When was this cave discovered? Mildly inquired. "In 1812." "Who discovered it?" "I did!"

Most any other boy would have told me a plain blank lie, and given me the name of some old pensioner or of some dead man. I love and admire truth, and I doubled the boy's fee.

The cave is a hole in the ground. It is not a large hole. If Mr. Perry had to remain in it over half hour he had the headache for four weeks after.

I would not die in winter. For one might freeze to death; when blustering boreas sweeps around and takes away one's breath.

You got there by boat. The boat I took was a very eccentric boat. She pitched and tossed and rolled and shook until I wanted to get right off and go home.

He gave me such a look of mingled sorrow and pity that I have dreamed of him every night since, and I believe he would have prayed for me had not a roll of the boat sent him under the piano and tangled him up with a strawberry-haired medical student from Ann Arbor.

They have a cave at the bay. A hickman provided me to go and see it. It is called "Perry's Cave." The charge to enter the cave is only fifteen cents, and the boy who takes the money is also an object of historical interest.

Some young men in his place would have tried to deceive me by replying that Commodore Perry was the person meant.

Smart Bear Hunters. A Florida letter writer says:—Two young fellows, English tourists, were out here a few years ago and wanted to hunt bear.

The bear is easy to find. If he puts his foot on a log crossing to-day he will cross the same place to-morrow, and puts his foot on the same place. We found a bee gum where he had been, and put one Britisher there, another in the hamak above, and Joe and I and the dog went to look up the bear.

Joe was wrothy, I tell you, about "a fool as didn't know a bear dog from a bear," while the other turned the dead dog over curiously with his foot, as if it had been a bear or some other curious varmint.

"What did he do?" I asked. "Do! Funnist sort. 'Hell' says I, 'heeb, heeb,' calling the dog, and he just hopped up on his hind legs; hopped up you see like an ole circus."

A PITIFUL CASE.—A case of great hardship in the New York jail devoted to prisoners arrested for debt is that of John Brandt, a militia man, with a blind wife and six children, and his wages only nine dollars a week.

The best practical statement I have met about ventilation, says Colonel Waring, in the last Atlantic, was contained in the remark of a mining engineer in Pennsylvania: "Air is like a rope; you can pull it better than you can push it."

Mr. Curran, one day riding by the country seat of one of the judges, was struck by a group of lovely children whom he perceived playing in the woods; he stopped to inquire to whom all these fine children belonged; he was answered by the nurse, who had a beautiful infant in her arms.

A Pennsylvania printer who is the father of twenty-six children is puzzling himself to account for the hard times.

Interviewing a Farmer. Wishing to keep posted as to the condition of the crops, and to ascertain the exact amount of damage done recently by the flood, a reporter started on an interviewing expedition.

"How are you friend?" "Tired." "What's hay now?" "Same as it always was." "Dried grass."

"What did you think of the rain?" "Thought it was damp." "Didn't raise anything, then, eh?" "Nothing but an umbrella."

"What did your neighbors get?" "Chills said fever." "What are you doing now?" "Sitting out here in the sun, and may be losing a chance to sell this hay. Come up here if you want to talk."

Remembering that it was about time to report at the office, the baffled searcher after news climbed down the side of the wagon, and thinking that a soft answer turned away wrath he calmly said: "That's nice hay, my friend; where did it come from?"

The interrogator grew faint, but he summoned up courage to ask: "What do you think you'll get for it?" "Cash, of course. Git up, Whitey; this fellow will talk us all tired in a minute. He asks more questions than a catamount, and before the discouraged representative of the press could recover from his surprise the hay wagon had turned the adjacent corner.

The Rochester "Democrat" talks the following story and seems to take delight in it: They tell of a widow of Leesport, Pa., who got the best—Heaven bless her!—of a sewing machine agent.

The agent called for the machine, and the widow demanded a portion of the money that had been paid. This was refused in a sturdy way. Then the widows locked the doors of the house, putting the key in her pocket, and told the agent he could have the machine when he returned the money and not before.

CARROLL WOOLFORD & GWINN SUCCESSFUL!
 The State Carried by the DEMOCRATS
 over the combined forces of RADICALS, REFORMERS,
 and
POTATO BUGS!

The Election of the Entire State Ticket and a Large Majority in both Branches of the State Legislature!

The election in Maryland and several other States is over, and the result is before the world. Whatever may be said of the result, one thing is quite certain, and that is, that from all appearance party ties are not so strong as formerly, and men are disposed to vote as their judgment or caprice may dictate. The Administration at Washington seems to be convinced that the result is an indorsement of its policy. But we are inclined to believe that whatever others may think, that the result is fortunate after all for the Democrats, for as much as it will teach them that the tidal wave has started to re-advance, and that it will require such a degree of vigilance to insure that party success in 1876 that prudent counsels must prevail, and that lack of haste are not to be put in the way. (In the course of the best bloods. A good and true man, and a statesman must occupy the head of the ticket, not must be entangled with superficial issues, but a sound policy must be the leading feature in the Democratic platform. Best men to the front, and with Grant for an opponent success will be within our reach.

The result of the election would seem to indicate that the Ohio Democracy have made a great mistake in departing from the ancient faith of the Democratic party. It was a great mistake for one State to set up a financial policy for the nation, and especially when that policy was of doubtful utility. All we have to say is, that the West has thrown away her chance of having the Presidential candidate in 1876, and the chances of the great state of Delaware are now looming up. Well, Mr. Bayard is one of the coming men of this nation, and his record is as pure as that of any statesman in the land, and while it may be argued that he hails from a small State, which can bring to his support so few electoral votes, yet he will have fewer friends at home to serve, and therefore be more likely to distribute his favors throughout the land, and reward good men everywhere. Then we say, in view of the situation which we confess does not look as promising as it did only a month ago we are disposed to look to Delaware to furnish an acceptable man for the Presidency, and there is no man in this country who will command a more profound confidence than the Hon. Thomas F. Bayard of Delaware, and if the people of this country are disposed to honor a statesman with the Presidency, there is no man who could command a more ardent support than Delaware's favorite son. The great State of New York has been honored with the candidate several times and he has been as often defeated. No New York candidate, with the exception of Martin Van Buren, has ever been elected by the people to the Presidency, while that State has had the honor of casting no less than eight candidates, representing all the parties, factions and issues. We would prefer to vote for a candidate from some other section of our Centennial election, and we believe the American people would prefer it.

The State Election.

TALBOT COUNTY.
 Talbot elects the whole Republican ticket, except C. H. Gibson (Dem.) over C. E. Shanahan (Ind. Rep.) for State's Attorney. Col. Woodford also receives more votes than Col. Edward Wilkins, there being 462 votes cast for Edwin Wilkins, evidently a mistake.

WORCESTER COUNTY.
 Worcester elects the whole Democratic ticket by a majority of about 650.

SOMERSET COUNTY.
 The Republicans carry Somerset county except J. U. Dennis, (Dem.) for the State Senate and Henry Page (Dem.) for State's Attorney, neither of whom had any opposition.

ANNE ARUNDEL COUNTY.
 Anne Arundel goes Democratic.—Bannon is elected Senator by about 600 majority over Giddings.

BALTIMORE CITY.
 Carroll's majority in Baltimore City was 15,985; Gwin's, 14,306; Woolford's, 15,167. The city elects 18 Democrats to the House of Delegates and two Senators, which insures a large working majority in both Houses.

BALTIMORE COUNTY.
 The Republicans and Reformers carry Baltimore Co., by 1,000 majority.

CARROLL COUNTY.
 Carroll county goes for the Republican State ticket, but the County Officers and Legislators are Democrats, except the Register of Wills, and one Judge of the Orphans' Court, Reformers.

Of the nine counties on the Eastern Shore, Somerset, Dorchester, Talbot, Caroline and Cecil are divided between the Republicans, Reformers and Democrats, while a majority on the county tickets are Democrats.—Kent, Queen Anne's, Wicomico and Worcester give large Democratic majorities. Somerset elects Democrats for Senator and State's Attorney; Dorchester two Democratic Delegates; Cecil the whole Delegation are Democrats, also Orphans' Court and Commissioners.
 We are not able at the times of going to press to give the status of the Western Shore counties, but enough is known to set down Carroll's majority at from 13,000 to 14,000 in the State, with a large majority of Democrats in the Legislature.

Other State Elections.

VIRGINIA.
 The Conservatives have beaten the Independents, and will have a large majority in the Legislature.

NEW YORK.
 The Evening Journal says: The result on the State ticket is close and still a matter of doubt. The Senate, according to present returns, stands twenty-one republicans and eleven democrats, and the former may carry the tenth district, but the others seem well settled. The Assembly stands seventy-five republicans to fifty democrats, a republican majority of twenty-five. This may be varied a little by further returns, but not materially. The Democrats have elected their State ticket by 8,000 or 9,000 majority.

PENNSYLVANIA.
 Returns from this State indicate that Hartman, (Rep.) for Governor, has a majority of about 17,000.

KANSAS.
 Returns indicate that the Republicans have carried the State.

WISCONSIN.
 Returns show that Ludington, variety of reasonable and substantial reading for the farmer and horticulturist. The leading article this month is the translation of an invaluable paper from the French, on the successful experiments for twenty years, of the preservation of green fodder in its green state all winter, which it is predicted will cause a revolution in dairying. A number of articles also appear on fertilizers and manures, on farm and garden work generally, the diseases of cattle and their cure, on the dairy, live stock, poultry, &c. The whole number is unusually interesting. The publishers offer to give the three last numbers of this year, free, to those who subscribe for 1876. Published by S. (Apr. 25-26)

Scriner's Monthly for 1876.

The publishers invite attention to the following list of some of the attractive articles secured for Scriber's Monthly, for the coming year. In the field of fiction, besides a number of novelettes and shorter stories, there will be

TWO REMARKABLY SERIAL STORIES
BY EDWARD WILSON.

The first of these, now complete in our hands, "GABRIEL COYBOLT,"

By H. H. HART.

Begins in the most striking manner, and will run for twelve months. The scenes and characters are new and original. The author has chosen from his own life, which he has lived in California, and has drawn from the most graphic records of early California life that he has yet appeared.

It will also begin in the January number.

"PHILIP NOLAN'S FRIENDS, OR, HOW THEY PASSED."

By EDWARD WILSON.

The scene of this story is laid in the Southwestern territory, now forming the States of Louisiana and Texas, at the time of early American history. The characters live in a section which was now American, now French, and now Spanish, and the record of their adventures rises like a story of intense and unalloyed interest throughout.

A RECORD OF THE "MEXICAN YACHTING."
By EDWARD WILSON.

Col. Waring is now in Europe, visiting, in a record of two hundred and fifty miles, one of the most fertile and interesting of the vine-growing valleys of Europe. This second series of papers promises to be a most interesting and valuable one to our readers already familiar.

CENTRAL LETTERS.

A rare collection of Revolutionary Letters, mainly from stores in the hands of the descendants of Col. Joseph Warrick. They are full of interest, and will be read with a rare relish in connection with the Centennial celebration of the BRILLIANTLY ILLUSTRATED ARTICLES ON AMERICAN COLLECTORS.

Written respectively by their friends, will appear during the year. The revised interest in college life makes these papers especially timely, and will make them a popular attention.

By OLD NEW YORK.

Elegantly illustrated articles on Old New York, by John F. Milne, will appear at once, and will attract the attention of the city and the country, and with interest the development of the great metropolis, and affectionately remember the quiet periods of the old city.

Every number is profusely illustrated, thus enabling us to give to our descriptive, narrative and historical articles, an interest and value never attained in any illustrated periodical. Under its accustomed management, and under the able and devoted supervision of its editor, it is the future to be devoted, as it has been in the past, to sound literature and Christian progress.

THE EDITORIAL COMMITTEES.

occupy over twenty pages of each number and contain Dr. Holland's vigorous and timely articles, as well as the latest works in Art, Literature, and Science.

TERMS:
$4.00 Year, in Advance, or on a number.
The 10 year, complete, Nov. 70 to Oct. 75 bound in maroon cloth.
Vol. begin in November and May. And of the earlier volumes (to VIII) will be supplied separately to parties who wish them to complete sets at the rate, i. e. cloth, $2.00; half morocco, $3.00.
Postoffice "Postmaster" will be supplied at rates that will enable them to fill any of the above orders.

Subscribers will please remit in P. O. Money Order, or in Bank Checks or Drafts, or by registered letters. Money in letters not registered, at sender's risk.

