WICOMICOIANS MARRIED

In Snow Hill, Bounds—Howard Wedding Came As A Little Surprise.

Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock Miss Hilda Howard and Mr. G. O. Bounds, of Quantico, Md., were quietly married in Snow Hill, by Rev. Mr. North, pastor of the Presbyterian church in that town. The wedding was a great surprise to all of their friends. Mr. and Mrs. Bounds were spending some time at the Colonial, Ocean City, during the Tri-County Teachers Institute.

Mr. Bounds is the son of Mr. G. A. Bounds, of the Board of Wicomico Election Supervisors, with whom he is engaged in the manufacture of lumber and the mercantile business at Hebron. All his friends, of whom he has many, know him to be a very progressive and successful young man.

The bride, who was Miss Howard, is the accomplished daughter of Mr. Frank Howard, of near Quantico. She is a handsome and attractive brunette and a recent graduate of Washington College. Both have many friends in Salisbury and are very popular here, as well as in their more immediate part of the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Bounds will be at home temporarily at his father's in Quantico.

The event came rather in the nature of a complete surprise, but the congratulations will be none the less hearty, nor the good wishes none the less sincere from their many friends.

To all, we add those of the Salisbury Advertiser in full.

HAD FRONTAL HEADACHES EYES BOTHERED ME

DROPPING IN MY THROAT

MRS. ELIZABETH H. MARTIN, 323 Bowen Avenue, Chicago, Ill., Chaptain Garfield Circle, writes:

"Peruna has been a blessing to our family for a good many years, as we have all used it off and on for colds and catarrh, and I have given it to all of my children with the best results.

"I found that a cold left me with catarrh of the head in a very bad form. My head was stopped up, I had frontal headaches, my eyes bothered me, and there was a nasty dropping in my throat which nauseated me and made it impossible many times for me to eat my breakfast.

"As soon as I began to use Peruna I found it relieved me, my head soon cleared up and in a remarkably short time I was rid of catarrh.

"I can, therefore, give my personal experience with your valuable medicine, and am pleased to do so."

People who prefer solid to liquid medicines can now secure Peruna tablets, which contain the medicinal ingredients of Peruna.

APPEAL TO VOTERS

To Get Busy For Bryan Made By County State Central Committee.

To the Democrats of Wicomico Co.: The time has come for active organization of the party workers in Wicomico county, looking forward to victory at the polls in November. The nomination of our National Standard-Bearer, Bryan and Kern, has caused a wave of confidence to sweep over the Democrats throughout the United States. Every liberty loving citizen, irrespective of politics, every Christian man who loves his Church and his home, every laboring man who has been toiling under the stress of High-Tariff living necessities, every man who, trying to support his family has been without work, caused by the "big stick" policy of Roosevelt, and every Democrat who has the pride of his county at heart, should wake up and get into this fight.

"Conditions were never better for a victory at the polls than right now. The Republican party has been caught with hard times pressing upon thousands and thousands of people all over this fair country of ours. They have had twelve years of unlimited sway. Nationally, and yet the financial and labor conditions were never worse than now. To use the common expression they have been caught with "the goods on them," and if every Democrat will wake up and get out and help in this campaign, we will sweep Roosevelt and his "Me too" candidate—Taft—from the battlefield and win a glorious victory in November.

Every Democrat, young or old, should feel that this is his personal fight for life, liberty and happiness, and without waiting for any one, get to work and help the cause along, inviting all lovers of Good Government, regardless of their former political affiliations, to join with you in the defense and support of the Constitution and hence the protection of the best interests of the great masses of the people of this country.

While everything points to Democratic victory in Wicomico, yet, with the individual and concerted action as above solicited, you will roll up such a majority for Mr. Covington for Congress as will make him feel more like a native of Wicomico than a Talbotian, and also swell the vote for Bryan and Kern to an extent that will be a credit to us in the State, and even be felt in the Nation.

The days of Registration this year are as follows: Tuesday, September 29th, and Tuesday, October 6th. These two days are for the addition of new names and for the transfer from District to District. We urge upon every Democrat who has changed his residence since last election to go to his last voting District and get a transfer on one of these two days and get registered in his new voting District. Do not neglect this important duty.

We appeal to the Democrats all over the county to take an interest in this campaign and get out and help to organize Bryan, Kern and Covington Clubs in every District in the County. Let us leave no stone unturned to do our part towards the redemption of the First District from Republican control. Mr. Covington is a young Democrat who stands for the interests of the people as against the Trusts, Monopolies and ruinous policies of the Republican administration. A vote for Bryan, Kern and Covington will mean a strike for liberty and freedom. Let us all do our duty and no one will have a right for complaint after Election Day.

Yours for Victory,
Democratic State Central Committee
for Wicomico County.

'Twas Circus Day.

The Frank Robbins circus visited Ocean yesterday, and gave clean attractive and entertaining performances, afternoon and evening. The Robbins show is one of the good old fashioned one ring kind, where you can see all that is "doing," and while there are not one hundred and one "turns" as in the big three ring circuses, what there is is good. The tents were filled both afternoon and evening, and those present seemed satisfied that they had received their money's worth. The show people claim no following of "sharp" and gamblers, and no complaints along that line were made during their visit in Ocean. The Robbins shows can be credited with fulfilling all that they promise.—Ocean Times.

Will exhibit at Salisbury, Monday, September 7th.

NIGHT BASE BALL

To Be Played in Salisbury With Powerful Arc Lights September 2.

A great many people have never seen a game of base ball at night, and a few ball clubs have tried to put it on, but it remained for the Cherokee Indians to put the night game on successfully, as is proven by press notices. The Cherokee Indians carry their own light plant and completely light the ball grounds enabling the players and the public to see as well as in the day game. The Indians play in the afternoon at 3 and at night is called at 8 o'clock. The Cherokee Indians represent the strongest club of genuine Red Men ever gotten together. The club travels in its own private Pullman car and carries a portable fence and grand stand. Concerts daily by the Genuine Indian Band. Miss Mand Nelson, the famous lady pitcher, will pitch one of the games. Admission 25c.

Mand Nelson, who will pitch one of the games to be played here on Wednesday next.

THE PEOPLE'S BANK

Successful Bidders On City's Improvement Bonds.

At a meeting of the Salisbury City Council on Monday night bids were opened for the purchase of $30,000 Street Improvement Bonds. The successful bidder was the People's National Bank of Salisbury, its bid being $31,237.50 for the lot. These bonds are coupon bonds bearing four and one-half per cent interest, payable semi-annually, and were issued in denominations of $500 each, of which the first will be redeemed in February 1920, and four bonds each succeeding year until all are redeemed.

The money raised by the sale of these bonds is to be used for paving the principal streets in the residential sections of Salisbury. Most of the money will be used in the improvement of Camden Avenue and Division Street. Other bidders for the bonds were E. H. Rollins and Sons, of Boston, $29,040, and Baker, Watts and Co., of Baltimore, $100,266 for each 100 par value.

There is considerable satisfaction in the knowledge that a local Bank has secured these bonds, and also that the credit of the city of Salisbury is so good to induce purchasers to give a fair price for them.

The City authorities have every reason to be satisfied with the sale of these bonds, and it is good to know that notwithstanding the depression all over the country in the bond market, they were able to place them at a fair price. They are a gilt edge security and a safe investment and yield a fair return on the investment.

Ingenious Display.

L. W. Gunby and Co., have in their front windows quite an ingenious and realistic miniature warship. This ship is built entirely from various articles handled by the firm. It is complete in every particular. A saw makes the armor plate, flat irons answer for boats, contrived for gun, etc. It is one of the most realistic miniature steamboats we have ever seen and shows unusual ability in the designer and builder, Elmer Baker, of Hebron.

In the other window is a train with cars running on a track made up, as in the warship, of articles carried in stock by L. W. Gunby and Co.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

Busy At Tuesday's Meeting. Business Disposed Of.

The County Commissioners were in session last Tuesday and disposed of a large amount of business.

The bond of the York Bridge Company, the contractors for the new pivot bridge on Main Street, was approved.

Engineer Clark reported that Albert Dulany, of Fruitland, was unwilling to allow the board to put tiling through his land to let the water off the property of H. S. Dulany.

Engineer Clark reported that bridge over Adkins' Creek needed repairs. Work was ordered done under direction of the county engineer at estimated cost of $75.

