Commencement Exercises of the Crisfield High School

The commencement exercises of the Crisfield High School were held last Friday evening at the Lyric Theatre. The program was as follows:

Music, Orchestra; invocation, Rev. F. T. Benson; salutatory, Ada Jane Saltz; song, "The Land of Evergreens"; Class history, Addie Belle Pruitt; "The Twentieth Century and Woman's Part in It," Marie Stephens Davis; "Into Tomorrow," Beulah Alreda; "Class of 1913," class poem, Una Jesse Ward; class prophecy, Pauline Ashmead; valedictory, Olin W. Sterling; music, Orchestra; address, Hon. John S. McMaster; music, Orchestra; presentation of diplomas, Col. Thomas S. Hodson; benediction, Rev. C. A. Hill; music, Orchestra.

The occasion was a most enjoyable one and reflected great credit upon Principal F. E. Gardner and his assistants. Mr. McMaster in his address announced the establishment of an "Old Home Prize" for the Crisfield High School, which is to be known as the "Hodson Home Prize," the funds for the purpose having been donated by Mr. Thomas S. Hodson, and his son, Mr. Clarence Hodson, of Newark, N. J. In conferring the diplomas, Mr. Hodson gave a brief history of the Crisfield High School, including the various principals and vice-principals who had been employed since its organization in 1876. Mr. Hodson was chairman of the first board of trustees, Messrs. John Sterling and John Cullen being his associates. Fourteen graduates received diplomas.

High School Commencement

The commencement exercises of the Washington High School were held in the Auditorium last (Monday) night. There were only two graduates this year—Misses Mary Elizabeth Beauchamp and Addie Geneva Leake.

The following was the program: Prayer, Rev. J. Howard Gray; salutatory, "The Educational Value of Moving Pictures," Mary Elizabeth Beauchamp; Old Home Prize Essay, "Rebobbeth Church," Nina Paxton; address to graduates, Dr. Alfred P. Dennis; solo, Miss Cary Weaver; presentation of diplomas and prizes, Superintendent of Schools, Wm. H. Dashiell; reading of "Sense and Nonsense"—the High School paper—H. L. D. Stanford, Jr.; valedictory, "The Holy Grail or the Search for the Idea," Addie Geneva Leake.

Flag Day, June 14th

In accordance with its custom for the past sixteen years, the American Flag Association reminds us that Saturday, June 14th, will be the 136th anniversary of the adoption of the stars and stripes, as the flag of the country. The public recognition of Flag Day as a national anniversary is each year becoming more and more general. All American citizens are earnestly invited to join in the public recognition of the birthday of the emblem of our nationality. In many of the States, pursuant to law, the public schools, and also voluntarily in private schools, exercises will be conducted in celebration of Flag Day.

Secretary of State, Wm. J. Bryan, has accepted an invitation to address the annual reunion of Odd Fellows of Maryland, Pennsylvania, the Virginias and the District of Columbia, at Pen-Mar Park on August 17th.

If all the world's a stage, a lot of us need more rehearsals.

SHERIFF TULL ATTACKED

Negroes Try to Rescue Prisoners—Harry White and a Negro Shot in the Affray

Having received complaints from residents between Marion and Kingdon and around Rehobeth that the foreign negroes were violating the local option law, gambling and terrorizing the neighborhood generally, Sheriff Harding P. Tull and his deputy William Howard, of Marion, made an automobile trip to that section Thursday night and raided a tenant house in the vicinity of Mr. Ambrose Matthews' place and arrested three negroes—John Henry, Lloyd Pettit and Ethel Dashiell, against whom they had secured evidence, but a number of others who were in the house escaped.

The prisoners were loaded in a car and the start made for Crisfield. When some distance from the scene the party was waylaid by other negroes, who fired at the officers. At this time Mr. Harry White, who conducts a merry-go-round at Marion, came by in a buggy on his way home to Pocomoke City, and was asked by the officers to render assistance in handling the negroes. He joined the officers who closed in on the party of law-breakers and Harrison Collins and Stuart King were quickly captured, but William Douglass backed away and it is alleged shot at the sheriff, the bullet striking Mr. White in the right side and lodging in the stomach. Sheriff Tull and Douglass had a battle in the road and Douglass received a bullet in each leg below the knee and was captured with Collins and both were handcuffed, but King made his escape.

Deputy Howard assisted Mr. White into his buggy and took him to Pocomoke City and physicians rushed him to the Salisbury hospital in an automobile where an operation was performed by Dr. Dick in the early hours of Friday morning, and the bullet was extracted, and Mr. White's condition was reported critical.

Friday morning Sheriff Tull brought William Douglass, of near Rehobeth; Harrison Collins, of Marumso; John West, of Salisbury, and Jeremiah Cropper, of Virginia, to Princess Anne and lodged them in jail. Dr. Henry M. Lanford was summoned and dressed Douglass' wounded legs.

William Douglass, Harrison Collins and Stuart Thomas had a hearing before Justice C. R. Porter on Saturday morning charged with assault upon an officer with intent to kill. The were all held for the action of the grand jury. John West and Jeremiah Cropper also had a hearing charged with selling whiskey. The former was found guilty and sentenced to the House of Correction for 6 months; the latter was acquitted.

John Henry, Lloyd Pettit and Ethel Dashiell were taken to Crisfield on Friday and tried before Justice W. A. Britton for violating the local option law and found guilty, the men being given a year each in the Maryland House of Correction and the woman six months in the same institution.

Forest Fires To Be Reported By Rural Mail Carriers

The official Postal Guide for May calls the attention of postmasters and rural carriers to an order of the Post Office Department that the carriers report to the proper authorities all forest fires detected along their routes. This order was issued at the request of the Secretary of Agriculture.

For several years in some sections of the country a sort of informal understanding has existed between National Forest rangers and mail carriers with the idea of securing increased fire protection. The marked effectiveness of this co-operation was a strong argument in favor of its extension and official sanction, and was in part responsible for the request of the Secretary of Agriculture which resulted in the order by the Post Office Department. The plan is for the carrier to report a fire to the nearest forest officer on his route, or, if no officer lives on the route, to have him notified by some responsible citizen. State and national foresters are supplied with post road maps and with postal guides containing the addresses of the different postmasters. The postmasters in turn are supplied by the foresters with the names, addresses and telephone call numbers of forest officers residing on or near the carriers' routes.

Co-operation between rural carriers and federal officers will take place in Florida, Arkansas, South Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and California. Co-operation with State officers is given in all the New England States, and in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and California, all these States having established fire protective systems.

THE EPISCOPAL CONVENTION NOW IN SESSION

A List of the Clerical and Lay Delegates from the Diocese of Easton who Will Assemble at St. Andrew's Church in Princess Anne To-Day

The forty-fifth annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Easton will convene in St. Andrew's Church, Princess Anne, to-day (Tuesday) and will be presided over by Bishop William F. Adams, of Easton.

At this convention four of the clergy and four laymen will be appointed delegates to the general convention in New York in October. It is reported that the paramount question to be considered at the general convention is the proposition to change the name of the Protestant Episcopal Church of America.

The convention treasurers who will attend are Judge Adkins, treasurer of the convention and of its trust funds; L. W. Trail, treasurer of the Episcopal fund; Col. Henry Holaday, treasurer of the diocesan mission fund, and E. Hardcastle, treasurer of the diocesan clergy relief fund. These various funds aggregate about $100,000.

Pictures Talk And Sing

The latest improved talking pictures, in which words and movements, sight and sound really went together in perfect accord, were shown Wednesday night at Albaugh's Theatre, Baltimore, by George R. Webb, inventor of a new method of synchronizing sound and movement, under the direction of the Pat Casey Agency, Incorporated, of New York.

In the large audience were representative people from Washington, Philadelphia, New York and Wilmington. The pictures are the result of eight years of experimental work by Mr. Webb. His invention differs from the Edison talking pictures in that Mr. Edison used a photographic arrangement, while Mr. Webb used an electrical device which transmits the vibrations over a wire as a telephone sends vibrations.

Pruner Inventor in Delaware

Wesley Young, inventor of the power pruner, by which fruit trees can be pruned and trimmed by compressed air, the operator merely holding aloft a 16-foot or 20-foot bamboo pole at the end of which pruning shears are opened and shut by compressed air, is in Dover demonstrating his invention. Mr. Young gave a demonstration at Mr. Bancroft's farm early this week before a number of interested spectators, including a representative of the Delaware State News.

With air forced in by his automobile engine, Mr. Young's assistant applied the pruner to some limbs an inch in diameter, that would otherwise have to be sawed off, and it clipped them like pipe stems. It makes a sharp, puffing noise as the exhausts draws together the knives.

There are 600,000 pear trees in Delaware and Mr. Young avers that they all need pruning.—Delaware State News.

Mrs. Mary A. Powell Dead

Mrs. Mary A. Powell, widow of Samuel Powell, died at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at her home near Princess Anne, in her 84th year. Mrs. Powell had a fall about a month ago which fractured her hip and from this she never recovered. She is survived by three sons, William R., Theodore F. and Jacob R. Powell, and one daughter, Miss Rose Powell, all of this county.

The funeral services will be held at Manokin Presbyterian Church this (Tuesday) afternoon at three o'clock and the interment will be in the cemetery adjoining. Rev. W. F. Freund will conduct the service.

Inspecting Ports of Entry

Collector Stone left for Washington Thursday to begin an inspection of the affairs of the District of Columbia port of entry at Georgetown. From there he will proceed to Alexandria and investigate conditions, and then in turn visit Crisfield and Annapolis. Having completed his work the collector will submit a report in which recommendations are to be embodied bearing on the system, number of employees, etc. The department will pass upon these recommendations in time for the reorganization to become effective.

The inspection trip was authorized by the Secretary of the Treasury, through Assistant Secretary Curtis, who has charge of the Customs Service. Collector Stone was ordered to visit all of the ports of entry. Under the reorganization plan of the Customs Service, which goes into effect sometime during this month, many of the present ports throughout the country will be grouped in districts and placed in charge of a collector at the headquarters port. At present Baltimore is a separate port, but under the reorganization plan it will be the headquarters of the district of Maryland. The latter will include the ports of Georgetown, Alexandria, Alexandria county, Virginia; Crisfield and Baltimore. A deputy collector will be in charge of each of the smaller ports and all will report to Collector Stone, to be in charge of the entire district.

PLANTERS WORK IN SOUND

Oystermen Meet to Oppose Whole Culture System—Want Operations Stopped

Sentiment against the encroachment of the oyster planters on the natural rocks of Somerset county received fresh incentive Tuesday when culturists began planting shells and seed oysters on Great Island Rock, in the western part of Tangier Sound, near Smith's Island. The work was done by Crisfield planters, who have surveyed 400 acres of bottom under the oyster planting law, this same ground being the oyster ground which caused the present disturbance between the planters and the natural rock oystermen of Somerset county.

As soon as the first boat approached Great Island Rock and began the work of planting, the news—as carried to Smith's Island and subsequently flashed to all parts of Somerset county, and boatmen from many sections of the county gathered near the scene of operation. No demonstration was made and the fleet of little vessels stood silently by and watched the culturists' work.

Although the oystermen offered no protest, they returned to their homes in the evening with the determination to renew their fight against the present system of planting, and to extend their efforts in behalf of the natural bar fishermen.

As a result of this activity on the part of the planters, a large meeting was held at Drum Point, on Smith's Island, and the oystermen of that place continued their discussion of ways and means to fight oyster planting. At the same time a meeting was held at Fairmount by the Oystermen's Protective Association of that place and also a meeting of the Crisfield oystermen. Each of these meetings reflected the fact that sentiment among the oystermen was fast increasing against the present survey of the Maryland Shellfish Commission, and that some concerted action might be expected at any early date.

A conference was held Thursday in Crisfield by representatives of oystermen's protective associations from various parts of the peninsula. A delegation from Bishophead and one from Hoopersville, Dorchester county, went there Thursday morning and were met by representatives of the Crisfield and Smith's Island associations.

The Dorchester delegations were composed of Moses E. Pritchett, R. W. Mills, B. O. Murphy, George Merrill and William Dean; Deal's Island association was represented by William H. Bradshaw, W. Wallace Evans and Asbury Tyler.

After a discussion as to ways and means, it was unanimously decided to consolidate the different associations into one State body. Thomas B. Webster, of Webster, Ford & Co., of Baltimore, was elected as chairman of the State organization. He was called up over the telephone and, after having the situation laid before him, agreed to accept the chairmanship.

It is proposed to have Mr. Webster call upon Governor Goldsborough and ask him to call a joint meeting of the board of Public Works and the Shellfish Commission. A large delegation from every association of the State will attend this conference and lay the claims of the oystermen before the Board of Public Works and the Shellfish Commission, and the demand will be made that all work of the Shellfish Commission and planters working under the supervision of this body be held up permanently.

The oystermen will suggest that the State steamer be placed at their disposal and that they, accompanied by the Shellfish Commission, be allowed to go over all of the oyster grounds which it is claimed are natural rocks but has been laid aside for lease and demonstrate to the State officials that this bottom is productive and should therefore be included in the domain which the law sets aside for the use of tongs and dredgers.

At the next session of the Legislature it is proposed to back a bill calling for a survey of the oyster bottoms throughout the State, and the disposition of all planters, who now hold bottoms which can be shown to be natural rock. Mr. Webster said he would arrange for the meeting with the Board of Public Works and the Shellfish Commission. In counties where the oystermen have not organized, individual oystermen will be asked to organize a committee for attendance at this conference.

Grasshoppers Invade New Mexico

The great army of grasshoppers, which last Tuesday invaded New Mexico on the east, Wednesday reached Elida, Roosevelt county. The army is 20 miles long and four miles deep and the grasshoppers are literally stripping the county in their path. They are moving westward across the central part of the State at the rate of a mile a day. Growing crops already have been destroyed by the grasshoppers and the range bared of grass.

OVER THE STATE ROADS

Governor and Road Inspection Autoists Arrive in Princess Anne Friday Enroute to Crisfield

The Governor's good roads inspection party arrived in Princess Anne from Salisbury on Friday morning. Three automobiles were necessary to convey the company which consisted of Governor and Mrs. Phillips Lee Goldsborough; Miss Irma Graham and Mr. Walter B. Miller, of Salisbury; Dr. Ira Remsen and Dr. Wm. Bullock Clark, of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Ramsay and Mr. Daniel Annan, of Cumberland; Mr. O. E. Weller, Chairman, and Mr. H. G. Shirley, Engineer of the State Roads Commission, and reporters of several Baltimore papers.

The party made a brief stop in Princess Anne and discussed various road matters with the county officials including the prospective building of a mile or two of Shoemaker road on the road leading from Princess Anne to Deal's Island. The party then left for Crisfield, thence went to Pocomoke City, then returned to Princess Anne and went to Deal's Island, from which point they took the boat to Baltimore.

Three mishaps marred the first day's (Wednesday) trip. The first occurred at Winters Run and the Harford road, where the commission is building a bridge over the stream, and it was necessary to ford. The car, with Dr. Clark, Dr. Remsen and E. E. Goslin, was stalled in the stream. Mr. Walter B. Miller pulled it out. Later Mr. Ramsay's car stuck, and the two rear cars got lost half way between North East and Elkton. The last mishap was when Chief Engineer Shirley and the newspaper correspondents were stalled in the mud, after hunting around Elkton for two hours for the lost party. So hard was the car stuck that it took the passengers and, and a farmer two hours to pull it out.

The party reached Salisbury at 6.30, o'clock Thursday evening. Governor Goldsborough, Andrew Ramsay, and the three ladies accompanying the commission, went to the home of Walter B. Miller, while the rest of the party stopped at the Peninsula Hotel.

Only one slight accident marred the trip Thursday. This came shortly after the start from Chestertown, when something went wrong with Mr. Miller's auto. The passengers in his car were transferred to the other cars, and with the aid of two chauffeurs, Mr. Miller repaired the break. Once started, he made good time and joined the commission while they were lunching at Easton.

From Easton the party went through a number of towns before arriving at Cambridge, where a halt was made while the Governor and his wife went into their home for a few minutes. Then the inspectors proceeded to Sharptown. From there they went to Salisbury.

The roads were not nearly so bad as those encountered the first day out. Fully 80 miles of the roads traveled Thursday have been paved by the commission and are in excellent condition. The rest are very sandy and badly in need of repairs.

Smith Has Laugh On His Side

Friends of Senator John Walter Smith are laughing at the publicity that has been obtained in the last few days over the appointment of "Ike" Nutwell, of Anne Arundel county, as messenger to one of the federal Senate's committees.

Opponents of the senator, they say, have attempted to show the appointment was made to aid the primary election fight, which is now waging in "Ann Rannel." The truth is that Nutwell was appointed away last April, nearly two months ago, but only of late have the newspapers discovered that he had landed a job. A close friend of Senator Smith has said the records will show that Nutwell was appointed before Congress convened for the special session and that he has been on duty ever since the session began.

Norfolk Swept By Tornado

At least a score of persons have been reported drowned from small boats in Hampton Roads by the tornado which hit Norfolk late Friday, razing houses and doing great damage to other property. Hampton, Newport News, Portsmouth and Old Point Comfort were also hit hard. The storm came up from the Chesapeake Bay and descended suddenly on Norfolk and nearby towns. Fifteen houses were razed in one section of Norfolk. Large numbers are camping in tents along the shore for the summer and many of these barely escaped with their lives, so quickly did the tornado come upon them.

A CASE OF GRATITUDE

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press

"There are folks as will contend that the mawl has no gratitude in his soul," said the old possum hunter as he walked through the chestnut forest on the side of the Cumberland mountains, "but them that folks is wrong."

He halted to rub his itching back against a tree and then continued: "Every critter is agin the mawl and ready to wallop him, and why should he be grateful? Why shouldn't he be onery and cantankerous? I'd be meaner'n pizen if I was a mawl. Howsum-ev'n, I'm goin' to tell you about gratitude."

"Soon after the wab some fellers come along yere with a drove of mawls, and one of the critters fell sick, and they gin him to me. He was about the meanest lookin' mawl I ever did see, but I kinder hoped he'd make up fur it in bein' good. He didn't, however, doggone his hide, but when he got well he was meaner'n skunks. He'd bite and kick at anybody who come within ten feet of him, and if I hitched him to the cart he wouldn't pull a pound. I was keepin' him around in the hopes to trade him off when along comes a stranger one day from Arkansas. The old woman was gone to a nuybar's, and I was sittin' on the doorstep when this stranger halted and said:

"Kin I everlastin'ly and eternally flatter myself that I am addressin' the celebrated and notorious Zeb White?"

"That's me," said I.

"The critter who has killed 9,000 possums, 3,000 woodchucks, 4,200 coons and fifty fars?"

"Them's about the figgers, stranger."

"The man who crowded a circus elephant into the ditch, flung a bull over the fence and licked three wild cats barehanded?"

"That's mostly me."

"The man who has outrun, out-jumped, outwrestled and outfitted every critter in Tennessee who would tackle him?"

"Kinder that."

"Well, now, goes on the man he shakes hands, 'yo' seems to be some pumpkins, and I hope 'yo' ar', fur I walked over from Arkansas to gin 'yo' a trial. I'm gwine to do my best, Zeb White, to lick 'yo' outen 'yo' butes!"

"What fur?" said I.

"Jest to take 'yo' down a peg and let 'yo' know that thar ar' two or three other folks on arth. Yes, I'm either gwine to make 'yo' holler or else live on roots all the rest of my days!"

"I don't want no quarrel with anybody," said I, but I soon discovered that the critter from Arkansas was bound to hev a fuss. He bragged and crowed and had so much to say that I had no other way but to tackle him. We peeled off coats and vests out thar on the level spot, and I noticed the old mule standin' with his hind quarters out of the wooded doah.

"I tell 'yo' what I'm gwine to do, said the stranger as he made ready. 'I'm gwine to bite off 'yo' right ear and carry it back to Arkansas with me as a sort of a certificate, and I hope 'yo'll write the date on it with pen and ink before I leave!'"

"We finally got to work, and I soon found that critter all I could manage. He was peart in his feelin's and a hard hitter, and as he danced around he said:

"'Yo' might as well begin to holler right now, Zeb White, fur I've got 'yo' licked now."

"Jest about that time I fetched him a swat that keeled him head over heels and broke my thumb. He got up as peart as 'yo' please, and, seedin' my thumb was broke and my right hand useless, he put on mo' steam. It did seem to me that fur the first time in my life I was gwine to be licked, and I had a feelin' of goodness clear down to my butes. Broken bones don't count in a foot down in this hentry, 'yo' know. The man who comes out on top gits the credit, and the other fellow hasn't a word to say. Yes, sah, I jest don't reckon I was hev'n a powerful cuss shuve of it when Providence interfered. I was bein' banged all around when I happened to see my old mawl backin' up on us from the shed. He'd heard that row and wanted a hand in. 'Tother feller's back was to'ard the mawl, and I played to keep it thar. He never had no warnin' of what was comin'. Then fust thing he knew the mawl backed up to within kickin' distance and let go both feet, and old Arkansas went rollin' most down to the bresh fence. His bresh was gone when he stopped, and I was also sittin' on his stomach. In three or four minits he opened his eyes and looked around and said:

"Ar I backed in Arkansas ag'in?"

"Not skassly," said I.

"Zeb, I acknowledge to bein' a licked man, but I'd like the consolashun of knowin' how 'twas done."

"It was a fair bout."

"I reckon it was, but I was gittin' the best of it when 'yo' fastened a couple of horseshoes to 'yo' hands and reached over my shoulders and bit me in the back and sent me tumblin'."

"Was that what licked me?"

"Reckon it was."

"Shake hands, Zeb White, and bid me goodby."

"And he shouldered his bundle and went off whistlin', and to this day he don't know why that fount went ag'in him. I heard that he went back to Arkansas and tried to fight with hoss-shoes tied to his hands, but the other critter evened up by shootin' fo' but less into him."

A WOMAN'S WORK

sometimes reduces her strength to the depths of weakness—her devotion to household cares prevents sufficient rest and recreation. Thousands of women in this condition find Scott's Emulsion exactly what they need; it is predigested body-food so medically perfected that every drop yields direct returns in strengthening the organs and tissues and in making healthy, life-sustaining blood. Scott's Emulsion is devoid of alcohol or any harmful drugs, and overcomes tiredness and nervousness in a marvelous way.

TRAITS OF THE TURK.

A Friend of the Islamite Tells Why He Admires Him.

I must confess that I am at heart a friend of the Turk. It may be merely association. I have known him many years. But there is about him something which I cannot help liking—a simplicity, a manliness, a dignity. I like his fondness for water and spreading trees. I like his love of children. I like his perfect manners. I like his sobriety. I like his patience. I like the way he faces death. One of the things I like most about him is what has been most his undoing—his lack of any commercial instinct.

I like, too, what no one has much noticed—the artistic side of him. I do not know Turkish enough to appreciate his literature, and his religion forbids him, or he imagines it does, to engage in the plastic arts. But in architecture and certain forms of decoration he has created a school of his own. It is not only that the Turkish quarter of any Anatolian town is more picturesque than the others. The old palace of the sultans in Constantinople, certain old houses I have seen, the mosques, the theological schools, the tombs, the fountains of the Turks, are an achievement which deserves a more serious study than has been given it.

You may tell me that these things are not Turkish, because they were modeled after Byzantine originals or because Greeks and Persians had much to do with building them. But I shall answer that every architecture was derived from another in days not so near our own and that, after all, it was the Turk who created the opportunity for the foreign artist and ordered what he wanted.—H. G. DWIGHT in Atlantic.

THE CAR OF PROGRESS.

Are You Holding It Down or Helping to Push It Along?

The car was on an up grade. Most of the passengers had got out and were pushing. Many, with their coats off, were toiling and sweating bravely. And slowly but surely they were getting ahead. Some, however, remained in the car. Part of them said there was no use in pushing, since the hill was so steep they could never get up anyway. Others said they would help when all those pretending to push were really pushing as they ought to. But the toilers toiled on, pushing the car and those in it constantly up the hill.

The world is on an up grade. Most of the passengers are pushing faithfully, and every year finds it steadily going forward and upward. The pessimists, however, and the cynics remain seated in the car. The former say that the problems are so hopeless and human greed so unfrenzied that we are already beaten. The latter say that when those who profess to be trying to do right begin to practice what they preach, when the "hypocrites" are eliminated, they will help. Meanwhile the workers are pushing and pushing, and the world is going up the hill. But did you ever see a complainer or a knocker who was helping?—Eugene Bernard Smith in Outlook.

Family Pride.

"Prisoner, have you anything to say why the sentence of death should not be passed upon you?"

"A few words, your honor. I am thirty years of age."

"Well?"

"Your older brother is a physician."

"This is impertinent and irrelevant."

"It may sound so, your honor, but it means life or death to me. I understand that you take a great pride in the phenomenal success of your brother?"

"I do, but what possible bearing can that have upon your case?"

"Simply this: Your brother, the doctor, examined me a year ago and predicted that I would live at least twenty years more. It would certainly undermine his reputation as a scientist should I die before that time."—London Answers.

Sleep and Altitude.

Some Swiss doctors maintain that the amount of sleep should be regulated by altitude. Too much sleep, they say, is as harmful as too much food or drink. In low lying districts seven hours' slumber may be enjoyed with impunity, but up in the mountains five hours is enough.

Tipping the Cook.

In old times to dine with a nobleman cost more in tips to the servants than a club dinner. Lord Poor, a well named Irish peer, excused himself from dining with the Duke of Ormond upon the ground that he could not afford it. "If you will give me the guinea I have to pay your cook, I will come as often as you choose to ask me"—which was accordingly done. The duke, however, had not the pluck to stop the tipping practice. Lord Taaffe, a general officer in the Austrian service, did what he could. He always attended his guests to the door. When they put their hands into their pockets he said: "No, if you do give it, give it to me, for it was I who paid for your dinner." To Sir Timothy Waldo must be given the credit of putting an end to the monstrous practice. After dinner with the Duke of Newcastle he put a crown into the cook's hand. It was rejected. "I do not take silver, sir." "Very good. And I do not give gold." This courageous rejoinder "caught on," and the day of vails to cooks was over.—St. James' Gazette.

Worry Fills the Asylums.

An eastern alienist told the Mental Hygiene society that if worry could be eliminated the number of our insane would be decreased by 40 per cent. His assertion is corroborated by other experts.

The diagnosis, one sees, is delightfully simple, but the remedy is hard to apply. Worry is of two sorts—that which comes from within and that which is imposed from without. The nervous specialist treats the first, and mental suggestion succeeds in a certain proportion of cases. As for the worry incident to our mad scramble to survive, the doctors we look to in that case are the economists and the sociologists. The problem of the nerve specialist is not an easy one, but it looks almost simple when compared with the problem of the economists. Both sets of doctors are making headway, and at present we may look for much improvement in our insanity statistics. So let us not worry about worry, but work to remove its causes.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Nelson Love Letter.

Mr. Algernon E. Asphall in "West Indian Tales of Old" gives some notes about Nelson when at English Harbor, Antigua. It was while on the Leeward Islands station that Nelson was taken with what he himself had described as "the disorder which is what the world calls love" and became engaged to Miss Frances Nisbet, whom he married at Nevis. Here is part of a love letter to his "dearest Fanny":

As you begin to know something about sailors have you not often heard that salt water and absence always wash away love? Now, I am such a heretic as not to believe that faith, far behold, every morning since my arrival I have had six pails of salt water at daylight poured upon my head, and instead of finding what the seamen say to be true I perceive the contrary effect, and if it goes on so contrary to the prescription you must see me before my fixed time. At first I bore absence tolerably, but now it is almost insupportable, and by and by I expect it will be quite so

It has a large and beautiful Persian rug on the floor and a ceiling covered with many chromes of queens and actresses and others in gulf frames, picked up in the Bombay bazaar. ## Order Nisi.

In the matter of the tax sale of real estate in Dublin Election District of Somerset county, assessed to the Valley Realty Company, made and reported by Robert F. Maddox, County Treasurer for Somerset county for the year 1910. Milton L. Vessey, purchaser, ex parte.

No. 2820, Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity.

Whereas a certain Robert F. Maddox, County Treasurer for Somerset county, in the State of Maryland, for the year 1910, has reported to the Circuit Court for Somerset County, a sale made by him to Milton L. Vessey, of all that lot or parcel of land in Dublin Election District, of said county, in the State of Maryland, containing 3/4 acres, more or less, with the improvements thereon, situated on the county road, known as the Scott Mill Lot, adjoining the land of S. A. Riley, it being the same land which is reserved in the deed to the said S. A. Riley from the Valley Realty Company dated the 31st day of December, 1910, and recorded among the land records of Somerset county in Liber 8, F. D. No. 55, folio 488, etc., and assessed to the Valley Realty Company, on the assessment books of said Election district for said year 1910, and sold for the payment of taxes due and in arrears together with all the proceedings had in relation thereto; and whereas upon examination it appears to the said Court that the said proceedings are regular and that the provisions of the law in relation thereto have been complied with.

Now it is therefore ordered, by the Circuit Court for Somerset county, in Equity, this 21st day of May, 1913, that notice be given by the publication of this order once a week for three successive weeks in the MARYLANDER AND HERALD, a weekly newspaper published in Somerset county, before the 18th day of June, 1913, warning all persons interested in the said real estate to be and appear in this Court on or before the 21st day of June, 1913, to show cause, if any they have, why said sale should not be ratified and confirmed.

The report states the amount of sales to be $240.00.

No. 2819, Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain real estate, owned as tenants in common, by the heirs at law of John Wesley Beauchamp, Sr., late of Somerset county, deceased.

The bill states that on the 15th day of November, 1883, a certain Benjamin Lankford and wife conveyed to said John Wesley Beauchamp, Sr., a certain farm, known as "The George L. Hickman Farm," situate in said Somerset county, for and during the life and of the said Beauchamp's natural life, and after his death to such child or children, or descendant or descendants of such child or children, to take per stirpes non per capita, as he the said Beauchamp, might leave surviving him at the time of his death; that the said John Wesley Beauchamp, Sr., departed this life about seven years ago, leaving surviving him the following named children: Florence A. Beauchamp, who married Robt. T. Beauchamp; Bessie Butler, who married Frank Butler; Emma Shell, who married Adolph Shell; Isaac Beauchamp, Lewis J. Beauchamp and John Wesley Beauchamp, Jr.; that the said John Wesley Beauchamp, Jr., has since died, intestate, leaving no widow, and leaving as his sole heir at law, an infant daughter, Lula Beauchamp; that all of the said descendants of the said John Wesley Beauchamp, Sr., are of full age, except a daughter, Bessie Butler, who is non-resident in this State, and who is the wife of the State of California; that the said real estate is not susceptible of partition, without material loss and injury to the parties entitled to interest therein, as above stated, and that it is necessary that said land should be sold and the proceeds divided among the said parties, according to their interests therein.

It is thereupon this 17th day of May, 1913, ordered by the clerk of the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Somerset county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 17th day of June next, give notice to the said non-resident defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 5th day of July, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

WAIL OF THE DONKEY.

Marken to it in China if You Want to Tremble in Terror.

In all the east today the donkey is a favorite means of transportation both for travelers and merchandise. It was so in the days of the patriarchs Isaac and Jacob, says the Louisville Courier-Journal, and so it will probably remain for ages to come.

But nothing in China is just like the same thing anywhere else in the world, and the donkey is no exception. Dr. Chester of Nashville, who while evangelizing in Arkansas in his younger days had become familiar with the easy amble of the long eared American species, was induced to make trial of the Chinese type during a visit to China a few years ago. His experience was disappointing. The gait was a rough, insufferable jog, and the characteristic bray was a painful phenomenon in the realm of sound. Dr. Chester reports his impressions as follows:

"The power of heredity, working through millenniums of isolation, with no modification from foreign admixture, has developed in the bray of the Chinese donkey a quality all its own. There are no words in English to describe the heartrending pathos of it. It was as if an appeal to heaven against the cruelty and oppression of ages were at last finding utterance in one long, loud, undulating wail. And when our party of three met another party of six and all nine of the donkeys began at one time to exchange the compliments of the day then pathos gave place to terror, and you could only sit, appalled and trembling, as the mighty reverberation rolled away on its journey round the world."

HOW TO GROW STRONG.

The Eight Natural Exercises Give the Best Physical Culture.

It is not logical for a man to swing in the air hanging on two rings by his hands, according to George Hebert, a French naval lieutenant who has devoted himself to the study of physical culture. Such exercise demands abnormal efforts, which must be harmful because they do not respond to any necessity.

For the same reason it is poor gymnastics to raise and hold the arm in the air while holding the rest of the body motionless. The result of such action is incomplete development. The arm should be exercised by throwing something, by climbing or by boxing, and the legs should be exercised by running or swimming, because these essential natural movements have a happy reaction on the whole organism.

A particular movement may be interesting in the case of invalidism when the subject is capable of ordinary exercise, but when people are in health and anxious to become strong there is only one means of obtaining physical improvement and only one form of efficacious physical culture.

That is to carry out such exercises as were imposed by nature upon the men of the forests and such as are in use now among savages. These are walking, running, leaping, climbing, lifting, jumping, boxing and swimming. All the obligations of primitive life have a place in these eight natural exercises.—Harper's Weekly.

When the boarders were all gathered about the table fussy little Miss Mac—gushingly stammered to Mr. Mac—her namesake, but who was no relation: "Oh, Mr. Mac! You must pardon me for opening your mother's letter. I feel awful about it! But I didn't read a single word, I assure you. When I saw the heading 'Chicago' and 'Dear mother' and the signature I knew it wasn't for me, so I wouldn't read a bit of it, for I'm sure I wouldn't like any one to read mine." "Oh, that's all right," "I was only from my sister. There's nothing a daughter writes to her mother that anybody couldn't read." After again apologizing half a dozen times Miss Mac—said: "Your sister wrote that she was going to be married. I hope she's making a good match."—New York Tribune.

A few days after the child had received his gift he brought it back to his father "The dictionary is no good," he said. "You'd better take it to the store and get your money back."

Farm and Garden

FOR A GOOD WINDBREAK.

Austrian or Black Pine Has Advantages Over Some Other Trees.

The Austrian pine, often spoken of as the black pine, is commonly planted throughout the United States east of the Rocky mountains for ornamental and windbreak purposes. Under favorable conditions it will attain a height of sixty or seventy feet, with a diameter of fully two feet at the stump. It is pleasing in appearance, grows erect with a straight, heavy trunk and regular whorls of heavy limbs. The leaves are from five to seven inches long, very dark green and retain their greenness throughout the year.

In keeping with the general appearance of the tree the foliage is dense and heavy, which makes it one of the very best of the pines for windbreak purposes. It is readily propagated from seed, but the seedlings are tender and susceptible to several fungous diseases common in nurseries. The seedlings transplant with much difficulty, and there is usually a heavy loss in the first transplanting, but only a small per cent of loss in the subsequent plantings. Only trees that have been transplanted once or twice should be bought for permanent plantings, and these should be from fifteen to twenty inches in height.

Photograph by Kansas State Agricultural college.

The Austrian pine is generally propagated by all nurserymen handling coniferous stock and can be obtained in any desired numbers. The tree requires special care in the seedling stage. It is impracticable for any except skilled nurserymen to attempt to grow it.—Kansas Farmer.

THE FARMER'S PROBLEM.

According to Former Secretary Wilson, every day in the crop growing season is worth $50,000,000 to the farmers of the United States. This wealth, however, represents the work of nature as well as of men. The big problem for the farmer is to so arrange his affairs that he can keep nature working for him all the time.

For the Asparagus Bed.

The land for an asparagus bed must be well drained, warm, rich soil and thoroughly worked. For a home patch deep spading may do, but care must be taken to get the manure well mixed with the soil if best results are desired. For larger beds the manure should be turned under with a plow. Deep plowing is advantageous in most cases. The first plowing should be done late in the fall, the second early in the spring. Good, strong one-year-old roots are the best. A long bed, single row for the home garden, is better and more easily managed than a short bed of a number of rows. The plants should have plenty of space.—American Agriculturist.

Let Out the Gas.

In severe cases of flatulency or wind colic the life of the horse may be saved by prompt tapping for the removal of gas. The trocar and cannula used for the purpose are thrust into the most distended part of the right flank, high up near to the rib and at the edge of the feather of hair which runs the opposite way of that on the ribs. In a cow tapping is done on the left side. There is little danger in using the instrument, but it must be sterilized before use, and the wound should be disinfected after removal of the trocar.—Farm Journal.

It's a Useful Servant.

Where a farmer owns a wood lot and burns wood he can make an excellent investment by purchasing a gasoline engine and wood sawing machine. Even a two and one-fourth horsepower engine will do a lot of work, but it is advisable, perhaps, to get a somewhat larger one because the chances are that after a farmer gets an engine he will find other work for it to do.

Don't Grow Scabby Spuds.

One thing is sure—if your potatoes are scabby in the garden one year you had better not plant any on the same ground another year. Put them somewhere else or you will have more trouble.

BRAIN WORK COUNTS.

The farmers must get their heads into the work. I do not advise you to work longer hours in the day or work any harder while you are at it. My text for the men on the farm is to get in more head work. Some men seem to slave away many hours a day and yet accomplish very little. I question if these men read the Bible. The Bible says, "A man shall earn his bread by the sweat of his brow." Most men leave their heads out of the game and make a poor living by the sweat of their backs and the sweat of the backs of all the rest of the family.—Professor A. E. Chamberlain, St. Paul, Minn.

WHAT ONE MAN HAS DONE

With "Wornout" Land Another Might Try Also With Success.

A farm of 100 acres, twenty-five miles out of Philadelphia and with good railroad facilities, was sold for taxes some years ago because the land was worn out. It had a thin, gravelly soil. Most of the land lies on the side of a ridge and has a moderate slope, but about five acres are level meadow, on which a fine spring is situated.

A market gardener purchased the farm at a tax sale. He cut trenches about 500 feet long and 20 feet wide across the meadow, the bottoms of which were covered with gravel, and diverted the spring water into them. A stand of watercress was then started, and by fall it covered the trenches, and the owner began to cut and ship it to the Philadelphia markets. As cold weather approaches the cress is protected from frost by rough houses built over the trenches. The north sides of the houses are of inch boards, against which corn fodder is stacked to keep out the wind. The south sides are of glass. The heat of the sun and the warmth of the spring water are sufficient to keep the cress growing rapidly all winter without resort to artificial heat. A portion of the beds is cut over each day, and in about ten days it is again ready for cutting. The returns the first winter were about $100 a day from the cress. A narrow strip of soil between the back of the house and the edge of the trench is devoted to violets and has proved very profitable.

On the remainder of the farm French lilacs are set about four feet apart and kept well cultivated for four years. The bushes are then taken up and forced to bloom about the Christmas holidays. A handsome profit is realized each year, and steady employment is given to a large number of men. The former owner "couldn't make it pay."—Country Gentleman.

Killing the Country.

Agriculture on the newer sections is carried on at the expense of the fertility in the soil. A twenty bushel crop of wheat removes from the soil in the straw and grain $9.30 worth of plant food per acre, or 46½ cents per bushel. In selling wheat and burning straw this is actually removed. Last year's crop of wheat—150,000,000 bushels—removed from the soil $70,000,000 worth of plant food. In other words, the state of North Dakota is worth less as a crop factory by $70,000,000 than before the past season's crop of wheat was grown. Add to this all other grain sent out of the state, and the sum will be much increased.—North Dakota Experiment Station.

Where the Chicken Gets the Ax.

The following method of killing fowls is a neat and proper one: Set a square post about two feet in the ground and about two and one-half or three feet (or as desired) above the ground. After clipping the fowl's head off (for this I prefer a corn cutter or knife to a hatchet or ax) place the fowl in the box where it will bleed freely. This method, to my notion, is more humane than to have it flopping about on the ground.—Farm and Fireside.

Silo Ought to Be Handy.

Build the silo next to the cattle barn where the feed can be taken right from the silo into the barn. A feed carrier makes light work in such a case.

THE BUSY LITTLE BEE.

Bees like music and are easily taught to gather at the call of certain strains, but they do not like harsh or loud voices or discordant sounds. An even temper is an absolute necessity in a beekeeper. Swarms have been known to "growl" because a loud talking man stood near the hives.

It is a mistake not to wire the sheets in the brood frames, for when it comes to extracting the frames, to say nothing of holding the completed frame at an angle, it is a great comfort to find that the combs are not continually breaking loose from the frames, which would otherwise be the case.

To transfer bees before swarming time remove the top of old hive and set a single story hive over it. Make all the joints bee tight. Now have foundation in new hive, and the bees will soon work up into it. After the queen gets to laying well you can lift off the new hive and do what you please with the old hive and combs. This is a quick way to get bees into a modern hive without much trouble.

The Tariff Lobby

The President has acted judiciously as the representative of all the people in warning the country of the operations of the lobby that is trying to pervert the representatives of some of the people. Men hired by the beneficiaries of the tariff swarm all over Washington and are trying by all the arts of their kind to bully, cajole or corrupt enough Senators to mutilate and deform the tariff bill.

Every man who thinks the new tariff would injure his business is entitled to go to Washington and get what he thinks are the facts before his own Senators, other Senators and committees, if there be any opportunity. But the lobby does not stop at that. Every sort of misrepresentation is employed. Every effort is made to create "fake" public sentiment in the States from which susceptible Senators come, and if any Senator is suspected of being accessible to grosser influence they will certainly be tried on him.

There is no way of preventing this, but publicity is a pretty sure means of defeating it. There is no way of preventing men from talking to Senators or entertaining them with dinners where the beverage list is not limited to grape juice. Within the limits of honesty and good faith there is no reason why this should be prevented. No one supposes that the Senate, like a jury, can be locked up to keep it away from objectionable influences. No one denies the right of any citizen to use proper means of persuading Senators to support what he thinks would be a desirable amendment of a bill.

But there is now in Washington the most powerful and unscrupulous lobby the capital has ever seen. A bill reducing duties will reduce the profits of some of the protected interests—profits to which they are not entitled, profits not necessary for the maintenance of their business. A Democratic Administration was elected to lower duties and reduce those profits that are due to the abuse of the taxing powers of Congress.

It will help the Senators to resist the influences it is sought to bring to bear upon them to let them know that the country is watching them. The President has put the nation on its guard. If any votes can be changed by open debate let it be done. If the Protectionists vote against reductions, it is only what they are in duty bound to do. But the Democratic party has a sufficient majority in the Senate. It is entitled to pass such a tariff bill as is demanded by its history and its platform. If it is defeated it will be due to the desertion of some of its representatives in the Senate, and the President has directed public attention to the nature of the efforts now being made to tempt Senators to desert.—Philadelphia Record.

New Jersey Jury "Reform"

The Jury Reform bill in New Jersey, for which President Wilson made a personal and determined fight, for the purpose of taking away the duty of drawing juries from the sheriffs of the counties, has been passed and signed. But it is a question whether victory rests on the side of President Wilson or the Democratic bosses who resisted his proposed reform.

The new law provides for a commissioner in each county, to be named by the Chancellor of the State, to act with the sheriff in drawing juries for the counties. Thus, the sheriff is not eliminated, but remains an important factor in jury selection.

Also, this new enactment has to run the gauntlet of a Referendum at the State election next fall, before it becomes operative. At this popular test it is as likely to be defeated as to receive approval.

Thus, President Wilson may be beaten in the end, and apparently has gained only a doubtful victory, in any event. The result is most unfortunate. Sheriffs should have nothing to do with drawing juries, and good laws should not be subjected to the uncertainties and hazard of a reference to a public election for approval. They should go into effect at once.—Wilmington Evening.

An Austrian officer, who committed suicide because he had been discovered to be a spy in the interest of Russia, is said to have been employed by his own Government as a spy upon foreign officers. Evidently spies were then engaged to watch him on the theory of setting a thief to catch a thief. The incident shows the high sense of honor prevalent in some military circles. The old Romans had a cynical saying, "Who will watch the watchmen?" Apparently human nature has not changed a great deal in the intervening 2000 years.

As Bryan Does It

The entire tradition of Jeffersonian simplicity in all of its spread and magnitude seems to rest upon that story about his having ridden horse-back to the Capitol on the day of his inauguration, and after hitching his horse to a plain wooden post such as ornaments the fronts of country grocery stores, having walked up the steps and having been sworn in without the least fuss or feathers. This story, like some others of the early traditions, is now regarded as being purely fictional.

But if the theory about Thomas Jefferson's democratic ways is based upon a misstatement of the facts it is certainly not so with regard to the democracy of his modern prototype, the Commoner from Nebraska, who is in charge of the foreign affairs office of the government. The other day, according to a Washington story, Mr. Bryan, who was taking a constitutional in one of the parks, bought a bit of cheese and a bun at a convenient grocery store and ate his lunch on a park bench. Now comes another story about his going to market with his basket on his arm and selecting his favorite brand of radishes, his spring peas, his lamb chops and his cucumbers with the same natural ease and poise that characterize his strolls among the poultry and live stock on his Nebraska farm.

If Jeffersonian simplicity is a myth there seems to be nothing mythologic about the simplified democracy of his great modern apostle and expounder. No doubt Mr. Bryan is giving official Washington some object lessons, which, very likely, will be reformatory.—Baltimore American.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Killed By Express Train

Barker Marshall, 73 years old, of Hallwood, Va., was struck and instantly killed Monday of last week by a New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk express train at Hallwood Station.

Mr. Marshall attempted to cross the tracks about 100 yards ahead of the engine. He was thrown 50 feet to the opposite platform. The train was running 60 miles an hour.

Mr. Marshall had been a mail carrier for more than 25 years between Mappsville and Hallwood. He is survived by a widow and three sons, one daughter and three brothers, all of whom live on the Eastern Shore of Virginia and Maryland.

Take Plenty of Time to Eat

There is a saying that "rapid eating is slow suicide." If you have formed the habit of eating too rapidly you are most likely suffering from indigestion or constipation, which will result eventually in serious illness unless corrected. Digestion begins in the mouth. Food should be thoroughly masticated and insalivated. Then when you have a fullness of the stomach or feel dull and stupid after eating, take one of Chamberlain's Tablets. Many severe cases of stomach trouble and constipation have been cured by the use of these tablets. They are easy to take and most agreeable in effect. Sold by all dealers.

NOTICE OF HIGH SCHOOL LEVY

PRINCESS ANNE, MD., May 18th, 1913.
To the County Commissioners of Somerset County:

In accordance with an Act of the Legislature, the School Board is required to submit a list of the High Schools of the county, together with the cost of maintaining same in order that your Honorable Board may make an equal High School levy as required by law.

There are in this county five High Schools, located at Princess Anne, Oriskany, Marton, Fairmount and Deal's Island, of which the first two are on the approved list of the State Board of Education, and are therefore entitled to State aid. These two schools are at present under group second of the said High School Act. Application is about to be made to the State Board to place the Oriskany High School under the first group.

The following schedule of salaries is provided for in said Act:

GROUP SECOND.
For principal, not less than $1,000
For assistants, not less than 500 each
For special teachers, not less than 500 each

Under this grouping, the cost will be for Princess Anne, $1,750; for Marton, $1,250; for Fairmount, $1,250; for Deal's Island, $1,250; the total cost of the High Schools of the county $5,500, thus leaving $5,500 to be provided by the County Commissioners.

Respectfully submitted,

W. H. DASHIELL,
County Superintendent.

In compliance with the Act of General Assembly above referred to, it is hereby ordered that the above sum of $5,500 be included in the coming county levy.

By order of the Board,
WM. J. COULBOURNE, President,
Princess Anne, Md., May 30th, 1913. 5-27

In the matter of the tax sale of real estate in Westover Election District of Somerset county, assessed to Hester Milbourne, and reported by H. Clay Tull, collector of State and County taxes for the First Collection District of Somerset county for the year 1909. Milton L. Vasey, purchaser, ex parte.

In the Circuit Court for Somerset county, No. 2824, Chancery.

Whereas a certain H. Clay Tull, collector of State and County taxes for the First Collection District of Somerset county, in the State of Maryland, for the year 1909, has reported to the Circuit Court for Somerset county, a sale made by him to Milton L. Vasey, of all that lot or parcel of land lying and being in Westover district, of said county, in the State of Maryland, containing 5 acres, more or less, with the improvements thereon, situated on the private road to Westover station, adjoining the lands of John S. Cottman and Hester Milbourne, on the assessment books of said Election District for the year 1909, and sold for the payment of taxes due and in arrears, together with all the proceeds had in relation thereto; and whereas upon examination it appears to the said Court, that the said proceedings are regular, and that the provisions of the law in relation thereto have been complied with.

Now it is therefore ordered, by the Circuit Court for Somerset county, in Equity, this 27th day of May, in the year 1913, that notice be given by the publication of this order once a week for three successive weeks in the "MARYLANDER AND HERALD," a weekly newspaper published in Somerset county, before the 28th day of June next, warning all persons interested in the said real estate to be and appear in this Court on or before the 30th day of June next, to show cause, if any they have, why said sale should not be ratified and confirmed.

The report states the amount of sales to be $51.00.

Mrs. Dashiell was formerly Miss Jessie Harrison Williams, of Baltimore.

PAINT OR NOT

Is a horse worth more or less after feed?

Hay and oats are high today; shall I wait today and feed him tomorrow? That's how men do about painting their houses and barns and fences. Paint has been high for several years; and so they have waited. Paint is high yet; they are still waiting; thousands of them are waiting for paint to fall.

Their property drops a trifle a year and the next job of paint creeps-up creeps-up creeps-up; it'll take more paint by a gallon a year; they don't save a cent, and the property goes on suffering.

The State Roads

The State Road Commission, headed by Governor Goldsborough, started from Baltimore Thursday afternoon in automobiles on an inspection tour of road work that has been completed within the last fiscal year, and also of those road sections in the territory through which the party will pass which are to be improved during the next twelve months. The commission swung across to the Eastern Shore when the Susquehanna was crossed at Havre de Grace, and will travel through the Eastern counties as far south as Crisfield.

The inspection trip will bring the road commission into touch with county commission boards and with taxpayers who have more or less pronounced views on almost every phase of the complex problem of building county roads with state money. It is likely that advice and suggestions will be delivered to the commission at every stop from Elkton to Crisfield, for in every county there are road critics who would like the commission in one way or another to alter its plans. A good many people still hold to the view that roads costing only $2,000 or $3,000 per mile should be built, and that the available fund apportioned to each county should thus be made to construct three times the mileage that is in contemplation.

There is no reason to doubt, however, the wisdom of the adopted plans. The originally constructed roads should be of enduring quality. The clay and sand roads, of course, be all the more irksome and irritating by contrast, but the counties should, on their own account, improve these roads. This can be done, and there is likely to be a growing demand in every county that it shall be done.—Baltimore Star.

Guaranteed Eczema Remedy

The constant itching, burning, redness, rash and disagreeable effects of eczema, tetter, salt rheum, itch, piles and irritating skin eruptions can be readily cured and the skin made clear and smooth with Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment. Mr. J. C. Eveland, of Bath, Ill., says: "I had eczema twenty-five years and had tried everything. All failed. When I found Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment I found a cure." This ointment is the formula of a physician and has been in use for years—not an experiment. That is why we can guarantee it. All druggists, or by mail, Price 50c. ## DOUBTFUL MONEY.

CONFUSION IN ITS COINS.

