ITALIANS FLOCK HERE IN DROVES

Number of Immigrants Will Be Limited by the Capacity of Liners.

STRICT CONTROL IN ITALY

Thieves at Naples Get High Prices for American Passports—Keen Competition for Foreign Ships—Maintain Close Inspection.

Naples.—The number of immigrants to the United States this year will only be limited by the capacity of the steamships, according to United States Consul Homer W. Boyington, who has been here for 15 years and has a good knowledge of the situation. The Italian companies lost a good many steamships during the war and have not yet been able to replace them, while the foreign vessels calling at Naples and Genoa for immigrants have dwindled since the war to an almost negligible number.

The consul said that the Italian government had consented to permit surgeons in the United States public health service to be present at the inspection of the immigrants before embarkation, so that they will be able to sign the bills of health and stop the detention of the steamships on their arrival at the quarantine station in New York. There have only been two cases of typhus in this port and they were Greeks from Piræus. In consequence of this the government has put a tight ring around Italy and no alien immigrants are permitted to pass the frontier. The steamships leaving Italian ports for the United States now only carry Italians, and Poles, Czechs, Croats, Greeks, Ukrainians, Roumanians and other nationalities will have to sail from some other ports like Danzig, Bremen or Hamburg.

The staff at the consulate consists of 25 clerks, stenographers and interpreters, etc., who are chiefly employed in handling the hundreds of immigrants who throng the bureau on the Via Santa Lucia all day long. Women with babies in their arms have precedence over all other applicants by orders of the consul. Under normal conditions the immigrants get away within three months of the date of their visas on the passports, but on account of the holding up of the liners in New York through the typhus scare, they are now fully six months behind, according to the officials.

Passports Closely Scrutinized. The greatest care is exercised at the consulate to see that no more get by with false passports or counterfeit visas. The immigration authorities are also notified at New York to look out for the private marks on the passports, which will be changed from time to time in case they get known to the Italian crooks who are making a fat living by fabricating passports and visas for immigrants who may have some charges against their character which would prevent their obtaining a visa on their passports at the American consulate.

Two Americans who arrived from New York by the Canopic had their passports stolen and had to proceed to Rome to obtain emergency papers at the United States legation after getting identification certificates at the consulate here. These stolen passports, the officials say, are sent to Ancona or to Cosenza, which is near Naples, and the seals and visas are taken off and used for other passports. A well-executed false passport is worth 1,400 lire, about $56 to $60 United States currency, according to the rate of exchange, which fluctuates daily. At the consulate it was said that these two stolen passports would net the pickpockets who took them about 1,000 lire. Passengers are warned on landing in the custom house to be careful of their pocket-books and passports, as the Neapolitan purse snatchers are famous in police circles all over Europe for the dexterity of their fingers. The police were notified of the loss of the passports belonging to the two Americans, but they were not recovered.

All intending immigrants seeking American visas have to produce their permits to leave the country, military papers (if they are males), vaccination certificate and the dossier from the chief of police of their district to show whether any criminal charges have ever been preferred against them. The American authorities have not interfered with the inspection at the dock before embarkation, as they left that to the officials of the steamship companies. The Navigation Generale, the White Star and other lines sailing from Italian ports have organized their own sanitary plants where the immigrants are put through a thorough examination before they are permitted to go on board the ships. The inspection is done by the Italian doctors from the steamships and the doctor of the port.

First, a Bath. The first thing the immigrant has to do is to take a bath and if necessary, to have a shave and a haircut. Whiskers and beards are barred under this ruling and only a mustache is allowed.

While they are undergoing the cleansing process the clothing of the immigrants is inspected and thoroughly disinfected. They are vaccinated again to make sure that the operation has been properly done, and are then permitted to embark for the United States. It is not the fault of the Italian officials or the steamship companies if the immigrants are not clean when they leave Naples.

If the surplus population of Italy does not go to the United States it will go to Brazil or Argentina or some other country in South America, because the people must emigrate, as there are too many to earn a living in their own country. There are so many young men walking about Naples now that it is difficult to believe that Italy has just emerged from a long war. The reason for this, according to the government officials, is that the birth rate increases by leaps and bounds each year and the children grow more rapidly into manhood than they do in colder climes. With the new countries recently taken by Italy after the war the population is reckoned at 40,000,000.

The stranger walking through a city like Naples can easily realize the problem the government has to do with. The side streets, which have frightful flights of steep steps leading to six-story houses built of stone more than a century ago, are literally swarming with children, who sprawl in the paved roadway and on the sidewalks. They look dirty and happy. It must be the sunny climate, as the food is chiefly an inferior grade of spaghetti, yellow beans and onions, with a slice of meat on Sundays.

Swarm With Children. Suburbs of Naples like Portici and Resina—which is built over ruins of Herculaneum, 50 feet below under lava and ashes—swarm with children who, for number, can only be compared to those of Delhi, Agra and other cities in the East Indies. The average family consists of ten to twelve children, and persons who have fewer than eight little ones are regarded with suspicion as being lacking in patriotism. The sanitary conditions are so bad in the side streets of these ancient towns that the masses are germ proof and epidemics pass them by as hopelessly, unless the disease becomes exceptionally aggressive and tries for a record.

The workingman earned 3 lire a day before the war and was able to support his family comfortably upon that sum. Today he earns from 25 to 30 lire a day, but cannot keep his family as well as he could before, because rent has increased 600 per cent, and food and clothing from 500 to 800 per cent. Building is going on all over Naples, especially by the banks, which, during the war, made huge fortunes in exchange and are now erecting handsome offices. The municipality is also having the entire city repaved. The work employs hundreds of men who sit down and smoke their pipes comfortably while they chip the corners off the big flat stones, and look as if they would be on the job for years.

The air is full of dust and the small one-horse cabs bump the riders about from side to side as they struggle through the streets. The horses are still upon war rations.

TO HARNESS VOLCANO'S HEAT

Plan Electric Light and Power in Hawaii from Crater Which Is Perpetually Active.

Honolulu, T. H.—The heat of Kilauea volcano, whose great perpetually active crater, thirty-two miles from Hilo, on the island of Hawaii, daily provides an awe-inspiring spectacle for crowds of tourists, is to be utilized.

It will provide electric light and power for every town, hamlet and industry on the island, if the purposes of a memorial recently addressed to the legislature of Hawaii are worked out.

The memorial asks the territory to appropriate $25,000 to be matched by a similar amount from the Hawaii Volcano Research association, for borings and other preliminary work. The memorial cites the fact that volcanic heat already is being used on a large scale for the production of power in Italy. The Kilauea project has been endorsed as feasible by the Pan-Pacific scientific congress which met here last August.

Andes Crossed by Autoists. Santiago, Chili.—Several Argentine automobilists have arrived here from Bahia Blanca, after having crossed the Andes by the southern pass, the distance covered by the party being about 1,100 miles. The journey was taken for the purpose of encouraging motor communication between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of South America.

American Flyers Given 40-Acre Polish Farms

Warsaw.—Nine American members of the Kosciuszko air squadron, all soldiers of fortune, recently were awarded 40 acres of land each near the Polish-Russian frontier, as outlined by the Riga peace treaty.

All officers and soldiers of the Polish forces are being provided with tracts along Poland's eastern boundary, under a system worked out by the government, provided they take up cultivation of the land upon leaving the military service. By this plan Poland hopes to have trained men settled permanently where they would be handy for service in case the country is ever attacked again from the east.

"INNOCENCE"—AND AN EGG

It Was Milwaukee Man's Misfortune That He Should Thus Have Been Doubly Armed.

A certain Milwaukee man bought an egg for next morning's breakfast late one night and placed it carefully in the outside pocket of his coat. On the way home he met a suspicious policeman.

"Are you armed?" inquired the guardian of the peace.

"With innocence," replied the citizen.

The policeman had never heard of that. He decided it must be some new kind of Swiss cannon for night use, backed the citizen against a wall and proceeded to pat him from head to foot in search for lumps. Ultimately he struck the lone egg.

"Ah-ha!" said the cop. "I thought so."

What he thought was never said. He jammed his hand down into the pocket and the egg exploded—wrecked by brutality. It spread over the inside of the pocket. It clung to the cop's fingers, stickily, gummiy. The cop pulled his hand out and backed away.

"I got a notion to run you in for operatin' a shell game!" he said, thickly. "Go on—beat it!"

"Beat what—the egg?" asked the man sweetly.

New Reason for Dehorning.

Young red cedar trees in the Wichita National forest are no longer injured by the hards which graze there. The solution of the problem was simple, the cattle are now dehorned. One of the drawbacks to pasturing national forests has been the injury which was apt to result to the young growth from the grazing animals.

After fire-protection methods on the Wichita were fairly worked out and fires became rare instead of the rule, red cedar began to come rather plentifully all over the forest under the oak stands. As the cedar began to reach a little size the supervisor of the forest noticed that it was being broken rather badly by cattle, both in the tops and in the branches. After some consideration the supervisor decided to ask the cattlemen users of the forest to run none but dehorned cattle on the Wichita.

Plants Grow Best Transplanted. Plants do not always select the most congenial habitat, for it has been found that some specimens found growing modestly on the mountain top flourish to a marked extent when transplanted at the sea level.

The Mussulmans' Sacred Black Stone.

The Kaaba, or Qaaba, the most sacred shrine of Mohammedanism, toward which Mussulmans turn their faces in prayer, is a cube-shaped, flat-roofed building in the center of the Great Mosque of Mecca. In the northeast corner is the famous "black stone." This stone is of irregular oval shape, about seven inches in diameter, and probably of meteoric origin. When Mohammed returned triumphantly to Mecca, he destroyed all the idols found in the Kaaba, which had fallen into pagan use, but spared the "black stone," which all Mussulmans venerate.

Decorum. "When you mention that you saw a lady of your acquaintance on the street, does your wife ask you to describe what she wore?" "Certainly not," replied Mr. Meekton. "These days it wouldn't be considered a proper question."

"A" Letters.

"I never knew what sad work the reading of old letters was before that evening, though I could hardly tell why. The letters were as happy as letters could be. There was in them a vivid and intense sense of the present time, which seemed so strong and full as if it could never pass away, and as if the warm, living hearts that so expressed themselves could never die, and be as nothing to the sunny earth, I should have felt less melancholy, I believe, if the letters had been more so."—Mrs. Gaskell, in "Cranford."

Critical Month for Uncle Ez.

March is recognized as a rather trying month—a dangerous month because weather conditions tempt people to certain indiscretions. The philosophic old darkey realized this when he observed: "Ah notice dat when Ah lib frough de month o' March, Ah mos' always lib frough de whole yeah."

Meteor Shower to Mark Earth's Race With Comet

Berkeley, Cal.—For a month this summer, the earth will engage in a race with the periodic comet Pons-Winnecke, and because it will have no chance to win it will endeavor, through astral influences, to "trip up" its gaseous rival, according to a report made public by the observatory of the University of California.

On June 27 the comet will flip its tail so hard against its terrestrial rival that the impact will send out sparks. These will go down into the records as a meteoric shower.

At the greatest brilliancy observable from the earth the comet will be of the eighth or ninth magnitude. Nothing greater than the sixth magnitude can be observed by the naked eye, so the world at large will see nothing of the visitor except at the tail-flipping episode on June 27.

PAYS $18.50, GETS SLIPPER

Sailor Is "Stung" at Auction Sale Held by Shipping Officials in New York.

New York.—When last seen, Jack Donovan, a seaman who wears No. 12 brogans, was streaking out of the barge office in search of a cop who could tip him off to a place where a disgruntled chap might "buy a few."

For John just before had placed $18.50 in the hands of United States Shipping Commissioner Quinn in exchange for a trunk auctioned off "sight unseen." The trunk looked slick and heavy and worth the price, all Jack could assemble. It proved to contain a gold-threaded Chinese slipper.

It was the annual sale of effects of seamen who deserted their craft or who died at sea and whose relatives have not been found. A total of $3,000 resulted.

The highest price for an article was $51.50 for a gold watch. A glass eye brought $15.00. It was bought blindly, so to speak, in a package that was not unwrapped until the buyer, owning two good optics, had paid his money. He contributed his purchase to the waves off Battery park.

BERLIN PLOTTERS TO PRISON

Eleven Reds Nabbed in Blast Attempts Given Long Terms of Imprisonment.

Berlin.—Eleven communists, convicted of having made the recent attempt to blow up the victory monument in the Koenigsplatz, were sentenced to long terms of imprisonment in the penitentiary.

The evidence implicated Hoelez, one of the alleged leaders of the communist uprising in middle Germany who was arrested in Berlin April 15, and now is locked up in the Moabit jail in this city. The attempt to blow up the victory monument was frustrated by the police, who discovered a box containing four pounds of dynamite and other explosives some distance up the monument and tore away a lighted fuse leading to the box.

Herr Talheimer, editor of the Rote Fahne (red flag) the organ of the communists, has been placed under arrest.

Jail for Life Saving.

Omaha, Neb.—Saving a man from death in a water-filled hole beneath a burning shanty at the Dietz club here the other day may result in a prison term for C. M. Wallace, who was arrested by the police, charged with automobile theft after they had read of his heroic deed in the papers. Wallace escaped the police recently and had been in hiding. When summoned by the screams of a woman calling for help from a manhole he ran to the rescue. Two hours later he was in jail.

An "Ad" Almost Brought Disaster

By MURIEL BLAIR.

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

John Benton rose hurriedly from the breakfast table and plunged for his hat; then he plunged for his wife. "Good-by, dearest," he said, clasping her as tightly as he could, considering that he was holding a derby and a bag full of office papers. "I must catch that 8:27."

"Good-by, John," said Mary Benton, kissing him fondly. "I do wish you didn't have to hurry away to that old office," she added, pouting.

"It won't be for long," said her husband. "If our great new advertising scheme goes through we'll flood the country with notices of our new patent. Everybody will read them. It's my own idea. Can't stop to tell you now. Good-by." And, with a hurried final kiss, he was through the door and hastening toward the station.

Mary sighed a little—then smiled. She and John had been married only six months and they were very fond of each other.

She put away the breakfast things; then, still smiling at the thought of her husband's haste, she went into the little room in which he worked at nights upon the new advertising plan. A piece of paper lay in one corner; it had evidently fluttered out of his desk and fallen there, unnoticed. She picked it up and, glancing at it, felt her heart throb painfully. She could hardly read the words that danced before her eyes.

It was a love letter, and it began: "My dearest, sweetest Jack. It was typewritten—evidently the writer might remain immune against discovery, and for the same reason it was signed 'Bunny.' And it was just the sort of foolish mixture of prattle and endearment that an ignorant young girl would write."

Worst of all, it was headed 2247 Andover street—her husband's business address. She tried to read it, but the mixture of shop talk and loving phrases was too nauseating. Mingled with allusions to business affairs were references to somebody who must be "kept in the dark"—herself, doubtless. And "Jack" had taken her out to dinner on the 29th—that was the evening when he did not come home till eleven. "Jack" had given her a ring. "Jack" was her everlasting sweetheart.

Mary Benton had the quick temper which accompanies many lovable natures. She flung the letter into a corner and packed her bag. She was determined to go home to her mother. She would leave no message—merely the letter on the table. She picked it up and smoothed out the wrinkles. Then, at the door, she reflected. No, she would go down to the office and confront them—John and his absurd stenographer. Then at last she composed herself, dabbed some cologne upon her eyes, put the letter in her bag and started downtown. She would be very quiet and very calm and give the woman no occasion to triumph over her. She would request a few moments of John's time, would walk in, lay down the letter, ask him if he had anything to say, and then go home. She would never return—never. By this time she had begun to cry again.

She went down on a car and entered the dreary office building. When she went in she saw the same office boy and bookkeeper; but there was a new stenographer, a little, fluffy-haired thing, who chewed gum brazenly. Her heart sank. Was it possible that John was attracted by that creature?

"Why, Mary!" John was at the door, looking at her with a puzzled expression. He was holding her hands. "Mary! What's wrong, dear?"

She could not help her tears. "Send that woman away," she said in a faltering voice, and the stenographer withdrew softly, smiling a little. She had seen men's wives go to their husbands' offices before. Mary Benton entered, put down her bag and, standing like a recording angel, flung down the letter silently. John Benton read it and suddenly began to laugh uproariously.

"John! You are laughing!" exclaimed his wife.

"Read it aloud, my dear," her husband answered. "So you thought—you thought—"

"John, what do you mean? Can you offer any excuse at all? What is it?" John Benton read solemnly:

"My dearest, sweetest Jack—When are you going to take me out to dinner again, as you did on the 29th, sweetheart? I miss you every hour of the day—more than I miss Hairiff, the new patent scissors for cutting your own hair. When I see my brother's Hairiff I think of your own dark, lustrous locks. I—"

"Oh, pshaw!" said John, throwing the letter down. That's a mimeographed circular, Mary; we're flooding the country with them. Everybody will read them and want a pair. Look at those stacks of letters up there, dearest—they're all the same letter, all those thousands of them. And you thought—you really thought—"

But Mary was past thinking now; she was in his arms, and her tears were those of relief, happiness and humiliation.

A young man, well dressed and clever faced, coming rapidly down the principal street of Fairview, suddenly paused and stared ahead in a startled way. He had apparently observed some one he did not wish to meet, and he turned down a side lane at a brisk, excited walk.

"It's the constable, sure enough," he said under his breath, "and I feel pretty sure he must be looking for me." The speaker glanced apprehensively back the way he had come, and then broke into a run.

It was a singular position, that in which Cecil Morse found himself. Briefly stated, he was bent upon running away to get married. Others, including his legal guardian, Lawyer Grabbe, and his old maid daughter, Fortia, and their hired emissary, the town constable, were set on nipping the golden progress of love's young dream in the bud.

Cecil was heir to a liberal fortune. He lived with the Grabbe family. The lawyer was intent on keeping a hold on his ward and his fortune as long as he could. Incidentally he plotted to enmesh the young man in the snares of the somewhat faded beauty of the classic Fortia.

Now, Cecil had loved and won Claire Wyndham, who lived over in the next county. Her father was a tyrannical old fellow who had heard of the mutual attachment, thundered out that the lovers were too young to think of wedding bells, and had set his foot down—hard.

The result was a plot on the part of the lovers. The Wyndhams were going to take Claire to Europe the following week. In the meantime she had gained permission to visit a schoolgirl chum at Brookville. There Cecil had been the day previous. There, too, all the arrangements had been made for an elopement the next evening. Just now, Cecil had gone to a garage to secure the automobile he had engaged for the trip.

The auto man was his friend. He told Cecil that the constable had been there looking for him. The lawyer had got wind of Cecil's plan to leave town, and was bound to circumvent it. "I'm your friend, Cecil," said the garage keeper, "so I warn you. They have the west turnpike guarded. The constable is looking for you with a warrant."

Cecil was a crack sprinter. His one thought was to get out of town. He would trust to luck for guidance, once clear of his pursuer. Turning into an open stretch he discovered half a mile away a high board fence.

"The very thing!" he cried exultingly. "If my friend, Bob Archer, is only on hand."

There had been an airplane meet at Fairview for several days. Inside the enclosure was Archer, who was an airship enthusiast. He and Cecil had become great friends. The runner shot a rapid glance behind him. Less than a quarter of a mile away the constable was hot on his trail.

"There is the flyer," cheered Cecil, promptly making for a hangar beyond which a three-passenger biplane was getting ready for a flight. He recognized the machine belonging to Bob, and its owner near by. All out of breath, Cecil ran up to his friend.

"Bob," he panted, "I'm in trouble! Got to get away from Fairview."

"You don't say so!" exclaimed Archer. "Where to, may I ask?"

"Brookville, and quick. The constable is after me. Bob, it's about what I hinted to you—the girl I love. They are trying to separate us."

"Jump in—the left seat back of the pilot post," directed the young airman. "Strap yourself in. Give her a run, boys," he directed to his assistants.

Chug—chug!—the aerial beauty sped over the grass for 30 feet. Bob shot on the power.

"Hold on, there! Stop that machine! In the name of the law!"

"The mischief!" gasped Cecil.

They were leaving the ground, but not alone. The official had fairly overtaken his prey. He had jumped at the machine and skimmed one of the wings. To prevent damage and save him from a fall, Bob was forced to grab the bulky officer and drag him into the vacant seat.

"Stop this machine!" flared the constable. "I've got a warrant—"

"Can't stop—got to finish this curve first. Here, Cecil, strap him in, if he doesn't want a tip."

"Oh, let me out—let me out!" pleaded the shivering official.

Once in the spectacular flight, Bob leaned toward Cecil and received detailed instructions. Then he volplaned, made a circuit, and the airplane landed in an open field near Brookville, easy and graceful as a bird sinking to its nest.

Cecil quickly removed his safety belt and sprang to the ground. "Hold on, there!" shouted the constable. "I've got a warrant for that young man."

"No good in this district, officer," smiled Bob. "We've landed just over the county line."

Cecil Morse disappeared. He was to reappear at the Wyndham home two days later. The happy wedded pair had sent a honeymoon wire to Papa Wyndham, pathetically telling him how sorry, but still how happy they were. The reply telegram had conveyed to them the time-honored sentiment: "Come home, and all will be forgiven!"

EGYPT WEATHERS COTTON CRISIS

Despite Many Big Failures, Business Men Hope the Worst Is Past.

GAINS FOR AMERICAN TRADE

Low-Priced Automobiles Have Effectuated a Conquest—So Has American Chewing Gum—Patent Food Products Also Popular.

Cairo.—Business men in Egypt, especially foreigners, pay very little attention to the political situation. They admit, of course, that the unsettled conditions of a year ago, as well as the general lack of knowledge of what the future holds for Egypt, is a deterrent to free commercial intercourse. The chief cause for business worry at this writing is the decline in cotton prices plus the general international slump in trade. The two events coming at the same time work more than ordinary hardship to the business life of Egypt.

One business man remarked that people in Egypt realized that the trade of the world was in a bad state; that prices were falling the whole world over, and that there was a general stagnation in buying. But, he continued, "other countries have usually more than one industry upon which to exist. Here in Egypt we must live or die at the whim of King Cotton. This whim is not left in our power to control. We grow the cotton, and Lancashire and Manchester, as well as your big tire fabric centers at home, manipulate the buying price. Of course, every one in Egypt with a grain of common sense, realizes that the law of supply and demand rules; but, depending as it does upon one industry, the business life of the community is more or less left open to unusual perils when that one industry fails."

Bulk of Business Life.

This business man was engaged in the wholesale supply of sundries and novelties. His point of view may be accepted as that of such traders in general—those who buy in Europe, America or Japan and import the goods to Egypt for local consumption. This work constitutes the bulk of the business life of the community. It is not the greatest in point of wealth, however, when one figures the immense amounts involved in the collecting, ginning and exportation of raw cotton. Egypt's normal cotton crop is handled by about a dozen large British and Levantine firms, with headquarters in Alexandria. These latter have been the biggest sufferers, but only from lack of something to do. They rarely invest their money in cotton before the selling season opens, when the goods come from the field.

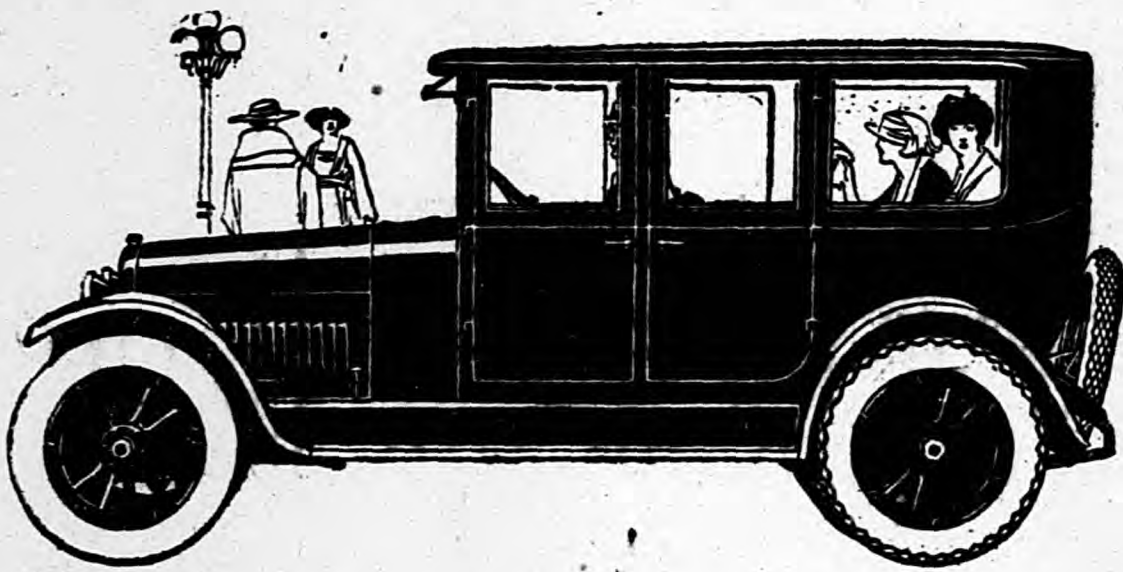

As the drop in cotton prices began almost at the beginning of this season, the big brokers were thus not caught with a great amount of stock on hand. The merchandise dealers, on the contrary, continued their buying right up to November and are even now being loaded up with stock, if paid for before shipment, or with obligations if shipped against documents. This is spelling ruin for some of the largest houses. Many serious failures have occurred, and in Cairo alone three department stores have gone into bankruptcy. It is the general opinion that the worst period has passed. Those who have gone through the crisis, either honorably or dishonorably, will, it is believed, live to see another period of fair business weather.

It is common talk here that in business morality Egypt does not compare very favorably with any other big colonial market. Apologists for the country point to the large number of races engaged in commerce. Syrians and Armenians, Jews from Spain, Russia, Germany, Greece, Smyrna and Palestine; Arabs, Greeks, British, Americans, French and Italians all go to make up the commercial life of the place. It is a five-language country in business. First and most important, of course, is Arabic; then come French, Italian, Greek and English.

Growth of American Trade.

American trade with Egypt has made wonderful progress, considering the fact that before the war this market rarely knew American goods. The bulk of the shipments arriving from home, however, in 1920 consisted of coal from Newport News and flour from the North. American automobiles have captured the market, but no high-priced American cars are in evidence. It is explained that the cheaper to middle-priced American car is a more attractive purchase to the Egyptian and Levantine than similarly priced cars made in England or on the continent. Prompt deliveries, of course, were largely responsible for the American conquest of this field. When vessels from New York or Boston were arriving weekly with consignments of automobiles, only one or two cars a month were coming in from Europe.

American sundries and patent food products have made marked progress. On every hand one sees America's favorite breakfast dishes advertised and displayed. American chewing gum has become the craze of the natives.

The Nash Six Sedan Is an Exceptional Value as Shown by Comparison With Others

Values of beauty, luxury of appointment, great power and road endurance possessed by the Nash Six Sedan with Perfected Valve-in-Head Motor are obtainable in no other closed car within from $300 to $600 of the Nash price.

This great value is immediately apparent in the handsome appearance of its long, graceful, highly polished body of rich and permanent blue, its frosted silver trimmings, the thickness of its upholstery covered with beautiful brown velour, and in its every detail of fitting and coach work.

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 7, 1921

Much of the discussion about women's clothes suggests that some people's minds need a vacuum cleaner.

The kids don't care much about boating and canoeing unless the water is deep enough to get drowned in.

It is claimed that blondes should not wed blondes, but in these times the bride can change over at short notice.

If these bandits keep on banditting they are likely to gain in weight as the result of carrying considerable lead.

President Harding has given two garden parties, but the guests politely declined to take hold and weed the potatoes.

While millions of women are suffering from unemployment, other millions of housewives are trying in vain to find servants.

The rumrunners don't care how many Volstead laws Congress passes provided it forgets to appropriate money to enforce the same.

Some of the merchants who don't believe in advertising, later have to do some of it in the form of the usual bankruptcy notice.

Prize fighting is supposed to encourage manliness, but very few admirers of the sport have ever put on boxing gloves themselves.

Formerly the schools had an examination to show what they had accomplished, but now the ball games demonstrate what has been achieved.

When some people are sentenced to a year in jail at hard labor it is supposed that labor is the only part of the sentence that they consider punishment.

The boys are all demanding to have revolvers, but the best revolver for them to operate are the swiftly wheeling blades of a lawn mower out in the front yard.

After letting weeds and litter accumulate on their vacant lots, real estate owners are often disappointed that the neighborhood looks ugly and people won't buy.

Limit removed on doctor's prescriptions for liquor. They are now consulting the authorities for the remedy for the awful disease scientifically known as dryum thirstitis.

It is proposed that Congress sing the "Star Spangled Banner" every morning. It might be more immediately helpful if they would sing "Work for the Night is Coming."

THE AFTERMATH OF WAR

It is one of the calamities of war that the troubles that develop in its wake often prove worse than those caused by fighting. The reconstruction period following the Civil War produced evils far greater than those that flowed from the original conflict. War sets loose violent passions and these are not quelled when peace is signed.

The worst aftermath of war is hatred. But a certain amount of it can be avoided. The convicted offender usually hates the court and the community that make him pay the penalty of his misdeeds. So Germany may hate the nations that compel her to pay damages for her malicious destruction. If so, it can't be helped.

Another aftermath of war is the spirit of force and violence. The strikers who try to get their way by holding up the business of the community, or the capitalists who seek to obtain unjust terms by starving out their workers, show the war spirit. When men learn that reason and fair debate win more than class conflict, then the aftermath of war will have proved only a passing phase.

THE PASSION OF PROPAGANDA

Formerly reading was a contemplative sort of act. People sat down to enjoy poetry and other works of literature in a mood of untroubled peace. Authors wrote about the beauty of nature and drew entertaining pictures of society. Humorists made graceful fun of life. Reading was a restful pursuit.

Nowadays, whatever you read, is full of the intense desire of some one to convince people of the truth of some idea. People are assailed by a flood of arguments, not merely in reading newspapers, but novels and poetry are loaded with the same propaganda. Social reform, economic revolution, changes in the institution of marriage, new forms of education and every kind of "ism" and cult is hurled at our heads. Many of the ideas are good, but four-fifths of them are cranky.

All this may be a kind of yeasting that indicates some form of growth. But there is so much of all this ferment that it unsettles the minds of a lot of people. They get away from the basic realities of life and forget that propaganda must keep close to facts to accomplish any good.

THE POWER OF MONOPOLY

Samuel Untermyer, who is conducting the investigation at New York into building trade practices, is to ask Congress to compel the imposition of prison sentences on members of convicted building materials combinations. Mr. Untermyer claims that all articles entering into building construction are affected by such combinations, also the products of half of the other industries of the country.

It is almost impossible to frame a law that will hit the people who are oppressing the public and yet exclude others whose acts would be considered legitimate. If the doctors of a city get together and decide that the price of their calls should be increased, no one would say that they ought to be jailed. Yet laws against combinations that some people would enact might hit such a case as theirs.

However there is no doubt that the people are suffering grievously from the operations of combines in many industries and some means of controlling them must be found.

It is not easy to get juries to convict in such cases where it means sending people to jail. Many jurors are sympathetic and the eloquence of lawyers will convince them that their clients have been punished enough and will be good in the future. Then these people may go off and do the same thing again.

It might be a good idea, where the existence of an oppressive combination was established after trial before a United States court, to put such a concern in the hands of a federal receiver so that they would be forced to cease its practices. Juries would be more apt to co-operate with such a plan than with one that would send prominent citizens to jail. If they knew that they would lose control of their own business for a while, concerns guilty of entering profiteering combines would be likely to quit their unfair policies.

Why Suffer From Rheumatism?

Do you know that nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment? The pain may be relieved by applying Chamberlain's Liniment, which makes sleep and rest possible, and that certainly means a great deal to any one afflicted with rheumatism.

Etta M. Mallett vs. William L. Mallett.

No. 3468 Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County.

The object of this suit is to procure a divorce a vinculo matrimonii of the plaintiff from the defendant.

The bill alleges that the plaintiff and defendant were married on the second day of February, nineteen hundred and fifteen, and that they lived together until the month of July, nineteen hundred and seventeen; that although the conduct of the plaintiff towards the defendant was kind, affectionate and above reproach, the said defendant, without any just cause or reason, abandoned and deserted the plaintiff, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the plaintiff and defendant beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that the plaintiff and defendant have no children born to them from said marriage; that the plaintiff is now and for all her life has been a resident of Somerset county, in the State of Maryland, and that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland and resides in the State of Virginia.

It is thereupon this 21st day of May, nineteen hundred and twenty-one, by the subscriber, clerk of the Circuit Court for Somerset county, in Equity, ordered that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Somerset county, Maryland, once in each of four successive weeks before the 25th day of June, nineteen hundred and twenty-one, give notice to the said William L. Mallett, non-resident defendant in said cause, of the object and substance of the bill of complaint, and warning him to be and appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 9th day of July, nineteen hundred and twenty-one, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

THE WEDDING MONTH

June has been from ancient times a favorite month for weddings, and a halo of sentiment surrounds this fraction of the yearly cycle. The reason is no doubt that the month is considered a favorable time for floral decorations. In spite of the tendency of many bridal couples to avoid the expense of elaborate ceremonies, yet most girls want to have a pretty wedding, even if it is a small one. The bride elect's heart is full of imaginative impulse, and it takes the beauty of flowers to express her notion of the occasion. The wedding scene must be a picture and nature must build the framework of floral loveliness in which the spiritual beauty of a loving union is the motive.

Bridegrooms do not commonly care to have the wedding looked at in the light of a picture. They would rather slip out of town to the parsonage of some friendly minister and have the frills and feathers omitted. But innumerable bridegrooms have been dragged behind the triumphal chariot, much as captive kings were paraded before the populace in ancient Greece and Rome.

Large and stylish weddings are sometimes condemned as ostentatious. They are so if people spend an unreasonable amount of money. The dollars fly fast in the hands of some of these spenders. Long ranks of dress suited darkies imported from some distant city have to pass the costly refreshments. Imported floral decorators lavish their orchids and palms, and expensive musicians contribute their art.

But many girls with democratic feeling have done the same thing in a much simpler way. They dislike to ignore any of their friends, but want them all to be there and see their happiness. The decorations are done by amateurs, catering is simply arranged by home town providers, the music is homemade and every one is just as happy. But however the June bride sees fit to manage it, there will be no criticism of her methods. All hearts wish her and her choice the best of luck and all good gifts.

It is claimed the anti-trust laws should have teeth, but about all they seem to have now is tongue.

County Commissioners' NOTICE

Notice is hereby given to all persons having accounts against Somerset county to file the same at the commissioners' office on or before so the said accounts may be provided for in the 1921 levy. All accounts must be properly itemized, dated and probated.

Tuesday, June 14, 1921,

WOMEN MANIPULATORS OF POLITICS

In England, long before women had the suffrage, they figured in politics. They pulled wires of personal and social influence to get political results. In this country women have rarely sought this power. But now that they have the ballot some of them may seek the advancement of themselves and their friends through the social game and feminine charm.

But the men who regard this as an excursion outside of woman's sphere, should be reminded that men have always been playing the same game. The fellow who gets elected because of his enthusiastic hand shaking is as much of a peril as the pretty woman who gets her friends advanced by her coquettish ways.

Pure-Breds Do Pay

That pure-bred livestock is a safe, profit-bringing investment for any farmer has long been the conviction and the message of the great national weekly of farm progress,

The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

In a widely discussed recent series it pointed out, with merciless publicity, dangerous evil practices among certain breeders and distributors of pure-breds. Next week in a constructive article, it tells the general farmer how, in spite of these practices, he can profitably stock up with pure-breds NOW.

William Johnson writes the story. For several months he has been traveling all about the country, interviewing leading breeders and livestock farmers and gathering material for a message that will be helpful to everyone who raises animals. His able, concretely suggestive story deserves your attention.

In the same way other investigators are continually searching out the practices that pay in every other branch of farming. Each week their stories help 800,000 readers. What pure-breds are to farm livestock THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN is to farm literature—the best, the safest, the most profitable.

Rev. and Mrs. George Allen, of Oriole; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barnette and Miss Mary Cannon, of Monie, and Rev. and Mrs. F. W. Dawson were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hamp Dashiell, Beckford Avenue, Friday evening last.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Bradley, of near Westover, had as their week-end guests Mr. Lloyd S. Carter, of Baltimore; Mrs. William Richardson, of Salisbury; Mrs. George D. Taylor, of Tasley, Va.; Mr. Harry Carter, of Perryhewkin, and Mrs. Rowe Powell, of Westover.

Dog licenses for 1921 have been received at the office of the county commissioners and all owners of dogs should procure same on or before July 1, 1921. After that date we are informed the licenses will be placed in the hands of a special officer for collection.

Mr. Al. A. Garner, New York's celebrated soloist, will sing "Up in Mary's Attic" and other popular selections in conjunction with the showing of the season's greatest comedy sensation "Up in Mary's Attic" at the Auditorium next Thursday night, June 9th.

Mrs. Leon Eakin, of Wilmington, Del., is visiting her sister-in-law, Mrs. Ashton P. Mills.

Mr. James A. McAllen began last Friday to lay a single course of bricks around the frame of the new Baptist Church on Prince William street. This will give the lower part of building the appearance of being of solid brick with a cement foundation, and when completed will be a very attractive church edifice.

During building operations of the State road through Princess Anne the road north of the river has been closed and persons coming to town from that direction are compelled to make a short detour to the west, or they may park their cars on the north side of the river and walk a distance of 200 yards to the business center of the town.

News has reached us that Rev. L. A. Bennett, one of the most successful evangelists in the Methodist conference, suffered a slight stroke of paralysis a few days ago at Indianapolis, Ind. He was conducting a meeting in a western city with pronounced success when stricken. Later reports are to the effect that he is improving. Rev. Bennett is an uncle of Mr. L. Atwood Bennett, of Salisbury.

The many friends throughout the county of Mr. A. E. Tull, of Marion Station, will be glad to learn that, although not entirely out of danger, his condition has improved sufficiently to allow him, with the assistance of his nurse, to walk from his bed to a chair, in which he sits a short time each day. It will be remembered that Mr. Tull was seriously injured by a vicious horse about six weeks ago.

Rev. Clarence True Wilson, D. D., general secretary of the Board of Temperance and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Washington, D. C., will be in town next Sunday, June 12th, and will preach both morning and evening at Antioch M. E. Church. Morning subject, "Pagan Intrusions on American Democracy." Dr. Wilson lived in Princess Anne when a boy and his many friends will be delighted to see him and hear him preach. Dr. Wilson will lecture at Fairmount M. E. Church on Monday night, June 13th.

The Shoreland Club was entertained at the Washington Hotel last Thursday afternoon by Mrs. J. D. Wallop. The following members were present: Mrs. W. A. N. Bowland, Mrs. Frank M. Cline, Mrs. R. F. Duer, Mrs. J. E. Holland, Mrs. H. F. Lankford, Mrs. W. O. Lankford, Jr., Mrs. Earle B. Polk, Mrs. J. A. Powell, Mrs. H. C. Robertson, Mrs. J. G. Scott, Mrs. Charles Fitzgerald, Mrs. T. J. Smith, Mrs. J. T. Taylor, Jr., Mrs. R. P. Thompson, Miss Berenice Thompson. Mrs. Franklin P. Waller was a guest of the club. Miss Ray Stewart will entertain the Shoreland Club on Thursday afternoon, June 16th.

The attention of our readers is directed to the advertisement of Western Maryland College appearing in this issue. This institution, which is located at Westminster, Md., begins its fifty-fifth year September 20, 1921. It has made a record for thoroughness and efficiency, not excelled by any in the State. Its beautiful location in the highlands of Maryland, its excellent equipment in buildings and grounds, its well-trained faculty, its up-to-date courses of study and its charges kept down to reasonable terms make it an attractive place to get an education.

