Housing Ordinance Introduced

by Lee Lofthus and

John Preisinger

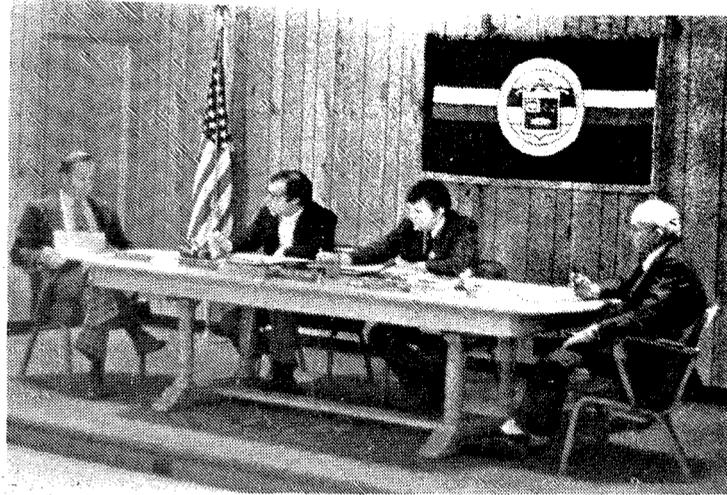

The latest revision of Frostburg's controversial "Rental Housing Ordinance" was introduced at the February 21, 1977 Council meeting, despite meeting heavy opposition from some councilmen.

Finance Commissioner John N. Bambacus moved to introduce the measure, but after considerable and heated debate, was unable to obtain a second from either of the two other councilmen present. Finally, Mayor David Linn seconded Bambacus' motion, a prerogative heretofore unexercised by the Mayor under the present city council.

The new rental ordinance must now sit for 45 days before the Mayor and Council vote to accept or reject the measure. Meanwhile, Frostburg State College was requested to write a brochure summarizing the major points of the new proposal.

T. William Preston, who has consistently been opposed to legislation of this nature, voiced his objections to the new ordinance saying, "this measure will place undue hardships on city property owners."

Bambacus, however, called Preston's objections "just another delaying tactic," going on to say "we've kicked this thing around long enough." Bambacus, who has long been in favor of a rental ordinance which would provide needed protection to city renters, particularly the elderly and college students, feared that this ordinance would be emasculated through compromise and delay.

Police Commissioner William Davis, a local real estate agent, complained he had not had time to familiarize himself with the ordinance prior to the meeting. He also said that he wanted to give his constituents time to see the measure before he voted on it.

Both Mayor Linn and Bambacus pointed out that it was announced at the February 7, 1977, meeting that the ordinance was to be introduced that night (Feb. 21, 1977). They also made clear that all residents of Frostburg would have 45 days to see the new rental proposal before any voting action could be initiated. The ordinance was then officially introduced by a 2-1 margin, with Preston casting the only dissenting vote.

Copies of the "Rental Housing Ordinance" are available at the Frostburg Municipal building.

New FSC Football Coach Announced

Dr. John E. Peterson, former assistant football coach and defensive coordinator at Westminster College in Salt Lake City, Utah, has been named head football coach at Frostburg State, it was announced at a news conference at the College yesterday.

Peterson's coaching at Westminster last year produced a defense which led the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference in least passes completed against (69) and interceptions (19). Additionally, his defensive unit closed with a second place ranking in scoring defense (16.1 points per game) and pass defense (102.1 yards per game).

The 28-year-old product of Eastern Michigan University boasts additional coaching experience which includes the position of assistant coach at Northern Illinois University from 1973 to 1975. He was a free agent tryout for the Chicago Bears of the NFL in 1973, and played defensive end for the Ypsilanti Vikings of the Midwest Professional Football League in 1969.

"My personal football coaching philosophy," Peterson says, "is based on four words: dedication, discipline, enthusiasm and communication . . . Successful football teams have never been formulated without these basic constituents . . . Today's coach must be a contemporary sports psychologist, sociologist, counselor, authoritarian, financial wizard, administrative organizer, strategist, and public relations expert. He must be able to meet situations diplomatically, intelligently and aggressively."

Dr. Peterson will also serve as an assistant professor of health and physical education.

PUBLIC WORKS JOB PROGRAM APPROVED

President Carter's public works job program was approved by the House on Thursday, February 23. This program will create about 600,000 jobs in the public works area, and will authorize the Economic Development Administration to select $4 billion worth of public works projects for funding.

