Poetry.

THE SABBATH BELLS.

The old man sits in his easy chair,
And his ear has caught the ringing
Of many a church-bell far and near,
Their own sweet music singing,
And his head sinks low on his aged breast,
While his thoughts far back are reaching
To the Sabbath morns of his boyhood days,
And a mother's sacred teaching.
A few years later, and he is the best
A merrier strain was sealing,
And heavenward here he married vows
Which his marriage joy was sealing.
But the old man's eyes are dimming now,
As memory holds him
The sad, sad picture of later years,
When the tide of grief rolled o'er him.
When the bells were tolling for loved ones
Gone!
For the wife, for the sons and daughters,
Who, one by one, from his home went out,
And down into death's dark waters,
But the aged heart is still one joy
Which his old life happily blesses,
And his eyes grow bright and his pulses
Warm
'Neath a grandchild's sweet caresses.
But the old man wakes from his reverie,
And his dear old face is smiling,
While the child with serious eyes reads
The Sabbath hour beguiling,
And he says, "once more ye will sing for him,
When the heavenly hand shall sever
The cord of life, and his freed soul flies
To dwell with his own forever."

DUPED.

A crochety and contrary old chap was Joel Shellenbarger, a rich old farmer. He had made his way in the world by the doggedest obstinacy—seizing hold of whatever came in his way, and retaining the hold as though life depended upon it.
Joel had one son—a handsome, clear-headed, sound man—straight as a young larch, tall, and as set in his way, when he chose to have one, as Joel himself. This son, as he grew up, had proved a great assistance to his father in working the farm, and his services had been made the most of.
Joel Shellenbarger and his son differed often, but there were two points in which the difference amounted to something serious. The first point concerned education, for which the old man had profound contempt, and the son had not. There was a college some twelve miles from the Shellenbarger farm, and thither Anson betook himself, by the connivance of his father, as soon as he was of age.
"Then he thinks wrong," says Barbie, reddening and looking up at her over with a comical little pout. "Didn't I hear you say indeed a servant at home? I've a mind to go down and offer for the place."
Anson laughed enjoyingly. "We need one bad enough, but my father will not suffer one inside the house."
"Why, how do you live then? Who cooks for you, now that your mother is ill?"
"We do our own cooking," Anson said, with a return of the half smiling, half embarrassed expression. "We cook for ourselves, or do without."
The very day succeeding the one which witnessed this conversation, Anson was at home busying himself over some culinary operations, when the outside door, which stood ajar, was noiselessly pushed wide open, and a singularly attired form presented itself on the threshold. It wore a red and green plaid dress, the checks very large, a yellow shawl and a very frowsy and tumbled white bonnet. A red feather nearly as long as Anson's arm streamed from one side and within the brim flopped the immense fringe of a cap which clung close around the face of the stranger. The face, what could be seen of it, was a very curious one to be inside of such a bonnet and cap. Just now as she surveyed the kitchen and Anson, herself unseen, the muscles of her mouth twitched nervously, and her eyes twinkled with roguish brightness.
Presently Anson looked that way. Instantly the face took lugubrious length, and coming into the room, the girl said hesitatingly, but without looking at him:
"An' would ye be aftler birin' a servant, to-day?" and stood fidgeting with the fringe of her shawl.
"I believe not," said Anson, coloring with some annoyance, perhaps at the nature of his employment.
"Sure, sir, an' the lady that sint me, God bless her swate eyes! said you'd be sure to take me on her recommendation, which I has in my pocket, an' here 'tis now."
She gave him a note which proved to be from Barbie Halmstead. Anson read it with very lover-like carefulness but shook his head.
"I'm very sorry, my poor girl, but we do not wish to hire a servant."
"Belike your father mayn't object when he sees me," the girl persisted.
Anson looked at the spoiled white bonnet and the red feather, and repressed a smile, wondering what his father would say. But he was of too kindly a nature to be willing to expose even this servant to his father's manner. He repeated what he had said before, assuring her that it was of no use to see his father.
"Well, sir, I'll just see him myself, like he may take a notion of me."
"I would reply she had

As she shut the door she stole a glance at Anson that made him start and bite his lips, and presently he stole kitchenward also. She was already at work handling a broom like an adept, and grumbling in her rich tongue at the dust that had accumulated in the corners.

She did not look up as Anson entered; but he sat down and deliberated, and furtively watched her. For some time she seemed unconscious of his scrutiny; but presently she turned and clasping both her little hands upon the top of the broom handle, said with a mixture of bravado and archness too natural to be mistaken:

"Well, Anson, what do you think?"
The young man laughed and looked annoyed in the same breath.

"Then it is you, Barbie?" he said.
"I was suspecting something of the sort."

"Not till I looked at you," said the girl, roguishly retreating as he approached.

"Do you think it is quite the thing, Barbie?"
"Shure an' why ain't it the thing for a poor girl to be gettin' her livin' decently and honestly?"

"Does your father know of this, Barbie? What would he say?" per severed Anson.

"Shure, an' it's not my own fadder would be interferin' wid me, would he?" said Biddy. In vain were all remonstrances with the roguish and willful girl. She persisted in being Biddy even to him, and maintained a distance between him and Barbie in her own proper self. Annoyed, provoked, chagrined, almost angry, the advent of his father forced him to retire from the kitchen, for fear of betraying Barbie's secret, which he would not have done for a good deal.

It was several hours before he could return to the house, his father upon one pretext or another having detained him.

When at last they entered together kitchen and sitting-room, both of which had been left in a most untidy state when they left there, had undergone such a remarkable renovating process that old Joel drew back at first, thinking that he had set foot in somebody else's house instead of his own.

Supper was smoking on the table; such a supper as old Joel, at least, had not seen for months. To crown all, Mrs. Shellenbarger was sitting propped up with pillows, in a great easy chair, and looking wonderfully contented, and with reason—the poor lady had not had a woman's hand about her before, since her illness. Joel Shellenbarger sat down to the daintily-spread table, and made a most hearty and keenly relished meal, glancing askance at Biddy meanwhile. Anson, strange to say, ate very little, and he was asked, too.

promptly putting her hand in his, while old Joel came near choking himself with amazement. It was too late to recede, however, whether he had really wished such a thing or not, as they soon made him understand. He went out of doors presently privately pinching himself, to ascertain if he were really in his senses or not. Seeing the two standing by the window in close conversation soon after, he crept with the same laudable intention toward them under cover of the bushes that grew by the house.

"Now Barbie," Anson was saying laughingly, "what is to be done next? I must say you have managed wonderfully, so far; but what do you suppose he'll say when he knows you're not Biddy at all?"

"Not Biddy at all!" screamed Joel struck with a sudden suspicion of his covert.

There stood Biddy, the white fringe of her close cap as immense as ever; she laughed, though, when she saw him, and deliberately taking off her cap, shook her bright curls all about her face, and reaching towards him little hand, said:

"Sure, sir, an' ye won't be after hating a poor girl because her name's Barbie Halmstead instead of Biddy O'Flynn?"

"You—you Prof. Halmstead's girl?"

"Professor Halmstead is my father," said Barbie, in her natural voice.

"What's that?"
Barbie repeated it.

"And you're not Irish?"
"Never a bit!"

The old man stood a moment, clouds gathering in his face.

"Well, Anson," he said, rather satirically, "you have outwitted me again; much good may it do you. You'd better get out the horses now, and take Halmstead's girl home. He must want to see her by this time."

"Yes, sir," And Anson colored with mingled anger and amazement. Barbie did not change countenance however. Extending that pretty hand of hers again, she said, sweetly:

"You'll shake hands with me, sir?"
Joel Shellenbarger turned back and gave his hand awkwardly. The girl took in both hers, bending her bright arch face toward him, saying:

"I shall come back some time, sir. Will you be glad to see me?"
Joel hummed and hawed, and stammered out at last:

"Ye'es: come back, Biddy—I mean Miss O'Flynn—I mean Miss"—

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

COMPARING FAULTS AND THE RESULTS.

After having been married some weeks it came into the head of a young husband one Sunday, when he had not little to occupy his mind, to say to his wife that she should plainly and honestly state the faults that each had discovered in the other since they had been man and wife.

After some hesitation the wife agreed to the proposition, but stipulated that the rehearsal should be made in all sincerity and with an honest view to the bettering of each other, as otherwise it would be of no use to speak of their faults to which marriage had opened their eyes. The husband was of the same mind, and the wife asked him to begin with his faults. He was somewhat reluctant, but his wife insisted that he was the first to propose the matter, and as he was at the head of the house it was his place to take the lead. Thus urged he began the recital. He said:

"My dear, one of the first faults I observed in you after we began keeping house, was that you were a great neglecter of the towels. You didn't keep 'em scoured as bright as it should be. My mother always took great pride in her linens, and kept 'em as bright as a dollar."

"I am glad you have mentioned it, dear," said the wife, blushing a little, "hereafter you shall see no speck of dust or pan. I've promised."

"I have often observed," said the husband, "that you use your wash-tubs a long time without washing them, and then finally wash them away. Now, when at home, I remember that my mother always used to wash out her wash-tubs when she was done using them, and hang 'em up where they could dry, ready for the next time she would need them."

Blushing as before the young wife promised to mend this fault.

The husband continued with a most formidable list of faults, many more than we have space to enumerate, when he declared that he could think of nothing more that was worthy of mention.

"Now," said he, "my dear, you may begin and tell me the faults you have observed in me since we have been married."

"The young housewife sat in silence; her face flushed to the temples and a great lamp came in her throat, which she seemed to be striving hard to swallow.

"Proceed, my dear: tell me all the faults you have observed in me, sparing none."

"I will begin from her seat, the

EMERSON'S BOY.

There isn't any one around here to make fun. He was a cheerful, lively boy, and he did his best to make that household put on the mantle of joyfulness. Emerson often remarked that Bob didn't seem ever to sit down and think of the grave and death, and he probably never did.

No, Bob wasn't of that make. He wanted to have fun. Bob's ears were nearly worn up by being pulled so much, and it took a whole row of current bushes to furnish whips to do his jacket for the summer.

Emerson didn't know what fun was until Bob was eight years old. Then the boy began to learn to read. He would burn gimel-holes in the bottom of the water-pail, put cartridges in the coal stove, pass away the door knobs, fill the crockets with water, and a good many things didn't burden his mind over five minutes. Sometimes his father would take him by the hair and nail him up to the sofa and sit down and ask:

"What's that?"
"It's the yaller jaunders, I guess," Bob would meekly reply.

"Robert, don't you want to be an angel?" the old man would continue.

"And have wings?"
"Yes, my son."

"And fly higher'n a kite?"
"Yes."

"And fight hawks?"
"Y-e-s, I guess so."

"Bet your beef I would—whoop! Bully for the angels!"

"That's a sacrilege, that is!" the old man would remark, and he would jerk Bob's hair some more and declare that the young rascal was bound for the gallows. After lying under the pear-tree for six minutes Bob would recover from his fright and go over to the

THE TROUBLE-SOME MOTHER.

When a mother has a child, she is bound to take care of it. A woman who has a child, and who is not a mother, is a trouble-some mother.

The trouble-some mother has been shutting the door upon her children now for thirty years.

A number of the children have been shut out of the house, and are now living in the street.

The question of your child's education is a matter of great importance. You should not neglect it.

FUNNY PHOTOGRAPHS.—Here is something for the eyes. Take your stereoscope and a collection of photographs of your friends—the cabinet is the best suited. Select two, with faces turned the same way; arrange them in the frame until they form one picture. The result is a most comical combination. You take for instance, Mr. H. and Miss W.—Mr. H. has the comb and braids of Miss W., while her earrings and laces bow down to him a fanciful appearance. Or Miss W. wears across her upper lip the well-waxed moustache of Mr. H., while his collar and her ruffles form an unique style of neck-dress. But the queerest effects are the combination of expression. You have loving eyes over a stiff upper lip, and Miss B.'s gentle features with the haughty tones of Miss C.'s expression. Move the pictures slightly, and one looks out from behind the other like the "angel over the right shoulder." Try it. We have just discovered it and your friends say it is "too funny by half!"

