HORSE KILLED WHEN STABLE COLLAPSED

Building Gives Way Under Weight of Baled Hay, Killing Truck Horse. About 3 o'clock Thursday morning the second floor of the stable of T. L. Ruark & Co. fell through, killing one horse and slightly injuring another. The accident was discovered by one of the drivers when he went to the stable to feed the horses early in the morning. A large quantity of baled hay was stored in the upper floor of the barn and it was the weight of this hay which caused the floor to collapse. There were five horses in the stalls when the accident occurred and it is considered remarkable that only one was killed. The horse that was killed was one of the best work horses in the lot. The injured horse was not badly hurt and will be ready for work in a few days. The other horses in the barn escaped without a scratch.

Democratic Majority In House And Senate

Democratic administration leaders claim a substantial majority in the house and continued control of the senate as a result of the elections for the next congress. On returns which were not yet complete the Democrats asserted that their majority in the senate had been increased from 10 to 15. In the house the returns indicated that the present overwhelming Democratic majority of 140 had dwindled to 25 or less.

With this the Democratic leaders professed themselves satisfied, declaring that it was the greatest majority "ever returned by any party in an off year following a tariff revision." The Democrats also asserted that the returns showed that the Progressive party had practically disappeared and that therefore the Democratic victory was a triumph over a reunited Republican party.

Three western states were aligned in the dry column, according to latest returns. Oregon, Arizona and Colorado voted for state wide prohibition by close margins, says anti-liquor people. In addition the claim was made by anti-saloon workers here that the majority of Illinois legislators as a result of the election, are dry in sentiment.

National prohibition headquarters professed most interest in the Arizona outcome, but admitted no more information than that furnished by press returns, which estimated a majority for anti-liquor principles. The Anti-Saloon League and the Women's Christian Temperance Union claimed victory in Colorado.

A majority of 10,000 was evident for prohibition in Oregon on the face of early returns. Ohio, however, went overwhelmingly against prohibition, as did California and Washington.

RESULTS OF ELECTION

Sen. Smith Returned in Maryland—Price Elected in District—Senate and House Democratic.

Returns from the state election show that Senator Smith won over Carrington, Republican by over 15,000. The congressional district returns show the election of Mudd in the Fifth district, being the only Republican congressman elected, while Lewis carried the Sixth by a good "working" majority. Price overwhelmingly defeated Hodson, the Bull Moose candidate, for the short term, while, according to the figures thus far available, he only defeated Duer by 218 votes. The official count may increase his lead over Duer slightly.

Maryland Democrats Are Successful.

Affiliated Vote Surprises—Independent Voting Grows.

As was expected the Democrats in Maryland, as a whole, were successful. Hon. John Walter Smith was re-elected by a majority in excess of 15,000, which while not as large as had been prophesied, was a tremendous endorsement of the Senator when the results in other states is considered and when it is remembered that he faced again the united forces of the Bull Moose and old line Republicans. Before the split in the Republican ranks Maryland seldom, even on a state election, gave more than 8,000 to 10,000 majority while on national questions it was a very doubtful state. Senator Smith's victory by over 15,000 is a strong endorsement of his course while in the Senate and a vote of confidence in his work to come. As far as the Congressmen are concerned the Democrats also have grounds to be well pleased, as they have succeeded in landing five out of the six. The biggest victory of all, and one that will give more genuine pleasure to the Democrats of state and nation than any other, is the election of David J. Lewis in the Sixth district. Lewis is located in a normally strong Republican stronghold, and his fight was a hard one. He won on his own merits, though he had the hearty support of every faction in Maryland as well as the strong personal endorsement of President Wilson.

His victory stands out as one of the many won by a clean, honest man who has shown that he is worthy of the place he holds, and whose ability is such as to put him in the front rank of his party in the nation.

In the Fifth district, Sidney E. Mudd, Jr., succeeds to the place so long filled by his father, winning over his Democratic opponent Johnson by a safe majority. Here local conditions entered into the fight as well as national issues. Johnson's nomination is another example of the ability of an organization to name its man in the primary but fail to land him in the election. While personally, a strong and popular man, the friends of Frank O. Smith, who was shelved to make way for Johnson did not forget the slight, and resented the action by their votes on election day. Young Mudd was in addition to this helped by the popularity of his late father as well as aided by the disaffection in Southern Maryland over the business situation. Here the staple crop is tobacco and its chief buyer France. Owing to the war France has not taken her usual quantity and as a result the farmers are still holding the major part of the crop. This has caused hard times in Southern Maryland, and as is usually the case when things are not going well the people voted for a change.

Senator Jesse D. Price was elected in the First district by over 10,000 majority for the short term and a little over 200 for the long term.

The surprising strength of the opponent, Robert F. Duer, for the long term was entirely unexpected, even the best informed men. It was known the Republicans were conducting a quiet but determined fight in the First district even with an enormous party affiliation against them. It was openly stated that they were depending on the manifest spirit of unrest and dissatisfaction with local conditions to help them win the fight.

While no one who is at all in touch with public sentiment doubted the existence of this unrest, yet few believed that it would come to the surface at that time, but would wait until a chance could be had of hitting at those who had brought about conditions that were unpopular. What happened is well known, but just what influences were primarily the cause is harder to tell—probably a culmination of many things.

The upper tier of counties, Cecil, Kent and Queen Anne alone saved the day for the Democrats, for in practically every other county a big slump took place.

Senator Price wins however, by a safe majority, and will take his seat in both the next and the following sessions of Congress. His experience in the Senate of Maryland and his general knowledge of public affairs will give him a distinct advantage in the way of experience over many who have filled Congressional seats for the first time.

One thing which this election has demonstrated very clearly is the worthlessness of the affiliated vote as a guide to an election vote.

Here in Wicomico the Democrats have an affiliated vote in excess of the Republicans of over 1,300, yet the county was carried by only a little over 200, so only 1,100 Democrats did not stay away from the polls. The truth is that affiliation only means the party that a person would like to take part in the primaries of, and has but little connection with the way in which they will afterwards vote.

Wicomico county has now a large independent vote and it is getting larger each year. They probably hold the balance of power already, and either party may have a hard time to win in the future unless their candidates measure up to the requirements of these voters.

Democrats Win In Wicomico By Nearly 400 Majority

Tuesday was one of the quietest election days ever experienced in Wicomico. The net results showed the over-confidence of the Democrats, who felt sure of a good majority without unduly exerting themselves, while the Republicans, keenly alive to the situation, were out to make as good a showing and as much capital as possible out of the Democratic apathy. The outcome evidenced that they succeeded so far—but not quite enough to land their candidates. Then again the "Fubs were back at their old game of having their large cohorts of negroes vote for a single name—Duer—and letting Hodson get what he could. Therefore Senator Price carried the county for the long term by 209 plurality. He has 1,500 plurality for the short term, which shows that the Republicans concentrated their entire efforts in favor of Duer.

Senator John Walter Smith carried the county by nearly 400. Some of the most stalwart Democratic districts gave only slight Democratic majorities, and several of them went for Duer which should have been Democratic. The official count follows:

THE WICOMICO COUNTY VOTE
	E. C. CARRINGTON, JR.	RICHARD H. HOLME	V. MILTON REICHAED	JOHN WALTER SMITH

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

The Limit of Rate Allowed by Law—Anti-Hitching Ordinance Will Be Passed.

The council struck the annual levy for 1914 Monday night. The rate will be 40 cents on the one hundred dollars for regular and 10 cents on the one hundred dollars for special purposes. This 10 cents is supposed to take care of the bond issue and interest for street improvements. This is the same rate as last year and the rate cannot be increased by the council unless it gets authority from the legislature, the rate being fixed in the charter.

The assessors added about $170,000 of new property on the taxable basis of the city by the assessment made in September. The revenue which will be collected will be about $80,000 with which to run the city, pay the interest on the bonds and provide for the sinking funds. While this sum is much larger than it used to be, it is barely enough to skin through on and keep up the improvements necessary to provide for the growth and development of Salisbury at this time.

The following building permits were granted: Robert W. Jones, dwelling on Cypress street; A. L. Vickery, barn and garage on N. Division street; T. L. Ruark, dwelling on North Division street.

The ordinance to prohibit the hitching of teams and stopping of automobiles on Bond, St. Peter's and Water streets was read and ordered passed and will be passed Monday night next, which will relieve these streets of the present congestion of teams and automobiles.

The Salisbury Light, Heat and Power Co. was instructed to erect a new street light on E. William street and to move a pole on Hazel avenue and relocate same under the direction of Councilman White.

The council held a special meeting on Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock to take up the question of granting a franchise to the Peninsula Rapid Transit Co.

BRIDEGROOM

COMMITTS SUICIDE. Visiting His Parents at Quantico on Honeymoon Trip.

The many friends of Henry Gillis of near Hebron, Md., were shocked to learn of his death by a bullet shot by his own hands on Saturday afternoon. Henry, who spent his boyhood days in and around Hebron, was on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Greensbury Gillis, and had brought home with him his young bride of two weeks. According to his friends and relatives he and his bride seemed to be perfectly happy and no reason can be given for his unexpected act.

He was down town with his bride on Saturday afternoon and excused himself for a few minutes in order to get shaved. Instead of going to the barber shop as was presumed, he went home. Going to his room in his father's house, he took off his top clothing and getting a blanket, went to the attic, which had no floor laid. Here he laid down between the rafters on the blanket and shot himself. After waiting down town for his return, the parties with him went on home, in order that they might not keep dinner waiting. On going to his room they discovered his clothing and a search resulted in the finding of the body in the attic. Mr. Gillis was a young man of about 23 years of age. He was popular and well thought of by all who knew him. He was married about two weeks before his death, to a young lady in Camden, N. J., and was with his bride visiting his parents. There seems to be no reason for his act unless he was temporarily deranged.

THE NEW BIRD LAW

State and National Laws to be Enforced. Federal Inspector is Alert.

The state game warden has just issued special instructions to his deputies regarding the enforcement of the game laws, and a federal inspector is now on the Shore and is expected in Wicomico any time, if not already here.

Gunners are invited to read the following carefully and also to see the advertising columns for those properties whose owners forbid trespassing.

The game warden furnishes the following official opening and closing dates and other data relating to hunting wild game in Talbot county:

Duck, goose and brant, November 1 to January 31.

Quail or partridge, rabbit, squirrel, woodcock, November 10 to December 24.

Wilson or jacksnipe, September 1 to December 15.

Reedbird and water rail, September 10 to October 31.

Yellowlegs, September 1 to December 15.

Summer or wood duck, November 1 to January 31.

The above open seasons for quail, rabbit, squirrel, woodcock, geese and ducks of all kinds apply throughout the state. All county laws in conflict with these dates are repealed. The federal regulations, which cover ducks, geese and brant, and other migratory species, fix the open seasons named for these. Under these regulations swan are protected at all times until 1918. The federal law also prohibits shooting between sunset and sunrise, and the minimum penalty for violation of any of the federal regulations is $100, and a prison sentence may be given in addition to the fine.

All the migratory insectivorous birds, including robins, meadowlarks, killdears, nighthawks or bullbats, flickers and woodpeckers are protected at all times by the federal law. The cranes and herons are also protected under this law.

The state law also protects practically all the song and insectivorous birds.

The sale of game is prohibited in this county except to a resident of the county for his or her personal use, and game must not be shipped out of the county. The penalty is $10 for each bird or animal sold, shipped or received for shipment. This law is a new law and entirely cuts out the sale of game to dealers.

It is unlawful to hunt game on Sundays or when there is snow on the ground; also unlawful to trap, net or snare any game bird or waterfowl. The state law bag limits, which apply in Wicomico county are: Quail, 15; woodcock, 12; squirrel, 12; rabbit, 12; jacksnipe, 12. Penalty $5 for each bird or animal killed in excess of these limits.

Non-residents must have a license to hunt in Wicomico and the fee is $10. Licenses are obtained of the clerk of the court.

It is unlawful for any person to buy, sell or have in possession any wings or plumage of protected birds. The state wildfowl law should be carefully noted, as the penalty for its violation is extremely severe. It is unlawful for any person to unnecessarily disturb wild fowl on their feeding grounds, or when bedded in the

OYSTERMEN AT WAR

Fifty Men Rise in the Tall Sage on a Nearby Marsh and Shoot—Raid Most Serious Offense Yet.

Crisfield, Oct. 31.—Trouble in the Manokin river between planters and oyster tongs broke out again Friday. The A. E. Tull Oyster Co. of which A. E. Tull is president, has under lease a large area of bottom in the Annapemes river, known as Crane Point. Friday afternoon while the oyster vessel Mary and Susie, owned by the Tull Company, and commanded by Captain Thomas Taylor, was dredging on the Tull ground, it was attacked by riflemen from the shore.

With a crew of three men, Captain Taylor was dredging the vessel near the Crane Point shore when, without warning a large number of men, at least 50 in number, arose in the tall sage on a nearby marsh and opened fire with rifles on the vessel. Bullets riddled the hull of the boat and one shot knocked a dredge crank handle out of the hand of one of the dredgers. The second charge of bullets came fast and thick, and the dredgers were compelled to cut loose their dredges and flee to the shore. They ran their vessel aground on a point in the river and escaped from the firing oystermen.

As soon as the dredgers were able to communicate with Mr. Tull they advised him of the trouble, and he communicated with the county authorities. Mr. Tull showed a letter, which he received, postmarked "Upper Fairmount," which warned him that oystermen of Fairmount and Manokin were planning an attack upon Crane Point planting ground. The letter was unsigned, but Mr. Tull believes he knows the author, and is of the opinion that it came from a friendly oysterman who desired to place the planters on their guard, yet feared to let his name be known.

The letter stated that a number of oystermen had formed a plot to shoot up the Tull dredging boat, and that they had stored a large number of rifles with big quantities of ammunition on the marsh back of a Mr. Davy's home on the Annapemes river. The letter told Mr. Tull that the crew of the dredge boat were in daily danger of their lives, as the attack had been under consideration for several days and would come in a very short while. Mr. Tull received the warning Friday and before he had an opportunity to communicate with him employs the attack was made on them.

Crane Point was the scene of a serious outbreak about a year ago, when a large number of oystermen swooped down on the Tull watchhouse and after riddling it with bullets and driving the watchmen to the shore for shelter, they burned down the building and destroyed all property owned by the Tull planting firm. The Tull company had a number of them arrested at the time, but lacked evidence to prove the charge against them, although a large reward had been offered for information leading to the arrest of those implicated in the movement.

School Commissioners To Meet in Baltimore

The annual meeting of the School Commissioners and County Superintendents' Association of Maryland will be held at the State Normal school, Baltimore, on Thursday and Friday, November 19 and 20. Prof. W. J. Holloway of Wicomico, is a member of the executive committee, which has made out an excellent program for the occasion. Mr. Holloway is on the program for an address on "Progress in School Athletics."

School Commissioner Brewington is assigned to a part in the discussion of the topic, "Some Feasible Plan for Giving a Summer School Course to Such Persons (after June, 1915) Who May Be Appointed Teachers and Who Are Without Training and Experience." Dr. Lewis, a member of the state board of education, will be the principal speaker on this topic, and it will be discussed by several school commissioners. Wicomico county will likely be represented by Superintendent Holloway and the three school commissioners.

His only speech all the morning had been in the midst of the reception in the public square of the town when he said:

"This home-coming doesn't mean much to me. Home? Hell! The hedgerows of the world are my home!"

He appeared older than his years, and hard and bitter, except when his eyes would light with a feverish sort of fire which shone as he broke into a lull in the talk.

"Comrades," he began. "Let us hear from the Socialist!" a Tory exclaimed.

"No, the anarchist!" shouted a Socialist.

"There won't be any war!" said Stransky, his voice gradually rising to the pitch of an agitator relieving the sensation of his own words. "Patriotism is the played-out trick of the ruling classes to keep down the proletariat. There won't be any war! Why? Because there are too many enlightened men on both sides who do the world's work. We of the 53d are a provincial lot, but throughout our army there are thousands upon thousands like me. They march, they drill, but when battle comes they will refuse to fight—my comrades in heart, to whom the flag of this country means no more than that of any other country!"

"Hold on! The flag is sacred!" cried the banker's son.

"Yes, that will do!" "Shut up!"

Other voices formed a chorus of angry protest.

"I knew you thought it; now I've caught you!" This from the sergeant, who had seen hard fighting against a savage foe in Africa and therefore was particularly bitter about the Beldapoo affair. The welts of a scar on the forehead, fever-yellowed cheek turned a deeper red as he seized Stransky by the collar of the blouse.

Stransky raised his free hand as if to strike, but paused as he faced the company's boyish captain, slender of figure, aristocratic of feature. His indignation was as evident as the sergeant's, but he was biting his lips to keep it under control.

"You heard what he said, sir?" "The latter part—enough!" "It's incitation to mutiny! An example!"

"Yes, put him under arrest."

The sergeant still held fast to the collar of Stransky's blouse. Stransky could have shaken himself free, as a matter of fact, but he had no mind to do that. He had not yet made up his mind to go that far. His muscles were weaving under the sergeant's grip, his eyes glowing as with volcanic fire waiting on the madness of impulse for eruption.

"I wonder if it is really worth while to put him under arrest?" said some one at the edge of the group in amiable inquiry.

The voice came from an officer of about thirty-five, who apparently had strolled over from a nearby aeroplane station to look at the regiment. From his shoulder hung the gold cords of the staff. It was Col. Arthur Lanstron, whose plane had skimmed the Galdlands' garden wall for the "easy bump" ten years ago. There was something more than mere titular respect in the way the young captain saluted—admiration and the diffident, boyish glance of recognition which does not presume to take the lead in recalling a slight acquaintance with a man of distinction.

"Delarme! It's all of two years since we met at Miss Galland's, isn't it?" Lanstron said, shaking hands with the captain.

"Yes, just before we were ordered south," said Delarme, obviously pleased to be remembered.

"I overheard your speech," Lanstron continued, nodding toward Stransky. "It was very informing."

A crowd of soldiers was now pressing around Stransky, and in the front rank was Grandfather Fraglin.

"Said our flag was no better'n any other flag, did he?" piped the old man. "Beat him to a pulp! That's what the Hussars would have done."

"If you don't mind telling it in public, Stransky, I should like to know your origin," said Lanstron, prepared to be as considerate of an anarchist's private feelings as of anybody's.

"I've heard your speech," Lanstron continued, nodding toward Stransky. "It was very informing."

the old sergeant, still holding fast to Stransky's collar, a capable and insistent witness for the prosecution; while Stransky, the fire in his eyes dying to coals, stared straight ahead. "It is only a suggestion, of course," said Lanstron, speaking quite as a spectator to avoid the least indication of interference with the colonel's authority. "But it seems possible that Stransky has clothed his wrongs in a garb that could never set well on his nature if he tried to wear it in practice. He is really an individualist. Enraged, he would fight well. I should like nothing better than a force of Stransky's if I had to defend a redoubt in a last stand."

"Yes, he might fight." The colonel looked hard at Stransky's rigid profile, with its light lips and chin as firm as if cut out of stone. "You never know who will fight in the pinch, they say. But that's speculation. It's the example that I have to deal with."

"He is not of the insidious, plotting type. He spoke his mind openly," suggested Lanstron. "If you give him the limit of the law, why, he becomes a martyr to persecution. I should say that his remarks might pass for barracks-room gassing."

"Very well," said the colonel, taking the shortest way out of the difficulty. "We will excuse the first offense."

"Yes, sir!" said the sergeant mechanically as he released his grip of the offender. "We had two anarchists in my company in Africa," he observed in loyal agreement with orders. "They fought like devils. The only trouble was to keep them from shooting innocent natives for sport."

Stransky's collar was still crumpled on the nape of his neck. He remained stock-still, staring down the bridge of his nose. For a full minute he did not vouchsafe so much as a glance upward over the change in his fortunes. Then he looked around at Lanstron glowering.

"I know who you are!" he said. "You were born in the purple. You have had education, opportunity, position—everything that you and your kind want to keep for your kind. You are smarter than the others. You would hang a man with spider webs instead of hemp. But I won't fight for you! No, I won't!"

He threw back his head with a determination in his defiance so intense that it had a certain kind of dignity that freed it of theatrical affectation.

"Yes, I was fortunate; but perhaps nature was not altogether unkind to you," said Lanstron. "In Napoleon's times, Stransky, I think you might even have carried a marshal's baton in your knapsack."

"You—what rot!" A sort of triumph played around Stransky's full lips and his jaw shot out challengingly. "No, never against my comrades on the other side of the border!" he concluded, his dogged stare returning.

Now the colonel gave the order to fall in; the bugle sounded and the centripetal legs began to assemble on the road. But Stransky remained a statue, his rifle untouched on the sward. He seemed of a mind to let the regiment go on without him.

"Stransky, fall in!" called the sergeant.

Still Stransky did not move. A comrade picked up the rifle and fairly thrust it into his hands.

"Come on, Bert, and knead dough with the rest of us!" he whispered.

"The father, loath to do this, called in the assistance of an able pleader then, Eugene Partow, lately become chief of staff of the Browns, who was an old friend of the Lanstron family. Partow turned the balance on the side of filial affection. He kept watch of the boy, but without favoring him with influence. Young Lanstron, who wanted to see results, had to earn them. He realized in practice the truth of Partow's saying that there was nothing he had ever learned but what could be of service to him as an officer.

"Finding enough work to do?" Partow would ask with a chuckle when they met in these days; for he had made Lanstron both chief of intelligence and chief aerostatic officer. Young Colonel Lanstron was the duty of gaining the secrets of the Gray staff and keeping those of the Brown and organizing up-to-the-moment efficiency in the new forces of the air.

He had remarked truly enough that the injury to his left hand served as a better reminder against the folly of wool-gathering than a string, even a large red string, tied around his finger. Thanks to skillful surgery, the fingers, incapable of spreading much, were yet serviceable as had a firm grip of the wheel as he rose from the aeroplane station on the Sunday morning after Marta's return home for a flight to La Tir.

He knew the pattern weaving under his feet as one knows that of his own garden from an overlooking window. Every detail of the staff map, ravines, roads, buildings, battery positions, was stitched together in the flowing reality of actual vision. No white posts were necessary to tell him where the boundary between the two nations lay. The line was drawn in his brain.

Now that Lanstron was the organizer of the aviation corps his own flights were rare. Mostly they were made to La Tir. His visits to Marta were his holidays. place in the ranks. "Hep-hep-hep! The regiment started on its way, with Grandfather Fraglin keeping at his grandson's side. "Makes me feel young again, but it's darned solemn beside the Hussars, with their horses' bite-a-jingling. Times have certainly changed—officers' hands in their pockets, saying 'if you don't mind' to a man that's insulted the flag! Kicking ain't good enough for that traitor! Ought to hang him—yes, sir, hang and draw him!"

Lanstron watched the marching column for a time.

"Hep-hep-hep! It's the brow of the infantry that counts in the end," he mused. "I liked that wall-eyed giant. He's all man!"

Then his living glance swept the heavens inquiringly. A speck in the blue, far away in the realms of atmospheric infinity, kept growing in size until it took the form of the wings with which man flies. The plane vplaned down with steady swiftness, till its racing shadow lay large over the landscape for a few seconds before it rose again with beautiful ease and precision.

"Really for you, Eitel!" Lanstron thought as he started back to the aeroplane station. "You belong in the corps. We shall not let you return to your regiment for a while. You've a cool head and you'd charge a church tower if that were the orders."

CHAPTER V.

A Sunday Morning Call.

As a boy, Arthur Lanstron had perceived in being an exception to the influences of both heredity and environment. Though his father and both grandfathers were officers who believed theirs to be the true gentleman's profession, he had preferred any kind of mechanical toy to arranging the most gayly painted tin soldiers in formation on the nursery floor; and he would rather read about the wonders of natural history and electricity than the campaigns of Napoleon and Frederick the Great and my Lord Nelson. Left to his own choice, he would miss the parade of the garrison for inspection by an excellency in order to ask questions of a man wiping the oil off his hands with cotton-waste, who was far more entertaining to him than the most spick-and-span ramrod of a sergeant.

Upon being told one day that he was to go to the military school the following autumn, he broke out in open rebellion.

"I don't want to go to the army!" he said.

"Why?" asked his father, thinking that when the boy had to give his reasons he would soon be argued out of the heresy.

"It's drilling a few hours a day, then nothing to do," Arthur replied. "All your work waits on war and you don't know that there will ever be any war. It waits on something nobody wants to happen. Now, if you manufacture something, why, you see wool come out cloth, steel come out an automobile. If you build a bridge you see it rising little by little. You're getting your results every day; you see your mistakes and your successes. You're making something, creating something; there's something going on all the while that isn't guesswork. I think that's what I want to say. You won't order me to be a soldier, will you?"

The father, loath to do this, called in the assistance of an able pleader then, Eugene Partow, lately become chief of staff of the Browns, who was an old friend of the Lanstron family. Partow turned the balance on the side of filial affection. He kept watch of the boy, but without favoring him with influence. Young Lanstron, who wanted to see results, had to earn them. He realized in practice the truth of Partow's saying that there was nothing he had ever learned but what could be of service to him as an officer.

Marshall Mitchell, 617S, Division St., Salisbury, Md., says: "You may continue to use the endorsement I gave about a year ago regarding Doan's Kidney Pills. I still take them occasionally and they always bring the best results. I never hesitate to give this remedy praise, for it has done me much good. My back bothered me a great deal and it was hard for me to stoop or straighten. I took a number of remedies but they did not seem to bring me much relief. Doan's Kidney Pills were just what I needed and it required only two boxes to remove the trouble."

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the State of Maryland was in its thirty-ninth annual session in Salisbury yesterday and the day before. The session was largely attended by the members of the organization throughout the state, and the convention was a success in every respect.

The first session opened on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock in Asbury M. E. Church with a devotional service, after which the president, Mrs. Mary A. Haslup, called the convention to order formally in a short address, in which she reviewed the work of the year and the prospects for the future of temperance in Maryland.

Jones; report of auditors, Mrs. Wm. M. Winks and Miss Busick; report of superintendent of literature, Miss Cathart; report of Y. P. L. Miss Frances Hetzler; report of L. T. L. Miss Carrie V. Ray.

The following topics were presented by specialists at the afternoon session: Sunday school work, Mrs. E. H. Wright; evangelistic work, Mrs. W. W. Thompson; medical temperance, Mrs. Annie M. The feature of the closing program of the session Thursday night was address by Rev. Don S. Colt, D. D., of Baltimore.

Delegates to the national convention meeting in Atlanta, Ga., in November, were elected, and Mrs. L. L. Warner, of Salisbury, was made delegate-at-large. This ended a very successful convention, and visiting members heartily expressed themselves as well pleased with the beautiful hospitality of the homes of Salisbury.

COURT NEWS TO DATE

Second Week's Sitting and the Cases Now Disposed of.

No. 2. Criminal presentation, State of Maryland vs. Wm. Penn Catlin, indicted for bastardy; trial by jury; verdict of jury, guilty; not yet sentenced by court. Geo. W. Bell and Curtis W. Long, attorneys for state; Samuel R. Douglass for defendant.

No. 5. Criminal presentation, State of Maryland vs. Joseph Darby; indicted for manslaughter; plea, guilty; not yet sentenced by court. Geo. W. Bell, attorney for state; Joseph L. Bailey, attorney for prisoner.

No. 26. Trials. Claude L. Powell vs. Elmer C. Williams; trial by jury; verdict of jury for plaintiff and assess the damages at $225.

No. 57. Trials. The Vance W. Miles Co. vs. Baltimore, Chesapeake & Atlantic Railway Co.; trial by jury; still on trial.

Several important cases have been disposed of and many others are continued to another term since last week.

Probably more interest was manifested by the public in the Jesse H. Bratten case than in any of the others. This case, which was related in this paper last week, was decided in favor of Mr. Bratten.

Following the Bratten case the court held a night session for the trial of James Dutton, a colored man, for an assault upon a white girl with intent to rape. This case held the court into the early hours of Saturday morning. The jury was out but a short time in finding the accused negro guilty, and on Saturday morning he was for the second time sentenced to be hanged. This case had been tried in Dorchester county last spring and sentence was passed there to hang Dutton, but he obtained a new trial on an appeal to the Court of Appeals. It is not generally believed that the negro will ever hang, owing to the fact that he failed of the purpose of his assault, but it is not probable that he will ever again see freedom.

On Monday the case of Arthur Leates was taken up and the prisoner was discharged, having already been in jail six months. He was charged with larceny and indicted last spring for breaking into the building of the Peninsula Bottling Works.

The State of Maryland at the instance and for the use of Edward W. Beathards vs. Jonathan E. Beathards, Elisha W. Tritt and Jos. L. Bailey, suit on guardian bond; verdict for plaintiff; represented by F. Grant Goslee and J. E. Ellegood, for $394.

On Tuesday the cases of the City of Salisbury against certain corporations for the collection of taxes on individual shares of stock in these corporations held by residents of the City of Salisbury came up in the argument of a demurrer filed by the attorneys for the corporations in which the corporations argued that the shares of stock had not been properly assessed. The court held for the defendant corporations that the shares had not been properly assessed against the shareholders and this is taken to indicate that in the opinion of the court further steps must be taken to complete the process of assessment before the corporations themselves will become liable to the city for the taxes. The several corporations concerned in this litigation will be guided by the court's decision in the one case now being tried which, we understand, is that of the Salisbury Brick Company. It is expected, however, that these cases will be settled beyond further litigation at the present term.

On Wednesday William Penn Catlin was tried for bastardy and a verdict of guilty was rendered by the jury.

The one remaining case in which there is considerable interest is that of Bessie Quinn Allen, for herself and her children, against Wm. B. Duncan, of Pocomoke City for damages on account of the killing of the husband of Mrs. Allen some two years ago. The case is set for today and a large number of witnesses will be heard. The work of the term will probably continue well into next week.

While there has been steady work here for the two weeks which has been very strenuous for many of the attorneys, and especially for the judges and jurymen, Judge Standford has cleared up the docket for Somerset county with the exception of a few cases and returned to assist here.

Harvest Home at Mardela M. E. Church.

Arrangements are being made for a "Big Rally and Harvest Home" at Mardela M. E. Church, Sunday, October 4th, with all day services as follows:

Sunday School at 9:30 a. m.; missionary sermon by the pastor at 10:30 a. m.; preaching at 3 p. m., by the Rev. George S. Allen; at 7:30 p. m., the Sunday School will render a special program consisting of music and recitations.

Special music at each service will be attractive, so come and bring your friends. Everybody welcome.

BUSY WITH REGISTRATION

STATE OUTLOOK FINE FIRST DISTRICT GOSSIP

All of the politicians of Maryland, regardless of party are just at present much more interested in the outcome of the general registration than any things else political.

Upon its results will depend the fall election, as no party can win unless its followers get their name on the election books. There is no disguising the fact that the Democrats have been more afraid of this new registration than have the Republicans—as a matter of fact, if it had not been for a "slip up" on the part of the Democratic leaders and managers of the last Legislature, there would have been no new registration this fall.

It so happened, however, that this important matter was entirely overlooked until the closing days of the session, and then a bill was introduced postponing it for two years, but too late, the Governor took the ground that a new registration was needed and therefore vetoed the bill postponing it, and it was too late to pass over his head.

It has been urged by the Democrats that the Republicans would have less trouble to get their vote to come out for registration because a fair part of it was colored and these thought so much of the privilege of voting that they would need but little urging, while the Democrats would have to work like Trojans to persuade the white vote in their party to get registered.

The tale will soon be told, as next week closes this work up, and then each party will know just where it is "at."

If the prophecy of the Republicans comes true and they succeed in making large gains in the registration, there is but little doubt but that will so encourage them as to make the fight in the state this fall much harder.

So far the registration in this county seems to be satisfactory to the Democrats, but next week will really tell the story, and like conditions exist in every county in the state.

As far the election of Senator John Walter Smith to the United States Senate is concerned, it looks as though he would have as big a victory in the election as he did in the primary. Both the Republicans have nominated candidates for this office, and strange to say, both of the men named were ardent supporters of Mr. Roosevelt in the last presidential campaign.

Here in the First Congressional District, it looks as though the two factions would unite on candidates for the vacant Congressional seat. If this be the fact, it looks as if a determined fight would be made to wrest this district from the Democrats.

Mr. Duer, of Somerset, the Republican nominee for the long term, has the reputation of being a "hustler," and backed, as he will be, by the united organization of his party, will probably make a game fight.

It looks as though he is leading a forlorn hope, as the chances of defeating the Democrats this year in the First District would seem to be slight indeed. As far as the short term is concerned, it is hard to see much chance for a successful fight against the Democrats being made. The Republicans have not made any nomination for this office, but will support the Bull Moose candidate, Col. Hodson, also of Somerset county. There is but little doubt but what he will receive hearty support from the leaders, but at the same time the colored and ignorant voters in the Republican party will not likely get far away from the "R" that they have been taught to vote by.

Death of Mrs. Straughn

On September 24, 1914, at her residence, Corner Gladstone and Summit avenues, Roland Park, Mrs. Roberta E. A. Straughn, wife of Rev. J. L. Straughn, aged 60 years. Mrs. Straughn was raised in this county and was the daughter of the late Capt. Wm. H. and Mary A. Acworth. Mr. and Mrs. Straughn had passed the 40th anniversary of their marriage, and up to a few years ago, when her health failed, cheerfully itinerated with him in his work. She was noted for her sympathy with the poor and the unfortunate. Her gentle manner drew to her side many friends. Besides her husband she leaves four children, Mrs. Clarence W. Jones, of Delmar; Dr. Wm. R. Straughn, president of Mansfield Normal School, of Pennsylvania; Miss M. Blanche Straughn and Mr. J. C. Straughn, Jr., an auditor of the Fidelity Trust & Deposit Company, of Baltimore. Interment took place at Parsons cemetery, Salisbury, Saturday, September 26th, attended by a large number of relatives and friends.

LA TENA'S WILD ANIMALS PLEASSED

Best Show That Has Visited City in Long Time; Usual Circus Stunts.

Colonel La Tena's wild animal circus has come and gone and it has left a good name behind it. It was one of the best seen here in a long time and did a fine business. It was a wild animal show, as advertised, and the way some of the denizens of the woods and jungle were made to perform by their trainers was well worth the price of admission.

Of course there were other wild animal acts, such as equestrian numbers, tight wire and trapeze artists, courtionists, trained ponies and seals, and the antics of a bunch of clever clowns, all of which went to make up an offering that pleased hundreds of patrons Saturday afternoon and evening. From Salem the circus went to Haverhill, where it will play today, while Newburyport will be visited tomorrow.

When the parade went through the streets of Salem Saturday morning a familiar face was noticed, that of Arthur F. Norris, former manager of the Salem theatre, now treasurer of the La Tena show. Arthur rode at the head of the parade in a buggy, and was kept bowing all the way along, in acknowledgement of greetings extended to him from the crowds, who numbered thousands all told. Mayor Hurley extended him the right hand of fellowship in Town House square, when the procession had to stop a moment while the formalities were going on. Both were applauded by the big crowd about that point.

Some of the feature acts of the La Tena show were big circus offerings, notably the work of the elephants.

Chief and Babe

Margaret and her lions, Walter Hager's bears and Captain Wesley's trained seals, Walter Allen, who handled the elephants, showed himself a skillful handler of animals, the elephants doing all sorts of stunts from standing on the fore and hind legs to playing musical instruments. His trained pony act was good also.

The Charles proved themselves clever and daring trapeze performers while the contortion act of the Powell family (mother, boy and girl) was "some" act. The Griggs horse and carriage number was a big circus stunt and got a fine hand, as it deserved. These people were with the Barnum & Bailey show for seven years. The wild animal acts of Margaret and her lions, and of Hager's and her bears, and of Hager's bears were A1 numbers, although many were scared that some thing might happen when the beasts snarled and showed their teeth. The tightrope walking and jumping stunts of the Powells and Charles were of a high class order, while the equestrienne work of Blanche Reed was a pleasing feature. The seals were very clever performers.

Following the conclusion of the show, the wild animals were fed in the other tent and some side show numbers given in the shape of Georgia minstrel show by band members: girl sword walker, cockatoo show, Egyptian dancers and other attractions. One of the lions in the menagerie tent is said to have killed four trainers. So can not be used other than for exhibition purposes.

Will exhibit at Salisbury Friday October 9.—Adv.

"Peg O' My Heart"

Fresh from the triumphs of other cities, where it has been playing to the capacity of the theatres, Oliver Morosco's production of "Peg O' My Heart", the comedy of youth, laughter and love, comes to Ulman's Grand Opera House for an engagement next Friday October 9th. Peg, the winsome little Irish girl, who, in real life is Rea Martin is a character that has strongly gripped the heart of our theatre-going public. It seems that all classes have opened their hearts to Peg, who is a sweet good natured, and decidedly human Irish lass, who the wit of her race. She is also philosophical, and full of quaint maxims, with a touch of melancholy sobering the brightness of her laugh.

"Peg O' My Heart" has proven conclusively that theatre-goers of all sections of the country can still laugh as heartily and sincerely at humor which is not coarse; that a story directly and sincerely told is more potent than any fantastic non-credible, for this romantic comedy has been playing to tremendous houses at New York where it recently closed its remarkable run of 604 consecutive performances, with Laurette Taylor in the principal role.

Associated with Miss Rea Martin, are the members of last season's southern cast, which comprises, Frederick Meads, Harry Calvert, George Mendelssohn, Raymond Brantley, Clara Sidney, Helen Hankell, George Claire and Kittie O'Connor. The management not only here but everywhere absolutely guarantee the full production and exceptional cast. Never has an attraction of higher standard visited this city.

Mrs. Amy Hardcastle Pattison, of Easton, leading field worker for the Just Government League on the Shore, was married on Saturday afternoon of last week to Johnson Gillam Ward, of New York.

LATEST NEWS FROM THE WAR ZONE

Continued progress by the allies at the western end of the battle line is claimed in French official reports.

The official announcement at Paris last night reported that a violent action in the region of Roye had resulted in success for the allies; that in the Argonne progress had been made at several new points, and that "the general situation remains satisfactory."

The British War Information Bureau has made it known that Indian troops were landed in France last Friday.

His Large and Growing Business—Now The W. F. Allen Company

Mr. W. F. Allen, the local nurseryman, has incorporated his extensive business, which in the future will be known as The W. F. Allen Company, of Salisbury, Md. The capital stock of the company is $50,000, which will be held by Mr. and Mrs. Allen and their children. The incorporation of this extensive business was due to its steady increase.

Mr. Allen's farms and trucking land cover a great many acres. He owns and operates several hundred acres of fine trucking land just outside the city limits of Salisbury, in addition to other farms in the county.

As a grower of strawberry plants Mr. Allen is known throughout the United States, as he has probably the most extensive business of this kind in the country. Mr. Allen is also widely known as a grower of fruits and truck.

Possible of Application.

An old woodsman was walking through a forest when he saw a large bear approaching him. Realizing his predicament, he exclaimed: "Oh Lord, be with me!" Still the bear came on, when the man again prayed: "Oh Lord, be on my side." Seeing the bear continue to approach, the woodsman, whipping out his knife, exclaimed: "Oh Lord, if you won't be on my side, just declare neutrality, an' I'll show you the goll-darned bear right you ever saw in your life."

Another Chance for Hubby.

Wise Precaution.

A certain politician desired a diplomatic appointment, says the Washington Star. A friend, in surprise, said to him: "But you don't even speak the language of the country?" "Well," replied the determined applicant, "a man isn't nearly so likely to make indiscreet remarks, if he has to get a lexicon and look up the meaning of every word he utters."

Magic for Rust Spots.

To remove rust spots on bathtubs and basins and discolorations in toilet basins and sinks apply muriatic acid with a mop. As soon as the discoloration is removed the acid should be thoroughly rinsed off with clear water. The acid works like magic; it is almost instantaneous in its effect and the labor of scrubbing is saved.

DAIRYMEN STRONGLY FAVOR USING IMPROVED STOCK

Their Association Urges Farmers To Secure Well-Bred Bulls and Offers Prizes For Superior Milk.

At a recent meeting of the State Dairyman's Association in Baltimore, a striking instance was given of "the sleep at the switch" attitude of our milk producers as far as the improvement of their herds is concerned. In 1910, Mr. S. M. Shoemaker made the offer of a pure-bred bull calf to the farmer whose cow would make the highest milk record in the State, no expense to be incurred therewith, and no restrictions except that the contest be supervised by the State Experiment Station. There was not an inquiry—not one! Sixty days after making this offer, Mr. Shoemaker priced this same bull to a buyer at $800 and promptly sold it. Last there should be question as to this offer being widely enough advertised, it should be added that the bull calf, together with its pedigree and a large placard stating the simple conditions of the prize were on exhibition during Maryland Week of that year for all visitors at the Armory to see!

A GOOD SIRE.

Notwithstanding this example, the directors of the Dairyman's Association have offered generous prizes for contestants in a number of dairy products.

TAX DITCH NOTICE.

The proposed ditch to commence at the Gordy mill pond on the north side thereof, on land of Zeno Tingle, and run through the lands of said Zeno Tingle, W. L. Morris, J. M. Morris, Clayton C. Parker and others and to the land of Josiah Hosmier and others. By order of the County Commissioners of Wicomico County.

The Association also endorsed the offer of the State Experiment Station to place several Guernsey and Ayrshire Bull Calves as herd sires on selected farms, free of cost, in an effort to improve the type of dairy animals and to encourage the breeding of registered dairy cows. Full information regarding this service may be secured from the Secretary of the Association at College Park.

Foolish Question.

A man charged at the Liverpool (Eng.) police court with fighting stated that the prosecutor hit him first on the jaw. "Did you hit him first?" asked the stipendiary. "No, sir," was the reply. "If I had hit him first he would have been in the hospital, not me."

VOTING A DUTY

It may not be amiss to again call the attention of all voters to the fact that it is necessary for EVERY man to get registered this fall if he wants to participate in the coming November election, at which we elect a United States Senator and a Congressman to represent the First Maryland District.

The last opportunity to do this will be on Tuesday and Wednesday of the coming week—October 6th and 7th. Every man who has not already availed himself of the opportunity should not fail to go to the registration office in his district and have his name placed on the poll books one of these days.

The SALISBURY ADVERTISER is a strong believer in the policies and principles of the Democratic party, and to some it may seem strange that it is urging ALL, without distinction as to party affiliations, to get registered.

Looked at in its proper light, however, it will be seen that this is the strongest proof of our belief in the merits of the cause, for this fact in itself is enough evidence of our faith; since we are willing that the whole body of voters should pass upon the questions involved, and have not the slightest fear for the result.

But throwing aside all partisanship, and dealing with the question of voting from the broader and better viewpoint of the true interest of our country, we can not help but feel that "voting" is not only a right and privilege, but a solemn duty which no man has the moral right to dodge or neglect.

We have no quarrel with any man, if he differs with us, as long as he is conscientious, but on the contrary, have the highest regard for any man who stands upon his convictions.

He who studies a question and then votes according to his best judgment, is a better man and a truer citizen than he who is influenced by other motives, be they heredity or environment; habit or policy; cowardice or boss dictation; avarice or prejudice.

Nor, as far as the individual himself is concerned, does it alter the case if his vote be on right or wrong side.

It may be put down as an axiom or general principle that he who votes on any other ground than that of principle and conviction, is either indifferent and therefore unworthy of the privilege, ignorant or actuated by avarice, prejudice or cowardice.

If the party which we support can not stand on its own merits, then it is unworthy to live. There is no honor or glory in a victory won by appeals to heredity, custom, avarice or prejudice. "Politics" may be "politics," and so is right, right, and wrong, wrong, and it is but an easy conscience that can excuse a wrongful act on the grounds that it is "politics."

Right and wrong, as we understand them, are not confined to any particular field of life, but are alike applicable to every phase of activity, and the sooner the "workers," political beneficiaries, and voters of all parties, recognize that they are as much responsible for their political acts as they are for their Sunday school conduct, the better it will be for all concerned.