UNIDENTIFIED FLU VIRUS SWEEPS AREA

A certain unidentifiable flu virus, which lasts for approximately three to four days, is sweeping this area and causing several schools to close down. One such school is Capon Bridge School in Hampshire County, W. Va. According to the Health Officer, the school was closed for several days when over one-fourth of the 465 students reported sick due to the flu.

The hardest hit school was the Columbia Street School in Cumberland, Md. They have reported that over one-third of its students were sick with this flu at one point last week.

The virus seems to hit sporadically and seems to be limited to young children and teenagers.

HUNT IS PAROLED FROM PRISON

Watergate Burglar, E. Howard Hunt, was released from Elgin Air Force Base, Florida on parole. He was previously convicted in 1972 of masterminding the Watergate breakin.

He left the prison around 4:00 a.m. Wednesday to avoid photographers and reporters. Mr. Hunt said that he will not make any kind of comment until the first week in March.

Mr. Hunt plans to start a new life of painting, writing suspense novels, and lecturing. His lawyer reports that he left for New York for "personal business."

DECISION ON WHITE DISCRIMINATION

The Supreme Court said that it will make a decision on special school admission programs that benefit blacks and other minority students illegally and discriminate against white

They feel that this fosters a sort of reverse discrimination and violates the rights of whites of equality under the law. This case is being viewed by several civil rights advocates as a test of the nation's commitment to minorities to achieve social and economic equality.

The reverse discrimination issue was brought before the Supreme Court two years ago, but no decision was reached. A decision is expected within the next two or three weeks.

A progress report on the State's desegregation efforts in public higher education will be presented at the next meeting of the State Board for Higher Education. Other items on the agenda include the Board's position on proposed legislation affecting higher education, critical issues in higher education, and new academic program proposals.

The meeting will be held on FRIDAY, MARCH 4th in the library of the University of Maryland Baltimore County

EDITORIAL

The Voice of Reason

The current version of Frostburg's rental housing ordinance, only a shadow of the original proposal, narrowly escaped the fate of similar past ordinances last Monday night when Mayor David Linn exercised his rarely-used voting power to second Councilman John Bambacus's motion to officially introduce the measure. This controversial piece of legislation, which has been compromised and diluted time and time again, has been desperately needed in this city for some time, but it is still opposed by some individuals who seem to represent other interests besides the need for consumer protection.

The ordinance calls for the implementation of minimal health and safety standards, and has enough built-in safety valves and waiver provisions that there is no real evidence that "undue hardship" will be placed on any landlord. And it is hoped that responsible landlords will absorb the nominal cost of conforming to the dictates of the new law.

There have been enough fires and other catastrophes in the recent past as a result of the absence of such legislation that everyone should be convinced as to the necessity of this ordinance. We can only hope that the Council reconsiders its traditional position on the matter when the measure comes up for approval at the end of the 45-day waiting period, and we urge the Council to vote for its acceptance.

Another Point of View

by John B. Wiseman

John Rodriguez's use of the term "reason" to describe his opening column is, I think, misapplied. We all know that John is a conservative which is, of course, a perfectly legitimate philosophy and point of view. Why parade under the banner of reason, when liberals, socialists and reactionaries can also claim possession of rational thought processes?

Several matters of content in the article also merit a response on philosophical and historical grounds. To begin with, he falsely attributes contemporary inflation solely to Lyndon Johnson's Great Society programs. Whatever one's opinion on the successes and/or failures of those federal social welfare efforts, it is inaccurate to single them out as the cause of "massive" inflation. The war in Vietnam, which eventually cost us thirty billion dollars a year, and Johnson's failure to call for a tax increase to pay for the military expenditure, was the major reason for accelerating prices. How quickly we forget Vietnam.

John also dislikes Carter's Cabinet. Neither am I terribly enamored of the group as a whole, but why label them all "incompetents?" Their previous status as the junior varsity from the Kennedy-Johnson administrations certainly violates Carter's campaign pledge for change, but the description of them as collectively unqualified betrays John's ideological leanings and lack of discriminating judgement.

