BEES AND BEE KEEPING

GET THE PROPER HIVE.

These Made by Machinery are infinitely to be Preferred.

The suspended Langstroth frame is used more than any other frame among English speaking bee keepers. It is safe to say that in the United States 500 hives are made and used which are essentially Langstroth in principle to one frame hive of any other kind whatever. In the British Islands, Australia, and New Zealand, the proportion of frames on the Langstroth principle in use is probably even greater, scarcely any other frame hives being employed.

The success of American bee culture in the last twenty years was first attributed by European bee keepers to the honey-producing power of the country; but the most intelligent apiarists who have tried the American methods with the Langstroth hive now recognized that success is principally due to the manipulations that it permits.

There being no patent on the Langstroth hive, and accurately made hives being obtainable at moderate prices from hive factories in various parts of the country, it is taken for granted that the enterprising beginner will adopt a single form embodying this principle—the loose-fitting, suspended comb frame—as its main feature. The hive should not only be substantially built, but should have accurate bee spaces and a close-fitting, rain-proof cover or roof. Factory-made hives, as a rule, best meet these requirements, as both lock joints and hinged corners can only be made to advantage by machinery.

A German exchange, Praktischer Wegweiser, gives an interesting account of bee-keeping in Siberia. The winter lasts seven months, beginning in September and ending in May, there being no fall and spring. The snow is often ten feet deep. The principal source of honey there is basswood, of which Siberia boasts seventeen different kinds, blossoming at different times. The wood of it is used for all kinds of building purposes even for making sheds for the purpose of protecting hives.

Nearly all bee-keepers there are professionals, and they select in the forest, far from any town, a convenient place for winter quarters. The hives are nearly all American pattern set on four posts, provided with covers, and separated from each other in such a manner as to afford easy manipulation. The colonies are strong, about fifteen pounds each, only such being kept. Swarms or sections are united to the number of five or seven, after having taken away their queens and drones. Those are kept in a cellar four or five days, otherwise, they are apt to desert. To catch a runaway swarm, hundreds of common hives are suspended on the trees. The bees do not go out between 11 o'clock and some time in the afternoon, on account of the oppressive heat. A good hive will furnish about 100 pounds of honey, which sells for about 25 cents per kilogram of two pounds three ounces. There are some apiaries in Siberia that certainly have over 1,000 hives each.

BRIEF BEE NOTES.

Key remedy for Bee-Stings—When stung, pull or rub out the sting, then place the bore of a key exactly central over the spot and bear down hard. After, say 30 seconds, take off the key, which has left a deep ring around the wound, and a tiny drop of yellowish fluid oozing over the wound; and this is the end of it.

If any colony is without a queen, or its queen is deficient, supply one without delay, unless it may be better to unite the weak colony with another and make one strong colony out of two weak and unprofitable ones. Feed all colonies that need it, giving full combs, or feed syrup.

Crossing well-established breeds produces bees which vary greatly in temper, especially in the first few generations.

Any person with fairly steady nerves and some patience and courage can easily learn to control and manipulate bees.

We advise every farmer to keep bees, not for the money it may bring, but for the gratification of his family.

The horse knows all that the colt learned, and boys tormenting the colt are not teaching it what it should know.

Location of Our Roads.

Many of our roads were originally laid out without any attention to general topography, and in most cases followed the settler's path from cabin to cabin, the pig trail, or ran along the boundary lines of the farms regardless of grades or direction. Most of them remain to-day where they were located years ago, and where untold labor, expense, and energy have been wasted in trying to haul over them and in endeavoring to improve their deplorable condition.

POLLY'S DREAMBOOK

"I thought that dreambook this afternoon," remarked Polly, "I don't know you would."

"Of course," murmured Tom. "I know you would."

"Well, anyway," said Polly with a sudden drop back to good fellowship, "it's a very curious book, Tommy, and chockful of interesting things. It explains my dream just splendidly. You know that was a funny dream I had."

"It was," assented Tom. "Rained diamonds, didn't it, across a funeral pro—"

"Don't!" shivered Polly. "You haven't any idea how creepy you get after reading a dreambook all afternoon. I didn't dream about any funeral procession. There was just a tombstone in the middle of a plain and a cloud came up and it lightened and it rained moonstones—not diamonds."

"Well, what in creation did it mean, according to your dreambook?" asked Tom.

"Why," said Polly, "it's just full of meanings, and some of them are sort of creepy. But it all straightened out in the end, and it means that something is going to happen, and it may be pleasant or unpleasant, because I couldn't remember whether the tombstone was white or gray. A great deal of good luck depends on its being white. Then the moonstones mean that I'm to meet a man who is to exert a great deal of influence over me, and the rain and sunshine together mean mingled good and bad."

"What a lot you've learned about your future, Polly!" said Tom.

"Well," remarked Polly, "I know I can just tell you some queer things about yourself from that book if you'll tell me a dream of yours some time."

"I'll tell you one now," said Tom promptly. "That was why I came up tonight. It was a most remarkable dream, Polly."

"Wait till I get my book," Polly exclaimed in excitement. "I can read by the street light through the vines. Now, then."

"I was," began Tom impressively, speaking in his deepest tones, "alone on a blue sea. The masts hung motionless in the coppery calm—sails, I mean. The sun was a great ball of fire above my head—"

"That means something perfectly gorgeous, Tommy," gurgled Polly. "Was the sun real copper like the calm, or was it red?"

"It was matrix turquoise, Polly," said Tom.

Polly looked disappointed. "It tells what red or copper suns mean," she said, "but I don't believe the gypsies that got up this book ever heard of matrix turquoise. How could they?"

"They couldn't," replied Tom. "Nor of the wireless telegram that suddenly tapped into my ear from Zanzibar telling me to buy S. & K. at 90 as soon as I could get up steam enough to reach Port Arthur and to telephone the board of trade from there. No sooner had this happened than the sails began to move and the masts to revolve and the turquoise sun led the way to an isle whereon grew an oak grove—"

"It tells about oaks," said Polly, hopefully. "Wait. Of course Port Arthur came in just from your reading so many extras."

"There druids in long white robes and with sharp red knives were all rising to the goddess of liberty, who was singing 'Bedelia' at the top of her voice—"

"I just wish," said Polly, "that you'd stick to one subject in your old dream. There's lots about oaks and druids and knives, but no new-fangled stuff."

"This is a new-fangled dream," said Tom. "So then I jumped straight into a red and black night vision power automobile and scrooped up the Lake Shore drive with a whole battalion of policemen behind me, shooting radium lights all through me, trying to get my number as long as they couldn't get me. And the lake was a solid mass of frozen butter-milk—"

"Wait till I find about churning," said Polly, wearily. "That means something."

"This doesn't," said Tom. "So then I saw one big policeman gaining on me and three tires were flattened out. I picked up the telephone and called Esopus to have a balloon ready for me to hop into—"

Polly flung her dreambook over the veranda railing. "I don't care," she said at last. "Anyway, I don't believe you ever dreamed any such stuff as that."

"A dreambook that can't interpret simple dreams like mine is no good," said Tom, serenely. "I wish at least you'd find out about that butter-milk lake."

"What you want is a glass of it," said Polly, testily. "Come on."

The nude truth is sometimes mistaken for an epitaph.

Sure Way.

The meeting of the Suffrage club was on in earnest. "How can we keep man at a distance?" screamed the woman in the derby hat. "By wearing crinoline," responded the one in the raglan. "Monotonous."

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a Home of Swamp-Root pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonials received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name Swamp-Root. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

BLACK DRAUGHT STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE

This great stock medicine is a money saver for stock raisers. It is a medicine, not a cheap food or condition powder. Though put up in cover form from Theodor's Black Draught, renowned for the cure of the digestion troubles of persons, it has the same qualities of invigorating digestion, stirring up the torpid liver and loosening the constipated bowels for all stock and poultry. It is carefully prepared and its action is so healthful that stock grow and thrive with an occasional dose in their food. It cures hog cholera and makes hogs grow fat. It cures chicken cholera and roup and makes hens lay. It cures constipation, distemper and colds in horses, murrain in cattle, and makes a draught animal do more work for the food consumed. It gives animals and fowls of all kinds new life. Every farmer and raiser should certainly give it a trial.

It costs 25c. a can and saves ten times its price in profit.

PRUSSIAN, Kas., March 25, 1904.
I have been using your Black Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine on my stock for some time. I have used all kinds of stock food but I have found that yours is the best for my purpose.

THE Simple Life

BY CHARLES WAGNER.

[Copyright 1904 by J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co. New York.]

President Roosevelt says to the author of it "I AM PREACHING YOUR BOOK TO MY COUNTRYMEN."

I feel obliged here to make a remark of a particular kind, and to offer to my well-intentioned readers the occasional to harness themselves to a magnificent work. My object is to recommend to their attention several categories of people too much neglected from the point of view of pleasure.

We think that a broom can only sweep, a water-pot water the plants, and in the same way we think a nurse is made only to cure for the ailing, a professor to instruct, a priest to preach, a burglar to steal, a sentinal to mount guard. And they decide that these, being delivered to the most serious occupations, are vowed to their functions as is the ox to his labor. Diversions are, in our eyes, a waste of time. Pushing this manner of seeing further forward, they believe themselves authorized to think that the infirm, afflicted, ruined persons conquered by life, and all those who have a heavy burden to bear, are in the shadow, like the northern slopes of the mountains, and that it is necessary that it should be so. From this the conclusion is drawn that these people need not be unpleased, and that it would be unbecoming to offer it to them. As to those who are afflicted, it would be a lack of delicacy to break the thread of their sad thoughts. It seems thus to be admitted that certain persons are condemned to remain austere forever, that we must meet them with an austere mind, and speak only of austere things to them. And so they must leave smiles outside the door when they go to see the sick, the unhappy ones, and adopt a somber face, a lamentable air and choose heartbreaking subjects of conversation. Thus they bring darkness to those who are in black, shadow to those who are in the shade. They contribute to the isolation of the isolated, monotony to mournful lives. They ensure certain existences as in a dungeon because they grow grass around their desert asylums; they speak low when they approach them as approaching a tomb. Who can guess the extent of this infernal work of cruelty accomplished thus daily in the world? It should not be thus.

When you see men or women consecrated to severe tasks, or the painful office of visiting human miseries and blinding wounds, remember that these beings are made like you, that they have the same needs, and that there are hours when they require pleasure and forgetfulness. You will not win them away from their mission by making them laugh sometimes—they who see so many tears and pains. On the contrary, you will give them new strength to better continue in their labors.

And when you know families in distress, or individuals in affliction, do not surround them like those who with plague, with a sanitary cordon, which you will cross only after taking precaution which recalls to them their unhappy lot. On the contrary, after having shown all your sympathy, and all your respect for their suffering, comfort them, aid them to live, bring them a perfume from outside, something, in short to show them that their misery has not excluded them from the world.

Offer your sympathy, also, to all who have absorbing occupations, and who are, so to speak, riveted to their places. The world is filled with sacrificed beings, who have never any rest or pleasure, and to whom the most modest respite does immense good. And it would be so easy to secure this minimum of alleviation for them. If one only thought of it. But the broom is made to sweep with, and it seems that it cannot feel fatigue. We must get rid of that culpable blindness which hinders us from seeing the lassitude of those who are always in the breach. Lift up the sentinals lost in their duty; procure an hour for Sisyphus to breathe in. Take for a moment the place that is the theater of a family whom the cares of the home and children enslave; sacrifice a little of our sleep to those who watch long hours by the bedside of the sick. Young girl, whom perhaps walking abroad does not always amuse, take the cook's apron and give her the "key to the fields." Thus you will make others happy and be so yourself.

We walk forever by the side of beings loaded with burdens that we could take upon ourselves, even if only a little while. But this short respite would suffice to cure the evils, revive the joy almost stifled in many hearts, and open a large career to good will among men. How much better we should understand each other if we only knew how to put ourselves with a single heart into each other's places, and how much more pleasure we should find in living.

I have said too much elsewhere of the organization of pleasure among the young to return to it here in detail. But I am anxious to say in substance that which we cannot repeat often enough: If you wish that youth be moral, do not neglect its pleasures, and do not abandon the care of procuring them to hazard. You will, perhaps, reply that youth does not like to have its amusements governed by rule, that in these days youth is spoiled and amuses itself too much. I will answer you, first, that we can suggest ideas, indicate directions, create occasions for pleasure without making any rules. In the next place I wish to ask you to observe that you are mistaken in imagining that young people amuse themselves too much. Apart from those scottish, enervating and disarming pleasures which blast the life instead of making it blossom and become radiant, there remains to-day but little. Abuse, that enemy of legitimate use, has so well snuffed the earth that it is comes difficult to touch anything which it has not soiled. From there come the forbidding prudences and prohibitions without number. One could scarcely budge if one would avoid contact with those unwholesome pleasures.

In the youth of to-day, particularly among those who respect themselves, the lack of pleasure occasions them profound suffering. We are not weaned without some inconvenience from this generous wine. It is impossible to prolong this state of things without deepening the shadow over the heads of our young generations. We must come to their aid. Our children are the heirs of a world that is not gay. We give them the legacy of great cares, embarrassing questions, and a life loaded with shackles and complications. Let us at least make an effort to lighten the morning of their days. Let us organize pleasure, create shelters, and open our hearts and homes. Put the family into your game. Let gaiety cease to be an imported commodity. Reunite our sons whom our morose inward manners drive into the streets, and our girls who grow weary of solitude. Let us multiply family gatherings, receptions and family excursions, lift good humor among us to the heights of an institution.

Let the masters and scholars or students, meet oftener and amuse themselves together. That would advance serious work. There is nothing like having a good laugh with one's professor; and reciprocally, to understand a student or scholar well, he must have been seen elsewhere than on the benches or the examination chair.

And who will furnish the money? What a question! That is indeed the central error. Pleasure and money, they take those for the two wings of the same bird. Alas! the illusion is coarse. Pleasure, like all really precious things in this world, cannot be bought or sold. To amuse oneself one must pay with himself; that is the essential. You are not forbidden to open your purse if you can do it, and if you do it useful. But I assure you it is not indispensable. Pleasure and simplicity are two old acquaintances. Receive simply, re-unite yourselves simply. Having worked hard first, be as amiable, as loyal as possible to your companions, and speak no evil of the absent; success will be certain.

CHAPTER VIII. THE MERCENARY SPIRIT AND SIMPLICITY.

We have just allowed in passing a certain widely spread prejudice, which attributes a magic power to money. Brought so near to a burning ground, we will not avoid it; but we will set foot on it, persuaded that there are many truths to tell. They are not new, but they are so forgotten.

I do not see any means of getting along without money. All that certain theorists and legislators have been able to do up to this day, has been to accuse it of all our evils, has been to change the name and form. But they have never been able to get along without a representative sign of the commercial value of things. To wish to suppress money is an attempt analogous to that of suppressing writing. It is not less true, though, that the question is very troublesome. It forms one of the principal elements of our complex life. The economic difficulties where we are struggling, social conventions and all the agencies of modern life, have brought money to a rank so high that it is not astonishing that human imagination attributes to it a sort of royalty. And it is on this side that we should attack the problem.

The term of money has for pendant that of merchandise. If there was no merchandise money would not exist. But so long as there is merchandise there will be money. It matters little under what form. The source of all the abuse of which money has been the target, the center, resides in confusion. We have confounded in that term, and in the notion of merchandise, objects which do not in the least belong to each other.

We have wished to give a mercenary value to things which have not, and should not, have any. The ideas of purchase and sale have invaded provinces where they should rightly be considered, and justly so, as strangers, enemies, usurpers. It is legitimate that wheat, potatoes, wine and stuffs should be sold, and that people should buy them. It is perfectly natural that the labor of man should procure for him rights to life, and that they should place in his hand a value representing his rights. But here the analogy already ceases to be complete. A man's work is not a merchandise in the same meaning as a sack of wheat or a quintal of coal. There enter into this labor elements that we cannot estimate in money. In short, there are things which cannot be bought; sleep, for instance; knowledge of the future, or talent. He who offers them may be regarded as insane or an impostor. Still, there are men who come money with things. They sell that which does not belong to them, and their dupes pay their illusory values in genuine coin. And so there are also merchants of pleasure, merchants of love, merchants of miracles, merchants of patriotism; and this title of merchant, which is so honorable when mercenary commerce is real commerce, the worst of blights when it relates to the things of the heart, religion, or of the country.

Almost everybody is in accord in finding shameful the traffic in honor, sentiments, his honor, his robe of office, his pen, or his mandate. Unfortunately, that which suffers from mercenary commerce, that which, as we tradition in theory, that which, as we tradition in practice, has the utmost difficulty to enter into practice. Traffic has invaded the world. The merchants are installed up to the sanctuary—and by sanctuary I mean not only religious things, but all that humanity holds sacred and inviolate. It is not money which complicates life; it is our mercenary spirit which corrupts and adulterates it.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Many people who are neglecting symptoms of kidney trouble, hoping "it will wear away," are drifting towards Bright's Disease, which is kidney trouble in one of its worst forms.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE

stops irregularities, strengthens the urinary organs and builds up the worn-out tissues of the kidneys so they will perform their functions properly. Healthy kidneys strain out the impurities from the blood as it passes through them. Diseased kidneys do not, and the poisonous waste matter is carried by the circulation to every part of the body, causing dizziness, backache, stomach trouble, sluggish liver, irregular heart action, etc.

If you have any signs of kidney or bladder trouble commence taking FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at once, as it will cure a slight disorder in a few days and prevent a fatal malady. It is pleasant to take and benefits the whole system.

How to Find Out.

You can easily determine if your kidneys are out of order by setting aside for 24 hours a bottle of the urine passed upon arising. If upon examination it is cloudy or milky or has a brick-dust sediment or small particles float about in it, your kidneys are diseased, and FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE should be taken at once.

G. B. Burhans Testifies After Four Years.

G. B. Burhans of Carle Place, N. Y., writes: "About four years ago I wrote you stating that I had been entirely cured of a severe kidney trouble by taking less than two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure. It entirely stopped the brick-dust sediment and pain and symptoms of kidney disease disappeared. I am glad to say that I have never had a return of any of those symptoms during the four years that have elapsed, and I am evidently cured to stay cured, and I can heartily recommend Foley's Kidney Cure to any one suffering from kidney or bladder trouble."

CORRUPTION.

This week's issue of the Advertiser contains an article on "Political Corruption" by the Hon. Jas. E. Ellegood. Every one that is interested in the good of the State should carefully read it.

This question is now being agitated from the Pacific to the Atlantic. Purity in politics is making rapid strides and it seems as tho' the days of Boodleslam may be numbered. It is a notorious fact that on the Eastern Shore of Maryland money flows on election day as freely as water. Outside of our sister state, Delaware, it is doubtful whether another section in the entire country witnesses such a wholesale buying of votes as the elections of the past few years have seen here. There is however one bright spot in this dark history of crime and corruption. The Democratic Congressional Convention in 1902 adopted anti-bribery as one of their planks in their platform and as the logical outcome of this the Hon. James E. Ellegood was selected as its standard bearer. Mr. Ellegood accepted the nomination and made the corrupt use of money at the polls his main issue and waged an aggressive campaign of education throughout the district. Tho' besought by many party leaders to drop this issue and let them fight as they used to fight; tho' laughed at by Practical Politicians and given but lukewarm support by many in his own party, he refused to abandon the issue, preferring to go down in glorious defeat rather than win an ignominious victory by corrupt methods. He was defeated but there are signs that his sacrifice has not been in vain and the seeds planted in that campaign are taking root, and though elective methods have not changed, yet there is a stronger sentiment today among the people for the abolition of bribery than ever before.

TO CHARITY.

The publishers of the Advertiser will give one hundred dollars ($100.00) in gold to the Peninsula Hospital, The Home For The Aged, or any other worthy charity if any Wicomico County paper can disprove the following facts:

First. That the Advertiser has the largest bona fide subscription list and circulation of any newspaper published in Wicomico County.

Second. That the Advertiser of May 27th contained more bona fide advertising than any other newspaper published in this county that week; as also does the Advertiser of this week contain more bona fide advertising than any other newspaper published in Wicomico County, this week, does.

Third. That the Advertiser is now the largest newspaper published in Wicomico County and has been since January 1905.

The judgment to be rendered today, Saturday, June 3, 1905, by 5 o'clock p. m. by three persons to act as judges, one to be selected by the Advertiser, one by any other contestant newspaper, and the other by the two so selected; they to have full possession of all necessary facts. This proposition is open until 12 o'clock noon today, June 3rd, to the publishers of any other newspaper published in Wicomico County they to post $100.00 to be forfeited like to charity on failure to disprove either of the above three statements.

The route will be via Chicago and St. Paul to Banff to Springs, Laggan and Glacier, in the Canadian Rockies, thence to the Pacific coast. Returning the route will lie through the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, to the Yellowstone Park and thence via Billings and Omaha to Chicago, reaching New York on July 26. Not by Comparison.
"You have snowalides out in your country, I believe?" he asked of the man who had spoken of Colorado, as his home.
"Yes sir."
"Much snow come down with one of the slides?"
"Tons of thousands of tons."
"How deep would a man be buried if overtaken by one of them?"
"From twenty to 100 feet."
"Then they are not so bad as I thought for."
"But think of being buried under fifty feet of snow!"
"Yes, but I ran for office in my State last year and was buried under 200 feet, and you see I have lived through it. I guess your snowalides don't amount to much after all."

Classifying Him.
"I'd have you know, sir," said the pompous city chap on vacation in the country, "that I work with my head instead of with my hands."
"Haw!" exclaimed the honest farmer, "I lawed at first that yew was a jay, but accordin' to yore statement yew must be a woodpecker, b'gosh!"

He Didn't Own It.
"What do you mean by jabbing your umbrella in my eye, sir?" asked the indignant victim.
"Kindly give me your address," calmly replied the offending party, "and I'll ask the owner of the umbrella to mail you an apology the first time I see him."

Recipe To Preserve a Husband.

Select a nice, kind, amiable, industrious and generous man, and prepare him for the ordeal of making him go through a long engagement, which effectually renders him easy to handle. Gently detach him from all old friends and acquaintances, and remove any bad habits he might have, save the Record Herald. To preserve, deprive him of his latchkey and throw a handful of mother-in-law in the house. Shred him of all of his finer feelings by nagging and pound them into a pulp by complaints. When he has slumbered down put as much love into the heart as it will hold, add an ocean of sympathy, a word of tenderness, a pound of forbearance and a ton or so of patience.

ROADS AND ROAD MAKING

A DURABLE FOUNDATION.

Good Roads Impossible Without Good Foundations.

A road builder should always remember that without a durable foundation there is no durable road. Hundreds of miles of macadam roads are built in the United States each year on unimproved or unstable foundations and almost as many miles go to pieces for this same reason. Says Macadam:

The stone is employed to form a secure, smooth, water-tight flooring, over which vehicles may pass with safety and expedition at all seasons of the year. Its thickness should be regulated only by the quality of the material necessary to form such a flooring and not at all by any consideration as to its own independent power of bearing weight. The erroneous idea that the evils of an underdrained wet, clayey soil can be remedied by a large quantity of materials has caused a large part of the costly and unsuccessful expenditures in making stone roads.

The evils from improper construction of stone roads are even greater than those resulting from the use of improper material. Macadam never intended that heterogeneous conglomerations of stones and mud should be called a macadam road. The mistake is often made of depositing broken stone on an old road without first preparing a suitable foundation. The result, in most cases, is that the dirt and mud prevent the stone from packing and by the action of traffic sink to the surface, while the stones sink deeper and deeper, leaving the road as bad as before.

Another great mistake is often made of spreading large and small stones over a well-graded and well-drained foundation and leaving them thus for traffic to consolidate.

The surface of a road left in this manner is often kept in constant turmoil by the larger stones, which work themselves to the surface and are knocked hither and thither by the wheels of vehicles and the feet of animals. These plans of construction can not be too severely condemned.

The roadbed should be first graded, then carefully surface-drained. The earth should then be excavated to the depth to which material is to be spread on and the foundation properly shaped and sloped each way from the center so as to discharge any water which may percolate through. This curvature should conform to the curvature of the finished road. A shoulder of firm earth or gravel should be left or made on each side to hold the material in place, and should extend to the gutters at the same curvature as the finished road. The foundation should then be rolled until hard and smooth.

Economy in Time and Force.

Good roads, like good streets, make habitation along them most desirable; they economize time and force in transportation of products, reduce wear and tear on horses, harness, and vehicles, and enhance the market value of real estate. They raise the value of farm lands and farm products and tend to beautify the country through which they pass; they facilitate rural mail delivery and are a potent aid to education, religion, and sociability.

Nests for setting hens are best on the ground, but where this is not feasible put some clean, moist soil in the bottom of the nests.

THE JEWEL CASE.

A river somewhere about here, Phoebe?

"It's no good if we do. If we drop it on the line, it will be found—there's the coronet and the name on it—and if you chuck it in the river it will float, as there's nothing in it. Leave it to Bill. He would eat it sooner than have it found."

"Ah!" groaned Yvonne, "nothing in it. Oh! whatever shall I do if he ever knows? It must be lost or stolen and never found again, in spite of the reward Hildebrand will offer." Hildebrand was the baptismal name of the Graf.

Now listen to a tale of woe.

For months past the Graf von Blumberg, who moved in the very highest society of a well-known suburb of London, had been playing at bridge with a set of people who knew a great deal more of that and every other kind of game than she did. For an Italian nobleman, who was known as the Marquis of Stromboli, and a Greek gentleman from Levant, who was known as the Count d'Acropolis, and a few other choice selections from the foreign noblesse, had undertaken to teach her the fascinating game, and at last she found she owed them 175 pounds. Then they said they wouldn't mind having the money, and became threatening, so that finally she took the advice of a friend of hers who set up an advertising detective office.

And this worthy person's advice, for which he didn't charge anything from an old friend, though he said he could recommend a first-class solicitor if she wanted one, was good, if laconic.

"Sell your jewels and pay the gentlemen," he advised. "Then, next time you go abroad, take care to have the jewel-case stolen. Only be sure and take care not to have it ever found again. When you've done it I'll try and get the Count and the Marquis to knock off a bit, and we'll be halves in what we save. Ta-ta, Yvonne!"

For this was the guilty plot which Yvonne and Phoebe were now trying to bring to a satisfactory conclusion, since the jewels themselves had been sold in Brussels on the return journey from the Schloss von Blumberg, and by the time the train reached Paris the jewel-case was gone. So, too, was Bill—Phoebe's brother—who got out at the last station but one.

"The chews!" the chews of my immaculate great-grandmother!" the Graf howled when he heard of the loss as the train ran into Paris. "Ach! mein Gott! My father's great-grandmother! What would Friedrich der Grosse say? Ach! Ach! Ach!"

Then he gave Phoebe into custody of the Chef de la Surete, and asked her, functionary to have a glass of beer, and sat down on a bench and wept.

Phoebe was released because the police saw no signs of guilt, but only carelessness, in her conduct, and the Graf was consoled by Yvonne telling him that if he would only let her go back to the variety stage for three months under her aristocratic and lawful name, she would soon get the price of them back. But as the old romancers would have said, "Never more did the jewels return," and probably the spirit of Friedrich der Grosse was never troubled.—King.

Scottish Reformation Evokes Hearty Applause And Strong Praise.

Beauty of scene, of music, of costumes, and an air of ancient sweetness, all pervasive, encompassed two nights of rare enjoyment Monday and Tuesday when the Scottish Reformation took the stage at Ulman's Opera House and held large fashionable audiences spell bound with one of the best plays ever rendered in Salisbury.

Each character was so well portrayed that it would be amiss to dwell on any one at greater length than another, only the two stars of the play, Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots, represented by Miss Mary Lee White and John Knox, leader of the Scottish Reformation, by Mr. F. Leonard Wallis, were to the "Queen's Taste," as were indeed all for so short a period of preparation and so little rehearsing.

About $100 net proceeds was the outcome to aid The Home For The Aged. The Board of Managers and the Committee on entertainment desire to thank all in any way taking part—among them Mr. Rhodes, superintendent, for furnishing electric lights for every evening during the practice and rendition of the entertainment, also the Managers of the Opera House for the reduced rates at which they furnished the place of entertainment. They feel much gratified at the many expressions of great pleasure heard on every hand at the beauty and success of the play.

Dance in Honor Of Misses Gunbys' Guest.

A very pleasant informal dance was given in the Masonic Temple Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Ann Louise Morris, of Mobile, Alabama. Those present included:

Misses Ann Louise Morris, of Mobile, Alabama; Louise Gunby, Ruth Gunby, Alice Gunby, Lizzie Collier, Mary Collier, Gladys Moore, Nannie Gordy, Clara Tighman, Louise Perry, Mamie Gillis, Mamie Adkins, Beatie Slemmons, Carrie Adkins, Ora Disharoon, Irma Graham, Mrs. Virginia Gunby, Messrs. Harry Ruark, Wade Porter, Houston Ruark, William Phillips, Levin Collier, Wm. Tighman, Homer Dickerson, Oscar Betheke, Edgar Laws, J. W. Brock, Loretto, Martin Brock, Loretto, Bebe Ruark, Steven P. Toadvine, Donald Graham, Harvey Morris, Fred Grier, W. B. Miller, Graham Gunby, Carl Schuler, and Frank Gunby.

—Under date of June 1st the News in speaking editorially of the comparative figures given by the Advertiser last week, says the Editor in order to carry out his figures "used 2½ columns of dead advertisements from the pages of the Sharptown Herald."

This is unjustifiable, and untrue. The Advertiser had authority to publish all of the ads, referred to as bona fide paid advertising.

CORRUPTION.

This week's issue of the Advertiser contains an article on "Political Corruption" by the Hon. Jas. E. Ellegood. Every one that is interested in the good of the State should carefully read it.

