With this number the ADVERTISER enters upon the tenth year of its existence. Like most country journals it has had its days of adversity, and has had to struggle for a support against considerable competition. The ground over which it has extended its outlines of circulation has been contested by able competitors, and while its cotemporaries flourish it traveled on the even tenor of its way, not anxious of their greatness or prosperity, confident that patient labor alone would accomplish success. In no other calling is this maxim more certainly true than in the publication of a newspaper. It is not a work that can be taken up and laid aside at pleasure, and he who lays his hand to this mighty engine must know that he has assumed a responsibility of no mean importance. If it rains, if it snows, if it blows, or if not a cloud obscures the burning rays of the sun, or not a breath of air moves the leaves, he must be at his post. It can not be neglected with impunity. It was during the sixth year of the existence of the ADVERTISER that we entered upon the responsible duties of a journalist. We found the ADVERTISER contending the field with two other cotemporaries in Wisconsin, each of which were its peer in every particular except age. They were edited with great skill and ability. Indeed, there are few newspapers on the Shore that are now or were then conducted with more ability than were the Shoreman and the Beckford. It was against the ability and energy of these lively sheets that the ADVERTISER had to contend for public favor at the time we assumed control of its columns. We felt then, as we feel now, incompetent to discharge properly the functions and responsible duties of an educator of public sentiment. We asked for and received the sympathy and indulgence as well as the support of a generous people. How much we have merited its continuance we refer the reader to the fact that we have increased our subscription list to more than three times the number it had when we took charge of it. It has a circulation second to no paper on the Shore. It finds its way into nearly all the States of the Union, and is to-day as well, if not as favorably known as any newspaper in the State outside of the city of Baltimore. We are glad to say that although cash is scarce and business dull we are doing about as well as we could expect under the circumstances. With this prospectus we enter upon our tenth year, hoping to merit a continuance of the confidence we have hitherto received, promising to do our duty to the best of our ability, striving to compensate all who invest their money with us, and assuring our friends and the public generally that we will not deceive anybody. Since our connection with the ADVERTISER we have not missed a single issue, nor have we failed to be in time for the mails. If every subscriber does not always receive the paper it has been no fault of ours. To our patrons and friends we are very grateful for past favors, hoping in the future to merit a continuance and an increase of the same, believing that all who deal with us will have no reason to complain. With these remarks we enter upon the second year.

SHALL the wicked still rule, and the people mourn? is now becoming the serious question with the American people. That the Radical party are putting forth superhuman efforts, there is no doubt. They are using argument, money, menace, intimidation, threats and every species of chicanery that can be devised to delude the people into the support of GRANT'S pet. The revival of the dark scenes of the war, the exhibition of the bloody shirt, and all other devices are used to deceive the people from the main questions at issue, but we are glad to say that there are now beginning to be heard the distant rumblings of discontent with Radicalism.—The people are tired of sheer humbug. They want honest government—they want a revival of business—they want employment. All of these things are more to be desired by the people than the promotion of a few disreputable carpet-baggers and scamps who essay to make a living by robbing the people, and before another month rolls around the people will see what those fellows are after, and such a rebuke as they will receive at the hands of the people will do the hearts of honest men good to behold.

There is no mistaking the temper of the people in this campaign. Never was there manifested a more fixed determination that their own will, and not the money and menaces of the Administration, shall decide the question as to who shall hold the helm for the next four years. The character of an Administration of Gov. HAYES is sufficiently indicated by the men who are working for his election. GRANT, MORTON CONKLING, CHANDLER, LOGAN, BELKNAP, ROBESON, CAMERON, ORTH, SHEPHERD, BLAINE, BABCOCK, COLVAX, SCHERCK, and BEN BUTLER are not the men to work without remuneration. All these men are most eager in their support of HAYES, all these men have enriched themselves by plundering the country under Grant's auspices, and all are to have a share in its government if their candidate is elected in November. Everybody who is not blinded by a party or interest can understand what this means. It means simply that if the scheme succeeds the President will be a puppet in the hands of an unscrupulous and inefficient gang of officials, rendered even more desperate by the certainty that it is their last chance. These men are not fools; they are the most shrewd and cunning rascals that ever used public positions of trust to ruin the country that had benefited them. They know that public opinion is not likely to go backward, and that even if they should, by their bribes and their corrupt use of power, succeed in stifling its voice on this occasion, it will be the last opportunity they will have.

Long before the expiration of their new lease, the public sentiment will have become so strong that all their efforts at resistance will be unavailing. They will therefore be utterly careless about its conciliation, and will carry on their speculations and their open robberies to an extent that they have not yet dared even to contemplate. It will be their last chance, and if the country be not absolutely ruined, its people forced to leave it through dire distress, its commerce driven from the seas and laid in ashes on the beach, its credit at home and abroad completely lost, and its manufacturing industries crushed or driven from our shores, it will not be any fault of theirs. It will be their last chance, and this chance they will use every effort to secure, so that they may complete the dastardly work which they have been so successfully pursuing during the past eight years.

The Convention at Ocean City will decide next Thursday who shall be a candidate in this District for a seat in the 46th Congress. While Wisconsin county, with great unanimity, has put forth our claims, and her delegates to said Convention will use all honorable means in their power to secure our nomination, and while Wisconsin will be looked to for a heavy majority to pull through the candidate, whoever he may be, yet, if in the wise policy of said Convention it should be necessary to take some other gentleman, we shall do our duty and labor to inspire others to do likewise in securing for him an overwhelming majority. But while we are willing to do our duty, we beseech our friends not to load us too heavily. Forbearance sometimes ceases to be a virtue, and we have been hearing the burden for our sister counties about as long as our people are willing to do so, and if murmurs are heard issuing from discontented voters, we can not with a good conscience say that they are unjust or without good cause, and if our brethren expect to reap the political rewards they had best commence to give some of the Democratic majorities which would entitle them to the first seats at the feast. This we say in all candor, but it is what our people say, and the time has come when it had as well be listened to with some respect, at least. We would say more, but we are a modest man, and as our county demanded no more for its Convention last Tuesday, than the opposition of our claims this year, it had as well be mentioned in plain language. President GRANT has subscribed two per cent. of his year's salary toward the Republican campaign fund, and Mr. RUTHERFORD has waited upon all the employees of the several departments and made a demand of a contribution to the same proportionate extent, so that any man whose name does not appear on this contribution paper will have to walk the plank when HAYES comes in. All who do contribute will continue to hold their places.—The same business will be continued under HAYES which has disgraced the country under GRANT—the same shop, only a new sign over the door.—That's what's meant by civil service reform with GRANT, HAYES & Co.

WHEN CURTIS and his brave followers were murdered by the Indians, one of his aids, Col. FRED GRANT, was at Washington seeking his comfort and ease, although he, like SHERMAN and SHERIDAN, are drawing their pay for defending the country and the people on the frontier. He ought to have been in the fight with SITTING BULL. But he was not, and the people have named him the "SITTING CALF." The people are right, but we have too many of these calves (suckers) around Washington just now.

One of the stump speakers of the all morality party has come to grief in Indiana. His name is HON. HENRY O'CONNOR, of Iowa. He was imported on account of his willingness to vociferously abuse the Democratic party. He became so drunk at every place he was posted to speak, that the Radical committee finally cancelled his appointments. They had to drag him off the stand at Indianapolis, where he insisted on speaking till he could no longer stand up.

PITTSBURGH Post: A pitfork is the HAYES emblem. Nothing could be more appropriate. You need a pitfork when handling such bundles of corruption as MORTON, CONKLING, BELKNAP, BABCOCK, CHANDLER, BOSS SHEPHERD, and the whole gang who are taking the stump for four more years of GRANTISM.

IN CHINA, it is a practice to cut off the heads of bank officers, when a bank fails. If this was the case in America, we should have fewer Carpet-baggers, but it would be better for the negroes who deposited their money in the "Freedom's Bank."

EVEN as MOSES was the chosen leader of God to take the Children of Israel through the Red Sea safe and secure, and see their enemies overwhelmed, so is TILDEN the chosen vessel of the American people to restore them to their wonted prosperity and happiness.

ALABAMA has spoken with no weak voice. Republican by 10,000 in 1872, Democratic by 12,000 in 1874, she is Democratic by 40,000 in 1876. 50,000 Democratic gain in four years. No riot reported, no bloodshed.

THE talk about "Reform inside the Republican party" reminds the Milwaukee Notes of the man who bored a hole in the bottom of his boat to let the bilgewater out.

ALL the stock jobbers and plunderers are for HAYES and WHEELER. Those who shake the bloody shirt, and keep alive sectional hate are for HAYES and WHEELER.

GOVERNOR TILDEN fully and distinctly represents the principles of Reform in administering public affairs. Can the same be said of Governor HAYES?

THE election is held on Tuesday, November 7th. Let every Democrat see that his name is on the Registration books.

THE Rads. want to haze the South, and Wheeler into Republicanism.

"Let us have Peace!"
The notion must have peace! It is the first aspiration of every patriotic heart North and South, East and West. It comes up spontaneously from every business interest; from every mart of commerce, from every channel of industry, from every home of plenty and from every centre of want. It pervades the prayer of every sincere devotion breathes its gospel in every faithful teaching, and has its altar wherever religion has a resting place. It is the demand of every man and woman, and every child who loves the country for which he offered his life, and the brave men of the blue and the gray, who made our battle-fields immortal by the heroism of the American people, would afford forever the estrangements of war, and welcome peace and brotherhood as the crowning victory of the noblest government of the earth. There must be peace of the sake of peace.