Let every man who has not already registered do so next week, and then let each and every one settle down to study the situation, and let us hope that intelligence and conviction will be the guiding forces of our actions next November.

TAKING CARE OF SEED

PREPARE FOR A PROFITABLE CORN CROP NEXT YEAR.

Preference Should Be Given to Plants That Have Produced Most Heavily — Short, Thick Stalks Are Most Desirable.

As soon as the crop ripens, go through the field with seed-picking bags and husk the ears from the stalks that have produced the most corn without having any special advantages, such as space, moisture, or fertility. Avoid the large ears on stalks standing singly with an unusual amount of space around them. Preference should be given the plants that have produced most heavily in competition with a full stand of less productive plants.

In all localities the inherent tendency of the plant to produce heavily of sound, dry, shelled corn is of most importance.

Late-maturing plants with ears which are heavy because of an excessive amount of sap should be ignored. Sapiness greatly increases the weight and is likely to destroy the quality.

In the central and southern states, all other things being equal, short, thick stalks are preferable. Short stalks are not so easily blown down and permit thicker planting. Thick stalks are not so easily broken down and in general are more productive than slender ones. Seed should be taken from stalks that have no suckers.

The same day seed corn is gathered the husked ears should be put in a dry place where there is free circulation of air, and placed in such a manner that the ears do not touch each other. This is the only safe procedure. Frequently good seed corn is ruined because it is thought to be dry enough when gathered and the above precaution unnecessary. Seed corn in every locality, no matter how dry the autumn, will be benefited by drying as suggested. If left in the husk long after ripening, it may sprout or mildew during warm wet weather or become infested with weevils.

The vitality of seed is often reduced by leaving it in a sack or in a pile for even a day after gathering. During warm weather, with some moisture in the cob, the ears heat in a remarkably short time.

Use binder twine for stringing the ears. Binder twine will support 15 or 20 ears on a string. Ordinarily the best place to hang these strings of ears is in an open shed or loft. Permanent seed racks are more convenient.

Spared Listeners and Himself.
For humor, combined with brevity, it would not be easy to rival the French cleric, who, on the festival of St. James, was called upon to pronounce a panegyric on the saint. "My brethren," he said, "twelve months ago I preached a eulogy on the eminent apostle whose festival you celebrate today. As I doubt not, you were all very attentive to me, and as I have not learned anything new of him, I have nothing to add to what I said at the time."

Smile Right.
When in doubt—smile. It is a safe play at almost any stage of life's game. But be sure it's the right kind of a smile—not the fawning smile, not the smile of fear which is better described as a grin, but the smile which says that the world is a pretty good sort of a place if you don't take it too seriously—the smile that says: "Come on in, the joke's a good one."—Pictorial Review.

New Market for Ivory.
Although in recent years the ivory imported into London has decreased, the falling off has been caused by a new market having been created by the opening up of the Congo free state. The ivory coming from that region is now sold in Antwerp, so that when the quantities sent to both markets are put together the total imports actually show an increase.

Died as He Lived.
"Easeman is gone, poor chap. Died without a struggle." "Just like Easeman; he never was known to exert himself in anything."

Natural Deduction.
"Mamma," queried small Edna the first time she saw a multicolored parrot, "was that chicken hatched from an Easter egg?"

Ethetic.
The Customer—"Oh, but haven't you any other tint in lettuce than this? It won't go with my new blue salad dish a bit!"—Sketch.

As to Fields.
Many a man who is fooling away his time in the literary field might be useful in a potato field.

Easy Way Out of It.
"We know a stenographer," says the Peoria Journal, "who refuses to write letters on pale blue stationery because it doesn't agree with her complexion." In that case, if she is a valuable stenographer, it would be a simple matter for the firm to go to the drug store and buy her a complexion to match the paper.—Toledo Blade.

Late Turkeys.
Late turkeys are really easier raised than early, but more often lost. Late turkeys need all the chance that can be given them, yet they are generally left to roam and take care of themselves. They should be isolated from other poultry at first, and started with all the care given the first hatches. They should be permitted to roost outside and far away from poultry buildings and yards, and should be given free range; but they should be fed regularly and generously, and should be frequently dusted with insect powder to prevent lice.

How out of place it looked beside the modern automobiles whirling all about it. It was a relic of a former age and typifies the contrast between the then and now. ## FARMER'S WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

A Weak, Nervous Sufferer Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Kasota, Minn.—"I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than anything else, and I had the best physician here. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now I feel like a different person. I believe there is nothing like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weak women and young girls, and I would be glad if I could influence anyone to try the medicine, for I know it will do all and much more than it is claimed to do."—Mrs. CLARA FRANKS, R. F. D. No. 1, Maplecrest Farm, Kasota, Minn.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should be convinced of the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health by the many genuine and truthful testimonials we are constantly publishing in the newspapers.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidentially), Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Pollux Duty Left to Burghers. In the eighteenth century the whole safety and order of Glasgow, Scotland, were intrusted to the unpaid and reluctant burghers. Every citizen who was between the years of eighteen and sixty, and paid a yearly rent amounting to $15, had to take his turn at guarding the city. "On touch of drum," says a writer, "the gentleman was at his post at ten at night, and stroked with weary tread and yawning gait along the Trovigate and High streets, and up the pitch dark lanes, of winter nights till four in the morning. After that hour the city was without a police."

Better Than Populists. If at any time you have a gathered finger or poisoned hand, take a cabbage leaf, roll it out with a bottle until the juice comes, and tie it on the affected part. It will draw and cleanse it far better than a poultice.

LABOR'S RESPONSIBILITY. I believe in workmen's compensation. I believe in the eight hour day for men in continuous industries and for women and children everywhere and eventually for all workers in all industries. I believe in social insurance. I believe in minimum wage legislation for those industries in which labor is not itself in a position to enforce fair living conditions. I believe in unions. I believe that labor organizations have been one of the greatest factors in improving the material and moral conditions of the wage earner and in raising the standard of industrial citizenship. The union is as necessary an outgrowth of our modern industrial system as is the corporation. The wise and far-sighted employer will recognize this fact. He will appreciate that the men in the employ of a great corporation have the right of collective bargaining. But the union must accept the responsibility that comes with power. It must recognize its obligation to the industry and to the community as a whole. It must be judged by its conduct precisely as a corporation is judged by its conduct. It must do its utmost to promote the efficiency of its members, for unless the business is increasingly productive there will be no sufficient reward for anybody, no profit to the shareholders, no adequate wage for the working man, no proper service to the public.—Theodore Roosevelt.

RIMED QUOTATIONS. How long we live, not years, but actions tell; —Watkins. That man lives twice who lives the first life well. —Herrick. Make, then, while yet we may, your God your friend —William Mason. Whom Christians worship, yet not comprehend. —Hill. The trust that's given guard, and to yourself be just. —Dana. For live we how we may, yet die we must. —Shakespeare.

WORDS OF THE WISE. Slavery is also as ancient as war, and war is human nature. —Voltaire. It is most true that a natural and secret hatred and aversion toward society in any man hath somewhat of the savage beast. —Bacon. The gain which is made at the expense of reputation should rather be set down as a loss. —Latin Proverb. Truth never was indebted to a lie. —Young. The shoemaker makes a good shoe because he makes nothing else. —Emerson.

NOT BY ONE FALL. Not by one fall or many be we stayed. If fails await on yonder fighting field; Too great the issue that we tamely yield. Or count the cost until the cost is paid. Right may be balked and for awhile delayed. Truth in a mist of falsehood be concealed. But laws divine are not to be repented. Nor love divine forever disobeyed. Not by one fall! But if the triumph go To doubt and fallacy, delusion break. If for awhile defeated, we shall know The time will come for highest truth to speak. Because the high sees farther than the low. And guidance must be from the mountain peak. —Arthur L. Salmon in Churchman.

SAID OF WIT. The next best thing to being witty oneself is to be able to quote another's wit. —Bovee. He must be a dull fellow indeed whom neither love, malice nor necessity can inspire with wit. —De la Bruyere. Don't put too fine a point to your wit for fear it should get blunted. —Cervantes. I am a fool, I know it, and yet, God help me, I'm poor enough to be a wit. —Congreve. Wit is the salt of conversation, not the food. —Hallitt.

My Duty. There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbors good. One person I have made good: Myself. But my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy—if I may. —Robert Louis Stevenson. In Chicago. Maude—"Harrist can read her husband like a book." Marie—"He is her third volume, isn't he?"

In erecting a monument, one should remember that it is not a mere mass of stone, but a memorial of honor that is to perpetuate the memory of the departed. Therefore, select the material to be had. Look to its beauty, design, and the quality of material. Many years in the monument business has taught us that good monuments cannot be made at cut prices, but it has also taught us how to make the best monument at the lowest possible price. The bill alleges that the plaintiff was married to the defendant about seven years ago in the State of Delaware, and have been residing together in the State of Maryland for more than two years past, until recently when the defendant left the plaintiff and is reported to be now in the State

The Idealist. The idealist sees the things of earth as they are, but also as they ought to be. He dreams, and longs to see his dreams realized. In our early years we are all idealists. Youth is not daunted by even the most impossible task. It is ready to pay the price. We smile at the enthusiasm of youth, but the tragedy of age is possible only when that enthusiasm is gone. NEWS OF THE SCHOOLS.

Organization About Completed—Some Who Are Going Away.

When the new wing of the Wicomico County High School building is completed, which will be some time during the winter, it will still be insufficient for the proper accommodation of the work of the school. Undoubtedly the School Board will be compelled to build the proposed east wing of the building much sooner than has been planned. Whether this can be done during the next summer is doubtful, for the county's funds for school purposes are barely sufficient to meet the requirements of the work that is being carried on. Besides, there are demands for better school houses in other parts of the county.

For at least half the present school year a large number of pupils of the higher grades which ought to be housed with the high school will have to go to other quarters.

The literary societies of Wicomico High School held their first meeting on Friday. There are four societies this year. In addition to the Longfellow and the Bryant, the two which have existed for a number of years, are the Whittier, which was organized two years ago, and the Sidney Lanier, which was organized this year.

The societies all opened with very interesting programs, and promise good work for the coming year.

The literary societies of the High School have organized and their officers until January will be as follows:

Longfellow Society—Rexford A. Taylor, president; John W. Perry, vice president; Sydney Johnson, secretary; Carroll Bounds, treasurer; executive committee, Stella Ward, Earl Downing, Helen Bailey, Mildred Dolby.

Bryant Society—Seth Taylor, president; Cynthia Dryden, vice president;

Virginia Johnson, secretary; Wm. Ingersoll, treasurer; executive committee, Martha Jones, Alice Elliott, Denwood Mitchell, Albert Parker.

Whittier Society—Wilton Fooks, president; Joseph Rawson, vice president; William Johnson, secretary; George Lowe, treasurer; executive committee, Sara Moore, Elsie Tomlinson, Joseph Rawson, Addie Harris.

Lanier Society—Thomas Mitchell, president; Helen Duffy, vice president; Julia Potts, secretary; Edgar Phillips, treasurer; executive committee, Preston Short, Helen Duffy, Julia Potts, Susie Whyland.

Information gathered at the High School as to the whereabouts of the members of the graduating class of 1914 is interesting as showing that a very large number of the members of that class are still further pursuing their studies in institutions of higher learning.

Miss Beulah Harris and Mr. Paul Warner won the four-years' scholarship to the Western Maryland College in a competitive examination held by Supt. Holloway.

Mr. Hubert Drummond has received a scholarship from the University of Virginia. This is the first time the Wicomico High School has been accredited by a Southern university.

Messrs. Marion Cox and Fred Ward have been received at St. John's College and will be entered in the sophomore class.

Mr. Vaughn Gray, son of George Gray, and Mr. Vaughn Richardson, son of Mr. Sewell Richardson, both of this city, entered the freshman class at Delaware College.

Mr. Nevins Todd will enter the Tome Institute to take a course admitting him to the Boston School of Technology.

Mr. Eugene Todd entered the Pearce Business College at Philadelphia.

Mr. Sheldon Jones entered the Randolph-Macon College, of Virginia, and Mr. William Lowe entered the Pitt School, of New Jersey.

Misses Margaret Holloway and Margaret Morris, Messrs. John Carlson and Asbury Holloway, all of the commercial course, have engaged in commercial work since their graduation.

Miss Margaret Walls is attending a business college, and Mr. Roland Kendall is taking a post-graduate course in the commercial department of the Wicomico High School.

Clifford Ward and Burton Gordy have entered the Ohio State University at Columbus. Mr. Ward will make law his profession; Mr. Gordy will make agriculture his specialty.

Misses Helen Burton, Marian Messick, E. May Parker, Edna Wilkins, Mildred Walker, Myrtle Bradley and Edna Mae Wright have been appointed to schools in Wicomico county.

The senior class is now the largest ever in Wicomico High School, having 48 members. The officers of the class are as follows: President, Rex Taylor; vice president, Thos. Mitchell, Jr.; secretary, Sara Moore; treasurer, Welton Fooks.

The foot ball squad has a full schedule this season and has quite a number of interesting games listed. The squad has been practicing for the past three weeks and an exciting game is expected today, when our team will meet the Laurel team.

Mr. Vaughn Richardson, who was captain of the undefeated team of last season is captain of this season, and Mr. Welton Fooks is manager. Such a team needs encouragement, and everyone interested in athletics should be present at the first game. Come out and show the boys you appreciate their efforts. The home games will take place on the athletic grounds in South Salisbury.

The work on the new wing being built to the high school is being rushed through. It is expected that this will be completed by Christmas. Then

A Hot Bath.

How would you like to take a bath in liquid heated to a temperature of 1500 degrees F.? The metal from which the flues of THE SOUTH BEND MALLEABLE RANGE is made is given a bath in Aluminum. All heated to the above temperature. And the bath does the metal a lot of good, for forever after it will resist rust and corrosion greater than any other metal known in range construction.

Perhaps you are asking: Of what interest is this information? It means a whole lot to you if you are fortunate enough to have a home, for every home must have a range on which to cook the meals. Ever since the first range was made range manufacturers and buyers have been looking for a metal that will best resist rust and corrosion from which to make the, inside flues. Now we have it, and the process by which it is made is patented. The makers of SOUTH BEND MALLEABLE RANGE were wise and fortunate enough to obtain the exclusive right to use it for insulating the flues of Malleable Ranges.

There is an exhibition of this range all next week at the store of L. W. Gunby Co. You had better go and see it.

HOPE OF CIVILIZATION.

Today the welfare of the world is in the hands of the American worker. Today civilization's sole hope lies in the spirit and energy of those who labor in America's industries. Today the manhood of America guards the gates of peace to keep the world from famine and to preserve for all mankind the accumulated achievements of centuries of endeavor. With Europe plunged into bloody strife, with its manhood removed from useful production, its intelligence devoted to destruction and its farms and industries lying idle, the burden of human progress at this time rests upon the men and women of America. It is a time that should call forth the best in every American citizen. It is a time for the people of America to stand shoulder to shoulder. It is a time for every class to forget petty differences and to unite to meet the great emergency and the greater responsibility confronting the nation. Governor Glynn of New York at Labor Convention.

FROM THE CLASSICS.

Can any one find out in what condition his body will be? I do not say a year hence, but this evening.—Cicero.

Nothing is more annoying than a low man raised to a high position.—Claudianus.

If matters go on badly now they will not always be so.—Horace.

Our advantages fly away without aid. Pluck the flower.—Ovid.

The plant which is often transplanted does not prosper.—Seneca.

Bodies are slow of growth, but are rapid in their dissolution.—Tacitus.

THE MAN HE KILLED.

Had he and I but met
By some old ancient inn,
We should have sent us down to wet.

Right many a nipperkin.

But ranged as infantry
And staring face to face,
I shot at him, as he at me,
And killed him in his place.

I shot him dead because—
Because he was my foe,
Just so: my foe, of course, he was;

That's clear enough, although
He thought he'd 'list, perhaps,
Offhand like—just as I—
Was out of 'work—had sold his trans—
No other reason why.

Yes; quiet and curious war! I
You shoot a fellow down You'd treat if met where any bar is Or help to half a crown.
—Thomas Hardy.

THOUGHTS ON YOUTH.

Youth is to all the glad season of life, but often only by what it hopes, not by what it attains or what it escapes.—Carlyle.

The morning of life is like the dawn of day, full of energy, of imagery and harmony.—Macaulay.

As I approve of a youth that has something of the old man in him, so I am no less pleased with an old man that has something of the youth. He that follows this rule may be old in body, but can never be so in mind.—Cicero.

The foreground of human life is the only part of it which we can examine with real exactness.—Froude.

There is a feeling of eternity in youth which makes amends for everything. To be young is to be as one of the immortals.—Hassitt.

RIMED QUOTATIONS.

Think not ambition wise because 'tis grave.
—Sir William Davenant.
The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

What is ambition? 'Tis a glorious cheat.
—Willis.

Only destructive to the brave and great.
—Addison.

What's all the gaudy glitter of a crown?
—Dryden.

The way to bliss lies not on beds of down.
—Francis Quarles.

THE MARSEILLAISE.

Ye sons of freedom, wake to glory!
Hark, hark! What myriads
Did you rise!

Your children, wives and granddames hoary,
Behold their tears and hear their cries.

Shall hateful tyrants, mischief breeding,
With hireling hosts, a ruffian band,

Affright and desolate the land,
While peace and liberty lie bleeding?

To arms! To arms, ye brave!
The avenging sword un-sheath!

March on, march on! All hearts resolved
On victory or death.

O Liberty, can man resign thee
Once having felt thy generous flame?

Can dungeons, bolts or bars confine thee
Or whips thy noble spirit tame?

Too long the world has wept, weaving
That falsehood's dagger tyrants wield.

But freedom is our sword and shield.
And all their arts are unavailing.

To arms! To arms, ye brave!

"Peruna Cured Me

MR. ROBERT FOWLER,
Of Okarche, Oklahoma.

Mr. Robert Fowler, Okarche, Oklahoma, writes:

"To any sufferer of catarrh of the stomach, I am glad to tell my friends or sufferers of catarrh that seventeen years ago I was past work of any kind, due to stomach troubles. I tried almost every known remedy without any results.

"Finally I tried Peruna, and am happy to say I was benefited by the first bottle, and after using a full treatment I was entirely cured.

"I am now seventy years old, and am in good health, due to always having Peruna at my command. I would not think of going away from home for any length of time without taking a bottle of Peruna along for emergency.

"You see at liberty to use my picture and testimony if you think it will help any one who has stomach

Infection and Insect Bites Dangerous

Misquitoes, flies and other insects, which breed quickly in garbage piles, time they bite you, they inject poison into your system, from which some diseases may result. Get a bottle of Solan's Lindiment. It is antiseptic and a few drops will neutralize the infection caused by insect bites or rusty nails. Solan's Lin-

THE LAST SHOT

COPYRIGHT, 1914, BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

By FREDERICK PALMER

mother's joking reference about her girlish resolution not to marry a soldier often recurred to him. There, he sometimes thought, was the real obstacle to his great desire.

When he awoke from the plane he thrust his left hand into his blouse pocket. He always carried it there, as if it were literally sewn in place. In moments of emotion the scarred nerves would twitch as the telltale of his sensitiveness; and this was something he would conceal from others no matter how conscious he was of it himself. He found the Galland veranda deserted. In response to his ring a maid came to the open door. Her face was sad, with a beauty that had prematurely faded. But it lighted pleasantly in recognition. Her hair was thick and tawny, lying low over the brows; her eyes were a softly luminous brown and her full lips sensitive and yielding. Lanstron, an intimate of the Galland household, knew her story well and the part that Marta had played in it.

Some four years previously, when a baby was in prospect for Minna, who wore no wedding ring, Mrs. Galland had been inclined to send the maid to an institution, "where they will take good care of her, my dear. That's what such institutions are for. It is quite scandalous for her and for us—never happened in our family before!"

Marta arched her eyebrows. "We don't know!" she exclaimed softly. "How can you think such a thing, let alone saying it—you, a Galland!" her mother gasped in indignation.

"That is, if we go far back," said Marta. "At all events, we have no precedent, so let's establish one by keeping her."

"But for her own sake! She will have to live with her shame!" Mrs. Galland objected. "Let her begin afresh in the city. We shall give her a good recommendation, for she is really an excellent servant. Yes, she will readily find a place among strangers."

"Still, she doesn't want to go, and it would be cruel to send her away."

"Cruel! Why, Marta, do you think I would be cruel? Oh, very well, then we will let her stay!"

"Both are away at church. Mrs. Galland ought to be here any minute, but Miss Galland will be later because of her children's class," said Minna. "Will you wait on the veranda?"

He was saying that he would stroll in the garden when childish footsteps were heard in the hall, and after a curly head had nestled against a mother's skirts its owner, reminding of the importance of manners in the world where the stork had left her, made a curtsy. Lanstron shook a small hand which must have lately been on intimate terms with sugar or jam.

"How do you do, flying soldier man?" chirruped Clarissa Eileen. It was evident that she held Lanstron in high favor.

"Let me hear you say your name," said Lanstron.

Clarissa Eileen was triumphant. She had been waiting for days with the revelation which she should make that old request. Now she enunciated it with every vowel and consonant correctly and proudly uttered; indeed, she repeated it four or five times in proof of complete mastery.

"A pretty name. I've often wondered how you came to give it to her," said Lanstron to Minna.

"You do like it!" exclaimed Minna with girlish eagerness. "I gave her the most beautiful name I could think of because—she laid her hand caressingly on the child's head and a madonna-like radiance stole into her face—because she might at least have a beautiful name when—the dull blaze of a recollection now burning in her eyes—when there wasn't much prospect of many beautiful things coming into her life; though I know, of course, that the world thinks she ought to be called Meggie."

Proceeding leisurely along the main path of the first terrace, Lanstron followed it past the rear of the house to the old tower. Long ago the moat that surrounded the castle had been filled in.

The green of rows of grape vines lay against the background of a mat of ivy on the ancient stone walls, which had been cut away from the loopholes set with window glass. The door was open, showing a room that had been closed in by a ceiling of boards from the walls to the circular stairway that ran aloft from the dungeons. On a floor of flags were cheap rugs. A number of seed and nursery catalogues were piled on a round table covered with a brown cloth.

"Hello!" Lanstron called softly. "Hello!" he called louder and yet louder.

Receiving no answer, he retraced his steps and seated himself on the second terrace in a secluded spot in the shadow of the first terrace wall, where he could see anyone coming up the main flight of steps from the road. When Marta walked she usually came from town by that way. At length the sound of a slow step from another direction broke on his ear. Some one was approaching along the path that ran at his feet. Around the corner of the wall, in his workman's Sunday clothes of black, but wearing his old straw hat, appeared Feller, the gardener. He paused to examine a rose bush and Lanstron regarded him thoughtfully.

As he turned away he looked up, and a glance of definite and unfaltering recognition was exchanged between the two men. They had the garden to themselves.

"Gustave!" Lanstron exclaimed under his breath.

"Lanny!" exclaimed the gardener, turning over a branch of the rose bush. He seemed unwilling to risk talking openly with Lanstron.

"You look the good workman in his Sunday best to a T!" said Lanstron. "Being stone-deaf," returned Feller, with a trace of drollery in his voice, "I hear very well—at times. Tell me—his whipler was quivering with eagerness—'shall we fight? Shall we fight?'"

"We are nearer to it than we have ever been in our time," Lanstron replied. The hat still shaded Feller's face, his stoop was unchanged, but the branch in his hand shook.

"Honest?" he exclaimed. "Oh, the chance of it! The chance of it!" "Gustave!" Lanstron's voice, still low, came in a gust of sympathy, and the pocket which concealed his hand gave a nervous twitch as if it held something alive and distinct from his own being. "The trial wears on your do you want to go?"

"No!" Feller shot back irritably. "No!" he repeated resolutely. "I don't want to go! I mean to be game—I!" He shifted his gaze from the bush which he still pretended to examine and suddenly broke off with: "Miss Galland is coming!"

Lanstron started toward the steps that Marta was ascending. She moved leisurely, yet with a certain springy energy that suggested that she might have come on the run without being out of breath or seeming to have made an effort.

"Hello, stranger!" she called as she saw him, and quickened her pace. "Hello, pedagogue!" he responded. As they shook hands they swung their arms back and forth like a pair of romping children for a moment.

"We had a grand session of the school this morning, the largest class ever!" she said. "And the points we scored off you soldiers! You'll find disengagement already in progress when you return to headquarters. We're irresistible, or at least," she added, with a flash of intensity, "we're going to be some day."

"So you put on your war-paint!" "It must be the pollen from the hydrangeas!" She flicked her handkerchief from her belt and passed it to him. "Show that you know how to be useful!"

He performed the task with deliberate care. "Heavens! You even have some on your ear and some on your hair; but I'll leave it on your hair; it's rather becoming. There you are!" he concluded. "Oh my hair, too!"

"Very well. I always obey orders." "I oughtn't to have asked you to do it at all!" she exclaimed with a sudden change of manner as they started up to the house. "But a habit of friendship, a habit of liking to believe in one's friends, was uppermost. I forgot. I oughtn't even to have shaken hands with you!"

"Marta! What now, Marta?" he asked.

He had known her in reproach, in anger, in laughing mockery, in militant seriousness, but never before like this. The pain and indignation in her eyes came not from the sheer hurt of a wound but from the hurt of its source. It was as if he had learned by the signal of its loss that he had a deeper hold on her than he had realized.

"Yes, I have a bone to pick with you," she said, recovering a grim sort of fellowship. "A big bone! If you're half a friend you'll give me the very marrow of it."

"I am ready!" he answered more patently than philosophically.

"There's not time now; after luncheon, when mother is taking her nap," she concluded as they came to the last step and saw Mrs. Galland on the veranda.

After luncheon Mrs. Galland kept battling with her nod, until nature was victorious and she fell fast asleep. Marta, grown restless with impatience, suggested to Lanstron that they stroll in the garden, and they took the path past the house toward the castle tower, stopping in an arbor with high hedges on either side around a statue of Mercury.

"Now!" exclaimed Marta narrowly. "It was you, Lanny, who recommended Feller to us as a gardener, competent though deaf! I have proved him to be a man of most sensitive hearing. I didn't let him know that he was discovered. You brought him here—you, Lanny, you are the one to explain."

"True, he is not deaf!" Lanstron replied. "He is a spy?" she asked.

"Yes, a spy. You can put things in a bright light, Marta! He found words coming with difficulty in face of the pain and disillusion of her set look.

"Using some man as a pawn; setting him as a spy in the garden where you have been the welcome friend!" she exclaimed. "A spy on what—on my mother, on Minna, on me, on the flowers, as a part of this monstrous game of trickery and lies that you are playing?"

"There was no trap of anger in her tone. It was that of one mortally hurt. Anger would have been easier to bear than the measuring, penetrating wear that found him guilty of such a horrible part. Those eyes would have confused Partow himself with the steady, welling intensity of their gaze. She did not see how his left hand was switching and how he stilled its movement by pressing it against the bench.

"You will take Feller with you when you go!" she said, rising.

Lanstron dropped his head in a kind of shaking throbb of his whole body and raised a face white with appeal.

"Marta!" He was speaking to a profile, very sensitive and yet like ivory. "I've no excuse for such an abuse of hospitality except the obsession of a loathsome work that some man must do and I was set to do. My God, Marta! I cease to be natural and human. I am a machine. I keep thinking, what if war comes and some error of mine let the enemy know where to strike the blow of victory; or if there were information I might have gained and failed to gain that would have given us the victory—if, because I had not done my part, thousands of lives of our soldiers were sacrificed needlessly!"

At that she turned on him quickly, her face softening. "You do think of that—the lives?" "Yes, why shouldn't I?" "Of those on your side!" she exclaimed, turning away.

"Yes, of those first," he replied. "And, Marta, I did not tell you why Feller was here because he did not want me to."

The couple are now on a trip to the north visiting New York, Lake George, Boston and other points. They will make their home in Seaford.

Grier-Wingate Marriage.

Mr. Calvin Grier and Miss Gladys Wingate were quietly married Saturday evening at 9 o'clock at St. Peter's rectory by the Rev. David Howard. Only a few members of the immediate families witnessed the ceremony. A reception followed at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Grier. The bride is a daughter of the late Albert Wingate, of White Haven, and has been employed in the office of the Home Gas Co. The groom is connected with the firm of F. A. Grier and Son, machinists and foundrymen.

YORK FIREMEN IN SALISBURY

They Bring a Big Band and Get a Fine Banquet.

On Wednesday Salisbury was host to the Volunteer Firemen's excursion from York, Pa. York and its environs make a city of about 60,000 people and it is one of the few large cities in the country still having volunteer fire departments.

Some of these companies in York, and there are several, are quite ancient, having been organized early in the last century, but they are thoroughly up to date and well equipped and make a splendid fire fighting force.

Seventy members of the York company arrived from Norfolk, Va., where they had been entertained by the volunteer firemen of that city.

They were met at the train by the citizens' committee composed of ex-Mayor B. Frank Kennerly, Charles R. Diharoon, Fred P. Adkins, Graham Gunby, John D. Williams, Walter B. Miller, Jesse D. Erice, Robert D. Grier, Marion V. Brewington, Marion A. Humphreys, Captain S. R. Douglas, L. Aswood Bennett, William M. Cooper, ex-Mayor Charles E. Harper, Dr. John M. Toulson, William J. Packson, F. Leonard Wallen, the Rev. T. E. Martindale and the members of the local fire department.

The visitors were escorted to the armory building, headed by a brass band, autos with the citizens' committee, after which Senator Jesse D. Price delivered the address of welcome to the visitors and presented the keys of the city.

During the afternoon automobiles were provided by the citizens and the visitors were taken through the city and over the state highways.

The visitors left Thursday and will stop off at Wilmington, Del., prior to their return home, after spending 10 days visiting the volunteer fire companies on the middle Atlantic seaboard.

York is a splendid example of the volunteer firemen's organization when well supported. The visit of these men has suggested that a similar trip for our Salisbury firemen would be a very handsome and profitable investment for this city.

At The Auditorium

By a special arrangement with the Western Union Telegraph Company direct wires from the ball parks have been secured and will be connected in Green's Auditorium where the World's Series games each day will be displayed from the stage on an especially constructed electric score board, showing the diamond, lineup and positions of the players. Every movement and play is flashed on the board the instant it is made, thus enabling the spectators to follow the game as though you were seated in the grand stand at the ball park.

Join the "fans" at Green's Auditorium when the championship battle begins. Games called at 2.30 p. m.

WESTERNERS TO ADVISE

Movement Back To Farm—Representatives On Shore.

Six men representing a score and more of persons in Illinois, Michigan and Ohio, who have sent them to the South to inspect lands for individual farms to be bought by their advice on their return, started on a tour of the Shore last Wednesday. During last week they inspected farms in several Virginia counties. One of the gentlemen reported a formidable back-to-the-farm movement throughout the towns and cities of the Middle West, where many moderate salaried employes of railroads, street railways, factories, etc., are returning to the rural districts from which they came.

One of the party is the owner of large greenhouses. He thinks that the prolonged warm season in this part of the country will prove a better place to grow vegetables under glass than in Michigan. Another is the son of an owner of an 800-acre tract in Illinois. He finds, however, that in Maryland and Virginia there are as many warm months as there are cold months on his father's farm.

These men are after individual farms, but several other parties now on their way to this state are coming to investigate a new scheme in farming, a plan of farming through a corporation, which has been worked out in all detail. Its object is to bring the "white collar" man back to the farm and practically assure his success in the venture, a practical solution of the back-to-the-farm movement.

It is for the clerk and mechanic and other employe who has reached his salary limit, is no longer young, has a family and wants to be his own boss and have prospects of earning something to save up.

Under guidance of a director, a group of about 60 men from one territory or city who want a 100-acre farm of their own will be organized. Under the advice of the director a tract of about 6,000 acres will be bought. These 60 owners will elect an agricultural committee of five men, which will in turn elect a farm manager with the advice of a company.

Into the hands of this farm manager, who will be an expert and scientific agricultural man, will be put the entire tract and by a system of gradual payments the owners pay for the land and for the management.

At the same time each owner is to be started in a correspondence course in agriculture through the state collector. Within five years the owners will have possession of their farms, of the knowledge sufficient to begin running it, of an expert adviser experienced in the qualities of his own land, and can graduate from their salary jobs into independence with comparative ease.

In each colony it is planned to get families from the same city or section of country—friends and neighbors—if possible. In each colony will be established rural centers, with school, church and other social requirements. It will also form a community marketing and purchasing nucleus, and become a clearing house for farming ideas and will establish a cohesive community interest and make farm life very profitable.

TREE WARDEN FOR SALISBURY AND VICINITY

New Law To Protect Forestry—Mr. Cooper Appointed.

Under a new State Law the trees standing within the right-of-way of public highways and along the sidewalks of incorporated towns become public shade trees, under the care and protection of the State through the State Board of Forestry. Heretofore the authority over such trees had not been clearly defined, generally the property owners who owned the abutting property claimed them as his trees, the town or road supervisors, as the case might be, claimed a certain amount of jurisdiction because they were along the public highway or street, while the pole line companies, which have a franchise or permit to use the roads or street, claimed that whenever such trees interfered with their wires they had the right to cut or trim them.

This has led to much ill feeling and many controversies and has proved very unsatisfactory. Now the status of these trees is clearly defined, and they are recognized as part of the improvements of the road or street, belonging not to the individual but to the public generally.

This new law makes it a misdemeanor for any one to cut, trim or in any way injure one of these trees without a permit from the State Board of Forestry. The purpose of the law is to prevent the mutilation or reckless cutting of these trees, which add so much to the attractiveness of the street and roadside and are a source of comfort to the people. It takes many years to grow shade trees and they are worthy of the very best care and protection of the State.

For the town of Salisbury and the outlying sections the Governor of the State upon recommendation of the State Forester has commissioned Mr. Mark Cooper to act as the local Tree Warden. Every one interested in the protection of trees should co-operate with Mr. Cooper in this good work to see that the law is strictly enforced and to see that the community receives the full benefits under its provisions.

The Allen-Duncan case came to an end Wednesday, Oct. 7, when the jury gave a verdict for the defendant. The case was instituted by Bessie Quinn Allen for herself and children, to recover damages from William B. Duncan for the killing of her husband about two years ago. The case was removed here from Worcester county.

JOHN CHATHAM KILLS HIMSELF

Despondent Man Shoots Himself in Head Last Saturday. Tired of life on account of mental troubles, John Chatham, one of the well-known young men of South Salisbury, fireman at the Jackson Brothers Company big mills, shot himself with a 44-caliber army revolver Saturday morning last, killing himself instantly. The deed was committed in the fire room of the big mill, Mr. Newton Jackson, son of Senator Wm. F. Jackson, having left Chatham a few seconds before he pulled the gun from his pocket and destroyed himself.

Mr. Chatham had been in bad mental condition for some time and a few months ago his family sent him to a sanatorium for treatment. He leaves a wife and two children as well as several brothers living in this city.

BOWLING PARTY

Miss Hilda Bethke entertained some of her friends last Thursday evening September 24th, by giving a bowling party.

The young girls present were the Misses Ella Ellis, Emma Johnson, Pansy Steffens, Olive Wyatt, Nema Parsons, Ella Erdman, Greta Parsons, Iva Mumford and Maude Phillips. The young men were Messrs. Alfred Wharton, Arthur Johnson, Frank Mitchell, Lawrence McDaniel, A. G. Wuntz, George Brittingham, "Sunshine Gordy," Mr. Stokes and Mr. Hastings.

After being entertained by music the party was ushered to the bowling alleys, where some very interesting games took place. After bowling for some time the party was heartily served with refreshments, after which a short act was given entitled "The War Dance." At a late hour the young people departed, all reporting a delightful time.

The bridge over the Pocomoke river on the Salisbury-Ocean City state road has been completed and the company has begun work on the Her-ring Creek bridge, near Ocean City.

CIRCUIT COURT CLOSES

For A While—Decisions Rendered This Week.

On Wednesday the Circuit Court took a recess on account of the necessity of opening court in Snow Hill on next Monday. Since last week the court has passed sentence upon several minor criminals. The most important of these criminal cases was the Darby case from Hebron. Darby was found guilty of setting fire to an old negro whom he had made drunk, and was sentenced to three years in the Maryland penitentiary.

Last week William Pen Catlin was convicted of bastardy and this week was sentenced to give bond for $300 and to pay $8 per month for the support of the child, or failing to do so, to serve a term of two years in the House of Correction.

When the courts meet on October 30th at 9 o'clock it will take up the case of the B. C. & A. Railroad Company against John H. Tomlinson. This is a proceeding for the condemnation of a piece of ground adjoining the railroad and the Union station properties. This is the property which the City Council some time ago refused to allow Mr. Tomlinson to improve by the erection of a building in which to conduct a restaurant.

The Worcester county term of court is expected to be a short one and when it is finished the court dockets of the district will be about as nearly clear as they have been for many years.

Two important cases will go over until the next term in this county. They are the Malone case from Dorchester and the case of the City of Salisbury against a number of corporations on account of taxes due upon shares of stock in these corporations held by residents of Salisbury.

It is understood now that the city will endeavor to collect not only the 1913 taxes, but also back taxes, not to exceed four years. It is the purpose of the city to hold the corporations themselves as liable for the payment of taxes on these shares.

The Allen-Duncan case came to an end Wednesday, Oct. 7, when the jury gave a verdict for the defendant. The case was instituted by Bessie Quinn Allen for herself and children, to recover damages from William B. Duncan for the killing of her husband about two years ago. The case was removed here from Worcester county.

AGED CITIZEN DEAD

Mr. Lambert Wilson, an aged citizen of this community, died Friday morning at his home from Bright's disease. The deceased came to Salisbury from Laurel nearly 15 years ago and bought a tract of land back of the cemetery.

Mr. Wilson was born in 1839 in Delaware, where he was one of the largest and most prominent farmers for years. He was the originator of the Wilson blackberry and was at one time the largest grower of this berry in Sussex county. He also raised many peaches.

Besides his wife Mr. Wilson left three children, Randolph and Miss Lulu Wilson of this city, and Carlisle Wilson, of New York. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from his late home.

SISK'S AUTO RUNS AWAY

Crashes Into Store Window and Car Is Attached For Damages.

The automobile of Col. A. S. Sisk, of Preston, Md., ran away at Seaford Wednesday and crashed through the window of E. T. Ellingsworth's store. Col. Sisk drove to Seaford in his automobile to catch a train, and just as he reached town the engine stalled. Unable to start it, Col. Sisk and his Chauffeur alighted and started to push it down a hill. Suddenly the engine started and as no one was in the car it ran away and crashed into the store window.

Soon after Col. Sisk left for Philadelphia the chauffeur was arrested for reckless driving and the automobile was seized on a claim for damages to the store.

TRIED BEFORE THE CIRCUIT COURT ON A charge of extortion, Charles R. Porter, a justice of the peace of Princess Anne, was found guilty by Judge Stanford and sentence suspended for a period of 18 months.

THE GREAT BATTLE IN FRANCE, now near the end of its fourth week, continues without sign of a decisive result. On the western wing, where the heaviest recent fighting has occurred, the fronts have been pushed still farther northward, cavalry engagements extending almost to the sea-coast.

Violent engagements, notably in the region of Roye, are reported in the latest announcement from the French War Office, which says that "on the whole the situation is stationary." An earlier bulletin declared that the Germans had gained ground at no point, and at some points had been forced back.

"That the Germans in France are 'gaining slowly but surely,'" and that a report of an advance of Russians across the Niemen river, in the district of Suwalki, "is a lie," is declared in a wireless from Berlin to the German Embassy at Washington.

To the bombardment of Antwerp with their big siege guns, the Germans have added attacks by Zeppelins, from which bombs have been dropped in many sections of the city, doing great damage. Flight of the inhabitants continues.

The great armies operating against each other in Russian Poland are apparently lining up for battle along the Vistula river. Berlin reports that a large part of the German army under General von Hindenburg has effected a junction with the Austrians on this river at Ivangood, and that the Russians are concentrating on the right bank of the river.

The declaration from Vienna that the Russians have been driven out of Hungary is denied by the Russian Ambassador at Rome, who asserts that Russians now occupy seven-eighths of Galicia and one-fourth of Hungary and hold all the passes in the Carpathian mountains.

Troops from Canada were landed in England preparatory to being sent to the front.

The ordinance providing for grading, curbing, guttering, draining and paving East Main street; also for grading, curbing, guttering, draining and paving West Railroad avenue; also for grading, curbing and guttering Wilson street were passed by the Council and approved by the Mayor.

A new ordinance regulating the licensing of circus shows and other entertainments was received and read the first time and ordered posted, to be acted upon at the next regular meeting of the Council.

On motion the following resolution was passed by the Council: "Resolved, That W. F. L. Boudy, Mayor of Salisbury, be and is hereby authorized by the City Council of Salisbury and empowered to execute on behalf of the Mayor and Council the agreement with the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad Company relative to the paving by the City of Salisbury of a strip of land six feet and three inches wide in conjunction with West Railroad avenue, said strip of land belonging to the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad Company, and being on the east side of West Railroad avenue aforesaid, between the new Union station and Isabella street."

At 9.30 a. m. the Sabbath school observed Missionary Day by appropriate music and an address by the pastor. At 10.30 a. m. the choir rendered a delightful musical program which was followed by a missionary sermon on Gal. 6:2 by the pastor.

The Rev. George S. Allen, of Vienna was the speaker of the afternoon and delighted an unusually large congregation with a masterpiece of a sermon on Mark 16:15.

The evening program consisting of several musical selections and recitations was rendered by the Sunday school and was ably supplemented by solos by Messrs. Gilliss and Taylor. To say that each one took their part well or did credit to self and teacher is putting it mildly.

The program throughout was rendered splendidly and many are free to class it as the best in the history of the church.

The collection, too, is considered the largest missionary collection ever taken in the church. Thus Mardella is making history.

Methodist Delight In Rally at Mardella

As the weeks of time advance they must carry into the past the events of history. Sunday last carried with it events which should be recorded as history in the lives of many.

The members and friends of Mardella M. E. church agree that Sunday was truly a day of history in the life of the church. In accord with the spirit of the day—the Day of Prayer for Peace—a special program was arranged consisting of an all-day service as follows:

DELICACIES WITH THIS FRUIT AS A FOUNDATION.

Flavor is improved by Cooking—Excellent Served With Tapioca—Candied Cherries One of the Finest of Confections.

Cherries are among the fruits that are much improved by cooking. Somehow they lose none of their freshness, and are rendered much juicier and more toothsome by slight cooking. Here are some recipes that make use of them:

Cherry Tapioca.—To make a delicious cherry pudding soak one small cupful of tapioca in water over night. In the morning add a pinch of salt and cook until clear. Then add butter the size of an egg, and one cupful of stoned cherries (the sour cherries are preferable). Add to this a half cupful of cherry wine or a little lemon juice and sugar to taste. Flavor with vanilla, and bake until bubbles appear on the top. Serve very cold with whipped cream.

Cherry Pie.—Line a pie plate with slab pastry. Stone the cherries and fill the pie dish. Then pour over them four tablespoonfuls of molasses and dust over all one tablespoonful of flour. Put on an upper crust and bake one-half hour in a moderate oven. When cool dust the top with a generous sprinkling of powdered sugar.

Candied Cherries.—To make a delicious confection, wash, stem and pit one pound of large, firm cherries, putting a pound of sugar to one pound of the fruit. Boil the juice and the sugar to a very thick syrup. Put the cherries in this syrup and let them em away in the syrup until day. Then take the cherries out of the syrup and put them in a deep dish. Let the syrup boil up once and pour over the cherries. This operation should be repeated for three mornings. On the fourth morning boil the syrup almost to the thickness of candy, dip the cherries in it and let them get thoroughly coated, then place them separately on flat dishes and dry.