Poetry.

(From the Marlboro Gazette.)
The Bachelor.
BY F. A. M.

In the cottage still and dreary,
On the bleak and barren hill,
That a bachelor lone and weary,
Cooking breakfast with a will.

Often thus he sat so lonely,
Stirring coffee with his knife;
Saying, with a sigh, if only—
If only had a wife.

Many hours he sits thus dreaming,
"Dreaming of what he might have been,
Till the setting sun now gleaming
Through his cottage door is seen.

Then he rises, clears the dishes,
Spilling water all around;
And with many evil wishes,
Scatters broken caps around.

Soon he is in the lamp-light lingers,
Sewing buttons on to-night,
Cruel luck he pricks his fingers,
Breaks his needles out of spite.

So the bachelor sits and grumbles
At the things he has to do,
He to thread his needle fumbles,
And the while makes much ado.

And at last in great frustration,
Casts his unused garments by,
Murmurs in his desperation,
Soon to win a wife I'll try.

THE REWARD OF KINDNESS.

Mrs. Gorham put down a letter she had been reading, and looking around the table at her blooming daughters and two tall, handsome sons, said in a doleful tone—

"Your Aunt Sabina is coming to London and has invited herself here without ceremony."

"When?" asked Arabella, with an intonation of intense disgust.

"She will reach here this afternoon. Wilbur, you will have to meet her."

"Sorry, ma, but I have promised to drive Miss Caldwell to the park—Fred can go."

"Certainly, I will go," Fred said, gravely, though there was a hot flush on his forehead. "I am very fond of Aunt."

"Nonsense!" said his mother, "you have not seen her for fourteen years. I never went near the detestable old farm after your father died."

"Nevertheless, I have a vivid recollection of Aunt Sabina's kindness when we were there."

"Dear me, Fred," drawled Lucille, "don't be sentimental; I wish the old thing would stay at home. I can't imagine what she wants to come here for."

"She is our father's sister," said Fred, "and I cannot find anything surprising in her looking for a welcome amongst her brother's children."

Mrs. Gorham shrugged her shoulders. If she had spoken her thoughts it would have been—"Fred is so odd. Just like his father." But she only said, "I may depend upon you then, to meet your aunt, Fred? I will see about her room."

It was a source of great satisfaction to Mrs. Gorham that her children were all like herself—"rude Greers, every one of them except Fred," she would say, congratulating herself that the plebeian blood of "Gorham" was not transmitted in the features of her elder son Wilbur, or any of the three girls.

That Greer pride meant intense selfishness, that Greer beauty was of cold, hard type, that Greer disposition was tyrannical and narrow-minded, did not trouble Mrs. Gorham. That the son, who was "all Gorham," was proud to the core with the true pride that knows no false shame; that he was noble in disposition, handsome in a frank, many type, generous and self-sacrificing, she could not appreciate. His hands and feet were not so small as darling Wilbur's, he had no fashionable affectations, and no "Greer" look. So his mother thought him rough and coarse, and his sisters declared that he had no style at all. But outside of the home, where great show of wealth was made by many private economies, Fred was more appreciated.

When he became a man, and knew that his father's estate, though sufficient to give them every comfort, was not large enough for the extravagance his mother indulged in, he fitted himself for business, and took a position in a counting-house, thus becoming self-supporting, though his mother declared that no Greer had ever been in trade. That the money she lived on was made in soap boiling, the fashionable lady ignored entirely.—Darling Wilbur had studied law, but his first client had not yet appeared, and Mrs. Gorham supported him, trusting his fascinations would touch the heart of some moneyed belle.—Miss Caldwell was the present hope. She was her own mistress, an orphan heiress, and very handsome. That she was proud and rather cold in manner was only an additional charm to Mrs. Gorham, and Lucille, Arabella and Corinne were enthusiastic in their admiration of "Cornelia Caldwell's queenly manner."

Nobody suspected that Fred, blunt, straight-forward Fred, hid one secret in his heart, confessed to no living being. And that secret was a love, pure and true, for Cornelia Caldwell—a love that would shut itself closely away from any suspicion of fortune hunt—only drooped and mourned, thinking of the heiress.

At four o'clock Fred was at the station with a carriage, waiting for Aunt Sabina. What a little, old-fashioned figure she was in her quaint black bonnet and large figured shawl. But Fred knew her kindly old face at once, though he had not seen it since he was twelve years old.

"You are Aunt," he said, going quickly to meet her.

She looked at the handsome face, and caught a quick gasping breath.

"You must be one of John's boys," she said. "How like you are to your father!"

"I am Fred," he answered.

"Dear heart! How you've grown! Is your ma here?"

"She is waiting for you at home."

The good old country woman had never had the least doubt of a warm welcome at her brother's house and Fred certainly confirmed her expectations. He found the old black leather trunk, the bag, the handbox, and the great bulging cotton umbrella, and put them all in the carriage without one smile of ridicule. He made his Aunt go to the restaurant and refresh herself before starting on the long drive home. He listened with respectful interest to all the mishaps of the long journey and sympathized, with the—"Ruination of every mortal stitch I've got on, dear, in the dust and smoke."

And he chatted pleasantly of his childish recollection of the tiny house and wide farm where Sabina lived.

"You see," she told him, "I made up my mind this year I would come to London once before I died. I've tried to before now, dear, but something or 'nother alters hindered. Dear, dear! You're all grown up, I s'pose, and you was but a lot o' babies last time poor John brought you to see me."

"Corinne is the youngest, and she is eighteen. Wilbur is the only one older than I am."

"Yes, I remember. Well, dear, I'm glad that John's wife brought up such a fine family. I'm only an old maid, but I do love children and young folks."

But a chill fell upon the kindly old heart when home was reached at last and four fashionably-dressed ladies gave her a strictly courteous greeting. But for the warm clasp of Fred's hand, I think she would have returned to the station in the same carriage she came, so wounded and sore she felt.

"Not one kiss," she thought "and Fred kissed me at the train, right afore all the folks."

Fred slipped a silver coin into the hands of the servant girl who was to wait upon his Aunt, promising another if she was very attentive, and himself escorted the old lady to her room. It was not often the young man's indignation found voice; tho' it grew hot over many shams and acts of hard selfishness in the in the house of his mother, but he said some words on that day the called a blush to the cheeks of the worldly woman.

It was not a very busy season, and finding Sabina was likely to have a sorry time if left to the other members of the family Fred asked for a holiday, and appointed himself the old lady's escort. He was too proud to care for the fact that the quaint little figure on his arm attracted many an amused glance, but gravely stood by while a new dress for Dolly, the dairymaid, and a "city necktie" for Bob, the ploughman, were purchased.

He gave undivided attention to the more important selection of a new black silk for aunt herself; and pleasantly accepted a blue silk scarf, with large red spots, that was presented to him, appreciating the love that prompted the gift, and mentally resolving to wear it when he paid a promised visit to the farm. He drove Aunt Sabina to the Park. He took her to see all the sights.

Once or twice, meeting some of his gentlemen friends, they had thought, "the queer old party is some rich relation, Gorham is so very attentive," and had delighted Sabina by their deferential attentions.

Once—Fred had not counted on that—in a picture gallery, Cornelia Caldwell stammered in alone. She had heard of Sabina, through the disgusted comments of Lucille, and knew she had no property but a "miserable farm," but she greeted Fred with a smile far more cordial than she usually gave her admirers. A little lump came into Fred's throat. Then he gravely introduced the stately beauty in her rustling silk to the little old fashioned figure on his arm.

"My aunt, Miss Gorham, Miss Caldwell."

They admired the pictures together, and the young lady was cordial and chatty.

After they came down the steps, Miss Caldwell said—

"You must let your aunt drive an hour or two with me, Mr. Gorham. I am going to do some shopping, so I will not tax your patience by inviting you to join us, but I shall be pleased if Miss Gorham will dine with me, and you will call for her this evening."

Then she smiled again, made Sabina comfortable in the carriage, and drove off, leaving Fred forty times deeper in love than ever, as she intended he should be.

"He is a very prince of men," she thought, "and I'll give him one day's rest. Bless the dear old soul, she has just such blue eyes as my dear old grandmother."

Then she won Sabina's confidence, and found she was worrying about the purchase of certain household matters that would not go in the black leather trunk, and that she did not like to worry Fred about it.

"You see," she told him, "I made up my mind this year I would come to London once before I died. I've tried to before now, dear, but something or 'nother alters hindered. Dear, dear! You're all grown up, I s'pose, and you was but a lot o' babies last time poor John brought you to see me."

Wicomico the Banner County in the State.

Before the election came off, we ventured to assert that we believed that Wicomico would be the banner county on the Shore, but we were not prepared to believe that another county in the State would give a larger majority for our State ticket, and for their local tickets than we should be able to do, but we see from the returns we are the banner county in the whole State. To achieve this it required the united effort of the party, and we are glad to say that, although we had croakers among us, some who called themselves Democrats, but who did more harm to the cause than they would have done if they had gone over bag and baggage to the enemy, yet we had a band of tried and true, who stood firm and battled with the enemy and we are happy to say, they conquered him. It was not the work of a man or a small posse of men, but it was one united effort of the Democracy, both old and young, who went into the fight with a determination to win, and they did win, just as they deserved to do. Just here we desire to congratulate the young Democracy of Wicomico, for we say it without fear of contradiction, that Wicomico can boast as true Democracy among her young men as any county in the State or nation, and whatever may be the fate of the old party in other portions of the country, we think it safe to say it will be a long time before its enemies will be able to triumph over our young commonwealth. This is a hopeful state of things and every lover of constitutional liberty ought to rejoice that there is one more place and people where our liberties are safe.

CINCINNATI has her holy man in the person of our old friend Deacon Richard Smith, and he is truly good. But Salisbury, in keeping with her general enterprise, also has her truly good man, "and holy," in the person of one "Josiah," and he is a good man. Sometimes he preaches, and this is a holy calling, and when he fails to convince men of the error of their ways, or to induce them to repent of their sins, then he tries other expedients and in order to convince them of their political sins, he holds up to their view one of their idols. We saw him on one occasion exhibiting the distorted picture of one of our public men, a man, too, whom the people have delighted to honor, even William Pinkney, and while the gaping multitude were gazing upon the picture, in order to further convince the people of the error of their ways, this holy man read from the Prophecy of "Sovereign" a long chapter upon the sins and folly of putting on or wearing "rings," or in any way being connected with a ring. This seems to be the form of idolatry that our truly good man desires to warn our people against. They may worship the bronze statue, all they like, but there must not be a ring in it, if so, it is idolatry. Therefore we are greatly indebted to our modern prophet, and ought to pay the more earnest heed to his words. But it seems that some have heeded his report. Our people go on singing, and strange as it may seem, voting the Democratic ticket also. What a pity! What a pity! What will become of us? We would suggest that the prophet take all the small rings, out of which to cast a rod, with which he may be able to demolish the great ring of political idolatry. Then will the people shout, "Well done good and faithful servant. Thou hast delivered us from the consequences of ring rule, and we have great cause to rejoice!"

After all the counting and calculating Wisconsin has gone Democratic.

It seems that Mr. Beecher can't escape a trial. We shall get to think after a while, that he has been guilty of some indiscretion, as it is said, that "where the dogs all scratch there is some buried carrion." We know it is sometimes the case where a dead horse is concealed under ground, and it would be as well to bring up the carcass at once and let the stench cease. It is high time the public were relieved of any further consideration of the sickly subject. We would advise Mr. B. to stop preaching and go around lecturing for a living, or he might put himself on exhibition as he has been sufficiently advertised.

Wicomico, the little giant of Democracy, proudly waves her banner, and bids her sister counties take courage, and try in the future to regain their laurels. Her boys are true, and are not ready to join hands with every ism which presents itself or which may be presented by designing men, to foist themselves in office. Beware of those who cry "reform," when you know what kind of stuff they are, that they are men who would achieve their end at any cost, even by the sacrifice of the best principles known to men. Of such beware.

The Democrats can elect the next President and have 19 votes to spare, leaving out Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, all of which may be carried by a good man. "Let us have peace."

The House of Delegates of Virginia consists of 87 Conservatives, 24 Radicals, and 7 Independents. One-fourth of the Radicals are negroes.

Mutiny.