Industry and every channel of trade. Hate will revive no thrift; inflamed resentments will not break the silence of the mills; the bitter memories of war will not bring forth the bread of peace; the selfishness of the madmen of the present generation will call no idle sinners to required labor; the horrors of Andersonville and of Libby, no fearfully avenged in the food-tide of the passions of war; will whisper no words of hope to trembling credit, and the echoes of the violence of subjugated insurgents, uttered in the keen anguish of despair, will not for a moment stay the destruction that is sweeping over the paralyzed energies of the people. A convulsive campaign of studied appeals to sectional hate, cruelly mocks every suffering business man and every idle laborer in the land. It is the foe of capital and of industry. It consigns half the continent to misrule, robbery and desolation. It impoverishes the South, who should be prosperous and generous tributes to our debt and expeditious, and throws the whole burden of the government upon the North, now struggling almost hopelessly against universal prostration and embarrassment. It is war without a single manly attribute of war. It is a war against the earnest efforts of two mighty sections for peace. It is a crime against free government; a death-blow to every effort for restored prosperity, and if it shall triumph, the North and the South, once enemies, but now reunited by indissoluble ties, will be doomed to common misfortune. There will be pitiless poverty in all that gladdens and ennobles a people and terrible plenty of all that divides and degrades them. There must be peace as the harbinger of prosperity.

There must be peace for reform! Corruption holds high carnival in the fountains of power, national State and municipal. It has permeated everywhere. Like the unseen miasma that insensibly saps the life of its victims, it has coursed its way into every temple of authority; into our social and into our business channels, and over the altar almost daily lights its pollution. It stains the Grant administration from the highest to the lowest of its dependents, and its chief leaders recoil from the severe crevice a suffering people would demand for them. We have reached the deep descent of what was once dignified and honored authority, where to be honest is to be driven from trust, and with the approval of the first legislative tribunal, of the nation. We see the most responsible gifts of the administration dispensed as rewards for faithlessness to law and successful resistance to justice. We see great Commonwealths in the South given up as the prey of thieves and adventurers; their elections perverted by riotous mockeries of the will of the people, and the President, the Senate and the army exhausting their powers to give victory to usurpers and plunderers. We see troops ostentatiously thrown upon peaceable committees on the threshold of a national election, to invite the enjoining of the lawless mob to be distinguished and punished. We see carpet-baggers, who would not be trusted within sight of a village till monuments of a nation's shame in the United States Senate, and dwelling into gubernatorial chairs in defiance of popular defeats, and guarded by every department of the government as if they were the jewels of freedom. We see corruption surging unwholesome about the very throat itself; the strong arm of power reached out to stay the avenging blow of justice, and the few faithful public servants who labored to assert the majesty of the law striped for their devotion, defamed for their integrity and dismantled of their authority. We see great States in the North grinding in the prison-houses of corrupt leaders, who have usurped the party machinery and made themselves masters of the people. The honors of the State have been bartered to the most accomplished in political infamy, and the substance of the taxpayers has been perverted to profligacy and debauchery. And we see great cities as great sources of the body politic—polluting the ballot, degrading official trust, and giving consuming waste and debt and taxation as the logical fruits of their governments. There must be peace for reform.

There must be peace to bring faithless rulers to accountability. Eight years ago the nation declared for lasting peace. Peace was the slogan that rallied the people to the support of the hero of Appomattox; and they rejoiced as he taught peace by dividing his highest honors with the Confederate warrior Longstreet, the Confederate Senator Orr, the Confederate soldier and jurist Akerman, and many others of lesser note. For nearly eight years the President Grant has been endeavoring to strengthen peace throughout the land. He had every department of the government in political sympathy with himself, and ample authority to enforce his mandates. He had Senators obedient to his will on partisan issues, and he and they had but to enforce honesty and maintain law, and peace would have been supreme. But ambition begot debauchery, debauchery begot disorder and crime, and violence was summoned to defend the disturbers of the peace and to punish those who pleaded for government and law. Profligacy and greed became the painfully prominent attributes of political power, and throughout its countless streams demoralization spread a withering blight. And now the authority that has been charged with the peace of the nation for eight years, is brought before the great tribunal of the American people for judgment of approval or condemnation. If there is no peace, it must answer for it. If it has rejected peace, it must be expected and overthrown for the people created it in the love of peace and will not accept discord and hate as its offering. They are sick at heart of sectional strife, and want peace that they may take an account of their stewards. In vain will Cameron train his guns and marshal his gleaming bayonets in the contest, and idle will be the bloody shirt declamation of Morton and Conkling and Blaine and Kilpatrick as they flaunt the banner of endless hate before a people who long for fraternity, that they make a united effort, over the graves of the dead and the passions of long-extended strife, for common prosperity and common brotherhood. Federal Confederate, with the distinction effaced by the sword, look out through appalling misrule for some relief from the universal distress that besets them, and they demand peace that they may restore to prosperity the country they have made illustrious in the flame of battle. There must be peace; and in peace, and for peace, North and South will enter solemn Centennial judgment of the Republic in behalf of Honesty, Liberty and Law.—Phila. Times.

Wheeler and the War.
It is impossible to condemn so strongly and earnestly the unfortunate speech made by Mr. Wheeler, at St. Albans, on Friday evening. Had he spoken simply as a private citizen his violent sectionalism would do little harm, and we could afford to pass it by with all the other Bourbon idiocy that is talked on either side. But Mr. Wheeler, as the Republican candidate for the Vice Presidency, occupies a representative position, and what he says will be taken as expressing the position and aims of the party that puts him forward as its candidate. For this reason we fear that his speech, inconsistent, illogical and false as it is, will do much harm, and all the more because better things were expected of him. The only reason that has ever been given for the nomination of Mr. Wheeler was the good sense he was thought to have shown in the Louisiana business, where he succeeded, by his calm judgment and impartiality, in adjusting a bitter partisan contest and commending himself to men of all parties in North and South alike. So proud was Mr. Wheeler of this achievement that he referred to it in his letter of acceptance, quoting from his Louisiana report an appeal for justice to the South. He spoke of the unreasonable expectations of the "masses" of the South could in a few years be transformed into model Northern communities, and that could only come "through a long course of patient waiting, to which no one can give any certain limits," and with a great deal of "unavoidable friction which will call for forbearance," and he went on to say: "We compelled these people to remain in the Union, and now duty and interest demand that we leave no just means untried to make them good loyal citizens. How to diminish the friction, how to stimulate the elevation of this portion of our country, are problems addressing themselves to our best and wisest statesmanship."

In a similar, but even broader spirit, Mr. Hayes expresses the same duty which he says will be secured by military orders, nor the distinction between North and South wiped out by such speeches as Mr. Wheeler's, which has no other purpose, certainly can have no other effect, than to array one section against the other. "The United South," "the Confederate party," "the late slave States," are the burden of his cry. "We confront the old issue," he says; "we are already engaged in another conflict;" "as in 1860, we are once more face to face with a united South," and "let your belts protect the work so effectively done at Gettysburg and on many a field of strife." This is Mr. Wheeler's idea of "how to diminish the friction." In the face of such attacks, how can we look for anything else than a return to the North and South? The only encouragement is there for those who have sincerely labored for harmony, when their advances are met in such a spirit as this?

Ten years ago, Massachusetts' great Governor, John A. Andrew, said: "There ought now to be a vigorous prosecution of the peace, just as vigorous as our recent prosecution of the war." Had his wise counsel been followed there would be no longer a division between North and South. Instead of this we have had nothing but the old war talk and war measures through all these weary years, and to-day a representative of the party in power, its candidate for the Vice Presidency, can think of nothing else to say, as a reason why it should be kept in power, than that it has not advanced a single step, since 1866, toward the accomplishment of what was then and has been ever since the one great duty, the one great test of its statesmanship. We need no Mr. Wheeler, and the Northern people are very tired of this sort of thing. They think with Mr. Sumner that "the time for the soldier has passed," and they would prefer to vote for a man whose heart was big enough to take in the whole country, rather than for one who stands on Plymouth rock and hurls anathemas against his fellow-citizens. Let him leave the war to the Butlers and Kilpatricks and Mortons; they like it, and no one expects anything else from them. But a man who seeks the suffrage of the nation must recognize no sectional lines, and Mr. Wheeler will do better, next time he makes a speech, to take for his key-note the earnest aspiration of the country: "Let us have peace."

Gov. Hayes at Home.
THE DEFECTION OF THE CINCINNATI BAR TO HAYES.
Cincinnati Correspondence of the World.
What is Mr. Hayes' standing among the legal friends and associates? Not a single attorney who voted the Democratic ticket during the residence of Rutherford B. Hayes in Cincinnati, or who had voted the Democratic ticket since his removal to Fremont, will support him for President of the United States, but, on the contrary, every one of them is now supporting Tilden and Hendricks. Judge Headley, who has not voted the Democratic ticket for more than twenty years, and who was one of the Judges of the Superior Court of Cincinnati during the time that Rutherford B. Hayes practiced at the Cincinnati bar, will not support him for President, but, on the contrary, is now a very prominent political speaker, supporting, with all his great power as an orator and debater, Tilden and Hendricks. Judge Stallo, formerly one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, who has not voted a Democratic ticket for more than twenty-five years, will not support his associate Rutherford B. Hayes for President, but, on the contrary, has already delivered a most effective speech for Tilden and Hendricks. E. W. Kirtledge, a lawyer with a most extensive practice during all the time that Rutherford B. Hayes was at the Cincinnati bar, since he has never cast a Democratic ballot in his life, will not support him for President, but, on the contrary, is now engaged in canvassing his county for Tilden and Hendricks. William S. Groesbeck and Charles Reemelin, old lawyers of the Cincinnati bar, who have supported the Republican and Democratic tickets, the Democratic ticket, but who voted for Hayes for Governor against Governor Allen on the financial issues of the Ohio campaign in 1875, are now supporting Tilden and Hendricks. Fred Hassauer, the distinguished and able attorney, formerly an associate of Rutherford B. Hayes at the bar, and heretofore a Republican, is a warm supporter of Tilden and Hendricks. Emil Hoffman, a younger lawyer and Chief Deputy Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas, has just always voted the Republican ticket, is now supporting Tilden and Hendricks. J. Job Wolf, an old lawyer, who has voted the Republican ticket for fifteen years, now supports Tilden and Hendricks. Judge Mallon, one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, immediately preceding the war, and who at that time and for several years supported the Republican party, but more recently a Democrat, supports Tilden and Hendricks. Judge Allison, who was one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas during the war, and who at that time and for several years supported the Republican party, but more recently a Democrat, supports Tilden and Hendricks. C. W. Merrill, a Republican lawyer, who joined the Liberal Republican ticket in 1872, but who actively supported the Republican ticket in 1875, now supports Tilden and Hendricks. Captain Irwin B. Wright, E. S. Throop, late adjutant Sixth Ohio, James Maloney, assistant prosecuting attorney Andrew H. Small, George H. Harris, H. D. Beck, Judson Hagan, Moses Wilson, John Healy, Randolph Smith and J. F. Brashear, Republican lawyers, who joined the Liberal Republican movement in 1872, and have since acted with the Democratic party, now support Tilden and Hendricks. In addition to the above there are several Republican lawyers who have not yet declared for Hayes and may join the Democratic party at the ensuing election. Such is the estimate placed upon the Republican candidate for President by those who are to be secured by the majority of counties visited by Gen. Kilpatrick have previously been strongly Republican, and have less independent strength than other counties in the State.

