THE SHRUBBERY.

YOUNG Melmoth went down in the summer to his father's seat in Westmoreland, where, being of an active disposition, and having no companions
 but a German flute and the works of a few favourite authors, he frequently amused himself with long excursions to examine the beauties which that romantic country affords.—He one day rambled till he had gained the banks of the Winandermere; the solemn colouring of that magnificent scene, the last gleam of sunshine fading away on the hill tops, the deep serene of the waters, and the long shadows of the mountains thrown across them till they nearly touched the hitherto most serene—all this concurring with the reflection of his being at a considerable distance from home, filled him with sensations that he had never before felt.
 As he looked around, amidst this terror and uncertainty, he espied a small farm-house peeping forth from a grove of old trees; after a short deliberation, he resolved to follow a path that seemed to lead thither, and passing through several lonely dells, shaded with beeches and over-run with wild flowers, he arrived at a wicket that opened into a shrubbery; the opposite plants intermingling their branches, cast a gloom very pleasing to the imagination, and a rivulet which ran murmuring over pebbles, or broke into cascades, now glittered through the leaves at a distance, and now meandered close by the walk. Melmoth had not advanced far in this retreat, when the shrubs, suddenly opening on one side, discovered a little stream dashing down a rough green bank in an irregular winding manner, and finely diversified by the clods of turf and stems of brush-wood that resisted its current. A seat upon the opposite side of the walk seemed to invite him to sit down and contemplate the beauties of the scene; so he accepted its offer. He had not continued long in this posture before he heard the sound of a harpichord, accompanied by a female voice. The air was simple and pathetic, in the highest degree, and though he could not distinguish the words, the melancholy cadence with which they were uttered, concurring with the beauty of the scene, had a strange effect on him; for his constitution was naturally warm, and his feelings were always awake to music. The sounds presently ceasing, broke the chain of romantic ideas which they had inspired. He took his flute, an instrument on which he excelled, he raised it to his mouth, but the idea of alarming the stranger checked his hand, and he returned it into his pocket. He immediately rose up, and stealing along the walk, previously entered upon a circular grass-plot, planted round with evergreens, in the centre of which stood a small one temple. A myrtle had spread its branches over the front of the building, and a jessamine, which had been taught to wind up the fluted columns of the portico, hung down in festoons on each side. On the base was this inscription, 'Dedicated to Sensibility.'
 This seemed to be the place from whence the sounds which still vibrated in his ear, had proceeded.
 Melmoth hesitated whether he should not return; but concluding from the silence that the person to whom he was indebted for them had retired, with a trembling hand he opened the door. The walls on the inside were stuccoed, and in a niche was placed a marble urn, in which grew a sensitive plant, a beautiful emblem of the divinity of the place, contracting its leaves at the slightest touch, and shrinking from the faintest breath of air. On the urn were these words in Sterne: 'Eternal fountain of our feelings! 'tis here I trace thee!' A harpichord stood open on one side, and a book lay upon it. Melmoth took it up, it was the third volume of 'Emma Corbett,' and as at that part in which the dying Emma, on her return from America, where she had left the remains of a husband and brother she adored, met her aged mother at the door, supported by his servants, and going to attend the funeral of his brother's widow, who had died distracted. The passage affected Melmoth, and it seemed to have affected somebody else, for he thought he saw a tear upon the page; and concluded
 the reader had thrown down the book in a fit of enthusiasm, and struck off the beautiful combination of words he had just heard. He had scarcely replaced the book, when a young lady passed by the window with a basket of fruit in her hand. She was dressed in a plain white-muslin night-gown, with a bonnet of the same, and there was an elegance in her form which struck him. She presently came back, and, stooping down to bind the broken stalk of a carnation that lay in a border before the window, gave him an opportunity of examining her. Her face was beautiful, rather formed to please than to dazzle; her features had such a softness and delicacy in them that they were lost at a distance; and there was a sweetness mingled with melancholy that moved him exceedingly. Her complexion was not striking, but a pleasing expression is superior to the finest in the world.

 Melmoth had never known what it was to be in love, nor did he even know then, but he thought he saw something in her countenance which made him wish to be acquainted with her.

The god of love is a gentle deity; his chains are so light that the victim is a captive when he least suspects it; and his arrows are so finely pointed, that the wound is deepest when it is felt the least. As soon as she was out of sight he left the apartment;
 and, turning down a dark walk on the other side,
 soon came to a little rocky cavity overshadowed by the brown foliage of an oak, which grew at its entrance. A seat had been hewn out of the rock on either side, and a spring which gushed from a corner of the roof at the further end, trickled down with a soft lulling sound, and running directly across the floor entered the rock on the opposite side. Melmoth sat down to indulge his reflections, when a robin, which had been drawn thither by the sound of his feet, hopped confidently in, but when it saw him it flew immediately out again. 'And will you fly from me, gentle bird?' said he, bending down and stretching out his hand; 'though I am not the fair being you took me for, I would not hurt you, indeed I would not, I would cherish you for her sake.' As he said these words he rose up, and continued his ramble till he arrived at an opening in the wood, that presented him with a distant view of the lake and its islands, the colours of which were melted into each other by the soft light of the evening. He had scarcely fixed his eyes on the prospect, when an elderly gentleman, who was sitting upon a bench at a small distance, and whom a sudden turn in the walk had prevented him from seeing, attracted his notice.
 From his dress he appeared to be a clergyman. He immediately rose up; as Melmoth now saw it was too late to retire, he walked up to him with a respectful air, and acquainted him with his name and the particulars of his case, assuring him that nothing but the greatest necessity could have urged him to trespass on his grounds.—'You are welcome, Sir,' said the stranger, with a smile equally benevolent and polite, 'I have always heard your family mentioned with esteem,
 and shall consider your company not as an intrusion, but as an honour.' Melmoth returned a bow for his compliment, and expressed his sense of the obligation.
 The old gentleman and Melmoth proceeded along the walk. 'You have a sweet spot here,' said Melmoth.
 'Yes, Sir,' replied the other, 'I take great delight in it; but it has received no ornaments from my taste,
 it owes all its beauties to my daughter, who, poor girl! since her mother's death, has been my only companion in this solitude.' The walk now brought them to a small meadow, planted with fruit-trees, and divided by the rivulet which Melmoth had seen before.
 The steeple of the village church rose on one side, and at the upper end stood an old brick house, the front of which was almost vegetable, from the overgrowth of the vine which covered it. 'This is my dwelling, Sir,' said the old gentleman, 'it has not much elegance in its appearance, but—' It has more,' interrupted Mel-moth, 'the venerable air of an old house affects me much more deeply than the elegance of a modern one.
 It seems to breathe something of that generous spirit of hospitality which characterised our ancestors; at least, I have always connected that idea with it.'

They were now arrived at the door, and Melmoth was shewn into a room fitted up with a great degree of taste. The walls were hung with several flower-pieces cut in paper, with drawings of different views which the country around afforded. The windows looked into the orchard. It was the hour of twilight's soberest grey; the bat was taking its circles in the air, and now and then the owl hooted and flapped its wings against the casement. 'You live very retiredly here, Sir,' said Melmoth. 'Yes, Sir,' said
 Mr. Hartop, for that was his name; 'but my time is spent so agreeably in the discharge of my duties to my parish, and in cultivating my daughter's mind, that I do not feel the least regret at my seclusion from the world.' The door now opened, and his daughter made her appearance. 'Julia, my dear,' said her father, 'this gentleman intends to honour us with his company to-night.' Melmoth rose at her entrance, and she received him with a modest look of welcome which the always gave to her father's friends. They both sat down, and a silence ensued. Melmoth knew not what to do; when he looked up his eyes met Julia, and he cast them down again. He was soon relieved from his distress by the appearance of supper, the elegant simplicity of which charmed him. It was succeeded by a dessert. The flavour of the fruit was exquisite; Melmoth had never tasted any so fine—they were gathered by the hand of Julia. When the clock struck ten, all the servants entered. The master of the family informed his guest that it was the hour of prayer, and, upon bending knees, he poured forth
 the effusions of a grateful heart, with all the honest fervours of devotion.

Melmoth went to bed early, but he could not sleep,
 he could not chase the image of Julia from his mind.
 His adventure had something so romantic in it, that he almost doubted its reality; but a few hours before he did not know that such a being existed, and how his whole existence was interwoven with hers.

As soon as it was light, he went down into the garden. The shrubs and flowers, refreshed with the dew, breathed a fragrance exquisitely pleasing; and the lark soared in the air, and warbled its trembling, thrilling notes of ecstacy.

Melmoth followed the course of the rivulet in its mazes through the grove, till he descended into a hollow dingle, where it widened its stream and slept upon its rushes. The trees which overhung it reflected so deep a shade, that the light was no stronger than that of a light moon-shine; and all was solitude, silence and solitude. Melmoth sat down upon a bank, and played a lively air upon his flute. It was a piece which himself composed, and his fancy had already drawn a little circle of fairies round him to the sound,
 when he was roused by the rustling of the leaves.
 He started up, and looking round, was saluted by Mr.
 Hartop and his daughter; they had been taking their morning walk, and accident had pointed it in the very same direction with his. They apologized for their interruption, and intreated him to finish the tune.
 He took up his flute and touched a few notes of the voluntary he had heard the night before. Julia blushed: Mr. Hartop observed her confusion, and leading Melmoth to an opening, began to point out to him
 the beauties of the prospect. It was a little home scene in the pastoral style. In the valley ran a small river with a mill turning in its stream, and a green hill rose on the opposite side, partly covered with furze, and seamed with a winding sheep-walk. In the woodlands on the right and left, the birds were singing sweetly in concert, and the pauses of harmony were supplied by the murmurs of the water-mill, and the tinklings of the wether's bell. Melmoth stood listening to these mingled sounds with such a look of pleasure, that he communicated his feelings to his friends. Julia caught his enthusiasm, and her father smiled. It was a favourite scene of hers; she often viewed it, and as often admired it; but she had not known half its beauties till now.

'I hope your robin is well this morning,' said Mel-moth to her, as they were returning to the house.
 'Very well, Sir,' she replied, colouring; 'but I did not know that my little friendly visitor had the honour of your acquaintance.' 'My daughter,' interrupted Mr. Hartop, 'has a great affection for the feathered race, and they seem to return it almost with equal warmth. She has at this time a little family of blackbirds under her protection, and she visits them, I believe, every morning, with the greatest anxiety for their welfare.' As he said these words, they observed a cat playing with something upon the grass-plot at a small distance, and Julia stepped up just time enough to see her favourite black-birds expire at her feet. 'Here
 they are,' said she, bending over them, with her hands clasped, 'here they are indeed!' as she spoke, she looked up, and her heart's soft tear was in her eye.
 Melmoth felt it stream over his senses. He had all the milk of human kindness in his bosom; but at that moment he felt something more than the simple impulse of humanity within him, and the impression he then received was never lost. As he turned round to conceal his emotion, he saw the cat sitting behind a shrub just by, and contemplating, with the greatest composure, on the little scene of distress she had occasioned. Resentment for a moment flushed his cheek, and he took up a stone from the walk to throw at her.
 'You must not, indeed you must not,' said Julia, warmly, 'she only pursued the dictates of nature.'
 As she said these words, she raised her hand to his arm, which was lifted in the action; and the tears, which stood trembling upon her eye-lids, forced their way down her cheeks. Pity's finest strings were then touched, and with her soft and silver sounds the harsh, discordant notes of revenge are never in unison.
 Melmoth shed a tear upon the stone, and dropped it to the ground.

Mr. Hartop stood silent all the while. He looked first at the birds, then at Julia, then at Melmoth, then at the birds again; his heart was too full to ab-
 low him to speak—it ran over through his eyes.

How long this scene lasted I cannot tell; it had been in my power it should have lasted for ever—
 I would have fixed it on the canvas.

From the Boston Gazette, Sept. 23.
By the arrival, on Saturday evening last, of the ship Neptune, captain Scott, in 39 days from London, we have received papers one day, and Lloyd's list three days, later than those received by the Sally, from Liverpool.
From these dates we are enabled to add a few articles to our former flock of European intelligence.

THE INVASION.

LONDON, August 10.
We have reason to believe that the intelligence lately received by government is such as to create a firm persuasion that the enemy will immediately make an attempt to invade this kingdom; their preparations are complete, and in the Texel the troops destined for the expedition are actually embarked, with all the artillery and stores, and we have no doubt are only waiting for a favourable opportunity to put to sea. It was, indeed, yesterday positively stated that the Dutch fleet had sailed; but we have ascertained that the report was wholly unfounded. Admiral Ruffel sailed on Thursday to resume his station off the Texel. At so important a crisis, we are happy to be enabled to state, that government have adopted every measure which prudence could suggest to defeat the daring design of the enemy. Of the result of such an attempt we never entertained a doubt; at the same time we should be sorry if confidence led to any relaxation in the necessary means of defence. It would be idle to deny that we have a most active and powerful enemy to contend against—that his means of attack are great beyond all example, and that his enmity to this country is implacable. Our confidence is founded not upon any contempt of the enemy, but upon the knowledge of the skill, discipline and courage of our fleets and armies, and upon the loyalty, unanimity and bravery of the people of these kingdoms.

The following circular letter, was yesterday ordered to be sent to the commanders of the different Volunteer Corps throughout the kingdom:

"SIR,—In consequence of intelligence received by government, of the embarkation of large bodies of troops in Holland, of a fleet of men of war being ready to sail from thence, and of the increased preparations of the French at Boulogne, and its neighbourhood, I have received orders from his royal highness the Commander in Chief, to direct the general officers, and inspecting field-officers attached to the volunteer corps, to give notice to these corps, of the possibility of their being speedily called upon for service; and also to suspend all furloughs for working during the harvest till further orders. I have the honour to be, your most obedient and most humble servant,

"HARRINGTON,

General commanding the London district."

The Spaniards have begun forming two camps before Gibraltar, about three miles distant; they have pitched upwards of 500 tents, and they seem to have about 3000 men in their camps.

Government expect, by the next arrival from the continent, intelligence which will ultimately determine the question of continental peace or war, and perhaps the duration of the present parliamentary recess.

PLYMOUTH, August 8.

A sloop is come up from Falmouth, by which is learnt that a packet arrived from Lisbon in 7 days, and brings a report of a second battle, and that one of the enemy's ships had taken fire and blew up. The Spanish prisoners say, Villeneuve had sent all his fast sailing cutters and corvettes to the different French and Spanish ports, to apprise the port-admirals where he was, and in what latitude he might be joined by any vessels that could escape our blockading squadrons.

NEUTRAL COMMERCE.

Extract of a letter from a respectable gentleman in London, to his correspondent in Boston, dated August 10, 1805.

"On Monday next, (12th inst.) a committee of the American merchants will wait on the ministers, respecting the detention of so many American vessels.—Mr. Munroe is to have an interview with lord Mulgrave on Tuesday.

"No order has been given to detain as has been done. It is the decree in the case of the Essex, Orme, which has occasioned the detentions."

FOREIGN.

By the arrival of the ship Neptune, from London, we have received the papers of that city to the 11th of August.

It is evident from a variety of publications, that the British government really believe that the French have completed those preparations that they have affected to deem competent to the conquest of Great-Britain, and would soon make the long threatened attempt.

An American ship from Holland put into a British port on the 8th of August. The supercargo informed, that they had sailed in haste, to avoid an embargo, which was momentarily expected to be laid. Twenty thousand troops had been embarked in Dutch transports, and 25,000 were preparing to embark.

The blockade of the Texel has been resumed by a British Squadron.

The purchase of Swedish Pomerania for Russia was made by England, at a price amounting to about the first vote of credit, five millions sterling—26,000,000 six dollars.

There were reports in London at the last date of two fleets being seen engaged on the 2d of August.

The 1st of August was the anniversary of Nelson's battle of the Nile.

The Spaniards had seven sail of the line at Cartagena on the first of July, and one repairing.

All the London editors agree, that the port of Vigo could afford no sufficient protection and shelter to the French and Spanish ships, and that therefore they could not have remained long at that place.

It is a circumstance highly flattering to this country, that although the little emperor of the Gauls succeeds, in general, but too well, in prejudicing the minds of his newly created subjects against us, all his endeavours to restrain them from purchasing in our funds or adventuring in our lotteries, have hitherto proved ineffectual.

The idea of a sudden attack on Gibraltar, cannot be long entertained, when it is considered, that the government, from the regard to the health of the country, will not allow troops to pass from the provinces which were infected last year to those which were healthy, and vice versa.

Letters from Spain say, it has been ascertained, that the malignant fever which prevailed in that kingdom last year was imported to Malaga from Vera Cruz.

The rage for introducing "infant performers" on the British stage still continues. A master Tokely has lately been brought forward by Mrs. Jordan.

Rumours of an engagement between the combined fleet and that of lord Nelson, still prevail; but it appears that a French and Spanish fleet was spoken on the 13th of August, of about the same force as the fleet which put into Vigo. As the reported engagement must have taken place at an earlier day, it must, if true, have been with some other fleet, perhaps that from Rochefort, which it has been conjectured failed to join admiral Villeneuve at sea.

One of the vessels taken from the combined fleet which lately put into Vigo, is the Firme; one of the same name was taken in that port in 1702. The Berwick and Swifture are two of Villeneuve's ships; two with the same names were among those which made the attack at Vigo in 1702.

CAUTION.