We learn from the True Marylander, that Capt. Severn Price, of the schooner Ruth A. Price, shipped on board a crew of colored men in Baltimore, named as follows: Andrew James, Wm. Morris, Warren Stewart, Littleton Carey and Wm. Smith. On Friday, 5th inst. he was lying in Black Walnut Cove, Talbot Co., when he ordered his crew to get the vessel underway. They refused to obey orders and resisted the captain. One of them, Warren Stewart, struck the captain, and the rest of them called out to him to "kill the son of a b--h." Captain Price had seized the man who struck him by the throat, but when the rest made a rush towards him and called to the negro to kill him, he showed him away and jumped down in the cabin, saying, "I am going to get my pistol." He had no pistol, but made the threat to intimidate them. He had a "billy," however, and this he put in his pocket and coming on deck thus armed took the helm and ran the boat out in the bay. All the time that he was standing at the helm, Andrew James was walking up and down the deck saying, "give me a boat hook and let me kill the son of a b--h. I want his tamer, Severn Price, I'm your tamer, d--n your white livered soul," and more language of a disgusting nature. When out in the bay the captain let his sails run down and hoisted his colors at half mast as a signal of distress, when other boats came to his assistance, who attempted to arrest the men, who resisted. They finally drove them down in the hold and put on the batteries. The captain then sailed for home, when he heaped to the officers of the law, and after a severe scuffle they were arrested and committed to jail at Princess Anne, and U. S. Commissioner Lawson notified, but as the mutineers were colored, that officer declined to have anything to do with the case, stating that he expected the white man was to blame. This is in keeping with the way things are done down South. If a negro is concerned in a riot the U. S. Officer says the whites are to blame. Some time since, in the State of Georgia, when the chief conspirator was found, he was in consultation with the District Attorney. After getting up an insurrection in 19 counties and had planned the death of every white man, woman and child, and the U. S. Judge could not have him arrested because court was not in session, he said. Now we suppose this little tool at Crisfield must imitate his masters or he would not be a faithful officer. In conclusion, we have only to say, that we advise persons who have an entire colored crew to be sure and know who they are, and not to trust themselves with too many entire strangers, either white or colored. We have often wondered that there are not more cases of this kind.

TIT FOR TAT.—When Governor Kellogg, of Louisiana, heard of the republican victories in Pennsylvania and elsewhere, he forthwith ordered a salute of one hundred guns to be fired at the expense of the State. As an offset, as soon as the democrats were assured of a conservative victory in Mississippi, a committee of citizens waited on the Governor and made application for a couple of Napoleon guns to fire a salute of one hundred and one guns in honor of the rescue of Mississippi from the hands of the plunderers. The Governor referred the application to General Jack Wharton, (a Marylander,) the adjutant general of the State, who promptly approved the order for the guns, and the salute was accordingly fired, the State again footing the bill.

A Campaign Incident.

About forty years ago the late James Polk and Hon. Edward Long were candidates for the House of Delegates of Maryland, and during the contest they had been up to Sharptown attending a political meeting. On returning they stopped over night in Salisbury, but having to attend a meeting in the lower part of Somerset the next afternoon they left Salisbury about day break. On passing through the 7th district (Trappe) they came to a house on the side of the country road in which a man lived named Webball. Polk said to Long, "Let's call this old fellow up and see if he is all right." "Agreed," said Long, "and if he is not let's make him so, as I presume he is quite needy. So they halted, called, and Mr. Webball came out to know what they wanted, not even stopping to put on his shoes or stockings while a white froat was laying thick on the ground. They bade him good morning, at the same time remarking that as it was unpleasant for him to stand on the cold ground, and as they had a long road before them, they would proceed to tell their business, and commenced by asking him what he followed for a living. He said chopping wood, at three eleven penny bits per cord. They remarked that this was a slow process. "Yes," said he, "but my wife and those of my family are few, and we get along quite comfortably." Mr. Long remarked that they were about to ask a favor of him, and that they were willing to do one in return: that they supposed a hundred pounds of bacon or a barrel of flour would come in handy. Mr. Webball looked up at them and said, "Gentlemen, I presume you are candidates for office." "Yes," said they, "we are." "Well," said Mr. Webball, "I have but a word to say which may save you some trouble, and this is, if your names are printed on the Democratic ticket you will certainly get my vote, but if they do not appear there you are not both of you worth enough to get me to vote for one of you." "All right," said Mr. Polk, "they will be printed there." "Enough said," replied Webball, "you can drive on." Mr. Long, who had bolted the Whig conversation and had been taken up by the Democratic party who were greatly in the minority in Somerset, said to Mr. Polk, "If you have many such men in the Democratic party you will soon get control of this county for such virtue deserves its reward." We are happy to say that the old Trappe district has some of the same kind of Democrats in it to-day, and we hope and believe it will be a long time before the day will come when such virtue can not be found there.

A REMARKABLE WATER.—There is a remarkable water at a hotel in Antwerp. He waits at the table with great attention and receives the smallest fee with gratitude, yet he has hanging up in one of the rooms of the same hotel pictures worth at least $150,000. Among them are works of Teniers, Vanlyke and other famous artists, all undoubted originals. He has been offered $100,000 for one Holy Family, and $6,000 for another picture, but he is deaf to all inducements to sell. He will show his pictures to visitors only after a formal introduction, and then he shows them with dignity and talks about them with great intelligence.

The noted flag that waved over Fort McHenry at Baltimore, in September, 1814, during the British bombardment, and which suggested to Key the composition of "The Star Spangled Banner," is now on board the Tallapoosa, which is lying at Portsmouth. It is badly torn, and has thirteen stars, and is owned by Mrs. Georgianna Armistead Appleton, of Boston, daughter of Colonel Armistead, who commanded at the fort at the time. It is to be exhibited at the Centennial.

THE GRANGES.—The National Grange Patrons of Husbandry will hold their next annual session at the Galt House, Louisville, on the 15th of the present month. The members of the national grange have been requested to bring with them specimens of the leading products of their respective localities for exhibition during the session, which will be presented to the citizens of Louisville.

Business and Currency.

The mission of the demagogue is over for a season, and men may now look squarely at the vital question which reach directly to his business, to his pocket, to his credit and to his home. It was useless to discuss the relations of currency to business and the results of popular verdicts upon the industry and trade of the country, when an important political campaign was upon us. Journalism in Pennsylvania, as a rule, has descended to the play of the mere organ grinder, and subordinates every public question to the interests of partisan power, and political orators, with rare exceptions, struggle to advance party success, no matter to what extent the public mind must be misled to do so. The late campaign in this State was a pointed illustration of this truth. With our industry paralyzed, our trade crippled our commerce languishing, and our capital sinking toward bankruptcy—with every incentive to the pre- and political disputants to proclaim the truth since the truth must soon proclaim itself, the shuffling and expedients of political leaders were disgraceful to the last degree. The Lancaster Republican platform on the financial question was concerned in fraud, and a cowardice that was profanely reproached excluded the school issue from it after it had been framed and adopted in committee. The regret, the atonement, were not because the leaders cared for the schools, or for the Bible, or for religion of any sort, but because the Ad. J. Titters, and the Bunns, and the Titters, and the Stockley and the Hills of the party applied to religion and schools over their own Lancaster cowardice, only because they saw a feeble ray of hope in that direction to strengthen an endangered cause. They were willing to sacrifice religion and schools for one month of the year. If thereby they can obtain votes to continue their profligate work, eleven months to jobbery will, in their judgment, warrant one month to a halloo mockery of devotion to the Bible and schools. And so they continue to bring the people's consent to be so cheated. On the most vital question of currency the Lancaster platform is all things to all men, and was intended to be run in the interest of inflation, contraction, resumption of half and between, just as the exigencies of the case might require, and it was run, not in any one of these groves but in all of them as local prejudices or convictions preferred it. Hartranft, speaking from Philadelphia to Pittsburg, and reported daily by the Times, could not discuss more than one view of the issue, and therefore he had to studiously alter on it. The other orators were paroled out to suit localities—the hard-money men talking to hard-money interests, and the inflationists construing the Lancaster deliverance as surpassing the Erie plank to the plenteous of currency it proposed. Equally dishonest were the leaders who congregated at Erie, reared their monuments of faction and folly and scattered to their homes to find what wrongs they had committed. But for the timely arrest of the demoralization on the currency issue by the bold speech of Senator Wallace, followed by such men as Blackwell, Bigler, Clymer, Stenger and others, the party would have been engulfed in the slough of repudiation. The Erie declaration was but an expedient—a concession to a supposed whirlwind of inflation, and it was flung out in the most crude and indefinite form. What it was intended to mean few could tell, and just what it did mean was as confidently interpreted as were the conflicting views on the subject in various communities. After the halt had been called in Ohio, both parties ran a hurdle-race over their own platforms to escape from themselves, and Lancaster was construed to mean strong inflation, and Erie was defined as meaning specie payments, but no matter when. This in the campaign in Pennsylvania, the State most vitally interested in a thorough understanding and enlightened decision of the question, the verdict means nothing, or anything that any one may choose to call it. But the election is now over, the organs need not grind in the prison-house of party of bewildered men; campaign orators are out of season until the conflict of 1876 opens, and the people who are harassed and bewildered by one-ances and currency, because they feel the pinch in their shops and counting-houses and homes, may now look the grave question in the face. President Grant construes the result of the elections as sustaining the resumption act, and therein takes issue with the mass of inflationists who are ready to say that the resumption act is the worst thing that has happened since the nation was founded. This problem must be solved within the next few months, and how it is to be solved is what will test the patriotism and statesmanship of the country to the utmost. It is idle to say that the resumption act is the worst thing that has happened since the nation was founded, and that in a little while it will be prosperous again. It is not so. The necessities of the country made business better this fall than since 1873, for the accumulated stores were exhausted and had to be supplied, and the same necessities quenched manufacturing to some extent; but there is yet no cure of the evil, no restoration to a sound financial basis, and there can be none under our present palpably defective financial policy. To hope for the restoration of confidence and for the investment of capital in our industries when a law of Congress imperiously demands resumption on the 1st of January, 1876, without regard to the ability of the country to do so, is simply madness, and until the resumption act is repealed there can be no substantial improvement in the business of the country. Already the premium on gold has nearly doubled since the passage of the resumption act, and it will continue to increase, and values to diminish, while impossible resumption stares the nation in the face. To adhere to a positive, fixed resumption policy when our industry is unproductive, when our slumbering wealth is untouched by the hands of labor, and when the balance of trade with the gold nations of the world is steadily against us, declares either a measure of imbecility in our rulers that is exceptional in the history of enlightened governments, or a subordination to the interests of the money-changers that can be scarcely less than venal. Under the wisest financial policy there will be thousands of our struggling business men who must succumb to bankruptcy. The fruition of the tide of inflated prices and speculation has not yet been wholly gathered, and there can be no health until all things are adjusted to actual values. But actual values may be reached so gradually that comparatively few will fall by the wayside, or they may be reached by enforced resumption and general bankruptcy. The government to accept for the resumption in the most unpalatable condition of the country would not merely be a terrible blunder, but it would be a crime—a crime against every debtor, against nearly every household, against the nation, and there should be no tolerance for such a crime or such a madness. The first duty of Congress is to pass the unconditional repeal of the resumption act. It should not be embarrassed by any other question. It is the horrid corpse that now confronts and appals every legitimate enterprise, and it must be first taken away of the way. The House will doubtless pass it; the Senate will hardly dare to refuse its concurrence, and if the President shall interpose his veto, as he has publicly threatened, he will simply consign his name to the execrations of a stricken and hopeless country. If that day shall come, let us have a brave Congress that can stand up against the omnipotent demand of the people and sustain a selfish Executive. The ghost of enforced resumption banished from our sensitive business circles, but one thing remains for Congress to do. It must dissolve the currency question from the cares of Presidents, Cabinets and Congress, and wisely entrust it to the demands of legitimate trade, with every channel it takes leading gradually but steadily to the specie standard, and quickening our productive industries to hasten, by logical process, the equality of paper and gold. The issue should be settled by the patriotism and statesmanship of Congress, regardless of partisan interests, for it would be a dearly bought victory for any party in the Presidential contest of next year, if won over the further prostration of our capital and labor, and the increased bankruptcy of the people. Let Republicanism have a party if they will, but we beg that a paralyzed nation, a stricken people, shall not be made footholds for politicians to toy with in playing the desperate game of winning political power.

The Virginia Conference of the M. E. Church, South, holds its annual session this year at Danville, Va., beginning on the 17th inst.

