; will be one of the handsomest of the state structures at Jamestown Exposition and will be sure to attract favorable attention. The structure is not intended to be used for exhibitive purposes, but is to serve as the reception and entertainment building of the Old Dominion. The Virginia exhibit which will be very complete and elaborate, are to be shown; in various buildings according to their specified classification.

The Virginia building will have a frontage of 116 feet, including piazzas and a depth of fifty feet. It is two stories high. It will be built of brick and handsomely ornamented with stone and marble Colonial pillars, upholding the two-story porches will be attractive.

The first floor will contain a main assembly hall in the center, two reception rooms and all necessary executive offices, as well as vestibules and stairways.

The second floor will have a central open well, looking down into the assembly hall, and the suites of chambers for Governor Swanson and other officials. These will contain lavatories, baths, etc.

Although the specifications calling for the kind of material to be used in the construction of the building have not been drawn the main walls will be of brick, with marble or stone cornices and porch pillars.

The front view faces the water and the rear, of land, view does not differ materially from it.

One of the features of the building are the expensive porches, from which the naval maneuvers in Hampton Roads can be seen.

The situation of the building is a most attractive one. Facing the waters of Hampton Roads, it has the Pennsylvania building on its right and that of Maryland on its left. It is close to the magnificent Pier and basin where the small boats of the warships and yachts will land. The view from the front piazza is a grand one, over looking Hampton Roads with Old Point Comfort and Fort Monroe in the distance. In this grand bay will be assembled in 1907 probably the grandest flotilla in the world's history, and every movement of the ships can be observed from the veranda of the Virginia building.

This is likewise true of other state buildings, for every one of them is situated at some spot along the two miles of water front of the Exposition grounds.

Tells Of Baptist Growth In South.

Rev. Dr. Marshall V. McDuff, pastor of Seventh Baptist Church, North Avenue and St. Paul street, in his discourse yesterday spoke of the Southern Baptist Convention, held at Chattanooga, to which he went as a delegate. He said, in part:

"Fourteen thousand and fifty-two duly appointed delegates attended the convention, which took in 15 states and territories of the South, covering an area of 2,000,000 square miles. The population of this area is 30,000,000, of which 1,900,000 are Baptists. Since 1848 the population of this territory has increased from 8,000,000 to 30,000,000, and the believers of the Baptist faith have increased from 300,000 to 1,900,000. The Baptists now have $35,000,000 worth of property, $10,000,000 in an educational plant and $4,000,000 in foreign missionary work, making a total of $49,000,000, all of which was raised by the South in its poverty."

"The South is rapidly coming to the front, however, and the Baptists in that section may that better things can be expected of them in the future. The speakers of the convention dwell largely upon the growth of the South and it is thought by them that the South will soon be even more of a center for business enterprises than at present. There are 4,000,000 Baptists in the United States and 6,000,000 in the world. The Southern country is very beautiful and pleasant, and I thoroughly enjoyed my trip there."

The next convention will be held in Richmond, Va., in 1907.

The first million dollar life insurance policy ever written was bought by George W. Vanderbilt in 1897. He was 35 years old at the time, and agreed to pay $50,000 a year for 30 years. According to the World's Work, if he had taken out this policy 30 years ago, he would have paid by this time $700,000, which, at 4 per cent compound interest, would have amounted to nearly $1,100,000.

RUNNING SORES COVERED LIMBS

Little Girl's Obstinate Case of Eczema---Instantaneous Relief By Cuticura---Little Boy's Hands and Arms Also Were a Mass of Torturing Sores---Grateful Mother Says:

"CUTICURA REMEDIES A HOUSEHOLD STANDBY"

"In reply to your letter I write you my experience, and you are privileged to use it as you see fit. Last year, after having my little girl treated by a very prominent physician for an obstinate case of eczema, I resorted to the Cuticura Remedies, and was so well pleased with the almost instantaneous relief afforded that we discarded the physician's prescription and relied entirely on the Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Pills. When we commenced with the Cuticura Remedies her feet and limbs were covered with running sores. In about six weeks we had her completely well, and there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

"In July of this year a little boy in our family possessed his hands and arms with poison oozing out, and in twenty-four hours his hands and arms were a mass of torturing sores. We used only the Cuticura Remedies, washing his hands and arms with the Cuticura Soap, and anointed them with the Cuticura Ointment, and then gave him the Cuticura Remedies. In about three weeks his hands and arms healed up; so we have lots of cause for feeling grateful for the Cuticura Remedies. We find that the Cuticura Remedies are a valuable household standby, giving us so we do twelve miles from a doctor, and where it costs from twenty to twenty-five dollars to come to a doctor, and where the Cuticura Remedies cost only a few cents."

IN STRICT CONFIDENCE.

Women Obtain Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Help.

She Has Guided Thousands to Health. How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Mrs. Alice Berryhill.

It is a great satisfaction for a woman to feel that she can write to another telling her the most private and confidential details about her illness and know that her letter will be seen by a woman only.

Many thousands of cases of female diseases come before Mrs. Pinkham every year, some personally, others by mail. Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years under her direction and since her decease she has been advising sick women free of charge.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence of women, and every testimonial letter published is done so with the written consent or request of the writer, in order that other sick women may be benefited as she has been.

Mrs. Alice Berryhill, of 313 Boyce Street, Chattanooga, Tenn., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Three years ago I looked dark to me. I had ulceration and inflammation of the female organs and was in a serious condition. My health was completely broken down and the doctor told me that if I was not operated upon I would die within six months. I told him I would have no operation but would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. He tried to influence me against it but I sent for the medicine that same day and began to use it faithfully. Within five days I felt relief but was not entirely cured until I used it for some time.

"Your medicine is certainly fine. I have induced several friends and neighbors to take it and I know more than a dozen who had female troubles and who to-day are as well and strong as I am from using your Vegetable Compound."

Just as surely as Mrs. Berryhill was cured, will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure every woman suffering from any form of female ill.

If you are sick write Mrs. Pinkham for advice. It is free and always helpful.

THE SOLDIERS' "PACK"

Governments Test to Economize Size and Weight.

THE ALUMINUM CANTEEN.

Pack of Other Countries Compared to Ours—The English, the German, the French, the Italian, the Russian, the American.

With a view of lightening the "pack" carried by soldiers, the War Department has been making a study of the loads borne in the field by the fighting men of foreign armies. It has decided to adopt certain expedients for cutting down the weight of the burden which our boys in khaki during a campaign are obliged to transport. By this means their effectiveness will be augmented, inasmuch as the troops will be rendered more mobile—a most important point where military operations are concerned.

To begin the canteen, which today is of tin, is to be made of aluminum. The latter metal weighs only about one-fourth as much as iron. But it was necessary that the water vessel should be moulded in one piece, without seam or jointing, and this problem for a while presented difficulties which bade fair to prove insurmountable.

One advantage of such a canteen is that it cannot possibly leak. A second is that it is rust proof. A third is that it is clean. When the receptacle of tinned iron has begun to lose its coating of tin it is not easily kept clean. The same remark applies to the material which goes to make up the soldier's "mess kit."

The all important point, however, is its lightness. Five thousand aluminum cups have just been ordered, as a first batch for our troops, to take the place of the tinned iron ones now in use. They will have iron handles, however, because that metal does not retain its heat so long as aluminum. To the latter this has been an important objection, inasmuch as the soldier does not want to burn his fingers at meals. There is still a question whether the cup when filled with coffee will not be too hot to drink of, but here, as elsewhere, that such will not prove to be the case.

The soldier's life is to have an aluminum handle, but his fork and spoon are to be made, as at present, of steel, because of the superior strength of that metal. As for the important "mess can"—a small frying pan in which the man in khaki cooks his bacon—it is also to be of aluminum. The cover of the mess can serves as a plate, and its handle turns down over the cover, gripping the edge of the pan and making it tight as a receptacle for ready cooked provisions. It is obvious that for such a utensil aluminum, which is not affected by acids, possesses exceptional advantages.

In studying out the problem of lessening the soldier's load the War Department has collected many data in regard to the equipments of the fighting men of foreign armies. As might be expected, there are many and marked differences in such matters, so far as details are concerned, though essentials are much alike. Thus, for example, in every army the soldier carries a canteen, but in England the indispensable water bottle is of glass, in Italy it is of wood, and in Spain it is of goatskin. In our army, again, there is little individual cooking, but in Europe each soldier commonly prepares his own meals, carrying on that account a much bulkier and more elaborate culinary outfit.

During our civil war each soldier carried forty rounds of ammunition, but thanks to the development of the rifle, the soldier of today carries one hundred cartridges in his belt. In other words, his reduction in the size of the bullet and in the quantity of powder to throw it gives him more than twice the killing power that he had a generation ago.

Our soldiers, like those of most of the armies of Europe, are provided with stockings. In France, however, the men in the field are obliged to furnish their own stockings. If they choose to wear any, and the same is true of the Italians and Russians, who are supplied with pieces of linen to cover their feet. The Germans have stockings, but carry foot linen to supplement them.

Toilet necessities, including brush, comb and piece of soap, are provided in European armies, but not in our own, the American soldier being expected to buy them for himself. The French soldier has a towel in peace, but not in war, while the German has no towel at all, unless he carries one with him at his own cost. Other European nations supply their men with towels at all times, taking it for granted that they will wash themselves at least occasionally, and considering that in large assemblages of men the elementary rules of hygiene ought to be most carefully observed.

Origin of Prepaid Letters. The idea of a prepaid envelope originated in France early in the reign of Louis XIV., with M. de Valper, who, in 1662, established, under royal sanction, a private penny post, placing boxes at the corners of the streets for the reception of letters, wrapped in envelopes bought at offices established for that purpose.

Drinking Between Meals. If we do not wreck, we disturb the process of digestion by drinking alcohol and other beverages between our meals. Nothing can be worse than the introduction of alcohol into the stomach—not at the time of taking food, but when the digestive juices have about half done their work. The practice is an utter discouragement and demoralization to nature, which merely wants a chance to do her duty without impudent interference.

Guard Against Evil. As evil lusts are slain in us, by the power of the Lord in his Word, his power also abundantly to bless them will appear. Does he not tell us: "Blessed are they that hunger the word of God, and they shall be filled with it."—Matt. 5:6.

CIVIL RIGHTNESS.

A Victory for Temperance in Waterloo, Iowa.

The city of Waterloo, Iowa, has just passed through the most notable fight for righteousness in its history. Two months ago the promoters of a brewery began the circulation of a petition of consent. Those who were opposed to it, acting under the direction of the Citizens League and the ministers of the city, began a systematic campaign to defeat the measure. Personal letters were sent; petitions of remonstrance were circulated; and nearly every block of the city canvassed by faithful women; a mass-meeting was called and a challenge sent to the promoters to enter a joint discussion and give reason why the citizens should support the proposed institution. No one appeared to represent the brewery, the ministers swept away every vestige of argument that had been made for it and from that time it has had no public advocates.

While forced to contend with the base methods used by the liquor element, with the entire press of the city encouraging the enterprise, the temperance workers succeeded in withdrawing so many names that at the meeting of the city council, though the majority of that body was in favor of the brewery, they were compelled to acknowledge that the petition of consent was insufficient.

The fight was ended. While the interest of the city will be largely local in influence and encouragement will be as wide as the state and the principles on which the victory has been won may aid others in like struggles. Several elements have made success possible. The pastors of the evangelical churches of the city have stood as one man and have given much of their time to the struggle. The Roman Catholic Church has taken a worthy stand; a ringing letter from Archbishop Keane, of Dubuque, has been a large part in bringing final success.

The W. C. T. U., composed of the best women of the city, was ready to lend any assistance and make any sacrifice, but the most significant factor of all was the attitude taken by the prominent business and professional men who left their offices and secured the withdrawal of so many names that the petition was declared insufficient.

So completely has the sentiment been aroused against the liquor business that the friends of the brewery acknowledge that it will be years before another petition is circulated. Several elements of large significance have been brought into prominence; the power of a united Christian ministry standing for a necessary reform; the influence of determined business men in a righteous cause; the weakness of the liquor traffic. The forces of the evil are in many cases overestimated; here the advocates of the brewery and their counsel have not shown themselves a company of shrewd business men but have been outgeneraled at every turn by the leaders of righteousness.—Hulbert G. Beeman.

CONSIDER THEM ALL.

Ought to be a Warning to America Today.

Commenting on the contrast between states with and without the saloon, the Christian Endeavor World says: "Consider Kansas, with her forty-five counties without a saloon and her forty-seven counties without a criminal trial, in contrast with New York's 32,858 commitments for incarceration last year, or Ohio's row exhibit of 3,500 felons, 11,000 criminals, 159,000 outdoor paupers, and 3,000 deaths annually through drunkenness. Consider Portland, where Sheriff Pearson's standing offer of one hundred dollars for proof that there was a saloon which was never claimed. You don't want to be like Chicago, with its thirty-one miles of saloons, and its drink bill of seventy-two dollars per capita; or like St. Louis, where so many of the municipal rulers whose corruption offends the nostrils of the country were saloon-keepers, that a practical joker nearly emptied the House of Delegates by getting a boy to rush into a session and call out, 'Mister, your saloon is on fire.'"

"The question used to be, what to do with the hermit nations. What to do with the drunkard nations is becoming a problem with the great heads of the world. Just as one is bothered city like St. Louis ought to be a 'horrible example' to every city that is trying to enforce laws against the saloon, so the example of Germany, where in twenty years beer drinking has increased fifty per cent, and where the emperor and the Reichstag are trying to stem the tide, the former by discouraging the drinking customs of the students, and the latter by restrictive legislation, ought to be a warning to America."

BOUGHT CELL AS A DRINK CURE.

An Old Indian Fighter Asked to be Locked in Station.

A fine looking man, tall and straight as a ramrod, weighing more than 200 pounds, but with clothing that showed long wear, walked into the Tenderloin Police Station last night and asked to be locked up. He said he was Daniel Conney, fifty years old, and that he arrived here from Chicago two days ago. Struck by his appearance, the Sergeant asked him why he wanted to go to jail.

"I've been drunk for a year," was the big man's reply, "and I can't seem to steady up, so I've come to the conclusion that if I am locked up for a while I can get on my feet again."

He said he had been a private in the Fifth and Seventh United States Cavalry and had been a frontier soldier for the best part of his life, having been a member of the rescue party which tried in vain to save General Ouster from the massacre on the Little Big Horn in the early 70's, and having served later under Generals Brooks, Miles, Lawton and Chaffee in many fights.

The sergeant, starting with a dollop of his own, began to raise a question for the old soldier, but with tears in his eyes he waved the money aside. The sergeant glanced him over, from his purpose, and he continued:

"I was a member of the rescue party which tried in vain to save General Ouster from the massacre on the Little Big Horn in the early 70's, and having served later under Generals Brooks, Miles, Lawton and Chaffee in many fights."

ALCOHOLISM AND TEMPERANCE.

A Powerful Temperance Lecture in Comstock.

A very suggestive report has been made to our government by the American consul at Roubaix, France, on the growth of alcoholism in France. It has always been the impression that the wine-drinking countries were, on the whole, the most temperate, and that drunkenness was most prevalent in those nations where wines and other light beverages were not an accompaniment of the daily dinner, but where whiskies and brandies and other heavy alcoholic drinks were taken in large quantities. It appears, however, from this report that France ranks first among alcoholic nations, and that the evil of habitual drunkenness has become so great in that country that a congress was held in Paris in October last for the purpose of taking measures to decrease the evil.

It appears from statistics presented by our consul that the consumption of alcoholic beverages per capita in France is 4.81 gallons, in Switzerland 2.03, in Germany 2.44, in England 2.35, while the United States ranks lowest in the list of great nations, with a per capita consumption of 1.37 gallons. According to this statement the most abstemious countries are Canada, Finland, and Norway. The consumption of alcohol in France in the last ten years has increased in alarming proportions, while in England and in the United States there has been a steady decrease, and to this fact foreign observers attribute in part the increasing commercial supremacy of the United States.

This is a more powerful temperance lecture than any sermon could possibly be. It proves that temperance is one of the causes of a nation's strength, and that excess in alcoholism is a source of national weakness. It is gratifying to know that this country ranks so well in this respect among the other nations of the globe. It is a matter of common observation that the excessive use of alcoholic drinks has certainly decreased in business circles in the past ten or twenty years. In many establishments the rule is established and rigidly enforced that all employees, high and low, shall not be seen in saloons or partaking of alcoholic drinks in public. Drunkenness, which was formerly a very common thing in ranks of business, is now regarded as a disgrace, followed generally by dismissal or exclusion, and certainly by loss of credit. A man who is known to be an habitual user of alcoholic drinks and a gambler loses his standing in the banks and the confidence of his associates. How far this improvement in the morals of the people, as regards the use of alcoholic drinks, has extended to the working classes, it is not so easy to estimate, but so far as observation goes there has certainly been a considerable improvement in that direction. Certainly we could not have made the immense strides industrially that we have in the past seven years unless the great masses of our skilled workmen were temperate.—Wall Street Journal.

To Make Alcohol Undrinkable.

As the liquor business of Russia has, in the interest of temperance, been assumed by the Government, the problem of how to make alcohol undrinkable is one of considerable importance, financially as well as industrially, and the Minister of Finance, with characteristic Russian liberality, offers a premium of fifty thousand rubles, or about twenty-seven thousand dollars, for a substance satisfying all the conditions of the programme. Each competitor must submit a sample, setting forth the experiments which have led to his discovery, and giving the composition, proportions and methods of manufacture and use, together with a sample of not less than ten kilograms weight, of the substance. If several meritorious preparations are submitted, the premium may be divided among their inventors, and all inventions receiving premiums are to become the property of the government.

Photography has taken such a hold on the popular fancy in the past few years that nearly every family has some member who is interested in it. It is especially enticing because of the pleasure derived in first snapping the pictures and the subsequent process of developing. One of the many small articles needed in the printing frame, which in itself is very simple in construction. This frame is made of boards in two parts, with handles at the end of each part.

The two sections are hinged together at the ends opposite the handles, preferably with spring hinges, so that the apparatus is normally held in a close position. In the center of the back section is an opening, rectangular in form. The front part is divided transversely near the end, the divisions being connected by hinges. It will thus be seen that by opening one part on the hinge the sheet of sensitized paper can easily be placed over the opening, which, of course, covered by glass, in order to determine the progress of the copying the top part can be turned forward and the plate of the ### Top Buggies $32.50.

The kind Chicago houses ask $36.23 for.

Runabouts $25

The kind catalogue houses ask $31.50 for.

I Have 1500 Rigs

to sell this year. Have sold over 325 this spring already. You can save $5, $10, and as much as $20 on a rig to buy here.

Auburn Wagons.

Best made. Prices low. The U. S. Government uses them, not on account of price, but durability. No other wagon looks so good.

WRENN BUGGIES.

BEST in the world for the money. $20 cheaper than any other make the same quality. If a dealer refuses to sell you a Wrenn buggy, he wants too much profit.

HARNESS.

I have more harness than any ten stores on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, at last year's prices—that is for less than other dealers can buy them. 250 Sets in stock to select from.

I SOLD OVER 1000 Rigs

last year, and now have contracts for more Buggies, Surreys and Runabouts than was ever sold by any one firm in the State of Maryland in two years. I will not advance the prices like the other dealers. I have enough goods bought and coming in every week to keep the prices down.

ISELL THE CHEAPEST. I SELL THE BEST. I SELL THE MOST.

A Beheaded Photo

Lady Edith was giving the finishing touches to her young guest's skirt and telling what a round of pleasure was in store for her during her stay and elaborating on the many qualifications of a certain young man.

"Yes, Edith, you really must meet Mr. Everleigh. My husband says he is staying with the Norths at the Symonson, and that is only three miles off, so he can easily come to dinner. We will have him on Thursday."

Near Rose Court there was a farmhouse, and an old Miss Milton took it one summer and came accompanied by her nephew, to enjoy the air.

Jack Milton was leaving for coffee plantations in Ceylon soon, but not before he and his pretty neighbor had become very great friends. Edith remembered how one afternoon a traveling photographer had come round and photographed them as they made a group outside Rose Court.

She went to her desk and unlocked it and took out the photograph. The peculiarity of her own figure in the picture was that the head had

"YOU MUST MEET MR. EVERLEIGH," been cut out. There was a little round hole left in the card. Jack had done it before he went away.

He had asked for the picture, and when Edith made excuse by saying she wanted a remembrance of Miss Milton he then begged to be allowed to have part of it, to which request she gave permission.

Where was the head now, she wondered, and where was Jack? He used to send her messages through Miss Milton, and then that old lady died, and the Vernons left Rose Court, so now she did not know where he was.

Nevertheless she was sure she had heard either Jack or his aunt some time or another mention Mr. Everleigh, and, if so, why, there was now a chance of hearing some interesting news.

The next day she proposed to walk to Lanton, three miles off, in the afternoon to do some shopping. It was growing dark when she returned. The butler told her, on her entrance, that tea was in the library and the gentlemen had all returned. She had just reached the door when she saw a tiny speck of white at her feet.

Knowing Lady Elder was scrupulously tidy, she stooped to pick it up—only a piece of white card. She turned it over in her hand—a face, and that face her own at seventeen years old! Her heart almost stopped beating. Then the door opened and Sir John came out.

"Come in, Edith," called Lady Elder from the midst of a group gathered round the fire.

As she entered the young men rose. She knew three of them and only needed Mr. Everleigh and the tutor to be introduced to her.

"Miss Vernon, who is staying with me," said Lady Elder.

The tutor bowed. Mr. Everleigh was putting down his teacup, but turned his head as Lady Elder rang for lights. In the meantime Edith took a seat offered to her by one of her military friends, who was trying to get up a conversation with her.

"Have some muffins, dear?" said Lady Elder as she stopped to get them from before the fire and gave them to Mr. Everleigh to hand to her.

He approached with the dish and stood before her. As he was so standing the lamp was brought in. She raised her eyes and saw a face looking down at her—a face she knew, only older than when they last met. A long gasp and then—

"Why, you're Jack!" she faltered. "And you're Edith!" he said.

"And how are you Mr. Everleigh?" she asked.

He sat down beside her, still holding the muffin dish, looking at her all the while.

"Ah!" he laughed, "because my godfather, Mr. Everleigh, left me his possessions on condition I should take his name. He was a cousin of my old aunt's, you know, and had no near relatives. But I haven't forgotten you and Rose Court, though it's so long ago."

When Mr. Everleigh next went abroad, the other part of the photograph was in his pocketbook. Edith Vernon had become Edith Everleigh.

CRIME GROWS IN LONDON.

London is paying the penalty paid by all large cities. Crime is inside her gates. In recent months she has paid nearly $8,000,000 to keep criminals in check; for that is the sum paid out to her police, courts, prisons and prosecuting officers. It fails to include stolen property, broken down to the millions of dollars lost to the nation by the crime.

TRADE UNIONS AND SALOONS.

An Important English Labor Movement.

Strenuous efforts are now being made in England to divorce meetings of workmen altogether from public houses (saloons).

