Prairie View- ( I.P. )
If a young Black male is having serious trouble with his grades in college, the person who is most likely to be able to help him through the crisis is an older Black female.

Thus is the main conclusion of a research project conducted by Dr. Carl E. Settles, who recently earned the Ph.D. degree in educational psychology from the University of Texas, Austin. Dr. Settles' study was conducted with 46 students on scholastic probation at Prairie View A&M University, where he is associate director of the Counseling Service Center.

Dr. Settles undertook his research to examine the theory that the more a helper is like the helpee, the more successful the relationship will be. That idea, called a "congruence theory," was supported under most circumstances, Dr. Settles reported. But for the young Black male who is going through a scholastic crisis, the worst thing a counseling center could do would be to assign him to another Black male.

The findings, Dr. Settles

S.A. President Receives Crank Calls

by Lee Lofthus

S.A. President Tom Keilholtz has received several anonymous phone calls harrasing him for his actions as S.A. President, with one caller categorizing him as a "Racist." The harassment by phone stems from S.A. giving money to the Baptist Student Union and by Keilholtz not attending the speech given by Black columnist Carl Rowan.

Keilholtz began to receive the calls following last Thursday's S.A. meeting at which the Baptist Student Union was given $269 to attend two Christian meetings. Keilholtz then received a call from a student refusing to identify himself, but who attacked Keilholtz for giving money to "Jesus Freaks."

Keilholtz received another call, also criticizing him for allowing student money to be given to religious organizations. Keilholtz tried to explain the situation to both callers, however, one caller became excessively crude and hung up. The other

In a flurry of confusion and chaos, the F.S.C. Student Association held its third meeting of the year February 17, 1977. While some business was completed at the meeting, the decision by the S.A. members to suspend their own bylaws virtually crippled the organization's ability to function in an organized manner.

The root cause of the problem last Thursday night was the fact that not enough S.A. representatives showed up at the meeting to allow any official business to be conducted. S.A. Executives Tom Keilholtz and Rick Gehrman decided that the meeting should not be cancelled, and some action taken to assure that the meeting be held and business completed. Therefore, the decision was made to suspend the rules and bylaws by which S.A. operates. The attending reps voted in favor of the parliamentary action.

While some representatives and students had reservations about whether or not suspension of the rules was justified and even legal, President Keilholtz testified as to the legality of the action by saying "everything was perfectly legal and in the best interest of the entire student body."

S.A. Parliamentarian Robert B. Lechter said that the action was "perfectly legal as far as parliamentary procedure was concerned."

Keilholtz further justified the action by explaining that certain student groups were to appear before S.A. that night to request money and could not have received the funds which they needed immediately unless the rules were altered.

In any event, the rules were suspended and money was allocated to three campus organizations. Dramatis Personae was given $1,000 for their spring production of the play "Pal Joey." The Baptist Student Union received $269 for two trips to meetings concerning Christian missionaries and related topics. Finally, the International Relations Club requested $740 to send its members to New York City to participate in a Model United Nations and represent the Netherlands. S.A. approved the money for the trip.

During the allocation of money to the Baptist Student Union and the I.R.C. the meeting began to degenerate for lack of rules. Certain House members became alarmed at how the meeting was breaking down and attempted to restore the S.A. bylaws, but the effort was defeated.

Finally, confusion blossomed into chaos as S.A. Executive Director Ken Thompson pointed out the parliamentary fact which allowed all persons present at the meeting to vote and not just S.A. members. A period of chaos followed during which two S.A. representatives, Bill Millar and Rick Whelan, walked out of the meeting in disgust.