This question is now being agitated from the Pacific to the Atlantic. Purity in politics is making rapid strides and it seems as tho' the days of Boodleism may be numbered. It is a notorious fact that on the Eastern Shore of Maryland money flows on election day as freely as water. Outside of our sister state, Delaware, it is doubtful whether another section in the entire country witnesses such a wholesale buying of votes as the elections of the past few years have seen here. There is however one bright spot in this dark history of crime and corruption. The Democratic Congressional Convention in 1902 adopted anti-bribery as one of their planks in their platform and as the logical outcome of this the Hon. James E. Ellegood was selected as its standard bearer. Mr. Ellegood accepted the nomination and made the corrupt use of money at the polls his main issue and waged an aggressive campaign of education throughout the district. Tho' besought by many party leaders to drop this issue and let them fight as they used to fight; tho' laughed at by Practical Politicians and given but lukewarm support by many in his own party, he refused to abandon the issue, preferring to go down in glorious defeat rather than win an ignominious victory by corrupt methods. He was defeated but there are signs that his sacrifice has not been in vain and the seeds planted in that campaign are taking root, and though elective methods have not changed, yet there is a stronger sentiment today among the people for the abolition of bribery than ever before.

TO CHARITY.

The publishers of the Advertiser will give one hundred dollars ($100.00) in gold to the Peninsula Hospital, The Home For The Aged, or any other worthy charity if any Wicomico County paper can disprove the following facts:

First. That the Advertiser has the largest bona fide subscription list and circulation of any newspaper published in Wicomico County.

Second. That the Advertiser of May 27th contained more bona fide advertising than any other newspaper published in this county that week; as also does the Advertiser of this week contain more bona fide advertising than any other newspaper published in Wicomico County, this week, does.

Third. That the Advertiser is now the largest newspaper published in Wicomico County and has been since January 1905.

The judgment to be rendered today, Saturday, June 3, 1905, by 5 o'clock p. m., by three persons to act as judges, one to be selected by the Advertiser, one by any other contestant newspaper, and the other by the two so selected; they to have full possession of all necessary facts. This proposition is open until 12 o'clock noon today, June 3rd, to the publishers of any other newspaper published in Wicomico County they to post $100.00 to be forfeited alike to charity on failure to disprove either of the above three statements.

Not by Comparison.
"You have snowed out in your country, I believe!" he asked of the man who had spoken of Colorado, as his home.
"Yes sir."
"Much snow come down with one of the slides?"
"Tens of thousands of tons!"
"How deep would a man be buried if overtaken by one of them?"
"From twenty to 100 feet."
"Then they are not so bad as I thought for."
"But think of being buried under fifty feet of snow!"
"Yes, but I ran for office in my State last year and was buried under 200 feet, and you see I have lived through it. I guess your snowfalls don't amount to much after all."

Classifying Him.
"I'd have you know, sir," said the pompous city chap on vacation in the country, "that I work with my head instead of with my hands."
"How!" exclaimed the honest farmer, "I laughed at first that you was a jay, but according to your statement you must be a woodpecker, 'gosh!"

Recipe To Preserve a Husband.

Select a nice, kind, amiable, industrious and generous man, and prepare him for the ordeal of making him go through a long engagement, which effectually renders him easy to handle. Gently detach him from all old friends and acquaintances, and remove any bad habits he might have, save the Record Herald. To preserve, deprive him of his latchkey and throw a handful of mother-in-law in the house. Shred him of all of his finer feelings by nagging and pound them into a pulp by complaints. When he has slumbered down put as much love into the heart as it will hold, add an ocean of sympathy, a word of tenderness, a pound of forbearance and a ton or so of patience.

He Didn't Own It.
"What do you mean by jabbing your umbrella in my eye, sir?" asked the indignant victim.
"Kindly give me your address," calmly replied the offending party, "and I'll ask the owner of the umbrella to mail you an apology the first time I see him."

Charitable View.
Romantic Rose—"I wonder if Tom threw himself at Daisy's feet when they became engaged?"
Sarcastic Sam—"Of course I don't know, but I'm betting odds that she threw herself at his feet."

Scottish Reformation Evokes Hearty Applause And Strong Praise.

Beauty of scene, of music, of costumes, and an air of ancient sweetness, all pervasive, encompassed two nights of rare enjoyment Monday and Tuesday when the Scottish Reformation took the stage at Ulman's Opera House and held large fashionable audiences spell bound with one of the best plays ever rendered in Salisbury.

Each character was so well portrayed that it would be amiss to dwell on any one at greater length than another, only the two stars of the play, Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots, represented by Miss Mary Lee White and John Knox, leader of the Scottish Reformation, by Mr. F. Leonard Wallis, were to the "Queen's Taste," as were indeed all for so short a period of preparation and so little rehearsing.

About $100 net proceeds was the outcome to aid The Home For The Aged. The Board of Managers and the Committee on entertainment desire to thank all in any way taking part—among them Mr. Rhodes, superintendent, for furnishing electric lights for every evening during the practice and rendition of the entertainment, also the Managers of the Opera House for the reduced rates at which they furnished the place of entertainment. They feel much gratified at the many expressions of great pleasure heard on every hand at the beauty and success of the play.

WORSE EVERY YEAR.
Plenty of Salisbury Readers Have the Same Experience.
Don't neglect an aching back. It will get worse every year. Backache is really kidney ache. To cure the back you must cure the kidneys.
If you don't, other kidney ills follow: diabetes, bright's disease.
A Salisbury citizen you how the cure is easy.
Mrs. G. W. Fooks, wife of G. W. Fooks, County Sheriff of the Court House, says: "I have suffered off and on with kidney complaint for the last eight years. It came on me gradually and continued to get worse. I felt tired and weak, was short of breath. One doctor told me I had kidney disease and it would finally result in Bright's disease. I was laid up at one time for three weeks. I was feeling very miserable when I went to White & Leonard's drug store for Doan's Kidney Pills. I had not taken them more than three days when the distressing aching across my back disappeared. I have great faith in this remedy and I know if anyone will take the pills as directed they will receive beneficial results."

In late years men have made fortunes out of the tailings of gold mines. The mill in which the ore formerly was crushed and the crude processes then in use allowed a large percentage of the precious metal to escape, and that loss amounted in some cases to a fortune. The stomach is just like a stamp mill in this respect. When it is not in perfect order it allows the escape and waste of much of the precious nutriment contained in the food. That loss when continuous means the loss of man's greatest fortune—health. Science offers a remedy for this condition in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It corrects "weakness" of the stomach, prevents waste and loss of nourishment, and puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition into a condition of health which enables them to save and assimilate all the nutriment contained in the food which is eaten. In all cases of constipation the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets will speedily and permanently cure the disease.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption Coughs and Colds to be unequalled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bentonville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles, Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Attacks of colic, cholera morbus and diarrhoea come on so suddenly that there is no time to hunt a doctor or go to the store for medicine. Mr. Barber says: "I have tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which is one of the best medicines I ever saw. ### MARDELA.

The schools of Mardele closed on Wednesday, May 31 and the teachers, Miss Mary Boudie and Miss Mary Brattan gave the scholars and parents a pleasant afternoon. They were all invited out to the school and after a very pleasing address by Rev. B. G. Parker, ice cream and cake were served to all present. We take great pleasure in noting the untiring efforts of both of the teachers during the whole year in trying to make their schools a grand success and no one can help but realize that in this great aim they have had marked success and we hope as patrons that it will be our good fortune to have them with us again unless they desire to make a good fortune for themselves in some other relation of life for which they have our best wishes.

The Methodist Protestant Church was reopened on Sunday, May 29, after having been closed for the purpose of being thoroughly improved. Rev. Wm. Strayer, pastor of Oxford M. P. Church was with us and preached at 10.30 a. m. and 8 p. m. and in the afternoon was held a Sunday School Rally at which quite a number made short speeches. Good congregations were enjoyed all day at the different services. Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Adkins, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Grier and Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Disharoon, all of Salisbury spent the day with the pastor of the church, Rev. Mr. Perry. The improvements on the church and parsonage amounted to $441.12 which when the report was made by the pastor it was found that he had enough provided to meet all the indebtedness. This was rather unusual that no collection needed but such was the case. The church and parsonage property are now in excellent condition and present a very fine appearance.

BREEZY MARDELA NEWS.

Lighting Conveniences Being Agitated in That Town. Other Happenings From Our County Correspondent.

The agitation that has been going on for some time in reference to lighting our town is about to bear fruit. The letters in "The Advertiser" upon this question have been carefully read and pondered over by our citizens. Everybody sees the necessity for this and quite a number are ready to begin the work. Who will call a town meeting to discuss this question? Let it be a general popular movement. Twenty-five or thirty lamps would be sufficient for the present if they were properly located. And by buying them in quantities they could be gotten for less money. If private parties put up their own lamps, then the probabilities are that they would not be of uniform pattern and might disfigure the streets instead of beautifying them.

Great quantities of berries have been shipped from our station this season. The truckers have been unusually busy. It has given employment to large numbers of pickers and this will put money into many homes that had very little of it before.

Dr. John M. Elderdice intends hanging out his shingle in our town. For the present he is associated with Dr. Wilson. The young doctor is quite popular among our people and has many calls. We feel certain that he will make a great success in his profession. Dr. Wilson was in town long enough last week to let us see his beautiful bride, and then he hurried away to Baltimore. The Doctor is very happy and we all heartily congratulate him. We hope however that his stay away will not be long.

Work at our stove mill is literally booming. Experienced pushing men are at the head of it, and things have to go. It furnishes employment to quite a number of our citizens. The large teams hauling timber to the mill are badly cutting up our roads. This is the one serious drawback. We who use light carriages in driving over these roads, very frequently go down towards China, and then up towards the moon. My neighbor says "this is good for the dyspepsia." Well, I am glad that it is good for something. But I am free to confess that it does not tend to a devotional spirit and, one's feelings are not expressed in Sunday School words either.

Rev. B. G. Parker will on Sunday night at 7:30 preach in the Presbyterian Church of Mardele Springs. The subject will be "The Sin Against the Holy Ghost, what is it?" The desire has been expressed that Mr. Parker should speak upon this question.

A Valuable Publication.

The Passenger Department of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has published the 1906 edition of the Summer Excursion Route Book. This work is designed to provide the public with descriptive notes of the principal summer resorts of the United States, with the best routes for reaching them, and the rates of fare. It contains all the principal seashore and mountain resorts in New England, the Middle, Southern, and Western States, and in Canada, and over seventeen hundred different routes or combinations of routes. The book has been compiled with the greatest care, and altogether is the most complete and comprehensive handbook of Summer travel ever offered to the public.

The cover is handsome and striking, printed in colors, and the book contains several maps, presenting the exact routes over which tickets are sold. The book is profusely illustrated with fine half tone cuts of scenery at the various resorts and along the lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

This very interesting book may be procured at any Pennsylvania Railroad ticket office at the nominal price of ten cents, or upon application to Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa., by mail for twenty cents.

SAUERKRAUT QUEEN.

The Proud Boast of Clyde, a Little Town in Ohio.

Nine-tenths of the American people, if asked to locate the kraut making center of the world, would point to Germany. Little appreciating that this distinction now belongs to a town in their own country.

Kraut making, like other industries which have long been synonymous with the name of some foreign country, has in recent years been found to excel, at least in some important particular, in the United States. It is asserted that there is no one place in Germany today in which as much sauerkraut is produced as in the town of Clyde.

In the territory about Clyde are 1,500 to 2,000 acres of land in which nothing but cabbages are planted. Each acre is expected to yield not less than ten tons of good cabbages. The bulk of this crop is used in the kraut factories, although a small portion is shipped to the outside world. The farmers haul these cabbages to the factories at the opening of the kraut making season and usually receive for their loads $6 to $7 a ton, although occasionally the price drops to a third of this amount. When the cabbages are bringing a good price the farmers make a large profit from their fields. It is not unusual for growers about Clyde to receive $100,000 for their season's crops.

The cabbages after coming from their storage quarters are handled by inspectors, who scrutinize them closely and then hand them to the cleaners. The core is taken out by skilled workmen, after which the cabbages are placed on a continuous carrier, which delivers them to the grinders. The grinders rapidly reduce the heads of cabbage to slaw.

From the grinders the cabbage next goes in its chopped form to the receiving tank, in which the requisite amount of salt is added. The salted cabbage is now ready for the vats in which the stamping operation is carried on. These vats hold as much as 100 barrels each. The stamping is done by men who wear rubber boots made for the purpose. Great care is taken to have everything cleanly in connection with each operation. The kraut is allowed to ferment two weeks and gather strength in its own juice. Then it is placed in barrels and sold at wholesale at about $2.50 a barrel.

It is not unusual for one factory to grind a hundred tons of cabbage in a single day. The season usually extends over a term of about two months and a half, beginning about Sept. 1. In this time perhaps the output of a single factory will exceed 25,000 barrels.

The kraut making industry calls for the making of barrels. A kraut barrel cannot be bought for less than a dollar, so in the production of a ton of kraut it is not unusual for $50,000 or $75,000 to be expended for barrels. The making of these barrels is carried on in the vicinity and thus adds to the prosperity of the kraut making center.

Other places are beginning to make kraut on a large scale in the vicinity of Clyde, and thus the industry promises to spread over a larger area. Bellevue is trying to rival Clyde this season and has been doing a big business. It is prophesied that next season's crop of cabbages in Sandusky county will exceed that of any previous year, if the season is a favorable one. More farmers are growing cabbage, and those who have been in the business several years are preparing to increase their acreage.—Minneapolis Tribune.

MONTANA BUFFALO.

A Fine Herd of Three Hundred on the Flathead Indian Reservation.

There are several herds of buffaloes in America, but all of them combined would not equal in size the Allied herd of the Flathead reservation in Montana. The herd sprang from two buffalo calves captured twenty years ago by an Indian.

Charles Allard, one of the leading braves of the reservation, took the calves and, capturing a few others, started out with a herd of five. It was his intention to fatten them like beavers and use them when hunting was poor. Major Peter Rooman, at that time Indian agent at the reservation, suggested to Allard that it might be a good idea to breed the buffaloes as the animals were becoming scarce in that territory.

The herd now numbers 300 and is valued at a quarter of a million dollars. Allard has given but little attention to his buffaloes. They have made little attempt to leave the little valley of the Flathead where they have been pastured. Mountain walls easily barred any such inclination, and the Indians along the various passes have taken care to see that Charley Allard's herd did not escape. Allard did not realize that he was a wealthy man until one day he was offered $200 for one of his herd by a circus agent.

Parts of the herd have been exhibited all over the United States. They were one of the great attractions of the world's fair in Chicago.

Just before Allard died he called on the man who had suggested the buffalo breeding idea to him and gave him a present of $500.

Two half breed sons survive the old Indian. When they need money they kill the oldest buffalo in the herd and sell it to lute butchers. The hide brings $500 and the meat sells for another $500. The meat finds ready sale in Butte at $1 a pound. Wealthy miners and others pay from $10 to $12 for the choicest cuts and invite their friends to a buffalo dinner.

The herd is increased by thirty or forty calves every year, and for some unknown reason this band of buffaloes thrives much better than the inmates of the Yellowstone National park.

Both the Allard boys have traveled extensively and are well educated. It is the hobby of one of them to harness his two biggest bulls in a team and ride the fastest speed through the streets of Missoula. Many of the bulls in the herd are wild, and great difficulty is experienced in loading them for shipment. One magnificent bull recently charged from one end of the car to the other, striking with such terrific force that he broke his neck. The Allard herd is the only effort made to perpetuate the fast disappearing monarch of the plains.—Indianapolis Sun.

NOT DEBATABLE.

The Argument Brought Forward by the Boy Scouts is Unanswerable.

The principal of one of the public schools of Chicago has long been a favorite with his pupils because of the whole hearted manner in which he enters into their school life. Debate, junior city council, clubs of many kinds bring them into intimate relations with him and add interest to their studies. During the early days of the war between Russia and Japan it was suggested that each power might arm privateers and send them out to destroy the other's commerce. The principal, while discussing news of the day with his eighth grade boys, brought up the question of privateering. "Shouldn't we stop it?" demanded an urchin in a front seat.

"Why?" asked the principal. "Because it would not be right." "Why would it not?" "Debate," came a cry from many quarters. The principal smiled and acquiesced and was at once chosen first speaker for the affirmative. The boy who raised the question was selected to defend the negative.

The principal is a large and pompous man, but has a great and saving grace of good humor. Standing there before the roomful of children, he leaned forward, placed his hands on the top of a desk and began impressively to deliver his argument.

He based it chiefly on history. He told much of the history of war and of privateering, brought the boys down to the Revolution and the war of 1812, went into the story of the Alabama and the Florida and assured his pupils that when two nations were at war each of them was justified in taking whatever means it could to injure the other. The boys were manifestly impressed. Their martial spirit was roused. They applauded enthusiastically.

Then the boy rose to reply. He was not a bright lad in his studies, but as the issue proved, he had convictions for which he was not afraid to argue. Unconsciously imitating the principal, he leaned forward upon his desk and began to speak.

"Children," he said, "how many of you go to church and Sunday school?" There was an immediate and general uprising of hands.

"How many of you have been taught the Ten Commandments?" Every hand remained raised.

"How many of you remember that one of the Ten Commandments is, 'Thou shalt not steal'?" Every one remembered it.

"How many of you remember that another commandment is, 'Thou shalt not kill'?" That, too, was generally known. "Children," said the youngster, as if he had been an old man addressing them, "the business of a privateer is killing and stealing. He goes out to kill the sailors of the other side and to steal what they have got. The Bible does not say, 'Thou shalt not kill except in time of war.' It does not say, 'Thou shalt not steal unless you are a privateer.' It says simply you shall not kill or steal any time. There is no question of right or wrong to be argued here. You all know that. It does not matter whether one is a privateer or a regular sailor or soldier. His business when it comes to killing and stealing is wrong, and the Bible proves it."

He sat down, and the vote was taken. It was overwhelmingly in his favor. The principal rose to his feet and smiled.

"Boys," he said, "I am proud of your decision. The Ten Commandments are not debatable."—Youth's Companion.

Antarctic Secrets.

A good deal of secrecy has been observed as to just what of scientific value was learned by the recent voyage of the British ship Discovery into the antarctic region. The geographical results of the expedition are well known, but the scientific results will take a long time to work out. It is said, however, that a secret has been brought back which will shake the foundations of many a scientific belief. Certain fossils have been found which prove beyond doubt that once—no one yet can tell how long ago—mammals, and perhaps even men, lived upon the land where now are utter desolation and life destroying ice and snow. These treasures were packed into tin boxes and brought to London under special escort to the British museum, where they will await inquiry by specialists.

In speaking of the water Sir Clements Markham was most guarded. Still he admitted that fossils must in any case mean much. They may upset all the theories as to the polar system and the geographical origin and age of the world.

Rat Catching as an Amusement.

Unremitting warfare against rats is advocated by Sir James Crichton Browne, who says that people nowadays are living under sanitary conditions which will seem as shocking and wrong to their descendants 200 years hence as conditions that obtained two centuries ago appear now. In advocating a crusade against rats, as the great carriers of disease, Sir James suggests a new form of relaxation. "We have with us," he says, "lots of glided youths whose time hangs heavy on their hands and who might vary their amusements by rat catching, which is much like a game of hide-and-seek as pigeon shooting. If the sporting papers would give a description of the lures and reports of the bags, with odds on the favorite rat catchers and portraits of the record breakers, these pernicious little rodents would soon become scarce—unless indeed enthusiasts should take to breeding and laying them down as we do pheasants." Great things may be expected when sport, fashion and sanitation join hands in rat catching.

Chemist Wiley on Whisky.

Chemist Wiley of the agricultural department reiterates his statement that "at least 85 per cent. of the whisky sold over the bar in the United States is not straight whisky. It is a compound of the neutral spirit, or alcohol, artificially colored and often flavored with artificial essences and sometimes mixed with more or less straight whisky to give it flavor." The statement ought to be an effective temperance document, all the more so since the effects of this compound bear out Dr. Wiley's analysis.

TOBACCO POULTICE.

Said to Be Good For Rheumatism, Sprains and Swellings.

"Last summer I was taking a spin one day in a light trap out in the country, and in attempting to pass a farm wagon on a narrow road my trap was overturned, and I was thrown heavily to the ground, sustaining a badly sprained ankle." George Max well says. "The farmer came running up to assist me, and when he found what was the matter returned to his wagon and came back with a few tobacco leaves under his arm. 'If you'll let me make a poultice out of these and place it on your ankle it will be all right in the morning,' he said, and as I was about five miles from a doctor's office, with the pain in my ankle something fierce, I told him to go ahead. It couldn't do me any harm, I thought, and it might have a slightly cooling effect while I was driving back to town. He dipped the leaves in the water of a creek near by, then bound them tightly around my ankle with the aid of a handkerchief and assisted me into my vehicle. When I reached my rooms I was surprised to find that the pain in my ankle was very much lessened and decided to give the poultice a fair trial. In the morning when I awoke there was absolutely no pain in my ankle whatever and only the slightest suggestion of a swelling. I was able to don my shoes without trouble and that day attended to business as though nothing had befallen me. Since then one of my friends suffered a sprain and consented to have a leaf tobacco poultice applied, which resulted in his case just as it had in mine. I have also tried it in other instances of slight injury where there were pain and danger of swelling and have found that invariably it relieved the pain within a remarkably short space of time and generally prevented any swelling. A friend of mine claims to have tried it with good results for a slight attack of rheumatism, and I have no doubt that it actually did what he claims for it; but, at any rate, for sprains or similar injuries I am now a firm advocate of the simple, homely remedy to which I was introduced by my accident in the country a few months ago."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"Fool" Legislation.

There is at least one fool in every legislature. He imagines himself a reformer. He slips in his bill and trades and log rolls for its passage. Thus in Nebraska the reformer wanted to prohibit women from wearing corsets and bloomers. This was clearly class legislation, for the title made no mention of men. In Pennsylvania he wanted to prohibit treating. In Kansas he wished to repeal the constitution and enact the Decalogue in its stead. In Indiana he desired benevolently to change the mathematical ratio of 3.1416 to 3.15 because it was "easier to calculate." And in Michigan he wished to forbid the wearing of tight in cirouses and drawers and the use of every language except English on the menus of hotels and restaurants. This last bill had its origin in the woeful experience of a country member who visited Detroit for the first time. He confessed that he could not read the menu at the hotel whither he had resorted for his dinner. So he blindly ordered twelve dishes, and he'll be hanged if seven of 'em weren't potatoes." He divulged as he explained his reform bill. In Arkansas three years ago the fool member actually succeeded in passing a drastic antitrust law which prohibits any corporation which is a member of any pool or trust in any part of the world from doing business in the state. The members who passed this all reaching measure probably formed a posse comitatus to insure its efficiency.—S. P. Orth in Atlantic.

$500,000,000 Yearly For Golf.

Would you imagine that something like $500,000,000 could be spent yearly on the game of golf? To begin with, there are 870 golf clubs in England, 700 in the United States, 632 in Canada, 134 in Ireland, 43 in Wales and 63 in different parts of the continent. There are, all told, probably not less than 3,000 organizations devoted to golf playing.

These clubs, counting their grounds, buildings and preliminary expenses, represent a permanent investment of $40,000,000 or $50,000,000, and comparatively few of them can be run at a yearly expense of less than $5,000. The average membership is about 200, and the average yearly subscriptions of these 600,000 golf players amounts to nearly $20,000,000. Each of the players is equipped with an outfit that costs on an average about $20, and the yearly purchase of golf clubs all over the world amounts, therefore, to several millions of dollars.—Springfield Union.

The Tunnel Up the Jungfrau.

The biggest tunnel in Europe is undoubtedly that of the new Jungfrau electric line which is to reach the summit of the mountain. According to recent reports the tunnel, which is now in construction, has passed the altitude of 3,000 meters (11,800 feet). As the road is entirely underground after reaching the altitude of 2,400 meters (1,040 feet) it may be safely affirmed to be the highest tunnel in Europe. The work, which commenced over ten years ago, is very slow. The second station, that of Rothstock, was opened to the public on the 21st of August, 1890, and the third, the Eigergwand station, not until the 1st of July, 1903. The next station, that of Mer de Glace, will not be opened before next summer, and perhaps only in 1905. The great length of time needed for the construction is due to the fact that the rock is especially hard, and it is impossible to use quick working drills.—Scientific American.

Are the Stars Our Future Dwellings?

Are the planets inhabited? Camille Flammarion, author of "The Unknowable," pursues this inquiry in Harper's with a decided bias toward the affirmative. M. Flammarion is inclined to regard the other planets as the "dwellings of immortality." He asks: "If man dies out completely how can the immensity of the universe interest us? If nothing remains of us, if we are only ephemeral mushrooms of the globe, living for a short time, how does it all concern us? Science is only a mockery like life itself; yes, a stupid and burlesque farce."

TORPEDOES IN WARFARE.

How These Engines of Destruction Are Operated.

Where there is a very strong demand for an invention, difficulties which at first seem insurmountable are frequently overcome. When the heavy armor clad advanced to a position of commanding importance in naval service, the necessity of some form of torpedo was immediately recognized by which it could be attacked under water upon the unprotected hull below the armored belt. The modern Whitehead torpedo, generally known as the automobile torpedo because it is self propelling, may perhaps justly be considered the most wonderful of all modern weapons. This torpedo consists of a strong steel cylinder somewhat in the form of a cigar, being about eighteen inches in diameter and about eighteen feet in length. It carries in its front end a charge of about 200 pounds of high explosive, provided with a percussion fuse, by which it is exploded when it strikes the side of a warship. The main body of the cylinder is filled with compressed air, forced in by powerful air pumps until a pressure of about 1,500 pounds to the square inch is attained. Immediately rearward of the air chamber is the driving mechanism, which is run by the compressed air, which in turn drives the propellers for forcing the torpedo through the water. A rudder is provided for keeping the torpedo on a straight course. A gyroscope is employed for operating the steering mechanism, and this device is one of the most ingenious known to modern science. The least deviation from the straight course is instantly corrected, and the torpedo travels through the water as straight as an arrow.

The compressed air, of course, is soon exhausted, but it will last for about one minute and drive the torpedo in that time a distance of about half a mile. In other words, the speed of the torpedo is about half a mile a minute. Now, as this speed is not equal to the fastest cruisers, torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers, when one of these torpedoes is launched from the prow of these craft while going at full speed there is danger of the war vessel overrunning its own torpedo.

The writer has invented a new system of propelling automobile torpedoes by which a material called motorite, somewhat resembling smokeless gunpowder, is employed instead of compressed air for furnishing the motive power. The motorite is used as a fuel by which water is evaporated and steam made, which drives the engine of the torpedo. Motorite provides more than double the power that the compressed air is capable of giving for an equivalent length of time, and it is expected that his torpedo will have a speed even greater than the swiftest cruiser or torpedo boat destroyer and may be launched from the prow of any vessel without danger of being over-run. ## An Old, Irrepressible Conflict.

The real difficulty in Russia is to obtain rulers who are willing to concede genuine personal liberty. The whole bureaucracy and probably all members of the dynasty except its head dread free speech, because they think the result will be a diminution of their dignity as well as of their incomes. So intense is this feeling that many Russian liberals believe the only practical escape from it would be the election of a new dynasty, which, from the imperfection of its title, must all ways seek support among the people.—

ROADS AND ROAD MAKING

Good Roads Impossible Without Good Foundations.

A road builder should always remember that without a durable foundation there is no durable road. Hundreds of miles of macadam roads are built in the United States each year on unimproved or unstable foundations and almost as many miles go to pieces for this same reason. Says Macadam:

"The stone is employed to form a secure, smooth, water-tight flooring, over which vehicles may pass with safety and expedition at all seasons of the year. Its thickness should be regulated only by the quality of the material necessary to form such a flooring and not at all by any consideration of bearing weight. The erroneous idea that the evils of an underdrained wet, clayey soil can be remedied by a large quantity of materials has caused a large part of the costly and unsuccessful expenditures in making stone roads."

The evils from improper construction of stone roads are even greater than those resulting from the use of improper material. Macadam never intended that heterogeneous conglomerations of stones and mud should be called a macadam road. The mistake is often made of depositing broken stone on an old road without first preparing a suitable foundation. The result, in most cases, is that the dirt and mud prevent the stone from packing and by the action of traffic coats to the surface of white the stones sink deeper and deeper, leaving the road as bad as before.

Another great mistake is often made of spreading large and small stones over a well-graded and well-drained foundation and leaving them thus for traffic to consolidate.

The surface of a road left in this manner is often kept in constant turmoil by the larger stones, which work themselves to the surface and are knocked hither and thither by the wheels of vehicles and the feet of animals. These plans of construction can not be too severely condemned.

The roadbed should be first graded, then carefully surface-drained. The earth should then be excavated to the depth to which material is to be spread on and the foundation properly shaped and sloped each way from the center so as to discharge any water which may percolate through. This curvature should conform to the curvature of the finished road. A shoulder of firm earth or gravel should be left or made on each side to hold the material in place, and should extend to the gutters at the same curvature as the finished road. The foundation should then be rolled until hard and smooth.

Economy in Time and Force. Good roads, like good streets, make habitation along them most desirable; they economize time and force in transportation of products, reduce wear and tear on horses, harness, and vehicles, and enhance the market value of real estate. They raise the value of farm lands and farm products and tend to beautify the country through which they pass; they facilitate rural mail delivery and are a potent aid to education, religion, and sociability.

Needs for setting hens are best on the ground, but where this is not feasible put some clean, moist soil in the bottom of the nests.

THE JEWEL CASE.

