CONSTANTINOPLE, Jani 1.

HE treasures of the famous Ali Bey are brought here from Egypt, and deposited in the castle of the seven towers. I hey are valued at three millions of piastres. The derable treasure by the death of Moldavangi Pancha; formerly grand vifir, who, fince his deposition, was encamped in the environs of the Dardanelles, and died at Kodofto of a fit of apoplexy.

Rodotto of a nt of apoplexy.

A Tartar who arrived here the 18th ult. brought advice that a Ruffian detachment, posted in an island of the Danube, near Silistria, had been driven thence by our troops, after fulfaining confiderable lofs, and leaving four pieces of cannon behind them. It is added, that none of the enemy are on this fide of the Da-nube; and that all our posts from Widdin to Carason, as well as those at Bazardic and Varna, are well supplied with troops, ammunition, and provisions. The army of the grand vifir is encamped at and in the neighbourhood of Sioemla.

Jan. 21. At half an hour after twelve the grand fignor expired, and at half an hour after two the guns from the Seraglio announced his fuccessor Abdul Hamed. Jan. 27. An express has just arrived from Adrianople with an alarming account of the Janislaries there having mutimed on the death of the emperor Musiapha, and refused to acknowledge, the fultan Abdul Hamed for their fovereign, but have declared the fultan Selini in his stead. They had postessed themselves of the whole city, and confined the caumacan, and some other officers who had refused to join them. The caimacan of this city is preparing troops to disperse them.

PETERSBOURG, Jan. 25. On Saturday last letters were received from general Bibikow from ason, where he waited the arrival of the rest of the troops that were to join him before he marched to attack the revolters! The wife and children of the coffack, who is at the head of them, were taken prisoners by a party of Rus-fians a few days before the date of those letters.

HAERLEM, feb. 11. A public paper received here from the frontiers of Poland, gives the following intelligence.—" We are not yet certain who is the adven-turer that takes on himself the name of leter III. It is faid he is at the head of 100,000 men, as well Coffacks as Kalmucs, and has made himself master of the regiment of Orenburg. General Bibikow, who was fent to reduce the rebels to reason, is said to have been obliged by his own troops to submit to the chief of the mitiners, and to pay him homage to fave his life. This pretended Peter expresses himself in his manifestor in a most tender and infinuating manner; he declares he has no pretention himself to the crown, but does all for his dear child, the grand duke Paul; whom he declares is the only legitimate heir. He discharges all the people from their late imposts, and declares that as soon as he has placed the crown on the head of him to whom it of fight belongs, he shall retire to a distant Convent, and end his days in peace."

PARIS, Feb. 12. On sunday the 30th ule, a great number of persons wanting to cross the river Sarte, be-tween the towns of Mans and Sable, above fixty crouded into the ferry-boat; foon after the boat put oil, and the water running very rapidly, the boat overfet. some fived themselves by swimming, others were taken up by boats which put off to their assistance, but forty-five perished, among whom were several women with child. The town of Noyen was in the greatest consternation on hearing of the accident. some whole families being amongst the drowned. People were employed the whole day in feeking for the drowned, feveral of whom were taken up, but too late to bring any to life again.

LONDON, February 5.

Yesterday general Gage, commander in thief of his majesty's forces in North America, was at court and had a long conference with his majesty. The general will foon go again in that station. Feb. 6. The place lately held by Dr. Frankin, of post-master general in America, from which his ma-jety was pleased to dismiss him on Saturday last, is given to Hugh Finlay, Efq; furveyor of the polt there.

Dr. D — d was difiniffed from his office of chaplain of the J—s's, last Monday; the following is the most particular account of the occasion of his diffrace that has appeared in the paners.

The living of St. G.-- H --- Sq.--, being vacant, a letter was written figned by the fictitious character of Wilton, and fent to the lord C-r's lady, offering her sood, or sool, a year for her ife for her presenta-The lady communicated it with great propriety to her lord, who traced it to have been written at one Mr. C. r's a laceman. He fent for the laceman, and afted who wrote the letter, the laceman hestrated giving any account of his knowledge of the author for fome little time, and then acknowledged, that one Mr. N .-- s wrote it at his house. Mr. Nos was then fent for, who perfilted for a confiderable white to confess his privity of the letter of author, but the just terrors of the law had their effect. He hoped his lordship would excute his revealing the author; to whom he was under the. greatest obligation, and especially for a department of 100l, a year in lord D. to so office. The crime could not be to apologized for, and he was at last compelled to declare, that the letter was dictated by the hand-fome eloquent M-gd-n doctor; the writer, Mr. N-s, was threatened with the loss of his appointment. The was threatened with the lois of his appointment. The doctor's letter was presented to his m—y o'll Sunday, and the doctor's difinition took place, I think, the next day. The doctor's lady with all female dexterity, which the possession in the highest degree, took the blame on herself, said, upon her word, the doctor knew nothing of the detter, hoped he would not be made accurated with her writing it alast his mind was bent quainted with her writing it, alas! his mind was bent on more important concerns; but the law was not to be so imposed on. As her word was not taken for got-pel truth, the affertion was searched to the bottom, and the lady was proved true to her hufband, but false to her word.

teb. 12. This day arrived the mails from Prance and Holland, in which an account is given of an engagement between the Turks and Russians by sea, wherein the latter had the advantage; but on the other hand we are told, in letters from Hamburg, that the rebes in Cafan amount to 100,000 men, and are daily increafing. The advices from Poland also seem to indicate a fresh insurrection in that kingdom, to oppose which the court of Vienna has given orders to march 6000 additional troops towards those parts.

A correspondent observes, that the case of the Americens is extremely hard, in being subject not only to. be taxed by the pritish parliament, in which they are not represented, but to be plundered by the English merchants, whom they are obliged to employ.

The following letter has appeared in feveral of the London papers.

Feb. 17. Last Monday her grace the duchess of Ancafter introduced to her majetty, at the queen's palace, feveral antiques, curiously painted with human hair; an art which was known among the antients, but has been buried near 800 years, till revived by the ingenious Mr. Frederick Polydore Nodder. Her majesty was predied to give her approbation to his great genius and merit; and it is faid, her majerty has honoured him with an order for copying an historical picture with her own hair.

Feb. 22. Senfible judicious men think his majesty has feen the last petition that will ever be presented to him from the aggrieved subjects of North America, and that the privy council, to their eternal honour, have reported on the last American position that will ever be referred to that right honourable, impartial, and unerring board. Previous to the late over memorable hearing of the complaint against governor Bernard, before the privy council, the Americans were possessed of an opinion, that it was the most facred court of justice in the world, But the acquittal of that governor must fill their minds with grief and diffruit. I be acquittal of Hutchinson and Oliver, added to the treatment their agent received, when in the execution of his duty, before the council, will fully fettle the matter in the minds of every American. Formerly when an Afferican thought he had not justice done him in the colony courts, his method was to carry the case home (as the Americans phrase it) and lay the matter before the king and council, where he had not the least doubt of obtaining justice

Feb. 26. This meaning the right hon, the lord mayor received a letter from John Roberts, Esq. intimating that he should give his lordship no further trouble with respect to the late election for a member for the city of London.

Mr. Alderman Harley presented a petition from the booksellers of London, &c. setting forth that many of them shall be ruined by the late decision in the house of lords, unless some relief was given them.

Mr. Sawbridge seconded the motion; saying, by a de kisson in the year 1769, in favour of copy right, many of the booksellers had said out their whole fortunes in that article, which right had been taken from them by the determination of the upper house, and if some redress was not given them, many families would be totally ruined.

We hear from good authority that an express arrived late last night with an account of the death of the king. of France. The above monarch was 63 years old; he acceded to the throne in the year 1715, in the fifth year of his age. The confirmation of the above intelligence is hourly expected; and it is generally thought the death of this great personage will considerably affect the pacific lystem of Europe.

March 1. Yellerday, in the house of commons, Mr. attorney general moved for leave to present a petition from major-general simon Frazer, praying that he might be restored to the several citates and inheritances forfeited by his late father Simon lord Lovat; in paying a reasonable crown rent. Lord North recommended it to the house, so far as his majerty's interest is concerned therein. The metion was seconded by Mr. T. Townshend, and spoke to by Sr William Meredish, who all enlarged greatly on the merits and deserts of the petitioner. A bill was overed to be brought in by Mr. attorney-general, in pursuance of the prayer of the faid

The Redford party now run the ministry to hard at all points, that lord N is obliged to call in the Rockingham jockeys as a butterful to his tottering political fabrick. In confequence of that, Mf. Ophiwall is to have Mr. For a place in the treatury, and Sir W

Tuesday about a quarter past two the order of the day was read in the house of peers, when lord Camden role and spoke most learnedly for near two hours against the claim of the respondents, and in defence of the statute of queen Anne, which he faid took away any right at common law for an author's exclusively multiplying copies if any fuch right existed. The bishop of Carlisle and lord Effinghand Howard spoke against it, and the question being put by the lord chancellor, whether it was their lordships pleafure that the decree should be reversed, it was carried without a division, without costs.