Commissioner Johnson was directed to have a piece of road near Winthrop's Creek ditched and put in good condition.

Capt. T. W. H. White was before the board and asked that the board request the public road from W. H. H. Cooper's to the Stanford place, recently ordered closed by the board.

The board decided not to open road petitioned for by Zeno Tingle and others in Parsons District.

The board contracted with Lewis Morgan to install a steam heating plant of sufficient capacity to heat the entire court house and jail, for $1,210.

The board went over very carefully the proposition made by citizens of Parsons District to build a county road extending from the Melson road to Delmar through lands of J. Wm. Hearn, Mrs. Oliphant, Mr. Leecates and others, and decided to deny the request for the following reasons:

First, because the opening of this road would directly benefit but a very limited number of people, and that these people as well as the general public would derive far more good from the same money expended on the improvements of the main roads already opened and in use in that community; second, it is the policy of the present board to eliminate as far as possible the expense of opening and maintaining new roads, but to use the money in improving permanently the roads now existing.

MOONSHINE WHISKEY

Still Reported To Be In Operation Between Snow Hill And Georgetown.

Claiming to have stumbled on a camp of moonshiners between Snow Hill and Georgetown, Del., a party of Philadelphia automobilists gave information of the place to local authorities after first securing promise that their names should be kept secret.

According to the information given, the party in the automobile had entered the heavy forests between the Delaware line and Snow Hill, and after following a number of strange roads became lost. While endeavoring to find their way out of the forest they came suddenly on a number of encamped men, who confronted the travelers with hostile and suspicious looks. The men carried guns or had them close at hand, and the atmosphere was saturated with the fumes of whisky. This fact, coupled with the unfriendly attitude of the men and the evasive answers given as to the route, at once aroused the suspicions of the party that they had come on a crowd of illicit whisky distillers.

Although there was no evidence of still or other apparatus used in the distilling business, yet the evidence of small was too strong for any mistake or to resolve itself into a mere conjecture and the travelers after beating a hasty retreat made a quick run to Snow Hill, firmly fixed in the belief that they had stumbled on the moonshiners' camp. Both Snow Hill and Georgetown authorities will search for the place described by the tourists.

SENT TO ASYLUM.

Mr. John Parsons Of Pittsville Brought To Salisbury And Then Sent Away.

Mr. John Parsons, of Pittsville, who for several years has had a touch of insanity, became uncontrollable Sunday at his home in Pittsville. About three o'clock a. m. Monday Mr. Parsons' relatives sent for Mr. Parnell, who lives near them, asking him to take Mr. Parsons to an Asylum.

Mr. Parnell said Mr. Parsons got up in the buggy with him without any trouble, and that he was very quiet until they reached Salisbury where he strenuously objected to getting off the train. Mr. Parnell with the assistance of a friend had to use a little force to get Mr. Parsons to go up to the court house in this town. Although Mr. Parsons seemed to know people when he was sitting in the porch in front of the court house there was a wild look in his eyes as if he believed everybody his enemy.

The condition of the diseased man has been a source of worry to his relatives for the last six or seven years, but on account of brotherly sympathy they refrained from sending him to an asylum, until Wednesday when he became somewhat violent.

Resolutions of Respect.

The following resolutions, touching the death of brother George W. Phillips, were passed by the Official Board of Trinity M. E. Church South, last Tuesday evening:

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom, has called from the activities of this life to the higher reward above our co-laborer in the work of God, therefore be it.

Resolved, That in the demise of Bro. George W. Phillips, this church has lost a faithful and devoted member; one who was ready to do his part in the work for his Master, and one whose noble christian example will ever be an inspiration to those who associated with him in church work.

Resolved, That this Official Board tenders to his bereaved family its deepest sympathy in their hour of bereavement, but recognizes that our (and their) loss is his eternal gain; for we believe that he is now basking in the sunlight of the Eternal City.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, be spread upon the minutes of this body, and $25.00 be sent to the bereaved family.

WANTED A CHANGE

Writes Patron of Delmar High School. The Letter.

Delmar, Del., Aug. 26th, 1908.

Messrs. Editors:— I was quite surprised to see in a recent article in the Wicomico News, that Mr. Shingle was appointed Principal of the Delmar School, at the request of the patrons of the school, for the senior editor of that paper is President of the School Board, and knew that there was a petition before the Board signed by a majority of the patrons of our school asking for a change of principal.

Our people were greatly dissatisfied, and arranged to wait upon the Board at their next meeting, which was one week later, by a committee of more than fifty of our patrons.

The School Board Office was called by phone by one of our leading citizens and largest taxpayers, and was answered by Ex-Secretary Bounds, who informed him that the committee need not come, as they would not be received nor heard.

One of our mothers called the President of the Board, and he claimed no knowledge of the petition against Mr. Shingle. When told the personal of the committee who took the petition and that it was delivered to him, while the Board was in session, he said it was a very poor committee. The committee consisted of three of our upright, honest, successful business men, who thought the Board could see the right, and have the moral courage to do it, without their stating the many hard unpleasant facts against the man.

About twenty of our pupils went to other schools last year. Now will still more have to go elsewhere or will our School Board reconsider their action?

At a meeting of the patrons several weeks before the close of school, Mr. Shingle publicly stated that he would not return to our school, and when he did not resign and the Board had to be petitioned, he is quoted as saying that if he returned it would be for spite. We feel our children are too sacred to be sent to spiteful school authorities.

EVERLYN THAW FISHING

She Came Inlog. For a Outing At Wachapreague, Eastern Shore Of Virginia.

Everlyn Nesbit Thaw, Daniel O'Reilly and his sister, were guests at Wachapreague, Accomack county, for about a week. Mrs. Thaw registered as Mrs. Brynes, while Miss O'Reilly was for the occasion Miss Hall. These two arrived last Tuesday week in advance of Mr. O'Reilly, who was accompanied by "Bill Sturgis," a former resident of this county. On arriving here Mr. O'Reilly was registered at D. O. Gail.

For several days the party enjoyed the fishing and sailing. Mrs. Thaw proving herself an adept at reeling for blue-fish and sea trout, landing some of the finest specimens seen.

When the identity of the party became known, the members decided to leave.

Trip To Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. U. J. Phillips returned Wednesday from a ten days trip to Baltimore, Washington and various points in Virginia. While at Lunenburg they took in the following points: Natural Bridge, Luray Cavern, and were at Hot Springs August 21st. There they took advantage of the opportunity to hear Mr. Taft deliver an address to a large crowd of over 6,000 and shook hands with him and Mrs. Taft Hon. Brown Allen was also one of the speakers, and the Stone-wall Jackson Band, which is composed of thirty five to forty pieces, was there. Of course Mr. Taft's presence brought a large number of Republicans to Hot Springs from all parts of the State and other States as well. A vote taken on the return trip by some one who took an interest in knowing how the train stood showed that fifty per cent on the train would support the Democratic party, while the other half were divided up in the different parties.

Mr. Phillips tells a story of an old man who said "Amen" to some of Mr. Taft's remarks in a tone loud enough to be audible some distance, and one of these "Amen's" came in at a remark that seemed to favor the Democratic party, and created much amusement among those present. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips are very enthusiastic over the country they saw, and the beauty of the trip.

THE CHASE of the CHEYENNES By Buffalo Bill.

The Southern Cheyennes were out every year they would form a war party and ride on a sort of picnic visit to the Northern Cheyennes, as on the Red Cloud Agency, near Fort Robinson. They would burn, kill and pillage all along the route, both going and coming.

A detachment of cavalry was told off to stop the Red Cloud Agency picnic. I was chief scout. My side partner was Frank Powell, better known by his Indian nickname of White Beaver. We were on the trail of the Cheyennes. White Beaver and I were riding far ahead of the troopers, when, near dusk, we came upon tracks not half an hour old.

I sent White Beaver back to bring up the troops, while I dismounted and followed up the trail on foot. It led, as I expected, to a sheltered valley on the bank of the Republican River.

I crawled up to the top of one of the banks that hid this valley, and looked down. There, in the dusk, I saw a much bigger band of savages than I had looked to find. But I had little time to investigate. They, pickets were on the lookout. Almost as soon as my head appeared over the bank there was a shot, and a rifle bullet sent up a puff of dust from the ridge not a yard from my head.

