WEDNESDAY, December 6, 1749.

GENOA, August 12.

H.B master of a Dutch ship arrived here from Gibraltar informs us, that at his departure from that port, there were three English men of war there, who only waited for four others, in order to sail in concert to Algiers, and reclaim the effects taken out of the Prince Frederick packet boat; and moreover to make them give formal assurances, that they will never more commit such an insult on any ship carrying the flag of Great Britain. We further learn, that if reasonable remonstrances prove useless, the English squadron will be reinforced, and oblige the Algerines by force to make that satisfaction they could not be brought to by fair means.

Lisbon, August 4. The captain of a Swedish vessel, arrived within these few days in this port from Algiers, assures us, that the Algerines being apprehensive that they shall be invaded very shortly by the Christian powers, continue their great preparations for putting themselves in a due posture of defence. That the dey had not only commanded the works of the place to be duly repaired, but also ordered additional improvements to be made to them with all the expedition imaginable. That the 40,000 Moors, who were to be raised on that occasion, in order to repulse the Christians, were daily arriving, and one part of them are actually employed in completing such new works. That they had fitted out two new vessels, well armed, whose crews consisted of no less than 600 men each; and that on board of both vessels, they had transported a vast number of fire arms for the defence of their out-works. That they had obliged all the Christian slaves, who had been in the service of any European prince, to join the troops of the regency; and had constituted proper officers to instruct them in the military discipline. And lastly, that by advices which they had received from Tunis and Tripoli, they were assured, that the deys of those cities had pursued much the same measures for opposing the Christian power, of whom they are in expectation every day.

August 14. We have advice, that some Spanish ships of war, which were cruising in the Mediterranean, having advanced somewhat near Algiers, had taken a xebique just as it came out of the port in order to make a cruise, whole crew consisted of 300 men, under the command of a renegade.

Paris, August 25. A report is spread here, which has greatly alarm'd many people, that there has been a great fire at Rouen, during the fair, which has consumed to the amount of upwards of three millions in merchandize; but we hope the loss will not appear so heavy, on receiving the particulars of this accident.

Cologne, August 29. We had last Friday in these parts a most violent tempest, with hail and rain in such abundance, that the rivers overflow'd their banks, and laid many towns under water, which has caused a very considerable damage.

The Hague, August 31. The duke and duchess of Richmond arrived here yesterday from London, and had the honour to pay their respects the same day to their serene and royal highnesses, who gave them a most gracious reception. The duke will soon set out for France, in order to visit his fine lands and duchy of Aubigny; and 'tis said the duchess his spouse will accompany him as far as Brissel, and afterwards return hither.

Moscou, August 6. The number of banditti that infest the woods and highways in this neighbourhood, is so far increas'd within these two months, that scarce a day passes without hearing of some murder, robbery, or fire. Most of these villains are recruits, who deserted while on their march to the regiments which they were destined for. A detachment that marched from France a few days ago, has brought up to town several of them, among whom we find some, who had a hand in burning a village on the estate of count Cacremstoff.

THE EDITION RECEIVED ON NO. 11.

Naples, August 12. We have lately had strange doings at a nunnery called The Convent of Miracles: The house, like Satan's kingdom, was divided, some holding with the abbess, and some vowing her destruction; which they would have effected, had she not suspected there was poison put into her wine; which upon examination prov'd true. The cardinal archbishop of this city being appiz'd of these horrid feuds in so miraculos a place, immediately posted away thither, and settled a kind of provisional peace among the holy sisterhood 'till he should receive instructions from Rome how to deal with them. The courier sent thither came back yesterday, and then his eminency repaired again to the convent, took two of the nuns, who were concerned in mixing the poison with the wine, and sent them prisoners to the Greek tower.

Vienna, August 13. The empress queen has declared by her minister at London that her entering into closer connections with the Russian empire, tends only to the mutual safety of the two contracting powers, and to maintain by all means possible the tranquility of the North. The like declaration has been made to Mr. Keith, the British minister here. And 'tis thought the same has been communicated to Mr. Blondel, the French minister; especially as this minister has intimated, at divers conferences, that his most Christian majesty's dispositions do likewise only tend to preserve peace in that part of the world, for which purpose he labours in concert with the king of Great-Britain, and is ready to do the same with any other powers, who incline to concur in so laudable a design: All which we take for gospel, as France has a great interest, for the present, in preventing broils in the North; but how soon she may find her account in the contrary, we don't take upon us to determine.

Frankfort, August 24. General baron Breitach, is set out from hence on his return to Vienna, after having terminated the commission he was charged with, which was, to enquire after the persons concern'd in clipping or altering the ducats and other gold coins. Several are condemned to pay very considerable sums: The Jews, in particular, are fined 75000 florins of the empire; and one certain banker is taxed at near 100,000 florins.

Brussels, August 21. Private letters from Dunkirk advise that the king has made that place a free port.

Hague, August 25. According to private letters from Stockholm, of the 12th instant, the court has heard, with the utmost indignation, that notwithstanding all the declarations made to shew the fallacy of the reports of an intended change in the Swedish constitution, such reports do still gain credit in divers kingdoms, through the malignancy of those who make it their busines to spread them, and cook them up with all the circumstances fittest to impose upon the world: Wherefore the court of Sweden has thought proper to take some new steps on this subject, which will invincibly prove, that those invidious rumours and insinuations come from the very same quarters where ill-grounded fears of a change in the constitution of that kingdom do most haunt people's brains.

Extract of a Letter in the Dutch Gazette, dated at Loudon, August 22.

"The marquis de Mirepoix, ambassador from the most Christian king, had a conference the 20th instant with the duke of Bedford. The affairs of the North were the subject of it; and certain measures were proposed to be taken in concert between the two courts, to maintain peace in that part of Europe, or in case that can't be done, to prevent, at least, the rest of Christendom from being embroil'd by the disputes between Russia and Sweden. This day the marquis de Mirepoix sent away one of his valets de chambre to Versailles, with the news of this conference.

Matters

Matters are still on the same footing between this court and Spain; that is to say, There is much treating and much coo-rdsing, but no mortal can tell, except those in the secret, what Mr Keene has concluded, or is likely to conclude, with the Spanish ministry.

Some foreign papers, in their articles of news from London, pretend that a convention has been made between this court and that of France, relating to the island of Tobago; and talk as if a man of war had been sent from England to inspect the state of that island, besides other circumstances which are not better grounded; for no such convention exists, and as to the state of the said island, it may be exactly known without sending a man of war thither. — But after all, nobody pretends to let the day, when Tabago will be certainly evacuated by the French."

Brussels, August 25. Prince Charles of Lorraine returned hither the 22d from Antwerp, extremely pleased, not only with the reception he had met with, but likewise with the good condition in which he found all the forts and fortifications he had been to visit.

Paris, August 27. Yesterday his excellency the earl of Albemarle went to Versailles, and had his first audience of the dauphin and dauphiness. This court has received advice, that Cape-Breton had been delivered to the commissioners appointed by his most Christian majesty to receive the same.

Vienna, August 16. The locusts have advanced to Schwetzingen, within two leagues of this capital, where our confraternation is so great, that public prayers are appointed to deprecate this destructive arrow of the wrath of the Almighty. Last Monday a fire broke out at Trofing, on the confines of Moravia and Hungary, which reduced the whole borough, with the churches, to ashes.