Attention Ex-Service Men
Sergeant Thomas Moore, D. E. M. L., will be in Princess Anne on Thursday, June 9th, to fill out applications of all ex-service men for "Victory Medals," to which they are entitled. This doesn't cost you anything and the government wants every ex-service man to have one. Bring your discharge, to Mr. F. D. Layfield's store between the hours of 7 p. m. and 10 p. m. and file your application for this "Victory Medal."

The Home Of The Soul
In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach, most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter. [Advertisement.]

Westover Items

June 4—Miss Mary Coard is visiting friends in Virginia.

The Ladies' Aid Society was pleasantly entertained by Mrs. E. R. Fooks on Thursday last. The parsonage committee reported having had paper, paint and furnishings to the amount of $80 placed in the parsonage since last meeting. The society has also purchased an oil stove for the parsonage since the beginning of conference year.

Mrs. E. E. Handy and little daughter, Jane, have returned to Westover after spending two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Handy.

Mrs. George Jones, who has been very ill, is somewhat better at this writing.

School closed on Tuesday with a treat of ice cream, strawberries and cake from the teachers to the pupils. The girls and boys of Miss Lankford's room gave a picnic on the lawn at "Beechwood," the home of Mr. W. J. Jones. The following pupils received certificates of promotion to the eighth grade: Marie Fooks, Edward Bozman, Lucille Jones and Lucretia Chamberlin.

Miss Bernice Layfield will be the guest of friends in Baltimore this week.

Mr. E. D. Long is spending a few weeks with his daughter, Mrs. Claude W. Smink.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Chamberlin, of Chester, Pa., spent the Memorial Day vacation with Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Chamberlin.

Mr. E. J. Chamberlin and family motored to Midway, Del., Sunday last.

Mrs. I. Thurston Dryden, of Salisbury, was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Brittingham, the past week.

Children's Day will be observed by St. Paul's M. E. Sunday School tomorrow, June 6th. The musical program will be conducted by Mrs. Paul Brittingham. Mesdames E. Dennett Long and A. A. Bichell, Misses Margaret Bissett and Bernice Layfield were a committee on entertainment.

Mrs. Lillian Mills Blizard, of Baltimore, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Robert Dryden.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Rue and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Coard motored to Virginia Sunday last and spent the day with friends.

Mr. Harry Keenan, of "Westover Farm," drove his car to Cambridge, Ohio, last week. He will be accompanied on his return by his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Keenan.

The Ladies' Aid Society will hold an open air festival the third week in June. They invite all their old friends and hope to see new ones. Watch for the date.

Recommends Chamberlain's Tablets

"Chamberlain's Tablets have been used by my husband and myself off and on for the past five years. When my husband goes away from home he always takes a bottle of them along with him. Whenever I have that heavy feeling after eating, or feel dull and played out, I take one or two of Chamberlain's Tablets and they fix me up fine," writes Mrs. Newton Vreeland, Nine, N. Y. Take these tablets when troubled with constipation or indigestion and they will do you good.

SEND MARKET NEWS BY RADIO

Wireless Service Extended by United States Bureau Aided by Postal Department.

EXPERIMENTS ARE SUCCESS

Amateur Operators Expected to Receive and Distribute Reports From Central Stations—Give Prices on Principal Products.

Washington. — The radio market news service of the United States bureau of markets has been expanded to include the sending of agricultural market reports by wireless from Washington, D. C., Bellefonte, Pa., St. Louis and Omaha, at stated periods each business day. This increased radio market news service is made possible, it is announced, by the co-operation of the United States Post Office department which, through its air mail service has offered to send certain agricultural reports of the bureau of markets at specified hours from its wireless stations at the cities named.

"On December 15, 1920, the bureau of markets inaugurated an experimental wireless market news service at Washington," a statement from the bureau of markets reads, "for the purpose of determining the practicability of sending daily agricultural market reports to farmers by wireless. Reports of prices and conditions of leading fruits and vegetables, live stock and meats, grain, hay and feed at important national markets were prepared, and at 5 p. m. each day were sent by wireless, from the United States bureau of standards' Washington radio station to farmers and other agricultural interests within a 200-mile radius of Washington.

Proves Successful: "Largely as the result of the co-operation of some of the radio experts connected with the bureau of standards, the experiment proved successful and the offer of the Post Office department to send similar reports from some of its wireless stations was gladly accepted. The sending of reports from Washington which had formerly been handled by the bureau of standards was transferred to the Post Office department on April 5.

"The tentative schedule for sending reports is as follows: From Omaha a complete report of the Omaha live stock market will be sent at 11:15 each day (central standard time), and 11:45 a. m. a complete report on the Kansas City live stock market. At 2:15 p. m. a grain and potatoes report, giving prices and conditions at the Chicago, Minneapolis, Kansas City and Winnipeg grain markets, and similar information at the Chicago and other potato markets, will be dispatched. At 5 p. m. a daily 'radio marketgram' will be sent, covering national market conditions on live stock, fruits and vegetables, grain, hay, feed and seed.

Products Covered. "The reports to be sent from St. Louis are a national stock yards live stock market report at 11 a. m. (central standard time), a Chicago live stock market report at 11:30 a. m., a grain and potato report at 2 p. m., and the radio marketgram at 7 p. m. From the Washington and Bellefonte stations will be dispatched a radio marketgram giving a general daily summary of eastern market prices on live stock and meats, fruits and vegetables, grain, hay, feed and seed, at 5 p. m. and 7 p. m., respectively, (eastern standard time). The weather report from the local office of the United States weather bureau will be appended to the forenoon live stock report.

"These reports are intended to be received by amateur radio operators within the territory covered by the 200-mile radius of each of the four wireless stations named. There are some 2,500 licensed wireless operators in the area covered, and the bureau of markets hopes that as many of these operators as can conveniently do so will receive the reports and see that they are placed in the hands of farmers and other agricultural interests as soon as possible after the information is received.

"Each operator indicating a desire to receive and distribute the market reports will be supplied with blank forms, so that it will be necessary for him simply to fill in longhand the prices and the brief comments on general market conditions."

$1,830 KEEPS FAMILY A YEAR

Will Support Worker, Wife and Three Children, Wisconsin Figures Show.

Madison, Wis. — It costs $1,830.71 a year for a workingman and his wife and a family of three children to buy the actual necessities of life and to maintain health and comfort, according to figures made public by B. G. Becker, Wisconsin commissioner of immigration.

The quantities of food and clothing needed are based upon recent surveys made of the Department of Labor in eleven American cities, and the prices are those paid at Madison, Wis., one store checked against another. Goods of only very ordinary quality are considered. The children of this typical family are a boy of 12, a girl of 9 and a boy of 2.

Love and Machinery. The man who does not love his farm machinery never ought to have any. He ought to be compelled to do his plowing with a crooked stick and brush his grain with the top of a tree, because he will let his tools rot and rust out in the fence corner and laugh at you when you tell him there is a better way. Love takes care of the plows and binders and the threshing machines. Nothing else will. —Farm Life.

Really Not Important. An investigator claims to have discovered in some dusty archives that back in the days when the Pilgrims landed each person coming to America from England was required to bring with them eight bushels of corn meal, two bushels of oatmeal, two gallons of vinegar and a gallon each of oil and brandy. In view of the fact that nothing of importance hinges on the truth or falsity of this statement, not much time need be consumed to ascertain whether this is truth or fiction.

Brown Coal. Germany expects brown coal to make her rich again. The beds of this newly discovered fuel are only a few feet below the surface of the ground, so that the material can be taken out with dredges. No shafts will be required; no timbering, no costly machinery, and no explosives. Of course "brown coal" is only coal in the making, with about one-third the heating value of bituminous. It contains much less carbon than the latter, more ash, and a good deal of water.

NO LONGER OLD AT THIRTY

Women Have Proved Conclusively That Age Is Not at All a Matter of Years.

Perhaps women who are not at all sensitive about their age are still in a minority. But their number is growing. In almost any gathering where women chatter pleasantly and with some intimacy about things which interest them you find at least one woman who cheerfully admits that she is not thirty-five, but forty-five, or that it is a very long time since she was thirty.

One of the tragic conventions which have helped to wreck women's lives is this stupid tradition that at any given age a woman gets old. Years ago most women celebrated their thirtieth birthdays with a sense of depression. With greater common sense, women at least began to see that even after thirty they might enjoy life, and that the games and amusements and joys which are possible at twenty are no less possible at forty.

Today there lingers this ancient superstition that if you have reached a certain age you must not admit the fact. But it will not endure long. Now that we hear of a woman of ninety playing really capable golf, of women past fifty banding themselves together in cheery fashion as golfing veterans, of women of every and any age enjoying life, it will become unfashionable to conceal one's age. Beulah and Her Chicken Overcoats

By HAROLD SINCLAIRE.

(©, 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

Miss Beulah Jones was cutting up a cake with a piece of silk thread to prove its lightness, as there came a knock at the door. She passed through the sitting room with many a hurried reach for scattered garments and fragments of cloth, in a hopeless effort at tidying up.

"I do hope it isn't the minister, or anybody but some neighbor," fluttered the neat and circumspect little lady.

"It's only me, Beulah," spoke the bluff voice of giantlike John Moore, her distant cousin. "About once a year I get around here. Why don't you ever come and see us, Beulah?"

"You know I never go anywhere—now," she said, briefly.

"Well," spoke John, plumping down into an easy chair. "I've heard some wonderful things about those pet chickens of yours, and I've come to find out about them. Well! Well! Well!"

His ruddy face began to pucker comically, and he let out a great guffaw. "What are you laughing at, John Moore?" demanded Miss Beulah, with severity.

Her cousin could not reply for some time. Waddling around in the chicken yard a full score of Plymouth Rock chickens were parading proudly, attired in close-fitting overcoats.

"It's a great idea," said John, "but it's the funniest thing I ever saw."

"I don't see anything very funny about it," resented Miss Jones. "Some of the poor things froze up last winter. They shan't this."

John Moore grinned the harder as he strode to the window and again looked out. John Moore fancied he saw something spectacular in it all. "I've got an idea, Beulah," he said. "I'm looking for a novelty, and that's what brought me here. I want to buy those chickens."

Miss Beulah regarded her cousin sharply, and then suspiciously.

"They're not for sale," she declared at once.

"Then I want to borrow them—rent them, we'll call it. We are working up a procession," John went on to explain; "torchlights, music and all that. We're going to have a hay-rack, showing prosperity—heaps of apples, corn, goddess of liberty and the like. I want to scatter those winter-clothed pets of yours over the load. It will be a great catch."

It proved a greater catch than the ingenious committeeman had expected. It was two days later when Miss Jones saw a wagon draw up to the yard. Her pets, well fed and lively, were being returned safe and sound to their coops, as her cousin had promised.

The weekly paper had just arrived. Miss Jones had flushed in a startled way as she read "the news." It appeared that the overcoated chicks had been the novelty of the procession. The district had a great many chicken farms. The home display had won over this interest, they had voted for Allen Parsons, and that candidate was elected.

Allen Parsons! How that name awoke painful memories in the heart of the recluse! She had drawn open a drawer in the old-fashioned secretary and had taken thence a sheet of paper, closely written over, and a photograph. The latter was a phototype of the portrait of the successful candidate in the paper. There was a knock at the door. Miss Jones opened it to face—the successful candidate.

"I had to call to thank you for the great support your pets gave me," spoke the stalwart, fine-looking visitor. "Why, Miss Jones—Beulah!"

At sight of the man she had loved, still loved in secret, her estranged fiancé, Miss Jones paled, tottered, and Allen had to help her to a chair in the sitting room. As he started to leave her his face fell upon the photograph and the letter. His eyes dilated as he traced a line or two in the latter.

"Beulah," he said, his lips set kindly but determined, "has this letter anything to do with your rejection of my suit two years ago?"

"It has everything to do with it," faltered poor Beulah. "Can you look at it and wonder why? You wrote it." "Yes, I wrote it, but as a model for a friend who wished to propose to a young lady in another town. How did it come into your possession?"

"Miss Simmons brought it to me—she said she found it."

"Stole it, more likely," asserted Allen. "My old landlady and a mischief-maker! Oh, Beulah! And has this foolish misunderstanding kept us so cruelly apart all of this time?"

John Moore, coming into the house to see his cousin, halted, stared, stood rooted to the spot, and then retreated softly with a great chuckle of satisfaction.

For Beulah was resting confidently in the strong, protecting arms of Allen Parsons. All had been explained—and the feathery campaigners had done it!

Just So.

"I don't mince language." "Maybe it wouldn't hurt to mince it a little."

"Huh?"

"You may have to eat your words."

Queer.

"Time is money, you know." "Yes, but what puzzles me is why fellows with plenty of time on their hands so often ask you for a loan."

ARE THE JAPANESE REALLY EFFICIENT?

Not If You Judge Them By Their Telephones, Says Julian Street

Although the Western World has been taken for granted that the Japanese have reached an enviable position in the world because of an alleged efficiency in all matters, a close inspection of actual facts shows up the Japanese as almost childish. Writing for McClure's Magazine in an article entitled, "Are the Japanese Efficient?" Julian Street, noted traveler and writer, gives many instances of stupid Japanese inefficiency, particularly as to telegraphs, telephones and transportation.

Tokyo, with a transportation problem which ought easily to be solved, has utterly inadequate street car service," says Mr. Street. "The rush hour there is only saved from being as terrible as the rush hour in New York by the lack of subterranean features.

"But it is in all matters having to do with communications that Japanese inefficiency is most strikingly brought to the notice of strangers. The postal service is poor, the cable service is expensive and absurdly slow (when I was in Japan it took about ten days to cable to America and get an answer back), and the telephone service is unbelievably awful. All these, like the railroads, are owned and operated by the Government.

"It is like opera bouffe. Though the demand for new telephones far exceeds the supply, the government makes no appreciable effort to remedy the situation. Every year an absurdly small number of lines is added to the existing system. These are assigned by lot among those who have applied for them. Thus, if a man is lucky in the draw, he may get a telephone within two or three years. But I know one gentleman in Tokyo who was not lucky in the draw. At the ripe age of sixty-seven he applied to the government for an addition office telephone. The instrument was installed shortly after he had celebrated his eightieth birthday. Long may he live to use it!

"If one be in a hurry to have a telephone put in, one does not apply to the authorities, but attacks the problem in a manner more direct—either through a telephone broker or through advertising. Thus one can get in contact with a person wishing to sell an installation and a number. The number must, however, be in the exchange serving the district in which the telephone is to be placed.

"Though this is a very expensive method, it is the one usually employed in Tokyo and other large cities. A telephone for the business district of the capital may cost as much as twelve hundred dollars, but in a residence district it will be considerably cheaper—five hundred dollars or less.

"A curious detail of this business is that low numbers bring the highest price in the open market. This, I was informed, is because green operators, in process of being broken in, sit at that end of the central switchboard at which the high numbers invariably occur, thus guaranteeing the owners of high numbers a grade of service calculated to drive them to the madhouse."

Long Pigeon Flight.

One of the longest pigeon flights on record will be attempted from Edmonton, Alberta, to San Antonio, Tex. Arrangements for the flight have been made between the Edmonton Homing club and the San Antonio Homing club. The distance is 2,000 miles.

Between 40 and 50 homing pigeons will be shipped from San Antonio and liberated there by W. Lees, president of the Edmonton Homing club.

The longest flight on record, according to information, was from Rome to Liverpool, a distance of more than a thousand miles, over difficult country.—Brooklyn Eagle.

France Testing New Roads.

Contrary to past practice, composition road surfaces are being put down by the French highway authorities in the Rhone valley. At Givors a test is being made of two miles of an Italian composition. This has a cement basis and is guaranteed for 15 years. The road authorities have expressed their willingness to experiment with competitive types of road material. Of 38,000 miles of roads that required repairs at the time of the armistice, 18,620 miles have been greatly improved, and 2,200 miles have been completely repaired.—Compressed Air Magazine.

Paris War Library.

Over 300,000 volumes and almost as many pamphlets, etc., have been collected by the French government, and a building will be erected having five miles of shelving. The future historian will probably die in the first mile. The collection of manuscripts, photographs and war records is appalling as to numbers, and there seems to be no limit to the gifts of collectors. In this country Princeton university and the University of California, are especially strong on war material.—Scientific American.

SHOWS DECLINE IN SHIPBUILDING

Lloyd's Register Reports Total of 7,086,766 Ship Tons in Yards of World.

BIG DROP IN U. S. IN YEAR

Total Building Here, 1,102,000 Tons, Is Only About 40 Per Cent of Record Year Ago—Japan Shows Small Gain.

New York.—More than 7,000,000 gross tons of merchant vessels are reported as being in the shipyards of the world, says a statement by Lloyd's Register. Compared with the total on January 1, the 7,086,766 tons, to be exact, represents a decline of less than 100,000 tons, nearly 1 1/2 per cent.

The actual decline in shipbuilding activity has been much sharper in the past three months than appears on the surface, says the statement. The total reported for Great Britain, 3,798,586 gross tons, is a gain of 89,000 tons over the January 1 record, but there has been marked reduction in the volume of tonnage on which work is actually proceeding, Lloyd's Register finds.

Work Suspended.

"Included in the total in the hands of British shipyards are 497,000 gross tons of vessels on which work has been suspended, and an additional 350,000 tons, the completion of which has been postponed, chiefly owing to the strike of the shipjoiners, which has interfered with the fitting out of a number of large liners and other vessels," the report continues. "Taking this total of 847,000 tons into consideration, therefore, the total of new ships on which work is proceeding in British shipyards is 2,951,586 tons, or about 20 per cent less than the total at the beginning of the year.

"Additional indications of the conditions in the British shipbuilding are furnished by the returns of launchings and new work begun during the first quarter of this year. New keels represented only 381,000 gross tons, in comparison with 508,000 for the last quarter of 1920, and 701,000 for the quarter ended April 1, 1920. Launchings during the quarter just ended represented 431,000 tons, as against 578,000 tons for the last three months of 1920. Even with the delays due to strikes and other causes, therefore, work is being completed more rapidly than new work is coming on."

Decline in America.

Returns from American shipyards show that the decline which has been in effect more than a year continues, Lloyd's says. The total construction reported under way on April 1 is 1,102,000 tons, only slightly more than 40 per cent of the American total a year ago. The aggregate for all other countries except the United States, Great Britain and Germany (for the last-named no official returns are available) shows a gain of about 25,000 tons over the January total, Lloyd's estimates.

"The apparent world decrease in shipbuilding activity during the last quarter, therefore, has been not far from a million tons, a decline of about 12 1/2 per cent," the statement says.

"In some directions, however, gains are shown in the volume of construction under way. These are most marked in the case of France, which now stands next to the United Kingdom and the United States as a shipbuilding nation, having displaced Holland during the last quarter. A year ago France, with only 240,000 tons under way, was led by Japan, Italy and Holland, and was constructing only 9,000 tons more than the British dominions. Today, with 427,000 tons building, she has nearly two and a half times the total for the British dominions, and leads Japan and Italy by 133,000 tons and 75,000 tons, respectively.

"Japan shows a small gain in the total under construction, as compared with the previous quarter, and Italy, Holland and the British dominions slight decreases."

Cemetery for Speeders.

Middletown, N. Y.—On either side of Otterkill bridge, on the state road between Goshen and Chester, the board of trade of Goshen has erected large signs bearing the following inscription: "Private cemetery across the bridge for reckless drivers." The sign is in black and white, decorated with skull and crossbones. As a result of reckless driving by autoists, many accidents have occurred about the spot.

Negro Axman Fell Asleep While on Trial for Life

While being tried in court at Lake Charles, La., for his life, Joe Berry, negro, alleged axman, fell asleep. He was awakened by order of the judge. A half hour later the jury, after seven minutes' deliberation, returned a verdict of guilty, which carries the death penalty. Berry was charged with slaying an aged one-legged negro and also chopping an old woman and a boy with the ax.

HAS CHAMP FOUND THE SAME?

The Answer Is Found in the Straight-forward Statement of a Champ Resident

We have been reading week after week in the local press of Princess Anne citizens who have been rid of distressing kidney and bladder troubles by Doan's Kidney Pills, and we have often wondered whether the same high opinion of this medicine is to be found in our neighboring towns. This frank and earnest statement by a well-known and respected resident of Champ will set this doubt at rest.

W. W. Shores, Champ, Md., says: "My kidneys caused me to suffer with severe backaches a great deal. When I stooped, it was all I could do to straighten up. Colds settled on my kidneys and made my condition worse and my kidneys acted irregularly. I used Doan's Kidney Pills from Smith & Co's drug store and they soon fixed me up by strengthening my back and relieving all kidney trouble."

ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS

State Scholarships in Engineering Courses

Entrance Examinations for the School of Engineering, as well as for the College of Arts and Sciences, will be held in the Civil Engineering Building, Homewood, Monday to Saturday, June 20th to 26th, 1921, beginning at 9 a. m., each day, under the auspices of the College Entrance Examination Board.

Applications for Scholarships in the School of Engineering, established under the provisions of the laws of Maryland, Chapter 90, 1912, will now be received. If there is more than one applicant for particular scholarship, a competitive examination must be taken Friday, September 23rd, 1921, beginning at 9 a. m. Appointments will be made soon thereafter.

Each Legislative District of Baltimore City and each county of the State, with the exceptions of Cecil, Harford, Howard and Queen Anne's, will be entitled to one or more scholarships for the year 1921-1922, in addition to those which have already been assigned. In the four counties mentioned above, all the available scholarships have been awarded.

Under the provisions of the Act of Assembly, the county and city Scholarships in the School of Engineering are awarded only to deserving students whose financial circumstances are such that they are unable to obtain an education in engineering unless free tuition be granted to them. The scholarships entitle the holders to free tuition, free use of text-books, and exemption from all regular fees. One of the scholarships in each county and in each legislative district of the city carries also the sum of $200, and is known as a "Senatorial Scholarship." Senatorial scholarships may be awarded for 1921-22 in Baltimore City (first, second, third and fourth districts), Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Calvert, Kent, Montgomery, Somerset, Prince George's and Washington counties.

Scholarships may be awarded to graduates of Loyola College, St. John's College, Washington College, Western Maryland College, Maryland Agricultural College, Mt. St. Mary's College, Rock Hill College.

Three scholarships may be awarded "At Large."

Applicants should address The Registrar, The Johns Hopkins University, the blank forms of application and for information giving information as to examination, award of scholarships and matters of procedure. The next examination will be held on October 4th, 1921.

WRITER MUST HAVE STYLE

Without It, Declares Arnold Bennett, He Will Be Unable to Get His Message Understood.

You cannot have good matter with bad style. Examine the point more closely. A man wishes to convey a fine idea to you. He employs a form of words. That form of words is his style. Having read, you say: "Yes, this idea is fine." The writer has therefore achieved his end. But in what imaginable circumstances can you say: "Yes, this idea is fine, but the style is not fine?" The sole medium of communication between you and the author has been the form of words. The fine idea has reached you. How? In the words, by the words. Hence the fineness must be in the words. You may say, superiorly: "He has expressed himself clumsily, but I can see what he means." By what right? By something in the words, in the style. That something is fine. Moreover, if the style is clumsy, are you sure that you can see what he means? You cannot be quite sure. And at any rate, you cannot see distinctly. The "matter" is what actually reaches you, and it must necessarily be affected by the style.—Arnold Bennett.

Secretary of the Navy Edwin Denby was at one time a member of the United States Marine Corps. Now he is one of the foremost members of President Harding's cabinet, as every one knows. But does everyone know this:

On the muster roll of the Marine Corps today there are thirty-six men bearing the name of "Davis," fourteen bearing the name "Wallace," eleven whose surname is "Hughes," six "Hoo-vers," two by the name of "Weeks," one "Fall," one "Daugherty," one "Hays" and one "Mellon." Not to mention a "Harding," whose home is in Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMAN OF OLD SCHOOL GONE

Mr. Elijah S. Ward Dies At His Home Near Marion Station

Mr. Elijah S. Ward died at his late residence near Marion Station last Wednesday of heart trouble, in the 85th year of his age. The deceased is survived by one son (Mr. Martimer A. Ward, of Marion) and four daughters (Mrs. Kate Adams, Mrs. Jennie Howeth, and Miss Daisy Ward, of Marion Station, and Mrs. May Lowe, of Baltimore).

Mr. Ward was a gentleman of the old school and a retired farmer. He was more or less active, until the day he was stricken, assisting his son in the management of the farm. No one enjoyed more than did he the doing of little acts of kindness as he journeyed along life's pathway. He was deservedly popular and universally esteemed by all who knew him. He was perhaps the oldest member of Trinity Methodist Protestant Church, to which he was sincerely devoted, attending the morning service there on the last Sunday of his lifetime.

Funeral services were held in Trinity Church, at Marion Station, last Thursday afternoon and were attended by a large circle of friends, being conducted by the pastor, Rev. George Hines, assisted by Rev. E. L. Bunce, of Pocomoke City. The pallbearers were Messrs. Paul Coulbourne, Lee Carver, E. W. Tull, J. Stanley Adams, A. A. Whittington and S. F. Miles. Interment was in St. Paul's cemetery, near Marion Station.

Potato Growers' Meeting

An important meeting of potato growers will be held this (Tuesday) afternoon, June 14th, at 2 o'clock, in the court house in Princess Anne. The object of the meeting is to consider the marketing of early potatoes.

Arrangements have been made to have the Wicomico Farmers' Association operate at Princess Anne and Loretto stations. This association is being operated similar to the Eastern Shore Produce Exchange and has already done a $225,000 business in strawberries for the farmers of Wicomico county. Nearly 1000 farmers in the adjoining county are members of the association and the farmers in this county will have an opportunity to join the association or ship their produce as non-members under the same conditions as the farmers of Wicomico county.

The officers of the association and a number of the leading farmers and business men of Wicomico county will be present this afternoon to discuss the work of the association. All farmers in this vicinity should attend and hear the plans for marketing potatoes and other produce.

Mr. H. A. Nock, secretary and treasurer of the Wicomico association, said last week that since the co-operative organization has been actively operating, the business it has done has amounted to nearly a quarter of a million dollars. He also said that the association has handled for the growers of Wicomico county about 45,000 packages of goods since March 1, and that all money due to the agents of the association has been paid.

Leaguers The Victors

In a weird game last Thursday at Princess Anne, in which the heavy hitting and champion plays of the Princess Anne Leaguers featured, the Parkesley team, of Virginia, was defeated by a score of 10 to 4.

On Friday the foot of the Virginians again slipped. In their first appearance this season at Princess Anne the Leaguers laid out the Atlantic Stars by a score of 9 to 6.

Princess Anne should have a good team this summer, but to organize and maintain a team it requires money. Snow Hill has raised $1,500 and Pocomoke City has raised $2,000 for this purpose. Salisbury has a team and there are several teams on the Eastern Shore of Virginia. A committee interested in organizing a Princess Anne team has estimated that we can have a good team this summer provided the sum of $500 can be raised in advance, for the purpose. Raise the money before other teams hire our best players.

The Princess Anne Baptist Church has been very fortunate in securing the services of the Rev. J. A. Tumblin, who has just graduated from the Louisville (Ky.) Baptist Seminary, as a supply pastor for about four months, when he will then accept an appointment by the Foreign Missionary Board as a missionary to Brazil. Services will be held every Sunday morning—Bible school at 10 and preaching service at 11 o'clock—in the Court House until the new church building, which is nearing completion, is ready for occupancy. Everybody is invited and welcome to attend these services.

Look At The Date On Pink Label

The little pink label on your paper does more than bring this paper to you faithfully week after week, giving you the news of your friends, your county, of your State. It tells you at a glance just how many more weeks will elapse before your subscription expires. Look at the label today and see if you are in arrears and renew your subscription. By doing this you will render a great service to the Marylander and Herald and at the same time will assure yourself of the satisfaction of receiving the paper promptly and without interruption. If the label shows that your subscription is out or in arrears, mail a money order or check for $1.50, as all subscriptions must be paid in advance.

William C. Hall Dies Suddenly

Mr. William C. Hall died suddenly in the General and Marine Hospital, Crisfield, Monday afternoon of last week. Mr. Hall had been suffering from a severe attack of tonsillitis the week previous, which developed into quinsy. His condition became serious on Monday and his physicians advocated the placing of a tube in his windpipe to keep the throat from closing and it was for this purpose that he was taken to the hospital. Mr. Hall walked from the automobile into the hospital, and was seated in a chair in the operating room preparing to undergo the operation when he collapsed and fell to the floor, dead. Efforts to revive him were futile.

William C. Hall was a native of Brinkley's district, and a son of Mr. John W. Hall, a prominent resident of Marion. He was 46 years of age, and went to Crisfield more than 25 years ago, just after completing his education. He was a prominent Republican and took a leading interest in Republican politics of the county and state. He served several years as a member of the Republican State Central Committee for Somerset county, and was high up in the councils of his party. He was also a member of Chesapeake Lodge, No. 141, A. F. & A. M., Crisfield Lodge of Elks, Modern Woodmen of America and other fraternal organizations.

Mr. Hall is survived by his widow, who before her marriage was Miss Josie Cullen, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Jacob Cullen, of Crisfield. He is also survived by one daughter, Miss Bernice Hall, instructor of Domestic Science in Crisfield High School. His father and several brothers also survive him.

Funeral services were held from his late home on upper Main street, Crisfield, Thursday afternoon, with the Masonic Lodge officiating, and interment was in Crisfield cemetery.

Of Interest To Liberty Bond Holders

A double pay-day for holders of Liberty bonds falls due on June 15th when the semi-annual interest on the first and fifth loans come due. In Maryland the total subscription to the first loan was $37,018,750 and on this the interest will amount to more than $740,000. The total subscription in this State to the Victory loan was $62,690,550 and on this the semi-annual interest will be in excess of $1,250,000.

It is suggested by the United States Treasury that if Liberty bond interest is reinvested in government savings securities the income yield on the original investment will be materially increased.

In this federal reserve district the amount subscribed to the first and Victory loans exceeded $334,000,000. On this the interest payment, due June 15th, will be more than $6,690,000.

Pusey-Griffith Wedding

On Wednesday evening, June 1st, at St. Paul's English Lutheran Church, Washington, D. C., occurred the wedding of Miss Hazel E. Griffith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Griffith, of Washington, to Mr. Elmer Mack Pusey, son of Mr. Samuel Mack Pusey, of East Princess Anne district. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. John T. Huddle, pastor of the church, assisted by the Rev. Dr. C. Dougherty, of Pittsburgh, Pa. After an extended trip through the White Mountains Mr. and Mrs. Pusey will reside in Washington, where Mr. Pusey holds an exalted position in the National Red Cross headquarters. Mrs. Warren Pusey, of Princess Anne, a sister of the groom, attended the wedding.

While attempting to stop a runaway horse attached to a light wagon, Mr. Harry B. Wherrett was knocked unconscious by the horse and run over by the wagon last Friday morning. Bystanders picked him up, carried him home and sent for a physician, who pronounced no bones broken. Mr. Wherrett sustained injuries about the body and a fracture of two ribs. It is expected, however, that he will recover shortly.

GAIN OVER 1920 WHEAT SEEN

Winter And Spring Crop Estimated At 830,000,000 Bushels

The country's combined winter and spring wheat crop promises to be 43,000,000 bushels larger than last year's based on forecasts of production announced last week by the Department of Agriculture. The total production estimate is 830,000,000 bushels. There will be smaller crops of oats, barley and hay than were harvested last year, while the apple crop will not be half so large as that of 1920, and the peach crop will be much smaller than last year.

Winter wheat which a month ago promised a crop of 629,000,000 bushels came through May in bad shape in several of the important producing States, and as a result the forecast of production showed a reduction of 51,000,000 bushels, bringing the total to the same quantity as produced last year. Kansas, premier wheat State, reported a decline in the condition of the crop from 84 per cent. of a normal on May 1, to 60 on June 1, which resulted in a reduction in that State's forecast by 33,000,000 bushels. In Nebraska the condition dropped from 92 to 75 and in Oklahoma from 84 to 75 per cent.

The spring wheat crop forecast indicates 251,000,000 bushels, or 43,000,000 bushels more than last year's crop. The condition of the crop is better than a year ago, while the average is somewhat smaller than last year. An acre yield of 13.9 bushels is forecast, compared with 10.8 bushels last year.

Hay production is estimated at 101,000,000 tons, as compared with 108,000,000 tons last year. The apple crop is expected to yield 108,000,000 bushels, that of last year was 240,000,000 bushels, and a yield of 31,700,000 bushels of peaches is forecast, as compared with 43,700,000 bushels last year.

"A Child For Sale"

"A Child for Sale," a powerful drama, setting forth the evils of profiteering, will be the attraction at the Auditorium next Thursday and Friday, June 16th and 17th. Special children's matinee on Friday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock.

The story was written and produced by Ivan Abramson. The story is laid in the Greenwich village section of New York City, where Charles Stoddard, a struggling painter, strives to earn a livelihood for his wife and two children. His home is owned by William Harrison, a wealthy philanthropist, who, while he gives with one hand grinds higher rents from his poor tenants with the other.

Stoddard's wife dies, and he is forced to sell his baby daughter to a wealthy widow, but the pain of the separation is too great and he obtains his little girl back.

In the meantime Stoddard's little boy is picked up on the streets for begging and is taken to Harrison's pretexts. There his father comes for him and a stormy scene ensues when Stoddard upbraids the hypocritical philanthropist.

When little Ruth contracts scarlet fever a kind-hearted doctor brings the little boy to the Harrison home. There Mrs. Harrison questions him and learns that Stoddard is her son by a former marriage which she has kept secret from her husband. The story comes to a thrilling climax when Stoddard saves the life of his landlady, and Mrs. Harrison tells her husband of her long hidden secret.

Hear and see little Peggy, who will appear in person, both nights and afternoons.

Eastern Shore Society Get Medals

Seventy-one members of the Eastern Shore Society of Baltimore who were in the service of the United States during the World War were awarded bronze medals at a meeting held last Wednesday night at the Southern Hotel. The address of presentation was delivered by Maj.-Gen. Adelbert Crnkite, commander of the Third Army Corps area of the United Army, with headquarters at Fort Howard.

The medals are of bronze, supported by a ribbon of orange and black. On one side is the seal of the organization and on the other the name of the wearer. Among those receiving the decorations from Somerset county were: Sergeant F. Stanley Porter, Private Joshua W. Miles, Jr., Lieutenant B. L. Lankford, Chief Boatwain Southey F. Miles, Jr., Second Lieutenant Samuel Webster Tull and Yeoman J. Leroy Tull.

Record For Maryland's War History

The War Records Commission is compiling for publication the roster of Marylanders who served in the World War. In order to make this accurate, it is important for everyone to send his or her war service record. Errors and omissions occur in the official records, and it is necessary to check them with these personal records.

The War Records Commission, appointed by the Governor, is as follows: Stuart S. Janney, chairman; George L. Radcliffe, treasurer; Van Lear Black, Philip C. McIntyre, Harvey B. Stone. Historical committees were formed in the several counties to co-operate with the State office.

The State requests the record of everyone who served in or with the military or naval forces of the United States or of the Allies during the World War. It is desired to include not only those who enlisted from Maryland, but also former Marylanders who may have enlisted from other States. In case of absence from the State, the family should see that the record is sent in. Blank forms may be obtained from the War Records Commission, 201 West Monument street, Baltimore.

Mr. Abednego Green, one of Somerset county's well-known citizens, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Dorman, near Parsonsville, on Thursday morning last. Mr. Green was 77 years of age and was a widower, his wife preceding him in death several years ago. For many years he was a resident of Westover district, residing on what is known as "Turkey Branch" road, but recently he has been making his home with his daughter, Mrs. Dorman. Funeral services were held from his late home last Friday and interment was in Crisfield cemetery.

Claim Sleep Sickness Germ Has Been Isolated

Milwaukee.—What is claimed by scientists to be the first complete isolation of the germ of sleeping sickness was announced here by Dr. William Thalheimer of Milwaukee, who, in conjunction with a number of physicians, conducted a clinic of a year's duration at the Columbia hospital.

The results of the clinic, it was announced, showed that a minute organism was responsible for the dread disease, and that the physicians had been able to completely isolate and propagate the microbe.

It is believed that a cure for the disease may result from the experiments, though this is not yet claimed by the Milwaukee doctors.

The scientists are at work now on the preparation of a serum to combat the disease.

New Plan Applied To Salisbury P. O.

At the request of the Postmaster General the United States Civil Service Commission announced last Tuesday that an examination to select a postmaster for Salisbury, Md., and postmasters at a number of cities and towns in other States will be held June 24th at the postoffices designated.

It is stated by the Commission that this is not an examination under the Civil Service act and rules, but is to be held under an Executive order issued May 10th.

In announcing the examination at Salisbury it was pointed out that the vacancy occurred there on February 28, 1920, and that the position pays $3200. The notice of the examination is explained as follows:

"For offices paying over $2200, up to and including $4000 a year, candidates must show that for at least three years they have held responsible positions in which the principal duties involved the management of business affairs, or such positions in different branches of the Postal Service. Candidates must also demonstrate that they have ability to meet and deal with the public satisfactorily."

The announcement gives the first information as to how the Civil Service Commission interprets the Executive orders pertaining to filling vacancies in the postoffice. Just how far the present plan of filling the vacancy at Salisbury will fit in with the plans which National Committeeman W. P. Jackson, who lives in Salisbury, may have, is problematic.

Snow Hill Girl Weds Connecticut Man

In Whatcoat Methodist Episcopal Church, Snow Hill, last Wednesday evening Miss Mary Elizabeth Powell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Cottingham Powell, of Snow Hill, was married to Robert A. Holmes, Jr., Norwalk, Conn., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Holmes, Pelham, N. Y. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Luther A. Poole, pastor of the church. Russell A. Apers, of Norwalk, Conn., was best man and the maid of honor was Elinor Paynter Powell, sister of the bride.

Among the guests were Mrs. E. N. Pechin, Miss Margaret Pechin, Mrs. Harry Davis, Frank A. Davis, Mrs. Kingman Handy, Miss Clara Davis, William H. Price, of Baltimore; Burleigh Fooks, of Annapolis; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wharton, Dr. William A. Taylor, of Stockton, and Mr. and Mrs. L. Paul Ewell, of Pocomoke City.

Mr. and Mrs. Holmes will reside in Norwalk, Conn.

State Convention In August

The time and place for the next annual convention of the Maryland Department, American Legion, have been changed following a vote by the departmental executive committee through the mail. The gathering was to have been held September 13th and 14th at Ocean City, instead it will be held in Baltimore August 30th and 31st.

The change was deemed advisable because many of the delegates to the convention will also take part in the Budde Week celebration to take place in Baltimore August 31st to September 5th. To add to their convenience it was proposed that both affairs be held close together. The last day of the convention will conflict with the first day of the celebration, but since the latter will be devoted chiefly to registration the delegates will lose nothing.

The body of Wagoner Elsworth D. Powell, of the U. S. Army, who died in France as the result of wounds received in action, arrived in Crisfield on Tuesday and was buried with military honors on Thursday. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Lucy Powell, and several brothers and sisters.

TELEPHONE SAFETY CAMPAIGN

Eastern Shore District Leads With No Accident Record For 1921

In the safety campaign being conducted by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company for the public and its employees, the district comprising the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia leads all other districts, totaling 16. The Shore telephone men are maintaining a perfect record, not one company employe having been injured in the performance of his duty in 1921, and not one person other than employes has suffered an injury as the result of any employe's carelessness or through faulty equipment.

The Eastern Shore telephone men, confident that they will have the highest safety average of all the districts, already are figuring what to do with the engraved cup that will be awarded to the district winner. No other district to the Baltimore division of the company approaches the high mark set by the Eastern Shore. The other districts of this division, however, have such low averages that the remarkable record of the Eastern county men is offset and the collective average is lower than those of the districts in the Richmond, Charleston and Washington divisions.