As for John's scorn for Carter's political methodology because it draws on past precedents and is too democratic, much could be said. Allow me two points. While Carter's political communication devices contain some gimmickry and may represent the form of reform rather than its substance, there is nothing wrong with borrowing effective practices from the past. If we preclude historical experience as a guide to the present and future, we cripple ourselves unnecessarily. Secondly, I, for one, prefer a President who attempts to determine the popular will before he acts to a President who simply leads us. This does not rule out his responsibility to persuade and educate us when the public mood fails to conform to the public interest. It does mean an end to the imperial presidency, and I say bravo to that.

by John Rodriguez

Apartheid, the policy of legally endorsed discrimination that exists in the nation of Rhodesia and South Africa, is a policy repugnant to many Americans of good conscience. The United States is not alone in its anger towards this policy and all over the world wherever public forums are available, the practices of these governments have been under strong internal pressure to take a more active role in aiding the black population of both Rhodesia and South Africa to gain the goal of Majority Rule. The United States, up until 1974, supported a United Nations resolution boycotting the purchasing of Rhodesian chrome. Many Americans want the United States to take a much stronger stand on this issue and try to forcibly speed up the move to black majority rule. While agreeing in principle with the idea of majority rule, this writer would like to seriously question the idea of the United States using its power to decide this question as we wish it to be decided.

The position of the Carter Administration on the Rhodesian and South African situation is quite clear. Carter has stated that he is in favor of the majority gaining the rights as quickly as possible. Andrew Young, newly appointed United States Ambassador to the United Nations, has also been highly critical of what he has categorized as the "immoral regimes" in both of these nations.

We have no more intention of pushing four million white Rhodesians and South Africans into the sea than we have to push four million Israelis into the sea.

While Young's statement somewhat mollifies the threat to the white minority of these nations, it still does not alter the fact that we are dictating our views to the South Africans and Rhodesians, in effect imposing our will upon them.

There are serious problems with the United States acting in this manner. The United States is attempting to act as the Moral Conscience of the world and thus we are placed in a position of Godhood. The phrase "world policeman" immediately comes to mind, the United States acting as the arbiter of all the world's problems and therefore placing ourselves in a superior position vis a vis those nations we deal with. We have seen the difficulties in playing big brother in our own hemisphere, with many Latin American nations resenting the United States for this very policy. In South Africa and Rhodesia, there are elected governments, both the Ian Smith regime in Rhodesia and the John Vorster regime in South Africa, whether we happen to agree with their policies or not. The attempts of the Carter administration to politically destabilize these governments is as reprehensible as attempts to assassinate Castro. We can gain a valuable lesson from the efforts of Ivor Richards, a British diplomat who tried to negotiate a gradual process of change over to majority rule. Henry Kissinger also tried to pressure the Ian Smith regime into accepting the Smith compromise. The result of all of this was a rejection of the entire plan by Rhodesia and the adopting of a more hard line stance. However, in both South Africa and Rhodesia, citizens have received training in pistol firing in order to protect themselves from guerilla raids, a sign that the desire to fight is becoming more evident in the white minority. Any further attempts to push majority rule down the throats of the Rhodesians and the South Africans will just stiffen this resistance. Thus, we have the paradox of diplomacy at least in the form it is being used at present, increasing tensions rather than decreasing them.

There are a few in this country who advocate direct military intervention on the part of this government in order to bring the "Proper Order" to Southern Africa. It is quite ironic that some of the same voices who raised the cry of peace in 1967 have become the sabre rattlers of 1977. It seems that a moral war is a war that is one's fulfillment of his or her formal ideology. It is nice to know that hypocrisy is still alive and well. It may seem rather unlikely that U.S. combat troops will be employed in Southern Africa but there was also little likelihood of U.S. involvement in South East Asia in the early 19-60's. Wars tend to bridge the gap of probability quite easily. Our military leaders have already warned us of the folly of fighting there, but in April of 1961, Douglas MacArthur advised John Kennedy not to fight land wars in Asia. The more pressure there is to force a change in this critical area of the world, the more likely armed warfare will become and also the greater the chance of the U.S. becoming involved. Involved in a war that would the Vietnam of the late 70's and 80's. Lest any of us forget the costs of Vietnam: riots, the Chicago Convention, Kent State, Jackson State, the Plumbers, and the origin of Watergate all grew in the dissension of the Viet Nam war. Do we want to relive the agony just to prove a point in morality? The South Africans and Rhodesians would resist our attempts to dictate their moral values at bombpoint. The United States from 1619 to 1865 actively practiced its own legal form of "Apartheid". From 1865 until recently, we spoke equality and informally practiced "apartheid." However, we have reacted if the British or French or Germans or Russians had tried diplomatic and/or military pressure to force America to become a ra-

News From the Campus VA Rep

As Maryland's taxpayers ponder their federal income tax returns, the Veterans Administration reminds recipients of veterans benefits that these payments generally are exempt from taxation.