It will doubtless surprise the working men of America to learn that out of 2,333 local branches of nine important trade unions in the United Kingdom, having a total membership of 352,816, no less than 1,716 branches, or 72 per cent. of the whole, hold their meetings in public houses. The case is most serious in larger unions. The Amalgamated Society of Engineers, with a membership of 54,157, has 73 of its branches meeting in drink shops. The Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners, with a membership of 52,000, has 68 per cent., and that of the railway servants, with a membership of 55,000, 73 per cent. of their branches meeting in public houses. In the case of the Friendly Society of Ironfounders the percentage is 92, and in the boilermakers, iron and steel shipbuilders, it is 83.

In Great Britain a number of leaders in workmen's organizations are also leaders in temperance work. John Burns is an example who stands high in the estimation of the community as a labor leader, a temperance advocate and a progressive legislator. Another of the prominent English trades unionists is Mr. Isaac Mitchell, who is the labor candidate for Darlington, and is secretary for the General Federation of Trades Unions.

Mr. Mitchell is about to initiate a temperance movement inside the labor movement.

He is seeking to induce trade unions to sever entirely their connection with the drink shops, thus at once to save their weaker members from continual temptation, and to terminate all complicity with the discreditable traffic.

The work of temperance is carried on in connection with almost all other organizations, why not with labor organizations?

A Great Army.

According to official statistics, as gathered by Commissioner Carroll D. Wright, of the Bureau of Labor, there are 140 cities in the country having a population of 10,000 and upwards. In these cities there were, in 1898, 294,820 people arrested for drunkenness, almost ten times as many as now comprise our army in the Philippines.

If this great army of drunkards were marshaled for a parade, marching twenty abreast, it would require four and one-half days, marching ten hours a day, for them to pass a given point. And these 295,000 drunks do not include the arrests for "disorderly conduct," "assault" and a dozen other offences which grow out of the legalized rum business. The total arrests for all causes in these cities was 915,167. Counting the moderate estimate of three-fourths of these as being the victims of lawful saloons, it would require more than a week's marching, twenty abreast, for the great procession to stagger past a reviewing stand, and the rum product of only 140 cities heard from.

A WORTHY OBJECT.

Temperance Work Among American Seamen.

Miss Emma Alexander who is in charge of the W. C. T. U. for work among seamen for New York State says:

"We have many bright, clean young men, in the navy—total abstainers—who want to uphold the flag and the uniform, and feel keenly the conspicuousness of their uniform, and resent anything being done that would tend to make the sailor disgrace it."

"The life of the sailor is unique in many respects. He is kept aboard ships for days, and sometimes weeks and months, and when he has his liberty he must give vent to pent-up spirits, and unless good influence is brought to bear upon him when on the outside, he is received with open arms by the saloon element."

"I meet many boys whose mothers are members of the W. C. T. U., and in my experience aboard ship and in the hospitals, it is a real pleasure to meet them, and have them tell me about the 'home folks.'"

"Recently two fine looking young fellows called at my home in uniform, one from St. Paul, and one from Austin, Tex., and after sitting for a little while in the parlor and taking in the surroundings one of them said:

"Well, doesn't it seem good to get in a home." And in a moment or two more said, "would you mind if I played on the piano?" I said, "Certainly not, I would be glad to hear you."

He proved to be quite a musician, and was simply homesick and hungry for the sight of a home and for home influence. This is what our men need and want and not a Government Saloon.—Emma Alexander.

17 Beers on Wager Fatal.

After drinking 17 glasses of beer in quick succession, "Joe" Richardson, a porter, dropped dead in a saloon at Colfax recently. He had made a bet that he could drink 25 glasses of the beverage.

Richardson's beer drinking contest against time was widely advertised. Sports for many miles around drove to Colfax. Several hundred spectators cheered him as he poured down 10 glasses. He then took a short rest, while great heads of perspiration burst out on his forehead. He supported his head with one hand, showing that organ was weak.

Richardson had scarcely emptied the 17th glass when he gave an exclamation of pain and fell over on the platform dead.

Women Workers in Japan.

I have encountered another novelty in Japan—tea and toast in my room at 5 p. m. and dinner at 7:30 o'clock, says a traveler in Japan. The chambermaids at the hotel are all men. I haven't seen a woman about the place.

The women are probably out gathering rice and weeds in meads by their homes. The women are not only working hard, they are working smart. They are not only working hard, they are working smart. They are not only working hard, they are working smart.

VALUE OF CHEESE

IS NOT THOROUGHLY APPRECIATED BY AMERICANS.

Various and Appalling Diseases Made Ahead—Went With Milk Greater Quantities Can Be Assimilated—Should Be Taken with Bread.

Thorough experiments made lately by German scientists prove that in the amounts generally eaten it is as easily digested as meat or eggs, while used with milk a much larger quantity can be readily assimilated. It should, however, be always eaten with bread, macaroni or other starchy foods.

The following dishes, with cheese as a basis, can be recommended as palatable, nutritious and economical, providing that all cheese dishes should be served very hot. In the preparation of these dishes it is well to remember that old cheese should be grated and new cheese chopped.

Cheese Ramekins.

Put a tablespoonful of butter in a hot frying pan and when melted add a heaping tablespoonful of flour. Stir until frothy, but do not let it color. Add little by little a half cup of hot milk and stir until smooth and thick. Add a half teaspoonful of salt, a few drops of cayenne and the yolks of three eggs, well beaten and a cup of grated cheese. Remove at once from the fire, pour into a bowl and set away to cool. When cold, fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and pour into buttered ramekins. Bake ten or twelve minutes in a moderate oven and serve at once. If desired, this preparation may be cooked in small custard cups. Fill them not more than half full, as the ramekins swell considerably.

Cheese Omelet.

For this the following ingredients are required:—One tablespoonful melted butter, three eggs, three tablespoonfuls of cream, one tablespoonful grated cheese, and salt and paprika to season. Beat the eggs slightly, add the cream and half the butter. Put the rest of the butter in the pan, and as soon as heated and the pan greased sides and bottom pour in the omelet. As it cooks, hold up the handle of the pan so that the deep portion of the omelet keeps close to the heat. Meantime with a limber knife keep the omelet from sticking and allow the uncooked portions to drain off to the hotter part of the pan. As soon as the mixture is thickened to the right consistency, begin rolling the omelet from you to the outer edge of the pan. Brown, lift off upon a hot dish, sprinkle with grated cheese and serve at once.

Cheese Croquettes.

Cut up one pound of fresh American cheese into small dice. Have ready one cup of very hot cream sauté in a saucepan, add the cheese and the lightly beaten yolks of two eggs diluted with a little cream. Stir the whole together and leave on the fire for a moment until the cheese gets "steady." Season with salt, white and red pepper, and a grating of nutmeg. Put this mixture directly on the ice to cool and harden, then make into croquettes and roll in fine breadcrumbs. Dip in egg then in fine sifted crumbs again, and fry in deep, hot fat until brown and light. These are delicious.

Manners After Marriage.

To bring out the best points in one's husband or wife, to make a loyal effort to elevate him or her in the estimation of one's friends or the world at large, is one of the finest acts of good breeding, and should be carefully fostered in married life if it has not already a spontaneous growth. The wife should be loyal enough to draw the cloak of her husband's few virtues over his many faults and do all in her power to help others to see the virtue only.—The Delineator.

Nickname of a Coin.

The standard silver coin being used in the Philippines are known as "Conants," having been named for Charles A. Conant, who was sent to islands to prepare a coinage system. The authorities in Washington objected to this nickname and directed that the coins should be known as Philippine currency. Before this order arrived they were universally called "Conants," and notwithstanding the official mandate the name has stuck.

Beggars in London.

It is calculated that in London alone about 4,000 persons regularly make a living by begging; that the average income for each amounts to $7.50 a week, or together $3,000 a week. Last year about 3,600 persons were arrested for begging in the streets of London, and many of them were possessed of considerable sums of money and even bank books showing handsome deposits.

Men and Women in America.

There are 1,840,280 more men than women in the United States, and the same proportion prevails in almost every other country. The only exception is in Paraguay, where there are more than twice as many women as men. This is due to the fact that some years ago, in a political revolution and a war with Brazil, and the Argentine republic the men were almost exterminated.

Home Made Taffy.

Put a cupful granulated sugar into a pan and stir until the sugar is melted, not browned; add a rounded tablespoonful of butter; stir constantly until sugar slightly burns; turn into a greased pan.

As a mitigating circumstance it may be said for the terrorists in Russia that the Chear will not let them agitate in any other way. It might be noted that he will not let them agitate in that way either, whenever he has anything to do with the letting.

One magazine writer says: "With his father's money he is a very poor fellow."

The Cause of Many

Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because it is so common. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poison of blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make no mistake by taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Careful Thorough Prescription Work

Sometimes you imagine that you have to wait a long time for the medicine, but if we gave it to you in less time, it would NOT be such good medicine. No matter how busy we are, every prescription is prepared carefully and thoroughly; no part of the work is slighted in any detail. It must be right before we let it go out of our hands. You may think at the time that we are being too particular, but that is due to your anxiety and impatience. In your calmer thought you will admit that we are right, and will thank us for preparing such RELIABLE medicine. Our methods have won the commendation of all local physicians who have had occasion to know about them.

BOUND FOR SEASHORE

Maryland Teachers To Convene At Ocean City, Annual Meeting Of Association Begins Next Tuesday Evening—Programme For Session.

"Onward to Ocean City, the summer Mecca of the State Teachers' Association!" is the upmost thought in the minds of the Maryland teachers at this time.

The Association convenes in its thirty-ninth annual session at Ocean City next week for four days—Tuesday to Friday.

Unusual preparations have been made for this session, the executive committee, which arranges the programme, having introduced several innovations of an entertaining character. The Centennial Ladies' Quartette of Baltimore will be present during the entire week and will sing at each session. All sessions will be opened with singing by the members of the Association, led and instructed by Professor G. T. M. Gibson, the new director of music at the Maryland State Normal School.

At the request of the Association, the School Commissioners of Baltimore city have closed the city schools one week earlier than usual so that the teachers may attend the convention.

The session will begin next Tuesday evening, when Mr. James O. Adams, chairman of the Maryland Legislative Committee of the Education, will deliver the address of welcome, and Superintendent A. O. Willison of Allegany county will respond. This will be followed by the address of the president of the Association, Dr. Simpson, superintendent of the Carroll county public schools.

Governor Warfield will give one of his informal "talks" to teachers on Thursday, on which day the State Board of Education will meet at the Atlantic Hotel.

James H. Van Sickle, Superintendent of Baltimore Public Schools, and Lient. W. E. King, principal of the Baltimore Polytechnic Institute, will be speakers from Baltimore. Dr. M. Bates Stephens, State Superintendent; Dr. George W. Ward, principal of the State Normal School; President Silvester, Maryland Agricultural College; Prof. Sidney S. Handy, principal of the Eastern High School, Mr. A. P.

Smith, principal of the Lonsseong High School; County Superintendent Melvin of Kent county, and Miss Ada Scott of Salisbury will address the Association during the week.

A large party of teachers connected with the city schools will leave for Ocean City on Saturday of this week.

The members of the executive committee, who are responsible for the management of this year's programme are:

James W. Cain, President of Washington College.

John L. Coulbourn, Havre de Grace High School.

Irving L. Twifley, Baltimore Polytechnic Institute.

Bertha R. Brown, Elliot City.

M. M. Robinson, Frederick Female High School.

Proceedings Of County Commissioners, Tuesday. New Alms House Site.

The County Commissioners in session Tuesday decided to begin preparations for the improvement of the Snow Hill road under State Aid.

Counsel to the Board was instructed to prepare the necessary bond and have it ready by the next meeting of the Board.

President Cooper, of the Board, and Treasurer Price were appointed a committee on new Alms House site. It is thought a site will be selected near Salisbury.

Commissioner Wright was instructed to meet the Commissioner from Dorchester on Saturday, June 30, for the purpose of selling the keep of Sharptown and Vienna ferries for 1907.

Commissioner Johnson was appointed to meet the Commissioner from Somerset on the same date and dispose of Woodcock Creek ferry; Commissioner Larmore will dispose of White Haven ferry on same date.

Benjamin Harris was appointed a road supervisor for Quantico District.

Notice

Rev. Adam Stangle, D. D., Presiding Elder of the Salisbury District, M. E. Church, will preach in the Freeland M. E. Church on tomorrow, Sunday, morning at 10.30 o'clock. He will also preach at Zion at 3 p. m.

Children's Day services will be held at Silosom tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. W. W. White, Pastor.

LAW AND ORDER

A Strong Effort By Court And State Officials To Prevent Lynching Of Infamous Negro. To Be Tried In Baltimore.

The special session of court and assembly of the Grand Jury of the April term called by Judge Henry Page for the purpose of taking the preliminary steps in the trial of the negro Lee, alias Scott, the assailant of Mrs. Robert Barnes and Miss Powell, convened at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning at Princecess Anne. A tremendous crowd, estimated at about 3000 men, surrounded the Courthouse, and when the courtroom was opened a few minutes before the time set for the session a rush was made to enter. In a few seconds the room was jammed with about 500 persons, and there were probably as many in the hall outside.

Judges Page, Holland and Lloyd were on the bench. After the opening of court by the crier the Grand Jury was called from the audience inside the hall.

Charge Was Brief.

The only charge was made by Judge Page, who said:

"Gentlemen of the jury, you have been called together to consider a matter of which the State's Attorney will fully inform you when you go to your room. Gentlemen, you may now retire to your rooms."

The jury filed out, attended by State's Attorney Henry J. Walker, and an informal recess of court was taken for one hour. The jury remained in session only about thirty minutes, however, and at 10.35 o'clock court was again called. The jury was presented before the court and asked the usual formal questions in reference to the finding of a bill of indictment or presentment, to which the answer "yes" was given. Judge Page thereupon thanked the jury on the part of the court for their promptness and diligence, and dismissed them, unless they should again be called together. Court was then adjourned, at about 11 o'clock.

No Date Fixed For Trial.

No date was fixed for the reassembling of court for the prisoner's trial, and all the talk among the attorneys and officers of the Court is that the trial will take place in Baltimore. It is questioned whether this can be done legally, but it is understood that the weight of opinion is that it can. The Court has not as yet appointed counsel for the prisoner, but it is rumored here that he will be represented by C. O. Melvin of Pocomoke.

Only two witnesses were examined by the Grand Jury. They were Charles Lankford, deputy sheriff of Northampton county, Virginia, who had the prisoner in charge at Eastville, and who conveyed him to Norfolk, and to whom the negro made a confession on his way across the bay, and Dr. E. M. Eccles, the physician, who attended the two women after the crime had been committed.

Crowd Was Seber.

There was no drunkenness among the crowd, and for the most part they were very quiet. They stood about in knots and clusters, talking about the crime. There was much bitter feeling expressed against Judge Page and the Sheriff for keeping the prisoner out of Somerset county. All sorts of rumors are afloat as to the negro's whereabouts, one being that he was seen on his way to Salisbury last night on the steamer Virginia. Every train and road entering Princecess Anne is being closely watched night and day, and at this time it would be practically an impossibility to smuggle him into the town. The people are determined to kill him, and there are few but believe that if he is brought to Princecess Anne he would not be alive five minutes after the crowd learned of it, troops or no troops.

It is understood that the first move in the case will be for Lee's counsel to file the affidavit of the prisoner asking for a removal of the case outside of Somerset county. This affidavit, it is said on legal authority, can be made without the appearance of the prisoner in the county. In that case the prisoner is expected to remain in Baltimore city till the day of execution of the sentence of the court. He was carried to the Baltimore City jail from Norfolk Thursday.

Negro's Confession.

Lee has made a full confession of his guilt to Deputy Sheriff Lankford of Va. According to his statement he first seized the child of Mrs. Barnes, and with a big knife held at its throat, compelled the woman to follow him to a secluded spot in the woods and threatened if they did not do as he said he would slay the child first and then kill them. He then made both the woman take off every vestige of their clothing. It was to save the child that the heart-broken woman submitted to his fiendish demands.

In this confession Lee said that he first assaulted Miss Powell, and, failing to accomplish his purpose with her, he had then assaulted Mrs. Barnes. Sheriff Lawler says the negro has a bad criminal record and that he has twice before been in the Norfolk jail. The negro gives his age as 16, but Sheriff Lawler says he is about 30.

A curious coincidence in connection with the assault is the fact that Mrs. Barnes is a sister of Mrs. Tull, who was assaulted by a negro named Cuba in Somerset County nine years ago. For his crime Cuba was lynched in the Courthouse yard at Princecess Anne a few minutes after a jury had found him guilty.

Insley & Sons Arranging To Start Crab Factory.

G. W. L. Insley & Sons, Incorporated, are making extensive arrangements for canning crab meat this year and are putting in boilers for the purpose of canning crab soup.

This will be a new enterprise with them as the firm has never heretofore engaged in this—the soup canning.

The cannery did not run last season and consequently the community felt the loss of it, as it furnished considerable employment and disbursed many a dollar in wages. During a full season the factory will employ 100 in catching crabs and 75 to 100 in picking crab meat. Last year crabs were very scarce. This year they are reported plentiful. One man can average from two to three barrels catch daily.

The L. D. Collier Drug Co., Of Salisbury, Incorporated.

Papers have been filed at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court incorporating The L. D. Collier Drug Co., of Salisbury, as successors to the late Dr. Levin D. Collier. The capital stock of the concern will be $100,000.00, divided into 90 shares of $100.00 each.

The incorporators and stockholders named are Messrs. George R. Collier, Levin D. Collier, Mrs. L. D. Collier, Miss Lizzie and Pauline Collier. The Company will do a retail drug business as heretofore. The business will be personally managed by Dr. George R. and Levin D. Collier, sons of the late Dr. Collier.

These gentlemen are experienced druggists and have a thorough knowledge of pharmacy. It is expected that the business will be conducted on the same conservative and business-inspiring plane as formerly.

SAFEGUARD THE PEOPLE. HAS PROMISING OUTLOOK

President Of State Bankers' Advocates Department Of Banking, And Protection Against Corporations. Interesting Session By The Waves.

The eleventh annual convention of the Maryland Bankers' Association held its first business session Thursday morning at Ocean City. It was 10 o'clock when President David Sloan called the convention to order in the pavilion attached to the Atlantic Hotel, under the supervision of Col. Page, where most of the delegates are stopping. The convention hall is a unique spot for such deliberations. It is built almost over the water, and the roar of the surf and the noisy tumbling of enormous breakers at times nearly drowned the voices of the speakers.

Welcome To The Seashore.

Mr. H. H. Haines of Rising Sun responded in place of Mr. Sloan to the welcome extended to the convention by Mr. W. S. McKean of the local citizens' association. Said Mr. McKean: "I believe that in selecting Ocean City the Maryland Bankers' Association has caused a new era to dawn for this Maryland resort, which has no rivals in natural advantages on the broad coast of the Atlantic ocean."

Mr. Haines Responds.

Mr. Haines, who is prominently mentioned for the presidency, accepted the hospitable intent of the citizens of Ocean City. "Comfort to mankind," said Mr. Haines, "is what man wants most of in this world, and Ocean City has all the comforts that the most exacting of mankind could desire. We do not know what the wild waves are saying, but we are glad to find that after an absence of seven years from Ocean City the waves are still here." Mr. Haines was followed by the president's address.

President Sloan's Address.

In his annual address to the Association, President Sloan said: "Ours is not a business wherein each man can crawl into his shell and feel safe, happy and contented. We are engaged in a public business, though each one's business is a matter of private concern. The most valuable and the riskiest asset we have is public confidence, and no legislation of popular assemblies can guide, direct or control that confidence."

Supervision Of Banks.

The supervision of State banks of Maryland is authorized by the act of 1898, and while it is an improvement over the system, prior to that time, it might be improved upon. The power of the Treasurer to appoint a receiver for banks is a little too drastic, and in the hands of some men would be dangerous, but in all other respects the law is not as strict as it should be, and is generally incomplete and deficient. At present the State has the services of a competent, conscientious and painstaking examiner, whose ability has largely supplied the deficiencies of the law. The law does not provide for an examination of mutual savings banks, and in this class are some of the largest depositories in the State, nor does it reach those parties who individually or as a partnership advertise and assume to run a bank.

Advocates Department Of Banking.

I believe there should be established in this State a department of banking, whose chief officer should have charge of the execution of all banking laws, in force, or to be enacted, relative to banking, savings, trust, guarantee, identity, mortgage, investment and loan corporations, with full authority to examine into their true condition and to correct any evils that might be found to exist in their methods or system, and to call upon such corporations at stated times for full and detailed reports of their conditions that such superintendent would be required to publish an annual report of the exact condition of all institutions that come under the jurisdiction of his department. The law, whether State or national, should provide such supervision as will insure safe banking and invite public confidence. Careful and conservative banks never object to close supervision; those who do object need it.

There should be a law upon the statute books making it a crime to receive deposits after a bank has become insolvent, and make the commission of such an offense punishable by fine and imprisonment. I have often debated in my own mind whether there should be a law requiring substantial indorsement of the paper of incorporated companies. Some such concerns boast that they can get all the money they want on single name paper. An individual may fail and recover. A corporation may fail and recover. Does it not seem to you that the officers of a corporation have an abundance of nerve to ask a banker to take paper they will not insure themselves? Very often banks take chances on corporation paper they could gracefully refuse.

Eastern Shore College Rapidly Progressing In Attendance And Worth To This City And County.

At the Second Annual Commencement of the Eastern Shore College, President M. T. Skinner in his address on "The Eastern Shore College and the City's Business Interests," presented some interesting facts showing the growth of the school and how it helps the business interests of Salisbury. Three years ago, when he opened the school the attendance was small, and the outlook at the close of the first year was not very encouraging but determined to make a success, Prof. Skinner labored as never before, and the results of his indefatigable efforts were manifest the second year by a doubling of the number of pupils in attendance. This year the number is double that of last year—or 70 in the various departments. Next year the Professor says the attendance will be largely increased. The college, he says, is now on a firm foundation and is here to stay. Next year he expects the school to benefit the business interests of our city to the extent of several thousand dollars expended by the people who come here from other Eastern Shore counties.

Rev. E. O. Granberry, pastor of the Division Street Baptist Church, delivered a lecture on "Everyday Horrors," which was bristled full of good advice to the young graduates, who are soon to go out into the business world, and into positions. He counseled practicality in business methods; strict honesty in the face of every temptation to do wrong in these days of sharp practices in modern business methods; and a devotion to the interests of one's employer. The address was couched in beautiful language and held the undivided attention of the audience.

County Superintendent, H. Crawford Bonds delivered the diploma to the graduates.

The salutatory was delivered by Miss Louise Vandy, the valedictory by Miss Mary V. Powell.

The stage was very beautifully decorated with the class colors, gold and navy blue; the class flower, carnations, and with palms and other potted plants. Across the front of the stage was suspended the class motto, "Over the Alps Lies Italy," wrought in large gilt letters. The stage presented a very pretty appearance. A large and appreciative audience was present at the Opera House.

Over 10,000,000 Feet Of Timber, Etc., To Be Sold In Snow Hill, Tuesday, June 26.

