THE CLOSING EXERCISES

Of 1911 W. H. S. Held Tuesday And Wednesday Evening—Appreciative Audience Greeted The Graduates.

The closing exercises of the Wicom-too High School were held on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings in the U-man Opera House. On both occasions the big auditorium was filled to overflowing. The stage was beautifully decorated with cut flowers, palms and ferns. In front of the footlights were huge baskets of beautiful flowers for distribution among the graduates. An orchestra dispensed excellent music.

Tuesday evening was devoted to Class Night exercises. A farce in three acts was finely rendered, entitled "The Ugliest of Seven." The stage settings were very pretty. Preceding this play the following programme was rendered:

Hill call by secretary, Everett Melson.

President's Address, Hugh Dickerson.

Class History, Miss Evelyn Dykes.

Presentation of Gifts, Miss Isabel
Spring.

Class Prophecy, Miss Jessica Drummond.

Class Will, Edward F. Johnson.

Juniata Class Song, School, closing with the Senior Class Song.

Wednesday evening the programme was as follows:

Invocation by Rev. Dr. Martindale.

Essay, "Literature and Life in the School," Miss Mamie Holloway.

Essay, "The Crusades," Hugh Dickerson.

Essay "America's Excessive Indulgence in Amusements," Miss Isabel Spring.

Essay, "Our Value Received I Promise to Pay," Everett Melson.

Essay, "Fighting the Good Fight," Franklin B. Hill.

Valedictory, Miss Lela Dolby.

The address to the class was delivered by Prof. Alexander Harrington, of Delaware, and was an able discourse, presenting many valuable suggestions to the young graduates just going out into life's work.

Mr. H. L. Brownington, president of the School Board, conferred the diplomas upon the eighteen graduates and took occasion to remind the young girls and boys of the obligations they are under to the State and Nation to make the best possible use of their intellectual attainments.

The exercises closed with the benediction by Rev. W. T. M. Seal.

The evening's entertainment was interspersed with delightful music by the Salisbury Orchestra.

The Baccalaureate sermon to the graduates was delivered at St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church on Sunday evening last, by the rector, Rev.
David Howard. The service was attended by the graduates, teachers and members of the School Board.

The annual banquet was held on Thursday evening in the High School Building.

PRICE BOOM LAUNCHED

Friends Want Eastern Shoreman To Run For Governor.

A big-sized boom for the nomination of State Senator Jesse D. Price, of Wicomico County, as the Democratic candidate for Governor was launched yesterday by a number of the Senator's friends both from his home county and other counties. In many quarters it is believed he will enter the contest.

Senator Price was in the city yesterday, and while he refused to discuss his candidacy he admitted that his friends are urging him to run. He is closely watching the situation.

His friends on the Eastern Shore have been urging him to run for some months, but he has not made any move, believing that the next candidate for Governor would not be taken from one of the Eastern Shore counties by the Democrats, as the present Governor is an Eastern Shoreman.

Eastern Shoremen Pleading.

In the last few weeks, however, booms for the nomination of Eastern Shoremen have been started, and many Democrats believe that section has a good chance of winning the nomination. This is brought about by the fact that friends of Governor Crothers, of Cecil County; Congressman J. Harry Covington, of Talbot County; and Mr. Joshua W. Miles, of Somerset County, are urging them to run. Many believe that United States Senator John Walter Smith eventually will line up behind an Eastern Shoreman and try to swing the organization behind him. If an Eastern Shoreman is to be considered, then Senator Price will be in the contest.

Senator Price has a host of friends.
He is a close friend to State Senator
Arthur P. Gorman, Jr., of Howard County, and many thought he intended to support Senator Gorman for the nomination. There is no doubt that he will support Senator Gorman if a man from the Western Shore is taken by the party.

Mr. Gorman Active.

Senator Gorman returned to the city yesterday after an absence of nearly a week. He stated that he was not talking about the Governorship. His activities, however, indicated that the report that he is out of the fight is far-fetched and judging from the throng of party workers who called on him, he is more active than he was before his departure.

The Senator explained that for a number of years he has taken an automobile trip every spring. This year he toured Pennsylvania and New Jersey. He visited the old home of his mother at Reading, Pa., but said he was unable to find any of her relatives. The Senator was accompanied by Mrs. Gorman and Mr. and Mrs.
William H. Gorman.

Not in Race—Covington.

Congressman Covington was in the city and saw a number of friends. He made it plain to them that he was not a candidate.

"You can say most positively for me that I am not a candidate for Governor," said Mr. Covington. "The use of my name was unauthorized by me; in fact, I was surprised to see that I was being boomed."

City friends of State Senator Blair Lee, of Montgomery County, who is an avowed candidate, are waiting for him to open his local headquarters.
Senator Lee has many warm supporters in the city who are ready to assist him in the management of his campaign—Yesterday's Baltimore Sun.

What High License Costs Baltimore.

At a meeting in Baltimore on Tuesday night the $500 first prize for the best essay on "What it costs the people of Baltimore, (1) morally, (2) physically, (3) mentally, (4) financially, (5) industrially to secure the million dollars a year which the city now receives from the liquor traffic under the High License Law," was awarded to Rev. John Roach Straton, D. D., pastor of the Seventh Baptist Church of Baltimore.

The winning essay, which was read at the meeting by its writer, reaches the conclusion, giving figures to support it, that in addition to the moral blight and the mental anguish caused by the liquor traffic it costs Baltimore City each year 50 million dollars to obtain a little over one million dollars of high license revenue. The other prizes of $250, $150, and $100 were awarded to Daniel M. Henderson, Baltimore, Rev. G. L. Humphreys of Pocomoke City, Md. and Walter F.
Shenton, Baltimore, respectively. The prizes were given out by Mr. Johnathan E. Taylor, of Baltimore, the donor of the first prize, with whom the contest idea originated.

The Anti-Saloon League will send a copy of the winning essay absolutely free to any citizen of Maryland who asks for it.

following business:

Mr. Watson, owner of the Bewastico Mills, notified the board that he had decided to make permanent improvements to the mills and broken dam, and that work on same would soon begin; hence the delay in repairing the dam.

Mr. Smiley Wells filed objections to the ratification of the report of G.
E. Jackson, Thomas West and Covington Campbell on extending road west from the shell road north of Pittsville. Report was carried over to next meeting.

The following reports were ratified:

A black and white fashion illustration of a man and a woman in early 20th-century attire. The woman is wearing a long, light-colored dress with a dark belt and a large, ornate hat. The man is wearing a suit, a tie, and a fedora-style hat. They are standing on a street with a building in the background.

A Welcome Change

Smoke curling up from the farmhouse chimney as the men are coming in from the fields, gives a pretty suggestion of a good supper and a comfortable home. But it also means a hot, tired woman, working hard over a blazing fire.

Your wife can escape this with a New Perfection Oil Cook-stove.

A New Perfection keeps a kitchen many degrees cooler than any other range, yet it does all a coal or wood range can do. It saves time, labor and fuel. No wood to cut; no coal to carry; no ashes; no soot. With the New Perfection even it is the best cooking device you can find anywhere.

Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners, with long, turning blue enamel. The 2 and 3 burner models have the extra feature of a cabinet top, which is steel with drop shelves, towel rack, etc.

SALT AS A CLEANSER.

Invaluable For Polishing and With Kerosene Should Be Part of Every Cleansing Outfit.

Every housewife should realize the possibilities of salt as a cleanser. Indeed, salt and kerosene should be in the cleansing outfit of every household, for together they form a combination which eradicates almost any dirt.

For polishing mirrors nothing can exceed the merit of salt. When applying it the glass must be wet with clear water, then the salt rubbed on with a damp newspaper. The final rubbing may be done with dry newspaper or with a chamois skin.

A tablespoonful of coarse salt, a teaspoonful of ammonia and a pint of hot water mixed and kept for rinsing decanters and carafes will make them as bright as new.

Silver discolored either by egg or other use will respond at once to a vigorous rubbing of damp salt.

Salt and vinegar combined will usually restore polish to brass and copper, and salt is a wonderful renovator of polished wood surfaces that have been dulled with hot dishes. To brighten each spoon, rub the gray portions with salt, which is then wet with olive-oil, all of the latter being poured on that the salt will absorb. This should stand for twenty-four hours, when it should be removed and the surface rubbed with a soft cloth. If all grays have not disappeared repeat the salt and oil bath.

For removing discolorations of fruit from teeth or hands salt is excellent.

VELVET NECKBANDS.

Pretty Fashion of Wearing Them With Collarless Frocks Makes Neck Look Whiter and Shorter.

The pretty fashion has recently been revived of wearing a narrow black velvet band around the neck with a collarless frock. Of narrow velvet and worn far up, these bands make the neck look whiter and shorter.

But they are by no means always of simple black velvet. They are much improved by sewing on them, in regular simple patterns, seed pearls, paste stars or single beads. These are very pretty in some such design as a single row of daisies, with a French knot in gilt thread for the center of each. The velvet need not, of course, be black, though that is the most common shade. Egyptian crystals are pretty, for instance, on peacock blue velvet. For young girls, pale pink or blue velvet sewed with seed pearls is charmingly becoming. Seed pearls, again, or small beads are pretty when sewed on as festoons, hanging down from the plain velvet band.

Better than fastening these bandies with a pin in back, unless you can get one just to match, is to supply them with an invisible hook and eye.

PLAIN GORED SKIRT.

There are few things more unsightly than the ultra drawn in effect in skirts that have recently been worn, but the more conservative models that show almost straight lines from the waist down are charming. Such a skirt is pictured, and it has the well liked panel effect at the center, back and front.

To copy it for the average person requires only three and one-half yards of goods forty-four inches wide or two and seven-eighths yards fifty inches wide.

The principal thing is to see that the material is cut accurately according to the pattern and that all the notches, etc., are plainly marked. The gores are then basted together and the skirt slipped on for a fitting. In all probability it will not require adjusting, but should it be a little large or a little tight over the hips or at the waist the seams are taken up or let out, as necessary.

The seams are stitched in the regular way, except those on either side of the center front and back gore. The placket closing may be arranged at either the left side of the front or back panel. After the belt is adjusted the skirt should be tried on to ascertain whether it is perfectly even at the lower edge before the hem is turned up. For a walking skirt it should be finished two and one-half inches from —Rev. E. H. Marshall, Hebron, Md., and Rev. Geo. E. Wood will preach in the Rookwalking and Quantico M. E. Churches respectively, Sunday, June 4th at 10.30 a. m. and 7.30 p. m. After this date the regular pastor will likely have charge.

—The entertainment on Monday evening next at Green & Brewington's Auditorium will be for the benefit of the Kings Daughters. It is to be hoped that the people of the town will patronize it liberally, as this worthy organization's funds are at a low ebb, owing to the many calls made upon it during the past winter.

—Miss Ruth Price returned home yesterday from National Park Seminary for the summer. She was accompanied by Miss Letha Engel, of Delaware, Ohio, a school mate and graduate of this year's class, who will be the guest of Miss Price at her home on North Division Street, during June. Sena or Price met the party in Baltimore and came home with them.

—Children's Day services on Sunday at Bethesda Methodist Protestant Church. Rev. Yutaki Minakoshi, of Japan, will preach in the morning at 11 o'clock. In the evening at 8 o'clock there will be special exercises by the Sunday School consisting of recitations and songs by the children. Rev. Minakoshi will also give an address on Japan.

—The following party were delightfully entertained at “Fairfield” Thursday evening by the Misses Peters: Misses Edith Short, Louise White, Marguerite Grier, Mary Brewington, Marian Evans, Nancy Smith, Lola Richardson, Isabelle Sprigg, Elizabeth Meyer, of Bridgeville, Del. Julia Preston, of Pa.; Messrs. Hugh Downing, Franklin Woodcock, Henry Todd, Wm. Dorman, Lex Grier, Percy Dashiell, Frank Perry, Herman Downing, Guy Webster and Clyde Hastings, of Vienna. The party was conveyed to and from in autos.

ORIGIN OF NAMES

Of Popular Dances—Position Taken in Quadrille Reason For Its Designations.

The position taken up by the dancers gave the name to the “quadrille,” which is literal French for “a little square,” while “country dance” has no connection with rustic gymnastics, but is simply a corruption of the French centre dance, which has reference to the position of the couples opposite to each other during the dance.

The “lancers” derived its name from the fact that this variation of the quadrille was originally improvised by a company of lancers for their own amusement while seated in their saddles. The “polka” is a Polish dance, and its name comes from the Bohemian word “polska,” meaning half, and refers to the half step which occurs in this lively measure, of which the more graceful “schottische” is variation; both names, like that of the national dance of Poland, the “mazurka,” being native terms.

The short steps peculiar to the old time favorite—the “minuet”—gave the dance its name, the Latin for “small being minutus.” The “waltz,” again, owes its name to its characteristic movement the German “walzen”—meaning to revolve—expressing the circling motion of the dancers.

The “Riger De Coverly” as named after its originator, while the less familiar dance known as the “tarantelle” is so called because its vigorous movements were supposed to be a certain antidote to the poison of a poisonous spider at Taranto, in Italy, where the dance is highly popular.

The evolution of the dances sufficiently explains the term “reel.” “Jig” is from the French “gigue” and “breakdown” is a term from across the Atlantic and refers to the final rout before the break-up of a free and easy dancing party.

Every year dancing takes place in the parish church of Musgrave in Westmoreland in connection with the ancient rite of rushbearing. On May Day twelve young maidens of Brough, approved by the vicar, assemble at ten o'clock in the morning at the foot of Brough bridge, decorated with flowers and fresh garlands on their heads. Accompanied by a band they proceed through the fields to Musgrave, the band playing and the rush-bearers dancing.

The girls are led up their north side of the church and hang up their garlands at the side, there to remain until the following year. The gospel is read by the vicar, prayers are offered and psalms sung, after which the clerk and vicar retire. A space is then cleared near the altar and a fiddle produced. Dancing now commences and continues until the afternoon.

Dancing is frequently seen in continental churches. During the Corpus Christi octave a ballet is performed every evening by boys wearing plumed hats and the dress of pages of the time of Philip III.

Short Crop of Cow Peas Prices Are Going Up!

The enormous demand for Cow Peas last year carried the price very high, and as the crop is very short and the acreage is rapidly extending, there are many indications which point to much higher prices as the sowing season approaches.

Whip-poor-will Cow Peas. The Whip-poor-will are a little earlier and are generally preferred in the Central and Southern States. They are both early maturing and especially desirable for Peas.

New Era Cow Peas. New Era are a little earlier and are a more vine than the Whip-poor-will.

Wonderfuls, Clays and Mixed Cow Peas. For Hay, the Wonderfuls of the Mixed Cow Peas are more productive. They should be planted with an occasional grain of Corn, Sorghum Seed, Kafir Corn, etc., which will prevent the vines from getting damaged by coming in contact with the ground.

Black Cow Peas. Black Cow Peas are a little earlier in maturing than Clays; they make a good growth of vine, are exceptionally good for medium or poor land, and will stand almost any amount of wet weather without injury. We can also supply Shiny Peas, Red Hippers, Blackeye Peas and Soja Beans.

REMEMBER—Bolgiano's Cow Peas are unquestionably the best. If your Local Merchant will not supply Bolgiano's Cow Peas, write us direct and we will tell you where you can get them.

FREE. Send us 5 cents in stamps to pay postage and mention this paper, and we will send you free a 5c package of “My Maryland” Tomato Seed, also our 1911 Catalogue of Seeds and our 1911 Poultry Supply Catalogue.

A Triangular Courtship

The Ending Was a Surprise to Those Who Lost

By ALLAN A. BROWN

The keeper of the Lodge rock light and his two assistants stared aggressively at one another across the dinner table.

"It's against the rules for less'n two men to stand by the light, as you both well know," said the keeper sternly. "I don't see why it's necessary for the two of you to go courting on the same night. Besides, I forgot to say I wanted to be away myself tonight."

"You promised that I should have tonight off," expostulated Eben Gail. "You said I should have every Wednesday night off. I have a lady friend."

His voice trailed into significant silence.

"I have a lady friend, too," cut in Caleb Brown angrily. "I spoke to Captain Peter about it this very morning. I says to him, I says, 'My lady friend 'll be looking for me most particular tonight, and I can't disappoint no lady.' And you said as how I could be off for the evening."

He looked across the table at his fellow worker, and Eben Gail frowned back quite as fiercely.

"Great fury! You can both go, and good luck to your courting."

"Maybe we could get the parson to come over and set a spell," they chanted sullenly.

"Maybe nothing!" snapped Captain Peter, rising noisily from his chair and leaving the room.

That night after the lamp was duly lighted and its beam had sent a long ray across the water the engine received its last attention from the assistant keepers. In sudden silence they washed up the supper dishes, and then each, dressed in his best clothes and with hair plastered wet on his brown forehead, went down into the boat that was to take them ashore.

"You can give this letter to Parson Wilson," called Captain Peter genially, following them down the winding iron staircase. "Be sure you give it to him as soon's you get ashore, so's he can come out and stay with me till you two lady killers come home."

Without a word Eben Gail crumpled the letter in his breast pocket, and then, with a grunt "Good night!" to the keeper on the landing, they unhooked the davit chains from the boat and rowed away into the darkness.

Captain Peter Fane went back into the cozy sitting room and, throwing himself into a huge rocking chair, laughed until the tears rolled down his weather-beaten cheeks.

Once on shore the two assistant keepers of the Rock ledge light parted company in an ominous silence that had not been broken since leaving the lighthouse.

Caleb Brown took the lower road and soon disappeared from view, while Eben Gail made his way through an upland path that led him to the parsonage on the hill.

There was an unusual air of festivity about the snug house. Bright lights shone from every window, and when the front door was thrown wide open a red glow from the hall lamp formed a background for the minister's surprised face. Eben noted that he was dressed in his Sunday coat, and over his shoulder peered Mrs. Wilson's rosy face.

Eben delivered the letter and turned away. As he went down the path Mrs. Wilson's voice arose, shrill with disappointment and protest.

"Suppose they've got a party on hand—maybe a donation. I don't see how the parson can get over to the light this evening. I hope Miss Nettie ain't gone to any donation. I don't know when I can get off again." His steps hastened as he drew near the abode of Miss Nettie Blake.

Now, Miss Blake was a most fascinating little lady, with soft brown hair and eyes of tender blue. Her equally soft and tender heart had been the power of the power to give pain to any fellow creature. Perhaps this was the reason why neither Caleb Brown nor Eben Gail had been able to bring a definite answer from the lady both mortally adored.

For a whole year now the assistant keepers of the lighthouse had courted Miss Nettie Blake. At first they visited her on different evenings, but as jealousy waxed hot they fell upon Wednesday evening as a proper and fitting one for a lover's attention, and, as neither could be dissuaded from his purpose, first one and then the other had supplied a substitute to watch with Captain Fane on Wednesday evenings.

And this dual courtship did not disturb Miss Nettie's equanimity. She was as sweet and kind as ever, and she impartially set forth her toothsome apple pie and elderberry wine while the rivals glowered at each other across her snowy damask.

Tonight, however, the little white cottage was dark and silent. A shadowy form on the doorstep indicated the whereabouts of Mr. Caleb Brown. Eben paused at the gate and coughed.

Caleb Brown banged his brass knocker directly on the door, glancing furtively white behind the shadowy vines.

All was silence.

The gate creaked under Eben Gail's authoritative touch, and as his feet crunched heavily on the gravel path the sound seemed a premonition of what might happen to Eben's bold rival if he did not cease his thundering at the door of the one woman in the world.

"Miss Nettie Blake's got tired of waiting for the callers every Wednesday, only she's too polite to say so. If you'll go away you'll find that she'll open the door quick enough for me!" Eben's voice rasped on the still night air as Caleb Brown ceased from his knocking.

"She doesn't answer because she thinks it's you," snapped Caleb, resuming his bombardment.

"I always knock special," retorted Eben. "Miss Nettie always recognizes my knock. If you'll just move along and let a gentleman that has some rights here!" He pressed suggestively. "After this interchange of pleasantness it is not surprising that another instant found the assistant keepers rolling wildly on the gravel, now in the neat borders, where their heels played havoc with Miss Nettie's choicest plants, again coming in contact with a spiny cactus that pricked them to greater ferocity."

At last they fell heavily against a rotten tree stump that supported a red painted flower tub. The stump quivered and then yielded to the onslaught. The flower tub descended, just escaping serious injury to the combatants. The shower of loose dirt that filled their eyes, ears, noses and mouths brought the warfare to a swift close.

Stiffly they arose and faced each other in the pale light, dirty, disheveled, with blackened eyes and bleeding noses, their best blue clothes caked with yellow loam, while every crevice of skin and clothing was filled with fine earth from the flower tub.

As by one accord they turned and marched out of the gate, leaving the scene of havoc to greet Miss Nettie's horrified eyes when the sun arose. Caleb Brown strode on ahead, and at an unfriendly distance in the rear Eben Gail limped after him.

They crawled into the bobbing dory and rowed silently down the river, each the lighthouse swung across the glimmering waves.

A smart little launch was moored at the lighthouse landing, and with the idea of avoiding the parson or other possible callers who had taken pity on Captain Peter's loneliness the two assistants crept quietly down into the engine room, where they noiselessly scrubbed the marks of combat from their faces and clothing. During these ablutions there was a marked exchange of courtesies between the rivals. They passed the single cake of soap and forth and shared the healing contents of a huge bottle of vaseline with amazing affability.

The fierce, brief battle in front of Miss Nettie's cottage had seemed to relieve them of twelve months' accumulated venom. As they quietly trod the winding iron stairway to their room in the tower above the sitting room they paused to fill their purses from Eben's tobacco pouch. Each was mindful of his own bruised eye and aware of the futility of attempting to conceal it from an inquiring world—i. e., Captain Peter and his visitors—should they be discovered.

A light gleamed under the sitting room door, and as they passed it the parson's smiling face, and Captain Peter himself, smiling and happy, respectful in his best suit of blue cloth, confronted them and laid a friendly hand on each shoulder.

"Come in, boys. You're just in time. Here's the parson and his wife and Benjamin Green and Uncle Nehemiah Blake and her that was Nettie Blake, now Mrs. Captain Fane."

The two assistants stared open mouthed at the merry company that filled the little sitting room, and the lighthouse keeper continued:

"Yes, sirs. Miss Nettie and me counted on getting married at the parsonage tonight, and everything was ready and waiting; but, seeing that you two boys was set on going courting on this particular night, I just sent word to the parson for the hull lot of 'em to come over here and get married at the light. Benjamin, he brought 'em over in the 'nuch, wedding cake, lemonade and all. Now, everybody set up and have something to eat. You're all tied, but you can have some of Mrs. Captain Fane's cake, and she's a royal good cook. Now, Nettie!"

Mrs. Fane blushed prettily as she took the huge knife the captain gave her and thrust it into the thick white icing, and as she presented a slice to Caleb Brown and another to Eben Gail she said softly:

"I'm going to be chief cook here. Now, I expect you two gentlemen will enjoy the good things I'm going to make, and maybe you like apple pie?" Her tender eyes asked forgiveness as she made this reference to their former intimacy.

Eben and Caleb smiled sheepishly at each other and drew closer together. Their common disappointment would become the foundation for a lasting friendship. Loyalty to the one lady whom they both had hopelessly loved prompted them to speak in unison.

"We like apple pie first rate," they said bravely.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

To these the traffic manager replied guardedly, but optimistically. The management was delighted with the good work done and doing by the new division counsel; public opinion was slowly but surely changing; it would be a landslide election, and Blount could take credit for his due.

In all this Blount did not fail to remark that there was never anything said about the Hattaway bargain, and the omission made him the more watchful. A little investigation unearthed other and similar bargains made in the past.

For example, there was a practical and very effective irrigation trust, an alliance, offensive and defensive, of the big irrigation companies. Controlling the water under proprietary rights, as most of them did, these companies could influence many votes among the beneficiary farmers. Land deals in the past with the railroad company had been the basis for corruption here, and with the electric power people, preferential freight rates had been traded for the votes of employees, as with Hattaway.

Some of these special rates were still in force, as the quiet investigation on the ground developed, whereupon Blount's communications to Gantry took on a more emphatic tone. The tariffs must be revised and one of two things must be done—either the preferential of the favored corporations must be withdrawn or the rates must be leveled down to meet the specials.

It was on a second speechmaking visit to Ophir that Blount had his first face to face chance at the traffic manager after the opening of the correspondence battle.

A meeting of the Mine Owners' association, moving for a readjustment of the classification on copper matte and bullion at a time when the railroad company might be supposed to be on the giving hand, took Gantry to the great camp in the Carmine hills, and the first man he met at the hotel was the new dictator of policies for the Transcontinental company.

"Made a mistake, didn't you, Dick, coming while I was here?" said the reformer, with a very lifelike replica of his father's grim smile. "I suppose you've got an immediate engagement to go somewhere or see somebody."