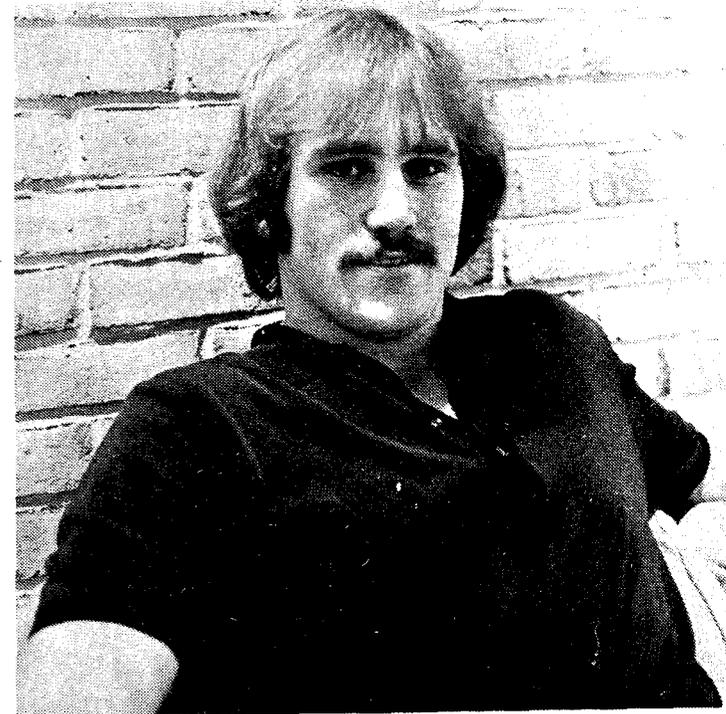

Seeing that the meeting no longer could prove beneficial to the students, the S.A. officers moved quickly to adjourn the meeting, and the adjournment finally ended all the confusion.

The fact that the rules were suspended and anyone present could vote had serious implications for S.A. In such a situation, no longer could the student government control what happened to student funds, as any number of persons could have requested funds for any purpose and been given the money if they had a simple majority to vote themselves the money. S.A. could have done nothing to stop this.

As a final note on the matter, Keilholtz said that such a situation would never occur again as long as he was president.

Keilholtz said he was disgusted by the persons behavior and hung up on the person. Keilholtz said that he attended a pre-lecture dinner with Mr. Rowan, and he later spoke with Mr. Rowan, explaining he would be unable to attend the lecture as he had to attend a campus meeting to represent the students. Keilholtz emphasized there were absolutely no racial overtones whatsoever in the situation.

COMMENTARY

The Voice of Reason

by John Rodriguez

Even in light of the chaotic scene that developed at the last SA meeting, the leadership of the Keilholtz administration emerged with a display of the kind of integrity that has been sorely lacking in previous Student Association administrations.

Knowing that there was a gamble involved but not fully aware of all the ramifications of suspending their bylaws, the S.A. executives decided to go ahead and try to conduct the February 17 meeting of the House of Representatives. Several student organizations were coming before the House to request budget allocations, and it was imperative for the House to take action that night. The decision resulted in a minor backfire and a good deal of embarrassment, but the requesting organizations had their requests approved, the pandemonium which ensued did no real damage, and the new administration showed that the Student Association really can be dedicated to serving the student body.

President Keilholtz has promised that the kind of near-disaster which took place on the floor of the House would never happen again. But beyond this, his administration has demonstrated a defined concern for the students at large, which is something we hope will continue for a long time to come.

In this my first column, I would like to critically examine the early stages of the Carter Administration. It has always been considered customary to wait for 100 days to start to critically analyze a new Presidential Administration however, there are certain trends developing even in the early days of the Carter Administration that I feel need to be looked at. First, the "nostalgic look" that seems to be capturing President Carter and also the appearance of government by consensus.

President Carter campaigned on the concept of being "an outsider to Washington Establishment." This became quite an acceptable idea as many people felt that all of their major problems were due to corruption which was perceived as being due to the stagnant bureaucratic structure in Washington. Carter pledged to eliminate this and bring in new people with new vitality and a whole new approach to governing. There was a great expectation as Carter picked his cabinet and advisors that new blood would indeed be infused into the capital and that the men who had made the disastrous mistakes of the past would not be put back into power. However, with a few exceptions, this didn't prove to be the case.