The telephone company management, in instituting the campaign, set key numbers for each district, these numbers being based on the total accidents that might be expected if normal efficiency would be maintained. The Salisbury district, which comprises all the Eastern Shore counties, was allotted 18 as a minimum.

The campaign on the Eastern Shore is being conducted under the guidance of Frank G. Adams, Jr., superintendent of plant in the Salisbury district. He has 77 men working under him in the field, constructing and maintaining the telephone equipment on the entire Eastern Shore. These men string the wire, put up the poles and do all sorts of the most hazardous work. They work in the typical Eastern Shore swamp land and in winter plow through treacherous, cold marshes, through which run the miles of poles that keep the farmer, miles from town, in instant communication with the world.

In other districts the supervisory force of the telephone company has adopted a system of conferences that calls for frequent gatherings of the men. Mr. Adams, however, with his men scattered over some 3,800 square miles of territory, would cripple his force by trying to assemble his workers.

He has, therefore, put into effect a system of his own. In the plant office at Salisbury there are safety-first bulletins. Every man, individually, has been told just how he should be careful, and why. He is told all the features of the campaign, what it means to him individually and how it will help his work. Every time Mr. Adams or some other member of the supervisory force has the opportunity he speaks of the work. Each man has become interested, it is explained, and as the results are seen each workman becomes eager to maintain the perfect average.

"In the gangs," says Mr. Adams, "direct supervision can be given the men, but when a combination man or installer is sent to work 40 or 50 miles away, for instance, he must depend upon himself. We have, therefore, had to create interest among the men individually. The supervisory force, whenever possible, mingles among the men and tries not only to interest them, but to give helpful suggestions."

The results obtained in the Salisbury district are due entirely to the efforts of each and every employe in the organization. Regardless of what the supervisors might say on safety-first lines, unless each man does his own thinking, the work goes for naught."

The telephone employes, Mr. Adams explained, are in constant communication with every point on the Eastern Shore. It takes several gangs to keep the 1,600 miles of pole line in repair, and frequently the men have to travel day and night. After a hail and lightning storm several weeks ago about five hundred stations were temporarily put out of commission, extending over a territory of several hundred square miles. Within 48 hours every telephone had been put back into condition.

Birthday Party

On Monday, May 30th, in honor of the fifteenth birthday of their daughter, Louise, Mr. and Mrs. James Thomas, of Mt. Vernon, gave a party. Those present were Misses Tillie and Ethel Simpkins, Gladys, Marian and Mildred Moore, Pauline and Etta Dashiell, Hilda Bloodsworth, Minnie Cullen, Olive McIntyre, Florence Thomas, Messrs. Adrien Bozman, Wallace Dryden, Herman and Elwood Smith, Harvey Simpkins, Wheeler Crockett, Sheldon Hopkins, Bailey and Otis Thomas, Hastings Dashiell, Albert, Marion and Norman Mayne. Refreshments were served at 11 o'clock and all left for home, having spent a very pleasant evening.

An Angel Strayed From Heaven

By WILLIAM FALL.

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

George Chapin was reading a letter from his married sister when he sat in his bachelor apartment, and he scratched his head in evident perplexity.

"My dear George," his sister wrote, "we are in great trouble about Walter. He has had a terrible quarrel with his father about some dreadful actress whom he says he is engaged to be married to, and Philip—you know how hasty he is—has ordered him out of the house. You know Walter may expect to inherit a comfortable fortune, and it is natural that this woman, Linda Manners, as she calls herself, should want to get her fingers on it. Now, George, you are a man of forty-five, and of ripe experience. She lives in your town. Can't you get to her and find out whether a sufficient inducement would persuade her to leave Walter alone? And don't forget to tell her that if she marries Walter he won't get a penny of his father's fortune."

There was a tap at the door and, as George Chapin put the letter aside, a young man entered. He was a good-looking boy, in his early twenties, and George was uncommonly proud of him.

"Hello, Walter," he said, rising and offering his hand. Sit down. So you've been getting into another scrape, eh?"

"Please don't allude to my fiancée, Miss Manners, as a scrape, Uncle George," replied the young man with dignity.

"Well, Walter, we won't quarrel over words. But do you realize that you are up against a serious predicament? How are you going to earn a living if your father disinherits you?"

"Uncle," said the young man impressively, "if once you saw Linda—Miss Manners—I think you'd agree with me that she's worth sacrificing any amount of money for."

"Well, where is she?" his uncle asked.

"At the Lyric theater," answered his nephew. "Say, uncle, what did mother write you?"

"She wrote me that—oh, the devil, Walter, I'm no hand at intrigue. Read it," said his uncle, thrusting the letter into the other's hands.

Walter Hampton read it and returned it with a grin. "I can forgive the suggestion," he said, "because I know mother means well. She's just hasty, that's all."

George Chapin smiled a little sadly. "My dear nephew," said the other, "you're going up to Escombe on that fishing trip you wrote me about, and you're going to be gone three days, and you will neither see nor communicate with your inamorata until the time is past. Otherwise I wash my hands of the affair."

Consequently it was without serious misgivings that Walter Hampton went off on his fishing trip, and though the time dragged wearily, he returned to town eager to hear his fiancée's praises from his uncle's lips.

His first surprise was when the door of the spacious apartment was opened by a maid—a new maid in cap and apron, who looked at him inquiringly, as though he had no business there.

"My uncle—Mr. Chapin. Is he at home?" asked Walter.

The maid hesitated. "Yes, sir," she said at length, "but Mrs. Chapin doesn't receive visitors."

"Mrs. Chapin?" exclaimed the young man. "Who is she?"

"Haven't you heard of Mr. Chapin's marriage, sir?" simpered the maid. "I believe it was very sudden, sir."

Walter pushed past her, ran along the hall, and broke into the reception room without ceremony. A woman rose from a chair—Linda!

Walter did not see the library door open. He rushed toward her. "Linda!" he cried. "You here? You? What does this mean? You're married to my uncle?"

The elder man had come softly up and placed a hand on his shoulder. George Chapin was smiling; his nephew was purple with fury. He flung himself upon his uncle, striking out wildly with his fists, and they fought all over the room, till finally the other got him down, pressed his face into the sofa pillows, twisted his arms, and sat on him.

"Linda, my dear, come here," he said. "Shall I tell this young idiot the truth, or will you?"

The girl, who had retreated in fear to the farther corner of the room, now came forward. There were tears in her eyes, but a smile played about her mouth. "You tell him," she said.

"Then listen," said George Chapin. "Alice Manners—now Mrs. George Chapin—is an old friend who had passed out of my life for years. We had a lovers' quarrel long ago. That's why I've never married. When I found her again I took her right around to the city hall and got a license to marry her, and then rushed her to a minister. That was two days ago. I wasn't taking any more chances. Understand that, lunatic? And from the way your father and I mauled each other when we were boys, to see who should propose to Alice—that is, my wife—I guess he won't have any more objections to your marrying. Miss Linda, her daughter."

Sweet Tooth? Hear What Yanks Ate in France

Coblentz.—American soldiers, whose predilection for sweets has often caused Frenchmen to gasp with amazement, are still world champions in this respect. It is shown by figures compiled at the Cafeteria, the largest restaurant in Coblentz, under the management of the Y. M. C. A.

During the last year American doughboys ate at that restaurant alone 233,138 puddings, 475,343 tarts and cakes, 310,874 cookies and doughnuts, 68,151 cream puffs and eclairs, 624,906 dishes of ice cream, 368,351 chocolate sundaes, 61,378 pies, 233,787 apples and other fruit, 232,741 glasses of lemonade and 43,792 oranges.

Eggs were also "played across the board," the total number consumed being 211,165.

TREES SHRINK IN AFTERNOON

Freaks of Growth Are Explained to Scientists by D. T. MacDougal of Carnegie Institute.

Philadelphia.—Speaking on the growth of trees before the American Philosophical society here D. T. MacDougal of the Carnegie Institute of Washington Desert Laboratory, Tucson, Ariz., said that some species behave like a heavy hose feeding from a pressure system to a fire engine. Crudely expressed, he said, when the engine tends to take water faster than supplied, the hose tends to collapse; when the engine slackens its action, the hose swells.

"Daily equalizing variations by which a tree may be actually smaller in mid-afternoon than at sunrise are greatest in ash, pine, spruce, fir, walnut and least in poplars, sycamores, beech and oak trees," Dr. MacDougal said. "Accurate measurement of the changes in trunks internal to the growing layer show that these variations are directly connected with the mechanism of the ascent of sap and are explainable upon the assumption of a rigid water column in a trunk composed of wood cells and vessels capable of some shrinkage and expansion."

"Extended measurements of the growth of many trees of a number of species have been made by the use of the newly designed dendrograph, which makes a continuous record of changes of diameter, and the recently perfected dendrometer, which registers total change in circumference," Dr. MacDougal explained.

"It is found that the period during which growth takes place, even in equable climates with indeterminate seasons, does not extend over more than two or three months, and that growth is not rhythmic, in any sense, but depends upon food supply, temperature, moisture and other environmental conditions."

$10-a-Month Farmer Boy Realizes Dream for Cash to Buy Own Land.

Salem, Va.—Henry Dameron, twenty-five years old, descendant of pioneer Virginia settlers, who works on his uncle's mountainside farm near here from sunup to sundown at $10 a month, often dreamed, he said, of finding a treasure and buying a farm of his own.

April 9, while plowing near the foot of Brush's mountain, his plow unearthed a peculiar looking object. Investigation revealed it to be a small metal pot wrapped in buckskin containing gold and silver coins valued at $14,903.

REDEMPTION OF PLEDGES ENCOURAGING—SOUTHWIDE PROGRAM IS LAUNCHED.

COMPLETE GREATEST YEAR

Reports to Southern Baptist Convention at Chattanooga Show Marked Progress Along Every Line of Organized Work.

DR. J. H. RUSHBROOKE
Baptist Commissioner For Europe.

Collections in cash totalling $25,103,424.64 have been made for general causes fostered by the Baptist 75 Million Campaign since the campaign was launched in 1919, according to a report to the Southern Baptist Convention, which has just adjourned its Chattanooga session, by Dr. L. R. Scarborough, general director of the campaign, and chairman of the Conservation Commission. The fact that $12,924,943.60 of this amount was collected during the past year, under the most depressing conditions known in years, is very encouraging to the denominational leaders, they say.

Will Seek the Unsaved.

Feeling the need of conserving the spiritual interests of the people as well as the financial aspects of the campaign, the convention asked the Conservation Commission to seek to enlist, through the state and associational organizations, all the 27,000 local Baptist churches in the South in a larger evangelistic effort during the next twelve months, the aim being to induce as many individual members of the churches as possible to win at least one soul to Christ during the year. Reports to the convention showed that there were 173,595 persons received into the local Baptist churches by baptism during the past year, and a much larger number will be sought during the year ahead.

Would Evangelize Europe.

One of the interesting actions of the convention was the decision to back up fully the Foreign Mission Board in its program for the evangelization of the new European territory of Spain, Jugo-Slavia, Hungary, Roumania, the Ukraine and Southern Russia. Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke, of London, Baptist Commissioner for Europe, addressed the convention, telling how he had distributed the relief funds contributed by Baptists for the needy families of those countries and how the giving of this relief had opened wide the door of missionary opportunity.

Work on the older foreign fields during the past year was unusually successful, the board reporting receipts of $2,404,938 for its missionary operations and $278,000 for relief work, as well as $100,000 worth of clothing; 6,998 baptisms on the foreign fields; 187 of the 611 churches self-supporting, with a total of 405 foreign missionaries and 978 native workers employed.

Home Mission Board Active.

The Home Mission Board reported 77,072 additions to the churches through its instrumentalities, church extension operations of $1,248,000, and 293 patients treated at the Tubercular Sanatorium at El Paso.

During the year the receipts of the Sunday School Board reached $1,147,721.73, and the board turned back into general work of the denomination the sum of $139,000.

Although only three years of age, the Relief and Annuity Board, which seeks to supply the needs of aged, dependent ministers and their families, has doubled the number of beneficiaries receiving aid from the denomination as well as the amount of relief given. It now has permanent resources in excess of $900,000.

There are 119 Baptist educational institutions in the South, with a total enrollment of 40,000 pupils, the report of the Education Board showed, and 2,185 of these pupils are preparing for special Christian service, such as the ministry, missionary and other special religious work.

The Woman's Missionary Union, representing the organized women of the South, reports a total of 19,485 organized societies of women and young people, while the cash contributions by the women to the various causes fostered by the denomination during the year amounted to $3,115,437.

DOES NOT BELONG IN CITY

When the Arabian Musical Instrument, the Argul, Comes to Town, It Degrades.

In Cairo the argul is played at night in the old city, and on the streets of the underworld, lending its note and interpretation to love songs that somehow follow when everything else in life has been lost or left behind, writes Robert Hamilton Rucker in Asia Magazine. At an Arabian cafe an old man from the street will play and young men will sing while the coffee is being made. The argul sings with each and talks with each, sympathizes, understands and seems so earnest as to make one half believe that the young man is singing from his own heart and that the argul, long accustomed to such confidence, knows it full well.

But, like many of the country bred, it seems to degenerate when it comes to town. It falls upon evil ways; it sings of love to the loveless; it hovers about the low cafes. Its friend, the tabla—more pretentious, and perhaps more astute—changes its name when it comes to town and does not appear alone at night in dark, unfrequented streets. It is known as the darabukeh, and is seen in the high-class cafes where favorites dance to the music it brings. It has more rhythm than melody; much volume but little feeling. It talks from the head and sings to the feet.

But the argul is all sentiment and sympathy. Its place is the desert; its home, we knew as we listened there on the rugs in front of our tents, is in the wastes of the sandy plain and the stillness of the starlit night.

Fare of Woodchucks.

Woodchucks sit, on their haunches and eat with their fore feet. Farmers have a good right to be their enemies, as not only do they eat quantities of clover, but tramp it down besides to no little extent, says the American Forestry Magazine. They consume and destroy quantities of young green corn and melons.

But That's Habit.

Because a commuter rushes from the train in a hurry, giving the impression that his time is worth about $100 an hour, it does not follow that he will not spend fifteen minutes on his way to the office watching a gang of men laying pavement.—Boston Transcript.

How the Trapper Won His Bride

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Will you remember me when I am gone, Leona? Tell me!" The tone was masterful.

"Perhaps."

The man gave a sharp exclamation, and catching the girl by the wrist he said sternly:

"Don't speak that way. When you do it cuts like a knife," and his other hand fell half-unconsciously upon the hilt of the hunting knife in his belt.

"How dare you? You know, Jean Lemare, I have never told any man that I love him."

"Actions speak louder than words," the man returned coldly. "These glorious eyes of yours say yes, when your lips form no. You have listened to my words of love and never turned away."

"They interested me as long as they were different," the girl returned, madly.

"When you have something new to say, expect me to remember you; but until then I do not care to even listen," and the trapper was left alone with his rage and love. Until his departure on the following day the spoiled beauty kept out of his way, and once he had disappeared, she drew a deep sigh of relief.

Smiling a little to herself, and yet wondering if he would study something new to say to her when he emerged from the dangers of the unbroken path into the wilderness, she hummed a song he favored, and was so wrapped up in her own thoughts she did not hear the stealthy step of a man who stole upon her. Small wonder that she did not, for he was skilled in tracking down the wildest kind of game, and hiding his presence from the keen-scented wild things of the unexplored North. The first that she realized that she was not alone was when Leona felt a man's arms about her, and a man's mouth pressed to hers; and frightened almost to death she looked up into Jean's dark, flashing eyes.

"You told me to make love differently," he said, after he had kissed her breathless, "and so I have. I knew no other man had ever held you in his arms or taken kisses from your lips. Now I have put my stamp on you."

With a heavy sigh, and yet with the light of hopeful love in his face, Jean retraced his steps, and this time fairly began his long journey. For weeks afterward, Leona felt her cheeks burn crimson at the very thought of Jean's kisses, and yet in her heart she was not angry, for she did love him, though her untamed girlish nature rebelled at restraint. As the days crept on, she took pleasure in the thought that she belonged to this mighty hunter, and she began to plan her future as his wife. Suddenly her happiness was crushed as the tender verdure beneath the branches of the felled forest tree. After a day that had seemed unusually long to her impatience, although one of the shortest of the year, she was sitting in the chimney corner idly listening to her father, when some of his words recalled her to attention.

"I didn't think that of Jean. He ought to be ashamed of such a thing."

"What?" Leona asked.

"Marrying an Indian girl," was the careless answer.

"He never did!" she said fiercely, her eyes blazing in the firelight.

For a week she lay ill, and when she finally crawled forth into the open air she loved so well she was like one smitten. All her proud, young courage was gone. She shunned the trappers who flocked to her father's store, and spent her time out in the woods where Jean had kissed her maiden lips and held her in his strong arms. Into this retreat no one dared penetrate, not even Long John Hathers. He would not give up the secret hope in his heart, and tried to court her, although he said but little. His eyes glowed a red fire that nothing extinguished. Leona at first scarcely noticed him, then hated him for the love she saw he bore her, and prevented him from speaking of it until one day when the sun was beginning to feel warm, and she was once more in the woods. Believing herself entirely alone, she began to live over once more the love scene of the fall before, when suddenly Long John stood before her, speaking madly of his love, and pleading madly with her to return it.

The girl fought like a young tiger. She knew now that he had been a witness to her last scene with Jean, and it drove her mad with rage. Finally, seeing the hateful, bearded face coming nearer and nearer, she cried aloud for help, and in providential answer to her cry it came, for suddenly Long John measured his length on the grass, and she saw Jean like one in a dream.

"Come, Leona, sweetheart," Jean said tenderly, "give me the welcome back I deserve," and he held out his arms.

"How dare you?" she gasped. "What will your wife think when I tell her?"

"What about the Indian girl?" she continued, for the man looked puzzled.

"Indian girl? Oh, you mean the one I found and took to the mission. Why, dear, she is only eleven."

Leona gave a gasp of happiness, and Long John, crawling to his feet, once more saw Leona in Jean's arms, but this time she went of her own accord.

INCREASES AS IT TRAVELS

Train in Egypt Picks Up Passengers and Freight as It Proceeds Along Line.

An American engineer tells of a train that will conveniently stop whenever freight or passengers appear by the side of the track. This railway is to be found in Egypt. The train, at starting, as seen by the American, consisted only of the engine and coach, which might have been a baggage car with four windows cut in it, and a bench placed all around. But, before it had gone very far the train came upon a couple of trucks filled with cane standing on the line in the middle of a cane field. These were attached to the front of the engine, which moved slowly along till they came to another batch. These were almost empty, but the cargo was piled on each side of the line, and Arabs rapidly loaded them, while the employees took advantage of the delay to water the engine.

This task was performed in the most primitive fashion by two water carriers, who, having placed a notched section of a date tree between the engine and the ground, to serve as a ladder, laboriously filled the goatskins, which are swung on their backs, at a ditch by the side of the track, climbed up the tree ladder to the engine and emptied their goatskins into the boiler. By the time it was full the trucks were loaded, and the train proceeded, pushing about a dozen trucks before it.

MANNA IN THE HOLY LAND

Still Continues to Fall, as It Did When It Nourished the Children of Israel.

The biblical story of the feeding of the children of Israel upon manna from heaven during their wandering in the wilderness on the way to the land of Canaan does not record a miracle, according to the American consul at Jerusalem. In an official report to the government the consul states that manna is found now in the regions of Upper Mesopotamia and Kurdistan, and along the Persian frontier. It falls, he says, in the form of dew during September, October and November, and lodges upon the leaves of oak trees. It immediately hardens and assumes the form of a grain. Early in the morning, before the heat of the day, it is gathered by spreading sheets beneath the trees, which are shaken, and the manna is then collected and stored for winter, to be used as a food, or shipped to Bagdad for sale in the bazaar.

The manna falls on other vegetables, including grass, but all of it is lost except that which is gathered from the oak leaves. The manna is sweet, and is eaten by the natives as a substitute for sugar or honey. The consul says it is highly prized for its aromatic flavor.

Snake-Charmer's Secret.

How does the snake-charmer charm? asks a writer in the Popular Science Monthly. That's one of the questions we've always asked ourselves. And now an English doctor tells us one of the secrets.

Take the case of the cobra, for instance. It is a very venomous snake, yet the snake-charmer is not harmed when bitten by one.

The secret lies in the fact that the charmer "milks" the cobra before he allows himself to be bitten. He makes the cobra bite into a piece of meat, thereby expelling two thirds of the poison in its poison gland. When the charmer allows the snake to bite him immediately thereafter, there is not enough poison left in the gland to do any harm.

What is the next step? The charmer makes the snake bite a fowl while he squeezes the remaining drops of poison out of the snake's gland; the fowl dies, and the charmer wins the confidence of his audience.

The Joy of Living.

I have never had much money, but I have always enjoyed the things at hand. I have become so familiar with the face of Nature that it is as the face of an old friend and I know and love it in every mood. My years have been full of joy, but they have been years of simplicity and economy. I have never sated myself with anything and the bloom is still on my life.

I have kept young because I have kept free from worldly and selfish ambitions. If I had been miserly and grasping, I would have been old and unhappy long ago. There is nothing like love to keep you young—love for your fellow man and for Nature—and love is Nature's final law. Someone once asked me how I had kept so young and I answered that I had been, born young and had never thrown my youth away.—John Burroughs.

The Water Spider.

A correspondent of English Country Life describes a peculiar spider that lives under water the greater part of its life. It builds a dome-like nest of silk among weeds in ponds and ditches, and fills the nest with air. In that strange house it lives and lays its eggs. In autumn it makes another nest at a greater distance below the surface of the water, and, having sealed itself inside, it sleeps until spring. Taken out of the water, the spider looks like any other, but as soon as it is put back, the bubble of air that it collects round it body makes it look like a ball of quicksilver. It is the only spider that has taken to a wholly aquatic life, says the writer.

AFFAIR OF GREAT DIGNITY

Daily Opening of Session of British House of Commons is a Ceremonious Matter.

The recent retirement of Hon. William Lowther, who was speaker of the British house of commons for 16 years, has given rise to considerable comment on that job, which is one of great dignity. The opening of the daily session of commons is itself an affair of much solemnity.

First comes the speaker's attendant, wearing evening dress, with a gold badge suspended from a chain. As he approaches the inner lobby from the corridor the sergeant shouts, "Hats off, strangers!" and the procession immediately enters the lobby. Following the speaker's attendant comes the sergeant-at-arms bearing the massive gold mace. Somebody recalls that it was Oliver Cromwell who cried, "Take away that mace," and for the time wrecked a custom that was speedily revived.

The speaker follows the mace. He is attired in a black silk gown, full-bottomed wig and silk knee breeches, the tail of the gown being lifted from the ground by the speaker's attendant, also gowned in silk. The chamberlain and the speaker's secretary bring up the rear of the parade.

It is said that the stranger who was inclined to smile at this display had only to glance at the face of the speaker to check his levity. The latter's composure and the fine dignity of his mien, robbed the ceremony of all staginess.

Maxwell Prices Reduced—Now $845

New Organization, Taking Full Control, Turns Prices Back Three Years

The last step in the Maxwell reorganization was the sale of the Maxwell properties to the new and powerful organization, May 12.

The first step of the new organization was to raise the value of the good Maxwell still higher, by restoring prices to the former low level of 1918.

The reduction is $150 on each of the four models, effective at once.

This is the second price revision made by the new organization; and the total reduction from the high level, since Sept. 28, 1920, has been $310 on open cars and $350 on closed cars.

The new organization now owns the great Maxwell plants outright. Its way is clear to carry out in full its larger plans and policies.

It pledges itself never to stop working for the further betterment of the good Maxwell, and for the greater satisfaction of present and future owners of this good car.

RECALLS OLD SIX-DAY RACES

Death of "Lepper" Hughes Brings Back Period of Sports That Once Held Full Sway.

The death a few days ago of "Lepper" Hughes, one of the old guard of the six-day go-as-you-please races which were conducted annually in the old Madison Square garden, recalls a period when that portion of the metropolitan public which hates to go to bed before daylight pursued one of its fads to the limit, remarks the New York Herald.

These six-day grinds drew great crowds. Many persons virtually lived the entire week in the foul atmosphere of the dingy old building and watched the men as they walked or trotted their way wearily round and round the area. Prize money was big and the contests had an international flavor, the English champion, Charlie Rowell, being a participant on more than one occasion, and the winner of one competition important from a prize money viewpoint.

"Lepper" Hughes and Paddy Fitzgerald of Long Island City were invariably on hand when these so-called endurance tests were decided, and each had a devoted following. Both were tall and slim in build, while Rowell was stocky, and had a short, quick stride which rolled the miles behind him in a way which made it difficult for his competitors to keep near him.

England has long been famous for the quality of her distance runners, and Rowell was one of her very best. The death of Hughes will also recall to many the New York of the days when there was not much life after dark north of Twenty-third street and the out-of-town visitor eager to see the sights had to content himself with what the Bowery and Sixth avenue afforded.

FURS NO MARK OF RICHES

Even the Poorest Farmers of Roumania Wear Collars and Hats of Finest Astrakhan.

The poorest farmer in the Near East can afford astrakhan collars and hats; and the man without a good piece of fur on his overcoat collar or a whole fur lining is almost always a beggar or a foreigner from America or western Europe, where these things cost money.

Nobody wears more fur lining or higher astrakhan hats than the cab drivers.

These men comport themselves with a dignity equalled by no single other class of men in the world, unless it be by the priests of the Greek church.

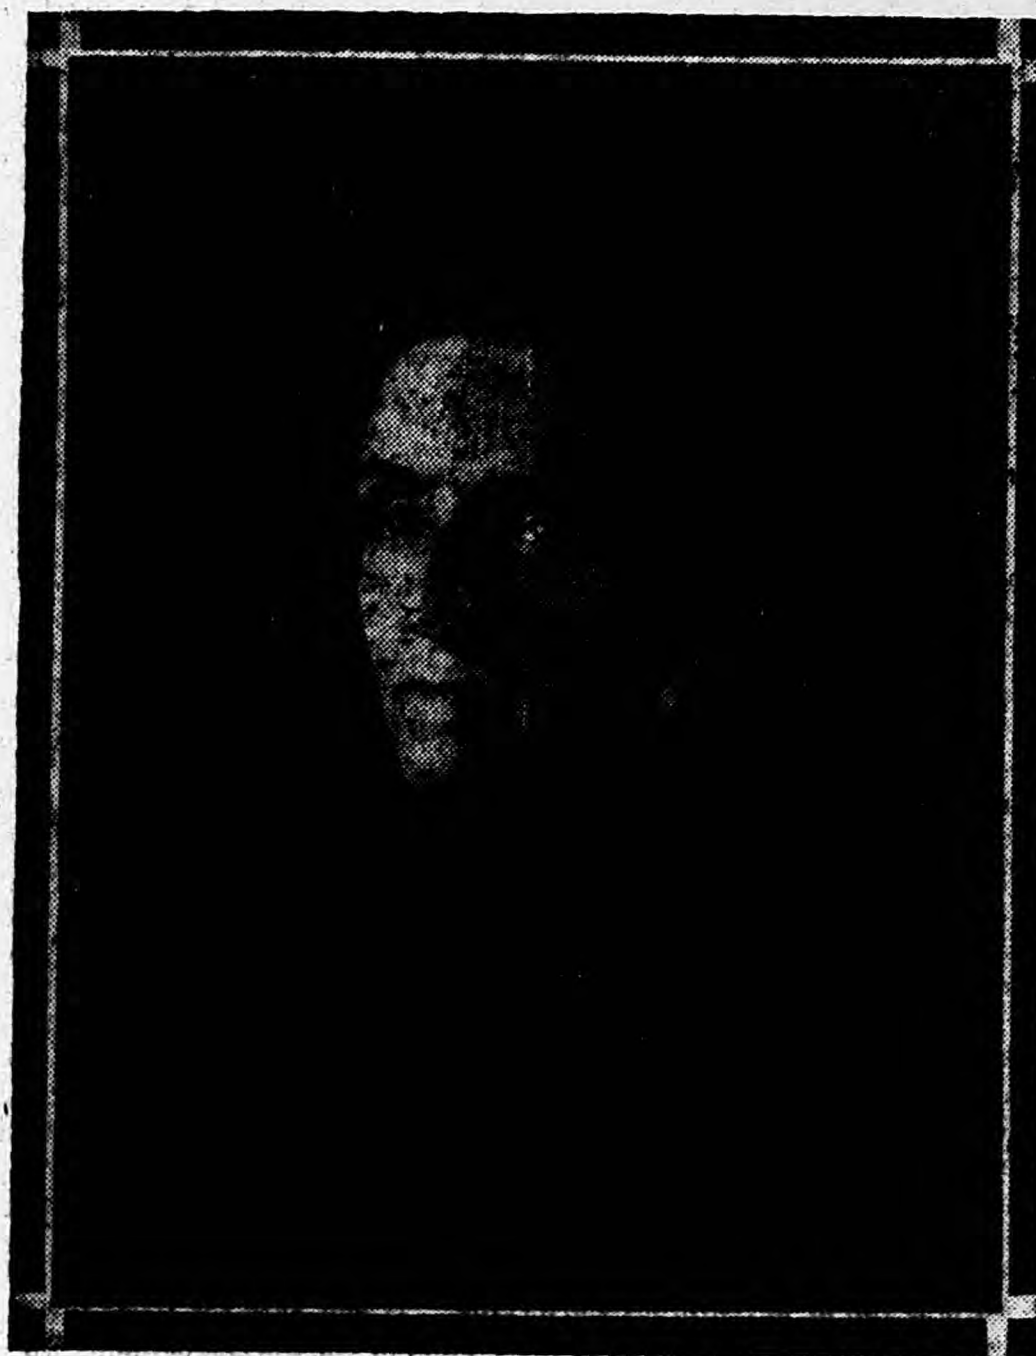

A long black plush garment, tight at the collar and belted at the waist by a bath robe cord, envelopes them from head to foot. Because it is lined with fur, this garment makes a man look far bigger than he really is. And the high conical astrakhan cap, like a curly dunce cap, adds to his stature.

Many of the drivers are said to belong to a curious religious sect originating in Russia, a sect involving celibacy. They spurn friendship with women as likely to decrease their love for their horses.

Whether this is true or not, it is certain that the cab drivers are the most picturesque figures in Bucharest, outstanding even the combed and rouged Roumanian army officers.

WHAT BALTIMORE HOPES TO DO THROUGH THE SALVATION ARMY

By Mrs. H. A. Coleman

MAJOR MARY BALE

"Baltimore has not progressed as rapidly in the establishment of Salvation Army activities as we would like and we are hoping to see a great development both in evangelistic work and also in our social work," declared Major Mary Bale, who with her husband, Major Henry D. Bale, Divisional Commander of the Chesapeake Division, has recently come to Baltimore from Minneapolis. Major Bale shares rank and responsibility with her husband and is deeply anxious to see Baltimore lead this Division in all of the institutional activities which have made the Salvation Army such a power in the social and religious life of other cities.

"What do you most want to do in Baltimore?" this energetic lady was asked.

"Naturally my heart goes out first to the young women, girls and children, for there is so many of them needing and seeking the kind of help we Salvationists can give and we are after all so handicapped in resources that we can do so very little.

"You see," she continued, "Baltimore is a seaport town and a railway center. To it flock the young people from all over the State. Boats and trains alike bring throngs into Baltimore constantly, some of whom are criminals, many just victims seeking to lose themselves and hide their trouble in the bigness of our city. They are the ones that we must reach.

"Yes, they come to us—our uniform inspires trust and these girls come to us, and we go to them when they are terrified, desperate, and hopeless, and the great pity of it is that up to the present time Baltimore has not been able to establish a Rescue Home and Maternity Hospital, and we can only take in these girls long enough to make arrangements to send them to our institutions in Roanoke or Philadelphia.

"No," answering the query, "the establishment of a Rescue Home and Maternity Hospital is not such a great undertaking. Usually we try to obtain the use of a large private house of about twenty-five rooms in some quiet neighborhood. It must be equipped in conformity to the State Laws, as to space, sanitary arrangements—and the like.

"Certainly, these places in all of the big cities throughout the world are managed by Salvation Army Officers—women—who are graduate nurses, and there is one Salvation Army Officer to every five girls, for you see, the girls we get only when they feel that every other face and hand is turned from them. Many times, we have stood between them and suicide. They must be sheltered, won back to normal, brought to conversion, brought to care for their babies, and made to see that their greatest hope for the future is through keeping and supporting the little ones which they think they do not want. That is why we keep hold of these pitiful little unmarried mothers with all the world against them, in our rescue homes until we are sure that they are strong enough to withstand further temptation.

"Do you think these cases are increasing?" Major Bale was asked.

"That is hard to answer," she replied, "but at least they are not decreasing to any noticeable degree, and from the recent published statement of Judge Jean Norris, presiding magistrate of the Women's Day Court in the Jefferson Market Court House it would seem that incorrigibility among girls is on the increase, since during the last six or eight months, more girls have been brought to court on this charge than during any previous term of the Court."

"To what do you attribute this condition?"

"The trouble is usually with the home life—either too lax—or too strict and no real bond of sympathy or understanding between parents and children. Bad habits or questionable acquaintances, and certain types of public dance halls produce—in many young girls a wild disregard of all restraint. Many thinking it makes them appear sophisticated and independent to drink and use drugs, and naturally they are headed sooner or later for disaster. Many times the girls who go wrong are from the country and distant towns, and have no family ties here. They live in the ordinary boarding houses where their associations between young men and women has no supervision whatever. This is one of the reasons, as a preventive measure, why we are so anxious to establish in Baltimore a Boarding Home for young women, at rates low enough to provide the factory and shop girls with clean, comfortable and attractive rooms, well balanced meals and home comforts.

The great need for such protection is shown by the reports from our Rescue Homes and Hospitals.

"Are there so many who apply to the Salvation Army?"

"I should say so!" exclaimed the Major, emphatically.

"More than a thousand illegitimate babies are born every year in our hospitals! In some cases the mothers are wholly innocent of wrong doing as was true of Margaret—no we never tell their names—Margaret was a most attractive girl of nineteen, of good family, and the whole support of an ailing mother and two small sisters of ten and twelve years of age. She was a clever artist and was making a good living as an art designer. For several years she had been engaged to a young student who was working his way through college. They were to be married upon his graduation. As the time of the wedding approached—Margaret's mother developed an antipathy to the young man because she felt that he could not, and would not be able to support them all. He took the attitude that the mother was able to do something for herself. His own mother had been self-supporting through many years of widowhood. Arguments finally brought on a quarrel. The wedding was postponed. The man demanded that Margaret set a time when she would leave her mother and go with him to a distant city where he was to work. The result was an absolute break between them, for Margaret saw that her mother was equally determined to make her choose between them, and though Margaret grieved deeply for the man she loved, she would not leave her mother.

Some months after she met an older man, prosperous in business, who seemed interested in her, stimulated her work, and sympathized with her problems. He asked her to dine with him one evening and though indifferent to the idea, her mother urged her to go. She was brought home about midnight by an elderly woman who told the mother she had fainted at the cafe and had been ill in her care all evening, and that the gentleman had insisted that she see the girl home. The mother was pleased and flattered, rather than alarmed, even when Margaret could tell nothing of her evening's experience except that she became very giddy and fainted. However, when weeks had passed and the man was not seen or heard from again, the mother's suspicions were aroused and when later confirmed by the girl's condition, she absolutely turned her out of the home.

The girl left the town and eventually was dragged from the river nearly dead after a determined effort to drown herself. The Salvation Army took her in, cared for her, and when her baby came they broke their rule and got the infant adopted.

Margaret now makes her home with the family of the officer of the Salvation Army who did so much for her. She has received her old position back—but the tragedy of her experience has left its stamp on her."

"I must also tell you of a little baby girl left on the doorstep of the Salvation Army Headquarters during a blizzard," continued Major Bale, "a note pinned to the clothing said she was ten days old and begged for kindness to her. Weighing only three pounds and nearly dead, it seemed hopeless to save her, but the 'Blues' are devoted to children and animals, and the little thing lived. When she was about three years old the Captain and his wife legally adopted her but before that when she first began to lip, she would say her name was 'Margaret Army.'"

"I could tell you hundreds of stories of the work of our Rescue Homes and Hospitals and the girls they have helped. The stories that are revealed to us are almost beyond belief.

For instance, there was Alice one morning early Alice looking like a clown, in the variegated nondescript assortment of ill-fitting garments, was found weeping hysterically in the hallway of a Salvation Army Headquarters.

She had run away from the notorious house in the Red Light District to which she had been decoyed, and where her clothing and money had been taken from her and she had been kept under lock. A flooded bath room brought a plumber and Alice scantly clad followed him into the bath room and startled him by asking if he were a decent man.

He said he hoped he was as he was a free mason and a man of family.

The girl begged him to help her to escape and finally demanded his aid on the score of his duty to her as the daughter of a Mason.

He ordered her to get on some more clothes and agreed to help her. The best she could get was some old stockings and a brilliant hued negligee that reached about to her knees. The plumber picked her up in his arms and ran from the place. At the corner he put her down, pointed out the Salvation Army Sign in the block above and told her to "run for it."

The officer took her in, soothed, fed and clothed her, sent for her parents and in a few days she was reunited to her family.

"How did she get to such a place?"

"Through the villainy of a cab driver. She came to visit a friend, and not knowing the city at all, gave the card to a taxi driver, who took her to this house instead.

"That same thing was narrowly averted right here in Baltimore a few months ago," continued Major Bale, four girls came over from Washington to attend a college hop. They had been provided with the address of a nice boarding house where they would be looked after as they came unchaperoned. None of them had ever been to Baltimore before. They engaged a taxi man at the station to take them to their destination. Chattering and giggling as girls will, they were finally deposited in front of an imposing house and while collecting the fares, the eldest one exclaimed—"Girls this don't look like Mrs.'s house. Mother said it was a big brick with a porch! Are you sure this is the place?"—turning to driver—"Sure Miss!"—"$2.80 please" But just then one of our people came around the corner and overhearing the remarks stepped up to the group quickly asking, "Where did you want to go?" The girls told him and as he turned to speak, the driver was already in his machine and speeding off.

The officer knew the nature of the house and as it was a long distance from their destination, he took them with him to a store, called another machine and conducted them personally to their mothers' friend, explaining the narrowness of their escape to her. Horrified and crest fallen those girls were deeply grateful and they at least will never fail to warn their young friends against such carelessness and thoughtlessness in traveling.

"However," concluded Major Bale, smiling, "all drivers are not bad."

"We found a cab by waiting one cold morning in front of one of our Halls. He was walking up and down trying to keep warm while his 'fare,' a young girl, was huddled in a heap and crying so that she could not speak.

"It developed that she had quarreled with her grandmother, who lived on a farm, answered an advertisement as housekeeper, and companion to an elderly lady and strapped together money enough to make the trip. At the station, after a long night journey, she gave the address to the taxi driver. Recognizing the place from the card, he questioned her and discovered that she was being innocently decoyed to this place of bad repute. She had no money, knew no one, and was so frightened when he informed her of the nature of the house to which she was going, she begged him to take her somewhere that was safe.

"I brought her here to you people," he explained, "she'll be safe here."

So we want to make every possible effort to make and keep girls who came to Baltimore "SAFE."

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 14, 1921

The school boys show signs of rapid progress while running around the bases.

The trouble with this country is they are turning out too many golf clubs and not enough hoes.

Formerly the motto used to be "do and dare" but now it seems to be "dawdle and delay."

Formerly people studied out ways of saving labor but now the theory seems to be to make jobs last longer.

