FOREIGN.

LATE FROM EUROPE.

From London papers to the 17th of September, received at the office of the New-York Evening Post, by the arrival last evening of the fast sailing ship Comet, captain Center, in 35 days from Havre.

London, Sept. 16.

We have at length the satisfaction of congratulating the country that our navy has obtained a complete victory over one of the Piratical Powers of the Mediterranean, and have destroyed, in a good degree, their means of future piracy. It might, indeed, have been wished, that this destruction had been more complete, and that not only the vessels, but the town itself, had been destroyed. We had indulged this hope, and we must confess, that though we concur in the general feeling of the country, that the navy has added another victory to its former glory, we do not think that enough has been done. We surely have had sufficient experience of what kind of people these Barbary Powers are, not to expect any farther faith from them, than what is natural to robbers,—just so much and so long as we have them in our power. The moment our fleet is departed,—the moment that they can determine that it will cost us more money to punish them than to suffer their piracies, in that moment they will resume them.

The security of treaties with other powers is founded in the common law of nations,—that public law of Europe, which acknowledges the political person of a State separate & independent of the Sovereign who temporarily governs and represents it, and which upon this principle renders all treaties as durable as the government. The Barbary Powers have no law of this kind, nor any notions founded upon it. They are strictly and truly Barbarians. If they dislike a treaty they terminate all treaties by considering them only as his personal acts and obligations. Their next act is to proceed to the houses of the European Consuls, and unless they be fortunate enough to effect their escape in due time, to murder, or at least to imprison them. This is followed by the massacre of all slaves, &c.

LORD EXMOUTH'S VICTORY.

We have, to-day, the high gratification of announcing, by an Extraordinary Gazette, published last night, the arrival of the dispatches of Lord Exmouth, which communicate the successful result of his Lordship's operations before Algiers. Captain Brisbane, with the dispatches, arrived on Saturday night, at the Admiralty, at a quarter before nine o'clock, but neither Lord Melville nor Mr. Croker being in town, the Captain changed horses at the Admiralty, and proceeded to the seat of Mr. Croker, at Fulham, with the dispatches.

It appears that Lord Exmouth, after encountering some opposition from the adverse elements, placed himself before Algiers, by day-break on the 27th of last month, and that the irresistible gallantry of his fleet soon brought the ruffian enemy to terms.

In the attainment of the important objects of his expedition, we have to lament the loss of many gallant officers and men, but this we must consider a "partial evil for universal good."

The British Consul was happily restored in safety—and it is not an uninteresting circumstance, that his wife and daughter, were brought away in the disguise of midshipmen. A child of the Consul unconsciously betrayed its intended escape in a basket, by its cries. It was, however, sent off next morning by the Dey, who, it appears, was disposed to make a virtue of necessity.

The loss of the enemy is between 6 and 7000 men, besides the destruction of his implements of piracy, his vessels.

Memorandum of the Destruction in the Mole of Algiers, in the attack of the 27th August, 1816. Four large frigates, of 44 guns, 5 large corvettes, from 24 to 30, all the gun and mortar boats, except 7; 30 destroyed, several merchant brigs and schooners, a great number of small vessels of various descriptions, all the pontoons, lighters, &c. store-houses and arsenal, with all the timber and various marine articles, destroyed in part, a great many gun carriages, mortar beds, caaks, and ships' stores of all descriptions.

EXMOUTH.

His Britannic Majesty's ship Queen Charlotte, Algiers Bay, Aug. 28.

Sir, For your atrocities at Bona on defenceless Christians, and your unbecoming disregard to the demands I made yesterday, in the name of the Prince Regent of England, the fleet under my orders has given you a signal chastisement, by the total destruction of your navy, store-houses, and arsenal, with half your batteries.

As England does not war for the destruction of cities, I am unwilling to visit your personal cruelties upon the inoffensive inhabitants of the country, and I therefore offer you the same terms of peace which I conveyed to you yesterday in my Sovereign's name, without the acceptance of these terms, you can have no peace with England.

If you receive this offer as you ought, you will fire three guns, and I shall consider your not making this signal as a refusal, and shall renew my operations at my own convenience.

I offer you the above terms, provided neither the British Consul, nor the officers and men so wickedly seized by you from the boats of a British ship of war have met with any cruel treatment, or any of the Christian slaves in your power, and repeat my demand, that the Consul, and officers and men, may be sent off to me, conformably to ancient treaties, &c.

EXMOUTH.

I have, &c. To his Highness the Dey of Algiers.

Queen Charlotte, Algiers Bay, Aug. 30.

GENERAL MEMORANDUM.

The Commander in Chief is happy to inform the fleet of the final termination of their strenuous exertions, by the signature of peace, confirmed under a salute of 21 guns, on the following conditions, dictated by his Royal Highness the Prince Regent of England:—

I. The abolition, for ever, of Christian slavery.

II. The delivery, to my flag, of all slaves in the dominions of the Dey, to whatever nation they may belong, at noon to-morrow.

III. To deliver also, to my flag, all money received by him for the redemption of slaves since the commencement of this year, at noon also to-morrow.

IV. Reparation has been made to the British Consul for all losses he may have sustained in consequence of his confinement.

V. The Dey has made a public apology, in presence of his Ministers and Officers, & begged pardon of the Consul, in terms dictated by the Captain of the Queen Charlotte.

The Commander in Chief takes this opportunity of again returning his public thanks to the admirals, captains, officers, seamen, marines, royal marine artillery, royal sappers and miners, and the royal-rocket corps, for the noble support he has received from them throughout the whole of this arduous service, & he is pleased to direct, that on Sunday next a public thanksgiving be offered up to Almighty God for the signal interposition of his Divine Providence, during the conflict which took place on the 27th between his Majesty's fleet and the ferocious enemies of mankind.

It is requested that this memorandum may be read to the ship's companies. In the Admirals, Captains, Officers, Seamen, Marines, Royal-Sappers and Miners, Royal Marine Artillery, & the Royal Rocket Corps.

Queen Charlotte, Algiers Bay, Sept. 1, 1816.

Sir,

I have the honour to acquaint you, for their Lordship's information, that I have sent Capt. Brisbane with my duplicate dispatches, as I am afraid that Adm. Milne, in the Leander, who has charge of the originals, may experience a long voyage, the wind having set in to-

For the Maryland Gazette.
The whole of the Algerine squadron are said to be burnt, and their batteries are totally destroyed. A small part of the town has been injured.

Yesterday morning another brig
of war arrived with despatches from Lord Exmouth, for their minister, Mr. Wellesley, to the court of Spain. A messenger was immediately sent off with them to Madrid.

The man of war brig Heron, which arrived two days ago, proceeded immediately for Genoa, having on board the money retained by the Dev. for the ransom of the Genoese, &c. The squadron under Lord Exmouth, are now exposed to be at Mahon. They were to sail on the 2d inst. from Algiers for that port.

Further Particulars of the late fire at New-Orleans.
From a New-Orleans paper of September 30.
On Saturday at noon the inhabitants of New-Orleans were startled by the fire-bell. With their usual alacrity they repaired to the scene—but such was the suddenness and fury of the conflagration that before the alarm could be spread through town, the whole neighbourhood where the cal-mity originated, was enveloped in flames. We are unwilling to allude to the cause of this disaster; but it is the imperious and indispensable duty of the corporation to prevent the recurrence of an accident from the same cause, and they have it in their power to do so.

The fire first caught in the new building of Mr. John Davis, adjoining the Orleans Theatre in Orleans-street
—the wind was very high at the time, and the houses in the neighbourhood being dry in consequence of a long drought, the destruction spread with unparalleled rapidity. The sides of the squares, viz. Orleans from Royal to Bourbon streets—Bourbon from Orleans to St. Ann-street, are totally destroyed—while the square above, viz. the upper side of Orleans-street, from Royal to Bourbon, Bourbon from Orleans to St. Peter-street, and nearly the whole of the lower and upper side of St. Peter-street, between Royal and Bourbon streets, are likewise destroyed. Had it not been for the prompt & powerful succour afforded by Major Many, with a detachment of U. S. soldiers, the flames would have spread to the square including the principal, the prison and the cathedral, the consequences of which in all probability would have been that one half the city would at this moment be a heap of destruction.

At about 3 o'clock P. M. the fire slackened, more in consequence of the lulling of the wind than of the exertions of the citizens—these, though very ardent and vigorous, were almost neutralized for want of the necessary implements—it was to be lamented that besides the deficiency of buckets, fire-hooks, ladders, axes, &c. there was no unity of design, no concert of action, no intelligent direction.

In confident expectation that the object of the Institution for the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of the State of Maryland, for "promoting and disseminating medical and chirurgical knowledge throughout the state" will be more easily accomplished by calling a special meeting, I have thought proper by the advice of a number of the members of the Faculty, to fix upon the first Monday in December next, for a special Convention to be held in the City of Baltimore.

At a stated meeting of the Faculty in 1807 it was conceived that medical and chirurgical knowledge would be greatly promoted by establishing a society throughout the state, which the subject resolutions were passed. The members of medicine and surgery must see the importance of these resolutions, as well as the great advantage that will result from carrying them into proper effect. It is urged and most sincerely expressed, that where these societies are not already organized, the subject will be taken into effective consideration, and that every society will be prepared to meet this special convention with that zeal which the spirit of the institution requires.

Resolved, That the State of Maryland be divided into seven medical districts, as follows, viz: St. Mary's, Charles and Calvert counties, to constitute the 1st district. Prince-George's and Montgomery, the 2d. Anne-Arundel and Baltimore, the 3d. Frederick, Washington and Allegany, the 4th. Harford, Cecil and Kent, the 5th. Queen-Ann's, Talbot and Caroline, the 6th. Dorchester, Somerset and Worcester, the 7th.

Resolved, That it be recommended to the gentlemen of the faculty in each district, to form a meeting as soon as possible, in the most central place in their respective districts, at which first meeting, a majority of those present shall and may, fix on a future place of meeting, and shall determine on the times of meeting, which shall not exceed twice in one year, one of which meetings shall be held at least one month previous to such biennial meeting of the faculty.

Resolved, That the faculty in each district at their first meeting, elect by ballot, a President or chairman for their particular district, whose office it shall be to preside at each meeting, to call special meetings in his district, when it may be deemed necessary, to correspond with the secretary or committee of the general society of the state, and to communicate such intelligence or information to the faculty, as may be thought conducive to the promotion and diffusion of medical knowledge, or to the interest of the Faculty, and to attend at each biennial meeting of the faculty, and to report to the general convention the state of medical and chirurgical knowledge in their respective districts, and to report any extraordinary medical or chirurgical cases that may have occurred in their district or that may have been communicated to the medical board of the district.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this convention, that it would be expedient for the said district Medical and Chirurgical Societies at their meetings, previous to each biennial convention, to elect one or more of their members to attend the general meeting, and together with the president or chairman of the district, to represent the members thereof; but nevertheless such delegation or appointment, shall not prevent any other district member from attending and voting at the general convention of the faculty.

Resolved, That as soon as the gentlemen of the faculty in each district shall have met, and formed themselves into an association, it shall be the duty of the district societies, to elect and appoint censors in each county, in such district, on whom shall devolve all the duties heretofore enjoined by the laws of the faculty.

N. B. The printers of all the news-papers in the State are requested to insert the above in their news-papers once in each of the first two weeks of the months of October and November, and to send in their several accounts on the day of the meeting of the Convention for payment.

Extract from another letter—dated Buenos Ayres, Aug. 19.

I have omitted to say any thing about the Portuguese expedition;
indeed we have generally forgot it; it put into St. Catherine's, whether intentionally, or by stress of weather is not known. Many think that its destination was for St. Catherine's, there to maintain the troops at a cheaper rate and in a better climate than Rio Janeiro;
but it appears to me the Portuguese government, if such had been its intention, would have advised this government. The government of Buenos Ayres, since its declaration of independence, has written, I am told, to demand of the Portuguese government the object and the destination of the expedition."

VENTRILOQUISM.
Last Saturday, being market day, as Mr. Rannie was walking up the street, passing a store door where there were a number of people standing, he met a black man with a head of cabbage under his arm, he made a voice to come out of the cabbage, like the squeaking of a young pig—the black fellow immediately looked at the cabbage to see if he had got a pig there; it again began to squeak, and he threw it from him.—As the cabbage rolled, the squeaking continued, the dogs became alarmed, and the man very much frightened, took to his heels, and ran a considerable distance before he durst stop, to the no small amusement of the spectators. When he came back & took up the cabbage, he held it at a distance for some time, lest it should begin again. When he was told the meaning of it he said surely the devil was in the man.

Extract of a letter from the American Consul dated Buenos Ayres, September 4.

The threatening expedition of the Portuguese does not appear;
and even if it should, this government does not much apprehend that any hostility will be used against this part of the country, being determined, unless attacked, to stand neutral during the contest. Proprietors consider as safe here as in the United States thus far."