A look at these advisors and cabinet officials points out this fact quite clearly. The Secretary of Defense, Harold Brown, served as Secretary of the Air Force under Lyndon Johnson and helped to coordinate our Vietnam policy. Cyrus Vance, the Secretary of State, served rather extensively in foreign affairs under both John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson. The Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, Joseph Califano, helped to coordinate Johnson's "Great Society" and the rapidly accelerated budget deficits that aided in the creation of the massive inflation of the early '70's. Secretary of the Treasury, Micheal Blumenthal was an aide to John Kennedy and once again is an established part of Washington. In terms of non-cabinet advisors, we find such men as National Security Council Chairman Brezinski, a close protege and admirer of former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, the architect of Nixon-Ford foreign policy. In charge of establishing a national energy policy we find James Schlesinger, former Secretary of Defense under Presidents Nixon and Ford and former energy advisor to Nixon. We all know of the "sterling" record of great accomplishment in the field of energy complishment and achievement during the Nixon years. We also have the quiding hand of Arthur Burns, Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, controlling our economic destiny. As one can plainly see, Carter's pledge to bring new blood to Washington seems to be no more than a "recycling program." The men who helped to establish policies that led to the wrong decisions and bureaucratic failings of the Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, and Ford administrations are now expected to work miracles for Carter.

I realize that Jimmy Carter categorizes himself as a "Born-again" Christian, and I for one would never argue with a man's religious beliefs, but he must also believe in the salvation of the incompetent as he expects these men to become "Born-again" successes.

Carter also seems to lack an original tone in his conduct of the Presidency. It seems that the motto of this administration is: If you can't come up with good ideas of your own, copy someone else. We see the return of "Fireside Chats," the symbol of the Roosevelt years. We see the heavy reliance upon humor and wit, borrowed from the Kennedy Administration. We hear of plans to reorganize and streamline the federal bureaucracy, a plan strikingly similar to the one described by President Nixon in his 1971 State of the Union message. We hear a call from Carter for a "People's White House" and the introduction of square dancing, dungarees, and bare feet to the White House. I guess this proves that Carter is a student of American history as this pledge is similar to the action of the Jackson Administration. His statements of the needs of honesty and bluntness remind us of Harry Truman. Perhaps the most striking of all the Carter measures is the announcing of White House telephone numbers so anyone can call him and give their views on the issues of the day. This points to the drift and the lack of decisiveness that exists within the oval office. We do not elect a President to become a poll taker or to win popularity polls. The President must be a policy initiator and an executive, he must be decisive. We have Congress and the Supreme Court to check his power, if necessary. We cannot run a nation of 220 million people on the basis of concensus on every issue.

It is this writer's hope that Carter will indeed become the President and not just hold a title. Former President Nixon was often lampooned for his use of "I am the President," a sign that he needed to reassure himself of the fact. Jimmy Carter, by his actions, seems to be indicating the same uncertainty. Former Attorney General Jon Mitchell once said, "Judge us by what we do and not what we say." Let's also use this standard to evaluate Mr. Carter. You are indeed the President, please lead us as the President.

Record Rack

For Everything There is a Season

A torrent of records has been loosed during the pre- and post-holiday period, and a plethora of material now dots the musical landscape.

As the Biblical proverb and the latter-day song put it, "For everything there is a season." This is true in fiscal matters, farming and record buying. The season now is for buying. But let's not forget the Roman maxim (while we're into quoting)--"Let the buyer beware."

Queen "A Day at the Races" (Elektra 6E-101)--This British glitter group should claim its share of a resurgent rock market with a primo release, which should pick up a lot of new followers for them. It may mark the big commercial breakthrough on the heels of their strong first album.