The people who light matches while their gasoline tanks are being filled will not probably die from any lingering illness.

Formerly people mowed hay by hand but now they think it is too hard work to ride around the field in a mowing machine seat.

Women may be to blame for using too much face powder but it's better than the gunpowder that the men use to settle their difficulties with.

The large heads displayed by many of our girl friends are not due so much to the size of their brains as to the space taken up by their hair puffs.

You can probably find some one to mow your lawn provided you give him a helper to push the mower while he sits in the shade and bosses the job.

The girls should study their chemistry carefully as they will need it in order to know how to cover up their faces which are being spoiled by cosmetics.

It comes hard to raise money for fresh air fund trips, but a big sum could be collected to give the Reds a trip to Russia on condition that they never come back.

Some people hollered so loud when the soldiers went away that you can't even hear them whisper when anyone calls for better care of those who came back disabled.

Sounds of hilarious laughter proceeding from a neighbor's house may be due to an exaggerated sense of humor but more frequently they are the result of opening up some private stock.

While the automobile drivers of Princess Anne ought to be more careful than they are, the time has gone by when parents can safely turn children out to spend the whole day making mud pies in the middle of the street.

We are coming down the inflation stairs step by step. It takes longer for one man to see a situation than it takes another to see it. It takes one man longer to act on a situation after he sees it than it takes another to act on it. But gradually the industrial situation of this country is becoming understood, the necessity of economic readjustment is being faced, remarks an exchange. Why not make haste to realize the situation?

THE BURDEN OF ARMAMENT

Congress is already feeling the force of the demand for some relief from the burden of military and naval expenditure. The organizations of women voters are bringing this question to the front. The churches are starting a powerful campaign looking toward international agreement to limit war preparations. Such forces are too powerful for politicians to disregard.

There are some people who would be perfectly willing to take steps for limitation of armament after the United States had built a navy costing several billions so that our country could feel itself absolutely secure. But if the United States keeps up its expenditure at such an extravagant rate other powers will do the same and our relative strength will be no greater than it was before. Whereas, if this country is willing to negotiate with other nations with the hope of putting an end to this folly it seems likely that the others will assent.

The terrible burden of taxation is the greatest obstacle that keeps back the world from normalcy. With 90 per cent. of our taxes going to the costs of the past war and preparation for future wars, the only way to reduce taxes is to cut these costs.

Our people will not want to neglect their soldiers and they will not cut down their appropriations for veterans that need vocational training, hospital treatment or other assistance. But they do rebel against having taxes kept up in the mad race for naval supremacy, when the result of that race is simply to stimulate other powers to keep on bankrupting themselves in the same way.

The United States will hardly care to stop building warships until other nations do. But it is folly to keep pouring out this money like water without making prompt and serious effort to see if other powers will join in a general agreement to quit.

THE ROUGH ELEMENTS

The terrible race riots that slew nearly 100 people at Tulsa, Oklahoma, and resulted in the burning of 10 blocks of negro houses, reveals once more the undercurrent of rough brutality that stands ready to break out where it sees a chance.

When such violence arises the excuse is usually given that some man must be punished for some dastardly act. But there is no justice in the blind acts of a mob. It often visits vengeance on the innocent. At best it encourages brutal men to take the law into their own hands and commit violent acts to satisfy their own lawless passions. Mob leaders ought to suffer such drastic punishment, that hereafter the rough element will conclude that it will be more healthy for them to leave punishment to the law and the courts.

AVIATION FATALITIES

The frightful disaster that overtook an army airplane going up from Washington, with many other recent airplane tragedies, is a sharp reminder of the price that scientific advance has to pay. Some people will say that aviation is surrounded by so many perils that it should be abandoned as a commercial enterprise.

If that theory had prevailed in ancient times men would never have set out to sail the seas in their frail cockleshells then used as ships. Columbus or the Norsemen would never have crossed the ocean and the American continent would still be tenanted by savages.

The airplane tragedies so far recorded must be few in proportion to the innumerable multitude who lost their lives while developing sea navigation. The world is full of adventurous spirits who will not be daunted by any such hazards. They would rather risk their lives than miss the exhilaration that comes from conquering nature. The world owes an incalculable debt to these bold leaders of progress.

WORKING OFF SURPLUS STOCK

The criticism made of retail merchants for not reducing prices as fast as wholesale figures have dropped was one subject taken up at the recent United States Chamber of Commerce convention.

Mr. L. P. Ayres, a prominent Cleveland banker, took the ground that the smaller retail merchant had not cut his prices as much as the bigger dealers and so had not kept up the volume of his trade. As the result, he said, the records of business failures show that it is the small dealer who is going into bankruptcy.

Mr. J. I. Straus, a prominent New York merchant, taking part in this discussion, defended the course pursued by the small merchant. He felt that these men had been misled by those on whom they depend for information—the salesmen who represent manufacturers and wholesale houses.

During the boom times of 1919 and 1920 these salesmen kept representing that merchants must order very freely in order to get goods. "You will only get about 50 per cent. of what you order on account of the scarcity of everything," they often said. So that to have his shelves filled, a merchant must anticipate his needs.

As a result, says Mr. Straus, many small merchants loaded themselves up in anticipation of a 50 per cent. delivery. They ordered 200 per cent. of their needs in the hope of getting 50 per cent. of it. Thus they overordered and many merchants are still trying to market a surplus of goods bought at that high price.

The merchants who advertise freely have almost invariably recovered from the bad situation thus created. They were able to clean up old stock promptly and now have fresh goods at lower prices. And any merchant who still has old stuff left will probably have to sacrifice it. The quicker he works it off by free advertising the sooner he can get back to normal conditions and get his business on a paying basis again.

Why Suffer From Rheumatism?
Do you know that nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment? The pain may be relieved by applying Chamberlain's Liniment, which makes sleep and rest possible, and that certainly means a great deal to any one afflicted with rheumatism.

Harding At Valley Forge

President Harding, in his address at Valley Forge, attuned to the spirit of patriotism exemplified in the winter camp of Washington's army, nearly a century and a half ago, and ever hallowing the spot, added nothing to what he previously had said concerning his ideal of duty and service for this nation.

But reiteration has its part. Truth sometimes must be asserted and reasserted to gain full recognition. Even those who with partisan prejudice for a time refused to see, are now opening their eyes, not only to the sincerity but to the practicability of the Harding doctrine of a United States which shall first and forever be true to itself, but by very reason of the maintenance of its own integrity shall be the better able to fulfill a mission in the service of the rest of the world.

The President's covenant of faith with the people of the United States, as well as with the world, was stated at Valley Forge, in a single sentence:

"When I pledge our America to world helpfulness, at the same time I exact a pledge that America will cling to her own independence of action and to her own conscience."

This is the fundamental of the President's conception of an "association" of nations, in distinction from the League, of the policy set forth by Secretary Hughes for the government of our diplomatic action in European capitals by which participation in strictly European questions is to be avoided, of the whole course which has been laid out for our service in the readjustment of world affairs consequent upon the war. It is the American way of seeking and serving the permanent peace of the world.

It is gaining the confidence of the nation. It will earn for itself the appreciation of the world.—Evening Bulletin.

William M. Whitehead vs. Orris L. Crowson and Sudie M. Crowson, his wife, Roy D. White, trustee, and Howard L. Nock and Lucille Jones Nock, his wife.

In the Circuit Court for Somerset County, Maryland, in Equity. No. 3474 Chancery.

The object of this suit is to procure the execution and delivery of a deed to the plaintiff, William M. Whitehead, by the Court specially appointed for that purpose.

The bill states that the said William M. Whitehead owned and possessed, in fee simple, a certain farm or tract of land, situated and being in the Election District of Somerset county, Maryland, which was conveyed to him by deed dated December 8, 1918, and recorded in the land records of Somerset county, Maryland, in Liber 100 of Deeds, folio 407, etc.; that the same land was conveyed to the said Roy D. White, trustee, by deed dated November 30, 1919, and recorded in the land records of Somerset county, Maryland, in Liber W. J. S. No. 71, folio 407, etc.; that the same land was conveyed to the said Roy D. White, trustee, by the said Orris L. Crowson and Sudie M. Crowson, his wife, in trust, to secure certain indebtedness therein mentioned in the aggregate sum of forty-six hundred dollars ($4600.00), same bearing date October 29, 1918, and recorded in Liber S. F. D. No. 65, folio 135, etc.; that the said Howard L. Nock paid to the said Roy D. White, trustee, the full purchase price for said property, which said sale was reported to and ratified by the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, being No. 3025; that possession of William M. Whitehead, and those under whom he claims has been uninterrupted, notorious, hostile, exclusive and continuous.

The bill further states that the signatures of the grantors in the deed to Roy D. White, trustee, from Orris L. Crowson and Sudie M. Crowson, his wife, were not witnessed as required by law; that the seal of Emma P. Parsons, a notary public of the State of Virginia, bearing date and date of commission, does not appear annexed thereto and that said deed contained no power to the trustee to grant and convey the same to the purchaser, and by reason thereof the plaintiff, William M. Whitehead, believes a cloud on the title to said property now exists and that he has no adequate remedy at law for the removal of the said cloud; that all of the defendants are non-residents of the State of Maryland and that all of the defendants are adults over twenty-one years of age.

It is thereupon, this 10th day of June, 1921, ordered by the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, that the plaintiff, William M. Whitehead, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Somerset county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 12th day of July, 1921, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 27th day of July, 1921, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS

State Scholarships in Engineering Courses

Entrance Examinations for the School of Engineering, as well as for the College of Arts and Sciences, will be held in the Civil Engineering Building, Homewood, Monday to Saturday, June 20th to 25th, 1921, beginning at 9 a. m. each day, under the auspices of the College Entrance Examination Board.

Applications for Scholarships in the School of Engineering, established under the provisions of the laws of Maryland, Chapter 90, 1912, will now be received. If there is more than one applicant for particular scholarship, a competitive examination must be taken Friday, September 23rd, 1921, beginning at 9 a. m. Appointments will be made soon thereafter.

Each Legislative District of Baltimore City and each county of the State, with the exceptions of Cecil, Harford, Howard and Queen Anne's, will be entitled to one or more scholarships for the year 1921-1922, in addition to those which have already been assigned. In the four counties mentioned above, all the available scholarships have been awarded.

Under the provisions of the Act of Assembly, the county and city Scholarships in the School of Engineering are awarded only to deserving students whose financial circumstances are such that they are unable to obtain an education in engineering unless free tuition be granted to them. The scholarships entitle the holders to free tuition, free use of text-books, and exemption from all regular fees. One of the scholarships in each county and in each legislative district of the city carries also the sum of $200, and is known as a "Senatorial Scholarship." Senatorial scholarships may be awarded for 1921-22 in Baltimore City (first, second, third and fourth districts), Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Calvert, Kent, Montgomery, Somerset, Prince George's and Washington counties.

Scholarships may be awarded to graduates of Loyola College, St. John's College, Washington College, Western Maryland College, Maryland Agricultural College, Mt. St. Mary's College, Rock Hill College.

Three scholarships may be awarded "At Large."

Applicants should address The Registrar, The Johns Hopkins University, for blank forms of application and for catalogue giving information as to examinations, award of scholarships and courses of instruction. The next session begins Tuesday, October 4th, 1921.

Etta M. Mallett vs. William L. Mallett.

No. 3468 Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County.

The object of this suit is to procure a divorce a vinculo matrimonii of the plaintiff from the defendant.

The bill alleges that the plaintiff and defendant were married on the second day of February, nineteen hundred and fifteen, and that they lived together until the month of July, nineteen hundred and seventeen; that although the conduct of the plaintiff towards the defendant was kind, affectionate and above reproach, the said defendant, without any just cause or reason, abandoned and deserted the plaintiff, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the plaintiff and defendant beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that the plaintiff and defendant have no children born to them from said marriage; that the plaintiff is now and for all her life has been a resident of Somerset county, in the State of Maryland, and that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland and resides in the State of Virginia.

It is thereupon this 21st day of May, nineteen hundred and twenty-one, by the subscriber, clerk of the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, ordered that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Somerset county, Maryland, once in each of four successive weeks before the 22nd day of June, nineteen hundred and twenty-one, give notice to the said William L. Mallett, non-resident defendant, in said cause, of the object and substance of the bill of complaint, and warning him to be and appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 9th day of July, nineteen hundred and twenty-one, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Mrs. Edward P. Fitzgerald is spending the summer in Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Myers and son, Hammond, after a visit to Baltimore, returned home last Saturday afternoon.

Messrs. Henry J. Waters, Jr., and Wilson Waters, students at the Donaldson school, near Baltimore, are spending their summer vacation at the home of their parents, Col. and Mrs. Henry J. Waters.

Miss Emily Irving Dashiell, who has been teaching in the public school at Martinsville, Va., returned home last Friday night to spend the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Dashiell, on Prince William street.

Mrs. L. A. Oates, who has been at "The Castle," Tarrytown, N. Y., since last fall, has returned to Princess Anne and opened her home for the summer. Her son, Mr. Robert Oates, a student at Mercersburg (Pa.) Academy, is spending his vacation with her.

Mr. Honiss A. Tull, of Marion, has accepted a position with Kadoos & Burke, brokers, and left a few days ago for Chicago, where he has been made assistant manager of their foreign office. Mr. Tull, who was principal of Marion High School for the year just closed, is one of Somerset county's most promising young men and we bespeak for him success in his new field of labor.

The showing of "The Chester Reformed" at the Auditorium tonight (Tuesday) will be the final showing here of this unusual William Fox production. William Russell, immensely popular with the picture enthusiasts in this town, has the star role. The person who fails to see "The Chester Reformed" is depriving himself of one of the best treats the screen has offered for some time.

Mr. H. Edwin Hayman's typical colonial home which he is having erected on the lot he recently purchased from Mr. E. Frank Jones, on the State road just north of Princess Anne, is nearing completion. The building is 35x24 feet, two stories, with attic and porch on the south side. This will be one of the most attractive homes in that section, as the gambrel roof and the cut of the gable ends are reminders of old Dutch colonial architecture.

Mrs. Nellie Adams Clark spent last week in Pocomoke City as the guest of Dr. and Mrs. I. T. Costen.

Mr. W. Frank Dashiell, of Baltimore, spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Frank Dashiell.

Mrs. Joshua Carey and little daughter, Mildred, of Norwood, Pa., are visiting at the home of Mr. Carey's mother, Mrs. E. J. Carey.

Miss Caroline McCandlish, of New York, arrived in Princess Anne last Saturday to spend some weeks with her mother, Mrs. William McCandlish.

St. Andrew's Guild will hold a bread and cake sale in the building formerly occupied by Dr. Fisher Saturday afternoon, June 18th, at 3 o'clock. Ice cream will also be on sale.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Venton M. E. Church will hold a spread supper and festival in the church grove on Wednesday, June 22nd. Ball game at 3 p. m. and supper at 6 p. m.

Mr. Henry W. Sterling, first assistant engineer on the U. S. S. "St. Mihiel," which arrived a few days ago in New York harbor, spent the week end with his mother, Mrs. Ashton P. Mills.

Mr. Benjamin Barnes, a student at the Maryland University, College Park, came home last week to spend his summer vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Barnes, at King's Creek.

Mrs. Albert Leake and son, Raymond, of Toledo, Ohio, are visiting at the home of Mr. P. E. Twining. Mrs. Leake is a former resident of Somerset county, having left here five years ago to reside in Toledo.

The annual State-wide field and track meet was held at Homewood, Baltimore, last Thursday. Quite a bunch of boys from Somerset High School attended. Those from the Washington High School were chaperoned by Mr. W. A. N. Bowland.

Mr. J. T. Taylor, Jr., and Dr. E. E. Tull accompanied a number of their Pocomoke friends on a fishing trip to Wishard's Point last Friday. Out of the party of nine Mr. Taylor was the only one to land a fish. It was a red drum and weighed 32 pounds, measuring 43 inches from tip to tip.

Messrs. Vernon E. White and Mark L. Costen left last Saturday evening by automobile for Harrisburg, Pa. Mr. Costen returned home last (Monday) night. Mr. White will return next Saturday accompanied by Mrs. White, who has been spending two weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Romberger, in that city.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Lankford and two children, Miss Marian and Albert, motored to Baltimore last Wednesday and attended the graduating exercises of the State Normal School Wednesday night. Their daughter, Miss Clara Morris Lankford, was among the graduates of that institution. The party returned home Friday night.

Messrs. W. W. Hubbard, Wilbur R. Hubbard, W. B. Copper, E. F. Perkins, I. H. Sides, Raymond Wilkins and Jefferson D. Bacchus, all prominent citizens of Chestertown, spent last Friday night at the Washington Hotel, and while here were callers at the homes of Judge Robert F. Duer and Dr. Charles W. Wainwright. They left Saturday morning for Crisfield.

Capt. Aaron B. Bradshaw, aged 73 years, died at his home on Smith's Island last week. His funeral took place last Friday. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Martha Bradshaw, and the following children: John A. Bradshaw, Calvin T. Bradshaw and Aaron E. Bradshaw, of Ewell; William H. Bradshaw, of Crisfield; Mrs. Sidney F. Smith, of Tylerton; Mrs. D. F. Sneade, of Crisfield; Mrs. W. B. Evans and Miss Catherine Bradshaw, of Ewell.

Blood-poisoning which developed about three weeks ago from an injury to his hand, caused the death of Mr. Ira L. Daugherty, a well-known and highly respected citizen of Crisfield, which occurred at the General and Marine Hospital about 3 o'clock last Wednesday afternoon. He was 38 years of age and was the son of Capt. Isaac T. Daugherty, of Crisfield. He was a waterman by occupation. Mr. Daugherty was a member of Annapolis Lodge, K. of P., Loyal Order of Moose, and of the Eastern Shore Council Jr. O. U. A. M. Funeral services were held last Saturday afternoon.

The Home Of The Soul
In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach, most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter. (Advertisement.)

Recommends Chamberlain's Tablets

"Chamberlain's Tablets have been used by my husband and myself off and on for the past five years. When my husband goes away from home he always takes a bottle of them along with him. Whenever I have that heavy feeling after eating, or feel full and played out, I take one or two of Chamberlain's Tablets and they fix me up fine," writes Mrs. Newton Vreeland, Minn., N. Y. Take these tablets when troubled with constipation or indigestion and they will do you good. (Advertisement.)

Lightnin' Bill Jones' Clothes For Near East, Jackie Coogan Helping

Stage stars are "bundling up their bundles." When Near East Relief issued its appeal for discarded clothing to distribute among the destitute in Western Asia John Drew, chairman of the Near East Relief National Theatrical Committee, at once got busy, and as a result it is expected that at least 1,000,000 pounds of clothing will be given by the people of the stage and screen world alone.

"Certainly," said Bill Jones, whose name off the stage is Frank Bacon, "certainly I want to do something for those poor folk out in the Near East. I've got a lot of extra clothes at the house, and you can bet I'll bundle up a bundle of old clothes—and some new ones, too—and send them parcel post to Near East Relief."

Then Mr. Bacon, whose play, "Lightnin'," has run over 2,000 times in a single theater in New York city, took down from the hook in his dressing room the old familiar suit he wears in the character of Bill Jones. "I might

BRISTOL PRAISES NEAR EAST RELIEF

Admiral's Commendation a Feature of Organization's Annual Report to Congress.

Washington. — Accounting for the disbursement of $13,129,117 in 1920 and a total of $60,000,000 to date, including flour, clothing and medical supplies, the annual report of the Near East Relief, incorporated by Congress August 4, 1919, has been filed with Congress by Charles V. Vickrey, general secretary of the relief organization. The report includes an auditor's statement by a firm of chartered accountants, whose traveling auditors in the field check all expenditures by the Near East Relief.

In regard to the business methods and efficiency of the organization Admiral Mark L. Bristol, United States high commissioner to Turkey, is quoted:

"I have been very closely associated with the work of the Near East Relief Committee for about 22 months," Admiral Bristol reports. "On the whole, the work of this relief committee has been such that Americans should be proud of this great humane effort. The Near East Relief here in Constantinople is run more like a business organization than any relief organization with which I have ever come into contact."

Over a Million Saved

According to the report, 63 hospitals, with 6,522 beds, 128 clinics, 11 rescue homes, 209 orphanages, accommodating 54,600 children, and outside orphanages, caring for 56,000 children, have been maintained by the Near East Relief.

It is reported that approximately 2,790,490 Armenians are still living out of a pre-war population of about 4,000,000. In parts of Cilicia alone it is stated that 65 per cent of the Armenian Christian population perished from starvation during the war, while in the whole of Syria not less than 25 per cent perished from the same cause. It is estimated that had it not been for the Near East Relief fully half of the present Armenian population of the Near East would have succumbed.

Educating the Young

In regard to the work among the children, Mr. Vickrey says: "A few millions of dollars wisely expended at this time in the support, education and molding of these young lives will be worth vastly more to the world than billions of dollars that otherwise may later be required in suppressing warfare and strife. This work as an expression of brotherhood should help to mark the beginning of a new era of peace and interracial good will."

18,000 ORPHANS SAVED WHEN SHIP BRINGS IN FOOD

Cablegrams to Near East Relief Disclose Critical Situation Among Starving Armenians.

An epic of American heroism and devotion in saving the lives of 18,000 children at the last moment before all food supplies were exhausted is revealed in a file of cablegrams from Transcaucasia made public by the Near East Relief, the American organization which in the past four years has been the means of saving more than a million lives in the old Ottoman empire.

When the steamer "Quequen," sent from Constantinople by Near East Relief, arrived in the deserted harbor of Batum on April 22, just ten bags of flour remained in that city, while in Alexandropol, Armenia, eighteen thousand orphans and seven American relief workers were on their last day of half-rations, when the first trainload of American flour arrived.

The first news of the desperate situation of the American relief workers and their orphan charges reached the Near East Relief on April 21 in a cable dated April 15, which was the first direct message received from the Americans cut off in the heart of Armenia since mid-February. The dispatch said: "Near East Relief food supplies exhausted. Situation, especially in Armenia, very critical. Send food supplies to Batum immediately," and stated that the new governments of the Transcaucasian States had furnished "satisfactory guarantees making relief operations easier than formerly."

Near East Relief chartered a special steamer, loaded her with flour, rice, beans and milk, and sent her to Batum, in charge of two Americans, Melville Chater, and Charles T. White, of New York City. But before this first shipment reached Batum a new cable from E. A. Yarrow, representing the Near East Relief in Transcaucasia, reported that seventy-five hundred children in American orphanages in Kars had been sent to Alexandropol, making a total of eighteen thousand children at the latter point, probably the largest assemblage of orphans ever known.

Arrives Just in Time
"Immediate transport saved eighteen thousand orphans and seven Americans at Alexandropol, where food arrived same day last half-rations exhausted," the cable reporting the arrival of the American supplies states, briefly.

NATURE FOND OF FREAKS

Good Old Dame Seems to Take Pride in Perpetuating Physical Oddities in Mankind.

Occasionally it happens that a boy or girl is born with webbed feet—that is to say, with toes united by fleshy tissues. It is a phenomenon called "syndactyly."

This eccentricity is apt to be handed down from generation to generation in a family, appearing in some of its members, but not in others.

The Magazine of Heredity describes one such case, in a branch of an old New England family. The paternal grandfather was web-footed and bequeathed his peculiar toes to a son, who passed them along to three of his six children.

If these people were to intermarry for three or four generations with another web-footed family, all the children born would exhibit the peculiarity. For nature, curiously enough, seems always willing to perpetuate freaks of any kind.

What we call freaks, or "sports," in the animal or the vegetable world are nature's little experiments. It is by this means that she creates new species and varieties. Some anthropologists are of opinion that all human beings were originally black and that the first white man was a sport. It might be said that many white people today respond to that description, though not in the same sense.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Rents High in Stone Age

Southern California had apartment profiteers back in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, according to a scientific correspondent whose investigation of the stone age dwellings, hewn out of solid rock, has convinced him that keeping up an apartment never was a snap. At the entrance to one six-apartment cavern he found hieroglyphics, which he has deciphered to mean the rates for apartments as follows:

- One abalone, one sun.
- Two abalones, two suns.
- Three abalones, three suns.
- Twelve abalones, one moon.

Our correspondent figures that the home hunters among the Pimugna Indians had to pay at the rate of one abalone a sleep, or day, or 12 abalones per lunar month. The cave was the largest on the island and comprised the apartment house de luxe of that period. A short distance below the entrance to the stone apartment house the professor found a huge pile of empty abalone shells, proving that the landlord did a more or less rushing business.

"Fossil Raindrops"

In slabs of Triassic rock little depressions are often seen that have been called "fossil raindrops," the idea being that they were formed by showers on muddy sea beaches, and preserved by being covered with a layer of mud at the next high tide.

But lately it has been suggested, in view of observations on a flood plain in the Dorn valley, that the supposed impressions of rain drops may really be due to pittings formed by bubbles in a film of mud at the bottom of shallow water. There have been watched the formation of many pittings, and it has been found that after the mud has dried they exactly resemble "fossil raindrops."

Important Experiment

Domestic production of chaulmoogra oil, long used in Asia for the treatment of leprosy, is made possible through a consignment of seeds of the Hydnocarpus tree, sent from Siam to the bureau of plant industry. They will be experimentally propagated in Florida, Porto Rico and Hawaii. The oil formerly was obtained only from seeds of another tree grown in Burma.

CARDUI HELPED REGAIN STRENGTH

Alabama Lady Was Sick For Three Years, Suffering Pain, Nervous and Depressed—Read Her Own Story of Recovery.

Paint Rock, Ala.—Mrs. C. M. Stegall, of near here, recently related the following interesting account of her recovery: "I was in a weakened condition. I was sick three years in bed, suffering a great deal of pain, weak, nervous, depressed. I was so weak, I couldn't walk across the floor; just had to lay and my little ones do the work. I was almost dead. I tried every thing I heard of, and a number of doctors. Still I didn't get any relief. I couldn't eat, and slept poorly. I believe if I hadn't heard of and taken Cardui I would have died. I bought six bottles, after a neighbor told me what it did for her.

"I began to eat and sleep, began to gain my strength and am now well and strong. I haven't had any trouble since. I am sure can testify to the good that Cardui did me. I don't think there is a better tonic made and I believe it saved my life."

For over 40 years, thousands of women have used Cardui successfully, in the treatment of many womanly ailments.

If you suffer as these women did, take Cardui. It may help you, too. At all druggists.

Has Had Ten Capitals

North Carolina has had at least ten capitals, including Bath, Edenton, Brunswick, Wilmington, Newberry, Hillsboro, Smithfield, Fayette and Raleigh. The reason for so many lay in the custom prior to 1791 of transferring the seat of government to the place of residence of the governor or the temporary meeting place of the assembly.

In 1791 one square mile of land was purchased for the foundation of Raleigh as the permanent seat of government. At present the city covers four square miles.

RAPID RISE FOR LEGION MAN

Colonel Shaughnessy's Career Has Been on the Upgrade Since He Was a Boy.

When he was in the army, Colonel Edward H. Shaughnessy's career was on the upgrade.

Now that he has returned to civil life and joined Fidelity post of the American Legion in New York city, he has voluntarily demoted himself from a $25,000 job to one which pays $5,000 a year.

Colonel Shaughnessy was induced by Postmaster General Will Hays to sacrifice his position as assistant director of the American Petroleum Institute, New York city, to become second assistant postmaster general.

"I understand you've taken a $5,000 a year job," said a correspondent who interviewed him.

"Does it pay that?" he asked. "I'd forgotten to ask about the salary."

The salary is a minor consideration now, but it would have been different in the days when Colonel Shaughnessy worked as a messenger boy in Chicago. When he was 15 years old he became ticket agent and a year later telegraph operator for the Chicago & Northwestern railroad. Successively he was chief operator, assistant train dispatcher, assistant trainmaster and trainmaster. When the superintendent of the road was ill he took charge.

Colonel Shaughnessy joined the Thirteenth engineers as first lieutenant when the war broke out. He studied French until he spoke it fluently, and worked up a book of rules adapting American methods to French practice. He was promoted fast. Praise came to him from Brig. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, assistant chief of staff, for his work as superintendent of the transportation corps in the Chateau-Thierry region, and as general superintendent at Is-sur-Tille during the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives, and as general manager in the zone of advance.

General Pershing gave him the Distinguished Service medal "for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services."

MADE LEGION DRIVE SUCCESS

Dare Devil Louisiana Man Put Real Thrills Into Campaign for New Members.

When Anthony Kelley was discharged from the navy in New Orleans, La., he found the life of a land-lubber terribly devoid of thrill and peril. He had been going to sea since the age of fifteen and he missed the excitement of stormy nights in the dizzy heights of the crow's nest and hair-raising trips on the ropes far above the deck.

With the start of a membership campaign of Rollin post of the American Legion in New Orleans, Kelley blossomed out as a professional dare-devil to assist his fellow Legionnaires in attracting attention. He climbed a flag pole atop the city hall, several hundred feet above the pavement and rocked back and forth trying to break the pole. A net stretched below was all that was between the daring Legionnaire and some exceedingly hard terrain.

Kelley was unable to break the flag pole, however. So he scaled an eight-story building and hung from the coping by his toes. Film companies rushed camera men to take motion pictures of the feat and the Legion membership drive was a success.

"None of it was as thrilling as the four years and four months I was in the war zone," Kelley declares. He was plying between American and European ports when war was declared. He entered the navy as an ensign and was discharged in April, 1919. He continued in service as an officer of the Merchant Marine until December, 1920.

Do Not Have to Pay Poll Tax

Backed by the American Legion, a law providing for the registration of all ex-service men of all wars in the state of Montana was passed by the legislature. The new act exempts all ex-service men from payment of the poll tax and requires each county assessor to keep a record of the names and organizations of all veterans within his county. It is expected that other states will take similar action soon.

LEGION MAN DISPLAYS NERVE

Airplane Fighter Takes to Coal Cars to Reach Vocational Training School.

There's no striking similarity between piloting a highflying airplane of the Marine Corps to riding in the coal cars of a freight train. But between these modes of travel, Thomas D. Lane, junior law student at the University of Kansas, will complete his education.

Lane, a member of the Argonne post of the American Legion at St. Paul, Minn., was attending school in the Kansas university when his money ran out. A letter forwarded to him from his native state told of the work of the Federal Board for Vocational Education in Minneapolis. Through disability incident to his service as a flyer, he was entitled to the Federal educational aid. Without sufficient funds to make the long trip, nevertheless he set out to appear before the board.

Three days in a box car, a coal gondola and the tenders of three passenger trains conveyed him to his destination. Several fast changes of cars, unusual maneuvers and debates with trainmen were necessary, but the aviator came through smiling. One mail clerk proved friendly, but that train was bound for Chicago. After two more trials he found a bunk on some coal and woke up the next morning in the St. Paul yards.

Placing his case before the board, he was classed "Section One," entitling him to tuition, supplies and training pay until he completes his course.

MAKES DRIVE FOR AUXILIARY

President of Texas Organization Shows That She Comes From Fighting Stock.

A record for service to America that dates from Revolutionary days and includes the deeds of Nathaniel Green and Daniel Boone, is perpetuated in Mrs. E. Clinton Murray, of Houston, Tex., president of the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion of that state. The first unit of the Auxiliary of the American Legion was founded there.

When her husband, who was past the age limit, was accepted by the Medical Corps during the World war, Mrs. Murray likewise volunteered. She made a record of thirty addresses in one week during a Red Cross drive. She sold Liberty bonds, organized Red Cross units and did active canteen work.

The Women's Auxiliary was organized nationally in Austin, Tex., July 26, 1919. Mrs. Murray was one of the first women to organize a unit in Houston in March 1920. When she became state president, there were twenty-three units in the department. Under her direction, thirty additional units have been formed and fifty others are now organizing. Mrs. Murray plans to obtain a unit for each of the 281 posts of the Legion in Texas.

Mrs. Murray was born in Concordia Parish, La. Both her father and mother came of old Revolutionary stock. Her mother's paternal ancestor was a near kinsman of Daniel Boone; her father's paternal ancestor was a descendant of Nathaniel Greene. During the Civil War her father served as a captain of cavalry in Forrest's Brigade.

PAY TRIBUTE TO THEIR DEAD

Minnesota Legionnaires Pay Homage to Deceased Buddies Who Fought for Their Country.

In a little cemetery among the pines where sleep the members of his family at Cloquet, Minn., the body of John De Foe, the first Minnesota Indian soldier to die fighting for his country, was laid to rest. Carl Anderson post of the American Legion paid homage at his funeral.

Elsewhere through Minnesota, Legionnaires have been paying tribute at the funerals of their dead buddies, whose bodies are being returned from overseas.

"He was a clean-cut American, one of our very best, and his memory will be dear and sacred," said the commander of Winnebago post, at the funeral service of Private Vernon Bailey, in which fifty uniformed Legionnaires took part.

The body of Ralph Gracie, after whom Bendigo post is named, was buried at his home town with honors.

ADDS TO LEGION'S STRENGTH

Commander of Minnesota Department Has Way of Doing Things That Gets Results.

Under the direction of A. H. Vernon, commander of the Minnesota department of the American Legion, that state has become one of the strongest Legion departments in the country.

Commander Vernon's theory is that success comes to the Legion in proportion to the service it gives to its members and to the state. In carrying out this policy he has built up a Legion Service bureau which handles one thousand ex-service claims a month and a department branch of the American Legion News Service.

Early in 1921, when the Federal board for vocational education prepared to send representatives to sixteen centers in the state to examine disabled veterans, the authorities were handicapped by a lack of publicity. Commander Vernon prepared twenty thousand large posters and placed them on every billboard in the state. This was supplemented with information to every newspaper in regard to where every disabled man should report to receive compensation, vocational training and medical treatment.

When an unexpected number of veterans enlisted for vocational training, Mr. Vernon appealed to 20,000 business men to place the men in their establishments. The merchants and manufacturers responded with a good will and all the vocational students were placed to good advantage.

MERITED TRIBUTE TO LEGION

Leslie's Weekly Editorially Honors Brave Men Who Served in the World War.

"The American Legion begins to look like a full-page composite photograph of biographic Americanism from Putnam to Pershing," reads a recent editorial in Leslie's Weekly. "It moves with the weight of the 'Battle Hymn of the Republic' and the levity of 'Yankee Doodle,' with a ululant yell from 'Dixie.' Its large composition is a token of great trust, and the old Roman legions, and other legions of time, begin to look like pop-guns. It neither tries to roar with a lion's heart, nor win a woman's—quite different from the pomaded mustaches of Potemkin. Its manners are quiet; its memory is excellent; its emotions are strong, and it is prepared to roll at the refractory elements in one bundle and hang them on one hook.

"Without a proclamation, an agitation or unloosing a pack of schemes, it has created a civil prestige to match its military splendor. Old soldiers of all ages and all lands are prone to harp on one string, but the tramp of the Legion is in time and tune with all the chords of throbbing life. It is not merely handsome clay in uniform; but snowed in manhood from its toes to its brains. It has that delightful mixture of sense and spirit, of power and chivalry, of shop and farm, which tickles the popular taste. It neither bleats over its woes nor boasts of its prowess.

"When the mighty military machine dissolved in our citizenship the fragments coalesced through the sympathetic attraction of a high purpose—for in defending the institutions of America the Legion learned how to value them. Thus it possesses a moral prerogative to tread down lurking disloyalty. We are proud to be the fathers and mothers, cousins and aunts of the Legion. We shall sleep sound at nights. And when the historian winds up the task of glory-painting its battles we trust that he will use a golden drop of ink in stating that congress dealt a belated, but a glad and generous, bonus."

FATHER MORAN AIDS LEGION

Former Army Chaplain Assists in Obtaining Armistice Day Legislation in Minnesota.

When the Minnesota American Legion state legislative committee, at the opening of the state legislature appointed sub-committees to pilot its various bills through the house and senate, Father D. J. Moran of Farmington, was made chairman of the Armistice day committee.

Attacking the job with Argonne fervor, Father Moran obtained the passage of a bill declaring Armistice day a legal holiday as the first piece of Legion legislation enacted into law.

As army chaplain, Father Moran served ten months overseas. He is an ardent Legion lecturer and worker. When he returned from France in September, 1919, and found no Legion post organized in Farmington, he headed straight for Legion state headquarters, obtained the necessary blanks and within a week had established one of the most active posts in Minnesota.

Mr. John A. Lawson, of Baltimore, is spending some time with his daughter, Mrs. Jesse Phoebeus.

Dr. Ira A. B. Allen, of Marion, visited his brother, Rev. George Allen, at the M. E. Parsonage Wednesday and Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Barnette, of Dover, Del., and Mr. Paul S. Barnette, of Laurel, Del., visited Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Barnette, at Montic, last week.

Mrs. L. T. Hearn, Misses Flossie and Elsie Hearn, Messrs. S. P. Woodcock and Claude Hearn, of Salisbury, were guests of Mr. P. H. Cannon last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bounds, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bounds and Mrs. Mary Bounds, of Mt. Vernon, and Mr. and Mrs. Hampden Dashiell, of Princess Anne, were guests at the home of Mrs. C. N. Noble last Sunday.

Sheep Decrease in Maryland

The Census Bureau reported last week that on January 1, 1920, there were 103,027 sheep on the farms of Maryland, as compared with 237,127 on the farms on April 15, 1910. No reason is suggested for the great reduction.

The report also shows that there were 873 goats on farms January 1, 1920; 43 kids under one year, 190 goats one year old and over raised for fleece and 640 is the number of "all other goats."

HAS CHAMP FOUND THE SAME?

The Answer Is Found in the Straight-forward Statement of a Champ Resident

We have been reading week after week in the local press of Princess Anne citizens who have been rid of distressing kidney and bladder troubles by Doan's Kidney Pills, and we have often wondered whether the same high opinion of this medicine is to be found in our neighboring towns. This frank and earnest statement by a well-known and respected resident of Champ will set this doubt at rest.

W. W. Shores, Champ, Md., says: "My kidneys caused me to suffer with severe backaches a great deal. When I stooped, it was all I could do to straighten up. Colds settled on my kidneys and made my condition worse and my kidneys acted irregularly. I used Doan's Kidney Pills from Smith & Co's. drug-store and they soon fixed me up by strengthening my back and relieving all kidney trouble."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply suffer a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Shores used. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Light Bulbs as Souvenirs

It used to be that hotel guests collected matchsafes as souvenirs, and that a certain "breakage" had to be set aside monthly to cover their theft. Salt cellars and pepper boxes were taken also; but the souvenir fancy has hit into a new channel—electric light bulbs. In a determined effort to stop that craze, hotel proprietors are now having the name of the hostelry burned into the bulb.

Get Your Old Books

Go over the old books that are stored in your attic or away in some dark corner. You'll be surprised to find how many there are that you have no more use for. Take them to a second-hand book dealer and dispose of them. It's an easy way to get the money for the new books you have wanted but didn't have the necessary money to buy.

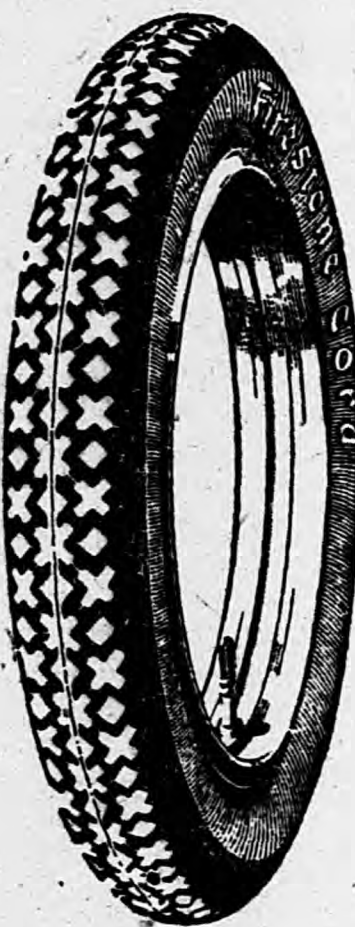

Cement for Glass

For mending valuable glass objects which would be disfigured by common cement, chrome cement may be used. This is a mixture of five parts of gelatin to one of a solution of acid chromate of lime. The broken edges are covered with this pressed together and exposed to sunlight, the effect of the latter being to render the compound insoluble even in boiling water.