I had my rifle unsling and began to shoot, not only to stop their pursuit, but to let the Indians know where I was. The Indians, cowering with a fustle but it is hard to hit a dimly seen head peeping over a distant bank by dim light, while there was so many of them that I did not much better luck. I was not hit, although bullets whizzed uncomfortably close to my ears.

I had downed four of the Indians and two or three of their ponies when the cavalymen dashed up. As the troopers charged the Cheyennes ran for their lives. We killed a few and captured several more, but the rest got away. There was a hurried consultation of the officers were for camping overnight and picking up the chase next day.

"If you do," said I, "you'll follow their trail to-morrow by the smoke of burning cabins and ranch buildings." So after them we went. And at dawn we came upon them at the ford of Frenchman's Fork. Then we attacked. It was a hot brush while I asked. For those Cheyennes fought like cornered rats. The man who says Indians can't fight is mistaken. They won't willingly offer battle against what looks to them like bad odds or even chances. They like a sure thing. That is why some people call them cowards. But no one who knows them will share in such a belief.

But they were no match for Uncle Sam's trained cavalry. We got fourteen Cheyenne scalps and captured more than two-thirds of their horses. This meant that more than two-thirds of the band must return on foot all the long journey to the agency. But the survivors were glad enough I think to get away at all. They made a bee-line for their own agency, and the annual visit to the Northern Cheyennes was postponed indefinitely. If ever a picnic was successfully broken up that was the one.

White Beaver during the fight received a lance wound in the leg that laid him up for some weeks. There was a greaser (Mexican) in the group who hit him because "White Beaver" had once blocked the greaser's attempt to steal a sick man's blankets and had thrashed him for the attempted theft. One morning as I was riding into camp from a scouting trip I saw this greaser cook sneaking into White Beaver's tent. I knew he had no right there. So I followed on the run. I saw there was trouble brewing.

DAIRY CREAMERY QUARTERS FOR THE COW. Sunniest, Warmest Corner Should Be Apportioned to the Milk Producer. In the arrangement the sunniest, warmest corner should be apportioned to the milk cows. The winter sun will prove a grateful tonic to them, and the rays from the sun or wintry blasts will prove a valuable assistance and money saver. Many dairy farmers build their stable walls double with chaff between, but such walls have several serious disadvantages. Inflammability is not the least; infection by vermin, disease germs, and the difficulty of disinfection in the case of the latter, all operate against such walls, warm though they may be. Double boarding with a good quality of building paper between, and all cracks carefully battered on the outside, will, we believe, prove much more advantageous. Above the stable single boarding, with cracks well battered, will prove all-sufficient.

Expense of Raising Calves. A prominent dairyman north of Denver, says of his grade herd: "The heifers we raise from our best cows are better milk producers with their first calves than are the average mature cow we can buy." Several of our most progressive dairymen have said practically the same thing. Yet in the face of all this, hundreds of dairymen make no effort to save their best heifer calves, and they say they have a reason. They say that the calves require too much milk. This question was seriously investigated with forty-eight calves by the Illinois experiment station. Twelve calves were tested at four different times. It was found that they could be successfully raised on 1550 pounds of whole milk. This milk was fed at the rate of ten pounds a day until the calves were fifty days old, when it was gradually lessened one pound a day or two days and then no more was fed. No substitutes for milk were used. Only the ordinary grain which the farmer produces and a good quality of alfalfa hay were fed, showing that a dairyman can raise a calf in his way with no extra trouble.

Covered-Yard Plan for Stabling. A covered-yard plan for stabling dairy cows consists of building a cheap structure and allowing the cows to run loose in the stable. In other words, it is merely a covered yard with some cheap roofing and closed in on all sides. The plan is valuable to us in this dry climate as valuable only during the winter period. On one end of the yard is a milking stable, into which the cows are driven to be milked every night and morning. They are fed their grain rations while being milked. The roughage is fed in the covered yard proper. The advantage of this method includes cheapness, no stables, no expensive building, and no cement floors except those in the milking stable. The covered yard is bedded daily. It has the advantage of making the greatest amount of the best manure of any plan yet devised. The stable is cleaned out at such time as to allow the manure to be hauled directly from the stable to the field, and thus nothing is lost in the way of fertility. Cows are more comfortable in such a stable.

Galloway Cows. Who ever heard of a variety of white belted Galloway milk cows? Robert Wallace, professor of agriculture at the University of Edinburgh, while in Colorado recently told of this strain in Scotland. Even the old-time Scotchmen residing in America may remember of ever having heard of the white belted Galloways, which look much like Dutch bested stock, minus the horns. These bested, belted or white-middled Galloways form one of the oldest and concurrently, one of the most valuable strains of the ancient Scottish breed. They are now found in Northumberland, England, away from the Galloway country, and Dr. John Gillespie, the revered and illustrious secretary of the Galloway herd book of Great Britain, says they have been bred from time immemorial in Cumberland, and adjoining most north-westerly county of England. Dr. John Gillespie visited Denver in 1888 and we had a talk with him about this peculiar strain.

Wherein Dairymen Fail. We have frequently referred to the high averages in the point of milk production attained by cows in Denmark. Investigation in the dairy industry of Denmark show that cows there produce on an average almost three times as much butter a cow as does the average cow in Canada. Why is this? The problem is not difficult of solution. The Danes have developed a high degree of dairy intelligence. They recognize the importance of breeding to the best dairy bulls they can secure, and they feed liberally, but judiciously. There is nothing to hinder Canadian farmers from bringing their herds up to the same degree of proficiency, provided they set aside that prejudice held by many against learning from dairy books and journals.

A Faithful Friend. "I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy since it was first introduced to the public in 1873, and have never found one instance where a cure was not speedily effected by its use. I have been a colonial traveler for seventy years and never start out on a trip without this, my faithful friend," says H. S. Nichols, of Oakland, Ind. Ter. When a man has used a remedy for thirty five years he knows its value and is compelled to speak of it. For sale at Toulson's drug store.

THE FORTIETH TIME.

Katherine Hollister was in the seventh heaven of happiness. A story had been accepted. At last her friends would be convinced that in the literary atmosphere of Boston she had found her proper element. How had she ever endured Millville so long? Stupid, slow, gossipy Millville! How far away it seemed to-night and how different a girl from the budding authoress who had dragged out her humdrum existence there. Her eyes sought instinctively a framed photo on the dresser. It was a strong, manly face that looked into hers.

"But why do those eyes always seem to be questioning one?" Katherine pondered half impatiently. "It is as if they were continually asking, 'Is it worth while?'" "Yes, it's worth while, quite worth while, Willis King," she said aloud. "I'm afraid your father from me to-night 'nan ever before. And when we go over the same old argument for the fortieth time it will doubtless be a repetition of the other thirty-nine arguments. My literary ambitions will lead me on to something nobler, more satisfactory—'" A remnant of their last conversation came back to her.

"Yes, Katherine," Willis had said wearily. "I shouldn't wonder if you were a famous writer some day. And you'll be so busy dissecting things and people's emotions that you'll forget you have any of your own; it will be so interesting to spin fine theories of visionary lives that perhaps you'll miss living yourself."

"Why need there be a choice, Katherine," Willis had asked. "You must know me well enough to understand that I would never demand the sacrifice of your work in order that you might marry me." "The same old story," was the reply. "I tell you, Willis, the two things don't go together. The inevitable result is a cross between a slovenly housekeeper and literary hack. No, thank you." "Well, at any rate," was the final response, "remember that I shall wait for you."

The evening paper lay on the table unread. To quiet her unstrung nerves she waded through column after column of society scandal and Wall street operations till the marriage notices were reached. "What was this—oh, it couldn't be—Willis King married! The paper dropped from her nerveless fingers. Then, stooping to pick it up, she sought to prove it all a horrid mistake, but the clear announcement merely served to verify her worst fears. The ceremony had been performed in a city church the day before. Considering that Willis King had been but the moment before relegated to the background of her affections and interests, it was a strangely inconsistent thing that the news brought forth a storm of tears. The awakening came too late.

"Willis King," she sobbed brokenly, "I didn't know myself. You haven't played—fair—"

DEMOCRATIC SUCCESS MEANS TARIFF REFORM.