The President has appointed the 25th of November as a day of Thanksgiving, and it behooves every honest citizen to pick out his turkey and wait for a dark night.

DEDICATION.—The Wolf Hill Methodist Protestant Church will be dedicated on Sunday, Nov. 14th. Revs. Q. E. T. Ewell, J. M. Holmes, and F. T. Tagg will conduct the services. C. A. Ferguson, Pastor.

For Sale.—Three new iron Safes, Miller's and Marvin's make. Inquire at this office.

Mr. Benjamin Lankford one of the members of the Legislature elected at the last election, has represented this county in that body eleven times and this will make the twelfth. He is about 70 years of age, and is very active yet.—Somerset Herald.

Go to A. G. Toadvine's for fine Cassimers and shawls.

R. D. Ellegood has on hand a superior lot of Mince Meat, made of the best material, which he is selling at 12c per pound. A liberal discount to merchants. Hominy, 25c per gal. Cracker dust 12c per lb. Give him a call.

For Sale Cheap.—Two first class Parlor Organs—Plotts and Eatey's. Also an elegant Steiff Piano. Inquire at this office.

ANOTHER NEW ENTERPRISE.—Messrs. White & Webster are erecting a new building to be used as an oyster packing house, which will commence operations in about ten days, and will be another source of revenue and employment for our people. We are glad to see this move in the right direction.

Deservingly popular. We mean Dr. Ball's Cough Syrup, for it never fails. Physicians recommend it.

ANOTHER SNAKE STORY.—While Mr. James Small and Ernest Ellis were walking in Capt. Geo. Parsons' woods on Sunday last they came upon a monstrous snake, which was easily killed, being too torpid to offer any resistance. It was a black racer, and measured 9 feet 9 inches in length.

Mrs. A. E. Williams has just returned from Philadelphia with a new stock of Millinery, Notions, and other Fancy Goods, which she is offering at prices to suit the times, and asks her friends to call and examine her stock before buying. She occupies the store formerly occupied by Mrs. John White.

A. G. Toadvine has on hand a large assortment of Boots & Shoes, cheap for cash.

A man named Lytle, residing at Newark, Worcester county, who had his arm broken some time since, and who had just recovered from the accident, was engaged in killing a hog last Tuesday when he broke the same arm over again, but a little lower down and just above the elbow. He seems unfortunate with his right arm.

Mr. John T. Ellis, has opened a marble yard over the Iron Bridge, where he is executing some very fine work in his line. He is at present engaged in putting up a beautiful monument for Mrs. S. Fannie Todd, to be placed over the remains of her deceased husband, the late Dr. George W. Todd. We wish John well as he is a good fellow and an upright young man.

The subscribers to the capital stock of the Agricultural and Mechanical Association of Wisconsin county are requested to pay in to the Treasurer the amounts subscribed at once, so that the work may go on and the State appropriation secured. We hope the enterprise may be an entire success, and the only way to make it so, is to stand by it and support it heartily.

Save money by buying your watches of A. W. Woodcock, who has a good assortment of American watches at factory prices. Call and see him before you go to the city. See his 18k rings, his fine glasses.

At a meeting of Salisbury Lodge, No. 145, I. O. of G. T., held on the 5th inst., the following officers were installed to serve the ensuing quarter: W. G. T. Ewell, O. A. Brothman; W. Y. T. Ewell, M. A. Brothman; W. C. Miss Mollis Brothman; W. S. W. P. Bradley; W. T. A. T. Broude; W. F. S. Miss Alice Pennel; W. M. J. O. Adams; W. I. G. Wm. Brothman; W. O. G. J. A. Bradley; W. D. M. Mayhew Ruark; W. A. S. Miss Belle Bedell; L. H. S. J. M. Kemp; R. H. S. H. M. Pennel.

Mince Meat, Sanago, fresh Butter, Cheese, &c., at J. P. Owens & Co.

Dr. J. J. Caldwell, of Baltimore, states, "I have used Liebig's Liquid Extract of Beef largely in Debility, febrile and nervous diseases, and I have found it one of the most reliable of nutritive tonics now in use, to be found in pharmacy."

Mr. William McDaniel, of Virginia, who is the general agent for the Lee Monument association, is now traveling through this section of the State for the purpose of selling the large portrait of General R. E. Lee. The proceeds of the sale of the picture are to be applied to the erection of said monument. We hope the people will render all the aid they can to this enterprise.

FURNITURE.—For fine cottage and chamber sets of Furniture, go to A. G. Toadvine's.

The Messenger speaks of the serious illness of Mr. Schoolfield, one of the commissioners elect of Worcester county. It will be recalled that Mr. S. is the gentleman whose father recently died, leaving him a large estate as his only surviving child, and it is he against whose suit is brought to recover legacies supposed to be left other parties by a will which has not yet been found.

For Sale.—Fifteen building Lots, four Houses and lots in Town, and 10,000 acres of land in the county. Apply to L. MALONE.

Arrived during the week Schooner Gen'l Humphreys, Capt. Hooper, with coal for Humphreys & Tilghman—Ridge, Capt. Malone, from Baltimore with merchandise for Humphreys & Tilghman.

Departed hence Schooner Salisbury, Capt. Fields, with lumber from E. E. Jackson & Co. Schooner Annie Belle, Capt. Goslee, to Suffolk, Va., for lumber for E. E. Jackson & Co.

In our report of the election returns, we classed J. Hopkins Tarr, Esq., a Republican, not intentional, but because those running against the regular nominated ticket were so-called. Mr. Tarr informed us on Monday that he voted the regular State ticket, and was only an Independent candidate. We are glad to hear it, and hasten to make the amende honorable. Those who voted for Carroll, Gwinn and Woolford, and for our County ticket almost entire, ought not to be called Republicans.

For Harness, Trunks, Satchels, Bridles, Saddles, &c., go to A. G. Toadvine's.

AGRICULTURAL AND MECHANICAL ASSOCIATION.—All the members of this Association are requested to be present without fail at the meeting called on Saturday, the 20th inst., at 2 o'clock, P. M., in the Court Room, Salisbury. Subjects of great importance will be brought up for discussion, and acted upon. All vice Presidents are requested to attend and report progress in getting subscriptions. They are further requested to make all collections possible on subscriptions, and to hand the same over to the treasurer at said meeting. All persons who have subscribed to the stock are particularly interested in the object of the meeting and are requested to attend.

MILTON A. PARSONS, President.

Dry Goods, Notions, &c., cheap for cash, at A. G. Toadvine's.

A YOUNG CAPTAIN DROWNED.—A sad case of drowning happened in the waters of the Chesapeake Bay, off Sharp's Island, about noon on Thursday last. Capt. John Bradshaw, son of Captain Andrew Bradshaw, of Deal's Island, while engaged in handling ropes on board of his boat, near the main boom, it suddenly jibed, striking him a fearful blow, knocking him far into the water. Those on board did all in their power to rescue him; but he sank beneath the waves and at last accounts his body had not been recovered.

Capt. Bradshaw was about 21 years of age, was highly respected, and his sudden death has cast a deep gloom over the community in which he resided. The boat on which he met his death is valued at $6,000, and was made a present to him a few months ago by his father.—Somerset Herald.

For the best Family Groceries, go to J. P. Owens & Co.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.—On Friday last, about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, near Barron Creek Springs, this county, Mr. Samuel Venables, son of Richard Venables, went into the woods with a cart, taking his gun along which he laid on his overcoat in the bottom of the cart. On arriving at the place where his cart was to be loaded, it became necessary to remove the gun, and on taking it out of the cart the hammer caught in the lining of the coat and falling exploded the cap, discharging the contents in his abdomen. He lingered about two hours in great pain, when death relieved him from his sufferings. The report of the gun was heard by a colored man near by who went at once to his assistance, and put him in his cart and carried him home, after which he sufficiently recovered to give an account of the sad accident. He was about twenty years old. His sad death has cast a gloom over the entire neighborhood.

The following was picked up in the street a day or two ago and handed to us by a party who says he heartily sympathizes with the writer: Bro. JACK.—How are you, any how? I'm well and busy trying to buy household and kitchen furniture as fast as our neighbors call and take 'em away. What one of our neighbors can't borrow ain't worth having. She steps in and just wants to take this and that, and by George, she gets everything, from a shoe string to a hair pin, and I expect every day she will want to "joss borrow one of my shirts," and in that case, as I have only one, I should have to keep my coat buttoned up all the time. However we are doing level best to keep the cook stove and table in the house, and the roof over our heads. The dishes and such things are nearly all gone now, but we don't like to be mean about little things, especially among our neighbors.

Write to us Jack. Disconsolately yours, J.

MARRIED.

SMITH—WRIGHT—Oct. 13th, 1875, by Rev. S. T. Ferguson, Mr. Mr. John H. Smith, of Sharptown, to Miss Ellen W. Wright, of Barron Creek, Md.

OBITUARY.

Left the scene of earth, on the evening of Nov. 5th, 1875, Samuel Venables, son of Richard Venables, Esq., aged nearly twenty years. The deceased was a young man of unusual intelligence, scarcely knew what it was to be sick, and had he lived till enfeebled with old age, must have been many pleasant days. His demise was of a serious character, being in the woods alone, and having his gun with him in a cart, he attempted to take the same therefrom, and by some means the right barrel was discharged, the contents taking effect in the abdomen. His screams were heard almost immediately, and he was at once taken to the house of his father, and medical assistance was soon in attendance, but without avail, as his life was fast ebbing out. About sunset his spirit winged its flight to that bourne from whence no traveler ever returns. Truly death is in the land. It sports with the philosophies of men and laughs them to scorn, and when his icy fingers enwrap this crumbling clay there is no hope outside of the Christian faith. I conversed with the deceased a few days previous to his death. He said that he never uttered an oath in his life. He was exceedingly amiable to all, and only had to be known to be loved and appreciated. It is not so shocking for a valetudinarian to be called away, but one who is in the morning of life with prospects for a bright and successful future, so lovely and gentle, is very different. He expressed a desire to live after seeing that he could not survive, and at the same time saying that he was fully prepared and no one has cause to say but that he laid gone to rest with the just man made perfect. As a son he was kind and obedient, as a brother he was affectionate, and as a friend he was affable and confidential, always making those with whom he associated happy and contented. His departure will be greatly and sadly recognized by his dear parents, brothers and sisters, and a long train of relatives and friends. But such is life.

While the gentle zephyr sighs its sweet and melodious song over his lonely grave, it can be said by the passer-by that in that tomb lies the body of a good and pure boy, and that he has left an example worthy of imitation. His body was interred at Quantico Sunday afternoon, under the auspices of Rev. Dr. Fulton, in the presence of a large concourse of people.

The writer of this humble tribute was a warm friend of the deceased, and though this is but feebly written, perhaps it will add something to his worth. With much respect,
M.
Barron Creek, Nov. 11th, 1875.

SANO CORPORE.—The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully noted. Let the stomach be in a slight degree distended, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in Ayer's Pills we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited such noble properties most wonderful. Their use is safe, and they are perfectly reliable in their action, and what is far better, ensure the full enjoyment of the true spirit here. We use them and know their value.—Fraser's (Ayer's) Pills.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Among the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than this factitious remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues throughout this country and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best physicians, established by the fact that CHERRY PECTORAL will do relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organ yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy, it is safe, and on which the public may rely for full protection. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is as sure to be without fail, as a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood. CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable for its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centered on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing such as, if neglected, would not have been beyond dispute. As a remedy, it is safe, and on which the public may rely for full protection. Agricultural.

Wintering Bees Successfully.

Correspondent says: In the long and cold winters apiarists are liable to be either from severe cold or from stores. I think in hives well filled with comb and supplied with sufficient stores, very little loss exists in leaving them upon their stand, where the sun may reach them and occasionally warm them up, to fly off, discharge themselves and return again to their hive.

But sometimes they are disappointed, and find unexpected loss. They are liable to such disappointments, pursue what plan they may.

Some dig a trench in a dry place of ground and bury themselves below the reach of frost, and sometimes succeed very well. I have been most successful in wintering them in a dry dark cellar, where no frost or light could trouble them. Thus located with ventilation, I have been able to approach them at any time in the winter. Weak swarms with little stores, I could approach and feed at any time when needed; and previous to removing them out in the spring, have them forward in the process of breeding, so as to have begun the increase in numbers, and be early in the season ready for labor.