Indiana Lost to Hayes.
The Indianapolis Sentinel publishes the following letter, written to Gov. Hayes by Gen. Kilpatrick, and discovered by accident. It was evidently a copy of the letter sent, and was meant to be preserved, but was dropped. The handwriting is an exact fac-simile of Gen. Kilpatrick's signature on the hotel register. The majority of counties visited by Gen. Kilpatrick have previously been strongly Republican, and have less independent strength than other counties in the State.
GRAND HOTEL,
INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 21, 1876.
DEAR SIR:—I have just finished the tour of six counties in Indiana, and feeling that my reliable information from this State will interest you, I write. In the first place the canvass is well conducted, the people are enthusiastic and determined, and the old war spirit thoroughly aroused, and if it were not for one thing we could rest certain of victory in October. There is an independent party in the State, confined, it is true to a few counties, but formidable, and it will defeat Gen. Harrison. There is but one way to overcome this movement. The leaders of the Independents are poor, needy and in debt. They must be lured to, and documents must be placed in their hands, that they may be convinced of their folly. A bloody shirt campaign, with money, and Indiana is safe. A financial campaign and no money, and we are beaten. The National Committee has done nothing for Indiana. Alone they are fighting their battle, and bravely, but unless the National Committee wakes up and does its duty to you, to the party, and the country, defeat is certain in October. I never in my life felt so certain that I was doing my duty as in this contest, and my desire for success, my dear Sir, is my only excuse for writing to you.
Your friend,
J. KILPATRICK.
To R. B. Hayes, Governor, &c.

The Political Outlook.
Col. McClure, the accomplished editor of the Philadelphia Times, has been interviewed on the Presidential outlook, and his predictions are interesting as showing how the political horizon looks when viewed through Independent spectacles. Col. McClure thinks it is risky to venture a prediction concerning the result of the contest until the October States have been heard from, yet he is inclined to think the chances are in favor of Tilden. "If Ohio and Indiana both go to the Republicans or to the Democrats, the contest will be settled. I would regard Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Colorado, Nevada, California and Oregon as reasonably certain to follow in November, the united lead of Ohio and Indiana in October. Should Indiana vote with the Democrats and Ohio with the Republicans, there will be a desperate battle for every one of the States named above, and the result will be doubtful, with the chances in favor of Tilden. The great battle, therefore, will be in Indiana, and I regard Indiana as very likely to elect a Democratic State ticket in October. I should not be surprised to see Indiana vote Democratic and Ohio Republican by a large, but no majority, and if so it would clearly foreshadow the election of Tilden."

A Business Candidate.
That Gov. Tilden is an able practical financier, there can be no question. In his letter of acceptance he shows the people how the whole national debt can be paid off in the comparatively short period of thirty-eight years, simply by the adoption of a financial policy which should credit to the country the highest credit. By wisely availing ourselves of this, he estimates that a reduction of one per cent. on the interest of the loans could be effected, and this saving, multiplied by the low rate of four and a half per cent. interest, would cancel our entire national debt in the course of thirty-eight years.—This is no chimera. It is no wild visionary scheme. It is the careful calculation of a practical business man, who knows how to put it in operation, and who will carry it into effect if an opportunity is afforded him. We put it to the voters of the country, the sensible men, whether this payment of the national debt is not a consummation devoutly to be wished? The heavy burden of taxation which rests upon us would at least be removed from the shoulders of our children. Tilden, Economy, and the Reduction of the National Debt—let this be the war cry!

The Machine Was Worn Out.—Why? Not because it was not well built, but it was wrongly run.—Thousands of men who have run down long before their telescopes and ten years ago accomplished, might have been renewed into sprightliness and vim if they had tried the well known Purvian Syrup, which contains among its compounds the Protoids of Iron, so combined that it assimilates the whole system. This syrup has proved efficacious in thousands of cases, and will do everybody good who uses it. All druggists keep it.

Wonderful Success!
It is reported that Dr. Ross' German Syrup has since its introduction in the United States, reached the immense sale of 40,000 dozen per year. Over 6,000 Druggists have ordered this Medicine direct from the Factory, at Woodbury N. J., and not one have reported a single failure, but every letter speaks of its astonishing success in curing severe Coughs, Colds settled on the Breast, Consumption, or any disease of Throat and Lungs. We advise any person that has any credit-position to weak Lungs, to get their Druggist, L. D. Collier, and get this Medicine, or inquire about it. Regular size, 75 cents; smaller bottle, 10 cents. Two doses will relieve any case. Do not neglect your cough. For sale also by L. M. Dashiell, Toney Tank, Md.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.
NOTICE TO PROPERTY HOLDERS!!
In accordance with Act of Assembly passed at the last session of the Legislature of Maryland, Chapter 26, the undersigned, having been appointed by the Board of Control and Review, by the Governor, for Wisconsin county, hereby give notice that they will assemble in the Old Hotel Building, in Salisbury, on Tuesday, the 5th day of September, 1876, that day being the first Tuesday in said month, for the purpose of considering the assessments made by the assessors of this county. And the said Board will continue to sit daily from 9 o'clock A. M., until 4 o'clock P. M., until the 31st Day of December.

All persons who feel themselves aggrieved by the action of the Assessors, are hereby requested to present their grievances during the time specified, to the Board, and they will be heard.

MUSIC.
Music, font of joy and pleasure,
Bright enchantress, hail to thee!
Were it not for thy soft measure,
Cold and dull this world would be.
For thy beaming smile of gladness
Cheers the heart with anguish torn;
Gilding clouds of care and sadness,
With the rosy tints of morn.
Rayless is the hero's glory
Till his deeds by these are rung;
Oh, how thrilling love's soft story,
When the tale by thee is sung.
And, when o'er thy harp-strings bending,
Walling forth a tale of woe,
Sweet to see with thine own blending,
Soothing tears from pity flow.
But the time when best I love thee
Is when pealing organs ring
Songs of praise to the Redeemer,
Anthems to our Heavenly King.

THE GREAT WHEEL.
BY MRS. MARIAN STOCKTON.
Written Expressly for the Baltimore Weekly
Sun, and for which the First Prize of Five Hundred Dollars was Awarded.

CHAPTER X—continued.

"You thought it would be a good chance to get hold of my will."
"Your will," cried Molly, with an astonishment that her father saw at once was unfeigned. "I didn't know you had one, and I think that was a queer place to put it—not locked up or anything."
"If you don't lock up, folks don't expect to find," said Ross, somewhat mollified. "If you want a thing found out just you lock it up. Those papers, some of 'em, has been in here since before the new house yonder was built.—
And just after Mr. Roger died I picked up a lot that the 'scoters didn't seem to want. And now they are all gone."
"Had you read them all?"
"Blas you, no, child! I ain't read
none of 'em, but I was always a-thinkin'
I would; I can read print easy, but I make a poor out of writing."
Now that her father had talked himself calm Molly had time to collect her wits. "I'll tell you, now, who has your papers. It's John the Baptist."
"What! John Bowles, the idiot, I suppose you mean?"
"Yes. You know Miss Pindar said
your room must be cleaned yesterday,
and you said they shouldn't be touched;
but if I'd be with the women the other could—"
"Mercy on us, child! Come to the pint and tell me what I don't know."
"Well, pop, I was with the women in the room when I heard a noise in this, and came running in and found John rummaging around. How he got upstairs without me hearing him I don't know, but he looked dreadfully scared when he saw me, and scampered down stairs as fast as he could go. I looked about, but it seemed to me everything was just as it was before, but he is always plying up rags and scraps of paper, and I've no doubt he took those in the old clock. I never thought of it."
"No! And he may be forty miles off by this time, and how will I ever get my will? Neither of these rooms shall be cleaned again while I live!"
"I saw John not an hour ago going towards Lower Town. I've no doubt he has gone to the mill."
"Anybody but a woman would a told that first," said Ross, seizing his hat, and rushing from the room at what he fancied was a very fast pace, but was in fact nothing more than an ordinary walk.
While all this was taking place in Ross Peter's parlor, Madeline, returning from a morning visit to Phoebe, passed near the mill, and feeling strongly tempted to visit again her old friend, the Great Wheel, she turned into River street. She had not been there for two months. As she approached the building she missed the roaring, jarring
sounds which were wont to be pleasant to her ears. An awful stillness brooded over everything. What could mean it?
What dreadful thing had happened?—
She hurried into the engine room.
She was deserted. The golden balls were still; the piston-rod was lifeless—the Great Fly-Wheel motionless! Her heart stopped motionless too, but her head beat fast. There is something mysteriously horrible in stillness when we expect noise. There flashed through her mind remembrances of fearful disasters
she had read of; awful explosions, and great buildings thundering down into a mass of ruins with scarcely a moment's notice. Had the inmates of this building been warned and escaped? And had fate led her here only to be overwhelmed
in the destruction of the mill her father had built for her? A soft, stealthy noise crept along behind her. Startled into energy by this confirmation of her fears, she turned quickly to make her escape, and confronted John Bowles, the idiot. It was evident that he was trying to steal away without attracting her attention; but as soon as he recognized Madeline he made the most extravagant demonstration of joy. He probably thought that, as on a former occasion,