The Graf von Blubberin (she was an Englishwoman who had once been on the music hall variety stage, and to her fatal beauty the Graf had fallen a too susceptible victim when a student of the Rev. Dr. Bagges of Notting Hill, he afterward espousing her in lawful wedlock) stood upon the platform of the Station du Midi at Brussels, waiting to enter the express to Paris. In the corridor train, now ready to depart, her seat had already been taken, her wraps were disposed above in the rack, her jewel-case was down on her mistress out of the lowered window. The mistress, after casting a nervous glance up and down the platform, whispered now to Phoebe:

"Not a sign of him; not a sign. Whatever can have become of him?"

"He's in the train somewhere. I tell you I saw him taking his ticket," replied the maid, who, having once been a trapezist who had broken her legs, and was afterward only too glad to take the place of maid to her old friend and chum De Vere Mortimer, now the Graf von Blubberin, did not feel called upon to testify any very great respect to her except when in public. Then she added: "Where's the Graf?"

"In the buffet," her mistress replied; "he's gone to get a glass of beer."

"Peep!" a loud guttural voice said at this moment behind that nymph. The Graf had never quite mastered the pronunciation of our consonants in spite of the excellent teachings of Dr. Bagges, or the beautiful accent of his wife and her friends—like herself, ancient aristocrats. "Peep, what are you looking out of the fluter vor? Do you want someone to steal the jewel-case?"

"No one will steal the jewel-case while I'm here, Hock Geboren, Phoebe replied, getting out the respectful mouthful with difficulty.

"I could have stolen it," the Graf replied. Then, pushing his hand out of the window—by pushing "Peep!" aside—he said, "Come into the train, Yvonne; it's going to start."

Which the train did, and, being an express, flew along at twenty-five miles an hour on its way to Paris. It did not stop at any station—though it stopped between a good many—until it reached Mons an hour or so later, as well as an hour behind time, so that the Graf had plenty of opportunity to go to the restaurant car and, after having had two glasses of beer, one of Kummel, and then a coffee and brandy, to go to sleep. Meanwhile the Graf sat in her compartment looking at the Raphael Rosetti-Phil May pictures in the "Journal Amusant," and whispering behind his enlivening sheets to Phoebe, whom she always insisted on having in the same carriage with her.

"If he don't do it at Mons," she muttered, so that the old French lady accompanied by a sister de Charite and an idiotic daughter should not hear, though hearing they would not have understood, "where will he do it?"

"Never fear. He'll do it right enough. There's ten minutes at Mons and twenty at the frontier place. What do they call it—Folnes?"

"What a name! I tell you he's here. I saw him throw a whisky bottle out of a second-class window, next carriage, and it hit one of the men on the line on the chest. Don't you get nervous?"

"Just fancy if I'm found out! Oh! whatever shall I do?"

"Do! Fling it out yourself, or I will. We mustn't be found out."

Half an hour later the Graf, who had traveled this road before, said to Phoebe, who was also well acquainted with the route, owing to their frequent visits to Germany to the Graf's more or less dilapidated Schloss. "There's Mons. I do hope Bill's ready. Mind and be ready with the bag."

"You bet," said Phoebe.

Now at Mons the French lady and the sister de Charite, and, of course, the imbecile, began shuffling about in the way which makes our fellow traveler so happy, since the performance is a sign we are going to leave them in full possession of a carriage to themselves; and at that ancient city out they went, being met by two priests on the platform.

Then Phoebe let the window down again, and sat with her arm on the jewel-case—which was poised on the mahogany frame of the lowered sash—in a watchful manner over it. "Here comes Bill," she said to her mistress.

"Oh, I say he do look bad. I expect he's got another bottle of whisky in that compartment."

Then she suddenly exclaimed, "Oh brother!" or something that sounded very much like it. For just as a man, dressed more or less like a respectful traveling servant, approached the outside of the carriage, and you might have said, had you been there, was about to take the bag from Phoebe's hands—since, as we all know, neither feline nor servants may enter corridor carriages—the Graf's voice was heard at the door of the compartment, saying, "There now, Peep. There's the bag on the finter, just as if you wanted some one to steal it. Oh! you are a careless girl."

"It's all right, Hock Geboren," Phoebe said. "No one will steal it from me."

"Put it in on the floor, and put your seat on it," the Graf said. "I wonder at you, Yvonne. I do, indeed; when you know it's got two thousand pounds of chowchery in it, too."

"I'm looking after it. You go and have a little sleepy by-by till we get to the Custom House."

"Ja wohl! A little sleepy py-py. I will. Only do be careful. Friedrich der Gross gave the chevrons to my great grandmother, because, he said, she was such a good woman. Ach! till we get to the frontier," and he went off to the restaurant car again.

"Now we must get rid of it," Yvonne

TORTURE AND HUMILIATION

For Fifteen Years Face and Body Mass of Itching Sores—Could Not Express Suffering—Doctors Failed—Had Lost Hope

CURED BY CUTICURA AT COST OF $1.25

"My head was one mass of scabs, my forehead was covered down almost to my eyebrows, and I had to wear my hat all the time. My body was covered with spots in size from a pinhead to as large as a silver dollar. A white, crusty scab would form and itch, and words cannot express the torture and humiliation I suffered for fifteen years. I tried many doctors and all kinds of treatments, but could get no help, and I thought there was no hope for me. A friend told me to get Cuticura. I did, and in three days my head was as clear as ever. I applied the Ointment night and morning, also taking a hot bath three times a week, and using the Ointment freely after the bath. After using one cake of Soap and two boxes of Ointment I was completely cured, without mark of blemish. I was so pleased I felt like running down the street to tell every one I met what Cuticura had done for me. If any one is in doubt about this, they may write to me. (Signed) H. B. Franklin, 717 Washington St., Allegheny, Pa."

BOTH SIDES.

She is a pale blue negligee, fortified with a box of bonbons and the latest novel, which she drops as her caller enters.

"Well, I wondered why you hadn't been over before. Oh, just back from the mountains yesterday? What? Oh, of course—thank you, dear. Yes, I knew as soon as you heard of my engagement to Dick you'd be pleased. Yes, I'm very happy. It's such comfort to feel you are finally settled at last and don't have to fuss about trying to make up your mind. What? Oh, that old idea of mine—of course, a girl with any sense considers the matter sensibly from all points of view—only a little idiot would fall madly in love with a man who couldn't keep her in gloves, to say nothing of a trip to Europe in the summer and Florida in the winter."

"And, of course, I'm very fond of Dick—very. He really has charming ways—and then every other girl in the crowd was simply crazy to get him, so, naturally, I was glad to show them they were back numbers."

"Dick? Yes, he's really terribly devoted to me. He has a case of true love in his worst form. It does make me laugh sometimes. Only it's rather annoying when I have on a new frock calculated to make all the other girls green with envy and the men speechless with admiration to have him insist on dragging me off to the conservatory or some other secluded spot and wasting hours there with no one to look at me."

"What's that? You think I should be glad and proud to have him desperately in love with me? Where have you spent the summer, to pick up such backwoods ideas? I'm going to get married because it's time to settle down and I don't pine to be thought a social failure."

"I'm going to be good to him—you needn't worry. It's easy enough to keep a man contented and thinking you never have a waking thought except for him. I'm really surprised that Dick should turn out the sort of a man who expects that—I always fancied him too sophisticated—but if you could see the way he hangs on to my faintest word and hunts up things to do for me! It's really very pleasant. Come to think of it, you ought to know—was it three years ago or four that Dick fancied he was in love with you? Though, of course, it wasn't at all the same as his feeling for me."

"What's that? What about Kenneth White? Why, Ben, I really think you might—of course I know you didn't think—well, to be honest, I've put him out of my mind entirely. I never think of him. That's why I was so startled when you mentioned his name."

He comfortably arrayed in dressing gown before a luxurious wood fire, with a plentifully supplied table close at hand, as his best friend enters.

"Hello, old man, help yourself to what you want and take that chair over there. Yes, it's true—your ears have not deceived you. It's Richard to the hatter this time—and very soon at that."

She is the loveliest creature I ever gazed at and, Jove, the air of her! Just the kind of a girl a man would like to have sit at the other end of his dinner table.

"Yes, I know there's breakfast to be considered, but I'll turn all right. When a fellow finds he is the whole world to a nice girl, that she cares so deeply for him, it makes him sit up and think. Sometimes I feel guilty because I can't feel the divine madness I used to—once—but I made up my mind from the beginning. Kittle should never know that I didn't."

"I don't know why. It was so long ago—four years. I must have grown old since then, for I can only wonder in a stupid amazement—yes, and envy at the memory of that affair."

"No, I'll be honest for once—I loved Ben better than I'll ever love another woman. I'd have made up that quarrel in a minute if she hadn't stayed abroad so long and frozen me when she got back. She couldn't have cared. Haven't you ever noticed what beautiful hands she has—and her way of tilting her chin? Oh, it's all over now, of course. It's far better, anyway, for a man to choose his wife calmly, sensibly, judiciously. It's time for me to settle down."

"Yes, that's a picture of Ben over the mantle; see that line, the curve of her neck? I keep it as I would any beautiful picture. To be sure, there's Kittle's latest in the frame on the library table there. Isn't she a stunner? And a very dear girl besides. As I said, her affection for me positively humbles me. I'm going to be good to her, I tell you. Have another cigar?"

DINWIDDIE'S TRIP.

Dinwiddie went away seven months ago to Mexico. He left suddenly, without any chance at farewell banquets and stag suppers. He corresponded with no one but his business firm while he was away, for he, like most of his mortal brothers, was little given to letter writing as a fine art.

He managed to keep fairly busy during his months of exile, but that it was exile he owned to himself fairly and squarely. He did not know how dear Chicago's everlasting dirt was to him till he saw the ancient grime of the City of Mexico; nor how inspiring was the raucous hum of the varied industries that gives the city no rest night or day until he observed with homeick contempt the dolce far niente of the average Mexican town. He longed to be back in the whipping wind that nips the Chicagoan summer and winter alike, back under the dark shadow of the never-to-be-completed postoffice building.

So when he was ordered back two weeks ago he nearly went tears of joy as he packed up dutiable wear in undatable garments and carefully wiped the dust of Mexico from his feet.

He got into town late one night, with his heart thumping against his ribs. This was living once again. He waved away cake, preferring to take his chances with the old familiar foot-pads who might be lurking in the shadow of the Adams street buildings. He wanted to see that dear old Chicago river.

It will be perceived that Dinwiddie had it bad. He got up the next morning with his heart still thumping against his ribs. This was the day that he would meet all the boys. Never again would he depart from his Chicago charms. Life was too short—wasn't it worth living away from home. The dear old boys! How he longed to see them!

He ran into Holden on the train. Holden was making his slow way through the aisle crush to the rear smoker. Dinwiddie laid firm hold of him.

"Well, Holden!" he cried, almost with tears. He had not been especially fond of Holden in those old days in Chicago, but Holden was the first familiar face he had seen since his return.

"Hello, Dinwiddie," returned that young gentleman, calmly. "Fine day, eh? So long!"

Holden was many feet past before Dinwiddie's loose jaws came together again and he awoke from his trance. Dinwiddie studied over the matter. He concluded that through some strange circumstance Holden had not heard that he had left town even, much less that he had come back. This was odd. Still, it explained the matter.

On the way to the office he ran against Selden and had seized his hand and was shaking it like a pump handle before Selden saw him. "Well, Selden," he said, enthusiastically.

"That you, Dinwiddie?" said Selden, in evident surprise. Dinwiddie later had to lay the surprise wholly to the enthusiasm of his greeting. "How's things? Fine, cool summer, eh? Getting out of town soon?"

Dinwiddie managed to mutter something that passed for a reply, and hurried on to the office, where he buckled fiercely down to work.

At noon he went out to luncheon, ready for the worst. It came swiftly in the person of Watkins, who dropped into a seat across from him, and nodded instead of speaking, for the waiter came swiftly and Watkins was evidently in a hurry. After he had given his order he looked up and spoke to Dinwiddie.

"Fine day, eh?" he said. Dinwiddie nodded.

"Don't know when we've had a cooler summer," Watkins continued. "Thought I'd leave town some time this fall, but haven't felt the need of it so far. You been anywhere?"

"No," replied Dinwiddie, proudly. "Going?"

"No."

"That's good," said Watkins pleasantly, beginning on his roast beef. "We'd miss you, Wid, if the deuce. All the boys would and you know it."

"Umph!" observed the enraged and resentful Dinwiddie.

At the end of a week Dinwiddie sat down one night and took inventory of stock on hand, so to speak. In that week he had met almost all his acquaintances. They seemed to swarm about corners and on trains, waiting merely to nod to Dinwiddie in passing. In all that time he had met two persons who seemed to know he had been away or at least had missed him. One was his manager, the man who had sent him to Mexico in the first place, and had ordered his recall. The other person was his bookblack, who, if he had not known of Dinwiddie's important international mission, at least had missed his feet.

Dinwiddie then came deliberately to the conclusion that Chicago's great heart beats a bit too rapidly to take account of its stray corpuses and that one citizen is of small account in the sum total of things.

He never mentioned Mexico in his conversation. Only yesterday he happened to be near when the vice-president of the firm was trying to remember which one of the men had handed that Halliday matter down in Mexico. He managed to grin over it, but he was a bit sore, notwithstanding.

SHARPTOWN

One of the merchants of town said that Saturday last was the best business day he had had in three years. In fact last week as well as this have been very busy weeks among all our merchants.

Rev. H. W. D. Johnson and B. H. Phillips made a trip on Monday to Vienna and down the county from that point.

Ralph Willis and wife of Federalburg were the guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Oaulk and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. M. Bennett.

Thos. H. Mitchell of Salisbury was in town on Monday and had a conference with the officials of the bank regarding the new bank building to be erected soon and also with the committee who have charge of the M. E. Church.

S. J. Cooper & Co., received a consignment of a car load of hay a few days ago.

Misses Bertha Cooper and Myra Bennett teachers at Riverton held an entertainment at the Riverton School house on Saturday night last and realized a nice little sum of money which they will use to make extra improvements to their school building. A laudable move upon the part of the teachers.

Rev. J. Harry Wilson was called to preach the funeral of Mrs. Myra Busick at Cason's Neck, below Cambridge on Monday. He was gone several days. She was organist in the Church of which he was pastor when he was on Beckwith's charge a few years ago.

Prospects for a large yield of Irish potatoes were never better in this section.

Noah W. Owens and A. B. Howard are erecting a large barn on the farm of C. E. Vincent near Galestown.

Thos. J. Covington is in Philadelphia putting up drying machines. Mr. Covington is a fine mechanic and does much special work.

Capt. J. Tyler, of Deals Island, of the schooner, Richard Cromwell, presented Capt. John W. Hurr, of the steamer, Pocumoke, with a pretty piece of coral from the coast near West Indies last week. Capt. Tyler, with the Cromwell, broke the record for quickness of run a few weeks ago from Cape Henry to the West Indies.

J. P. Cooper, Capt. E. W. Bailey, Mrs. L. T. Cooper, daughter, Miss Mary and Alice Miss Alice, Robinson were in Baltimore this week.

The Sharptown Marine Railway Co., received a consignment of three car loads of vessel masts this week from Tacoma, state of Washington. They were brought to Seaford by railroad and towed from Seaford to Sharptown by steamer Worcester. The freight from Tacoma to Seaford was seven hundred and fifty dollars. There are thirteen of them and it took three cars in length to load them.

Mrs. Capt. E. G. Bennett left Thursday with her children for Lewis, Del., where she will join her husband for a sailing cruise of several weeks.

John E. Nelson died on Tuesday evening after a short illness of a complication of diseases, at the age of thirty three years, leaving a widow and four small children. Obituary notice next week.

Mrs. Charles Mooney is visiting friends at Crisfield this week.

Resolutions Of Respect.

At a meeting of the Ladies Aid Society of Seaford on Monday the following resolutions of respect were passed to the memory of the late Sophronia E. Bennett who departed this life April 26, 1905.

Whereas: Our Heavenly Father in righteous wisdom and love has seen fit to call from our ranks our beloved sister and neighbor, yet we bow submissively to the will of Him who doeth all things well, knowing that our loss is her gain. We sorrow not as those who have no hope, for sister Bennett was fully prepared to go; and be it therefore:

Resolved: That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the children and other relatives in this sad hour of affliction; and be it further:

Resolved: That a copy of this be spread on the secretary's record of our Aid Society, one sent to the Advertiser for publication and one be furnished each of the children.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable. Almost everybody who reads the newspaper is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, uric acid, catarrh of the bladder and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work and in private practice, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all good druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

BILIOUSNESS AND CONSTIPATION CURED BY THEDFORD'S BLACK DRAUGHT

Because the liver is neglected people suffer with constipation, biliousness, headaches and fevers. Colds attack the lungs and contagious diseases take hold of the system. It is safe to say that if the liver were always kept in proper working order, illness would be almost unknown. Thedford's Black-Draught is so successful in curing such sickness because it is without a rival as a liver regulator. This great family medicine is not a strong and drastic drug, but a mild and healthful laxative that cures constipation and may be taken by a mere child without possible harm.

The healthful action on the liver cures biliousness. It has an invigorating effect on the kidneys. Because the liver and kidneys do not work regularly, the poisonous waste along with the waste from the bowels is forced back into the blood and virulent contagion results. Timely treatment with Thedford's Black-Draught removes the dangers which lurk in constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and will positively forestall the inroads of Bright's disease, for which disease in advanced stages there is no cure. Ask your dealer for a 25c. package of Thedford's Black-Draught.

THE Simple Life

BY CHARLES WAGNER.

[Copyright 1904 by J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co. New York.]

President Roosevelt says to the author of it

"I AM PREACHING YOUR BOOK TO MY COUNTRYMEN."

The mercenary spirit brings us to one single question: "How much will I bring home?" He resumes it all in an axiom: "With money one can procure anything." With money principles of conduct a society can descend to degrees of infamy that are impossible to picture or to imagine.

How much will it bring me? That question, so legitimate when it regards the precautions that each one should take to assure his subsistence by his work, becomes terrible as soon as it overflows its limits and dominates all one's life. That is so true that it destroys even the labor which is our breadwinner. I furnish paid labor, nothing better, but if I have no other inspiration during this labor than to get my pay, nothing is worse. A man who has for motive of action his salary only, does poor work. What interests him is not his work but the money. If he can shirk his work without cutting his pay he will do it. Mason, laborer, mechanic, he who does not love his labor and does not put interest or dignity into it, is a bad workman.

The physician who thinks only of his fee is a man to whom it would not be well to confide one's life, for what actuates him is the desire to garnish his purse at the expense of yours. If it is to his interest he is capable of suffering a long time before he restores your health. He who cares only for the profit in the instruction of children is a poor professor, for the profit is mediocre, but his teaching even poorer. What does mercenary journalism value? The day when you write only for the penny, your prose ceases to be worth even that penny. The nearer human labor touches objects of an elevated nature, the more the mercenary spirit, if it intervenes, sterilizes and corrupts it. They are a thousand times right who say that all work merits a compensation, that all men who consecrate their efforts to entertain life should have their place in the sunshine; and whosever does nothing useful does not earn his living—in a word, is but a parasite. But there is no graver social error than to reach a point where to reap a gain becomes the sole motive of action. The best of us which we put into our work, let it be of arms, warmth of heart, or the tension of intelligence, is precisely what no one can pay us for. Nothing proves more clearly that man is not a machine than this fact: two men at work with the same strength, the same gestures, produce results entirely different. Where is the cause of this phenomenon? In the divergence of their intentions. One has a mercenary spirit, and the other a simple soul. Both receive their pay, but the work of one is sterile, the other has put his soul in his work. The work of the first is like the grain of sand which remains to all eternity a grain of sand out of which nothing can come; while the other is like the living seed thrown to the earth: it germinates and brings harvest. There is no other way to explain why so many persons have not succeeded, while employing the same external means as the others. Automotons do not reproduce and the labor of a mercenary person brings forth no fruit.

Without doubt we are obliged to recognize the economic facts; to bow before the difficulties of life. From day to day it becomes a more urgent question how to properly combine one's means of action, to be able to feed, clothe, lodge and bring up one's family. He who does not calculate and foresee is a visionary, a blockhead, to be sooner or later obliged to hold his hand to those whose parsimony he despised. And yet what would become of us if this kind of care entirely absorbed us? If, perfectly accountable, we wished to measure our effort with the money that it brings to do nothing more that would not end in a receipt, and consider useless and lost pains all which could not be aligned in ciphers in an account book?

Were our mothers paid anything for loving us, for bringing us up? What would become of our filial piety if we wished to devote to love and care for our old parents? What does it bring, to tell the truth? Disagreement, sometimes suffering and persecutions. To defend one's country? Weariness, wounds, and sometimes death. To do good? Annoyances, ingratitude, and even resentments. Into all the essential functions of humanity devotion enters. I defy the finest calculators to maintain themselves in the world without ever appealing to other things than calculation. Doubtless those who have known how to "wind their balls of wool" are considered intelligent. But look at them closely. In those balls how many threads they owe to the devotion of the simplest! Would they have succeeded so well if they had met but clever men of their own kind, whose device is "No money, no Swisses"? Let us proclaim loudly, it is thanks to a few who do not count too rigorously, that the world is upheld! The noblest services rendered, the hardest tasks, are in general slightly or not at all remunerated. Fortunately, there will always be men ready for disinterested functions, and even for those which are paid only in suffering, and which cost money, repose and life. The part which falls to these men is often painful, and not without discouragements. Who among us has not heard painful experiences, where the narrator regretted his past kindnesses, the trouble he had taken only to gather disappointments? They generally say their contentment by saying: "I was stupid enough to do this or that." Sometimes they have reason to judge thus because it is always wrong to throw pearls before swine, but many lives there are whose sole really beautiful acts are precisely those of which they repent because of the ingratitude of men! What we should wish to humanity is that the number of these stupid actions will continue to grow.

I have now come to the creed of the mercenary spirit. Its quality is its brevity. For the mercenary man, the law and the prophets are contained in this one axiom: "With money one can procure anything." To look at social life, superficially, nothing is more evident. "Sins of war," "Sounding proofs," "The key that opens all doors," "King of the universe." To gather all that is said regarding the glory and power of money would make a litany longer than that sung in honor of the Virgin Mary. One must have been without a cent, if only for one day or two, and to have tried to live in this world where we are, to have an idea of that which lacks to him whose purse is empty. I ask those who enjoy contrasts and unexpected situations to try to live without money one-half week only, far from their friends and acquaintances, and amid strange surroundings. They will have more experience in forty-eight hours than an established man will gain in a whole year. Alas! these experiences are made by some against their will, and when absolute ruin falls upon them; though they may remain in their own country, among their companions of their youth, their old collaborators, and even those who are under obligations to them, they pretend not to know them. With what bitterness do they comment on the mercenary creed: "With money one can have everything; without money impossible to have anything." You become a pariah, a leper, away from whom every one turns. Flies alight on dead bodies; men go to money. As soon as money is gone the place becomes empty. It has caused many tears to flow, this mercenary creed—bitter tears, tears of blood, shed by those same ones, perhaps, who before, were among the worshippers of the golden calf.

And yet this creed is false, archaic, false. I shall not march to the attack with the old legends such as that of the rich man, lost in the desert, who could not purchase a drop of water with all his money, nor that of the decrepit millionaire, who would give half of his possessions to a penniless lad, to buy his twenty years and his robust health. So many men among those who have money, and above all those who have none, smile at this truth as one of the most stereotyped ones known. But I call upon the remembrance and experience of all to touch this coarse lie which covers an axiom that every one repeats as he goes.

Garnish your purse the best you can and let us go together to some watering-place, of which there are many. I wish to say, one of those places formerly unknown, filled with simple people, respectful and kindly, among whom one could live well and without great expense. Renew, with its hundred trumpets, has drawn them from the shadow, has taught them what they could make of the situation, of their climate, and their persons. You go on the faith of renown, and you flatter yourself that with your money you can procure for yourself a peaceful retreat, and that, far from the fetid and civilized world, you can weave a little poetry in the web of your days. The great impression is good: the natural frame, and certain patriarchal costumes, slow to disappear, strike you favorably at first. But as the days go by the impression is spoiled, the underside appears. That which you had considered authentic age, like the furniture of ordinary families, is but a trick to mystify those who swallow it. There are ticks on everything; everything is for sale, from the ground on which you habitate. These primitive men have become the most tricky of business men. Given your money, they have solved the problem of procuring it at the least expense. These are but the threads, traps, spread everywhere like spider webs, and the fly that these people are waiting for is you. That is what twenty or thirty years of mercenary reign has made of a population that was once so simple and honest, and contact with whom was good for worn-out city dwellers. Home-made bread has disappeared, and butter comes from factories. They possess to a marvel the best method of skimming the milk, and the latest recipes for adulterating the wines; they have all the vices of city dwellers without their virtues.

When leaving your coat your money. Much of it is gone, and you complain. You are wrong. One does not ever pay too high a price for the knowledge that there are things that cannot be procured for money alone.

You need in your house an intelligent and capable employee. Try to find that rare bird. According to the principle that you can have everything for money, you should be able, following your offer of salary—mediocre, ordinary, very good, or excellent—to find employees mediocre, ordinary, very good, or excellent. Who apply for the vacant position will range themselves in that last category, and doubtless will have procured certificates to support their pretensions. It is true that nine times out of ten, at practical trial, it will be found that these clever persons will totally lack the necessary qualifications. Why, then, did they engage themselves with you? They should, in truth, have answered you as in the comedy, when they ask the expensive cook, who know how to do nothing, "Why did you say you were a cordon bleu?" "Why, to get paid." That is a great fair. For will always find persons who like to get large salaries. You will find fewer capacities. And if it is probity that you seek, the difficulties augment. You will find mercenaries easily; devotion is another thing. Be it far from me to deny the existence of devoted servants, and of employees both honest and intelligent. But you will meet as many, and often more, among the poorly paid than among those more richly compensated. And it matters little where they are found, for they are not interested, but because they have kept a foundation of simplicity which makes them capable of self-abnegation.

They go on repeating everywhere that money is the "sins of war." Doubtless, war costs much money, and of that we know something. Is that to say that to defend oneself against one's enemies and honor one's flag, it suffices that that country be rich? The Greeks once undertook to prove the contrary to the Persians.

and that proof will never cease to be repeated in history. With gold one can buy vessels, cannon, horses, but military genius cannot be bought, neither can political wisdom, discipline nor enthusiasm. Put billions into the hands of your recruiters and tell them to bring you a great captain and an army of ragged recruits. You will find a hundred captains for only a thousand soldiers, but send them to the front and you will have the value of your money.

At least could we but believe that with money alone it would be possible to solace all miseries and do good. Alas! that, too, is an illusion which we must shake aside. Money, in large or small sums, is a seed which causes abuses to germinate. Unless one adds intelligence to kindness, and a large experience with men, you will do nothing but harm, and you will greatly risk corrupting those who receive your bounties, and those whom you have appointed to distribute them.

Money will not do everything. It is a power, but is not all-powerful. Nothing complicates life, nothing so demoralizes man, nothing falsifies the normal movements of society so much as the development of the mercenary spirit. Wherever it reigns it is deception for all. One can no longer confide in any thing or person, nor obtain any worthy thing. We are not detractors of money, but we must apply the common law to it: "Everything in its place; every one in his rank." When money, which should be our servant, becomes a tyrannical force, disrespectful of moral life, of dignity, of liberty when some strive to procure it at all costs, bringing to the market that which is not merchandise, while others, who possess riches, think to themselves that they can obtain of others things not permitted any one to sell or buy, we must resist against that coarse and criminal superstition, about money, to the imposture: "May your money perish with you!" That which man has the most precious he has generally received gratuitously, that he may learn to give it gratuitously.

CHAPTER IX. NOTORIETY AND THE GOOD UNKNOWN.

One of the principal passions of the times is the love of publicity. To make themselves known, and to come forth from obscurity—some are so devoted by this desire that they may justly be said to be attacked by the itch for notoriety. In their eyes obscurity is the greatest of ignominies, and so they do everything to cause themselves to be remarked. They consider themselves in their unknown quality as lost beings, to be compared to the wrecks that one night of tempest has thrown on some desert rock, and who resort to clamorous testimonials to fix and all imaginable signals to let people know they are there. Not content with setting off torpedoes, and innocent fuses, to make themselves known at any price, they have descended quite to baseness and quite to crime. The incendiary Erostrate, has made numerous disciples. How many in these times have become celebrated for having destroyed something of marked value, demolished, or tried to demolish, an illustrious reputation, or show their passage, in fact, by a scandal, a wickedness, or some resounding barbarity.

This craze for notoriety is nursed not only among cracked heads, or in the doubtful financial world—among charlatans and rascals of all ranks, but it is spread over all the domains of the spiritual and material life. Politics, literature, science even, and most shocking of all, charity and religion, have been infested by this desire for notoriety. They blow trumpets about their good works, and to convert souls they have imagined noisy practices. Following the savages, the fever of noise has gained the ordinarily silent retreats, troubled the generally well-poised minds, and vitiated, in a large measure, the activity for good. The abuse of showing everything, or more properly of spreading everything out, the growing incapacity of appreciating that which remains hidden, and the habit of measuring the value of things by the noise they make, has ended by altering the most serious of judgments, and one asks oneself at times if society will not end by transforming itself into one great fair, where each one beats his drum in front of his booth.

One quite the intolerable cacophony and dust of these exhibitions willing to go and breathe freely in some lonely valley where one is surprised to find how limpid the brook is, how discreet the forest, and how agreeable the solitude. Thank God, there are still some asylums left inviolate. However formidable the noise may be, however deafening is the mixture of mingled shrill voices, all that can reach no farther than a certain limit, and then it appeases itself and dies out. The domain of silence is vaster than that of noise, and in that lies our consolation.

Necessity of Clean Drinking Places. It would be better to conserve a more perfect incubator of disease germs than the drinking places some people provide for their poultry.

Best Meat Producing Fowls. The Astatics, Brahmas, Cochins and Langhans are the great meat-producing fowls and it is astonishing how well many of these can do at egg-producing.