Cherry Cordial.—Very ripe cherries make the best cordial. Bruise the fruit and mash through a colander, sweeten to taste and boil for ten minutes and then strain. Boil again until perfectly clear, skimming off occasionally. To every quart of the cherry juice add one gill of pure brandy. Seal the bottles tightly and keep in a cool dark place until ready to use.

Germany Cherry Pie.—Make a cherry pie as usual, but omit the upper crust. When almost done, beat one egg until very light, and add to it one scant half cupful of rich cream. Pour this mixture over the top of the pie. Put the pie back in the oven and bake until the custard is set. This makes a very attractive as well as an appetizing dish.

Cherry Salad.—Here is a delightful recipe that calls for fresh cherries. For a course in a warm-weather luncheon it is very good. Either the large white or the red cherries may be used, and it is most effective to mix the two colors. The fruit should be stoned without breaking the fruit, and in the place of each stone is placed a nut meat. Hazel nuts are the easiest to use, but any sort will do. The cherries should then be spread on lettuce leaves and used, or they may be stewed with sugar, and a little lemon juice.

CHILDREN THRIVE on our bread. It is wonderful the amount of nourishment they derive from it. They like it, too, because it is so pure and wholesome. Acquaint yourself with its excellence by giving it a trial. We are sure that it will convince you of its superiority.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

JOSEPH TIBBITT versus MARY TIBBITT.

In the Circuit Court for Wicomico County. In Equity 3571.

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce a mensa et thoro by the plaintiff, Joseph Tibbitt, from the defendant, Mary Tibbitt.

The bill alleges that the plaintiff was married to the defendant about seven years ago in the State of Delaware, and have been residing together in the State of Maryland for more than two years past, until recently when the defendant left the plaintiff and is reported to be now in the State of Delaware; that two children were born in said marriage, namely, Oliver Tibbitt who is now six years of age, and Sophia Tibbitt, who is now four years of age; that while the conduct of the plaintiff towards the defendant has been above reproach, the defendant, Mary Tibbitt, has been cruel, harsh and neglectful of the plaintiff and her conduct towards him has of late become intolerable. Guardianship and custody of the two infant children are also prayed for by the plaintiff and such other relief as his case may require.

It is thereupon this 28rd day of September, 1914, by the Circuit Court for Wicomico County, in Equity, ordered that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Wicomico County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 20th day of October, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object of and substance of this bill, warning her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 1st day of November next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

IN erecting a monument, one should remember that it is not a mere mass of stone, but a memorial of honor that is to perpetuate the memory of the departed. Therefore, select the best to be had. Look to its beauty of design, and the quality of material. Many years in the monument business has taught us that good monuments cannot be made at cut prices, but it has also taught us how to make the best monument at the lowest possible price.

We have on hand a complete assortment of designs, which we place at your disposal. We use nothing but the best stones. Come in and look at our stock of monuments built of Wisconsin Blue Granite, "The Silk of the Trade." The ideal monumental granite.

LAUNDRY BAG FROM TOWELS

Useful Hint for Any Girl Who Desires to Make Something of Real Use for Her Room.

To make this useful and attractive laundry bag two good-sized fringed towels are needed, a 12-inch oval embroidery hoop and either a paper-mache letter or an embroidery pattern of your initial.

Sew the towels together across the end and up the sides to within twelve inches of the top. Then the upper ends out over the hoop. Run a thread along here to form a casing. Embroider the letter as shown in the cut, or the word "Laundry" may be embroidered instead. A piece of white cable cord sewn on each end forms the handle to hang it by. This is very convenient, as the top of it is always open.

SLEEVELESS COAT IS LIKED

Style Has Much to Recommend It, Especially for Wear in the Warm Months.

The sleeveless coat is an adaptation of the military coat. The graceful lines of this cloak design, with the long slant over the shoulder, are responsible for a very charming type of coat and skirt that has just made its appearance among the new models, wherein somewhat the idea of the cape is suggested without either its length or weight, neither of which is needed when merely a walking costume is required.

One of these coats and skirts shows how exceedingly graceful the style can be--the coat being entirely sleeveless, a fact that for summer wear is obviously a great advantage. The completed model was carried out in navy blue suiting of a fine quality, the coat being made with a long, shaped basque, and a round cape effect over the shoulders. The skirt was very original, having a deep slanting hip yoke of the same material, into which the drapery was set and firmly sewn along with a double row of machine stitching.

The coat fastened across the front with a number of small painted china buttons, while beneath it was worn a blouse of navy chiffon, with long, transparent sleeves, completed with a winged collar of white lawn wired upward at the sides.

CHOOSE THE RIGHT FLOWERS

Adornments Must Be Fitting, Depending Much Upon Age and Personal Appearance.

The kind of flowers that are fitting for a woman to wear depends upon her age and personal appearance. Blossoms that are becoming to a young girl look out of place on the elderly woman, and the woman who is tall can wear certain varieties which the one who is short cannot.

Bankia roses are for the quite young girl. Violets are charming for either youth or age. Daisies belong only to youth.

Pansies seem fitted for ripier age, though the pansy-eyed girl looks well with them. Chrysanthemums look well on youth or maturity, but do not seem to belong to the old.

Roses belong to all ages, but need to be chosen with care as to their color and size. Lilies can only be worn by a tall figure. Neither are poppies for the petite, nor things that grow in branch form.

Stardrops that would look foolish on a middle-aged woman look sweet on a young girl. Lilies of the valley are for youth or middle age.

Mignonette does not belong to youth, nor do sweet peas and daffodils belong to age, but anyone can wear the fragrant carnation.

She Won't Believe It.

We don't suppose that it will ever be possible to convince a woman that a neat little round hole in the sitting room rug, where a small amount of ignited tobacco happened to fall, merely serves to make the place look home-like.--Ohio State Journal.

Wonder Why.

A woman would hardly marry a bow-legged man to reform him, and there are several other varieties of misshapen masculinity that it is just as futile to attempt to bend by means of matrimony.--Detroit Journal.

Buyers to Share in Profits Lower Prices on Ford Cars

A BRIEF RESPITE

Primaries and elections, elections and primaries, city, county and state, one after the other in a never-ending succession. This is the one lot of the American citizen today. He never gets through. He is hauled this way and that, argued with, begged and threatened, until it is no wonder that he gets indifferent or disgusted with public matters.

And to further rub it in, he has to pay the bills for all these worries—bills often padded in order to pad the pockets of someone close to the powers that "be."

It may be necessary in order to protect our people in their rights of self government, to have an election fairly frequent so unfaithful or incompetent servants may be gotten rid of; but there is reasonable limit to everything, and our frequent primaries and elections have gone far beyond the reasonable and sensible thing.

Here in Salisbury the voter has been more or less in the throes of a heated campaign since last summer a year, when the primaries were at their warmest; for after last year's primaries came the election, then came the city primaries, then election. Now we are just through with the congressional primaries, and in order to keep in training have had to go to the polls to register. Now we are about to commence the election campaign for a congressman; and in a few weeks' time we must again work ourselves up to the white heat of enthusiasm in order to get a proper United States Senator and a Congressman to represent the First Congressional district in a creditable way.

Our people will no doubt do as they have ever done, rally like patriots to the call, shoulder again the never ending burden and work for their party, their state and nation. When will the break come? Is it not too much to expect that men with a jiving to make should give all their time to what is usually termed "politics"? Well, the future must take care of itself, for the next few days let the voters forget everything connected with voting and rest.

Orators will soon be with us trying to show how the country must cease to exist unless the voters recognize the dangers ahead and support the right men for Senator and Congressman. And strange to say, both sides seem to be absolutely sincere in the position taken.

This week, at least, we are not going to argue the advantages of supporting this or that party, this or that man, but to urge all of our readers to stop thinking or talking about things political for a few days so they can get a much needed rest.

Let each of us give some attention to our private affairs, and then spend our spare time around our humble "hearthside" where not a whisper of political matters should be allowed to penetrate. On Sunday, when we may be wanted to go to church and talk about a better life instead.

Maybe a close attention to our private affairs, together with a proper amount of time spent within the family circle, and a regular attendance at places of worship, will better prepare us for citizenship than all the oratory, discussion, begging or wheedling of the insincere politician.

Maybe, we will all see more clearly, the necessity of entrusting the power of government in the hands of those who live right and who think clean and clear. "Iams" to correct every ill of life by legal procedure may not seem so necessary then as now, if we take the proper viewpoint of public life and public men; for the fault is, after all, not so much the fault of the laws or machine as it is the fault of those whom we entrust to carry out the laws or guide the machine. A man who employs a dishonest clerk and then blames the system of bookkeeping for his losses will never find one perfect enough to stop the leaks until he gets clear of his dishonest help. Nor will the people ever find any system of government to accomplish the results mostly to be desired as long as they trust their affairs to dishonest or incompetent officers.

RYE VALUABLE FOR EARLY SPRING FEEDING.

Will Help Out Shortage in Long Feed if Sown Now.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Rye when properly used is one of the most valuable crops on the farm. It will produce fair yields on land too poor to grow wheat, corn, clover or barley, and in view of the present shortage of roughage on many Maryland farms, it promises to be especially helpful to stock owners at this time.

Where a sowing crop is not desired, it will provide excellent spring pasturage. This method of handling it requires less work than sowing, and while only about one-half as much food, is obtained as from sowing, it can be used over a much longer period of growth.

In fact, instead of furnishing food for only about two weeks as in case of sowing crops, it will furnish good pasture from four to six weeks. Furthermore, it begins to do this two or three weeks earlier than the first cutting can be made when the rye is used as green forage. But this it not all; if sown in early September, it will afford considerable late fall and early winter grazing after the grasses have disappeared. In the spring it is usually ready for light grazing before pasture grasses have made sufficient growth.

The cultural and fertilizer requirements of rye are the same as those of wheat.

TAGS FOR MEMBERS

By JOSEPH BARNHARDT.

The members of the Commuters' Crochet club were seated as usual in their facing seats on the 7:55. They were very busy and very quiet this morning for Mabel had found a new crochet pattern in a magazine, and they were each working it out. Any one who has had personal experience with a pattern of this sort knows that it takes a great deal of perseverance and concentration to follow it closely, and to achieve the expected result.

"One, two, three, double crochet," counted Sadie in a monotone.

"One, two, one, two, single crochet," murmured Mabel to the rhythm of the car wheels.

Mary stopped for a minute and glanced over at Anne. "Why," she exclaimed, "your face doesn't look a bit like mine."

"And neither of yours is like mine," said Mabel, looking at Mary's and Anne's.

"Why, isn't it queer?" said Sadie. "Here we are all following the same directions and getting such different results."

Mabel laid down her work and looked around at the group with the air of one who has something tremendously important to impart to a listening audience.

"I can't help thinking," she said, "how symbolical this is of all life."

"What's symbolical of all life?" said the round-faced girl, looking up with a blank expression. It was always hard for her to follow Maude's flights of oratory, but she tried her best.

"This crocheting," said Maude. "We are all following the same pattern and yet are all making something different. In the same way, a stranger might look at us sitting here in the train and say: 'How much alike those girls are. They're all about the same age; they're all of the same nationality; all work in New York, and have the same interests, judging from the way they keep up conversation while they crochet.' And yet, each one of us here is very much of an individual."

"I tell you what I think would be a good idea," suggested Mabel, "for people to go around tagged with a description of themselves as they really are. It would save a lot of time and trouble in getting to know them."

"We might make tags for each other," said Anne, and the others seconded the idea.

Pencils and paper were passed and each one but the person to be tagged added a line to each description, and by the time they had reached Jersey City six were done and read as follows:

Maude—Wavy auburn hair and hazel eyes; inclined to be dreamy; fond of poetry; imaginative; artistic temperament; absent-minded.

The Round-Faced Girl—Light hair, almost red; round, blue eyes; round, red cheeks; fat; good-natured, and willing.

Sadie—Medium-colored hair, medium-colored eyes; always up-to-date; fond of statistics; eminently practical.

Mabel—Curly brown hair; brown eyes; much interested in current events, and determined to be well-informed.

Anne—Tall and thin; light hair and blue eyes; wears eye-glasses; a student of psychology and an interested observer of life.

Mary—Small, quiet; a good listener. And as the six walked to the ferry-boat, they compared tags good-nature-edly. The round-faced girl was the only one who was displeased with her description.

"I'm not fat," were her last words, as they parted. "I only weigh 156."

English Coal Fields.

The coal fields of Northumberland and Durham counties claim to be the oldest in production of any coal fields in England. It is a historical fact that these fields have been worked for at least 700 years. Every kind of coal, with the exception of anthracite, is found in these two counties. Northumberland coal is best known for its steam-producing qualities, but it is also used in the homes and in manufacturing plants. Durham coal is used for the same purpose, but it is better known for its gas and coke producing qualities. It is estimated that one-tenth of the population of Durham county is connected, in some capacity, with that industry, and that the county's output of coal in 1913 was valued at the pit's mouth at $100,000,000.

Love of Strife.

"Did I understand you to say that Topley is a great believer in reform movements?"

"Only as a means of creating discord. Topley enjoys nothing more than seeing lifelong friends turn against each other and families split asunder."

Magic for Rust Spots.

To remove rust spots on bathtubs and basins and discolorations in toilet basins and sinks apply muriatic acid with a mop. As soon as the discoloration is removed the acid should be thoroughly rinsed off with clear water. The acid works like magic; it is almost instantaneous in its effect and the labor of scrubbing is saved.

Rather a Neat Rebuke.

"We will now take up our annual collection for the benefit of the heathens," announced the Rev. Dr. Fourthly at the close of his sermon, "and I hope those young men making so much noise all through this service will be especially liberal in their contribution. They are in duty bound to help their brother heathens."

LIABILITY INSURANCE RATE TO BE RATIFIED

Industrial Commission To Fix The Legal Fees Of The Companies.

At the office of W. Mason Sheban, State Insurance Commissioner, there was held a conference of liability insurance men with the Commissioner and the members of the State Industrial Accident Commission, this week with the purpose of having the Commissioner approve the rate that has been adopted by the companies writing this kind of insurance.

The rates proposed have been adopted by the Workmen's Compensation Premium Bureau, representing the various companies throughout the country. They have adopted a rate for Maryland in order to be ready to write insurance in this State under the new law, but they cannot go ahead without the approval of the Insurance Commissioner, who is given the authority to fix the minimum premium rate in order to protect the insured.

The law creating the Commission also gives authority for employers of labor to organize mutual companies to carry accident insurance under the supervision of the Accident Board, and as a first result of this section of the law the Maryland Mutual Liability Insurance Company has been organized in this city. Such companies have already been organized in Massachusetts, Wisconsin and New York, and it is practically certain that there will be more than one in Maryland.

Those who will incorporate the new Mutual Company are Summerfield Baldwin, Jr., Charles E. Falconer, William A. Riordan, David E. Williams and Lloyd L. Jackson, Jr. The directors of the Company will be Messrs. Falconer, Baldwin, Riordan and Jackson and John A. Whitridge, Col. O. Wilbur Miller, Leonard Greif, T. Garland Tinsley and Randolph Barton, Jr.

It is the view of those interested in the formation of the Mutual Company that the stock insurance companies will agree to maintain rates for the various classifications or risks, which will include commissions to their agents and profits to themselves. As the insurance cost will be high, these two items are to be saved.

The expense of administration of mutual companies, it is said, varies from 17 per cent. to 20 per cent of the premium income. The New York Insurance Department permits 28 1-3 per cent of expenditure for such purpose; requires 10 per cent. reserve for catastrophe hazard, and the balance of 66 2-3 per cent. for losses.

Some idea of the approximate rates to be charged may be gleaned from the rates now prevailing in the State of New York, where the workmen's compensation act went into effect on July 1st last. Prior to that date, the rates for barrel manufacturing, chair manufacturers and sawmills were 65 cents, 40 cents and 81.80, respectively. The present rates are $1.64, $1.80 and $5.99, respectively.

Police Duty Left to Burghers. In the eighteenth century the whole safety and order of Glasgow, Scotland, were intrusted to the unpaid and reluctant burghers. Every citizen who was between the years of eighteen and sixty, and paid a yearly rent amounting to $15, had to take his turn at guarding the city. "On touch of drum," says a writer, "the gentleman was at his post at ten at night, and strolled with weary tread and yawning gait along the Trongate and High street, and up the pitch dark lanes, of winter nights till four in the morning. After that hour the city was without a police."

WAR.

O'er glories gone, the invaders march,
Weeps triumph o'er each leveled arch;
Freedom, such as God hath given
Unto all beneath his heaven,
With their breath and from their birth,
Though Gullt would sweep it from the earth
With a fierce and lavish hand,
Scattering nations' wealth like sand,
Pouring nations' blood like water
In imperial seas of slaughter!

But the heart and the mind,
And the voice of mankind,
Shall arise in communion—
And who shall resist that proud union?
The time is past when swords subdued—
Man may die, the soul's renewed;
Even in this low world of care
Freedom ne'er shall want an heir;
Millions breathe, but to inherit
Her forever bounding spirit—
When once more her hosts assemble Tyrants shall believe and tremble.
—Lord Byron.

REAL INDUSTRY.

De congressman, he works all day
A-talkin' foh de right;
An' after dat I hear 'em say,
He toils some more at night.
Dar ain' no eight hour law foh him.
Dar ain' no delegate
Expainin' dat de pay is slim
Foh services so great.

His hands is allus full, it's said,
He's gott'er do his part.
He mus' be usin' of his head
While speakin' 'fom his heart.
Admirin' him I often stan',
He makes me hold my breath,
I's lookin' foh dat congressman
To think 'bissef' to death!
—Washington Star.

THE MARSEILLAISE.

Ye sons of freedom, wake to glory!
Hark! hark! What myriads bid you rise!
Your children, wives and grand-
dres hoary,
Behold their tears and hear their cries.
Shall hateful tyrants, mischief breeding,
With hireling hosts, a ruffian band,
Affright and desolate the land,
While peace and liberty lie bleeding?
To arms! To arms, ye brave!
The avenging sword unsheath,
March on, march on! All hearts resolved
On victory or death.
O Liberty, that man resign thee
Once having felt thy generous flame?
Can dungeons, bolts or bars confine thee
Or whips thy noble spirit tame?
Too long the world has wept, bewailing
That falsehood's dagger tyrants wield.
But freedom is our sword and shield,
And all their arts are unavailing.
To arms! To arms, ye brave!
The avenging sword unsheath,
March on, march on! All hearts resolved
On victory or death.

RIMED QUOTATIONS.

Soar not too high to fall, but stoop to rise.
—Massinger.
We masters grow of all that we despise.
—Crowley.
Oh, then, renounce that impious self esteem.
—Beattie.
Riches have wings and grandeur is a dream.
—Cowper.

WISDOM.

Wisdom is the only thing which can relieve us from the way of the passions and the fear of danger and which can teach us to bear the injuries of fortune itself with moderation and which shows us all the ways which lead to tranquillity and peace.—Young.

For me, all I know is that I know nothing.—Socrates.

The doorstep to the temple of wisdom is a knowledge of our own ignorance.—Spurgeon.

Well, God gave them wisdom that have it, and those that are fools let them use their talents.—Shakespeare.

WATERLOO.

Why have the mighty lived—why have they died? Is it ever thus with idle wreck to strew Fields such as thine, remorseless Waterloo? Hopeless the lesson! Vainly hath ever cried Stern fate to man—"So perish human pride!" Still must the many combat for the few; Still must the noblest blood fair earth bedew; Tyrants, slaves, freemen, moldering side by side! On such a day the world was lost and won By Pompey at Pharsalia; such a day Saw glorious Hannibal a fugitive. So faded 'neath the Macedonian sun Persia's pale star; so empires passed away From Harold's brow, but he disdained to live! —Sir A. de Vere.

SAYINGS OF SAGES.

I have never had a policy. I have simply tried to do what seemed best each day as each day came.—Lincoln.

To live, to work, to help and to be helped; to learn sympathy through suffering; to learn faith by perplexity; to reach truth through wonder—behold! This is what it is to prosper, this is what it is to live.—Phillips Brooks.

God has connected the labor which is essential to the bodily sustenance with the pleasures which are the healthiest for the heart; and while he made the ground stubborn he made its herbage fragrant and its blossoms fair.—John Ruskin.

THE WATCH ON THE RHINE.

A voice resounds like thunder peal, Mid clashing waves and clang of steel, "The Rhine, the Rhine, the German Rhine! Who guards today my stream divine?"

Chorus,
Dear fatherland, no danger thine;
Firm stand thy sons to watch the Rhine!

They stand a hundred thousand strong,
Quick to avenge their country's wrong,
With filial love their bosoms swell,
They'll guard the sacred landmark well!

The dead of a heroic race
From heaven look down and meet their gaze,
They swear with dauntless heart, "O Rhine,
Be German as this breast of mine!"

"While flows one drop of German blood,
Or sword remains to guard thy food,
While rifle rests in patriot hand—
No foe shall tread thy sacred strand!"

"Our oath resounds, the river flows,
In golden light our banner glows;
Our hearts will guard thy stream divine—
The Rhine, the Rhine, the German Rhine!"

MARRIAGE.

See that boat rowed by two men! When they keep time in rowing it goes smoothly over the rough waters, but if not each wave gives its shock, and any stroke of the oar wrongly applied may capsize the frail skiff. Marriage is the bark, the rowers the wedded pair on the sea of life. Only by pulling together can they lessen the dangers of the voyage.—Duc de Levis.

HAPPINESS.

A man who dedicates his life to knowledge becomes habituated to pleasure which carries with it no reproach; and there is one security that he will never lose that pleasure which is paid for by anguish of heart—his pleasures are all cheap, all dignified and all innocent, and, as far as any human being can expect permanence in this changing scene, he has secured a happiness which no malignity of fortune can ever take away, but which must cleave to him while he lives, ameliorating every good and diminishing every evil of his existence.—Sydney Smith.

CLICK O' THE LATCH.

The silence holds for it, taut and true;
The young moon stays for it, wistful white;
Winds that whimpered the sunset through,
Sigh for it, low and light.

Click o' the latch and he'll come home—
A stir in the dusk at the little gate,
Hush, my heart, and be still, my heart—
Surely it's sweet to wait!

The tall skies lean for it, listening—
Never a star but leads an ear,
The passionate porch flowers stoop and cling,
Parting their leaves to hear

Click o' the latch, and him come home—
A step on the flags, a snatch of song,
Hurry, my heart, be swift, my heart,
How did we wait so long!
—Nancy Hynd Turner in Lippincott's Magazine.

NOBILITY OF WORK.

All work, even cotton spinning, is noble; work is alone noble.—Carlyle.

Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well.—Earl of Chesterfield.

We enjoy ourselves only in our work, our doing; and our best doing is our best enjoyment.—Jacobi.

It is better to wear out than to rust out.—Bishop Horne.

Nothing is impossible to industry.—Perlander.

Never idle a moment, but thrifty and thoughtful of others.—Longfellow.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

God save our gracious King,
Long live our noble King,
God save the King!
Send him victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us,
God save the King!

O Lord our God, arise,
Scatter his enemies,
And make them fall,
Confound their politics,
Frustrate their knavish tricks;
On thee our hearts we fix,
God save us all!

Thy choicest gifts in store,
On him be pleased to pour,
Long may he reign,
May he defend our laws,
And ever give us cause,
To sing with heart and voice,

THOUGHTS ON MAN.

In one respect man is the nearest thing to me, so far as I must do good to men and endure them.—Aurelius Antoninus.

Men in great place are thrice servants—servants of the sovereign or state, servants of fame and servants of business.—Bacon.

A man is the whole encyclopedia of facts. The creation of a thousand forests is in one acorn, and Egypt, Greece, Rome, Gaul, Britain, America, lie folded already in the first man—Emerson

MILLINERY FOR FALL

SOME SPECULATION AS TO THE COMING STYLES.

It Would Seem That Nothing Has Been Absolutely Determined as to Whether the Small or the Large Hat is to Rule.

Society at large has been watching the development of fall millinery fashions with no much interest that the debut of every model has been awaited with much anxiety as well as excitement. Numerous rumors and conflicting opinions declare for the continuance of the small styled hats permitted to endure in new and ravishing shapes. Absolutely new, declares every witness, and, numerically in the ascendancy, agree onlookers.

Nevertheless, leading milliners, whose small hats enchant one with the daintiness of their chic and the smartness of their design, are issuing wide-brimmed hats of black velvet, with here and there a gray or a dark brown shape of this material.

The velvet crowned hat, with wide curving brim of illusion, chiffon or lace, has been worn for a month. Watchful persons have greeted this style without the flicker of an eyelid of interest. But when the velvet-brimmed hat appeared in one of the Gergetto sailor effects, brandishing sweeping plumes of paradise for a trimming, and when Lewis almost duplicates the shape with bushy aigrettes for a trimming fantasy, then the patient ones whose business it is to herald the approach of a new vogue, to be sure to show signs of excitement. The discussion of a new vogue is on.

PORTIERES OF BEADS

ORNAMENTS THAT MAY EASILY BE MADE AT HOME.

Foundation is Corn Starch and They May Be Colored With Dyes of Any Shade Desired—How to Fashion Them.

Attractive bead portieres, to take the place of heavy curtains in the summer months, can be made at home by any housekeeper who delights in beautifying her home. The beads are made of equal parts of salt and corn starch and colored with dyes any shades desired.

Heat the salt very hot; mix the corn-starch with a little water, just enough to moisten it thoroughly and make it pour, then add to the hot salt and cook stiff enough to form a heavy dough. Add coloring matter while the mixture is cooking. When cool enough to handle, measure enough to make a good sized bead, roll in the palms of the hands until perfectly round and string on hat wire or pierce with a very thick needle or hat pin and set aside to dry.

You must make both large and small beads—in fact three or four different sizes can be used to advantage. Strong these on stout cords, colored cords may be used, but brown twine makes a strong, durable material for this purpose.

Begin to string the beads at the end of the cord that is to be the top of the curtain, using one or two large beads for that purpose. Then follow the large ones with smaller beads, then larger ones and so on until the string is completed. This will depend upon the height of the door. The strings are tied to a curtain rod at the top and the longest strings should not be more than three inches from the floor when completed.

Graceful and Pretty.

This model is of heavy white corded cloth, with a large fur collar. The back of the coat hangs very full.

FRENCH KNOT HERE TO STAY

Has Passed From Stage of Novelty to Be Real Help to the Artistic Needlewoman.

It is surprising how realistic some flowers can be made with the little French knot when it is given sufficient consideration and care. For instance, purple clover worked in French knots is startling in its nearness to nature's own product. You can obtain the stamped design with little dots forming the clover blossom. Sometimes these are not sufficiently close to make a realistic blossom. After you have worked the stamped dots in French knots, fill up the blank spaces between, so that the blossom is more or less packed. Two shades of purple should be used in making the blossom, a lighter shade at the top and a darker shade near the base of the flower.

Then there is the yellow goldenrod. A close examination of the real flower will convince you that it is apparently made up of odorous French knots. If possible, the goldenrod worked in yellow silk French knots is even more realistic than the clover blossoms.

Equally as effective as the goldenrod is wild carrot, or "queen's lace," worked in white French knots, with green foliage in the conventional leaf stitch. Daisy centers were never so natural as when done in the yellow French knot. The knots must be very closely packed to make the center look like the center of the real flower, and the correct shade must be carefully selected. This precaution must be taken in doing the goldenrod, too. About the same shade is used for both goldenrod and daisy centers. It is a yellow with just the faintest suggestion of green in it, such as you will see in nature's own goldenrod and daisies.

While the French knot was at first looked upon as a novelty, there is scarcely a doubt that it has come to stay. Once the knack is acquired, it is one of the easiest and quickest of stitches, and it has helped greatly in the artistic and natural evolution of floral decoration in art needlework.

DICTATES OF FASHION

The white hat is much favored by Parisiennes. Coats promise deep cape collars and full skirts. The smartest street hats are trimmed with quills. The nose veil is here with all its bewitching effect. Larger hats are gradually making their appearance. The girle of Roman striped ribbon is still worn. The diamond cut in oval shape is beautiful and new. Black and white combinations are in great favor. Grass cloth and organdie collars are particularly new. The tunic lengthened to skirt proportions is corded at the bottom into hooplike fullness. The uncorseted effect is to continue, whether the waist line be at the normal, below or not at all. A distinctive note is struck in a frock of black satin by a girle of cherry red moire.

Lacy Underskirts. The new long-draped overskirts require long, tight petticoats beneath. For summer wear these are often composed of dril upon a frill of narrow gathered lace or fine muslin, or perhaps consist of a tight skirt or all-over lace or embroidery sheer enough to display silken clad ankles beneath.

A Reliable Remedy FOR CATARRH. Ely's Cream Balm. Ely's Cream Balm is quickly absorbed. Gives Relief at Once. It cleanses, soothes, heals and protects the diseased membrane resulting from Catarrh and drives away a Cold in the Head quickly. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Full size 50 cts. at Druggists or by mail. Liquid Cream Balm for use in stomies 75 cts. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

is safe to say that from now on the efforts of the leaders will be directed toward changing this apathy into one of at least interest, if enthusiasm itself be lacking.

Those who know Hon. John Walter Smith, and are acquainted with his unusual campaign abilities are free in their prophecy that he will arouse the state before he gets through. A strong personality, together with unusual ability, and experience such as few have had, will they say surprise the people of the State before it is over.

One thing may be counted on, and that is he will certainly make friends and devoted followers wherever he goes, for he is unquestion-

PROCLAMATION.

Proposed Amendment to the Constitution of Maryland.

WHEREAS, at the January Session of the General Assembly of Maryland, held in the year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fourteen, an Act was passed proposing an Amendment to Section 44 Part VII of Article 4, title "Sheriffs," of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, which said Act is known and designated as Chapter 245 of the Acts of Maryland 1914, and is in the words and figures following:

CHAPTER 245.
AN ACT to amend Section 44, Part VII, of Article 4, title "Sheriffs," of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, by changing the mode of election to the office of sheriff, and to amend Section 45, Part VII, of Article 4, title "Sheriffs," of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, by changing the mode of election to the office of sheriff, and to amend Section 46, Part VII, of Article 4, title "Sheriffs," of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, by changing the mode of election to the office of sheriff.

Section 44. There shall be elected in each county in every second year, one person, resident in said county, to serve the term of two years, and at least five years preceding his election, a citizen of the State of Maryland, who shall hold office for two years, and until his successor is duly elected and qualified; shall be eligible for two years thereafter; shall give such bond, exercise such powers and perform such duties as now are or may hereafter be prescribed by law. The Sheriff elected in and for the City of Baltimore in November, 1913, shall be eligible for re-election.

Section 45. In the City of Baltimore at the General Election to be held in the year 1914 and every four years thereafter, there shall be elected in said City of Baltimore one person who shall be a resident of said City, above the age of twenty-five years, and who shall have been at least five years a resident of the City of Baltimore at the time of his election to the office of Sheriff.

FOR LITTLE MISS BABY

A smart little model for a child of three is shown in the accompanying drawing. The materials suitable for making into this frock are linen, pique or if in colored material gingham or challie. The long plain body is gathered and slightly bloused into a belt of embroidery. The diminutive skirt consists of two scant flounces of the material. A strip of embroidery runs down the center front and embroidery forms the cuffs. The little Dutch neck is finished with a ruffle of narrow val. lace and a coquettish ribbon bow under the chin.

Airy Nightclothes Hygienic.
Since there has been such an outcry against the style of clothes worn by men and women (in what is virtually a torrid climate during the summer months) because of the unhygienic warmth, especially in men's clothing, a crusade has been begun against nightclothes. One authority claims that pajamas are too restricting for wear except when traveling, as in the case of commercial men, who change their beds nightly and are exposed to temperature changes. For once it is claimed that women dress more sensibly than men, as sheer cool nightgowns are hygienic and allow ventilation, so inducing refreshing sleep, especially when the gown is sleeveless.

Elastics Under Knee Bands.
If it is necessary to have elastics in the knee bands of bloomers or rompers that are to be boiled when washed, it will be found convenient, instead of sewing the ends together, to sew to one end a snap hook, and to the other end an eye. The elastic can then be drawn out before washing. To insert it again, tie a string into the eye and thread this into the tape needle.

Important to all Women Readers of This Paper.

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer a great deal with pain in the back, bearing-down feelings, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

A good kidney medicine, possessing real healing and curative value, should be a blessing to thousands of nervous, over-worked women.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy will do for them. Every reader of this paper, who has not already tried it, by enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Birmingham, N. Y., may receive a sample size bottle by Parcel Post. When writing mention the Salisbury Weekly Advertiser. You can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at all drug stores.—Adv.

HELPFUL WORDS
 From a Salisbury Citizen.

Is your back lame and painful? Does it ache especially after exertion? Is there a soreness in the kidney region? These symptoms suggest weak kidneys. If so there is danger in delay. Weak kidneys get fast weaker. Give your trouble prompt attention. Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys. Your neighbors use and recommend them.

Read this Salisbury testimony. Mrs. Samuel E. Brittingham, 878 Eight St., Salisbury, Md., says: "What I said in the public statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills before still holds good and I am pleased to make the fact known that I have had no further trouble from my kidneys. I was annoyed off and on for over a year by a sharp pain over my back and it always became worse when I caught cold by not stopping. One box of Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me."

Remarkable Promenade.
 At a New York hotel a man who had suddenly become wealthy from an oil well venture had left his family, which had accompanied him to the city, in their rooms so long that they had become uneasy about him. At last he returned to the rooms, and to the anxious inquiry of his wife, "Where in the world have you been so long?" he responded, calmly: "I've just been in the cuspidore, walking pro and con."

The Mule.
 A wise man, in his own estimation, announces that a mule kicks because it doesn't know any better. This will greatly surprise many students of contemporaneous mule life. If ever there was an animal with low cunning expressed in its eye and its twitching nostril, that animal is the mule. Its ability to place a kick where it will give the greatest offense to its victim is something marvelous.

The Actor's Mistake.
 Toole, the English actor, used to get off a good thing occasionally. At dinner at a country hotel he was sitting next to a gentleman who had helped himself to an extravagantly large piece of bread. Toole took it up and began to cut a slice from it. "Sir," said the indignant gentleman, "that is my bread." "I beg a thousand pardons, sir," replied the actor, "I mistook it for the loaf."

Laconic Advice.
 When Atticus once discovered a treasure of gold while digging under a house he sent news of his discovery to the emperor, Nerva, from whom he received the laconic reply: "Use it." And when in his diffidence he protested that it was too large a sum for his own personal use, the emperor responded: "Then abuse it."

To the Manor Born.
 A lady accented a little girl who was entering one of the fashionable New York flats where she knew the rules were exceedingly strict, and after some little conversation, said: "How is it you live in these flats? I thought they would not take children. How did you get in?" "Why," replied the child, "I was born in."

One as Hard as the Other.
 "The training of children is a confessedly difficult task," says an editorial writer. No more difficult than the training of parents. Many children find the task of conquering the prejudices and old-fashioned ideas of father and mother almost hopeless.—Toledo Blade.

 Our efficient way of catching up with our correspondence is to pick out an evening when nothing special is happening and throw away all the important letters that ought to have been answered some time within the last ten or twelve months.—Ohio State Journal.

 Men talk about what they would do if they had $1,000,000, but nine out of ten he about it. If they had $1,000,000 the first thing they would do would be to lay plans and concoct schemes for getting two.—Toledo Blade.

 "That's the highest quality paint made," said a customer of ours, "and it has proven to be the cheapest and the best." Our paint meets all competition successfully with quality—the high quality that makes it dollars cheaper than the other kind. Paint that lasts last lasts best— isn't that so?

Inflection and Insect Bites Dangerous

CRISFIELD SUFFERS BIG LOSS BY FIRE.

$100,000 Damage Done to Business Section Sunday Night.

On Sunday night a disastrous fire wiped out a portion of Crisfield, causing a loss of property valued at $100,000. The fire started in the lumber mills of the A. B. Cochrane Co. and fanned by a brisk southwest wind, spread rapidly to other buildings along the waterfront. The seafood establishments of Fred Thornton & Co., Ralph Riggan & Bro., Langdon Bros. and G. E. Boone & Co. were all burned to the ground, after which the fire spread to a row of brick buildings on Water street, soon reducing them to ashes and ruin.

Those losing property in this block of buildings were the Tangier Packing Co., seafood packers; N. R. Lockerman & Co., A. G. Sterling & Co., seafood dealers, and Joseph Poleyett. Dana's marine railway was partially destroyed by the flames, which burned down a portion of the ways and workshops. The fire spread to the lumber yards of W. C. Muir & Co., across the street from the Cochrane Co.'s plant, and destroyed a quantity of lumber and a shed.

A great deal of damage was done to shipping. Several vessels were burned at the docks while others were damaged to such an extent as to render them useless. The plant of the Crisfield Electric Lighting Co. was endangered by the blaze and the lights in the town were extinguished by the burning of a number of poles.

Those who lost heavily by the fire are:

- A. B. Cochrane Co. .... $20,000
- Fred Thornton & Co. .... 5,000
- N. R. Lockerman & Co. .... 5,000
- Tangier Packing Co. and Crisfield Ice Cream Co. .... 35,000
- Jos. Poleyett, building. .... 10,000
- Ralph Riggan & Bro. .... 5,000
- A. G. Sterling & Co. .... 5,000
- Dana's Marine Railway .... 5,000

Including the loss of several vessels and other property the total damage done was over $100,000.

Helping the Blind to Help Themselves.

Heln Keller once said, "To be without occupation and without sight is the worst punishment that can befall humanity."

More than 100 such persons on the Eastern Shore of Maryland could be made happy if taught to read the raised letters and trained to make useful articles in their homes.

Miss Margaret E. Cavanaugh, a graduate of the Maryland School for the Blind, has been selected to undertake this work, with headquarters at Salisbury. Although entirely blind, Miss Cavanaugh travels without a guide from Crisfield to Easton, bringing hope and good cheer by her genial spirit to this unfortunate class. Already she has made many friends and good results are sure to follow.

Arrangements are being made to exhibit early in December, at the Court House, the various products of the Maryland workshop for the blind. At that time suitable articles for Christmas presents may be purchased.

ULMAN'S OPERA HOUSE

The Long Acre Square Producing Co. Offers "The Turning Point."

America's best character actor, Will E. Culhane, supported by a clever company of actors, who know how, will present for the first time in this city at Ullman's Grand Opera House, on Tuesday, Nov. 17, "The Turning Point."

When a manager hunts around and finds a good play, engages a company of clever, capable people to present same, mounts and equips the play in a lavish manner, both in a scenic and electrical way, and offers the same to the public for their approval and patronage, he should receive the support of the theater-goers. The acting company that will play "The Turning Point" in this city is made up of the same artists who presented "Paid in Full" in this city last fall. That alone should be a guarantee of its worth, as no better acting company has appeared here in years. Will E. Culhane, who has made so many admirers by his artistic handling of the part of Captain Williams, will be seen as Mortimer, a part that was written expressly for him.

If you want to laugh, don't miss "The Turning Point." Prices are 25, 35 and 50c. Seats on sale at the box office.

I have a nice line of Fall and Winter hosiery and underwear samples from the World's Star Hosiery and Underwear Co., the kind that wears. An idea seems to be prevalent that there will be a shortage of toys this year on account of Germany being at war, but such is not the case, the supply this year being as bountiful as ever.

DELAWARE CAN NOW GO Forward in Building Roads—Du Pont's Plan Held Legal.

Not often is it necessary for a philanthropist to fight a strenuous legal battle in the courts and conduct a vigorous campaign to overcome public prejudice against his plan to give two million dollars to the state, but that has been the novel experience of General T. Coleman duPont of Delaware, who has finally cleared the last obstacle out of the way of his scheme to build a boulevard from the Pennsylvania to the Maryland line, pay for it out of his own pocket and turn it over to the people. Under a decision of the United States supreme court just handed down, the general is now free to proceed with the unique idea which he first proposed four years ago.

When he announced to the people of Delaware that he desired to construct a fine modern highway 110 miles long, stretching directly through the heart of the little Commonwealth and forming a main artery for the transportation of the truck and other farm produce which is the principal foundation of its wealth, it was naturally supposed that the generosity of the offer would make instant appeal. But not so. Curiously enough, an adverse sentiment sprang up immediately, especially among farmers whose land would have to be crossed. Some saw an ulterior motive, an attempt to get control of a valuable franchise under guise of granting an improvement to the people. It was suggested that the general might want to build a continuous string of tenement houses from end to end of the boulevard, overlooking the fact that at many places it would have to pass through swamps and wild woodlands where tenements would remain tenanted for years. Others thought that it would give him too much power. It was even advanced that to permit a private person to conduct such a great public work would be detrimental to the dignity of the state. Then, too, it was said that it was prompted by vanity and love of self-advertising, and intended to emphasize the wealth of the donor at the expense of the taxpayers, who could not be induced to assume the burden. No opinion seemed too fantastic or ridiculous to voice as an objection.

General duPont was flooded with letters from all parts of the state, and even outside points, many congratulatory, others contemptuous, and a few threatening. But none of them disturbed his good nature or caused him to turn aside from the project.

The first step was to have the legislature pass the necessary legislation, which was accomplished without much difficulty, once the leaders at Dover were made fully acquainted with the plans. Then came the law suits. The attack was made on every possible ground, but especially on the constitutionality of the law. This question was threshed out in all the courts of Delaware and up by slow degrees through the United States courts, until finally it resulted in the victory of last week. The legality of the project has been sustained and General duPont is expected to renew his active operations for the actual construction of the road where they were abruptly terminated at the beginning of the litigation. He means to superintend the work himself. He has not been in the best of health for sometime and has been retired from active business. But he believes the outdoor work will benefit him and has been looking forward with keenest pleasure to the exercise which it will furnish him in the open. He has had a special automobile, with sleeping quarters and a kitchenette attachment, built for his use, so that he can camp right at the scene of operations when they get out of easy access to the towns. It is estimated that the work will result in the expenditure of many thousands of dollars weekly in wages and give long and steady employment to some 3000 men.

The board authorized Commissioner W. C. Mitchell to have the ferry house and dock at the upper ferry repaired. Mr. I. W. Parker was before the board asking for the improvement of about 400 yards of the road south from Parsonburg. The board promised to investigate the matter at once. John T. Melson was appointed constable for Sharptown district.

The board instructed the roads engineer to request of the state roads commission, through Mr. W. B. Mitchell, that the roads be improved.

The city council in session Monday evening granted the following permits: To George B. Riggan, garage on East William street; to Laura E. Davis, store and dwelling on East Locust street; Willie C. Fields, wood and smoke house on Washington street.

The ordinance granting the Peninsula Rapid Transit Co. a franchise to operate motor busses on the streets of Salisbury for a term of five years was received and was ordered posted, to be finally acted upon at the next meeting of the council.

This is the first step in what may prove to be one of the most important developments on the Eastern Shore for years.

This is one of the largest areas of densely populated country in the United States that is not already netted with electric lines of railroad. There is not an electric railroad south of Wilmington, although the population is far more dense than in many sections where there are hundreds of miles of such road in similar areas.

With our wonderful system of state roads, far superior to any other in the country, and with the development of self-propelling vehicles for travel on such roads, it is doubtful if there will ever be any need for local traffic, however heavy, which cannot be met by the auto trucks and cars which will be multiplying rapidly every year.

This new project is one of the most promising enterprises that has ever been considered for our part of the country. It gives all the service and convenience of a system of electric lines, and does it at a very much smaller investment.

The clerk was instructed to send to Mrs. Martha Perdue a bill for taping sewer on Poplar Hill avenue; also to notify the Salisbury Light, Heat and Power Co. to repair at once the sidewalk on Newton street in front of S. F. Melson's residence property, broken up by them in planting a pole on said street.