transfer of bank-notes would be the result of the interview. Madeline waved her arms in clumsy imitation of the Great Wheel, and, pointing to it, asked him why it was not turning. John had but a small stock of words, and in consequence always came directly to the point. In this case he uttered but one word:
"Dinner!"
Madeline broke into a merry laugh
at the absurdity of her fears, and the idiot laughed too, as if further confirmation was needed to let her know what a very ridiculous girl she was.
She had never happened to be at the mill at the dinner hour, and it had not occurred to her that the wheel would stop for so simple a fact. It seemed almost lessened its importance.—
The power that it pleased her to fancied was molding her life compelled to wait on the stomachs of factory hands!
She took no further notice of John.
She was not surprised to see him
there, for, in former days, he used to frequent the place. She thought it probable that on this day he had learned, for the first time, that Richard had left, and had therefore entered the mill secretly, and concealed himself until the dinner hour gave him an opportunity to begin his favorite work of cleaning some part of the engine. John was a restless creature who roamed wildly about the country, but sometimes he took a fancy to spend a week at one place,
and, whenever he stayed in Depford, he haunted the great clock mill. The noise and ceaseless motion excited in him a wild sort of sympathy, and nothing gave him greater delight than being employed about the engine.—
Richard's predecessor had taken compensation on him, and allowed him to rub some parts of the machinery,
where he could get no harm, and John fancied himself very usefully employed in cleaning it. For this purpose he saved up every old rag,
and scrap of paper he could find,
though not generally given to throwing away, many a towel did he slyly convey to his bag to be used at the mill.
But after the death of John Pratt,
and the stringent rules in regard to allowing persons in the engine-room
who had no business there, Richard forbade John's visits, and thus, for a long time, he had been debarred from his favorite occupation.
Finding that Madeline would not give him her attention he turned away, and taking a greasy paper out of the bag that hung at his side, he began to polish the little gilded balls
chattering all the time as was his custom.
It was the first time Madeline had ever seen the great fly-wheel at rest.
She was close to it and laid her hand
upon it with a graceful, tender caress. There was no one but an idiot present. It was a foolish act, but Madeline was not wise. She patted
the cold iron with her white hand glittering with rings; she drew it along the rim; she passed it daintily over the crank that connected the wheel and piston rod. In so doing the fringe of her shawl caught up a dirty scrap of paper from the floor.
She tried to shake it off, but the obstinate thing would stick, and she was obliged to raise the corner of her shawl and pick it off. It was a scrap that Joan had used in cleaning, and it was smeared with grease and torn in two or three places. She would have thrown it aside in disgust, but in disentangling it from the fringe, her own name caught her eye. There regardless of dirt, she carefully smoothed it out, drew the torn edges
together, and with some difficulty
read the following words:
"I have been so interested in writing to you solemn words in view of the great change that is coming upon you, and of matters that concern
your eternal salvation, that I came near forgetting the commission with which you entrusted me. You must execute this in a clergyman. You may rest assured that I shall faithfully comply with your request. The letter of instructions for your daughter, Madeline Depp, which was inclosed in yours to me, shall be safely kept and given to her by my own hands, (soaled, as I received it,) when she arrives at the age of twenty.—
On the envelope I have written such directions as will insure its safe delivery to her in case of my death before that time. From your slight reference to all its contents, I suppose it to contain precepts for her guidance. It was wise in you to write such a letter, to be read when she is of an age to understand and to be deeply impressed by what it contains. Moral and religious precepts written by the hand of a dying heart,
and by the blessing of God, bring forth good fruit. That it may be so,
and that you may contain in the sweet peace you are now blessed with until the passage from this world to a better, is the sincere prayer
of
"Yours, most sincerely,
"CYRUS P. BARTLEY."

for she heard a door opening,
and had barely time to thrust the paper into her pocket, when Mr. Barkley entered with Ross Peters.
"I am very sure you will not find him in the building. There was no way for him to get in," said Mr. Barkley.
"There he is now!" said Ross, angrily, "scrubbing away with my will-my papers that he stole! That man should be locked up! I beg your pardon, Miss Madeline. I didn't know you were here. But that natural thero stole all the papers in my clock case! Here! give me that bag!" he continued, as he came up to John, who was crouching on the floor in fear. "Nobody is going to hurt you, stupid!"
So saying, he snatched the bag
from the idiot, and sitting down on the floor carefully examined its contents.
Madeline understood now how this paper had found its way to the engine-room and had fallen by the Great Wheel; but the letter itself was a mystery. Did Ross know anything about it? Perhaps there was something in that mass of papers to throw light upon the matter. The first question she at once answered in the negative. Ross was too honest and too much devoted to her to conceal anything of this kind from her. But the second was highly probable. She went to where Ross was seated and looked with curiosity
at the yellow and discolored papers
he was taking out of the bag. He soon came across the will, hid up exactly as he had left it, and this discovery at once appeased his wrath.
"Here, poor fellow!" he said, returning the bag and bestowing a benignant smile on the idiot, who began to grin in return, "You didn't know what you were doing. Taint your fault that you was born without brains.
Take your bag, but I'll keep all the papers for I can look over 'em here, and I s'pect they are all mine; I'll put 'em in my pocket, greasy ones
and all, for there's no knowing but they are the most val'ble." And he began thrusting the papers into his numerous pockets.
"Here are some scattered over the floor," said Madeline. "You had better take them all," and she set to work gathering them up.
"There's no use soiling your fingers with them dirty things," said Ross, who rather wondered at the interest she took in his old papers. "I guess they ain't of no account, only I kind of thought I'd like to see them before I threw them away."
"That is right," said Madeline.—
"Here is the last scrap. I wonder what they are all about! I have taken a fancy to look them over myself. Shall I come to your room and help you sometime? You know you will not get through with them in a month."
"I guess they aint worth a copper
cent, the whole bilin' of 'em," said Ross, grimly enough.
"I want to see them anyway. So don't throw a scrap away until I have looked them over. You there is no use in telling you that—you never trust anything away in your life."
"I'll put 'em back in the clock. They ain't nothing nohow to make a fuss about!"

CHAPTER XI.
TRACING THE LETTER.
If it had ever occurred to Madeline to look over the papers she knew to be in the old clock case, and had thus come across this torn scrap of a letter, she would have been greatly surprised, but she would not have felt so nervously uneasy as in finding it in such a strange fashion. In the former case it is probable she would have laid it before Mr.
Grahame without a moment's reflection.
Now she hurried home, and, having locked herself in her room, read the communication several times, and carefully examined every inch of the paper.
After this scrutiny a few things were pretty clear to her mind.
First, that her father died in the belief that he had destroyed the letter, a part of which she held in her hand.—
The characters were small, and evidently the paragraph that escaped destruction was not half a page. Yet, small as the scrap, not only was a little piece entirely gone, but it was torn nearly across in three places; and in order to master
the contents she had been obliged to carefully draw these torn edges together
and to supply the words torn out from the edge. She had thought at first that these rents in the paper were made by John in cleaning with it, but now she saw this was not the case. She knew from the appearance of the edges that the letter had been torn long before, and whoever did it imagined it to be done effectually. She wondered her father had not taken the more secure method of burning it; but if, when the letter came to him he was unable to leave his bed, he might have thought it would excite less suspicion to tear it into small fragments and throw it into the waste basket than to have a light brought that he might burn it.
Secondly, it was evident that the letter of instructions alluded to was written upon what her father believed to be his death-bed. In the part of the reply she held in her hand there was no reference to any date, and she could not know positively, therefore, that this had proved to be her father's last sickness,

but she might reasonably assume that such was the case.
Now, Mr. Grahame, who had been her father's lawyer and confidential advisor during his whole residence in Dep-ford, had often told her that he had been a constant visitor to her father's sick room in that last illness, and that he had not once left the town during that time. Clearly, then, Mr. Grahame was not the bearer of the letter to Mr. Barkley.
Thirdly, Mr. Grahame being her father's confidential friend, having drawn up his will, and having been appointed guardian to his daughter,
might be supposed to be the very person above all others her father would select as the custodian of this sealed letter, unless he had some special reason for keeping from him all knowledge of its existence. What special reason could there be if the letter contained only good advice and moral precepts? In this case what more natural than that he should hand it to Mr. Grahame, who was so constantly at his bedside? But, rather than do this, he had chosen to send it to a distance,
and run all the risks of so doing.
Fourthly, Mr. Bartley had written, alluding to the letter, "From your slight reference to its contents I suppose it to contain precepts for her guidance," &c. Now had her father in this "slight reference" actually said this, or had Mr. Bartley formed his conclusions from the circumstances under which it was written?
—conclusions that a clergyman
would be very apt to form.
As a timid woman who jumps at the slamming of a door, or shrieks at the sight of a mouse will often when brought to bay by actual danger face it with a presence of mind and steady courage that astonishes everybody, and none more than herself, so Madeline, finding herself for the first time confronted with something that she must deal with alone, met it with an amount of patient thought and courageous resolution that would have surprised her friends, and have utterly amazed Phoebe Ware, who looked upon Madeline's mind as a barren waste.
She thought the matter out carefully, and came to the conclusion that—
Firstly, Mr. Grahame knew nothing of this letter that was to have been given her when she was twenty years of age, or he would not have allowed three years over the time to pass without any allusion to it.
Secondly, her father had taken great pains that Mr. Grahame should not know that such a letter had been written.
This put an end to all thought of consulting Mr. Grahame.
Furthermore she believed that her father would not have enveloped in such secrecy a mere letter of parental counsel, and was convinced that its contents were of vital importance to her.
This belief was strengthened by the singular manner in which this scrap of paper, the only part of the letter probably which was of consequence to her, had come into her possession.
Time and silence had kept watch
over the secret that the dying man had taken such vain precautions to consign to oblivion. This paper, which so distinctly pointed out the repository of that secret, resting
the weak fingers already paralyzed
by death, carelessly thrust aside with nothing to cover it from curious eyes,
trampled under foot, tossed about un-
heeded, swept into some dust hole,
or into the stable yard, from whence
it had fluttered out to be picked up by an old family servant, who had never felt the inclination to read it,
and, if he had would have used the knowledge only for her benefit; stored away for years in the old clock case, had at last seen the light by means of an idiot who could not read,
and finding its way to the Great Wheel she so often visited, was thus laid before the only eyes that had a right to see it! A implicit faith Madeline felt that it was all the direct guiding hand of Providence.
This secret then that had been so carefully guarded she must not betray, and she alone must search it out.