Major tax-exempt VA benefits are compensation, pension and educational assistance. The latter includes subsistence payments to vocational rehabilitation trainees. These monthly payments need not be reported on federal income tax returns, according to VA Regional Director, Mr. John W. Rue.

Also exempt are VA grants to military service-disabled veterans for specially adapted homes and automobiles and clothing allowances paid to service-disabled veterans whose usage of prosthetic or orthopedic appliances results in undue wear and tear on clothing.

Dividends and proceeds from government life insurance policies are also exempt from federal income tax, but the proceeds are subject to federal estate tax, Mr. Rue explained.

Interest accrued on government life insurance dividends left on deposit or credit with the VA is not exempt and must be reported on federal income tax returns, Mr. Rue added.

A new grade appeal system is going to be voted on at the next faculty assembly meeting in four weeks. The Student Association would like to have your reactions to this proposed system. Please drop us a note or call 4303.

The Proposed Grade Appeal System

Time Limitation: If a student wishes to dispute a final course grade he or she should proceed in the following order and initiate steps 1 and 2 so that in the rare necessity of initiating step 3, the hearing may be held within the first month in the next regular semester. If the student has not initiated step 3 by the end of the first month of the next regular semester, such inaction shall constitute acceptance by the student of the assigned grade.

Step 1. Student meets with the instructor of the course for the purpose of re-evaluating work done, grades earned, course objectives, requirements and standards, etc. If this discussion satisfactorily resolves the grievance, the procedure stops at this point. If this discussion does not resolve the student's complaint, the student may initiate step 2 or, in the case that the instructor is the department head, step 3.

Step 2. Student meets with the instructor's department head, who will consult with the instructor and the student together and attempt to mediate the disagreement. If this mediation resolves the grievance, the procedure stops at this point. If such mediation does not resolve the student's complaint, the student may initiate step 3.

Step 3. If step 2 does not resolve the student's grievance, or if the instructor involved is the department head, the student shall request in writing that the department form a committee to review the grievance. This committee shall be composed of at least three other members of the department or, in the case of a department too small to create such a committee, additional advisory members from other departments selected from faculty with appropriate academic backgrounds. This group will hear the grievance, consulting with student and faculty member involved and will render an opinion. It is presumed that in nearly every case this step would resolve the matter. In those very rare instances where the student feels aggrieved still, he may proceed to step 4 by submitting, in writing, his grievance to the Dean of the College. Cases in which the dispute centers on matters clearly within the instructor's sphere of academic judgement, such as choice of methods, criteria, and standards of evaluation, will not be referred to step 4. If grounds that the student's grade may have been determined in either 1) a discriminatory manner or 2) a capricious or arbitrary manner, then step 4 may be initiated.

CLARIFICATION: 1) A grade has been assigned in a discriminatory manner when the academic standards used to determine grades were not applied equally to all undergraduate students and/or equally to all graduate students within the section. Discrimination is understood as prejudice on the basis of such factors as race, sex, national origin, appearance, personal lifestyle, personal mannerisms, creed, or other personal beliefs. 2) A grade has been assigned in an arbitrary or capricious manner in cases such as the following: a) The assigned grade was influenced by non-academic factors such as the student's non-performance of personal services or favors for the faculty member. b) The assigned grade was determined by methods and standards other than those announced by the instructor as governing the course. c) The assigned grade was the result of a careless or otherwise insufficient evaluation of the student's work.

