AGRICOLA.

For the Md. Gazette.

The exaltation of Baltimore, and
the degradation of the counties, has been the main object of our democrats in the lectures for several years past of their time and talents to the State. Nothing which the love of the State, or the pride, or avarice of citizens might prompt them to do, has ever met with democratic opposition. Exclusive of the enormous sums which she has been for years expending to enjoy, and which by rights should have been returned for the benefit of the whole State, from time to time large sums have been voted her from the treasury, and innumerable lotteries have been held for her improvement. Instead of the pet child of a doting father, she has become a burden and a curse to her people. Yet, this is not enough; they must make Baltimore the complete mistress of the State, resources and political destiny of the people of Maryland.
Leading measures brought forward in the last house of delegates, in Baltimore party, were such as calculated, if they had met with success, to have placed her in a lofty situation, and fully to destroy that wholesome barrier of power, which the wise fathers of the constitution thought necessary for the preservation of the rights of the counties, when determined that the Government should be chosen by the General Assembly, and the Senate by election. This requires little or no explanation, so obvious is it to the best understanding. If we suppose for an instant that the Governor is elected by general ticket, cannot fail to perceive, that Baltimore with her population of sixty thousand, could nominate and elect the Governor, and so doubt she never fail to make him from among her own citizens. From this it follows, whose whole wealth might lay in her hands, and whose own interests would be improved by promoting her, what would the people of the counties have to expect?
Surely would be simple explains to look for him to act consistently to his own interests, or to forget "self love is one of the first of nature." With such a Governor clothed with such extravagant powers, as the bill reported and passed gave him, after a while,
the important offices under the Government would be filled by Baltimoreans, and the door to office would be closed against countymen, matter how great their worth,
qualifications for public services.
As reported, did not even think that he should be chosen entirely from the Eastern and Western shores, yet it gave him the power of nominating and appointing officers. The federalists were aware of the danger of this latter feature, in some cases by amending it in such manner as to make it necessary that the members of the senate, and the county members to be abolished, should be appointed by the appointment of John Judges, attorney general, district attorneys, and officers of the courts. This proposition, which had been accepted, would have deprived the powers of the Government, nearly every day
of the year, in the house at the time, of the great body of the people of the State. They could not be more capable of making appointments than twenty of the members of the senate, and the number of members they were putting in the Senate.

How comes it, Mr. Green, that our corporation, so very active about other things, has done nothing in regard to extending Green street through Dr. Murray's garden. This measure was recommended some weeks ago by one writer in your paper, and by another in the Maryland Republican, and has been talked of I believe for ten or fifteen years. The arguments given in favour of it, particularly by the two writers above alluded to, most abundantly show the necessity of it, and when one reflects that there was formerly an alley or street that ran along there, and that too paved, it seems there can be no reasonable hesitation about it. I write this that the subject may not drop, and to induce the corporation to pay some attention to it. It is the wish of such a number of the citizens, and would be attended with so many advantages.

The Editor of the Maryland Republican has imputed to us a misrepresentation of one of the paragraphs in the article from the National Intelligencer, which we noticed last week. To convince the public that our construction of the paragraph referred to, if erroneous, was not designedly so, we now insert it, in order that those who consider its meaning worth inquiring into, may have an opportunity of satisfying themselves respecting it.

"Some time in the year 1816, a parcel of goods, notoriously smuggled from a vessel piratically captured from the British, were seized by the collector of Annapolis, and together with the vessel seized at the same time, were labelled in the District Court of the United States, where the case is still pending.
Those goods, as well as the vessel and cargo, were also labelled and claimed by the British consul, in behalf of certain British subjects, as having been piratically taken from them, and of course not liable to forfeiture for breach of our revenue laws. The claim of the United States, as to the vessel and goods on board when she was seized, has been abandoned, and by the order of the court, they were delivered to the British consul."

Being indifferent what the article contained, except so far as it undertook to controvert our statement, we read the other parts hastily, and found the paper aside, under the impression that it represented the United States to have abandoned their claim to the whole vessel and cargo.
The phraseology is certainly far from explicit, and we are inclined to think, that the impression we received from it is the same which it is calculated to make on the mind of any man, unless his previous associations had made him familiar with the whole smuggling transaction. Indeed, the idea of our having intentionally misrepresented the meaning of the paragraph is too absurd to be entertained for a moment—it would have been done without any assignable motive. According to the view which we took of the matter in controversy, the fact stated was wholly immaterial, and was only casually noticed.

We think proper on this occasion to state distinctly, once for all, that no threat to disclose the names of persons concerned in any smuggling transaction, can affect either us or the federal party in the slightest degree; nor shall any such empty menace deter us from speaking of this or any other affair which we may deem it proper to notice, in such terms as truth may warrant, and the welfare of our country remand. If therefore, the Editor of the Maryland Republican is acquainted, as he seems to exult in being,
with any nefarious smuggling transaction, let him divulge it, and on proving his charges, he will not find us endeavouring to shield the persons concerned from public execration. On the other hand he may be assured, that if the leaders of democracy think proper to connect themselves with the Collector and his associates (as from the course pursued one would be inclined to think was their design,) no sacrifice that can be resorted to, no introduction of extraneous circumstances, shall divert the minds of the people from the real point in dispute. They shall know, that the question to be decided is, not whether a few individuals have been concerned in smuggling, but whether the civil authority shall be laid prostrate at the feet of military despots.

Accounts from Gibraltar state, that the Emperor of Morocco is about to take the field, with an immense army, against a large tribe of Arabs who lately defeated one of his sons and succeeded in making one of his wives a prisoner.

Intelligence from Petersburg, of the 13th June confirm the accounts relative to the formation of three camps in Finland; and adds that the works of Riga are to be increased.

News from Copenhagen of the 23d June, announced that the general prevailing stagnation of trade is now felt there.

Accounts from Constantinople state, that the latest intelligence from Egypt announced the total demolition of the capital of the Wechabites, (Darrich). The chief, Abdallah, was beheaded.

The court of Paris has decided,
that a child born 9 months and 9 days after the death of its father, lawfully succeeds him.

A splendid comet was visible in the north of Europe, the beginning of July.

It is asserted that Gen. Devereaux has sailed from Liverpool with 5,000 men to aid the South-Americans.

Admiral Cornwallis died in Southampton, England, on the 5th ult.

The Persian Ambassador was packing up his valuables to quit reply to the Morning Chronicle, that it would be a libel upon the heroic achievements of the British navy, to notice them with the enterprises of such a man as Lord Cochrane.

The last quarterly report of the bodily health to be firm, without any visible alteration.

On the night of the 7th July, says the Courier, the Cockney astronomers were all gazing at the Comet.
Some of them saw it in the South,

On the 9th of July, William Connell and 19 other journeymen coach-makers were tried in the court of king's bench, for a conspiracy to raise their wages and to prevent their employers from having above

They were all found guilty. Con-

A Spanish frigate, called the Bronte, formerly a Russian frigate, after having boarded the British schooner Brunswick, on her way from Liverpool to Genoa, and ascertained her character, bore up & run directly on board of her. The anchor caught in the gunwale, and while in that situation, she fired a gun in the wake of the fore rigging of the schooner, which killed Mr.
Walker, a passenger, and wounded two others. The only excuse for such wanton conduct, was, that a Patriot brig had taken a Spanish frigate with half a million of dollars on board, and they suspected the schooner to be a cruiser of the same character.

From the 17th of April to the 31st of May, 1162 persons passed

THE SEA SERPENT.

Copy of a letter from James Prince, Esq. Marshall of this District, to the Hon. Judge Davis, dated Nahant, Aug. 16, 1819.

My dear Sir—I presume I may have seen what is generally thought to be the Sea Serpent. I have also seen my name inserted in the evening newspapers printed at Boston on Saturday, in a communication on this subject. For your gratification, and from a desire that my name may not sanction any thing beyond what was actually presented and passed in review before me, I will now state that, which, in the presence of more than two hundred other witnesses, took place near the long beach of Nahant on Saturday morning last.

Intending to pass two or three days with my family at Nahant, we left Boston early on Saturday morning. On passing the half way house on the Salem turnpike, Mr. Smith informed us the Sea Serpent had been seen the evening before at Nahant beach, and that a vast number of people from Lynn had gone to the beach that morning in hopes of being gratified with a sight of him;—this was confirmed at the hotel. I was glad to find I had brought my famous mast head spy-glass with me, as it would enable me from its form and size to view him to advantage if I might be so fortunate as to see him. On our arrival on the beach, we associated with a considerable collection of persons on foot and in chairs; and very soon an animal of the fish kind made his appearance nearly in this attitude and manner:

His head appeared about 3 feet out of water; I counted 13 bunches on his back—my family thought there were 15—he passed three times at a moderate rate across the bay, but so fleet as to occasion a foam in the water—and my family and self, who were in a carriage, judged that he was from 50 and not more than 60 feet in length; whether, however, the wake might not add to the appearance of his length; or whether the undulation of the water, or his peculiar manner of propelling himself might not cause the appearances of protuberances, I leave for your better judgment.