They Almost Rank With Those of Korea, Where the Descending Scale Is Good, Half Good, Bad and Counterfeit Good Only After Dark.

Of all the so-called "great powers," Italy has the most unstable and most unsatisfactory currency. Not alone is the exchange subject to fluctuation, but the currency of every country, but here is a great mass of counterfeit and worthless money floating about the country for the undoing of the currency. In the first place, the engraving on the paper money is of inferior quality, and hence it is quite easy to make a counterfeit. Secondly, there are so many worthless or doubtful coins in circulation that the temptation to add to their number is not easily resisted. Like some of the paper money that so long ago used to be quite common in our own country, the Italian is allowed to remain in circulation until it is so filthy and nearly obliterated and therefore difficult of recognition as counterfeit or genuine. To add to the confusion, French silver is generally accepted, while the coins of Switzerland, Belgium and Greece, although officially recognized, are, as a rule, refused in commerce. Numerous apical and Roumanian coins are still in circulation, although they are valueless and accepted only by unwary foreigners, whom the Italians regard as their prey.

In addition, none of the large number of one lire pieces coined before 1883 can be passed, although intrinsically of equal value with those of later date, since the period arbitrarily fixed for their redemption has passed and the government refuses to accept them further. Under this caption fall all coins bearing the head of Victor Emmanuel and the word "eletto" (elected) in the face.

The Italians possess a mania for mutilating and perforating the five and ten centesimo copper coins, but owing to their small denomination this usually acts as no bar to their acceptance. "Oh, it's half good!" is often heard from some philosophical storekeeper as he tosses a doubtful coin into the till. Indeed, the traveler is constantly reminded of Korea, the classical country of counterfeiters, with its complicated scale of descending money values, which are good, half good, bad, and counterfeiters that are good only after dark.

Let the foreign visitor who has been asked as a clearing house for worthless money beware of entertaining the fallacy that the rule is capable of inverse application. Like the legendary memory of elephants is that of the Italian cabbie or retail merchant, leading him to pursue through storm and darkness the man or woman who has passed a worthless coin into his keeping. On one occasion I was tracked even to the dinner table of friends and forced to redeem a doubtful ten centesimo piece (2 cents) which I had inadvertently offered as a tip.

Instead of seeking to strengthen the basis of the country's paper and silver money, the government adopted the very measure calculated still further to rebase the currency in the public mind according to the ruling of the postoffice authorities, all money orders must be purchased with gold, silver and paper being refused. Owing, however, to the premium at which gold is held by the banks, this results in considerable loss to those sending money in this manner and often also to great inconvenience after banking hours.

To accentuate the inconsistency of the country's refusal officially to recognize its own currency, it need only be mentioned that the amount of Italian gold in existence is a negligible quantity and that the government ruling results in forcing those patronizing the postoffice to purchase French gold.

Justly angered by this inconsistency, on one occasion I relieved my feelings in the presence of the official who had refused the offer of Italian paper money by a sarcastic reference to the non-existence of native gold coinage. The resultant indignant search through his money drawer failed to reveal a single Italian gold piece, although it resulted nearly in an attack of apoplexy brought on by patriotic wrath.

The application of my little article is this: Are not these conditions in the home land responsible for the frequency with which Italians of low class in America are caught counting their Uncle Sam's silverware?—W. W. Whitlock in Chicago Record-Herald.

Didn't Want the Moon.
"There's no use crying for the moon," she said when he threatened to do something desperate unless she changed her mind.

"I'm not crying for the moon," he said, "but I do hate like Sam Hill to live up the idea of becoming your father-in-law."—Chicago Record-Herald.

FEROCIOUS DOGFISH.

These Ravenous, Sharklike Gluttons Would Eat a Man Alive.

"N" he said, "My God, Frank, shoot me quick, shoot me quick—the dogs are eatin' me alive!"

"I hauled up my shotgun, 'n' I pulled back th' hammers, but I couldn't do it, though I warn't more'n ten feet from him. 'n' he could hev blown th' whole head off. I don't b'lieve th' Lord would hev called th' murder either."

"I gasped for air 'n' dropped my gun on th' seat, 'n' then I looked at Charlie again. 'n' it was all over—jest a dark red in th' water 'n' a hundred ugly snouts 'n' shinin' rows of teeth jest gleamin' 'n' snappin' thar in th' gray of that October afternoon."

It was Frank Oleson, a fisherman of Rockland, Me., who spoke. He was telling a little group of fishin' clad fishermen about a tragedy of 1885, when he and Charles Freeman sailed out of Tannets Harbor, Me., one October mornin'. Oleson brought the little sloop Alpine back the next mornin' alone. Freeman had fallen overboard in the midst of a school of dogfish, which had eaten him alive before the eyes of his helpless companion.

They were bound for the fishing grounds off Mathews Island. Freeman had taken along a shotgun. When five miles from Crehaven a bunch of coots, flying low, came skimming along. Freeman fired into them, and three or four dropped. The Alpine was brought up into the wind, and with her mainsail and jib flapping the gunner jumped into the dory and started to pick up his game.

There was a shout, a splash, and Freeman was struggling in the water. In reaching over the side of the dory he had lost his balance and fallen into the choppy sea. In a moment the hungry, sharklike dogs were after him. The opening paragraph tells all there is to tell.

Many stories are related to show the ferocity of the dogfish. It was not more than half a dozen years ago that two New York yachtsmen were looting along in a sloop "yacht" in Penobscot bay, one July afternoon. One of the yachtsmen, a physician named Bowker, decided to take a plunge. He stripped and dived off the bow of the sloop, intending to pull himself into the tender trailing behind as it passed him. He had scarcely hit the water before he let out a yell. He just managed to catch the gunwale of the rowboat when his companion reached him and hauled him in. Three ugly wounds showed in his legs where the voracious dogfish had bitten out chunks. He was taken into Rockland, where a physician treated him for several weeks before he was out of danger.—New York Sun.

Chemist and Truth.

Dr. Benjamin E. Smith, the noted lexicographer, once made an autobiographical statement which may interest advocates of scientific education, says the Manchester Guardian. Some one had asked his opinion about the best methods of teaching truthfulness to children. "Frankly," he replied, "I know I told the truth as a child purely from a desire to please my mother, as I would have carried out any other course of action on which she insisted. But I never saw any other reason for doing it until as a lad I worked in a chemical laboratory. Then I realized that nothing that was said made the slightest difference to the elemental fact, and I believe I have loathed exaggeration and falsehood ever since."

Cost of a Boat Race.

A writer in Bailey's Magazine of England has been figuring on the cost of the annual boat race between Oxford and Cambridge and says the expense to each crew may be approximately estimated at $3,000 for each. He then says that as the contest rarely takes more than twenty minutes the costs works out at about $300 per minute, or about $8 every time the oars dip into the water. The cost of the boats is placed at $250 and the oars at $70, the rest of the money going for preparation from October until the day of the race.

Room Doors on the Stage.

In real life room doors always open in toward the room itself. On the stage, however, room doors, as a rule, open outward, or away from the room. Exits are one of the most difficult parts of the actor's art, and if he or she had to fumble with the handle, pull the door toward them, step round it and pass through they would probably make a clumsy dodge of it. That is why, as a rule, doors are constructed to open outward at a push.

Made Him Hungry.

"I'm hungry," complained a husky husband the other day.
"But you just had breakfast," argued his wife.
"I know it," answered the husband, "but as soon as I finished I drank a glass of water, and all those fannell cakes shrank right down to nothing!"—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Most Children Have Worms.

Many mothers think their children are suffering from indigestion, headache, nervousness, weakness, costiveness, when they are victims of that most common of all children's ailments—worms. Peevish, ill-tempered, fretful children, who toss and grind their teeth, with bad breath and colicky pains, have all the symptoms of having worms, and should be given Kickapoo Worm Killer, a pleasant candy lozenge, which expels worms, regulates bowels, tones up the system, and makes children well and happy. Kickapoo Worm Killer is guaranteed. All druggists, or by mail, Price 25c. Kickapoo Indian Medicine Co., Philadelphia and St. Louis.

How I Saw A Real Play

By MARGARET BARR

During the winter of 1911-12 I visited the Isthmus of Panama to see the big ditch. Having satisfied my curiosity by going over it from one end to the other, I boarded the steamer at Colon for my return. I was standing on deck, leaning on the rail, looking down at the passengers hurrying about on the wharf or thronging up the gangway, where a party of tourists, consisting principally of young girls, came trooping along together, carrying the usual hand baggage and evidently intending to sail for home. That they were Americans was plain from their speech. A young girl of this party and a young man stopped on the dock directly below where I was standing and unkindly of my presence, engaged in a hurried conversation.

She—You are coming with us, are you not?

He—Impossible. How can I leave here with work unfinished, without leave?

She—There are other engineers, are there not, who can do such work? Do you consider yourself the only capable one in the canal zone?

He—Would you have me do all this for you?

She—Is it as much as what you said you would do when we stood on the side of the canal—that you would jump down a hundred feet for my glove if I would throw it over?

He—That was gallantry. This is the real thing.

She—The real thing is the test.

At this moment I caught sight of a dark face above a pile of fruit boxes on the dock watching the couple—the face of a girl with a devil in her eyes. She was doubtless of mixed Spanish and Aztec blood, with all the virulence of this mixture of races contains. The young engineer and the girl, who were evidently the objects of her interest, were unaware of her presence. He stood irresolute. Since I was looking down from above I could not see much of their faces, but I believed her eyes were holding him in thrall. My position, akin to that of eavesdropper, was hardly an excusable one, and I was about to turn away when I caught sight of the dusky creature, who was even more of an eavesdropper than I was myself. Indeed, in her dark looks I saw danger for the lovers. I remained, thinking it possible that I might need to ward them off.

Besides, it is my sense of duty that I must state I saw a girl who had been seduced by a young man, and who was now waiting for him to come back and marry her.

Then came the party of Americans to visit the canal. Possibly the young engineer is directed by his superior to show them the section on which he is engaged, to explain to them the processes involved. They may be persons or some among them may be persons having influence at Washington. The hearts of this girl of the party and this young man, who are thrown together by fate on the great waterway forming to girdle the world, spring for each other like the positive and negative poles of a magnet. Or it may be she has a passion for bringing a man to her feet, like the huntsman for sport. Let us hope the first supposition is correct.

She draws him with her to Colon—to see her dear art. Once there, she wishes to try her power over him still further. It may be that she has wealth, and that his work as engineer on the canal is less to her than her desire to have him with her. But this is all supposition. The only feature evident is that she is trying to make him gratified.

In some way the dark girl—the "heavy woman" of the play, as the critical persons would call her—has got wind of his infatuation. She follows a distance. What for? Who knows? Does she know herself? Perhaps not. Nevertheless I can see danger to her fair rival in that fierce black eye. The dialogue below me continued:

"Are you going?" she asked.

There was no reply. I knew she was drawing him with her eyes, and I believed she would win.

"Once more, are you going?" she asked again.

"Yes. I'll go with you if you take."

I heard no more, for they passed on of hearing toward the gangway. They were the last passengers to come aboard. The gangway was hauled in and the engine was slowly started.

The girl in whom I was interested came up and stood on deck near me. She was waving to some one on the pier. I saw the dark girl run to the edge of the dock and draw a knife from her bosom. Taking a deliberate aim at her rival, she threw it. Before the knife had time to reach the girl on deck I caught her by the arm and whirled her away. The knife passed within a few feet of her breast.

She looked at me, indignant. She did not know that I had probably saved her life—had certainly saved her from a wound. I did not enlighten her.

"Pardon me," I said; "I made a mistake."

But I told the engineer the true story.

A Mother's Scare

By EDITH V. ROSS

Mrs. Jaeger was not an educated woman; but, her husband having many years before started in the soap making business and built up a large manufactory, the family were wealthy. Two children came to the Jaegers, a boy and a girl. Their parents gave them an excellent education, and they were both very fond of reading. There was a library in the place where they lived from which they constantly drew books. Tom Jaeger read a great many works of fiction that have long ago passed out of date and are only now read by those who value them chiefly for the pictures they give of a former time. His sister, Ruth, was more modern in her taste.

Mrs. Jaeger was an ambitious woman and desirous that both her children should marry well. That meant that she proposed to watch them to make sure that they made no unfortunate engagements. One day there was a ring at the telephone and Mr. Jaeger answered the call.

"Is Tom in?"

"Well, what is it?"

"Tell him Evelina's here."

Whoever was at the other end of the wire was evidently in a hurry, for the receiver was dropped, and Mrs. Jaeger was cut off from further inquiry.

"Who was Evelina?" Mrs. Jaeger was at once seized with a sudden terror. She had never heard her son speak of her, and this call for him to come and meet her boded trouble. She said nothing to him about the call—not she. If the young woman were bold enough to telephone to the house for him she could not help it, but unless he should reply to the call himself it would avail nothing. Nor would Mrs. Jaeger say anything about the matter if he were getting entangled with a girl she would not let him know that his secret was hers. Nothing would feed the flame of love so much as opposition.

But what was her consternation when a few days later there came another ring at the telephone, and Ruth was called for.

"What is it?" asked the mother.

"David Copperfield has just come in."

There was the same click that had followed the announcement that Evelina was waiting for Tom, indicating the same hurry. Was it hurry? Did not this go-between shut off the phone that there might be no opportunity for the person relaying the message to ask questions? David Copperfield? Never had she heard her daughter mention any such person, and Ruth talked of all her friends freely. If the fond mother feared for her son she was in terror for her daughter. But Mrs. Jaeger treated the matter with the same caution she had practiced in the case of her son. She would set a watch on Ruth, but would not put her on her guard by telling her that she had stumbled upon this secret affair.

Mrs. Jaeger did not consider it practicable to shadow her son, but she had a maid whom she bribed to watch her daughter. Never did Ruth go out but this young woman found some errand to take her out also. One afternoon she came in from shadowing the young lady and reported that she had seen Ruth go up the steps of the library at the same time with a young man whom she appeared to be much pleased to meet.

"Aha!" said Mrs. Jaeger. "It's the library where they meet. And they have been bounding me for a subscription to my books. Them cozy alcoves are just the places for young people to meet and flirt."

Mrs. Jaeger was called up again, and her son was required for "This time it was 'Evelina.' I would like to see him about Evelina. There's another man waiting."

Some time later the speaker butted in that the sentence was not finished. But Mrs. Jaeger had heard enough. Her son and daughter were together, and she would be saved a divorce.

The good lady's patience was fast running to waste. She was a woman, and able longer to keep her secret and a secret from her son and daughter. Despite her watchfulness she could get no further information, or rather of those clandestine affairs. One afternoon her son and her daughter were talking together in the library.

"I'm through with David Copperfield," said Ruth.

"And I'm through with Evelina." She was due at the library a week ago.

"I'm glad you two have got through with your beloveds. I've been worried to death about you. I've known all about these meetings at the library. First I got a telephone message that Evelina was waiting for Tom there, and the next message was that this Mr. Copperfield was waiting for Ruth at the same place. Who are these persons anyway? I've never heard nothing about them before."

Tom and Ruth looked at each other and would have burst into a laugh had the speaker not been their own mother. As it was Tom said:

"Mother, 'Evelina' is a novel written by a young girl about a hundred years ago. 'David Copperfield' is the name of one of Charles Dickens' books. The librarian, Sue Young, whenever a book we want is out holds it for us when it comes in and notifies us over the telephone."

"Well, I am mightily relieved," replied the fond mother.

THE EASTERN SHORE

The Advantages and Disadvantages of Somerset County

BY H. D. YATES

If the people of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, could only acquire the habit of the Western booster, instead of the pessimistic knacker that he is, this section would soon be destined to be one of the greatest in the United States, for soils, climate, markets and shipping facilities permit it.

There is no section in this Union other than Somerset county, Maryland, that permits the farmer to raise whatever fancy dictates. In the more Western States he raises whatever freight rates and soils permit; still with his handicap he is a boomer, and land values have soared so high that prices are prohibitive, and it has become necessary that the younger generation move to some section where values are not so high, and where they can at least live.

In a great measure it is up to the people of Maryland whether they get this new blood and energy or lose it to some other State. Every man that settles here means an improvement to this country and gradual increased land values. We cannot expect to get all good people, but we can get a very large percent, for the reason that this section is not being advertised by large land companies, and railroads are doing all in their power to direct immigration to the Western States that the long freight haul may be enjoyed. We are insured a continued strictly American population from this section. Under present conditions the people that we expect to get are American born farmers from the States of Illinois, Indiana, California, Iowa, Pennsylvania and others, and are generally conceded to be thrifty.

There need be no fear of over population, for on this whole Peninsula we only have three quarters of a million people, while if it were in Japan we would have twelve million. An increased population surely means that the thousands of acres of lands on the Eastern Shore that are today practically on vacation would be growing crops to feed the hungry millions that we are in touch with.

If the people of this section would just take an hour of their time otherwise spent, and sum up the prosperity that this section would enjoy under conditions before stated, I believe that they would be on the road to "boomers." If we real estate people, with the opposition that we have, can increase this farm population to fifty good farmers yearly, who must contribute to the cash surplus of the country, (for every one that comes here brings with him from $2,000 to $30,000) we have done something within a period of five years. An improvement of the country in general has surely taken place, and land values have surely increased, but let the real estate agents of this section stop operations, and see what would happen. Lands would surely depreciate in value, not for reason that they have less value as a means of production for the various farm products, but from the fact that there is no demand for them. The local transfer of property here amounts to almost nothing; then why be knockers? Things have come to a deplorable condition where the real estate men of this section are forced to house and almost sleep with their prospective buyers that they may not come in contact with people on the street. There are a great many strong minded men who see for themselves, and there are a great many that drink in everything that is said to them and go away taking their money to some other section. Is there any reason for such conditions? Is it not a detriment to the stranger? And is it not a fact that the people of this section harm themselves far more than they do the real estate dealer? For they have excluded from their midst one more family that would have added materially to the up building and prosperity of this one of the greatest sections of opportunities in the United States.

It is well for the people of this section to take an abstract of the actual conditions as they exist. I would like to ask how many people of this section are depending upon charity? How many inmates does our county house shelter? How numerous are requests for help to provide for the homeless made so by fire, tornado and floods? What is the actual suffering on the Eastern Shore, especially in Somerset county today? What is there that our soils will not grow in abundance in the hands of real husbandmen? Who is responsible for the non producing soils? Why are certain soils so much talked of as to quality while others are promptly condemned? I can answer by saying that through gross ignorance of the people. It would be well for every man to procure soil surveys from the State Department, and agricultural statistics from the Department of Agriculture of the United States.

The soil survey tells us that there is no land on the Eastern Shore, especially Somerset county but what will under proper management grow any crop in abundance. The Government reports inform us that we are growing as much corn per acre as Illinois and Ohio, and more than Iowa, and Indiana, that the price for the past ten years has been greatly in excess for the Eastern Shore; that we are producing four bushels more wheat than any of the States, with a greater price, that we are growing as much hay, and far more potatoes; that within a radius of 500 miles we touch 84 of the most important cities of the United States with a population within this circle of more than 35,000,000, or almost half of the population of the United States, 225 miles from the city of New York, nearer to it than two-thirds of the State of New York, short hauls, low freight rates and shipping facilities that are unique.

I have been told, and am being told every day, that this is not a grass or hay country, but I cannot drink down such information when I see it growing on every side of me, where it has been seeded and in many places voluntary. On our own farm we broke a pasture of some 20 acres that had been feeding 15 head of stock, and at times more than this number for the past 13 years. Kentucky blue grass, that greatest of all permanent pasture grasses, is growing in a wild state along all of our highways. This week I had the pleasure of visiting three farms that had every variety of crops growing on them.

Under the able management of Mr. Frank Jones and his sons I saw the finest wheat, oats, timothy, red and crimson clover that I ever saw grown in any State. On May the 5th, I photographed a crop of crimson clover that followed a crop of early potatoes and corn, on the farm of Charles Fifer. The potatoes netted Mr. Fifer more than $2,000.00 the corn weighed out 45 bushels of shelled corn, and the hay was estimated at 70 tons. The sales field pastured from the first day of January 40 hogs, six horses and eight cows up till the first day of May.

On a Virginia man's farm near Costen Station (recognized as the poorest section in Somerset county) I saw clover, timothy and crimson clover growing to profusion without the use of fertilizer. This farm was purchased six years ago for almost a song, and was a wilderness, but today presents an appearance of thrift and prosperity, and is a strong testimonial for poor neglected lands under proper attention. This gentleman keeps a strict account of ever thing sold from the farm, with cost of production charges against the sales, and I learned that on this 100 acres of land which is all tillable, he had net to him $1542.15 for 1912. This is an object lesson to the man with small means. The same capital invested other than in some of these cheap lands would not even furnish him with the real necessities of life, to say nothing of a surplus.

I know that the people of this section do not be-little it for the mere want of something to talk about, and that they do themselves a great injury, as well as the stranger unintentionally. If we can just get the "Western Boom" spirit, then we may soon expect Somerset county to be famous throughout the United States. We can do it honestly by giving actual and true conditions, for false statements are not necessary to cause land to move here.

Honesty should prevail in all of our dealings, and this means that the seller should co-operate with the real estate dealer, with true statements as to his farm that he wishes to sell. The real estate dealer gets the reputation of crookedness, through statements made by the owner of the property that has been sold. I have had the misfortune very lately of selling a tract of land that was said to contain 102 acres, when in reality there was much less. Land was shown by the owner that actually belonged to other people, and the result is now a law suit, and I get the blame, still I have no way of knowing how much land really belonged to this tract. My experience in this sale suggests precaution in future sales. Let us be honest workers for a near greater country with land values what they deserve to be.

ANTI-WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS SAY

"Women Do Not Want to Vote."

Should all men be disfranchised because some men "do not want to vote?" Or should all women remain unenfranchised because Anti-Woman Suffragists say they "do not want to vote?"

Women in equal suffrage states vote in the same proportion as men.

In 1895 the Opponents of Equal Suffrage in Massachusetts had an amendment passed providing for a straw vote to ascertain the wishes of the women. Knowing that straw votes do not count, the Suffragists did not urge the women to vote. In spite of this the women who did vote favored equal suffrage 25 to 1.

More and larger petitions have been sent to legislative bodies, asking for votes for women than any other single matter in the history of this country.

The Three Chauffeurs

"The Three Chauffeurs," a local talent entertainment, will be given in the Auditorium, Princess Anne, on Friday evening, June 13th, at 8.15 o'clock.

The scene represents a girls' house-party given by Mrs. Lorry Spencer. Mr. Spencer unable to read in peace goes on an auto tour. He returns during the evening in time for the garden party and meets two other chauffeurs on the scene, causing quite a misunderstanding. Things are eventually explained and Mr. Spencer bestows his blessing.

There are a number of beautiful drills and choruses by children and adults making a most delightful entertainment.

The proceeds are to go towards purchasing a permanent home for the Princess Anne Public Library.

Miss E. June Breimeir, of Selinsgrove, Pa., who superintended the preparation for the "Toy Shop" last year is training those who are to take part in this week's entertainment. Tickets may be obtained at B. H. Dougherty's store.

Death of W. Brice Coston

Mr. W. Brice Coston, a native of Somerset county and at one time a resident of Princess Anne, died at his home in Clarksburg, W. Va., last Wednesday, aged 45 years.

Mr. Coston was a son of the late Isaac J. and Rosa Humphreys Coston. His early life, after leaving Somerset, was spent in Philadelphia and New York and for fifteen years he was employed in the Government Printing Office at Washington. For the past six years he had resided in Clarksburg, where he was one of the organizers and manager of the Coston Printing Company. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. He became a Mason in Washington, where he held his membership and was also a member of the Chapter and Commandery at Clarksburg.

Mr. Coston leaves a widow, who was Miss Laura Tull, also a native of this county. He is also survived by two brothers, Samuel S. Coston, of Hampton, Va., and Isaac J. Coston, of Clarksburg, W. Va.

Funeral services were held in Pocomoke City last Friday and interment was in the Methodist Protestant Cemetery. The preliminary services were held at Clarksburg under the conduct of the Masonic order.

Reward For Capture of Negro

Around by the wave of crime which is sweeping over lower Delaware since an influx of Southern negroes into that section to pick berries, Governor Miller issued a proclamation Wednesday night offering a reward of $100 for the capture of George Dutton, who, after slaying Arnold Tennant, colored, near Bridgeville, Sunday afternoon, the 3rd, hid himself in an impenetrable forest and has defied the posse which is searching for him. Dutton originally came from the South and has recently been staying at Middletown.

THE "REHOBOTH CHURCH"

Prize Essay by Miss Nina Paxton of the Washington High School, Princess Anne

At a distance of about ten miles from the mouth of the Pocomoke river, in the village of Rehoboth, is a quaint and time honored structure, known as Old Rehoboth, and famous as the oldest Presbyterian Church in America.

This region, at the time of our first historical acquaintance with it, was inhabited by Indians. The first white men to explore it were a party under the command of Captain John Smith; and this place in later years was also the scene of a miniature naval battle between two of Governor Calvert's vessels and one of William Clayborne's.

After the settlement of Maryland upon the Western Shore of the Chesapeake Bay, in sixteen hundred and thirty-four, the first incident which affected the history of Rehoboth Church was the famous Religion Tolerance Act of sixteen hundred and forty-nine, which gave Maryland religion freedom, and made this part of America a refuge for the persecuted and oppressed of every nation.

After the passage of this bill the settlement then known as Pocomoke in southeastern Maryland grew rapidly. Colonel Stevens, a native of Buckinghamshire, England, patented a plantation there as his home and called it Rehoboth, taking the name from Genesis, twenty-sixth chapter and twenty-second verse: "And he removed from thence and digged another well, and for that they strove not; and he called the name of it Rehoboth; for he said, the Lord hath made room for us here, and we shall be fruitful in the land."

Colonel Stevens was a Presbyterian and was a man of wealth and prominence. The settlement soon became known as Rehoboth, the name of the Stevens plantation; and other Presbyterians together with Quakers and Dissenters came there.

These people had no church and had no minister for any length of time, until Colonel Stevens invited Rev. Francis Makemie, of Ireland, to Eastern Maryland. He came in sixteen hundred and eighty-two, and at once built a log church at Snow Hill. This church, soon after it was finished, was torn down and the logs thrown into the Pocomoke river.

Some of these logs lodged at Rehoboth and Makemie came there. He had the logs taken out of the river and with the aid of the settlers, built a log church in the village.

This church was built in sixteen hundred and eighty-two and stood in the same lot the present church stands in; for a few years ago some men who were leveling up the cemetery dug into what they supposed were bricks vaults, but found the bricks were the chimney to the log church.

The log church was not large enough for the congregation which gathered there every Sabbath to hear Makemie preach, but the people had no money to build a new church.

They all raised large crops of tobacco which they shipped to England, and in turn received money or supplies. These loyal hearted people decided to have bricks shipped to America when they sent their crops over, that they might build a new church. The plan was carried out and the church which stands at Rehoboth now was built from the bricks which the pioneers bought with their tobacco.

The land on which the church is built was given by Francis Makemie, and in his will he remembered the church that he loved so well, dedicating it to the "Presbyterians and none else forever."

Carpenters in the settlement hewed the pews, the communion tables and flooring from logs cut in the nearby forest. These are yet in the church and have never been remodeled.

The old fashioned hair cloth sofa that stands in the pulpit, and the two chairs to match were gifts from Francis Makemie's daughter, and were originally used in his own home. The communion set presented to the church by Presbyterians in England, is kept at the Presbyterian Church in Pocomoke, since it is thought to be safer there.

Rehoboth, though not a large church, grew and flourished for many years. It was the only one in the locality until an Episcopal Church was built in the village in seventeen hundred and thirty-five, and people came even from Philadelphia to worship at Rehoboth.

Makemie's death in seventeen hundred and eight was a blow to the church but one able minister after another followed him until eighteen hundred and twenty-two. About the time the village began to decay, Rev. Henry Batch, who was then pastor of Rehoboth died, and shortly after his death Mr. Batch's home was burned. In this fire not only Rehoboth, but every Presbyterian church in the land lost two priceless treasures—the portrait of Francis Makemie and the old Rehoboth session book.

The village had been decaying for several years and in eighteen hundred and thirty no trace remained of the county jail or the tavern. Boats had ceased to ply on the river, the large Episcopal Church was closed and the once flourishing place had a deserted appearance.

Rehoboth was badly in need of repair. In consequence, the high arched gallery was lowered and the narrow galleries in the ends of the church were boarded up and left in obscurity for awhile. Still the church was not comfortable in cold weather, and the worn-out wood-stoves often smoked at such a rate that the effect of the sermon was destroyed. The large congregation which had in

W. L. TILGHMAN KILLED

Struck by Engine While Crossing Railroad Track on Bicycle in Salisbury

The most shocking accident in Salisbury for years occurred last Wednesday morning at seven o'clock, when Mr. Wilmer L. Tilghman, thirty-four years old, former City Councilman and manufacturer of that town, met his death under the wheels of a railroad locomotive at the junction crossing.

After being struck by the train his body was terribly mangled and ground beneath the wheels.

Mr. Tilghman was proceeding to his factory, the C. R. Disharoon Company, and was endeavoring to get across the tracks on his bicycle ahead of a fast-moving locomotive, which, it appears, was executing a flying switch with some cars. Just as Mr. Tilghman reached the track bed he noticed the danger and endeavored to return back on his wheel, but the bicycle wheels caught between the crossing planks and steel rails, retarding his escape, and in this manner he was killed.

Mr. Tilghman was a native of Wilcomico county and was a son of George Tilghman, a prosperous farmer on the east side. He leaves a widow and two children, a little girl 8 years old and a boy 5 years old.

former days filled the church, was reduced to about fifty persons.

In the eighteen years that followed, the church became so weak that it was not even included in the preaching stations, and often for three or four months at a time no services were held there.

In eighteen hundred and fifty Rev. James Vallandigham began to preach at Rehoboth. The communicants had been reduced to eight while the entire congregation numbered between thirty and forty. This earnest preacher brought new life and energy to the discouraged people. Seven hundred dollars was raised with the help of two other churches; and with this money the pulpit was lowered and the galleries were reopened. The membership was more than doubled during Rev. Vallandigham's ministry and he left the church in a favorable condition for growth; but the approach of the Civil War proved a serious hindrance to its future.

The church had come to a stand-still when Rev. Joseph L. Polk came there in eighteen hundred and sixty-five. He and his successor, Rev. Dr. L. P. Bowen, did more than any others to restore Rehoboth to her former position but Dr. Bowen's ministry was too short to have a lasting effect on the church.

The frequent changes, with vacant intervals, still further reduced the congregation; and now came the darkest days. Rehoboth has ever known. The sleepers beneath the church had rotted away, the floor was sinking, the doors and windows let in cold draughts and torrents of cold air poured in from the galleries. The church was without a pastor and had it not been for Elder E. G. Polk, Presbytery would have abandoned the field.

He went before the meetings so often and begged so persistently for the cause of his church that he was called "That man from Rehoboth." Finally the Synod of Baltimore gave him six hundred dollars toward repairing the church. The congregation being awakened to new interest added seven hundred to this and the work of repairing the building was begun.

The interior of the church was modernized, making it thoroughly comfortable. The galleries were removed, the ceiling lowered, and a vestibule was set off. The windows were made memorials to departed officers and members.

The grove of trees surrounding the church was trimmed and the cemetery leveled and divided into lots.

Rehoboth Church was then rededicated to the service of God in an all day meeting, held June first, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight. On this day in a graceful and elaborate manner, Dr. Conway unveiled a memorial tablet to Francis E. Makemie, set in the wall above the pulpit. This is the only one erected to Makemie and reads as follows:

To FRANCIS MAKEMIE
Father of the American Presbyterian Church
Rehoboth
His First and Favorite Child
Founded A. D. 1683

These Sacred Grounds Were Given by Him
He Said:
"Everything Should tend Heavenward"

From that time Rehoboth has steadily improved. The twenty-fifth anniversary was celebrated in October of eighteen hundred and ninety-six.

In nineteen hundred and twelve the church was slightly remodeled. The walls were neatly frescoed and a new carpet was laid. Again it was rededicated by an all day service.

The congregation now averages about two hundred persons though the church cannot yet support a pastor without the help of the Presbytery.

Rehoboth Church stands today the Mother of Presbyterianism in America, and a suitable monument to the memory of Rev. Francis E. Makemie and all others who in those wild days labored so faithfully, and dared so much for the sake of the religion they loved, and the religious belief which it placed, under the fostering care of heaven, has spread and invigorated. It has acquired stability by oppression, and gathered importance from the efforts made to crush it.

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICES

Both the Presbyterian and Methodist Sunday-Schools Gave Interesting Programs

Children's Day Services were held in the Manokin Presbyterian Church last Sunday morning and in Antioch Methodist Episcopal Church at night. The services at both churches were largely attended and interesting and appropriate programs were rendered at each service. The program at the Presbyterian Church was as follows:

Hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers," by the Sunday School; the Commandments, by the Sunday School; invocation, Rev. W. F. Freund; the Lord's Prayer, by the congregation; hymn, "I Love to Tell the Story," by the Primary Department; the Apostles' Creed, by the Sunday School; hymn, "Praise the Lord, ye heavens adore Him," by the congregation; scripture recitation, by the Sunday School; solo, "Hushed Was the Evening Hymn," Miss Elizabeth Beauchamp; scripture recitation, by the Primary Department; hymn, "Saviour Like a Shepherd Lead Us," by the congregation; prayer, Rev. W. F. Freund; organ, "Gloria," hymn, "We Have Heard the Joyful Sound," by Sunday School; address, Rev. W. F. Freund; hymn, "We praise Thee O God for the Son of Thy Love," by the Sunday School; benediction, Rev. W. F. Freund; the doxology, by the congregation.

At the Methodist Church, which was crowded to overflowing, the official program entitled "The Children's Hour," was carried out. The singing by the choir and school was of a high order and the recitations by the little folks were very entertaining.

Wier—Miles Wedding

The marriage of Miss Nesta Louise Miles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Lee Miles, and Mr. Charles Henry Wier, Jr., took place last Wednesday evening at Memorial Protestant Episcopal Church, and was followed by a small reception at the home of the bride, on West Lanvale street, Baltimore. The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. Dr. William M. Dame. The bride entered with her father, by whom she was given in marriage, and was met by the groom, attended by his best man, Mr. George Wier. She wore a gown of white tulle, and a tulle veil, trimmed with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Lillian May Hooper was maid of honor, and wore a pale pink crepe de chine gown, with a pink tulle hat, and carried pink Killarney roses. The bridesmaids—Miss Eleanor Bosley, Miss Louise Hooper, Miss Margaret Waters and Miss Marie Warner—all wore white French organdie gowns and leghorn hats with pink roses. Miss Lucretia Wier, a niece of the groom, was flower girl, and she wore a dainty white frock and carried a basket of pink sweet peas. The ushers were Mr. Alonzo Lee Miles, Jr., Mr. Hooper Steele Miles, Mr. William H. Conkling, Jr., Dr. Clyde V. Matthews, Mr. William H. Price, Jr., and Mr. J. Dukehart Chesney, of Waterbury, Ct.

Mr. and Mrs. Wier left later for a trip, and on their return will spend the summer at Hawthornden, the country home of Mr. Wier's mother, on the Joppa road. A large number of handsome presents were received, including services of silver, cut glass and mahogany furniture.

Fire at Long Island City

A fire which did damage of more than a million dollars started in Long Island City shortly after 9 o'clock Sunday morning.

The flames were first discovered in the three-story building of the Columbia Paper and Bag Company, and in a short while the building was in ruins. The adjoining structure caught fire, and before it was consumed the flames had spread to the Pratt & Lambert Varnish Company building, filled with inflammable material. The Blanchard warehouse also went up in flames.

Traffic on the lines of the Long Island Railroad entering and leaving Long Island City was delayed for hours by the fire.

The Associated Advertising Clubs of America are holding their ninth annual convention in Baltimore at the Fifth Regiment Armory from June 8th to the 13th. Special sermons were preached in thirty of the Baltimore churches last Sunday by leading men in the advertising business. During the business hours of every day business matters of very great interest are discussed in open meeting. During the evenings there are entertainments.

EPISCOPAL CONVENTION

Diocese Creates a New Parish and Much Important Business Disposed Off

The forty-fifth annual convention of the diocese of Easton, which assembled in St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal Church at Princess Anne on Tuesday, with Bishop William Forbes Adams, of Easton, presiding, closed its session on Wednesday evening. The annual address of the Bishop was of appealing force and dealt with every phase of the religious activity of the year. By resolution it was ordered that it be read in every church in the diocese.

Much important business was disposed of by the convention—a new parish was created, to be called Susquehanna parish, in Cecil county, lay representation on the standing committee of the diocese, the election of clerical and lay delegates to the general convention in New York this fall and passing the accounts of the convention treasurers. The new parish is part of the North Elk parish, in Cecil county, and embraces the towns of Perryville, Aiken, Frenchtown and all that portion of the original parish east of Principio Furnace to the Susquehanna River, and from the Bay to the Pennsylvania line.

The following delegates to the general convention, which meets in New York City in October, were elected: Clerical—Revs. David Howard, J. Gibson Gantt, S. S. Hepburn, and W. Y. Beaven, and Dr. Clinton H. Weaver as alternate. Lay—Judge H. L. D. Standford, Col. W. Hopper Gibson, Edward S. Valliant and William A. Cooper. Col. Henry Hollyday and Charles F. Griffith were elected alternate lay delegates.

The new standing committee, which gives representation for the first time to the laity, is as follows: Revs. George C. Sutton, of Oxford; David Howard, Salisbury; Henry Davies, Easton, and ex-Judge James Alfred Pearce, Chestertown; Judge William H. Adkins, Easton, and Edwin Dashiell, Cambridge.

Mr. S. E. Shannahan of Easton, was elected secretary of the diocese and Rev. J. F. Kirk, of St. Michaels, assistant secretary; Judge William H. Adkins was elected treasurer of the convention and treasurer of the trust funds of the diocese, and Col. Henry Hollyday treasurer of the diocesan mission fund. Mr. Edward B. Hardcastle, treasurer of the clergy relief fund, and Mr. L. W. Trail, treasurer of the Episcopal fund, were also elected. Rev. Dr. Henry Davies, of Easton, was elected registrar of the diocese.

By a rising vote a resolution of regret was passed by the convention at the retirement of Rev. Edward R. Rich, for seventeen years secretary of the diocese.

The convention will meet in Chestertown next year.

$425 For R. E. Lee Letter

The original copy of General Robert E. Lee's farewell to his army after surrendering to General Grant at Appomattox, in April, 1865, was sold for $425 last week at the sale of the collection of autographs and manuscripts of the late John Mills Hale, of Phillipsburg, Pa., conducted by Stanley V. Henkles. The letter which was designated as "General Order No. 9," was written by an orderly and signed by Lee. It was in splendid condition and was eagerly contested for by collectors and dealers from all parts of the country. The name of the purchaser was not divulged.

Another letter by Lee, written from the headquarters of his army at Valley Mountain, Va., on August 12, 1861, to General S. Cooper, relative to the exchange of prisoners was sold for $36. This letter was purchased for one of the large public collections of New York. A characteristic letter by General "Stonewall" Jackson was sold for $65.

James Mills Dead

Mr. James Mills, one of Somerset's oldest and most highly respected citizens, died at the General and Marine Hospital, Crisfield, Monday evening of last week, at the advanced age of 85 years. Death was due to general debility. Mr. Mills was well-known in Princess Anne, where he conducted a shoe shop several years ago.

Mr. Mills was taken ill while on a visit to relatives in Delmar and was taken to Crisfield on Monday where he died that night. He is survived by two children; Messrs. B. S. Mills, of Crisfield, and J. E. Mills, of Salisbury.

Funeral services were held at Mt. Pleasant Church, conducted by Rev. F. T. Benson, on Wednesday morning and interment was made in the Crisfield cemetery.

DR. SLEMONS CALLED WEST

To Direct Important Clinic in California University

It was announced last week that Dr. J. Morris Slemons, associate professor of obstetrics of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, will leave that institution on July 15th to become director of the new Woman's Clinic and professor of gynecology at the University of California, at San Francisco. Dr. Slemons will assume his duties at the California institution on August 15th. During the intervening time he will familiarize himself with the system of the clinic.

Dr. A. H. Morse, resident surgeon at the Union Protestant Infirmary, will leave to take the position as Dr. Slemons' assistant. Dr. Karl M. Wilson, of Montreal, will succeed Dr. Slemons at Hopkins. Dr. Slemons phenomenal success in obstetrics and gynecological operations at the Hopkins has been noted with deep interest throughout the United States. He had already received numerous offers from women's hospitals in the North, but had not accepted. It was his belief that the scope of work to be carried on in California would enable him to widen his studies in that field.

Dr. Slemons is a native of Salisbury, and a graduate of the Johns Hopkins University, having received the degree of A. B. in 1897 and his M. D. in 1901. He married Miss Anne Goodsell, of Minnesota, about eight years ago and lives at 23 Chase street, Baltimore. His duties at the California institution will deny him the privilege of having a private practice.

The new Woman's Clinic was provided by John Keath, a wealthy resident of California. The clinic is the third of its kind in the United States, one existing in New York and the other in Pittsburgh. Dr. Wilson, who will succeed Dr. Slemons in Baltimore, was for three years a member of the medical staff of the hospital, and left last September to accept a position in the Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal. He is a graduate of the Johns Hopkins University.

Truitt-Price Fight in Worcester

John H. Truitt, Republican, recently appointed election supervisor of Worcester county by Governor Goldsborough to fill the vacancy caused by the acceptance by J. Samuel Price, a Democrat, of the office of town councilman for Snow Hill, has retained Mr. Charles O. Melvin as his counsel. Mr. Melvin will at once proceed to see that the rights of Mr. Truitt are protected in the court, both at Snow Hill and in the Court of Appeals, if necessary.

The Declaration of Rights of Maryland says: "No person shall hold at the same time more than one office of profit created by the Constitution and laws of this state." Mr. Price was holding the office of election supervisor and received a salary and he afterward filled the office of town councilman of Snow Hill and received a salary. The Governor was advised by the Attorney General that when Mr. Price accepted the office of town councilman of Snow Hill he vacated the office of election supervisor of Worcester county, thus creating a vacancy in that office, whereupon the Governor appointed Mr. Truitt to fill the vacancy. Mr. Price then procured an injunction from the Circuit Court for Worcester county restraining Oliver D. Collins, clerk of the court, from administering the oath to Mr. Truitt, and also restraining Mr. Truitt from taking the oath.

72 Normal School Graduates

Seventy-two young ladies, graduated from the Maryland Normal School, and received teachers' diplomas Thursday night at the institution. It was one of the largest graduating classes in the school's history. The exercises, held in the main hall, included singing and orchestral music. The feature of the commencement was the address by Dr. Charles Henry Keyes, president of the Skidmore School of Arts, Saratoga Springs, N. Y. Among the interested auditors who occupied seats on the stage were members of the State Board of Education and of the Building Commission.

The graduates from Somerset county were Misses Athol Lynde Byrd and Ethel Henrietta Coulbourn, of Crisfield.

His Father's Ghost

By EDITH V. ROSS

Albert Tweed and Henry Ashurst, two chums eighteen years old, made an agreement that whichever died first would appear to the other. Later they separated.

Twenty years passed. Tweed, who was a steady chap, remained in the place where he was born. Ashurst went to Australia. From there he wrote several letters to his friend, after which the correspondence ceased. From that time forward Tweed heard nothing of his friend. He did not believe that Ashurst was dead, for if he would have appeared to him, for Tweed was full of the idea that the dead may come back to us. This belief was owing to his disposition, which was easily influenced by tales of such wonders.

When Tweed was forty-three years old he had a wife and three children, the oldest a girl of nineteen. Her father had told her of this agreement of his youth, and she was at an age to be interested in it. Now and again she would ask her father if he had seen the ghost of his friend.

One spring he was called away from home. When he returned, though it was no later than April, the weather was very warm, as sometimes happens in that month. He was fond of sleeping out of doors and considered it exceedingly healthy. His house stood in the center of a large yard, and his front porch made excellent sleeping quarters. Bringing some blankets, he placed them on a hanging bed and turned in.

In the middle of the night he was awakened by a sound. There was nothing to obstruct his view of the lawn before the house, and the moon being at the full and on the meridian, he could see all about him as plain as day. The figure of a man was coming up the walk, but with a tread that was absolutely silent. One thing he noticed immediately—that the walk of this approaching person was that of his friend Ashurst. The figure came up to the steps and looked up to the heavens. This threw the light of the moon full on his face, and Tweed recognized Ashurst just as he had seen his friend last, a quarter of a century before. If he had grown older there was not sufficient change to be noticeable. The only difference in his appearance from that remembered by Tweed was that his face was livid.

Having gazed a few moments at the heavens, the figure came up the steps with the same silent tread and on reaching the porch turned toward Tweed and had taken one step when he seemed to the latter to be suddenly enveloped in a glare of white light. Tweed, who was sitting up watching the apparition, gave a moan and fell back unconscious.

That moan made a sudden change in the situation. Ethel Tweed ran out of the house and, throwing her arms about her father, endeavored to bring him back to consciousness. "Father," she cried, "it isn't a ghost at all! Do speak to me!"

The ghost advanced to assist her, but she motioned him away, and he went into the house. Tweed opened his eyes and, seeing his daughter, gave a shudder, closed his eyes, opened them again and gasped:

"Harry's dead! He's been here!"

"No, father; he hasn't. It's a mistake."

An electric light in the roof of the porch was gleaming in the father's eyes. He asked who turned it on.

"I did," said his daughter, and, sitting beside him on the swinging bed, she told him that while he was away his friend's son had appeared with a note of introduction. Young Ashurst and Ethel had talked of their fathers' friendship and of the agreement that had been made years before. Being young and thoughtless, Ethel proposed that they should play a prank upon her father. The young man, who was a few years her senior, objected, but finally consented. Taking advantage of Tweed's sleeping on the porch, he had chalked his face, walked across the lawn in the moonlight, turned up the steps. As soon as he stood on the porch Ethel, from within, turned on the electric light directly above him. Tweed had by this time become so convinced that he saw his friend's ghost that he failed to notice that the figure was illumined by the lamp.

The next day young Ashurst called upon his father's friend, who, had not his own daughter been implicated in the prank played, might not have received him as kindly as he did. The young man presented a sealed letter from his father. Tweed read it, but made no comment. He invited Ashurst to make him a visit, which was prolonged indefinitely. He said that his father had married in Australia, but had gone from there to England and after a short stay had taken his family to South America, where he had become a coffee planter in the interior of Brazil. When his son concluded to go north to study a profession he had urged the boy to see his old friend.

In time young Ashurst asked Tweed for his daughter, saying that he hoped for his own father's consent to the match.

"No fear of that," replied Tweed. He asked for my daughter for you in the sealed letter he sent. But he said nothing about the prank you played on me and, I take it, had no hand in it. Had you not been your father's image when he was your age you could not have imposed upon me as his ghost."

ATLANTIC LINERS' WIRELESS.

The First Messages Are Sent Just Five Minutes After Sailing.

The first regular wireless message is sent out as the steamer slowly backs from her pier. It is timed just five minutes after sailing. The sharp crack of the sending apparatus is usually drowned by the roar of the whistle calling for a clear passage in mid-stream. All transatlantic steamers send to the wireless station at Sea Gate, while the coastwise steamers call up the station on top of one of the skyscrapers on lower Broadway.

This is merely a formal message, but no wireless log would be complete without it, writes Francis Arnold Collins in St. Nicholas. This first message is known as the "T. R." No one seems to know just why. The wireless station replies as briefly as possible, and the wireless operator shuts off.

Business soon picks up. Before the passengers are through waving farewells some one has usually remembered a forgotten errand ashore or decided to send a wireless telegram in the words, and visitors begin to look up the wireless station. It is usually a detached house on the uppermost or sun deck, just large enough for the mysterious looking apparatus and a bank of two. Before the voyage is over most of the passengers will have become familiar with the station, for it is after all about the most interesting piece aboard.

If no messages are filed for sending the operator picks up the shore station and clicks off the name of his ship—as, for instance, "Atlantis—nil here," meaning "nothing here." Should the operator have any messages to file he will add the number—for example, "Atlantis 3." The receiving station picks this up and replies quickly. If it has no message to send it will reply, "O. K. Nil here." Should there be any messages to deliver it will reply, "O. K. G." (Go ahead.)

All the way down the harbor the great ship is in constant communication, sending and receiving belated questions and answers. The passengers, who have been calling their farewells from the ship's side as the waters widen, are merely continuing their conversations with the shores now rapidly slipping past. Your message meanwhile will be delivered almost anywhere in the United States within an hour and in nearby cities in much less time.

Lending a Couple of Miles.

"Three to Albany," said a club car passenger as he handed over a mileage book to the conductor and pointed to his two companions. The conductor ran his eye down the long strip and then turned about with the query:

"Who will give this man two miles?"

Half a dozen books were presented immediately, and the conductor tore off two miles from one of them while the man who had been short expressed his thanks.

"Yes, it's a kind of treating frequently practiced," said the conductor afterward. "It's the same as with a postage stamp. When you need the extra mile or two you need it bad, but there are few passengers who will accept the proffer of payment on the part of the man whose book has run out."—New York Sun.

The Lion of Janina.

About a century ago London was threatened with a grisly show from Janina. The fame of Ali Pasha was considerable in England, enhanced by Byron's stanzas in "Childe Harold." So when the great Albanian had at last been murdered and his head was exhibited to the public at Constantinople on a dish a merchant of that city thought the head and dish would be a paying sight in London. We need not regret that a former confidential agent of Ali offered the executioner a higher price than the merchant had obtained the head, with those of Ali's three sons and grandsons. He deposited them near one of the city gates with a tombstone and inscription.—London Spectator.

Something Awful.

STRENUOUS LOVEMAKING.

Duke William Tamed Matilda, and She Got Square on Brihtric.

A modern lover who resorted to brute force to win his lady would soon find himself in the street, if not in the police station. But fashions in proposals have changed in a thousand years, and when William the Conqueror set out to make Matilda, daughter of the Count of Flanders, the happiest of maidens he adopted measures that were forcible, to say the least. The New York Sun tells the story of his tempestuous wooing.

The suitor Matilda had she did not want, and the man she wished to woo her she could not get. The man she did not want happened to be William, duke of Normandy, and he decided to go to Bruges and conquer Matilda.

There were no national roads through France in those days, and William doubtless had a hard trip. Perhaps Matilda noticed the mud on his clothes when she came out of church and found him waiting for her.

At any rate, William descended from his horse, and taking Matilda firmly by the back of the neck, rolled her over and over in the mire of Bruges, planting well directed blows upon her royal face and body with his other hand. Life was elemental a thousand years ago.

This strenuous lovemaking somehow appealed to Matilda. Perhaps it was what she would have liked to do to Brihtric, the gentleman she could not get, who was only the English ambassador at her father's court and not at all a proper person to be snubbing a princess. So Matilda sent word to her father that, "sick in health and dolorous in body," she had firmly resolved to marry no man but Duke William.

Later, after William had conquered England, he offered his queen the estates of any English nobleman she might name. Matilda did not have to think twice. She not only chose Brihtric's estates, but she put him in prison and kept him there all the rest of his life—an excellent argument for the wise custom of restricting woman's choice to one year in four.