Our Standard Bearer.
 For President of the United States:
SAMUEL J. TILDEN,
 Of New York.
 For Vice-President:
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
 Of Indiana.
 For Congress:
HON. DANIEL M. HENRY,
 Of Dorchester County.

The Freedman's Bank is broke, the money spent, and no prospect of its ever being returned to the colored people who deposited their hard earnings in it for safe keeping. It will be remembered that in the Cincinnati convention one of the colored delegates appealed to his white brethren to insert a little plank in the Republican platform looking to the restoration to the colored people of their money. That little plank, however, was left out, and the colored people left their white Republican friends out at the Alabama election, and they served them right. Until every depositor in the Freedman's Bank is paid back his money in full by the white Republican thieves, they do not deserve to receive a single vote from the colored people. No Democrat ever got a cent of that two hundred thousand dollars of the colored people's money. If they had and refused to restore it, we would try to have him read out of the party. We are glad to see that the Democracy of the South are making a move to provide every colored man who is the head of a family with that forty acres of land which has been promised them by the Republicans, and which promise has not been fulfilled, nor has the mule been given them. Now, the Democracy of the North will give the mule if the Southern Democracy will give the land, and we hope they will also give them food for the mule till a crop of corn or potato can be raised. This would be the best investment which could be made, as it would go further towards bringing about a good state of feeling between the races. Besides, this would make better citizens of the colored people, and they would have a greater interest in the preservation of good government, good morals and fraternal relations with the best and most intelligent citizens of the country.

If the Republican party had given half the money they have stolen from the government and from the colored people out of the Freedman's Bank, they could have bought a farm of forty acres and a mule for every colored man who has a family, and it was their duty to do it as they had promised it in order to get their votes, but they never intended to do anything substantial for the colored people, nor they never will until the colored people show them that they do not belong to them. Just so long as the colored people march like whipped curs to their bidding while they continue to use them and steal their money, as they have done ever since they began to vote, and the sooner the colored people see their true interest the better it will be for them and for the country. They have seen it already in Alabama, and in a short time they will open their eyes elsewhere.

The Democratic party have a greater interest in the welfare of the colored people than the Republicans, because they own the land in those States where the colored population abound, and their interest is to promote harmony and good will among the people, and good government where their property is situated. The Republicans have no such interest in them. The only interest they have in the colored man is to keep up war and strife between them and the whites, in order that they can get upon excitement in the North to keep themselves in power. They would not care if a war of races swept every vestige of the colored race from the face of the earth, provided it kept them in power. That is all they want, and unless they can fix some scheme to cause the death of a large number of colored people, their outrage will stop, and the government would pass into the hands of the Democrats. Then the white and colored people of the South would soon be so prosperous that they would be able to manufacture their own goods, and New England would be left out in the cold, and the colored people of the South would be able to spend their leisure time at Northern watering places. Not in the character of servants, but would have these yankees to black their boots for them. The yankees know this, and they are sharp enough to keep up the strife in the South, in order that both whites and blacks may continue to be paupers, and be compelled to live on in misery and strife.

This state of things will continue till the colored man shall have learned who is his true friend, and who has an interest in his prosperity and happiness. As soon as he learns this it will stop at once, and all parties alike will be prosperous and happy.

There is a Republican bolt in Maine; doubts are expressed even of Massachusetts; Connecticut is conceded to Tilden in advance; New York is pretty certain for him, and New Jersey too. Pennsylvania is fairly doubtful; even Ohio is looking much better; Indiana we count as sure for Tilden, and Illinois is no doubtful; Wisconsin we believe will elect the Democratic ticket. The South and the Pacific States are all right; and it is a Republican paper in St. Louis that makes this admission concerning the rottenness and hopelessness of its party in Missouri:

There is no resisting the conviction that here in Missouri the cause of Republicanism is handicapped and weighted down by the burdens of hummers and barnacles whose incompetence is only exceeded by their unpopularity. With a few honorable exceptions, the Republican committees are composed of men whose presence is a signal for the withdrawal of every body else, and the interest of the whole Republican party are entrusted to men whom nobody would trust with a five-dollar bill.—St. Louis Globe.

While admitting that "special" deputies can only be appointed for cities of 20,000 inhabitants, the Attorney General tells the marshals that they may appoint other deputies everywhere and anywhere, and in any number, and that they may take cognizance of any offense of intention, as well as of act. His words are that they are to protect the voter "at all times, as well against violence on account of any vote that he may intend to give as against conspiracy because of anything, that he may already have given." The powers with which this unlimited force of marshals and deputy marshals is clothed we give in the Attorney General's own language. After stating that they can summon the posse comitatus, he says:

"In this connection I advise that you and each of your deputies, general and 'special,' have a right to summon to your assistance, in preventing and quelling disorder, every person in the district above fifteen years of age, whatever may be their occupation, whether civilians or not, and including the military of all denominations, militia, soldiers, marines, all of whom are alike bound to obey you. The fact that they are organized as military bodies, (whether of the State or of the United States,) under the immediate command of their own officers, does not in any wise affect their legal character. They are still the posse comitatus."

Under such circumstances as these the preparation is plain for the carrying out of certain of the Southern States in the presidential and congressional elections by putting over them a swarm of marshals and deputy marshals and by the pressure of the armed hand, but to say that such an election would be sheer mockery.—Balto. Sun.

When the Army may be Used.

In nothing have the people of the United States, throughout all periods of their history, been more sensitive than with regard to military interference in their domestic affairs. It is an axiom, embodied in our fundamental law, "that the military is subordinate to the civil authority." The Constitution of the United States has carefully defined to occasion and prescribed the conditions when the military forces of the government may be called into requisition. They may be employed to protect each of the States against invasion, and on application of the Legislature or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened), against domestic violence. Invasion is an open and notorious fact, and the Executive Department, upon its own motion, can put the army in the field to repel it. But domestic violence is within the cognizance of the local authorities alone, and they alone are to judge whether military aid is necessary to suppress it. And accordingly it is only on their requisition that the President is authorized to interpose with the forces of the United States. In other words, the several States are to manage their own domestic affairs, free from any military interference by the United States, except in the instances above mentioned and upon the conditions above stated.

But, on the other hand, the laws of the United States, made in pursuance of the Constitution, are the supreme law of the land, and must be executed free from, and despite of any interference on the part of the State authorities. And it is made the duty of the President to see that they are thus executed. How shall he execute them? The Constitution and the laws have provided the means. Courts have been instituted, and he has been empowered to appoint the necessary civil officers to enforce obedience thereto. It is the civil authorities who are to arrest offenders, and the courts who are to try them. It is a judicial officer who is to determine whether the law has been violated, and whether the alleged offender has been guilty of the offense. But may not the President employ military force in performing his function of executing the laws? Undoubtedly. But when? The doctrine of the Fathers and the doctrine of the Supreme Court is this, namely: That when combinations actually exist among the citizens of one or more of the States to obstruct or defeat the execution of acts of Congress, and hostilities thence arise and assume the dimensions of war, it is the duty of the President to prosecute opposing hostilities, offensive as well as defensive, and upon a scale to suit the exigencies of the occasion. In the absence of any combination and of any hostilities, to station the army so as to coerce voters, to embolden one party and to intimidate another, up on the mere suggestion or mere suspicion that combinations may arise and hostilities thence ensue, is a perversion of the genius of our government and a manifest violation of the very terms and spirit of the Constitution. It is a subterfuge, a wretched evasion to talk of employing the army as a posse comitatus. The power of the country is not the army.

ALAS! how the grand old Bay State has fallen. The dispassionate man of any party who reads the malignant partisan harangue of Senator Boutwell, before the Massachusetts Republican Convention on Tuesday last, will blush for the degradation of the Commonwealth for which Charles Sumner and Henry Wilson had so long spoken in the name of brotherhood and peace. It was quite enough that Senator Boutwell should have been so forgetful of honesty, truth and statesmanship as to report a list of transparent falsehoods about Mississippi, to influence a national election. It was enough that he confronted the public testimony of the honest leaders of the colored race, who proclaimed that they had revolted against so-called Republican rule, as ex Senator Revels declared, because it was simply "corruption, theft and embezzlement," and his display of mean sectional hate, as presented to a representative body of a most intelligent people, was a confession of his shame that we will one day be glad to forget. To declare that the Republicans would carry Texas, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia had they not been controlled by "fraud and force and by fraud and force now hold," betrays a contempt for truth that would make even Butler hesitate. True it is that those States, and all the Southern States, have been driven from Republicanism by fraud, but it was by the shameless frauds of carpet-bag adventurers, and the better men of all classes, white and black, were finally compelled to unite against Mr. Boutwell's disgraceful officials to protect themselves from utter desolation. To-day a large percentage of the colored voters of the South openly support Tilden, solely because they must have honest local government to secure employment and bread, and all the falsehoods that Boutwell can invent, and all the military orders of Cameron, and all the legal extravagances of Taft, and all the appliances and promises of power, will henceforth fail to draw the color line between the voters of the South. Republicanism is dead in the Southern States by consent of all faces and conditions of society, and it is so because such mousing owls as Grant and Boutwell and Butler have crawled into the places of Lincoln and Sumner and Wilson.