Probably the largest sale of timber recorded in Worcester County or this section of the Eastern Shore will take place at Snow Hill next Tuesday, June 26, in front of the Court House door, beginning at 1.30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Besides two valuable tracts, a building lot, etc., located in Snow Hill, some veneering machinery of Burdage's mill, and the homestead property near Whiton of the late Edward White, there will be sold over 10,000,000 feet of pine, cypress, oak, gum, poplar and maple timber, nearly half of which is old growth, belonging to the heirs of Edward White, deceased, and advertised in detail elsewhere in this paper.

At Liberty, near Berlin about a million feet of good pine in two adjoining tracts will be sold, well located and only about 5 miles from Interstate Station.

Near Parnell's Bridge over 300,000 feet of cypress will be sold in the Henry, Grape Island, Confirmation and Franklin Branch Swamps.

Near Porter's Bridge on the Jones tract, about a million feet of gum and 200,000 to 300,000 feet of cypress, ash and poplar.

On the home swamps near Whiton about 5 miles from Newark about a million feet of gum, over a million of cypress, ash and oak and a million of maple.

Near Whiton also, is the Jones tract of 75 acres, well set in young pine with now from 75,000 to 100,000 feet of saw pine on it.

These tracts furnish valuable opportunities to investors and manufacturers.

—Eggs 18 cents; Wheat 80 bushels corn at sixty cents a bushel.

I. H. A. Dulany & Sons.

It should be a law such as is suggested.

It should be the aim of every banker to so conduct his bank as to win and hold the confidence of his best customers. Their good will is his asset that is always valuable, and their confidence is worth double any emergency. It is not uncommon that we should know each other's private business, or that the confidence of one bank should be the property of another. But advice and caution about securities and loans are always to be desired. Treasurer William Marchant, an optimistic report upon the condition of the Association.

Record Year in Commerce.

Washington.—The foreign commerce in the United States in the fiscal year which ends with this month promises to exceed in both imports and exports that of any earlier year. The details of ten months of the year's commerce have been announced by the Department of Commerce and Labor, and should May and June show as large a monthly average, the imports will be $1,335,000,000 and the exports $1,785,000,000.

The figures of the fiscal year 1903 exceed, both as to imports and exports, those of any prior year, and the fact that the recorded imports of ten months of 1903 exceed by nearly $100,000,000 those of the corresponding months of last year, and that exports exceed by over $200,000,000 those of the corresponding months of last year, suggests that there can be no doubt that the fiscal year 1904 will make the highest record ever shown in both imports and exports.

In imports the increase occurs in all classes except foodstuffs, and in exports the increase occurs in every class, but especially in foodstuffs and manufactures. In the class of imports designated "articles in a crude condition for use in manufacturing," the increase is a gain of about $25,000,000 over the corresponding months of last year. The articles wholly or partially manufactured for use in manufacturing show a gain of $35,000,000. The group "articles manufactured ready for consumption" shows a gain of nearly $35,000,000. The group "articles of voluntary use and luxuries, etc.," shows a gain of about $28,000,000, while "articles of food and live animals" show a loss of $22,000,000.

The exports show increases in every group, agricultural products showing a gain of $150,000,000 and manufactures an increase of $60,000,000, while products of the forest show a gain of $10,000,000, those of the mines about $5,000,000, those of the fisheries nearly $1,000,000, and the miscellaneous group $1,000,000. The increase in agricultural products occurs chiefly in corn, oats, wheat and flour. In manufactures by far the largest increase occurs in iron and steel.

Clam Chowder for Fisherman's Wife.

One-half peck of clams in the shell, one quart of potatoes, sliced thin; a two-lb. cube of fat salt pork, one or two onions, one teaspoonful salt, one-half teaspoonful white pepper, one large tablespoonful butter, one quart milk, six butter crackers.

Clams in the shell are better, as they give more liquor. Wash with a small brush and put them in a large kettle with half a cupful of water or just enough to keep the under ones from burning; set over the fire. When the clams at the top have opened take them out with a skimmer and when cool enough to handle take from the shell, remove the thin skin, then with a pair of scissors cut off all the black end and the leather straps into small pieces leaving the soft part whole.

Let the liquor settle and pour it off carefully. Use half water and half clam liquor. Put the pork up in small pieces and the onions in slices and fry with the pork in an omelet pan being careful that it does not burn. Pour the fat through the strainer into the kettle leaving the pork scraps and onions in the strainer. Put the sliced potatoes into the kettle hold the strainer over the potatoes and pour through it enough boiling water to cover them. This is easier than frying in the kettle and skimming off pork and onions at the risk of burning the fat, cleaning the kettle and beginning again.

When the potatoes have boiled ten minutes add the clam liquor, the seasoning and then the clams; when warmed through add the hot milk and turn into the tureen. Do not put the clams into the chowder until the potatoes are nearly done, as prolonged boiling hardens them.

To put the brake on the wagon going down the hill is a help to the horse, when the wagon is heavily loaded. But what driver would think of applying the brake to a loaded wagon going up hill? If he did, his sensible horses would probably balk; many a man is in the condition of pulling a load up hill with the brake set against him. When his stomach is out of order, and the allied organs of digestion and nutrition impaired in their functions, a friction is set up which has to be overcome in addition to the performance of daily duties. A foal stomach makes a foggy brain, and the man with a disordered stomach has often to grope his way through the day's business like a man in a fog. He forgets appointments. Problems seem presented to his mind "wrong and to." This condition is antipathetic to the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It puts the stomach and digestive and nutritive system into a condition of perfect health, and gives a clear brain, a steady hand and a light step for the day's duties. When constipation clogs the channels of the body, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets will work an effectual cure of that disastrous disease.

—FOR SALE.—Now ready, 50,000 sweet potato sprouts. Yellow Mammoth and Little Gem Jersey, $1.35 per 1000. Apply to W. F. Allen, Salisbury, Md.

—WANTED.—Boys and girls to take orders for a new Maryland song; libretto completed; libretto, songs, 10 cents for a complete copy to Louis E. Smith, New York.

Reveries Of A Diplomat.

I am seated at my desk tonight and visions of the past float before me. I wonder if one can find happiness and welfare in worldly honors and cares. I believe not, at least in a world where life is so variable. As I dream here tonight alone I think of voices long since passed away, tender words that soothed my boyhood's grief. Many of other days seem to haunt me, death, love, ambition, despair, hope and honors, have had their sensational share, each trading deeply in my heart the hours of their call. They have filled many a blank page in my book of sentiments. Experience has been in my earlier days a severe master to me, nevertheless and however great may be now or in the future my public life, dream faces will appear and soft words spoken in the heat of night. The effect is strange, sweet and most welcome. Sensations flow gently from my heart as soft music upon a moonlit sea. Too well I know the meaning of life, for I have tasted many phases, from the greatest centers of civilization to the lowliest peasant hut. From the formal cold practical northern region to the romantic passionate existence of the South. Time may roll on, events may pass away, but the recollection ever remains vivid and strong, despite all it will not die, but still grow, for in it lies our youth and with it a part of our heart "the best." The dew of youth has been rubbed off and the heart may seem dead but the least thing can revive it. The intonation of a voice, a soft word, the touch of a hand, the beauty of a moonlight night or the melancholy of the sea. Each year as it goes by is a leaf in the chapter of time. The dream of a future shadowed by the recollections of the past. Thus I stand today a cold disillusioned man of the world. "A Diplomat," there is no retreat. We must march onward to the goal, and happiness lies not in worldly honors. It is in the winnowing days of childhood and youth that life flows on like the babbling brook in summer time. So back once again in the shadows of the past, "Tomorrow a Diplomat." Katharine Lewis.

Pearls for Market.

"The systematic culture of freshwater pearls may easily become an important industry in the United States, as the mollusks from which they are taken are very abundant in our lakes and rivers," writes Elizabeth R. Reed in the Technical World Magazine for January. "The Mississippi basin, especially, teems with them, presenting many forms, which differ from those of the Atlantic watershed and other parts of the world."

"The methods of culture are exceedingly simple, as it is necessary only to open slightly the shell and insert a very small, transparent glass bead, putting it between the mantle and the shell. Great care must be taken to avoid injury to the little animal, and in opening the shell a thin, flat, iron tool with a wooden handle and a bead point should be used; a knife might answer for this purpose. When the point has been inserted, it is turned around to an angle of about 90 degrees; the shell being thus partially opened without injury to the life within. After treatment, it must be returned to the water for a year or two, while the process of incrustation goes on."

CHILD'S AWFUL SKIN HUMOR

Screamed with Pain—Suffering Nearly Broke Parent's Heart—Twelve Years of Misery—Doctor Called Case Incurable—Helped from First, and

SPEEDILY CURED BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I wish to inform you that your wonderful Cuticuras has put a stop to twelve years of misery I passed with my son. As an infant I noticed on his body a red spot and treated same with different remedies for about five years, but when the spot began to get larger I put him under the care of doctors. Under their treatment the disease spread to four different parts of his body. The larger the doctors treated him the worse it grew. During the day it would get rough and form like scales. At night it would be cracked, inflamed, and badly swollen, with terrible burning and itching. When I think of his suffering, it nearly breaks my heart. His screams could be heard down stairs. The suffering of my son made me full of misery; I had no ambition to work, to eat, nor could I sleep.

"One doctor told me that my son's eczema was incurable and gave it up for a bad job. One evening I saw an article in the paper about the wonderful Cuticuras and decided to give it a trial.

"I tell you that Cuticuras Ointment is worth its weight in gold; and when I had used the first box of Ointment there was a great improvement, and by the time I had used the second box of Cuticuras Ointment, and the skin of my child was cured. He is now a healthy, happy child, and his skin is as fine and smooth as ever. (Signed) William H. Smith, 1234 Broadway, New York, N. Y., June 10, 1904."

ELECTION OF U. S. SENATORS.

The framers of our Constitution were undoubtedly right in separating the methods of the selection of the two houses of Congress. The one body was supposed to represent the States in their political sovereignty, each of equal weight and importance. The other more particularly the people of each Congressional District. The upper house was chosen upon the theory that the Governor needed a more conservative body with longer terms of service that was not as directly amenable to the people as was the House of Representatives and the conjunctive influence of the two would give that stability and power to the General Government which otherwise could not obtain and was intended in this respect to imitate the Government of Great Britain's House of Lords and Commons.

It is very seriously to be considered if this time honored custom and constitutional provision would have ever been questioned if the make up of the average State Legislature had not steadily deteriorated. Given a patriotic and intelligent legislature nobody questions their wisdom in this matter but in a number of States in the union machine politics have brought to the surface a lot of men in whom the public have no confidence and hence the demand of the election of U. S. Senator by the people. This seems to be the root of the matter and a well directed effort to the improvement and selection of the State's representatives would go a long way toward guiding the demand for selection of Senators by the people.

Edward VII And Kaiser Wilhelm May Meet At The Jamestown Exposition.

Norfolk, Va.—The present is an era in which the unexpected happens and even more nothing for worthless and absurd precedents. A decade ago it would have appeared ridiculous to suggest the possibility of the King of England and the German Emperor meeting on the soil of Virginia where the birth of the American nation was being commemorated by the Jamestown Exposition. Such a suggestion is in the light of present events, well within the bounds of probability.

King Edward is thinking about coming to America for a visit. The English newspaper that enjoys the personal favor and countenance of the Throne urges him to do so. The London Daily Telegraph, the relations of which with the King have always been cordial, admit that there are some obstacles in the way, but insulate such a visit would be of great benefit to the progress of civilization and perpetual international amity. It is sincerely to be hoped that the visit ought to be made and probably will be made. It is well known that the British King does not care a straw for precedent and is interferes with progress.

The Royal itinerary will include the Jamestown Exposition, near Norfolk, Virginia, New York and Canada. It is peculiarly fitting that England's present king should witness the commemoration of the founding of the English speaking America under a monarch granted by an English King.

FIRST: All that vacant lot lying and being situated on Bank and Green Streets, in the town of Snow Hill, Md., having a frontage of 110 feet on Bank Street and 134 feet on Green Street, and is the same real estate which was conveyed to the said Edward White, deceased, by Charles F. Truitt and others, by deed dated the 19th day of December, in the year 1898, and recorded among the land records of said county in Liber F. H. P. No. 4, folio 519 as by reference thereto will more fully appear. This valuable real estate is located in the business section of Snow Hill, and is suitable for business purposes. Immediate possession will be given.

A Desirable Snow Hill Residence.

SECOND: All that valuable house and lot situated on the west side of Hill Street, in the town of Snow Hill, at present occupied by Thomas M. Mearns, described as follows, to wit: Beginning on said Hill Street at the Northern corner of the lot conveyed by the heirs of the said Edward White to a certain Mary A. Esham, by deed dated July 9th, 1906, and recorded among the land records of said county, in Liber F. H. P. No. 28, folio 240, and running from thence in a northerly direction by and with Hill Street, a distance of 55 feet; thence in a westerly direction in a line parallel to the north line of the said Esham property to the lot of Dr. John S. Aydelotte; thence by and with said line in a southerly direction to the Esham property aforesaid, and with the Esham property aforesaid to the place of beginning, a right of way 9 feet wide, is hereby reserved over the alley lying to the north of the Esham property aforesaid, for the use of the said Esham property, and specifically reserved in the said deed to the said Mary A. Esham.

The property referred to in this paragraph of the advertisement is a part of the same which was conveyed to the said Edward White in his life time by a certain Clayton J. Parnell and wife, by deed dated August 18th, 1898, recorded among the land records of said county in Liber F. H. P. No. 4, folio 176.

A Commodious Snow Hill Dwelling.

THIRD: All that valuable house and lot situated on the corner of Hill and Market Streets, in the town of Snow Hill, Md., at present occupied by James E. Parnell, having a frontage on Hill Street of 150 feet, more or less, and on Market Street, 135 feet, more or less. This is also the remaining portion of the property conveyed to the said Edward White, by the said Clayton J. Parnell and wife, by the deed above referred to. The office located on the property and occupied by C. V. White, with privilege of removing the same within thirty days from day of sale, is hereby reserved. The purchasers of the property named in the second and third paragraphs hereof will receive rent from the same from July the first 1906, and will be required to pay the taxes on the same for the current year.

HARVESTING THE ORANGE

In its Prime a Grove Yields Four to Six Boxes per Acre.

WORK FOR THOUSANDS

Japanese Favored as Pickers Because of Neatness, Faithfulness and Sobriety—Seedlings Planted in Early Spring Still Flourishing—Process of Sorting.

From early in December when fruit is picked for the Christmas market, until May, is the busiest season for the orange grower, and all through these months one may see among the groves that everywhere crowd up to the highways in the "orange belt," groups of pickers, many of them Japanese, and a few whites, deftly clipping the fruit from the trees with shears and placing it carefully in canvas bags suspended from their shoulders, says the Chicago News. The navel orange tree, the prevailing type, is of low stature, seldom over 10 or 12 feet in height, so that the greater part of the fruit is easily reached from the ground; for that in the higher branches the stepladder comes into play. From the canvas bags the fruit is transferred into small boxes placed at convenient points to be picked up later by the wagon men and drawn away to the packing house. Each of these small boxes contains an average of about 300 oranges and is a skilled picker will fill from 75 to 100 boxes a day, receiving for each box the sum of 3 cents.

An orange grove in its prime will yield from four to six boxes per acre, and the groves will average about one hundred trees to the acre. A ten-acre orchard will, therefore, yield in a good season about 4,500 boxes. The orange is easily injured and rendered unmarketable by rough handling, and great care must be exercised all through the process of harvesting and packing to avoid loss from this source. Japanese pickers are favored among the orange growers, not only because of the neatness, care and skill which mark their work, but because of their sobriety and faithfulness. If the oranges are not often, the case, they are gently dumped into a shallow vat, where they are moved along by a travelling belt between brushes submerged in water and carried thence up to a platform to be dried in the sun. If they have no need of this cleansing process they are dumped into another capacious box or apron to be caught and carried by another slow moving belt up to a platform, where they pass along under the inspection of a group of workers, who pick out the imperfect fruit, and deposit them in canvas shutes for other disposition.

From this point the stream, freed from its imperfections, flows on and down a gentle incline to a lower level after being caught up on the way in a pocket-like contrivance in which the weight of the oranges is taken and registered. On the lower level the oranges, which still, like poor Joe, are "allus a-movin' on," are made to separate themselves into three sizes or principal grades by which they are known to the market—"standard," "choice" and "fancy." This is done by the simple device of a long trough or shallow wooden channel, with a slit at the bottom running lengthwise and varying in width, according to the slant desired. As the little rivulet of oranges flows along this trough the separation is effected by the fruit dropping through this slit according to size, the smallest first and last of all the golden beauties labeled "fancy." As they thus separate themselves the oranges roll down through side chutes into shallow canvas boxes, whence they are picked up by the deft and nimble fingers of other workers, usually young women, "dressed in soft paper and packed in the boxes, not to be seen again until opened for sale in the Eastern markets. Then they are ready for their long journey over mountains and plain to the orange lovers of the Middle West and the Eastern seaboard.

This is the harvesting. There are many other phases of the industry from the getting out of the nursery tree to the marketing of the product equally interesting and worthy of attention. The trees are transferred from the nursery to the orchard when they are about two years old, and are in fairly good bearing when they are five years of age. In a favorable climate and under proper care the tree lives and maintains its productivity with little variation for many years. The once famous Wolf-skill orange orchard, near Los Angeles, the first one planted for profit in California, is now over fifty years old. Many small orchards of seedlings planted in the early thirties are still flourishing. One such in the town of Bonoma has trees three feet in circumference which have borne in recent seasons as high as 25 boxes each. The mother of all the navel orange trees in Southern California, planted by Luther C. Tibbitts at Riverside in 1872, is still flourishing.

London's "Bus Law."

"Buses and cars cease running in London at 11.30 A. M., and one of the reasons why the labor men in the House of Commons would not allow them to have a strike is that they have no other means of transport."

LIGHT-GIVING SEA ANIMALS.

Some Curious Phosphorescent Creatures Found in the Deep.

According to a writer in The Scientific American there are, on record, several instances of persons having put the light emitted by pyrosoma to practical purpose. One specimen kept alive in a tank in a dark room would, when stirred with a stick, emit a light strong enough to enable one to read medium sized print.

Still another writer tells of having written his name with his finger upon the side of a giant pyrosoma, whereupon the characters were instantly reproduced in letters of living fire. A French zoologist, who met a school of pyrosoma, says that they resembled "red hot balls of fire," but the claim is advanced for Birba, a Brazilian naturalist, that he was the first to put the light of these queer creatures to practical purpose. Placing six small ones in a swinging glass in his cabin, he is said to have written a description of the animals by their own light.

By some the pyrosoma is called the fireball, and the name is not out of place, for the animal does resemble a barrel, being about a foot in length and open at one end. It is in the tropics that it is found at its best, but it is also found sometimes in the waters of the islands of Southern California. One caught in Avalon Bay, in these waters some time ago was successfully placed in a tank and photographed. First seen, a blaze of light about ten feet below the surface as it slowly rose to the surface, it was supposed to be a huge jelly fish. Through the window of a glass-bottom boat its course was followed as it rose, and then its shape was seen to be long and cylindrical. A faint light was emitted from the animal, but the moment it was touched it blazed out in a bright glare of silvery green light.

Close examination reveals the fact that the pyrosoma is not one animal, but in reality millions of minute little creatures all joined together in one body by insoluble ties. Each of these little individual animals in feeding draws in water that is expelled into the inside space, and out into the sea again through the opening at one end of the composite animal. It is this process of taking in and ejecting water that forces the pyrosoma along. In the tropics the pyrosoma often grows to great size. One found there is said to have measured four feet in length and to have been ten inches in diameter. Scientists give the pyrosoma high rank in the different stages of animal life, classing it a little lower than the fishes. Indeed, it is claimed that in the larvae of some forms a skeleton is to be found, believed by some to be a primitive backbone.

The light emitted by these wonderful animals varies both in color and color, some giving off comparatively white light, others a bluish light, and still others a beautiful pale greenish light. The brilliancy of the light given off by a vast number of these animals when grouped together is best described by Sir Wyville Thompson, who wrote of sailing through a large number of them in this fashion: "It was an easy matter to read the smallest print sitting at the after port in my cabin, and the bows shed or threw side rapidly widening spaces of radiance so vivid as to throw the sails and rigging into lights and shadows." Of all the light giving animals the saipa is said to be the most wonderful. Like the heteropod, this animal is provided with claspers that enable it to fasten to seaweed and rocks so plentiful are they in California waters that the Santa Catalina Channel, which is from eighteen to twenty miles wide and about forty-five miles long is at times literally covered with them as far as the eye can reach. Covering the entire surface and gleaming like gems in the sunlight, they present a beautiful picture. These animals constitute a delicacy much sought for by whales. Some of them shed a silvery light, while others shed blue and others red light.

Phosphorescent crabs are also found in the California waters in large quantities. These crabs, beautiful in their tints of red, blue, purple and green, give out a peculiar light at night, the effect of which is startling, since it makes the animal literally stand forth in lines of gold. Still another light giving creature to these waters is the phyllophore, a sluggish mollusk. So plentiful are the light-giving denizens of the deep along the California Coast that those who have undergone the experience say a night spent on these waters is awe inspiring indeed. But beautiful and impressive as the strange sight is to the beholder, the light giving powers of these animals are disastrous to themselves, since the light emanating from them attracts the attention of marauding fishes, which seem to relish a light meal at any time.

Telling the News in Holland. In Holland births, marriages and deaths, instead of being recorded in newspapers, are indicated by windmills. When a miller gets married he stops his mill with the arm of the wheel in a slanting position and with the sails unfurled. His friends and guests frequently do likewise with their mills in token of the ceremony. To indicate a birth the wheel is stopped with the arms in a slanting position, but at a more acute angle than for a marriage, and with the two upper sails unfurled. Should a miller die the sails of his mill are all furled, and the wheel is turned round until the arms form an inverted cross, in which position they remain until the mill is again started.

BAPTIZING WITH BLOOD

Manner in Which Old World Rulers Granted Constitution.

HISTORY OF CONFLICTS

Hungary and Japan Won Theirs by Voluntary Concession of the Crown—Many Monarchs Preferred Abdication Rather Than Conform to Altered Conditions.

As a general rule, national constitutions are baptized with blood, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch. A few—very few indeed—have been granted voluntarily by monarchs, the right of self-determination for all time the herald of democracy, and who have deemed it politic to spread the sails of their dynasty to windward, and to endeavor to ride on the crest of those waves of popular opinion which they were powerless to resist. In other cases again, the constitution has been built up by a long series of concessions, spread over hundreds of years, and obtained by the people from the reluctant crown through statecraft, popular pressure and sometimes through purchase. For there are several instances in history where kings have traded away prerogatives of the crown to the nation in return for money needed for dynastic purposes, or for purely selfish pleasure. The English patchwork constitution may be described as being of this particular order.