ACTION

In this practical world of ours, it is the thing done that counts and not what is said about it. Action, far more than words, makes an impression.

It is natural, knowing the value of our service, that we should talk about it and bring out the many ways we can be of assistance—

But we never forget that our record depends not upon our words but upon our daily and hourly activities in behalf of our patrons.

BATEMAN--DAWSON WEDDING

A Princess Anne Girl Recently Married In New Orleans

Mr. William C. Bateman, of Norfolk, Va., former assistant engineer on the steamship Scantic and one of the most active of the visiting members of the marine engineers during the present labor controversy, has forever left the sea and is henceforth a landman. He engaged in business in New Orleans, La.

Due to the marine strike? No indeed, Mr. Bateman retains his union card and is confident the engineers will be victorious. The cause for the sudden and important change in his life arrived in New Orleans by train Saturday and Monday evening of last week became Mrs. William C. Bateman. She was formerly Miss Elmyra M. Dawson, daughter of the Rev. W. F. Dawson, pastor of Antioch Methodist Episcopal Church, of Princess Anne.

The ceremony, the culmination of a four-year courtship, was performed at the residence of friends of the groom by the Rev. W. D. Kleinsmidt, pastor of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mr. Bateman has become associated with Bowen, Brassell & Co., manufacturers and distributors, and will specialize in novelty advertising, in which he was engaged before entering training to become a marine engineer.

Farmers Organize Association

The farmers in the vicinity of Princess Anne held several meetings during last week in the interest of marketing potatoes and other produce.

Mr. Irving Culver, sales manager of the Wicomico Farmers' Association, and several directors of the association, spoke at the meeting and explained that the association would market the products of the farmers on a commission basis, similar to the Eastern Shore Produce Exchange.

The Wicomico Farmers Association started business this spring on strawberries and did a $226,000 business on this crop alone, all of which has been paid to the farmers less the commission. The association has now nearly 900 members with a paid-up capital of about $8,000. The stock is $5.00 a share and the limit is twenty shares to any one member, who must be a landowner, farmer or tenant.

The farmers in this locality voted to become a local shipping unit of the association. The stockholders met Thursday evening and elected the following board of directors: A. J. Taylor, Edward Keiffer, James Warlick, Guy Lewers, and as a member of the general board of directors at Salisbury, F. M. Olm. The stockholders also elected Levi Porter to act as local agent.

The association plans to start operating the first of this week at the Princess Anne Station and will be in a position to handle small lots and carload shipments of beans, early tomatoes, early potatoes and other produce. Farmers should get in touch with the local agent in regard to shipping their products.

The association is operating at Loretto and has shipped several cars of string beans which have given the farmers a good return. Farmers should consider marketing their crops through this association as it is being operated by farmers on a co-operative basis for the purpose of obtaining the best market prices for all farm products. The association will not buy produce, but will make f. o. b. sales on carlots and consign smaller lots to brokers of the best standing in the various markets.

State School Apportionment

Major E. Brooke Lee, Comptroller of the State Treasury, announced last Thursday the third quarterly distribution for 1921 of the State school fund, amounting to $430,648.40.

The total includes the usual apportionment of the school tax, amounting to $380,648.40; text books, $37,500; supplies, $12,500. As usual Baltimore city gets more than half of the amount, as compared to the combined totals for the 23 counties, its total being $219,218.15.

The apportionment for Somerset county is: Apportionment of tax, $7,907.27; text books, $72.56; supplies, $290.85.

County Board Of Agriculture Meet

A meeting of the County Board of Agriculture was held last Tuesday in the court-house. The board acted on a questionnaire sent to the various county and State organizations by the American Farm Bureau Federation.

The questionnaire included sixteen questions on finance, taxation, transportation and other legislative matters of interest to the farmers. The replies to the questionnaires will be tabulated and a national program in the interest of the farmers will be adopted and presented to Congress for action.

Base Ball Fever Running High

Princess Anne base ball fans are wearing cheerful faces these days because they feel that this town has secured a winning team. The committee in charge are highly gratified at the responses made last week to an appeal for financial aid.

Last Thursday the Princess Anne League met the Parkersley team on their own grounds for the second time and defeated them by a score of 13 to 5.

The Temperanceville, (Va.) base ball team came to Princess Anne last Saturday to play a game with the home team. The public, expecting a good game, were out in full force; but from the start to the finish the game was simply a comedy, the score being 27 to 2 in favor of the home team. The Virginia team had the first bat and were easy outs and when the home team came to bat for the first time the fun began, for they made ten runs in that inning. The principal features were the perfect fielding and heavy hitting by the home team and four home runs, which were made by Ringgold, Porter and Fitzgerald, Ringgold making two. There were only seven innings played.

The line-up was as follows: B. Williams, 1st base; R. Porter, 2nd base; C. Fitzgerald, 3rd base; J. Bounds, ss.; P. Dryden, r. f.; J. Bozman, c. f.; R. Wilson, l. f.; J. Ringgold, p.; E. White, c. The game was simply a good practice for the home team.

Yesterday (Monday) the League crossed bats with the Pocomoke club on the high school campus, and on Thursday the Parkersley club will come to Princess Anne. The League expects to play two games each week at home and two in some town away. The admission hereafter will be 35 cents instead of 25 cents. The game calls at 3.30 in the afternoon.

Patronize Home Merchants

Judging from the hold that the buy-out-of-Princess Anne habit has on some persons, Barnum was right when he said, "Americans love to be humbugged." Fortunately for everybody the pernicious habit of purchasing from out of town houses is going out of style. The craze has seen its day. And as a matter of self protection each community is pointing out the evils and folly of hitting at the baited hook of the 'mail order houses.'

There for a while this habit had such a hold on the people that they not only nibbled the bait but they swallowed the hook, line and sinker. Home is the bulwark of national safety and thrift. And much as we regret to say it—working against your home town's interests is a form of dishonorable intent. Spend your earnings in the town you get them and your conscience will never bother you. There is no hook concealed in the offerings of your home merchants, and in every instance you get exactly what you go after.

Masonic Service June 26th

A special service is to be held in St. Andrew's Episcopal Church on Sunday, June 26th, at 11 o'clock a. m., when Manokin Lodge, No. 106, A. F. & A. M., will be the host to visiting brethren from the surrounding districts, and march in a body to the church for this service. The sermon will be preached by the rector, the Rev. Dr. Archibald. The south side of the church will be reserved until all the Masons are seated, and the public is cordially welcome to attend the service.

PROTECTION OF CRAB INDUSTRY

Marylanders Argue For Measure Now Pending In Congress

Marylanders took a most conspicuous part in the "Fisheries Conference" last Thursday called at the suggestion of Secretary of Commerce Hoover for the purpose of discussing ways and means to protect migratory fish and other aquatic animals which face extinction because of inadequate laws.

Representative Linthicum opened the conference by making a strong plea for the support of his bill now pending in Congress, which aims to protect migratory fish.

He explained that his measure provides that all fish that do not remain the entire year within the waters of any State or Territory shall hereafter be deemed to be within the custody of the United States and shall not be taken or destroyed under the provisions of the proposed law.

It directs the Secretary of Commerce to fix closed seasons and to prescribe the manner and condition under which fish may be taken.

In appealing for support for his measure Mr. Linthicum declared that, owing to the lack of such legislation, the shad, crabs and other migratory fish are rapidly decreasing in the Chesapeake bay and its tributaries.

Representative T. Alan Goldsborough also took part in the conference. He headed a delegation from Crisfield, Md., including L. T. Carson, Wm. M. Quinn, Lorie C. Quinn, W. Todd and R. J. Lockerman.

Members of the Crisfield delegation were anxious to have some legislation passed to protect the crab industry in the Chesapeake bay and its tributaries. Wm. M. Quinn declared that due to the lax laws of Virginia at least 500 barrels of mother crabs, ready to spawn, are being cooked daily at Hampton, Va.

Women Named To Aid Reorganization

Governor Ritchie last Friday announced the appointment of 33 women to serve on the State governmental reorganization commission with the 71 male members already named.

Baltimore city will be represented by 13 of the women, the majority of these, in turn, representing various political and civic organizations. The balance are distributed over the counties. Three more women, from Cecil, Caroline and Prince George's counties, are to be named by the Governor, which will bring the total membership of the reorganization commission up to 107.

Acceptance from all of the 71 men whom the Governor has named have been received and, although a few of them may be unable to attend the initial meeting and luncheon of the commission next Thursday at the Hotel Rennet, Baltimore, all have endorsed the idea of seeking a plan for more efficient and economical government, and all have promised to attend future meetings of the commission and work with it.

The women approved for Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester counties follow:

Somerset—Mrs. T. Jacob Smith, of Princess Anne.

Wicomico—Mrs. A. J. Vanderbogart and Mrs. John M. Toulson, of Salisbury. Worcester—Miss Miriam Dickinson, of Pocomoke City.

Death Of John Reuben Gibbons

Mr. John Reuben Gibbons died at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, last Wednesday, where he was under treatment from a complication of diseases.

Mr. Gibbons was 68 years old and was well known in this town and county. Before he went to Baltimore over 20 years ago to reside he was engaged in the mercantile business in Princess Anne. His remains were brought here last Friday and funeral services were held in Antioch Methodist Episcopal Church that afternoon conducted by the Rev. W. F. Dawson.

He is survived by one son, Mr. Leslie Gibbons, of New York State. He is also survived by three brothers, Messrs. Wm. J. Gibbons, of Hagerstown, Md.; Noah J. Gibbons, of Pocomoke City; G. B. Gibbons, of near Princess Anne, and two sisters, Mrs. Sarah E. Dryden and Mrs. Mary E. Robertson.

Why Rich Men Want More

The reason a rich man is never satisfied with the size of his fortune is not necessarily because he has acquired a kind of hog instinct, but rather because his knowledge of affairs and his breadth of vision has grown until he sees bigger and bigger things that he wishes to do, and his ambition to accomplish is always a few leads ahead of his capital. The richest men in the world are usually the heaviest borrowers, because they are in a position to see the most to be done. Hence any man setting out to get rich might as well recognize at the beginning, that from the very nature of things, he can never hope to feel that he has enough.—Fred Kelly in The Nation's Business.

WARNING TO DUCK SHOOTERS

Game Warden LeCompte Calls Attention To Migratory Bird Act

State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte has given out the following statement with a request for its publication:

"The State Game Department has been advised by the Bureau of Biological Survey, Washington, D. C., which has charge of the enforcement of the migratory bird treaty act, which governs shooting of wild fowl, that hunters on the Susquehanna flats, as well as other territories in the State of Maryland, are under the impression that it will be legal to shoot ducks from a motorboat in this State during the coming fall.

"For the benefit of the sportsmen in Maryland we quote Regulation No. 3 of the game laws issued by the Federal Government: 'Migratory game birds, which includes all wild water fowl, may be taken during the open season with a gun only not larger than a No. 10 gauge, fired from the shoulder; they may be taken during the open season from the land and water, (other than an aeroplane, powerboat, sailboat, any boat under sail or any floating device towed by powerboat or sailboat), with the aid of a dog and the use of decoys.' All Federal laws supersede State laws, therefore Regulation 4 stands as heretofore, and the shooting of ducks under the Federal law from a motorboat will be, as it has been, illegal.

"The open season under the Federal law for ducks, geese, brant, jacksnipe and crowbills is November 1 to January 31. This department is co-operating with the Bureau of Biological Survey in the enforcement of the migratory bird treaty act and to see that the sportsmen in Maryland are informed as to the correct laws.

"It is illegal, and I hope it always will be, to shoot wild fowl from a motorboat, sailboat, any boat under sail or any floating device towed by a powerboat or sailboat."

Crab Industry In Serious Danger

The crab supply of the Chesapeake Bay has fallen so far below the normal catch as to cause alarm among the catchers, who have hardly been meeting expenses of operating their boats, and the packers, who are unable to buy sufficient crabs to supply the city demands. The Federal authorities apparently look upon the situation as serious, and a conference has been called by Secretary of Commerce Hoover in Washington on Thursday, June 16, to consider Federal control and other questions vital to the crab industry.

Although the mild weather during the past winter left thousands of small crabs on the bottoms unharmed by cold, the crab supply in the Bay has so materially diminished as to create fear of its extinction. It seems to be generally recognized as never before that Federal control or concurrent legislation by Maryland and Virginia is imperatively necessary. It has been impossible in the past to secure concurrent legislation with both States.

It is said that while Maryland has statute laws for conserving the crab, the industry is being demolished in the waters of Virginia, where the crabs are caught during the winter months and where the law permits the catching of crabs during and immediately after spawning, the result being that a large part of the Maryland crabs are caught before they attain full growth.

Applications Show For Training Camp

Interest in the citizens' military camp that will be conducted by the government at Camp Meade seems to be at low ebb throughout the lower part of the Eastern Shore, as, so far, it is said that not a single application has been received in Wicomico, Dorchester, Worcester and Somerset counties.

President Harding, in a statement given out last week from Washington, expressed his hope that as many young men as practicable would take advantage of the opportunity offered to attend the camps. "I hope every young man who can arrange it," said the President, "will attend one of the citizens' military training camps to be conducted this summer by the War Department in each of the nine army corps areas."

The Maryland camp will be held at Meade during the month of August, and no military obligation will be incurred by attending. All equipment, traveling expenses, etc., will be paid by the government, it was stated.

Miss Pauline Emily Richardson, daughter of the late William S. Richardson, formerly of Marion, was married last Thursday to Capt. John Albion Chase, of the 41st United States Infantry, stationed at Fort Howard, Md. The wedding was quietly solemnized at the home of the bride in Baltimore.

STATE BAR MEETING JUNE 30TH

Big Gathering Of The Association Is Expected At Cape May

The program prepared by James W. Chapman, Jr., secretary of the Maryland State Bar Association, for the twenty-sixth annual meeting at Cape May this year promises one of the best of the gatherings of the lawyers of this State. There will be something to interest members from the opening session Thursday morning, June 30, to the banquet Saturday night, July 2, which will mark the end of the meeting.

The Cape May Hotel will be the meeting place and the responses received by Mr. Chapman indicate that an unusually large number of the 550 members will be there. Members of the bench and bar will go from all parts of the State. Many will motor to the seashore, but the majority will go by train on Wednesday, June 29.

James E. Ellegood, president, will open the first session with his address.

On Thursday night there will be addresses by United States Judge John C. Rose and Attorney-General Alexander Armstrong. Judge Rose's subject will be "Procedural Difficulties in the Way of Ascertaining the Will of the People as to Men or Measures." The Attorney-General's subject will be "The Attorney-Generalship of Maryland."

An address by Forney Johnston, of Birmingham, Ala., Friday morning, on "Certain Modern Aspects of the Police Power," will be followed by a discussion of the committee reports submitted at the opening session.

Frank W. Grinnell, of Boston, secretary of the Massachusetts Bar Association, is scheduled for what is expected to be an especially interesting and instructive address Friday night. His subject will be "Some Early Lawyers of Massachusetts and their Present Influence in the Life of the Nation."

Philip P. Campbell, member of the House of Representatives from Kansas and chairman of the House Committee on Rules, will be the speaker at the morning session on Saturday, the last day. His subject will be "The Citizen and the Constitution." Unfinished business will be transacted, officers elected and the way cleared for the banquet at night.

Arrangements for the banquet have been completed by R. Bennett Darnall, treasurer. The newly elected president will preside and Eugene O'Dunne will be toastmaster. The other speakers will be Milton B. Follansbee, Chicago, on "The Pleasure of Practicing Law," Henry A. Wise, New York, on "Some Observations," and Theodore E. Burton, member of the House of Representatives from Ohio and former Senator, on "The Foreign Policy of the United States, Past and Prospective."

Ritchie To Call Meeting This Week

Governor Ritchie will probably call the initial meeting of the Democratic State reorganization committee of 71 for some day this week. The first work of the reorganization committee will naturally be the organization of itself.

When the Governor named the 71 Democrats, he did not designate a chairman. Further, he has said that he wishes the committee to elect its own chairman. This being the case, it is likely that the Governor himself will be the chairman pro tem. for the initial meeting.

The Governor has said that he thinks the committee can work to best advantage by resolving itself into subcommittees, though the various fields of endeavor for such subcommittees have not been defined. This, too, would seem a subject for discussion preliminary to the organization meeting. Without such preliminary canvassing the first convocation of the committee might be somewhat chaotic.

Look At The Date On Pink Label

The little pink label on your paper does more than bring this paper to you faithfully week after week, giving you the news of your friends, your county, of your State. It tells you at a glance just how many more weeks will elapse before your subscription expires. Look at the label today and see if you are in arrears and renew your subscription. By doing this you will render a great service to the Marylander and Herald and at the same time will assure yourself of the satisfaction of receiving the paper promptly and without interruption. If the label shows that your subscription is out or in arrears, mail a money order or check for $1.50, as all subscriptions must be paid in advance.

WORKBOAT SAILING RACES

All Maryland Folk Invited to Attend Regatta On July 2nd

The County Commissioners of each county, the Mayors and City Councils and the Town Commissioners of each incorporated town in Maryland have been invited to co-operate with the regatta committee of the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Club, of Eastern Maryland, and to attend the big Chesapeake Bay Championship Workboat Sailing Races to be held in Eastern Bay, off Claiborne, Md., July 2nd.

The program of races include five contests. There will be races for Bugeyes, Class I (boats more than 50 feet in length); Bugeyes, Class II (boats less than 50 feet in length); Skipjacks, Working Canoes and Racing Canoes, with valuable prizes to the winning boats in each class. The first race will start at 10:30 a. m., and the other races will follow at quarter of an hour intervals.

The course over which the boats will race is about nine miles in length, and has been so arranged that the racing boats will be in plain view of the large pier, the breakwater and adjacent shores at Claiborne, that can accommodate thousands of spectators. Claiborne itself is easily accessible by boat and train from every section of the State.

Arrangements are being made to accommodate thousands of spectators who are expected to come from all sections of the State and neighboring States by automobile, by excursion boat and by trains to view the races, the like of which has never before been attempted.

Governor Ritchie, members of his staff and other State officials will be present and will view the races from the deck of the fleet of five boats to be sent by the State Conservation Commission. Boats of the Coast Guard and Revenue Service will be on hand to patrol the course and the new State police have been detailed to Claiborne for the day to handle any emergencies that may arise.

The entry list in all class of boats—bugeyes, skipjacks and canoes—is increasing by leaps and bounds.

The races, which will start at 10.30 a. m., July 2, and the prizes for each are as follows:

Bugeyes, Class I (boats of more than 50 feet in length)—First prize, new suit of sails and $100; second prize, $50; third prize, $25.

Bugeyes, Class II (boats of 50 feet and less in length)—First prize, new suit of sails and $100; second prize, $50; third prize, $25.

Skipjacks—First prize, new suit of sails and $75; second prize, $50; third prize, $25.

Work Canoes—First prize, $50; second prize, $25.

Racing Canoes—First prize, $50; second prize, $25.

Motor Car Replaces Locomotive

W. H. Wright, superintendent of the Savannah Division of the Central Railroad of Georgia, inspects the property on his division with more comfort, thoroughness and speed, and at a lower cost than most divisional superintendents in America. In former days he covered his division with a special train consisting of a locomotive and coach, which required the services of an engineer, fireman and conductor.

To attain greater flexibility in his regular inspections he had a Dodge Brothers motor car equipped with standard gauge steel flanged wheels. This unique car is driven by Mr. Wright himself and in addition to the occupants it carries the varied accessories necessary to the superintendent in his work. At times the car is dispatched down the road only a few minutes ahead of important passenger trains, so confident are the officials of the motor's power and reliability. It proved so successful in several years of operations that other divisions have been similarly equipped. At present there are ten or more of the cars in operation on railroads in and around Atlanta.

Negro Farmers Decreasing In State

According to the Bureau of Census report issued last Wednesday, there are in Maryland as per last year's census 6208 farms operated by negroes, which is 13 per cent. of the total number of farms in the State.

In 1910 the number of negro-operated farms was 6370. The number operated by negro tenants is 2509; in 1910, 2334.

The acreage operated by people of color in Maryland in 1920 was $21,527, of which 217,651 are improved. The land is valued at $21,651,121; in 1910 the value was given as $10,267,234.

In 16 States the number of farms operated by negroes as per 1920 census was 920,776, valued at $2,239,062,790.

ALICE'S BLUE GOWN

By MIZPAH F. BUCKINGHAM

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"But, Lloyd, don't you like it? Isn't it becoming?"

Alice turned around in imitation of the style-show mannikins, displaying to its best advantage the limited glories of her new blue voile dress. It was a pretty dress, and becoming, to be sure, but it lacked the "something" that well that Vera Demming's clothes had.

She had heard it all her life—how so many marriages were unhappy because men lost interest in their wives when they became careless about their appearance and indifferent to styles. So Alice tried doubly hard to look her best, but it seemed that Lloyd was so "different," he never "enthusiased" about her appearance. Why didn't he call her a "peach," "classy," and such things? Just to win some word of praise from him she had worked late the night before to finish the blue dress to wear today to the shore party where they, with the other members of the Pawling Avenue club, had been invited to visit Mrs. Carter's summer home.

"You bet. It's prettier than anything Vera ever had."

The answer was all that she could have hoped for, but some way it hurt for Alice knew it wasn't true and believed Lloyd said it just to please her, because she expected him to. Oh, if he would only rave about her the way fellows were supposed to!

"Why, my little girlie, what's the matter? Have I gone and said the wrong thing again? Of course you look nice—you always look nice, to me."

"Yes—and I guess I do to other folks, too. I'm tired of your being so quiet and never noticing," she flung at him, and ran hastily up the beach to the cottage.

A plan of action had already formed in Alice's mind. She had said she didn't care, and she would show Lloyd that she really didn't.

Not a bad looking "object," either, was Carl Houghton, arrayed in the sportiest of white flannels, and—but his eyes were what Alice noticed. What admiration she read in them as she knew he was taking in every detail of her dress.

"Oh, my sweet Alice of the Alice blue gown, why do you waste thy fair beauty here alone? Sit you here by me and regard the laboring oars, tolling for our supper in yon clam bed."

"I would give me greater pleasure than all other joys combined to while away the weary hours for thee," replied Alice, laughingly, glad to find that her purpose was so easily to be accomplished.

Yet somehow her eyes kept wandering down to the shore, where she could see that Lloyd was keeping rather near Vera, and that he was enjoying the afternoon more than she was, she felt sure, as the sound of their merry laughter came to her ears.

"Well," she thought, "I guess he'll see now that her sport satin is prettier than my dress."

Soon the group passed from sight behind the boathouse, and Alice felt her spirits sinking lower as she saw that Lloyd and Vera were earnestly engaged in conversation.

After that the afternoon seemed long indeed. It was not until the crowd came back to supper that she enjoyed herself again.

Alice later was carrying things into the pantry when she stopped suddenly by the window. Some one outside was speaking and she overheard her own name. She paused to listen and recognized Carl's voice.

"But, Vera," he was saying, "I didn't say that Alice looked better than you do, I only said she had on a very neat dress, one much more appropriate to an outing like this than yours. Of course I didn't mean that about Alice, because you always look nice, to me."

The familiar sound of those words made Alice smile as she went on with her work. Perhaps it was a tired, sad little smile, for when Lloyd came rushing into the kitchen a moment later he exclaimed:

"Why, sweetheart—what's the matter—all tired out? Where's Vera? Did she go and leave you alone with all this work? 'Fraid of spoiling her skirt again probably?"

"Maybe, but I noticed that that same skirt seemed rather attractive to you this afternoon," Alice replied, sarcastically.

"Satin, was it? Humph. I didn't notice what it was. All I know is she put in a pretty unhappy afternoon on account of it. She was bubbling over with her troubles. She and Carl had some kind of quarrel—"

"So you took upon yourself the very unpleasant task of heart-healer, or something, I suppose."

"Alice, be sensible. You and Carl seemed to be getting along rather well. I knew he was telling you all the things you like to hear, and Vera was angry because she knew he thought you looked so nice, that—well, we decided to try to make you both jealous and—"

"And didn't you think I looked nice?"

"Why, honey, of course I did. You always looked better than anyone else in the world, to me."

And for some reason Alice wasn't hurt by the familiar words this time. She understood what they meant.

HER SULLEN DAY

By MILDRED WHITE.

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

Mollie decided to walk to the top of the hill. The early spring air was in vigorating and perhaps on the way she might be able to think out her problem. She had come to the country for that very purpose, because the hurry and confusing needs of life left her bewildered. Grandfather's death had occurred such a short time ago that Mollie, left alone in the rented flat, had been troubled about many things.

When the furniture was sold and the house vacated, Mollie found she must at once consider some means of earning her livelihood. To the girl, the great business world was a perplexing place for which she had never been fitted. Grandfather, in his later years, was an exacting charge, yet Mollie had been happy—that was her way. She was happy now, as she climbed the steep hill, and stood looking down on the picturesque village. The walk was a long one; it would probably take her most of the afternoon. But here and there, as she went, she spied a clump of snowdrops forcing their way through the grass, or a hopeful bunch of yellow daffodils. When the rain came all unexpectedly, Mollie was trudging along, absorbed in her meditation. She stood appalled; all down the long road there was no evidence of shelter. Her light suit would be wet through in this downpour; she bewailed April showers that came in late March, and were tinged with March chill. But what to do? The walk back to the village was more hopeless than the stretch ahead—Mollie forged ahead. And then, as unexpectedly as the rain storm, she spied the old hidden house. It's broken chimney signaled her, far back among the trees.

From above came a sudden queer jangle of music, for there was music, even in the weird sounds. When her first fright passed, Mollie became aware that someone was playing tremulously on a mouth organ upstairs. And while she was hesitating between investigation or flight, a shuffling figure came creeping down the stair—an old man, playing the harmonica as he came. His eyes blinked at the newly kindled fire and the girl seated on the floor before it.

"Who," he quavered, "are you?" He sighed in evident relief when she told him. "I was afraid," he said, "that you'd been sent to rent the house."

He straightened determinedly. "It's my house," he declared, "and it is not for rent."

"Yours?" Mollie questioned. The old man nodded sadly. "My wife and I came here when we were first married," he explained, "and we lived in these rooms a life of such happiness as few creatures are permitted to know. Our children were born here, and lived and grew and then went their different ways. My wife went her way, to Heaven. Then, as there was no one left in the house, my children agreed I'd better live with Tom. Tom is a good son but, you see, he's married to Susie."

The ending was eloquent and Mollie sympathized.

"And Susie is not good to you?"

"She doesn't understand," the old man excused, "and when I feel more in the way than usual, I come up here to the old place and light a fire and dream of those past days—maybe, sometimes, play a bit on my old harmonica."

The faded eyes were apologetic. "Susie don't like the harmonica," he said. An auto came crashing its way through the brambles. A man sprang from the car and in a moment was in the fire-lighted room. He was a good-looking young man, and his gaze rested indulgently on the bent figure at the girl's side.

"I came up after you, father," the young man said. "It is storming outside. Susie told me I'd find you here. I drove out from the city."

The old man came forward with dignity. "This is my son, Paul Worthy, Miss—, I don't believe you mentioned your name—" he paused.

"I am Mollie Moore," the girl replied, "and I sought shelter when it began to rain."

The three lingered around the fire as Paul Worthy sought and added another log. Then he discussed with Mollie very frankly his father's forlorn condition.

"He can't be happy any place but just here," said Paul, "and as I am obliged to live in my bachelor apartment in the city, I would willingly fix this old place up to make it home-like for father, if I could find the right person to take charge and make of it—really a home. Mrs. Ryan from the village would be quite able to attend to the housework, while her boy Tim could take care of the garden. But a trustworthy home manager—that is our unanswered problem."

Hopefully, eagerly, Mollie leaned forward. "If you would only let me try," she suggested. "I kept grandfather's home very nicely."

So, Mollie confided to Paul Worthy her own problem. And it happened that when summertime roses came to bloom in the old house garden, that the old man sat in great content in the shade of his evergreen-trees. And a tall young man whose car often waited at the door, would come back again for a parting glimpse of Mollie.

"Tomorrow," would be his promise, while the girl would stand looking after him, a little tender smile on her lips. Mollie's sullen day had turned to sunshine.

GIRL'S DOG TIES UP STEAMER

Owner Refuses to Let the Animal Be Killed by the Montevideo Sanitary Officials.

Montevideo, Uruguay.—Refusal of an American girl on board the shipping board steamer Aeolus to abandon her dog prevented the liner tying up on its arrival and led to the prospect of the steamer being forced to discharge its cargo in the outer harbor.

Sanitary officials ordered the animal killed in accordance with quarantine regulations, due to the presence of rinderpest in Brazil.

The girl refused to permit her pet to be consigned to death. She chose to remain on board and return with the dog to New York. Thereupon the authorities refused to allow the steamer to dock.

The owner of the dog is Miss Muriel Cornelle of New York. She said the dog belonged to her brother, who was killed in France. Comrades found the dog guarding his master's dead body and one of them brought the animal back to New York and delivered it to her.

"I would rather you would kill me than kill that dog," said Miss Cornelle.

FIND BONE CHAR SUBSTITUTE

Chemists Search Sixty Years to Find Such a Substance to Use in Sugar Refining.

Wilmington, Del.—Discovery of a satisfactory substitute for bone black or bone char, the standard material used in decoloring and refining sugar and various syrups and oils, was announced by the Atlas Powder company.

Scientists have searched for 60 years for such a substance, it was said. The powder company announced it was planning to manufacture the new product on a large scale in a 50,000-ton plant.

In extensive commercial tests with sugar, maltose and oil, the substance has been proved from 25 to 30 times as efficient as bone char. It will even permit the making of white granulated sugar directly at the raw sugar mill, the announcement said.

WELCOME TO HEAD HUNTERS

Ceremony Follows Return of Victors With Their Growsome Trophies—Women in Welcoming Party.

Prof. Carl Lumholtz, in his book, "Through Central Borneo," gives an intimate description of head hunting among the tribes there. He gives a description of a raid by ten Bukats upon a small party of Saputans who were on a hunt. The slayers hurried off with three heads.

The last night out the head hunters always sleep near their own kapong, and early next morning, while it is still dark, they come singing. The people of the kampong awake, array themselves in their best finery and go to meet them, the women wearing their newest skirts and bringing pieces of cloth to present to the conquerors. A head is carried suspended from the conqueror's neck until it is taken from him by a woman, who gives him a piece of cloth to wear instead, possibly as a badge of heroism. It makes no difference whether this service is performed by his wife, by another woman or by another man's wife. Heads are then hung from a beam in the house of the kapala, and the cloths are returned to the women. The head hunters must take their food apart from their associates, and in the presence of the heads they have taken. At meals a pinch of rice is put into a hole made with a spear point in the top of the skull, and the head is addressed in certain words: "Eat this rice. Don't be angry. Take care of me. Make this body of mine well." During the period of restrictions imposed upon the hunters the heads remain in the same place, sharing the meals in this manner. After twelve days no more food is offered the heads.

There are not enough birds, experts say, to clean up a full-strength invasion of grasshoppers such as the western farmers have come to dread, according to the American Forestry Magazine, but the birds assist materially in the efforts by man to control the pest. Of twenty-seven species of birds examined, twenty-five were grasshopper eaters. In nineteen of the species all of the individuals collected had given grasshoppers place on their menu. The birds having the best records are the lark, sparrows, meadow larks, Franklin gulls, Arkansas kingbird, crow, blackbird and the common kingbird.

Actual Date of Resurrection.

The Betrayal of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, occurred on the evening following Thursday, 14th Nisan, April 6, A. D., 30, at 10 or 11 p. m. or, according to others, soon after midnight. The Crucifixion was about 9 a. m. on Friday, 15th Nisan, April 7, A. D., 30. The Resurrection was "as the day began to dawn," on Sunday, 17th Nisan, April 9, A. D., 30. The ascension took place on Thursday, May 18, A. D., 30, or A. U. C., that is, year of Rome 783.

Why They Smiled.

I had been to a dance the night before and as my feet hurt me the next day I took off my shoes and kept my feet under my desk. I had just started typewriting and was deeply engrossed in the letter that I was transcribing when my boss called me into his office where he and six other men were holding a conference. I quickly jumped from my chair and walked into his office, forgetting my shoes. I noticed that the men were trying hard not to laugh and I finally woke up to the fact that I did not have my shoes on.—Chicago American.

AIR ROUTE TO OIL FIELDS

Communication With North Established—New York Airmen Return.

Ottawa, Ont.—Air communication has been definitely established between the Northern oil fields and Edmonton through the return from the North of the all-steel monoplane "J. L.-8." From Peace river it was piloted by H. S. Myhr, one of the Imperial Oil company's pilots, while John M. Larson of New York, inventor of the all-steel monoplane, also was aboard. Mr. Larson flew from New York to Peace river on the "J. L.-8" and is now on his way back to New York. Two Dominion government parties have already started from here for the Mackenzie region and two more will go soon.

COPS TO BE "SIGNAL TOWERS"

Lights and Storage Batteries Harnessed On for Use in Outlying Districts in New York.

New York.—Night traffic policemen, harnessed in small editions of the signal light towers now used to regulate travel in Fifth avenue, soon are to be employed at busy intersections in outlying districts of the city. Special Deputy Police Commissioner Harris announced.

One hundred sets of this newly devised apparatus, which consists of storage batteries carried on the back and a system of varicolored lights suspended from the chest have been ordered, Mr. Harris said.

The lights are operated by push buttons on the belt.

CONGRESSMEN FORM BODY

Veterans' Association Is Launched by Men Who Served in Various Wars.

The old spirit of the A. E. F. and of America's war-time army, navy and marine corps broke out in the halls of the nation's congress in Washington the other day, when veterans of the World War who are members of congress, joined by members who served in the Civil and Spanish-American wars, held a big meeting and a regular feed at the University club and formed "The Veterans' Association of the Sixty-seventh Congress."

Two members of the United States senate and 32 members of the house of representatives attended the dinner gathering which resulted in the organization of the congressional veterans into a body. Twenty-six of the members of the house of representatives in attendance were veterans of the World War and members of the American Legion. Representative Henry Z. Osborne of the Tenth California district, a veteran of the Civil War, acted as toastmaster. He felicitated the country upon the formation of the American Legion, saying that the "vets of '17" were willing and proud to turn the reins of patriotic endeavor over to the "boys of '17."

In addition to choosing Congressman Roy G. Fitzgerald of Ohio, president of the association, and Congressman John E. Rankin of Mississippi as secretary, and getting away with an elaborate course dinner billed in the still familiar doughboy French of "over there," the congressional veterans listened to a careful explanation of the legislative program of the American Legion in congress made by John Thomas Taylor, vice chairman of the national legislative committee of the Legion, who was a special guest of honor and the only person present not a member of congress. Mr. Taylor went into detailed advocacy of the consolidation, vocational training, hospitalization and emergency officer retirement bills proposed by the Legion.

WAR ON LEGION BACHELORS

Women's Auxiliary of Sunflower State Issues Ultimatum to Unmarried Ex-Service Fellows.

War on bachelors has been declared in Kansas. Women of the Sunflower State contend that unattached men can't get along without them.

In furtherance of the fight, Miss McCoy of Topeka, Department secretary of the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion is spreading the broadcast the battle cry: "No bachelor posts in Kansas." Every group of Legionnaires is to have an Auxiliary, according to Auxiliary officials.

"Who else can give you fine home cooking with your tanquets? Who else can straighten up the club house and give it a homelike appearance? Who knows more about service than the women?" the propaganda reads. Legion prisoners captured in the Campaign are being treated to fried chicken, pies, cakes and dainties and patchings.

Miss McCoy entered the business world as an assistant in a Kansas bank. During the war she stepped into a position vacated by a soldier, held it throughout hostilities and gave it back to the doughboy when he came home.

LEGION FLAG ADDS HISTORY

Ex-Service Men's Emblem Now Proudly Flies Where Five Others Held Sway.

The American Legion flag will fly in a part of New Orleans that has been under five flags, for the city administration has turned over a building in the heart of the old French quarter to posts of the Legion for four years.

Not far from the Legion building is the Spanish Cabildo where the Spanish colors flew in the breezes from the Gulf of Mexico until they were replaced by the French. The Louisiana Purchase in 1804 resulted in the appearance of the Stars and Stripes on the ramparts. In 1812, the British flag flew also in that vicinity for a few days. During the Civil War the Confederate colors waved proudly over the southern city. When the wounds of civil strife were healed the Stars and Stripes again reappeared.

The Legion building will have an auditorium, offices and clubrooms. It will also house Louisiana department headquarters, the Legion employment and service bureau, local posts, the Women's Auxiliary headquarters and the Pelicanaire, official organ of the Louisiana department.

It's Toasted

Reunited by Smith's Spite Fence.

By HAZEL BLAIR.

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

It certainly was a desirable property from every point of view, but one point of view was permanently included, and that was the outlook upon old Mr. Smith's garden. It was an enormous garden, almost big enough for the grounds of an institution, and from Mr. Smith's front gate Mrs. Harnack could see rows of magnificent elms and locust trees and flower beds which always seemed to bloom with seasonable flowers. But from her side windows she could see nothing.

"It's the spite fence," explained the agent. "That's why the property's so cheap. Mr. Smith resented the late owner's building next to him, and so he put it up."

So Mrs. Harnack bought the property. It was just the place, she told herself, for a widowed lady to settle down, and there was an excellent finishing school near by for Miriam, her only child. And days passed and weeks passed, but neither saw Mr. Smith.

One day the agent stopped her in the street. "I hear you're going to have a neighbor," he said, grinning. "What, somebody else going to build on the other side?" asked Adeline Harnack apprehensively.

"No, Mrs. Harnack," the agent answered. "Old Mr. Smith's nephew, John, is coming to live with him. Wonder what old man Smith will do with him."

"Teach him to be a fencemaker, I suppose," said Mrs. Harnack crossly. Young John Smith was put into a lawyer's office in Cosset Town. One day, when Miriam had been home from school two weeks, Mrs. Harnack, walking with her, saw her daughter bow, and John Smith raised his hat as he passed on the opposite side of the road.

"How do you know him?" demanded the mother.

"Oh, I was introduced," answered her daughter evasively. "Then understand, Miriam, I forbid you to speak to him again or notice him."

"Very well, mamma," answered the daughter submissively.

But on the next day carpenters arrived at Mr. Smith's house, and they proceeded to erect a rough scaffolding on the outside of the fence. And the next day painters mounted it, and before nightfall the exterior bore the sign, in huge letters of yellow and red:

"Try Pyramid Pills for That Tired Feeling."

Adelina Harnack was away that day in town. When she came back she saw the legend. She was furious.

"Miriam, I am going to stop this if it takes every penny I have," she said. "I am going straight down to Mr. Capel, the lawyer, to instruct him to get an injunction."

"But, mamma—" "Now, not a word, Miriam!" "All right, mamma, only John—I mean Mr. Smith—is working, in Mr. Capel's office."

The name betrayed the secret which the girl's tones concealed. Mrs. Harnack turned on her.

"Why do you call him John?" she asked icily. "Is it possible—possible—?" She looked at her daughter's scarlet face. "Miriam, has there been anything between you and that contemptible young man?"

Miriam began to cry. "I love John," she sobbed. "And he loves me, and he's coming to see you tomorrow afternoon."