From the Paris Almanac, August 29. Yesterday we received the news by the king's frigate, call'd the Anemone, commanded by the chevalier de Tourville, that the English had evacuated the royal isle of Cape Breton, and all its dependencies, and that our troops entered thereupon the 23d of last month, and had taken possession of it; and that, in consequence thereof, his majesty had order'd the marquis de Puylieux to declare to the earl of Albemarle, that the earl of Sussex and lord Cathcart were at liberty.

L O N D O N .

August 24. We are assured, that a bill will be brought in next session of parliament, to take off all custom, &c. inward or outward, on salt used for curing fish in the Scotch fisheries, or fish cured for either home or foreign markets; as also of naval stores and materials for the fisheries, for the term of seven years.

And we hear also, that some representations have been made to this court from Holland, relating to the bounds of our new fishery.

Upon a moderate calculation made of the number of persons who will be employed at the commencement of the Scotch fisheries, we are assured the following may be depended on; viz.

Mariner in the fishing vessels, 500 small vessels being proposed to be employed, at 16 men each vessel, one with another, being of different burthens	8000
Mariners employed in the vessels for exporting the fish to different markets, and exporting salt,	20000
Persons of all ages, and both sexes, employ'd on shore in the various occupations of the fishery,	50000
Total of persons to be employed in the said fisheries, in its different branches, natives and foreigners,	78000

It is proposed after the first year, to double the number of fishing vessels, which must necessarily increase the number of persons to be employed in proportion to the augmentation.

The above account will not be thought too great, when we consider the standing state of the Dutch fisheries, which we have here inserted.

For some years past, the accounts of the Dutch have stood as follows; viz.
One thousand small vessels, fourteen men in each, employed in their fisheries,	14000
Employ'd in exporting fish and salt, upwards of	40000
Persons of all ages, and both sexes, employ'd on shore in the various occupations of the fishery,	100000
Total of the persons employed, according to the Dutch account,	154000

It is natural to think, that if the Dutch, who are obliged to carry them home to cure, &c. make so useful a bash of commerce of it; we, who can dry and cure just up on the spot, and shall be thereby enabled to get to the different foreign markets with our commodity three weeks sooner than they possibly can, shall not make it less beneficial and worth our regard than they, was it only for the employment of so great a number of people, which cannot fail of being of great service to the kingdom in general.

We have an account from Bedford, that last Friday morning a young man, a farmer, about two miles from that place, who has been for some time disorder'd in his mind, set fire to his own house, which entirely consumed the same, with all the out-houses, barns, ricks of corn, &c. and the fire being very violent, communicated itself to two other considerable farm-houses, and burnt the same to the ground, with barns, &c. and the crops of the present year, which had been but just got in; and likewise eight small tenements. This unhappy young man had the same morning attempted to shoot his mother; when failing in his horrid design, he took horse and went a little way, but presently return'd, and committed the above precipitate and dreadful act; which he had no sooner done, than he rode away. But on returning to be a spectator of the flames himself had caused, he was secured by the country people, who took him before a neighbouring magistrate, by whom he was committed to Bedford goal.

August 15. A short account of the trial and execution of John Hartley, and John South, who were shot in Hyde-Park yesterday for desertion.

John Hartley, born in Yorkshire, and paymaster-serjeant in the second company of the second regiment of guards, deserted from his corps in Holland just before the last embarkation of the troops from England; and carried off the money lodged in his hands for the subsistence of the company a month; from thence, it was said by South, he entered into Fitz James's regiment of horse, in the French service, but not liking their service he deserted and went to Ireland, enlisted himself as a private sentinel in colonel Frampton's regiment, where he continued some time; but having acted some thing which were likely to bring him to a trial in that regiment, he, in order to avoid present punishment (and as it seems thro' infatuation) disengaged himself to be a deserter from the British guards, on which he was immediately sent to England, and confined in the Savoy till his trial, at which every thing appearing plain against him, and he having no defence to make, he was condemned; tho' as it was not made known to the prisoner at the time of his trial, he could not be brought to believe it till Thursday last, when the dead warrant came down.

John South, born at Ware in Hertfordshire, was a drummer, in the second company of the first regiment of guards, then cap Russel's, (between four and five years ago;) when the company lay in Brussels, a particular order was made against drunkenness, it then very much prevailing, (which made this order necessary) and this unhappy person having drank to excess and neggected some small degree of duty, and fearing punishment for the same, prevented it for the present by deserting to the French, and enlisting in Fitz James's regiment of horse; he was greatly caref'd, and made an officer, in which he continued till the battle of Fontenoy, when he did his heart relented in fighting against his countrymen. He deserted from the French army, and after wandering up and down some time in different parts, at length entered on board the Gloucester man of war, where he continued upwards of three years, and for wages and prize-money due from the said ship, received a considerable sum of money, which he idly squandered away in riotous living, tho' he had labour'd for it. One of his chief associates, and who had been his schoolfellow, as well as partner in squandering his money away, being acquainted with the deceased's affair, took him into a public house under pretence of treating him, and there had him secured as a deserter. After his trial, tho' his crime was not heinous as the serjeant's, he did not depend so much upon a pardon as the other did.

Since their condemnation, South's sisters, who live in the Strand, with the intended spouse of Hartley, and four other maidens dress'd in white, with great humility waited on his majesty and others of the royal family with a petition in behalf of the deceased, which petition was received with great affability from the afflicted maidens.

On Sunday they were at the Savoy church and heard a sermon on the solemn occasion, after which preparation was made for administering the sacrament to them both, but only Hartley would receive it, South seeming to lean to the Romish church, though he had all along profest'd himself a protestant, and seem'd a sincere penitent.

About half an hour after five Yesterday morning they came out of the prison, after having been at prayers the greatest part of the night; from thence they were conducted to the Parade in St. James's Park, attended by the chaplains of the first and second regiments; at which place they were joyn'd by a detachment of ten men from each company of the three regiments. After staying there some time, they were conducted with drums beating, unframed, along the Bird-Cage Walk, up Constitution-Hill, to the fatal stone, at which they arrived presently after eight o'clock; and there they pray'd about a quarter of an hour, often looking down the park in hopes of a reprieve, which before execution was thought to be coming, as a horseman came riding up very hastily; but they were soon undeceived in this opinion by a cousin of South's, who brought a definitive answer to their petition in the negative, after receiving which and embracing him, he pull'd the cap over his eyes, as did also the sergeant, when the men ordered to do the execution were brought up, viz. six, and a reserve of six more, who were to fire in case of signs of life. The signal was first given to advance, present, and then fire, when South's head was shattered all to pieces, and received another ball in his breast, which also shattered his left hand all to pieces, and scattered the fingers about the ground, as was his brains, &c. The sergeant only received a wound, rather a graze, on the side of the right breast, but fell, and moved and cried out with great strength, s, as to be heard by numbers of people, Lord, receive my Soul! Mercy! O Lord! O Lord! when the reserve put an end to his life by lodging several balls in his body. They were put into coffins with their cloaths on, and buried in two different holes dug for that purpose near the stone. They both behaved with great decency and composure, and to outward appearance died true penitents.

August 26. Monday last, sailed the Mermaid and Blandford men of war, both bound to Boston in New-England, the former having on board a great sum of money for that place, and the latter to be stationed there.