In the matter of the tax sale of real estate in Dublin Election District of Somerset county, assessed to the Valley Realty Company, made and reported by Robert F. Maddox, County Treasurer for Somerset county for the year 1910. Milton L. Vessey, purchaser, ex parte.

No. 2820, Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity.

Whereas a certain Robert F. Maddox, County Treasurer for Somerset county, in the State of Maryland, for the year 1910, has reported to the Circuit Court for Somerset County, a sale made by him to Milton L. Vessey, of all that lot or parcel of land in Dublin Election District, of said county, in the State of Maryland, containing 5 acres, more or less, with the improvements thereon, situated on the county road, known as the Scott Mill Lot, adjoining the land of S. A. Riley, it being the same land which is reserved in the deed to said S. A. Riley from the Valley Realty Company, dated the 31st day of December, 1910, and recorded among the land records of Somerset county in Liber S. F. D., No. 55, folio 483, etc., and assessed to the Valley Realty Company, on the assessment books of said Election District for said year 1910, and sold for the payment of taxes due and in arrears together with all the proceedings had in relation thereto; and whereas upon examination it appears to the said Court that the said proceedings are regular and that the provisions of the law in relation thereto have been complied with.

Now it is therefore ordered, by the Circuit Court for Somerset county, in Equity, this 21st day of May, 1913, that notice be given by the publication of this order once a week for three successive weeks in the MARYLANDER AND HERALD, a weekly newspaper published in Somerset county, before the 18th day of June, 1913, warning all persons interested in the said real estate to be and appear in this Court on or before the 21st day of June, 1913, to show cause, if any they have, why said sale should not be ratified and confirmed.

The report states the amount of sales to be $240.00.

Lula Beauchamp, by Charles Barry, her next friend, vs. Florence A. Beauchamp, et al.

No. 2819, Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain real estate, owned, as tenants in common, by said Lula Beauchamp, Sr., late of Somerset county, deceased.

The bill states that on the 15th day of November, 1883, a certain Beulah Beauchamp and wife conveyed to said John Wesley Beauchamp, Sr., a certain farm, known as "The George L. Hickman Farm," situate in said Somerset county, for and during the period of the said Beauchamp's natural life, and after his death to such child or children, or descendant or descendants of such child or children to take per stirpes non per capita, as he the said Beauchamp, might leave surviving him at the time of his death; that the said John Wesley Beauchamp, Sr., departed this life about seven years ago, leaving surviving him the following named children: Florence A. Beauchamp, who married Robt. T. Beauchamp; Bessie Butler, who married Frank Butler; Emma Shell, who married Adolph Shell; Isaac Beauchamp, Lewis J. Beauchamp and John Wesley Beauchamp, Jr.; that the said John Wesley Beauchamp, Jr., has since died, intestate, leaving no widow, and leaving as his sole heir at law, an infant daughter, Lula Beauchamp; that all of the said descendants of the said John Wesley Beauchamp, Sr., are of full age, except said daughter Bessie Butler and the said Lula Beauchamp, and all reside in said Somerset county, except Emma Shell and Adolph Shell, her husband, who are non-residents of this State, but residents of the State of California; that the said real estate is not susceptible of partition, without material loss and injury to the parties entitled to interest therein, as above stated, and that it is necessary that said land should be sold and the proceeds divided among the said parties, according to their interests therein.

It is thereupon this 17th day of May, 1913, ordered by the clerk of the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in Somerset county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 17th day of June next, give notice to the said non-resident defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of July, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Dead Sea Stillness.

The Dead Sea is a vast lake about nine hours' ride from Jerusalem. The waters of the lake, save for an almost imperceptible ripple, are quite still and tolerably transparent, but salt and "bitter beyond bitterness" and so buoyant that one can float upon them like a cork, and to swim it is only necessary to move the hands. The surrounding scenery is dreary in the extreme and in parts singularly grand. But the stillness is oppressive and depressing, for there is no sound of animal life or song of bird ever heard on the lonely shores of the famous lake.

Shelley and the Kiss.

The supreme laureate of the kiss is Shelley. The word is seldom absent from his shorter lyrics. Here is one stanza laden with kisses:

See the mountains kiss high heaven
And the waves clap one another—
No sister flower would be forgiven
If it disdained its brother.
And the sunlight clasps the earth,
And the moonbeam kisses the sea;
What are all those kissings worth
If thou kiss not me?

THE DEVIL'S ROOF.

Treacherous Snow That Conceals a Crevasse in the Antarctic.

"Visitors to Switzerland alone can appreciate the dangers of crevasses in the ice sheets. But in the antarctic they are more numerous and attain far greater dimensions than in Switzerland," said L. C. Bernacchi, the explorer, to a London Chronicle reporter. "They lie hidden under the snow, and very often the explorer does not know that he is on a crevasse until he has traveled some yards, and then he hears a hollow sound. He will then wonder whether to go on or turn back, but experience has taught that the greater danger may be incurred by turning back."

"Crevasses are peculiar to the ice sheets over land. They are nonexistent at the north pole because there the ice is a frozen ocean. All antarctic expeditions have had to negotiate the difficulties of crevasses, and sometimes their existence has compelled the explorer to make a detour of many miles."

"Where land juts out into the sea, or, to be more precise, into an ice-sheet in the antarctic, several crevasses will be found radiating from this point. Some have been known to be fifty yards wide and 2,000 feet deep. Instances are also found where a sledge has sunk halfway through the ice roof and has been rescued with the greatest difficulty. In these cases the explorers were luckily roped to the sledge, but they had the uncomfortable experience of being suspended over a deep chasm."

Captain Amundsen calls the treacherous snow which conceals a crevasse "the devil's roof," while both the late Captain Scott and Sir Ernest Shackleton have described it exhaustively.

HITTING THE HYPHEN.

One Would Hardly Think the Little Mark Was So Important.

There is enough energy wasted in placing the hyphen in "to-day," "to-night" and "to-morrow" every week day to haul a passenger train around the world. It is claimed there are 200,000,000 English writing people and that they average to hyphenate these words three times a day. Some may not average to do this more than three times a week and a few perhaps not three times a month; others write these words and place the hyphens in them scores of times each day, especially newspaper men, typewriters, authors, business men, school children and the like.

The acquiring of sufficient power from making these hyphens each day to propel a passenger train around the world is figured on the basis that it takes half an ounce of energy to make the stroke either with pen or pencil and more for a typewriter that represents the hyphen, and this would total 2,190,000 pounds of energy, or sufficient for the train.

It takes an ounce of energy to make the hyphen on a typewriting machine, and three to make it on a typesetting machine, and the statistician has figured that typewriting and typesetting machines alone take up sufficient energy each day to propel a battleship from New York to the Panama canal.

All these figures were compiled as an argument against using the hyphen in these words. Many people do not, but the majority do. Those who are working toward greater efficiency in everything claim that the hyphen in these words is not at all necessary and should be discontinued by every one, saving a great deal of valuable time and energy.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Mending Eggs.

The following is taken from Farm and Fireside:

"During the hatching season last spring I had placed a 'sitting' of five eggs. A few days before the chicks were due two eggs were accidentally cracked and began to bleed, showing that the chicks were fully developed and alive. I took the eggs from the nest very carefully, melted a little paraffin, and when it was slightly cool I poured it over the broken places of the eggshells, being careful not to cover any more surface than was necessary. Both the eggs produced fine, healthy chicks that were raised to maturity."

The Name He Got.

In some cases abbreviating a name improves it. In others it doesn't. For instance, the Tubbses thought they were doing honor to the Father of His Country as well as to their firstborn son whom they named George Washington Tubbs.

But when he grew up the handle proved too long, so everybody dropped the George, shortened up the middle name and called him simply Wash Tubbs.—Judge.

SEED CORN.

If each farmer of a community were to furnish a sample of his seed corn, to be planted by the side of other samples in a field of even soil, there would be some surprises when the crops were harvested. Many a farmer handicaps himself by refusing to believe that his neighbor has a better strain or variety.—National Stockman and Farmer.

FOR SOWING COWPEAS.

Simple Homemade Contrivance That Does the Work Well.

Here you will find a sketch, taken from Farm and Fireside, of a knack to put on cultivator wheels to sow cowpeas and such, as you lay by corn.

inch in from edge of pan, from which peas drop as wheel goes around.

Fig. 2 represents boards on which pan is fastened. A is hole which slips over the hub of wheel, and also used to fill pan. BBB are wires through boards, which are fastened to spokes to hold all in place. As wheel goes around the seed scatters out between the corn rows. One of these should be on each wheel. Skip one row each time until once over, then take off and plow remaining rows.

For small peas six and one-half inch holes in pan fifteen inches in diameter on forty-four inch wheel will sow about one bushel to the acre. A heavy washer inside of pan will keep holes from clogging.

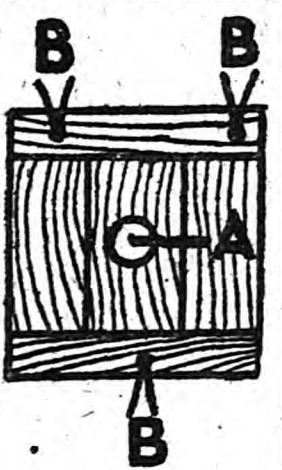

FIG. 2.

THOSE FERTILIZER FIGURES.

They Tell How Much Nitrogen, Phosphoric Acid and Potash You Buy.

An occasional question comes regarding the meaning of the numerals used in designating a fertilizer. It would be well if no other designation ever were used, as it calls attention to the composition of the fertilizer and that is the one important thing.

The first number gives the percentage of nitrogen in the fertilizer, the second gives the phosphoric acid and the third the potash. When a fertilizer is designated in this way one's mind is drawn directly to the actual content of plant food.

We want to know how many pounds of each plant food constituent we are getting when we buy a fertilizer and would prefer to use 100 pounds of a 4-8-10 fertilizer rather than 200 pounds of a 2-4-5, because we would be getting the same amount of plant food by handling only 100 pounds of material.—National Stockman and Farmer.

Simple Silo Wisdom.

The quality of silage depends upon the four factors—an air tight silo, a water tight silo, the age of the corn and the manner in which it is put into the silo. With the proper construction silos of concrete, brick, tile or wood may fulfill these conditions. Recent experiments in Iowa show that the amount and kind of acid in silage, which acts as a preservative, did not vary greatly between the silage from brick, wood and hollow tile silos, indicating that the material of which a silo is made does not materially affect the quality of the contents, provided the silo is carefully constructed so as to be air and water tight.—Country Gentleman.

Keeping Qualities of Silage.

It is all right to keep silage put up last fall till next winter. We have known of dairymen feeding silage that was three or four years old and, so far as we could see, gave just as good results as silage used the same year as made.—Hoard's Dairyman.

FOR THE GARDENER.

How to get rid of some common pests:

Squash Beetle.—Spray with paris green.

Potato Worm.—Hand pick with gloves or spray with paris green.

Potato Beetle.—Spray with paris green and lime or brush off in a shallow pan and destroy.

Cutworms.—Mix paris green and bran and spread as a bait before plants are set. Put paper collars around young plants.

Ants may be controlled by punching holes near their nests, putting in a few spoonfuls of carbon bisulphide and closing the opening.

Striped Cucumber Beetle.—Cover plants with cheesecloth screens, spray with arsenate of lead, five pounds to fifty gallons of water.

Army Worm.—Spray with paris green, spread bran paris green bait or plow a deep ditch with a steep side next to crops and kill them in the trench.

Cabbage Worm.—Spray with paris green to which is added some resin soap to make it stick to the leaves. Use hellebore for full grown heads.—Country Gentleman.

WHIRL OF THE TORNADO.

Beside It the Rush of the Cyclone is Comparatively Harmless.

An upthrust for accurate English is being waged year after year by scientific authorities on the weather who object to having the tornadoes which rip through towns now and then or carry away isolated farmhouses, called "cyclones." The distinction made by the experts in meteorology is plain, but the public is wedded to the "cyclone."

The word has gained wide acceptance in describing the furious local storms which rush forward along a more or less direct path while they whirl with far greater velocity on a center which may be only a few feet in diameter. If a boy's top is spun on one end of a board and the board is tilted so that the top slides quickly along it, all the while revolving at high speed on its point, the onward sweep of the tornado is closely imitated.

It is the spinning motion which is swiftest and most destructive. The advance of the storm may not be as rapid as that of many a comparatively harmless gale. The twisting motion is estimated at not less than 200 miles an hour in the worst tornadoes.

The true cyclone of the West Indies, the China sea and other parts of the tropics is entirely different. Its force is spent in a furious wind that seems to blow almost straight ahead, while the storm revolves, more or less fully, around a circle the circumference of which may be many hundred miles. A tornado wreaks its fury on a strip of land usually only a mile or less in width. The cyclone sweeps scores or hundreds of miles of sea or shore.

But "cyclone" is entrenched in popular usage as the name of the typical "twister" of this country, and "tornado" has a poor chance.—Cleveland Leader.

THE PRISONERS' CIPHER.

A Puzzling Code That Was Discovered Only by Accident.

Prisoners in jails are generally very ingenious, so much so, in fact, that it has been frequently remarked that if their skill and ingenuity were turned to honest purposes they would thrive much better than as criminals.

One branch of ingenuity is displayed in the plans they make to communicate with one another. They construct cipher codes, but the officials generally manage to translate them.

Recently in western jail the guards encountered a cipher that proved too hard for them, and it was a good while before the puzzling messages were made out, and then the key was accidentally discovered. A man in for forgery, as smart a rogue as ever was behind the bars, invented the puzzle.

The writing was on long, narrow strips of paper, on the edge of which were letters and parts of letters that apparently had no connection and from which no words could be formed.

One day a deputy who was passing the cell of a prisoner saw him passing a long strip of paper around an octagon lead pencil. He took this paper away, and on it were the mysterious scrawls that had worried the keepers.

But the deputy got an idea from this, and, going back to the office, he wrapped the strip around an octagon shaped lead pencil and after several trials adjusted it so that the parts of letters fitted together and made a sentence, though the writing was very fine.

The writer had adopted the simple ingenious plan of covering the lead pencil with the paper and had then written along one of the flat sides. On unrolling it the writing was as mystical as a cryptogram, but when put around the pencil, as it was originally, it could be easily understood.—Dallas News.

Almost the Speed Limit.

"No man is a coward to himself," said the war veteran oracularly.

"At Chattanooga one of the men in my company left early in the action, and no one saw him till after the battle, when he appeared in camp unwounded and unabashed. Some of the boys accused him of running away, but he wouldn't admit it.

"I only retreated in good order," he declared.

"I heard of the matter, and a few days later I asked him if he had any idea how fast he had retreated."

"Well, I'll tell you, cap'n," he said, "if I'd been at home and goin' after the doctor, folks that see me passin' would have thought my wife was right sick!"—Youth's Companion.

A Story of St. Paul's.

A singular fact in the history of St. Paul's cathedral, London, is that the first stone which the architect ordered the masons to bring from the rubbish of the former cathedral, destroyed by fire, was part of a sarcophagus, on which had been inscribed the single word "Resurgam" ("I shall rise again"). The prophecy was fulfilled, for out of the ruins of old a veritable poem in marble had arisen.

His Umbrella Scheme.

"An umbrella with a gold handle studded with diamonds!" exclaimed the admiring friend.

"Yes," replied the man with a fierce look in his eye. "If somebody picks this one up it's going to be a charge of grand larceny."—Washington Star.

Domestic Ethics.

A man should be ashamed of himself when he tells a falsehood to his wife and she believes it. But he isn't ashamed; he is encouraged.—New York Journal.

Tinkering With the Tariff Bill
The sub-committee of the finance committee of the United States Senate tried to make a start in the direction of tinkering with the Underwood Tariff bill after the manner peculiar in the Senate in the making of new tariffs. It recommended that meats and flour be taken from the free list and subjected to small duties.
But sound reasons will have to be advanced in favor of thus subjecting these two important foodstuffs to tariff taxation before the Democratic majority of the Senate can afford to indorse such recommendations by the sub-committee, which is composed of Senators Williams of Mississippi, Shively of Indiana and Gore of Oklahoma. The people will have to be fully informed as to the necessity, if any exists, of imposing a duty of 45 cents per barrel on flour, which will mean an increase to this extent in the cost of bread for the family. And it is very clear that President Wilson did not favor the suggested change, for at his mere intimation the sub-committee reconsidered its action.
It is impossible for some members of the Senate to resist the impression that the body of which they are members is the sole and only authority in the making of tariffs. They seem to think that members of the House know nothing about this work, and that their co-operation is only tolerated because the Constitution requires that all revenue measures shall originate in the popular body of Congress. They regard it as the unquestioned prerogative of the Senate to fix up a Tariff bill to its own liking, regardless of the views of the rest of the people. And up to this time the dominance of the Senate in respect of tariff legislation has been acquiesced in without serious challenge.
But it is different now. The people are in earnest for real tariff reform and the country demands it. No manipulations by the Senate that will operate in the direction of retaining protective duties to the sacrifice of revenue duties or the requirements of the free list will be tolerated by the people. And the people will have the say in the election of Senators hereafter.—Wilmington Every Evening.

The Popular Senate
The ultimate results of the Seventeenth amendment to the Constitution, proclaimed by Secretary Bryan today, providing for the direct election of United States Senators have had very little consideration in the enthusiastic endorsement of the proposal which followed the Lorimer scandal. For the purpose of punishing unworthy Legislatures and of arousing voters from their lethargy and neglect of their power to control their representatives, a change has been ordered which strikes at one of the important principles in our system of government, the differentiation of the various parts of a government, all responsible and answerable to the people, but each by a different route.
Following in logical order the direct election of Senators, comes the direct election of President, and later on the election of the Federal judiciary, already forecasted in the suggestion of the recall of judges or of their decisions by popular vote. The separation of the Legislative, Executive and Judiciary functions of the government, in the manner of their creation and election and therefore in their line of responsibility, was purposeful and carefully worked out. The government was planned to be one of checks and balances, of the people in every part, but in each part representing the people through a different process. Nowhere in the whole framework of government was the purpose and principle more definitely asserted and more carefully worked out than in the creation of the dual body of Congress, and in the secret deliberations of the first constitutional convention no single subject occupied the time of the delegates and received the consideration given to the Senate and its manner of selection.
In a flash of popular opinion—culminating, it is true, years of discussion, but in its final achievement representing a sudden conversion—this plan of government has been changed. United States Senators hereafter are to be elected as Congressmen-at-large, differing only in their relation to the people in the fact of their six-year term, a line of distinction that may easily be effaced. The logical sequence leads to the ultimate question why two branches of Congress, elected by and answerable to identical constituencies are necessary or better than one.—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Col. Roosevelt's Vindication
Col. Theodore Roosevelt's libel suit against a Michigan editor came to a sudden end at Marquette, in that State. In the heat of the campaign, last Fall, a Republican paper called Iron Ore had accused Col. Roosevelt of drunkenness, "and that not seldom." To clear his name of this charge the former President brought suit for $10,000 damages. The trial was a national sensation. Newspapers throughout the country printed pages of the testimony for the prosecution.
After hearing the evidence which was all in Col. Roosevelt's favor, the editor of Iron Ore admitted that he had been wrong and had unintentionally done a great injustice to the ex-President.
Mr. Roosevelt then withdrew his claim for damages, except for a nominal amount. Instructed by the judge, the jury awarded him damages of six cents.

Take Plenty of Time to Eat
There is a saying that "rapid eating is slow suicide." If you have formed the habit of eating too rapidly you are most likely suffering from indigestion or constipation, which will result eventually in serious illness unless corrected. Digestion begins in the mouth. Food should be thoroughly masticated and insalivated. Then when you have a fullness of the stomach or feel dull and stupid after eating, take one of Chamberlain's Tablets. Many severe cases of stomach trouble and constipation have been cured by the use of these tablets. They are easy to take and most agreeable in effect. Sold by all dealers.

Waste of Water Foods
The reports given out from the Bureau of Fisheries concerning the results of the shad and herring fishing season just closed convey the suggestion that either the national government or the States of Maryland and Virginia must provide different and better regulations for the netting of sea fish that come into the Bay and rivers every spring time for spawning. From practically all the rivers tributary to the Bay and from the upper waters of the Bay have come reports to the effect that the runs of both shad and herring this season have been far below the average.
In contrast to the scarcity in the upper waters come reports of herring being sold at the lower end of the Bay to the fertilizer factories in great quantities. Some of the fishermen in the lower waters have complained openly because this year the factories would pay only $1.25 per 1,000 whereas last year they were willing to pay $2.00 per 1,000. The large curing stations are located along the upper waters and usually more than a half million barrels of shad and herring are salted. This year many of these plants, it is reported, were almost idle.
It appears that the time has arrived when the whole regulatory system pertaining to our water foods must be readjusted. The much referred to right of common fishery can hardly be regarded as a fixed and everlasting scheme of handling the food producing resources of the salted or navigable waters. The time has come when we must not only conserve the water foods, but artificially replenish the wastes. Our present methods of handling all water foods are enormously extravagant and wasteful.—Baltimore Star.

An Interesting Celebration
Vacationists in New England between June 13th and June 17th will have an opportunity to see a pageant of unusual interest—that of the historic city of Salem, given on a beautiful private estate, fronting on the harbor just outside the city. This pageant will present episodes leading up from the arrival of the first settlers in 1626, through the witchcraft days and Revolutionary period to the height of Salem's glory, where her merchantmen were found in every port, closing with episodes of Hawthorne's time and later. Not the least interesting feature is that many of the leading characters will be the direct descendants of the men and women whose parts they take.
Those in charge of the pageant are members of the board of directors of the House of Seven Gables, which has recently been restored to the exact condition in which it was at the time when Phoebe came to live with Hepsibah Pincheon, even to the secret staircase, the bell over the shop door and the ginger-bread men inside.

Best Newspaper We Ever Read
It is seldom that there comes to us a paper we can praise as wholesome and clean in every respect, but The Philadelphia Sunday Record certainly deserves its title as "the greatest home newspaper of all."
It has feature pages for every member of the family. We were surprised at the variety and scope of its articles. The best artists and authors each week contribute some of the work that has made them famous.
The story that interested us the most concerned an old barn near here that we used to play around so many years ago that we are ashamed to tell.
It is just this clean, human interest touch that makes The Philadelphia Sunday Record a favorite everywhere, particularly in the country. Best of all, it costs only three cents. You had better do as we did—order next Sunday's copy today and be sure of getting it.
We recommend The Philadelphia Sunday Record to all high-grade home lovers.

NOTICE OF HIGH SCHOOL LEVY
Office of School Board
PRINCESS ANNE, MD., May 13th, 1913.
To the County Commissioners of Somerset County:
In accordance with an Act of the Legislature, the School Board is required to submit a list of the High Schools of the county, together with the cost of maintaining same in order that your Honorable Board may make a special High School levy as required by law.
There are in this county five High Schools, located at Princess Anne, Crisfield, Marston, Fairmount and Deal's Island, of which the first two are on the approved list of the State Board of Education, and are therefore, entitled to State aid. These two schools are at present under the second of the said High School Act. Application is about to be made to the State Board to place the Crisfield High School under the first group.
The following schedule of salaries is provided for in said Act:
GROUP SECOND.
For principal, not less than $1,000
For assistants, not less than 500 each
For special teachers, not less than 600 each
GROUP FIRST.
For principal, not less than $1,200
For assistants, not less than 600 each
For special teachers, not less than 600 each
Under this grouping, the cost will be for Princess Anne school $2,725; that of the Crisfield school under the new grouping will be $4,625, or the sum of $7,350 for both schools, of which the State appropriates $3,900. For the principals of the three other High Schools the sum of $2,100 will be required, making the total cost of the High Schools of the county $9,450, thus leaving $5,500 to be provided by the County Commissioners.
Respectfully submitted,
W. H. DASHIELL,
County Superintendent.

In compliance with the Act of General Assembly above referred to, it is hereby ordered that the above sum of $5,500 be included in the coming county levy.
By order of the Board.

Local and Miscellaneous

In their frantic efforts to save time, some people waste a lot of it.

A new broom sweeps clean, but only when it has some power behind it.

The people who are always short naturally find it hard to get along.

Mr. and Mrs. John Page, of "Elmwood," spent several days last week in Baltimore.

Dr. C. W. Purnell, optometrist, will be at Omar A. Jones' drug store Monday afternoon, June 10th.

The Shoreland Club will be entertained by Mrs. J. D. Wallop at the Washington Hotel on Wednesday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock.

On Wednesday, June 25th, a supper will be served at Grace Guild Hall, near Mt. Vernon Wharf. Ice cream, cake, soda water and fruits will also be for sale. The public cordially invited.

On Wednesday evening, June 18th, 1913, Rev. Charles M. Elderdice, of Federalsburg, Md., will lecture in Salem Methodist Protestant Church, Fairmount district. His subject will be "Mountains and Molehills." Admission 25 cents.

Mr. J. B. Hendrie, of the firm of Wagner & Hendrie who formerly conducted the 5 & 10c store on Main Street, has been employed by Mrs. Theresa Goodman as manager at her store at the corner of Main and Prince William streets, known as the "Busy Corner."

Mrs. Nellie P. Kirwan, of Wrenona, this county, who died on the 30th of May, was insured in the Continental Life Insurance Company on August 10th, 1911, for $1000. Proofs of her death were submitted to the company on June 4th by Mr. A. M. Walls, and claim was paid the same day.

In picking the recent crop of berries, Mrs. A. S. Dennis, who resides five miles east of Princess Anne, claims to have made a record in picking 105 berries off one plant, in addition to which there were many others ruined by the frost. The variety is known as the "Joe" having its origin in New Jersey. The berries were all firm and fine and filled several quart baskets.

Rev. T. J. Lacey, rector of the church of The Redeemer, Brooklyn, New York, and registrar of the Episcopal diocese of Long Island has been spending a few days in Princess Anne. He is a close student of colonial church history and is visiting the Eastern Shore to see some of the old church buildings. He expresses himself with enthusiasm over our town and its people. During his stay he was the guest of Dr. C. H. Weaver and was present at the opening service of the Easton Diocese Convention.

If you want your money to go a long way, don't bet it. Mail it.

It's much better to be up and doing than to be down and being done.

Miss Natalie Nixdorf, of Baltimore, is a guest at the home of Judge H. L. D. Stanford.

The Ladies' Card Club was entertained at the home of Mrs. William H. Dashiell last Thursday evening.

Dr. Alice Swaney, of New Cumberland, W. Virginia, is visiting Dr. Catherine F. Lankford, at "Beckford."

Mr. and Mrs. John Dixon returned Monday last week from a visit to their son, Mr. Alvah Dixon, of Chertown, Va.

Mrs. Maria J. Pusey and little grandson, E. Scott Pusey, left Saturday to spend some weeks with relatives in Philadelphia.

Miss Myrtle Jackson, of Laurel, Del., and Mrs. Alice Austin, of Mt. Vernon, are spending a few days with Mrs. G. S. Richardson, Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Sudler, of Denver, Col., were visitors last week at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sudler, near Westover.

Two additional automobiles are now seen on our streets, one a recent purchase of Mr. Geo. W. Brown, a Buick; and the other that of Mr. Frank D. Layfield, a Henderson.

Harry Smith, formerly employed by the N.Y. & N. Railroad Company at Princess Anne, is now agent at Westover in the place of W. L. Thornton on one year's vacation for his health.

Mrs. Addie H. Byrd left on Thursday last to spend the summer with relatives at Berlin, Md. She was accompanied by her nephew, Dr. Z. P. Henry, who had been attending the Episcopal Convention at Princess Anne.

The ten-month-old child of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Morris, of Revell's Neck, died last Tuesday afternoon after a short illness. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Newton, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of Westover.

Dr. Benjamin Coulbourn Conner will be formally inaugurated president of Williamsport Dickinson Seminary June 10, which is alumni day of commencement week.—Christian Advocate.

Dr. Conner is a native of Somerset county and is a member of the well known Conner family of Brinkley's district.

Hon. L. Irving Handy, accompanied by Mrs. Handy and their daughter, Miss Margaret Handy, of Smyrna, Del., and Mrs. Wm. H. Keen, of Philadelphia, made an automobile trip to Princess Anne last Sunday afternoon. The short time in town was spent at the home of Dr. and Mrs. T. J. Smith, on Main street.

From the Pocomoke City Ledger-Enterprise: "Mrs. Emma Lankford and daughter, Miss Amanda, returned to their home in Princess Anne on Tuesday, after visiting relatives here. They made the trip home in Mr. Harry Clarke's automobile, and were accompanied by Mrs. Wm. Dale and Miss Maggie Clarke."

The commencement exercises of the Maryland Agricultural College will be held June 15th to 18th. There are twenty candidates for Bachelor's degree; seven for certificates, two-year course in agriculture and two for a similar course in horticulture; four for Master's degree. Dr. P. P. Claxton, U. S. Commissioner of Education, will address the graduates on commencement day, June 18th.

Miss Mary White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O. White, of Barnesville, and William Fleming Lankford, of Pocomoke City, were married last Wednesday evening in the Episcopal Church at Barnesville, the rector, Rev. Charles D. Lafferty, officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Laura White. Laura Virginia Wood, of Barnesville, was the flower girl. William Davis, of Washington, was best man, and the ushers were Dr. R. Grover Pyles, of Baltimore; William A. Waters, of Germantown; Alfred Haulp, of Jessups, and Frank Young, of Pocomoke City. Miss Edith Gray, of Washington, played the wedding marches.

Supt. Marine, of Dorchester county, has been in correspondence with the school superintendents of Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset counties with a view to having his county join the summer school at Ocean City, known as the Tri-County Institute. It is the intention of the four superintendents to meet at Ocean City next Friday for a conference and if arrangements can be made to accommodate the additional 140 teachers, the term Tri-County will be a thing of the past. Suggestions will be in order for a new name and perhaps the plain "Four-County," will be used. The Tri-County Institute was begun in 1905 and it has been a wonderful success. The Institute will begin this year Aug. 27 and close Sept. 4.

Mr. Isaac J. Coston, of Clarksburg, W. Va., who accompanied the remains of his brother, Mr. W. Brice Coston, to Pocomoke City for interment, spent last Saturday in Princess Anne. He left in the afternoon for Old Point Comfort.

Mr. W. F. Wink has purchased a farm of 100 acres one mile from Bear, Del., and will remove there next year. Mr. Wink has been living near Chertown for several years and it is with real sorrow that we see him leave Kent. He has proved himself to be one of our most estimable citizens.—Kent News.

The school of Miss Helen V. Pusey at Quindocqua closed Friday, May 30th, with the usual exercises. Ice cream and cake were served to the little ones. Miss Pusey has resigned her school much to the regret of both patrons and scholars. Miss Pusey expects to spend part of her vacation in Newark, N. J., and in the fall to learn the millinery business in Philadelphia.

Mr. Paul Mills has accepted a position on the Marylander and Herald, of Princess Anne, as a compositor, and left on Thursday to enter upon his duties. He is with a good employer and has only to do his duty to be made a man of. The Marylander and Herald is an ideal newspaper, it turns out good men and excellent printers. The editor of this paper is a sample of its production.—Worcester Democrat.

We take pleasure in acknowledging this complimentary allusion. We recently paid a visit to the Democrat office and discovered that the editor and proprietor had lost none of his skill in the printing art; on the contrary he has added to his accomplishments and has succeeded in imparting his important information to those in his employ.

Sunday night of last week the store of Wade Cullen & Co., at Hopewell, three miles from Crisfield, was broken into and robbed, money and merchandise being taken. Other robberies in different sections of the county occurred and the raisers of chickens are compelled to guard their henneries. Sheriff Harding P. Tull and three deputies spent Monday of last week working up evidence against five negroes from Charles county, who were suspected of being connected with the robbery of the Cullen store Sunday night. As a result they arrested Percy Satchel, James Donnelly, Langston Temple, David Thomas and James Huggins on the outskirts of Crisfield. The men were brought up for trial before Justice William A. Britton Tuesday morning, and the first four were dismissed, but Huggins was placed in jail and held for the action of the Somerset county grand jury. Evidence was also brought out at the trial which connected Huggins with the theft of a bicycle belonging to Benjamin Page, of Hopewell, on May 10th, and the negro will be called upon to face both charges at the next term of the Circuit Court for Somerset county.

Refers to Somebody Else's Child. At a teachers' meeting in the public library one of the addresses was on the subject, "How to Train a Scatterbrain Imp of Mischief Into a Serious Student." The reference, of course, is not intended to apply to your own sweet, angel-faced cherub.—Kansas City Star.

WAIT PAINT There are painters and waiters. Which am I going to do? Painter or waiter? Which is better? How much am I worth with my property waiting? How much if I paint? Will my house be worth more or less if I paint? Say it costs $2.00 a gallon Devco—I wouldn't paint any other—$3 or $4 more for putting it on. That's $50 or $60 a 10-gallon job. The money is gone. Is it in the house? Is it all in the house? Suppose I were selling; what should I get for that house fresh-painted and what should I get for it needing paint? I wonder why men paint before selling!

C. H. Hayman sells it. DEVCO

Dr. C. W. PURNELL, OPTOMETRIST, of Cambridge, will be at O. A. Jones' Drug Store on Monday afternoon, June 10th, 1913. Glasses prescribed and furnished when necessary.

Horticultural Meeting at Easton

Active preparations are now in progress for the meeting of the Peninsula Horticultural Society at Easton, Md., next January. The best fruit growers of the peninsula will explain how they have succeeded in making their farms genuine garden spots, and some of the most noted horticulturists of the country, both practical and scientific, will be present to give addresses and engage in the discussions.

The exhibition of fruit and vegetables will no doubt be the best ever seen on the peninsula, even eclipsing that held in Wilmington last winter. Cash prizes amounting to about $1500 will be offered. There are some thirty varieties of apples of recognized value and each of these will receive prizes as boxes and as plates, and some of them as barrels and other forms of package. The first prize for the best box of apples of each variety will be $5, the second $3 and the third $2, or $10 for each variety. This will amount to some $300. In addition the best single box of apples will receive $25, the second $15 and the third $10. The best three boxes will receive $15, $10 and $5. The best five boxes will receive $25, $15 and $10. The best ten boxes will receive $50, $20 and $15. In other words more than $500 will be given for boxes alone.

The complete premium list will be issued in a short time. In addition to these cash prizes many special prizes will probably be offered. The Delaware Nurseries, at Milford, has sent in the first offer; namely $20 worth of nursery stock, and Gen. Joseph B. Seth, of Easton, a member of the executive committee, offers $10 for the best Martin house exhibited at the meeting, made by a boy. The house must contain not less than fourteen compartments and not more than twenty. Beauty and workmanship will be considered in awarding the prize. This prize is offered to encourage boys to make Martin houses and to encourage farmers to put them up.

Ulcers and Skin Troubles If you are suffering with any old, running or fever sores, ulcers, boils, eczema or other skin troubles, get a box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and you will get relief promptly. Mrs. Bruce Jones, of Birmingham, Ala., suffered from an ugly ulcer for nine months and Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured her in two weeks. Will help you. Only 25c. Recommended by Omar A. Jones, druggist. ## GROOVED EYESTONES.

Found in Tiny Mollusks of the South American Coasts.

South American eyestones are tiny objects that look like flat, round bits of polished bone. Upon one side of each stone there are numerous concentric grooves.

If an eyestone is placed in vinegar or a weak solution of lime water it behaves very much as if it were alive. It moves slowly about in various directions and altogether conducts itself in a most mysterious manner. This strange activity has given rise among ignorant and superstitious persons to the notion that the eyestone has life and "loves to swim."

As a matter of fact, of course, an eyestone has no more life than a paving stone. It is composed of calcareous material, and in lime water or certain other liquids it is made to move about by the carbonic acid gas caused by the contact of the stone and the liquid.

These curious little stones were once the "front doors" so to speak, of the shells of a tiny mollusk that lives along the South American coasts. The calcareous formation occurs at the tip end of the mollusk, and when it draws itself into its shell to escape danger or to go to sleep that tip fits so snugly into the mouth of the shell that it affords the creature perfect protection against its enemies.

The natives collect these little mollusks for no other purpose than to get the eyestones. Sailors on the vessels engaged in the fruit trade with those regions get the stones, bring them to the United States and sell them to druggists.

The stones are often used for removing foreign substances from the eye when the services of a physician or an oculist are not to be had conveniently. Many persons think that before using one you must put it in vinegar to give it "life," but the notion is absurd. You need only insert the stone at the outer corner of the eye with the grooved side next to the lid. The pressure of the eyeball moves the stone about in the eye. The grooves collect and retain the foreign matter, and when the stone has accomplished its circuit it emerges at the end of the eye next the nose.

There are other eyestones. In the head of the common crawfish there are two little bones, just behind and beneath the eyes. These bones resemble the South American eyestones, but the fish bones are wholly smooth instead of being grooved on one side. These crawfish bones have been used in the west as eyestones, but they are not so efficacious as those from South America.—Youth's Companion.

QUEER FORM OF INSANITY.

Why Some Men Are Angels Abroad and Demons at Home.

There is a form of insanity, so well recognized that wills have been broken on the strength of it, that takes the form of brutality to those of one's own family when at the same time its victim is kind, benevolent and charming to all outside. This is known to alienists and lawyers as "Oikimania." Historic cases of it are those of Dean Swift, Mrs. John Wesley and the father of Frederick the Great.

In women it generally takes the form of an unreasonable and baseless jealousy, leading them to make life a burden to their husbands, to sulk perversely at home while shining in society or spending much time in religious devotion or in works of benevolence.

When Oikimania takes the form of active brutality to their wives and children, it is often accompanied by continuous and exhausting remorse under the terrible consciousness that they are torturing those they really love. But they are unable to shake off the habit. Sometimes when the object of their persecution is dead, they themselves become actually insane. Such was the case with Dean Swift after the death of Stella, the victim of his brutality, when he paid the penalty in pathetic alternations of delirium and melancholy.

So well is this form of insanity recognized that the courts will throw out the will of a man who has manifested it if this will cuts off his natural heirs.—New York World.

How They Cured Madness.
Murder as well as suicide was sometimes justified in the old days. In ancient parish registers in England there are such entries as "Hodgkinson Thomas died ye 14th day of April, 1617 N. B.—He was smothered for ye mad ness." Which means that as Hodgkinson had been bitten by a mad dog his kind hearted neighbors settled his fate for him by putting a feather bed on top of him and sitting on it till he was suffocated.

Clear Case of Overwork.
Polite Doctor—Your husband, madam, is suffering either from overwork or excessive indulgence in alcoholic stimulants. It is difficult to say which. Anxious Wife—Oh, I'm sure it's overwork! Why, he can't even go to the theater without hurrying out half a dozen times to see one of his partners.—London Tatler.

Defined.
Tommy—Pop, what's sattery? Tommy's Pop—Flattery, my son, is having some one else tell us the nice things we have always thought about ourselves.—Philadelphia Record.

Neglected His Duty.
Mr. Pester—What made you get off that car backward? Any fool could have told you not to. Mrs. Pester—Then why didn't you?—Kansas City Star.

The Chilling Reply.
According to a Washington legal light, there are times when a lawyer regrets the use of an illustration which a moment before has appeared especially felicitous.

"The argument of my learned and brilliant colleague," said counsel for the plaintiff in a suit for damages from a railway company, "is like the snow now falling outside—it is scattered here, there and everywhere."

Whereupon opposing counsel, improved his opportunity. "All I can say," he hastily interposed, "is that the gentleman who has likened my argument to the snow now falling outside has neglected to observe one little point to which I flatter myself the similarity extends—it has covered all the ground in a very short time."

Crabs' Shells.

The shell of a crab when once hardened cannot grow, and the crab is forced to moult or cast off his out-grown shell from time to time, and grow a new one a "little larger." A crab when growing this new shell is known as a soft shell or "soft" crab, and at such times he is, of course, especially subject to attack from his enemies, as the shell, which is his natural armor, is wanting. In museums there are exhibits of as many as fourteen cast-off shells of a single crab, beginning with a very tiny one and each one just a size larger than the last.

CONFIRMED TESTIMONY

The Kind Princess Anne Readers Cannot Doubt

Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test.

The test of time—the hardest test of all.

Thousands gratefully testify. To quick relief—to lasting results.

Princess Anne readers can no longer doubt the evidence.

It's convincing testimony—twice-told and well confirmed.

Princess Anne readers should profit by these experiences.

C. F. Parks, Landownville, Md., says: "I suffered for several months from irregularity of the kidneys and at night my rest was broken. There was soreness in my kidneys and if I attempted to stoop or lift, I had sharp twinges. I heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I decided to give them a trial. I could not have had better results for I was entirely relieved. I willingly endorse Doan's Kidney Pills at all times. What I said about them in my former statement, given some years ago, still holds good. The cure they made has been permanent."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Good Advice.
"My son," said the old hunter, "you are starting out to earn your living as a guide. Remember that some people will want to see bear, while others will want to see bear tracks."

"If they're satisfied with tracks don't try to show 'em bear."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Turn About.

Banker—Allow me to call your attention, sir, to the fact that your account is $100 overdrawn? Customer—Indeed! That means that I have $100 of yours, doesn't it? Banker—Yes Customer—Well, look here; last week you had $150 of mine, and I didn't say anything about it.—London Telegraph

Fine Idea.
Insurance Man—If you lose a hand we pay you $1,000. Pat—I'll speak to me brother Mike. He's a contractor and do be losin' hands all the time.—Puck.

Cramping the Bank.
Cashier (to lady cashing check for $15)—How will you have it, madam, gold or notes? Lady—Oh, all gold, please, if you've got it.—London Punch.

Aunt Hannah and Jack

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

You may have read a dozen stories about misers and other folks who mistrusted banks and kept their money in the house to lose it at the hands of robbers, but you have never read of Aunt Hannah Day, though she was just that sort of person. She was a widow and had passed the middle age and had a little farm near a village where she lived and hired a man to work it.

Aunt Hannah wasn't a miser, though she was known to be stingy and to be suspicious of every one that came along. Her first thought toward a stranger was to ask herself if he was after the money, for she kept money in the house. While her husband was still alive a bank had failed on them, and they had lost $1,000. From that date on the woman had looked upon every banker as a robber.

In one way and another Aunt Hannah had got together $3,000 in gold. She had buried it down in the cellar in a fruit jar, but she didn't believe she would ever receive a visit from robbers. When people warned her that she was running a great risk she replied:

"Oh, la, la! If robbers ever should come I'll make 'em a cup of ginger tea and ask them to please go along and not bother an old woman. Robbers have mothers as well as other folks, and when they see my gray hair and wrinkled face they'll think of their own mothers and not harm me."

One day there came tolling up the long hill on whose crest stood Aunt Hannah's rather gloomy house a boy about fourteen years old. He was ragged and hungry. He was a city waif who had left the city behind and was tramping. He saw Aunt Hannah in her cucumber patch and opened the gate.

"Well, bub?" she queried in her brisk way.

"I want to live with you for a while," was the reply.

"But you have a lazy look about you."

"Gimme something to do and see how I'll make the dirt fly!"

After a few more questions and answers he was given a slice of bread and butter and set to work.

Aunt Hannah had always figured that if robbers came it would be at midnight and that there would be three of them and each wearing a black mask. She had written down and then committed to memory the very first words she was going to speak when she found them bending over her bed and flashing the light from a dark lantern in her eyes.

Jack had a bed in the garret, which was not a bad sort of place, while Aunt Hannah had a bedroom on the first floor. The tired boy was always in bed at 8 o'clock, but the woman waited an hour longer before winding the clock and retiring. One evening at half past 8, as she sat sewing, the door opened and two men entered. No masks. No dark lantern. They didn't look a bit like robbers.

"Madam," said one, and he smiled when he said it, "we have come for that money!"

Aunt Hannah's robbers had come at last; but, alas for her, her program had been all knocked out. She was so frightened that she was tongue tied for the next three minutes. She just sat and stared at them and wondered if she had grown deaf and misunderstood their words.

"Will you hand over the money?"

"No, I'll be snuffed if I will!" she exclaimed as she suddenly found her voice and at the same time began to struggle.

In fifteen seconds she had a gag in her mouth and one of the men was saying:

"Too bad, isn't it? We thought the old lady would see things in the right light. Guess we'll have to hurt her after all!"

Five minutes after Jack had gone to bed he was asleep. That sleep lasted about twenty minutes, and then a touch of cold woke him up. He had been eating green apples all the afternoon to make him grow. The hired man didn't hold him to be a sure thing. He didn't get out of bed at the first twinge, but at about the tenth. He would go downstairs and 'fess up to Aunt Hannah and get a remedy. He got so far on his way as to know that there were strangers in the sitting room and that one of them was saying to the widow:

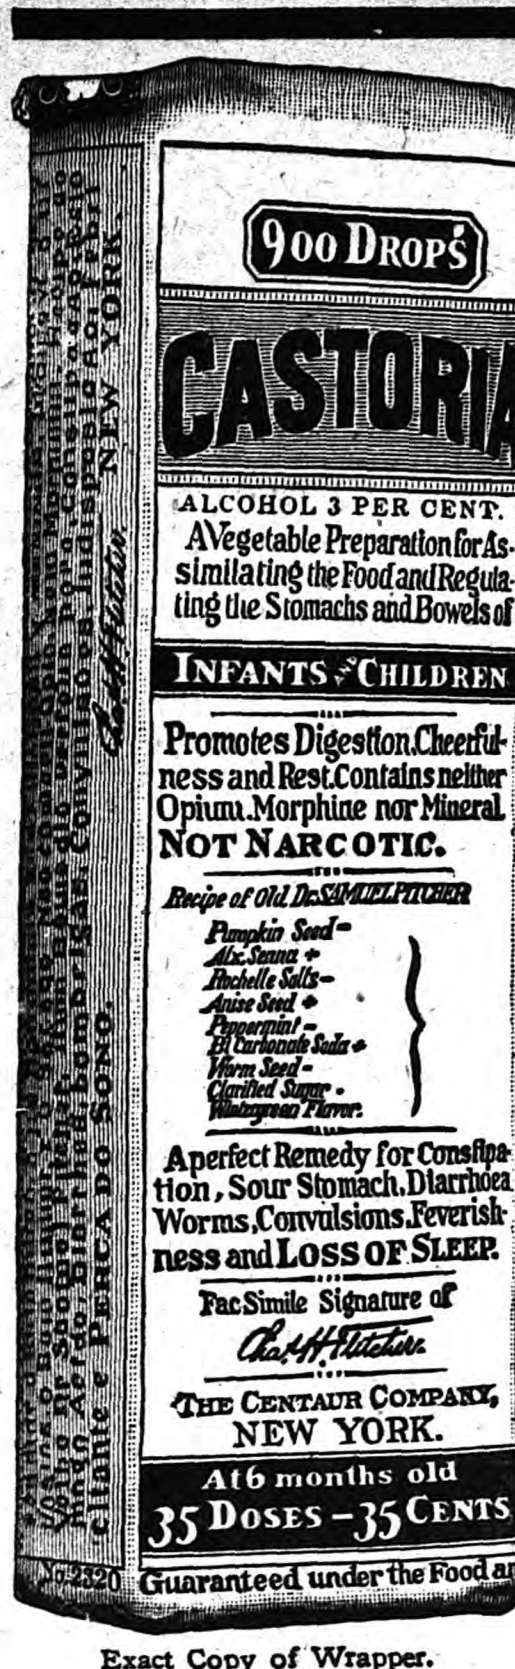

"We should hate to burn the soles of her feet with lighted matches, but we must have that money!"

Jack scuttled back upstairs and from a back window dropped to the roof of the kitchen and thence to the ground. Half a mile away was a farmer who was cutting his meadows and had five or six harvest hands at the house. The distance was covered in short order, and the laborers turned out with guns and pitchforks.

She had just got one blister when the harvest hands arrived. There was a hot fight for five minutes, and then one of the robbers was captured and the other made his escape. Jack came in after the affair was over, and Aunt Hannah tried to embrace him and tell him what nice things she was going to do for him, but his reply was:

"It's me for the road again. I can't stand cold and robbers on the same night, and that blister on your foot is goin' to keep you yellin' at somebody for a month to come!"

And he turned his back on the crowd and walked away into the darkness whistling as he went.

Belief in Luck Harmful.

Belief in luck retards progress, dulls the intellect, deadens the wits, debases the body and keeps its votaries ever behind in the race of life. The man who believes that his luck is against him—good luck—has cast over himself an insidious spell and soon will feel that it is useless to knock at the treasure-room of fame and fortune, that a deaf ear will be turned to him because he comes to believe that door to be open only to its favored children.

Find Statue in Tree Trunk.

While cutting up a century-old fire tree on the Simpon (France) forests found in the heart of the trunk a bronze statue of the Virgin Mary. It was about a foot tall and perfectly preserved. It is supposed that the statuette was placed in a niche carved in the tree and that the wood gradually grew all around it.

The Baltimore Star

The Leading Evening Paper of the South.

The Baltimore Star, established August 17 1908, by the publisher of The Baltimore American, has won its place as the representative evening paper of the South. It gives more news and more reading matter than any other afternoon paper in Maryland. It is especially rich in departments—financial, sporting, society, children, women, and to these departments the best writers of America are regular contributors. The Star is the great home paper, with something for every member of the family. It is a cheerful newspaper, with plenty of entertainment. Those who try it keep on taking it.

The Star is elaborately illustrated. It has the best photographs of important events. Its portraits of leading men and women are unequalled.

The Star has two great news services, with wires direct to its offices from all parts of the world. It uses every modern invention and the best enterprise to get all the news.

The Star is different from other Southern papers. It has a quality of its own.

JOHN PAUL JONES.

Reckless and Gallant Was the Sailor Whom England Feared.

In M. MacDermot Crawford's "The Sailor Whom England Feared" is told the life story of John Paul Jones. Born a Scot, this intrepid free lance of the sea, whose parentage remains a mystery, and who founded the United States navy, will ever live in naval history as the victor in the valiant naval duel between the Serapis and Richard B. Boscawen in 1779.

"I wish to have no connection with any ship that does not sail fast, for I intend to go in harm's way," wrote Jones characteristically when negotiating with the French admiral for a ship. "You know, I believe, that this is not every one's intention."

Jones' relations with the gracious Duchesse de Chartres are delightfully stated. She nicknamed him "Chevalier sans titre de la mer." Charmed by his impromptu defense of the Comte de Toulouze's naval tactics at a dinner she gave in his honor, the duchesse presented him with an exquisite jeweled watch that had belonged to her grandfather. Then it was that Jones made this memorable promise: "May it please your royal highness, if fortune should favor me at sea, I will some day lay an English frigate at your feet." He fulfilled this promise as far as he could when he surrendered "The loveless of women" the sword surrendered by "one of the bravest of men"—Pearson of the Serapis. "The enemy surrendered at thirty-five minutes past 10 p. m.," wrote Jones to the duchesse, "by your watch, which I consult only to fix the moment of victory."

Napoleon's opinion of Paul Jones is tersely summed up in the remark he made to Berthier when the news of Trafalgar was brought to him: "How old was Paul Jones when he died?" he gleefully asked. When Berthier told him about forty-five Napoleon remarked: "Then he did not fulfill his destiny. Had he lived to this time France might have had an admiral."