As the campaign progresses it is more and more evident that it will be a warm fight. Mr. Bryan, in his talk on the tariff in Des Moines, Iowa, gave a good idea of the conditions existing under the present high tariff and pointed out very forcibly the necessity of making a change. It is useless for us to attempt giving a review and estimate of this speech. The evils of a high protective tariff have been too often exposed, and the results of such a system are too easily seen to need any elaboration from us. Tariff reform has been what the Democratic party has been urging upon the people for a number of years, and the evils that would result from such a system have been pointed out by statesmen of that party for years. It is now seen that their predictions have been realized, and a high protective tariff has delivered the trade of the country into the hands of a few, who have the people by the throat, and who use this power to squeeze out of them the last penny they can. It needs no argument at all to prove that any system that will permit our "Infant Industries" to sell their goods to other nations cheaper than to their home people, is wrong and should be done away with. Today American machinery of some classes can be bought in Europe and Canada for less than our own people are charged for them. If our manufacturer can manufacture, pay the freight charges and then compete in other countries successfully they are certainly not in any danger from these same competitors at home, and do not need the million of dollars annually paid by the home consumers, on account of the tariff, in order that they may be able to keep their plants going. When a New York merchant can go over to England and buy an American made watch re-ship it to this country and then sell it at a much less price than is charged for the same goods by the home manufacturer. It is very evident that these manufacturers are taking advantage of the high tariff on these goods and making the American people pay an exorbitant price in order to fill their own pockets at the expense of the people. So evident is it that the high protective tariff is wrong and unjust that the Republican party which for so long has stood by the whole system of high tariff, have had to acknowledge that it needs revising. And Mr. Taft has given a promise if elected to so recommend.

It is useless for a reasonable man to expect tariff reform from a party that is so imbued with the wisdom of high tariff as the Republican party has always been, and from a party that has been built up and sustained by those who are most interested in keeping the tariff on. If the people desire and demand that tariff reform should be undertaken and that the people of this country should no longer be at the mercy of our large corporations, on account of the protection that is given them by a tariff so high that they may never fear competition from any outside source, and what by their acts and criminal methods have succeeded in crushing out competition at home, then the proper course to pursue is to demand for the party which has always been high tariff; and their true lies in the election of a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress. If tariff reform is left in the hands of the Republican party they will be like unto the Currency Act passed by the last Congress which attempted to defeat true reform and keep conditions as near as possible to the way they now exist.

GOV. CROTHERS' GOOD WORK.

The way that Gov. Crothers is organizing the special committees appointed by him to investigate various matters concerning the welfare of the state shows that he is thoroughly in earnest in his desire and intention to remedy and better present conditions. His remarks about cutting down legislative expenses are in touch with the best sentiment of the State and it is to be hoped his efforts along this line will bear fruit. Another legislative evil, that of killing legislation by the failure of committees to report, a favorite device of politicians who want to kill a bill but do not care to come out in the open and oppose it—is also the subject of some straight talk by the Governor, as well as the way the State's money is expended on the various institutions in the State. While most of these are deserving of help, and financial aid should be extended them, the unbusinesslike way of making appropriations by separate bills, so that it is almost impossible to know just how much has been appropriated is deserving condemnation. Altogether the Governor is making a very good impression with the best thinking people of all parties by his efforts to improve the conditions, and his ceaseless work and apparently untiring energy, bid fair to further add to his title that of the "Hard Working Governor."

SALISBURY'S FAVORITE RESIDENCE DISTRICT.

CAMDEN BOULEVARD HAS SHADE TREES ALREADY SET OUT IN TEN-FOOT PARKWAY.

The above cut, showing a portion of Camden Avenue, on which our property abuts on the east, illustrates, in the light of recent events in our city, the wisdom shown in the adoption at the outset of the Boulevard System in the laying out of our property, whereby the shade trees planted in the middle of the ten-foot Parkway are removed from any possible danger of interference, either now or hereafter, both from their location and from the fact that the Parkway is private property, and virtually belongs to the lot in its rear.

These Boulevards, in addition to the Camden Avenue frontage, extend east three blocks from Camden Avenue, and must of necessity ultimately become the favorite residence district of this city, a fact which is already being recognized, as evidenced by the interest shown and the inquiries now being made by some of our far-seeing citizens regarding them, some of whom are moved thereto by their late experience in other locations. (For full description of the "Camden Boulevard Subdivision," see this month's number of the "Wicomico News" Historical and Industrial Edition, page 18.)

The attention of intending purchasers is called to the fact that on the 1st of September next an advance in price will be made on lots, and a further one on the 1st of January next, and to the further fact that on the Camden Avenue front there are now but four lots unsold.

THE CITY COUNCIL

And Telephone Wires. Question of Paving Camden Street From Winder To Corporate Limits.

At the meeting of the City Council on Monday evening, the question of replacing the brick pavement torn up by the Telephone Company in placing their wires underground was taken up. The understanding was that the Company should replace these bricks and repair the street. It was brought out that as Messrs. Sweeten and Co., were under a five year contract to keep the streets and guarantee the work, that they objected to the work being done as laid out, but would require the bricks to be torn out to the curb. Engineer Hatton said it would be impossible to repair the streets satisfactorily within such a narrow slit, and that he could not recommend the acceptance of it to Messrs. Sweeten and Co., unless it was extended to the curb. In pursuance of this recommendation the Council passed a resolution requiring the Telephone Co., to tear out from the outer cut to the curb line.

As a number of property owners in Camden beyond Winder Street, where the present proposed street improvement is to stop, were asking for the Bitulitic to be extended, this question was taken up. Engineer Hatton made the survey for the proposed extension Tuesday morning, and at a meeting held Tuesday evening it was decided to give notice to the property owners from Winder Street to the Southern Corporate Limits, that the Council would meet on Monday, the 7th day of September, to consider the passing of an ordinance to this effect. It is believed that the Street will be so extended.

WHITE POTATOES—A fertilizer that will make a good crop (season permitting) without being too expensive.

CORN Fertilizer, for best results, must contain ingredients that will not burn the crop under the worst weather conditions.

TOMATO and CANTALOUPE Fertilizer is another study of mine. To get best results with smallest outlay consistent with what is expected out of the crop, the plants must grow fast from the start and have a fertilizer that contains all necessary elements.

CHAPTER II.
Old Love and New.

WELL, here I am," announced a tall, slender youth, entering the deserted salon a few minutes later with Nish at his side. "I'm here at my country's call, all right, but my confounded country doesn't seem to be on hand to meet me."

His graceful walk was not wholly steady, and there was a flush on the handsome young face. The late arrival was Prince Danilo of Marsowia, attache of the Marsowian legation at Paris. As a diplomat he had scarcely scored a success, for he had a delightfully normal aversion to work and a simple, unfeeling joy in the amusements of Maxim's and his clubs.

"I'll hunt up his excellency at once,"

THE LATE ARRIVAL WAS PRINCE DANILLO.

Nish was assuring the prince. "Are you quite in condition to see him, if I may?"

"Oh, I'm all right enough," yawned Danilo, "only I forgot to go to bed last night. If I could reel off a few yards of sleep."

"Perhaps I could find you some place to—"

"I'd prefer a desk, if you can find one. I always sleep best at my desk. But I suppose—"

"There is a couch, sir, over in the corner behind the palms. How would that do? You could get a nice nap there, and in a little while I'd find his excellency for you. But, sir, if I may say so, why do you waste your life in dissipation when you might marry and settle down? Just think, now! Would not a dear little wife and a home of your own be better worth while than all your clubs? I leave it to you!"

"You leave it to me?" retorted Danilo. "Then I make it clubs."

"But, if I may say so—"

"You may not," interrupted Danilo, crossing to the couch and throwing himself at full length among its cushions. "By by! If you're waking, call me early!"

He spread a handkerchief over his face and in a moment was sound asleep, leaving Nish to tiptoe out in search of Popoff.

For a few minutes no sound was audible in the empty salon save the distant swell and fall of dance music, punctuated by the stumorous prince's heavy breathing.

Then Natalie hurried in with De Jolden. Both looked anxious, and "How careless of me!" the ambassador's wife was exclaiming. "Where can I have dropped the miserable fan? If my husband should pick it up and find on it those words you were foolish enough to write— I wonder if I left it in the niche on the stairs when we were sitting there. Let's go back and see."

They turned back, almost colliding with Sonia, who was entering. Cascaida directly behind her.

"Oh, Mme. Sadowna," asked Natalie, "you haven't seen anything of a white ivory fan? I've looked everywhere, and—"

"Sonia, you are unjust. If it had rested with me you should be my wife now, not another man's widow."