The great proportion of our fall diseases, especially bilious fevers, arises from inattention to dress—the sudden changes of our weather from heat to coolness, from dry to damp, require a corresponding change in clothing. We postpone our winter garments too long. If we keep the body in a temperate state of warmth, avoiding night air, and every thing which suddenly checks healthy perspiration, and produces chills, there is little more danger of sickness, either in town or country, at this season than any other.—Phil. pap.

The postmaster-general, we understand, is at Suffolk, Connecticut, dangerously ill of a fever.

SELECTED.

TO A CHILD SLEEPING UNDER A TREE.

HAIL, pleasing shade; hail, beauteous spreading tree!
I've come to give to solitude and thee
One tranquil hour. But, Heaven! what strikes my eyes?
Here on the cover'd sod an infant lies!
Alarming scene! how came the cherub here?
On its fair cheek is loitering still the tear;
It sobs aloud! in fancy seems to weep—
Sure it has cry'd, unheard, itself to sleep.
Sleep on, sweet babe! in quiet slumber rest!
Let balmy sleep compose thy troubled breast!
Sleep, little angel! sleep away thy grief,
Then wake and in a stranger find relief.
Thy snowy locks I'll gently smooth aside,
Dishevel'd tresses infant beauty hides;
In the soft breezes while they loosely play,
I'll steal one kiss and wipe the tear away.
Sire thou hast strayed from thy fond mother's arms!
Yes; gracious Heaven protect thy infant charms;
Soft and alone, far has thy infant feet
Wander'd to find this breezy calm retreat:
Through the tall grass, across the lengthen'd mead,
Till weary, here thou laid'st thy little head.
Sleep on, dear boy! no harm shall thee o'ertake;
Safe will I guard thee till thou dost awake.
But hark! thy half-distraught mother calls;
The sound vibrates from yonder cottage walls;
This way she comes, then back again she flies;
Wild is her heaving breast, and loud she cries.
Now lie affrighted fancy paints thee dead,
Where a wild herd; promiscuous grazing, tread;
Till lo! alarming fear begins to rave,
Then she consigns thee to a wat'ry grave.
From place to place in wild disorder flies,
And fancies oft she hears thy infant cries.
Wake, lovely boy! the fast approaching night
Will but augment thy anxious mother's fight;
Wake! let me aid thee to her tender arms;
Thy absence ev'ry feeling breast alarms;
Rise, and I'll bear thee in my arms away,
No more again across this mead to stray.

A valuable Plantation for Sale.

THE subscriber wishes to sell his handsome, healthy, and highly improved FARM, containing 213½ acres, situate on South river, and but 3½ miles distant from the city of Annapolis; this plantation possesses superior conveniences: its advantages, being near a good market, and almost enclosed by two creeks, which furnish in their seasons abundance of wild fowl, fish and oysters; the soil is suited to the cultivation of small grain, corn, and tobacco, and peculiarly adapted to the production of all kinds of vegetables, that will at all times command ready sales, and yield perhaps the greatest profit, with comparatively the least labour. The buildings are all nearly new, consisting of a brick dwelling-house, 40 feet by 20, handsomely finished, a brick dairy and smoke house, a corn house, 24 feet by 12, a barn, 44 feet by 24, with sheds to shelter stock, and other necessary and convenient buildings, the whole erected with taste, and covered with cypress shingles. There is a very promising apple orchard, planted 10 years ago, consisting of the best kind of fruit trees, carefully selected, 3 peach orchards that have been particularly attended for 6 years past, and that now produce abundantly all kinds of that delicious fruit, together with a variety of other fruit peculiar to the soil and climate. There is a well of excellent water in a convenient situation. The fencing is chiefly of chefnut post and railing, and in good repair. A further description of this well known farm is thought to be unnecessary. Those wishing to purchase will no doubt view it. The proprietor's terms will be found accommodating; as he is not in want of money, a long credit would be given, on receiving satisfactory security.

THE SHRUBBERY.

[CONCLUDED FROM OUR LAST.]

THE conversation at breakfast became warm and interesting; literature and music were the principal topics. Julia was not silent on either; she discovered a delicacy and correctness of taste which astonished Melmoth.

'The study of music,' said he, 'while it sweetly soothes the sense of hearing, touches the soul, and elevates and refines its nature. I am persuaded there never was a poet who had not a taste for it; though I cannot go so far as a French writer, who affirmed, that he who is insensible to its effects has but half a soul.'

'Shakespeare's celebrated assertion is not bolder,' said Mr. Hartop, 'but I think I can confute you by a single instance: Garrick had no ear for music!'

'The Italians,' said Julia, 'are enthusiasts in the art; and the French seem to have imbibed their spirit. The fine nerves of Rousseau were tremblingly alive to its powers; and his extreme fondness for it, I have heard, appears in almost every page of his works. Indeed those who have touched the strings of pity with the finest hand, have generally presented the idea of music to the mind, in their most affecting scenes. Marmontelle has given to Fourcose his haut-boy; Julia de Roubigne has her harpichord, and Maria de Moulins has her lute.'

'I do not know a sweeter poem in the language,' returned Melmoth, 'than the Mistle. It breathes a spirit of melancholy enthusiasm, which captivates the mind irresistibly. The character of Edwin is drawn with exquisite taste, and exhibits some of the most romantic scenes in nature. The idea of reclining at a distance from the village dance, 'soothed with the soft notes warbling in the wind,' is inexpressibly beautiful. No less so is the reflection it suggests.

'Is there a heart that music cannot melt?
Alas, how is that rugged heart forlorn!
Is there who ne'er those mystic transports felt,
Of solitude and melancholy born?

His petition in favour of the singing bird is sweetly sympathetic:

'O let them ne'er, with artificial note,
To please a tyrant, strain their little bill;
But sing what Heaven inspires, and wander where they will.'

Julia's eye brightened, as he repeated these lines; but the unhappy end of her black-birds had thrown an air of sadness over her features which all her efforts could not dissipate. It had stamped upon her countenance

.....'That expression sweet, of melancholy,
Which captivates the soul.'

and, as Melmoth was acquainted with its amiable cause, it operated on his feelings with peculiar energy.

The heart of Julia was attuned to gentle emotions, and whenever the faded form of sorrow met her eye, the tear of sympathy trembled in it. I have seen her sit out in a morning on her little errands of charity to the poor of the village. She entered every cottage with such a smile of sweetness, and listened to every tale of family distress with such a look of tender concern, that my heart dilated at the sight. I would not have exchanged my feelings on that occasion for those of any one under Heaven, but herself. Though united to her by no closer bond than that of humanity, I felt a pride, an honest pride in the connexion; I felt a dignity in my nature which I had never known before.

In the evening they sailed upon the lake, the surface of which was just ruffled enough to shew it was alive. A cormorant was flying over it and fishing; and upon the banks, which are steep and fringed with wild shrubs, hung a few goats. Here and there a grotesque mass of rock projects boldly over the water, with a little shining torrent falling from its brow, and then through the precipices appears a smooth green sward, embosomed in old woods, which climb half way up the mountain's side, and discover above them broken line of craggs that crown the scene. All these objects were inverted on the blue surface of the lake; and no sooner had the boat pulled off from the shore than they started into motion. The rocks, and woods, and mountains, passed by in silent succession to each side, and changed their figure at every yard. The rays of the setting sun gave a glow to the landscape, and Melmoth threw an air of enchantment over it with the soft notes of his flute. Our voyagers were delighted with their expedition. They coasted every island, and looked into every bay. Every stroke of the oar pointed out new beauties, and inspired new ideas. The spirit of pleasure left not a single second of vacancy, and evening had overshadowed them with her last and deepest shade, before they landed.

When Melmoth retired to his chamber, and reviewed the little incidents of the past day, the exquisite sensibility of Julia thrilled his heart.—He took out his pocket-book and penciled upon a slip of paper the following lines:

THE BLACK-BIRDS—AN ELEGY.

*Spring had return'd, and nature smil'd,
Verdure had crown'd each wood and vale,
All was compos'd, serene and mild,
And notes of pleasure swill'd the gale.*

*'Twas then a black-bird and its mate
In a seringo built their nest,
The patient hen assiduous sat
With trembling wings and heaving breast.*

*Two chirpers soon reward their care,
The pledges of their mutual love;
The pleasing task the parents share,
And range for food the blossom'd grove.*

*Returning through a shrubby mead,
The gentle pair, with anguish, saw
Their little ones expiring bleed
Beneath a wanton tyrant's paw.*

*In vain they feebly flutter'd round,
In vain they pour'd a plaintive lay;
Deaf to the sweet pathetic sound,
The plund'rer still retain'd her prey.*

*'Whither, ah whither shall we fly?
Life has no value now—they sung;
'We'll melt the murderer's heart, and die,
'With wings stretch'd fondly o'er our young.'*

When he had finished, he thought something was still wanting—he had not paid a compliment to Julia. He cut his pencil again and again, but it would not do; the string was too fine to touch upon. He went to bed in despair.

In the morning, when he took his leave, he presented the paper to Julia. She read the title, and put it into her bosom, with a smile—but that smile betrayed a secret which she wished to have concealed. It forced a tear down her cheek.

Spirits of love and sympathy! inspirers of the soft affections, of all that is beautiful in feeling and elevated in thought! ye alone can tell, ye who can awake such thrilling harmony from that sweet instrument the human soul, ye alone can tell what fine, what exquisitely fine cement unites congenial natures, what magnetic principles operate on them.

It was not till three years after, when Melmoth returned from making the tour of Europe, that he had an opportunity of revisiting his friends. He had written to them several times on his travels, but he had never received any answer, and he concluded that his letters had miscarried. Interesting as were all the various scenes which had passed under his eye during that interval, they had not once diverted his thoughts from the beloved object of their contemplation—Julia mingled in every idea; he had passions, sighs, sentiments and sensations, only for Julia. As soon as he arrived in London, he obtained his father's consent to ask her hand, and immediately set out for Westmoreland. It was towards the close of the third day when he reached the banks of the lake, and he ordered the post-chaise to drive to the by-path, intending to walk up to the house through the shrubbery, that he might surprize them the more agreeably.

When he opened the wicket he was presented with a scene embellished with all the beauties of spring. The lilac was in full blow, and the laburnum dropt its golden clusters in a grand profusion; while the softer blossoms of the apple and almond appeared above the rest, and were finely relieved by the fresh verdure of their foliage. Melmoth recognized every object with the feeling of a friend. Every tree and shrub recalled to his mind the ideas they had inspired, when he had first walked under their shade, and he bade them welcome with as much ardour as if they had been animate. He looked down, as he passed, at the bench upon which he sat when the voice of his Julia first broke upon his ear; and his heart exulted as he looked. But his impatience would not suffer him to indulge the idea. He had a thousand things to say, a thousand little incidents which he had treasured up in his memory to tell of. Every minute seemed an age which did not bring the interview along with it, and he quickened his pace at every step.

When he came to the house, he found a servant sitting in the porch, and he inquired eagerly if Mr. Hartop was within. 'No Sir,' he replied, 'he is just gone to speak over his daughter's grave.' 'Whose grave?' interrupted Melmoth, in a faltering voice. 'Miss Julia's, Sir, she died last week of a consumption.—That gate opens to the church-yard.'

Melmoth felt the intelligence in every nerve. It was as the cold point of a dagger to his heart. He did not utter a word in reply, his feelings would not let him; he stood motionless as a statue, gazing on vacancy, and toll in the sensations which harrowed up his soul. All the fond hopes which he had cherished so long, were now extinguished, and in the very moment when he expected their completion. He walked up to the gate, but he could not open it; it led to a scene which he knew would unman him—he let the latch fall, and burst into tears.

An interval of reason succeeded—it was an interval of patience, humility and hope—but it was short. The frenzy of his soul returned; he instantly burst the gate open, and rushed violently through.

As he hurried along the path that wound among the tomb-stones, his eye looked round involuntarily for the objects it most dreaded to fix on; and it soon found them. A number of mourners had ranged themselves in a little circle round a grave on one side; it was an interesting group, and Melmoth drew near to examine the weeping figures which composed it. They were villagers, whose families Julia had been enabled by her father to keep from want, and who asked leave to pay this last tribute of gratitude to her memory. Mr. Hartop stood advanced a few paces before the rest, with the volume of inspiration in his hand. There was a manly resignation expressed in his countenance, and a firmness in the tone of his voice, which shamed Melmoth for his weakness—except now and then, when a tear stole down his cheek, and melted his accent. He had lost all that was dear to him in this world, and his soul was now ready to take its flight. A good man, struggling with adversity, and rising amidst all its efforts to depress him, is an object on which angels may look down with delight, and which the Divine Being must contemplate with peculiar complacency.

As soon as the funeral service was over, and the mourners had departed, Melmoth stepped up to the grave, and looked eagerly in. The frantic wildness of his air struck the sexton, who was preparing to throw the earth into it; and he stood fixed in silent astonishment, with his foot lifted up on his spade. Melmoth kept bending over, with his eye chained to the inscription on the lid of the coffin—Within it were the remains of one whom he had chosen from the world—she was indeed his world—he had seen her walk—her eyes, now for ever closed, had once— and who could not have interpreted their language— had once conversed tenderly with his. The thought cut him to the soul—he could not bear it, and he walked hastily away—but he had not gone ten paces before his strength failed him, and he returned back to take another look. He was too late—the sexton had already fallen to work, and the coffin was to be seen no more, for the last spadeful of earth had covered it. A tear started in his eye at the disappointment—he looked wistfully at the man a moment, but had not the heart to reproach him for it—every feeling within him was turned to tenderness; he fetched a deep sigh, and walked slowly away, weeping as he walked.

In his return to the parsonage he met some of the mourners who had been conducting Mr. Hartop home, and he commanded firmness enough to inquire the particulars of an event, the sudden disclosure of which had so unhinged him. Mr. Hartop, they said, had been confined the year preceding, by a long and dangerous illness; and the closeness and anxiety with which his daughter had attended him during that period, had brought on a slow fever that soon threw her into a decline.

When Melmoth came to the gate he felt himself ill qualified to act the part of a comforter, and he took a turn into the garden in order to compose himself. But Julia had not left the shades, which she had rendered so dear to him. They were full of her. He saw her in every object, he felt her at every step; at every instant he heard her well known voice;

Sweet as the shepherd's pipe upon the mountains,

In every wood-scene her gentle figure appeared at a distance among the trees; she sat upon every bench, and stood listening beside every water-fall. He took a path that soon brought him to the edge of a small pool hung round with willows. It was a scene in unison with his feelings, and he threw himself upon a seat to indulge the melancholy which had taken possession of his soul. He looked back on the past, and every sensation within him accused him of folly in his conduct to the Hartops. To have delayed an alliance, even for a moment, with such virtue, would have shewn him unworthy of it; but to go abroad, to linger so long in a foreign country, to seek the society of strangers while Julia was alive, this betrayed such insensibility that he could never forgive himself.

He was rising in an agony of vexation and despair, when happening to turn his eye towards the tree round which the seat was fixed, he observed his own name cut on the bark of it. His heart instantly told him who had done it—Julia did not forget him, though he had deserted Julia. The idea of his having wronged her, was more than he could bear—every feeling revolted at it. He took out his pocket-book, and, wiping away the tear that dimmed his eye, he cut Julia Hartop, close under his own name—"The tree," said he, "shall not bear such a memorial of her affection and none of mine." By the time he had finished he had acquired some degree of composure, and he ventured to return to the house.

When he reached the door he found it open, and he stepped into the hall. He waited a few moments for a servant to introduce him, but none happened to come, and, after a little hesitation, he walked softly into the parlour. The first object that met his eye was the venerable figure of his friend, sitting by a table, and leaning upon his hand, with his eyes cast down, in the attitude of meditation. The sight of the room in which they had last met, gave him back the sensations he then felt—when he looked round on the furniture and discovered every chair and table, every flower-piece and drawing just in the places he had left them, Julia entered his bosom, and touched at a thousand points—he trembled, and would have given the world to have gone back. He made an effort to speak, but the voice he would have uttered was lost—Mr. Hartop lifted his eyes from the ground—At the sight of Melmoth he started from his seat—he took his hand, looked him full in the face—the tears came at last. "You are come, Sir," said he, "to a house of mourning, but I hope you will not repent of your visit; the obligation it confers is deeply felt—I have suffered severely in my family since I saw you last. I have lost a daughter, and such a daughter—he paused. I have had the distress to see her die by inches before my face; and with such angel meekness did she bear it all—he paused again—nature melted within him at the thought; it revived the images of tenderness in his memory, and all the father rushed into his eyes. He could not but remember that such things were, and were most dear to him."

"But I am not without consolation," he added, pointing with a triumphant action of the finger, to a bible that lay open upon the table, "I am not without hope; that book assures me we shall meet again—meet in a better and a happier world, never, never to be parted."

As he said this, he cast a look upwards. A silence of a few moments followed. He stepped up to the mantle-piece, and taking down a portrait—the portrait of Julia—he presented it to Melmoth—"I was charged," said he, "to deliver this to you, Sir, as soon as the original was no more. She drew it herself, a little before she died; and, in her last moments, she intrusted it with me, as her legacy to one with whom she had once wished to be united."

Melmoth gazed on the miniature with a kind of weeping rapture that wants a name. He dwelt on every feature till imagination gave it life. He saw again that face, with all its touching sweetness, which his heart had just told him he should see no more; and he forgot, for a moment, that he held only the semblance in his hand. Mr. Hartop felt himself overcome, every nerve that he had was shaken; and he walked up to the window to conceal his emotion—a robin, at that instant, flew down, to pick up some crumbs that had been thrown upon the grass-plot—He burst into tears.

