Lady Churchill was in Holland, where she learned of the calamity.

Paris states that Spain is prepared to join the allies. King Alfonso is ready to personally lead the Spanish armies for the protection of the allied forces.

German troops began fresh attack on Malines.

In Memoriam.

POLLIT—In sad, but loving remembrance of our only child, Katherine E. Pollit, who died Aug. 29th, 1913; aged seven months and 28 days.

Only Asleep.

In a casket white as snow, All nestled among the flowers, Lies our darling blue-eyed girl, Who such a little while was ours. It is a grave, but oh, what care, For all our treasure lies hidden there. A mother's pride, a father's pearl, Lies buried with our darling girl. Oh, how hard we tried to save her, Prayers and tears were all in vain; Happy angels came and bore her From this world of toil and pain. By Her Mother and Father, Mr. and Mrs. Matre L. Pollit.

BEAUTIFUL DARING WESTERN GIRLS

As Much at Home on the Back of a Horse as a City Girl in a Trolley Car.

In no part of the habitable globe are there better lady riders than can be found in the west. A girl must be able to ride if she wants to visit her neighbors often. And how some of these young creatures can manage a horse! What pictures of beauty, daring and health they are as they come dashing along at full speed, playing games, chasing each other or racing just for fun. Indeed, horseback riding is as common and easy a pastime to a "wild Western girl" as trolley riding is to a city girl.

The Western girl goes everywhere on horseback. She can join a set of equine quadrilles or Virginia reel and gallop twenty miles on an errand without feeling the slightest fatigue. She keeps "company," goes to school, visits her "next door neighbor" (maybe fifteen miles away) all on the back of her favorite pony. Yes, the Western girl can certainly ride, as you will readily perceive when you witness the performance of the bevy of Western Beauties with Kit Carson's Buffalo Ranch Big Three-Ring Wild West Circus. Watch them in the Hippodrome Races; note their skill and fearlessness; be enchanted by their beautiful, spell bound by their achievements, and awakened to the pleasures and enjoyment of the competition by their silvery ringing laughter.

There are many things worth seeing with this splendid attraction, but not one prettier or more likely to be a gratifying afterthought in your memory than the lovely wild Western girl with sparkling eyes and rosy cheeks who flashed by you on the back of a plunging steed.

Will exhibit at Salisbury after-noon and night, on September 11th. Adv.

CHAUTAUQUA OPENS TODAY

All Season Tickets Sold—Excellent Program To Be Presented.

The Chautauqua is here—big and baggage. This afternoon will be the first production of the week and crowds of visitors from Wicomico and vicinity are expected to arrive in this city today. Their is no doubt that all who come will enjoy themselves as the program this year, is by far better than any ever produced in Salisbury before. All of the season tickets have been sold and the local committee will make their settlement at noon today with those in charge of the affair. It required a guarantee of fourteen hundred dollars to bring the Chautauqua here and had there been any shortage the local committee would have had to make it up.

As the affair draws near one hears expressions of delight on the street corners by those who how good the Chautauqua are. This year's features include Victor's Band, Ross Crane, the cartoonist, Judge R. N. Wadsworth, Dr. N. McGee Waters and many others of equal prominence. Probably the best recommendation of a Chautauqua is to hear people have seen one before speak of it and everybody in Salisbury is taking how good this year's Chautauqua is going to be and nearly all agree that the program this year far surpasses that of any previous year. Well lets all go and see if the local prophets are right or not.

BACK TO SCHOOL AGAIN.

That Will Be The Slogan On Monday—Local High School Being Repaired.

On Monday next all of the white schools of the county will open for the year 1914-15. While many were under the impression that school would not open until Tuesday, Monday being Labor Day, this impression was wrong and on Monday all school children will be compelled to return to their work.

While repairs are being made in the local High School it will not materially interfere with the opening of the school and Supt. Holloway states that all scholars applyng will be taken care of.

MR. J. H. PARKER DEAD.

Paralysis Proves Fatal—Well-Known Citizen

Mr. Joshua H. Parker, a resident of Salisbury, died at his home in this city about a quarter of four o'clock Tuesday afternoon of last week. Deceased was stricken with paralysis about three years ago, from which he never recovered, and two weeks prior to his death was seriously ill. He was 60 years of age, and is survived by a wife and six children.

Mr. Parker was a well-known citizen of Salisbury, being a son of the late Hiram Parker. He was for several years one of the most trusted engineers on the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad, and later became engineer at the plant of the Salisbury Ice Company. He held this position until stricken with paralysis.

Funeral services were conducted by Elder A. B. Francis Thursday afternoon, at two o'clock at the late home, interment in the Salisbury cemetery. Locomotive Engineers, of which he was a member, attended the funeral in a body.

TOMLINSON'S HOLD REUNION

One Hundred and Two Attend—Have Big Feast.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Tomlinson and family, of Salisbury; Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Tomlinson and daughter, Nettie, of Delmar, attended the second family reunion of the Tomlinson family last week at the home of James T. Ross, at Sickerlyville, N. J., and it was a most enjoyable one for the 106 persons who attended. Descendants of this old family were present from several states and a large number attended from Vineland. The home was prettily decorated with flags and greens, the word "Welcome" in large letters over the door greeting the visitors. The tables were spread on the spacious shady lawn and a bounteous chicken dinner was served. The guests also partook of a fine repast in the evening.

At the annual meeting which was held in the afternoon, Joseph N. Tomlinson, of Vineland, was elected President; Mrs. John Tomlinson, of Salisbury, First Vice-President; S. E. Tomlinson, Cross Keys, Second Vice-President; Mrs. J. N. Tomlinson, of Vineland, Historian; Lewis W. Tomlinson, of Vineland, Secretary and Mrs. Morton, of Glassboro, Treasurer. The family history was read by Andrew Ross, of Washington, D. C., and readings were given by Mrs. W. E. Hughes of Vineland, and Miss Hazel Tomlinson, of Blackwood.

RETURNS TO HIS NATIVE COUNTRY.

Father Jacques Leaves To Join French Army—Was Brother on Firing Line

Father Jacques, pastor of the Catholic Church of this city, has left to fight for his native land, France. He left this city Tuesday and sails from New York today. Father Jacques has already served one year in the army of his country and has a brother, a lieutenant, who is now on the firing line.

While the Father hates to leave the ministry of this city and the members of his congregation he is proud and anxious to serve his country when the latter is in distress. Father Jacques will be placed in the ambulance corps so he will still have abundant opportunity to continue his work of mercy among those in distress, physically and mentally. May a kind providence return him safely to his people in Salisbury again.

Night School to Open

Beginning October 8th, the Beacom Business College will conduct a night school, meeting every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday nights. The night classes will continue until December 18th when they will close for the year. The tuition for the term will be $10.00 which is certainly reasonable for the many advantages Beacom offers. The Salisbury College of Business (Part of the Beacom system) is rapidly advancing under the leadership of Mr. Hiron and Salisbury is fortunate in having a school of such high rank in her midst.

Dissolve Partnership.

Hendley and Miles, well-known insurance firm of this city have dissolved partnership owing to the fact that Mr. Hooper S. Miles has left Salisbury for Baltimore where he will attend the University of Maryland law school. Mr. Hendley will now manage the company's affairs alone and the clients of the firm will receive the same courteous treatment that they have always received.

PITTSVILLE LAD INJURED

G. A. Shockley's Son Hurt—Kicked By Horse.

The four-year-old son of Mr. George A. Shockley, of Pittsville, was seriously injured Sunday afternoon by being kicked in the forehead by a horse. The child was rendered unconscious for several hours. His condition is now somewhat improved, and the attending physician, Dr. Freeny, hopes for his recovery.

The child had accompanied his brother, Frank, to the stable for the purpose of watering the horses. Frank led one of the horses out into the pound; the animal reared and jerked the halter from the boy's hand, at the same time kicking furiously. The animal's heels struck the four-year-old son in the forehead, leaving the impression of the iron shoe on the forehead. It was at first feared the child's skull had been fractured.

DICKERSON MILLING COMPANY OPENS

New Plant Now in Operation—Mr. Homer V. Dickerson in Charge.

The new plant of the Dickerson Milling Company on Mill street began operations Monday and everything went off as smoothly as could be expected, considering the fact that the machinery is entirely new and stiff. This mill is equipped with the latest machinery built by the Midget-Marvel Company, and has a capacity of 50 barrels of flour daily. In addition to the manufacture of roller process flour, the mill will turn out meal, bran, hominy, buckwheat flour, &c.

The machinery is driven exclusively by electricity, two motors, 10 and 15 horse power, respectively, being used. The entire equipment is first class. The company will begin at once the erection of an elevator large enough to store 20,000 bushels of wheat. Side tracks from the B. & A. Railway will be run to the mill and elevator, so that stock can be received and the manufactured product dispatched with very little handling. Mr. Homer Dickerson is managing the new enterprise.

The annual award of scholarships to the State Normal School to young women who desire to qualify themselves for the teaching profession was made at a meeting of the State School Board, held in the Hotel Renert, Baltimore, last Wednesday. Among the scholarships awarded were the following in Wicomico County: Esther Clark, Nardela Springs; Mary Louise Malone, Allen; Pauline Wilson, Hebron; Grace M. Pusey, Bivalve.

PROGRESSIVE DEMOCRAT!

STANDS ON HIS RECORD

Friend of The Oysterman---Champion of Good Roads---An Experienced Legislator.

SENATOR JESSE D. PRICE

Democratic Candidate for Congress.

Announcement of Candidacy July 9th, 1914.

To The Democracy of The First Congressional District:—

Disregarding my personal inclination, but bowing to what appears to be a very general demand, so insistent as to become a party duty, I have determined to become a candidate to succeed the Hon. J. Harry Covington for his unexpired term in the 63rd Congress of the United States, according to his announced intention to resign therefrom, and also as a candidate for the 64th Congress of the United States, beginning March 4th, 1915, subject to the will and pleasure of the Democratic voters of the First District of Maryland in the approaching Congressional Primaries.

In making this announcement I desire to make it plain that I am not a candidate of any faction of the party, but shall make my appeal to all Democrats regardless of past or present affiliation; for should I be honored with the nomination it will be my purpose to make a determined and aggressive campaign throughout the District against the common enemy which cannot be made wholly effective without a united and harmonious Democracy behind me.

To this end I shall endeavor to make my campaign for the nomination of such a character as not to be offensive to any Democrat who may oppose me, or to any of the many able and worthy Democrats of the District to whose ambition my candidacy may run counter.

It is indeed an honor to represent this splendid constituency in Congress, and especially so at this time when the Democratic Party, under the able leadership of our patriotic President, is endeavoring to redeem the promises upon which we were given power.

Such a program of constructive legislation has never been proposed by any party in the history of the Nation. Much of the proposed legislation has already been enacted and is being made the object of insidious attacks by special interests which have been fostered by Republican policies. These interests are endeavoring to manufacture a public sentiment against these Democratic reforms. They are predicting disaster on the very eve of what promises to be a great wave of prosperity and in the very face of an indicated era of good times. This is evidently for the purpose of enabling the Republican Party to control the next Congress and to put a stop to the efforts of President Wilson and the Democratic Congress to completely restore this Government to the people.

No President in the history of this Nation has shown more patriotic devotion to the material interest of the people than has President Wilson. The people believe in his wisdom and in his devotion to their interests and they are trusting him and his party to complete this great program of people's legislation. This cannot be done unless the Democrats control the next Congress and in the face of unfair criticism and powerful influences we must not falter in our determination to do our part by furnishing a Democratic Representative from the First Maryland District who by voice and by vote will stand in completely removing the shackles from both commerce and labor. Who believes in the people's rule; who believes in the people's money being used for the people's needs; who would remove all artificial obstructions from the arteries of trade; and restore the great national wealth and resources to the use of all the people without discriminating legislation or favoritism; who will favor only fair competition between individuals and favor only such legislation as will benefit not a part but all the people.

This is the goal of the present Democratic Administration. This is the aim and purpose of the Democratic Party and we can do our part in this great national service only by electing a Democrat to the next Congress.

I submit this is sufficient incentive to call for the undivided service of every Democrat at this time. I submit this is a service that any man may feel honored in rendering the people of his country and it is just such an incentive and the prospect of rendering such service that induces me to announce myself a candidate for this honor in order that I may if nominated and elected participate in the completion of this program of industrial, commercial and financial freedom.

Very truly yours, JESSE D. PRICE.

Since the above announcement was made Senator Price has made a canvass of the District and he and his friends are much gratified with the generous offer of support he has received and with the universal approval of his candidacy by Democrats everywhere. It is pretty generally conceded that his experience as a legislator and his record as a State Senator from Wicomico County and his grasp on great public questions as shown by his work in the Maryland Senate peculiarly equip him to represent this District in Congress at the present time. Great and momentous problems growing out of the European war have recently arisen. Questions affecting the revenues of the government and calling for the most rigid economies in governmental administration as well as in domestic affairs, and the protection and welfare of our people at home and abroad. These conditions have given excuse for greedy corporations and selfish individuals to exploit our people for profit and the promptness and firmness with which the present Democratic administration has come to the rescue of our people is gratifying and is but another illustration of the determination of the Democratic Party under President Wilson to fully emancipate the American people from injustice and oppression and inspire hope in the hearts of the youth of our land that "equality of opportunity" is to become a reality. Senator Price is a firm, life long believer in these Democratic doctrines and the efforts of the present administration have met his hearty approval. While

A Good Hay Crop is a Money Getter

Can Be Insured By Up-To-Date Methods of Soil Preparation and Seeding.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Compared with wheat, the value per acre of the hay crop in this State is higher and practically equal to that of corn, yet the methods commonly employed in producing the crop are no different now from what they were 50 years ago.

As a result the yield of the hay during this time has remained practically the same while the quality if anything has deteriorated.

The remedy for this condition is simple. It is to be found in a change of cultural methods. Instead of seeding timothy in the fall with wheat, and adding clover in the early spring, the wheat should be seeded without the grass, and after harvest, the stubbles should be plowed down and timothy and clover seeded without a nurse crop. There is no better time for doing this than the latter part of July or early August in the mountain sections to early September in the southern and eastern counties of the State. If the seeding cannot be done during or before early September, then the clover should be left out as it is very apt to winter kill if seeded later.

To be successful the land should be plowed as early as possible, and worked into a fine, firm seed bed. When seeded under such conditions full crops of first class hay free from weeds may be expected the following season. The yield will be enough higher over seeding the old way, to pay for the extra labor in preparing the land. What is more, the second season the crop will be much better than if it had been seeded in wheat.

A good rate of seeding is timothy, 8 to 12 pounds; red clover, 6 to 8 pounds; and red top, 2 to 3 pounds. If red clover is not doing well on the farm then 4 to 6 pounds of alsike clover should be substituted for the red clover.

The seed may be mixed together and sown through the grass seeding attachment of the wheat drill, or other device for seeding grass, but the stand of clover will be a little more uniform if it is sown separately. The seed should always be covered lightly with a spike tooth harrow, weeder or brush drag.

LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES

They Are Closing Observing Public Health Conditions

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

According to this it would seem that a medicine for the kidneys, possessing real healing and curative properties, would be a blessing to thousands.

Dr. Kilmer and Co., Binghamton, N. Y., who prepare Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the well known kidney, liver and bladder remedy, claim that judging from evidence received from from druggists everywhere, who are constantly in touch with their customers, and also indisputable proof in the form of grateful testimonial letters from thousands of reliable citizens, this preparation is remarkably successful in sickness caused by kidney and bladder troubles. Every interesting statement they receive regarding Swamp-Root is investigated and no testimonial is published unless the party who sends it is reported of good character. They have on file many sworn statements of recoveries in the most distressing cases. They state that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is mild and gentle in its action and its healing influence is soon noticed in most cases.

THE WICOMICO OIL & GAS CO.

Invites your co-operation and assistance in developing what it confidently believes will prove to be one of Maryland's richest industries. The existence of Natural Gas is an indication of Oil. That fact cannot be disputed. WE HAVE THE GAS, WHY NOT THE OIL?

THE Organization of this Company was not the result of hasty conclusions. Carefully, step by step, the Company has felt its way. Following Davy Crockett, WE WANT TO BE SURE WE WERE RIGHT, and then go ahead. If scientific research, expert opinion of experienced oil men and mining engineers count for anything the Parsonburg Ridge is rich in deposits of crude petroleum.

The Necessary Machinery for Drilling Has Been Purchased and Immediate Shipment Ordered

Despite knocks, despite skepticism, we are going ahead, strong in the faith and the absolute courage of our convictions. The Company is honestly and economically managed, and if any man doubts it let him come and see. No absolute guarantee as yet can be given that we will strike oil; when that time arrives you will pay $100 for stock that you can buy now for $1; neither can we drill with teaspoons or buy derricks at the 5 and 10 cent store.

Prove your patriotism and business acumen by subscribing to-day for as many shares as you can afford to take while the price remain at $1 per share

This Is Strictly A Business Proposition

Fraught with possibilities so bright that you have never realized what it would mean to you or your community. An investment to-day of $50 might mean for you an independent income. Tomorrow may be too late. Now is time; we need your moral and financial support. The price of $1 per Share is not guaranteed for any specific length of time. Call or write Puzzler.

One of the strangest things in this world is why a woman who can trim a pencil with a pair of scissors is not considered competent to vote alongside of a man who can't bake a better cake on a hot griddle.—Dallas News.

THOUGHTS ON SLEEP.

We are somewhat more than ourselves in our sleeps, and the slumber of the body seems to be but the waking of the soul. It is the liberation of sense, but the liberty of reason, and our waking conceptions do not match the fancies of our sleeps.—Sir Thomas Browne.

Sleep, the type of death, is also, like that which it typifies, restricted to the earth. It flies from hell and is excluded from heaven.—C. C. Colton.

Sleep, thou repose of all things; sleep, thou gentiest of the deities; thou peace of the mind, from which care flies; who dost soothe the hearts of men wearied with the toils of the day and reftest them for labor.—Ovid.

STATION DESPAIR.

We must trust the conductor, most surely. Why, millions of millions before have made this same journey securely. And come to that ultimate shore. And we, we will reach it in season. And, ah, what a welcome is there! Reflect, then, how out of all reason To stop at the Station Despair.

Ay, midnight and many a position Of bitter black water have we As we journey from ocean to ocean. From sea unto ultimate sea, To the deep sea of seas and all silence Of passion, concern and of care! That vast sea of Eden set islands— Don't stop at the Station Despair!

Go forward, whatever may follow. Go forward, friend led or alone. Ah, me, to leap off in some hollow Or fen, in the night and unknown. Leap off like a thief; try to hide you From angels all waiting you there! Go forward, whatever betide you— Don't stop at the Station Despair! —Joachim Miller.

INFLUENCE.

It is well to remember that what you have that you can't help but give away is your influence.

Bear in mind that your influence is never wholly absorbed, nor does it disappear into nothingness. It counts again and again. Influence has no end.

The three greatest objects in life—friends, happiness, success—are each dependent upon proper influence. So it is good to know that even the humblest person is, after all, master of his own influence. He can send it out to scatter sunshine or shadow. It's his choice.

A man's greatest responsibility in this world lies in the way he acquires and gives out his influence.

Your influence today is sure to have a tremendous bearing upon the total work of the world. Your influence upon other people and the influence of other people upon you are sure to become a force and a factor in the complete work of your day and theirs.—George Matthew Adams.

SAYINGS OF SAGES.

Resentment seems to have been given us by nature for defense and for defense only. It is the safeguard of justice and the security of innocence.—Adam Smith.

The besotted man is lifted from one place to another and hath no place left to reason. He flees from one egg to another, so hatching nothing, but adds all his actions.—Feitham.

Where necessity ends, curiosity begins, and no sooner are we supplied with everything that nature can demand than we sit down to contrive artificial appetites.—Johnson.

SENATOR PRICE THE RIGHT MAN AT THIS TIME.

The Democratic primaries, which are to be held a little later, in Wicomico county and other counties of the district to decide who is to be the Democratic candidate to succeed Hon. J. Harry Covington as Congressman, is exciting more discussion and comment as the contest grows nearer.

There are three candidates in the field, Hon. Jesse D. Price, of Wicomico; Mr. A. W. Sisk, of Caroline, and Mr. James T. Bright, of Queen Annes.

Of these, Senator Price, our home man, looms up by far the most prominently. By virtue of strong natural ability, of long and varied experience, he is recognized as one of the ablest statesmen that has sat in the Senate chamber at Annapolis for many years, and taken a leading part in some of the most progressive and constructive legislation that has ever gone on Maryland's statute books.

Our next Congressman should be able to fill the shoes of Mr. Covington as nearly as possible without spending too much time in getting a new fit. In other words, a man who has had all the experience possible in questions and problems of state and nation and proved able to handle them is the right one.

Mr. Price has had much experience in two terms at Annapolis in the Maryland Senate, where for the past two years he has been the presiding officer. His record there, particularly the last session, was such as to draw forth much favorable comment from the press and prominent people the state over, and many tributes of praise from members of the opposing party.

It would appear from his high standing in his own party, and record of most excellent service to the people of Maryland, that he would have had an unobstructed channel to the Democratic nomination this year. However, this is not true. There is now a fight on and it behooves Senator Price's friends to get busy and keep so until the votes are counted. Start in time. We have the right man, and it's up to the people to send him to Congress. His public record deserves recognition.

WAKE UP! ROY H. WATKINS, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

After the strenuous work of mating, hatching, and caring for the young chicks you are apt to lay back and take it easy just as soon as the birds get to the age where they do not die off as a consequence of every little neglect. I wish to caution you, however, not to do this if you expect best results next winter. While it is true that the evil results of neglect do not show up so prominently now, they nevertheless are present and will show up in a depleted egg basket next fall and winter when eggs are highest in price. Most any old scrub of a hen will lay well in the spring when everything is favorable to egg production, but it takes a healthy, strong, vigorous, well-grown bird that has had no set backs to produce during the unfavorable seasons.

CRIMSON CLOVER SHOULD BE SEEDED EARLY FOR BEST RESULTS.

Crimson clover should be sown broadcast any time between the middle of July to the first of September or a little later in the southern sections of the State. The best results, however, are secured when seeded early.

A good rate of seeding is 15 pounds per acre, although some farmers never sow more than 10 or 12 pounds. While it may be seeded in any cultivated crop the best results are secured when seeded alone on a well-prepared, firm seed bed.

A good rate of seeding is 15 pounds per acre, although some farmers never sow more than 10 or 12 pounds. While it may be seeded in any cultivated crop the best results are secured when seeded alone on a well-prepared, firm seed bed.

CRIMSON CLOVER SHOULD BE SEEDED EARLY FOR BEST RESULTS.

Crimson clover should be sown broadcast any time between the middle of July to the first of September or a little later in the southern sections of the State. The best results, however, are secured when seeded early.

METHOD.

The absence of method, which characterizes the uneducated, is occasioned by an habitual submission of the understanding to mere events and images as such and independent of any or all in the mind to classify or appropriate them. The general accomplishments of time and place are the only relations which persons of this class appear to regard in their statements. As this constitutes their leading feature, the contrary excellence, as distinguishing the well educated man, must be referred to the contrary habit. Method, therefore, becomes natural to the mind which has been accustomed to contemplate not things only, or for their own sake alone, but likewise and chiefly the relations of things, either their relations to each other or to the observer or to the state and apprehensions of the hearer.—Coleridge.

TYRANNY.

He who strikes terror into others is himself in continuous fear.—Cicero.

The tyrant's plea excused his devilish deeds.—Milton.

O mighty father of the gods, when once dire lust, dyed with raging poison, has fired their minds, vouchsafe to punish cruel tyrants in no other way than this—that they use virtue and pine away at having forsaken her.—Perseus.

The most imperious masters over their own servants are at the same time the most abject slaves to the servants of other masters.—Seneca.

THE FOOTPATH.

Ah, here it is! The sliding rail That marks the old remembered spot; The gap that struck our school-boy trail; The crooked path across the lot.

It left the road by school and church, A penciled shadow, nothing more, That parted from the silver birch And ended at the farmhouse door.

No line or compass traced its plan; With frequent bends to left or right, In aimless, wayward curves it ran, But always kept the door in sight.

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

THINGS THAT NEVER DIE.

The pure, the bright, the beautiful That stirred our hearts in youth, The impulses to wordless prayer, The streams of love and truth; The longing after something lost, The spirit's yearning cry, The striving after better hopes—These things can never die.

The timid hand stretched forth to aid A brother in his need; A kindly word in grief's dark hour That proves a friend indeed; The plea for mercy softly breathed, When justice threatens high, The sorrow of a contrite heart—These things shall never die.

Let nothing pass, for every hand Must find some work to do; Lose not a chance to awaken love—

Be firm and just and true; Be shrewd and light that cannot fade; Beam on thee from on high—And angel voices say to thee—"These things shall never die."

—Charles Dickens.

SAYINGS OF SAGES.

Men seldom, or rather, never for a length of time and deliberately, rebel against anything that does not deserve rebelling against.—Carlyle.

Recompense injury with justice, and recompense kindness with kindness.—Confucius.

If those who are the enemies of innocent amusements had the direction of the world they would take away the spring and youth, the former from the year, the latter from the human life.—Balzac.

The contemplation of celestial things will make a man both speak and think more sublimely and magnificently when he descends to human affairs.—Cicero.

SENATOR PRICE THE RIGHT MAN AT THIS TIME.

The Democratic primaries, which are to be held a little later, in Wicomico county and other counties of the district to decide who is to be the Democratic candidate to succeed Hon. J. Harry Covington as Congressman, is exciting more discussion and comment as the contest grows nearer.

There are three candidates in the field, Hon. Jesse D. Price, of Wicomico; Mr. A. W. Sisk, of Caroline, and Mr. James T. Bright, of Queen Annes.

Of these, Senator Price, our home man, looms up by far the most prominently. By virtue of strong natural ability, of long and varied experience, he is recognized as one of the ablest statesmen that has sat in the Senate chamber at Annapolis for many years, and taken a leading part in some of the most progressive and constructive legislation that has ever gone on Maryland's statute books.

Our next Congressman should be able to fill the shoes of Mr. Covington as nearly as possible without spending too much time in getting a new fit. In other words, a man who has had all the experience possible in questions and problems of state and nation and proved able to handle them is the right one.

Mr. Price has had much experience in two terms at Annapolis in the Maryland Senate, where for the past two years he has been the presiding officer. His record there, particularly the last session, was such as to draw forth much favorable comment from the press and prominent people the state over, and many tributes of praise from numbers of square-thinking members of the opposing party.

It would appear from his high standing in his own party, and record of most excellent service to the people of Maryland, that he would have had an unobstructed channel to the Democratic nomination this year. However, this is not true. There is now a fight on and it behooves Senator Price's friends to get busy and keep so until the votes are counted. Start in time. We have the right man, and it's up to the people to send him to Congress. His public record deserves recognition.

BLIND TIGERS CAUGHT

Were Carrying Fourteen Quarts of Liquor— Fined $50 And Costs

Two negroes, Elmer Miller and Archy Jones were arrested Tuesday for violating the new Gallon-a-Month law. The two negroes were caught at White Haven as they alighted from the boat with large heavy-looking antenae. Upon examination of the valises it was discovered that they contained fourteen quarts of whiskey and rye. The negroes were brought to Salisbury by officers Disharoon and Jenkins for a hearing before Justice Covington. Mr. Covington fined the negroes $50 and costs even though they protested that they did not know that the new liquor law was in effect yet. The negroes went to jail in default but were released shortly later as they succeeded in raising the amount of their fine and paid it.

FREEDOM.

There is only one cure for evils which newly acquired freedom produces, and that cure is freedom. When a prisoner first leaves his cell he cannot bear the light of day; he is unable to discriminate colors or recognize faces. The remedy is to accustom him to the rays of the sun.

The blaze of truth and liberty may at first puzzle and bewilder nations which have become half blind in the house of bondage. But let them gaze on and they will soon be able to bear it. In a few years men learn to reason. The extreme violence of opinions subsides. Honest theories correct each other. The scattered elements of truth cease to contend and begin to coalesce. And at length a system of justice and order is deduced out of the chaos.

Many politicians of our time are in the habit of laying it down as a self evident proposition that no people ought to be free till they are fit to use their freedom. The maxim is worthy of the fool in the old story who resolved not to go into water till he had learned to swim. If men are to wait for liberty till they become wise and good in slavery they may indeed wait forever.—Macaulay.

A GIRL'S A GIRL FOR A THAT.

Is there a lady in the land

That boasts her rank and a that?

With scornful eye we pass her

by

And little care for a that;

For nature's charm shall bear the palm—

A girl's a girl for a that.

The nobly born may proudly scorn

A lowly lass and a that;

A pretty face has far more grace

Than haughty looks and a

that;

A bonnie maid needs no such aid—

A girl's a girl for a that.

Then let us trust that come it must,

And sure it will for a that;

When faith and love, all arts

Shall reign supreme and a

that;

And every youth confess the truth—

A girl's a girl for a that.

He who does evil that good

The more common method of

SCHOOL GIRL

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Daughter's Health.

Flower, Iowa.—"From a small child my 13 year old daughter had female weakness. I spoke to three doctors about it and they did not help her any. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had been of great benefit to me, so I decided to have her give it a trial. She has taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound and according to directions on the bottle and she is cured of this trouble. She was all run down when she started taking the Compound and her periods did not come right. She was so poorly and weak that I often had to help her dress herself, but now she is regular and is growing strong and healthy."—Mrs. MARTIN HELVIG, Flower, Iowa.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you are ill do not drag along and continue to suffer day in and day out but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Food by those rebel powers that these array. Why dost thou pine within and suffer death, Painting thy outward walls so costly gay? Why so large cost, having so short a lease, Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend? Shall worms, inheritors of this excess, Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end? Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss And let that pine to aggravate thy store; Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross; Within be fed, without be rich no more. So shalt thou feed on death that feeds on men And, death once dead, there's no more dying then.

—William Shakespeare.

THE WAR PRAYER.

O Lord, help us to tear the soldiers of the foe to bloody shreds with our shells, help us to cover their smiling fields with the pale forms of their patriot dead; help us to lay waste their humble homes with a hurricane of fire; help us to wring the hearts of their offending widows with unavailing grief. Blast their hopes, blight their lives, water their way with their tears.

—Mark Twain.

MORNING IN THE ALPS.

'Tis morn, with gold the verdant mountain glows More high, the snowy peaks with hues of rose. Far stretched beneath the many tinted hills, A mighty waste of mist the valley fills, A solemn sea, whose billows wide around Stand motionless, to awful silence bound. Pines on the coast through mist their tops appear, That like to leaning masts of stranded ships appear. A single chasm, a gulf of gloomy blue, Gapes in the center of the sea, and, through That dark, mysterious gulf ascending, sound Unnumerable streams with roar profound. Mount through the nearer vapors notes of birds, And merry fledgelet; the low of herds, The barks of dogs, the helter's tinkling bell. Talk, laughter and perchance a church tower knell; Think not, the peasant from aloft has gazed And heard with heart unmoved, with soul unaltered, Nor is his spirit less enrapt, nor less Alive to independent happiness, Then when he lies outstretched at eventide Upon the fragrant mountain's purple side. For as the pleasures of his simple day Beyond his native valley seldom stray, Nought round its darling precincts can be found But brings some past enjoyment to his mind. While, Hope, reclining upon Pleasure's urn, Blinds her wild, wreaths and whispers his return.

—William Wordsworth.

RIGHT MOTIVES.

In determining proper motives of conduct it is easy to perceive that the higher are more commendable than the lower and that even an act of justice and benevolence loses something of its charm when known to be inspired by the selfish desire of human applause. It was the gay poet of antiquity who said that concealed virtue differed little from sepulchred sluggishness. But this is a heathen sentiment, alien to reason and to truth. It is hoped that men will be honest, but from a higher motive than because honesty is the best policy. It is hoped that they will be humane, but for a nobler cause than the fame of humanity.

—Charles Sumner.

MONUMENTS

IN erecting a monument, one should remember that it is not a mere mass of stone, but a memorial of honor that is to perpetuate the memory of the departed. Therefore, select the best material, look to its beauty of design, and the quality of material. Many years in the monument business has taught us that good monuments cannot be made at cut prices, but it has also taught us how to make the best monument at the lowest possible price.

We have on hand a complete assortment of designs, which we place at your disposal. We use nothing but the best stones. Come in and look at our stock of monuments built of Winsboro Blue Granite, "The Silk of the Trade." The ideal monumental granite.

your king. "Not with the help of armies nor treasures do kingdoms continue to flourish, but with the help of friends, and these cannot be gained by force nor bought with gold; they are won by acts of kindness and by faithfulness." And, moreover, "It is necessary always to live in unity with one's own; by concord the smallest things become great, whilst by discord the greatest are reduced to nought." Let him remember the example of M. Agrippa, who thought much of this precept which alone may make of your royal master a good brother, a good comrade, a good friend, a good king. Next to God let nothing be dearer to him than friendship. Let him always implicitly trust the man he once found worthy of his friendship and, according to the advice of Seneca, let him prove his friends in all things, but take care first to prove himself also. . . . Slow in contracting friendship, let him be even more slow in breaking them asunder and, if possible, never let him do so.—Petrarch.

