THE SAILOR'S FAREWELL.

BY C. H. POSEY.

We have parted from each other
In coolness and despair.
'Twas you who said the end must come.
Oh! was it just and fair?

One little word has come between
And worked its mischief well.
Who would suppose a thing so small
Would make us say farewell?

And yet a little word may turn
The current of a life,
And make its rippling billows break
In wild and mad'ning strife.

The wrecks of life are scattered thick
Along the shores of time;
Between us shall the storm-clouds drift
And hide the bright sunshine.

I could wish the howling of each storm,
Across life's dreary track
Would cause thy cheek and brow to pale,
You then might take my back.

Upon the wide and misty deep
When the waves are madly driven,
Fy the dark and whirling clouds that fly
Athwart the vaulted heavens,

'Tis then that I may watch will keep
Upon each heaving billow,
And the grand and stately mast that bends
As the green and waving willow.

Dear lady, I would thank thee then,
Although we coolly parted,
To offer up a silent prayer
For him who's broken hearted.

Remember, that our gallant barque
May founder in the sea,
Each plank and timber torn apart,
A hopeless wreck she'll be.

Now lady, will thou think of this
And grant me this one favor—
A kiss, perhaps the very last,
To cheer the wandering sailor.

Then do not doom a soul that's bright
To everlasting sadness;
Kind lady, shall we part in peace
To meet again in gladness?

A WOMAN AT THE BOTTOM OF IT.

"To tell the truth," said John Haviland, as he threw aside the evening paper, and faced the little group in the parlor, "I am fast growing out of patience with this text, 'A Woman at the Bottom of It.' It would be strange in this world, make us, as far as we are aware, of nothing but the two sexes, if a woman would not occasionally be found at the bottom of anything good! It is the injustice of the thing that makes me angry. Now there are a hundred of us poor fellows who owe all we are, all we have, and all we can hope to become in this world or the next, to the unselfish love of women."

The gentleman's face was flushed, and he spoke very warmly and feelingly, so much so that his wife, rocking her baby to sleep in the further corner of the room inquired:

"But why should you care, John? It has always been so; and always will be so. We don't think much about it now, because we have been taught to expect it."

"But you should care! and you should fight for each other more than you do. There is one chapter kept locked in my heart, but to-night I feel as if it were my duty to open it for your inspection; and I do it for the love of one woman who made me what I am, worthy to be the husband of a good woman."

"Why John!" said Mrs. Haviland, softly approaching—the babe still held tight to her bosom—"you absolutely frighten me."

"Let's have the story," said the rest of the group, certain that something good might be anticipated, and John commenced, at first a little timidly, but gaining confidence he proceeded:

"When I first came to New York, at the age of twelve years, to seek my fortune, I can call myself without danger of being accused of an unusual degree of self appreciation. I was quick to learn anything, the bad as well as the good. My employer used profane language. I picked up the oaths with a naturalness that surprised even myself. The boys in the office all chewed tobacco. This was a little harder job I ever attempted, but after two weeks of nausea and indigestible stomach-wrenching, I came off victorious, and could get away with my paper a day with the best of 'em."

"True, every word of it," continued the speaker.
"One afternoon I was sent with a note from my employer to a house in the upper part of the city. I hadn't anything to read, but I had plenty of tobacco, and with that I proposed to entertain myself during the two or three hours I must spend in the passage. For some distance I did not notice who were beside me, but by and by a lady said very softly and pleasantly: 'Would you please, little boy, be more careful! I am going to a party this afternoon, and I should hate to have my dress spoiled.'

GOV. PALMER'S VETO OF THE LORD'S PRAYER.

When Palmer was Governor of Illinois he made extensive use of the veto power, and having vetoed one of the projects of the Quincey Whig, that paper "went for" him in the following sarcastic strain:

Governor P. finds "The Lord's Prayer" in a file of bills awaiting his approval, and cogitating profoundly upon abstract constitutional points, writes out the following message: To the Hon. Wm. Smith, Speaker of the House of Representatives:

I am unable to approve the bill for an "Act to obtain daily supplies and to avoid the paths of temptation," which has originated, as I am informed, in the House over which you preside. My objections to this bill are founded upon constitutional grounds and are as follows:

1st. The presentation of the different subjects matter in the title of the bill is a direct violation of constitutional enactment, and on examination of the bill itself it will be found that solicitation is made not only for a supply of daily bread, and for an avoidance of the paths of temptation, but for the liquidation of debts without due consideration—a gross and palpable infringement upon vested rights and lawful obligations, which are the very basis of free government.

There can be no authority for "the forgiveness of debts in such manner as the debtor may relinquish his own claims upon others," and this feature of the bill affords ground of suspicion that some mischievous and dangerous intention is in view.

2d. The third line of the first section provides that a certain "will" or authority be extended over the State of Illinois as a portion of that planet upon which we reside in the same manner and to the same extent as the said authority exists in another and an unknown sphere.

This provision is not only special legislation in its worst form, but actually fixes upon us the domination of uncertain and probably unconstitutional laws, and is a further proof, to my mind, that the objects contemplated in the bill are simply the furtherance of private and selfish interests.

I have had occasion heretofore to maintain the rights and dignities of the State of Illinois, when threatened by Federal usurpation, and I take this occasion to affirm the position set forth in my message to the general Assembly. In the case now under consideration the proposition to subject the State of Illinois to a centralized power possessing a presumed despotic sway, and which would completely obliterate that inherent sovereignty claimed to be inalienable under our form of government, is a measure fraught with the utmost danger to our liberties.

There are further objections which might be consistently urged against the measures herewith returned. The phraseology is not familiar or in proper form, while the legal effect of some portions of the bill not commented upon above would, in my opinion, be subversive of private as well as public interests.

I may say, in conclusion, that if the bill had been so amended as to apply only to cities of 100,000 inhabitants and over, and an emergency clause attached, I attached, I would have had no hesitation in approving it.