The good old man did not long survive his daughter. A shock so severe, soon broke a constitution which time had already shattered—and when he died, he left his little all to Melmoth. He was buried, as he had desired, in the same grave with his wife and daughter; and one plain stone, with as plain an inscription, marks the spot.

Melmoth returned into the active scenes of life. A natural gaiety of temper, and a fine flow of spirits, served to dispel the gloom which hung over his mind; but the loss he had sustained was never forgotten—and, often, in his brightest moments, when the image of Julia crossed his mind, he would step aside into the shade, to dwell on her virtues, and feel the melancholy luxury of tears.

FROM A LATE LONDON PAPER.

THE two intended ARCHWAYS, one for carriages, the other for foot-passengers, under the Thames, from Rotherhithe to the vicinity of the London Docks, are about proceeding with great vigour. The principal Engineer is Mr. Robert Vazie. The management of this prodigious undertaking, for which an act of parliament has just received his Majesty's assent, could not be in better hands. As this ingenious artist is familiar with the Collieries in the North, one of which is worked underneath, and quite across the bed of the Tyne, he must be of course prepared to encounter all the difficulties which may oppose themselves. But the fact is, that from borings, and that complete disclosure of the sub-strata of the soil, which the construction of the London docks has effected, there is not the slightest ground for apprehension—"These are Imperial works, and worthy kings."

"FRUITFUL VINES!"

THERE is living in the county of Somerset, a Gentleman and his Wife, who yet bear the appearance of young people, who have already had nineteen children, who are, we believe, all living.

There is in the same county, another pair who have had eighteen children.

Neither of these cases, however, equal what a family, some years since of this place, produced. A lady who was twice married had eighteen children by her first, and three by her second, husband!

LATE FROM EUROPE.

By the ship Factor, captain Caldwell, in 41 days from Greenock, (arrived yesterday at this port,) the editors of this Gazette have received Glasgow papers to the 22d of August, being several days later than the accounts before received from thence. An official account had been received by the English admiralty of the French and Spanish fleets having put into Ferrol, and that they had increased their force to 37 sail of the line. Several unsuccessful attempts to storm the fortresses of Bhurtapore, in the East-Indies, were made by general Lake. In these actions gen. Lake lost 3000 men.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, August 6.

Three American ships from Baltimore and Charleston, bound to Amsterdam, have been taken off the Texel, by the English, and sent for England. The English admiral who cruises before the Texel, has declared that he has orders to send to England all ships bound for the Texel with West-India produce.

The troops embarked in the Texel are furnished with provisions for six months. Vice-admiral de Winter has brought the ships of war and transports out of the Nieu Diep, and drags them up in two lines, and they make a very fine appearance.

HAGUE, August 6.

The fleet will be ready to sail the day after tomorrow. Rear-admiral Kikkert commands under vice-admiral de Winter.

ENGLAND.

LONDON, August 15.

It is a well known fact, that every American vessel which has failed for the Mediterranean for some time past, with English produce on board, has been captured by the Spaniards. It was not till Saturday last that this extraordinary circumstance could be accounted for by the underwriters, and for the discovery, they are indebted to the following extract of a letter from vice-admiral Collingwood to William Mariden, Esq. dated off Cadiz, 26th of July, and transmitted by him to the committee at Lloyds:

"The Factor, American brig, from Liverpool, mentioned in the letters from Lloyd's as having a very valuable cargo on board, was spoken by the squadron within four leagues of Cadiz light-houses. I sent the Hydra to see her in safety through the Straits, without which she would probably have been taken by the gun-boats, and which the master seemed to think a much less evil than proceeding on his voyage to Naples, and running the risk of being met by a Tripolitan. I have been informed the Spaniards give to neutrals, laden with English property, every encouragement to put themselves in the way of their cruisers, by discharging them quickly, and paying their freight liberally.

"The American schooner Hermon is stated to have come off this port before the blockade, for the purpose of being taken; and, after condemnation of her cargo, was at sea again perhaps in less time than she could have performed her original voyage; so that they have both a pecuniary interest in being captured, and secure themselves from the danger of meeting the cruisers of Tripoli."

GREENOCK, August 19.

In consequence of the expected co-operation of Russia with this country, government are now taking up in the river a great number of ships, to be employed as transports to convey Russian troops to Swedish Pomerania.

August 21.

Admiral Calder joined admiral Cornwallis on the 11th; admiral Stirling, from off Rochefort, it is stated, has joined also, so that admiral Cornwallis has now upwards of thirty sail of the line; and will, probably, be further strengthened by the force under lord Nelson or admiral Collingwood. He is immediately to be reinforced by several ships from Portsmouth and Plymouth, and in a few days he will be in such a state as to combat, with every probability of success, the whole combined forces of the enemy.

The hostile fleet in Ferrol now amounts to about 37 sail of the line.

LISBON, August 13.

On the 3d instant advices were received of the combined squadron being seen steering into Vigo on the 27th ult. consisting of 27 sail of ships of war, and admiral Nelson said not to be far from them, his squadron having been seen off Cadiz and Lagos Bay, some days ago, and the Pouletta sloop of war was dispatched to inform him. We hourly expect some great news from the consequences of Nelson's falling in with them, and it is probable he has been joined by the squadron blockading Cadiz, being 9 sail of the line, under admiral Collingwood.

August 14.

The combined fleets are reported to have got into Corunna. They left three ships at Vigo on the 31st ult. Lord Nelson was said to be off Viana on the 7th inst. The two Spanish men of war, taken by the Ferrol squadron, have arrived at Plymouth.

COMBINED FLEET.

IT will be seen by our marine list, that a large fleet, supposed and said to be the combined French and Spanish fleet, from Vigo, was fallen in with, on the 16th August last, in lat. 44, 3, long. 13, 18, W. then standing W. S. W.—This fleet has also been reported by captain Williams, at Salem, to have arrived at Cadiz, prior to the 23d August. The difference of lat. and long. between the spot where the fleet was spoken, as above, and Cadiz, is 7, 32, lat. and 7, 7, long. We think it highly probable the fleet has arrived at Cadiz.

Arrived the brig Shipwright, Doak, Bourdeaux, 47 days. August 16, at four A. M. moderate clear weather, wind N. E. by E. desir'd a fleet bearing S. S. W. distance 4 leagues, under easy sail—also a small ship bearing W. N. W. distance 2 1-2 leagues. A frigate and line of battle ship gave us chase at 9 A. M. lat. 44, 3, long. 13, 18, W. was boarded from the latter, and found them to be French; could not learn where they were from, nor their destination—after examining our papers, they ordered us to steer N. W. all day and night—the fleet was steering W. S. W. The small ship proved to be English, and from every appearance a Lisbon packet, homeward bound, which they took, and after stripping her of sails, rigging, &c. set her on fire. The number of the fleet was thirty-four—17th, at 2 P. M. the ships to windward, (five line of battle ships and a frigate, all under English colours,) bore up to join the fleet. At 7 P. M. cloudy, lost sight of the fleet, 18th, at 9 P. M. was boarded from a Spanish privateer, treated politely, and informed, that the above mentioned fleet was from Corunna and Vigo—and the small ship burnt was an English Lisbon packet, bound home, with much specie on board.

We are told the secretary of the navy has written his correspondents that Hamet Balhaw is very well content with the peace that has been made with Tripoli. But, we also learn, the public will be more acquainted with some further particulars on this subject, when Mr. Eaton arrives. We understand he is now on his voyage home in a private vessel. He went to Africa in a public ship.

NEW-YORK.

NEW-YORK, October 2.

Captain Peter, of the British packet, has favoured us with the following communication in manuscript, from the printer of the Halifax Royal Gazette:

ROYAL GAZETTE OFFICE,
Halifax, September 16, 1805.

By a schooner that arrived here this morning from St. John's, Newfoundland, after a passage of 7 days, the following particulars respecting the combined squadron were received:

Translation from the Portuguese.

"Vigo, July 29, 1805.

"On the morning of the 23d inst. in a thick fog in the lat. of —, and about 40 leagues west of Cape Ortegal, the vanguard of the combined French and Spanish squadron, coming from Martinique, fell in with an English squadron, comprising 13 two-deck, and 3 three-deck ships of the line. A battle immediately ensued in the fog in great confusion; nine French ships being to leeward were unable to join in the battle, which lasted, with great obstinacy on both sides, for 6 hours. It is said one of the English three-deckers was completely wrecked, and all the rest were very much damaged.

"On the 24th the combined squadron rejoined and chased the English, who avoided a second combat; thereby raising the blockade of Ferrol.

On the 27th in the afternoon, the said combined squadron entered this river Vigo, comprising 19 ships of the line, 4 frigates, and two brigs of war, bringing also with them a Spanish galeon, loaded with plate from Lima, which had been taken by the English.

"Two ships of observation, or for reconnoitring, were left off this port, which are not yet come in; there are also two Spanish ships missing, which separated in the action, one disabled, and the other very much damaged—from the thick fog it is not known what course they took, or whether or not they afterwards fell into the hands of the English.

"This combined squadron is composed of excellent ships, particularly the French, well manned, 6000 of them, however, are very much damaged—it is supposed there are about 300 men wounded, (which are to be disembarked to-morrow and sent to the hospital,) and from 40 to 50 killed. The squadron has on board 12,000 troops, and is commanded by admiral Villeneuve. Spanish admiral Gravina, second in command to admiral Villeneuve.

"Yesterday an express was dispatched to Ferrol, and it is presumed that within 3 or 4 days this squadron will be joined by another now in that port, comprising 17 sail of the line, and that they will then put to sea together, taking with them the Sabina frigate, which was in this port. The Ferrol squadron has 13,000 troops on board—it is much feared that Nelson will reach this before the Ferrol squadron."

October 3.

Captain Baine, arrived yesterday in 48 days from Nantz, informs, that on the 21st of August he passed through lord Nelson's fleet, of 12 sail of the line, and was boarded by a brig, the captain of which informed, they were bound to Vigo in pursuit of the combined fleets.

THE TEAR.

I TALK'D of the woes of the days that are past— Of afflictions and trials severe: How the May-morn of life was with storms overcast, How the blossoms of Hope were all nipt by the blast, And Beauty sat list'ning to hear. Of hardships and dangers, and many a wrong, And of toils that beset me so near, Of Treachery's snare, and Ingratitude's tongue I told;—and 'twas pleasant the tale to prolong— For Beauty repaid with a tear. Ah! soft form of Beauty that gladdens the soul! Is aught as thy sympathy dear— When thy bright-beaming eyes with benignity roll, When heaves thy full bosom at Pity's control, And thy roses are wash'd with a tear! When dark rolls the clouds that o'ershadow our doom, When toils, and when dangers appear,— When the storm-threat'ning waves all their terrors assume, Then the sun-beam of Hope that can break thro' the gloom, O Beauty! must shine thro' a tear. Yes, Beauty—thy tear that from sympathy flows, To Manhood shall ever be dear; 'Tis the balm of all ill, and the cure of all woes; And the heart-rankling wounds of remembrance shall close, That Beauty has wash'd with a tear.

THE SAILOR BOY.

DARK flew the scud along the wave, And echoing thunders rent the sky; All hands aloft, to meet the storm, At midnight was the boatwain's cry. On deck flew ev'ry gallant tar, But one—bereft of ev'ry joy; Within a hammock's narrow bound, Lay stretch'd this hapless Sailor Boy. Once, when the Boatwain pip'd all hands, The first was he, of all the crew, On deck to spring—to trim the sail— To steer—to reef—to furl or clue. Now fell disease had seiz'd a form Which nature cast in finest mould; The midwatch bell now smote his heart, His last, his dying knell it toll'd. "O! God!" he cried, and gasp'd for breath, "Ere yet my soul shall cleave the skies, Are there no Parents—Brethren near, "To close, in death, my weary eyes. "All hands aloft to brave the storm, "I hear the win't'ry tempest roar;" He rais'd his head to view the scene, And backward fell, in rife no more. The morning sun in splendour rose, The gale was hush'd, and still'd the wave; The Sea-Boy, far from all his friends, Was plung'd into a wat'ry grave. But HE, who guards the Sea-Boy's head, HE who can save or can destroy, Snatch'd up to Heav'n the purest soul, That e'er adorned a Sailor Boy.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

OUR files of London papers, received by the Gal-len, are to August 18, (four days later than before received,) from which we have been enabled to make a few extracts, of some considerable interest.

It appears from these accounts, that the English government, in the East-Indies, have experienced a series of ill success in their warfare against the numerous and powerful friends of HOLKAR, particularly in his strong hold of Bhurtpore. Terms of peace had been offered to the British, but refused, on any other principle, than that of an unconditional surrender.
To this, it is said, the Rajah, who had with him in the fortress his family and treasure, had declared his determination of blowing up the whole place should they obtain a holding there. To this account, however, it is added, "That previous to the sailing of the packet, which brought the late dispatches from India, a new negotiation was understood to have been opened; that several communications had been interchanged, and it was supposed that some kind of treaty would at length be concluded. It is indeed, reported, that the dispatches to the court of directors, contain intelligence, either of the actual termination of the war in India, or that there was every probability of its being speedily brought to a conclusion.

On the subject of an immediate coalition between Austria, Russia and England, much speculation is made. The latest intelligence from the continent states the increasing activity of Russia, who is assembling a large body of troops at Corfu for the purpose of making a descent upon Italy, under the protection of the British fleet in that quarter; and it is likewise reported, that a strong force is on its way to the southern frontiers of Poland, in order to co-operate with the troops of Austria, which are known to be assembling in that quarter; though under the pretext of maintaining an independent and safe neutrality. The establishment of this formidable coalition, uniting all the northern powers, except Prussia and Denmark, will bring against France a military force infinitely more powerful, vigorous and better concerted, than any of the former associations under that name.

It is correctly ascertained, that the grand signior is augmenting and organizing his army; and that the most friendly intercourse exists between his government and the ministers of Russia and England.

In addition to the general and uniform opinion which prevails in all parts of Europe, that an alliance of almost all the northern powers has been established against France, we are enabled to relate, on the authority of a private letter received here from a high source of respectability in London, that "a subsidy of 3,300,000 l. in specie, was then packing up at the bank, destined principally for the continent; but to what power was not publicly known."

Letters from Madrid state, that the most active preparations are going on in all the ports of Spain.
At Cadiz four new ships of the line, one of 136
guns, were ready for sea.

The emperor Napoleon arrived at Boulogne on the 23d August, and the following day reviewed the infantry, which were drawn up on the beach, and extended from Cape d'Aspret as far as Cape Grienez. The number of troops exceeded 112,000, and his majesty was on horseback from ten in the morning, until 7 in the evening.

After a short stay at Boulogne, Buonaparte will proceed to Helvoetsluys and the Helder, to inspect the formidable preparations making at both those places.

It was thought that Buonaparte, on his visit to Holland, contemplated to receive, in that country,
the same honours he obtained in Italy. Switzerland,
it was also said, would share the same fate.

The French and Italian troops in Upper Italy are estimated at 70,000.

Intelligence has reached England, that the whole of the French coast, from Morlaix to Boulogne is lined with troops for the avowed purpose of invading England; that the cannon, camp equipage, ammunition, &c. provided for the grand expedition, is beyond all example; and that the soldiers speak of the invasion in strains of rapture and enthusiasm. Some letters from the continent state, that the expedition was to have taken place early in August, but a squadron of men of war which was expected from Rochefort or Brest, [more probably the combined French and Spanish fleet,] had not arrived, but was momentarily looked for. No doubts appeared to be entertained throughout the whole of the armed coast, which stretches from Brest to the Texel, but that the invasion of England would be attempted, and that too immediately.

Such thorough and effectual measures of defence
have been adopted in England, that the public spirit, instead of fearing, appears to court the embrace of its invading enemy.

The combined French and Spanish squadron, after being joined by 7 ships of the line, supposed to be the L'Orient fleet, entered Ferrol on the 8th or 9th August, with a force of 37 sail of the line. Admiral Calder, with his fleet of 9 sail, having been forced to quit the blockade of that port, joined admiral Cornwallis on the 11th.

The escape of the combined fleets appears to have caused a great degree of dissatisfaction in England.
The battle, though a victorious one, seems to have been below the hopes of that nation; murmurs begin to arise, and to grow louder by repeating. It is in fact stated, that the court of admiralty have judged it necessary to be made known, that an investigation of the conduct of admiral Calder would take place, agreeably to the provisional articles of war.

A dissolution of parliament was expected to take place in the course of last month.

BY private letters from the Hague, dated the 10th instant, we learn, that the day before an aid-de-camp arrived from the emperor of the French, whose mission, whatever it was, occasioned the immediate assembling of the grand council of state, at which the French ambassador assisted, as well as the admiral de Winter, and the generals Marmont and Dumonceau.
Though this council broke up very late the grand pensionary thought proper, immediately on its conclusion, to solicit an audience of the Prussian minister, which lasted upwards of two hours, and the latter in the morning dispatched a courier to Berlin. The purport of this meeting is not positively known, but it is strongly rumoured that the French and Dutch naval and military chiefs have received their final instructions preparatory to their departure.

Buonaparte has demanded of the Austrian cabinet the occasion of the armaments going forward in the Imperial states; he has likewise required that a portion of those troops collected on the frontiers of Italy, and which menace the tranquillity of that country, should be withdrawn. Speaking to the Austrian minister lately on the subject of the military preparations of his court, the latter assured him that the movements alluded to were connected with a resolution on the part of his Imperial majesty to maintain a strict neutrality, and that they are rendered necessary by a state of the Turkish provinces, by the armament of Russia, &c. but were without hostile reference to France. Buonaparte hastily replied, that he was aware of the falsehood of the excuse, and that his master should be cautious how he again called him into the field.