The first view of the animal occasioned some agitation, and the novelty perhaps prevented that precise discrimination which afterwards took place—as he swam up the bay, we and the other spectators moved on and kept nearly abreast of him; he occasionally withdrew himself under the water, and the idea occurred to me that his occasionally raising his head above the level of the water, was to take breath, as the time he kept under was on an average about 8 minutes; and after being accustomed to view him, we became more composed; and his general appearance was as above delineated. Mrs. Prince and the coachman having better eyes than myself, were of great assistance to me in marking the progress of the animal; they would say, he is now turning, and by the aid of my glass I saw him distinctly in this movement; he did not turn without occupying some space, and taking into view the time and the space which he found necessary for his ease and accommodation, I adopted it as a criterion to form some judgment of his length—I had seven distinct views of him from the long beach so called, and at some of them the animal was not more than an hundred yards distant. After being on the long beach with other spectators about an hour, the animal disappeared, and I proceeded on towards Nahant; but on passing the second beach, I met Mr. James McGee of Boston, with several ladies in a carriage, prompted by curiosity to endeavour to see the animal, and we were again gratified beyond even what we saw in the other bay; which I concluded he had left in consequence of the number of boats in the offing in pursuit of him—the noise of whose oars must have disturbed him, as he appeared to us to be a harmless, timid animal. We had here more than a dozen different views of him, and each similar to the other; one, however, so near, that the coachman exclaimed "Oh, see his glistening eye." Thinking I might form some calculation of his length by the time and distance of each turn; and taking an angle with my two hands of the length which he exhibited, that is to say, from his head to the last protuberance, and applying the same angle to other objects, I first estimated of the correctness of my decision, that he is sixty feet long, unless the ripple of his wake deceived me—nor, my dear sir, do I undertake to say, he was of the snake or eel-kind—though this was the general impression of my family, the spectators and myself. Certain it is, he is a very strange animal. I have been accustomed to see whales, sharks, grampuses, porpoises and other large fishes, but he partook of none of the appearances of either of these. The whale and the grampus would have apouted—the shark never raises his head out of the water, and the porpoise skips and plays; neither have such appearances on their backs, or such a head as this animal. The shark it is true has a fin on his back, and often the fluke of his tail is out of the water; but these appendages would not display the form and certainly not the number of protuberances, which this animal exhibited; nor is it the habit of the shark to avoid a boat. The water was extremely smooth, and the weather clear; we had been so habituated to see him, that we were cool and composed. The time occupied was from a quarter past 8 to half past 11. A cloud of witnesses exceeding 200, brought together for a single purpose, were all alike satisfied and united as to the appearances and of the length and size of the animal; but you must deduct the influence which his passage through the water and the manner he propelled himself might have as to the apparent protuberances on his back, and the ripple occasioned by his motion on his real length, of all which you can judge equally well and better than myself. I must conclude, there is a strange animal on our coast, and I have thought an unvarnished statement might be gratifying to a mind attached to the pursuit of natural science, and aid in the inquiries on a controverted question, which I know to have interested you. I have ventured on the description, being also induced to hope, that if any thing of the marvellous is stated as coming from me, you will correct it.

Accept the respects and attention of, dear sir, your's sincerely,
J. PRINCE.

Hon. Judge Davis

MADAM BLANCHARD.

Extract to a gentleman in N. York, dated, Paris, July 7, 1819.

I transmit you an account of the tragical fate of the celebrated Aeronaut, Madam Blanchard, to which I was an eye-witness. At Tivoli an entertainment extraordinary took place last evening, pursuant to public notice; and excitements had been raised in consequence of frequent postponements. The garden was unusually brilliant, and a large concourse of the gay citizens of Paris and strangers assembled. The enchanting music, the delightful variety of exercises, in which this place excels, tended to excite the pleasure and mirth of the spectators to the highest pitch of elevation. And now, at half past ten, the hour appointed for the balloon, every eye was fixed to the spot! After saluting gracefully the numerous acquaintances who approached around, Madam Blanchard took her seat, elegantly dressed in white and her bonnet ornamented with plumes. The cords being detached, a trifling embarrassment was occasioned among the trees; but soon extricated, she ascended slowly amidst the acclamations of applause. To the feeling heart, this momentary suspension, as it were, betwixt heaven and earth, is truly memorable; while the sigh of sympathy escaped the heaving bosom, and the pitying tear was dropt.

With one hand the lighted torch communicated to the artifice of fires, which blazed around her, and with the other she twirled the floating banner. The grandeur increased as the fires took the effect fully intended. On emerging from the first cloud it was sublime, and an immediate abatement gave every indication of a happy termination. But, alas! the cord of life is cut! A sudden glare was spread over the whole horizon, from the inflammation of the hydrogen gas, converted of a sudden into a complete globe of solid fire! Awful sight! The unfortunate is seen falling! No doubt could exist of her inevitable death. The consternation is dreadful, one general shriek of pity! Oh poor woman, she falls—she dies! Every heart sickened at the horrid catastrophe. The fate, notwithstanding the magnificent preparations ceased instantly. The public withdrew with grief, from a place that had paid so cruelly for their pleasures. A collection being made at the door, the amount of the evening's receipts were doubled, for the benefit of the family of the sufferer. What compensation can atone for the untimely arrest, the life lost, to contribute to our gratification? Can we offer any equivalent to the bereaved family? Certainly no charm can follow tantamount to the perils.

CONFAGRATION.

...We have an account of the destruction by fire of upwards of one hundred houses and stores, at St. John's, Newfoundland.

ST. JOHN'S, N.F. July 24.

...Extensive and distressing fire! Between 1 and 2 o'clock on Monday morning last, a vacant house recently occupied by Mr. George Garland, near Mr. Thomas Williams, was discovered to be on fire.

...The wind was a point or two to the southward of west, and blew a gentle breeze, which carried the flames to the houses on the opposite side of the lane.

...On Thursday last, two indictments were found against Wro, the bookseller of Manchester, one for a libel, the other for sedition.

...The Duke de Richelieu has arrived in Paris. On the 12th inst. a terrible conflagration was caused by the negligence of an idiot, at Remy in the department of Gise.

...command of Lieut. Col. Mearns, and stationed at the break on the eastern side of Mrs. Elliott's. Here they were joined by a few active individuals of the town, and the troops recently arrived from Halifax, the latter having landed from the transport, under the orders of Capt. Barker of the 14th, and through their united and strenuous exertions, they with much difficulty preserved the range of new buildings to the eastward from falling a prey to the element.

...The inhabitants of that part of the town which is destroyed, perceiving at the commencement what little probability there was of preserving the buildings began at an early hour to remove their property, but the short time allowed them for that purpose, enabled very few to save one half of their effects.

...By this calamity upwards of one hundred houses, with many very extensive stores, have been destroyed, and the number of inhabitants obliged to seek a new shelter in consequence, is thought to amount to from 12 to 1500.

...Among the buildings destroyed, were the house occupied by Mr. Duggan, the houses and stores of T. Williams & Co., T. Meagher, Sons & Co., James Watson & Co., Patrick Doyle, Attwood & Haynes, (recently occupied by and belonging to J. Duncomb & Co.) Benjamin Bowring, J. Bayly, James Cody, S. Kough, William Cahill & Co., Geo. Niven, Caaninghame, Bill & Co., and G. N. Elliott, on the water side.

...There is no certainty how the fire originated, but there being an ash heap against the back of the house, it is generally thought that some hot ashes have been carelessly thrown against the dry clapboards, which catching fire has occasioned the mischief.

New York, Aug. 31.

...By the arrival of the ship Elizabeth, Capt. Sebor, in 32 days, we have received London papers to the 25th inclusive.

...We understand that the grand meeting of the disaffected, at Manchester, which was fixed 2d of August, has been postponed, some say to the 9th, others to the 22d or 23d; but it is most probable that it stands adjourned sine die.

...On Thursday last, two indictments were found against Wro, the bookseller of Manchester, one for a libel, the other for sedition.

...We have received this morning the Paris papers of Wednesday last. They state, that the inquiries which have been instituted, in consequence of the murder of Kotzebue, and the recent attempt to assassinate Mr. Bell, have led to the discovery of a conspiracy in several German Universities, to overthrow the existing governments in Germany, and convolve a general assembly, to be styled The Senate, which should elect a prince to govern the whole German territory.

Paris, July 21.

...The Duke de Richelieu has arrived in Paris.

...On the 12th inst. a terrible conflagration was caused by the negligence of an idiot, at Remy in the department of Gise. It consumed 222 farming and dwelling houses, & reduced to a state of independence 36 individuals, who have now no other resource than public charity. The loss is estimated at 600,000 francs.