It was in the year 1848 that most of these constitutions, thus engendered in blood, first came into actual operation. True, the people of well-nigh every nation of continental Europe had been promised rights of self-government at the close of the Napoleonic wars in the second decade of the nineteenth century. But these pledges were ignored by the monarchies, mainly through the influence of that so-called Holy Alliance, which had the effect of calling into existence the Monroe doctrine, and it was not until 1848, when a revolutionary wave swept all over Europe, that the substitution of government by will of the people took the place of that of despotism by Right Divine. Some of the sovereigns made a strong fight for what they considered to be their sacred prerogatives and called upon their troops to fire upon the people. In Vienna they butchered the cabinet ministers and drove the imperial family from the city. In Paris they pillaged the royal palace of the Tuilleries and frightened King Louis Philippe so that, abandoning his throne, he concealed his identity with blue spectacles and a wig and fled to England under the assumed name of Smith. At Berlin hundreds of citizens were shot down by the troops before the kindly and somewhat weak King Frederick William IV. issued a proclamation disclaiming responsibility for what had occurred, disavowing the action of the military and granting the popular demand for a full-fledged constitutional government. At Turin King Charles Albert of Sardinia yielded not without a struggle, the "Statute Fondamentale del Regno" which is to-day the constitution of United Italy.

Among the countries that can boast of having received their constitutions by the voluntary concession of the crown are Japan and Hungary. Japan's constitution, which is of the most modern and liberal description was promulgated in February, 1889, when the Mikado voluntarily surrendered his autocracy, based upon the popular belief in his sacred attributes and semi-divine origin to his subjects. This was done without any demand whatsoever on their part. It was not even asked for. It was a movement wholly of his own initiative, made, of course, after due consultation with the most trusted statesmen of his empire, and had the effect which he intended, namely, of contributing to the prestige of the nation abroad and to the development of the progress and enlightenment, as well as of the industrial, commercial and intellectual activity of the people. True, there had been a revolution in Japan some twenty years previously, but it was a revolution which had for its object, not the conquest of any rights of self-government, but the restoration to the throne of the autocratic temporal power, of which it had been robbed by the usurpation of the Shogun. Japan is an amazing country, difficult as ever of comprehension to the foreigner, especially if he does not happen to have resided for some length of time in the Orient. But one of the most surprising things in its history of the last half century has been the popular revolution in favor of the restoration of the most absolute despotism to the Emperor and then the latter's unasked-for concession to his subjects 26 years later of a most liberal constitution, with legislative forms of government and the surrender of his autocracy to the people.

Strange Pledge. London pawn brokers are frequently asked to take strange things in pawn. The other day a Holborn pawnbroker lent $100 on a fine horse, which one of his daughters rode until it was redeemed. The same pawn broker once took in pledge a medical chest of poisons that were strong enough to kill 10,000 men. It was, however, a valuable deposit, as one of the poisons was very cheap. A. W. ## Order of Publication.

Thomas Perry, Executor of the last will and Testament of Mary Virginia Dashiell, late of Wicomico County, deceased, vs. Charles Huntman, Henry Huntman, Lulu Huntman, Virginia Dashiell, Louise Perry, Nellie W. Waller, Marian W. Stanford.

No. 1635 Chancery in the Circuit Court for Wicomico County.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree or order of the Circuit Court for Wicomico County, in Equity, whereby the further administration of the trust estate mentioned in the above entitled cause may be conducted under the supervision and direction of said Court.

The bill states that Mary Virginia Dashiell, late of Wicomico County, died, in 1894, leaving a last will and testament, and that said will was duly admitted to probate by the Orphans Court of Wicomico County, and that letters Testamentary thereon were granted by said Orphans Court unto the above named complainant, the executor named in said will, and that said Executor has passed his final Administration account in said Orphans Court; and that he has paid all the debts of said testatrix and has paid and delivered to the proper parties all the cash and real estate, and the distribution of the balance or remainder of the estate has been made by said Orphans Court; that by the residuary clause of said will, an undivided one-sixth part of said real estate was bequeathed to said complainant, in trust, to invest the same and to collect the interest therefrom, and to pay the net income from the same to the children of Mary Louise Huntman, late of Washington City, deceased, and as to the time the youngest survivor of said children shall attain his or her majority, then the principal of said trust shall become vested in said children equally, share and share alike, the descendants of any deceased child of said Mary Louise Huntman, to hold in the place of said child deceased, and if no such child or descendant be then living, the said principal to become vested in the above named defendants, Virginia Dashiell, Louise Perry, Nellie Waller and Marian W. Stanford, equally, share and share alike, to the survivor or survivors of them; and that the said children are the defendants, Charles Huntman, Henry Huntman and Lulu Huntman, all of whom reside in the city of Washington, D. C., and are infants and unmarried; and that under the aforesaid distribution the said undivided one sixth part of the aforesaid remainder, bequeathed as aforesaid, for the benefit of said children of said Mary Louise Huntman, amounts in the net sum of $11,427, with which net sum the said Executor charges himself to be accounted for in accordance with the trust created in said residuary clause of said will, and that the said Charles Huntman, Henry Huntman and Lulu Huntman are non residents of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon this 12th day of June, 1906, ordered by the Circuit Court for Wicomico County, in Equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Wicomico County once in each of four successive weeks, before the 1st day of August, 1906, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear on or before the 30th day of August next, to show cause, if any they have why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Witness my hand and seal of said Court, this 12th day of June, 1906.
HENRY PAGE, Clerk of said Court.

Trustee's Sale

OF VALUABLE

REAL ESTATE.

By virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Wicomico County passed in No. 1548 Chancery in the case of John M. Brown against E. J. Brown and others, I will offer for sale at public auction in front of the Court House door in Salisbury, Maryland on at 2 o'clock p. m., the following real estate of which William I. Brown died, seized and possessed, situated in Parsons district, Wicomico county, Md., which has been recently surveyed, and will be sold in accordance with the plat which may be seen at the office of the undersigned and exhibited at the Court House door on the day of sale.

No. 1. All that farm or tract of land whereon Edward Ernest Brown now resides, containing 104 1/2 acres, more or less, bounded on the North by the property of Oliphant and Parker, on the East by the property of Noah J. Brown, on the South by the Sallie Ann Cannon property and on the West by the Wm. Wirt Leonard property, improved by a good dwelling, necessary outbuildings, and is in good state of cultivation.

No. 2. The portion of the home farm of the said William I. Brown whereon C. J. Brown now resides, containing 116.69 acres, of which 89.12 is cleared and 27.57 is timber land bounded on the West by the County road, known as the Brown Road, and on the North by lot No. 3, and bounded on the northeast by land of Helen Parker and southeast by the property of Geo. Brown and heirs of John W. Farlow. This farm is improved by a commodious dwelling house and outbuildings, apple orchards, and is in good state of cultivation. There is also a large amount of growing oak and pine timber on it.

No. 3. The remaining portion of the home farm, containing 48.55 acres of which 34 is cleared and 14.55 is timber bounded on the West by the said County road, on the North by the County road leading from the Parker Mill easterly, and on the east by the property of Helen Parker and on the south by farm No. 2. This property is improved by a dwelling, and has also a fair amount of growing timber, and some orchard.

Terms of sale: Ten per cent cash, on day of sale. The balance payable in two equal installments of one and two years, from day of sale, purchaser to give bond for the deferred payments, with security to be approved by the trustee, bearing interest from day of sale.

JAY WILLIAMS, Trustee.

SUN LIFE ASSURANCE CO.

OF CANADA.

AS A COMPANY IN WHICH TO ASSURE.

"The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada does things liberally and promptly. Twenty years ago an application took out, with that company, a Semi-Endowment Policy for $1,000, of which $500 was guaranteed at the expiration of the policy, with accumulated profits, and $1,000 in the event of death within the period.

"Now, the assured has been notified that the Endowment period has expired, and that he could, if he chose—1st, withdraw $500, plus $401.05 of accumulated profits, or a total of $901.05; or 2nd, Obtain with the amount of the first option, a non-participating policy for $1,680 payable at death; or 3rd, obtain an annuity for life of $73.15.

That sum of $401.05 of profits earned in twenty years for the assured by the Company, added to the $500 of guaranteed Semi-Endowment, is a result which is an eye-opener for people who desire to invest their savings safely.

"The owner of the above policy (No. 13,587), was protected in case of death during the period of twenty years for the sum of 1,000, for nothing, and finally he draws nearly fifty per cent. more than he paid out in premiums during his twenty years of assurance.

"Once more therefore does the Sun Life of Canada prove the truth of its motto—

'PROSPEROUS AND PROGRESSIVE.'

"We keep for public inspection the positive proof of the assurance policy as above related."

"Le Moniteur du Commerce."

With such results it should be easy for intending insurers to make a decision as to the Company which best looks after the interests of its policy-holders.

Prominent Young Man Drowned At Cambridge.

Cambridge, Md., June 21.—Russell Hewlett, son of Deputy Fish Commissioner and Mrs. Thomas Hewlett, was drowned this afternoon in Cambridge creek. He intended to pass around the storehouse of the James Wallace Packing Company, which is built to water's edge. A narrow log is the only passageway. His foot slipped and he fell into the water, and after a brief struggle was drowned.

Dewey Percy, a little boy who was a few paces behind, was too frightened to call for help, and the body was not secured until Mr. Daniel Barnett, who had seen the accident from the other side of the creek, ran across and aided by Mr. Clinton Kinnaman, pulled the body up with oyster tongs.

Medical aid was hastily summoned and every effort made to restore respiration, but in vain. The lad was an only child and Mr. and Mrs. Hewlett are prostrated over their loss.

HARVESTING THE ORANGE.

In its Prime a Grove Yields Four to Six Boxes per Acre.

WORK FOR THOUSANDS

Japanese Favored as Pickers Because of Neatness, Faithfulness and Sobriety—Seedlings Planted in Early Sixties Still Flourishing—Process of Sorting.

From early in December when fruit is picked for the Christmas market, until May, is the busiest season for the orange grower, and all through these months one may see among the groves that everywhere crowd up to the highways in the "orange belt," groups of pickers, tawny Mexicans, little brown men from Japan and occasionally a few whites, deftly clipping the fruit from the trees with shears and placing it carefully in canvas bags suspended from their shoulders, says the Chicago News. The navel orange tree, the prevailing type, is of low stature, seldom over 10 or 12 feet in height, so that the greater part of the fruit is easily reached from the ground; for that in the higher branches the stepladder comes into play. From the canvas bags the fruit is transferred into small boxes placed at convenient points to be picked up later by the wagon men and drawn away to the packing house. Each of these small boxes contains an average of about 200 oranges and a skilled picker will fill from 75 to 100 boxes a day, receiving for the each box the sum of 3 cents.

An orange grove in its prime will yield from four to six boxes per acre, and the groves will average about one hundred trees to the acre. A ten-acre orchard will, therefore, yield in a good season about 4,500 boxes. The oranges are easily injured and rendered unmarketable by rough handling, and great care must be exercised all through the process of harvesting and packing to avoid loss from this source. Japanese pickers are favored among the orange growers, not only because of the neatness, care and skill which mark their work, but because of their sobriety and faithfulness. If the oranges need washing when picked, which is not often the case, they are given a good wash in a shallow vat, where they are moved along by a travelling belt between brushes submerged in water and carried thence up to a platform to be dried in the sun. If they have no need of this cleansing process they are dumped into another capacious box or apron to be caught and carried by another slow moving belt up to a platform, where they pass along under the inspection of a group of workers, who pick out the imperfect fruit, and deposit them in canvas shutes for other disposition.

From this point the stream, freed from its imperfections, flows on and down a gentle incline to a lower level after being caught up on the way in a pocket-like contrivance in which the weight of the oranges is taken and registered. On the lower level the oranges, which still, like poor Joe, are "allus-a-movin' on," are made to separate themselves into three sizes or principal grades by which they are known to the market. "Choice" and "standard," "choice" and "standard." This is done by the simple device of a long trough or shallow wooden channel, with a slit at the bottom running lengthwise and varying in width, according to the grading desired. As the little rivulet of oranges flows along this trough the separation is effected by the fruit dropping through this slit according to size, the smallest first and last of all the golden beauties labeled "standard." As they thus separate themselves the oranges roll down through shallow chutes into shallow canvas boxes, whence they are picked up by the deft and nimble fingers of other workers, usually young women, wrapped in soft paper and packed in the boxes, not to be seen again until opened for sale in the Eastern markets. Then they are ready for their long journey over mountains and plain to the orange lovers of the Middle West and the Eastern seaboard.

This is the harvesting. There are many other phases of the industry from the getting out of the nursery tree to the marketing of the product equally interesting and worthy of attention. The trees are transferred from the nursery to the orchard when they are about two years old, and are in fairly good bearing when they are five years of age. In a favorable climate and under proper care the tree lives and maintains its productivity for a long time. The once famous Wolf-skull orange orchard, near Los Angeles, the first one planted for profit in California, is now over fifty years old. Many small orchards of seedlings planted in the early sixties are still flourishing. One such in the town of Sonoma has trees three feet in circumference which have borne in recent seasons as high as 25 boxes each. The mother of all the navel orange trees in Southern California, planted by Luther C. Tibbitts at Riverside in 1873, is still flourishing.

London's "Hus Law."

"Busses and cars cease running in London at 12.30 A. M., and one of the reasons why the labor men in the House of Commons were earlier dismissed is that they have no autos or cabs to take them home."

LIGHT-GIVING SEA ANIMALS.

Some Curious Phosphorescent Creatures Found in the Deep.

According to a writer in The Scientific American there are, on record, several instances of persons having put the light emitted by pyrosoma to practical purpose. One specimen kept alive in a tank in a dark room would, when stirred with a stick, emit a light strong enough to enable one to read medium sized print.

Still another writer tells of having written his name with his finger upon the side of a giant pyrosoma, whereupon the characters were instantly reproduced in letters of living fire. A French zoologist, who met a school of pyrosoma, says that they resembled "red hot balls of fire," but the claim is advanced for Birba, a Brazilian naturalist, that he was the first to put the light of these queer creatures to practical purpose. Placing six small ones in a swinging glass in his cabin, he is said to have written a description of the animals by their own light.

By some the pyrosoma is called the fireball, and the name is not out of place, for the animal does resemble a barrel, being about a foot in length and open at one end. It is in the tropics that it is found at its best, but it is also found sometimes in the waters of the islands of Southern California. One caught in Avalon Bay, in these waters some time ago was successfully placed in a tank and photographed. First seen, a mass of light about ten feet below the surface as it slowly rose to the surface, it was supposed to be a huge jelly fish. Through the window of a glass-bottom boat its course was followed as it rose, and then its shape was seen to be long and cylindrical. A faint light was emitted from the animal, but the moment it was touched it blazed out in a bright glare of silvery green light.

Close examination reveals the fact that the pyrosoma is not one animal, but in reality millions of minute creatures all joined together in one body by insoluble ties. Each of these little individual animals in feeding draws in water that is expelled into the inside space, and out into the sea again through the opening at the end of the composite animal. It is this process of taking in and ejecting water that forces the pyrosoma along. In the tropics the pyrosoma often grows to great size. One found there is said to have measured four feet in length and to have been ten inches in diameter. Scientists give the pyrosoma high rank in the different stages of animal life, classing it a little lower than the fishes. Indeed, it is claimed that in the larvae of some forms a notochord is to be found, believed by some to be a primitive backbone.

The light emitted by these wonderful animals varies both in color and color, some giving off comparatively white light, others a bluish light, and still others a beautiful pale greenish light. The brilliancy of the light given off by a vast number of these animals when grouped together is best described by Sir Wyville Thompson, who wrote of sailing through a large number of them in this fashion: "It was an easy matter to read the smallest print sitting at the after port in my cabin, and the bows shed on either side rapidly widening spaces of radiance so vivid as to throw the sails and rigging into lights and shadows."

Of all the light giving animals the salpa is said to be the most wonderful. Like the heteropod, this animal is provided with claspers that enable it to fasten to seaweed and rocks so plentiful are they in California waters that the Santa Catalina Channel, which is from eighteen to twenty miles wide and about forty-five miles long is at times literally covered with them as far as the eye can reach. Covering the entire surface and gleaming like gems in the sunlight, they present a beautiful picture. These animals constitute a delicious morsel sought for by whales. Some of them shed a silvery light, while others shed blue and others red light.

Phosphorescent crabs are also found in the California waters in large quantities. These crabs, beautiful in their tints of red, blue, purple and green, give out a peculiar light at night, the effect of which is startling, since it makes the animal literally stand forth in lines of gold. Still another light giving creature to these waters is the phyllophora, a sluggish mollusk.

So plentiful are the light-giving denizens of the deep along the California Coast that those who have undergone the experience say a night spent on these waters is awe inspiring indeed. But beautiful and impressive as the strange sight is to the beholder, the light giving powers of these animals are disastrous to themselves, since the light emanating from them attracts the attention of marauding fishes, which seem to relish a light meal at any time.

Telling the News in Holland. In Holland births, marriages and deaths, instead of being recorded in newspapers, are indicated by wind-mills. When a miller gets married he stops his mill with the arm of the wheel in a planting position and with the sails unfurled. His friends and guests frequently do likewise with their mills, in token of the ceremony.

To indicate a birth the wheel is stopped with the arms in a planting position, but at a more acute angle than for a marriage, and with the two upper sails unfurled. Should a miller die the sails of his mill are all furled, and the wheel is turned round until the arms form an archway, upon which position they are left until the funeral procession passes.

BAPTIZING WITH BLOOD

Manner in Which Old World Rulers Granted Constitution.

HISTORY OF CONFLICTS

Hungary and Japan Won Theirs by Voluntary Concession of the Crown—Many Monarchs Preferred Abdication Rather Than Conform to Altered Conditions.

As a general rule, national constitutions are baptized with blood, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch. A few—very few indeed—have been granted voluntarily by monarchs, far-sighted enough to appreciate the impossibility of stemming for all time the ever-rising tide of democracy, and who have deemed it politic to spread the sails of their dynasty to windward, and to endeavor to ride on the crest of those waves of popular opinion which they were powerless to resist. In other cases again, the constitution has been built up by a long series of concessions, spread over hundreds of years, and obtained by the people from the reluctant crown through statecraft, popular pressure and sometimes through purchase. For there are several instances in history where kings have traded away prerogatives of the crown to the nation in return for money needed for dynastic purposes, or for purely selfish pleasure. The English patchwork constitution may be described as being of this particular order.

It was in the year 1848 that most of these constitutions, thus engendered in blood, first came into actual being. True, the people of well-nigh every nation of continental Europe had been promised rights of self-government at the close of the Napoleonic wars in the second decade of the nineteenth century. But these pledges were ignored by the monarchies mainly through the influence of that so-called Holy Alliance, which had the effect of calling into existence the Monroe doctrine, and it was not until 1848, when a revolutionary wave swept all over Europe, that the substitution of government by will of the people took the place of that of despotism by Right Divine. Some of the sovereigns made a strong fight for what they considered to be their sacred prerogatives and called upon their troops to fire upon the people. In Vienna they butchered the cabinet ministers and drove the imperial family from the city. In Paris they pillaged the palace of the Tuilleries and frightened King Louis Philippe so that, abandoning his throne, he concealed his identity with blue spectacles and a wig and fled to England under the assumed name of Smith. At Berlin hundreds of citizens were shot down by the troops before the kindly and somewhat weak King Frederick William IV. issued a proclamation disclaiming responsibility for what had occurred, disavowing the action of the military and granting the royal assent to a full-fledged constitutional government. At Turin King Charles Albert of Sardinia yielded not without a struggle, the "Statute Fondamentale del Regno" which is to-day the constitution of United Italy.

Among the countries that can boast of having received their constitutions by the voluntary concession of the crown are Japan and Hungary. Japan's constitution, which is of the most modern and liberal description, was promulgated in February, 1889, when the Mikado voluntarily surrendered his autocracy, based upon the popular belief in his sacred attributes and semi-divine origin to his subjects. This was done without any demand whatsoever on their part. It was not even asked for in the native press or from the platform. It was a movement wholly of his own initiative, made, of course, after due consultation with the most trusted statesmen of his empire, and had the effect which he intended, namely, of contributing to the prestige of the nation abroad and to the development of the progress and enlightenment, as well as of the industrial, commercial and intellectual activity of the people. True, there had been a revolution in Japan some twenty years previously, but it was a revolution which had for its object, not the conquest of any rights of self-government, but the restoration to the throne of the autocratic temporal power, of which it had been robbed by the usurpation of the Shogun. Japan is an amazing country, difficult as ever of comprehension to the foreigner, especially if he does not happen to have resided for some length of time in the Orient. But one of the most surprising things in its history of the last half century has been the popular revolution in favor of the restoration of the most absolute despotism to the Emperor and then the latter's unasked-for concession to his subjects 20 years later of a most liberal constitution, with legislative forms of government and the surrender of his autocracy to the people.

Strange Pledges. London pawn brokers are frequently asked to take strange things in pawn. The other day a Holborn pawnbroker lent $100 on a fine horse, which one of his daughters rode until it was redeemed. The same pawn broker once took in pledge a medical chest of poisons that were strong enough to kill 19,000 men. It was, however, a valuable deposit, as some of the poisons were very rare. A Kensington (England) pawnbroker took a box of dynamite in pawn, and a box of dynamite.

Order of Publication.

Thomas Perry, Executor of the last will and Testament of Mary Virginia Dashiell, late of Wicomico County, deceased, vs. Charles Huntman, Henry Huntman, Lu-lu Huntman, Virginia Dashiell, Louise Perry, Nellie W. Waller, Marian W. Stanford.

No. 1625 Chancery in the Circuit Court for Wicomico County.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree or order of the Circuit Court for Wicomico County, in Equity, whereby the further administration of the trust estate mentioned in the above entitled cause may be conducted under the supervision and direction of said Court.

The bill states that Mary Virginia Dashiell, late of Wicomico County, deceased, died in 1904, leaving a last will and testament, and that said will was duly admitted to probate by the Orphans Court of Wicomico County, and that letters Testamentary thereof were granted by said Orphans Court unto the above named complainant, the executor named in said will, and that said Executor has passed his final Administration account in said Orphans Court; and that he has paid all the debts of said testatrix and has paid and delivered to the proper parties all the cash and specific legacies in said will mentioned, and that the distribution of the balance or remainder of the estate has been made by said Orphans Court, that by the residuary clause of said will, an undivided one-sixth part of said remainder was bequeathed to said executor in trust, to invest the same and to collect the interest therefrom, and to pay the net income from the same to the children of Mary Louise Huntman, late of Washington City, deceased, and at the time the youngest survivor of said children, and until the said child or children should become vested in said children equally, share and share alike, the descendants of any deceased child of said Mary Louise Huntman, to stand in the place of said child or children, and if no such child or descendant be then living, the said principal to become vested in the above named defendants, Virginia Dashiell, Louise Perry, Nellie Waller, and Mary Louise Huntman, equally, and share alike, to the survivor or survivors of them; and that the said children are the defendants, Charles Huntman, Henry Huntman and Lu-lu Huntman, all of whom reside in the city of Washington, D. C., and are infants and unmarried; and that under the aforesaid distribution of the said undivided one sixth part of the aforesaid remainder, bequeathed as aforesaid, for the benefit of said child or children, said Mary Louise Huntman, amounts in the net sum of $111.47, with which net sum the said Executor charges himself to be accounted for in accordance with the share and share alike of said residuary clause of said will, and that the said Charles Huntman, Henry Huntman and Lu-lu Huntman are non residents of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon this 12th day of June, 1905, ordered by the Circuit Court for Wicomico County, in Equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Wicomico County once in each of four consecutive weeks, before the 1st day of August, 1905, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor on or before the 20th day of August next, to show cause, if any they have why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed. Filed June 12th, 1905. HENRY PAGE, Clerk of Court.