Mayor Bounds and Councilmen White and Hitch were appointed a committee to investigate and make the necessary changes in the assessment of Patrick H. Doody's lot on Camden avenue and make report at the next meeting of the council.

WILLARDS CAMPGROUND DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Blaze Causes Loss of About $5000 on Sunday Last.

The campground at Willards was destroyed by fire on Sunday last. All the buildings in the campground, consisting of 41 tents, the tabernacle and boarding house, were burned, a strong southwest wind causing the fire to eat its way through the camp in a very short time.

Many of the tents were torn down in the hope of stopping the advance of the flames, but in spite of all efforts made, the fire continued to gain headway and it was thought for a while that the entire town of Willards would be destroyed. A large number of automobilists, who were out on the new state road, were attracted by the smoke from the fire and rushed to render assistance.

The Willards camp was one of the most popular camps in this section. It was dedicated about 16 years ago and has been a success from the start.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

At City Hall Monday Night of Public Interest.

The city council in session Monday evening granted the following permits: To George B. Riggan, garage on East William street; to Laura E. Davis, store and dwelling on East Locust street; Willie C. Fields, wood and smoke house on Washington street.

The ordinance granting the Peninsula Rapid Transit Co. a franchise to operate motor busses on the streets of Salisbury for a term of five years was received and was ordered posted, to be finally acted upon at the next meeting of the council.

Mayor Bounds and Councilmen White and Hitch were appointed a committee to investigate and make the necessary changes in the assessment of Patrick H. Doody's lot on Camden avenue and make report at the next meeting of the council.

The clerk was instructed to pay Mrs. W. A. Crew the amount of interest due her on note she holds against the city. Bills amounting to $832.52 were approved and ordered paid by the treasurer.

On motion Mayor Bounds was authorized to execute on behalf of the mayor and council, a deed to P. H. Doody for so much of the Jackson property at the corner of Main and Hill streets as is not required by the city for widening Mill street, for the sum of $2500, this price to include the brick building located thereon.

The council passed a resolution authorizing the Downing Concrete Co. to dig the trenches on South Division street for the laying of new water mains, when ordered to be done.

The county commissioners were in session Tuesday and transacted considerable routine business. The board received a letter from the war department granting an extension of time for the completion of the two lift bridges in Salisbury until December 31.

MAY TEST LIQUOR LAW

On Shore—Plan Said to Under Way To Try Case in Court.

The limited shipping bill, passed at the last session of the legislature of Maryland, which prevents residents of the Eastern Shore of Maryland from receiving more than a gallon of whiskey in any one month, is soon to be tested. Plans are under way to test the law, and those behind the movement assert that beyond a single doubt the constitutionality will be proven invalid when it reaches the court of appeals.

A representative of the firm of Anthony Keyser, Philadelphia, was on the Shore last week making a quiet but thorough investigation into the machinations of the law.

The alleged weakness of the law according to the Keyser people is that it interferes with interstate trade, and the fight will be conducted on that line, and the arguments used against the Hazel law of Delaware will be applied against the Eastern Shore anti-whiskey bill.

The Keyser people have conferred with Attorney General Allan Poe and some time within the next few days a shipment of five gallons of whiskey will be made to some resident of one of the Eastern Shore counties. The express or freight company handling the shipment, will, of course, refuse to make the delivery, and then the Keyser people will make a demand for the delivery, backed by a like demand from the consignee. When the transportation company refuses to make the delivery, the Philadelphia firm will then institute proceedings to compel its delivery.

Even should the law be declared unconstitutional, however, it would still be impossible for Eastern Shore residents to obtain more than a gallon a month from any firm in Maryland, but they could order as much as they desired from any firm in Delaware or Philadelphia. This naturally would turn the Eastern Shore's whiskey trade from Baltimore to either Wilmington or the Quaker city.

Rumor has it that the same interests that fought the Hazel law in Delaware are behind the movement to overthrow the Eastern Shore law. In any event, the fight will, no doubt, prove interesting from a legal point of view, and many are wondering just what the outcome will be—Chester-town Enterprise.

Appeal For Literature

The Sunshine Society, a part of the Salisbury Civic Club, would like to make a general appeal for reading matter for the Tuberculosis Sanitarium. The Sanitarium has no library whatever—the six or eight novels that have been taken there by thoughtful individuals have been read and reread from cover to cover by the patients, who are now eager for something new.

An interesting collection of books and magazines is particularly needed at an institution of this kind, where the patients are almost isolated and are not strong enough for any occupation much more strenuous than reading.

We feel sure that there are numerous novels in every household that have been read, some round the circle of friends, and returned to a secluded bookshelf, no further amusement there and a dust collector. Of these or any books you choose to send we would most gladly welcome. Don't throw them away—send them to the Sanitarium.

We would suggest as a Christmas present to the Sanitarium, to any one so inclined, a subscription to a newspaper or a magazine.

Will those replying to this appeal to help the giving of a little sunshine kindly send their books and magazines direct to the Sanitarium or to Miss Louise Tilghman on Camden Avenue, or simply notify Miss Tilghman of your willingness to help—telephone 75.

Mardela News

Mr. George Waller, Mr. Loran Langdale, Mr. G. C. Bounds and Miss Stella Bounds of Quantico motored over to Chestertown last Friday in Mr. Waller's new Buick to attend the football game. They returned Monday afternoon. Miss Aldridge of Chestertown accompanied them home.

Miss Jennie Robertson of Philadelphia, who has been spending several weeks with friends here, returned to her home Saturday.

Mrs. L. A. Wilson and Mrs. Ida Langdale spent the week-end with Mrs. Jones in Salisbury.

There are several new buildings going up in our town and we are glad that they are nearing completion as Christmas will soon be here.

DAMAGE TO CATTLE

Wicomico Farmers Should Be Posted About Foot and Mouth Disease.

The meat and milk supply of the country is threatened by the spread of a highly contagious disease known as the "Hoof and Mouth Disease." This disease was a curious matter some years ago, especially in Pennsylvania, where hundreds of cattle were killed as a matter of prevention of the spread of the infection throughout the country.

What the Disease Is. This plague among domestic animals, especially cattle, sheep, swine and goats, is characterized by sensitive sores on the tongue, palate and hoof of the animal, according to the Department of Agriculture. The sores become red and raw within a very short time and cause the disease to spread "like lightning" to other cattle. Lameness appears and the milk ducts dry up. It takes two years to cure an animal. The only way to stamp out the disease is to destroy all animals afflicted.

Extension of the livestock quarantine because of this epidemic to Canada, Rhode Island and Delaware was decided upon Monday by the Department of Agriculture and further extensions will be made as soon as it is found necessary.

The disease has made its appearance in upper Delaware, but has not been discovered elsewhere on the Peninsula. Should it reach the Middle-town section from which the entire Eastern Shore gets a great deal of its butter, milk and ice cream, this whole section of country would be in danger.

The disease is destroying cattle in the middle western and western states and New Castle county will be quarantined.

Four or five well developed cases of the scourge have been located in a herd which was shipped to farmers in Mill Creek hundred from Lancaster, Pa. The discovery was made by Dr. Charles A. Schaufler, Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, and Dr. H. P. Eves, Delaware state veterinarian.

As a result of their investigations the experts have been summoned to appear before the Live Stock Sanitary Board which met early Monday, to consider the situation and devise ways and means of preventing the spread of the disease. Both Dr. Schaufler and his colleague admit that the presence of the foot and mouth disease demands drastic action and it is not improbable that all movements of cattle in New Castle county will be prohibited.

That the situation demands drastic action to prevent a spread of the disease, is the statement of Dr. H. P. Eves, who will be in charge of the fight against the scourge in Delaware.

"We have discovered five developed cases of foot and mouth disease among the cattle belonging to Leslie Derrickson and shall kill his entire herd at once," Dr. Eves said.

"We shall also destroy other stock he has on his place as well as house cats. His dog will not be killed, but the pigeons he has will have to be done away with at once. Mr. Derrickson received his cattle from Lancaster, Pa., and in the same shipment were cows for Reuben Satterthwaite and Thompson Bailey. We have not discovered the disease among herds on the Satterthwaite or Bailey farms, but as the cattle came into the county with those on the Derrickson farm, they are being closely watched.

"The situation here requires that we act at once. Veterinarians from all parts of the state will meet with Governor Charles R. Miller, members of the Live Stock Sanitary Board and myself at the Hotel Dupont to discuss plans for preventing further spread of the disease."

Farm Laborers Supplied

L. Wethered Barroll, 609 Keyser building, Baltimore, Md., announces that he will be in his office November 16 and 17, and on those two days will be prepared to furnish an unlimited number of Germans—farm laborers—to the farmers of this county. Mr. Barroll does not make the slightest charge for his services in securing this labor. He suggests that you either call him over the telephone on these two days or else call at his office in person and select your own laborers and bring them home with you.

Mrs. White Passes Away

Mrs. Annette J. White, widow of the late Mr. John H. White, died early Wednesday morning at her home on Camden avenue, after three weeks' illness. Mrs. White was born in Chestertown and was a daughter of the late United States Senator George R. Vickers. She lived in Salisbury ever since her marriage to Mr. White, who died a little over a year ago. She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Hartog of Baltimore, and the following children: Mrs. William S. Gordy, Jr., Mrs. S. R. Douglas, Messrs G. Vickers White and J. Cleveland White.

BUY AT HOME

Money Spent at Home Will Create a Home Market.

The dollars spent with the home merchant are the dollars that help build up the community. Nobody ever heard of a mail order house in a distant city making a contribution for the improvement of this town. The merchant in the city pays nothing toward the support of the school in which our children are educated, nor toward the support of the churches in which our people worship. In fact, the dollar sent to the merchant in the big city is gone forever, so far as any good to your community is concerned. Is it fair to deprive the home merchant of your cash trade and thus deprive the community of the benefits to be derived from keeping this money at home? Civic pride is a virtue to which that citizen can not rightfully lay claim who makes a practice of sending away from home for his purchases just for the sake of saving a few pennies on each. Let's all band together in an effort to build up the community by patronizing the home merchants.

Is your town a "back yard" town? The impression a traveler gets as he passes through the small towns and hamlets, while it is fleeting in many respects, in many others it is lasting. Most small towns are centered about the railway station, and little or no separation between their business and residence districts is apparent.

The traveler receives a good or bad impression accordingly as he sees neat rows of well-kept residences and business buildings or tumble-down ramshackle buildings close up to the tracks, the yards covered with debris and rubbish. Can you say frankly and with pleasure that your town is well-kept and unworthy of the allusion "a back yard town?" If not, clean up, so that the visitor can say nothing derogatory. Let him go away with a pleasing, lasting impression of the beauties and the business-building opportunities to be found in your town.

Don't expect the impossible of your town and its merchants. Be sure first, before you complain of the goods and prices of home merchants, that you haven't had a hand in making it impracticable for our merchants to handle the kind of goods you want at the prices you can pay. Merchants are not mind readers, nor are they blind to their own best interests. If they haven't what you want they will get it for you at as low or lower price than you can get it anywhere else. They deserve to be given an opportunity to do so anyhow; but if they don't deserve it you will be doing yourself a bigger favor than will they to deal face to face with men you know and that can be held personally accountable for their promises and performances. Try this for a rule of trading hereafter.—The Banker-Farmer.

The wedding of Miss Blanche Lillian McGehee, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. E. A. McGehee, to John Erman Hastings, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hastings, of Salisbury, Md. was solemnized Thursday evening at the home of the brides parents, north Thirteenth St. The ceremony took place at 9 o'clock, Rev. James L. Green officiating. The lower floor was decorated in palms, potted plants and lighted candles. Mrs. Harry C. Duesberry sang "Believe me all those Endearing Young Chorus," just before the bride party entered. Harry C. Duesberry accompanied by Eugene Leidy on the violin played the wedding march from "Lohengrin." The bride entered the parlor on the arm of her father, who gave her away. She wore a travelling costume of blue chiffon broadcloth, with hat and gloves to match and carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Beaulieu McGehee, who attended her sister as maid of honor wore blue charmuese draped in chiffon, with Dutchesse lace and carried a big bouquet of Killarney roses, Little Nellie McGehee, in a dainty dress of white silk and chiffon carried the ring in the heart of a collar lily. Richard Holmstoller was the bridegroom's best man. Mr. and Mrs. Hastings left as ones for a southern wedding tour. Some of the guests from a distance attending the marriage were Olophson McGehee of Portsmouth; Mrs. Scott from Norfolk; W. T. Van Pelt of Norfolk and Misses Mamie and Nellie Hastings of Salisbury, Md.

The Maryland Agricultural College Extension Department has issued No. 1 of Volume 1 of an interesting little pamphlet entitled "Farm Adviser." It is filled with interesting bits of information regarding the work of the department and of progressive agriculture in general. Its field will be to keep the farming public advised as to what the college is trying to accomplish and as to what it is really doing. Prof. T. B. Symons is the director of the Extension Department.

CORN LESSONS

Suggestions for Study by Children in the Rural Schools.

For the benefit of children in rural schools suggestions for a series of lessons on corn are about to be issued by the United States agricultural department. The average production per acre of corn in the United States is still below 23 bushels, despite the fact that in almost every section of the country yields of more than 100 bushels have been obtained. The difference indicates in a measure the value of proper instruction in growing corn. The spread of boys' corn clubs all over the country has also emphasized the need of corn study in rural schools.

The forthcoming bulletin contains outlines of 12 lessons covering such important points as the different kinds of corn, ways of judging corn seed, corn crop rotation, best kind of fertilizers, proper cultivation and the food value of the crop. Suggestions for the proper observance of corn day have received consideration. Rural school teachers, especially in the great corn growing states, will find the bulletin a valuable aid in the work of stimulating in their charges a healthy interest in sound agriculture.

TEST OF FRIENDSHIP

By JULIE CARSON.

"I think," said Phyllis to her husband as they were packing their trunk preparatory to taking their annual vacation trip, "that I shall ask Sue to take care of the chickens while I am gone. I know that she will be glad to do that much for me and—"

"Well, inasmuch as she lives next door and has only to cross the yard to feed them and seeing that she will probably get about a dozen and a half eggs a day from them, I don't think that you are putting her regard to a very severe test," replied Phyllis' husband.

"I wonder, John Billingsby, why it is that packing always seems to have such a disagreeable effect upon you," commented Phyllis, as she watched him staring helplessly at a bunch of neckties from which he was vainly trying to choose the best to put in his trunk. "You never seem to be able to pack a trunk without unpacking your bad temper at the same time. You know very well that Sue doesn't like chickens; she says that their habit of always eating makes her nervous, and as for the eggs, she would rather buy them at the store than get them at the cost of caring for the chickens."

"And have you thought whom you would inflict that Angela kitten upon?" questioned her husband.

"Oh, that's all settled," declared Phyllis, triumphantly. "Ruth Comford is going to take the kitten. You know she adores cats, but her husband has an antipathy for them and won't let her have one, but he has consented to allow her to borrow mine while we are gone and Ruth is as happy as if she had come into the possession of a fortune and has promised me to treat it as her own. Ruth is really devoted to me and I think that if she hated cats she would be just as conscientious in her care of my kitten, simply out of pure friendship."

"Pure friendship!" echoed Billingsby, as he folded and unfolded, then folded again a white flannel outing coat that he had bought in a moment of reckless determination to make this trip the gayest one in his experience. "I'll be willing to wager this coat that Sue will be so sick of her chickens and Ruth so disgusted with that cat's sly ways that they will be heartily glad to see you back. It's a pity people cannot go away on vacations without unloading all their responsibilities and possessions on their friends and neighbors. By the way, where did you send our Kirmanshaw rug? That's worth more than a bushel of chickens and kittens."

"Oh, the rug is over at the Stevens'; they were delighted to have it."

The next day the Billingsbys went on their way. At the end of three weeks they returned with a thick coat of tan on their noses, and a very thin layer of bits in their purses, and in their hearts the deepest of thankfulness to be back.

Mrs. Billingsby's first act was to go over to Sue's to get the key to the chicken coop.

"Oh, are you back so soon?" said Sue with badly concealed consternation and disappointment in her face. "I had just got the chickens used to my ways and in another week I know I could have done wonders."

She yielded up the key unwillingly and Mrs. Billingsby felt that her return was anything but welcome. She slyly betook herself to the Comford home, where more consternation awaited her.

"Why, it seems as if you had just gone," declared Ruth, with no attempt to hide her dismay. "Kitty and I were just getting acquainted, and she is so used to her new basket that I am sure she will be quite unhappy if you take her away at once."

The vacant place on the floor of the Shaw's living room where the loaned rug was removed was another reproach. By the time Mrs. Billingsby reached her own home the gladness had faded from her face.

"They all seemed sorry to have me back," she confessed, "and they made me feel like a cruel impostor when I asked for the return of my own belongings."

"It is curious," commented Billingsby, "how a warm and pure friendship for a person—for a very nice person I might say—can be supplanted by an impersonal affection for a chicken, or a kitten, or a rug. But at least you have put your friends to the test and know the depth of their regard."—Chicago Daily News.

SEPARATION DANCES STYLISH THIS SEASON

Close-Holding Not Exactly An Fall In New Order of Things Polka Threatens To Return

Knees are to be most unsociable on the dancing floor this winter. At least the dancing teachers hope their efforts to segregate them will be successful. And if their instructions are followed the welfare board will have no complaints about propriety or body movements.

This season's steps must be danced with the hips and shoulders dormant, says the Kansas City Star. Even the "bobbin up and down" of the Castle Walk has been succeeded by the glittering trot of the one-step. Smoothness and finish in all the dances is the teachers' edict.

"The good dancer this year will be judged not by the number of steps, but by the way they are executed," says Miss Vera Nelson, who studied dancing in New York this summer. "This year the changes in the dances are not nearly so revolutionary as they were last fall. Dancers will not have to start all over again, but may use the steps they have learned as a foundation."

The new steps cannot be danced well close together. Close position is the sign of a poor dancer, says Way. Poor dancers cling to their partners in order to keep their balance, while they would be unable to do alone. "Twelve inches is not too far to keep apart. In some of the new dances the man and woman perform different steps at the same time, so that considerable space between them is essential. Many, many times women cannot dance their best because they are held so tightly."

"This season's dances will do away with much of this trouble, I believe, because in a way they are more stately and dignified than for several years. Some of the old-fashioned dances, such as the polka and the valse, are coming back. They may not be popular this season, but they will be in time. At present it looks as if the fox trot and the queer would prove most popular. In New York they are dancing many of the one-step figures to country time. Both the one-step and the hesitation will remain with us at least an other season. Some excellent new one-step figures, among them the box turn and the wave, will keep this dance in vogue. The hesitation has been standardized so that everyone may now dance its four figures in the same order.

The tango, Miss Nelson believes, could be revived if given another name. Only the prejudices against it as danced last year will keep it out, says she. It also has been standardized and simplified and a so-called "summer tango" was the rage in the East during the hot weather.

"But of the great variety of new things in dancing the maxixe is my favorite," Miss Nelson said. "Its several figures have also been standardized and should not prove difficult for good dancers to learn."

"The half and-half, while apparently very simple, is one of the hardest to dance correctly because if done smoothly it must be danced off the rhythm. This will prove hard to those who have been taught from the first a necessity of keeping in time with the music."

Prospects Bright For Business Improvement The Country Over.

It is of great interest at this time to hear from headquarters regarding the financial and commercial conditions of the United States, and noteworthy to hear the feeling of optimism which prevails in authentic sources. See what John Skelton Williams, comptroller of the currency and member of the federal reserve board says:

Reports have been received up to November 1 by the comptroller of the currency from national bank examiners in every part of the country upon the state of business in their respective districts and a summary of their impressions and observations arrived at by actual contact with the commercial and industrial interests gives us a most reassuring promise for the future. These reports are now upon file for the month of October and a feeling of substantial optimism runs through a vast majority of them.

Moreover, these reports provide us with a very accurate review of the conditions as they obtain today. They not merely point to great improvement in the business of the future, but they furnish the causes for any depression that may prevail locally or generally throughout the country. They show whether or not business is steady, or improving or declining.

No Failures of Moment.
 Perhaps as significant as any phase of these investigations is the fact that no failures or suspensions of moment have been reported to the treasury. This does not apply merely to banking institutions, but it applies to all lines of business endeavor.

Of all the sections of the country only the South appears at this time to be seriously crippled. This is due, as is well known, to the over-production of cotton, coupled with the breaking down of the export cotton market.

Improving in the South.

Even so, small loans are to a large extent being paid throughout the South as they fall due. All southern crops are reported in fine condition. The recent harvests have never been more abundant. Rice, a staple of the south-west, has been particularly productive, as are the cereals where they have been raised to any extent. Reports from Atlanta are to the effect that the commercial houses are finding conditions greatly improved. In Texas unusual activity is noted in stock shipping.

Depression in the East.

In the east the inquiries of the bank examiners show that the European war has produced abnormal conditions generally. In some lines there is especial activity, the result, in large measure, of orders for war materials. In yet other lines there is a depressed state. It is worthy of remark, however, that but few manufacturing enterprises in the east have closed down entirely and only a small number are now working on reduced time.

Middle and Far West Prosper

The middle west, the intermountain states and the Pacific coast sections are even now showing symptoms of great prosperity. The bank examiners have found, for instance, that in the agricultural sections the great crops are being marketed at high prices; that in all the staples conditions have steadily improved for weeks and that the shipping facilities in some states are being taxed to meet the demands upon them.

On the Pacific coast the commercial demand for money is very strong. Withdrawals on account of the uneasiness produced by the European war have almost ceased.

In the intermountain country it is reported that practically all mills and factories are in full operation.

As for the middle west the fall season has had a most stimulating effect upon all lines of business.

Expansion More Than a Prospect
 This is, briefly, the condition of American business today as found by the host of national bank examiners.

But, as previously stated, these officials find throughout the country a feeling that dominates the business of the American people is inevitable; that trade expansion at home and abroad is more than a mere prospect, and that with the federal reserve system effective, with all energies—governmental and otherwise—trained to the same end, national business will assume great proportions whether the European struggle is long or short.

Too Good an Excuser.
 A young man, having broken an appointment with Doctor Franklin, came to him the following day and made a very handsome apology for his absence. He was proceeding when the doctor stopped him with: "My good boy, say no more; you have said too much already; for the man who is so good at making an excuse is seldom good at anything else."—Life.

To Counteract Tannin in Tea.
 One of the marked characters of tea is the tannin contained in it. Indian tea has about twice as much as the Chinese growth. It has a marked effect on the digestion, even in the presence of other fluids. In all cases it retards the digestive process to an extent that would astonish those who have not inquired into the matter; and it has been recommended that a pinch of bicarbonate of soda should be added to the brew of persons with weak digestions so as to make the infusion alkaline.

Sugar has dropped to seven cents per pound. Sugar in bulk, wholesale, was selling last week as low as 5 1-2 cents a pound, which is a drop of 2 1-2 cents from the highest price this year which was reached on August 14. Sugar merchants say the indications are that the drop will continue until the new year at least. This reduction applies almost entirely to the standard granulated brands, but a reflected lowering in the prices of the fancy grades is expected.

SHORT SERMONS.

As a simple naturalism takes the place of the old pessimistic supernaturalism, the faith of the world—that in every man which helps him to realize his aspirations—has an optimistic glow.—E. E. Newbert.

It is a grand thing to find joy in one's work. If you have found that, you have found the heart of life. Glad service is better than great service unless that be glad too.—James Buckham.

Of course we have a duty to distinguish between the good and the bad, but we have a duty to discriminate also among the things that are good. We are made not for the good only, but for the best.—Robert Speer.

END OF MILITARISM.

When the mass murders of the insane soldiery are done there will be a day of reckoning for kings. Civilization is in travail. A new child is about to enter the human family. It will be more enlightened than its elder brothers and will advance the cause of all mankind. Its mother, European monarchy, may pay for its advent with her own life, or she may drag along for a time in invalidism, but her end is not far distant.

The people as a whole hate war. Their being forced into it will drive out of the minds all vestige of devotion to monarch. The time is not remote when militarism will end and wars cease. The masses are already of a mind to strip autocrats of their power to send armies to death and countries to ruin.—Danish Democrat.

EVILS OF IGNORANCE.

Nothing is more terrible than active ignorance.—Goethe.

The living man who does not learn is dark, dark, like one walking in the night.—From the Chinese.

The most ignorant are the most conceited. Unless a man knows that there is something more to be known his inference is, of course, that he knows everything. * * * But let a man know that there are things to be known of which he is ignorant, and it is so much carried out of his domain of universal knowledge.—Horace Mann.

BRILLIANTS.

Still, still with thee, when purple morning breaketh, When the bird waketh and the shadows flee; Fairer than morning, lovelier than the daylight, Dawns the sweet consciousness, I am with thee! —Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Teach me then To harmonize the discord of my life And stop the painful jangle of these wires.

That is a task impossible, until You tune your heartstrings to a higher key Than earthly melodies. —Longfellow.

And they were canopied by the blue sky, So cloudless, clear and purely beautiful That God alone was to be seen in heaven. —Byron.

CUPID'S ADVERTISEMENT.

Cupid is a busy elf, You can see this for yourself. Yet perhaps he'll find it wise Presently to advertise, Somewhat in this style maybe, "Hearts extracted painlessly." He'll, of course, omit to state That the after pain is great, And when heart is gone, 'tis said, Man is apt to lose his head, Gladly would he bear some pain If his heart he could regain. —New York Sun.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

In adversity it is easy to despise life; he is truly brave who can endure a wretched life.—Martial.

Nothing is well ordered that is hasty and precipitate.—Seneca.

Without your knowledge the eyes and ears of many will see and watch you as they have done already.—Cicero.

The belly is the teacher of art and the bestower of genius.—Peristus.

The uncertain multitude is divided by opposite opinions.—Vergil.

LOVE'S PHILOSOPHY.

The fountains mingle with the river, And the rivers with the ocean, The winds of heaven mix forever

With a sweet emotion; Nothing in the world is single; All things by a law divine In one another's being mingle—Why not I with thine?

See the mountains kiss high heaven, And the waves clasp one another;

No sister dower would be forgiven If it disdain'd its brother;

And the sunlight clasps the earth, And the moonbeams kiss the sea;

What are all these kisses worth If thou kiss not me? —Shelley

Better Than Poultries.

If at any time you have a gathered finger or pitted hand, take a cabbage leaf, roll it out with a bottle until the juice comes, and tie it on the affected part. This will draw and cleanse it far better than a poultice.

Must Report All Tuberculous.

In Great Britain physicians are obliged to report every case of tuber-

SERVIA'S BATTLE HYMN.

Rise, O Servians, swift arise! Lift your banners to the skies. For your country needs her children Fight to make her free. Rise, O rise, and crush our enemy.

Rise and fight for liberty. Free the Save and Drina flow. Let us, too, unfetter'd go O'er the wild Moravian mountains.

Swift shall flow sweet freedom's fountains, Down shall sink the foe. Rise, O rise, and crush our enemy.

Rise and fight for liberty.

GERMAN APHORISMS.

Better go to bed without supper than rise with debts

Honor the old, instruct the young, consult the wise and bear with the foolish.

Heavy work in youth is sweet repose in old age.

Towns and countries are never more ruined than when counsel is taken from foreigners.

Trust not too much in a new friend and an old house.

CORONACH.

He is gone on the mountain, He is lost to the forest, Like a summer dried fountain, When our need was the sorest. The font reappearing, From the raindrops shall borrow.

But to us comes no cheering, To Duncan no morrow!

The hand of the reaper

Takes the ears that are hoary, But the voice of the weeper

Wails manhood in glory. The autumn winds rushing

Waft the leaves that are sear'd, But our flower was in flushing

When the blighting was nearest.

Fleet foot on the corral.

Sage counsel in lumber, Red hand in the foray.

How sound is thy slumber! Like the dew on the mountain,

Like the foam on the river, Like the bubble on the fountain,

Thou art gone, and forever! —Walter Scott.

BITS OF WISDOM.

Therefore well does Agathon say, "Of this alone is even God deprived, the power of making that which is past never to have been."—Aristotle.

There is, however, a limit at which forbearance ceases to be a virtue.—Burke.

This nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth.—Abraham Lincoln.

In the lexicon of youth, which fate reserves for a bright manhood, there is no such word as fall.—Bulwer Lytton.

BARCAROLE.

Small fingers on the silken strings;

Sunset and rising moon; Far hills of lapis, whirl of wings

Of homing birds in June; And thou wert there, the twilight

On thy brow— O bitter is the biwa's music now!

Beneath the scented tamarinds

On some celestial trail We drifted with the purple winds That filled our sampan sail; The purple winds blow once and and not again— O bitter is the biwa's, tender strain! —Harper's Weekly.

Must Not Whistle in Russia.

In certain cities of Russia strict whistling by civilians is a penal offense, the privilege being reserved for the police; who exercise it, however, not in order to make tunes with their mouths, but to send signal blasts to each other. The whistling habit being hereditary, it soon disappears, and in these cities no difficulty is experienced in sealing nowadays with

A NURSE TAKES DOCTOR'S ADVICE and is Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Euphemia, Ohio.—"Because of total ignorance of how to care for myself when venturing into womanhood, and from taking cold when going to school, I suffered from a displacement, and each month I had severe pains and nausea which always meant a lay-off from work for two to four days from the time I was 16 years old. I went to Kansas to live with my sister and while there a doctor told me of the Pinkham remedies but I did not use them then as my faith in patent medicines was limited. After my sister died I came home to Ohio to live and that has been my home for the last 13 years. The Change of Life came when I was 47 years old and about this time I saw my physical condition plainly described in one of your advertisements. Then I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I cannot tell you or any one the relief it gave me in the first three months. It put me right where I need not lay off every month and during the last 18 years I have not paid out two dollars to a doctor, and have been blest with excellent health for a woman of my age and I can thank Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it. Since the Change of Life is over I have been a maternity nurse and being wholly self-supporting I cannot over estimate the value of good health. I have now earned a comfortable little home just by sewing and darning. I have recommended the Compound to many with good results, as it is excellent to take before and after childbirth."—Miss EVELYN ADELIA STEWART, Euphemia, Ohio.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (consult) 253 Central Bldg., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

She Knew Her Rights. "Yes, grandma," murmured the little girl drowsily, "I'll be a good girl and let you rock me to sleep, but you got to wake me up when mamma comes home so she can rock me to sleep regular."

The Last Shot

By FREDERICK PALMER

the war lasts the greater will be the loss of life and the misery? "Yes, for both sides; and the heavier the expense and the taxes." "If you win, then we shall be under your flag and pay taxes to you?" "Yes, naturally." "The Browns do not increase in population; the Grays do rapidly. They are a great, powerful, civilized race. They stand for civilization!" "Yes, facts and the world's opinion agree," he replied. Puzzled he might well be by this peculiar catechism. He could only continue to reply until he should see where she was leading.

"And your victory will mean a new frontier, a new order of international relations and a long peace, you think? Peace—a long peace?" "Was there ever a soldier who did not fight for peace? Was there ever a call for more army-corps or guns that was not made in the name of peace? He had his ready argument, spoken with the forcible conviction of an expert.

"This war was made for peace—the only kind of peace that there can be," he said. "My ambition, if any glory comes to me out of this war, is to have later generations say: 'He brought peace!'" "Though the premier, could he have heard this, might have smiled, even grinned, he would have understood Westering's unconsciousness of inconsistency. The chief of staff had set himself a task in victory which had no military connection. Without knowing why, he wanted to win ascendancy over her mind.

"The man of action!" exclaimed Marta, her eyes opening very wide, as they would to let in the light when she heard something new that pleased her or gave food for thought. "The man of action, who thinks of an ideal as a thing not of words but as the end of action!" "Exactly!" said Westering, sensible of another of her gifts. She could get the essence of a thing in a few words. "When we have won and set another frontier, the power of our nation will be such in the world that the Browns can never afford to attack us," he went on. "Indeed, no two of the big nations of Europe can afford to make war without our consent. We shall be the arbiters of international disagreements. We shall command peace—yes, the peace of force, of fact. If it could be won in any other way I should not be here on this veranda in command of an army of invasion. That was my idea—for that I planned. He was making up for having overlooked him in his confession that he had brought on the war as a final step for his ambition.

"You mean that you can gain peace by propaganda and education only when human nature has so changed that we can have law and order and houses are safe from burglary and pedestrians from pickpockets without policemen? Is that it?" she asked. "Yes, yes! You have it! You have found the wheat in the chaff." "Perhaps because I have been seeing something of human nature—the human nature of both the Browns and the Grays at war. I have seen the Browns throwing hand-grenades and the Grays in wanton disorder in our dining-room directly they were out of touch with their officers!" she said sadly, as one who hates to accept disillusionment but must in the face of logic.

Westering made no reply except to nod for a movement on her part pre-occupied him. She leaned forward, as she had when she had told him he would become chief of staff, her hands clasped over her knee, her eyes burning with a question. It was the attitude of the prophecy. But with the prophecy she had been a little mystical, the fire in her eyes had precipitated an idea. Now it forged another question. "And you think that you will win?" she asked. "You think that you will win?" she repeated with the slow emphasis which demands a careful answer. The deliberateness of his reply was (Continued on page 1)

Coins of Small Value. Doubtless the smallest coin in the world circulates in the Malay peninsula, simply a thin wafer made from the resinous juice of a tree, and has current value of about 1-10,000th of a cent. In the southern parts of Russia the peasants use a coin of such small value that a quarter of a million of them are worth no more than $1.25. The old Japanese mouseng was worth 1-12th of an American cent. In Portugal the reis in the lowest standard of value had but no 1-reis pieces are coined. A 3-reis piece is equivalent to 6-100ths of a cent.

Greatness of Man. The greatness of man does not show itself in its ability to build cathedrals, to sculpture, to paint, to write, to invent, to discover, to control men, to found nations, etc., but in its ability to commune with God and do his bidding.—Western Methodist.

Good Idea at Any Time. The following from an English paper will apply to many other places besides the sick room: "Whatever happens do not keep on saying, 'Now, I am sure I am trying you. I had better go.' Only a sick bear would have the courage to take this literally. Get up, say good-by, and go."

Returned to Life in Coffin. To be buried alive in the cemetery of Hochwald, in the canton of Soloura, was the fate of an elderly Swiss lady. After the burial ceremony the grave diggers were about to fill in the grave when they heard knocking in the coffin. Instead of rendering immediate help they fled in terror to inform the doctor and the priest. When the doctor arrived at the grave the coffin was opened and it was found that the woman, who had turned over, had

"The Thinkers of the Country Are the Tobacco Chewers"—said one of the greatest thinkers this country ever produced. Says the Judge: "My brain grasps the points of a case more easily when I'm chewing PICNIC TWIST. I suppose it's because of the gentle stimulation that PICNIC TWIST gives without the after effects of "strong" tobacco. "Have you ever noticed how many great jurists chew? Well, there's nothing better to oil the wheels of justice than PICNIC TWIST." Have you ever wished for a tobacco that you could keep on chewing without feeling that you were over-chewing? For a long time you've really been looking for PICNIC TWIST, with its lasting sweet taste, and true tobacco satisfaction with no "come-back." Compare PICNIC TWIST in taste, looks, convenience or any other way, with any dark "heavy" tobacco. THE LAST SHOT

In keeping with her mood. He was dejected; he was a referee.

"Yes, I know that we shall. Numbers make it so, though there be no choice of skill between the two sides."

His tone had the confidence of the flow of a mighty river in its destination on its way to the sea.

There was nothing in it of prayer, of hope, of desperation, as there had been in Lanstron's "We shall win!" spoken to her in the arbor at their last interview.

She drew forward slightly in her chair. Her eyes seemed much larger and nearer to his. They were sweeping him up and down as if she were seeing the slim figure of Lanstron in contrast to Westerling's sturdiness; as if she were measuring the might of the five millions behind him and the three millions behind Lanstron.

She let go a half-whispered "Yes!" which seemed to reflect the conclusion gazed from the power of his presence.

"Then my mother's and my own interests are with you—the interests of peace are with you!" she declared.

She did not appear to see the sudden, uncontrolled gleam of victory in his eyes. By this time it had become a habit for Westerling to wait silently for her to come out of her abstractions. To disturb one might make it unproductive.

"Then if I want to help the cause of peace I should help the Grays!"

The exclamation was more to herself than to him. He was silent. This girl in a wicker chair desiring to aid him and his five million bayonets and four thousand guns!

Forty miles away a bell in Lanstron's bedroom and at his desk rang simultaneously. At the time he and Partow were seated facing each other across a map on the table of the room where they worked together.

No persuasion of the young vicar-chief, no edict of the doctors, could make the old chief take exercise or shorten his hours.

"I know. I know myself!" he said. "I know my duty. And you are learning my boy, learning!"

Every day the flabby cheeks grew pastier and the pouches under the eyebrows heavier. But there was no dimming of the eagle flashes of the eyes, no weakening of the will.

Last night Lanstron had turned as white as chalk when Partow staggered on rising from the table, the veins on his temples knotted blue whipcords. Yet after a few hours' sleep he reappeared with firm step, fresh for the fray.

The paraphernalia around these two was the same as that around Westerling. Only the atmosphere of the staff was different.

Each man was performing the part set for him. No man knew much of any other man's part. Partow alone knew all, and Lanstron was trying to grasp all and praying that Partow's old body should still feed his mind with energy.

Lanstron was thinner and paler, a new and glittering intensity in his eyes.

When word of Feller's defection came, Lanstron realized for the first time by Partow's manner that the old chief of staff, with all his depreciation of the telephone scheme as chimerical, had grounded a hope on it.

"There was the chance that we might know—so vital to the defense—what they were going to do before and after the attack," he said.

Yet the story of how Feller yielded to the temptation of the automatic had made the nostrils of the old war-horse quiver with a dramatic breath, and instead of the command of a battery of guns, which Lanstron had promised, the chief made it a battalion. He had drawn down his brows when he heard that Marta had asked that the wire be left intact, he had shot a shrewd, questioning glance at Lanstron and then beat a tattoo on the table and half grinned as he grumbled under his breath:

"She is afraid of being lonesome! No harm done!"

A week had passed since the Grays had taken the Galland house, and still no word from Marta. The ring of the bell brought Lanstron to his feet with a startled, boyish sound.

"Very spry," that tendon of Achilles, muttered Partow. "And, my boy, take care, take care!" he called suddenly in his sonorous voice, as vast and billowy as his body.

It was Marta's voice and yet not Marta's, this voice that beat in nervous waves over the wire.

"Lanny—Yes, Lanny! You were right. Westerling planned to make war deliberately to satisfy his ambition. He told me so. The first general attack on the first line of defense is to-night. Westerling says so!"

She had to pause for breath. "And, Lanny, I want to know some position of the Browns which is weak—not actually weak, but some position where the Grays expect terrible resistance and will not find it—where you will let them in!"

"In the name of—Marta! Marta, what?"

"I am going to fight for the Browns—for my home!"

In the sheer satisfaction of explaining herself to herself, of voicing her sentiments, she sent the pictures which had wrought the change moving across the screen before Lanstron's amazed vision. There were no more for Lanstron to see, his question or need of one. The wire seemed at quiver with the militant passion of the spirit. It was Marta at the end, was talking at the other end, not at all for him, but with a purpose that revealed all the latent strength of her personality and daring.

"I shall have to ask you now. It's a pretty big thing."

"Yes—only that is not all my plan, my 1000 plan. After they have taken the first line of defense—and they will get it, won't they?"

"Yes, we shall yield in the end, yield rather than suffer too great losses than that will weaken the defense on the main line."

"Then I want to know where it is that you want Westerling to attack on the main line, so that we can get him to attack there. That—that will help, won't it?"

"Yes, of course, all the while I shall be getting news from her—then I have veranda. All the thinking she had done that afternoon had been in pictures: some saying, some cry, some, groan, or some smile went with every picture.

The sitting-room of the tower was empty to other eyes but not to hers. The lantern was in the corner at hand. After her hastening steps had carried her along the tunnel to the telephone, she set down the lantern and pressed the spring that opened the panel door.

Another moment and she would be embarked on her great adventure in the finality of action. That little ear-piece became a specter of conscience. She drew back convulsively and her hands flew to her face; she was a rooking shadow in the thin, faddish light of the lantern.

Conscious mind had torn off the mask from subconscious mind, revealing the true nature of the change that war had wrought in her. She who had resented Feller's part—what a part she had been playing! Every word, every shade of expression, every telling pause of abstraction after Westerling confessed that he had made war for his own ends had been subtly prompted by a purpose whose actuality terrified her.

Her hypocrisy, she realized, was as black as the wall of darkness beyond the lantern's gleam. Then this demoralization, passed, as a nightmare passes, with Westerling's boast again in her ears.

When war's principles, enacted by men, were based on sinister trickery called strategy and tactics, should not women, using such weapons as they had, also fight for their homes? Marta's hands swept down from her eyes; she was on fire with resolution.

Forty miles away a bell in Lanstron's bedroom and at his desk rang simultaneously. At the time he and Partow were seated facing each other across a map on the table of the room where they worked together.

the wire, Lanny. Ask Partow!" she concluded. Of the two she was the steeper.

"Well!" said Partow, looking up at the sound of Lanstron's step. Then he half raised himself from his chair at sight of a Lanstron with eyes in a gaze of brilliancy; a Lanstron with his maimed hand twitching in an outstretched gesture; a Lanstron in the dilemma of being at the same time lover and chief of intelligence. Should he let her make the sacrifice of every thing that he held to be sacred to a woman's delicacy? Should he not return to the telephone and tell her that he would not permit her to play such a part? Partow's voice cut in on his demoralization with the sharpness of a blade.

"Well, what, man, what?" he demanded. He feared that the girl might be dead. Anything that could upset Lanstron in this fashion struck a chord of sympathy and apprehension.

Lanstron advanced to the table, pressed his hands on the edge, and, now master of himself, began an account of Marta's offer. Partow's former arms lay inert on the table, his soft, pudgy fingers outspread on the map and his bulk settled deep in the chair, while his eagle eyes were seeing through Lanstron, through a mountain range, into the eyes of a woman and a general on the veranda of an enemy's headquarters. The plan meant giving, giving in the hope of receiving much in return. Would he get the return?

"A woman was the ideal one for the task we trusted to Feller," he mused, "a gentleman, big enough, adroit enough, with her soul in the work as so paid woman's could be! There seemed to such one in the world!"

"But to let her do it!" gasped Lanstron.

"It is her suggestion, not yours! She offers herself? She wants no persuasion?" Partow asked sharply.

"Entirely her suggestion," said Lanstron. "She offers herself for her country—for the cause for which our soldiers will give their lives by the thousands. It is a time of sacrifice."

Partow turned his arms. They were not factious, as he brought them down with sledge-hammer force to the table.

"Your tendon of Achilles? My boy, side is your sword-arm?" His sturdy frame ran along the line of iron-rod under his eye in a little staccato leaps. "H!" he checked significantly, finger pointed.

"Let them up the ladder and on to redoubt 20 and 21, you mean?" asked Lanstron.

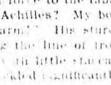

"You have it! The position looks important, but so will any we command it that it is not really vital. Yes, the ladder road is her bait for Westerling!" Partow waved his hand as if the affair were settled.

"But," interjected Lanstron, "we have also to decide on the point of the main defense which she is to make. Westerling thinks is weak."

"It is not necessary to start with. We can give that to her later over the telephone, can't we, eh?"