Extract of a letter from Barcelona, dated Sept. 7, to a gentleman in New-York.

"Two days ago, at an early hour, H.
M. brig Heron, of 18 guns, arrived here from Algiers, and soon after Lord Exmouth's flag captain lauded from her, bearing dispatches. He set out in a boat for London.—As I am on terms of intimacy with the British acting Consul, the following particulars were communicated to me soon after with an intention not to divulge them until yesterday morning.
"Lord Exmouth, in the Queen Charlotte, three decker, & his whole squadron, appeared off Algiers on the 27th August, & as he had a plan of all their forts and fortifications, every vessel in the squadron had its station assigned, prior to its approaching the city. The orders were that every vessel should run in as close to the batteries as possible, allowing a foot or two of water more than their draft, and their anchor the flag ship Queen Charlotte anchored within about twenty yards of one of the strongest batteries, to the great astonishment of the Algerines. The improbable, also a three decker anchored about a similar distance before another very strong battery. The other vessels took their stations as before arranged, and immediately opened a most terrible and destructive fire. Lord Exmouth, previous to firing, observed that a number of persons, to the amount of about three thousand, apparently come down from the the country, and were were spectators, being unarmed, waved their hands, as they were within reach of his guns. His humane attentions were not attended to, and as he could not delay the attack, he opened his batteries, and his first broadside killed and wounded four hundred and spread of these poor wretches.
Soon after a party landed, and captured the battery which commands the bay, by storm.

The firing continued on both sides, without intermission, for nine hours and a half—it was then near midnight when the Algerine batteries were completely silenced. Lord Exmouth's squadron immediately ceased firing. It may be astonishing, though nevertheless true, that the ammunition on board most of the vessels was completely exhausted. What with the firing, & the Congress rockets, the night was awful dark—the darkness of the night rendered the scene more so.

Extraordinary property of the Onion.

The magnetic power of a Compass needle will be entirely destroyed or changed by being touched with the juice of an Onion. This fact may seem trifling; but we regard it as one of the first importance; and investigation may lead to consequences equally astonishing as the discovery of the LORD EXMOUTH'S OFFICIAL LETTER. The London Gazette Extraordinary Sunday Sept. 15. Admiralty Office, Sept. 15.

Capt. Brisbane of his Majesty's ship Queen Charlotte, arrived at this office last night with the following despatches from Admiral Lord Exmouth, G. C. B. addressed to John Wilson Crocker, Esq.:

Queen Charlotte, Algiers Bay, Aug 23. SIR—In all the vicissitudes of a long life of public service, no circumstance has ever produced on my mind such impressions of gratitude and joy as the event of yesterday.

Thus has a provoked war of two days' existence been attended by a complete victory, and closed by a renewed peace for England and her Ally, the King of the Netherlands...

My thanks are justly due for the honor and confidence his Majesty's Ministers have been pleased to repose on my zeal, on this highly important occasion.

Would to God, that in the attainment of this object, I had not deeply to lament the severe loss of so many gallant officers and men; they have profusely bold in a contest which has been peculiarly marked by proofs of such devoted heroism as would rouse every noble feeling...

succeeded in bringing away, disguised in midshipman's uniform, his wife and daughter, leaving a boat to bring off their infant child, coming down in a basket with the surgeon, who thought he had composed it, but it unhappily cried in the gate way, and in consequence the surgeon, 3 midshipmen, in all 18 persons, were seized and confined as slaves in the usual dungeons.

The Dey informed capt. Dashwood he knew perfectly well the armament was destined for Algiers, and asked him if it was true; he replied, if he had such information he knew as much as he did, and probably from the same source—the public prints.

The ships were all in port, and between 40 and 50 gun and mortar-boats ready, with several more in forward repair. The Dey had closely confined the Consul, and refused either to give him up or promise his personal safety; nor would he hear a word respecting the officers and men seized in the boats of the Prometheus.

From the continuance of adverse winds and calms, the land to the westward of Algiers was not made before the 16th, and the next morning at day break, the fleet was advanced in sight of the city, though not so near as I had intended. As the ships were becalmed, I embraced this opportunity of despatching a boat under cover of the Severn, with a flag of truce, and the demands I had to make, in the name of His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, on the Dey of Algiers, (of which the accompanying are copies) directing the officer to wait two or three hours for the Dey's answer, at which time, if no reply was sent, he was to return to the flag ship; he was met near the Mole by the Captain of the Port, who, on being told the answer was expected in one hour, replied that it was impossible. The officer then said he would wait two or three hours; he then observed, two hours were quite sufficient.

The fleet at this time, by the springing up of the sea breeze, had reached the bay, and were preparing the boats and flotilla for service until near two o'clock, when observing my officer was returning with the signal flying that no answer had been received, after a delay of upwards of three hours, I instantly made the signal to know if the ships were all ready, which being answered in the affirmative, the Queen Charlotte bore up, followed by the fleet, for their appointed stations; the flag, leading in the prescribed order, was anchored in the entrance of the Mole, at about fifty yards distance. At this moment not a gun had been fired, and I began to suspect a full compliance with the terms, which had been so many hours in their hands; at this period of profound silence, a shot was fired at us from the Mole, and two at the ships to the northward then following; this was promptly returned by the Queen Charlotte, who was then hailing to the mainmast of a brig, fast to the shore in the mouth of the Mole, and which we had steered for, as the guide to our position.

Thus commenced a fire as animated and well supported as I believe, was ever witnessed from a quarter before three until nine, without intermission, and which did not cease altogether until half past eleven.

The ships immediately following me were admirably and coolly taking their stations, with a precision even beyond my most sanguine hopes, and never did the British flag receive, on any occasion, more zealous and honourable support. To look further on the line than immediately round me was perfectly impossible, but so well supported was my confidence in the British officers, that I had the honour to command, that my mind was left perfectly capt. Dashwood had with difficulty free to attend to other objects, and knew them in their stations only by the destructive effect of their fire upon the walls and batteries to which they were opposed.

I had about this time the satisfaction of seeing Vice-Admiral Van-Capellen's flag in the station I had assigned to him, and soon after, at intervals, the remainder of his frigates, keeping up a well supported fire on the flanking batteries he had offered to cover us from, as it had not been in my power, for want of room, to bring him in the front of the Mole.

About sunset I received a message from Rear Adm. Milne, conveying to me the severe loss the Impregnable was sustaining, having then 150 killed and wounded, and requesting I would, if possible, send him a frigate to divert some of the fire he was under.

The Glasgow, near me, immediately weighed, but the wind had been driven away by the cannonade, and she was obliged to anchor again, having obtained rather a better position than before.

I had at this time sent orders to the explosion vessel, under the charge of Lt. Fleming and Mr. Parker, by Capt. Reade of the engineers, to bring her into the Mole; but the Rear Admiral having thought she would do him essential service if exploded under the battery in his front, I sent orders to this vessel to that effect, which were executed. I desired also the Rear Admiral might be informed, that many of the ships being now in flames, and certain of the destruction of the whole, I considered I had executed the most important part of my instructions, and should make every preparation for withdrawing the ships, and desired he would do so as soon as possible with his division.

There were awful moments during the conflict, which I cannot now attempt to describe, occasioned by firing the ships so near us, & I had long resisted the eager entreaties of several around me, to make the attempt upon the outer frigate distant 100 yards, which at length I gave into. Major Gosset, by my side, who had been eager to land his corps of miners, pressed me most anxiously for permission to accompany Lt. Richard's in this ship's barge. The frigate was instantly boarded, and in ten minutes in a perfect blaze; a gallant young midshipman, in rocket boat No. 8, although forbidden, was led by his ardent spirit to follow in support of the barge, in which he was desperately wounded, his brother officer killed, and nine of his crew. The barge by rowing more rapidly, had suffered less, and lost but two.

The enemy's batteries around my division were about ten o'clock silenced, and in a state of perfect ruin and dilapidation; and the fire of the ships were reserved as much as possible, to save powder, and to reply to a few guns now and then bearing upon us, although a fort on the upper angle of the city, on which our guns could not be brought to bear, continued to annoy the ships by shot and shells during the whole time.

Providence at this interval gave to my anxious wishes the usual land wind, common in this bay, and my expectations were completed.—We were all hands employed warping & towing off, and by the help of the light air, the whole were under sail and came to anchor out of the reach of the shells, about two in the morning, after twelve hours incessant labour.

The flotilla of mortar, gun, and rocket boats, under the direction of their respective artillery officers, shared to the full extent of their power, in the honours of this day, and performed good service; it was by their fire all the ships in the port (with the exception of the outer frigate) were in flames, which extended rapidly over the whole arsenal, store-houses, and gun-boats, exhibiting a spectacle of awful grandeur and interest no pen can describe.

The sloops of war which had been appropriated to aid and assist the ships of the line, and prepare for their retreat, performed not only that duty well, but embraced every opportunity of firing through the intervals, and were constantly in motion.

The shells from the bombs were admirably well thrown by the royal marine artillery; and though thrown directly across and over us, not an accident that I know of occurred to any ship.

The whole was conducted with perfect silence, and such a thing as a cheer I never heard in any part of the line, and that the guns were well worked and directed, will be seen for many years to come, and remembered by these barbarians forever.

The conducting this ship to her station by the masters of the fleet and ship excited the praise of all. The former has been my companion in arms for more than twenty years.

Having thus detailed, although but imperfectly, the progress of this short service, I venture to hope, that the humble and devoted services of myself and the officers and men of every description I have the honour to command, will be received by his Royal Highness the Prince Regent with his accustomed grace.

The approbation of our services by our Sovereign, and the good opinion of our country, will I venture to affirm, be received by us all with the highest satisfaction.

If I attempted to name to their Lordships the numerous officers who, in such a conflict, have been at different periods more conspicuous than their companions, I should do injustice to many; and I trust there is no officer in the fleet I have the honour to command who will doubt the grateful feelings I shall ever cherish for their unbounded & unlimited support.—Not an officer nor man confined his exertions within the precise limits of their own duty, all were eager to attempt services which I found more difficult to restrain than excite, and no where was this feeling more conspicuous than in my own captain, & those officers immediately about my person. My gratitude and thanks are due to all under my command, as well as to Vice-Admiral Capellen, and the officers of the squadron of his Majesty the King of the Netherlands, and I trust they will believe that the recollection of their services will never cease but with my life. In no instance have I ever seen more energy and zeal, from the youngest midshipman to the highest rank; all seemed animated by one soul, and of which I shall with delight bear testimony to their Lordships, whenever that testimony can be useful.

I have confided this despatch to Rear Admiral Milne, my second in command, from whom I have received, during the whole service intrusted to me, the most cordial and honourable support. He is perfectly informed of every transaction of the fleet, from the earliest period of my command, and is fully competent to give their Lordships satisfaction on any points which I may have overlooked or have not time to state. I trust I have obtained from him his esteem and regard, and I regret I had not sooner been known to him.

The necessary papers, together with the defects of the ships & the return of killed and wounded, accompany this despatch, & I am happy to say Captains Elkins & Coode are doing well, as also the whole of the wounded. By accounts from the shore, I understand the enemy's loss in killed and wounded is between 6 and 7,000 men.

In recommending my officers and fleet to their Lordships protection and favour.

I have the honor to be, &c.
EXMOUTH.

From late Gibraltar papers received at Boston.

The Consuls, & others who were at Algiers, gave it as their opinion, that another hour's firing would have levelled the city with the ground, and the officers who landed after the action so far concurred in this opinion, that they thought the upper part, at least, of the houses would in that time be brought down by the fire.

Nothing could exceed the firmness of Mr. McDonnelly, the British Consul; and the enemy who threw him into confinement, tried his true British stamina by all sorts of threats and insults; but in vain.—The room, in his house, in which he was to have slept, was so perforated, that he would not have been safe in any part of it.

The Dey's palace suffered greatly, and there was scarcely a house in the town that did not receive injury. It was generally believed and asserted on shore, that the first broadside from the Queen Charlotte killed not less than 400 men, a great number having collected on the beach opposite to her, and who neglected to get out of the way when a signal was made so to do.

The Impregnable was dreadfully exposed to the fire of a battery upon the hill-side, and also suffered greatly by the explosion of a shell on board of her, which communicated to some loose powder.—She is said to have lost between 60 and 70 men by this accident alone.

It is computed that 700 pieces of ordinance were brought into action by the Algerines alone, to the fire of which the fleets were exposed for more than 9 hours. Lord Exmouth's coat was literary torn from his back by splinters.

Return of Slaves released by Lord Exmouth at Algiers.