A fleet of ships is said to be going up the Baltic, and that Lord Anson will command the same, and hoist his flag on board the Lancaster man of war.

August 31. We are inform'd from Rotterdam, that the British inhabitants are taxed extravagantly; that a high duty is laid on English vessels seeking freight; and many not permitted to take in any goods at all, several having come away empty. But M'NEEKS ought to be told, that their beginning so early will not, in any sense, elide the good intentions of the British parliament in regard to the intended fishery.

Sept. 16. On Friday was held a board of admiralty, when a member of African sailors who were employed by admiral Griffin to navigate his squadron from the East Indies attended their lordships with a petition for a speedy payment of their wages, and passports to return home.

It is said his grace the duke of Somerset has been pleased to subscribe two hundred pounds towards carrying on the Scotch fisheries; and we hear, that other noble personages are encouraging the said undertaking.

Sept. 21. On Tuesday night the persons in custody for attempting to export looms, engines, &c. for the manufacturing of silk, &c. were examined before the secretaries of state, when four were order'd into close confinement, and the rest discharged.

A Sloop with four Hands on board, loaded with Pig Iron, to carry on board Capt. Thompson at Wicomico was going down the Bay the Night before the storm on the 26th of October last; and not having been heard of since, is supposed to be lost.

Last Wednesday arrived here, after a Passage of Seven Weeks, Capt. James Dobbins, in the Ship Thames Frigate, belonging to Messrs. Reid and Stewart, in London, with about 120 Convicts.

MARYLAND GAZETTE.

Containing the freshest Advices, Foreign and Domestic.

WEDNESDAY, December 13, 1749.

PARMA, August 27.

We are informed, that the country people had affably declared that they, at the hazard of their lives, would not submit to pay the new taxes, the farmers of the public revenues of that duchy had laid upon them. Gaz. The infant duke is very unruly, as well as his subjects, and declared to some of their principals, that he was affighted at their indiscretion; that they must be sensible, that he received large subsidies from the courts of France and Spain, great part of which would be spent among them; and that it was heard they should grudge to the subjects of those courts, the privilege of earning a small part of them in his service.

Vast preparations are making at Rome, and the best painters and artists set at work, in decorating the churches and shrines of the saints, for cherishing the devotion of pilgrims, at the approaching holy year, or grand Jubilee.—Near 20,000lb. weight of wax has been already used to make Agnes Dei's; and this festival has been found so profitable, that, from every 100th, it is kept every 25th year.—To render the whole more solemn and efficacious, the Holy Father has issued his bull, as follows:

By the authority of almighty God, by that of the blessed St. Peter and St. Paul, and by our own, we appoint the celebration of the general and universal Jubilee for the next year 1750, to begin from the first vespers before Christmas-day, and to continue all the year.

During this whole year we grant the indulgence, the entire pardon and remission of all their sins, to all the faithful of each sex, who, being truly contrite, and having duly made confession, and received the communion, shall devoutly visit at least once a day, for the space of thirty days, if they are inhabitants of Rome, or if they are strangers, for fifteen days, the churches of St. Peter and St. Paul, St. John of Lateran, St. Mary Major, and shall there pray for the peace of the holy church, the extirpation of heresies, the union of catholic princes, and the happiness and tranquility of all Christian people.

All sincere penitents, who shall set out for the Jubilee, but shall either upon their journey, or after their arrival at Rome, be prevented by death or sickness, or any other reasonable impediment, are intitled to the same privileges.

Lughorn, August 22. Upon the intelligence that our magistrate of health has received, that the contagion rages at Smyrna, Algiers, and other parts adjacent, proper precautions have been taken for keeping all vessels coming from those parts, at a distance from our coasts; and all such vessels are obliged, by express orders from our said magistrate of health, to observe a very rigorous quarantine, and one of a long duration.

This fatal misfortune proves a prodigious shock to our trade and commerce, which, 'tis thought, would otherwise have been soon in a very flourishing condition.

By advices lately received here from Bastia, we are credibly informed, that the natives of Corsica are determined to die upon the spot, with their pieces upon their shoulders, rather than to submit to the government of Genoa, upon any other terms, than those which have been propos'd to them by the marquis de Cursay, and which have been sent by him to the court of Versailles for his most Christian majesty's final determination.

Rome, August 23. In the night of the 13th instant, there arose such a prodigious tempest at sea, that the waves overflowed the large forest of Cisterna, tore up the trees thereof by the roots, over-set all the cottages that lay round about it, destroyed all the cattle that were grazing at a distance; in a word, render'd the whole forest such a melancholy scene of desolation, that even the wild beasts made their advances to the very houses in Cisterna.

The damage that this tempest has done the prince of Cis-terna, will amount to no less than 30,000 crowns.

Extra of a Letter from Gosport, dated August 1.

On Wednesday evening was inter'd in the chapel yard in this town, Thomas Scott, and James Read, two of the unfortunate men that suffered on board the Chesterfield for mutiny; the pall for Scott was held up by six young women of credit, dressed in white, supported by six young men; the women had handsome breast-knots and gloves, and the men gloves and favours; before his corse walked three of the young men that received his majesty's bold gracious pardon, in the same dress they were to have been executed in; their modest deportment and concern, greatly affected the spectators, who were more numerous than I ever saw at a funeral in this town; close to his corse followed that of James Read, which was supported by tradesmen and others of credit, followed by all their imitators that remained in town; in this solemn procession they walked to the burying ground, and were inter'd very near each other; after the funeral service was over, one of the men that was pardoned, swooned away twice in the chapel yard, and was forced to be carried home, and remains still in a bad state of health.

August 5. We are credibly inform'd, that count de Tellin, the preudent of his swedish majesty's chancery, has sent circular letters to all his ministers who are resident in any foreign courts; and notwithstanding the report that hath been industriously spread abroad, that Sweden had entered into a private contract with the Ottoman Porte, whereby the said Seignior had covenanted and agreed to use his utmost endeavour to establish the prince successor on the Swedish throne, upon the decease of his father; yet, in reality, there were no just grounds of foundation for such an insinuation; and that his majesty, as well as his son, had the interest of the present happy establishment of Sweden at heart; and that both of them would use their utmost endeavours to maintain and preserve all those rights and privileges which they have hitherto enjoyed, if possible, in tranquillity and peace.

On the 16th the Doge of Genoa, and the several colleges held a chapter in the church belonging to the Carmelites; and we hear, that tho' the city militia had been discharged the week before, they were formed again into four distinct companies, and took the respective posts which the government had assign'd them.

They tell us from Hanover, that the reason why the empress of Russia, notwithstanding the instance of the court of Versailles, so long delays sending a minister thither, is that her imperial majesty has not receiv'd the satisfaction due to her, on account of the conduct of the two last French ministers that resided at that court; as also in regard to the count de la Salle, besides the discovery made of the close connections and intrigues between France and two other courts, which we presume must be Prussia and Sweden. So that here are good grounds for a war, and the sword will probably soon be unsheath'd, unless certain fitt quacks in E— can find means to keep matters quiet in the North, by another definitive treaty of peace.

B R I S T O L.