Not only is Queen able to fuse that dry British satirical wit into their work, but they also know when to take themselves seriously and when not to. Humor and parody are ingredients in a collection of songs that run far afield of the old standby love-song formula. "You Take My Breath Away" is a good try at campy, barbershop love-song parody.

Another tricky bit is to include a number of introductions which almost stand alone and have little to do with the song itself. This is not pushed to the point of distraction but is used most effectively. Lyrics are intelligent and quotable.

"Somebody to Love" is already surging up the charts and features good gospel choir harmonizing. "Drowse" is an offbeat piece about the trauma of middle age and the feeling that life has passed one by. I found "White Man", suggestive of the innocent noble savage image in looking at the plight of the American Indian, to be a little strained. But in tota this album is a fine effort. If you are into this type of rock, Queen would be a good way to start off this year's record buying.

The Blackbyrds "Unfinished Business" (Fantasy F-9518)--If, like most of the civilized world, you're into disco you might as well go with some of the better practitioners of the sound. Formed by Donald Byrd (he is not with the group), founder of the School of Jazz Studies at Howard University, the Blackbyrds is the outgrowth of his efforts to give his students practical experience. From this nightclub circuit OJT, the group went on to become one of the premiere aggregations of the past few years.

It is obvious at the outset that disco is in the hands of highly-trained, well-schooled performers versed in R&B, jazz and other pop mediums. A lot of disco is studio packaged, over-engineered tripe, but the Blackbyrds give it variety and style. Despite that locked-in disco beat, the group interlaces some interesting instrumentation and effects around it. The cuts have more of an improvisational tone than most disco. The band is instrument oriented; singing and lyrics are not their strong suit. Occasionally the vocalizing borders on the inane, the words on some tunes coming perilously close to high school advanced-composition levels. But let's face it, nobody writing disco music today is a frontrunner for a Pulitzer Prize in poetry. Motion is the medium here.

Joan Baez "Gulf Winds" (A&M SP-4603)--Sorry to relate that songwriting cannot be added to Joan's considerable talents as a pure singer, folk balladeer, interpreter of songs and highly competent guitarist.

This new offering, with all of the songs on it authored by her, gives ample proof of her shortcomings. "Diamonds and Rust" (her last album) held promise of some good compositions to come, but that promise seems to have been a musical piecrust--made to be broken. Her pitfall was in tackling one of the most difficult forms for any writer or poet or songwriter, the highly personalized autobiographical mode. The failure is that the songs are solely about her, they fail to touch that universality which make us relate to them. I can't see much of it will be relevant to anybody else's situation.

Melodically, most of the tunes are as even as Kansas and as exciting as daytime television. When the words fail to capture and hold you, then the melodies become more and more dronelike. She did pen some noteworthy lines, especially in the title tune but then she copped out and threw some unpolished bit of doggeral in to ruin it. I'm also getting a tad tired of her Dylan torch songs (the last album had several songs about him and numerous references to him). In Joan's case, the voice is mightier than the pen.

Various Artists "All This and World War II" (20th Century 2T522)--True Beatles believers will flip out over this double album featuring an ample serving of Lennon and McCartney evergreens. The album is the original sound track for the movie of the same title. Backing actual newsreel footage of the war, some 28 songs span a long and fertile creative period of the Liverpool lads. It demonstrates the versatility and adaptability of the Beatles music. Interpretations and renditions of their songs are done by such diverse performers as Elton John, Rod Stewart, Frankie Lane, Henry Gross, Tina Turner, and Leo Sayer. Sayer does an inspired job on "Let It Be", and Stewart and ELO's Jeff Lynne are exceptional on "Get Back" and "With a Little Help from My Friends", respectively.

Purists will argue that the Beatles are the best interpreters of their own music, but I think their memorial songs gain new vibrance and vitality through such cinematic and recording marriages. Some rabid music types take the position that the Beatles music had nearly as great a global impact as World War II.