A WRONG CUSTOM CORRECTED. It is quite generally the custom to take strong liver stimulants for the cure of liver complaint, and both the mineral and vegetable kingdoms have been diligently searched to procure the most drastic and poisonous purgatives. In order to produce a powerful effect on the liver, and at the same time to enfeeble the organ. This system of treatment is on the verge of being abandoned, and a more rational and safe method is being adopted. It is to give a week and a half of the most powerful purgative, and then to give a certain amount of work. When the stimulus is withdrawn, the organ, like the system, gradually relapses into a more torpid or sluggish and weakened condition than before. What then is wanted? A dietetic which, while they cause the bile to flow freely from the liver, and that organ is toned into action, will not overwork and thus debilitate, but will, when their use is discontinued, leave the liver strengthened and healthy. Such remedies are found in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets.

A CURE OF RIVER DISEASE. River, Texas, May 10th, 1873. Dear Sir—My wife last year at this time was confined to her bed with Chronic Liver Disease. I had her use of the best doctors to see her, and he gave her up to die, when I came upon some of your medicine. I bought one bottle and commenced giving it. She then weighed 82 lbs; now she weighs 140 lbs, and is robust and hearty. She has taken eight bottles in all, so you see I am an advocate for your medicine.

FROM THE NOTES OF "WILLIAM KEZEL." HOLLAND HOUSE, Rockford, Ill., April 20, 1873. Dr. R. V. Fricke, Buffalo, N. Y.—I have now taken four bottles of your Golden Medical Discovery in connection with your Pellets, and must state that I feel better than I have for many years. I have done as much good. I feel like a new man. Thanks to your wonderful medicine.

The story goes that his connection with the Emma Mine swindle was due to the hold which Stockwell and other speculators gained over him in consequence of his action in regard to the subsidy. The names of several heads of important House committees are also mentioned as among those who know what became of Irwin's $750,000, but it is probable that they have covered up their tracks so well that no definite charges can be brought against them.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It is widely known as one of the most effectual remedies ever discovered for cleansing the system and purifying the blood. It has stood the test of years, with a constantly growing reputation, based on its intrinsic virtues, and sustained by its remarkable cures. So mild as to be safe and beneficial to children, and yet so searching as to effectually purge out the great accumulations of the blood, such as the scrofulous and syphilitic contamination, impurities, or diseases that have lurked in the system for years, soon yield to this powerful antidote, and disappear.

It is an excellent restorer of health and strength in the Spring. By renewing the appetite and vigor of the digestive organs, it dissipates the depression and listless languor of the season. Even where no disease appears, people feel better, and live longer for cleansing the blood. The system renewed with vigor and a new life.

FARM FOR SALE!!
THE undersigned offer at private sale that valuable FARM on the south side of the Wicomico river, about one mile above White Haven, known as WATERS' FARM, belonging to Dr. Thomas W. Stone. The Farm contains about three hundred and sixty acres of land, is finely situated, convenient to navigation, railroads, school churches, &c. has on it a good site for a COUNTRY STORE. The buildings consist of a large

Dwelling House,
PART BRICK,
cellar, and all other necessary out buildings, is also convenient for the oyster trade, fine oysters grow within three miles of the landing. This FARM is naturally one of the best grazing Farms in Somerset county. Cattle of ten pass the winter here without any feed except what the common and marsh afford. Taken altogether, it is a desirable property. The land is very productive. Terms made easy. Apply to DR. THOMAS W. STONE, Princess Anne, Md. Or to LEMUEL MALONE, Salisbury, Md.

A VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE!!
The undersigned offers a PRIVATE SALE the Farm known as "Forest Home," situated five miles from Salisbury and four miles from the Railroad at Fruitland. This Farm contains

150 ACRES,
and is in a fair state of improvement, has on it a fine young orchard of APPLE, PEACH, PEAR, and CHERRY Trees.
The buildings are ancient, but commodious. The

are complete. This is a fine trucking farm, having been one of the first in the production of strawberries. Terms made easy. Apply to LEMUEL MALONE, Salisbury, Md. Nov-2-11-

APPLETON'S AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA.
New Revised Edition.
Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers on every subject. Printed from new type, and illustrated with Several Thousand Engravings and Maps.
The work originally published under the title of The New American Cyclopaedia was completed in 1863, since which time the wide circulation which it has attained in all parts of the United States, and the signal developments which have taken place in every branch of science, literature, and art, have induced the publishers to submit it to an exact and thorough revision, and to issue a new edition entitled The American Cyclopaedia.
Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge has made a new work of reference an imperative want.
The movement of political affairs has kept pace with the discoveries of science, and its fruitful application to the industrial and useful arts and the convenience and advancement of social life. Great wars and consequent revolutions have occurred, involving national changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our own country, and the old work appeared, has happily been ended, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commenced. Large accessions to our geographical knowledge have been made by the indefatigable explorers of Africa.
The great political revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the lapse of time, have brought into public view a multitude of new names, and of whose lives every one is curious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought and important signs maintained, of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in the original records of the progress of political and historical events.
The work has been after long and careful preliminary labor, and with the ample resources for carrying it out to a successful termination.
The illustrations which are introduced for the first time in this edition have been selected for the sake of pictorial effect, but to give greater lucidity and force to the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of science and of natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of scenery, architecture, and art, as well as the various processes of mechanics and manufactures. Although intended for instruction rather than embellishment, no pains have been spared to insure their artistic excellence, and such improvements in its composition as have been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge.

A VERY DESIRABLE FARM FOR SALE.
Beautifully located on the Banks of the Pocomoke River.
This farm will be sold at a Bargain!—For a small Farm it is one of the most desirable on the banks of the Pocomoke; it is situated within a quarter of a mile of its junction with the Chesapeake Bay, and contains between 60 AND 70 ACRES. One half cleared and the balance is well set in young Pine and Oak Timber. Upon the premises is a Dwelling House with five rooms and a good dry Cellar under it 40 by 20 feet. A Barn, a Stable with three stalls, Corn House, Carriage House and kitchen. This farm is desirable farming land, adapted to the growth of Corn, Wheat, Oats and "trucking." On this farm Asparagus grows spontaneously, which always commands a good price in Baltimore market, with which it is steamboat connection twice a week; also with Crisfield, Onancock, Newtown and Snow Hill. Steamers land within 200 yards of the house. The neighborhood is healthy, the people kind and hospitable. Mills, Stores, Churches and school houses convenient. Also, a well of excellent water near the door. Oysters grow within two miles of the farm. Fish in abundance at all seasons of the year; Trout are caught at the very door in Summer; Shad in the Spring and Rock and Perch in the Winter. It is also one of the best locations on the river for a Marine Railway, and no enterprise pays so well, as nearly all Oyster boats find it necessary to repair after the close of the "dredging" season, and "their number is legion." Those wishing to purchase can address or apply in person to LEMUEL MALONE, Salisbury, Md. Or, J. S. REVILLE, Rehoboth, Somerset Co., Md. N. Poetry.

HE LEADETH ME.

MRS. SOPHIA L. ADAMS.

He leadeth me! why should I stray,
Though dark the night, and rough the way,
If but His glorious face I see,
And His dear hand still leadeth me.

He leadeth me, from darkness shade,
From burdens sin hath on me laid,
From devious ways, so dark, so lone,
That scarce one ray of light hath shone.

He leadeth me to work His will;
He bids my troubled heart "Be still!"
Glad ministrant of good to all!
My heart all joy, I hear thy call.

He leadeth me! Thou God of love!
Till earthly dross, which mars the soul,
Beneath Thy beams shall from it roll.

He leadeth me! O may I hear
When skies be sombre—storms be near—
Above it all His sweet voice sound,
To scatter all the gloom profound.

He leadeth me! O may my days
Be filled with Christ, my soul with praise!
Like those rich days of heaven to me,
Each day a thousand years shall be.

He leadeth me! may He hold,
His arms sustain, His love uphold,
With visions of His grace I see,
As His dear hand is leading me.

When sinks frail nature 'neath the flood,
He's near to save, save by His blood;
Though eyes grow dim—all terrors flee;
E'en to the gate He leadeth me.

He leadeth in! O rapturous hour!
To Him be thanks, to Him be power;
Now, by His love His grace I see;
Yes, 'tis God's hand still leadeth me.

ADA'S TRIUMPH.

Poor Ada! Only a few short months ago her life was without a shadow, her heart without a throb of agony, her mind as buoyant and free from care as the most brilliant of butterflies, revealing in one long day of glorious sunshine, over which the gloom of evening never came.

And now, crushed, broken, faded, spurned! The butterfly caught in meshes of a silken net, still within view of the sweetly perfumed flowers, which bend their jeweled heads with affection to the sun, yet imprisoned in the cold, damp, treacherous shadows, where the sunshine may never fall again.

A year ago, free as the morning breeze, her young heart courted here and there at will, laughing love to scorn; but now, the relentless god had given battle to the weak enemy, and her heart was left upon the battle field—wounded, dead.

So those eyes which were so soft and bright, and beautiful of old, wear a tinge of sadness now. Those spotless cheeks, fresh with the blushing innocence of youth, are wan and pale, and those rosy lips, whose very motion was an ecstasy, are closely pressed together, and the color fades from them as she reads the tidings which are the first link of sorrow in her life.

"Donald, Donald!" she murmurs, while her bosom heaves with the irregular motion of an angry sea; and her hand the sculptured beauty of which he has so often caressed, and praised as the only one worthy to wear the ring he gave her, quivers as a falling leaf in the cold unfriendly wind.

Only a few lines of small, clear type, bearing no special interest to the outside world. Yet they were the forerunners of misery intense:

"Married, on the 26th ult., Agnes, only daughter of the late George Temple, to Donald James Collier, of Woodbridge, Pa."

"Donald, Donald!" a pitiful wailing reproachful cry, filled with the agony of love unsatisfied, and she fell to the earth, unconscious of everything save that the hope of her life was dead.

From the death there arose a new life, no longer the self-willed, impatient loving Ada Clare, but a woman, strong and brave, heavy and sorrowful at heart, but firm, undimmed, filled and upheld by onesolitary wish, vague desire for vengeance.

It was barely a year ago when she gave her heart into his keeping. He was an artist of some small repute, a lodger, that summer, at her father's house, when another summer would have blessed somed with sweet love, and that the blossom would be plucked and thrown away.

"Ada," he said, when the time for parting came—how well remembered were his words, "look up into my face."

She had obeyed him, bashfully, hopefully, coyly, but lovingly.

"It is said the face is the index of the mind. Can you read it, Ada? Can you trace in mine the love I bear towards you, a love too strong for words?"

She was silent, but she bowed her head and waited blissfully, trustfully waited for the words that were yet to come.

"What answer shall I read, Ada?—Your sweet blushes would bid me hope. Is this so, my darling? May I claim you for my very own? Will you be my wife?"

She trembled a little, and laid her hand confidently in his, and he placed a ring upon her finger—the ring she has crushed beneath her feet to-night and he kissed her lips—the lips that have turned so very pale at the recollection of it, and he promised to love and protect her always.

But the winter came, cold, dreary winter—there were no longer artistic wanderings in fairy wilds. The earth was cheerless and bare, and the young artist turned from its contemplation to the warmth and glow of social city life.

So when the glad spring sunshine revived his unstable nature, it was Agnes Temple, the fascinating ball-room belle who attracted this moth to the light of love again.

Meantime, the trustful, genuine-hearted Ada Clare waited, and hoped and counted the days and hours until the spring passed into summer once more.

Then the blow fell. The first chapter of her life was ended. All that was left of the old love, which had commenced so favorably, was the one heart-breaking cry, "Donald, Donald!"