Our admirals are always talking about heroic conditions and heroic objects, as if there was any condition or any object in war except to get in contact with the enemy and destroy him. That was Paul Jones' view of the conditions and objects of naval warfare. It was also Nelson's. It is a pity they could not have been matched somewhere with fairly equal force."

ODDITIES IN RELICS.

A Bit of Shelley's Charred Skull Treasured in a Locket.

It is not every man, but every hero worshiper, who would esteem the tooth of his hero of more value than diamonds. There is a ring belonging to an English nobleman in which the place of honor, formerly occupied by a diamond, is given to a tooth that once did duty in a human jaw.

This tooth cost no less than $3,650, but it was the tooth of Sir Isaac Newton. A relic collector sold it at auction in 1846, and the nobleman who bought it gave it the place of a diamond in his favorite ring.

Another tooth which so far excites the veneration of hero worshipers as to be able to hold a court of its own and to draw from long distances a small host of followers is one that was originally hidden behind the lips of Victor Hugo. It is kept at his former residence in a glass case bearing the inscription "Tooth drawn from the jaw of Victor Hugo by the dentist on Wednesday, August 11, 1871, in the gardens attached to the house of Madame Koch at 3 o'clock in the afternoon."

The wig of a literary man appears to have been even more sought after than his teeth. That which Sterne wore while writing "Tristram Shandy" was sold soon after the writer's death for $10,000, and the favorite chair of Alexander Pope brought $5,000.

The most extravagant instance of literary hero worship is that of a well known Englishman who constantly wears in a small locket attached to a chain round his neck a part of the charred skull of Shelley.—St. Louis Republic.

Bites of Insects.

This remedy against the bites of insects appeared in a recent issue of the China Medical Journal: "Take one ounce of epsom salts and dissolve it in one pint of water. Wet a bath cloth wet enough that it will not drip and rub the body well all over and not wipe afterward, but dress. I am very certain that flies, gnats, fleas, bedbugs, mosquitoes or the famous African fly will never touch persons so treated. A somewhat stronger solution applied and allowed to dry will leave a fine powder that the most blood-thirsty insects will not attack."

A Way Pina Have.

She was hurriedly adjusting her veil and had but a few moments in which to catch her car. "Oh, dear," she murmured, "I can't find a pin anywhere! I wonder where all the pins go to, anyway?"

"That's a difficult question to answer," replied her practical husband, who was standing by, "because they are always pointed in one direction and headed in another."—Argonaut.

Very Useful.

"A self made man is of no particular help to his fellow men."

"Well?"

"But a self made woman is a perfect mine of information about hair dyes and face bleaches and pads and things."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

NOBEL PRIZES.

Works That Win Them and the Way the Awards Are Made.

The Swedish scientist Alfred B. Nobel, the inventor of dynamite, died in 1896, bequeathing his fortune, estimated at $9,000,000, to the founding of a fund the interest of which should yearly be distributed to those who had mostly contributed to "the good of humanity." The interest is divided in five equal shares, given away:

"One to the person who in the domain of physics has made the most important discovery or invention, one to the person who has made the most important discovery in the domain of medicine or physiology, one to the person who in literature has provided the most excellent work of an idealistic tendency and one to the person who has worked most or best for the fraternization of nations and the abolition or reduction of standing armies and the calling in and propagating of peace congresses."

The prizes for physics and chemistry are awarded by the Swedish Academy of Science, that for physiology or medical work by the Carline Institute (the faculty of medicine in Stockholm), that for literature by the Swedish Academy in Stockholm, and the peace prize is awarded by a committee of five persons elected by the Norwegian storting.

In accordance with these statutes the awarders of the prizes (the four above named institutions) elect fifteen deputies for two consecutive years, the Academy of Science electing six and the other prize awarders three each. These deputies elect for two consecutive years four members of the board of directors of the Nobel Institute, which board, exclusively consisting of Swedes, must reside in Stockholm. A fifth member, the president of the board, is nominated by the government.

The board of directors has in its care the funds of the institution and hands yearly over to the awarders of the prizes the amount to be given away. The value of each prize is on an average $40,000. The distribution of the prizes takes place every year on Dec. 10, the anniversary of Mr. Nobel's death.—Philadelphia Press.

AULD FOOLS' GAMBOL.

The Custom From Which All Fools Day Takes Its Name.

Most people call April 1 all fools' day, whereas it should be auld—i. e., old fools' day. The appellation probably takes its origin from the following superstition:

In druidical times, between 10 and 12 o'clock on the night of April 1, it was customary for all those young women who dared to venture into a sacred grove and to take their stand one behind the other.

At the hooting of an owl they commenced slowly running round and round, to the accompaniment of such words as these:

Ban-man, ban-man,
From berg, back and lea,
Leap high, leap low,
Come and run with me.

Thereupon, side by side with those of the girls destined to be married within the coming year, the phantom of a ban, or white man, appeared, and if any of the girls were going to die within the year a black man was seen. Once while this ceremony was in progress the spirit of a very old, tottering white man put in an appearance and exhibited such emphatic attention to the girl he ran with that the other performers were much amused.

The object of their amusement was subsequently chaffed to such an extent by every one in the village that she fled from the neighborhood, marrying before the year was out a strange chieftain-old enough to be her grandfather.

After this event the ceremony was ironically styled the "auld fools' gambol."—London Answers.

A Ladylike Man

And How He Was Reformed

By THOMAS R. DEAN

"I wish," said my friend Mrs. Scarborough, "that something could be done to bring about a match between Jimmy and Helen Swift."

I smiled inwardly. Jimmy was Mrs. Scarborough's only son. He had been kept under the thumb of a nurse till he was twelve years old and, so far as manliness was concerned, was dwarfed. And yet there was in the boy the material to make a splendid fellow. His mother, not he, was responsible for his condition. Had he not been a boy with a very tender conscience he would have broken away from her, deceived her and made a man of himself. Unfortunately for his manliness—to speak paradoxically—he was very honorable. But it wouldn't do for me to say all this to his mother.

Helen Swift was the reverse of Jimmy Scarborough. She was an athletic girl all over. She held a championship for singles in tennis, was a leader at basketball and was admitted to be the most fearless horseback rider in the county. She had even been up in a flying machine. To bring these two together would seem to be an impossibility. But I was an old friend of the family and had often pitied Jimmy, dressed in fine clothes and tied to his nurse's apron strings, when other boys were climbing trees in flannel shirts and corduroys.

"How would you like to have Jim visit me for awhile?" I asked.

"Oh, I'd be constantly worried for fear he would go out in the wet with his rubbers."

"I'll look out for that."

"And Jimmy is very careless about putting on his overcoat when the wind is chilly."

"I'll see to that too."

The mother didn't ask me my object in soliciting a visit from her son, but since the invitation came on the heels of her expressing a wish that he should marry my ward she inferred that the one might have something to do with the other. So she consented to let him go. I live in the country, where I can be rid of city life and be out of doors most of the time. I'm especially fond of fishing, shooting and all kinds of sports.

Jim Scarborough was just twenty when he came to visit me. It was laughable to watch him. Having been brought up among women, he walked and talked like a woman. Had I not seen the elements of manliness in him, underneath this femininity I would have despaired of making anything masculine out of him. As it was, I felt like one who tries to straighten a young tree that has grown completely out of shape. I knew it would require time to get his girl's ways out of him and stipulated with his mother that he should remain with me a month—June. If he were not incurable I hoped to get him in such condition that he wouldn't go home till he felt inclined—in other words, that he would throw off the motherly yoke and declare his independence. There have been sovereigns who have been kept under a mother's sway for several years after coming of age and wearing the crown. So I had hopes for Jim.

Helen Swift lived near me and loved better to go about with me than men of her own age. When Jim came I took him with me in all my sports and my rambles, and Helen became jealous of him at once since she was left out in the cold.

"You seem very much smitten with that ladylike young man," she said to me, with a toss of her head.

"If you knew of the injustice that has been done him you wouldn't speak so unkindly of him," I replied.

"What injustice?"

I gave her a history of the treatment Jim had received, adding that I knew him to be naturally a splendid, manly, true fellow.

"Do you mean to tell me that such treatment didn't make a liar of him?"

"I do."

"Nor a moral coward?"

"Morally and physically I believe he is as brave as any man."

"Well, he must be a wonder! Do you suppose he'll ever get over his feminine ways?"

"I do. How can you expect a boy to act like a man who has been brought up exclusively with women? I've brought him here to try to make him over, poor fellow!"

"Sad, isn't it?"

"Indeed it is."

"If you'd like any help from me I wouldn't mind giving it to you."

"Thanks very much. It's my object to keep him away from girls—at least for the present."

"Hm! I'm not going to hurt him." Then, after a pause, "How long will 'for the present' last?"

"His mother agreed to let him remain with me a month. At the expiration of that time I hope to have so far improved him that he will—"

"Tell his mother to go to the dickens."

"Something like that. It is quite possible that I may then need your assistance to keep him."

"I'll shame him into staying."

"There's a better way than that."

"What way?"

"You might make yourself an object of interest to him, so that he would prefer to stay with you rather than go back to his mother."

"I never thought of that. But if I'm not to see anything of him in the meantime how can I interest him in myself?"

"Perhaps you are right. But if I permit you to be with him before I have taken some of his feminine ways out of him I fear you will be disgusted with him."

"I'll try not to be."

"Very well. If you'll promise to be patient with him I'll let you help me make him over. I'll bring him to see you tomorrow."

"Never fear. I'll be very careful with him."

I left her quite satisfied with my diplomacy, for I had no fear of her adding to Jim's femininity, believing, on the contrary, that she would be of great assistance to me in my work. But my chief object in enlisting her aid was that I might assist my friend Mrs. Scarborough in bringing about the match she desired.

When I had taken Jim to see Helen I considered that my work was done. I had no especial inclination for it, and since I had given her a definite object to work up to I knew that she could do it where I could not. As to what would result so far as their making a match was concerned, that I must leave to themselves. I refrained from saying a word to either of them on that score, knowing that to do so would rather tend to defeat than aid my object.

It was soon evident that Helen was much interested in her work. She tried him on various sports, beginning with tennis. I watched them play one day and noticed that Jim called the score "15, 30, deuce, advantage, forty, love" with a feminine accent. Helen was trying to speak the words like a man to correct his pronunciation. This showed me that, after all, I must keep Jim with me a part of the time and introduce him to men. This I did and with very good results.

Helen put her pupil through a course of sports, and, strange to say, the exercise seemed to like best was horseback riding. He had never been on a horse's back till he met Helen and found something to interest him in learning to keep his seat in the saddle and manage his horse. There were plenty of ditches, logs and fences for him to take, and after giving him time to get accustomed to the saddle his riding mistress took him out one morning with her and, reaching convenient ground that she had often been on before, led him a chase that was calculated to call out manliness if there was any such stuff in him. He soon lost his hat; his scarf and hair flew out with the wind, and he was obliged to hold on to the pommel of his saddle to keep his seat. But when finally Helen reined in for a rest he declared that he had never experienced anything so fine in his life.

"Are you going back the same way?" he asked.

Helen laughed. "Haven't you had enough for once?"

"No, let's do it again."

As soon as the horses had got their wind they started on their return over the course, Helen leading. But before the end of the race Jim passed her, and every time his horse jumped she feared he would bound so far from his back as to come down in a different place. Having finished the run, Jim proposed to do it once more. Helen, who had had enough of it for one time, not liking to be outdone by her pupil, assented, and they rode the course out and back. By this time Jim had got some control of himself and his horse and made quite a creditable ride of it. But when he proposed a third run Helen, realizing that her strength was not a man's strength, was obliged to give up the leadership.

This was the turning point in the game. A woman may like a man who is faulty, but what she ties to the most readily is strength. From this time forward Helen found her natural place as second to Jim Scarborough, and she never after regained first place, at least not in athletics.

At the end of the month Jim received a letter from his mother stating that she expected him home on a certain day. I knew that the real tug of war was now at hand. He and Helen were in my house when he received the letter, and I overheard them discussing the matter. Jim had never disloyaled his mother before in his life. Helen held out all sorts of inducements to get him to do so. She coaxed, she pleaded, she threatened, all to no purpose.

A woman under such circumstances will not give up. Helen in her eagerness to win went further than she had intended. She did and said everything she could to induce Jim to throw himself into the position of a lover. It came as natural to him as if he had been brought up under manly instead of feminine influences. He caught her in his arms and vowed he loved her infinitely.

"Then choose between me and your mother."

"Mother be hanged!" he cried. "I'll stay with you forever."

Helen would have burst into a laugh, but she dare not lest she offend him beyond forgiveness. How she got out of the position she had taken I don't know, but in the end she didn't get out of it at all, for she married Jim Scarborough, and she never had a case of mother-in-law either.

No one would ever now know Mr. Scarborough for the "ladylike young man" I found him at twenty and whose reform I conducted, though the chief work was effected by another. He is an expert horseman and is quite expert at all athletic games. His feminine expressions and intonations have left him, and he is as manly a fellow as I know among all my acquaintances. All of which goes to show that not all boys who are supposed to be effeminate are so by nature.

Gotham Cuts Out Fireworks

A Fourth of July without fireworks was decided upon last Thursday by the committee which has this year's municipal celebration of the holiday in charge in New York city.

In place of the usual display an effort will be made to make New York the brightest city in America on the night of Independence Day. Of $25,000 voted by the Board of Estimates $10,000 is to be devoted to illuminating parks and prescribed areas.

Other features promised for a "safe-and-sane" observance of the Fourth include several scores of athletic meets throughout the city and distribution of 100,000 copies of Lincoln's Gettysburg address among the children.

Guide to Mount Rainier Park

Full directions regarding the best method of climbing Mount Rainier, which is surrounded by one of the largest glacial systems in the United States radiating from any single peak, are given in a circular entitled "General Information Regarding Mount Rainier National Park, Season of 1913," just issued by the Department of the Interior.

Mount Rainier National Park is situated in western Washington about 51.1 miles southeast of the city of Tacoma. It has an area of 207,360 acres and includes Mount Rainier and all its approaches. Surrounding the mountain are beautiful forests of fir and cedar and in the natural parks below the snow line are luxuriant fields of wild flowers of all colors and descriptions. The park is under the control and supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, who is represented in the actual administration of the park by the superintendent, assisted by a number of park rangers who patrol the reservation.

Between and below the glaciers are numerous open slopes and valleys which are covered with luxuriant growths of grasses, sedge, and flowering plants. These parks are diversified by growths of alpine fir and hemlock and by many small lakes and running streams. They present a pleasing contrast to the snow fields and rugged peaks by which they are surrounded, and are greatly admired by visitors. Paradise Valley is the most frequented of the many parks. The Government road running through this park and for some distance beyond the Camp of the Clouds makes it easily accessible for tourists. Near Paradise Valley and at the headwaters of the Tahoma Fork is Indian Henry's Hunting Ground, so named from the circumstance that it was formerly the favorite resort of a small band of Kheikitat Indians. Grand Park, between the main and west forks of White River, is one of the largest and most beautiful of these open tracts. At the altitude of 8,000 feet it is an almost level grassy plateau, the greater part of which is entirely without timber. Moraine Park, between the Sluiskin Range and the Carbon Glacier, is a small and very attractive mountain valley.

Guaranteed Eczema Remedy

The constant itching, burning, redness, rash and disagreeable effects of eczema, tetter, salt rheum, itch, piles and irritating skin eruptions can be readily cured and the skin made clear and smooth with Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment. Rev. Thos. L. Poulson Dead

Rev. Dr. Thomas Layman Poulson, 82 years old, organizer and first pastor of Harlem Park Methodist Episcopal Church, Baltimore, and well known in the Methodist Episcopal Conference, died Monday last week at the home of his son-in-law, George W. Burnham, at Ridley Park, Pa.

For a number of years Dr. Poulson was pastor of Bethany Methodist Episcopal Church, Calhoun and Lexington streets, before he took up the work of organizing Harlem Park Church. At the celebration in 1911 of the reconstruction of Harlem Park Church after the fire that destroyed the building he preached at one of the week night services.

He was a strong advocate of temperance, and his son, Rev. Marna S. Poulson, was assistant superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in Maryland before he was transferred to Nebraska.

THE JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY

State Scholarships in Engineering Courses

Applications for scholarships in the Department of Engineering, established in the Johns Hopkins University under the provisions of the Laws of Maryland Chapter 90, 1912 should now be made.

Entrance examinations for all students will be held in McCoy Hall, The Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, on June 25th to 27th and on September 30th to October 2d, 1913, beginning at 9 a. m. Applicants for scholarships are urged to take the examinations in June. If there is more than one applicant for a particular scholarship a competitive examination will be held at the University as soon as possible after the autumn examinations.

In addition to certain collegiate scholarships and scholarships at large, the Act provides for 102 scholarships to be apportioned among the counties and legislative districts of Baltimore city, the same number of awards so far as possible to be made each year. The undergraduate courses in Engineering will extend through four years and it has been determined to offer 35 of these scholarships in the year 1913 and 1914. Allegany, Baltimore, Frederick and Washington counties and the four legislative districts of Baltimore city will each be entitled to two scholarships, and each of the other counties to one scholarship in October 1913. Six scholarships at large may also be awarded at that time.

Applicants for scholarships should address the Registrar, The Johns Hopkins University for the blank forms of application and for further information as to the examination and the award of scholarships.

SUFFRAGISTS AND ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS

The fundamental principle of our Republic is this: In deciding what is to be done, where everybody's interests are concerned, we take everybody's opinions and then decide according to the wish of the majority as expressed through the casting of votes.

In getting at the wish of the majority certain persons, whose opinions evidently are not worth counting, are passed over.

In Maryland these persons are idiots, lunatics, criminals (not pardoned) and women.

Maryland Suffragists believe women's opinions are worth counting and want to be promoted from a class made up of the outscourings of the earth to the dignity of citizenship.

Anti-Suffragists are not only willing to be ranked politically with the cursed and degraded, but publicly plead and petition against promotion. They do not want their own opinions counted and they are endeavoring to prevent other women's opinions from being counted.

The Cliff Dwellings

Of The Mesa Verde

General descriptions of the ancient cliff dwellings in the canyons of southwestern Colorado are contained in a circular entitled "General Information regarding the Mesa Verde National Park, Season of 1913," recently issued by the Department of the Interior. In this park are about 300 cliff dwellings of which only the three largest have been repaired. The largest ruin, called Cliff Palace, stands about a thousand feet above the bottom of the canyon and 300 feet below the top of the ledge. All the houses connect and open into one another, the entire settlement forming a crescent about 300 feet in length from end to end.

As we contemplate these silent ruins it is hard to believe that at one time they resounded with the hum of industry, the laughter of children, the droning of priests, and the strident cry of the sentinels calling the warriors to battle. The dwellers of these abandoned communities have left no written record, but the shape of the structures and the relics that have been dug from the debris of centuries give some idea of how these people lived and moved and had their being. The main houses were built on a ledge close to its front and back of this was an open space that answered the purpose of a court, a street, a playground or a place for industrial pursuits, such as weaving and pottery making. At intervals along the front were towers and bastions and in the interior were kivas or secret chambers used for religious ceremonies. In every village were storehouses for a supply of provisions in times of war or failure of crops.

The circular, which may be obtained free from the Department of the Interior, contains information regarding the accommodations in the park, plans of the principal ruins, list of magazine articles, and the rules and regulations promulgated for the protection of the reservation.

Ex-Tax Collector Anderson Sued

The County Commissioners of Worcester county have brought suit against Henry J. Anderson, Collector of Taxes for Worcester county for 1908 and 1909, claiming a balance due for those years aggregating $18,000, as shown by the bill of particulars filed with the declaration.

Mr. Anderson was also collector for 1906 and 1907, but it is said the accounts for those years have been settled. Mr. Anderson admits that he is indebted to the county for a considerable sum, but claims he is entitled to credits and allowances for commissions and insolvencies.

It is admitted by the County Commissioners that Mr. Anderson is entitled to such credits, but it is declared that burden is on him to show the extent and nature of such claims. When they are properly presented he will be given credit for them, it is said. The County Commissioners are represented by John W. Staton and Mr. Anderson by Wm. F. Johnson.

THE THREE CHAUFFEURS

A Delightful Entertainment By Home Talent at the Auditorium Friday Night

The "Three Chauffeurs," given by local talent under the management of Miss E. June Breimeir, was well rendered at the Auditorium last Friday night. The cast of characters was as follows:

The Three Chauffeurs—Kitty Kennedy, Marion Stanford; Marvin Hunter, Milton Walls; Lorry Spencer, the host, Howard T. Ruhl; Mrs. Lorry Spencer, the hostess, Amanda Lankford; Gertrude Castleton, masquerading as Melinda Pike, Irene Taylor; Betty Marshall, Caryle Weaver; Lois Drummond, Olive Dashiell; Jane Armstrong, Mildred Beauchamp; Lucille Beverly, Emily Dashiell; Minta Morris, Elizabeth Beauchamp; Eugenia Allen, Aline Wallop; Mary Smith, Mary Miles Dashiell; Patience Primrose, Elva Armstrong; Mrs. Spencer, the mother-in-law, Lettie Long; Lieutenant Beverly Churchill, U. S. A., Morris Adams; Norah, the cook, Eloise McAllen; Annie, the maid, Martha Stanford.

The accompanist was Mrs. J. D. Wallop and the following musical numbers were rendered: "The Dollies' Party," "Cry Baby," "You Can't Guess What He Wrote on My Slate," "My Merry Oldsmobile," "The Love Bells," "The Little Girl in Blue," "The Fascinating Widow," and "Sailor Boy."

The proceeds were for the benefit of the Princess Anne Public Library and the sum of $35.50 was netted.

Encouraging For the Women

United States Senator Ashurst submitted on Friday the report of the Woman's Suffrage Committee recommending passage of the Chamberlain resolution for a constitutional amendment extending suffrage to women.

"In this country," says the report, "the people constitute the Government. They are its creators and its maintenance, they are the Government. That the granting of the elective franchise to women would add to the strength, efficiency, justice and fairness of government, we have not the slightest doubt."

"It is anomalous and archaic in a free republic, professedly made up of, controlled by and administered for all the people, to deny to one-half of its citizens the right of exercising a valuable function of citizenship, to wit, the elective franchise, thus precluding that one-half from the right and power to say what law or policy shall be its rule of conduct. And this anomaly becomes odious and abhorrent when we reflect that the particular half of citizenship thus excluded is the identical one-half from which springs so much wisdom, courage, cheer, hope and good counsel."

Senator Ashurst said he would use forceful energies to secure a vote on the resolution at the special session, but that he would not press it in such a way as to arouse opposition or interfere with tariff legislation.

Mrs. Mary E. Ellis Dead

Mrs. Mary Emma Ellis, widow of the late George J. Ellis, of Pocomoke City, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary V. West Maloney, in Salisbury, on Monday of last week. The deceased was 74 years of age, and was the daughter of James M. and Sallie Anne (Powell) Landing, of Pitts Creek, Worcester county. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon in St. Mary's Church, Pocomoke City. In the absence of the rector, Rev. L. L. Williams, Rev. Dr. C. H. Weaver, of Princess Anne, conducted the service. Interment was in the cemetery adjoining the church. The pallbearers were her grandsons—Messrs. Herman Ellis, William Ellis, and Harry Ellis, of Pocomoke City; Messrs. Charles T. West, of New Church, Va.; C. C. West, of Delmar, Del.; and Arthur B. West, of Salisbury.

$400 for Wrecked Schooner

On March 24th last the steamer Maryland came to her wharf at Crisfield, passing in the harbor the schooner "T. D. Purnell," the property of E. Patterson Holland, of Fairmount. In going out the same evening the Maryland collided with the "Purnell" doing damage to her hull and carrying off her gasoline yawl, which has never been found. Mr. Holland, after attempting vainly to settle, through Thomas S. Hodson, of Crisfield, issued a libel against the steamer through the United States Court, at Baltimore, and summoned his witnesses for trial on the 15th inst. The case was, however, compromised last week, the steamboat company paying $400 damages and all costs of suit and the case marked agreed and settled.

The Cynical Bachelor rises to remark that if there were more husbands, there would be fewer suffragettes.

DINNER FOR THE EDITORS

Wilmington Chamber of Commerce Will Blow Itself on the 23d of June

The Chamber of Commerce, Delaware, wants the people of the Peninsula to understand that if the Peninsula editors' dinner to be given on Monday, June 23rd, is a boost function, it is primarily a Peninsula boost and any benefits which may come to Wilmington are only contemplated as an essential share of what may come as the result of the discovery for the people of the Eastern United States of the wonderful possibilities of the land which is enclosed by the waters of the Chesapeake and Delaware Bays.

The dinner is intended to bring representative men of the region together and the discussion is expected to bring about a better understanding of the ways and means to let the people of the east know what a really marvelous country the Eastern Shore is.

There are many considerations which would justify such a movement as we would initiate. Our Peninsula is within five hundred miles of one half the population of the United States. This population comprises a people with a greater purchasing power than any like number of people in the world, therefore, it affords the best market in the world for the market gardener. The lands of the Peninsula will raise abundantly and with unequalled flavor all the products of the temperate zone. We wish to use the dinner to exploit these facts and others to the world.

Investigation in progress and completed go to demonstrate that the irrigated lands of the west have no superiority in productivity over the lands of the east where the rain fall makes expensive irrigation plants unnecessary. The unsurpassed markets quickly available to this Peninsula, the facilities of our climate and environment, and the responsive nature of our soil is sure in the near future to turn settlers in our direction.

Beside this we have a number of other considerations more local in their nature which it will be well worth our while to talk about with the end in view of co-operation. There are the questions of better railway facilities; good roads reclamation and drainage, any of which would justify the coming of the people of the Peninsula together to work for a common purpose.

Packages C. O. D. Mail

Instructions to postmasters were issued last week for handling of C. O. D. parcel post packages. The regulations will be effective July 1st.

Charges on packages will be collected from addressees on and after that date provided the amount on a single parcel does not exceed $100. The fee for collection will be 10 cents in parcel post stamps to be affixed by the sender. This fee also will insure the package against loss to the actual value of the contents not exceeding $50.

The sender will get a receipt showing the amount to be collected, the amount also appearing on a tag attached to the package. The addressee will receipt for the package on the tag, which will serve as an application for a money order. C. O. D. parcels may be accepted for mailing by rural carriers and will be delivered by city and rural carriers and special delivery messengers. Such packages will not be mailable either to the Philippines or to the Canal Zone.

Free Wedding Offer Fails

The efforts of Rev. J. Franklin Bryan, pastor of South Baltimore Methodist Protestant Church, to dispel the hoodoo which is supposed to hover around Friday the 13th by offering to perform marriage ceremonies gratis met with failure last Friday, for not a single couple presented themselves at the parsonage.

One young man timidly confided to Mr. Bryan that he would supply the time and the place if Mr. Bryan would supply the girl. The preacher, however, was unable to act upon such short notice.

"An ice-cream man declared that he would aid Mr. Bryan to shatter the double hoodoo of Friday, the 13th, 1913, by giving any couple that summoned up nerve enough to get married all the ice-cream they wanted. But even this inducement failed.

Thus saith the Baltimore Sun.

Pick Women's College Site

After deliberating for two months, the Women's Affiliated College Commission last week decided on the Charles F. Wollaston farm as the location for the new institution. There are 18 acres of the property, about half a mile from Newark, Del., and the price was $9000. The commission at once authorized its secretary to advertise for competitive plans for two fireproof buildings, one a residence hall and the other a science laboratory, not to cost more than $125,000. Prizes of $1000 will be offered for the best five sets of plans. Ground was broken for the institution on June 16th, which was Farmers' day at the State Farm.

NEGRO KILLS A NEGRO

Edward Ford Shoots Albert Henderson on Smith's Island and Ford Is Now In Jail

Edward Ford, colored, a native of Baltimore city, was taken to Crisfield from Smith's Island, Monday morning of last week and taken before Justice W. C. Britton on a charge of manslaughter. He was given a preliminary hearing and held for the action of the Somerset county grand jury.

According to the story of witnesses, several negroes were indulging in some kind of a yard game at Tylertop, on the lower point of Smith's Island, Sunday afternoon. After playing for awhile it was Ford's time to be the "goat," and instead of standing for his end of the game, he ran into the house and procuring a shotgun, returned and started for the negroes. He shot Albert Henderson through the neck, killing him instantly, and a few shot struck George Washington, injuring him slightly. Deputy Sheriff Archie Marsh took Ford to Crisfield for the hearing. Some of the witnesses assert that the killing was an accident, but the justice made it a charge of manslaughter and held the negro. He was lodged in the county jail at Princess Anne by Sheriff Tull Monday evening of last week.

Who Will Control the Senate?

For the first time in the history of the American government the election of a legislature, not only in Maryland, but in all other States, will this year be free of a national political bias. This innovation is due to the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people. No longer can an appeal be made that a voter in marking his ballot has national issues before him. The State legislature is really placed upon the same basis as a City Council, with this distinction—that, while the City Council is the legislative body of a city, animated, or ought to be animated, without political bias, the legislature will be a state body animated, or ought to be animated, without political bias, a body devoted entirely to the best interests of the state without the interjection of political interests.

The following are the hold-over senators: Anne Arundel—Joseph H. Bellis, Dem.; Baltimore City—First district—Charles P. Coady, Dem. Second district—Peter J. Campbell, Dem. Third district—W. Milnes Maloy, Dem. Baltimore County—Carville D. Benson, Dem. Calvert—Alexander B. Duke, Rep. Carroll—Richard Smith Snader, Rep. Frederick—John P. T. Mathias, Rep. Howard—E. M. Hammond, Dem. Kent—William W. Beck, Dem. Queen Annes—John Frank Harper, Dem. Somerset—Lewis Morris Milbourne, Dem.

Washington—Samuel Emmert, Rep. Wicomico—Jesse D. Price, Dem. The vacancies to be filled are: Fourth district of Baltimore, Caroline, Cecil, Charles, Dorchester, Garrett, Harford, Montgomery, Prince Georges, St. Marys, Talbot and Worcester.

Of the hold-over senators the Republicans are Messrs. Duke, of Calvert; Snader, of Carroll; Mathias, of Frederick; and Memmet, of Washington, a total of five. The Democratic hold-over senators are: Messrs. Coady, Campbell, and Maloy, of Baltimore city; Benson, of Baltimore county; Hammond, of Howard; Beck, of Kent; Harper, of Queen Annes; Milbourne, of Somerset; and Price, of Wicomico, a total of 10.

In order to secure control of the Senate, it will be necessary for the Republicans to elect nine new senators in November. The counties and the Baltimore city district from which new senators are to be elected are as follows: The city district is the Fourth, and the counties are—Caroline, Cecil, Charles, Dorchester, Garrett, Harford, Montgomery, Prince Georges, St. Marys, Talbot and Worcester.

Famine of Beef

Prices of beef took another jump last week. On the same day the Department of Agriculture issued a warning that the supply of beef and other meats is not equal to the demand and cannot be made equal, except by importing, for at least three or four years to come. While the population is increasing, the number of beef animals is rapidly falling off. A new supply of beef cannot be produced in a day, nor in a year. It takes at least three years, oftener four, to bring a steer to beef condition, and even at present high prices there is very little profit in it.

MARYLAND'S NEW FRUIT

The Chesapeake Strawberry and the Monocacy Apple are Attracting Attention

Annually for the past 12 years the Department of Agriculture has issued a statement inviting attention to "promising new fruits," which are little known among fruit-growers and are believed to possess qualities that make them inherently valuable in their places of origin and worthy of testing elsewhere.

This year seven new varieties are enumerated and two of the seven are from Maryland. Announcement of the selection was made by the Secretary of Agriculture in connection with the issuance of the annual year book of the department. The announcement was prepared by William A. Taylor, pomologist and chief, and H. P. Gould, the pomologist in charge of fruit district investigations of the Bureau of Plant Industry.

The seven promising new fruits in this year's list are the Eastman apple, which has been developed in Iowa; the Monocacy apple, which has been developed in Maryland; the Summer King apple, which has been brought out in Kentucky; the Douglas pear, which has been raised in Douglas county, Kan.; the Chesapeake strawberry, which has been originated in Maryland; the Ormond persimmon, which has been produced in Florida, and the Pollock Avocado or Alligator pear, which a Florida grower has raised from a tree of Cuban origin.

The Chesapeake strawberry originated as a chance seedling of unknown parentage with George W. Parks, of Nanticoke, Wicomico county, Md. The site of its origin was on Nanticoke Point, within a short distance of Chesapeake Bay; hence its name, which was selected by the introducer in 1906, when the variety was originally offered to the trade.

"The plants are vigorous," says the announcement now made by the Department of Agriculture inviting the attention of the world to the Chesapeake strawberry, "with thick, leathery, lustrous foliage, which is borne on upright leafstalks. The plant is not prolific of runners, but under most conditions enough so for fruit purposes. The blossoms are perfect; the flower trusses rather short, but erect. It sets only a moderate quantity of fruit, but the tendency for every berry that forms to develop into a perfect specimen is exceptionally strong."

"The Chesapeake strawberry has been planted in many sections since it was introduced and apparently with quite uniformly satisfactory results. It appears to be one of the most valuable newer varieties."

The description of this berry given by the government experts states that it is of a rich crimson color, tender, moist, but firm texture, unusually solid, juicy, of rich flavor and pleasant aroma, and that the berries are all rather large, being more than an inch long.

As to the other Maryland fruit product which is honored with a place in this year's federal announcement of "promising new fruits," the government's bulletin says in part: "The Monocacy apple is one of the many examples of fruit varieties that apparently possess great potential possibilities and have long been grown in very restricted regions, where they are highly esteemed, but which remain quite unknown to fruit-growers generally."

"Though this variety has become more widely distributed in recent years, it remains very largely unknown except in the northeastern portion of Frederick and the western part of Carroll county, Md. It is to be found in many small home orchards in this region, where in most cases its distribution has been by means of scions top-worked into trees of bearing age. The original trees died some years ago, having been greatly weakened, it is said, from the cutting of scions from it."

The Monocacy apple is described by the government as being of roundish form, of yellowish green color, almost entirely over-spread with dark crimson, shading to a purplish crimson in a very highly-colored specimen, splashed and striped with darker crimson, with an over-spread of mottled gray in many specimens. Its skin is moderately thick, tenacious and firm; its flesh yellowish white, sometimes slightly tinted with red, its texture fine grained. It is a juicy apple, with a mild, subacid, pleasant and moderately rich flavor. Its quality is described as "good to very good."

It is prized by those who know the variety best for culinary and dessert purposes. It is a winter season apple, keeping till late winter and well into the spring. It is an excellent variety for cold storage. The tree is long-lived and a heavy bearer.

To Entertain Fruit Growers

The firm of J. C. Harrison & Sons, nurserymen, of Berlin will entertain on the lawn of Mayor Orlando Harrison, in Berlin, the Maryland State Horticultural Society and the Peninsula Horticultural Society, on July 31st. Invitations will be extended to members and officers of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Virginia and West Virginia Horticultural societies.

LEASING OYSTER BEDS

Oystermen's Association Appeals to State Board of Public Works for Help

An appeal to the Board of Public Works to advise the State Shellfish Commission not to lease additional oyster bottoms in Somerset and Dorchester counties until relief can be secured from the legislature was made last Thursday by the Oystermen's Protective Association of Maryland. The board was importuned to act on the grounds that the commission has in the above two counties used natural oyster bars for leasing purposes through errors in the surveys made in 1906 and last year.

There were present at the meeting, which was held in the Union Trust Building, Baltimore, the three members of the Shellfish Commission, Chief Engineer Swenson Earle, Capt. C. C. Yates, of the United States Coast Survey, who had part in the surveys; Capt. Thomas C. B. Howard, of the Oyster Navy, and James E. Ellegood, of Salisbury, and former Judge W. Laird Henry, of Cambridge, appeared as counsel for the protesting oystermen. The oystermen—about 50 from Somerset and Dorchester counties—a number of whom spoke before the board, and their counsel contended that in making the surveys the commission's engineers had made mistakes and included in the reserved territory bars which should have been left open.

Mr. Earle told the board that he had made earnest efforts to make the surveys accurate and to protect the natural bars, because he foresaw dissension when the surveys were established. He explained to the board that he had endeavored to obtain extra men familiar with the oyster grounds for his surveys in order to give the greatest protection to the rights of the oystermen. At the same time he said the engineers were only human and that mistakes might have been made.

Judge Henry pointed out, the oystermen were confident that members of the commission would heed the advice of the Governor, the State Comptroller and State Treasurer if the latter were convinced that a grave injustice was being done. The attorney then pointed out conditions in the waters of Dorchester in an attempt to show that much of the natural rock of that section is now regarded as leaseable property.

Mr. Ellegood followed with the statement that 1,700 acres of bed in Somerset had already been leased to 17 Baltimoreans and that much of this was natural rock. While he said he did not believe the commission has authority to revoke these leases he said that body could aid matters by refusing to lease another 1,700 acres on the west side of the sound, which has also been applied for.

The Board in the late afternoon went into executive session and adopted resolutions which provide that the Shellfish Commission shall on complaint of oystermen make recommendations of oyster grounds, and on finding that areas concerning which complaints have been made are shown to be natural oyster rocks they shall be withheld from leasing till the Legislature shall have had opportunity to order a correction of the survey.

Wilson Too Busy To Rest

President Wilson will go to Cornish, N. H., June 28th, to install his family in the "Summer White House." The President will stay at Cornish over the Fourth, returning to Washington, July 5th. He does not expect to take his vacation until late in September or early October. In fact, he is not sure he is going to get a vacation.

The President told Colonel George W. Goethals, who called at the White House Thursday that he hoped to be able to visit the Panama Canal before Colonel Goethals turned water into the "ditch," which the latter said he intended doing about October 1st. He told the President that if by the date finally set for turning the water in the canal the President was not ready he would defer turning the water for a couple of weeks in order that the President might see the canal in its construction state.

Advertising Clubs Convention

The ninth annual convention of the Associated Clubs of America finished its business in Baltimore last Friday and adjourned to meet at Toronto next year. William Woodhead, of San Francisco, was elected president; Walter B. Cherry, of Syracuse, N. Y., vice-president; P. S. Flores, of Indianapolis, secretary, and T. D. La Quette, of Des Moines, Iowa, treasurer.

WILSON HAS MADE GOOD

Three Months' Administration Vindicates Peoples' Faith In Him

The first three months of the Wilson administration have vindicated absolutely the faith which the President's friends had in his ability to meet the conditions which his party faced when it assumed complete control of the executive and legislative branches of the Government.

In any review of the achievements of the first quarter of the first year's work the fact must be remembered that the opportunities which the administration has had been limited. They have been limited on the one hand by time and on the other by the President's insistence that one thing at a time should be his program.

In spite of this, however, it has been clearly demonstrated that the pledges of the party given at Baltimore and accepted at sea Girt will be carried out. The President has stood firm in every contest over them and Congress has sustained him. Together they have worked out the policies which are to guide them during the coming four years.

In the first place, the President has remained true to his promise to give the country the benefit of a revised tariff. He has been assailed by the interests whose special privileges are curtailed; he has been threatened by Wall street; he has been warned even by members of his own party, but he has not wavered once.

Tariff revision is now practically an accomplished fact. The Senate, which was looked to as it was always looked to, for protective duties which the House would not allow, has been trained into line for even the Wilson program. It has so far even outdone the House in lowering duties. It has placed live stock and wheat on the free list, after the House had voted a duty on them. It has virtually accepted free sugar and free wool. It has left lumber on the free list and resisted the clamor of a lobby which demanded protection on this or that commodity.

The Senate as a whole has not voted, it is true, upon the bill, but the result of that vote is a foregone conclusion. The bill, will be passed just as insisted upon by the President. The Underwood bill, with a few modifications, will be passed and signed by Mr. Wilson, and the paramount pledge of the party will be put into effect.

Furthermore, the President has himself disregarded all the petty restraints which heretofore hedged the Chief Executive. He has cut loose from the old policy of secrecy of action; from the old tradition that a President had no right to visit the Capitol; from the older precedent that Congress had the right and not the President to name officeholders.

He has exposed the powerful lobby that is seeking to defeat his tariff program. He has refused to leave Washington while official business demanded his presence here. He delivered a message in person to Congress. He has met successfully a serious foreign complication.

All this and much more he has done in three months. And as it is almost daily remarked in Washington he has not made one single blunder. All this has been accomplished without any of the frightful results which were predicted. Business has not been disturbed. The threatened panic has not materialized. The country has not been plunged into a state of revolution. Nobody can say what the future will bring forth, but it is a simple matter to see that the past is met the expectations of the President's supporters.—J. E. F., Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun.

Crops Not Much Hurt

Officials of the Department of Agriculture believe that there will be no great or widespread damage to crops as a result of the unseasonably cold weather which prevailed last week over much of the country.

No official reports have as yet been received by the department, but the experts Tuesday expressed the opinion that there need be no fear of a fruit or vegetable famine and probably no great harm would be done to the corn and other crops. The early spring planting and the favorable condition of these crops are counted upon to offset any effect the weather may have.

Temperatures below the freezing point were reported to the Weather Bureau Tuesday from Central Pennsylvania and points in New Jersey. Frosts were general throughout the mountains of Virginia and Maryland. Reports from points all the way from Vermont and Wisconsin told of frosts of more or less severity.

How I Came to Marry

By ALLAN G. LAMOND

In the gold hunting days I went out to the gold fields to make a fortune. I fell in with a young man of my own age, Elliot Mansfield, and we agreed to prospect together. Mansfield had left a mother and sister, to whom he was much attached. Unfortunately his mother had received an injury to one of her eyes, and since her son's departure for the west it had extended to the other eye, and she was gradually becoming blind.

The letters she wrote Mansfield were pathetic. She hoped that he might be with her again, but she did not hope to see him. His sister wrote him that, if possible, he should come home that his mother might see him once more before losing her sight. But he had no money for the journey, and if he could get home he would not be able to get back again. He was a resolute fellow and averse to giving up what he had undertaken—namely, to go back, if ever he did go back, with a fortune.

I was no better off than Mansfield. We wandered about with picks on our shoulders wherever we believed there might be gold and at last succeeded in striking dirt that promised to pay. While we were getting it into shape to secure capital with which to work it Mansfield was taken sick. He was ill a long while, and during this time I wrote letters for him to his mother and sister. In these letters, at his request, I forged his handwriting, that they might not suspect that he was unable to write them himself. Furthermore, he charged me to tell them that he had struck a mine of value and would soon go east with a view to forming a company to work it.

The poor fellow did not recover. He asked me before he died to make over his share in our mine to his mother and sister and if possible go east, as he had hoped to do, and either sell the mine or organize a company, as I might be able. Dreading the shock of his death on his mother, he asked me to keep up the deception till I should go east and arrange with his sister for breaking the sad news to his mother.

I found an opportunity to sell out for $50,000 and availed myself of it. If I had held on to the property would have made me very rich, but I was tired of the deception I was practicing and knew my late partner's mother and sister were very poor. Taking their share of the proceeds with me, I went at once to the town in which they lived. On my arrival I sent a messenger to Miss Mansfield to tell her that her brother's partner had arrived with news of him, but cautioning her to say nothing about me to her mother until I had had an opportunity to see her. She appointed a meeting with me at the home of one of her friends. I went there and told her the bad news I had for her.

To her grief was added the fact that her mother, who had now become quite blind, was looking for her son every day. Her daughter—Mildred was her name—was in agony at the idea of imparting the news to her. She could not think of doing so at the time, for the old lady was not in a condition to bear it. So we arranged between us that until she was better I was to write letters as before, putting off the son and brother's arrival.

Mildred Mansfield was a very lovely girl. I sympathized with her deeply, and it was a matter of satisfaction that I was enabled to turn over to her her brother's share in what I had realized for the mine.

One day, desiring to consult with Mildred, I went to her house to see her. I could see no risk of revealing the true situation in doing so. But the old lady, who was in her room above, heard my voice below and got it into her head that I was her son. The idea occurred to Mildred of permitting her mother to believe me to be her son, and I saw no objection to the plan. So I went upstairs and submitted to a hugging and weeping that were almost hysterical.

"The mine is sold, mother," I said. "and my share is $25,000. It's all in bank right here in this town."

"I'm very happy," she said through her tears, "though I can't see you. You must stay here always, and so long as I live neither you nor your sister must marry, but live here for me and each other."

Mildred was too embarrassed by this to make a reply, so I was obliged to make it myself.

"Yes, mother. We will live only for you and each other."

TRICKY ANIMALS.

Some Are Simply Fakers, While Others Are Real Criminals.

"There are crooks among animals, just as among men," said a nature student. "Take, for example, the horse. A horse looks very noble, very honest, eh? Yet time and again a horse will feign lameness in one leg or the other because he knows that when he's lame his boss will let him loaf."

"One responsible writer tells about a chimpanzee that they once fed on cake and wine when he had a cold. The rascal fakes up a bad cough in the hope of getting more wine and cake."

"Many birds are tricky and some are notorious thieves, particularly the raven and the crow. But the cuckoo is the worst. The cuckoo is too flighty a lady to be willing to sit in a nest and hatch out eggs, so she lays in the nests of other birds, one here and one there, and, by Jove, to complete the deception she abstracts an egg from the nest she lays in so that the addition of her own egg won't be noticed."

"A criminal—not a common crook—is the Australian parrot. Once a vegetarian, this foul bird now lights on a sheep's back and, standing where the sheep cannot reach him, he hacks his way down to the liver, which he eats. Sheep murdered by parrots for their liver constitute one of the grave losses of Australian farming."—New York Tribune

FOREIGN BORN WOMEN.

How They May Become Naturalized, Married or Single.

A foreign born unmarried woman may become a citizen by being naturalized. To do this she must be twenty-one years of age and have lived five years in this country, one full year of which has been lived in the state in which she makes her application. Or she can marry a man who is a citizen, for the wife's citizenship follows the husband, and she continues to retain her citizenship if she continues to reside in the United States, unless she renounces the sovereignty of the United States.

A foreign born woman living in the United States whose husband is a foreigner, who refuses to become naturalized, cannot become a citizen unless separated from him by divorce or death.

A native born woman who marries a foreigner loses her citizenship during the time of the married relation, but upon the death of her husband or divorce from him she may resume her citizenship by registering, within one year with the American consul in the country of her residence a declaration that she desires to do so, or she may resume it by returning to the United States to reside.—New York Post.

A War Trick of the Great Hannibal.

When Hannibal, the great Carthaginian, was fighting Eumenes of Pergamum with a fleet of very inferior strength he hit upon an artifice which would scarcely be sanctioned by the laws of what we are pleased to call civilized warfare. He discovered by means of a bogus message under a flag of truce on which ship the king was then caused poisonous snakes to be inclosed in earthen jars. These he distributed among several ships and ordered them to close up on the king's galleys. In the melee that followed the jars were flung unto the deck. The curious bombs were greeted at first with ridicule, which soon changed to panic when the nature of their contents made itself manifest. The galleys were extricated from the fight as soon as possible, and the captains of the others, believing that the king had taken flight, followed suit, with the result that Hannibal gained a complete victory.

Entomological.

Charles had heard much at home and at school about the best way to insure good health and, although only nine years old, had taken great interest in the subject. The other day he told his mother that he wanted to go to a lecture that night. Much amused, she asked him what it was about.

"You know, mother, it is about how to take care of yourself. I can't think of the name of it, but you know."

"Maybe I do," she said, "but I can't tell unless you give me a better idea about it."

"Well, mother," he said thoughtfully, "it is about two bugs and a locust."

For a moment she was at sea, and then it dawned upon her that his "two bugs and a locust" was tuberculosis.—New York Post.

Complaint.

"You are always complaining about the taxpayer."

"Yes, I sympathize with the masses."

"How much do you pay in the way of taxes?"

"My dear sir, that has nothing to do with the case. The man who is paying a whole lot of taxes is usually so busy that he hasn't time to do his own complaining."—Washington Star.

Three Ideas of Nothing.
In an Irish school not long ago a schoolteacher asked a class, to define "nothing." He wrote the question on the blackboard and did so quickly and rather carelessly. A little red headed fellow's hand shot up.

"Well, Thady, what is nothing?" said the teacher. "You may tell us."

"It's the dot on the I ye've just for gotten to make, sor!" was the trifle, phant reply.

An equally good definition was that of the lad who declared that nothing was "a footless stocking without a leg." He, too, was Irish. Less imaginative, but no less convincing, was the mercenary definition given by a cann "chiel" in Scotland.

"It's when a man asks ye to hand his horse," he explained ruefully, "and then just says, 'Thank ye!'"

Down From Noah.

The smaller a nation the longer the pedigree of the native. Thus every Scotsman of decent lineage is descended from the Bruce, every Irishman from the Red Kings, and every Welsh man from Noah. The last claim has been made for the family of the late Lord Tredgar. Cox, writing in 1800, when touring in Monmouthshire, wrote that "fanciful genealogists derive the origin of the Morgans from the third son of Noah," but that there was a division of opinion in favor of the first son.—London Standard.

Order Nisi.

In the matter of the tax sale of real estate in East Princess Anne Election District of Somerset county, assessed to Robert Cottman, made and reported by H. Clay Tull, collector of State and County taxes for the First Collection District of Somerset county for the year 1909. Milton L. Vasey, purchaser, ex parte.

In the Circuit Court for Somerset county. No. 2825, Chancery.

Whereas a certain H. Clay Tull, collector of State and County taxes for the First Collection District of Somerset county, in the State of Maryland, for the year 1909, has reported to the Circuit Court for Somerset county, a sale made by him to Milton L. Vasey, of all that lot or parcel of land lying and being in East Princess Anne Election District of said county, in the State of Maryland, containing 8 acres, more or less, with the improvements thereon, situated on the county road leading from Princess Anne to Plunkett's Bridge, adjoining the land of the late B. E. Lanford, conveyed to Miria Cottman et al. by Robert Cottman by deed dated June 14th, 1881, recorded in Liber B. F. L., No. 5, folio 46, and assessed to Robert Cottman on the assessment books of said Election district for the year 1909, and sold for the payment of taxes due and in arrears, together with all the proceedings had in relation thereto; and whereas upon examination it appears to the said Court, that the said proceedings are regular, and that the provisions of the law in relation thereto have been complied with.

Now it is therefore ordered, by the Circuit Court for Somerset county, in Equity, this 27th day of May, in the year 1913, that notice be given by the publication of this order once a week for three successive weeks in the "MARYLANDER AND HERALD," a weekly newspaper published in Somerset county, before the 25th day of June next, warning all persons interested in the said real estate to appear in this Court on or before the 30th day of June next, to show cause, if any they have, why said sale should not be ratified and confirmed.

The report states the amount of sales to be $40.00.

THREE WORDS

Lawyer Received $10,000
For "Stop! Look! Listen!"

By HOLLAND.
WORDS are wonderful things. A Chicago publisher displays in his windows the legend, "Words are the only things that live forever."

A lawyer was once asked by the president of a railroad to suggest a sign that could be posted at railroad crossings—something that would prevent accidents and would also be effective in defending damage suits when accidents occurred.

He suggested the three words, "Stop! Look! Listen!" He received a fee of $10,000, and his suggestion was worth it because those words, posted at grade crossings, prevented many accidents.

Do you believe in signs? And do you obey them when you see them? Do you stop, look and listen? You ought to, because by watching these warnings as they appear in our advertising columns you can

AVOID BEING SWINDLED BY SUBSTITUTES.