Neapolitans 471, Sicilians 238 proceeded to Naples Sept. 1 in the transports Maria, Trafalgar and Friends. Romans 173, Tuscans 6, proceeded to Naples Aug. 31, in the Severn. Spaniards 161, Portuguese 1, proceeded to the coast of Spain in the Spanish brig Alexander, on the night of Aug. 31, without permission. Greeks 7, proceeded to Malta in the Wasp, on her way to Constantinople.—Dutch 22 delivered to Vice-Admiral Van de Capellan on board the Dutch squadron, Aug. 31. Total 1083.

The Heron brig has carried to Genoa the money for Sardinia, and another man of war had carried 300,000 hard dollars to Naples.

[Here follows some anecdotes of the British tars during the actions. One sailor for want of a wad for his gun, thrust in his jacket, but forgot to take out his tobacco-box and jack-knife; another said, when the fire from the ships became general, it would raise the price of mason's work, &c.]

The British fleet anchored in Gibraltar Bay, Sept. 12th; and notwithstanding the Impregnable was to take in a new mainmast, the whole of the ships (the Minden excepted) were watered, victualled, and in every respect prepared for sea on the afternoon of the 15th, when they got under way, & cleared the Straights before day break next morning.

There were 2000 more slaves to be received. They were collecting in Bona, Oran, &c. &c. and ships were in readiness to take them on board the moment they should arrive.

Her Catholic Majesty and sister left Cadiz, Sept. 11th, and proceeded to Xeres, through the Isle of Leon and Port St. Mary's. The municipal body took leave of her unjustly at St. Ferdinand's battery, the confines of its jurisdiction, when her majesty condescended to address them in the following terms: "I depart full of gratitude for the demonstrations of regard given me by the whole population; and I beg that they will continue to love me." Expressions of joy accompanied the royal travellers along the road of Xeres, and the city seem to have exceeded those of which they had hitherto been the objects; but some unfortunate accidents having taken place, in consequence of the people's undertaking to draw her majesty's coach, after taking out the mules, a proclamation was issued forbidding this practice for the future. On the 12th the royal pair proceeded on their journey towards Utrera.

Minute of a conversation between the Dey of Algiers and Capt. James Brisbane of his majesty's ship Queen Charlotte, held on the 29th of August, by order of Admiral Lord Exmouth: "I acquainted the Dey that Lord Exmouth expected he would give satisfaction for the affront done to the British Consul, the ill treatment he had met with, and the insult redounding from it to the British nation. The Dey answered, that he was ready so to do; and asked what I wanted?"

"I then replied, are you sorry for the violent measures which, in a fit of passion, you adopted towards the British Consul; and do you ask pardon for the same? Yes, answered the Dey.

"I then insisted upon the Dey's addressing himself in person to the Consul; and repeating before his ministers what he had just said. (Signed) James Brisbane, Capt.

When Lord Exmouth hauled off from bombarding the place (being out of ammunition) the seamen were so fatigued that they were not called upon to re-embark and set up the rigging till after day break on the following morning; from which time, in less than 24 hours the whole fleet was again in readiness for action, and the ships which had expended their powder received the requisite supply from the vessels carrying the spare ammunition.

The Leander, ad. Milne (carrying Lord Exmouth's original dispatches) arrived at Gibraltar in 13 days from Algiers. Rear Admiral Penrose had arrived at Gibraltar from Algiers, on his way to England.

LATE FROM FRANCE.

Last evening arrived at this port, the fast sailing ship Rubicon, Holdridge, 33 days from Havre-de-Grace, from whence she sailed on the 5th Oct. Mr. Wilkes, passenger in the Rubicon, is bearer of dispatches from our minister in France to the Secretary of State.

Capt. H. very politely favoured the editors of the Mercantile Advertiser with a file of papers to the 3d October, which contain London dates to the 28th Sept. On a hasty perusal at a late hour, we do not find that they contain any political news of consequence.

Paris, Sept. 25.
The crop of wheat will be considerable in the north of France, the late season having been extraordinary favourable.

London, Sept. 19.
The re-establishment of the Jews as a nation, is the subject of a letter from Cairo. Babilon and its environs as far as Libanus, are the theatre of great events. A Jew of the tribe of Dan, is said to have collected a prodigious number of discontented Jews—200,000. Nothing checks his progress.—He calls himself the King of the Jews, & the people name him Hosannah Masses. Musselmén quit the standard of Mahomet to fight under the Lion of Judah. The Porte has been informed of the progress of the conqueror, but is not able to arrest it.

Sept. 21.
The Dutch papers contain the official report of Vice-Adm. Capellen, relative to the glorious & successful attack on Algiers. We are nappy to observe that the gallant commander speaks in terms of high and just admiration of the conduct of Lord Exmouth. There is in this account nothing of the little jealousy and petty pique against England, which we too generally observe in the Belgian journals.

Most deplorable accounts continue to be received from the continent of the deficiency of the harvest. From Munich, they write most despondingly, and the people are seriously alarmed for fear of famine. The fine weather continues, but the corn market does not give way; grain of all sorts remains pretty steady in all prices.

Bullion to the amount of a million a week continues to be imported into this country.

Sept. 27.
The rumour of an accommodation between the King of Naples and the U. States, appears to have been premature. Letters from Naples of the 5th inst. state that the American squadron remained still in the Bay. Mr. Pinkney appeared for many days to have been very urgent to bring the negotiation to a close; but the court of Naples did not appear at all disposed to accede to his demands.

Paris, Sept. 27.
Great preparations were making at Vienna for the nuptials of the Emperor, which were to be celebrated at the St. Augustine's church on the 18th Nov. next.

Letters from Madrid mention that the circumstance of the King's marriage would be the cause of an act of clemency towards a number of exiled Spaniards, whose sufferings, and those of their friends and relatives in Spain, have touched his Majesty.

Now that the Jews are about to have their Messiah, all the papers seem to be agreed that those spread over Europe amount to upwards of 13 millions—a pretty population for their new kingdom, and would need another kind of miracle than the opening of the Red Sea to enable them to assemble at or near Jerusalem, and for that country to furnish them with their lambs for the pass-over, &c. but God is great in all his works, and he may do for the curious nation, in the midst of all nations, unexpected things.

Frankfort, Sept. 19.
News from Turkey continue to make mention of a Jew who styles himself the New Messiah, and intends to lay the foundation of a new kingdom in Judea. Some dreaming politicians suppose him to be a Frenchman under this disguise; he is as it may be the Munich Gazette makes a judicious observation on this circumstance, by saying, that all debates on the rights of the Jews would cease, if they were to take up their staff and go off to this new kingdom of theirs.

In the late attack on Algiers the Dey of Algiers thought proper to deprecate some of his officers for want of judgment, on the principle that a head without brains is of little use.

An article from Naples, 6th ult. says, that a manducator has lately been addressed to connoisseurs, containing a list of the persons for which they are not to grant a solution, and which are reserved for the Archbishop. Among other persons are those who wear tight breeches, the tailors that make the merchants that sell them. Ladies are to be refused absolutely who display their bosoms or their arms naked above the elbow, or who wear tight petticoats, which offend modesty by showing the natural shape of the limbs.

A Beet was raised this season in the Garden of Mr. Henry Bailly, of Wilmington, Delaware, measuring 19 inches in circumference and weighing 8 lbs.

In Paris, the gallery of the theatre called Paradise. The Duchess of Orleans took a fancy to go to the play one night, with only a flûte de chambre and to sit there. A young officer sat next her, who was very free in his advances, and when the play was over, he concluded by offering her a supper, which she seemed to accept. He accompanied her down stairs, but was rebuffed when she saw her attendant and equipage and heard her name. However, he handed her into her carriage, and she called out, where is the supper you promised? He bowed and replied, in Paradise madam, we are all equal: but I am not insensible to the opportunity of seeing you on earth. devour the country—extravagant expenditures, increased salaries, multiplied offices, exorbitant duties, a degraded currency—add to this, that the demands of the general government this year amount to the prodigious sum of forty-two millions. And you have an imperfect view of our finances. Remember too, that the father is bowed down with a weight of bounties, to foster pressure and pernicious manufactures. Can you behold with indifference this scene of ruin? Wasted by war, scorched by pestilence, overrun by the troops of the treasury, and threatened with famine, will you still be the dupe of demagogues—the prey of stockjobbers?

That a nation may be poor, and yet free, is true. Greece, Italy & Switzerland, afford examples. But can that nation be said to be free, whose poverty is not the effect of nature, but of Legislative obstruction, and complicated fiscal extortion? The terms of the question convey its answer.

You will be told that these grievances are temporary, and that complaints will be lulled with promises of relief. It is of one of the arts of dominion to suspend oppression, and of its parasites to persuade, that relenting tyranny is reviving freedom, and that mitigated rapacity is actual justice.

In republican governments, the right of the people to elect their chief magistrate, is essential to the commonwealth, and dear to the citizen. But of this right, as if dangerous from its importance, we have been deprived by the stratagems of faction. Our presidents are no longer elected—they are appointed by caucuses. Even the other day, a convention of this sort, a fragment of Congress, proclaimed a successor to Mr. Madison. Yes, fellow-citizens, the right of filling the office in which the dignity, the power, and the mercy of the nation is represented, is usurped by the very men who have since, in the wilds of the west, begged pardon for an act of public robbery. Thus they listen on the heart of the constitution, and shoot and ramify corruption thro' every member of the nation. From the American people their proudest privilege is torn. The eagle of the empire is unplumed. Where is your respect for right; your love of virtue, the vital air of liberty?—where your consciousness of sovereign power? Is it to sleep for ever, like a sword in its scabbard?

The best way to prevent evil is to remove its cause. You need not be told, that party spirit is the source of all our woes. Arouse from its domination, and with the favour of heaven, they vanish. The occasion calls for diligence, as well as decision. Cases soon run into rules; and examples of folly in one administration, may become precedents for crime in another. Open your eyes and your hearts to the public good. When men are equally honest and patriotic, employ the services of the most capable. A new administration approaches. A judicious choice of representatives by the people, may make it a prosperous one. Disdain to contribute to the disastrous triumphs of a party. Let the honour of the country enlist your zeal—its prosperity unite your exertions; or yours will be fate of those nations, that have loaded mankind with misery, and heaped all its history with ruins.

I am fellow-citizens, your most obedient servant.

HENRY LEE, Jun. Westmoreland county, (Vir.) Oct. 28, 1816.

From the United States Gazette.

The Death Blow to Caucus and Faction.

The result of the late election demonstrates that the caucus system is a mere ruse, and that the ruling party has so long retained & hoped to continue the government in their own hands—it demonstrates that the People are not prepared to surrender their constitutional rights, but are determined to reserve to themselves the choice of their rulers, free from the dictation and the intrigue of usurpers and factionists. It demonstrates that the People will no longer tolerate the abominable impostures by which they were to be tricked out of their franchises, & made the humble slaves of some forty or fifty demagogues at Washington, with "Liberty and Equality" in their mouths, but desperate ambition or base avarice in their hearts. It demonstrates that their upholders and journey-men in iniquity have experienced a final overthrow, from which they can never again rise, until the People shall again be forgetful of what they owe to themselves and their posterity, and consent to surrender their dearest and most valuable privileges.

We hail, and all good men will unite with us in hailing the happy omen of future good. The majority with which the Independent Ticket was carried in this city, is almost unparalleled. There can be no doubt that the whole strength of the advocates of the caucus nomination was brought out. They omitted neither threats nor persuasion, they made their appeal to passion and to prejudice, and yet of this vast population they were able to bring but 1139 voters to the Poll!—Yet the mouth-piece of this diminutive faction has had the unblushing impudence to assure his credulous dupes that he and they were sure of success, and boasted of a glorious victory before the battle had begun! They are fallen, never, we hope, to rise again. How shamefully have we been disgraced by suffering this purveyor of falsehood and ribaldry, this pandor of lust, this monster of treachery and ingratitude to revel so long in public infamy! May Pennsylvania resume her dignity, and her citizens resume their virtue, and never again permit the one to be insulted or the other abused by the foul outcast of the prison, and the profligate violator of decency and morality.

From the N. Y. Columbian, a Democratic Paper.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The seeds of reform sown in Pennsylvania, promise, like the mustard seed of scripture, to yield an abundant growth in due season. A gentleman just from that state, informs us, that the distinguished stand made by the Aurora against caucusers and corruption, and tyranny and hypocrisy, and the whole system of Machiavelian fraud and Walpolean deception, &c. is rewarded not only by an immense increase of patronage to that establishment, but by a new era of correct thinking and independent conduct on the part of the republicans. The votes of that state have for years been regularly betrayed to, or purchased (secundum artem) by the Virginia managers. But a few free presses are shedding light on Pluto's dark abodes.—Reformation is in its dawn. Every thing must have a beginning ere it comes to maturity.—The commencement is auspicious.

The U. S. frigate Congress, captain Morris, and sloop of war Chippewa, capt. Reed, now in Boston Harbor, are under sailing orders, and will go to sea in the course of 10 or 15 days. The former ordered to the Gulf of Mexico, for the protection of our commerce in that sea; and the latter, we understand, will proceed to Cadix, with despatches, and then join the Mediterranean squadron.