All officers in the Austrian service absent from their regiments, are ordered to rejoin them on or before the 3d inst.

A new levy of 80,000 men has been ordered in the Russian states; and a corps of 40,000 is forming in Livonia, where it is supposed it will embark. A squadron of eight sail of the line will leave Cronstadt in the course of the present month, to cruise, (according to some accounts,) in the Baltic, but by others stated to be intended to join the British squadron in the north seas.

Another division of Russian troops from the Black Sea, to the amount of 20,000 men, was expected in the Adriatic during the last month.

Petersburg letters of the 24th ult. state, that all officers on leave of absence had been ordered immediately to join their respective corps.

Prussia is busied in military preparations; and orders were lately issued for placing the medical staff on the war establishment.

NEUTRAL COMMERCE.

No order whatever has been issued, either by the council or the admiralty, relative to the detention of American vessels bound to the enemy's ports. This rumour is supposed to have originated from a late decision of Sir William Scott, founded upon a resolution of the privy council, that the produce of enemies' colonies, carried to America, there entered and subsequently transmitted to the mother country, is still in transitu, and the entry in America, not changing the destination, can only be regarded as a deviation in the voyage. An order, we understand, is about to be issued from the council office, declaring that neutrals laden with the produce of the enemy's colonies, and bound to the united kingdoms, shall not be molested by our cruisers.

An infectious and very malignant fever is raging on board the captured Spanish ships.

INDIA INTELLIGENCE.

Official accounts of the progress of the war in India have been received to the 9th March, by the Belle packet. The substance of them is as follows:
Gen. Lake, under date of Jan. 21; before Bhurtpore, stated, that having made a breach, he attempted to form the place, but found the ditch so broad and deep, as to prevent his progress. His loss on that occasion was—total, 2 captains, 1 captain-lieutenant, 15 lieutenants, 34 sergeants, 24 corporals, 2 drummers, and 233 privates—natives, 6 subadars, 5 jemadars, 15 havildars, 30 naicks, 6 drummers, 200

sepoys, 3 bhealters, 1 tindal, 13 lascars, and 6 bil-dars.

A letter of the 23d states, that the enemy's cavalry having attacked a convoy of provisions for the camp, about five cols from it, capt. Wallace made a most gallant defence, until col. Don arrived with a reinforcement, when he attacked and totally routed
the enemy, taking 40 stand of colours and 4 guns, with all their stores, &c. Capt. Cordo, of the 15th N. I. and cornet Erskine, of the 1st N. C. were the only officers wounded. We had 2 privates killed and 20 wounded.

Gen. Lake, on the 20th February, made a fourth assault on Bhurtpore, and was again repulsed, owing again to the depth of water in the ditch. Our forces was divided into three parties; one, under captain Grant, succeeded in the service assigned to it, and captured 11 of the enemy's guns. Another, under lieutenant-col. Don, which was to mount the breach, but unable to pass the ditch, made a most gallant but ineffectual attempt to pass a high and steep bastion;
while the third party, under lieutenant-colonel Taylor, was, from the mistake in its guide, early exposed to a destructive fire, and compelled to retreat. On the 21st of February, gen. Lake made another assault with the whole of his European force, under the command of the hon. brigadier-general Monson.
Our troops commenced the attack with the utmost gallantry, and persevered in it for a considerable length of time with the most determined bravery, but their utmost exertions were not sufficient to enable them to gain the top of the breach. The bastion, which was the point of attack, was extremely steep;
the resistance opposed to them was vigorous; and as our men could only mount by small parties at a time,
the advantages were great on the side of the enemy.
Discharges of grape, logs of wood, and pots filled with combustible materials, immediately knocked down those who were ascending, and the whole party, after being engaged in an obstinate contest for two hours, and suffering very severe loss, were obliged to relinquish the attempt, and retire to our trenches.

The aggregate of our loss before Bhurtpore on the 9th March, the date of lord Lake's last dispatches, comprised in killed and wounded, 1 lieutenant-colonel,
2 majors, 20 captains, 1 captain-lieutenant, 45 lieutenants, 21 adjutants, 1 cornet, 2 ensigns, 1 quartermaster, 173 petty officers, and 782 privates, Europeans—294 native officers, and 832 sepoy, &c.—
in all 3205 men.

LENTZ, July 13.

The hopes of preserving peace become weaker every day, for every thing in our vicinity continually assumes a more warlike appearance, and we are in constant expectation of seeing hostilities commence.
The troops are in motion on every side, and their marches appear to be rapid, and at short notice.

LEYDEN, July 29.

The naval preparations going forward in the different ports of the republic, are daily acquiring a greater degree of force and consistency. Various detachments of troops have left the camp at Zuyt, and joined corps destined to march to those places where great bodies of troops to be employed in the expedition are already assembled. These preparations are not confined to the Texel, but are extended to Hel-voetsluys and the banks of the Meuse.

HAMBURG, August 2.

The advices from Vienna have a very hostile appearance; all the troops are ready to march. The Hungarians have offered, in case of war, to equip
10,000 men for the field, and to support a standing army of 80,000 in the country, provided the archduke Palatine will be at their head.

PARIS, July 22.

At the palace of Milan, June 7, year 13, Napoleon, emperor of the French, decrees as follows:

"Art. 1. All privateers, the two thirds of whose crews are not natives of England, or subjects of a power hostile to France; and are Frenchmen, Genoese or Neapolitans, &c. shall be considered as pirates.

"Art. 2. The officers shall be shot, and the persons composing the crew shall be condemned to the galley.

"Art. 3. The minister of marine is charged with the execution of this decree, which shall be printed, publicly affixed, translated into all European languages, and transmitted to all French consuls, for commercial relations.

"NAPOLEON."

The arrival of the ship William, captain Rockwell, from Liverpool, has enabled the editor of the Mercantile Advertiser to lay before the public the latest European intelligence that has hitherto reached the American continent. Our London papers, from which the following extracts are made, are to the 27th of August, inclusive. Capt. R. saw a London paper of the 28th, which contained the official account of the capture of the French frigate Didon, by the British frigate Phoenix, after a desperate action of three hours.

LONDON, August 24.

WE have this day to announce the sailing of the combined fleet. This event rests upon the authority of the following bulletin posted yesterday at Lloyd's:

"Admiralty-Office, August 23, 1805.

"Dispatches from admiral Cornwallis, dated the 19th instant, received this morning, enclose a report from Captain Brace, of his majesty's ship Iris, of his having, on the 13th in the evening, seen the combined fleet of the enemy outside of Ferrol harbour, consisting of twenty-nine sail of the line, five frigates, and three brigs, steering about W. N. W. and beating to windward. Captain Brace supposes, from the confusion they were in, that they must have come out of the harbour that evening."

Our expectations have certainly been much disappointed by the quickness of the enemy's movements, which have deprived us of the advantages we must have otherwise gained by the blockade of so considerable a force in Ferrol harbour; nor is there, we apprehend, any probability that Sir Robert Calder will be able to overtake the ships which have thus succeeded in putting to sea. His force, consisting of twenty sail of the line, is, no doubt, adequate to obtain a splendid victory; but as he did not fail for Ferrol until the 17th, and the enemy's fleet was seen on the 13th in the evening, we fear the chance of gaining upon them, with the start of at least three days in their favour, is not considerable. It is evident, from the number which left Ferrol, that the vessels damaged in the action of the 22d, remained in port to repair their losses, and were replaced by those which had been so long blockaded by Sir Robert Calder.

Lord Nelson attended yesterday morning at the admiralty, where he had a long conference with lord Barham. A great concourse of people crowded about the place, anxious to see him.

August 26.

The dispatches brought last Friday by Mr. Elworthy, the messenger, are now understood to be of the highest importance. They are stated to contain not only the ratification of the treaty between this country and the emperor Alexander, but an account of the demand by Austria of the latter for assistance, and the determination of the court of Petersburg to march a considerable army into the hereditary dominions, to co-operate against France. It is even mentioned in private letters, that 60,000 Russian troops had, on the 30th ult. commenced their march for Brunn. The same accounts add, that his Prussian majesty has declared his unalterable resolution to adhere to his favourite system of neutrality, and that Russia and Austria are not without hopes of prevailing upon him ultimately to join their confederacy against Buonaparte. In these statements we cannot but think there is a considerable degree of exaggeration. We not only doubt the actual march of a Russian army, but we can discover nothing in the past conduct of the king of Prussia, or in the general line of politics to which he is attached, to warrant the idea that he will not take part with France. It is, however, very probable, that the ratification of the treaty with Russia has been received by government. If Russia be determined upon carrying into effect with vigour and cordiality, operations against France, it is time she should declare herself in a decisive tone; but whatever may be the coalitions of the treaty, it is not at all likely that they will be allowed to transpire until the meeting of parliament.

The most active exertions are making to reinforce our grand fleet, and admiral Cornwallis will shortly have thirty sail of the line under his command, exclusive of the twenty dispatched with Sir Robert Calder. Admiral Stirling sailed on Saturday in the Glory, of 98 guns, from Plymouth, and five more line of battle ships were nearly ready to sail from Cawland Bay. At Portsmouth the Victory of 100, Bellona, Saturn, Hero, and Repulse, of 74 guns, will sail in the course of a few days. We understand that lord Nelson will proceed to Plymouth to hoist his flag on board the San Josef, of 112 guns. His lordship is to resume his command in the Mediterranean, with unlimited orders.

August 27.

We stop the press to announce the following intelligence, which was received at Lloyd's at half past two o'clock.

"Admiralty-Office, Aug. 27.

"A letter from admiral Cornwallis, dated 22d inst. states, that on the preceding evening the Brest fleet, consisting of 24 sail of the line of battle ships, and 4 frigates, appeared outside of the harbour. The admiral anchored the fleet off the Black Rocks, and in the morning endeavoured to bring the enemy, who were under weigh, to action; but when their headmost ship was within gun-shot, she fired a broadside, and tacked; the rest doing the same, took up their anchorage between the points at the entrance of Brest.

"An attempt was made to cut off the sternmost ships, but a heavy fire of shot and shells from the batteries prevented it."

American Intelligence.

NEW-YORK.

NEW-YORK, October 10.

THE brig Robert Barclay, captain Taber, arrived at this port yesterday. She sailed from Cherbourg the 29th of August, and brings a report that the French and Spanish fleet, of thirty sail of the line, was off Brest.

By the above vessel we have received Paris papers to the 27th of August. These papers state, that

Letters of a recent date have been received at Leghorn from Algiers. They announce that the dey has shut himself up in an apartment of his palace, which has double iron doors; he has placed on its walls 30 pieces of cannon, and his guard, composed of 3000 men, is continually on duty. The rebellious mountaineers were stationed before the city.

They write from Vienna, under date of the 13th August, that a courier had arrived there with important dispatches from Berlin.

Letters from Constantinople of the 27th July, make no mention of the attack on the life of the grand seignior, which has lately occupied several of the German Journals.

The Paris Argus of the 26th August, in commenting on the remarks of the English editors, who mention the probability of a continental alliance against France, observes—"They ought to know [the English writers] that the best fortune perhaps that could attend the emperor of the French, would be to find on the continent an ally of England, who should serve as a compensation and a guarantee for the peace, and who should make a diversion to the maritime war, unequal by the arms, over which he has triumphed, and still triumphs, only by dint of talents, good fortune and time. The London writers, and the ministers of foreigners who keep them in hire, ought especially to remember, that Buonaparte is the only one of this age who has gained any of those victories which found or shake empires, and that if there be any kings imprudent or ungrateful enough to enter into a confederation against the repairess of the throne and of the altar, they should at least reflect that this confederation might end only in the fall of one or other empire."

The papers also announce various military movements in France, Germany, Prussia, &c. and that the formation of a considerable camp at Budweis, in Bohemia, is now officially confirmed. It will consist of thirteen regiments of infantry and two of cavalry.

Several shocks of an earthquake were felt at Naples about the 27th of July. Besides the palace of the duke of Carigliana, under the ruins of which several persons have perished, those of the prince del Severe, of the duke of Saugro, the duke of Cassano-Serra, of the duke de Monteleone, &c. are principally destroyed. The news which arrived from the provinces was still more alarming, and announces more considerable damage. From Giterne to Naples, nothing is to be seen but ruins. Sante-Marie-de-Capone, a city of 15,000 souls, is at present entirely uninhabitable. Vesuvius, which for a few days emitted a great deal of smoke, and seemed to indicate that a great eruption was near taking place, all on a sudden ceased, and assumed a most alarming tranquillity. All the people lie in the open air. The court inhabits the little house built on purpose for earthquakes. All Naples was in a fright, and every thing bore the image of ruin and destruction. In the day, processions of all sorts perambulate the streets.

MARYLAND.

BALTIMORE, October 10.

Mr. Munroe has laid before the British government a strong protest against the predatory orders of the British cabinet council, and the oppression to which our ports and our commerce are exposed by the navy of that nation.

A few days since a treaty was signed at Vincennes by William H. Harrison, governor of the Indiana Territory, on the part of the United States, and several Indian nations and tribes, by which the United States have acquired a right to all the country south of a line to be drawn from the north-east corner of the Vincennes tract, so as to strike the Indian boundary running from a point opposite to the mouth of Kentucky river, fifty miles from the Ohio river.—This tract contains about 30,000 of acres.

This is an interesting occurrence to our western settlements. The purchase connects the counties of Dearborn, Clark and Knox. The Indian title, except a small tract of the Piankashaw claim, is now extinguished from the Miami river to the Mississippi. The Indians are cut off from the Ohio, excepting a point of twelve or fifteen miles, immediately below the Wabash. The settlement of Dearborn & Clark, is rapidly increasing—emigrants are crowding in along the Ohio, from the falls of the Wabash, and from thence to the Mississippi; Knox and the counties on the Mississippi, have recently received a considerable increase of population. We now have the fairest prospect of soon possessing sufficient numbers to authorize the formation of a state government, if congress will consent to a small alteration in our ordinance. It is believed that congress will not dissent from a scheme that will be so advantageous to the inhabitants of the territory; and it is to be hoped that our fellow-citizen will not be so far influenced by local or party prejudices, as to decline the acceptance of an arrangement that will place them on the footing of a free and independent state.

FROM THE POLITICAL REGISTER.

Correspondence communicated by Capt. Bainbridge. Perth-Amboy, 30th Sept. 1805.

SIR, I enclose you copies of letters which I will thank you to publish in your paper—they will convey, but feebly, to my countrymen, the obligations myself and fellow-sufferers in captivity, were under to Nicholas C. Nissen, Esq. his Danish majesty's consul to the Regency of Tripoli, for his humane and friendly attention. In fact, had we not met with such a character of philanthropy as Mr. Nissen, our situation would have been truly deplorable. I am, respectfully, your obedient servant, Wm. BAINBRIDGE. Major William Jackson, editor of the Political Register, Phil.

Tripoli, in Barbary, 3d June, 1805.

SIR, WE, officers of the United States late frigate Philadelphia, wrecked on the coast of Tripoli, to do justice to our feelings, address this letter of thanks to you for your kind, humane and generous conduct, during our captivity in this place. The philanthropy which you shewed to us at the first moment of our misfortune, and your unremitting attention to the end of it, believe us, Sir, is deeply impressed on our hearts; and we shall never cease to remember it with the warmest gratitude, and to offer our prayers to that Being who rewards benevolent deeds, for your health and happiness.

We are, with sentiments of great esteem and respect, your most obedient servants, Wm. BAINBRIDGE, Capt. And 22 Officers.

To Nicholas C. Nissen, Esq. his Danish majesty's Consul, Tripoli

Tripoli, in Barbary, 3d June, 1805.

DEAR SIR, I DO myself the honour of enclosing you a letter of thanks from the American naval officers, lately prisoners in Tripoli, for your humane and friendly attention to them during their captivity. The sentiments they have expressed, be assured, are but faint shadows of their feelings—your kindness is deeply registered in the heart of every individual of them, and no time will ever efface the remembrance of it.

I shall not attempt to convey to you a just idea of my own feelings for your disinterested friendship, and the risk which you have run to serve myself and fellow-sufferers, as words would be inadequate to the task; but believe me to be truly impressed with the gratitude which such kindness merits, and that it ever will be one of my greatest pleasures to hear of your happiness. I am, dear Sir, with sincere esteem, Your friend and obedient servant, Wm. BAINBRIDGE.

Nicholas C. Nissen, Esq. Tripoli.

United States Frigate President, Bay of Gibraltar, 27 July, 1805.

DEAR SIR, THE officers of the United States' late frigate Philadelphia, lately prisoners in Tripoli, having received from Nicholas C. Nissen, Esq. his Danish majesty's consul at that Regency, the most humane and friendly attention during their captivity in that place—and being desirous to express their grateful sense of his benevolent services, have agreed to present to him an URN, with a proper emblem; I have, therefore, to request your goodness to take on you the commission of having a suitable one made in London, and delivered to his Danish majesty's minister residing at the court of St. James, accompanied by the letter herein enclosed. I feel confident, Sir, that you will readily comply with my request, and also excuse the trouble attending it, particularly as it is to convey to our friend a mark of gratitude for his attention. I have the honour to be, with esteem and respect, your most obedient servant, Wm. BAINBRIDGE.

John Gavino, Esq. Consul for the U. S. Gibraltar.