Astrology and Romance?

by Dr. Bob Doyle

Can astrology be used to determine compatibility and marital prospects? Although today astrology is under heavy fire from scientists (especially astronomers) and statisticians, the ancient art seems to be flourishing as never before. Synastry is the branch of astrology that deals with the compatibility of couples. In its simplest form, synastry is based only on the sun signs of the two people involved. The sun sign indicates the sign of the Zodiac that the sun was in when an individual was born. Each sign has a characteristic element - there are four. The signs associated with fire are Aries, Leo and Sagittarius. For air, the signs are Gemini, Libra and Aquarius. The 'earthy' signs (earth for element) are Taurus, Virgo and Capricorn. The 'watery' signs are Cancer, Scorpio and Pisces. According to Synastry, air and fire signs are compatible as well as water and earth signs. But if a couple seems to have incompatible sun signs, they shouldn't despair; other signs should be looked at. An important but little known sign is the ascending sign - the sign of the Zodiac on the eastern horizon at birth. Unlike the sun sign, this depends on the hour of birth as well as the birth date. Other signs used in synastry include the mid-heaven (sign crossing the north-south meridian at birth) and the cusp of the seventh house (sign 30 degrees from the western horizon along the Zodiac). The determination of these signs is somewhat involved, requiring a fair knowledge of astrology and special astrology tables. But fortunately, this month the two resident astrologers in the Descriptive Astronomy class, Carolyn and Sophie, are offering their services free of charge prior to each Tuesday evening planetarium program in Tawes Hall. Synastry computations begin at 7:15 p.m. After filling out a simple questionnaire, a couple will be able to find out their astrological compatibility after the program. This month's planetarium program is on this very subject - "The Stars and Romance". Basic western astrology will be covered as well as Chinese astrology. The program will also be presented on Sundays at 2:30 p.m. There is no admission, no reservations needed and plenty of comfortable seats if you come 5-10 minutes early.

cially tolerant society. Would we have bowed to world pressure and changed our policies or would we have screamed "imperialism" at the top of our voices and used every means available to resist this "foreign intrusion into our domestic affairs." Indeed, the issuance of the Monroe Doctrine in 1823 showed our desire to be sovereign and independent of the dictates of such pressures. Can we expect the South Africans and Rhodesians to do any less?

The issue at stake is the right of nations to decide their own futures and their own policies. There are indeed changes that need to be made in South Africa and Rhodesia, but these changes must be made by the parties concerned and must be an expression of their national will. We have learned that we can't dictate morality at home, it is time to learn that morality cannot be negotiated diplomatically.

"Women in the Arts"

The Frostburg State College Fine Arts Gallery, the Lane College Center and Student Artist Series are co-sponsoring a Women's Awareness program during the month of March and would like to invite everyone to participate.

The first event, an exhibition of art work by women will be on display from March 6 to 24. Calling themselves "Women of ARC" these women have joined to form this group whose name means Artists, Residents of Chicago. It is a membership governed feminist gallery organized to provide a vehicle for women artists to work together for mutual support and cooperation, and to enable them by their combined efforts to assume a more significant role than has been possible in the past. ARC is primarily dedicated to women's art to encourage them to make their special contribution to art. The wide range of media exhibited exemplified the diversified background of the ARC members. The public is invited and hours are Monday through Thursday, 1-5 p.m. and Sunday 2-5 p.m.

Cathy Conway Wilkin and Kathryn Whitford Pursley will display paintings at the Lane College Center during the month of March.

Cathy Conway Wilkin received her M.F.A. from Kent State University, Ohio and is currently an instructor at Northern Virginia Community College. "The intent of my paintings is to portray a past experience using a kaleidoscopic, color statement. I feel that by laying color upon color in a decorative pattern, I am exploiting the two dimensional quality of the canvas to procedure the most intense color effect. Because the experience was one of unusual human interactions, I try to create a fantasy world of pattern and color to make more palatable the situation."

Kathryn Whitford Pursley received her M.A. in painting from Kent State and is an instructor at Frostburg State College. "My paintings are personal and subjective. I don't have any preconceived visual image in mind when I begin a painting. I cannot predict its eventual "look" because it is usually not created on a theme. The organization of my work may simply emerge in the actual process of creation, the total form taking shape only as I work on it. I am looking inward, not outward.

Painting for me is self-discovery."

On March 16-19, there will be a sculpture workshop conducted by Joan Danziger, a prominent Washington, D.C. artist-sculptor. She will instruct and assist participants in the construction of a free standing sculpture. In the four days of this workshop the participants will use wire mesh, acrylic polymer, gesso, paint, and glue to create their works. The workshop will be open to all students.