NIGHT.
Mysterious night! When our first parents knew Thee, from report divine, I heard thy name Did he not tremble for this lovely frame— This glorious canopy of light and blue? Yet 'neath a curtain of translucent dew Bathed in the rays of the great setting flame, Hesperus, with the host of heaven, came And lo! creation widened in man's view.

Who could have thought such darkness lay concealed Within thy beams, oh sun! or who could find, While thy and leaf and insect stood revealed That to such countless orbs thou mad'st us blind! Why do we then shun death with anxious strife If light can thus deceive, wherefore not life?

—Joseph Blanco White.

WORDS OF WISDOM.
Reputations, like beavers and cloaks, shall last some people twice the time of others.—Douglas Jerrold.

—Epictetus.

Every tub must stand upon its own bottom.—Bunyan.

One of the grandest things in having rights is that, being your rights, you may give them up.—George MacDonald.

Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit and lost without deserving.—Shakespeare.

RESPONSIBILITY.
All persons possessing any portion of power ought to be strongly and awfully impressed with an idea that they act in trust and that they are to account for their conduct in that trust to the one great Master, Author and Founder of society.—Burke.

It is meant and drink to me to see a clown. By my troth, we that have good wits have much to answer for.—"As You Like It," Shakespeare.

Men's minds are as variant as their faces. Where the motives of their actions are pure the operation of the former is no more to be imputed to them, as a crime, than the appearance of the latter, for both, being the work of nature, are alike unavoidable.—George Washington.

THE ISLE.

There was a little lawn laet By anemone and violet, Like mosaic paven, And its roof was flowers and leaves, Which the summer's breath enweaves. Where no sun nor showers nor breeze Pierce the pines and tallest trees, Each a gem engraven. Girt by many an azure wave With which the clouds and mountains pave A lake's blue chasm.

—Shelley.

My Duty.
There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbors good. One person I have to make good: Myself. But my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy.—If I may.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

many have criticised the Mexican policy of President Wilson, Senator Price has ever been a defender and outspoken in his approval, and like President Wilson is an intense lover of his country and desires above all things the peace and prosperity of this Nation. All the public utterances in the career of Senator Price stamp him as the man to represent this District in Congress at the present time. His experience of eight years in the Maryland Senate, half of which time he was the recognized leader, and the splendid fights he made there in the interest of constructive and progressive legislation, make him the logical candidate of his party for Congress. A study of his record is convincing evidence of his ability to handle the many complex problems likely to confront Congress for some years to come. His fight for a complete system of State roads at last session stands out as one of the greatest fights in the history of the Maryland Legislature and under his leadership the people won. His speech on that occasion was a powerful arraignment of greed and dickerings and reached the climax when he dramatically declared "I would sooner go home and tell my people on the Eastern Shore that we could get no roads appropriation than to get it on such disreputable terms." It was his sense of justice that made possible the passage of the Shepherd Law which preserves the natural oyster rocks of the State for the benefit of the oysterman, the keynote of his speech being, "You may lease all the 'barren bottoms' but you shall not lease any natural oyster rocks." Senator Price's record of accomplishment of worthwhile legislation is commendable and has received the approval of the people of the State without regard to politics.

The "Baltimore Sun" commenting editorially on Senator Price's stand for a State roads system, said:

Editorial Baltimore Sun, March 14, 1914.

"We believe President Price of the Senate will be sustained by thoughtful public sentiment in both the city and the counties in his determination to push his roads appropriation bill, without regard to politics or deals. It is one of the last subjects which should be influenced by sectional or partisan consideration. * * * The Price bill makes all the concessions to Baltimore's demands which could reasonably be expected and it at the same time fair to the counties. It represents a State policy and a State-wide scheme of improvement approval by experience elsewhere and by the authority of scientific opinion."

On the same date the Cumberland Times says editorially:

"Senator Price, President of the Maryland Senate, has gone at the good roads proposition, now deadlocked in the Legislature, with his usual fearlessness and energetic, clear-cut methods. He recognizes that the good roads of the State must be a system if they are to serve the people and justify the enormous expenditures of the people's money, and in order that this may become effective at once he has introduced one of his characteristically fair and direct measures which forces the issue to the undivided attention of his colleagues."

The Wicomico News said editorially on November 19, 1914:

"Senator Price has offered a bill to complete the system of State highways and has worked out a plan whereby it can be accomplished without increasing the State tax rate. * * * The measure is distinctly a fair one and the Senator is to be congratulated that he has taken the time and put in the amount of hard work necessary to work out his problem on such a fair and equitable basis. Under the bill proposed by Senator Price the State highways will be completed within two years and there will be no extra burdens upon the taxpayers in the way of increased State taxes. His plans is the most feasible and equitable which has been offered and shows clearly that Senator Price is most conversant with the State's finances and his bill should be passed."

Speaking generally of Senator Price at the close of the last session of the Legislature, the Baltimore Sun said editorially:

"A Leader Who Has Led Well."

"In appraising credit for the good work of the Legislature, President Price of the Senate deserves a foremost place in honor list. He has disappointed the prophets of evil who predicted dire thing of him and he has justified the praise of his friends. Many of the best measures would not have been passed by the Senate had it not been for his effort and influence and there has been no suggestion of criticism of the way he performed his work as presiding officer."

That Senator Price's stand on oyster legislation is approved by the people who understand and are vitally interested in the oyster question is demonstrated by the following letter published in the Crisfield Times of recent date:

Oysterman Lauds Price.

Editors The Crisfield Times,
Crisfield, Maryland.

Gentlemen: Kindly permit me space in your valuable paper to call the attention of the oystermen of the Eastern Shore to the fact that Senator Jesse D. Price of Wicomico County, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the First Maryland District.

When we think of the valuable service Senator Price rendered us in championing the Sheppard oyster bill as President of the last State Senate, the oystermen of the Eastern Shore should support him in the primaries and general election, regardless of political views. Had it not been for his wisdom and his strong support the Sheppard bill would not have passed the General Assembly, and we would now be deprived of our rights to catch oysters from the natural oyster rocks of the State. The oystermen of Maryland owe Senator Price a debt of gratitude, and those living within the First Maryland District, which embraces the entire Eastern Shore, should show their appreciation of him by nominating him at the coming primaries and electing him in November by the largest majority ever given a Congressional candidate on the Eastern Shore.

A man who protected our rights and interests in the State Senate is worthy of support for a higher and more important post, and I feel confident that Senator Price would render us valuable service in Congress, just as he did in the General Assembly. He is entitled to the hearty support of the oystermen of the First Maryland District, and as an oysterman myself, I ask for him that support.

Very respectfully,
W. WALLACE ENANS.

Ewell, Md., August 1st, 1914.

Below may be found a few editorial comments from Eastern Shore Newspapers on the candidacy of Senator Price

Prices For Congress.

"Senator Jesse D. Price of Wicomico, and President of the Maryland Senate has announced himself a candidate for Congress to succeed Congressman J. Harry Covington. Senator Price's announcement of his candidacy came after he had received a petition from 2,500 signers in all of the District urging him to become a candidate and he yielded to the demand from what he conceives to be his duty to the party. It is believed that Senator Price will have the backing of all elements of the party and that he will be nominated and elected."—Chestertown Transcript.

A Word From Worcester

Hon. Jesse D. Price, President of the Maryland Senate and a candidate for Congress from this district, was in town on Thursday and met many of our people at the Fair. Senator Price is a Democrat of the deepest dye, a man of marked ability and will make an excellent man in the Congress of the United States. His record as President of the Senate is such as to warrant him the confidence and support of all good thinking people.—Worcester Democrat, August 22, 1914.

Price The Candidate Of All.

The prevailing opinion among Democrats throughout the Eastern Shore supporting the belief that Hon. Jesse D. Price, of Wicomico County, will be nominated for Congress in the Democratic primaries, the Republicans of the First District have about abandoned all hopes of electing an Eastern Shore Congressman, and the Republican nomination has gone begging. If the Republicans nominate at all it will be merely for the sake of appearances and not with any hope of success.

Eastern Shore Republicans have never seen but one chance of electing a Republican Congressman this fall—the nomination of a weak candidate by the Democrats and a general feeling of dissatisfaction among the members of the party. When Senator Price consented to become a candidate and it became apparent that he would be the Democratic nominee and have the support of a united party that proved to be the last straw on the back of the Republican camel.

It is doubtful if anything has contributed more to the admitted success of Senator Price in the primaries, or if anything will contribute more to his success in the general election than the fact that he is the candidate of no faction, wing or branch of the party, but just a straightout, sterling Democrat, representing the party as a whole and ever battling for its success and its supremacy. Senator Price wears no man's collar and he is fighting nothing or no one in the Democratic party. He is the choice of Democrats of every faction, all recognizing in him a man big enough to rise above factional differences and petty disagreements; and render valuable service to the Democracy as a unit.

Senator Price represents the kind of Democracy which puts the interests of the party above the interest of any individual, the winning of party victories first and the settlement of factional differences afterwards. He believes in the Wilson brand of Democracy and in the use of public power as an instrument of the greatest good of the people, and as the representative of the whole party he will enter the United States Congress for a period of usefulness to his constituents.

We have enough faith in the Democrats of Somerset County to believe that, regardless of factional differences they will unite in giving him an overwhelming majority in the primaries, and contribute materially to his success in the general election.—Crisfield Times, August 22, 1914.

Should Be Nominated On His Record.

The Democratic candidates for Congress in the First District have filed their papers and from now until September 15th, the day of the primaries the campaign will be warm and exciting. The News has taken occasion on a previous occasion to point out the fact that Senator Jesse D. Price of this County is entitled to this nomination on the record he made as President of the Maryland Senate for two terms. During his last term Senator Price was the author of more constructive legislation than any other five members of that body. He put aside partisan politics and legislated for the interests of the whole people of the State. The Baltimore Sun as well as the other Baltimore papers congratulated Senator Price after the close of the session on his able conduct of the Senate and the faithful manner in which he had worked for the passage of legislation which would tend for the good of all the people of Maryland. There were many opportunities for Senator Price to have played partisan politics, but he put these things behind him and stood out boldly for that legislation which would add to the progress of his State and her people. For this kind of clean, honest work on the part of a faithful public servant, there should be some solid kind of recognition from the people of the First Congressional District and Senator Price should receive this nomination at the hands of the Democratic party as a matter of justice and right.

Aside from these things Wicomico County is justly entitled to the nomination at this time on account of the loyal support and big Democratic majorities the County can always be depended on to give. Senator Price is a Democrat of the kind which goes to make a Progressive party and State and his nomination will mean the easy election of a Democrat to Congress from the First Congressional District this Fall.—Wicomico News, August 22, 1914.

Kind Words From Cumberland.

An estimate of the character and work of Senator Price prepared by one of the most prominent Maryland Democrats with whom he has been associated in Legislative work, and published in a Cumberland paper last November, is given below.

"He is one of those rare men who have in them the quality of making good in any position in which the wheel of circumstances happens to place them. In his time he has played many parts and played them well. He never had any time for preparation for life with college degrees, etc. His struggle began back close to the cradle and led over very hard uninviting road, but hardness is the mother of hardihood and it can be truthfully said of him that he had to make his way and he did it history. He held his degree from the University of Hard Knocks. And it is the wonder still of those who know him best how he was ever able amid the hardship and privations of his early life to so splendidly equip himself for public life and forge to the very front and hold his own with those who have had every advantage that birth, fortune, education and family prestige could give them. In the arena of State politics he has met all comers and has always held his own, and has established for himself an enviable reputation. His Democracy and love of his party amounts almost to religion with him. He will never be found in the fore of his party's fights."

The qualities of his mind partake of the stalwartness, vigor and ruggedness of his body. He is a born fighter, and never a quitter, and can always be found on the firing line when the fight is on and with it all he is very modest, even shy. He never showed himself to the front nor played nor wirepulled for position, neither has he ever hesitated to step forward to assume any position at his party's call and has filled it with a staunchness and dependableness Lincoln-like—there are no trimmings and frilleries about Jesse, he can always be depended upon to be on the side of right and of the common people from whose loins he sprung."

In view of the grave governmental problems likely to be faced it is highly important that a man of the ability and experience of Senator Price should be selected for Congress and it is likewise important that the Congressmen selected to represent this district should be placed there at the earliest moment, and it is therefore desirable that the same representative should be selected both for the long and short term. This is no time to pay compliments by selecting one individual for a short term of three or four months, and another for the long term. The same individual should be selected and begin to acquire the experience necessary to be of real service to the people. Holding this view Senator Price has announced himself a candidate for both the long and short term and if his experience and service to the people in the past are of any value they should be availed of at the earliest moment. Pointing with satisfaction to his splendid record as a public official and believing in his integrity and genuine Democracy, we confidently appeal to the Democrats of this District to support him in the coming primaries on September 15th.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE CANDIDACY OF

JAMES T. BRIGHT

Of Queen Anne's County

For The Short Term In Congress

Centreville, Maryland.

September 1st, 1914.

TO THE DEMOCRATIC VOTERS OF THE FIRST CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT OF MARYLAND:

Although I have been an avowed candidate for Congress for several weeks, I refrained from making a signed statement to the Democratic voters of the First Congressional District of Maryland, until I had a my certificate of candidacy with the Boards of Election Supervisors of the various counties of the district.

Now, however, that I have qualified, I feel it my duty to place myself fairly and squarely before the great mass of people representing Democracy of the Eastern Shore, and to assure all who are interested in the success of the present administration, under the guidance of the magnificent statesman, whole hearted Democrat and friend of the people Woodrow Wilson, that I stand unwaveringly, earnestly and sincerely behind those policies which he has advocated and placed in effect in the past; the work that he is now engaged in promoting, and his ideals of the future as expressed at various times in Washington.

In filing my papers with the Boards of Supervisors, I qualified for the short term in Congress, only. If elected, I stand pledged to give the people of the First Congressional District the best services of which I am capable; to earnestly and diligently endeavor to faithfully represent the section from which I am sent, and my hearty and enthusiastic support will be rendered unto the man who is now at the helm of the National Administration in Washington.

In view of the rumors that have become insistent throughout the district, to the effect that my candidacy for the short term might mean combination with some other candidate for the long term, I take this opportunity to explain the cause that prompted my action.

Long before the time for filing my certificate, I learned that there was a strong feeling existing among the Democratic voters of the District, that the interests of Democracy would be best subserved by the nomination of two men. The belief, I am informed, is general that every effort should be made to strengthen the ticket by placing two men in nomination. It is the law of tradition and precedent in this district, that when a vacancy in Congress occurs from any cause, two candidates should be nominated—one for the short and one for the long term.

The Democrats of this district have ALWAYS nominated two candidates under conditions of this sort.

At the onset of the fight, I felt confident that Senator Price would file at least for the long term, if not for both; and I was equally certain that Colonel Sisk would do the same. Consequently, with this knowledge and knowing the temper of the people of the district in favoring two candidates, I decided of my own volition, without any agreement, combination or alignment, to announce my candidacy and file for the short term only. Queen Anne's county has had little recognition from the hands of Maryland Democracy in a decade, and yet she has never wavered in her support of the party of Jefferson. At this time she is asking very little at the hands of the party, when she asks for the honor of sending a Congressman to Washington for the short term.

In submitting my candidacy to the people of the district, to be voted upon in the Primary election of Tuesday, September 15th, I am not unmindful of the responsibility which will rest upon my shoulders in the event I am chosen to represent the District; and, while realizing the fact I do not hesitate to assure all, that if sent to Washington my desire and ambition will be to represent ALL THE PEOPLE to the best of my ability and to conscientiously perform those duties which the voters of the First Congressional District may entrust to my care.

JAMES T. BRIGHT.

TAKING THE HORSE'S PULSE

Valuable Means of Assistance in Ascertaining the Nature and Progress of Disease.

The pulse is due to an automatic expansion and relaxation in the wall of an elastic tube—the artery—caused by the jets of blood pumped into these vessels by means of a force pump—the heart.

Each stroke of the heart is equal to one pulsation, viz: a rising and falling of the arterial wall.

In health the average number of pulse beats per minute is about 36 to 40. The larger the horse, the slower or fewer the number of beats per minute.

A very good situation to take the pulse is at the underside of the jaw. By rolling the tips of the fingers about a little they can be brought on to the blood vessel.

Don't press too firmly, nor yet too lightly. The animal must be kept still and quiet. In point of importance, the "character" of the pulse must be the best guide. That is to say, the blood vessel may impress us as feeling hard, soft, full, quick, small, wiry, regular or irregular.

In pulmonary apoplexy it may be beating 120 times per minute.

When properly taken it forms a valuable means of assistance in ascertaining the nature and progress of disease.

GARDEN FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Quick Growing is Secret of Tender Cleanness of Salad Plants—Keep the Soil Moist.

(By L. E. CHAPIN.)

Among less common sorts asparagus-beets are very desirable, as the entire plant may be cooked for greens when young, or the large ribs and veins from the older leaves may be cooked and served as asparagus.

Brussels sprouts belong to the cabbage family and the tiny heads that form on the stalks are more delicate in flavor than most cabbage.

Kohlrabi seems like a cross between a cabbage and a turnip, but if cooked when young and tender has a flavor like cauliflower.

Fetticus (corn salad) may be sown and treated the same as spinach and furnishes one of the very early spring salads.

Endive is another very fine salad plant, and the seeds may be sown as late as August for plants to use during the fall.

Dandelions, of the improved, large-leaved sorts are among the finest salad plants, and if cut freely for use there is no danger of their becoming a nuisance.

Celeriac (turnip rooted celery) is finer for favoring soups than the stalk-celery, and may be served in various ways.

Leks are as easily grown as onions and being less in favor are more desirable for some purposes.

Winter onions are very desirable because of the fact that when once planted they come up year after year as soon as the frost is out of the ground, and are ready for use in two or three weeks.

The Egyptian winter onion, or the perpetual tree onion are among the best of type because they are more hardy than some.

Okra is less well known than it should be. It is fine for use in soups, stews and salads.

Most gardens have rhubarb plants, but it is worth while to start a few roots of the "ever-ready" sort that furnishes fine stalks during the entire summer and fall, if given water during very dry periods.

With all these (and other salad plants), quick growing is the secret of tender crispness and to secure it, the soil must be rich, and have plenty of moisture.

Catalogues and seed packets furnish cultural directions and are explicit and easily followed.

INOCULATING ALFALFA SEED

Some Farmers Have Wrong Idea as to Use of Materials for Legumes —Bacteria Gather Nitrogen.

(By J. F. NICHOLSON, Idaho Experiment Station.)

The correspondence recently received by the Idaho experiment station would indicate that some farmers have a wrong idea as to the use of inoculating material for alfalfa and other legumes. These bacteria applied to the seed have no power to assist in the germination of the seed, in increasing the stand or in correcting detrimental influence that may be operating in the soil. Their sole duty is in gathering nitrogen from the air and turning it over to the plants on whose roots they grow.

If the soil is deficient in nitrogenous fertilizers, therefore, they will enable the legume to make a good growth and yield. If the soil, on the other hand, is sour, or contains alkali, then these bacteria will be of little use. Again, if poor seed is used, or too much or too little seed is sown the bacteria will not remedy these troubles.

These bacteria need not be used if the legumes already growing in any particular soil show the nodules on the roots. This can be determined by careful examination of the roots for the nodules on the same. New ground is frequently deficient in these bacteria and they should be applied artificially.

USING THE TOBACCO SPRAYS

Particularly Valuable for All Kinds of Aphids—Should Be Applied About the First of June.

(By A. L. MELANDER, Washington Experiment Station.)

The tobacco sprays are particularly valuable for all kinds of aphids, including those species affecting house plants. The woolly aphids, blackberry aphids, the leaf hopper, red spider, flea beetles and young scale insects all can be controlled by this spray. This makes probably the best spray for oyster shell bark louse, and should be given for that insect as soon as the young hatch, usually about June 1.

Although primarily a contact spray with tobacco spray kills by suffocation. For this reason it surpasses other contact remedies like kerosene emulsion or whale oil soap.

After an aphid has curled a leaf it is difficult to control it with other contact remedies, because the aphid is protected from such remedies, but Fun for the Baby, but Bad for the Tree.

A drip of tobacco spray on the leaf will give a fume which will prevent the breathing of the aphid, and this can be depended on, even though the leaves of the tree are badly curled. The tobacco sprays are coming more and more into general use. The depredations of the various forms of plant lice are so great that the most effective remedies should be made use of in controlling them.

WAKE UP

ROY H. WAITE

Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

After the strenuous work of mating, hatching, and caring for the young chicks you are apt to lay back and take it easy just as soon as the birds get to the age where they do not die off as a consequence of every little neglect. I wish to caution you, however, not to do this if you expect best results next winter. While it is true that the evil results of neglect do not show up so prominently now, they nevertheless are present and will show up in a depleted egg basket next fall and winter when eggs are highest in price. Most any old scrub of a hen will lay well in the spring when everything is favorable to egg production, but it takes a healthy, strong, vigorous, well-grown bird that has had no set backs to produce during the unfavorable seasons.

CRIMSON CLOVER SHOULD BE SEEDED EARLY FOR BEST RESULTS.

Crimson clover should be sown broadcast any time between the middle of July to the first of September or a little later in the Southern sections of the State. The best results, however, are secured when seeded early.

A good rate of seeding is 15 pounds per acre, although some farmers never sow more than 10 or 12 pounds. While it may be seeded in any cultivated crop the best results are secured when seeded alone on a well-prepared, firm seed bed.

METHOD.

The absence of method, which characterizes the uneducated, is occasioned by an habitual submission of the understanding to mere events and images as such and independent of any power in the mind to classify or appropriate them. The general accomplishments of time and place are the only relations which persons of this class appear to regard in their statements. As this constitutes their leading feature, the contrary excellence, as distinguishing the well educated man, must be referred to the contrary habit. Method, therefore, becomes natural to the mind which has been accustomed to contemplate not things only, or for their own sake alone, but likewise and chiefly the relations of things, either their relations to each other or to the observer or to the state and apprehensions of the hearers.—Coleridge.

TYRANNY.

He who strikes terror into others is himself in continuous fear.—Claudian.

The tyrant's plea excused his devilish deeds.—Milton.

O mighty father of the gods, when once Iust, dyed with raging poison, has fired their minds, vouchsafe to punish cruel tyrants in no other way than this—that they see virtue and pine away at having forsaken her.—Perseus.

The most imperious masters over their own servants are at the same time the most abject slaves to the servants of other masters.—Seneca.

THE FOOTPATH.
Ah, here it is! The sliding rail That marks the old remembered spot;
The path that struck our school-boy trail
The crooked path across the lot.

It left the road by school and church,
A penciled shadow, nothing more,
That parted from the silver birch
And ended at the farmhouse door.

No line or compass traced its plan;
With frequent bends to left or right,
In aimless, wayward curves it ran,
But always kept the door in sight.

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

THINGS THAT NEVER DIE.
The pure, the bright, the beautiful
That stirred our hearts in youth,
The impulses to wordless prayer,
The streams of love and truth;
The longing after something lost,
The spirit's yearning cry,
The striving after better hopes—
These things can never die.

The timid hand stretched forth to aid
A brother in his need;
A kindly word in grief's dark hour
That proves a friend indeed;
The plea for mercy softly breathed,
When justice threatens high,
The sorrow of a contrite heart—
These things shall never die.

Let nothing pass, for every hand
Must find some work to do;
Lose not a chance to waken love—
Be firm and just and true;
Be shall a light that cannot fade
Beam on thee from on high,
And angel voices say to thee—
"These things shall never die."

—Charles Dickens.

SAYINGS OF SAGES.
Men seldom, or rather, never
For a length of time and deliberately,
Rebel against anything that Does not deserve rebelling against.—Carlyle.

Recompense injury with justice, and recompense kindness with kindness.—Confucius.

If those who are the enemies of innocent amusements had the direction of the world they would take away the spring and youth, the former from the year, the latter from the human life.
—Balzac.

The contemplation of celestial things will make a man both speak and think more sublimely and magnificently when he descends to human affairs.—Cicero.

First Step is to Have Plot Situated
So It Can Be Given Same Treatment as Farm Crops.

The first step toward a successful garden is to have it so situated as to receive the same cultural treatment as that given the general farm crops. Progressive growers of today seek to eliminate, as far as possible, all hand-work in the making of their products. If this is a profitable procedure in the production of staples, it is of equal advantage in the growing of fruit and vegetables, writes S. B. Shaw in the Progressive Farmer. Too often the location is a small patch of fenced-in ground, near the house, where it is impossible to do any work except by hand. As a result the care of the garden is left to the women and children, yet what child really enjoys hoeing and pulling weeds or how many women on the farm can truly give the time and attention necessary to the profitable production of these crops, especially under such unfavorable conditions? In instances of this kind the home garden is not a source of profitable income.

Plan the garden to be twice or three times as long as wide, with the rows running lengthwise. In this way the plowing, harrowing and cultivating can be done in about one-third less time than it would take were the plot more nearly square.

Another feature to be considered is the arrangement of the permanent plantings of fruit trees, berry bushes or other crops that do not have to be renewed each year. If planted promiscuously throughout the garden they make it difficult to cultivate.

Charge That Damage Results From Sucking of Nectar From the Flower Is Very Unjust One.

Bees are many times accused of being destroyers of crops of different kinds, more especially the fruit crops. The charge that damage results from the bees sucking the nectar from the flower is a very unjust one, relates the Perdue Agriculturist, for, while the bee is taking the nectar from the flowers it is aiding greatly in the pollination of the flowers, making a good crop possible.

A complaint which is very often made is that the honey bee punctures fruits, apples, pears, grapes, etc., and suck the juices. As a matter of fact, bees never puncture sound fruit. They do, however, suck the juices from fruit if the skin is broken by some other means, thus using up fruit that is already damaged.

WAR NEWS OF THE DAY.

Indications point to one of the decisive battles in the world's history is being waged along the 160-mile battle front in France. Official statements from the allies and the Germans are lacking, but it is known that re-inforcements have stiffened the lines of the Kaiser's troops.

The brunt of the battle by the Germans is born by the latter's center, while the allies have strengthened their left wing to meet the onslaught of the Germans.

Official advices from Vienna state that the Austrians admit the loss of 120,000 men in the recent engagements in Galicia. This represents one-fourth of the entire command under the Archduke Frederick. German re-inforcements are being rushed to aid the forces of the dual monarchy, but the Kaiser's troops must cross the Vistula before they can form a juncture with the Austrian troops. The Russians have rushed a force to this point to check the Germans.

Reports from Petrograd state that Austria is prepared to desert her ally and sue for peace in two weeks. The same source states that the Russian troops have advanced in a straight line from Koenigsberg on the Baltic to Cracow in Austria. The latter place is said to have been evacuated by the forces of the dual monarchy.

Servia reports that an invasion of Hungary has begun. The Serbs have succeeded in crossing the River Save. Montenegrin troops are now in Bosnia. Premier Asquith has asked that 500,000 more men respond to the British call to the colors.

Great Britain, through Ambassador Page, has informed the United States that the United Kingdom will not consider peace until Germany has been decisively defeated.

Kaiser Wilhelm, according to the new German minister to Mexico, has told his subjects that Paris must be taken if the German empire is to survive.

Sir John French, in an official report to Lord Kitchener, has made a complete report of the movements of the British expeditionary army up to August 28. This compiles a series of retirements by the Anglican troops.

The British Admiralty officially announces that the cruiser Pathfinder was destroyed by a submarine torpedo and not by a mine, as hitherto accepted.

Tokio announces that Japan has joined with the triple entente in the protocol that none of the powers at war with Germany will make peace without the consent of the other parties to the agreement.

Paris reports that a French aeroplane caught in an air pocket above the Bois de Vincennes, fell, killing two aviators and four persons in the street. Four others were injured.

Turkey has notified its American ambassador that all conventions between the powers and Turkey conferring special privileges or restricting the sovereignty of the Porte are abrogated. Diplomatic circles take this as an indication that the Ottoman empire is ready to support Germany in the field.

Six cities in France have been officially proclaimed to be in a state of siege.

Tokio declares that the Mikado will send no troops into the European war zone.

Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm has been deposed from his command because of failure to achieve victory, Paris hears. The same source states that Field Marshal von Eichord has superseded the Kaiser's oldest son.

Berlin reports officially that 1,000 Russians and three detachments of Cossacks have been captured on the eastern frontier.

Copenhagen reports a German squadron of 31 ships steaming east along the Gulf of Bothnia.

A dispatch from Ghent says 40,000 German sailors arrived at Brussels during the past two days. This indicates that the German reserve is completely mobilized.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Business Transacted at The Monday Night Meeting.

The principal business before the Council Monday night was the opening of bids for street improvements. The contracts were not awarded for the alleged reason that the councilmen wish to give some consideration to the kind of materials proposed to be used. This means that the contracts may not be awarded to the highest bidder. There is to be a special meeting of the Council Saturday night and the contracts will be further considered at that time, and contracts probably awarded.

The bids for the new streets were also opened and tabulated. After going thoroughly into the bids it was decided not to award any contracts until after the committee appointed to confer with the Mayor and Council relative to the kind of material to be used on the streets, had gone over the bids with the Mayor and Council.

Standard Bitulithic Company, $2.10 per square yard. This is much cheaper than was paid for the work of this company when the present streets in the city were laid.

Murray Construction Company, three bids, at $1.92, $2.02 and $2.12 per square yard.

McGuire Construction Company, $2.40, $1.87 and $2.08 per square yard.

J. W. Bash, $2.55, $2.20 and $1.59 per square yard.

McNerney Construction Company, one bid, at $2.40 per square yard.

In awarding the bids the Council will also take into consideration the class of work the contractors have been doing, even though the price paid may not be the lowest offered for the work.

The Council granted the following building permits: Harry F. Workman, front porch, East Church street; L. E. Edgumbe, truck shed, East Railroad avenue; N. Y. P. & N. railroad, freight station, East Church street.

The contract for painting and varnishing the fire apparatus was awarded to Twigg & Sheridan for the sum of $60.00, and for painting the interior of the City Hall to Theodore W. Davis, for the sum of $64.00.

Automobile Accident.

While Mr. Handy Truitt, accompanied by a party of young ladies, was motoring on the State road near Ironhorse last Saturday afternoon, he turned around to hand a tomato, which he had gathered only a few minutes before, to a young lady on the rear seat, and inadvertently turned the steering wheel of the car, running into a culvert. One of the young ladies was thrown against the wind shield of the machine, receiving a few bruises and a cut on the face. The other occupants were uninjured. The damage to the car was considerable.

DISTINGUISHED LAWYER DEAD

Hon. John H. Handy of Worcester Dies—Well-Known in This County

Hon. John H. Handy, the oldest practicing and one of the most prominent members of the bar of the state died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Anna H. Moore in Washington. Mr. Handy was widely known in this county having tried some of the most difficult and most prominent cases in this court. Mr. Handy figured with such legal giants as the late John W. Crisfield, E. Kin Wilson, Henry Page, Isaac D. Jones, John R. Franklin, Charles Goldsborough, and many others. Mr. Handy was born at the estate of his father near Princess Anne and sprang from a distinguished ancestry. He was admitted to the bar at the age of twenty one after having graduated from Princeton University. In 1854 he was admitted to the bar of the U. S. Supreme Court. He has practiced law in three different states, California, Ohio, and Maryland and in all three has made a name for himself as a lawyer of distinction. Besides being a lawyer of much prominence Mr. Handy was the founder of the Snow Hill Messenger, a thriving and progressive paper of Worcester County. Mr. Handy was always a democrat in politics and has served in the legislature from Worcester and has always been looked upon as one of the leaders of his party in his county and district.

There were a number of interesting sets and many close and exciting matches, the handsome silver cup for the doubles Peninsula championship in tennis being won by Messrs. White and Spring, after winning over last year's champions, Messrs. Iglehart and Crawford in the second round, and Phillips and Stam in the finals. The singles were won by Mr. Royce R. Spring, who was also last year's winner. Mr. Spring played a splendid game of tennis and deserved all the laurels he received. If successful next year he will win the three time cup offered by the Country Club.

NEW RIGHTS FOR EMPLOYEES

State Industrial Accident Commission Makes Statement.

The General Assembly last winter created a new body known as the State Industrial Accident Commission, which is to have charge of the relations between employer and employee as regards accidents and damages arising therefrom. The duties of the new commission are very complex and perplexing, and it will be a long time before the work of the commission is fully understood or thoroughly outlined.

The commission has issued the following statement of interest to both employer and the employed in Maryland:

"The Workmen's Compensation law passed by the General Assembly of Maryland, at the session of 1914, requires every employer in this State, having employees in extra-hazardous occupations, to pay compensation for disability from accidental injury arising out of and in the course of his employment, on and after November 1, 1914.