United States Ship President, Bay of Gibraltar, 27 July, 1805.

DEAR SIR, IN behalf of myself and officers, I have to request your acceptance of an URN, which accompanies this letter, as a pledge of our grateful sense of your humane and friendly attention to us while captives in Tripoli, (Barbary.)—We tender you this pledge, not for the nominal value, but as a lasting monument of our gratitude for your benevolence, and with it our best wishes for your health and happiness.

I am, dear Sir, with sincere esteem and respect, your most obedient servant, Wm. BAINBRIDGE.

Nicholas C. Nissen, Esq. his Danish majesty's Consul, Tripoli.

Perth-Amboy, 1st Oct. 1805.

SIR, YOU will oblige me by giving in your paper a place to the enclosed letters. The person whom the crew of the Philadelphia released from bondage was a Neapolitan, and one of the drivers over them; and who no doubt would have remained for ever a captive, had it not been for the generosity of the American tars. I am, respectfully, your obedient servant, Wm. BAINBRIDGE. Maj. Jackson, Philadelphia.

Tripoli, 4th June, 1805.

SIR, I Enclose you a letter received from the crew of the United States' late frigate Philadelphia; you are directed to comply with their very laudable request, and make the charges respectively against them. Yours, Wm. BAINBRIDGE. Keith Spence, Esq. Purser.

PRISON, Tripoli, June 2.

SIR, A Twelvemonth ago, a number of the ship's company proposed a plan for the relief of one of the Neapolitans, who, as far as was in his power, shewed our people many kindnesses—it was dropped for that time; our emancipation not admitting of a doubt, we have again resumed the same laudable undertaking, and find the majority of the ship's company happy to have it in their power to contribute so essentially to the happiness of a fellow-creature; upwards of 300 dollars have been subscribed for that purpose, and it now, Sir, rests with you, whether the business shall be completed or not, by advancing the money; each subscriber is willing to give all the security requisite for the reimbursement of the cash—as the time is short, you will oblige us by sending an answer as soon as possible; we earnestly hope that it may be favourable, and that our poor fellow-sufferer shall not be left to suffer the bitter pangs of disappointment.

With our best wishes for your health and happiness, we remain your's, &c. STEPHEN HOWELL, HENRY JOHNSON, JAMES FREISE, JOHN SMITH. In behalf of the subscribers, as per list annexed.

FROM A LATE LONDON PAPER.

The following Lines are nearly a correct account of an incident that occurred during the last campaign in Egypt, which the author hearing, related in company, verified at the request of a friend, without quitting the room.

THE tumult of battle had ceas'd—high in air The standard of Britain triumphantly wav'd, And the remnant of foes had fled in despair, Whom, night intervening, from slaughter had sav'd. When a Vet'ran was seen by the light of his lamp, Slow pacing the bounds of the carcase-strewn plain; Not bafe his intent—for he quitted the camp, To comfort the dying, not plunder the slain.

Though doubtless in war, at a story of woe, Down his age-furrow'd cheek the tears often ran, Alike proud to conquer or save a brave foe, He fought like a Hero, but "felt like a man!"

As he counted the slain, "Oh! conquest!" he cried, "Thou'rt glorious indeed! but dearly thou'rt won," "Too dearly, alas!" a voice faintly replied— It thrill'd thro' his heart—'twas the voice of his Son.

He listen'd aghast—all was silent again— He search'd by the beams which his lamp feebly shed, And found his brave Son amidst hundreds of slain, The corpse of a comrade supporting his head.

"My Henry!" the war shatter'd Soldier exclaim'd, "Has death rudely wither'd thy laurels so soon?" The youth op'd his eyes, as he heard himself nam'd, And awoke for a while from his death-boding swoon.

He gaz'd on his Father, who knelt by his side, And seizing his hand, press'd it close to his heart: "Thank Heav'n thou art here my dear father!" he cried, "For soon, oh! too soon, we for ever must part!"

"Tho' death early call'd me from all that I love, From glory, from thee, yet perhaps it is giv'n, To meet thee again in yon region above!" His eye beam'd with hope as he look'd up to Heav'n.

"Then let not thy bosom with vain sorrow swell, "Ah! check 'ere it rises the heart-rending sigh! "I fought for my King! for my Country!—I fell "In defence of their rights—and I GLORY TO DIE."

FROM THE AMERICAN DAILY ADVERTISER.

On the neglect of cultivating Female Talents.

THE importance of a due cultivation of the various talents which the female sex displays in many instances, has long been acknowledged; but it does not appear that this truth, of which mankind are generally sensible, has caused any improvement in their practice. The fetters of prejudice remain to be broken by a powerful effort on BOTH sides; while endeavours are made by men, to rescue them from neglect, the softer sex ought to exercise their powers, in coincidence with this great object. When the attention of females is arrested by the value of any precept, their own good sense, in the exertion of which they often exhibit a noble example to the 'lords of the creation,' will certainly lead them to obey it; for obliquity and perseverance of reason are uncongenial with a sensible mind. Notwithstanding, however, the weight of this consideration, the inattention displayed is great!

There is doubtless a necessity for both sexes to cultivate that purity of sentiment which rises superior to folly; but it must be allowed, that the obligation is as firm on one side, as on the other; for it is well known that an almost unlimited power is placed in the hands of females, in regulating the minutiae of human life; by the example which their conduct affords to man; by the fascinating charms of elegant and polite conversation, accompanied with a dignified deportment, and embellished by their numerous accomplishments. And when I consider how very capable the fair sex are, to communicate their sentiments on various subjects, not only in the higher departments of poetic imagery, which their ardent and chaste imaginations will present forcibly to the view, for elucidation and grace—but also in the lower and humbler walks of profane literature, I confess there is reason for surprise on observing so few original productions of females contained in the publications of the present day. In these, many judicious selections are evident; but works of science, of morality, or of pleasing miscellany, will answer another purpose; that of inspiring numbers with a laudable desire of communicating those reflections which arise in their minds from an attentive observation of the many-coloured scenes of the theatre of life. Original productions commonly and justly receive a greater share of attention than selected pieces—though the latter may be chosen with care, and their tendency directed to proper objects; I say justly; because they not only inculcate sentiments on different subjects, as effectually as selections, but they display also the taste, the opinions, the judgment, the manners, and the inclinations of the age.

The diffidence, therefore, which restrains the softer sex from the exercise of their talents, particularly in composition, though it may be proper to indulge in some cases, yet it cannot be considered so in the present instance. Females whose minds, emphatically speaking, are generally the temples of virtue, delicacy and taste—who are patterns of modesty, and who cultivate with diligence these valuable qualities—whose conversations are refined by a chaste elegance, which endears them to every one, and whose elevated acquirements captivate and charm all, as by magic sway, certainly ought to endeavour to improve these amiable traits, by every means in their power; and, by inspiring others, in various ways, with a desire and an exertion for imbibing and cherishing them, to extend their beneficial influence. Of these different methods, perhaps none could be more effectual, than to copy the lucid examples of an Edgeworth, a Pennington and an Aiken.

Is it not probable that they can ameliorate the manners, and refine the tempers of the less delicate sex, by more means than one? Can they not cultivate the garden of taste and purity, and enable its fruits luxuriantly to grow with increasing strength? CERTAINLY!

Arouze then, my fair readers, from the lethargy which has so long enveloped your talents! be animated by the laudable examples of a More, a Smith, and a Seward! Imitate them! and let your powers be exerted with energy, with vigour and with perseverance! Ye, who are accomplished in all those tender endearments, which, in their social ev'ence, enable man to enjoy life, who enliven his dreary hours, and add a pure lustre to his joyous moments, by your sweet converse, and on whom the MINE smile with benignant eye, why cannot you also dedicate a small portion of that time, which is now spent in frivolous amusements, to the more noble cause of virtue and humanity? No longer, then, permit your whole attention to be engrossed in courting the Goddess of Fashion, and paying your devoirs at the shrine of Folly. Let the majestic temple of Virtue be often visited by you, and liberal offerings be made at her altar—let the graceful and fascinating charms of your pens be exhibited, and you will, no doubt, bear the palm of victory from your male cotemporaries. Your productions will shine with transcendent lustre, and both please and illumine others by their superior brightness; and the publications of the present age will become receptacles of the effusions of purity, of elegance, and of taste. Disdain, therefore, to remain bound by the fetters of ignoble prejudice and self-conceit, with which the arrogance of man has hitherto encircled you! Burst them afunder! Why should not the female mind expand on the wings of freedom? Alas! its modest timidity, its retiring worth, two bright ornaments to the character, have not protected it from insult! Daughters of Columbia! protectors of morals, and examples of genuine religion!—Will ye languish yet in voluntary and servile bondage? Let animation enkindle, let exertion renew its strength! Adorned by the brilliancy of virtue, your efforts will evince, incontrovertibly, that the female sex requires no extraneous support to declare, in the language of unerring conviction, its superiority in the elegant department of polite literature, the pleasing walks of social life!

From the Washington Federalist.

"The man who makes one valuable improvement, is a more important benefactor to his species, than an Alexander, a Caesar, or a hundred other conquerors. His glory, in the estimation of a truly civilized age, will be greater, and more lasting, than that of those admired ravagers of the world." Professor Barton.

Mr. Rind,

ALTHOUGH I cannot coincide with Dr. Swift, in considering that man who causes "one blade of grass to grow," more useful than the whole "herd of politicians," yet I do value very highly all agricultural improvements. In the proposals I have issued for the publication of a new work on Chemistry—to be adapted to the use of the citizens in general—it is stated that I would relate some experiments, instituted to throw light on the art of enriching impoverished lands. The result of several of these, has so far exceeded my most sanguine expectations, that I hasten to publish them—hoping to turn the attention of farmers to a subject, by which their interests may be incalculably promoted.

From a train of reasoning, I was led to believe that the common sea-pit—or mineral coal, which is so abundant in the United States—when finely pulverised—might prove a useful manure. To ascertain the truth of this—I made, in the latter part of last month, the following experiment.

In three small pots I put equal quantities of a yellow clay, which had lately been removed from several feet below the surface of the earth. To the first pot a table spoon-full of finely powdered pit-coal was added—to the second the same quantity of powdered charcoal, obtained from the common oak, and the third was left without any addition. The same number of found grains of corn was planted in each—the same quantity of water was daily added to each—and they were exposed in similar situations to the actions of light. The rapidity of the growth of the corn in the pot with the sea-coal exceeded any thing of the kind I ever witnessed. Many days did not elapse before this corn was four inches high, while at this time that with the common charcoal was not two inches high—and that in the clay alone had not sprouted.

After this experiment was made, I procured several small pots, and in each put the same quantity of clay. To the first I added a drachm of sea coal—to the second a drachm of horse manure—to the third the same quantity of plaister of Paris—and to the fourth the same quantity of common ashes. The fifth was left without any addition. To each of these the same number of found grains of wheat and corn were added. The precautions taken in the first experiment, were strictly adhered to in this instance. In a few days my great expectations from the pit-coal were somewhat lessened, by perceiving that the wheat with the horse-manure was an inch high before that of the other pots appeared. However this was for but a short time; for the wheat in the pot with the sea-coal, came up, grew to an equal height in a few days, and in a fortnight, although the weather was cold, exceeded it by two inches. The corn in the pot with coal maintained a still greater superiority—it appeared more healthy, and was more than twice as large as the largest in the other pots. Several of my acquaintances were astonished to see this great difference in vegetation produced in so short a time.

Pit-coal must be cheaper than any article used as a manure, since it is found in so many parts of this country. The above experiments unquestionably shew that when powdered, its power in quickening the vegetation of corn and wheat, is much greater than any manure with which we are acquainted. Our knowledge of the effects of chemical bodies on growing vegetables is but in its infancy. Probably the discoveries which have been made are not as generally known as they should be. It may be owing to this cause: for example—that an ounce of sulphuric acid is not added to every cart-load of manure—which has long since been found in England to render it doubly valuable. I shall continue my inquiries into this subject, and I have been promised the assistance of several respectable characters. But this will be of little consequence compared to what could be afforded by the researches of a numerous people. To render, therefore, the work I am preparing, more useful, I have to invite such Farmers as may notice new facts, to communicate them to me; as well as the Dyers, Brewers, Distillers, Tanners, and all the practical chemists who have made any improvements in their respective arts.

I congratulate my fellow-citizens of Virginia on the fair prospect of renovating their large tracts of impoverished lands. By speedily using the coal in their inexhaustible mines, I hope the fertility of all their farms will soon be restored; and that the labouring poor among my hospitable countrymen, in future, may not suffer so much as to be dependent for bread.

A SECOND PUTNAM.

ABOUT the 20th of August last, several of the inhabitants of the town of Delhi, in the county of Delaware, having pursued a She-Bear to her den, one of the company, William Shaw by name, a native of the highlands of Scotland, entered the ferocious haunt of this ferocious animal, and, descending to her very feat, there, fearless of the consequences, placed a rope round her neck, and she was dragged forth to the astonishment of all present. This is the second feat of the kind, we believe, on record; and for cool resolution, and determined courage, elevates the name of SHAW, of Delhi, to a rank second only to the intrepid PUTNAM of former days.

Foreign Intelligence.

PHILADELPHIA, October 17.

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

Yesterday afternoon arrived the ship Benjamin Franklin, captain Wicks, 43 days from London.—Previous to capt. Wicks' sailing, he very obligingly procured us a file of the London Daily Advertiser, from the 12th of August to the 2d of September, from which we select, for this day's Philadelphia Gazette, a variety of interesting matter.

ENGLAND.

LONDON, August 30.

SOME further dispatches were yesterday received at the admiralty from admiral Cornwallis, dated the 25th instant. At that time, the enemy had not made any fresh movements, nor had the gallant admiral received any advice of the combined fleets. We understand, however, that the dispatches state the arrival of admiral Sir Robert Calder off Ferrol; and this circumstance gave rise to a report, which was industriously circulated in the course of the afternoon, that the combined fleet had again returned to Ferrol, where they were blockaded by the British squadron. The master of the Trimmer cartel, arrived at Portsmouth, from Corunna, states, that when he left that port on the 20th, there was not a single ship of the line there. The day after he sailed, he fell in with the Defiance, one of Sir Robert Calder's squadron, about seven leagues from Corunna. The former statement of our squadron having been off Ferrol on the 20th, appears, therefore, to have been correct. The cartel neither saw nor heard any thing of the combined squadrons. It is the opinion of lord Nelson, that they may have got into Rochefort; but no certain information received. Had they steered direct for Brest, they would, in all probability, have fallen in with admiral Calder, and must have reached the port long before the date of admiral Cornwallis's last dispatch. It is therefore not unreasonable to suppose, that they must either have got into Rochefort or Ferrol, or proceeded to the southward, on their way to the Mediterranean.

Two Hamburg mails remain due. The intelligence which they may be expected to bring has however been already anticipated; and we repeat that a grand plan of continental co-operation is about to be adopted, the object of which is to restrain and correct the present system of French perfidy and aggressions, inconsistent as it is with the tranquillity and safety of Europe. A spirited manifesto upon this subject is expected on the part of the confederate states, to precede the actual commencement of hostilities against the common disturber of mankind.

September 1.

It was mentioned yesterday at the East-India house, that admiral Calder had instructions to meet the homeward-bound East-India fleet, in a given latitude, which he had reached by this time, to convoy it safe into port with the squadron of admiral Ranier. In such case, hopes might still be entertained that he will fall in with the combined squadron, as the general opinion is, that it is gone to intercept our homeward-bound East-India trade. If its object was to raise the blockade of Brest, intelligence to that effect must have been received long before the present period. The demonstration made by the Texel and Brest fleets to put to sea, was merely to divert our attention from the combined squadrons, and had no relation to the invasion.

The affair of the 22d, between admiral Cornwallis and the Brest fleet, was more serious than the bulletin published by government, led us to suppose. The gallant admiral himself, in the Ville de Paris, led the van, and had nearly cut off the French rear-admiral. He was nobly supported by Sir Richard Strachan, in the Cesar, who requested permission, by signal, to range next to him in the line. The other ships principally engaged were, the Namur, Captain and Montague. The Captain had recently joined the fleet, and distinguished herself very much. Her fire was the most tremendous ever witnessed; she appeared one entire blaze. Part of a shell struck admiral Cornwallis upon the breast, but fortunately it did him no injury. The Cesar had three men killed, and seven wounded. The Ville de Paris and Namur had several wounded, but none killed. They received several shot in their hulls and sails. The French fleet only advanced just outside their batteries when the action commenced; yet, had they not tacked and ran back so soon, a general engagement must have ensued, or several of them must have been taken. The enemy no doubt suffered severely, as our fleet were enabled to rake them. The Montague, captain Otway, followed them close in under their batteries, constantly exchanging shot with them. Had the least accident happened to any, even of the top-masts of the three rear ships of the enemy's fleet, it is thought that they must have fallen into our hands.

It has been reported, that a neutral vessel had arrived from Holland, with the intelligence that Austria had already declared war against France; and that a number of French troops who had been embarked in the Dutch ports, had, in consequence of the hostile aspect on the continent, been relanded, and marched to reinforce the army in Hanover. Though hostilities may be immediately expected, we are not inclined to believe, that any certain account of their having commenced, or of war having been declared, has yet been received. Hostilities will, most likely, take place without any formal declaration of war.

American Intelligence.

NEW-YORK.

NEW-YORK, October 14.