August 26. Last Thursday about five o'clock in the evening, Joseph Abeney the Swedish sailor, who was condemned at Gloucester for the murder of Mary Wildinge, the young servant maid, near the White Ladies, was brought from that city, chain'd on horseback, and guarded by some of the inferior officers, to the Fountain Inn, without Lawford's gate, where a vast number of people resorted to see him; and was visited by both Protestant and Romish ministers. He being a Roman before he was hanged, he seem'd to be very penitent, and desired the prayers of the people for his poor soul.

Yesterday a little before ten o'clock in the morning, he was convey'd in a cart, to Durham Down, where, after some time spent in prayer, he was executed on the same gibbet with Basset and Pain (who suffer'd death for the murder of the late Sir Robert Cunn's coachman five years ago) and afterwards hung in chains thereon.

Before he was turned off, he refus'd the assistance of all the Protestant ministers that had attended him several times, declaring he die'd in the catholic faith, and believed in all the articles thereof; confessed his guile; and delivered a paper to the sheriff — This refusal of the Protestants, 'tis presumed, was owing to some sudden check from his priest — His chief confidence seem'd to be placed in the operation of his Holy-water, a small phial of which he had with him at the gallows, which he took out of his pocket just before he was turn'd off; and, having poured some of it into the palm of his hand, and dipping his finger therin, crost his forehead and breast several times, and then laying his hand upon his breast and heart, submitted to his fate with great resolution.

He express'd a great concern, before his execution, at his being to be hung in chains, and said he did not care if they quarter'd his body, so that it was not to be hung up in the air, for a prey to the birds.

The same morning, about eleven o'clock, Jeremiah Hayes, a native of Ireland, and a stout seaman, condemned for the murder of Eleanor Dillard, by tying her up in a sack, and throwing her into the river, (in concert with two other seamen not yet apprehend'd) was conveyed in a cart from Newgate, attended by the under sheriff, city constables, and the sheriff's officers, to St. Michael's Hill, and there executed on the gallows; he dyed a Roman catholic.

While in the condamn'd room, a few hours before his execution, he declar'd his innocence to divers persons, and wish'd that he might never see the face of God, or enter the kingdom of Heaven, if he was guilty of the murder; and that he was as free from that guilt, as the child unborn.

A few days ago, he sat for his prosecutors, in order to forgive them; and because they did not come, he perus'd that it was a strong instance of his innocence, and of their having sworn falsely against him. That he long'd for the time to depart this life, and that every hour seem'd as a year.

At the place of execution, the Rev. Mr. Davis pray'd with him about half an hour; after which he spent near half an hour more in talking to the people, and when the halter was about his neck he pull'd his cap from his face, divers times, still renewing his discourse to one or other; and about one minute after the cart drew away, and he suspended by the neck, he even then pull'd his cap quite off with both hands, and endeavour'd to put it on again, which not compleatly, the executioner pull'd it down over his face.

Sep. 16. Yesterday came advice from Stow, in Buckinghamshire, of the death of the Right Hon. the lord viscount and baron Cobham, colonel of a regiment of dragoons, field marshal, and one of the lords of the privy council, &c.

October 6. We hear that a proclamation will speedily be publish'd for the meeting of the parliament on the 16th of November, to sit for the dispatch of business.

Yesterday a great quantity of ordnance stores were shipp'd on board a transport for Port Mahon, on board of which several deserters from lord Harry Beaufort's regiment of foot, lately gone thither, will embark for that garrison, in order to be tried by a general court martial. Several recruits, now in the Savoy, will also embark on board the said vessel.

All the Christian slaves in Barbary will be set at liberty, before the renewal of the treaty with those states; for the performance of which the Tripolitan ambassador is come hither.

Another grandee from those states is said to be on his passage for this kingdom.

By the last Dutch mail we have advice, that 13000 men are disband'd in Holland, when at the same time the French have order'd all their officers to their posts. We have also advice, that the lady Hyndford, one of the ladies of the bed chamber to the princess of Orange, has resign'd her employment, and is on her return to England.

It is matter of some speculation, why the hostages are still detain'd in France: The French say, there is a Secret Article not yet complied with.

It is reported that two millings in the pound will be taken off the land-tax, and five per cent off the commerce; and, to balance this, the four per cents are to be reduced to three and a half.

From the Daily Advertiser of yesterday, we are assur'd, that M. de Caylus, governor of Martinico, hath propos'd to Mr. Greenville, governor of Barbados, conjointly to evacuate the island of Tobago, without invalidating the right his most Christian, or Britannic majesty, may form to that place; and that orders have been sent to Mr. Greenville, to agree to the said proposal, and to proceed immediately to the execution thereof.

Query, If the above is a fact, is it not a concession in favour of Le Grande Monarque?

Letters from Constantinople assure us, that in a divan lately held, the new mufi had declared, that the only way to dispel the discontent of the soldiers, and to prevent a general revolt, was immediately to declare war against some Christian power; in consequence of which, orders had been given for transporting a great body of troops from Asia into Europe; and that a great corps of Janizaries had also orders to hold themselves in readiness to march upon the first notice.

By advice from Newcastle, the commissioners of excise have explain'd the late Glass Act of Parliament after a new way, and thereby have subjected common window glass to the high duty of 9*s. 4*d. per hundred weight, of all materials the same is made of, equal to the duty of crown glass; notwithstanding common glass, for the last two years, paid only 2*s. 4*d. per hundred weight.

Upon the excise officers demanding the above extraordinary high duty upon common glass, the manufacturers put out their fires, and petition'd the lords of the treasury, for relief, which was not obtained; therefore the manufacturers are come now to a resolution, to advance the price of glass double of what it was before the duty was laid thereon.

We hear, that on Saturday last HENRY HOLLYDAY, Esq; High Sheriff of Queen Anne's County, was married in Talbot County to Miss ANNE ROBINSON, a well accomplish'd young Gentlewoman, with a good fortune.

We are inform'd, that the Body of Mr. JAMES RILEY, Ship-Carpenter, whom we mention'd some Time ago as supposed to be lost, was taken up, on the Eastern Shore, the Beginning of last Month. The other two Men, who were lost with him, are not yet heard of.

We hear that a Dead Warrant is issued for the Execution of a Negro Fellow, condemned at last Calvert County Court for a Rape. As also for a Negro Fellow, condemned at Cecil County Especial Court, for burning his Master's Houses. They will both afterwards be hung in Chairs.

A Dead Warrant is likewise issued for the Execution of JOSEPH MURPHY, in Frederick County, condemned at an especial Court there, for Felony and Burglary.

TURKEY AND PERSIA.

OLYMAN, pacha of Bassora, having revolted, and attack'd Babylon, four of the neighbouring pachas have orders to march their troops to relieve that town.—The affairs of Persia, according to advices by the Smyrna caravan, being settled once more, and Shawroke Schah (who had taken and blinded Ibrahim Mirza) in quiet possession of the throne, ambassadors are appointed on both sides, in order to confirm the late treaty with Schah Nadir.

G E R M A N Y.

The empress queen is again pregnant; a large army is kept up, and in very good order. The locust, after ravaging part of Poland, and the neighbourhood of Vienna (where they killed multitudes of them with fire arms, but were obliged to desist by the stench of the carcases) took their flight, darkening the air, towards Bohemia and Bavaria, and did vast damage about Pilsen in Bohemia; being driven away from Budweis by the noise of bells, and discharge of cannon, they settled a league off on trees, the branches of which broke down with their weight; and tho' 160 sacks of them were destroyed in the night by burning straw under the trees, they came next morning near the town, and soon devoured two cart loads of hay. They have advanced in Bavaria to Ratishon and Aichstet, and cover'd 300 acres of land in Franconia.

