

From the New England Palladium.
 Extract from a letter dated Paris, 7th April, 1814.

What a distressful thing it is that we are the only nation now at war, when we ought to have been the only one to avoid it! It was the work of the tyrant. I was told by a Prince that our public virtue was a phantom, and our government a riddle. That our ruin, (the war) was bought at the small expense of a million. This is certain, that a party, the real enemies of our country, did vote for the war, and it is for them to render an account to posterity and to the present generation of the motives and principles of action in that horrid deed. Our government was despised by the tyrant, because he found us without virtue and without character, and he never even deigned to answer to the demand of restitution of the hundreds of cargoes unjustly taken from us. England will certainly render none of hers, nor the Bourbons the shelt of Buonaparte; and it is thus, that our administration have sacrificed the honour and fortune of our country."

Extract from a letter dated Paris, April 30th, 1814.

"I see by this morning's paper that British transports have arrived at Bonriex to take on board 25,000 old troops for the U. States. Great-Britain thinks we do not wish for or mean to effect peace by the negotiation at Gottenburg, since a CLAY, the most active for the war, is one of our ministers, and as RUSSELL, was, in the time of the Directorial government, clerk to Henry Johnson, a famous privateeraman against American ships, he has little more esteem than Clay. How is it possible to send such men? In all diplomatic nominations the men ought to be adapted to the object. In the time of Catherine of Russia, every nation in Europe took particular care to send the handsomest men to that court—to France one always chose the most adroit and cunning agents; but to send to Gottenburg men who have calumniated Great Britain, who have expressed in terms little measured, their hatred to that government, is an imprudence that we only could commit.

"Here, the appointment must be changed.—A man who was in favour of the Buonaparte government cannot stay here with any prospect of success; and such has been the attachment shown by the present minister to that monster, and the foolish idea that he was all powerful, that about the 20th March, he said, at his table, before eight persons, that the Emperor of Austria and Russia, and the King of Prussia, would be brought prisoners to Paris in a few days! The event that has taken place was foreseen by every thinking man, from the day the coalesced powers put their feet on French ground; and that, not only from their immense power, but from the general dissatisfaction in France.

"Some of the old revolutionary stock should be sent out to this court; or if they no longer exist Rufus King.

"Mr. Crawford dined a few days ago in company with Lord Castlereagh, who said, if an universal peace did not take place, it would not be the fault of G. Britain. Mr. Crawford did not reply to that, nor speak a word during all the dinner.

"But what is our country to do against the power of Great-Britain, who, having no enemy but us, will destroy our towns, our commerce, and our shipping? Is there no spirit left in our countrymen to chase from the helm and administration of government, men who have brought us into such a state of ruin? There appears no cause of war at present, for our entry into the ports where British ships are admitted, is the entry to all the world; the press of money will be no longer exercised, since Great-Britain will discharge at least 100,000 sailors, and probably for 20 years will not be in want of them again. The liberty of the seas will be no longer contested, &c. &c. prices general no prohibitions or blockade can exist, nor question of neutrality in any nation.

"We must renounce all claims for captured property, and the excess of Buonaparte at Milan and Berlin, because we declared war; and this is not one of the least complaints against the Madisonian administration. The fact is, the adventurer being destroyed—the phantom of power and glory, on which our edification was believed to find support, they are now fall with him. His fall has much to do with us, and if a fresh coalition be destroyed, Generosity and magnanimity are the order of the day. Every nation will wish, the other how to distinguish herself by sacrifice and renunciation of rights—and should our distracted government not be inspired with that humility, which our situation demands—we shall be utterly ruined."