The giddy world was in the zenith of its glory. The leaders of fashion had returned from their summer rambles and were busily comparing notes of their adventures in far away places. Anxious mamma's were calculating their young daughter's latest chances, and deciding which of their newly formed acquaintances were worthy of extended patronage. City merchants, whose untiring energy had placed their wives and daughters within this magic circle, were ruefully calculating the expenses of the late summer, invitations to social gatherings were passing to and fro, when Donald Collier and his young bride returned from their wedding tour.

A maiden aunt, who resided near the city, had invited Ada to relieve her loneliness. Ada had joyfully accepted the invitation, and the good lady had promised her a merry time and an introduction to society. And Rebecca had determined in her own mind that her niece was quite old enough to enter the lists in competition with some of the designing fair ones of her acquaintance, who held the male sex in a state of siege, and she had formed several little plans of her own, which would doubtless help her to secure a true and loving husband for her niece.

It never once occurred to her that in the seclusion which had hitherto surrounded Ada, her heart could have found its mate, nor would such a thought have received a moment's consideration. She was determined that Ada should have every opportunity of making a brilliant match, and she gloried in her own anticipations of the result.

And Ada? She accepted the invitation gladly, believing it a means towards the end she had in view. She was singularly beautiful; her sorrow had given her an additional grace.—She was no longer a thoughtless, petulant child. She had all of a woman's nature, but without the softening influence of a woman's love.

Miss Rebecca was enraptured with her niece. She had expected a plain, homely, trusting country girl. She received a woman who was destined to become "the rage," the subject of conversation for a month or two at least.

Her wishes, thus far were realized. After her introduction to society, society went mad upon her account. Her acquaintance was courted on every side. She was a new and the latest idol, and scattered the usual jealousies and disappointments among the worshippers at her shrine.

She was the belle of the season, numberless suitors bended the knee to the reigning favorite. She heeded them not. The lesser stars and minor lights of the fashionable horizon became fearfully jealous of her wonderful attractiveness—jealous of her whose heart was shrouded and torn, whose calm unruffled surface hid but the wreck of her whole life's happiness.

At last the long expected, looked-for meeting came. She was introduced to him, and bowed. No recognition of the old-time wanderings over hill and dale escaped her lips. He looked curiously into her face wondering, barely comprehending that this was the maiden to whom he had once uttered words of love and tenderness.

Bravely she passed through the self-sought trying ordeal; then the reaction came. The room was close and oppressive. Her soul fretted and trembled in its imprisonment. She sought the cool solitude of the conservatories, perhaps with intuition that in a little time he would seek her there alone.

"Ada—Miss Clare!" She turned, calmly facing him whom she had once loved, and smiled and looked at him questionably. No anger, no sudden outburst of passion, nothing but the slight recognition of an old acquaintance in her look or manner.

"Will you forgive me, Ada?" "What a question, Mr. Collier!" she replied, shrugging her fair shoulders. "I have nothing to forgive."

Was it so soon forgotten then! He was piqued, mortified at this cold forgetfulness. He came to her sorrowfully, penitently, and she would not accept his penitence, it seemed.

"I have acted meanly—despiciously, he said. "Never until this moment have I realized how infamous my conduct has been towards you, Ada—Clare."

The last words were an effort. He was thinking of the time when he was "Donald," and she the gentle, loving "Ada" of his dreams. There was a chasm between them now, and their Christian names, which seemed so sweetly musical, lay at the bottom of it, never rightly to be worn upon their lips again!

"It was no fault of yours, Mr. Collier, that you loved another. As to our very pleasant acquaintance of a year ago," she answered scornfully, "it has failed to impress me, save as the reading of some tender poem. I have returned to the earth again."

"Do not speak to me in that strain, Ada, (he was already treading on the brink of the precipice;) reproach me, spurn me, it will be but just. I have loved you always, and I love you even now."

"Mr. Collier, she replied, "never dare to speak to me like this again. A year ago you won my love—you were my ideal. Alas! my affection served but for your sport. You thrust it from you as a broken toy. My ideal was a poor one, but such as it was I treasured its remembrance. Never, until this day, have I known how unutterably base you are."

"One moment—let me explain—" "Not one word! How dare you profess to love me—you, who have a wife! How will you dare return to her, hypocrite though you be, with a loving word for her—her right, not mine—upon your lips!"

"Forgive me."

"Never for this insult. For loving me when you had the right to do so, being free, I can easily forgive. For marrying another in the face of your sacred promise, I can forgive you, too—it was better so, far better for us both. At the time of your inconstancy, I vowed—solemnly vowed, that I would yet again bring you to my feet. I entered the great city world that you might see and know I was not quite unworthy of the position I should have held had I been your wife. I have accomplished both these desires. You have told me that you still love me, and I tell you, Donald Collier, that I have no feeling whatever for you, either of love or loathing. This is my revenge. I bid you from my presence once and forever. I would mockingly have led you onward to your ruin, this was my intent—I am candid, am I not? I have remembered, in time, that an innocent person would be involved in the catastrophe. For her sake I bid you go."

Too late, too late! He could realize now the extent of the happiness he had willfully thrown aside. Her indignation added fuel to the fire. With one wild, despairing look he tore himself away.

She remained brooding in the shadows of the conservatory. At length she became conscious of another's presence. A gentle, timid hand was laid upon her arm—that of a lady whose face was pale as a face from a spirit land, and whose voice as she whispered "Miss Clare" had a melancholy cadence in its sweetly musical tone.

"Pardon me, Miss Clare," she said, "I have unwittingly overheard the greater part of your conversation with my husband."

"Mrs. Collier?" "Yes. Have you known my husband very long, Ada? I may call you Ada, may I not?"

"Indeed, indeed you may," said Ada, for her sticken heart warmed towards this gentle lady, who had come between her and her once beloved.

The women mingled their tears, and thenceforth they were friends. "I do not wonder at Donald loving you," said Ada, at their parting. "You are so beautiful, so good."

Thenceforth Mrs. Collier and Ada met frequently in society, and something more than ordinary civilities passed between them. They loved each other just as sister should.

Other queens reigned over the empire of fashion, and in time another hero reigned in Ada's breast.

It was Ronald Temple, Mrs. Collier's brother. The greater part of his life had been passed amid schemes of wild adventures on the prairies and among the Indian braves. He sympathized with Ada, pitied her, (his sister had related to him the melancholy history of her friend,) and he speedily became one of the suitors for her hand.

To him her spirit turned. The wildness and danger of his early life attracted her toward him. The world in its superficial criticism argued that he was too far gone in years to marry a young wife, but Ada needed no young love; his rough, yet to her gentle and kindly, protection, gave her rest and peace.

And Donald? His lesson was not forgotten. There was much bitterness at first, but at the time of Ada's marriage with his wife's brother, all wounds were healed, and happiness came to his household, too, for there was a new link in the chain which bound him to Agnes.

They called it "Ada."

Many years afterwards another wedding united the two families; all evil thought and influence were removed, and perfect happiness reigned at last.

Bad Man to Mob.

A farmer named Garlinghouse lives on an island in Noosho county, Missouri, having acquired the land by purchase from a former tenant. A dispute lately arose about the validity of his title, and the Settlers' League, an organization of opponents of the system by which Garlinghouse's predecessor got the island, notified him that he must "quit or die." The farmer accepted neither of these alternatives, and sent back word that he was "a bad man to mob." The same night the Leaguers rode up to his house masked and armed. Their leader got off his horse and kicked upon the door. There was at once a flash, a report, and he fell dead. The Leaguers made a concerted advance on the open door, and two more shots from the dark interior wounded two of their number and that ended the raid. They retreated with the killed and wounded, and Garlinghouse is still in possession of the island, having proved that he really is "a bad man to mob."

There is many a soul trudging along life's path with weary, uncertain steps, sad and downhearted, who would, if there was a kind hand reached out to help them, walk erect and step lightly, and even sing while passing over the rough places.

Poetry.

TURNING OVER THE NEW LEAF.

The year begins. I turn a leaf.
All over writ with good resolves;
Each to fulfill will be in chief.
My aim while earth its round revolves.
How many a leaf I've turned before,
And tried to make the record true;
Each year a wreck on time's dull shore
Proved much I dared, but little knew.

Ah, bright resolves! How high you bear
The future's hopeful standard on;
How brave you start; how poor you wear!
How soon are faith and courage gone.
You point to deeds of sacrifice,
You stun the path of careless ease,
Lentils and wooden shoes? Is this
The fare a human soul to please?

What wonder, then, if men do fall.
Where good is ever all austere;
While vice is fair and pleasant all,
And turns the leaf to lead the year?
Yet still one more I turn the leaf,
And mean to walk the better way;
I struggle with old unbelief,
And strive to reach the perfect day.

Why should the road that leads to heaven
Be all one reach of sterile sand?
Why not, just here and there, be given
A rose to deck the dreary land?
But why repine? Others have trod
With sootier feet and heavier sins,
Their painful pathway toward God—
My pilgrimage anew begins.

Failure and failure hitherto
Have time inscribed upon my leaves;
I've wandered many a harvest through,
And never yet have gathered sheaves.
Yet once again the leaf I turn,
Hope against hope for one success;
One merit-mark, at least, to earn,
One sunbeam in the wilderness.

Murdered Moments.

Don't kill time! Don't! You sometimes murder the lively little moments as fast as they come flying along. Every minute wasted is that much time lost, and time lost is the same as dead. If a rich man wastes his money or buries it in the ground, instead of putting it out at interest, or to some good use, it is then called dead capital. So, if you don't make good use of each moment as it passes it dies on your hands, and the opportunity for using it gone forever.—You murder the moments frequently without knowing it, for they make no cry and leave no sign when they die. You know an ordinary slaughter-pen by the smell, and the horns and hoofs lying around; but you kill time often amid elegant surroundings, that suggest no thought of the dying minutes. And, with such surroundings, you kill time so easily that you don't miss it and don't know it is dead.—You shake the life out of many moments in the mere shuffling of prettily painted cards, in elegantly furnished parlors and bright saloons.—Much time is trodden to death by pretty little feet on the burnished floors of brilliant ball rooms. Many moments are mangled to death with croquet mallets, on cool, shady grounds. The life of many a moment is whittled away with penknife and soft pine.

These things may be very innocent in themselves, but excessive indulgence in them is a sin, because they waste the time. Especially is this so when you can get the same healthy exercise and amusements in doing some good, and thus keep time alive. You say this is like "straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel." But then the crying evil now is, that so many of us swallow all the gnats and strain only a little at the camel-sized sins. It is the swallowing of these little gnats that is killing the Church, by wasting the time and energy of so many that ought to be active Christian workers. We are not in danger of committing such sins as murder and theft, but the great danger is in these innocent-looking gnats, those little amusements which are well enough in themselves, when used for the more purposes of recreation by those whose toil makes them need recreation, but which, indulged in for their own sake, become fresh forms of dissipation.

Up in Pottsville they have introduced a new game which they call "Nudge." The couple seat themselves at a becoming distance and begin to nudge—and nudge and nudge until they can't get any nudger. We presume the fun commences as soon as they can't get any nudger. The beauty of this game is that it doesn't tax the brain to any alarming extent.

The Misfortune of Looking Like a Married Man.

Max Adeler has a friend named Slimmer, who deserves pity. He was going up to Reading not long since, and when reaching the depot he happened to look in the ladies' room. A woman sat there with a lot of baggage and three children, and when she saw Slimmer she rushed toward him, and before he could defend himself she threw her arms about his neck, nestled her head upon his breast, and burst into tears. Slimmer was amazed, indignant, confounded; and ere he could find utterance for his feelings, she exclaimed:

"O, Henry, dear Henry! we are united at last. Are you well? Is aunt Martha still alive? Haven't you longed very much to see your own Louisa?"

And she looked into Slimmer's face and smiled through her tears.

"Madam," said he, solemnly, "if I am the person alluded to as Henry, permit me to say you have made a mistake. My name is Lemuel, I have no aunt Martha, and I don't own a solitary Louisa. Oblige me by letting go my coat: it excites remark."