"Every employer shall secure the payment of such compensation: First, by insuring in the State Accident Fund (established by the same act); or second, by insuring with any stock corporation or mutual association authorized to do business in the state; or third, by furnishing proof to the commission of his financial ability to pay any compensation himself. Every employer shall first submit to the State Industrial Accident Commission the method he wishes to adopt; the commission has the power to either approve or reject the selection. Failure to submit this information on or before November 1st is made a misdemeanor, subject to a fine.

"Any employer not required to come under the provisions of the law may, upon the mutual request of himself and employees, elect to do so.

"Blank forms are being prepared by the commission for collecting the above information. All employers interested are asked to write to the commission so that when completed, blanks may be sent to them without delay.

"The Workmen's Compensation law passed by the General Assembly of Maryland, at the session of 1914, requires every employer in this State, having employees in extra-hazardous occupations, to pay compensation for disability from accidental injury arising out of and in the course of his employment, on and after November 1, 1914.

HANDSOME TENNIS CUP

Comes To This City—Won By Salisburyans at Peninsula Tournament.

The third annual Peninsula tennis tournament took place at the Talbot Country Club, near Easton, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. There were a total of about 40 entries in the singles, Salisbury being represented by Mr. G. William Phillips and Mr. U. F. White, who both made creditable showings, although in the semi-finals Mr. Phillips appeared to have one of his rare days off—losing his first singles match in an Eastern Shore tourney to Mr. Chauncey Crawford, a Princeton athlete.

In doubles Salisbury was represented by Mr. J. Roscoe White, who was matched with Mr. Royce R. Spring, of Talbot county, and Mr. G. William Phillips, who was matched with Mr. Stam, of Easton.

There were a number of interesting sets and many close and exciting matches, the handsome silver cup for the doubles Peninsula championship in tennis being won by Messrs. White and Spring, after winning over last year's champions, Messrs. Iglehart and Crawford in the second round, and Phillips and Stam in the finals.

The singles were won by Mr. Royce R. Spring, who was also last year's winner. Mr. Spring played a splendid game of tennis and deserved all the laurels he received. If successful next year he will win the three time cup offered by the Country Club.

A REMARKABLE WAR STORY

Frederick Palmer Now Witnessing Fulfillment of Prophecy Described in "The Last Shot."

Frederick Palmer, the author of the remarkable story, "The Last Shot," is a typical cosmopolitan. He not only knows war and the men who make war, but he knows the world and has been practically all over it.

Mr. Palmer is a native of Pennsylvania, born at Pleasantville in that state in 1873. He was residing in England at the time the Greco-Turkish war of 1895 began and went to the front as a correspondent. At the close of this war he went to the Klondike as a correspondent. He was in the Orient in 1898 when the war between the United States and Spain began, and was with Admiral Dewey at the battle of Manila, reporting it for the London Times and a number of American newspapers. He remained with the American army in the Philippines throughout the campaign against Aguinaldo. When the international expedition for the rescue of the foreign residents in Peking was organized at the time of the Boxer uprising in China he joined it in the capacity of a correspondent for his papers.

From 1900 to 1903 Mr. Palmer saw service in the Central and South American and the Macedonian insurrections. With the breaking out of war between Japan and Russia he joined the first Japanese army in the field as the representative of the London Times and Collier's Weekly, and was almost the only correspondent who saw active service with the Japanese army. He was in Constantinople during the Turkish revolution of 1909, and was with the Bulgarian army throughout the Balkan war of 1912-13.

In addition to this active career as a war correspondent, Mr. Palmer has circled the globe with Admiral Dewey, and again with the American battleship fleet in 1907-8. He is familiar with every capital of Europe, and has a personal acquaintance with a very large number of prominent European government officials and military and naval commanders.

Mr. Palmer is now at the front reporting the present war for the papers he represents, and is witnessing the fulfillment of the prophecy contained in his notable story, "The Last Shot."

We have arranged to print Mr. Palmer's remarkable story, "The Last Shot," serially in these columns.

THE CITY BRINGS ADDITIONAL SUITS

Corporation Again Sued—Penalties The Supposed Issue.

On Tuesday of last week the Mayor and Council, through Benjamin A. Johnson and Ellegood, Freeny & Wallies, attorneys, filed additional suits against The Salisbury National Bank, Peninsula Trust Company, Jackson Bros. Co., Salisbury Brick Company, The Farmers' & Planters' Company, and Home Gas Company. No cause for action is stated, but it is understood that the city is bringing these actions to recover the sum of $100 a day from each of the above concerns for their failure to report to the City Clerk of Salisbury on March 1, 1913, a list of their stockholders and the number of shares held by each. As $71 days elapsed from that date until the lists were furnished, this would mean, in the event that the city recovered, an amount of over $50,000 from each of the above-named corporations. City attorneys when interviewed by The Advertiser reporter on Friday morning, refused to say whether they would declare for the above penalties in these suits or not. Mr. Ellegood did say that had the corporations paid their taxes the city would never have declared for any penalties. They also seemed confident of winning the suits heretofore brought, and which will be tried at the coming term of court.

The Defendants' Side.

Mr. Alonzo L. Miles, who represents the several corporations which have been sued, being seen at his office said: "I have no means of knowing what these suits are about, as the city attorneys have filed no declaration, but simply brought their suits by titling. They do clearly indicate one thing, however, and that is that the city has no confidence in maintaining its pending suits against the several corporations for taxes, which will be disposed of at this September term of court. If it is true, as has been indicated, that these second suits are brought for the purpose of requiring the corporations doing business in the city of Salisbury to pay a penalty of $100 a day for each day that they have not furnished to the City Clerk a list of stockholders, I want to say that during all the years in which these several corporations have been doing business, they have never been asked by the city to furnish a list of stockholders, and no attempt has ever been made to require the stockholders to pay taxes on their shares of stock in said corporations until after suit was brought against them at the last July term of court. After such suits were brought, the corporations were asked by the city to furnish a list of stockholders as of January 1, 1913, which they promptly did. The law provides specifically as to how shares of stock in a corporation shall be taxed for municipal purposes, and I understand that the city, having never heretofore undertaken to assess and tax for municipal purposes the shares of stock of these corporations, and having failed to do its duty in the premises, now propose to penalize the corporations for not having paid them voluntarily without their having ever assessed the stock. If that is the situation, we will meet it when it arises in court."

It is hard to over-estimate the service he has rendered as Chairman of the Senate District Committee. His work there, as on the Forestry Commission, distinguishes him as able to deal most successfully with vast and intricate problems and to apply a sound and broad policy to their solution. Knowledge of his work, of his great influence and his real magnitude, I sometimes fear, escapes our own people, largely because no man was ever more modest about himself and his own achievements, and I have referred to but a few of his larger successes. I know his influence is as potent as any Senator in Washington.

I confidently expect Senator Smith's re-nomination and re-election. He has experience, and aside from that he is incomparably superior to anyone opposing him.

He is so able, honest and indefatigably industrious the State could ill afford to do without his services at any time, and at this most crucial period in the life of our nation we need more than ever men of his character, cool judgment and patriotism in public life. Peace or war, prosperity or ruin, may possibly depend upon our acts in keeping a man of Senator Smith's rare qualities in the country's service.

We know Senator Smith is too busy helping the people and the public, to make a canvass for himself. He will stick at his work, no doubt, cost him personally what it may. I feel as Democrats and good citizens we ought to applaud his unselfish course, and we owe it to him and to ourselves to relieve him of all thought as to his re-nomination by assisting the presence of those Democrats in sympathy with him at the polls to vote on Tuesday. I am satisfied that this practical service, which every Democrat can personally give, is all that will be necessary, as it is gratifying to know that the sentiment in his favor is sincere and overwhelming.

WOODCOCK IS MADE SECRETARY

Of The Republican State Headquarters.

Chairman Galen L. Tait, of the Republican State Central Committee, announced on Wednesday the appointment of Mr. Amos W. Woodcock, of Salisbury, as secretary of the committee.

Concerning the appointment the Baltimore Sun on Thursday said: His appointment is taken to indicate that Mr. Jackson will be active in this fall's fight. It is also taken to indicate close relationship between the amalgamated Bull Moosers, who are now running the official party organization, and the Jackson forces. Mr. Woodcock will assume his duties after the state convention meets on September 29.

The following letters are undelivered at the Salisbury postoffice, and unless claimed will be sent to the Dead Letter Office September 26:

Callender, Mrs. Tivoli Disharoon, Miss Minnie Davies, Miss Olevia Dutton, Mr. Ervin Hoopman, Miss Howard, Mr. Thomas E. AN OPEN LETTER

From Frank A. Furst, To The Democrats of Maryland, Urging The Nomination

Of Sen. John Walter Smith

GENTLEMEN:

I feel it my duty to urge my fellow-Democrats to go to the polls on Tuesday, the fifteenth, to vote in the Democratic primary for the re-nomination of Senator John Walter Smith.

I know what he is, what he has done, and some of the things yet to be done. Conditions due to this distressing war require Senator Smith to remain in Washington. His duty to the people demands he devote his whole time to public matters, and he gives them his whole time to the neglect of his own canvass for re-nomination.

Senator Smith has supported President Wilson's Administration by an unbroken record of loyalty, and has faithfully assisted in redeeming all the pledges of the Democratic Party, whether the legislation was tariff, the currency, canal tolls, regulating the trusts or meeting emergencies growing out of the European war, and certainly every friend of President Wilson in this State can consistently give his earnest support to Senator Smith, if loyalty to their chief is to be rewarded.

Senator Smith deserves our confidence and support. He is a live man, a wise man. He is a pioneer in many ways. Years ago he put the free school-book law through; later he helped take the schools out of politics, put the police force on a non-partisan basis, did much to purify elections, and to improve the State's credit and public property. Twelve years ago he approved one of the first Workingman's Co-operative Insurance Laws passed anywhere. The State Tuberculosis Sanatorium is a monument to his energy and unselfish work for humanity.

I venture to say Maryland never sent a more useful man to the Senate. He is a Democrat, but first of all he is a Marylander, and the most alive man I know to Maryland's needs and interests. He is a business man, and knows the difficulties men in business meet—a great advantage. Our business men, the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, the Chamber of Commerce, and such trade organizations have received splendid co-operation from him always.

He does things without making any fuss or parade. His record of measures passed by the Senate of special benefit to Maryland is unequalled, and include among others, bills:

To turn Fort Mifflin over to Baltimore city for a park.
To build an immigration station in Baltimore, appropriation, $550,000.
To erect a memorial to Francis Scott Key in Baltimore, appropriation, $75,000.
To build a federal building at Crisfield, appropriation, $80,000.
To build United States power plant at Indian Head, cost, $500,000.
To dredge York Spit Channel and improve Baltimore harbor, $305,250.
To establish a dairy farm for United States Naval Academy near Annapolis, $100,000.
To build federal building at Cambridge, $80,000.
To build federal building at Salisbury, $80,000.
To erect market sheds in Washington for use of truck raisers, $32,000.

In these times of business depression and scarcity of work in private enterprises, when European governments, even though at actual war, are constructing public works in order to provide employment for the idle, the value of these projects and appropriations to the public, always great, is especially enhanced.

Senator Smith has met an unprecedented situation and has proved himself a cool and patriotic man in this world-wide crisis. His work has always been of the first class.

Senator Smith has put money, and lots of it, in the pockets of Maryland people by the energy and good sense with which he helped attack the problem of finding a way to export our surplus wheat and other products during the war. He upheld the hands of the Administration always in the splendid work done to relieve the business situation and preserve the growth and prosperity of the country in the financial complications following the declaration of war. But for such measures many men would be ruined.

He is literally a public servant in the best sense. Many people have cause to remember with gratitude the assiduous and kind efforts he has made to locate their friends abroad within the past five weeks and to relieve the anxiety of those in such deep trouble. He has had scores of such cases. In addition, he has given valuable aid to all commercial interests, but especially to the Baltimore shipping interests and exporters in selling and collecting for goods through United States consuls, officers, which were at sea when hostilities began, consigned to foreign ports, and in some cases seized.

It is hard to over-estimate the service he has rendered as Chairman of the Senate District Committee. His work there, as on the Forestry Commission, distinguishes him as able to deal most successfully with vast and intricate problems and to apply a sound and broad policy to their solution. Knowledge of his work, of his great influence and his real magnitude, I sometimes fear, escapes our own people, largely because no man was ever more modest about himself and his own achievements, and I have referred to but a few of his larger successes. I know his influence is as potent as any Senator in Washington.

I confidently expect Senator Smith's re-nomination and re-election. He has experience, and aside from that he is incomparably superior to anyone opposing him.

SEAFORD FACTORY BURNED.

Fire destroyed Friday night an untenanted dwelling and a factory building in West Seaford, and but for the quick response of the local fire department, several other buildings would have been burned. The factory building and dwelling were owned by Wm. F. Allen, whose loss will reach $2,500. The factory was used by M. C. Lowder for the manufacture of mattresses. His loss will be $1,500. Laboratories of the E. H. Clarke Mfg. Co., were also slightly damaged.

DAIRMEN STRONGLY FAVOR USING IMPROVED STOCK

Their Association Urges Farmers To Secure Well-Bred Bulls and Offers Prizes For Superior Milk.

At a recent meeting of the State Dairymen's Association in Baltimore, a striking instance was given of "the sale at the switch" attitude of our milk producers as far as the improvement of their herds is concerned. In 1910, Mr. S. M. Shoemaker made the offer of a pure-bred bull calf to the farmer whose cow would make the highest milk record in the State, no expense to be incurred therewith, and no restrictions except that the contest be supervised by the State Experiment Station. There was not an inquiry--not one! Sixty days after making this offer, Mr. Shoemaker priced this same bull to a buyer at $200 and promptly sold it. Lost there should be question as to this offer being widely enough advertised, it should be added that the bull calf, together with its pedigree and a large placard stating the simple conditions of the prize were on exhibition during Maryland Week of that year for all visitors at the Armory to see!

A GOOD BIRE.

Notwithstanding this example, the directors of the Dairymen's Association have offered generous prizes for contestants in a number of dairy product contests, ending Maryland Week, Nov. 16 to 21st, which include a market milk contest, one for new and one for old contestants, a market cream contest, a prize of $50 for the person organizing the first new cow testing association in Maryland in 1914, and another prize of $50 for the most efficient tester employed by one of these associations and who has served in this capacity for twelve months.

The Association also endorsed the offer of the State Experiment Station to place several Guernsey and Ayrshire Bull Calves as herd sires on selected farms, free of cost, in an effort to improve the type of dairy animals and to encourage the breeding of registered dairy cows. Full information regarding this service may be secured from the Secretary of the Association at College Park.

In Wales, when the farmers want woodpeckers to make a dainty dish they are said to climb the trees while the birds are young and tie the legs of the nestlings to a neighboring bough. Infection and Insect Bites Dangerous Misquitoes, flies and other insects, which breed quickly in garbage pull-ponds, stagnant water, barns, musty places, etc., are carriers of disease. Every time they bite you, they inject poison into your system from which some dread disease may result. Get a bottle of Solan's Liniment. It is antiseptic and a few drops will neutralize the infection caused by insect bites or rusty nails. Solan's Liniment disinfects Cuts, Bruises and Bores. You cannot afford to be without it in your home. Money back if not satisfied. Only 25c. at your Druggist.

A High Opinion

"That's the highest quality paint made," said a customer of ours, "and it has proven to be the cheapest and the best." Our paint meets all competition successfully with quality—the high quality that makes it dollars cheaper than the other kind. Paint that lasts last lasts best— isn't that so?

FEW POTATO DISEASES

PROBLEMS OF IMPORTANCE TO PRACTICAL AGRICULTURE.

Particularly Heavy Losses Caused by Late-Blight and Rot in the Northern States — Combated by Bordeaux Spray Mixture.

(By W. A. ORTON.)

More general and concerted efforts on the part of potato growers are needed to combat certain diseases which threaten to impair the vigor of the seed stock and to cause the deterioration of varieties, according to the U. S. department of agriculture's investigator.

During recent years there has been much doubt and misunderstanding among plant pathologists and observant farmers concerning the group of potato diseases variously referred to as wilt, leaf roll, leaf curl, Fusarium blight, bacterial ring disease, etc., which in different countries of the world appear to constitute problems of increasing importance to practical agriculture. Environment has a most important influence on crops in the several states and in foreign countries. Therefore, great care is needed to determine exactly which method of control is best in each specific instance where disease is present.

The fact should be particularly emphasized that the same system of seed selection and crop rotation that will free the potato fields of wilt, leaf roll and curly-dwarf, will not only bring under control blighting and other diseases, but will insure the maintenance of the strains cultivated in their most vigorous condition and free from objectionable mixtures with other varieties.

Losses from the late-blight occur mainly in the northern states. This causes particularly heavy losses during cool and humid seasons. The states east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio this disease is particularly common. It is now successfully combated by spraying with a deaux mixture. It is also hoped to more disease-resistant varieties soon add in controlling this blight.

With the progress of studies of the problem other potato diseases have been recognized in the United States. Some of these, like the brown-rot, Doubtless been long prevalent elsewhere, like the blacking, have been recently introduced from Europe.

SMITH FOR SENATE—PRICE FOR CONGRESS

Voters in this County and elsewhere over the State will be called upon at the election next Tuesday to nominate a Democratic Congressional candidate for the First District and a United States Senator.

It is no small duty that is imposed upon them and it is a matter for their wise investigation and deliberate judgement to decide on whom to cast the honor.

Public records of public men have long been recognized as the strongest and most convincing criterion of their future action.

Senator Smith has confounded all his foes by his wonderful performance in the Wilson Administration and the most ardent advocates of Wilsonism have found no serious criticism of his course in the big things that have come up at Washington.

He has been firmly at the forefront and his large influence with the other Senators at the Capitol, his wise business judgement and his magnificent grasp of important national affairs has made him a prominent figure among the nation's most conspicuous leaders. The Democratic party at home and abroad should feel justly proud of him and render their tribute in an overwhelming victory over his only opponent, Mr. Straus at the polls next Tuesday.

Much that has been said of Senator Smith in a national sense may be truly said of Senator Price in State affairs.

The people of Wicomico County, at least the Democrats, should be interested in sending up those who have served faithfully and well, if they have demonstrated that they possess the right fundamental principles and the proper capacity to "measure up."

We think Senator Smith for U.
S. Senate and Senator Price for Congress will make good material for the progressive and reasonable voters to support. Remember to mark for Senator Price in two places on your ballot as there are long and short terms for congress.

Simple Cure for Headache. One of the quickest known ways of dispelling a headache is to give some of the muscles—those of the legs, for instance—a little hard, sharp work to do. The reason is obvious. Muscular exertion flushes the parts engaged in it, and so depletes the brain. When your head aches take a stiff walk or a short bicycle ride.

Beef With Assorted Vegetables Makes a Dinner Dish That is Among the Best of the Kind.

Purchase two pounds beef, chuck, round or shortrib end. Wipe the meat with a wet cloth and cut into small pieces, put on to boil with three quarts of boiling water, boil slowly one and one-half hours. Remove five cupfuls of the stock to a saucepan for your soup.

To the meat add one cupful carrot, half cupful cut onion, one cupful tomato sauce, one cupful cut potatoes, one tablespoonful of salt and quarter teaspoonful of white pepper.

If there is not enough stock, take one cupful of the carrot stock.

Boil forty-five minutes. Mix one tablespoonful of flour with a little cold water and add to the stew.

Serve on platter, putting the carrots and potatoes around the edge and the meat in the center, pour gravy over all and sprinkle with one tablespoonful chopped parsley. Garnish with a few sprigs of parsley.

Bread Griddle Cakes.

One and one-half cupfuls fine, stale bread crumbs, one and one-half cupfuls of hot milk, two tablespoonfuls butter, two eggs, one-half cupful flour, one-half teaspoonful salt, four teaspoonfuls baking powder. Add crumbs and butter to milk and soak until crumbs are soft. Then add the well beaten eggs and lastly the sifted dry ingredients. Heat the frying pan and grease slightly, then drop the griddle cake mixture by spoonfuls some distance apart on the hot griddle. Cook on one side until well puffed up and full of bubbles, then turn and cook the other side. Do not turn more than once. Serve at once with butter and sugar or maple sirup.

Delicious Soup.

Take bones and trimmings from a sirloin steak; put over fire after breakfast in three quarts of water; boil steadily until an hour before dinner, when add two onions, one carrot, three common sized potatoes, all sliced; some parsley cut fine, a red pepper, and salt to taste. This makes a delicious soup sufficient for three persons. All soups are more palatable seasoned with onions and red pepper, using the seeds of the latter with care, as they are very strong.

Creamed Spinach.

Wash, cook, drain and chop fine one-half peck of spinach. In a saucepan melt one tablespoonful of butter, add one tablespoonful of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-third teaspoonful pepper and cook for two minutes. Gradually stir in three-fourths of a cupful of rich milk until smoothly thickened, add the spinach, draw to one side and simmer gently for ten minutes. Serve on toast.

Rare One, Too.

To be able to say nothing when it is out to keep still is a gift.

STORM.

Out of the thunder leaps a crooked sword,
Bright as a serpent's tongue—
aye, bright as blood,
And men within the moment cast their clothes
And stand forth naked in a snarling brood.

The storm treads on like some great booted god,
Roaring and gliding with its bloody fists,
And men are milled between its awful palms—
Their vaunted masteries are blown like mists. . . .

We have not conquered elemental things,
Not chained the lightnings nor controlled the skies.
The storm breaks and the world's a beast again,
Snarling at bay, with terror in its eyes.
—New York Sun.

PEACE.

Peace rules the day, where reason rules the mind.—Collins.

Nothing can bring you peace but yourself. Nothing can bring you peace but the triumph of principles.—Emerson.

People are always expecting to get peace in heaven; but you know, whatever peace they get there will be ready made. Whatever of making peace they can be blessed for must be on the earth here.—Ruskin.

Let the bugles sound the truce of God to the whole earth forever.—Charles Sumner.

WHY?

Before Agrippa at the bar of Rome
Stood the Apostle Paul and said,
"Why does it seem incredible To thee that God should raise the dead?"

How vain with the incompetence of man
To measure the eternal power Or limit the unlimited
With vision of the fleeting hour!

Wherefore believe only what we see—
Accept the shadow and yet find
Denial for the thing; accept
The eye, yet call the Maker blind!

If from the utter void of nothingness
God willed "Let there be life," why might
He not with equal grace decree
When darkness falls, "Let there be light?"
—Edward H. Blake.

FRENCH SAYINGS.

"It is easy to go on foot when one has a horse by the bridle.
He who washes a donkey's head wastes his soap."

It is very foolish to rush into the next world when we can be well placed in this.

When the fox is asleep nothing falls into his mouth.

That which is called liberality is frequently nothing more than the vanity of giving, of which we are more fond than the thing given.

ALICE, WHERE ART THOU?
The birds sleeping gently, sweet
Luna gleameth bright,
Her rays tinge the forest and all seems glad tonight;
The wind sighing by me, cooling my fever'd brow,
The stream flows as ever, yet
Alice, where art thou?

One year back this even, and thou wert by my side,
One year back this even, and thou wert by my side,
Vowing to love me, vowing to love me;
One year past this even, and thou wert by my side,
Vowing to love me, Alice, what'er betide.

The silver rain falling, just as it falleth now,
And all things sleep gently, yet
Alice, where art thou?

I've sought thee by lakelet, I've sought thee on the hill,
And in the pleasant wildwood, when winds blew cold and chill,
I've sought thee in forest, I'm looking heavenward now;
I've sought thee in forest, I'm looking heavenward now;
Oh, there mid starshine! Oh, there mid starshine!
I've sought thee in forest, I'm looking heavenward now;
Oh, there amid the starshine, Alice, I know art thou!
—W. Gurnsey.

WHAT IS GREATNESS.

Ah, gentle, tender lady mine! The winter wind blows cold and shrill. Come, fill me one more glass of wine And give the silly fools their will.

And what care we for war or wrack, How kings and heroes rise and fall?

Look yonder, in his coffin black There lies the greatest of them all!

To pluck him down and keep him up Died many million human souls—

'Tis 12 o'clock and time to sup. Bid Mary heap the fire with coals.

He captured many thousand guns.

He wrote "The Great" before his name, And, dying, only left his sons The recollection of his shame.

Though more than half the world was his, He died without a rood his own, And borrowed from his enemies Six foot of ground to lie upon.

He fought a thousand glorious wars, And more than half the world was his; And somewhere now, in yonder stars, Can tell, mayhap, what greatness is.

—William Makepeace Thackeray.

*Written at Paris at the time of the second funeral of Napoleon.

SAID OF WAR.

War, war, is still the cry, war to the knife!—Byron.

War will never yield but to the principles of universal justice and love, and these have no sure root but in the religion of Jesus Christ.—Channing.

Tut, tut; good enough to toss; food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit as well as better.—Shakespeare, "Henry IV."

Nothing except a battle lost can be half so melancholy as a battle won.—Duke of Wellington.

THOUGHTS ON LIFE.

The present hour alone is man's.—Samuel Johnson.

Life is the gift of God and is divine.—Longfellow.

Have more mind on thy books than thy bags, more desire of godliness than gold, greater affection to die well than to live wantonly.—Livy.

Life is a mission. Every other definition of life is false, and it leads all who accept it astray. Religion, science, philosophy, though still at variance upon many points, all agree in this—that every existence is an aim.—Mazzini.

When life is true to the poles of nature the streams of truth will roll through us in song.—Emerson.

EPITAPH OF AN INFANT.

Many a soul did I wait For admission to the gate Of the living. But to see Much was not vouchsafed to me In my little term and span, I, that hoped to be a man, Like a snowflake incarnate, Seem for three days' light created.

Two eyes saw I, and the sun, And gold spires of Babylon. But, while voices I forgot, Called from cloud and minearet Men to wake, I stood once more With the dreams outside the door.

—Herbert Trench in the Nation.

Theodora—"Please, Miss Brown, my mother was so busy stirring the boiling clothes in the washboiler that she couldn't get us our breakfast and dress us in time for school. That's why I'm late."

Anty Drudge—"Theodora, you tell your mother to use Fels-Naptha Soap next Monday, and I'll guarantee you'll never be late for school on account of the washing."

One of the greatest blessings of Fels-Naptha Soap is its quick action. Fels-Naptha Soap, in cool or lukewarm water, will thoroughly loosen dirt in your clothes. While the clothes soak you are free to do other work. Then rub lightly, rinse and the clothes are ready for the line.

Fels-Naptha Soap kills Monday drudgery. But it must be used the Fels-Naptha way—no boiling, no hot water.

HABIT.

Imagine Hercules as oarsman in a rotten boat. What can he do there but by the very force of his stroke expedite the ruin of his craft? Take care, then, of the timbers of your boat, and avoid all practices likely to introduce either wet or dry rot among them. And this is not to be accomplished by desultory or intermittent efforts of the will, but by the formation of habits. The will, no doubt, has sometimes to put forth its strength in order to strangle or crush the special temptation, but the formation of right habits is essential to your permanent security. They diminish your chance of falling when assailed, and they augment your chances of recovery when overthrown.—John Tyndall.

ON HIS BLINDNESS.

When I consider how my light is spent Ere half my days in this dark world and wide, And that one talent which is death to hide Lodged with me useless, though My soul more bent To serve therewith my Maker, and present

My true account, lest he re- turning chide, "Dost thou exact day labor, light denied?" I fondly ask. But patience, to prevent

That murmur, soon replies, "God doth not need Either man's work or his own gifts. Who best Bear his mild yoke, they serve him best. His state Is kingly. Thousands at his bidding speed, And post o'er land and ocean without rest; They also serve who only stand and wait."

—John Milton.

SAID OF SLAVERY.

Corrupted freemen are the worst of slaves.—Garrick.

Servitude seizes on few, but many seize on her.—Seneca.

By the law of slavery, man, created in the image of God, is degraded to the human character and declared to be a mere chattel.—Charles Sumner.

That execrable sum of all villainies commonly called slave trade.—John Wesley.

Enslave a man and you destroy his ambition, his enterprise, his capacity. In the constitution of human nature the desires of bettering one's condition is the mainspring of effort. The first touch of slavery snaps this spring.—Mann.

SUNDAY OBSERVANCE.

I have told such of my people as I deal with in these months, told them plainly and told them frankly, that if they will say their prayers with the clergy at one hour of the Lord's day, the clergy are perfectly willing to play baseball with them at another hour of the same day, which is their day of rest, which rest is recreation; that if they will comply with the requirements of the church and observe Sunday, first of all, as a day of prayer they may have the rest of it as a day of play, and that, if they have stopped their work in order to worship, having worshiped, they may "walk abroad and recreate themselves." If this be treason, either to the church or to the day, let those who wish to do so make the most of it.—Rev. David M. Steele, Philadelphia.

FAR MORE FAIR.

More fair than sunrise mountains, In folded veils of light, Or trails in silver birches Engarmented and mossed from sight; More fair than new mown meadows, Where sliding waters flow, Or purple clouds of thunder, Where torrents stream below;

Than rolling, southward valleys With tasseled maize in bloom, Or northward plains entangled In dark and rearing plume; Than showery west empyrean A dewy distance gray; Than drifted plains by starlight Or rising moons of May.

I saw a fairer picture, Outshining fields and skies, I saw one happy morning A child from fever rise. I would that I were Raphael To paint that lovely sight. I saw him pick a daisy With wasted fingers white. —Sarah N. Cleghorn in Munsey's.

MONUMENTS

In erecting a monument, I should remember that it is not a mere mass of stone, but a memorial of honor that is to perpetuate the memory of the departed. Therefore, select the material to be used, look to its beauty, design, and the quality of material. Many years in the monument business has taught us that good monuments cannot be made at cut prices, but it has also taught us how to make the best monument at the lowest possible price. We have on hand a complete assortment of designs, which we place at your disposal. We use nothing but the best stones. Come in and look at our stock of monuments built of Winsboro Blue Granite, "The Silk of the Trade." The ideal monumental granite.

THE LAST SHOT

COPYRIGHT, 1914, BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

by FREDERICK PALMER

In this story Mr. Palmer, the noted war-correspondent, has painted war as he has seen it on many battlefields, and between many nations. His intimate knowledge of armies and armaments has enabled him to produce a graphic picture of the greatest of all wars, and his knowledge of conditions has led him to prophesy an end of armed conflicts. No man is better qualified to write the story of the final world war than Mr. Palmer, and he has handled his subject with a master hand.

CHAPTER I.

A Speck in the Sky.
It was Marta who first saw the speck in the sky. Her outcry and her bound from her seat at the tea-table brought her mother and Colonel Westerling after her onto the lawn, where they became motionless figures, screening their eyes with their hands. The newest and most wonderful thing in the world at the time was this speck appearing above the irregular horizon of the Brown range, in view of a landscape that centuries of civilization had fertilized and cultivated and formed.

At the base of the range ran a line of white stone posts, placed by international commissions of surveyors to the nicety of an inch's variation. In the very direction of the speck's flight a spur of foothills extended into the plain that stretched away to the Gray range, distinct at the distance of thirty miles in the bright afternoon light. Faithful to their part in refusing to climb, the white posts circled around the spur, hugging the levels.

In the lap of the spur was La Tir, the old town, and on the other side of the boundary lay South La Tir, the new town. Through both ran the dusty ribbon of a road, drawn straight across the plain and over the glistening thread of a river. On its way to the gate of the Brown range it skirted the garden of the Gallands, which rose in terraces to a seventeenth-century house overlooking the old town from its outskirts. They were such a town, such a road, such a landscape as you may see on many European frontiers. The Christian people who lived in the region were like the Christian people you know if you look for the realities of human nature under the surface differences of language and habits.

Beyond the house rose the ruins of a castle, its tower still intact. Marta always referred to the castle as the baron; for in her girlhood she had a way of personifying all inanimate things. If the castle walls were covered with hoar frost, she said that the baron was shivering; if the wind tore around the tower, she said that the baron was growling over the democratic tendencies of the time. On such a summer afternoon as this, the baron was growing old gracefully, at peace with his enemies.

Centuries older than the speck in the sky was the baron; but the pass road was many more, countless more, centuries older than he. It had been a trail for tribes long before Roman legions won a victory in the pass, which was acclaimed an imperial triumph. To hold the pass was to hold the range. All the blood shed there would make a red river, inundating the plain.

"Beside the old baron, we are parvenus," Marta would say. "And what a parvenu the baron would have been to the Roman aristocrat!"

"Our family is old enough—none older in the province!" Mrs. Galland would reply. "Marta, how your mind does wander! I'd get a headache just contemplating the things you are able to think of in five minutes."

The first Galland had built a house on the land that his king had given him for one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the history of the pass.