During the last session of our state legislature, a bill originated in the senate for building a certain number of barges, at the state's expense, for the protection, as was said, of those points along the shores of the Chesapeake which had been left undefended by the general government. This met the fate it deserved in the lower house, and was rejected after a very little debate. It seemed in some to occasion much displeasure, but, independent of the expense, we have recently learnt from Barney's flotilla, how far they are calculated to effect the object for which they were intended. Few depredations had been committed by the enemy in the neighbourhood of the Patuxent until Commodore Barney had incautiously placed himself in that river, and instead of affording either protection or security to the property of individuals, he has been the cause of its destruction. Many industrious families, through the means of this flotilla, which was to drive the enemy from our bay, or at all events to protect our citizens in the undisturbed quiet of their various occupations, as well as their property, have been lighted from their homes by the blaze of their dwellings, and compelled to see the hard-earnings of their industry seized and carried away by an enemy. At the very moment it was communicated to our rulers that this little bantling force had gotten itself entrapped in a situation which required some aid from them for its protection, orders were issued to a detachment of troops, which for some time previous had been lying idle in the metropolis, to march for the frontiers, leaving the state, and the flotilla, to take care of themselves. After a time, however, a few troops were collected, but not sufficient to check that depredatory spirit with which the enemy entered the river. This is another instance to show how much disposed our president is to protect individuals along the sea-board, when he has in view such mighty objects as the conquest of Canada. Would our citizens but bestow their serious reflection on this subject, we should then expect to see them withdrawing their confidence from a set of men, who had rashly plunged them into a war, and then left them to struggle against its adverse current. Error must ultimately give place to truth, and sophistry be vanquished by the superior force of reason and argument. There is a point beyond which the forbearance of virtuous but misguided men cannot go; this crisis we believe is rapidly approaching. They have seen that they have been mocked and abused by the very men they had placed in authority; and will they submit to such degradation when they hold in their own hands a remedy for all their evils?

... We have heard much of British inhumanity and outrage at Hampton and Havre-de-Grace, but an instance of barbarity more unfavourable than that of McClure, can scarcely be found in the history of the present war.

After appeals had been repeatedly made to the patriotism and cordiality of the nation to induce it generally to embark in a contest from which humanity shrinks, the next resort was to excite a general indignation, by leaving the dwellings of citizens, along the frontier to certain destruction.—After a description of the scene at Newark, it becomes us to speak cautiously of the ferocity of our enemy. That there are many among us who would rejoice at the destruction of towns and villages by the enemy, along our frontiers, inasmuch as it would have a tendency to produce a general thirst for revenge, we have always believed, and therefore we suspect it is that so trifling preparations have been made for their defence, while retaliation has in so many different ways been courted.

For the Maryland Gazette.

An attempt has recently been made in the Baltimore American, (and the National Intelligencer has given currency to the slander,) to throw an odium on the executive of Maryland, by drawing an invidious comparison "between the government of Virginia, and the government of Maryland, in respect to their preparations to meet the enemy." After repeating with exultation, the general orders of the governor of Virginia, to twenty regiments of militia "to hold themselves in readiness to march, &c." the writer exclaims "yet we do not hear of one step of our executive to call out the militia, nor of one effort to assemble the posse comitatus to resist the enemy in any one way, or at any given point! we hear of no spirited or military preparations to meet and repel the invaders, but we hear of preivish complaints against the general government, and of pitiful applications for assistance from Washington and Baltimore."

Although the character of our commander in chief for patriotism, and a vigilant attention to his duty, is so firmly established with the respectable men of each political sect who know him, as to render any explanation of his conduct unnecessary, it may yet be proper to detail a few plain facts, as connected with our militia system, and its recent operations, for the satisfaction of sundry well-disposed citizens, who may not be in possession of the requisite information on the subject. The military establishment of Maryland consists of three grand divisions, under the controul of Major-Generals, each containing four brigades; the 4th, 5th, 7th, and 8th brigades, are attached to the first division, embracing the counties of Prince-George's, Montgomery, St. Mary's, Charles, Calvert, Anne-Arundel, & the lower part of Frederick; Harford, and the eight counties on the eastern shore, form the second division; and the third division includes Allegany, Washington, Baltimore town and county, and the upper part of Frederick. By the late militia law it is enacted, "that in case of invasion, or threatened invasion, of any part of the state, a major-general, brigadier-general or commanding officer of a regiment or battalion, extra battalion, or squadron, shall have full power to order out the militia, or any part thereof, belonging to their respective districts, where the threatened invasion may be." In virtue of this provision, Colonel Taney, on the appearance of the enemy in the Patuxent, ordered out his regiment, comprising the whole of Calvert county; and on information being given to the commander in chief, a detachment of three companies were ordered from Prince-Arundel. Gen. West of the fourth brigade, was also directed to furnish whatever number of men the colonel might deem adequate for his defence; arms and ammunition were expedited to the various military posts that required these articles; and orders were issued to Generals Bar-rick and Williams, commanding the 7th & 8th brigades, to hold half their brigades in readiness, to march at a moment's warning. In addition to these preparations for defence, Gen. Philip Stuart, who commands the 5th brigade, had actually taken the field, and possessed a discretionary power to order out the entire population of St. Mary's and Charles counties. Here then we see two whole brigades and a moiety of the other two, which constitute the first military division, comprehending twelve regiments, either in arms

... We are prepared to be so on the shores of the Chesapeake. We recollect too that the third division was under a requisition of the general government to furnish a quota of 3000 men for the defence of Baltimore; and advert to the geographical situation of the counties composing the second division, bordering generally on the waters of the Chesapeake, and its tributary rivers, and consequently liable to the incursions of the enemy, which circumstance rendered it impracticable to make a draft from them, it must at once be acknowledged, by every dispassionate man, that the whole disposable force of Maryland has been in requisition, and that her exertions, a comparative view being taken of the extent, population and physical strength of the state, have considerably exceeded those of Virginia.