A good piece of empty honey comb placed upon the top of the hive or breeding apartment, filled with honey, will be visited by them and the feed transferred at once to the hive and stored, and a little time will familiarize them to it so they will come as readily to their feed as domesticated animals, and as eagerly and quietly take it up. For a hive with frames or bars I have a feeder in which I place nearly a quart at once, and no bee having a chance to escape, though all may enter the feed box. Sugar from the bottom of a syrup barrel or from a molasses hogshead thinned and boiled so as to be of about the consistency of honey when cold, I have found to be very acceptable food and answering every desirable purpose.

Management of the Horse.

When the legs of a horse swell upon standing in the stable, it is an evidence of debility, general or local. It would be well to increase the food in quantity or quality. The following might also be of use, viz: Powdered sulphate of iron, one and a half ounces; gentian root, two ounces; chlorate of potassa, one ounce; mixed and divided in twelve powders. One of these given in cut feed, as little damp as possible, night and morning. Ground oats would be better for feed, than corn. Friction by rubbing with a coarse woolen cloth upon the parts would also be helpful.

When the animal is found, probably the day after his severe work and exposure, stiff and with "cold all over him," he could be comfortably clothed; if the limbs are chilly, flannel bandages will be desirable; warm washes and gruel will perhaps tempt him to eat and drink; the glass of warm whiskey and water which his master in like circumstances would prescribe in his own case is eminently suitable for the faithful servant, or a different stimulant may be tried in the form of an ounce of sulphuric ether and powdered gentian given in a pint of beer. In the washes or in draught also give an ounce of nitre and about two or three ounces of Epsom salts—a saline mixture which must be repeated for about three mornings and will help to restore to sound working order, both skin, kidneys, and bowels. So long as the patient remains dull and will not eat well, the ether and gentian, or some other such cordial, should be continued twice or three times a day. An airy, comfortable loose box will greatly hasten his recovery. Until the horse feeds well and is entirely free from soreness, stiffness, and pain, work is likely to make him as bad or worse than ever.

Draining a Farm.—Much discussion has been developed as to the best methods of draining land. Some dig ditches and fill them with the surplus stones found lying about the farm, either loosely over the fields or in useless fences that obstruct the free use of the mower and the plow. Others buy tiles and lay narrow ditches, being careful to cover the joints to prevent sand and loose dirt from washing in and filling up the water course. Others still, wishing to avoid so much labor in digging ditches, simply plow the land in ridges, leaving open ditches between, through which a portion of the surplus water will slowly settle away. All these methods are commendable, and will generally pay the whole cost of the work in a few years.

Protect the Birds.

Winter is now almost upon us, and with it comes the dull times, when the idle ones for want of something better to do, should a gun and march off to make war on the defenseless little birds which have worked so faithfully for the community in the past. Nothing is too small for these plunderers to kill, and from the robin down to the diminutive wren, are all mercilessly killed. Our Legislature at its last session passed what they were pleased to call a law for the protection of insectivorous birds, imposing a fine of two dollars for each and every offence, but to collect this fine a true bill had to be found by the Grand Jury and the case tried by the Circuit Court. It would cost the county about fifty dollars in each case. No one has ever been fined under its provisions and possibly no one ever will. The jackass who drew up the bill should draw up one more similar to it and then be taken out and shot by some prowler who he has actually licensed to kill and destroy all the small birds he meets. One of the first acts of the Legislature when it meets should be to pass a stringent bird law, and compel the county officers to enforce it. Make the fines heavy, forfeit the shooter's gun and give one half to the person whose evidence convicts him. Put a stop to night hunting for birds a sport, (if it may be called such) cease in the extreme, and which no true sportsman will indulge in. Whole flocks of quails are caught at a time in nets or else murdered with a shot gun. The thing can be stopped and should be. Allow no birds to be killed for market, and make it a venial offence for the railroad company to receive them for transportation. Game does not abound here in sufficient quantities to be killed for market, and if the practice is much longer continued, we shall soon see our game birds exterminated. We earnestly ask all farmers to prevent any man from gunning on his premises to kill for market. The parties who do so in this county are well known and could be easily warned not to trespass. Our farmers are all too much of gentlemen to refuse to allow a sportsman who hunts for pastime only the privilege of birding on their premises. Permission should first be asked, and our word for it, if you are a genuine sportsman and not a pot hunter, the request to hunt will seldom be refused. We believe that the judicious hunting of quail tends to their increase, as if the coveys are allowed to remain undisturbed, they will frequently stay together all the year and not mate off at all. We know this fact from experience. We have long been in favor of organizing a "Game Protection Association," under whose auspices such laws could be enacted as were needed, and whose members would assist the regular law officers in the discharge of their duties. Such associations now exist all over the country and the good they do is incalculable. We are perfectly aware of the fact that gunners as a general thing, dislike to write for the press, yet still we think that there are some few who would like to be heard in favor of the feathered tribe. To all such we say, send in your communications and make them brief and to the point.

We learn from the Baltimore Sun that on Wednesday last the schooner Thomas W. Worrell, belonging to Capt. T. W. H. White, of this county, collided with the Steamer Geo. Leary, and was sunk in fourteen feet of water. The schooner was in tow of the tug Joseph Zane, and the Leary was making for her wharf at the time of the collision. There was some misunderstanding in reference to the signals. The tug passed close of the schooner to the right, but the schooner, in going to the left, was struck and sunk. The schooner was light and ran partly on her side with masts and part of her hull out of the water. She was injured by the collision. The crew belong to this place.

Two Superannuated Systems.

There has long been a growing suspicion that the Maryland system of State tobacco warehouses has outlived the day of its necessity and usefulness. The like suspicion prevails in regard to what is known as the "city yard" in connection with the municipal administration of the city of Baltimore. Both of these institutions were very possible creations of the past, and have doubtless been of value in their day; but the progress of events has begotten improved modes of accomplishing its purposes for which they were created and hence among the various reforms which are mooted the State tobacco warehouses and the "city yard" ought and will probably receive attention, the one at the hands of the Legislature and the other through the direct agency of the municipal administration. It is not necessary that there should be allegation of anything corrupt in these institutions to justify the propriety of considerations for effecting a change; it is simply that the systems of public institutions has been found at this day not to be the best. The lesson of practical experience is well as in business, commercial as well as industrial, open to competition. In Louisville, Ky., the central market of a great tobacco-growing State, the business of warehousing tobacco is left to private enterprise, and as far as inspections go, to whatever extent they are deemed necessary, it is known that the tendency of commercial methods is to liberalize them and depend upon experts, whose only surety for business is capacity and character, for their accomplishment. In regard to municipal work, such generally as that which is performed through the agency of the "city yard" and its adjuncts, it would seem that the most of it could be best or most economically performed by contract. It is at least proper that this matter be inquired into, and it is probable that near about all the work required by the municipality should be done by contract. The building of the new city hall, the work on which was altogether executed by contract with most satisfactory results, demonstrates the value of the system to the public at large, both in respect of saving to the treasury and the moral influence which so great an example of honesty imparts. The matter of city work will thus be taken out of the domain of politics, and will be no longer an agency of party action and power. It is a matter with which no political party can be safely trusted. In New York it is now urged, in view of their woeful experience, that there is but one remedy for the bad state of things which has afflicted them, and that is the passage of a law providing that all municipal work be done by contract. This system insures the performance of better and cheaper work, and puts the laborers employed beyond the reach of demagogues. It is urged there that if the incoming Legislature wishes to do a good turn to the city it should pass a law making contracts obligatory for all labor done by the municipal authorities. It is known that not only has the "city yard" in Baltimore been a political machine, but also have the State tobacco warehouses, to this extent at least, that their chief positions have been always given as rewards to politicians, whatever party was in power in the State. These remarks have been suggested at the present moment by statements which we find in the Baltimore Price Current to the effect that complaints regarding the inspections of Maryland tobacco have been heard for a long time past from German houses. That paper says:

"With reference to Maryland leaf, a late Bremen letter remarks that much of the receipts turn out badly, compared with American samples, and heavy reclamations are the result. The American samples are not correctly drawn and it is time that the trade in Baltimore insist upon holding and making inspectors responsible for the samples they draw. Otherwise the sale of American samples will become impossible. Complaints of this character are frequently made by foreign correspondents, and it is earnestly hoped that the next Assembly of Maryland will take such action as will restore the good name of our market abroad."

This subject, as well as that of the "city yard" and city work generally,

Items of Interest.

All the Virginia City saloons are in running order again. The recuperative energy of whiskey is hard to beat.

One thousand dollars is the price for killing a rook in Kansas, and for killing a pretty woman in Illinois, "you pay your money and take your choice."

The latest inter-collegiate contests are as foot-ball. The Princeton twenty defeated the twenty of Columbia College on Saturday—8 to 2.

Dr. H. T. Helmhold is making a legal battle in the New York courts for his release from Bloomingdale Insane Asylum. His wife appeared by counsel to oppose his release.

George D. Prentice's only living descendant is a grandson, fourteen years of age, who bears the same name and is now canvassing the South for the forthcoming book of poems by his grand-father.

There was a severe snow storm in Northern New York on Monday. The snow fell to a depth of 12 inches at Buffalo, 12 inches at Plattsburg and 6 inches at Whitehall. An early closing of navigation on Lake Champlain is anticipated.

What the Democratic party ought to do, in Senator Bland's opinion, is to maintain its organization, to stand its time-honored principles, to obtain the confidence of country, to avoid no "important" issue, and to "totally disregard" the "personal ambitions of candidates."

The Indianapolis Herald feelingly remarks:

"The man who designed our State seal is dead. In the language of the Dutch poet, it is well. Any man who would try to make people believe a full-grown buffalo ball would deliberately rush up to a granger who was chopping down a tree at sunrise ought to die."

The recently-revived rumor that the United States are about to acquire more Mexican territory, is denied by despatch.

A telegram from Omaha reports the occurrence of a "most extraordinary storm" along the Union Pacific Railroad west of Green river during Saturday night. Sleet fell in such quantities that the telegraph wires were coated with ice to the thickness of a man's wrist. Snow also fell at Bitter Creek to a depth of twelve feet. The storm was moving east.

The vaccination physicians of the Brooklyn Board of Health have discovered that some of the small-pox cases reported were in houses where large quantities of clothing were being made up for dealers, and they have seized and destroyed the goods wherever found. It is believed the disease has been spread through infected clothing.

It is reported that the millers of Minnesota and Wisconsin will soon hold a meeting in Chicago for the purpose of endeavoring to make arrangements with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company for the exclusive transportation of their flour to the East during the winter. It is believed the millers can offer sufficient inducement to the company to keep it out of the Trunk line combination.

The steamer Albert, of Piloton, arrived Sunday morning from the Magdalen Islands, reports the ship Calcutta, from Quebec for Liverpool, coal laden, was wrecked on Grasse Isle on Sunday last, and twenty-two men of the crew and a lady passenger were drowned. The captain, three men and a boy were saved. Also, that the schooner Enterprise went ashore on Albricht Island on Wednesday 3rd inst. Her crew were saved. Both vessels will probably be a total loss.

There is death in the stockings.

A little girl in Chicago has been poisoned by wearing "sash-brown colored stockings," and the Tribune has had the coloring matter analyzed. The chemical found arsenic, which had been employed to oxidize the aniline dye, and had produced an alarming effect upon the skin. There is no necessity for using arsenic to produce brown color, and the dyer who got up those stockings deserves some stripes himself.

A little five-year-old friend, who was always allowed to choose the prettiest kitten for his pet and playmate, before the other things were done, was taken to his mother's sick room the other morning to see two tiny new twin babies. He looked reflectively from one to the other for a minute or two, then poking his chubby finger into the cheek of the plumpest baby, he said, decidedly, "save this one."

ANXIOUS.—"Is this the doctor's office?" inquired a man who pipped his head inside the apartment door. "No, sir—the next flight of stairs."

"Well, I'm too tired to go any further."

"The doctor says this morning, I wish you would tell him that my step-mother is dying and we'd like to have him call in if he gets time."