Even the tower, raised to the glory of an older family whose descendants, if any survived, were unaware of their lineage, had become known as the Galland tower. The Gallands were rooted in the soil of the frontier; they were used to having war's hot breath blow past their door; they were at home in the language and customs of two peoples; theirs was a peculiar tradition, which Marta had absorbed with her first breath. Town and plain and range were the first vista of landscape that she had seen; doubtless they would be the last.

One or two afternoons a week Colonel Hedworth Westerling, commander of the regimental post of the Grays on the other side of the white posts, stretched his privilege of crossing the frontier and appeared for tea at the Gallands. It meant a pleasant half-hour breaking a long walk, a relief from garrison surroundings, and in view of the order, received that morning, this was to be a farewell call.

He had found Mrs. Galland an agreeable reflection of an aristocratic past. The daughter had what he defined vaguely as girlish piquancy. He found it amusing to try to answer her unusual questions; he liked the variety of her inventive mind, with its flashes of downright matter-of-factness.

Not until tea was served did he mention his new assignment; he was going to the general staff at the capital. Mrs. Galland murmured her congratulations in conventional fashion.

Marta's chair was drawn back from the table. She leaned forward in a favorite position of hers when she was intensely interested, with hands clasped over her knees, which her mother always found aggravatingly tomboyish. She had a mass of lustrous black hair and a mouth rather large in repose, but capable of changing curves of emotion. Her large, dark eyes, luminously deep under long lashes, if not the rest of her face, had beauty. Her head was bent, the lashes forming a line with her brow now, and her eyes had the still flame of wonder that they had when she was looking all around a thing and through it to find what it meant.

"Some day you will be chief of staff, the head of Gray army!" she suddenly exclaimed. Westerling started as if he had been surprised in a secret. Then he flushed slightly.

"Why?" he asked with forced carelessness. "Your reasons? They're more interesting than your prophecy."

"Because you have the will to be," she said without emphasis, in the impersonal revelations of thought. "You want power. You have ambition."

He looked at the picture of it, with his square jaw, his well-moulded head set close to the shoulders on a sturdy neck, his even teeth showing as his lips parted in an unconscious smile.

"Marta, Marta! She is—is so explosive," Mrs. Galland remarked apologetically to the colonel.

"I asked for her reasons. I brought it on myself—and it is not a bad compliment," he replied. Indeed, he had never received one so thrilling.

His smile, a smile well pleased with itself, remained as Mrs. Galland began to talk of other things, and its lingering satisfaction disappeared only with Marta's cry at sight of the speck in the sky over the Brown range. She was out on the lawn before the others had risen from their seats.

"An aeroplane! Hurry!" she called.

How fast the speck grew!

Naturally, the business of war, watching for every invention that might serve its ends, was the first patron of flight. Captain Arthur Lanstron, pupil of a pioneer aviator, had been warned by him and by the chief of staff of the Browns, who was looking on, to keep in a circle close to the ground. But he was doing so well that he thought he would try rising a little higher. The summits of the range shot under him, unfolding a variegated rug of landscape. He dipped the planes slightly, intending to follow the range's descent and again they answered to his desire. The tower loomed before him as suddenly as if it had been shot up out of the earth. He must turn, and quickly, to avoid disaster; he must turn, or he would be across the white posts in the enemy's country.

"Oh!" groaned Marta and Mrs. Galland together.

In an agony of suspense they saw the fragile creation of cloth and bamboo and metal, which had seemed as secure as an albatross riding on the lap of a steady wind, dip far over, career back in the other direction, and then the whirling noise that had grown with its flight ceased. It was no longer a thing of winged life, defying the law of gravity, but a thing dead, falling under the burden of a living weight.

"The engine has stopped!" exclaimed Westerling, any trace of emotion in his observant imperturbability that of sympathy that the machine was the exhibition, not of the man in the machine.

Marta was thinking of the man who was about to die. She rushed down the terrace steps wildly, as if her going and her agonized prayer could avert the inevitable. The plane, descending, skimmed the garden wall and passed out of sight. She heard a thud, a crackling of braces, a ripping of cloth, but no cry.

Westerling had started after her, exclaiming, "This is a case for first aid!" while Mrs. Galland, taking the steps as fast as she could, brought up the rear. Through the gateway in the garden wall could be seen the shoulders of a young officer, a streak of red coursing down his cheek, rising from the wreck. An intricate web of red lines broke from Marta's throat, followed by quick gasps of breath. Captain Arthur Lanstron was looking into the startled eyes of a young girl that seemed to reflect his own emotions of the moment after having shared those he had in the air.

"I flew! I flew clear over the range, at any rate!" he said. "And I'm alive. I managed to hold her so she missed the wall and made an easy bump."

He got one foot free of the wreck and that leg was all right. She shared his elation. Then he found that the other was uninjured, just as she cried in distress:

"But your hand—oh, your hand!"

His left hand hung limp from the wrist, out, mashed and bleeding. Its nerves numbed, he had not as yet felt any pain from the injury. Now he regarded it in a kind of awestruck stare of realization of a deformity to come.

"Wood-gathering again!" he muttered to himself crossly.

Then, seeing that she had turned white, he thrust the disgusting thing behind his back and twined with the movement. The pain was arriving.

"It must be bandaged! I have a handkerchief!" she begged. "I'm not going to faint or anything like that!"

"Only bruised—and it's the left. I am glad it was not the right," he replied. Westerling arrived and joined Marta in offers of assistance just as they heard the prolonged honk of an automobile demanding the right of way at top speed in the direction of the pass.

"Thank you, but they're coming for me," said Lanstron to Westerling as he glanced up the road.

Westerling was looking at the wreck. Lanstron, who recognized him as an officer, though in mufti, kicked a bit of the torn cloth over some apparatus to hide it. At this Westerling smiled faintly. Then Lanstron saluted as officer to officer might salute across the white posts, giving his name and receiving in return Westerling's.

They made a contrast, these two men, the colonel of the Grays, smart and sturdy, his physical vitality so evident, and the captain of the Browns, some seven or eight years the junior, bareheaded, in dishevelled fatigue uniform, his lips twitching, his slender body quivering with the pain that he could not control, while his rather bold forehead and delicate, sensitive features suggested a man of nerve and nerves who might have left experiments in a laboratory for an adventure in the air. There was a kind of challenge in their glances; the challenge of an ancient feud of their peoples; of the professional rivalry of polite duellists. Lanstron's slight figure seemed to express the weaker number of the three million soldiers of the Browns; Westerling's bulkier one, the four million five hundred thousand of the Grays.

"You had a narrow squeak and you made a very snappy recovery at the last second," said Westerling, passing a compliment across the white posts.

"That's in the line of duty for you and me, isn't it?" Lanstron replied, his voice thick with pain as he forced a smile.

There was no pose in his fortitude. He was evidently disgusted with himself over the whole business, and he turned to the group of three officers and a civilian who alighted from a big Brown army automobile as if he were prepared to have them say their worst. They seemed between the impulse of reprimanding and embracing him.

"I hope that you are not surprised at the result," said the oldest of the officers, a man of late middle age, rather affectionately and teasingly. He wore a single order on his breast, a plain iron cross, and the insignia of his rank was that of a field-marshal.

"Not now. I should be again, sir," said Lanstron, looking full at the field-marshal in the appeal of one asking for another chance. "I was wood-gathering. But I shall not wood-gather next time. I've got a reminder more urgent than a string tied around my finger."

"Yes, that hand needs immediate attention," said the doctor. He and another officer began helping Lanstron into the automobile.

"Good-by!" he called to the young girl, who was still watching him with big, sympathetic eyes. "I am coming back soon and land in the field, there, and when I do, I'll claim a bunch of flowers."

TREATMENT FOR HORN FLIES

Old-Fashioned Remedy of Crude Cotton Oil and Pine Tar is One of Best Known Remedies.

(By W. H. UNDERWOOD.)

The horn fly has so many peculiarities that he is scientifically interesting. In the matter of color he is a stickler for dark shades. Hence, his attacks are chiefly made on dark cattle.

Cases have been noted in which two cows, one white and the other dark, standing side by side, were enveloped in a swarm of horn flies which attacked only the dark cow, leaving the other entirely unmolested.

It is claimed that the flies can even gauge the thickness of the skin and make discrimination, giving preference to the thin-skinned animals.

The flies suck blood from the cattle producing irritation and worry to such an extent as to cause a decrease in the milk flow from one-third to one-half.

Many remedies have, of course, been devised which have been more or less effective and no doubt there are plenty of newly discovered "cures" on the market, but new remedies are not always the best.

The following is a rather old-fashioned remedy but it has stood the test of time, than which no better recommendation could be given.

Crude cotton seed oil or fish oil and pine tar mixed, about two parts of the former to one of the latter. The two mix readily and are very easily applied to the animals at milking time by means of a large paint brush.

The late Professor J. B. Smith reported success from the use of fine tobacco dust in the hair of the back and wherever it would lodge. He claimed that tobacco dust is fatal to the horn fly if this insect stays long enough to bite the back of an animal where the dust has been scattered. It is also claimed for tobacco dust that it is a good repellent for the stable fly.

Clean Seed Important.

Clean seed is of prime importance, no matter what variety is sown. Whether the seed is furnished or purchased, it is well to be sure it is thoroughly cleaned, or else reclean it before sowing.

DESSERT FOR SUMMER DAY

Neapolitan Blanc Mange Will Be Appreciated by All Privileged to Partake of Delicacy.

Two and one-half cups of milk, two tablespoons of almonds, yolk of one egg, one heaping tablespoon of chocolate, a few drops of red coloring, four tablespoons sugar, one and one-half heaping tablespoons of powdered gelatin.

Blanch and chop the almonds finely, put them into a saucepan with two cups of milk, allow to simmer very gently in a double boiler for one-half hour, then allow to boil and strain into a basin. Mix the gelatin and sugar with the rest of the milk, dissolve carefully, add the almond milk and let heat a little. Divide into four portions. Put one portion in the wet mold, set aside until firm; add a few drops of red coloring to the second, pour it over the first and allow it to set. Stir the yolk of the egg into the third portion and allow it to get firm. Add the grated chocolate to the last portion, stir over the fire until nearly boils, allow it to cool and add to the others. Turn out when firm.

This dessert appears most attractive when molded in a brick or square mold. It can be sliced at the table or placed on plates before serving. It is delicious when served with whipped cream or crushed fruit.

Care should be taken to see that the gelatin when poured in the mold is just ready to set, as the heat from one layer will melt the other. If the gelatin that has not been molded becomes stiff it should be heated gently until it reaches the point where it was just ready.

Southern Batter Bread.

This is a formula for the batter bread that southerners like so well. To one pint, bottled milk and a teaspoonful lard in the hot milk, add a scant half pint of cornmeal, stirred in while hot, one teaspoon baking powder, half teaspoon salt, two eggs un-beaten. Mix well and bake in moderate oven a half hour. Serve very hot with butter.

Mayonnaise of Lobster. Place a bed of lettuce in an entree dish and on it the meat of the lobster. Cover with mayonnaise sauce. Then arrange a border of sliced tomato, hard-boiled eggs and shred lettuce round, and decorate the center of the mayonnaise with sliced yolk of egg.

Scallop Broth.

Wash and cut in small pieces one-half pint scallops, add one-half pint each of milk and water, a dot of butter and salt to taste. Simmer 20 minutes, strain and serve.

BEST MACHINERY FOR FARM

Before Making Purchase It Would Be Well for Farmer to Consider Several Essentials.

(By A. H. BENTON, Minnesota Expert-ment Station.)

A difficult problem on the American farm is to decide how much and what kind of machinery should be purchased. Some farms are so overstocked with machinery that the depreciation, interest and repairs eat up much of the profits.

Assuming the average depreciation on machinery at ten per cent, and the interest on the money invested at six per cent, we have an average yearly expense of approximately $13 on each $100 invested in machinery. A man who has $1,500 worth of machinery would have $195 expense on this alone in interest and depreciation. If his work could be done with half this amount he could save $97.50. This would be equivalent to the interest on $1,625 at six per cent.

A farm of 80 acres cannot profitably use four-horse machinery because three horses should do the work on a farm of this size. In buying machinery too large in proportion to the size of the farm unnecessary expense is added. This comes not only in the increased cost of the machinery, but also in the maintenance of any extra horses required.

Before purchasing new machinery it is well to consider the following questions:

Will the use of the new machine give me a larger net return from the crops on which it is used?

Will the new machine reduce the demand for man labor?

Where a machine is required only a few days each year, can it not be rented more cheaply than purchased?

Will the money to be invested return more in some other way?

Has the machine been thoroughly tried by others and found satisfactory?

Fly Ointments.

One pound of rancid lard and half a pint of kerosene mixed thoroughly until a creamy mass was formed and rubbed with a cloth or bare hand, not too thickly, over the backs of cows has been used as a protection against flies. About three-eighths of a pound was used for each full-grown animal. Never use any form of machine oil on stock.—F. L. Washburn.

Don't Wait For The Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness—Profit by Salisbury People's Experience

Occasional attacks of backache, irregular urination, headaches and dizzy spells are frequent symptoms of kidney disorders. It's an error to neglect these ills. The attacks may pass off for a time but generally return with greater intensity. Don't delay a minute. Begin taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and keep up their use until the desired results are obtained. Good work in Salisbury proves the effectiveness of this great kidney remedy.

Marshall Mitchell, 617 S. Division St., Salisbury, Md., says: "You may continue to use the endorsement I gave about a year ago regarding Doan's Kidney Pills. I still take them occasionally and they always bring the best results. I never hesitate to give this remedy praise, for it has done me much good. My back bothered me a great deal and it was hard for me to stoop or straighten. I took a number of remedies but they did not seem to bring me much relief. Doan's Kidney Pills were just what I needed and it required only two boxes to remove the trouble."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the name that Mr. Mitchell had Foster-McIlburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

DEMAND FOR GINSENG

LONG BEEN VALUED BY CHINESE FOR MEDICAL USE.

Young and Undersized Roots, Dry Hard and Glassy and Are Not Regarded as Desirable—Prices Rise as Supply Diminishes.

(By W. VAN FLEET.)
American ginseng grows naturally on the slopes of ravines and in other shady but well-drained situations in hardwood forests, in varying abundance from Maine to Minnesota and southward to the mountains of Georgia and the Carolinas. It has long been valued by the Chinese for medicinal use, though rarely credited with curative virtues by the natives of other countries. The dried roots have been exported from this country for increasing quantities since the early years of the eighteenth century, the prices rising as the wild supply diminished because of the clearing away of suitable forests from about forty cents a pound in the early years of its collection to more than six dollars a pound for the best qualities during the last nine years.

The cultivation of native ginseng, stimulated by its increasing scarcity and the rising prices, began in an experimental way about sixteen years ago and has attained such proportions that the output of cultivated roots is little short of that collected from the forests and in the present state of the market has nearly the same value. It is reasonable to assume that the cultivated root must eventually displace the wild article as a commodity for export, but any rapid increase of production at this juncture might depress selling prices, which are not thought to exceed greatly the cost of growing and marketing. When the slow development of the plants and the relatively expensive equipment needed for ginseng culture are duly considered. A negligible quantity of ginseng root is consumed by Chinese residents of North America and a trifle has been used by manufacturers of domestic medicine, leaving practically the sole outlet for this product with the Koreans and Asiatic Chinese.

The cured root is valued by the Chinese largely according to its size and maturity. Young and undersized roots dry hard and glassy and are not regarded as desirable. Very small roots and root fibers often realize less than a dollar a pound, while those of proper size and quality sell at top quotations. Cultivated roots as a rule attain greater size than wild ones of the same age, but lack the density of substance until well past the fifth year of development. Roots should rarely be dug for market until the sixth year and should then be taken up solidly and the undersized roots replanted or securely heeled in until time to plant in the spring. Good roots are nearly four inches long, half an inch in thickness below the crown, and average about an ounce in weight in the fresh state. Roots may be dug at any time after growth ceases in September, but mid-October is regarded as the most favorable time.

LITTLE MOLE QUITE USEFUL

Tunnelling Permits Better Aeration of Soil and Favors Entrance of Water From Surface.

As to the economic status of the mole it may be said that by its activities it commends itself to farmer and gardener for reasons other than of its food habits. One of the most abundant of small mammals, for ages it has been working over the soil to the benefit of plant life. This tunnelling by the shifting of earth particles permits better aeration of the soil and favors the entrance of water from the surface. It also mixes the soil and subsoil, carrying humus farther down and bringing the subsoil nearer the surface, where its elements of plant food may be made available.

The mole has also a commercial value, as in recent years, owing to the gradually decreasing number of wild fur-bearing animals, mole skins have found a ready market. It is significant of our lack of attention to small business matters, however, that American mole skins are not quoted or offered on the markets. All the skins used by our furriers are imported from Europe. Auction lists of fur dealers in London show that more than 3,000,000 mole skins were sold in 1911, 1912, and 1913. Recently a small lot of American mole skins secured by the Biological Survey was prepared and made up by an expert furrier, who pronounced them in every respect equal or even superior to European skins. It seems likely, therefore, that a new industry amounting to many thousands of dollars annually might be developed in this country. As the price of labor in the United States is higher than in Europe, it is possible that for the present the farmer boy may be the chief beneficiary of the new industry.

KILL WEEDS IN THE WALKS

Effective and Cheap Agent May Be Found in Mixture of Rock Salt and Blue Vitriol.

Rock salt or blue vitriol is a cheap and effective agent for destroying weeds in walks, garden paths, etc. The best method of procedure is to boil the salt or blue vitriol in water, one pound to the gallon, and apply the solution boiling hot, with a watering pot that has a spreading nozzle. This will keep the weeds and worms away for two or three years. Put one pound to the square yard at first, and afterwards a weaker solution may be applied when required. Gas liquor is another cheap medium, but has an offensive odor and may injure the roots of trees if carelessly used.—Colorado Agricultural College.

NO. 40

SMITH FOR SENATE; PRICE FOR CONGRESS.

Win Over Opponents By Tremendous Majorities—Sweep Eastern Shore and State.

The Democratic primary election Tuesday, the timest in many years, resulted in the re-nomination for United States Senator of John Walter Smith; in the nomination for Congress in the First District of Jesse D. Price for both the short and long terms; in the nomination for Congress in the Fifth District of Richard A. Johnson, and in the nomination for associate judge in the third circuit of Allen McLane.

Senator Smith carried every county and legislative district in the state, and in all probability will have every vote in the state convention. The only county about which there was doubt is Garrett. His popular majority over Isaac Lobe Straus is estimated at 30,000, in a very light vote.

Price Sweeps Eastern Shore.

Price carried every county on the Eastern Shore over James T. Bright for the short-term nomination for Congress. His majority is about 4,000. For the long term, he defeated Albert W. Sisk, of Caroline, by about 3,900 majority, carrying all the counties except Sisk's own.

Johnson By About 2,000.

Johnson has defeated Congressman Frank O. Smith in all the Fifth District, except Calvert and Charles counties. Smith carried the former county, his home, by about 400. In Charles, Johnson was almost shut out, apparently. Johnson's majority in the district is about 2,000.

McLane's Majority Heavy.

McLane beat Robert H. Bussey for judge in Baltimore county by about 3,000, and in Harford county by about 400.

City Majority for Smith 11,612.

In the city, Smith won for the Senate over Isaac Lobe Straus by 11,892 and Straus was 3,280. Smith carried each ward in the city and each legislative district.

Inasmuch as the nomination for Senator is made by the "county unit" plan, the legislative district is what counts in the city's vote. Smith will have in the state convention seven delegates from each of the four districts, or the entire 28 delegates from the city. His majority in the First District was 2,624; in the Second, 2,452; in the Third, 3,164, and in the Fourth, 2,372.

Straus carried three precincts in the city, as follows: Sixth precinct of the Fourteenth ward by 4 to 3; First precinct of the Seventeenth ward by 5 to 4, and Ninth precinct of the Twenty-fourth ward by 20 to 17. In the last-named ward the labor vote is strong, and Straus' success in the precinct mentioned was probably due to the efforts of the labor leaders.

State Vote Very Light.

Senator Smith, according to the best estimates obtainable, carried the counties by about 19,000 majority over Mr. Straus. Except Garrett, where Smith's majority of 34 was endangered by a few non-voters, all of the counties are safely in his column.

The vote was extremely light all over the state. The organizations in the counties, practically all of which were earnestly for Smith, tried hard to get out their vote, but the returns indicate that they had only partial success. The farmers have been reported more interested in crops than in politics, and, in addition, the European war has overclouded interest in other matters. Finally, it was accepted as a foregone conclusion that Smith would win.

Price's Run Surprising.

On the Eastern Shore Price made a surprising run for both the short and long term nominations for Congress. In a very light vote, he had 4,000 majority for the former term and 3,900 for the latter. He upset expectations by beating James T. Bright for the short term in the latter's own county, Queen Anne's. In that county Price had the support of the old organization leader, John E. George, who is an inveterate political enemy of Bright's. Price carried all nine counties in the district for the short term.

Sisk Carries One County.

Price did almost as well for the long term, losing but one county, Caroline. That is the home of Albert W. Sisk, his opponent for the long term. Sisk carried it by 115. It had been expected that Price would be beaten much worse there, but his friend, State Senator Harvey L. Cooper, and other leaders, pitched in hard for him in the last few days and gave an excellent account of themselves.

CHANGES IN SERVICE.

Two Trains Were Withdrawn On Tuesday Last.

Beginning last Tuesday there was a curtailment of passenger train service on the Delaware division of the Pennsylvania railroad. Several trains were withdrawn entirely. This, of course, affects to some extent the service on the N. Y. P. & N. railroad. The new schedule shows the following changes:

Train No. 48, the Old Point express, running north, which formerly left Salisbury at 2 p. m., now leaves at 2:40 p. m. There is no change in this train running south, the leaving time from Salisbury being 1:48 p. m.

Train No. 46, northbound, heretofore leaving Salisbury at 9:50 p. m., is withdrawn.

Train No. 41, running south, formerly leaving Salisbury at 10:26 p. m., is also withdrawn.

These are the only notable changes in the schedule.

TO PLAY WITH ORIOLES

Carl Howard Has Signed Up for 1915—Will May Have Big League Try.

Mr. Carl Howard, Salisbury's popular crack pitcher, came home from Baltimore Thursday with an International League contract for the season of 1915 packed snugly away in his pocket.

It was secured on the occasion of his first interview with Jack Dunn, the noted president and manager of the Baltimore Orioles, which has long been one of the most famous aggregations in base balldom.

Mr. Howard went up to Baltimore to talk things over on Wednesday, his chief objection being Sunday ball being on account of Sunday ball playing. Mr. Dunn kindly arranged this, and gave Carl a contract free from Sabbath playing, which was duly signed.

Dunn had been closely watching the Salisbury games this year and has evidently kept track of the state collegiate meets. It is also understood that one of his scouts, a Mr. Derr, was present during a great pitching bout at Frederick, where an 11-inning contest was fought out, with Carl pitching for Frederick against Hagerstown in the Tri-City League.

Howard has youth, strength, vigor and fine habits. He is recognized here and elsewhere in the state as a strong pitcher of much promise for the future, and with expert training he should succeed in being a most valuable twirler.

He expects to remain in Salisbury until the latter part of March, when the Birds leave for a 30-day training trip in the South to get limbered up for the season's work.

A salary of $200 per month during the playing season is a part of the contract.

Hill May Be Given Trial.

We are also informed that Mr. Franklin Hill, familiarly known among his associates as "Chubby," and one of the most promising baseball catchers that every played here, is in a fair way to getting a tryout by the Pittsburgh National Leaguers this fall. "Chubby" is all there behind the bat, and should make good whenever he has half a chance. With these two lights on their way it looks like Salisbury may yet shine and acquire fame on the world's baseball map.

Council Proceedings.

The City Council in session Monday night granted building permits to the Salisbury National Bank for addition to their present building, and to William H. Jackson for two new store fronts on Main street.

The communication from E. Walton Brewington in reference to the Camden Sewer Company was referred to City Solicitor Johnson.

The offer of the Salisbury Realty Company to donate to the city a strip of land to widen Main street a width of nine feet from the county line to Baptist street was accepted by the Council.

The City Solicitor was instructed to notify all property owners on South Division street between Circle avenue and the tracks of the N. Y. P. & N. railroad to connect with the new sewer on said street at once, running their sewer connections within their properties, and also to notify the Salisbury Water Company to lay a six-inch water main from East Camden street to Upton street as called for in their franchise. This work to be done at once.

Mayor Bounds, President Jones and Councilman Parker were appointed a committee to confer with a committee from the Salisbury fire department in reference to providing proper entertainment for the visiting firemen expected here on October 7th.

The clerk was instructed to notify the Salisbury Light, Heat and Power Company to move their poles on West Railroad avenue up to the new curb line and to notify the Salisbury Water Company to move their fire plugs accordingly.

Chief Serman was instructed to purchase for the city hall and the clerk to pay Harper & Taylor $30.00 for attention to the town clock.

A Week In Wicomico Court

List of Cases Disposed of

The calling of the docket disclosed the following number of cases: Trials, 71; Criminal continuances, 2; Civil Appeals, 19; Criminal appeals, 5; Appearance, 39. A large number of these cases were not ready for trial, and were continued. It is the general opinion that the September Term will be a short one.

Grand And Petit Jurors.

Judge Stanford drew the Grand Jurors as follows: Robert G. Robertson, (foreman); Wm. C. J. Bradley, Grover C. Layfield, Granville H. Owens, Clarence W. Gordy, Ernest Hobbs, Jesse T. Wilson, T. Byrd Lankford, Jacob M. Adkins, Herman W. Potey, Woodland Chatham, Elias H. Nichols, Carl Bussells, Eugene M. Walston, Harry Taylor, Larry J. Culver, Wade H. Messick, Geo. A. Larimore, Thomas C. Wallace, Mayhew Reddish, Algernon C. Rayne, Thomas H. Timmons and Herbert W. Hearn.

The Petit Jurors for this term are: John P. Wright, A. Carlton Taylor, Samuel C. Trader, Mister Majors, Norris C. Ward, J. Thomas West, John T. Land, Joseph E. Davis, William N. Killiam, J. Randolph Parker, Jason A. Morris, Edward J. Smith, Lewis A. Towns, Elmer D. Bailey, Edward N. Todd, William C. Crouch, John A. Wright, Noah W. Owens, Llewellyn B. Kerr, Edward T. Sirman, Robert F. Walter, George R. Hitch, Isaac S. Williams, B. Frank Adkins.

Several Removal Cases.

There are on the docket several cases removed from adjoining counties but it is doubtful if all of them will come to trial this term.

From Dorchester County comes the case of State vs. James Dutton, colored, charged with assault on a white woman. Dutton was tried and convicted in the Dorchester court and was sentenced to be hanged. His counsel took an appeal to the Court of Appeals and a new trial was granted. There are several witnesses summoned in this case, which is set for trial next week.

From Worcester County comes the case of State, for the use of John W. Allen, Jr., and Bessie Quinn Allen, infants, vs. William B. Duncan, who shot W. Allen several months ago. In the criminal proceedings Duncan was cleared, but this suit is for civil damages for $5,000. This case is expected to arouse considerable interest. A great many witnesses have been summoned.

In our own county are several damage suits, among them being one brought by Charles Campbell and wife versus the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad for alleged false arrest in crossing the right of way of the railroad near the new Union station in this city. The Campbells put damages at $1,000.

A suit by titling only has been filed by Hanne M. Westrand vs. The County Commissioners of Wicomico for damages alleged to have been sustained by the overturning of an automobile near Melson's. The plaintiff claims that the side of the road was so obscured by high weeds that the ditch could not be seen and the automobile plunged into it, wrecking the car and injuring the occupants. The bar has not yet been filed and it is impossible to state what damages will be claimed.

STREET PAVING CONTRACT AWARDED

To Norfolk Firm Thursday Night. Starts October 1st.

The contract for Salisbury street paving was awarded to the McGuire Construction Company, of Norfolk, on Thursday night by the Mayor and City Council.

The work includes West Railroad avenue from East Church street to the new Union depot; South Division street to the N. Y. P. & N. railroad; East Main street to the property of the Salisbury Realty Company.

The paving is to be bituminous concrete, at $1.57 per square yard, and 90 working days are allowed to complete the contract, from October 1, when the operations are to start.

The McGuire Company is required to give guarantees, proper bond and other safeguards to the city.

PROMINENT CITIZEN

Of County Passes Away—Capt. George Dallas Inley, of Bivalve

Capt. George Dallas Inley, one of the most prominent residents of the western part of Wicomico County, died Sunday, at his home in Bivalve, after a long illness due to a stroke of paralysis which left him helpless for several months.

Capt. Inley was, up until about two years ago, a man of vigorous constitution and was active in business affairs. He was one of the pioneers of Bivalve, where he opened a large general store and built up a big business in merchandising. He was also extensively engaged in the oyster business. In his earlier days Capt. Inley commanded vessels plying between the Nanticoke river and Baltimore.

Capt. Inley was one of the organizers of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Salisbury and one of its first directors, holding the position at the time of his death.

Several years ago he was elected to represent Wicomico County in the Legislature of Maryland and served on the Committee on Chesapeake Bay and Tributaries which looked after legislation affecting the oyster and fish industries of this State.

Subsequently Capt. Inley was appointed commander of the oyster police boat Nellie Jackson, holding the position two years. He was prominent in the councils of the Democratic Party for years.

Capt. Inley was 68 years of age last month. He is survived by the following children: John W. P. and George D., of Baltimore; Wade H., Mrs. Watson D. Mitchell and Mrs. Bayard Cooper, of Salisbury; Rev. Levin I. Inley, of Eagle Pass, Texas; Fitzhugh Lee Inley, of Cape Charles, Va., and Miss Cora Inley, of Bivalve.

DERRICK BEING BUILT

And other Preparations Under way to see If There is Oil.

The contract for the drilling of the first well on the property of the Wicomico Oil & Gas Company has been awarded to Messrs. Flint & Strother, of Clarksburg, W. Va.

Mr. John Flint, senior member of the firm, arrived in Salisbury Monday of this week with his force of rig-builders, and the construction of the derrick is now under way on the property of Mr. S. P. Parsons, where the first well will be located. Engine and belt, together with all necessary equipment for the work has been shipped from Clarksburg, and is expected to arrive at Parsonsburg this week. As soon as the derrick is finished the machinery will be placed and actual drilling begun.

The erection of an 80-foot oil derrick is something entirely new for this section, and is attracting many visitors to the scene. There seems to be a feeling of general satisfaction among the people of this community that the territory is to be thoroughly tested and the question settled one way or the other as to whether there is oil under the Parsonsburg ridge.

Latest War News of The Day

Conflicting reports of the situation in the eastern theater of the war are received from official and unofficial sources. The several German army corps sent into east Prussia appear to have pushed back the Russian invaders of that territory with great loss to the Russians. It is thought that a part of the German force may be diverted to Russian Poland.

The most recent word from the Far East describes the Japanese troops as struggling through the flooded north of Shan-Tung peninsula trying to reach Kiaochow. There is no indication of an early investment of that German stronghold.

The Turkish army is reported from Petrograd to be concentrating on the Bulgarian frontier.

The final attitude of Italy is awaited with intense interest. Demonstrations in favor of the allies at Rome and other places have been suppressed by the military. Meantime Italy is engaged with the serious situation in Albania where the insurgents have been threatening since the withdrawal of Prince William of Wied. Italian troops already have been landed at Avlona.

A dispatch from Paris says all Italian reservists in the French capital have been called to the colors.

Earl Kitchener, British Secretary of State for War, declared in the House of Lords that there are already six divisions of the expeditionary force battling against the Germans in France. He said further that a fourth army was being created and that Indian divisions were on their way to the battle line.

A Reuter dispatch from Ostend says the Germans were forced to retire from Termonde after an engagement with Belgians.

A semi-official dispatch received in Amsterdam from Berlin says that British, French, Russian and German authorities have agreed to an exchange of lists of prisoners of war.

According to a report printed in the Paris "Matin," the Russian army has occupied Przemyśl, the last heavily fortified city in Galicia, and thus has opened the way for a direct advance into the interior of Austria.

Five German cruisers and 14 merchant vessels in the Pacific are stopping at the Marshall Islands, rather than venture out to the danger of an attack by hostile fleets.

It is reported in Tokio that the German cruiser Emden has sunk five British vessels off the coast of India. The passengers on the vessels are said to have been saved.

The Washington government is awaiting a reply to its protest to Turkey, in which the Porte was notified that the United States did not recognize its authority to abrogate treaties granting extra-territorial rights to citizens of other nations.

King Albert of Belgium has led his army out from Antwerp to attack troops of German cavalry operating in northwest Belgium. Conflicting reports are received that the Germans are strongly re-inforcing their forces in Belgium, and that they have evacuated Liege, as though in preparation for a retreat within their own borders. Another report is that 100,000 troops have been rushed through Liege to support the German army in France.