There will be a slide lecture and discussion on Thursday evening, March 17, at 7:30 p.m. in room 201 of the Lane College Center. An artist-sculptor, who is known to the college and local people for her hanging sculpture entitled "Aerial Conjunction", Ms. Danziger works with wire mesh, resin, acrylic, paint, and polymer, reinforced fabric, fiberous clay sands and inks. Ms. Danziger's finished products are fantasy animal-man like three dimensional painting-sculptures. Her works are regularly on display at the Henri and Renwick Galleries, in Washington, D.C. The public is cordially invited to attend this slide lecture and presentation.

Night of the Iguana Honored

The Frostburg State College production of Tennessee Williams' drama, The Night of the Iguana, was cited for excellence in scene design and technical direction at the regional American College Theatre Festival held at Essex Community College, February 17-20.

These awards are presented to the College judged as having the outstanding scene design and the most technical proficiency.

Barry Kyle, director with London's Royal Shakespeare Company and guest critic for the Festival, termed the stage set "smashing." This is the second time that Edward Thompson, designer and technical director at Frostburg State College, has received the honor for set design at the American College Theatre Festival.

Previously this award was given to Thompson for the 1975 production of Awake and Sing. It is also the second time in three years that Frostburg productions have been honored with an invitation to participate in the Festival.

The original production of The Night of the Iguana, presented October 7, 8, and 9, was selected by a panel of regional evaluators to appear at the regional Festival where the national committee considers the production for appearance at the Kennedy Center. At the Festival, The Night of the Iguana, directed by Dr. David R. Press, received an award for excellence in production. Dr. Press also directed the production of Awake and Sing.

Eric Trumball, a theatre major at Frostburg State College, received an award for outstanding contribution to the Festival. Trumball played the role of Rev. T. Lawrence Shannon in the production.

The annual Festival includes colleges and universities from Delaware, Maryland, and the District of Columbia.

Frostburg State College is only the second school from this Mid-Atlantic region to have been invited to appear twice in the last three years.

have potential eligibility for increased medical care from the VA as a result of recently expanded benefits included in the Veterans Omnibus Health Care Act of 1976.

Included in the new law was extension of outpatient care for treatment of any medical condition to veterans with 50 percent or more service-connected disabilities. Previously, outpatient treatment for any condition was limited to veterans with service disabilities rate at 80 percent or higher.

There are about 320,000 veterans nationwide rated at 50 through 70 percent on VA compensation rolls, according to VA Regional Director, Mr. John W. Rue. Each of these veterans will receive a letter advising him of the new outpatient eligibility.

Another 115,000 permanently and totally disabled veterans will receive letters from the VA explaining expansion of the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Veterans Administration.

Since 1973, CHAMPVA benefits have been available to a spouse or child of a veteran who died as a result of service-connected causes.

Previously, CHAMPVA

benefits were not continued for the spouse and child if the veteran's death was attributed to nonservice-connected causes.

The 1976 medical omnibus act continues CHAMPVA benefits for these survivors, if the veteran was totally and permanently disabled due to military service at the time of his death.

There is no action required by the service-disabled veteran who is totally and permanently disabled, Mr. Rue explained.

If the spouse and children have not made application for CHAMPVA benefits, they may do so at their convenience at any VA medical facility, he added. This can be done before or after the veterans death.

Complete information on all VA medical benefits can be obtained from any VA office or hospital or from the major veterans organizations.

Step 4. The Dean of the College shall select two faculty members whose academic competence will allow them to assess knowledgeably and advise the Dean in the case at hand. The Dean will call together the instructor, the department head, the student, and the selected faculty member advisors for a hearing. The student, and the instructor may call witnesses, submit other evidence, cross examine and have representation from the college community. At the conclusion of the hearing, the Dean shall consult with the advisory panel for its opinion on the case. The Dean will then render an opinion, either in support of the original grade or in support of a grade change. If the Dean recommends a grade change and the instructor still refuses to change the grade, the Dean will vacate and replace the grade in question. In deciding whether the circumstances justify requiring the alteration of a grade, the Dean shall determine whether the student grievant has shown evidence sufficient to indicate that the grade in question was discriminatorily, arbitrarily, or capriciously conferred. If a new grade is assigned by the Dean, it shall be determined in consultation with the advisory panel upon the basis of the materials presented in the case.

Coffeehouse Success

by Robin Ferguson

And what did you do this past Friday night, February 25th? If your answer did not include a visit to the CCB Coffeehouse, you missed a terrific sampling of the talent here at Frostburg State.

The crowd was a large one, an over-capacity one for sure. By their reactions, everyone enjoyed themselves (and for no admission charge either).