WE learn from Port-au-Prince, that the British have actually got possession of Cape Nichola Mole, where they have landed 1500 troops, and had lying off the harbour two frigates and a smaller vessel. And we also learn, that great jealousies subsist between the blacks and mulattoes of the new empire, and that an insurrection is considered at no distant period. There was a well grounded opinion that Christophe would, ere long, become emperor, as Dessalines' popularity was daily declining, and that of Christophe increasing. That some important change is about to take place in this quarter, is very evident—how, or in what manner permanent tranquillity is to be established, is difficult to foresee. The probability is, that the whole island will soon be again under the government of some European power.

The report of the death of Dessalines, emperor of Hayti, proves to be untrue.

October 16.

Captain Thompson, who arrived here yesterday in 43 days from Amsterdam, states, that the Dutch troops were all embarked, and ready to sail. An embargo was hourly expected. Dutch papers received at this office are to the 19th August, but contain nothing new.

When the Hercules left Matanzas, it was currently reported that the Spanish government had ceded one half the island of Cuba to France.

October 17.

Captain Clark, of the ship Romulus, from Russia, informs, that there was no doubt of Russia going to war with France. Six sail of the line, and three or four frigates, were at Cronstadt; and a number of vessels had been taken up to be employed as transports, to convey the troops to the scene of action.

The frigate Adams came to anchor on Tuesday night within the hook.

Extract of a letter from Hamburg, dated Aug. 13.

"I am enabled to state, on the authority of an officer of high rank, that all the Danish troops in the territories of Holstein and Schleswig, have received orders to hold themselves in readiness to march. A Russian courier having brought very important dispatches to Copenhagen, an express was immediately sent off by the prime minister to the Prince Royal, who was with the princess in the German part of the Danish dominions, requesting his immediate return to Copenhagen. Great movements have been of late observed among the French troops in Hanover; and it is strongly suspected to be the Corsican's intention to march an army into Holstein, and occupy Gluckstadt, Hufum and Tonningen, so as to shut up every communication with Great-Britain, and even to blockade the found from the land side. This plan of operations, which is said to have been offered to Buonaparte by general Schauenburg, has received his full approbation; but the court of St. Petersburg having been informed of it, the most positive orders were sent to the Danes to defend the neutrality and independence of their territory. The politics of the court of Berlin are still undecided, but a categorical answer has been demanded of Frederick William by Alexander I."

MISSISSIPPI TERRITORY.

NATCHEZ, August 16.

On Sunday last, the citizens of this place were alarmed by the parting and falling into the Mississippi of a great part of the bank under the bluff, which carried with it a number of houses. So little notice was had of its moving, that several lives were nearly involved in the ruins—providentially, however, no person received injury, except in the loss of considerable property. The scene lasted at intervals for several hours, and was truly awful. Had the circumstance occurred in the night, it is highly probable that a number of lives would have been lost. The chasm in the bank appears to be about 300 feet wide, and between 40 and 50 feet deep—a large stream of clear cold water precipitates itself over a gravelly bottom impregnated with ore, through the chasm in the Mississippi.

Among the principal sufferers, as to property, we learn, are Mr. Lee, an industrious young man, from Bolton, the widow Chisholm, the estate of Daniel Barney, and Mr. John Callender.

PENNSYLVANIA.

PHILADELPHIA, October 17.

We understand that the board of health contemplate closing the city hospital, and discharging the camp at Rose Mount, the end of this week.

Notwithstanding the accounts we have recently received of a relaxation in the orders of the British councils, relative to American vessels trading with enemies colonies, it will be perceived by the following particulars of the detention of the ship Dispatch, that our commerce is still subjected to most unwarrantable and injurious deprivations.

“Dover, August 27.

“Eleven o'clock, A. M. The Furieuse gun-brig, and another brig of the same description, from a cruise to the westward, have just put into these roads with an American ship, which they detained, on suspicion of her having enemy's property on board.

“An American ship, the Dispatch, of Philadelphia, which has been lying in this harbour these three weeks past, has weighed her anchor to proceed on her voyage. This ship put in here in distress, having injured her rudder in striking on the sands off Ostend; she had cleared out from Amsterdam, bound for the river Canton, as the property of American merchants at Philadelphia. While she was in the act of getting under weigh, an immense crowd covered the quays. The boatswain, who was a Swede, and the captain, had had some dispute about the former's leaving the vessel, which the latter refused; and upon the boatswain persisting in his purpose, the captain put him in confinement until the hour of sailing. The lieutenant of the Furieuse, at the moment, came alongside in his boat, and the boatswain entered himself into his majesty's service. The lieutenant went on board of the Dispatch, and after some altercation, brought him off; the captain, however, detained his chest, on the grounds of his being in debt for two months wages, and other sums, which he had advanced him previous to their voyage from Amsterdam. This vessel was laden with bale goods to a considerable amount, and had a vast quantity of dollars on board, which gave rise to the suspicion of her being Dutch property. Two American sailors, belonging to a vessel which lay along side of her in the harbour, offered to swear that they failed in her on her last voyage home from Canton, and asserted most positively, that to their knowledge, she was sold by her original owners, who were quaker merchants at Philadelphia, to Dutch merchants at Amsterdam. It is also supposed the boatswain gave a hint to the lieutenant of the Furieuse. The general conclusion is, that she must be enemy's property.

“Twelve o'clock, noon. The Dispatch had just cleared the harbour, and stands on her larboard tack in order to haul her wind. The boat with the lieutenant of the Furieuse, is lying to in the roads, and the latter vessel with the other gun-brig, and the American which they detained, are proceeding to the Downs.

“Half past Twelve. The lieutenant of the Furieuse has again boarded the Dispatch, and having appeared to have examined her papers, he has taken a his boat, and is supposed to have suffered her to proceed on her voyage; she is now standing on her course.

“Two o'clock, P. M. The Fly cutter, capt. Partridge, who left this harbour a few moments before the Dispatch, has hailed the latter, who lay to for him; and the captain of the Fly has sent his boat on board. A gun-brig which hove in sight about an hour ago, is also come up with her, the three vessels lay to for a short time, and upon the return of the cutter's boat, they all tacked and stood in for the Downs. So that it has been ascertained that there are good grounds for detaining the American, as well as the other.

“This is the third American ship which has been detained under similar circumstances in these Roads, within these last ten days. We understand that a very extensive trade has been carried on by the Dutch in this way, for a great length of time.

“It is universally supposed here, that the ultimate destination of the Dispatch was the Cape of Good Hope, and not the river of Canton, and that the quantity of dollars on board, was for payment of the Dutch troops, stationed in that settlement.”

MARYLAND.

BALTIMORE, October 17.

We understand, that on the fifteenth of August Mr. Munroe, our minister at London, had an interview with lord Mulgrave, the British secretary of state for foreign affairs, on the subject of the recent captures, when it appeared that no new order had been issued, but that they proceeded from the decisions recently made in the high court of appeals, subjecting the trade between European hostile countries and their colonies through a neutral state to a much narrower rule than had been contemplated. At this interview the subject was not discussed in detail between Mr. Munroe and the minister, but the latter assured him that there was nothing in the disposition of his government which would admit of an unfriendly measure against the United States.

Another conference having been requested by Mr. Munroe, for the purpose of entering more fully into the affair, it remains to be seen what will be the issue of this important business.

[Nat. Intell.]

A letter from Cadiz, dated August 19, states, that a new duty of one dollar per barrel has been imposed on all flour imported into the ports of Spain. Cadiz and St. Lucar were rigorously blockaded.

INTERESTING.

A letter from an American gentleman, dated Bristol, (England,) August 29, 1805, to his correspondent in Boston, says—“Austria has declared war against France!”—“You may be at a loss what course to pursue with —, (a certificate vessel,) as respects her coming to this country. Yet from the correspondence between me, or rather on my part with the great men in office, you will be able to judge how she stands. I conceive that the seizure was made of her, as well as others at the same time, on the ground that no act had been passed by the congress of the United States, to meet that of Great-Britain, continuing the treaty in full force on her part for one year, ending on the first of June, 1806. From private conversation with our charge d'Affaires in London, there appears little inclination on the part of the American government for its renewal; and perhaps the seizures were made to induce our minister to represent such necessity.”

FARMERS BANK OF MARYLAND.

NOTICE OF FIFTH PAYMENT.

THE fifth instalment on the stock held in the Farmers Bank will become due on Wednesday, the thirteenth day of November next. For the information of stockholders, the following clause of the act of incorporation is subjoined:

And be it enacted, That if any stockholder shall fail to pay his or her instalments, to the amount of ten dollars on each share, at the times and in the manner before specified, such stockholder shall forfeit, to the use of the company, all monies paid antecedently to such failure or default, but no forfeiture shall take place after ten dollars on each share shall have been paid; but, as it is requisite that means shall be taken to secure the regular payment of the subsequent instalments, therefore, if any stockholder shall fail to make regular payment of any instalment after ten dollars shall have been paid, such stockholder's money in bank shall remain free from interest, and not entitled to dividend until such instalment, or call, shall be made good, and the dividend thereafter to be paid to such stockholder, (as well upon the money by him regularly paid, as upon the money paid after default,) shall be calculated only from the time when said last instalment was made good.

The stockholders will therefore observe, that a failure in any one payment when it becomes due will be attended with a loss of interest on all former payments, although regularly made, and that interest on no part of such stock will recommence, but from the date of the completion of the last payment due.

By order of the Board,

A letter is said to have been received in Bolton from Bristol, Eng. dated August 29, stating, "that Austria had declared war against France." Although this event may rationally be expected to take place in a very short time, we cannot conceive the policy of Austria's precipitating a measure fraught with such serious consequences as a war with France must, under any circumstances, involve her in. On this account we think the report of an actual declaration of war having taken place, to be premature.

HOME.

WHEN north winds rage and tempests howl,
And great folks on misfortunes scowl,
How sweet, remote from busy life,
To press thy children and thy wife,
Secure at home!

When merit meets a thousand cares,
And vice a pleasing semblance wears,
Would'st thou her barbed dart elude?
Fly to the bosom of the good,
And cherish home!

When evening's dewy star ascends,
Then with a few but real friends
Well are thy fleeting moments spent,
Bounteous thy board, thy guest content!
Then welcome home!

Should sorrow's child thy precincts tread,
'Tis time to raise his drooping head;
His burning tears shall cease to flow,
His heart with grateful warmth shall glow,
And blest thy home!

Alas! unnumber'd ills I view;
Thy heart shall bear, and sicken too;
Disease, and want, and anguish lie;
Hark! 'tis the widow-orphan's-cry!
They have no home!

Should war's shrill trumpet strike thine ear,
Alike remote from pride or fear,
Honour unsheathes thy shining sword,
To conquer or to die! the word,
Protect thy home!

Thy children's children shall receive
From thee a recipe to live;
Their blessings and their deeds arise
In blended fragrance to the skies,
Their native home!

When age has frosted ev'ry hair,
And loofen'd ties remove thy care,
Then, when the veil is half withdrawn,
Pleas'd shalt thou hail the rising morn,
Thy last bright home!

"Then SPEEDY AS YOU PLEASE, my Love,
"You may my GUARDIAN ANGEL PROVE."

Miscellany.

From the (N. Y.) Daily Advertiser.

The effect of popular songs and airs, especially in times of alarm and danger, has been long known; and they have often been employed both by the patriot and the traitor, to inspire resolution and rouse to heroism.

Dulce est pro patria mori, than the following ode, which we find in a late number of the Greenock Advertiser.

TO THE VOLUNTEERS OF BRITAIN, ON THE PROSPECT OF INVASION.

FOR the death of those, Who for their country die, Sink on her bosom to repose, And triumph where they lie!

To arms our heroes fly; And leading on their lines, The British banner in the sky The star of conquest shines.

The dead to life return; Our father's spirits rise! My brethren, in your breasts they burn, They sparkle in your eyes.

Spirit of vengeance! rest; Sweet Mercy cries "forbear!" She clasps the vanquish'd to her breast; Thou wilt not pierce them there!

O'ershadowing laurels deck The living heroes' brows; But lovelier wreaths entwine his neck— His children and his spouse!

Exulting o'er his lot The dangers he has braved; He clasps the dear ones, hails the cot Which his own valour saved.

RUSSIAN VOYAGE.

THE most satisfactory accounts have been received concerning the Russian expedition for circumnavigating the globe. They are contained in a letter transmitted by the commander, M. Krusenstern to M. Schubert, a member of the Academy, and dated August 8, 1804, from Kamtschatka, where the voyagers arrived, without any accident of importance, on the 14th of the preceding month, about 5 weeks after quitting the coast of Brazil.

To the Philadelphia county society for the promotion of agriculture and domestic manufactures.

HAVING been informed of the advantage of using the tops of Indian corn, cut as rye-straw, to be mixed with potatoes, shorts or meal, as a food for horses or cattle, I have been making the experiment during the present winter. I find that my cattle thrive better on this fodder than on rye-straw.

FARMERS BANK OF MARYLAND.

NOTICE OF FIFTH PAYMENT.

THE fifth instalment on the stock held in the Farmers Bank will become due on Wednesday, the thirteenth day of November next. For the information of stockholders the following clause of the act of incorporation is subjoined:

And be it enacted, That if any stockholder shall fail to pay his or her instalments, to the amount of ten dollars on each share, at the times and in the manner before specified, such stockholder shall forfeit, to the use of the company, all monies paid antecedently to such failure or default, but no forfeiture shall take place after ten dollars on each share shall have been paid; but, as it is requisite that means shall be taken to secure the regular payment of the subsequent instalments, therefore, if any stockholder shall fail to make regular payment of any instalment after ten dollars shall have been paid, such stockholder's money in bank shall remain free from interest, and not entitled to dividend until such instalment, or call, shall be made good, and the dividend thereafter to be paid to such stockholder, (as well upon the money by him regularly paid, as upon the money paid after default,) shall be calculated only from the time when said last instalment was made good.

The stockholders will therefore observe, that a failure in any one payment when it becomes due will be attended with a loss of interest on all former payments, although regularly made, and that interest on no part of such stock will recommence, but from the date of the completion of the last payment due.

BALTIMORE, October 26.

EUROPEAN ADVICES.

Several days later than before received, will be found in the subsequent columns. Their complexion is of the highest import to the whole civilized world, and especially to the commercial and agricultural part of our own country.—On the authority of oral and printed accounts, it appears that a most potent, and to the ambition of France, a formidable coalition has been effected, between Russia, Austria, Sweden, and the Ottoman Porte; and it was supposed that even the wary monarch of Prussia would swell the numbers and increase the powers of the confederacy.

From the neighbourhood of Cadiz, the probable theatre of naval warfare, our advices are no later than the verbal accounts heretofore received; but corroborating circumstances are daily accumulating to dissipate the doubts of a hard-fought engagement between admiral Calder and the combined fleet having taken place about the 26th of August. Dispatches received in England state that the latter were at Cadiz at the period heretofore stated by capt. Williams; and being joined by the Carthagea squadron, and amounting to 40 sail of the line, would probably leave port in a day or two. The vessel which carried the dispatches to England fell in with Calder on the 24th, who was very probably met on the 26th by admiral Villeneuve with his whole fleet, on his way to drive admiral Cornwallis from before Brest. Admiral Calder was probably joined before or during the action by adm. Collingwood's squadron of 8 sail, giving him 26 to their 40. These would be the largest hostile fleets that ever met on the ocean; and the most grand and perhaps decisive naval engagement ensued, that has ever been recorded. That a battle did occur, we offer in evidence the following reports corroborative of the relation of capt. Meeks:

"A gentleman from Madeira, (says the Philadelphia True American,) informs us, that the British ship of war Raifonable, of 74 guns, arrived at that island the latter end of August, bearing marks of having been in a heavy action." The Raifonable is a 64, and was one of admiral Collingwood's squadron, which probably had a smart brush with the Carthagea fleet, as it entered Cadiz, or with the combined fleet as it came out of port, and before it rather unexpectedly met with Calder.—The Raifonable, at all events, could not have been in the action of the 26th August.

Again—"Captain Cox, of the brig George, from Teneriffe, gives the following information: That he saw a letter from a respectable house in Madeira, to another in Teneriffe, dated the 7th September, which stated that an American vessel had just arrived at Madeira, the master of which reported, that the latter end of August, he passed a fleet of 19 sail of the line under British colours, having with them several others. They had the appearance of having been in a very severe action." [Norfolk Herald.]

LATE FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE,
Received by the brig John and Joseph, Manning, arrived last evening from Amsterdam, via Portsmouth, Eng.

LONDON, September 5.

Letters were yesterday received in town from Cork, which state, that upwards of 100 sail of merchantmen, supposed to be part of the Jamaica fleet, were on that day seen off the coast.

The Amsterdam Courant of a very recent date, which was received yesterday morning, is said to contain intelligence of the actual march of a French army into the empire. It is added, that the army of Hanover has been joined by a considerable body of Prussians.

September 6.

The dispatches by the Cameleon sloop, to which we yesterday alluded, announced that "the combined fleets of the enemy remained in Cadiz on the 23d ult. and the Carthagea squadron in that port on the 15th of the same month."

The Cameleon left Gibraltar on the 23d of August, with dispatches from Sir Richard Bickerton. A few hours after she sailed she fell in with admiral Collingwood's squadron, who had been joined by admiral Knight, with four sail of the line, making eight in the whole with his former force; the squadron was then steering for Cadiz. On the next day she fell in with Sir Robert Calder's squadron, about twenty-five miles north-west of Cape St. Vincent, steering direct for Cadiz. Admiral Calder would arrive on the 25th or 26th, with eighteen sail of the line. The enemy, however, had still a day or two, if they meant to try an escape, which appears still probable they would do. They might intend to take the Carthagea squadron with them to Toulon, the whole force of which reinforcement it would require to enable them to face the 26 sail of the line that would be in pursuit of them. If, however, they brought out the Spanish ships from Cadiz, they would with the Carthagea fleet, eight sail, be, at least forty sail of the line. If they did not fail immediately, they would be effectually blockaded, on Sir R. Calder's arrival.