It is reported in Copenhagen that Gen. von Hindenburg who has been in command of the German forces opposing the Russians, had been summoned to take command of a division of the Teuton army arrayed against the allies in France. It also is said that 320,000 Germans have been recalled from the campaign in Russia to strengthen the German forces in France.

Grand Duke Nicholas issues a proclamation to the people of Austria-Hungary promising them liberty and justice if they welcome the Russian troops.

NO PLACE AVAILABLE.

Miss E. June Breimeier, of the Byron King School of Oratory, Philadelphia, was in Salisbury Tuesday, having been secured by Mrs. L. D. Collier to train a local class for a play to be given to raise funds for charitable purposes.

Very much to the disappointment of those concerned, Mrs. Collier was unable to secure a suitable place in which to rehearse and present the production, and the enterprise had to be abandoned, or at least, postponed until such time as a suitable building could be secured.

The failure of this undertaking leaves its promoters without their customary means of raising charity funds, and the need of such funds for the season now approaching gives those interested in the work grave concern. It is to be hoped that some new plan will present itself.

Too Good an Excuse.

A young man, having broken an appointment with Doctor Franklin, came to him the following day and made a very handsome apology for his absence. He was proceeding when the doctor stopped him with: "My good boy, say no more; you have said too much already; for the man who is so good at making an excuse is seldom good at anything else."—Life.

Peach "yellows" is showing up abundantly in many Maryland orchards this season. Indications are that this disease has spread much farther south than in former years. It now occurs in all parts of Maryland except Calvert, St. Mary's, Wicomico, Worcester, and Somerset, having recently been found in Northern Charles and Dorchester Counties.

The commonest symptoms of the disease are prematurely ripened fruit with peculiar red spots, and the narrow yellow leaves that show up on some branches. All trees showing signs of the disease should be cut down and burned to prevent its further spread. The most opportune time for doing this is directly after the peach harvest. Complete destruction of the diseased trees is the surest way to keep the balance of your orchard in a healthy condition.

Thrifty Welsh Farmers.

In Wales, when the farmers want woodpeckers to make a dainty dish they are said to climb the trees while the birds are young and tie the legs of the nestlings to a neighboring bough. The parents then feed them till they are quite grown, when the farmer's boy climbs the tree again, and plump birds are secured for supper with a minimum of trouble.

FREEDOM.

There is only one cure for evils which newly acquired freedom produces, and that cure is freedom. When a prisoner first leaves his cell he cannot bear the light of day; he is unable to discriminate colors or recognize faces. The remedy is to accustom him to the rays of the sun.

The blaze of truth and liberty may at first puzzle and bewilder nations which have become half blind in the house of bondage. But let them gaze on and they will soon be able to bear it. In a few years men learn to reason. The extreme violence of opinions subsides. Honest theories correct each other. The scattered elements of truth cease to contend and begin to coalesce. And at length a system of justice and order is deduced out of the chaos.

Many politicians of our time are in the habit of laying it down as a self evident proposition that no people ought to be free till they are fit to use their freedom. The maxim is worthy of the fool in the old story who resolved not to go into water till he had learned to swim. If men are to wait for liberty till they become wise and good in slavery they may indeed wait forever.—Macaulay.

INFLUENCE.

It is well to remember that what you have that you can't help but give away is your influence.

Bear in mind that your influence is never wholly absorbed, nor does it disappear into nothingness. It counts again and again. Influence has no end.

The three greatest objects in life—friends, happiness, success—are each dependent upon proper influence. So it is good to know that even the humblest person is, after all, master of his own influence. He can send it out to scatter sunshine or shadow. It's his choice.

A man's greatest responsibility in this world lies in the way he acquires and gives out his influence.

Your influence today is sure to have a tremendous bearing upon the total work of the world. Your influence upon other people and the influence of other people upon you are sure to become a force and a factor in the complete work of your day and theirs.—George Matthew Adams

STORM.

Out of the thunder leaps a crooked sword.
Bright as a serpent's tongue—aye, bright as blood.
And men within the moment cast their clothes
And stand forth naked in a snarling brood.

The storm treads on like some great booted god,
Roaring and slaying with its bloody fists,
And men are milled between its awful palms—
Their vaunted masteries are blown like mists. . . .

We have not conquered elemental things,
Not chained the lightnings nor controlled the skies.
The storm breaks and the world's a beast again,
Snarling at bay, with terror in its eyes.

Let the bugles sound the truce of God to the whole earth forever.—Charles Sumner.

WHY?

Before Agrippa at the bar of Rome
Stood the Apostle Paul and said,
"Why does it seem incredible
To thee that God should raise the dead?"

How vain with the incompetence of man
To measure the eternal power
Or limit the unlimited
With vision of the fleeting hour!

Wherefore believe only what we see?
Accept the shadow and yet find
Denial for the thing: accept
The eye, yet call the Maker blind!

If from the utter void of nothingness
God willed "Let there be life," Why might
He not with equal grace decree
When darkness falls, "Let there be light?"

—Edward H. Blake.

The wind sighing by me, cooling my fever'd brow,
The stream flows as ever, yet
Alice, where art thou?

One year back this even, and thou wert by my side,
One year back this even, and thou wert by my side,
Vowing to love me, vowing to love me;

One year past this even, and thou wert by my side,
Vowing to love me, Alice, what'er betide.

The silver rain falling, just as it falleth now,
And all things sleep gently, yet
Alice, where art thou?

I've sought thee by lakelet, I've sought thee on the hill,
And in the pleasant wildwood, when winds blew cold and chill.

I've sought thee in forest, I'm looking heavenward now;
I've sought thee in forest, I'm looking heavenward now;

Oh, there mid starshine! Oh, there mid starshine!
I've sought thee in forest, I'm looking heavenward now;

Oh, there amid the starshine, Alice, I know art thou!

THE LAST SHOT

COPYRIGHT, 1914, by CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

by FREDERICK PALMER

"Do! What fun!" she cried, as the car started.

"The field-marshal was Partow, the chief of staff?" Westerling asked.

"Yes," said Mrs. Galland. "I remember when he was a young infantry officer before the last war, before he had won the iron cross and become so great. He was not of an army family—a doctor's son, but very clever and skilful."

"Getting a little old for his work!" remarked Westerling. "But apparently he is keen enough to take a personal interest in anything new."

"Wasn't it thrilling and—and terrible!" Marta exclaimed.

"Yes, like war at our own door again," replied Mrs. Galland, who knew she had seen war raging on the pass road. "Lanstron, the young man said his name was."

"No doubt the Lanstrons of Thorbourg. An old family and many of them in the army."

"The way he refused to give in—that was fine!" said Marta.

Westerling, who had been engrossed in his own thoughts, looked up.

"Courage is the cheapest thing an army has! You can get hundreds of young officers who are glad to take a risk of that kind. The thing is, and his fingers pressed in on the palm of his hand in a pounding gesture of the forearm, "to direct and command—head work—organization!"

"If war should come again—" Marta began. Mrs. Galland nudged her.

A Brown never mentioned war to an officer of the Grays; it was not at all in the accepted proprieties. But Marta rushed on: "So many would be engaged that it would be more horrible than ever."

"You cannot make omelets without breaking eggs," Westerling answered with suave finality.

"The aeroplane will take its place as an auxiliary," he went on, his mind still running on the theme of her prophecy, which the meeting with Lanstron had quickened. "But war will, as ever, be won by the bayonet that takes and holds a position. We shall have no miracle victories, no—"

There he broke off. He did not accompany Mrs. Galland and Marta back to the house, but made his adieu at the garden-gate.

"I'm sure that I shall never marry a soldier!" Marta burst out as she and her mother were ascending the steps.

CHAPTER II.

Ten Years Later.

His Excellency the chief of staff of the Grays was seldom in his office. His Excellency had years, rank, prestige. The breast of his uniform sagged with the weight of his decorations. He appeared for the army at great functions; his picture was in the shop-windows. Hedworth Westerling, the new vice-chief of staff, was content with this arrangement. His years would not permit him the supreme honor. This was for a figurehead, while he had the power.

His appointment to the staff ten years ago had given him the field he wanted, the capital itself, for the play of his abilities. His vital energy, his impressive personality, his gift for courting the influences that counted, whether man's or woman's, his astute readiness in stooping to some measure that were in keeping with the times but not with army precedent, had won for him the goal of his ambition. He had passed over the heads of older men, whom many thought his better, rather ruthlessly. Those who would serve loyalty he drew around him; those who were bitter he crowded out of his way.

In the adjoining room, occupied by Westerling, the walls were hung with the silhouettes of infantrymen, such as you see at maneuvers, in different positions of firing, crouching in shallow trenches, standing in deep trenches, or lying flat on the stomach on level earth. Another silhouette, that of an infantryman running, was peppered with white points in arms and legs and parts of the body that were not vital, to show in how many places a man may be hit with a small-caliber bullet and still survive.

In this day of universal European conception, if Westerling were to win in war it would be with five millions—five hundred thousand more than when he faced a young Brown officer over the wreck of an aeroplane—including the reserves; each man running, firing, crouching, as was the figure on the wall, and trying to give more of the white points that peppered the silhouette than he received.

Now Turcas, the assistant vice-chief of staff, and Bouchard, chief of the division of intelligence, standing on either side of Westerling's desk, awaited his decisions on certain matters which they had brought to his attention. Both were older than Westerling, Turcas by ten and Bouchard by fifteen years.

Turcas had been strongly urged in inner army circles for the place that Westerling had won, but his manner and his ability to court influence were against him. A lath of a man and stiff as a lath, pale, with thin, tightly-drawn lips, quiet, steel-gray eyes, a tracery of blue veins showing on his full temples, he suggested the acetic no less than the soldier, while his incisive brevity of speech, flavored now and then with pungent humor, without any inflection in his dry voice, was in keeping with his appearance. He arrived with the clerks in the morning and frequently remained after they were gone. As a master of detail Westerling regarded him as an invaluable assistant, with certain limitations, which were those of the pigeonhole and the treadmill. As for Bouchard, nature had meant him to be a wheel-horse. He had never had any hope of being chief of staff.

Hawk-eyed, with a great beak nose and iron-gray hair, intensely and solemnly serious, lacking a sense of humor, he would have looked at home with his big, bony hands gripping a broadsword hilt and his lank body clothed in chain armor. He had a mastiff's devotion to its master for his chief.

"Since Lanstron became chief of intelligence of the Browns information seems to have stopped," said Westerling, but not complainingly. He appreciated Bouchard's loyalty.

"Yes, they say he even burns his laundry bills, he is so careful," Bouchard replied.

"But that we ought to know," Westerling proceeded, referring very insistently to a secret of the Browns which had baffled Bouchard. "Try a woman," he went on with that terse, hard directness which reflected one of his sides. "There is nobody like a woman for that sort of thing. Spend enough to get the right woman."

Turcas and Bouchard exchanged a glance, which rose suggestively from the top of the head of the seated vice-chief of staff. Turcas smiled slightly, while Bouchard was graven as usual.

"You could hardly reach Lanstron though you spent a queen's ransom," said Bouchard in his literal fashion.

"I should say not!" Westerling exclaimed. "No doubt about Lanstron's being all there! I saw him ten years ago after his first aeroplane flight under conditions that proved it. However, he must have susceptible subordinates."

"We'll set all the machinery we have to work to find one, sir," Bouchard replied.

"Another thing, we must dismiss any idea that they are concealing either artillery or dirigibles or planes that we do not know of," continued Westerling. "That is a sign of our apprehensions. The fact that we find no truth in the rumors proves that there is none. Such things are too important to be concealed by one army from another."

"Lanstron certainly cannot carry them in his pockets," remarked Turcas. "Still, we must be sure," he added thoughtfully, more to himself than to Westerling, who had already turned his attention to a document which Turcas laid on the desk.

"The 128th Regiment has been ordered to South La Tir, but no order yet given for the 132d, whose place it takes," he explained.

"Let it remain for the present!" Westerling replied.

After they had withdrawn, the look that passed between Turcas and Bouchard was a pointed question. The 132d to remain at South La Tir? Was there something more than "newspaper talk" in this latest diplomatic crisis between the Grays and the Browns? Westerling alone was in the confidence of the premier of late. An exchange of ideas between the two subordinates would be fruitless surmise and against the very instinct of staff secrecy, where every man knew only his work and asked about no one else's.

Westerling ran through the papers that Turcas had prepared for him. If Turcas had written them, Westerling knew that they were properly done. Having cleared his desk into the hands of his executive clerk, he looked at the he mused. This done, he put seven-teen under twenty-seven and thirty-two under forty-two. He made the subtraction and studied the two tens.

A swing door opened softly and his executive clerk reappeared with a soft tread.

"Some papers for your signature, sir," he said as he slipped them on the blotter in front of Westerling. "And the 132d—no order about that, sir?" he asked.

"None. It remains!" Westerling replied.

The clerk went out impressed, his chief taking to sums of subtraction and totally preoccupied! The 132d to remain! He, too, had a question-mark in his secret mind.

Westerling proceeded with his mathematics. Having heavily shaded the tens, he essayed a sum in division. He found that ten went into seventy just seven times.

"One-seventh the allotted span of life!" he mused. "Take off fifteen years for youth and fifteen after fifty-five—nobody counts after that, though I mean to—and you have ten into forty, which is one-fourth. That is a good deal. But it's more to a woman than to a man—yes, a lot more to a woman than to a man!"

The clerk was right in thinking Westerling preoccupied; but it was not with the international crisis. Over his coffee the name of Miss Marta Galland, in the list of arrivals at a hotel, had caught his eye in the morning paper. A note to her had brought an answer, saying that her time was limited, but she would be glad to have him call at five that afternoon.

Westerling realized that the question of marriage as a social requirement might arise when he should become officially chief of staff with the retirement of His Excellency the field-marshal. For the present he enjoyed his position as a bachelor who was the most favored man in the army too much to think of marriage.

It was a little surprising that the bell that the girl of seventeen had rung in his secret mind when he was on one of the first rounds of the ladder, now lost in the mists of a lower stratum of existence, should ever tinkle again. Yet he had heard its note in the tone of her prophecy with each step in his promotion; and while the other people whom he had known at La Tir were the vagrant shadows of personalities, her picture was as definite in detail as when she said: "You have the will! You have the ambition!" She had recognized in him the power that he felt; foreseen his ascent to the very apex of the pyramid. She was still unmarried, which was strange; for she had not been bad-looking and she was of a fine old family. What was she like now? Commonplace and provincial, most likely. Many of the people he had known in his early days appeared so when he met them again. But, at the worst, he looked for an interesting half-hour.

The throbbing activity of the streets of the capital, as his car proceeded on the way to her hotel, formed an energetic accompaniment to his gratifying backward survey of how all his plans had worked out from the very day of the proposal. Had he heard the remark of a great manufacturer to the banker at his side in a passing limousine, "There goes the greatest captain of industry of us all!" Westerling would only have thought: "Certainly. I am chief of staff. I am at the head of all your workmen at one time or another!" Had he heard the banker's answer, "But pretty poor pay, pretty small dividends!" he would have thought, "Splendid dividends—the dividends of power!"

He had a caste contempt for the men of commerce, with their mercenary talk about credit and market prices; and also for the eclectics, doctors, engineers, and men of other professions, who spoke of things in books which he did not understand. Reading books was one of the faults of Turcas, his assistant. No bookish soldier, he knew, had ever been a great general. He resented the growing power of these leaders of the civil world, taking distinction away from the military, even when, as a man of parts, he had to court their influence. His was the profession that was and ever should be the elect. A penniless subaltern was a gentleman, while he could never think of a man in business as one.

All the faces in the street belonged to a strange, busy world outside his interest and thoughts. They formed what was known as the public, often making a clatter about things which they did not understand, when they should obey the orders of their superiors. Of late, their clatter had been about the extra taxes for the recent increase of the standing forces by another corps. The public was barking with a parrot's head. Yet it did not admire the tolling ox, but the eagle and the lion.

As his car came to the park his eyes lighted at sight of one of the dividends—one feature of urban life that ever gave him a thrill. A battalion of the 128th, which he had ordered that afternoon to the very garrison at South La Tir that he had once commanded, was marching through the main avenue. Youths all, of twenty-one or two, they were in a muddy-grayish uniform which was the color of the plain as seen from the veranda of the Galland house. Where these came from were other boys growing up to take their places. The mothers of the nation were doing their duty. All the land was a breeding-ground for the dividends of Hedworth Westerling.

At the far side of the park he saw another kind of dividend—another group of marching men. These were not in uniform. They were the unemployed. Many were middle-aged, with worn, tired faces. Beside the tax- (Continued on page 15) clock. It had barely turned four. He picked up the final staff report of observations on the late Italian campaign, just printed in book form, glanced at it and laid it aside. Already he knew the few lessons afforded by this war "done on the cheap," with limited equipment and over bad roads. No dirigibles had been used and few planes. It was no criterion, except in the effect of the fire of the new pattern guns, for the conflict of vast masses of highly trained men against vast masses of lightly trained men, with rapid transportation over good roads, complete equipment, thorough organization, backed by generous resources, in the cataclysm of two great European powers.

Rather idly, now, he drew a pad toward him and, taking up a pencil, made the figures seventeen and twenty-seven. Then he made the figures thirty-two and forty-two. He blackened them with repeated tracings as he mused. This done, he put seven-teen under twenty-seven and thirty-two under forty-two. He made the subtraction and studied the two tens.

A swing door opened softly and his executive clerk reappeared with a soft tread.

"Some papers for your signature, sir," he said as he slipped them on the blotter in front of Westerling. "And the 132d—no order about that, sir?" he asked.

"None. It remains!" Westerling replied.

The clerk went out impressed, his chief taking to sums of subtraction and totally preoccupied! The 132d to remain! He, too, had a question-mark in his secret mind.

Westerling proceeded with his mathematics. Having heavily shaded the tens, he essayed a sum in division. He found that ten went into seventy just seven times.

"One-seventh the allotted span of life!" he mused. "Take off fifteen years for youth and fifteen after fifty-five—nobody counts after that, though I mean to—and you have ten into forty, which is one-fourth. That is a good deal. But it's more to a woman than to a man—yes, a lot more to a woman than to a man!"

The clerk was right in thinking Westerling preoccupied; but it was not with the international crisis. Over his coffee the name of Miss Marta Galland, in the list of arrivals at a hotel, had caught his eye in the morning paper. A note to her had brought an answer, saying that her time was limited, but she would be glad to have him call at five that afternoon.

Westerling realized that the question of marriage as a social requirement might arise when he should become officially chief of staff with the retirement of His Excellency the field-marshal. For the present he enjoyed his position as a bachelor who was the most favored man in the army too much to think of marriage.

It was a little surprising that the bell that the girl of seventeen had rung in his secret mind when he was on one of the first rounds of the ladder, now lost in the mists of a lower stratum of existence, should ever tinkle again. Yet he had heard its note in the tone of her prophecy with each step in his promotion; and while the other people whom he had known at La Tir were the vagrant shadows of personalities, her picture was as definite in detail as when she said: "You have the will! You have the ambition!" She had recognized in him the power that he felt; foreseen his ascent to the very apex of the pyramid. She was still unmarried, which was strange; for she had not been bad-looking and she was of a fine old family. What was she like now? Commonplace and provincial, most likely. Many of the people he had known in his early days appeared so when he met them again. But, at the worst, he looked for an interesting half-hour.

The throbbing activity of the streets of the capital, as his car proceeded on the way to her hotel, formed an energetic accompaniment to his gratifying backward survey of how all his plans had worked out from the very day of the proposal. Had he heard the remark of a great manufacturer to the banker at his side in a passing limousine, "There goes the greatest captain of industry of us all!" Westerling would only have thought: "Certainly. I am chief of staff. I am at the head of all your workmen at one time or another!" Had he heard the banker's answer, "But pretty poor pay, pretty small dividends!" he would have thought, "Splendid dividends—the dividends of power!"

He had a caste contempt for the men of commerce, with their mercenary talk about credit and market prices; and also for the eclectics, doctors, engineers, and men of other professions, who spoke of things in books which he did not understand. Reading books was one of the faults of Turcas, his assistant. No bookish soldier, he knew, had ever been a great general. He resented the growing power of these leaders of the civil world, taking distinction away from the military, even when, as a man of parts, he had to court their influence. His was the profession that was and ever should be the elect. A penniless subaltern was a gentleman, while he could never think of a man in business as one.

All the faces in the street belonged to a strange, busy world outside his interest and thoughts. They formed what was known as the public, often making a clatter about things which they did not understand, when they should obey the orders of their superiors. Of late, their clatter had been about the extra taxes for the recent increase of the standing forces by another corps. The public was barking with a parrot's head. Yet it did not admire the tolling ox, but the eagle and the lion.

As his car came to the park his eyes lighted at sight of one of the dividends—one feature of urban life that ever gave him a thrill. A battalion of the 128th, which he had ordered that afternoon to the very garrison at South La Tir that he had once commanded, was marching through the main avenue. Youths all, of twenty-one or two, they were in a muddy-grayish uniform which was the color of the plain as seen from the veranda of the Galland house. Where these came from were other boys growing up to take their places. The mothers of the nation were doing their duty. All the land was a breeding-ground for the dividends of Hedworth Westerling.

At the far side of the park he saw another kind of dividend—another group of marching men. These were not in uniform. They were the unemployed. Many were middle-aged, with worn, tired faces. Beside the tax-

NOW FOR NOVEMBER ELEC-TIONS—GET BUSY.

The primary nominations are over. The Democrats in the state have expressed their preference as to whom they wish to be their standard-bearers this fall, and their choice could not well have fallen on stronger or better men.

This paper has consistently supported Senator Smith for re-nomination, and feels highly gratified that his great abilities should have received the recognition they deserve, and that the party he has so long and faithfully served should show a proper appreciation of his merits.

Now that his party has given him such an emphatic endorse-ment, his case goes to the great jury of Maryland voters, made up of all parties.

Though this be the case, Dem-ocrats should not think their work ended, but rather regard it as only begun; for upon the support he receives from the members of his own political faith will depend his success or failure at the polls.

With a candidate such as Sen-ator Smith to head the ticket it ought not to be hard for the Democratic party in Maryland to roll up a majority in Novem-ber big enough to show the country at large that Demo-cracy is not on the wane here.

We fail to see how the great mass of independent voters in this state can fail to rally to his standard. His record of things done ought to satisfy every one of his ability to accomplish, and his faithful attention to his duties cannot but commend it- self to every thinking man who believes that the holding of a public office is a sacred trust and should receive the whole-heart- ed attention of the man who serves.

Senator Smith is first of all a patriotic American, and next to that he is a faithful son of Maryland, and will see to it in the future as he has done in the past, that his native state is given every privilege and right to which it is entitled.

Despite the prophecy of some of his political enemies, Senator Smith has shown that he is in sympathy with the present administration and has given it and its measures his hearty sup- port on every occasion.

He has proven a most valu- able man in the past and will prove of even more value in the years to come. We are undergo- ing a period of re-adjustments in the political as well as the business world, and we need good, strong men to shape our course in both—Men who while progressive are yet conserva- tive; men who while recogniz- ing the evil of many of our pres- ent institutions, will not advo- cate a change that will in the long run lead to greater evils; men who while believing in rem- edying conditions that help one class of men to the detriment of another, recognize that in order that the least harm may be done the innocent, time must be given the business interests of the country to meet the changed conditions.

Senator Smith is of that valu- able type of man who, while progressive, is yet safe and sane, and his advice will be badly needed in the years of unrest now before us.

Wicomico has given both Sen-ator Smith and Senator Price a substantial vote in the primar- ies, and doubtless she will give an equally strong support to both in the coming election. It must not be lost sight of that the first thing to do is to get the vote registered, and to this end everything must for the present give way. Regardless of the political affiliation it is the duty of every man entitled to cast a ballot to register. Our form of government means that the ma- jority shall rule, and this means a majority of the people entitled to vote, and is composed of the good and the bad, the intelli- gent and the ignorant. The ig- norant and the vicious in both parties will register—the ig- norant because of their great pride in the privilege, the vicious be- cause they recognize that the privilege gives to them a cer- tain power, very valuable in times of "stress."

The ones that give trouble are the "intelligent good," who are always making a great out- cry about the terrible conditions in "politics," yet refuse to take part in either the primary or general elections. These are the ones it will take most work to get to register, and these must be handled in a different way. It is to this great class of "intelligent good" that we pro- pose to direct our appeal from now to the close of registration, leaving the others to be handled as they are usually handled by those who from long habit best know how.

The ADVERTISER extends to both Senator Smith and Mr. Price its sincere congratulation, and pledges to both its hearty support in the fight now on for election.

LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES

They Are Closing Observing Public Health Conditions

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject made, the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

According to this it would seem that a medicine for the kidneys, possessing real healing and curative properties, would be a blessing to thousands.
Dr. Kilmer and Co., Binghamton,
N. Y., who prepare Dr. Kilmer's
Swamp-Root, the well known kidney, liver and bladder remedy, claim that judging from evidence received from thousands everywhere, who are constantly in touch with their customers, and also indisputable proof in the form of grateful testimonial letters from thousands of reliable citizens, this preparation is remarkably successful in sickness caused by kidney and bladder troubles. Every interesting statement they receive regarding Swamp Root is investigated and no testimonial is published unless the party who sends it is reported of good character. They have on file many sworn statements of recoveries in the most distressing cases. They state that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is mild and gentle in its action and its healing influence is soon noticed in most cases.

Swamp Root is purely an herbal compound and Dr. Kilmer and Co. advise all readers who feel in need of such a remedy to give it a trial. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes—50c. and $1.00. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer and Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be-sure and mention the Salisbury Weekly Advertiser ad.

EASILY MADE UTILITY BOX

Useful and Attractive Article for the Bureau May Be Put Together for a Few Cents.

The material required to make a utility box for the bureau is as follows: Six oblong pill boxes, ten cents; two yards of ribbon, three-quarter inch, ten cents; one yard broad ribbon, 15 cents. Total 35 cents.

Remove the drawers from each pill box. Arrange the outside cover sections in three rows of two each, as in illustration. Paste these boxes together in this position. Take the narrow ribbon and cover the four sides of each drawer by pasting. Sew on the short side of one of the drawers a button, on another a hook and so on, as in illustration. These can serve as handles as well as labels for the contents of each drawer. Slide the drawers into place. Take the broad ribbon and, starting at the bottom, wrap it around the outside of the cabinet, pasting it at the bottom. Cut a piece of paper the exact size of the bottom and paste it over the ribbon, thus hiding neatly the sewing place of the ribbon. Finish by making a rose, rosette or bow of the remaining ribbon and tack it on the top.

NEATEST OF HAIR RECEIVERS

Washable Article Is a Boon, Especially to the Woman Who Is Making a Journey.

A hair receiver that is washable is a boon. Of course, the china ones are also sanitary, but the receiver in question is really for the traveler's bag or grip. She can take it with her on a journey and save the combings, if she so wishes, or dispose of them when opportunity offers. It does seem that that is one thing that the average hostess will forget to provide, a hair receiver; and one's hair, somehow, will hop out of the wastepaper basket and float about the room, in spite of all we can do. When the traveler has a little lingerie receiver, she simply takes it from her grip and hangs it on the side of her dresser and deposits all her combings therein. The receiver is really nothing more than a tiny bit of lawn or washable silk, shirred into a ball-like bag. There is a shirring at the top of the material and at the bottom. The beginning of the bag is but a rather narrow strip of silk, and then the shirring at either edge is done. It is best to hem the top in the form of a casing and then to run a ribbon through it, so that it can be drawn up at will. To this top casing is attached a long ribbon loop, one on either side of the bag, to hold it in position to receive the hair and to act as a hanger, so that it may be attached to the dressing table at a moment's notice.

TAILORED EFFECT

A very attractive model of white bontaline. Note the new drapery on the skirt.

Table Center In Green.

A green centerpiece for the table can always be had as long as there are carrots at hand, if the little top bit of each carrot is saved. These little disks can be trimmed down to any shape as long as the center is not injured. Place a number of the tops in a shallow dish and almost cover them with water. After this the only attention they will require is to be kept moist. When the green, feathery sprays begin to shoot, if they are thinned down, a tall, graceful fern-like effect will be the result. They grow rapidly and will last a long time.

To Freshen Ribbons.

Black ribbons will lose that rusty appearance if let stand in a cup of water to which a teaspoonful of indelible ink has been added.

Guest Towels.

Towels done in cross stitch are in great favor now. Blue letters with tiny pink flowers and green leaves give a pretty touch of color to guest towels.

A good idea is to buy towels already scalloped and work over the scallops in white or any desired color.

When Cleaning China.

To remove spots and tea stains from china, the following is excellent: Dampen the spots with water and rub liberally with salt.

KEEPING RECORDS WEEDS OUT BOARDER COWS

Cecil County Dairyman Increases Annual Profit Per Cow $27.91 in Two Years.

G. E. WOLCOTT.

Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

In the spring of 1912, Mr. J. Harry Maxwell, of Cecil county, joined the Rising Sun Dairy Improvement Association, being one of the first to realize the great advantage that might be derived from knowing how much milk and butterfat each cow in the herd produced during the year; and how much feed was required to make the production.

A PROFIT MAKER.

The results which are given below prove that Mr. Maxwell was not mistaken in his opinion regarding the value of knowing the production of each cow in his herd.

At the end of the first year, it was found that the average production of a herd of 15 cows was 5,062 pounds of milk, containing 214 pounds of butterfat. The cost of feed per cow amounted to $42.71. There was a profit of $41.85 above the cost of feed. For every dollar expended for feed the average cow made a return in milk amounting to $1.95.

The best cow in the herd, the first year, yielded 5,988 pounds of milk containing 268 pounds of butterfat, while three cows were sold as unprofitable, one making a yield of only 2,610 pounds of milk.

During the first year, Mr. Maxwell studied the records carefully, and made plans to feed the herd for its highest and most economical production the next year. He found that the production during the months of July and August was very low, owing to dry pastures and a lack of green feed; also that the effect of short feed at this time could not be overcome during the remainder of the lactation period. The second year green corn was provided as a supplement to dry pastures. As a result, the records show that during the second year the average cow produced 7,142 pounds of milk containing 300 pounds of butterfat; she consumed $47.91 worth of feed, and made a profit above the cost feed amounting to $69.76.

The highest producing cow in the herd yielded 9,820 pounds of milk, containing 406 pounds of butterfat. Her feed cost $48.62, and the profit above the cost of feed was $115.72.

The following table gives a clear idea of the increased production, that resulted when a careful system of feeding was followed:

Average Production Per Cow.
Year.	Milk lbs.	Fat lbs.	Cost of feed.	Profit over cost of feed.
1st	5,062	214	$42.71	$41.85
2nd	7,142	300	$47.91	$69.76
Gain	2,080	86	5.20	27.91

This increase was made largely through feeding. Three cows were eliminated as unprofitable during the first year. This, of course, had a material effect in making the average production higher; but the larger factor was the individual feeding.

By keeping records the low producers can be discarded; and the remainder of the herd can be fed according to their production. These two factors will increase the average production of any herd; and make the yield at a lower feed cost.

WHEAT AND VETCH SEEDING NOW WILL PROVIDE NEEDED ROUGHAGE IN SPRING.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ.

Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

After such a dry season as we have had this year, we may naturally expect a shortage in the supply of hay and roughage early in the spring. Hence it is quite important that we plan our farming operations this fall so that we will be provided with plenty of good feed while waiting on the next hay crop.

For this purpose there is probably nothing better than a mixture of winter oats and vetch or wheat and vetch. The vetch and wheat can be mixed and seeded with the wheat drill. A good mixture to sow is 20 to 25 lbs. of vetch and about 1 bushel of wheat or oats per acre. This will grow up early in the spring and can be used as a soiling crop or cut for hay when the grain is in the soft dough stage. It makes a good yield of an excellent quality of hay.

Vetch yields well by itself, but owing to its viney habit of growth, it is best to sow it with wheat or winter oats.

Poached Eggs in Muffin Rings.

When frying or poaching eggs for breakfast, slip into the pan a muffin ring for each egg, break the egg into it, and when it has set as much as desired, lift it out with a cake lifter, ring and all, then remove the ring. The white of the egg is in a nice circle, and not only looks better and is tenderer because it is thicker, but it is easier to serve. The washing of the muffin rings is not as much trouble as trying to "slide" a broken egg to a plate from a hot frying pan.

DAY OF THE BLOUSE

HAS BECOME INDISPENSABLE PART OF WARDROBE.

Nothing Really Seems Able to Take Its Place, Either for Usefulness or for the Pretty Effect It Gives Costume.

Those who have neglected to provide themselves with separate blouses for warm weather wear have doubtless before this time realized their mistake. The separate blouse of silk, linen or of sheer cotton has a very important place in the wardrobe of the modern woman. For golf, tennis, walking, rowing and for all summer sports there is nothing that can take the place of the separate waist. The fashionable loose blouse that is worn this season, with a separate skirt of tub material, or with a coat and skirt to complete a costume is, without doubt, prettier than blouses ever were before.