The following is the state of the opinions of the eleven judges, on the great cause of literary property. For the common law right of authors, the justices Nares, Ashurst, Blackstone, Willes and Aston, and lord chief Baron Smythes. Against the common law right of authors, or that it is taken away by statute, Mr. baron Eyre, Perrott, and Adams, Mr. justice Gould, and lord chief justice de Grey. and lord chief justice de Grey.

By the above decision of the important question respecting copy-right in books, near 200,000l. of what was honestly purchased at public fale, and which was yesterday thought property, is now reduced to nothing. The bookfellers of London and Westminster, many of whom have fold estates and houses to purchase copyright, are in a manner ruined, and those who after many years industry thought they had acquired a competency to provide for their families, now find them. felves without a fhilling to devite to their fuccoffors.

APTAIN EDEN informs his friends in Maryland, that he expects to fail for England on or before the 18th of May, and requests the favour of those that may be disappointed in getting their tobacco in the Annapolis, not to take it amis, as he must take on board, what first comes down to the warehouses; but makes use of this opportunity to give them notice, for himself and company, that they will by that time have another ship in Patuxent, whose say. there will be very thort, as many of their most particular friends tobacco cannot be got ready to go in the Annapolis, and they expect that there will be another thip load ready in that river by the 20th of June, for that their next thip will have immediate dispatch as falt as the can load

Those gentlemen on the Eastern shore, who are no disappointed in getting their tobacco on board the Asnapolis, and all others who will favour T. Eden and company with their configuraters, are requested to take notice, that the Sophia, capt. Carmichael, is Chefter river, and the Choptank, capt. Coward, at Oxford, are now loading to their address. Both of those ships are expected to fail early, the first of their nearly at the same time with the Annapolis. Captain Eden is very forry that he is not able to wait on the gentlemen on the Eathern shore himself, to take the commands; but those, who wish their tobacco home to an early market, or have other business, are defined to give notice thereof, to James Dickinson, Esqual Oxford; Mr. James Hutchins junior, at Kent Island or eapt. Carmichael on board his ship at Chester; and their tobacco shall be sent for, and their letters forwarded immediately.

A thip for Patowmack, was to fail from London by the last of February, so that the may be now hourly expected.

Capt. Mandrick, in a fhip called the Baltimore, is engaged to come out for T. Eden and company, and was to fail from London by the last of March, for Pe

Those gentlemen, who want goods out in the fall may be assured, that they will be bought on the bettering, and are requested to send their orders home by the Annapolis; as frequent miscarriages, and delays of letters, by many other channels, are pretty well known to be the cafe femetimes from this province.

Those gentlemen on this side of the bay, whom capt-Eden may not have an opportunity of seeing, are de-fired to leave their orders for England, with major Jo. Sim, or capt. Judion Coolidge; and those bills of lading, which he may not have an opportunity of delivering, will be left with those gentlemen, in which infurance will be inserted for all those who do not give particular orders to the contrary.

R ICHARD BURLAND, tailor and habit-maker from Louden, late foreman to Mr. Robert Pinkney, deceased, takes this method to acquaint the public, that he is now removed into the house were semuel Harvey Howard lately lived, facing the coffethouse; he takes this opportunity to affure those laters and gentlemen who may please to favour him with their cultom, that he will make it his constant endeavour, by punctuality, and a first attention to business, to merit their lafting approbation.

TO DR. CHARLES WIESENTHAL.
SIR, May 9, 1774.

HE ipfe dixit of any person, however reafonable it may appear, should not have the least weight in any science, when repugnant to facts, which has been the result of ages; much less should an opinion unsupported by reason, facts, or analogy.

the great veneration paid to men of reputation, has been the means of introducing the most gross abfurdities into almost every science. The dogma of introducing the most gross abfurdities into almost every science. The dogma of introducing principles contrary to his doctrine, it was immediately condemned: in such a manner were the minds of men involved in obscurity, till removed by the immortal from. Nieu of ambitious minds, when set at the head of any science, whether they arrive there by superior merit, or by crast and dishmulation, on advancing an opinion, think it incumbent on themselves to support it, however absurd: they are so elated with vanity, and prompted by folly, as to think their bare assertion sufficient to convince; treating the opinion of all authorities with contempt, as being spurious, or the effect of imagination, and even arrogate to themselves a knowledge superior to the united observations for

! think your figning a letter directed to me, pointing out the nature of my collateral circumstances, has rendered you equally contemptible as the signing one shewing the absurdity of my reasoning would have done; though perhaps you might suggest in the former, it was not in my power to prove the falsity of your accusation; whereas in the latter, you well knew the opinios of every physician, ancient and modern, were

I understood from you when at Mr. Coale's, on July the 6th, that your idea in regard to his disorder was, that it was putrid, as will appear from my first letter to you: though from your answer it is very clear, that you had retracted your former notion, and was of an opinion similar to mine: that is, that his disorder was inflammatory, but not in so great a degree: words to this purpose you will find in the third column, in the fore part of your first letter.

it must be obvious to every reader, that there is such a confusion of your ideas in regard to his disorder, that you cannot explain what they are---your journal says, his disorder was a rheumatic sever, tending to an abject. Your letter of the 24th of February says, originally an abscess was the first of his complaint, which brought on both pain and sever--- in your letter directed to me on the first of June, that the pain of the knee was a rheumatic symptom---in your last you say, the instammation was from a particular deposition of acrimony, left in the blood by the measles, which being dispersed by bleeding, brought on a putrid sever.

Every person on perusing your first letter, must think that we had agreed on Man't coale's disorder; you acknowledged that he laboured under the rivermatism, and that his sever was inflammatory, (but not in so great a degree) depending on the pain and inflammation; and in the latter part of your letter, acknowledged in general a resolution was the most savourable termination: also you acknowledged the propriety and necessity of bleeding of sim, and we only disagreed whether he was, or was not bled too copiously; and to prove bleeding had not been used sufficiently, I gave you the observations of Dr. Huxham and Clephorn exact in point; here you found yourself discomsted, and like unto the cameleon, changed.

Now fir, it appears to me from your last performance, that the matter in dispute is, whether Mr. Coalc's was, or was not, originally (at the time of bleeding) a putrid complaint; also whether the most favourable termination of an inflammation is by resolution, or apostemation.

In my first letter, I have been explicit on the nature of insammatory and putrid, severs, and there pointed out the pathognominic signs as delivered by the most experienced physicians; which I reter you to, and shall now be as concise as possible.— The signs from whence you draw your conclusion of its being putrid, by no means characterizes a putrid sever: the dryness of the skin is a common attendant on all species of severs, so long as a stricture on the superficies remains; though in putrid complaints, there is often a peculiar degree of pungency to the touch; a symptom which, I did not perceive in Mr. Coale; perhaps from your great delicacy, the ends of your singers may have been more irritable, therefore more susceptible of an impression. Had you read Van Swieten on the convulso sebrics, you might discover spasmodic contractions are not in any

You complain of my omitting to mention his having a dry kin, also point it out as an inattention. -- When I speak of an obstructed perspiration, I mention it relatively, as a total one never exists while life remains; any person of sense from my saying he had no sensible perspiration, tili-the 28th, must conclude of course, the skin and most.

manner a pathognominic fign of putrifaction. I will deliver the pathognominic figns of a putrid fever, as mentioned by Huxham, Van Savieten, Pringle, &c.... he pulse in general, quick and small, sometimes slow and soft, and often very fluctuating; a great prostration of strength, sighing and sobbing; faintness, and a remarkable dejection of the spirits. If the pulse is full, it is sure to sink on using evacuations to any considerable degree, and every symptom increased thereby; at some times a dry parched skin, at others prosuse sweats from the first.

I beg you will compare these symptoms with Mr. Coale's, and reflect on the consequences that immediately enfued bleeding; the first time the pulse was raifed, the fecond every threatening symptom removed, and he remained much better for three days; but on the 5th day, the pair and inflammation returned with violence, in consequence of which, the fever : this acceffary feizure was the cause of your being sent for, and not the continuance of the symptoms, for which the last bleeding was used .-- You observe in your journal, that when you was called on the 7th day, the pulie indicated bleeding, and you would have ordered it, if the tumour had not been subfiding. I shall be glad to know of you, for what reason would you have ordered bleeding: when you say from the acrimony being taken up, a putrid fever was induced? in case you thought at that time the tumor subsiding had induced a putrid fever, why would you have ordered bleeding to disperse it?--- can you produce one case, or the opinion of one physician, that persons labouring under a sever of the putrid kind, ever had a full and hard pulse, indicating bleeding feven days from their attack, and after evacuations had been used with freedom --- On the contrary, is it not an observation made by every experienced physician, that a full and hard pulse is the most pathognominic sign of an inflammatory fever, and too great a tention of the arterial is frem : or needs there any other argument to prove its being highly inflammatory, when after evacuations had been used liberally in the beginning, the pulse to show too great a tention on the 7th day, and indicate bleeding. Now fir, you fee your journal has furnished me with an observation, that every experienced plays in her declared to be the pathographic field of physician has declared to be the pathognominic fign of an inflammatory fever.