I T A L Y.

Instead of the Italian powers attacking the Algerines as they threatened, eleven ships of the latter have alarmed for several days the coast of Nap's, intending to seize the king in the Isle of Portida, as he was hunting pheasants; but were disappointed, and retired, finding the coast well guarded.—A scheme from England for yielding Sardinia and Corsick to Don Philip, for a large sum of money or an exchange, is much discussed of, as well as how much has been already done for the infant Don.—An earthquake at Melina has thrown down many houses, damaged most of the palaces and churches, and destroy'd many inhabitants.

S P A I N.

The company established at St. Sebastian's, being informed that divers persons carried on a contraband trade at the Caraccas with foreigners to the company's prejudice, sent orders to their principal factor to take proper measures for putting a stop to it. The factor, on application to the governor, obtained some troops, and met with no opposition to the King's orders in favour of the company, 'till he came to the habitation of Don John Francis de Leon, who had amassed great riches during the late war. This man assembling the inhabitants of that canton, with the negroes, sent word to the officer and factor, that they must retire on peril of their lives. Some days after (April 22) he wrote to the governor, desiring him to order the factor and other servants of the company to retire from the province; soon after, with 500 men, he made himself master of the Caraccas, and obliged the governor, with the factor and others, to retire to Guaira and Porto Caballo. He then appointed agents to take care of the company's effects, and with the rest of the rebels resolved to admit of no more of the company's ships, pretending that trade ought to be free there. These disorders lasted from April 22 to June 24. The governor and ecclesiastic chapter of the Caraccas have assured his majesty of their inviolable loyalty, but represented that the only way to preserve his authority would be to abolish the company.—It is newly made death for a Spaniard to correspond with the garrison of Gibraltar.

The court is inform'd, that effects to the value of above seven millions, which came in the fleet from the West Indies, have been smuggled by a certain great person (the queen daughter), and above a million has been found in her palace; which however the disowns.

His most Christian majesty, after a progress through Roan, and other places of Normandy, arrived the 10th instant at Havre de Grace, and the same evening visited the fort at the entrance of the harbour. The next day he came abroad at nine in the morning, and took a turn on the North pier, whence he had a view of the harbour at low water, and of the use of the sluices. Then after hearing mass he went on board the Chariot Royal in the basin, saw all the different workings of the ship, the careening of another vessel, and afterwards visited the different manufactures belonging to the naval arsenal. In the afternoon he went to see three ships launched, and a naval engagement between six ships in the road; after which he visited the rope walk, the citadel, and the snuff manufactory. If the French king becomes fond of naval affairs, the influence of the royal example may greatly contribute to render France as formidable by sea as it is by Land.

Prince Charles, our governor, has summoned engineers and workmen for the repairing the fortifications of Brussels, Antwerp, Aeth, Mons, Namur, and Charleroy; and will employ the released deserters in this work, instead of shooting them. New money having been coined, the army is paid with it, the officers in silver, and the soldiers in copper.

The peace has rather made the people more unwilling to pay the necessary taxes, so that the difficulty of raising the revenue still subsists; and obliges the regency to disband 10,000 of its troops.

At Nykoping, in Jutland, was lately caught a mermaid, which from the waist upwards had a human form, but the rest was like a fish, with a tail turning up behind, the fingers were joind together by a membrane; it struggled, and beat itself to death in the net.

On the 29th ult. an order was made out to the Exchequer for remitting to Scotland the money certified by the lords of sessions, due to the nobility and gentry, &c. on account of the heritable jurisdictions abolished by act of parliament.

On the 30th, some artificers, seized on board a ship at Portsmouth, bound to Spain, were examined, and 9 of them discharged from bail, and seven continued. Orders were given for prosecuting seventeen persons; most of them principals, on the statute, which makes it felony for artificers to go abroad without leave.

A smuggler, executed at Maidstone, confessed the murder of Mr. Medlycott of Lincoln, about ten years ago, with whom he then lived as a servant. Mr. Medlycott was to have been married the same morning, and the pistol being found by him, it was, 'till this discovery, generally thought that he had shot himself.

Sept. 4. At a general meeting of the commissioners of the turnpikes, at the guild-hall in Bristol, it was unanimously resolved to draw up a letter to the duke of Newcastle, to request his grace to order the speedy trial of the prisoners in the several goals of the city, on account of destroying the turnpikes; this letter being drawn up by a committee, was signed by all the gentlemen then present, and many more for several days following; and a deputation was appointed to deliver it to his grace.

The works of Dunkirk began to be demolished in the presence of English surveyors, agreeable to the late treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle.

Sept. 22. Ended the sessions at the Old Bailey, having lasted eight days, when were condemned 19 persons; viz. 2 for a riot, and pulling down part of a house near Temple-bar, 2 for horse-stealing, 14 for street and highway robberies, and 1 for returning from transportation.

The French making pretensions to a part of Nova-Scotia, or Acadia, the lords of trade and plantations have searched into the ancient records, treaties, and memorials, relating to that country, and find that the whole extent of that province has belonged to the British crown ever since 1725, when all the Indian chiefs took an oath of fidelity to K. George I.—The result of this research has been communicated to the earl of Albemarle, to give additional force to his remonstrances against the construction of a new fort, now building there by the French, on the river St. John; and orders were sent to governor Cornwallis, to oppose all settlements of the French, in any part of the province.

The whale-fishery in Davis's straits has been very prosperous this season; 44 Dutch ships have taken 105 fish, making 8704 casks of blubber; 4 Hamburg vessels took 15 fish and a half; and the rest of the ships 4 fish and a half amongst them. The ——, capt. Adams, arrived in the river from Greenland, caught 4 whales and a quarter, 4 sea-horses, and an unicorn, whose horn is 10 feet long.

Sept. 23. The debtors in the Marshalsea prison began a mutiny, which continued 'till the next morning; they broke open several doors, and threatened the lives of the keepers; for which two of them have been committed to the New Goal.

Sept. 26. The Portuguese have two guarda costas at Cape de Verd, which take all vessels that come there for a dye called Weed, which is prohibited; they took three English ships, and a fourth narrowly escaped.

Sept. 27. The crews of the Stirling Castle and Defiance men of war, after two years, were paid their prize money, amounting to sixpence each foremast man.

It is reported that the Dutch in the East Indies have thrown off their dependency on Holland, and form'd a government of their own.

An English vessel arrived at Leghorn from Salona, was met by three Tunis vessels; and because the captain would not strike and bring to, they forced him, and then punish'd him with 300 bastinados on his feet.

On the 23d of this month died Sir Watkin Williams Wynd of Denbighshire, Bart. by a fall from his horse, in hunting. An excellent pattern of generosity and hospitality, a steady senator, a firm patriot, a known enemy to the corruption and venality of the times: In private life, a hearty and sincere friend, and a noble example of conjugal fidelity: His house was a daily relief for the poor; there was good bread for the hungry, and good drink for the thirsty, and none let to go away empty. He served in Parliament ever since 1720. He had only one son, born April 8 last, by his second lady.