The waist that the smart girl will want—that is, if she is not too stout—is one that is of two materials. The models of this type vary a little, but the general lines are the same. The heavier material is used for the fronts, which are straight strips about two and a half to three inches wide each. These continue up in a rounded or V-shaped piece that fits the neck much the same as the neck and front facing of an ordinary kimono, with the exception that the fronts do not lap over each other, but meet edge to edge.

The sleeves are finished with a band of the heavy material and at the waist line with a shaped vest girdle that comes well down over the hips and fastens at the front. The back, sides and sleeves of the blouse are of the sheer goods and are generally cut in one piece. The effect when finished is that of something between the new long-waisted blouse and the long-lived loose blouse.

A feature that is very marked in the new sport waists is the set-in sleeve. There is nothing particularly new in the shaping of the sleeve itself, but the fact that it is not cut in one with a part of the waist, as has been the custom for several seasons, makes it striking. The sleeves are generally long, but some blouses do show them three-quarter length. They are either finished in bishop style or the regulation cut type.

There is much to be said in favor of silk for the sport blouse. Such blouses keep clean longer than linen or cotton waists, and should they become tumbled it is a very easy matter to press them in one's room with an electric iron. Another thing in their favor is that they are easily laundered, for they do not require the regular process of bluing and boiling and starching as do linen and cotton waists, in order to keep them in good condition.

Handkerchief Linen.

BEAUTY DON'TS

Don't forget that bright colors should not be worn by those who are inclined to be stout.

Don't wear tightly-fitting tailored frocks if you are thin and tall.

Don't rub the eyes too roughly with the towel after washing. They are liable to get inflamed if you do.

Don't cut your eyelashes with the idea of making them grow. You will do them lasting harm instead.

Don't forget that vaseline is simply splendid for thickening and darkening the eyebrows and eyelashes.

Don't dress your hair too low over the brows. Thin and scanty eyebrows are largely caused through this.

Don't lean your elbows on the table. If you make a habit of doing this the skin of the elbows will become scaly and hard.

Don't give up walking in the hot weather. Remember that a certain amount of exercise is necessary every day if you want to keep well.

Don't forget that glycerin and cucumber have a very softening effect upon the skin, rubbed into the skin regularly every night.

The Radium Spangle.

The hit of the season is the opalescent or radium cup spangle. This idea appears in manifold designs on net or on lace alone or in combination with beads. Spangled pendants and tassels are features of note. Silk and beaded tassels are included in the running. For the street dress or suit of severe tailored lines, sectional gumples and half ornaments with loops are in moderate use. Some of the most novel of these are in leather with beaded designs. Rich ornaments of galalith, in odd Egyptian designs and colorings, are seen. In many instances they appear in combination with passementerie effects and drops.

Clean Seed Important.

Clean seed is of prime importance, no matter what variety is sown. Whether the seed is furnished or purchased, it is well to be sure it is thoroughly cleaned or else reclean it before sowing.

Skin Lotion.

A lotion composed of two ounces of lettuce juice, two drams of eau de Cologne, two ounces of distilled vinegar and four ounces of elder flower water is said to be especially good for sloughing heat and irritation of the skin. Rub the skin with it frequently.

FRIENDSHIPS.

May the law of Salust always remain engraved on the heart of your king. "Not with the help of armies nor treasures do kingdoms continue to flourish, but with the help of friends, and these cannot be gained by force nor bought with gold; they are won by acts of kindness and by faithfulness." And, moreover, "it is necessary always to live in unity with one's own; by concord the smallest things become great, whilst by discord the greatest are reduced to naught." Let him remember the example of M. Agrippa, who thought much of this precept which alone may make of your royal master a good brother, a good comrade, a good friend, a good king. Next to God let nothing be dearer to him than friendships. Let him always implicitly trust the man he once found worthy of his friendship and, according to the advice of Seneca, let him prove his friends in all things, but take care first to prove himself also.

Slow in contracting friendships, let him be even more slow in breaking them asunder and, if possible, never let him do so.—Petra.

NIGHT.

Mysterious night! When our first parents knew Thee, from report divine, I heard thy name. Did he not tremble for this lovely frame—This glorious canopy of light and blue? Yet 'neath a curtain of translucent dew Bathed in the rays of the great setting flame, Hesperus, with the host of heaven, came And lo! creation widened in man's view.

Who could have thought such darkness lay concealed Within thy beams, oh, sun! or who could find, While fly and leaf and insect stood revealed That to such countless orbs thou mad'st us blind! Why do we then shun death with anxious strife If light can thus deceive, wherefore not life? —Joseph Blanco White.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Reputations, like beavers and cloaks, shall last some people twice the time of others.—Douglas Jerrold.

Dare to look up to God and say, Deal with me in the future as thou wilt; I am of the same mind as thou art; I am thine; I refuse nothing that pleases thee; lead me where thou wilt; clothe me in any dress thou choosest.—Epictetus.

Every tub must stand upon its own bottom.—Bunyan.

One of the grandest things in having rights is that, being your rights, you may give them up.—George MacDonald.

Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit and lost without deserving.—Shakespeare.

RESPONSIBILITY.

All persons possessing any portion of power ought to be strongly and awfully impressed with an idea that they act in trust and that they are to account for their conduct in that trust to the one great Master, Author and Founder of society.—Burke.

It is meat and drink to me to see a clown. By my troth, we that have good wits have much to answer for.—"As You Like It." Shakespeare.

Men's minds are as variant as their faces. Where the motives of their actions are pure the operation of the former is no more to be imputed to them, as a crime, than the appearance of the latter, for both, being the work of nature, are alike unavoidable.—George Washington.

THE ISLE.

There was a little lawn islet By anemone and violet, Like mosaic pavens. And its roof was flowers and leaves. Which the summer's breath enwoven. Where no sun nor showers nor breeze Pierce the pines and tallest trees, Each a gem engraven. Girt by many an azure wave With which the clouds and mountains pave A lake's blue chasm. —Shelley.

Woman Given High Position.

In Switzerland a woman has been appointed to the chief inspectorship of factories, a coveted position hitherto held only by men. This appointment is the outcome of a special commission which met to inquire into factory conditions of the various cantons. Owing to the great increase in women in industrial life the desirability of a woman as chief inspector was unanimously agreed upon by the commission.

WHAT IS GREATNESS.

Ah, gentle, tender lady mine! The winter wind blows cold and shrill.

Come, fill me one more glass of wine And give the silly fools their will.

And what care we for war or wrack, How kings and heroes rise and fall?

Look yonder, in his coffin black There lies the greatest of them all!

To pluck him down and keep him up, Died many million human souls—

'Tis 12 o'clock and time to sup. Bid Mary heap the fire with coals.

He captured many thousand guns, He wrote "The Great" before his name.

Though more than half the world was his, He died without a rood his own.

And borrowed from his enemies Six foot of ground to lie upon.

He fought a thousand glorious wars, And more than half the world was his;

And somewhere now, in yonder stars, Can tell, mayhap, what greatness is.

—William Makepeace Thackeray.

THOUGHTS ON LIFE.

The present hour alone is man's.—Samuel Johnson.

Life is the gift of God and is divine.—Longfellow.

Have more mind on thy books than thy bugs, more desire of godliness than gold, greater affection to die well than to live wantonly.—Lyly.

Life is a mission. Every other definition of life is false, and it leads all who accept it astray. Religion, science, philosophy, though still at variance upon many points, all agree in this—that every existence is an aim.—Mazzini.

When life is true to the poles of nature the streams of truth will roll through us in song.—Emerson.

EPITAPH OF AN INFANT.

Many a soul did I wait For admission to the gate Of the living. But to see Much was not vouchsafed to me In my little term and span. I, that hoped to be a man, Like a snowflake incarnated, Seem for three days' light created.

Two eyes saw I, and the sun, And gold spires of Babylon. But, while voices I forgot Called from cloud and minaret Men to wake, I stood once more With the dreams outside the door.

My Duty.

There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbors good. One person I have to make good: Myself. But my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy—if I may.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Maud—"Harriet can read her husband like a book." Marie—"He is her third volume, isn't he?"

HABIT.

Imagine Hercules as oarsman in a rotten boat. What can he do there but by the very force of his stroke expedite the ruin of his craft? Take care, then, of the timbers of your boat, and avoid all practices likely to introduce either wet or dry rot among them. And this is not to be accomplished by desultory or intermittent efforts of the will, but by the formation of habits. The will, no doubt, has sometimes to put forth its strength in order to strangle or crush the special temptation, but the formation of right habits is essential to your permanent security. They diminish your chance of falling when assailed, and they augment your chances of recovery when overthrown.—John Tyndall.

ON HIS BLINDNESS.

When I consider how my light is spent Ere half my days in this dark world and wide, And that one talent which is death to hide Lodged with me useless, though my soul more bent To serve therewith my Maker, and present My true account, lest he returning chide. "Dost God exact day labor, light denied?" I fondly ask. But patience, to prevent That murmur, soon replies, "God doth not need Either man's work or his own gifts. Who best Bear his mild yoke, they serve him best. His state Is kingly. Thousands at his bidding speed, And post o'er land and ocean without rest; They also serve who only stand and wait." —John Milton.

SAID OF SLAVERY.

Corrupted freemen are the worst of slaves.—Garrison.

Servitude seizes on few, but many seize on her.—Seneca.

By the law of slavery, man, created in the image of God, is divested of the human character and declared to be a mere chattel.—Charles Sumner.

That execrable sum of all villainies commonly called slave trade.—John Wesley.

Enslave a man and you destroy his ambition, his enterprise, his capacity. In the constitution of human nature the desires of bettering one's condition is the mainspring of effort. The first touch of slavery snaps this spring.—Mann.

SUNDAY OBSERVANCE.

I have told such of my people as I deal with in these months, told them plainly and told them frankly, that if they will say their prayers with the clergy at one hour of the Lord's day, the clergy are perfectly willing to play baseball with them at another hour of the same day, which is their day of rest, which rest is recreation; that if they will comply with the requirements of the church and observe Sunday, first of all, as a day of prayer they may have the rest of it as a day of play, and that, if they have stopped their work in order to worship, having worshipped, they may "walk abroad and recreate themselves." If this be treason, either to the church or to the day, let those who wish to do so make the most of it.—Rev. David M. Steele, Philadelphia.

FAR MORE FAIR.

More fair than sunrise mountains In folded veils of light, Or trails in silver birches Engreened and mossed from sight; More fair than new mown meadows.

Where sliding waters flow, Or purple clouds of thunder, Where torrents stream below;

Than rolling, southward valleys With tasseled maize in bloom, Or northward pines entangled In dark and rearing plume; Than showery west empearling A dew; distance gray; Than drifted plains by starlight Or rising moons of May.

I saw a fairer picture, Outshining fields and skies, I saw one happy morning A child from fever rise. I would that I were Raphael To paint that lovely sight. I saw him pick a daisy With wasted fingers white. —Sarah N. Cleghorn in Munsey's.

IN TREE WITH RACCOONS.

Caroline County, Maryland, Farmer Fights for His Life.

Horace Robinson, a young farmer of Smithville, six miles north of Federalburg, had a thrilling experience in the top of an oak tree the other night with five raccoons, which he encountered while on his way to visit a neighboring farmer. Before the battle ended, Robinson fell from the tree, completely exhausted. Three of his ribs were broken; his thigh was badly injured, and it is feared he is internally injured.

The young man set out from home shortly after dark, and was passing through a strip of woods when he encountered the 'coons. He followed them to a big oak, which the 'coons climbed. Thinking that he could capture one of them alive, Robinson also climbed the tree, but when he reached the 'coons they showed fight, and for 15 minutes the young farmer had to fight at a great disadvantage to save his life.

The 'coons got all around him, and though he kept his arms going like piston rods, the 'coons inflicted ugly gashes with their claws. Robinson kept up the fight from his perilous position until completely exhausted, when he fell to the ground. He dragged himself, bleeding, to the country road, where his groans were heard by his father, W. H. Robinson, who picked his son up and carried him home.

All Voters Must Register.

There will be an entirely new registration of voters in this State this fall, and only those who register on one of the four dates, Sept. 22nd, 23rd, Oct. 6th, and Oct. 7th, can cast a ballot in the coming election.

IMPROVED WHEAT VARIETIES RETURN HIGH YIELDS

Practical Tests in Many Sections Of the State Demonstrate Higher Yields From Selected Wheats.

No question is more frequently heard among farmers at this season than, "What is the best variety of wheat and where can I get the seed?" The State Experiment Station undertakes to answer this question as a result of many tests with varieties it has conducted in various parts of the State on private farms and on its own experimental fields where uniform conditions of soil, climate, and fertilization have enabled such tests to be carried out with accuracy. During the past six or seven years there have been about one hundred varieties in test under these conditions.

A GOOD STAND.

Some of these varieties have been found to be very inferior and in consequence have been discarded. Others have been found to yield well in a favorable season, but to not stand up well when conditions are unfavorable. Still other varieties produce well all most every year regardless of conditions, and even in a very unfavorable season maintain a much higher yield than the poor varieties. It is in these last varieties that we are the most interested, since the record of their yields has been uniformly high, and they have proved their yielding qualities not only in the Experiment Station, but in many sections of the State, where they have been grown on private farms side by side with the native varieties.

Variety.	1914.	5-Year Average
Bearded Wheats.
Purple Straw.	34.26	31.36
Dietz Longberry.	34.72	30.61
Mammoth Red.	37.11	31.03
Turkish Amber.	37.38	30.05
Fulcaster.	37.42	31.42

Smooth Wheats.
China.	34.16	31.49
Currell's Prolific.	38.88	31.03

Compare these figures, and the wheat grower will see that the better varieties in a test of five years have lead the poorer and more commonly grown wheats of the State by an average increase of five bushels per acre, surely a gain worth considering. If, as we believe, it can be obtained by the seeding of improved varieties.

FLY IN WHEAT MAY BE CONTROLLED BY TIMELY SEEDING.

T. B. SYMONS.

Maryland Agricultural College.

The Hessian fly can be controlled largely by late planting, rotation of crops and not allowing volunteer wheat to grow on fallow ground. The treatment is essentially one in which the host plant is kept away until the last fall-spring brood of the insect has disappeared. The date of its disappearance depends on the latitude, altitude and weather conditions. A wet September may cause an early disappearance, while a long fall drought and warm weather may cause a much later disappearance. Taking all into consideration, wheat should not be sown in the vicinity of the following cities and towns of the State before the dates given:

Oakland, September 12 to 19; Hagerstown, October 1 to 7; Frederick, October 3 to 10; Westminster, September 26 to October 5; Rockville, October 3 to 8; La Plata, October 9 to 18; Cockeysville, October 3 to 10; Elkton, October 2 to 9; Belair, October 2 to 9; Chestertown, October 6 to 16; Easton, October 9 to 19; Salisbury, October 10 to 17.

It frequently happens in Southern Maryland that wheat does not yield well, and experience inclines us to believe that winter oats could be profitably grown in its place. Winter oats should be seeded in the fall, about the first of October and unless the season is particularly unfavorable, we ought to expect a heavy crop of grain.

The varieties of winter oats that are proving most successful in Maryland are Culbertson, 206, Dewey, and Virginia Gray. The average yield at the Experiment Station farm for several years past has been close to 50 bushels per acre, with grain weighing from 34 to 37 pounds per bushel.

Potash Scarcity Need Not Alarm Farmer

Liberal Use Of Lime Will Free Enough Soil Potash To Supply Average Farm Crops, Such As Corn And Wheat

H. J. PATTERSON.

Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

The supply of potash for our fertilizer mixtures is now cut off by the war and since we depend largely on Germany for this material, it will probably be sometime before it will be again available. While much of the potash for the fall trade has been shipped or is in this country, the fact that there is no more in sight will cause this supply to be used sparingly and at an advanced price.

This scarcity, however, need not seriously concern the average Maryland farmer, particularly the grower of corn and wheat. Most of our soils contain a plentiful supply of potash, which can be made available for the coming wheat crop if a liberal application of lime is used; since lime beside sweetening your soils and liberating nitrogen from organic matter also makes the unavailable potash compounds in the soil, available for the use of the crop.

Experiments carried on at the State Experiment Station through a series of years have proven that the use of lime answers the same purpose as the application of fertilizers containing plenty of potash in the soil. Since we find most Maryland soils rich in potash, we need not be concerned that liming will exhaust the supply for some time to come.

Bearing this fact in mind, growers are advised to dispense with fertilizer mixtures containing potash if the advance in price is due to the rise in the cost of potash. For his wheat and corn, the grower cannot afford to pay much more for his potash supply than he has in the past. In some sections, where tobacco stems and stalks can be secured, they may be used to supply potash as they contain a considerable amount. The chances are, however, that the supply will soon be exhausted under present conditions, and for the average farmer looking for a cheap source of potash for his wheat crop, no better method can be followed than liming his field before seeding.

TREAT YOUR SEED WHEAT FOR SMUT

Insure Clean Seed By Killing the Spores Of Stinking Smut With Formalin.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

When a field of smutted wheat is threshed, many of the "smut balls" are broken and the sound grains are covered with the smut dust. As far as is known, this is practically the only way infection takes place to any serious extent. This infection is especially serious when a clean crop is threshed with a machine that has just threshed a smutted crop.

Before treating your wheat for stinking smut, it is best to remove all unbroken smut balls. Since the smut balls are much lighter than the sound grain, thorough fanning will generally do this. If fanning will not do it, the grain should be poured into a barrel of cold water and thoroughly stirred so that all the smut balls will come to the surface where they can be skimmed off.

Thumps cause great loss in thrift in young pigs. Sunlight, dry, clean beds and plenty of exercise with nutritious foods are essential to a proper control or lessening of these losses. Dusty or damp sleeping quarters are especially favorable to disease infection, because they furnish a favorable place for germ life. Dipping furnishes an excellent means of controlling external parasites, and the dipping vat is an economical and convenient part of the equipment of any large piggery. Galvanized iron vats are cheaper and easier to put up than concrete vats, but do not last as long.

The hog house makes pigs unthrifty and, though the actual loss due to this cause cannot be estimated because it rarely kills an animal, its annoyance to the pig is an important factor in decreasing the rapidity with which gains are made. The house is easily and effectively controlled by repeated dipping in almost any of the standard dips, if they are used in strong solutions.

If a vat is not available one of the three following methods of treatment may be found to suit conditions: (1) Spraying with kerosene; (2) putting up a rubbing post filled with crude oil; (3) putting crude oil or kerosene on the surface of the water in the pigs' wallowing vat. Mange is a serious though not so common parasite as the house, and is best and most effectively treated by dipping.

The brood sow is the first animal to select in laying a foundation for a herd. The better she is the greater the chances for success. A good brood sow must possess depth and length of body, a good heart girth, smooth shoulders, well-sprung ribs and long, deep, well-turned hams. Her sides should be long, deep and straight.

A slightly arched, or straight, broad back is much desired, as it is much stronger than a low back. The back should carry its width and the side lines should be straight. She should stand well up on her toes and have smooth, straight joints with hard but not coarse bone, and must have feminine characteristics, which are indicated by a rather small head and ear, a fully developed, even udder, and absence of shields in the shoulders.

A brood sow should show early maturing qualities and have sufficient capacity to do the work for which she is intended. A smooth coat of fine hair and a broad head with sufficient weight for her age are good indications of early maturity. If selections more than one sow, uniformity of the lot is desirable and important.

The nearer alike the sows the more probability of the pigs being uniform. If pure-bred sows are selected, breed type should be carefully observed. "Breed type" means the characteristics of a breed, and will be discussed later.

In selecting the herd boar the same points are essential, except that the animal should show masculinity.

A strong, broad head and neck, sufficient bone, with strong, straight pasterns, hock and knee joints are important. He should show early maturing characteristics and have well-developed testicles. Shields, or thick plates of skin, should not show on the sides of the shoulder before he is one year of age.

A strong, slightly arched back, with large heart girth, is essential in a first-class boar, for he must have room for the vital organs, namely, heart, lungs, etc. Remember that the boar is at least half of the herd as far as breeding is concerned, and he is usually more, so his selection cannot command any too much care or patience. Get a good boar and he will pay you well.

The farrowing pen should provide a quiet, safe and comfortable place for the sow. Light, cleanliness and freedom from dampness and drafts are essential. A guard rail should be provided to keep the sow from crushing the pigs.

Feeding the sow so that she is properly nourished and not overfat is the most important of the husbandman's duties. She should have succulent feeds, such as pasture or forage in summer, and in winter bran or other laxative feeds should be given, so that constipation and fever may be less likely to develop.

At farrowing time no feed except a little bran or oatmeal gruel should be given, and only moderately warm water for a few days. A little bran or green feed can then be offered, and as the litter grows and all signs of fever leave, more concentrated feeds may be given. Corn and other heating feeds should be fed in limited quantities for some time, but as the pigs grow and there is more demand on the sow she should be fed liberally.

There is no place equal to good pasture for the brood sow and her litter. Alfalfa, clover, rape, oats, rye, vetch, peas, or native pasture afford succulent, nutritious feeds which keep both sow and pigs in good condition. Little pigs will learn to eat the forage with the sow at ten days of age if they have some palatable pasture.

Sun light and clean dry sleeping pens aid materially in starting the pigs off and in securing rapid, economical growth. Feed the sow well and teach the little pigs to eat as soon as possible. Cause both the sow and pigs to take plenty of exercise, whether or not on forage or pasture crops.

The dry sow or bred sow should be handled as economically as possible, so they should have pasture and be fed a well balanced ration and just enough of it to keep them in good condition without permitting them to become fat. As farrowing time approaches the sows should be separated in order to prevent their crowding or injuring one another.

The herd boar is best handled by giving him a pasture lot by himself. His feed should be liberal enough to keep him in good breeding condition only. This will be very light when he is not in use for breeding purposes, but during the breeding his feed should be increased. His ration should consist of some high-protein feeds, along with mill feeds and a little corn. The care of the boar is important because of his relative importance in the herd, and his care, quarters, feed and watering should be carefully seen to and provided.

The term shote is applied to all swine from the time the pig reaches weaning age until the fattening or breeding age is reached. Pigs should be weaned at from eight to twelve weeks, depending on whether or not the sows are to be bred again. It is always wise to have them taught to eat well before weaning, in order that the rate of gain may not be checked. Weaning should be done gradually, the sow's feed being reduced to cause her to dry up properly and at the same time increasing the feed for the pigs. The pig at this age should have a ration rather high in protein and low in carbohydrates.

The boar pigs should be castrated after weaning, but before they reach breeding age; usually a week or two after weaning is a satisfactory time. The loss in gains or by death is less if done while the pig is young. Spaying the females is not advisable under modern conditions and will not be found profitable enough to justify the risk of the operation.

HAY PRODUCT IS IMMENSE
Crop of 1913 Placed at $4,116,000 Tons—One of Big Features of Commercial Industry.

The hay trade of the country is one of the big features of commercial industry and deserves the best system of government and operation in its distribution, and must eventually secure this where there is room for improvement between grower and dealer or consumer. The immensity of the hay product of the United States may be appreciated when the 1913 crop by official report, is placed at $4,116,000 tons; price per ton, $12.43; total, $77,077,000. The 1914 crop has a prospect of a much larger yield.

SANITATION IN HOG HOUSES AND LOTS

Healthy Sow and Her Litter.

Sanitation in the hog house, lot and herd is important and no small problem, states the United States department of agriculture. Swine are affected by many serious diseases and parasites. Tuberculosis, cholera, lice and mange attack vast numbers of hogs and cause a consequent heavy loss to swine growers annually.

Thumps cause great loss in thrift in young pigs. Sunlight, dry, clean beds and plenty of exercise with nutritious foods are essential to a proper control or lessening of these losses. MR. WANAMAKER SEES REVIVAL NEAR Merchant Believes Business Conditions Will Be Better Within Month.

Confidence that prosperity for American manufacturers is very near was expressed today by John Wanamaker, who, after a long and careful study of the situation, declared he believed that within the next fortnight conditions in this country would take a turn for the better.

"The scaffolding is now up for the new building," said Mr. Wanamaker. "This includes the adjustment of the cotton situation and the easing up of the strain in financial circles. Added to that this country is taking care of its foreign obligations in the way of bonds, although the rate of exchange is now higher than it is normally and will probably be reduced. And so everything, I think, point to easier times."

There will be great opportunities for American manufacturers as a result of the European war, Mr. Wanamaker firmly believes.

"Even though the war was to stop tomorrow," he said, "it would be at least two years before the manufacturers of Europe could turn out their normal output again because of the disorganization of their plants and the thousands of factory men, many of them expert workmen, who will be among the missing men when the plants reopen."

"And Europeans, as well as the markets they been supplying, will have to look to someone else. There is the opportunity for America."

The matter of securing loans was another phase of the situation which Mr. Wanamaker discussed. He said that the banks were loaning money now chiefly to their friends. I have been talking the situation over with a New York banker, a friend of mine," he went on, "and he tells me that his bank is making small loans rather than big ones. This banker is of the opinion that the little fellow should receive help rather than the big ones. The latter can take care of themselves, but it is the manufacturer with a small plant, a few employees, that this bank is aiming to help tide over the present situation."

SECOND WEEK OF COURT NEWS

List of Important Cases Disposed Of

No. 11 Appeals. Alfred T. Jones vs. Commissioners of Wicomico County. This is an appeal from the Commissioners wherein Mr. Alfred T. Jones was awarded damages and benefits for a road across his land in Nutters District. Verdict of the jury for appellant and damages assessed at $155 and benefits at $25. Jay William, C. W. Long and Arthur E. Williams, attorneys for appellant; E. S. Toadvin for appellee.

No. 12 Trials. John S. Venables vs. The County Commissioners of Delmar. This is a suit brought by the plaintiff for damages to the amount of $10,000.00 on account of injuries alleged to have been sustained on the public highway. Venables was riding on top of a load of fodder; one of the wheel struck a bad stump in the rut, throwing him to the ground and breaking his hip. This case was concluded Tuesday afternoon, the jury bringing in a verdict for the plaintiff, assessing damages at $1,500. This judgment and the costs incurred will make the cost of the suit to the town of Delmar not less than $2,000. E. H. Walton and A. L. Miles, attorneys for plaintiff; Ellegood, Freeny & Wailes for defendants.

The most important case to be tried this term and the one which is looked forward to with much interest is the suit of the City of Salisbury against certain corporations for the collections of taxes on shares of stock owned by residents of the municipality; also a case for the recovery of penalties for the alleged failure of the officers of those corporations to report as required by law to the Clerk of the City Council the names of such stockholders and the amount of stock owned by each.

Wednesday morning of this week No. 19 Trials. Wm. F. Allen vs. Jesse H. Brattan. Wm. F. Allen was taken up. There are 55 witnesses summoned in the case, and it will likely consume the remainder of this week. This is a suit for ejectment. W. F. Allen, several months ago, purchased from Wm. H. Jackson several hundred acres of the Brattan land, near Willard, which Mr. Jackson had purchased from the late Wm. B. Brattan. Included in the purchase was the farm now occupied by Jesse H. Brattan, son of W. B. Brattan which Jesse claims was given to him by his grandfather, and on which he has resided for more than 20

COLLECTED DEBTS WITH A SHOTGUN

Sensational Procedure of a Negro Who Apparently Does as He Pleases.

Albert Church, colored, armed himself with a shotgun, Monday afternoon, and sallied forth in quest of another negro who owed him money. Followed by a crowd of excited men and boys, Church ran up town. Catching sight of Douglas Kellum, the debtor, Church put on full speed and was rapidly overtaking Kellum, when that individual saw him coming and "let out a link or two." The race continued until Kellum reached the store of George E. M. Stengle, opposite the First National Bank, and entering the store he attempted to hide.

Church rushed into the store in true "wild west" style, levelled his gun at Kellum, and demanded his money. Kellum did not attempt to argue the matter, but immediately handed over what he had, when Church quietly walked out of the store, the crowd quickly parting to let him through.

The affair created considerable excitement as the street was crowded with shoppers, and as Church ran down the street waving his gun, every one seemed to have business of importance elsewhere, and no attempt was made to stop him. When he rushed into the store, customers at once sought places of safety on the outside.

Church claims that Kellum owed him some money, and that he, Church, wanted it. No arrests have been made.

Church for a number of years has done about as he pleases, and so far has gotten away with it. A little over a year ago he deliberately drew a revolver and shot a man in front of the Sussex Hotel. The shooting was witnessed by a dozen or more men, one an officer, and although he remained at his home in Seaford until late the following afternoon, no attempt was made to arrest him. After waiting here for nearly 24 hours he left town and was gone for several months. Upon his return he claimed to have "settled" his case by the payment of a small sum of money. Efforts have been made by the authorities to hold him in case, but so far nothing has been done. He seems perfectly unconcerned about his latest escapade. Seaford News dispatch.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Business Transacted At The Regular Meeting on Monday Night.

Building permits granted: Benjamin M. Smith, store and dwelling on Baker street; G. W. Murphy, addition to dwelling on N. Division St.; Ida T. Trader, addition to dwelling on S. Division street.

The Clerk was instructed to write to Hickman & Riggin, Crisfield, in reference to the price of shells for the city, also to notify Mrs. Mary O. Hastings and Isaac J. Harris, to complete their cement work on Baker street at once.

The Council ordered a donation of $25.00 per month for three months to the District Nurse Fund.

The ordinance to curb, drain and gutter E. Main street from Division street to the West line of the Salisbury Realty property was considered and laid over until the next meeting.

The Clerk was instructed to pay Woodford Johnson $42.05 for work on the City Hall and W. B. Ward $13.45 for cement work on same.

The City Council has purchased from Mrs. Nannie R. Jackson, the brick storehouse and lot at the corner of Main and Mill streets and as soon as possession can be secured from Mr. Doody, the building will be torn down so as to open up the corner and give a better entrance to Mill street so as to conform to the new width of the said street. The price paid for the property was $5,250.00, the city getting immediate possession of the property. The price paid is considered a very fair one. When the building is torn down it will give Doody Bros. a corner site for the property recently purchased of Hon. William H. Jackson.

The work of building the streets will be rushed as fast as possible so as to complete them before freezing weather sets in. Sewers are now being laid on some of the streets so as to have that portion of the work completed in advance of the street building.

The Grand Jury made a record for quick work at this term, adjourning Wednesday of last week, after being in session only two days.

TAX COMMISSION TO CONFER

Will Visit County Officials, Beginning At Towson last Thursday.

The State Tax Commission has decided to visit from time to time every county in the State and confer with the County Commissioners and the supervisor of assessments of the county, with the object of familiarizing the members of the commission and the secretary, Allan C. Girdwood, with the assessment methods, the methods of keeping the tax records, and the like. The first conference will be held today with the Commissioners of Baltimore county, and the supervisor of assessments at Towson. Every other county of the State will be visited from time to time.

The commission is now engaged in getting a card system record of every piece of property in the State listed for taxation, with the assessment upon it both for State and county purposes and also for municipal or district purposes, if there be such. The county supervisors of assessments are making these records and have progressed rapidly with the work. Some remarkable discrepancies are shown, as well as some curiosities in the way of placing value on property.

NEW MILLINERY OPENING.

The Misses Leeds & Twiley, as announced in this paper last week, held their first opening in their new millinery store in the T. H. Mitchell building on Church street, beginning on Tuesday and continuing until this evening. This new firm has made an auspicious start in business in Salisbury. They have one of the most attractive show windows in Salisbury and it is filled with splendid creations of the milliner's art. These ladies are experienced milliners and are up-to-date with the latest materials and the latest designs to be seen anywhere.

President Woodrow Wilson, by proclamation, has appointed Sunday, Oct. 4, a national day of prayer for peace in Europe and called upon all God fearing persons to gather in church on that day and petition Almighty God to heal again and restore once more concord among men and nations. The proclamation follows:

"Whereas, Great nations of the world have taken up arms against one another and war now draws millions of men into battle whom the counsel of statesmen have not been able to save from the terrible sacrifice; and,

"Whereas, In this as in all things it is our privilege and duty to seek counsel and succor of Almighty God, humbling ourselves before him, confessing our weakness and our lack of any wisdom equal to these things; and,

"Whereas, It is the especial wish and longing of the people of the United States, in prayer and counsel and all friendliness, to serve the cause of peace,

"Therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States of America, do designate Sunday, the fourth day of October next, a day of prayer and supplication and do request all God fearing persons to repair on that day to their places of worship, there to unite their petitions to Almighty God, that, overruling the counsel of men, setting straight the things they cannot govern or alter, taking pity on the nations now in the throes of conflict, in his mercy and goodness showing a way where men can see none, he vouchsafe his children to heal again and restore once more that concord among men and nations without which there can be neither happiness nor true friendship nor any wholesome fruit of toil or thought in the world, praying also to this end that he forgive us our sins, our ignorance of his holy will, our willfulness and many errors, and lead us in the paths of obedience to places of vision and to thoughts and counsels that purge and make wise."

OAKLAND.