From the New York Gazette, Nov. 8.

Captain Barret, of the brig Nancy, from St. Croix, informs, that a report was received from St. Thomas, that the Island of Margarita had been retaken by the Royalists. Also, that an expedition was fitting out at Porto Rico to reinforce the Royalists on the coast of Laguna.

DIED, On Wednesday, November 6, at his seat at Morrisania, county of Westchester (N. Y.) the Hon. GOVERNOR MORRIS, after a short but distressing illness, in the 65th year of his age. We are not sufficiently possessed of facts, to attempt even a sketch of the life of the illustrious deceased, but trust the hand of some one of his intimate friends will not be wanting to form an outline, valuable for its interest, correctness and fidelity. He has filled a large space in the political history of this country, and his history will form a valuable article to the biographer. [Ec. Post.

100 Dollars Reward.

Ranaway from the subscriber on the 25th of August last, negro Sam Butler, or as he is sometimes called Sam Dugan. He was raised the property of Nicholas Carroll, esq. late of the city of Annapolis, and sold to a Mr. Geo. Howard of Baltimore, from whom I purchased him. Sam is about 30 years of age, 5 feet, 7 or 8 inches high, slender made, narrow between the shoulders, rather of a yellowish color—and long face. His under jaw rather longer than the upper one, and eyes having considerable white in them. His feet are ill shaped with large lumps on the inside of them, by some called the pudding or gut foot. He makes some pretensions to religion—but being an uncommon liar, may be easily detected on that head. Is a great coward. It is quite likely he has obtained a pass, but without the county seal I should suppose this would have no weight; his clothing was country tow linen shirts and trousers, and a long snuff colored cloth coat. It is expected he is lurking about the city of Baltimore, or at the farm of Mr. George Howard, about 13 miles from the city of Baltimore, or at the farm of Nicholas Carroll, esq. called the Cave, or in the neighborhood of the lower ferry, on South River. If said negro is apprehended and brought home to me, the above reward will be given. All persons are strictly forewarned harboring or employing the above negro, at their peril.

POETS CORNER

ON SOLITUDE

The following is extracted from a beautiful POEM, written by Henry Krue White, Esq. It is not that my lot is low, That bids this silent tear to flow; It is not grief that bids me mourn, It is that I am all alone.

FROM A SERMON ON THE AUTUMN

Text—And Isaac went out to meditate in the field, at the even tide.—Gen. 24, 63.

THERE is an "even tide" in the day—an hour when the sun retires, and the shadows fall, and when nature assumes the appearance of soberness and silence. It is an hour from which every where the thoughtless fly, as peopled only in their imagination with images of gloom; it is the hour on the other hand, which in every age, the wise have loved, as bringing with it sentiments and affections more valuable than all the splendors of the day.

FROM HAYTI.

Translated from the Port-au-Prince Telegraph. Port-au-Prince, Oct. 13, 1816. Year 13. The 10th inst. the day fixed for the President of Hayti to take his oath before the Senators, in conformity to the 143d article of the Revised constitution, afforded general satisfaction. At noon, the drums were beat to assemble the troops. At 2 o'clock the line was formed, which extended from the church to the senate. The Cortege had already convened at the National House; whither, about 3 o'clock the President repaired, accompanied by the generals of the army and by his whole staff. He was preceded by two Senators, who, after their arrival at the door, led him to the seat appropriated for him, which was directly facing that of the President of the Senate.

After a short pause, the President of the Senate rose, and thus addressed the President of Hayti: Citizen President, The annals of the republic of Hayti will transmit to posterity, traits, which in exciting its admiration, will remove all doubts as to their existence; their distinguishing characters being so truly wonderful. In fact, the revolutionary events which have, as it were, by enchantment, established liberty & independence in the place of prejudice and slavery, are of a nature to produce surprise in those most accustomed to the vicissitudes of human nature. It will belong to history to relate how the Haytian nation, after having so long endured the yoke of an odious despotism, should at once have freed herself from her degraded state, and been restored to her natural dignity. It will belong to this faithful guardian of great actions to relate by what means the brave men, who defended oppressed humanity, triumphed in this memorable struggle over the perfidy of a cruel enemy, recovered our usurped rights, and finally proclaimed the emancipation of the country.

Nevertheless, a revolution, whose result was to establish the state of this country, was only to be effected by the purest heroism. Hayti, found this resource in her own bosom. Soon there rushed forward in her behalf, those courageous souls whom no danger could appal, and who, combining the intrepidity of the warrior with the prudence of wisdom, preferred an evident loss to the degraded state which was so recently our lot.

Yes, Citizen President, such were the persons, who animated by your example, executed this noble but perilous enterprise. It was by the inspiration of your energy that the republican phalanxes exterminated those supporters of tyranny. If circumstances were at times difficult your courage was always adequate to the event; and no greater proof can be adduced that you were predestinated to accomplish this important act, than the great wisdom which you have evinced for the last twenty-five years, the period that political anxieties agitated the minds of all the children of liberty. Glorious as these actions have been, it is to be observed, that success would have been useless, and the numerous sacrifices to obtain the proposed object vain, if, as the fruit of victory, a new despotism should have arisen out of the old. Such was, nevertheless, the fatality that seemed to threaten Hayti; for some of those authors of this interesting regeneration, who were first brought forward by public gratitude to govern the republic, soon began to tyrannize over the nation which had exalted them; to infringe upon the rights they had sworn to respect, and finally to fill up the measure of vexations in which you yourself had so largely to participate.

Heaven, who at its pleasure can put an end to the perversity of the wicked, also knew how to punish these unworthy oppressors. Precipitated from the height of their power into insignificance, their fall is an example of the fickleness of human greatness, and a lesson to those, who despising the most sacred duties, consider the people placed under their direction as mere victims to be sacrificed to their ambition.

Citizen President, In directing your attention to the abuses of power of those who preceded you in the command, the senate doing homage to truth observes that you have been enabled to escape the contagion of those unfortunate times; that taking an opposite course to your predecessors, you have realized public expectation, by gradually and sensibly restoring that fleeting happiness, which a community is so anxious to preserve, by adopting a regular government. If a parallel could be drawn between the present situation of the state and that of the period when crimes triumphed, there would be no comparison in the result since, instead of an uncertain and precarious state of things, we see the republic strengthened at home and respected abroad; we see all the branches of the general government directed towards its prosperity. So many noble works are pieces of its lasting fame.

Hayti, in entering her political career, does not as yet offer that brilliant perspective, which distinguishes the states of the civilized world—it is the work of time—But like them, improving by age, she must ere long arrive at that state of maturity, which has successively rendered them illustrious—it belongs to the chief whose genius has more than once saved the country, to unfold the principles which may lead to this desirable object. It is by the revival of social institutions, in fact, by the creation of laws dictated by prudence, and more especially in the manner of their execution, that we can expect to attain to this happy pre-eminence. You, whose zeal for the public good, has known no abatement! You, who make the happiness of your fellow-citizens your principal study, must give the necessary impulse towards the execution of this plan—may it soon become perfect.

Citizen President.

The different elections which have called you to the first magistracy of the state, are an unequivocal proof of the approbation due to your administration. Your virtues and services have for a long time commanded public opinion in your favour, and the Senate, in re-electing you to the Presidency of the republic for life, believe they give you a new evidence of the esteem of the nation.

This choice, however gratifying to their wishes in placing you in a more important situation, seems to require additional obligations on your part. You will confirm this high consideration by taking the sacred oath required by the Constitutional Charter—An oath which imposes upon you very high duties, and which is the guarantee and foundation of your obligations.

We delight in the conviction that an increase of power will have no influence on the moderate use you have ever made of authority, and that the principles which have always been admitted for their purity will remain inviolate.—The nation reposes on your benevolence, believing that the laws and justice resulting from it, will be your only rule—that a paternal government will distinguish every moment of your political existence, and that the power confided to your care will be employed to the public good—Such are their wishes.—May your meditations in promoting those views of benevolence experience the satisfaction peculiar to generous minds, and may the Divine Power suitably reward you.

The President of Hayti replied in the following terms:— Citizen Senators, The Constitution of the Republic has just been revised conformably to our fundamental laws and the principles of that of the 27th December, 1806. It has experienced the alterations which time and experience rendered indispensable; calculated more for the manners and character of the people for whom it was intended than resembling any other constitution. Precipitated from the situation we are placed in, it was the duty of our legislators to guarantee the republic against every fear for its safety and independence—to explain to the people the extent of their rights and strength, as also to point out the respect and submission due by them to the laws prescribed.

Extract from a letter to a respectable House in Baltimore, dated New-York, Nov. 3.

Mr. Daschkoff, the Russian Minister, has notified our government that his mission is at an end, and that he shall leave the country as soon as he can arrange his affairs. This is the result of a negotiation between him and our government, relative to the arrest some time since of Kozloff, the Russian Consul General, for a criminal offence committed in Philadelphia; and this last step is in conformity with positive instructions from his government. The same spirit which dictated these orders, will in all probability, refuse an audience to our minister Mr. Pinkney, and may even throw some obstacles in the way of our trade. Mr. Daschkoff leaves this city to-day, and sells his furniture during the next week.

And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the several district attorneys within this State, to give information to the person administering the government of this State, whenever a case shall arise within their respective districts, rendering it necessary, in their opinion, to prosecute, either at the first court of general sessions of the peace to be held in his district after the first day of July next, or at the time of his acceptance of his office where such district attorney shall be hereafter appointed, shall take the following oath: "I do solemnly swear or affirm (as the case may be) that I will to the best of my ability, execute the duty imposed on me by the act to suppress duelling."

MUTINY AND MURDER.

Melancholy intelligence has at length been received, of the schr. Plattburg, Capt. Wm. Hackett, of Baltimore, bound on a voyage to Smyrna, having on board a cargo of coffee, and between 40 and 50,000 dollars in specie. A mutiny broke out amongst the crew, and it is stated on the confession of four of those concerned in the plot, who were taken at Copenhagen, that they put the captain, the mate (a man by the name of Yeiser of this place,) and a Mr. Baynard the supercargo, to death. Taking possession of the vessel the mutineers bore up for Norway, and arrived at Mindahl. One of the mutineers personating the murdered captain, wrote a letter to the American Consul at Christiansand, under that assumed name. He stated that he had sailed from bed by themselves, that such Haytian, with the Constitutional Charter in his hand, may know what he can do, and what he ought to do. It was necessary to divide the powers upon which the safety of the public liberty depended; to regulate them upon the principles of democracy which govern us; to remove all obstacles interfering with the regular course of government to make the Constitution executable, in order to insure its execution.

I flatter myself, Citizen Senators, that this object has been attained, and that we shall concur with the House of Representatives of the people in realising public expectations. Elevated to the first magistracy of the state nothing is more satisfactory to me, citizen president, than the expression of the wishes of the Senate, communicated through you, and to witness the events which have brought us to this grand epoch of our political career accomplished before our eyes.

How gratifying it is to me to be able to express to the nation who have thus promoted me the acknowledgements which I owe them for their incessant proofs of love and devotion. It is with the most ardent disposition to accomplish it—to live and die for the welfare and happiness of my fellow-citizens, that before God, and in your presence, Citizen Senators, I swear to the nation, to faithfully perform the office of the President of Hayti to maintain the Constitution to the utmost of my power; to respect, and cause to be respected, the rights and independence of the Haytian nation.

After the ceremony a salute of 17 guns announced to the people that the President had taken the oath. The House then rose and proceeded to the Church.

The order of the procession was as follows:

MILITARY MUSIC.

1. Public Teachers and their Pupils.
2. Haytian and Foreign Merchants.
3. Agricultural officers.
4. Health Officers.
5. Administration Corps.
6. Judiciary Corps.
7. Officers of the Port and Military Marine.
8. Staff Officers of the city and county.
9. Those of the President of Hayti.
10. Foreign Consuls.
11. Master of Finance and Treasurer General.
12. The Generals of the Army followed by the Members of the Senate, the President of Hayti and President of the Senate.

The grenadiers of the President's foot guards formed the line on the right, during the march of the procession, and the chasseurs of the same corps on the left; the grenadiers opened and the horse chasseurs closed the procession. All the streets through which the procession was to pass were crowded with citizens. Men, women, and children, on the joyful occasion, assembled from all parts to see their relatives and friends followed by their virtuous and worthy Chief. When the Procession reached the Church, Te Deum was sung. After it was over a thundering discharge of artillery was heard from the terrace, the forts and all the vessels in the Roads. The President of Hayti then returned to the government Palace with the procession.

In the evening an illumination took place throughout the city, and every inhabitant in retiring, carried peace and serenity of mind to their homes.