The opening entertainment was a duet with Mark Grimes and Maggie Kern accompanying him on her flute. Next was Bruce Halpin and Bruce Jones, another duet, singing and playing into the hearts of the crowd. To top the night off, Danny Shemer and Randi Berlinger gave an equally great performance. As if that is not enough, intermission time was filled in by Frosty Snowflake (Gary Ellis). What an enjoyable evening!

Refreshments included free coffee and tea, and cookies for a mere 5¢ each.

But this article would not be complete without a heart-felt thanks and appreciation going out to those special people who are behind such a success, namely the coffeehouse. Bruce Halpin, Andi Stein, and Rebecca Silverman are the people responsible for allowing the student body to enjoy themselves at this College Center Board sponsored event. Auditioning, reserving rooms, ordering refreshments, publicity, setting up, and cleaning up are all carefully and thoroughly planned and carried out by these students who are not paid yet work very hard. So let's give credit where it is due. Hats off and thanks to Bruce, Andi, and Rebecca for being the backbone of such a terrific and successful evening.

Bobcat Gymnasts Peak Against Montgomery

by Ralph Perrey

The Frostburg men's gymnastic team, coming off a big win against Montgomery College, will challenge William & Mary and The Citadel this weekend in a meet that promises to be one of the year's toughest. Prior to the meet with Montgomery the 'Cats dispatched the University of Virginia in their final home meet of the season. Frostburg enters Saturday's meet with a record of 4 wins and 3 losses.

The Montgomery meet saw the 'Cats score 139.55 points to their opponents' 117.85. Coach Fred Surgent, who has built men's gymnastics up to its present status in his 10 year tenure at FSC, was extremely pleased with the win. "The team did a fantastic job," he said, "This was the finest performance by a Bobcat gymnastic team in the 10 years that I've been coach. Everyone was emotionally up for this meet and came through with personal best performances."

All four Bobcat all-arounder performers recorded their highest tallies--Jeff Mallery, 34.1; Dave Gelman, 28.75; Jim Stokes, 27.3; and Matt Stevenson, 22.95. Surgent also pointed out the outstanding efforts on each piece of apparatus. Mallery, the team's co-captain along with Jim Stokes, was especially impressive on rings (7.35) and vaulting (7.85); Stokes hit highs of 7.75 on pommel horse, an event in which he has already qualified for the nationals, and 6.1 on the parallel bars. Gelman, the third Bobcat senior, added to his strong all-around showing with a 7.55 score in floor exercise and a 5.7 on the high bar.

The team's 119.6 to 110.2 victory over Virginia saw fewer spectacular scores but nonetheless reflected a total team effort on the Bobcats' part. Mallery led the team's all-arounders with a 29.4 followed by Gelman with 20.95, Stevenson at 18.05, and Greg Bonadies with 19.25. Fine individual performances came from rings specialist Jon Newman (6.5), Dwight Mackel on the high bar (5.15), and all six competitors entered in vaulting--Justin McCarty (7.65), Stevenson (7.85), Stokes (7.65), Mallery (6.3), Bonadies (7.75), and Gelman (7.95).

The Bobcats have two meets remaining before the March 5-6 NAIA Nationals in Montana, and the team is apparently hitting its stride just in time. "We've gaining back some of the momentum and confidence we had before the Christmas holidays and the meet postponements necessitated because of the water problem in the city," commented Surgent. If the 'Cats continue their solid performances of late, it seems safe to say that Stokes won't be the only Bobcat gymnast in Montana this March.

Women's Basketball

Frostburg's Women's Basketball Team evened its record at 10 and 10 Friday night with their third win in a row beating Shepard College 79 to 36. The total team effort saw every Bobkitten scoring with five players hitting double figures. Leading scorer was Patty Palmer with 18 points as she went 8 for 10 from the floor and 2 for 2 from the foul line. Leading rebounder was captain Debbie Slongi with 12, followed by Adeline Hubbard with 9, Patty Palmer with 8, and Sylvia Lee with 7. The team had 23 assists with Alongi and Palmer with 6, and Connie Leonard with 5.

The Bobkittens play UMBC Saturday away and wrap up the regular season home Sunday against Mt. St. Mary's. The Bobkittens are hopeful of winning both games to finish the season with a 12-10 record and carry a 5 game winning streak into the state tournament at Bowie State College March 3-5.