Starved Himself to Death.

Hunger strike records were broken some years ago by a Frenchman named Granie, who was arrested for murder in circumstances which left no doubt as to his guilt. He determined to starve himself to death in order to escape the guillotine and from the day of his arrest refused to eat. In spite of every effort on the part of the prison authorities, who first tried tempting him to eat by placing the most dainty meals in his cell and when that failed attempted forcible feeding, Granie held out for sixty-three days at the end of which time he died.

A Renewed Struggle.

"My old barber has left the city." "You seem very regretful." "Yes; he had been trying to sell me a bottle of hair tonic for the past fifteen years, and so far I had succeeded in standing him off. Now I shall have to start the battle all over with a new man."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Grave Danger.

"Madam, your pet Pekinese spaniel bit one of the children on the street in the face this morning." "Good heavens, my poor little dog! I know none of the children about here have their faces antiseptically washed."—Baltimore American.

EVILS OF EYE STRAIN.

Some of Them Are Headaches, Dizziness and Indigestion.

When a child begins to screw up its eyes to elevate and depress its eyebrows, to wrinkle its forehead, to blink to push forward its head when looking at things, then suspect eye strain. Among the many troubles caused by eye strain are headaches, dizziness, indigestion and so called bilious attacks.

Eye strain is really a weariness of the many nerves that supply the small muscles of the eyes. If there be any abnormal optical conditions, such as errors of refraction, found in myopia or shortsightedness and hyperopia, or long sightedness, imperfect balance of the ocular muscles and astigmatism of the cornea, these muscles try their best to correct the trouble, but soon tire of the effort and give it up, when the blurred images of irregular diffusion are left to irritate the retina. As one-fourth of all the cranial nerves are devoted to the eyes one can scarcely wonder that headaches are the result of eye strain. That backwardness in school work is often due to eye strain is well known to up to date educators.

It is claimed by some medical men that the majority of children who are rated as mentally defective are not suffering from weakness of intellect, but from defective sight, that can be cured by glasses.—New York World.

THE PLAIN OF MARATHON.

Modern Aspect of the Famous Old Greek Battlefield.

Greece, though sparsely inhabited, is in the main a very cheerful looking country. The loneliness of much of it is not depressing, the bareness of much of it is not sad. I began to understand this on the day when I went to the plain of Marathon, which fortunately lies away from railroads. One must get there by carriage or motor or on horseback. The road is bad both for beasts and machinery, but it passes through country which is typical of Greece and through which it would be foolish to go in haste.

Go quietly to Marathon, spend two hours there, or more, and when you return in the evening to Athens you will have tasted a new joy. You will have lived for a little while in an exquisite pastoral—a pastoral through which, it is true, no pipes of Pan have dined to you; I heard little music in Greece—but which has been full of that lightness, brightness, simplicity and delicacy peculiar to Greece. The soil of the land is light, and I believe, though Hellenes have told me that in this I am wrong, that the heart of the people is light. Certainly the heart of one traveler was as he made his way to Marathon along a white road thickly powdered with dust.—Robert Hichens in Century Magazine.

A Fiery Speech.

William O'Brien in his "Recollections" gives this picture of Timothy Healy's first appearance in parliament: "A quarter of an hour after he took his seat as member for Wexford he started up to make his maiden speech—tiny of frame, sardonic of visage, his hands in his breeches pockets, as coolly insolent as a Parisian gamin, as entirely detestable as a small Diogenes peering over the rim of his pincenez as from his tub, through billows eyes over his contemptible audience—and horrified the house of commons with the following exordium: 'Mr. Speaker if the noble marquis (Hartington) thinks he is going to bully us with his high and mighty Cavendish ways, all I can tell him is he will find himself knocked into a cocked hat in a jiffy and we will have to put him to the necessity of wiping the blood of all the Cavendishes from his noble nose a good many times before he disposes of us.'"

Ways of the Japanese.

The thick straw mats are the only furniture needed in a Japanese house. They are three by six feet in size and take the place of tables, beds and chairs. The house is never heated. In winter the people put on thick, padded kimonos, sit on their feet and hold their hands over a little charcoal brazier. For recreation they go out to the family burying ground to worship the spirits of their ancestors or to a shrine to see the cherry blossoms. If earthquakes, which are as common there as thunderstorms here, shake down the little houses or they are swept away by the fires that a proverb says sweep Tokyo every seven years the little brown folks only smile and murmur: "Shikata ga nai" (There is no help for it).—New York Sun.

They Didn't Like Razors.

Said Daniel Webster: "The razor has taught me to curse. It has cost me more time and more trouble than all my speeches."

Rufus Choate, the lawyer, called the razor an instrument invented by Lucifer to fill up hell with barristers. Edward Everett never used profane language, but before shaving he would invariably give vent to all sorts of French barbarisms.

The Retort.

Here is a retort which a "dull student" once made: Professor—You seem to be very dull. When Alexander the Great was your age he had already conquered the world. Student—Well you see, he had Aristotle for a teacher.—Chambers' Journal.

Missed Vacation.

Client—Didn't you make a mistake in going into law instead of the army? Lawyer—Why? Client—By the way you charge there would be little left of the enemy.—London Tit-Bits

MAKING THE FARM

THE LITTLE PAY

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

PERSONS operating land for profit need to study such questions as these:

What commodities are easiest to produce and sell in nearby markets? To what line of production is the soil best adapted?

Suppose there are good cash markets close at hand, which crops or products pay the best?

What line of produce will distribute the labor most evenly through the year?

A practical arrangement is to keep one hired man for every dozen dairy cows and to have such a diversity of work summer and winter as will keep the help profitably employed through the day as well as at milking time. A good poultry plant balances the program nicely. Twenty-four cows are none too many for a place of fifty to eighty acres. It is not the best kind of farming to allow cattle to roam at will in a large pasture. It is more profitable to give them merely a few acres of range that may afford pasture through May and June and depend on the cultivated land to raise most of their food.

As a rule pastures become dry in midsummer and the supply of milk can not be kept up without silage, hay or soiling crops. By the 1st of July a farmer should have vetch, alfalfa or a combination like oats and peas. An excellent kind of summer feed is produced by sowing rye and clover in the fall. This can be cut for hay in June. There ought to be corn silage all the year round for any kind of cattle, but particularly for dairy animals.

With a well managed little dairy like this the owner can clear $100 to $150 a month above the cost of labor and the rental value of the land. The produce may be handled in the form of cream and butter, and this system leaves a large supply of skimmed milk for pigs and poultry. The dairy should clear at the least $1,200 a year, besides paying all the wages and other operating expenses, and $600 ought to be made in hogs and $600 in poultry, besides something from vegetables and fruit.

FARM ADVICE IN RIME.

Be rigid plowmen, bear in mind Your labor is for future hours. Advance, spare not, nor look behind! Plow deep and straight with all your powers. —Horne.

DESTRUCTIVE APPLE BLOTCH.

Disease That Costs Thousands of Dollars to Fruit Growers Each Year.

Apple blotch is the most destructive fruit disease in Kansas, causing thousands of dollars' loss every year. It can be almost entirely prevented on fruit the first year, even in badly infested orchards, says D. E. Lewis, who is assistant in horticulture at the Kansas Agricultural college at Manhattan, Kan.

It is impossible to control blotch after it has gained entrance to the fruit. No blotch can be seen at the time of the first spraying, but if the spores are present on the twigs in cankers it means you will have blotch on the fruit unless it is sprayed. Blotch is not visible to the naked eye for two or three weeks after it has entered the fruit.

The solution used in spraying for this fungous disease is bordeaux mixture. This is made from three pounds of copper sulphate, four pounds of lime and fifty gallons of water. It is important that all the copper sulphate be mixed with one-half of the water and all the lime with the other one-half and these two dilute solutions allowed to run together at the same time into the tank. Bordeaux solution made in any other way is less effective and may be even injurious to the fruit.

Photograph by Missouri state fruit experiment station.

The first application should be three weeks after the petals fall, the second two weeks after the first; the third, in bad cases, will be required about four to six weeks after the petals fall, and the fourth eight to ten weeks after the petals fall, or at the time of spraying for the second brood of the codling moth. In mild cases the second application may be applied from three to four weeks after the first, and the third may be omitted. Bordeaux mixture must not be used during wet weather. If the weather is damp at the regular time of spraying apply lime and sulphur and spray with the bordeaux as soon as the weather becomes settled.

With cows or poultry as the basis of a business, furnishing a regular income, additional money is to be made from a variety of products, including potatoes, onions, berries and large fruits. The farmer needs to give attention to details. He should know which articles pay best and which distribute the labor of his men most evenly. There must be a well balanced program. It is of the greatest importance to learn how reasonably large profits may be gained on a moderate investment of capital and labor. The farmer ought to get out of the rut, if he is in one, and familiarize himself with the conditions which govern his business.

If one asks a farmer which crop pays him best it probably will turn out that he does not know. As a matter of fact a crop of apples, potatoes, onions or grain does not always pay a satisfactory profit, although at times any one of them makes a big return. There are few farmers who will deny that the apple orchard is the most profitable acreage on the farm, but even here the profit might be doubled if the farmer would give more attention to the management of his orchard, keeping the soil cultivated, pruning and spraying the trees, adding fertility to the soil and selling to the best advantage.

A farm cannot be profitable unless it pays interest on its cost, pays for all work done, whether by the farmer himself or by his sons or hired men, and in addition a sum for the farmer's benefit, depending upon the season and the business capacity of the owner.

Where the farm is very small or the labor question is difficult to handle it will be best to drop the cows and substitute a less laborious kind of agriculture. If all the work is to be performed by members of the family poultry, fruit, vegetables and flowers are the best products.

If the tract is not more than twenty acres it will hardly pay to undertake anything in the line of dairying, but a place of ten acres is ample for quite a large poultry plant, a garden and an orchard.

A good way to invest the surplus from the farm is to put it back into the farm. The farm bank never gets shaky. The man at the head of it may get shaky, but the farm is all right.—Farm Journal.

SAVES WASTE OF FODDER.

This Movable Manger Can Be Made to Pay For Itself in One Season.

Here is a portable manger that one farmer has found very beneficial in feeding hay, fodder and other roughage about the farm. Of course it saves waste resulting from feeding on the ground. In one season this manger will pay for itself in feed that is saved. If it can be made of oak boards go much the better, as it will last much longer.

The runners are 2 by 8 inch stuff, fourteen feet long, shaped at the ends like a sled runner. Six inches from each end is a 2 by 8 three feet long, set inside the runners. A third 2 by 8 is spiked inside the runners at center. On top of end and center braces are nailed 2 by 4's flat side down.

In each corner a 2 by 4 upright 2 1/2 feet high is made stationary, also one at center of each side. Three four-inch boards are nailed to the uprights. Holes are bored in the ends of the runners and heavy wire inserted to which singletree is attached whenever it is desired to move the rack about on the farm.—Iowa Homestead.

Making a Hog Climb. Farm and Fireside gives a farmer's account of a discovery which enables him to load hogs easily on to a wagon. He says:

"One of the best labor saving devices that I have used is a bushel basket over the head of a hog when loading. Place the basket over the hog's head and back him into the chute. The hog will continue to back and is very quickly and easily loaded."

ALL AROUND THE FARM.

Cover crops must be used to prevent the loss of plant food.

Don't forget the weeds that are getting ready to go to seed along the road side.

It is a mistake to keep a nondescript bull simply because he cost a little money.

The tool which usually follows the plow in the course of tillage is the harrow.

From the time corn tassels out until it becomes ripe it increases its dry matter fivefold.

Manure is one of the byproducts of the dairy farmer, and it represents a decided profit.—Farm Progress.

Tinkering With the Constitution

The Bill of Rights, without which many of the States felt that the Constitution was imperfect, was added as a series of amendments directly after the ratification of the Constitution. A little experience in Presidential elections showed the danger of making a defeated candidate the Vice President, and the Constitution was promptly changed in this respect.

The civil war changed the relation of the States to the Federal Government, or rather it vindicated one theory of the character of the Union and destroyed the rival theory, and it involved the whole problem of the civil rights of the freedmen. The Constitution, therefore, was promptly amended to embody in it the political consequences of the war. About forty years passed, and then with very little delay after the first serious effect, to make a change the Constitution was amended to provide for the income tax and the direct election of Senators.

The nation is thus shown to have possessed at all times the means of changing the fundamental law without very great delay to meet changed political conditions and widespread changes in political opinions. More than this persons who are not temperamentally agitators do not ask for and do not regard as prudent. But Robert Marion LaFollette insists that the only way of averting an insurrection is to make the Constitution about as flexible as a piece of rubber, and domestic peace can only be assured by the adoption of what he calls his "gateway" amendment, because it would provide an open door for the amendment of the Constitution in response to any ephemeral wave of public feeling. We now have the story of an organization to agitate for easier methods of changing the Constitution at any time, and for a Constitutional Convention every 30 years to afford the Constitution tinkers of every generation an easy opportunity to recast the fundamental law.

Of course the Constitution should be very much less open to change than the statute book. If it is not, then there is no use in a Constitution at all. We could as well get along with a code of laws, and any enactment by Congress would be the supreme law until another Congress should enact something else. This is the ideal of the Progressives. All persons even slightly acquainted with the philosophy of politics and the history of our country recognize that there should be a fundamental law, not of course incapable of change, but not easily changed, responsive to new political conditions, but not affected by every ebullition of public sentiment. Between the Republicans who would change nothing, and the Progressives who would change everything at any time, the Democratic party occupies the broad highway of common sense and political experience, with respect and even veneration for the Constitution, but with entire readiness to adapt it to new conditions when ample discussion and reflection convince the country of the necessity of a change. —Philadelphia Record.

Through the Panama Canal

October 15th, this year, is the date set by Col. George W. Goethals for sending through the Panama Canal the first boat, that of the commission. By January 1st, 1915, the canal will be tested out in every particular and every assurance obtained that the construction may be safely opened for regular traffic. Such are the annals of a gigantic enterprise, brought almost to completion.

This announcement of the early passage of a boat through the canal has interest that does not appear upon the surface. For in answer to a question by his interviewer in New York as to whether in an emergency a battleship could be put through the canal by October—the statement of the engineer being that, if water were entered into the canal on the first of that month there would be enough to float a battleship by the end of it—Colonel Goethals replied that it would depend upon how grave was the emergency.

It is interesting to note that Italy has joined Great Britain in the rate protest. This, however, has no effect upon the completion of the canal, as it will have little effect upon the determination of this country to have free tolls for its domestic shipping. —Baltimore American.

Maryland depositors in postal savings banks will convert $2,280 of their savings into postal savings bonds at the end of the six-months period of June 30, according to figures of the Postoffice Department. Applications for bonds aggregating this amount have been received at the Postoffice Department in Washington.

Fourth-of-July Accidents

The "Safe and Sound Fourth" is certainly making progress. Independence Day accidents, from firearms or fireworks, showed a great falling off last year as compared with other years. But still there were too many. Besides six deaths from tetanus, thirty-five persons were killed by various forms of fireworks. The killed were mostly boys, but six were little girls who were burned to death by their clothing catching fire from so-called "harmless" firecrackers and "sparklers."

The whole number of deaths from Fourth-of-July accidents in 1912 was 41. That was 16 less than 1911, 90 less in 1910, and 174 less than in 1909. Besides the fatal cases, 947 persons were badly hurt but did not die. That is 593 less than in 1911. Eight persons were made totally blind; twenty-one lost one eye each; thirteen lost legs, arms or hands, and forty three lost one or more fingers.

As usual, the giant firecracker was the worst in causing loss of eyes, hands or fingers. Last Fourth of July it caused 362 injuries, including two deaths. Nearly half of the total number of injuries resulted from stray bullets following reckless use of firearms by others. Six deaths came about in that way.

In ten years no less than 40,117 persons have been killed or wounded in the celebration of Independence Day. That is the equivalent of forty regiments, and is more than the total number of killed and wounded on both sides in the greatest battle of the Civil War, the battle of Gettysburg.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation. (Advertisement)

Mr. Ford has been for ten years at the head of organized labor in New Jersey as president of the New Jersey Federation of Labor. He has been long in politics, and as a member of the New Jersey Assembly he supported the reform measures passed in Governor Wilson's administration. He has been a printer for 21 years and is 46 years old.

Take Plenty of Time to Eat

There is a saying that "rapid eating is slow suicide." If you have formed the habit of eating too rapidly you are most likely suffering from indigestion or constipation, which will result eventually in serious illness unless corrected. Digestion begins in the mouth. Food should be thoroughly masticated and insalivated. Then when you have a fullness of the stomach or feel dull and stupid after eating, take one of Chamberlain's Tablets. Many severe cases of stomach trouble and constipation have been cured by the use of these tablets. They are easy to take and most agreeable in effect. Sold by all dealers. (Advertisement)

Local and Miscellaneous

It's a poor rule that won't work both ways in our favor.

Mighty few fellows can fall in love without fracturing something.

The Ladies Card Club was entertained last Wednesday evening by Mrs. Harry C. Dashiell.

Any man can take things as they come. But it's quite another matter to give them up as they go.

Mrs. John W. Dixon, and daughter, Miss Cecia, are spending two weeks in Philadelphia and Atlantic City.

During your spare time—swat the fly. That is what we saw one of our popular druggists engaged in doing last week.

Mrs. Edward S. Shields, of Philadelphia, is visiting her sister, Miss Ray Stewart, at "Linden Hill," north Main street.

If you wish to see good racing go to Armstrong's track, Westover, on July 4th. For particulars see advertisement elsewhere.

Mr. Samuel M. Crockett, Editor of the Worcester Democrat, of Pocomoke City, was a welcome visitor at our office last Wednesday.

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Mark's P. E. Church will hold a festival and supper at Marion Station today (Tuesday) June 17th.

Mrs. A. Spiva last Wednesday had the misfortune to fall from the back porch of her residence, on Main street, and break her left wrist. Dr. Wainwright reduced the fracture.

Mr. Francis Brittingham, who has been attending the University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo., reached home last week to spend the vacation with his mother, Mrs. H. L. Brittingham, on Main street.

Mr. Frank A. Lankford, with Mrs. Lankford and their little daughter, of Macon, Georgia, are visiting Mr. Lankford's sister, Mrs. Alvah N. Gibbons. After their visit here they expect to go to Ocean City for the hot summer days.

Can't Keep It Secret

The splendid work of Chamberlain's Tablets is daily becoming more widely known. No such grand remedy for stomach and liver trouble has ever been known. For sale by all dealers. (Advertisement)

Mrs. Frank T. Smith spent several days last week in Baltimore.

Mrs. Wm. H. Gale is visiting the Misses Crisfield, at Portland, Maine.

Mr. and Mrs. Joshua W. Miles left last week for a visit to Atlantic City.

Don't follow your inclinations unless you know where they are leading you.

Many a man's only idea of improving his time is to tinker with his watch.

We can't all be stars, but on the other hand we needn't necessarily be clouds either.

Mrs. Charles Hitchens, of Salisbury, is visiting Mrs. T. H. Heath, on Beckford Avenue.

The twenty-second annual convention of the Maryland State Firemen's Association was held at Westernport, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Miss Helen V. Barnes, of King's Creek, has returned home after attending the commencement exercises of Western Maryland College.

Mrs. Allen Wallace, of Cambridge, Md., spent several days last week at the home of her aunt, Mrs. C. H. Hayman, on Princess William street.

Wilmer O. Lankford, Jr., a recent graduate of Western Maryland College, and Chas. W. Wainwright, Jr., a student at the same institution, are home for the summer vacation.

We have had the coldest weather during the last week ever known in the Eastern States during June. In Baltimore the thermometer registered as low as 45 degrees on Monday.

On Wednesday, June 26th, a supper will be served at Grace Guild Hall, near Mt. Vernon Wharf. Ice cream, cake, soda water and fruits will also be for sale. The public cordially invited.

St. Paul's Guild will hold its annual June Festival on Mr. W. Beauchamp's lawn, at Marion, on Thursday evening June 19th. If weather is unfavorable on Thursday evening it will be held on Friday evening.

The Equal Suffrage League of Maryland passed a set of resolutions declaring women suffragists should not give official recognition to any political party and should confine themselves to the cause for which they are fighting.

At the teachers' examination held by Superintendent W. H. Dashiell, last Wednesday and Thursday, there were present 21 young ladies and one young man. Of this number 20 were applicants for second grade and 2 for first grade certificates.

The strawberry season in Somerset county is about closed. The largest shipments were made from Marion Station, four hundred refrigerator cars were sent from that point, many of which cars brought $1100 and $1200 apiece. This is about 50 cars short of last season.

Fish Commissioner Edward S. Phillips, of Cambridge, and his deputy, Gilbert Hagedone, are much elated at the record made at the Tuckahoe hatchery station, at Coward's Point. Mr. Hagedone stripped 7,470,000 eggs from ripe shad between March 29 and May 26. They succeeded in hatching 5,600,000 fry which were distributed in the streams of the Eastern Shore.

Mr. Walter B. Miller, of Salisbury, sailed last Saturday from New York in company with Chairman Weller, of the State Roads Commission, for London, where they will attend a meeting of the International Roads Convention for two weeks. After the convention Messrs. Miller and Weller will make a short tour of England and the continent, and will return to the United States in about six weeks.

Much to the surprise of the people of Pocomoke City, Miss Mary H. Stevenson, who for two years past has been Principal of the High School of that town, last week announced her resignation and Mr. E. Clarke Fontaine, the former Principal, was reappointed. Mr. Fontaine, it is understood, had several positions under consideration but none appealed to him so strongly as the home place where his work had begun and been so successful.

At the forty-third commencement of Western Maryland College last week forty-two students were graduated with the degree of bachelor of arts. Among the graduates was Wilmer O. Lankford, Jr., of Princess Anne. In the literary society contests the Newell trophy was won by the Browning and the Merrill trophy by the Irving Society. The Browning Society was represented in the contest by Ruby Alice Robertson and Meta Frances Eppler, and the Irving Society by Lester Alvin Twigg and Charles William Wainwright. Mr. Wainwright is the son of Dr. Chas. W. Wainwright, of Princess Anne. At the annual meeting of the trustees L. Irving Politt, of Baltimore, and Rev. Luther F. Warner, of Salisbury, were elected members of the board to fill vacancies. Dr. Lewis was re-elected president of the college and Dr. McDaniel and Rev. A. Norman Ward, vice-presidents.

Shake Off Your Rheumatism

Now is the time to get rid of your rheumatism. Try a twenty-five cent bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment and see how quickly your rheumatic pains disappear. Sold by all dealers. (Advertisement)

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stewart of Baltimore spent the week end with the former's uncle, Mr. T. H. Heath.

Miss Kathleen Henry, of Cambridge, Md., is visiting Miss Madeline Hayman, on Prince William street.

Miss Aurelia Dashiell, of Cambridge, Md., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Dashiell, on Beckford Avenue.

The Ladies Card Club will be entertained tomorrow (Wednesday) evening by Mrs. Henry M. Lankford, at "Beckford."

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Mervin J. Eckles, of Princess Anne, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Gunby.—Salisbury Advertiser.

Miss Lillian Bounds, who has been visiting Miss Beatrice Brown left yesterday (Monday) for Weldon, N. C., to visit her brother, Mr. Clayton Bounds.

William Jennings Bryan will be one of the principal speakers at the annual State Christian Endeavor convention to be held in Baltimore November 19th, 20th and 21st.

The Maryland State Roads Commission has concluded the inspection of the construction and improvements of the roads and bridges. The 112 miles of State road on the Eastern Shore are now being oiled, at a cost of $36,445.77.

Latest reports from the condition of Mr. Harry J. Whyte, who is still at the Salisbury Hospital as a result of the late Somerset county shooting affair, are to the effect that he is steadily improving and will soon be able to return to his home in Pocomoke City.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Long with their daughter, Miss Lillian, and Miss Emma Hall, of Crisfield, motored to Philadelphia last Tuesday. They made the distance from their home in Westernport in 11 hours, including a stop in Dover for dinner. They returned on Friday after a delightful trip.

Mr. M. A. Culver, who resides about eight miles East of Princess Anne, last week sold a calf ten weeks old to a Philadelphia firm for $25.63. The calf weighed 233 pounds, which is regarded as an unusual one for so young an animal. Mr. Culver realized a net return of $23.80 from his sale.

Mrs. Wm. S. McMaster and her daughter, Miss Ellen D. McMaster, gave a very delightful tea on Thursday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock. Those assisting in receiving were Mrs. Wm. B. Spiva, Mrs. Robert F. Duer, Mrs. H. T. Ruhl, Misses Lena Woolford, Cecilia Bratton and Caryle Weaver.

Rev. C. W. Prettyman of Centreville, Md., who last week was called to Smyrna to become pastor of Asbury M. E. Church to succeed Rev. W. D. Parry, who resigned to accept a call to the First M. E. Church at Trenton, N. J., has notified Rev. Dr. Robert Watt, district superintendent, that he will accept the call.

Attention is called to the State Scholarship Engineering Courses, offered by John Hopkins University in the statement on the 8th page of this issue. The establishment of advanced courses in Engineering in the Johns Hopkins University was made possible by the passage of an Act of Legislature of the state of Maryland in its session of 1912. Read statement for dates entrance examinations.

The forty-sixth annual meeting of the Maryland State Teachers Association will be held in St. John's College, Annapolis, beginning June 24th and concluding on June 27th. Matters of educational interest will be discussed. The address of welcome on the part of St. John's College will be delivered by Dr. Thomas Fell, the president, and the address on the part of Annapolis will be delivered by George T. Melvin. Governor Phillips Lee Goldsborough will deliver an address on the second day of the convention.

NOT PAINT

With linseed oil at $1, what sort of oil do you think they use in "paint" at $1.75 and $1.50?
That stuff is counterfeit paint. You can cheat yourself; you can't cheat Time or Weather.
Paint is a rubbery coat over wood and iron to keep out water.
Counterfeit paint may look like it; counterfeit money looks like money.
What are all counterfeits for? They are all alike.

THE OYSTER SITUATION

As Viewed By W. I. Watkins, of Baltimore, a Lessee Under the Haman Law

As a lessee under the Haman law, a student for more than twenty years of the oyster situation in this country, and for the past thirteen years an investor in oyster boat property, I feel constrained to write, with the hope that I may help clear up some of the misunderstandings of the facts of the case that now face the oyster interests of Maryland. And to add weight to my views, I would like to say that I have spent much time of my life among dredgers at work and tongsers. In recent years my interests have been with the dredgers in the upper waters of the bay and I am known among the noble men who captain dredge boats.

The object of all in the business, I take it, is to have a better supply of good quality oysters and I can see no way that this can be brought about under present conditions. As a member of the late Governor Crothers' Oyster Commission, I was among those who voted unanimously for measures that became crystallized into what was known before the last legislature as the Phillips bill. The conception of this measure was that the State would become the great company to protect, reshell and transplant oyster beds. Please note that these are the essentials to our future prosperity in this business. The question seemed merely to narrow down to how it is to be done. If by the State it must be done by some sort of commission acting for the State, a moment's reflection will show the enormous powers that would be vested in such a commission, the enormous waste possible and the great costs that might accrue to general taxpayers not directly interested in the oyster business. At the last session of the legislature Mr. Killian, Mr. Wayman and Mr. Webster did noble work for this Phillips bill but it was defeated.

My own desire and the desire of all those on the Crothers' Oyster Commission was simply for more good quality oysters. As the Phillips bill could not become law, might have been a great mistake if it had become a law and, I believe, never can become a law, we must look to something else. And that something is private oyster culture. The most unfortunate condition in this State is that the oystermen directly interested will neither read the provisions of the Haman law nor help, anybody frame up any sort of oyster culture legislation. When the original Haman law was passed, it was so amended as to make nothing practically possible but a survey and the creation of a Shell Fish Commission. It was so recognized at the time but those two achievements should prove well worth all the money spent for them. At every subsequent session of the legislature efforts were made to have the law so amended that it could become operative. These efforts were defeated until the last legislature when enough of the amendments passed into law to make possible a small beginning in oyster culture. In the heated campaigns at Annapolis—and I have attended every legislative session on this business many years—the attacks on the culturists were on the amendments and not on the survey. At those times, I was told by the leader of the opposition that the survey was all right; that it was more than fair to the oystermen, that the survey had been so manipulated as to leave little for culture, etc.

Based on the issue of the amendments the opposition now attacks the survey, the very survey that was pronounced good for the oystermen. Although the law is yet imperfect and requires further amendments, the present matter at issue is the survey. This survey used up six years of time of officials of the United States and the State of Maryland and was made as the law provided, under the direction and suggestion of oystermen. Complete evidences of the conditions of bottoms at the time of the survey exist in the form of boat sheets in the office of the Shell Fish Commission of this city and there is no mystery about it. I see that some letter writer assumes that there are two surveys and that the present work of Engineer Earle and his assistants is to correct errors of the former survey. Mr. Earle is merely surveying off the leaseable areas that would be taken up in good faith if prospective lessees could be assured protection to their holdings. The need of the oyster culturists, as I understand it, is for bottoms susceptible to oyster culture. The great depths of mud and the shifting sands might be built up at enormous cost, possibly, but would be no better off for protection than more favorable spots. About 25,000 acres of the very cream of the beds are reserved in perpetuity to the natural bar oystermen while the amount of likely land open for lease is very much less than 100,000 acres. And the Campbell-Price law, which is the amended Haman law, provides for the use of revenue from leases for the conservation and preservation of these natural bars. These were moves made for the benefit of the old school natural growth oystermen. Another move in this direction and one generally overlooked but of enormous significance is that, under the law, it is impossible for any corporation or financial combination of any corporate nature or for non-residents to hold any of this land open for lease. These are splendid moves for the protection of old school oystermen.

Those who finance oyster culture on any scale, unless right on the job themselves, are merely acting as bankers for the men on the job, and, instead of this blind prejudice against any oyster culture, the best interests of the oystermen can be served by studying the situation and co-operating with those willing to venture their money in good faith in the development of this mammoth natural resource of Maryland and not to leave the business under such legal handicaps that competition in the markets of the other states is growing constantly more difficult.

Best Laxative For The Aged

Old men and women feel the need of a laxative more than young folks, but it must be safe and harmless and one which will not cause pain. Dr. King's New Life Pills are especially good for the aged, for they act promptly and easily. Price 25c. Recommended by Omar A. Jones, Druggist. (Advertisement)

EMERSON'S FAILING MEMORY.

He Was Conscious of It, but His Amiability Never Wavered.

I had as a fellow guest a man who had long been intimate with Emerson and whom the poet was very glad to see. Talking with me after tea in the library, Emerson said:

"I want to tell you about a friend in Germany. His name I cannot remember, and he moved to and fro uneasily in his effort to recall it. 'This friend with whom we have taken tea tonight, whose name also I cannot remember'—here again came a distressed look at the failure of his faculty—"I cannot remember his name either, but he can tell you this German friend whose name I have also forgotten."

It was a sorrow to see the breaking down of a great spirit and his agitation as he was conscious of his waning power. And yet, so far as I could see, it was only the memory that was going. The intellectual strength was still apparent and the amiability of his spirit was perhaps even more manifest than in the years when he was in the full possession of himself.

This came out in little things. He was overanxious at the table lest the hospitality should come short, troubled about the supply of butter and apple sauce, and soon after I saw him on his knees on the hearth taking care that the fire should catch the wood to abate the evening coolness that was gathering in the room.—From "The Last Leaf" by J. K. Hosmer.

UNCONSCIOUS OF FAME.

Grote, the Famous Historian, Was a Man of Great Simplicity.

George Grote, the famous author of the "History of Greece," long the standard on that subject, was a man of great simplicity and was wholly unconscious of his own celebrity. Several anecdotes illustrative of this fact are given in "Some Famous Women of Wit and Beauty," one of whom is Mrs. Grote.

While Mr. Grote was walking in the park he would perhaps notice that one or two persons looked at him with some attention. He would at once turn to his wife in alarm.

"Have I got any dirt on my face, Harriet? Is there anything the matter with my hat?" and he would clutch his headgear with both hands. "Why are those people looking at me?"

Mrs. Grote's proud answer was, "Because you are George Grote, that's all!"

Once when he was on a visit to Cambridge Grote wished to see the professor of natural history, but was told that the professor was so busy dissecting something that he could not be interrupted, "strong magnifying power, powerful light, shirt sleeves up, cannot be bothered with anybody." The modest historian would have retired, but his wife persisted that it was Mr. Grote who wished to see the professor.

"What?" he cried. "Mr. Grote? Give me my coat. I must wash my hands." In a minute he had transformed himself and would not let them go for two hours.

Animals Don't Need Eyes.

Animals do not depend upon their eyesight in the same way as human beings. Cats and dogs could get along very well without eyes. A cat can find her way with the aid of her whiskers. These are the same width as her body and connected with nerves which cause her to feel the slightest touch.

Dogs can be entirely guided by their sense of smell. Blind dogs have been known to scent and find their way to the most inaccessible places. Their hearing is also preternaturally sharp. Bats can see very little and depend chiefly upon their noses, muscles, touch and hearing. In the case of most animals the senses of smell and touch are more highly developed than that of sight, and they do not require to depend upon their sight nearly as much as do human beings in regard to safety.—London Globe.

His Willing Tribute.

We shall be very glad to have one from you. Would you mind telling me in a few words how you came to insure with us?"

"Not at all, sir. Your agent was bounding me nearly to death. For six weeks he had made my life a burden. I gave him my application for life insurance just to get rid of him."—Chicago Tribune.

The Making of a Diplomat.

A Labouchere anecdote is given in the volume of recollections by Sir Henry Lucy (Toby, M. P.), to whom it was told by Labby himself. It concerned the younger son of a peer, who thought that a berth in the diplomatic service was as desirable a place as any for one who took life rather easily. He knew nothing of the special subjects upon which the preliminary examination was based, but there was at least the promise of a lark. As far as he could make out, he did not supply a single correct answer to the long list of questions. Nevertheless he came out first in the competition. It was a surprise even for a confident young lordling. Meeting one of the examiners at dinner a few days later, he ventured to ask how the thing came about. "We at once saw you knew nothing," was the reply. "But your manner was so free from constraint under what to some people would have been peculiarly embarrassing circumstances that we said to each other, 'That's the very man to make a diplomatist.' So we gave you a start on your career."

The Dangerous Age.

As the thirties slip behind him the wise man will train himself to realize that the "good old days" when he could do exactly as he liked and not pay for it have gone forever. Gone are the days when fatigue from extra work and loss of sleep speedily passed off when the stress of work had ended. At forty recuperation takes longer. Both brain and body when once thoroughly overworked and tired out are likely to remain below par for days or weeks. The body may not be in the least diseased, but it is not so strong as it once was and requires more thought and care. The reason that so many men suffer from ill health in the fifties is that they neglect these signs and live throughout the dangerous age at the same pace and with the same waste of vital energies as in the twenties. The abuse their systems receive in the "dangerous years" leave them with no reserve stamina and vigorous health to support them into a hale and hearty old age.—London Family Herald.

CONFIRMED PROOF

Residents of Princess Anne Can not Doubt What Has Been Twice Proved

In gratitude for relief from aches and pains of bad backs—from distressing kidney ills—thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Princess Anne, who so testified years ago, now say the results were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Princess Anne kidney sufferers. Thomas H. Heath, Beckford avenue, Princess Anne, Md., says: "I suffered from severe pains in the small of my back and was restless. In the morning I felt tired and worn-out. I also had dizzy spells, which were so severe I could hardly stand. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me in every way and soon I complained. I willingly confirm my former endorsement of this remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The German Empire.

The German empire was constituted as at present Jan. 1, 1871. After preliminary negotiations during the course of the Franco-Prussian war the parliament of the north German confederation (with which Baden, Hesse-Darmstadt, Bavaria and Wurttemberg had recently allied themselves) in an address dated Dec. 10, 1870, requested King William of Prussia to become German emperor. All the sovereign princes of German states and the three free and Hanseatic towns having joined in offering the imperial crown, the proclamation of William I. as emperor was made at Versailles Jan. 18, 1871. The first reichstag was opened at Berlin March 25, and the imperial constitution was adopted April 14, 1871.—Philadelphia Press.

TRAVEL AS AN EDUCATION.

It Depends Not Only on What You See, but How You See It.

Travel is an education, but there may be used of compulsion to make it take. A man who spent much time in a foreign country says that he has learned more about it by reading than he ever did by seeing. In many instances the sole gain of the traveler is recreation. Nothing is carried away but surface impressions. The often noticed contest among tourists over the fundamental questions, "Did you go here?" or "Did you go there?" hints at the sum total of knowledge that was gained. An intelligent reader would pass a better examination even on the superficial aspects of foreign lands than many of the great family of trotters.

This is not to say that the traveler must go about with a mind so serious as to be oppressive, but if he is to benefit much by his journeyings he must be alert and inquisitive and give his memory some exercise. He must have purpose enough to try to add to his stock of valuable knowledge, and he must be able to understand the significance of things and to make intelligent comparisons. Otherwise it makes little difference whether he travels all over Europe or walks around the block where he lives. Mere moving about never educated any one. On the other hand, it is possible to get a very large fund both of pleasure and profit out of good books concerning strange places.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A LITERARY ROMANCE.

Pathetic Ending of the Love Story of the Poet Laforgue.

In George Moore's "Impressions and Opinions" is told the touching love story of the poet Laforgue, who was reader to the empress of Germany.

One winter day in Berlin Jules saw a girl skating as none ever skated before. The grace of the waist, the flowing hair and the feet lifted beneath the dark skirt filled him with happiness. The beautiful skater was an English girl.

He resigned his place as reader to the empress and married, and he and the beautiful English girl came to Paris in the hope that literature would yield them a living. But Laforgue's genius was of the kind that wins the sympathy of the elect, and instead of making his living with his pen Jules grew more and more consumptive.

I have heard that the young people lived in a poor apartment—two or three rooms—and that the beautiful English girl, now stricken with the dreadful malady, passed between the rooms with tresses. Friends climbed the high stairs to see them on Thursday evenings; a few admirers attended Jules' funeral and published the volume he left in his desk, "Les Morilles Legendaires"; the girl died soon after two or three months.

How did she live during the brief interval? Where is she buried? No body knows. Yet I have a separate and complete sensation of these two little lives.

Thieves and Their Feet.

A city missionary whose work brings him in contact with thieves was interested in their frequent mention of a certain chiropodist whom they had patronized.

"I shouldn't think," said the missionary, "that men of your calling would have either the time or the money to fool away on chiropodists." "We're just the kind that need to fool away time and money on them," one ex-burglar explained. "Of all persons on earth men in our line can least afford to be made nervous by bad feet. Creeping around in a strange place in the dark is ticklish business at the best. It requires above all things sound feet and comfortable shoes. To kick a corn or a bunion against a bureau might knock the most profitable job of the season into a cocked hat."—New York Times.

It Was His.

A small boy was telling his mother of a mishap which had occurred to a playmate of his. The youngster, it appeared, had been regaling himself with one of those large, marbled candles which are a particular delight of childhood, and in a moment of excitement it slipped down and stuck in his throat. But, said the narrator, they succeeded in relieving him.

"Out," said his mother, "you got it out, did you?" "Nav," was the impatient answer. "We shoved it down. It was his, wasn't it?"—Harper's Weekly.

A CRAZY CURRENCY Ten Farms

China Has a Monetary System That Borders on the Chaotic.

UNIT OF VALUE IS THE TAEI.

Yet the Tael is Neither a Coin Nor an Ingot, but Merely an Abstract Term, and Signifies a Unit of Weight—Silver Shoes and Cash on a String.

Of the many strange things in China not the least strange is its currency. To the foreigner it seems a miracle that any business can be transacted successfully with such a medium of exchange. It has been described as chaotic. Nevertheless, business and trade flourish in China, which speaks volumes for the business acumen of the Chinese. Perhaps the fact that trade flourishes in China long before such a thing as currency was known accounts for the fact that the Chinese, with such a lax system as they now possess, still stand in the front rank of commercial nations.

In China all forms of exchange from barter up are in use. A very large part of the country's business is done against the actual delivery of weighed silver. For convenience silver is melted into rough ingots having the shape of the Chinese shoe. These silver shoes have stamped upon them their fineness and weight. The unit of weight is the tael, which is equal to a quantity of silver weighing 580 grains troy and is worth about 60 cents in our money.

The tael is not an ingot nor a coin, but simply an abstract term signifying a unit of weight, such as a "pound" of butter or an "ounce" of gold. Though an abstract term, it is the measure of wealth and the unit of value throughout the length and breadth of China. A man buys a business for so many taels of silver. His profits are computed in taels. When he makes payment he weighs out the silver according to this unit.

The silver shoes vary in weight from one to seventy-five taels. All silver shoes and banks have forges, where the silver is melted in iron ladles and poured into molds. The smelters with their ladles and molds remind one of cooks. They stir the silver with a pair of metal chopsticks. To one not aware of what they were doing it would be natural to suppose that they were engaged in concocting something good to eat. In the process of recasting the ingots their fineness is often changed, being either improved or debased, whichever best suits the interests of the shop. Bankers and money changers are able to determine the quality of the silver by the sense of touch. The sellers or depositors are always at their mercy and must often submit to the operation of having their silver discounted on account of "bad touch."

In the interior of China small purchases are made with copper coins with square holes in the center. These are called "cash" and are threaded on strings so that they may be carried across one's shoulder or on a pole. A string of 1,000 of these cash is worth about 50 cents in our money. Sometimes bits of silver are clipped from the silver shoes and used for small purchases. When traveling in the interior one must take with him a large amount of silver shoes, exchanging them for strings of cash at the various shops. The money changers have two sets of scales, one to be used in the purchase of silver and the other in the selling of it.

In an attempt some years ago to introduce a currency based on western models the Chinese government purchased and put into circulation several million Mexican dollars. The people took to the new coins and called for more. The provincial governments then set up mints and began to coin Chinese dollars of approximately the same weight and fineness as the Mexican dollars. They also coined an enormous amount of subsidiary items in the shape of small silver coins and copper pennies.

Soon it was discovered that the new currency was as unstable as the old. The value of the dollar in relation to the subsidiary coinage varied from day to day. The cent was never worth the hundredth part of a dollar. Some days 100 cents were required to make up $1, and on other days it took 130 cents. Similarly the value of the dollar as compared with the tael was continually fluctuating. Sometimes $100 would bring 70 taels and at other times only 65. It was sickening to the people, but very profitable to the money changers.—Harper's Weekly.

The Mozart Cycle.
The only works of Mozart designed for the stage (there are nearly a score of them) that have remained regular "repertory" operas, as the Germans say, are "Don Giovanni," "Figaro" and "The Magic Flute." Once in awhile, however, a Mozart cycle is given in one of the larger German cities, and this includes generally, besides the three operas named, "Idomeneo," "Die Entführung," "Cosi Fan Tutti" and "Clemenza di Tito."—Argonaut.

DESOLATE MONGOLIA.

A Bleak Country, the Very Spirit of Which is Restlessness.

Beyond the forests of Siberia lies the barren center of the Asiatic continent—that inhospitable, desolate land of nakedness, the haunt of roaming nomads, a region of bitter winds and hostile climate. In the very heart of the greatest continent, in that part of the earth's surface which is farthest removed from the sea, lies the lone, bleak land of Mongolia.

In all its immense area there are but few towns where men live settled lives, and it possesses but a scanty population, while because of its very position it is cut off from the softening influence of the sea it presents a dreary aspect of windy wastes, endless steppes and barren mountains.

Wild and wide is Mongolia, stretching as it does for 2,000 miles in the savage splendor of limitless expanse. Man cannot rest in such a country nor live a sedentary life. It has been the birthplace of the greatest migrations the world has ever seen. Restless movement, in fact, is the very spirit of Mongolia.

What history this land could tell if only its deserts could speak and its mountains bear witness! Here rode Genghis, the Mongol Alexander, the most ruthless and inhuman destroyer the world has experienced. On these wide plateaus wandered those Mongol herdsmen who fed their flocks and moved their camps with complete control and splendid isolation until at last the wanderlust came over them and they burst out from their fastness to overrun the world.—Wide World Magazine.

The Oath Gesture.
The act of uplifting the hand during the taking of an oath is so ancient that it would be futile to even attempt to say when it started. Homer mentions it as common among the Greeks of his time, and it is also found in the earliest Biblical time. For instance, Abraham, the father of the Jewish people, says "I have lifted up my hand to Jehovah," showing that even at that remote period the practice was existent. It was from the Jews, of course, that the practice found its way into Christendom, where it has ever since held its place in judicial trials.—New York American.

The Paisley Shawl

Story of Return to Rightful Owner

By CLARISSA MACKIE

It smelled of camphor and attar of roses when Camilla Atwood lifted it from the chest where it had lain for many years. The Paisley shawl had a little history of its own, and Camilla, sitting in the sunny western window of her sky room, spread it in her lap and tried to recall what her mother had said about it.

Years before, when Camilla was quite a little girl, the Atwoods had been driving along a country road when they discovered the beautiful shawl lying in the dust, where it had no doubt fallen from some passing carriage.

When Camilla was twenty-two her father failed in business and lived but a short time, and as her mother had died some years before Camilla was left alone to make her own way in the world. That was why she was occupying this sunny top floor room in a city boarding house. She taught French and music in a private school, and the slender salary she received was sometimes eked out by engagements to play at musicales at the homes of her pupils.

She expected to play tonight at the Channings, and she had spent all her spare time since 3 o'clock in furbishing up her one evening gown, cleaning her white gloves and carefully darning a small tear in her small black slipper. Camilla had sadly lacked a cloak to wear on these occasions, and she was ashamed to appear again in her faded raincoat. That was why she was sitting on the floor before the old camphor wood chest looking speculatively at the Paisley shawl.

Suddenly she sprang to her feet and shook out the folds of the shawl. It billowed away in lustrous tints of red and brown and gold and green. Camilla caught it up, dropped one fringed corner over her black mist of hair and gathered the rest of it over her arms and about her slender figure. As she surveyed herself in the mirror a swift blush of pleasure at her own loveliness heightened her beauty. Her dark eyes shone like stars, and a charming smile played about her tender lips.

She was going over her evening repertoire when the whistling tubs warned her that Mrs. Channing's carriage was at the door. With a last glance at the reflection of her tall, graceful form clothed in filmy black with a string of tiny pearls at her throat, Camilla draped the Paisley shawl about her shoulders and went downstairs.

The evening was much like other musical evenings, and when it was over Camilla declined to partake of refreshment and was glad to re-enter the carriage which waited to take her home. Just as the carriage was turning into the uptown cross street where Camilla lived there was the sound of an automobile horn, hoarse shouting and then a sickening crash as the horses swerved aside and swung the vehicle against a lamppost.

Camilla was flung from side to side of the softly padded carriage, but suffered no injury beyond a severe shaking up and a violent fright. At last the babel of confusion outside ceased, while some one forced open the door. A man's hatless head and a pair of broad shoulders were thrust within.

"I hope you are not hurt?" he queried anxiously.
"No, not in the least. What has happened?" asked Camilla in her turn.

"A motorcar frightened your horses and they shied and threw the carriage against a post. May I assist you to alight and call another carriage for you?"

Camilla placed her hand in his and descended to the pavement, where a crowd had gathered. The motorcar was puffing impatiently on the other side of the street, and the coachman was striving to quiet the restive horses. At a little distance an ambulance was backed up to the curb, and a couple of white clad hospital doctors were bent above a form on the pavement.

"Some one has been injured," cried Camilla as she moved toward the ambulance. The tall man with the broad shoulders kept beside her as if to protect her from the inquisitive crowd.

"Yes. An elderly woman was crossing the street at the time, and while it is not believed that that carriage struck her, we think she has been so thoroughly frightened that it has resulted in a shock of some sort."

"Oh, are they going to take her to a hospital?" asked Camilla as they drew near.

"They were, but as my office is close by I have persuaded them to turn the case over to me. I am a physician, you know, and the woman begged so hard not to be taken to a public institution that I could not resist her appeal."

Camilla turned and, looking up at him, found his glance resting on her with unmistakable admiration. He hastily turned his eyes away and bent over the woman on the pavement.

"I think I can carry her in now," he suggested, and as one of the attendants started to throw a sheet around the shrinking old form he added, "I'll send into the house for a rug."

"Oh take this," said Camilla, and in an instant she had tossed off the Paisley shawl and was wrapping it about the injured woman.

Shivering in the night air and blushing at the publicity which her impulsive act had occasioned, Camilla meekly followed the doctor's tall form as he strode along to where a red lantern gleamed above a stone doorway.

"Here we are!" he announced cheerfully, and at his direction Camilla pressed a button which opened the front door like magic, and they were bathed in the grateful warmth of a long, red lighted, crimson carpeted hall.

The physician turned aside into a reception room and laid the woman on a leather couch. She was a small, meek looking little body, with snow white hair, from which a shabby little bonnet hung disconsolately. Her old fashioned mantle was thin and worn, and a shabby piece of mink fur was tied about her throat. Her eyes were bright and shining, and her thin hands caressed the folds of the Paisley shawl which the physician was carefully withdrawing from her form.

"How beautiful it is!" she sighed gratefully. "It seems so like old times to have the 'feel' of it between my fingers." She closed her faded eyes, and two tears trickled down her wrinkled cheeks.

"I wish you would keep it for a few days," said Camilla with another impulse to pity, "only—I don't see how I am to get home."

"Oh, if I might just have it to look at! It is so much like one I owned many years ago! You will scarcely believe me, my dears, but once I lost a Paisley shawl from my own carriage—it was a gift from my husband—and I never recovered it." The old woman pressed the shawl with loving fingers, which threaded the silken fringe with little stroking movements of delight in its very touch.

"What shall I do, doctor?" asked Camilla in perplexity. "I would dearly love to gratify her desire."

"She will be here at the most for a couple of days," returned the physician gravely. "Your beautiful shawl seems to have acted as a restorative in her case, and if you care to leave it here until she departs I will assure you that it will be treasured. It is very beautiful. I can remember that my grandmother wore one like that."

He smiled boyishly, and the smile seemed to invade every feature of his good looking face. Without more ado he stepped to a wardrobe and brought forth a long army cape of dark blue. "If you will wear this home"—he suggested.

"That is just the thing," said Camilla as he laid it over her shoulders and she fastened it about her white throat. She went over to the woman lying on the couch and took one of the thin hands in her own.

"I hope you will feel very much better at once," she said sweetly. "I am going to leave my shawl with you while you are under the doctor's care. You will enjoy that?"

"Indeed I will," smiled the woman gratefully. "It looks like the one I lost so many years ago."

"Where did you lose it?" asked Camilla quickly.

"In a little New England village called Blakeford," said the woman slowly, as if refreshing a latent memory. "My husband and I were enjoying a driving tour through some of the country towns, and I always carried my shawl with me. It was so soft and warm and so rich in color that I loved to look at it. While we were passing through Blakeford our progress was interrupted by a cable message from abroad calling us to the bedside of our only son. I suppose the shawl was dropped from the carriage during our mad rush to catch the only train that would connect us with a departing steamer. I did not miss it until we arrived in New York, and I knew it would be too late to recover it. Your shawl is a perfect copy of my own. I suppose it is an heirloom."