Col. Hyatt's Military Academy is one of the institutions of which Pennsylvania should be proud. Not long ago, a member of Congress on the floor of the House said that it was a question with many competent judges whether their drill was inferior to that of the West Point Cadets. Physical training should go along with the mental and the moral to accomplish the best results of a good education. To be simply a good scholar is not enough. Too many small boys with pale intellectual faces and puny bodies are seen going to the schools all around us. Their physical development seems to have been overlooked altogether. They may become learned, but they will be very likely to die early.

It is a satisfaction to know that there are some schools where great stress is laid upon the health of the body and its normal development. Nothing secures this so perfectly as a wise military drill, under well-trained instructors. This is found under the very best conditions at the Pennsylvania Military Academy near Chester. Col. Hyatt, its head, is an army officer, and his corps of teachers are among the most competent in the land. The curriculum covers a full range of studies, professional and practical, including literature, the sciences and art, fitting pupils for business or professional life.

themselves hoarse for Cooper and Cary, until about Presidential election day, when they will gravitate to Tilden as naturally as a duck takes to water, and it will take extra watching to keep a clever slice of the Republican Cooperites from following suit. The resumption act, to maintain which the Republicans have been foolishly committed, is the African in the wood-pile, and it will make many a hesitating Republican shy off the regular track when he walks up to the polls, through general paralysis of business and trade, to deposit his vote. Colonel Hoyt had best put his pickets out early and strong all along the greenback line if he doesn't want to lose the election. As the Mollies are not worth buying this year, he will have ample leisure to put his greenbacks somewhere else where they will "do the most good."—Phila. Times.

Read the following Letter
 FROM A HIGHLY RESPECTABLE GENTLEMAN IN LIMESTONE, MONTGOMERY CO., PA.:

"This is to certify that I was pronounced by several physicians as consumptive, and had all the symptoms of the disease in its worst form—such as coughing, severe pains in the breast, shortness of breath, night sweats, and extreme weakness and lassitude of my whole system. My family nearly all having died of the disease, I had given up all hope of recovery, as nothing gave me relief; but through the persuasion of a friend I was induced to try Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. The first bottle relieved me considerably, and the third bottle cured me entirely. I now feel as well as I ever did in my life, and am able to follow my occupation of farmer as fully as any one. I also had a sister in a more advanced state of the disease, having been confined to her bed for over a year, and pronounced beyond hope by her best physicians. She also was entirely cured by the Wild Cherry, but it required six or eight bottles, and she still takes it occasionally as a preventative. Being naturally weak-chested, I would sincerely urge all who are similarly affected to try Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, as I am satisfied that but for my own valuable remedy my sister and myself would not now be living. I would cheerfully answer any one who may address me on the subject, and state our cases more fully."

Wonderful Success!
 It is reported that BOSCHER'S GERMAN Syrup has since its introduction in the United States, reached the immense sale of 40,000 dozen per year. Over 5,000 Druggists have ordered this Medicine direct from the Factory, at Woodbury N. J., and not one letter speaks of a single failure, but every letter reports its success. It is curing severe Coughs, Croup, whooping Cough, Consumption, or any disease of Throat and Lungs. We advise any person that has any pre-disposition to weak Lungs, to go to their Druggist, L. D. COLLIER, and get this Medicine, or inquire about it. It is a small size, 75 cents; sample bottle, 10 cents. Two doses will relieve any case. Don't neglect your cough. For sale also by L. M. DASHIELL, Toney Tank, Md.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

SHERIFF'S SALE!
 By virtue of four writs of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for Wicomico County, and to me directed by the said Court, Milton A. Parsons and Levin T. H. Irving, executors of Benjamin Parsons, against the goods, chattels, lands and tenements of Alfred J. Wood, of said County, I have seized upon and taken in execution, all the right, title and interest of the said Alfred J. Wood, of and to

One House and Lot opposite to Josiah W. Parnell's, also one lot of land adjoining the lands of Charles Bennett, purchased of said executors, also

One Steam Mill
 and fixtures, now on the lands of Parnell Tondine, near the "White Farm," as the property of the said Alfred J. Wood, and I hereby give notice, that on SATURDAY, September 30th,

 at the Court House door in the town of Salisbury, at the hour of two o'clock, P. M., I shall proceed to sell the above described property so seized and taken in execution to the highest bidder for cash, to satisfy said writ, costs and charges.

 Democratic Nominees for President and Vice-President of the United States.
 WITH PORTRAITS AND SEMI-OFFICIAL BIOGRAPHIES.
 BY C. EDWARDS LESTE B.,
 Author of "Our First Hand-Book," "Life and Public Services of Charles Sumner," etc., etc.

It is fully written, is full of interesting data, and is altogether one of the best arguments in favor of the principles it advocates that could be suggested to readers.—Frederick Eagle.

Written from material furnished by the distinguished statesman, and by their authority, every one is anxious to learn of the early life, public acts, private virtues and exemplary careers of the Reform Governor and the Constitutional Advocate. The volume gives the proceedings of the Convention at St. Louis, the addresses, Letters of Acceptance, with the leading Speeches of Governor Tilden during his long and earnest battle for reform, and contains with authority over the New York Tammany Ring and the Great Canal Commission.

Local Advertiser

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1876.

This paper has double the circulation of any paper on the lower Peninsula

Hearken to the Call of TILDEN, HENRY, AND REFORM!

A Grand Mass Meeting of the Democracy of Wicomico county will be held in Salisbury, on Tuesday Sept. 19th inst. at two o'clock P. M. to ratify the nomination of Tilden and Hendricks, and also that of the Hon. Daniel M. Henry, our candidate for Congress.

The following distinguished gentlemen will be present and address the meeting on the vital issues of the day: Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, U. S. Senator from Delaware; Hon. John O'Byrne, Delaware; Hon. James U. Dennis, Delaware; Hon. B. L. Waters, Col. Henry Page, Princess Anne, Md.; James Alfred Pearce, Esq., Chestertown, Md.; Charles E. Goldborough, Esq., and Hon. Daniel M. Henry, (nominee for Congress 1st District) Cambridge, Md.; Hon. E. K. Wilson, Snow Hill, Md.; Hon. Daniel Folds, Caroline Co., Md.; and Hon. Phillip F. Thomas, Eastern, Md.

Every Democrat and Conservative voter in the county, and all who are weary of Grantism, and are opposed to having "the old shop under a new name," are earnestly requested to be present. Come one! come all! and let us show our neighbors that we are alive to the importance of the present campaign and are in earnest in the great and good work of reform.

Wicomico must maintain her envied reputation as the Banner County of the Shore.

A delightful rain visited this section of the county on Wednesday last.

The excursion to Ocean City was liberally patronized on Thursday last.

Some mischievous editor has named the True Marylander the "Hoss" organ, as they say all his locals are about horses.

The pleasure yacht Lizzie B. is for charter on reasonable terms, to fishing, excursion or sailing parties. For full particulars enquire of Dr. Bell.

The registration officers have not been kept very busy this week. There is entirely too much neglect shown by those entitled to vote.

ERRATUM.—Some of the papers on the Peninsula have put down our Agricultural and Mechanical Fair for September instead of October. See advertisement in another column.

The picture man is still trying to hang people by selling a fifty cent picture, asking four dollars for it—fifty cents cash, the balance in weekly instalments.

One thousand more new subscribers wanted, in consequence of our contemplated increased facilities for printing the Advertiser. We desire an increase of our subscription list. Only one dollar a year for one of the liveliest country papers on the Shore.

MORE BURGLARY.—The dwelling of Mr. Lloyd Taylor, in Camden, was entered by burglars on Monday night during his absence. The ladies were so badly frightened that they left home, and the thieves only left the house when they heard some one coming in the front door.

PENINSULAR AGRICULTURAL FAIRS.—At Salisbury, Md., October 11, 12 and 13. At Wharton, Kent county, Md., September 26, 27 and 28. At Bridgeville, Del., September 27, 28 and 29. At Middletown, Del., October 4, 5 and 6. At Laurel, Del., October 17, 18, 19 and 20. At Cambridge, Md., October 20, 21 and 22. At Princess Anne, Md., October 4, 5 and 6.

To reach the highest standard of health, nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels; a slight deviation brings many inconveniences and paves the way to more serious dangers. We can recommend Dr. Ball's Vegetable Pills as the best medicine for the needs of the digestive apparatus.

The American Farmer for September is received, with a full freight of sound and seasonable agricultural advice, which it would profit every one of our farmers to avail of. The subscription is $1.50 a year, or only $1.00 to clubs of five or more. Saml Sands & Son, Baltimore, are the publishers.

Dr. W. C. Ames, of Whaleyville Circuit, having to attend, as "Fraternal Messenger," the Pittsburgh Conference, Methodist Church, and expecting to be absent from the Circuit for about ten days, takes this method of notifying those who may require his services, ministerially or professionally, of his absence for the time specified.

EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS. All applicants to teach in the schools of Wicomico County, as well as those teachers whose certificates have expired by reason of limitation, should bear in mind that the annual examination will be held in the High School Building in Salisbury on the 20th and 21st of this month. No other examination for the year has been fixed by the Board, which has promptly refused to allow the full salary to any teacher until he or she has completed the examination.

We have received the Maryland Farmer for September, and as usual, it is filled with useful information to the farmer. The Farmer should be in every well regulated farm house. Among the subjects treated in this number are the following: Natural Laws of Agriculture, Farm work for September, deep, versus shallow plowing, fall plowing, prolific corn, care of young stock and a great variety of other subjects of a useful and ornamental nature are treated in a masterly manner. Send and get the Farmer at $1.50 per annum, in advance.

THE CAMPAIGN DEMOCRAT.—We have received the initial number of the Campaign Democrat, a really little sheet, fully alive to the importance of the great issues of the day, and ably edited by a corps of distinguished gentlemen, among whom is our old friend Baker A. Jameson, formerly of St. Mary's, but at present of Baltimore City. We take great pleasure in recommending the Campaign Democrat to the favorable consideration of our readers. Subscription price 50 cents. Send in your names to the Campaign Publishing Company, at 13 Law Buildings, Baltimore, Md.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.—We learn from the September number of the Md. School Journal that Prof. Newell has fixed January 15th, as the day for the opening of the Teachers' Institute for the three counties of Somerset, Worcester and Wicomico. We infer from this that the Institute is to be a joint one, and we presume it will be held in Salisbury, as this is more central and more accessible for all the teachers than any other point. It is to begin on Monday and last until Friday. So says the School Journal.