There is, indeed, one assertion contained in the paragraph referred to, the truth of which we are disposed to acknowledge; the writer says, "we hear of no spirited preparation to meet and repel the invaders." No—and for the honour of our state it is to be hoped we never shall. Our country has been already too much degraded by empty threats and vain-glorious boasting; they have procured for her the ridicule and disdain of foreign nations, and raised the blush of manly shame on the cheeks of every honourable American. From the merited contempt which such conduct inspires, Maryland at least will, under the guidance of her present chief magistrate, be exempt; he was the soldier, and continues to be the disciple of Washington; he does not like a Smyth, a Hull, or a Madison, issue a proclamation when action is necessary; he performs his duty efficiently, though silently; and although he may not alarm the enemy by the harshness of his epithets, he will obtain for the citizens, by the vigour of his measures, that security, which is withheld from them by those who are bound to afford it.

As to "making applications to Baltimore and Washington for assistance," the assertion is not true with respect to the former, and it was perfectly correct in our Executive to apply for it to the latter. Had the government granted it with promptitude and effect, and instead of sending the regular force to the attack of Canada, had employed it to repel the enemy from our own shores, the citizens of the exposed counties (their corn fields and harvests having been necessarily abandoned) would not at this time have cause to dread an approaching scarcity of the articles of life; long will the inhabitants on the Patuxent deplore the flotilla system, and hold the memory of its conductors in detestation.

A MARYLANDER.

We understand that the Marshal of this District, has received orders to release all retaliatory prisoners of war, and that it has accordingly been done. They are now to be considered only as ordinary prisoners of war. [Bal. Paper.]

GAZETTE, INTELLIGENCER.

FRIDAY, JULY 21, 1814.

GAZETTE, EXTRA.

TUESDAY NIGHT, JULY 19, 1814.

We hasten to lay before our Readers the following Important Intelligence.

IMPORTANT.

Portsmouth, N. H. July 14.

DEAR SIR,

The eastern stage has just arrived. I have conversed with a passenger who left St. Johns a few days ago. He states, that a fleet had lately arrived at Halifax with 12,000 troops, and brought a messenger with despatches to the Governor of Canada.

The messenger states, that Commissioners on the part of our government and his, had met, and that the general opinion was in England that a speedy peace would be concluded. He said that he was in his opinion, bearer of an Armistice. Mail Stage is waiting.

Your's in haste,

C. BAKER.

P.S. I have broken open my letter to say, that a Frigate has arrived at Halifax, with a messenger, since the arrival of the troops.

From the Boston Palladium of 15th July.

The following letter was received by last night's eastern stage.

"I have this moment conversed with a gentleman from Eastport.— He states, that a Frigate arrived on the 1st of July about 20 days from England, bringing accounts that our commissioners had been met at Gottenburg by those appointed by Great Britain; that a gentleman came out in the frigate with despatches for Quebec, which were said and believed to contain accounts of the conclusion of an ARMISTICE between this Country and England.— That this gentleman left Halifax for Quebec in an hour after his arrival; and that it was confidently expected that PEACE would take place."

The gentleman from Eastport who communicated the above information, arrived in town last night, and agrees in the correctness of the statement. He left Eastport on the 7th instant, when no Halifax papers had been received sufficiently late to furnish the news, but a number of letters came for this place, the contents of which may give some further information on this subject.

The express from Canada had passed through St. John's, where the messenger repeated that his news was pacific, and his belief that a treaty of peace had been signed by that time.

Transports had arrived at Halifax from France, with about 12,000 troops of Wellington's army; but this was not considered decisive proof of an intention to persevere in the war, as it was understood Great-Britain intended to keep up large peace establishments in her colonies.

As some of these ships were captured by boats, and others by prizes, my officers and men had several opportunities of shewing their gallantry.