...Our government exercises at this moment a very active vigilance, several violent characters have been arrested. A few days ago the authorities seized the papers of various students, as also those of an University Professor, these unexpected measures have excited the most anxious feelings.

Hastadt, July 13.

...Two students of the University of Freibourg have been suddenly taken into custody. The papers of several others have been seized. It is asserted, that some investigations are set on foot in the University of Griesen, have brought to light an association between several Universities.

...A private letter dated Tunis, June 8, states that the revolt which broke out among the Arabs on the confines of Tripoli, has been suppressed. The plague having appeared in the Tunisian camp, the Bey pressed the general to hasten his return; the latter entered into negotiations offered on the part of the rebels, and upon receiving considerable contributions in cattle, withdrew his troops and arrived in Tunis yesterday.

London, July 25.

...A Conton Hall, we understand, is to be held to-morrow, for the purpose of returning the thanks of the Divery to the Lord Mayor, for his efforts to preserve the peace of the city on Wednesday last. Mr. Hunt is expected to be present. He will, no doubt, endeavour to elicit an exposition of the 'horrible plot,' for burning the metropolis, and murdering its respectable inhabitants. A glorious row may be anticipated.

2 o'clock, P.M.

...Three days later from London. By the ship Elizabeth, which arrived just as we were ready to go to press, we have received London papers to the 25th of July inclusive.

...There had been no meetings of the disaffected since that held at Smith field, and all was quiet in the neighbourhood of London.

...It is said to be finally settled, that Mr. Elliston is to have Drury-lane theatre, his offer being the highest. Keen, it is supposed, will come to America.

...On the 22d of July the second payment of the loan was made of ten per cent.

...Suicides continue to be committed daily in Paris.

Boston, Aug. 30.

...Extract of a letter to the Editor of the Daily Advertiser, dated Port Spain, (Trinidad,) July 20.

...On Sunday morning, the 18th inst. Mr. Dorey, master, and Mr. Parror, a midshipman belonging to the U. States ship John Adams, arrived here in her long boat, with 14 men. They reported, that they were despatched by Com. Perry to examine the mouth of the Orinoco.

...They were absent from the ship 8 days, when they arrived here, and had when they left her but 3 days provisions. They would have faced extremely bad, had it not been for the hospitality of the planters on the south of the island, who gave them provisions.

...Their arrival here excited great curiosity, and it even was whispered among some weak and foolish people yesterday, that they had come as spies to reconnoitre our shores.

...The John Adams expected to have called here, and perhaps will be here shortly. She called at Barbadoes, as we were informed by Mr. Dorey.

...Extract of a letter to the Editor of the Daily Advertiser, dated Trinidad, 20th July, 1810.

...Since the date of my last letter nothing very material has transpired in that quarter, except a victory gained by the united forces under General Marino, Sarraz and Belandier, over a body of royalists under General Arana, on the plains of Cumana. The royalists were completely routed. The army of Gen. Morillo after receiving innumerable defeats in the skirmishes that happened with that under Bolivar, have retired as far back as Calabozo. Gen. Bolivar has penetrated with part of his army as far as Santa Fe, and made a junction with General Santander. The other part of his army is left under the command of the undaunted Paez. The city of Cumana is under blockade by the British forces under the command of Col. English and Gen. Ordazeta by land and Admiral Broun's squadron by sea. If the siege is persisted in for a few weeks longer, it must inevitably fall, however strongly fortified it may be. The successes of the Independents are glorious and important in this quarter. The establishment of a good and salutary form of government is what is requisite at present. But how can so small a number of men, form, in the midst of disorder, confusion and trouble, a substantial government. It is absolutely necessary that they should be countenanced by some foreign nation. It is essential that their flag should be acknowledged by a friendly power. On viewing the history of the American revolution, can any one assert that that glorious revolution would have terminated so fortunately and so quickly, had they not received the generous aid of France and Spain? Certainly, there can be no doubt, but that the people of the United States, even had they been unassisted by the generosity of foreign nations, would have ultimately succeeded; but the struggle would have been long and bloody.

...The United States possessed many advantages over the unfortunate people of the South. They knew the meaning and value of liberty; they were in the ample enjoyment of that 'pure liberty' of conscience and independence of property, which were bequeathed to them by their forefathers.

...These unfortunate provinces, on the contrary, do not possess any advantage—doomed by tyrannic Spain to wallow in the mire of ignorance, superstition and intellectual darkness for more than three centuries—they were always unacquainted with liberty, although the revolution commenced in some degree fortunately, yet anarchy, division and murder was soon the order of the day—their struggle has been long and bloody.

...The Bill that is now under discussion in Parliament ('Foreign Enlistment Bill') if carried will materially affect the patriotic cause. They have just begun to be successful—they have just begun to have a national character—to establish a salutary government—to have a knowledge of the importance of discipline and order—to be in fact, free and independent. At this important crisis the English government is desirous to withdraw her aid, or at least her neutrality.

...Sieur Boaz, the slight of hand man, was lately accosted in Carlisle, in the usual style, by a retailer of oranges.—'Well my lad,' says the sieur, 'How do you sell them?'—'Tuppence a piece, sir,' says the orange dealer. 'High priced, indeed,' rejoined the deceiver, 'however we'll try them.' Cutting an orange in four pieces, 'behold,' says the sieur (producing a new guinea from the inside of the orange) 'how your fruit repays me for your extortion. Come I can afford to purchase one more,' and he repeated the same experiment as with the first. 'Well to be sure,' says he they are the first fruit I ever found to produce golden seeds. The sieur then wished to come to terms for the whole basket; but the astonished claudpe, with joyous alacrity ran out of the house, and reaching home, began to quarter the contents of the whole basket. But alas the seeds were no more than the produce of native soil—the conjurators possessing the golden art.

THE NEXT ELECTION.

FELLOW CITIZENS,

Stability is an all important characteristic of every government. As no private individual without stability of character, so no government destitute of it, can be respectable or respected. The greatest evil complained of in the legislation of free states, is the multiplicity and frequent changes of the laws. This mutability is condemned by all sound jurists, and a certain and known rule of duty and of right, even though less perfect, is preferred to an ever varying system, which leaves the citizen in doubt and uncertainty, though the changes that are made, may in the abstract be good. No certainty can exist as to private rights or obligations, if with every returning session of the legislature, innovations upon established rules are made. If this is universally admitted to be a great evil, with respect to ordinary laws, affecting for the most part private transactions and single individuals, how much greater must the mischief be, when a spirit of innovation invades the very frame of the government itself, now destroying a pillar and now a partition, without regard to the dependence that the other parts of the fabric may have upon them, and then erecting new columns and adding new apartments without relation to the original plan of the edifice. The rights and liberties of the citizen and the powers and duties of the magistrate thus become uncertain and are liable to violation, as well from ignorance, as design. Whole nations, like individuals, are the creatures of habit. They become attached to what they have long been used to, and regard with reverence, what their fathers have held in veneration. This habitual respect forms the chief strength of all governments. Let us beware then in a free country, where public opinion gives force to law, vigour to the government, and security to every citizen, we violate this powerful principle and yield to the spirit of innovation.

The democrats, who were last winter the advocates of instability and change, in the general assembly, openly pronounced their views in two bills which they introduced repealing the constitution so far as it relates to the executive department and the senate. Their plan was instead of the present stable senate, to give you one composed of a fifth delegate from each of the counties. This project, whatever may be thought of the present mode of forming the senate, is too absurd to require a moment's consideration to reject it. The great object of having a senate at all, is to form a check upon the other house. To do this effectually you must constitute it in a different manner and give it as different principles of action as possible. By the plan proposed you make your senate a second house of delegates, liable to the same impulses of local interest and local feeling. Under the constitution as it now stands, you have an independent and enlightened body, which is not constrained in its conduct by the wishes of any particular section of the country, but is at liberty to be governed by an enlarged view of the interest of the whole state. There is little apprehension that the present mode of selecting a senate will be changed, until a better substitute, than the absurd one just now mentioned, is proposed. I shall not therefore waste your time upon this topic, but must beg your particular attention while I consider more minutely the executive bill.

The effect of the change proposed in that bill will be to lay the country prostrate at the feet of the city of Baltimore. The object of its authors and supporters is by the aid of the overwhelming wealth and influence of that place to elevate themselves to power at the expense of the independence of the counties, and at the sacrifice of the interest and safety of the country. So unfeeling and wilfully blind to consequences is ambitious self interest!

The governor and council are now appointed annually, by the representatives of the people, chosen as their agents, with an express view to that election as well as to their duty of legislation. And these representatives are responsible to the people for the faithful exercise of this power as well as others. And I think, I may with confidence appeal to your recollection, fellow-citizens, whether proper appointments have not in general been made.

The proposition now made by the innovators is to abolish the council altogether and to commit the executive power into the hands of a single man, who is to be elected by a general ticket throughout the state and to hold his office for three years.