Cockermouth in Cumberland; September 3. In the night between the 22d and 23d ult. in the midst of the most terrible lightning and thunder that ever was seen or heard, a large rock near the tops of the mountain [at St. John's] was rent asunder; out of which came so great a deluge of water, and with such violence and rapidity, as carried all before it, such as solid stones of incredible weight, houses, barns, mills, &c. and even erased their very foundations, so that you cannot now tell where they stood; the mill-stones are carried some hundred yards from the mill, and tossed upon the rubbish and sand, the quantity of which is so great, that it has laid waste a great tract of arable and meadowland, which will for the future be for ever spolled, being as deep in some places as the tops of trees.

It would surpass all credit to give you every particular circumstance of this surprizing catastrophe, which still continues to discharge a large quantity of water, of such a strange nature, as to inclose all the river Derwent quite down to the sea, which must be near twenty miles. The damage done to the bay, corn, and proprietors of the neighbouring fields and houses, is computed at 4000/-

[This for the Magazine.]

Bristol, July 29. Last Monday night a great body of country people of the county of Somerset, came to Bedminster, making prodigious shouts, so as to be heard several miles round, and set to work with hatchets, &c. on the turnpike gates and house, erected for the Ashton road, and though they were exceeding strong, they quite demolish'd them in about thirty minutes. The commissioners have publish'd a reward of 100/- for detecting any person or persons concern'd therein,—or in any future act of this kind, besides being intituled to his majesty's most gracious pardon.

And on Tuesday night another body of country people of the Gloucestershire side, some naked with only trowsers on, some in their shirts, several with their faces black'd, &c. came and destroy'd a second time, the turnpike gates, and turnpike house at don John's cross, on the Toghill road; about a mile from this city. They bored holes in the large posts and blew them up with gunpowder. Some hours before, the tollman of the gate was severely threaten'd; and his wife was told if she did not go home, her bones should be sent home in a bag.

However, crofs bars and posts, were again erected, and chains put a crofs the roads, and some stout men were plac'd to assist the tollmen; and particularly at those on the Ashton road, on tuesday, the commissioners took it by turns, about 2 dozen in a body, to stand at the gates likewise, to give an account to the people and oblige them to pay the toll. Notwithstanding which, the same morning, several persons attempted to force their passage with some cattle and colts, for the first, and insulted the gentlemen; and one of them, who held the butt end of his whip over one of the commissioner's head, in a menacing manner, will, we hear, have an information lodg'd against him in the crown office.

They came a second time, on Wednesday night, between ten and eleven o'clock, in a prodigious body, with drums beating, and loud shouting, arm'd with cutting instruments fix'd in long staves, &c. and some disguis'd in women's apparel, and soon dispatch'd their work, in quite demolishing the turnpike erections fix'd, as well as the house which was rebuilding on the Ashton road, and also the strongest turnpike on the Dendry road, which was not before cut down.

It was given out they would come again on Friday night, and in order to receive them a strong guard of seamen, all arm'd with musquet, pistols, cutlasses, &c. were placed at the turnpike gate, (which was again erected) and most certainly, had they made another attempt to destroy it, some lives would have been lost, perhaps on both sides.

In pursuance of the commissioners resolution, on Thursday those gentlemen made an excursion on horseback, eight miles into the county of Somerset; arm'd with musquets, and pistols, in search of some of those concern'd in destroying the turnpike gates, &c. one of whom they took at Blackwell, and brought him pinion'd behind one of their servants on horseback, to Bedminster about fix in the evening.

On account of these disturbances, the city gates are shut at nine o'clock at night; and all the constabulary have orders to be ready on any emergency; and the citizens are determined to defend themselves.

We are told, that those persons in Newgate have impeach'd a great many of their accomplices.

August 12. Since last Saturday morning, this city has remained free from any apprehensions of the colliers and country people; as we have now fix troops of the second regiment of dragoon guards, to prevent any further insults; two of those troops arrived on Saturday from Gloucester, and the rest march'd in last week, all on foot their horses being left behind at grafts.

Their timely arrival occasioned the colliers and country people to disperse on saturday last; and posts and chains are again erected, and the tolls levied: But the commissioners have now ordered the turnpikes to be fix'd nearer to the liberties of the city; so that it must be a very bold step for any to presume cutting them down again so near the housetops.

A body of 3 or 400 colliers, who came from Clutton, Paulton, and other coal-works, in order to join their brethren in Kingwood, returned back on saturday over the river to Kemsley, greatly enraged against those in Kingwood, for disappointing them, after so many threatenings, that caused them to leave their works; and were very near on the point of dispatching one of the Kingwood leaders, and pulling his and some other of the principal colliers houses down.

The same day a body of those people accosted one of the judges in his coach near Pensford, coming the circuit to this city, and told him, Sir we have cut down the turnpike.—He said to this purport, I am sorry for it; you had better let them alone; and that you will find.—They then pull'd his lordship for money; but the coachman was ordered to drive on.

The unhappy persons in Newgate and Bridewell, &c. on account of cutting down the turnpikes, &c. are to be tryed by a special commission from the government. Several will take their trials in London, some in Bristol, and the rest elsewhere; but when the judges will arrive to try those that are to be arraigned in this city, is not yet certain.

All those wounded in the Totterdown conflict are in a fair way of recovery, except Farmer Barnes, and even of him there are hopes. Not one as yet died of the whole number.

Sept. 2. We have accounts from several parts of Somersetshire, that the people in that country are far from being in a quiet condition, and not able yet to digest the paying turnpike-tolls, and vow they will come in a body and again cut down and destroy the turnpikes, &c. now re-erected, and for this purpose they intended to come by night to do their work, to prevent a second Totterdown affair. — And further threaten, that they will invest the roads, and prevent the market people bringing provisions to the city, for the space of one month, to see whether the citizens chose rather to have the turnpikes up, and be debarr'd of necessaries; or take them down, and suffer them to come free to the market with plenty in their hands.

As a further indication, to make people believe they were in earnest, another daring, insolent, anonymous letter came to the mayor's hands last Wednesday, from the same quarter, exhorting therein, what a sad thing it would be to see that noble fabric the Exchange, and other fine edifices of this great city, reduced to ashes, &c. and that this would certainly be the case, for that their intention was to set the city on fire in different parts, if the turnpikes were not taken down, &c.

Cholmohdely's regiment is expected to arrive here every hour. The dragoons here patrol the streets of this city every night, to prevent any mischief from incendiaries.

NEW-YORK, November 20.

By a gentleman lately arrived from B—rn—da, we are informed, that the g—r of that island, in conjunction with his cl—y, has introduced the most laudable method and practice of singing psalms in the ch—h with violins, instead of organs; by which means several people can be employed with musical instruments at once, to the great edification of such merry blades, as are fond of dancing to the sound of a ch—h fiddle.

WEDNESDAY, December 17, 1749.

A N S P A C H. August 26.
H R king of Great Britain, sovereign of the most noble order of the Garter, having been pleased to command his excellencies sir Charles Hanbury Williams, knight of the most honourable order of the Bath, and John Annes, Esq; Garter principal king at arms, to be his majesty's commissioners plenipotentiaries for the investing his most serene highness Charles William Frederic, margrave of Brandenbourg-Anspach, with the whole habit and ensigns of the most noble order of the Garter; Mr. Annes arrived here from England the 1st instant, attended by his secretary, and a messenger of state; and sir Charles Hanbury Williams came hither the day following, with a great retinue. The commissioners plenipotentiaries were lodged at court, and had guards placed at their respective apartments.