"Tell me what year you lost your shawl," requested Camilla with agitation.

"It was in 1883. I well remember the date, for our son died, and then my husband followed, and since then my life has been one of loneliness and hard work."

Camilla pressed the shawl around the shrunken form, and she bent gracefully and kissed the withered cheeks. "It is your very own shawl come back to you across the years," she whispered, "and perhaps it is to herald better times for you!"

She sat down and related to the enraptured old woman the story of how her own parents had found the shawl in the village of Blakeford in the year 1883, and Dr. Lindley stood near, an interested listener. His eyes more often rested on the animated face of the beautiful girl, and he appeared to be ridiculous, pleased when the old woman insisted on introducing herself as Mrs. Benton, the widow of a once prominent financier, and then introducing Camilla and the doctor in the most formal manner.

It was early in the morning when the doctor called a carriage and Camilla entered it to return to her boarding house. She was without the gorgeous Paisley shawl, but wrapped in the long military cape that smelled of tobacco she did not seem to miss the richer garment. The room on the top floor seemed bathed in a rosy glow, and a little song rippled in her heart. Camilla did not know why she was so happy.

It came out beautifully in the end. The doctor fell in love with Camilla Atwood, and old Mrs. Benton came and kept house for them. The doctor said that he and Camilla would have met somewhere, somehow, in the world anyway, but his wife maintained that if it had not been for the Paisley shawl they never would have met each other.

J. B. Hanna To Be Ousted

Simultaneous with the announcement from the Treasury Department in Washington that Collector of Internal Revenue John B. Hanna, along with other Collectors, were soon to be replaced with Democrats, came the announcement that the members of the Maryland delegation in Congress will caucus upon the subject of patronage.

The information that the Treasury Department was preparing to install Democrats in the internal revenue offices of the country came as a result of the fact that the new income tax will soon be levied, and Secretary McAdoo thinks Democratic collectors should tackle this job from the beginning.

Collectors of internal revenue do not hold office for a given term, as do most other Presidential appointees, but hold only at the pleasure of the President. Mr. Hanna is, therefore, in office now only because the President has not found it convenient to give consideration to his successor.

Representative J. Fred C. Talbott on Friday confirmed the reports of the contemplated caucus.

The Repair and Maintenance of Earth Roads

If you look at the ordinary country road after a shower you will see small puddles along the wheel ruts and sometimes larger pools. This water stays on the road surface because it cannot drain away into the side ditches. If you look closely you will see side ditches which have grown up with bushes and weeds in many cases, and which are so far from the traveled part of the road that the rain water does not drain from the traveled way. To prevent water from standing on the traveled way the road should be raised in the center and should slope gently into broad shallow ditches. It is then said to have a crown. If it is 10 feet from the center of the road to the side ditch, the surface at the side ditch should be at least 10 inches lower than it is at the center where the horses travel. The road then has a 10-inch crown. The rain that falls on a road properly crowned will run quickly to the side and not soak into the surface or form pools. The side ditches for surface water should run parallel to the right of way, and should be open at every low point so that the water can run out of them into neighboring brooks or streams. If the ditches merely collect the water from the road surface and it can not run away, large pools will be formed along the roadside, which will gradually soak into the soil beneath the road and make it so soft that the wheels of wagons will cut through the road surface and soon destroy it.

Sometimes water runs from land along the road into the road and forms a little stream down the wheel tracks or in the middle where the horses travel. When driveways into farm yards are built across the side ditches they frequently form channels for water from the farm yard to run into the road. The pipes under driveways become filled with leaves or rubbish and the water can no longer run away. If the driveways that stop the ditch water were built so that no pipes were necessary and the ditch could be left open, much trouble from surface water would be stopped.

Sometimes a road runs across low ground or through a swamp where the road can not be drained by side ditches alone. If the road were built higher like a railroad embankment across such low land and made with a crown, it would be dry and hard. Sometimes a road passes through what is called a cut. This is a place where the earth has been dug out so that the road can go over a hill without being too steep. The water which always flows quietly under the ground on hill sides is known as ground water. In road cuts such water sometimes makes the road very muddy, and the road then needs what road builders call underdrainage. A good kind of underdrainage is a trench to go along under the side drain and about 3 feet deep and a foot and a half wide. In this trench a pipe is laid near the bottom and covered with loose stones no bigger than an egg. When the trench is completely filled with loose stones the ground water, instead of soaking into the roadway, will stop among the stones and flow down the hill through the pipe. To keep a road smooth and crowned the best method is to drag it with a road drag. A road drag is made easily with two halves of a log which has been split. The log should be about 6 or 8 inches in thickness and about 6 or 8 feet long. The two halves of the log are set three feet apart with the smooth face of the log toward the center of the road, thus forming the crown. The edges of the logs will smooth out the ruts. The best way to drag is to begin at the side ditch and go up one side of the road, and then down the other. In the next trip the drag should be started a little nearer the center and the last trip over the road the drag may work close to the center itself. Small ridges of earth will be thrown in the horse track and smeared by the round side of the log smoothly over the road. The smearing of the earth by the drag is called "puddling" and it tends to make the surface of the road smooth and watertight after the rain comes out. The road is always dragged after it has rained and not when it is dry. A good, strong pair of horses with a well-built drag can drag about 3 or 4 miles of road in a day, and it is the best way to maintain good roads. In every county some farmer along each 4 miles of road should own a drag and drag the road when it rains, and he would always find the road in good condition when he goes to market.

Owing to the fact that many rural schools were closed at the time when the prize maintenance essay was announced by Director Logan Waller Page of the office of Public Roads, it has been decided to extend the limit for receiving the essays to October 15, 1913. In addition to the gold medal as first prize, two silver medals will be given as second and third prizes. If a child who has submitted one essay previous to the issue of this notice should care to try again, he is at liberty to do so, but he must be a pupil of a rural school. There is some misunderstanding in regard to the subject of the essay. The idea is to set the children thinking how to better their earth roads with the material they have at hand.

Farmers Should Clean Up

All outbuildings should be painted now, but if you can't afford paint, whitewash is cheap and will go a long way toward giving your farm a clean, fresh, prosperous look in keeping with the springtime season—will do a lot to let passers-by know that "a man who cares" owns your place. If you really can't afford the beauty and attractiveness of a painted residence, you can at least use plenty of whitewash and make the yard glorious with plenty of flowers. Whitewash and flower seed are cheap.—The Progressive Farmer.

Ulcers and Skin Troubles

If you are suffering with any old, running or fever sores, ulcers, boils, eczema or other skin troubles, get a box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and you will get relief promptly. Mrs. Bruce Jones, of Birmingham, Ala., suffered from an ugly ulcer for nine months and Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured her in two weeks. Will help you. Only 25c. Recommended by Omar A. Jones, druggist.

THE JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY

State Scholarships in Engineering Courses

Applications for scholarships in the Department of Engineering, established under the provisions of the Laws of Maryland Chapter 90, 1912 should now be made.

Entrance examinations for all students will be held in McCoy Hall, The Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, on June 25th to 27th and on September 20th to October 24, 1913, beginning at 9 a. m. Applicants for scholarships are urged to take the examinations in June. If there is more than one applicant for a particular scholarship a competitive examination will be held at the University as soon as possible after the autumn examinations.

In addition to certain collegiate scholarships and scholarships at large, the Act provides for 102 scholarships to be apportioned among the counties and legislative districts of Baltimore city, the same number of awards so far as possible to be made each year. The undergraduate courses in Engineering will extend through four years and it has been determined to offer 65 of these scholarships in the year 1913 and 1914. Allegany, Baltimore, Frederick and Washington counties and the four legislative districts of Baltimore city will each be entitled to two scholarships, and each of the other counties to one scholarship in October 1913. Six scholarships at large may also be awarded at this time. Applicants for scholarships should address the Registrar, The Johns Hopkins University for the blank forms of application and for further information as to the examination and the award of scholarships.

Miss Jennie Malone Dead

Miss Jennie Malone, daughter of Mr. Sidney Malone, of near this town, died at the home of her brother, Mr. Marion S. Malone, on Saturday night last in the 50th year of her age.

Miss Malone had been an invalid for more than twenty-five years and had been confined to her bed for six or seven years. Her life stands forth as a shining example of patient endurance and Christian fortitude.

Funeral services took place at Allen Methodist Episcopal Church South, of which church the deceased was a member, yesterday (Monday) afternoon at 4 o'clock, the Rev. J. Howard Gray, pastor of Antioch Methodist Episcopal Church, conducting the services, and interment was made in the family burying lot adjoining the church.

Miss Malone is survived by her father (Mr. Sidney Malone) one sister, (Mrs. A. J. Huffington) of this town, and two step brothers, (Mr. Harry Malone, of Salisbury, and Mr. Marion S. Malone of Princess Anne.)

Judge Dennis is 67

Former Judge John Upshur Dennis, of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore, was 67 years old Saturday, 14th inst.

Judge Dennis, who retired from the bench in 1908 after two years of invalidism, following a stroke of paralysis, never fully recovered his health, and early this year was again paralyzed. He was a patient for a number of weeks at the Church Home and Infirmary, Baltimore. Since leaving there he has been at the home of Mr. Anderson.

Though his health has for some time been showing steady improvement, it is not expected that Judge Dennis will be able to go this year to Ocean City, where for many years he was accustomed to spend the summer. —Snow Hill Messenger.

GRADUATES AT FOURTEEN

Hugh Latimer Dryden Receives His Sheepskin From the Baltimore City College

Among the 172 graduates of the Baltimore City College, Monday night of last week was Hugh Latimer Dryden, aged 14 years, a grandson of Mr. Geo. A. Culver, of Dublin district, Somerset county. In commenting on this young graduate, the Baltimore Sun on Sunday, the 15th, says:

"Hugh is a little fellow, not yet out of knickerbockers, bashful and boyish in every way. These traits do not prevent him being a leader among his classmates. The youngest among all the seniors, he stands first in class honors and will carry off many of the big prizes of the night. So far as is known Dryden is the youngest graduate to receive his sheepskin from the City College.

"While proficient in every branch of study, he stands out pre-eminently in mathematics. He is a near-wizard, it is said, in that line. He solves problems, runs through theorems and wanders nonchalantly into other mathematical labyrinths. His great ambition is to become a professor of mathematics. With this object in view, he will enter the Johns Hopkins University in September to continue his studies.

"Dryden lives at 1040 North Milton avenue. He entered the public school at West Postoffice, Somerset county, when he was 6 years old. He made four classes in two years, leaving the school when his family moved to Baltimore. He then entered the fifth grade of No. 35 school, Lakewood avenue and Orleans street, finished up the fifth and sixth grades in a little more than a year. Next he entered the preparatory school No. 52, Oak and Twenty-fourth streets. It took him a year and a half to go through the seventh and eighth grades. His course at the City College was completed in three years. The boy is of studious bent and takes but little interest in athletics.

Hicks' Forecasts for July

The Vulcan regular storm period is central on the 1st, covering the last two days of June, and first four days in July. The Moon is in conjunction with Earth and Sun on the 4th, causing it to appear very far up in north declination. The Mercury and Venus equinoctial periods will be in full strength, all intensified by the dominating power of the Jupiter period. The first seismic period for July is central on the 4th, extending from the 1st to the 7th. Its effects will fall notably on and touching the 5th and 6th. An influx of cooler air will come with the rising barometer from the northwest, on the western sides of these storms, giving temporary relief from summer heat for a day or two following.

A reactionary storm period will develop and run its course from west to east during the 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th. The Moon in perigee on the 6th, and on the celestial equator on the 9th, will cause this period to hold on, or be prolonged beyond its normal limitations. A climax of summer heat, culminating in startling gusts of wind, thunder, rain and hail will in all probability visit wide sections on and touching the 9th, after which, look for sudden drop of temperature over most parts of the country.

A regular storm period extends from the 11th to the 16th. The center of the Venus period falls on the 14th, the culminating day of this regular storm period. The Moon will be at extreme declination south on the 15th, hence northerly air currents will flow southward at the culmination of this period, modifying the summer heat, and giving more pleasant nights, for temporary comfort to man and beast.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 18th, 19th and 20th. This period is coincident with the full Moon, or Moon's opposition with Earth and Sun. The barometer will show marked atmospheric changes at this period, the temperature will rise and a show of blistering, summer clouds and storms will appear in many parts of the country, drifting from western to eastern parts of the continent.

A regular storm period involves the 22d to 27th, having its center on the 24th. If the barometer does not rise after electrical storms on and about the 22d, a series of blistering thunder storms will appear for several days and nights in succession at this period.

$7,076,517 in Stamps Sold

Revenue received from the sale of parcel post stamps during the first three months of the operation of the system totaled $7,076,517, according to figures compiled at the Postoffice Department at Washington.

During that period approximately 150,000,000 parcel post packages were handled by the postal service. Chicago led all the cities both in the number of parcels handled and in the amount of stamps sold, the latter being $1,254,468. New York city's sales for the same period aggregated $818,139.

THE ISSUE IN THE OYSTER QUESTION

By James E. Ellegood, Counsel of the Oystermen's Protective Association of Somerset County—Oyster Culture—The Encroachments and Penalties of the Present Law

The following, which appeared in the editorial column of last Tuesday's Baltimore Evening Sun, is a strong statement of the oyster question in its relation to the present planting law:

The Sun took the newspaper privilege of cutting out a part and cutting up the balance of my recent open letter to Mr. Maltbie and of making editorial references not quite warranted by what I said.

I did not intimate "organizing a general crusade against the Haman oyster law," but I did make some criticism of it, and will do so at this time and probably at other times about its encroachments upon the public right of fishery and its unusual "penalties" for trespass upon private property. I did not intimate a desire to take up "civilization back to the times of Magna Charta," but I do contend that the character of our modern civilization should be determined by the spirit of that antiquated document in the contest (as new as the last Presidential election and as old as that ancient instrument) between personal rights and liberties, on the one hand, and property rights and special privileges on the other. I did not attempt to "halt modern progress" (I am somewhat of a progressive myself) "by setting up an indefensible claim of property rights in the public waters of the State on the part of a numerically small class of citizens." On the other hand, it was the numerically large class for whom I was speaking.

To illustrate: Since April, 1913, 17 persons of Baltimore city have obtained licenses for 1,700 acres in Tangier Sound, off the mouth of Big Annemessex river; bottoms that are not and never were barren in fact, but were made so legally in 1908 by the avowed policy of the Shellfish Commission, because at the time of the survey it was the opinion of the commission that the bottoms did not then have oysters to furnish a good day's work in catching oysters. Seventeen others have applied for 1,700 more acres on the west side of the sound, between Kedges Straits and the Virginia line. None of the bottoms were ever barren, and if depleted when surveyed in 1908 they have recuperated since, and are now profitable for all the people; while under the leasing system these 3,400 acres will be the sole right of 34 persons only because they, with all the bottoms of the sound on the west side, between Kedges Straits and the Virginia line, have been made legally barren, and conclusively so.

Again, there are about 775 licensed oystermen in Somerset county. Giving only an average of three persons to a family makes about 2,400 persons dependent mainly on catching oysters for a living, to say nothing of numerous others whose prosperity indirectly depends on the licensed oystermen. Some persons take as though the natural rock oystermen had the exclusive right to catch oysters on the public bottoms. The fact is that so long as the bottom of the State and tributaries remains vested in the State every citizen of Maryland can take oysters upon the public bottoms. The miner of Allegany, the farmer of Montgomery, the artisan of Baltimore, may come and dwell among the oystermen and become one of them. Now, let the title of the State pass out of the State to individual holding, then so many acres thus granted are converted from public to private use.

The quantity of acres or the time of the lease does not affect the principle, whether the policy be good or bad. Some have said, "Why do not the oystermen take up the bottoms? If 775 licensed oystermen in Somerset take up 100 acres in the sound, each for 20 years, there would have to be 77,500 acres to go around and all others in the State would be out for 20 years.

Passing from the argument based on numbers, I take up the present oyster law. If this is to remain as it is and is to be administered as it has been since 1906, I fail to see how the public right of fishing is to be preserved. To adapt a famous saying of Abraham Lincoln, it seems impossible for the natural bottoms to remain half open for all and half private and exclusive. Assuming that depleted bottoms are to be subject to private holding, it is manifest that this course subjects the other natural beds to a greater burden and early depletion and then—well, the result is inevitable. This is the logical, as well as the physical, result of the teaching of Mr. Hugh M. Smith, Deputy United States Fish Commissioner, who said in a recent number of the National Geographic Magazine that "natural rocks are nuisances."

One thing—neither wants the barren bottoms and both want the natural beds, whether depleted or filled to the brim with oysters. The point of difference is that one wants them as a means of common livelihood, while the other wants the State to grant them for private use and gain. Both classes know these run-down bottoms will become fruitful and profitable if let alone a while.

Oysters are neither fed nor bred, after the manner of fowl and cattle. The chief features of the so-called "culture" are a proper bottom under salt water oysters to furnish the "spat" (and one will send forth millions), something on the suitable bottom for the young to catch to, not overcrowded, and culling on the beds. Nine out of ten parts of "oyster culture" is nature's own work. If they are overcrowded, they will die; and if nature's food supply is short, they will either die or be too poor for market. The oyster students tell us this; it is therefore as needful not to have an overstock of oysters on the bottoms as it is not to have an undersupply. A poor oyster in market is about as unprofitable as no oyster. The Shellfish Commission warns lessees against planting beyond the food supply furnished by the waters. But this is not regulated and it seems impracticable to do so by law, so long as 300,000 acres of bottoms are open for leasing, with 215,000 acres of natural beds.

The State can, and does to some extent, help the oyster culture. The cull by the act of 1912 is helpful; then by private planting and making two oysters grow where none ever grew before. This would incur expensive experimentation, but it would entitle the planter to claim that he is a public benefactor, as Douglas Jerrold, I believe it was, who said that "he is a public benefactor who made two spears of grass grow where none grew before."

Now, this cure might not produce great revenue for the State treasury, but the main object of all farming of the land, above as well as under the waters, is to furnish a means of livelihood and a food supply for the people; the "general welfare" and not private gain should be the objective point.

History does not tell us that King John ever "went a-fishing," but when he wanted, not fish for dinner, but money for his treasury, he farmed out at his own price the "exclusive right of fisheries" with many other of his "regal" or royal rights; hence Runnymede, where he yielded this, with many other exclusive privileges, to persuade arguments of men with arms in their hands, for the public use.

For 700 years, less 2, the people of Great Britain, and more so in this country, have tried to guard this public right with jealous care, as something superior to a mere revenue for the treasury of the sovereign, crowned or uncrowned, and the courts of the State and the United States Supreme Court have uniformly decided that the title to the bottoms under navigable waters is "held by the State in trust for the public, and that there can be no irrevocable grant in disregard of this public trust under which the sovereign was bound to manage it"; that "the bed or soil of navigable waters is held by the people of the State in their character as sovereign in trust for the public uses for which they are adapted." Is the State holding for public uses when it makes an irrevocable grant for private holding and use one hundred or five hundred acres of natural bottoms "adapted for public uses," though temporarily "depleted"? This is not the place to answer this question.

It may be said with little fear of successful contradiction that the law as it now is and has been interpreted and executed in the laying out of bottoms is a direct encroachment upon the natural beds. This must be so if the bottoms "adapted to public use" by nature for oyster growing are to be set aside for private use, merely because temporarily depleted and made legally barren by order of the Shellfish Commission. The law then denies the individual oystermen the right to go into court and defend his common-law right—that is, it makes him dependent on twenty-four others; it limits that privilege to four months from the filing of the survey; then after four years the Legislature again aids the encroachment by increasing the private right from ten to thirty acres and to one hundred acres in Somerset county. Now reinforce this with the drastic and "unreasonable" penalties for mere trespass on private grounds (as imprisonment and refusal to allow the convicted oysterman to ply his trade for three years by refusing him a license) and add the doctrine that these licenses are irrevocable grants or contracts. This surely is subordinating the public right of fishing.

At the conference in Baltimore the Board of Public Works and the Board of Shellfish Commissioners showed the manifest disposition to do all the law will allow to give relief, but the duties of the commission are chiefly, if not fully, now reduced to ministerial duties. Any substantial relief must come from the Legislature.

Prof. Chas. A. Wagner Named

Governor Miller last week announced the appointment of Prof. Charles A. Wagner, of the State Normal School, West Chester, Pa., to be State Commissioner of Education of Delaware. The office was created by the last Legislature. The salary is $2,000 per year.

Professor Wagner will have supervision over the rural public schools outside of incorporated cities and towns. The appointment is for four years. The Governor first offered the place to ex-Representative Everett C. Johnson, of Newark, Del., but he declined it.

DEAL'S ISLAND OYSTERMEN

Want Candidates for the Legislature To Be In Favor of Repeal of Haman Law

Natural bar oystermen of the Deal's Island section of Somerset county have declared against oyster culture in the waters of Maryland, and, as the outgrowth of a protective association formed recently, are joined together to try to have the Haman Oyster Culture law and its amendments repealed by the next Legislature. At the Deal's Island meeting William Benton was elected president of the association; A. G. Brown, vice-president; M. L. Kirwan, secretary, and Edward Collier, treasurer.

Incidentally, these oystermen as well as others in tidewater counties, declare that they will make the planting question a leading issue in the fall elections. Candidates for the Legislature, they say, will be asked to state plainly their stand as to whether they favor private planting or are willing to side with the natural bar oystermen.

"It has come to our knowledge," says the resolution, "that private planters are encroaching upon the rights and privileges of us as natural rock oystermen of our State, with the avowed purpose of leasing and converting for their own selfish greed the oyster rocks of the State and bars of the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries, which heretofore we have enjoyed for our support and maintenance."

With this somewhat complicated preamble, the resolution gets into the meat of its purpose thus:

"Therefore, we, as oystermen of Deal's Island, Somerset county, Maryland, in mass meeting here assembled, do hereby condemn such unlawful practices upon our God-given rights, and do further organize and band ourselves together in one common cause, namely: To use all honorable means for the protection of ourselves and families, and to oppose and fight these enemies of the oystermen of Maryland who have come into our midst to destroy our means of support."

The organization is formally named the "Deal's Island Natural Rock Oystermen's Association," pledged at all times to oppose "any form of leasing out to private parties the natural oyster rocks of the Chesapeake Bay and tributaries."

Further, the resolution condemns the "action of the Shellfish Commissioners in surveying and leasing out to private parties the natural oyster rocks," "for their individual benefit, which is contrary to the laws of Maryland." It states that it will co-operate with other protective associations in the anti-planting fight, and winds up with this:

"And be it known to all that this association is non-partisan and that we will at all times use our best judgment in selecting candidates for office who will be loyal and true to the oystermen of the State of Maryland."

Governor Pardons Safe Blower

Frank Smith, formerly a notorious bank burglar, safe blower and train robber, who was particularly annoying to the Pennsylvania railroad, has been pardoned by Governor Goldsborough of Maryland, and Tuesday he was released from the Maryland Penitentiary, after having served seven years of a 17-year sentence.

Smith had operated extensively on this peninsula and much of the stuff he stole was disposed of in Wilmington. His pardon resulted from evidences of a reformation, which impressed themselves upon the prison authorities, the Prison Aid Society of Maryland and individuals. The governor took the matter up with Postoffice Inspector Plummer and Chief Gorman of the Pennsylvania railroad police, here, and at first they objected, but when they became convinced that Smith had actually had a change of heart and wanted to do better, they withdrew their objections and the pardon followed.

Wednesday Inspector Plummer received a letter from Charles D. Reid, secretary of the Maryland Prison Aid Society, telling him of the pardon and that Smith had been taken into the society's home, with the belief that he had actually reformed. Smith, it has been learned, has become quite religious.

Garris-Richards Wedding

Miss Gladys Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Richards, of Westover, Maryland, and Mr. Virgil Garris, of Weelington, Ohio, were quietly married at high noon last Thursday at the bride's home. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. B. Guthrie. The bride wore a wedding gown of white draped charmeuse, effectively trimmed with Duchess lace and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses. The home was decorated with ferns and daisies. The color scheme being yellow and white.

A reception for the family and a few friends followed the ceremony. After an extended wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Garris will reside in Weelington, Ohio.

OUR GOOD ROAD SYSTEM

Discussed By Logan W. Page—Excellent Facilities For Reaching Markets

A very interesting discussion of the present road system of this Peninsula is contained in the address of Logan W. Page, at the meeting of the Horticultural Society in Wilmington, last January. Mr. Page first calls attention to the fact that within 200 miles of this Peninsula are 14 cities of more than 50,000 population each, and six cities of more than 300,000 each; that the aggregate population of the 20 cities is more than 9,000,000. This garden spot of ours, therefore, lies within easy access of one-tenth of the population of the entire country, and at the very gate of the greatest market center of the world. The facilities for reaching these markets are excellent. Our soil and climate are eminently adapted to trucking and fruit growing, and Mr. Page says, "are hardly surpassed in this respect by any other section of our country." Mr. Page proceeds to say that notwithstanding these favorable circumstances, the progress of this Peninsula is not all that might be expected. Gratifying progress has been made but it has been somewhat restricted and its continuity broken. On this Peninsula are 1,971,677 acres of improved land, producing crops annually. If from each of these acres one-half ton of produce is hauled away, the total haulage will amount to 985,838 tons, moved an average distance of 3.16 miles. If we assume that 90 per cent. of this tonnage passes over 20 per cent. of the roads, by improving this 20 per cent. of roads we would effect a saving of five cents per ton mile, an annual saving of $155,762.

"Why should not this saving be capitalized so as to help pay for improving the 20 per cent of roads? In your territory there are 9,742 miles of public roads, of which about five per cent. have already been improved. Twenty per cent. of this mileage would be 1,948 miles, and if from this we deduct the five per cent. already improved, we find remaining for improvement only 1,461 miles. To capitalize the annual saving shown above, we find that it will pay 5 per cent. interest on $3,115,248, which would be $2,132 per mile on the remaining mileage necessary to be improved in order to get the desired 20 per cent."

The annual report of the Peninsula Horticultural Society has been printed. It contains the addresses delivered at the meeting in Wilmington last winter, and is a pamphlet of about 100 pages. It may be had free by addressing the secretary, Wesley Webb, Dover, Del.

Allison A. Gillis Dead

Mr. Allison A. Gillis, for years one of the most widely known merchants of Salisbury, died at his home on North Division street Wednesday morning. Mr. Gillis was born March 12, 1850. He was the son of the late Beauchamp L. Gillis, and as a young man entered the grocery house of his father, who was one of the pioneer merchants in Salisbury, as a clerk. Later he was taken into partnership under the firm name of B. L. Gillis & Son, and was doing business when the big fire of 1886 swept that city. Mr. Gillis was one of the pioneer wholesale merchants of Salisbury. After the big fire which caused Mr. Gillis heavy loss, he opened business in an old laundry building, and although he faced an almost empty bank account, he started over again and made wonderful progress, erecting the large storehouse on Dock street and enlarging his operations until his salesmen covered the entire peninsula.

Mr. Gillis was one of the founders of the Farmers and Merchants' Bank of Salisbury. He was a director of the Wicomico Building and Loan Association. He retired from business two years ago, being succeeded by T. Y. Ruark & Co. He is survived by his mother (Mrs. Beauchamp L. Gillis), two children (Mrs. H. C. Tull and Mrs. F. A. Grier, Jr., of Salisbury.)

Anderson Dog-Whipped

William H. Anderson, superintendent of the Maryland Anti-Saloon League and widely known in connection with the local option movement, was lashed with a dog-whip at his office in Baltimore on Saturday by Robert L. Ulman, son of a retired wholesale liquor dealer of that city. Ulman had taken exception to a newspaper letter written by Anderson which Ulman construed as an attack on the women relatives of liquor dealers. Anderson received eight or ten blows one of which cut him under the eye. Ulman was arrested and released on bail.

A GIRL IN A WINDOW

She Could See, but Not Be Seen

By ELLEN D. MORTON

Norman Kirtland spent the two weeks—in other words, the twenty-sixth part of the year, which employers consider a sufficient proportion between work and play for their employees—at the seashore. Older persons, who have been hard worked for a long period, desire rest. The young dread such a spending of a vacation. Kirtland was twenty years old and devoted to boating. He owned a wherry that looked like a thin grasshopper, the outrigger and oars standing for the wings and legs. It was his pleasurable anticipation to pull himself about in this toppy affair instead of forcing some other animal or some machine to do the work, as a man double his age would be inclined to do.

At Ocean Beach, where Kirtland spent his vacation, there were inlets, and when the wind was off shore and the water still he did not hesitate to go outside. Besides hotels, there were cottages all along the shore, and in them lurked danger for fine looking, muscular young men from pretty young girls.

In one of these cottages on a point of land made by an inlet and the ocean dwelt one of these dangers, Miss Edith Birney. She was of a dangerous age—eighteen—a dangerous disposition, and about her was a dangerous atmosphere. One morning from behind curtains she saw a stalwart young fellow in light boating apparel, displaying fine biceps, pulling past her summer house out into the ocean. Taking a marine glass, she brought it to bear on the boatman and saw that he was comely. Watching him, she saw him row to where a light swell was rolling, and he looked very attractive out there, "rocked in the cradle of the deep."

Kirtland sported on the surface of the water for an hour; then slowly and gracefully his sweeps brought him back into the inlet.

In nature a constant warfare goes on. Among nations some use enormous guns, some are inventing aeroplanes from which to drop bombs on their enemies, while others fill their harbors with mines to destroy ships. Now, there is also a warfare in love, and Kirtland, though unconscious of danger, was about to run upon a petard that might hoist him clean out of his bachelorhood and drop him into the slough of matrimony.

He was pulling along lazily when something drifted by him that attracted his attention. It was a bottle about whose neck was tied a bright red ribbon—doubtless to catch the eye—and that it had been placed there by a woman was evident from the fact that it had been tied in a bowknot. Kirtland backed water, took up the bottle and saw that it was tightly corked, with a bit of white paper inside. Taking out the cork, he managed with the aid of a fishhook to extract the paper. On one side was written, "We are lost." It would perhaps have been more to the point if the words had been, "You are lost." On the other side were two letters, E. B., and a strand of very fair hair, almost white hair, was folded in a smaller bit of paper within the larger one.

When Kirtland read the words "We are lost" he at once concluded that he had picked up a message from some ship that had gone down, but when he noticed the initials and saw the strand of fine hair he was puzzled. "The hair was undoubtedly that of a woman, and a woman about to go down to the bottom of the ocean is not likely to put her initials on paper with a lock of her hair. She would be more likely to write her full name, with a farewell message to loved ones far away."

While Kirtland sat in the boat trying to decipher this message from the sea a pair of eyes behind a double barreled gun of aluminum and glass, protected by an embankment of lace curtains, were aimed straight at him. Unconscious of any lurking enemy, he was right in the line of fire. The girl behind the gun seemed to take an inexpressible delight in his apparent surprise, and when he carefully folded the paper about the lock of hair and slipped it into his canvas shoe—he had no pocket—her face broke into a smile of triumph. Then the young man pulled away toward his boathouse.

There is a peculiar stupidity about most very young men as to the tricks and the manners of the opposite sex. Kirtland had no more idea that the bottle he had picked up had been thrown into the water purposely for him than he had that the thrower, instead of being out at sea, was watching him from a house a few hundred yards away. Nevertheless there was a sentiment about that lock of hair, and he was not so obtuse as not to suppose that the initials E. B. referred to the owner. But that the lock had been cut from the head of a pretty girl purposely for him was furthest from his thoughts.

That very night at a dance at one of the hotels he noticed a girl dressed in garments so pure and spotless and white and simple that no one would have supposed she would be capable of fanning a pet lamb. And Kirtland was especially struck with the fact that her hair was so light that it was almost white. Indeed, it was exactly the shade of the lock he had found in the bottle. But—and here comes in an instance of man's stupidity in woman's ways—no one could have beaten it into his head with an argumentative sledgehammer that the lock of hair he had in his vest pocket nearest his heart had been cut from the head of that angel in immaculate white.

The tolls these creatures throw out are of the finest texture, so fine that no one would suspect that they lead up to a cable. Kirtland did not analyze the connection between the silken strands in his pocket and the coiffure on the girl's head. But it existed all the while, and she had intended that it should exist. Mind you, I don't say that she laid down a definite plan of procedure. She did it by that unconscious genius for such work which is inborn in womankind. At any rate, without that lock of hair and its sentimental connection with the coiffure there is no reason to suppose that Kirtland would have hunted all over the room for some one who could introduce him to the girl concerning whom this sentiment existed.

He inquired who she was and was told that she was a Miss Birney—Miss Edith Birney. But this did not convey any information to him, as it might have done had he not been stupidly blind. They say love is blind. That must refer to the man.

He found the introducer and was received by the girl with reserve. He danced with her once; then she suggested that the air in the room being close, she would like a few minutes on the veranda. Standing there looking down on the narrow water leading out into the ocean on which he had been rowing that day, Kirtland was reminded of his find and spoke of it to his companion.

"How sad," she said feelingly. "Do you suppose all on board went down?" "I am not certain whether it was a shipwreck or one of those messages that persons are always throwing into the water to make fools of the finders."

"Have you heard of any ship being lost?" she asked. "No, I haven't. And I don't believe the bottle was thrown from a sinking ship at all. If so the name of the vessel would have been given. It more likely was tossed off from some yacht or other craft. I think it must have been some fool girl did it, for it contained a lock of hair."

The young lady winced at this, but did not betray herself.

"Are you a cottager," asked Kirtland, "or do you stop at a hotel?" "A cottager. That's our cottage over there where the inlet joins the ocean."

"Indeed, I often pull by there on my way outside."

"Do you?" "Yes; usually when it's calm on the ocean. I think I will be able to go out tomorrow morning."

"If I happen to be about and see you I'll wave to you."

Then they went inside and danced together, and somehow no one attempted to take the girl away from Kirtland, and Kirtland didn't seem to want to get away from the girl. He kept looking at her light hair, tinged with yellow, and thinking of its counterpart in his pocket, and the more he thought about it the more a peculiar feeling grew within him that he did not seek to analyze, but found very pleasant. When the two separated the spider had got the fly inside the outer web, and the next move would be to ask him to walk into her parlor.

This second part came the next day. Kirtland pulled by the house out to sea, but looked in vain for the girl who lived there. However, when he pulled back she was down at the private landing, pretending to engage herself with the boats. Kirtland pulled in to the landing. The girl looked surprised, but pleased, and invited him to the house for a glass of wine and a biscuit.

Kirtland, being in boating costume, declined the invitation, whereupon the young lady suggested that the refreshments could be served in the summer house. At this he accepted, and the two walked up to the place in question. He found a very dainty and at the same time comfortable stopping place. There were easy wicker chairs, a table with books and magazines in it and a hammock. If "the fly" had realized how he was being entangled doubtless the words of the rime would have occurred to him—

It's the prettiest little parlor that ever you did spy.

It is useless to follow this spider and fly process any further. The main work had been done, the fly being in the parlor. And it is to be supposed that the girl who had the ingenuity to get him there would have no difficulty in keeping him. The rest required time, but it was dead easy. Kirtland went back to business not knowing whether he was on his heels or his head. He had proposed to Miss Birney and was told that she must have some time to consider. She took time enough to drive him to the border of despair, but not over it.

One day soon after their marriage Mrs. Kirtland fished a lock of very light hair out of her husband's pocket. "What's this, dear?" she asked, with a touch of reproach in her voice and in her beautiful eyes.

"That?" he said meditatively. "Oh, I remember! That's the lock of hair I took out of that bottle I picked up that some silly girl probably threw from a boat out at sea to make a guy of some fellow. I kept it because it was very like your hair."

"How sweet of you!" She kissed him, but did not tell him who was the silly girl or the fellow of whom she made a guy.

And yet a young man is considered to be expanding into one of the lords of creation and a young girl is considered a budding innocent.

Uncrowned Queens.

There have been seven uncrowned queens of England. The first was Margaret of France, the second wife of Edward I. Money was scarce in the government coffers at the time, and Edward could not afford the expense of a coronation. The four later wives of Henry VIII., Anne Boleyn's successors—Jane Seymour, Anne of Cleves, Catherine Howard and Catherine Parr—were never publicly crowned as queen consorts. Perhaps it was because Henry thought it would cause ridicule to have coronations occur as frequently as his marriages. Henrietta Maria, the wife of Charles I., being a strict Catholic, refused to take part in a state function which would compel her to partake of the Sacrament, according to the rites of the Church of England. Sophia Dorothea, the wife of George I., and mother of George II., was never recognized as queen of England and therefore cannot be classed as one of Britain's uncrowned queens. Caroline of Brunswick, the wife of George IV., was not permitted to be present in Westminster hall at his coronation.—London Mail.

Artificial Ears.

Artificial ears are so skillfully made that they may with difficulty be distinguished from natural ones. It is said. When the person who has lost an ear applies to the manufacturer for a substitute there is made a mold of the remaining ear. If there be left any part of the other a mold of that part also must be taken to assist in the fitting of the artificial. Manufacturers assert that no two ears are alike and that it takes a skillful workman to prepare an ear from the mold or molds. When finished, says Harper's Weekly, the new ear is pasted on the stump or simply set in the position of the lost ear. It is really only the first artificial ear that is expensive, the chief cost pertaining to the making of the mold. Vulcanized rubber, which can be bent and twisted, has been found to constitute the best material for the making of artificial ears.

The Two Fine Things of Life.

Because it is an elementary thing to do it requires courage to buy or build a house. Buy? Build? The universal head becomes a pendulum of warning. There are just two fine things open to most of us between the cradle and the grave. One is to marry and the other is to acquire a home, and the modern answer to both proposals is the same. "Don't," so greatly do men fear life, so exorbitantly do they purpose to enjoy it. Philip Gilbert Hamerton, in "The Intellectual Life," pointed out that the invention of railways had resulted in a return to one of the most marked phases of barbarism, a nomadic life. Since he wrote we have invented the motorcar and the flat, and fixity of residence, which is a distinctive mark of civilization, has become its derision or despair.—London T. P.'s Weekly.

A Coaxer For Recruits.

Nowadays the authorities do not advertise so alluringly for recruits as they did in the past. A notice issued in 1801 by British authorities calls on men to join the light dragoons. In which regiment they are informed, "you will be mounted on the finest horses in the world, with superb clothing and the richest accoutrements; your pay and privileges are equal to 2 guineas a week; your society is courted; you are admired by the fair, which, combined with the chance of getting swished to a buxom widow or brushing with a rich heiress, renders the situation truly enviable and desirable. Young men out of employment or otherwise uncomfortable, there is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads to fortune. Nick it!"

Some Talkers.

A man once visited Niagara Falls, taking with him his wife and his wife's sister. Immediately on arriving and securing hotel quarters the party set out to see the wonderful sight. wife and wife's sister talking as they walked along on a million interesting subjects.

"Say, John," said wife, turning to the old man after they had gone quite a distance, "aren't we getting near the falls?"

"Yes," was the prompt reply of John. "If you will stop talking a minute you will hear the thunder of the water quite plainly."—Philadelphia Telegraph

Made It Good and Long.

Neither man nor boy is ever at a loss for excuses for not knowing what he has no mind to know or for not doing what he has no mind to do. The wittiest that is recorded in college annals is the reason given in the senate house for not answering the question, "Who were the minor prophets?" "I do not fill this in," wrote the candidate, "because the inquiry is so invidious."

A schoolboy has now improved upon this by handing in a written medical certificate to excuse his nonattendance. "I certify," the medical authority was made to say, "that this boy is unfit to attend school for 304 days." The schoolmaster thought it odd, the term being so long and at the same time so particular in its date, and upon inquiry it turned out that the doctor had written "3 or 4" days, which the boy had altered to 304.—Argonaut.

A Foe to "Baby Talk."

It is not enough that a word be spoken. It makes a great deal of difference how it is spoken. The proper vocalization of words has an effect upon children which is often, one may say generally, overlooked. Almost everybody is fond of repeating the baby's efforts to talk, and baby talk lingers in many homes, an innocent but costly pleasure for the parents and the children alike. There are many persons of mature age at this moment who will never pronounce certain words properly since they became accustomed to a false pronunciation in childhood because somebody thought it was cute. There are many persons who will never get over certain false associations of ideas because somebody thought it was very amusing and funny to see the child mixing up things in such a beautiful childlike way.—Dr. A. A. Berle.

MANUFACTURERS are of two kinds—the honest and dishonest. The one makes the best goods, the other makes the worst. Each has his own particular scheme of life.

The honest manufacturer aims to make the best goods he can and to advertise them so that all the world will know of their merits. He knows investigation. He wants customers to hold him to a rigid accountability.

The dishonest manufacturer hopes to profit by deception. He produces an article that will be offered as "just as good" though he knows it is inferior. He seeks to make a larger profit than the honest manufacturer, and this larger profit is necessary because he has to find new customers day after day.

MANUFACTURERS WHO ADVERTISE ARE THE HONEST ONES.

OLD NUGGETS.

There is a Curious Resemblance Between Them and Meteorites.

How do nuggets of gold originate? Sometimes a mass of the precious metal worth a thousand dollars or more is found. By what process was so much gold compacted into a lump?

An attempt was made not long ago to answer this question. An investigator in Australia cut and sliced and polished gold nuggets with the sole purpose of finding out just what is their structure. The first thing he discovered was that there is one curious point of resemblance between gold nuggets and meteorites. Both, when polished and etched with chlorine water, exhibit a crystalline structure. In the case of meteorites the lines thus exhibited on the etched surface are called Widmanstätten figures, and their presence is said to be one of the most invariable characteristics of those metallic bodies that fall from the sky to the earth.

But it is not meant to be implied that gold nuggets have fallen from the sky because they exhibit a crystalline structure recalling that of meteorites. The resemblance is apparently only superficial, and the crystals of the nuggets differ in form from those of the meteorites.

Another curious fact is that when a nugget is heated in a Bunsen flame explosions take place on its surface. Blisters are formed which continue to swell until they burst with a sharp report and bits of gold are violently scattered about. It is evident that the nuggets contain either gases or some liquids or solids which are easily converted into the gaseous form. The expansion of which produces the explosions.—Harper's Weekly

THE BREADFRUIT TREE.

Its Meat When Cooked Tastes Like Mashed Potatoes and Milk.

One of the gifts of the eastern tropics to the western is the breadfruit, which is now extensively planted in the West Indies. This can be done only by cuttings, as the cultivated variety develops no seeds. In the wild form the chestnutlike seeds are eaten, but the pulp is disregarded. The tree is of moderate height, but spreads a broad crown of large, ragged edged, glossy leaves, making an excellent shade.

The fruit, which is a compound of the massive clusters of blossoms, is about the size of a coconut and is incased in a rough rind. This, when broken open and scooped out with a spoon, tastes like mashed potatoes and milk or like sweet bread, which it also resembles in appearance. It is a little fibrous toward the center, but elsewhere is quite smooth and "puddingy." Sometimes a curry or stew is made of it, and it goes well as a vegetable with meat or gravy. "With sugar, milk, butter or treacle," Wallace wrote, "it is a delicious pudding, having a very slight but delicate and characteristic flavor, which, like that of good bread and potatoes, one never gets tired of." It is also highly nutritious.

The genus (artocarpus) contains several species, one of which, the jackfruit, is also cultivated for eating. The timber of the tree is also useful, the bark can be prepared for a sort of cloth and the sap forms, when boiled with oil, a mucilaginous liquid very useful for making the seams of wooden palls, canoes and the like water tight.—Harper's Weekly.

EMERSON IN OLD AGE.

Even His Failing Memory Could Not Mar His Amiability.

In Dr. J. K. Hosmer's "The Last Leaf," there is a pathetic picture of Emerson in his old age when his memory had failed while his other faculties remained strong. "I had as a fellow guest a man who had long been intimate with him and whom he was very glad to see. Talking after tea in the library, Emerson said: 'I want to tell you about a friend in Germany. His name I cannot remember,' and he moved to and fro uneasily in his effort to recall it. 'This friend with whom we have taken tea tonight, whose name also I cannot remember'—here again came a distressed look at the failure of his faculty—I cannot remember his name either, but he can tell you of this German friend whose name I have also forgotten."

"It was a sorrow to see the breaking down of a great spirit and his agitation as he was conscious of his waning power. And yet, so far as I could see, it was only the memory that was going. The intellectual strength was still apparent, and the amiability of his spirit was perhaps even more manifest than in the years when he was in the full possession of himself."

"This came out in little things. He was overhauled at the table lest the hospitality should come short, troubled about the supply of butter and apple sauce, and soon after I saw him on his knees on the hearth taking care that the fire should catch the wood to abate the evening coolness that was gathering in the room."

The Rooks and the Seagulls.

A Dover correspondent reports a curious incident which was witnessed at a farm at Elms Vale, on the confines of the borough. A flock of seagulls flying inland had taken possession of a newly sown field and were pecking away, when a still more numerous flock of rooks swooped down and attacked the gulls. The rooks, being about two to each gull, flapped and rushed the gulls until they withdrew to a field some distance off. The victorious rooks then proceeded to enjoy themselves in the field, having first set what were apparently sentries along the side of the field. It was amusing to watch these sentries hustling away any gull which strayed too near. It has been noted by naturalists that this setting of sentries is in accordance with the habits of rooks.—London By-stander.

The Drink That Was Called Robur. About forty years ago there was advertised on London billboards a drink called Robur, said to be good for every ailment and, incidentally, the long sought after elixir of life. One was invited to send for free samples, and its marvelous properties were the subject of everybody's conversation. Robur might have been sold to this day had not some one, without the fear of a libel action before his eyes, divulged its secret formula—cold tea enlivened by rum. From that moment it fell as rapidly as it had risen, for people could make their own Robur if they wanted it.—Chicago News.

COUSIN TO THE CABBAGE.

Kohlrabi Liked by Some Dairymen as Food For Cows.

Kohlrabi is a cultivated variety of the kale or cabbage, distinguished by the swelling of the stem just above the ground, in a globular form, to the size of a man's fist or larger, leafstalks springing from the swollen part and adding to the peculiarity of its appearance. This is the part which is used, and its uses are similar to those of the turnip.

In quality the kohlrabi more nearly resembles the Swedish than the common turnip, and the use of it for feeding cows does not give their milk as disagreeable a flavor as when they are fed on turnips. Kohlrabi is very hardy, its leaves, as well as the stem and the root, enduring the most severe winters.

In the cultivation of kohlrabi it is usual to sow it on seed beds and to transplant by dibbling into fields, but this is perhaps not the best method. It ought, however, to be sown earlier than even Swedish turnip. Raised drills are unsuitable for it, owing to the effect of winds. It is more solid and nutritious than any kind of turnip of the same size. There are numerous subvarieties. Kohlrabi grows best in a strong, rich soil, with the use of abundant manure. One authority says of kohlrabi:

"Sow in spring, in rows eighteen inches apart, afterward thinning the plants to eight to ten inches. If the weather is suitable the thinnings may be planted, but it is considered difficult to transplant. Keep the weeds down, and when the thickened stems above ground are two or three inches through they are fit to eat and should be used at once, being tough when old. Cook same as turnips."

OWN YOUR HOME.

Every young farmer should strive to own a home. The home owner has more opportunity for efficient service to his community, county and state, and the comfort and pleasure of living on one's own farm are not to be compared to renting. Rent if you are not able to buy, but make your plans for owning your home.

Why We Cultivate Corn.

The purposes of interculture tillage are, first, to kill weeds; second, to keep the surface soil receptive to rainfall; third, to prevent the evaporation of soil moisture. Cultivating corn four inches deep as compared with two inches deep may reduce the yield 10 per cent, owing to pruning the roots. Four or five cultivations are usually sufficient.—Farm Progress.

For "Drowned" Land.

How to treat land that is too wet for crops and not easily drained. Plow it in a very dry time, thoroughly harrow and seed to redtop (herd's grass) and alsike clover.—Farm Journal.

HENS AND THEIR KINFOLKS.

A good way to keep off disease is to dig up a portion of the soil where the hens assemble, so that they can scratch and have a dirt bath in the clean fresh earth.

Provide a good open shed for the young turkeys to roost in and don't allow them to wander off. Their value is too great to allow them to take up with the neighbor's flock.

Always make the nest boxes easily removable, so that they may be frequently taken out of the house and cleaned, disinfected and treated for the destruction of vermin.

Ducks and geese do not roost and, when housed with chickens, are obliged to inhale the bad air from the floor under or near the perches. A low shelter and a small yard will make them comfortable.

ONE CAUSE OF WASTE.

It is stated on good authority that the annual loss to the apple industry of the country by the codling moth alone amounts to over $12,000,000. The annual loss to our truck growers from insect pests amounts to about 20 per cent of the crop, but by judicious methods of control this might be reduced to 5 per cent. This shows the need of up to date methods to reduce the high cost of living.—E. P. Hitchings, Experiment Station, Orono, Me.

CORN SILAGE PAYS WELL.

Experiments Prove Its Great Worth as a Feed For Stock.

The South Carolina experiment station recently published a bulletin by Archibald Smith giving the results of tests to ascertain the value of different kinds of forage crops fed with cottonseed meal. The main findings are of especial value to the farmers of the south and of great value to farmers in any section of the country. The bulletin demonstrates anew the economy of corn silage as beef producing feed.

In this test silage, corn stover and cottonseed hulls were compared. The test demonstrated: That corn silage gave by far the best returns not only in economic production of beef, but also in the quality of beef and the shape in which it reached the market.

That silage fed steers produced beef from 15 to 20 per cent cheaper than the other feeds. That silage fed beef lost less in shipping to market. This is a test which some shippers have disputed in the past, declaring silage fed beef lost severely in the shipping process.

That the silage fed group produced gains that would warrant a value on the silage of $6.86 per ton—this earning on a very poor market, as the steers sold for only $5.50 per hundred. Had they been sold on a good market the gain might have been increased 20 per cent.

That with a cost of $2 per ton for the production of corn silage a fair average good corn should be made to earn from $80 to $70 per acre.

WHEN TO CUT YOUR HAY.

Some Pointers For Growers of Timothy and Clover to Bear in Mind.

Timothy may be cut in the forenoon as soon as the dew is off and raked into windrows immediately after dinner if the weather is dry and clear. Any hay preserves best its color, aroma and palatability by being shocked or placed in the stack in the greenest possible condition without being so green that heating or molding will occur.

If the timothy is very heavy and is exposed to dew or a light shower before it is raked it will frequently be necessary to use the tedder in order to shape it up thoroughly and get rid of moisture.

Except in the case of small fields under conditions which would not justify an outlay for machinery, there is very little of the hay crop which goes into the old time shock. This is undoubtedly a very satisfactory way of curing hay in its best condition, especially if protected by a shock cover, but where large amounts are to be handled it is better economy to place it in a mow or stack it directly from the windrow.

Clover is best cut when it is in full bloom, but it is better to cut it earlier than this rather than later. If cutting is delayed until some of the clover blossoms mature and turn dark there is likely to be a heavy loss of foliage and a consequent deterioration in feeding value.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Economy Beñ Harvesters.

To make a bean harvester that will do good work and yet involve scarcely any expense take a common hoe to the blacksmith. Have shank cut in two and take a piece of steel of the same diameter and have a piece about ten inches long welded in. This is to keep the handle from striking the beans and shelling them. Have the hoe sharp and cut just at top of ground putting two rows into one when chop ped off.