A PADUCAH MULE-DRIVER.
A Paducah mule, driver had an amusing adventure on the train on his way home from Baltimore a few days since. Purching himself on the arm of a seat he added to the mirth of the passengers by relating his adventures in Baltimore:

"Well, boys, I'm just from town; sold my mules, and am going back to Paducah. Sent a round last night I got lost; hired a hack, and was ticked to the big tavern with marble-alab floor; went out again and dropped in to see the snake show, shovelled truck me to a glass kivered case full of watches and jewelry, and 'snaked me out of a smart pie trying to win a watch for Bet; dropped in another place; fell for three yards, and bet me a V, I couldn't pick up the one with a picture on it; picked up the wrong one every time and lost my pile; but I'll get even when I get home. You see Bill Thomas is court my sister; I'll play the picture game on him, win his horse, bridle, and saddle, and make him walk home."

"Paid four dollars at the tavern for lodgings; three dollars extra for light; tried to blow it out, and then burnt my fingers trying to snuff it."

"I give that fellow a dollar for the three cards; got 'em here. Come, now, boys, who'll bet a V on the picture?" "I'll bet three dollars I can pick it up," said a city youth.

"Oh, you're too smart; you'll want your money to buy your breakfast. I'll bet you fifty dollars agin your watch."

"Done," said city youth, and "Paduky" had that watch in the twinkling of an eye. Just then the whistle blew, the cars stopped and "Paduky" stepped from the train to the platform and was lost in the darkness. It then occurred to the "city boy" that he had once heard of "three card monte" but did not think a Paducah mule-driver could play it so skillfully.

A fair hit, my masters.
The funny man of the house this session is said to be Mr. Nesmith, of Oregon who tells on himself some very amusing stories. He served one term in the Senate several years ago, and a few days after he was sworn in he was passing one of the cloak rooms, and inside were Fessenden, Morrill and several others, whose names we can't call. They hailed him, invited him in, and after conversing for a few moments they asked him very abruptly:

"Mr. Nesmith, if you have come from a very wild country, where you say the greater portion of your life has been passed. Will you tell us what first struck you on coming to the Senate?"

"Well, gentlemen, when I took my seat in this august body, said to be composed of the brains of our great country. I was overwhelmed with the strangeness of the one idea—how I came to be here."

"Oh! Ah! Ugh! So! And then, Mr. Nesmith, what then—what was your next cause for wonder?"

"The next thing gentleman," answered Nesmith, slowly gathering up his great length, "that came to me and puzzled me more than the first thought, was how in the duce all you other fellows got here!"

There was a shout, and from that day these solemn old fellows who had thought to overawe by their pomposity the crude young Senator, were his sworn friends, and never neglected an occasion to tell this story.

Dialogue in a Cemetery.—Wife. "Ah, husband, do you see this beautiful carving—how delicate cut is the pure white stone!"

Husband. "Yes, very pretty."
Wife. "But, William you have no taste for art; you don't enjoy these things as I do. Just notice this slender column of immaculate marble, with the touching question so beautifully carved, 'do they miss me at home.'"

Husband. "Yes, I see; and here is her name on the footstone, if that was her name. And there came a silence."

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

The following are some of the decisions of the Post office Department relating to newspapers.

Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscription.

If subscribers order the discontinuance of their periodicals from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have notified their bills, and ordered them discontinued.

If subscribers move to other places without informing the publishers, and the papers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

Any person who receives a newspaper, and makes use of it, whether he has ordered it or not, is held in law to be a subscriber.

The Courts have decided that "refusing to take periodicals from the office, or removing and leaving them uncollected, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud."

"Why standest thou all the day long idle?"

One of the chief reasons of the complaint of hard times, is owing to the large number of persons who may be seen standing about the street corners, stores and railroad depots, in idleness. Many persons, it seems, attribute all their misfortunes to the mismanagement of others, without once turning their attention to self. They will croak around and complain that this man or that firm have no enterprise, and all that is wanting is a few first-class managers to set things to rights; never once thinking that if they would just take off their own coats, roll up their sleeves and pitch into the first job offered they would soon put things a moving, and would not take time to talk about the hard times, they would soon have plenty of work and a sufficiency of means if economy was used, and instead of being a worthless consumer each one would be a producer, and as the increase of products followed, his family wants could be more easily and cheaply supplied, and his example would be followed, and the result would be equal to the work of a temperance society. But he says, "I can't get my price for work, or I would go at it." That is a lazy man's excuse forever, and a good one for an idler.

We believe that of those promising good fast strikes are those who we have never employed. They are themselves, and as many as company, they are first and foremost to disturb the peaceful walks of industry. They talk over the ill results of low wages and excessive time, while they are unwilling to make any time at all, or work for any wages, provided they can by any means chisel their dupes out of a support for themselves.

We add again that one of the chief causes of the pressure of the times is the vast amount of idleness which leads to intemperance, and other vices to which the human heart is prone. "Why stand ye then all day idle?" It is not because no one hath hired you, but because you do not seek to be employed. Arise! shake off this indolent stupor, and whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might, and our word for it, good times will come to you at least, and hard times will be a stranger. Where there is a true will there is a sure way.

We wonder if the once lively journals published at Easton, Md., have suspended? We have not heard from them for some time. Has somebody moved that so much be considered of the further reading of the Journal? or has the Star refused to shine? Well, Jupiter has only gone on a visit to Venus, we suppose, and will return in due time. But why don't Julius seize her? (Cesar) Come, Julius, speak for yourself.

WHITE HOUSE WEDDINGS.—There have been three of these since 1820 in the Green Room. Miss Marie Monroe, daughter of President Monroe, to Samuel T. Gouverneur of New York. The second was Miss Lizzie Tyler, daughter of President Tyler, to W. Waller of Virginia, in 1848, in the East Room. By singular coincidence, the eldest son of this couple married the youngest sister of Mr. Jefferson Davis, at the Executive Mansion in Richmond during the rebellion.

Our reporter who is a single man says it is absolutely true that the summer fashion of the ladies is the prettiest that has been for years, and he is in love with the first lady west.

If the truth must be told, we suppose that Henry Wilson is against Ulvers as a candidate for a third term. And we sympathize with Henry.

LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.

LETTER FROM DEAR'S ISLAND.

Holiday Monday, May 27th 1874, was a high day in Salisbury. The great enemy of all good was leading his victims on to riot and bloodshed. Such a monster should not be suffered to remain in any community, for there is nothing but disgrace to mark his pathway. This foul monster comes in the midst of a community by the consent of a few to rob the whole, and builds up the little bells and big bells, and rolls its ball to the annoyance of many and disgrace of all. I hope Salisbury may yet be redeemed from such a curse as being the instigator of such unbecomings mobs, and disorder as disgraced what ought to be the fair fame of Salisbury. I think the citizens would do well to employ some agency in self defense in order to get rid of this wolf in sheep's clothing. The surest weapon to cut his throat from ear to ear and bury him beyond the danger of a resurrection, is Local Option. The people should take this weapon and slay the demon of destruction, so that he will never again have a right to raise his head.

Yours truly, A.

FRUITLAND, May 30, '74.

Messrs. Editors:—Will you accept a word from one, though a forerunner, yet has a heart in the right direction. Well, sir, I glance over your columns, in which I find much interest manifested on various subjects by many advertisements and some local correspondence; in fact, see correspondents in the Bachelor and Shoreman all agreeing nearly upon the same basis of the day. I am happy to learn, that through the energy and zeal of the young ladies the M. E. Church has been presented with a new Bible and Hymn book.

They say one can get on the cars here and arrive in New York on the same day, and get breakfast next morning in Boston. Dear me! how times have changed—what is this world coming to? people are getting mighty wise. Well, well! I am bound to move in town to get my children schooled. Mr. Editor, please let me know when the schools start again—I will write soon and let you know when whiteberries are ripe.

Yours truly, SOPHIA.

MYSTICUS DEATH.—On Saturday afternoon last, Mr. Walker Milfin, a farmer near Wyoming, left home with his horse and drove to go to Henry Coker's to procure some peach brandy. He left Mr. G. about night to return to his home, but was not destined to reach it alive. Some time in the night his horse, with harness on, was found in the yard at a farm house on the road. The horse was recognized as Milfin's, and search being made, his lifeless body was soon found near by in the middle of the road, lying in the rear of the wagon wrapped in his buffalo robe. Mr. Milfin was subject to heart disease, and the position in that feeling the premonition of an attack, he took his horse loose from the wagon and layed down, hoping thereby to ameliorate the attack, which, however, proved fatal. The bottle containing the brandy was full, showing that the accident could not have resulted from drink.—Wilmington and Delaware Times.

BASE BALL AND MURDER.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 29.—In a quarrel over a game of base ball in Clarke county, Pink Price struck Lu Thrasher on the head with a bat, killing him instantly. Price fled.—Both were under twenty years of age.

SACRAMENTO, California, contemporary is the reliable authority for the statement that California is losing its more than large population by emigration to the east of the Rocky Mountains at the rate of two millions per month. Rather an alarming decrease, and one that would be regarded as a gross exaggeration if put forth in the columns of any other than a California journal. The Golden State does not seem to be alarmed either at the departure of her citizens, perhaps depending on arrivals from Asia to make good the losses, though Oriental emigrants are not by any means popular on the Pacific slope. All of the Eastern Commonwealths will be glad to welcome right cordially the emigrants from the Golden State, though it is not at all likely that California will long submit to such a drain upon her people as is now said to be in active progress.

THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.—We should think from our advice from the Sandwich Islands that politics there are in a volcanic condition. There is a known Native party, anxious to remove all foreigners from office. The new King is about to make a tour of his little dominions, and the question of annexation to America has assumed a formidable shape. On the annexation subject our South Sea friends may feel easy. We have as much territory now as we want, at least until we have admitted the antelopes and prairie dogs of the Rocky Mountains, and do not care any Naboth's vineyard in the Pacific.

A NEW QUESTION has arisen in Congress. Mr. Allright learns that when any Chinese inhabitants of California wish to return home, they must obtain permits from certain Chinese companies. He proposed an inquiry into the matter in the House yesterday, but some members who came are not given objection. If Mr. Allright's story is true it is an outrage which should at once be remedied by Congress.

The Mississippi will require three times the amount of money to properly protect it by levees than the States can afford to pay. So says Jeff Thompson, Chief Engineer. Under the necessities of the case the United States will be called upon to aid the people. It has long been a mooted point, whether the levees were properly a National work or State affair.

Mr. S. Savage of this place is the representative of the eminent produce firm of Waddy & Co. 93 Park Place New York. Mr. Waddy, a native of Eastville, and Mr. Saunders of Cherrytown, Northampton Co. Va., are gentlemen well known, and highly esteemed, are prompt and attentive to business, and have been engaged in the Produce business in New York for the last six years. They received large shipments from our neighboring Town of Berlin, and have acquired the confidence of the largest shippers of Produce in Delaware and Eastern shore of Maryland and Virginia.

The following is an Extract of a letter from Dr. F. Bagley, President Farmer's Bank of Dover, to the "Turf, Field & Farm."

"I will only give you the figures for my last crop (1873). It was all shipped to New York to Waddy & Co., and I cannot refrain from here saying that for promptness in payment, and gentlemanly conduct they have never been excelled by any one to whom I have consigned during the last twelve years. My whole crop, from this old and dilapidated orchard, netted $10,000. The Bartlett pears were sold in this place at $2. per basket for canning purposes, amounting to $417. The other pears and early apples realized about $60, say for the whole $475. This amounts to a total of $10,575. From this I deduct $1,500 for cartage, picking, sorting and hauling, and I had an entire clear profit of $9,000 from the seventy acres, and nine-tenths of the pear and apple trees were too young to bear any fruit."

Messrs Waddy & Co. have one of the best stands in New York for the display of their sales, and our shippers will do well to give them a trial.

OUTRAGEOUS.—A brass band has been organized in Oakland and is raised to say for the horns, drums and other instruments. This is all right enough but when it comes to practicing in the ware house adjoining our sanctum and composing room, it is a little too much for human endurance. Won't some of our more experienced contemporaries suggest a remedy for the grievance.—Gazette Co. Herald.