"No, I wish I had," was the heavy admission. "Say, Evan, you are getting to be a perfect nightmare with your letters and telegrams. You've got me so I'm afraid to open my desk. Why can't you let well enough alone? You haven't heard of any skullduggery lately, have you?"

"Nothing new, no. But a housecleaning is supposed to take down all the old cobwebs. Those preferential rates for United Electric and the Sluagh Land and Improvement."

"Heavens and earth! You call yourself a lawyer, and yet you ask us to set aside promises that are or ought to be as binding as so many written contracts, with penal attachments! It can't be done, Evan—that's all there is to it; it can't be done."

"Can't go out of the window when I want to come in at the door, Dick. I've been digging into the records, and I have evidence enough to turn the people of this state into a mob that will tear up your tracks if I should publish it."

"But I tell you we can't withdraw the specials, you wild-eyed fanatic!"

"All right; then level down the public's rate to fit them. And do it quickly, Dick. The time is growing fearfully short, and my patience isn't what it used to be."

"Anybody would think you owned the Transcontinental, lock, stock and barrel! Where under heaven did you get your nerve, Evan? Bless if I don't believe you could outbait the old—or your father himself if you once got the fool notion into your head that it was your duty to try."

This time Blount's smile was rather sorrowful, and he shook his head.

"Come and hear me speak tonight if you're staying over that long. Then you'll know why I must have the solid rock of good faith under my feet. Gantry. You spoke of my father just now. I bear the name, too, Dick. Don't you see that I've got to make good?"

It was during this hardworking interval that Blount saw, with keen regret, the gradual widening of the breach between him and his father. That the long arm of the machine of which his father was the acknowledged head was reaching out into all corners of the state there was ample evidence, and that the machine campaign was a thing to be reckoned with and fought against was a cardinal principle with the young reformer.

But it is hard to fight in the dark. The organization was so perfect that its very existence seemed mythical at times; more heinous set up to be knocked down by the honest voter at the polls on election day.

Yet Blount knew that it was no myth. Sometimes he fancied that it was the machine which was interposing the invisible barrier beyond which he was not permitted to pass. With that thought came the old doubts and fears that in father and McVickers had conspired together to make him the fence behind which all the trickery of a venal campaign could be safely screened. But while this thought visibly widened the growing breach it made him only more determined to fight to the bitter end. What one man could do to herald the dawn of a new political epoch for his native state should be done.

It was on one of his short stopovers in the capital city that Blount found himself seated opposite his father at a table for two in the late-McVickers cafe. The meeting was purely accidental, as most of their meetings had come to be. Inquiring for his father at the desk, Blount had been told that the senator was out of town. But an hour later, when he had taken his seat at the dinner table, the supposed absentee had walked in to take the opposite chair.

For a time their talk was of the doings at Wartrace Hall; of the professor's enthusiastic digging for fossils, of Patricia's keen enjoyment of the life in the open and this put with gentle hesitation on the part of the news bringer—of Mrs. Eponia's growing love for the young woman whose ambitions reached out toward a "career."

"Working you pretty hard these days, aren't they, son?" was the friendly remark that opened the way for more to follow. "If you belonged to my generation instead of your own you wouldn't be cold shouldering that young woman out at Wartrace the way you do—not for all the politics that was ever hatched."

"I have my work to do," said the son gravely, "and Patricia Anners would be the last person in the world to put obstacles in the way of it. I wish I could say as much for other people."

"The boss looked up quickly. 'Somebody been trying to block you?'"

Evan Blount met the gaze of the shrewd gray eyes without flinching.

"I don't know of any good reason why we shouldn't be frank with each other, dad," he said, using for the first time since his return the old boyhood father name. "You know better than any one else, I think, what the stumbling blocks are and who is putting them in my way."

Instantly the faraway look came into the gray eyes.

"I know a heap of things that I can't tell—just yet, son. Has McVicker been calling you down?"

"No one has called me down, but some one or something is keeping me out of the real fight. There isn't any fight that I can get into. Everywhere I go there is the same cut and dried, welcome, the same predetermined enthusiasm. Sometimes it seems as if all the people I meet had been instructed to make things pleasant and easy for me."

The senator's chuckle was barely audible.

"I wouldn't add much fault with that if I were you, son," he said. "You'll get enough of the real thing by and by."

Blount felt his anger rising. He was in precisely the right mood to believe that his father, falling to make him a cog in one of the wheels in the machine, had gone about in some mysterious way to insult him, to make it impossible for him to get into the real tide of affairs. But he kept his temper.

"It's no use," he said, with a tang of abruptness in his tone. "We are diametrically opposed to each other, you and I, dad. I stand for democracy, the will of the people and its fullest and freest expression. You stand for—"

"Well, son, what do I stand for?" queried the father, and the question was accompanied by the quizzical smile that brought the hot blood joyfully to Blount's cheek.

"If I should say what all men say—to say even to me?" He stopped short and then went on again with better self control.

"Let's keep the peace if we can, dad. I'm sorry that you are finding it necessary to fight me and a thousand times sorer that I've got to fight you. But I'll tell you here and now that I'll never quit this strife—this native state of mine—until it has had at least one decently clean election. I have told Gantry to pass the word that I shall show the railroad up if it doesn't play fair, and I've got to hand the same thing out to you, dad. I don't want to threaten, but it is only fair to say that I haven't been going about with my eyes shut. Whether you have authorized it or not, there is a lot of crooked work going on, and if I am driven to it I can print some things that would change the political map of this state so it won't be recognizable."

For some little time after his son had left the cafe the Hon. Senator Sagebrush sat absently toying with his dessert spoon. When he rose to go out the battle light in the fierce gray eyes was the signal which not even his most faithful henchmen could always interpret, but which most men feared.

NEW COUNCIL SWEARS IN

Mayor Bonds' Message—Appointments Sent In.

On Monday night, the newly elected councilmen, Messrs. I. Ernest Jones, Elmer E. Bradley and Wilmer L. Tilghman, took the oath of office and assumed the duties of Councilmen.

The retiring members of the old Council, Messrs. H. H. Hitch, Wm. E. Sheppard and F. L. Smith, wished their successors a pleasant year's work and gave up their seats to the new members, the old Council having finished its business and adjourned sine die.

The Council organized by unanimously electing Mr. Harry Dennis president of the Council, after which the new members drew lots for the long and short terms. Messrs. Jones and Bradley drew the long term of two years, and Mr. Tilghman the short term of one year.

Mayor Bonds then read his annual message to the Council which contained many valuable suggestions and gave some interesting figures as to the work accomplished during the past year, after which he handed in his appointments for the various city offices as follows:

City Solicitor—Hon. L. Atwood Bennett.
Chief Police—Woodland Disharoon, Assistant Police—J. O. Brittingham.
Night Watchman—James Cronch.
Chief Fire Department and Street Commissioner—G. E. Strman.
Police Justice—T. Rodney Jones.

It being late the Council held the appointments over for confirmation at the next meeting.

Chief Sirman of the Fire Department, handed his annual report to the Mayor and Council. In it he stated that for the past twelve months there were eighteen fire alarms within the city, most of which were of minor importance and only two being total.

DEMOCRATS MEET IN

Baltimore—Gubernatorial Possibilities Discussed—Primaries Likely To Be Late.

A great gathering of the Democratic clan was held this week in Baltimore, at the meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee. This being the year in which a governor is to be elected, much more interest than is shown in off years was manifested at the conference. As the fight for the nomination for Governor, started in earnest a few weeks ago and got hot in a very few days, Democrats all over the state rushed to Baltimore in order to feel and be felt. To some it looked like Gorman and nothing else, others thought Lee, while Senator Smith's advocacy of Colonel Schley made all "sit up" and take notice. It is not believed, however, that Senator Smith and Gorman will oppose each other very strongly in the primaries. It is being considered very unlikely that Gorman would run without Senator Smith's support and certainly not with the latter's open opposition. On the other hand it is not believed that Senator Smith would oppose Gorman if it was shown that the majority of the party wanted him as the candidate.

To many it looks like a dark horse may have the best show later in the game, a man who could get behind him all elements of the party. Senator Jesse D. Price, of this county, is looked upon by many as the best man to nominate.

The Baltimore Evening Sun in its report of the meeting had the following to say in regard to Senator Price: "Last but by no means least, is Senator Price, of the Eastern Shore, who has developed an array of friends and a potentiality that has surprised many observers. Among his most conspicuous supporters have been men from Allegany and Washington Counties, who describe him as 'The most democratic Democrat in the entire assortment.'"

As far as the real purpose of the meeting was concerned, this took but little time and less discussion.

Attorney General Straus after consulting with a committee of leading lawyers is to give an explanation of the Lee Primary Law. And Murray Vandiver is to get in communication with the Republican organization and agree upon a date for holding the primaries. The general opinion seemed to be that these would be held very late.

The committee on resolutions was composed of Marion V. Herington, chairman, Walter Townsend, John S. Kelley, Daniel J. Leden, Frank S. Revelle and John Sweeney.

Gas For Delmar.

The people of Delmar have been agitating the question of gas for their town for some time. Two companies asked for the franchise which was finally given by the Council to the Home Gas Company of this city. It is understood that work will commence on the proposition at once. Pipe will be laid from the main pipe here and gas forced through to Delmar. The laying of pipes and other equipment will probably mean an outlay of close to $40,000.

The people of Delmar have not made any mistake in giving the franchise to the Company as they will find out in a short time. They will give them gas and good gas too, with good service, fair cost and what means a great deal, courteous and obliging employees.

We have with us this week an expert concert fitter from the American Lady Dress Co. Today, Saturday, to the last day—M. E. Powell & Co.

UTILITIES BOARD

Falls Upon Easton Light and Fuel Co.—Corporation Ordered Forthwith To Make Additions And Repairs To Its Plant.

The heavy hand of the Public Service Commission Tuesday fell upon the Easton Light and Fuel Company, which was ordered forthwith to make numerous repairs and additions to its plant. The company was further ordered to report to the commission promptly if it has complied with its orders. The action of the commission is the outgrowth of a visit to Easton by the commission's expert and by the complaints of the service of the company in question.

The action of the commission in the case of the Easton company is important because it is supposed to foretell what will happen to similar public utilities companies in towns against which complaints have been directed. In brief, the commission's orders are interpreted as meaning that these local companies must be good, or the commission will get after them.

Repairs And Additions.

Here are the additions and repairs ordered to the Easton Company:

(a) The installation of a dry scrubber to improve the quality of gas.

(b) The covering of the steam pipes and the introduction of a steam separator at the point of connection with the generator.

(c) Installation of an oil meter to register the rate of flow of oil admitted to the carburetter.

(d) Installation of capital tiller cocks for making steam test on top of superheater and outlet of wet scrubber.

(e) Siphon gauge for indicating blast pressure.

HON. L. ATWOOD BENNETT

Not A Candidate For State's Attorney This Year—Letter To Voters.

In an open letter to the Democratic voters of Wicomico County, Hon. L. Atwood Bennett states that he will not be a candidate for State's Attorney at the coming primaries and gives his reasons in the following language:

Salisbury, Md., June 7, 1911.

To the Democratic Voters of Wicomico County:

I desire to announce that I will not be a candidate for State's Attorney at the coming Democratic Primary. This conclusion has not been hastily reached by me. It would be difficult to state my reasons for this step in a brief way than to say that on account of other matters it would not suit me to fill this position should I be so fortunate as to be the choice of the people. I regret to take this position solely because of the good will and loyalty of my friends throughout the county. So many expressions of their willingness to help me in this fight overwhelm me with gratitude to them. I cannot properly express my appreciation in words, neither will I forget their kindness and readiness to cooperate with me in this matter. Like all that is human I am naturally inclined to that which I deem for my best interest, so long as that interest does not to a great extent conflict with the interest of my friends and the Party, and in this case I deem it does not. I will ask of my friends to permit me to be the judge in this matter, being most interested, as to its propriety.

Holding myself ever in readiness to give my service for the advancement of the party's interest.

I remain, Very Respectfully,
L. Atwood Bennett.

Mr. Bennett had many supporters for the nomination throughout the county, and they will no doubt be surprised at his decision not to enter the contest; but his reasons therefor will be accepted as ample.

This leaves at present two candidates for the Democratic nomination Messrs. Alex. M. Jackson and Geo. W. Bell.

MORE CITY IMPROVEMENTS—Mead's Cafe Being Considerably Enlarged—Ladies Dining Room Added Hotel In Connection.

Mr. H. O. Mead, the progressive and energetic proprietor of Mead's Cafe, which has been successfully conducted here for more than a year, has now under way, in the course of construction, improvements that will mean much to the future of his establishment. A convenient, modern kitchen has been added in the rear, while the front will be considerably enlarged and used for a quick lunch service, with a seating capacity of about twenty-five at a time.

A ladies dining room will also be added, and ample provisions made to cater to them apart from the general lunch room.

The Cafe, when finished, will be one of the most up-to-date in the South, and managed on the city plan. In the short time Mr. Mead has been in the business he has built up a large and lucrative trade and made for himself an excellent reputation as a capable and clever caterer, able to please the most fastidious taste.

In connection with his Cafe, Mr. Mead has leased the Hotel in the Mitchell building and will conduct it on the European plan, having painted and thoroughly renovated it, installed new and modern furniture, making a number of desirable rooms convenient and centrally located. The upper floor of the Cafe will be made into suitable offices.

WANT COMPULSORY

Schooling General—Movement is Organized To Make The Law State Wide.

That every child in Maryland will soon have an equal chance with every other child to secure a common school education, which means a reading and writing knowledge of simple English and familiarity with common fractions, before leaving school is the aim and object of the Compulsory School Attendance Committee of Maryland, which has just been organized.

Gen. Lawrence Riggs is president, George L. Jones secretary and Benjamin W. Corkran, Jr., treasurer. Those who attended the preliminary meeting were Mrs. Benjamin W. Corkran, Jr., president of the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Florence Pierce, Mrs. James H. Van Stokke, Mrs. John S. King, Miss Anna Herkner, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Gaither, Dr. Edward F. Baehler, of the Johns Hopkins University; Eli Frank of the School Board, Dr. Magruder of the Federated Charities, H. Wirt Steele of the Maryland Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis, George L. Jones of the Henry Watson Children's Aid Society and County Superintendent of Schools Noble of Caroline County.

Started By Women's Club.

The movement was started over a year ago by the State Federation of Women's Clubs and has been agitated by the Federation ever since, particularly emphasis being laid on it at the annual meeting of the Federation in April. It was at the call of the Federation that the temporary committee met and took steps for the formation of the permanent committee in whose hands rests the drafting of the bill which is to be presented to the next Legislature and the work of awakening sentiment for and financial support of the movement which is to be State-wide in its scope.

Various suggestions to be incorporated in the bill were offered before the officers of the new committee were elected. A suggestion from Mr. Frank which met with unanimous approval was that the number of vice presidents be 25, so that it would be possible to have the school superintendents of each county represented among the officers.

Suggestions For Law.

The proposed provision of the new law that it require consecutive school attendance between October 15 and April 15 of all children caused quite a little comment, in which Superintendent Noble was able to give valuable suggestions as to the probable effect of such a law in the counties.

It was pointed out that this might be a hardship on the children of Garrett county, where the severe winter and inclement weather necessitated a spring and fall session instead of a continuous winter one. It was finally decided to leave the adjustment of this matter to the discretion of the permanent committee.

Superintendent Noble also said that as the question of education is always a slow one, it would be wise for the committee to get to work at once. It was, therefore, recommended that an executive secretary be selected to definitely organize the work as soon as a sufficient fund can be secured to justify his employment.

May Raise Age Limit.

Other provisions which it was thought well for the proposed law to contain were that the age limit include all children between 7 and 14 years and that a separate act be passed raising the age limit in Baltimore City from 7 to 14 years and requiring consecutive attendance.

A letter from Louis H. Levin, of the Hebrew Benevolent Society expressing sympathy with the undertaking was read, also one from Superintendent of Schools Orem, of Talbot County, in which he heartily endorsed the movement. He added that he considered the proposed law very necessary since five industrious young men with families had presented themselves at a night school in Talbot this winter, who could neither read nor write correctly because their fathers had either kept them from school when they were young or had not encouraged their going to school.

He also states that the City Fire Department is composed of thirty-five active and fifteen honorary members; that the city has 8000 feet of hose, two steamers, one hose wagon, two reels, 30 gum coats, 30 pairs of gum boots, 25 caps and hats, and one double hook and ladder truck fully equipped. He says all the apparatus is in good shape and the department is in fine shape for fire fighting.

Extracts from Mayor's Message.

Mayor Bonnell submitted his annual message to the Council, which contains some valuable recommendations, the most important of which are as follows:

"In looking over the work of the past year that has been done by your honorable body in advancing the city's interest along all lines, I take pleasure in complimenting you upon the manner in which you have fulfilled the responsibilities of your office. There has been a spirit of advancement exemplified in all your labors. The assessable basis of the city has been considerably increased by the large number of buildings erected during the past year. We have in the treasury and due the city at this time about two thousand dollars more than the corresponding time last year, even though three thousand dollars were spent in a damage suit. There has been laid during the past year ten thousand feet of curbing; six thousand and square feet of pavement; twelve hundred feet of sewer laid and ninety thousand bushels of shingles spread on our streets. Still there is a great demand on the part of the public for grade and curbing of streets, so as to properly lay down the sidewalks. It has been the experience of your body in the past few years to be necessary to give notice to the abutting property owners to lay down pavement, after curbing has been laid and grade established. Such public spirit should be recognized by the Council in giving curb and grade as speedily as possible to the streets of the city."

"Salisbury is widely known as the most progressive town on the Eastern Shore, indeed on the Peninsula, south of Wilmington, Delaware. It is expanding in every direction. Suburban lots have been laid off in numerous quantities and are finding ready sale and being improved with residences from $1,000 and upwards.

"One of the strongest proofs of the progressive spirit of our city is the reclaiming by its own citizens of more than forty acres of waste land right in the heart of the city. This was devised, developed and reclaimed by the citizens of Salisbury. From land covered with growing weeds, weeds and cat-tails, a breeding place for mosquitoes and malaria, it has been made fit for men to dwell upon and for business houses. It has been improved by a canal nine or ten feet deep at low water, with substantial wharfing ready for shipping to tie to. This has all been done by private capital and deserves recognition.

"It was also suggested by me in a special message some time ago that Main Street be extended from Division Street to the railroad. I now renew this suggestion and point to the fact of the congested condition of our business locations. If the opportunities for business sites were given, there would be an influx of business houses in our midst. The business interests of our city demand more room. It is contrary to business expediency and progress to permit this congestion with land in such close proximity to relieve it. I trust the Council will take this matter up as early as possible and make necessary survey, and take steps to open this much needed thoroughfare.

"A strip of land has been purchased by the Realty Company for the purpose of extending Oak Street south, and other streets are in contemplation of being laid out by the Company, and when so laid it would suggest that some be taken charge of, if same be laid out to conform with other streets of the city, and by securing them to our city greater symmetry in the newly laid out places. I would suggest that Oak Avenue on the west side of the river should be so changed as to approach the river at right angles. This would aid in appearance and safety.

"I desire to impress upon you the necessity of having sidewalks laid along all our streets. The public needs require it, and the abutting property owners as a rule, are unable to lay their pavements. I would suggest that a grade be given on all streets where pavements should be laid and at the time of laying the pavement have a curb laid six by fifteen inches, of concrete, and subsequently when opportunity and finances will permit, put in the gutter. By this system all pavements in town can be laid within a reasonable time. I especially urge that this system be applied to Poplar Hill Avenue, Elizabeth Street, Smith Street, East Church Street beyond the N. Y. P. and N. railroad, as well as other streets. In any instance where ordinances have been passed requiring a pavement, and same is not laid in accordance with said ordinance and notice, the Council should have same done promptly and collect costs out of property.

"The Council should keep a strict surveillance over the laying out of all streets in suburban sections, or the city proper. There is a tendency on the part of a few, at least, of property owners to lay out narrow streets in order to get as much land as possible to place on the market to the detriment of the city. Any street in any portion of the city laid out narrower than thirty feet should be promptly rejected by the Council, and a Commission placed on same to widen them. The symmetry and beauty of our city now, and in the future, must depend in a great measure upon the city authorities, for while a great majority of our citizens will do all they can to beautify the city, there are enough that subvert everything for the sake of a few dollars, to make the city antiquated and unsymmetrical. Locust Street is an example about thirty feet wide at the railroad and twenty feet at corporate limits. This street should have a commission and be widened at once."

The Mayor renews his recommendations for a permanent garbage system, the securing of hitching ground for teams coming to Salisbury, and the appointment of a building inspector, all of which are important and should receive a due consideration by the Council.

MARYLAND SUN LIFE

Agent Wins Distinction Selling Insurance.

The highest distinction that can be given a representative of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada is membership in the Macaulay Club. D'Arcy Brinsfield, one of the company's agents living on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, is making a wonderful record on account of the large number of policies he is selling. A desire on his part to become a member of the club was the incentive that led to this burst of speed. The club was named in honor of the president of the company, and only those representatives who write a certain volume of business can become members. It was about March 10 when E. O. Peed, manager for Maryland, wrote Mr. Brinsfield that he had a fighting chance of qualifying as a member. The honor had never been won in Maryland, but Mr. Brinsfield decided that he would rather have it than be elected secretary of state, and he determined to make a desperate dash for the finish line.

From March 11 to May 11, making about fifty-two work days, he sent in fifty-three applications, for a total of $107,000, with $23,000 paid for, and since the bulk of these applications were for $1,000, and about one half of his time was spent in his office, he averaged two applications a day during the entire time. Mr. Brinsfield says that his success in securing this fine volume of business was due to a new method of soliciting that he had just invented, and which he has styled the "100 per cent systematic system," which name he gave it after insuring 100 per cent of the people he called upon on several different occasions. His long suit in the insuring of entire strangers on first interviews. Ninety per cent of this business was secured in this way, with settlements in full, after a twenty minutes' explanation of what he had to offer. Mr. Brinsfield has a handicap by not being in the best of health. He lives in a sparsely settled country where the people are all poor, and has to leave home to secure all of his business. He is the only son of Z. H. Brinsfield, a man rather prominent in business and politics, and was born on January 9, 1876, at El Dorado, where he has always lived. He spent some time in a country store, to which he returned after attending college, and then almost by accident, seven years ago, fell into the life insurance business. The Sun was his first company, and doubtless he will remain with it for many years to come. His reputation for honesty and sincerity and his ability to make clear to others that which he has in mind are his best assets. It has been said of him that he can do three things, run a Sunday School, sell life insurance and make a speech.—The Insurance Times, New York.

A Quick Witted Doctor.

A French surgeon who was once attending a sultan resorted to an expedient which, although efficacious, might have resulted in his own death. He had been commissioned to bleed the grand seigneur and either through timidity or nervousness had met with an awkward accident. The point of the lancet broke off in the vein, and the blood would not flow. That point must be got out somehow. Without stopping to consider the consequences to himself, the surgeon gave his highest command to a servant in the room. This produced the desired effect, for surprise and indignation on the part of his august patient put the blood into violent circulation. The vein bled freely, and the lancet point came out. The bystanders were about to lay hands on the surgeon when he said, "First let me finish the operation and bandage the wound." This done, he threw himself at the feet of the sultan and explained his action.

The sultan not only pardoned him, but gave him a handsome reward for keeping his wits about him in a critical moment.

A Knave's Trick.
A young lawyer was engaged in a case when a witness was put in the box to testify to the reputation of the place in question.

This witness in answer to a query as to the reputation of the place replied, "A poor shop."

The lawyer inquired, "You say it has the reputation of being a 'poor shop'?"

"Yes, sir."

"When did you hear say it was a 'poor shop'?"

The witness did not recollect any one he had heard say so.

"What?" said the lawyer. "You have sworn this place has the reputation of being a poor shop and yet cannot tell of any one you have ever heard say so?"

The witness was staggered for a moment at the words of the lawyer. The lawyer was feeling triumphant when the witness gathered himself together and quietly remarked, addressing the lawyer:

"Well, you have the reputation of being a poor lawyer, but I have never heard any one say so."

Romance of an Inkstand.
Pens and furniture used in the signing of famous treaties and documents recall Archibald Forbes' experience after Sedan. After witnessing Napoleon's interview with Bismarck at a wayside cottage and his subsequent surrender Forbes and a fellow war correspondent slept at the chateau which the fallen emperor had occupied the night before. The bedroom was just as Napoleon had left it and by the bed the open book which he had read himself to sleep. It was Lytton's "Last of the Barons." Sitting at the adjoining writing table, Forbes wrote his dispatch, while his companion gnawed at a ham bone, their sole remainder of food. Late at the little sitting it furnished, he flung it across the room and upset the inkstand into which Forbes was dipping. When Forbes revisited the chateau a month or so later the inkstand was pointed out as caused by Napoleon's rage on learning the German terms of peace—London Chronicle.