"No, indeed," answered her mother. "I am going to see him, and his uncle, too, and tell them what I think of them."

Her anger was at the boiling point when she arrived at the front door. "Is Mr. Smith in?" she asked of the housekeeper.

"Mr. John Smith, or Mr. Johnathan Smith?" asked the woman curly. "Jonathan!" said Mrs. Harnack quietly, and the housekeeper thought it was the answer to her question. But Adelina Harnack merely repeated the name in wonder. Could there be two Jonathan Smiths or was it—?

"Walk in, please," said the housekeeper, and a half minute later the visitor found herself in the presence of the recluse.

He had not changed so greatly. He was the same man whom she had once loved so passionately, save for the tale of years. And he knew her. "Adelina!" he exclaimed, and stumbled forward. And Adelina Harnack somehow found herself in his arms, though it was 20 years since she had left them.

FIND YANK'S BODY PETRIFIED

French Miner Discovers Corpse of Private of 166th Infantry in Coal Pit.

Marysville, Ohio.—Ralph O. Clark, who served as a member of Company E, One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Infantry, overseas, has received word from France telling of the finding of the petrified body of Charles Johnson, an American soldier who lost his life overseas.

The body was found in an abandoned coal mine at Fronchambault, France, in the latter part of March. It was discovered by a crane operator when he was digging with a pick in the coal pit.

Johnson was returning from a nearby city with two buddies, when, making a misstep, he plunged down into the abandoned coal mine and was killed.

His companions were unable to rescue him, and, "absent without leave," they failed to report the accident for fear of being punished.

Hotel guests are buying the strong box and placing it against their doors at night or setting it on luggage which they wish to protect. The boxes are produced in various sizes and with alarms varying in strength from an ordinary buzzer to a fire-alarm gong.

CHEMISTRY'S GRAND OLD MAN

Dr. Charles Frederick Chandler, familiarly known as "Chemistry's grand old man," is eighty-four years old and still doing some of the most important work of his life as consulting chemist to the chemical foundation. He is here shown in the laboratory engaged in an important research problem.

Doctor Chandler was formerly professor of chemistry at Columbia university; has been the president of the New York board of health, and was one of the founders of the American Chemical society.

Turkey Hen Lays.

Falmouth, Ky.—Mrs. A. H. Stephens, formerly of this county but now residing in Kenton county, has a blue turkey hen that laid 80 eggs last spring and then raised a brood of young turkeys.

She has a bronze turkey hen that began laying April 1 and laid continuously up to Nov. 17, a total of 176 eggs. During all this time the hen did not show any inclination to "set."

Sun Cooks Scientist's Meals on Novel Stove

Washington.—Advantages of the Old Sol cook stove, operated 24 hours a day on sun heat alone, were explained to the National Academy of Sciences here by Dr. C. G. Abbot of the Smithsonian Institution.

The device is as yet a luxury, he admitted, but added that Mrs. Abbot had done everything but fry on the solar cook stove at Mount Wilson, Cal. He displayed a can of beans, saying they were solar cook stove canned, looked good and "tasted better."

The apparatus, Doctor Abbot said, was a "concave, parabolic, cylindrical reflector" through which ran a tube of ordinary cylinder oil to absorb heat from the reflector and then apply it to the cooking compartment, insulation retaining heat in the oil over night.

Cooking temperatures were automatically regulated by a float device, he said, while a simple clockwork mechanism kept the reflector pointed to the sun.

A Paying Business

• Sell New Electric Plant Everyone Can Own

Complete Electric Plant Only $295

THIS is an inspiring message of success—a great opportunity for high-class salesmen who want to succeed and build up a business they can own.

People have demanded lower prices. This demand we have met squarely and finally. We have literally cut prices to the bone and more—we offer a complete, practical electric plant that fills a long-felt need at a price never before equaled.

Six and one-half million farm homes—need electricity. Now every home can afford it.

Think of the tremendous possibilities of this announcement—to furnish electricity to every home in North America where central-power-station current is not available! Every one in your vicinity without central station current is a prospect.

Willys Light Junior is large enough for lights and small-power uses. It measures up to the high quality of all Willys Light products. We have reduced the price of every Willys Light.

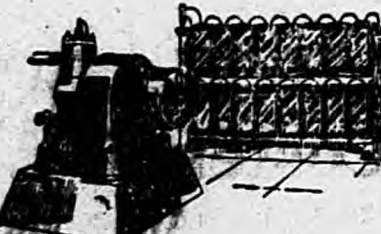

The man who sells Willys Light sells a line without competition in price or quality. We also have a new exclusive easy-to-pay plan, another great aid in making sales.

We want a few men of high caliber to carry this great story to the homes that are yearning for electricity.

Some men of action are going to grasp this great opportunity now. Are you one of them? Get in touch with us at once and let us explain the details.

The fact that with a price of $845, the good Maxwell is now back to the prices of three years ago, is attracting a considerable amount of attention among motorists. "Two reductions since last fall have shown the public that the good Maxwell is now priced extremely low," says Mr. A. H. Reynolds, agent, of Princess Anne, "and the result is a stimulation in sales that is extremely gratifying. The good Maxwell, in my opinion, is now by far the best motor car investment to be had."

Thrilling episodes both above and below the Atlantic feature "Deep Waters," Maurice Tourneur's picture which will be shown at the Auditorium tonight Tuesday. The story was adapted from a novel by H. Hopkinson Smith. One of the exciting scenes is where a steamer founders on the rocks and sinks. The first body which he recovers is that of the young man with whom West's young wife has run away. Barbara Bedford, Jack Gilbert and Broerksen Christians play the leading roles in this photo play.

Sunshine in Your Home

Don't shut up your house, lest the sun should fade the carpets; don't require everybody to be quiet lest a merry laugh should shake down some of the dusty old cobwebs there!

When once a home is regarded as only a place to eat, drink and sleep in, the work is begun that will end in degradation. Young people must have fun and relaxation somewhere; if they do not find it at their own hearthstones it will be sought at other and perhaps less profitable places. Therefore let the lights burn brightly at night, and make the home delightful with all those little arts that parents understand.

Don't repress the buoyant spirit of the children; half an hour of merriment around the home blots out the remembrance of many a care and annoyance during the day, and the best safeguard they can take with them into the world is the unseen influence of a bright domestic circle.

Put home first and foremost, for there will come a time when the circle will be broken; when you'll long for the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still, and when your greatest pleasure will be in remembering that you did all in your power to put a song under every burden, and to make each other happy.

The Home Of The Soul

In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach, most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter. [Advertisement.]

BALTIMORE'S MOST UNIQUE FACTORY

Baltimore has a unique factory in the midst—a throbbing beehive of activity and production. It is unlike any of the other jobs and production plants of the city because its first purpose is to remake men.

In doing this it is a powerful factor in the building of citizenship and good government and in the combatting of Bolshevism and anarchy.

This man factory is to be found in the Industrial Home of the Salvation Army at Sharp and Montgomery streets, where derelicts of every description and from every cause, whether from drugs, drink, crime, misfortune or prison stigma, find refuge and once again eat a square meal and occupy a real bed. Pitiful, helpless, friendless, homeless, jobless and penniless, are the bits of wretched mankind that make up the procession that enters here.

They leave it after a time, remade, regenerated, rejuvenated, ready to face the world again, to once more hold down a steady job, to pay their debts, take up their duties and discharge their obligations. In short, they again ties and store rooms as being no further returned to the paper mills for remanufacture in the past year 461 tons of er use. This material is collected by the Salvation Army wagons, usually driven by men seeking to "come back" by this route. It is cleaned, sorted, repaired, also by men as part of their remaking and when the conglomeration of repaired furniture, garments, shoes, etc., are in good shape, and they are sold to people, glad of the chance to outfit families or housekeeping quarters from a source that meet the limitations of the most meager purse. Though the purchase of such a garment or bit of furniture is made for a few cents carries with it its measure of self-respect. Thus in the shops of the Salvation Army Industrial Home all sorts and conditions of trades find their exponents.

The shop at Sharp and Montgomery streets, while providing work and shelter for the men nobody wants, has contributed in a valuable capacity to the solution of the paper shortage which has been nation wide. Here they have collected, sorted, baled and

ENDS SHOULD BE VARNISHED

Agricultural Department Tells How to Prevent Door From Sticking on Damp Days.

A door which sticks to the frame every damp day is not conducive to unruffled feelings on the part of those who use it. The forest products laboratory of the United States Department of Agriculture at Madison, Wis., has made public a method which obviates the difficulty.

Wood specialists there say that the fact that the top and bottom edges of a door are practically always left unfinished is largely responsible for its troublesome habit of swelling and shrinking. The exposed ends of the vertical stiles give the most bother, because wood picks up or gives off moisture more rapidly through surfaces cut across the grain than through those cut parallel to the grain.

If the doors in a house are to shut easily and fit tightly, it is important that their top and bottom edges be protected by paint or varnish. If it is necessary to refit the door after it is hung, the freshly exposed surface should be refinished at once.

Used Nature's Gifts.

There are no indications that in remote time either oil or gas was put, to much practical use as modern people understand that term, but there is little doubt that priests of the fire-worshipping cult which flourished in old Persia made "good things" out of the phenomena. Not far from Baku are the ruins of a temple of the cult which is believed to have been in existence for more than 2,500 years. Tower beacons and altars are provided with channels concealed in the masonry, which demonstrate that gasfiting is not a craft of modern birth. These channels led from fissures in the earth which once furnished natural gas. To this temple came pilgrims from all parts of the East as late as the eighties of the last century. Besides the walls of the temple today stands a modern refinery, furnishing an emphatic contrast in the old and new uses of Nature's gift of oil and gas.

Love.

"Dear Mame: What you asked me about did I love Charlie, well, dear, it's this way. I'm afraid if I don't take him I'll be sorry, and if I do I'll regret it, because I can't live without him any more than I expect I'll be able to live with him. It's just so exciting being miserable until I'm happy, that if I ain't in love with him I might as well find it out one way as another, and so we're going to get married if I don't change my mind, and if I do, the Lord have mercy on my soul, Mame, because he's an awful lemon if he has got a job! So that's how it is, dearie, and they tell me it's just perfectly natural, like the measles.

"I'll send you an invitation, and when you see me walking down the aisle with him, for the love of Mike, Mame, don't giggle. This is too darned serious for you to act like you feel like.

MINNIE."

Exaggerations.

"America is a wonderful country," said the distinguished visitor as the ship was landing.

"Yes," ventured the intrepid interviewer; "but it isn't nearly as extraordinary as you gentlemen from abroad make it appear when you write your first impressions of it."

Time Enough.

"Am I right in surmising that you have something of serious import to say to my daughter?"

"Oh, no, sir. I'm merely going to propose to her. I'll talk over the serious details with you after the wedding."—Detroit Times.

take their places in the world as good citizens and producers—taxpayers, instead of tax consumers. How is this done? What is the solution of such transformation? By the love of God and the brotherly kindness of the Salvation Army, that has learned through half a century's experience how to handle and to help men to help themselves.

Frequently the men who apply for a meal and bed are too weak and exhausted by dissipation, illness, lack of proper food, etc., to do any more than sort or ball papers and when that is through they are assigned just the hardest amount of work to earn the first meal. This calls for the sorting of twenty-five pounds of paper means a meal and a bed.

It is always the policy to ascertain the trade or vocation with which the man is familiar and then to put him at that type of work. In order to furnish such a wide range of activities as represented in the constant strain of down and outers, that apply for help there. The Salvation Army long since solved the problem by putting the human wastage to work on the vast assortment of wastage of clothing, furniture and general odds and ends which the public pours forth from at-waste paper that would otherwise have been lost.

They have provided meals for 17,620 men, beds for 5,873 men who would otherwise have been shelterless or else found their way back to jail through vagrancy; 448 garments and 68 pairs of shoes (all of these repaired in this shop) have been given to the desperately needy and 473 men have been helped through these means toward rehabilitation.

While the Salvation Army looks after the body of a man first it does so with a view to reaching his soul. In this home last year, there were 122 evangelistic meetings held with an attendance of 2,240 and eleven conversions are proudly reported. Despite the best efforts of the Army, it never can accommodate all that appear for help because of lack of room, beds and funds with which to operate, and while it spares no effort to fan to life the most dormant spark of manhood and ambition, it must of necessity be financed in order to finance these men through their feeble efforts to gain control of themselves and to be producers. The Salvation Army therefore, welcomes the opportunity to collect all of the salvage of every description that comes within its reach.

FAMILY AND FORTUNE FOUND

Two college girls spending a holiday in Boston not long ago, saw a Salvation Army Lass resting on a park bench with her unsold "War Crys" in her lap.

"Let's go talk to her!" exclaimed the tall one. "No—let's buy her papers!" protested the short one. "I'll buy all of them, if you will agree to read one all of the way through," laughed Grace, the tall one.

Madge agreed, and the purchase was concluded. Back in their room at the hotel, Madge tried to beg off after she had read all but the "Missing Friends" advertisements.

"Read every single line, as you promised," insisted Grace.

Suddenly Madge jumped up and held out the paper pointing to a photograph. "Look! Look! Grace—that's the porter who carried our bags—sure as you are alive!" Both girls rushed downstairs, hunted up the porter and showed him their copy of the "War Cry" with his photo and the advertisement for news of him. It also appealed to him to return home if it should meet his eye.

The man admitted that he had been the family's blacksheep, had run away ten years before and had never written of his whereabouts.

Later information sent these girls disclosed the fact that the man thus put in touch with his people through their instrumentality, was of wealthy parentage and his return meant not only restoration to his people and station but almost put into his hands a considerable fortune.

This is only one of hundreds of cases of the missing—that are located by this, the most wonderful detective agency in the world.

Published in 49 languages to the extent of one million copies weekly, circulated in over 7,000 cities in seventy countries it reaches more people than any other publication.

CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

"I was weak and run-down," relates Mrs. Eula Burnett, of Dalton, Ga. "I was thin and just felt tired, all the time. I didn't rest well. I wasn't ever hungry. I knew, by this, I needed a tonic, and as there is none better than—

But How About the Other Gap? Surgeons have discovered that if a part of a nerve is destroyed, so that a gap is left, the gap can be filled by a piece of nerve taken from some other part of the body and the function of the nerve thereby be restored. A gap of more than three inches has been filled in this way.

TRAINING CAMP FOR YOUNG MEN

TO BE OPENED AT CAMP MEADE, MARYLAND, ON AUGUST 1ST.

NO CHARGES WILL BE MADE

Splendid Opportunity For The Youth Of The State To Secure Valuable And Healthy Experience.

A free summer camp, with all expenses included, railroad fare paid, is offered this summer by the government to 1,200 young men between the ages of 16 and 35 who reside in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia. This Citizens' Military Training Camp will last for thirty days, commencing on August 1st, and will be held at Camp Meade, Maryland, about half way between Baltimore and Washington.

Attendance at the camp will not cost one cent to any of the candidates who are selected to go. They may either pay their railroad fare from their homes to Camp Meade and be reimbursed as soon as they arrive at the rate of five cents for each mile traveled, allowing an ample margin for meals and other expenses en route, or if they prefer they will be furnished with a ticket before they leave home and allowed not to exceed $3.00 a day for their meals while traveling.

Upon arriving at Camp Meade each man will be supplied with a complete set of uniforms and equipment. He will then be assigned to quarters in comfortable permanent barracks. When mess call sounds he will find a well-cooked meal all ready for him paid for by the government and prepared by army cooks who are now going through a special course of training at the Camp Meade Cooks' and Bakers' School to prepare them for duty at the camp. All the mess attendants will be supplied from Regular Army regiments stationed at Camp Meade. Should he have need of it at any time he will find a well-equipped hospital free of charge with competent army surgeons and dentists.

In return for this he will be called upon to devote his mornings to military drills and exercises under the direction of officers specially selected from the Infantry School at Camp Benning, Georgia for duty as instructors, and will be encouraged to spend his afternoons in athletics and games under the supervision of officers specially trained to supervise such activities.

While he will live in permanent barracks, he will frequently take short hikes through the beautiful rolling and wooded country of Southern Maryland, carrying the infantry soldier's field equipment and ending the march by going into camp and spending the night under canvas if the weather is good. Some of his meals in the field he will cook for himself in his "mess kit" and others will be served to him from rolling kitchens.

The military part of the day's program will include demonstrations of all the modern military weapons, such as Tanks, Artillery, machine guns and trench mortars by veteran regular troops stationed at Camp Meade, as well as the actual drills in which the candidates will take part. It is hoped that they will become sufficiently interested to affiliate with the National Guard or Organized Reserve when they return to their homes, thus fitting themselves to be leaders instead of followers if they should ever be called upon to serve their country in case of another war, but attendance at the camp involves absolutely no obligation, moral or legal, to perform any further military service.

Off duty hours will be well provided for, and candidates will be encouraged to spend all their time in camp by providing them with amusements so that they will not want to leave it. There will be movies and other forms of entertainment every evening and frequent concerts by some of the fine Regular Army bands stationed at Camp Meade. The religious atmosphere will not be neglected. Two chaplains will devote their entire time to the Citizens' Camp and to the management of a service club where candidates will be entertained in their spare time. Other chaplains of six different denominations on duty with regular troops of the camp will be available for advice and counsel.

The Military Training Camps Association, composed of graduates of previous similar camps held at Plattsburg, New York, and other places, are in active charge of receipt and forwarding of applications through their nearest local representative, O. O. Ellis, Room 404, Title Annex Building, 11 East Fayette street, Baltimore, but if he cannot be conveniently reached, information and application blanks can be secured and arrangements made to obtain without charge the very simple physical examination by writing to the Commanding General, Third Corps Area, Fort Howard, Maryland.

Applications should be forwarded as early as possible, as the final selection of applicants must be made well in advance of the opening of the camp on August 1st. In case the number of applicants exceeds the capacity of the camp, vacancies will be apportioned by counties in proportion to their population, and the individuals selected by a method which will insure that each locality and each individual applicant has an equal chance.

MANY INDUSTRIES TIED TO TOBACCO

Prohibition of Weed Would Mean Big Financial Loss to Allied Trades.

WHO USES THE MATCH?

The Smoker Mainly—Also Responsible for Spending Hundreds of Millions Annually for Licorice, Sugar, Coal, Cigar Boxes, Tin
Foil, Etc.

"Got a match?"
How many times a day is that question asked in these United States? How many more times is the question unnecessary because most pockets are kept well supplied with the useful little article? Anyhow, inasmuch as it is estimated that there are 30,000,000 tobacco users in the country, we would guess that the answer to that question would run into the hundreds of millions.

For if it weren't for the smokers in these days of electric lights how many matches would be used? A pretty small proportion of the number of these "sticks of blazes" produced in the country every year. Abolish tobacco and the match business would be shot to pieces.

But the match business is only one of a dozen or more allied industries which derive large revenues directly or indirectly from the tobacco trade and would suffer heavily if national prohibition of tobacco were to go into effect as some of our reformers would have it. The annual sales of tobacco products, based on retail prices, is estimated at $1,867,000,000. Of the cost of producing and selling this quantity of cigars, cigarettes and other forms of the weed, some hundreds of million dollars are paid out for other things than the raw tobacco and labor of making it up.

For example, the tobacco trade consumes each year 45,000,000 pounds of licorice, 50,000,000 pounds of sugar, both used in flavoring tobacco, and 650,000 tons of coal. It is estimated that the value of wooden cigar boxes used is $25,000,000 a year, quite an item to the lumber business and to manufacturers of the boxes.

In making these boxes 550,000 pounds of nails are employed. Other large items used in making and preparing tobacco for sale are tin and lead foil, paper for bags and cigarette wrappers, cloth for tobacco bags, labels, coupons, etc., involving the printing trade extensively.

Then building contractors and manufacturers of machinery are largely interested. Investments in plants and machinery employed in manufacturing tobacco are estimated at $102,000,000. Replacement, up-keep and interest on the investment make no small sum annually.

And let really men note there are approximately 225,000 tobacco farms in the country, with a total estimated valuation of $160,000,000. Of further interest to real estate men is the fact that there are 700,000 retail establishments selling tobacco, involving a total rental and up-keep impossible to estimate, besides the large amount of office space occupied by administrative branches of the general business.

The insurance men, too, have their share of the pickings. The tobacco business pays out annually $7,000,000 in premiums in the United States.

And there are the railroads who reap revenue from 2,210,000 tons of tobacco products every year.

As for the advertising business, here again it is impossible to form any estimate of the enormous annual outlay.

The prohibition of tobacco would also knock a good-sized hole in the receipts of the United States government. The internal revenue receipts from tobacco for the fiscal year 1920 amounted to $295,809,355.44. Customs duties provided an additional $25,000,000 in round figures, making the total revenue return to the government $320,000,000.

Influence on Popular Sentiment
It is this interlocking of the tobacco business with so many other interests and the vast amount of financial loss that would be involved in the abolition of tobacco that is one of the most serious aspects of the proposal to prohibit the sale of tobacco, a proposal, however, which has little support by public sentiment if the newspaper editors of the country are correct in their estimate of that sentiment.

In a poll of the editors made recently by the Tobacco Merchants' Association of the United States, through the Press Service Company of New York City, 95 per cent of the 7,847 editors who replied expressed the opinion that the people of their communities were opposed to any law against tobacco. As these editors represent some 80,000,000 readers the results form a pretty general test of national opinion.

In their remarks accompanying their replies many of the editors expressed it as their opinion that the opposition of their communities to the abolition of tobacco was based to some extent at least on the damage such a change would do to the business interests of the community. This was particularly true in the tobacco growing states and others where there were large tobacco plants.

But when the extent of the business involved in the allied interests of the tobacco trade is considered, as above outlined, it is clear that there is hardly a section of the country that would not be affected directly or indirectly by abolishing tobacco.

Canvass of 7,847 Editors Shows
7,393 Communities Against Abolishing Weed.

ANTIS LOSE THREE STATES.

Utah, Under Mormon Influence, Only Commonwealth to Adopt Prohibition Measure During Year.

"Is tobacco going to have its scalp added to the belt of the prohibitionist beside that of the lamented but as yet not altogether late alcohol?" is the question asked by Garret Smith in an article in the current issue of Leslie's Magazine.

The writer reaches the conclusion that while there has been increased agitation and legislative activity on the subject of tobacco following the success of the drive for prohibition of liquor the efforts of reformers seeking to abolish tobacco have no general support. This opinion is based on the results of the questionnaires on the subject sent out to newspaper editors of the country by the Press Service Company of New York City.

The questions asked were:
(1) Do you favor the enactment of laws prohibiting the personal use of tobacco by adults?

(2) In your judgment does the general sentiment of your community favor such legislation?

(3) Is the use of tobacco personally objectionable to you?
No arguments accompanied the questions and from their form it was impossible for any editor to determine the attitude of the questioners.

Out of 12,518 editors questioned, 7,847 replied according to the summary given. These editors, it is estimated, represent a combined circulation of 21,870,046. Of the 7,847 editors replying, 7,393, or 95 per cent, represent public sentiment in their communities as opposed to anti-tobacco legislation.
Only 200 editors, or 8 per cent, of those replying believed there was any considerable sentiment favorable to tobacco prohibition. There were 174, or 2 per cent, in doubt, while 20 failed to record their judgment.

Editors' Judgment Unbiased
"It is of special interest to note that 569 editors in answering the first question, personally favored such legislation, although only 200 of them reported that public opinion also favored the prohibition of tobacco—an indication of the conscientious effort made by the editors to distinguish public opinion from their own personal opinions," the article continues.

"The highest percentage of replies reporting public opinion favorable to prohibition of tobacco came from Utah, where 42 per cent of the editors thought the public were for such a movement. Utah is the only state which has since adopted an anti-cigarette law. The result was forecast by several of the editors who stated that the influence of the Mormon Church was against tobacco. The Mormon Church is also strong in Idaho, which is the other state where the use of tobacco was recently prohibited, but the governor has signed the bill just passed, in which the prohibitory legislation is repealed. In this state 80 per cent of the editors estimate sentiment in their communities as against tobacco prohibition, which, nevertheless, is 6 per cent below the average reported opposition.

"The legislature of Tennessee some weeks ago passed and the governor has signed a bill repealing the anti-cigarette law of that state. The questionnaire showed 93 per cent of its editors believed the public against anti-tobacco legislation. The legislature of Arkansas has also passed a bill repealing its anti-cigarette law. In this state 94 per cent of the editors reported against tobacco prohibition.

Arizona's Practical Joke
"A bill, introduced in the current session of the legislature of Arizona to prohibit smoking in public dining rooms and other public places, was first amended to prohibit the consumption in public of peanuts, chewing gum, tea and coffee and then defeated by the senate. The questionnaire returns from that state were 92 per cent 'no.'

"In Iowa where the 'no's' were 95 per cent a bill to repeal the anti-cigarette law has been passed and signed by the governor.

"A bill to repeal the anti-cigarette law in Kansas, with 89 per cent 'no's', is receiving the attention of its legislature. Last year a petition for a referendum in Oregon to prohibit the use of tobacco failed of sufficient signatures to bring the question to a vote, and 95 per cent of the editors declare their public against legislation.
In Oklahoma an anti-cigarette bill has been reported unfavorably in the house. The editors of that state reported 94 per cent against its public support.

"Outside of Utah, where Mormon influence predominates," the article concludes, "the anti-tobacco movement appears, as in the case of Tennessee, Arkansas and Iowa, to be losing ground and is not to any considerable extent supported by the people."

The friends of tobacco feel particularly elated over this showing. Inasmuch as 1920-21 was a maximum year in legislative circles with 42 state legislatures in session and the tobacco subject received an unusual amount of consideration.

MORE and more every day the demand for Fordson Tractor increases because the Fordson has demonstrated so much usefulness, so much economy, so much labor saving, so much money saving, along so many lines of activity. The farmer has discovered that not only for plowing, harrowing, discing, seeding, mowing, reaping or threshing, but a multitude of other uses; cutting wood; feed; grinding feed; churning; washing; furnishing water in the house; making electric light possible in the house and around the barns, so that, as a matter of fact, there is hardly an hour in the day when the Tractor cannot be made a profitable servant. There is ditching to do; there are roads to fix; and so on all down along the line of the enormous calls that constantly face the farmer the Fordson steps in and does the work, shoulders the complete burden of the toil and the hard work, one might almost say "drudgery." SCHOOL SITE SETTLED BY COURT

Judges Restrain Board From Erecting Building At Mt. Vernon

Mr. Willie O. Murray and other residents of lower Mt. Vernon district, recently filed a petition against the Board of Education of Somerset county to enjoin the erection of a high school building in that district on the so-called "Jackson lot."

Patrons of the school in lower Mt. Vernon were dissatisfied with the "Jackson lot" location and filed the injunction.

Last Tuesday afternoon Judges Duer and Bailey passed an order to restrain the board from erecting any school building in Mt. Vernon district until a school had been erected in compliance with the directions of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1916, midway between the two schools formerly known as School No. 1 and School No. 2, at a cost of at least $8,500.

The Legislature of 1916 passed a law providing for a bond issue to erect a high school in Mt. Vernon between Schools No. 1 and No. 2. The School Board in office at that time decided with the County Commissioners to levy the money for the erection of the school and not to issue the bonds and the School Board at that time purchased what is known as the "Dashell lot," which is about midway between the two former schools. When the present Board of Education assumed office it abandoned the "Dashell lot" and decided to build on the "Jackson lot," about a mile further north and not between the two former schools.

The order of the court filed requiring the Board of Education to build first a school building in compliance with the act of the Legislature of 1916, virtually means that there will be no school erected on the "Jackson lot," as it is believed that the board will not erect two buildings so close together.

George H. Myers, attorney, represented the plaintiffs and State's Attorney L. C. Beauchamp, the Board of Education.

Base Ball Games

Monday of last week the Princess Anne team played the Pocomoke team on the home grounds, in which the Pocomoke team was victorious by a score of 11 to 8.

Wednesday the Princess Anne team went to Temperanceville, Va., and played the Temperanceville team. The score was 3 to 4 in favor of the Temperanceville boys.

Thursday the team from Parkley, Va., came to Princess Anne and was defeated by the home team by a score of 8 to 1.

Last Saturday the Princess Anne team went to Pocomoke City and defeated the Pocomoke team by a score of 14 to 9.

This week there will be two games played in Princess Anne. Wednesday the home team will play the Crisfield team and on Saturday the Newark and Princess Anne teams will contest their skill. The games will be called at 3:30 p. m.

Mt. Vernon Camp July 29th

Beginning next Wednesday, July 29th, there will be a camp meeting held at Mt. Vernon by members of John Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, Rev. G. W. Williams, pastor. Many former pastors are expected to assist at the meeting, and the public is invited to attend. There will be a boarding tent and refreshment stand. The refreshment stand will be closed on Sundays. Ministers of the Gospel will be given free meal tickets.

Some men are out of work and others out with work.

EASTERN SHORE SOCIETY ON VISIT

Has First Automobile Tour Through Counties From Baltimore

The Eastern Shore Society of Baltimore left that city last Friday morning on its first automobile tour of the Eastern Shore counties. Before returning they visited each of the nine counties and the nine county seats. There were about 35 in the party representing natives of all the counties.

The party had lunch at Chestertown, after which they proceeded to Centerville and Easton. At the latter point they visited the beautiful colonial home of Milton Campbell, Esq., "The Anchorage," on the Miles river.

The first night was spent at Cambridge. Saturday morning the trip was resumed to Salisbury, Princess Anne and Crisfield. At the latter point lunch was served. In the afternoon the trip was resumed via Pocomoke City to Snow Hill and the day's fun ended at Ocean City. On the return trip the party went via Denton and Rock Hall. Those in the party were:

From Somerset county—F. A. Davis, Joseph Y. Brattan, J. Milton Jones.

From Wicomico county—John T. Lowe, L. I. Pollitt, C. I. Elzey, L. Wesley Cooper, Edward F. Johnson.

From Worcester county—Frank D. Mills, Thomas H. Spencer.

From Talbot county—J. H. Caulk, Kemp, J. H. K. Shannahan, T. F. Connel, D. C. Mansfield, C. H. Mansfield, Henry Hopkins.

From Kent county—W. G. Wilson, G. E. Walls, W. Herdman Schwatka, W. R. Gale, W. W. Dowling.

From Cecil county—Dr. J. M. H. Rowland, Dr. H. B. McDowell.

From Dorchester county—Hon. P. L. Goldsborough, George T. Phillips, Hampton Steele, T. E. Travers, S. B. Cator, G. T. Phillips, Jr.

From Caroline county—R. L. Greenlee, Dr. J. C. Clarke.

This society was organized in 1913 with 112 members and now has over 500. Its success has been a source of pleasure to Eastern Shoremans everywhere. J. H. K. Shannahan, of Talbot, was secretary-treasurer of the society from its organization until at the end of last year when he declined reelection and was made vice-president for Talbot county. Walter R. Gale, of Kent, is now secretary and treasurer.

Swedish Dancer Wednesday Night

Signe Paterson, the dancer who created such a sensation with her dancing at Ciro's in Paris, at the London Opera House in London, and at the Winter Garden in New York City, is coming to Princess Anne. She is to appear here in person in a repertoire of Hindu, Egyptian and Hawaiian dances in an elaborate singing and dancing prologue which will be presented at the Auditorium tomorrow (Wednesday) night in conjunction with the showing of "The Woman Untamed," a fascinating South Sea Island romance, starring Dorinda, the famous American dancer. The prologue in which Miss Paterson will appear, is billed as the Hawaiian Musical Revue and includes the famous Royal Hawaiian Orchestra, of native Hawaiian ukulele players, singers and dancers.

Funeral Of Mrs. Gunby

The funeral of Mrs. Graham Gunby, who died at her home in Salisbury, following a protracted illness, was held Monday afternoon of last week. Mrs. Gunby was a member of one of Salisbury's most prominent families. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Thomas Rosser, assisted by Rev. Robert A. Boyle. Interment was in Parsons Cemetery.

Mrs. Gunby, who was a daughter of the late William Sydney Gordy and Virginia Brewington Gordy, was married in 1902 to Graham Gunby, son of Louis W. and the late Francis Graham Gunby. She is survived by her husband, one son, Graham Gunby, Jr., one brother, William S. Gordy, Jr., and one sister, Miss Nancy Gordy.

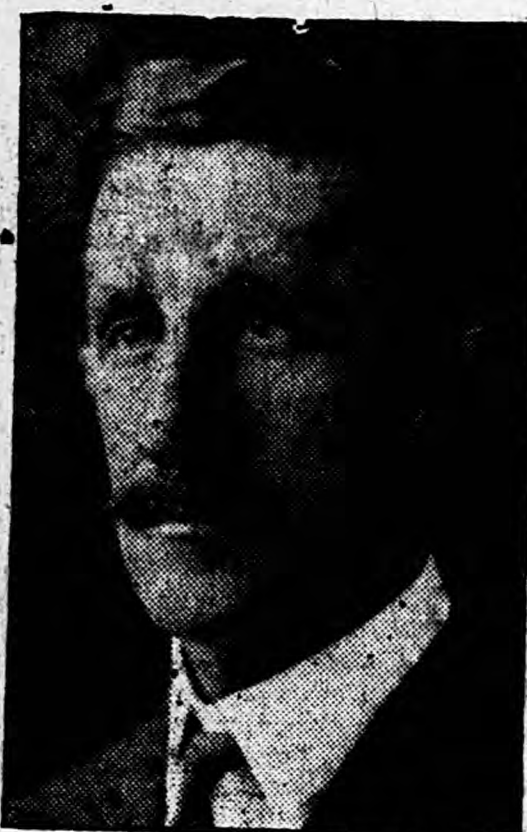

Ship Produce Through Association

A number of farmers have shipped their produce through the recently organized Princess Anne Division of the Wicomico Farmers' Association. Two cars of beans and one car of potatoes were shipped last week through the local agent, L. H. Porter.

The local agent has been provided with a phone in the Todd building and is in position to give prompt service to all farmers who desire to ship their produce through the association. Daily market quotations will be furnished and the association will assist the farmers in every way possible in the marketing of their produce.

If you expect things to go wrong, you seldom will be disappointed.

DR. ALFRED P. DENNIS

Cable Order From Secretary Hoover Brings Dr. Dennis To U. S.

Dr. Alfred P. Dennis was in Princess Anne last Saturday as the guest of his sister, Mrs. L. A. Oates, after an absence of nearly three years. A greater part of this time was spent in Italy as commercial attaché of the American Embassy at Rome. While at this post he reported to Washington on economic conditions, not only in the Italian Peninsula, but in the Islands of Sardinia, Sicily, the Balkan States, Egypt and the former oyster territories now united to Italy as a result of the war. At the first of the year Dr. Dennis was transferred to London, by way of promotion, to the most important trade post connected with our diplomatic service. As such he enjoys the ranking position in the government's European commercial service.

In obedience to a cable order from Secretary of Commerce Hoover, Dr. Dennis arrived in New York on the Aquitania June 11th, and has since been in Washington collaborating with the officials of the Department of Commerce in a broad scheme for promoting our export trade by increasing the efficiency of our commercial experts abroad. Under instructions from Secretary Hoover Dr. Dennis has made a number of speeches in various parts of the country. During this week he will get as far west as Chicago, where he will be the principal speaker at a banquet gotten up by Chicago business men directly or indirectly interested in our foreign trade. From Chicago Dr. Dennis goes direct to New York to catch the steamship Lafayette of the French line, sailing on the morning of July 2nd. On the same ship sails Mr. and Mrs. S. K. Dennis, of Baltimore, and Mr. Marion T. Hargis and daughter, of Snow Hill.

Mr. Dennis was fortunate in being in the country at the time of the reunion of his class at Princeton University last week. He was presented with a silver loving cup by the class on this occasion and was introduced in this wise when called upon to make the principal address at the class dinner.

"There may be some difference of opinion," said the toastmaster, "as to just what constitutes success and as to the particular men in the class who may be accounted to have made the greatest success in life. There can be no difference of opinion, however, as to the fact that our Classmate Dennis has had the most unique, extraordinary and varied career of any man in the class. He has been a farmer, backwoodsman, legislator, college professor and is now a member of our diplomatic service. He has been a camp cook and dishwasher for an engineering corps in the wilds of Alaska. He has served on three university faculties as professor of history. He has for eight years done the work of a corn field negro in the swamps of Southern Maryland and Virginia. He is the only American business man to my knowledge who ever sat on a sofa with the King of Italy, at his majesty's invitation, and discussed with him the habits of Pocomoke river shad. Now that he has been promoted to the post in London we may expect to hear that he has been shooting crabs with Arch Bishop Canterbury."

94,822,431 Whites in United States

The 1920 white population of the United States comprised 94,833,431 persons of the 105,710,620 total, according to an announcement by the Bureau of Census.

The balance were divided: Negroes, 10,464,013; Indians, 242,959; Japanese, 111,025; Chinese, 61,686; Filipinos, 56,038; Hindus, 25,065; Koreans, 4,622; Maoris, 8. The rate of increase in the negro population diminished considerably during the decade, as did also the Chinese. The Japanese showed the largest rate of increase.

GOVERNOR HAS NO SET IDEAS

Ritchie Laid Plans Before Committee Last Thursday

Representative Democrats from every section of the State assembled at the Hotel Rennett, Baltimore, last Thursday at the invitation of Governor Ritchie to sit down to luncheon and discuss the Governor's proposed reorganization of the State government.

The afternoon's events opened with the luncheon, the commission, which numbers 71 men and 36 women, being present. There were, however, some notable exceptions. Frank A. Furst was missing, being on a business trip North. Former Senator Smith was also absent, having an engagement elsewhere, but he had written the Governor a hearty letter of co-operation which the latter read. Senator Smith was, however, represented by his fidus Achates, Samuel K. Dennis, who sat at the head table, a couple of places from Collector of Internal Revenue Joshua W. Miles. At this table also were the Governor, Judge Burke, Emory L. Coblenz and several ladies.

The Governor opened the business of the day with an address in which he gave an outline of his ideas as to State governmental reorganization and his reasons for appointing a commission to draft a plan, after considering the report and suggestions on the subject made by the Chicago experts employed by him months ago.

In his address the Governor made it plain that he was not committed to the details of any particular plan; that he wanted to bring about greater efficiency in the administration of the State government without increasing the cost to the taxpayers.

Following the Governor's address, which was received with evidences of approval, nominations for permanent chairman were called for and former Judge N. Charles Burke, of Baltimore county, was chosen by acclamation. Succeeding this came the offering of resolutions. A woman member of the commission, Miss Kate McLane, of Baltimore county, offered one to authorize the chairman to appoint an executive committee.

A resolution offered by former Congressman Carville D. Benson provided for the naming of a committee to propose a plan for reducing the number of State elections.

The chairman appointed the following on the executive committee: Judge N. Charles Burke, ex-Senator John Walter Smith, former Governor Emerson C. Harrington, Judge Carroll T. Bond, Frank A. Furst, Comptroller E. Brooke Lee, Treasurer John M. Dennis, Emory L. Coblenz, William Miles Maloy, Samuel K. Dennis, Charles P. Coady, former Comptroller Hugh A. McMullen, W. Lee Rawls, Thomas H. Robinson, W. Mitchell Diggs, W. Mason Shehan, Stuart S. Janney, Omer F. Hershey, Mrs. Charles E. Elliott, Mrs. James F. Briscoe and Mrs. Frank P. Scrivener.

He also named the following as the committee on reducing the number of elections: Carville D. Benson, Joshua W. Miles, F. Neale Parke, Sylvan Hayes Lauchheimer and Henry D. Harlan. The idea is that when the work of the commission is finished it will have mapped out a legislative program for the regrouping of the State offices and for constitutional amendments to meet changed governmental conditions. These amendments will have to be passed by the Legislature and then submitted to the people of the entire State. Therefore, any important changes that may be brought about as the result of the conclusions of the commission named by the Governor will come about gradually.