Stanley Turrentine "The Man With the Sad Face" (Fantasy F-9519)--The veteran tenor sax man is, as usual, diligent and consistent and occasionally lustrous on his latest of five virtuoso albums. This is his solo effort as a producer, and he does a competent job. Some of the cuts feature larger orchestras and more panoramic productions than is common in the Sixties type, intimate club setting which was a staple for the jazz idiom for so many years. The bigger production number here is reminiscent of a Count Basie or Duke Ellington motif. This sets up a bit of competition between Turrentine and the larger groups and perhaps dulls the full impact of his considerable skills.

"Ligia", in which he is in the fore as a solo, affords him more of an opportunity for improvisational runs which are the hallmark of jazz. While he plays with great skill and control, he never really cuts loose until "Love Hangover"--a hot version of the recent Diana Ross hit. The vocal backups and synthesizer work add sock to the piece. Turrentine has been in the forefront of jazz for years, and this album shows little sign that he is about to relinquish his spot to anyone else. Score one more for Stanley.

The February 17th meeting began at 8:00 p.m. as scheduled. Due to a lack of a quorum (less than 2/3 of the members present), the members of S.A. suspended the bylaws of the constitution and proceeded with business. The general consensus of those present was that the role of an S.A. representative is to represent the students, and therefore, an lack of a quorum should not impede this role. As a result of suspending the rules, the members of S.A. were able to carry on as usual and address themselves with the business at hand.

The next meeting will be held on March 3rd at 8:00 p.m. in Lane Center 201. Everyone is welcome.

The members of S.A. would like to encourage you to attend our meetings. Everyone's views will be listened to.

The minutes, the S.A. Constitution, and a variety of other materials pertaining to student governments in general are available to you the student in the S.A. Office. Come in and ask.

Symposium Series

is Scheduled

A series of three symposia on current ethical issues will be held this semester by United Campus Ministry. The first will be held on Tuesday evening March 1 at 7 PM in the multi-purpose room of Lane Center. The present crisis in South Africa will be the focus of the presentation and discussion. On March 22, the topic will be Capital Punishment. In light of the recent execution, where are we headed? Is that the way we want to go? Then on April 18, a Monday evening, the final symposia will consider the impact World Hunger is having and will have on our life and our world.

The social and political crisis in South Africa will be considered in two ways.

Father Jack Ganley, a missionary who has spent many years working with liberation movements in Africa will describe the role of the church in South Africa. Should it take a stand? What does the future role of the church look like? Ted Lockwood, from the Washington Office in Africa, will reflect on the present political crisis and the role the U.S. government is taking. What are the future options?

The South Africa presentation will begin with a short fifteen minute film. Following the two presentations, the speakers will have time to question each other. The floor will then be open to discussion from those in attendance.

Light refreshments, coffee and tea will be served.

dents preferred older females is that they were embarrassed to talk to peers about their problems and viewed the peers as a threat.

Another possible reason is that an older person can better serve as a model in a counseling situation because he or she has "somewhat arrived" and may have gone through similar experiences in getting there. Dr. Settles noted. A third reason, he theorized, is that in his study, the older counselors had received human relations training and were more supportive.

According to the study results, as students' grade averages began to improve, "they seemed to do well with a peer ( young Black male ) counselor." They no longer perceived the peer as a threat, were more willing to accept help and, even though they were from a lower income group, seemed to do better with peer helpers who were middle class.

Ithaca, N.Y.-( I.P. )- President Dale R. Corson of Cornell University has established a committee to review the University's judicial system. He charged the committee to "review the current state of the University judicial system, to make an appraisal thereof, and to make any recommendations concerning changes that are deemed necessary."

President Corson said he established the committee because, during the past two or three years, "several problems have emerged which require study." He pointed to an April 22, 1975 report of the University Review Board identifying problems in the judicial system and, he said, "the Ky incident raised a whole new set of concerns."