To my inquiring readers I wish to say that I am still among the living.

Mrs. George W. Parsons had the misfortune to fall and cripple herself very badly and is unable to walk.

Misses Emma, Virgie and Maud Tilghman spent Sunday with relatives in Salisbury.

Mr. John Livingston and family, of Delmar, spent Sunday with their aunt, Mrs. Jane Matthews.

Mr. Bury Dennis and wife and Mr. Herb Lowe and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Reddish.

Miss Mary Reddish has taken up her work at Oakland school again this fall, while her sister, Edna, is teaching the Johnson school.

We are glad to hear that the tent meetings at Brown's school house, conducted by Carroll and Sutton has been successful.

After the frosty nights the good old summer time has made its appearance again and we are wishing very much for a shower.

Hanging Pictures

In the October Woman's Home Companion George Alfred Williams writes about "The Pictures On Your Walls," in which he tells how to choose and hang them effectively.

The formal parlor has gradually disappeared from the average American home, leaving in its place the more companionable living room, where the family congregates and receive friends. Pictures chosen for it should, therefore, be of general interest. Family portraits and photographs of friends are decidedly out of place. The casual caller should not be required to sit and gaze at intimate pictures; personal pictures have a more fitting place in the privacy of bedrooms. Reproductions of good paintings, or the original paintings themselves, are always in good taste for the living room. Suggestions for the dining hall readily suggest themselves; pictures of good cheer, of convivial gatherings, of animals and hunting scenes are suitable.

Latest War News of The Day

A dispatch from Petrograd to a Paris paper says that the Germans who drove the Russian invaders from East Prussia have in turn been defeated, and are evacuating East Prussia to reinforce the line from Thorn, in West Prussia, to Kalisz, in Russian Poland.

A news dispatch from Paris says that among the prisoners recently arriving at Paris, is a general of the staff of Gen. von Kluck, whose army has borne the brunt of the allies' turning movement on the western end of the battle line.

Press dispatches, unofficial, report that Zeppelin airship, evidently reconnoitering, have been sighted from various points in Jutland, Denmark.

The German submarine U-9, credited by Berlin with having unaided destroyed the three British cruisers off the Hook of Holland, has returned undamaged to a German port.

Chief Gunner Dougherty, of the Cressy, one of the three ships sunk, insists that he saw five submarines during the attack, and that one of the five was sunk by the Cressy's guns.

The German war loan subscriptions total $1,097,250,000.

The press of Norway is making a deliberate effort to maintain strict neutrality.

The indirect cause of the war is recalled by a report from Amsterdam that the trial of the alleged assassins of the Austrian heir-apparent, Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his consort, will open at Agram on November 5.

Cettinje announces that the Montenegrins defeated the Austrians, capturing Pratzho, a town near Sarajevo, the capital of the Austrian province of Bosnia.

Late reports from the battle, Tuesday, in which the British cruisers Aboukir, Hogue and Cressy were sunk by a German submarine in the North Sea, show that 1067 of the officers and crew are accounted for. This would indicate that 1133 lives were lost.

A stir was created in diplomatic circles in Washington when A. Ruten Bey, the Turkish ambassador, notified the State Department that he had altered his views since he gave out the interview two weeks ago, to which President Wilson took such strong exception, and that he would leave the country within a fortnight.

The German embassy informally denied an interview accredited to Baron von Schoen, former Minister to Japan, in which the baron was quoted as saying that war between Japan and the United States was inevitable. The President had taken exception to the interview.

TWO NEGROES SHOT IN CRAP GAME.

Lemuel Jones Likely to Die From Pistol Wounds Through Liver.

Lemuel Jones, a well-known colored man of this city, was found in the woods above the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad bridge Sunday morning badly wounded by pistol wounds through his stomach and liver. He was taken to the Peninsula General Hospital where he was operated on, and the doctors say he has a scant chance to get well.

Jones was shot by a negro named Neck from the Eastern Shore of Virginia in a quarrel over a crap game. They, in company with several other Salisbury negroes who had a plentiful supply of whiskey, had a big game of crap in Davis Woods back of the old race track. In the quarrel which followed the game Neck shot Jones and the whole party fled and left the man wounded in the woods. He was found Sunday morning after lying in his own blood for more than three hours.

Neck escaped on the night train or early Sunday morning and has not been found. Several of the other negroes were arrested by Constable Waller and Sheriff Brady, and taken before Justice Covington who placed fines of $3.75 on each one for shooting craps and let them go.

Sheriff Brady was called to the colored camp at the head of the creek early Sunday morning to make inquiry into the shooting of Joe Moore, a notorious colored man of this city, who is well-known to the police courts. Moore was shot through the foot by another negro in a quarrel over a woman at the camp. He has served terms in the House of Correction for selling whiskey and is considered generally a very undesirable citizen. His wounds are not dangerous and the Sheriff will make several arrests in his case this week.

The woods above the railroad bridge seems to be a favorite spot for both white and colored shooters. They select a scheduled spot and post their spile and games are carried on all day Sundays, much to the annoyance of the respectable people living in the neighborhoods. If the justices of the peace would put House of Correction sentences on these offenders instead of collecting fines from them it would have a tendency to stop the games. A small fine is no privation, as the men pay the fines and next Sunday are back at the games again.

WOMAN'S SHOP

A New Departure Which Meets With Enthusiastic Approval.

The Woman's Shop gave to the women of Salisbury and vicinity a pleasant surprise in the nature of the entertainment accorded at the opening on Monday evening. Formal invitations had been sent to a large number of the ladies, and the response was something of a surprise to the firm as well as to the ladies who accepted the invitation.

Only a small part of the assembled crowds could be admitted to the store at one time, so the doors were opened only as space for newcomers became available. Until a late hour the store was simply jammed. The men had to stand outside and wait, patiently or otherwise, according to the man. The women just simply could not miss a chance to see another gown or suit or hat.

Scheidecker's Orchestra furnished music during the evening, and was relieved, as well as assisted, by a splendid player-piano, which was furnished by the Lester Piano Company, a new institution in Salisbury.

The object of the occasion was the display of new suits and gowns of the latest designs and fabrics, and new hats. The hats were the creations of Mrs. Woodward's millinery establishment.

These articles were displayed on living models, and the young ladies who played the part of model "beautifully" were Miss Virginia Brewington, Miss Margaret Barnette and Miss Martha Carey, of Salisbury; Miss Josephine Smyth, of Philadelphia and Miss Agnes Malone, of Allen.

The visitors were highly pleased as well as entertained, and some of them became aware for the first time that Salisbury has a store which caters to the best trade. Undoubtedly this opening marks another epoch in the store's career as a leader not only in the finest and best that women and children wear, but also in "good goods at popular prices"--the real aim of the store.

FERTILITY IN THE ORCHARDS

Scarcely Any Soil Can Furnish All Materials Required Without Some Outside Assistance.

(By J. P. STEWART) There is an important need for fertility in any orchard that is actively producing and growing. The actual extent of this need can be approximated, chemically by determining the average composition of apple wood, leaves, and fruit, and by applying these figures to what may be considered good annual amounts of these products.

The total plant-food draft of a mature and active orchard is greater than that of a 25-bushel crop of wheat in every important constituent except phosphorus.

It is practically inevitable, therefore, that sooner or later the output will be reduced or in off seasons will be developed in any productive orchard because of a lack of sufficient plant food. Notwithstanding, the trees are usually able to maintain themselves much better and longer than wheat. This is probably largely because of their much longer season of root activity, their more natural demands, the annual return of most of the plant food in their leaves, and their ability to curtail production for one or more seasons when conditions become unfavorable. However, it is well known that very important amounts of plant food are annually removed by an apple orchard. Scarcely any soil can furnish all these materials indefinitely in the amounts and times required, and, unless proper assistance is rendered there must come a time when production is materially reduced unless these elements are returned to the soil.

Part of the orchard's product requires comparatively small amounts of the important elements. This is notably true of the wood, even when the annual production of mature trees is considered. This largely accounts for the fact that young trees are much less likely to make a profitable response to fertilizer applications than those of bearing age. The younger trees often respond very well to manure or any satisfactory mulch.

Most orchard soils are sufficiently supplied with potash in available forms and the chief shortages seem to occur in the nitrogen and phosphorus. This is the case notwithstanding the fact that the latter materials are actually required in considerably smaller amounts.

IMPROVES LOOKS OF CAKES

Cameo of Colored Icing in Any Design Favored Gives a Distinctive Touch to the Dessert.

Have you ever seen cameos on cakes? Perhaps not, although nowadays we see them every place else. But icing cameos for the decoration of desserts can be easily made. Make a stiff icing, colored with cochineal, or with cranberry juice, and pipe it in small circular designs on a lightly buttered tin sheet or sheet of wood. Make these in the shape of tiny heads, if you have a skill with the icing pipe—which can be simply a cone of stiff brown paper. Then dry them in the open door of an oven or on a radiator for half an hour. Remove them and put them on at least cake with a little piping of fresh white or pink icing. They can be used in the same way to decorate molds of ice cream or cake.

TAKING CARE OF SEED

PREPARE FOR A PROFITABLE CORN CROP NEXT YEAR.

Preference Should Be Given to Plants That Have Produced Most Heavily—Short, Thick Stalks Are Most Desirable.

As soon as the crop ripens, go through the field with seed-picking bags and husk the ears from the stalks that have produced the most corn without having any special advantages, such as space, moisture, or fertility. Avoid the large ears on stalks standing singly with an unusual amount of space around them. Preference should be given the plants that have produced most heavily in competition with a full stand of less productive plants.

In all localities the inherent tendency of the plant to produce heavily of sound, dry, shelled corn is of most importance.

Shelves in a 3-ed-Corn Dry House.

Late-maturing plants with ears which are heavy because of an excessive amount of sap should be ignored. Sapiness greatly increases the weight and is likely to destroy the quality.

In the central and southern states, all other things being equal, short, thick stalks are preferable. Short stalks are not so easily blown down and permit thicker planting. Thick stalks are not so easily broken down and in general are more productive than slender ones. Seed should be taken from stalks that have no suckers.

The same day seed corn is gathered the husked ears should be put in a dry place where there is free circulation of air, and placed in such a manner that the ears do not touch each other. This is the only safe procedure. Frequently good seed corn is ruined because it is thought to be dry enough when gathered and the above precaution unnecessary. Seed corn in every locality, no matter how dry the autumn, will be benefited by drying as suggested. If left in the husk long after ripening, it may sprout or mildew during warm weather or become infested with weevils. The vitality of seed is often reduced by leaving it in a sack or in a pile for even a day after gathering. During warm weather, with some moisture in cobs, the ears heat in a remarkably short time.

Use binder twine for stringing the ears. Binder twine will support 15 or

A Good Rack for Drying Seed Corn.

20 ears on a string. Ordinarily the best place to hang these strings of ears is in an open shed or loft. Permanent seed racks are more convenient.

When Preserving Pears.

To prepare ripe pears for preserving, place the pears in a convenient vessel, cover with boiling water, put a closely fitting cover on the kettle and let stand 15 minutes, when the skins will peel off as readily as from a scalded tomato. Cut each peeled pear in halves, and with a sharp-pointed knife remove the core. The heat will have penetrated sufficiently to cause the core to come away easily. Drop the halves in cold water, as quickly as they are peeled, to prevent their turning dark. Preserve in the usual way. This method does away entirely with the sticky, slippery sensation which usually accompanies the peeling of pears, saves half the time ordinarily required, and the finished product is more pleasing by reason of the smooth, even appearance of the fruit.

Late Turkeys.

Late turkeys are really easier raised than early, but more often lost. Late turkeys need all the chance that can be given them, yet they are generally left to roam and take care of themselves. They should be isolated from other poultry at first, and started with all the care given the first hatches. They should be permitted to roost outside and far away from poultry buildings and yards, and should be given free range; but they should be fed regularly and generously, and should be frequently dusted with insect powder to prevent lice.

Important to all Women
Readers of This Paper.

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer a great deal with pain in the back, bearing-down feelings, headache and loss of ambition. Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmey's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

A good kidney medicine, possessing real healing and curative value, should be a blessing to thousands of nervous, over-worked women. Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy, will do for them. Every reader of this paper, who has not already tried it, by enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmey & Co., Birmingham, N.Y., may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. When writing mention the Salisbury Weekly Advertiser. You can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at all drug stores—Adv.

WHY REGISTER?

There is a class of citizens to whom the word "politics" is synonymous with corruption, and to whom the term "politician" conveys the idea of a man without principle or morals. To these, to mix up in any political event is objectionable, and is to be avoided as much as possible.

From this type—and it must be admitted that what we term our "leading" citizens most often make it up—is ever heard criticism of the severest kind of the acts of our office-holders. It must be acknowledged that "politics" is not all that it should be and the acts of our public men are often open to serious criticism; but the way to correct this condition is not to take it all out in criticism, but to take such action as looks towards remedying affairs.

Here in Wicomico we have some of this type of citizens, who perhaps are today uncertain as to whether they want to get registered or not, and it is to these we want to say that those who fail to stand by the right and fight its battles, whether in politics or other phases of life, have not the moral right to criticize either, conditions or men.

It cannot be denied that selfish men have abused the power that has been entrusted to them; have advanced their own interest at the cost of both their party and the public; it is undeniable that these, to gain their end, have waded deep in the mire of political corruption; it is true that in their selfish fight for self-advancement they have forgotten alike the ties of friendship and gratitude; it is true that in some cases they have dealt so long in corruption that they themselves have forgotten common decency, and having bought, now sell.

These are true, and even more, but is it the right way to correct these evils by refusing to participate in public affairs?

Shall our government be turned over to schemers, corruptionists and common thieves because of our failure to take our part and fight the battles of decency and honesty?

The most effective way of fighting is to go to the polls and register our vote for the cause of justice and the right.

To do this we must first register, and this it is our solemn duty to do. Talk without action is laughed at by those whose chief aim in life is to live at the expense of the public purse.

It is true that a kind of "fetish" has been made of party regularity. Interested politicians have very successfully tried to implant in the mind of the voter that only a traitor deserts his party. Party loyalty is placed upon a high plane and he who proves himself a faithful follower of the tenets of his party is praised as a worthy citizen and a true patriot.

There is no desire on our part to disturb this as long as party loyalty is based upon belief in principle and principles of that party, but when it is based upon a party when we see clearly it to be wrong, may make us a competent patriot, but a national traitor.

The independent voter who votes for the ultimate destiny of the nation, for in the end the vote of a single citizen counts more than that of a 25-man party caucus.

It is to be hoped that it is practically the men of staunch faith, that sooner or later party will be reduced to its proper place and developed in any way, but lightly, will not be food. Notwithstanding, the votes be themselves much better and who can tell that wheat. This is probably a Wicomico because of their much longer history for of root-activity, their more naturalized demands, the annual return of make part of the plant food in their leaves, and next their ability to curtail production, and now or more seasons when conditions become unfavorable. However, it is the vote without that very important class vs. the decent citizen may at any time be tightly drawn and our intelligent good people must be fully armed for the fray, unless we want to surrender the powers of government to the tender mercies of the lawless element.

Register not only that you may take part in the important election this fall, but that you may be prepared for anything that may come. If you belong to the class that is always criticizing but never acting, then register and act. Be men, loyal first to your county, then if you will, to your party, but ever supporting first character and principle.

Were You With The Crowd At Our Candy Counter Saturday?

No need to tell you that our Candies and Chocolates are as fine as you can buy anywhere, even if you pay twice our price, but let us tell you some of the reasons why we can and do sell such very delicious whole-some Candies at 10c and 20c per pound.

FIRST—The quantity we sell, which will average one thousand and pounds a week, enables us to buy direct from the factory at the very low prices, and at the same time always to have them strictly fresh, for we have a shipment arrive each week.

SECOND—Our Candy Factory is the largest in the whole world, recently completed and fitted throughout with the very latest labor saving machinery designed to keep the cost of making to the lowest possible point, every operation being by machinery, no unsanitary human hands touching the candies at any time.

THIRD—We are satisfied with a very small profit on an immense volume of sales, which is also the basis upon which our whole business is conducted.

THERE'S THE REASON.

5 Women Avoid Operations

For years we have been stating in the newspapers of the country that a great many women have escaped serious operations by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it is true.

We are permitted to publish in this announcement extracts from the letters of five women. All have been recently received unsolicited. Could any evidence be more convincing?

Hopedon, Me.—"I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached and I was so nervous I could not sleep, and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Hopedon, Me.

Charlotte, N. C.—"I was in bad health for two years, with pains in both sides and was very nervous. I had a growth which the doctor said was a tumor, and I never would get well unless I had an operation. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I gladly say that I am now enjoying good health."—Mrs. ROSA SIMS, 16 Winona St., Charlotte, N. C.

Hanover, Pa.—"The doctor advised a severe operation, but my husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I experienced great relief in a short time. Now I feel like a new person and can do a hard day's work and not mind it."—Mrs. ADA WILT, 106 Stock St., Hanover, Pa.

Decatur, Ill.—"I was sick in bed and three of the best physicians said I would have to be taken to the hospital for an operation as I had something growing in my left side. I refused to submit to the operation and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and it worked a miracle in my case, and I tell other women that it has done for me."—Mrs. LARA A. GRISWOLD, 2300 Blk. East William Street, Decatur, Ill.

Cleveland, Ohio.—"I was very irregular and for several years my side pained me so that I expected to have to undergo an operation. Doctors said they knew of nothing that would help me. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I became regular and free from pain. I am thankful for such a good medicine and will always give it the highest praise."—Mrs. C. H. GRIFFITH, 7305 Madison Av., Cleveland, O.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

JOSEPH TIBBITT, versus MARY TIBBITT.

The Circuit Court for Wicomico County, in Equity 2671.

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce a mensa et thoro by the plaintiff, Joseph Tibbitt, from the defendant, Mary Tibbitt.

The bill alleges that the plaintiff was married to the defendant about seven years ago in the State of Delaware, and have been residing together in the State of Maryland for more than two years past, until recently when the defendant left the plaintiff and is reported to be now in the State of Delaware.

It is alleged that two children were born to the plaintiff and defendant, namely: Oliver Tibbitt, who is now six years of age, and Sophia Tibbitt, who is now four years of age; that while the conduct of the plaintiff towards the defendant has been above reproach, the defendant, Mary Tibbitt, has been cruel, harsh and neglectful of the plaintiff and her conduct towards him has of late become intolerable. Guardianship and custody of the two infant children are also prayed for by the plaintiff and such other relief as his case may require.

It is thereupon this 23rd day of September, 1914, by the Circuit Court for Wicomico County, in Equity, ordered that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Wicomico County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 26th day of October, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object of and substance of this bill, warning her to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor on or before the 1st day of November next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

FORTUNE AND HONOR.

To catch Dame Fortune's golden smile.
Assiduous wait upon her,
And gather gear by every while
That's justified by honor.
Not for to hide it in a hedge,
Not for a train attendant,
But for the glorious privilege
Of being independent.

The fear of hell's a hangman's whip
To haud the watch in order,
But where ye feel your honor grip
Let ay that be your border.
Its slightest touches, instant pause—
Debar a side pretenses,
And resolutely keep the laws,
Uncaring consequences.

SAID OF THE TONGUE.

To many men well fitting doors are not set on their tongues.—Theognis.

We may see cunning and curious work of nature, which hath barred and hedged nothing in so strongly as the tongue, with two rows of teeth, and therewith two lips. Besides, she hath placed it far from the heart, that it should not utter that which the heart had conceived. This also should cause us to be silent, seeing those that use much talk, though they speak truly, are never believed.
—Lyly.

A GIRL'S A GIRL FOR A' THAT.

Is there a lady in the land
That boasts her rank and a' that?
With scornful eye we pass her by
And little care for a' that;
For nature's charm shall bear the palm—
A girl's a girl for a' that.

The nobly born may proudly scorn
A lowly lass and a' that;
A pretty face has far more grace
Than haughty looks and a' that;
A bonnie maid needs no such aid—
A girl's a girl for a' that.

Then let us trust that come it must,
And sure it will for a' that,
When faith and love, all arts above
Shall reign supreme and a' that;
And every youth confess the truth—
A girl's a girl for a' that.

A girl's a girl for a' that.
—Author Unknown.

GREEN GROW THE RASHES, O!

There's naught but care on every ban,
In every hour that passes.
Oh, what signifies the life of man,
An' 'twere na' for the lasses, O!

CHORUS.
Green grow the rashies, O!
Green grow the rashies, O!
The sweetest hours that ere I spent,
Were spent among the lasses, O!

The worldly race may riches chase,
An' riches still may fly them.
O, an' though at last they catch them fast,
Their hearts can ne'er enjoy them, O!

Gie me a candle hour at e'en,
My arms about my dearie,
O, an' wardly cares and wardly men
May a' gae tapal teerie, O!

And you see dooce, wha sneer at this,
Ye're naught but senseless asses.
Oh, the wisest man the world e'er saw,
He dearly lo'ed the lasses, O!

THOUGHTS ON EVIL.

Evil events from evil causes spring.—Aristophanes.

He who does evil that good may come pays a toll to the devil to let him into heaven.—J. G. Hare.

The more common method of getting rid of an evil is to merge it in a greater. Thus, if one suffers a loss of half his fortune at play, he overcomes his mortification by losing the other half.

The most ingenious expedient of this kind was that of the indigent gentleman of rank who married his washerwoman to get rid of her bill against him.
—Boyer.

Mrs. Workhard (winding alarm clock)—"I always set the alarm for 4 o'clock on Monday morning, so I can make an early start with my washing and get through before dark."
Anty Drudge—"Nonsense. Just you sleep three hours later and then send to the grocer's for some Fels-Naptha Soap. Your wash will be on the line before noon, cleaner than ever before."

In India the women still go down to the river banks and wash clothes by rubbing them over stones.

But they are no farther behind the times than the American women who still boil clothes and hard-rub them on a washboard.

The truly modern way of washing is the Fels-Naptha way. No boiling to weaken the fiber; no hard rubbing to wear and tear. Work saved, time saved, fuel saved, clothes cleaner.

MONUMENTS

In erecting a monument, one should remember that it is not a mere mass of stone, but a memorial of honor that is to perpetuate the memory of the departed. Therefore, select the material to be used. Look to its beauty, design, and the quality of material.

Many years in the monument business has taught us that good monuments cannot be made at cut prices, but it has also taught us how to make the best monument at the lowest possible price.

We have on hand a complete assortment of designs, which we place at your disposal. We use nothing but the best stones, come in and look at our stock of monuments built of Wisconsin Blue Granite, "The Gem of the Trade." The ideal monumental granite.

SUNDAY OBSERVANCE.

I have told such of my people as I deal with in these months, told them plainly and told them frankly, that if they will say their prayers with the clergy at one hour of the Lord's day, the clergy are perfectly willing to play baseball with them at another hour of the same day, which is their day of rest, which rest is recreation; that if they will comply with the requirements of the church and observe Sunday, first of all, as a day of prayer they may have the rest of it as a day of play, and that, if they have stopped their work in order to worship, having worshipped, they may "walk abroad and recreate themselves." If this be treason, either to the church or to the day, let those who wish to do so make the most of it.—Rev. David M. Steele, Philadelphia.

FAR MORE FAIR.

More fair than sunrise mountains
In folded veils of light,
Or trails in silver birches
Engreened and mossed from sight;
More fair than new mown meadows.

Where sliding waters flow,
Or purple clouds of thunder,
Where torrents stream below;

Than rolling, southward valleys
With tasseled maize in bloom,
Or northward pines entangled
In dark and rearing plume;
Than showery west empyrean
A dewy distance gray;
Than drifted plains by starlight
Or rising moons of May.

I saw a fairer picture,
Outshining fields and skies,
I saw one happy morning
A child from fever rise.
I would that I were Raphael
To paint that lovely sight.
I saw him pick a daisy
With wasted fingers white.
—Sarah N. Cleghorn in Munsey's.

HABIT.

Imagine Hercules as oxman in a rotten boat. What can he do there but by the very force of his stroke expedite the ruin of his craft? Take care, then, of the timbers of your boat, and avoid all practices likely to introduce either wet or dry rot among them. And this is not to be accomplished by desultory or intermittent efforts of the will, but by the formation of habits. The will, no doubt, has sometimes to put forth its strength in order to strangle or crush the special temptation, but the formation of right habits is essential to your permanent security. They diminish your chance of falling when assailed, and they augment your chances of recovery when overthrown.—John Tyndall.

ON HIS BLINDNESS.

When I consider how my light is spent Ere half my days in this dark world and wide,
And that one talent which is death to hide
Lodged with me useless, though my soul more bent
To serve therewith my Maker,
And present
My true account, lest he returning chide.
"Doubt God exact day labor, light denied!"
I fondly ask. But patience, to prevent
That murmur, soon replies,
"God doth not need
Either man's work or his own gifts. Who best Bear his mild yoke, they serve him best. His state
Is kingly. Thousands at his bidding speed,
And post o'er land and ocean without rest;
They also serve who only stand and wait."
—John Milton.

SAID OF SLAVERY.

Corrupted freemen are the worst of slaves.—Garrick.

Servitude seizes on few, but many seize on her.—Seneca.

By the law of slavery, man, created in the image of God, is divested of the human character and declared to be a mere chattel.—Charles Sumner.

That execrable sum of all villainies commonly called slave trade.—John Wesley.

Enslave a man and you destroy his ambition, his enterprise, his capacity. In the constitution of human nature the desires of bettering one's condition is the mainspring of effort. The first touch of slavery snuffs this spring.—Mann.

My Duty.

There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbors good. One person has to make good—himself. But my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy—if I may.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

"Fine Feathers"

Eugene Walter apparently is a leader in an intricate to purify public morals by setting upon the stage pictures of motives at the psychological moment. He seems to have a rare faculty of picking up a national tendency and dramatizing it and he is said to have used this faculty when he wrote, "Fine Feathers" the play which H. H. Frazee will present for the first time here at the OPERA HOUSE ON WEDNESDAY SEPT. 30.

Most of Walter's plays have been unusual. It is the element which has made them stand apart from other plays. It made "Paid in Full," "The Wolf" and "The Easiest Way" attractive.

"Fine Feathers" is said to be a play well named—the story of a simple-hearted, devoted little wife who yields to her yearning for pretty things. Her husband, clean charactered, wholesome, manly, idealistic, refuses to make $40,000 by falsifying a report. The man who offered him the chance snaps his fingers at his old fashioned honesty and, secretly, appeals to the wife. He uses keen-edged weapon—ridicule and appeals to woman's weakness, her natural love for fine feathers. The husband refuses to succumb. The wife accuses, mocks, pleads, threatens, and then leaves her cozy little bungalow home. And she leaves behind her every chance of love, of happiness, of faith, of understanding.

The husband-love deadens conscience. The bungalow becomes a memory of a buried yesterday.

Two years pass. And the rising curtain reveals an interior of shaded sconces and candelabras, formal Chippendale—an effective contrast to the humble bungalow and the "few someone chickens pecking around."

He had relented and yielded. And it is upon this motive that the author has built his play from which the law of compensation has been deduced as the moral.

Costly New York Habit.

The costliest of New York habits is that of keeping a supply of subway or L tickets in your pocket. If you have no ticket you have an even chance of not being stuck for the fare; if you have tickets, you say, as the other man makes for the window: "Come on, I've got tickets." It's a hum game; you simply can't win.—New York Tribune.

I took it for several months and at the end of that time found my health was restored and have felt splendidly ever since. I now take it when I contract a cold and it soon rids the system of any catarrhal tendencies."

Over Ten Years Ago.

"I would not be without Peruna. Although it was over ten years ago that I first gave you my testimonial, I am of the same opinion as when I wrote it, and give you the privilege to use it as you see fit. I still use Peruna when I think it necessary. I am recommending it to my neighbors whenever a chance occurs."

VARIOUS FINE JELLIES

SOME OLD FAVORITES AND SOME THAT ARE NEW.

Several Combinations Possible That Make a Delicious Addition to the Winter Menu—Red Pepper Jelly That Will Keep Long.

Cherry juice mixed with an equal proportion of gooseberry or currant juice makes a delicious jelly, using cupful for cupful of sugar and the mixed juice. For currant and strawberry jelly allow one pint of currants to two of strawberries. Heat both fruits together and proceed as directed. Currants and raspberries combined in equal proportions make a fine flavored jelly. An excellent peach jelly may be made by using equal quantities of peaches and apples. When making plum jelly cut the plums in halves, cook until tender, then strain. The fruit must not be overripe.

Grab Apple Jelly.—Wash the apples, cut out the blossom ends and stems only, cover in the kettle with water, just cover well, boil until all in pieces, strain over night, measure the juice and sugar evenly, boil the juice 20 minutes, put the sugar in the oven to heat, then add the heated sugar and boil not more than eight minutes. Fine and never fails. Wash a rose geranium leaf, place it in the bottom of the glass, pour in the jelly and seal. It will impart a delicious and unusual flavor.

Take equal parts of apples, cranberries and evaporated apricots. Soak the apricots overnight, then cook all together slowly with just enough water to cover. Strain and make jelly as usual, one pound of sugar for every pint of juice. This makes a beautiful jelly, which cannot be distinguished from crab apple.

Sour Apple Jelly.—Do not peel, but wash thoroughly and cut into quarters or halves with the seeds and cores left in. Cover with water and let come to a boil. Strain the best part of the juice for jelly. Add a little lemon juice and peeling, or a rose geranium leaf. Excellent jelly is made of equal parts of plums and apples.

Rhubarb Jelly.—Cut one large bunch of rhubarb into fine pieces without peeling, add a large chopped apple with peel and seeds included. Cover with hot water and cook until done. Mash fine and strain through a jelly bag. To every cupful of juice add one cupful of hot granulated sugar. Boil the juice until it begins to jell, or about twenty-five minutes.

Quince Jelly.—Boil the parings in water to cover them until soft, then drain, but do not squeeze. Add equal parts of sugar, and boil until ready to put into glasses, which will be in about half an hour.

Red Pepper Jelly.—Remove the seeds. Cook the peppers until tender. Drain, and to each pint of liquid add a pint of sugar. Cook like other jelly. Will keep splendidly.

Mint Jelly.—To make mint jelly, add a handful of fresh mint leaves and eight cupfuls of granulated sugar to eight cupfuls of apple juice, and boil until the jelly jellies, which will be in about fifteen minutes. Remove the mint stalks before sealing.

Cream of Fruits. Soak one tablespoonful of granulated gelatin in one-fourth cupful of cold water, and dissolve in one-fourth cupful of scalded milk, then add one-half cupful of sugar. Strain into a pan, set into a larger pan of ice water and stir constantly until the mixture begins to thicken. Add the whites of eggs beaten until stiff. Dilute one-half pint of thick milk with one-third cupful of milk, and beat until stiff, using an eggbeater. Add to the mixture, then add one-third cupful cooked prunes cut in small pieces and add one-half cupful chopped figs. Turn into a mold first dipped in cold water, and chill.

Old Blankets Made New. Have you an old blanket which seems to have passed its days of usefulness? Try this plan: Wash it and cover it on both sides with cheese-cloth. Tack it at intervals to form little tufts with bright-colored yarn; overcast, buttonhole or brier-stitch the edges with yarn, according to your time and taste. Thus you have a new durable, sanitary bed cover which is pretty, inexpensive and admirable as a "throw" for a nap or coolish nights in summer.

Berry Pudding. Any berries may be used for this dish. Pick over and spread them generously upon the bottom of the bake dish; cover liberally with sugar. Now prepare a plain sweet cake batter and pour over the berries. Stand the bake dish in a pan of water in a hot oven and bake until the cake is well puffed up, dry and nicely browned. Serve each portion of cake with berries and juice dipped over it.

Use for Blotting Paper. Whenever you have an occasion to place a vase of flowers on a highly polished table you will find it very good to place a piece of white blotting paper under the cloth where the vase stands. This prevents the water from staining or clouding the polished surface of the table.

Hooks and Eyes. If you boil hooks and eyes in strong soda water before sewing them on garments it will prevent their iron-moulding in the wash.

Uneeda Biscuit

Tempt the appetite, please the taste and nourish the body. Crisp, clean and fresh. 5 cents.

Baronet Biscuit

WHEN PUTTING AWAY KNIVES

Blades Should Be Carefully Rubbed With Olive Oil, Wrapped Separately and Put in Dry Place.

When knives are put away, enough being kept out for everyday use, the blade of each one should be rubbed thoroughly and carefully with olive oil. Then wrap the knives, each one separately, in paper and store them in as dry a place as possible. Every three months they should be taken out and looked at to see if there be any signs of rust. Put fresh oil on them before putting them away again, and when they are required for use wash the oil off and rub each knife with knife polish.

To clean rusty knives use p. powdered bath brick made into a paste with paraffin and apply it with a flannel. Finish off with dry bath brick and a soft rag, which will leave a splendid polish.

To remove loose knife blades immerse the handles in boiling water until heated through; then pull handle and blade apart.