A GOOD MAN FOR MARYLAND'S LEGISLATURE.

The extent to which the buying of votes at the polls on election day has been practiced, demands that some method be found to stop or at least check the debauching of our citizens. Although our constitution itself disfranchises the buyer and seller of a vote and forever disqualifies him from holding office, although our statutes made the buying and selling of votes a crime, yet judging from results these are entirely inadequate to either stop or check this criminal practice. There even seems to be a general impression abroad here that it would be impossible to convict anyone of the crime of bribery in this county. If this is the case then the first law passed by our next legislature should be one on this subject that is practicable, and preventative; such an efficient corrupt practice act, one that both can and will be enforced. Wicomico County has the honor of numbering among her citizens a man who has given a great deal of time and study to this matter, having spent several years of his life in the attempt to raise the standard of politics in his own county and on the entire Eastern Shore. Perhaps there is not a gentleman in the entire State who from the high standpoint of integrity, ability and moral courage is as well able to cope with this subject as the Hon. James E. Ellegood. Unfortunately for the public Mr. Ellegood's time is so fully taken up with his professional and other duties that it is doubtful whether he could be induced to accept a nomination for the Legislature at the hands of his party. To do so would mean a great sacrifice, and it would only be from a high sense of duty to his County and State that he could be persuaded to take the field and fight the battle of purity in politics against corruption. We believe that if it comes to him in the right way, he will sacrifice his own interest for the public weal, and the Democratic convention that meets here on the 30th of June can not do more honor to itself or render a greater service to the State than to nominate the Hon. James E. Ellegood for the Legislature.

1905 Levy Struck By County Commissioners Same Tax Rate.

At the session of the County Commissioners, Tuesday the tax rate for 1905 was fixed at 7 1/4 cents county rate and 23 1/2 cents state rate, making a total of 1.08, the same as last year. Several hundred thousand dollars of new property in the county mostly in Salisbury have made it possible for the Commissioners with conservative management to do this despite several large items of extraordinary expenditure which have come up this year, notably: $2,000.00 levied for the redemption of four of the bonds on the new school house in Salisbury, the interest on the bonds amounting to $800.00 and the repairs to the Court House and jail, amounting in all to something over $1,600.00.

The basis of real and personal property for taxation is $6,063,868.00; stocks of Corporations, $747,768.84; Bonds, $5,300.00.

Some of the larger items in this year's levy included:

"Rock Of Ages."

Writing of the famous hymn, "Rock of Ages," in the July Delineator, Allan Sutherland says, "When the hymn was written it was not known, but we may be sure that it was nothing less than the voice of the Almighty that inspired the author to write words of such soul stirring power. The hymn first appeared, in an unfinished form, in the Gospel Magazine of October, 1775, and more fully the succeeding year in the March number of the same periodical. This grand Christian song has had an enormous influence for good humanity, and has been a favorite with many great persons. When Prince Albert, the husband of Queen Victoria, lay dying in Windsor Castle, almost his last words were, 'I have had wealth, power and fame, but if these were all that I had had, what would I have now?' And then he was heard repeating softly and reverently,

'Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee.'
Gladstone translated it into Italian, Greek and Latin, but not all translations have been as happy as his. A missionary in India writes that he employed a Hindu scholar to assist him in translating 'Rock of Ages' into the vernacular. His surprise may be imagined when he read as the result of the effort of the learned Oriental, the first two lines:

'Very old stone, split for me benefit,
Let me get under one of your fragments.'

To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passages for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price including the spraying tube, is 75 cents. Druggists or by mail. The liquid embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation. Cream Balm is quickly absorbed by the membrane and does not dry up the secretions but changes them to a natural and health character. Ely Brothers, 66 Warren Street, New York.

JUNKS IN FRISCO BAY.

Chinese Craft That Fly the Waters of the Golden Gate.

Of all the craft that plow the waters of San Francisco Bay none are more curious or more picturesque than the Chinese junks. Probably few people are aware of the existence within the portals of the Golden Gate of a fleet of these strange little boats, built on almost precisely the same lines that Mongolian marine architects made fashionable many long centuries ago. They frequent the byways rather than the highways of the harbor. One might visit the busy water front section every day for a month and not be rewarded with the sight of a junk.

The greater part of this oriental fleet in occidental waters is employed in the shrimp fishing industry, a branch of human activity which in this city is almost exclusively in the hands of the Chinese. A few, indeed, journey among the townships located around the bay and collect old horseshoes, kelp and broken glass, the latter utilized in the manufacture of sandpaper. Others are used as fishing smacks. Many of them, it is said, are available when there is a chance to smuggle a little opium. From vessels arriving from the east parcels of the drowsy drug, with floats attached, have been dropped overboard, and a keen eyed junk captain has generally been near enough to secure the valuable contraband. But the vigilance of the customs authorities has pretty well put an end to this practice, and the junks are now more engaged in legitimate business. The other is too risky.

The Chinese junk is in itself an illustration of the characteristic Celestial imperviousness to all change. It is built along lines that have remained practically unchanged for hundreds of years. Yet, though apparently a relic of past ages, this craft is not to be despised as a useful boat for bay purposes. It is a very fast sailer, is capable of resisting squally weather and is easily handled.

The laws of Uncle Sam take no more cognizance of the average Chinese junk in this harbor than of a floating log of wood. The vessel is, as a rule, 40 feet long by 10 feet on the beam. It carries one mast thirty feet high. The crew of a shrimp boat comprises six men.

The unmistakable, distinctive earmark of the junk is its sail. It is typically Chinese—a huge, neatly square thing, measuring perhaps a few feet by 30 feet. Nothing is more odd about this sail than the fact that it is stayed or slatted with cane sticks at regular intervals, three or four feet apart, over its whole length. The effect is something on the lines of a Venetian blind, stiff instead of limp, like the everyday European and American sail. This is another very old idea carried down to these modern times by Chinese conservatism. The purpose of the slats is not clear. Probably they are meant to obviate the necessity of carefully furling and folding the sail when it is down. The junk sail is run up and down by a pulley instead of by means of a ring. When lowered it remains where it falls, does not become tangled and may be hoisted again instantly and without trouble.

A junk is built on the beach by Chinese shipbuilders. During last summer a new one was constructed at Hunter's Point. It took three months to put it together. The builder charged $350 for it, inclusive of labor and material.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Queer Esters.

There is a society of Q. E.'s (which stands for "Queer Esters") that has monthly dinners in London. The peculiarity of its dinners consists in the fact that every dish is unobtainable at the ordinary London restaurant.

At a recent dinner pickled locusts were the hors d'oeuvre. The soup was a la greque—a title which conceals an alleged delicious decoction of sour milk and grease, served with strawberry sirup. With boiled cod the Q. E.'s might be suspected of returning to the commonplace, but any such reproach was removed by its conjunction with sauce a la pure essence of garlic, obtained by pounding it with olive oil into a jelly. For entrées the Q. E.'s enjoyed white worm fritters. Specially imported from Provence, the worms fried in egg and becomes a clear crystalline red, snapping in the fingers and melting under the tongue like a bonbon glace. The triumph of the banquet was chat noir a l'adophile, composed and prepared by the president himself. Steeped for two days in fine vinegar with thyme, mint, rosemary and other aromatic herbs, the black cat was stewed in white wine and dished up with tripe sausages. It was said to be good eating.

An Old, Irrepressible Conflict.

The real difficulty in Russia is to obtain rulers who are willing to concede genuine personal liberty. The whole bureaucracy and probably all members of the dynasty except his head dread free speech, because they think the result will be a diminution of their dignity as well as of their incomes. So intense is this feeling that many Russian liberals believe the only practical escape from it would be the election of a new dynasty, which, from the imperfection of its title, must always seek support among the people.

As to Religious Epidemics.

Commenting on the extraordinary wave of religious enthusiasm brought about by some revivalists in Wales, the Secolo di Milano, one of Italy's most famous newspapers, remarks, "Even the self possessed and ecstatic Anglo-Saxon is not proof against such ordeals and can on occasion give evidence of what the medico-psychologist terms the hyperaesthesia of an overwrought civilization."

A PLEASANT EVENING.

I am not prepared to say that this automobile has absolutely no chance for existence. It may be a very wonderful invention indeed, though, I am not prepared to admit that it is any part I shall in future continue my travels to the street car, and feel reasonably sure that Virginia will prefer that plebeian method of transportation if she ever consents to go out with me again.

Night before last I took Virginia automobile riding.

There is a triple explanation for this. First, Virginia "just loves" automobiles. Second, I admire Virginia. Third, Bob was out of town. Virginia and I cherish the different opinions of Bob. I looked forward to the evening with bright anticipation. Pictures of Virginia's delight caused me to pay the exorbitant rental of the machine with complaisance. The automobile cost me $20 for that evening.

That price included the chauffeur, to whose plotting I submitted only until we got to Virginia's. It was far from my purpose to have the evening spoiled by any chauffeur's intrusion. I preferred to manipulate the thing myself. With this end in view I gleaned from the professional driver certain rudimentary facts about running automobiles. As soon as he had landed me in front of the house I invited him to return on foot. He demurred. His instructions were that no inexperienced person should be left alone with that panting monster. I had to make it an object to him to go. I told him besides that I knew all about automobiles.

Virginia was on the piazza awaiting my arrival. That was flattering. Deliberately I alighted from my green and white chariot, examined all its parts with the eye of a connoisseur and then mounted the steps.

"Why, Joe," said Virginia with admiration, "I never knew you could manage an automobile."

That was no time to doubt my own prowess. In my first brief lesson, just terminated, I had learned of the existence of the foot brake. I had learned that one lever steered and that the other let the power loose. I hoped that all would be well.

With my help Virginia took her seat. She looked charming in her white gown and veil. I followed. I gave the power handle a jerk. Nothing happened. I braced my foot against the brake. Everything remained as before. My stock of knowledge on the subject of automobiles was exhausted and we hadn't budged an inch. Virginia looked on silently.

In haste I got out and retired to the back of the machine, ostensibly to investigate the trouble but really to conceal my embarrassment. While cooling down to my normal temperature I opened a few valves, just to seem busy.

The effect was instantaneous. The machine dashed forward at a furious speed, then stopped short, a hundred yards ahead. Virginia, turning, viewed me with indignation. On their front porches the neighbors were gathering in expectant attitudes. Something must be done. I made the hundred-yard dash in my patent leathers and again took a seat beside Virginia. Ominous rumbles were coming up from under the seat. Evidently an explosion was to be the next incident in our evening.

"I think I have discovered the trouble," said I, avoiding Virginia's accusing look.

In a cold perspiration I made an other lunge at the power lever. Wonder of wonders, we moved! But we moved backward. Majestically this eccentric monster retraced its course, stopping dead at the exact spot from which twenty minutes before we had started so buoyantly when Virginia had shown her delighted surprise at my being able to manage the machine.

"Virginia," said I, terrified by the glare in her eyes—the piazza was audibly enjoying us—"there is something wrong with the machinery. If you will let me use your phone I shall get the chauff

A GOOD MAN FOR MARYLAND'S LEGISLATURE.

The extent to which the buying of votes at the polls on election day has been practised, demands that some method be found to stop or at least check the debauching of our citizens. Although our constitution itself disfranchises the buyer and seller of a vote and forever disqualifies him from holding office, although our statutes made the buying and selling of votes a crime, yet judging from results these are entirely inadequate to either stop or check this criminal practice. There even seems to be a general impression abroad here that it would be impossible to convict any one of the crime of bribery in this county. If this is the case then the first law passed by our next legislature should be one on this subject that is practicable, and preventative; such an efficient corrupt practice as, one that both can and will be enforced. Wicomico County has the honor of numbering among her citizens a man who has given a great deal of time and study to this matter, having spent several years of his life in the attempt to raise the standard of politics in his own county and on the entire Eastern Shore. Perhaps there is not a gentleman in the entire State who from the high standpoint of: integrity, ability and moral courage is as well able to cope with this subject as the Hon. James E. Ellegood. Unfortunately for the public Mr. Ellegood's time is so fully taken up with his professional and other duties that it is doubtful whether he could be induced to accept a nomination for the Legislature at the hands of his party. To do so would mean a great sacrifice, and it would only be from a high sense of duty to his County and State that he could be persuaded to take the field and fight the battle of purity in politics against corruption. We believe that if it comes to him in the right way, he will sacrifice his own interest for the public weal, and the Democratic convention that meets here on the 10th of June can not do more honor to itself or render a greater service to the State than to nominate the Hon. James E. Ellegood for the Legislature.

1905 Levy Struck By County Commissioners Same Tax Rate.

At the session of the County Commissioners, Tuesday the tax rate for 1905 was fixed at 7 1/2 cents county rate and 28 1/2 cents state rate, making a total of 1.08, the same as last year. Several hundred thousand dollars of new property in the county mostly in Salisbury have made it possible for the Commissioners with conservative management to do this despite several large items of extraordinary expenditure which have come up this year, notably: $3,000.00 levied for the redemption of four of the bonds on the new school house in Salisbury, the interest on the bonds amounting to $800.00 and the repairs to the Court House and Jail, amounting in all to something over $1,600.00.

The basis of real and personal property for taxation is $6,038,863.00; stocks of Corporations, $747,768.84; Bonds, $5,300.00.

"Rock Of Ages."

Writing of the famous hymn, "Rock of Ages," in the July Delinestor, Allan Sutherland says, "When the hymn was written it was known, but we may be sure that it was nothing less than the voice of the Almighty that inspired the author to write words of such soul stirring power. The hymn first appeared, in an unfinished form in the Gospel Magazine of October, 1775, and more fully the succeeding year in the March number of the same periodical. This grand Christian song has had an enormous influence for good humanity, and has been a favorite with many great persons. When Prince Albert, the husband of Queen Victoria, lay dying in Windsor Castle, almost his last words were, 'I have had wealth, power and fame, but if these were all that I had had, what would I have now?' And then he was heard repeating softly and reverently,

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee."
Gladstone translated it into Italian, Greek and Latin, but not all translations have been as happy as his. A missionary in India writes that he employed a Hindu scholar to assist him in translating "Rock of Ages" into the vernacular. His surprise may be imagined when he read as the result of the effort of the learned Oriental, the first two lines:

"Very old stone, split for me benefit,
Let me get under one of your fragments."

To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passages for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price including the spraying tube, is 75 cents. Druggists or by mail. The liquid embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation. Cream Balm is quickly absorbed by the membrane and does not dry up the secretions but changes them to a natural and health character. Ely Brothers, 66 Warren Street, New York.

In testing the covering capacity of Davis' 100 per cent Pure Paint, I covered with one gallon No. 27, 491 square feet, two coats. The density and working properties are in all respects equal to its phenomenal spreading capacity. I have had twenty seven years' experience at painting, and consider Davis 100 per cent Pure Paint the very best I ever used.

SALISBURY HIGH SCHOOL

Class Of '05 Launched On Life's Commencement At Opera House. Bright Programs Well Rendered To Large Audiences.

The class of 1905 Salisbury High School and the large audience of relations and friends who filled the Ulman Opera House Wednesday evening received a rare treat in the address of Rev. T. H. Lewis, D. D., President of Western Maryland College. Dr. Lewis spoke forcibly of the high calling of the coming man and woman in real practical life and advocated a turn to greater independence of each.

The essays and orations of the graduates bore the marks of master hands, and demonstrated the high order of teaching they had received. Altogether, it was notable as one of the shortest—seemingly—of many Commencement nights. The program shows the plan of arrangement; to let Dividends "accumulate" on a Life Insurance Policy? In many companies it means nothing more than an agreement, on the part of the policy-holder, to do without dividends for fifteen or twenty years, and then take whatever dividend the company will be willing to give. Dividends are declared every year in the Mutual Benefit, and the policyholders use them either to help pay premiums or to buy increased insurance. The policies of the

Worse Every Year.
Plenty of Salisbury Readers Have the Same Experience.

Don't neglect an aching back. It will get worse every year. Backache is really kidney ache. To cure the back you must cure the kidneys.

If you don't, other kidney ills follow: diabetes, bright's disease. A Salisbury citizen you how the cure is easy.

Mrs. G. W. Fooks, wife of G. W. Fooks, County Sheriff of the Court House, says: "I have suffered off and on with kidney complaint for the last eight years. It came on me gradually and continued to get worse. I felt tired and weak, was short of breath. One doctor told me I had kidney disease and it would finally result in Bright's disease. I was laid up at one time for three weeks. I was feeling very miserable when I went to White & Leonard's drug store for Doan's Kidney Pills. I had not taken them more than three days when the distressing aching across my back disappeared. I have great faith in this remedy and I know if anyone will take the pills as directed they will receive beneficial results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name--Doan's--and take no other.

Birth marks which mark and mar the outside of the body are a grief to every mother whose children may wear them. But for every child who bears a birthmark on the skin there are many who bear an indelible birthmark on the mind. Nervous mothers have nervous children and many a man and woman owes an irritable and despondent temperament to those days of dread when the mother waited the hour of her maternity. The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription strengthens the mother for her trial. With strength comes a buoyancy of spirits and quietness of mind, which is one of the happiest gifts a mother can bestow on her offspring. By giving vigor and elasticity to the delicate womanly organs "Favorite Prescription" practically does away with the pain of maternity and makes the baby's advent as natural and as simple as the blossoming of a flower. There is no opium, cocaine or other narcotic contained in "Favorite Prescription."

Nervous Women
Their Sufferings Are Usually Due to Uterine Disorders Perhaps Unsuspected

A MEDICINE THAT CURES
Can we dispute the well-known fact that American women are nervous? How often do we hear the expression, "I am so nervous," "I should fly," or "Don't speak to me." Little things annoy you and make you irritable; you can't sleep, you are unable to quietly and calmly perform your daily tasks or care for your children.

The relation of the nerves and generative organs in women is so close that almost any disorder of the reproductive system, nervous debility, the blues, sleeplessness and nervous irritability arise from some derangement of the organism which makes her a woman. Of depression or restlessness and irritability. Spirits easily affected, so that one minute she laughs, the next minute weeps. Pain in the ovaries and between the shoulders. Loss of voice; nervous dyspepsia. A tendency to cry at the least provocation. All this points to nervous prostration.

Nothing will relieve this distressing condition and prevent months of prostration and suffering so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. M. E. Shotwell, of 103 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I cannot express the wonderful relief I have experienced by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered for a long time with nervous prostration, backache, headache, loss of appetite. I could not sleep and would walk the floor almost every night."

"I had three doctors and got no better; and life was a burden. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has worked wonders for me."

"I am a well woman, my nervousness is all gone, and my friends say I look ten years younger."

Will not the volumes of letters from women made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound convince all women of its virtues? Surely you cannot wish to remain sick and weak and discouraged, exhausted each day, when you can be so easily cured as other women.

Children's Day service was held in Friendship M. P. Church last Sunday evening and was a success. It is claimed to be the best ever held. The church was filled to its full capacity, while many did not get in the church. The speeches were good and well delivered and the music was also good and well rendered. Much credit is due our popular organist, Mr. Ralph Taylor who had charge of the music and to Miss Effie Fooks who trained a large portion of the children.

The Ladies Aid Society met at the parsonage on Saturday evening last. Quite a number were in attendance and two more new members were elected and received into the society. The society decided to hold a Spread Supper and festival on the Fourth of July on the lawn adjoining the church. Every effort will be put forth to make this one the best ever held. A great many people know what the annual festival at Friendship means. Besides the renewal of old acquaintances and old friendships of those who in years gone by lived here, but have since moved away, but make a point to be here on these occasions, there will be also many other enjoyable features among which will be a plenty of good things to eat, making in all a real good time. If the Fourth is a bad day it will be held on the fifth, or first good day. Everybody invited to come and share with us.

Children's Day Service will be held at Union M. P. Church on the 18th and at Nazareth on the 25th, of this month.

The Christian Endeavor Meeting will be held next Sunday evening at Friendship by Mr. W. Q. Hayman and at Union by the President, Rev. F. J. Phillips. There will be preaching at the usual hours.

A Matrimonial Lesson.

The Rev. Charles Mildmay was a widower with a family of six daughters, who gave him more trouble and more perturbation than all the other inhabitants of his country parish put together.

"I say, pa," exclaimed Lucy, the eldest, one morning at breakfast, "you must give me some more housekeeping money this quarter, or I shall never be able to pay all the bills; I'm sure I don't know where it's all gone."

"Gold and silver have I none," quoted her father.

"And dad," cried Ethel, the beauty of the family, "I really can't go any longer without a new coat and skirt. I am a disgrace to the parish."

"And Solomon in all his glory," commenced the good man.

"What about that dance you promised us ever so long ago, dad?" interrupted Fanny, the frivolous one.

"If we're going to have a dance we must have the piano tuned, and you said I should have a new mandolin for that one Grace broke," said Maud, who went in for music.

"Oh those things don't matter," struck in Mary, who affected the serious side, "but the harmonium which we have to use for Sunday school is a crying shame, and if there is any money to spare—"

"My dear children," interrupted the harassed father, "what is the use of worrying me like this. You know I haven't got the money or you would all have what you want."

Then there came a subdued grumbling chorus, "Always the way," "Perfectly sickening," "I wish I were out of it," "Too bad."

"I wish your poor mother were here to keep you girls in order," said Mr. Mildmay. "You wouldn't have dared to behave so if she were alive."

"No more would you dad," observed Fanny, pettily. "You should marry again dad," suggested Maud, "and get a nice stern stepmother to keep us all in order."

"I might do worse than that," replied Mildmay, thoughtfully.

"Ha! ha! ha!" laughed Fanny. "Who do you think would marry your father? Why you're nearly bald."

This was rubbing a man on the raw with a vengeance for Mildmay had been very proud of his raven locks and now they certainly were getting a bit thin. "There are plenty to get if I wanted to do so," answered her father with dignity.

"What nonsense, pa!" cried Maud. "Why you're much too old to marry."

"And do keep your eyes open and see what the latest style is in hats," suggested Mary.

"Don't go spending a lot of money," added Lucy, "for you know you can't afford it."

"I will remember your many kind and unselfish suggestions," remarked Mr. Mildmay, "and when I return I hope to bring something with me that will satisfy you all."

But this reply did not satisfy the girls, and when their father went away next morning as arranged he left them more discontented than ever, for they could not imagine what was the object of his journey.

A week dragged by, and he wrote to say that most important business would detain him another ten days in town, but at length they received the following letter:—

"My Dear Daughters:—You have no doubt wondered what has kept me so long away from home, but you will understand when I tell you that this morning I married one of the most charming women it has ever been my luck to meet."

"She does not bring wealth to her husband, but possesses beauty, great wit, power, strength of mind, and five sweet children, all under 9 years of age."

"During the ceremony I could not help thinking of you discontented ones, and how great a blessing a mother such as this would prove to you."

"Please tell John to meet the 6.15 train with a wagonette tomorrow evening. Your affectionate father. Charles Mildmay."

"No fool like an old fool," exclaimed Fanny, contemptuously. "But I won't stop at home to be dominated over by a stepmother. I'd rather go on the stage."

"I suppose I shall have to look after the little brats," half sobbed Grace.

"We haven't enough to live on now," wailed Lucy. "I don't know what we shall do with six extra ones."

"It's all our own fault, for worrying dad so," observed Maud, "but now it's happened we shall have to make the best of it."

The fatal hour drew near, and the girls awaited anxiously for the arrival of the happy pair. Presently the wagonette drew up at the front door, and Mr. Mildmay stamped in, and kissed them all while he was taking off his gloves and muffler.

"Where—where is—is—mother?" inquired Lucy.

"In heaven, I hope, my dear," replied her father.

"I mean—or—the lady—er—whom you married yesterday."

"In Paris, I expect."

"In Paris? Your wife? What?"

"Oh no, my dear, not my wife," explained Mr. Mildmay, innocently. "I married her to Mr. Dibbs, the millionaire, and they—eh what? What's the matter? Have all you girls gone mad?"

"Oh, dear old dad. Hurrah! hurrah! We'll never be discontented, or worry you any more."

"And they haven't yet!" Mr. Mildmay still chuckled at the success of his ruse.

Letter To A. J. Benjamin.

Dear Sir: Have you found out you can paint a job with fewer gallons Devco than of anything else, lead-and-oil or anything else?

Mr. Floyd Almy, House and Sign Painter, Greenwich, N. Y., found it out three years ago; he writes: "I have used Devco lead-and-zinc for the past three years and cannot say too much in its favor. I am using it now on a big job that I took by contract, and it has saved me at least $20 in the cost of material."

Devco is the strongest paint we know of; goes furthest; takes less of it to do your job.

Lead-and-oil is pure, lead-and-zinc is stronger, covers more; goes further. Have you found out you can paint a gallon Devco in less time than a gallon of anything else? That means less time for the job. Less time; less money.

Less paint; less money for that; less time, less money for that. Devco lasts longer; do you mind the less money for that? You are surer of it.

Ayer's

Why is it that Ayer's Hair Vigor does so many remarkable things? Because it is a hair food. It feeds the hair, puts new life into it. The hair cannot keep from growing. And gradually all the dark, rich color of early life comes back to gray hair.

"When I first used Ayer's Hair Vigor my hair was about all gray. But now it is a rich black, and as thick as I could wish."—Mrs. Susan K. Thompson, Taunton, Mass.

JUNKS IN FRISCO BAY.

Chinese Craft That Fly the Waters of the Golden Gate.

Of all the craft that plow the waters of San Francisco Bay none are more curious or more picturesque than the Chinese junks. Probably few people are aware of the existence within the portals of the Golden Gate of a fleet of these strange little boats, built on almost precisely the same lines that Mongolian marine architects made fashionable many long centuries ago. They frequent the byways rather than the highways of the harbor. One might visit the busy water front section every day for a month and not be rewarded with the sight of a junk.

The greater part of this oriental fleet in occidental waters is employed in the shrimp fishing industry, a branch of human activity which in this city is almost exclusively in the hands of the Chinese. A few, indeed, journey among the townships located around the bay and collect old horseshoes, kelp and broken glass, the latter utilized in the manufacture of sandpaper. Others are used as fishing smacks. Many of them, it is said, are available when there is a chance to smuggle a little opium. From vessels arriving from the east parcels of the drowsy drug, with boats attached, have been dropped overboard, and a keen eyed junk captain has generally been near enough to secure the valuable contraband. But the vigilance of the customs authorities has pretty well put an end to this practice, and the junks are now forever engaged in legitimate business. The other is too risky.

The Chinese junk is in itself an illustration of the characteristic Celestial imperviousness to all change. It is built along lines that have remained practically unchanged for hundreds of years. Yet, though apparently a relic of past ages, this craft is not to be despised as a useful boat for bay purposes. It is a very fast sailer, is capable of resisting squally weather and is easily handled.

The laws of Uncle Sam take no more cognizance of the average Chinese junk in this harbor than of a floating log of wood. The vessel is, as a rule, 40 feet long by 10 feet on the beam. It carries one mast thirty feet high. The crew of a shrimp boat comprises six men.

The unmistakable, distinctive earmark of the junk is its sail. It is typically Chinese—a huge, nearly square thing, measuring perhaps 25 feet by 30 feet. Nothing is more odd about this sail than the fact that it is stayed or slatted with cane sticks at regular intervals, three or four feet apart, over its whole length.

A junk is built on a Venetian blind, stiff instead of limp, like the everyday European and American sail. This is another very old idea carried down to these modern times by Chinese conservatism. The purpose of the slats is not clear. Probably they are meant to obviate the necessity of carefully furling and folding the sail when it is down. The junk sail is run up and down by a pulley instead of by means of a ring. When lowered it remains where it falls, does not become tangled and may be hoisted again instantly and without trouble.

A junk is built on the beach by Chinese shipbuilders. During last summer a new one was constructed at Hunter's Point. It took three months to put it together. The builder charged $350 for it, inclusive of labor and material.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Queer Esters.

There is a society of Q. E.'s (which stands for "Queer Esters") that has monthly dinners in London. The peculiarity of its dinners consists in the fact that every dish is unobtainable at the ordinary London restaurant. At a recent dinner pickled locusts were the hors d'oeuvre. The soup was a la grecque—a title which conceals an alleged delicious decoction of sour milk and grease, served with strawberry sirup. With boiled cod the Q. E.'s might be suspected of returning to the commonplace, but any such reproach was removed by its conjunction with sauce alla—the pure essence of garlic—being pounded it with olive oil into a jelly. For entree the Q. E.'s enjoyed white worm fritters. Specially imported from Provence, the worm is fried in egg and becomes a clear crystalline red, snapping in the fingers and melting under the tongue like a bon-bon glace. The triumph of the banquet was chat noir a l'Adolphe, composed and prepared by the president himself. Steeped for two days in fine vinegar with herbs, mint, rosemary and other aromatic barks, the black cat was stewed in white wine and dished up with tripes sautés. It was said to be good eating.

An Old, Irrespressible Conflict. The real difficulty in Russia is to obtain rulers who are willing to concede genuine personal liberty. The whole bureaucracy and probably all members of the dynasty except its head dread free speech, because they think the result will be a diminution of their dignity as well as of their incomes. So intense is this feeling that many Russian liberals believe the only practical escape from it would be the election of a new dynasty, which, from the imperfection of its title, must always seek support among the people.

As to Religious Epidemics. Commenting on the extraordinary wave of religious enthusiasm brought about by some revivals in Wales, the Secolo of Milan, one of Italy's most famous newspapers, remarks, "Even the self possessed and ecstatic Anglo-Saxon is not proof against such ordeals and can on occasions give evidence of what the medical psychologist terms the hyperesthesia of an overwrought civilization."

A PLEASANT EVENING.

I am not prepared to say that the automobile has absolutely no use for existence. It may be a very wonderful invention indeed, though, I am not prepared to admit that. For my part I shall in future continue my usual travel to the street car, and feel reasonably sure that Virginia also will prefer that plodding method of transportation if she ever consents to go out with me again.