FOR SALE.—Three new iron Safes, Miller's and Marvin's make. Inquire at this office.
Mr. W. Sydney Gordy has entirely changed the appearance of his store room on Division street, preparatory to going into business himself.
The waters of Synepuxent Bay are liberally covered with wild fowl. About twenty Northern gunners are there enjoying the sport.
Mr. R. E. Powell is having a new fence built in front of his residence, and will also have a brick pavement placed down.
FURNITURE.—For fine cottage and chamber sets of Furniture, go to A. G. Toadvine's.
PRAECIDIO.—Elder F. A. Chick is expected to preach in the U. S. Baptist meeting-house to-morrow (Sunday) morning and night.
For Harness, Trunks, Satchels, Hides, Saddles, &c., go to A. G. Toadvine's.
Dr. L. S. Bell, local editor, has charge of the Advertiser this week, in the absence of the editor-in-chief, who has visited the cities of Baltimore and Philadelphia.
A Church Street Benedict asserts that "he requires a man who thoroughly understands himself to successfully write and take down a clothes line that a woman has put up."
All persons are requested to stop at the office of the Advertiser, at the corner of the city hall, in a supply of wood for their especial benefit.

DEATH.—Mr. Charles F. Daubell, a well known resident of this place died at the residence of his step father Mr. John White on Tuesday last. He leaves a wife and two children.
Newtown people have new neighbors, and not having the Bible doctrine, "Love your neighbor as yourself," very deeply instilled, are not much tickled therewith.
The obituary of Mr. Samuel Venables, published in our last issue was inadvertently signed "M." It was written by Mr. Josephus A. Wright, of Barren Creek Springs, and should have been signed "W."
Dry Goods, Notions, &c., cheap for cash, at A. G. Toadvine's.
Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup should be kept in every family. A slight cough, if unchecked, is often the forerunner of Consumption, and a timely dose of this wonderful medicine has rescued many from an early grave.
A down town young man, whose chief aim at the present time is to woo the fickle god, thinks that next to proposing to your sweetheart, the hardest thing in life is to ask the "old man's" consent. He has tried it, so speaks knowingly.
Messrs. John P. Owens & Co., have torn out the partition in the year of their store thus giving them much more available floor-space to meet the demands of rapidly increasing trade. Call and see his pretty things.
Not less than seven marriages will enliven the usual monotony of a dull winter in Salisbury. If we receive no written objections we think that in our next issue we shall publish the names of the parties as paired off, according to Madame Rumor.
A recently married man near this place, went with his mother-in-law a bottle of croton oil with instructions to take five drops daily. He says that when she comes to his house—she is so full of work that she can't sit still and he is disposed to gratify her taste to the utmost.
For the best Family Groceries, go to J. P. Owens & Co.
J. H. T. wishes it distinctly understood that he is not the Main Street merchant who makes such a bad out gunning. He says he killed three birds last week, and thinks he has good claims to be considered a fair shot. Can his companion make so good a showing?
FOR SALE LOW.—A choice, double twist barrels, breech-loading shot gun, 12 bore, 8 pounds weight, with all necessary fixtures. Just the thing for general gunning. For full particulars address
P. O. BOX 24, Salisbury, Md.
GONE TO CAROLINA.—The beautiful Summer duck has now left us for a more congenial climate. The rice fields of the Carolinas will be their home from now until next Spring. A few have kindly consented to spend the winter at our house, and have received numerous calls from an appreciative public.
NEW STORE.—Messrs. Brewington & Dorman, our enterprising hardware merchants have started a branch store at Crisfield, with Mr. Wm. E. Brewington of this place as manager. The Crisfield folks will now have an opportunity of getting hardware and stoves at much lower prices than ever before.
We shall publish on our first page next week the lecture delivered by Rev. Dr. Fulton before the Teachers' Institute, which met in Salisbury week before last. The publication is by request of the teachers, and we would advise persons getting the paper to give it a careful perusal, as it will amply repay the time and trouble.
Mr. Marshall Tevis of the firm of A. M. Collins & Co. card and printers blanks manufacturers, Philadelphia, was down this week for a few days shooting. The B. Brothers "put him through," and with lots of walking and not much shooting he is pretty well satisfied with Wicomico birding.
We did not think that our town fathers were in earnest in regard to the plank sidewalks on Division Street. Some persons were compelled to put theirs down, while a few favored ones are permitted to do as they please. We hope that they will see the point in this and attend to the few gaps on that street.
The Philadelphia Times after a very seasonable career of eight months made its bow to the public last week in an entirely new suit of type and much enlarged. The Times is without a doubt the best daily newspaper ever published in Philadelphia and deserves the hearty support it has received.
The peninsular papers are all bragging of their big boats. Now we are willing to bet liberally that Salisbury has the biggest boat on the Shore. It is called by some uncharitable persons the dead beat. Since writing the above Mr. Elijah Johnson has left with us a boat of the Blood Turnip variety which weighs nine and a half pounds. It is fifteen inches long and three feet in circumference.

FOR SALE CHEAP.—Two first class Parlor Organs—Pianos and Estey's. Also an elegant Staff Piano. Inquire at this office.
MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT.—A concert of vocal and instrumental music was held in the M. E. Church at Lewistown, Del., on Saturday evening last. About seventy-five of Prof. A. A. Hearn's students from Salisbury, Mt. Zion, Delmar, and Lewistown were present, also Prof. Wm. A. C. Williams and wife, from Delmar. The entertainment was a good one and duly appreciated by the audience.
The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Salisbury Circulating Library will take place in the Library Room, on Tuesday, Dec. 14th, 1875, at 7 o'clock P. M. A full attendance is desired, as matters of importance will be brought before the meeting. The Librarian reports the Library in a prosperous condition. Over 550 volumes now on the shelves. Let our citizens take the stock. Only $10.00 per share.
Messrs. Moody and Sankley will begin evangelizing Philadelphia next Sunday. An immense building has been prepared at an expense of over twenty thousand dollars, and all things look bright for the success of the workers. If only a certain editor who is now in the city of Brotherly Love would spend a few more days there, he might experience feelings which would be new to him.
A petition asking for the contribution of such a sum of money as the signer felt able and willing to pay toward the purchase of a book and ladder apparatus for the town was shown us sometime ago. Since then we have heard nothing of it. We do earnestly hope that the gentlemen who had the thing in charge will not let the matter drop, but instead will push it through to a favorable termination.
MARRIED.
HORNER—HURLEY.—In Wetupin Neck by the Rev. J. G. Fournier, Mr. Louis A. Horner, to Miss Harriet A. Hurley, all of Dorchester Co., Md.
MASON—STEWART.—On Tuesday, Nov. 16th, at the residence of the bride's father, Baltimore, Md., by the Rev. N. M. Browne, Charles T. Mason to Emma S., only daughter of Capt. John H. Stewart.
HALO CORPUS.—The inflection of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in a slight degree distended, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in Ayer's PILLS we have so perfect a combination admirably adapted for relief. They have saved the lives of many who have exhibited stomachic derangement most wonderful. Their use is by keeping the system in perfect order, promoting regularity, and giving the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—Flourish (Knox) Pioneer.

TRUSTEE'S SALE
STANDING TIMBER!
By virtue of a deed of trust from John H. Hayman, the undersigned, as Trustee, will offer at Public Sale at the Court House Door, in the town of Salisbury, on Saturday, December 11th, 1875, at 2 o'clock, P. M., the following lots of standing timber: Lot No. 1, known as the "Swamp," situated in Wicomico Co. and on the north side of the county road leading from Benjamin Livingston's to Salisbury. This lot contains about 400,000 FEET
of Oak and Pine Timber, more or less.
Lot No. 2, situated on the west side of a new county road leading from Bethel to Wm. Hayman's, and adjoining the lands of Wm. Hayman and Wesley Toadvine, contains more or less. The purchaser has the right to cut all timber on Lot No. 1 down to 12 inches in diameter on the stump; on Lot No. 2 the privilege of cutting all the timber. I will also sell the land of Lot No. 2 after the timber is sold. The purchaser of the timber on Lot No. 2 to have eighteen months to cut off said timber, and the purchaser of the timber on Lot No. 1 to have three years to cut and remove his timber.
20 ACRES,
Terms of Sale.
One-fourth cash on the day of sale, balance in three equal instalments of $12 a 18 months, on bond with approved security, bearing interest from the day of sale.
FRANCIS A. HAYMAN,
Nov. 20-21, Trustee.
To All Whom it may Concern.
This is to give notice that the partnership heretofore existing between Wm. E. Brewington and E. D. Ellegood, trading as Brewington & Ellegood, in Salisbury, county of Wicomico and State of Maryland, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent, to take effect on and after Nov. 6th, 1875.
R. D. Ellegood will close up the business of the firm, and all persons are requested to call and settle at once.
Wm. E. BREWINGTON,
R. D. ELLEGOOD, partners
trading as Brewington & Ellegood.
R. D. Ellegood takes this opportunity of thanking the public for past patronage, and hopes to merit an increase of the same. He will continue the business at the old stand, head of Main St.

By and By.

By and by the roses wither,
By and by the leaves will fall,
By and by the crimson autumn
Sheds its lustrous over all.
By and by our hopes will brighten,
Though the swallows homeward fly,
And false friends who seem to love us,
May forget us by and by.

may change. His sonship never changes. That relationship is fixed by the law of nature. The State cannot supersede the parent except by subverting that law. Whenever you base any system of public schools on the supposed right of the State to educate its citizens for its own purposes, in its own fashion and by its own agents in defiance or in disregard of the rights and feelings of the parent, then I am the enemy of any such system.

Rather would I have my child grow up without any school education at all than I would have him receive such an education as that which ancient Sparta gave to her citizens. As the helper or coadjutor of the parent in this work, I welcome the State—but as the superior of the parent, I repudiate it. Let the State compel the unwilling parent, or aid the indigent one to do his duty to his child, and I am content. But let it go no further. Let it not intrude into the sacred precincts of the family nor offer itself as a substitute for nature's own appointed agency.

I insist then, that the education of children is primarily obligatory upon parents. If so, the teacher is but the assistant of the parent, called in to do, under his direction and by his authority, so much of the work as he may be unable to do personally. Then has not that teacher a right to expect all the help and all the encouragement the parent can give? Can the parent withhold this—or can he put hindrances in the way of the teacher without marring his own work—without standing in his own light? What master or employer is foolish enough to deliberately hinder his servants or employees in their service? Do we not all see that to do this is to labor for his own loss? And when the parent gives this help and encouragement who is more profited than he himself? The children are better taught for it, and in the children's improvement the wise parent finds his profit for making the work easy and pleasant to his faithful servant—the teacher.

The parent is himself a teacher. He is so by the same law that made him a parent. He is the teacher of his own children, appointed to do so by God himself. The family was the first school, and the one that shall exist to the end of time. No improvements in education or educational machinery will ever supersede it. This educational feature was one of the purposes for which this family institution was devised. In this family school the father and mother are the divinely appointed teachers. This appointment they cannot refuse. The duty it lays upon them they cannot evade. From the responsibility it entails they cannot escape; neither their ignorance nor their incompetency, nor their recusancy frees them from the obligation of that office. And they are good teachers, the best of all teachers, even when they know it not, and when they care not to be so—good in the sense of teaching lessons that are never forgotten.

Would that I could say good—in the sense of teaching only such lessons as are worthy of being remembered. Into this school all men are born, or ought to be, and those who are born into the world without being born into a lawful family, not only come into the world with a stain of illegitimacy upon them, but in an educational point of view, labor under a social disadvantage from the start, while those who are born into a lawful family early lose this advantage by the death of parents who are everywhere, and by all men deemed peculiarly unfortunate.

It is as a member of some lawful family that every child's education is begun, or ought to be begun. The foundation of its character is laid in the family. The direction of its mind for good or evil is given there. When it comes to an age proper for being sent to school it is not subjected to a new process. It is only subjected to a continuation of the old. The teacher is not an educator as distinguished from the parent. He only differs from him in teaching other branches of knowledge. With this exception he but takes that part in the work of education which the parent commits to his special charge. The child has received the most important part of his education before he goes to school at all, and what the parent has made him, the teacher finds him.

But the educational influence of the home does not cease when the child goes to school. It continues all the while he is an inmate of that home, so when the teacher receives the pupil he does not receive sole and individual influence and authority over him. The parent still divides these with the teacher. Even during the school term the child spends more of his time at home than at school—that is, if his home is what it ought to be. Thus the education of the home goes on simultaneously with that of the school and must necessarily affect it for good or for evil. The parent cannot separate himself from the teacher in this work. He has only the choice of being a help or a hindrance. This association then should give him a fellow feeling with the teacher, should originate something like a professional sympathy between them. And when we remember that the parent's interest in this work never ceases till his child has reached maturity, while the teacher's ceases when any cause the pupil is removed from his authority—and also, that, while the parent's interest is concentrated upon a very few objects, viz: his own child or children, the teacher's is divided among a large number—we see that it is much more for the interest of the parent than it is for that of the teacher that this sympathy should exist between them, and should produce and keep up a mutual interchange of good offices in their common work.