THE LAST SHOT

"She asked for it now."
"Why?" demanded Partow with one of his shrewd, piercing looks.
"She did not say, but I can guess," explained Lanstron. "She must tell her cards on the table; she must tell Westerling all she knows at once. If she tells him piecemeal it might lead to the supposition that she still had some means of communication with the Browns."
"Of course, of course!" Partow spat out the flat of his hand resoundingly on the map. "As I decided the first time I met her, she has a head, and when a woman has a head for that sort of thing there is no beating her. Well—she was looking straight into Lanstron's eyes. 'Well, I think I know the point where we could draw them in on the main line, eh?'"
"Up the apron of the approach from the Engadri valley. We yield the advance redoubts on either side."
"Meanwhile, we have massed heavily behind the redoubt. We retook the advance redoubts in a counter-attack and—" Partow brought his fist into his palm with a smack.
"Yes, if we could do that! If we could get them to expend their attack there!" put in Lanstron very excitedly for him.
"We must! She shall help!" Partow was on his feet. He had reached across the table and seized Lanstron's shoulders in a powerful if flesh-padded grip. Then he turned Lanstron around toward the door into his bedroom and gave him a mighty slap of affection. "My boy, the brightest hope of victory we have is holding the wire for you. Tell her that a bearded old beehemoth, who can kneel as gracefully as a rhinoceros, is on both knees at her feet, kissing her hands and trying his best, in the name of mercy, to keep from breaking into verse of his own composition."
Back at the telephone, Lanstron, in the fervor of the cheer and the enthusiasm that had transported his chief, gave Marta Partow's message.
"You, Marta, are our brightest hope of victory!"
"Yes!" the monosyllable was detached, dismal, labored. "A woman can do that!" she exclaimed in a discontented tone which grew into the distraction of clipped words and broken sentences. "A woman playing-acting—a woman acting the most revolting hypocrisy—influences the issue between two nations! Her deceit deals in the lives of sons precious to fathers and mothers, the fate of frontiers, of institutions! Think of it! Think of machines costing countless millions—machines of flesh and blood, with their destinies shaped by one little bit of lying information! Think of the folly of any civilization that stakes its triumphs on such a gamble! Am I not right? Isn't it true? Isn't it?"
"Yes, yes, Marta! But—" Lanstron was weakening it was not his place to try to strengthen her purpose.
"It will be sooner and fighting, won't it, Lanny?" she asked in a small, tense voice.
"Yes."
"And the only real end that means real peace is to prove that the weak can hold back the strong from their threshold?"
"Yes."
Even now Westerling might be on the veranda, perhaps waiting for news that would enable him to crush the weak; to prove that the law of five pounds of human flesh against three, and five bayonets against three, is the law of civilization.
"Yes, yes, yes!" The constriction was gone from her throat; there was a drum-beat in her soul. "Depend on me, Lanny!" It was Feller's favorite phrase spoken by the one who was to take his place. "Yes, I'm ready to make any sacrifice now. For what am I? What is one woman compared to such a purpose? I don't care what is said of me or what becomes of me if we can win! Good-by, Lanny, till I call you up again! And God with us!"
"God with us!" as Partow had said, over and over. The saying had come to be repeated by hard-headed, agnostic staff-officers, who believed that the deity had no relation to the efficiency of gun-fire. The Brown infantrymen even were beginning to mutter it in the midst of action.
Waiting on the path of the second terrace for Westerling to come, Marta realized the full meaning of her task. Day in and day out she was to have suspense at her elbow and the horror of hypocrisy on her conscience, the while keeping her wits nicely balanced. When she saw Westerling appear on the veranda and start over the lawn she felt dizzy and uncertain of her capabilities.
"I have considered all that you have said for my guidance and I have decided," she began.
She heard her own voice with the relief of a singer in a debut who, with knees shaking, finds that her notes are true. She was looking directly at Westerling in profound seriousness. Though knees shook, lips and chin could aid eyes in revealing the painful fatigue of a battle that had raged in the mind of a woman who went away for half an hour to think for herself.
"I have concluded," she went on, "that it is an occasion for the sacrifice of private ethics to a great purpose, the sooner to end the slaughter."
"All true!" whispered an inner voice. Its tone was Lanny's, in the old days of their comradeship. It gave her strength. All true!
"Yes, an end—a speedy end!" said Westerling with a fine, inflexible emphasis. "That is your prayer and mine and the prayer of all lovers of humanity."
"It is little that I know, but such as it is you shall have it," she began, conscious of his guarded scrutiny. When she told him of Bordir, the weak point in the first line of the Browns' defense, she noted no change in his steady look; but with the mention of Engadri in the main line she detected a gleam in his eyes that had the merciless delight of a cutting edge of steel. "I have made my sacrifice to some purpose? The information is worth something to you?" she asked wistfully.
"Yes, yes, yes, it promises that way," he replied thoughtfully. Quietly he began a considerable catechism. Soon she was subtly understanding that her answers lacked the convincing details that he sought. She longed to avert her eyes from his for an instant, but she knew that this would be fatal. She felt the force of him directed in professional channels, free of all personal relations, beating as a strong light on her bare statements. How could a woman ever have learned two such vital secrets? How could it happen that two such critical points as Bordir and Engadri should go undefended? No tactician, no engineer but would have realized their strategic importance. Did she know what she was saying? How did she get her knowledge? These, she understood, were the real questions that underlay Westerling's polite indirection.
"But I have not told you the sources of my information! Isn't that like a woman!" she exclaimed. "You see, it did not concern me at all at the time I heard it. I didn't even realize its importance and I didn't hear much," she proceeded, her introduction giving time for improvisation. "You see, Partow was insisting the premises with Colonel Lanstron. My mother had known Partow in her younger days when my grandfather was premier. We had them both to luncheon."
"Yes!" put in Westerling, betraying his eagerness. Partow and Lanstron! Then her source was one of authority, not the gossip of subalterns!
"And it occurs to me now that, even while he was our guest, she interjected in sudden indignation—that even while he was our guest Partow was planning to make our grounds a redoubt!"
"After luncheon I remember Partow saying, 'We are going to have a look at the crops,' and they went for a walk out to the knoll where the fighting began."
"Yes! When was this?" Westerling asked keenly.
"Only about six weeks ago," answered Marta.
"Later, I came upon them unexpectedly after they had returned," she went on. "They were sitting there on that seat concealed by the shrubbery. I was on the terrace steps unobserved and I couldn't help overhearing them. Their voices grew louder with the interest of their discussion. I caught something about appropriations and aeroplanes and Bordir and Engadri, and saw that Lanstron was pleading with his chief. He wanted a sum appropriated for fortifications to be applied to building planes and dirigibles. Finally, Partow consented, and I recall his exact words: 'They're shockingly archaically defended, especially Engadri,' he said, 'but they can wait until we get further appropriations in the fall!' She was so far under the spell of her own invention that she believed the reality of her words, reflected in her wide-open eyes which seemed to have nothing to hide.

"That is all," she exclaimed with a shudder—"all my eavesdropping, all my breach of confidence! If—if it"—and her voice trembled with the intensity of the one purpose that was shining with the light of truth through the murk of her deception—"it will only help to end the slaughter!" She held out her hand convulsively in parting as if she would leave the rest with him.
"I think it will," he said soberly. "I think it will prove that you have done a great service," he repeated as he caught both her hands, which were cold from her ordeal. His own were warm with the strong beating of his heart stirred by the promise of what he had just heard. But he did not prolong the grasp. He was as eager to be away to his work as she to be alone.
"I think it will. You will know in the morning," he added.
His steps were sturdier than ever in the power of five against three as he started back to the house. When he reached the veranda, Bouchard, the saturnine chief of intelligence, appeared in the doorway of the dining room; or, rather, reappeared, for he had been standing there throughout the interview of Westerling and Marta, whose heads were just visible, above the terrace wall, to his hawk eyes.
"A little promenade in the open and my mind made up," said Westerling, clapping Bouchard on the shoulder.
"Something about an attack tonight?" asked Bouchard.
"You guess right. Call the others." Five minutes later he was seated at the head of the dining-room table with his chiefs around him waiting for the chairman to speak. He asked some categorical questions almost perfunctorily, and the answer to each was "Ready!" with, in some instances, a qualification—the qualification made by regimental and brigade commanders that, though they could take the position in front of them, the cost would be heavy. Yes, all were willing and ready for the first general assault of the war, but they wanted to state the costs as a matter of professional self-defense.

"I'm Going on My Experience as a Soldier."

Westerling could pose when it served his purpose. Now he rose and, going to one of the wall maps, indicated a point with his forefinger.
"If we get that we have the most vital position, haven't we?"
Some uttered a word of assent; some only nodded. A glance or two of curiosity was exchanged. Why should the chief of staff ask so elementary a question? Westerling was not unconscious of the glances or of their meaning. They gave dramatic value to his next remark.
"We are going to mass for our main attack in front at Bordir!"
"But," exclaimed four or five officers at once, "that is the heart of the position! That is—"
"I believe it is weak—that it will fall, and tonight!"
"You have information, then, information that I have not?" asked Bouchard.
"No more than you," replied Westerling. "Not as much if you have anything new."
"Nothing!" admitted Bouchard wryly. He lowered his head under Westerling's penetrating look in the consciousness of failure.
"I am going on a conviction—on putting two and two together!" Westerling announced. "I am going on my experience as a soldier, as a chief of staff. If I am wrong, I take the responsibility. If I am right, Bordir will be ours before morning. It is settled!"
"If you are right, then," exclaimed Turcas—"well, then it's genius or—"
He did not finish the sentence. He had been about to say coincidence; while Westerling knew that if he were right all the skepticism in certain quarters, owing to the delay in his program, would be silenced. His prestige would be unassailable.

CHAPTER XVI.
Marking Time.

Soon after dark the attack began. Flashes from gun mouths and glowing sheets of flame from rifles made ugly revelry, while the beams of search-lights swept hither and thither. This kept up till shortly after midnight, when it died down and, where hell's concert had raged, silent darkness shrouded the hills. Marta knew that Bordir was taken without having to ask Lanstron or wait for confirmation from Westerling.
She was seated in the recesses of the arbor the next morning, when she heard the approach of those regular, powerful steps whose character had become as distinct to her as those of a member of her own family. Five against three! Five against three! They were saying to her; while down the pass road and the castle road ran the stream of wounded from last night's slaughter.
Posted in the drawing-room of the Galland house were the congratulations of the premier to Westerling, who had come from the atmosphere of a staff that accorded to him a military insight far above the analysis of ordinary standards. But he was too clever a man to vaunt his triumph. He knew how to carry his honors. He accepted success as his due. In a matter of course manner that must inspire confidence in further success.
"You were right," he said to Marta easily, pleasantly. "We did it—we did it—we took Bordir with a loss of only twenty thousand men!"
Only twenty thousand! Her revulsion at the bald statement was relieved by the memory of Lanny's word over the telephone after breakfast that the Browns had lost only five thousand. Four to one—a wide ratio, she was thinking.
"Then the end—then peace is so much nearer!" she cried.
"Very much nearer!" he answered earnestly, as he dropped on the bench beside her.
He stretched his arms out on the back of the seat and the relaxed attitude, unusual with him, brought into relief a new trait of which she had been hitherto oblivious. The conqueror had become simply a companionable man. Though he was not sitting close to her, yet, as his eyes met hers, she had a desire to move away which she knew would be unwise to gratify. She was conscious of a certain softening charm, a magnetism that she had sometimes felt in the days when she first knew him. She realized, too, that then the charm had not been mixed with the indescribable, intimate quality that it held now.
"In the midst of congratulations after the position was taken last night," he declared, "I confess that I was thinking less of success than of its source." He bent on her a look that was warm with gratitude.
She lowered her lashes before it; before gratitude that made her part appear in a fresh angle of misery.
"There seems to be a kind of fatality about our relations," he went on. "I lay awake pondering it last night. His tone held more than gratitude. It had the elation of discovery.
"He is going to make it harder than I ever guessed," echoed her own thought, in a flutter of confusion.
"Yes, it was strange our meeting on the frontier in peace and then in war!" she exclaimed at random. The sound of the remark struck her as too subdued; as expectant, when her purpose was one of careless deprecation.
"I have met a great many women, as you may have imagined," he proceeded. "They have passed in review. They were simply women, witty and frail or dull and beautiful, and one meant no more to me than another. Nothing meant anything to me except my profession. But I never forgot you. You planned something in mind: a memory of real companionship."
"Yes, I made the prophecy that came true!" she put in. This ought to bring him back to himself and his ambitions, she thought.
"Yes," he exclaimed, his body stiffening free of the back of the seat. "You realized what was in me. You foresee the power which was to be mine. The fate that first brought us together made me look you up in the capital. Now it brings us together here on this bench after all that has passed in the last twenty-four hours."

She realized that he had drawn perceptibly nearer. She wanted to rise and cry out: "Don't do this! Be the chief of staff, the conqueror, crushing the earth with the tread of five against three!" It was the conqueror whom she wanted to trick, not a man whose earnestness was painting her deceitful face. Far from rising, she made no movement at all; only looked at her hands and allowed him to go on, unconscious of the force of a personality that mastered men and armies now warm and appealing in the full tide of another purpose.
"The victory that I was thinking of last night was not the taking of Bordir. It was finer than any victory in war. It was selfish—not for army and country, but born of a human weakness triumphant; a human weakness of which my career had robbed me," he continued. "It gave me a joy that even the occupation of the Browns' capital could not give. I had come as an invader and I had won your confidence."
"In a cause!" she interrupted hurriedly, wildly, to stop him from going further, only to find that her intonation was such that it was drawing him on.
"That fatality seemed to be working itself out to the soldier so much older than yourself in renewed youth, in another form of ambition. I hoped that there was more than the cause that led you to trust me. I hoped—"
Was he testing her? Was he playing a part of his own to make certain that she was not playing one? She looked up wittily for answer. There was no gaining what she saw in his eyes. It was beating into hers with the power of an overwhelming masculine passion and a maturity of intellect as his egotism admitted a comrade to its throne. Such is ever the way of a man in the forties when the clock strikes for him. But who could know better the craft of courtship than one of Westerling's experience? He was fighting for victory; to gratify a desire.
"I did not expect this—I—" the words escaped tumultuously and chokingly.
He was bending so close to her that she felt his breath on her cheek burning hot, and she was sickeningly conscious that he was looking her over in that point-by-point manner which she had felt across the breakfast table at the hotel. This horrible thing in her glance she had sometimes seen in strangers on her travels, and it had made her think that she was wise to carry a little revolver. She wanted to strike him.
"Confess! Confess!" called all her own self-respect. "Make an end to your avasement!"
"Confession, after the Browns have given up Bordir! Confession that makes Lanny, not Westerling, your duke!" came the reply, which might have been telegraphed into her mind from the high, white forehead of Partow bending over his maps. "Confession, betraying the cause of the conquering five! No! You are in the thing. You may not retreat now." For a few seconds only the duel of argument thumped in her temples—seconds in which her lips were parted and quivering and her eyes dilated with an aspiration which the man at her side could interpret as she pleased. A prompting devil—a devil routed by that thing in his eyes—urging a finess in double-dealing which only devils understand, made her lips hypnotically turn in a smile, her eyes soften, and sent her hand out to Westerling in a trance-like gesture. For an instant it rested on his arm with telling pressure, though she felt it burn with shame at the point of contact.
"We must not think of that now," she said. "We must think of nothing personal; of nothing but your work until your work is done!"
The prompting devil had not permitted a false note in her voice. Her very pallor, in a fit of dew, served her purpose. Westerling drew a deep breath that seemed to expand his whole being with greater appreciation of her. Yet that harried hunger, the hunger of a beast, was still in his glance.
"This is like you—like what I want you to be!" he said. "You are right!" He caught her hand, including it entirely in his grip, and she was sensible, in a kind of dazed horror, of the thrill of his strength. "Nothing can stop us! Numbers will win! Hard fighting in the mercy of a quick end!" he declared with his old rigidity of five against three which was welcome to her. "Then," he added—"and then—"

"Then!" she repeated, averting her glance. "Then—" There the devil ended the sentence and she withdrew her hand and felt the relief of one escaping suffocation, to find that he had realized that anything further during that interview would be banality and was rising to go.
"I don't feel decent!" she thought. "Society turned on Minna for a human weakness, but I—I'm not a human being! I am one of the pawns of the machine of war!"
Walking slowly with lowered head as she left the arbor, she almost ran into Bouchard, who apologized with the single word "Pardon!" as he lifted his cap in overdone courtesy, which his stolid brevity made the more conspicuous.
"Miss Galland, you seem lost in abstraction," he said in sudden loquacity. "I am almost on the point of accusing you of being a poet."
"Accusing!" she replied. "Then you must think that I would write bad poetry."
"On the contrary, I should say excellent—using the sonnet form," he returned.
"I might make a counter accusation, only that yours would be the epic form," answered Marta. "For you, too, seem fond of rambling."
There was a veiled challenge in the hawk eyes, which she met with commonplace politeness in hers, before

After reading the public statement of this representative citizen of Salisbury given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which proved so beneficial years ago with the kidneys, can naturally be expected to perform the same work in a similar case. Read this—
A. R. Lohner, 818 William St., Salisbury, Md., says: "Anyone who takes Doan's Kidney Pills as directed will get great results. I have never heard a word against this remedy and I consider it the best of all. I had trouble from my kidneys for thirty years and my work made the complaint worse. If I took cold, it affected my kidneys, causing my back to become weak and lame. The kidney secretions were irregular. The kidney pills have always given me the best results when I have taken them. You are at liberty to use the statement I gave some years ago praising this remedy."

SALISBURY ADVERTISER

VOL. 47.

SALISBURY, MARYLAND, SATURDAY NOV. 21 1914

NO. 48

Time To Advertise

Advertising PAYS if it is the RIGHT kind of advertisement, and it is placed where it will be seen.

The best form of advertising is acknowledged by all successful men to be Newspaper Advertising.

Those who have REAL VALUES to offer are found in the columns of a GOOD newspaper.

Those who do not advertise are seldom successful—and sometimes entirely unreliable.

The people have learned this and prefer to buy of the man who has enterprise and confidence enough in his merchandise to ADVERTISE it.

ADVERTISING TO BE EFFECTIVE must get into the hands of buyers. Circulation is a very valuable factor—but NOT ALWAYS the most important factor.

A PAPER may have a large circulation, but number FEW people able to buy.

A GOOD FAMILY paper, circulated among those who are able to buy is the best possible medium.

A PAPER to have the confidence of its readers must be open and fair. It must support and uphold the MORALS of the community in which it is located. It must not be SUBSERVIENT to any interest at all. It must fight for the PROGRESS and ADVANCEMENT of the community in which it is. It must not have POLITICAL or PERSONAL axes to grind. ITS management must command the RESPECT and CONFIDENCE of its readers.

The Salisbury Advertiser offers to the advertising world a circulation that reaches every section of this county. It places in the hands of INFLUENTIAL and PROSPEROUS readers a copy every week.

Its long establishment in this community has given it an ENTIRE in the homes of those ABLE TO BUY. It has tried to be fair to all, and is controlled by no interest. It has ever tried to support the MORAL side of public questions. Its pages have been kept clean of matter unfit to put into the hands of the young. IT STANDS for the ADVANCEMENT of this CITY and this COUNTY. IT has no POLITICAL or PERSONAL AXES to grind.

CHRISTMAS ADVERTISERS—if reliable—are welcomed to its columns.

GET A GOOD RELIABLE STOCK OF GOODS, THEN PLACE AN ADVERTISEMENT IN THE SALISBURY ADVERTISER—THE PAPER THAT GETS RESULTS—THE PAPER THAT ENTERS THE HOMES OF THOSE ABLE TO BUY.

We advise our readers to carefully scan our columns for the advertisements of the merchants. They will find therein the BEST and most RELIABLE firms of this community. Remembering that the BEST and most RELIABLE merchants the world over are those that ADVERTISE.

POST OFFICE TO CHANGE LOCATION

Next Year—Arrangements Made To Go On Realty Property.

The post office problem in Salisbury has taken on a new appearance. Postmaster Truitt Wednesday was advised by the department that an arrangement had been authorized by which a new and permanent structure is to be erected on the property of the Salisbury Realty Company on the south side of Main street between Division and Baptist streets, just east of the Wailes estate.

The new quarters are to be erected by the Realty Company for the use of the government and a 10 year lease is to be made by the government for the purposes of the post office department. The building will be a permanent structure of 32 feet front and 75 feet depth, and the post office is to occupy the first story and a basement under the entire building the basement to be the same size as the first floor room.

The Realty Company is to furnish and equip the building with everything necessary to the transaction of business, including, furniture, lighting, heating, etc., and the rental is to be $1,500 per year.

It is understood that the Masonic Temple trustees demanded $2,000 per year for the renewal of the lease under which the present quarters are held. The rental has heretofore been $1,500 per year, and the Masonic Temple Association has furnished everything that is required of the new lessees.

These arrangements have been made by an inspector from the department and the action of the government has been taken practically on the advice of the inspector alone. In fact, the details of the proposition were practically unknown to Post Master Truitt until Wednesday.

Some weeks ago the Realty Company offered the government a free site for the permanent building which has been provided for by an appropriation of $90,000. The site then offered was immediately east of the Court House property. The site of the new temporary quarters is on the south side of Main street and somewhat nearer Division street.

It is believed that these arrangements can mean only that the government has no intention of erecting a building for federal purposes for several years, notwithstanding the money has been appropriated for site and building. Should they do so, however, the building to be erected at once as a temporary quarters will be such that the Realty Company can at once convert it into other uses.

Figs--Dawson

The wedding of Miss Sarah M. Dawson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Dawson of Roxborough, Pa., and Mr. Arthur F. Figs, a very popular young man of Laurel, Del., took place Saturday evening, Nov. 14, at 6 o'clock at Madley Methodist Episcopal parsonage, 1218 B street, Wilmington, Del. Rev. E. H. Collins, a former pastor of the groom, performed the ceremony. Miss Josephine Tinkler and three of their gentlemen friends witnessed the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Figs took the 6:53 express for Laurel, Del., to visit the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Figs.

CONFERENCE APPOINTMENTS

M. E. Church South Promotes Dr. Potts, But He Will Remain Here.

At the close of the Virginia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church South, in Norfolk Tuesday night the Rev. T. N. Potts, D. D., for the past three years presiding elder of Eastern Shore district, was appointed conference missionary secretary to succeed Rev. R. H. Bennett. Dr. Potts had one more year to serve as presiding elder before completing the limit. He will be succeeded on Eastern Shore district by Rev. J. Franklin Carey, a former pastor of Trinity church, who was presiding elder of Farmville district the past conference year. Rev. Carey is a native of Bishopville, Worcester county.

Rev. J. Callaway Robertson returns as pastor of Trinity church. Dr. Potts' appointment is a very important one in the conference. It is not known yet whether he will move from Salisbury, but it is hoped that he and his interesting family will remain here.

FARMERS SECURE HELP

German Laborers Obtained for Agricultural Work.

Quite a number of the farmers in Wicomico and adjoining counties have taken advantage of the offer of Mr. L. Wethered Barroll concerning a supply of German farm laborers. This notice appeared in The Advertiser and was widely read, as the following statement from Mr. Barroll shows:

"On Monday and Tuesday of this week, in accordance with the notice I placed in your paper last Saturday, I distributed in your county and in the adjoining counties, between 20 and 40 Germans, to the farmers who, having read the notice in your paper, called upon me and took the laborers home with them. There are about 1,000 of these unfortunate people in the city at the present time who have nothing to do, no means of support and it seems to me that it is a work of charity which is well worth our efforts to assist them in being placed in homes on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, where they can be of use to our farmers. I certainly appreciate your effort in co-operation with me in this matter.

"Yours sincerely, "L. WETHERED BARROLL."

Realizing the fact that these Germans cannot expect high wages the winter months, when there is very little work to do on the farms, Mr. Barroll believes he will be able to furnish our farmers with laborers at from $8 to $10 per month, in addition to their board and keep. Mr. Barroll makes no charge for his services and if anyone desires to winter a German to do the chores about the place, we advise them to call on Mr. Barroll.

Farm Laborers.

L. Wethered Barroll, 609 Keyser building, Baltimore, Md., will be in his office November 23 and 24 and will on those days have a number of German laborers for the farmers of this county if they will call at his office on those days, pick out their men and bring them home with them.

Mrs. Annette Vickers White

The death of Mrs. Annette Vickers White has brought a sense of personal bereavement to many hearts in this community, of which for years she had been a loved and honored member. No native of Salisbury could have been more loyal than she to the town of her adoption, or more closely identified with the place and people. Warm-hearted and generous in her sympathies, her happy enthusiastic nature endeared her to young and old. She was a faithful friend and a neighbor whose kindness never failed. Utterly forgetful of self she filled her days with loving service for those around her. The charm of her bright, cheery presence is gone from her home, but the influence of her unselfish life will linger and among the neighbors and friends she loved so well she will be held in lasting remembrance. A FRIEND.

Death of Mr. Ruark.

Mr. Huston Ruark, one of Salisbury's prominent business men, died at his home on Camden avenue Wednesday evening at 9 o'clock. He had been ill for some time with Bright's disease to which his death was due.

Mr. Ruark was 38 years of age and for a long time had been associated with the firm of Dorman & Smyth. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. Besides being very well known as a business man, Mr. Ruark had a large circle of warm friends who mourn his departure. He is survived by two brothers and three sisters: Messrs. Travers L. and Harry W. Ruark, Misses Mary Belle and Sallie Ruark and Mrs. William J. White.

SALISBURY IN LINE FOR PROGRESS

Many Improvements Made By Various Firms.

That Salisbury is living up to the reputation of being a live, hustling city, is well proven by the numerous changes that have taken place during the past few weeks. All are indicative of the progressive character of this city and point to its sure and rapid growth in the future as in the past.

The work on the basement of Ulman Sons' store has been completed and it is now fitted out as a first-class toy department. A large consignment of toys of all kinds and sizes has been received and with such a varied assortment in stock the toy buyers will have ample opportunity to get whatever kind of toys they desire. An idea seems to be prevalent that there will be a shortage of toys this year on account of Germany being at war, but such is not the case, the supply this year being as bountiful as ever.

The splendid new building of the Salisbury Building and Loan and Banking association at the corner of Main and Division streets, is now occupied by the firm and the beautiful offices of the structure are fast filling up with tenants, among whom are: Dr. L. F. Harsberger, dentist; A. M. Jackson, lawyer; A. G. Toadvine, insurance; Paul P. Whyland, insurance. Most of the tenants will occupy their new offices January 1.

The Salisbury Light, Heat and Power Company is making some extensive improvements at their big plant. A new Keeler boiler has recently been installed and Messrs. F. A. Grier & Son have the contract to remove the Erie boiler from its old foundations and erect it beside the new Keeler boiler on the wharf.

Contracts have been let for the rebuilding of the boiler and fuel house which will be done by Mr. Woodford Johnson, and when completed the plant will be in much more modern shape with larger fuel rooms and better facilities for handling the growing business.

The Callaway Shirt Company of this city, whose business has been principally to make up skirts for the trade which were cut at the larger factories, has put in a cutting and laundry department and are now making percale shirts of two grades under the Grand Union label. These shirts retail at 50 cents and $1 and are most excellent products. The firm also makes night robes and other products of men's wear.

The factory output has been increased to about 300 dozen of these percale shirts per week, which are laundered and made ready for delivery to the trade. This firm received a letter this week from the Albion Shirt Company of Manchester, England, asking them to bid on making union woollen shirts for the English army on a contract to run from January to next May. The letter said that hundreds of thousands of these shirts were needed and a contract would be made for any amount the firm could turn out.

The new theatre building on Main street is fast approaching completion and will soon add its imposing front to the structural beauty of Main street. This enterprise is one that will also be a lasting monument to the progressive spirit of the business men of our city and will be capable of staging the highest class theatrical productions so that our citizens may have the privilege of enjoying first-class plays in their home city.

The parcel post deliveries from the Salisbury postoffice are now carried by automobile wagon. Messrs. Ellis and Elzey, who have had the contract for some time and who formerly used a horse and carriage for the service, have purchased a new Ford delivery wagon of fine design and the packages are now delivered in this way. The parcel post business has grown so rapidly at the postoffice here that it was impossible to make the deliveries in time by the old method. The government allows the sum of $40 per month for the service and with the delivery of special delivery letters which are now handled with the parcel post wagon, the revenue derived will amount to probably $50 per month.

If the parcel post business continues to grow for the next year with the same rapidity as for the last, it will take the larger part of every day to get the packages delivered.

Perry--McGeorge

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. McGeorge have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter Mary Elizabeth to Mr. Frank Adams Perry on Wednesday, November 25, at West Point, Va. Mr. Perry is the son of Mr. and Mrs. V. Perry of this city and is associated with his father in the lumber business.

Sees Prosperity Rising

SECRETARY REDFIELD FINDS SITUATION GREATLY IMPROVED

—THINKS RECOVERY WILL GO ON—LETTER TO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF THE UNITED STATES GIVES MOST HOPEFUL VIEW OF FUTURE.

While the forces of destruction are being mobilized in ever-increasing strength in the warring countries of Europe, constructive agencies, public and private, are at work on this side of the Atlantic and resources of peace are being concentrated to overcome the effects of the world war.

All information reaching governmental departments here indicates that the gloom and depression which overtook business enterprises in the United States when the war storm burst is slowly drawing aside, and glimpses of present and coming prosperity are visible.

The hopeful outlook for American ventures was summarized today by Secretary Redfield in a letter to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in which he declared: "Let the worst be said and admitted that can be said respecting existing business difficulties in America, our condition still remains not only relatively bright, but rapidly improving and in many respects both prosperous and promising."

Sees Rapid Improvement.

The secretary's letter follows: "There is always room in a country as large as ours, and with such various conditions as exist in its different portions, for the pessimist to find some hook on which he can hang his mournful prophecies.

"One need not react to the other extreme and exclaim that the special prosperity of one is an indication of equally good conditions everywhere. The truth lies between, but no observer of the large movements in our commerce today fails to recognize the great improvement that has been made in business conditions within the last few weeks and which is still progressing. The payment of our foreign obligations is no longer cause for serious worry, since an import excess of $20,000,000 in August has been changed to an export excess of approximately $50,000,000 in October. This favorable process continues and there is every indication that it is likely to continue long.

Cites Other Evidences of Recovery.

"The deficit in our bank reserves in New York, which was as low as $43,000,000 in August, rose to a surplus reserve early this month of nearly $18,000,000. The course of exchange has become more normal. Clearing house certificates are being retired. Large sums of emergency notes have been withdrawn and with the opening of the Federal reserve system, great additional supplies of loanable funds have become available. There is no longer serious concern over our financial future.

"One can look back calmly now to the first weeks of August, when there was a wheat embargo which some feared might mean sad loss to many of our farmers. Those same farmers are prospering today, for wheat exports have been unprecedented in amount and at profitable prices. "Cotton has begun to move and existing arrangements promise relief from the shadow which has so long hung over our fellow citizens in the south.

Industries Also Reviving.

"If both money and crops are in far better condition than they were months ago, and if both are in some respects in excellent condition, the same is true of our industries. They are not all fully occupied, as facts in the iron and steel trade show, and there remains still a surplus of idle cars. One does not hear as much of the number of cars in use as is said of those which are idle, and one wonders whether the proportion of idle cars to the total, if it were stated, would not give a different impression from that which is made by the present form of statement. However, he who wants may read plain facts which show on every side not only a marked hopeful feeling in industry, but tangible facts on which such feeling rests.

"All problems are not worked out yet to perfect solution. That could hardly be with most of the business and industrial part of the world engaged in destroying life and property on a colossal scale. Nevertheless on many sides mills are busy and factories running full time or overtime; the number of unemployed is steadily getting less. The coming winter throws no dark shadow before as was feared a few weeks ago and the statement is beginning to be heard here and there that goods cannot be delivered as promptly as they are wanted because the factories are too busy.

Europe Turning Toward America.

"The world abroad, both that part of it which is in arms and that which is at peace, is turning toward America for a large portion of its supplies, and the phrase 'Buy it in America' has come to have a potency that his hitherto been lacking. "The improvement in conditions, however, is not wholly due to the war. Great and growing as our exports are, they form but a small portion of all the total business that is going on and which is constantly increasing. A knowledge that products can be sold, the certainty that money can be had to finance business and enterprise—these and facts like these have brought fresh confidence into our domestic markets at the same time that foreign buyers have entered them.

"We may be grateful, therefore, in a sense both calm and confident, not only that we are far better off than are our suffering brethren beyond the sea, but that we are better placed ourselves at home than we were a few weeks since. We may be glad that the present is good, thankful that it is growing better and hopeful for the coming months."

TO OPEN IN DECEMBER

New Arcade Theatre Preparing to Entertain the Public

Salisbury will have a really first-class playhouse before Christmas. The New Arcade Theatre is attracting the attention of the theatre interests of the country because we have here a city which it is believed will make it profitable to put on some of the best plays and bring some of the best actors of the country. For the first time we will have a house that will hold a large enough patronage to make it possible to pay for big attractions; also for the first time we will have a stage that will accommodate the loads of scenery and trappings of the big theatrical shows that travel only in the larger cities.

The work of completing the building is being rushed with a view to opening the house with some first-class performances before the first of the year, and probably before Christmas. The Arcade will be under the management of Mr. John H. Tomlinson, who has for several weeks been perfecting arrangements by which attractions of the very highest class obtainable will be brought to this city. He proposes to start out with nothing but the best that can be had. These higher class plays will not of course occupy the house more than a small part of the time, but when the theater is not used for the better plays it will be used as a moving picture theater where superior and more expensive entertainments of the Belasco type will be given. Only the higher class of pictures will be shown, such as other houses usually produce only for a much higher charge for admission. No 5-cent shows will be given and the admission will therefore be un-

The management proposes to be progressive in every sense of the word, and to give to Salisbury the best that is to be had. The public will have a fair chance to know through the newspapers what the features are in time to prepare for each treat. Look for later announcements in this paper.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

At City Hall Monday Night of Public Interest.

The city council met as usual on Monday evening. No building permits were asked at this session, which is quite an unusual occurrence, since building operations in Salisbury have been developing in an almost steady stream of requests. The approach of winter is probably the cause of the let-up.

A communication from the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad Company regarding the entrance of the sewer on E. Church street was referred to Councilman White to be explained to the company.

Messrs. E. L. White, Mayor Bounds and Street Supervisor Serman were appointed a committee to examine the condition of Washington and Jackson streets and report to the council. This caution was taken after a committee of property owners on these streets appeared before the council asking that something be done to relieve these streets of water which fills them after a heavy rain.

The question of the water mains on South Division street caused a lengthy discussion. The present mains from Upton street to the railroad tracks have been exposed by the lowering of the street to the new grade and the state board of health refused a permit to lower same two feet. The council appointed City Solicitor Johnson to go to Baltimore Tuesday morning and lay the matter before Dr. Fulton of the state board of health and explain the whole situation.

The council authorized Mayor Bounds to take immediate action regarding the laying of the six-inch mains from Camden street to Upton street which had been promised by the water company, but which has not been laid. The delay in this work the council fear, will hold up the improvement of South Division street, and Mayor Bounds was instructed to lay the six-inch pipes "at once and charge the expense to the water company. Mayor Bounds will proceed at once to complete this work under his authority as mayor.

The committee who made an examination of the sewer and inlets on Main street extended after the heavy rain of Sunday reported that the sewer and inlets were in good condition and carried the water off in ample time.

The clerk was instructed to notify the Baltimore, Chesapeake & Atlantic Railway Company, the Salisbury Light Heat & Power Company and the C. & P. Telephone Company that the council desired the removal of their pole lines on Mill street to new locations under the supervision of Engineer Schooley, so that the pavements and curbing could be laid on said street. The sewers are now being put in on this street. It was suggested that the three companies join together in one line of poles so as to relieve the street of the present pole congestion.

The council passed the franchise asked for by the Peninsula Rapid Transit Company and it was signed by the mayor. The company will now proceed at once to arrange for the service on the streets and expects to have at least two cars running by sometime early in December.

Chief Disharoon made a report of the fines imposed for October, amounting to $104.50, part of which had been collected.

Superintendent W. U. Polk of the Baltimore, Chesapeake & Atlantic Railway appeared before the council and asked that as the council was to order the removal of one side track of the company on Mill street that the company be given the right of way for the extension or use of another track so that the business could be handled. The council obligated to provide this right of way when the main track was ordered removed.

The county commissioners met Tuesday with a full board present. J. I. Wilkins was before the board asking for the building of a road from Bethel M. E. church to Zion. Referred to Commissioner Ward.

The board granted a pension of $1.50 per month to Mrs. Annie E. Hearn; order given to J. E. Guthrie to furnish goods.

Board approved the bond of John Melson, constable of Sharptown district.

A large delegation was before the board urging that some action be taken toward the building of the river road under the Shoemaker act.

Superintendent W. U. Polk of the B. & C. A. Ry. and Robert P. Graham, counsel of the road, appeared before the board and asked that two crossings near Glass Hill be closed. Board deferred action until December 1.

A delegation was before the board asking for improvements to the Salisbury-Whitton road. Referred to Commissioner Parsons.

Permission was granted the Salisbury Light, Heat and Power Company to erect five poles on the Coulbourn Mill road at city limits.

Request was made for shells to improve Pittsville road west to state road. Action deferred until next meeting.

Stewed Rhubarb.

Add one cupful of sour cherries to each two cupfuls of ripe, two cupfuls sugar, one-half cupful water and let boil up once. Serve cold. Or one may use gooseberries instead of cherries with the pieplant. Save sugar by adding to rhubarb after boiling.

Preparation of Orchard.

As the orchard is to occupy the land for several years, the work of thoroughly preparing the soil before planting is important.

Whether the planting is to be done early or late in the season, there is no time during the whole year so opportune for effective work with the plow, subsoil plow and harrow as just after the first good fall rain. At this time the subsoil is moist, not wet, and last- ing benefits result from stirring and pulverizing the subsoil to a good depth when it is in just the right condition.

Clean Up Fills.

The barn and hog yards should be drained each spring and all fills should be scraped up and burned; also the hen parks.

More tuberculosis and other diseases of both man and beast arise from shiftlessness in keeping fills about. If not cleaned away every spring the heat of the summer months develops its elements a thousand fold.

INOCULATING ALFALFA SEED

Some Farmers Have Wrong Idea as to Use of Materials for Legumes—Bacteria Gather Nitrogen.

(By J. F. NICHOLSON, Idaho Experiment Station.)

The correspondence recently received by the Idaho experiment station would indicate that some farmers have a wrong idea as to the use of inoculation material for alfalfa and other legumes. These bacteria applied to the seed have no power to assist in the germination of the seed, in increasing the stand or in correcting detrimental influence that may be operating in the soil. Their sole duty is in gathering nitrogen from the air and turning it over to the plants on whose roots they grow.

If the soil is deficient in nitrogenous fertilizers, therefore, they will enable the legume to make a good growth and yield. If the soil, on the other hand, is sour, or contains alkali, then these bacteria will be of little use. Again, if poor seed is used, or too much or too little seed is sown the bacteria will not remedy these troubles.

These bacteria need not be used if the legumes already growing in any particular soil show the nodules on the roots. This can be determined by careful examination of the roots for the nodules on the same. New ground is frequently deficient in these bacteria and they should be applied artificially.

Her Quest Ended.

An elderly lady from the country one day decided to adopt two children from the county orphan asylum.

She walked several miles before reaching the car line. It was the first time she had been on a car. She stared wide-eyed at everything she saw, then her gaze stopped on a sign, she read thus: "The Ohio Traction company—Children under twelve years of age 3 cents, or two for 5 cents."

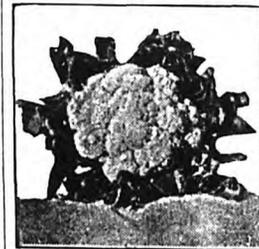

"Well," she said, "that is the best bargain ever." Calling the conductor she said: "Young man, I'll take two of those children for 5 cents right now, a boy and a girl, please."—National Monthly.

Cream Pie.

A cream and banana pie is very rich, but it has only one crust and so has a minimum of the least desirable element of pies. To make it desirable together in a granite saucepan the mashed pulp of two very ripe bananas with the yolks of three eggs, beaten; sugar and nutmeg to taste, a heaping teaspoonful of butter and enough milk and sherry, or just milk, to make a thin mixture. Pour it into a deep dish lined with crust and then fold in the whites of two eggs, beaten stiff. Bake rather slowly, chill and serve with or without whipped cream.

First Step Is to Have Plot Situated So It Can Be Given Same Treatment as Farm Crops.

The first step toward a successful garden is to have it so situated as to receive the same cultural treatment as that given the general farm crops. Progressive growers of today seek to eliminate, as far as possible, all hand-work in the making of their products. If this is a profitable procedure in the production of staples, it is of equal advantage in the growing of fruit and vegetables, writes S. B. Shaw in the Progressive Farmer. Too often the location is a small patch of fenced-in ground, near the house, where it is impossible to do any work except by hand. As a result the care of the garden is left to the women and children, yet what child really enjoys hoeing and pulling weeds or how many women on the farm can truly give the time and attention necessary to the profitable production of these crops, especially under such unfavorable conditions? In instances of this kind the home garden is not a source of profitable income.

Plan the garden to be twice or three times as long as wide, with the rows running lengthwise. In this way the plowing, harrowing and cultivating can be done in about one-third less time than it would take were the plot more nearly square.

Another feature to be considered is the arrangement of the permanent plantings of fruit trees, berry bushes or other crops that do not have to be renewed each year. If planted promiscuously throughout the garden they make it difficult to cultivate.

Moths in Carpets.

To rid the carpet of moths the following is excellent: Spread a damp towel over the part affected and iron it dry with a hot iron. The heat and steam kill the worms and eggs.

Before Using Beeswax.

When you use beeswax for polishing furniture or floors always warm it before using. The result is much saving of labor and a more brilliant gloss will result.

GARDEN FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Quick Growing Is Secret of Tender Crispness of Salad Plants—Keep the Soil Moist.

(By L. E. CHAPIN.)

Among less common sorts asparagus-beets are very desirable, as the entire plant may be cooked for greens when young, or the large ribs and veins from the older leaves may be cooked and served as asparagus. Brussels sprouts belong to the cabbage family and the tiny heads that form on the stalks are more delicate in flavor than most cabbage.

Kohlrabi seems like a cross between a cabbage and a turnip, but if cooked when young and tender has a flavor like cauliflower.

Petticoat (corn salad) may be sown and treated the same as spinach and furnishes one of the very early spring salads.

Endive is another very fine salad plant, and the seeds may be sown as late as August for plants to use during the fall.

Dandelions, of the improved, large-leaved sorts are among the finest salad plants, and if cut freely for use there is no danger of their becoming a nuisance.

Celeriac (turnip rooted celery) is finer for flavoring soups than the stalk-celery, and may be served in various ways.

Leeks are as easily grown as onions and being less in flavor are more desirable for some purposes.

Winter onions are very desirable because of the fact that when once planted they come up year after year as soon as the frost is out of the ground, and are ready for use in two or three weeks.

The Egyptian winter onion, or the perpetual tree onion are among the best of type because they are more hardy than some.

Okra is less well known than it should be. It is fine for use in soups, stews and salads.

Most gardens have rhubarb plants, but it is worth while to start a few roots of the "ever-ready" sort that furnish fine stalks during the entire summer and fall, if given water during very dry periods.

With all these (and other salad plants), quick growing is the secret of tender crispness and to secure it, the soil must be rich, and have plenty of moisture.

Catalogues and seed packets furnish cultural directions and are explicit and easily followed.

Keep the Soil Loose on Top. Never allow the soil to become hard and baked; stir it frequently and as deeply as possible without disturbing the roots. This will increase its capacity to hold moisture, which is very necessary to the welfare of the plant. Soil around leaf crops must be kept loose to cause them to grow rapidly, which will make them tender.