"The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada does things liberally and promptly. Twenty years ago an application took out, with that company, a Semi-Endowment Policy for $1,000, of which $500 was guaranteed at the expiration of the policy, with accumulated profits, and $1,000 in the event of death within the period."

"Now, the assured has been notified that the Endowment period has expired, and that he could, if he chose—1st, withdraw $500, plus $401.05 of accumulated profits, or a total of $901.05; or 2nd, Obtain with the amount of the first option, a non-participating policy for $1,650 payable at death; or 3rd, obtain an annuity for life of $73.15."

That sum of $401.05 of profits earned in twenty years for the assured by the Company, added to the $500 of guaranteed Semi-Endowment, is a result which is an eye-opener for people who desire to invest their savings safely."

"The owner of the above policy (No. 13,587), was protected in case of death during the period of twenty years for the sum of 1,000, for nothing, and finally he draws nearly fifty per cent. more than he paid out in premiums during his twenty years of assurance."

When Her Saint Fell.

By A. Gladys Collins.

The waves, as far as eye could reach, broke in cold, white lines. The shore was a dull expanse of sand, and rocks climbing back and up to the leaden sky. No sound was there save the rolling of the waves on the beach. Suddenly a bird shot up from the jagged ridge, uttering a piercing note of warning, and winging great, flapping wings out across the water. A few moments later a man and a girl were clambering down toward the sand. At the foot of the descent they stopped, breathless, and waited themselves on a flat-topped rock.

"And to-morrow at this time," the girl said, "you will be gone."

The man nodded dumbly.

"Oh," the girl went on passionately, "if I could only go, too. But I mustn't think of that. It's a grand thing just to have a share in such a mission, to know that even while you're there doing that grand work somewhere you will think of me and this old, bleak shore. And I, of course, I shall think of you all the time." Her hands were clasped, her eyes, bright eyes fixed unseeingly on the gray horizon.

The man drew her gently to him and kissed her upturned face. "Dear little girl," he murmured. "It is a great, great work, the greatest God ever gives, the chance to lay down one's life for one's fellows. But in the midst of it all I shall think of you often. When I am tired and disheartened I shall think of you, and in my happier moments I shall wish you knew."

Her star eyes, brightened. "You are almost a saint, dear," she said.

"Do you see that distinguished looking man over there near the woman in the terrible blue dress?" asked Miss Dorothy Trenton.

Her brother Bob nodded. "The one who was just talking to the captain."

"I want to know him."

"I'm not interested particularly."

The object of their conversation was a tall, broad-shouldered young man with a very brown face. There was something odd about him, the something which made Miss Trenton call him "distinguished." His eyes were those of a dreamer. If anyone spoke to him unexpectedly he started like a man suddenly awakened.

When Bob Trenton disappeared below, his sister shut her book and rose with a determined air. Bob, in the meantime, had been looking at the man with the curious look of one who has never seen anything like him before.

As she neared the young man the book slipped. Startled, he turned, the dream still in his eyes. The girl dimpled gently and he stooped to pick up the scattered pages.

That evening, in what appeared the most natural way in the world, they were introduced, and from that moment their friendship grew.

He talked, and rather well, on almost any subject, but of himself he seldom spoke. He had never been to America, he had come from northern England. That much she found out within an hour. But further than that he was silent.

The mystery about him gave him added value. Miss Dorothy smiled her sweetest, and before they parted she slipped the Spanish coast, passengers left them markedly alone.

"I dreamed the voyage at first," she said, "and when I saw you I wished I hadn't started. But now I don't regret it, and I'm slightly disappointed."

"Yes," the man assented. "It had been pleasant, but it is almost over." He pointed toward the horizon.

"Why, there's that beautiful sail through the Mediterranean. I am looking forward to that so much."

The man seemed his throat. "I go by rail," he said.

"Oh," she cried, disappointedly, "I thought—"

"Yes, I know," he interrupted, "but I think perhaps it will be better so."

"Why?" she asked. "Why must you go?"

"Because," he answered, "I do not dare to stay."

The man turned to her with a sudden gesture. "I will tell you," he said, and there in the half-light he talked in low-strained tones until the moon had climbed high in the heavens. He told her of his life in his faraway, northern home, a bleak, sand-swept region with dull jagged rocks, and seabirds with strange piercing voices. He told her how a dream had come to him calling him to the East, calling him until everything seemed to have voice, the scrub pines, the rocks, the sand, and most terrible of all, those screaming birds.

And in answer he was going now. He did not mention that other girl with star eyes; everything else, but not her.

"And the call—what—what was it?"

"Suddenly the girl moved slightly and placed her hand on the man's arm. Her lips were trembling.

"Don't go," she murmured huskily. "I can't spare you."

Far away in northern England the moonlight flooded a long expanse of sand where great huge gulls shadowed. Near the foot of the rise sat a girl, her eyes gazing out across the cold, silver water. Quite suddenly she smiled, though the tears glistened on her cheeks.

"I wonder where he is to-night," she murmured softly.

FAMOUS BLOODHOUNDS.

Used Successfully in Tracking Criminals in the South.

Nick Davenport kept what is called in the South "a general store" in the little town of Valley Head, Ala. One morning Mr. Davenport went to the store, to find cans and boxes broken open, scattered about the floor, while a desk containing money had been smashed, and its contents stolen. The robbers left no clue whatever to their identity. Luckily, he had heard about Echo and O'Higgins. Promptly they might trace the perpetrators of the crime. A telegram sent to De-Philips brought him to Valley Head the same night. Without delay the dogs were led to the store. Running around the door for a moment and sniffing here and there among the articles littered upon it, both, with a short bark, started for the door, pulling the detective along as fast as he could run in their eagerness to follow the train. Straight they went to the railroad track which passed through the town.

News that the canine detectives and their master had come to the village to ferret out the robbery, if possible, had spread from one end of the place to the other, and back of the dogs hurried a crowd of a score or more armed with shotguns and pistols. But they were to have a long and hard chase. Mile after mile the animals, now unleashed, scampered over the ties, which their noses almost touched. At last they came to a railroad bridge, but not stopping, they carefully picked their way along the perilous path, although a mistake would have thrown them between the ties and into the river below. Long after midnight the dogs halted in front of a tank used for supplying water to the locomotives.

"I wonder if they're in there," said the detective. "The dogs certainly would not stop here and act the way they do."

"I reckon they're right," said a railroad man, who had joined in the pursuit. "That tank sprang a leak some time ago, and it's empty, so the robbers could easily climb up the ladder on the outside and let themselves down into it."

"Well, I will just go up and take a look inside. Give me that lantern you've got," and snuffing the deed to the word, Phelps, with pistol in one hand and lantern in the other, climbed to the top of the tank while the crowd waited breathlessly.

"Here they are, boys. Just stand in a circle round while I tell them to come out."

In response to his command to surrender, in a minute a black head appeared above the top of the tank, and its owner silently crawled down the ladder until he saw the dogs leaping at him, when he halted. Echo and O'Higgins were leashed, and then two other black heads appeared above the top of the tank. As fast as the men came down they were tied together. Then some of the party descended into the tank and found enough provisions to last them for months—all stolen from Nick Davenport's store. Most of the money taken from the store was in their pockets. Needless to say, Echo and O'Higgins had a choice supper, or rather breakfast, of bones with plenty of meat on them when they returned to Valley Head long after daylight the next morning.

An Umbrella Look.

Realizing the annoyance and inconvenience experienced by the owner following the theft of an umbrella, a simple device intended to prevent the taking of umbrellas, accidentally or otherwise, from umbrella stands, hatracks and similar places has recently been introduced.

Umbrellas are usually taken from umbrella stands when it is raining, and as they are usually taken not for their intrinsic value, but simply for account of the immediate protection which they offer from their rain, a device which when it is discovered that an umbrella cannot be raised and will be of no use to the person taking the same will return it to the stand. On this supposition the umbrella lock shown here would be of immense value, as it can be attached to any umbrella. It is made in the shape of a sleeve divided into two sections, connected by a hinge. Opposite this hinge is a lock, which co-operates with a catch in such a manner as to enable the sections to be locked together. For this purpose the lock has an opening through its casing, which enables the catch to pass in.

ANCIENT TALKING MACHINES.

First Constructed by Abbe Mical in the Seventeenth Century.

"Tradition asserts that the famous Abbe Mical made a speaking-head that was a veritable wonder; but Thomas Aquinas, who was a pupil of the celebrated saint, regarding the invention as a work of the Evil One, broke it to pieces. The illustrious Bishop of Ratisbon, seeing this, cried out: 'So perishes the work of thirty years,' says the Literary Digest.

Later, Valentine Moritz made, for the amusement of Queen Catherine of Sweden, another talking-head which was said to be able, at its inventor's pleasure, to answer questions in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, or French.

We lack information regarding this astonishing masterpiece, and may be permitted to cherish a certain degree of skepticism about it. It is very probable that its performances were due to some ingenious ventriloquist, who was able to make the mouth of his automaton move, while he himself did the talking without moving his lips.

The first talking-machine about which we have really accurate data was constructed by the Abbe Mical, and presented by him, on July 3, 1733, to the Academy of Sciences.

The accompanying illustration, from an engraving in the Bibliothèque Nationale, shows Mical's talking-machine.

The Abbe declared that his work was the solution of a mechanical problem which before his day had been considered very difficult, if not insoluble, and he added: 'The Academy of Sciences said in its report that these spirit heads might throw great light on the mechanism of the vocal organs and on the functions of speech. The learned assembly declared that this work was worthy of its approval as well from its importance as from its execution. The "Dictionnaire Universel" asserts that these heads were broken up by their inventor, but Montchouat says they were sold by him, for a considerable sum, to a foreign nobleman.

In the journals of the latter part of the eighteenth century there was mention of a talking-head that had been made about that time by a certain Wolfgang von Kempelen, born in 1737. The Journal des Savants of October, 1787, mentions a fourth phonograph made by C. S. Kratzenstein; unfortunately we have only a brief notice of this invention, giving no other information about the inventor or the method of construction.

Ingenuous persons found that it was simpler to reach the same results by less honest means. Thus, in 1783 a ventriloquist made all Paris run to see a talking-head that he declared he had invented. This figure which measured about a foot and a half in height, answered all questions distinctly, but, as in the case of the famous calculating-machine that piqued the curiosity of scientists and others in Berlin recently, it was quickly found that it was not endowed with intelligence; it was the showman who answered the questions put to his automaton, summoning to his aid the secrets of ventriloquism. However this may be, it is some the less certain that in the eighteenth century there were talking-machines of remarkable ingenuity, which must have been constructed on principles similar to those of the charming little singing-birds... of whose manufacture the Swiss have a kind of monopoly.

Treasures of War.

While playing in the grounds of a Dutch church at Koonstad, South Africa, two Boer children made an interesting discovery. With small spades they were digging a hole, and just below the surface several gold coins were unearthed. They continued to dig, gradually adding to their precious store. The youngsters soon had a pile of English gold sovereigns. The sexton then joined the search and it was not long before treasure to the value of nearly $5,000 in gold and silver coins was brought to light. During the war the church was used as a hospital and for housing refugees, and it is surmised that the treasure must have been buried by some one who is now dead.

The "Aniline Purple" Lesson.

London on the fiftieth anniversary of Dr. Perkins' discovery in 1856 of coal tar mauve, the first of the aniline dyes, Prof. S. P. Thompson pointed out a serious defect in the present British method of applying science to industry.

The German look up Dr. Perkins' work in aniline dyes, perfected it, extended the process, and captured the new industry before Perkins' own country knew there had been a new industry born. The same thing, said Prof. Thompson, is now happening in case of the steel and electrical trades. "If these industries are not to pass like the color industry into other countries," he continued, "we must do more than extend our universities, and reconstruct our Royal School of Mines. We have got to make our steel and electrical works with scientifically trained men, and give them the time and facilities for conducting research departments based on commercial science."

A CRISIS IN HER LIFE

By HENRY M. MASON

According to the popular laws of her Bohemian world he was a Phil-istine and a prig, which means that he was a gentleman and old-fashioned in his ideas about women.

She was a Bohemian by circumstance and environment rather than by choice and it was only from necessity she had spent most of her later girlhood in the precincts of Fleet Street. He was amused at her taste for literature and in a mild way proud of her literary attainments. She had written for some years for some of the numerous ladies' magazines, but lately she had done deeper work, and now at last her book was finished.

As will be understood, this book was almost like a woman's first born to her, this novel into which she had put her best thoughts and her worst cynicism—a cynicism not innate, only born of a friend's trouble. Sometimes she wondered what Ralph Merton would think when he read the book. She felt he was not a man to tolerate too great a breadth of view in the woman he loved; yet she was sure he would be proud of her success. She felt the book would be a success; for even her publisher—and almost every publisher at least apex pessimism—had told her he had not the slightest doubt upon the subject.

"The story is so broad," he said,
"and people love to read about the coarser side of life."

Margaret was deeply hurt at this open criticism, for that had not been her object; and she explained to her publisher that she did not wish to appeal to the worse, but the better side of human nature, and only to point to a wholesome moral. She had written to warn women, and had only spoken in an unabashed way of sin and evil to teach a lesson and save her sex from bitter suffering.

The publisher merely shrugged his shoulders and accepted the book, and wondered why women hide what they mean by flowery language.

To-day she had received the last of her proofs, and now she was sitting over the fire, with her precious burden on her knee. Now and again she lifted a page and reread it carefully, and sat and dreamed, and altered here and there, and sat and dreamed again. Once or twice she struck something out or strengthened and rewrote a sentence, and from time to time she glanced up at the clock; and when at last it struck five she rose and collected her papers, put them on the writing table, and, recasting herself by the fire, sat listening for her lover's footsteps.

He was coming at 5.30, and she was going to tell him about her book.
He had been abroad when it was accepted, and she had not wished to write, but wanted to tell him herself.

Quite unconscious of the depth of his views on women, she eagerly anticipated his pleasure and pride. She decided not to tell him about her book at first, but, womanlike, kept her news until he would have told her his.

They had finished tea and were sitting together over the fire.

"Won't you have a cigarette, Ralph?"

"You are sure you don't mind, Margaret?"

"Of course not; I love it—it's so homelike. Besides, I want to tell you something, and men can listen better while they smoke."

He took her hand that rested on the side of his chair and raised it gently to his lips. "How you spoil me, Margaret!"

"Nothing to what I shall do by and by," she retorted, laughing. "All nice wives spoil their husbands, and I mean to be a very nice wife."

"It's a treat to meet a girl like you in these days, dear," he said. "You are not like a present-day woman, somehow."

"Perhaps they are not so bad as you think."

"Perhaps not," he said, laughing;
"but there are some funny ones about. I met one abroad, by the way—a writer, a Miss Verker"—he paused—"she gave me quite a shock."

Margaret laughed. "Really? What was she like, Ralph? Tossily about the head and sloppily artistic or the advanced young woman type?"

"Neither," he said. "Her appearance was charming—to look at—my dear Margaret; she might have been as pure and sweet as you are yourself; but her book—well, I never was so thoroughly shocked in my life."

"Do you mean by her book 'Not Otherwise'?"

"I frowned slightly. 'I should have hardly thought you even knew the name.'"

"I have read it," said Margaret, quietly, "and I thought it very clever."

He looked at her in some astonishment. "Clever!" he echoed, "of course it is clever, splendidly clever, Margaret; no one could doubt that for a moment; but I don't see what that has to do with it. It's appalling to me that an unmarried girl should write a book one cannot show one's womenfolk. Why can't women leave the coarser side of life to the man novelist to depict?"

"Perhaps she had a moral lesson to teach," said Margaret, speaking a shade coldly.

"Lesson! Nonsense!" said Merton;
"it's not an unmarried girl's place to teach moral lessons—not in that way, at any rate. You cannot touch pitch without becoming dashed, and for a young girl like that to wallow in literary mud can only show she has an impure mind and coarse imagination."

"My dear Ralph!"

able to influence a friend who writes that style of book."

"I am sure this book was meant as a warning."

"Pah!" said Ralph; "who can warn by depicting vice? She will harm a hundred where she warns one or two. If a girl wishes to teach the world a lesson let her teach it by her own purity of life and purpose."

He stopped abruptly, and added, "I am very glad that young woman does not belong to me, Margaret."

There was a moment's intense silence, as Margaret sat slowly realizing that her book was quite as outspoken. "I am very glad that young woman does not belong to me," Those were the only words she could remember distinctly of all he had said. She knew why she had not written to tell him about her book.

A subtle instinct must have warned her; the instinct that preserves sensitive women from making mistakes with those they love.

But she loved her book, too—did she love it more than Ralph? She hardly knew—she was only conscious of icy coldness toward him and involuntarily she stood up, walked to the other side of the room. He picked up a photograph that lay on the table and began to study it; looking him steadily in the face she said:

"Supposing I had written a book like that, Ralph?"

"I can't suppose anything so abnormal," Margaret—women with nerves like yours don't dig in mud."

"But supposing I had?" she persisted, feeling as though the decision of her very fate itself hung on his answer.

"I should first ask you not to publish it," said Ralph Merton very slowly, "and—"

"And if I refused?" interrupted Margaret eagerly. "Supposing I were to refuse your request—"

"I should leave you, Margaret," he said quietly. "I should never mar-

"Suppose I had written a book?"

ry a woman who wrote an unclean book, I should never trust her."

"Why not?" she asked in genuine amazement.

"I should feel she had either done something bad or was capable of doing something bad. It is woman's mission to uplift men by her example in her life, and in her writings it she writes."

"Aren't you a little hard and narrow, Ralph?"

"Perhaps so," he answered gravely. "I dare say I am narrow, Margaret—according to an ordinary modern woman's creed—but my wife will have to come up to my standard."

For a long time after Ralph Merton had left the room Margaret sat quietly looking into the fire. In one short hour her whole point of view of life had changed. She had thought her lover would be proud of her success, and she hoped he would even understand her motive in writing the book. It was even more outspoken and dealt even more deeply, perhaps, with the subject of sin and passion than that other book of which he had spoken with such contempt and open loathing. It was horrible to her to think that Ralph would imagine she had used her subject—the and story of a friend's misfortune—as an ignoble means of attaining success and money.

Margaret realized as she sat there with closely clasped hands, her heart beating with a heavy thud of nervous excitement, that she had reached a crisis in her life. How much was this man's love worth to her, and what was love when weighed in the balance against her art? Two alternatives lay before her. She must either give up Ralph or give up publishing her book.

She knew her aim had been single, and her desire quite pure; but Ralph would never understand that,
and, therefore, she need not put his faith and trust to such a test. If she published the story she knew he would never marry her. To lose him would be torture, and yet to lose her book would be torture, too. She sat there, torn first one way and then another, communing with herself—facing life and pain and pride, she felt a bitter sense of disappointment that amounted almost to de-pair. Gradually the glowing re-light died slowly down and only the gray ashes gathered and gathered until the last red glow began to fade, and still Margaret sat battling with ambition and her love.

"Shall I make the fire up for you, Miss?"

"No, thanks, Mallam."

The maid waited a moment, and then said in her usual gentle voice:

"Very well, thank you—make it up if you like."

The maid left the room to fetch the wood, and Margaret rose with a slight shiver and crossed to the writing table on which she had laid her precious proofs. Beside them stood her lover's photograph. She took it up and looked at it long and intently. It was a frank and open face, and she recalled with a throb of womanly pride the blue eyes that gave an under look that showed her old passion with a gleam of the old passion.

derneath the touch of the strong, warm hand and the voice that had said to her only that very day:

"My dear Margaret, I may be a little narrow, but my wife will have to come up to my standard."

It was a good standard—she recognized that—for it touched the high level that avoided "even the appearance of evil," and it was a standard she might do well to reach not only in his opinion of her, but in her life and work. We each live in our own isolated world of thought, and the most bitter sacrifices we ever make are those only known to our head and looked once more at her lover's photograph, and then, with a hand that trembled almost uncontrollably, she gently replaced it on her table, and, taking her proofs, crossed quickly to the fire, and, kneeling, tore them leaf by leaf and pressed them steadily into the flame.

RED TAPE IN THE ELEVATOR.

How It Binds in Washington, and How It Annoys With Its Binding.

The tribulations of the conductors on the elevators in the state, war and navy building are many, says the New York Sun. There is as much etiquette on one of these cars on a busy day as one would find at one of the big dinners at the White House.

The approach of the Secretary of State, of War, of the Navy in the direction of one of these "lifts" is signaled by a peculiar clapping of the hands by all the messengers or veterans who guard the approaches to the building.

So, at the sounds of "three bells" on the push button (a secretary calls), no matter who is on the elevator, he is an admiral or a general, the lever is reversed, down or up it goes, as the indicator reads, and the secretary is carried at once to the floor of his destination for there is no stopping at the floors to take on or let off anybody else.

Now comes the time when the keen attention of the conductor, his remembrance of faces and his knowledge of ranks of army and navy officers and their precedence—is brought into play.

For instance, on the day of the funeral of a well known general, the building was alive with officers in full dress uniform on their way to St. John's church to attend the ceremonies. A major of cavalry from Fort Myer, Va., having business at the quartermaster's department, was on the elevator and was being shot up to the third floor, when "three bells" announced the Secretary of War at the ground floor. Down went the elevator. The secretary and the major saluted and before the salutation was over "two bells" rang, meaning that an officer of high rank wished to ride in a lift.

The secretary, of course, was "it," and was first ushered out at the second floor. Then up flew the elevator to the fourth floor, to answer the general who desired to descend to the street floor. More saluting by the major. Down shot the elevator.

The brigadier departed, and the major, who had been carried past his destination twice, now breathed a sigh of relief, but just then "two bells" rang again on the second floor, and this time the chief of staff, with the rank of lieutenant general, got aboard, and down the major went again, salute and all.

After the chief of staff went, the junior officer, and observing his rank and insignia, said, "Major, what floor, please?"

"The third, please," replied the belated officer, "but the next time I want it I'll walk."

An Alluring Bait.

Among the recent advances in the construction of lures for game fishes nothing has been more conspicuous than the fact that the best method of getting the quarry to take was to something that the fish really wanted. Now a frog is practically irresistible to any well-conditioned bass, and especially a good lively frog that goes kicking down the lake or the river fairly daring the attention of the bass. The most lifelike bait put on the American market is the new Swimming Frog, which wonderfully simulates the appearance and the motion of the live frog. Made of rubber with hooks that are concealed in the legs of the lure, and so located that when drawn through the water wheels are not caught in the hooks.

Careful Thorough Prescription Work

Sometimes you imagine that you have to wait a long time for the medicine, but if we give it to you in less time, it would not be such good medicine. No matter how busy we are, every prescription is prepared carefully and thoroughly; no part of the work is slighted in any detail. It must be right before we let it go out of our hands.

You may think at the time that we are being too particular, but that is due to your anxiety and impatience. In your calmer thought you will admit that we are right, and will thank us for preparing such RELIABLE medicine. Our methods have won the commendation of all local physicians who have had occasion to know about them.

BUSINESS AND POLITICS CLOSELY RELATED

Dishonesty in One Usually Means Corruption in Both. Great Reform Influences At Work. Coming Democratic Convention At Ocean City—Its Opportunity.