DUTCH OFFICIAL ACCOUNT OF THE BATTLE AT ALGIERS.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 16.

Stouts Courant Extraordinary.

Lieutenant Arrans, of the naval service, this morning arrived from the Bay of Algiers, which he left on the first of September, at the office of the marine department, with despatches from Vice Admiral Capellen, of the following contents:

Hon. Sir—Lord Exmouth, during his short stay at Gibraltar, having increased his forces with some gun boats, and made all his arrangements, on the 14th of August the united squadrons got to sea.

On the 10th, off the Cape de Gat, the Promethea joined the fleet. Captain Dashwood reported that he had succeeded in getting the family of the British consul at Algiers on board of a stranger; but that their flight being soon discovered, the consul together with two boats crew of the Promethea had been arrested by the Day, who, having already received report of this second expedition, had made all preparations for an obstinate opposition, and summoning the inhabitants of the interior had already assembled more than 60,000 men, both Moors and Arabs, under the walls of Algiers.

In consequence of a calm, and afterwards by strong easterly winds, we were not before the Bay of Algiers until the 27th August, in the morning, Lord Exmouth immediately sent by a flag of truce a written proposal to the Dey, containing in substance, that the late atrocities at Bona having broken all former connexions, he demanded in the name of the Prince Regent:

1. The immediate deliverance of all Christian slaves without ransom.
2. The restitution of all money which had already been received for the Sardinian and Neapolitan captives.
3. A solemn declaration from the Dey, that he bound himself like those of Tripoli and Tunis, to respect the rights of humanity, and in future wars to treat all prisoners according to the usages of European nations.
4. Peace with his Majesty the King of the Netherlands on the like terms as with the Prince Regent.

On all these articles his Lordship expected an answer, yes or no, or hostilities must immediately commence:

His Lordship, on whom I waited in the morning, was afraid that he should that day be obliged to rest satisfied with coming to anchor, and confine himself for the night to an attack by bomb vessels, gun and rocket boats. Scarcely had I returned on board my vessel when the sea breeze sprung up, and the fleet bore into the bay with press of sail; the four bomb vessels immediately took their station before the town, and every thing was prepared for the attack. Shortly afterwards, his Lordship communicated to me by private signals, "I shall attack immediately, if the wind does not fail." Upon this I immediately made signal to form line of battle in the order agreed upon, in the supposition that all the officers must have been well acquainted with the position of the forts and batteries that fell to our share before the attack was to begin; but as it appears that the signal was not understood, I resolved to change the line, and lead it myself in the Melampus.

At half past one o'clock the whole fleet bore up in succession, the Melampus closing in with the rear-most ship of the English line; and at 15 minutes past two o'clock, we saw Lord Exmouth with the Queen Charlotte before the wind, with sails standing, come to anchor with three anchors from the stern, with her broadside in the wished for position within pistol shot of the batteries, just before the opening of the Mole.

This daring and unexpected manoeuvre of this vessel (a three decker) appears to have so confounded the enemy, that a second ship of the line had already well nigh taken her position before the batteries opened their fire, which, how violent soever, was fully replied to.

Having told captain de Man that I wished, as speedily as possible, with the Melampus, and the other frigates in succession, to make our position on the larboard side of Lord Exmouth, and to draw upon our squadron all the fire of the southern batteries, the captain brought his frigate in a masterly manner under the cross fire of more than one hundred guns, the bowsprit quite free of the Glasgow, with an anchor from the head and stern, in the required position so as to open her larboard guns at the same minute. Captain Ziervogel, who was fully acquainted with the above plan, and with the batteries, brought his frigate the Diana, nearly the same moment, within a fathom's length of the place I had wished it, for our directed position. The Dageraad, captain Polders, immediately opened her batteries in the best direction. The captains Van der Straeten and Van der Hart, by the thick smoke, and not being so fully acquainted with the localities, were not so fortunate in the first moments; but worked with the greatest coolness, and under the heaviest fire, so as to give our batteries a good direction. The Eendragt, capt. Lieutenant Wardenberg, which I had placed in reserve, in order to be able to bring assistance, remained under the fire of the batteries close by.

Our ships had not fired for more than half an hour, when Lord Exmouth acquainted me that he was very much satisfied with the direction of the fire of our squadron on the southern batteries, because these giving now as little hindrance as possible, he commanded the whole of the Mole, and all the enemy's ships.

His Majesty's squadron, as well as the British force, appeared to be inspired with the devotedness of our magnanimous chief to the cause of all mankind; and the coolness and order with which the terrible fire of the batteries was replied to, under the mazy walls of Algiers, will as little admit of description, as the heroism and self-devotion of each individual generally, & the greatness of Lord Exmouth in particular, in the attack of this memorable day.

The destruction of nearly half Algiers, and, at eight o'clock in the evening, the burning of the whole Algerine navy, have been the result of it. Till nine o'clock, Lord Exmouth remained with the Queen Charlotte in the same position, in the bottom of the bay, there being encouraging every one not to give up the Mole, until the whole was completed, and thus displaying such perseverance that all were animated with the same spirit, and the fire of the ships against that of a brave and desperate enemy appeared to redouble.

Shortly afterwards, the Queen Charlotte, by the loosening of the burning wreck, being in the greatest danger, we were, under the heaviest fire, only anxious for the safety of our noble leader, but upon offering him the assistance of all the boats of the squadron, his reply was, "that having calculated every thing it behoved us by no means to be alarmed for his safety, but only to continue our fire with redoubled zeal, for the execution of his orders, and according to his example."

His Lordship at last, about half an hour to ten o'clock, having completed the destruction in the mole, gave orders to retire without the reach of the enemy's fire, which I, as well as all others, scrupled to obey, before the Queen Charlotte was in safety from the burning ships.

In this retreat, which for the want of wind, and the damage suffered in the rigging, was very slow, the ships had still to suffer much from a new opened and redoubled fire from the enemy's batteries, at last, the land breeze springing up, which Lord Exmouth had reckoned upon, the fleet at 12 o'clock, came to anchor in the middle of the bay.

The Queen Charlotte, under the fire of the batteries, passing the Melampus under sail, his Lordship wished to be able to see me, in order to completely reward me by shaking my hand in the heartiest manner, and saying—"I have not lost sight of my Dutch friends: they have as well as mine, done their best for the glory of the day."

This circumstance, and the general order of Lord Exmouth to the fleet, of which I have the honour to enclose a copy, must make the squadron hope for His Majesty's satisfaction.

For our loss in killed and wounded, I have to refer you to the subjoined list, it is remarkably small for ships exposed to a fire of eight hours duration, in comparison with that of the English ships. In the damage done to our rigging, &c. your Excellency will observe that we have been less fortunate.

The day after the action, Lord Exmouth sent a second summons to the dey, of which his lordship sent me a copy, it stated, that by the destruction of half Algiers and of his whole navy, the dey was now chastised for his faithless conduct at Bona, &c. and that he could only prevent the total destruction of the town by the acceptance of the conditions of the preceding day. The signal of the acceptance of the conditions was the firing of three shots, which, three hours afterwards, we had the satisfaction of hearing. In conference with two persons employed by the dey, on board Lord Exmouth's ship, together with admiral Milne and captain Brisbane, were present, all the points were regulated. The conclusion of the peace was for England and the Netherlands celebrated by the firing a salute of twice 24 cannon, and I have now the satisfaction of wishing you joy on the successful termination of the efforts of his majesty in the cause of humanity. [Here follows the praise bestowed by the admiral on the different officers of his squadron.]

In proof of his adherence to the treaty, the Dey must this day, at 12 o'clock, deliver up $300,000 and all the slaves must be ready for embarkation at the wharf. Those of our country are in number 26 or 27 all well, besides many others driven into the interior of the country, and who cannot be here before 2 or 3 days.

I shall have the honour, on a future opportunity to report farther to your Excellency, and am, with the highest respect, &c. &c.

Ran away from the subscriber on the 25th of August last, negro Sam Shab, or as he is sometimes called Sam Deagan. He was raised the property of Nicholas Carroll, esq. late of the city of Annapolis, and sold to a Mr. George Howard of Baltimore, from whom he purchased him. Sam is about 30 years of age, 5 feet, 7 or 8 inches high, slender made, narrow between the shoulders, rather of a yellowish color, long face. His under jaw rather larger than the upper one, and eyes having considerable white in them. His feet are ill shaped with large lumps on the inside of them, by some called the pudding or gut foot. He makes some pretensions to religion—but being an uncommon liar, may be easily detected on that head. Is a great coward. It is quite likely he has obtained a passport without the county seal I should suppose this would have no weight; his clothing was country tow linen shirt and trousers, and a long snuff colored cloth coat. It is expected he is lurking about the city of Baltimore, or the farm of Mr. George Howard, about 13 miles from the city of Baltimore, or at the farm of Nicholas Carroll, esq. called the Caves, or in the neighborhood of the lower ferry, of South River. If said negro is apprehended and brought home to me, the above reward will be given. All persons are strictly forewarned harboring or employing the above negro, at their peril.

N. B. Sam has a free wife, her name is Sarah. She possesses some real property near Annapolis. If he returns home without running me to a further cost, and behaves himself in future, his conduct will be looked over.
He has a down look when spoken to.

THE RETURN OF NAPOLEON FROM ELBA.

Napoleon embarked at Elba, with eleven hundred and forty two men, and in twenty days recovered the imperial crown of France. Some circumstances relative to the expedition were related in my presence the other evening, to General Kosciuszko, by Baron the Colonel Jerzmanowski, commandant of the Polish lancers of the guard, who accompanied the emperor to Elba; and, as they tally with the accounts circulated here both in print and conversation, as well as with the famous bulletin of the Moniteur, I shall venture to give a short detail of his information.

rather strong, but subsided into a calm, as clear by day light they had made no more than 6 leagues, and were between Elba and Caprai, in sight of the English and French cruisers. The night, however, had not been totally lost, for during the darkness the soldiers and crew had been let over the sides of the brig, and had entirely changed her painting from the yellow and the grey to black and white, in order to escape the observation of those who were acquainted with the vessel.

It was proposed to return to Porto Ferrajo, but Napoleon ordered the Flotilla to continue its route, determining in case of necessity to attack the French cruisers, two frigates and a brig, which, however, it was thought would join rather than oppose them. At twelve the same day the wind freshened, and the flotilla, at four o'clock was off the headland of Leghorn. Three men of war were in sight, and one of them a brig, bearing down on the Inconstant, the ports were taken up, & some preparations made for action. The guard, however, were ordered to take off their caps, and lie down on the deck, Napoleon intending to board the vessel only as a last resource, and in case the Inconstant should not be permitted to pass without a visit.

But the Zephyr, as she was called, only passed alongside the brig, and her captain, Andrieux, being hailed by lieutenant Trillade, who was known to him, only asked whether the Inconstant was bound? Trillade answered "to Genoa," and wished to know if he could execute any commission for the captain of the Zephyr—Andrieux said no, and at parting cried out, "how's the emperor?" Napoleon himself exclaimed "wonderfully well," and the ships dropped away from each other. The wind increased during the night of the 27th, and at day light of the 28th the coasts of Provence were in sight. A 74 gun ship was seen steering apparently for Sardinia. The colonel said, that before this time it was generally thought on board that the flotilla was going to Naples. Many questions were put to the officers by the men, and by the officers even to the emperor, who smiled, & said nothing; at last, however, he exclaimed; "eh bien, la c'est la France." Immediately every body was in activity, and crowded round the emperor to hear his intentions. The first step he took was to order two or three of the commissaries of his little army to prepare their pens and paper, which they accordingly got in order, and resting on the companion, took down, from the emperor's mouth, the proclamations to the army and to the French. When these compositions were written they were read aloud; Napoleon disliked some portions of them, and made alterations, they were again read, and again altered, until, after at least, ten revisions, he said, "that will do, now copy them." At the word, all the soldiers and sailors who could write, laid themselves down on the deck, with their paper and implements, and completed a sufficient number for immediate dispersion on landing. The next object was the preparation of the tricolor cockades, which was easily managed, by ripping off one of the circles of the Elbe cockade, which had, on their first arrival on the island, been even more like the French national colors, but had been changed by the emperor, who thought it might be the cause of suspicion. During these occupations, and for the latter part of the voyage, the officers, soldiers & sailors surrounded Napoleon, who took very little sleep, and was generally on deck. Lying down, sitting, standing, and strolling about him, familiarly, they asked him unceasing questions, to which he as unreservedly and without the sign of anger or impatience, replied, although some were not a little indiscreet, for they required his opinions on many living characters, kings, marshals and ministers, and discussed notorious passages of his own campaigns, and even of his domestic policy. After satisfying or eluding their curiosity, he would himself enter into details of his own conduct, of that of his rivals, or of his friends; and then, from the examination of contemporary merit, touched upon such historical topics as related more particularly to the military events of modern up to ancient times. All this he did with an easy persuasive eloquence which delighted and instructed his hearers, and, as our colonel added, rendered every word worthy a particular record. He talked without disguise of his present attachment to his duties, of his means, and of his hopes. He said, "In a case like this, one must think slowly, but act promptly. I have long weighed and most maturely considered the project. The glory, the advantages we shall gain, if we succeed, I need not enlarge upon. If we fail—to military men, who have from their infancy faced death in so many shapes, the fate which awaits us is not terrific; we know, and we despair, for we have a thousand times faced the worst which a reverse could bring.