To attach knife handles fill the handles with equal parts of powdered resin and silver sand. Heat the knife tang, press firmly into the handle and cool in water.

Asparagus on Toast

Have salted water boiling hard. Wash the asparagus in cold water and the again in a bunch. Put it in the boiling water, cover and let cook until tender. Have several slices of bread nicely toasted, cut into quarters. When the asparagus is tender dip each piece of toast in the boiling water and place in a hot dish. Then add the asparagus and pour over all either melted butter or drawn butter made thus: Cream two tablespoonfuls of flour and two tablespoonfuls of butter until light and smooth. Gradually add a half pint of boiling water or milk, stir constantly until it comes to a boil, but do not let it boil; add a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt and pepper if desired.

Watermelon Cocktail

Serve in glasses as a first course at luncheon or dinner. Cut cubes of watermelon from the center of a ripe melon, well chilled. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and ground ginger root. Cinnamon may be used in place of ginger if desired. At a card party we served the following: Creamed oysters in patty cases and potato croquettes, Waldorf salad, Parker House rolls, Maple mousses, gold and angel cake, Coffee, Almonds, olives, bonbons.

SONNET CXLVI.

Poor soul, the center of my sinful earth. Fool'd by those rebel powers that thee array, Why dost thou pine within and suffer dearth, Painting thy outward walls so costly gay? Why so large cost, having so short a lease, Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend? Shall worms, inheritors of this excess, Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end? Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss And let that pine to aggravate thy store; Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross; Within be fed, without be rich no more. So shalt thou feed on death that feeds on men And, death once dead, there's no more dying then.

—William Shakespeare.

THE WAR PRAYER.

O Lord, help us to tear the soldiers of the foe to bloody shreds with our shells, help us to cover their smilling fields with the pale forms of their patriot dead; help us to lay waste their humble homes with a hurricane of fire; help us to wring the hearts of their offending widows with unavailing grief. Blast their hopes, blight their lives, water their way with their tears.

—Mark Twain.

MORNING IN THE ALPS.

'Tis morn, with gold the verdant mountain glows More high, the snowy peaks with hues of rose. Far stretched beneath the many tinted hills, A mighty waste of mist the valley fills. A solemn sea, whose billows wide around Stand motionless, to awful silence bound. Pines on the coast through mist their tops appear, That like to leaning masts of stranded ships appear. A single chasm, a gulf of gloomy blue. Gapes in the center of the sea, and, through That dark, mysterious gulf ascending, sound Unnumbered streams with roar profound. Mount through the nearer vapors notes of birds, And merry flageolet; the low of herds. The bark of dogs, the helter's tinkling bell. Talk, laughter and perchance a church tower knell; Think not, the peasant from aloft has gazed And heard with heart unmoved, with soul unaltered; Nor is his spirit less enrapt, nor less Alive to independent happiness, Then when he lies outstretched at eventide Upon the fragrant mountain's purple side. For as the pleasures of his simple day Beyond his native valley seldom stray, Nought round its darling precincts can he find But brings some past enjoyment to his mind. While Hope, reclining upon Pleasure's urn, Binds her wild wreaths and whispers his return.

—William Wordsworth.

RIGHT MOTIVES.

In determining proper motives of conduct it is easy to perceive that the higher are more commendable than the lower and that even an act of justice and benevolence loses something of its charm when known to be inspired by the selfish desire of human applause. It was the gay poet of antiquity who said that concealed virtue differed little from sepulchred sluggishness. But this is a heathen sentiment, alien to reason and to truth. It is hoped that men will be honest, but from a higher motive than because honesty is the best policy. It is hoped that they will be humane, but for a nobler cause than the fame of humanity.—Charles Sumner.

RIMED QUOTATIONS.

Soar not too high to fall, but stoop to rise. —Massinger. We must grow of all that we despise. —Crowley. Oh, then, renounce that invidious self esteem. —Beattie. Riches have wings and grandeur is a dream. —Cowper.

A High Opinion

"That's the highest quality paint made," said a customer of ours, "and it has proven to be the cheapest and the best." Our paint meets all competition successfully with quality—the high quality that makes it dollars cheaper than the other kind. Paint that lasts last best— isn't that so?

Infection and Insect Bites Dangerous

Misquitoes, flies and other insects, which breed quickly in garbage piles, ponds of stagnant water, barns, musty places, etc., are carriers of disease. Every time they bite you, they inject poison into your system from which some dread disease may result. Get a bottle of Solan's Liniment. It is antiseptic and a few drops will neutralize the infection caused by insect bites or rusty nails. Solan's Liniment disinfects Cuts, Bruises and Bores. You cannot afford to be without it in your home. Money back if not satisfied. Only 25c. at your Druggist.

HYMN BEFORE ACTION.

The earth is full of anger,
The seas are dark with wrath,
The nations in their harness
Go up against our path.
Ere yet we loose the legions,
Ere yet we draw the blade,
Jehovah of the thunders,
Lord God of battles, aid!

High lust and forward bearing,
Proud heart, rebellious brow—
Deaf ear and soul uncaring,
We seek thy mercy now!
The slimmer that forswore thee,
The fool that passed thee by,
Our times are known before thee—
Lord, grant us strength to die!

From panic, pride and terror,
Revenge that knows no rein,
Light haste and lawless error,
Protect us yet again,
Clock thou our undervailing,
Make firm the shuddering breath,
In silence and unswerving
To taste thy lesser death!

E'en now their vanguard gathers,
E'en now we face the fray—
As thou didst help our fathers,
Help thou our host today!
Fulfilled of signs and wonders
In life, in death made clear—
Jehovah of the thunders,
Lord God of battles, hear!
—Rudyard Kipling.

POETRY IN LIFE.

The present life is not wholly prosperous, precise, tame and finite.
It is not true that the poet paints a life which does not exist. He only extracts and concentrates, as it were, life's ethereal essence, arrests and condenses its volatile fragrance, brings together its scattered beauties and prolongs its more refined but evanescent joys. And in this he does well, for it is good to feel that life is not wholly usurped by cares for subsistence and physical gratifications, but admits, in measures which may be indefinitely enlarged, sentiments and delights worthy of a higher being.—William Ellery Channing.

THE GLORY OF WAR.

Hooft and trumpet blast
And banners in the dawn!
And what of the grain in the fallow field
When the husbandman has gone?

Sword song and battle roar,
And the great grim fighting line!
And what of the woman in the door
And the blown grape on the vine?

Drum beat and draped flag,
And he beneath his shield—
And what of the woman weeping, low,
And the dead grain in the field?
—Dana Burnett.

LATIN PROVERBS.

We hate the hawk, because it always lives in arms.
Everything unknown is taken for magnificent.
You must ask what is unjust that you may obtain what is just.
May they perish who said our good things before us.
The crime of perjury is punished by heaven with perdition and by man with disgrace.
By his immoderate laughter you can always distinguish the fool.

WHERE GOD IS.

Where is thy God? they ask of me,
As if it were their thought that he,
Like mortal, should be found to be
In some one spot.

Ah, that their eyes thus sightless are!
Do they not see the world afar,
The mountain height, the sparkling star,
The lowly cot.

The babbling brook, the flowers fair,
The sun, the sea, the living air—
Ah, could they tell me anywhere
That God is not?
—Christian Herald.

JOY GIVERS.

There are souls in the world who have the gift of finding joy everywhere and leaving it behind them when they go. Their influence is an inevitable gladdening of the heart. They give light without meaning to shine.
Their bright hearts have a great work to do for God.—Frederick W. Faber.

For a Useful Life.

Have a fixed purpose in life; one that is worthy of you, and then make your whole life hinge about it.

OBJECT OF EDUCATION.

The doctrine has been held that the mind of the child is like a sheet of white paper, on which by education we can write what characters we please. This doctrine assuredly needs qualification and correction. He comes to us as a bundle of inherited capacities and tendencies, labeled "from the indefinite past to the indefinite future," and he makes his transit through the education of the present time. The object of that education is, or ought to be, to provide wise exercise for his capacities, wise direction for his tendencies and through this exercise and this direction to furnish his mind with such knowledge as may contribute to the usefulness, the beauty and the nobleness of his life.—John Tyndall.

A BIRTHDAY.

My heart is like a singing bird,
Whose nest is in a water'd shoot;
My heart is like an apple tree,
Whose boughs are bent with thick set fruit;
My heart is like a rainbow shell
That paddles in a balcyon sea;
My heart is gladder than all these
Because my love is come to me.

Raise me a dais of silk and down;
Hang it with vair and purple dyes;
Carve it in doves and pomegranates,
And peacocks with a hundred eyes;
Work it in gold and silver grapes;
In leaves and silver fleur-delys
Because the birthday of my life
Is come, my love is come to me.
—Christina G. Rossetti.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

The present is the living sum total of the whole past.—Carlyle.

The remedy is worse than the disease.—Dryden.

From little spark may burst a mighty flame.—Dante.

God giveth quietness at last—Whittier.

Beneath me flows the Rhine,
And like the stream of time it flows amid the ruins of the past.
—Longfellow.

Kings will be tyrants from policy, when subjects are rebels from principle.—Burke.

TRUE PRAYER.

Many a man prays with his whole being, feels himself thrilled with the divine currents and going out in inspiration after the eternal, and yet finds words forsake him when he attempts to put his devotion into speech.
And yet is not this true prayer?
For how can you translate aspiration into speech?—W. D. Little.

LIFE'S CHECKS.

It cannot have escaped the notice of any one who has had much experience that human life is a system of cunningly devised checks and counter-checks. This is easily seen in considering physical things—such, for instance, as the human body. One of these bodies has a particular disorder. You could cure it by a certain remedy if that remedy could be
cannot, as it would produce another disorder. The same law holds good throughout life; and sometimes, when there is an appearance of the power of free movement in many directions, there is in reality a check to movement in every one.—Sir Arthur Helps.

SWEETEST FLOWER THAT BLOWS.

The sweetest flower that blows
I give you as we part.
For you it is a rose,
For me it is my heart.
For me it is my heart,
For me it is my heart.

The fragrance it exhales
Ah! if you only knew,
With out in doing falls
It is my love for you

The way to the light blows
For you it is a rose,
For me it is my heart,
For me it is my heart,
For me it is my heart,
For me it is my heart.

RETAINING EFFICIENT TEACHERS A SERIOUS PROBLEM

Agricultural College Bulletin Points Out Difficulties and Remedies For This Condition In Country Districts.

One of the great problems, at present, is the retention of an efficient agricultural teacher for any great length of time in our rural high schools. This is due to the great demand for these men in other agricultural pursuits and to the limited supply of trained teachers. The problem may be reduced by the employment of home teachers, by the adjustment of salaries, and by increasing the length of the term of service.

The agricultural teacher should be employed for the entire year in order that he may render the greatest possible service to the community. By employing him for a longer term his position will be on an equal footing with other agricultural callings, thus reducing the chance of losing his services when he has become valuable to the school and to the community.

It is as important to consider the personality of the teachers as it is to consider his college training. He comes in closer touch with the life of the country community than any other school official. He, through his exemplary habits, ability to do things, and general culture, must be able to command the respect of the entire community. The boy in the school must feel that his teacher knows of what he speaks, and the parent must be satisfied that the child is being directed by one who is qualified to instill correct ideals of farm life and its possibilities.

POULTRY RUNS SHOULD BE FRESHENED AND SOWN TO RYE FOR SPRING GREEN FEED.

ROY H. WAITE.

Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

If you are keeping your chickens in yards, they will need some green feed next spring and the yards ought to be cleaned up so that diseases and parasites will not develop at will. You can perform these two operations at one time if you will dig or cultivate your yards and sow them to rye. If you have a double yard system, you can use one yard or set of yards in the summer and the other set in winter. The summer yards ought to be sown to rye about the first of October, and the hens kept off. Then in the spring when the rye gets a good start they can be turned back and if about 50 square feet is allowed for each bird and they receive a bulky mash, green feed will be provided furnished until the rye is ripe. Other things might be sown but rye is hardy and stands pasturage well.

RYE FOR CHICKENS.

RYE VALUABLE FOR EARLY SPRING FEEDING.

Will Help Out Shortage in Long Feed If Sown Now.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ,

Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Rye when properly used is one of the most valuable crops on the farm. It will produce fair yields on land too poor for wheat, corn, clover or barley, and in view of the present shortage of roughage on many Maryland farms, it promises to be especially helpful to stock owners at this time.

Where a sowing crop is not desired, it will provide excellent spring pasture.

This method of handling it requires less work than sowing, and while only about one-half as much food, is obtained as from sowing, it can be used over a much longer period of growth.

In fact, instead of furnishing food for only about two weeks as in case of sowing crops, it will furnish good pasture from four to six weeks. Furthermore, it begins to do this two or three weeks earlier than the first cutting can be made when the rye is used as green forage. But this is not all; if sown in early September, it will afford considerable late fall and early winter grazing after the grasses have disappeared. In the spring it is usually ready for light grazing before pasture grasses have made sufficient growth.

The cultural and fertilizer requirements of rye are the same as those of wheat.

OF GREAT FOOD VALUE

GELATIN IS WORTHY OF MUCH CONSIDERATION.

Fundamental Food for the Child, and Essential for the Convalescent—Its Use in Jelly Meat Salad and Soup Meat Iced.

(By LIDA AMES WILLIS.)

As a product of actual food value, pure, unadulterated gelatin, is not given the consideration it deserves. Few understand that it is really a fundamental food for the young, growing human being, as well as a superior in the case of the convalescent. The very nature of the substance, in its pure state as young animal gelatin, should make clear to us its substantial worth as an easily assimilated building material and necessary form of sustenance.

Jellied Meat Salad.—Make a scant pint of unsweetened lemon gelatin jelly. In making it steep a sprig or two of fresh bruised mint in boiling water for a few minutes before pouring water over the gelatin. When the jelly is cold enough to begin to thicken, add a pint or more of cold boiled or roast mutton, free from fat and cut in dice. Decorate a wet mold with tiny new boiled carrots and pickles or olives, cut and shaped according to fancy, and turn in the meat mixture and set in the ice chest to harden. Serve as a salad with a good mayonnaise and fresh lettuce or cress.

Jellied Soup Meat, Iced.—Make the jelly carefully in the following manner: Cut into small pieces a pound of soup meat and add just enough water to cover. Let stand in cold place until water is red, then place where it will simmer slowly until all the nutriment is out of the meat. Two hours before removing from the stove add salt to taste and a teaspoonful of savory soup herbs. Keep the top clear from scum. When done strain carefully and set at once in a cold place, as it will not form into a firm jelly if allowed to stand in a warm kitchen. The more quickly the heat is thrown out and the liquor chilled the finer your jelly. When chilled remove all the fat from surface, break up into moderate pieces and pile up in Bouillon cups and serve.

Cold Chocolate Desserts With Gelatin.—These are many and delicious and have the added advantages of being nourishing, wholesome and, as a rule, greatly favored by the young people. Space will not permit giving any special recipe of this group in the present issue. But the recipes gathered at random from reliable sources will show you how valuable gelatin is to the culinary expert, and common sense should prove its value to the amateur cook.

Jellied Cheese.—Dissolve two table-spoonfuls of soaked gelatin in a pint of boiling water, when cool stirring it into three ounces of grated or crumbled yellow cheese, three ounces of cottage or white cream cheese, and one or two chopped pimientos. Pour into little molds sprinkled with grated yellow cheese, and set on ice to harden. Serve on lettuce with a dressing of sharp mayonnaise.

Pineapple Economy.

Most people claim there is so much waste to pineapples, but here is a method by which every bit of the fruit is utilized: Pare and use the fruit either sliced for the table or put away in jars for the winter. Take the parings and cores and to four pineapples add four cups cold water, boil 15 minutes, then let stand several hours before straining. Strain through cloth and add four small cupfuls of sugar. Boil 20 minutes until the consistency of sirup. Bottle and seal. This is very fine on hot cakes and waffles. By using a larger amount of sugar to the liquid and boiling a longer time an excellent jelly can be made. Thus all waste is eliminated.

Scotch Stew.

Run through meat grinder three pounds tender lean beef. Place in deep vessel with three quarts cold water. Boil three hours, adding hot water as needed. After boiling two hours, add half pound butter, one teaspoon sugar, salt and cayenne and black pepper to taste. Cook until it boils.

Lettuce Hint.

To remove the leaves of a head of lettuce without tearing them, tear or cut out the stalk so that the ends of the leaves are free, and plunge head downward into cold water. After remaining there five or ten minutes the water will fill in between the leaves so that they will readily fall apart.

To Test Bread Dough.

To test light bread dough and make sure as to whether it has risen sufficiently for baking, press the finger in the dough. If the hole remains the dough is in proper condition; if the dough rises and fills the indentation this shows that it is in a condition to continue rising.

Cleaning Oriental Rugs.

Oriental rugs may be cleaned very well with the aid of a vacuum cleaner, as it does not pull out the nap, as beating is apt to do. The cleaner should, however, be rolled up and down the rug with the nap rather than across.

Seed in Cans.

Empty baking powder cans are excellent to keep vegetable seed, such as sweet corn, beans, etc., from being destroyed by mice or bugs.

GINGER IN SUMMER SALADS

Welcome for Its Digestive as Well as Its Refreshing Qualities—Served in Grape Fruit.

Ginger is so refreshing in flavor and so stimulating to the digestion that it is a favorite ingredient in summer salads and desserts. An unusual fruit salad, suited to molding in halves of oranges or grapefruit, is strongly flavored with ginger ale and has bits of Canton ginger mixed with the fruit.

The recipe calls for two tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin softened in two tablespoonfuls of cold water and then dissolved in a quarter of a cupful of boiling water. To this add one cupful of ginger ale, the juice of one large lemon and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. When the mixture begins to stiffen stir in a variety of diced fruits, with bits of orange or grapefruit pulp and chopped nuts. This can be served with mayonnaise dressing as a salad or with whipped cream as a dessert.

A pretty way of serving individual portions is to mold the ginger and fruit salad in halves of large grapefruit. When ready to serve divide each half so that each portion shall represent quarter the size of the original grapefruit and the fruit jelly shall have a rim of grapefruit peel only where it would come in contact with the plate.

Any fruit salad mixture can be given a pleasant pungent flavor by the addition of bits of crystallized ginger. A small quantity of the syrup drained from preserved ginger makes a novel and appetizing addition to any dressing intended to be served with a fruit salad.

CARE OF CARPET SWEEPER

Proper Handling Will Greatly Prolong Its Life and Keep It Always Ready for Immediate Use.

As the carpet sweeper is such an important item in my domestic work I am very careful about it. I write a correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger. After each sweeping I take it to the back porch, dump it on a newspaper and turn the broom, brush side up, flat on the floor. I have an old whisk broom cut straight across so that the bristles are very stiff. With this broom I sweep the brush of the sweeper backward and forward. As the bristles are put into the rod in a curved line, the brush slowly revolves as the broom is applied. I sometimes dip the brush in kerosene, which also removes some of the dust from the bristles and keeps them in good condition. I oil bearings of my sweeper frequently, and if there are any threads or hair at either end, I do not tear it away, but cut with a scissors. Sometimes I use an old comb to comb the bristles before putting the sweeper away. This seems a good deal of care, but I find that it pays, and that a perfectly working sweeper is my best friend.

Fig and Nut Jelly.

Wash a cup of pulled figs in cold water. Put over slow fire with two cups of cold water and stew figs until tender. Skim out figs and to the juice add one-half cup of sugar and boil until it is like thin sirup (there should be one cup of liquid). Chop figs and one-quarter cup of shelled pecans not very fine. Soak one-half box of gelatin in one cup of cold water for half an hour. To the gelatin add one-half teaspoonful of lemon juice, and to the fig sirup add one-half cup of boiling water. Strain through fine sieve or piece of cheese cloth. When nearly set add nuts and figs. Turn into molds and set in cool place for three hours. Serve with whipped cream.

Spiced Pears or Peaches.

Seven pounds of fruit, four pounds of light brown sugar, one pint of good vinegar, cloves and cinnamon to taste. Pare and halve the fruit. In each half stick four or five whole cloves, break cinnamon bark and throw in. Let vinegar and sugar come to a boil. Put in fruit and slowly boil until fruit is clear. Seal while hot.

Layer Sandwiches.

Put the crust from a loaf each of white and brown bread so they are left the same size; then cut two and one-half inch slices of each; spread them with a mixture of deviled ham and peanut butter, press six together, alternating the white and brown; also thin, and the sandwiches will look like layer cake.

Fried Scallops.

Parboil in hot, salted water for five minutes; drain and set them upon ice to get cold and firm. Roll them in salted flour, next in beaten eggs, then in fine bread crumbs. Set on ice for half an hour and fry in deep, boiling fat which has been gradually heated to the boil.

To Keep Peanut Butter Moist.

Always keep the peanut butter jar turned upside down when on the cupboard shelf, which insures the last of it being as oily as the first instead of dry and hard, as is usually the case when it stands upright.

Color Returns.

Many people when ironing a dyed dress find that the hot iron changes the color. If it is hung in the shade the color will quickly return.

When Cutting Fresh Bread.

Before cutting fresh bread always dip the knife in hot water. This prevents the bread from crumbling.

The Last Shot

By FREDERICK PALMER

(Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons)

His only speech all the morning had been in the midst of the reception in the public square of the town when he said:

"This home-coming doesn't mean much to me. Home? Hell! The hedgerows of the world are my home!" He appeared older than his years, and hard and bitter, except when his eyes would light with a feverish sort of fire which shone as he broke into a lull in the talk.

"Comrades," he began. "Let us hear from the Socialist!" a Tory exclaimed.

"No, the anarchist!" shouted a Socialist.

"There won't be any war!" said Stransky, his voice gradually rising to the pitch of an agitator relieving the sensation of his own words. "Patriotism is the played-out trick of the ruling classes to keep down the proletariat. There won't be any war! Why? Because there are too many enlightened men on both sides who do the world's work. We of the 58d are a provincial lot, but throughout our army there are thousands upon thousands like me. They march, they drill, but when battle comes they will refuse to fight—my comrades in heart, to whom the flag of this country means no more than that of any other country!"

"Hold on! The flag is sacred!" cried the banker's son.

"Yes, that will do!"

"Shut up!"

Other voices formed a chorus of angry protest.

"I knew you thought it; now I've caught you!" This from the sergeant, who had seen hard fighting against a savage foe in Africa and therefore was particularly bitter about the Boddapoo affair. The welt of a scar on the gaunt, fever-yellowed cheek turned a deeper red as he seized Stransky by the collar of the blouse.

Stransky raised his free hand as if to strike, but paused as he faced the company's boyish captain, slender of figure, aristocratic of feature. His indignation was as evident as the sergeant's, but he was biting his lips to keep it under control.

"You heard what he said, sir?"

"The latter part—enough!"

"It's incitation to mutiny! An example!"

"Yes, put him under arrest."

The sergeant still held fast to the collar of Stransky's blouse. Stransky could have shaken himself free, as a mastiff frees himself from a puppy, but he was reluctant to arrest and he had not yet made up his mind to go that far. His muscles were weaving under the sergeant's grip, his eyes glowing as with volcanic fire waiting on the madness of impulse for eruption.

"I wonder if it is really worth while to put him under arrest," said some one at the edge of the group in amiable inquiry.

The voice came from an officer of about thirty-five, who apparently had strolled over from a nearby aeroplane station to look at the regiment. From his shoulder hung the gold cords of the staff. It was Col. Arthur Lanstron, whose plane had skinned the Galland's garden wall for the "easy bump" ten years ago. There was something more than mere titular respect in the way the young captain saluted—admiration and the diffident, boyish glance of recognition which does not presume to take the lead in recalling a slight acquaintance with a man of distinction.

"Dellame! It's all of two years since we met at Miss Galland's, isn't it?" Lanstron said, shaking hands with the captain.

"Yes, just before we were ordered south," said Dellame, obviously pleased to be remembered.

"I overheard your speech," Lanstron continued, nodding toward Stransky. "It was very informing."

A crowd of soldiers was now pressing around Stransky, and in the front rank was Grandfather Fraglin.

"Said our flag was no better'n any other flag, did he?" piped the old man. "Beat him to a pulp! That's what the Hussars would have done."

"If you don't mind telling it in public, Stransky, I should like to know your origin," said Lanstron, prepared to be as considerate of an anarchist's private feelings as of anybody's.

Stransky squinted his eyes down the bony bridge of his nose and grinned sardonically.

"My father, so far as I could identify him, died in jail and my mother of drink."

"That was hardly to the purple!" observed Lanstron thoughtfully.

"No, to the red!" answered Stransky savagely.

"I mean that it was hardly inclined to make you take a roeate view of life as a beautiful thing in a well-ordered world where favors of fortune are evenly distributed," continued Lanstron.

"Rather to make me rejoice in the hope of a new order of things—the recreation of society!" Stransky uttered the sentiment with the triumphant pride of a pupil who knows his text-book thoroughly.

By this time the colonel commanding the regiment, who had noticed the excitement from a distance, appeared, forcing a gap for his passage through the crowd with sharp words. He, too, recognized Lanstron. After they had shaken hands, the colonel scowled as he heard the situation explained, with the old sergeant, still holding fast to Stransky's collar, a capable and insistent witness for the prosecution; while Stransky, the fire in his eyes dying to coals, stared straight ahead.

"It is only a suggestion, of course," said Lanstron, speaking quite as a spectator to avoid the least indication of interference with the colonel's authority, "but it seems possible that Stransky has clothed his wrongs in a garb that could never set well on his nature if he tried to wear it in practice. He is really an individualist. Enraged, he would fight well. I should like nothing better than a force of Stranskys if I had to defend a redoubt in a last stand."

"Yes, he might fight." The colonel looked hard at Stransky's rigid profile, with its tight lips and chin as firm as if cut out of stone. "You never know who will fight in the pinch, they say. But that's speculation. It's the example that I have to deal with."

"He is not of the insidious, plotting type. He spoke his mind openly," suggested Lanstron. "If you give him the limit of the law, why, he becomes a martyr to persecution. I should say that his remarks might pass for barracks-room gassing."

"Very well," said the colonel, taking the shortest way out of the difficulty. "We will excuse the first offense."

"Yes, sir!" said the sergeant mechanically as he released his grip of the offender. "We had two anarchists in my company in Africa," he observed in loyal agreement with orders. "They fought like devils. The only trouble was to keep them from shooting innocent natives for sport."

Stransky's collar was still crumpled on the nape of his neck. He remained stock-still, staring down the bridge of his nose. For a full minute he did not vouchsafe so much as a glance upward over the change in his fortunes. Then he looked around at Lanstron glowering.

"I know who you are!" he said. "You were born in the purple. You have had education, opportunity, position—everything that you and your kind want to keep for your kind. You are smarter than the others. You would hang a man with spider webs instead of hemp. But I won't fight for you! No, I won't!"

He threw back his head with a determination in his defiance so intense that it had a certain kind of dignity that freed it of theatrical affectation.

"Yes, I was fortunate; but perhaps nature was not altogether unkind to you," said Lanstron. "In Napoleonic times, Stransky, I think you might even have carried a marshal's baton in your knapsack."

"You—what rot!" A sort of triumph played around Stransky's full lips and his jaw set out challengingly. "No, never against my comrades on the other side of the border!" he concluded, his dogged stare returning.

Now the colonel gave the order to fall in; the bugle sounded and the company's legs began to assemble on the road. But Stransky remained a statue, his rifle untouched on the sward. He seemed of a mind to let the regiment go on without him.

"Stransky, fall in!" called the sergeant.

Still Stransky did not move. A comrade picked up the rifle and fairly thrust it into his hands.

"Come on, Bert, and knead dough with the rest of us!" he whispered.

He knew the pattern weaving under his feet as one knows that of his own garden from an overlooking window. Every detail of the staff map, railines, roads, buildings, battery positions, was stitched together in the flowing reality of actual vision. No white posts were necessary to tell him where the boundary between the two nations lay. The line was drawn in his brain.

Now that Lanstron was the organizer of the aviation corps his own flights were rare. Mostly they were made to Mr. T. His visits to Marta were his holidays. All the time that she was absent on her journey around the world they had corresponded. Her letters, so revealing of herself and her peculiar angles of observation, formed a bundle, sacredly preserved. Her place in the ranks.

Hep-hep-hep! The regiment started on its way, with Grandfather Fraglin keeping at his grandson's side.

"Makes me feel young again, but it's darned solemn beside the Hussars, with their horses' bits a-jingling. Times have certainly changed—officers' hands in their pockets, saying 'if you don't mind' to a man that's insulted the flag! Kicking ain't good enough for that traitor! Ought to hang him—yes, sir, hang and draw him!"

Lanstron watched the marching column for a time.

"Hep-hep-hep! It's the brawn of the infantry that counts in the end," he mused. "I liked that wall-eyed giant. He's all man!"

Then his living glance swept the heavens inquiringly. A speck in the blue, far away in the realms of atmospheric infinity, kept growing in size until it took the form of the wings with which man flies. The plane volplaned down with steady swiftness, till its racing shadow lay large over the landscape for a few seconds before it rose again with beautiful ease and precision.

"Bully for you, Betsy!" Lanstron thought, as he started back to the aeroplane station. "You belong in the corps. We shall not let you return to your regiment for a while. You've a cool head and you'd charge a church tower if that were the orders."

CHAPTER V.

A Sunday Morning Call.

As a boy, Arthur Lanstron had persisted in being an exception to the influences of both heredity and environment. Though his father and both grandfathers were officers who believed theirs to be the true gentleman's profession, he had preferred any kind of mechanical toy to arranging the most garbly painted tin soldiers in formation on the nursery floor; and he would rather read about the wonders of natural history and electricity than the campaigns of Napoleon and Frederick the Great and my Lord Nelson. Left to his own choice, he would miss the parade of the garrison for inspection by an excellency in order to ask questions of a man wiping the oil off his hands with cotton-waste, who was far more entertaining to him than the most spick-and-span ramrod of a sergeant.

Upon being told one day that he was to go to the military school the following autumn, he broke out in open rebellion.

"Don't want to go to the army!" he said.

"Why?" asked his father, thinking that when the boy had to give his reasons he would soon be argued out of the heresy.

"It's drilling a few hours a day, then nothing to do," Arthur replied. "All your work waits on war and you don't know that there will ever be any war. It waits on something nobody wants to happen. Now, if you manufacture something, why, you see wool come out of cloth, steel come out of an automobile. If you build a bridge you see it rising little by little. You're getting your results every day; you see your mistakes and your successes. You're making something, creating something; there's something going on all the while that isn't guesswork. I think that's what I want to say. You won't order me to be a soldier, will you?"

The father, loath to do this, called in the assistance of an able pleader then, Eugene Partow, lately become chief of staff of the Browns, who was an old friend of the Lanstron family. Partow turned the balance on the side of filial affection. He kept watch of the boy, but without favoring him with influence. Young Lanstron, who wanted to see results, had to earn them. He realized in practice the truth of Partow's saying that there was nothing he had ever learned but what could be of service to him as an officer.

"Finding enough work to do?" Partow would ask with a chuckle when they met in these days; for he had made Lanstron both chief of intelligence and chief aerostatic officer. Young Colonel Lanstron was the duty of gaining the secrets of the Gray staff and keeping those of the Brown and organizing up-to-the-moment efficiency in the new forces of the air.

He had remarked truly enough that the injury to his left hand served as a better reminder against the folly of wool-gathering than a string, even a large red string, tied around his finger.

Thank to skillful surgery, the fingers, incapable of spreading much, were yet serviceable and had a firm grip of the wheel as he rose from the aeroplane station on the Sunday morning after Marta's return home for a flight to La Tré.

He knew the pattern weaving under his feet as one knows that of his own garden from an overlooking window. Don't Wait For The Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness—Profit by Salisbury People's Experience

Occasional attacks of backache, irregular urination, headaches and dizzy spells are frequent symptoms of kidney disorders. It's an error to neglect these ills. The attacks may pass off for a time, but generally return with greater intensity. Don't delay a minute. Begin taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and keep up their use until the desired results are obtained. Good work in Salisbury proves the effectiveness of this great kidney remedy.

Marshall Mitchell, 6178, Division St., Salisbury, Md., says: "You may continue to use the endorsement I gave about a year ago regarding Doan's Kidney Pills. I still take them occasionally and they always bring the best results. I never hesitate to give this remedy praise, for it has done me much good. My back bothered me a great deal and it was hard for me to stoop or straighten. I took a number of remedies, but they did not seem to bring me much relief. Doan's Kidney Pills were just what I needed and it required only two boxes to remove the trouble."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Mitchell had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

SPECIAL TO WOMEN

The most economical, cleansing and germicidal of all antiseptics is

Paxtine

A soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed.

As a medicinal antiseptic for douches in treating catarrh, inflammation or ulceration of nose, throat, and that caused by feminine ills it has no equal.

For ten years the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. has recommended Paxtine in their private correspondence with women, which proves its superiority. Women who have been cured say it is "worth its weight in gold."