I have in my first letter pointed out to you, also have given the opinion of the first physicians, shewing that a resolution of an inflammation is the most favourable termination, and ought to be attempted, especially those of the breaft: --- I thall subjoin a case of col. Charles Hammond's fon, who you also attended. On January the 3d, 1773, I was called to him, he then laboured under a pain and inflammation of the shoulder, with a fever; I bled him, and made use of the antiphlogistic regimen and medicines, and put a blifter on the part; the pain and inflammation left the shoulder, and a tumour appeared on the fore part of the breaft; it appeared to me impracticable to procure a refolution: I ordered a poultice, it suppurated in a few days and was opened; the collar-bone became carious --- on the 13th of April, 1774, (about 15 months after his first attack) I extracted the collar-bone. It is to be observed, I laid the aposteme open at first the whole length full three inches.

You observe that a putrid fever was induced from the acrimony being obstructed, and afterwards re-entering the circulation .--- The nature of his complaints plainly contradicts this hypothesis. --- If the inflammation was in confequence of a deposition of acrimony on the shoulder and side, forming an abscess, how comes it to pais, that when the pain and inflammation were removed by bleeding, that the fever and other fymptoms immediately fubfided?--- in all cases where we are certain morbific, or acrimonious matter exitts, as 100n as it is deposited on any particular part, the fever and other fymptoms vanish; but in case of its being repelled, a train of direful symptoms are produced: as is demonstrated in the plague, small pox, and other eruptive diforders; a person the least conversant with the finall pox, must know that when the eruption is compleated, the fever and other symptoms go off; but if it is repelled by any means, every symptom returns with more violence. Pray sir, was this the consequence in Mr. Coale's case? no! as soon as the pain and inflammation were removed by bleeding, the fever and other symptoms subsided, till the accessary seizure on the 5th day, at which time the fever &c. returned. Had the fever depended on acrimony in the blood, would it not have been highest when the tumour was differfed; and on its being deposited on any particular part, would not the fever &c. go off, as is the case in other diforders, depending on morbific matter
Mr. Coale, for fix weeks previous to the fever, had

Mr. Coale, for fix weeks previous to the teet, had pains at times in the shoulder; if these pains were excited from acrimony deposited, what became of the acrimony when the pains were absent: if it was taken into the juices, you say it would become heterogeneous; but he always found himself the best on the pain leaving him. He has this winter laboured under pains of the shoulder, arms, &c. and the strength much impaired in those members; several hard swellings on the muscles appeared. I should think the discharge from the thigh was sufficient to have carried off all the acrimons.

to disperse it, you say, will bring on a putrid sever, or are we to endeavour to procure another aposteme? If the swellings are cut out, where it seems the acrimony is centered; perhaps it might escape, as it did when the leg was taken off.--- This acrimony seems to be a subtle intelligent being, and it is difficult to lay hold of it.

I mentioned a spontaneous separation of the gluten being observed in inflammatory disorders, by some of the greatest physicians; whether it may be an effect, or a cause, I have not ventured to give my opinion: but that there are such appearances is certain, and I cannot think it to be from acrimony. How acrimony can be let out by bleeding, I cannot conceive, without it collects itself together, and rushes out of the orifice? similar attempts perhaps may be taken to take away the matter in the small-pox, measles, &c. arguments of equal weight might be produced for the one as the other; though experience contradicts both.

Ry using the bark and claret at the time I did, was on account of the great debility; as for increasing the bark, the quantity mentioned by you, was to infigui-ficant, that he would have been a month taking what was requisite to be given in 48 hours:--- an apothe-cary's boy could not have formed a more absurd prefcription: granting at the time I used the bark and claret, that there were figns of putrifaction, it does not in the least contradict but what originally at the time of bleeding his diforder was highly inflammatory: for when an inflammation is not refolved, putrifaction takes place. What is pa:? but the stagnating sluids becoming femi-putrid, destroying the containing folids. In the last stage of a pleurify, peripneumony, &c. there are figns of putrifaction, and often on diffection, the parts are found to be mortified. Has vir. Coale laboured under any symptom, but what prevails in an empyema; fuch as colliquative sweats, diarrhoea, hectic fever, &c. you I presume, admit an empyema to be in consequence of an inflammation, and a resolution ought to be attempted by bleeding, &c.

I still deny an abscess existing on Mr. Coale (except of the knee:) you with great propriety appropriated to yourself the appellation of illiterate, in regard to the term imposthume or abscess. There are many instances of inflammations, which are not dispersed, and yet not suppurate; without which, you may find by Barrow's, or Quincy's lexicon, the term abscess or imposshume, cannot be applied; it must be very ridiculous for a physician to say an abscess mortified or indurated, without ever matter being formed; for it is certain an imposshume never takes place, till the obstructed shuid is suppurated.

I thought it requisite to point out how a difficulty of breathing might exist, without breathing with the knee; and shew that the pain of the breast was not the immediate cause; there are instances of the breast being so formed, as to admit no dilitation; the person being at rest, had no difficulty in breathing; how does a difficulty in breathing come on from running and other exercise, and in severs without pain, except from an

I have not denied but what I faid there was no matter; I denied there being matter, as not being the cenfishence of pus; what I expected to see, was an ichorous humour; as is frequently discharged from abjects, when the bones are carious.— I shall be glad you, will point out in what place I said the absects did not form in the articulation: is it, that you cannot understand, or have you an avertion to speak the truth? look into my last letter to you, and see if I have not given it as my opinion; that the seat of inflammation was in the tendinous parts of the muscles: membranes surrounding the joint, and capsular ligament; and that the absect must form where the seat of inflammation was: your repeatingly missrepresenting my words, betrays great inattention or something words.

Your faying I was told of there being an abscess formed for a confiderable time, previous to opening it is false: it was mentioned to me some few days before, and I on examining would have opened it; but Mr. Coale would not permit it. I was always very defirous of letting out any stagnating sluid, and had a suspicion that an abjects would form and produce a carious bone; therefore used every method to prevent it: as you was fo well convinced of the dangerous consequences of the opening being delayed, why did you give it as your opinion, when you was there last, that it might be deferred three days longer? I am furprized, that a person of Dr. Wiesenthal's benevolent disposition, who to affectingly sympathizes for the sufferings of his fellow creatures, should be so negligent of his duty, as not to disapprove of a method, which he well knew must be of such fatal consequences to Mr. Coale; as the using resolving medicines, such as camph. &c. or what is worse, recommend rubbing with laudanum, equally prejudicial by its preventing an aposteme

You feem defirous to convince the reader, that you recommended the emetic fartar and camphire, as medicines not being used; did you advise a medicine not used, previous or disapproved of any; if not, no person of tense can think any alteration was made?

You have been to confcious of the futibility of your reasoning, that you have been ashamed to figure name; therefore have rendered your pupil riliculous, by his suffering himself to be made a dupe to your artifice .-- To remove your accufation in regard to Mrs. Cromwel ! here fubjoin Mrs. kumney's certificate. ---

I hereby certify, that Mrs. Flizabeth Cromwel, defired me to acquaint Dr. Ephraim Howard with her complaints; and request the doctor to visit her: I accordingly acquainted him; witness my hand, this 13th day of April, 1774.

RUTH RUMNEY. Previous to this information of Mrs. Rumney's, Mr. John comwel at Elk-Ridge landing, after relating Mrs. Cromwel's fituation, offered me 50 guineas to cure her. It would have been candid in you to have related in what manner I conducted myfelf, when I vifited her; and your behaviour. --- I enquired who was her attending phytician, the informed me you was: I then obferved it was not possible for me to form so good a judg-ment, without being acquainted with the manner of treatment; and defired a confultation. A day was appointed, and the faid you was informed; I vifited her accordingly .-- The wind blew hard, which the imagined might obstruct you from crofling the ferry ;--- the fecond day was appointed, and I called on her; the then informed me the had feen you, and that it was your opinion, Dr. Howard could not be of any fervice; you when young, thought you could cure many diforders, which experience has now convinced you, that you could not :- yet you talk of a behaviour, ill becoming a man of good breefing; but this piece of impoliteness, is confishent with your conduct in general. I never mentioned a word to you at Mr. 1 oale's, in regard to Francis Simpson; perhaps your conscience might have told you, that your behaviour was inconfillens with the character of a physician; by giving an opinion to the family, contrary to the attending playfician, when he was not prefent; well knowing what his featiments were previous; though each fign from whence you drew your conclusion, might have happened without both bones being broke. In August the 6, 1772, I amiffed Dr. we to amputate the leg, and part of the thick, of a negro of Mr. Hernmond's; I requested the doctor to lay the leg bones bare, and faw : tibi. in an oblique direction; he did it, and meafured previously the exact length of the leg; he then the bone, measured it, and found the leg near an larb horter; this was done in the presence of severevent' men ;- as for the oval form being altered w s, t the under part being patted, prevented its fw lling in proportion to its fides; my publishing your letter was to rove you but afferted a facity, in faving i had read, the or the bark and charer in various forme, before your fecond vifit: as for invalidating your parehad no intent; looking on it to be a marter mérely calculated to serve your present purpose, as most perfous I believe do. You in your first letter, denied you ever find bleeding of 5 r. toble was improper; in answer thereto, told you what really did pass; you from now to be filent on that head; I have fince fin Mrs. Eidgely, the declares what I inferted, to be the fabiliance of what you faid and that the always underficial by you, bleeding was improper: in juffice to yourfelf, it is incumbent on you to clear it up.