So far the question has been one of duty. I trust it has been made sufficiently clear to you. The next is one of method, and will require that we should enter more into details. The question now is how to do it, and this will make it two fold. 1st, before the child goes to school at all—and 2nd, while it is going to school. The first is the work of preparation—the second is one of co-operation.

1st. Before the child is of age to go to school it is your part to prepare him for it. The teacher is a workman for him. The teacher is his workman. The finished scholar is his workmanship. The quality of that workmanship will depend largely upon the material on which the workman's skill is expended. If that material be poor, no skill, no industry will result in good workmanship. The original poverty or perversity of the material will show itself from beginning to end. Now the teacher has no choice here. He has to take just such material as parents send him, and make the best he can of it, and if some of you knew what rough cubes he sometimes has to lick into shape you would wonder how he ever undertook the task at all, rather than blame him for not succeeding better. It is your part to provide this material, and provide that it be of the best possible quality. You can do this. It is true that every child has a certain innate disposition, and for this the parent may or may not be responsible. But when we think how early that child come under parental influence, how constantly it is subjected to that influence, and how susceptible it is of it, we are not going too far when we say that the parent can make the child just what he will. He can, if he begin in time, form in the child such dispositions as will prepare it for yielding readily to school discipline and receiving readily the lessons that the teacher may desire to impart.

And the first and most important of these mental habits is a disposition to obey promptly and cheerfully all commands coming from competent authority. Teach your child to obey you instantly and without questioning. Do not allow it to ask why or wherefore—Do not permit it to say "By and by." After the order has been obeyed explanations may be given—but not before. Be early in expecting this obedience. Be constant and regular in enforcing it, and when the child is old enough to go to school it will have learned the lesson which lies at the very root of education. The teacher will have no trouble in having his orders obeyed—or if he has, it will be because he does not know his business.

If you neglect this, and train up your child to be disobedient, self-willed, and rebellious to you, what can you expect but that he will be all this to his teacher. And if he is, the first thing that teacher has to do is to break him in, to undo all that you have done, and to make that child obedient and submissive, by gentle means if he can, but by forcible if he must.—Now if he has to use force for his purpose of course there will be trouble, and if you, instead of supporting the teacher, blame him and support the rebel there will be new trouble. But even if there is none that really lies upon you—and you have compelled him to expend a portion of time and energy in accomplishing that task which otherwise would have been free for other and more pleasant work. The behavior of a child at school, particularly when it goes there first, is a fair test of the state of home discipline. The child that is respectful and obedient to his parents will be the same to his teacher—the one that is rough, rude, stubborn and unmanageable at school may fairly be presumed to be all this at home. School difficulties usually have their origin in the neglect of home duties.

Again. Be careful not to prejudice the child against the school before he goes to it. Take it for granted he is to go there as soon as he is old enough, and strive to impress him with the idea that it will be a promotion for him, that he will find school almost if not quite as pleasant as his home, and the teacher quite as good to him as his father and mother. Do this and there will be no need of forcing when the time comes for him to go—particularly if his older brothers or sisters go with him. There will be no need of bribery to get him to go. The trouble will be to make him wait till he is old enough. He will be as proud of his first primer or of his first slate and pencil as he ever was of his first pair of boots or his first clasp knife. He will go with dancing feet and greet the teacher with bright and confiding looks. How delighted a teacher is to get a pupil thus prepared to love and trust him you may imagine—the teacher knows and only regrets that he knows it so rarely.

But some parents thoughtlessly pursue a different course. If they speak of the school at all in the presence of the little one, they speak of it as a place of banishment, or as a sort of juvenile penitentiary, and the teacher as a sort of constable, armed with a formidable rod for bad children. When they speak thus it is usually when out of temper or patience with some escapade of the little rebels, and the school and the teacher are invoked to relieve them of such troubles. The culprit was threatened with being sent to school where a discipline more severe than that at home will bring them to their senses, and teach them the difference between the harsh, unloving pedagogue, and the gentle ruling rule of the parent. Now a child accustomed to hear the school and the teacher spoken of in this style necessarily fears them before coming under their authority. It dreads the thought of going to school. The teacher is as terrible to its imaginations as any of the vicious goblins and "suld Clouties," with which nurses in by-gone days used to frighten their charges. What wonder if you have to whip or bribe that child to go to school and if when it arrives there it is scared out of its little wits! What wonder if the teacher finds a difficulty in soothing its fears and winning its confidence, and persuading it that it has nothing to fear if it will only be good and obedient. Avoid that error by all means. The child coming under the influence of an able and conscientious teacher may be disabused of these erroneous and hurtful ideas, but in many cases it either never gets rid of them at all, or they develop into that mischievous notion that the teacher and the pupil are natural antagonists and the usual relation between them is one of open or concealed warfare. The teacher is to rule and teach, the pupil is to obey the teacher as often and as long as he is smart enough and bold enough to do it. What such a notion gets fixed in a pupil's head fore-wells to all hope of success or comfort in his education.

2. All the while your child is attending school you should co-operate heartily and systematically with the teacher. The pupil should never suspect any antagonism or any opposition of interest between you and the teacher. He should be made daily sensible that both are working together to the same end, and that any trouble given to one will be trouble given to both, and that the disappointment of either will be that of the other also. And to this end be especially careful to encourage your child with which many parents lend a favorable ear to such complaints as a sign of the most irritating of all the annoyances with which teachers are familiar. Now I advise you never listen to such complaints at all. Stop them in the very utterance. Take it for granted that the teacher is right and that the child wrong. I know it is very hard for a parent to shut his ears against a child's complaints, but love itself dictates that we should do so in this case. I know it is hard to believe that your child is telling you of an untruth, but if he never did so in any other instance you have reason to believe that he is doing so now. No man, not even an adult, is a reliable witness in his own case. How much less a child, with his little experience—his little self-control, and his strong animal nature! No man should be condemned in his absence, or on ex parte evidence. Shut your ears inexorably against such complaints. To do so is justice to the teacher and mercy to your child. Mercy to your child, I say, and I say it advisedly for, though it is possible that his complaint may be just, and that by listening to it you may save him from undeserved punishment, it is certain that to encourage him will tend to plant and develop in him some of the meanest traits of character you can name. It will tend to unman him from his boyhood, to make him a coward, a sneak, and a liar. Better that his teacher should give him a canning every day he goes to school, that he should have half a dozen floggings every week and be whipped every time, that he should be fagged as hard as any boy by you, than that his parents should teach him to seek redress for his supposed wrong by ways unbecoming to the weak or the cowardly.

Trust the very first complaints that come to you this and you will find when the time comes for him to

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1875.

VICE PRESIDENT HENRY WILSON, at his room in the Capitol at Washington last Monday morning, aged 63 years. This is the second death of a Vice President while in office. Wm. R. King, of Alabama, was elected in 1852 and died soon after. This present year two persons elected to that office have died, Johnson and Wilson.

Next speaker of the U. S. House of Representatives, seems to be one of the vexed questions with the politicians just now. Cox, of New York, Randall, of Pennsylvania, and Kerr, of Indiana, are the most prominent with chances in favor of Kerr; while ex-Governor Walker, of Virginia seems to be looming up. While we like Randall and Kerr very much and would like to see either of them successful in any laudable undertaking, yet we decidedly prefer Gov. Walker for the position of speaker of the House.

The New Senate.

The new Senate has some peculiar features. Including the four Senators who were re-elected, it contains twenty-five new members. The four who were re-elected are Thurman and Bayard, Democrats, and Hamlin and Edmunds, Republicans. The other twenty-one are new men—an unusual number.

Among the most conspicuous of those who disappear are Sumner—if it be proper to include him in the list—Schurz, Carpenter, Fenton, Scott, Pratt, Stewart, Buckingham, and Chandler. Republicans, with Stockton and Hamilton, Democrats Sumner's seat, after having been temporarily occupied by Washburn, permanently falls to Devereux. Schurz is succeeded by Cockrell, who was a general in the Confederate army. He is an imaginative orator, and in depth and brilliancy will not compare with his predecessor, Cameron of Wisconsin, who takes the place of Carpenter, is understood to be a man of some mark, but as a lawyer and a debater he will not take rank with the man whom he hadly beat in the Legislature. Kernan, the successor of Fenton, is among the foremost members of the bar in the interior of New York. Wallace, who fills Scott's chair, is an acute politician of the Pennsylvania type. McDonald, who displaces Pratt, is one of the ablest Democrats in Indiana. Stewart makes way for Sharon, the rich miner, who lives in San Francisco, but represents Nevada as a rotten borough. Eaton, who takes the vacant seat of Buckingham, has long stood at the head of the Connecticut Democracy. Christianity, who drove out Zack Chandler, was Chief Justice of Michigan when elected, and is a learned lawyer. Randolph, who follows Stockton, is a man of about the same caliber, the successor of Hamilton is Whyte, who has been Governor of Maryland, and is the grandson of the famous William Pinkney, one of the great men of the last generation.

Upon the whole, perhaps the eleven new Senators make good the places of their predecessors. The only other new Senators of much mark are McMillan of Minnesota, who has been Chief Justice of that State; Withers of Virginia, who was a general in the Confederate army, and since that time Lieutenant Governor; Burnside, a major-general of volunteers, and for two or three terms Governor of Rhode Island; and Booth, recently Governor of California, largely engaged in commercial pursuits on the Continent, and holding an independent position in politics.

In the last Senate the Republicans had fifty-three members, including Shure, Fenton, and Hamilton of Texas; who, at one time, counted as Liberals. The Democrats had twenty members, including Tipton of No. Dakota, who was formerly a Liberal. This gave the Republicans thirty-three majority with one vacancy in Tennessee.

In the present Senate the Republicans have forty-three members, and the Democrats will have twenty-nine as soon as the seat of Ferry of Connecticut, just deceased is filled, giving the Republicans a majority of fourteen, Gov. Booth standing as an Independent, and the vacancy in Louisiana still continuing.

An interesting question arises in regard to the future. At the close of the Administration on the 4th the Democrats will gain five of the seats now held by the Republicans, which will be equal to a Democratic gain of ten. If the Democrats can in the mean time fill the Louisiana vacancy, this will give them a gain of eleven, and thus reduce the Republican majority of fourteen in the present Senate down to a majority of three in the next. But the results of the Presidential election may materially change these calculations concerning the Senate which will come in with the new Administration.

For some time past we have noticed this sentence over a column of the Salisbury Advertiser—"The largest circulation of any paper on the lower Peninsula." It is all very well for the Advertiser to talk this way, but what we want is proof, and here by challenge the Advertiser to a comparison of circulations. How shall it be done, Advertiser, to determine the number of bona fide subscribers to our papers.—Crisfield Leader.

Bring up your books, and exhibit the same to our inspection, and ours shall be at your pleasure. Examine, and if you have any doubt, examine the postmaster's receipt book for the weight of mails, and if we do not beat you, both home and abroad, we will advertise you as having the largest circulation, not only on the lower Peninsula, but on the Eastern Shore.

Not Charley Ross.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., November 23.—It has now been ascertained positively that the boy found with a woman in Newtown is not Charley Ross. The woman is the daughter of a deaconed man named Abaah Bradley, who has for years lived in a hut in the East Haven woods. She has tramped for a year past, taking the child with her in search of work in all kinds of weather. She was married to a man named Dolph, in Guilford, where about five years ago, as certified by the physician who attended her, the child who so remarkably resembles Charley Ross was born. Having a longing for Dolph, who deserted her, she calls herself and boy Bradley. She has adopted her father's long practice of living in huts in the woods. This only the Ross excitement here.

The Ocean's Victims.

QUEBEK, November 22.—A telegram received to-day states that four vessels, bound for the Magdalen Islands with supplies, have been lost with many lives, and it is feared the rest of the fleet have suffered the same fate. The telegram asks the government to dispatch a steamer immediately for Pictou with provisions, otherwise a large portion of the inhabitants will be in a state of starvation.

A Nice Specimen of "Jersey Justice."

TRENTON, November 23.—George W. Patterson, ex-member of the Assembly from Monmouth county and ex-collector of the same county, and who was tried for the embezzlement of $13,000 while filling the latter office and convicted, has been sentenced to only five months imprisonment in the county jail and to pay a fine of $1,000.