"If it rested with you?" she mimicked. "Well, let the whole story rest now. It's forgotten."

"By you, perhaps—never by me."

"Oh, no! I remember it every now and then for my own amusement. But it is hard to think of myself as the little Marsowian peasant maid to whom the dashing cavalry officer, Prince Danilo, was once engaged and whom his rich old uncle at the last moment forbade to marry because of her poverty. How differently that same rich old uncle would look on the match today! Twenty millions is a pretty dowry."

"At least it seems you didn't break your heart over losing me," sneered Danilo.

"No; my plebeian heart stood the shock excellently. I soon found consolation—an elderly husband who lived just one week after the wedding and left me all his wealth."

"Yes; I heard how your father forced you into the match. Next time you can choose a husband to suit yourself."

"Why should I marry again? I am rich, free. I have everything."

"Including love?" He asked, his eyes devouring her fragile beauty.

"I don't believe in love," scoffed Sonia. "All men are alike. Dozens of them are after my money, and make love to me because they can't get it without me."

"Men are not all fortune hunters," he denied hotly. "I for one—"

"So they all say. Each says 'I love you.' Each means my fortune."

"They do?" cried Danilo, in rage at the strong insinuation. "Well, here's one that doesn't. I for one shall never say to you, 'I love you!'"

A strange smile crossed her face. She came very close to where he stood; so close that the faint perfume of her hair was sweet in his nostrils; so close that her breath was warm upon his lips; so close that his bewildered soul struggled in vain to hide from the glory in her eyes. Her voice was a musical whisper as she asked:

"You'll never say to me 'I love you?'"

"There was an infinity of allurements in the tempting words. Danilo, with a mighty effort, shook off the spell and shouted:

"Never! Never! Never!"

"That's a comfort!" she said coldly, "waving away and seeking to veil her keen disappointment. "But," she added more softly, "why not say it if you really want to?"

"I don't want to!" he declared sulkily.

"And you promise faithfully you'll never say to me, 'I love you?'"

Again she was perilously close to him. Again his eyes tore themselves free from the pleading seductiveness of hers as he reiterated:

"I promise! I'm not going to make a fool of myself or be made a fool of."

"Is that a declaration of war?" queried Sonia.

"No—of friendship. Do you mean to say if I asked you to be my wife you would merely laugh at me?"

"Probably. All men are alike."

"They are not, and in time I'll prove it to you."

Before she could answer the ambassador and several of the guests came into the room. At first opportunity Popoff drew Danilo aside.

"Prince," said he impressively, "you have now been attached to this legation nearly four months and—"

"Few of my attachments last so long," observed Danilo.

"You refer to your love affairs? I have heard of them. They have brought you to the brink of ruin. You are almost penniless. Here is my plan to save you, also to give you a chance to save your country from bankruptcy. I want you to marry."

"To what?" cried Danilo.

"To marry—beautiful woman, my boy—twenty millions—Mme. Sonia Sadowna. Hey?"

"Never!" returned Danilo, angrily, as he rose to end the interview.

"Then a Frenchman will marry her, and her fortune and our country will be ruined."

"I won't marry her," repeated Danilo, "and she won't marry me. But for my country's sake I'll keep any Frenchman from marrying her."

"But how?"

"You shall see!"

Potash

Makes Two Bundles of Wheat Grow Where but One Bundle Grew Before

Getting a full crop from a fertilizer with too little Potash, is like getting well by the doctor's prescription with its most important drug left out.

Most commercial fertilizers need more Potash to get all the crop profit you are entitled to.

Use a brand with at least 6 per cent. of Potash, but if your dealer does not keep it, then mix 15 pounds of Muriate of Potash with each 100 pounds of your fertilizer. That will raise wheat! Set clover, too!

The proof will come next year in bigger crop, more profit. Potash is profit. Buy the Potash first.

SHORT SERMON FOR A SUNDAY HALF-HOUR

By Rev. C. Q. Wright.

The Wondrous Sovereign of the Sea

"And they that were in the boat worshipped him."—Matt. xiv., 33.

It was on board of a yacht at sea that Jesus was first worshipped as a divine being, and the worshippers on this occasion were seafaring men.

In this story of the sea and seagoing men the first important fact we come upon is that of their recognition of Jesus in this new situation—new only to them. To these disciples it was a discovery. Though gold is gold and its precious threads extend throughout the surface of the earth, yet each new outcropping when found is called a discovery by the prospector; so truth has to be recognized over and over again in different situations and new outcroppings, and the infinite character and face of God must be discovered over and over again, in every age, in every life, and in all the changing scenes and situations of history.

What a picture of our life voyage is this scene on the Sea of Galilee! Separation from our Lord; darkness; contrary winds and whelming seas of heart storms and brain tempests and of crowding affairs; the spirit of adventure ever prone to take risks, sailing close to the wind and rushing into temptation and danger; doubting "ifs" thrust before our honest opportunities, and superstitious alarms and groundless terrors at new manifestations of the Divine presence.

But the greatest thing that happened there that night was this:—"They that were in the boat worshipped Him, saying, Or a truth Thou art the Son of God." Haste to get Him on board, O seafarer, and serve and worship Him on deck as cordially and loyally as at home or church ashore! He brings happiness with Him. Hear Him call, "Be of good cheer, it is I!"

NATURE AND A WOMAN'S WORK

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Nature and a woman's work combined have produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known. In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers they relied upon the roots and herbs of the field to cure disease and mitigate suffering.

From the roots and herbs of the field Lydia E. Pinkham more than thirty years ago gave to the women of America a remedy for their peculiar ills, more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is now recognized as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Muff, it will do for other suffering women.

Mr. Rodney Austin, of Maryland, was the guest of friends here Saturday.

A number of the people attended the ball games at Nanticoke, Saturday, between Nanticoke and Smith's Island and Sharptown. The Nanticoke boys were victorious in both games.

Mr. E. G. Ward, of Baltimore, spent Saturday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Ward.

Saturday August 29th

and the following TEN DAYS will be days long to be remembered throughout the county. Saturday morning, at 7.30, the doors of

will be opened to the public, and one of the greatest sales, consisting of Men's & Boys' High-Grade Clothing, Hats, Caps, Shoes, Men's Trousers, Boys' Knee Pants, Dress and Working Shirts, Neckwear, Underwear, Overalls, Trunks, & Suit Cases.

All this and a good bit more are included in this great reduction. Nothing will be reserved, for we intend to make this sale not only the largest, but one of the greatest money-saving events that was ever held in Salisbury. Profits are thrown to the winds. For each and every store controlled by the J. S. Goodman Co. has received orders that all Summer merchandise must go regardless of cost, as the room is needed for our large Fall stock.

It has always been customary with the J. S. Goodman Co. at this time of the year to close out all the end-of-season stock to a syndicate of buyers, and such would have been the case with our Salisbury store, as the prices from these buyers would have realized for us a good deal more than this sale; but, on second thought, we considered that we could derive better advantages by closing it out to the people at lower prices as a source of great advertising to us. Although the monetary loss will be great, we will be highly recompensed with the satisfaction of getting in closer touch with the masses.

Another important matter was the appointment of a select Committee headed by Mr. George W. POWELLVILLE

Powellville, Md., August 24, 1908.—In view of the fact that we have had to play against a majority of the Berlin Baseball teams under the name of Ironshire, we feel it nothing but just to ourselves, that we give Berlin a beating under their own name. Now, we challenge Berlin to a game on our ground, which is as good as the one in Berlin, any time between this and September 10, 1908. But, we want to tell them right now, that they can put Mr. Lowe in the box, but he positively cannot "umpire" because he does not "know how." We will pay the expenses of the whole Berlin team any day they will leave their own ground and come to ours. We have played them twice in Berlin and neither time have we received half way justice. Berlin knows what we did to them three years ago when they had a brag team. Any team that is so sick over the result of a game that they cannot eat a sumptuous feast prepared for them they must be sick. Why does the Berlin team always play on their own ground? It is because they are comparable to the canine family in the way they fight—of course they fight better on their own ground with the aid of the umpire. The manager of the above team would like to hear from Berlin Manager Powellville Baseball Team.

—Although the inclement weather kept several people home from Parsonsburg Camp Sunday it was very well attended that evening, there being in the neighborhood of a thousand people in attendance. The camp this year has been one of unexcelled success, both financially and spiritually. Vast improvements have been a great inducement to visitors.