MRS. THOMSON TELLS WOMEN

How She Was Helped During Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I am just 52 years of age and during Change of Life I suffered for six years terribly. I tried several doctors but none seemed to give me any relief. Every month the pains were intense in both sides, and made me so weak that I had to go to bed. At last a friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and I tried it at once and found much relief. After that I had no pains at all and could do my housework and shopping the same as always. For years I have praised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me, and shall always recommend it as a woman's friend. You are at liberty to use my letter in any way."—Mrs. THOMSON, 649 W. Russell St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Change of life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to carry women so successfully through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

SHORT SERMONS.
As a simple naturalism takes the place of the old pessimistic supernaturalism, the faith of the world—that in every man which helps him to realize his aspirations—has an optimistic glow.—E. E. Newbert
It is a grand thing to find joy in one's work. If you have found that, you have found the heart of life. Glad service is better than great service unless that be glad too.—James Buckham
Of course we have a duty to distinguish between the good and the bad, but we have a duty to discriminate also among the things that are good. We are made not for the good only, but for the best.—Robert Speer

EVILS OF IGNORANCE.
Nothing is more terrible than active ignorance.—Goethe.
The living man who does not learn is dark, dark, like one walking in the night.—From the Chinese.
The most ignorant are the most conceited. Unless a man knows that there is something more to be known his inference is, of course, that he knows everything. * * * But let a man know that there are things to be known of which he is ignorant, and it is so much carved out of his domain of universal knowledge.—Horace Mann.

BRILLIANTS.
Still, still with thee, when purple morning breaketh,
When the bird waketh and the shadows flee;
Fairer than morning, lovelier than the daylight,
Dawns the sweet consciousness, I am with thee!
—Harriet Beecher Stowe.
Teach me then
To harmonize the discord of my life
And stop the painful jangle of these wires.
That is a task impossible, until
You tune your heartstrings to a higher key
Than earthly melodies.
—Longfellow.
And they were captivated by the blue sky,
So cloudless, clear and purely beautiful
That God alone was to be seen in heaven.
—Byron.

CUPID'S ADVERTISEMENT.
Cupid is a busy elf,
You can see this for yourself.
Yet perhaps he'll find it wise
Presently to advertise.
Somewhat in this style maybe,
"Hearts extracted painlessly"
He'll, of course, omit to state
That the after pain is great.
And when heart is gone, 'tis said,
Man is apt to lose his head.
Gladly would he bear some pain
If his heart he could regain
—New York Sun.

WORDS OF WISDOM.
In adversity it is easy to despise life; he is truly brave who can endure a wretched life.—
Martial.
Nothing is well ordered that is hasty and precipitate.—Seneca.
Without your knowledge the eyes and ears of many will see and watch you as they have done already.—Cicero.
The belly is the teacher of art and the bestower of genius.—
Persius.
The uncertain multitude is divided by opposite opinions.—
Virgil.

LOVE'S PHILOSOPHY.
The fountains mingle with the river,
And the rivers with the ocean,
The winds of heaven mix forever
With a sweet emotion;
Nothing in the world is single;
All things by a law divine
In one another's being mingle—
Why not I with thine?
See the mountains kiss high heaven,
And the waves clap one another;
No sister flower would be forgiven
If it disdain'd its brother;
And the sunlight clasps the earth,
And the moonbeams kiss the sea.
What are all these kisses worth
If thou kiss not me?
—Shelley

Fire to Be Used Again.
To stop following hostile vessels or for purposes of attack when the conditions are right a German naval officer has invented a Greek fire that will burn while floating on water.

Her Two Steady Jobs.
When a woman really loves a man she takes equally great delight in making him comfortable when she thinks he is miserable and miserable when she finds him comfortable.—
Baltimore Star.

END OF MILITARISM.
When the mass murders of the insane soldiery are done there will be a day of reckoning for kings. Civilization is in travel. A new child is about to enter the human family. It will be more enlightened than its elder brothers and will advance the cause of all mankind. Its mother, European monarchy, may pay for its advent with her own life, or she may drag along for a time in invalidism, but her end is not far distant.
The people as a whole hate war. Their being forced into it will drive out of the minds all vestige of devotion to monarch.
The time is not remote when militarism will end and war cease. The masses are already of a mind to strip autocrats of their power to send armies to death and countries to ruin.—
Danish Democrat.

SERVIA'S BATTLE HYMN.
Rise, O Servians, swift arise!
Lift your banners to the skies.
For your country needs her children
Fight to make her free.
Rise, O rise, and crush our enemy.
Rise and fight for liberty.
Free the Save and Drina flow.
Let us, too, unfetter'd go
O'er the wild Moravian mountains.
Swift shall flow sweet freedom's fountains.
Down shall sink the foe.
Rise, O rise, and crush our enemy,
Rise and fight for liberty.

GERMAN APHORISMS.
Better go to bed without supper than rise with debts.
Honor the old, instruct the young, consult the wise and bear with the foolish.
Heavy work in youth is sweet repose in old age.
Towns and countries are never more ruined than when counsel is taken from foreigners.
Trust not too much in a new friend and an old house.

CORONACH.
He is gone on the mountain,
He is lost to the forest,
Like a summer dried fountain,
When our need was the sorest.
The font reappearing,
From the raindrops shall borrow.
But to us comes no cheering,
To Duncan no morrow!
The hand of the reaper
Takes the ears that are hoary,
But the voice of the reaper
Waits merrily in glory.
The autumn winds rushing
Waft the leaves that are searest.
But our tower was in flushing
When the blighting was nearest.
Fleet foot on the corral,
Sage counsel in cumber,
Red hand in the foray,
How sound is thy slumber!
Like the dew on the mountain,
Like the foam on the river,
Like the bubble on the fountain,
Thou art gone, and forever!
—Walter Scott.

BITS OF WISDOM.
Therefore well does Agathon say, "Of this alone is even God deprived, the power of making that which is past never to have been."—Aristotle.
There is, however, a limit at which forbearance ceases to be a virtue.—Burke.
This nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth.—Abraham Lincoln.
In the lexicon of youth, which fate reserves for a bright manhood, there is no such word as fall.—Bulwer Lytton.

BARCAROLE.
Small fingers on the silken strings;
Sunset and rising moon;
Far hills of lulls, whirl of wings
Of homing birds in June;
And thou wert there, the twilight on thy brow—
O bitter is the biwa's music now!
Beneath the scented tamarinds
On some celestial trail
We drifted with the purple winds
That filled our sampan sail;
The purple winds blow once and
and not again—
O bitter is the biwa's tender strain!

The Coming Thanksgiving

The President, in accordance with a long established custom, has designated Thursday of next week as a day on which this nation is to offer up thanks for the many blessings it enjoys.

If we view it from a comparative standpoint, we are indeed blessed above all other nations; for all Europe is bleeding and suffering, and with her have been drawn in nations of Africa, Asia, Australia and even a portion of America.

These warring nations are suffering beyond our power to understand. Their fields but lately waving with ripe grain are now but blood filled wastes; the wives and children are left alone to fight the bitter fight of loneliness and poverty while the protector and bread earner is compelled to serve in the armies; the fathers, sons, brothers, husbands and lovers are being killed by the thousands, where there are "no loving hands the drooping lids to close."

In the face of a fearful disaster, trivial things sink to their true level, and thus it is with us. We may have a business depression, as our part of War's burden, to bear; but we are at peace with the World; our fields are clear from blood; our protectors, our supporters, our loved ones are still at home; our mothers, wives, daughters, sisters and sweethearts have not in their heart the terrible dread of what news the coming day may bring.

Let us be thankful, and truly thankful, for the lot which is ours. And let us not forget in our prayers of Thanksgiving to remember our unfortunate brothers of war-swept lands; and in our thanks offer up a prayer for those on whom fate has laid a heavy hand.

As individuals it is easy to give thanks for the things which we have that we craved for; be it health, love, power, prosperity or whatnot; but for those things which we commonly call worries and troubles. We often miss the significance of the visitation.

Let those who have been unfortunate; who have been racked by bodily pains; disappointed in affections; met with business reverses; balked in ambition or made sad and disconsolate by the hand of death, remember that physical pains and mental anguish are not without their compensation.

There is a school of men that assumes the chief end of mankind is the pursuit of happiness, and then defines happiness as the selfish gratification of desires—be they good or be they bad. But to men of greater depth and broader understanding this selfish satisfying of the cravings of our animal nature is recognized as being but "glittering imitations" which instead of bringing either happiness or content, lead to the ultimate destruction of body and soul.

Those who have never suffered in body or mind have missed the greatest school of life—a school from which the great, the good, the noble have all graduated.

Physical pain and mental anguish are hard teachers but great educators; and no one who successfully passes through the course, grasping the significance of the lessons taught, can emerge without being a better and an abler man.

They give us fortitude and hardiness, together with a knowing and understanding sympathy with our fellow man; they teach courage and confidence, joined with patience and endurance; they teach unselfishness and love and understanding; they broaden our mental grasp and open wide our soul. Without their mellow, refining, broadening influence the World would not be as good, as great or noble as it is today.

When the strain of bodily suffering is upon us, when our hearts are sore, our souls distressed, it is too much to expect us to be glad or to rejoice at the unwelcome visitation; but we may face the trouble with a stout heart and grasp the opportunity—forced upon us—to learn the lessons taught.

Good Idea at Any Time. The following from an English paper will apply to many other places besides the sick room: "Whatever happens, do not keep on saying, 'Now, I am sure I am doing you. I had better go.' Only a sick bear would have the courage to take this literally. Get up, say good-by, and go."

Coin of Small Value. Doubtless the smallest coin in the world circulates in the Malay peninsula, simply a thin wafer made from the resinous juice of a tree, and has current value of about 1-10,000th of a cent. In the southern parts of Russia the peasants use a coin of such small value that a quarter of a million of them are worth no more than $1.25. The old Japanese mouseng was worth 1-112th of an American cent. In Portugal the reis is the lowest standard of value, but no 1-reis pieces are coined. A 3-reis piece is equivalent to 6-100ths of a cent.

Hollander's Use of Canals. By using the canals for the transportation of peat hundreds of boatmen and their families find a means of livelihood in Holland. Aside from a certain amount of freight which is shipped by rail, there are yearly between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 cubic meters (cubic meter—35.314 cubic feet) of boat space necessary.

Returned to Life in Coffin. To be buried alive in the cemetery of Hochwald, in the canton of Soleure, was the fate of an elderly Swiss lady. After the burial ceremony the grave diggers were about to fill in the grave when they heard knocking in the coffin. Instead of rendering immediate help they fled in terror to inform the doctor and the priest. When the door arrived at the grave the coffin was opened and it was found that the woman, who had turned over, had died.

THE WHIPPOORWILL.
Oh, meet me when daylight is faded
And in darkening into the night,
When songbirds are singing their vespers
And day has far vanished from sight.
And then I will tell you, darling,
All the love I have cherished so long
If you but meet me at evening,
When you hear the sweet whippoorwill's song.

And in the long years of the future,
Though our duties may part us awhile,
And by the return of this evening
We be severed by many a mile;
Yet deep in our hearts we will cherish
The affection so fervent and strong
We pledged to each other this evening
When we heard the first whippoorwill song.

CHORUS.
Whippoorwill, whippoorwill,
When you hear the sweet whippoorwill song;
Oh, meet me; oh, meet me,
When you hear the sweet whippoorwill song.

WAR AND KINGS.
We do not want others' blood,
and we refuse to shed our own.
George K. Kirkpatrick.
Let those who make the quarrels be the only ones to fight—
Alice L. Park.

"They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks.—Isaiah II, 1.
And they shall build houses and inhabit them, and they shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them, and they shall not build and another inhabit. They shall not plant and another eat.—Isaiah LIX, 21, 22.
If any will not work neither shall they eat.—Thess. III, 10.

MY FRIENDS.
I tried to count my friends one day—
Since that day I have walked in awe.
I stopped my counting in dismay.
For, stretching far, in long array,
Still friends and friends I saw.
And then I said, all chokingly,
And faint with weight of happiness,
"Dear God, I pray that I may be
The man they think me—nothing less.
Oh, let me be until life ends
The man they think me, these my friends."
—Mary Carolyn Davies in Youth's Companion.

HONOR DEFINED.
The sense of honor is of so fine and delicate a nature that it is only to be met with in minds which are naturally noble or in such as have been cultivated by great examples or a refined education.—Addison.
Glory is sweet when our heart says to us that the wreath of honor ought to grace our heads.—Krummacher.
That chastity of honor which felt a stain like a wound.—Burke.
Honor and fame exist for him who always recognizes the neighborhood of the great, always feels himself in the presence of high causes.—Emerson.

THE SERENADERS.
A fiddler tried a serenade;
She didn't smile on him,
She scorned the music that he made—
Zim-zim.
A fellow with a banjo came;
The damsel didn't think
It worth emerging for his tame
Plink-plink.
The third arrival won the girl,
Although his tune was punk.
He drove up with a noisy whirl,
Honk-honk! —Puck.

INFLUENCE.
Just as soon as you begin to think or do something you begin to have influence. Influence is something you can't keep at home. And when it gets away from you you can never recall it. Your influence makes you something of somebody else.
Influence has no boundaries. Once started, though it may seem ever so trifling, yet it may have as its destination the farthest corners of the earth. If you would get a conception of power, realize the influence of a strong man.—George Matthew Adams.

BETTER THAN POUFTICES.
If at any time you have a gathered finger or poisoned hand, take a cabbage leaf, roll it out with a bottle until the juice comes, and tie it on the affected part. This will draw and cleanse it far better than a poultice.

WISER DESIRES.
Of truth, of grandeur, beauty, love and hope—
And melancholy fear subdued by faith;
Of blessed consolations in distress;
Of moral strength and intellectual power;
Of joy in widest commonality spread; * * *
Of that intelligence which governs all;
I sing—"fit audience let me find"—* * * may my life
Express the image of a better time,
More with desires and simpler manners.
—William Wordsworth.

SENTENCE SERMONS.
The cultivation of the mind is a kind of food supplied for the soul of man.—Cicero.
I trust no rich man who is officiously kind to a poor man.—Plautus.
Being admonished, learn justice and despise not the gods.—Vergil.
The judge is condemned when the guilty is acquitted.—Syrus.
Clemency alone makes us equal to the gods.—Claudianus.

MUST NOT WHISTLE IN RUSSIA.
In certain cities of Russia street whistling by civilians is a penal offense, the privilege being reserved for the police; who exercise it, however, not in order to make tunes with their mouths, but to send signal blasts to each other. The whistling habit being hereditary, it soon disappears, and in those cities no difficulty is experienced in dealing nowadays with the few who offend.

MUST REPORT ALL TUBERCULOSIS.
In Great Britain physicians are obliged to report every case of tuberculosis to the local board of health.

HUNGARY'S WAR SONG.
Lord of heaven, bless our land,
Joy and plenty here bestow;
In our need lift thine hand,
Strong to shield us from the foe.
Hungary in days of old,
Proud and fearless, staunch and free
Call'd her sons from field and fold
To die for liberty;
Call'd her sons from field and fold
To die for liberty.

Hail, all hail, holy land!
Crown'd with lonely mothers' tears;
Onward lead, hero band,
Onward ever through the years.
Peace shall follow after pain,
Love shall garner in her store,
Freedom rises once again,
Shall live for evermore;
Freedom rises once again,
Shall live for evermore.

RUSKIN ON PAINTING.
Painting, with all its technicalities, difficulties and peculiar ends, is nothing but a noble and expressive language, invaluable as the vehicle of thought, but by itself nothing.

If it is the love of that which your work represents—if, being a landscape painter, it is the love of hills and trees that move you—if, being a figure painter, it is love of human beauty and human soul that moves you—if, being a flower or animal painter, it is love and wonder and delight in petal and in limb that moves you, then the spirit is upon you, and the earth is yours and the fullness thereof.

RURAL JOYS.
Sing a song of winter time,
Cold and bitter weather;
Meet it with a cheery rhyme,
All of us together!

Shut the window, light the lamp,
To the hearth draw nigher;
Thaw out all the frost and damp
At the open fire.

Toss a backlog on the blaze,
Spread the circle wider,
Talk and talk of other days—
Fetch a jug of cider.

Crack the nut and crack the jest
Mid the laughter lusty.
Now and then among the rest
One is stale and musty.

Mother, fetch the gingerbread
And the apples mellow;
Even lovers must be fed—
Sally's got a fellow!

Sing a song of ice and snow.
Goodness, how we pity

"The Thinkers of the Country Are the Tobacco Chewers" — said one of the greatest thinkers this country ever produced.

Says the Judge:

"My brain grasps the points of a case more easily when I'm chewing PICNIC TWIST. I suppose it's because of the gentle stimulation that PICNIC TWIST gives without the after effects of "strong" tobacco.

"Have you ever noticed how many great jurists chew? Well, there's nothing better to oil the wheels of justice than PICNIC TWIST."

Have you ever wished for a tobacco that you could keep on chewing without feeling that you were over-chewing?

For a long time you've really been looking for PICNIC TWIST, with its lasting sweet taste, and true tobacco satisfaction with no "come-back."

Compare PICNIC TWIST in taste, looks, convenience or any other way, with any dark "heavy" tobacco. Then you'll know the advantage of chewing the light, mild, mellow part of the leaf, the only kind that goes into PICNIC TWIST.

There are few better preservatives of the teeth than PICNIC TWIST.

By FREDERICK PALMER

(Copyright, 1914, by Charles F. Johnson's Sons) shrewdly placed and their vulnerability overestimated. The thunders of batteries hammering them became a routine of existence, like the passing of trains to one living near a railroad. The guns went on while tea was being served; they ushered in dawn and darkness; they were going when sleep came to those whom they later awakened with a start. Fights as desperate as the one around the house became features of this period, which was only a warming-up practice for the war demon before the onrush of impending assault on the main line.

Marta began to realize the immensity of the chessboard and of the forces engaged in more than the bare statement of numbers and distance. If a first attack on a position failed, the wires from the Galland house repeated their orders to concentrate more guns and attack again. In the end the Browns always yielded, but grudgingly, calculatingly, never being taken by surprise. The few of them who fell prisoners said, "God with us! We shall win in the end!" and answered no questions. Gradually the Gray army began to feel that it was battling with a mystery which was fighting under cover, falling back under cover—a tenacious, watchful mystery that sent sprays of death into every finger of flesh that the Grays thrust forward in assault.

"Another position taken. Our advance continues," was the only news that Westerling gave to the army, his people, and the world, which forgot its sports and murders and divorce cases in following the progress of the first great European war for two generations. He made no mention of the costs; his casualty lists were secret. The Gray hosts were sweeping forward as a slow, irresistible tide; this by Partow's own admission. He announced the loss of a position as promptly as the Grays its taking. He published a daily list of casualties so meager in contrast to their own that the Grays thought it false; he made known the names of the killed and wounded to their relatives. Yet the seeming candor of his press bureau included no straw of information of military value to the enemy.

Westerling never went to tea at the Gallands' with the other officers, for it was part of his cultivation of greatness to keep aloof from his subordinates. His meetings with Marta happened casually when he went out into the garden. Only once had he made any reference to the "And then" of their interview in the arbor.

"I am winning battles for you!" he had exclaimed with the thing in his eyes which she loathed. To her it was equivalent to saying that she had tricked him into sending men to be killed in order to please her. She despised herself for the way he confided in her; yet she had to go on keeping his confidence, returning a tender glance with one that held out hope. She learned not to shudder when he spoke of a loss of "only ten thousand." In order to rally herself when she grew faint-hearted to her task, she learned to picture the lines of his face hard-set with five-against-three brutality, while in contrast he ordered multitudes to death, and, in contrast, to recall the smile of Dellarme, who asked his soldiers to undergo no risk that he would not share. And after every success he would remark that he was so much nearer Engadir, that position of the main line of defense whose weakness she had revealed.

"Your Engadir!" he came to say. "Then we shall again profit by your information; that is, unless they have fortified since you received it." "They haven't," she thought. "In order to rally herself when she grew faint-hearted to her task, she learned to picture the lines of his face hard-set with five-against-three brutality, while in contrast he ordered multitudes to death, and, in contrast, to recall the smile of Dellarme, who asked his soldiers to undergo no risk that he would not share. And after every success he would remark that he was so much nearer Engadir, that position of the main line of defense whose weakness she had revealed.

"One position more—the Twin Boulder Redoubt, it is called," he announced at last. "We shall not press hard in front. We shall drive in masses on either side and storm the flanks." "This she was telephoning to Lanstron a few minutes later and having, in return, all the news of the Browns. The sheer fascination of knowing what both sides were doing exerted its spell in keeping her to her part. "They've lost four hundred thousand men now, Lanny," she said. "And we only a hundred thousand. We're whittling them down," answered Lanstron. "Whittling them down! What a ghastly expression!" she gasped. "You are as bad as Westerling and I am worse than either of you! I—I announced the four hundred thousand as if they were a score—a score in a game in our favor. I am helping, Lanny! All my sacrifice isn't for nothing!" she asked for the hundredth time.

he again lifted his cap and proceeded on his way. For the next two weeks Marta's role revolved itself into a kind of routine. Their cramped quarters became a refuge to Marta in the trial of her secret work under the very nose of the staff. With Miss Clarissa Eileen, they formed the only feminine society in the neighborhood. On sunny days Mrs. Galland was usually to be found in her favorite chair outside the tower door; and here Minna set the urn on a table at four-thirty as in the old days.

No member of the staff was more frequently present at Marta's teas than Bouchard, who was developing his social instinct late in life by sitting in the background and allowing others to do the talking while he watched and listened. In his hearing, Marta's attitude toward the progress of the war was sympathetic but never interrogatory, while she shared attention with Clarissa Eileen, who was in danger of becoming spoiled by officers who had children of their own at home. After the reports of killed and wounded, which came with such appalling regularity, it was a relief to hear of the day's casualties among Clarissa's dolls. The chief of transportation and supply rode her on his shoulder; the chief of tactics played hide-and-seek with her; the chief engineer built her a doll house of stones with his own hands; and the chief medical officer was as concerned when she caught cold as if the health of the army were at stake.

"We mustn't get too set up over all this attention, Clarissa Eileen, my rival," said Marta to the child. "You are the only little girl and I am the only big girl within reach. If there were lots of others it would be different." Bouchard was losing flesh; his eyes were sinking deeper under a heavier frown. His duty being to get information, he was gaining none. His duty being to keep the Grays' secrets, there was a look somewhere in his own department. He quizzed subordinates; he made abrupt transfers, to no avail.

Meanwhile, the Grays were taking the approaches to the main line of defense, which had been thought relatively immaterial but had been found

RAPID TRANSIT COMING

With Salisbury As Headquarters Is The Latest Report.

The greatest thing in prospect for Salisbury in the immediate future is the proposed Peninsula Rapid Transit Company, which is about to be organized as announced in this paper two weeks ago. The possibilities of the business have been realized for a long time, but it was supposed that the needs of the situation could be met only by the building of electric trolley lines, such as net the entire country. But the building of the new state roads throughout the Peninsula has opened up new possibilities here such as do not exist in other sections of the country where they have the electric lines, but do not have a complete network of stone and concrete roads such as we have throughout Maryland now.

The new company is already in process of formation and the stock is now being subscribed. Offices have been engaged, we understand, in the building recently vacated by the Salisbury Building, Loan and Banking Company when it moved into its splendid new building.

Salisbury is to be the headquarters of the concern and its actual operations will begin in this city. Just what this means for this city requires only a fair imagination to comprehend. It means first of all to the city of Salisbury a satisfactory substitute for streetcars of the ordinary type. A system of lines will be established to cover the entire city, running at regular intervals and on scheduled times. The fares within the city are to be the same as are charged on streetcars, viz., five cents, with liberal transfer arrangements.

Then will follow the establishment of routes in all directions. The first of these as now planned is a route from Fairmount via Princess Anne. Another line definitely planned is to Berlin and Ocean City, extending to Snow Hill. Eventually lines will be extended to Cambridge, Pocomoke and Crisfield will be among the early acquisitions to Salisbury trade territory as a result of the closer relations which will be established between the towns.

It is the purpose of the company to take over the business of the concern already established at Crisfield, we understand, and some idea of the possibilities of the business may be had from the experience of that enterprise, though it has been established but a short time. The stock at Crisfield was over-subscribed to such an extent that not all who wanted stock could be accommodated. The earnings of that company are even in excess of what was anticipated.

It is the purpose of the company to set aside out of the gross receipts a definite percentage for running and depreciation which can be fairly well estimated upon the experience of cars that have been in similar service. A sum will be set aside for overhead expenses. Then from the balance dividends are expected to be paid regularly.

Under State Control.
The laws of Maryland are such as to give to the public and to stockholders all the protection they could ask, as the State Public Service Commission will have the same control over this as other public service concerns. Under its regulations stock can be issued only for the investment actually made, allowing 10 per cent as a maximum for the expense of organizing. This means that there will be no "watered stock" such as is now the great burden of most public service corporations, especially the railroads.

According to reports the lines in Crisfield are said to be earning from $65 to $160 per day. Under the rulings of the Public Service Commission the company must lay aside a certain amount each month to provide for the renewal of their equipment as it wears out, thus insuring the investor against loss from this source.

The stock of the company is par value $10 and it is said that in Crisfield this stock is already being quoted at about $15 per share.

When it is realized what this means to the business interests of Salisbury, how enormously it will add to the trade territory of this city, what advantage it will be to the thousands who will be enabled to market their products here, as well as buy here, we have no doubt as to the interest that will be shown here in the promotion of the concern. It means all the advantages of other cities that have great systems of electric lines without the expense here of the roadbed, rails, cross ties, poles, brackets and wires. The cars will be as commodious as the average streetcars in cities of this size, but will be built upon large auto truck chassis and will equal in elegance and comfort the good trolley car. The rates of fares will be such as to enable travelers to get about at less expense than by railroad and do so more at their convenience.

The business office of the company will be opened up in a few days in the building of the Wailes property vacated a few days ago by the Salisbury B. L. & B. Association, which has been leased for a term of six months. The officers of the concern are expected to be men of this city. They will of course be elected by the stockholders. The shares of stock are being sold now and no doubt as soon as the proposition is thoroughly understood these shares will be taken up promptly. The best business judgment of the city seems to be in favor of the enterprise and all hope for its success, for undoubtedly no greater benefit could be derived by any sort of improvement than would come to Salisbury from this.

Miss Lena Dunoway, of Berlin, Md. who was stenographer and clerk in the law offices of A. M. Jackson, and who has been confined at her home with typhoid fever for the past several weeks, her many friends in this city will be glad to know that she will return to her duties December 1st.

Wisdom of Quiet.
More than half a century of existence has taught me that most of the wrong and folly which darken earth is due to those who cannot possess their souls in quiet; that most of the good which saves mankind from destruction comes of life that is led in thoughtful stillness. Every day the world grows noisier; I, for one, will have no part in that increasing clamor and, were it only by my silence, I confer a boon on all.—From the Private Papers of Henry Rycroft, by George Glasing.

All Work for Man's Advancement.
The long quest for the source of the Nile, for the northwest passage, for the north and south poles; yes, and the ancient search for the "elixir of life," "perpetual motion" and the "secret of life," have for us this grand significance—they all point to the fact that in the mind of man there is a deathless ambition to know and to do—to fathom the depths of the unknown, to conquer the unconquered, to add more and still more to the sum of its knowledge and achievement.

QUAKER QUIPS

Better a hair in the scalp than two in the brush.

Experience teaches us how dishonest other people can be.

Every man thinks he needs a wife until after he acquires one.

A good many people would say more if they didn't talk so much.

A fool and his money are soon parted, without any alimony.

A wise man makes the best of it when he gets the worst of it.

A man and his wife are one. There are no two ways about that.

The man who really knows a woman doesn't pretend to understand her.

How the shrewd promoter does love to encounter a fool and his money!

One might keep a secret by putting it in cold storage and losing the key!

Many a man's idea of contentment is having more than he can possibly use.

Take care of the night before, and the morning after will take care of itself.

Blood will tell, but like lots of other tale-bearers it doesn't always tell the truth.

A man might just as well patronize a safety razor as a deaf and dumb barber.

It takes a mighty clever woman to make up her mind she would rather be clever than pretty.

Crimson clover, frequently called German clover, scarlet clover, and in carmine clover, is outside of cowpeas, the most valuable soil improvement crop to have.

Ordinarily it is neither advisable or necessary to fertilize crimson clover, but when sown on very poor land an application at the time of seeding of about 250 pounds per acre of acid rock and 75 or 100 pounds of muriate of potash gives profitable returns.

It requires practically twice as much ground time, stone or oyster shell and one and one-fourth times as many cultivated times as other clovers to be ready for use.

Roman Villa Unearthed.

A Roman villa has recently been unearthed in the grounds of Linnarlease, Compton, near Guilford, Eng., the house of Mrs. G. F. Watts, widow of the painter.

The digging was undertaken by the Surrey Archaeological society and the complete plan of the villa has been revealed. The north wall is about sixty feet in length, the west 52 feet and the south about seventy-six feet. The villa contains seven rooms and some baths. There is a veranda on the south and a corridor on the north. Several Roman ornaments have been found.

GLOSE-FISTED REYNOLDS

By GEORGE E. STREETER.

(Copyright.)

One of the odd people of his town, and the subject of much discussion, was "Glose-fisted Reynolds," as he was called—a man supposed to be well-to-do but looked upon as an extremely mean. Like a lot of other folk, he had his good points, but was evidently much misunderstood.

Every man has a hobby, and that of James Reynolds related to the poor and needy. He had a theory (not quite his own) that the execution of the poor, by some painless method, would settle forever the whole question of pauperism.

If poverty were made a crime, punishable with death, a poor person would soon become a rarity. Such was his idea.

But as he found that the world, however anxious it might be to adopt such a drastic measure, was not yet quite ready to do so, he carefully considered other means.

Being strictly a theorist, he gave away nothing to the distressed, because he looked upon indiscriminate charity as a huge mistake, and considered the existing alms-giving organizations as dismal failures.

He was enthusiastic in the pursuit of knowledge of the poor and their habits.

When a hungry widow with eight or nine children called upon him, he would give them all a warm welcome, take down a big book, enter their names, ages, diseases, pedigree, etc.; express the greatest sympathy, warn them against extravagance, and the pomps and vanities of this wicked world; then promise the fullest investigation.

Mr. Reynolds was just as hearty in receiving a call from the ordinary tramp of the day. Such a one would be invited to a seat by the stove, and his history, secured by means of much questioning, would be entered into one of his books.

The caller would be asked for his views on the tariff, trusts, single tax, etc. After keeping the poor fellow on the rack until every tawdry had been squeezed out, Mr. Reynolds would send him out in the cold world, moneyless.

Reynolds, assisted by his wife, formed a "Girls Club" and got the members to practice scrubbing, sewing and other household pleasures, at his own home. He took down their names, etc., and sent them away with his blessing. But this organization was short-lived.

One day there called at the Reynolds household a respectably dressed man, selling collar buttons. He was greeted by the owner as though he were a long-lost brother, and seated in one of the easiest chairs.

Mr. Reynolds got down to the seventeenth volume of the "Mendicant Register," and asked the weary traveler all about his ancestors, habits, age, and so on, as usual; but when he wanted to weigh the peddler, the latter evidently thought it time to call a halt. He plainly told his host that it was not the year for taking the census, intimating strongly, in oddly shaped sentences, that he was there entirely in the shirt-fastening interest.

Mr. Reynolds explained, by way of reply, that only the previous day he had bought no less than three collar buttons at the shop, which would last him for some months to come, and that his wife did not use such things.

He then started in to compare the present times with the days of the old Greeks and Romans, when they fastened their shirts with rope. At this the collar button vendor got vexed and saw that he had been merely the victim of statistics.

His sense of humor being dull, he forthwith proceeded to handle "Brother" Reynolds rather roughly. Having placed the statistician on the floor, he sat on him, took away his watch and other valuables, and, after kicking the dog, departed.

In time the editor of the "Mendicant Register" came to himself. After adjusting his clothing he sat down to think things over.

"Had he made a mistake? Was it true that his efforts to learn all about the poor—their troubles, their views and their aims—had been in vain?"

The pugilistic collar-button salesman had told him some plain truths, and had brought them right home in a rather unpleasant manner.

As a result of a long, serious "think," Reynolds finally came to the conclusion that he would let the poor work out their own salvation. As for his books of record, he removed them to the cellar, and they were used as fuel for his furnace.

Slight Formalities.

"There's no use of you hanging around here unless you're willing to work," said the energetic woman.

"Lady," replied Plodding Pete, "I'm willing to work. But I belong to the Association of Industrious Inspectors. If you'll tell me what chores you want done and how much you'll pay, I'll go to town and ask our secretary to O. K. the contract. Only you'll have to advance me $7.94 to buy the expenses of the trip."

COLDS

An up-to-date remedy for colds. That is what Peruna is. In successful use over 50 years.

Colds are caught in many ways: Illy ventilated rooms; rooms that have direct draughts; crowded rooms; damp houses; stuffy school rooms; offices illy heated.

A dose of Peruna at the right time, at the first symptom of cold, before the bones begin to ache, before the sore throat manifests itself, or the cough, or the discharge from the nose, just a dose or two of Peruna before these symptoms begin is generally sufficient. But after the cold is once established with the above symptoms prominent, a bottle of Peruna, or maybe two, will be necessary.

"For several years I have been troubled with colds at each change of season. I took Peruna and have not been troubled with the slightest cold this entire season." Mr. Harry Fisher, 1228 Mosher St., Baltimore, Md.

"I give the children Peruna if they have a cold, and it always relieves them." Mrs. L. D. Hixson, 137 Druid Hill Ave., Baltimore, Md.

Peruna should ever be without Peruna, for it is an unfailing cure for colds." Mrs. M. F. Jones, Burning Springs, Ky.

Proves By The Pikes Peak Test

No where else in all the world is there such a test of the time keeping quality of a watch as on the famous Pikes Peak Cog Railway in Colorado, where the steep grades of the mountain necessitate the use of cog wheels to control the train, and vibration often so injures ordinary watches that an expert repairman must readjust them.

A conductor on the Pikes Peak road made a ninety-day test of the South Bend Watch last Summer.

No adjustment of the watch was made for the whole period, but at the end of the test, examination showed a variation of less than one-half second per day. Do you think the watch you carry could stand a test like this?

We will be pleased to show you our line of these guaranteed accurate watches and explain to you how a South Bend Watch adjusts itself to every temperature automatically.

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

Moral energy grows with the obstacles against which it is measured, and the putting forth of our lives in the highest exemplification of humanity. When we put forth the highest moral energy, then we touch the stars of life.—Felix Adler

Begin your web, and God will supply you with thread.—Italian Proverb

This church of all the saints is a great power in the world. Every true servant of God must belong with this mighty service of God, must get his strength through it and contribute his strength to it.—Phillips Brooks

Let not thy peace depend on the tongues of men.—Thomas a Kempis

LOVE AT SEA.

Where shall we land you, sweet? On fields of strange men's feet, Or fields near home? Or where the fire flowers blow? Or where the flowers of snow Or flowers of foam? We are in love's hand today.

Land me, she says, where love Shows but one shaft, one dove, One heart, one hand, A shore like that, my dear, Lies where no man will steer, No maiden land.—Algernon Charles Swinburne.

FRENCH PROVERBS.

Injury is often done to the cause of truth by the manner in which it is defended.

No one has a good market for bad merchandise.

Praise is generally given that it may be returned.

We do not despise all those who have vices, but we despise those who are without any virtue.

"Yes" and "No" are very easily said, but before they are said it is necessary to think a long time.

MERROW DOWN.

There runs a road by Merrow Down— A grassy track today it is— An hour out of Gullford town, Above the river Wex it is.

Here, when they heard the horse bells ring, The ancient Britons dressed and rode To watch the dark Phoenicians bring Their goods along the western road.

And here, or hereabouts, they met To hold their racial talks and such— To barter beads for Whitby jet, And tin for gay shell torques and such.

Then beavers built in Broadstone brook And made a swamp where Bramley stands; And bears from Shere would come and look For Taffim where Shamley stands.—Rudyard Kipling.

ON PHILOSOPHY.

Before philosophy can teach by experience the philosophy has to be in readiness, the experience must be gathered and intelligently recorded.—Carlyle

All philosophy lies in two words, "sustain" and "abstain."—Epictetus

Philosophy goes no further than probabilities and in every assertion keeps a doubt in reserve.—Froude

THE SWING.

How do you like to go up in a swing, Up in the air so blue? Oh, I do think it the pleasantest thing Ever a child can do.

Up in the air and over the wall, Till I can see so wide, Rivers and trees and cattle and all Over the countryside.

Till I look down on the garden green Down on the roof so brown, Up in the air I go flying again, Up in the air and down.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

ROLL ON, SILVER MOON.

As I strayed from my cot at the close of the day, 'Mid the ravishing beauties of June, 'Neath the jessamine shade I espied a fair maid, And she sadly complained to the moon.

Like the hart on the mountain, My lover was brave, So handsome, so manly and clever; So kind and sincere, and be loved me so dear, Oh, Edwin, thine equal was never!

His grave I'll seek out until morning appears, And weep o'er my love so brave; I'll embrace the cold turf and bathe with my tears, The flowers that bloom o'er his grave.

CHORUS.
Roll on, silver moon, guide the traveler on his way, While the nightingale's song is tuned; Oh, I never, never more with my true love shall stray, By the bright silver light of the moon.

It is noble to grant life to the vanquished.—Statius

If anything affects your eye you hasten to have it removed; if anything affects your mind you postpone the cure for a year.—Horace

HUMORS OF LAW.

We laugh at old Wouter van Twiller, Whose mode of deciding a case Was to go by the looks and the weight of the books Which the lawyers brought into his place.

We jest at his manner of judging Because it is queer in our eyes, And the erudite way of our jurists today Show up as decidedly wise. For now they determine on justice By means that are noble to see.

By a comma misplaced in a proofreader's hand, Youth & Women Or a failure at crossing a "t," And having thus climbed to perfection, To justice sans error or flaw, Our laughter rings shriller at Wouter van Twiller And his way of deciding the law.—The Docket.

OPPORTUNITY.

The lesson which life repeats and constantly enforces is "Look under foot." You are always nearer the divine and the true sources of your power than you think. The lure of the distant and the difficult is deceptive. The great opportunity is where you are. Do not despise your own place and hour. Every place is under the stars, every place is the center of the world.—John Burroughs

Day is stealing down the west, Tender, drowsy sounds are heard, Closer now each downy bird Creeps 'neath mother wings to rest, In the fading sky afar, Kindled by some angel hand Twinkling comes a tiny star—Baby's guide to Sleepy Land.

Cooler, darker grows the air, Berie shadows haunt the room, In the garden, through the gloom, Whirling bats and owlets fare, But the lambs and bridles seem Happy now at home to keep, And a drifting little dream Smiles at baby in his sleep.—Florence Earle Coates

Suffered Twenty-One Years-- Finally Found Relief

Having suffered for twenty-one years with a pain in my side, I finally found relief in Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. Injections of morphine were my only relief for most periods of time. I became so sick that I had to undergo a surgical operation in New Orleans, which benefited me for two years. When the same pain came back one day I was so sick that I gave up hopes of living. A friend advised me to try your Swamp-Root and I at once commenced using it. The first bottle did me so much good that I purchased two more bottles. I am now on my second bottle and am feeling like a new woman. I passed a gravel stone as large as a big red bean and several small ones. I have not had the least feeling of pain since taking your Swamp-Root and I feel it my duty to recommend this great medicine to all suffering humanity. Gratefully yours, MRS. JOSEPH CONSTANCE, Rapides Par. Echo, La.

THE LAST SHOT

that she draws it from you without your consciousness of the fact. I tell you honestly. Do what you will with me."

It took more courage than any act of his life for the loyal Bouchard to dare such candor to a superior. Seeing the patchy, yellow, bloodless face drawn in stiff lines and the abysmal stare of the deep-set eyes in their bony recesses, Bellini was swept with a wave of sympathy.

"Thank you, Bouchard. You've been very fine!" said Bellini as he grasped Bouchard's hand, which was icy cold.

"My duty—my duty, in the hope that we shall kill two Browns for every Gray who has fallen—that is what shall yet see them starved and beset and crying for mercy in their capital," replied Bouchard. He saluted with a dismal, urgent formality and stalked out of the room with the tread of the ghost of Hamlet's father.

The strange impression that this farewell left with Bellini still lingered when, a few moments later, Westerling summoned him. Not alone the diffidence of a new member of the staff going into the presence accounted for the stir in his temples, as he waited till some papers were signed before he had Westerling's attention. Then Westerling picked up Bouchard's note and shook his head sadly.

"Poor Bouchard! You can see for yourself," and he handed the note to Bellini. "I should have realized earlier that this was a case for the doctor and not for reprimand. Mad! Poor Bouchard! He hadn't the ability or the resiliency of mind for his task, as I hope you have, colonel."

"I hope so, sir," replied Bellini.

"I've no doubt you have," said Westerling. "You are my choice!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

A Change of Plan.

That day and the next Westerling had no time for strolling in the garden. His only exercise was a few periods of pacing on the veranda. Turcas, as tirelessly industrious as ever, developed an increasingly quiet insistence to leave the responsibility of decisions about everything of importance to a chief who was becoming increasingly arbitrary. The attack on Engadri being the jewel of Westerling's own planning, he was disinclined to risk success by delegating authority, which also meant sharing the glory of victory.

Bouchard's note, though officially disclaimed as a matter of pathology, would not accept dismissal privately. In flashes of distinctness it recurred to him between reports of the progress of preparations and directions as to dispositions. At dusk of the second day, when all the guns and troops had their places for the final movement under cover of darkness and he rose from his desk, the thing that had edged its way into a crowded mind took possession of the premises that strategy and tactics had vacated. It passed under the same analysis as his work. His overweening pride, so sensitive to the suggestion of a conviction that he had been fooled, but his relations with Marta in logical review. He had fallen in love in the midst of war. A cool and intense impatience possessed him to study her in the light of his new skepticism, when, turning the path of the first terrace, he saw her watching the sunset over the crest of the range.

She was standing quite still, a slim, soft shadow between him and the light, which gilded her figure and quartered her. Did she expect him? he wondered. Was she posing at that instant for his benefit? When she turned, her face in the shadow, the glow of the sunset seemed to remain in her eyes, otherwise without expression, yet able to detect something unusual under external, as life's exchanged commonplaces of greeting in amusement.

"Well, there's a change in our official family. We have lost Bouchard—transferred to another post!" said Westerling.

Marta noted that, though he gave the news a casual turn, his scrutiny sharpened.

"Is that so? I can't say that my mother and I shall be sorry," she remarked. "He was always glaring at us as if he wished us out of sight. Indeed, if he had his way, I think he would have made us prisoners of war. Wasn't he a woman-hater?" she concluded, half in irritation, half in amusement.

"He had that reputation," said Westerling. "What do you think led to his departure?" he continued.

"I confess I cannot guess!" said Marta, with a look at the sunset glow as if she resented the loss of a minute of it.

"There has been a leak of information to the Browns!" he announced.

"There has! And he was intelligent officer, wasn't he?" she asked, turning to Westerling, her curiosity apparently aroused as a matter of courtesy to his own interest in the subject.

"Who do you think he accused? Why, you," he added, with a peculiar laugh.

She noted the peculiarity of the laugh discriminatively.

"Oh! My eyes opened wide in wonder—only wonder, at first. Then, as comprehension took the place of wonder, they grew sympathetic. 'That explains!' she exclaimed. 'His hateful glances were those of delusion. He was going mad, you mean?'"

"Yes," said Westerling, "that—that would explain it."

"I have been told that when people go mad they always ascribe injury done to them to the person who happens to have excited their dislike," she mused.

"Which seems to have been the case here," Westerling assented. He did not know what else to say. His pride was recovering its natural confidence in the infallibility of his judgment of human beings. He was seeing his suspicions as ridiculous enough to convict him of a brain as disordered as Bouchard's.

Marta was thinking that she had been skating on very thin ice and that she must go on skating till she broke through. "There was an exhilaration about it that she could not resist: the exhilaration of risk and the control of her faculties, prompted by a purpose hypnotically compelling. Both were alike, she watching the sky, he in anticipation and suspense. The rose went violet and the shadows over the range deepened.