The Order Pleased the Cook.
The following story is told on a missionary of the China inland mission, a bachelor keeping house for himself in the southern part of China. One morning in ordering his dinner he wished to tell his cook to buy a chicken. Instead of saying "ye" for chicken he aspirated the word, saying, "Buy me a 'che'." His cook thought that was an eminently proper command and went about his marketing in high good humor. At noon the missionary found no chicken cooked—in fact, no dinner at all, for his cook had not returned. About dark the man came back, saying: "This was not a good day for buying wives, and I have been all day looking for one, but at last I found one for you. She is rather old and not pretty, but you can have her cheap. I have promised $40 for her."

Browning.
Browning lent Lord Coleridge one of his works to read, and afterward, meeting the poet, the lord chief justice said to him: "What I could understand I heartily admired, and parts ought to be immortal. But as to much of it I really could not tell whether I admired it or not, because for the life of me I could not understand it."

Browning replied, "If a reader of your caliber understands 10 per cent of what I write I think I ought to be content."

Exchange of Courtesies.
One of the keenest of journalists and wits, Morris Gottlieb Saphir, had the better of the frate stranger against whom he ran by accident at the corner of a street in Munich. "Beast!" cried the offended person without waiting for an apology. "Thank you," said the journalist, "and mine is Saphir."

"Old Clothes"

I am the hardest substance known. I have a green tint about me, though my mates are usually colorless. It is the rarity of this thing and my size that makes me very valuable. Though no larger than a hickory nut, I am worth many thousands of dollars. I was born in Brazil. The first of this world, at least of daylight, for me was rolling out with stones, sand, earth and other minerals following the stroke of a pick. I lay on the ground before a workman. He looked about him and, seeing his foreman's back turned, picked me up and put me in his mouth. When he went from work he was searched, but I was not discovered.

The next scene in my life of motion, so to speak, was in a wood. The workman who had found me sold me to a man of better grade. The price paid was $100 in United States bills. The man who bought me took me to a room, locked the door and examined me carefully. I could see by his expression that he was very much pleased with me. He got a box of sewing utensils from a closet and, ripping a pocket in the lining of his coat, put me in and sewed me fast. I didn't suppose that I would stay long in this place, but I did.

One day a policeman came to my owner's room and arrested him. He was not wearing the coat in which he had sewed me. It hung in a closet. A month later it was taken down and with other clothing taken to Villa de Principe, where it was sold to a Jew. A young man "all tattered and torn" came into the Jew's shop, tried on several coats, and the one I was in fitted him, he bought it. I think the price paid was $2. The young man walked all the way to Rio, doing work here and there for a meal. Had he known that he had me with him he might have ridden in a coach and four.

When he got to Rio he shipped on a vessel bound for New Haven, Conn. I was rolled, with other clothing, in a small bundle and put under his bunk, he donning sailor's toga. When we reached New Haven my owner put on his shore clothes, left the vessel and walked up into the city. He met a number of young men he knew, and by his conversation with them I learned that he had been a student in the college there and his father had died insolvent during the son's second year. From a student he had become a sailor, had sought employment in South America and had got stranded in Brazil. One of his old chums loaned him some money with which to buy a ticket to his home in a distant city.

This home was in a shabby little cottage in the suburbs. It was both a melancholy and a happy meeting between the young man and his mother and his two sisters. They were evidently people of refinement living in poverty. Their returned boy was hungry, but there was nothing save a piece of corn bread in the house to give him. They begged him to stay with them, try for a position and help them. To this he consented, and they were happy.

That night after he had gone to bed one of his sisters took his clothes and sat up late patching and darning them that he might appear the better in looking for employment. After the sewing she took them downstairs into the kitchen, heated an iron and pressed them. While running the iron over the coat its nose hit an obstacle in me. She felt me, took me to the light to examine the place where I was; then, taking a knife, she ripped the sewing and took me out. Seeing nothing but a brownish stone, she threw me into a coal scuttle, but on second thoughts took me up again and put me on a table. Then, finishing her ironing, she took the clothes to her brother's room.

The next morning she showed me to her brother and told him where she had found me. He looked me over very carefully, thinking all the while, and asked his sister to show him the place where she had found me. Then he put me in his pocket and later on started out to look for a situation. About noon he went home. He met his mother in the hall. He was pale and trembling. "Oh, mother!" he exclaimed. "My boy, what has happened?" "If it shouldn't be true it would kill me."

"What?"

The stone Fannie found sewed in my coat. Thinking it might be a jewel in the rough, I took it to a jeweler. He says it's a diamond. A diamond of that size is worth many thousands of dollars.

He took me out of his pocket, and the mother and her daughter gathered round, each trembling with excitement.

"Don't count on too much, dear boy," said the mother. "If it is a diamond, it has a real owner, and you must find him, but he will doubtless give you a reward for its return."

But the owner was never found. The young man wrote to the officers of all the diamond mines in Brazil, and all replied that they had no record of any such diamond. I had doubtless been taken from some of them when dug from the earth. Since none of them could prove ownership none of them claimed me.

I was polished, cut and sold for a fortune. The young man went back to college, and the story of his return getting out among the students, they gave him the sobriquet of "Old Clothes."

STRENGTH OF HABIT.

The diminutive chains of the habit are seldom heavy enough to be felt until they are too strong to be broken.—Samuel Johnson.

Choose the best life, and habit, by and by, will make you like it best.—Epictetus.

Strive manfully; habit is overcome by habits.—Thomas a Kempis.

Our acts our angels are, or good or ill Our fatal shadows that walk by us still.

Man is his own star, and that soul that can Be honest is the only perfect man.

—John Fletcher.

To do no more is the truest repentance.—Martin Luther.

Think naught a trifle, though it small appear: Small sands, the mountain, moments make the year. And trifles life.

—Edward Young.

HOW TO WIN.

Life brings to each his task, and whatever art you select—algebra, painting, architecture, poems, commerce, politics—all are attainable, even to the marvellous triumphs, on the same terms of selecting that for which you are apt. Begin at the beginning, proceed in order step by step. "This as easy to twist iron anchors and braid cannons as to braid straw, if you take all the steps in order. Wherever there is failure there is some sickness, some superstition about luck, some step omitted which nature never pardons.—Emerson.

WOMAN'S DUTIES.

A woman's first and most important duty to the state is the same as it always has been since the beginning of things—the rearing of good citizens.

A woman who does her whole duty to the children she brings into the world is herself the most important citizen of that world. I can't make that too emphatic. There is no achievement, literary, artistic, what you will, which a woman can perform that is of the same vital significance to the nation as a family of mentally, morally, physically healthy boys and girls. There is no profession containing such real honor for a woman as that of homemaking. And it is the great natural job for the majority of us. Let us see that we stick to it. We can't do anything better.—Ida M. Tarbell.

CONJECTURES.

Our best conjectures as to the true spring of actions are very uncertain. The actions themselves are all we must pretend to know from history. That Caesar was murdered by twenty-four conspirators I doubt not, but I very much doubt whether their love of liberty was the sole cause.—Chesterfield.

PRACTICAL POLITICS.

Practical politics must not be construed to mean dirty politics. On the contrary, in the long run the politics of fraud and treachery and foulness is unpractical politics, and the most practical of all politicians is the politician who is clean and decent and upright.

Good can often be done by criticizing sharply and severely the wrong, but excessive indulgence in criticism is never anything but bad, and no amount of criticism can in any way take the place of active and zealous warfare for the right.—Theodore Roosevelt.

DEATH.

Come to the mother's when she feels For the first time her firstborn's breath!

Come when the blessed seals That close the pestilence are broke And crowded cities wall its stroke!

Come in consumption's ghastly form. The earthquake shock, the ocean storm!

And thou art terrible! The tear, The groan, the knell, the pall, the bier. And all we know or dream or fear Of agony are thine.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION ACTS.

That the Public Service Commission means more than a mere name has been found out by the Easton Light and Fuel Company. Complaints in regard to the service have been made by the patrons of the Company to the Public Service Commission which upon investigation ordered the company to make a number of changes and improvements. Properly run and properly managed the Public Service Commission can be of great value to the people of the State. Most of our public service corporations are by the very nature of things monopolies and unless there is a power invested somewhere in the state to curb them in many instances would impose an unnecessary burden and hardship upon the people who are almost compelled to deal with them let the term and character of the service be what it will. For instance the telephone Company could be as arbitrary as it dared in regard to service and price. Yet the people would have to put up with their unfair exactions if there was not a body invested with ample power to regulate both the character of service and the rate which they are allowed to charge to which any citizen aggrieved can make an appeal. So with all other public service corporations. The people do not demand that these corporations be driven out of business but they do ask and have a right to expect as reasonable rates as are compatible with good service and reasonable returns upon the money invested.

Our Public Service Commission has not yet had a fair test since it takes time to familiarize itself with the complicated questions with which it has to deal but if it will give the people in all sections of our state redress for their real grievances the money spent to keep it running will prove a good investment.

MEN AND POLITICS.

In a recent interview Governor Crothers is reported as criticizing the papers for always talking politics, especially as their columns are invariably filled with "news" about men instead of articles on public policies. The public will generally agree with the Governor that politics occupy entirely too much space in our papers, and that questions of public policy should be given ample space and consideration.

However the time for only considering principles, measures, and policies of parties is past. The people have long learned that it is worse than nothing to nominate and elect a man upon a platform whose own convictions are opposed to the principles enunciated therein. Nor can they be blamed for insisting upon getting a man sincerely in favor of the policies they advocate, when one looks back on the history of all political parties and sees how very seldom the principles and policies upon which the campaign was fought are ever enacted into a really effective law.

To this breach of trust on the part of our men, elected to public office, as well as the notorious use of party and party power to advance private interests and personal ambitions, can be traced the present strong movement in favor of men as opposed to mere party considerations of principles. The voter each year is more closely scrutinizing the character and ability of the men whose names are placed before them for political advancement, insisting more and more upon rugged honesty, unquestionable integrity, joined with experience and ability. The old political days when "any old thing" would do, provided he stood upon the party's platform has passed forever. The party that wants to maintain its influence, prestige and power with the American people can no longer afford to place before the people men whose honesty is not assured, whose record is not clean, whose ability is not of the highest order. To nominate men otherwise is to invite defeat at the polls.

The newspapers have recognized this trend of public opinion and the demand of the people to know something of the men as well as the party to which they belong and are insisting upon going into the personality of the men of all parties who are seeking the public office.

Woodrow Wilson, Governor of New Jersey, who has just returned from a trip taking in many sections of this country, has the following to say in regard to the trend of public opinion on men, policies and measures:

"Men everywhere seem to be of the same mind. The next campaign is going to mark the partial obliteration of old-time political lines. It is going to be a campaign of men and measures rather than a campaign of parties. The people are going to vote for a man who they believe will carry out the things for which they stand rather than a man who professes to represent the principles of one of the parties. There is a wide distinction, you know, between principles and measures."

Death of E. George White.

When on June 5th, 1911, Brother E. George White bade farewell to a faithful wife, loving children and other loved ones, one of the choicest spirits on earth went to his coronation. Mr. White was born November 28th, 1847. He was a devoted member of the Zion Methodist Episcopal Church, having been converted when only a boy. He had been Superintendent of Zion Sunday School for about thirty-five years.

He was united in marriage to Miss Mariah E. Mills, on February 2nd, 1869, who, with four children, survives him. He also leaves one sister, Mrs. Elijah Hearne, and three brothers, William, Ebenezer and Rev. Elijah White. Brother White was a good Christian. He was a genial, happy man and the writer will miss him perhaps as much as any one, outside of his own family. To know him well was to love him better. His friendship was of that true, sincere nature most lasting and attractive. He was a true friend, a Christian gentleman, of a modest retiring disposition, a gentle loving nature, which attracted all who knew him more and more to his heart. Our departed friend was more than a Methodist. He was a Christian in the broadest sense. He cherished fellowship for all followers of his blessed Master. He rejoiced in the prosperity of all the churches. Though unable to attend religious services for many months, his interest and love were unabated. In conversation with Brother White on very frequent visits, I found him fully trusting his Divine Lord, all ready and anxious to depart and be with Christ which he knew would be far better. When our brother saw that the journey of life was nearly ended, his soul triumphed over death, in hope of eternal life through Jesus Christ his Lord.

Brother White's large heartedness made him most genial and sympathetic in his home life. He was the center of the happy group, but now dark clouds have suddenly obscured the brightness and glory of that household. The head of that home has been promoted to the higher and holier home of the Soul.

Dying to him was only ascending from a lower to a higher room in God's house. He has finished his earthly career that is all; he is not dead; he lives just beyond in the home where all the loved ones dwell who have gone before. He is with us still in his words, his deeds, his smiles, his love. He will live on here, a part of us, only his voice is silent. He lives a thousand fold more than ever before in the life eternal. Let us follow him, as he followed Christ, singing with the poet, in anticipation of that glorious reunion. We hope to meet thee again when we, too, pass.

To where thou hast gone the host of God to dwell.
We hope to meet thee again, by the sea of glass
With the redeemed of earth in peace to dwell.
Till then farewell, farewell.

The funeral services were held in Zion Methodist Episcopal Church on Wednesday afternoon, June 7th, at two o'clock, conducted by his pastor, Rev. E. H. Collins, assisted by Rev. George E. Wood, an ex-pastor. The services his remains were taken to White's cemetery for interment there to await the call in response to which those who sleep in Jesus shall awake to meet their Lord.

PARSONSBURG.

Sunday was observed as Children's Day at Jerusalem Methodist Episcopal Church. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and special music was rendered at all the services. At the evening service the church was crowded to the doors with an appreciative audience, and many were not able to gain admittance. Too much praise cannot be given Mrs. Clara Culver, who had charge of the preparation of the programme. Special mention ought to be made of the "Flag Drill" by eighteen boys and girls, which was pronounced by all an excellent. Indeed every number rendered deserves special mention. The pastor, Rev. E. H. Collins, joins the good superintendent, Mr. Geo. W. Parsons, in thanking everybody who in any way helped to make the services such a success. The programme was as follows:

COLORED WOMAN

Arrested—Alleged Check Raising—Held For Grand Jury.

Mollie Major, colored, was arrested by the authorities this week by Chief of Police charged with raising a $5 check to $50 and an $8 check to $80. According to the story the alleged check raising was as follows:

On May 20th Miss Helen Gordon, who lives with Dr. Bennett in California, gave Mollie Major a check of $5 to get cashed to pay off some help around the house. This the colored woman did bringing back to Miss Gordon $5. It afterwards developed that this check was cashed for $50. On May 25th, according to the story Mollie Major came to Miss Gordon and said that if she could get rid of William, her husband, she would go and live with her anywhere she wanted to go—and further stated that William would stay with his people if she could get enough money to send him. Miss Gordon asked her if ten dollars would be sufficient. After a moment's hesitation the colored woman stated that it would not take that much, that eight would do. Miss Gordon gave her a check for that amount and this check it is alleged was raised to eighty dollars.

On May 29th, Miss Gordon left to spend a few days in Baltimore. As Dr. Bennett left the same afternoon the colored woman and her husband, William Major, were left in charge of the house.

According to the authoritative theory of the case this gave an occasion for the woman to find the bank book, take same to the bank and have it cashed.

The officers of the bank were getting suspicious of having such large amounts drawn out by the colored woman and had decided to investigate so when on Miss Gordon's return she went in the bank and had a small check cashed, the cashier, asked her if she had found her book and check to be all right. Not quite understanding what was meant she replied, yes. On her way home she got to thinking over the matter and decided to investigate.

On her request the colored woman brought her the book and checks which she stated were not sealed at which this was the way they were sent on from the bank. After making calculation, Miss Gordon ascertained that she was charged with a $50 and $80 check which she claims never was drawn. These checks were missing from the list turned over by the colored woman, the assumption being that after carrying the cancelled check home she had abstracted the ones she is alleged to have raised.

A hearing was held before Justice of the Peace W. A. Trader, on Friday morning, who held her for the action of the Grand Jury.

The past record of the colored woman and her husband is being thoroughly investigated, the authorities here being in communication with Philadelphia from which city they are supposed to hail.

Short Crop of Cow Peas Prices Are Going Up!

The enormous demand for Cow Peas last year carried the price very high, and as the crop is very short and the acreage is rapidly extending, there are many indications which point to much higher prices as the sowing season approaches.

Whip-poor-will Cow Peas. The Whip-poor-will are generally preferred in the Central and Southern States. They are bush form, early maturing and especially desirable for Peas.

New Era Cow Peas. New Eras are a little earlier and make more vine than the Whip-poor-will.

Wonderfuls, Clays and Mixed Cow Peas. For Hay, the Wonderfuls or the Clays are generally preferred in the Central and Southern States. They are bush form, early maturing and especially desirable for Peas.

Black Cow Peas. Black Cow Peas are a little earlier in maturing than Clays; they make a good growth of vine, are a exceptionally good for medium or poor land, and will stand almost any amount of wet weather without injury.

TWO PENTECOSTAL BLESSINGS SAYS PASTOR RUSSELL.

The Later Pentecost Will Be for the World in General—it Will Come Through Messiah's Kingdom Operating Through Israel Restored to Divine Favor—it Will Be Earth's Jubilee of a Thousand Years of Blessed Uplifting and Restoration to All the Willing and Obedient of Adam's Redeemed Race—the First Pentecost Brought Blessings Merely to the Church and Has Nearly Completed Its Intended Work.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 4.—Pastor Russell continues to draw the largest audiences of any preacher in the world to his oral addresses, besides the millions who weekly read the printed reports of his discourses in the newspapers of the English speaking world. Today's audience at the Brooklyn Academy of Music was estimated at twenty-six hundred. Of those about two hundred, all men, were on the platform behind the speaker. Late comers failed altogether to gain admittance to the afternoon service. The text was appropriate for Whit Sunday, it being St. Peter's explanation of the Pentecostal blessing—"This is that which was spoken by the mouth of the Prophet Joel" (Acts II, 16-18). The speaker called attention to the fact that the Prophet Joel mentioned two distinct outpourings of the Holy Spirit. One of these, upon the servants and handmaidens of the Lord, found its fulfillment at Pentecost; and during the more than eighteen centuries since, God's spiritual blessing has been not only with the Apostles, but with all the footstep followers of Jesus—all of God's servants and handmaidens. If we see this feature of the prophecy fulfilled, it becomes a guarantee to believers that the remainder of the same prophecy will have fulfillment in God's due time. "The remainder of the prophecy declares that afterward—after these days in which the Holy Spirit has been outpoured upon the Church, upon the 'servants and handmaidens'—will come God's time for pouring out His Spirit upon all flesh."

St. Peter's statement, "This is that which was spoken by the mouth of the Prophet Joel," Pastor Russell said should not be taken to mean that what was witnessed in the upper room on the Day of Pentecost nearly two thousand years ago, completely fulfilled the Prophet Joel's predictions. None, he said, would dispute that the fulfillment of Joel's prophecy began at Pentecost, with the early Church, and has been in process of fulfillment during all the centuries since. It is as true today as it was then, that the blessing of the Holy Spirit is granted to all of God's servants and handmaidens. And the remainder of the prophecy will be surely be fulfilled with equal accuracy in due time.

After these days of the Gospel Age—after these days of the outpouring of the Spirit upon God's servants and handmaidens—will come the glorious epoch of Messiah's Kingdom. In and through which God will pour out upon the world of mankind a great blessing of enlightenment and uplift from the sin and death conditions now prevailing. It will be to the accomplishment of this end that Satan shall be bound for a thousand years, and the darkness, which now covers the earth and the gross darkness which now blinds the heathen, will be chased away by the glorious "Sun of Righteousness with healing in His beams." Thus will be inaugurated the glorious Day of Messiah, a thousand years long. Thus the knowledge of the glory of the Lord will fill the whole earth. Thus every tongue shall be brought to confess and every knee to bow to Messiah as the great Representative of Jehovah and His righteousness.

Abraham's Spiritual Seed First. Abraham of old typified Jehovah, and Isaac typified Messiah, born after the flesh, but after the Spirit—by a special Divine interposition—according to God's promise. Of this antitypical Isaac class, Jesus is the Head, the Forerunner of the Church, as well as the world's Redeemer. The Body of Messiah is composed of a saintly few, according to the Scriptures, gathered, primarily, from the Jews, but being completed by additions from every nation, people, kindred and tongue. These all, the Apostle tells us, will be character-copies of God's dear Son, our Redeemer and Head. Thus the Apostle declares, is Divine predestination (Romans VIII, 29, 30).

This Church class, or Messiah class, is variously referred to in the prophecies, as well as in the New Testament, as the "brethren" of Jesus, and as "sons of God." Of them the Prophet David writes, "I have said, ye are gods, all of you sons of the Highest; but ye shall all die like men and fall like one of the Princes" (Psalm LXXXIII, 6, 7). These all die like men in the estimation of the world, because, as the Apostle declares, the world knoweth them not even as it knew not their Master. As the world did not recognize that the life of Jesus was laid down sacrificially, neither is it aware that the followers of Jesus are likewise through His merit presented their bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable to God.

Abraham's Natural Seed Next. This Spiritual Seed of Abraham, all saintly, will constitute the Church of the First-Born, the antitype of the Priests and Levites of the Jewish Dispensation. With the completion of this Church, gathered from all nations, sects and denominations, Divine favor will return again to the natural seed of Abraham. "As the Jew was granted the first privilege or opportunity of becoming the Spiritual Seed of Abraham, he likewise have the first opportunity to participate in the blessing which then will come to the whole world of mankind. 'To the Jew first' is the Divine order in respect to both of these blessings. 'To this agree the words of the Apostle Paul."

After telling of the Divine election of the Church, the saintly few of both Jews and Gentiles, the Apostle adds, "I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant concerning this Mystery, * * * that blindness, in part [only, not perpetual], has happened unto Israel." When the full, "elect," Spiritual Seed shall have been gathered, shall have been completed from amongst the Gentiles, then all Natural Israel shall be saved from their blindness and outcast condition (Romans IX, 11).

St. Paul points out that as Israel's stumbling was directly foretold through the Prophet ("Let their table become a trap and a snare"—Psalm LXXXIX, 22), so also, God through the prophets has foretold their blessing later on—that they would be the first to be blessed under the glorious Spiritual Messiah of many Members. Thus it is written: "There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer and He shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob." Here, pictorially, Zion is a mother and her Offspring is the Messiah. Looking again at the type, we see that Abraham represented Jehovah and that Sarah, his wife, represented the great Covenant through which Messiah would be developed. "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Genesis XXII, 18). "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to the promise" (Galatians III, 29).

It has required more than eighteen centuries to give birth to this great Deliverer. Jesus, the Head, was the "First-Born from the dead"; and the Church, His Members, since developed, will be His brethren, sharers in His rule on the Heavenly plane. For He is not declared to be the "First-Born among many brethren." The First or Chief Messiah will bring all these Sons of God to the plane of glory, honor and immortality—born from the dead; then the great Deliverer will be fully, completely born and ready to begin His great work of blessing all the nations—Israel being the first of these.

"My Spirit Upon All Flesh." St. Peter declares that it was the glorified Jesus who received of the Father, and poured out upon the Church at Pentecost, the Holy Spirit. That blessing came to the Church because of their coming into harmony with the Father's arrangement through the Son. The receiving of the Spirit there marked the recipients as sons of God. The later Pentecostal blessing upon the world will have points of similarity as well as points of difference. The blessing will come through the great Messiah and as a result of the election He will make for the sinners of the whole world, by applying to the race the merits of His sacrifice by which He will seal the New Law Covenant with Israel; and then, with the world through Israel (Jeremiah XXXI, 31). The great Messiah of glory will be the Mediator of that New Covenant, and the foundation of that Covenant will be "the better sacrifices" offered by this Mediator, as the Antitypical High Priest (Hebrews IX, 12-28).

The Pentecostal blessing then to come upon the world will not be upon the terms of their sacrificing their earthly rights to attain heavenly blessing and spiritual sonship; on the contrary, its requirements will be a consecration of obedience to the Divine Law; and its reward will be earthly Restoration to the perfection of human nature, and to the enjoyment of all the blessings originally given to Adam and forfeited by his disobedience. All coming under that blessing will experience the uplifting and restoring to all that was lost in Adam. "They shall plant vineyards and inhabit them. They shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit thereof, and long enjoy the work of their hands" (Isaiah LXV, 21). This is the Divine promise, applicable to them and not applicable to the Spiritual Seed of Abraham, the Church, the Kingdom class, who must all be changed, because "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."