Then she buried her bonnet deep into his waistcoat, and began to cry harder than ever, and said:

"O, Henry, how can you treat me so? How can you pretend you are not my husband?"

"Madam," screamed Slimmer, "if you don't cease slopping my shirt bosom, and remove your umbrella from my corn, I shall be obliged to call the police. Let me go, I say."

"The children are here," she persisted. "They recognize their dear father; don't you, children?" "Yes, yes," they exclaimed, "it's pa; it's our own dear pa."

And then they grabbed poor Slimmer by his trousers' legs and hung to his coat tail.

"Woman!" he shrieked, "this is getting serious. Unhand me, I say." And he tried to disengage himself from her embrace—while the brakemen, baggage master and news boys stood around and said his conduct was infamous.

In the midst of the struggle a stranger entered with a carpet bag. He looked exactly like Slimmer—and when he saw his wife in Slimmer's arms he became excited, and floored Slimmer with that carpet bag and sat on him, and smote his nose, and caromed on his head, and asked him what he meant. Slimmer was removed on a stretcher, and the enemy went off with his wife and family in a cab. He called the next day to apologize. His wife had made the mistake because of Slimmer's likeness to him. And now Slimmer wishes he may soon be kicked in the face by a mule, so that he will resemble no other human being in the world.

LOVING AND FALLING IN LOVE.—Nothing is indeed so common in this world as falling in love. The one is the flower that may bloom and wither in a night; the other is the rich fruit from the flower, that can survive the sun and storm, and ripen to decay no more. When feverish anxieties have passed away; when "hopes and fears that kindle hope" have ceased; when selfish jealousies and lovers' quarrels are buried; when "honeymoons" are long forgotten, and the snowy brow has become wrinkled, and the eye lost its moisture—then does love, worthy of the name, become the inmate of the heart and home—love, pure, noble, devoted, self-sacrificing, seeking not its own but the happiness of its beloved object—a love such as youth never dreamed of or realized.

A REPORTER of one of the smaller journals of Paris asked the manager of a theatre to give him two seats for a certain performance. The manager refused, and the journalist said to him, "Your refusal will cost you 40,000 francs." ($8,000.) For six months after the paper to which the reporter was attached praised the theatre in this wise: "Monsieur X. is a magnificent director. He has a good company, and his entertainments are excellent. What a pity it is that the staircases are of wood! If a fire should break out the audience would have little chance to escape." The result of this was that the manager was forced to build an iron staircase which cost him $10,000.

Local Advertiser.

DR. L. S. BELL, Editor. SATURDAY, JANUARY 9, 1875.

This paper has double the circulation of any paper in the lower Peninsula.

Our street lamps up in Newtown are but a slight improvement on lightning bugs, still they burn all day, to assist the sun.

Shell us out a few more shells on Division St., and we will be no longer autere men, taking up where we lay not down—mind, we mean.

The Centerville Observer comes out this week with 92 columns, and otherwise improved, and one would think from its enlarged and improved appearance that its editor was not busted. (Busted.)

Mr. S. H. Sibley of N. Y., was in our town this week canvassing the chances to start Gas works here. He represents the Excelsior Gas Machine Co. of Warren Mass, whose head quarters are at N. Y. He proposes to furnish gas at $4.00 per 1000 cubic feet. We hope our citizens will encourage the enterprise, and subscribe liberally as light is essential for the accomplishment of a majority of great undertakings, and a little "gas" sometimes makes things lively.

We are indebted to the Baltimore Gazette for one of the most ornate and suggestive calendars we have yet seen, and to the American for one of the most useful of the kind. The Sun, always on time, must not pass unnoticed. Its calendar, like that of the American, gives important information, such as distances, rates of postage, population of principal cities, &c. We acknowledge our obligations to each of these enterprising establishments for these as well as other great favors.

PERSONAL.—We were called upon on Thursday last by Mr. David Ferguson, general agent of the Old Dominion Steamship Co. Mr. Ferguson is a live man, and we believe the company he so well represents have done well in his selection. This company purpose making connection at an early day with the W. & P. R. R. or Worcester Railroad at Berlin or St. Martins. This will give us an additional route to New York via Lewes, and must result in great benefit to our people and section of country. We hope our people will give the Old Dominion Co. every encouragement in their power, as their success will greatly enhance the value of real estate on this Peninsula.

ADVERTISING IN A NEWSPAPER.—We often hear it said that advertisements are not read. This does not accord with our experience. Two weeks ago we wanted to buy a cow. Well, since then we have been besieged, by day and night. We have been offered large cows and small cows; red cows, black cows, brindles cows, pied cows, white cows, and cows of all the mixed colors; cows with long horns, cows with short horns and cows with out horns; cows with calves and cows without calves; cows that were gentle to milk and cows that could not be relied on for gentleness, and cows which were mischievous and cows that were not. In fact, we could have bought enough cows to supply an army, and yet people say that advertisements are not read. We take this opportunity to say we don't want any more cows.

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.—On the first inst., a little daughter of Wm. W. and Clara L. Huntington, near Upper Trappe, aged fifteen months, was so seriously burned that she died in about ten minutes. Mrs. H. had occasion to leave the house a few moments, and while out she heard the cries of Lottie, a girl of four years, who was giving the alarm that her little sister was on fire. When Mrs. Huntington came in she found the child on her face on the floor, seriously burned about the face and arms, and it is supposed the flames of her clothing were inhaled, which produced instant death. The bottom of a cane seat chair being on fire, it is supposed the children, took some paper and lighting it at the stove put in the chair among some other paper and set fire to it, which blazed up immediately, setting the little girl on fire. The largest one ran to the kitchen to get water to put out the fire and when she returned found her little sister lying on the floor where she had fallen, and with her mother saw her breathe her last. We sympathize deeply with the bereaved parents.

COURT PROCEEDINGS.—Circuit Court for Wicomico county, January Term, 1875. MONDAY, JANUARY 4th. Court called at 11 o'clock a. m. present their Honors Judges John R. Franklin and L. T. H. Irving; S. P. Thordine, Clerk; Wm. S. Moore, Sheriff; J. A. Parsons, State's Attorney; H. J. Brewington, Criminal.

Appearance, Appeal, Criminal and Trial Dockets were called over. The first case tried was No. 3 Appeals—Parsons, Smith & Co., garnishees of Hiram D. Taylor vs. E. Devries & Co., attachment. Motion to quash on the ground that the judgment on which the attachment was based was null by reason of being voidable by magistrates' jurisdiction and to Holland & Cooper that the attachment was issued by the justice on copy of judgment, and he had no right to inquire into judgment—the proper remedy would have been by appeal on judgment. Held sub curia. No. 2. Criminal Continuance—State vs. Joshua Johnson of D.—Assault upon the wife of James Smith. Traversed before the Court. Not guilty. No. 3. Criminal Continuance—State vs. James Smith—Assault and battery upon Joshua Johnson of D.—Traversed before the court. Guilty, and fined $3.00 and costs.

TUESDAY. Most of the morning was occupied in taking judgments and entering motions. No. 15. Trials—Wm. T. Phillips vs. Alexander Goslee, Attachment on judgment of costs of appeal March Term, 1874. Motion to quash attachment by claimant of debt in assignment. Question whether writ was served before assignment. Motion to quash was overruled and judgment of condemnation for $12.06 and costs of suit. No. 14. Criminal appearance—State vs. Alonzo Roberts, assault and battery. Traversed before the Court, and state's Attorney declining to offer testimony, judgment of not guilty was rendered. At 1 o'clock p. m. the Court adjourned until the 4th Monday in March.

THE TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION. FELLOW TEACHERS:—As you are all aware, we were to meet on the 24th of December last, but as that meeting was not a success, let us not give up. A Teachers' Association was formed in this county in 1868 or '69, and it was a failure. Now let us go to work in earnest; if we do we shall not fail, because in union there is strength. If we all pull together we can do a great deal of good, but if one pulls one way and another another way, we shall do nothing in the way. I am sure it is the wish of every good Teacher in the county to do; but if we meet together often and relate our experiences and our troubles to each other, there are none of us, no one, but what will be benefited by these meetings. Something once a quarter is often enough for us to meet, but I think once a month is none too often. Some may say, "O, I can't go to town so often." Well, if all can't be there that often, a part can, and every live Teacher in the county, if he knows that we shall certainly meet once every month, will be sure to put in an appearance. Now, for the sake of ourselves and our profession, and for our beloved Examiners' sake, let every Teacher in Wicomico county be at Salisbury on the last Saturday in January, 1875, at 10 A. M. Let none fail—not one. Again, come all, and we shall not regret it in after years. There is scarcely a Saturday that there are not Teachers in Salisbury to form a quorum, I mean, including the resident Teachers. Hoping to see all there on the 30th inst. I subscribe myself AN OLD TEACHER.

BUSINESS LOCALS. A. W. Woodcock has the largest Jewelry store on the Peninsula, south of Wilmington. A large assortment of watch chains, trinkets, etc. American silver watches a speciality. A fine lot of silver plated ware—new styles. Give him a call, for there is the place to buy your goods. NO EXCUSE FOR BEING SICK. No person can use Boschee's German Syrup without getting immediate relief and cure. We have the first case of Cough, Cold or Consumption, or any disease of the Throat and Lungs, yet to hear from that has not been cured. We have distributed every year for three years over 250,000 sample bottles by Druggists in all parts of the United States. No other manufacturer of Medicine ever gave their Preparations such a test as this. Go to your Druggist Dr. L. D. Collier, and get a bottle for 75 cents and try it two days will relieve you. Sample Bottles 10 cents each.

Local Advertiser.

DR. L. S. BELL, Editor

SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1876.

This paper has double the circulation of any paper on the lower Peninsula.

A protracted meeting is in progress at the M. E. Church in this town, and bids fair to be a success.

Persons desiring their furniture repaired, varnished, or in any way improved, or new furniture manufactured, can have the same done by calling on Mr. George Ellis, at the corner of E. Chestnut Street and Poplar Hill Avenue.

St. Mary's Catholic Church. Second Sunday after the Epiphany, Jan. 17th, 1876. Feast of the Most Holy Name of Jesus.

The advertiser is the best local medium for advertising on the Peninsula, as it has the largest circulation.

Our worthy postmaster called our attention to the fact last Tuesday, at one o'clock, that the lamp at the corner of Division and Walnut streets was not burning after its custom.

The new M. E. Church, recently erected at Slocum, in the 7th district in this county, will be dedicated tomorrow (Sunday) 17th inst., at ten o'clock.

Tom Collins was in town last week, but left before he got too many bricks in his hat.

Senior's Accident. Last Monday, while Mr. Martin E. Hastings supervisor of the W. & P. R. R., was engaged in loading a car with ties.

The Salisbury Steam Laundry is still for sale, and we say to those who are disposed to invest in an under taking where energy and enterprise would be sure to reap its reward.

Dr. George W. Todd has a parrot that can articulate better than any bird we have yet seen.

Skating has been the principal sport and pastime of our young folks in our town this week.

Missing Books. There are a number of books missing from my library, prominent among which are Cushing's Manual, Warren's Law Studies, Guide to Parapsychology, and Debating Societies, Robins' Outlines of History, Hume's History of England, Vol. 1, and a large number of other books.

Knights of Pythias, Attention! The members of Salisbury Lodge No. 56, are earnestly requested to meet in their hall on Thursday evening the 21st inst., at 7 o'clock.

Our young friend, W. M. G. formerly a lawyer at our bar, is now residing in Philadelphia.

He is the son of an Episcopal minister now residing in Burlington, N. J.

Married. On Wednesday evening, 13th inst., by Rev. N. M. Brown, Mr. G. Edward Sigman to Miss Annie Batts, all of this place.

The Culpeper (Va.) Times has adopted the practice of publishing each week the names of those who pay their subscription.