LONDON, November 23.—A quantity of wrecked stuff has been seen off the coast of Wales, including a life-buoy marked "Saladin Donnelly," and it is believed that the brig Saladin, from Bull river, S. C. for Bristol has foundered and all hands lost.

VIRGINIA ANNUAL CONFERENCE M. E. CHURCH SOUTH.—The Virginia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South met at Danville on Thursday, 18th inst, but up to Monday the proceedings consisted chiefly in the routine work of hearing reports, financial and statistical, from the various pastoral charges. On Saturday a resolution was introduced declaring against the participation of any clerical member of the conference, traveling or local, in political canvassing, or the lending of their names as candidates for any political office. The resolution was laid over.

The Texas Democratic State convention will meet at Galveston on the 24th of January, to nominate candidates

Death of the Vice-President.

The death of the Vice-President of the United States, Hon. Henry Wilson, which is announced to-day, has come upon the country as a solemn surprise, for, notwithstanding his late serious illness, it had been supposed that he was steadily recovering, and Washington dispatches, published only yesterday morning, mentioned that he had so far regained his strength as to give attention to current political events. We publish elsewhere a sketch of the life of this eminent member of the Senate and distinguished public man. For thirty-five years he has taken an active part in politics, and has interwoven himself with the history of his country. From the beginning of his career Mr. Wilson identified himself with anti-slavery, and at the time of his death, was engaged upon the history of what he called the "Slave Power." It does not appear, however, that he was at any time a fanatic of the Garrison order, or a sentimentalist like Mr. Sumner, but while no doubt sincerely in favor of abolition, was also an astute politician, who observed intelligently the drift of opinion and events. He was elected twenty years ago to the Senate of the United States from Massachusetts, and took part in all its important debates, and, though not an eloquent man, or noted for power in argument, always bore himself consistently and with fair credit. He was one of the most industrious members of that body, and was indeed always known for his capacity of persistent and untiring labor. It is probable that his almost unprecedented habits of hard work had much to do with impairing the strength of his system and hastening his premature death. It is but just to the memory of Mr. Wilson to say that, while one of the earliest and most persevering of the anti-slavery leaders, he does not appear to have cherished any personal bitterness or vindictiveness to his political or sectional opponents, and that his spirit since the war, especially of late years, towards the South, has been moderate and conciliatory, though his opposition to the democracy as a party has always been very bitter.

Mr. Wilson was one of the many in this country who have raised themselves from poverty and obscurity to the high places of the land. His career, viewed in this light, is alike remarkable and admirable. From the shoemaker's bench he worked his way, as did Andrew Johnson, from the tailor's bench, by his own unaided powers, to the Vice-Presidency of the United States, and was a prominent name among his political friends for the next presidency, which no doubt he was capable of filling with credit to himself and advantage to the country. It may be added that his private life was believed to be pure and honorable, so that personal friends and opponents. Mr. Wilson was in the sixty-third year of his age.—Baltimore Sun, Nov. 25.

Duty of the Democratic Party.

Senator Thos. P. Bayard, of Delaware, in a conversation with a writer for the N. Y. Tribune a short time since, gave his views at some length on the outlook for the Democratic party, from which we quote the following sensible remarks: Discussions in regard to its action would be at this time, of course, premature. The duty of the Democratic party in the mean time is to maintain its organization by insisting upon an adherence to its time honored and constitutional principles. Its great object should be to obtain the confidence of the country, and the only way to do this is to prove that they deserve the confidence of the country. There should be no avoidance of any important issue, and the personal ambitions of candidates should be totally disregarded, and the interest and welfare of good government should alone be kept in view. The Democratic party should not only seem to be, but in fact, the trustworthy guardian of the nation's honor and credit and of the just interests of every citizen. The country is sick of the low tone which has characterized President Grant's administration in almost every department, and the better classes of his own party are as sick of it as any of us; but, unless they feel sure that a change of administration is to produce real reform and not expose the country to new dangers; they will probably take no action against his reelection. I think that Gen. Grant's reelection, in the face of his utter unfitness for the place he occupies, and his marvelous incapacity to appreciate the high nature of the trust of power and its responsibility, would cause us to despair of the capacity of our people for self-government, and, indeed, of the continuance of civil and religious liberty in this country.

form. The candidates were Alexander S. Dill, rep., and George W. Cate, dem. Cate held the certificate but the case was sent to the courts on some local question. Both men agreed to abide by the decision of the Supreme Court of the State.—The court decided in favor of Dill, although, as before stated, Cate held the Governor's certificate of election. Dill has since died. The questions for the House to decide are whether Cate is entitled to the seat, to whom the salary belongs to the time of Dill's death, and whether a new election is necessary.

not be troubled with many. They will cease and that fairly. All occasion for them will cease. The pupil will go back to school with the impression that his parent thinks the teacher can do no wrong, and finding all his efforts to set the two at variance on his account of his avail he will make up his mind to do his duty, and when he fails to take his punishment as meekly as he may. When a boy has come to this conclusion he is not likely to be punished very often, and he is not likely to be punished unjustly. But suppose you have reason to believe, either from the report of your child or from any other source of information, that the conduct of the teacher has not been what it ought to have been, (for I do not assert that teachers are infallible, nor yet that they are irresponsible) how are you to seek for redress? How are you to protect your child? Go directly to the teacher yourself. Remember, you and he are partners and friends. Go to him then in a friendly spirit, not angrily—not as an aggrieved person—not as a judge.—State the facts as you understand them. Ask an explanation. In nine cases out of ten you will be met in the same spirit. Explanations will be given. The other side of the case will be presented to you. The supposed wrong will either disappear or be redressed. The mistake, if there was any, will be confessed and apologized for. Everything will be set right, and the teacher and the parent will be firmer friends and closer allies for this conference. Teachers, as a rule, are too sensible of the comfort of having parents on their side to resent any such approaches made in this direct, fair, and friendly spirit.

But supposing the teacher to be sufficiently wrong-headed to resent this approach on the part of the parent, to get into a passion, to refuse all explanation, to persist in the wrong—what then? Complain to the school officers. You have a good case against that teacher. Such wrong-headedness on his part proves him to be not the man for the place. Demand his removal legally and by the proper authority.

But the very worst means you can adopt is to seek redress through or be means of your child—to send angry messages or threats to the teacher by your child—or to find fault with the teacher or to call him to account in the presence of your child. See the child from all such tussles. His nature is too delicate—too precious—to be subjected to any such strain. Let him know nothing about it. This will save him from serious moral injury, and also save the teacher from being insulted in the presence of those whose respect is most valuable to him.

Again, send your child to school punctually and regularly. Going to school is the pupil's business, quite as much as going to the store or to the office or the field is yours. If punctuality and regularity are essential to your business, equally so are they to that of teacher and pupil. If interruption and irregularity will injure your business, it will injure theirs. No man should be more punctually and regularly than the teacher. But this will avail nothing unless the pupil is there also. The teacher and pupil are as necessary to each other as the bow and the string. If either is wanting, there is no school.

Now it is your part to see that your child is present thus punctually and regularly—that no light cause makes him tardy or keeps him away even for a day. One day's absence interrupts a lesson or puts a pupil back a step—and many such absences may make a whole session barren of permanent results. For this the teacher is not to blame. He cannot teach your child if you do not send him to be taught. He can't teach him regularly and continuously if you send him only when you have nothing for him to do at home.

Many parents are very careless in this matter. They are always ready to indulge their children in their wish to stay at home. They are always ready to employ them on errands or on work which will make them late for school or keep them away from it. They do not seem to realize that keeping them from school is any great loss. It is only one day, or at most two days. But when the one day or two days come every week, a large part of the school year is lost, and the rest is rendered almost useless. Then the effect is evident in the child falling behind those of its mates who had started with it, but who had attended regularly. Then the parent blames the teacher, saying either that he can't teach at all, or that he gives more attention to other children than to his. Irregularity and dilatoriness are bound to make themselves felt sooner or later—and for them the parent and not one else is to blame.

But how if this irregularity proceeds from the pupil himself? If he is a dabbler to go to school, he is either sent by the way or plays truant? Who is to blame then? Not the teacher. It is not his business to bring the child to school but to teach him when he is there. It is the parent who is to remedy the evil as best he may, or confess himself culpable or weak if he cannot. But the parent who makes it a point of sending his child to school punctually and regularly—who allows no trifle to interfere with his child's attendance, will rarely be troubled with truant playing children, and if he is he will find a way of putting a stop to the practice. Truants, i. e., incorrigible ones, are always found to be the children of parents who do not care whether school keeps or not, except when their children are in the way. Again, take an active interest in your child's studies. Show him that you know what he is about, and that you are observing whether he is progressing or lagging behind. Praise him when he is doing well, but not in such a way or to such an extent as will minister to his vanity, or make him work only to be praised. Blame him when he is careless or inattentive, but not so heavily as to discourage him, or make him fancy that he is too stupid to learn. Help him when you can to get his lessons at home, but not so far as to save him the trouble of thinking and studying for himself. Listen, not only patiently but interestedly, when he has anything to tell you about his studies or his progress, and answer to the best of your ability, any proper question he may put to you concerning his work. Let him feel that you are as interested in his studies as he is or can be—that you are pleased when he does well—that you are grieved when he does ill—that you are anxious to have him reap the full benefit of the institution of which he is a pupil. Do this and you will not fail to arouse in him an ambition which will go as far as any skill or labor of the teacher to make him a good scholar.

Many parents fail here—and particularly many fathers. From them this interest is more valuable than from the mothers. Their praise is usually worth more, and their blame more dreaded than the mothers', and yet this power many of them deliberately throw away. They leave home influences entirely with the mother. When night comes and supper is over and the children draw around the table or the fire to study their lessons for the next day, the mother may be there, striving among the multitude of other cares to help this one with her arithmetic, and hear that one say her geography. But the father—where is he? At his business, you say. Not a bit of it. It is past his business hours. He is gossiping at the street corner—or at the post office—or he is loafing in some store, preventing the tired clerks from putting up the shutters—or he is at the debating club—or the political meeting or the Lodge. (We will not mention places of resort in which it is to be presumed that you, gentlemen, are strangers.) He is not where he ought to be for at least a portion of every evening, with his wife and children. He is not where he can show that he is interested in his children's studies. I would that I could persuade you, gentlemen, to be more at home in the evenings than you are—to be better acquainted with your own families than you are. Believe me you can be of far more use to your country there than you would be if you were in Congress or in the Cabinet. You little know how much you lose in pleasure and in power by such absence from your own households. I have heard of a certain public man who, on being incapacitated by sickness for public business, congratulated himself that now, after having been married for so many years, he had at last found time to get acquainted with his wife. And some of you, gentlemen, whose business does not press hard, are, I fear, as ignorant on this subject as he was. Let us hope that you will not wait for a broken leg or a fit of the gout to compel you to this very necessary study.

These, then, fathers and mothers, are some of the ways in which you can help or hinder in the work of your children's education. If you have been hinderers I trust you have conscience enough to acknowledge your fault and grace enough to amend it. If you have helped—then I trust you will continue to do so more and more, being assured that you will not help in vain. May you have wisdom to recognize your duty, and courage to perform it in the face of all difficulties and discouragements. In due time you will reap if you faint not. The power given you is a great one. The charge committed to you is a precious one. May you so use that power and so discharge that trust that your children will rise up and call you blessed.

NOTE TO THE TEACHERS.—You may miss here some things that you heard from me in the Court House. You may find some things here that you did not hear there. But such differences are only such as might be expected to exist between a spoken address and the same written out from memory and from very scanty notes two weeks after it was spoken. I am persuaded you will find the address as published substantially the same as that which was delivered in your hearing.—W. F.

"A Repository of Fashion, Pleasure, and Instruction."
Harper's Bazar. ILLUSTRATED. Notes of the Press. The Bazar is edited with a combination of tact and talent that we seldom find in any journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Transfer.

The Bazar commences in every number of the household—the children by doll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by the fashion-plates in cuttings, to the most prudent matron by the patterns for the children's clothes, to paternal families by its careful directions for a comfortable dinner and luxurious dressing-gowns. In the reading-matter of the Bazar is uniformly of great excellence. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the domestic enjoyment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

In its way there is nothing like it. Fresh and trustworthy as a fashion guide its stories and essays, its poetry and music, are all contributing to the mind.—Chicago Evening Journal.