On Dec. 9, 1975, Nguyen Cao Ky, the former vice president of Vietnam, left the Bailey Hall stage during heckling which followed remarks made from the floor by a member of the faculty. Among the questions raised by the Ky incident, Corson said, is that of "jurisdiction of the campus judicial system as opposed to faculty procedures when a member of the faculty is involved in the judicial action."

Chico, Calif.-( I.P. )- The School of Humanities and Fine Arts, California State University, will initiate this spring an alternative admission plan for students in the creative arts.

The concept was developed by Dr. Janet Turner of the art department. Dr. Turner is a nationally-known artist who specializes in bird and nature prints. In 1975, she was chosen to receive an "outstanding professor" award from the California State University and Colleges System. Dr. Turner wrote in her proposal, "This program for alternative admission criteria for the creative arts (art, creative writing, music, speech, and drama ) was developed because traditional academic grades and tests have been found incomplete in judging the abilities of the highly creative individual. Studies in psychology, psychobiology, and sociology indicate little relationship between academic performance and creative achievement."

Dr. Turner wrote further, "Torrance states there is even a conflict between scholarly achievement as usually defined and measured and creative activities. One cause of this conflict may be because most factors in creative development call for divergent thinking in contrast to convergent thinking stressed by most academic performance."

Guide Offers US Teachers Information on Teaching Abroad

Educators seeking a foreign teaching experience are advised to begin researching potential opportunities abroad well in advance of their target date for participation.

This and other helpful hints are included in the introduction to TEACHING ABROAD, recently published by the Institute of International Education. The book lists over 150 programs sponsored by governments, corporations, and organizations which provide funds and/or expenses each year for foreign teaching programs.

The suggestion for early research is based on several factors. The academic years of many foreign educational systems differ in length and dates from the U.S. system. Competition for many positions is keen, and extensive documentation is often required in such instances. The types of teaching abroad positions are so varied that individuals will need to make several decisions along the way. (Does he/she wish to teach U.S. children abroad or an international student body? Is geographic location important? Is salary the most important criterion?) And once the position has been obtained, participants will want time to prepare for life in the foreign country.

This book is a logical place to start such research. Each of the 150 program listings includes a description of the program, academic level and subject area preferred by the sponsoring agency, location, requirements ( including language capabilities), salary and fringe benefits, duration of program and conditions for renewal of contract, and specific application procedures.

Another section of the book suggests other opportunities for U.S. educators abroad, including short-term and part-time employment positions and student-teaching openings.

An extensive bibliography is divided into three parts: other publications on teaching abroad; directories and guides to employment abroad, higher education and educational systems abroad, and sources of general background information; and sources of information for U.S. citizens living and working abroad.

TEACHING ABROAD can be purchased for $4.00 (prepaid) from the Institute of International Education, Counseling and Correspondence Division, 809 United Nations Plaza, New York, New York 10017.

Guerrilla Tactics in the Job Market

The Student Artist & Lecture Series of Frostburg State College will be sponsoring the appearance of Tom Jackson, author of "The Hidden Job Market" on March 2, 1977 at 8:00 p.m. in the Multi-use Room of the Lane College Center. Mr. Jackson has spent years helping people get satisfying jobs. He has developed a very special program specifically for college students in a three-hour presentation. Phi Mu Alpha, West Virginia University's Honorary Music Fraternity, has announced it will sponsor its Second Annual Jazz Festival to be held at 7:30 p.m., Friday, March 18, at the Creative Arts Center's Concert Theatre.

Highlighting this year's program will be jazz trombonist Urbie Green. Green has played with many big jazz bands, such as Jan Savitt's orchestra, Gene Krupa and Woody Herman's band. While performing with Herman's Third Herd, Green received the Downbeat International Critics Award for "new star."