The cold snap of the present week has closed navigation, and we have no communication with Baltimore except by rail.

The ice crop of Salisbury bids fair to be a large one - over 200,000 bushels having been housed already.

The New Town dual turns out to be a hoax. We had our friend Merrill, of the Record and Gazette, who hereafter report nothing but what is true, and not have people who have friends at Newtown put in trouble by the supposed death of those friends.

Bank Meeting. On Wednesday night last a meeting was held at the Peninsula House to consider the expediency of establishing a bank in Salisbury.

Farmers' Column.
Work for the Month—January.
 To the farmer there is now usually time for retrospection as well as for looking forward. To do both is a duty he ought not to neglect.—Where failures have come in the performance of his work in the past, an examination into their causes is the part of wisdom; whilst to adjust himself, his means and resources, so as to avoid like errors in the future is a necessity to success in his calling. At this season, too, it becomes the prudent landholder to settle upon a fixed system for the year, and to solve to a here-to-it—not with blind dogmatism but as far as no extraordinary interferences present. Plans well laid and strictly followed out on their maturation are in most cases more profitable than to resort to the expedients of the hour. Save all do not attempt too much, and begin to do nothing that you cannot do well. One of the things which every farmer ought to do, and which is better done now than at any other period, is to OPEN AN ACCOUNT BOOK.—In the absence of any well-devised plan of keeping accounts, at least prepare to write down every item of expenditure on, and receipts from, the farm. Take also, at the beginning and end of the year an inventory of stock, machines, tools, crops on hand and unsold, and all other assets. This is much neglected keeping of an account would seem to be, and is, as useful to the farmer as it is to the merchant, and we seek to impress its importance upon our readers at this season as one of the things which they really cannot afford to neglect. Once a part, in however a simple form, we believe it will be found so much to conduce to the satisfaction of conducting farming operations that its continuance will be certain.

Live Stock.
 This is a season especially severe upon all kinds of domestic animals, and the man who takes extra care that they do not suffer from the inclemencies of the weather, from irregular or insufficient feeding, an lack of other attention, not only acts in accordance with humanity, but all so with self-interest. Milch Cows ought to have begun the winter in good condition, as it is far easier to keep them in that condition than once run down, to rest them to their warm, light and well-ventilated stables are as essential to their health, and well-doing as nutritious and palatable food. Good hay, nice, cured fodder, an occasional mess of roots, a daily ration of bran and corn meal, will not fail to keep them up in health and strength. Of roots whether turnips, ruta-bagas, beets, or carrots, their value is not so much in their nutritive qualities as in their alternative effects, though as aid to milk production they are all valuable. Working Animals—Do not allow your horses and mules to be exposed more in bad weather than can be avoided. See that they are fed regularly and sufficiently, but do not allow them to be overfed. Exercise daily if practicable, but when they are unshed out of a portion of their grain allowance. Their stalls should be well bedded and properly stabled, and the animals well rubbed down at least once daily. Nothing is better than an occasional mess of carrots and once in a while a bran mash acts well. Do not allow regular watering to be neglected. Cows and Heifers in calf and Brood mares need liberal supplies, not of stimulating, but of nourishing food. They should not be allowed to become fat, but the drain upon their systems demands ample rations. Keep young cattle and colts growing and thriving; when once permitted to become bareribbed and meagre, they are hard to again bring up. Give all your stock some shelter from cold rains and winds. Swine and Sheep—The latter ought to be put into the fields when it is dry. Do not neglect to provide an accessible to them. Hogs ought to have dry and warm pens, with an abundance of rough material for bedding. Clean water is a necessity for them, and since charcoal or rotten wood should be placed within their reach. Poultry need a warm, dry and clean house. Vary their food as a condition necessary for obtaining eggs at this season, giving due proportions of vegetable and animal.

FIN MANURE is probably the most valuable of any kind produced on the farm, and is deserving of careful protection. Either keep by itself under a shed protected from the weather, or mix it with coal ashes or dry earth.

Local Advertiser.

DR. L. S. BELL, LOCAL EDITOR.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1875.

This paper has double the circulation of any paper published in this county.

Under the Snow. An Amanda, an unobtainable cousin this winter, will appear in our next.

Dr. Bell bought five ducks one day last week to fatten from. But alas for blasted hopes! Four drakes were too much!

Stuffed owls are now the rage, and look natural, but eyes stuffing themselves to it more so.

The "Lodge of Red Men," will be organized next Monday night. Who is "Big Injun?"

F. C. Todd is selling 120° Coal oil, at 20cts per gallon. Be wary of common Coal oil sold at 15cts per gallon.

Past Chancellor J. A. Parsons was selected last Thursday night to represent Salisbury Lodge, No. 56, K. of P., at the session of the Grand Lodge of Maryland, on next Tuesday.

We learn from the Democratic Messenger that the late Dr. Gunby who died recently in Baltimore, left $6,000 to the Presbyterian church at Snow Hill, and $2,000 to aid in the erection of a Presbyterian church at Stockton in Worcester county.

F. C. Todd is selling Thomas Best Sugar Cured Ham at 16cts.

At the last regular meeting of the Peninsula Encampment No. 19, I. O. O. F., the following officers were elected for the present term:—C. P., R. D. Abdell; H. P., Joseph Ward; S. W., R. K. Truitt; J. W., J. E. Connally; Scribe, W. T. Smith; Sent., W. R. Aikman; Guide, E. L. Williams.

In our local last week we failed to notice that James Gillis Esq., had been appointed by Gov. Groome Chief Justice of the Orphan's court in place of the late Judge David Jones. Gillis appeared in court on the 19th inst. to discharge the duties of the office. He is a native of Maryland, and is a member of the bar at Baltimore.

We were shown a letter a few days ago. Written to a gentleman of this town, April 7th, 1831 by Hubbard & Pattison of Baltimore, giving the prices of grain &c., corn is quoted at 26 & 27ct per bushel, wheat 70ct. Five years earlier we notice corn was quoted at $2.50 wheat $2.90 & 3.00 per bushel, so we see the markets fluctuated then as now.

F. C. Todd is selling A sugar 11cts, Granulated sugar 12, B sugar, 10cts.

Our friend King, of the Annapolis Gazette, is one of those very few Republicans who try to defend Grant, Sheridan & Co. in their outrage upon the best citizens of the State of Louisiana, and insult to the laws of the land. But we can afford to excuse him, and such as conscientiously believe the war is still going on in the South. Maybe he wants to be Grant's successor, and is already a "King."

Our ice ponds have been the scene of great activity during the evenings of this week, as large skating parties of ladies and gentlemen have looked there to engage in this active sport. Skating is a delightful amusement to those who can do it, but we are not so fond of it now, as when we were young, and have more fear of falling. The old man is afraid of that, which is high as to that which is very smooth, even before the grass has become a burden.

DEATHS.—Miss Hannah Richardson, died at Rockaway on the 9th, Ichabod Taylor, in the 69th year of his age.

On the 12th, William Dixon in the 74th year of his age.

On the 16th, at the residence of Mr. George Politt in Somerset county, George H. Moore, aged 40 years.

On the 16th, John C. D. Hillman, aged nearly 78 years.

On the 20th, Mrs. Mary E. Manders, aged 58 years.

Also on the 16th, inst. Stephen Hayman died.

Deceased by R. D. Abdell, undertaker.

OPINIONS.—This court was in session last Tuesday.

The final account of A. F. Turner, Administrator of James Douglas was duly examined, finally passed and ordered to be recorded. The bond given by Thos. W. H. White as guardian was approved and ordered to be recorded. The last final account of Thos. H. Williams executor of James F. Williams was duly examined, finally passed and ordered to be recorded. The bond given by Geo. H. Taylor executor of Ichabod Taylor was approved and ordered to be recorded. The rest of the time was consumed in examining inventories accounts sales &c. The court adjourned to meet on the 9th, day of February 1875.

The Catalogue of Seeds and Plants for 1875, of Peter Henderson & Co., 35 Broadway, New York, are just received, numbered about 180 pages, and in addition containing colored plates of the verbena, a group of plinks, a group of lobelias, and a new vegetable. These Catalogues, with all the plates, are mailed to all applicants by Peter Henderson & Co., on receipt of 50 cents. A Catalogue without the plates will, however, be sent to any address without charge.

The County Commissioners met on the 19th inst. The Board was busy passing paper accounts and giving pensions for 1875. An order was given King V. White for $79.97 out of surplus of 1874, to pay this county's portion of cost of bridge over Purnell's Causeway. Notice was ordered to be given that changes of property would be made on every Tuesday until the last of February, and on every other Tuesday in March. No changes to be made after that date. The Board agreed to buy of Thos. W. H. White 3500 bushels of shells at four cents per bushel, to be delivered and spread by White of the County Road at the Upper Ferry the same to be paid for in the Levy of 1875. The Commissioners determined to advertise and sell all the buildings on the lot bought as a site for the Court House except the Old Hotel. Sale February 9th.

The dedication at Siloam on Sunday, the 17th inst., was well attended, notwithstanding the extreme cold. The Church was crowded; the dedicatory services were performed by the Rev. N. M. Browne, of Salisbury, assisted by the Rev. T. B. Creamer, pastor of the Circuit, and John H. Brinkley, the founder of the church. Rev. A. Stengle, of Quantico, preached in the forenoon from Luke 9, 23-30; the Transfiguration. His discourse was very appropriate and impressive, and elicited marked attention from the audience. The collections were very good, subscriptions amounting to $200 00, over one-third of which was cash paid down. Prof. E. F. Porter for the day, was present with a small choir of singers and participated in the services, which added much to the interest of the occasion. The services were closed at 2 1/2 o'clock. Benediction by Rev. Mr. Wortenbaker.

ANOTHER ACCIDENT FROM CARELESSNESS.—On Thursday last Levi Gunby and William Leonard, both colored, took a stroll in the country for the purpose of violating the "Bird Law." They had not gone far before some birds flew up between them, when Levi fired away, and instead of killing the bird, came near killing his friend, the charge taking effect in the arm of Leonard, who brought home eight or ten shot in his arm. Dr. F. M. Simmons extracted the shot and thinks the wounds are not necessarily dangerous, as none of the bones were struck. This is another evidence of the folly of gaming where there is no game worth the trouble, and a warning that children should not handle edged tools. Leonard and Gunby were not children, but there are but few people who are fit to handle fire-arms and we think it would be well for a small restriction to be laid on the pernicious practice.

A COLD RECEPTION.—Miss Hannah Richardson, and her brother Willie Richardson, were received in full membership in the Missionary Baptist Church in this place on Sunday last, by the holy ordinance of baptism. The ice on the pond was 3 inches thick which had been cut a short time before, and had formed within a short time to the thickness of half an inch, and was broken by the minister and the young man on entering the water. We thought one's faith must have been firm in the efficacy of this ordinance, or they could not endure it at such a time. The spectators amounting to several hundred who stood on the shore could hardly remain long enough to witness the ceremony. On coming out of the water the Rev. Mr. Schaffer gave an exhortation, and while still standing in it, inquired if there were any others who desired to be baptized. We looked around, and the only reply was a cold shiver and a shudder, and the shudders of the multitude. No one offered to take up his faith by his works in that suspicious occasion. Not One.

A Church in the Wilderness.—About six months ago Rev. J. H. Brinkley was called to preach a funeral sermon for the late Dr. J. D. Collier, and got a sad little party of 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 57 cents.

The 17th of January, 1875 was set apart for the purpose of dedication. Bright, clear, yet cold, dawned the set day. 10:30 A. M. The hour for commencing, found a well-filled house, and indispensable requisites, well-filled stoves. In the stand were Revs. Browne, Stengle, Creamer and Brinkley, and later in the day Rev. Wortenbaker, of the M. E. Church South. Exercises opened by the singing of "Siloam," led by Prof. Porter, Prof. (prospective) H. S. Dulany at the organ. Hymn announced by A. Stengle, after singing prayer was offered by Bro. Brinkley; scripture lesson read by Rev. T. Robinson Creamer, another hymn was sung which was followed by a sermon by Rev. Stengle, from Matthew's account of the "Transfiguration of Christ." Whence he deduced nearly all the fundamental doctrines of Theology. The sermon was lucid and impressive, and found an answering chord in many hearts. The writer was particularly impressed with the truthfulness of the doctrine of "Recognition of friends in Heaven."