You can chop them nearly as fast as you can walk, and when the beans are dry take a common pitchfork and load on to a wagon. In this way much hard labor is saved with but little expense.—Farm and Fireside.

Test Cows—and Farmers Too.

One of the best effects of the cow testing associations is on the farmer himself. One of the men who look after the cow testing associations said to us once that he had repeatedly noticed that a farmer was a "good case" who could not be aroused to better thinking and management by the work of the test. Too many farmers expect the cows to change for the better without doing anything in that direction themselves.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Give the Lambskins a Chance.

Lambs frequently experience a difficulty in finding the teats owing to the long wool surrounding the udder, and it is very important that the shepherd examine every ewe and use the shear to cut away any surplus wool. This will enable the lambs to feed with greater ease, and they are less apt to become victims of wool balls in the stomach, which frequently cause death.—American Agriculturist.

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 24, 1913

A boy in Philadelphia shot at a sparrow but his air-rifle shot struck a small child, fortunately not killing it. Air-rifles are dangerous playthings and the wonder is that parents permit their children to have them.

A man in Philadelphia and a woman in Baltimore on the same day last week started to take poison but concluded it tasted too bad to swallow. It would be fortunate indeed if all attempts at suicide could be as promptly foiled. It would be equally fortunate if the power of example, when of an improper kind, could be made less inviting.

A California man for four years past has refrained from all liquids except such as he could absorb from fruits. In addition he has lived in the open and has enjoyed the best of health. This story may or may not be true. Excesses of any kind are harmful. That in the direction of good water might be excused more readily than any other. It would be interesting to know how the California fruit man would be affected by reading "The Old Oaken Bucket."

Preparing For The Levy

The County Commissioners next week expect to strike the levy for 1913. This is a task that few appreciate. To adjust the expenses of the county so as to establish a moderate tax rate is not a simple affair. The taxable basis of the county is not high and yet certain expenditures and appropriations are absolutely necessary or required by law.
The public schools, for instance, require much more money than ever before in obedience to the law as to teachers' salaries, high schools, etc. So with the other county expenses. The Commissioners deserve sympathy rather than criticism as they approach this important work.

The Commissioners have recently been occupied in hunting up undisclosed property of various kinds to put on the tax books and have been successful in making a number of additions.
The authorities would be saved much inconvenience, and the county money, if improvements and changes were volunteered instead of having to be hunted down. Every taxpayer is interested in seeing that all private property holdings shall share their pro rata of the public expenses.

Another Insidious Lobby

Another deep-laid plot to mold public sentiment has been discovered with which, as affecting the vital welfare of the nation, the "insidious lobby" employed to influence tariff legislation at Washington is not to be compared. The Navy League of the United States has discovered that the American Peace Society has been sending speakers to public schools in the District of Columbia and elsewhere throughout the United States to speak on peace. According to the Navy League, the doctrines of the Peace Society are pernicious, misleading, based on misrepresentations, contrary to the teachings of Washington and of a kind with the propaganda which was responsible for the war of 1812 and for many of the difficulties which beset the government during the Civil War.

Therefore the Navy League has issued a call to arms, takes school boards to task for failure to make patriotic reprises against this lobbying of infant opinion, and volunteers to send out its own agents to combat such efforts in kind. Surely the Senate should investigate this charge—or, better, while the Senate is busy, the House, in anticipation of a three-battleship bill, should seek out the influences which are seeking to control legislation by artful appeal to the children of the land. Even the Government is being divided against itself, the Secretary of State is advocating the substitution of his fairy fleet of Friendship and Fellowship and the diplomacy of grape juice for the sweeping hail of grape, and other beneficaries of government pay, retired officers of the Navy, following the lead of the valorous Hobson, are urging the necessity of appropriations for war. Could anything be more insidious? Phila. Evening Bulletin.

—There is some consolation in the fact that even the suffragette hasn't altogether outgrown ice cream sodas.

World Borrowing

In February the German Government issued a loan for $185,000,000, which was very much under-subscribed. But it has just announced another loan of $56,250,000, with the effect of a great depression in the Berlin stock market, which has reacted upon London, Paris and New York.

But Germany has not been borrowing more than other countries. France has been projecting a loan of $200,- 000,000. Fifteen bond issues of national and colonial governments and corporations have been left in the greater part upon the hands of the underwriters in London, who have been obliged to borrow money to carry them.

The difficulty of selling bonds has been growing greater. Last winter the two explanations were the Balkan war and the hoarding of gold. The Balkan war ceased some months ago to be a serious factor, and the fact that the great national banks of Europe hold $120,000,000 more gold than they did a year ago casts some doubt about the hoarding. The financial authorities are coming to the conclusion that the demand for money far exceeds the world's supplies. The world is not saving money fast enough to meet the requirements of governments and corporations. The security markets all over are burdened with undigested bonds, and The London Economist summarizes the situation by saying that the world is "overloaded and overmanned."

Nearly every Continental nation is borrowing for military purposes. Canada is borrowing enormously, in propo-tion to its resources, for internal improvements. All our cities and States are borrowing for buildings and canals and roads and every conceivable form of expenditure. The State of New York is now raising $57,000,000 on short-time notes, because for the moment its bonds are unsaleable, though they are among the most desirable of all investments. In fifteen years New York City has added $913,000,000 to its bonded debt, and its annual budget has very much more than doubled. In seven years the per capita debt of this city, whose debt is relatively moderate, has increased from $37.03 to $55.56; that of Pittsburgh from $56.24 to $81.33; that of Baltimore from $40.34 to $71.64; and that of Cincinnati from $36.43 to $140.
A number of State and city bond issues during the past few months have failed or have been carried through only by increasing the rate of interest. The demand for money is driving up the price of it, and even at higher rates it is not satisfied, for the demand exceeds the supply.

There are some elements of danger in the situation, but the conditions are not peculiar to this country. Indeed, they are more favorable here than in Europe, for none of the money sought here is required for purposes of waste and destruction, while most of the Continental countries are borrowing or trying to borrow money to spend on armies and fleets, of which the best that one can say is that they are idle. Philadelphia Record.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear.
There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies.
Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Several Positions Vacant

The Civil Service Commission announces that on July 16 and 17 there will be an examination for architectural draftsmen to fill a vacancy in the Bureau of Equipment, Yard and Docks of the Navy Department at Washington at $1,200 per annum, one at Mare Island Navy Yard, Cal., at $3.75 per diem, and vacancies as they may occur at entrance, salaries ranging from $3.- 52 to $5.52 per diem. An examination for architectural draftsmen will also be held on August 6 to 7 for appointment in the office of supervising architect at Washington at $1,200 per annum, in the Quartermaster's Corps at Washington at $1,400 per annum, and in the Quartermaster's Corps at Honolulu at $1,500 per annum. These examinations will be held at Baltimore, Cumberland and Salisbury; at Wheeling, Parkersburg, Martinsburg, Charleston,
Fairmont and Huntington; and at Richmond, Roanoke, Staunton, Norfolk, Lynchburg, Charlottesville, and Alexandria.

Civil service examination will be held on July 12 at Annapolis to select a postmaster for Cumberland, and at La Plata for postmaster at Welcome.

Take Plenty of Time to Eat

There is a saying that "rapid eating is slow suicide." If you have formed the habit of eating too rapidly you are most likely suffering from indigestion or constipation, which will result eventually in serious illness unless corrected.
Digestion begins in the mouth. Food should be thoroughly masticated and in-salivated. Then when you have a fullness of the stomach or feel dull and stupid after eating, take one of Chamberlain's Tablets. Many severe cases of stomach trouble and constipation have been cured by the use of these tablets.
They are easy to take and most agreeable in effect. Sold by all dealers.

Local and Miscellaneous

A kiss is indeed a poem, but not all poems are returned with thanks.

When Duty calls, lots of us send down word that we are not at home.

You never can tell. Sometimes the most worthless fellow may have a big bank account.

Unfortunately the sort of wife a man admires is seldom the sort of girl he falls in love with.

Miss Elizabeth Brattan, of Baltimore, is visiting Mrs. Robert F. Brattan and the Misses Brattan, on Main street.

Mrs. Robert T. Wilson, of Baltimore, is a visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Waters, on Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. John Fritz and daughter, of Scranton, Pa., and Miss Eva Smaltz, of Pittston, Pa., are visiting Prof. and Mrs. Eben Evans, of Princess Anne.

Miss Emily R. Waters and her sister, Mrs. Wm. C. Hart, entertained a bevy of little folks on the lawn of "Beechwood" last Wednesday. The picnic was an epoch in the young people's history. What with games, wading, romping and feasting, it is no wonder that the time from 11 in the morning to about 5 in the afternoon seemed but a fleeting moment.

Byron Spaul's Big 10 and 20 cent Show pitched its tent yesterday (Monday) on South Main street and will remain for three nights. Tonight (Tuesday) and Wednesday night there will be moving pictures beside the other attractions. The show has twenty first-class actors—funny clowns, reprobates and comedians. Their vaudeville and circus acts are said to be unexcelled and up-to-date in every respect.

The principal streets of Princess Anne have been oiled and the dust that has been producing so much annoyance and discomfort has been laid. So far about six thousand gallons of oil have been used, the cost being about $350, which was raised by private contributions. The town board had the oil distributed. It is thought that if the job is to be complete, nearly as much more oil will be required, the ways and means for which the town authorities are considering.

Mrs. Burns Duvall, of Chicago, is visiting her niece, Mrs. Frank Collins.

Love is a disease against which mighty few of us take sufficient precautions.

You will discover that most men are all right, if you only take the trouble to ask them.

The great trouble with our good resolutions is that so many of them are laid on the table.

Miss Pauline Balloch, of Centerville, New Brunswick, is visiting Mrs. Samuel K. Dennis.

The great trouble with most people is that they seem to think they are just as good as we are.

Miss Emma Clarke, of Delaware City, is the guest of Mrs. L. A. Oates, on North Main street.

A number of vacant scholarships are advertised by the county school superintendent in another column.

Mr. Richard Dale, who is a student at the Maryland Agricultural College, is home for the summer vacation.

It's a good thing our buried hopes don't need tombstones, or the supply of marble would run mighty short.

Mrs. H. J. Nelson, of Revell's Neck, left with us last week two fine home raised tomatoes, the first of the season in that locality.

Mrs. S. G. Myers, of Hagerstown, Md., accompanied by her daughter, Miss Mattie V. Myers, is visiting the home of her son, Mr. George H. Myers, on Beckford Avenue.

Mr. O. M. Ruark and Miss Carrie P. Stevenson, of West neighborhood, were married last Wednesday night at the rectory, in Princess Anne, by the Rev. C. H. Weaver.

Among the graduates at Washington College, Chestertown, Md., last Wednesday, were Herbert Roy Meredith, of Upper Fairmount, and Marion Hawk Landing, of Marion Station.

Mr. John S. McMaster, of Jersey City, N. J., has presented the historic old Presbyterian Church at Rehoboth, Somerset county, with a photograph of Father Makemie pleading for religious liberty in New York City, the latter part of the seventeenth century.

Last Friday afternoon the Mt. Vernon base ball team crossed bats with the Princess Anne team on the Washington High School grounds. The home team "wasn't in it" from start to finish and the result was a victory for the visitors by a score of 8 to 1.

There has been quite a home coming at the home of Mrs. Judge Page during the last week. In addition to the members of the family who reside at Princess Anne or vicinity, Major Henry Page, Mrs. Page and their sons, of Charleston, N. C., and Mrs. Hubert A. Royster and her children, of Raleigh, N. C., are visitors at the old homestead.

Emerson C. Harrington, Comptroller of the Treasury, announced Monday of last week the quarterly distribution of the State school tax, the free book tax and the amounts apportioned to the accredited high schools. The amounts apportioned to Somerset county is as follows: State schools tax, $7,140.93; school book fund $4,850.37; approved high schools, $700.

Collector William F. Stone has given his decision that rowboats, canoes and other small craft must carry lanterns from sundown to sunup, no matter where they go. He states that electric flashlights meet the requirements, provided they are in good condition and will flash without difficulty. Those owning motor boats on the Manokin river should prepare to meet these requirements and to take no risks of being fined for noncompliance with the marine regulations.

Alonzo L. Miles, Esq., has removed from Baltimore to Salisbury, Md., where he has opened offices and will continue the practice of law in all the courts of the State. Mr. Miles is a native of Somerset county and is a brother of Hon. Joshua W. Miles, of Princess Anne, and Mr. S. Frank Miles, of Marion. His success as a lawyer has been phenomenal and his services have been sought all over the State. The people of Salisbury are to be congratulated upon the acquisition of so valuable a citizen and professional worker.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. B. Gibbons, of Dublin district, entertained a few of their friends last Tuesday evening in honor of the 25th birthday of their cousin, Mr. C. C. Jones, who was the recipient of many handsome and useful presents. Among those present were: Misses Edna and Katharine Beauchamp, Julia Truitt, Elvira Ryehman, of Snow Hill; Miss Maria Gibbons, of Whitesburg; Miss Martha Ruark, of Perryhewkin; Messrs. Lawrence Godfrey, Otho Harrington and Cletus Dryden, of Snow Hill; Wood and Harold Fleming, Marion Gibbons, of Whitesburg; John Jenkins, Beverly Holland, and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Holland, of Perryhewkin.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel K. Dennis, of Baltimore, spent the week end with the former's mother, Mrs. S. K. Dennis.

Ocean City has been selected as the place for the summer session of the Maryland Editorial Association Tuesday, July 15th.

Mrs. Gordon B. Townsend, of Princess Anne, after spending some time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley Butler, at Westover, has returned home.

During the hot summer weather most of the stores in Princess Anne are closing at 7 o'clock p. m., except on Saturdays. The idea is to give relief and rest to all concerned.

Mrs. Charles Edward Stewart, of Westminster, Md., is visiting Miss Emily R. Waters and Mrs. Wm. C. Hart, at "Beckford." Mrs. Stewart is a daughter of the late Judge Chas. B. Roberts, of that city.

Charges made against Superintendent Lankford, of the House of Correction, that he flogged a prisoner who took to his bed the following day and died a month later are being investigated by Governor Goldsborough.

The Ladies' Aid Society of John Wesley M. E. Church, Mt. Vernon, will hold their annual festival on July 4th. A supper, consisting of all the delicacies of the season, will be served. Ice cream, cake and lemonade in abundance.

Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Lankford have returned from Swarthmore, Pa., where they attended the commencement exercises of the Swarthmore Preparatory School. Their daughter, Miss Priscilla, was one of the twenty-three graduates and received the Dean Master's gold medal for highest honors.—Crisfield Times.

Mrs. William E. Bounds, with her children, left yesterday for Mt. Vernon, Somerset county, where she will spend sometime visiting the family of her father, Mr. William T. Holland. Mrs. Bounds has just recovered from serious illness and her friends hope that the change may be beneficial to her.—Worcester Democrat.

Willie Cullen, 10 years of age, son of Mrs. Amanda Cullen, was drowned Thursday while in bathing in Somerset Cove, near Crisfield. The little fellow was subject to epilepsy and suffered an attack while in the water. Boys who were bathing in the same neighborhood got him out of the water, but efforts on the part of Dr. Wm. H. Coulbourne to revive him were futile.

According to reports from different sections of Maryland, and especially from the Eastern Shore, the tomato crop is seriously threatened by the drought. Eastern Shore farmers are greatly discouraged because of the ill fortunes which have overtaken them this year. Their strawberry crops were greatly shortened by frosts and prices were not as high as during former years. Frosts also was fatal to the early tomato plants.

Miss Florence Wainwright was found dead in her chair in the office of the Home Gas Company, Salisbury, where she is employed as bookkeeper, Friday night. At 6.15 o'clock when the other employees of the office left, Miss Wainwright appeared to be in the best of health and spirits. It is believed that death was due to acute indigestion to which she was subject. Miss Wainwright was 24 years of age, and resided on Maryland Avenue Salisbury.

Sherman Miles, colored, of Crisfield, with five other negroes of Somerset and Worcester counties, who have been employed by the N. Y. P. & N. on express cars running from Philadelphia to Cape Charles, was arrested in a round up made by Sheriff Smith of Wicomico county Sunday afternoon the 15th inst. The negroes were all members of a well organized gang of express robbers who have been rifling the express cars on the main line for several months past. They are being held in the Salisbury jail and will be given a hearing on several charges brought by the Adams Express Company.

Mr. Calvin H. Long, aged 52 years, a native of Pocomoke City, shot himself in the head in Hampton Va., Saturday the 15th, and died instantly. Mr. Long had a stroke of paralysis several weeks ago and it is thought that the effects of the paralysis and despondency over ill health had unbalanced his mind which led to his rash act. His remains were brought to Pocomoke City Monday of last week and interred in St. Mary's Protestant Episcopal cemetery. Mr. Long is survived by his widow, who before marriage was Miss Annie Kelham, of Eastville, Va., two sons—Messrs. W. W. Long, an employee of the N. Y. P. & N. R. R. Company, at Cape Charles, and David Long, of Eastville, Va., and one daughter, Miss Edith Long.

Gov. Goldsborough at Newark
Governor Goldsborough, of Maryland, and Governor Miller, of Delaware, were the two principal speakers at the annual farmers' meeting held at the Delaware College Experiment Farm Monday of last week. The attendance was the largest since the plan of setting aside a day for the farmers during commencement week was inaugurated some years ago. The crowd was estimated at 5,000, and many farmers came from Maryland, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Governor Miller presided and made the first address. He commended the college for the great work that it is doing in the agricultural department. His address was largely on the rural school as it exists in Delaware. He said that more modern country school methods are required in this state.

Governor Goldsborough talked on Good Roads, and told of the fine work that is being done in Maryland in the good road line. He eulogized his predecessor, the late Governor Crothers, for the work that he did in connection with getting the first $9,000,000 appropriation for permanent roads. With the $6,000,000 more recently appropriated, he said, Maryland will have 1,200 miles of good roads when it is all expended, and that he anticipated 400 additional miles of permanent side roads would be built this year under the new, petition bill. Under this bill the road is built if 60 per cent. of the property-owners on the particular road petition for it.

Among the features was a parade of the thoroughbred livestock on the farm. The battalion of college cadets gave an exhibition drill, and the band also gave a concert on the farmhouse lawn. In addition to the two Governors, addresses were also made by Professor Alva Agee, of New Jersey, and Josiah Marvel, of Wilmington. An open-air meeting for women was also held and addresses were made by Mrs. A. D. Wagner, Mrs. Frederick Snyder and Dr. Sarah Lyons, of Lincoln University. During the afternoon ground was broken for the new affiliated college for women, to be built near Newark, at a cost of $150,000. Governor Miller turned the first spade of dirt.

Lawyers Dine with D. O. Hastings
The remodeled colonial home in Dover of D. O. Hastings, former judge but now an active practitioner at the bar, was opened Tuesday evening by a dinner to fifty lawyers and laymen, of the intimate associates of Mr. Hastings of all three counties. It has been his custom for several years to give a dinner to the judges on the first day of the June term of the Supreme Court, but on this occasion Mr. Hastings enlarged his list of guests to over fifty, nearly all of whom accepted. Besides the judges there were present from official life former Governor Pennell and Attorney-General Wolcott.—Delaware State News.

[Judge Hastings is a native of Somerset county and is a son of Mr. D. H. Hastings, who formerly resided about six miles north of Princess Anne, but who now has his home in Salisbury.—Ed.]

FRAUD PAINT
The worst mistake one is likely to make in painting is wrong paint; it is easy to make.

We all say "Ours is the best," and there are 1000 of us One is best; but a dozen are so near on a level that no one knows, for sure, that his is the one. The worst paints are worst liars; they know what they are, put-on a bold face, and brazen it out.

Their one true argument is low price; but low-price paint is always, must be, a fraud; it is made to cheat cheatable people.

WILY WOMAN WON

She Made Up Her Mind to Get That News, and She Got It.

A FINE FIX FOR A PRESIDENT.

Anne Royall, the Mother of Newspaper Interviews, Tricked John Quincy Adams and Badgered Him into Giving Up the Information She Wanted.

In clearing the ground for some improvements in Potomac park in Washington the contractor some time ago removed a stone that for nearly a century was a quaint landmark in the national capital. It is called the "Anne Royall stone" and lay on the bank of the river just opposite the White House, about twenty feet back from the water's edge, at the top of a grass covered knoll.

It was on this stone that Anne Royall sat when she had her famous interview with President John Quincy Adams—at least, so runs the story that has been handed down for three generations by the inhabitants of Washington.

And, according to that story, it would appear that the good lady for whom the stone was named was not only a person of energy, but was endowed with considerable grim determination as well. She evidently had a good strong will of her own and an active mind of her own, and when these two started to work in concert in deadly earnest results were bound to follow.

Whether the good lady's sense of humor was cramped or extensive the reader must determine for himself.

Anne Royall was in a sort of the mother of modern journalism. She was the originator of the "interview." She first, in the little sheet that she published in Washington in the second and third decades of the last century, departed from the dry forms that had always characterized newspapers.

She did not confine herself to a mere summary of current happenings, even spiced with careful essays on abstract subjects, after the manner of Steele or Addison. She struck firmly the "personal note." She wrote and printed things about public men as they were in their daily lives—an innovation the startling effect of which we cannot realize today. Her paper was called the Washington Post and afterward the Hulton.

During the administration of John Quincy Adams congress passed a certain bill, the signing or veto of which by the president was a matter of intense public interest. In those days the interview of the president by a newspaper man was unheard of, and no one had the temerity to ask Mr. Adams what he would do in the matter.

But there was one exception among the tinsmiths of that day. That day Anne Royall, she dared to apply at the White House for a conference with the president, the avowed object of which was to learn from him his intentions concerning the bill.

Poor Anne, however, was kept at a discouraging distance. Day after day she waited in the president's study, only to be told by his attendants, "But she did not grow discouraged. She learned that every morning, immediately after rising, the president walked to the bank of the Potomac, some half a mile in the rear of the White House, and there, after taking off his clothes, plunged into the stream for a swim.

One morning when the president, after swimming far out into the stream, turned to make his way back toward the shore he was astonished to see, sitting upon a stone on the bank, a spectacled female with a look of great determination. It was Anne Royall, and beside her were a pen and bottle of ink, and in her hand was a sheet of paper.

"Woman, depart!" sputtered the president as he swam up into the shallows where he could touch the bottom & tip-toe.

"You know who I am, Mr. President," said the woman, "and you know what I want. I'm going to sit here until you tell me what you intend doing with that Cherokee Indian bill."

"Go away, woman!" shouted the president. "This is scandalous!"

"It's scandalous," Anne is reported to have said, "that the people of a free country have to resort to such extreme measures to find out what their servants are going to do. You give me the information that I am entitled to; then I'll give you your clothes. Otherwise I'll stay here—and you'll stay there!"

There was only one outcome to such a struggle. The shivering president told Anne what he expected to do and why he would do it. Then, and not until then, did Anne, armed with copious notes, rise from the stone that she had made famous and hasten to her little printing office, where she lost no time in getting that first and most famous presidential interview into print.—Youth's Companion.

A Wandering Scot's Tribulations.
A Glasgow man who recently took up residence in London, says the Glasgow News, selected from the people answering his advertisement for rooms a landlady boasting the name of MacKay. That name, even without the lady's protestations, convinced him that he was going to a "home from home." On arriving, his pleasurable anticipation was increased when he was informed that it was "taken for granted" he would have porridge for breakfast. He was astounded, however, to find the oatmeal served cold and solid and profusely sprinkled with parsley. Something approaching a scene occurred when he intimated to the lady that he required the dish brought hot and fresh and without vegetable embellishment. With a gesture of despair she led him to the kitchen, where on the shelf was a row of bowls containing his weekly supply of parsley decorated porridge!

Our Musical Nerves.
Everybody who has been to the dentist's knows only too well that the teeth have nerves connected with them. These nerves lead to certain knots of nerve tissue called ganglia, from which also proceed other nerves that pass to the auditory chambers of the ear. If you grind your teeth ever so slightly you will find that you hear the sound very distinctly. The vibrations caused by grinding are conveyed to the auditory chamber, where a series of pyramid cells of varying lengths are so arranged as to operate like keys of a piano. These cells, each of which responds to a particular note, are connected by nerve threads, like piano wires, with the main nerve of hearing—a complex and beautiful arrangement to which we owe our power to appreciate the exquisite harmonies of music.

BOGUS "ANTIQUES."

There is a Very Simple Way to Outwit the "Art Fakers."

Every little while some victim of artistic swindlers comes into court asking damages. The "antique" bookcase for which he paid $4,000 proves to be one made week before last, an exact copy of those offered at annual sales for $74.05. The "original" picture by Greuse or Corot or George Inness or Homer Martin turns out to be a fake perpetrated by some "artist" who is glad to draw a regular salary of $50 per week for helping gull the public.

In such cases the courts recover as much of the victim's money as possible. His loss in time, mortification, disgust and disappointment must be charged to experience. And for every such case which sees the light of a courtroom scores are kept concealed.

There is a simple way to outwit these "art fakers." If you are buying furniture, buy for beauty and utility, not for art's sake, not for a name's sake. Names can be forged, age can be simulated, but beauty and usefulness are possessions in themselves, no matter from whose hand you get them.

True, this rule requires the buyer to study pictures and furniture until he knows something about them. But without such knowledge the owner gets little satisfaction out of the possessions. If people bought only those articles which they understand and approve, we should have a saner standard of living in this good country.—Chicago Journal.

ATHENS AND THE SEASON.

Not Comfort, but the Date, Governs the Summer Outings.

The modern Athenians are not very fond of hard exercise, and except in the height of summer, when many of them go to Kephissia and Phalerum and others to the islands or to the baths near Corinth for a "cure," they seem well content to remain within their city. They are governed, it seems by fashion, like those who dwell in less favored lands.

When I was in Athens the weather was usually magnificent and often very hot. Yet Phalerum, perhaps half an hour by train from Constitution square, was deserted. In the vast hotel there I found only two or three children; in the baths half a dozen swimmers. The pleasure boats lay idle by the pier. I asked the reason of this—why at evening dusty Athens was crammed with strollers and the pavements were black with people taking coffee and ice, while delightful Phalerum, with its cooler air and its limpid waters, held no one but an English traveler?

"The season is over," was the only reply I received, delivered with a grave air of finality. I tried to argue the matter and suggested that anxiety about the war had something to do with it. But I was informed that the "season" closed on a certain day and that after that day the Athenians gave up going to Phalerum.—Robert Hichens in Century Magazine.

THE JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY

State Scholarships in Engineering Courses

Applications for scholarships in the Department of Engineering, established in the The Johns Hopkins University under the provisions of the Laws of Maryland Chapter 90, 1912 should now be made.

Entrance examinations for all students will be held in McCoy Hall, The Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, on June 25th to 27th and on September 30th to October 2d, 1913, beginning at 9 a. m. Applicants for scholarships are urged to take the examinations in June.

If there is more than one applicant for a particular scholarship a competitive examination will be held at the University as soon as possible after the autumn examinations.

In addition to certain collegiate scholarships and scholarships at large, the Act provides for 102 scholarships to be apportioned among the counties and legislative districts of Baltimore city, the same number of awards so far as possible to be made each year. The undergraduate courses in Engineering will extend through four years and it has been determined to offer 85 of these scholarships in the year 1913 and 1914. Allegany, Baltimore, Frederick and Washington counties and the four legislative districts of Baltimore city will each be entitled to two scholarships, and each of the other counties to one scholarship in October 1913. Six scholarships at large may also be awarded at that time.

Applicants for scholarships should address the Registrar, The Johns Hopkins University for the blank forms of application and for further information as to the examination and the award of scholarships.

A YOUNG MAN'S SCHEME

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

"Gaul durn her picture, but I love her!"

The young man who uttered the words was at work in the field, and he straightened up to rest his weary back and mutter:

"And I'll make her love me before I'm through with her! She may think I don't amount to much, but all I want is a chance to prove that I do. Durn farm work! Durn widder! Durn love! Durn everything!"

He kicked the fence to show his disgust and wearily resumed work. Ebenezer Schermerhorn, hired man, was in love with the Widow Tompkins, whose farm adjoined that of his boss on the west. Ebenezer was twenty-four years old, plain of face and ungainly of form and without a hundred dollars' worth of property.

One evening as he dropped in to see the widow about borrowing some farm implement next day he found her reading a love story. She read a few chapters to him and afterward acknowledged that she had always been romantic and that if she ever married again it would be to a hero.

Three or four days after Ebenezer would have leaped the fence and run the wayfarer half a mile, but on this occasion he invited him over to the corn and sat down with him for a confidential conversation. The result of that conversation was that at 8 o'clock that evening the tramp appeared before the Widow Tompkins and made threats of what he would do if she didn't set out victuals, hunt up old clothes and come down with a dollar in cash.

Ebenezer was not far away—just far enough to come running up and knock the tramp head over heels and rescue the widow. But as he started to come running he fell down and got tangled up with the bushes, and before he could get away the widow had broomed stuck the tramp into fight. She didn't say she was glad that the widow was so near at hand. What she did say was that she wasn't afraid of any tramp walking the roads.

Ebenezer's first try was a failure, but within a fortnight he was ready for another. Two or three farmhouses in the township had been robbed, and this fact became the basis for his second plan. One night at midnight he left his bed, descended to earth by way of a window, and, armed with a club, he became a guard for the widow's house. He circled around it and patrolled the garden and the orchard, and he felt that he would give a year of his life if a robber would appear. He would first tell him and then arouse the house, and when the widow came to know that he had been guarding her for love her heart would melt toward him.

But no robber came. Instead of that his footsteps awoke the widow, and, peering out, she saw some one walking about, and she got a shotgun and raised a window and blazed away. The gun was loaded with bird shot to shoot hawks that might come swooping down on chickens, but in this case they answered just as well for a man. Ebenezer received about twenty of them and ran two miles to a doctor to have them picked out. He also had a vacation from work for a week under the excuse that he had sprained his back turning over in bed.

Ninety-nine out of every hundred would be heroes would have given up right here, but Ebenezer was a man to hang on. It was while he was limping around on his vacation and doing a lot of standing up and wandering over the fields that he came upon the widow fishing in the river at a certain point. He did not show himself, but fifty feet from where she sat under a tree he discovered a bumblebee's nest in the grass. It was a large and liberal nest, and it gave him a thought. The bees wouldn't bother anybody so long as they were let alone. If stirred up they would look for meat.

There was a haystack not far away, and Ebenezer had matches in his pocket. He retired behind the stack and collected a hatful of stones from the plowed land. These he threw one by one at the spot where the bees were pursuing the even tenor of their ways. The plot thickened. You can thicken a bumblebee plot in a very short time. All you've got to do is to tread on their cottails. When the insects found the rocks dropping on their heads they swarmed out of the grass to look for the enemy. They should have seen the widow and descended upon her, and at her first shriek Ebenezer would come charging down with a wisp of lighted hay in either hand. But things went wrong. The bees then went for him alone. They ran him up and down the haystack; they ran him over fences and back; they ran him across lots and in circles, and when they finally left him and he fell down the widow came forward and asked:

"But why were you such a fool?" "Because I want you to marry me!" he groaned in reply. "And you said you would marry a hero. I thought the bees would attack you and I could rush in and save you."

"Why, you great idiot! I've been ready to say yes any day for the last three months."

SERVED A FINE DINNER.

The Prince Enjoyed It, and the Famed Guests Politely Smiled.

Prince Leopold, the late regent of Bavaria, was extremely hospitable, receiving many guests and keeping open house, to which came in turn officers, scientists, artists, manufacturers—all the wielders of an excellent knife and fork, he took the pleasures of the table seriously and desired that all his guests should do the same.

Some weeks before his last illness he fell asleep at a dinner party immediately after the first course. His guests were restrained by respect for etiquette from waking him, but continued their conversation in low tones. The servants did not dare to continue serving the dinner. The prince continued to sleep and soon began to snore. The guests continued their conversation in somewhat louder tones, but the prince slept for two hours, during which time no one left his place. The guests sat famished in the same room with a marvelously appointed dinner.

At length Prince Leopold awoke. He gave a hurried glance round the table and saw only a number of well-mannered guests successfully pretending to have noticed nothing. Persuaded that his dose had passed completely unobserved, he said, "Now let us go and take coffee."

The guests rose accordingly and proceeded to the drawing room. They were served with coffee, liqueurs and cigars. The prince, thoroughly refreshed by his sleep, indulged in a great deal of excellent conversation which lasted till midnight. The party then broke up, and the guests departed, famished with hunger, with an official smile upon their lips.

PLAY OF THE BLUEJAY.

It Likes to Tease Hawks and Owls by Imitating Their Calls.

The bluejay likes best to live in thick woods, but it often comes into open fields, orchards and near dwellings in search of food. When it discovers you it assumes a proud and angry air of conceit and defiance.

The bluejay's upper parts are purplish blue. The lower parts are purplish gray. The wings and tail are bright blue with black bars. The tail feathers are tipped with white. It has a crested head.

The bluejay builds its nest about twenty feet above ground. It is made of twigs and fine roots. From four to six eggs are laid. They are of a greenish drab color flecked with brown.

Doubtless the bluejay helped to name itself, as its common utterance is a long drawn "Jay, Jay, Jay." This cry, with the bright blue colors, has given it its name.

While the jay sings no song it is able to imitate the calls of other birds, by which means it often attracts them. It likes to tease and torment the owl and especially the little sparrow hawk. This is done by imitating the cry of a wounded bird, which draws the hawk near. Then several jays will dart at the hawk, squealing and frolicking about in great glee. Sometimes the play ends in a tragedy, for the hawk pounces upon one of them to the dismay of the others. Jays may be caged and tamed like crows, and some writers say they can be taught to utter words.—From Bird Studies by Herman C. de Groot.

The Inartistic Frock Coat.

Let the Chinese wallow in all our virtues and in all our vices, but at least let them preserve Asia from our clothes. Can you imagine Confucius in a frock coat and a top hat? I regard the frock coat as the most horrible vestment ever worn by that absurd animal—man. When I pass a bronze statue of a British statesman buttoned up in a bronze or marble frock coat I cover my eyes and shrink by in a paroxysm of horror. There is only one thing worse than a frock coat in bronze or marble and that is a pair of trousers in marble or bronze. I think our sculptors ought to strike against the bronze frock coat and the marble trousers. If they must make effigies of our statesmen let them model them in their pajamas.—London Opinion.

Getting Mixed in Art.

Occasionally Homer and the other reputable classics nod in the Boston environments.

A woman in Rhode Island wrote to the head of a Boston institution that advances art—all of them are supposed to—and asked when and where she could buy a Gilbert Stuart portrait—subject immaterial.

This recalls the Cleveland woman who said that a woman on Euclid avenue had a "full length Rembrandt" in her collection—but she had forgotten who the artist was.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Out of Order.

Little Frances—We dot a new baby. Mrs. Neighbors—You don't say! Little Frances—Yes'm; an' its eyes open jest like my dolly's, but I dess somefin's the matter wif its works, cause its eyes don't go shut ev'ry time they lay it down.—Chicago News.

An Explanation.

She presented herself at a fashionable wedding. "Friend of the bride or the bridegroom?" asked the usher. "I'm the fiancée of the organ blower," she explained, blushing.—Lippincott's.

Those who jump at conclusions are more than apt to fall upon uncertainties.

Undertaker's Law Is Valid

Judge Amber, sitting in Criminal Court No. 2, Baltimore, last Wednesday, overruled the demurrers filed by the traversers in the cases of the State vs. William Keller, Gordon C. Linder and John Tinker, for violation of the undertaker's law. These cases involve the constitutionality of the law creating the State Board of Undertakers. The case was argued on May 24th last, and held sub curia. By the ruling of the court Judge Amber decided that the law was constitutional and that anyone engaged in the business of an undertaker, either as principal or assistant, must first be licensed by the State Board. It practically alters the ruling made in the Criminal Court in the fall of 1912, when the act was declared unconstitutional by Judge Gorter, who was sitting in the court at that time, although the principal question at issue in the case before Judge Gorter concerned the validity of that part of the act requiring that a licensed undertaker could also be an experienced embalmer.

Meeting of The Maryland-Delaware Horticultural Societies

The joint summer meeting of the Maryland-Delaware Horticultural Societies will be held at Berlin, Md., July 31st, 1913. The Societies will be entertained by J. G. Harrison & Sons, the noted nursery firm of that place. The meeting promises to be of unusual importance and interest, inasmuch as this firm has enormous plantings of nursery stock, covering over 2,500 acres, and also over 2,000 acres in orchards planting in and around Berlin. It will be the aim of the firm to transport visitors over their plantations, explaining to them the manner in which they raise trees and handle nursery stock. Visitors will also be conducted to orchards which this season will be bearing luscious peaches that will be ripe at that time. This will offer an unusual opportunity for growers to observe how perfect fruit can be grown on the Peninsula by the employment of up-to-date methods of spraying and culture. This firm, in co-operation with the School of Horticulture of the Maryland Agricultural College, is conducting a series of experiments and demonstrations in the spraying of peaches and in the fertilization of orchards, which will be available for visitors to observe at the summer meeting.

The growers of the Peninsula as well as members of the Horticultural Societies of all the adjoining States will be invited to attend this meeting. The idea that emanates from a summer meeting is that practical demonstrations shall be conducted for the benefit of the growers in attendance, and it will be the aim of the Societies and J. G. Harrison & Sons to conduct pruning demonstrations and other lines of practical work.

Guaranteed Eczema Remedy

The constant itching, burning, redness, rash and disagreeable effects of eczema, tetter, salt rheum, itch, piles and irritating skin eruptions can be readily cured and the skin made clear and smooth with Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment. Mr. J. C. Eveland, of Bath, Ill., says: "I had eczema twenty-five years and had tried everything. All failed. When I found Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment I found a cure." This ointment is the formula of a physician and has been in use for years—not an experiment. That is why we can guarantee it. All druggists, or by mail, Price 50c. ### The Secret of the Big Trees

In the days of the Prophet Elijah sore famine afflicted the land of Palestine. No rain fell, the brooks ran dry, and dire distress prevailed. "Go through the land," said King Ahab to the Prophet Obadiah, "unto all the fountains of water and unto all the brooks; peradventure we may find grass and save the horses and the mules alive, that we lose not all the beasts." When Obadiah went forth in search of forage he fell in with his chief, Elijah, and brought him to Ahab, who greeted him as the troubler of Israel. Then Elijah prayed for rain, according to the Bible story, and the famine was stayed. From this famine in Palestine some 870 years before Christ, to the forests of the Sierra Nevada, in the twentieth-century, is a far cry, but the connecting link between the past and the present, between the ancient East and the modern West, is found in the big trees of California, the huge species known as Sequoia washingtoniana.

In a publication entitled "The Secret of the Big Trees," by Ellsworth Huntington, just placed on sale by the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., it is shown that the growth rings in the big trees of California, indicate that in general the same sequence of climatic changes took place in California and Asia Minor. Curves indicating climatic conditions in California and Asia Minor show a remarkable resemblance between the two regions. The curves begin with the epoch of the Trojan War, about 1200 B. C. There both curves dip very low, indicating an epoch of sudden and severe desiccation. That particular period, historians tell us, was one of the most chaotic in all history.

The famine in the days of Elijah appears in both curves. Apparently at that time the climate did not become extremely dry, nothing like so bad as it had been a few hundred years earlier during the twelfth century, but there was rather a distinct falling off in the amount of rainfall as compared with the uncommonly good conditions of the preceding century. About seven hundred years before Christ both curves stand high in the day when the Greeks were laying the foundation of their future greatness and the empires of Mesopotamia were at their height. Then comes a pronounced falling off, with a recovery three or four hundred years before Christ, another decline culminating about 200 B. C., and a recovery reaching a high point about 50 B. C. The time of Christ, the great era of universal peace under the sway of Rome, was apparently an epoch of favorable climate, a time of abundant rain and consequent good crops in all the countries around the Mediterranean Sea and eastward in Asia, as well as in California. Next comes a long period of decline culminating six or seven centuries after the time of Christ. No period in all history, save that which centers about 1200 B. C., was more chaotic; and that early period also appears to have been a time of greatly diminished rainfall.

This publication, which may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, for five cents, gives a detailed account of the reasons and the work that led to the conclusions given above. It also contains 18 illustrations, showing the big trees in the Yosemite, Sequoia, and General Grant National Parks.

Best Laxative For The Aged

Old men and women feel the need of a laxative more than young folks, but it must be safe and harmless and one which will not cause pain. Dr. King's New Life Pills are especially good for the aged, for they act promptly and easily. Price 25c. Recommended by Omar A. Jones, druggist.

Miss Jennie Malone Dead

Miss Jennie Malone, daughter of Mr. Sidney Malone, of near this town, died at the home of her brother, Mr. Marion S. Malone, on Saturday night last in the 50th year of her age.

Miss Malone had been an invalid for more than twenty-five years and had been confined to her bed for six or seven years. Her life stands forth as a shining example of patient endurance and Christian fortitude.

Funeral services took place at Allen Methodist Episcopal Church South, of which church the deceased was a member, yesterday (Monday) afternoon at 4 o'clock, the Rev. J. Howard Gray, pastor of Antioch Methodist Episcopal Church, conducting the services, and interment was made in the family burying lot adjoining the church.

Miss Malone is survived by her father (Mr. Sidney Malone) one sister, (Mrs. A. J. Huffington) of this town, and two step brothers, (Mr. Harry Malone, of Salisbury, and Mr. Marion S. Malone of Princess Anne.)

Judge Dennis is 67

Former Judge John Upshur Dennis, of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore, was 67 years old Saturday, 14th inst.

Judge Dennis, who retired from the bench in 1903 after two years of invalidism, following a stroke of paralysis, never fully recovered his health, and early this year was again paralyzed. He was a patient for a number of weeks at the Church Home and Infirmary, Baltimore. Since leaving there he has been at the home of Mr. Anderson.

Though his health has for some time been showing steady improvement, it is not expected that Judge Dennis will be able to go this year to Ocean City, where for many years he was accustomed to spend the summer.—Snow Hill Messenger.

GRADUATES AT FOURTEEN

Hugh Latimer Dryden Receives His Sheepskin From the Baltimore City College

Among the 172 graduates of the Baltimore City College, Monday night of last week was Hugh Latimer Dryden, aged 14 years, a grandson of Mr. Geo. A. Culver, of Dublin district, Somerset county. In commenting on this young graduate, the Baltimore Sun on Sunday, the 15th, says:

"Hugh is a little fellow, not yet out of knickerbockers, bashful and boyish in every way. These traits do not prevent him being a leader among his classmates. The youngest among all the seniors, he stands first in class honors and will carry off many of the big prizes of the night. So far as is known Dryden is the youngest graduate to receive his sheepskin from the City College.

"While proficient in every branch of study, he stands out pre-eminently in mathematics. He is a near-wizard, it is said, in that line. He solves problems, runs through theorems and wanders nonchalantly into other mathematical labyrinths. His great ambition is to become a professor of mathematics. With this object in view, he will enter the Johns Hopkins University in September to continue his studies.

"Dryden lives at 1040 North Milton avenue. He entered the public school at West Postoffice, Somerset county, when he was 6 years old. He made four classes in two years, leaving the school when his family moved to Baltimore. He then entered the fifth grade of No. 85 school, Lakewood avenue and Orleans street, finished up the fifth and sixth grades in a little more than a year. Next he entered the preparatory school No. 52, Oak and Twenty-fourth streets. It took him a year and a half to go through the seventh and eighth grades. His course at the City College was completed in three years. The boy is of studious bent and takes but little interest in athletics."

Hicks' Forecasts for July

The Vulcan regular storm period is central on the 1st, covering the last two days of June, and first four days in July. The Moon is in conjunction with Earth and Sun on the 4th, causing it to appear very far up in northern declination.

The Mercury and Venus equinoctial periods will be in full strength, all intensified by the dominating power of the Jupiter period. The first seismic period for July is central on the 4th, extending from the 1st to the 7th. Its effects will fall notably on and touching the 5th and 6th. Anrush of cooler air will come with the rising barometer from the northwest, on the western sides of these storms, giving temporary relief from summer heat for a day or two following.

A reactionary storm period will develop and run its course from west to east during the 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th. The Moon in perigee on the 6th, and on the celestial equator on the 9th, will cause this period to hold on, or be prolonged beyond its normal limitations. A climax of summer heat, culminating in startling gusts of wind, thunder, rain and hail will in all probability visit wide sections on and touching the 9th, after which, look for sudden drop of temperature over most parts of the country.

A regular storm period extends from the 11th to the 16th. The center of the Venus period falls on the 14th, the culminating day of this regular storm period. The Moon will be at extreme declination south on the 15th, hence northerly air currents will flow southward at the culmination of this period, modifying the summer heat, and giving more pleasant nights, for temporary comfort to man and beast.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 18th, 19th and 20th. This period is coincident with the full Moon, or Moon's opposition with Earth and Sun. The barometer will show marked atmospheric changes at this period, the temperature will rise and a show of blustering, summer clouds and storms will appear in many parts of the country, drifting from western to eastern parts of the continent.

A regular storm period involves the 22d to 27th, having its center on the 24th. If the barometer does not rise after electrical storms on and about the 23d, a series of blustering thunder storms will appear for several days and nights in succession at this period.

$7,076,517 in Stamps Sold

Revenue received from the sale of parcel post stamps during the first three months of the operation of the system totaled $7,076,517, according to figures compiled at the Postoffice Department at Washington.

During that period approximately 150,000,000 parcel post packages were handled by the postal service. Chicago led all the cities both in the number of parcels handled and in the amount of stamps sold, the latter being $1,254,469. New York city's sales for the same period aggregated $818,139.

THE ISSUE IN THE OYSTER QUESTION

By James E. Ellegood, Counsel of the Oystermen's Protective Association of Somerset County—Oyster Culture—The Encroachments and Penalties of the Present Law

The following, which appeared in the editorial column of last Tuesday's Baltimore Evening Sun, is a strong statement of the oyster question in its relation to the present planting law:

The Sun took the newspaper privilege of cutting out a part and cutting up the balance of my recent open letter to Mr. Maltbie and of making editorial references not quite warranted by what I said.

I did not intimate "organizing a general crusade against the Haman oyster law," but I did make some criticism of it, and will do so at this time and probably at other times about its encroachments upon the public right of fishery and its unusual "penalty" for trespass upon private property. I did not intimate a desire to take out "civilization back to the times of Magna Charta," but I do contend that the character of our modern civilization should be determined by the spirit of that antiquated document in the contest (as well as the last Presidential election and as old as that ancient instrument) between personal rights and liberties, on the one hand, and property rights and special privileges on the other. I did not attempt to "halt modern progress" (I am somewhat of a progressive myself) "by setting up an indefeasible claim of property rights in the public waters of the State on the part of a numerically small class of citizens." On the other hand, it was the numerically large class for whom I was speaking.

To illustrate: Since April, 1913, 17 persons of Baltimore city have obtained licenses for 1,700 acres in Tangier Sound, off the mouth of Big Annemessex river; bottoms that are not and never were barren in fact, but were made so legally in 1908 by the avowed policy of the Shellfish Commission, because at the time of the survey it was the opinion of the commission that the bottoms did not then have oysters to furnish a good day's work in catching oysters. Seventeen others have applied for 1,700 more acres on the west side of the sound, between Kedges Straits and the Virginia line. None of the bottoms were ever barren, and if depleted when surveyed in 1908 they have recuperated since, and are now profitable for all the people; while under the leasing system these 3,400 acres will be the sole right of 34 persons only because they, with all the bottoms of the sound on the west side, between Kedges Straits and the Virginia line, have been made legally barren, and conclusively so.

Again, there are about 775 licensed oystermen in Somerset county. Giving them an average of three persons to a family makes about 2,400 persons dependent mainly on catching oysters for a living, to say nothing of numerous others whose prosperity indirectly depends on the licensed oystermen. Some persons talk as though the natural rock oystermen had the exclusive right to catch oysters on the public bottoms. The fact is that so long as the bottom of the bay and tributaries remains vested in the State every citizen of Maryland can take oysters upon the public bottoms. The miner of Allegany, the farmer of Montgomery, the artisan of Baltimore, may come and dwell among the oystermen and become one of them. Now, let the title of the State pass out of the State to individual holding, then so many acres thus granted are converted from public to private use.

The quantity of acres or the time of the lease does not affect the principle, whether the policy be good or bad. Some have said, Why do not the oystermen take up the bottoms? If 775 licensed oystermen in Somerset take up 100 acres in the sound, each for 20 years, there would have to be 77,500 acres to go around and all others in the State would be out for 20 years.

Passing from the argument based on numbers, I take up the present oyster law. If this is to remain as it is and is to be administered as it has been since 1906, I fail to see how the public right of fishing is to be preserved.

To adapt a famous saying of Abraham Lincoln, it seems impossible for the natural bottoms to remain half open for all and half private and exclusive. Assuming that depleted bottoms are to be subject to private holding, it is manifest that this course subjects the other natural beds to a greater burden and early depletion and then—well, the result is inevitable. This is the logical, as well as the physical, result of the teaching of Mr. Hugh M. Smith, Deputy United States Fish Commissioner, who said in a recent number of the National Geographic Magazine that "natural rocks are nuisances."

These two classes of citizens agree on one thing—neither wants the barren bottoms and both want the natural beds, whether depleted or filled to the brim with oysters. The point of difference is that one wants them held by the State for public use as a means of common livelihood, while the other wants the State to grant them for private use and gain. Both classes know these run-down bottoms will become fruitful and profitable if let alone a while.

Oysters are neither fed nor bred, after the manner of fowl and cattle. The chief features of the so-called "culture" are a proper bottom under salt water oysters to furnish the "spat" (and one will send forth millions), something on the suitable bottom for the young to catch to, not overcrowded, and culling on the beds. Nine out of ten parts of "oyster culture" is nature's own work. If they are overcrowded, they will die; and if nature's food supply is short, they will either die or be too poor for market. The oyster students tell us this; it is therefore as needful not to have an oversupply of oysters on the bottoms as it is not to have an undersupply. A poor oyster in market is about as unprofitable as no oyster. The Shellfish Commission warns lessees against planting beyond the food supply furnished by the waters. But this is not regulation, and it seems impracticable to do so by law, so long as 300,000 acres of bottoms are open for leasing, with 215,000 acres of natural beds.

The State cap, and does to some extent, help the oyster culture. The cull law is helpful and could be more so, if oystermen would more closely keep it, or the officials would more closely enforce it, or if the packers would, refuse cargoes with undersized oysters. Also the supervision by the Shellfish Commission and the replenishing and conserving of the bottoms as contemplated by the act of 1912 is helpful; then by private planting and making two oysters grow where none ever grew before. This would incur expensive experimentation, but it would enable the planter to claim that he is a public benefactor, as Douglas Jerrold, I believe it was, who said that "he is a public benefactor who made two spears of grass grow where none grew before."

Now, this kind of culture might not produce great revenue for the State treasury, but the main object of all the money for the land above as well as under the waters, is to furnish a means of livelihood and a food supply for the people; the "general welfare" and not private gain should be the objective point.

DEAL'S ISLAND OYSTERMEN

Want Candidates for the Legislature To Be In Favor of Repeal of Haman Law

Natural bar oystermen of the Deal's Island section of Somerset county have declared against oyster culture in the waters of Maryland, and, as the outgrowth of a protective association formed recently, are joined together to try to have the Haman Oyster Culture law and its amendments repealed by the next Legislature. At the Deal's Island meeting William Benton was elected president of the association; A. G. Brown, vice-president; M. L. Kirwan, secretary, and Edward Collier, treasurer.