We think our contemporary is peculiarly fortunate in the first place his printers will be so disgusted with music by the time the new band can make it, that they will not leave their business look after a brass band at any time hereafter, and the work will go right on his office no matter how much music may be on the streets, and it will also prevent their talking while the band are playing.

A Peaceable Community.—District No. 10, Garrett county, has neither magistrate nor constable, and the people say they had no use for either. In fact they can't find any one who is competent that will accept either office. For honest dealing and good behavior generally old No. 10 will compare favorably with any district in Garrett or any other county.

THE AMERICAN FARMER for June is at hand, well filled with a great variety of useful and attractive matter. This old journal has something for every taste, and no branch of farm or garden work but is treated in its pages, thus making it a valuable hand-book for every farmer and horticulturist. All can examine it who wish to do so, as the publishers will send specimen copies free to all who send for them.

Published by Samuel Sands & Son, No. 9 North St., Baltimore, Md., at $1.50 a year, 5 copies $5.00.

Why doesn't George W. Childs, proprietor of the Philadelphia Ledger, assume the whole expense of the Centennial, now hanging by the gills, and run the thing as a great national benefaction? It would beat every former exploit of his, and of Bannan's out of sight.

The Maryland Episcopal Diocesan Convention, which met in Washington last week, elected a delegation to the Episcopal General Convention which meets in New York next fall, composed of Kitchin and Hill.

HILL, JOHN, MASS.

The above endorsement was found upon a document left at our post office, the other day, when the P. M. held it up to the light not knowing whether to start it east, west, north or south, when he addressed himself to the writer, saying, "What does this mean?" "Mean? why it means John T. Underhill, Andover, Massachusetts."

THE MURDERER'S CAVE

The Farmer's Advocate, published at Marion, Williamson county, Ill., contains a communication which throws an air of wild romance around the desperado who have so long been the terror of Wil-

Not long since a party of hunters were out at night. In their rambles they met another party who, they were horrified to see, were carrying a dead man. The hunters, who had escaped the observation of the others, concealed themselves until the party with the dead man had passed on, when they followed, keeping at a safe distance behind, for perhaps a mile, when the whole party, dead men and all suddenly disappeared. The pursuers searched, but could find no trace or sign of the party. The next day the hunters returned to the search and were rewarded by discovering a cave the opening of which, large enough to admit the body of a man, appeared in a cliff of rocks overhanging a small stream of water. The explorers procured lights and a rope and ment of three or four other residents of the vicinity, and returned to the cave. Just before they reached it, two men were observed running away from it in haste. Two of the party entered the cave, and found themselves in a large room carpeted and furnished, and showing evident signs of recent occupation. The sides of the rooms showed openings which the men assured led to other rooms. The pos-surely that they might be occupied made the searchers feel uncomfortable and they quickly vacated the place. This party concluded that they had come upon the rendezvous of a band of desperadoes, and on their way home stopped at the house of an old farmer and told their story. The farmer became excited—left the room and soon returned, with four men, masked and armed, who made the party of explorers kneel and take a solemn oath.

never to reveal what they had that day discovered. The writer of the communication says the families of the men who made the discovery are leaving the country—that others are preparing to follow—and that great excitement exists on the borders of Texas and Williamson counties, in the vicinity of the cave.

WAGES IN EUROPE AND AMERICA

An exchange shows how the wages of laborers and mechanics, corporations in the United States and Europe. An ordinary farm laborer in Massachusetts receives $6 a week and his board, equivalent to $10.

The highest wages in England, paid in Lincolnshire, are $8.17, without board; in Kent, $6.81; in Devonshire a 10 Cornwall, $4.08; in Ireland, $4.91, without board; in France, the highest, receive 22 or 23 cent. with board in Brittany, 22

A blacksmith in Massachusetts receives $18.50 per week; in England and Scotland, and on the continent, the wages range from $6 to $7.90.

A mason is worth $24 here, against $10.17 in England, $9.53 in Scotland, $4.30 in Prussia, and $3.21 in Italy. A bricklayer is paid $14 here, against $10.17 in Englagat and $5.94 in Germany. A publisher commands $24 in America, while his wages in Europe vary from $6.08 in Italy to $10.17 in Prussia. A carpenter earns $17 in Muschnowitz, but in Europe only from $7.62 to $10.17. About the same proportion holds good in all the other trades.

These figures, the editor says, show that American labor holds its old position of advantage in this country. They prove that the American mechanic and artisan

Between Kenosha and Milwaukee, Wis., a Wisconsin paper, an insurance agent entered a car and, having insured it,

"Madam, would you like to insure against accident?" inquired the agent.

"I'm going to Ooshiko to visit my father who is married up there and his first lady."

The agent raised his voice and asked:

"Would you like to insure your life against accident?"

"She's been married two years and a half. It's a gal," the agent said at a glance.

Agent, still louder: "Is he married?"

"I'm an insurance agent, and I want to know if you want your life insured against accident."

"O, I didn't understand you," said the old lady. "No; her name is Johanna; my name is Evans, and I live five miles from Konosha."

The agent vanished.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

The following are some of the decisions of the Post Office Department relating to newspapers.

Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscription.

If subscribers order the discontinuance of their periodicals, the publishers may continue to send them until all arrears are paid.

If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their periodicals from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bills, and ordered them discontinued.

If subscribers move to other places without informing the publishers, and the papers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

Any person who receives a newspaper and makes use of it, whether he has ordered it or not, is held in law to be a subscriber.

The Courts have decided that "refusing to take periodicals from the office, or removing and leaving them uncollected, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud."