After the sermon, a few remarks by Rev. Browne, tested the giving spirit of the people, and right nobly did they respond to the appeal. In a brief time two hundred and six dollars was secured by cash and subscriptions. This is sufficient to cover all present indebtedness, but not enough to finish the building, many pleasing incidents occurred during the evening, but we have not time to name them. "You have done well" was pronounced by Salisbury's Divine together with a hint that he would like to have some of the generous persons present at some of the beggings at another place in which he is just now deeply interested.

After the financial part of the programme was satisfactorily concluded the choir sang "Whosoever will" &c. after which the building was dedicated to the service of almighty God by Rev. Browne, according to the beautiful formula of our M. E. Discipline. The long metre Doxology was sung, and the benediction pronounced by Rev. Wortenbaker. In the evening, service was again held at 6:30 Rev. T. Robinson Creamer the pastor preached to a well filled house from Isaiah XXVIII 16—"Behold I lay in Zion for a foundation" &c. The word was sealed upon many hearts.

The sermon was followed by a stirring prayermeeting after which followed the benediction, and thus closed a day long to be remembered by all present.

We would not fail to mention the untiring zeal, and persevering efforts of Rev. Brinkley in this enterprise. "Verily he shall have his reward." Several persons deserve special mention, but we with hold names bidding such to look to God, and give him the glory, remembering that "the God who seeth in secret himself shall reward the openly."

This church stands in the woods, about one mile from the Upper Ferry, and supplies a long felt need in the neighborhood. It is still in part unfinished but will be rapidly pushed to completion. Rev. Bro. Brinkley is now in charge. It is at present connected with Fruitland circuit, but remains for the conference to dispose of it, may God bless our Siloam, and make it a beacon light in this dark neighborhood.

Ayer's Hair Vigor, For restoring to Gray Hair its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. It soon restores faded or gray hair to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use.

Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed; but such as remain can be saved by this application, and stimulated into activity, so that a new growth of hair is produced. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. The restoration of vitality it gives to the scalp arrests and prevents the formation of dandruff, which is often so uncleanly and offensive. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, not tinged else can be found so desirable.

Containing neither oil nor dye, does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre, and a grateful perfume.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

FOR SALE! The Salisbury Steam Laundry.

This establishment is now complete in all its parts, and all that is wanting to make it a success is an experienced laundryman, being situated at Salisbury, a town of 3,000 inhabitants, and within one hour's ride by rail of Seaford, Laurel, Berlin, Princess Anne and Ocean City, where a first-class Hotel and watering place is now being established. Poetry.

"Under the Snow."

BY AMANDA.

Dead—all dead—my darling flowers! Dead—all dead, and I loved them so! Oh! King of the Frost-land marshal our clan And cover my darlings deep with snow. You froze the light in their dewy eyes With the cruel dream of your stormy skies, And now they lie 'neath the pitiful snow— Dead—all dead!—and I loved them so!

ROOM AT THE TOP.

To the young men annually making their entrance upon active life, with great ambitious conscious capacities and high hopes, the prospect is, in ninety-nine cases in a hundred, most perplexing. They see every avenue to prosperity thronged with their superiors in experience, in social advantage, and in the possession of all the elements and conditions of success. Every post is occupied, every office filled, every path crowded. Where shall they find room? It is related of Mr. Webster that when a young lawyer suggested to him that the profession to which he had devoted himself was overcrowded the great man replied: "Young man, there is always room enough at the top."—Never was a more suggestive word said. There is always room enough where excellence lives. Mr. Webster was not troubled for room Mr. Clay and Mr. Calhoun were never crowded. Mr. Everts, Mr. Cushing and Mr. O'Connor have plenty of space around them. Mr. Beecher, Dr. Storrs, Dr. Hall, and Mr. Phillips Brooks would never know, in their personal experience, that it was hard to obtain a desirable ministerial charge. The profession is not crowded where they are. Dr. Brown-Sequard, Dr. Willard Parker and Dr. Hammond are not troubled for space for their elbows. When Nelson died in Paris, he died like Moses on a mountain.—When Von Graefo died in Berlin, he had no neighbor at his altitude. It is well, first, that all young men remember that nothing will do them so much injury as quick and easy success, and that nothing will do them so much good as a struggle which teaches them exactly what there is in them, educates them gradually to its use, instructs them in personal economy, drills them into a patient and persistent habit of work and keeps them at the foot of the ladder until they become strong enough to hold every step they are enabled to gain.—The first years of every man's business or professional life are years of education. They are intended to be, in the order of nature and Providence. Doors do not open to a man until he is prepared to enter them. The man without a wedding garment may get in surreptitiously, but he immediately goes out with a flea in his ear. We think it is the experience with most successful men who have watched the course of their lives in retrospect, that whenever they have arrived at the point where they were thoroughly prepared to go up higher, the door to a higher place was swung back of itself, and they have heard the call to enter. The old die, or voluntarily retire for rest. The best men who stand ready to take their places will succeed to their position and its honors and emoluments.

The young men will say that only a few can reach the top. That is true but it is also true that further from the bottom one goes, the more scattering the neighborhood. One can fancy, for illustration, that every calling is pyramidal in its living constituency, and that while only one man is at the top, there several tiers of men below him who have plenty of elbow room, and that it is only at the base that man are so thick that they pick the meat out of another's teeth to keep them from starving. If a man has no power to get out of the rabble at the bottom, then he is self-convicted of having chosen a calling or profession to whose studies he has no adaptation.

The grand mistake that young men make, during the first ten years of their business and professional life, is in idly waiting for their chance.—They seem to forget, or they do not know, that during those ten years they enjoy the only leisure they will ever have. After ten years, in the natural course of things, they will be absorbingly busy. There will then be no time for reading, culture and study. If they do not become thoroughly grounded in the principles and practical details of their professions during those years; if they do not store their minds, with useful knowledge; if they do not pursue habits of reading and observation, and social intercourse, which result in culture, the question whether they will ever rise to occupy a place where there is room enough for them will be decided in the negative. The young physicians and young lawyers who sit idly in their offices, and smoke and lounge away the time "waiting for something to turn up," are by that course fastening themselves for life to the lower stratum, where their struggle for a bare livelihood is to be perpetual. The first ten years are golden years, that should be filled with systematic reading and observation. Everything that tends to professional and personal excellence should be an object of daily pursuit. To such men the doors of success open of themselves at last. Work seeks the best hands as naturally as water runs down hill; and it never seeks the hands of a trifler, or of one whose only recommendation of work is that he needs it. Young men do not know very much anyway, and the time always comes to those who become worthy, when they look back with wonder upon their early good opinion of their requirements and themselves.

There is another point that ought not to be overlooked in the treatment of this subject. Young men look about them and see a great measure of worldly success awarded to men without principle. They see the trickster with public honors, they see the swindler rolling in wealth,—they see the sharp man, the over-reaching man, the unprincipled man, the liar, the demagogue, the time-server, the trimmer, the scoundrel who cunningly manages—through constantly disobeying moral law and trampling upon social courtesy to keep himself out of the clutches of the legal police, carrying off the prizes of wealth and places. All this is a demoralizing puzzle and a fearful temptation; and multitudes of young men are not strong enough to stand before it.—They ought to understand that in this wicked world there is a great deal of room where there is integrity. Great trusts may be sought by scoundrels, but great trusts never seek them; and perfect integrity is at a premium even among scoundrels.—There are some trusts they never confer on each other. There are occasions when they need the services of true men, and they do not find them in shoals and in the mud, but alone and in pure water.

In the realm of mental acquisitions and eminent integrity there is always room enough. Let no young man of industry and perfect honesty despair because his profession or calling is crowded. Let him always remember that there is room enough at the top, and the question whether he is ever to reach the top, or rise above the crowd at the base of the pyramid, will be decided by the way in which he improves the first ten years of his active life in securing to himself a thorough knowledge of his profession, and a sound moral and intellectual culture.—Dr. J. C. HOLLAND; Scribner for January.

She Wanted it in Red Type.

Soon after noon yesterday a very fat woman, "going on fifty years old" toiled up the four pair of stairs, rested for breath awhile, and then wanted to see the "head reporter." "I'm all alone in this world," she commenced as she sat down and pulled out her handkerchief. "A widow, eh?" queried the head reporter. "Yes, a poor, striving widder, whose husband has been dead these fourteen years." "Death is a sad thing, madam. It crushes hopes, severs ties and breaks hearts." "He was such a good man!" she sobbed, covering her face with a handkerchief, "and such a good provider. We allers had meat, and taters, and wood, and preserves; and do you know he never gave me an unkind word?" "He must have been an excellent man." "He was—he was. He'd git up nights and cover up the children and shake down the stove, and if his meals wasn't ready, or he found buttons off his shirt, he'd never open his head." "And your grief is yet strong—your sorrow just as deep?" "Just the same as the day he lay dyin' and took my hand and whispered: 'Cortilda, don't take on so. Yes, I'm grieving just the same, or I wouldn't care what folks said. That's what brought me up here—folks are talking about me.'" "They are, eh?" "Yes, they are. They've said that I was after a widower; that I fell in love with one of the boarders; that I was keeping up correspondence with an undertaker, and that I was dead in love with a dozen men." "And it is not true?" "True, young man! Look at me! Great Heavens! do I look like one who wanted to get married?" "Well, n-o." "How could I marry again?" she exclaimed. "How could I forget that dear form beneath the sod and smile on another man! Marry! Great stars! young man, but how could they start such stories?" "And you want them denied?" "That's it. Here's ten cents, and I want you to come out in the paper in a piece so long say that I'll prosecute these slanderers if these stories don't cease. Put it in red type, mister—in red type and big letters at that, that a Detroit widder can't escape the vile slanders, no matter how well she behaves. I marry again—think of it, young man!" "But widows often do re-marry." "Alar! they do, young man. Sum-how it seems lonesome to be a widder, and have no one to defend you, and be all alone but—but I couldn't think of taking another husband—no unless he was rich!" "And she wiped her eyes again and felt her way down stairs."

Cleaning the Chimney.

Judge Pitman's Chimney had been foul for some time, and when he mentioned the fact at the drug store Mr. Squills said he could easily clean it out by exploding a little powder in the fire-place. The idea seemed to Pitman to be a good one, and he bought almost ten pounds of powder in order to do the work thoroughly at the first blast. The men were gravelling his roof that day, and just as the judge was about to touch off the charge a workman named Snyder leaned over the top of the chimney to call to the men below to send up more tar. Then the judge lit the slow match. The view which met the eye of Mr. Snyder as he went up was a fine one, embracing as it did Cape May and Omaha and Constantinople and Baltimore and the Sandwich Islands, and when he got enough of drinking in the scenery he came down in the river, apparently with the intention of exploring the bottom. When he was fished out he was glad to learn that the judge's chimney was thoroughly clean, but that it would need about four cart loads of bricks to repair damages. After this the judge will clean his flues with a brush fastened to a clothes prop.

Comments on a Black Eye.

When a man is splitting wood and a stick flies up and blacks his eye, he must prepare himself to endure all the taunts and jeers which the world would inflict on a pirate. Social standing counts for nothing, and dignity can't be made a mantle of.—The other day, when a compositor on this paper took up his little axe and broke a stick in two, and one end flew into his eye, he knew that he must either remain in the house for two weeks or go out and face the world's sneers. He decided to face the sneers, and during one short half day he noted down the following expressions: "It's all right; of course it was a stick of wood—oh, yes!" "Been fighting again, eh?" "Well, who knocked you down this time?" "Oh, I've had the same thing all my eye, and I always laid it to a stick of wood." "Ha! ha! the policeman struck hard, didn't he?" "Of course it was a stick of wood—yo—ho—ho—ho!" Then there were people who pointed him out as the abductor of Charlie Ross, and people who thought he was one of the Gad's Hill robbers, and over fifty respectable men asked him why he didn't get the other one blacked, so as to have a matched pair.