You have made use of every mean and dirty art, that malice could dictate, or villainy fuggeff, to extricate yourself; though every expedient has failed you. A person once proved to be void of veracit, is shown to be destitute of one of the greatest social virtues; and when habit has rendered him to callons, as publicly to affert that to be a feet, which on reflection, he must know can be proved to be false, there is no circumferiling the bounds of his villainy: from hence the reader may discover from what source, so great a diverfity in representing the nature of our dispute arose.

I find it very difagreeable, disputing with a perfon to ignorant of his professions as not to understand the common term ableejs; and whose ideas are to fluctuating, as to have given three opposite opinions, relative to the same diforder, in as many months. I therefore advice you, previous to entering into a physical contreverly again, to go to some school of physic, and learn the rudiments of your profession; by which you will be enabled to make a judicious application of fuch observations, which a course of practice may have afforded you.

> Your humble fervant, EPHRAIM HOWARD.

N. B. If you had any defire that the reader should attribute those excellent performances, to be the effect of your pund's fertile imagination; it would have been prudent in you to have left out the words, our---we---

WARSAW, January 19.

A Duel was fought near this place, last week, be-tween major Wilde and captain Muller, two Ruman officers, who, though great friends before, quarelled on the road as they were bringing dispatches from the Russan army in Moldavia. They, however, agreed to deliver their dispatches previous to their encounter; after which, they, with their feconds, proceeded to the choien fpot, when the major defired the captain to are first, which he did, and wounded his advertary. The major then fired his in the air, and said to the captain, "You have fired; it is I that gave the offence, for which I fincerely alk your pardon, ere you content with this request? if not, you have your choice; we have till each a pittol, and our fwords. The feconds, touched with the candour and epenners of major Wilde, defired it might end where it was, and they were immediately reconciled to each other.

ROME, Feb. 5. Mr. Hamilton has discovered in the ternory of Civita Lavinia, a fubrerraneous chamber, wailed, which has been opened, and cleven antique flat es found in it, which are pretty remarkable, and almost all entire.

WARSAW, F.b. 5. It is pretended that the diforders which have happened in the government of Cfenbourg, have been excited by tome acret enemies of Rulla, ad that Pugetich w, the chief of the mutineers, is affured of a remeat, if he thould ful of success.

HAGUE, Feb. 18. Letters from Venice advise, that the republic of that name has concluded an alliance with the court of Petersburgh, by which she engages to join the Russian sleet with nineteen men of war of the line, besides frigates, bomb vessels, &c. slattering herself that by this means she may recover the Morea, and other possessions in the Archipelago, which the Turks have taken from her. If this news proves true, it is probable the porte may fuffer fome great losses in the Levant.

" We have the pleasure to inform you, that the communication with Barbary, which has been a long time cut off, is now opened again, and we have received tome large supplies of fresh provisions, which have been much wanted. The corfairs, that have been fo very numerous in the Mediterran-an, have fuddenly withdrawn to their respective ports, in consequence of fome Neapolitan and Sicilian thip of war fitted out against them, who have treated several of them very

1eb. 4. Last Saturday a young woman with a child in her arms, and big with another, applied to alderman Wilkes, who fat at the Manfion honfe for the lord mayor, for a pais to the parifi to which the belonged, faying that the was married to a black, who was a flave to a merchant in Lothbury, but that having no wages he was not able to support her. The alderman granted a warrant to bring her bushand before the lord mayor; accordingly he was yesterday brought before his lordthip, when the poor feilow declared that he was born in Guadaloupe, of negro parents; that he had ferved his mafter in Fingland fourteen years, but was never allowed any wages; that when his wife lay in he applied to his mader for a little money for her support, but without fucceis; and in the course of his examination he expressed such tonder feelings for the diffress of his wife and child, that it drew compassion from all prefent. Upon which his lordship discharged him from his mafter, telling him that he was not a flave, according to the laws of this free country; and that if he thould be molested in getting bread for himself and family, to apply to him, and he would fee justice done. His lordthip then gave him a guinea, and the gentlemen prefent fubicribed another towards his support, till he could get employ; and recommended him to an attorney in the mayor's court, to bring an action against the matter for the recovery of his wages for the fourteen years he had ferved him in England.

On Wednelday night, about twelve o'clock, a hackney coachman, supposed to be in liquor, drove his coach down the flairs at Iron gate into the I hames, whereby himself and borses were drowned. The watchmen there could have saved the man, but he would not be taken from the box without they could fave his horses.

On Tuelday complaint was made to the house of a letter, published in two of the daily papers, figned a for laws: which was voted a fcandalous, falfe, and fedicious libel, tending to alienate the affections of his majesty's subjects. Ordered, that the attorney general do profecute the publifhers.

I fee you have got Stow's furvey of London; let me read you a line or Then opening the book he read the following passage " wealth, the finews of war, the (the city of London) abounds in more than any city. Men the can never want, or horses, there being more than 20,000 fit for military fervice in the town : magazines of artillery, finall arms and ammunition for an army of 100,000 men, and always in readincis; and there are 100,000 able bodied men fit to bear arms in the city; thefe being but a tenth part of the inhabitants." " Never think then, added the friend, that the friendthip of fuch a city as this is not worth preferving." His lorothip then thanked him, and faid he would lay a reconcilable train the next morning as foon as he was up. If this be true, we may hope to fee better times

The following is the PROTEST of the MINORITY LORDS in IRELAND, against the STAMP ACT lately

Die Jowis 17°. die Januarii, 1774.

Hodie 3d wice lesta eft billa, entitled, an all for granting to his majefly, his beirs and successors, several duties upon wellum, farchment, and paper.

The question, whether this bill shall pass. It was resolved in the affirmative.

ift, BECAUSE we confider this tax as peculiarly burthensome, in the present declining situation of this country, fince no material indulgence has been granted, nor no constitutional or commercial restraint has been removed in this oppressed country, to enable us to bear this additional incumbrance; and because it does not appear to us, that there was any peculiar demand for it at prefent, which we may reasonably infer from the act itself, as there is no clause to appropriate the produce of this tax to a particular purpose, adly, Because we have reason to believe, that an affurance had been given to the other house of parliament, from administration, that the commissioners of accounts should be employed as commissioners of stamps, which was intended as an inducement to their acquiefcence in this measure: whereas the words of the act clude, if not totally counteract this promise, fince the commissioners of stamps are obliged to account anmully before the commissioners of imprest accounts; and because the lord lieutenant is enabled to appoint officers without limitation in number, or expence, or any qualification whatfoever. And farther, there is no didd-ling clause similar to that by which the officers of sil duties created fince 1691, are inadmissable in the house of commons of England, which must evide increase the number of placemen, and the influe of the crown in parliament.

3dly, Because it seems to us unconstitutional to the power in his majesty's representative, the lo lieutenant of Ireland, of ascertaing annually, by proper and other and other clamation, the price of paper and other material which shall be issued from the stamp-office, since a conrupt viceroy may hereafter fet his own price upon them without controul, which would not be the cale if it were vested in the commissioners of the revenue, or other officers under the controll of parliament, in like manner as this power is vested in England in the lords

4thly, Because we conceive that this act, so far as it relates to the stamping of news-papers and of pamphen, evidently tends to invade, and to abridge the liberty of the press, that great and necessary outwork and barrier of our constitutional rights, which we ought ever to maintain against all invasion with the most causious attention, as upon its fecurity most ultimately de. pends the very existence of our excellent constitution, And because farther, the tax upon pamphiets was not a part of the first stamp act in England, the 5th of W. and M. chap. 21st. but commenced by the 10 of Ann, chap. 19. in the latter end of the queen's days, a period from whence we should be forry to derive a precedent.