As Jacob was a son of Abraham, not directly, but through Isaac, so also those blessed under Messiah's reign will be children of God, not directly, but through the Messiah. Directly, they will be the children of Messiah. Thus it is written of Messiah, "He shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, the Mighty One, the Prince of Peace and the Everlasting Father—the Father or Life-giver to the restored world of mankind. The life which He laid down in sacrifice, namely, the earthly life, is the one which He will give to all the willing and obedient of Adam's race, bringing His Messianic Kingdom to its consummation. It is in this sense that He will be the Everlasting Father—the Father giving everlasting life, which Father Adam failed to give. Messiah Himself will have no need for the earthly life which he laid down, because the Heavenly Father has given Him, as a reward for His obedience, the higher life—the divine nature.

The Fathers to Be Princes. From of old Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, David, etc., were called the fathers, not only because of their relationship to the Jewish nation, but particularly because Messiah was to come as their offspring—"the Seed of Abraham," "of the stem of Jesse," "The Offspring of David"; and so Jesus was born of this very lineage. But His exaltation by the Father to the spirit plane, and the fact that it was His earthly rights which He laid down in sacrifice, which are to go to Adam and all of his race who will accept the name on the Divine terms, puts Jesus in the position of Father or Life-giver to the world, and to Abraham, David, etc., as well. They must all obtain their everlasting life through Him, and hence will be His children. Thus the Prophet David wrote of the future, "Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children, whom thou mayest make Princes in all the earth" (Psalm LXXXV, 10). Those fathers who are to be Princes are already declared to be pleasing to God. They are to go to Adam and all of his race who will accept the name on the Divine terms, puts Jesus in the position of Father or Life-giver to the world, and to Abraham, David, etc., as well. They must all obtain their everlasting life through Him, and hence will be His children. Thus the Prophet David wrote of the future, "Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children, whom thou mayest make Princes in all the earth" (Psalm LXXXV, 10). Those fathers who are to be Princes are already declared to be pleasing to God. They are to go to Adam and all of his race who will accept the name on the Divine terms, puts Jesus in the position of Father or Life-giver to the world, and to Abraham, David, etc., as well. They must all obtain their everlasting life through Him, and hence will be His children. Thus the Prophet David wrote of the future, "Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children, whom thou mayest make Princes in all the earth" (Psalm LXXXV, 10). Notice of Closed Road

Notice is hereby given that the Rom Ridge road is closed for repairs at the old Parker Mill Dam and the public is warned not to use above Mill Dam or bridge until repairs have been completed.

By order of Wicomico County Commissioners, THOMAS PERRY, Clerk
H. M. CLARK, Roads Engineer

MARDELA SPRINGS.

Mr. A. S. Venable and wife, and Rev. B. G. Parker and wife have been attending the Eastern District Baptist Association, in East New Market this week. Mr. Parker was recently re-elected as Moderator for the fourth consecutive year. Rev. C. T. Hewitt, of Salisbury, was re-elected as Secretary. The Association covers the whole of the Baptist churches on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. The churches on the Eastern Shore of Virginia have a large Association of their own, known as the Accomack Association. The reports from the churches show an encouraging increase. The new Missions established have been greatly prospered.

The contract for putting up the electric wires to light our Main Street has been given out. Now it is hoped that the plans may be perfected for lighting the other streets. Some of those on the Main Street have offered to assist in lighting the other streets. This will benefit the whole town. There should not be any divided interests. All our interests are one.

Rev. B. G. Parker will speak in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday afternoon at 3.30. The services have been made later so as to give all a chance to attend.

UNION.

Mrs. O. Ella Prior, wife of Mr. John B. Prior, of this vicinity, died at her home Friday afternoon at three o'clock. She is survived by a husband and two children, a boy of ten and a girl of six, also a father and mother and three sisters to mourn their loss. She was the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry H. Hobbs, well known residents of this county.

Mrs. Prior was 34 years old and had been a devoted member of Union M. P. Church for more than twenty years. Her long and patient illness was faithfully attended by her husband until the last, when she willingly gave up all for the hope beyond.

Funeral services were conducted at the church Sunday afternoon by Rev. H. K. Norris, her pastor. The remains were interred in the church cemetery.

Anti-Saloon League Annual Meeting.

The Annual Meeting of the Board of Directors of the Anti-Saloon League of Maryland was held recently in Baltimore. The report of Henry S. Diglaney, Treasurer, showed net receipts of $22,873.53, which is about $3500 less than the net receipts of the preceding year, which included a legislative election campaign, but is about $2000 in excess of the receipts for the last preceding "off" year.

CARRIAGE, WAGON AND RUNABOUT DEALER

In the State of Maryland

I have 20 carloads of Buggies, Wagons, Runabouts, Surreys and Speed Carts. Come see for yourself. We have new styles other manufacturers cannot copy under a year.

We have over 2,000 Wrenn Buggies in use over six years that did not cost the users over $55 when new. I can save anyone needing a Buggy, Surrey or Runabout, $20. Come look them over.

Testimonial from H. Fillmore Lankford, Attorney-at-Law: "I have a Wrenn Surrey which has been in use twenty years, and it is a good one today. I had the tires out after using nineteen years."

Wrenn's make of Buggy is a guarantee that you get your money's worth. Why pay $20 more for an imitation when you can buy a Wrenn for $55 up?

Wagons, I have them—not the common ones, but the cheap ones. Cost $10 more, last twice as long.

Mr. Bounds came in last week and said: "Mr. Taylor, I want a Runabout. I bought a Wrenn Buggy from you ten years ago, and I am still using it." He bought another Wrenn. Best buy, cheapest on earth for the money.

I show more vehicles set up than you can find in any city or town in several States.

SARAH'S FIVE ACRES

By M. QUAD
(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

Zeph Smith, bachelor, was a Long Island farmer, whose sister kept house for him. In a farmhouse almost across the highway from the Smith place lived Sarah White. Sarah was an old maid and lived with her father and mother.

One day Zeph lounged over to the other house and found Sarah sewing up a new carpet.

"Sarah, I think me 'n' you had better get married," he said.

It was sudden. And Sarah lost her needles. "It was sudden, and Sarah blushed. Then she recovered her lost needles and looked up to reply:

"Well, Zeph, if you think best."

When Zeph went home and told his sister that he was to be married, and she asked him when he was to be married, he said:

"Oh, I can't say as to that, but it will come about some time."

After a year or so and after the neighbors had decided that there would be no match, Zeph went over to spend an evening with his fiancée. It was a poor night, and as they popped and ate he casually inquired:

"Sarah, what's your sister going to get married with, say, winter?"

"Iunno," she replied.

"But of course we're," he asked her a whole year ago, and you said yes, and I shall hold you to it. By Jimmy, come here to get them.

We will see that you get what's right.

SCHULER

Fine Clothing

SALISBURY, MD.

On Long Island Sound, it was rocky and sandy and sterile.

One day the peddler heard of the case of Zeph and Sarah from a customer. He criticized Zeph and felt sorry for Sarah and he determined to right things. Perhaps, he thought, that one good deed toward the end of his career would offset all the little tricks he had worked. He heard of the land at the same time he heard of the long and lingering engagement, and he wasn't half an hour laying plans. A week later he put up at a farmhouse a mile away, but near the five acres. Under the pretense of not feeling well he made a stay of two days. Then he drove to the house of Zeph Smith and was told by the sister that he was to be married. Zeph lived and admired the peddler. They were never in a hurry, and they had traveled and seen the world. He stopped his plowing to greet this one, and they were soon seated in the shade of a tree. The peddler was looking mysterious. He was looking around to see if anybody but the plow horses was present.

"Do you want money?" he finally whispered.

Zeph replied that he did.

"Have you ever heard of Captain Kidd?"

Zeph acknowledged his guilt.

"Do you know that he buried thousands of dollars within two miles of you?"

Zeph's mouth opened wide, and his eyes hung out.

"And I've got some of the coins! Look at these!"

He stretched out his hand, and on the palm rested three or four ancient coins.

"And—what?" gasped the farmer after a long look.

"Well, dig them up together and divide even up. I might have done it alone, but you see I must have the consent of the owner of the land. I understand that you know her—Miss Sarah White?"

"Why, she's going to marry her!"

"Go, but don't tell! When is it to come off?"

"Oh, sometime this fall. No hurry about it."

"There that, don't hurry when I picked up these coins beside a big rock just above your water and feel sure there are more—don't you think so?"

"Nonsense! When the next man may grab the same thing! Why, I'll go over and dig the land from the owner myself!"

"Say, say, you better not!" put in Zeph. "I don't want to buy it of her. I say I'll dig the money!"

"But you can't dig a year or a month. You can't wait another day. Parties may come and dig the big rock up and find the money!"

But Zeph was a stubborn fellow and rode for the money. By and by the peddler returned, and he had been hitched to a stage and the farmer was in the house digging the money suit. As he came out he said:

"I'll get the money and drive to the preacher's and have the thing fixed. You wait here."

Sarah was sitting alone, and she got a little of the money and money and the two boys came and stood in the direction of the money in a cloud of dust. When the peddler mounted the stage and drove in the opposite direction, Zeph had looked in vain for that treasure, but all agreed that he was a good man. The peddler had, of course, taken the money and the money was gone.

ATTRACTIVE KIMONO-BLOUSE.

Large Variety of Materials Available, in Connection With Gold, Lace and Embroidery, For Its Perfection.

This season the question of blouses is important, because every woman, whether she makes an attempt at elaborate dressing or strives only for plain effects, must give her waists special attention. This being the case, any model that has smart lines and is simple and easy to make will find many admirers, and the blouse pictured here fills all these requirements.

For wear with a coat suit this model will be attractive if developed in silk or in marquisette laid over a silk lining.

If this blouse is to complete a costume, the banding could be of silk and the yoke of baby Irish or chamois lace. If an elaborate dress is wanted the yoke band of the silk could be shaped so it would extend in points on the front of the waist. The edges could be couched with heavy silk floss in the same color, but a shade or two lighter than the silk.

Hand embroidery, cleverly arranged so it lies over the edges of the silk bands and parts extend on the cloth, will add to the attractive appearance of the blouse. If more elaboration is needed insets of lace that match in pattern with that used for the yoke would be effective and harmonious.

This face should be caught around the edges to the material invisibly and the goods cut from beneath.

For trimmings for the garment bands of net, braided or embroidered will be effective on chiffon or marquisette.

The yoke of such a blouse could be of net in a matching color laid over gold or silver crepe.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

THE DYNAMITER.

IT was about the time that Evan Blount was finishing his fourth week of the campaign of education that the senator's wife began to detect signs of country weariness in the eyes of Miss Patricia Ann. During the last week or two some impulse which she did not take the trouble to analyze seemed to be drawing the girl toward the city. The roads around Wartace were just as good as ever, and the free pleasures of motoring in a country where speed restrictions were just as keen. But now Patricia confessed freely to a longing for the sight of city streets.

"Only you mustn't consider us, or me so much as you do, Mrs. Blount," she protested. "I have a dreadful suspicion that we have already interfered shamefully with your autumn plans. You are merely too kind and hospitable to admit it."

"You have interfered with nothing," was the ready assurance. "No inducement that was ever devised would take the senator away from his own state during a political campaign, and your coming has been a blessing. But for the good excuse to bring your father out here to the fossil beds we should have been moved up in the Inter-Mountain hotel from the firing of the opening gun to the day after election."

But that is neither here nor there. You are tired of the country. Shall I telephone the senator that we are going in this afternoon to stay awhile?"

"I shall be delighted," said Patricia, and the eyes which were so apt to tell tales confirmed it. Then she added, "Now that father has his box of books from the university library he will never miss us."

On their first day in the capital Evan was away, but he returned the following morning, and Mrs. Blount captured him for a theater box party. It proved to be a rather more formidable affair than Evan had anticipated. There was a sufficient number of guests to fill two of the open dress circle boxes. Gantry was of the number, and so were the Weatherfords—father, mother, daughters and son.

Blount had been counting upon a measurably undisturbed evening with Patricia, but fate or a designing house intervened, and he found himself cornered between Mrs. Weatherford and her younger daughter, with the square shouldered reform candidate for governor strengthening the barrier which separated him from Patricia.

Blount had met Gordon socially a number of times, and in the intervals allowed him by Mrs. Weatherford he was silently studying the face of the big man, who, if the gods should so direct, might be the leader and chief political figure in the state for the succeeding two years.

It was a good face and, in Blount's estimate, an exceedingly strong one. Almost unconsciously he fell to contrasting it with that of Reynolds, the candidate for whom the corporation interests were working.

Though Blount himself was on the corporation side, he could not help admitting that the comparison was not favorable to Reynolds. He said to himself that Reynolds' face was the face of a timeserver.

Weighing the two men one against the other—Reynolds was sitting in an adjacent box with a party of railroad officials—Blount was conscious of a twinge of regret that chance or his convictions had made him a partisan of the weaker man.

Throughout the play and the intermissions the Weatherfords—mother and daughter—kept him from exchanging so much as a word with Miss Ann, whom Gantry was shamelessly monopolizing. But on the short return walk to the hotel after the play Blount resolutely pushed his friend aside and gave Patricia his arm.

"I think you owe me a very abject apology," was the way she began on him when they had such privacy as the crowded sidewalks conferred.

"Consider them made and then tell me what for," he countered.

"Consider a moment. You come to me with a really harrowing story of your new experiences, and just as I am beginning to get interested there is an interruption, and in the morning, at some perfectly impossible hour, off you go, and we hear no more of you for weeks and weeks. What have you been doing?"

"I have been doing precisely what you told me to do—preaching the gospel of honesty and fair dealing and, trying my level best to make other people practice it."

"You have been successful?" she asked quickly.

"Reasonably so in the preaching, since that depended solely upon me. As to the other, I don't know. Sometimes I think the housecleaners are honestly at work, and at other times I am afraid they are putting up a front only to deceive me. Some time perhaps I may tell you how far I have had to go into the 'practical politics' armory to get my weapons."

methods only too well—the only way we can keep from quarreling now is to handle politics when we are together."

"I am sorry," she said, and the sorrow was emphatic in her tone. "As I have said before, you don't understand him. You are judging him by standards which, however just and true they may be, are peculiarly your own standards. I know you can be broad for others when you try. Can't you be broad for him?"

It was good to hear her defend his father. It was what he would have wished his wife to do. Suddenly there arose within him a huge reluctance to lessen or to weaken in any way her trust in David Blount.

"Let us say that the fault is mine," he said hastily. "God forbid that I should be the means of making you think less of him in any respect!"

"He is simply a grand old man—the first I have ever known for whom the hackneyed phrase seemed to have been made," she asserted warmly. "If he has faults I am sure they are nothing more than gigantic virtues, the faults of a man who is too strong to be little in any way."

With Patricia in town, the "silver-tongued spellbinder of Quakerdom," as the Daily Capital called the new division counsel, would have been glad to evade some of the speaking appointments, but as his engagements had been made for some days in advance he was obliged to go.

On his return to the capital he was delighted to find the party of three still occupying the private dining room suit in the Inter-Mountain. Arriving on the morning train, he was permitted to make the party of three a party of four at the breakfast table.

Later, however, when he went to his offices in the Temple court building the stenographers asserted themselves again with somewhat startling emphasis. Though he found his desk closed and was reasonably sure that he had in his own possession the only key that would unlock it, he found his papers scattered in confusion under the roll top and the letters and telegrams which had come during his absence opened. A touch of the electric button brought the stenographer from the anteroom.

"Who's been in my desk, Collins?" he demanded, pointing to the confusion and scrutinizing the face of the young man for signs of guilt.

"Goodness gracious! I don't know," was the instant reply, and Blount concluded that the secretary was either innocent or an astonishingly good actor. "I have been putting the mail and telegrams through the letter slit, as you directed, and I've kept the private key locked."

"Nevertheless," said Blount, "it is very evident that somebody has been here." Then he had a sudden shock.

"What did you do with that packet of papers I gave you last Monday and told you to put in the safe?"

"I did just what you told me to—put it in the cash box and put the key of the cash box on your desk. Didn't you get it?"

Blount felt in his pockets and found the key.

"Get the packet and bring it to me," he directed, giving the stenographer the key to the inner compartment of the safe.

GROWING TREES.
It is very discouraging to think of reforesting all the land that ought to have forests in the United States. It is a task that does not address itself to Americans, because when we project something one day we wish to see it well developed the next morning. It is a task that appeals rather to the thorough German or to the patient Frenchman, for he is patient in the country, but we have got to come to a knowledge of the fact that we are growing to be an old country, with the responsibilities of an old country, and that we have got to abide nature's time in doing the things that we ought to do if we seek the aid of nature in restoring that which we have extravagantly wasted.
—President Taft.

MOHAMMED'S PLAN.
Mohammed made the people believe that he would call a hill to him and from the top of it offer up his prayers for the observers of his law. The people assembled. Mohammed called the hill to come to him again and again, and when the hill stood still he was never a whit abashed, but said, "If the hill will not come to Mohammed, Mohammed will go to the hill."

CAR FOR WOMEN IS

Railroad Novelty—Burlington Road Starts Its Operation On Chicago-Minneapolis Line.

A "woman's car" has been put into operation by the Burlington Railroad on two trains of the Minneapolis-Chicago service. More than 100 women are permitted to use and occupy part of the car, but the principal apartment is a parlor, provided with every convenience and comfort for women passengers exclusively.

This is the greatest novelty in the railroad world in many years, and is expected to prove so popular among women travelers that railroads all over the country will be forced to copy the idea. The innovation has been hastened by the increased patronage of women travelers.

For decades the railroads have discriminated in favor of their men patrons. For them have been provided smoking cars, library cars and buffet cars, but the idea of making similar provisions for women passengers never dawned until the directors of the Burlington decided to install a car with special convenience for women.

The two trains on which the women's cars have been installed are the Chicago Limited, leaving Minneapolis every evening, and the Minnesota Limited, leaving Chicago daily. If the innovation proves as popular as is expected, it will be extended over the Burlington service.

The new cars are more than eighty feet long and are divided into two principal apartments. One is a lounge-room for men and the other a parlor for women. It contains easy chairs upholstered in hair, sofas and a writing desk in a cozy corner that will insure privacy. The wood used is Canadian mahogany, and the furniture is in the empire style.

Adjoining the women's parlor is the buffet. Women passengers who wish to prepare their favorite dishes in their own way may do so by the aid of electricity without leaving the parlor.

COUNTY TAX RATE 78c. FOR 1911 REDUCTION THIS YEAR 31 CENTS

The County Commissioners Make a Sweeping Reduction In The Tax Rate This Year.

TAXABLE BASIS INCREASED $3,000,000.00

Could Easily Have Been Increased Five Millions Without Hardship To Anyone—Increase The Heaviest In The Districts Comprising City Of Salisbury—County Affairs In Splendid Shape And Much Progress Made.

The County Commissioners met Tuesday and struck the levy for 1911. The results of the new assessment show that there has been an increase in the assessable basis of the county in real and personal property amounting to three million dollars. This increase is not more than half of what it could have been made had the assessors rated the property at anything near its present value, but it was the policy of the County Commissioners to see that no property owner was injured by the assessment and while there has been lots of kicking over the assessment it is apparent to all fair-minded men that the present assessment is really lower than it should be. For what they get in the way of improvements—good roads, good schools, and everything which goes to make up a progressive community, the people of Wicomico county get more for their money than any county in the State of Maryland.

Below we give the assessable basis of the various districts of the county for 1910 and 1911 so that a comparison may be made as to where the increase in the basis has come from:

District.	Basis for 1910	Basis for 1911
Barren Creek	$11,787.30	$84,966.00
Quantico	426,864.00	634,662.00
Tyaskin	299,376.00	416,866.00
Pittsburg	336,432.00	409,030.00
Parsons	1,235,196.00	1,737,089.00
Dennis	177,408.00	1,186,580.00
Trappe	340,900.00	511,082.00
Nutters	226,514.00	304,368.00
Salisbury	1,462,078.00	2,082,884.00
Sharptown	266,751.00	353,465.00
Delmar	396,817.00	678,932.00
Nanticoke	325,316.00	391,363.00
Camden	766,695.00	1,214,367.00
Willard	138,130.00	194,174.00
Total Real and Personal	$6,810,346.00	$9,768,018.00
Stocks Corporations	2,127,474.00	2,156,822.00
Bonds Corporations	10,65,203.00	1,027,625.00
Total Basis	$10,030,038.00	$12,941,635.00

The county tax rate for this year will be 78 cents. Last year it was $1.09. This is a reduction of 31 cents from last year, which is a splendid showing for the business ability of the County Commissioners when we consider that the cost of the assessment was in the neighborhood of $8,000.00, which was an extraordinary expense. The Commission-ers spent more than $30,000 for roads this year independent of more than $20,000 which the state spent in the county. The schools were also provided for in an extraordinary manner and everything was done to push forward the improvements which are so apparent to even the ordinary observer.

The State tax rate this year will be 22 cents which is an increase of 6 cents over last year. This raise in the State rate is for the purpose of taking care of State bonds for the insane, the tuberculosis patients the colored insane and several other State appropriations, including some for roads. Except for this increase in the State rate the Commissioners could have made rate of 94 cents for county and State purposes, or 72 cents for county purposes alone. The county rate of 78 cents is one of the lowest in the State of Maryland and the taxpayers in Wicomico county should be proud of such a Board of business men as we have to handle our finances in the Commissioner's office.

The county rate of 78 cents on the $100 will bring in $92,000 revenue, and the rate of 30 cents on bonds will bring in $3,082.87, making a total of $95,000.00. The Commissioners feel that inasmuch as most every district in the county has been liberally provided for during the past two years in roads and bridges as well as school houses that they will be able to run the county on this sum for the next year very satisfactorily.

The following are some of the big items in the county levy: Public Schools, $25,000; Printing and advertising, $1,099.60; High School bonds and interest, $3,445; Treasurer's office, $2,800; County Commissioners, $1,600; Constables $142; Vaccination, $202; City Councils, $1,750; Deaf and dumb, $125; Support of Paupers, $3,740; Attorneys, $1,925; Care of Insane, $4,000; Maintenance of Ferries, $1,510.60; Elections, $1,510; Court House and Jail, $2,900; Court Expenses, $4,676; Sheriff's Office, $1,165; Jail Expenses, $529; Orphans' Court, $450; Assessment, $5,162.60.

The demands upon the Commissioners for roads and bridges have also been heavy, and while they have spent a large sum on these items during the year, they have not been able to do everything that the public demanded, but are progressing all the time along this line. During the year many substantial culverts have been built and old bridges dispensed with. The repairs to shell roads have been a very expensive item and several miles of new shell roads have been constructed. It is the intention to provide for permanent improvements in the way of culverts and drainage rather than the flimsy makeshift of former years.

The Commissioners have worked hard to keep down the increasing expenses of the county. The demands upon them are growing every day, and the taxpayers will have to make up their minds that if the Commissioners grant the improvements the taxpayers must pay for them. There is no other place for the commissioners to get money except from the taxpayers' pockets. The Commissioners are doing their duty and should receive the support of citizens of the county in their effort to keep up these improvements and get the county in first-class shape.

TURTLE DINNER REVIVED

Big Fired Day At Mardela—Politicians In Evidence—Many Candidates Quit.

The good old days when the leaders of the Democratic party were accustomed to gather around the heavy laden board of mine host at Quantico, were recalled on Thursday of this week at the turtle dinner given at the Mardela Springs Hotel. While many prominent in the party were unable to be there, yet from the standpoint of attendance the dinner could be called a great success. Practically every district in the county was represented—not only by representative Democrats but by candidates as well.

And speaking of candidates the woods was full of them. Among those whose names have been mentioned in this connection were the following gentlemen:

States Attorney—Geo. W. Ball, A. M. Jackson and G. W. D. Waller. Legislators—John F. Phillips, E. Thomas Shockley and John O. Taylor. Treasurer—Robert G. Robertson, R. Frank Williams, Thomas Perry, D. B. Cannon and S. King White.

Congress Commissioners—W. F. Ward, S. J. Phillips, M. K. Morris, W. O. Mann, Wesley R. Truitt, C. G. Measick and H. J. Seabreeze.

Orphans Court—Gillis E. Bennett. Sheriff—W. O. Brady, Roy Smith and R. Frank Waller.

One every side a general good time was indulged in, all seeming to enjoy the occasion very much.

Among those who seemed to be most enjoying the meeting was Hon. W. H. Jackson, who was accompanied by Postmaster M. A. Humphreys and Walter B. Miller.

Though in the center of what might be called a Democratic family gathering, these gentlemen were very much at home, and it was very apparent that they had a host of personal friends in the gathering.

Mine host Austin found the gathering many times larger than had been anticipated, but went to work with a will to find food to satisfy the hunger of the crowd.

The management will not be taken unaware the next time as they will know what to expect.

The day was spent, for the most part by those present, in feeling each other out and sipping up the sentiment on the different candidates, and other matters pertaining to the party.

University Extension.

It has been said that the noblest epitaph ever written is on the grave of John Richard Green—"He died learning." In this epitaph of the great English historian is found the spirit of modern education and especially of that comparatively new educational movement known as University Extension which has shown such vigorous and widespread growth in our country in recent years. The traditional educational theory held that one should get one's schooling once for all in the brief period of youth and then be done with it like the measles. University Extension teaches that education is a life process, ending only with the grave, and seeks to carry systematic and continuous efforts for self culture through the whole life—placing them in the same category as business, politics, religion or other recognized needs of existence.