These were nearly the last words which he spoke before his little fleet came to anchor in the gulf of Juan, and they were delivered with a more act phrase, as a sort of final address to the companions of his great enterprise.

By the Emperor, Captain Holt, ordered at New-York in 20 days from Liverpool.

London, Oct. 18.
A dreadful fire broke out at Constantinople on the 13th of August, which destroyed 1,200 houses and 5000 shops and magazines. The Janissaries it is stated, did not display their usual slowness in extinguishing the flames. The palace of their late favourite, Jusuf Aga, was the only building in the destroyed quarter which remained unharmed.

The undementioned quantity of powder and shot was expended on board the Leander in the attack on Algiers:—Powder, 22,000 lbs.; round shot 43 pounders, 1815; tin case, 142; grape, 151; round 24 pounders, 2400; tin case, 190; grape 200; doubleheaded, 34; round 12 pounders, 80; grape 24; tin case 24; round 18 pounders 20.

The Impregnable expended 400 barrels of 18 tons of powder; and 7000, or 100 tons of round shot, besides case, cannister, and sharp-nell shells. One 18lb. shot entered her bulwark, passed through the heart of the mainmast, and went out at the opposite side. A 44lb. shot lodged in the ship has been slung in the boatswain's store-room, with the following words painted on it:

This was sent by the Dey of Algiers on board H. M. S. Impregnable, as one of the advocates for slavery, but without effect, the 27th August, 1816.

By enquiries as to the amount of loss on the part of the Algerines only, 5000 Janissaries and from 5 to 6000 Arabs fell, besides women and children. A shell thrown from one of the bombs burst in a house, where nine children were assembled, and unhappily killed the whole, and there was scarcely a house in the city but what had suffered more or less injury from the bombardment.

An interesting event occurred on the beach, while the treaty with the Dey was pending. Mr. Aitchison, a marine artillery officer, happening to meet a Frenchman, who had been in captivity for 15 years, asked him if he would like to return to France in the French ship which lay in the bay. He indignantly replied, that he felt ashamed of his country, but would go any where with the brave English, who had so kindly liberated him.

By our advices from Naples, via France, we find that although the American squadron had quitted the bay, the subject in dispute was not finally adjusted. It was supposed, however, that the negotiation was brought to a close. It was pretty clearly understood that the American ambassador, Mr. Pinckney, had not succeeded in his object, and that nothing would be done in the way of hostility, until the whole of the matter had been laid before congress.

Liverpool, Oct. 16.
The Grand Duke Constantine, the Emperor of Russia's brother, & General Wittgenstein, arrived on Saturday in London.

Mr. Ingleby, sen. as our readers will perceive by an advertisement in another part of this paper, is now exhibiting his dexterity at the bottom of Lord-street. Among other equally wonderful tricks, he professes to show the true method of taking off a gentleman's head. On Monday night, one of his auditors professed himself willing to undergo the ceremony of decapitation. He was, however, appalled by the preparations necessary for the experiment; fled the room and could not be persuaded to enter it again.

October 19.
Letters from Smyrna, dated Sept. 3, have been received in Liverpool, from which we learn, that on the 1st ult. a fleet of twenty-eight vessels arrived at that place from Constantinople, having on board the high admiral captain Bashiaw, of Turkey. By its appearance, the whole city was thrown into confusion; but when the governor went on board to pay his respects to the Bashiaw, he was informed that he had come to receive the usual tribute for the Grand Signor; and that he had five thousand troops with him, for the purpose of bringing to submission a neighboring governor, who had not done his duty. The Bashiaw requested the governor to provide quarters in the city, for his troops, which was accordingly done; and the governor, with twenty other members of the government, went on board on the 2d, where the whole were immediately put in trains, or beheaded and strangled. The Bashiaw then sent on shore a new governor, and on the 3d, all was quiet and the event, which for a time alarmed all the possessors of Frank property, seemed to excite very little attention. The only reason for this summary proceeding is said to be, that the governor had of late become very powerful.

His majesty's ship Tormagant, arrived from the East Indies, brings an account of a dreadful gale at the Cape of Good Hope, on the 28th of July, in which several ships had been driven on shore, including his majesty's ship Revolutionnaire & Zebra. Both the latter had been got off, but not without damage.

Extract of a letter from Amsterdam, dated the 27th ult.—On the 21st inst. the ship Rolfs, capt. Child, cleared out from this port for Baltimore. Among the passengers by her was marshal Soult, he arrived here from Germany the day before she sailed, under the name of Mr. Friar. The captain is ignorant of his guest, as we only know of it yesterday by the avowal of his lady, who goes after him by the first conveyance.

October 21.
The ship Lady Warren, of this port, which was lately sent into Cadix by a Spanish ship of war, on her voyage home from Buenos Ayres, it appears, has been released, after the payment of considerable expenses, but the cargo has been condemned, and no part of it will be recovered. We cannot understand the principle of this distinction, as both the ship and cargo were bona fide British property, and any colonial law which would condemn the one most equally affect the other. It is said that several other ships from Buenos Ayres have been seized in the same manner, and if this practice is persisted in, it must either place the whole trade with Spanish America on a very insecure footing, or bring on very serious discussions between this Government and that of Spain.

Emigration to America.
The following extract from a friend in New-York, we recommend to the perusal of those misguided people whose ideas may still turn upon emigrating to the United States, as it adds another to the many arguments already produced, to prove the fallacy of those prospects which have been so assiduously spread abroad, but to deceive and ruin such as may be incautious enough to fall into the snare.

New-York, 22d August.
Within the last three months we have had three vessels consigned to us full of passengers from the "Land of Potatoes"; what they will do here I cannot say, as vessels are arriving out full of them daily.—We expect another every tide, when I shall have to take a short trip to Amboy (about ninety miles) to meet & prevent her entering the port of New-York, to save the bond of 300 dollars upon each passenger. Upwards of 4,000 have applied to the British Consul to be sent home again.

Algiers, state of the city & the battle.

We have the pleasure to announce intelligence from Algiers since the departure of the British squadron from those shores. His majesty's ship Prometheus, Captain Dashwood, arrived on Sunday night from the Mediterranean. She sailed from Algiers on the 20th ult. and left the city in a very disturbed state. For some time after the departure of the British fleet, the Turkish soldiers and the inhabitants appeared regardless of their ruined city. On the 10th of September, the soldiers broke out into open tumult, & offered to the Dey the choice of losing his own head or of permitting the murder of all the Jews and Moors, and the plunder of the city. The Dey indignantly offered himself to be the sacrifice of their rage, but afterwards, by some largesses, he composed their turbulence. They then began to clear away the rubbish from the streets, and to make the ramparts appear less ruinous, by filling up the chasms in them with mortar and loose stones. But up to the time of the Prometheus sailing, few or no endeavors were made towards the permanent repair of the batteries. No head was offered to the crew of the Prometheus, though the Dey more than once expressed his indignation, that a British ship should remain stationary in the bay.

The French papers state, that the Dey has taken umbrage at the conduct of the emperor of Morocco, upon his charges with not having observed the stipulations of treaties, and from whom he demands satisfaction. He accuses him of having favored his enemies. The Dey hopes to embroil him with the English.

France.
The return of the new chamber of deputies is generally anticipated, with the exception of those from Corsica and the Lower Alps, through many of the ultra-republicans are being successful some of the most important of them have been these elections. The anniversary of the murder of the Queen Maria Antonietta on the scaffold, had been marked with a ceremony by the king's dissection, similar to that which was observed on the anniversary of the death of Louis the X. 14th, and which consisted simply in the reading, in all the churches, of the last testament of the royal victims.

The king of France is said to have signed a treaty with the pope, and in an article from Rome it is affirmed, that the concordat made with Bonaparte is annulled, & affairs replaced in the situation in which they were by the concordat between Leo X and Francis I.

On account of the frequency of robberies at Paris, patrols have been ordered to parade the streets all night.

Spain.
The queen of Spain and her sister arrived in Madrid on the 28th ult. The marriage ceremony, which consisted the princess, who is represented as young and lovely, with the beloved Ferdinand for life, was celebrated on the following day. Ferdinand immediately issued a decree of amnesty and general pardon for all those offenders in Spain, whose punishment can be remitted without danger to society, on account of his marriage. But none of the patriots are included in his amnesty.

The emperor of Russia has arrived at Warsaw.

The new Messiah.
The story of a Jew having collected a large army in the neighborhood of Babylon, is now acknowledged to be a fabrication.

Maria Louisa.
Maria Louisa remained near six weeks at Florence, where her health improved surprisingly. She received with affability the inhabitants of distinction, and a few French gentlemen. It was remarkable she often spoke of her husband, and even with the most affectionate attachment. She became very popular, appearing daily in her carriage, unattended, in every part of the town.

Imperial Nuptials.—The marriage of the emperor of Austria will take place sooner than has been announced. His highness the Prince Joseph of Schwarzenburg, will proceed immediately as ambassador extraordinary to Munich, in order to fulfil the honorable mission with which he is charged. The princess will arrive at Vienna, it is expected, on the 7th November, and the ceremony will take place immediately after.

Lord Exmouth has received the honorary degree of D. C. L. from the University of Oxford.

It is generally believed that the ports will be opened, after the 15th of next month, for the importation of corn.

Rear admiral Sir David Milne will go out shortly commander in chief at Halifax.

Extraordinary Occurrence.—The Exeter Mail Coach on its way to London, was attacked on Sunday night at Winterslow Hut, seven miles on this side of Salisbury, in a most extraordinary manner. At the moment when the coachman pulled up to deliver his bags, one of the leaders was suddenly seized by a ferocious animal. This produced a great confusion and alarm; two passengers who were inside the mail got out, ran into the house and locked themselves up in a room above stairs; the horses kicked and plunged violently, and it was with difficulty the coachman could prevent the carriage from being overturned. It was soon perceived by the coachman and guard, by the light of the lamps, that the animal which had seized the horse was a huge lioness. A large mastiff dog came up and attacked her ferociously, on which she quitted the horse and turned upon him.—The dog fled, but was pursued and killed by the lioness, within about forty yards of the place. It appears that she had escaped from a caravan, that was standing on the road side, belonging to the proprietors of a menagerie, on their way to Salisbury fair. An alarm being given the keeper pursued and hunted the lioness into an arched under a gateway, where they closed her so effectually as to prevent her escape. The horse when first attacked fought with great spirit, and if at liberty, would probably have beaten down the antagonist with his fore feet, but in plunging he embarrassed himself in the harness.

The lioness, it appears, attacked him in front, and springing at his throat, had fastened the talons of her fore feet on each side of his neck, close to the head, while the talons of her hind feet were forced into his chest.—In this situation she hung, while the blood was seen flying, as if a vein had been opened with a lance. The ferocious animal missed the throat and the jugular vein, but the horse in dreadfully torn, he is not expected to survive. He was a capital horse, the best in the set. The expression of agony in his teeth and moans was most affecting. A fresh horse having been procured, the mail drove on having been detained three quarters of an hour by this extraordinary obstruction.

Paris.—On Wednesday, at 20 minutes after one o'clock, Barent completed his sad and extraordinary journey of walking 1000 miles in 22 days. From his great age (72 years) his appearance was remarkable. The appearance of the weather for some time after the commencement of his task, it was thought he would never be able to accomplish it. He has, however, disappointed many who bet against him, by the apparent ease with which he completed it.

Particulars of the battle between the combined squadrons of British and Holland, and the batteries of Algiers, on the 20th and 21st of August, 1816, taken from the minutes on board H. M. S. Superb.