Letter to Postmaster Humphreys, Salisbury, Md.

Dear Sir: This happened seven years ago. A man, having three little poultry houses, bought one gallon of each of two paints to paint them; paid $1.00 for one and $1.75 for the other, 15 cents difference.

The $1.00 gallon painted one house, the $1.75 gallon painted the other two houses. The cost of the paint was first house $1.00; second house 87 1/2c; third house 87 1/2c.

But painting goes with paint, and it costs as much to paint one paint as another, about $3.50 a gallon.

The painting of one of those houses with $1.00 paint cost the same as that of the other two with $1.75 paint; $3.50. Difference $1.75 a house same way as the 75 cents. Four years ago, he painted that first little house again, same paint—he wanted to know what the cost of keeping a house well painted really is. The other two houses didn't need painting.

Last year he painted all three little houses, same paint as first; and reckoned his cost to date of beginning the job.

The first little house had cost $5.10 twice, or $10.20, and was ready to paint again; the second two houses had cost $5.20, and were ready to paint again.

That is: saving 15 cents a gallon made one house cost twice as much as the other two houses, besides the fuss of an extra paint job in three years. The $1.75 paint was Devoe.

This tale is made up of a thousand experiences. Devoe is always the paint that takes less gallons, cost less money, wears longer, less fuss. And the cost of Devoe is about one fourth of the cost of a paint that doubles the gallons.

Yours truly
F. W. DEVOE CO.

THE CONVICT

By Carl Mussman.

It was noon. The dark, gray walls of the old penitentiary were baking in the rays of the burning sun, which fell like searchlights through the little windows into the narrow cells within.

The inside walls, like the outside ones, were cheerless and gray, with nothing to relieve the monotony of their blind, printed copies of the prison regulations, which consisted of the things prisoners were not allowed to do.

The work went slowly, and the longing for the outside world, the blue sky and the green fields grew in the hearts of many of the hapless beings behind lock and bars. Nobody felt less like working than the giant prisoner in the second tier of cells, who was feared of the wardens and his fellow prisoners because of his enormous strength and violent temper. Just now he was trying to make a basket, but time and again his hands dropped into his lap and he listened to the regular knockings on the water pipes, which, like the wireless telegraphy, carried messages from cell to cell.

A smile spread over the face of the giant when he succeeded in putting the letters together to words and the words to sentences. Suddenly the smile disappeared, and in its place came a hard, almost ferocious expression.

Steps were heard outside in the cell. It was the turnkey. The convict came down the long hall, head shouldered, well-nourished and satisfied, carrying his bunch of keys in his hand.

What could he want here this time of day, when it was the rule to disturb the convicts? The convict was literally foaming with fury because he was punished once more for a petty violation of the rules? Keepers always knew how to punish in those they did not like.

Now they stopped outside the cell. A thought shot like lightning through the convict's brain. The turnkey was alone. Undoubtedly there was not even a guard in the hall during the quiet noon hour behind the loose brick in the wall was a sharp piece of iron which he had sharpened during the long months he had been confined to the cell.

Outside the sun was shining, the birds were singing and the woods were green. A key turned in the door. The turnkey came in, but in the same moment he fell to the ground as if struck down by lightning. With terrible force the giant had hurled the sharp instrument in his temple.

The convict did not even look at his victim. With staring eyes he sneaked down the hall. Every moment he stopped, listened and looked around.

He felt nothing but a great joy at the success of his deed. Now the road to freedom was open, the prison door was open, there was no guard outside.

The giant had now reached the yard. It was as if heaven itself had decided that he should be a free man. Near the wall stood a chopping block and a ladder. He placed the ladder on top of the block vaulted over the wall and let himself fall down on the outside.

For a moment he laid there absolutely quiet, without moving hand or foot. Had he broken a limb in the fall?

No, he felt plainly that he was unhurt, and he had only one thought—to get away.

He jumped to his feet and ran as fast as his trembling legs would carry him across fields, over hedges and fences, until he reached the woods, panting and exhausted.

Completely tired out, he threw himself down in the grass under a shady beech tree, and, half asleep, looked through the green foliage at the blue sky and the white clouds, beyond.

A stinner to whom the gates of heaven had opened could feel no happier than he did.

But only a short hour was given him to enjoy his liberty. Suddenly he heard a noise of many voices, footsteps and excited signals. He jumped to his feet, picked up a heavy branch lying close to him in the grass, and, brandishing it around his head, he disappeared as a deer in the woods.

Too many men were following him, however. Five minutes later the giant lay bound and gagged on the ground, with a rifle bullet in his leg. He was carried back to the penitentiary in triumph.

The inspector stood in his office behind the rail and looked at him sternly.

The convict, who was now chained hand and foot, cast down his eyes and seemed absolutely broken. He mumbled something to himself, which sounded like an excuse: "Why did he come?"

A SARTORIAL STAR.

Considerable Doubt as to the "Wharabouts" of Miss Jones.

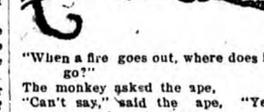

Mr. Jackson, co-ored, had come to the home of his fiancée, Miss Jasmine Jones, to fulfill an afternoon appointment. Not finding the lady at the customary trying place in the front yard, Mr. Jackson leisurely strolled around the house, thinking he would probably come upon her there. The lady was yet not to be found, but her mother was discovered on the back porch doing the family washing. Approaching with his most pompous air, the future son-in-law inquired, "Miss Jones, can you tell me anything of the whereabouts of Miss Jasmine this afternoon?"

"De wharabouts of Jasmine, did you say, Mistah Jackson?" puzzled the old woman looking up from her tub.

"Yes'm, dat's what I say, de wharabouts of Miss Jasmine."

"Wal," muttered the old negress, as she began hastily to overhaul the contents of the tub, "if dey ain't heah, I reckon she's done got 'em on."—Brooklyn Life.

The lost traveler accented the freckled lad as he rode past. "Sonny, how far is it from here to the next town as the crow flies?" "Dunno, mister, I ain't no crow."

"Well, which is the best way to hit the pike?" "Hit it any way you want, it ain't got no feeling."

"Tut, tut, my boy, don't be so facetious and tell me if I can make the next car."

"Hardly. It's already made." The traveler frowned and removed the perspiration from his brow. "You appear to be a pretty smart youngster."

"Not half as smart as my brother, mister." "H'm! What made him smart?" "Why, he fell into a yellow jack-ets' nest."

"Have you?" coolly asked the lawyer. "Well, what are your troubles to me? I came here to eat."

SOME CLEVER CRIMINALS

Instances of their Success in Outwitting Detectives.

MISTAKES OF OFFICERS

Cases of Mistaken Identity—Two Men Who Served Seven Years of a Life Term When Innocent—Strange Blunder of the French Police in the Case of De Tourville.

Many of the mistakes of detectives at those of mistaken identity. Some time ago a man belonging to one of the best known and wealthiest families in the country was greatly surprised and more indignant when he was arrested by a detective who thought he had captured a criminal who recently had escaped from prison. Profuse explanations on the part of the captured man were followed by equally profuse apologies on the part of the detective, so that the incident closed without ill will on either side.

A mistake with a more tragic result occurred in England in 1879. The mistake arose in connection with the famous Edinburg burglars, when two men were brought before the Newcastle assizes charged with the robbing of the vicarage. It appears that when the vicar had interrupted his unwelcome visitors they had shot at him, so that the charge of attempted murder was added to that of burglary. The two men, Brannaghan and Murphy, who were charged with the crime, were convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment, as the evidence seemed to be convincing beyond the shadow of a doubt. They served seven years of their term. Then two other men confessed that they alone were guilty of the robbery.

De Tourville, one of the most terrible of the European criminals, escaped punishment for a long time because of the mistake of a detective. The death of a woman at Scarborough by what De Tourville declared was the accidental discharge of a revolver was investigated by a detective from London, but so frank and open appeared the conduct of the great criminal and so flourishing was his appearance that the officer was misled and reported that he was convinced that the affair was an accident.

When a few years later the death of the wife of De Tourville was being investigated—he murdered her by hurling her over a precipice in the Alps—the body of the woman who had died at Scarborough was exhumed and examined. It was found that, far from killing herself by accident, she had been murdered by someone who had shot her in the back, so that a slight examination would have established the fact. The mistake of the detective at the time of the Scarborough crime had terrible results, for in the time De Tourville was allowed to go free he committed two more murders.