On Saturday the 23rd instant, the day appointed for beginning the ceremony, the commissioners plenipotentiaries were conducted through the great hall to an audience of his highness. The gentlemen in waiting opened the doors, the commissioners entered. The king at arms having delivered the letters of credence, and the book of statutes of the order, to sir Charles Hanbury Williams, the latter presented them to the margrave. In the evening his highness gave an instrument under his hand and seal, whereby he promised to observe every article not contrary to the religion professed by him; or derogatory to any rights and privileges of the holy Roman empire, or to the order of the Black Eagle, of which he is already a knight companion: After which the commissioners plenipotentiaries taking the garter richly set with brilliants, from a silver table, whereon it was placed, buckled it upon the margrave's left leg, the king at arms reading the admonition in Latin.

Then they took the blue ribbon from the same silver table, and placed it over the left shoulder of his highness, bringing it about under the right arm, with the diamond George, the king at arms reading the admonition.

The margrave dined in public in the great hall, sir Charles Hanbury Williams being seated next to his highness, and the king at arms next to her royal highness the margravine.

On Sunday the 24th instant, the day of investiture, sir Charles Hanbury Williams, and the king at arms habited in his mantle, with the other ensigns of his office, were conducted and introduced in the same manner. The following ensigns of the order, viz. the commission of the sovereign, the surcoat, sword, mantle, hood, great collar, book of statutes, and the cap and feathers, were laid on a crimson velvet cushion, laced with gold, upon a silver table.

The commissioners plenipotentiaries first took off the margrave's upper garment, and his highness taking off his sword, which was of gold, gave it to the king at arms as his accustomed fee, who wore it during the whole ceremony. Then they put the surcoat upon his highness, and the sword of the order. Immediately after, her royal highness the margravine was led by the first minister, baron Seckendorff, through the arche of chambers, into that where the investiture was to be performed, preceded by her great chamberlain, and followed by the ladies of the court.

All the ministers, privy counsellors, and gentlemen, followed; M. Reichenstein carried the hood upon a cushion; major-general M. de Kronegk the book of statutes; major-general de Polni the great collar; the great master of the horse, M. de Polni, the cap and feathers, richly adorned with diamonds and precious stones; then followed the king at arms, carrying upon a crimson velvet cushion, fringed and laced with gold, the sovereign's commission, and the mantle of the order.

Sir Charles Hanbury Williams, knight of the most honourable order of the Bath.

The grand marshal and the great butler with their slaves,

His most serene highness the margrave, in the under habit of the order, supported by their excellencies M. the count de Pappenheim, hereditary marshal of the Holy empire, and M. the veldt-marshal baron de Diemers, grand commander of the Teutonic order.

Immediately upon their entry into the Salom, the privy counsellors, officers, and gentlemen of his highness, thus proceeding by pairs, made three obeisances jointly towards the stall of the sovereign, and repeated the same in the middle, and at the places appointed for them.

The stall erected for the sovereign, with a canopy, was of crimson velvet, richly laced with gold; in which stall, above the chair, were the arms of England, impaled with St. George's cross.

His highness the margrave having also made the like reverences, ascended into his stall, which was of crimson satin, with a canopy laced with gold; and the arms of the most serene house of Brandenbourg-Anspach were above the chair; where seating himself, the commissioners plenipotentiaries did the like in their respective chairs.

The music played for some time; and when it ceased, sir Charles Hanbury Williams rose up, and making an obedience to the sovereign's stall, and to the margrave, made a speech in French; setting forth the antiquity and dignity of this most noble order; in answer to which the baron de Seckendorff, principal secretary of state, made a speech in the same language.

Which being ended, the king at arms delivered the commission to sir Charles, who presented it to the margrave, and his highness gave it to his private secretary to be read aloud, during which time all persons stood up. The secretary having read it, returned it to his highness, who gave it to the king at arms, to be preserved among the archives of the order.

The music then played for some time; during which his highness repose himself in his stall, and the commissioners plenipotentiaries sat down in their chairs.

After which the king at arms rose up; and making an obedience to the sovereign's stall, and then to his highness, took from the table whereon the ensigns of the order, were laid, the mantle, and giving it to sir Charles, they jointly invested his highness therewith, the king at arms reading the admonition in Latin.

In the same manner the hood was delivered, and fixed upon the right shoulder of his highness; and this likewise in Latin. The collar was put on in like manner, the king at arms reading the admonition in Latin.

Then sir Charles delivered to his highness the book of statutes; lastly, the commissioners plenipotentiaries placed the cap and feathers on his highness's head, and then made a reverence to the stall of the sovereign.

After a short repose, the king at arms stood up, and making his obeisance to the stall of the sovereign, and also to the margrave, proclaimed in Latin the styles of the sovereign, and of his most serene highness.

The proclamation of the styles being made, the trumpets sounded, and the kettle drum beat, and a general discharge of the cannon was made.

The procession returned in the like manner, four gentlemen bearing the train of the margrave's mantle.

When the dessert was put upon the table, his highness took off his cap, and drank health, first to the king of Great Britain, sovereign of the most noble order of the Garter; then to their royal highnesses the prince and princess of Wales, and all the royal family; and lastly to the knights companions of the most noble order of the Garter.

Sir Charles Hanbury Williams drank prosperity to the house of Brandenbourg-Anspach, and the healths of the emperor and empress queen.

The

The cannon were continually fired from the beginning of the ceremony till the evening, when the whole city was illuminated. The whole solemnity was conducted with great magnificence and splendor.

September 22. The following remarkable epitaph is in Whitby church yard, in the county of York.

"Here lies the bodies of Francis Huntrods and Mary his wife, who were both born on the same day of the week, month, and year; married on the day of their birth; and after having 12 children born to them, died aged 80, on the same day of the year they were born and married, the one not above five hours before the other."

On the foregoing Epitaph.

Husband and wife could ne'er more fitly join,
Fate so concern'd, the knot must grow divine.
One scarce had being 'till the other was,
And one but just surviv'd the other's loss:
Neither felt spark of Love's celestial fire,
But what the happy other did inspire.
Oh joy consummate! wedlock bles'd with love!
Like this in distant ages, who can prove.
Two strings of music so wound by one hand,
Which can their tuneful unison command,
In sympathetic sound return their voice,
And in each other's harmony rejoice;
As you, wound up by Fate's unerring skill,
Still found a charming unison in will.
A fitter match sure there could never be,
Who in their lives and deaths did so agree.

September 2. Sunday morning, about half an hour after 3 o'clock, a fire broke out at Mr. Harwood's in Grocers Alley in the Poultry, which burnt that house and Mr. Medley's house adjoining, and three other houses, and very much damaged the Poultry comptier, a loft belonging to the right honourable the lord mayor adjoining to Grocers hall, and several other houses. The fire would probably have done more mischief, had there not been great plenty of water, and speedy assistance from Newham and Ragg's engines.