The first objection to this plan, is there is no evil felt from the present mode of electing the governor, to justify any change. This of itself is a sufficient answer to the advocates of innovation. But there are strong arguments to satisfy every impartial person that, in the abstract, the present mode of electing the governor, is much better than the one proposed. The desire and the interest of the people must be, to have that man for governor, who is best qualified for administering well the executive power. It is for the interest of the people then, that those should be authorized to select the governor, who are most able to judge of the necessary qualifications of a chief magistrate and who are in a situation which imposes upon them a strong sense of responsibility for the faithful discharge of the duty of making a selection. In whom are those requisites united so completely as in the members of the general assembly? They are generally better acquainted with the character and talents of political men, than any other set of men you can find in the state. Deriving their power either directly or indirectly from the people, they will feel their responsibility to them in the execution of their trust. The members of the general assembly then offer every title to the confidence of the people—intelligence and security for their integrity.

On the other hand, if the governor is to be elected by a general ticket, what security have they that a proper choice will be made? A Governor ought to be

- 1. A man of great firmness of character, that he may see that the law be executed, however dangerous or difficult it may be.
2. He should possess extensive knowledge, particularly of the constitution and laws of the state and the United States.
3. He should be endowed with great sagacity, that he may be able to penetrate into the character and talents of men, that he may make a judicious selection of the officers of government.
4. He ought to have great experience, that he may know how to guard against the deception of men interested to mislead.
5. He ought to possess great prudence, that he may so administer the government as to increase the respect and attachment of the people for it, instead of exciting their aversion.
6. He ought to be a statesman of profound and liberal views, that he may recommend such measures to the legislature as will be conducive not only to the present but the future welfare of the state.

He ought to possess great industry and devotion to public business, that every thing may be done in proper time and place. He ought to possess great virtue as well as an ardent attachment to our free institutions, that he may be sure that his talents will be exerted for their defence and improvement. These are only a part of the qualifications necessary for a Governor.

Will it then be pretended that the majority of voters in one extreme of the state are sufficiently acquainted with the political merit and private character of men in the opposite extreme, to enable them to give their votes understandingly? No one I presume will be hard faced or ignorant enough to assert this. A direction then must be given to the public opinion by somebody. A nomination must be made. Who will make the nomination? I answer, without fear of contradiction, because it is the result of necessity itself, a self-created Caucus. This caucus will either be composed of persons, who will meet together from different parts of the state, for the sole purpose of making the nomination, without authority, perhaps called together by some ambitious intriguer for the promotion of his own views, or it will be composed of members of the general assembly, which shall next precede the time of election. In both cases this caucus will meet in secret conclave, and of course will be under the influence of no sense of responsibility to the public or regard for their character. This nomination will be virtually an election. In this plan I see no security for a proper selection of a chief magistrate. On the contrary the best possible field will be opened for intrigue or a display of the worst and most selfish passions.

But the greatest of all the possible evils, that can result from the proposed plan of electing the governor is, that it virtually gives the choice to the city of Baltimore.

In order to shew this in the most striking manner, it is necessary to bring into view, another project of the innovators, which though it has not yet been brought forward in the shape of a legislative bill, is openly avowed by a part of them and denied, I believe, by none. This project is to destroy the present equal representation of the counties and to give them a number of delegates proportioned to their population. To shew the effect of this it will be necessary to resort to calculation.

The city of Baltimore nearly doubled its population between 1800 and 1810. We shall be moderate then, if we calculate upon an increase of 50 per cent. between 1810 and 1820, especially when we reflect that within the last two years the limits of the city have been so far extended, as to embrace more than three times as much space as it did in 1810. Add fifty per cent. then to the population of Baltimore including the precincts in 1810, and you will have 62,824 as its population at present.

We may safely conclude that the three large and flourishing counties of Baltimore, Frederick and Harford, which alone would gain by the proposed change, have also rapidly increased in white population, while the white population of the smaller counties, which would lose political weight, has, taken together, either been stationary or has actually diminished. It is certain, at least,

*As there is no distinct census of Annapolis, within reach of the writer, the above number of white inhabitants are assigned to it from the proportion which its number of voters bears to it.

the lower counties, at the same time we add fifty per cent. to the population of Baltimore, and suppose all the rest of the state to remain the same, as at the last census, we shall still have a calculation of political influence, in case the change proposed by the democratic innovators take place, less unfavorable to the smaller counties than the truth would justify.

Add the increase of Baltimore to the white population of the state in 1810, &c. the whole will be 289,044. Divide that by the number of members in the house of delegates (81) 289,044 and 3,625 will be the number of free whites, which will be entitled to one delegate. Divide the white population of each county by this number and the result will shew the number of delegates to which each will be entitled, as in the following table—

Table titled 'Appointment of Delegates on the basis of population.' Lists counties and their respective number of delegates.

In the above table, I have given an additional delegate to each of the counties, having a remainder or fraction larger than one half of 3625, the number which entitles to one delegate.

I have drawn out the present address, fellow-citizens, to a greater length than I intended. I will therefore postpone to my next the consideration of the serious consequences, that will overtake the country, if political power is to be thus accumulated in the city of Baltimore and distributed in the counties according to the above scale, merely remarking for the present, that that government alone is securely free, where the rights and interests of all the parts are equally well guarded against the encroachment of the others—that this is the only practicable sense, in which EQUALITY OF RIGHTS can be understood—and that this EQUALITY would be utterly destroyed in this state, if political power should be distributed according to the ratio of population.

AGRICOLA.

For the Maryland Gazette.

And so, Mr. Printer, our troubles are likely to increase. We are going to have a war, with Spain I learn, and some of the old war hawks begin to tell us, it would be a most glorious war. I understand there is a party in Congress already who are full of a war with Spain. They want to fight for the South Americans. A fine thing indeed, that our money, if we have it, and lives in to the bargain, are to go, just to humour some restless spirits, who are always wanting to be at war. I suppose too, if we were to get a democratic assembly, we should have some more pledges of our lives and fortunes, and most sacred honour, in defence of this war. Now suppose we were to go and declare war against Spain, what would be the consequence? Why England would delight to join her. She has got no employment for her soldiers, and would like to send them to this country. If they were killed, she would be saved some of the enormous expense of supporting such a large army. Some of the other European nations too, might join them for the same reason. It would be sport for them. But what are we to gain by it? Why some of our people, who have ruined themselves by their speculations, would get commissions, and go to South America, and there try to make fortunes. To give them this opportunity we must plunge into a war, and all its expenses. All those who can't get a living by an honest employment, will be for this war, and they are getting to be a strong party. Now I am against the war, and shall vote against the men who caused the last war.

A COUNTRYMAN.

The democratic newspapers complain that the federalists propose the administration of the general government, and yet they struggle to retain the ascendancy in Maryland. They implore us to tell them what this can be, and insist that the federal party is just as hostile as ever to the "power" in the national government. How is it possible that the federalists can be in opposition to the democratic party in the general government. That party is divided, and its different divisions are as hostile to each other as ever were to federalists. We are administration democrats, and we will observe the course of the political parties in the general government, and we will not be misled by the demagogues of the state.

Separation of the District of Maine.
The vote on this question have been officially canvassed. The following are the results:
Affirmative 17,001
Negative 7,138
Majority 9,863
Governor Brooks has issued a Proclamation, announcing the results, requiring the towns, throughout the District, to elect Delegates on the third Monday of September; and directing the delegates thus chosen to meet at Portland on the second Monday of October, for the purpose of forming a Constitution.

Frightful but true Statement.
The total amount due to the general government by the purchasers of public lands north west of the Ohio and in Alabama and Mississippi, is twelve millions and a half of dollars up to the 30th Sept. 1818, and it appears by Mr. Lowndes' speech last session of Congress, that Kentucky and Ohio were then indebted about six millions and a half of dollars to the bank of the United States—making together an aggregate sum of 19 millions. When (it has been frequently asked) will these debts be paid, and are they not now operating to undermine & sap the foundation of the federal compact? For man is prone when deeply indebted and embarrassed to look with an evil and discontented eye on his creditors; and this principle is still more powerfully felt when an extensive community becomes indebted to a government whom the debtor soon accustoms himself to consider, not in light of a common creditor, but as a rich inexorable oppressor—from these sentiments opposition soon grows up, and finally ripens into rebellion, terminating perhaps in a dissolution of the Union—the proposed measure held in reply to the demands of the United States Bank of the government in certain quarters, indicate but too unequivocally the temper & disposition which this unfortunate state of debtor and creditor is calculated to promote. Let our legislators look to it in time, and avert the catastrophe, which without a timely remedy will too surely ensue.
Rel's Phil. Gaz.