An assessment has been passed, or attempted to be passed, at the last session of the Legislature. Whether it was done in obedience to a popular demand, to supply the popular need, we will not stop to inquire, as the reasons for the action of legislators is sometimes like their wisdom—past finding out. We, however, could see no pressing need for the passage of such a law. Scarcely had the bill received the executive sanction and become invested with the force of law, than applications for positions under it began to pour into the gubernatorial mansion. Appointments to the number of a hundred or more were made for the execution of the law, which would require in its execution a hundred days, more or less. The commissions were hurried off by the red tapists from the central office; the hurry of preparation was heard; blanks were demanded from the Comptroller faster than he could supply them, and the active duties imposed by the law were to be speedily assumed. From the ponderous heap of legislative wisdom the law itself was culled out and its contents examined. Those who were to aid in executing it began to look after their duties. Could it be possible! An error, a blunder is discovered! It is handed from one to another. The ancient and venerable gentlemen take off their glasses brush away the dust and try again. They will not believe that the representatives of the people have thus exposed their carelessness as law makers. Even so, it is there! There is a hush and a murmur of disappointment. The work of preparation is silenced. The appointees tremble with excitement and hold their breath in suspense. Is it possible that their occupation, like the Apples of Sodom, will wither with the grasp?

What is to be done? Shall the members of the Legislature be summoned again to the Capitol to revise and correct their work? That would cost the people several thousand dollars, and they will not submit to it. Will not the legislators return at their own expense and correct the bungling work which the people paid them to do well and rightly? If not, some other plan must be devised. The State's Chief of Finance rubs his forehead, strokes his whiskers and struggles for an idea. He has it! The aid of the Judiciary must be invoked; a case must be made up and taken to the Appellate Court and a decision had as to whether the law can be executed as it is. It is done. But days, and even weeks, must elapse before the end can be reached and the result can be obtained, and in the meantime how provoking must be the suspense to those who have received appointments under it! Tantalized by hope to day, burdened with despair to-morrow, now elated and flattered with a promise of success, and now cast down with fear. But the end comes. "Inoperative! unconstitutional! void for uncertainty!" Such is the language of the Court. The anathemas of the people are both loud and deep, and temporal and political damnation is threatened to all who had any hand in the matter. There is one consolation, however. The fifty thousand dollars or more its execution would have cost the people will remain in their pockets a year or two longer.

We are not disposed to charge the whole blame of the failure of an important law upon the individual members of the Legislature. We know that much of the work of legislation is done in the committee rooms, and that after the bills there framed have passed from the hands of their clerks they are supposed to be all right, at least so far as phraseology is concerned. But this does not entirely exempt the individual members, who may not be on the committee that framed any particular bill, from the duty of giving it a close and critical examination as it passed in review before them, and when printed and placed upon their desks, no matter how dry and irksome the task. It may be more pleasant to write letters to political friends at home; to stroll around with political wire-pullers and button-holders; to listen to the beneficent schemes and maudlin eloquence of those who have axes to grind and indulge in the entertainments which they may prepare to ensnare victims, but this is not the legitimate work of a legislator. All that will, and determination, and energy, and patience can bring to his aid should be availed of in the discharge of the high, and responsible position which the people have called him to fill; and without doing this, he should receive, as he merits, the scorn of his constituents; doing it, he should receive, as he deserves, their flattering approbation. —Well done, good and faithful servant.

STEAM ON THE CANALS.

New York is at length demonstrating the successful application of steam on the Erie canal in what is known as the Baxter system, which, jointly with a similar system, took the New York State prize of $100,000. Several boats are in successful operation, and companies are forming, so that in a short time the "one-horse" system of towage will be superseded by steamboats running on schedule time from point to point. The New York Commercial describes the appearance of the new boats and the results achieved in the following:

Judging from the monster productions of some former inventors doubtless many will be surprised, in viewing this latest of nautical curiosities, to find only a plain canal boat—a wooden box—17½ x 96 feet, the ends sharpened slightly, but with no pretensions to naval architecture, a twelve inch pipe issuing five feet above the deck, and seemingly the stove pipe of the after cabin, but with no smoke issuing therefrom, the machinery making no noise that can be heard on deck. In attempting to reach this result there were no less than two thousand would-be inventors in competition, and the sums of money thus uselessly expended, if definitely known, would show a formidable aggregate.

The official record of the trial trip gives the boat a speed of 3 9/10 miles per hour, upon a consumption of 880 pounds of coal for 56 miles, or 14 82-100 pounds to the mile, carrying a little over 200 tons of freight in addition to the machinery and fuel. At $5 per ton for coal, this is carrying one ton of freight 60 miles upon a cost for fuel of one cent. In actual service, according to Mr. Baxter, it is entirely safe to estimate the consumption of the new boats at one ton per 100 miles, or say five tons from Buffalo to New York. The rate of speed and cost of fuel once determined, the problem is reduced to its simplest elements. —Therefore the assertion is boldly made that, whereas a horse-boat loses money when freight goes below ten cents a bushel, steamers can be run under the same circumstances at a handsome profit.

GEN. GRANT'S SALARY GRAB.

But what shall be said of the President himself, who was the abettor and accomplice, nay, more, the author and the prime mover in this wholesale larceny? His salary for the year 1872 was $25,000, to which is to be added his perquisites, amounting to the enormous sum of $77,600, making an aggregate of $102,600, or $22 a day for every day in the year. Sundays included. Think of it, ye who elect President!

But did this satisfy his cupidity? Far, very far from it. He demanded and received as his reward for signing the infamous bill that his salary of $25,000, a day to his pay, making an aggregate of $3,500 a day, provided the amount of his perquisites, which have steadily increased ever since his election, remain at the sum total of $77,600 a year.

Let us examine this transaction in the light of every-day business. I am the President of an insurance company. Now suppose that on the last day of the year, after having drawn my stipulated salary, I had conspired with the remaining officers of the company to rob its till of a sum equivalent to one-half of our specified compensation, and that we had divided the swag between us. We had the keys, and we had it in our power to abstract the money. What would you think of such a transaction? Would we not be likely about this time to be on our way to the State prison?