Night before last I took Virginia automobile riding.

There is a triple explanation for this. First, Virginia "just loves" automobiles. Second, I admire Virginia. Third, Bob was out of town. Virginia and I cherish the different opinions of Bob. I looked forward to the evening with bright anticipation. Pictures of Virginia's delight caused me to pay the exorbitant rental of the machine with complaisance. The automobile cost me $20 for that evening.

The price included the chauffeur, to whose piloting I submitted only until we got to Virginia's. It was far from my purpose to have the evening spoiled by any chauffeur's intrusion.

I preferred to manipulate the thing myself. With this end in view I gleaned from the professional driver certain rudimentary facts about running automobiles. As soon as he had landed me in front of the house I invited him to return on foot. He demurred. His instructions were that no inexperienced person should be left alone with that panting monster. I had to make it an object to him to go. I told him besides that I knew all about automobiles.

Virginia was on the piazza awaiting my arrival. That was flattering. Deliberately I alighted from my green and white chariot, examined all its parts with the eye of a connoisseur and then mounted the steps.

"Why, Joe," said Virginia with admiration, "I never knew you could manage an automobile."

That was no time to doubt my own prowess. In my first brief lesson, just terminated, I had learned of the existence of the foot brake. I had learned that one lever steered and that the other let the power loose. I hoped that all would be well.

With my help Virginia took her seat. She looked charming in her white gown and veil. I followed. I gave the power handle a jerk. Nothing happened. I battled with the remaining lever. Everything was perfectly quiet. I braced my foot against the brake. Everything remained as before. My stock of knowledge on the subject of automobiles was exhausted and we hadn't budged an inch. Virginia looked on silently.

In haste I got out and retired to the back of the machine, ostensibly to investigate the trouble but really to conceal my embarrassment. While cooling down to my normal temperature I opened a few valves, just to seem busy.

The effect was instantaneous. The machine dashed forward at a furious speed, then stopped short, a hundred yards ahead. Virginia, turning, viewed me with indignation. On their front porches the neighbors were gathering in expectant attitudes. Something must be done. I made the hundred-yard dash in my patent leathers and again took a seat beside Virginia. Ominous rumbles were coming up from under the seat. Evidently an explosion was to be the next incident in our evening.

"I think I have discovered the trouble now," said I, avoiding Virginia's accusing look.

In a cold perspiration I made another lunge at the power lever. Wonder of wonders, we moved! But we moved backward. Majestically this eccentric monster retraced its course, stopping dead at the exact spot from which twenty minutes before we had started so buoyantly when Virginia had shown her delighted surprise at my being able to manage the machine.

"Virginia," said I, terrified by the glare in her eyes—the piazza were audibly enjoying us—"there is something wrong with the machinery. If you will let me use your phone I shall get the chauffeur to come and examine it."

Fifteen minutes later the chauffeur arrived, wearing one of those "I told you so" grins on his hateful countenance.

"This confounded machine of yours is worthless," I stormed.

"Nothing the matter with the machine," said he. "You don't know how to run an automobile, that's all."

With that brutal rejoinder he thrust me ignominiously into the back seat. In another minute we were pounding off amid the cheers of the neighborhood children.

The ride was three hours long, Virginia spent it on the front seat with the chauffeur, getting information on how to run an automobile. I might have been a bundle of wraps for all the attention I got.

That was the evening that cost me $20.

AMY'S SURRENDER.

When the announcement appeared in the society columns of the daily papers that Jimmie Cheeney had broken down through overwork, and had been ordered by his physician to take a rest, it was regarded as one of Jimmie's best jokes.

To Jimmie himself it was no joke. While his acquaintances in society knew him only as a social butterfly, there were men down in "the Street" who knew that in the three or four hours that he generally spent in his office every day, he was more than able to engineer deals in which some of the shrewdest operators in the financial district had been trapped.

It was this double strain which had finally told upon him, and had resulted in his settling down in a quiet little town on the Connecticut river just at a time when some of his biggest operations were coming to a head.

The first week at Woodale was spent close to the telephone office. The delivery system consisted of one small boy, whose sister was the operator.

Jimmie Cheeney decided that it would be better to keep a watch on the office himself, and his standing as the only person in the place who had ever received five telegrams in a single day gave him the freedom of the tiny room in the railroad station where Amy Langston acted as telegraph operator, station agent and baggage and freight clerk.

This was scarcely the routine prescribed by his physician, but there were worse ways of spending one's time than in Amy Langston's society, and long before the end of the first week Jimmie had decided that she was one of the most charming girls he had ever met.

By the end of the second week he was honestly in love with her, and Dr. Dillingham, making a hurried visit to his patient, was surprised to find him so willing to accept the verdict that several weeks more must be passed in exile.

At the end of the fourth week Jimmie put his fate to the test. It was Sunday and, there being no trains on the little branch road, the office was not open. Jimmie and Amy had gone for a walk to the top of the hill that gave the best view up and down the valley.

For one moment her rosy face was close to his shoulder and Jimmie leaned over to kiss her, when she suddenly drew away, her face now white and tense.

"I appreciate the compliment you do me, Mr. Cheeney," she said softly, "but I cannot become your wife. You are rich—wonderfully rich, as we understand riches. Your people would not be my people. Up here I am a good comrade and all that, but—it would be different in the city."

"Better the money, if that's all," said Jimmie, beaming. "I am not compelled to keep it. I can found a college or start a newspaper or do something like that, and the money would not bother us long."

The next day was a gloomy one for Jimmie. He hung around the office as usual, but there was a constraint in their companionship; an entire absence of the good fellowship that had slowly been established between them in the past weeks.

Shortly after the noonday dinner, the messages began to come to him thick and fast. They were in cipher and their import he could only guess, but through the long afternoon the gloom on Jimmie's face grew deeper and deeper, until finally one brief message came that he crumpled in his pocket, and snatching up his hat he started for the door.

Before she could speak he was gone and presently she saw him enter the bridge and start up the steep hill on the other side. It was the road to the place where they had sat on the day before, and she longed to close the office, to follow and comfort him.

It was after 7 before the train pulled out and gave her the chance. Then she, too, crossed the bridge and presently found herself on the brow of the hill.

There Jimmie sat in an attitude of such utter dejection that her heart went out to him.

He did not hear her footfall on the soft moss, and it was not until a tiny hand slipped confidingly into his that he was aware of her presence.

Then he sprang up with a glad cry and in a moment she was safe within his encircling arms and was whispering the words of comfort and love she had so longed to give the day before.

So full was he of his happiness that it was a full hour before their minds came back to mundane things. Then she softly asked:

"Is it an awful bad smash, Jimmie?"

He looked up with a laugh. "Why, there was no smash. That last wire I got was to tell me that the big deal had gone through."

She drew away indignantly. "And I thought," she cried, "that you had lost everything from the way you looked. That's why I came to comfort you."

"Little girl," he said soberly, "the thought of all that money piling up was awful. You told me that I would have to get rid of my money before you would marry me, and there was a million million tacked on to what I already had. That was what was worrying me. Don't you think it shows that I love you enough to make you feel safe in marrying me?"

Apparently she did, for there is a new operator at Woodale and Jimmie Cheeney's home has a most charming mistress.—Boston Globe.

Not Easily Pleased.
He was one of the very highly conservative ministers who still exist in Scotland. A preacher of another church was to occupy his pulpit and they were discussing the order of service. Said the preacher: "I may give out a hymn." "No, we object to hymns." "Well, I may give out a paraphrase." "I do not object to paraphrases myself, but the people do not like them." "I may use the Lord's prayer." "I have no conscientious objection to the Lord's prayer myself," was the reply, "but the people would not stand it."

FERTILITY VALUE OF SHEEP.

They Not Only Fertilize a Farm but do it Evenly.

Sheep have been said to have "a golden hoof." They have been credited with being great renovators of run-down or worn-out farms, and have been called fertility "conservers." They are the latter, and more so, too. The life and habits of sheep make them not only "conservers" of fertility, but distributors of it where most needed if given an opportunity.

Though sheep are adverse to water and always seek an elevation for their resting place, they do like the succulent growth, even though it be weeds, found in the lowland of a field or pasture which has been enriched by the washings from the higher surrounding land.

These two peculiarities of sheep were very forcibly illustrated upon the great Iowa farm of W. P. Adams. When the sheep were turned into a clover field they at once sought out the spots where the clover did not catch and eagerly devoured any weeds or pigeon grass that had taken possession of the spaces; they then sought the weeds and succulent grass in the low places and runs in the field, leaving the clover on the high land, where most needed to enrich the soil.

After all else in the field had been eaten the sheep would take the clover blossoms and, perhaps being turned into a new pasture, a small portion of the clover plants, but the great bulk of the clover on the portions of the field where most needed remained.

More than this, when night came the sheep sought the higher portions of the field for their resting place, and their droppings there deposited the fertility gathered during the day from the lower land, thus carrying back what had been washed away through the processes of nature and cultivation.

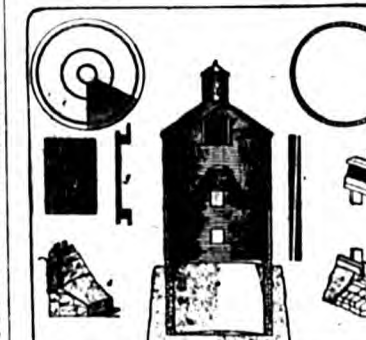

A farm upon which sheep are kept ought to be not only fertile, but also evenly fertile, which is a much desired condition. The farms are very few that can not with profit keep sheep.

Dutch Doors at Home.

For many years Dutch doors have been used in stables, and the wonder grows that they have not been adopted by architects for residences. A Dutch door is made in two parts, an upper and lower section, being so arranged that either may be opened separately or both together. When the lower half is locked and the upper is opened you have a plenty of door and above it a large window. You have ample light and ventilation, with restraint for children, dogs and cats.

Profit in Beef and Mutton.

A ton of beef or mutton makes the same good market for grain and hay, saves the fertility of the farm and an immense amount of labor in getting it to market. Not only is the extra profit saved to the producer in this way but the man who sells grain pays the freight to the point of final consumption as surely as if he paid the cash out of his pocket. He pays the freight by the reduced price he receives for his grain and hay.

The Wisconsin round silo: a, interior view; b, cross section; c, roof, from below; d, top of foundation wall, sill, studs, and two layers of sheeting with tarred paper between; e, method of ventilating wall; f, door; g, door fitted into opening; h, boards for roof.

Robust Easily Nourished Cattle.

An American cannel is recommending that the hardy, native Limousin cattle be introduced into the United States. In France they have no superior in producing first quality beef, the breed is particularly robust, easily nourished and fattened.

Care in Using Drugs.

Strychnine can be given to hogs or almost any other animal without serious results, but it must be dispensed in proper quantities and had better be prescribed by a physician or veterinarian.

Oil for Brittle Hoofs.

Common lubricating oil, which costs 40 cents a gallon, makes an excellent application for brittle hoofs. Apply once a day on hoof, top and sole, and rub in well.

LIVE STOCK ITEMS.

Pure water and a variety of whole-some food regularly given, with comfortable shelter and kind treatment are the best preventives of disease.

Hogs, like sheep, will get along with a comparatively small amount of water, but it must be clean and arranged so they cannot wallow in it. Some of the patent hog watering troughs are excellent.

What is said about keeping animals warm during the winter, does not apply to manure. Smoking is more injurious to the compost than to hogs.

A HANDY CARPET BEATER.

The Only Proper Kind, Efficient and Easily Made. Carpet cleaning, an ordinarily performed, is literally carpet-beating and does much toward destroying the carpet. The proper way, if one is in the country, is to get a branch of a tree or a young sapling as thick as the butt of an axe handle, and which terminates in a good number of its whip-like shoots. A beech branch will sometimes be found which will answer the purpose. It must be trimmed up, and every twig, knot or roughness be removed which could catch in the threads and tear the carpet. Of course, the flatter the upper part is the better, as more of the whips will strike at the same time. To clean the carpet, hang it over a line placed so high that the lower edge will clear the ground. Take the big whip in both hands and strike a strong, quick blow. A cloud of dust will fly from the whole space struck, yet the blow will not appear to make very much impression on the carpet itself. The ends of the branch have divided the force of the blow among themselves and each one has made a sharp, quick stroke like that of a riding whip.

FIG-1 CARPET BEATER.

If the big besom has been properly selected and the ends have sufficient elasticity, the labor will be small, and the quantity of dirt removed surprisingly large. In this way, carpets can be really cleaned, so that, in handling them afterwards, no sign of dust will be found. The force of the blow is spread out over a large space and the texture of the carpet is not harmed. To perform the same work with a light cane or switch would take hours and is very exhausting, while the fabric would be loosened. If one will take the trouble, a cat-o-nine-tails may be made by putting a fan, or paddle-shaped head, on the end of a thirty-inch handle (as shown in fig. 1), and into holes in the edge of this head a number of willow, or better, apple-tree shoots are fastened. These shoots should be carefully trimmed. The edge of the paddle part should be rounded and made smooth as shown in fig. 2. Wedges will hold the rods in place. The thickness of the head will depend on the size of the shoots to be used. The holes are radial, not from the center of the curve, but from the point where the handle is inserted.

Some Facts About Mad Dogs.

Rabies is much like other diseases in that it does not always manifest itself by the same chain of symptoms. For example, a dog suffering with this disease is by no means always mad and furious. Flemming has well said that it is a great and dangerous error to suppose that the disease commences with signs of madness and that the earliest phase of the malady is ushered in with fury and destruction. The symptoms appear very gradually, and at first one would hardly suspect brain disease.

Difficulty in swallowing is an early symptom and frequently leads the owner to suppose that the dog has a bone in its throat.

Dr. Salmon says: "A dog which appears to have a bone in its throat is, on general principles, one of the most dangerous animals in existence. The supposed bone may be there, but on the other hand the symptoms which lead to this supposition may be due to partial paralysis caused by rabies, and the owner may be deceived with the virulent saliva while thrusting his finger or hand into the dog's mouth to discover what has no existence but in his imagination."

It is commonly believed that animals suffering with this disease do not drink water (hence the name hydrophobia, dread of water), which is a mistake. They have no fear or dread of water, but continue to drink as long as they live and the fact that a suspected dog is seen to drink or to take water is no proof that he is not mad.

The dumb form of rabies is very common, and many persons know it as "droppaw" who have no idea of its true nature, and yet should one of these dogs bite a person or some of the saliva get into a wound on the hand or elsewhere, it could produce the disease and death with all its horrors.

There is an erroneous and rather stupid belief that if a dog bites a person and afterward contracts the disease that the person bitten will also go mad, but there is no ground for it whatever, and in this connection I would most earnestly suggest that when a person is bitten by a dog that it is bad policy to have the dog killed. Confine him, and if he has rabies, he will die in a few days, but if he does not, the person may know that he or she is safe. If, on the other hand, he does die, no time should be lost in consulting a physician, if indeed one has not already been consulted. I would also suggest here that it would be well to place the cadaver on ice and preserve it, as your physician may wish to use it for inoculation purposes, in order to prove the nature of the disease.—Ranch and Range.

Becher Changed His Mind.

Gen James McLeer, postmaster of Brooklyn, in 1880, has refused $100 for a letter from Henry Ward Beecher. A note of Mr. Beecher's containing a check for $150 was returned from the dead letter office in Washington and when received the usual notice he sent it to the postmaster.

"Oct. 28, 1880. Col. Meeker—Dear Sir: Your notice that a letter of mine was dead and subject to my order is before me.

We must all die! And, though the premature decease of my letter should excite a proper sympathy (and I hope it does), yet I am greatly sustained under the affliction.

"What was the date of its death? Of what did it die? Had it in its last hours proper attention and such consolation as befits the melancholy occasion? Did it have any effects?"

"Will you kindly see to its funeral? I am strongly inclined to cremation."

"May I ask if any other letters of mine are sick—dangerously sick? If any depart this life hereafter don't notify me until after the funeral. Affectionately, Henry Ward Beecher."

On learning that the letter contained a check Mr. Beecher called at the office and withdrew the request for its cremation.—Pecora Star Garter Supstitutions.

Nowadays garters are very generally ousted from favor by the more hygienic suspenders, but many superstitions about them still survive. Here are a few:

The marriage of a bride who wears any but white garters on her wedding day will have an unhappy ending.

The girl who wears her garters below the knees will early lose her beauty.

To put on the left garter before the right on dressing in the morning will bring bad luck all day.

Gold garter buckles are lucky and silver ones the reverse.

The luckiest colors for garters are white, blue and black. The wearer of yellow garters will lose a friend within a year.

If a garter breaks in church the wearer's marriage will be happy, but if the accident happens at a dance it is a sign that the wearer's sweetheart is faithless to her.

Value of Rice Water.

Rice water is very useful in some cases of sickness. Wash two quinces of rice in cold water, set it on the fire in a quart of water, and cook for an hour. Rub through a hair sieve and sweeten with honey. Lemon juice may be added to some.

FEEDING THE HORSE.

Proper Judgment is of Great Importance.

In caring for the horse the question of proper feeding is all important. The care given the horse along other lines may be done exactly right, but the feeding may not be given proper judgment. Too many farmers do not feed their horses sufficiently heavy, while on the other hand there are those who overdo the matter. The mistake in the light feeding of horses applies especially to the horses that are expected to do heavy farm work only, although many of these same horses are obliged to do not only farm work, but road work besides. If we consult the statistics of some of the large cities in reference to this matter, we will find that horses there are much better fed as a rule than those on the farm. To illustrate this point the average road horse in the city, or the street car horses, that are drawing cars and loads of about similar weight are fed from 4 to 15 pounds of oats and 10 to 12 pounds of hay daily, and where corn is a part of the ration the proportions are about 15 pounds of corn, 10 pounds of oats and 15 pounds of hay. In the feeding of the dry horse, whose work is more nearly like that of the farm horse, the ration is at least one-half more than what it is for horses doing lighter work. Let us stop and compare for a moment these rations with those fed by the average farmer. With the farmers, in too many cases, the ration for grain is corn and corn stover for roughage, and if corn stover is not used for roughage, a poor quality of hay is often employed. It is not to be wondered at, then, that many farm horses quickly wear out when spring work begins. The farmer should be prepared to feed oats as a part of the regular ration throughout the year. If at all possible, especially in this time when heavy work is being carried on.

He should aim to feed for the work which the animals are expected to do, and bear in mind that where horses are employed to do farm work and go on the road besides, great care should be exercised in feeding properly.

Some Facts About Mad Dogs.

Rabies is much like other diseases in that it does not always manifest itself by the same chain of symptoms.

For example, a dog suffering with this disease is by no means always mad and furious. Flemming has well said that it is a great and dangerous error to suppose that the disease commences with signs of madness and that the earliest phase of the malady is ushered in with fury and destruction.

The symptoms appear very gradually, and at first one would hardly suspect brain disease.

Difficulty in swallowing is an early symptom and frequently leads the owner to suppose that the dog has a bone in its throat.

Dr. Salmon says: "A dog which appears to have a bone in its throat is, on general principles, one of the most dangerous animals in existence. The supposed bone may be there, but on the other hand the symptoms which lead to this supposition may be due to partial paralysis caused by rabies, and the owner may be deceived with the virulent saliva while thrusting his finger or hand into the dog's mouth to discover what has no existence but in his imagination."

It is commonly believed that animals suffering with this disease do not drink water (hence the name hydrophobia, dread of water), which is a mistake. They have no fear or dread of water, but continue to drink as long as they live and the fact that a suspected dog is seen to drink or to take water is no proof that he is not mad.

The dumb form of rabies is very common, and many persons know it as "droppaw" who have no idea of its true nature, and yet should one of these dogs bite a person or some of the saliva get into a wound on the hand or elsewhere, it could produce the disease and death with all its horrors.

There is an erroneous and rather stupid belief that if a dog bites a person and afterward contracts the disease that the person bitten will also go mad, but there is no ground for it whatever, and in this connection I would most earnestly suggest that when a person is bitten by a dog that it is bad policy to have the dog killed. Confine him, and if he has rabies, he will die in a few days, but if he does not, the person may know that he or she is safe. If, on the other hand, he does die, no time should be lost in consulting a physician, if indeed one has not already been consulted. I would also suggest here that it would be well to place the cadaver on ice and preserve it, as your physician may wish to use it for inoculation purposes, in order to prove the nature of the disease.—Ranch and Range.

Becher Changed His Mind.

Gen James McLeer, postmaster of Brooklyn, in 1880, has refused $100 for a letter from Henry Ward Beecher. A note of Mr. Beecher's containing a check for $150 was returned from the dead letter office in Washington and when received the usual notice he sent it to the postmaster.

"Oct. 28, 1880. Col. Meeker—Dear Sir: Your notice that a letter of mine was dead and subject to my order is before me.

We must all die! And, though the premature decease of my letter should excite a proper sympathy (and I hope it does), yet I am greatly sustained under the affliction.

"What was the date of its death? Of what did it die? Had it in its last hours proper attention and such consolation as befits the melancholy occasion? Did it have any effects?"

"Will you kindly see to its funeral? I am strongly inclined to cremation."

"May I ask if any other letters of mine are sick—dangerously sick? If any depart this life hereafter don't notify me until after the funeral. Affectionately, Henry Ward Beecher."

On learning that the letter contained a check Mr. Beecher called at the office and withdrew the request for its cremation.—Pecora Star

Garter Supstitutions.

Nowadays garters are very generally ousted from favor by the more hygienic suspenders, but many superstitions about them still survive. Here are a few:

The marriage of a bride who wears any but white garters on her wedding day will have an unhappy ending.

The girl who wears her garters below the knees will early lose her beauty.

To put on the left garter before the right on dressing in the morning will bring bad luck all day.

Gold garter buckles are lucky and silver ones the reverse.

The luckiest colors for garters are white, blue and black. The wearer of yellow garters will lose a friend within a year.

If a garter breaks in church the wearer's marriage will be happy, but if the accident happens at a dance it is a sign that the wearer's sweetheart is faithless to her.

MR. ELLEGOOD'S AIM

To See The Democratic Party Compel Fair Play. In Burns' Words Vote Buyers Should See Themselves As Others See Them.

Editors of the Advertiser:—Your very complimentary mention of my name is pleasant and gratifying enough, but let me say that it is not in harmony with my political aspirations, if I dare have any. I think I can with sincerity say that my supreme political ambition is to see the Democratic party compel "fair play," and honest elections in Wisconsin county. I refer not to the conduct of election officials which are above reproach, but to the respective party managements in the conduct of campaign elections which have become intolerable because of downright criminal conduct, unless we call vote buying honest and honorable. Prior to 1896, the Democrats were the chief offenders. Beginning with that year the Republican management has been as persistent and consistent in its corruption, as the Democrats have been irregular in their efforts at reform. At the elections of 1896 and 1900, the latter made sporadic efforts to elevate the standard. While charity requires due allowance for backsliding of old sinners, lapses from virtue should not be too frequent.

The difficulty is to get vote buyers to see themselves as they really are and as they would see themselves if they were arrested and convicted. We are again and again reminded that public sentiment does not convict. It is true that a direct charge of bribery may be brought against prominent citizens by name, without any fear of a suit for libel. Yet if any were indicted for bribery, neither the Republican nor the Democratic party would dare nominate him. Neither convention will adopt a resolution in favor of bribery but one of the chief duties of a Campaign Committee is to secretly raise funds for a corruption Campaign. If the names of the contributors and the amounts were published, the people would be shocked. The cowardly dread of defeat begets the conscience and warps the judgement of the managers; but they have a wholesome fear of exposure. We therefore need an effective Corrupt Practice Act. The press has already given the public a few flash light views of corruption in high places; but when the steady search light is thrown around the horizon, there is artful dodging to keep out of its range. It was threatened and expected during the taking of testimony for the Congressional contest. A revelation or two were given and the light was then turned off. Why?

As a life long Democrat, I am exceedingly anxious for the Democratic leaders to convince the people and the Republican Managers that the day of clean politics is at hand in Wisconsin County. It will not do to say that Democratic officials, Democratic Organization and Democratic white people can't enforce the law of bribery against a handful of Republican Bosses, and themselves adopt bribery methods, and at the same time proclaim the need of a Constitutional Amendment to elevate the standard of manhood suffrage. The inconsistency is too apparent. WHY NOT GIVE IT AN HONEST TRIAL?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS

International Convention Within Easy Reach. July 5 to 10. 40,000 Delegates Expected. Choir Of 2400 Voices. Maryland To Take Large Part.

The great International Christian Endeavor Convention, which meets in Baltimore from July 5 to 10, is but a few days off, and will doubtless prove to be the most successful and largest session ever held. Every convenience has been provided for the entertainment of the thousands of delegates who are expected from all parts of the world. Marylanders are expected to be represented to the tune of at least 8,000 delegates, and their headquarters in Northminster Presbyterian Church, on the corner of North Avenue and St. Paul street, will be attractively decorated and equipped with every convenience.

Accommodations are being obtained for at least 40,000 delegates. Arrangements are now being made to supply every evangelical church with a visiting minister on the Sunday of the convention. The Saturday of the convention week, will be devoted to excursions to such places as Washington, Tolchester, Gettysburg and Annapolis.

Friday of the convention week, will practically be "Maryland Day," for the state and denominational rallies are to be held on that day. The state rallies will be held in the morning from 10.30 to 12.30 p. m., while the denominational rallies are to be held in the afternoon. The Marylanders will assemble in the Lyric, and at least 8,000 Endeavors of the State are expected to be present. An interesting program has been provided, and it will doubtless be one of the best features of the convention. Addresses are to be made by Revs. John Timothy Stone and Oliver Huckel. The mammoth choir of 2400 voices under Mr. Richard A. Harris, will be present, and render some grand music. This chorus alone will be worth hearing. Every one of the 280 societies in the state are expected to be represented. A number of delegates will attend from this county.

The finance committee, which has in charge the distribution of the convention stock at the rate of $1 per share, is extremely anxious that every Endeavorer in the State should be a contributor. The purchase of even one share of the stock, entitles the holder to the privileges of the convention, an official badge, official program, map of the city, a printed report of the convention proceedings, official guide and souvenir book, and a beautifully engraved certificate of stock signed by the general committee of 1905. An auxiliary committee, of over 2000 members has been appointed for the counties as well as the city who are to solicit subscriptions in their respective localities. The members of this committee from this county are as follows:

Wicomico County.
Salisbury, Miss Georgia White; Willards, H. A. Adkins; Jestersville, Miss Carrie Robertson; Bivalve, John W. Anderson.

As The Record In Pennsylvania—So The Advertiser In This Section.

A Philadelphia merchant who spends hundreds of thousands of dollars every year for advertising was asked the other day what newspaper he considered the best medium through which to reach the public. His answer was unhesitatingly "The Philadelphia Record."

Then he went on to say: "I have used 'The Record' for years—in fact, every since I have been advertising, and I find that it brings me these results. It isn't necessary to experiment with 'The Record.' The experienced business man realizes that the money he spends to reach the readers of that paper is money well invested. 'The Record' is read thoroughly. A great many people, men especially, make a practice of buying several newspapers during the course of a day. They glance over the pages casually to see if there is anything of particular interest, and then throw them aside. But I have come to the conclusion from the long observation that 'The Record' is the paper that is read thoroughly from beginning to end."

The Philadelphia merchant was undoubtedly right. There is no disputing the fact that "The Record" is the most popular paper in Philadelphia, and its influence throughout the surrounding country is evidenced by its claim to the largest circulation of any newspaper published in the State of Pennsylvania, a claim that is without doubt based upon actual figures.

MYSTERY IN THE AIR

At Ocean City. Investors Been Taking Prospective Surveys. Annual Spring Repair Well Finished And Polish Being Applied For '05 Opening Season.

Ocean City was visited recently by a number of gentlemen who evidently have a purpose of investing here, and if but half the rumors that are now flying thick and fast become realities, there is indeed a new and prosperous era about to dawn. These visitors who were here Saturday and Sunday, did not say much, but the beach was seen by them for many miles, and an inspection of the bay side made in a few running naphtha launch. Every hour of daylight was occupied by them in an apparently critical inspection. It has been practically impossible to obtain positive information other than some suggestive hints thrown out evidently as "feelers."

The Atlantic and Seaside hotels, electric light plant, laundry and Atlantic Casino were visited. Inquiry was made as to the proposed ocean pier, which will soon be a reality, and as to feasibility of some other expensive and desirable improvements. All the parties seemed in good humor and were willing to say complimentary things of Ocean City, some going so far as to express agreeable surprise at the substantial progress made here and belief in great possibilities for investment at this city by the sea.

So reticent were the various members of the party, nine in number, that evidently fictitious names were placed on the register of the Plimhinmon, where the visitors stopped, all of whom were intelligent and prosperous-looking men. Our people are doing much guessing just now, everyone hoping and expecting some agreeable surprises as the result of this mysterious visit.

It was hinted in some quarters that a large deal was on hand looking to the transfer of considerable holdings.

All is activity here in anticipation of what promises to be the most satisfactory season in the history of Ocean City. Much has been done this spring that will make the place more enjoyable to the health and pleasure seeker and also attract and interest the investor.

The boardwalk is being put in splendid condition. The placing of Welback lamps upon ornamental posts at short intervals from one end of the boardwalk to the other, which is now fully two miles in length and 16 feet wide, will elicit the hearty approval of all visitors. The lamps light up brilliantly and at night present a pretty picture. Bulkheading the walk has thus far proved a wise expenditure, as it will prevent damage from northeast storms, which cause the sea to run very high and rough at times.

Several new and spacious cottages are about being finished, hotels and cottages are being repainted and the streets and walks put in good condition. The store keepers are also making the usual preparations, and there is a general feeling that the time has arrived when a new era is to dawn for Ocean City.