5thly, Secause if the licentiousness of the press be an object of complaint, it should be restrained by a manly mode of legislation, strengthening the criminal justice of this country, and not by making the crown countenance it to a certain degree, by confidering it as the subject of revenue.

6thly, Because finally we must consider this as a tax upon the justice, the property, and the commerce of this country, as a fund for pensions, and a provision for that system of venality improved by a late viceroy, and the necessary sequel of a plan which we must ever consider with the utmost detestation.

T MAY 19, 1774.

LONDON, March 9.

HF earl of Dartmouth presented to the upper house on Monday a message from his majesty, wherein his majesty was most graciously pleased to recommend to their ferious consideration the late disturbances in America, particularly the unjustifiable outrages lately committed at Boston; to which most gracious message, an humble address was immediately moved for and ordered to be presented to his majesty by the lords with white staves.

March 10. The remains of opposition seem to have lost all principle. he colonies are in open revolt; but that gives them infinite satisfaction. They have long fixed their hungry eyes on the treasury to no purpose. In the present crisis, they think they have some chance of partaking the fweets of office, by opposing the good of their country, and the punishment of the Boston mutineers. I hey imagine they will perplex the minifter, and perhaps overfet him in their factious ftorm ; but they will only expose themselves to the disgrace and deteliation of every true patriot; for the question is reduced to this, whether the colonies shall give laws to England, or England to the colonies.

Yesterday lord Beauchamp, and Mr. Cornwail, kissed his majefty's hand at st. James's, on their being appointed lords of the treasury, in the room of the hon. Mr. Charles Fox and Mr. Dyson, who have resigned.

We hear the most vigorous measures are resolved to be taken with the turbulent and refractory colonies. Four regiments of foot are to be fent to Boston, and fix men of war are to block up the harbour.

it is whitpered that the Boltonians are to have their charter taken from them, and that they are to be made a king's government.

March 11. If the spirited measures at present talked of should take place respecting the Americans, the next cargo of a certain commodity may be called gun-powder tea, and they must take it with a little smack of British

If there is any authenticity in the speeches and motions we read of, the Americans have no reason to complain of want of representation in the fenate, as numbers in both houses are more zealous for the interests of America than of Great-Britain.

councils have been held every night for this week past among the ministry, and they have generally been affited in their deliberations by the crown lawyers, on American affairs, which feem to embarrass not a little.

March 12. There never was, perhaps, fince the revolution, fo important a crifis in the constitution of this country as the present state of merican affairs now before an august assembly; to speak neither in the language of sear or in the style of pomposity, no less than the fate of a great empire, trembles on the decifion; how much, then, does it become our regislators, in this general hour of intricacy, to lay down all their little cabals, personal animosities, and interested differences, and unite their wifest and coolest observations for the general good ! to be governed by any other influence at this period, though even for a leffer good, brands that man (which we hope, for the take of the cause, does not exist) with no less an inglorious epithet than that of being a traitor to his country.

The following is his majesty's message, which was prefented to the house of commons last Monday.

" His majesty, upon information of the unwarrant. able practices which have been lately concerted and carried on in North-America, and particularly of the violent and outrageous proceedings at the town and port of Boston, in the province of Massachusetts-ray, with a view to all the Size of the Size of Massachusetts-ray, obstructi ig the commerce of this kingdom, and upon grounds and pretences immediately subversive of the constitution thereof, has thought nt to lay the whole matter before his two houses of parliament, fully confiding as well in their zeal for the maintenance of his majesty's authority, as in their attachment to the common interest and welfare of all his dominions, that they will not only enable his majesty effectually to take fuch measures as may be most likely to put an immediate stop to the present disorders, but will also take into their most ferious consideration what further regulations and permanent provisions may be necessary to be established, for better securing the execution of the laws, and the just dependence of the colonies upon the crown and parliament of Great-

Yesterday the speaker took the chair at half past two o'clock; very little private business was done

At twenty-five minutes after three o'clock, the clerks began to read the letters to and from America, confifting of 109 in number, which took up three hours hearing. The house broke up at half past six o'clock, and adjourned until Monday next, when the American business will come on. No debates ensued.

The gallery doors were locked all day, and the keys delivered to the speaker; no persons, except the two secretaries from the trade and plantation office, were admitted in the gallery.

An express was on Thursday sent from the admiralty office to Portsmouth, with orders for fitting for sea immediately several frigates, which are intended to go with the men of war, already appointed for the American station.

HOUSE of COMMONS, Friday March 11.

The speaker took the chair at 3 o'clock; lord North came in about a quarter ofter. The common business being over, the American papers were begun to be read. It appeared from them that the town of Boston had such a share in the transactions relative to the teaships, that it advances into real and actual rebellion. I hat the people of that town and country had actually made and levied war on the legal authority of his majesty, derived not from custom, or prescription only, but from the absolute and explicit letter of various acts of parliament; that this rebellion had proceeded to such lengths, that it flowed from avowed principles of refiftance, superiority and independence: and that it was the opinion of governors and other writers of those letters and dispatches, that if affairs in that part of the world were left to their present situation, that all legal government would be subverted and the independency of the colonies be established.

A correspondent observes the wishes of some writers in the news-papers against our taking any concise meafures with the remericans, asks how the parliament can post bly decline a concise plan of operation, when the coionies have left them no alternative? the inhabitants of Poston have not waited for the resolution of the mother country. Refore the determination of the mother country was entered upon, they proceeded to hostili-ties; they struck the first blow, shut our ships out of our own harbours, maltreated our subjects, and destroyed our property. If we can fit tamely down under injuries like these; if we can put up with a stroke, nay a downright thrashing from our own subjects, and if we can take from their what the greatest power in Europe would tremble to offer us, there is an instant end of England: and out of respect to what the British name formerly has been, the feat of government should be immediately removed to Maffachusett's Bay, since the people of that province are the only people on earth who could trample on our once-boatted spirit with im-

March. 14. All forcible, as well as pacific measures will be nugatory and ineffectual with the notion rebels; unless their charter is vacated. 't is the spring and source of all their insolent and unjustifiable acts. The council being chosen by the people yearly, must vote according to their pleasure, so that, in fact, they are not countellors of the king but the tools of the faction. The people of the Maffachufetts province are also over represented; the number ought to be reduced to a fourth part of the present. Boston, instead of sending four members should fend but two at most, one would do better. Without this previous necessary step, every other attempt to bring them to reason will be inflammatory, whether the method be gentle or vigorous, it will only be praining and watering the tree of fedi-tion, initead of itriking at its root.

March 15. Yesterday lord North made the following motion in the house of commons, " that leave be given to bring in a bill for the immediate removal of the officers concerned in the collection and management of his majefly's duties and customs from the town of Boton in the province of Massachusett's Bay, in North-America, and to discontinue the landing and difcharging, lading and shipping of goods, wares and merchandize at the said town of Boston, or within the Lord North Supported the motion in a speech of near an hour. He was supported by Mr. R. Fuller, Mr. Cavendish, Capt. Phipps, Mr. C. Fox, Col. Barre, Governor Fownal, and Mr. Calvert.

The motion was arongly opposed by colonel Jen-ings Mr. Dempiter, Mr. Sawbridge, Mr. Bying, Mr. Dowdefwell, and lord Cavendish.

On Friday next the whole house will resolve itself into a committee for a further confideration of Ame-

From the Whitehall Evening-Post, of March is. Subflance of the American papers read before the boufe of commons on Friday last (with remarks.)

HESE papers confift of copies and extracts of letters from the commander of the forces and from the several governors in America; of threats and prophetic warnings to the gentlemen to whom the tea was configned; narratives of transactions; of copies of letters from the feveral configuees at Boston to a ringleader of the faction in that town; of votes of the town of Boston previous to the arrival of the tea; of a petition of the confignees to the council of Maffachuletts, praying " that they and their property might be taken under their protection," with the absolute denial of the council (observe, of his majesty's council) to afford the least support or affistance, or even a promise of it; of notes from the India house; of letters from the admiral commanding in Boston harbour, and from lieut. col. Leflie, of the 64th regiment, in barracks at Caffle William; of a proclamation of the governor against the factious meetings of the inhabitants, which they treated with ineffable contempt; of copies of treasonable papers printed in America; of a copy of the transactions of the Maffachusetts council, condemning the destruction of the tea, and advising legal prosecutions against the perpetrators, which they well knew no person would dare to carry on, and expressing their own abhorrence of the unjudifiable deed, although they would not take any previous step to prevent it, even when petitioned for that very purpose. So far relative to the Masiachusetts.

The papers written and printed from the other colonies are exact of the fame nature. They are the regular official information of the different governors transmitted to the American secretary of state, with copies of all the inflammatory fugitive papers, hand balls, alarms, relolves of town meetings, and minutes of council: in fhort, the whole budget of abuse that has been vented against parliament and the ministry from New-"ngland to the Carolinas, was read to themselves on 'aturday lait.