The fleet off Cadiz is at present under the command of admiral Collingwood, who, though a captain of the same year with Sir Robert Calder, is senior to him, by a few weeks. His command, however, is but temporary, as Lord Nelson is to take the command of that station, and in the Mediterranean. If the chances against the enemy coming out, are considerable at present, they will become quite desperate, when they are apprised that their custody has been assigned over to that great commander.

From Malta dispatches were yesterday received, dated the 23d July, stating, that the expedition under Sir James Craig, had safely arrived there on the 17th July. The troops have the full enjoyment of good health and spirits; and the voyage has already injured them to the change of climate. It is to be hoped, that they will not long remain inactive; but whether to aid the Russians in Corfu, or to make a landing for the protection of Egypt, we shall not pretend to determine.

Government have received intelligence, on which they can rely, that a great part of the troops which were encamped at Boulogne have been marched away, without question, towards the Rhine.

This information was obtained by the capture of one of the enemy's gun-boats. It is, however, only what we had prepared our readers to expect. We have for sometime suspected that the assembling so large an army had for its object the overawing of the continental powers more than any serious intention to invade this country. The following letter on the breaking up of the camp at Boulogne, is from an officer of one of the vessels in the Downs, dated the 4th instant:

"We this day came in from Boulogne. A great change has taken place there. Not a vessel is to be seen outside the pier, nor could we see any soldiers upon the heights around. As we were reconnoitring round the bay, they fired shot and shells at us in every direction, before we came within range. This plainly shews they wished to keep us from watching their motions. The fact is, I have no doubt, that almost the whole of the army has marched away from Boulogne."

Three Hamburg mails arrived last night. The complexion of the intelligence which they bring is similar to what we have been receiving for a week or two past from the continent. Every where the Russian and Austrian troops are in motion, and every movement indicates approaching hostilities. They do not, however, confirm the statement brought by the Gottenburg mail, of an action having taken place between the Russian and Prussian troops.

It will be a little time yet before the intentions of the great powers will be developed completely by their movements. But the period cannot be distant.

The Turkish empire seems so much convulsed in every part, that it would be no way surprising should it not survive the war in which the continent is about to be engaged.

Letters from Corfu state, that the Russian troops there have been increased by a year's recruiting throughout all the Ionian Islands, to 36 or 38,000 men, and will be still farther augmented by the inhabitants who join them, many of whom are volunteers.

NEW-YORK, October 24.
IMPORTANT.

Mr. Hammond and Mr. Holmes, passengers in the ship Susan and Sarah, captain Marner, from Bourdeaux, came to town on Tuesday last. The latter gentleman informs us, that the Susan and Sarah arrived at Newport on Thursday night, from Bourdeaux, which place she left the 10th September. He also communicates the following important intelligence:

150,000 Russians were on their march for Italy; and all the troops in the south of France were marching to meet them. That the French troops had taken Venice and Naples; that the army of England had left Boulogne in three divisions, and that one division had passed Lisle on the 3d of September, on its way to the frontiers. Austria was expected to take a decided part, as was also Prussia. The former had an army of 300,000 men ready to act, and sixty millions of florins in the treasury. There was no doubt of an immediate war with France, against Austria, Russia, Sweden and the Porte. Buonaparte had returned to Paris from the coast. Our minister at Paris had declared, that the differences between Spain and the United States, looked favourable towards an accommodation.

Since the above was prepared, the ship Louisiana, captain Thompson, arrived at this port, in 36 days from Bourdeaux, bringing intelligence that the invasion of England was all over—Buonaparte having taken his troops from the coast with him to Italy, which is now to be the feat of war.

The emperor of Russia, king of Sweden, and emperor of Germany, had declared war against France.

SPRINGFIELD, (Mass.) October 15.

Extract of a letter, received by a gentleman in this town, from general Eaton, dated on board the United States frigate Constitution, at sea, June 17, 1805.

"After a tedious and perplexing march of fifty days through the desert of Lybia, I arrived on the 25th of April, and took post at the head of Hamet Bahaw's army in the rear of Derne. Our movements in Egypt had induced Joseph Bahaw to send an army to the defence of the province, which was within fourteen hours march of the place when we arrived. The governor of Derne was also ordered, and determined, with a garrison of Turkish soldiery and about one third of the city in his interest to resist our approach. Commodore Barron had sent to the coast, to assist our operations, the brig Argus, the schooner Nautilus, and the sloop Hornet; also two pieces of field artillery. On the morning of the 25th, I sent a flag to the governor with overtures of friendship, on condition of nonresistance and allegiance to Hamet Bahaw, which he sent back with this laconic answer, "My head or yours!" The next day we attacked him by sea and land, and after a sharp contest of two hours and a half, carried the place by charge of bayonet. The governor took refuge in a sanctuary, and most of his adherents fled and either joined the advancing army of Joseph Bahaw, or took the desert. The few Christians I had with me suffered severely in the action; nearly one third of them were either killed or wounded; because our Arabs not having been accustomed to this kind of close decision, left us the burthen of the day. I had the misfortune to receive a musket ball through my left wrist, just below the joint, which I fear will deprive me of the use of my hand. I immediately began to fortify myself by reverting the embrasures of the battery, sinking a line of intrenchments, and raising a parapet without the fort. Hamet Bahaw opened his divan at the late governor's palace in the city, and the inhabitants universally and with apparent dissatisfaction recognized him.

"On the 13th May, the enemy's army advanced and attacked us with all its force, in hopes of recovering the place. But after an action of four hours with various success, they gave way and retreated precipitately to their camp behind the mountains. We were too weak in our number of Christians to pursue this success, the Bahaw's people seemed not to have full confidence in themselves; and our Saracen militia and newly acquired allies at Derne, resolved to act no longer offensively without a pecuniary consideration; of this we were destitute. Each party therefore held its post, with small skirmishing till the 28th, when a party of the enemy, of fifty or sixty foot, covered by a troop of cavalry, descended the mountain, fell on the right flank of our Arab camp, and drove off several camels and cattle. A detachment of the Bahaw's people pursued these marauders, overtook them at the foot of the mountain, killed three of them and recovered the plunder. While this was transacting, I made a sortie with five officers and thirty rank and file, Americans and Greeks, volunteers, took a ravine undiscovered, and gained the summit of the mountain before the enemy.—We received them on the point of the bayonet. They made a short resistance and then fled. We pursued them within a short distance of the camp, killed their captain and five men, and wounded a greater number; then retired in plain view of the whole army without receiving the least injury. They apologize for this cowardly inactivity by chafing to believe we aimed to draw them into an ambuscade on disadvantageous ground. The next day their commander in chief offered, by proclamation, 6000 dollars for my head; double that sum for me a prisoner; and fifty dollars a head for my Christians. This little affair put an end to skirmishing.

"On the 13th instant, the enemy having received reinforcements, again moved down and attacked. But after a well fought battle, of upwards of four hours and a half, they were put to flight with great loss both in men and horses. On this occasion we calculated the numbers actually in the field, of both parties, to have been about five thousand. The Bahaw deserves the merit of this victory—I had little to do with its management, and could not render him any assistance in arms, but from the fire of a single field-piece. The vessels had a better position, and occasionally galled the enemy with their heavy metal; but the fact is, I doubted the propriety of further offensive operations, having been officially informed that a negotiation was pending between the United States and Joseph Bahaw.

"The next day the Constellation appeared, and came to anchor in the offing. No sooner was she seen by the enemy, than they decamped irregularly, leaving most of their heavy baggage, and took up a precipitate retreat towards the desert, under an apprehension that she brought us reinforcements and supplies. She brought me a letter from our commissioner of peace."

CHARLESTON, October 14.

Yesterday arrived the British sloop of war Petrel, capt. Lambrone, and the American ship Two Friends, captain M'Neil, both from Kingston, Jamaica. On Saturday, at one o'clock, off North-Edisto, the Petrel was engaged by the French privateer schooner, which has been cruising off this port for some days past. The privateer ran along-side, and attempted to board, when a broadside from the Petrel was poured into her, which made great havoc among the crew. The action lasted about 20 minutes, when the Frenchmen fled off, and set all sail to escape. The sloop of war gave chase, which was continued for some hours, but by tacking and manœuvring she got the weather-gage of the ship, and escaped. Lieutenant Maitland, and one man, of the Petrel, were killed in the skirmish, and four men wounded—one of which supposed mortally. When the privateer attempted to board, one of her crew, an American, sprang into one of the port-holes, and is now a prisoner on board the Petrel.

The privateer is the Superb, captain Dominique, the same that captured the brig Jane, of Baltimore, a short time since. They took the Petrel for a Guineaman, nor did they discover their mistake till they had got alongside. When they found her to be a ship of war, one of the French officers attempted to haul down the privateer's colours, but the captain instantly blew out his brains. The privateer received much injury in the action, had her larboard-bow beat in, and had a great number of her men killed and wounded.

October 15.

The remains of lieutenant Maitland, who died of the wounds he received on board the Petrel sloop of war, in the engagement on Saturday last with the French privateer Superb, were brought up yesterday from Rebellion Road, and interred in the burying-ground of St. Philip's Church. A detachment of marines and a number of sailors belonging to the ship, preceded the corpse, which was followed by the officers of the ship and the British consul as mourners, and a number of respectable merchants and citizens closed the procession. At the grave, the funeral honours usual on such occasions, were performed by the marines.

NEW-ORLEANS, September 14.

We can state, from a source that may be relied on, that an army of 5000 men is on its march from Mexico, to strengthen the Spanish frontier on Louisiana. We cannot but think it would be advisable for our government to throw a few thousand troops into this country, even though we should remain at peace, it would be well to shew a state of preparation for war.

Captain Hawley, arrived at New-Haven, informs that just as he was leaving Trinidad, a small boat arrived from Barbadoes, bringing dispatches for the governor, who was absent at another part of the island. Soon after her arrival, news was in circulation that a French fleet, consisting of 31 sail of battle ships, from Rochefort, was spoke in lat. 9, long. 41. The inhabitants were preparing for immediate martial law. Captain H. touched at St. Thomas. While there a number of vessels arrived, which had experienced much damage, in the severe gales of the 19th Sept. in lat. 23, long. 63.

Captain Bunker left Malaga the 14th September, and informs, the last accounts from Cadiz, stated the combined fleets were in port, and were blockaded by a British fleet; the Carthagea fleet was also in port; and capt. B. understood that our affairs were likely to be adjusted with Spain. The United States frigate Constellation failed in co. with captain Bunker, for the United States. N. Y. Merc. Adv.

Captain Hammond, from St. Petersburg, informs, that the Russians were making every preparation for war—that five sail of the line were hauled outside of the Mole at Cronstadt, and ready to sail at a moment's warning—that there were in the harbour about 20 sail of the line, most of which were getting ready for sea—that one ship of the line and two frigates were launched at Petersburg the latter part of July—that three Russian frigates were cruising in the Baltic—and that at present, the Russian army consisted of 600,000 men. A war with France was considered inevitable. A number of British ships had been taken up for the conveyance of troops to Lubec. Ibid.

YORK, (Eng.) August 24.
MRS. THORNTON'S MATCHES.

In consequence of Mr. Bromford's declining to ride, Mrs. Thornton walked, or rather cantered, in a most excellent style, over the course, accompanied by Col. Thornton, agreeable to the terms of the match for four hogheads of Coti Roi, 2000 gs. h. ft. and for 600 gs. pp. bet by Mrs. Thornton.

Afterwards commenced a match, in which the above lady was to ride two miles against Mr. Buckle, the Jockey, well known at New-Market, and other places of sport, as a rider of the first celebrity. Mrs. Thornton appeared dressed for the contest, in a purple cap
and waistcoat, nankeen coloured skirts, purple shoes, and embroidered stockings. She was every way in health and spirits, and seemed eager for the decision of the match. Mr. Buckle was dressed in a blue cap, with blue bodied jacket and white sleeves. Mrs.
Thornton carried 9 st. 6 lb. and Mr. Buckle 13 st.— At half past three they started: Mr. Buckle then put in trial his jockeyship, and passed the lady, which he kept for only a few lengths, when Mrs. Thornton, by the most excellent, we may truly say—horsemanship, pushed forwards, and came in in a style far superior to any thing of the kind we ever witnessed, gaining her race by half a neck.

The manner of Mrs. Thornton's riding is certainly of the first description; indeed her close seat and perfect management of her horse, her bold and steady jockeyship, amazed one of the most crowded courses
we have for a long time witnessed; and on her winning she was hailed with the most reiterated shouts of congratulation.

Mrs. Thornton rode Louisa, sister to Kill Devil,
by Pegasus, out of Neily. Mr. Buckle rode Allegro, by Pegasus, out of Allegranti's dam.

We have authority to state, that it was much against Mrs. Thornton's inclination to ride over the course for the match, had she not been obliged to do so, agreeable to the conditions of the articles with Mr. Bromford.

A match against time for three hundred guineas, to be decided by Mr. Charles Thompson's famous bay pony named Gay Lass, thirteen hands and a half high, will take place one day next week. The pony is to trot twenty miles in one hour and a quarter.
Bets to the amount of one thousand pounds are already depending upon the issue. London Paper.

The Knell.
Departed from this transitory state of probationary existence, Mrs. GASSAWAY, of Elk-Ridge, a woman of mild benevolence, and pious habits, who without an ostentatious parade performed the relative duties of domestic life, a bright example of the excellence
the female character is capable of attaining to, when early imbibed ideas of strict virtue are strengthened by a conviction of the sacred truths of Revelation.
She has left a numerous family to mourn their loss,
who may yet console themselves with a belief that no woman has left this, with fairer prospects for a better world.
This tribute to departed worth is the offering of one who has long observed with what dignity, mild-ness and Christian fortitude, she has performed the part assigned her, a soothing partner, a tender mother, and a faithful friend.

No conquest she but o'er herself desir'd,
No arts essay'd but not to be admir'd;
Passion and pride were to her soul unknown,
Convin'd that virtue only is our own—
So unaffected, so compos'd a mind,
So firm, yet soft, so strong, yet so refin'd,
Heaven as its purest gold by tortures try'd,
The fairer sustain'd it, but the woman died.

On Monday last, much regretted, Mr. Richard MARRIOTT, a respectable inhabitant of this county.

SELECTED.
ELEGY.

CALM is thy rest, meek sorrow's child!
At length thou hast escap'd from grief;
At length, to ev'ry anguish thro'ed,
The final sigh has giv'n relief.

Yes! thou art happy, sorrow's child,
Tho' cold the food that binds thy breast;
That breast shall agonize no more,
No more shall heave with woe supprest.

For sacred, from each prying eye,
In secret flow'd thy burning tear,
And mournful though thy hapless tale,
'Twas pour'd alone to friendship's ear.

Yet, now from rising anguish free,
How tranquil is thy silent sleep!
How calmly clos'd those languid orbs,
So often us'd to wake and weep.

Peace to thy shade, for thou wert mild,
As is the cradled infant's sigh,
And pure—if ever mortal were,
As souls that seek their native sky.

And willows spread funereal gloom,
While eve's soft breeze delights to pour
Its whisper'd murmurs o'er thy tomb.

And oft at midnight's sacred hour,
Forms such as fancy loves, shall throng;
Due honours at the turf to pay,
And sothe thy spirit with their song.

MAMMOTH TREE.

This remarkable tree stands in the town of Jefferson, Cayuga county, on the land of John Swartwout, marshal of the district of New-York. It measures 47 and a half feet in circumference—and contains a hollow in which 17 men can march and stand in a circle. This enormous production of nature is said to be Button wood, and is supposed to have been the habitation of Indians and hunters a number of years ago. Being at first a natural hollow, the inside is probably somewhat improved by art, having one side open as a door; the largeness of the hollow is astonishing, making quite a large and commodious apartment.
What renders this tree the more singular is, that it is still green and thrifty, and may continue growing larger for a number of years to come.

Jefferson, (Cayuga county,) Sept. 6.

To all who disbelieve.—BE it known, that we the subscribers, instigated by curiosity, have this day seen a TREE in the above town, on the Montezuma estate, which measured 47 and an half feet in circumference,
two feet above the surface of the earth. This tree contained a hollow, into which we all walked, and stood in a circle, as far round as our number extended; the circle being incomplete by at least six men;
on exact measurement we found the diameter of the

saw a letter from a respectable house in Madeira, to another in Teneriffe, dated the 7th September, which stated that an American vessel had just arrived at Madeira, the master of which reported, that the latter end of August, he passed a fleet of 19 sail of the line under British colours, having with them several others. They had the appearance of having been in a very severe action." [Norfolk Herald.]

LATE FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

LONDON, September 5.

Letters were yesterday received in town from Cork, which state, that upwards of 100 sail of merchantmen, supposed to be part of the Jamaica fleet, were on that day seen off the coast.

The Amsterdam Courant of a very recent date, which was received yesterday morning, is said to contain intelligence of the actual march of a French army into the empire. It is added, that the army of Hanover has been joined by a considerable body of Prussians.

September 6.