Orderly To Gen. Sheridan Dead

John Francis Foreman, orderly to General Sheridan and last survivor of the famous ride "From Winchester Twenty Miles Away," died at the home of his son, Melbourn Foreman, at Waynesboro, Pa., last Thursday from an attack of neuralgia of the heart, aged 77 years.

Mr. Foreman served throughout the Civil War, and while he took part in over 30 of the hardest engagements was never wounded. He entered the service September 26, 1862, and was honorably discharged on June 16, 1865, as a member of Troop G, Seventeenth Volunteer Cavalry of Pennsylvania.

Prize Cow Makes Record

Bella Pontiac, the world's record cow, owned by T. A. Barren, of Brantford, Ont., has set a new record. Figures made public last Thursday by James Wilson, supervisor of the official test of the Holstein-Friesian Association, showed that for the fiscal year ended June 18th Bella Pontiac produced: Milk, 27,017 pounds; fat, 1259 pounds; and butter, 1573.75 pounds. Mr. Wilson said these figures were far in excess of any previous record.

DREADNOUGHT MARYLAND SAILS

Greatest United States Warship Begins Tests Last Tuesday

The super-dreadnought Maryland, believed by American experts to be the most powerful fighting machine afloat, put to sea last Tuesday from Newport News, Va., to begin a series of tests preliminary to being turned over by the constructors to the Navy Department.

The Maryland, as soon as commissioned, will be transferred to the West coast as one of the units of the reorganized Pacific fleet, to which force also will be assigned, on completion, her sister ship, the California.

Carrying eight 16-inch rifles in four turrets, the Maryland is said to combine the longest range with the heaviest broadside of any naval vessel afloat. She is electrically equipped and her first trials will be witnessed by many civilian experts interested in that science as well as by a full coterie of naval observers.

The Maryland is the largest battleship yet built for the Navy. She is 600 feet long, 97 1/2 feet wide at the waterline, has a mean draft of 30 1/2 feet and is as large, if not larger, than any of the warships of the world. She has two funnels, two masts, is heavily armored below and above the waterline, will make an estimated speed of 21 knots an hour and has a normal displacement of 32,000 tons. Her displacement loaded is 33,490 tons.

Aside from the usual aircraft and submarine protection, the Maryland carries eight 16-inch turret guns and 14 5-inch secondary guns. There are four 3-inch anti-aircraft guns, two 21-inch submerged torpedo tubes and four 6-round saluting guns.

The ship's complement will consist of 1410 officers and men. There will be 24 wardroom officers, 28 junior officers, 13 warrant officers, 64 chief petty officers and 1281 men.

Naval officers who returned to Newport News, Va., Thursday night aboard the new electrically propelled battleship Maryland at the completion of her builder's trials off the Virginia capes said the trials were run through without a single hitch. Rear Admiral C. W. Dyson, chief of the bureau of engineering, expressed himself as highly pleased with the result of the tests of the battleship's electric-drive installation. The trials were complete a day ahead of schedule, the battleship returning after an all-night run at test speeds.

Methodist Protestant Conference

A group of ministers and laymen of the Methodist Protestant Church met for conference regarding the plans of the church extension on the Delmarva Peninsula at the Young Men's Christian Association Building in Salisbury Monday of last week.

The Rev. Dr. James H. Straughn, who presided, spoke of the great evangelistic campaign now being conducted in various places within the bounds of the Maryland Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church. He said that more than 100 ministers had been enlisted in this campaign and 18 were at work on six different teams at the present time. He explained the object of this particular meeting, which was to speak of the scope and effort of the Peninsula Church Extension Society.

Among those present were the following ministers and laymen: The Rev. Dr. James H. Straughn and the Rev. Dr. J. M. Sheridan, of Baltimore; the Rev. Leonard B. Smith, of Wilmington; the Rev. C. M. Jenkins, Edward Sterling and Newell Mears, of Lawtonia; the Rev. C. M. Elderdice and C. W. Howeth, of Crisfield; the Rev. F. M. McCorkle, of Crisfield; the Rev. Edgar T. Read, of Hebron; the Rev. John A. Wright, of Hebron; the Rev. G. E. McDorman and H. B. Mervin, of St. Michaels; the Rev. C. M. Adams and H. C. Harper, of Hurlock; the Rev. R. Y. Nicholson, of Cambridge; the Rev. G. R. Donaldson and J. P. Cooper, of Sharptown; the Rev. George Hines and E. W. Tull, of Marion Station; the Rev. E. L. Bunce and M. L. Vessey, of Pocomoke; the Rev. James W. Baxley, of Manokin; the Rev. R. L. Shipley and Fred P. Adkins, of Salisbury.

Democrats To Meet In July

The Democratic State Central Committee will be called to meet the latter part of July it was stated last week. Letters announcing the date are to be sent out shortly after the Fourth.

There has been considerable talk of a chairman of the committee to succeed Dr. J. Hubert Wade. Comptroller E. Brooke Lee has been spoken of and would have the support of the city organization. How much support he would obtain from the old-line State organization is problematical. J. Enos Ray has been mentioned as the most likely choice of the latter.

LOST SHIPS REMAIN AN ENIGMA

Investigation Will Probably Never Explain Sea Mystery

Four departments of the Federal Government last week took up the search for three missing American ships. "Missing, fate unknown," read the record of the ships. "Crews' whereabouts never reported."

The mystery of the disappearance of the vessels was the more tantalizing because it all happened a short distance from Washington—off Cape Hatteras. On a calm sea and in clear water, the ships disappeared, their crews going with them.

A fourth ship, a schooner, ran ashore in the vicinity of the Cape, all sails set, her cargo untouched.

The fate of the "vanishing ships" threatens to go down in history as one of the unexplained mysteries of the sea.

Officials of the Department of Commerce admitted that the search for a Twentieth Century pirate, undertaken after all other theories to explain the disappearance of a half dozen boats off Cape Hatteras failed, so far had produced no results.

"I've heard many tall yarns of the sea," said Eugene T. Chamberlain, Commissioner of Navigation. "But in this case the facts are there. The Carroll A. Deering and the Hewitt met some strange fate beyond that of which ordinary vessels come to grief."

The Deering was the schooner that sailed on the shoals, abandoned apparently in a calm sea, and with the ship in good condition. The Hewitt and her crew dropped completely out of sight about the same time.

"Of course we don't say flatly that these ships were victims of piracy, but we have and are investigating that angle," Chamberlain said.

That American navigators are not the only ones to admit piracy as an explanation of the vanished ships was revealed by William Lytle, chief clerk of the Bureau of Navigation.

"The Hewitt was insured in London," said Lytle. "British investigators looked into her disappearance. At first they were inclined to believe that the Hewitt and the Carroll A. Deering collided and that the Deering's crew was taken aboard the Hewitt, the latter then sinking with all hands aboard. But an examination of the Deering's hull revealed that no such collision had taken place."

Greatest Sea Mystery

The greatest sea mystery on record is that of the American bark Marie Celeste, which was found off the Azores three months after she left Europe, in 1872, with all sails set, undamaged, in calm weather, but with the crew missing.

A boarding party from the ship which sighted the bark found the table set for dinner, with hot coffee in the pot, and everything aboard the ship in the same condition it would have been had the crew left only a few minutes before. On a sewing machine was a waist which the captain's wife had been making, while toys used by the captain's son were on the floor. In the fore-castle was a table with playing cards distributed around as though members of the crew had leisurely left a game of cards.

Besides the captain, his wife and son there were 10 in the ship's crew. The vessel was taken to port and again put in service, but about six years later she disappeared completely with her crew and no word has ever come from her.

Fires Started In a Garage

A new source of danger in country towns was exemplified in Manchester's fire Wednesday afternoon, when seven residences, a garage, and a number of outbuildings were destroyed. The fire spread from the garage of Charles E. Trump & Sons, where the welding torch used in vulcanizing set fire to a can of gasoline. The bank building was wrecked and the Manchester Fire Engine and Hook and Ladder quarters in the Firemen's Hall and those of the Dug Hill Insurance Company were burned. Help came from Hampstead, Westminster, Hanover, Pa.; Arcadia and Glyndon. Three new automobiles and four used ones in the Trump garage were burned. The Manchester fire loss approaches $200,000, with small insurance.

Hampstead's fire on Tuesday morning was caused by a similar happening in a garage, and the Rising Sun fire a few days ago started in a garage.

Women may not be logical, but who wants them to be, and how many men are?

Gannon's War-Song

(Copyright)

"If I only had a brother!" said Nellie Shaughnessy, with a meaning toss of her brown head.

She stood behind the closed blinds at the front window, looking across the narrow confines of Blossom Court at a certain stoop on the opposite side, where, in all the glory of a pink shirt and a tie of dazzling blue, young Mr. Martin Ryan, better known to the denizens of the court as "Blink," sprawled his big frame, the while he smoked innumerable contemplative cigarettes.

In the dim plush rocker the gaudy little parlor of the Shaughnessys flattered Aloysius Gannon, slight of frame and mild of mien, swung to and fro in uneasy silence.

"Or a father who wasn't too old to teach some of these young whelps their manners," Nellie went on, with a glance at Gannon that set his face flushing.

"Or if I was only a man myself," the girl at the window rattled on. She sighed with much ostentation. "I'd show Blink Ryan that he couldn't take liberties with me nor anybody belonging to me."

"Aw, say, Nellie," Gannon deprecated, "he didn't mean nothin' by it. It was just him kiddin'."

"The girl's eyes flashed. 'It don't make no difference what he meant, he done it,' she said flatly. 'Now, maybe you gave him a bit of encouragement,' Gannon suggested hopefully.

"You know me better than that," she cried in fine wrath; "or if you don't you'd oughter. 'Twas last night, when we was comin' home from St. Joseph's picnic. The car broke down an' we didn't get back till near ten. Blink walked down with me from the car, our ways layin' in the same direction. An' when we got here to the door he put a hand on my arm."

"Good-by, Nellie," says he. 'Haven't you the bit of a good-night kiss for me?'

"I've not," says I, tryin' to get the key in the door, but he held hold of my arms.

"Nellie, you're lookin' as fresh as a primrose," says he. 'I've a mind to have my good-night kiss without the askin'."

"You'll be doin' nothin' of the sort," says I, 'for I'm as good as promised to a man who is so much better than you are, Blink Ryan, that you're not worthy to untie the shoes of him. I'm savin' my kisses for him.'

"An'-an' then he threw his arms around me so I couldn't move an' up-titled my chin an'-an' kissed me!"

"Well, well, 'tis no great harm done," Aloysius observed with a sickly grin. The girl's lips curled scornfully. The glance she threw in his direction was filled with supreme contempt.

"If I was a man," she snapped decisively, "I'd like to know of another man kissin' my steady, whether she wanted him to or not."

She crossed the room to the old-fashioned square piano and began softly running her fingers over the yellowed keys. For a time she struck mere disconnected chords; then, still very softly, she began to play "Killarney."

With the first notes of it Gannon's drooping shoulders straightened. For the first time that evening he sat erect in the chair.

"Nellie," he said, "'twas a low-down trick. No man is goin' to take liberties with you, not when I know it. Say the word an' I'll go across the court an' punch the face off him."

"For a minute, Al, I thought maybe you are afraid of him," she said, "but now I know you ain't, an' that'll give him what he deserves for gettin' fresh with me last night. Go, Al, an' I'll love you for it," she ended impetuously.

Gannon stood looking at her, at a loss just what to do or say. The perspiration streamed down his forehead; his knees felt like paper.

"Nellie," he cried hoarsely, "play 'Killarney' again!"

Without looking at him she bent over the keyboard and began playing once more. The effect on Gannon was instantaneous.

"I'll learn him to kiss ye, Nellie, that I will!" he cried in fine defiance. "I'll go over there an' I'll make a shambles of that stoop, mark what I say, now. Only," he had paused at the door, "for the love of Heaven, Nellie, keep on playin' 'Killarney,' will ye? Don't let up on it for a minute. It's because I don't want ye to see the slaughter," he added as she looked at him wonderingly.

"Never in my life have I loved you as I do this minute, Al," she said.

"Then play—play as ye never have before," he commanded, and the door to the hall was banged shut in her face.

Across the narrow court the placid Mr. Ryan calmly rolled another cigarette, evidently quite unaware of the impending doom hanging over him.

out a cloud of smoke from the cigarette.

"An' if it's Nellie that you're havin' reference to," said he, "she's not the helpless female that you think. 'Twas a swell crack on the ear I got for my trouble."

"'Tis a sweller one you'll be gettin' from me," Gannon retorted with conviction. "Sure, if you've no more manners than that I'll teach you some."

"D'yer mean you've come lookin' for trouble?" Ryan asked as he got slowly to his feet.

"Run home, now," he advised. "You'd better go while there's time. 'Tis scared to death you look. I won't hurt you, sonny, honest I won't, not unless you do something foolish. What? Oh, you would, would yer? Ugh!"

For Gannon in a frenzy of anger had stepped forward, swung his right with all the force he could muster, and landed neatly on Ryan's long jaw.

"I'll learn yer," he yelled, his voice breaking in its anger—"I'll learn yer a thing or two before I'm done with yer."

Ryan sprang at his assailant with a howl of rage, driving blows at the face which the other strove to avoid by rushing to a desperate crouch.

There ensued moments of wild excitement in the usually quiet court. Windows went up with a bang, heads were thrust out, men bellowed advice, and women screamed.

Struggling, cursing, panting, they pushed and writhed and finally toppled over to the pavement. And it was at this inopportune moment that Gannon's inspiration suddenly ceased, for Nellie Shaughnessy, unable longer to endure the stress of blind waiting, quitted the piano and sought the front window for a nearer view of the melee.

"Play, Nellie," gasped Gannon chokingly, for the fingers of Ryan's right hand were already tightening on his throat. "For God's sake play 'Killarney,' an' don't stop!"

The girl's white face disappeared from the window. Once more from behind the blinds came the wavering notes of the piano, and at the sound Gannon by almost superhuman efforts wriggled loose from the grip of the man above him. With the lightning of a cat he gained his feet, sprang at the astounded Ryan and rained on him such a shower of blows that he wavered, gave back a step, tripped over a loose paving stone and went down.

Before he could regain his scattered wits the shower of blows commenced again, and with a howl of terror he ran across the court with Gannon in frenzied pursuit, and while the spectators gave vent to yells of derision (for to Gannon came all the sympathy accorded the under dog) he fled up the stoop whereon he had so recently taken his ease, tore through the open door and, banging it shut in his pursuit's face, held it fast; the while, on the other side, Gannon smashed it lustily with fists and feet, demanding stridently that his opponent come forth and get the rest of what was coming to him.

It was only when, across the court, the last notes of "Killarney" died away that his assaults on the unyielding door ceased. Then quietly, even shamefacedly, he sought shelter in the hallway from which a few minutes before he had emerged.

Because both eyes were badly swollen he could scarcely see, but he was aware that some one ran from the front room to meet him, that two arms encircled his neck, and that a soft, cool cheek was pressed against his own bruised and battered face.

"Kiss yer, would he?" he muttered, stroking her hair. "Kiss yer when yer told him nay? Well, he's got his all right for what he done. He's got his. Take me into the parlor, Nellie, an' play me 'Killarney' once more."

"'Twas not that I minded the kiss so much, Al," she confessed as she led him stumbling through the door, "but 'twas the thought that you didn't mind, an' that you'd let him because you was afraid of him."

Gently he pushed her from him. "Play 'Killarney,'" he repeated.

Then, as the uncertain strains floated out on the stillness of the court he closed his eyes wearily in supreme content.

In the back yard of the house across the way Blink Ryan nursed his battered features and meditated deeply.

St. Croix of History.

It was on St. Croix, West Indies, that Alexander Hamilton at the age of 15 took his first sip from the cup of fame by his vivid description of a hurricane that swept over the island. Columbus told glowing stories of this spot—which the Spaniards named Santa Cruz, Holy Cross—and one of his accounts was that he had seen there oysters growing on trees beside the water. This tale was attributed to the picturesque imagination of the famous navigator, but it had a deeper foundation in fact than his mermaid story. The overhanging branches of the mangrove trees take root in the waters of the lagoons and young oysters cling to their branches, which are thus covered with the popular mollusks.

Excellent Whitewash.

The so-called government recipe for whitewash is as follows: Slake one-half bushel unslaked lime with boiling water, keeping it covered during process. Strain it, and add a peck of salt dissolved in warm water; three pounds ground rice put in boiling water, and boiled to a thin paste; one-half pound powdered Spanish whiting, and a pound of clear glue, dissolved in warm water; mix these well together and let the mixture stand for several days. Keep the wash thus prepared in a kettle or portable furnace, and, when used, put it on as hot as possible with a brush.

INDIANS IN PERU KNEW OF JAZZ

Prehistoric Instruments Indicate That They Must Have Started Early.

KNEW NOTHING OF STRINGS

Instruments of Percussion and Wind Instruments Composed Their Orchestras—Bells Were of Copper With Pebble Clappers.

New York.—That the Indians of prehistoric Peru knew the art—or should we say science?—of "jazz" is apparent from the decorations, representing orchestras and dancers, found on the ancient pottery and metal objects of the region. Further evidence is furnished by accounts of early writers, and, most convincing, by numbers of the musical instruments themselves which have been recovered from graves and ruins by archaeologists. These instruments include drums, bells, cymbals, rattles, pipes, flutes, whistles, trumpets, and an unmistakable ancestor of the oboe. If the activities of an energetic Indian orchestra, equipped with some or all of these instruments did not produce something akin to present-day jazz, the writer is guilty of an error in judgment.

Undoubtedly, early man sang and danced before he produced instrumental music. As the most important element of the song and dance is rhythm, and as in singing and dancing a desire for some sound to clearly indicate the rhythm seems to be universal, primitive vocalists and terpsichoreans everywhere have found assistance in the snapping of fingers, clapping of hands, beating of hips and stamping of feet. Then, probably, the drum was devised—the first musical instrument. The allied instruments of percussion, as cymbals, rattles and bells soon followed.

Wind Instruments. Later came the wind instruments, such as musical shells and varieties of pipes and horns. And finally, the more complex stringed instrument was developed. The greatest single step forward in the history of instrumental music was the mechanical production of a musical scale. This came with the pipes. In Peru, evidence is found of the first two types—instruments of percussion and wind instruments—but so far nothing has been found to indicate that the prehistoric Indians of the region knew how to make music from the vibrations of strings.

In the American Museum of Natural History in New York City there is a large collection of prehistoric musical instruments of Peru. They have been carefully studied by Charles W. Mead, Assistant Curator of the Department of Anthropology, whose findings have been published in a short paper. According to Mead, no drums have been found in ancient Peruvian graves. This may be for the reason, he believes, either that the drums of the time, being made of perishable material have all disintegrated, or that because of some superstition it was not customary to bury drums with the dead. Drums, however, were pictured by the native artists of the time and described by early writers, the evidence showing that they were identical in kind with the drums used to-day in several parts of Peru. They were made of skin stretched over a hoop of wood or over one end of a short section of a tree trunk hollowed out to a thin cylinder. Small drums seem to have been the rule. The drum heads were usually made of the skins of deer and other animals common to the country.

Copper Bell. The bells of the Peruvian "jazz" orchestra were of copper, with pebbles for clappers. There were rattles, made of small shells, nuts, seeds, &c., which were worn attached to the wrists, ankles and other parts of the body in dancing. Gourds filled with pebbles were used as hand-rattles. Shells were struck together like cymbals. The Museum collection also contains three small bronze discs, slightly concavo-convex, with perforated projections by which they were evidently suspended. When struck with any hard substance they give out a remarkably clear and resonant sound.

Whereas among us the fad of the day is the ukelele, the Peruvians of "THE GOOD OLD DAYS" delighted in performing on the huayra puhura, or pipes. The pipes were open and closed, and made of bone or cane, and, in one known instance, of stone. Flutes of cane, or bone and of gourd were also popular. They were carved in a variety of fantastic shapes. A number of the bone flutes which have been found have stop-holes on the under side, apparently meant to be closed by the thumb. They are very primitive instruments, not producing a true or complete scale. That the Peruvians were able to realize their shortcomings to at least some extent appears in the fact that in some instruments attempts to correct the scale have been made; the vents have been plugged with bits of gourd and substituted by other holes. Moreover, it is to be remembered that the age and condition of the instruments, especially those of cane, have doubtlessly affected the tone qualities.

Designed the White House.

The designer of the White House was James Hoban, born in Ireland about 1755. He came to the United States, settling in Charleston, S. C., and later to Washington when the city was first being laid out. He worked for the government for the greater part of his life. He is chiefly known for his work in connection with the White House, the rebuilding of which he directed after it was burned in 1814.

Mentality of Tropical Peoples.

The emotional mentality of tropical peoples is well known. It is not only a remarkable belief, but a fact easily demonstrated by scientific observation and will be proved that the excessive use of sugar could produce such results. Only recently a Bengalese scientist has found that the blood of tropical peoples contains a higher percent of sugar than others.—New York Medical Journal.

MEDICINE MAN NOT A FAKER

According to English Scientist, He Deals in the Occult, and With High Moral Intent.

The medicine man, as known to the ancients and to the aborigines of America, Africa and other lands, was no faker or humbug or quack, according to Dr. Marrett of the University of Oxford (England). In a book on Psychology and Folk-lore he describes the Australian bushman's incantations to drive out of a man's head the crystal that has caused his disease, after which he produces in his hand a piece of crystal, apparently out of the sufferer's head.

Neither he nor the patient nor the patient's friends is deceived; they all know that he has had the crystal in his hand or up his sleeve all the time, and that he has been acting ritualistically or symbolically throughout the incantation. The crystal is a symbol of the mischief within the head. What the medicine man really does is to set the good magic influence or "nama" within himself to combat the bad "nama" afflicting his patient. He, in fact, deals in the occult, but he does so with high moral intent, and has attained to the power of so dealing only after severe training, involving fasting, isolation and all the other miseries of a special initiation.

DENSEST OF KNOWN WOODS

"Lignum Vitae" Without a Rival for Many Purposes—Makes the Finest Tenpin Balls.

They are making tenpin balls of a "composition," but the classic balls are still turned from the heart of that wood called lignum vitae, Latin words meaning stone of life, and which we render as "living stone." Many persons believe that lignum vitae is not a botanical name, but merely a trade name covering numerous varieties of very hard, compact and heavy wood. This is not the fact. The lignum vitae tree grows in Florida, on the Florida keys, in the Bahama islands and various islands of the West Indies. The supply of this wood is negligible from the Florida keys, the trade being mainly supplied by the Bahamas, though Hayti is a large producer. The tree is a low, gnarled, round-headed growth and it sometimes attains a height of 25 or 30 feet, but its short trunk is frequently two and one-half or three feet thick. It has a thin bark, rarely more than one-eighth of an inch thick and the surface is separated into small, thin, white scales very much like those covering the bark of the white oak tree.

It is the densest wood known, a cubic foot of dry and well-seasoned lignum vitae weighing a trifle more than 71 pounds. It is very close-grained and varies in color from dark green to yellowish brown. It has been used for sheathing ships and is now extensively used in making blocks, pulleys, cogs and other bearings in certain forms of machinery and in making mortars and pestles.

Muzzled.

Speaking of garters, have you heard of the Harvard students who spied a pair with silver clasps in a Harvard Square shop window, and, thinking to raise a smile, at least, from the charmer at the counter, asked the price of a dog-collar, pointing at the same time to the silver-clasped garter? She turned, looked sweetly at the young men, and said: "We do not separate them for puppies, sir."—Boston Herald.

For Dark Woodwork.

The best way to clean dark-colored painted doors and woodwork is to take a pail of clean warm water and pour a little paraffin into it and then wash the paint all over, working downward with a piece of old Turkish toweling. Next, dry with a piece of clean cloth and polish with a substantial duster. To attempt to clean such paint by hard rubbing is a mistake. It does not need it and will only be rubbed away.

ELEPHANTS ONCE ROAMED TEXAS

Gigantic Beast and May Have Lived 1,000,000 Years Ago, Says Biologist.

SKELETON IS DISCOVERED

Fast That Tusks Are More Than 12 Feet Long, Indicates the Great Size of the Pachyderm—
Probably Killed by Tiger.

San Leon, Texas.—Positive proof that elephants of gigantic size, with bodies probably covered with long hair, once roamed the coastal plains of Texas has been obtained by the unearthing here of the skeletons of one of these prehistoric animals. The period of its life dates back anywhere from 500,000 to 1,000,000 years, according to H. C. Chandler, assistant professor of biology in Rice Institute of Houston, who assisted in removing the remains from the hard bed of sand and gravel.

It will take some time to reconstruct the bones and form the skeleton as it originally existed, and until this is done measurements cannot be accurately taken. The fact, however, that the tusks are each more than 12 feet long indicates the great size of the pachyderm.

Scientist's Speculation.

The skeleton was discovered by R. T. Roy of Houston, who called Mr. Chandler to his assistance in unearthing it. In speaking of the discovery Mr. Chandler said:

"Before Noah collected his animals in the ark and before Adam and Eve ate the disastrous apple in the Garden of Eden this beast, perhaps attacked by a murderous saber-toothed tiger, a huge beast which also roamed through North America at that time, laid his great carcass down on the sands of the beach and died. The seabirds of that ancient time, no doubt, dined sumptuously for many weeks on his great body, and what was left by them was picked by the microscopic animals of the bay.

"The waves of the ancient bay rippled over the bones of the fallen monarch, carrying sand and gravel, until finally the entire skeleton was buried deep under a mass of debris.

"Centuries passed and the land slowly raised to its present level, some ten feet above the water level. Year by year the waves lapped continuously against the bank, eating it away, until finally a tooth was brought to view, probably some 500,000 years after it had been dropped from the jaws of the great beast.

A Hunting Ground.

"There are many who, while admitting the evidence of their eyes that an elephant did live and die on the shores of Texas, will question statements of scientists as to the great expanse of time since the animal existed.

"No very accurate estimate can be made, it is true, but that it exceeds 500,000 years and may approach 1,000,000 years there is no doubt in the mind of any person who has made a study of the past life on the earth. Such estimates are based on the time required to deposit sedimentary rock, to erode valleys and to wear away rocks. No one could judge the age of this particular specimen alone, but its age is estimated on the known occurrence of the animal in company with other animals in rocks or deposits where the age can be roughly estimated and its absence in deposits which are of more recent date.

"Had there been game hunters in the pleistocene period North America, rather than Africa, must have been their favorite hunting grounds. Scientists state that, during that period over the same plains which these elephants roamed numerous other long extinct animals, whose descendants now live in such distant places as India or Central Africa, were living in abundance.

"As the storms and waves gradually eat away the gravelly bank of the bay at San Leon the remains of camels, extinct horses and perhaps other prehistoric animals will be brought to view, thus furnishing material for another page in the account of that long distant period when centuries and not years were used as the unit in the measurement of time."

AIR FLIGHT RESTORES VOICE

Washington.—An airplane flight at an altitude of 14,000 feet restored the power of speech to H. A. Rens, Jr., twenty-two years old, a former soldier, who for eight months had been unable to speak above a whisper.

His voice, which left him one night while asleep, was returned to normal within an hour.

Rens, while in the tank corps, injured a finger, which failed to heal and finally was amputated. It is not known whether the infection was in any way responsible for the loss of his voice. Eminent specialists had treated him without result. It is the first case of the kind on record, public health service officials stated.

Psychology of Laughter.

In the psychology of laughter one traces the development of humor through its many stages, showing the close relation between the appreciation of the tribe and the enjoyment of the nursery. Children laugh somewhat in the manner of savages, not being able, because of their limited experience, to see the subtle shades of a joke that are only discernible in a high type of mental development. Swift's "Gulliver's Travels" has much satire in it which the girl and boy luckily cannot fathom; it takes a sophisticated mind to understand it. But the adventures among the Lilliputians and Brobdingnagians are classics in the nursery. So it is in the larger aspects of laughter. The crowds will respond to a coarser type of humor than the individual.—Exchange.

WORTHY OF HIGHEST HONOR

Trailmaker, Whether in Physical or Intellectual Lines, Has Immense Responsibilities.

To be a worthy trailmaker one must see in imagination the thousands who will follow the path he has the temerity to mark out. Sympathy for them will affect every rod of his work. He must be quick to note the points where there may be confusion on the part of the climber. No one can miss a path cut through heavy underbrush. But out in the open forest or on long stretches of treeless ledges he must take particular pains. Trees must be blazed, footpaths made certain. Cairns of stones must be placed like well-marked signposts. A trailmaker must have it on his conscience that even a single traveler might fail because of his failure to make the path certain. If this is true of one who essays to make a mountain trail, how much greater the responsibility on him who undertakes to blaze the way into those higher ranges of human activity. Honor to those who made their way across the uncharted seas or trackless wastes, but still more honor to those who have dared to lead out into the unknown regions of mind and heart along every line of intellectual and spiritual achievement.—Henry Woodward Hulbert.

First Steel Engraving.

Frenchmen, Italians and Germans all claim the honor of having invented the art of engraving. Certain it is that Bowdler of Paris was the first to turn out creditable engravings on glass in 1779. But as early as 1480 the Italian Maeso Finiguerra exhibited engravings on copper. Duerer, in Germany (1517-1528), and Lucas Van Leyden, in Holland (1497), made tremendous strides in wood engraving, but it remained for America to invent steel engraving.

About 1814 Messrs. Perkins and Heath of Philadelphia introduced the process of engraving on soft steel, hardened afterward.

The Mezzotint process is a German invention. Col. von Siegen, in 1643, produced the first really artistic work of this description in a portrait of Princess Amelia of Hessen.

Sponge Not Vegetable.

Sponges were long thought to be vegetables, but they are now known to be animals. Their appearance when they come to the market is so unlike that of the living sponge that it is quite to be expected that seeing it only in use one would hardly suspect its origin. The sponge grows mostly at the bottom of the sea on rocks to which it is fixed by a kind of root. It is made up of a jellylike substance and a framework of tough fibers. This framework is really the skeleton of the sponge; it is the sponge of commerce. The skeleton is covered with a jellylike substance and is sticky when taken out of the water. They are usually buried in the dry sand for a time until the jelly part decays. They are then put in wire cages into the sea until they are washed clean.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Dime Tip All Wrong.

Two young men who work in the same office down town frequently have luncheon together. One noon, as they were leaving the restaurant, one inquired with a puzzled air: "Why is it that you always put two nickels as a tip beside your plate, even when you've got a dime?" "I do it for a psychological reason," he explained. "If I leave a dime the waitress is likely to think that that was the smallest I had, and that I would have given her a nickel if there were one in my pocket. When I use two nickels she knows that it was possible for me just to leave one, and her respect increases. Besides, there is a psychological effect produced by two coins in place of one."—New York Sun.

A Hint to the Long-winded. Among the guests at a dinner party was a clergyman who had a reputation for loquacity. To put matters right, the hostess turned toward him and remarked pleasantly, "Will you say grace, or do you prefer your soup hot?"

WOMEN RED HEADS FORM SOCIETY

Alarming Possibilities Are Presented by the Order of the Golden Fleece.

PRIZE FOR BRIGHTEST HUE

Members Are Listed in the Club Rolls Under 22 Classifications Covering the Various Shades of Red Hair—To Study Data.

Washington.—What does the color, abundance and texture of your hair reveal regarding your character and ability?

The question is raised sharply by the news of a banquet which was held this year by an unusual organization in the University of Nebraska. It is known as the Order of Golden Fleece and its membership is composed only of young women whose hair belongs to one of the many shades vulgarly described as red. According to authoritative reports the members are classified on the club rolls under the following color headings: Squash, carrot, pumpkin, orange, brick, scarlet, flamingo, maroon, copper, auburn, henna, mahogany, magenta, sorrel, strawberry, roan, russet, cerise, carnation, salmon, shrimp pink and pink. Lemon, ginger, insipid brown and chemicals of all kinds are barred. Prizes are awarded at the annual events for the brightest flame of color, the greatest quantity of hair and that of the most beautiful shade.

One More Kind of Class Feeling.

This organization is interesting and perhaps alarming to the general public as an example of one more kind of class feeling. It is well known that class feeling and the tendency to organize on a class basis are on the increase. We now have associations not only of capital and labor, but also mothers' leagues, parents' leagues, consumers' leagues, writers' leagues. There are leagues based on every possible role which one may play in life, whether in business, politics, society, marriage or sport; but heretofore, so far as we can learn by exhaustive research, there has been no effort to organize on a basis of physical characteristics, if a few Jolly Fat Men's clubs be excepted.

The tendency to organize on a basis of hair color, therefore, is a thing of great and alarming possibilities, especially if red-headed women take the lead in the matter. Imagine if you can an insurrection of the International Order of Red-Headed Women.

And this organization of red-headed women into clubs will undoubtedly intensify what you might call the hair class-feeling. The Order of the Golden Fleece will no doubt make a pretty thorough study of all the data bearing on red-headedness, and each person will come away from its gatherings with a clearer notion of the special destiny which her flaming top has prescribed for her.

That Old Saying, Y'Know.

There seems long to have been a sort of general agreement that red-headed persons have peculiar characteristics. It is generally believed, for example, that they have hot tempers and strong emotions generally. In the last century a simile in common use was "easy as making love to a red-headed girl." Since the rise of the Nietzsche-Shaw-Mencken school of philosophy, which holds that woman is a dangerous predatory animal, bent on hunting man down and making a slave of him, this generally has been revised to read "dangerous as making love to a red-headed girl."

Whatever basis this saying may have in the experience of man, it is ample evidence of a general popular feeling that red-headedness is a quality of the mind and temperament as well as of the hair. For some reason, there is no similar popular idea regarding other hair colors, but scientific research shows that hair is a great revealer of character in an indirect way. That is, it shows what race predominates in the make-up of the individual, and therefore what racial traits he may be expected to have.

This, it appears, is less true of the red-headed than of either blondes or brunettes. Red-headedness occurs in both blonde and brunette races, as a sort of sport-color. It does seem to be associated generally with certain emotional and nervous characteristics, but these are peculiar to the reds of all races. That they are by no means necessarily disadvantageous is shown by the great number of successful red-headed men and the well-known popularity of red-headed women. But black hair or blonde hair is distinctly indicative of race, and it is only by such physical characteristics that race may be detected these days. Race now conforms to national boundaries very little. It would be easy to find an Irishman and a German who were of exactly the same racial type, and two Irishmen who were as different racially as an Italian and a Swede.

Characteristics of Race.

There are three principal races in Europe, according to the anthropologists—the Nordic, the Alpine and the Mediterranean. The Nordics are the tall blonde men with long heads native to the north, as for example the typical Prussian or Norwegian. The Alpines are a short, stocky race with brown hair and flat heads inhabiting east central Europe, as for example a typical Swiss peasant. The Mediterraneans are a short, dark, long-headed face, inhabiting the south of Europe, as for example, a typical Italian. In addition to these there are many other races in smaller numbers, such as the Old Black Breed in Ireland and the ancient Iberian race in Spain, but these have had relatively little influence on the mass of European and American population. The other three races are mixed badly all through central and western Europe and in the United States.

Hair color is significant as showing whether Nordic or Mediterranean blood predominates in the individual. It does not reveal the presence of Alpine blood so readily for the Alpine stock usually show brown hair of an intermediate and indeterminate shade. The shape of the head should be most valuable in detecting that particular strain.

The Nordic and the Mediterranean stocks have different qualities, according to the anthropologists. The Nordics are noted for their combativeness, their organizing ability and their sense of order. The Mediterranean race on the other hand is noted for its artistic and musical ability, and its creative genius generally, while in war and government it is not so conspicuously successful. It is the theory of some scientists that nearly all the great European governments were organized by Nordics. They say that the original Romans were Nordics from the north, and that when this stock died out, due to an unfavorable climate, the Roman government collapsed. This pretty theory has never been proved.

Subject Little Understood.

In fact, the whole matter of race characteristics is little understood. Typically, a tall blonde man should be a good executive, a reliable, conscientious fellow, not apt to get excited or act suddenly on impulse, but rather lacking in imagination and enthusiasm. These latter qualities should be found rather in a brunette. You can find much to contradict this notion, and you can dismiss it with a shrug if you wish to. But you can find also by common observation some facts to support it. For example, is it without significance that the engineers of ocean-going boats—men on whom many lives depend—are almost always blond men—either Scotchmen or Scandinavians. And how many such tall blond Scots and Swedes will you find in such occupations as designing, interior decorating, teaching and performing music, which requires a sense of form and color, a delicate ear for sound.

It is well to study hair color as one more key to the mystery of personality, but let us hope that the tendency to draw hair-color lines will not spread, and that the Order of the Golden Fleece will remain local.

BLOWN UP BY HIS OWN BOMB

Italian Anarchist Torn to Pieces in Attempt to Destroy Home of Engineer.

Turin, Italy.—Mario Facta, an anarchist, was blown to pieces by a bomb which he was trying to explode against the house of Signor di Benedetto, an engineer in this city. During the period of disorders here last September, when workmen occupied many metal factories, Signor di Benedetto defended his factory against an attack and killed two persons. He was later tried and acquitted, it having been found that he acted in self-defense.

Facta was twenty years old and was recently expelled from France for having formed a section of the Italian Socialist party in Lyon. Police authorities discovered six more bombs hidden nearby, besides a number of pamphlets and newspapers and a book giving directions for the manufacture of explosives.

He holds several championships for horsemanship, is a dead shot with a record of having killed three horse thieves, is also a veteran of the World war and "can lick his weight in wildcats."

WIDOW LOSES IF SHE WEDS

Use of More Than $1,000,000 for Life Depends on Her Remaining Single.

Tuxedo, N. Y.—In the will of the late Charles W. Yulee, wealthy summer resident of Tuxedo, which has just been proven in Surrogate Elwood C. Smith's court in Orange county, is a proviso which would terminate bequests held in trust for his widow if she should remarry.

Although the estate within the confines of New York was said to consist of "upward of $10,000 personal estate," it was said that the testator had considerable real estate and assets elsewhere. Mr. Yulee died recently in his seventy-first year. The widow is to have the use for life of his estate, said to exceed $1,000,000, provided that she does not remarry.

The former generation of students burned midnight oil, but now they burn midnight gasoline.

It costs only $25 to buy a wife in Liberia and probably that price is inflated by war conditions.

They don't cut down the pay of the wage earners any more. They merely adjust their compensation.

The sporting crowd can't understand why they put Mark Twain in the Hall of Fame and omitted Babe Ruth.

Before the war the government's business was to spend the money properly but now it seems to be to waste it properly.

After coming over here and trying to destroy our government, the alien agitators complain because foreigners are not popular.

Some people seem to think that July Fourth should be celebrated on July 2nd this year, in honor of the Carpenter-Dempsy fight.

The men who think woman's place is in the home are sometimes the same ones who can't hold their own in competition with women.

The Washington Post remarks that May is the month to go fishing, while in June the brides get them hooked. In July the fat is fried out.

The kids who hang around the outside of the hall grounds and look through the knot holes are not objecting to all these home runs being knocked.

You can't claim that popular education is a success in this country when 10 per cent. of the men and 75 per cent. of the women know nothing about baseball.

Two hundred thousand anti-prohibitionists parading in New York July Fourth with their tongues hanging out of their mouths will excite much sympathy.

The old-fashioned girl used to claim she got kissed against her will. The modern athletic and muscular young woman does not look very convincing on that excuse.

Some people who would be very much disturbed if they found cobwebs in their living room will let a weedy and rubbish covered vacant lot make their home town look all frowzy.

The community would probably be better off if some of these fellows who are playing cobwebs in the jazz orchestras would go out in the country and tinkle the cobwebs by driving the cattle out to pasture.