The intention of the railroad company to put on daily fast trains in and out of Ocean City is particularly encouraging, for the railroad service heretofore has been the cause of much complaint. The early abandonment of Baltimore avenue by the railroad and the making of a driveway is another promising change.

Considerable business is already being done by the Plimhinmon, although not regularly opened. Mrs. Shreve has thoroughly renovated and repainted the house and added some very desirable features to this popular hotel. Her laundry annex is one which will no doubt be fully appreciated by her many patrons. Manager Hams is indefatigable in his efforts to promote the general welfare of the Plimhinmon, which means of course much pleasure to the spring and summer visitor.

What Does It Mean to let Dividends "accumulate" on a Life Insurance Policy? In many companies it means nothing more than an agreement, on the part of the policy-holder, to do without dividends for fifteen or twenty years, and then take whatever dividend the company will be willing to give.

Dividends are declared every year in the Mutual Benefit, and the policyholders use them either to help pay premiums or to buy increased insurance. The policies of the

WORSE EVERY YEAR.

Plenty of Salisbury Readers Have the Same Experience.

Don't neglect an aching back.
It will get worse every year.
Backache is really kidney ache.

To cure the back you must cure the kidneys.

If you don't, other kidney ills follow:
diabetes, bright's disease.

A Salisbury citizen you how the cure is easy.

Mrs. G. W. Fooks, wife of G. W.
Fooks, County Sheriff of the Court House, says: "I have suffered off and on with kidney complaint for the last eight years. It came on me gradually and continued to get worse. I felt tired and weak, was short of breath. One doctor told me I had kidney disease and it would finally result in Bright's disease. I was laid up at one time for three weeks. I was feeling very miserable when I went to White & Leonard's drug store for Doan's Kidney Pills. I had not taken them more than three days when the distressing aching across my back disappeared. I have great faith in this remedy and I know if anyone will take the pills as directed they will receive beneficial results."

cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo,
New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name--Doan's--and take no other.

An Invitation For You.

I beg to state that I used Davis' 100 per cent Pure Paint on my house four years ago and it has given elegant satisfaction. At same time my house was painted there were several other houses painted from several manufacturers' best paint. I can cheerfully recommend this paint and if anyone wants to see what Davis' paint has done for me come around and see the contrast between my house and the others that were painted at the same time.

Letter to Farmers & Planters Co.
Salisbury, Md.

Dear Sirs: It's the same everywhere; can't guess little enough.

Mr. C. O. Brown, Columbia, S. C., employed an experienced painter to paint his house. The painter on seeing the quantity sent to the house--Deyoe-- said there wasn't enough. There were ten gallons left, when the job was done.
It's the common experience.

Yours truly,
F. W. Dwyer & Co.

Cuban Diarrhoea.

U. S. soldiers who served in Cuba during the Spanish war know what this disease is, and that ordinary remedies have little more effect than so water. Cuban diarrhoea is almost as severe and dangerous as a mild attack of cholera. There is one remedy, however, that can always be depended upon as will be seen by the following certificate from Mrs. Minnie Jacobs of Houston, Texas: "I hereby certify that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy cured my husband of a severe attack of Cuban diarrhoea, which he brought home from Cuba.
We had several doctors but they did him no good. One bottle of this remedy cured him, as our neighbors will testify. I thank God for so valuable a medicine." For sale by all Druggists.

Driven To Desperation.

Living at an out of the way place, remote from civilization, a family is often driven to desperation in case of accident, resulting in Burns, Cuts, Wounds, Ulcers, etc. Lay in a supply of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's the best on earth, 25 cents at All Drug Stores.

If Nervous and Run Down simply improve your circulation. Remove the waste matter that clogs the blood by taking Ramon's Pills--then tone the nervous system with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It's the best for aches and money back if not satisfied.

QUANTICO

It is with sadness that the writer would give notice of the death of two of our beloved friends who formerly were residents of this community but both residing at the time of death at Badham, South Carolina. First, Mr. Albert T. Robertson was stricken with paralysis on the 21st of May and in about one week from that time, Miss Jennie Graham a sister-in-law of Mr. Robertson was taken away by death from the same household. As she had gone there last fall to make her home with her sister, Mrs. Robertson. In the death of Miss Jennie we sustain a loss in this community in many ways. She was held in high esteem by many friends. We sustain a loss in our church. The Church of her choice which she loved dearly and sacrificed for while here. Her funeral was largely attended which was presided by Rev. C. J. Burdette her pastor, assisted by Rev. Gohagan of the M. E. Church and the Rector Mr. Adkins of the Episcopal Church. We pray that some one may be raised up to take her place.

Next followed the death of Mr. Robertson before mentioned on June 6th. His remains were also brought here for burial, arriving here on the 8th. His funeral was preached in the Methodist Protestant Church by Rev. Mr. Parker, of Mardela, of the Baptist Church, assisted by the resident pastors.

In the language of a Southern paper whose Editor had become acquainted with Mr. Robertson, he was a most estimable gentleman. The same paper states that he was the Superintendent of the Saw Mill department at Badham, S. C. He is highly spoken of here in this community. She was of the Baptist faith, and also a member of the Masonic Fraternity. He leaves a widow to mourn his loss, whose loneliness is only understood by those who have passed through similar experiences. May the God of all, comfort and sustain her in her great bereavement.

SEEKING IMPROVEMENTS

Mardela Holds Town Meeting To Consider Street Lighting. Another Meeting Tonight—Other Notes In Progress Discussed.

Last Saturday night there was a town meeting called to consider the question of lighting our streets. Your correspondent for months past has been, through "The Advertiser," trying to work up sentiment in favor of this much needed improvement. He had urged the business men to call a public meeting to discuss matters pertaining to the good of our community. At last, the call was made, and a good delegation responded. Mr. J. E. Bacon was made chairman and Dr. John M. Elderfield, secretary. Ways and measures were discussed and a committee of three appointed to canvass the town and report at an adjourned meeting this Saturday night, June 17th. Your correspondent has advocated other necessary things for the good of the town, such as some kind of a fire company to extinguish fires should they occur. Many of our sister towns have been visited by fearful conflagrations, but our town seems slow to take the hint. But more of this after a while. One improvement at a time. There are too many little short posts along the pavement line, which are too short for hitching purposes, but just long enough for pedestrians to stumble over to their injury. These posts should be removed.

Our churches have observed the Children's Day exercises by great throngs of persons in attendance. It is thought that this year, in point of interest, they have gone above the "high water mark."

The wedding bells have been jingling in this community of late, and if all signs do not fail, they are getting ready to jingle again. My young fellow, you need not attempt to deny it, for you were seen last Sunday night to kiss your lady love more than the regulated number of times before taking your departure. If you do not know what is the number of times, you had better consult with others who have had more experience. We know it is hard for you to live without her, but do not say it so loud that others can hear. Some of your older brothers used to say the same thing under similar circumstances, but now they find it somewhat difficult to live with her. It is said that history sometimes repeats itself.

The Baptist Mission at Athol will soon bloom out into a full pledged church. It has now grown into a promising body. Rev. Mr. Parker has of late been promised three hundred dollars towards the erection of a church building. The "Eastern District Baptist Association" of which the Baptist churches in this section are members, convened this week in Cambridge. Rev. B. G. Parker has been appointed to preach the Doctrinal Sermon before the Association. This branch of the Baptist (Missionary) Denomination now numbers over five million members in the United States. The rapid growth this past year has been simply marvelous both at home and in foreign lands.

Our enterprising "marble cutter," Mr. J. Truitt is getting lots of work to do. He is doing some very artistic work and at very reasonable prices.

Mr. Jack English, our "bricklayer" is in great demand. His services are required both at home and abroad.

The funeral of Mr. Albert Robertson at Quantico on last Friday was largely attended by persons from our section. Mr. Robertson was well known and highly esteemed. He died in South Carolina and his remains brought on to Quantico for burial. There were four ministers who took part in the services. Rev. Mr. Parker preached the sermon.

Rev. Mr. Perry of the M. P. Church deserves great credit for the way he has beautified their church building and parsonage. And now comes forward the Rev. Mr. Truitt, the young hustler of the M. E. Church, with plans for enlargement. We take off our hat and bid them God speed in their good work.

Rev. Mr. Parker has announced that he will on Sunday afternoon, at 4 o'clock speak in the Presbyterian church, taking for his subject "The Silence of Our Lord."

DAIRY CREAMERY

CARE OF THE FARM SEPARATOR

Lessons Wear on the Machine and Work For the Farmer.

The operator should aim to secure two things if he expects his machine to do good work: (1) A perfectly true motion of the bowl, and (2) a sufficient speed (which must be uniform) to create force for separating.

In order to have the perfect motion of the bowl, the machine must be set level and be kept clean and well oiled. The oil should be thin or light so that it will not gum the wearing parts. A heavy oil will make the machine run hard and will gum quickly on small, high speed bearings. All the bearings of the machine should be frequently flushed with coal-oil. It is well to make a run about once in two or three weeks, using coal-oil on all the bearings. This keeps the parts free from gum and washes out grit or sand that may have blown into them. It is an excellent plan to have a cover of close woven cloth or oil-cloth, that can be kept over the machine while it is not in operation. This will keep out dust and sand and will add materially to the lasting powers of the machine. The separator should be set up on a good solid floor so that it will not move about as the operator turns the crank.

Uniform centrifugal force is obtained by turning the crank at a given speed at all times and giving the crank an equal pressure at all points in its circuit around its axis. All machines have marked upon them, or given in the instruction book, the number of revolutions the crank should make per minute. Follow these instructions each time the machine is operated and frequently during operation, to be sure the speed is maintained. This is a point in which much careless work is done. Too many guess at the speed, and they seldom guess right. It is a good rule never to guess at anything when it is possible to know. The writer has found variation all the way from 25 to 75 revolutions per minute in the operation of machines by guess. At neither of these extremes would the operator believe that he was wrong, until he had been made to count the number of revolutions by the watch.

The life of a separator depends mainly upon the factors just pointed out. A machine that is allowed to run when gummy or dirty may wear out in a year. If kept free from dirt and well oiled, it will last a number of years. One of the objections urged against the separator has been that it would not be properly handled and that one or two years' service would wear the machine out. After visiting several hundred farms and inspecting as many machines, the writer has concluded that the farmers, as a whole, are taking much better care of their separators, mechanically, than was anticipated. Machines have been noted that had seen several years' service and were still practically as good as new. In a few instances, careless operators had nearly worn a machine out in less than twelve months. The farmer never bought a machine before in the use of which he was so frequently and urgently reminded that he must take care of it.

Speed has already been discussed but it should be noted here that the greater the speed the greater the centrifugal force, and thus the greater the efficiency in separation. The speed at which a machine should be run is indicated by the manufacturer. Never run less than this; it is not practicable to run more.—Prof. E. H. Webster in Farmers' Voice.

Time of Feeding Lambs.

We believe it is better to feed lambs three times a day, although the common practice is to feed only twice. Those who have practiced feeding three times a day claim as an advantage for this method that larger quantities of grain may be consumed with less danger of injury than by giving twice. Good healthy sheep require from three to 3½ bushels of corn for each 100 head daily. In addition to this they should be given all the hay they will eat, provided they do not make gluttons of themselves and become potbellied. Lambs do not require so much corn as aged sheep but should not be stinted in the alfalfa diet. One hundred head of lambs would naturally require from two to three bushels of corn daily. Aged ewes should be given food in quantity just between that required for lambs and sturdy wethers. One thing must be done in preparing feed for aged ewes and that is corn and other hard feeds should be ground. Never give them hard feed as their teeth are usually so bad they cannot masticate the kernels properly and as a result their feed does not digest and produce fat as it would otherwise do. Beet pulp makes excellent feed for ewes that have lost their teeth but without grain they will not make much gain on it in cold weather.—Field and Farm.

*****

Good Points in a Stallion.

One of the main requisites in a well bred stallion is that of activity. This need not manifest itself in viciousness but rather in a "frisky" disposition, causing him to run and play whenever opportunity offers. A stallion having this disposition, will, if well fed and properly exercised, be an extra sure foal getter also.

Why He Didn't Know.

Judge Jonathan Dixon of the supreme court of New Jersey has a habit, well known to old practitioners before him, of asking three questions of counsel arguing at the bar. The first one is usually simple, and the lawyer answers carelessly; the second one is a little more drastic, and the respondent replies with trembling uncertainty; the third is bound to be a poser fraught with humiliation.

On one occasion Richard V. Lindabury of Newark was presenting a case to the court of errors, and when the first question was innocently propounded, he said:

"I don't know."

"Don't know!" cried the judge. "Why don't you know?"

"Because I haven't heard the other two questions," said the wily advocate.—New York Times.

Shy, Not Stupid.

At a dinner given to Sir Alfred Harmsworth in commemoration of his recent knighting, some one said of the guest of honor:

"Our friend Harmsworth as a schoolboy was shy and quiet. One day, to his horror, an inspector called him up before the class."

"You answer to be a clever lad," the inspector said. "What do five and one make?"

"The little fellow made no answer. 'Come, now,' said the inspector, 'suppose I gave you five rabbits and I gave you another rabbit, how many rabbits would you have?'"

"Seven," said Harmsworth.

"How do you make that out?"

"I have a rabbit of my own at home."—Detroit News Tribune.

"Yes, dearest," replied Mrs. Newby; "but I bought them from the grocer."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Thoroughly at Ease.

"You appear to take life pretty easy," said the housewife, as she mixed some sawdust with milk and palmated it off as breakfast food.

"Yes, indeed, mum," grinned Santy Pikes, stretching out in the whe-shar-row. "De whole world is a 'cosy corner' wid me."

*****

More Time Needed.

"Do you believe there is honor among thieves?" said the grocer to the customer.

"Well, I can't tell yet," replied the man. "You see, sir, I've only been in this town a week."

Not so Irresponsible.

A college professor, who was going to test the power of laughing gas upon some of his pupils, overheard one of them saying that, as the gas rendered one irresponsible for what he said, he was going to take advantage of that fact when it was administered to him and give his plain opinion of the professor. After the class assembled the professor quietly announced that, for the purpose of illustration, he would like to administer gas to some member. The scheming student volunteered and the leather bag was connected with his mouth. He soon showed evidence of much excitement and began to express his opinion of the professor in language punctuated by much profanity. Having allowed him to proceed for some little time, the professor then said that he needed to be so irresponsible, for the gas had not yet been turned on!

DOCTOR ADVOCATED OPERATION —PE-RU-NA MADE KNIFE UNNECESSARY.

MRS. EVA BARTHO.

Mrs. Eva Bartho, 153 East 12th street, New York City, N. Y., writes: "I suffered for three years with leucorrhoea and ulceration of the womb. The doctor advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am today in perfect health and have not felt so well for fifteen years."—Mrs. E. Bartho.

It is no longer a question as to whether Peruna can be relied on to cure all such cases. During the many years in which Peruna has been put to test in all forms and stages of acute and chronic catarrh no one year has put this remedy to greater test than the past year.

Resolutions Endorsed.
The Democratic party of Wicomico County, in Convention assembled, points with pride to the efficient administration of local affairs by the Democratic party in Wicomico County. The efficient and careful handling of the finances of the county, the Public Schools so capably managed, and the honest and progressive policy of all the Democratic officers of Wicomico County for the past 38 years, have added much to the peace and advancement of this section of Maryland. The reduction of the county tax rate, made possible by the careful management of our County Treasurer and Commissioners, is an index of what the taxpayers may expect for the future by continuing the rule of the Democratic party in Wicomico County.

1. As the County advances new issues are presented, foremost among which is the preservation of the right of the white people of this state to control its political destiny. Upon this depends the capable, intelligent and progressive advancement of the State.

2. The amendments of the Federal Constitution, enfranchising and forcing into the body politic a mass of colored people, who are totally unprepared for the duties of citizenship, was the result of partisan passion which grew out of a great conflict; but is now recognized by all thoughtful men as a grave political blunder, which menaces the good order and stability of our institutions.

3. Without regard to party, statesmen of every section of the Union deem it wise, and to a great extent, have made provision for the purity of the ballot box, by providing for intelligent manhood suffrage.

4. The Democracy of this State, fully realizing that all of the States South of us had so limited the suffrage, determined by resolution in its platform of 1902, to take such action as would prevent this State from being overrun by a mass of ignorant voters, that had been eliminated as electors in adjoining States. To that end, the State Convention passed the following resolution: "We believe that the political destinies of Maryland should be shaped and controlled by the white people of the State. And while we disclaim any purpose to do any injustice whatever to our colored population, we declare without reservation our resolute purpose to preserve, in every conservative and constitutional way, the political ascendancy of our race."

5. That declaration was the prominent issue of the campaign of 1902. It resulted in a splendid majority for Edwin Warfield, our candidate for Governor, and other State officers, together with more than three-fifths of all the members of both houses of the General Assembly.

6. The Democrats of the General Assembly have redeemed their party's pledge, by formulating and submitting to the people an Amendment to the Constitution of the State, which if adopted, will secure the end so devoutly desired.

7. The Amendment presented in substance the same that has been adopted by all the States that have acted. It is believed to be a full, complete and effective remedy, and yet wholly free from constitutional objection.

8. We confidently appeal to the people of this County and State to support the Amendment. Differ as we may have in the past upon the form, it remains true, as stated by a distinguished Virginia Statesman and a member of the Virginia Constitutional Convention, that: "While there were numerous objections to the understanding clause, that everybody in that great Convention supported it and voted for it; because literature had been searched in vain for anything else that was not more objectionable and because the Supreme Court of the United States had confirmed its constitutionality."

9. If the Amendment is adopted, the security and well being of all the affairs of Maryland will be assured. Injustice to any class would not be tolerated. With our public school system the opportunity is freely given to all the people of the State, of every condition, to qualify themselves for better citizenship; it will give renewed incentive to every endeavor by the people of the State. The necessity for this Amendment to our Constitution was clearly and forcefully stated by the Honorable Edwin Warfield in accepting the nomination for Governor in 1902, when he said: "The fatal effects of negro domination on property interests and all the affairs of industrial development are illustrated in those counties which are dominated by the negro vote, where it has throttled progress and blighted prosperity. The conditions that prevail in that section will ultimately spread to other portions of the State, if the Republican party is again installed in power."

10. The adoption of this Amendment would be a new declaration of independence by the white people of Maryland.

11. The public road question is one in which the people of the county are vitally interested, and while we believe at all times in a conservative public policy, and one which will not make the burdens of taxation too onerous, yet we recognize that there is a demand in this county for more permanent improvements of the county roads along the lines of the State Road Law, and looking to this end we unqualifiedly favor making the County Roads as good as it is possible to make them, consistent with the resources and wealth of the county, recognizing that the building of good roads always enhances the value of real estate, and that the county is amply repaid for the expenditures in the increased taxable basis.

12. That a majority of the delegates from Wicomico County, present at the Democratic State Convention to be held in the city of Baltimore for the nomination of Comptroller, be and are authorized to vote as a unit.

A LIFETIME'S SIGHTS

Going West To The Lewis And Clark Exposition—Scenes Of Beauty—Charm And Grandeur En Route.

Visitors from the East who expect to attend the Lewis and Clark Exposition are now busy studying out routes. There are several very interesting routes to Portland, north, south and central. One of the most popular is the central route, by way of the Union Pacific Railroad from Omaha which connects with the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company's line along the Snake and Columbia Rivers, setting the passenger down in Portland's handsome Union Depot, fifteen minutes street car ride from the Exposition gates.

Historical interest attaches to the Union Pacific, that having been the first railroad to span the gap across the mountains and the desert and complete a rail route across the American continent. The passenger also has the privilege of touching at several points the famous trail of Lewis and Clark along which the explorers came to the Oregon country a hundred years ago.

There is much to see on the wide prairies of Nebraska that will be new and novel to the Easterner. The plains of Wyoming and Idaho, two states which the route traverses from end to end, affords many strange sights. Wonderful creations of Nature, such as tall buttes of basaltic formation rising straight out of the sage brush plains, rivers that run in red walled canyons, waterfalls that leap and flash in the sunlight, are seen here and there along the way.

In Idaho the palatial train on the Union Pacific train runs for a hundred miles or more along the Snake river, one of the most remarkable streams in the world. At one section of several miles the trains keep crossing and recrossing this river, darting first into Oregon and then back into Idaho, "snaking" from state to state along the boundary. The Snake shows many picturesque points, and its valleys are fertile and balmy. Through irrigation its waters have reclaimed great tracts of sage brush land where various crops grow abundantly.

Coming through Nebraska, Wyoming, Idaho and eastern Oregon, the tourist makes the discovery that this is a far greater country than he has imagined, miles and miles, hours and hours, he sweeps swiftly over prairies that seem unending. But when he once reaches the Columbia river he is amply repaid for any weariness which the plains country may have imposed upon him.

Below the Dalles of the Columbia are the Cascades, where locks have been built to carry steamboats up and down past this remarkable obstruction to navigation. Farther on is the Columbia River Gorge, a section of the river that is unequalled anywhere for scenic grandeur. Here the passenger may see Rooster Rock, a huge monolith of gray tint, one of the most interesting freaks of Nature.

On the way down to Portland the train passes in quick succession many scenic features that thousands of Easterners have beheld in the old fashioned stereoscopic views, which gave them a lifelong desire to see the actual wonders. The Pillars of Hercules, between natural stone rising to a great height, one somewhat taller than the other, and from the summit of the taller one a huge fir towers many feet higher. Lone Rock, Oneonta Gorge, Horsetail Falls, St. Peter's Dome, Castle Rock, the Bridge of the Gods, Latourelle Falls, Bridal Veil Falls and Multnomah Falls are some of the sights to be seen along the run into Portland. At Multnomah Falls there is a stop of four minutes, enabling the passengers to alight and stand upon a platform specially constructed to give the best possible view of this beautiful cataract, with the waters leaping from a height of 840 feet—more than five times as high as Niagara.

One of the points of superiority which the Lewis and Clark Exposition possesses is the privilege which its visitors enjoy of beholding such a vast array of natural scenic wonders on the way out West and back home.

While traveling at the rate of 70 miles an hour, the famous Twentieth Century Limited, the fastest long distance train in the world, ran through an open switch at the little town of Mentor, east of Cleveland, O., at 9.30 o'clock Wednesday causing one of the most horrible wrecks in the history of the Lake Shore road. The engine was hurled into the ditch. A part of the train was crushed on top of it, and the wreck was partly burned. The horrors of the wreck were doubled in the terrors of the fire.

Twenty-one persons are dead, a dozen more were injured and the train was demolished. Four of the dead are unidentified.

The train was crowded, practically all its accommodations being taken. It was behind the schedule, and the greatest of speed was being made to make up the lost time.

LANKFORD—GOSLEE.

A Beautiful June Wedding Solemnized At Allen M. E. Church. Couple Will Reside in New Jersey.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in Allen M. E. Church South, Tuesday morning, June the 20th, 1905, at 8.30 o'clock. The contracting parties were Mr. George E. Lankford, of Elizabeth, New Jersey, formerly of Princess Anne, Md., and Miss Rose C. Goslee, the accomplished and attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Goslee, of Somerset, Md.

The church was beautifully decorated with a profusion of various flowers and evergreens. The bride was tastefully attired in a beautiful gown of white chiffon elaborately trimmed with dainty val lace and insertion and carried a large bouquet of brides roses, sweet peas and maiden hair fern tied with white chiffon. Miss Cooke of Baltimore acted as maid of honor. She wore pink and carried pink roses. The bride entered with Mr. Suddler, best man. They stood under a handsomely arranged arch from which was suspended a large ball of white roses, where the interesting ceremony which made them man and wife was performed by Rev. J. E. White. The ushers were Mr. Oscar Goslee, brother of the bride, and Mr. Harry T. Messick. Lohengrin's wedding march was rendered by Miss Ethel Malone.

The ceremony over the wedding party with invited guests repaired to the home of the bride's parents where a wedding breakfast was served after which the bride donned a traveling dress of handsome dark blue tulle with hat and gloves to match. They started for the depot to take the north bound express for New York, followed by a large procession of friends and well wishers to see them off. Amid showers of rice and expressions of best wishes for the future happiness of the young couple they stepped on board the train for a trip north.

The happy couple were the recipients of many valuable and useful presents and more than all carried away with them the love and esteem of the community. They will reside in Elizabeth, New Jersey. We wish them a long life of wedded happiness.

Chairman Vandiver Has Favorable Reports On Amendment Outlook.

Chairman Murray Vandiver of the Democratic State Central Committee smiled, when asked about the movement to prevent the Democratic State Convention from endorsing the suffrage amendment.

"The amendment," he said, "will be endorsed as strongly as possible by the convention, and we are perfectly satisfied with the outlook. The fact that a number of persons who have been in the habit of calling themselves Democrats, and yet have consistently voted the Republican ticket for years, are opposing the amendment and making a lot of noise about it does not worry us. Our reports show that the party throughout the State will solidly support the amendment and we expect a large number of Republican votes."

"These votes will be quiet ones, because it is not considered good policy by Republicans who believe in eliminating the negro as a political factor in Maryland to come out openly on the question, but they will count just the same. We are satisfied with conditions as we find them and intend to continue the fight along the lines we have mapped out."

"The best people in the State, irrespective of party ties, are in favor of the principles contained in the amendment but this is not their time for making a noise about it. At heart many of the prominent Republicans here want to get rid of the negro, and realize that the only effective way is the adoption of the proposed amendment."

A Tribute Of Love.
On Tuesday evening, June 13th, little Vaughn, ten year old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Richardson fell from the top of the new unfinished school building, and was killed. The little fellow was always extremely full of play and very fond of climbing, and had been known to climb to the top of the building on former occasions. On the day of his death it was late when he entered the building, and it is certain that he made a mistake which resulted fatally.

We are satisfied that he has been transplanted to the "Glory Land," where no accidents will ever happen, and where the weary are forever at rest.

In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly
In his lonely silent grave.
Friends may think we'll soon forget you
And our wounded hearts be healed
But they little know the sorrow
That's within our hearts concealed.
Sighs we now breathe out freely,
Sighs the lonely heart must breathe,
Sweetest thoughts shall ever linger, While our loved Vaughn gently sleeps.
—Pearson.

Suffered from Sores on Face and Back—Doctors Took His Money But Did No Good—Skin Now Looks Clear as a Baby's.

ANOTHER CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

Captain W. S. Graham, 1321 Roff St., Wheeling, W. Va., writes June 14, '04, says: "I am so grateful I want to thank God that a friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment to me. I suffered for a long time with sores on my face and back. Some doctors said I had blood poison, and others that I had barbers' itch. None of them did me any good, but they all took my money. My friends tell me my skin now looks as clear as a baby's, and I tell them that Cuticura Soap and Ointment did it."

STILL ANOTHER CURE

Neck Covered With Sores, Hair Fell Out, Wild With Itching

Mr. H. J. Spalding of 104 W. 104th St., New York City, says: "For two years my neck was covered with sores, the disease spreading to my hair, which fell out, leaving an unsightly bald spot, and the sores, inflammation, and merciless itching made me wild. After a few applications of Cuticura the torment subsided, the sores disappeared, and my hair grew thick and healthy as ever."

AND STILL ANOTHER

"For over thirty years I suffered from painful ulcers and an eruption from my knees to my feet, and could find neither doctors nor medicines to help me, until I took Cuticura which cured me in six months. (Signed) M. C. Moss, Gainesville, Tex."

IN LIGHTER VEIN.

HE WAS SORRY.

They Were Stranded on a Lonely Road.

"I'm afraid," he said after he had got out of the automobile and looked under it and around it without being able to discover what was the matter, "that we are in a pretty bad fix. It must be at least three miles to the nearest railroad station."

"O dear," she replied, "and it will be dark in 15 minutes."

"Yes, I'm sorry this had to happen. If you wish it, I will leave the thing here and take you over to Groveland and put you on the train. There will be one along in about three-quarters of an hour."

"Don't you think there is any chance to get the automobile to go again?"

"It doesn't look that way. Still, it may take a notion to start up all of a sudden."

"Perhaps, then, it would be best for us to wait a while."

"But if we do that we will not be able to catch the train."

"Wouldn't you be afraid to leave the thing here all alone? Somebody might come along and steal it or do something to it that would spoil it forever."

"I'd have to take that risk."

"I could never forgive myself if anything happened to it on my account."

"It wouldn't be on your account, Miss Wadsworth. I should consider it all my own fault. I had no business to bring you away out here where it would be so hard to get back if anything happened."

"You are very noble, Mr. Judson, to look at it that way. Still I should feel that you wouldn't have come so far out of the regular course if I had not been enjoying it so much."

"Well, the fact remains that here we are and that if you are to get home tonight we will have to start right away. The train won't wait, you know."

"It's horribly awkward, isn't it? Why don't you look again? Maybe you can find out what is wrong."

After crawling under and examining everything that he could think of he stood up, sadly shaking his head.

"No," he said, "I confess it's too much for me. I'll have to get a machinist, I guess. Don't you think we'd better start now? There's no time to lose if we're going to make that train."

"It seems a pity," she replied, leaning back in the seat and indulging in a long sigh, "to leave it here alone. And there's one thing you haven't thought of. Suppose somebody else should come along here in the dark and crash into it! Think of the damage that might be done. Some one might be killed, and you would have a life to answer for."

"I can leave my lights going, you know."

"But you have no light at the back. They might come from that way."

"Well, they'd of course have lights of their own to show what was in front of them. I must insist that we start right away if you want to catch that train. There will not be any more to-night, and we're probably 20 miles from home."

"Isn't it foolish?"

"Yes, rather. Shall I help you down?"

"I've never heard of any other girl being in this sort of a predicament—have you?"

"Not that I remember of now. I'm very sorry, I assure you."

"Are you really? I've read stories in which men were said to have deliberately plotted to place girls in awkward positions like this, so as to get them to consent to be their wives."