"There is a tide in the affairs of men, which if taken at its flood, leads on to fortune." As politics constitute a very large part of the "affairs of men," the same may be said of political parties. It is clear that the tide has turned for better methods in business and politics. The major condition has become very offensive, and instead of there being a demand for "muck-raking" to stop, there is a great public demand for abating muck-making and for stopping muck-makers.

Head to Head.

Business and politics are blended, and he, that is dishonorable in one, will be dishonorable in the other,—given equal temptation and opportunity. The man of integrity is sound in all things and can be just as safely trusted in politics as in other affairs.

A glance will show how intimately connected are business and politics. The Campaign cry of 1896 was, that "business interests" demanded the defeat of Bryan, and hence justified corruption. The Wall Street News, one of the organs of the "Street," frankly says of this campaign, "It is not far from the truth to say that the country has suffered more by reason of the political corruption of the campaign of 1896, than it would have suffered from the triumph of Free Silver, lamentable as that would have been. It will take many years to recover from the political debauchery which was brought about by the abuse of millions of dollars in political campaigns." This is a hopeful admission.

Trust Breeder.

Business can't be dissociated from politics. Most of the time of state and national legislatures is taken up with matters of commerce, manufacturing, and finance—with an occasional sop for the farmer. "Oysters," which are supposed to spawn gold dollars, get ten times more attention than the ballot and honest elections.

The very best talent of Congress is devoting almost the whole session to the business problems of transportation and manufacturing, such as the Reboate Bill, the Meat Bill, the Pure Food Bill and the like. That "Trust Breeder," the Protective Tariff is primarily a money making scheme for the few at the expense of many.

Powerful Influences At Work.

There are numerous signs of the turning of the tide, of an awakening of the public conscience, the pulpit and the Press are talking.

The Methodist Episcopal Conference at Pocomoke denounced bribery and the preachers pledged themselves to preach against it. The New Castle Presbytery and the Protestant Episcopal Convention of Delaware have done likewise. Fidelity to these pledges, "to cry aloud and spare not," is a mighty factor in this conscience revival. It is not to be doubted that these "watchmen on the walls" will do their full duty and that pious bribe-givers will reform. The politicians of Indiana recently agreed to stop the use of money at elections.

Last fall, a half dozen representative men from the Democratic and Republican parties assembled at the Court House within twenty-four hours before the election, and agreed to be honest. Not a dollar was sent out on election day by either party, though the "bottle" was ready, and was even paid back to the contributors. It won't do to say, that the "honor among thieves" is all the honor there is in the country.

Trust The People.

For the encouragement of the "workers" who became frightened at honest methods, I will direct their attention to a comparison of the vote at the county election in 1903 with that of 1905. In the former, the Democratic vote for Comptroller was 2297 and the Republican vote 1866, at which election there was a liberal supply of money; while in 1905 for the same office, the Democratic vote was 2381 and the Republican 1823 and no money.

MORAL—Trust the people.

Good Grounds For Hope.

While recent exposures of "graft" in politics and business show a bad moral condition, there is no reason for pessimism. That the public conscience became shocked was a cheerful omen, and shows that it is not paralyzed. The effect of these exposures, without the enforcement of penal statutes, on some heretofore reputable citizens, is very pathetic. The condemnation of public sentiment drove the able, amiable and popular Senator Depew into seclusion, Messrs Hyde and McCordy from the country, Mr. McCall to his grave, and broke the heart of Mr. Alexander, and now declares that the great banker, Mr. Geo. W. Perkins is morally guilty of larceny, though technically not guilty. None of these individuals saw the "impropriety" of using their business to help criminal politics till they heard this mighty judgment of the people.

Must Come.

The failure of our Legislature to put into law, the Corrupt Practices Bill and the failure of the Congress so far, to enact the Publicity Act to prevent corporate contributions for campaign purposes, is only temporary. It looks like a failure of the usually astute politicians to keep a keen lookout to the windward for squalls. The popularity of the thrice defeated Mr. Bryan is due to the fact that the people believe in his courage and his conscience as much as in the principles he advocates, and the strength of Mr. Roosevelt rises from the same condition.

Time would fail us to speak of Folk, LaFollette, Tom Johnson, and many others and of the political condition in the great Republican state of Pennsylvania.

Will the Democratic Convention at Ocean City take the tide at its flood and adopt a platform against corruption in politics and pledge the party and its candidate to an observance and strenuous enforcement of the law against bribery of the people.

We will wait and hope for such a consummation. J. E. E.

INTERESTING ROAD ITEMS

For Maryland, 1570 Miles Of Improved Road, Or 1 For Every 756 Inhabitants. Cost In The State—Progress.

The United States Department of Agriculture has just issued a bulletin on the public roads of Maryland, the information contained in which, it is stated, was not only that furnished by the Maryland Geological Survey, but also was sent in by voluntary county correspondents appointed by the Department. The bulletin says:

The accompanying table shows that in 1904 there were 16,773 miles of public road in the State of Maryland, of which 9 miles were turnpikes or toll roads. Of this mileage, 490 miles were surfaced with gravel, 80 miles with stone and 530 miles with shells, making in all 1570 miles of improved road. It will be seen from these figures that a little over 9 per cent of the roads has been improved. By comparing the total road mileage with the area of the State, it appears that there were 1.7 miles of road per square mile of area. A comparison of miles with population shows that there was one mile of road to every 70 inhabitants, or one mile of improved road to every 756 inhabitants.

The Commissioners of each county have shares of the construction and repair of all public roads, and levy all taxes necessary for this purpose on the taxable property in the county. No county road runs from the western shore ties indicate that a special levy is made for road purposes in some counties, while in others the expenditures for roads are made from the general county fund.

The statute-labor system, which required all able-bodied male residents in certain counties between the ages of 20 and 50 years to perform road duty, was abolished several years ago.

For this reason no information is given in the table regarding it.

The State appropriates annually $300,000 for the construction of permanent roads according to plans and specifications prepared by the State Geological Survey, one half of the cost to be paid by the State and one half by the county. This law was passed by the General Assembly in 1904, but as the Act did not take effect until January 1, 1905, no expenditures were made under its provisions during 1904. Therefore no information is given in the table regarding expenditures on such State roads.

The total amount expended by the counties for road purposes was $723,470.50 in 1904. To this should be added $140,000, the average annual amount paid in tolls to turnpike companies, as estimated for the years 1895-1898 by the highway division of the Maryland Geological Survey. The total cost of all roads for the year 1904, including this sum, amounted to $863,470.50. By comparing the total amount expended with the total mileage of public road with the population of the State, it is found that the funds collected and expended for road purposes amounted to $2.07 per mile of public road, or 2 cents per inhabitant.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Hot Trimmings: Planted Skirts: Bodices: Wedding Gowns: Bridesmaids' Dresses: Graduation Attire: Colored Shoes.

Peacock's plumage in colors that no peacock would recognize, and from half the headgear one sees on the streets here, and one woman in every five is wearing a sun-pleated skirt usually of black and white check or plaid. Silks are especially popular in this form but no material escapes the plating machine, which turns out skirts warranted to stay in this form whether the material is mohair or voile.

Bodices And Coats.

The upper of such toilets may be simple waists cut out in the neck, with half long sleeves, to display pretty gams and gaudiest cuffs of lace or lingerie. The latter come in sets at all the good shops from $1.52 up to $4 if the material is real lace. In Paris coats of eon with darker skirts of various sorts are the reigning mode, which will be due here before long no doubt, but it is not seen yet, to any extent.

Wedding Gowns.

Wedding gowns have been much more in evidence than is usual during May, and the greatest variety of materials and makes are selected by fashionable brides. Heavy "stand alone" satin was the material at a recent smart wedding, while at another the Princess slip was of the softest most pliable satin, and the gown itself was a loose Princess affair of lace. A beauty and a belle of distinguished family were not long since a gown that suggested classic Greece in its lines and draperies. The material being silk crepe with a glossy satin finish.

Bridesmaids' Attire.

Bridesmaids wear frocks of any material from tulle to satin, made more often than not with full gathers at the waist, or even princess with a wide girdle formed of shirring to define the waist. Gowns of mull in simple tucked styles are modish as those of more expensive material, and hats are chosen to accord. Lingerie-hats are especially pretty with simple lingerie frocks. At a recent wedding the mull frocks topped under alpine of pink silk, and the lingerie hats of mull ruffles edged with Valenciennes had long sahes of soft pink satin that circled the crown and were tied in a simple bow with long ends at the back of the hat.

SENATORIAL PRIMARIES.

For Election Of U. S. Senator To Succeed Mr. Whyte Proposed For Next Summer. How The Arrangements Would Be Made.

That there is no practical obstacle in the way of both political parties in Maryland holding separate Senatorial primaries next summer for the election of party candidates for the United States Senate is the consensus of opinion among both Democratic and Republican politicians.

The plan meets with general commendation among those interested in the subject as a feasible and fair method by which such primaries may be held prior to the meeting of the General Assembly and the passage of special law covering this matter.

This plan in brief is as follows: Let each State Central Committee at its meeting next summer adopt a resolution declaring it to be the sense of the party that Senatorial primaries be held upon a certain date throughout the State in order that the wishes of the party voters as to who should represent them in the United States Senate might be ascertained.

After fixing the date let the resolutions name a commission of from five to seven representative party men in whose integrity and character the public has confidence to take charge of the conduct of the primaries.

Let this commission be entrusted with the duty of appointing all judges and clerks of the election and of preparing all rules and regulations for the government of the primaries. Let them further decide all matters of dispute and bear the responsibility for the fairness of the primaries.

It should be the duty of the commission to announce the purpose of the primaries and invite candidates desiring to enter to send in their names so that the ballots could be prepared by a certain date, the expense of the primaries to be covered by the deposits required of the candidates.

Under such a system it is believed a satisfactory and fair expression of the sentiment of the voters of the two parties as to Senatorial candidates could be obtained without the necessity of waiting for the next Legislature to enact a law.

—There will be a joint celebration between the Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias at Bivalve in Odd Fellows Grove on July 4. An address will be delivered by ex-Grand Chancellor Ben S. Harp. Refreshments will be served.

NEGRO TRIAL JULY 5.

Plan To Send 300 Policemen Here To Insure The Legal Hanging. Probable Burning Says Sheriff.

It has been definitely determined by the State authorities that in case of conviction, William Lee, the negro assailant of Mrs. G. Robert Barnes and Miss Frances Powell of Somerset county, must at all hazards be returned to Princess Anne, Somerset seat, to be hanged.

This was decided in spite of the open assertion of Sheriff George Brown that the county authorities desire no militia or other assistance and the admission by the Sheriff that he expected Lee would be burned to death if returned to the seat of his crime.

The State plan now is not to send militia with the prisoner, but about 300 stalwart policemen from Baltimore city, commanded most probably by Marshal Farnam whose talents for handling such a situation are highly thought of by both the Governor and his official advisers.

The argument as advanced this morning by a State official, whose opinion will have much to do with the final decision was as follows: "Baltimore police, say about 300, would have no difficulty in taking Lee back to Princess Anne and seeing that he was properly and legally hanged. Militia, in our judgement, are less feared by lynching parties, and yet apt to do far more damage to the crowd."

"The State authorities are very loath to have any white man injured in protecting such a wretch as this negro; but the integrity of the law and the reputation of the State of Maryland demand that Lee be, first, condemned to the fullest penalty, namely, death; and, secondly, that this sentence be executed in a dignified fashion and by the proper public official.

"The militia would either do nothing or shoot to kill effect. The police are better disciplined, and could disperse the mob without their heavy right sticks without killing anyone. Again, it is more or less heroic in the public view to resist soldiers in such a cause, but there is nothing romantic about Baltimore policemen with heavy clubs.

"The police will do the trick thoroughly, and will kill no white citizens of Somerset county. Lee will probably be convicted and sentenced by July 8, and we expect little delay in his execution."

His trial will take place on July 5.

Plan To Burn.

"Do you think they will hang Lee when they get him?" Sheriff Brown of Somerset was asked.

"No sir, they won't hang him," was the bitter reply; "that crowd intends to burn him alive, that's what they intend to do, and I wish it was all over with. As a matter of fact, plans have been openly made to burn the negro Lee if he is ever brought back to Somerset."

SCHOOL BOARD MATTERS

Teachers Payments Ordered. New Instructors For The Manual Training And Music Departments.

The School Board at its session Friday approved the Spring Term reports of teachers and the treasurer was instructed to forward checks at once to the teachers.

Superintendent Bounds made the gratifying report that for the first time since he has been in office every board of district trustees had been called and organized for work.

The secretary was directed to write the State Board of Education that the Misses Fish and Mr. Riggan were retained on the teachers' pension list for this county.

The Board instructed the County Superintendent to fill vacancies in the Manual Training and Music Departments—positions held last year by Miss Whitney and Miss Parkinson. These positions were filled by the selection of Miss Kate Van Cleave, of Ypsilanti, Mich., and Miss Christine Richards, of Bristol, Conn.

Miss Van Cleave is 25 years of age and is a graduate of the Ypsilanti Public School. She then entered the Michigan Normal School where she graduated with honors. She next took two years' course in Manual Training and Drawing at the Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y., afterwards teaching in that institution. She has life certificates from both the Michigan Normal School and Pratt Institute.

Miss Richards is 31 years of age. She was graduated from the Bristol, Conn., High School in 1905, after which she attended the New England Conservatory and Hartford School of Music. She then took a two years' course in the Mansfield, Pa., Normal School, finishing her course in public school music in 1903.

Phineas E. Gordy was re-elected principal of the Salisbury Grammar and Industrial School, colored.

STORMY ON FOURTH

Says Micks. Predicts A Hot Mouth And Much Electrical Disturbance. Rev. Irl H. Hicks in Word and Works, makes predictions for July from which the following are extracts:

A regular storm period is central on July 6th. Any one can of course "predict warm weather for July," as we predict that an excessively warm wave will pass over this country generally during the first ten days of this month. This condition will increase in intensity as it moves east reaching a crisis from the 4th to the 7th. Terrible electrical disturbances on the 4th to 8th, with heavy, tornado storms over central to northwestern regions will be perfectly natural. If severe thunder storms do not relieve the electric strain about the 4th to 7th the high temperature will increase to phenomenal readings and be followed by seismic and kindred perturbations over our own and other quarters of the planet. Normally, heavy rain, hail and thunder storms should occur from the 4th to the 8th and be followed by almost unseasonable changes to cooler. This is a time when local cloud bursts and water sports are to be apprehended, even though unseasonable heat and drought prevail over many sections.

Not And Stormy. A re-actionary storm period is central on the 10th, 11th and 12th. The crisis of this period will fall on and touch Thursday, the 13th. On this date the moon crosses the celestial equator. This fact will add to the probabilities of very high temperatures and thunder storms on and next to the 13th. The Venus period extends up to about the 26th, so that the extremes are liable to characterize the changes at all July storm periods up to that time.

A regular storm period covers the 16th to the 19th, central on the 17. Notwithstanding "anybody can predict it will be warm in July," we predict that this period—the 16th to 19th, will lead up to one of July's warmest periods. More thunder storms are probable about the 17th to 19th. A Venus revelation to very cool might be normally expected immediately after these thunder storms, but for the fact that the new moon, in a solar eclipse node, falls on the 18th. This fact calls for prolonged high temperatures, low barometer and threatening if not stormy conditions, over the 21st and into the next storm period.

Cooler Days To Follow. A reactionary storm period is central on the 22nd and 23rd, in which storms and seismic disturbances will be reported. Within sixty hours of six o'clock p. m. on the 21st, earthquake and volcano perturbations will reach a maximum tendency in many countries common to them. Changes in rising barometer and some cooling will follow these reactionary disturbances for two or three days—may from the 23rd to 25th progressively from west to east.

A regular storm period runs from the 26th to the 30th, being central on the 28th. Hence as early as the 26th, the last storm period, in July will show decided indications of approaching summer storms. During Friday the 27th to Monday the 30th high temperatures and threatening gusts will pass eastwardly over most parts of the country.

Death Of Mr. Willard H. Hall.

Brother Of Mrs. R. D. Grier.

Willard H. Hall, son of the late Alfred H. and Alice Mustard Hall, born July 11, 1855, Milford, Del., died June 29, 1906, at the home of his sister, Mrs. Robert D. Grier, Salisbury, Md. Mr. Hall was well known at Lewes, having gone there in 1899 and for a few years was in the employ of D. M. & V. R. R. Co. In 1899 he engaged in the Government Service, in charge of the Fog Signal on the Delaware Breakwater. In 1900 was transferred to the Ready Island Light Station at Fort Penn, Del. Owing to failing health he was removed from the station and was granted a leave of absence by the Government and on the 15th of May last came to Salisbury hoping to be benefited by the change. In early life he was united with the Presbyterian church of Milford, Del., having been for many years an earnest worker in the church and closely identified with the Christian Endeavor Society. He was upon his removal to Fort Penn ordained an Elder of the Presbyterian Church at that place.

He leaves a widow and three children by a former wife, Alfred H. Hall, Buffalo, N. Y., Mrs. Mrs. P. F. Farnham, South Zanesville, Ohio, and Miss Hall, South Zanesville, Ohio. Also a sister and two brothers, Mrs. R. D. Grier, of Salisbury, Md., and Robert C. Hall of Farmington, N. Y., and Capt. Jas. A. Hall, of Philadelphia.

EDUCATING THE INDIAN

These traditions entirely ignored in his schooling.

An educated Indian is like a man who has lost his birthright. He no longer understands the magnitude of his race and his tribe. A full-blooded Indian and a graduate of the Haskell Indian school says: "What would happen to the nature of the white man's child if he was taken from his mother before he was old enough to walk, kept among a people alien to his own race till he grew up, and made to learn another language, another history, another faith?"

And yet, that is just what the Government does with the Indian babies. They are dragged away from the squaws and brought up among the white men to look upon their race as inferior, they are made to believe that civilization is something the white men only understand, that the Indian is an aborigine, a savage.

What is the result of this enforced education?

The papoose grows to manhood, returns to the reservation with the nature of a white man, with the heart of an Indian spoiled by this education.

Everything that would tend to keep the traditions of the Indian race (which are as heroic, as poetic, as full of fine sentiment as the white man's race) is certainly avoided and left out in the education of the Indian.

He returns to his tribe and his chiefs, to his mother and his father, ignorant of the history or the faith of his own people.

The chiefs have consequently no confidence in the young men who come back to them full of the white man's education, entirely ignorant of the Indian's attachments and beliefs.

Of course the United States Government is inspired to educate the Indian for motives of unobtainable good, but the Indian is not improved by this education because it alienates him from his chiefs, his people, and his own.

If there could be some way by which the white man could educate the Indian to respect his own race, instead of impressing upon him that he is the offspring of savages, I believe that would be a compromise quite worth while.

The history of the Indian race has been handed down for generations and there are facts and qualities about it that would make the Indian realize his own manhood and all the more appreciate the history of the white man.

The Indian is not improved by education, because it is forced upon him, and because it separates him from his own.

There seems to be an unconscious cruelty in the system that tears the infants away from the squaws' breasts, as it were, and sends them back to the reservations utterly unprepared for the point of view of their own race. The old chiefs look upon the educated Indians with suspicion, with stoical bitterness; they are no longer Indians at heart—they are educated parasites of the white man.

For this reason they are not cordially received by their tribes and are frequently never return.

They don't want to "go home." And yet there is no other home for them, since the Government demands that they return to the reservations.

What hope does education hold out to the Indian? He sees about him millions of white men, who do not understand him who will not trust his character because he has been represented as the child of cruel savages. As Chief Sitting Bull said when he returned from Washington, "the white men are as the grass under our feet," there are so many of them.

Of what use to say to the white man that the Indian has virtues as good as the white man's virtues—he does not believe it, he does not even care to look into it.

So, there is the new Indian and old Indian; the educated Indian that has the spoiled heart, and the old Indian who returns to desert the faith and beliefs of his own race.

THE STANDARD OF GREATNESS.

July 1, '06—(Matt. 13: 1-14.)

That office seeking is not a modern characteristic is seen in the fact that even among the apostles of Jesus Christ there was an unassuming squabble at one time over the question of dignity for the highest positions. Deluded with the common notion that the Messiah was about to establish an earthly kingdom they disputed with each other as to who should be greatest in the kingdom. No doubt each one presented his claims with earnestness and conviction for the record says that they reasoned and disputed over the subject almost the way.

But the Master of the new kingdom gave them a rebuke that they never forgot and that changed their views completely as to what true greatness is. He took a little child, and set him in the midst, and said in effect: "This is a sample of my kingdom, and he who comes the nearest to being like this little child, in love, in trustfulness, in humility, in teachableness, in faith, in purity, in contentment, in obedience, and in other childlike characteristics will be the greatest in the kingdom of heaven."

That was an important lesson for all men, in all lands and in all ages.

But how that revolutionized popular ideas. Our idea of greatness is that men are born great and come to their place by divine right. Their blood is different from other blood, they belong to a superior grade. Hence it is our duty to allow them to occupy the seats of the mighty. And then there are others who imagine that possession of money makes them great. There is nothing more sickening than to see those who have suddenly acquired wealth aping the ways of the nobility and lordling it over the common herd with arrogant demeanor. A family name does not always stand for greatness. Royal blood is often weak and watery, not to say poisonous. True greatness never swaggers. It does not tread upon the mudsills with iron shod shoes. It does not draw aside its garments with a "holier than thou" air. It does not recline upon a throne indifferent to the sorrows of the fellow men.

True greatness is humble, unassuming, free from self-conceit and self-consciousness. When a man is great and knows it, that moment he becomes contemptible. The greatest men that have ever lived have been characterized by childlike qualities. No greater man ever lived than Jesus, yet he is known as the meekest man. The mightiest preacher of the ages was Paul yet he was as approachable and tender-hearted as a child. Jesus Christ Himself stands at the head of all the Wise Men of the ages, yet he was so free from that aloofness, popularly supposed to be a part of greatness, that whenever he paused by the wayside the children swarmed about him, and climbed into His lap with the utmost familiarity. Children are fine judges of character. They know instinctively whom to trust.

Evidently we shall have to revise our ideas of getting up in the world. We have thought that it was by looking out for Number one. We have supposed that it was by making everybody and everything come our way, and assist in boosting us. We have imagined that greatness was only another word for thrones, scepters, estates, money, office, castles, gold lace, diplomas, stars and garters. Oh, no! There are little men in office and big men outside small men wearing epaulets and large men who never wear a uniform more brilliant than a blacksmith's apron; mean men greeted with the homage of thronging thousands and noble men who never had a hand clasp, pusillanimous men, who are clothed in purple and fine linen and fare sumptuously every day, and obscure men the latchet of whose shoes many so-called noblemen are not worthy to stoop down and untie.

Not that greatness may not be found in high places and in places of loftiest dignity, but there is nothing in the office itself to confer greatness on any man. If he is great he is so because of what he is and not because of what he has. William E. Gladstone was just as great before he became Prime Minister of England as he was afterward, and Cardinal Woolsey was a disgrace to his office long before he put off the robes of office.