The Rose and Carlton were given up to the prisoners; the Hector, Catharine and Montezuma, I sent to Valparaiso, where they were laid up; the Policy, Georgians and New Zealander, I sent for America; the Greenwich I kept as a store ship, to contain the stores of my other prizes, necessary for us; and the Atlantic, now called the Essex Junior, I equipped with twenty guns, and gave command of her to lieutenant Downes.

Lieut. Downes had conveyed the prizes to Valparaiso; and, on his return, brought me letters informing me that a squadron under command of Commodore James Hillyar, consisting of the frigate Phebe, of 36 guns, the Racoon and Cherub sloops of war, and a store ship of 20 guns, had sailed on the 6th July for this sea. The Racoon and Cherub had been seeking me for some time on the coast of Brazil, and on their return from their cruise, joined the squadron sent in search of me to the Pacific. My ship, as it may be supposed, after being near a year at sea, required some repairs to put her in a state to meet them; which I determined to do, and bring them to action, if I could meet them on nearly equal terms. I proceeded, now, in co. with the remainder of my prizes, to the island of Nooahavah, or Madison's island, lying in the Washington groupe, discovered by a captain Ingraham, of Boston; here I caulked and completely overhauled my ship, made for her a new set of water casks, her old ones being entirely decayed, and took on board for my prizes, provisions and stores for upwards of four months, and sailed for the coast of Chili on the 12th Dec. 1813. Previous to sailing, I secured the Seringapatam, Greenwich, and Sir Andrew Hammond, under the guns of a battery which I erected for their protection, after taking possession of this fine island for the U. States, and establishing the most friendly intercourse with the natives. I left them under the charge of lieutenant Gimble of the marines, with 21 men, with orders to repair to Valparaiso after a certain period.

I arrived on the coast of Chili on the 12th January, 1814; looked into Concepcion and Valparaiso, found at both places only three English vessels, and learned that the squadron which sailed from Rio Janeiro for that sea, had not been heard of since their departure, and were supposed to be lost in endeavoring to double Cape Horn.

I had completely broken up the British navigation in the Pacific; the vessels which had not been captured by me, were laid up and dare not venture out. I had afforded the most ample protection to our own vessels, which were, on my arrival, very numerous and unprotected.— The valuable whale fishery there is entirely destroyed, and the annual injury we have done there may be estimated at two and a half millions of dollars, independent of the expenses of the vessels in search of me. They have furnished me simply with sails, cordage, cables, anchors, which time I touched only once on the coast of America, which was for the purpose of procuring a supply of fresh water, as none is to be found among those islands, which are perhaps the most barren and desolate of any known.

While among this groupe, I captured the following British ships, employed chiefly in the spermaceti-whale fishery—

Lieut. Downes had conveyed the prizes to Valparaiso; and, on his return, brought me letters informing me that a squadron under command of Commodore James Hillyar, consisting of the frigate Phebe, of 36 guns, the Racoon and Cherub sloops of war, and a store ship of 20 guns, had sailed on the 6th July for this sea. The Racoon and Cherub had been seeking me for some time on the coast of Brazil, and on their return from their cruise, joined the squadron sent in search of me to the Pacific. I had completely broken up the British navigation in the Pacific; the vessels which had not been captured by me, were laid up and dare not venture out. I had afforded the most ample protection to our own vessels, which were, on my arrival, very numerous and unprotected.— The valuable whale fishery there is entirely destroyed, and the annual injury we have done there may be estimated at two and a half millions of dollars, independent of the expenses of the vessels in search of me. They have furnished me simply with sails, cordage, cables, anchors, provisions, medicines and stores of every description; and the ships on board them have furnished clothing for the seamen. We had not been on the enemy since I had been in that sea, every prize having proved a well found store ship for me. I had not yet been under the necessity of drawing bills on the department for any object, & had been enabled to make considerable advances to my officers and crew on account of pay.

For the unexampled time we had kept the sea, my crew had continued remarkably healthy; I had but one case of the scurvy, and had lost only the following men by death, viz.

John S. Cowan, Lieutenant,
Robert Miller, Surgeon,
Levi Holmes, O. Seaman,
Edward Sweeney, do.
Samuel Groce, Seaman,
James Stafford, Gunners Mate,
Benj. Geers, } Qr. Gunners,
John Rogers, }
Andrew Mahan, Cor. of Marines,
Lewis Price, Private Marine.

I had done all the injury that could be done the British commerce in the Pacific, and still hoped to signalize my cruise by something more splendid before leaving that sea. I thought it not improbable that Commodore Hillyar might have kept his arrival secret, and believing that he would seek me at Valparaiso, as the most likely place to find me, I therefore determined to cruise about that place, and should I fail of meeting him, hoped to be compensated by the capture of some merchant ships, said to be expected from England.