Nothing better illustrates the growth and vitality of the University Extension movement than the work of the American Society for the Extension of University Teaching of Philadelphia, the parent University Extension body in the United States. In the twenty first annual report of the Society just issued, the table of annual membership shows that this organization has steadily expanded from some 200 members eight years ago to nearly 2800 today, each twelve months displaying an advance over the preceding years.

Death of Mr. Ellis.

Mr. James T. Ellis, of Hebron, Md., died Saturday morning, June 10, 1911 of a complication of diseases, aged 70 years, one month and five days. Deceased was born in Sussex County, Del., May 5, 1841 and was the son of Stephen and Sarah Ellis. In early manhood he removed to Wicomico county and was actively engaged in farming until ill health compelled him to retire nearly four years ago; when he retired to Hebron where he spent the last days of his life. In October 1867 he married Leah A. Waller, daughter of Alfred and Elizabeth F. Waller, who with seven children survives him; Mrs. Lambers D. Bowers of Queen Anne Co., Mrs. Granville Knowles, Thaddeus O. Ira A. and S. Thomas, of Wicomico County and George W. and H. Brooks, of Philadelphia. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at St. Mark's Chapel, Sussex Co., Del., where he was laid to rest in the church yard adjoining near to the ashes of his father, mother, brothers and sisters, who have gone on before. Rev. Dr. Howard, of Salisbury, officiated.

THE VALUE OF MOLES.

They Are Great Insect Eaters and May Be Tolerated Everywhere Except in the Garden.

The popular belief that the principal food of the mole consists of potatoes and the roots of farm plants has been proved to be erroneous by the experiment station of the Kansas State Agricultural college. In fact, the opposite has been proved to be true, for out of the hundred moles that were examined there were only forty-three whose stomachs contained any trace of plant fiber or roots, and in these only small amounts were found. Their food consists almost exclusively of insects and worms found in the soil.

Probably the most remarkable thing revealed by the examination of the stomach contents was the large number of centipedes found. Of the hundred examined twenty-five contained centipedes, and in these twenty-five forty-two centipedes were found. One contained four and several two and three apiece.

The damage to farm crops charged to moles usually is due to the activities of rats or other animals that gnaw, such as field mice, shrews, etc. These follow the runways of the moles and do the damage for which the mole is blamed.

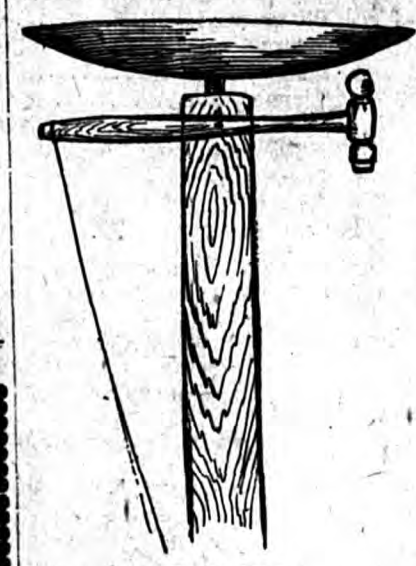

There is one place, however, where the mole cannot be tolerated. This is in parks or lawns. Here the mounds or runways spoil the appearance of the surface. A good way to keep moles out of these places is by frequent leveling with a heavy roller. This also prevents injury to the plant roots.

Moles are not usually hibernating animals, as many persons believe, but they are more or less active in all seasons. But it is in wet weather that they are most active in making new runways and repairing the old ones. Some of these runways are 500 feet long.

GOOD FARM GONG.

with a twenty penny nail to the post about six inches from the top. A twelve foot post set eighteen inches into the ground is about right. This gives you a first class serviceable farm gong.

TREATING FENCEPOSTS.

Crescote in General Use For Their Preservation—Best When Applied Hot.

Do not take an expensive post and one which is already comparatively durable, such as cedar, to treat with preservatives, but use a cheap kind of wood, such as the willow, cottonwood, box elder, maple, etc. These poorer grades of wood when treated with a preservative are practically as good as the more expensive kinds.

Crescote is the preparation most generally used to preserve wood. There are a number of ways of applying it to fenceposts. The cheapest though least effective way is to paint the fenceposts a couple of times with hot crescote. A better method is to heat the crescote in a big open tank and place the fenceposts in it for several hours. No matter what method is used, it is very essential that the posts be thoroughly seasoned before treated. If they contain sap they will not take up the preservative.

FARM NOTES

Selling crops from the farm accounts for decreasing fertility.

If crops are all sold on the farm and other feed is also bought and fed, then the land will increase in fertility.

The best way to market corn is to first put it through the silo and then sell it in the shape of fat animals.

The most economic way of securing a permanent roadbed is through drainage. It solves much of the good roads problem.

The manure spreader will pay better dividends than any other farm machine that could be purchased by a southern farmer.

The great value of lime in the soil is its power to correct soil acidity, or sourness, and to improve the texture or physical condition.

GENERAL QUILL POINTS

The Various Kinds Of Crops And Other Pertinent Matters.

The drought, plus a short strawber ry crop, plus a diminutive corn crop, took a little spirit out of the whoop of this booming town but she still booms; onward! onward! is the cry. Nature knocked the buoyancy out of our expectations in relation to the strawberry crop but we immediately turned to other crops for consolation and cheerful inspiration. We now look lovingly towards the plant which produces the succulent and luscious cantaloupe.

In case of a failure in this crop, what then? O, blessed thought and provision, we may still turn to a crop which was never known to fail the crop of candidates. When this crop falls we will have cause to look skyward with blanched faces and bumping knees.

Candidates must needs be, and every man has a right to be a candidate without consulting the bosses. If by the way, who are the bosses? Do you know? Say Mr. Voter, and candidate and would be candidate, which way do your thoughts turn when that buzzing and ominous sound strikes your vibrating tympanum?

Every man has a right to exert his influence in every legitimate and honorable way, for this or that candidate, but where it is found that all of his scheming has but one meaning, the perpetuation of himself and favorite tools in office, the voter should stand up and take notice.

Here, another quarter. We believe in progress and improvement, but it is possible to progress too fast, as some of the automobile drivers occasionally find. (Here I would insert parenthetically the remarkable fact that, occasionally we meet an automobile whose chauffeur has enough politeness and consideration to give us an inch of the road. Say, Mr. High Flyer and road monopolizer, why don't you come out and give us a chance to vote for you? It's as high as you want, and as fast as you want provided, you don't infringe upon the rights of another.)

A word in regard to roid building. These new roads are going to prove to be an exceedingly costly luxury, if not built in a way and out of material that will resist time and usage. It seems to us that, before impeding such a burden on county and State every means of ascertaining the most substantial way of construction should be exhausted.

In conclusion continue to retire presidents, judges and others, with rich provisions, who don't need them, and stand abashed at the growth of socialism.

Whether John McNamara had anything to do with the blowing up of the Times building in Los Angeles or not, won't alter facts. There are thousands of striving, sweating, toiling people in the world in need and they are getting their eyes open.

The man who dies up scumms and cuts ditches renders his country a valuable service. We must have bread. There is less difference between the judge and the digger of stumps than is recognized.

Sixty days on the state convict road force is the penalty that Robert Smallwood of Virginia, must pay for swearing that his bride, Miss Christina Hagerdown, thirteen years old was more than twenty one years of age. Oswald Johnson, who accompanied Smallwood and Miss Hagerdown when they obtained the license and who made the same false statement also will serve sixty days. The youthful bride collapsed when she saw the officer arrest her husband, and later when she was informed that her marriage would be nullified on account of her extreme youthfulness, again collapsed.

VERBAL MISHAPS.

Some Bad Breaks, of Which Charles Dickens Made Two in One Evening.

Charles Dickens once wrote to a friend: "I have distinguished myself in two respects lately. I took a young lady, unknown, down to dinner and talked to her about the bishop of Durham's nepotism in the matter of Mr. Chees. I found she was Mrs. Chees. Later I expatiated to the member for Marylebone, thinking him to be an Irish member, on the contemptible character of the Marylebone constituency and the Marylebone representation."

Two such mishaps in one evening were enough to reduce the most brilliant talker to the condition of the three inside passengers of a London bound coach who beguiled the tedium of the journey from Southampton by discussing the demerits of William Cobbett until one of the party went so far as to assert that the object of their denunciation was a domestic tyrant, given to beating his wife.

Much to his dismay the solitary woman passenger, who had hitherto sat a silent listener remarked:

"Pardon me, sir, a kinder husband and father never breathed. And I ought to know, for I am William Cobbett's wife."

Mr. Giles of Virginia and Judge Duval of Maryland, members of congress during Washington's administration, boarded at the house of a Mrs. Gibson, whose daughters were well on in years and remarkable for talkative uses.

When Jefferson became president Duval was comptroller of the treasury and Giles a senator. Meeting one day in Washington, they fell to chatting over old times, and the senator asked the comptroller if he knew what had become of "that cackling old maid, Jenny Gibson."

"She is Mrs. Duval, sir," was the unexpected reply.

Giles did not attempt to mend matters, as a certain Mr. Tuberville unwisely did. Happening to observe to a fellow guest that the lady who had sat at his right hand at dinner was the ugliest woman he had ever beheld, the person addressed expressed his regret that he should think his wife so ill looking.

"I have made a mistake," said the horrified Tuberville. "I meant the lady who sat on my left."

"Well, sir, she is my sister."

This brought the frank avowal, "It can't be helped, sir, then, for if what you say be true I confess I never saw such an ugly family in the course of my life."—Youth's Companion.

The farmer and his wife were about to sit down to a cold supper when they saw some old friends driving towards the house.

The good wife was equal to the occasion—thanks to her New Perfection Oil Cook-stove.

She had it in a moment, and her guests hardly were seated on the porch before a hearty hot meal was ready for the table—sausages and eggs and long rashers of streaky bacon, and rolls just crisped in the oven and fresh coffee—and the hostess herself as cool and neat as if she had not been near the kitchen.

She never could have managed it with an old-fashioned range. The New Perfection is the quickest, most convenient and best cooker on the market.

Made with 1/2 and 3 burners, with top, turning top, pressure cooker, 2- and 3-burner models can be had with or without a cabinet top, which is fitted with deep shelves, towel racks, etc.

A TURN OF THE WHEEL

Enid Ford not only possessed a fortune, but, her father and mother being dead, there was no one to direct her movements in any respect. Walker Brooks was an eligible party, being also, wealthy, and although he was not intellectual and had no object in life, Enid had concluded that their two estates united would involve many advantages. She gave him some encouragement. He proposed and was accepted.

In memory of her parents Enid built a little church in the town where she lived. When it was finished she cast about for some one to take charge of it as pastor. Laurence Keith, a recent graduate of a theological seminary, was recommended and finally chosen for the position.

Keith was one of those young men who from the first indicate that they are destined to make their mark in the world. He had, first of all, that requisite for a pastor, the gift of extemporaneous utterance. When he had anything to say to his congregation he did not halt for hesitations for words nor become intricately involved in the construction of sentences.

Being at the head of a church built and endowed by Enid Ford, there were many things constantly arising for them to talk over. They invariably confined themselves to church and charitable interests, seldom if ever dropping into that small talk so natural to young people. Indeed, Mr. Keith treated Miss Ford as the owner of the church of which he was pastor, and Miss Ford treated Mr. Keith as the pastor of the church of which she was owner.

When Mr. Keith had administered the affairs of the church and its congregation a year Miss Ford said to him:

"I am very well pleased, Mr. Keith, with my selection of a pastor for my church. There is, however, one recommendation you do not possess. A clergyman should have a wife. On your salary, I admit, marriage would be unwise, but I can relieve this deficiency. Your salary for the next year will be double what it has been."

Mr. Keith thought a few moments, then declined the raise with the condition, whereupon Miss Ford assured him that there was no condition attached, and he was satisfied. A few more matters of business were talked over between them, when Miss Ford said:

"I have a request to make of you—an invitation to extend to you—and I don't wish you to be influenced in your acceptance by our relative positions. Perhaps I am making too much of the matter, but everything connected with a girl's main event in life, marriage, is the cause of deep feeling to her."

"I can understand that, and it should be so. What is this invitation?"

"Will you marry me?" Mr. Keith looked at the girl in astonishment, then, instead of making a reply, turned and walked back and forth for several minutes in deep thought. Meanwhile Miss Ford looked at him, equally surprised.

"I do not think," he said at last, "that such a course would be well for either of us. In a career such as mine wealth possessed by my wife would be a detriment to me, for my view of wealth is that it belongs to the poor. I have observed that, however liberal rich people are, their wealth is their paramount interest. With this predisposition to hold and increase what you have, I would advise you to marry a rich man."

It is needless to say that Miss Ford listened to this with interest. Mr. Keith had mistaken her entirely. What she intended to ask of him was that he would perform the marriage ceremony soon to take place between her and Walker Brooks. He had supposed that she, being rich, had considered it her part to propose marriage. When he had finished speaking, instead of informing him of his blunder she said:

"What you say is worthy of thoughtful consideration."

A week later Mr. Brooks received a note from his fiancée stating that she had come to the conclusion that she was not the woman who would marry; that she had resolved to spend her income in doing good only and not in pleasure seeking. Mr. Brooks was somewhat disappointed at losing so considerable an addition to his fortune, calculating to spend the entire income in fashioning his life. But he weighed the matter and decided that he would rather give up Miss Ford's fortune than see it expended in building institutions. He released her.

From this time Miss Ford began to rely on her pastor in certain expenditures which she designed on account of his experience in the line she proposed to spend the money and because of his administrative ability, which was of the first order. It was not long before their interests became identical. Miss Ford furnished the means for good, and Mr. Keith saw that the money went into many a household where it was not only a godsend, but was expended to a practical purpose. One evening after they had been talking of these matters Miss Ford said:

"Mr. Keith, I once gave you an invitation which you declined. Were the situation now what you inferred it to be, your reasons for declining would have been excellent. But since then I have made my calling your calling. I see no reason why a fortune held in trust as I hold mine, for the poor should not continue to go through you to the greatest good. Again I ask, will you marry me?"

The second invitation was accepted. EMMA L. C. BURKE

Tragic Joking.

Oswald's friends were always on the lookout for some ruse. He once notified them that on New Year's day he should get the best of them all in some joke, and New Year's morning each received this notice. "Remember. They were on their guard."

As they were leaving a house where they had breakfasted Oswald slipped on the steps and fell on his back on the sidewalk. His friends rushed to his assistance, but paused before they reached him.

"This is his ruse," some one said. "Clearly the man who was so proud of his talent for mimicry was bent on deceiving them all into thinking him a dying man, for he lay there moaning pitifully, his face drawn and twisted as if with terrible pain."

His friends stood around and made jokes and puns and hummed lines of comic songs, assuring him all the while that they were not deceived by his acting. At last he gave a hoarse, mournful cry, looked at them sadly and then ceased to moan or writhe. In a never to be forgotten moment of horror and sorrow his friends realized that Oswald was dead.—"Souvenirs d'un Vieux Libraire."

Caught the Old Sailor.

It was a clever lawyer in a Boston court who took advantage of the nautical knowledge he possessed to work upon the mind of a jurymen who did not seem to show much comprehension of a case of suing a street railway for damages.

The jurymen member was an old sailor, who, though doubtless very keen of perception along some lines, was nevertheless rather slow in his understanding of the points involved in the case being tried, says the New York Journal. The lawyer noticed this and made his strike with this particular man. Approaching the jury box, he addressed himself to this one jurymen and said:

"Mr. Jurymen, I will tell you how it happened. The plaintiff was in command of the outward bound open car and stood in her starboard channels. Along came the inward bound closed car, and just as their bows met she jumped the track, abreast to port and knocked the plaintiff off and ran over him."

The sailor was all attention after this version of the affair and joined in a $5,000 verdict for the injured man.

The Clinching Argument.

A young man representing a well known make of motorcar had called, discussed intelligently the points of the automobile he was endeavoring to sell, had given a flawless demonstration.

But the prospective amateur motorist before mortgaging his house still wanted to be thoroughly convinced, and so he said: "What you say about your car may be all right. The engine runs very nicely, and it looks good to me, but tell me one thing—have you ever sold any of these cars to your own personal friends?"

The salesman smiled. "Have 17 Why, three months ago I was engaged to a girl, and I sold one of these identical cars to my prospective father-in-law."

"Did you marry the girl?" "Yes, indeed! I've now got the girl, a contented father-in-law and an enthusiastic customer as well."

He made the sale.—Life.

Mules and Kindness.

"In the fifteen years that I have been connected with studies for the prevention of cruelty to animals in this and other cities I never have received a complaint alleging cruelty to a mule," said the humane looking man. "That immunity of mules from harsh treatment is an interesting question. Why are they immune? There are plenty of mules, even in New York. Does nobody beat them? Does nobody undress them? If not, why not? Does a mule show such a decided ability for taking care of himself that his owner is afraid to abuse him, or do men beat mules and escape punishment because the persons who witness the beating think it is only a mule and not worth bothering about? What is the explanation of that phase of the mule question anyhow?"—New York Press.

To Rest His Eyes.

The people who quit reading "just to rest their eyes" might take a hint by inference from the reply made by an old illiterate. A passing man found him apparently deeply interested in a paper.

On looking close it became apparent that his paper was upside down, and he was asked forthwith why he held it thus.

His reply almost knocked the questioner out. It was:

A Reversal.

"I suppose you talked a lot of nonsense to your wife before you were married."

"Yes," answered Mr. Meekton. "Before we were married she thought my nonsense sensible. Now when I try to talk sense she thinks it's nonsense."

Inspiring Air.

He—So you think married life ought to be one grand, sweet song? She—Yes. He—And what air would you prefer for this matrimonial song? She—A millionaire!

Reciprocal Help.

Doctor—Well, my good woman, what do you want? Beggar—A quarter, doctor. Give me a quarter and I'll tell everybody that you helped me.

WINDMILL OF TEMPERANCE.

The excessive use of intoxicating liquor is the cause of a great deal of the poverty, degradation and crime of the world, and one who abstains from the use of such liquor avoids a dangerous temptation. Abraham Lincoln showed that he believed this in writing out for his boy friends the pledge of total abstinence so often quoted. Each person must determine for himself the course he will take in reference to his tastes and appetites, but those who exercise the self restraint to avoid altogether the temptation of alcoholic liquor are on the safe and wiser side.—President Taft.

IMAGINATION.

And as imagination bodies forth The forms of things unknown Turns them to shapes and gives to airy nothing A local habitation and a name. Such tricks has strong imagination That if he would but apprehend some joy It comprehends some bringer of that joy. —Shakespeare.

NOT A TYRANT.

Side by side with our helpless officialdom has grown up the tremendous structure of modern incorporated business. There is nothing inefficient in that development. Its wealth is limitless and increasing; its organization has the perfection of the machine; its minders spring to their tasks endowed with the best specialized training that science can give them. The result of contact between the two can have but one issue, and the people, instead of looking at the executive as a possible tyrant, as Jefferson did, look upon him to protect the individual citizen against the oppression of this unofficial power of business. It is not the people who are in danger from a strong state government. It is the government itself that is in danger from private interests.—Henry L. Stimson.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

A man must stand erect, not be kept erect by others.—Marcus Aurelius.

If God writes "opportunity" on one side of the open doors he writes "responsibility" on the other side.—Dr. Gracey.

And he who waits to have his task marked out Shall die and leave his errand unfulfilled. —Lowell.

Perfection of character can be achieved only through struggle, through discipline. It is for him that overcomes that the crown of life is reserved.—John Fluke.

Though we travel the world over to find the beautiful, we must carry it with us or find it not.—Emerson.

BUSINESS HONESTY.

There must be a moral standard in business ethics. A deal with the man who adulterates milk and in doing so not only violates the law and cheats those who pay him, but who may by his act be the means of killing many innocent children. The man who substitutes iron filings for cork in life preservers is worse than any known thief or murderer. There must be a way to fix moral responsibility. These conditions must be dealt with in our laws and new standards, for we are ever changing. We must assume a different attitude toward riches. It should be not how much a man is worth, but rather how much worth is in a man.—Rabbi Stephen S. Wise.

THE GOOD CITIZEN.

"There is a vast difference between the citizen and the adventurer. The adventurer is a man who takes all he can out of a city for himself, whereas the citizen takes all he can out of himself to put into a city. It makes no difference where a man lives—in a municipal building, house or a palace—or whether he is the head of a great corporation or carrying on some small craft or holding up a boy in the street for the change in his pockets. If he is taking out of the city for himself what he can get he is an adventurer. The average view is that the city is a good place in which to do business and make money. It is the rarest man or woman in a thousand who ever stops to think that the real business of the city is to get good and to do good.—Rev. Thomas R. Slicer.

SENATOR BY DIRECT VOTE.

After a fight running on in years, the United States Senate has passed a bill favoring the election of Senators by a direct vote instead of by our legislators. There is but little doubt but what the necessary number of states will pass this resolution favoring a change in the manner of the selection of our members of this powerful body.

Whether or not the new manner of selection will produce better or more capable men, is hard to say, but the people have become thoroughly disgusted with the tactics used under the present system to obtain seats in the Senate.

Senator after senator has been accused of buying his seat, causing more or less criticism of this body.

The election by a direct vote of the people may not entirely eliminate the use of money, but it is harder to buy up a state than it is to buy up some of our legislators. By the removal of the power of selecting the United States Senator our legislature will be further removed from national politics than at present and under existing conditions it is perhaps better this way than in any other.

State issues and national issues are two entirely different matters, and the sooner they are separated the better it will be for all.

While not believing that the direct election of our Senators will prove a panacea for all the political evils that have crept into our upper body at Washington yet it is probably a step in the right direction. If the people will be careful in their selections and vote for men who will do all they promise to do, then will our so styled "Millionaire Club" become what it should be, a careful, considerate, able body of men working in the interest of the people.

GOOD SUGGESTIONS.

Shun evil speakers. Deal tenderly with the absent; say nothing to inflict a wound on their reputation. They may be wrong and wicked, set your knowledge of it does not obligate you to disclose their character, except to save others from injury. Then do it in a way that speaks a spirit of kindness to the absent offender. Be not hasty to credit evil reports. They are often the result of misunderstanding or of evil design, or they proceed from an exaggerated or partial disclosure of facts. Wait and learn the whole history before you decide, then believe what evidence compels you to believe and no more. But even then take heed not to indulge in the least unkindness, else you dissipate all the spirit of your prayer for them, and unnerve yourself for doing them good.—Exchange.

Dies To Save Boy.

While hurrying home with the son of Daniel W. Atkins to escape an approaching thunder storm, Stanesbury Figgis, a farmer living near Snow Hill, was killed late Wednesday afternoon. Figgis was at work in a field about half a mile from the home of Atkins. The boy had come out to the field to watch the work. A thunder storm which promised to be severe came up suddenly, and Figgis hastily unbarred the gate attached to the cultivator, and he and the lad mounted and rode rapidly toward home. The male became frightened and the boy lost his balance and was falling. In his attempt to catch the boy Figgis fell and was caught in a chain of the harness and dragged several hundred yards. When help came he was dead. Figgis was 60 years old.

FRUITLAND.

Children's Day was observed in St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church last Sunday evening by the largest concourse of people known for many years. The church, decorated with potted flowers, was crowded to its utmost capacity, standing room being at a premium. The crowd on the outside showed clearly that the capacity of this beautiful edifice is inadequate to accommodate the increasing population of this booming and rapidly growing town. At seven forty-five o'clock the bell in the tower sounded the hour for the exercises and hundreds of voices of tomorrow's leaders were heard swelling the church with enchanting music. The program "Give Him Praise," a special musical edition, was most ably rendered by Fruitland's talent and after two hours rendition the sweltering crowd turned homeward declaring this to have been one of the best entertainments they had heard. The collection taken by classes amounted to $70.55, by far the largest in the history of the church. To Mr. John H. Dobany, the efficient superintendent, and his faithful committee, the Mrs. Jennie Dulany, Verne Moore, Ara Hastings and Lily Price, who provided their ability in the training of the youthful minds, the success of the entertainment is due. The classes contributions were as follows:

Class No. 1, Pastor's, $ 9.25
Class No. 2, Miss Venie Moore 17.50
Class No. 3, Miss Cleve Hewin 5.00

Base Ball League Proposed

A meeting of those interested in base ball was held in Salisbury last week for the purpose of forming a base ball league of the towns on the Eastern Shore and Delaware. Dr. A. B. Burris, Ray Trist and Ralph V. Rich were appointed a committee to secure the co operation of the other towns in the formation of the league. By this proposition no town can have more than three or four hired players, the remainder must be citizens of the town or county from which town the team is formed.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett left immediately for a short wedding trip in the North, after which they will take up their residence on Fifth Street, this city.