"The guns and the troops wait. With darkness the music begins!" he said slowly, with a start of stern fervor.

"The music—the music! He calls it music!" ran through Marta's mind mockingly, but she did not open her lips.

"They wait, ready, every detail arranged," he continued proudly.

The sky merged into the shadows of the landscape that spread and thickened into blackness. Out of the drawn curtains of night broke an ugly flash and further up the slope spread the explosive circle of light of a bursting shell.

"The signal!" he exclaimed. Right and left the blasts spread along the Gray lines and right and left, on the instant, the Browns sent their blasts in reply. Countless tongues of flame seemed to burst from countless craters, and the range to rock in a torment of crashes. In the intervening spaces between the ugly, savage gusts from the Gray gun mouths, which sent their shells from the midst of exploding Brown shells, swept the beams of the Brown searchlights, their rays lost like sunlight in the vortex of an open furnace door.

"Splendid! splendid!" exclaimed Westerling, in a sweep of emotion at the sight that had been born of his command. "Five thousand guns on our side alone! The world has never seen the equal of this!"

Marta looked away from the range to his face, very distinct in the garish illumination. It was the face of a maestro of war seeing all his rehearsal in her eyes, to detect something in symphonic gratification to the eye and ear, the face of a man of trained mind, the product of civilization, with the elation of a party leader on the floor of a parliament in a crisis.

"Soon, now!" said Westerling, and looked at his watch.

Shortly, in the direction of Engadri, to the rear of the steady flashes broke forth line after line of flashes as the long-range batteries, which so far had been silent, joined their mighty voices to the chorus, making a continuous leaping burst of explosions over the Brown positions, which were the real object of the attack.

"The moment I've lived for!" exclaimed Westerling. "Our infantry is starting up the apron of Engadri! We held back the first of the heavy guns concentrated for the purpose of supported the men with an outburst. Three hundred heavy guns pouring in their shells on a space of two acres! We're tearing their redoubts to pieces! They can't see to fire! They can't live under it! They're in the crater of a volcano! When our infantry is on the edge of the wreckage the guns cease. Our infantry crowd in—crowd into the house that Partow built. He'll find that numbers count; that the power of modern gunfire will open the way for infantry in masses to take and hold vital tactical positions! And—no—no, their fire in reply is not as strong as I expected."

"Because they are letting you in! It will be strong enough in due season!" thought Marta in the uncontrollable triumph of antagonism. Five against three was in his tone and in every line of his features.

"It's hard for a soldier to leave a slight life this, but the real news will be awaiting me at my desk," he continued, adding, as he turned away: "It's fireworks worth seeing, and if you remain here I will return to tell you the results."

Turning her back to the range for the moment, she sat wide of the lights of the town and the threads of light of the wagon-trains and the sweep of the lights of the railroad trains on the plain; while in the foreground every window of the house was ablaze, like some factory on a busy night shift. She could hear the click of the telegraph instruments already reporting the details of the action as their peaceful surroundings. Then out of the shadows Westerling reappeared.

"The apron of Engadri is ours!" he called. "Thanks to you!" he added, with pointed emphasis. Back in the house he had received congratulations with a nod, as if success were a matter of course. Before her, exultation unbent stiffness, and he was hoarsely triumphant and eager. "A break in the main line! We have only to drive home the wedge, and then—and then!" he exclaimed.

She felt him close, his breath on her cheek. "Peace!" she hastened to say, drawing back instinctively. And then! The irony of the words in the light of her knowledge was pointed by a terrific renewal of the thunders and the flashes far up on the range, and she could not resist rejoicing in her heart.

"That's the Browns!" exclaimed Westerling in surprise.

The volume of fire increased. With the rest of the frontier in darkness, the Engadri section was an isolated blaze. In its light she saw his features without alarm but hardening in dogged intensity.

"They've awakened to what they have lost! They have been rushing up reserves and are making a counter-attack. We must hold what we have gained, no matter what the cost!"

His last sentence was spoken over his shoulder as he started for the house.

Without changing her position, hardly turning her head, she watched until the firing began to lessen rapidly. Then she heard his step. She rose to face him, summoning back the spirit of the actress.

"This is better yet! I came to tell you that the counter-attack failed!" he said as he saw her appear from the shelter of the arbor.

She wondered if she were going to fall. But the post of the trellis was within reach. She caught hold of it to steady herself. Failed!

"The killing—it must have been terrible!" her mind at last made her exclaim to cover her tardiness of response to his mood.

"You thought of that—as you should—as I do!" he said.

He took her hands in his, pulsing warm with the flowing red of his strength. She let them remain lifelessly, as if she had not the will to take them away, the instinct of her part again dominant. To him this was another victory, and it was discovery—the discovery of melting weakness in her for the first time, which magnified his sense of masculine power. He tightened his grip slightly and she shuddered.

"You are tired!" he said, and it hurt her that he should be so considerate.

"The killing—to end that! It's all I want!" she breathed miserably.

"And the end is near!" he said. "Yes, now, thanks to you!"

Thanks to her! She must listen and submit to his touch!

"Then engineers and material were ready to go in," he continued. "Before morning, as I had planned, we shall be so well fortified in the position that nothing can budge us. This success so strengthens my power with the staff and the premier that I need not wait on Fabian tactics. I am supreme. I shall make the most of the demoralization of this blow to the enemy. I shall not wait on slow approaches in the hope of saving life. Tomorrow I shall attack and keep on attacking till all the main line is ours."

"Now you are playing your real part, the conqueror!" she thought gladly. "Your kind of peace is the ruin of another people, the peace of a helpless enemy. This is better—better for her conscience. I'm frankly, she allowed herself to lean against him. In the privacy of his hands she was unconscious that she had said it. She felt that she could endure anything to retrieve the error into which she had been the means of leading the Browns. And the killing—it would not stop, she knew. No, the Browns would not yield until they were decimated.

"We have the numbers to spare. Numbers shall press home—home to terms in their capital!" Westerling's voice grew husky as he proceeded, harsh as orders to soldiers who hesitated in face of fire. "After that—after that!"—the tone changed from harshness to desire, which was still the desire of a profession, the fruits of peace—a triumph that I want you to share!" He was drawing her toward him with an impulse of the force of his desire, when she broke free with an abrupt, struggling cry.

"Not that! Not that! Your work is not yet done!" she cried.

He made a move as if to persist, then he fell back with a gesture of understanding.

"Right! Hold me to it!" he exclaimed resolutely. "Hold me to the bargain! So a woman worth while should hold a man worth while."

"Yes!" she managed to say, and turned to go in a sudden impetus of energy. Half running, half stumbling, the light of the lantern bobbing and trembling weirdly, she hastened through the tunnel. Usually the time for taking the receiver down till Lanny replied was only a half minute. Now she waited what seemed many minutes without response. Had the connections been broken? To make sure that her impatience was not tricking her she began to count off the seconds. Then she heard Lanstron's voice, broken and hoarse:

"Marta, Marta, he is dead! Partow is dead!"

Recovering himself, Lanstron told the story of Partow's going, which was in keeping with his life and his prayers. As the doctor put it, the light of his mind, turned out full voltage to the last, went out without a flicker. Through the day he had attended to the dispositions for receiving the Grays' attack, calibrating routine as usual with flashes of humor and reflection ranging beyond the details in hand. An hour or so before dark he had reached across the table and laid his big, soft palm on the back of Lanstron's hand. He was thinking aloud, a habit of his in Lanstron's company, when an idea requiring gestation came to him.

"My boy, it is not fatal if we lose the apron of Engadri. The defenses behind it are very strong."

"No, not fatal," Lanstron agreed.

"But it's very important!"

"And Westerling will think it fatal. Yes, I understand his character. Yes; and if our counter-attack should fail, then Miss Galland's position would be secure. Hm—hm—position from the gods would destroy—hm—hm—Westerling will be convinced that repeated, overwhelming attacks will gain our main line. Instead of using engineering approaches, we will throw his battalions, masses of masses, against our works until his strength is spent. It would be baiting the bull. A risk—a risk—but, my boy, I am going to—"

Watched the Bursting of Shells Over the Enemy's Lines.

Partow's head, which was bent in thought, dropped with a jerk. A convulsion shook him and he fell forward on the map, his brave old heart in its last flutter, and Lanstron was alone in the silent room with the dead and his responsibility.

"The order that I knew he was about to speak, Marta, I gave for him," Lanstron concluded. "It seemed to me an inspiration—his last inspiration—to make the counter-attack a feat."

"And you're acting chief of staff, Lanny? You against Westerling?"

"Yes."

The colonel of the 128th and Captain Fracasse were eating their biscuits together and making occasional remarks rather than holding a conversation.

"Well, Westerling is a field-marshal," said the colonel.

"Yes, he's got something out of it!" "The men seem to be losing spirit—there's no doubt of it!" exclaimed the colonel, more aloud to himself than to Fracasse, after a while.

"No wonder!" replied Fracasse. Martinet though he was, he spoke in grumbling loyalty to his soldiers. "What kind of spirit is there in doing the work of navvies? Spirit! No soldiers ever fought better—in invasion, at least. Look at our losses! Spirit! Westerling drives us in. He thinks we can climb Niagara Falls! He—"

"Stop! You are talking like an architect!" snapped the colonel. "How can the men have spirit when you feel that way?"

"I shall continue to obey orders and do my duty, sir!" replied Fracasse. "And they will, too, or I'll know the reason why."

There was a silence, but at length, the colonel exploded:

"I suppose Westerling knows what he is doing!"

"Still we must go on! We must win!"

"Yes, the offensive always wins in the end. We must go on!"

"And once we have the range—yes once we've won our vital position—the men will recover their enthusiasm and be crying 'On to the capital!'"

"Right! We were forgetting history. We were forgetting the volatility of human nature."

Far up on a peak among the birds and aeroplanes, in a roofed, shell-proof chamber, with a telephone orderly at his side, a powerful pair of field glasses and range-finders at his elbow, and a telescope before his eye, Gustave Feller, one time gardener and now acting colonel of artillery, watched the burst of shells over the enemy's lines. While other men had grown lean on war, he had taken on enough flesh to fill out the wrinkles around his eyes that shone with an artist's enjoyment of his work. Down under cover of the ridge were his guns, the keys of the instrument that he played by calls over the wire. Their barking was a symphony to his ears, errors of orchestration were errors in aim. He talked as he watched, his lively features reflective of his impressions.

"Oh, pretty! Right into their tum-tummies! Right in the nose! La, la, la! But that's off—and so's that! Tell Battery C they're fifty yards over. Oh, beady-eyed gods and shiny little flashes—two smacks in the same spot! Humph! Tell Battery C that the trouble with that gun is worn rifling—that's why it's going short. Elevate it for another hundred yards—but it ought not to wear out so soon. I'd like to kick the maker or the inspector. The fellows in B 21 will accuse us of inattention. It's time to drop a shell on them to show we're perfectly impartial in our favors. La, la, la! Oh, what a pretty smack! Congratulations!"

B 21 was the position of Fracasse's company and the pretty smack the one that broke one man's arm and crushed another's head.

"The 'God with us!' song was singularly suited to the great, bull voice of its composer, born to the red and become Captain Stranky in the red business of war. It was he who led the thunders of its verses.

"I certainly like that song," he said. Well he might. It had made him famous throughout the nation. "There's Jehovah and brimstone in it. Now we'll have our own."

"But we're always losing positions!" complained one of the men. "Little by little they are getting possession."

"They say the offensive always wins," said another.

"Five against three! They count on numbers," said Lieutenant Tom Fragin.

"There you go, Tom! Any other pessimist or anarchist want to be heard?" called out Stranky. "Just your money back; not satisfied, but it pays five against one instant relief."

I have never heard a word against this remedy and I consider it the best of all. I had trouble from my kidneys for thirty years and my work made the complaint worse. If I took cold, it affected my kidneys, causing my back to become weak and lame. The kidneys secreted a poisonous and painful in passage. ## The Lesson of the Past

This master of the pen shows you the glory that was Greece! and the grandeur that was Rome! He guides you through the Middle Ages, the glorious old days of chivalry and the crusades! through the Renaissance in its contemporary history, which Prof. Dury's History of the World covers in its entirety. In the story of the present he shows you the lessons of the past. And you will understand them better when you get the Review of Reviews for a year—the Review of Reviews will give you a most interesting interpretation of the events that are taking place with such regularity. It is not enough to read the daily news papers; you must have a deeper knowledge of the events that are taking place. Your ability to comprehend conditions, and to draw them out, is the only way to a true interpretation of the news and the "reason why" of events. In your mind you must be able to draw a line of cause—and the Review of Reviews will do it for you.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING DONE HERE

Attractive Lines Carried—Come to Salisbury, Quality and Prices Right.

Last year a stranger who was in Salisbury a few weeks before Christmas was heard to comment upon the line of Christmas and staple goods displayed in the stores of this city. Well might he be surprised for it is a very unusual thing to see such lines carried in a place many times the size of Salisbury, yet they are here and are in as varied and attractive a line this year as ever—and even better. In a few weeks now our stores will be dressed for the Christmas trade. Articles bought and kept for this season are each day being unpacked and placed upon the counters. There is no excuse for our people to go elsewhere for their Christmas presents, or for their Christmas clothes and finery, or for their Christmas eatables. One will find enough here, at a fair price and of a good quality to satisfy even the most discriminating buyers. Watch the columns of The Salisbury Advertiser for the offerings of these enterprising merchants and see if they can not fill whatever you wish to buy. Toys, jewelry, general merchandise, groceries, hardware, articles suitable for Christmas giving of home use; books, candies, household furnishings, whatever you want, can be found. Go to the enterprising firms that advertise—and thus show you their confidence in their own wares, and see if you can not find what you want. Two Cars Badly Damaged and Occupants Hurt in Head-on Collision

A bad automobile smashup occurred on the new Ocean City road at about 5:30 Thanksgiving afternoon. A six-cylinder Mitchell car, owned by Wm. Both cars were nearly demolished by the force of the collision and two occupants of one of the cars were badly injured. Miss Ida Belle Wilson of Pocomoke and Miss Mary Powell of Snow Hill, are in the Peninsula General Hospital suffering from injuries sustained. One of the ladies has a fracture of the skull while the other has a broken collar bone. They were brought to the hospital by Dr. L. C. Freney of Pittsville.

R. R. PENSIONS TO START

On N. Y. P. & N. January first—How it Works Out. A plan of retiring old employees on pensions and of extending relief in cases of accident and sickness will be established January 1, 1915, by the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad, and the Cape Charles Railroad Companies. These lines form parts of the Pennsylvania Railroad system. This plan of taking care of faithful employees in their old age provides that the entire pension shall be paid by the company. Every employe must retire at the age of seventy. In case of physical disability at the age of sixty-five the employe may be retired. The pension amounts to 1 per cent of the average salary or wage for the ten years previous to retirement, multiplied by the number of years the man has been in the employ of the company. Thus, if an employe has been in the service of the company for 40 years and has received on an average for the last ten years $60 per month in regular wages, his pension allowance would be 40 per cent of $60 or $24 per month. The new pension fund is modeled after those in existence on the Pennsylvania lines east and west of Pittsburgh, which, since their establishment in 1900, have paid out in pensions, $10,452,373.30 to 8355 men—the total number of Pennsylvania system employes receiving pensions today is 4258.

The relief department to be established on the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad and the Cape Charles Railroad is patterned after the Pennsylvania's relief department, which has been in existence since 1886. It affords employes accident, health and life insurance cheaper and as safe as they can secure from outside insurance companies. The company has announced that any employe in the service previous to the commencement of the operations of the relief department, January 1, 1915, who is less than 60 years of age, shall have for the period of three calendar months thereafter the privilege of becoming a member of the relief department without regard to age or physical condition, provided he is physically and mentally able to perform the duties of his position and shall have been engaged for two weeks immediately preceding his application for membership.

Buy From Advertisers They Show Progress & Vim Good Faith Pledged

Everyone knows the advantage of dealing with progressive, up-to-date enterprising men. The man who advertises his wares in the newspaper gives the buying public the best guarantee of his possession of these qualities. It is an indication that he is active, knows what is what and is keeping in touch with the world. He will not dare to advertise and carry out-of-date, old-fashioned goods. He will not dare to advertise unless he has both the stock that justifies and the price to meet competition. The man who does not advertise may have both, but his lack of enterprise in one case may be taken as a lack in the others. Again, the man who ADVERTISES is going to do a larger business than the man who doesn't, and by selling so much more merchandise is able to cut the cost of selling down, by buying in larger quantities he is able to buy at a better figure. These advantages he is able to give the buying public, and thus sell better quality at a better price than his unenterprising competitor. The man who does a large business makes his profit off the big business done and not off the single article of goods sold. The buying public is conversant with these facts, they have observed the big merchants and know that all those who make a great success are the biggest advertisers. A man may think, because he has practically a monopoly of certain things or certain territory that he does not have to advertise in the newspaper, but the buying public knows that such a man will sell at the highest possible figures and probably give poorer quality than the man who advertises and pushes his business. No business man with a small volume of business can hope to compete with the man with a large volume. To get a large volume one must advertise. We ask readers of THE SALISBURY ADVERTISER to carefully scan our pages and see the goods that are advertised. Those advertising pledge to the buying public their good faith. They are showing the people that they have confidence in their own goods and do not hesitate to place their name and reputation behind them; they are showing enterprise, energy, and in their stores will be found up-to-date goods of good quality and fair prices. Advertised goods are the cheapest and most reliable in the long run. Go to them and buy your Christmas goods and they will treat you fair and right. Watch the next few issues of this paper before the Christmas holidays and demand and get the goods advertised. This paper will not knowingly carry a false and misleading advertisement, nor will it open its columns to the irresponsible advertiser. IF YOU WANT GOOD, RELIABLE, UP-TO-DATE GOODS AT A FAIR AND REASONABLE PRICE YOU WILL NOT MAKE ANY MISTAKE IN BUYING FROM THOSE WHO ADVERTISE.

WAR TAX NOW ON

Telephones Come In For Share—The Users Have It To Pay.

As for the tax on telephone messages, Mr. H. W. Carty, local manager of the Chesapeake and Potomac Company, when seen this morning, told how the Company had prepared to collect the tax as directed by the government. "The preparation for the collection of the 1 cent tax on all messages of 15 cents or over has been a big job for the telephone company," said Mr. Carty. "In case of public telephones with coin box attachments, the tax of 1 cent is to be inserted as directed by the operator in the quarter slot in the coin box by the person who sends the message, and all operators have been instructed to arrange for this.

"Special preparations for billing regular subscribers correctly for the tax imposed on their messages of 15 cents and over also had to be made. New collection routines had to be prepared and new systems of accounting worked out. The telephone company has advised all telephone users of the new law and the methods put into effect for collecting the tax. Notices giving full directions have been placed on all public telephones and all subscribers have been advised by means of a circular enclosed with their monthly bills. This circular explains the method of making the charge for the tax and gives a digest of the law relating to it.

"The law applies not only to all messages on which the rate is 15 cents or more per message, but also to all messages on which the total charge, including overtime, amounts to 15 cents or more. Thus, while a single call at the rate of 5 cents bears no tax, should the conversation be prolonged over a period which would make the aggregate charge 15 cents or more, the tax of 1 cent is imposed. "All telephone bills rendered during the life of this law will include a toll service statement that will show those messages on which the tax is to be levied, together with the amount of such tax. "The law directs that this tax shall be collected from the person paying for such message or conversation and places the responsibility for collection upon the telephone company."

BELGIANS TO FARM

Would Afford Splendid Labor For Wicomico and the Eastern Shore.

The plans brought forward by the Southern Settlement and Development Organization, of which S. Davies Warfield is president, to extend relief and assistance to Belgian refugees by encouraging the emigration of the Belgians to the United States, and making provisions for them to settle on the farm lands of Maryland and the southern states, are being developed rapidly. Within the next two weeks several representatives will be sent out to select Belgian families for whom immediate emigration to America seems most expedient, and Mr. Warfield is confident that there will be no difficulty in establishing them as self-supporting and successful farmers.

Co-operation has been solicited and is rapidly being assured by land companies and private owners in the south, who have signified a willingness to give substantial assistance to the refugees and to be responsible for their livelihood until they have adequate opportunity to become entirely independent.

The scheme outlined is an extensive and an involved one, but the interest which it has stimulated among all organizations which could possibly assist the work of settlement indicates that eventually it will be achieved. Several large tracts of land in the south have been offered for colonization, and the practicability of such a plan is now being considered by Clement S. Ucker, the director of colonization for the Southern Settlement and Development Organization. A representative of this organization who is in Holland has supplied valuable information of the actual economic situation in Belgium.

Plans to enable the colonization of refugee Belgians on the farm lands of Maryland will be discussed at all the meetings of the affiliated agricultural associations this week, during the Maryland Week exhibition at the Fifth Regiment Armory. In speaking of the plans Professor Symons said: "We have 50,000 farms in Maryland and any number of those sites have water facilities and easily available transportation on which the Belgian refugees of the agricultural class could properly locate. "We have in our affiliated organiza-

Farm Laborers

L. Wetherell Barroll, 609 Keyser building, Baltimore, Md., will be in his office on Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 for the purposes of distributing German farm laborers and household help to the people of this county. It is well worth the while of our farmers to call at his office on those days, pick out their men and bring them home with them. These German men as well as the young boys are often valuable household servants and in case anyone should desire to employ them to do the cooking and the housework Mr. Barroll advises us that generally their services in this regard are satisfactory. As farm laborers, these Germans are unexcelled. These laborers will take places on farms and as household help for from $8 to $10 per month during the winter months. Mr. Barroll makes no charge for his services and if anyone wishes to try out this kind of labor, we advise them to call on Mr. Barroll.

EASTERN SHO' GETS BULK OF BRIZES

Champion Farmer of Maryland Comes From Dorchester County and Has Twenty-one Ribbons.

J. Howard Hirst of Dorchester county in the champion farmer of Maryland, likewise, according to the judges of the Maryland Week show, Dorchester county is the Garden of Eden of Maryland. Also, judging from the disposition of the blue and red ribbons, good old Eastern Shore has something on the rest of Maryland this year. Mr. Hirst, who swept the vegetable section of the show, had 25 exhibits and took down 21 ribbons in the face of all Maryland.

His most important win was that of the blue in general display, when he showed 42 varieties of vegetables. He also had the biggest pumpkin, the finest sweet potatoes and excellence in almost everything you go to the market to buy. The awarding of the grange prizes was the important thing, Eastern Shore counties took one, two, three; Talbot beating out Dorchester for first honors by a scant one-tenth of one point, and Kent county taking third place.

The Cambridge grange carried off the greatest number of ribbons of any of the counties. Under the leadership of Gilbert Porter, men from the grange made a great display and took down 15 first prizes, 19 seconds and 3 thirds, including the second prize of $100 for grange displays. Apple judging is finished and the Quaker colony on the ridge near Sandy Springs is taking the bulk of the blue ribbons. Hanson Bros., of Elliott City were awarded blues for box displays, and in barrels, Lawrence Ghardi of Boonsboro caused quite a bit of comment with an exhibit of 10 barrels of as pretty Golden Grimes as have ever been put on display in the Armory. The show closed Monday.

SHIRT FACTORY CLOSED

Easton Loses Industry Because of Scarcity of Help.

The Easton shirt factory closed up shop on Saturday for an indefinite period. W. T. Watson, the local manager, has been transferred to the new plant of the Delmarva Manufacturing Co., at Wilmington, Del. The company has three other branches at Dover, Clayton and Smyrna, all larger than the Easton branch. Mr. Watson states that the closing of the Easton branch is not due to business depression, but to the fact that he has found it impossible to find employes, either in Easton or Talbot county, or in other counties of the Eastern Shore.

Proof of insanity. A Pittsburgh boarder is beaten up by his landlady, armed with a patron, because he demanded brunes for breakfast. Well, how would one expect a woman to deal with an insane man—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

NATION'S LABOR PROBLEM

OVER A MILLION AND A HALF WOMEN WORK AS FARM HANDS IN THE UNITED STATES.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

Our government never faced so tremendous a problem as that now lying dormant at the doors of congress and the legislatures, and which, when proposed, will shake this nation from center to circumference, and make civilization hide its face in shame. That problem is—women in the field.

The last federal census reports show we now have 1,514,000 women working in the field, most of them south of the Mason and Dixon line. There were approximately a million negro slaves working in the fields when liberated by the emancipation proclamation. We have freed our slaves and our women have taken their places in bondage. We have freed the shackles off the negroes and welded them upon our daughters.

The Chain-Gang of Civilization. A million women in bondage in the Southern fields form the chain-gang of civilization—the industrial tragedy of the age. There is no overcast quite so cruel as that of unrestrained greed, no whip that stings like the lash of unborn destiny, and no auctioneer's block quite so revolting as that of organized avarice.

The president of the United States was recently lauded by the press, and very properly so, for suggesting mediation between the engineers and railroad managers in adjusting their schedules of time and pay. The engineers threatened to strike if their wages were not increased from approximately ten to eleven dollars per day and schedule reduced from ten to eight hours and a similar readjustment of the overtime schedule. Our women are working in the field, many of them hand-tooled, for less than $5 cents per day, and their schedule is the rising sun and the evening star, and after the day's work is over they walk the crow, step the legs and rock the baby to sleep. In anyone's mind, ing over their problems, and to whom shall they threaten a strike?

Congress has listened approvingly to those who toll at the forge and behind the counter, and many of our statesmen have smiled at the threats and have fanned the flame of unrest among industrial laborers. But women are as surely the final victims of industrial warfare as they are the burden-bearers in the war between nations, and those who arbitrate and mediate the differences between capital and labor should not forget that when the expenses of any industry are unnecessarily increased, society foots the bill by drafting a new consignment of women from the home to the field. Pinch no Crumb From Women's Crest of Bread.

No financial award can be made without someone footing the bill, and we commend to those who accept the responsibility of the distribution of industrial justice, the still small voice of the woman in the field as she pleads for mercy, and we beg that they pinch no crumb from her crust of bread or put another patch upon her ragged garments.

We beg that they listen to the scream of horror from the eagle on every American dollar that is wrung from the brow of toiling women and hear the Goddess of Justice hiss at a verdict that increases the want of woman to satisfy the greed of man.

The women behind the counter and in the factory cry aloud for sympathy and the press thunders out in their defense and the pulpit pleads for mercy, but how about the woman in the field? Will not these powerful exponents of human rights turn their talent, energies and influence to her relief? Will the Goddess of Liberty enthroned at Washington hold the calloused hand and soothe the feverish brow of her sex who sows and reaps the nation's harvest or will she permit the male of the species to shove women—weak and weary—from the bread-line of industry to the back alleys of poverty?

Women and Children First. The census enumerators tell us that of the 1,514,000 women who work in the fields as farm hands 469,000 are sixteen years of age and under. What is the final destiny of a nation whose daughters behind the plow, pitching hay and hauling manure, and what is to become of womanly culture and refinement that grace the home, charm society and entice man to leap to glory in noble achievements if our daughters are raised in the society of the ox and the companionship of the plow?

In that strait between the ages of sixteen and forty-five are 550,000 women working as farm hands and many of them with suckling babes teething at their breasts, as drenched in perspiration, they wield the scythe and guide the plow. What is to become of that nation where poverty breaks the crowns of the queens of the home; despair hurls a mother's love from its throne and hunger drives innocent children from the schoolroom to the hoe?

The census bureau shows that 155,000 of these women are forty-five years of age and over. There is no more pitiful sight in civilization than these saintly mothers of Israel stooped with age, drudging in the field from sun until sun and at night drenching their dingy pillows with the tears of despair as their aching hearts take it all to God in prayer. Civilization strikes them a blow when it should give them a crown, and their only friend is he who broke bread with beggars and said: "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest."

Oh, America! The land of the free and the home of the brave, the world's custodian of chivalry, the champion of human rights and the defender of the oppressed—shall we permit our maidens fair to be torn from the hearthstone by the ruthless hand of destiny and chained to the plow? Shall we permit our faithful wives, whom we covenanted with God to cherish and protect, to be hurled from the home to the harvest field, and our mothers dear to be driven from the old farm estate to the cotton patch?

In rescuing our citizens from the forces of civilization, can we not apply to our fair Dixieland the rule of the sea—"women and children first?" There must be a readjustment of the wage scale of industry so that the women can be taken from the field or given a reasonable wage for her services. Perhaps the issue has never been fairly raised, but the Farmers' Union, with a membership of ten million, puts its organized forces squarely behind the issue and we now enter upon the docket of civilization the case of "The Woman in the Field" and demand an immediate trial.

The correspondence recently received by the Idaho experiment station would indicate that some farmers have a wrong idea as to the use of inoculation material for alfalfa and other legumes. These bacteria applied to the seed have no power to assist in the germination of the seed, in increasing the stand or in correcting detrimental influences that may be operating in the soil. Their sole duty is in gathering nitrogen from the air and turning it over to the plants on whose roots they grow.

If the soil is deficient in nitrogenous fertilizers, therefore, they will enable the legume to make a good growth and yield. If the soil, on the other hand, is so saturated with alfalfa, then these bacteria will be of little use. Again, if poor seed is used, or too much or too little seed is sown the bacteria will not remedy these troubles.

These bacteria need not be used if the legumes already growing in any particular soil show the nodules on the roots. This can be determined by careful examination of the roots for the nodules on the same. Now ground is frequently deficient in these bacteria and they should be applied with safety.

GARDEN FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Quick Growing is Secret of Tender Crispness of Salad Plants—Keep the Soil Moist.

(By L. E. CHAPIN.) Among less common sorts asparagus-beets are very desirable, as the entire plant may be cooked for greens when young, or the large ribs and veins from the older leaves may be cooked and served as asparagus.

Brussels sprouts belong to the cabbage family and the tiny heads that form on the stalks are more delicate in flavor than most cabbage.

Kohlrabi seems like a cross between a cabbage and a turnip, but if cooked when young and tender has a flavor like cauliflower.

Fetticus (corn salad) may be sown and treated the same as spinach and furnishes one of the very early spring salads.

Endive is another very fine salad plant, and the seeds may be sown as late as August for plants to use during the fall.

Dandelions, of the improved, large-leaved sorts are among the finest salad plants, and if cut freely for use there is no danger of their becoming a nuisance.

Celeriac (turnip rooted celery) is finer for flavoring soups than the stalk-celery, and may be served in various ways.

Leeks are so easily grown as onions and being less in favor are more desirable for some purposes.

Winter onions are very desirable because of the fact that when once planted they come up year after year as soon as the frost is out of the ground, and are ready for use in two or three weeks.

The Egyptian winter onion, or the perpetual tree onion are among the best of type because they are more hardy than some.

Onions are less well known than it should be. It is fine for use in soups, stews and salads.

Most gardens have rhubarb plants, but it is worth while to start a few roots of the "over-ready" sort that furnishes fine stalks during the entire summer and fall, if given water during very dry periods.

With all these (and other salad plants), quick growing is the secret of tender crispness and to secure it, the soil must be rich, and have plenty of moisture.

Catalogues and seed packets furnish cultural directions and are so plain and easily followed.

Keep the Soil Loose on Top. Never allow the soil to become hard and baked; stir it frequently and as deeply as possible without disturbing the roots. This will increase its capacity to hold moisture, which is very necessary to the welfare of the plant. Soil around leaf crops must be kept loose to cause them to grow rapidly, which will make them less dry.

THE WHIPPOORWILL.

Oh, meet me when daylight is faded
And is darkening into the night.
When songbirds are singing their vespers
And day has far vanished from sight.
And then I will tell you, darling,
All the love I have cherished so long
If you but meet me at evening,
When you hear the sweet whippoorwill's song.

And in the long years of the future,
Though our duties may part us awhile,
And by the return of this evening
We be severed by many a mile;
Yet deep in our hearts we will cherish
The affection so fervent and strong
We pledged to each other this evening
When we heard the first whippoorwill song.

CHORUS.

Whippoorwill, whippoorwill,
When you hear the sweet whippoorwill song;
Oh, meet me; oh, meet me,
When you hear the sweet whippoorwill song.

WAR AND KINGS.

We do not want others' blood,
And we refuse to shed our own.
George K. Kirkpatrick.
Let those who make the quarrels be the only ones to fight—
Alice L. Park.
They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks.—Isaiah II, 1.
And they shall build houses and inhabit them, and they shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them, and they shall not build and another inhabit. They shall not plant and another eat.—Isaiah LXV, 21, 22.
If any will not work neither shall they eat.—Thess. III, 10.

MY FRIENDS.

I tried to count my friends one day—
Since that day I have walked in awe.
I stopped my counting in dismay.
For, stretching far, in long array,
Still friends and friends I saw.
And then I said, all chokingly,
And faint with weight of happiness,
"Dear God, I pray that I may be
The man they think me—nothing less.
Oh, let me be until life ends
The man they think me, these my friends."
—Mary Carolyn Davies in Youth's Companion.

HONOR DEFINED.

The sense of honor is of so fine and delicate a nature that it is only to be met with in minds which are naturally noble or in such as have been cultivated by great examples or a refined education.—Addison.
Glory is sweet when our heart says to us that the wreath of honor ought to grace our heads.—Krummacker.
That chastity of honor which felt a stain like a wound.—Burke.
Honor and fame exist for him who always recognizes the neighborhood of the great, always feels himself in the presence of high causes.—Emerson.

THE SERENADERS.

A fiddler tried a serenade;
She didn't smile on him.
She scorned the music that he made—
Zim-zim.
A fellow with a banjo came;
The dame didn't think
It worth emerging for his name
Plink-plink.
The third arrival won the girl,
Although his tune was punk.
He drove up with a noisy whirl,
Honk-honk! —Puck.

INFLUENCE.

Just as soon as you begin to think or do something you begin to have influence. Influence is something you can't keep at home. And when it gets away from you you can never recall it. Your influence makes you something of somebody else. Influence has no boundaries. Once started, though it may seem ever so trifling, yet it may have as its destination the farthest corners of the earth. If you would get a conception of power, realize the influence of a strong man.—George Matthew Adams.

Look Fire to Be Used Again.
To stop following hostile vessels or even for purposes of attack when the conditions are right a German naval officer has invented a Greek fire that will burn while floating on water.

Her Two Steady Jobs.

When a woman really loves a man, she takes equally great delight in making him comfortable when she thinks he is miserable and miserable when she finds him comfortable.—The Disappearing Act.

HUNGARY'S WAR SONG.

Lord of heaven, bless our land,
Joy and plenty here bestow;
In our need lift thine hand,
—Strong to shield us from the foe.
Hungary in days of old,
Proud and fearless, stanch and free
Call'd her sons from field and fold
To die for liberty;
Call'd her sons from field and fold
To die for liberty.

Hail, all hail, holy land!
Crow'd with lonely mothers' tears;
Onward lead, hero band,
Onward ever through the years.
Peace shall follow after pain,
Love shall garner in her store,
Freedom rises once again,
Shall live for evermore;
Freedom rises once again,
Shall live for evermore.

RUSKIN ON PAINTING.

Painting, with all its technicalities, difficulties and peculiar ends, is nothing but a noble and expressive language, invaluable as the vehicle of thought, but by itself nothing.
If it is the love of that which your work represents—if, being a landscape painter, it is the love of hills and trees that move you—if, being a figure painter, it is the love of human beauty and human soul that moves you—if, being a flower or animal painter, it is the love and wonder and delight in petal and in limb that moves you, then the spirit is upon you, and the earth is yours and the fullness thereof.

RURAL JOYS.

Sing a song of winter time,
Cold and bitter weather;
Meet it with a cheery rhyme,
All of us together!
Shut the window, light the lamp,
To the hearth draw nigher;
Thaw out all the frost and damp
At the open fire.
Toss a bag on the blaze,
Spread the circle wider,
Talk and talk of other days—
Fetch a jug of cider.
Crack the nut and crack the jest
Mid the laughter lusty,
Now and then among the rest
One is stale and musty.
Mother, fetch the gingerbread
And the apples mellow;
Even lovers must be fed—
Sally's got a fellow!
Sing a song of ice and snow,
Goodness, how we pity
Them that pleasure never know,
People of the city!

GOLDEN THOUGHTS.

That is never too often said which is never sufficiently learned.—Seneca.
What the law insists upon let it have of your free will.—Terence.
Let no man love himself more than his neighbor.—Cicero.
Life is given to no one for a lasting possession, to all for use.—Lucretius.
Live without envy, pray for placid and inglorious years and form friendships with your equals.—Ovid.

WISE DESIRES.

Of truth, of grandeur, beauty,
Love and hope—
And melancholy fear subdued by faith;
Of blessed consolations in distress;
Of moral strength and intellectual power;
Of joy in widest commonality spread;
Of that intelligence which governs all;
I sing—"fit audience let me find"—
I may my life
Express the image of a better time,
More with desires and simpler manners.
—William Wordsworth.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

The cultivation of the mind is a kind of food supplied for the soul of man.—Cicero.
I trust no rich man who is officiously kind to a poor man.—Plautus.
Being admonished, learn justice and despise not the gods.—Virgil.
The Judge is condemned when the guilty is acquitted.—Syrus.
Clemency alone makes us equal to the gods.—Claudianus.

TOO EARLY YET

One of the greatest faults in our system of government is the frequency of our elections. We are hardly out of one before we are plunged into another.

It is true that it is advisable to hold elections frequently enough to make these holding office pliant to the wishes of the people.

The man of the party, changing our constitution, so as to do away with at least half of our elections will deserve and receive the thanks of a grateful people.

Take the present for instance, here we are, hardly through with a campaign, already on the brink of another primary contest which at present looks as though it will "shot" right.

One the Hon. J. Chas. Luthicum of Baltimore City, has already announced his candidacy for Governor, and is even now waging an organized fight for the place.

The political situation in the State at large may be likened to the situation in this County—and every man who is at all conversant with local conditions knows that this is enough said.

The whole truth of the matter is that the voters are better educated than they once were, and are not so easily fooled. They are thoroughly tired of being used as "catspaws" by the professional office holders.

They are beginning to realize that they have some other place to fill in our plan of government than merely that of voting in accordance with the wishes of those assuming the right to dictate.

They are reading the news of the day, and more than that they are digesting what they read. They are conversant with public men and public questions as those who in the past, have done all the thinking for them.

It is no longer possible to fool them with oratorical outbursts of patriotism belched forth from lungs until to lace the shoes of a real patriot.

Let us have time to drink in the lessons of the past and try to get a line on the very uncertain future.

A few weeks of quiet, devoted to careful sober thought will hurt no one, but on the contrary will benefit all if properly used.

Let the "rule of ruin men" have time to consider and see just what their policy is likely to bring about.

Let those who are fighting for principle's sake have time to take stock and carefully weigh their next step.

mon sense will be needed before the next year rolls by—or we read the signs of the times awry.

Nothing is ever gained by impulsive, headlong action. Envy, passion or malice is a very poor guide to follow.

I have a nice line of Fall and Winter hosiery and underwear samples from the World's Star Hosiery and Underwear Co., the kind that wears.

Give us time to decide what is right and then after each one of us has come to a conclusion let him act accordingly.

Principle is what we should follow and what must be followed if we retain our own self respect.

And it is by and through principle we can only hope to accomplish that which every good citizen sincerely desires—the greatest good to the greatest number.

RAILROADS APPEAL TO PRESIDENT

The Common Carriers Ask for Relief—President Wilson Directs Attention of Public to Their Needs.

The committee of railroad executives, headed by Mr. Frank Trumbull, representing thirty-five of the leading railroad systems of the nation, recently presented to President Wilson a memorandum briefly reviewing the difficulties now confronting the railroads of the country and asking for the cooperation of the governmental authorities and the public in supporting railroad credits and recognizing an emergency which requires that the railroads be given additional revenues.

The memorandum recites that the European war has resulted in general depression of business on the American continent and in the dislocation of credits at home and abroad. With revenues decreasing and interest rates increasing the transportation systems of the country face a most serious crisis and the memorandum is a strong presentation of the candle burning at both ends and the perils that must ultimately attend such a conflagration when the flames meet is apparent to all. In their general discussion the railroad representatives say in part: "By reason of legislation and regulation by the federal government and the forty-eight states acting independently of each other, as well as through the action of a strong public opinion, railroad expenses in recent years have vastly increased. No criticism is here made of the general theory of governmental regulation, but on the other hand, no ingenuity can relieve the carriers of expenses created thereby."

President Wilson, in transmitting the memorandum of the railroad presidents to the public, characterizes it as "a lucid statement of plain truth." The president recognizing the emergency as extraordinary, continuing, said in part:

"You ask me to call the attention of the country to the imperative need that railway credits be sustained and the railroads helped in every possible way, whether by private co-operative effort or by the action, wherever feasible of governmental agencies, and I am glad to do so because I think the need very real."

The conference was certainly a fortunate one for the nation and the president is to be congratulated for opening the gate to a new world of effort in which everyone may cooperate.

There are many important problems in our complex civilization that will yield to co-operation which will not lend themselves to arbitrary rulings of commissions and financing railroads is one of them. The man with the money is a factor that cannot be eliminated from any business transaction and the public is an interested party that should always be consulted and happily the president has invited all to participate in the solution of our railroad problems.

Over-production and crop mortgage force the farmers into ruinous competition with each other. The remedy lies in organization, and in co-operation in marketing.

THE RURAL CHURCH

THE FARMERS THE CUSTODIANS OF THE NATION'S MORALITY.

Co-operation of Church, School and Press Essential to Community Building.

By Peter Radford
 Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

The church, the press and the school form a triple alliance of progress that guides the destiny of every community, state and nation. Without them civilization would wither and die and through them life may attain its greatest blessing, power and knowledge. The farmers of this nation are greatly indebted to this social trinity for their uplifting influence, and on behalf of the American plowmen I want to thank those engaged in these high callings for their able and efficient service, and I shall offer to the press a series of articles on co-operation between these important influences and the farmers in the hope of increasing the efficiency of all by mutual understanding and organized effort. We will take up, first, the rural church.

The American farmer is the greatest church builder the world has ever known. He is the custodian of the nation's morality; upon his shoulders rests the "ark of the covenant" and he is more responsive to religious influences than any other class of citizenship.

The farmers of this nation have built 120,000 churches at a cost of $750,000,000, and the annual contribution of the nation toward all church institutions approximates $200,000,000 per annum. The farmers of the United States build 22 churches per day. There are 20,000,000 rural church communicants on the farm, and 54 per cent of the total membership of all churches reside in the country.

The farm is the power-house of all progress and the birthplace of all that is noble. The Garden of Eden was in the country and the man who would get close to God must first get close to nature.

The Functions of a Rural Church.

If the rural churches today are going to render a service which this age demands, there must be co-operation between the religious, social and economic life of the community. The church to attain its fullest measure of success must enrich the lives of the people in the community it serves; it must build character; develop thought and increase the efficiency of human life. It must serve the social, business and intellectual, as well as the spiritual and moral side of life. If religion does not make a man more capable, more useful and more just, what good is it? We want a practical religion, one we can live by and farm by, as well as die by.

Fewer and Better Churches.

Blessed is that rural community which has but one place of worship. While competition is the life of trade, it is death to the rural church and moral starvation to the community. Petty sectarianism is a scourge that blights the life, and the church prejudice saps the vitality, of many communities. An over-churching community is a crime against religion, a serious handicap to society and a useless tax upon agriculture.

While denominations are essential and church pride commendable, the high teaching of universal Christianity must prevail if the rural church is to fulfill its mission to agriculture.

We frequently have three or four churches in a community which is not able to adequately support one. Small congregations attend services once a month and all fail to perform the religious functions of the community.

The division of religious forces and the breaking into fragments of moral efforts is oftentimes little less than a calamity and defeats the very purpose they seek to promote.

The evils of too many churches can be minimized by co-operation. The social and economic life of a rural community are respective units and cannot be successfully divided by denominational lines, and the churches can only occupy this important field by co-operation and co-ordination.