Sherlock Holmes constantly insisted that nothing in a room where a crime had been committed should be touched, and this appears to be a good rule, judging by a mistake made by an intelligent police officer in Ireland. The policeman was placed in charge of a room in which a murder had been committed, and so nothing was disturbed until his superior officers arrived. He found the time passed slowly amid such melancholy surroundings and proceeded to console himself with a pipe. He lit a candle which he found on the mantelpiece and finding a crumpled up piece of paper on the floor he used that for lighting his pipe.

As he was afraid that his superiors would object to his smoking while on duty, he opened the window in order to let out the smell of the tobacco and in order to see them when they approached, so that he could put his pipe out in time. It was discovered later that in indulging in the innocent pleasure of a pipe of tobacco he destroyed three of the most important clues.

The length of the candle which he had lighted would have indicated the time when the murder was committed, the paper with which he had lighted his pipe, judging from the charred remains, had been left there by the murderer himself and the policeman had forgotten whether he had found the window locked or unlocked when he opened it to let out the smell of smoke. Furthermore, the keen nosed detective who was put on the case, smelled the odor of the tobacco smoke, and not knowing whence it originated, spent a lot of valuable time in tracing it down.

Some years ago one of the most cruel murderers ever known almost escaped because two policemen refused to investigate the remains of whose truth they were in doubt. A man running along behind a cab came up to two policemen and gaped but that a murderer was riding in the cab with the remains of his victim.

Out of breath from his exertion and too excited for a connected story the police officers were inclined to think the man either crazy or drunk, and therefore turned a deaf ear to his allegations. If the pursuer had not persisted in following the cab and had not met later on a less sceptical officer the remains of the murdered person might have been placed in a safe hiding place and the murderer have gone undisturbed.

HIS OVERTHROW.

Dean always half-laughed, half-groined "Nothing doing!" whenever the question of matrimony, as applied to him personally, came up. He declined to ensure his friends when one by one they bowed their heads to the yoke, for he said that if a man with a sane mind wanted to make an idiot of himself it was his own business and he had a perfect right to do so.

He was always getting himself disliked for thoughtless promulgation of his theory when among friends. Fluffy young creatures with trusting eyes and marvelous pompadours, who previously had cast speculative and approving glances at his blonde features, usually tilted their noses haughtily and abandoned him to his fate after he had launched forth his opinion of the galling bonds of matrimony.

Possibly this was because each one wanted to inscribe her calling cards with the name of Mrs. Ernest Dean; still, it rather takes away from the favor of the game to smile upon a man who one knows never, by any possibility, will gaze on one, save in an impersonal and disinterested manner. Older and more experienced young women, who suspected that he might be talking just for the sake of talking, finally concluded that he really believed what he said, and so sought other fields to conquer.

So accustomed had Dean become to being eyed reproachfully, surprisedly, indignant, that he experienced a distinct shock the evening that he met Serena Hubert the second time.

As he lazily watched the cigar smoke curling upward—it was after an informal dinner—he said apropos of some remark, "It served him right for getting married, anyhow!" Serena merely continued to lean back among the cushions of the divan and to smile agreeably. "It does, indeed," she murmured calmly. "I never can understand this idea that matrimony means happiness! People situated like you and like myself, for instance are the only wise ones!"

Dean let his cigar slip from his paralyzed fingers, as he stared at her vivid face. "D—do you, really think that?" he half stammered.

Serena laughed. "Of course I do," she said. "It's all too foolish!"

Dean stooped over and recovered his cigar. "Yes, of course," he murmured. "That's always been my theory."

"And you are quite right," Serena assured him. "I am glad to meet a man with enough sense and brains to recognize the fact and not be afraid to stand by his colors."

"She smiled at him sweetly and Dean forgot what she said in observing the delicate contour of her face and how lovely her color was. Then he roused himself to say that, of course, he agreed with her and he so enjoyed meeting a sensible girl who could be talked to without demanding a sense of the personal in the conversation. He said it was unusual.

"But then," Serena replied, "you are an unusual man, Mr. Dean."

"Not in the least!" cried Dean, gratified but not protesting.

He sat talking with Serena till his hostess came and forcibly dragged him away. He lost his good temper till he got hold of a man who could take him to call on Serena, because he had totally forgotten, in his absorption the evening of the dinner, to ask her if he might come. He took her to the theatre and then he was asked to a chafing-dish supper.

Through it all Serena insisted on complimenting him on his well-known views against wife and home. She elaborated on the subject. She agreed with his remarks before he made them, and if he did not make them she cleverly put them into his mouth and he spoke them hopelessly.

He began to have a strange reluctance to hear them, for of a sudden he was tired of their iteration. An awful fit of the blues descended on him and held him subject for a week. Each time he called on Serena in the hope of being cheered up in the society of a person so thoroughly in accord with his own views he came away feeling worse. It was an awful thing to hear a fair young girl sit up and declare that she never should marry but should devote her life to being free and happy.

"As if she could not be equally free and lots happier if she married!" Dean found himself muttering one evening as he left her.

Serena was eminently fitted to make some home nappy, he had to admit.

Finally one evening when he was particularly down-hearted he could restrain himself no longer.

"Stop it," he told Serena. "I don't like to hear you say such things! Of course, you'll marry somebody. I wish—I wish there was a show for me! Couldn't you—would you think of marrying me, Serena?"

"Well," murmured Serena, "may be I am foolish to have such views. I'll think about it. Ernest, though, of course, I am so surprised and startled."

Nobody but the mirror across the room saw the flashing little smile she gave herself as Dean sighed in an immense relief that dissipated the cloud of blues that had hovered over him for days.

Commercial Houses, $2.50 per month. Residences, $1.50 per month. The rate for both kinds of lighting will be 10 cents per K. W. hour. With a little care in turning off the lights not needed, your bill will be less under the meter plan under the old flat rate.

GALLANT JEB'S LAST FIGHT

"The most brilliant charge I ever witnessed was made by Custer at the battle of Yellow Tavern," said an old Confederate cavalryman at the recent reunion in Richmond to a reporter of the New York Sun. "It was near the beginning of what historians now call the Wilderness campaign."

"I was with Jeb Stuart, Gen. Fitz Lee's division, Wickham's brigade, and Phil Sheridan's troops were hanging on us like a pack of hungry wolves, nipping us at every turn. We left Hanover Junction about 1 o'clock one night and reached Yellow Tavern before 9 o'clock the next morning."

"We hadn't more than halted at the tavern when up comes Sheridan and tries to drive us out. It was a pretty tough struggle, a hand-to-hand fight, and we fell back from the tavern but held our position on the telegraph road leading to Richmond. I was with the battery on the extreme left wing, and it was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon when orders came for the whole division excepting the First Virginia to dismount but hold their positions."

"You know how it is, when one man wishes for water the whole company begins to swear they are dying of thirst. Jack Saunders and I took a bunch of canteens and started over the hill to a spring that he had seen that morning during our scrimmage with the Yankees."

"I was on my hands and knees over the spring when I heard Saunders' grunt of surprise. He was staring through the trees."

"There only a few yards away was a considerable body of cavalry. Making sure that it was our right wing, I wondered to see them mounted and it ranks. Just then the voice of an officer called out:

"Cavalry! Attention! Draw sabers!"

"The entire line moved forward at a quick walk, and as the officer wheeled his horse I saw his face. It was Custer!"

"The situation came to Saunders and me like a flash. We threw down the canteens and started back to the battery on the dead run."

"Troop! Custer's voice rang out again. The next instant he shouted 'Charge!'"

"With wild cheers his cavalry gashed forward in a sweeping gallop, attacking our entire left wing at the same time. We saw our battery taken, our line broken, and our men running like sheep."

"Saunders and I had, but one thought, to join our feeling company. As we reached the telegraph road above the din of the battle, I heard Jeb Stuart's voice."

"There he was making a stand with a handful of men around him. Thank God, I had sense enough left to join them."

"It seemed but a moment before Custer's troops were coming back as fast as they had gone forward. They had met the First Virginia. We greeted them with the rebel yell and our last round."

"Jeb Stuart swayed in his saddle, how he cheered us! I gave them my last shot and was following with my weapon clubbed when I saw a man, who had been dismounted and was running out, turn as he passed our rally and fire his pistol."

"Jeb Stuart swayed in his saddle. It was only for a moment and then his voice rang out cheering his struggling troops."