"You don't think I'd do that, do you, Miss Wadsworth?"

"O, no, I didn't mean that. Only I was wondering if you would really feel so very, very sorry if, knowing that you were not in any way to blame you and I were lost like this in some place we couldn't get back from, even if we were cast away on an island, where there were no other people and there wouldn't be any chance to get off for at least a day or so, would you—would—"

"But you see, there is a chance for us," he replied, looking at his watch, "although it's a rather slim one now. Do you think you could walk three miles in 25 minutes?"

"Goodness! Is that all the time we have left to catch the train? I'm afraid I never could do it."

"There's only one way to find out. Come on, please, let's try it. The train may be a few minutes late."

"Do you think you are so anxious to get rid of me, I suppose I shall have to—"

But she never finished. The delicious truth had reached him at last, and when the red streaks of morning began to appear she sat beside him on the deep cushioned seat. Her head was resting on his shoulder and they were dreaming sweet, innocent dreams of the bliss which the future held for them.—S. E. Kiser in Chicago Record-Herald.

Genuine Tears.

"I want to see a performance of 'Romeo and Juliet' last night, and I don't believe I have a tear left in my system to-day."

"Gracious! does a tragedy usually make you cry?"

THE CRIMINAL'S DEFENCE

Trials in Which Attempts Were Made to Prove Alibis.

CASE OF GORTON TWINS

Where Lives Have Depended Upon Accuracy or Inaccuracy of a Clock—Striking Resemblance Between Two Persons—Criminal's Favorite Defence.

The alibi has always been a favorite defence with calculating criminals. It has, on the other hand, in hundreds of cases, extracted the innocent from the meshes of a net of circumstantial evidence which must otherwise have inevitably dragged them to unmerited doom.

Clocks have played an important part in these defences. Lives have depended on their accuracy or inaccuracy. In the case of a man named Hardy, who was accused of having taken part in a murder with others, one of the murderers, after the crime was committed, made his way home as fast as possible. It was night and there was no one in his house but a servant. Putting the clock in the hall back two hours, the man went to bed, and rising shortly afterward awoke the servant and ordered her to go down stairs and see what was the time. The girl did so, and once more retired to her room, when the murderer, stealing softly downstairs in his bare feet, once more put the clock right. The unsuspecting girl's evidence that the prisoner was in bed at the time when the crime was committed secured his acquittal on his trial. The truth was made known by a deathbed confession some years later.

Witnesses who come forward to prove alibis by the clock sometimes prove very unsatisfactory. In a murder case at the Central Criminal Court two witnesses swore most persistently to the prisoner having been in their company at the hour when the prosecution contended he was engaged in the crime.

"Are you quite certain of the exact time?" asked the counsel for the prosecution.

"Certain," replied the first witness.

"How are you so sure about it?" asked the barrister.

"We were in the Bear public house, and I saw the time by the clock, in the bar," replied the witness. "It was 77 minutes past 9."

"You saw that time yourself?" asked the counsel.

"Yes."

One of the detectives engaged in the case here whispered something to the barrister, and he turned to the witness once more.

"You see that clock," he said, pointing to the clock in the court. "What is the time by it?"

The witness turned ghastly pale, scratched his head, gasped, and was silent. He could not tell the time. The alibi bubble was burst. The prisoner was condemned.

A young girl who lived with her parents in a lonely part of Kirkcubright was one day left alone in her cottage while her father and mother were harvesting. On their return the girl was found murdered. A surgical examination revealed the fact that the injuries inflicted must have been the work of a left-handed man, and the police discovered in the soft ground around the cottage the imprints of the boots of a running man. These impressions corresponded exactly with the boots of a young laborer named William Richardson, who was acquainted with the dead girl, and who also was left-handed. Richardson, on being asked where he was on the day of the crime, declared that he was employed the whole day in the work of his master, a farmer, some distance away. This fact was borne witness to by the farmer and Richardson's fellow servants, and the police were baffled.

The alibi, in spite of all the other suspicious circumstances against the prisoner, appeared so strong as to be unsatisfactory. But the police persevered, and at last one of the detectives discovered that Richardson and his fellow servants had that day been employed in driving their master's cart in a direction which took them close to the scene of the crime, and while they had been passing through a wood Richardson had requested his comrades to stop a few minutes while he ran to a smith's shop and back. They did so, and one of the drivers remembered that Richardson, when he returned, had been absent half an hour by his watch. This was ample time for him to run to the cottage, commit the murder and run back again. He had not been to the smith's shop. The alibi thus broke down. Richardson was found guilty, and before his execution, he confessed the justice of his sentence.

An ingenious system of proving an alibi was that of a man named Gorton—at least, that was one of his 20 names—convicted of various clever frauds in the north of England. He had a twin brother, and while he was engaged in a robbery the twin kept himself in prominent evidence in another far removed place. When Gorton was arrested, the persons who had met the twin trooped into the witness box.

Their evidence was of course given in all honest belief that it was perfectly correct. The arrangement broke down at last, however, through one of those little oversights that even the most cunning rogues will fall into, and the ingenious twins came to their deserts.—New York Sun.

In ordering Davis 100 per cent Pure Paint for Mr. Watson's residence, I used as the basis of calculation the covering capacity of High Grade paints. ## Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood. It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

CURES STOMACH TROUBLES

THE body gets its life from food properly digested. Healthy digestion means pure blood for the body, but stomach troubles arise from carelessness in eating and stomach disorders upset the entire system. Improperly masticated food sours on the stomach, causing distressing pains, belching and nausea. When over-eating is persisted in the stomach becomes weakened and worn out and dyspepsia claims the victim.

Thedford's Black-Draught cures dyspepsia. It frees the stomach and bowels of congested matter and gives the stomach new life. The stomach is quickly invigorated and the natural stimulation results in a good appetite, with the power to thoroughly digest food.

You can build up your stomach with this mild and natural remedy. Try Thedford's Black-Draught today. You can buy a package from your dealer for 25c. If he does not keep it, send the money to The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., and a package will be mailed you.

CHAPTER X.

WORLDLINESS AND HOME LIFE.

In the time of the Second Empire, there was, in one of our prettiest southern states, in a province at a very short distance from a flourishing city, frequented by the Emperor, a very respectable and also intelligent mayor, whose head became suddenly turned when he thought that some day the Chief of State might enter his house. Until then he had lived in the old paternal home as a son, respecting its modest surroundings, but now he had a new idea, that he might receive the Emperor of France, took possession of his brain, he became another man. That which had seemed to him sufficient and even comfortable, all that simplicity loved by his parents and ancestors, now seemed to him mean, ugly and despicable. It would be impossible to ask an emperor to mount that old wooden staircase, to invite him to be seated on one of those old chairs, to permit him to set his foot on those superannuated carpets. So the mayor called architects and masons, attacked the walls with picks, demolished partitions, and built a salon of proportion with the rest of the house by its spreading luxury. He withdrew with his family to some small rooms, where people and furniture, huddled together in spite of themselves, were mutually uncomfortable. Then having by this idea emptied his purse and upset his home, he awaited his imperial guest. Alas! he saw the end of the empire come, but the Emperor never.

The folly of this poor man is not so rare as we may think. They are mentally unsound who, like him, sacrifice their interior life to worldliness. The danger of a like sacrifice is more threatening in these more agitated times. Our contemporaries are constantly exposed to it, and a great number succumb to it. How many family treasures have been thrown away, a clear loss, to satisfy new styles or worldly ambitions, and the happiness whose arrival they pretended to be preparing for by these impious sacrifices is making them wait still. It is to make a silly bargain to deliver the fireside of the family, to let these good traditions fall into desuetude, to abandon the simple domestic customs. The place of the home life is such in society, that it suffices only to enfeeble it for trouble to be felt in the entire social organism. To enjoy normal development, the individual needs that it be furnished with well-tempered individuals, having their own value and their personal mark. Otherwise, society becomes a flock of sheep, and sometimes a flock without a shepherd. But where will the individual find his place in this unique thing which, united with the distinctive qualities of others, constitutes the richness and solidity of a home? It can never find them but in the family. Destroy that constellation of practices and souvenirs, which make each home like a miniature climate, and you will cut out of the springs of character, you would cut even the roots of public spirit.

It is important to the country that each fireside be a world, profound, respected, communicating to its members an ineffaceable moral imprint. But before pursuing this theme, a misunderstanding. The family spirit, as all beautiful things, has its caricature, which is called domestic selfishness. Some families are like closed citadels, where they are all organized to exploit all outsiders. All that which does not concern them, they are directly in the front of them. They are in the position of colonists. I might say intruders, in the society where they live. Their exclusiveness is carried to such an extent that they consider the whole human race as enemies. They resemble those powerful societies, formed from time to time in history, who only take possession of the empire of the world, and for whom nothing counts but themselves. It is that spirit that has made us consider the family as the lair of egotism, which should be destroyed for the good of society. But as there is an abyss between the spirit of a command and the spirit of a party, so there is an abyss between the spirit of family and the spirit of the family circle.

Now, it is of the spirit of the family that we speak. Nothing in the world equals it in value. For it holds in germ all those firm and simple virtues which assure the durability and power of social institutions. At the very base of family spirit is found the respect for the past, for that which a family has been the witnesses held in common. Intangible, indivisible, inalienable, capital, these souvenirs constitute a sacred deposit. Each member of the family ought to consider them as the most precious possession. They exist in a double form, in idea and in fact. One finds them in language, the ruts of thought, the sentiments, instincts even. And under all these forms, they are represented by portraits, furniture, constructions, costumes and songs. To profane eyes this is nothing; to the eyes of those who know how to appreciate these things of the family life, they are relics which should not be abandoned at any price.

But what is passing in general in this world where we live? Worldliness makes war with the family spirit. All the struggles are poignant. I know of none more passionate than that one. By grand means, as by small ones, by all sorts of new habits, exactions and pretensions, the worldly spirit makes intrusion into the domestic sanctuary. What are the rights of that stranger. His titles? On what can he base his preeminent claims? That is what we generally neglect to ask ourselves. We are wrong. We act with regard to the invader as the poor staid people do in regard to a very splendid thief. For this plundering guest of a day they will pillage their own gardens, stuff their guests' domestics and their children, and neglect their own work. Unjust and awkward conduct. We must have courage to remain what we are, before no matter who.

The worldly spirit has all the importance of a conqueror, it is a simple home which still forms the character of mark. The men, the furniture, all remain as they were. By marriage, by business relations or pleasure, the worldly spirit enters into it. It finds all old, awkward, foolish. It lacks modernity. At first it confines itself to criticism, a witty rally. But that is the most dangerous moment. Watch out for yourself; there is the enemy! If you allow yourself to be influenced the least in the world, to-morrow you will sacrifice a piece of furniture, the day after good old tradition, and, little by little, the dear relics of heart-interest, the familiar objects, and with them filial piety, will be sent to the dealer in bric-a-brac.

In these new habits and the changed surroundings your old parents, your old friends will feel exiled from their country. You will take a step further and dress them up in their turn: worldliness suppresses the old. Thus, provided with an altar changed frame, you will be astonished to see yourself in it. That will not remind you of anything, but it will be correct, and the worldly spirit at least will declare itself satisfied. Alas! that is what deceives you. After having thrown away real treasures like old iron, it will find you borrowing under your new livery, and will hasten to make you feel the ridicule of such a situation. It would have been better, from the beginning, to have had the courage of your opinion and to defend your home.

Many young persons, when they marry, code to the inspirations of the worldly spirit. Their parents had given their example of a modest life, but the new generation thinks it is affirming its rights to existence and liberty in repudiating a style too patriarchal in their eyes. They, therefore, to install themselves in the latest mode at great expense, sell the useful objects at a ridiculous price. Instead of filling their home with objects which say, "Remember," they fill it up with altogether new articles to which no thought belongs. I am mistaken. These objects are often like symbols of easy and superficial life. We breathe among them I know not what vapors, we would call them. They recall our life, the haste and the whirlwind. And were we disposed sometimes to forget them, they bring back your thought in saying in another sense, "Remember! Do not forget the hour for the club, the theatre, the races." The home thus organized becomes a sort of stoppage, where they come to repose a little between two long absences. It is not good to stay long in it. As it has no soul it does not speak to a soul. The time to sleep, to eat; and, quick, they must go out again! One would become sleepy there; domesticated.

We all know these people who have the rage of going out, who think the world would stop if they did not show themselves everywhere. To remain at home is their heaviest load; they cannot bear to look upon themselves as there in a picture even! The horror of homelike holds them to such a point that they would rather pay to be annoyed stupidly outside than to amuse themselves gratuitously at home.

Little by little society drifts toward life in flocks which must not be confounded with public life. The life in troops is something like that of the birds in the air. Nothing resembles the life of a worldly man so much as the life of another worldly man. And this universal banality destroys even the essence of a public spirit. One does not need to take very long voyages to see the ravages which this worldly spirit has made in the world of the future. It is the little foundation of equilibrium, calm, good sense, initiative, one of the great reasons is in the diminution of the home-life. The masses are limping along after the classes. The people have become worldly. For it is worldliness to quit one's home to go and live in the society of the masses. The wretched state of these habits does not suffice to explain the current which sweeps each one out from his home. Why does the peasant desert the house where his father and his grandfather were so happy, for the inn? The house has remained the same; it is the same fire in the same chimney. Why does it shine on an incomplete circle, instead of the long evenings of old times, when the young and old bowed before its blaze? Something has been changed in the minds of men. Ceding to the unhealthy desires they have broken with simplicity. The fathers have quitted their post of honor, the women vegetate by the solitary stove, and the children quarrel among themselves while awaiting the time when each can go his own way.

We must learn home life and the value of domestic traditions. A pious solicitude has consecrated certain monuments, the only remains of the past among us. And pious hands have gathered up old costumes, provincial dialects, old songs, before they have disappeared from the world. How well they do, to guard these crumbs of a great past, these vestiges of the souls of our forefathers, let us do the same for the traditions of the family, let us save and cause to last as long as possible all which still exists of the patriarchal, no matter under what form.

of an hour, I wish you well. Peace be to you!"

We can never say too much of home life. It is the source of a flower, loved and cultivated in a window; the charm of an old easy-chair, where the grandfather sits offering his wrinkled hands to the kisses of the chubby grandchildren. Poor moderns! Always moving or in transformation! We, who, after modifying the face of our cities, our houses, our customs, our beliefs, have no longer the where to repose our heads. Do not augment the sadness, the emptiness of our uncertain existences in abandoning the home-life. Relight the flame on the cold hearthstone, create us inviolate shelters, warm nests, where children may become men, where love may hide, where repose, prayer an altar and country a cult!

CHAPTER XI.

THE SIMPLE BEAUTY.

Some persons may protest in the name of the aesthetic against the organization of the simple life. Or to oppose us by the theory of useful luxury, the providence of business, great nourisher of art and ornament to civilized societies. We wish to answer them in advance by a few brief remarks.

Doubtless the reader has perceived that the spirit which animates these pages is not the spirit of utilitarianism. It would be an error to think that the simplicity which we seek has anything in common with that of sordidly avaricious misers and the spirits narrowed by false rigors. For the first life is simple and cheap. For the others it is a wan and vegetative existence, where the merit consists in depriving oneself of all that smiles, shines, and charms.

It does not displease us that those who have much wealth should put their fortune in circulation instead of hoarding it, and thus cause commerce to thrive and the fine arts to prosper. After all, they draw an excellent benefit from their privileged situation. What we are fighting against is the stupid prodigality, the egotistical use of riches and the search for the superfluous by those who need, before all, to take care of the necessary. The luxury of a Maecenas could never have the same influence on the world as the modesty of a vulgar pleasure-seeker, who astonishes his contemporaries by the extravagance of his life and the folly of his expenditures. The same term here designates very different things.

To sow money is not all; there are ways of sowing it which ennoble men, and others which degrade them. To sow money, besides, means that they are abundantly supplied. As soon as the love of the sumptuous life takes possession of those of limited means, the question changes singularly. And what strikes us in these times is the rage to spend their money among those who should take care of it. That munificence is a social benefit, we accord willingly. That it may be even sustained, that the prodigality of certain rich ones is like a drain-pipe destined to carry off the overflow, we will not even try to contest. We will state only that there are too many people who use the waste-pipe, while it would be to their interest—and is their duty—to practice economy. Their luxury and their love of it are a private misery and a public danger.

Now for the useful luxury.

We wish to explain ourselves now on the aesthetic side of the question. Oh, very modestly, and without appealing on the ground belonging to the specialists. By a too common illusion people consider simplicity and beauty as two rivals. But simple is not synonymous with ugly, no more than luxurious, overweighted, sought for, and easily, is the synonym of beautiful. Our contemporaries, surrounded by the brilliant spectacle of a striking beauty, dressed in vulgar taste; of a venal art, or a luxury, without grace or mind. Richness allied with bad taste often makes us regret that they have so much money to bring forth such a prodigious quantity of works of low class. Our contemporary art suffers from a lack of simplicity, as well as our literature: too many ornaments added, flourishes turned, and imaginations tormented. Rarely in the lines, the forms or the colors is it given us to contemplate that simplicity allied to perfection, which imposes itself on the sight as evidence imposes on the mind. We need to be ourselves again in the ideal purity of the immortal beauty which puts its signet on the great works, and one sole ray of which values more than all the pompous exhibitions.

Democratic Ticket.

To do the best and please the most is not always an easy task and in politics it requires a vast amount of character and resource. Tuesday's Democratic ticket has a public strength that is not, as a matter of course, included in its yearly make up. There are nominated men who were the opposite of seeking the office, who—so far as private interests were concerned avoided it, to whom added duties at present will be onerous and ill-timed. These, however, recognizing that they are of and from the people, like the Roman, famed in history, will lay aside personal considerations, congenial occupations and labor for the people.

That Tuesday's ticket is satisfactory to all in the party goes too far even for seeming harmony. To name men for office who are absolutely without flaw would not secure this, for outside of the different view points of what constitutes a set of perfect candidates' places on a ticket are not numerous, and the districts of Wicomico county rarely permit of one from each. Necessarily some have to be omitted, as to the advisability of distributing the allotment of offices or as to whom should have been chosen that is now to be laid aside—postponed if you will—but for the present, good Democrats and we believe good judgment and sound principle will unite in endorsing and supporting the Democratic ticket as a whole. The Advertiser will battle for the party because it represents to us in part at least, candidates who are an honor to the ticket, and will honestly, broadly and faithfully represent the people to the best of their ability—in which we have full confidence—all the time; because the party's success this fall is above personnel and its strength this fall should be paramount when so much of party measures is involved. That mistakes were made we are aware; that primaries were not all held in such a way as to meet with honest approval; that the methods of nominating were not such as should be rightly pursued—of this we are well advised and deplore. Great reforms even though confined to small areas are subject to many variations and oft slow in movement, but once acquiring full velocity know no obstacle, as truth and the right recognize no opposition. There are forcible instances and evidences that purification in politics is gathering steam and this section already sees its approach.

The Suffrage Amendment is now up and Wicomico wants to bend a mighty arm for a big majority to carry it through and dispose of the negro cry—the bane of peaceful citizenship and the tool and foil of unscrupulous, carpet bagging politicians. Wicomico has other matters of weight tending to her advancement to dispose of and the sponsor that of the negro is eliminated the greater progress in the others.

Good roads will be subserved in the election of the Democratic County Commissioners by parties who have been agitating a better road system for many years. A long, steady fight has proved a winning one and the tax payers may now anticipate a progressive movement in this direction.

We leave a suggestion that the Democratic party urge the Republican party to join them in a binding contract to buy no votes at the fall election. This much is due to everyone and can be honorably shared in by every citizen in the County.

SAVING TIME.

The man who makes two blades of grass grow where there had been but one is proverbially a public benefactor. Similarly, perhaps, the man or the agency that adds to the ease of life or the facility of its active operations deserves recognition. Such, in effect is the accomplishment of the Pennsylvania Railroad in its new service to and from the West, and the fact that it is a corporation, seeking primarily to increase its revenues, need not detract from the acknowledgment.

To most persons, perhaps, the sensational reduction of the New York Chicago running time to eighteen hours, appeals in much the same way as a record breaking automobile trip—an interesting and somewhat exciting achievement. But it is much more. It brings the commercial centre of the Middle West three or four hours nearer to Philadelphia and New York; and this saving of previous time is multiplied infinitely through its effect upon business activities and intercommunication.

Once more, and conclusively, the Pennsylvania Railroad has proved its title to the term "standard"—a title won in the most intense competition for supremacy in equipment and operation. Some of the policies of the management in the past have proved mistaken; but no one can question that in physical results, such as improved construction and progressive schedules, the Pennsylvania sets the pace for all its rivals.—Editorial in Philadelphia North American, June 14.

TREND OF FASHION

As Seen in New York: Linen in Great Vogue: Embroideries And Hand Wrought Embellishments: Crin Hats: Feathered Trimmings: Lingerie Hats.

The Summer of 1905 will be known in sartorial history as a "Linen Summer." It would seem as if all the possibilities for the use of this fabric had been exhausted in the two previous seasons, but new and fascinating devices for the use of this material are appearing from day to day. In severe tailor styles for morning wear, suits are built of linen in natural and with colorings, in embroidered weaves with touches of bright contrasting color, and in solid colors, green blue, soft reds, and the more neutral tones.

Contrasting Collars And Cuffs.

The fad of the moment in these strictly tailor made suits is to have the collar and cuffs in strong contrast. White or neutral tints have these accessories in bright red, or blue or greens in the recessed tones. When the solid colors are used for the suit the collar and cuffs are usually of embroidered white linen, detachable to allow of frequent change and that daintiness which is demanded by every woman who aspires to appear well dressed.

For More Dressy Wear.

For more dressy wear, there is no end to the elaboration lavished upon linen, and the styles selected are correspondingly ornate, or if the linens employed are after simple tailor cuts, so much embroidery in cut work is employed that the effect is ornate. Out of embroideries in English designs are in the lead in popular favor, but laid work is also used to a considerable extent, and lace especially one half inch insertion put on in braiding patterns, is modishly combined with the hand work, and certainly the white and colored linen suits now on view in Lord and Taylor's beautiful show window on Broadway, attract the attention of passers-by combining the finest material, the most fashionable designs and colors, together with exceptional elegance in style and finish.

Some Of The Prettiest

of the new linen suits have short butterfly jackets, cut up in various ways to show the pretty lingerie waists that are the proper capes for wear on all dress occasions. Many of these jackets are little more than circular capes with the fullness caught under the arm to form sleeves. Others suggest kimono in their lines, but trimmings and shirtings and braidings of shirred bandings disguise the original models almost beyond recognition.

Parasols And Belts And Hats.

Parasols, belts and hats to match are of linen hand embroidered. The cost of such costumes is prohibitive to women of limited resources, and not to be possessed unless they are adapted with the needle. To the ingenious woman of taste and skill the present styles afford great possibilities and a few daintily embroidered belongings lend an air of elegance to the simplest costume.

Illustration.

This handsome linen costume, the illustration of which is supplied by The Toilettes Fashion Co., is made of white French linen with box plaited skirt, cuirass basque, cut out in front and stole collar. Coat sleeve full at top with flaring cuff. Front plaited, cuffs and collar embroidered with mercerized cotton.

Crin Hats.

With the arrival of warm weather the demand for "Crin," or horsehair hats is noticeable among the smart women here. These hats are usually built of flat or plateau, are wired with fine silk wire and bent in innumerable fancy forms to suit the taste or style of the wearer. An unusual number of ostrich feather trimmings are seen on these straw as well as wings and flowers. Lingerie hats are excellent style with linen gowns. Other styles include chips, tuscans, leg-horns and liberty silk or mill hats, the latter in the exaggerated sailor shape, trimmed almost exclusively with the hat material.

All curbing to any sidewalk or pavement paved or laid on said Camden Avenue shall be constructed or made out of brick, stone, cement or other material as may be designated by the Mayor and Council of Salisbury.

SECTION II. And be it enacted, That any person or persons violating the provision of Section I. of this Ordinance by putting down new or relaying or repairing old pavements wider or narrower or on a different grade or of different material from that which may be hereafter designated by the said Mayor and Council as set forth in the notice to be served as set forth in Section I. by said Street Supervisor, shall on conviction thereof before the Police Justice of Salisbury forfeit and pay the sum of five dollars ($5.00) and shall further on conviction thereof before said Justice be liable to a fine of one dollar ($1.00) for each and every succeeding day such sidewalk or pavement wider or narrower, or of a different grade or of different material from that designated by Mayor and Council in the notice to be served as set forth in Section I. by the Street Supervisor of Salisbury, and in default of the payment of any fine so imposed the person convicted shall be committed to the County Jail until fine and costs are paid.

SECTION III. And be it further enacted, That if any property owner or owners aforesaid after due notice shall have been given shall fail to repair, relay or pave the sidewalk or sidewalks in front of his, her or their property on said Camden Avenue within the time specified in said notice the said Mayor and Council of Salisbury shall have the work done and he, she or they shall pay whatever sum it may cost the said Mayor and Council for repairing, relaying or paving the sidewalk or sidewalks in front of his, her or their property, the same to be collected by said Mayor and Council as small debts are collected, and the cost of such repairing, relaying or paving such sidewalk or sidewalks shall be a lien on the property in front of which said work was done by said Mayor and Council of Salisbury.

SECTION IV. And be it enacted, That any property owner or owners aforesaid, who shall fail to repair, relay or pave or grade in front of his, her or their property within the time specified in the said notice, shall upon conviction before the Police Justice of Salisbury, be liable to a fine of three dollars ($3.00) and an additional fine of one dollar ($1.00) for each and every day after the time stated in said notice expires that said sidewalk or sidewalks shall remain unrepaired or unpaved, and upon failure to pay said fine and costs, any person so convicted shall be committed to the County Jail until the fine and costs are paid.

SECTION V. And be it further enacted, That this Ordinance shall take effect from the date of its passage.

The above ordinance was passed by the Council at its last meeting June 10, 1905.

HENRY J. BYRD,
Clerk to the Council.
Approved June 14th, 1905.

CHARLES E. HARPER,
Mayor of Salisbury.

There's a story of a farmer and his son driving a load to market. Of the team they were driving one was a steady reliable old gray mare the other a fraction, balky, black horse. On the way the wagon was stalled and the black horse balked and refused to pull. "What'll we do father?" said the younger man. "Well," said the father, "I guess we'll have to lay the load on the old gray." That homely compliment to women: "The gray mare's the better horse," suggests how often when there's an extra strain to be borne it is laid on the woman's back. How often she breaks down at last under the added weight of some "last straw."

Women who are dragging along wearily, through life can gain real strength by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It puts back in concentrated form the strength making material which working women use up more rapidly than it can be restored by Nature in the ordinary processes of nourishment and rest. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are universal favorites with women because they are easy to take and thoroughly effective in curing the consequences of constipation.

Only one remedy in the world that will at once stop itching of the skin in any part of the body: Doan's Ointment. At any drug store, 50 cts.

—Commencing July 1st, the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company will put in effect their Summer schedule, which gives additional train service to Ocean City and better service than ever before both from Baltimore and from local points. They will run a train ahead of the night express every week day which will make the run from Claiborne to Ocean City, two hours and ten minutes. This has been made necessary on account of heavy travel from Washington and Baltimore to Ocean City. This will give the Washington and Baltimore people better service than they have ever had before. See Time Tables.

—The School Board was in session on Wednesday and Friday of this week. The first meeting was taken up in passing accounts, filling vacancies of trustees and other routine work. Several applications were made for change, and repair of school property throughout the county.

At Friday's session the matter of consolidation of schools was considered and it was decided to do considerable work in this line and by consolidating several of the schools there could be a saving of money, and give the children much better educational facilities than they were now receiving. Consolidation will be given a fair trial.

WORSE EVERY YEAR.

Plenty of Salisbury Readers Have the Same Experience.

Don't neglect an aching back.
It will get worse every year.
Backache is really kidney ache.
To cure the back you must cure the kidneys.

If you don't, other kidney ills follow;
diabetes, bright's disease.
A Salisbury citizen you how the
cure is easy.

Mrs. G. W. Fooks, wife of G. W.
Fooks, County Sheriff of the Court House, says: "I have suffered off and on with kidney complaint for the last eight years. It came on me gradually
and continued to get worse. I felt tired and weak, was short of breath. One doctor told me I had kidney disease and it would finally result in Bright's disease. I was laid up at one time for three weeks. I was feeling very miserable when I went to White & Leonard's drug store for Doan's Kidney Pills. I had not taken them more than three days when the distressing aching across my back disappeared. I have great faith in this remedy and I know if anyone will take the pills as directed
they will receive beneficial results."

cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo,
States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Startling Evidence.

Free testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr.
King's New Discovery for Consumption Coughs and Colds to be unequalled.
A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bentonville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me."
Equally effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles, Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Guaranteed by all Druggists. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50 cents and $1.00.

Worst of All Experiences.

Can anything be worse than to feel that every minute will be your last?
Such was the experience of Mrs. S. H.
Newson, Decatur, Ala. "For three years," she writes, "I endured unbearable pain from indigestion, stomach and bowel trouble. Death seemed inevitable when doctors and all remedies failed. At length I was induced to try Electric Bitters and the result was miraculous. I improved at once and now I'm completely recovered." For Liver, Kidney, Stomach and Bowel troubles Electric Bitters is the only medicine. Only 50c. Its guarantee by All Druggists.

Cuban Diarrhoea.

U. S. soldiers who served in Cuba during the Spanish war know that this disease is, and that ordinary remedies have little more effect than so water. Cuban diarrhoea is almost as severe and dangerous as a mild attack of cholera. There is one remedy, however, that can always be depended upon as will be seen by the following certificate from Mr. Minnie Jacobs of Houston, Texas: "I hereby certify that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy cured my husband of a severe attack of Cuban diarrhoea, which he brought home from Cuba. We had several doctors but they did him no good. One bottle of this remedy cured him, as our neighbors will testify. I thank God for so valuable a medicine." For sale by all Druggists.