Extract of a letter from Mess. Monteiros de la Puelherre, dated Madeira, March 9, 1819, to a gentleman in this town.
"On the 2d of this month we felt a misfortune from a fire that burnt a great part of our stores of wines; but thank God, fortunate for us, the most considerable part of our wines were saved, the oldest and choicest included; so that we can have the pleasure to say that our friends' orders will continue to be fulfilled with as much satisfaction as they have been heretofore."
To those who have the pleasure of an acquaintance with the character and honor of the house of Monteiros, this declaration of the safety of their best and oldest wines, will be abundantly sufficient. To those who have not that pleasure, the most ample testimony can be afforded in favour of the accuracy of this statement. In Dec. 1817, a gentleman in this town received by the Haymaker, a half pipe of wine of a particular denomination from the house of Monteiros, which was thought by himself and friends of most excellent quality. The same person has lately received by the Boston, Capt. Knowles, three half pipes of the same description, which were shipped after the fire, which was tried on the day of its landing by himself and a friend who had tasted the first, and pronounced to be clearly superior to that by the Haymaker, and the second day after the landing, it was tasted by some of the first judges in this place, and determined to be wine of the very first excellence. From this it is wished it may be known, that this house has at least an equal quality as before the fire, of furnishing the first wines, and to those who have known what their wines have been, this is enough.

St. Louis, July 28.
Military expedition to the Upper Missouri.—The foremost of the steam boats, the Expedition, with the best boats were, within twelve miles of Boon's lick on Tuesday 20th inst.—The two steam boats, Johnson and Jefferson were at Beven Bottom (23 miles up the river) on Friday the 23d inst.

WESTERN EXPEDITION.
It appears from a letter received from a gentleman on board the Western Engineer, dated July 24th, that the Steam Boat had reached Franklin, Missouri.
A small party had been detached from St. Charles, to proceed by land, to the above place, a distance of nearly 300 miles. They experienced considerable hardships. Four days after entering the prairie they lost the horse which carried their tent and some provisions—they continued this march eight days, the thermometer being above 80 degrees—sometimes in want of water, and having most of the time such provisions as they could shoot. They were compelled to length to make to the river and join the boat.

Six days before the date of this letter Col. Johnson's boats were 150 miles below the Western Engineer. Major O'Fallon, Indian Agent, intends wintering among the Indians high up the Missouri. Volunteers from the party are to remain with him.
Dr. Baldwin's health is so bad that he will return by the first boat to St. Louis, and from thence to New Orleans he will return home.

New Orleans, Aug. 4.
The late hurricane.—A despatch boat has arrived from the bay of St. Louis with letters from an officer in that place, addressed to Com. Patterson, describing the loss of the U. S. schr. Firebrand, at anchor off the Pass of Christian, on the night of Wednesday last, the 28th ult.—There were 45 persons on board at the time, all of whom are supposed to have perished, as no intelligence had been obtained of any one of them—and the dead bodies were driving ashore by the waves. The officers on board were Lieut. Grey, Dr. Wardle, and Messrs. Perkins and Adams, midshipmen.
The schr. Thomas Shield was also capsized at the bay of St. Louis, and all the hands lost. All the houses at the bay of St. Louis were seriously damaged, and a lot of them blown down; at the Pass, also, only three houses were left standing; no lives, however, were lost at either place.
The whole coast from the Regouettes to Mobile, to which latter place only our intelligence reaches, is a scene of desolation, covered with fragments of vessels and houses, the bodies of human beings and carcasses of cattle.

DANDIES.
The Dandies, says a London newspaper, are bringing again into fashion feather bed neck cloths, military capes, and none of the "dear delightful creatures" can be seen out without stays, pinching the waist so tightly, that the unhappy wearer resembles an hour glass in shape. Great coats, with a waist an inch and a half long, are all the go; and the shirt collars are long enough to go twice round the throat. In short, nothing can be too stiff at present; and every lad that goes into the world, must have his neck tied up almost as tight as some lads that go out of it!

MARRIAGE CEREMONY.
"You bromish," says old Squire Cabell to the bridegroom, whoever that happy one may be, "You bromish to hap dis woman for your wife." Yes. "Unt you madan bromish to hap dis man for your husband." Yes. "Vell I bronounced you to pe one flesh unt one beef. Unt now I pooblish de bawns of dis matrimony before Got, my row Dolly, Harry unt dy rest of de shidders. New-Orleans, Aug. 6.

We learn, from good authority, that the band of pirates, who have so long infested the lower part of the Mississippi and the adjacent lakes, have established themselves to the number of 50, on a piece of land between two small bayous that empty into Lake Barataria.

They have put themselves under the command of the noted Mitchell, whose life was long since forfeited to the offended laws. It is ascertained that they are now engaged in building a boat, doubtless with the intention of renewing their piracies; that they have a large field under cultivation, in which corn and other articles of provision are raised in great abundance, and that they have a plentiful supply of live stock. It is said that they have fortified themselves with something like a breast work, and some cannon of small calibre. Among the evils inflicted upon us by the late hurricane, it is none of the smallest that it frustrated a well planned expedition fitted out against these pirates by the commander of the naval forces on this station. The principal vessel intended for this service (the Fire-brand) was lost when she was on the point of sailing, and it is feared that two others, which formed part of it, have shared a similar fate. What then remains to be done? Shall this horde of outlaws and ruffians be permitted to exist on the soil of the state, and perpetrate their crimes with impunity? Is there no means of extirpating them in the absence of a naval force? We trust that the governor will cause the authority of the laws to be respected, to which end the constitution has placed the military force of the state at his disposal, and if that should not be sufficient, he knows that a call upon the commanding officer of this military department would be promptly obeyed.

Montreal, (Canada), Aug. 28. Providential Escape.

On Tuesday last, as the steam boat Quebec was weighing her anchor at Three Rivers, preparatory to her departure for this city, a boat came alongside filled with passengers, and amongst others, Mr. Doucet, notary public, his lady and daughter. At this moment the Quebec's anchor unfortunately came home—she drifted against a brig which was lying there at anchor—the boat was crushed between the two vessels—and the passengers precipitated into the river. All of them were immediately rescued from their perilous situation by the exertions of the Quebec's crew, except Miss Doucet, who was carried away by the current, and would have undoubtedly perished but for the presence of mind and intrepidity of Mr. Rogers, of the U. States navy. Perceiving her danger, he, aided by Capt. Hall of the Quebec, lowered the boat from her stern—sprang into it—and, finding that the young lady had drifted too far to be overtaken by the boat guided by himself only, plunged into the water and brought her safe aboard.

Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon the conduct of this gallant stranger, to whom in the name of our fellow-citizens, we return our best thanks, wishing him all the prosperity deserved by the brave. We should be guilty of injustice did we omit to mention, that to the activity of Capt. Hall is principally due the preservation of the other passengers.

From the N. Y. Evening Post of the 7th inst. Recent case of Hydrophobia cured by the Sullcap.

The following history of this case was received by yesterday's mail, in a letter, from the physician who attended the patient, to Dr. Spalding, who is engaged in preparing a publication on this important subject. This case will be in some particulars, even more satisfactory to medical men, than that of Cann; it better agrees as to the time that usually intervenes between the bite and the appearance of the symptoms of incipient hydrophobia. It will perhaps be said, and it is the only thing that can be said by the incredulous and uncanid, that it does not appear in this case, as it did in that of Cann, that the dog in question was actually mad, being killed before the truth was ascertained. I answer, that he had the common and well known symptoms of canine madness, and taken in connexion with the nature of the disease that was caused by the bite, it affords us a moral certainty of the fact. There will, however, be found some of the faculty, who will, with the editor of the Medical Repository, affect still to doubt; who having once adopted a theory of their own are impenetrable to demonstration; men whose minds are of such a texture that they may readily yield to the improbable and sturdily resist a degree of proof that convinces all mankind but themselves; men, in short, who may easily be known by their dogged obstinacy in error and their contempt of common sense. But it is time to present the reader with the case, as detailed in the following letter:—

Montague, (Mass.) Aug. 22, 1819. Dear Sir,

I send you the particulars of a case that occurred in my practice, leaving it to you to dispose of it in any manner that you may judge proper.

Mrs. H. belonging to this town, of a healthy constitution, 24 years of age, was bitten on the 5th day of July last, by a puppy four months old, supposed by herself and her friends to be mad. The following were the marks he showed of rabies:—On Saturday, the 3d, he refused his accustomed food; appeared stupid and sickly, head and ears hanging down, and showed no disposition for playfulness. On the 4th still refused to eat; his eyes were red, dull and full of tears; and his mouth covered with apparently tough and frothy slime; he frequently staggered and fell down; sometimes started up quick, and attempted to run, but could not go straight forward; took little notice of any thing; towards evening snapp'd at objects, but never barked. On Monday morning he became furious; ran at every thing that came in his way, and attempted to bite; at length, did actually bite the lady above mentioned, on the ball of the thumb, making four incisions through the skin. He was then immediately killed. On the same day she sent for me, and I advised the immediate use of the sullivan cap; but, not having any on hand, I was only able to procure some of another person, which had been gathered two years before, and had lain exposed to the open air, in a box; with directions to give it every other day, as prescribed by Dr. Thatcher. She did so, and the wound healed in a few days, with no unpleasant symptoms. But on the 15th day after the bite, she felt a slight pain or itching in the part bitten, which soon became a little elevated, and a circumscribed inflamed spot, about the size of a six pence, arose and extended over the creatrix of one of the dog's teeth; soon afterwards, she felt a fixed pain in the wrist, which extended to her elbow and shortly increased and reached to her shoulder; waddering pains in her back and joints succeeded, she felt a painful and strange sensation in her head, and sometimes also a giddiness, so that she could not walk straight forward; she now complained of lassitude, with stricture and heaviness in her breast, accompanied with difficulty of breathing.