Greatness is a quality of soul, and true greatness manifests itself in a life of sacrifice for others. Call the roll of the world's heroes and heroines and it will be found that they are the philanthropists, the discoverers, the inventors, the martyrs, the pioneers of the world's progress and improvement. They have not counted their lives dear unto themselves that they might bear the world's burdens, and share the world's sorrows.

Alexander Pope, in his Essay on Man says:
Honor and shame from no condition rise
Act well your part, there all the honor lies.
Who noble ends by noble means obtains,
Or, falling, smiles in exile or in chains.
Like good Aurelius, let him reign, or bleed
With Scroates, that man is great indeed.

TO SOUTH DAKOTA
The Land of Bread and Butter

South Dakota is Long on wealth and short on people. Today it presents the best opportunities in America for those who want to get ahead on the Highway to independence. More than 47,000,000 bushels of corn, more than 47,000,000 bushels of wheat, live stock to the value of $41,000,000, hay to the value of $12,000,000, and products of the mines above $12,000,000 were some of the returns from South Dakota for 1905. With a population of only 450,000, and the annual production of new wealth above $166,000,000, it can be readily seen why South Dakota people are prosperous and happy. The outlook for 1906 crops is the best South Dakota has ever known.

Why don't you go there and investigate the openings along the new lines of this railway for yourself.

From Chicago, and from many other points in Illinois, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri, direct service to South Dakota is offered via the

Chicago, Milwaukee &amp; St. Paul Railway

Its main lines and branch lines fairly gridiron the rich agricultural and stock country of South Dakota. Its mileage in South Dakota is more than 1200 miles, and by the building of extensions is being rapidly increased.

A new line is now being built from Chamberlain, S. D., to Rapid City, S. D., through Lyman, Stanley and Pennington Counties. Some of the best opportunities for success are along these new lines. The railway company has NO farm lands for sale or rent. If you are interested it is worth your while to write today for a new book on South Dakota. It will be sent free.

—R. Frank Williams, Real Estate Broker has sold for Mr. James W. Reid, of Virginia, his farm located on the Middle Neck road near Salisbury to Mr. Cleophas J. Hearn of Delaware. This is a very desirable little farm and contains 17 acres of land, being the same farm that formerly belonged to Mr. G. E. Serman, of this city. The price paid was $1450. We understand Mr. Hearn expects to improve the property a great deal for his own occupancy. Mr. Williams also reports the following sales: Mr. J. Frank Waller's 12 building lots and 9 dwelling houses located in South Salisbury to Messrs. L. Atwood Bennett and Robert L. Leatherbury. Consideration $4,000. The house and lot on Elizabeth St., belonging to Mr. Aaron Littaneger, of Pennsylvania, to Mr. Harry Duffy for about $1000. The farm belonging to Mr. James H. Conbourn located near Mount Herman in Netters district to Mr. James Davis, consideration, about $800, and the house and lot located on the north side of E. Locust St., belonging to James C. Davis, consideration $600.

—Salisbury and Delmar's base ball game here Wednesday resulted in a score of 5 to 1 against Delmar. Their battery was Spicer, Jones and Roberts while Schuler and Austin stood up for Salisbury. Only two hits were made off Schuler, his line twirling being a feature of the game. On the Fourth, Berlin will come over to play Salisbury on the South Salisbury grounds. The game will be called at 10.00 o'clock in the morning and will give out of town spectators an opportunity to see the game and return at a convenient hour. The Berlin line up is as follows: Smack, C. Tingle, P. Quillen, 1st B. Aldrich, 2nd B. Smith, 3rd B. Henry, S. S. Marshall, L. F. Boston, C. F. Collins, R. F. Pennewill, Sub.

—Mr. J. J. Sheak, of Brunswick, Md., who for sixteen years past has conducted the Brunswick Seminary, has retired from school work. For several days recently he was in this section prospecting and while among us purchased the Wm. P. Ward property on the Snow Hill road, about four miles from Salisbury. The price paid was $4300. The tract comprises 17 acres. Mr. Sheak expects to locate on his new possession about December 1st.

HEBRON.
 Messrs. Editors:—Will you allow me to make some corrections to the statement made in last week's issue and signed "subscriber" from Hebron. In regard to our camping, which he says that the M. E. people are at a loss whether to hold the camp or not. I wish to state to the people that the M. E. people are not at a loss in regards to holding their camp. We have haven't thought of such a thing as not holding a camp. We expect to hold them year after year as we have always done, for the people of Hebron want and expect a camp every year. We don't think like the subscriber that the camp is a thing of the past nor do we think that they are a corruption to our church as he speaks of, but of course we are not all saints or angels either and if there be any around, I would like to see some of them. However we will hold our camp this year beginning July 28th and closing August 6th. Anyone wishing to rent tents can do so by applying to J. L. Nelson for same. The privileges will be in the hands of the Committee.

The Ladies Aid of the M. E. Church will hold a picnic on July 4th in the church yard. All are cordially invited to attend.
 Secretary.

My Hair Ran Away
 Don't have a falling out with your hair. It might leave you! Then what? That would mean thin, scraggly, uneven, rough hair. Keep your hair at home! Fasten it tightly to your scalp! You can easily do it with Ayer's Hair Vigor. It is something more than a simple hair dressing. It is a hair medicine, a hair tonic, a hair food.

BARNES' INDOOR SACQUES.

Made of Pretty Flannels and Saves His Lordship from Cold.

A dainty little jacket is shown in the illustration. The jackets are useful to protect the babies from draughts, which occur even in the most carefully arranged nurseries. The sacques are all made of the finest white French flannel and trimmed with a little hand work in fancy stitching or embroidery. Flannel is really the daintiest material for the little sacques and the most durable, although some are made of white silk and lined with thin flannel. There are also sacques in pale blue and pale pink, but these are not in the best taste. White is considered the most correct thing, although if a baby possesses a large wardrobe it is not out of place to Collarless jacket with embroidery. Have one or two pale colored sacques among a dozen the rest of which are white.

The most beautiful embroidery, although always that which is light in design and simple in effect, is used to ornament some of the little flannel jackets. The embroidery may be all in white, but it is quite in good taste to have pale blue or pale pink used.

To Obtain Clear Soups.

A good stock with the right proportion of the different seasonings may be made as follows: Take five or six pounds of beef bones and two pounds of veal bones, and place in a steamer with cold water enough to cover. Bring this slowly to a boil, removing the scum as it rises, but leaving the fat on the stock. Put into a wire net two carrots, half of a sliced parsnip, a good sized piece of celery, four large or six small onions, into one of which four cloves have been stuck, and a bunch of herbs. Add a good pinch of salt and a sprinkling of pepper. Let the stock boil up for a moment and then simmer gently, without actually boiling for four hours. Then strain off through a fine sieve and put away to cool in an earthenware dish. When quite cold the fat should be skimmed off.

An important point to remember in making this stock is that the vegetables should be removed as soon as they are thoroughly done, for if left in they will absorb the flavor of the soup, leaving it insipid, and another equally important fact is that if the stock boils hard the liquid will evaporate and the portion that remains will be strong and gluey and dark in color.

Lord Byron had a pet goose which sometimes accompanied him on his travels.

NEW YORK'S GOVERNMENT

One Year's Expenses Double the Value Country's Gold Output.

LONDON RUN CHEAPER

Salaries Increasing—Spends Four Times More Than Chicago—Money Spent for Civic Purposes Would Pay for Many Federal Departments.—Great Load of Interest.

What New York is spending this year on local government is double the value of all the fine gold produced in the country. It is sufficient to build all the projected fortifications, maintain the enlarged army, support the legislative, judicial and executive departments of the federal establishment and have enough left to buy the Danish West Indies, says S. D. North, director of American census, in the New York Herald.

It costs to run this city nearly three times what it costs to run London, notwithstanding that London has a third more people. No city in this country is so expensive to operate, per capita, except Boston.

In preparing statistics of American cities, he remarked that the per capita cost of government was greater in larger than in small cities. If that were true, comparison of per capita cost would have no value. His own calculations show that it is only in the case of New York that this prevails, such a paradox that the more people a community has the more each member must pay for living in it.

On the one hand there is Boston. With about a sixth of New York's population Boston people pay for certain services twice what a New York citizen does. On the other hand, there are Chicago, London, Philadelphia and Tokio. All are cities of the first class, and every one operates its departments at considerably less for each inhabitant than New York does. The excuse that New York is new does not account for the difference. It is not much newer than Tokio and a great deal older than Chicago.

New York salaries generally were about five-eighths of the budget before they were jacked up in 1935 as a campaign preliminary. Now they must be three-quarters, notwithstanding that the budget has been meaningfully increased $3,000,000. It takes no more money to govern London than New York pays in salaries, yet London is fully one-third larger.

New York would make only two Chicago's, but our total expenses are four times greater. Chicago's public safety service costs a mere $93,723, or to our $1,108,373. Her highways and sanitation are maintained for $2,857,625, while we, with only twice her population and a smaller territory, expend on these departments $11,547,325.

There are suspicious differences in the relative cost of policemen, firemen and executive offices. What constitutes the majority office in the two first cities of America is put down as costing:—

New York, $213,089, of which $171,146 is for salaries; Chicago, $87,846, of which the salary part is $61,319.

New York would make only five Glasgows, but that city, which has been studied as a model by all recent municipal reformers, gets along with what we pay Commissioner Woodbury just for cleaning streets. In other words, a municipality one-fifth our size so conducts itself as to be regarded as a criterion without spending one-twelfth the money.

Interest on the city debt is no small part of the city expenses. Nearly one-seventh of the direct income of the city in 1935 or $15,486,515, are for the payment of interest. For the payment of interest on bonds issued during the year and for the payment of the principal and interest of short term revenue bonds which the city is compelled to issue in anticipation of the receipt of taxes $5,696,100 more is required. The redemption of small bond issues made in the outlying districts of the city before consolidation will bring this total up to $21,430,935. For the payment of installments on the other bonds the sum of $5,226,199 is set aside. So there is an expenditure of about $28,000,000 for the payment of interest and installments on the principal of the city debt, to be raised from taxation.

On population basis the cost of government in 1935 was $28.71 each person. In 1935 it was $29.09 each person. These calculations do not take into the interest on bond issues for public improvements or for anticipating the collection of taxes, which would swell the figures a lot. Taking a longer period, it is found that in the first year of consolidation the per capita cost was $23.89, while for 1935 the allowed per capita appropriation was $29.09; otherwise, an increase for each person of $5.20 for this current year over what it was for eight years ago.

Sultan of Turkey's Pets. The Sultan of Turkey has a great collection of canaries. He chooses them by the length of time they sing without stopping. Recently he paid a very high price for an English canary, which sang without a stop for 20 minutes by the Sultan's watch.

London's Vegetarians. London has vegetarians who go to the extreme of refusing to wear shoes that have the "animal taint" of leather. They wear shoes made of rubber, canvas and "bright American cloth."

To Remove Carpets. Some housekeepers have their carpets wiped off while on the floor with a cloth wrung out of warm water with which a little ammonia has been mixed. The water must be changed often. The color of a light Amstar or any other heavy pile carpet will brighten wonderfully after this treatment. One housekeeper has all her heavy carpets scrubbed on the floor with plenty of soap and warm water.

"THERE'S A CURE FOR RHEUMATISM!"

Not the mere temporary relief that the old "remedies" gave, not the little help that the doctor's prescriptions give; but ABSOLUTE AND COMPLETE CURE. That is what Rheumacide does. Rheumatism is caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood. It is an internal disease and requires a strong and vigorous internal remedy that will cleanse the blood of all its germs and yet act through such natural methods that it builds up the entire system.

CURED AFTER 16 YEARS.

Baltimore, Dec. 10th. For 16 years I have suffered terribly with Rheumatism. I was treated by leading physicians but got no relief. Long since I despaired of ever being well again. But hearing of RHEUMACIDE, I decided to give it a trial. I have taken two bottles, and, thanks to this wonderful medicine, I now feel that I have gotten a "new lease on life." Every vestige of the disease has been driven from my system.

THE IDEAL SITTING ROOM

Furnishings Are Arranged to Suggest Comfort for Occupants.

Morris gave the following description of a sitting room that was ideal,
according to his opinion:

"Besides the table that will keep steady when you work upon it, and the chairs that you can move about,
the good floor, and the small carpet which can be bundled up, and the room in two minutes, you must be a bookcase with a good selection of books in it, a couch that you can sit or lie upon, a cupboard with drawers, and, unless either the bookcase or the cupboard be very beautiful with paintings or carvings, pictures and engravings on the walls, or else the wall itself must be ornamented with some beautiful and restful pattern."

"Then a vase or two, and fireplaces as unlike as possible to the modern mean miserable and showy affairs, plastered about with wretched sham ornaments, and a good selection of brass and polished steel objects to look at and a nuisance to clean."

"To these necessities—unless we are musical and need a piano, in which case, as far as beauty is concerned, we are in a bad way—we can add very little without troubling ourselves and hindering our work, our thought, and our rest."

FASHION'S MANDATE.

Broderie Anglaise (English eyelet embroidery) will be extensively used on the summer gowns.

Even into the realm of embroidery handwork has entered, combined with Irish lace, Cluny and filet de Venise in the most delightful combinations.

Combination undergarments are worn with fitted Princess gowns to secure a smooth fit at the waist line.
New elbow gloves have two-toned stitching, the two tints so blended that there is not the slightest disas-pearance about it.

For walking costumes cloth is less and less used, and fancy materials are now in vogue. Small checks, stripes, especially in black and white,
are in favor, and gray is very popular.

Rest in the Kitchen.

Be sure to have an easy lounge or chair in the kitchen, where you may spend the few waiting moments between acts, as it were, in rest. If you cannot afford to buy a lounge especially for that purpose make one.
This is easily done. Get two long boxes from the dry goods store; place them end to end and nail together. Make a mattress and fill it with any desired materials. Shredded shucks are clean and excellent. Over this drape any kind of cover to suit the fancy. Be sure to get something that can be washed and ironed. Red and white bed ticking is pretty and desirable, and never fades, and when laundered looks as good as new. Make a pillow. Now, while you are watching the cakes, bread, pies and the like, remember there is your lounge. Rest. Do not say you have no time. You have to wait for your baking to brown, says Modern Women.
Why not rest while you wait? You will be surprised how much refreshment you will gain even for one minute's relaxation upon this improved lounging quarter.

A Real Home.

The truest homes are often in houses not especially well kept, where the comfort and happiness of the inmates, rather than the preservation of the furniture is first considered. The object of home is to be the center, the point of tenderest interest, the pivot on which the family life turns. The first requisite is to make it attractive, that none of its inmates will care to linger outside of its limits. All legitimate means should be employed to this end, and no effort spared that can contribute to the purpose. Many houses, called homes, kept with waxy neatness by pampering, anxious women, are so oppressive in their neatness, as to exclude all home feeling from their spotless precincts, says Woman's Life. The very name of home is synonymous with personal freedom and relaxation from care; but neither of these can be felt where such a mania for external cleanliness prevails the household that everything else is subservient thereto.

How a Child Should Sleep.

One should not sleep with either arm raised above the head. It is a pretty sure sign of a child, but it is better, if not so pretty, that the arms should lie by the sides than stretched upward. One knows, when one stops to consider, how fatiguing the attitude is, if persevered in for a few moments, of reaching up into a closet, or arranging high draperies at a window, says Woman's Life. What, then, must be the effect when kept up throughout a whole night?

Women Wage Earners.

There are 255,732 women wage earners in New York City, exclusive of those in professional capacity.
There are 22,708 saleswomen alone whose average wage is only $6 a week. The New York Federation of Women's Clubs is at present pleading for better housing of these women, the greater number of whom do not live at home. It is proposed to erect a Mills hotel for women.

Vaseline will darken and increase

Womanly Beauty.

This generation has seen in a remarkable fashion the results of popular expectation and general habits on physical development in the case of women. The number of tall and strong girls now is most striking and equally so are the beauty and vitality of many women who are past the fiftieth birthday. Illustrated Lon-

BEST TIME TO GET WELL.

All Poisons Can Be Driven Out Of The System Now.

"Right now is the best season of the year to get rid of the blood, liver and kidney affections that have been troubling you. You need building up now in order to stand the strain of
the hot weather of summer. Let Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout, Catarrh, Indigestion or Constipation run
through these months and they become chronic and hang on for years.
A regular course of Rheumacide taken at the present time will thoroughly cleanse the blood, tone up the stomach, set the liver and kidneys to doing their normal work again, and will build up the entire system."

While it is the most wonderful blood purifier in the world, yet Rheumacide is a purely vegetable preparation that operates through entirely natural methods. It has been tested on the delicate stomach of a baby without
the slightest harm.

Better get a bottle today and start to get well. Rheumacide has cured
hundreds of stubborn cases after all

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear.
There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

Unknown Friends.

There are many people who have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera
and Diarrhoea Remedy with splendid results; but who are unknown because they have hesitated about giving a testimonial of their experience for publication. These people, however,
are none the less friends of this remedy. They have done much toward making it a household word by
their personal recommendations to friends and neighbor. It is a good medicine to have in the home and is widely known for its cures of diar-

The Very Best Remedy For Bowel Trouble.

Mr. M. F. Burroughs, an old and well known resident of Balton, Ind.,
says: "I regard Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as the very best remedy for bowel trouble. I make this statement after having used the remedy in my family
for several years. I am never without it." This remedy is almost sure to be needed before the summer is over. Why not buy it now and be prepared for such an emergency? For sale by O. L. Dickerson and G.
Hearn.

A DERELICT.

E. Carl Litsey.

"Across the shadowed sea at twilight hour.
A ship comes stealing in the wake of day.
No soul clad masts above her low hull tower,
No captain's voice: no sailors to cheer.
A derelict, nothing more."

Across life's twilight sea a ship comes sailing.
A shattered wreck it drifts upon the stream.
About its seamed sides lost hopes are trailing.
Ambition gone, and blighted each

IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS.

Don't Mistake The Cause Of Your Troubles.
A Salisbury Citizen Shows How To Cure Them.

Many people never suspect their
kidneys if suffering from a lame,
weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness. And so it is with all the other symptoms
of kidney disorders. That is just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they lead to diabetes or Bright's Disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kidney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys.
Salisbury people testify to permanent
cures.

Wm. M. Gordy, carpenter residing corner of Ann and E. Church Streets, says: "I have had backache for
several years, was sore in the morning when I got up and if I caught cold
it settled in my kidneys and caused my back to ache severely. I have been so bad that I could scarcely step down from one step to another, and when I arose from a chair I could not straighten for some time. I was having considerable pain in my back at the time I noticed Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and I got a box at White & Leonard's drug store. They acted directly on my kidneys and soon stopped the trouble. My son
also took some of the remedy and
received good results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50
cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and
take no other.

Commons are total abstainers.

How To Break Up A Cold.

It may be a surprise to many to learn that a severe cold can be completely broken up in one or two days' time. The first symptoms of a cold
are a dry, loud cough, a profuse watery discharge from the nose, and
a thin, white coating on the tongue.
When Chamberlain's cough remedy is taken every hour on the first appearance of these symptoms, it counter-acts the effect of the cold and restores
the system to a healthy condition
within a day or two. For sale by O.
L. Dickerson and G. Hearn.

What is CASTORIA

BEST FRIENDS OF PE-RU-NA ARE THE MOTHERS & CHILDREN

When Sickness Comes to the Little Ones It Is the Mother Who Chiefly Suffers.

The mother suffers even more than the child who happens to be sick.

If sympathy is deeper than that of any other member of the family.

The mother looks forward with dread to the torrid heat of summer, thinking of her children and the many liabilities to disease that are before them.

Spring and summer are sure to bring ailments, especially among the little folks.

It does not take a mother very long to discover that Peruna is the best friend she has in times of illness among the children.

The doctor may come and go with their different theories and constant change of remedies.

The doctor of years ago gave entirely different remedies than he does today.

Each year finds some change in his prescriptions and in the drugs he relies upon.

A Multitude of Mothers Have discovered that Peruna is the stand-by, and that in all the ailments of spring and summer to which the children are subjected, Peruna is the remedy that will most quickly relieve.

Whether it is spring fever or stomach derangement, whether it is indigestion or bowel disease, a catarrhal congestion of the mucous surfaces is the cause.

Peruna quickly relieves this condition of the mucous membranes. Its operation is prompt, the children do not dislike to take the medicine, it has no deleterious effects in any part of the body.

It simply removes the cause of the disagreeable symptoms and restores the health.

Peruna is not a physic. Peruna does not produce any drug habit, however long it may be taken. Peruna is not a stimulant.

Peruna is a specific remedy for all catarrhal ailments of winter and summer, acute or chronic.

The mothers all over the United States are the best friends that Peruna has.

The Mothers Hold Peruna in High Esteem.

Not only because it has cured them of their various ailments, but because it always restores the children from the throes and grasp of catarrhal diseases.

We have in our files hundreds of testimonials from mothers whose children have been cured by Peruna. However, the large majority of mothers who use Peruna, we never hear from.

But we do hear from a great number of mothers who are so overjoyed at some special good they have received from Peruna that they cannot restrain their enthusiasm. They are anxious to share these benefits with other mothers.

Allen's Ointment Wins in Court, The Foot Ease Trade Mark Sustained.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Supreme Court has granted a permanent injunction, restraining the defendant, Paul B. Hudson, from using the name "Foot Ease" in connection with the sale of his "Foot Ease" powder.

The court declared that the use of the name "Foot Ease" was an infringement of the plaintiff's trade mark.

The Benefit Which the Children of the United States Have Received From Peruna Can Never Be Put Into Words.

The chronic ailments it has prevented, the suffering it has mitigated, will never be fully recorded.

But at least this much can be said that the coming generation owes a great debt to Peruna, for it is in the tender years of youth that slight ailments are liable to develop into lasting diseases, thus blighting the whole career of the individual.

The mothers who are bringing up their children today to believe in Peruna are doing a great work for humanity.

These children brought up to believe in Peruna from the start, will, when they become heads of families themselves, use Peruna with unquestioning faith.

Peruna Protects the Household.

As soon as the use of Peruna is appreciated by every member of the household, both as a preventive and as a cure, tens of thousands of lives will be saved, and hundreds of catarrhs of chronic, lingering cases of disease will be prevented.

Mrs. Thress Rooke, 228 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill., Treasurer Ladies' of the Macabees, writes:

"In our home Peruna is the only medicine we have. Grandmother, mother, father and child, all have used Peruna. It is our great remedy for colds, coughs, croup, whooping cough, and all the ailments of childhood. It has cured me."

"We find it of great value when my husband becomes worn out or catches cold. A couple of doses cure him."

"If the baby has colic, or any stomach trouble, a dose or two cures her. I consider Peruna finer than any doctor's medicine that I have ever tried, and I know that as long as we have it in the house, we will all be able to keep in good health."—Thress Rooke.

No Doctor Required.

Mr. Edward Otto, 227 De Soto street, St. Paul, Minn., writes:

"I cannot say enough for Peruna. It has done so much work in my family, especially for my eldest boy. We had doctor called with three or four different ailments and they did not seem to do him any good."

"We gave up hopes of cure, and so did they, but we pulled him through on Peruna."

"We had several doctors and they said they could do no more for him so we tried Peruna as a last resort, and that did the work. Since then we keep it in the house all the time, and no doctor is required."—Edward Otto.