All teachers who want the School Journal for the next school year should at once send in their names to the Secretary of the School Board who has received the September issue.

The numerous friends and patients of Dr. Wm. Darmon will be pleased to learn that he will again visit this place, arriving at noon on Monday, September 11th, and remaining until noon on Wednesday, 13th inst. He can be found at the Peninsula House. His office hours are from 9 A. M. to 10 P. M. He will examine all who may call, tell them if they have any disease, where it is located, the organs affected, and the producing cause, and this without asking questions. All his examinations and consultations are free. The Doctor has won quite a reputation among us, and meets with much success. He will also be at Pittsville, at "Timon's Hotel," from Wednesday afternoon September 13th until Thursday of tomorrow, September 14th. The afflicted will please take notice.

In our perambulations about town, we noticed a well executed sign. We suppose it is one of Munson's signs of the times. The ground was black as the darkness which overshadowed Egypt, while the gilt letters had some significance. It may be that some who are to sleep beneath the marble slabs within, will, after passing through the dark shadows of the grave, walk the golden streets of the Celestial City. But it makes no difference to Dolly Varden Hoston what becomes of the bodies, or of the souls of the dear ones, so he has an order for some of his beautiful Monuments which he can turn off so nicely out of his pocket and American marble, to mark the last resting place of a dear father, mother, sister or brother, husband or wife, or one of the little prattlers who make life happy, and are the cause of so much anxiety at its close. Call and see some of Mr. Hoston's beautiful monuments at the Salisbury Marble Yard, Dock Street, between the bridges.

The events of Wednesday night, plainly show the greatness of a night ball for this place. At a not late hour, a burglary is attempted in one of the most frequented parts of the town, and it is only with great difficulty that assistance is procured.—We have conversed with a great many taxpayers, and have not seen one as yet who was not in favor of employing a night officer. It is too much to expect one officer, however faithful, to guard day and night the interests of the town, and self protection demands that a more careful watch should be maintained in the night than in the day. The reason is obvious. In the day the streets are crowded with people, each and every one of whom is more or less interested in the welfare and security of the place. When it is too late, our board of Commissioners may regret the folly of not appointing some one to guard against every contingency.—Our advice is to call a special meeting, and gratify the wishes of the people at once.

The Democratic Congressional Convention assembled at Ocean City on Thursday last, and organized by electing Hon. L. L. Waters, of Somerset County, President, and George J. Meekins, Esq., of Dorchester County, Secretary. After some preliminary motions, nominations being in order, Jas. R. Willing, of Wicomico County, nominated Hon. Daniel M. Henry, of Dorchester County, for Congress. This nomination was seconded by Hon. P. F. Downs, of Caroline County, in an appropriate speech. Charles H. Gibson, Esq., of Talbot County, nominated Hon. P. F. Thomas, of Talbot County, for Congress. This nomination was seconded by Col. Bateman, of Talbot.—Several speeches were made eulogistic of those two gentlemen by members of the Convention, after which nominations were closed, and a vote taken, which resulted in the nomination of Hon. D. M. Henry, he receiving 14 votes, against 12 for Gov. Thomas. The friends of Hon. Daniel Fields, Hon. C. F. Goldsborough and Lemuel Malone, at the request of those gentlemen, declined to present their names to the Convention. A committee of five were appointed to wait on Mr. Henry and inform him of his nomination. The Convention adjourned subject to the call of the President. For want of space we are prevented from giving a full account of the proceedings.

APPOINTMENTS.—The following appointments of pupils have recently been made from this county: The School Board has appointed Jay D. Williams, of Rockawalking, and Emerson P. Roberts, of Tyaskin, to the State Scholarships in St. John's College wherein board as well as tuition is furnished free, they being found nearest prepared for the Freshmen Class of said College after competitive examination. It has also appointed Granville M. Catlin of Tyaskin to one of the Scholarships in said College entitling the holder to only tuition and room-rent free. He will have to pay for his board and text books.

The said Board has also appointed Miss Nannie H. White and Miss Belle Williams of Salisbury to two of the vacant Scholarships in the State Normal School, Baltimore.

The orphan's Court has also appointed Albert E. Twiford of Sharptown to the vacant Scholarship in this county in Washington College, Chester town.

The above young gentlemen and ladies all sustain excellent moral characters and a high reputation from their teachers for studious habits. They will do credit to the county they represent.

DEAD ON THE FIELD OF DISHONOR.—The quiet people who reside on Main street near Division, had a genuine excitement on Wednesday evening last. Some daring thief was attempting to break into the dwelling of Dr. F. M. Slemons and Mr. J. P. Ball. Dr. S. was away from home on a professional visit, and as there was no one home but ladies, they were badly frightened. Dr. Bell, who boards nearly opposite was called up, and went to their relief. Sometime however had elapsed since the burglar had been seen, and he had disappeared. He had sworn to go into the two houses, and now all was anxiety. A warm reception was ready, when he should make his appearance, but he deemed discretion the better part of valor and kept his person hid. Mr. Ball was now awakened and made acquainted with the state of affairs. Jim was nervous, but snatching up a toy revolver—shoots only the smallest size cartridge—he went down stairs to reconnoitre. By way of letting the fellow outside know that he was on the war path, Jim discharged the pistol before he got fairly down stairs. Going to the kitchen door, he unlocked it, when the cause of all the trouble came tumbling head foremost into the room. Mr. B. acknowledges that he was badly scared, but under the excitement of the moment he fired his pistol twice at the intruder, who now lay prone upon the floor. Both balls unfortunately missed, but Jim thought that they had done effective work and loudly called for help, saying that "I have killed a man and he is now lying there in the door." Dr. Bell examined the supposed corpse and ascertained Mr. Ball that the work was ineffective, the victim was dead, but not dead by the use of fire arms. Whiskey had him and he was dead drunk. Mr. W. H. Cathell and A. L. Richardson were called in, and the man more carefully examined. He turned out to be Humphrey Richardson who has but lately finished a term in Somerset county jail. Much regret was expressed that Mr. Ball's marksmanship was no better, as Richardson is considered by all who know him to be an exceedingly dangerous character, to be at large.

AGRICULTURAL FAIR.—The First Annual Fair of the Wicomico County Agricultural and Mechanical Association will be held at Salisbury on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, October 12th, 13th and 14th. Premiums offered in the different departments: Horses, Cattle, Sheep, Swine, Poultry and other Live Stock, Agricultural Machinery, Implements and Products of all kinds. Poetry.

The Scapegoat.
(a la Belknap.)
In first-class mischief since the Fall,
Men say with sage accumen,
Down at the bottom of it all,
You'll always find a woman.

Like Adam: 'neath a petticoat,
They hide; oh fie! for shame!
Oftin to reap the benefit
While woman bears the blame.

Alas the times! alas the manners!
That freedom should no longer be
The Golden Eagle of our banners
Upheld by homely honesty.

That gentle Dame retires sobbing,
Hiding her modest blushing face
To think Administration, jobbing Usurps her old time-honored place.

But victory 'll bear her from her bow
To grace our cause most righteous
Reform the watchword of the hour,
With Tilden in the White House!

THE GREAT WHEEL.

BY MRS. MARIAN STOCKTON.

Where was the letter of instructions that had failed to reach her? Why had it not been given to her, according to this clergyman's promise, whether he were alive or dead? Who was Cyrus P. Bartley? She had never heard of him. Was there anything among her father's papers to throw light on this? Most of these he had destroyed before his death, and all the business papers were in Mr. Grahame's hands. When she came of age they had been given to her, and she had looked over some of them, but finding them dry reading, and not easy to be understood, she had gladly given them back to Mr. Grahame when he consented to continue in charge of her business interests. She was sure, however, that in all that business detail there could be no allusion to this matter. Her father's papers that were in her possession consisted only of the letters that had passed between him and her mother. They were few in number, and she had read them many times. Nevertheless she got them out now, and went carefully over them, analyzing every sentence, if perchance, it might contain a hidden meaning. If a man would confide a secret to anybody he surely would to his wife. A cloudless summer day could not be more clear and open than was the life laid bare in these letters. If a secret there was, it had happened after her mother's death; or, if known to both, had been carefully excluded from their letters. This was to be expected, perhaps, and did not prove anything. But Cyrus P. Bartley was not mentioned in any of them.

This was all she could do at present. Her next proceeding would be to look over the papers in the old clock, and if she found nothing there, what then?

Here the dinner bell rang, and Madeline went down stairs, first placing the scrap of paper in a safe place. Mr. Grahame had "dropped in," as he often did, near the dinner hour, and he and Miss Pinder carried on such an animated conversation about planting fruit trees and grafting, and kindred subjects, riding rampant a favorite hobby, that Madeline's want of appetite and total silence was not observed. When the dessert was placed on the table, and there was a lull in the storm of words she introduced the subject of the new paragon just finished, and from this it was easy to lead the conversation to their rector in particular and to ministers in general. And then she put a leading question: "Mr. Grahame, did many ministers visit my father?"

"Yes, a good many."
"He liked them then, particularly?"
"I don't know. He was hospitable to everybody, and entertained a great deal of company."
"Did he like one more than another?"
"Like whom? Oh! the ministers, you mean. I do not remember much about them. But he had a very intimate friend who was a minister, and I used to think he liked others; perhaps for his sake. He told me often that this man was so good and pure that he would trust him above himself."

"I have found the man!" thought Madeline. "Who was he?" she asked.
"I cannot recall the name. In fact, I think I never heard it. Your father many times looked for him to visit Deptford, but he never came. He was a native of Rochester, and was at college with your father."

After dinner Madeline made her way to Ross Peter's parlor, and announced that she had come to look over the papers.