As there was no outrage committed but at Boston, it would be superfluous to narrate all the incendiary scribbling and printing in the different colonies; it may to fice just to observe, that all the printed bills read were fully larded with the phrases of "desperate plans of despotism," "ministerial designs to ruin their aberties," "slavery," "galling fetters," forging internal chains," "popery," "despotic rule," &c.

the viaffachusetts council appeared in a very Jesuhi-cal point of view: they would not give the least affiftance or protection to the configuees, or to the Cart-India company's property: they would not even take into confideration the landing and fecuring the teas. By their replies it would feem, that they rather rejoiced in the opposition formed by the faction; and it they did not openly range themselves on its side, at least by their neutrality, and the purport of their answer, it was sufficiently evident that they did not even wish to interpose as mediators. The confignees prayed "to refign themselves and the property, enrusted to their care, to the council, not only as their guardians and protestors, but also those of the people at large." But these worthy gentlemen thought proper to have nothing to do with them; and rather hinted that the tea scheme was calculated to disturb the peace of the town and province.

The letters from the different governors cont in a minute and regular detail of the state of their dislement provinces, but particularly of the capitals of each, from the first intelligence of the tea's being shipped at home, to its arrival in America and return back or destruction.

Above all the rest of the advices, governor Hutchinfon's letters are most precise, exact, and circumstantial. He endeavoured both to footh and intimidate the faction. It was he himself who advited the confignees to apply to council for their personal safety, and security of their property; for his two eldest fons were two of the confignces. He also, during the height of their turbulent, and unlawful and seditious assemblings, before the destruction of the tea, fent the sheriff to the town meeting at Boston, commanding them to break up and depart. When the sheriff, Mr. Greenleaf arrived in the hall, and intimated, "that he had a paper to read from the governor," the faction put it to vote, " whether he should be permitted to read it or not? after some debate, permission was granted, and the sheriff accordingly pronounced the governor's orders for them to disperse. The instant he had snished, the faction raluted him with an universal hifs, which continued, and accompanied him out of doors. The proclamation was afterwards published in the gazette, from whence it was copied into the other papers, and criticifed and commented upon with every mark of contempt and indignity. Before the arrival of the tea, the governor, who is very infinuating, appeared to have taken every meeture that reason could suggest, both for the fafety of the india property, and the fafety of the configuees. i he principle leader of the faction was applied to; he commanded the governor's company of cadets, but it was not to be expected that the leader of the faction would muster the cadets to oppose his own party and his own plots. The applications, of courfe, had no effect. Perhaps acquirence was not expected, though it might be deemed proper, in point of duty, to make the request, or rather to issue the order.

By governor Hutchinson's letters, the people of the town or the faction, obliged Mr. Rotch, the owner of . Capt. Hall's vetiel, to demand a clearance outwards, from the cultom house, in order that the tea might be carried back. Mr. Rotch relifted dung time, but his perion being threatened, nay his life, made him comply. 'I he custom house refused to grant him an illegal clearance. The governor was then applied to for a pals, without which the vellel would have been ftopped at C. William; but this was also refused to Mr. Rotch, because it was totally inconsistent with the duty of a governor to grant a pais to a veiled that had not been regularly cleared at the cuttom-house. This negotiation, or infurrection, or rebellion, came to a critis about the middle of December. The faction, fitting in town-meeting, heard the account of the re-fufals above-mentioned, from Mr wotch. It appears they expected fuch answers, and were prepared for the event; for immediately after Mr. rotch's account, fignals were given both from within and without the meeting. A number of men, difguited, boarded the vellels containing the tea, and, as it is faid, threw the April 9. Thursday night a cabinet council was held at lord North's, at which all the great officers of flate affified, as did his excellency general Gage, which fat late. After their rifing a mellenger was dispatched to Portfmouth.

The officers ordered upon the duty of America, hang back, and declare it a piece of duty quite repugnant to their feelings, as men and Englishmen.

We are informed from the best authority, that the following four regiments have actually received orders from the war office to hold themselves in readiness to embark for hofton upon the shortest notice, viz. the 4th, 5th, 38th, and 43d, and that all the officers, notwithstanding many of them had obtained the king's leave of absence, have received orders to join their respective corps immediately upon pain of being cashiered.

he report continues to gain credit, that the friends to the Bostonians have made some overtures which may probably prevent matters being carried to extremities; it is, however, generally agreed, that general Gage will be fent to America, to see all things settled upon a permanent and proper footing.

Lower Marlborough, April 18, 1774.

AP I AIN EDEN informs his friends in Maryland, that he expects to fail for England on or before the 15th of May, and requests the favour of those that may be disappointed in getting their tobacco in the Annapolis, not to take it amis, as he must take on board, what full comes down to the warehouses; but makes use of this opportunity to give them notice, for himself and company, that they will by that time have another ship in Paruxent, whose stay there will be very short, as many of their most particular friends tobacco cannot be got ready to go in the Annapolis, and they expect that there will be another ship load ready in that river by the 20th of June, so that their next ship will have immediate dispatch as safe can load.

Those gentlemen on the Eastern shore, who are now difappointed in getting their tobacco on board the Annapolis, and all others who will favour T. Eden and company with their confignments, are requested to take notice, that the Sophia, capt. Carmichael, in Chefter river, and the Choptank, capt. Coward, at Oxford, are now loading to their address. Both of those thips are expected to fail early, the first of them nearly at the same time with the Annapolis. Captain Eden is very forry that he is not able to wait on the gentlemen on the Eastern shore himself, to take their commands; but those, who wish their tobacco home to an early market, or have other bufinefs, are defired to give notice thereof, to James Dickinson, Esq; at Oxford; M. James Hutchins junior, at Kent Island; or cipt. Carmichael on board his ship at Chester; and their tobacco shall be fent for, and their letters forwarded immediately.

A ship for Patowmack, was to sail from London by the last of February, so that she may be now hourly expected.

Capt. Handrick, in a fhip called the Baltimore, is engaged to come out for T. Eden and company, and was to fail from London by the last of March, for Patapsco.

Those gentlemen, who want goods out in the fall, may be assured, that they will be bought on the best terms, and are requested to send their orders home by the Annapolis; as frequent miscarriages, and delays of letters, by many other channels, are pretty well known to be the case sometimes from this province.

Those gentlemen on this side of the bay, whom capt. Eden may not have an opportunity of seeing, are defired to leave their orders for England, with major Jo. Sim, or capt. Judson Coolidge; and those bills of lading, which he may not have an opportunity of delivering, will be left with those gentlemen, in which insurance will be inserted for all those who do not give particular orders to the contrary.

Annapolis, April 13, 1774.

RICHARD BURLAND, tailor and habit-maker from London, late foreman to Mr. Robert P.nkney, deceased, takes this method to acquaint the public, that he is now removed into the house were Samuel Harvey Howard lately lived, facing the coffeehouse; he takes this opportunity to assure those ladies and gentlemen who may please to favour him with their custom, that he will make it his constant endeavour, by punctuality, and a strict attention to business, to merit their lasting approbation.

FIFTY DOLLARS REWARD.

ESCAPED out of the jail at Baltimore Town, named Isac, calls himself Isac Wallace, about 32 or 33 years of age, 5 feet 9 or 10 inches high, a stim made fellow 1 had on when put into jail, a woollen cloth cap, turned up with furr, a light blue jacket, blue woollen trousers, a pair of black leather shoes, with plated buckles, he can write a good hand, understands arithmetick; it is supposed he was carried off by some vessel that sailed about that time from said town for London, as he has since been seen in that city. THE subscribers, patentees of land at the Falls of Onio, hereby inform the public, that they intend to lay out a town there in the most convenient place; the lots to be eighty feet front, and two hundred and forty deep, the number of lots that shall be laidoff at firk, will depend on the number of applications, the purchase money of each lot to be four Spanish dollars, and one dollar per annum quit rents for ever. The purchasers to build on each lot within the space of two years, from the first of next December, a log. house not less than fixteen feet square, with a stone or brick chimney, and as in that country it will be necesfary the first fettlers should build compactly, the improvements must naturally join each other; it is lur. ther proposed for the conveniency of the fettlers, that an out lot of ten acres, contiguous to the town, that be laid off for each that defire the same, and that at an eafy rent on a long leafe. Attendance will be given by the patentees at Pittfburgh, till the middle of June next, at which time one of them will fet off from thence. to execute the plan. The advantageous fituation of that place, formed by nature as a temporary magazine, or repository, to receive the produce of the very extensive and fertile country on the Ohio and its branches, as well as the necessary merchandizes fuitable for the inhabitants that shall emigrate into that country, (as boats of fifty tons burthen may be navigated from New Orleans, up to the town) is sufficient to recommend it ; but when it is confidered how liberal. nay profuse nature has been in stocking it so abundantly, that the flightest industry may supply the most numerous family with the greatest plenty, and amazing variety, of fish fowl, and fiesh; the fertility of the fail, and facility of cultivation, fit it for producing commodities of great value with little labour; the wholefomnels of the waters, and ferenity of the air, render it healthy; and that when property may be fo easily acquired, we may with certainty affirm, that it will in a short time be equalled by few inland places on the American continent.