—High heels are as heathenish as rings in the nose or tattooing, declared Supreme Court Justice Howard to the graduating nurses of Troy Hospital. "Such shoes," said the Justice "are as barbarous as torturing and as destructive of health as the Chinese wooden shoes. Both breed ugliness and deformed feet. China is proud of one kind of deformed feet, we of the other. Each kind results only in walking monstrously. Will you not advocate normal feet, such feet as God gave? Have you the courage to speak out against this silly fashion, a fashion as destructive as rum, as deadly as opium, or are you to be counted among the devotes?"

Short Crop of Cow Peas Prices Are Going Up!

The enormous demand for Cow Peas last year carried the price very high, and as the crop is very short and the acreage is rapidly extending, there are many indications which point to much higher prices as the sowing season approaches.

Whip-poor-will Cow Peas. The Whip-poor-will is a little earlier and makes more vine than the Whip-poor-will.

New Era Cow Peas. New Era are a little earlier and make more vine than the Whip-poor-will.

Wonderfuls, Clays and Mixed Cow Peas. For Hay, the Wonderfuls or the Clays. They should be planted with an occasional grain of Corn, Sorghum Seed, Rye, etc., which will prevent the vines from getting damaged by coming in contact with the ground.

Black Cow Peas. Black Cow Peas are a little earlier in maturing than Clays; they make a good growth of vine, are a exceptionally good for medium or poor land and will stand almost any amount of wet weather without injury.

We can also supply Shinnery Peas, Red Hoppers, Blackeye Peas and Soy Beans.

REMEMBER—Bolgiano's Cow Peas are unquestionably the best. If your Local Merchant will not supply Bolgiano's Cow Peas, write us direct and we will tell you where you can get them.

CHIFFON GOWNS.

For the Debutante's Coming Out Party.

Skirts Are of Dancing Length For Reception Costumes and Are Conspicuous For the Simplicity of Their Makeup.

These are golden days for the debutantes, and everywhere youthful faces, youthful figures and youthful frocks are seen. Not that the older women are not socially active on their own account, for they most decidedly are,
but some way or other the debutantes seem to monopolize the stage center and fascinate the calcium light.

They are so attractive even when they are not pretty, so eager, so conscious of their smart clothes and their new privileges—in a word, so young—that one's heart warms to them even though they are apt to make any one over twenty-five feel old and frumpy and a trifle tired.

Fleeting glimpses of innumerable debutantes' tears and debutantes' smiles dances—one really cannot philosophically endure feeling old and frumpy and a trifle tired for more than a few fleeting moments at one time—leave behind them a bewildering chaotic memory of chiffon and net and tiny roses and stiletto figures and sparkling faces. Presumably there are debutantes who do not wear net or chiffon or lilliputian roses, but one must make a distinct effort of memory to recall them, so submerging is that net and chiffon tide.

Probably many a debutante longs in her secret soul for empoisoned velvet or gold brocade or lustrous satin, but even if she has not taste or strength of character to snuff out such desires her mother promptly does it for her if the heresy ever reaches the maternal ears.
Ingenuous girlhood is your debutante's most valuable possession. The youth and innocence theme is her own particular motif, and if all modern young persons are not so ingenuous as they look when they stand in line to be formally presented to their mothers' friends the more's the pity, for they are altogether charming in the role.

More than one wall has been heard from debutantes of this season over the eclipse of the train.

All save one of the gowns seen at a recent debutante party were of decided simplicity, but the simplicity was of the knowing kind, bespeaking a mother or a dressmaker with an educated sense of values. The debutante was in white net, the finest and softest of nets, made up on empire lines, self trimmed in little frills and puffs through which ribbons of delicate pink were run.

One of these ribbon run puffs served as a girdle, and there was a knot of the ribbon at the left front—not a particle of other trimmings—but the little frock was handsome, hung over the softest of satin veiled in chiffon and exquisite in every detail.

Another pretty frock was of very pale pink chiffon trimmed in fine cob-webby silver lace, a wide band of the lace encircling the slightly full skirt beneath the chiffon; another running around the bodice and veiled with the chiffon save in the middle of the front and of the back, where the chiffon folded were drawn down from shoulders to girdle, leaving a V shaped opening filled with the silver lace and a shirred tucker of white tulle.

And then there was a gayer frock of coral pink chiffon over white satin, with no trimming save self cording and shirring and tucker and a shallow yoke of creamy lace.

One might go on indefinitely with descriptions of the ravishing little frocks, and evening frocks that the debutantes are wearing. Each is more charming than the other. Practically all are of dancing frock length. A very large percentage have the short loose sleeve cut in one with the bodice.
Skirts are narrow and straight, though the veiling is usually full, over a clinging skirt of satin or other silk.

A Charming Woman.

is one who is lovely in face, form, mind and temper. But it is hard for a woman to be charming without health. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation and kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. But, Elsie's Bitters always prove a godsend to women who want health, beauty and friends. They cleanse the stomach, liver and kidneys, purify the blood, give strong nerves, bracing nerve breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion and perfect health. Try them 30c at all druggists.

Do You Get Up With a Lame Back?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root fulfills almost every wish an overcoming rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special experiment has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble.

When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and address to
Dr. Kilmer & Co., Home at Bridgeport, Bridgewater, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake remember the name, Swamp-Root.

THE WAY TO FIND GOD

By Rev. JAMES W. VALLENTYNE, Pastor First Congregational Church, Glennville, Ill.

To know God is the serious concern of more people than we realize. Our thought of God is that he wants to have his way known and to be so well known himself that men will love him.
It may therefore seem strange that God, with all his resources and with desire to be known, should not make himself clear to men who earnestly seek him. God has revealed himself.
He has done more. He has impressed himself upon man. He has exceeded this. He has appealed to man to recognize him and to accept his revelation.

The Bible is the story of God's outreach for man. I think of it as being the story of outreach and of revelation rather than being revelation itself.

He is revealed, but two facts pertaining to this revelation must be kept in mind if we are to think clearly on this subject. First, we must remember that this revelation has been and is being measured out of man as man grows, or, in other words, as man grows up, he comprehends more of God; second, revelation comes to the individual, and comprehension must then be individual. Then the individual teaches what he believes to be revealed truth.

This comprehending has not always been equal in measure, and, furthermore, the interpretations have been widely different. Contention has sometimes followed, and the fellow that differs from others has been given more attention than he has the truth until we have seen the almost incredible fact of men leaving off seeking God to argue with some brother or to persuade the public that the brother was in error.

This emphasis upon differences among ourselves has been confusing, indeed, to those who look to the professed followers of God and to his appointed teachers for help. Especially has this been confusing to those who thought of revelation as being absolute and complete. The situation has been much simpler to those who realize that revelation is progressive and never entire.

I am not sure but that every craving of the human heart as expressed in human life is God's yearning for God and the benefits that he provides. That yearning often pursues phantom and sensual outlets for its gratification, but the impulse, the hunger in itself, is for holy manna. The intellectual interpretation of the need and the proper supply for it are often incorrect, to be sure.

If the cravings of the human heart are calls for God, the deep hungering of human life are outcries for attachment to the Deity, if our loneliness and inefficiency and discontent are evidences of our need of God, can we not out of this learn much of who God is and of how to identify him as we find him?

We have another source of illumination that is very rich. Jesus said,
"He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." Here is our revelation. I speak to unitarian and to trinitarian.
This is no time to quibble over technicalities. We are not anxious about the points of criticism. We agree that Jesus represents God in his words and in his acts and back of both of these in his spirit toward us.
Let us study Jesus with the simple, single idea of finding gifts of God in him. In his attitude toward men you will find God's attitude toward various classes of men. In his ethics you will find heaven's ethics. In his ideals for human life you will find God's ideals. The gospels are a mirror of another mirror in which the likeness of God is reflected. But we seek more than the image. We seek God.

The access of your search for God will depend very much upon the manner and spirit of your approach. The text gives us two most valuable suggestions. The first is that we should feel after him, and the second is that he is very near every one of us and that our life is very closely related to him.

Prejudice and bigotry and tradition are three pirates. The first two are wholly unworthy and ought to be cast into the lake of fire. The third is a brother with much of merit, but is so often in bad company and so often binds with things that he must be judged anew in every appearance he makes.

A more aggressive attitude toward God is warranted and enjoined. Men are permitted and invited to appeal to God. This is the expression of great concern. God reveals himself as glad to hear the urgent appeals of men in great anxiety.

Allied to appeal is confession to God of weakness, of need, of desire.
The actual result of learning in teaching, and the man who knows of God and enjoys communion with him must teach others of it.

Some men find a great filling of divinity through quiet and secret surrender of themselves to God's way of life. Others find the same satisfactory peace by philosophically obeying their consciences of right and acknowledging God as their supreme authority.

There can be no results but exhaustion and probable disappointment from a striving to search out God. God is here. His presence fills all his creation. He is to be found through an attitude, a feeling out the spirit for him, a desire to learn his way and his simple obedience.

WOMEN MAY AVOID OPERATIONS

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The following letter from Mrs.
Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the danger of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia
E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago
I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for seven months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering
worse than before.
My mother advised me to try Lydia
E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it."

Orville Rock, R. R. No. 6, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women. Why don't you try it?

Rheumatism and Blood Disorders.

The cause of rheumatism is excess not cure the disease. Rheumatism must be changed the fiber of rotten wood.

marvelous cures. Rheumacide removes the toxins and acids. Sold by drug-

A SMALL WORD.

It Has Only Two Letters, Yet It Is Not Easy to Define.

To define one word in the English language one modern dictionary takes eighteen columns of small type. And this solitary word upon which the dictionary bestows such a wealth of elucidation is one that hardly anybody except a dictionary maker can define at all. The ordinary educated, English speaking person's knowledge of it could be expressed in about half a single line.

This second word is "of." If you were asked to define it—unless you are a dictionary maker or of an allied trade—probably you would have to reply: "Of? Why, of just means of." You might add desistently, "I always comprehend perfectly what it means when I see or hear it and can use it correctly in speech, so what do I want to define it for anyway?"

But if you were a child your actual mastery of "of" would stand you in no stead whatever. You would be set to digging out and memorizing the things the dictionary had to say about it, or the driest and least informing of them, as, for instance, that in some cases it is such a kind of preposition and in other cases some other kind and that prepositions have such and such properties when they don't have some other, every bit of which you would absolutely and marvellously forget at the first possible moment. Look over a child's grammar or "language" lesson, with its ghastly array of useless bones—Saturday Evening Post.

Perian Prayer Rugs. About 200 years ago small embroidered rugs were largely made in Persia, chiefly at Isfahan. These were prayer rugs, and on each of them near one end was a small embroidered mark to show where the bit of sacred earth from Mecca was to be placed. In obedience to a law of the Koran, that the head must be bowed to the ground in prayer, this was touched by the forehead when the prostration was made, and so the letter of the law was carried out. The custom still prevails. The Persian women who weave the finest prayer rugs seldom weave any other kind of rug.

What He Wanted to Know. "Here's an article in this magazine entitled 'How to Meet Trouble,'" said Mrs. Wedderly. "Shall I read it to you?"

"No, thank you," replied his wife's husband. "How to dodge trouble is the brand of information I'm looking for."—Chicago News.

QUICKLY MADE BLOUSE

An Attractive Model—Designed For the Woman With Little Time to Sew.

Women who like pretty clothes, but who have little time to sew, will appreciate the blouse pictured here. It has good lines and is a smart model without tucks or folds, which simplifies the making. The design is becoming to either stout or slender women.

This model can be duplicated in either sheer materials, such as voile, chiffon or marquisette, worn over silk slip, or made in soft silks. To copy this blouse for the average woman three yards of twenty-seven inch material, one and seven-eighths yards of goods thirty-six inches in width will be needed.

For use every day with a waist should be plain. For example, a soft silk that matches in color the skirt.

TO STOP PERSPIRATION.

An Astringent Lotion, Preferably Spirits of Camphor, Will Be of Great Help.

Certain astringent lotions may be used with good effect upon hands or feet that are inclined to moisture, even when the weather is cold, and in winter especially such moisture must not continue, for it does almost inevitably chillblains will come. Also once it becomes chronic it is far more difficult to cure, and the condition itself results in ruin to gloves, hosiery and the lining of shoes.

Persons whose hands perspire, even though cold, should never wear fur gloves, and it is better to avoid those having any interlining. The reason for this is that once the linings have become moist they induce further moisture of the hands each time the covering is put on. Giving room for free use of the fingers is highly important, for otherwise circulation will be checked and the difficulty cannot be controlled.

Spirits of camphor, rubbed either on the palms or on the soles as may be needed, is excellent for perspiration moisture. On the feet this camphor is to be rubbed in night and morning and also, when possible, just before going out of doors. Frictioning must be brisk, for on normal circulation depends improvement of the local condition.

Immediately after such application dust the surface with a powder made from one dram of oleate of zinc, two drams of subacetate of bismuth and ten grains of benzoic acid.

An astringent lotion to correct profuse perspiration recommended by a physician is made from five grains of chromic acid and one-half ounce of distilled witch hazel. This is specially excellent for hands and is dropped on the surface several times a day, rubbing immediately that the skin shall absorb it.

Any damp material, be it kid or cotton, shall be removed from contact with the skin immediately on coming indoors is imperative.

Exercises of both feet and hands should be gone through with whenever convenient. Hands are to be shaken and fingers bent in any way which will produce a feeling of warmth. For the feet, rise on the toes, and repeat this many times before twisting the foot from the ankle.

Mr. John Wesley Higgin and family, of Salisbury, visited friends in their old neighborhood last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Grover Farlow spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Willie Brown.

Misses Ruth and Nellie Todd and Edna Layfield were the guests of Misses Virgie and Maude Tilghman Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Gladys Hearn, of Upper Zion, and Miss Magdalene Malone, of Salisbury, spent last week with Misses May and Edna Reddish, at the Maples.

Messrs. Thurman and Horace Mitchell, of Salisbury, spent Sunday afternoon at the Maples.

Miss Emma Parsons, who spent last week with Mrs. Jan. Livingston, is now visiting friends in Pocomoke City.

Two of our young men don't spend their Sunday evenings in Salisbury any more, as the attractive parties have moved out here. We pity the one poor little fellow who is left to walk in alone. No doubt he wishes his girl would move out too.

Heat Takes Toll Of Thirty-Five Babies.

Fifty three babies under one year old, and most of them only a few weeks old, died during the four days of extreme heat, from May 16th to May 19th, inclusive, in Chicago. The city's mortality records showed that the babies died almost as rapidly as they were born. Unseasonable heat, spoiled milk, bad ventilation and improper care were given by physicians as causes of death.

The police also announced that nearly a score of children, boys and girls from 10 to 14 years old, had been reported missing during the hot days. The police believe many of them have wandered from the city.

The Red Headed Policeman

One day as the red headed policeman was patting his beat in a certain American city of 100,000 inhabitants a woman called to him from the steps of a house and reported that soon after daylight that morning, just as she had awoke and was making ready to get up, she had been frightened half to death by the sight of a large monkey at the open window. She had screamed out, and the animal had fled. Later in the day she had seen the monkey frisking about on the roof of the shed attached to the house next door, into which a stranger, who was evidently a foreigner, had moved three or four days before. He was a man of middle age, and there was an old woman with him, probably to act as housekeeper.

"And I'm asking you, sir," continued the woman as she raised her hand and waved it to and fro, "if it's the law in America that a foreigner and an old woman and a rascally monkey can move in next door to a respectable widow woman, who has paid taxes for the last fifteen years, leaving the monkey to run at large and scare people out of their seven senses?"

"It's an Italian, ma'am, who is your new neighbor," answered the policeman. "I was jabbering with him the day he rented the house."

"Then he's in the hand organ business?"

"Then he's not, ma'am. He's in the count business. He's had to fly from his own sunny skies to save his life. You ought to be proud that you have a live count living next door."

Three or four days later the police heard at the station to which he was attached of a bold burglary in the neighborhood. A burglar had entered by a second story window and made a haul of money and jewelry, and no clew had been left behind. This burglary was followed by another within twenty-four hours, and then came a "wave" of crime, though it was strictly confined to despoiling private residences. In some cases it was impossible to tell how entrance had been effected. In others it was plain that an open window was the route.

Of course the detectives investigated, and of course when no arrests followed they got a roasting in the newspapers. It reached the point where the chief of police was asked to resign as a man utterly unfitted for the place. In return he bounced two of his detectives because they could not pick up clews where no clews had been left. Then the red-headed policeman sat down to do some thinking. He thought of many a thing before he followed the line down to the widow who had told him about the monkey.

—Then he began to scratch that red hair and think the harder and finally decided to take a walk around on Sands street and see if the count still occupied the house. He reached the house of the widow first. Again she was standing on the steps. At sight of him she descended to the walk and said:

"So it's you, is it? I've been waiting a whole week to ask you if it's the habits of monkeys to go to bed like honest folks at night and get up at a reasonable hour in the morning or whether they are phandering all over town after midnight and coming home any time before daylight."

"In the wilds of Africa, ma'am," began the officer, but was interrupted with:

"But these are not the wilds of Africa. I've been doing some watching for these last few moonlight nights. I didn't know but the Black Hand would be coming for the count next door. I've seen the monkey come and go half a dozen times. He comes and goes by way of the shed roof."

"And what of it, ma'am—what of it?" asked the officer.

"I can't say, sir, but it's a matter that bothers me. I thought I'd speak of it and let it bother you."

It did bother the red-headed policeman for the next hour. Then he consulted with his superiors, and as a result two detectives were sent to interview the count. They didn't succeed in their purpose. He and the old woman had slipped out in a hurry an hour before their arrival. People who had seen them go said that they had no monkey along with them. In fact, the animal was discovered on the roof in the sunshine and fast asleep, but escaped capture. It was felt certain that he was the mysterious burglar, and a watch was set on the premises.

He came not back, while during the next ten nights there was a burglary every night to mix things up again. Then a boy solved the whole case.

Two blocks distant from where the count had lived an old tomcat had retired to a stable to die in peace. In his wanderings the monkey had come across him and, being full of sentiment, had sought to make the feline's last hours pleasant ones. He had continued to rob and plunder as before, but had deposited everything beside old Tom and was a mourner there when discovered and shot by the red-headed officer. More than $3,000 worth of stuff was found right there, and, leaving the respectable widow entirely out of it, the officer took on a new and prouder look as he said to himself:

"It pays for a policeman to have thoughts. If I hadn't had 'em this thing would never have happened, and it might have been twenty years before they made me a round-up."

M. QUAD.

Four and Its Multiple of Ten.
The number four was anciently esteemed the most perfect of all, being the arithmetical mean between one and seven. Omaha, the second caliph, said, "Four things come not back—the spoken word, the sped arrow, the past life, the neglected opportunity." In nature there are four seasons and the four points of the compass.

Forty, a multiple of four by ten, is one of the sacred numbers. The probation of our first parents in the garden of Eden is supposed to have been forty years. The rain fell at the deluge forty days and nights, and the water remained on the earth forty days. The days of embalming the dead were forty. Solomon's temple was forty cubits long. In it were ten layers, each four cubits long and containing forty baths.

Moses was forty years old when he fled into the land of Midian, where he dwelt forty years. He was on Mount Sinai forty days and forty nights. The Israelites wandered in the wilderness forty years. The Saviour fasted forty days and nights before entering upon public life. The same time elapsed between the resurrection and the ascension—Exchange.

How Roberts Won the Victoria Cross.
Roberts noted that a sower of the squadron with which he rode was in great danger from a sepooy with a fixed bayonet. The contest of sword against bayonet would have ended disastrously had not Roberts intervened and disposed of the bayonet. That was barely done when he noticed in the distance two sepoys fleeing with a standard. He galloped after the rebels and overtook them, and then he had a close fight for the possession of the standard. He cut down its chief bearer.

While wrenching the staff from the man's grasp with both hands the other sepooy turned his musket on him and fired. The musket was within a few inches of Roberts' person, and there would certainly have been an end of him had not the musket refused to go off. As it was, he rode away unhurt with the standard, and for those two courageous and gallant acts in close succession Roberts got the Victoria cross.—Cobden's "Life of Roberts."

The Cows of Muscat.
Muscat is famed as the hotbed of smugglers in the Persian gulf, the nearby desert tribes being regularly supplied with arms despite the efforts of the British patrol. But to the writer, reared on a Muscat farm, the odd antics of the cows of Muscat seemed nothing short of freakish. They actually eat fish. No grass grows, so the wily Arab teaches his family cow to subsist on dates and dried fish. The milk tastes queer to a foreigner, which is probably why the Arab likes it. He also claims it is richer and makes more butter, but more ridiculous of all is the deception practiced on cows when the calves are "weaned." A calfskin or sometimes a goat skin is stuffed with rags and tied not far from where the mother cow is anchored. This eddy of her late lamented offspring soothes her nerves and keeps her from "going dry," according to Arabic tradition.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Surprised Lion.
The man eating lions did not always get their own way. Five Sikh carpenters made a staging eight feet high, and on this they fixed their sleeping tent. Each night they ascended by means of a ladder, which they drew up after them. They were warned that it was not high enough, but were content to believe that God was all powerful. One night they left the edge of the ladder projecting beyond the end of the staging. A hungry man eater on the prowl observed this and, thinking he could not find a meal more conveniently elsewhere, determined to try how a carpenter tasted. Calculating his spring, he leaped lightly on to the projecting ladder, which, unfortunately for him, instantly tipped up and toppled over, both falling heavily to the ground. The lion bellowed at all the men, making for the nearest trees.—From "In the Grip of the Nyika," by Colonel J. H. P. Patterson.

A Test of Friendship.
A gentleman tried the following peculiar way of probing the ties of friendship. He sent letters to twenty-four intimate friends asking for a loan of a pound. Thirteen of the two dozen friends did not reply at all, five declined to lend the money, two promised to send it on the next day and did not do it, one sent his "last 10 shillings," and only three sent the full sum asked for. The applicant and all the "friends" he had written to are well off.—London Mail.

His Bad Break.

Thoughts.
Thoughts are much greater than things. They are vital forces and have endless effects. What you think today determines what you will be in years to come.

"It was not more than a minute later, while he was attempting to bring order out of the confusion on his desk, that a sudden prompting led him to go quickly to the door of the outer office. Snapping it open with a jerk, he caught the clerk in the act of untying the string which bound the thick packet of papers together.

"What are you doing? Why don't you bring it to me?" he called angrily.

There were still no signs of guilt in Collins' face.

"It was just going to make sure that it was the same package," he said innocently, handing it over at once.

With the packet in an inside pocket of his coat, Blount put on his hat, had himself shot down the elevator and a few minutes afterward was renting a private box in the deposit vaults of a bank in the next street. When he returned to his office another touch of the electric button summoned Collins.

"Sit down," said Blount, indicating a chair. "I have been reasonably kind to you, haven't I, Fred?"

"Yes, sir, very kind indeed," was the clerk's admission.

"Yet you have let some one bribe you to be dilatory to me," was the direct charge. "Who was it, Collins?"

"I don't know anything about it, Mr. Blount. If I was going to do the next minute I couldn't say anything different."

"You've got to say something different if you want to stay with me," said the master decisively. "Did you know what was in that package you put in the safe?"

"No."

"Yet you said you were untying it to see if it were the same package I gave you last Monday. You are lying to me, Collins. You opened my desk to hunt for the key of the cash box. Sit tight in the boat. I'm not going to fire you. I merely want to know who hired you to do this."

"If I did it I must have done it in my sleep," was all the reply the young man would make, and after trying a threat or two Blount dismissed him.

This was the first of a series of incidents all pointing toward the same conclusion—that some one was evidently determined to let him have no privacy in his correspondence. Unless he happened to be present when the mail was brought in it was pretty sure to show signs plainly indicating that it had been tampered with.

Blount could think of only one explanation, and he accepted it without question. The machine of which his father was the dictator had no conscience.

Some of its spies, doubtless working under instructions given by his father, were keeping tab on him, and the purpose of the eavesdropping was to get the statement made to his father across the dinner table in the Intervale cafe had not been an empty boast. The packet safely put away in the bank's deposit vault contained affidavits, sworn statements, evidences of fraud, and there were enough of them fully to substantiate everything he had said.

That evening there was a reception given by Mrs. Irving Gordon, wife of the reform candidate for governor, and Blount went, hoping that Patricia would be there. She was there, and the young man, in need of a confidant, wasted two good hours trying to get private speech with her. When his chance came it was only a half chance, since there was little privacy to be had in the crowded room.

"It is a question of conscience this time," he told her when she had agreed to sit out a dance with him in one corner of the canvas carpeted assembly room. "I have discovered positive evidence of frauds to be perpetrated in the election next Tuesday. How far am I justified in suppressing this evidence?"