The Phebe, agreeably to my expectations came to seek me at Valparaiso, where I was anchored with the Essex, my armed prize the Essex Junior, under the command of Lt. Downes, on the look out off the harbor; but, contrary to the course I thought he would pursue, Com. Hillyar brought with him the Cherub sloop of war, mounting 28 guns, eighteen 32 pound carronades, eight 24's, and two long 9's on the quarter deck and fore-castle, and a complement of 180 men. The force of the Phebe is as follows: thirty long 18 pounders, sixteen 32 pound carronades, one howitzer, and 6 three pounders in the tops, in all 53 guns, and a complement of 330 men; making a force of 81 guns and 500 men; in addition to which, they took on board the crew of an English letter of marque lying in port. Both ships had picked crews, and were sent into the Pacific in company with the Racoon of 22 guns and a store ship of 20 guns, for the express purpose of seeking the Essex, and were prepared with flags bearing the motto, "God and country; British Sailors' best rights; Traitors offend both." This was intended as a reply to my motto, "Free Trade and Sailors' Rights," under the erroneous impression that my crew were chiefly Englishmen, or to counteract its effect on their own crews. The force of the Essex was 46 guns, forty 32 pound carronades and six long 12's, and her crew, which had been much reduced by prizes, amounted only to 255 men. The Essex Junior, which was intended chiefly as a store ship, mounted 20 guns, ten 18 pound carronades, and ten short 6's with daily 60 men on board. In reply to their motto, I wrote at my anchor, "God, our Country and Liberty; Tyrants offend them."

On getting their provisions on board, they went off the port for the purpose of blockading me, where they cruised for near six weeks, during which time I endeavoured to provoke a challenge, and frequently but ineffectually, to bring the Phebe alone to action, first with both my ships, and afterwards with my single ship, with both crews on board. I was several times under way, and ascertained that I had greatly the advantage in point of sailing, and once succeeded in closing within gun-shot of the Phebe and commenced a fire on her, when she ran down for the Cherub, which was 2 1/2 miles to leeward; this excited some surprise and expression of indignation, as previous to my getting under way, she had run off the port, hoisted her motto flag and fired a gun to windward. Com. Hillyar seemed determined to avoid

CELEBRATION OF THE EMAN-CIPATION OF EUROPE.
"Woe, late and deep! My soul take up the strain
"Glory to God! Deliverance for mankind!
"Joy for all Nations, joy!"

Yesterday, agreeably to previous arrangement, the celebration took place in the Cedar St. Church. The exercises, (says the Commercial Advertiser) were commenced by the Rev. Dr. Mason, who, after a few very appropriate and eloquent remarks, read a part of the tenth chapter of the prophecy of the Prophet Isaiah; and then addressed the Throne of Grace, in a manner peculiarly solemn, impressive and sublime.

After the prayer was concluded the following anthem was sung:—

"Blessed be thou, Lord God of Israel, our father for ever and ever! Thine, O Lord is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty, for all that is in the heaven and the earth are thine: thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head over all: both riches and honor come of thee, and thou reignest over all; & in thine hand is power and might, and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all. Now, therefore, O God, we thank thee and praise thy glorious name."

The Hon. Gouverneur Morris then rose and addressed the audience, for nearly an hour, in a strain of eloquence rarely equalled. He took a rapid view of the great events in Europe for the last twenty-five years, and concluded with the restoration of the Bourbons to the throne of France—a family, to whom, under Providence, we are in a great measure indebted for our independence, and our freedom. The narrative was every where interspersed with instructive and interesting remarks.—The whole oration was indeed excellent; and was received by a very numerous and respectable auditory, with the highest marks of satisfaction and applause.

The exercises of the day were then closed by the following anthem:—

"Sing, O heavens, and be joyful, O earth, break forth into singing, O mountains, for the Lord hath comforted his people, and will have mercy on his afflicted. Let not Zion say, the Lord hath forsaken me, and the Lord hath forgotten me: return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon you, and to your God, for he will abundantly pardon. Therefore will the Lord wait, that may be gracious unto you, and therefore will he be exalted that he may have mercy upon you; for the Lord is a God of judgement. Blessed are they that wait for his salvation."

The Anthems were also both well performed; and including all the performances of the day we have never known an audience, in this city, apparently more highly gratified, on any public occasion, than on the present.