The efficient country church will definitely serve its community by leading in all worthy efforts at community building, in uniting the people in all co-operative endeavors for the general welfare of the community and in arousing a real love for country life and loyalty to the country home and these results can only be successfully accomplished by the united effort of the press, the school, the church and organized farmers.

Roman Villa Unearthed.

A Roman villa has recently been unearthed in the grounds of Linnors-leas, Compton, near Guildford, Eng., the house of Mrs. G. P. Watts, widow of the painter.

The digging was undertaken by the Surrey Archaeological society and the complete plan of the villa has been revealed. The north wall is about sixty feet in length, the west 53 feet and the south about seventy-six feet. The villa contains seven rooms and some baths. There is a veranda on the south and a corridor on the north. Several Roman ornaments have been found.

Look at Me I am Well.

"I cannot say too much for Peruna. It has entirely cured me of my trouble. My eye lids were thick and red nearly all the time. My eyes were especially sensitive to light. Catarrh was my trouble. I had had my eyes treated and took a great deal of medicine, but nothing seemed to help me until I tried Peruna. I always use Peruna when my family need it. Always find it very good. It helps wonderfully. You can use my testimonial anywhere you wish to." So says Mrs. C. Skehan, No. 614 S. Leavitt St., Chicago, Ill.

Proves By The Pikes Peak Test

No where else in all the world is there such a test of the time keeping quality of a watch as on the famous Pikes Peak Cog Railway in Colorado, where the steep grades of the mountain necessitate the use of cog wheels to control the train, and vibration often so injures ordinary watches that an expert repairman must readjust them.

A conductor on the Pike's Peak road made a ninety-day test of the South Bend Watch last summer. No adjustment of the watch was made for the whole period, but at the end of the test, examination showed a variation of less than one-half second per day. Do you think the watch you carry could stand a test like this?

We will be pleased to show you our line of these guaranteed accurate watches and explain to you how a South Bend Watch adjusts itself to every temperature automatically.

TOO EARLY YET

One of the greatest faults in our system of government is the frequency of our elections.

The man or the party, changing our constitution, so as to do away with at least half of our elections will deserve and receive the thanks of a grateful people.

Take the present for instance, here we are, hardly through with a campaign, already on the brink of another primary contest which at present looks as though it will "hot" right.

One the Hon. J. Chas. Linthicum of Baltimore City, has already announced his candidacy for Governor, and is even now waging an organized fight for the place; and unless Dame Rumor is all wrong, he will soon be followed by a prominent "Eastern-Shoreman."

We have just had a genuine old-fashioned Thanksgiving, and one of the things many of us gave thanks over was that the election was over and we could put politics out of our minds for a while; but it seems that we are to have no peace but are doomed to hear, to talk, and to work along this very scientific branch of our elaborate system of government almost immediately after our "Thanks."

The political situation in the State at large may be likened to the situation in this County - and every man who is at all conversant with local conditions knows that this is enough said.

The whole truth of the matter is that the voters are better educated than they once were, and are not to be easily fooled. They are thoroughly tired of being used as "cattle" by the professional office holders. They are beginning to realize that they have some other place to fill in our plan of government than merely that of voting in accordance with the wishes of those assuming the right to dictate.

They are reading the news of the day, and more than that they are digesting what they read. They are conversant with public men and public questions as those who in the past, have done all the thinking for them.

It is no longer possible to fool them with oratorical outbursts of patriotism belched forth from lungs until to lace the shoes of a real patriot. The shades of Lincoln and Jefferson no longer exert an overwhelming influence over their actions. They admire these and honor their memory, and the principles for which they fought are still dear to them, but they are shrewdly sizing up those who are asking for their support, and are finding but little similarity between the present and the past - other in regard to men or principles. It is recognized everywhere that THE FIGHT is coming a fight fast and furious a fight that may shake the foundation stones one or more of the political parties but let us have a few days of peace before plunging in.

Let us have time to drink in the lessons of the past and try to get a line on the very uncertain future.

A few weeks of quiet, devoted to careful sober thought will hurt no one, but on the contrary will benefit all if properly used.

Let the "rule or ruin men" have time to consider and see just what their policy is likely to bring about.

Let the men who have made up their minds that FIRST LAST and ALL the time their own personal ambitions must be served, have time to think over the past, the present and the TO COME.

Let those who act and think that the First and Only purpose a party performs is to serve themselves or their relatives and friends with choice offices and pure patronage have time to stop and think.

mon sense will be needed before the next year rolls by - or we read the signs of the times awry.

Nothing is ever gained by impulsive, headlong action. Envy, passion or malice is a very poor guide to follow.

I have a nice line of Fall and Winter hosiery and underwear samples from the World's Star Hosiery and Underwear Co., the kind that wears. I would be pleased to show them to you any time.

After an unprecedented rise in the price of sugar, caused by the war in Europe, the cost of the staple is dropping toward a normal level more rapidly than was expected. Housewives, happy a few months ago at being able to buy sugar at retail at the lowest price on record, four cents a pound, were amazed and indignant when the price jumped at the outbreak of the war until at the height of the preserving season they had to pay nine cents a pound. Now sugar is retailing around six cents with every prospect of further decreases.

SHORT SERMONS.

As a simple naturalism takes the place of the old pessimistic supernaturalism, the faith of the world—that in every man which helps him to realize his aspirations—has an optimistic glow.—E. E. Newbert.

It is a grand thing to find joy in one's work. If you have found that, you have found the heart of life. Glad service is better than great service unless that be glad too.—James Buckham.

Of course we have a duty to distinguish between the good and the bad, but we have a duty to discriminate also among the things that are good. We are made not for the good only, but for the best.—Robert Speer.

EVILS OF IGNORANCE.

Nothing is more terrible than active ignorance.—Goethe.

The living man who does not learn is dark, dark, like one walking in the night.—From the Chinese.

The most ignorant are the most conceited. Unless a man knows that there is something more to be known his inference is, of course, that he knows everything. * * * But let a man know that there are things to be known of which he is ignorant, and it is so much carved out of his domain of universal knowledge.—Horace Mann.

BRILLIANTS.

Still, still with thee, when purple morning breaketh,

When the blind wretch and the shadows flee;

Fairer than morning, lovelier than the daylight,

Dawns the sweet consciousness, I am with thee!

—Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Teach me then

To harmonize the discord of my life

And stop the painful jangle of these wires.

That is a task impossible, until

You tune your heartstrings to a higher key

Than earthly melodies.

So cloudless, clear and purely beautiful

That God alone was to be seen in heaven.

—Byron.

Cupid is a busy elf.

You can see this for yourself.

Yet perhaps he'll find it wise

Presently to advertise.

Somewhat in this style maybe,

"Hearts extracted painlessly."

He'll, of course, omit to state

That the after pain is great.

And when heart is gone, 'tis said,

Man is apt to lose his head.

Gladly would he bear some pain

If his heart he could regain.

The fountains mingle with the river

And the rivers with the ocean,

And the winds of heaven mix forever

With a sweet emotion;

Nothing in the world is single;

All things by a law divine

In one another's being mingle—

Why not I with thine?

See the mountains kiss high heaven,

And the waves clasp one another;

No sister flower would be forgiven

If it disdain'd its brother;

And the sunlight clasps the earth,

And the moonbeams kiss the sea;

What are all these kisses worth

If thou kias not me?

END OF MILITARISM.

When the mass murders of the insane soldiers are done there will be a day of reckoning for kings. Civilization is in travail.

A new child is about to enter the human family. It will be more enlightened than its elder brothers and will advance the cause of all mankind. Its mother, European monarchy, may pay for its advent with her own life, or she may drag along for a time in invalidism, but her end is not far distant.

The people as a whole hate war. Their being forced into it will drive out of the minds all vestige of devotion to monarch. The time is not remote when militarism will end and wars cease. The masses are already of a mind to strip autocrats of their power to send armies to death and countries to ruin.—Danish Democrat.

SERVIA'S BATTLE HYMN.

Rise, O Servians, swift arise!

Lift your banners to the skies.

For your country needs her children

Fight to make her free.

Rise, O rise, and crush our enemy,

Rise and fight for liberty.

Free the Save and Drina flow.

Let us, too, unfetter'd go

O'er the wild Moravian mountains.

Swift shall flow sweet freedom's fountains,

Down shall sink the foe.

Rise, O rise, and crush our enemy,

Rise and fight for liberty.

GERMAN APHORISMS.

Better go to bed without supper than rise with debts.

Honor the old, instruct the young, consult the wise and bear with the foolish.

Heavy work in youth is sweet repose in old age.

Towns and countries are never more ruined than when counsel is taken from foreigners.

But to us comes no cheering.

To Duncan no morrow!

Takes the ears that are hoary,

But the voice of the weeper

Wails manhood in glory.

But our flower was in flushing

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Fleet foot on the corral,

Sage counsel in cumber,

Red hand in the foray.

How sound is thy slumber!

Like the dew on the mountain,

Like the foam on the river,

Like the bubble on the fountain,

Thou art gone, and forever!

—Walter Scott.

Not of this alone is even God deprived, the power of making that which is past never to have been.—Aristotle.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

There is, however, a limit at which forbearance ceases to be a virtue.—Burke.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

This nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth.—Abraham Lincoln.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

In the lexicon of youth, which fate reserves for a bright manhood, there is no such word as fail.—Bulwer Lytton.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Small fingers on the silken strings:

Sunset and rising moon;

Far hills of lags, whirl of wings

Of homing birds in June;

And thou wert there, the twilight on thy brow—

O bitter is the biwa's music now!

Beneath the scented tamarinds

On some celestial trail

We drifted with the purple winds

That filled our sampan sail;

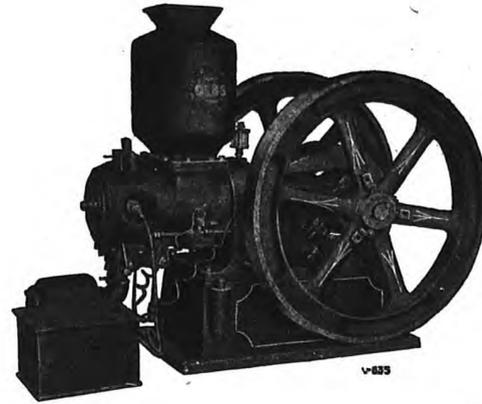

The purple winds blow once and

and not again—

O bitter is the biwa's tender strain!

"The Thinkers of the Country Are the Tobacco Chewers"— said one of the greatest thinkers this country ever produced.

Says the Pilot:

"Nosing a big stern wheeler along a muddy river with sandbars reaching up to grab her—that's when you need real steadiness. When there's nothing but your judgment between your boat and a shoal, take a chew of PICNIC TWIST."

In every convenient twist of PICNIC you'll find the true tobacco uplift without the letdown that comes from dark, heavy, rank tobacco. PICNIC TWIST is a light colored, soft twist of the mild, mellow parts of the leaf.

Men accustomed to "strong" tobacco will be surprised how much they can chew of this mellow twist with its sweet, lasting taste.

The Last Shot

By FREDERICK PALMER

(Copyright, 1914, by Charles H. Bennett's Sons)

how long, at the present rate, will it take them to get the whole range? There's a limit to the number of even five millions."

Then the telephone in the redoubt brought some news. The staff begged to inform the army that the enemy's casualties in the last three days had been two hundred thousand! Immediately everybody was talking at once in Stransky's parliament, as he sometimes called that company of which he was, in the final analysis, unlimited monarch.

"How do they know?" "Do you think it's fake?" "That sums up to pretty near a million!"

"My God! Think of it—a million!" "We're whittling them down!" "It doesn't make any difference whether Partow or Lanstron is chief of staff!"

"They're paying!" "Paying for our fellows that they've killed! Paying for being in the wrong!"

Stransky, his eyes drawing inward in their characteristic slant, was well pleased with his company, and the scattered exclamatory badinage kept on until it was interrupted by the arrival of the mail. Partow and Lanstron, understanding their machine as human in its elements, had chosen that the army should hear from home.

"How's this!" exclaimed one, reading from a newspaper. "They're going to put up a statue of Partow in the capital! It's to show him as he died, dropped forward on the map, and in front of his desk a field of bayonets. On one face of the base will be his name. Two of the other faces will have 'God with us!' and 'Not for theirs, but for ours!' The legend on the fourth face the war is to decide."

"Victory! Victory!" cried those who had listened to the announcement. Stransky was thinking that they had to do more than hold the Grays. Before he should see his girl they had to take back the lost territory. He carried two pictures of Minna in his mind; one when she had struck him in the face as he tried to kiss her, and the other as he said good-by at the kitchen door. There was not much encouragement in either.

"But when she gets better acquainted with me there's no telling!" he kept thinking. "I was fighting out of cussedness at first. Now I'm fighting for her and to keep what is ours!"

CHAPTER XIX.

The Ram.

In the closet off the Galland library, where the long distance telephone was installed, Westerling was talking with the premier in the Gray capital.

"Your total casualties are eight hundred thousand. That is terrific. Westerling!" the premier was saying.

"Only two hundred thousand of those are dead!" replied Westerling. "Many with only slight wounds are already returning to the front. Terrific, do you say? Two hundred thousand in five millions is one man out of twenty-five. That wouldn't have worried Frederick the Great or Napoleon much. Eight hundred thousand is one out of six. The trouble is that such vast armies have never been engaged before. You must consider the percentages, not the totals."

"Yet, eight hundred thousand! If the public knew!" exclaimed the premier.

"The public does not know!" said Westerling.

"They guess. They realize that we stopped the soldiers' letters because they told bad news. The situation is serious."

"Why not give the public something to think about?" Westerling demanded. "I've tried. It doesn't work. The murmurs increase. I repeat, my fears of a rising of the women are well grounded. There is mutiny in the air. I feel it through the columns of the press, though they are censored. I—"

"Then, soon I'll give the public something to think about, myself!" Westerling broke in. "The dead will be forgotten. The wounded will be proud of their wounds and their fathers and mothers triumphant when our army descends the other side of the range and starts on its march to the Browns' capital."

"But you have not yet taken a single fortress!" persisted the premier. "And the Browns report that they have lost only three hundred thousand men."

"Lanstron is lying!" retorted Westerling hotly. "But so matter. We have taken positions with every attack and kept crowding in closer. I ask nothing better than that the Browns remain on the defensive, leaving initiative to us. We have developed their weak points. The resource offensive always wins. I know where I am going to attack; they do not. I shall not give them time to reinforce the defense at our chosen point. I have still plenty of live soldiers left. I shall go in with men enough this time to win and to hold."

"The army is yours, Westerling," concluded the premier. "I admire your stolidity of purpose. You have my confidence. I shall wait and hold the situation at home the best I can. We go into the hall of fame or into the gutter together, you and I!"

For a while after he had hung up the receiver Westerling's head drooped, his muscles relaxed, giving staid and lady a respite from tension.

But his spine was as stiff as ever as he left the closet, and he was even smiling to give the impression that the news from the capital was favorable.

When he called his chiefs of division it was hardly for a staff council. Stunned by the losses and repulses, loyally industrious, their opinions unasked, they listened to his whirlwind of orders without comment—all except Tarcas.

"If they are apprised of our plan and are able to concentrate more artillery than our guns can silence, the losses will be demoralizing," he observed.

Westerling threw up his head, frowning down the objection. "Suppose they amount to half the forces that we send in!" he exclaimed. "Isn't the position, which means the pass and the range, worth it?"

"Yes, if we both take and hold it; not if we fail," replied Tarcas, quite unaffected by Westerling's manner.

"Failure is not in my lexicon!" Westerling shot back. "For great gains there must be great risks."

"We prepare for the movement, your excellency," answered Tarcas. "It was a steel harness of his own will that Westerling wore, without admitting that it galled him, and he laid it off only in Marta's presence. With her, his growing sense of isolation had the relief of companionship. She became a kind of mirror of his egotism and ambitions. He liked to have her think of him as a great man unruined among weaker men. In the quiet and seclusion of the garden, involuntarily as one who has no confidant speaks to himself, reserving fortitude for his part before the staff, while she, under the spell of her purpose, silently, with serene and wistfully listening eyes, played hers, he outlined how the final and telling blow was to be struck.

"We must and we shall win!" he kept repeating.

Through a rubber disk held to his ear in the closet of his bedroom a voice, tremulous with nervous fatigue, was giving Lanstron news that all his aircraft and cavalry and spies could not have gained; news worth more than a score of regiments; news fresh from the lips of the chief of staff of the enemy. The attack was to be made at the right of Engadir, its center breaking from the redoubt manned by Fracasse's men.

"Marta, you genius!" Lanstron cried. "You are the real general! You—"

"Not that, please!" she broke in. "I'm as foul and depraved as a dealer in subtle poisons in the middle ages! Oh, the shame of it, while I look into his eyes and feign admiration, feign everything which will draw out his plans! I can never forget the sight of him as he told me how two or three or four hundred thousand men were to be crowded into a ram, as he called it—a ram of human flesh!—and guns enough in support, he said, to tear any redoubts to pieces; guns enough to make their shells as thick as the bullets from an automatic!"

"We'll meet ram with ram! We'll have some guns, too!" exclaimed Lanstron. "We'll send as heavy a shell fire at their infantry as they send into our redoubts."

"Don't. It's too like Westerling. It has become too trite!" she protested. "The end! If I really were helping toward that and to save lives and our country to its people, what would my private feelings matter? My honor, my soul—what would anything matter? For that, any sacrifice. I'm only one human being—a weak, lunatic sort of one, just now!"

"Marta, don't suffer so! You are overwrought. You—"

"I can say all that for you, Lanny," she interrupted with the faintest laugh. "I've said it so many times to myself. Perhaps when I call you up again I shall not be so hysterical."

Lanstron was not thinking of war or war's combination when he hung up the receiver. It was some moments before he returned to the staff room.

WHY STAY ON HIS FATHER'S FARM

Farm Boy Winner Of 1920 State-Wide Prize in Maryland Week Competition Gives the Answer.

EDWARD ADY, Of Harford County.

What inducement does Maryland offer the farmer's boy to remain on the farm? First, in no state of the Union can he find a choice of so many phases of industry as here. Every condition favors his success, no matter what line of agriculture he may follow. He can become with assurance of success a general farmer, orchardist, stockman, dairyman, poultryman or he can combine several of these branches of farming profitably.

A MARYLAND FARM BOY.

Further, there are two things he knows every man should do; one is to earn a living, the other, to develop within himself his latent possibilities. He knows if he gives up farming and undertakes to build up another business, that he loses by this change at least fifteen years of valuable time, since he has acquired many valuable facts through experience and observation, which facts would be of no financial value to him in another occupation. If he leaves the farm, he will have to begin wholly at the bottom of the ladder again.

The Maryland farmer's boy has spent many hours, days, and months studying and investigating conditions on the farm. He has learned the essentials of success, he can explain the many opportunities in agriculture. He has experimented with crop rotation. He knows how to estimate profits. He knows by experience the cost of farming operations. He has had experience with the necessary machinery to carry on farm work. He knows how to handle animals and what returns are received for them. He is not a stranger to the farm labor question. He has acquired some knowledge of shipping and marketing in a business way. He is better acquainted with the laws affecting land and labor than those of any other occupation. He has kept abreast of rural legislation and is fully equipped to put in practice all of his knowledge. As the inventory of facts grows, the reasons are deeper and clearer why he should remain on the farm.

To sum up these reasons, the Maryland farmer's boy should remain on the farm because he belongs there by hereditary principles. He is needed there to continue the work of his forefathers in a more practical and profitable way. He knows that by not remaining he would lose many years of experience and take up an uncertain proposition of which he is in darkness. He is confident that the soil is adapted to his occupation. The climate is ideal for his health and crop conditions, and from the economical side of the proposition there is no state in which he can practice farming more profitably than in Maryland. He is conscious of the fact that he can still be a pupil at any of the agricultural colleges and thus avoid the many runs into which the old-time farmer fell. Finally, he knows that he will find pleasure and enjoyment in making two blades of grass grow where one formerly grew and in trying out many interesting experiments on a responsive soil.

QUARANTINE YOUR PLACE AGAINST FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE.

This disease is a menace to breeders and owners of live stock, particularly cattle, sheep and hogs. Federal and State authorities are using their best efforts to check its spread and to eradicate it, where it now exists.

To succeed quickly they must be met with energetic co-operation of farmers. To be of greatest service, farmers must closely watch their animals, and report at once, sore mouths or lameness. They should furnish complete information if they have added new animals to their herds or flocks within 60 days, to the State Live Stock Sanitary Board, Baltimore, Md., or U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., stating the kind and number of animals, and where they were secured.

Farmers should establish voluntary quarantine on their farms, and prohibit any cattle, sheep or hogs from passing into or out of their premises.

For the present, all movements and shipments of live stock should be reported to the above departments, giving the source and destination of shipments, and the kind and number of animals.

Do not engage in the shipment or movement of animals from place to place if it can possibly be avoided.

Meaning of Bronze Horses' Hoofs.

Equestrian statues on the battlefield of Gettysburg all follow a general rule which sculptors have adopted as an arbitrary convention. If two feet of the horse are in the air the rider was killed. If one foot is lifted from the ground the rider was wounded. If all four feet are planted on the pediment then it signifies that the subject of the statue was not hurt.

BELGIAN RELIEF FUND

For Women and Children and Other Non-Combatants.

Headquarters of the COMMITTEE ON APPEALS 404 MARYLAND TRUST BUILDING BALTIMORE, MD.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE
President: HIS EXCELLENCY, MR. EMMANUEL HAVENITHE, Deputy States-Secretary and Minister Plenipotentiary of His Majesty, the King of the Belgians
Honorary President: HIS EXCELLENCY, JAMES CARDINAL GIBBONS, Archbishop of Baltimore.
General Secretary: HON. JAMES GUSTAVUS WHITELEY, of Baltimore.

MARYLAND COMMITTEE
Chairman: HON. THEODORE MARBURG, Former United States Minister of Belgium.
Treasurer: MR. ROBERT GARRETT of Baltimore.

Secretary: MR. Y. C. LEPTWICH, of Baltimore.

To the Farmers and all People outside of the large cities the need of immediate help to Belgian women, children and non-combatants is evident. You are earnestly requested now, as you approach your Thanksgiving Day to send this aid at once. Above all send food or money with which food may be bought.

We suggest that a practical help would be to give wheat, rye, flour, shelled corn, beans, bacon, canned goods or other staples that would stand transportation. The railroads and steamboat lines terminating at Baltimore and the harbor lighterage companies have risen in a splendid way to meet this duty of the hour: they will bring to this Committee free of charge any food or clothing properly packed.

To facilitate this movement the agent at your Station will receive the same and furnish you with additional tags properly addressed that will insure its safe delivery. We plan to have a ship known as the "Maryland Ship" leave Baltimore to take your gift direct to the suffering people and place it in the hands of the need.

Won't YOU join and help this work? Please ship your gift in accordance with the following instructions and notify the undersigned and your name will be registered and your contribution gratefully acknowledged. Pack it firmly, mark on the package its contents, attach a tag marked "For Vivian C. Leptwich, acting Belgian Consul, Baltimore, Md., war relief donation," and deliver to your nearest railroad or steamboat station agent, and sign a release for any damage or loss of your gift in transit on the receipt given for your shipment by the railroad or steamboat agent. The Canton Company has generously offered to store Belgian supplies free of cost after their arrival in Baltimore. Donations of money can be sent to ROBERT GARRETT, Treasurer, Garrett Bldg., Baltimore, Md., who will acknowledge them promptly.

Returned to Life in Coffin. To be buried alive in the cemetery of Hochwald, in the canton of Soleure, was the fate of an elderly Swiss lady. After the burial ceremony the grave diggers were about to fill in the grave when they heard knocking in the coffin. Instead of rendering immediate help they fled in terror to inform the doctor and the priest. When the door was opened and it was found that the woman, who had turned over, had died.

Time To Advertise

Advertising PAYS if it is the RIGHT kind of advertisement, and it is placed where it will be seen. The best form of advertising is acknowledged by all successful men to be Newspaper Advertising.

Those who have REAL VALUES to offer are found in the columns of a GOOD newspaper.

Those who do not advertise are seldom successful—and sometimes entirely unreliable.

The people have learned this and prefer to buy of the man who has enterprise and confidence enough in his merchandise to ADVERTISE it.

ADVERTISING TO BE EFFECTIVE must get into the hands of buyers. Circulation is a very valuable factor—but NOT ALWAYS the most important factor.

A PAPER may have a large circulation, but number FEW people able to buy.

A GOOD FAMILIAR paper, circulated among those who are able to buy is the best possible medium.

A PAPER to have the confidence of its readers must be open and fair. It must support and uphold the MORALS of the community in which it is located. It must not be SUBSERVIENT to any interest at all. It must fight for the PROGRESS and ADVANCEMENT of the community in which it is. It must not have POLITICAL or PERSONAL axes to grind. ITS management must command the RESPECT and CONFIDENCE of its readers.

The Salisbury Advertiser offers to the advertising world a circulation that reaches every section of this county. It places in the hands of INFLUENTIAL and PROSPEROUS readers a copy every week.

Its long establishment in this community has given it an ENTIRE in the homes of those ABLE TO BUY. It has tried to be fair to all, and is controlled by no interest. It has ever tried to support the MORAL side of public questions. Its pages have been kept clear of matter unfit to put into the hands of the young. IT stands for the ADVANCEMENT of this CITY and this COUNTY. IT has no POLITICAL or PERSONAL AXES to grind.

CHRISTMAS ADVERTISERS—if reliable—are welcomed to its columns.

GET A GOOD RELIABLE STOCK OF GOODS, THEN PLACE AN ADVERTISEMENT IN THE SALISBURY ADVERTISER—THE PAPER THAT GETS RESULTS—THE PAPER THAT ENTERS THE HOMES OF THOSE ABLE TO BUY.

We advise our readers to carefully scan our columns for the advertisements of the merchants. They will find therein the BEST and most RELIABLE firms of this community. Remembering that the BEST and most RELIABLE merchants the world over are those that ADVERTISE.

RAILROADS APPEAL TO PRESIDENT

The Common Carriers Ask for Relief—President Wilson Directs Attention of Public to Their Needs.

The committee of railroad executives, headed by Mr. Frank Trumbull, representing thirty-five of the leading railroad systems of the nation, recently presented to President Wilson a memorandum briefly reviewing the difficulties now confronting the railroads of the country and asking for the cooperation of the governmental authorities and the public in supporting railroad credits and recognizing an emergency which requires that the railroads be given additional revenues.

The memorandum recites that the European war has resulted in general depression of business on the American continent and in the dislocation of credits at home and abroad. With revenues decreasing and interest rates increasing the transportation systems of the country face a most serious crisis and the memorandum is a strong presentation of the candle burning at both ends and the perils that must ultimately attend such a conflagration when the flames meet its apparent to all. In their general discussion the railroad representatives say in part: "By reason of legislation and regulation by the federal government and the forty-eight states acting independently of each other, as well as through the action of a strong public opinion, railroad expenses in recent years have vastly increased. No criticism is here made of the general theory of governmental regulation, but on the other hand, no ingenuity can relieve the carriers of expenses created thereby."

President Wilson, in transmitting the memorandum of the railroad presidents to the public, characterizes it as "a lucid statement of plain truth." The president recognizing the emergency as extraordinary, continuing, said in part:

"You ask me to call the attention of the country to the imperative need that railway credits be sustained and the railroads helped in every possible way, whether by private co-operative effort or by the action, wherever feasible of governmental agencies, and I am glad to do so because I think the need very real."

The conference was certainly a fortunate one for the nation and the president is to be congratulated for opening the gate to a new world of effort in which everyone may co-operate.

There are many important problems in our complex civilization that will yield to co-operation which will not lend themselves to arbitrary rulings or commissions and financing railroads is one of them. The man with the money is a factor that cannot be eliminated from any business transaction and the public is an interested party that should always be consulted and happily the president has invited all to participate in the solution of our railroad problems.

Over-production and crop mortgage force the farmers into ruinous competition with each other. The remedy lies in organization, and in co-operation in marketing.

The church, the press and the school form a triple alliance of progress that guides the destiny of every community, state and nation. Without them civilization would wither and die and through them life may attain its greatest blessing, power and knowledge. The farmers of this nation are greatly indebted to this social triumvirate for their uplifting influence, and on behalf of the American plowman I want to thank those engaged in these high callings for their able and efficient service, and I shall offer to the press a series of articles on co-operation between these important influences and the farmers in the hope of increasing the efficiency of all by mutual understanding and organized effort. We will take up, first, the rural church.

The Farmers Are Great Church Builders.

The American farmer is the greatest church builder the world has ever known. He is the custodian of the nation's morality; upon his shoulders rests the "ark of the covenant" and he is more responsive to religious influences than any other class of citizenship.

The farmers of this nation have built 120,000 churches at a cost of $750,000,000, and the annual contribution of the nation toward all church institutions approximates $200,000,000 per annum. The farmers of the United States build 22 churches per day. There are 20,000,000 rural church communicants on the farm, and 54 per cent of the total membership of all churches reside in the country.

The farm is the power-house of all progress and the birthplace of all that is noble. The Garden of Eden was in the country and the man who would get close to God must first get close to nature.

The Functions of a Rural Church. If the rural churches today are going to render a service which this age demands, there must be co-operation between the religious, social and economic life of the community.

The church to attain its fullest measure of success must enrich the lives of the people in the community it serves; it must build character; develop thought and increase the efficiency of human life. It must serve the social, business and intellectual, as well as the spiritual and moral side of life. If religion does not make a man more capable, more useful and more just, what good is it? We want a practical religion, one we can live by and farm by, as well as die by.

Fewer and Better Churches.

Blessed is that rural community which has but one place of worship. While competition is the life of trade, it is death to the rural church and moral starvation to the community. Petty sectarianism is a scourge that blights the life, and the church prejudice saps the vitality, of many communities. An over-churching community is a crime against religion, a serious handicap to society and a useless tax upon agriculture.

While denominations are essential and church pride commendable, the high teaching of universal Christianity must prevail if the rural church is to fulfill its mission to agriculture. We frequently have three or four churches in a community which is not able to adequately support one. Small congregations attend services once a month and all fail to perform the religious functions of the community. The division of religious forces and the breaking into fragments of moral efforts is oftentimes little less than a calamity and defeats the very purpose they seek to promote.

The evils of too many churches can be minimized by cooperation. The social and economic life of a rural community are respective units and cannot be successfully divided by denominational lines, and the churches can only occupy this important field by co-operation and co-ordination. The efficient country church will definitely serve its community by leading in all worthy efforts at community building, in uniting the people in all co-operative endeavors for the general welfare of the community and in arousing a real love for country life and loyalty to the country home, and these results can only be successfully accomplished by the united effort of the press, the school, the church and organized farmers.

Roman Villa Unearthed. A Roman villa has recently been unearthed in the grounds of Limerca-leaso, Compton, near Guildford, Eng., the house of Mrs. G. F. Watts, widow of the painter.

The digging was undertaken by the Surrey Archaeological society and the complete plan of the villa has been revealed. The north wall is about sixty feet in length, the west 53 feet and the south about seventy-six feet. The villa contains seven rooms and some baths. There is a veranda on the south and a corridor on the north. Several Roman ornaments have been found.

Proves By The Pikes Peak Test

No where else in all the world is there such a test of the time keeping quality of a watch as on the famous Pikes Peak Cog Railway in Colorado, where the steep grades of the mountain necessitate the use of cog wheels to control the train, and vibration often so injures ordinary watches that an expert repairman must readjust them.

A conductor on the Pikes Peak road made a ninety-day test of the South Bend Watch last summer.

No adjustment of the watch was made for the whole period, but at the end of the test, examination showed a variation of less than one-half second per day. Do you think the watch you carry could stand a test like this? We will be pleased to show you our line of these guaranteed accurate watches and explain to you how a South Bend Watch adjusts itself to every temperature automatically.

THE LAST SHOT

and then he had mastered his emotion. He was the soldier again. An hour or so before the attack the telegraph instruments in the Galland house had become prominently silent. There were no more orders to give; no more reports to come from the troops in position until the assault was made. Officers of supply ceased to transmit routine matters over the wire, while they strained their eyes toward the range. Officers of the staff moved about restlessly, glancing at their watches and going to the windows frequently to see if the mist still held.

No one entered the library where Westering was seated alone with nothing to do. His suspense was that of the mothers who longed for news of their sons at the front; his helplessness that of a man in a hospital lobby waiting on the result of an operation whose success or failure will save or wreck his career. The physical desire of movement, the conflict with something in his own mind, drove him out of doors.

Westering was rather pleased with the fact that he could still smile; pleased with the loyalty of younger officers when, day by day, the staff had grown colder and more mechanical in the attitude that completed his isolation. Walking vigorously along the path toward the tower, the exercise of his muscles, the feel of the cool, moist air on his face, brought back some of the buoyancy of spirit that he craved. A woman's figure, with a cape thrown over the shoulders and the head bare, loomed out of the mist.

"I couldn't stay in—not to-night," Marta said as Westering drew near. "I had to see. It's only a quarter of an hour now, isn't it?"

She seemed so utterly frail and distraught that Westering, in an impulse of protection, laid his hand on her relaxed shoulders.

"Our cause is at stake to-night," he declared, "yours and mine! We must win, you and I! It is our destiny!"

"You and I!" repeated Marta. "Why you and I?"

It seemed very strange to be thinking of any two persons when hundreds of thousands were awaiting the signal for the death prepared by him. He mistook the character of her thought in the obsession of his egoism.

"What do lives mean?" he cried with a sudden desperation, his grip of her shoulders tightening. "It is the law of nature for man to fight. Unless his fight he goes to seed. One trouble with our army is that it was soft from the want of war. It is the law of nature for the fittest to survive! Other sons will be born to take the place of those who die to-night. There will be all the more room for those who live. Victory will create new opportunities. What is a million out of the billions on the face of the earth? Those who lead alone count—those who dwell in the atmosphere of the peaks, as we do!"

The pressure of his strong hands in the unconscious emphasis of his passion became painful, but she did not protest or try to draw away, thinking of his hold in no personal sense but as a part of his self-revelation. "All—all is at stake there!" he continued, staring toward the range. "It's the Rubicon! I have put my career on tonight's cast! Victory means that the world will be at our feet—honor, position, power greater than that of any other two human beings! Do you realize what that means—the honor and the power that will be ours? I shall have directed the greatest army the world has ever known to victory!"

"And defeat means—what does defeat mean?" she asked narrowly, calmly; and the pointed question released her shoulders from the vise.

What had been a shadow in his thoughts became a live monster, striking him with the force of a blow. He forgot Marta. Yes, what would defeat mean to him? Sheer human nature broke through the bonds of mental discipline weakened by sleepless nights. Convulsively his head dropped as he covered his face.

"Defeat! Fall! That I should fail!" he moaned.

Then it was that she saw him in the reality of his littleness, which she had divined; this would be conqueror. She saw him as his intimates often see the great man without his front of Jove. Don't we know that Napoleon had moments of privacy when he whined and threatened suicide? She wondered if Lanny, too, were like that—if it were not the nature of all conquerors who could not have their way. It seemed to her that Westering lay beneath the humblest private in his army—beneath even that fellow with the liver patch on his cheek who had broken the chandelier in the sport of brutal passion. All sense of her own part was submerged in the sight of a chief of staff exhibiting no more stoicism than a petulant, spoiled schoolboy.

While his head was still bent the artillery began its crashing thunders and the sky became light with flashes. His hands stretched out toward the range, clenched and pulsing with defiance and command.

"Go in! Go in, as I told you!" he cried. "Stay in, alive or dead! Stay till I tell you to come out! Stay! I can't do any more! You must do it now!"

"Then this may be truly the end," thought Marta, "if the assault fails."

And silently she prayed that it would fall; while the flashes lighted Westering's set features, imploring success.

In the Browns' headquarters, as in the Grays', telegraph instruments were silent after the preparations were over. Here, also, officers walked restlessly, glancing at their watches. They, too, were glad that the mist continued. It meant no wind. When the telegraph did speak it was with another message from some aerostatic officer saying: "Still favorable," which was taken at once to Lanstron, who was with the staff chiefs around the big table. They nodded at the news and smiled to one another; and some who had been pacing sat down and others rose to begin pacing afresh.

"We could have outpaced two lines of automatics, one above the other!"

exclaimed the chief of artillery. "But that would have given too much of a climb for the infantry in going in—delayed the rush," said Lanstron. "If they should stick—if we couldn't drive them back!" exclaimed the vice-chief of staff.

"I don't think they will!" said Lanstron.

To the others he seemed as cool as ever, even when his maimed hand was twitching in his pocket. But now, suddenly, his eyes starting as at a horror, he trembled passionately, his head dropping forward, as if he would collapse.

"Oh, the murder of it—the murder!" he breathed.

"But they brought it on! Not for theirs, but for ours!" said the vice-chief of staff, laying his hand on Lanstron's shoulder.

"And we sit here while they go in!" Lanstron added. "There's a kind of injustice about that which I can't get over. Not one of us here has been under fire!"

Even the minute of the attack they knew; and just before midnight they were standing at the window looking out into the night, while the vice-chief held his watch in hand. In the hush the faint sound of a dirigible's propeller high up in the heavens, muffled by the fog, was drowned by the Gray guns opening fire.

Before the mine exploded, by the light of the shell bursts breaking their vast prisms from central spheres of flame for miles, with the quick sequence of a moving-picture flicker, Fracasse's men could see one another's faces, spectral and stiff and pasty white, with teeth gleaming where jaws had dropped, some eyes half closed by the blinding flashes and some opened wide as if the lids were paralyzed. Faces and faces! A sea of faces stretching away down the slope—faces in a trance.

Up over the breastworks, over rocks and splintered timbers, Peterkin and the judge's son and their comrades clambered. When they moved they were as a myriad-legged creature, brain numbed, without any sensation except that of rapids going over a fall. Those in front could not falter, being pushed on by the pressure of those in the rear. For a few steps they were under no fire. The scream of their own shells breaking in infernal pandemonium in front seemed to be a power as irresistible as the rear of the wedge in driving them on.

Then sounds more hideous than the flight of projectiles broke about them with the abruptness of lightnings held in the hollow of the Almighty's hand and suddenly released. The Browns' guns had opened fire. Explosions were at the very height of the Gray charge, when all the reserves were in, dark objects fell out of the heavens, and where they dropped earth and flesh were mingled in the maceration. Like some giant reptile with its vertebrae breaking, gouged and torn and pinioned, the charge stopped, in writhing, throbbing confusion. Those of the outer circle of explosions were thrown against their fellows, who surged back in another direction from an explosion in the opposite quarter. From the rear the pressure weakened; the human hammer was no longer driving the ram. Blinded by the lightnings and dust, dizzy from concussion and noise, too blank of mind to be sane or insane, the atoms of the bulk of the charge in natural instinct turned from their goal and toward the place where they had come, with death from all sides all buffeting them. Staggering, at first, they went for want of initiative in their paralysis; then rapidly, as the law of self-preservation asserted itself in wild impulse.

As sheep driven over a precipice they had advanced, as men they fled. There was no longer any command, no longer any cohesion, except of legs struggling in and out over the uneven footing of dead and wounded, while they felt another pressure, that of the mass of the Browns in pursuit. Of all those of Fracasse's company whom we know, only the judge's son and Jacob Pilzer were alive. Stained with blood and dust, his teeth showing in a grimace of mocking hate of all humanity, Pilzer's savage glare was free of the restraint of discipline and civilized convention. Striking right and left, he forced his way out of the region of shell fire and still kept on. Clubbing his rifle, he struck down one officer who tried to detain him, but another officer, quicker than he, put a revolver bullet through his head.

Westering, who had buried his face in his hands in Marta's presence at the thought of failure, must keep the pose of his position before the staff. With chin drawn in and shoulders squared in a sort of petrified military habit, he received the feverish news that grew somber with one brief bulletin. He, the chief of staff, he, Hodworth Westering, the superman, must be a rock in the flood of alarm. When he heard that his human ram was in recoil he declared that the repulse had even swifter in sequence than the flashes that revealed the stark faces. Dust and stones and flying fragments of flesh filled the air. Men went down in positive paralysis of faculties by the terrific crashes. Sections of the ram were blown to pieces by the burst of a shrapnel shoulder high; other sections were lifted heavenward by a shell burst in the earth.

Peterkin fell with a piece of jagged steel embedded in his brain. He had gone from the quick to the dead so swiftly that he never knew that his charm had failed. The same explosion got Fracasse's sword in hand, and another buried him where he lay. The banker's son went a little farther; the barber's son still farther. Men who were alive hardly realized life, so mixed were life and death. Infernal imagination goes faint; its wildest smiles grow feeble and banal before such a consummation of hell.

But the tide keeps on; the torn gaps of the ram are filled by the rushing legs from the rear. Officers urge and lead. Such are the orders; such is the duty prescribed; such is human bravery even in these days when life is sweeter to more men in the joys of mind and body than ever before. Preclusion, organization, solidarity in this charge such as the days of the "death-or-glory" boys never knew! Over the bodies of Peterkin and the barber's and the banker's sons, plunging through shell crashes, stumbling, staggering, cut by swaths and torn by eddies of red destruction in their ranks, the tide proceeded, until its hosts were often treading on flesh than on soil. And all they knew was to keep on—keep on, bayonet in hand, till they reached the redoubt, and there they were to stay, alive or dead.

"After hell, more hell, and then still more hell!" was the way that Strasy expressed his thought when the engineers had taken the place of the 53d of the Browns in the redoubt. They put their mines and connections deep enough not to be disturbed by shell fire. After the survivors in the van of the Grays' charge, spent of breath, reached their goal and threw themselves down, the earth under them at the mine exploded, split and heaved heavenward. But those in the rear, slapped in the face by the concussion, kept on, driven by the pressure of the mass at their backs, and, in turn, plunged forward on their stomachs in the seams and furrows of the mine's havoc. The mass thickened as the flood of bodies and legs banked up, in keeping with Westering's plan to have "enough to hold."

Now the automatics and the rifles from the redoubt to which the Browns had fallen back opened fire. So close together were these bullet-machines that the orbit of each one's swing made a spray of only a few yards' breadth over the redoubt, where the Browns' gun-fire had not for a moment ceased its persistent shelling, with increasingly large and solid targets of flesh for their practice. The thing for these targets to do, they knew, was to trench and begin to return the infantry and automatics' fire. Desperately, with the last effort of courage, they rose in the attempt—rose into playing hose streams of bullets whose close hiss was a steady undertone between shell bursts. In the garish, jumping light brave officers impulsively stood up to hear their commands in their work, and dropped with half-uttered urgings, threats, and oaths on their lips.

The bullets from the automatics missing one mark were certain to find another, perhaps four or five in a row, such was their velocity and power of penetration. Where shell made gaps and tore holes in the human mass, the automatics cut with the regularity of the driven teeth of a comb. The men who escaped all the forms of slaughter and staggered on to the ruins of the redoubt, pressed their weight on top of those in the craters or hugged behind the pyramids of debris, and even made brass works from the bodies of the dead. The more that banked up, the more restless the efforts of the officers to restore order in the frantic medley of shell screams and explosions at a time when a minute seemed an age.

Meanwhile, between them—this banked-up force at the charge's end—and the Brown redoubt with its automatics, the Gray gunners were making a zone of shell bursts in order to give the soldiers time to make their hold of the ground they had gained secure. Through this zone Strasy and his men were to lead the Browns in a counter-attack.

At the very height of the Gray charge, when all the reserves were in, dark objects fell out of the heavens, and where they dropped earth and flesh were mingled in the maceration. Like some giant reptile with its vertebrae breaking, gouged and torn and pinioned, the charge stopped, in writhing, throbbing confusion. Those of the outer circle of explosions were thrown against their fellows, who surged back in another direction from an explosion in the opposite quarter. From the rear the pressure weakened; the human hammer was no longer driving the ram.