Just What Everyone Should Do.

Mr. J. T. Barber of Irwinville, Ga., always keeps a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at hand ready for instant use. Attacks of colic, cholera morbus and diarrhoea come on so suddenly that there is no time to hunt a doctor or go to the store for medicine. Mr. Barber says: "I have tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which is one of the best medicines I ever saw. I keep a bottle of it in my room as I have had several attacks of colic and it has proved to be the best medicine I ever used."
Sold by All Druggists.

Driven to Desperation.

Living at an out of the way place,
remote from civilization, a family is often driven to desperation in case of accident, resulting in Burns, Cuts, Wounds, Ulcers, etc. Lay in a supply of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's the best on earth, 25 cents at All Drug Stores.

Dr. King's New Life Pills. Thousands of sufferers have proved their matchless merit for Sick and Nervous Headaches. They make pure blood and build up your health. Only 35 cents, money back if not cured. Sold

OUT YACHTING.

"So you have given up sailing in the bug class, Robertson," remarked the man in the blue yachting suit, with a smile that plainly said: "I told you the big boats are the only kind."
"Not entirely," replied the owner of a half-rater, as he gazed at a small sailboat moored opposite the clubhouse.

"Didn't I see you last Saturday down on the lee side of the Conqueror, trimming in the staysail sheet?"
"Yes," reluctantly admitted Robertson. "Chappell was short a man, so I went out just to accommodate him.
Besides, I couldn't have taken the Pappoose out on account of a broken boom-sprit. Ben Jacson sailed the Fairly straight into my boat the other day. I called him good and proper. I told him that he would have to stand the cost of repairs."

"But, Robertson, I thought you and Miss Hartley were good friends, yet she didn't even look your way just now as she went down to the landing."

"We were friendly enough until the other day. I asked her to go sailing, and she must have thought I owned a schooner, for she came down in one of those white-duck dresses with blue around the neck and sleeves. She certainly looked fine. All the fellows on the veranda invited her out for a sail, but she went with me."

"And now she won't speak to you?"
"I don't know." She seemed surprised when I told her to crawl aboard the Pappoose and to be careful not to tip the boat over. Well, you know how wet these small sailboats are.
You ought to have seen Miss Hartley's duck suit when we came in—it looked like the dickens. The minute she got both high heels on the landing she disappeared—just simply gave me the cold shake."

"She hasn't sent you a laundry bill yet?"
"No. Well, I'll have to run out now and fix the blamed boom. It looks as if the main sheet had worked loose.
The sail cover seems to be nearly off, too. Say, old man, if you know of any one who was a nice little boat in the bug class send him around.
They are the only boats to sail no bother to keep in shape, or—What am I going to do? Why, they want me back on the Conqueror. I've concluded to go back just to accommodate them."

Austin slammed the oars down on the landing and pulled the dingy out with a jerk. The rocking-chair fleet on the clubhouse veranda knew that something was wrong. Besides, hadn't they been watching the big white-bellied yacht tack back and forth up and down the harbor and hadn't they seen it swing from the mooring and sail straight into a big schooner's near by?

"How did it happen, Austin?" they asked and then a young sailor dropped wearily into a seat.
"Why," he replied, a little reluctantly, "Vanderburg, the owner of the Jennie, telephoned me that after he had invited a crowd down for a sail he found he had to work and begged me to go down and take the wheel, saying I'd have nothing else to do, as there was a good crew aboard."

"Aboard I went. I improved the action of the crew in having tucked in all the reefs. Then, after I had made room in the cockpit by shoving half a dozen pretty girls in yachting dresses away from the wheel, I told three of the men to go forward and get the hook up. You see, the Jennie was at anchor. The way those fellows went to work warned me that they didn't quite understand the gentle art of getting the boat under way. I sent the main-sheet man forward and yelled to them to hustle, and the minute they saw the anchor to let me know. I intended to get away on the port tack so I should miss that schooner near by. Of course I took it for granted that the main-sheet man knew enough to make the job the minute the anchor was up."

"I stood there at the wheel listening to the main-sail trying to tear itself to pieces above my head and wishing those girls would shut up long enough for me to hear what the crew forward were talking about."

"All of a sudden one of those yachtmen stopped working the captain, looked over the side and yelled 'I see it, I see it.' Then every one of those blooming landlubbers stopped hauling the chain aboard and began yelling: 'There it is! There it is!'
"At first I thought some one had fallen overboard, but when we drifted into the schooner—well, I couldn't have the satisfaction while those girls were present of saying what I thought of a crew that hadn't a sense."

"I think I'll quit this yachting game
—it's too strenuous."

Location of Our Roads.
Many of our roads were originally laid out without any attention to general topography, and in most cases followed the settler's path from cabin to cabin, the pig trail or ran along the heavy lines of the farms regardless of grades or direction. Most of them remain today where they were located years ago, and where untold labor, expense, and energy have been wasted in trying to haul over them and in endeavors to improve their deplorable condition.

The King And The Fisherwoman.

During his recent visit to Paris, King Alfonso of Spain went to the places of popular interest. A correspondent relates this incident:
"His greatest triumph was when he visited the famous Central Markets.
Four hundred porters constituted themselves as guard of honor. At the fish market the King received the so-called Queen of the Market, a buxom girl of twenty, who was surrounded by fishwomen."

"The Queen presented a bouquet to his Majesty, who took her hand and gracefully kissed it, at the same time slipping a gold bracelet on her arm.
He then kissed the girl on both cheeks, the crowd laughing and cheering approachously."
"Thereupon the fishwomen enthusiastically mobbed the King and President. One brawny woman almost lifted the King in her arms while she kissed him, exclaiming as she released him: 'He's such a little dear,' which

Two more new members were received and further arrangements were made for the celebration of the Fourth. The committee which had been appointed, reported progress. On Thursday a number of the community went out and built table and stands and placed the seats. Our people are looking forward with pleasure to the coming Fourth, and are making arrangements for a good time. For the benefit of those who would otherwise be slow in coming out that day we will announce that national speeches are expected to be made at about 3 p. m., by State's Attorney Joseph L. Bailey and J. T. Hayman, of Salisbury, and that supper will be served immediately after.

DAIRY CREAMERY

SELLING MILK IN TOWN.

Personal Influence Counts for Much in This Business.

The fact that few men are versatile enough to look in two directions at once, explains why so many men make an utter failure of the milk selling business. The greatest cause of failure, according to my observation, is too much tendency to expand. Good judgment is needed to fix the number of cows that should be kept and the amount of money that should be expended on wagons, horses and utensils. A man cannot succeed with too few cows and most men cannot make a success with a great number. To find the middle way to success, it is the surest way to succeed, as that must depend on the man's capital, the size of his route and the severity of the competition he must face. A company near a large city may successfully run 200 cows, but a man supplying customers in some village or town must be content sometimes with only twelve cows. There are many dairies of from twelve to thirty cows. It is safer for a man to have too few than too many. When a man has run a small dairy for some years and he finds he has made a good living out of it, he usually becomes restless and wants to accomplish something great. So he increases the number of his cows and soon awakens to the fact that he must also increase the number of his hired men. The additional help is not needed for more than a fraction of the time perhaps, but must be paid at full-time rates. This wasted labor is the first out-go that does not bring back its equivalent in money. With the increase of cows and milk come other unexpected difficulties. One is, that although he does all the delivering himself, the proprietor soon finds that he is unable to finish his morning route till very near noon and the customers complain and threaten to alternative is to start another wagon with the second hired man as driver. So he invests in another wagon, horse, cans and the like and starts another route. The second expense is added to the other. As soon as he reaches this stage, he begins to see he is losing control of his business, that is, the personnel begins to change, especially that of the route he has confided to the hired man. Gradually the old customers drop off and new ones are secured till in the course of a few months the man that drives the other wagon has become a leading personality to the milk-takers. Personal influence and acquaintance count immensely in this business.

Tainted Milk.

In nine cases out of ten the cause of bad or tainted milk is due to the dairyman's neglect in handling his dairy. Dr. Gerber, the Swiss scientist, gives the following causes of bad or tainted milk:

1. Poor, decayed fodder, or irrational methods of feeding.
2. Poor, dirty water used for drinking water or for the washing of utensils.
3. Fowl air in cow stable, or the cows lying in their own dung.
4. Lack of cleanliness in milking; manure particles on udder.
5. Keeping the milk long in too warm, poorly ventilated and dirty places.
6. Neglecting to cool the milk rapidly, directly after milking.
7. Lack of cleanliness in the care of the milk, from which cause the greater number of milk taints arise.
8. Poor transportation facilities.
9. Sick cows, udder diseases, etc.
10. Cows being in heat.

Where Separators are Most Valuable.

A dairyman tells us that while he has found his cream separator valuable in saving a larger per cent. of cream, the greatest value to him is in being able to feed his sweet skim milk to his pigs and calves. He says that when he hauled his milk to the creamery and hauled the skim back the latter was nearly always sour and not fit to feed, but the sweet milk from the separator is one of the best feeds he now has. He mixes it with corn meal and wheat bran, and the pigs and calves grow rapidly on it.

We think that most dairymen who have joined pig-growing to their dairy industry have found it a source of profit to feed all their skim milk. There need be no waste by its souring when fed from the separator.

Earthy Taste in Milk.

The trouble of earthy taste in milk kept in the basement, can be overcome by putting in a good concrete or brick wall laid in good cement mortar, and finishing with coat of cement plaster, one part cement to two parts sand. The room should also have a cement floor which may be of either grout or brick, finished with pure cement. The floor should have a slight incline from all points to a drain at one side or corner. Four inches of grout or one brick, if that material is used, is thickness enough for either walls or floor. The ground should be well packed before the floor is laid.

There is no sort of doubt but what it will pay you to buy a separator.

Job had much patience; yet it was fortunate for him that he did not join fences with a neighbor who kept broodstock.

A Cossack Superstition.

Among the numerous superstitions of the Cossacks there is none stronger than the belief that they will enter heaven in a better state if they are personally clean at the time they are killed. Before an expected battle they perform their toilets with scrupulous care dress themselves in clean garments and put on the best they have. This superstition is not confined to the Cossacks alone but is widely prevalent it is said in all branches of the Russian army.

RADIUM INFECTS CURRIES

Hunted by Sort of a Mineral Frankenstein.

PERPETUAL LIGHT PLANT

Famous Discoverers of Wonderful Element So Permeated with its Rays They Live in Constant State of Radiation--Necessary to Build Another Laboratory.

The celebrated chemists, M. and Mme. Currie, are suffering from an embarrassment of too much radium. The famous chemists of Paris, whose discovery of this wonderful element plunged the scientists of the world into grave doubt as to the soundness of the atomic theory, have become the victims of this mineral Frankenstein, and having been driven from their laboratory, are now likely to be driven from their home.

M. Currie and his wife, who had aided him in every step in his researches, are suffering from what Mme. Currie characterizes as a "radium pest." Incidentally they have developed the fact that with radium in use in sufficient quantities the emanations of the gas trust would become a thing of the past and the establishment of municipal ownership too simple to require more than the impregnation of all parts of the city with radium rays.

The laboratory of the Curries has been turned into a perpetual lighting plant by the abundant use of metal in experiments, and the room in which they sleep has become so thoroughly impregnated that it has become necessary to surround the bed at night with heavy black curtains on the sides and across the top.

There is radium everywhere about the house and laboratory of the Curries, and there is but little hope of relief for many years yet to come, as they have estimated that the power of the light from the impregnated walls will have diminished less than 50 per cent in forty years.

The radium follows the two chemists everywhere. There is no way of getting rid of it; no way of cleaning the place or their clothes of the mysterious light that clings to and follows them. Every piece of apparatus, every article in use about the laboratory becomes in time a separate fountain of light, giving off the weird and setting up a new point of brilliance, to remain such for decades.

In discussing the strange misfortune that has overtaken her husband and herself, Mme. Currie said today: "We will have to build another laboratory in our garden. The old one is so impregnated with radium as to render all our apparatus useless. The delicacy of all the old apparatus was destroyed by the influence of the radium, and if we put new apparatus in the radium infected rooms it soon deteriorates."

"The finest telescopes it is possible to buy work less accurately in a room where radium has been exposed than the clumsy article consisting of a cork, tin foil and the mouthpiece of an old pipe. My husband and myself have found it impossible to work in a room where radium has been exposed for any length of time. The rays infect not only the room, but the whole building. It has become, in fact, a radium pest. Some of the apparatus that has been exposed, the new as well as the old, has acquired the property of throwing off radium rays and cannot be used."

"The building will have to be torn down, for even if every particle of radium is removed, the rays will keep on increasing in intensity for two or three years, and after that, although losing in intensity, will deteriorate less than 50 per cent in 50 years."

"What would occur if you exposed an article continuously to radium rays for any length of time?" was asked.

"It would continue to give off rays for a hundred years, at least," was the answer.—New York Journal.

Many Bibles Sold.

Popular novelists will be surprised to hear that the most popular book is not a novel at all. In the course of a talk with a writer in the Book Monthly, Henry Froude of the Oxford University Press says:

"So far as I can calculate, the whole output of English Bibles in the course of a year is about 2,000,000 copies. Moreover, the Bible differs from novels in having a steadily increasing sale. Just thirty years ago the Oxford University Press alone sent out half a million copies. By 1896 the sale had doubled."

Big Pay for Judges.

There are now no fewer than eight ex-judges in England in receipt of total pensions amounting to $121,662.50 a year. A judge who continues on the bench after completing fifteen years' service really does his work for $7,299.75 a year, the difference between his salary and pension. The lord chancellor is entitled to a pension of $24,325.00 a year for life, however short the tenure of the chancellorship.

The business of college education in one of the greatest businesses of the country. The 426 colleges and universities in which are enrolled 175,000 students represent an invested capital of $250,000,000 and give employment to 25,000 persons as teachers and officers.

At the present rate of crumbling England will have been swallowed up by the sea in the year 1218, according to the calculations of a correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung.

A Cossack Superstition.

Among the numerous superstitions of the Cossacks there is none stronger than the belief that they will enter heaven in a better state if they are personally clean at the time they are killed. Before an expected battle they perform their toilets with scrupulous care dress themselves in clean garments and put on the best they have. This superstition is not confined to the Cossacks alone but is widely prevalent it is said in all branches of the Russian army.

At the present rate of crumbling England will have been swallowed up by the sea in the year 1218, according to the calculations of a correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung.

THE CRUCIAL MOMENT

"I believe," she said, after he had missed an easy putt, giving her a chance to take the last hole and bring him in one down, "that you could have beaten me if you had tried."

The caddies had run ahead toward the clubhouse, and he and the little, beautiful, splendid girl stood alone at the edge of the green.

"Did I play as if I were not trying to do my best?" he asked.

"Well, of course, it is pretty hard to judge from appearances when one is playing golf. I think I could play off without letting it be known, and I presume any one else could do so. There is so much uncertainty about it naturally, you see, that any one could make a frightfully poor stroke and never be suspected."

"But you have suspected me," she replied, looking away across the green, undulating course that lay before them. "I didn't intend to be uncomplimentary, or—or to question your sincerity."

"Oh, please don't imagine, Miss Wilton, that you have hurt my feelings. In fact, I ought to be grateful, I suppose, to think that you consider me capable of playing better than I did."

"But really, did you do your very best?" she asked, turning toward him with a wistful smile.

"Certainly. I played as well as I knew how. The trouble was that in addition to being in rather poor form luck was against me right along. You couldn't help seeing that, I suppose. Hadn't we better go in? I ordered dinner for 6.30, and it must be nearly that now."

"I wish the caddies hadn't gone away. I'd like to have you try that putt over just to see if you couldn't make it at least nine times out of ten."

"I know I could. But that happened to be the bad tenth time. That's always the trouble in golf. It's at the crucial moment that one is apt to fail. Shall we go?"

"Let's see," she said, walking back to the hole. "Your ball lay about here, didn't it? There isn't a hump of any kind that could have turned it aside, and it isn't more than seven or eight feet, is it?"

"No, hardly that. I think I must have taken my eyes off the ball just as I hit it."

"Perhaps that was it. Well, I suppose we ought to go in. But it seems queer. I never saw you miss a putt like that before. And you played very badly at the seventh hole. Are you quite sure you were doing your best there?"

"I always fall down there, for some reason. I don't believe I ever made that hole in less than eight in my life. Shall we go?"

"Yes," she replied, lingering for a last look down across the broad course, the cool wind tossing the rich dark curls back from her fine brow and helping to lighten the beautiful glow upon her cheeks. "I wish we could have gone around again. It seems a pity to waste even a minute of such a delightful day as this."

"If we had gone we'd have spoiled it all. It is best to stop eating while things still taste good, and it is the same with golf. To thoroughly enjoy the game one should stop before getting tired out. I'm afraid that dinner will be spoiled if we don't go now."

"But I'm sure I shouldn't have been tired if I had played till dark. Don't you think you would have done better if you had lofted to the green at the twelfth hole instead of making a running approach? Getting into those bushes cost you three strokes. If it hadn't been for that I couldn't possibly have made the hole. It seemed so foolish after you had made such a fine drive, and your brassy couldn't have been better."

"I see that you're determined to believe I deliberately let you beat me," he answered, looking back at her where she stood upon the smooth, level green. "Why do you think I would play off?"

"I don't know," she returned, avoiding his glance and speaking in a very low, sweet tones, "unless I thought you might wish to please me by letting me win because—because you—oh, dear! What am I saying? Let us—"

"Enough!" he cried, rushing toward her.

"No, George, no, no, no—no, you mustn't—not here. But let's never mind the dinner. There will be so many others around us there, you know."—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

IN STRICT CONFIDENCE.

Women Obtain Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Help.

She Has Guided Thousands to Health—Now Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Mrs. Fred Seydel.

It is a great satisfaction for a woman to feel that she can write to another telling her the most private and confidential details about her illness, and know that her letter will be seen by a woman only, a woman full of sympathy for her sick sisters, and more experience in treating female ills than any living person.

Over one hundred thousand cases of female diseases come before Mrs. Pinkham every year, and this has been going on for twenty years, day after day.

Surely women are wise in seeking advice from a woman of such experience, especially when it is absolutely free.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence of women, and every testimonial letter published is done so with the written consent or request of the writer, in order that other sick women may be benefited as they have been.

Mrs. Fred Seydel, of 412 North 54th Street, West Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Over a year ago I wrote you a letter asking advice, as I had female ills and could not carry a child to maturity. I received your kind letter of instructions and followed your advice. I am not only a well woman in consequence, but have a beautiful baby girl. I wish every suffering woman in the land would write you for advice, as you have done so much for me."

Just as surely as Mrs. Seydel was cured, will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure every woman suffering from any form of female ills.

No other medicine in all the world has such a record of cures of female troubles as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Therefore no prudent woman will accept any substitute which a druggist may offer.

LIGHT OF HIS EYES.

In the Luxembourg Gardens on the broad walk near the pond passed to and fro the ceaseless stream of "typical" which one meets with only in the Quarter.

But neither bonnets, with fluttering ribbons and immense white aprons, nor over-dressed nor under-dressed children bowling hoops and crowing, nothing however, attracted half so much attention as the blind young man sitting beneath the shade of one of the chestnuts, with the lovely, quietly dressed girl at his side.

"Ah!" said Dufayel, "there is a sad history attached to him and to her, and yet why should I call it sad, for they love each other?"

"That," he continued, "is Andre Delorme, and she—once Suzanne, the pretty model at Colorossi's—is his wife. Yes, he is blind, and that is the sadness of their history. Three years ago Andre was one of the most promising of the younger painters; every one thought that he was of a 'Bronze.' He worked hard and studied hard, and except that he painted Suzanne no one could accuse him of having any interests outside the picture he was painting.

"One day—you will remember reading about it—a great fire broke out at the back of one of the studios not far from the Gare du Mont Parnasse. We heard nothing of it at the studio until the noise of the engines thundering by at the bottom of the street and the shouting and the blowing of the whistles told us a fire was in progress.

"Andre and half a dozen others hastily threw down their palette, put on their coats, dashed down the steep staircase out into the street, and then rushed away along the boulevard to the place where the fire was. Before they could make their way through the crowd which thronged the street like a dash it came to several of us at once that Suzanne on Tuesday—it was a Tuesday—always sat to Jules Bonnard.

"No one liked Jules—somehow we could not trust him—and therefore we were not much surprised to gather from one of the crowd that Jules had made his escape from the studio at the first alarm of fire without giving much thought to Suzanne.

"Soon there was a great outcry as the roof of one of the studios fell in with a crash, and plumes of sparks and smoke and flames darted skyward. Not long, and another shout for Bonnard's name was heard. He rushed to the scene, and there was a girl in his studio, the end of which was already on fire. Andre dashed at him and shouted close to his face:

"Is it Suzanne—is it Suzanne? Tell me, or I'll kill you!"

"And then, just as he was about to seize him by the throat, Bonnard gasped out:

"Yes, it is Suzanne."

"Andre turned without a word, and pushing through the mob, he dashed down the narrow passage which led to the court of the studios from which people were throwing furniture pell mell, as though the flames were already at their heels and disappeared.

"What happened to him when he vanished from our sight we learned from one of the pompiers. It appears that he dashed into the studio above which Bonnard's bureau was, and forced his way up the narrow staircase in spite of the volumes of smoke which poured down it. Into the studio he managed to crawl, although no sooner was the door open than flames rushed at him like fiery serpents.

"Just inside he stumbled upon Suzanne, who had hastily thrown on her things in an endeavor to escape, and had then evidently overcome by the smoke. He dashed upstairs so rapidly that the pompiers scarcely realized what he was doing until he disappeared; but they arrived in time to catch him as he staggered blindly out of the studio, which in a few minutes had become like a fiery furnace, holding Suzanne in his arms.

Except for smoke and fright she was little the worse. But Andre! He, poor fellow, was terribly burned—no doubt his face and hands had been licked by the flames as he discovered Suzanne. The doctor at the hospital gave little hope at first of his recovery, and Suzanne waited anxiously day after day for any news that was good news of him. And then when at length one sunny day in the spring he emerged from the hospital portal with Suzanne leading him, and the kindly surgeon accompanying them to the floor, we who waited to welcome him back to the Quarter knew that he was blind.

"No more would Andre Delorme be able to paint pictures, for alas! a man cannot paint by touch alone. But in the tenderness of little Suzanne, who works for both of them and who economizes with such cleverness as to make her friends marvel, it is possible that Andre has found something to compensate him.

And Andre is not to be pitied so much after all, for with little Suzanne by his side he has both the angel of their little apartment and 'The Light of His Eyes.'—Clive Holland in Illustrated Bits.

VOILE OR VEILING

Costumes and Separate Blouses Over Bright Plaid Foundations Are Very Smart.

It is not difficult to understand why voile should be such a favorite material, for apart from its serviceableness and durability it is to be had in such delicate pastel shades, as well as in the more brilliant hues, if so desired, and then the texture falls in such soft and graceful folds that it is well nigh impossible to resist having at least one voiling gown in the wardrobe.

Check and plaid veillings are at present very smart, particularly in such shades as lavender, apple green, electric blue and deep cream. Just as the many shades of old rose and coral were so fashionable last year, so this season blue in any number of soft, pale and light shades is the color of the moment. Color contrast is still used with effect and in dull pastel shading pinks and blues, blues and greens, etc., in fact, any combination which are usual but not glaring can be worked in charmingly together. Broad brocade ribbon in which pale and bright colored flowers is a favorite part of the trimming of both afternoon and evening gowns.

There are so many different fashions and styles worn at the present time that it is not possible to pick out one or two and say that they are better than the rest. The little Louis XVI. jackets, made either of flowered taffeta or of voile trimmed with collars, revers and cuffs of brocade ribbon, are delightfully trim and picturesque. These jackets open over vests of lace and chiffon. The skirt may be shirred, plaited or tucked about the hips, and if extra width is required about the feet a gathered flounce may be added from the knees below a wide insertion of flowered ribbon.

A Royal Bargain Hunter. Perhaps the most lovable thing about England's queen, next to her fine womanliness, is her eternal femininity. Despite the sweet gravity of her character, she finds time to enjoy the lighter things of life equally with the giddiest of Edward's subjects—more, doubtless, because she never surrenders her patrician reserve. Alexandra among her intimates still is as young at heart as any of her daughters—y younger, in fact, for they are sober-sided, with all the hopeless dullness of the traditional British maid. The queen is more like a grande dame of France's best period—too prudent to give her life wholly to pleasure, yet too experienced to forget there is wisdom in occasional folly. One of her pet follies, which there is reason to believe many untitled matrons share with her, is—tall it not in Gothic—bargain hunting! But surely, blunts out the unposted bachelor, King Edward's wife has no need to look for cut prices. Assuredly she hasn't—what woman who has does? The queen, officially inooc, garbed usually in a plain tailor-made suit, and flanked by two ladies-in-waiting, goes from shop to shop in response to the call of the will from the pen of the advertisement writer, seeking special sales, looking up "holiday drives," stalking stock-taking indentments, and overhauling bankruptcy clearances with as much avidity as if her lord drew his salary from one employer in place of millions, and she had to wrestle with the servant problem instead of having the bluest blood in Britain burning to serve her. Every aisle she enters is deserted by other shoppers but no other concession to her position is made. Her majesty dotes on ladies' cloth and purchases poplin as frequently as did her royal mamma-in-law when relieving Ireland's famine.—New York Sun.

"Marry Not Too Young." An ancient writer gives this excellent advice on matrimony to those who contemplate it. It is so pithy, as all wise, that modern maid might well appreciate it:

"Marry not too young. Let thy liking ripen before thy love; let thy love advice before thou choose; and let thy choice be fixed before thou marry. Remember that the whole happiness or unhappiness of thy life depends upon this one act. Remember nothing but death can dissolve this knot; and he that repents him of his own act, either is, or was, a fool by confession."—Chicago News.

To Whiten Linen. Yellowed linen can be whitened by soaking in buttermilk for two or three days.

A New Discovery. One discovery made by an exploring party in Abyssinia recently is that the river Gelo skirts the southern extremity of Lake Tana instead of flowing into the lake, as was hitherto believed.

To Stay or Go Back. A music hall performer now appearing in London has stated that she was offered $250 a week to stay in Chicago. Whether this sum was offered by London or Chicago has not transpired.—London Punch.

Just the same, we enjoy the praise of people we despise.

THEIR CORRESPONDENCE

"You'll write often, won't you?" asked young Walbank as he deposited a box of candy, a half-dozen magazines and a late novel in the seat of the postie in which a certain young woman had settled herself for the journey.

"Why, I'll be glad to write," she returned, confidently. "Rockdale is the dullest place in the world, and the Fosters—father's old friends whom I am to visit—are the quietest people imaginable. I'll have heaps of time for being literary. Probably all my friends will be deluged with letters on the beauties of rural life."

"Reading your letters will be next best thing to seeing you," declared the young man.

Then the young woman remarked that she wished he would go before the train started, as it always made her nervous to see any one swing of a moving car. She let her small shirred hand rest in his for the moment and then she gently in the direction of the door.

"Thank you so much for all your kindness," she said. He reluctantly backed out of the car, only to appear at her window and renew his request for letters—plenty of them—during the dreaded two weeks, when the city would be one of the desert spots of the earth.

The young woman, whose name was Ethel Gascoigne, did write to him the very next day. It happened to be rainy and she discovered a fountain pen hidden in her box of candy. She rather enjoyed using the pen. But the following day the sun rose clear and the weather was fine and she began a series of discoveries regarding the possibilities of Rockdale that kept her busy thereafter. She found that the hamlet had attractions of its own.

Despite the fact that it was several miles off the railroad and there was no summer hotel in the county, there was at least one other summer visitor in the neighborhood. He was young and sufficiently attractive. A large white umbrella, easel, palette and the life were the badges of his calling. He happened to be painting the beauties of the noisy little creek that crossed the Foster farm.

Miss Gascoigne's face and form thereafter went into divers sketches of country scenery. In consequence there was really no time for more letters to the unhappy young man. Walbank grew nervous and fretful.

After the tenth day of this pleasant idling Ethel was awakened late in the night by a tremendous pounding of the great oaken door of the house. She slipped into her dressing gown and ran to the head of the stairs to listen. Mr. Foster, arrayed in an extremely unconventional costume, was opening the door.

"Mother," he called, in a shrill voice, "it's a telegram. Bob Amy, fetched it over and he wants a dollar for the job. Bring one out of the wallet in my drawer. You don't spoil anything's matter with Belle the baby, do you, mother?"

"Now, father, don't you be scared," said Mrs. Foster, putting in a hasty appearance. "Just wait till I get my glasses and I'll read it to you. You better ask Bob to wait. Maybe there be something for him to do."

"Why, it ain't for you, Mrs. Foster," called Bob. "It's for Miss Ethel Gascoigne. Ain't she staying with you?"

At this Ethel ran downstairs and joined the excited little group in the hall.

"Be calm, dear," said Mrs. Foster. "Probably it ain't anything terrible at all, though maybe your mother's gone one of her heart attacks she has once before. Shall I read it to you?"

"I can read it if you will hold it, can't a little nearer?"

Ethel tore open the soiled yellow envelope that had been carried several miles over dark and rough country roads.

"I hope it ain't your father," said Mr. Foster, anxiously, as she crumpled the bit of paper in her hand.

"No, it's not from father. It's from a friend who wanted—some information. I am so sorry that you were all disturbed. Good night again, she said in confusion, as she fled to her room.

She lighted her lamp and, smoothing out the telegram, read it on more:

"What's wrong? Why don't you write?—FRANK WALBANK."

"Poor boy!" she murmured, blinking out the light and creeping in bed. She dreamed then that the late was painting her portrait in a white satin gown, over whose folds was falling a filmy lace veil.