The Durham (N. C.) Plant says: "My twin, who lives three miles from Durham, gave birth a few days since to twins that rival the celebrated Siamese. The children were fully developed in every part, bodies, arms, hands, legs and feet, except there was only one head, but two faces with fully developed features, the head bearing a face on either side. One was dead and the other living when born. It is thought that had it not been for a fright the mother received causing a premature birth, that the children would have lived and perhaps been raised. This is one of the most remarkable freaks of nature ever known."

An amateur reporter sent in an account of a wreck, in which he stated that "no less than thirteen unfortunate bit the dust."

MARRIAGE BY AGREEMENT.

Miss Selma Canfield Gibbs, a beautiful and accomplished young lady, gained a verdict in her favor before Judge Van Brunt yesterday, the question involved being her legitimacy and her title to about $50,000. In 1859, when she was but nine months old, she was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Gibbs, who reared and educated her as their own child. Until about a year ago she did not know that she was not the child of her putative parents who had kept their secrets so well that even their own brothers and sisters were not cognizant of the facts. In 1866 Mrs. Effie Simmons died leaving about $100,000 to her two sons, Peter and William. The latter had been many years married, but Peter, who had become very dissipated, lived most of the property Peter making no effort to obtain his share. He died in 1872, bequeathing certain pictures also left him by his mother, to Miss Gibbs, declaring her to be his daughter. Then the executor of Mrs. Effie Simmons sued to determine whether Peter's share should go to Selma, as his daughter, or to his brother William. Then, upon the service of the writ, the papers upon her, the young lady was first apprised of her parentage. The case, which was strongly contested by William Simmons, was for some days on trial. It was shown that Peter Simmons became acquainted with Cornelia Baker in 1860, in a Methodist church in this city, and they became intimate and lived together. It was asserted, however, on the part of the defendant, that the relation was illicit, and that the two were not husband and wife until 1865, when a formal ceremony of marriage was performed. Mrs. Cornelia Simmons, however, testified that on February 22, 1851, they agreed to be husband and wife in presence of witnesses, and Peter Simmons repeatedly declared that they were married, and in 1864 said that they had been married for three years. On the question whether Miss Gibbs was the legitimate or illegitimate child of her father, Judge Van Brunt ruled the law which he laid down in the Brinkley case, that an agreement of marriage is a marriage, with the addition that all presumptions are in favor of the legitimacy of the child under an informal marriage.

The jury stayed out a little over an hour, and returned with a verdict for Miss Gibbs on every point.

All the dry goods shops, schools, corner groceries, insurance offices, banks, and city government department are at it; and clubs are actually organizing by streets. Even the young women are playing base ball. We are now waiting to hear from the match between the Protestant Episcopal club and the Seven Day Baptist nine."

A gentleman who was a stranger in Little Rock went to the rear of a hotel and asked if he could buy a postage stamp. The clerk replied that he had none, whereupon a bystander took out his pocketbook and graciously handed the gentleman a number of stamps, telling him to help himself. The stranger took two of them, and, thanking the gentleman for his kindness, handed back the remainder of the stamps and six cents to pay for those he had taken. But the pennies had scarcely been placed in the hands of the other man when the stranger on the floor, and exclaimed excitedly, "If you were not a d— fool, sir, you would know that an Arkansian don't peddle postage stamps!" No apologies would be accepted, and the irate man walked out of the hotel.

Judge Graham has filed a decision upon the question whether Governor Moore is subject to indictment and trial by the ordinary criminal process previous to his impeachment by the Legislature. He holds that the act of Moore, as charged in the indictment, was in truth official action. It was misconduct or a crime committed by him as Governor. It is therefore ordered that the indictment for larceny as to Franklin J. Moore, Jr., be quashed, and the case as to him be struck from the docket.

The Wilmington (Del.) Commercial says that on Monday last week a woman, named Mrs. E. J. Bradley, arrived in that city from Lancaster, Pa., and took boarding at the house of Mr. Robert M. Gibson stating that she intended to go to Lancaster the next day, but afterwards complained of being unwell, and remained from day to day until Saturday last. On that morning, after taking a walk, she retired to her room, and at noon a servant was sent to call her dinner, when she was discovered to be dead. A coroner's jury returned a verdict that she came to her death from the effects of laudanum administered by her own hand. A pint bottle, containing an ounce and a half of laudanum, was found in her valise. Deceased was about sixty years of age. She was a Quaker, and a severe illness from which she had just recovered, it is thought deranged her mind. Rev. F. C. Cox, a brother of Mrs. Bradley, of Norris-town Pa., arrived in Wilmington on Monday, and conveyed the remains to Lancaster.

Baltimore newspaper reporters are not threatened with early wealth.

Saturday, June 20, 1874.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

The following are some of the decisions of the Post Office Department relating to newspapers.

Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscription.

If subscribers order the discontinuance of their periodicals, the publishers may continue to send them until all arrearages are paid.

If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their periodicals from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bills, and ordered their discontinuance.

If subscribers move to other places without informing the publishers, and the papers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

Any person who receives a newspaper, and makes use of it, whether he has ordered it or not, is held in law to be a subscriber.

The Courts have decided that "refusing to take periodicals from the office, or removing and leaving them uncollected, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud."

THE CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGN, AND WHO SHALL REPRESENT US.