Appeals are issued for an old-fashioned July Fourth celebration with patriotic songs and speeches. The celebrations, however, will object that that does not wake anybody up in the middle of the night.

THE SPIRIT OF '76

Old time July Fourth orators used to say much about the "spirit of '76," as they called it. They appealed for a return of that old patriotic fire that 145 years ago emboldened the forefathers to defy the greatest military power of that period and to resolve to build in the then wilderness a new nation consecrated to a nobler set of principles than those which at that time ruled the powers of Europe.

At the time these daring patriots proclaimed their subversive doctrine, democracy was a despised and neglected idea. It had been advocated by philosophers, but no considerable nation had ever been conducted on that basis for any long period.

The democracies of the ancient world had disappeared among the wrecks of time. It seemed almost an impossible proposition to put the work of governing in the hands of the people. Monarchies and despotisms were the accepted and traditional form of government.
It seemed incredible that a few bold innovators out in the frontier settlements of America could make even a dent in such a firmly established order.

Yet the principle established on Independence Day was so true and vital that it has overturned the world. It so fired American hearts that, weak as they were in money, materials and numbers, they could yet establish their independence against overwhelming odds. One by one the monarchs of Europe have succumbed to the spirit of '76, until the power of kings is almost vanished.

So our young folks here in Princess Anne should not feel that July Fourth merely celebrates the first step toward securing independence. It also celebrates the declaration of principles that have substituted the rule of the people for the rule of kings and which established justice, education and opportunity as the governing ideas of the

FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION

Back in 1909 there were 215 people killed in July Fourth accidents, with 597 injured. The casualties incurred in celebrating the War for Independence have been far more numerous than those caused by fighting that war. Also, hundreds of millions worth of property have been burned up in July Fourth fires. It was about as if a young man, desiring to observe his 21st birthday, should proceed to put out an eye or cut off a few fingers to show how happy he was over his coming of age.

During recent years the sale of dangerous explosives has been much reduced and police forces are more disposed to keep disturbers within bounds of decency. It used to be noticeable in many places that the chief July Fourth disturbers were young men of alien descent who had no true American spirit. They welcomed the traditional outbreaks as a time for general hooliganism. But there are plenty of hooligans of American birth who would still be glad to join in whatever mischief may be going.

Such disturbances occur frequently when no good programs of sports are offered to arouse legitimate interest in the day. Fourth of July celebrates the determination of the American people to manifest their own initiative and power. So it is a day peculiarly appropriate to sports and displays of strength and agility. If the young men of a town are asked to co-operate in getting up pastimes and trials of skill and endurance, a lot of active fellows who want an outlet for their energy will forget about mischief and conserve their forces for the races and games.

Cecelia H. Gelder and Charles C. Gelder, her husband, vs. Robert Franklin Brattan
No. 3473 Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain real estate with the improvements thereon in the town of Princess Anne, Maryland, of which Robert F. Brattan, late of Somerset county, Maryland, died seized.
The bill states that Robert F. Brattan, deceased, died in the month of May, 1915, and that at the time of his death he was seized of all that lot or parcel of land in the town of Princess Anne, Maryland, bounded by White street on the west, on the east by Main street or Somerset avenue, on the south by Linden avenue and on the west by Church street, being the same land upon which the said Robert F. Brattan resided at the time of his death, and being a part of the land which was conveyed to the said Robert F. Brattan by Henry Page, trustee, by deed dated the 30th day of May, 1886, recorded among the land records of said county in Liber H. F. L. No. 4, folio 125, etc., improved by a dwelling house and outbuildings; that the said Robert F. Brattan left surviving him a widow, Nellie H. Brattan, and the following children who were his only heirs-at-law:
(1), a daughter, Cecelia H. Gelder, one of the plaintiffs, who intermarried with Charles C. Gelder, the other plaintiff; (2), a daughter, Nellie D.
Brattan, and (3), a son, Robert F. Brattan, Junior; that the said Nellie D. Brattan died intestate, in the month of November, 1917, unmarried, and all the interest of the said Nellie D. Brattan in said real estate hereinbefore mentioned descended to and became vested in Nellie H. Brattan, her mother, the widow of the said Robert F. Brattan, her only heir-at-law; that the said Robert F. Brattan, Junior, died intestate, in the month of April, 1919, and the interest of the said Robert F. Brattan, Junior, in said real estate descended to and became vested in his only child and heir-at-law, Robert Franklin Brattan, who is an infant under the age of twenty-one years, and who is a non-resident of the State of Maryland and resides in the State of Maine; that the said Nellie H.
Brattan, widow of the said Robert F. Brattan, and mother of the said Cecelia H. Gelder, Nellie D.
Brattan and Robert F. Brattan, Junior, died in the month of May, 1921, leaving a last will and testament duly executed to pass real estate in the State of Maryland, which has been duly admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court for Somerset County, Maryland, and that in said last will and testament, the said Nellie H. Brattan devised to her daughter, the said Cecelia H. Gelder, all the interest of the said Nellie H. Brattan in and to said real estate; that the said real estate is now vested in the said Cecelia H. Gelder and the said Robert Franklin Brattan, Infant, in the following proportions, that is to say, two-thirds in the said Cecelia H. Gelder and one-third in the said Robert Franklin Brattan; that the said real estate is not susceptible of partition among the persons entitled to interests therein without loss and injury to them, and that in order to make division of said interests it will be necessary that said real estate be sold and the proceeds divided among the persons interested therein in proportion to their respective interests.

It is thereupon this 25th day of June, 1921, ordered by the undersigned, Clerk of the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Somerset county, Maryland, once in each of four successive weeks before the 27th day of July, 1921, give notice to the said Robert Franklin Brattan, an infant, alone and non-resident defendant, of the object and substance of the bill of complaint, warning him to be and appear in this Court, in person or by attorney, on or before the 15th day of August, 1921, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Fight Flies And Down Disease

Approximately 200,000 deaths in the United States during the last year resulted from the activities of a single ally of the Teutons, and he is still allowed to go at large.

This enemy, which leaves a trail of disease and death, is the fly. It is well known that he is bred in filth and leads a life of crime; that more soldiers were killed in the Spanish-American war by flies than by bullets; that thousands of babies die every year from diseases traced directly to the fly, yet his existence is almost ignored by a large portion of our population.

The "swat-the-fly" campaign waged in this country during the last few years has worked wonders, but it will not result in complete victory until every one unites in constant and relentless war upon him.

The best time to dispose of a fly, of course, is while he is still young and before he has become steeped in crime, but effective work can be done for the season now.

The United States Public Health Service has made exhaustive investigation into the life habits of the fly and has found that he more than deserves his bad reputation. If you will write to the health service, Washington, D. C., you will be furnished with information as to how to deal with the fly, how to end his pernicious activities—in short, how effectually to put him out of business.

Recommends Chamberlain's Tablets

"Chamberlain's Tablets have been used by my husband and myself off and on for the past five years. When my husband goes away from home he always takes a bottle of them along with him. Whenever I have that heavy feeling after eating, or feel dull and played out, I take one or two of Chamberlain's Tablets and they fix me up fine," writes
Mrs. Newton Vreeland, Ninoo, N. Y.
Take these tablets when troubled with constipation or indigestion and they will do you good.

Mr. Harry C. Dashiell, after a short visit to Baltimore, returned home last Friday morning.

Mrs. J. Francis Brittingham, of San Antonio, Texas, is the guest of Mrs. Morris H. Adams.

Misses Ruth and Roberta Todd, of Bastrop, La., are visiting Miss Ray D. Stewart, at "Linden Hill."

Mrs. Annie Morris-Pusey, daughter of Mr. John W. Morris, and Mr. Alfred Rufenacht, of Baltimore, were married in that city last Tuesday.

Miss Gertrude Flurer, a teacher in the public school at Reisterstown, Md., arrived home last Saturday to spend the summer with her mother, Mrs. Henry Flurer.

Westminster Guild of Manokin Presbyterian Church will hold a lawn fete on the lawn of Mrs. W. O. Lankford on Thursday, June 30th, at 7.30 o'clock. Ice cream and cake will be on sale.

The new summer schedule of the B. C. and A. Railway went into effect last Sunday. Trains now leave Salisbury for Ocean City at 12.12 p. m. and 8.12 p. m. on week days and Sundays at 1.11 p. m.

Miss E. Virginia Goslee, of Princess Anne, and Miss Mary Cochran, of Crisfield, left Monday of last week for a trip through the South, stopping at Baltimore, Washington, Birmingham, New Orleans and Mobile, Alabama. At the latter place Miss Goslee will visit at the home of her sister, Mrs. George E. Lankford.

Among those who left Monday of last week to attend the summer Normal School at Towson were: Miss Sallie Dashiell, daughter of Mr. Hamp Dashiell; Miss Mildred Colborn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Colborn, Sr.; Miss Ruth Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Porter; Mary P. Atkinson, daughter of Mr. Levin J. Atkinson, and Mrs. Laura Fitzgerald.

Lovers of stories of mystery and adventure in New York should not allow tonight (Tuesday) to pass without seeing "Number 17," George Walsh's latest picture at the Auditorium. "Number 17" is from the tremendously popular novel by Louis Tracy, the well-known writer of mystery stories. The scenes are laid in New York City, some of them in the heart of Chinatown, the most dangerous corners of which are reproduced faithfully. Walsh's leading woman is Mildred Reardon.

Miss Mildred Powell is visiting friends in Middletown, Del., and Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Jones and children are spending a week in Chester, Pennsylvania.

Collector of Internal Revenue Joshua W. Miles spent the week end at this home in Princess Anne.

Mr. P. Mark Smith left last Tuesday for Baltimore, where he will spend some time with his wife and children.

Little Miss Eloise Henry, of Cambridge, is visiting at the home of her grandfather, Mr. George W. Brown.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor J. Mumford returned to Princess Anne last Tuesday from their wedding trip to Berlin and Ocean City, Md.

Mrs. Harry C. Dashiell and two daughters are visiting at the home of Mrs. Dashiell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. White, in Pocomoke City.

Mr. Paul Morgan, after spending the week-end in Philadelphia with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Morgan, returned to Princess Anne last Wednesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Frank Dashiell, after spending a part of their honeymoon at the home of Mr. Dashiell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Frank Dashiell, returned to Baltimore Friday afternoon.

Rev. Mr. Terry, a student of Westminster Theological Seminary, who is now preaching at Friendship M. P. Church, has returned to his charge after attending the commencement exercises at Western Maryland College.

Mrs. Theresa Goodman has had a concrete pavement laid around the store she occupies on the corner of Main and Prince William streets. This is a much needed improvement and gives the store a more attractive appearance.

Miss Anna Wilson, daughter of Mrs. Matilda Wilson, was married at her home in Crisfield Monday evening of last week to Mr. Weldon Ward, of Lawsonia.

Rev. John L. Johnson performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate families and a few friends. A reception followed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Ward left for a trip to Atlantic City.

Will Bowen, colored, aged about 25 years, was instantly killed at Marion Station on Thursday night last, when he was struck by the south bound passenger train, en route for Crisfield. A coroner's jury empaneled by Judge Fred N. Holland rendered a verdict of accidental death. The man met his death while walking up the railroad track, about a quarter of a mile above the station.

Boats from practically every section of the bay will gather at Claiborne July 2nd to participate in the Chesapeake Bay championship workboat sailing races, to be held under the auspices of the regatta committee of the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Club. With already more than half a hundred bugies, skipjacks and canoes—all typical workboats of the Chesapeake—entered in the races the contests will be the greatest races ever held on the Chesapeake.

Figures issued by the Census Bureau last Thursday covering farm values in the United States place the total value of farms in Maryland at $386,596,850 in the year 1920. Ten years ago Maryland farm properties were valued at only $241,737,123. This shows an increase in valuation of 60 per cent. in ten years. The figures given cover both land and buildings thereon. In Maryland the Census Bureau finds that the average value of a farm and buildings thereon is $8,070, compared with $4,941 in 1910.

Children's Day was observed in Antioch Methodist Episcopal Church Sunday afternoon, the 19th instant. The church was prettily decorated with potted plants and flowers. The program for the evening was rendered by the small children of the Sunday school, in charge of Mrs. Garwood. A pleasing feature of the program was a song, "Alice's Blue Gown," sung by three little girls. The exercises were closed with an address by Rev. W. F. Dawson.

Presenting Wallace Reid, the popular Paramount star, in one of the best photoplays, "Always Audacious," his latest starring vehicle, will be shown at the Auditorium Thursday night. This is a picture of exceptional dramatic quality in which Mr. Reid appears in a dual role—that of a society man of wealth and a crook who is his double. It goes without saying that this combination brings about many startling developments which have their special thrills. Dainty Margaret Loomis is Mr. Reid's leading woman.

Corner Stone To Be Laid July 4

The corner stone of the new First Baptist Church of Crisfield will be laid with appropriate services on Monday, July 4, beginning at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Prominent speakers will be present at this service and all of the ministers of the different churches and denominations of Crisfield will take a part in this event. Dr. Boyce Tupper, a noted Chautauqua lecturer, of Philadelphia, will be the principal speaker of the day and Dr. W. H. Baylor, a noted Baptist minister of Baltimore, will also be present and is expected to make a short address.

SMALL APPLE CROP IN MARYLAND

Worst In Twenty Years—About One-fifth Of Usual Yield

Maryland's apple crop is expected to be the smallest in the last 20 years, according to an official statement issued last week by Dr. S. B. Shaw, specialist in horticulture for the University of Maryland Extension Service. The shortage, he said, was directly due to the killing effects of the early spring freezes and to the recent hailstorms which have done much damage to young fruit.

Figures now coming from the various counties of the State to Dr. Shaw, who is also secretary of the Maryland State Horticultural Society, indicating only 20.6 per cent. of a crop, as compared with a 70 per cent. crop for last year. This is the smallest apple crop forecast for Maryland since 1900 and is less than half of the light crop of eight years ago, which resulted also from early frosts and freezes and subsequent hailstorms.

Reports of the probable damage to the apple crop, following the severe cold weather of the early spring, were considerably at variance, but most authorities on the subject were convinced that early predictions were little more than speculation and that only later on in the year would it be possible to get an approximate estimate of the State's production. Many of the apples which formed and seemed to be free from damage earlier in the season, are now dropping from the trees, according to Dr. Shaw, thus indicating injury not sufficient to kill the bud, but serious enough to cause a heavy reduction in the crop. In some sections of the State destructive hailstorms have completely wiped out whatever prospect for a crop there was following the last freeze.

Reports from Garrett, Allegany and Washington counties indicate that the apple crop in that section of the State suffered the most serious damage, estimates being for only 5 per cent. of a crop. Frederick, Carroll and Baltimore counties promise a 15 per cent. production. Harford, Cecil and Kent show a 30 per cent. forecast. Montgomery, Howard, Anne Arundel and Prince George's indicate a 25 per cent. crop. Estimates for Queen Anne's, Caroline, Talbot and Dorchester are set at 15 per cent. of a crop. Charles, Calvert and St. Mary's are estimated at 30 per cent. and Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester are expected to yield approximately 45 per cent. of a crop.

Marriage Licenses

White—Winfield A. Marshall, 21, of Makemie Park, Va., and Bessie A. Truitt, 19, of New Church, Va.

Colored—Herman Carman, 21, and Margaret Armwood, 22, both of Somerset county.

The Home Of The Soul

In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach, most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter. (Advertisement.)

The AMERICAN LEGION

FOUND VALUABLE WAR RELIC

Oregon Legion Man's Best Trophy of Big Conflict, Is Worth Large Sum.

Souvenirs varying from a chip off a battle tower to a German beer stein captured in Sedan, were brought back from France by the returning Americans. But few of the mementoes stored in a doughboy's pack are as valuable as that belonging to George D. Foster, formerly a corporal of the Fourth Engineering Division, who found a rare Roman coin that is perhaps worth several hundred dollars.

While looking for a safe and soft spot in the ruins of an old house near Margy, France, Corporal Foster, now a peace-loving member of the American Legion in Cottage Grove, Ore., found an old gilt case containing a coin. He thrust it into his pack and recently turned it over to a college professor, who pronounced it worth more than its weight in gold. Its date is 306 A. D. On one side it bears the inscription "Magnus," the title given the Emperor Constantine. On the other side are the inscriptions "Votus XX," "Beatas Tranquillitas," and "Percussa Treveris." The latter words, the professor declares, indicate that the coin was minted in Trier, Germany, formerly a seat of the Roman empire.

LEGION MEN BURY COMRADES

Organization Officials at Almost Every Reinterment of Men Who Fell on Battlefields.

With the thousands of bodies being returned to the homeland from the battlefields of France, the American Legion has justified its existence if for no other reason than the display of proper respect for the remains of the country's heroes. In almost every instance in which the body of a soldier who died overseas has been reinterred in American soil, Legion members have taken part.

Funeral for Indian Comrade.

The photograph shows the ceremonies of the military funeral held by Carl Anderson Post of the Legion at Cloquet, Minnesota, for John Deftoe, the first American Indian from the state to be killed in action. The tribe to which the dead soldier belonged was glad to allow his white comrades to bury him in a manner befitting his brave career in the service of his country.

EX-SERVICE BOYS GET JOBS

President of Chicago Grain Concern, Trench Experienced, Does Not Forget His Buddies.

When Private Paul J. Healy, 33rd Division, A. E. F., was waiting in the trenches of France for the shell with his initials on it, he vowed that if he got out alive he would never forget the bravery and sacrifice of his comrades. Now President Paul J. Healy of the Chicago Grain Products company, Rockford, Ill., is living up to the pledge he took on the field of battle.

The company which Mr. Healy heads recently began the construction of a new distillery. Mr. Healy ordered that none but ex-service men be employed in the construction work, and informed all concerned that when the plant is constructed, veterans of the World war will be shown all the preference on the company's pay roll. "My hope is to build an organization of former soldiers," Mr. Healy announced.

Mr. Healy enlisted as a private in the infantry and was discharged a sergeant. He was gassed at Albert, on the British front. He is one of the most active workers of Brophy post of the American Legion in Chicago.

American Legion Notes

"There is not the least doubt in my mind that if it had not been for the determined stand of the American Legion, Zimmer and I would still be in prison," writes Sergeant Neff, who with Sergeant Zimmer was arrested by the Germans following an attempt to capture Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, notorious slacker. "The American Legion came to my aid during one of my darkest hours, and it demonstrated by its unwavering loyalty toward a comrade that its sublime aspirations and lofty ideals concerning comradeship are a living truth."

Men entitled to navy retainer pay and not receiving it should communicate with the navy allotment officer, navy retainer pay section, Navy department, Washington, D. C., according to the American Legion Weekly. Applicants should give the following data: Full name, date of enrollment, rating and class in which enrolled, present address, present rating, number of retainer pay checks received (if any) and amount of each, date of release from active duty, date of discharge from reserves.

One of the largest single cash contributions for the benefit of disabled ex-service men has been received by the St. Louis city central executive committee, of the American Legion. The amount was $5,000, "without a string to it," given by Mrs. Newton L. G. Wilson, wealthy philanthropist of the city. The fund will be used exclusively to assist disabled men in obtaining just compensation and for the relief of their dependents.

American Legion posts in Minnesota are having a lively controversy as to which one has the oldest Legionnaire on its rolls. Redwood Falls presented Dr. Gibson, seventy-two years old, who served with the medical corps at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., and held the record until Kimball post introduced Adam Brower, seventy-six years old, and Joe Mason, who admits eighty-six years and a highly prized membership in the Legion.

As a result of a fight waged on the floor of congress by Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, a prominent American Legion worker, relatives of aliens who served in the American army, navy and marine corps during the World war are entitled to preferred right of entry into the United States in the three-percent immigration to be allowed during the next year under the immigration bill.

Members of the American Legion in St. Paul, Minn., cast their bread upon the waters and it was returned—a hundredfold. Last spring they gave assistance to a needy man. When the Legion men were selling theater tickets for a benefit performance for unemployed veterans the ex-service man sold 500 tickets in two days. As a result, 150 men were sent out on jobs the following day.

A vigorous campaign waged by the American Legion against disloyal activities of the Industrial Workers of the World is responsible for the stabbing of a Legion worker by an I. W. W. fanatic, according to reports received at Legion national headquarters from Pocatello, Idaho. True to form, the I. W. W. member attacked the Legion man in a dark alley, stabbing him in the back.

For the prompt relief of disabled and unemployed ex-service men of Chicago, Theodore Roosevelt post of the American Legion staged a stag party, at which Judge K. M. Landis was a guest. Battling Nelson was in charge of the athletic program, the band of the Great Lakes naval training station provided music and stage stars contributed their services to a midnight frolic.

Commuters and street car fans of New Orleans may have to walk when the American Legion meets. Employees of the New Orleans Railway and Light company have formed a post of the Legion. The street railway men are enthusiastic members of their post and have promised to attend meetings even if they have to bring along their private cars.

An American Legion speaker has been asked to explain the aims and purposes of the organization at the annual labor picnic to be held June 18 in Kansas City, Kan. The action, which followed a conference with the mayor of the city, is intended to clear up any misunderstandings which radical elements may have fostered in the ranks of labor organizations.

Only men who were in the service during the World war will be admitted to a hotel being erected by the Portland, Ore., post of the American Legion. The post is enlarging and remodeling upper floors of its large clubhouse to accommodate 70 men.

Women of Ceylon Refuse to Worry Over the Decree Put Forth by Dame Fashion.

The women of Ceylon do not bow the knee to Dame Fashion, but are content with the sarong—one long strip of cotton wound round the body—which is all most of the women of Kandy wear. The sarong was all that the majority of women asked in the days when Kandy formed the background for the pageantry of an oriental court. Kandy was the last stronghold of the Singalese rulers. Portuguese and Dutch tried in vain to subdue the city and the little mountain kingdom; but the way to Kandy was through narrow passes, surrounded by jungles. Many lives were lost in vain assaults. For 20 years after the British took Ceylon the last king of Kandy successfully resisted invasion. Finally, in 1815, he was captured and sent into exile. The temples and palaces and royal tombs of Kandy speak of the old days of splendid show. But they are silent concerning the intrigue and treachery and cruelty and extortion that blackened the last years of Singalese rule in Ceylon. Those dark years are forgotten now. Life runs smoothly under wise government.

Poets of the Sea.

It seems that the sea is an Anglo-Saxon heritage. English literature reflects it, and its moods have ever been portrayed in English verse. To the North, the Scottish bards sang of their own wild headlands and skerries, to the South, the Devons followed Drake and Froisher to the Seven Seas.

Surprisingly, some of the world's greatest poems are epics of open water. The Odyssey, for instance, and the Aeneid. In those days, Greece and Rome were the maritime nations of the earth, and their romance of conquest and of commerce found ready expression in their literature. Nowadays, the Anglo-Saxons hold the shipping of the seas, and sea songs seem as inevitable to English poets—and to some Americans—as romantic rondels and sonnets did to the old Gallic school.—Christian Science Monitor.

Nine Million Eggs a Year!

If only the hen could emulate the fish in the matter of laying eggs! The cod tops the list with nine million annually, then comes the sturgeon with seven and a half million. Another great producer is the flounder, which just touches the million. The mackerel deposits half a million eggs, the perch, four hundred thousand, while the humble herring is content with a paltry ten thousand. Eggs are generally deposited in sand or gravel, though the fish which live on the bed of the ocean attach their eggs to seaweed. Fish are almost entirely carnivorous, and have no compunction whatever in swallowing their own young. It is by smell rather than by sight that they obtain their food.

Origin of Wall Paper.

Wall paper originated in China, but in China it was not known as wall paper. It remained for the western world to take the idea or huge wall painting, mounted upon rollers, which were mounted ceiling-high, but never affixed to the walls, and from such temporary decorations evolve the wall coverings of today.

"Jointed Snake" Really Lizard. The glass, or so-called jointed snake, is really a lizard. When handled roughly the tail portion will break into two or three pieces. Contrary to superstition, these pieces will not unite with the body again, though a rudimentary tail is sometimes developed after the first one is lost.

SOUR STOMACH INDIGESTION

Theodore's Black-Draught Highly Recommended by a Tennessee Grocer for Troubles Resulting from Torpid Liver.

East Nashville, Tenn.—The efficiency of Theodore's Black-Draught, the genuine, herb, liver medicine, is vouched for by Mr. W. N. Parsons, a grocer of this city. "It is without doubt the best liver medicine, and I don't believe I could get along without it. I take it for sour stomach, headache, bad liver, indigestion, and all other troubles that are the result of a torpid liver.

"I have known and used it for years, and can and do highly recommend it to every one. I won't go to bed without it in the house. It will do all it claims to do. I can't say enough for it."

Many other men and women throughout the country have found Black-Draught just as Mr. Parsons describes—valuable in regulating the liver to its normal functions, and in cleansing the bowels of impurities.

Theodore's Black-Draught Liver medicine is the original and only genuine. Accept no imitations or substitutes. Always ask for Theodore's.

USEFUL BUT VICIOUS BEASTS

Mongolian Camels Valuable as Carriers of Freight Across Desert, Though Difficult to Handle.

Mongolian camels are superb beasts and much superior to the ugly, flea-bitten, one-humped Arabian variety, according to a writer in the National Geographic Magazine. They are pictures of stately dignity when they have their winter coats, but repulsive looking when their hair falls off in chunks in the summer.

They are the only freight carriers on the desert, but will only carry small loads and will lie down and squeal if an extra pound is added. Their feet wear down to the quick after some journeys in the desert, and the Mongolians actually half-sole them—much as a cobbler half-soles shoes. A patch of leather is attached to the bottom of the foot by thin thongs, which are drawn through adjacent callosities of the sole.

The breath of the Mongolian camel is so strong that it is said few camel drivers live long. Its kick will overturn a motor car, and its bite, followed by a twist of the lower teeth, generally induces blood poisoning. Particularly vicious males are marked with a piece of red cloth. Even a horseman is not safe from them, because they can out-gallop a pony and have a nasty, effective trick of throwing beast and rider, and then rolling on them.

SURGEON HAILED AS MARVEL

Practitioner in London Hospital Has Wonderful Mastery of the Technique of the Knife.

A "lightning surgeon"—to use the title conferred upon him by his colleagues—is at work in one of the great London hospitals.

His time for a normal case of appendicitis, for instance, is six minutes from start to finish of the operation, as against the fifteen minutes reckoned good time in the profession generally. This implies an enormous diminution of the ordinary risks run by the subject, and a corresponding increase in the chances of recovery. Scarcely less advantageous is the lessening of the strain of suspense which must inevitably be endured by assistants, nurses, and others present.

These considerations apply with even more force in the case of operations protracted, ordinarily, to the extreme limits of the patient's endurance, lasting perhaps two to two and a half hours. Seconds saved in every manipulation of these more intricate cases amount in the aggregate to a total which represents the difference between life and death.

The whole business, say those qualified to know best, is a matter of almost miraculous mastery of the technique of the knife.

Picture Judas With Red Hair.

For centuries the people of England have had a marked aversion to red hair—a feeling attributed by historians and other experts to the hatred originally felt for the invading Danes—and this dislike has cropped up in a number of ways, of which none is more interesting than the popular impression that Judas Iscariot had red hair and beard.

The old dramatists and poets make frequent allusions to the subject. Shakespeare, in "As You Like It," makes Rosalind say: "His hair is of the dissembling color," to which Celia replies, "Something browner than Judas." Middleton, in his "Chaste Maid of Cheapside," published in 1620, makes one of his characters in speaking of a gift apostle spoon, say "That was Judas with the red beard," while Dryden's famous epigram on Jacob Tonson describes him as having "two left legs and Judas-colored hair."

Drowned Files Came to Life.

Files have been drowned in wine and kept in wine for days. Yet when rescued and dried in the sun they have come to life again and flown away.

Here is a story, perfectly true, yet on the face of it sounding like a fairy tale. English workmen were cutting up a block of Bath stone at Exeter. In the center of the stone was a cavity. In this cavity were a couple of dozen bees. To the amazement of the men these bees showed signs of life and gradually revived, and within a few hours several were able to fly.

Perhaps She Was Right.

She was an unwilling delegate and knew few people at the dinner. But as the meal progressed she decided to talk to the man next her. "This is a good dinner," she said. "I guess they decided to give them a dollar's worth of food, for the speeches probably wouldn't be worth much."

"I guess so," he agreed. Exactly half an hour later he arose and was introduced as the leading speaker of the evening. But the unwilling delegate died before he finished.

Swimmer Must Not Think.

When attempting the prodigious feat of swimming the English channel, one should neither feel nor think, according to one swimmer, who, in an attempt, passed twenty-two hours in the water. "You must," he declared, "be just a swimming machine, feeling no sensations and using your brains as little as possible. The strain becomes so fearful that if you began to realize what you had taken on you would have to give up the struggle at once."

FEW REAL BAD CHARACTERS

Mr. Goolington Represents Attitude Displayed by Some Men Toward Their Fellow Creatures.

There are men that we dislike at sight; they have a streak of meanness or brutality or something that we recognize instinctively; the best we can do with them is to treat them with civility. But there are not many such; the vast majority of men have good in them and are entitled to be treated as brother men, writes "Mr. Goolington" in the New York Herald.

I have no patience with the speakers I hear talking about protecting the rights of our humblest fellow citizens. There are no humble fellow citizens; no man feels humble in his heart and every man resents being described or being considered as humble. Happily, we hear less of this humble business than we once did.

I feel that I have much yet to learn; but I long since discovered that a man likes to be treated like a man. He resents any air of superiority or patronage or condescension from anybody. Poor though he may be and lacking in what is called an education, he may yet have in full measure the cardinal virtues of self-respect and decency; he may truly be as good as anybody. And long ago I began to discover in men high and low qualities most unlooked for.

You never can tell what any man has in his heart. The street sweeper is as likely to dream dreams as the banker. The poor man may be by nature as refined as the rich man; and barring the few men instinctively brutal, who may be high or who may be low, all men are entitled to be met as men and to be treated with courtesy; not merely with kindness, but with courtesy, which all men are pleased to receive and the lack of which all men resent.

Of this we may be sure, that as we go through life we get what we give.

EARLY METHOD OF COUNTING

System in Use Up to Some Six Centuries Ago Was Primitive to a Degree.

Multiplication, addition, subtraction and division—common grades of schools today—were problems that stumped the great majority of people up until six centuries ago. Then when numbers ran into three figures or more the good peasants were stumped. Multiplication was done on the fingers—that is, what was done. When the sums got to be larger than five times five, the corner saloon was resorted to. Here the counter used a large checker board. Checker boards grew to be the sign of the saloon.

When counting by hand, the counter let the open hand represent the number five; the hand with one finger closed, six; with two fingers closed, seven; with three fingers closed, eight, and four fingers closed, nine. To multiply, he used one hand to represent the multiplier, and the other the sum to be multiplied.

The system of counting on checker boards was something similar to the system of counting on a Chinese abacus or counting board.

Ancient Egyptian Grandeur.

Of all conquests of Alexander the Great, Egypt enjoyed the earliest and most lasting prosperity. As soon as Ptolemy, the son of Lagos, had regained possession of this country it resisted the attempts of others by the advantages of its natural situation. Ptolemy had a moderation in his disposition which restrained him from meddling with affairs in which he was obliged to venture too much. He soon acquired the reputation of equity and gentleness by which he gained the favor of the people and the confidence of other kings. About 284 B. C. Egypt became the chief seat of the sciences of Greece during the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus. The grandeur displayed by this prince in architecture became proverbial. He and his sons were patterns of wise and virtuous monarchs. But the later Ptolemies did not conform themselves to such models.

Dogs' Feet for Lunch.

Men have been known to eat butterflies, white ants, frogs, June bugs, white mice dipped in honey, mole soup, birds' nests, locusts, snails, cooked chrysanthemums, and so on.

In the island of Formosa dogs' feet are considered a great delicacy. People who read this may be horrified, forgetting that they like pigs' feet themselves, to say nothing of ox-tail soup and calves' brains!

In this country we employ bees only as manufacturers of honey, but in Guiana, when a negro is stung by a bee, he proceeds to catch as many of the insects as he can and devour them in revenge.

The natives of Ceylon hold a torch beneath a bee-swarm hanging to a tree, catch the bees as they drop, take them home, and boil and eat them.

Baths of London.

Many are the relics of ancient times to be found in and around London, and perhaps the most interesting of these are the baths. The oldest bath goes back 2,000 years to the date of the Roman occupation. This is the bath, still in existence, which may be seen to this day at No. 5 Strand, near King's College. It is supplied with water which flows all the way from the distant heights of Hampstead. It was thought at one time that the water was supplied by St. Clement's holy well.

HOW MANY LUMPS?

By PAULINE BARRETT.

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Max Harding looked at the steep hill ahead of him and then at his heavy suitcase and swore softly under his breath.

"Such a beastly train service," he muttered, for he had arrived at Palham some three hours late—this being his first trip home from college to see his mother since she had given up the big house and elected to live in a hotel until Max had finished school. The scarcity of help, she had written Max, had driven her to this step.

"Well, there's no one to meet me, that's certain," decided the young man.

Brown as an Indian from weeks of outdoor practice with "the team," he would have been hard to recognize in this very bedraggled looking young man the son of the fashionable V. Harding, who lived in the hotel at top of the hill.

Scowling fiercely, he dragged his heavy suitcase up the path that led to the house, only to be met at the veranda steps by a pompous-looking dunkey, who effectively barred his further progress.

"Can't come up this way, fellah," said the pompous one. "All tradesmen and peddlers"—with a significant look at the heavy case—"must go round the back way." And he waved Max grandly away.

"Maybe I can sneak in through the kitchen and get washed up before I greet my fastidious mother," he thought to himself. "If she ever saw me looking like this—hello! Whew-ew-ew," and he whistled softly, for a young and remarkably pretty girl, all muffled up in a great woolly scarf, stood directly in front of the kitchen door hanging up dish towels, thus once more effectually checking his progress. "Hm! Probably the assistant cook," thought he to himself. "Well, here goes."

"Have you a moment to spare?" he asked, removing his hat and speaking in his most engaging manner.

"I have not," replied the young woman promptly, scarcely glancing up from her work.

"Not much enthusiasm here," he decided. Then, "May I show you some of my wares?" with an expressive glance toward the suitcase.

"You may not," answered the "assistant cook" as promptly as before.

"Well, do you mind if I sit down on the steps a minute?" he hazarded for his third venture. "I'm rather out of breath."

"I do not," again responded the fair lady of the kitchen, taking him in with one all-appraising glance.

So Max sat down on the lowest step and, leaning his head back against the house, closed his eyes.

"Poor fellow," thought the girl, her sympathies aroused at last, "he must be tired. I'm afraid I was too sharp with him."

She was back in a moment with a cup of steaming liquid and, tapping the young man on the shoulder, she offered it to him.

"Here, drink this," she said. With many thanks, he beat a hasty retreat around to the front of the house once more.

This time his mother was on the veranda, and she greeted him affectionately. Then he went up to his room.

He descended about an hour later, looking very different in his dinner clothes, and his mother's pride shone in her eyes as she met him.

"And, Max," she said, "there's the loveliest girl here. I want you to meet her."

"Now, mother," he remonstrated. "But, Max, dear, this one is different—yes, she really is," she insisted, as he smiled unbelievably. Ah! there's the bell for dinner now."

"Well, no sign of your divinity yet, mother," said Max when they were well started on their meal. "Perhaps"—hopefully—"she's changed her mind."

"No, I see her coming now," said Mrs. Harding, and straight to their table came the lady of his afternoon's adventure.

He had a moment to recover from the shock of recognizing her before she reached him, but not so the girl, and, lifting her eyes to acknowledge the introduction, the color flooded into her face and her eyes asked innumerable questions as she recalled the events of the afternoon. But Anne Cabot was nothing if not self-possessed, and very soon her usual calm manner returned.

"Did you know that Katie, the cook, left this afternoon?" she asked, looking at Mrs. Harding.

"Gracious, no!" gasped that lady.

"Who got the supper?"

"I did," said the girl quietly. "You see, Mr. Gates, who owns the hotel, has known me since I was a little girl, and when he asked me to help him out I couldn't bear to refuse him. Besides, it was a good chance for me to test out my college training."

"Well, it certainly was fine of you, my dear," said the elder woman, at the same time flashing an "I-told-you-so" look at her son.

The girl flushed, but her eyes twinkled as she lifted them to his.

"How many lumps?" she asked, as she held the sugar tongs poised, waiting, making a most attractive picture.

"Why-er," drawled the very good-looking young man who sat opposite her, and the meaning in his voice was unmistakable, "why-er the way I had it the first time suits me—for always."

Coinage Of Silver Dollars Resumed

Coinage of silver dollars has been resumed by the mint after a lapse of seven years, and the work of replacing 279,000,000 standard silver dollars taken from the Treasury during the war to sell to Great Britain has been begun.

Since late in March, Treasury officials said, approximately 20,000,000 silver dollars have been coined. In the same period corresponding amounts of silver certificates were issued, and Federal Reserve notes and Treasury certificates securing them retired. This process, officials said, would probably continue for the next five years until the Treasury's reserve of silver dollars is back to its pre-war basis.

Flood Damage $16,784,638

The financial loss resulting from the Pueblo (Col.) flood amounts to $16,784,638, according to a report made public last Friday by the committee named to supply data on damages to the United States Reclamation Service.

The damage to real property in Pueblo, including the damage to railroad property within the city limits, is estimated by the committee as $10,025,000.

Will Carry Tons Of Food

Two thousand tons of such commodities as flour, raisins, dried peaches, dried figs, prunes and beans will be required to load one of the steamships, the Robert Dollar, that will carry food supplies from America to the Caucasus, according to advices received at Maryland headquarters, Near East Relief.

A special request for canned goods is made by Harold F. Pellegrin, Maryland director, to be sent on one of the relief ships that will sail soon from America for the Levant, under auspices of the Near East Relief. Hundreds of thousands of refugees are depending upon this organization for food. At Constantinople alone 10,000 additional orphans must be fed by America or starve.

Wicomico Tax Rate Same As Last Year

The tax levy for the year, beginning July 1st, has been announced by the County Commissioners of Wicomico county. It is the same as that of last year. The county rate is $1.64, which, with the State rate of 85¢ cents, makes the total tax rate in Wicomico $2.

In order to not exceed last year's rate the commissioners made, a number of decreases in the appropriations. While the appropriation for public schools remains the same as for 1920 ($159,248), the appropriation for public highways was set at $34,855.15, which is about one-third less than was appropriated for last year.

THE Ford worm-driven, One-Ton Truck with demountable rims and pneumatic tires, are dependable, as well as serviceable. This, probably more than any other factor, accounts for their popularity. There is no evidence so convincing as that which comes from long practical experience. Like the Ford car, the Ford One-Ton Truck—Ford-built throughout—has proven itself. In it are combined the Ford principles of simplicity, with strength, lowest first cost, lowest operating cost, durability.

In the city, on the farm, carrying its loads between cities—everywhere you will find the Ford One-Ton Truck doing duty. Merchants, manufacturers, farmers, have come to know it as the truck of utmost service.

MORE and more every day the demand for Fordson Tractor increases because the Fordson has demonstrated so much usefulness, so much economy, so much labor saving, so much money saving, along so many lines of activity. The farmer has discovered that not only for plowing, harrowing, discing, seeding, mowing, reaping or threshing, but a multitude of other uses; cutting wood; feed; grinding feed; churning; washing; furnishing water in the house; making electric light possible in the house and around the barns, so that, as a matter of fact, there is hardly an hour in the day when the Tractor cannot be made a profitable servant. There is ditching to do; there are roads to fix; and so on all down along the line of the enormous calls that constantly face the farmer the Fordson steps in and does the work, shoulders the complete burden of the toil and the hard work, one might almost say "drudgery."