The morning of the 20th of August, 1816, presented to the view of the combined squadron the city of Algiers about 5 leagues on the weather bow.—A battery to combat was opened on every countenance, and every bottom throbb'd high to cover themselves with iron, and rescue their fellow Christians from ignominious slavery. Every fall was followed with alacrity, and each ship of the combined squadrons engaged by action. At 7 o'clock a private landing out of the bay under French colors. At 9 the Severn sent out with a flag of truce, the fleet bearing in sight, and light variable air, under all sails. At 11, 30, the Admiral's orders were for the fleet to which we joined accordingly, and at 12, 30, H. M. S. Superb to quarters, out with boats and muzzled and armed them, called the anchors down for letting go, &c. &c. The Admiral having made the signal to prepare to anchor and engage the enemy. At 1 o'clock we were in the following order of battle: Genl. Charlton's Squadron, 1st rank, Superb; 2d rank, St. Vincent; 3d rank, Cordoba; 4th rank, Albion; 5th rank, Glasgow; 6th rank, Severn; 7th rank, Prometheus; 8th rank, the Admiral's anchored, and muzzled head, and stem aboard five yards of the Mole Head. At 3, 30, being a cable's length from the Admiral and close under the batteries, we closed on the topmasts to the mast-head, and let go two bows and two stern anchors, when the enemy fired a shot, supposed to be at us or the Genl. Charlton's. The Admiral instantly returned it with a broadside, and a most tremendous fire commenced from the whole of the batteries, the ships anchoring in succession and entering into a general action, with their starboard broadsides, except the Dutch ships which engaged on the larboard side. The Superb and Genl. Charlton were opposed to a battery of 48 and 31 pounders, about 11 number. At 4 we observed that our shot made considerable impression on the works, that they flung up their upper tier, and a great many guns discharged firing their upper tier, their guns being dismounted, but the enemy still continuing to fire from their lower tier with muzzles, with as much frequency as ever. At 6, 30, the whole of the enemy's flotilla, consisting of five frigates, four corvettes, brig, schooners, and more boats, lay in our bows, and the Genl. Charlton's to avoid danger as the flotilla was obliged to flit her bows towards us. The upper tier were now altogether silenced, and lower much flacketed, the enemy rallying at their guns at intervals, discharging with muzzles from their countermurks. About 8, 30, from keeping up such a brisk and constant fire, we found our powder getting rather low. Orders, therefore, were given to fire only at their countermurks, which continued the action, and to shell some of our guns. During all this time the bombs and gun and rocket-boats had performed their duty, on the enemy's bow and works, with visible effect. At 11 our captain, first, third, and seventh lieutenants being wounded, the Admiral sending a boat for boats disabled to be taken in tow, we flipped our cables, and our lowered line only allowed us to get our muzzles up. At 11, 30, our main top-mast fell and the fore-top-mast main top-mast fell and the fore-top-mast were towed out of gun shot by the Prometheus, at the rate of about half a knot an hour, excepted with other things to aaking fire from two solitary guns. On getting out of hostile range, we found our three lower masts and bowsprit top-masts, lower and top-fall yards, driver hoist, and gaff, all broken, and very severely injured, the rigging dreadfully cut up, our muzzles with nine large shot through the heart of it besides being otherwise much cut up with grape and huricane, and five between wind and water, independent of many in the hull and our top-hull killed and wounded nearly four hundred.—The appearance of the fleet hanging out, with the display of the enemy's burning ships and great loss of their muzzles and sails, added to heavy peals of thunder, and vivid flashes of lightning, together with torrents of rain, combined together to form a scene awful and sublime beyond description. It seemed as if heaven itself had determined to pour down its vengeance and exterminate these savage barbarians. At 1, 30, A. M. we anchored, with our only remaining anchor, the rest being life boats, &c. after giving our wounded last a few hours rest, we turned them up to clear the deck and repair damage. In the morning the Admiral sent his flag of truce, to the Genl. Charlton's with my terms. They were before he had told his principal officers, that he would have us to withdraw his vessels from the bay, and to stop after the commencement of the action! But what could we do, without a total rout? He was, however, so humane, and in an individual spirit worthy of British women! At 11, 30, the 25th we turned the hands on, and the Admiral's thanks for their noble and gallant behavior, and told them that peace had been signed by the treaty of our own hands. Our three crews, and then returned, their duty with their ready cheerfulness, which every officer felt the British fleet. On the evening of the following day, correspondence took place between our ship and the Genl. Charlton's.

Orders, therefore, were given to fire only at their countermurks, which continued the action, and to shell some of our guns. During all this time the bombs and gun and rocket-boats had performed their duty, on the enemy's bow and works, with visible effect. At 11 our captain, first, third, and seventh lieutenants being wounded, the Admiral sending a boat for boats disabled to be taken in tow, we flipped our cables, and our lowered line only allowed us to get our muzzles up. At 11, 30, our main top-mast fell and the fore-top-mast main top-mast fell and the fore-top-mast were towed out of gun shot by the Prometheus, at the rate of about half a knot an hour, excepted with other things to aaking fire from two solitary guns. On getting out of hostile range, we found our three lower masts and bowsprit top-masts, lower and top-fall yards, driver hoist, and gaff, all broken, and very severely injured, the rigging dreadfully cut up, our muzzles with nine large shot through the heart of it besides being otherwise much cut up with grape and huricane, and five between wind and water, independent of many in the hull and our top-hull killed and wounded nearly four hundred.—The appearance of the fleet hanging out, with the display of the enemy's burning ships and great loss of their muzzles and sails, added to heavy peals of thunder, and vivid flashes of lightning, together with torrents of rain, combined together to form a scene awful and sublime beyond description. It seemed as if heaven itself had determined to pour down its vengeance and exterminate these savage barbarians. At 1, 30, A. M. we anchored, with our only remaining anchor, the rest being life boats, &c. after giving our wounded last a few hours rest, we turned them up to clear the deck and repair damage. In the morning the Admiral sent his flag of truce, to the Genl. Charlton's with my terms. They were before he had told his principal officers, that he would have us to withdraw his vessels from the bay, and to stop after the commencement of the action! But what could we do, without a total rout? He was, however, so humane, and in an individual spirit worthy of British women! At 11, 30, the 25th we turned the hands on, and the Admiral's thanks for their noble and gallant behavior, and told them that peace had been signed by the treaty of our own hands. Our three crews, and then returned, their duty with their ready cheerfulness, which every officer felt the British fleet. On the evening of the following day, correspondence took place between our ship and the Genl. Charlton's.

Superb's Disaster.
Algiers Bay, Aug. 23, 1816.
The Superb company of the 1st Regiment of Foot Guards, who were ordered to march from the barracks to the city of Algiers, on the 22nd of August, 1816, taken from the minutes on board H. M. S. Superb.

The morning of the 22nd of August, 1816, presented to the view of the combined squadron the city of Algiers about 5 leagues on the weather bow.—A battery to combat was opened on every countenance, and every bottom throbb'd high to cover themselves with iron, and rescue their fellow Christians from ignominious slavery. Every fall was followed with alacrity, and each ship of the combined squadrons engaged by action. At 7 o'clock a private landing out of the bay under French colors. At 9 the Severn sent out with a flag of truce, the fleet bearing in sight, and light variable air, under all sails. At 11, 30, the Admiral's orders were for the fleet to which we joined accordingly, and at 12, 30, H. M. S. Superb to quarters, out with boats and muzzled and armed them, called the anchors down for letting go, &c. &c. The Admiral having made the signal to prepare to anchor and engage the enemy. At 1 o'clock we were in the following order of battle: Genl. Charlton's Squadron, 1st rank, Superb; 2d rank, St. Vincent; 3d rank, Cordoba; 4th rank, Albion; 5th rank, Glasgow; 6th rank, Severn; 7th rank, Prometheus; 8th rank, the Admiral's anchored, and muzzled head, and stem aboard five yards of the Mole Head. At 3, 30, being a cable's length from the Admiral and close under the batteries, we closed on the topmasts to the mast-head, and let go two bows and two stern anchors, when the enemy fired a shot, supposed to be at us or the Genl. Charlton's. The Admiral instantly returned it with a broadside, and a most tremendous fire commenced from the whole of the batteries, the ships anchoring in succession and entering into a general action, with their starboard broadsides, except the Dutch ships which engaged on the larboard side. The Superb and Genl. Charlton were opposed to a battery of 48 and 31 pounders, about 11 number. At 4 we observed that our shot made considerable impression on the works, that they flung up their upper tier, and a great many guns discharged firing their upper tier, their guns being dismounted, but the enemy still continuing to fire from their lower tier with muzzles, with as much frequency as ever. At 6, 30, the whole of the enemy's flotilla, consisting of five frigates, four corvettes, brig, schooners, and more boats, lay in our bows, and the Genl. Charlton's to avoid danger as the flotilla was obliged to flit her bows towards us. The upper tier were now altogether silenced, and lower much flacketed, the enemy rallying at their guns at intervals, discharging with muzzles from their countermurks. About 8, 30, from keeping up such a brisk and constant fire, we found our powder getting rather low. Orders, therefore, were given to fire only at their countermurks, which continued the action, and to shell some of our guns. During all this time the bombs and gun and rocket-boats had performed their duty, on the enemy's bow and works, with visible effect. At 11 our captain, first, third, and seventh lieutenants being wounded, the Admiral sending a boat for boats disabled to be taken in

ANSWER.
Complaisant General of the U. States,
Wm. Shaler to Lord Exmouth.
Sir—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter which your Lordship did me the honour to address me this morning.

My regard for Mr. McDonnell was sufficient to call into activity every thing within my power, to serve him and his family in the critical situation in which they were placed, and I never doubted in similar circumstances, my countrymen would have received from any British officer, situated as I was, the same relief which it was fortunately in my power to extend to the officers and crew of his B. Majesty's ship Prometheus so unjustly detained here.

I avail myself of this occasion to assure your Lordship that in the case in question, my feelings concurred with what I considered to be my duty, and that I received with great sensibility your flattering approbation of what I have done.

The money advanced by me for the relief of the British officers and squadron detained here, amounts to about 100 dollars, which, if agreeable to your Lordship, I will settle with Mr. McDonnell.

With very great consideration and respect, I have the honor to be,
your Lordship's obedient servant,
WM. SHALER.

From the U. S. Gazette.
The newspapers, from N. York to Washington, have, with the utmost activity, circulated statements on the subject of the present situation of the relations between the United States and Russia. It has been said that Mr. Dashkoff, the minister of Russia, has been recalled—that his mission is at an end, and that he will leave this country as soon as he can arrange his affairs—and that this is the result of a negotiation relative to the arrest of the consul general for a criminal offence committed in Philadelphia.

We are enabled to state, that Mr.
Dashkoff has not been recalled by his sovereign. Negotiations have been for sometime carried on between the Executive of the United States and Mr. Dashkoff, relative to the arrest of the consul general of Russia, on a charge asserted to be altogether false and malicious, and in reference to which the demands made by the minister of Russia on the United States were made under positive and specific instructions. The result of these negotiations not being conformable to the expectations of the Court of Russia, Mr. Dashkoff, under the express terms of his instructions, is at liberty to withdraw from the United States, and thus to terminate all further diplomatic intercourse between the two nations. We understand he delays to take this step, under the ardent hope that some circumstances will occur which will remove the present difficulties, as contrary to his wishes, as they are opposed to the friendly dispositions always manifested by his court towards the United States.

The term committed, which has been used in some newspaper accounts, as it implies an assertion that the consul general has violated our laws, is erroneous and improper. On any occasion in which his conduct could have been legally investigated, he was ready to establish his innocence by the most satisfactory testimony.

New Plan of Robbing.
We are informed, that a few days since a man of genteel appearance applied to a store keeper in Market-street for permission to leave his trunk in the store during the night, representing that it contained drygoods of value, but that the waggon which was to take it to the westward would not be ready to receive it till the next day, when he would send for it. The store keeper very readily consented, and the trunk was accordingly deposited in his store. During the night a neighbour opposite observed a light in the store, which being an unusual thing, he communicated the circumstance to the owner early in the morning. Suspicion being thus excited, officers were immediately sent for, and after a strict search throughout the store, no thief could be discovered, but several articles of valuable merchandise were missing. Although it was deemed expedient to examine the contents of the trunk, which the gentleman was found profoundly dissatisfied in the stolen goods. It is presumed he has his accomplices out of doors, who were to have called in the morning and carried him and his trunk off in triumph.

Since writing the above, we learn that two men called at the store yesterday morning, with an order for the trunk, and were immediately apprehended. [Philadelphia Gaz.]

Translated for the Commercial Advertiser.

The general session of Congress closed in the most and worthy city of St. Domingo del Tucuman, on the 9th of July, 1816. The Congress of the United Provinces resumed its previous discussions, on the great and august subject of the independence of the people which composes them. The voice of the whole territory was universally constant and decisive for its solemn manicipation from the despotic power of the Kings of Spain. Notwithstanding that their representatives devoted to so arduous a task, all the energy of their talents, uprightness of their intentions, and the interest which the sanction of their late require from the representatives of the people and their posterity; and at the closing of their sessions, they were asked if they wished that the provinces of Union might be a free nation, and independent of the kings of Spain and their metropolis; they immediately cried out, full of the holy order of justice, and one after another repeated successively their unanimous and spontaneous decision for the independence of the country, in virtue of which they decreed the following

DECLARATION.
We, the Representatives of the United Provinces of South America, in general Congress assembled, invoking that eternal power who presides over the universe, in the name and by the authority of the people whom we represent, protesting to Heaven, to all nations, and to all men, the justice which rules our decisions—Solemnly declare, in the face of the whole world, that it is the unanimous and unquestionable will of these provinces, to break the burthensome chains which unite them to the Kings of Spain, to resume the right of which they have been dispossessed, and invest themselves with the high character of a free nation, and independent King Ferdinand the seventh, his successors, and their metropolis, to remain consequently in truth of right, with an ample and full power to govern which justice dictates, and the increase of their actual circumstances demand; thus all anarchy of them publish, declare and confirm, obliging themselves, through us, to the fulfillment and maintenance of this their own will, pledging as security and guarantee, their lives, fortunes and honours.