In a short time the people will be called upon to send delegates to a convention, whose duty it will be to nominate a candidate to represent the First Congressional District of Maryland, in the U. S. House of Representatives, to wit: Col. Wilson. The question is not so much as to what Democrat shall represent us, as it is, shall a Democrat or a Republican be our representative in the next Congress? Now, it behooves every Democrat in the District to ponder well this question, and those who are not for a Democrat first, and his particular friend afterwards, is not of us, and ought to go over to the enemy and show his true colors. We have already heard the mutterings of some who have heretofore sown the seeds of discord, and quasi threatening, that if this or that man was not nominated the party would be best. Now we never were worshippers of men, and have always been, and are now, willing to give up our best friend's prospects for the success of a candidate who will represent us as faithfully and truly as our present worthy and talented representative has done. And if it were left to us to decide the question we would send him back another term, although it might seem to be against his will, for we believe that the present contingency requires it. But if we must look outside of Col. Wilson for a representative we have no doubt that a good man will be presented to the Convention, and that such a one, when nominated, can be elected by a handsome majority. All we need is unity and concert of action. There are enough Democrats (or at least those who call themselves so) in the First District, to elect any good man to Congress, and we don't care who that man may be, or from what county he may be taken, so he is a good and true Democrat, and has the requisite ability and integrity to entitle him to such honors. We believe that such a man can and will be found, and when found and put in nomination by our Democratic convention we shall give him our unqualified support, and hope that all our Democratic friends will feel it to be their duty to do likewise, and in order that all may have an opportunity to assist in bringing out the man of their choice, we now say once for all, turn out at the primaries and see that good man are sent to the county convention, and it will necessarily follow that the same kind will be sent to the District Convention, and after the Convention has done its work let us be charitable enough to admit that they have done the best they could, and give to the nominees of that Convention our hearty and undivided support. Several names have already been suggested as candidates before the convention, and others will be added to the list. Many of whom or indeed we might say all are worthy gentlemen and either of them would make a creditable representative.

Before leaving this subject we desire to say to our Democratic friends who saw fit to disagree with us last Fall, (that if it was only as they said in the local contest and that on all State and national issues they were Democrats still,) that now is the time to determine this question. Let us counsel together if we be of the same household of faith. Don't stand aloof or hold sweet intercourse with our enemies. Let us know who we are and where we stand. It will be too late after the Convention has met and adjourned. Democrats ought not to be ashamed of their faith. A late defeated Republican candidate for Congress told us that one of the chief causes of his defeat was, that republicans were ashamed to be called republicans in Maryland, and thereby lost their moral force. We hope this will never be said of Democrats, or those who co-operate with them. (The word Democrat in this article implies all persons who are not in accord with the Republican party, and is not to be strictly construed. We always mean Conservatives and Democrats when we apply the term, as there are but two parties now in the country.)

Then let us reason together and work for the common good and send a representative to Congress who will not vote for the nefarious social equality bill at least.

BASE BALL AS A PASTIME.

We are not disposed to interfere with the business of other people, or suffer our notions of men and things to intrude upon the established customs or enjoyments of others, but we desire simply to say we think that much valuable time is wasted, and many opportunities neglected on account of the prevalence of the disease called the first and second nines, with its writhings with the body politic. It is estimated that the game was played last year by no less than five thousand clubs, and witnessed by at least two hundred thousand people, and we venture to say that not one out of a hundred of them were as well off, after witnessing the sport as they were before. They were certainly very little wiser, and as idleness and excitement lead us to dissipation, and then comes the accidents, the mistakes, quarrels, broils and a multitude of other ills too numerous to relate, all of which might have been avoided if the game had never been inaugurated. Many who can ill afford to leave their business, their families and friends, and follow up a base ball club, only for the excitement it produces, and, we have no doubt, acquired habits of idleness and dissipation to which, but for base ball they might have remained entire strangers. We hope that our young friends of the various clubs will pardon us, as we are only giving vent to an old opinion, as chronic as our knowledge of the game. We think, therefore, that much valuable time, which might be more profitably employed, is wasted on this game, which we are disposed to think has but little in it to elevate the human soul, or to make man what he should be, an upright being.

WHO ARE TO BE THE HUSBANDS OF OUR YOUNG LADIES?

This query was put in our presence by a divine in one of our large cities the other day, and the answer to it has not yet been satisfactorily given, in our judgment. It was then stated that not more than one young man in ten was so shaping his destiny as to fit himself to become the husband of a good and virtuous woman. Now, if this is the case in our large cities, will it not hold good to some extent in our large and populous towns. In the country, however, we believe the picture has some brighter spots; for it is evident that the youth who are brought up in the rural districts, away from the giddy whirl of mingling and commingling society, and where fewer temptations beset their pathway, and a purer atmosphere generally surrounds them, their case is not so hopelessly desperate; where, too, there are fewer grog-shops and gambling dens to lure them from the path of honor and usefulness. Now, if more than half of our people live in cities and towns, it is evident that according to the theory of our revered friend, a very small portion of our young men are in a fair way to become the useful heads of families. These truths are startling, and when we take it into consideration that they are often the best stock and therefore might have been the means of vastly improving our race, but instead of that they are daily becoming more dissipated and vicious. This is a deplorable state of things and ought to be remedied as far as possible to do so.

Now the only remedy we can suggest to the ladies is this, as soon as a young man seems to prefer the society of a young lady, she should at an early day learn his habits, and if he is given to idleness, gambling or dissipation she should at once put him on probation, and if he could not leave off all those habits she would do well at once to discontinue friendly or intimate relations with him, and if he intended to be, or make a man of himself, this would be his turning point, and if he was possessed of such grit as it takes to make a complete man, he would admire her for her firmness, and each would be mutually benefited, and fitted to become the representatives of their noble ancestry. Let us hope that a better state of things may be brought about in the future.

Another thing we intended to say in connection with the above. She should see that the young man who admires her should be engaged in some useful occupation by which he could obtain the means to support himself and save something for a rainy day, in order that when he took a wife he should have some assurance at least that she was not to go to the almshouse, or to his or her parents for support.

APPLETON'S AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA.

New Revised Edition. Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers on every subject. Painted from new type, and illustrated with 8,000 Engravings and Maps.

The work originally published under the title of The New American Cyclopedia, was completed in 1863, since which time the wide circulation which it has attained in all parts of the United States, and the signal developments which have taken place in every branch of science, literature, and art, have induced the editors and publishers to submit it to an exact and thorough revision, and to issue a new edition entitled The American Cyclopedia.

Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge has made a new work of reference an imperative want.

The movement of political affairs has kept pace with the discoveries of science, and their fruitful application to the industrial and useful arts and the convenience and advancement of social life. Great wars and consequent revolutions have occurred, involving national changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our own country, which was at its height when the last volume of the old work appeared, has happily been ended, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commenced.

Large accessions to our geographical knowledge have been made by the indefatigable explorers of Africa.