That Flour Trick.

Yesterday morning, says the Detroit Press Press, an innocent looking young man was loafing around the Central Depot with one of those small lung-testers, which throw a handful of flour into a man's face just as he imagines he is going to blow up to one hundred and fifty pounds. There was an old man waiting around for the train to go, and he was at once attracted to the machine. He saw others blow, and when told it would not cost him a cent, he pitched in. The old fellow threw back his coat, got the pipe in his mouth, and then his eyes opened like traps as he sucked in all the air he could. After a second or two he let go, and the flour struck him. He softly laid down the pipe, winked his eyes, and spit flour and as the roar of laughter increased, he backed up against the wall and said: "You'll see me in jail, but I swan to gum I'll lick somebody for that, even if I don't never lead another class meeting!" And he did.

The Hat of the Period.

A Chicago paper says: "You meet a remarkably modest and timid appearance young lady to-day, and you notice that her hat has a meek and shrinking indentation in the crown. It looks as if it wanted to shun the wicked world and hang itself up in a nunnery. Tomorrow you meet the same lady, and what a change! She appears as daring as Joan of Arc and as independent as the president of a woman's congress. And her whole appearance is thus altered by pinning up the front of the hat. Next day she appears like a brigand.—The brim is flattened out and her eyes gleam furiously from underneath as if watching an opportunity to order you to stand and deliver. You see her again, and the rim is turned up while it is very flat in front, giving her an appearance of a female Solon Shingle trying to find a customer for that 'bar'l of apple-sass.' Again, and it is pitched on the extreme back of the head, reminding you of Toodles in his cups, when he assuring the 'sailor man' that when his father heard of the sailor man's death, he went brook-hearted to his grave, and died there. With all these advantages it is no wonder that the reigning hat is popular. It is comfortable to the head—so they say—and is an ornament or a disguise as required. It is demure, jaunty, meek, sane, bold, sly, obstinate, conciliating, tender—whatever you please—everything by turns and nothing long. It is the hat of the period, cunning and deceitful, but above all things desparately wicked."

Life Scenes.

SCENE 1.—A parlor. Old gentleman, baldheaded, sitting in an easy chair reading a book. Small boy playing around the room kicking up a muss. SCENE 2.—Small boy attentively watching the perambulation of a blue beetle fly, and wondering how said fly makes such a noise. Old gentleman asleep. SCENE 3.—Fly alight on the old gent's head. Small boys watches it, and thinks he would like to kill it. Places a chair behind the old gentleman, and procuring a large book, stands on the chair. SCENE 4.—Old gent dreams that he is up in a balloon, and that he sees a comet approaching, which he knows will strike him, and as he cannot get out of the way he dreads the inevitable consequences. Awaits its approach. SCENE 5.—Small boy still standing on the chair. Book raised above his head. Fly still in position. Small boy confident that he can hit it with the book. One, two, three, and down comes the book on the old gent's head! SCENE 6.—Comet has just struck him completely out of time. He awakes and finds himself lying on the floor, sans balloon, sans comet and a queer sensation on the top of his head. SCENE 7.—Small boy standing on a chair frightened at the position of his venerable parent, who is lying on the floor rubbing his head, and muttering something, like "Ol' prob'lyties might said something about it." Exit small boy. Curtain drops.

A Modern Ginevra.

A foreign town has recently been the scene of a sad event, very similar to that of the Mistletoe Bough. A gentleman by the name of Kelk, cashier to a building firm there, had recently got married. He gave a party at his house. His young wife, in her anxiety to get out of the hot air, ventured up stairs, and seeing a small closet with a ventilator, so entered to fasten it, when a current of air closed the door. In vain she called to the servants, although she could hear the door bell ringing and the visitors enter, and as none suspected that the imprisoned lady was on the roof of the house, all the other parts of the dwelling and grounds were searched. When at last found, Mrs. Kelk was seriously ill and hysterical. Violent epileptic fits followed, and the shock being more than the nervous system could sustain, death shortly put an end to her sufferings.

Poetry.

Louisiana.

She is done with her days of glory, She is done with her days of defeat; Strip of her robes of splendor, Hurl'd from her sovereign seat— Naked, plundered, bleeding, Prone at the Tyrant's feet! His men-at-arms are about her, They beck not of tears or prayer, But eagerly await the order That bids them slay, not spare; With their bayonets at her bosom And their feet upon her hair. And above her the harpies gather; Their wings blot out the sun, And the myriads wheel and hover, And scream for her blood as one; So wolfish they scarce have patience To wait the murder done. Oh, brothers! who will save her, In this, her hour of need! From the bayonets that beset her, From the ravenous vultures on a? Who will scatter them as with thunder And bind up the wounds that bleed? If none—why then heaven help her! Our fathers have fought in vain; So blot her star from the banner, But let the stripe remain! Redder than all the rest are,— Her blood has made the stain! Oh, brothers! sons of her sisters, What matter though so remote, Shall we see the tyrant smite her And say that we nothing care? With his heel-print on her forehead, And his sword point at her throat! Oh, brothers! sons of her sisters, Be your judgments unapplex; No law but the law of bayonets— This is their new text, Oh, Land of the North, take warning— It may be thy turn next. —JOSEPH BRADFORD.

Many opinions go for nothing—it costs nothing to "ex-press them." There is nothing more depressing to a thermometer than cold weather. Young men, never say die when there's a pair-o-dice within your reach. The New York World wants to know if a man with a cough is not a hackman? It is better to be alone in the world than to bring up a boy to play on the accordion. It is very cold weather, and yet lovers do not see the sense of hugging a stove.—Bklyn Argus. A girl baby in Moore county, Tenn., has a double tyngue; but we don't know that that's news. A book has been published called "Half Hours with Insects." The author was not a regular boarder. There is nothing more hazardous than to be bothering an irritable woman with foolish questions on wash day. "Too thin" has become obsolete. "Not sufficiently materialized" is the latest form in which this idea is clothed. The foremen of the Cincinnati breweries get about $10,000 per annum, which is more than a circuit judge gets. "You are too pert entirely, Miss," said a teacher to a pupil. "Your whole demeanor is a continuous misdemeanor." Ann Eliza says that thirteen of Brigham's daughters sat in the front seats and made faces at her the first time she lectured. A man may be properly said to have been drinking like a fish when he finds that he has taken enough to make his head swim. Now we know what makes it so cold. Elder Lutz, of New Haven, is preaching on "Hell Closed for Repairs." When a St. Louis man loses $50 on the street he offers $45 reward for it. He knows what St. Louis human nature is. SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1875.

FOR PRESIDENT OF THE U. S.
ALLEN G. THURMAN, OF OHIO.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT.
THOMAS F. BAYARD, OF DELAWARE.

We have been requested to say that a meeting will be held in the Court House in Salisbury on Saturday the 6th day of February next, at 2 o'clock, P. M., for the purpose of organizing a Farmer's Club in Wicomico county. All persons interested in agricultural pursuits, stock raising, &c., are cordially invited to attend. If that day should not be a fair one the Saturday following at the same time and place, as it is hoped that every district and neighborhood in the county will be represented. It is the intention of the farmers to get up an Agricultural and Mechanical Association in connection with the Farmer's Club, and at an early day to take steps toward an exhibition of stock, &c. We hope the matter will receive the attention and hearty co-operation of every farmer in the county.

We learn from the Shield that our friend Smith has returned to his duties after a protracted stay in the metropolis. We are also happy to learn that his suit has been brought near its conclusion, and it is to be hoped will result favorably to him. He has for a long time been a suitor in the U. S. District Court in New York for an interest in a vessel, and the case has been from time to time delayed until the present, and although the case has not yet been argued, the testimony has been concluded and the cause will soon be determined.

Friend Smith tells us what he saw in New York, and his narrative of men, things and events, is quite interesting, and portrays graphically a few scenes in metropolitan life. We have been there and stayed all night.

The Source of all the Trouble.

Among the additional papers relative to affairs in Louisiana, communicated by the President to the Senate on Monday, is an official report of Lieutenant Colonel H. A. Morrow, United States army, submitted to General Emory in the month of December. On the 4th of January, the very day on which the crowning outrage of military interference with the organization of the State Legislature was committed in New Orleans, Gen. Sherman forwarded this report from army headquarters at St. Louis, to Washington, with the request endorsed thereon that the Secretary of War would "submit it for the personal perusal of the President," and with a strong endorsement added of Colonel Morrow's qualifications "to speak and write" understandingly and truthfully of the matters referred to in his report. In the report, after stating that the State government had not the confidence or respect of any portion of the community, (the report is dated Shreveport, December 11), Col. Morrow says:

"If the expressions of the people are to be believed, and I do believe them, there is a very sincere desire to live quietly under the protection of the constitution of the United States, and enjoy the blessings of the national government. But there is no disguising the fact that the protection afforded by the federal administration to the government of the present State executive is the cause of bitter personal and political feeling in the breast of nineteen-twentieths of the white inhabitants of the State."

In these few words it cannot be doubted that Colonel Morrow correctly indicates the source of all the present trouble in Louisiana. The State government which has not the confidence or respect of the people, to whose will and consent, in fact, it owes neither its existence nor its powers, has been branded by committees of both houses of Congress as a usurpation upon no better foundation than the illegal and arbitrary orders of Judge Durell, now decried. Yet that government has been imposed upon the necks of the people of Louisiana, and is kept in place to-day solely, as Col. Morrow says, "by the protection afforded by the federal administration to the present State executive."

gentive." No sooner, in December, 1872, was the decree of Judge Durell promulgated, forbidding the assembling of the conservative State Legislature, and sustaining the "lynch" returning board, by which Kellogg and his associates were then counted into office, than Collector Casey telegraphed to the President, "the decree, if enforced, will save the republican majority and give Louisiana a republican Legislature and State government."

It was enforced, and the conservative Legislature of that day was forcibly prevented from assembling, just as the conservative Legislature elected last November was forcibly dispersed, by United States soldiers! Then met the Legislature created by Durell and the Lynch returning board, just as recently met the Legislature created by Kellogg and the present returning board, and appealed to the President for "protection." Then, as now, the need of the supporting arm of the military power was felt to prevent the fabric of government, which had no foundation in "the just consent of the governed, from crumbling to ruin. Casey again telegraphed from the custom house to the President "our members are poor and adversaries rich, and offers are made that are difficult for them to withstand. There is danger that they will break our quorum. The delay in placing troops at the disposal of Gov. Pinchback, in accordance with joint resolution of Monday, is disheartening our friends and cheering our enemies. If requisition of the Legislature is complied with the party will be saved." Troops were placed at the disposal of "Governor" Pinchback and Louisiana was ruined, but "the party was saved." That was the beginning of things two years ago, and the end is not yet.

It is not evident that the same policy which has produced peace and tranquility in Virginia in North Carolina, in Georgia, in Alabama and Arkansas and Texas if adopted in Louisiana would have been attended with the same results there? All these States have had their troubles and have got bravely over them. Can any good reason be assigned why Louisiana should not be as peaceful and tranquil as Texas on her western border or as Georgia is to-day? Is not the whole difference created by the difference in treatment? In the States we have named an end has been long since put to federal military interference, and the people have been left to adjust and settle their State governments and affairs to suit themselves. In Louisiana alone meddling has become the fixed policy of the federal government, and Louisiana is the solitary exception therefore to the general good order and tranquility which pervade the South. Even the troubles in Arkansas disappeared the moment it was understood that in that State the precedent of Louisiana would not be followed, and that the President declined to interfere. The late disturbances at Vicksburg had a purely local origin, and they too have been only inflamed, not cured, by the interference of the troops under General Sheridan's direction. With this demonstration before their eyes, of the good effects of non-interference and the deplorable results of the opposite policy, why will not the dominant party in Congress try the experiment in Louisiana of letting things alone? Instead of keeping up a chronic inflammation and irritation by the use of the troops and acts of unparliamentary interference, why not try the remedial policy of nature? Give the patient a chance to heal, instead of continually inflicting upon him, under pretext of working his cure a repetition of the causes of his present illness. Louisiana is sick almost unto death of the perpetual intermeddling of United States collectors, marshals, commissioners and soldiers. Take these away and there is every prospect that Louisiana will soon be well, and her citizens of every class, white and black, happy and prosperous, with every individual's rights preserved, and "none to make them afraid" on either side.—Balto. Sun.