JOHN CAMPBELL, JOHN CONNOLLY.

Baltimore-Town, March 12, 1774. O be fold, and entered upon in a month if required, a lot of ground, fituate in Frederick-ftreet, near Meyer's tan-yard, and between the two lower bridges on Jones's falls; there are 130 feet on the front, 180 feet deep, and 115 feet on the lower front. It is on leafe for 99 years, renewable for ever, and subject to a ground rent of only 40l. Rerling per annum. About 16 years of the leafe are expired; on the front of the lot on Frederick-freet, is a large brick dwelling house, wherein the subscriber now lives, 50 feet front, 23 feet deep, two ftory high, having twa parlours, a passage, and stair-case below; four good chambers, three whereof have fire places, and above, wo good garrets well finished. There are also adjoining to the faid dwelling, a good brick kitchen and landry, with proper chambers for fervants; alfo a brick warehouse, 32 feet by 25, two story and cellar, nearly one half of the front of the lot is yet unimproved, there being only an old log building hatt ferved as a jail, and which may be removed at pleafure. There is an exceeding good garden well inclosed: this lot would fuit a distiller, brewer, or fugar-baker; as there is room sufficient for building, and a lane may be opened through the lot from one street to another; what buildings are on this lot are faithfully executed, the brick walls fome are 18 inches thick, and none less than 14 inches, even to the ridge pole; the purchaler need lay down but little cash, if any, good security with interest will suffice, and one fourth of the money will be only at four per cent per annum interest : as I am determined at all events, to leave this province, and defirous of fettling all my affairs, any person inclinable to purchase, will find me very reasonable in my demand for this lot. Cicero pro Archia.

HEN we reflect upon the general spirit of indolence and diffipation which is natural to youth, and perhaps too much favoured by the prevailing maxims and customs of our times, it will appear a topic of ferious and important speculation, to confider by what gradations these foibles of our nature have become to univerfally prevalent; and what are the most practicable and effectual means to check their growth, and to prevent their ruinous confequences. This, however, would be a field too extenare for the limits of a short eslay. A few observations, however, on this fubject, may possibly be made with advantage: and it may be remarked, that one capital fource of the misfortunes which we deplore is, the encouragement which they have found from the mistaken views and unhappy endeavours of their most fanguine and declared antagonists. The paths which lead to frience and wisdom appearing, to those by whom they had been already traversed, tedious, rugged, and thorny, those sages were induced, even by their zeal for the interests of learning, and for the dignity, hap-piness, and refinement of human life, to render the temple of Minerva as accessible as they could. Hence the various projects to render our acquifition of the Arif elements of literature as pleasing as possible, and to bribe its into the culture of our faculties by amusement: Hence, the auxiliary force of to many extrensic motives were called to the affiftance of the teacher. His pupils were taught to know their letters by a game, and thus their ambition and avarice were interested in the discovery. But the natural effect of this procedure was, to render those attainments, which he chiefly laboured to inculcate, lefs valuable in the eyes of his disciples; who, by fuch a conduct, were taught to regard them only as secondary views or means for acquiring more valuable and important ends, Hence too, the universal propensity for compendizing the elements of science, that they might be the sooner impressed on, and the more easily retained in the memory. But this effort was likewife attended with a focces far inferior to the flattering expectations of its votaries; for they found that the affertion of Horace, Brevis effe laboro, was truth too stubborn to be either eluded by their endeavours or softened by their arts,

It is acknowledged, that the long and indefatigable application, which is necessary to make us susceptible of true learning; the austerity, ignorance, and ill-nature of those to whom the province of inculcating these dements is often intruited, are more than fufficient to intimidate our approaches, and to retard our progress. But, because difficulties are formidable in their own mure, and may become insuperable by the bad management of our conductors, it will not furely follow that the difficulties are entirely useless. A superficial acquilinance with human nature will demonstratively convince us, that our acquisitions are frequently valued in proportion as they are arduous, and in proportion to the number of those obstacles which must either be removed or furmounted before we can possess them. Is not the hero's victory inhanced by the danger and difficulty of his atchievements? Is not the lover's conquest endeared by the various oppositions which it en-countered, either from the coyness of his mistress, or other accidental circumstances? In the commercial world, are not those properties which have been ob-tained with tolk and fatigue, esteemed more precious than such as access from inheritance, or other contingencies of the fame kind?

It is neither at this time agreeable to my plan, nor confident with my fituation, to form any general eftimate of the ancients, much less to compare their works with those of modern writers. Both perhaps have their excellencies and defects: and both have a just claim to our veneration and attention. It is, at present, my only intention to observe, that, though every improvement formerly attained by the acquisition of deal languages were now distributed through those which are in the year the habits of thought and attention contraded in acquiring these vehicles of science are far from being useless. On the contrary, they are perhaps the only proper balance, for that dissipation, forgetfulnels, and levity, which, if not anticipated and pre-vented, will, in all probability, attend us through the whole course of our lives, and influence every part of our conduct. To give the human character, therefore, such a degree of stability and importance as are requisite for the present exigencies of our being, it seems necessary that our powers should be excited by labour necessary that our powers should be excited by labour and disticulty, and invigorated by strong and repeated exertion. There is a certain period of our lives when the operations of the mind deeply partake of mechanism; when she acquires and retains impressions, not from any intrinsic excellence in their objects, but merely because the objects themselves are present. To the original impressions of sense succeed the exertions (if indeed they are exertions) of local memory. When this useful faculty has collected a sufficient number of materials, the intellect furveys its store, disposes, compares, and increases them by new ideas and conclusions, which result from accurate and faithful views of their relations or differences. But, if impressions are not strongly and repeatedly felt, they wil leave no traces in the memory; they will have no existence but in their immediate perception; they will be too fleeting and momentary for the deliberate comparisons and the flow deductions of understanding. In mathematics, how common is it to observe a pupil, comprehending, at one glance of thought, the demonstration, and forgetting it as foon as his eyes are diverted from the media by which it was conveyed; whilft another, who laboured in every advance, indelibly fixes it in his mind. What I mean to illustrate by these different examples is this, that, whilst we merely study the vehicles by which the ancients have perpetuated their conceptions and discoveries, we in a great measure imbibe and retain the conceptions and discoveries themselves. The ideas and improvements, however, which are conveyed to us through the channel of living languages, are not only evanetcent and transitory in their duration, but, by the facility with which they arrive at the mind, they are likewise extremely confined and fluctuating. Why has ancient learning been to diffute and permanent, but because the languages in which it was contained were generally understood, and no longer subject to those innovations which must infallibly affect every living language? words are not attached to their ideas by nature, but by confirmed habit and permanent affociation. From this arbitrary connection, and because the words of any language are far short in number, and inadequate to comprehend the things which it ought to express, it must inevitably happen, that analogous ideas are fignified by the same word. And as words and phrales are thus often transferred from one fense to another, so the analogy frequently becomes very distant; because the gradations through which they have passed from their original meaning to that in which we find them used, are often irrecoverably lost. Besides, as these analogies are not formed by men of learning with accuracy and judgement, but, according to vu gar conception, or the fortuitous affemblages of things, they must of themselves be frequently obscure, and fometimes impossible to be detected. These are not the only unfavourable changes to which living languages are obnous. Vulgar cant and learned affective to the foot side. tation confpire to hurt them: The fool and pedant have them equally in their power. The interpolitions of taste and judgement are feeble, slow, and gradual. Besides, when at last they have attained their ends in forming a language, with all the clegance, harmony, copioulirefs, and emphasis, of which it is capable, they no longer superintend it with the same affiduity. become fecure and indolent. The language however is not fixed, but in continual revolution, by the abolition of old, or the adoption of new words, phrases, and idioms. Hence, in language, as in life, there is an infancy, a maturity, a dotage, or a decline.

It has of late years become fashionable in the Scottish universities, to teach the sciences in the English language. The Latin tengue bas, of consequence, fallen into disrepute. This abuse gave rise to the present desence of ancient harring.

CONSTANTINOPLE, February 13.

THE new fultan has already given proofs of his generofity and justice; for instead of following the example of some of his predecessors, in mutilating and even stranggling his nearest relations, his highness has heaped favours on the young sultan selim, son of the deceased emperor. He kept this young prince with him eight days, promised to be a father to him, ordered the apartments allotted for him to be made more spacious and agreeable, and directed an apartment for the young princes mother to be contiguous to her son's.

They write from the army, that the grand vifir has fummoned all the troops that are to re-inforce his army, in order to review them next month, and open the campaign as early as possible. It is afferted that the grand signior found 60 millions of piastres among the treasures of his predecessor.