There were above fifty persons in the Poultry comptier for debt, &c. when the fire happened, who were set at liberty for fear of being burnt; about forty of them are since returned. The felons in the said prison, nine in number, escaped at the same time, and only one of them has been retaken.

We hear that a man who endeavoured to save himself, by getting out of a window, had the misfortune to fall down, and was killed on the spot.

The wife of Mr. Mears, lace-merchant, in Cheapside, died of a fright, occasioned by the fire.

September 7. They write from Hamburg, that the Russian ministers have a very strong suspicion that an offensive alliance has been lately concluded between a certain Northern crown and the Ottoman Porte, to which they attribute the declaration that was lately made by the part of the Grand Signior to the Russian ambassador, that his sublime highness has a great interest in preserving the balance of power in the North. These advices likewise say, that the people of Courland complain heavily of the great number of troops quarter'd amongst them; that there is no longer any talk of a new election, but instead of it a rumour prevails, that a matter of very great importance will speedily break out.

The lords of the admiralty have been pleased to give orders for surveying the Medway's prizes and all the old men of war, in order to their being broke up or refitted.

There are letters in town which mention, that the city of Elbingen in Germany is destroyed by fire.

Edinburgh, Sept. 19. There has been a great take of salmon in the river Spey, several sh-p-loads being sail'd for the freights; and there is a very good prospect of a successful herring fishery. But the right of fishing in the northern seas, about the isles of Orkney and Schetland, exclusive of the subjects of Denmark, is called in question by the Danes, who pretend to the same exclusive right. In proof of this, they allege that Christian I. king of Denmark, on marrying his daughter Margaret, 1469, to James III. of Scotland, bound himself to give with her a dowry of 60,000 florins; but finding himself, on account of the Swedish wars, unable to pay so much ready money, it was stipulated in the marriage contract to pay 10,000 florins, and for the rest, to assign to the king of Scotland the Orkadic, or Orkney isles. But king Christian being prevented, by some critical circumstances, from paying down more than 2000 florins, he mortgaged to his son-in-law the isle of Schetland for the remainder, reserving to himself a right of redemption. The court thinks itself authorized to reclaim all those islands, on reimbursing the sums for which they were engaged; and further pretend, that if the right of redemption had not been expressly reserved, the English could not arrogate the least right to that fishery, and to the adjacent seas, which were never mortgaged, and necessarily belong to the first possessors of the isles.

A poor chairman's wife, aged about 70, was lately deliver'd of a child, which thrives, and is suckled by the mother, who never had one before; her husband is about the same age.

Dublin, September 9. We hear from Belfast, that they are very apprehensive of a murrain among the cattle, as there are several cows seized with the distemper called the big head, and one of them dead of the same; and that some swine, by drinking up the blood, were instantly killed.

At Maghratell, on the 22d ult., in a terrible storm of lightning and thunder, a ball of fire came down a chimney into a room, where was a woman and her two sons, and another person, which burnt off the skirt of the coat of one sitting by the fire, and lighting on the floor, roll'd about several times, then dividing into two parts, one burnt, and scorch'd another of the company; the other ascended, forced its way through the floor of the chamber, where were two young women, and bursting with a great explosion, struck one of them instantly dead; and tho' no wound appeared on the body, but part of the skin scorched as it were with gunpowder, yet the bones were all broken as if pounded.

Charlottesville, in South-Carolina, October 30.

Advice has been received, that about ten days ago Mr. Robert Kelly, one of our traders among the Upper Cherokee Indians, was murder'd by some French Indians.

We hear, that the Friend's Good-will, capt. Crawford, with upwards of 400 Palatines on board for this place, was in at one of our southern inlets about a fortnight ago, and put to sea again with water only for 4 days; since which we have no further account of her.

And some vessels lately arrived have met with many pieces of wrecks at sea, which gives us reason to fear, that the late north east winds have done considerable damage.

It seems, the Spaniards of St. Augustine, notwithstanding the late general peace, still continue the old grievance complained of by this province so long since as two or three years before the war, and which continued with it, of encouraging the desertion of slaves to them, from their owners in this province, to the great damage and loss of our planters, and other his majesty's good subjects, by declaring them free on their coming there, and protecting them as Spanish subjects: For besides many companies of those people which have gone, and attempted to go, after hostilities ceased, and even since the peace has been proclaimed in all parts, last Monday 21 Negroes own'd at Port Royal, went off from thence in a boat they stole from capt. James Mackay.

The horrid practice of poisoning white people by the Negroes has lately become so common, that within a few days past several executions have taken place in different parts of the country, by burning, gibbeting, hanging, &c.

St. John's, in Antigua, September 29.

Last week his majesty's sloop Speedwell came into English harbour from a cruise, having met with a very hard gale of wind on the 13th past to the northward of Barbuda, which blew from all points of the compass, and lasted 40 hours, in which they lost their main and topmasts, and were obliged to throw their lee guns overboard, being afterwards reduced to a biscuit a day, 'till they got into English Harbour.

Capt. Perkins, in the ship —— of Liverpool, arrived on Wednesday from Africa, and sailed the next day for Jamaica; having had the misfortune to lose 102 slaves by sickness.

Boston, November 13.

A number of gentlemen met at the town-house in Boston, on Tuesday the 7th instant, to project and agree upon some methods for advantageously improving the produce, trade, and business of the province, and promoting frugality and good economy in the inhabitants; and after some discourse on those subjects, they agreed to meet again at the same place on Tuesday next, the 14th instant, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon; when and where all other gentlemen, who are disposed to promote and encourage such good designs, are desired, if they are able, to meet and unite with the gentlemen as aforesaid.

New York, November 20.

By Capt. Rivers, arrived here last week from North Carolina, we have most melancholy accounts of the effects of the late storm, or rather hurricane there, on the 7th and 8th of October last: scarce a vessel in all the country but what was either drove ashore or lost: Ten vessels lying at Ossocock inlet, outward bound, waiting for a fair wind, were all lost but one brigantine belonging to Boston; amongst which was Capt. Kellogg, in a sloop of this port, entirely lost, and every person no board drowned: as also a schooner, unknown, which was overcast: Two of the vessels were drove over the bar by the violence of the gale, and lost about five miles to the northward of it. The water was drove up above ten feet higher than it was ever known to rise before; and some vessels drove up into the low lands, so far as to render them impossible ever to be got off again. Great damage has also been done in the country otherwise, by drowning of cattle, hogs, &c.

Nov. 27. By a letter from Capt. Tingley, of the ship Indian King, of this port, dated in the bay of Honduras the 18th of September last; we are informed of a terrible gale of wind at north, on the 8th of that month, they then being about 25 leagues to the eastward of Ratan, wherein they were obliged to cut away their foremast to keep her above water, and soon after their mainmast, mizzenmast, and bowsprit all blew away by the violence of the wind; and their tiller breaking off in the rudder-head, she became a perfect wreck for upwards of 12 hours, every moment expecting to be their last; when the wind happily shifting to E. S. E. they made shift to clear themselves of Rattan. — The gale continued to the 18th, before they could make any sail; when they had only their top gallant sails for courses, and their long boat's sail for a mizen, all the others being carried off; in which condition they arrived the 13th. They had several of their hands much bruised; but by good Providence all their lives were saved. — The letter further informs, that several vessels have been put ashore there, and some wreck'd; amongst which is a Philadelphia Brigantine entirely lost.