The dispatches by the Cameleon sloop, to which we yesterday alluded, announced that "the combined fleets of the enemy remained in Cadiz on the 23d ult. and the Carthagenia Squadron in that port on the 15th of the same month."

The Cameleon left Gibraltar on the 23d of August, with dispatches from Sir Richard Bickerton. A few hours after she sailed she fell in with admiral Collingwood's Squadron, who had been joined by admiral Knight, with four sail of the line, making eight in the whole with his former force; the Squadron was then steering for Cadiz. On the next day she fell in with Sir Robert Calder's Squadron, about twenty-five miles north-west of Cape St. Vincent, steering direct for Cadiz. Admiral Calder would arrive on the 25th or 26th, with eighteen sail of the line. The enemy, however, had still a day or two, if they meant to try an escape, which appears still probable they would do. They might intend to take the Carthagenia Squadron with them to Toulon, the whole force of which reinforcement it would require to enable them to face the 26 sail of the line that would be in pursuit of them. If, however, they brought out the Spanish ships from Cadiz, they would with the Carthagenia fleet, eight sail, be, at least forty sail of the line. If they did not sail immediately, they would be effectually blockaded, on Sir R. Calder's arrival.

The fleet off Cadiz is at present under the command of admiral Collingwood, who, though a captain of the same year with Sir Robert Calder, is senior to him, by a few weeks. His command, however, is but temporary, as Lord Nelson is to take the command of that station, and in the Mediterranean. If the chances against the enemy coming out, are considerable at present, they will become quite desperate, when they are apprised that their custody has been assigned over to that great commander.

From Malta dispatches were yesterday received, dated the 23d July, stating, that the expedition under Sir James Craig, had safely arrived there on the 17th July. The troops have the full enjoyment of good health and spirits; and the voyage has already injured them to the change of climate. It is to be hoped, that they will not long remain inactive; but whether to aid the Russians in Corfu, or to make a landing for the protection of Egypt, we shall not pretend to determine.

Government have received intelligence, on which they can rely, that a great part of the troops which were encamped at Boulogne have been marched away, without question, towards the Rhine.

This information was obtained by the capture of one of the enemy's gun-boats. It is, however, only what we had prepared our readers to expect. We have for sometime suspected that the assembling so large an army had for its object the overawing of the continental powers more than any serious intention to invade this country. The following letter on the breaking up of the camp at Boulogne, is from an officer of one of the vessels in the Downs, dated the 4th instant:

"We this day came in from Boulogne. A great change has taken place there. Not a vessel is to be seen outside the pier, nor could we see any soldiers upon the heights around. As we were reconnoitring round the bay, they fired shot and shells at us in every direction, before we came within range. This plainly shews they wished to keep us from watching their motions. The fact is, I have no doubt, that almost the whole of the army has marched away from Boulogne."

Three Hamburg mails arrived last night. The complexion of the intelligence which they bring is similar to what we have been receiving for a week or two past from the continent. Every where the Russian and Austrian troops are in motion, and every movement indicates approaching hostilities. They do not, however, confirm the statement brought by the Gottenburg mail, of an action having taken place between the Russian and Prussian troops.

It will be a little time yet before the intentions of the great powers will be developed completely by their movements. But the period cannot be distant.

The Turkish empire seems so much convulsed in every part, that it would be no way surprising should it not survive the war in which the continent is about to be engaged.

Letters from Corfu state, that the Russian troops there have been increased by a year's recruiting throughout all the Ionian Islands, to 36 or 38,000 men, and will be still farther augmented by the inhabitants who join them, many of whom are volunteers.

NEW-YORK, October 24. IMPORTANT.

Mr. Hammond and Mr. Holmes, passengers in the ship Susan and Sarah, captain Marner, from Bourdeaux, came to town on Tuesday last. The latter gentleman informs us, that the Susan and Sarah arrived at Newport on Thursday night, from Bourdeaux, which place she left the 10th September. He also communicates the following important intelligence:

150,000 Russians were on their march for Italy; and all the troops in the south of France were marching to meet them. That the French troops had taken Venice and Naples; that the army of England had left Boulogne in three divisions, and that one division had passed Lisle on the 3d of September, on its way to the frontiers. Austria was expected to take a decided part, as was also Prussia. The former had an army of 300,000 men ready to act, and sixty millions of florins in the treasury. There was no doubt of an immediate war with France, against Austria, Russia, Sweden and the Porte. Buonaparte had returned to Paris from the coast. Our minister at Paris had declared, that the differences between Spain and the United States, looked favourable towards an accommodation.

The combined fleets were at Cadiz, and the Brest fleet in port, blockaded.

Since the above was prepared, the ship Louisiana, captain Thompson, arrived at this port, in 36 days from Bourdeaux, bringing intelligence that the invasion of England was all over—Buonaparte having taken his troops from the coast with him to Italy, which is now to be the seat of war.

The emperor of Russia, king of Sweden, and emperor of Germany, had declared war against France.

SPRINGFIELD, (Mass.) October 15.

Extract of a letter, received by a gentleman in this town, from general Eaton, dated on board the United States frigate Constitution, at sea, June 17, 1805.

"After a tedious and perplexing march of fifty days through the desert of Lybia, I arrived on the 25th of April, and took post at the head of Hamet Bathaw's army in the rear of Derne. Our movements in Egypt had induced Joseph Bathaw to send an army to the defence of the province, which was within fourteen hours march of the place when we arrived. The governor of Derne was also ordered, and determined, with a garrison of Turkish soldiery and about one third of the city in his interest to resist our approach. Commodore Barron had sent to the coast, to assist our operations, the brig Argus, the schooner Nautilus, and the sloop Hornet; also two pieces of field artillery. On the morning of the 25th, I sent a flag to the governor with overtures of friendship, on condition of nonresistance and allegiance to Hamet Bathaw, which he sent back with this laconic answer, "My head or yours!" The next day we attacked him by sea and land, and after a sharp contest of two hours and a half, carried the place by charge of bayonet. The governor took refuge in a sanctuary, and most of his adherents fled and either joined the advancing army of Joseph Bathaw, or took the desert. The few Christians I had with me suffered severely in the action; nearly one third of them were either killed or wounded; because our Arabs not having been accustomed to this kind of close decision, left us the burthen of the day. I had the misfortune to receive a musket ball through my left wrist, just below the joint, which I fear will deprive me of the use of my hand. I immediately began to fortify myself by reversing the embrasures of the battery, sinking a line of intrenchments, and raising a parapet without the fort. Hamet Bathaw opened his divan at the late governor's palace in the city, and the inhabitants universally and with apparent dissatisfaction recognized him.

"On the 13th May, the enemy's army advanced and attacked us with all its force, in hopes of recovering the place. But after an action of four hours with various success, they gave way and retreated precipitately to their camp behind the mountains. We were too weak in our number of Christians to pursue this success, the Bathaw's people seemed not to have full confidence in themselves; and our Saracen militia and newly acquired allies at Derne, resolved to act no longer offensively without a pecuniary consideration; of this we were destitute. Each party therefore held its post, with small skirmishing till the 28th, when a party of the enemy, of fifty or sixty foot, covered by a troop of cavalry, descended the mountain, fell on the right flank of our Arab camp, and drove off several camels and cattle. A detachment of the Bathaw's people pursued these marauders, overtook them at the foot of the mountain, killed three of them and recovered the plunder. While this was transacting, I made a sortie with five officers and thirty rank and file, Americans and Greeks, volunteers, took a ravine undisturbed, and gained the summit of the mountain before the enemy.—We received them on the point of the bayonet. They made a short resistance and then fled. We pursued them within a short distance of the camp, killed their captain and five men, and wounded a greater number; then retired in plain view of the whole army without receiving the least injury. They apologize for this cowardly inactivity by choosing to believe we aimed to draw them into an ambushade on disadvantageous ground. The next day their commander in chief offered, by proclamation, 6000 dollars for my head; double that sum for me a prisoner; and fifty dollars a head for my Christians. This little affair put an end to skirmishing.

"On the 13th instant, the enemy having received reinforcements, again moved down and attacked. But after a well fought battle, of upwards of four hours and a half, they were put to flight with great loss both in men and horses. On this occasion we calculated the numbers actually in the field, of both parties, to have been about five thousand. The Bathaw deserves the merit of this victory—I had little to do with its management, and could not render him any assistance in arms, but from the fire of a single field-piece. The vessels had a better position, and occasionally galled the enemy with their heavy metal; but the fact is, I doubted the propriety of further offensive operations, having been officially informed that a negotiation was pending between the United States and Joseph Bathaw.

"The next day the Constellation appeared, and came to anchor in the offing. No sooner was she seen by the enemy, than they decamped irregularly, leaving most of their heavy baggage, and took up a precipitate retreat towards the desert, under an apprehension that she brought us reinforcements and supplies. She brought me a letter from our commissioner of peace."

CHARLESTON, October 14.

Yesterday arrived the British sloop of war Petrel, capt. Lambrone, and the American ship Two Friends, captain M'Neil, both from Kingston, Jamaica. On Saturday, at one o'clock, off North-Edisto, the Petrel was engaged by the French privateer schooner, which has been cruising off this port for some days past. The privateer ran along-side, and attempted to board, when a broadside from the Petrel was poured into her, which made great havoc among the crew. The action lasted about 20 minutes, when the Frenchmen sheered off, and set all sail to escape. The sloop of war gave chase, which was continued for some hours, but by tacking and manœuvring she got the weather-gage of the ship, and escaped. Lieutenant Maitland, and one man, of the Petrel, were killed in the skirmish, and four men wounded—one of which supposed mortally. When the privateer attempted to board, one of her crew, an American, sprang into one of the port-holes, and is now a prisoner on board the Petrel.

The privateer is the Superb, captain Dominique, the same that captured the brig Jane, of Baltimore, a short time since. They took the Petrel for a Guineaman, nor did they discover their mistake till they had got alongside. When they found her to be a ship of war, one of the French officers attempted to haul down the privateer's colours, but the captain instantly blew out his brains. The privateer received much injury in the action, had her larboard-bow beat in, and had a great number of her men killed and wounded.

October 15.

The remains of lieutenant Maitland, who died of the wounds he received on board the Petrel sloop of war, in the engagement on Saturday last with the French privateer Superb, were brought up yesterday from Rebellion Road, and interred in the burying-ground of St. Philip's Church. A detachment of marines and a number of sailors belonging to the ship preceded the corpse, which was followed by the officers of the ship and the British consul as mourners, and a number of respectable merchants and citizens closed the procession. At the grave, the funeral honours usual on such occasions, were performed by the marines.

NEW-ORLEANS, September 14.

We can state, from a source that may be relied on, that an army of 5000 men is on its march from Mexico, to strengthen the Spanish frontier on Louisiana. We cannot but think it would be advisable for our government to throw a few thousand troops into this country, even though we should remain at peace, it would be well to shew a state of preparation for war.

Captain Hawley, arrived at New-Haven, informs, that just as he was leaving Trinidad, a small boat arrived from Barbadoes, bringing dispatches for the governor, who was absent at another part of the island. Soon after her arrival, news was in circulation that a French fleet, consisting of 31 sail of battle ships, from Rochefort, was spoke in lat. 9, long. 41. The inhabitants were preparing for immediate martial law. Captain H. touched at St. Thomas. While there a number of vessels arrived, which had experienced much damage, in the severe gales of the 19th Sept. in lat. 23, long. 63.

Captain Bunker left Malaga the 14th September, and informs, the last accounts from Cadiz, stated the combined fleets were in port, and were blockaded by a British fleet; the Carthagenia fleet was also in port; and capt. B. understood that our affairs were likely to be adjusted with Spain. The United States frigate Constellation failed in co. with captain Bunker, for the United States. N. Y. Merc. Adv.

Captain Hammond, from St. Petersburg, informs, that the Russians were making every preparation for war—that five sail of the line were hauled outside of the Mole at Cronstadt, and ready to sail at a moment's warning—that there were in the harbour about 20 sail of the line, most of which were getting ready for sea—that one ship of the line and two frigates were launched at Peterburg the latter part of July—that three Russian frigates were cruising in the Baltic—and, that at present, the Russian army consisted of 600,000 men. A war with France was considered inevitable. A number of British ships had been taken up for the conveyance of troops to Lubec. Ibid.

YORK, (Eng.) August 24.
MRS. THORNTON'S MATCHES.

In consequence of Mr. Bromford's declining to ride, Mrs. Thornton walked, or rather cantered, in a most excellent style, over the course, accompanied by Col. Thornton, agreeable to the terms of the match; for four hogheads of Coti Roi, 2000 gs. h. ft. and for 600 gs. pp. bet by Mrs. Thornton.

Afterwards commenced a match, in which the above lady was to ride two miles against Mr. Buckle, the Jockey, well known at New-Market, and other places of sport, as a rider of the first celebrity. Mrs. Thornton appeared dressed for the contest, in a purple cap and waistcoat, nankeen coloured skirts, purple shoes, and embroidered stockings. She was every way in health and spirits, and seemed eager for the decision of the match. Mr. Buckle was dressed in a blue cap, with blue bodied jacket and white sleeves. Mrs. Thornton carried 9 st. 6 lb. and Mr. Buckle 13 st.—At half past three they started: Mr. Buckle then put in trial his jockeyship, and passed the lady, which he kept for only a few lengths, when Mrs. Thornton, by the most excellent, we may truly say—horsemanship, pushed forwards, and came in in a style far superior to any thing of the kind we ever witnessed, gaining her race by half a neck.

The manner of Mrs. Thornton's riding is certainly of the first description; indeed her close seat and perfect management of her horse, her bold and steady jockeyship, amazed one of the most crowded courses we have for a long time witnessed; and on her winning she was hailed with the most reiterated shouts of congratulation.

Mrs. Thornton rode Louisa, sister to Kill Devil, by Pegasus, out of Nelly. Mr. Buckle rode Allegro, by Pegasus, out of Allegranti's dam.

We have authority to state, that it was much against Mrs. Thornton's inclination to ride over the course for the match, had she not been obliged to do so, agreeable to the conditions of the articles with Mr. Bromford.

A match against time for three hundred guineas, to be decided by Mr. Charles Thompson's famous bay poney named Gay Lass, thirteen hands and a half high, will take place one day next week. The poney is to trot twenty miles in one hour and a quarter. Bets to the amount of one thousand pounds are already depending upon the issue. London Papers.

The Knell.
Departed from this transitory state of probationary existence, Mrs. GASSAWAY, of Elk-Ridge, a woman of mild benevolence, and pious habits, who without an ostentatious parade performed the relative duties of domestic life, a bright example of the excellence the female character is capable of attaining to, when early imbibed ideas of strict virtue are strengthened by a conviction of the sacred truths of Revelation.

She has left a numerous family to mourn their loss, who may yet console themselves with a belief that no woman has left this, with fairer prospects for a better world.

This tribute to departed worth is the offering of one who has long observed with what dignity, mildness and Christian fortitude, she has performed the part assigned her, a soothing partner, a tender mother, and a faithful friend.

No conquest she but o'er herself desir'd,
No arts essay'd but not to be admir'd;
Passion and pride were to her soul unknown,
Convinc'd that virtue only is our own—
So unaffected, so compos'd a mind,
So firm, yet soft, so strong, yet so refin'd,
Heaven as its purest gold by tortures try'd,
The same sustain'd it, but the woman died.

On Monday last, much regretted, Mr. RICHARD MARRIOTT, a respectable inhabitant of this county.

SELECTED.
ELEGY.

CALM is thy rest, merr forrow's child!
At length thou hast escap'd from grief;
At length, to ev'ry anguish throb,
The final sigh has giv'n relief.

Yes! thou art happy, sorrow's child,
Tho' cold the food that binds thy breast,
That breast shall agonize no more,
No more shall heave with woe suppress'd.

For sacred, from each prying eye,
In secret flow'd thy burning tear,
And mournful though thy hapless tale,
'Twas pour'd alone to friendship's car.

Yet, now from rising anguish free,
How tranquil is thy silent sleep!
How calmly clos'd those languid orbs,
So often us'd to wake and weep.

Peace to thy shade, for thou wert mild,
As is the cradled infant's sigh,
And pure—if ever mortal were,
As souls that seek their native sky.

O'er thy pale form the high grass waves,
And willows spread funereal gloom,
While eve's soft breeze delights to pour
Its whisper'd murmurs o'er thy tomo.

And oft at midnight's sacred hour,
Forms such as fancy loves, shall throng;
Due honours at the turf to pay,
And sothe thy spirit with their song.

MAMMOTH TREE.

This remarkable tree stands in the town of Jefferson, Cayuga county, on the land of John Swartwout, marshal of the district of New-York. It measures 47 and a half feet in circumference—and contains a hollow in which 17 men can march and stand in a circle. This enormous production of nature is said to be Button wood, and is supposed to have been the habitation of Indians and hunters a number of years ago. Being at first a natural hollow, the inside is probably somewhat improved by art, having one side open as a door; the largeness of the hollow is astonishing, making quite a large and commodious apartment. What renders this tree the more singular is, that it is still green and thrifty, and may continue growing larger for a number of years to come.

Jefferson, (Cayuga county,) Sept. 6.

To all who disbelieve.—BE it known, that we the subscribers, instigated by curiosity, have this day seen a TREE in the above town, on the Montezuma estate, which measured 47 and an half feet in circumference, two feet above the surface of the earth. This tree contained a hollow, into which we all walked, and stood in a circle, as far round as our number extended; the circle being incomplete by at least six men; on exact measurement we found the diameter of the hollow on the surface to be upwards of fifteen feet.