How VOTES ARE MADE.—The report of the Labor Council of Boston, just issued, is interesting as showing how votes are made in districts where government navy yards are situated. This report shows that on the day of the election in November last there were 2,400 men on the books of the Charleston (Mass.) navy yard, and drawing full pay. Work there was none. But these men voted, and now 250 men constitute the force, and these are employed in taking care of the government property, as nothing is being done in the construction department. There was nothing being done in the construction department in November, but men were paid by the government in order to use them as voters.

A Hot Gospeller.

The Rev. Mr. Ives is a Methodist minister, of the Northern wing of that denomination. Presumptively, he preaches the gospel of love, charity to his neighbor, and even rises to the height of the Master's teachings, and exhorts his hearers to return evil with good. We say, presumptively, he does all these Christian and kindly things. In reality, he does nothing of the kind. He is one of those men whom Dr. Johnson said he liked "—a good hater." But he is more than that; he is a malignant hater. Instead of gentle and tender and persuasive words flowing from his lips, he breathes nothing but threatening and slaughter. He is styled a preacher, but his doctrine savors of the Devil. He claims to be devoted to the cause of freedom, and he exults over acts of despotism. He would inculcate peace and good will at the point of the bayonet. He would slay in the name of the Lord. He would see the Southern people pitilessly hunted down and killed by the soldiers of Sheridan, with the same brutal delight that Nero had in witnessing the early Christians flung into the arena and torn to pieces by the wild beasts. The speech of this man Ives, at a meeting of Methodist preachers in Boston on Tuesday last—was simply atrocious. He denounced the Southern people as "miserable wretches," against whom "nothing but strychnine and the cannon ought to be used." He then told with gusto—"this Christian minister"—how Sheridan had once said that "if he owned hell and Texas he would place out Texas and live in the other place," and this choice specimen of the Methodist Church North, tickled with the idea, said "he rather agreed with him."

So also, in beautiful obedience to the gracious injunction, "and this command I give unto you, that ye love one another," he declared that "the methodists of the South are in the Methodist Church South," adding with an audacious outburst of irreverence that approached the very verge of blasphemy, "he believed that the more he hated the rebels of the South the more he loved God." The South has not been plundered and persecuted enough for him. He wanted its spirit "crushed out by another war."

"He longed," he said, "for the appearance of some colored man able to become a leader among his people, wielding the sword and the torch!" Now, what are we to think of the Methodist ministers of Boston, preachers of a gospel that teaches us to love our enemies and do good to those who despitefully use us, listening to such atrocious and suggestive utterances as these, not only without offering a rebuke, but greeting them "with considerable applause and frequent demonstrations of approval?" The hatred avowed by this man Ives in language so diabolical as to shame his course of reason, might have passed for the mere ravings of a solitary lunatic if the preachers he had been specially invited to address had not testified by their applause that they were in accord with him. By this act they adopted his most atrocious suggestions as their own. Do they really think it sanctifies their calling?—Balto. Gazette.

The Exemption Question.

It is not our purpose to criticize the Court's decision in the case of the State against the Northern Central Railway Company. Political economy would teach that no considerable part of the property of a State should be withdrawn from public taxation. Discrimination is not only unjust, but odious because unjust. The people desire equal and fair taxation, and think truly that the almost absolute monopoly railway companies enjoy by their charters should satisfy their demands for privilege, without insisting, on the right to do business and enjoy protection in their rights and property without paying their just share of the expense of that protection. There is no good reason why the owner of real estate or steamboat property, or stockholder stock should pay taxes, whilst railroad companies, also conducting business for their own benefit, should be exempt. The whole system of privilege and monopoly against the policy of a republican government, and calculated to raise powerful agents, too strong for even sovereignty to deal with.

It is held by many corporations that they may, by virtue of exemptions in their charters, go on to acquire unlimited wealth, which may absorb the bulk of the best property in the State, and hold the same free from taxation because they say the shares of their capital stock represent the capital and property of the corporation, and those shares are by their charter exempt.

And so the sovereignty of the State is laid at the feet of one of its own creatures. If the Legislature has the right to contract that the State will never in the future exercise one of its highest and most essential prerogatives, and so may exempt property from taxation, yet it would seem the exemption should not be extended by construction and implication. There is, perhaps, no charter to be found in this State that does more than "exempt the shares of the capital stock" from taxation. To exempt the property of the corporation, under such a clause, it must be first determined that the language: "the shares of the capital stock," is tantamount to "all the property and franchises" of the company. And it is by just this reasoning and construction the State courts here have held the corporate property of certain railroad companies exempt. Is not this exempting by implication? Is not the person who is taxed in this State? In property? Is not property only the measure provided by law by which to assess the person? If so, the shares of stock belong to one person, the corporate property to another. The one is the shareholder, the other to the corporation itself. Is not the distinction manifest? On a judgment against a stockholder, who might own half the stock in a railroad company, could an execution be levied on the property of the corporation? And mutatis mutandis, could an execution be levied on a stockholder's individual property on a judgment against the corporation in which he held stock?

As the railroad case is to go to the Court of Appeals, it is well to keep in mind the position of the State. Her counsel insisted that it was suicidal to exercise the power of perpetual exemption. That if such power was not, in the nature of things, impossible, yet the thirteenth Article of the Bill of Rights of Maryland expressly restricted our Legislature, and did more, imposed taxes on the owner not on the property. That article is as follows:—"That papers ought not to be assessed for the support of government, but every person in the State, or person holding property therein, ought to contribute his proportion of public taxes for the support of the government, according to his actual worth in real or personal property."

They then insisted that if the power to exempt did exist, yet the exemption could go no further than the owners of "the shares of the capital stock." That in the Supreme Court of the United States, it had been set definitively that a tax on the shares of the capital stock was not a tax on the corporation. Hence, an exemption of the shares of the capital stock could not be an exemption of the property of the corporation. The cases referred to were those arising on the taxes laid on shares of stock of the National Banks. It was claimed that the shares were exempt, because they represented the capital—the property of the banks, and a part of that capital consisted of non-taxable United States bonds. The Supreme Court held, that the shares belonged to the stockholders individually—and the capital property, bonds, &c., of the bank to the corporation. That the ownership was perfectly distinct, and a tax on one was not a tax on the other. And it held the same as to stock of State banks held by persons resisting the taxes laid upon them by reason of their ownership of it, because the Statebank had its capital invested in United States bonds.

It would seem, if the decisions of the Supreme Court are to stand, that an exemption of the shares of the stock of the railroad company here would not, if the case should get to that point, protect the property of the railroad from taxation. But the acts of 1872 and 1874 are also claimed to be taxes on the corporation directly, and not on its property, and, as such, on its business. Such a tax was sustained in the Supreme Court of the United States last year. It is due the Legislature which passed these laws, and the officers who are endeavoring to enforce them to say, that they were not and are not considered as in violation of any contract entered into by the State. The laws were passed in the interest of the people of the State at large, and with a manifest desire to equalize taxation.

Election of Senator in Tennessee.

The warmly contested struggle in the Tennessee Legislature for United States Senator has resulted in the election of Andrew Johnson. The late Vice-President and ex-President seems to be truly irreplaceable. Entering public life as an alderman in a Tennessee town when he was only twenty, and mayor at twenty-two, he has since gone up the rounds of the official ladder as member of the Legislature, presidential elector, member of Congress from 1843 to 1853, Governor of Tennessee, United States Senator from 1857 to 1863, and finally Vice-President and then acting President of the United States. He is the only ex-President ever elected to the Senate, and the only ex-President now living. We now, after an interval of six years, are about to have Mr. Johnson back in the United States Senate, where he will be very likely to demonstrate that "there are blows to give as well as blows to take" on a great variety of subjects. It is no ordinary triumph which Mr. Johnson has achieved, and it is likely to be regarded as such by both friends and enemies. His readiness and power in debate are well known, and there will be no lack of stimulus for their exercise. He comes back to the body that tried to convict him on impeachment a few years ago, and it is within the limits of possibility that he may become an impeacher himself before his term is finished. Mr. Johnson is a native of Raleigh, N. C., and was born December 29, 1808. At the age of ten years he was apprenticed to a tailor, and served a good seven year's apprenticeship—quite in contrast with the trifling apprenticeships in various branches of industry at this day. The boys and mechanics generally may take a lesson from this old style of apprenticeship—and its result.—Balto. Sun.

SUNSHINE IN SUNDAY.—At a grand ball masque at Sunbury, Pa., the 22nd inst., Miss Bessie Woolford, of Annapolis, Md., daughter of Comptroller Woolford, impersonated the Baltimore Sun. Her costume was formed of copies of the Sun, and she flashed through the dance like a genuine sunbeam. The Sunbury Daily says:—"Miss Woolford, like the paper with which she was adorned, threw a brilliancy of Sun-light wherever she cast her cheerful look, and her Sun smiles lit up all those who came within her rays."

Treating the Wrong Disease.

Many times women call upon their family physicians, one with dyspepsia, another with palpitation, and a third with trouble of the bowels, another with pain here, and in this way they all present alike to themselves and their attending doctors, the same symptoms, and the same treatment, for which they press pills and potions, and bleed, and purge, and finally, they are all symptoms caused by some internal disorder, and while they are thus only able perhaps to palliate for a time, they are ignorant of the cause, and encourage their practice until large bills are made, when the suffering parents are no better in the end, but probably worse for the delay, treatment, and other complications used, and which a proper medicine directed to the cause would have entirely removed, thereby insulating health and comfort instead of prolonged agony.

Never suffer long from a Cough. At this age of the world, when you can get Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, it is a criminal neglect if you do not cure it. Be wise in time.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

NOTICE.

Personally appeared before me, the subscriber, Charles Mitchell (col.) of Quantico District, and stated that about September last came to his premises two young steers, one red and one pied, unbranded. One is about two years old and the other about three years. The owner is requested to come forward, prove property, pay charges and take them away.

NEW IDEA.

70 CENTS.
sent to the New York & Oriental Tea Company will insure by return mail one pound of the best quality of tea, selected from the best tea gardens in Japan or China, and which is usually retailed at $1.20 to $1.50 per pound.

It is a fact generally known that there is a recent arrangement of the Post Office, so that the quantity of tea which may be ordered by mail is limited to one pound, and the express companies charge more for the transportation of tea than for other goods.

The New York and Oriental Tea Company is taking advantage of this extraordinary facility and is supplying its customers in all parts of the United States with the finest Teas ever imported from the tea gardens of the East.

Reasons why you should order your Teas from the New York and Oriental Tea Company. 1st. Because the company deals only in pure unadulterated Teas. 2nd. Because they sell large quantities of so-called "Teas" adulterated with coffee, and other inferior articles, and even small quantities of 1 and 2 cent teas, besides coloring matter, and sent you by mail at a low price.

The buyers of the New York and Oriental Tea Company, can, by a new process, not generally known, detect the presence of adulteration in all Teas, and the company will continue to maintain the high character of its teas, by selling them only by mail.

20. Because our command of capital enables us to import large lots of tea, and thus to sell cheap. We buy all our Teas at the best rates in China and Japan, and thus save many intermediate profits and expenses.