"Mercy!" she exclaimed. "How you can bring a thunderbolt down upon one out of a perfectly clear sky! Is it ever right to shield criminals or criminals?"

"That is just what I should like to know," he persisted. "At the present moment I am shielding not one criminal, but a good many."

"May I know the circumstances?" she asked after a moment's consideration.

"Yes. There has been fraudulent registration in a number of the state legislative districts, and I have secured positive evidence of it."

"On which side?" she asked pointedly.

"On both sides, I am sorry to say," he returned gravely.

"Whom does it implicate?"

"That is further than my information goes," he admitted. "I know only the fact of the false registration. But with a fully equipped political machine on the ground the inference is pretty plain, isn't it?"

"I suppose so," she admitted. "Yet you say the frauds are on both sides."

"That doesn't make any difference," he declared. "It is a fight for men and not for parties. So far as I can see, the machine picks its men quite irrespective of party. There is already reason to believe that some of the candidates who have the most to say now about the 'free ballot' and 'will of the people' are themselves the sworn henchmen of the machine, ready when the time shall come to vote yea or nay, as my father shall direct."

"I can't believe it," she protested, with generous warmth—"of your father, I mean. I am sure he has never authorized anything so despicable."

Blount shrugged. "Shall I publish this evidence that has come into my hands, or shall I continue to suppress it?"

It was the first time she had ever failed him. "Give me a little time," she pleaded. "Tomorrow—come to see me tomorrow. It's a dreadful thing for you to have to do, Evan—the most dreadful thing that could be imagined."

But here young Gordon, to whom the next dance had been promised, came to claim her, and Blount's hard won interview was at an end.

When he left the Gordon house, which was rather far out in the southeastern suburb, he meant to go direct to the hotel and to bed. He had been losing much sleep in the strenuous activities of the campaign, and it was beginning to tell upon him. As the trolley car was passing the Temple court, building he saw a dim light illuminating his upper floor office windows.

With all his suspicions reawakened, he dropped from the car and took the all night elevator to his office floor.

The sleepy elevator man let him out in the upper corridor, and almost immediately the car sank away out of sight.

Before Blount had taken two steps toward his office door there came the dull crash of a muffled explosion, and two or three of the glass doors in the suite were shattered.

Blount quickened his pace to a run, let himself silently with his latchkey through the door of his private room, flung open his desk and groped in an inner drawer for the revolver which was part of its furnishings.

With the weapon in his hand, he passed on through the swinging door into Collins' room. There was an acrid odor of high explosives in the air, and when he hurried through to the room beyond the fumes were stifling.

His first act was to press the electric button which turned on the lights.

The workroom beyond Collins' office was a wreck. Desks were broken open, the safe door had been blown from its hinges, and a man, with an electric pocket lamp in his hand was crouching in front of the wrecked cash box.

On the blazing wreckage of the lights the man sprang to his feet and dashed out past Blount, snapping the light switch, to leave the rooms in total darkness, as he passed.

With a savage exclamation directed at his own lack of presence of mind, Blount turned to follow, fell over a chair, picked himself up, and groping for the latch on Collins' door, let himself into the corridor.

There were no signs of the escaping man, however, and Blount ran hastily to the elevator and rang the bell until the sleepy operator set the machinery in motion and lifted himself to the floor of happenings. Here the incident came to an abrupt end. The elevator man had heard no one descending the stairs which circled down the elevator well from floor to floor to the street level.

Blount went back to his office, turned in a police alarm and waited until an officer came from headquarters. Leaving the man in charge of the wrecked workroom, he went to report the safe blowing in person to the captain on duty at police headquarters, after which he carried out his original intention of going to the hotel and to bed.

But for a long time after the post-midnight quiet had settled down upon the hostelry he lay wide awake, wrestling with this newest problem which had risen up to confront him, for now there was no longer any doubt in his mind that the long arm of the machine was reaching out for him personally and that sooner or later it must come to a life and death grapple.

COULD TRAIN MEN

For Public Office. Plans To Establish School For Municipal Administration.

Columbia University authorities have a plan under consideration for the establishment of a school for municipal administration, the aim of which will be to train men to public office. The plan has the endorsement of city officials and prominent educators. Mrs. E. H. Harriman has shown deep interest in the project, it is announced, and is expected to provide the necessary financial backing for the school.

The author of the plan is Dr. Willam H. Wilson, a sociological and political expert connected with the New York Bureau of Municipal Research. The school will mark a distinct departure, he said, "in the method of training young men to public life. The purpose is to take a step towards raising the qualifications for public office and to provide competent instruction for those who are ambitious to enter the service of municipality, State or nation in some other way than through a political organization or by means of 'pull'."

"The school will relieve New York city, for example, of the expense and inconvenience of teaching employees in many departments their duties by years of probation at liberal salaries. There is a continual demand for trained inspectors, auditors and other specialists who cannot be supplied by the political organizations."

"While details have not been worked out, the general idea is to have courses in accounting, recording, purchasing, bookkeeping and other important municipal work. Students will take up comparative study, changing methods in use in different departments and in different cities. Civics and economics will be covered thoroughly, providing a broad and liberal foundation on governmental questions. Laboratory work in the offices of the New York city government will furnish a practical equipment to the student."

Old Firm Occupies New Building.

Salisbury Advertiser, Salisbury, Maryland.

Gentlemen:—After June 1st, we will be located at our new address, 116 Market Street, just one square west of our present location.

For some years past we have been compelled to secure warehouse space some distance from our office and this has caused us considerable annoyance.

With our new and commodious building, we will have better facilities for showing our machinery and the crowded conditions that have existed in our business in the past, will all have been eliminated after June 1st, when we move to the above address.

We have been at the present location since 1855 and while it is with some regret that we leave our old stand, yet the continual growth of our business has forced us to make the move and we trust that our friends of the past will continue the valued patronage with us and which we have so much enjoyed. Yours truly,
A. K. Robins & Co.,
Baltimore, Md.

—The Diamond State Telephone Company has recently approved the appropriations of $10,000 for continuing the construction of toll lines plant in the territory of that company. This expenditure will result in a general improvement in the transmission over these lines and safeguarding them against the winter's storms.

RAIN'S DEARTH SENDS

Prices Of Hay Up. Farmers Throughout Country Are Fearful Of Unusually Short Crop.

The price of hay has risen within the last three weeks nearly fifty per cent, and the present outlook is that the high-water mark is not yet in sight. To lack of rain within the last few months is attributed the sudden soaring of the prices, for the farmers throughout the country, fearful of a short crop of hay this year, due to the drought, are holding back what they have on hand, with the result that there is a scarcity in the local markets and consequent high prices.

With proper weather conditions during last April and early in May as regards rain, the hay would by now have gotten well under way in the fields. May and June are the months in which grain grows fastest and allows of the first gathering of the hay in July. But this year the grass has hardly started from the soil.

Farmers throughout the country are aware that the hay crop this year will fall far below that gathered other years, and are consequently holding what they have already stored away for better prices. Even should rain come to the rescue within the next few days, the conditions would not improve greatly, as the first crop for the year 1911 is already acknowledged as lost.

The situation at best as presented to owners of horses is alarming. Within three short weeks the price of hay jumped from $18 the ton, until $26.50 a ton for baled hay was being asked for and received, but only under protest. This advance of $8.50 a ton, or nearly fifty per cent, within such a short space of time is unprecedented in Baltimore, and the present price of $26.50 is the highest in the local hay market in Baltimore in a number of years.

And even the grain dealers themselves are disgruntled over the sudden rise in prices. Naturally such a large advance, coming so quickly, places them in "hot water" with the man to whom a month ago they sold hay for $18 and this week sent him a bill for $26.50 a ton for the same brand of hay. With every sale made now the dealer has to spend as hours explaining to his customer why he is charging so much for the hay and convince him that it is not a get-rich quick scheme devised for the special benefit of the merchant.

And apparently the horse is to suffer by being curtailed in his daily allowance of hay. This is shown by the falling off in the sales of hay since the high prices went into effect and clearly points to the fact that "Old Dobbin" has gone on short rations. But he will not be the only one to suffer as his owner suffers in pocket-book and the grain dealer suffers the loss of a large volume of business.

ALCOHOL INJECTION

To Cure Neuralgia—Dr. Killian Reports 68 Cases So Treated With Excellent Results.

True facial neuralgia is one of the most painful as well as one of the most persistent ailments with which the physician has to deal. Formerly no cure for it was known. Morphine and other drugs would relieve it or perhaps banish it temporarily, but there never was any certainty that it would not return.

The sufferings of some patients have been so excruciating that in desperation they have permitted the removal of the offending nerves from the face. Such an operation was performed in one of the hospitals in New York a few weeks ago.

In the last two or three years a new method of treatment has been tried with gratifying success. It consists of the injection of alcohol into the openings in the skull from which the roots of the nerves emerge. The relief from pain is almost instantaneous, and in some cases apparently permanent.

In other instances there are recurrences, but they may be delayed for a year, and usually are only slight. Sometimes the hypodermic injections are made directly into a nerve center called the Gasserian ganglion.

As might be expected, the operation is a very delicate one, and cannot safely be undertaken by the ordinary practitioner. Nearly two years ago, Dr. Otto G. T. Killian, of New York, read a report on the subject before the New York Neurological Society. A second report was made recently by Dr. Killian before the same society and says:

"The speaker said that since his last publication on the subject in May, 1909, he had had sixty-eight cases of neuralgia. In these he had employed the Schloesser method extensively, and in all of these cases the treatment was successful; that is, in every case the patient was rendered entirely free from pain for a certain time. The speaker emphasized the importance of differentiating true facial neuralgia, from so-called functional neuralgia, from hysterical condition or from psychosis. In only one case had he had occasion to use the ganglion injection. In all the other cases he made peripheral injections."

"In all the cases that he had treated since May, 1909, with the exception of one case where he injected into the ganglion Gasserii, he had succeeded with the peripheral method. So far as he was able to determine, the average time of freedom from pain was about one year, and then the recurrences were usually slight. In recurrences earlier than this he was inclined to think that either the treatment had not been sufficiently thorough or that all of the affected branches had not been treated."

COLONIZE VAGRANTS.

Plan Is Feasible. Secretary Hubbard Says
It Will Save Money And Character.

"Colonize vagrants" was the dictum of Robert W. Hubbard, secretary of the State Board of Charities of New York, as delivered in an address before the National Conference of Charities and Correction, Mr. Hubbard said:

"The only feasible plan and this plan is one that has worked successfully in Switzerland, Germany, Holland and Belgium, is that of the industrial colony, to which vagrants can, upon conviction, be committed for long terms. An interesting account of the colony at Witwill in Switzerland, written by Prof. Frank A. Foster of Cornell University, who visited it last summer, is to be found in the February 4, 1911, number of the Survey, and is well worth reading."

"It is estimated that the care of vagrants and tramps in penitentiaries, jails and workhouses in New York State, where they are kept practically in idleness, costs at least $2,000,000 annually, much of which could be saved under the industrial or farm colony system properly administered. It is believed too, that the saving in character by the removal of these unfortunate from the idle life and degrading influences in the penitentiary, the jail and the workhouse would be of even greater importance."

"For several years a little group of people in New York has been seeking to secure legislation looking to the establishment of the farm colony system for vagrants in New York State, but progress has been delayed because of the attempt of the State to live by indirect taxation, which has prevented it from going along with this and other measures of social reform requiring the expenditure of large means."

—Chas. T. Hewitt, the pastor of the Division Street Baptist Church, will deliver his lecture on the Pacific Coast Tuesday evening June 27th at eight o'clock in the church. The Salisbury Orchestra will render several selections. There will be an admission charged.

THE GOSPEL OF CHRISTBy Rev. MALCOLM M'LOED
Pastor, Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas,
New York, N. Y.

Perhaps there is nothing which the church needs so much today as how to get back to the simplicity that is in Jesus. Quite recently it was our privilege to listen to a sermon on the "Psychological Aspect of the Divine Fatherhood." The Master would not have spoken thus: "When ye pray say our Father." Why bother our brains about the psychological aspect of it, whatever that may be. Too apt are we to clutter up the old path with traditions. It has been patched and mended, some one says, with cartloads of texts and doubtful debris, like the Sleigh of Despond. The common people heard the Great Teacher gladly. He never soared them in academic strain. He never soared into the cloudy heights of philosophy. Never does he say "Learn of me, for I am learned." His gospel is a sweet and simple secret, if we do not insist it in definitions or dogmatism or make it hard and cold and the most unlettered, the most abandoned, can take the gift and feel as welcome to it as the wisest sage or loftiest moralist. Few and simple are the essentials which bring peace and pardon to the seeking heart. Every unsaved man here can have his life illuminated and transformed by the light of God, just now and just where he is, by simply opening the door of his heart to the Saviour. No need to make a crusade to some distant shrine. We are already in the realm of health. We are not ashamed of the mysteries of our faith. It has mysteries, and they are unfathomable and past unfolding. How came sin into the world? We know not. How did the Saviour come? We are as deeply and as desperately in the dark. Great is the mystery of iniquity. Greater still the mystery of godliness. The infinite became an infant. Today more perhaps than in any age of the world's history there is a tendency to place undue regard on the difficulties presented by the Bible mysteries and so in consequence to smile these mysteries out of court. Because the virgin birth does not align itself with the order of nature it is mythologized. Not infrequently the miraculous lends itself to amusement. Because the demography of the New Testament is an essential part of its account of the spirit world and gives us a dualistic conception of the cosmos it is ridiculed. But every mother knows full well how her child can ask questions every hour of the day that the wisest doctor of learning is powerless to answer.

The mysteries are not all in the Bible, not by any means. The little ones are there; the big ones are not there. It is almost amusing to note the ease with which a certain class of critics can ride over the rough places, the bowlders and canyons and chasms of science, with a hop, skip and a jump, as it were, and then trip and stumble on the rock of revelation. Mysteries do not bother us in the science hall. It is only in the church they become so serious. There are brain baffling mysteries in geology, botany, biology, astronomy, physiology and, indeed, every department of natural science that never will, never can be, cleared away, and a theology without something of the same stuff would be a somewhat lonely science. Never ought we, I repeat, to allow ourselves to be tossed into spiritual panic by the mysteries of revelation, because the mysteries of nature are so manifold more confusing. Science never blushes for her inability to explain. Why should faith? This is all true. But let us ever remember in addition that we are not called upon to comprehend the mysteries. We are not expected to grasp abstruse enigmas. "The world by wisdom knew not God"—never will know God. There is an easier and a more artless way—the way of trust.

I know not how it is that the sun creates the summer, but it does. And how Christianity makes a society sweeter is passingly wonderful, but the facts are unmistakable. Everywhere it goes there follows a new civilization, a new order, a new tone and new etiquette—finer, purer, happier, diviner. So I return to the text. I am not ashamed of this gospel. Why should I be? It is a message of love and sweetness. It will be my supreme joy to proclaim it to you from Sabbath to Sabbath. I am free to confess that I am ashamed of ecclesiasticalisms. I am ashamed of pharisaisms and ritualisms. I am ashamed sometimes of our denominationalisms. I am ashamed of heresy trials. Three hundred years ago two knights stood before the great emperor Charles V., one asserting and the other denying the doctrine of the virgin birth. The emperor bade them decide the matter with spears upon the field of battle. I am ashamed of that. I am ashamed of the idea of any church court or general assembly of Vatican attempting to decide ex cathedra or in public gathering what truth is. It is preposterous. Truth is not found that way. I am ashamed of the way that poor Copernicus and Galileo were treated. I think it was disgraceful. But when the church did these things it was because she had lost her Christ. It was not his blessed gospel of love. Of the gentle Jesus himself I never have been ashamed.

And, oh, may this my story be—That he will not be ashamed of me.

Sometimes Happens.

"Yes. That's the reason she kept me in kid's clothes till I was much older than I ought to have been."—Cleveland Leader.

THE GIRL WHO CAN

Do The Practical Things Of Life Still In Demand—Cook, Wash, Iron.

Major Gaynor, of New York, in an interview regarding the qualifications of a woman for marriage, puts forth some ideas that in certain quarters may be regarded as obsolete. The Major entertains the views, or, as some may say, the prejudices, that existed in the days of good Mrs. Thrale, the friend of Dr. Johnson; Miss Barrow, or later still, Jane Austen. Says the Major, speaking of the perfect housewife:

"Every girl ought to be taught to cook, to wash and to keep house, even though her little hands are spoiled. Men are afraid to marry today because the girls do not know these things. A man has a much greater affection for a woman who knows these things than for one who does not."

The pretty woman, it is sometimes said, is the one who will always win against the useful one. Nevertheless, there are still many men in this practical age and country, and even now in the countries of Europe, who will look rather to the value of the girl who can be of service either in the upward struggle of life, or in the case that may come later in some unexpected and direful emergency. In France, as we know, marriage is largely a business partnership and the young lady's dowry a consideration. So, too, to some extent in Spain, Italy, Holland and elsewhere. In England marriage is less a matter of bargain and sale and more one of sentiment. But nowhere is the alliance so much one of chance and caprice as in this country. Nevertheless, there are thousands of men who are making prudent marriages, and who will think of those very things of which Major

While there are many thoughtless and hasty marriages in this country, and many that almost inevitably lead to unhappiness and divorce, experience shows that the sensible alliances—those brought about by practical considerations—are far in the majority. American men are the most practical and least romantic in the world; their purpose is to succeed in life—to make and save money, if possible, to reach distinction—and when a man of this type—a type so universal determines to take unto himself a wife, he is apt to consider what will be her value to him in a practical way.

Hence, if the young lady upon whom he has his eye can "cook, wash and keep house," he will not be unduly of that equipment; for, in the vicissitudes of an American career, it may be a precious one. It is true that at the present day, cooking, washing and housekeeping may be given out, for the window cleaning, by contract. There is hardly anything that may not be supplied to order if you have the money, and the young wife, in her dainty little dress, may pass her time in playing bridge or attending millions. Yet this is not possible, even on a modest scale, without an income—a larger income than in numerous cases the struggling husband may be able to command.

So, after all, the girl who, if circumstances demands it, is able to make her own bread and prepare the dinner, and do her own marketing and keep the establishment in order is the one whose accomplishments are likely to make the most serious appeal. Her beauty may help what the French call the décor; but actual use and service are likely to weigh more than the aesthetic consideration.

COLLARLESS BLOUSE.

Maintains Its Popularity Despite Winter Weather.

Trimmed With White Porcelain Beads and Given the "Peasant Line"
It Is Most Appropriate For Afternoon Wear.

Showers of tiny white porcelain beads, which look as if they had been rough cast over the material and by some mysterious agency caused to adhere to the background, are a feature of the trimming effects in the newest blouses. That this tiny miniature halftone is used as a head to the material it adorns fills one with admiration for the patience of the needlewoman.

These wee round porcelain beads are particularly attractive in the pastel pink coral shades massed in solid form of broad bands upon a white background, and there are few more charming evening corsets than a black net one sewed with soft yellow beads in flower and foliage design and fringed to match part of the toilet in which black and gold are blended cleverly. Then, too, there are many shades of blue beads used.

There have been seasons when the separate blouse was on the whole more elaborate, but never has there been a season when it has been more effective.

The collarless blouse is still with us. Though chic Parisians have taken up the collarless models from the start with enthusiasm there are always women even in Paris who refuse to adopt unbecoming modes and in America there are plenty of well dressed women who sadly but firmly pass by the collarless models or else have them modified by the addition of thin guimpes rather than display an unbecoming throat in the pitiless light of day.

A walk through any shopping district on any bright afternoon will make the casual observer wish that more women were blessed with a knowledge of their limitations. When the collarless blouse is becoming it is charming, but few women past their teens wear it well in connection with a winter street costume with revers collars. It makes one shiver with apprehensions of pneumonia to see the stream of frigid blue necks exposed to winter gales this season. And even where the effect of a low neck tailored costume is attractive from the front view, often there is nothing to soften the hard line of the tailored collar against the bare neck around the sides and back. The ordinary tailored coat worn with a collarless blouse is a lamentably unbecoming thing from every point of view except in front.

If one fancies the collarless blouse for winter wear the hard collar frill or lace collar falling over the tailored collar and coming next to the throat. There are a number of such collars in all grades of fineness.

The peasant line and the veiling idea have strongly influenced the designers for the late winter and early spring blouses. Nine out of ten of the prettiest models shown for spring are of chiffon, silk, mousseline or marquisette. The idea is not new, but the treatment is, for the blouses follow the frock lines, and the best looking of the veiled models are exceedingly simple in line and have most of their elaboration, if elaboration there is, applied to the foundation, while the sheer veiling either hemstitched or beaded is arranged in the most pronounced simplicity.

Burial and Leather. Very attractive book covers, table mats, etc., are made of cut leather over burlap. It is difficult to describe the real beauty of these. Of course, the design is cut out in the leather, which is suede by preference, and the burlap is then stitched to it. Sometimes small metal beads, like tiny nuts, give the effect of old hammered work.

Instead of leather, velvet may be used for the lighter articles. Some lovely color combinations are obtained, such as green and black, or dark purple, brown and terra cotta, gray and brown. It is very easy work and extremely satisfying.

The Color of Water.

The waters of the seas, lakes, rivers and streams in general are very often colored. For instance, the waters of the Mediterranean sea is not colorless, but green-blue; also there is a brilliant red river in South America. The St. Lawrence, in Canada, is pale green and the Ottawa golden brown. Where these two rivers meet quite frequently whole broad patches remain uncolored. Here is a gold patch and there a green one. Otherwise than this water reflects the colors of its surroundings, and is so called "Emerald pool" in the White mountains is green because the birches on its borders in early summer are brilliant green. The Blue grotto, in Capri, Italy, shows a remarkably rich color, near to green-blue, because all the light received in that grotto comes through the water at its entrance, and, as has been said, the Mediterranean is green-blue. The water of the geysers in the Yellowstone park are also colored by natural mineral dyes. You can dye your own glass of water by a piece of the bloodroot plant. Try it. That will be a vegetable dye.—St. Nicholas.

Paderewski's Distinction.

There was a day when Paderewski's English was not fluent. One evening before a choice company in his elegant apartments in New York he was showing a few highly flattered callers how to do this, that and t'other on the keys of his grand piano, explaining in bed English as he went. Of course the man was present who is ever ready to supply a word when a speaker hesitates. The famous artist, landing with both hands as if he had just dropped from the ceiling, exclaimed, "Harmon-uy!" All applauded the perfect concord. He shot down again like a top-hammer and would have exclaimed again, but the word refused to come. "What you call—er—" "Discord," put in the supplier of words. Paderewski's hair stood straight out, and his face was white and red with anger. Jumping up from the stool, he sputtered: "Desecort! No! With me a desecort is impossible!" He would not be persuaded to touch the instrument again that night. The unintentional insult struck deep.

No Sense of Humor.

"Fog Eye" Smith of northwest Wyoming bore an appalling facade. His style of beauty was a blight. Depending upon his horrid exterior, he was in the habit of trying to awe newcomers. On one occasion, affecting some displeasure at the manner in which a pallid stranger watered his liquor, Mr. Smith announced, frowning, that unless he detected immediate amendment he would send the neophyte home in a market basket. "Which I'll sure tear you up a whole lot," said Fog Eye. Half an hour later Mr. Fog Eye was found groping about on the floor under the poker table hunting for his glass eye and muttering to himself. The stranger asked with some evidence of impudence what new line of sentiments Mr. Smith was now harboring. That injured resident, glaring malevolently from beneath the furniture, replied, "Which I sure do hate a man with no sense of humor."—Argonaut.

Origin of "Watered Stock."

The expression "watered stock," which describes so well the expansion of the stock of a company beyond the value of the property, originated, it is said, in connection with Daniel Drew, who was once the wealthiest and most successful manipulator in Wall street. Drew had been a drover in his younger days, and it was said of him that before selling his cattle in the market he would first give them large quantities of salt to make them thirsty and then provide them with all the water they could drink. In this way their weight was greatly increased, and the purchaser was buying "watered stock."

Hypocrites.

"I despise a hypocrite," says Boggs. "So do I," says Cloggs. "Now, take Knoggs, for example. He's the biggest hypocrite on earth. I despise that man." "But you appear to be his best friend." "Oh, yes. I try to appear friendly toward him. It pays better in the end."

The Final Transaction.

"Father," said little Rollo, "what is the ultimate consumer?" "He is the last person, my son, that an article reaches in its commercial existence."

"I know what you mean. He's a man who goes into a hotel and orders chicken hash."—Washington Star.

Queer Man.

"Some men are so queer!" "And you are going to tell me of one particularly queer one?" "Yes. It's Mr. Barberton. His wife used to beg him for nickels and dimes, and now he's cheerfully paying her a hundred a week for alimony."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Fooleries.

"Whitcomb is an independent thinker." "He is?" "Yes; he even dares to say the clock in the railroad station is wrong."—Buffalo Express.

Dying to Tell.