"The enemy rallied just across the road and fired a volley into the little band gathered around Jeb Stuart. His horse sprang forward with a scream of agony and sank down upon his knees. As we lifted the general off, the young officer who was helping me exclaimed:

"My God, general, you are wounded! Your clothes are soaked with blood! You must leave the field, sir!"

"No," Gen. Stuart answered, "I will not leave until victory is assured. Get me another horse."

"When I returned with the horse he was seated with his back against a tree, and when he tried to get up, weakened by loss of blood, he sank back again."

"Go," he commanded us, "I am done for. Fitz Lee needs every man I order you to go."

"We cannot obey that order, general," the young officer told him, and "I'll never forget the look that came over his face when he faced the general. 'We must carry you to a place of safety, however the battle goes.'"

"It must not go against us," Stuart replied, and the thought seemed to put fresh vigor into his body. "We lifted him up on his horse, and mounting our own, we held him in his saddle. When the tide of battle turned, supported between us, he made a last effort to rally his fleeing troops."

"Go back, men!" he cried. "Go back! Go back and do your duty!"

"We felt him sway in the saddle. The young officer turned our horses' heads to the rear and we carried our fainting general in the saddle, still holding him upright in the saddle. That was Stuart's last battle and Custer's most brilliant charge."

PERIL OF RICH MEN'S SONS

Detectives in New York Largely Engaged in Watching Them.

The luring of a young Pittsburg millionaire from New York into the jurisdiction of the Pennsylvania Courts in order to prevent him from dissipating his fortune and drinking himself to death, raised again the terribly trying question as to what the rich man shall do with his sons.

There have been some very fortunate rich men in New York. John D. Rockefeller is a sample. Not for years, if ever, has he passed an hour of anxiety as to the personal career or habits of his only son, William Rockefeller, less money and more sons, not one of whom has shown a disposition to go to the bad. The Vanderbilts down to the present generation are clean, decent young fellows, with one exception, and he has been more foolish than vicious. Jay Gould's oldest son has turned out a man after the father's heart, while the other sons are quiet business men, excepting that one of them has allowed himself to attain a form of notoriety because of unpleasant domestic lawsuits.

The young men above mentioned are not saints, but none of them have become rakes, rounders or drunkards. Each has stood up against such opportunities for badness as would make a father or mother shudder if the whole story could be told to them. But there are hundreds of rich men in New York who have not been so fortunate in their sons. Born to great wealth; knowing nothing of the getting of money, and a great deal about the spending of it; reared in luxury, and without the need of work; with gilded paths of pleasure open to them in many directions; with no lack of advisers to lure them on; only half responsible to their parents in the days of youth, and not at all in those of early manhood; it takes a strong and courageous nature to withstand temptations and keep clean. There are only too many sad examples that show they do not, says the head of a New York detective agency.

"There is a popular impression abroad," he said, "that our men are mostly employed by wives who wish to keep an eye on their husbands, or by husbands interested in the movements of their wives. This is not so. For one case of this sort we have five where fathers are keeping tabs on the movements of their sons. Not for the purpose of discipline or correction, but as a safeguard against compromising evils."

There is many a boy in this town who was getting himself snarled up in difficulties, before whom the way was suddenly straightened out by means of which he had no knowledge. The fathers knew the facts and took a quiet hand in developments. In nine cases out of ten the boy does not know he is shadowed. In the tenth case he is brought up with a sudden jerk and then there is all sorts of trouble to pay."

"I have heard surprise expressed in quite a number of cases where the will of a departed father or mother provided for the trusteeship of the portions of this son or that until he should have arrived at years of rather mature manhood. I am confident that in every one of these cases the parent knew more about the life of the son than the latter ever imagined. That this step was taken to protect the son against himself."

Landing in England.

There is no country where the matter of landing from American passenger ships is so easy and so expeditiously done as England, says the Travel Magazine. Of course, it is a free trade country, the freest in the whole world.

There are duties levied on tobacco and spirits, but travellers are allowed a half pound of tobacco, in any shape, and a half pint of spirits, which also means the same as perfume. Sugar is dutiable, whether in grain, sweets or in jam, but a small quantity is freely passed.

In all cases, however, these goods must be the actual property of the passenger, and be for his use and control. Cigar, coffee and tea are also dutiable and are reprints of English books. Outside of these things, as named, passengers can bring in anything, motors, bicycles, horses, but no dogs, for which animal a not to exceed six months quarantine awaits. Keep dogs on the American side.

The customs officials are life appointees—under the civil service—and will be found most obliging and helpful. In fact, they are a model to the customs world. Tell the truth at all times to these officials and you will be all right. They are marvelously keen on spotting the supposedly smart liar.

Women as Floorwalkers.

Women are fast replacing men as shopwalkers in millinery and dress shops. In the large and fashionable West End drapers' establishments the tall, imposing, frock coated man still reigns supreme as shop sentry, but in the smaller shops all over London the woman "walker" is rapidly gaining ground.

It costs much less to employ feminine shopwalkers and it is said that a woman establishes more friendly and confidential relations with the customers than is possible in the case of a man. By reason of this intimacy she can offer very valuable advice to proprietors as to the class of goods which are popular with the customers.

In 1620 the first large copper coins were minted in England.

Thousands Have Kidney

Trouble and Never Suspect It. Prevalence of Kidney Disease.

Most people do not realize the alarming increase and remarkable prevalence of kidney disease. While kidney disorders are the most common diseases that prey upon the human system, they are almost the last recognized by patient and physicians, who content themselves with doctoring the effects, while the original disease undermines the system.

What to Do. There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fails in every case in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine, or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Tuberculosis in Cattle and Hogs.

The bureau of animal industry has made a number of tests, showing that the most important factor in the spread of cattle tuberculosis is the manure. It has been generally supposed that milk was not likely to be affected unless the cow's udder was tuberculous. The bureau has found, however, that the manure from diseased cows is usually heavily laden with tubercle bacilli, and as these are easily and almost surely introduced into the milk, under ordinary methods of milking a single tuberculous cow may effect the milk of an entire stable.

Hogs, according to the bureau, also easily acquire tuberculosis from following cows in the pasture or from feeding from skin milk or separator milk from tuberculous cattle. The great increase in tuberculosis among hogs is stated by the bureau of animal industry to be almost entirely traceable to their association with affected cattle, and the bureau strongly recommends the sterilization of all skin or separator milk from public creameries before it is fed to calves or pigs.

Tuberculosis among animals is not necessarily acquired through the mouth or nose, as has been generally supposed. For instance, tuberculosis of the lungs was produced in hogs by inoculating them in the tips of their tails.

There has been considerable dispute as to whether human and bovine tuberculosis are practically one and the same, the famous Koch theory raising a storm of dissension—at least as to whether human tuberculosis and consumption can result from the consumption of tuberculous milk, etc.

Dr. Melvin, chief of the bureau of animal industry, held to the view that the two forms cannot be classed as separate and distinct diseases and that measures to protect persons from infection from tuberculous milk are, in speaking of the matter, "the subject is regarded from the standpoint of protecting human health, or of promoting the welfare of the live stock industry, it is beyond question of argument that it is highly important for our stock raisers, farmers and dairymen to eliminate tuberculosis from their herds."

Dr. Melvin's predecessor as chief of the bureau of animal industry, L. E. Salmon, also held that bovine tuberculosis was transmissible to humans and he took the very sensible view that even admitting there was doubt about the matter, the only safe course to pursue was to assume that it was transmissible and to make and enforce regulations accordingly.

Wintering Work Horses.

Many farmers winter their horses upon the theory that stalk fields and straw stacks are necessary to toughen up the horses for spring work. We do not believe that animals which have been wintered in fields will have much energy for hard work. It is sheer folly to try to winter any animal on dry-corn stalks or straw. These things at best show that with a liberal grain allowance, together with a full manger of good clover or timothy hay every night, horses will be improved. We do not believe in keeping horses hog fat during the winter, for that is the quickest and surest way to get them out of condition. But keep them in good flesh, in good spirits, and use the curry comb and brush as regularly as during the hardest working season. If this is done the work teams will be fit for good, hard work any time they are hitched up, and that any ordinary service is not going to pull them down.

Nations' Debts.

The debts of the principal countries in Europe aggregate some $3,000,000,000, involving an annual charge of more than $240,000,000.