On perceiving these alarming symptoms, I concluded that this patient had lost its virtues by age and exposure, and endeavoured to procure some of the recent growth, which fortunately I obtained and in blossom; of this I ordered a strong decoction to be taken immediately, in doses of half a pint each, four times a day; to be suspended every other day, and a table spoonful of flour of sulphur in new milk to be taken in its stead. For the greater precaution, I also punctured the bitten part, which discharged a little watery fluid, and applied to it the bruised leaves of the plant, which I renewed once every 4 or 6 hours. On the 16th day, symptoms were but little abated, and her pulse somewhat depressed; but she had slept more quietly. The 17th, the pain, except in her wrist and head, had subsided, the bite had lost its redness, and she had slept still better. On the 18th, she said she slept quite well, excepting a little weakness. She kept the application on the wound 2 days longer, when it healed, and she left it off, but continued to take the decoction, though with diminished strength, three weeks longer, but has experienced no pain or unpleasant sensation since the 18th day, enjoying her usual good health and going about her domestic labors as formerly.

The above symptoms were noted down at the time of their appearance. Mrs. H. is by no means of a nervous temperament, but resolute, and she followed my prescription with much confidence.

I am, sir, your's respectfully. PETER FISK."

The above case is recommended to the critical notice of every sensible and candid physician in the United States; in which number, however, let it be understood, I do not mean to include the editor of the Medical Repository; to him, I shall shortly pay my particular respects more at large, for an article, in his last number, on the above subject. However he may wince, he must remember, he has nobody to blame but himself.

From the Boston Palladium. A MEANS OF PREVENTING FEVER.

In times of sickness, particularly fever, various expedients have been adopted to promote the health and prevent the prevailing disease.

Some persons, who have usually been temperate, have thought that an extra glass of wine or spirit was necessary for their security. Others have smelled of camphorated spirit, vinegar, &c. while others having trusted to the smoke of burning sulphur, tobacco, saltpetre, tar, &c. &c.

All these methods have repeatedly proved to be unavailing and deceptive.

The mineral acid fumigations, in the hands of the celebrated chemist, L. B. Guyton-Morveau, acquired at one time, in France, considerable reputation for the power of decomposing infectious air and preventing infectious fevers; but the writer is sorry to add that time and future trials have dissipated much of this reputation.

What then remains to be done by those who cannot remove from a place where a severe and malignant fever prevails? In the first place those who are well, who live regularly and temperately, and exercise sufficiently, are not to make any alteration in their mode of life. Those whose mode of living is different from this, or the reverse of it, should exchange it for this.

One thing more, we should use the cold bath, either sea bathing, or the shower bath. But as the effects of bathing both good and bad, depend on the manner of bathing, one must take care to bathe properly, and how this is to be done, has been well described by Dr. Coffin, of this town, in two discourses, published last year.

In the London Med. Journal for the year 1798, Dr. Wm. Wright, formerly of the Island of Jamaica, gave an account of the successful treatment of some cases of fever by the ablation of the patient with cold water. "On the 1st of August, 1777," says Dr. W. "I embarked in a ship bound to Liverpool. The master told me he had hired several sailors on the day we took our departure; one of whom had been at sick quarters on shore, and was now in a convalescent state. On the 23d of Aug. this man relapsed and had a fever of the greatest malignity. I could not prevail with him to be removed from a dark and confined situation, to a more airy and convenient part of the ship; and as he refused medicines, and even food, he died on the eighth day of his illness.

By my attention to the sick man, I caught the contagion, and began to be indisposed on the 5th of September. I had been many years in Jamaica, but except being somewhat relaxed by the climate, and fatigued by business, I felt nothing when I embarked.

Sept. 5, 6, 7, I had small rigours now and then, a preternatural heat of the skin—a dull pain in the forehead—the pulse small and quick, a loss of appetite, but no sickness at stomach; the tongue was white and slimy, little or no thirst, the belly regular, the urine pale and rather scanty—in the night restless, with starting and delirium.

Sept. 8. Every symptom aggravated, with pains in the loins and lower limbs, and stiffness in the thighs and hams. I took a gentle vomit on the second day of this illness, and next morning a decoction of tamarinds; at bed time, an opiate joined with antimonial wine; but this did not produce sleep, nor open the pores of the skin.

No inflammatory symptoms being present, a drachm of Peruvian bark was taken every hour for six hours successively, and now and then a glass of port wine, but no apparent benefit.

When on deck my pains were greatly mitigated, and the colder the air the better. This circumstance, and the failure of every means I had tried, encouraged me to put in practice on myself what I had often wished to try on others, in fevers similar to my own.

Sept. 9. Having given the necessary directions, about 3 o'clock, PM. I stripped off all my clothes, on the deck, when three bucketfuls of salt water were thrown upon me at once, the shock was great, but I felt immediate relief. The head ache and other pains instantly abated, and a fine glow and diaphoresis succeeded.

Towards evening, however, the same febrile symptoms threatened a return, and I again had recourse to the same method as before, with the same good effect. I now took food with appetite, and for the first time had a sound night's rest.

Sept. 10. No fever, but a little uneasiness in the hams and thighs—used the cold bath twice.

Sept. 11. Every symptom vanished, but to prevent a relapse, I used the cold bath twice.

Mr. Tho. Kirk, a young gentleman, passenger in the same ship, fell sick of a fever on the 9th of Sept. His symptoms were nearly similar to mine, and having taken some medicines without relief, he was desirous of trying the cold bath, which, with my approbation, he did on the 11th and 12th of Sept. and by this method, was happily restored to health.

He lives at this time (Jan. 1786) near Liverpool."

Here the cold effusion of water seems to have cured a contagious fever, and from this evidence we may presume that the same practice would prevent the same fever.

This interesting narrative of D. Wright led D. Currie to attend to the effects of cold and warm bathing in fevers and some other kindred complaints, and ultimately induced him to give to the public his "Medical Reports" on this subject.

But there is some other evidence, more direct than the above, in proof of the power of cold bathing to prevent typhoid fever.

Early in June, 1792, the typhoid, or jail fever, made its appearance in two private soldiers, in the 50th regiment of British troops, then stationed at Liverpool, England. Various measures were early adopted to check the progress of this dis-

It is said that they have fortified themselves with something like a breast work, and some cannon of small calibre. Among the evils inflicted upon us by the late hurricane, it is none of the smallest that it frustrated a well planned expedition fitted out against these pirates by the commander of the naval forces on this station. The principal vessel intended for this service (the Fire-brand) was lost when she was on the point of sailing, and it is feared that two others, which formed part of it, have shared a similar fate. What then remains to be done? Shall this horde of outlaws and ruffians be permitted to exist on the soil of the state, and perpetrate their crimes with impunity? Is there no means of extirpating them in the absence of a naval force? We trust that the governor will cause the authority of the laws to be respected, to which end the constitution has placed the military force of the state at his disposal, and if that should not be sufficient, he knows that a call upon the commanding officer of this military department would be promptly obeyed.

Montague, (Mass.) Aug. 22, 1819. Dear Sir,

I send you the particulars of a case that occurred in my practice, leaving it to you to dispose of it in any manner that you may judge proper.

Mrs. H. belonging to this town, of a healthy constitution, 24 years of age, was bitten on the 5th day of July last, by a puppy four months old, supposed by herself and her friends to be mad. The following were the marks he showed of rabies:—On Saturday, the 3d, he refused his accustomed food; appeared stupid and sickly, head and ears hanging down, and showed no disposition for playfulness. On the 4th still refused to eat; his eyes were red, dull and full of tears; and his mouth covered with apparently tough and frothy slime; he frequently staggered and fell down; sometimes started up quick, and attempted to run, but could not go straight forward; took little notice of any thing; towards evening snapp'd at objects, but never barked. On Monday morning he became furious; ran at every thing that came in his way, and attempted to bite; at length, did actually bite the lady above mentioned, on the ball of the thumb, making four incisions through the skin. He was then immediately killed. On the same day she sent for me, and I advised the immediate use of the sullivan cap; but, not having any on hand, I was only able to procure some of another person, which had been gathered two years before, and had lain exposed to the open air, in a box; with directions to give it every other day, as prescribed by Dr. Thatcher. She did so, and the wound healed in a few days, with no unpleasant symptoms. But on the 15th day after the bite, she felt a slight pain or itching in the part bitten, which soon became a little elevated, and a circumscribed inflamed spot, about the size of a six pence, arose and extended over the creatrix of one of the dog's teeth; soon afterwards, she felt a fixed pain in the wrist, which extended to her elbow and shortly increased and reached to her shoulder; waddering pains in her back and joints succeeded, she felt a painful and strange sensation in her head, and sometimes also a giddiness, so that she could not walk straight forward; she now complained of lassitude, with stricture and heaviness in her breast, accompanied with difficulty of breathing.