Peruna Contains No Narcotics.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotics of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring a drug habit. Peruna does not produce temporary results. Its permanent effect is its effect.

It has no bad effect upon the system, and gradually eliminates catarrh by removing the cause of catarrh.

There are a multitude of homes where Peruna has been used off and on for twenty years.

Such a thing could not be possible if Peruna contained any drugs of a narcotic nature.

Mr. G. H. Farmer, New Martinsville, W. Va., writes:

"Our little son, Harry, is well and healthy now and we think if we do as you directed us, he will keep his health and grow strong."

"We know that our little son's life was saved by your wonderful medicine, Peruna, and we shall always praise Peruna and use it in our family when needed."

"Should we have any more catarrhal trouble in our family, we shall always write to you for treatment."—G. H. Farmer.

Mr. Howard Andrew Sterner, Muddy Creek, Pa., writes:

"I have Peruna in my house all the time and won't be without it. It is good for children when they take a cold or croup. It cured my baby boy of croup."

"I have introduced Peruna into six families since I received your last letter, and four have seen relief already."—Howard Andrew Sterner.

Peruna Should Be Kept In Every Household.

Where There Are Little Children.

Peruna should be kept in the house all the time. Don't wait until the child is sick, then send to a drug store. But have Peruna on hand—accept no substitute.

Children are especially liable to acute catarrh. Indeed, most of the affections of childhood are catarrh.

All forms of sore throat, quinsy, croup, hoarseness, laryngitis, etc., are but different phases of catarrh.

Mrs. Amelia Saller, Menasha, Wis., writes:

"I have used Peruna for a number of years. It cured me of chronic catarrh which I suffered with from infancy."

"When my three children were born they all had catarrh, but I have given them Peruna and find it very effective in ridding them of this horrible trouble. I find that it is also good to give them as a tonic and a preventative of colds and croup."

"In fact, I consider it a household blessing. I would not know how to raise my children without it. I am pleased to give it my recommendation."—Amelia Saller.

Bunker Hill.

BUNKER HILL MONUMENT.

Carefully Guards the Two Cannon Captured by Brave Schoolboys.

In the circular chamber at the top of Bunker Hill Monument are two cannon, the Hancock and the Adams. These old pieces of ordnance were saved from the English during the Revolutionary times by the patriotic schoolboys of Boston. During the blockade of Boston the public schools were continued. Master Samuel Holbrook kept the writing school on the Common, which was in session when the second Provincial Congress opened at Cambridge, February 7, 1775. A man well known to Master Holbrook and his pupils was unanimously elected president of the Congress. He knew how scarce were the field pieces and where those that the Province did have were kept. We can readily imagine the surprise of Gage's officer on going to look for the Province guns he found only the carriage. Then began a search for the cannon. The storehouse was so located that there were only two passages by which they could have been taken out during the few moments that the guard was off. Gage's officers found an unbroken cobweb across one passage, which led to the conclusion that the guns must have been taken away through the remaining passage, which was the way to Master Holbrook's schoolroom.

There was no nook or corner, cellarway or dark passage, but the officers peered into, but to no effect. Master Holbrook's lame leg was sufficient reason for his not getting up from his seat to accompany the officers about the building, and they graciously excused him, and he kept his hand on an old wooden box at his desk without being disturbed.

That box contained more than oak logs for the hearth. Master Holbrook's boys had the satisfaction of knowing that they had acted an important part in saving two of the guns and carrying into execution the resolve of the Provincial Congress.

Those guns were taken from the wood box and carried out of town by a negro slave, and thus brought into the service of the Provincial army, when they so bravely left their homes and fled to Cambridge in pursuit of the king's army on their retreat, over one hundred and thirty years ago.

Fourth of July.

Day of glory! Welcome day. Freedom's banners greet the ray. See! how cheerfully they play. With the morning breeze, On the rocks where pilgrims kneel'd Or the heights where squadrons wheel'd. When a tyrant's thunder peal'd O'er the trembling seas.

God of armies! did thy "stars" In their courses smite his ears, Blast his arm, and wreat his bars From the heaving tide? On our standard, lo! they burn, And when day like this returns, Sparkle o'er the soldiers' urn Who for freedom died.

God of peace!—whose spirit fills All the echoes of our hills, All the murmur of our rills, From the heaving tide? Now the storm is o'er— G. let freedom be our sons: And let future Washingtons Rise, to lead their valiant ones, Till there's war no more.

By the patriot's hallow'd rest, By the warrior's glory best, Never let our graves be press'd By the pilgrims' tolls and cares, By their battles and their prayers, By their ashes—let our heirs Bow to these alone.

—John Pierpont.

No Waste. De Style—What great scheme has Gage for the Fourth of July? Gage—Why, instead of packing torpedoes in his pockets, he's going back home in his pocket.

HURRAH

Young America.

Fourth of July, they say, sir, is Independence Day, sir. But really I am certain that there must be some mistake. For people say, "Be quiet!" And, "I won't have such riot!" At every teeny-weeny noise that I may chance to make.

Why, when my gun exploded, (I thought it wasn't loaded). My mother said, "You naughty boy, now stop that fearful noise!" And when our cannon-crackers (And my!) but they were whackers!

Made grandma say, "Oh, mercy me! you mustn't do that, boys!"

"You're much too young to handle a bomb or Roman candle." They always say when I get near to where the fireworks are; And for a little rocket I put in Bobby's pocket. My father just now set me down beside the "family jar."

The caution and the warning Begin at early morning: It's "Don't do this!" and "Don't do that!" and so, unless I may Choose my own celebration. For the birthday of our nation, I don't see why I ought to call it Independence Day!

—St. Nicholas.

A LESSON LEARNED.

"What does the Fourth of July mean?" asked Toddlekins of me. The other night, while sitting after dinner on my knee.

"Why do we set off cannon, and keep up a fearful din From morning till the night comes up and calls the sunbeams in?"

"It is to celebrate a day some years ago," said I; "When we, to speak in figures, hit Great Britain in the eye; Declared our independence, and the British flag forsook. Resolved to start in business on our own sharp little hook."

"But daddy dear," the boy remarked, "I prides tell me why We wished to hit Great Britain such a whack upon the eye."

"It was the parent country," I replied, "and kept us close. She wouldn't let us have our way, and gave us many a dose."

"She said to us, 'do this,' 'do that,' and we had minded well. Until we got aroused one day and fought her for a spell; And then we said: 'No more of this; we've had enough of you. Go back across the sea and stay, and don't you dare say boo!'"

"And, oh, my son, 'twas noble work we did in those old days. And that is why we celebrate in sundry noisy ways. By making noise from morn till night, with crackers and with bombs. And brass bands of music and the beating of tom-toms. And Toddlekins climbed down into the floor and stood awhile. His face a study, innocent, with not a trace of guile.

"I guess that'll be noble too," said he; "old dad, good by. I'm feeling kind of roused myself, and banged me in the eye, and banged me in the eye."

—Harper's Bazar.

Our Boy.

Patriot.

A rocket struck him on the head. A pin-wheel burnt his nose. A cannon scorched his thumb. A cracker went off in his hand. His leg was bruised with shot. And yet he goes to bed at night A joyful patriot.

A Bunch of Fire Crackers.

A lit firecracker in the hand isn't worth two in the pack. There is no use pulling the trigger after the gun has been fired. Do not look a gift cannon in the mouth. Never light your Roman candle at both ends. It is sometimes the loudest cracker that makes the loudest report. It is the pin-wheel that loses by doing a good turn. One swallow doesn't make a spring, nor one firecracker a Fourth.

Humors of the Declaration Debate.

Over one hundred and thirty years ago the debate on the question of declaring the colonies independent was at its height. As every one knows, the discussion was held behind locked doors, and no record was made of the speeches. It was felt that in case any member of the body was captured and there was written evidence against him he would be strung up speedily for having spoken against the supremacy of the crown. The popular idea is that there was absolutely nothing to lighten the grave solemnity of that July debate. When Daniel Webster delivered his panegyric of Thomas Jefferson and John Adams he drew a picture of the scene in the Continental Congress when the declaration was under discussion. Webster's picture and the speeches which he put into the mouths of some of the delegates form the world's idea today of the session upon which was depending the birth of a nation. In after years, while all who were present still kept silence about the greater part of the proceedings, they did not feel it was necessary to hold to themselves some of the jokes which were the solemn conclusion. Most of these bits of humor have been forgotten, and one has to go back to literature contemporaneous with the close of the revolutionary war to get at them.

Mrs. John Dickinson, wife of one of the Pennsylvania representatives in the Continental Congress, is credited with being the original Mrs. Caudle. John had written the "Letters of a Pennsylvania Farmer," which had done much to arouse a spirit of liberty among the people. Immediately after the introduction of Richard Henry Lee's first independence resolution Mrs. Dickinson began at her spouse from beneath the shadow of her nightcap. She said: "Johnnie, if you have anything to do with this independence business you'll be hanged and leave a most excellent widow."

Dickinson spoke against the resolution declaring the colonies to be free and independent, and more than one of the members of Congress told him that it was the wife and not Dickinson who was speaking.

Benjamin Franklin's statement after the signing of the declaration is in every history in the land. The rejoinder that Benjamin Franklin made to the other Benjamin's remark is not so well known. Franklin, after the last signature was affixed, said: "Now we must all hang together or we'll all hang separately."

Harrison was a heavy weight, and he had a ready wit. When Franklin spoke Harrison looked down over his ample proportions and said: "Yes, but when the drop us off at a rope's end some of you light weights will be kicking and suffering long after I am done for."

It has been fairly well established that John Witherspoon, the pious president of Princeton, lacking a prepared speech of his own for the debate, quoted from Tom Paine's pamphlet, "Common Sense." Tom Paine was an atheist, but that made little difference to the clergyman delegate when he had a chance to let his feelings go ripping out with untrammelled like this: "It matters very little now what the King of England either says or does, he hath wickedly broken through every moral and human obligation, trampled upon and conscience beneath his feet, and by a steady and constitutional spirit of insolence and cruelty procured for himself a universal hatred."

Some good Presbyterians in Congress took Witherspoon to task for quoting the turn of his critic and said: "The devil's pitchfork is none too bad a weapon to use on a tyrant."

Witherspoon on another occasion lent some humor to the debate. John Dickinson had said that the colonies were not ripe for independence. The Presbyterian divine was on his feet in an instant. "We are not ripe," he said, "not ripe, but rotting. Almost every colony has dropped from the parent stem, and your own province, sir, needs no more sunshine to mature it."

There was an incident connected with the debate for independence which, while not humorous, may perhaps be properly mentioned. Read, one of the Delaware delegates, inveighed against declaring independence. When McKean, another Delaware delegate, heard Read's speech he feared that the majority of his colony's delegates would not be in favor of the resolution, because Caesar Rodney, a strong advocate of the measure and one of Delaware's representatives, was absent and eight miles away. During the heat of the debate McKean stole out of the House, secured the best horse in Philadelphia, put a round sum in gold into a first-class horseman's pocket and said, "You ride and bring Rodney back. Have neither speed, expense nor strength. The life of a nation hangs in the balance." This man's name has never been sung in song, but the name Rodney was sung in the hall of time, and Rodney's delegation by a majority declared independence.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a powerful, invigorating tonic, imparts health and energy, and is particularly to the organs distinctly feminine. The local, womanly health is so intimately related to the general health that when diseased the delicate womanly organs are cured the whole body gains in health and strength. For weak and sickly women who are "run-down," run-down or debilitated, especially for women who work in store, office or schoolroom, who sit at the typewriter or sewing machine, or bear heavy household burdens, and for nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proven a priceless benefit because of its health-restoring and strength-giving power.

As a soothing and strengthening nerve tonic, "Favorite Prescription" is unequalled in its efficacy in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuritis, hysteria, spasms, chorea, or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the womanly system. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Cures obstinate cases. "Favorite Prescription" is a sensitive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of "female weakness," painful periods, irregular menstruation, and other diseases of the womanly system. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Your druggist sells the "Favorite Prescription" and also that famous alterative, Blood Purifier and Skin Tonic, the "Purifier of the Blood." Write to Dr. Pierce about your case. He is an experienced physician and will treat your case cleared and without charge. For correspondence, address him at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., of which he is chief consulting physician.

INTERESTING LETTER

WRITTEN BY A NOTABLE WOMAN

Mrs. Sarah Kellogg of Denver, Color. Bearer of the Woman's Relief Corps, Sends Thanks to Mrs. Pinkham.

The following letter was written by Mrs. Kellogg, of 1638 Lincoln Ave., Denver, Col., to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"For five years I was troubled with a tumor, which kept growing, causing me intense agony and great mental depression. I was unable to attend to my house work, and life became a burden to me. I was confined for days to my bed, lost my appetite, my courage and all hope. I could not bear to think of an operation, and in my distress I tried every remedy which I thought would be of any use to me, and reading of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to sick women decided to give it a trial. I felt so discouraged that I had little hope of recovery, and when I began to feel better, after the second week, thought it only meant temporary relief. But to my great surprise I found that I kept gaining, while the tumor lessened in size.

"The Compound continued to build up my general health and the tumor seemed to be absorbed, until, in seven months, the tumor was entirely gone and I a well woman. I am so thankful for my recovery that I ask you to publish my letter in newspapers, so other women may know of the wonderful curative power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

When women are troubled with irregular or painful periods, weakness, displacement or ulceration of the female organs, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion or nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female ills.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years under her direction and advice, has been a successful business woman, advising sick women free of charge. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

HORSES FOR SALE

"FORGE" OF VALLEY FORGE.

A Bit of History That is Agropo Just Now.

The iron forge which gave its name to Valley Forge is no longer in existence, but its history can be traced down to its destruction by British soldiery.

The old forge was styled by its first owners Mountjoy Forge, and as such was put up for sale in the middle of the eighteenth century. Later on it was commonly called Valley Forge.

Mountjoy Forge was built by a partnership, comprised of Daniel Walker, Stephen Evans and Joseph Williams. It was erected somewhere between the dates of December, 1742, and April, 1751.

It stood on the east of Valley creek, in what is now Montgomery county. The upper or west side of Valley creek is the Chester county side.

In 1701 William Penn granted to his daughter, Letitia Penn, the manor of Mountjoy. From this time there were several conveyances before 1742, when Stephen Evans and Daniel Walker, farmers of Trodysville, Chester county, acquired title to a tract of 175 acres of the manor of Mountjoy. A few days afterward Joseph Williams, miller, of Lower Merion, joined Evans and Walker in a tripartite arrangement of ownership, and they proceeded to improve the property.

We next hear of the Forge as offered for sale. The following advertisement appeared in the Pennsylvania Gazette of April 4, 1751:

TO BE SOLD.

The third part of Mountjoy Forge, situate in Upper Merion, on the River Schuylkill, by the great road leading from Philadelphia to the French Creek Iron Works, 20 miles from Philadelphia, and not so far distant from three furnaces. The said works are in good repair, with one-third of the utensils to be sold; also one hundred and twenty acres of land belonging thereto. For title and terms apply to Daniel Walker, living near the said premises.

Six months later the two partners of Walker offered their share of Mountjoy Forge for sale, as the advertisements of the Gazette apprise us. The property was finally conveyed to John Potts, and at that time, 1757, it included a saw mill and grist mill.

It was Isaac Potts, sixth son of the afore-mentioned John Potts, who was owner of the Valley Forge headquarters, mansion and the grist mill at the time of the encampment, and he it was who saw Washington on his knees at prayer in the woods at Valley Forge. Isaac Potts was born in 1750, and died at Cheltenham, in 1830.

Five of the Potts brothers were at times owners of the Valley Forge, and three of them, Samuel, David and Joseph, were chiefly concerned in working Mountjoy Forge.

By the year 1767 the furnace seems to be called "Valley" Forge, instead of "Mountjoy."

It was burned by the British in September, 1777, some months before the American army began its encampment there.

The site of the old forge was covered with water when the new dam, built lower down the creek after the Revolution, raised the water level, and so covered the foundations of the forge. The site is at the foot of Mount Joy, and more than half a mile above the Valley mill.

Death Day of Famous Men.

Two presidents of the United States died on the fiftieth anniversary of the Fourth of July. One was Thomas Jefferson, who fifty years before had signed the Declaration of Independence, and John Adams, who at the same time, had, after a three days' debate, secured the adoption of the declaration.

When Jefferson was dying on that day which he so signally helped to distinguish, his friend was also breathing his last. Adams died not knowing of Jefferson's illness, and his last words were: "Thomas Jefferson still survives!" as if there was consolation in the thought. But his friend had already passed from earth.

Smalltown's Fourth.

A Juvenile Sketch for Independence Day.

Shortville and Smalltown were almost side by side, and they certainly were two towns worth living in, because they were run right, which is more than can be said for most towns.

The way they were run was that when a person got real old, that is more than about sixteen, he had to move away and the town would buy him out and say "Farewell" to him.

That saved the people from a whole lot of meddling, and there was nobody in either Smalltown or Shortville to say "I told you so," or any of the other disgusting things that the aged say, whenever anything goes a little wrong.

Shortville and Smalltown were splendid places to do business and everybody made a lot of money without sacrificing baseball and swimming and other important things the way they do in other cities. Everybody was sensible enough only to want to do business in the hours when you couldn't play games any way, so the business hours were just the way they ought to be, and nobody can say as much for other cities, that's sure.

The people of Shortville were engaged in the agreeable and light business of raising goldfish. It was a clean occupation and the fish had the amiable habit of growing without help. And of course when customers came it was jolly good fun getting the goods out—not at all like the mean job of getting goods out in a dry goods store, for instance. So the people of Shortville were quite happy, and they had good times playing around their big goldfish ponds, which they had made by damming up the river in a dozen places.

Smalltown had almost as easy an industry as Shortville. Its business was to raise rabbits, and they didn't raise them in hutches that needed to be cleaned and have food carried to them and stupid things like that. No! The people of Smalltown raised their rabbits in a great big field of ever so many acres, where clover grew wild and nobody had to do anything except just to watch the animals get good and big, and then to sell them for twenty-five cents a piece when anybody came around who happened to want rabbits.

In June a year ago the Mayor of Shortville celebrated his fourteenth birthday, and he invited the Mayor and all the people of Smalltown, and they had cakes and lemonade and pickles and other good sensible things like that; none of your heavy, tasteless food that old people think is good to eat. And at this feast it was that the grand idea struck some one that they ought to do something about the Fourth of July.

They talked over a whole lot of things, and they had a few little fights over them, but nothing serious; and then somebody said that it was a shame that some of the fireworks manufacturers made real firecrackers—firecrackers with some size to them that would sound something like something. And thus the great idea was born. It was for Smalltown and Shortville to have a race to see which town could make the biggest firecracker with the loudest noise.

The very next day the people of Shortville went to the town of Grubaway, where everybody was grown up and foolish, so that the business hours lasted all day, and at the power store there they bought a hundred pounds of powder, the best quality, for forty cents a pound. And, curiously enough, the very next hour the people of Smalltown arrived there also and bought a hundred pounds of the very same kind.

The Smalltown people got the biggest wrapping paper that they could buy and rolled it into a mighty tube more than six feet long, and then they pounded and rammed the powder into it and wrapped it around and around with all the kite strings and fish lines that could be spared. Everybody pulled with all his might on these strings till the paper was tied up into a roll as hard as iron. Then they rolled more paper around the outside and put more string over it, and then more paper, and so on, until they had a giant firecracker that was taller than a man and as big around as a telegraph pole.

On the morning of Independence Day everybody in Smalltown got up before daylight and rolled the giant firecracker into the hill to show to the Shortville folk. But early as it was, they were ready with theirs. It was almost as tall as the other and a good deal fatter, and it was bright with color, because the Shortville people had made it out of newspapers and other illustrated publications. They had wrapped wire around it to be sure that it would make a good Fourth of July noise.

So the people put up the two firecrackers side by side, and then they tried to agree on which one was the best. It turned out that this was difficult, for of course it could not be expected that the Shortville people should go back on their own article, and it was the same way with the Smalltown folk. The two Mayors tried to settle it between them, but after they got each other down they didn't do much except roll around on the grass until the rest got tired of watching them and made them stop.

At last the throats of all the people got so sore from shouting about it that they were all glad when the Mayor of Shortville said: "Oh what's the use of jawing any more? Let's set off both of them together; and it'll make more noise that way, anyhow."

So after all the people had run up to the top of the hill at least two blocks away from where the firecrackers stood, the Mayors of Shortville and Smalltown lighted the stems, which were nearly ten feet long, and they ran, too. They had scarcely reached the hill before the two firecrackers went off, almost at the same time.

The report was so terrible that it knocked all the people down flat and hurt their ears. A deaf man twenty miles away heard the sound, and went to the door with his gun because he thought that some one was beating it with a maul. The hens within fifteen miles stopped laying eggs for a month, and walked around all that time with an alarmed expression on their faces as if they were waiting for the next report. The people of Grubaway were so frightened that they didn't shoot off any fireworks of their own that day at all, but spent all the time repairing their windows and giving the babies something syrup.

As soon as the people of Shortville and Smalltown had recovered from the little shock they got up and shook hands, and everybody said: "Well, that was something like fireworks!"

But alas! the next moment the people of Shortville set up a great howl and ran like crazy, for the explosion had blown down the dam, and all the goldfish ponds, with the goldfish in them, were rushing helter-skelter down the hills. The people of Smalltown laughed at first, but cause, although it was sad, it was funny, too, to see the goldfish and the "runners" and the silvers all hopping head over heels.

But they laughed a minute. They set up a howl also and ran like crazy, for the water was rushing straight down into their rabbit fields.

They ran pretty fast, but nobody can run as fast as water can run when it is running down hill. Long before they got there the rabbits were all drowned to the last one.

There was a great war on account of all this between the people of Shortville and Smalltown, for each side blamed the other side's firecracker, and as both had gone off at almost the same instant, it was impossible to settle the incident except by a war.

It was a fine war, and most interesting and exciting, but unfortunately the stupid people of Grubaway got mad about it one day because some of the bricks and stones happened to strike some of their windows, and so they sent out policemen and made prisoners of war of every single inhabitant of Shortville and Smalltown and sent them off to school, where they are to this day.

And that is why the traveler may now search in vain for those two happy and delightful towns.

Fourth of July Luncheons.

Prepare cucumber sandwiches a short time before using. Slice the cucumber and soak the pieces in ice cold salt water for fifteen minutes. Then drain and dry them on a cloth. Dip each in mayonnaise dressing and put them between thin slices of buttered bread. The sandwiches may be star shaped with a cookie cutter.

For the fruit salad, shredded pineapple, sliced bananas and oranges, and strawberries cut in half, sprinkled with lemon juice and pulverized sugar may be served from the pineapple shell or a glass dish.

Cakes should be covered with striped red and white icing, and the bonbons wrapped in red, white and blue tissue paper cut in rounds and twisted tightly to simulate torpedoes.

BUDDHISM IN AMERICA.

Not long ago a Buddhist institution was established in Southern California, and now a Hindu temple has been built at San Francisco. After long tolerating our missionaries by their own countries, the heathens at last seem to have turned with a determination to convert us Christians, setting up America instead of India as the land "where every proper religion and only man is true."