Green also became a recording artist, performing with greats such as Billie Holiday, Count Basie, Leonard Bernstein, Barbara Striesand, Burt Bacharach, Dizzie Gillispie, Louis Armstrong, and others. He also has many solo albums.

Green has done much playing in various places and also for nightclubs, television, radio, motion pictures, and at the White House for past Presidents.

Also featured on the program will be the WVU Trombone Ensemble under the direction of Richard E. Powell. This group will provide the back-up music for Urbie Green and will also play separately. The ensemble has played in various places - Quixipiac Jazz Festival in Connecticut, Notre Dame Jazz Festival, Washington, D.C., Florida, and most recently at Towson State College, Maryland, for the Eastern Trombone Workshop.

The West Virginia Wesleyan Jazz Ensemble will make a return performance under the direction of Dave Milburn. This group has performed abroad in Poland, and throughout various schools in West Virginia.

Concluding the evening of jazz will be WVU's Jazz Ensemble. Now under the direction of Randy Misamore, the group has provided entertainment for the scholarship fund concert at WVU and for the football scholarship banquet at Charleston, and most recently at it's own concert at the CAC.

Tickets for the festival are priced at $2.00 and may be purchased at O.B. Fawley Music Co., Morgantown; Richard E. Powell, Creative Arts Center, WVU; from any Phi Mu Alpha member or the ticket chairman: Bill Rumble, 141 Willowdale Road, Morgantown, W. Va. 26505. Group rates available upon request.

Sculpture Workshop Slated

On March 16 through 19, a sculpture workshop sponsored by the Artist Lecture Series and the Lane College Center will be held in the Fine Arts Building of Frostburg State College. Participants of this workshop will be instructed by the well-known artist, Ms. Joan Danzinger. Ms. Danzinger works in wire mesh, resin, reinforced fabric around figures, fibrous clay sands, paints with acrylics and then draws on the figures. The final product is a three dimensional painting which is at once lyrical, frightening and humorous. Her works which are fantasy-kind of half-man, half-animal, are on display regularly in the Henri and Renwick Galleries.

There will be an informational meeting on Tuesday evening, March 1, 1977 at 7:30 p.m. for all who think they may be interested in attending the workshop, what items a participant must bring, and schedules and sign up sheet for ALL who think they would like to attend. For additional information, contact Carol Pfeffer at 689-7741

Drama Production Cancelled

Because of the participation of The Night of the Iguana in the regional competition of the American College Theatre Festival, the Department of Speech and Theatre has had to cancel one of its plays from the 1976-1977 production schedule. The drama, Tango, will not be presented this season; and the musical comedy, Pal Joey originally scheduled for February 24, 25, and 26, will be moved to April 28, 29, and 30. Dr. Jack Vrieze, chairman of the Department of Speech and Theatre, expressed disappointment at having to eliminate the February show but noted that "the College and our students will benefit from the recent recognition brought to The Night of the Iguana."

Intramural Basketball Races

With about one-third of the intramural basketball season over with for the men, there are tight races in each of the seven divisions for play-off spots. Of the 48 teams in the program, seven teams still are in the undefeated category, with numerous teams having only 1 loss. In the American League the Wolf Pack is 4-0 followed closely by the F.H. Townies plus Two who are 3-0. Old Spice is leading the National League with a 3-0 mark. In the Eastern League it is the TKE Horseshoes (5-0) and the Left Nut (3-0) who are out in front; while in the Northern League ADXI carries a 4-0 record into this weeks games. The Premiums (4-0) lead all teams in the Western League, but in the Southern League there is a three-way tie with Cool & the Gang, Lost Planet Airman, and Sowers Hall all posting 3-1 marks. In the Border League there is another tie with the Trojans, M.S., and Troy State all owning 3-1 records.

As the season goes into the middle of the schedule games will be played whenever possible in order to complete the long schedule in March. All spectators and students are invited to attend the games and root for their favorite teams. The only request is to please obey the regulations of the P.E. Center.