"Task, Dolly, told me the most exciting secret and made me swear never to tell a living soul." "Well, hurry up with it. I'm late for the office now."

His Status.

"Well, my little man," inquired a visitor pleasantly, "who are you?" "I'm the baby's brother," was the ingenious reply.—Truth Seeker.

Ella A. Critchett vs Charles H. Critchett.

No. 1921 Chancery, in the Circuit Court for Wicomico County.

The object of this suit is that Ella A. Critchett may procure a divorce vinculo matrimonii from Charles H. Critchett.

The bill states that the complainant is a resident of Wicomico County, Maryland, and has continuously resided in said County for more than eight years last passed; that on January 1st, 1896, she was married to respondent; that from said marriage were born two daughters, Annie L. and May E. aged respectively fourteen years and ten years; that though the conduct of complainant toward the respondent has always been kind, affectionate, and above reproach, the respondent, without any just cause or reason abandoned and deserted complainant, and has declared his intention to live with her no longer; that said separation and abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years, is deliberate and final, and beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation.

It is thereupon this 10th day of June, in the year 1911, by the Circuit Court for Wicomico County, Maryland, in Equity, ordered that the complainant, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Wicomico County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 20th day of July, 1911 give notice to respondent of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 18th day of August next, to show cause if any he has why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

DIRECT NOMINATIONS.

The voters are not to lose sight of the fact that they will be called upon to decide, at the coming primaries, whether or not they want future nominations made for them by a controlled convention, or have the chance and right to make them themselves as is the case this year.

The whole question is before them and they are the ones to render the decision. The question is one that each man should decide for himself and not be influenced either by those who make political profits or less of a business or by the aspirants for office who in many cases believe that they could obtain the nomination more easily if the old system was in vogue.

The direct primaries, as previously held—nor under the method to be used this year—are far from perfect.

In many respects changes could and should be made if the idea is to get the real sentiment of the people. Nor is the Lee Primary Law free from the same criticism, but these could be easily corrected and the law made in such shape as to perform to a great extent what it should do.

CROWNING A KING.

This week England was at an enormous expenditure of money in crowning her new King.

Although a monarchy England does not seem to suffer under her form of government, and the personal liberties of her subjects are as jealously guarded and protected as they are here in the "Land of the Free."

Outside of the cost of supporting the royal family, she seems to have but little to complain of, and by having a certain stable head it is not by any means a certain fact that she pays for more than she gets. If anything, England in her form of government, is more Democratic than we are. Public opinion and public sentiment is the only law that is recognized, and her lawmakers and courts are not limited by any constitution.

The bars are down, the gates are open and the people have only to say what they want and at once they can have it. No law, once passed, can be knocked on the grounds of not being constitutional.

Anyway England is having a big time placing the crown upon George V, and the rest of the world is busy looking on.

America will hope that his reign will be peaceful and that his subjects will be happy and prosperous.

An Episcopal Layman Gives Anti-Saloon League $1,000.

A prominent member of the Episcopal Church has subscribed $1,000 towards a special campaign fund of $10,000 to be used in educating and arousing the people to demand the passage of the local option bill to give them the right to vote on the liquor question.

This fund was started by four men who offered $1,000 each on condition $5,000 more was contributed or subscribed by July 1st. This latest offer leaves only $5,000 to be so subscribed, so that every contribution or subscription, of whatever size, received before July 1st, will secure for the League an equal amount of money from those large subscriptions.

The League considers this subscription from so conservative a source, it being the first time in the history of temperance work throughout the country that a member of the Episcopal Church ever made such a subscription for temperance work as aggressive as that of the League, to be a complete answer to those critics who have claimed that the League is losing strength instead of gaining because of its vigorous policy.

COURT JUDGE TOADVIN'S Decisions On Bench Upheld By Court Of Appeals—Two Important Cases.

The removed case of Isaac Saper-stien vs Annie Goodman, removed from the Circuit Court of Worcester County to this County, and tried before a jury at September Term, was appealed to the Court of Appeals.

The appeal has just been decided in favor of Saperstien the plaintiff who obtained a judgement in this Court thus affirming the ruling and judgment of this Court.

There was a legal battle in this case between the leading lawyers of the Circuit, there being nearly thirty exceptions to the ruling of the Court and which were all affirmed.

In this case Judge Toadvin sat alone the other Judges having been disqualified or not sitting. The Plaintiff Saperstien was represented by John W. Staton of Snow Hill and Ellegood, Freeman & Wailes, of Salisbury. The defendant was represented by A. P. Barnes and John H. Handy of Snow Hill. The cause of action was on a sale and purchase of goods by defendant from the plaintiff. The appeal in the Wilkins Manufacturing Company against James T. Young, Charles O. Melvin and others, partners trading as Young, Combonroe & Company, involving many legal questions concerning the repealing of Judgement by Solre Facias was decided on Wednesday by the Court of Appeals in which the judgement of the lower Court was affirmed. This case was tried at Snow Hill before a jury, but was taken from the Jury by the Court on the question of law involved, directing the Jury to find a verdict for the defendant, Young, Melvin and others. The case has been on the docket about ten years; many intricate legal questions arose in the progress of the suit. Many of the early rulings having been made by Judges, Pace, Holland and Lloyd when on the bench. Judge Toadvin also sat alone in this case, and rendered the final decisions on which the verdict and judgement was for the defendant. The amount involved was $8,000 to $10,000 claimed by the Wilkins Manufacturing Company to be due on a couple of judgements rendered about sixteen years ago.

Valuable Main Street Prop- erty Sold.

Saturday last was an exciting day on Main Street when the lot which seems to be a valuable piece of real estate consisting of Main Street property. The first piece sold was the building at the corner of Main and St.
Petet Streets, where White and Leonard do business. This is one of the most valuable pieces of property in Salisbury and was bid for eagerly by several persons resulting in the property being struck off to Dr. E. Hall White for $15,195.00. Dr. White has secured a bargain in the minds of most persons, as the property lies on one of the two most prominent corners on Main Street and is one of the best constructed buildings in Salisbury.

The second piece of property sold was the brick building on lower Main Street occupied by the Patrick Brothers as a clothing store. It is a two story building with dwelling above.
This property was also spiritedly bid for by several parties but was finally knocked down to Mr. W. H. Miller who bought it for the firm now occupying it, Messrs. Patrick Brothers.
This property sold for $4,670.00.

Short Crop of Cow Peas Prices Are Going Up!

The enormous demand for Cow Peas last year carried the price very high, and as the crop is very short and the acreage is rapidly extending, there are many indications which point to much higher prices as the sowing season approaches.

Whip-poor-will Cow Peas. The Whip-poor-will are very early maturing and are very popular in the Central and Southern States. They are heavy form, early maturing and especially desirable for feed.

New Era Cow Peas. New Era are a little earlier than the Whip-poor-will and make more vine than the Whip-poor-will.

Wonderfuls, Clays and Mixed Cow Peas. For Hay, the Wonderfuls or the Clays are more productive. They should be planted with an occasional grain of Corn, Sorghum Seed, Kaffir Corn, etc., which will prevent the vines from getting damaged by coming in contact with the ground.

Black Cow Peas. Black Cow Peas are a little earlier in maturing than Clays; they make a good growth of vine, are exceptionally good for medium or poor land and will stand almost any amount of wet weather without injury. We can also supply Shiloh Peas, Red Rippers, Blackeye Peas and Sole Beans.

REMEMBER—Bolgiano's Cow Peas are unquestionably the best. If your Local Merchant will not supply Bolgiano's Cow Peas, write us direct and we will tell you where you can get them.

FREE. Send us 5 cents in stamps to pay postage and mention this paper, and we will send you free a 5c package of "My Maryland" Tomato Seed, also our 1911 Catalogue of Seeds and our 1911 Poultry Supply Catalogue.

I have 20 varieties of Buggies, Wagons, Runabouts, Surreys and Speed Carts. Come see for yourself. We have new styles other manufacturers cannot copy under a year.

We have over 2,000 Wrenn Buggies in use over six years that did not cost the owner over $65 when new. I can save anyone needing a Buggy, Surrey or Runabout, $20. Come look them over.

Testimonial from H. Fillmore Lankford, Attorney-at-Law: "I have a Wrenn Surrey which has been in use twenty years, and it is a good one today. I had the tires out after using nineteen years."

Wrenn's make of Buggy is a guarantee that you get your money's worth. Why pay $20 more for an imitation when you can buy a Wrenn from $55 up?

Wagons, I have them—not the common ones, but the cheap ones. Cost $10 more, last twice as long.

Mr. Boudie came in last week and said: "Mr. Taylor, I want a Runabout. I bought a Wrenn Buggy from you ten years ago, and I am still using it." He bought another Wrenn. Best buy, cheapest on earth for the money.

I show more vehicles set up than you can find in any city or town in several States.

A Ticket Scalper's Story

I'm a ticket scalper. It's not much of a business and doesn't give a man much of a position in the world, but a scalper has a human heart, just like any one else. A scalper may feel inclined to bestow that heart upon a woman. I had that inclination once, but I'm never going to have it again. Women are the most ungrateful creatures in the world. A woman who would treat a man as one of 'em treated me, I don't fit to live on the face of the earth.

One day a pretty, melancholy looking girl of perhaps twenty-two came into my office and said she wanted to get to her mother, who was lying sick in Cincinnati. She said she was broke and wanted a ticket for about ten dollars. I had half a mind to give her a ticket, charging up the amount to myself, but that would be giving a stranger something like $10, and, while, as I said, a ticket scalper has a heart, he isn't the kind of man to give things away that he can't afford to give. I was looking among my old stock for something pretty cheap when I came across an unused half of an old excursion ticket, the limit of time of which had long ago expired. It occurred to me that if the girl worked on the sympathies of the conductor as she had on mine she might induce him to pass her through on it. I told her what I was thinking about and that if she was inclined to try it I would give her the ticket free of charge. She asked if there would be anything dishonest in such an act, and I told her I didn't think there would be; there would be no misrepresentation. If the conductor wouldn't accept the ticket the worst he could do was to put her off at the first stop and she would be just as far on her journey. If she got stranded in a strange place she could get on the next train and go farther on the same ticket, and so on.

She said she wouldn't do that, but if the conductor would let her go through on the ticket she would do so. The ticket had been paid for by some one, and she didn't think the road had a moral right to refuse it. I agreed with her as to that, and she accepted the ticket with heartfelt thanks and tears in her eyes. She looked hungry, and I asked her if she was going through without anything to eat. She said she'd have to, and I felt so sorry for her that I asked her to go out to a restaurant and filled her up with oysters, beefsteak and a lot of other things. I remember the bill was $3.50. Her train went at 12:05 o'clock, so I took her to the theater. If you want to love any one, just do something for 'em. The more I did for this poor girl the more I thought what a lovely home she could make for me. By the time I left her at the station I would have bought her a good ticket, but I'd spent all my money. I told her to keep up her courage and she'd go through all right. She said that I was one of nature's noblemen and I would be rewarded for my kindness to her. As the train moved away she waved her hand to me out of the coach window, looking at me with tearful eyes.

It wasn't a week before I received a note from the attorney of the road over which I'd given the girl a ticket stating that they had a case against me for swindling and must either shut up my shop or they would send me to state prison. I went at once to the attorney's office and asked to know what it meant. He showed me the ticket I had given the girl with a sick mother and asked me if I'd sold it to a deaf and dumb girl. I denied the charge and admitted I'd given it to a girl who could talk as well as I could. Then he told me how the ticket had been used.

The girl had poked it at the conductor when he was around, and he told her it was no good. She began to talk to him with her fingers, and, seeing her condition, he had given her a pencil and paper on which she wrote that a ticket scalper had sold the ticket to her for the regular fare. The road was trying to get a case to scare up scalpers, and the conductor, backed by the passengers, who were indignant at such treatment of a poor deaf and dumb girl, insisted that she should give the name of the scalper, which she did willingly, expressing the hope that they would punish him soundly.

Well, I told my side of the story, and when they went to the address the girl had given them for corroboration of her side they found there was no such street and number in existence. The officers of the road believed that the poor girl shrank from appearing against me, and had, therefore, thus concealed her name. But, not having any evidence against me, they didn't prosecute me, though I remained under a cloud with them.

Not long ago in looking over a newspaper my eyes were attracted to an item headed, "Working the Deaf and Dumb Ticket." The item stated that Mary Moyers had been arrested for traveling on railroad trains on worthless tickets and pretending to be deaf and dumb. She represented that the tickets were sold her by ticket scalpers, thus exciting the sympathy necessary to get herself passed, and often to draw forth a contribution from the passengers. I sent the clipping to the officers of the railroad she had swindled, and they wrote me a note of apology.

But I don't want any more women in my life.

MERRICK ANGE.

A "Foolish" Buddha.

Lady Dorothy Merrill, sister "Buddha" records an example of the so-called "malevolent influence" of an inanimate object upon the fortunes of its possessors similar to that said to have been exerted by the Hope diamond, now sunk beneath the waves. From the day a miniature Buddha, made of charming workmanship, entered her house, everything went amiss. Its installation in the drawing room was followed by a perfect avalanche of catastrophes. Within a week a son failed in business. Household pets came to tragic ends. A favorite pony was suddenly paralyzed, and this on the very eve of an election in which it was to assist by conveying Conservative voters to the polls. From which it is inferred that the Buddha was not favorable to the Tory party. A few days later a neighboring chimney crashed down upon a wing of Lady Dorothy's house, doing much damage. Shortly afterward the Buddha was sent on loan to the Indian museum, where, after some minor disturbances, it settled quietly down and has since remained.

Postponed Her Bath.

Miss Flora Shaw, as correspondent of the London Times was once traveling through Africa in a bullock wagon. The sun was blazing; the bullocks were slow; the dust was insupportable. She was making for a frontier town, where she anticipated the comforts of a bath. At the entrance to the place Miss Shaw, dead beat, dusty and irritable, found herself confronted with the ordeal of a public reception. The official read her a welcome. She was as civil as she could be. Then she boiled for the hotel. She gave but one order—"Hot water, quick!" She sat on the edge of the bed and waited. Some minutes passed. At last a black servant entered with a tin vessel, in which there was something steaming. Seizing it, Miss Shaw poured out a milky, odoriferous liquid. She turned to the servant for an explanation. The hotel was very short of water. As a distinguished guest a point had been stretched for her. They had sent her the water in which the fish had just been boiled!

The Victorious One.

An Indianapolis business man was marooned on election night in 1894 in an Illinois village, says the Saturday Evening Post. Naturally he was furious in the election. He wanted to find out whether Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Parker had won. He began investigating and discovered that the telephone girl quit at 6 o'clock and that the telegraph agent at the station knocked off work after the evening train went through, which was rarely later than 6 p. m.

At 8 o'clock the landlord shut up the hotel, telling his guest to take the room at the head of the stairs, when he was ready to go to bed. No news was to be had, and the business man went to bed, that being all he could do. Next morning he was awakened by the heavy tread of boots on the plank sidewalk. He threw up the window and asked the passerby, "Say, who was elected?" "I was, by heck," replied the man proudly. "Third term for constable."

He "Dassent."

The selection of the right word to convey one's meaning is sometimes more important than the rules of grammar. So it appeared to the bridge policeman, who is an alert, sociological student. An east side resident of foreign birth was taken before the magistrate in one of the police courts charged with a trivial offense.

"Tell him he must not do it again. He is discharged," the magistrate said to the policeman on the bridge. "The judge says you daiment do it. Understand?" almost shouted the policeman to the prisoner.

"Hold on, officer; I didn't dare him to break the law again. I said 'must not.'"

"That's all right, your honor. He understands what I said better than he would what you said," explained the policeman. And the prisoner seemed to think so too.—New York Sun.

Riding Away With the Bride.

In many of the border counties of England the quaint old bridal customs of hundreds of years ago are still in vogue. The parents carefully abstain from appearing at the marriage ceremony, clinging to the idea that the bridegroom still rides away on a roiling steed with his bride behind him as in the good old days. The brides prefer the custom to the modern method of being given away at the altar in the orthodox fashion.

Wanted the Proof.

"You look sweet enough to kiss," says the impressed man. "So many gentlemen tell me that," cooly answers the fair girl. "Ah! That should make you happy." "But they merely say that," she replies. "They merely tell me the facts in the case and never prove their statements."

He Got It.

Eva—As we strolled along he waivered a box of chocolates that I couldn't say the word "kiss." Belinda—And did you try? Eva—Yes, but he took the word from my very lips.

A Big Shadow.

We are told that the "wanstall" that throws a shadow. And so it does. It throws a shadow over your appetite when you find it in your food.—Exchange.

A good deed is never lost. He who sows courtesy reaps friendship, and he who plants kindness gathers love.

CHAPTER XV.

ON THE KNEES OF THE HIGH GOD.

IT was on the evening of the following day that the blowing in Blount's office in the Temple Court building that a one car special train slipped unostentatiously into the capital from the east, running as second section of the overland.

Coincidentally with its sidetracking, O'Brien, the vice president's secretary, dropped from the step of the car and made his way across the tracks in the yard to the nearest railroad telephone, which chanced to be in the yardmaster's office.

Fifteen minutes later the result of O'Brien's telephoning became evident. Gantry and Kittredge, the division superintendent, left their respective offices in the railroad building, met in the echoing train shed and walked together down the yards.

The vice president, sitting at the great table in the open compartment which served him as a desk in working hours, looked up and nodded when his two subordinates entered.

"You got my message?" he queried. Gantry answered for both. "Yes, and we were waiting. Your orders have been carried out. Nobody outside of the dispatcher's office and the few men in the yard crew knows that you are here."

Mr. McKivkar sat back in his chair, took one of the large black cigars from the open box on the table and passed the box across to his two subordinates.

"Light up," he said tersely. "I am due in Twin Canyon City tomorrow morning, and we've got to thrash this thing out in a hurry. Any change in the situation since your last report?"

Gantry shook his head. "Nothing very important. Blount's uptown offices were broken into last night, and his safe was ripped open with dynamite. That's all."

"Well," said the big man at the table, "what came of it?"

"Nothing so far as any one can find out."

To a disinterested observer it might have seemed a little curious that the vice president made no further inquiry into the safe blowing. As a matter of fact, his next question completely ignored it.

"What has Blount been doing this week?" he asked.

"He has spoken twice, once at Arlington and once at Hallsville. Collins says he has engagements enough to keep him out of town right up to election day."

"That's good," was the nodded approval. "He'd only be in the way here at the capital."

"That young man has been pretty nearly a frost," remarked Kittredge casually. "If he isn't a wild eyed fanatic, as Gantry here insists he is, he is deeper than the deep blue sea. I've been keeping tabs on him, as you directed, and he has worn out three of my best office men trying to keep cases on him."

"You are prejudiced, Kittredge," was the vice president's comment. "It was the best move in the entire campaign putting him in the field. I don't suppose he has accomplished much in a practical way, but we have kept the Honorable Dave from using him, as he meant to."

"I don't know about the accomplishment," put in Gantry. "There is a four ply mystery linked up in this speaking business. As far as I thought Evan Blount's sudden popularity dated back to some word sent out from your Chicago office, but when you told me it didn't I began to do a little wondering on my own account. I can't make up my mind yet whether it is pure popularity growing out of his speeches or whether it's the assisted kind."

"Assisted?" said the vice president, with a lifting of the heavy penthouse eyebrows.

"Yes," Gantry went on. "It has been too unanimous. Collins has kept me posted, and he says the invitations have fanned in thicker than the autumn leaves in Valhombrosa, and Kittredge's men tell us that the young orator has been making what figured as a triumphal progress all over the state—banks, receptions, committees, banqueting and all that everywhere he has gone."

"He's more than that," Kittredge put in quickly. "I've had one man keeping tabs on him—Farnsworth—who is as good as any detective that ever walked. He says Blount isn't half as innocent as he looks. His speech-making has taken him into every corner of the state, and Farnsworth says he has been doing a lot of quiet prying and investigating on the side-looking up evidence, was what my man thought."

Gantry began to look uncomfortable. "Perhaps I ought to have mentioned it before," he said. "Blount has been holding me up to the rack all along; says if he preaches straight we've got to walk straight. I've argued with him, but it doesn't do any good."

Once more the vice president's heavy eyebrows rose.

"You mean that he might be tempted to try compulsion?" he asked.

"Yes—er—in fact, he has threatened to do just that," stammered the traffic manager.

At that the shaggy eyebrows bent themselves into a frown of abstracted reflection.

"We must take care not to give him a chance," he announced finally. "During the few days that intervene between now and the election he must be kept safely in hand. It won't do for him to be around and in the way while you two are trying to do business with Hathaway and the others. Keep him out of the capital. And if you think he has been gathering evidence so to it that he doesn't get a chance to use it. How about that matter in the Fifth ward? We've got to make sure of Gryan this time."

Kittredge held up a thumb and forefinger tightly pressed together.

"We've got the city wards right there," he said, "with the Honorable David pretty safely cuffed. He is playing a deep game this time—so deep that it is altogether underground and out of sight. But we have him down just the same."

The vice president reached over and pressed the bell push which signaled to his train conductor.

"That is all I have to say," he concluded. "Keep your eye on young Blount and get rid of him for a few days. I'll leave the details to you. Get orders for me as you go up, Kittredge, and let me out as soon as possible. I ought to be halfway to Allkali by this time."

It was young Ranlett, a reporter for the Daily Capital, who told Evan Blount of the arrival of the president's car, running as second section of the overland.

Ranlett had tried ineffectually to get to the private car, having for his object the interviewing of the vice president.

Blount thought it a little singular that the vice president should come to the capital secretly, but he did not stop to speculate upon this.

Having something more than a suspicion that Gantry was not passing his threat of exposure up to McKivkar, he determined at once to seek an interview with the vice president.

Walking rapidly down to the Sierra avenue station, he saw a light in Gantry's office, and, meaning to be fair first and severe afterward, if needful, he ran up the stairs and tried the door of the traffic manager's office. It opened under his hand. Gantry was at his desk.

"Ranlett tells me that McKivkar is in town," he began abruptly. "Where is he?"

"Ranlett is mistaken—about twenty minutes mistaken," was Gantry's reply. "Mr. McKivkar passed through here a few minutes ago on his way to Twin Canyon City. His special has been gone some little time."

"I don't know."

"Did you take up with him the matter of issuing new tariffs—to do away with the preferentials or to level the public rates down to them?"

Gantry shifted uneasily in his chair and tried to evade. "There was very little time," he said. "Mr. McKivkar was in a great hurry, and his special was held only a few minutes."

Blount crossed the room and sat down.

"Think, we've come to the last round-up," he said gravely. "The nature of things I can't give you any more time. You've got to do something and do it quickly. Let's go up and see the editor of the Capital."

"What for?" demanded Gantry.

"I want you to give him an interview to the effect that a revelation of the freight rates is in process and that shippers having grievances should present themselves at once. That will at least start the ball rolling in the right direction."

"I should think it would," scoffed the traffic manager. "What you don't know about the making of freight tariffs would sink a ship. Evan. These things can't be done while you wait."

"But they've got to be in this instance," Blount insisted. "If you don't withdraw the preferentials given to the corporations you must do the other thing. For your legal notice of a reduction of the rates on the commodities upon which you are now allowing rebates, and I'll fight straight through on the line I've been taking."

"And if we don't?" queried Gantry.

"If you don't do one or the other there will be an explosion, just as I've told you. Of course you know that my safe was broken open last night—wrecked with dynamite?"

"Yes."

"Well, unluckily for you, the packet of papers which might otherwise have been taken or destroyed didn't happen to be in the safe. The documents are still where they can be used at a moment's notice. And, Dick, I'll use my ammunition if you don't play fair."

Gantry, long suffering and patient to a fault in a business affair, was not altogether superhuman.

"Evan, you are a frost—a black frost. You stand up so straight that you lean over backward. Don't you know that the Transcontinental is big enough and strong enough to chivvy you from one end of this country to the other if you turn traitor? I love a fighting man, but I haven't any use for a fool."

Blount laughed.

"If I have succeeded in making you angry perhaps there is a chance that you will do something. You may curse me out all you want to, but the fact remains, I'm going to explode the bomb, and it will be touched off far enough before election to do the work if you keep on refusing to make my word to the people good. That is all—the all. Now, will you go up to the Capital office with me and dictate that bit of information that I mentioned?"

"Not in a thousand years!" raged Gantry. "Not in a thousand years!" Nevertheless he rose, closed his desk and prepared to accompany the important political manager. Halfway along the first block he said: "There is no use in our going to the Capital office at this time of night. Blount doesn't get around to his desk much before 11. Let's go up to the club."

At the railway club the traffic manager developed a keen desire to kill the intervening time in a game of billiards. Blount indulged him, beat him three games in succession and consistently refused to drink with him. At the end of the third game Gantry gave a terse definition of a man who would force his friend to go and drink alone and went to the bar. Ten minutes later when Blount went after him he had disappeared, and the visit to the newspaper office was postponed perforce.