Incidentally, these oystermen as well as others in tidewater counties, declare that they will make the planting question a leading issue in the fall elections. Candidates for the Legislature, they say, will be asked to state plainly their stand as to whether they favor private planting or are willing to side with the natural bar oystermen.

"It has come to our knowledge," says the resolution, "that private planters are encroaching upon the rights and privileges of us as natural rock oystermen of our State, with the avowed purpose of leasing and converting for their own selfish greed the oyster rocks of the State and bars of the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries, which heretofore we have enjoyed for our support and maintenance."

With this somewhat complicated preamble, the resolution gets into the meat of its purpose thus:

"Therefore, we, as oystermen of Deal's Island, Somerset county, Maryland, in mass meeting here assembled, do hereby condemn such unlawful practices upon our God-given rights, and do further organize and band ourselves together in one common cause, namely: To use all honorable means for the protection of ourselves and families, and to oppose and fight these enemies of the oystermen of Maryland who have come into our midst to destroy our means of support."

The organization is formally named the "Deal's Island Natural Rock Oystermen's Association," pledged at all times to oppose "any form of leasing out to private parties the natural oyster rocks of the Chesapeake Bay and tributaries."

Further, the resolution condemns the "action of the Shellfish Commissioners in surveying and leasing out to private parties the natural oyster rocks" "for their individual benefit, which is contrary to the laws of Maryland." It states that it will co-operate with other protective associations in the anti-planting fight, and winds up with this:

"And be it known to all that this association is non-partisan and that we will at all times use our best judgment in selecting candidates for office who will be loyal and true to the oystermen of the State of Maryland."

Governor Pardons Safe Blower

Frank Smith, formerly a notorious bank burglar, safe blower and train robber, who was particularly annoying to the Pennsylvania railroad, has been pardoned by Governor Goldsborough of Maryland, and Tuesday he was released from the Maryland Penitentiary, after having served seven years of a 17-year sentence.

Smith had operated extensively on this peninsula and much of the stuff he stole was disposed of in Wilmington. His pardon resulted from evidences of a reformation, which impressed themselves upon the prison authorities, the Prison Aid Society of Maryland and individuals. The governor took the matter up with Postoffice Inspector Plummer and Chief Gorman of the Pennsylvania railroad police, here, and at first they objected, but when they became convinced that Smith had actually had a change of heart and wanted to do better, they withdrew their objections and the pardon followed.

Wednesday Inspector Plummer received a letter from Charles D. Reid, secretary of the Maryland Prison Aid Society, telling him of the pardon and that Smith had been taken into the society's home, with the belief that he had actually reformed. Smith, it has been learned, has become quite religious.

Garris-Richards Wedding

Miss Gladys Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Richards, of Westover, Maryland, and Mr. Virgil Garris, of Weelington, Ohio, were quietly married at high noon last Thursday at the bride's home. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. B. Guthrie. The bride wore a wedding gown of white draped charmeuse, effectively trimmed with Duchess lace and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses. The home was decorated with ferns and daisies. The color scheme being yellow and white.

A reception for the family and a few friends followed the ceremony. After an extended wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Garris will reside in Weelington, Ohio.

OUR GOOD ROAD SYSTEM

Discussed By Logan W. Page—Excellent Facilities For Reaching Markets

A very interesting discussion of the present road system of this Peninsula is contained in the address of Logan W. Page, at the meeting of the Horticultural Society in Wilmington, last January. Mr. Page first calls attention to the fact that within 200 miles of this Peninsula are 14 cities of more than 50,000 population each, and six cities of more than 300,000 each; that the aggregate population of the 20 cities is more than 9,000,000. This garden spot of ours, therefore, lies within easy access of one-tenth of the population of the entire country, and at the very gate of the greatest market center of the world. The facilities for reaching these markets are excellent. Our soil and climate are eminently adapted to trucking and fruit growing, and Mr. Page says, "are hardly surpassed in this respect by any other section of our country." Mr. Page proceeds to say that notwithstanding these favorable circumstances, the progress of this Peninsula is not all that might be expected. Gratifying progress has been made but it has been somewhat restricted and its continuity broken. On this Peninsula are 1,971,677 acres of improved land, producing crops annually. If from each of these acres one-half ton of produce is hauled away, the total haulage will amount to 985,838 tons, moved an average distance of 3.16 miles. If we assume that 90 per cent. of this tonnage passes over 20 per cent. of the roads, by improving this 20 per cent. of roads we would effect a saving of five cents per ton mile, an annual saving of $155,762.

"Why should not this saving be capitalized so as to help pay for improving the 20 per cent of roads? In your territory there are 9,742 miles of public roads, of which about five per cent. have already been improved. Twenty per cent. of this mileage would be 1,948 miles, and if from this we deduct the five per cent. already improved, we find remaining for improvement only 1,461 miles. To capitalize the annual saving shown above, we find that it will pay 5 per cent. interest on $3,115,248, which would be $2,132 per mile on the remaining mileage necessary to be improved in order to get the desired 20 per cent."

The annual report of the Peninsula Horticultural Society has been printed. It contains the addresses delivered at the meeting in Wilmington last winter, and is a pamphlet of about 100 pages. It may be had free by addressing the secretary, Wesley Webb, Dover, Del.

Allison A. Gillis Dead

Mr. Allison A. Gillis, for years one of the most widely known merchants of Salisbury, died at his home on North Division street Wednesday morning. Mr. Gillis was born March 12, 1850. He was the son of the late Beauchamp L. Gillis, and as a young man entered the grocery house of his father, who was one of the pioneer merchants in Salisbury, as a clerk. Later he was taken into partnership under the firm name of B. L. Gillis & Son, and was doing business when the big fire of 1886 swept that city. Mr. Gillis was one of the pioneer wholesale merchants of Salisbury. After the big fire which caused Mr. Gillis heavy loss, he opened business in an old laundry building, and although he faced an almost empty bank account, he started over again and made wonderful progress, erecting the large storehouse on Dock street and enlarging his operations until his salesmen covered the entire peninsula.

Mr. Gillis was one of the founders of the Farmers and Merchants' Bank of Salisbury. He was a director of the Wicomico Building and Loan Association. He retired from business two years ago, being succeeded by E. Y. Ruark & Co. He is survived by his mother (Mrs. Beauchamp L. Gillis), two children (Mrs. H. C. Tull and Mrs. F. A. Grier, Jr., of Salisbury.)

Anderson Dog-Whipped

William H. Anderson, superintendent of the Maryland Anti-Saloon League and widely known in connection with the local option movement, was lashed with a dog-whip at his office in Baltimore on Saturday by Robert L. Ulman, son of a retired wholesale liquor dealer of that city. Ulman had taken exception to a newspaper letter written by Anderson which Ulman constructed as an attack on the women relatives of liquor dealers. Anderson received eight or ten blows one of which cut him under the eye. Ulman was arrested and released on bail.

MANUFACTURERS are of two kinds—the honest and dishonest. The one makes the best goods, the other makes the worst. Each has his own particular scheme of life.

The honest manufacturer aims to make the best goods he can and to advertise them so that all the world will know of their merits. He courts investigation. He wants customers to hold him to a rigid accountability.

The dishonest manufacturer hopes to profit by deception. He produces an article that will be offered as "just as good" though he knows it is inferior. He seeks to make a larger profit than the honest manufacturer, and this larger profit is necessary because he has to find new customers day after day.

OLD NUGGETS.

There is a Curious Resemblance Between Them and Meteorites.

How do nuggets of gold originate? Sometimes a mass of the precious metal worth a thousand dollars or more is found. By what process was so much gold compacted into a lump?

An attempt was made not long ago to answer this question. An investigator in Australia cut and sliced and polished gold nuggets with the sole purpose of finding out just what is their structure. The first thing he discovered was that there is one curious point of resemblance between gold nuggets and meteorites. Both, when polished and etched with chlorine water, exhibit a crystalline structure. In the case of meteorites the lines thus exhibited on the etched surface are called Widmanstättian figures, and their presence is said to be one of the most invariable characteristics of those metallic bodies that fall from the sky to the earth.

But it is not meant to be implied that gold nuggets have fallen from the sky because they exhibit a crystalline structure recalling that of meteorites. The resemblance is apparently only superficial, and the crystals of the nuggets differ in form from those of the meteorites.

Another curious fact is that when a nugget is heated in a Bunsen flame explosions take place on its surface. Blisters are formed which continue to swell until they burst with a sharp report and bits of gold are violently scattered about. It is evident that the nuggets contain either gases or some liquids or solids which are easily converted into the gaseous form, the expansion of which produces the explosions.—Harper's Weekly

THE BREADFRUIT TREE.

Its Meat When Cooked Tastes Like Mashed Potatoes and Milk.

One of the gifts of the eastern tropics to the western is the breadfruit, which is now extensively planted in the West Indies. This can be done only by cuttings, as the cultivated variety develops no seeds. In the wild form the chestnutlike seeds are eaten, but the pulp is disregarded. The tree is of moderate height, but spreads a broad crown of large, ragged edged, glossy leaves, making an excellent shade.

The fruit, which is a compound of the massive clusters of blossoms, is about the size of a coconut and is incased in a rough rind. This, when baked in hot embers or in an oven, broken open and scooped out with a spoon, tastes like mashed potatoes and milk or like sweet bread, which it also resembles in appearance. It is a little fibrous toward the center, but elsewhere is quite smooth and "puddingy." Sometimes a curry or stew is made of it, and it goes well as a vegetable with meat or gravy. "With sugar, milk, butter or treacle," Wallace wrote, "it is a delicious pudding, having a very slight but delicate and characteristic flavor, like that of good bread and potatoes, one never gets tired of." It is also highly nutritious.

The genus (artocarpus) contains several species, one of which, the jackfruit, is also cultivated for eating. The timber of the tree is also useful, the bark can be prepared for a sort of cloth and the sap forms, when boiled with oil, a mucilaginous liquid very useful for making the seams of wooden pails, canoes and the like water tight.—Harper's Weekly.

EMERSON IN OLD AGE.

Even His Failing Memory Could Not Mar His Amiability.

In Dr. J. K. Hosmer's "The Last Leaf," there is a pathetic picture of Emerson in his old age, when his memory had failed while his other faculties remained strong: "I had as a fellow guest a man who had long been intimate with him and whom he was very glad to see. Talking after tea in the library, Emerson said: 'I want to tell you about a friend in Germany. His name I cannot remember, and he moved to and fro uneasily in his effort to recall it. This friend with whom we have taken tea tonight, whose name also I cannot remember—here again came a distressed look at the failure of his faculty—I cannot remember his name either, but he can tell you of this German friend whose name I have also forgotten.'"

"It was a sorrow to see the breaking down of a great spirit and his agitation as he was conscious of his waning power. And yet, so far as I could see, it was only the memory that was going. The intellectual strength was still apparent, and the amiability of his spirit was perhaps even more manifest than in the years when he was in the full possession of himself."

"This came out in little things. He was overanxious at the table lest the hospitality should come short, troubled about the supply of butter and apple sauce, and soon after I saw him on his knees on the hearth taking care that the fire should catch the wood to abate the evening coolness, that was gathering in the room."

The Rooks and the Seagulls.
A Dover correspondent reports a curious incident which was witnessed at a farm at Elms Vale, on the confines of the borough. A flock of seagulls flying inland had taken possession of a newly sown field and were pecking away, when a still more numerous flock of rooks swooped down and attacked the gulls. The rooks, being about two to each gull, flapped and rushed the gulls until they withdrew to a field some distance off. The victorious rooks then proceeded to enjoy themselves in the field, having first set what were apparently sentries along the side of the field. It was amusing to watch these sentries hustling away any gull which strayed too near. It has been noted by naturalists that this setting of sentries is in accordance with the habits of rooks.—London By Stander.

The Drink That Was Called Robur.
About forty years ago there was advertised on London billboards a drink called Robur, said to be good for every ailment and, incidentally, the long sought after elixir of life. One was invited to send for free samples, and its marvelous properties were the subject of everybody's conversation. Robur might have been sold to this day had not some one, without the fear of a libel action before his eyes, divulged its secret formula—cold tea enlivened by rum. From that moment it fell as rapidly as it had risen, for people could make their own Robur if they wanted it.—Chicago News.

COUSIN TO THE CABBAGE.

Kohlrabi Liked by Some Dairymen as Food For Cows.

Kohlrabi is a cultivated variety of the kale or cabbage, distinguished by the swelling of the stem just above the ground, in a globular form, to the size of a man's fist or larger, leafstalks springing from the swollen part and adding to the peculiarity of its appearance. This is the part which is used, and its uses are similar to those of the turnip.

In quality the kohlrabi more nearly resembles the Swedish than the common turnip, and the use of it for feeding cows does not give their milk as disagreeable a flavor as when they are fed on turnips. Kohlrabi is very hardy, its leaves, as well as the stem and the root, enduring the most severe winters.

In the cultivation of kohlrabi it is usual to sow it on seed beds and to transplant by dibbling into fields, but this is perhaps not the best method. It ought, however, to be sown earlier than even Swedish turnip. Raised drills are unsuitable for it, owing to the effect of winds. It is more solid and nutritious than any kind of turnip of the same size. There are numerous subvarieties. Kohlrabi grows best in a strong, rich soil, with the use of abundant manure. One authority says of kohlrabi:

"Sow in spring, in rows eighteen inches apart, afterward thinning the plants to eight to ten inches. If the weather is suitable the thinnings may be planted, but it is considered difficult to transplant. Keep the weeds down, and when the thickened stems above ground are two or three inches through they are fit to eat and should be used at once, being tough when old. Cook same as turnips."

OWN YOUR HOME.

Every young farmer should strive to own a home. The home owner has more opportunity for efficient service to his community, county and state, and the comfort and pleasure of living on one's own farm are not to be compared to renting. Rent if you are not able to buy, but make your plans for owning your home.

Why We Cultivate Corn.

The purposes of interculture tillage are, first, to kill weeds; second, to keep the surface soil receptive to rainfall; third, to prevent the evaporation of soil moisture. Cultivating corn four inches deep as compared with two inches deep may reduce the yield 10 per cent, owing to pruning the roots. Four or five cultivations are usually sufficient.—Farm Progress.

For "Drowned" Land.

How to treat land that is too wet for crops and not easily drained: Plow it in a very dry time, thoroughly harrow and seed to redtop (herd's grass) and alsike clover.—Farm Journal.

HENS AND THEIR KINFOLKS.

A good way to keep off disease is to dig up a portion of the soil where the hens assemble, so that they can scratch and have a dirt bath in the clean fresh earth.

Provide a good open shed for the young turkeys to roost in and don't allow them to wander off. Their value is too great to allow them to take up with the neighbor's flock.

Always make the nest boxes easily removable, so that they may be frequently taken out of the house and cleaned, disinfected and treated for the destruction of vermin.

Ducks and geese do not roost and, when housed with chickens, are obliged to inhale the bad air from the floor under or near the perches. A low shelter and a small yard will make them comfortable.

ONE CAUSE OF WASTE.

It is stated on good authority that the annual loss to the apple industry of the country by the codling moth alone amounts to over $12,000,000. The annual loss to our truck growers from insect pests amounts to about 20 per cent of the crop, but by judicious methods of control this might be reduced to 5 per cent. This shows the need of up to date methods to reduce the high cost of living.—E. P. Hitchings, Experiment Station, Orono, Me.

CORN SILAGE PAYS WELL.

Experiments Prove Its Great Worth as a Feed For Stock.

The South Carolina experiment station recently published a bulletin by Archibald Smith giving the results of tests to ascertain the value of different kinds of forage crops fed with cottonseed meal. The main findings are of especial value to the farmers of the south and of great value to farmers in any section of the country. The bulletin demonstrates anew the economy of corn silage as beef producing feed.

In this test silage, corn stover and cottonseed hulls were compared. The test demonstrated:

That corn silage gave by far the best returns not only in economic production of beef, but also in the quality of beef and the shape in which it reached the market.

That silage fed steers produced beef from 15 to 20 per cent cheaper than the other feeds.

That silage fed beef lost less in shipping to market. This is a test which some shippers have disputed in the past, declaring silage fed beef lost severely in the shipping process.

That the silage fed group produced gains that would warrant a value on the silage of $6.80 per ton—this earning on a very poor market, as the steers sold for only $5.50 per hundred. Had they been sold on a good market the gain might have been increased 20 per cent.

That with a cost of $2 per ton for the production of corn silage a fair average good corn should be made to earn from $30 to $70 per acre.

WHEN TO CUT YOUR HAY.

Some Pointers For Growers of Timothy and Clover to Bear In Mind.

Timothy may be cut in the forenoon as soon as the dew is off and raked into windrows immediately after dinner if the weather is dry and clear. Any hay preserves best its color, aroma and palatability by being shocked or placed in the stack in the greenest possible condition without being so green that heating or molding will occur.

If the timothy is very heavy and is exposed to dew of a light shower before it is raked it will frequently be necessary to use the tedder in order to shape it up thoroughly and get rid of moisture.

Except in the case of small fields under conditions which would not justify an outlay for machinery, there is very little of the hay crop which goes into the old time shock. This is undoubtedly a very satisfactory way of curing hay in its best condition, especially if protected by a shock cover, but where large amounts are to be handled it is better economy to place it in a mow or stack it directly from the windrow.

Clover is best cut when it is in full bloom, but it is better to cut it earlier than this rather than later. If cutting is delayed until some of the clover blossoms mature and turn dark there is likely to be a heavy loss of foliage and a consequent deterioration in feeding value.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Economy Bean Harvester.

To make a bean harvester that will do good work and yet involve scarcely any expense take a common hoe to the blacksmith. Have shank cut in two and take a piece of steel of the same diameter and have a piece about ten inches long welded in. This is to keep the handle from striking the beans and shelling them. Have the hoe sharp and cut just at top of ground putting two rows into one when chop ped off.

You can chop them nearly as fast as you can walk, and when the beans are dry take a common pitchfork and load on to a wagon. In this way much hard labor is saved with but little expense.—Farm and Fireside.

Test Cows—and Farmers Too.

One of the best effects of the cow testing associations is on the farmer himself. One of the men who look after the cow testing associations said to us once: "That he had repeatedly noticed that a farmer was a 'goner' case" who could not be aroused to better thinking and management by the work of the test. Too many farmers expect the cows to change for the better without doing anything in that direction themselves.—Heard's Dairy Man.

Give the Lambskins a Chance.

Lambs frequently experience a difficulty in finding the teats owing to the long wool surrounding the udder, and it is very important that the shepherd examine every ewe and use the shear to cut away any surplus wool. This will enable the lambs to feed with greater ease, and they are less apt to become victims of wool balls in the stomach, which frequently cause death.—American Agriculturist.

A boy in Philadelphia shot at a sparrow but his air-rifle shot struck a small child, fortunately not killing it. Air-rifles are dangerous playthings and the wonder is that parents permit their children to have them.

A man in Philadelphia and a woman in Baltimore on the same day last week started to take poison but concluded it tasted too bad to swallow. It would be fortunate indeed if all attempts at suicide could be as promptly foiled. It would be equally fortunate if the power of example, when of an improper kind, could be made less inviting.

A California man for four years past has refrained from all liquids except such as he could absorb from fruits. In addition he has lived in the open and has enjoyed the best of health. This story may or may not be true. Excesses of any kind are harmful. That in the direction of good water might be excused more readily than any other. It would be interesting to know how the California fruit man would be affected by reading "The Old Oaken Bucket."

Preparing For The Levy

The County Commissioners next week expect to strike the levy for 1913. This is a task that few appreciate. To adjust the expenses of the county so as to establish a moderate tax rate is not a simple affair. The taxable basis of the county is not high and yet certain expenditures and appropriations are absolutely necessary or required by law. The public schools, for instance, require much more money than ever before in obedience to the law as to teachers' salaries, high schools, etc. So with the other county expenses. The Commissioners deserve sympathy rather than criticism as they approach this important work.

The Commissioners have recently been occupied in hunting up undisclosed property of various kinds to put upon the tax books and have been successful in making a number of additions. The authorities would be saved much inconvenience, and the county money, if improvements and changes were volunteered instead of having to be hunted down. Every taxpayer is interested in seeing that all private property holdings shall share their pro rata of the public expenses.

Another Insidious Lobby

Another deep-laid plot to mold public sentiment has been discovered with which, as affecting the vital welfare of the nation, the "insidious lobby" employed to influence tariff legislation at Washington is not to be compared. The Navy League of the United States has discovered that the American Peace Society has been sending speakers to public schools in the District of Columbia and elsewhere throughout the United States to speak on peace. According to the Navy League, the doctrines of the Peace Society are pernicious, misleading, based on misrepresentations, contrary to the teachings of Washington and of a kind with the propaganda which was responsible for the war of 1812 and for many of the difficulties which beset the government during the Civil War.

Therefore the Navy League has issued a call to arms, takes school boards to task for failure to make patriotic reprisals against this lobbying of infant opinion, and volunteers to send out its own agents to combat such efforts in kind. Surely the Senate should investigate this charge—or, better, while the Senate is busy, the House, in anticipation of a three-battle ship bill, should seek out the influences which are seeking to control legislation by artful appeal to the children of the land. Even the Government is being divided against itself; the Secretary of State is advocating the substitution of his fair fleet of Friendship and Fellowship and the diplomacy of grape juice for the sweeping hall of grape, and other beneficiaries of government pay, retired officers of the Navy, following the lead of the valiant Hobson, are urging the necessity of appropriations for war. Could anything be more insidious? Phila. Evening Bulletin.

—There is some consolation in the fact that even the suffragette hasn't altogether outgrown ice cream soda.

World Borrowing

In February the German Government issued a loan for $135,000,000, which was very much under-subscribed. But it has just announced another loan of $56,250,000, with the effect of a great depression in the Berlin stock market, which has reacted upon London, Paris and New York.

But Germany has not been borrowing more than other countries. France has been projecting a loan of $200,000,000. Fifteen bond issues of national and colonial governments and corporations have been left in the greater part upon the hands of the underwriters in London, who have been obliged to borrow money to carry them.

The difficulty of selling bonds has been growing greater. Last winter the two explanations were the Balkan war and the hoarding of gold. The Balkan war ceased some months ago to be a serious factor, and the fact that the great national banks of Europe hold $120,000,000 more gold than they did a year ago casts some doubt about the hoarding. The financial authorities are coming to the conclusion that the demand for money far exceeds the world's supplies. The world is not saving money fast enough to meet the requirements of governments and corporations. The security markets all over are burdened with undigested bonds, and The London Economist summarizes the situation by saying that the world is "overloaded and overwired."

Nearly every Continental nation is borrowing for military purposes. Canada is borrowing enormously, in proportion to its resources, for internal improvements. All our cities and States are borrowing for buildings and canals and roads and every conceivable form of expenditure. The State of New York is now raising $67,000,000 on short-time notes, because for the moment its bonds are unsaleable, though they are among the most desirable of all investments. In fifteen years New York city has added $913,000,000 to its bonded debt, and its annual budget has very much more than doubled. In seven years the per capita debt of this city, whose debt is relatively moderate, has increased from $37.03 to $55.56; that of Pittsburgh from $56.24 to $81.33; that of Baltimore from $40.34 to $71.64; and that of Cincinnati from $36.48 to $140. A number of State and city bond issues during the past few months have failed or have been carried through only by increasing the rate of interest. The demand for money is driving up the price of it, and even at higher rates it is not satisfied, for the demand exceeds the supply.

There are some elements of danger in the situation, but the conditions are not peculiar to this country. Indeed, they are more favorable here than in Europe, for none of the money sought here is required for purposes of waste and destruction, while most of the Continental countries are borrowing or trying to borrow money to spend on armies and fleets, of which the best that one can say is that they are idle.—Philadelphia Record.

Several Positions Vacant

The Civil Service Commission announces that on July 16 and 17 there will be an examination for architectural draftsmen to fill a vacancy in the Bureau of Equipment, Yard and Docks of the Navy Department at Washington at $1,200 per annum, one at Mare Island Navy Yard, Cal., at $3.75 per diem, and vacancies as they may occur at entrance, salaries ranging from $3.52 to $5.52 per diem. An examination for architectural draftsmen will also be held on August 6 to 7 for appointment in the office of supervising architect at Washington at $1,200 per annum, in the Quartermaster's Corps at Washington at $1,400 per annum, and Quartermaster's Corps in the Philippine Islands at $2,000 per annum, and in the Quartermaster's Corps at Honolulu at $1,500 per annum. These examinations will be held at Baltimore, Cumberland and Salisbury; at Wheeling, Parkersburg, Martinsburg, Charleston, Fairmont and Huntington; and at Richmond, Roanoke, Staunton, Norfolk, Lynchburg, Charlottesville, and Alexandria.

Civil service examination will be held on July 12 at Annapolis to select a postmaster for Cumberland, and at La Plata for postmaster at Welcome.

Take Plenty of Time to Eat

There is a saying that "rapid eating is slow eating." If you have formed the habit of eating too rapidly you are most likely suffering from indigestion or constipation, which will result eventually in serious illness unless corrected. Digestion begins in the mouth. Food should be thoroughly masticated and insalivated. Then when you have a fullness of the stomach or feel dull and stupid after eating, take one of Chamberlain's Tablets. Many severe stomach troubles and constipation have been cured by the use of these tablets. They are easy to take and most agreeable in effect. Sold by all dealers. [Advertisement]

—Willie Cullen, 10 years of age, son of Mrs. Amanda Cullen, was drowned Thursday while in bathing in Somerset Cove, near Crisfield. The little fellow was subject to epilepsy and suffered an attack while in the water. Boys who were bathing in the same neighborhood got him out of the water, but efforts on the part of Dr. Wm. H. Coulbourne to revive him were futile.

—According to reports from different sections of Maryland, and especially from the Eastern Shore, the tomato crop is seriously threatened by the drouth. Eastern Shore farmers are greatly discouraged because of the ill fortunes which have overtaken them this year. Their strawberry crops were greatly shortened by frosts and prices were not as high as during former years. Frosts also was fatal to the early tomato plants.

—Miss Florence Wainwright was found dead in her chair in the office of the Home Gas Company, Salisbury, where she is employed as bookkeeper, Friday night. At 6.15 o'clock when the other employees of the office left, Miss Wainwright appeared to be in the best of health and spirits. It is believed that death was due to acute indigestion to which she was subject. Miss Wainwright was 24 years of age, and resided on Maryland Avenue Salisbury.

—Sherman Miles, colored, of Crisfield, with five other negroes of Somerset and Worcester counties, who have been employed by the N. Y. P. & N. on express cars running from Philadelphia to Cape Charles, was arrested in a round up made by Sheriff Smith of Wicomico county Sunday afternoon the 15th inst. The negroes were all members of a well organized gang of express robbers who have been rifling the express cars on the main line for several months past. They are being held in the Salisbury jail and will be given a hearing on several charges brought by the Adams Express Company.

—Mr. Calvin H. Long, aged 52 years, a native of Pocomoke City, shot himself in the head in Hampton Va., Saturday the 15th, and died instantly. Mr. Long had a stroke of paralysis several weeks ago and it is thought that the effects of the paralysis and despondency over ill health had unbalanced his mind which led to his rash act. His remains were brought to Pocomoke City Monday of last week and interred in St. Mary's Protestant Episcopal cemetery. Mr. Long is survived by his widow, who before marriage was Miss Annie Kelam, of Eastville, Va., two sons—Messrs. W. W. Long, an employee of the N. Y. P. & N. R. R. Gov. Goldsborough at Newark
Governor Goldsborough, of Maryland, and Governor Miller, of Delaware, were the two principal speakers at the annual farmers' meeting held at the Delaware College Experiment Farm Monday of last week. The attendance was the largest since the plan of setting aside a day for the farmers during commencement week was inaugurated some years ago. The crowd was estimated at 5,000, and many farmers came from Maryland, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Governor Miller presided and made the first address. He commended the college for the great work that it is doing in the agricultural department. His address was largely on the rural school as it exists in Delaware. He said that more modern country school methods are required in this state.

Governor Goldsborough talked on Good Roads, and told of the fine work that is being done in Maryland in the good road line. He eulogized his predecessor, the late Governor Crothers, for the work that he did in connection with getting the first $9,000,000 appropriation for permanent roads. With the $6,000,000 more recently appropriated, he said, Maryland will have 1,200 miles of good roads when it is all expended, and that he anticipated 400 additional miles of permanent side roads would be built this year under the new petition bill. Under this bill the road is built if 60 per cent. of the property-owners on the particular road petition for it.

Among the features was a parade of the thoroughbred livestock on the farm. The battalion of college cadets gave an exhibition drill, and the band also gave a concert on the farmhouse lawn. In addition to the two Governors, addresses were also made by Professor Alva Agee, of New Jersey, and Josiah Marvel, of Wilmington. An open-air meeting for women was also held and addresses were made by Mrs. A. D. Wagner, Mrs. Frederick Snyder and Dr. Sarah Lyons, of Lincoln University. During the afternoon ground was broken for the new affiliated college for women, to be built near Newark, at a cost of $150,000. Governor Miller turned the first spade of dirt.

Lawyers Dine with D. O. Hastings

The remodeled colonial home in Dover of D. O. Hastings, former judge but now an active practitioner at the bar, was opened Tuesday evening by a dinner to fifty lawyers and laymen, of the intimate associates of Mr. Hastings of all three counties. It has been his custom for several years to give a dinner to the judges on the first day of the June term of the Supreme Court, but on this occasion Mr. Hastings enlarged his list of guests to over fifty, nearly all of whom accepted. Besides the judges there were present from official life former Governor Pennewill and Attorney-General Wolcott—Delaware State News.

[Judge Hastings is a native of Somerset county and is a son of Mr. D. H. Hastings, who formerly resided about six miles north of Princess Anne, but who now has his home in Salisbury.—Ed.]

FRAUD PAINT

The worst mistake one is likely to make in painting is wrong paint; it is easy to make. We all say "Ours is the best," and there are 1000 of us One is best; but a dozen are so near on a level that no one knows, for sure, that his is the one. The worst paints are worst liars; they know what they are, put on a bold face, and brazen it out. Their one true argument is low price; but low-price paint is always, must be, a fraud; it is made to cheat cheatable people. DEVOE

WILY WOMAN WON

A FINE FIX FOR A PRESIDENT.

Anne Royall, the Mother of Newspaper Interviews, Tricked John Quincy Adams and Badgered Him into Giving Up the Information She Wanted.

In clearing the ground for some improvements in Potomac park in Washington the contractor some time ago removed a stone that for nearly a century was a quaint landmark in the national capital. It is called the "Anne Royall stone" and lay on the bank of the river just opposite the White House, about twenty feet back from the water's edge, at the top of a grass covered knoll.

It was on this stone that Anne Royall sat when she had her famous interview with President John Quincy Adams—at least, so runs the story that has been handed down for three generations by the inhabitants of Washington.

And, according to that story, it would appear that the good lady for whom the stone was named was not only a person of energy, but was endowed with considerable grim determination as well. She evidently had a good strong will of her own and an active mind of her own, and when these two started to work in concert in deadly earnest results were bound to follow.

Whether the good lady's sense of humor was cramped or extensive, the reader must determine for himself.

Anne Royall was in a sort of the mother of modern journalism. She was the originator of the "interview." She first in the little sheet that she published in Washington in the second and third decades of the last century, departed from the dry forms that had always characterized newspapers.

She did not confine herself to a mere summary of current happenings, even spiced with careful essays on abstract subjects, after the manner of Steele or Addison. She struck firmly the "personal note." She wrote and printed things about public men as they were in their daily lives—an innovation the startling effect of which we cannot realize today. Her paper was called the Washington Paul Fry and afterward the Huntress.

During the administration of John Quincy Adams congress passed a certain bill, the signing or veto of which by the president was a matter of intense public interest. In those days the interview of the president by a newspaper man was unheard of, and so one had the temerity to ask Mr. Adams what he would do in the matter.

But there was an exception among the numerous journalists of that day, as Anne Royall. She dared to apply at the White House for a conference with the president, the avowed object of which was to learn from him his intentions concerning the bill.

Poor Anne, however, was kept at a discouraging distance. Day after day she lay in wait, only to be told by his attendants, but she did not grow discouraged. She learned that every morning, immediately after rising, the president walked to the bank of the Potomac, some half a mile in the rear of the White House, and there, after taking off his clothes, plunged into the stream for a swim.

One morning when the president, after swimming far out into the stream, turned to make his way back toward the shore he was astonished to see, sitting upon his clothing, which he had left upon a stone on the bank, a spectacled female with a look of great determination. It was Anne Royall, and beside her were a pen and bottle of ink, and in her hand was a sheet of paper.

"Woman, depart!" sputtered the president as he swam up into the shallows where he could touch the bottom a-tiptoe.

"You know who I am, Mr. President," said the woman, "and you know what I want. I'm going to sit here until you tell me what you intend doing with that Cherokee Indian bill."

"Go away, woman!" shouted the president. "This is scandalous!"

"It's scandalous," Anne is reported to have said, "that the people of a free country have to resort to such extreme measures to find out what their servants are going to do. You give me the information that I am entitled to; then I'll give you your clothes. Otherwise I'll stay here—and you'll stay there!"

There was only one outcome to such a struggle. The shivering president told Anne what he expected to do and why he would do it. Then, and not until then, did Anne, armed with copious notes, rise from the stone that she had made famous and hasten to her little printing office, where she lost no time in getting that first and most famous, presidential interview into print—Youth's Companion.

Ready For the Inspectors. Annoyed by a notice that the local sanitary committee were going to inspect his cow house, a Dorset farmer spread linoleum over the floor of the building, displayed beehive rugs in convenient positions, hung the walls with pictures and a mirror and installed a harmonium. When the committee arrived he gravely invited them to wipe their feet on the doormat before entering—London Mail.

A Wandering Scot's Tribulations.

A Glasgow man who recently took up residence in London, says the Glasgow News, selected from the people answering his advertisement for rooms a landlady boasting the name of MacKay. That name, even without the lady's protestations, convinced him that he was going to a "home from home." On arriving, his pleasurable anticipation was increased when he was informed that it was "taken for granted" he would have porridge for breakfast. He was astounded, however, to find the oatmeal served cold and solid and profusely sprinkled with parsley. Something approaching a scene occurred when he intimated to the lady that he required the dish brought hot and fresh and without vegetable embellishment. With a gesture of despair she led him to the kitchen, where on the shelf was a row of bowls containing his weekly supply of parsley decorated porridge!

Our Musical Nerves.

Everybody who has been to the dentist knows only too well that the teeth have nerves connected with them. These nerves lead to certain knots of nerve tissue called ganglia, from which also proceed other nerves that pass to the auditory chambers of the ear. If you grind your teeth ever so slightly you will find that you hear the sound very distinctly. The vibrations caused by grinding are conveyed to the auditory chamber, where a series of pyramidal cells of varying lengths are so arranged as to operate like keys of a piano. These cells, each of which responds to a particular note, are connected by nerve threads, like piano wires, with the main nerve of hearing—a complex and beautiful arrangement to which we owe our power to appreciate the exquisite harmonies of music.

BOGUS "ANTIQUES."

There is a Very Simple Way to Outwit the "Art Fakers."

Every little while some victim of artistic swindlers comes into court asking damages. The "antique" bookcase for which he paid $4,000 proves to be one made week before last, an exact copy of those offered at annual sales for $74.85. The "original" picture by Greuze or Corot or George Inness or Homer Martin turns out to be a fake perpetrated by some "artist" who is glad to draw a regular salary of $50 per week for helping gull the public.

In such cases the courts recover as much of the victim's money as possible. His loss in time, mortification, disgust and disappointment must be charged to experience. And for every such case which sees the light of a courtroom scores are kept concealed.

There is a simple way to outwit these "art fakers." If you are buying furniture, buy for beauty and utility, not for art. If you are buying pictures buy for art's sake, not for a name's sake. Names can be forged, age can be simulated, but beauty and usefulness are possessions in themselves, no matter from whose hand you get them.

True, this rule requires the buyer to study pictures and furniture until he knows something about them. But without such knowledge the owner gets little satisfaction out of the possessions. If people bought only those articles which they understand and approve, we should have a saner standard of living in this good country.—Chicago Journal.

ATHENS AND THE SEASON.

Not Comfort, but the Date, Governs the Summer Outings.

The modern Athenians are not very fond of hard exercise, and except in the height of summer, when many of them go to Kephissia and Phalerum and others to the islands or to the baths near Corinth for a "cure," they seem well content to remain within their city. They are governed, it seems by fashion, like those who dwell in less favored lands.

When I was in Athens the weather was usually magnificent and often very hot. Yet Phalerum, perhaps half an hour by train from Constitution square, was deserted. In the vast hotel there I found only two or three children; in the baths half a dozen swimmers. The pleasure boats lay idle by the pier. I asked the reason of this—why at evening dusty Athens was crammed with strollers and the pavements were black with people taking coffee and ices, while delightful Phalerum, with its cooler air and its limpid waters, held no one but an English traveler?

"The season is over," was the only reply I received, delivered with a grave air of finality. I tried to argue the matter and suggested that anxiety about the war had something to do with it. But I was informed that the "season" closed on a certain day and that after that day the Athenians gave up going to Phalerum.—Robert Hichens in Century Magazine.

THE JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY

State Scholarships in Engineering Courses

Applications for scholarships in the Department of Engineering, established in the The Johns Hopkins University under the provisions of the Laws of Maryland Chapter 90, 1912 should now be made.

Entrance examinations for all students will be held in McCoy Hall, The Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, on June 25th to 27th and on September 30th to October 2d, 1913, beginning at 9 a. m. Applicants for scholarships are urged to take the examinations in June.

If there is more than one applicant for a particular scholarship a competitive examination will be held at the University as soon as possible after the autumn examinations. In addition to certain collegiate scholarships and scholarships at large, the Act provides for 102 scholarships to be apportioned among the counties and legislative districts of Baltimore city, the same number of awards so far as possible to be made each year. The undergraduate courses in Engineering will extend through four years and it has been determined to offer 35 of these scholarships in the year 1913 and 1914. Allegany, Baltimore, Frederick and Washington counties and the four legislative districts of Baltimore city will each be entitled to two scholarships, and each of the other counties to one scholarship in October 1913. Six scholarships at large may also be awarded at that time.

Applicants for scholarships should address the Registrar, The Johns Hopkins University for the blank forms of application and for further information as to the examination and the award of scholarships.

A YOUNG MAN'S SCHEME

By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

"Gaul durn her picture, but I love her!"

The young man who uttered the words was at work in the field, and he straightened up to rest his weary back and mutter:

"And I'll make her love me before I'm through with her! She may think I don't amount to much, but all I want is a chance to prove that I do. Durn farm work! Durn widders! Durn love! Durn everything!"

He kicked the fence to show his disgust and wearily resumed work. Ebenezer Schermerhorn, hired man, was in love with the Widow Tompkins, whose farm adjoined that of his boss on the west. Ebenezer was twenty-four years old, plain of face and ungainly of form and without a hundred dollars' worth of property.

One evening as he dropped in to see the widow about borrowing some farm implement next day he found her reading a love story. She read a few chapters to him and afterward acknowledged that she had always been romantic and that if she ever married again it would be to a hero.

The farmer's hired man didn't rush right off that night and try to be a hero, but sat down and did some thinking.

Three or four days after Ebenezer's thinking bee a tramp came along the road and, seeing the young man hoeing corn just over the fence, halted for a word or two. Ordinarily Ebenezer would have leaped the fence and run the wayfarer half a mile, but on this occasion he invited him over to a confidential conversation. The result of that conversation was that at 8 o'clock that evening the tramp appeared before the Widow Tompkins and made threats of what he would do if she didn't set out victuals, hunt up old clothes and come down with a dollar in cash.

Ebenezer was not far away—just far enough to come running up and knock the tramp head over heels and rescue the widow. But as he started to come running he fell down and got tangled up with the bushes, and before he could get away the widow had broom-sticked the tramp into flight. She didn't say she was glad that the would be hero was so near at hand. What she did say was that she wasn't afraid of any tramp walking the roads.

Ebenezer's first try was a failure, but within a fortnight he was ready for another. Two or three farmhouses in the township had been robbed, and this fact became the basis for his second plan. One night at midnight he left his bed, descended to earth by way of a window, and armed with a club, he became a guard for the widow's house. He circled around it and patrolled the garden and the orchard, and he felt that he would give a year of his life if a robber would appear. He would first tell him and then arouse the house, and when the widow came to know that he had been guarding her for love her heart would melt toward him.

But no robber came. Instead of that his footsteps awoke the widow, and, peering out, she saw some one walking about, and she got a shotgun and raised a window and blazed away. The gun was loaded with bird shot to shoot hawks that might come swooping down on chickens, but in this case they answered just as well for a man. Ebenezer received about twenty of them and ran two miles to a doctor to have them picked out. He also had a vacation from work for a week under the excuse that he had sprained his back turning over in bed.

Ninety-nine out of every hundred would be heroes would have given up right here, but Ebenezer was a man to hang on. It was while he was limping around on his vacation and doing a lot of standing up and wandering over the fields that he came upon the widow fishing in the river at a certain point. He did not show himself, but fifty feet from where she sat under a tree he discovered a bumblebee's nest in the grass. It was a large and liberal nest, and it gave him a thought. The bees wouldn't bother anybody so long as they were let alone. If stirred up they would look for meat.

There was a haystack not far away, and Ebenezer had matches in his pocket. He retired behind the stack and collected a hatful of stones from the plowed land. These he threw one by one at the spot where the bees were pursuing the even tenor of their ways. The plot thickened. You can thicken a bumblebee plot in a very short time. All you've got to do is to tread on their coattails. When the insects found the rocks dropping on their heads they swarmed out of the grass to look for the enemy. They should have seen the widow and descended upon her, and at her first shriek Ebenezer would come charging down with a wisp of lighted hay in either hand. But things went wrong. The bees then went for him alone. They ran him up and down the haystack; they ran him over fences and back; they ran him across lots and in circles, and when they finally left him and he fell down the widow came forward and asked:

"But why were you such a fool?" "Because I want you to marry me!" he groaned in reply. "And you said you would marry a hero. I thought the bees would attack you and I could rush in and save you."

"Why, you great idiot! I've been ready to say yes any day for the last three months."

SERVED A FINE DINNER.

The Prince Enjoyed It, and the Famished Guests Politely Smiled.

Prince Leopold, the late regent of Bavaria, was extremely hospitable, receiving many guests and keeping open house, to which came in turn officers, scientists, artists, manufacturers—all the best society in Munich. Himself the wielder of an excellent knife and fork, he took the pleasures of the table seriously and desired that all his guests should do the same.

Some weeks before his last illness he fell asleep at a dinner party immediately after the first course. His guests were restrained by respect for etiquette from waking him, but continued their conversation in low tones. The servants did not dare to continue serving the dinner. The prince continued to sleep and soon began to snore. The guests continued their conversation in somewhat louder tones, but the prince slept for two hours, during which time no one left his place. The guests sat famished in the same room with a marvelously appointed dinner.

At length Prince Leopold awoke. He gave a hurried glance round the table and saw only a number of well-mannered guests successfully pretending to have noticed nothing. Persuaded that his doze had passed completely unobserved, he said, "Now let us go and take coffee."

The guests rose accordingly and proceeded to the drawing room. They were served with coffee, liqueurs and cigars. The prince, thoroughly refreshed by his sleep, indulged in a great deal of excellent conversation which lasted till midnight. The party then broke up, and the guests departed, famished with hunger, with an official smile upon their lips.

PLAY OF THE BLUEJAY.

It Likes to Tease Hawks and Owls by Imitating Their Calls.

The bluejay likes best to live in thick woods, but it often comes into open fields, orchards and near dwellings in search of food. When it discovers you it assumes a proud and angry air of conceit and defiance.

The bluejay's upper parts are purplish blue. The lower parts are purplish gray. The wings and tail are bright blue with black bars. The tail feathers are tipped with white. It has a crested head.

The bluejay builds its nest about twenty feet above ground. It is made of twigs and fine roots. From four to six eggs are laid. They are of a greenish drab color flecked with brown.

Doubtless the bluejay helped to name itself, as its common utterance is a long drawn "Jay, Jay, Jay." This cry, with the bright blue colors, has given it its name.

While the jays sing no song it is able to imitate the calls of other birds, by which means it often attracts them. It likes to tease and torment the owl and especially the little sparrow hawk. This is done by imitating the cry of a wounded bird, which draws the hawk near. Then several jays will dart at the hawk, squealing and frolicking about in great glee. Sometimes the play ends in a tragedy, for the hawk pounces upon one of them to the dismay of the others. Jays may be caged and tamed like crows, and some writers say they can be taught to utter words.—From Bird Studies by Herman C. de Groat.

The Inartistic Frock Coat.

Let the Chinese wallow in all our virtues and in all our vices, but at least let them preserve Asia from our clothes. Can you imagine Confucius in a frock coat and a top hat? I regard the frock coat as the most horrible vestment ever worn by that absurd animal—man. When I pass a bronze statue of a British statesman, buttoned up in a bronze or marble frock coat I cover my eyes and slink by in a paroxysm of horror. There is only one thing worse than a frock coat in bronze or marble and that is a pair of trousers in marble or bronze. I think our sculptors ought to strike against the bronze frock coat and the marble trousers. If they must make effigies of our statesmen let them model them in their pajamas.—London Opinion.

Getting Mixed in Art.

Occasionally Homer and the other reputable classics nod in the Boston environments.

A woman in Rhode Island wrote to the head of a Boston institution that advances art—all of them are supposed to—and asked when and where she could buy a Gilbert Stuart portrait—subject in material.

This recalls the Cleveland woman who said that a woman on Euclid avenue had a "full length Rembrandt" in her collection—but she had forgotten who the artist was.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Out of Order.

Little Frances—We don't say! Little Frances—Yes! an' its eyes open jest like my dolly's, but I dess some-od's the matter wif its works, cause its eyes don't go shut ewry time they lay it down.—Chicago News.

An Explanation.

"Friend of the bride or the bridegroom?" asked the usher.

Undertaker's Law Is Valid

Judge Amber, sitting in Criminal Court No. 2, Baltimore, last Wednesday, overruled the demurrers filed by the traversers in the cases of the State vs. William Keller, Gordon C. Lindes and John Tinker, for violation of the undertaker's law. These cases involve the constitutionality of the law creating the State Board of Undertakers.

The case was argued on May 24th last, and held sub. argu. By the ruling of the court Judge Amber decided that the law was constitutional and that anyone engaged in the business of an undertaker, either as principal or assistant, must first be licensed by the State Board. It practically alters the ruling made in the Criminal Court in the fall of 1912, when the act was declared unconstitutional by Judge Gorter, who was sitting in the court at that time, although the principal question at issue in the case before Judge Gorter concerned the validity of that part of the act requiring that a licensed undertaker could also be an experienced embalmer.

Meeting of The Maryland-Delaware Horticultural Societies

The joint summer meeting of the Maryland-Delaware Horticultural Societies will be held at Berlin, Md., July 31st, 1913. The Societies will be entertained by J. G. Harrison & Sons, the noted nursery firm of that place. The meeting promises to be of unusual importance and interest, inasmuch as this firm has enormous plantings of nursery stock, covering over 2,500 acres, and also over 2,000 acres in orchards planting in and around Berlin.

It will be the aim of the firm to transport visitors over their plantations, explaining to them the manner in which they raise trees and handle nursery stock. Visitors will also be conducted to orchards which this season will be bearing luscious peaches that will be ripe at that time. This will offer an unusual opportunity for growers to observe how perfect fruit can be grown on the Peninsula by the employment of up-to-date methods of spraying and culture. This firm, in co-operation with the School of Horticulture of the Maryland Agricultural College, is conducting a series of experiments and demonstrations in the spraying of peaches and in the fertilization of orchards, which will be available for visitors to observe at the summer meeting.

The growers of the Peninsula as well as members of the Horticultural Societies of all the adjoining States will be invited to attend this meeting. The idea that emanates from a summer meeting is that practical demonstrations shall be conducted for the benefit of the growers in attendance, and it will be the aim of the Societies and J. G. Harrison & Sons to conduct pruning demonstrations and other lines of practical work.

Guaranteed Eczema Remedy

The constant itching, burning, redness, rash and disagreeable effects of eczema, tetter, salt rheum, itch, piles and irritating skin eruptions can be readily cured and the skin made clear and smooth with Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment. Mr. J. C. Eveland, of Bath, Ill., says: "I had eczema twenty-five years and had tried everything. All failed. When I found Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment I found a cure." This ointment is the formula of a physician and has been in use for years—not an experiment. That is why we can guarantee it. All druggists, or by mail, Price 50c. ## The Secret of the Big Trees

In the days of the Prophet Elijah sore famine afflicted the land of Palestine. No rain fell, the brooks ran dry, and dire distress prevailed. "Go through the land," said King Ahab to the Prophet Obadiah, "unto all the fountains of water and unto all the brooks; peradventure we may find grass and save the horses and the mules alive, that we lost not all the beasts." When Obadiah went forth in search of forage he fell in with his chief, Elijah, and brought him to Ahab, who greeted him as the troubler of Israel. Then Elijah prayed for rain, according to the Bible story, and the famine was stayed. From this famine in Palestine some 870 years before Christ, to the forests of the Sierra Nevada, in the twentieth-century, is a far cry, but the connecting link between the past and the present, between the ancient East and the modern West, is found in the big trees of California, the huge species known as Sequoia washingtoniana.

In a publication entitled "The Secret of the Big Trees," by Ellsworth Huntington, just placed on sale by the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., it is shown that the growth rings in the big trees of California, indicate that in general the same sequence of climatic changes took place in California and Asia Minor. Curves indicating climatic conditions in California and Asia Minor show a remarkable resemblance between the two regions. The curves begin with the epoch of the Trojan War, about 1200 B. C. There both curves dip very low, indicating an epoch of sudden and severe desiccation. That particular period, historians tell us, was one of the most chaotic in all history.

The famine in the days of Elijah appears in both curves. Apparently at that time the climate did not become extremely dry, nothing like so bad as it had been a few hundred years earlier during the twelfth century, but there was rather a distinct falling off in the amount of rainfall as compared with the uncommonly good conditions of the preceding century. About seven hundred years before Christ both curves stand high in the day when the Greeks were laying the foundation of their future greatness and the empires of Mesopotamia were at their height. Then comes a pronounced falling off with a recovery three or four hundred years before Christ, another decline culminating about 200 B. C., and a recovery reaching a high point about 50 B. C. The time of Christ, the great era of universal peace under the sway of Rome, was apparently an epoch of favorable climate, a time of abundant rain and consequent good crops in all the countries around the Mediterranean Sea and eastward in Asia, as well as in California. Next comes a long period of decline culminating six or seven centuries after the time of Christ. No period in all history, save that which centers about 1200 B. C., was more chaotic; and that early period also appears to have been a time of greatly diminished rainfall.

This publication, which may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, for five cents, gives a detailed account of the reasons and the work that led to the conclusions given above. It also contains 13 illustrations, showing the big trees in the Yosemite, Sequoia, and General Grant National Parks.