UPPER RHINE, Feb. 18. Some advices are arrived here which mention, that the rebellion in Russia becomes daily more formidable, for that the rebels have taken Casan, and are now arrived at Moscow. On the other hand, they seem to have cut off the communication in many parts of that vast empire, if it is true that a certain Ruflan minister declared to one of his friends that he had sent 26 estalettes without receiving any answer.

Kiow, in Russia minor, the rebel Pugatschew continues his exactions in the neighbourhood of Orenbourg. He massacres all the Russian subjects, but spares the foreigners and peafants, in hopes of gaining them over to his party. He has already ravaged the lines of akaran, and depopulated the fortreffes which ferved as barriers to that country; he has plundered the town of Offa, and made incursions towards Moscow, and the opposite side towards. Astracan: all the officers who fall into his hands must enter into his service or lose their lives, most of whom prefer their honour to their life. He intends to enter into Siberia, and it is easy to see what he aims at, though we cannot get a fight of his manifeltos, because the government take all the pains imaginable to suppress them, and they are besides written in the language of the Nomades, a people whom he endeavours to gain over to his interest by flattering promises. The report of general Bibikow's having joined that rebel is without foundation.

Turin, Feb. 3. We have just received advice, that on Saturday the 22d of last month, a second insurrection happened at Palermo, in which the archbishop and Mr. Emanuel Batta were murdered, and eight Xebecka were sitting out at Messina, in order to bring the rebels back to their duty. They write from 1 unis, that on the 13th of the same months violent earthquak. happened there, which did a great deal of damage, and that several ships in that harbour were loss by the violent agitation of the sea at that time.

Letters from Stockholm advice, that the king of Sweden intends to make a tour, in the approaching fummer, to Petersburgh, in order to pay a visit to the emperor. But most persons think, if it takes place, something more is intended than a mere visit.

They write from Warfaw, that it is pretended that the disorders which have happened in the government of Orenbourg, have been excited by some secret enemies of Russia, and that Pugatschew, the chief of the mutineers, is certain of a retreat, should be fail of success.

A petition in behalf of the island and colony of Barbados, has been presented to the house of commons, praying that a free port may be opened in that island, with the same privileges as are granted to those chablished in Jamaica.

Thursday a young man of genteel address was apprehended at a public house in the city, on a charge of marrying nine wives in less than four years, who are all now living, and with each of whom he had a fortune.

On Friday morning, about one o'clock, lord Stanley and his brother coming in a post chaise and four from Chelsea to town, were stopped by four sootpads, two of whom seized the hories, and put pistols to the breasts of the possilions; the other two went on each side the carriage, and presenting their pistols, were resisted by the hon. Mr. Stanley, whom one of the sellows fired at; on which lord Stanley seized the man on his side by the arm, and wounded him on the back of the head with a scymetar. The two Russians at the heads of the horses then went to the assistance of their comrades, when the possilions driving suriously on, the nobleman and his brother escaped unhurt, though one of the villains fired a second pistol.

March 9. Mr. Edmund Eurke, in the house of commons on Monday, vehemently declaimed against the adoption of hostile measures with respect to the colonies. He affirmed, that the evils substituting in America, were of a civil nature, and that, to propose military remedies for the correction of civil abuse, was to act in direct contradiction to every principle of sound policy; besides, the execution of a plan of the kind had been, and would be, in every popular government, found impracticable. The magnifrate must act in concert with the military, or every effort of the latter, would prove stitle and abortive. Every law process relative to the life, liberty or property of an English subject, bespoke a popular origin, from the presentment of the grand jury to the sinal adjudication of a petit jury. he principles of government, therefore, should have respect to the democracy of the constitution; and, as that allowed of no appeal to the sword but in conjunction with the civil power, where the magnifracy resuled to co-operate, a millitary force must turn to little account. Burke faid, hold good in every respect: the introduction of an army would not change the opinions of the coionists; the men who thought themselves ill-treated now, wouldnot be of different sentiments when the bayenets were pointed to their breasts; and unless, by an alteration of measures, you effected a change in the opinions of men, you might destroy numbers, without being able to establish any permanent sovereignty over the multitudes who furvived the fanguinary policy.

Mr. Burke concluded by advising a change of American governors, the folly of the present having brought on the mischiefs of which we now complained; and, when the colonists seemed averse to contending the authority of the mother country, one of the governors (Hutchinfon,) at once to gratify his vanity and expose his ignorance, absolutely challenged the assembly to a discute about the right of taxation, and the first principles of legislation like Duns scotus, and the schoolmen of old, who stuck up papers challenging men who held espoused opposite tenets to a public disputation! was not this to fink the dignity of a representative of majesty in the logical quibbles of a word-catcher? nor was it otherwise than natural that men of this stamp men be contemned by the wife, and laughed at even by the volgar.

We are assured the dean of Gloucester's scheme, to separate Great-Britain entirely from the North-American colonies, and declare the inhabitants a free and independent people, meets with great countenance amongst the principal leaders in administration.

ESOLVED, that it is the unanimous opinion of this meeting, that the town of Boston is now suffering in the common cause of America, and that it is incumbent on every colony in America, to unite in effectual means to obtain a repeal of the late act of parliament for blocking up the harbour of Boston.

I hat it is the opinion of this meeting, that if the colonies come into a joint resolution to stop all importations from, and exportations to, Great-Britain, till the faid act be repealed, the fame will preferve North America and her liberties.

KESOLVED, therefore, that the inhabitants of this city will join in an affociation with the feveral counties of this province, and the principal colonies of America, to put an immediate stop to all exports to Great-Britain, and that after a fliort day hereafter to be agreed on, that there be no imports from Great-Britain till the faid act be repealed, and that such association be on oath.

That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the gentlemen of the law of this province bring no fuit for the recovery of any debt due from any inhabitant of this province to any inhabitant of Great-Britain, until the faid act be repealed.

That the inhabitants of this city will, and it is the opinion of this meeting, that this province ought immediately to break off all trade and dealings with that colony or province which shall refuse or decline to come into fimilar resolutions with a majority of the colonies.

That Messieurs John Hall, Charles Carroll, Thomas Johnson, jun. William Paca, Matthias Hammond, and Samuel Chase, be a committee for this city, to join with those who shall be appointed for Baltimore-Town, and other parts of this province, to constitute on general committee, and that the gentlemen appointed for this city immediately correspond with Baltimore-Town, and other parts of this province, to effect fuch affociation as will best secure American liberty.

A letter from a gentleman in London to a friend in this

"Dear SIR, London, March 31, 1774.
"This covers a bill brought in the house of commons, by lord North, against the town of Boston, for destroying the tea sent out on account of the East-India company; by its complexion you may judge what will be the fate of America. I am forry to fee what little opposition it met with in the house of commons, not a division on the pastage of the bill! in the house of lords it met more opposition, a number of able speakers opposed it, but the court party prevailed. You may be furprifed that there was not a petition prefented to the house sooner than there was; the Americans residing here waited for the body of merchants to take the lead, but they acted on this important occasion as in every other matter of this nature heretofore.

"I suppose there will be a general congress from the colonies; on their deliberations the fall or rise of your country will depend: you will undoubtedly form fome re-blutions, and strictly adhere to them, or give up the dispute and submit at once to English tyranny: a determination to stop the exports of your country and not import any British manufactures will in two years restore you to liberty and draw poverty and ruin on the mother country.

"I have enclosed you the petition to the king with the names of those who signed it.

" Lord North made a motion in the house of commons for leave to bring in a bill to regulate the government of the Mallachulets-bay, the substance of which I understand is to invest such powers in the governor as to enable him, to hear, determine, and turn out at pleasure, in fact to be as arbitrary as he pleases.

"If Boston acquiesces, the next step will probably be to punish Philadelphia, for sending the tea back, and thus by crushing each respectively, enforce a submission by the whole, to any tax Britain may please to impose.

" May heaven protect you and direct your resolutions to the happiness of your country, may you be free from the chains of flavery, intended by a w.cked and arbitra-

Extrast of a letter from New-York, May 18, 1774. " Last night an express arrived from Boston, who brings an account of general Gage's arrival, and that there had been a town meeting on Friday, the substance or vote is come forward and will doubtless reach you to-morrow; they are extremely alarmed at their fituation, which indeed must be so to all of us Americans-They think a non-importation and non-exportation of all the colonies, the most falutary measure to establish a fair understanding with our mother country; what will be adopted must be left to time.—The merchants and other inhabitants on monday last named a committee of fifty persons; to-morrow at noon a meeting is appoint. ed at the coffee-house, to approve or disapprove, when their business will be affigued them, to act, as is supported to the colonies of the co poled, in concert with our fifter colonies—in doing this it will be highly necessary that the sentiments of each should be well understood before any determination takes place, for a partial resolution will not avail in this general time of calamity."