On perceiving these alarming symptoms, I concluded that this patient had lost its virtues by age and exposure, and endeavoured to procure some of the recent growth, which fortunately I obtained and in blossom; of this I ordered a strong decoction to be taken immediately, in doses of half a pint each, four times a day; to be suspended every other day, and a table spoonful of flour of sulphur in new milk to be taken in its stead. For the greater precaution, I also punctured the bitten part, which discharged a little watery fluid, and applied to it the bruised leaves of the plant, which I renewed once every 4 or 6 hours. On the 16th day, symptoms were but little abated, and her pulse somewhat depressed; but she had slept more quietly. The 17th, the pain, except in her wrist and head, had subsided, the bite had lost its redness, and she had slept still better. On the 18th, she said she slept quite well, excepting a little weakness. She kept the application on the wound 2 days longer, when it healed, and she left it off, but continued to take the decoction, though with diminished strength, three weeks longer, but has experienced no pain or unpleasant sensation since the 18th day, enjoying her usual good health and going about her domestic labors as formerly.

The above symptoms were noted down at the time of their appearance. Mrs. H. is by no means of a nervous temperament, but resolute, and she followed my prescription with much confidence.

The above case is recommended to the critical notice of every sensible and candid physician in the United States; in which number, however, let it be understood, I do not mean to include the editor of the Medical Repository; to him, I shall shortly pay my particular respects more at large can be made a subject, that Balti... more, with the assistance of the two...

adjoining counties, Harford & Fre... derick, could under the provisions... of this bill, elect at any time any...
person they might think proper, and...
Baltimore city and county, posses...
ing so much larger a population, &...
so much greater political influence...
than either the two other counties...
we have mentioned, would have it...
to their power to wield the desti...

(should Baltimore find it necessary... to make such a compact,) that...
the governor shall not hereafter... be elected from any section of the...
state except Baltimore, Harford or...
Frederick. Now, when a tempta... tion of this kind is presented to...
any particular section of the State... can we doubt, judging from the...
knowledge we possess of human na... ture, and knowing its fondness for...
power and authority, that such a... temptation would be eagerly em... braced. Now, are the people of...
sixteen free and independent coun... ties, prepared to surrender to the...
city of Baltimore, and three other... counties, the exclusive privilege of...
electing the Chief Magistrate of...
the State? But the advocates of...
this bill in the house of delegates...
contended that the present mode...
of electing the governor was unfair...
& unjust—and that it would be more...
consistent with the principles of...
true republicanism that this office...
should be elected immediately by...
the people. Now this argument is...
specious and plausible, and it was...
used for the purpose of deceiving...
the people, and inducing them to...
believe that their interests alone...
were consulted in the contemplated...
change—but specious and plausible...
as this argument may be, it is no...
difficult matter to shew its utter... futility. This I shall attempt to do...
by explaining the provisions of this...
bill—for these have been industri... ously concealed from the people. &...
it has only been known and talked...
of as a bill to provide for the elec... tion of the governor by the people...
The title was thought to be striking...
and popular, and this alone has...
been presented to the view of the...
people. But let them consider well...
the provisions of this bill, and reflect... upon its tendency. The very first... article declares, that the supreme...
executive power shall be vested in...
one man—and that he shall be elec... ted for a period of three years. Now... let me ask any candid man, if this...
change would render the constitution...
more consonant with the principles... of republicanism? Would it not, on...
the contrary, render it the high... est degree of monarchy? Under the... constitution, as it now stands, the...
executive power is vested in six... men, who are elected annually, by...
the immediate representatives of the... people. The people have therefore...
now an opportunity of voting every...
year for six men, who are entrusted... with the government of the state;...
whereas, had the change taken place...
in the constitution which the Balti... more party were so anxious to ef... fect, the people would not have...
been permitted to enjoy the right...
of suffrage in the election of the...
governor, but once in three years...
and the supreme power would have...
been invested in one man instead of...
six—the state would have become...
a monarchy, and the order of suc... cession would have been established... in the nobility of Baltimore. Such...
was the design and tendency of this...
famous bill, the advocates of which...
called themselves dear lovers of the...
people, while they insidiously wish... ed to rivet upon them the chains of...
despotism, and subjugate them to...
the tyranny of Baltimore. A fur... ther exposition of the views and...
designs of the Baltimore party will...

in the peninsula for...

said, "That it would be in vain...
for the jury to enumerate the...
daily and hourly practised in this...
city." Now, have the federalists... ever said any thing worse of Balti... more, than the decision on the...
grand jury have given of it. Now...
if crimes of every kind multiply...
daily in this city? If a residence...
in the penitentiary serves to stimu... late the appetite, and improve the...
genius for new and more extensive...
schemes of villainy, if the grand jury...
composed, as it is presumed it was...
of the most respectable and intelli... gent citizens of Baltimore, whose...
means and opportunities of forming... a correct judgment must have been...
the most ample, have frankly de... clared that it would be in vain for...
them to attempt to enumerate the...
daily and hourly practised in their...
city, what a mass of iniquity must...
abound in it. And is this the place...
to which the rest of Maryland... must become tributary? Is this the...
place to which the supreme execu... tive power shall be given? Is this...
the place that shall have the ex... clusive right of declaring who shall...
be the governor of the state? Is this...
the place whose political influence...
shall be increased by giving her...
an additional number of representa... tives in the legislature and lessening... the number from the counties? Is...
this the place to which the seat of... government shall be transferred? Is...
this the place that shall render tri... butary to her will all the smaller... counties of the state? Let such...
power and influence as this, have...
the democratic party in the house...
of delegates endeavoured to bestow...
upon Baltimore. At the last ses... sion of the legislature every demo... cratic member voted for every...
measure that was calculated to in... crease the political influence of...
Baltimore, and diminish that of... the smaller counties. Yes, such...
was the insatiable party spirit, that...
even the democratic members from...
the smaller counties, forgetful of...
the interests of their constitu... ents, voted for measures directly...
calculated to diminish their polit... ical influence, merely because it... increased that of Baltimore. And...
now when the federalists come... forward to point out the evils of...
giving this overpowering influence... to Baltimore, they are accused of...
unjustly vilifying and degrading... that city. They are far from...
wishing to see her degraded, they...
would rejoice to see her elevated...
to the highest pitch of prosperity...
But they have faithfully warned...
the people of the danger of increas... ing her influence, and if in doing... so, they have deemed it necessary...
to speak of her moral character...
they would point to the report of...
her own grand jury, made under...
the solemn obligation of an oath...
for the truth of their statements...
They would say to the people be... fore they go to the polls, read this...
awful and alarming declaration, but...
would be in vain for the jury to at... tempt to enumerate the amount of...
wickedness and crime daily and...
hourly practised in Baltimore."

who committed four men for being...
concerned in the riot. Three of...
them are citizens of Philadelphia... and one of them a citizen of the...
district of Southwark. The names...

Two of them are very young and...
very respectable, and therefore we...
decline the publication of their...