The present declaration shall be communicated to all whom it may concern—for its publication and in virtue of the respect due to all nations—let them explain, by a manifesto, the great motives which have given place to this solemn declaration. Passed in the Hall of Sessions. Signed with our hands, sealed with the seal of Congress and cerified by our Secretary.

deputies of the different States and Provinces.]

Charleston, Nov. 19.
FROM THE SPANISH MAIN.
By the arrival on Saturday last of the scho. Sitah and Hanab, Capt.
Graft, from Laguna, we are put in possession of verbal & printed accounts, relative to the revolutionary operations in that country, down to the 21st ult. The contradictory statements of the two parties, renders it next to impossible to form a correct opinion as to the real condition of affairs; but persons of information and judgment, all agreed that the royal cause was tottering, and must shortly fall over its own weight. The Royalists still held out in Cumana, but had been so much distressed by provisions, as to kill their horses & mules for subsistence.
They were still in possession of a part of the Island of Margarita, also, where the same scarcity prevailed. The Patriot forces had gained foothold in Barcelona, Car-pano and Oronoko. A verbal report prevailed at L. Guira, that the Independent army, assembled in the vicinities of Barcelona and Cumana, was estimated at about 20000. Sometimes the reports were more alarming, and numbered about 30000. Sometimes it was occupied by the Royalists, but they cannot even send out a reconnoitering party in safety. The Revolutionists occupy Barcelona and Carpano, and were investing Cumana.

A party of about 1200 Royalists had been recently cut off in a sally from the latter place, and one of whom it was said returned to tell the fate of the others. The Spanish Government was obliged to go to Cumana to carry provisions for the Royal garrison at that place, from whence she brought a full cargo of women and children to La Guira, but no men were permitted to go away.

Disinterested persons thought the cause of the Patriots to be in a successful train.

The Spanish officers themselves began to despair of much longer defending Cumana against the Revolutionists. The celebrated partisan, Sir Gregor M. Gregor, who was represented in the late Spanish accounts to have been killed, and his body cut up and salted and sent to Mexico, is still alive, and in command of a strong body of Revolutionists near Cumana. There was a Spanish fleet of 10 or 12 sail at Cumana, assisting in the defence of that place. The Patriots at Margarita were in great distress for provisions.

The Congress frigate, Capt. Morris, sailed from this port on the 10th inst. for the Gulf of Mexico. The Chippewa, we understand will proceed to the same station, as soon as she is fitted up. Capt. Morris will hoist a broad pendant in that sea, and have the command of a very considerable squadron, for the protection of our commerce along the Spanish shores. [Boston Gaz.]

We have received Halifax papers to the beginning of the present month. His Excellency Lt. Gen.
the Rt. Hon. George, Earl of Dalhousie, the new Lt. Gov. and Commander in Chief of Nova Scotia and its Dependencies, arrived on the 24th ult. and took the oath of office. On the 29th he issued his proclamation proroguing the General Assembly from Nov. 20th to Feb. 13, then to meet for the despatch of public business.

From the National Intelligencer.
Gen. BARNARD, late a lieut. General in the French army, is now in this city, and we understand he has accepted an appointment in the Engineer Department of our army.
We remember the testimonials of his distinguished merit, which were before Congress during the last session. In Europe, General B. is acknowledged to be one of the most distinguished military Engineers of the age, a man of profound learning in most branches of natural philosophy, possessing great firmness of mind and simplicity of manners. In all the late campaigns under Napoleon, he was attached to the military cabinet of the Emperor. Gen.
Barnard is the first foreign officer who has been admitted into the military service of the United States.
He de. lined, it has been stated, a very flattering overture from some of the European sovereigns, and ter-dered his services to our Government, and Congress appreciating the value of his talents to our military youth, passed a special act for his admission.

There is no one subject of remark in the papers which, at this time, meets with more approbation than that of the hard times and the remedies to be applied. Yet however much interest the subject might be supposed to excite, people, though they read and approve, are loth to bring it home to themselves. The times are hard; but somebody else is in fault. Extravagance and idleness prevail, but then it is not at home—it is among our neighbours.
They ought to retrench, to economize.
In this manner, what is the duty of every one is shovled off upon his neighbour's shoulders. Conserving must be learned, and practised. But no body is willing to deny himself any of his accustomed pleasures or luxuries, but hopes somehow or other the times will be relieved by the efforts of every body else. "Of a surety," as Dominic Sampson would say, "doth the people deserve the hardships of the times."

Having read in a paper of yesterday's date, an article concerning the singular property of the magnesia, in destroying the power of the magnets, I thought me to mention another, which is, if you rub the middle end of a looking glass, loaded with powder and iron filings, by firing with it you will miss the aim, which must be owing to the power of the iron juice, as iron as well as on magnet. I doubt what it would produce the same effect on lead shot.

The fashionable German Wals Dance, is said to have originated in the mode adopted by the Boston women, two of whom got into a tub, situated following each other round the inner edge of the tub, and in the middle till the cloths are clean. Sometimes a bonnet is used instead of a tub, and then the washing is done right over it.
The idea was ingenious enough, for a phlegmatic German, to transpose the dance from the tub to the assembly room, where washing might be done in rather a more genteel style.

From an English Paper.
Lord Mansfield, examining a man who was a witness in the court of King's Bench, asked him, what he knew of the defendant.
'O my lord, I knew him. I was up to him.'
'Up to him?' says his lordship,
'what do you mean by being up to him?'
'Mean, my lord I why, I was down upon him.'
'Up to him and down upon him?'
says his lordship, turning to counsellor Dunning, 'what does the fellow mean?'
'Why, I mean, my lord, as deep as he thought himself, I stopped
him.'
'I cannot conceive, my friend,' says his lordship, 'what you mean by this sort of language. I do not understand it.'
'Not understand it!' rejoined the fellow with surprise; 'Lord, what a flat you must be!'

LORD EXMOUTH.

Sir Edward Pellew, now Lord Exmouth, entered early into the Navy, and in 1780, was made a lieutenant; in 1782, whilst commanding the Resolution cutter of 12 guns & 75 men, in the Channel, he fell in with the Flushing, a Dutch privateer, of 14 guns and 68 men; a sharp engagement, which lasted an hour and a half, ensued, in the course of which, one of the Dutchmen was killed and six wounded. In May, in the same year, he received his post captain's commission, & at the close of the American war in 1783, he commanded the Dictator, 64 guns at the Nore. In 1793, he commanded the Nymphe frigate, of 36 guns, and was not long prevented the opportunity of displaying a striking proof of that professional gallantry, which has arrested at length the career of African Piracy and murder, and destroyed the yoke of Christian slavery. June 10, 1793, being on a cruise, in company with the Venus frigate, Adm. Faulkner, he fell in with the French national frigate La Cleopatra of 40 guns and 320 men, and after a severe action, which continued with unabated fury for more than 45 minutes, she surrendered, having lost her captain, three lieutenants & 60 men, wounded. In the conduct of Captain Pellew, on this memorable occasion, the ancient spirit of chivalry seemed to have enjoyed a temporary revival; he might be said to have fought con amore, solely for the glory of his country, and his own fame. His gallantry was not unrewarded; on the 29th of the same month, accompanied by his brother, Captain Israel Pellew, he had the honour of being introduced to his Majesty by the Earl of Chatham, (then first Lord of the Admiralty,) and of receiving his Majesty's thanks; his Majesty was also pleased to confer upon him the honour of knighthood, and to promote his brother to the rank of post captain. March 8, 1796, his Majesty was pleased to create him baronet of Great Britain, and May 14, 1814, he was advanced to the dignity of the Peerage, by the title of Baron Exmouth, of Cannontown, in the county of Devon.

Rear Admiral Milne is a native of Edinburgh, and entered the navy in the year 1778, and from that period to the conclusion of the American war, served as Midshipman & Master's mate of the Canada, which ship was latterly commanded by Admiral Cornwallis. During his long course of service, he was in most of the important general actions of the war, amongst which is to be noticed the glorious victory of the 22nd of April 1782, in which action the Canada made so conspicuous a figure, the Ville de Paris having struck her. It was unfortunate for the country as well as individuals, that the same liberal principles which now pervade the Admiralty did not exist at that time; no provision whatever being made for long and able services, & the consequence was, that a great number of excellent officers were left destitute. In this situation the Admiral entered into the service of the East India Company, and continued in it several years, distinguished by all who knew him as a most excellent and highly capable officer. When Lord St. Vincent (then Sir John Jervis) & Gen. Grey, went to the West Indies, he again joined the navy, and being considered by that great commander as an officer possessing extensive knowledge and great activity in his profession, he was soon made a Lieutenant in the frigate, commanded by Capt. Falconer, and was in her when she captured the Blanche. History will be inclined to mark this private action as one of the most brilliant fought in the course of the war. And it is well known that after the death of Falconer, & when both frigates were in the most crippled and disabled state, all the boats being destroyed, that Milne, accompanied by two or three gallant seamen, with cutlasses in their mouths, swam on board, and secured the prize. He was then master and commander, and soon after posted into La Seine, in which ship he captured the Vengeance, the largest frigate then belonging to France, and it is believed that the whole of the navy who have a knowledge of this action will concur in saying, it was one of the most scientific & desperate fought battles of the war.

The excellent arrangements made by the Admiralty for the destruction of Algiers, were sufficient to ensure success (where success was possible) and no circumstance marks their prudence and foresight more than the selection of the Commanders. Of the great merits of Lord Exmouth, the writer of this will not attempt to dwell upon, further than observing, that he is allowed to be one of the best officers and thorough-bred seamen in the navy. Before they joined, he was personally unacquainted with Admiral Milne, but in him he found a second completely to his mind and wishes, as may be judged from his despatches, and every one acquainted either with naval or military warfare, must know how happy a Commander-in-Chief is, under such circumstances.

REWARD TO VALOUR.

Commissioners have been sent down to Portsmouth to meet Lord Exmouth's fleet, to promote three commanders to be Post Captains; 14 lieutenants to be Commanders, and 40 midshipmen to be Lieutenants.

Captain Brisbane, of the Queen Charlotte, was on Monday sent presented by Lord Melville to the Prince Regent, who conferred on him the honor of Knighthood for his services at Algiers. He is now Sir James Brisbane.

At a court of Common Council, held on Thursday, an address was voted to the Prince Regent on the glorious attack on Algiers by Lord Exmouth. A vote of Thanks to Lord Exmouth, Admiral Milne, & the Captains, Officers and Seamen, under their command, was then unanimously agreed to. The court then voted a sword of 200 guineas value to Lord Exmouth, and one of 100 guineas to Admiral Milne.

Lord Exmouth has been raised to the rank of a Viscount. Admiral Milne has been knighted. Capt. Ekins, Aylmer, Wise, Maitland, Patterson, and Coade, have been appointed companions of the order of the Bath.

100 Dollars Reward.

Ran away from the subscriber on the 23th of August last, negro Sam Butler, or as he is sometimes called Sam Dugan. He was raised the property of Nicholas Carroll, esq. late of the city of Annapolis, and sold to a Mr. Geo. Howard of Baltimore, from whom I purchased him. Sam is about 30 years of age, 5 feet 7 or 8 inches high, slender made, narrow between the shoulders, rather of a yellowish color, and long face. His under jaw rather longer than the upper one, and eyes having considerable white in them. His feet are ill shaped with large lumps on the inside of them, by some called the pudding or gut foot. He makes some pretensions to religion, - but being an uncommunitant, may be easily detected on that head. Is a great coward. It is quite likely he has obtained a pass, but without the county seal I should suppose this would have no weight; his clothing was country - low linen shirt and trousers, and a long buff colored cloth coat. It is expected he is lurking about the city of Baltimore, or at the farm of Mr. George Howard, about 13 miles from the city of Baltimore, or at the farm of Nicholas Carroll, we called the Caves, or in the neighborhood of the lower ferry, on South River. If said negro is apprehended and brought home to me, the above reward will be given. All persons are strictly forbidden harboring or employing the above negro, at their peril.

Edward Williams, Greenberry's Point, near the city of Annapolis.

N. B. Sam has a free will, her name is Sarah. She possesses some real property near Annapolis. If he returns home without naming me to a further quest, and behaves himself in future, his conduct will be looked over.