The great political revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the lapse of time, have brought into public view a multitude of new men, whose names are in every mouth, and of whose lives every one is curious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought, and important signs maintained, of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in transient publications of the day, but which ought now to take their permanent and authentic history.

In preparing the present edition for the press it has accordingly been the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the latest possible date, and to furnish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science, of every fresh production in literature, and of the newest inventions in the practical arts, as well as to give a succinct and original record of the progress of political and social events.

The work has been begun after long and careful preliminary labor, and with the ample resources for carrying it on to a successful termination.

None of the original stereotype plates have been used, but every page has been printed on new type, forming, in fact, a new Cyclopedia, with the same plan and compass as its predecessor, but with a far greater price, and with such improvements in its composition as have been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge.

The illustrations which are introduced for the first time in the present edition have been added not for the sake of pictorial effect, but to give greater lucidity and force to the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of science and of natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of scenery, architecture and art, as well as the various processes of mechanics and manufactures. Although intended for instruction rather than embellishment, no pains have been spared to insure their artistic excellence; the cost of their execution is enormous, and it is believed they will find a welcome reception as an admirable feature of the Cyclopedia, and worthy of its high character.

This work is sold to subscribers only payable on delivery of each volume. It will be completed in sixteen large octavo volumes, each containing about 800 pages, fully illustrated with several thousand Wood Engravings, and numerous colored Lithographic Maps.

Local Advertiser.

Saturday, June 20, 1874.

This paper has the largest circulation of any paper in Salisbury.

From present appearance, the whortleberry crop will be the largest ever known.

Time scarce, local items scarce, money scarce.

Mr. H. S. Brewington's new building is rapidly approaching completion.

We shall publish the levy list for 1874 in the next issue. Now is the time to subscribe.

Capt. John Hopper will start on his second trip to New Haven, Conn., some day next week.

The Orphans' Court for this County, will meet on the 23rd inst.

County Commissioners will meet on the 23rd inst.

Canned strawberries will be a mighty common desert next winter.

Rev. J. J. Smythe and wife returned from a pleasure trip to St. Louis on Thursday.

Base ball stock in this town has sadly depreciated.

If there should be no heavy rains to drown the young birds, quail promises to be unusually thick next fall.

Salisbury with its nine churches ought to be a very religious place.

Irish potatoes are now being shipped in large quantities. Prices are good.

The number of vessels constantly at our wharves gives the stranger some idea of the amount of business we do.

There is some prospect of having a splendid ball boat on Lake Humphreys. Borrowers, will please make a note of this.

Affairs about Berlin are rather dull at present. Collins has a few visitors, but the anti-slavery law has played the deuce with his prospects. The extension of the W. & P. R. E. to the beach is progressing favorably.

There is some talk of having a social game of ball here on the 4th of July between the members of the Lightfoot and White Cloud Clubs.

The members of the White Cloud Club are enthusiastic over the manner in which they were treated in Snow Hill. This only confirms what we said about the latter place.

At a meeting of the Delaware peach growers' association, held last week, the probable amount of peaches to be shipped from this station was set down at five thousand baskets. If their predictions are as wide of the mark at other stations as they are here, the peach crop will be slim.

There will be preaching by the Pastor, in the Wicomico Presbyterian church to-morrow (Sunday) morning at 10 o'clock, and in the evening at 8 o'clock.

Crisfield pays her Balliff four hundred dollars per year, Salisbury, many times as large a place, requiring two balliffs, cannot pay two men six hundred dollars for their services.

Another call.—All persons indebted to the Salisbury Advertiser, either for Subscription, Advertising or Job work, will please pay the same at once and oblige the publisher.

The Lodge of Good Templars recently organized in this town have rented and furnished the upper room of the school house opposite the old Hotel and will meet there in the future.

The strawberry crop is about played out. The shipments have been quite large from this place, and were very remunerative in the beginning, but towards the last were a complete failure. This was owing to the excessive wet weather and the damaged condition of the fruit.

Collector's Bond.—On Tuesday Levin M. Wilson presented his bond as Collector of the county taxes for Wicomico county to the Commissioners who approved it. The penalty of the bond is $75,000, and John H. Bacon, Thos. B. Taylor and Train A. Bonds are his securities.

The Snow Hill and White Cloud base ball clubs played a game of ball Thursday afternoon in Snow Hill. The game, which was the score will show, was a badly played one on both sides, resulted in favor of Snow Hill by a score of 43 to 20. With such figures, further comment is unnecessary.

Elizabeth Kelly, alias Webb, becoming tired of things here below, departed this life in such an abrupt manner last Wednesday, that a certain portion of our people, not caring how much expense the county is placed, hold an entirely useless funeral, who, after having viewed the dead body came to the conclusion that death resulted from natural causes, something that was apparent to nearly every one before. The county is able, gentlemen, therefore you have a perfect right to bleed her.

The County Levy for this year will be as follows: Total amount of property subject to taxation, $4,339,380.00; amount to be raised by Levy for the county for 1874, including Court House Fund, $6 in $100, ($7,111.33); Poor Fund, $2,500.00; School Fund, $6,000.00; Surplus Fund, $2,000.00; Commission for collecting Taxes, $1,600.00; Insolvency, $1,000.00; Interest due Somerset Co. on R. R. Bonds, $1,814.48; Interest due Worcester Co. on School Fund, $474.16; total, $85,584.98. Total amount to be raised for the State for 1874, $8,814.47. County Levy as declared by the County Commissioners on each $100, 82 cents. State Levy on each $100, 20-16 cents. Total State and County Levy, $1,025-16.

Two of our young men lately concluded to become temperate in their drinks. To effect this, they proposed that if either should catch the other in a bar-room, the one thus caught was to treat. Many would suppose that both parties would abstain from bar-rooms for a little while. Exactly the opposite is the case. In their eagerness to catch each other, they are about, nearly all the time. The effect of the compact so far has been that both fellows keep drunk as sports, and think the agreement a bully one.

Just what is needed in the Spring of the year by everybody. Try it. Sold at Dr. L. D. Collier's Drug Store, Salisbury, Md.