committed by the mayor. None of...
them are Irishmen.
It will be remembered that in the...
advertisement of M. Michel, it was... stated, that "between 3 and 4 o... clock, he would cause the parachute...
to be attached to the balloon, &c."
No precise time was fixed for the...
ascent, but from the above sentence...
a general belief prevailed, that, at...
that time the balloon would ascend...
About a quarter after 2, we were in...
Vauxhall garden. The balloon at...
that time lay on the ground, and...
was not inflated to more than the... size of a hoghead. It went on...
gradually but slowly extending its... sides until a little before 6 o'clock... when M. Michel had the parachute...
&c. attached to the balloon, it was...
believed to have sufficient buoyancy...
to answer all the purposes contem... plated, and M. Michel was shaking... hands with his friends preparatory... to his stepping into the car. At...
this time much impatience was ma... nifested by the crowd who were ou... side the fence of the gardens. The...
people on the inside were quiet, at... tentive and anxious. We speak...
more especially of those assembled... round the balloon. As a mean of...
inspiring hope, and thus keeping... quiet the crowd without, those who...
were in the garden repeatedly cla... ped and cheered. This had a par... tial effect, but somewhere about a... quarter after 6, stones, some of a... large size, were flung from with... out at the balloon. The stones fell... among the crowd. Just as the bal... loon was, in somewhat of a hurry...
cut loose, we saw a very large stone... strike and rend the balloon. The...
balloon ascended but a few feet...
when it fell; the stones now poured...
in faster, and the noise greatly in... creased.
Just at the time this scene was...
passing, at the SW. corner of the...
garden, a still more serious scene...
was presented at the NW. corner...
There a boy, having climbed on to...
the top of the fence, was struck...
with a stick by one of the men em... ployed to prevent a forcible entry... into the garden. It will be recol... lected that a dollar was paid by...
every person who entered the garden...
in order to remunerate M. Michel... the heavy expense he had incurred... and speechless. The blow by which...
he was struck down, was given in...
view of thousands. A sensation of... indignation and horror thrilled thro...
the crowd. The women shrieked... and the men swore. It was then... passed through the crowd that the...
boy was killed. Horror was quick... ly converted into rage, and a cry of...
vengeance was no sooner uttered by...
one voice, than it was re-echoed by...
thousands.
The large flag staff before the...
door was torn down and used as a... battering ram against the fence at...
the place from which the boy had... been knocked down. The fence in... many places was soon levelled. The...
crowd rushed through the breaches...
and a mad spirit of destruction was...
infused by a few young men. The...
bar in which was a large supply of...
wines and spirituous liquors was...
torn down. Many drank the li... quors. This was adding fuel to... the fire. Every consideration of...
self respect or regard for the pea... ceful character of Philadelphia was...
given to the wings of the winds...
The balloon, parachute, &c. were...
torn into ribbans—the ornaments...
fences, lamps, &c. were broken up...
the shrubs were many of them de... stroyed; and at length the idea of...
setting fire to the Pavilion was...
whispered; and no sooner suggest... ed than carried into operation.—
"Each seized a torch eager to de... stroy," & about 9 o'clock that beau... tiful building was burnt down. At...
six o'clock this morning we saw...
hundreds of people mourning over...
the ruins to which perhaps many...
of them had contributed. It is... probable from the evidence given...
before Alderman Badger that the... whole number of persons actively... engaged in the riot never amount... ed to 100.

PARAPHRASE
 By James Montgomery
 I saw the eternal God, in robes of light, Rise from his throne—his judgment forth he cast:
 His presence paid before me, like the flame
 That from the furnace in the depth of night,
 Whirlwind and storm, amazement and af-
 fright,
 Compass'd his path, and took all nature's frame,
 When, from the heaven of heavens, with loud acclaim,
 To earth he wing'd his instantaneous flight,
 At some triumphant oak, whose branches have spread
 Their changing foliage through a thousand years,
 Bows to the rushing wind its glorious head;
 The deferral arch'd yonder spheres
 Shook with the measure of a Maker's tread,
 And earth's foundations quak'd with mortal tread.

THE MARYLAND REPUBLICAN.
Mutatis Mutandis.
TO THE
FEDERAL REPUBLICANS
OF THE
STATE OF MARYLAND.
It is known to you that every...
and every artifice that ingeni...
profligacy could invent, have for...
years been practised on the...
ple of this state by the leaders of...
democratic party to maintain their...
endency in its councils. It is...
known to you, that to secure...
unholy triumph of democracy at...
ensuing election, every means...
ever depraved, every artifice...
ever corrupt, will again be...
tried to prevent a fair and con... stitutional expression of the public...
It then imperiously behoves... to guard against fraud in every...
shape. Look at the conduct... of the democratic party in the...
election in 1815 & the Baltimore... in 1790, when there was a gen... eral ticket for members of congress...
then thro' fraud they obtained...
gave votes to down the voice...
of the state beside, and say if...
will again be swindled out of...
dearest rights, without an ef...
while it is in your power, to...
serve them. Every precaution... step should be taken to prevent...
and expose fraud. It is a... principle upon which our republic...
stitutions are founded "that all...
government of right originates from...
people, is founded in compact...
and instituted solely for the...
of the whole;" when therefore...
a faction, a small and incon... siderable part of the people of this...
state, attempting by the practice of...
fraud, to wrest from the...
majority of the people the right...
of self government, it is our priv... ilege it is a duty enjoined upon us...
to take every constitutional...
step to protect and preserve for...
ourselves and our posterity, the en...

of revolutionary fathers. With...
view therefore, the following...
propositions are respectfully, but...
earnestly urged on the atten... tion of the federal republicans thro...
out the state; it is on no account to...
be in any part or section be mit...
ted. Such a plan is deemed of the...
highest importance to prevent demo...

quasi dishonourable to his patri... otism to consult any other author... ity, and the meeting was accordi...
ly held under his wicked inspi... ration.
Of this meeting we regret to say...
that private letters from Manches... ter from the most respectable sou...
ces, received in town this morn... ing, give very alarming and distress... ing representations. The civil pow... er it appeared, was decided in...
preventing, as Hunt was in holding...
the meeting, and the result has...
been, that many lives have paid...
the forfeiture of supporting him in...
his nefarious desperation.
According to the letters to which...
we advert, and from which we can...
not now make liberal extracts, the...
mob, of which Hunt was the leader...
assembled from different quarters...
of the county, at Manchester, as...
the common place of rendezvous, at...
the appointed time on Monday. The... approach of the different bodies...
of the deluded populace, of which...
it was ultimately constituted, was...
made with all manner of outward...
display, in order to impose forbear... ance on the civil authorities. Ban... ners and bands of music added their...
effect to the march of the different...
divisions of the Reformers which...
was conducted with something like... military precision. Among the...
former were several bearing the fol... lowing inscriptions and devices:
"Let us die like men, and not be...
sold as slaves!
No Corn Laws.
Annual Parliaments, and Universal Suffrage!
Major Cartwright's Bill.
The Rose, supported on each side...
by the Shire Stock and Thistle... with two hands united, and the...
word Union under them.
Three different Flags, bearing the...
Cap of Liberty on the Flag Staff.
Equal Representation of Death!
Taxation, with False Representati... on, is unjust and tyrannical."
Women in considerable numbers...
were united in these processions...
and advanced with them to the ge... neral place of meeting in Peter's... square. One female, more abomi... nable and desperate than the rest...
bore a banner in the particular...
circle which denoted Hunt to the...
point where he was to act his part...
When every thing of preliminary... arrangement was concluded, Hunt...
with his immediate party, mounted...
a platform prepared for their recep... tion, from whence he proceeded to...
address the multitude. His harangue... was suffered to go on for one hour...
until the Riot Act had been read...
in dug form, and then he was inter... rupted by a body of cavalry acting...
under the orders of the civil magis... trates, who made their way throu... gh the mob to the platform, and...
took him and his party (all of whom...
it is to be supposed, were ready... made orators) prisoners, and...
destroyed the structure on which...
they had taken their stations. Some...
of the standard bearers, the women...
among them, did not part with their...
seditious emblems until force... compelled them to it. The Dragoons... having made the capture of the...
leaders of the meeting, charged...
the pressing crowd on their return...
five of whom were killed, and...
nearly 100 were wounded by being...
trampled on.
The resolution of the troops...
appears to have dispersed the mob...
for the moment; but towards...
evening they collected in great... numbers and were committing...
several outrages, when they were...
fired upon by the 88th Foot...
(Connaught Rangers,) and had...
four men killed. The military... notwithstanding this example...
became objects of popular fury...
and were assailed with various...
missiles. In this conflict one... dragoon was killed, and some...
others wounded.
At this period of the day, the...
general confusion was such as to...
render it difficult to give an...
accurate description of what was...
going forward. The scene was...
too dangerous to be visited, for...
the mere purpose of communicat... ing the events that might take...
place; and therefore, the accounts...
which have reached this quarter... cannot enter into any thing like...
a minute description of passing...
occurrences.
It is perhaps, the worst feature... of the Manchester intelligence, that...
the mob was not deterred by what...
passed on Monday from pursuing...
the system of outrage and commo... tion which had been commenced... with such fatal consequences. The...
strong military force which occu... pied the town, having attached to...
it a detachment of artillery, pre... vented the prosecution of any fur... ther measures of violence on...
Monday, more than we believe, ha... ve been generally stated; but the...
letters from Mau...

checked, dated early on Tuesday...
says that the mob was then collect... ing in great numbers, armed with...
pitch, and such other offensive wea... pons as could be hastily procured... to attack the troops. What the...
result of this posture of things...
was, the letters we have seen do...
not state; but should the mob...
persevere in their apparent determi... nation of attacking the military, ter... rible consequences may be anticipa... ted.
The reform meeting exceeded any... thing I could have supposed, there...
was no less than 100,000 people...
collected from all the villages...
around for 20 miles.
There is every reason to fear that...
the military will be obliged to act...
in a way which every friend to hu... manity will deplore, for the forbear... ance they have shown has been...
tried to the extreme. At half past... nine o'clock, when this paper went...
to press, we were in possession of...
little more than rumour—the result...
can only be given in a second edi... tion.
A second edition of the same pa... per mentions:
Except the riot at the New Cross... before mentioned, at which 2 men...