"Hoo!" grunted Ross. "Such a do-to as there is over them old papers! I wish I'd a level the fool papers, and then I wouldn't be bothered."

"There is no use being cross about it, Ross. I don't wish to read any papers of yours. We will look them over together, and I will promise you only to read what has belonged to my own family. That is perfectly fair, and I know you are always anxious to oblige me."

"You've been took all of a sudden, Miss Madeline," said Ross, not in the least mollified with this bit of flattery. "I've had them papers since you was knee high to a duck, and this is the first I've heard of any looking over."

"It struck me to-day, when I saw such a pile of them, that there might be something of importance among them. The papers shall be examined, Ross. That I am resolved upon, and an exhibition of bad temper will avail you nothing."

Ross was so overcome with astonishment at this that he stared open-mouthed at the speaker. He had fallen into a habit of making surly answers as a way of asserting his independence, and proving to everybody that he had money enough and wanted no favor, and only served Miss Depp because it was his pleasure. Until now Madeline had taken no notice of this manner except to be amused by it, and it had never entered his mind that anything he said to his young mistress could be impertinent.

"Bless your soul! Miss Madeline," he exclaimed when he had recovered his breath. "I didn't a mean to say anything wrong. You're welcome to look over the papers."

Two stools were found capable of standing on their legs, and being placed in front of the clock, old Ross and his young mistress addressed themselves to their task. The former quite enjoyed it, but it was a weary business to the latter. She would glance over each paper as she took it out, and then resign it into Ross's keeping with a brief account of its contents. There were notes of invitation to and from persons long dead; letters of condolence; school compositions; parts of love letters that had passed between former servants; synopsis of lectures; old accounts; everything in fact that was worthless. Among the mass she discovered two letters that had been written by her father to some insurance office, and four parts of letters that had been written to him on business connected with the mill. But there was nothing whatever to throw light on Cyrus P. Bartley.

The next thing to be done was to make inquiries in Rochester. But here she must be very careful. Her father had lived there in early life, and she must not address herself to any one who was likely to remember Rogers Depp. She felt no hesitation in using her own name, for she knew no one in the place. Her best plan, she thought would be to write to some young law firm. A Rochester in paper gave her the necessary information on this point, and she lost no time in writing her note:

"Messrs. Brown & Scott.—Gentlemen: I wish to obtain full information in regard to a clergyman named Cyrus P. Bartley, who, I have some reason to believe, was a native of Rochester. Will you be kind enough to take some means of gaining this information for me, conducting your inquiries as quietly as possible, and let me know the results as soon as practicable? I suppose it is unnecessary to mention that I wish this communication to be considered strictly private."

"If you will send the bill for your services with the letter of information it will be attended to at once. Address Miss Madeline Depp, Deptford."

This was Madeline's first business letter, and it cost her much time and several sheets of paper before she brought it into a sufficiently small compass. Having accomplished this she read it over three times with great pride.

"It is so terse and man like," she thought. "Most girls would have scribbled over three pages!"

CHAPTER XII.

"IT CHANGED THE SONG THE MAIDEN SANG WAS ONE OF FORTUNE AND HER WHEEL."
Madeline treated Horace as she had always done, true to her promise that she would consider their relations unchanged by the proposal he had made her. But nevertheless she felt that she was losing ground with her. She seemed to take less interest in his society, and this he regarded as a worse sign than carelessness for the matters their mutual sympathy in which had drawn them together. He did not know that great matters were engrossing her mind, and it puzzled him to account for the change in her. He concluded that the best thing to do was to give her a rival, and thus shake her careless confidence in the possession of his affection. Phoebe Ware presented herself to his mental vision as peculiarly fitted for this purpose. There were young ladies in Deptford whom he would have preferred, but he might get himself into a dangerous scrape with one of them, whereas Phoebe was safe. She was a strange star, revolving for the present within the charmed orbit of Deptford aristocracy, and her fate was a matter of no great concern with anybody. She was a pretty girl, too, and vain enough to be easily cajoled, and she put on such comical literary airs that a flirtation with her would be an amusing variety. So he became very attentive to Phoebe, and Madeline looked on well pleased, never suspecting anything between them but a cordial friendship. She beamed graciously on Horace because of his kindness to her friend, who she felt was rather looked down upon by her acquaintances. Consequently his flirtation with Phoebe did further his cause with Madeline, though not precisely in the way he had planned. Neither Madeline's friendship, nor the important position Phoebe occupied in the benevolent enterprises that were growing more and more popular in Deptford, had given her such a lift into the aristocratic element as these attentions of Horace. Whether they were dictated by friendship, flirtation or downright love mattered little. He was a society idol, and the fact that he divided his attentions between Madeline and Phoebe gave the latter a social importance she could not have gained otherwise.

As for Phoebe herself, her mind was in a flutter. It was but a short time since she had had that beautiful dream of love in a cottage with Richard Moreham—a bison of a daintily furnished cottage, which, in time, was to grow into a palace. But since the September picnic, that dream had grown dim. If the choice were given her even now between Horace and Richard, she would take the latter without a moment's hesitation. That corner of her heart that was set apart for love was already occupied by Richard, a love that was real of his kind, although she always thought of him as, at some future time, giving her what she coveted above all things, wealth and position—such a position as Horace could never hope to give. Circumstances had placed Horace high socially, and by circumstances he would always be governed, while Richard would conquer circumstances. Thus she reasoned, but her hold on Richard was so very shadowy that she felt deeply thankful to Fortune for sending her Horace. It was, apparently, the more brilliant match of the two, and she knew she would be the envy of several other girls. And there would be a proud satisfaction in winning Madeline's lover; a fair compensation for Madeline's having stolen hers. For nothing could get it out of Phoebe's heart that Richard would have been her lover had not Madeline's wealth stood in the way.

It was, of course, well known that Horace was Madeline's suitor, and there had been much talking, and some heavy betting on the probabilities of his success. Deptford was more deeply interested in it than in a presidential election. Whether she would have him; what part of her property she would bestow upon him; and, above all, whether they would live in Deptford or New York, were topics discussed in every parlor of the town, at the boarding-house tables, and at the counters of the drug shops. If she went away who would be able to make the society of Upper Town what it was now? And who would so freely spend money for the instruction and amusement of Lower Town?

Phoebe's opinion of this important matter was often asked, but she declined answering with such an air of mystery that it was generally believed she knew all about it. In fact, she knew nothing, and in all Deptford there was not a person so anxious to get at the truth. Was there any sort of engagement between Horace and Madeline? Why had Richard left Deptford? Had he spoken to Madeline? Or was Sam mistaken about Richard? Perhaps this proud girl had sent him away. If so, might he not come to her, who had in her poverty recognized his worth? Wealth had dazzled him, but when that glamour wore off might he not think of her beauty and goodness, and of an intellect that could appreciate him? All this might be, but she was by no means sure of it, and, in the meantime, she might lose Horace, who evidently loved her better than he did Madeline. But how far would this love lead him? Would it induce him to give up such a prize as Madeline? Phoebe was in great perplexity. She really did not know how to steer her bark into a safe haven. Again and again did she try to worm herself into Madeline's confidence, but this was a difficult matter with a girl who seldom talked about herself.

But with such steadiness of purpose and so much at stake, it would have been strange if Phoebe had not at last succeeded. On the night of Mrs. Marsh's party Madeline did in some sort give her the long-desired confidence. It had got to be a settled matter that Phoebe should spend the night of a party at Madeline's, so as not to disturb her mother by her late hours. On this particular night Phoebe chanced to say when they entered her bedroom:

"Now comes the worst of party going. I always stay awake for hours after, and don't know what to do with myself."

"I will tell you what to do now," said Madeline. "Make yourself comfortable in a dressing gown and this easy chair. I will make myself comfortable, and will soon return to talk over the party with you, and will give you every body to pieces that was there."

"But I don't wish you to keep awake for my sake."

"My dear, it will be for my own. That wood-fire is tempting, and the prospect of a dish of gossip is still more so."

As the two girls talked about the party, Phoebe was wondering how she could introduce the subject nearest her heart into the conversation. Finally it occurred to her to make a bold stroke. Taking advantage of a pause she said abruptly:

"You have not seemed like yourself lately, Madeline. I have been longing to assert my privilege as a friend to help you, if I only knew how."

Madeline was alarmed. Her mind at once reverted to Mr. Bartley's letter. "Since what time you have noticed this change?"

"Oh, I don't exactly know; some weeks, I think. In fact, ever since the last picnic."

"So long as that!" exclaimed Madeline, greatly relieved. "What can have been the matter with me? Have I behaved very badly?"

"No, of course not," said Phoebe, impatiently. "You have not been like yourself, that's all."

"Perhaps I have been extraordinarily good, then, for I am so unacquainted with myself that I don't know when I am unlike that very charming personage. Do tell me what I have done!"

Phoebe found her undertaking rather difficult. "You seem to have lost much of your life and spirit," she said hesitatingly. "You are restless, and take up so many things you never finish, and you have long fits of abstraction and depression, when you scarcely speak a word, and cannot be got to take an interest in anything."

"What a harrowing picture! What a solemn, lugubrious, wishy, stupid companion I must have been! How have you borne with me?"

"Oh, if you are going to make fun of it I have done. I thought you regarded me as a friend, but it seems I was mistaken."

Madeline was quite touched by this appeal. She took Phoebe's hand that was nearest her in both of hers, and held it firmly. "You know, Phoebe," she said affectionately, "that you are the only real friend of my own age that I ever had. And as I sought you out, and almost insisted on your friendship, you may readily suppose I value it."

"But you don't treat me with any confidence. You never tell me your secrets."

"I have no secrets," Madeline was about to say, but checked the words before they arose to her lips. A short time before she could have said this perfect truth, "Is telling secrets the only proof of friendship?" she asked.

"Confidence is the proof of love, you know. Girls always tell their love secrets to their friends."

Again Madeline was relieved. She was beginning to fear that she had in some way betrayed her present anxiety. "If you want to know my love secrets," she said with a merry little laugh, "they are soon told. It never occurred to me to mention them to you, for they are most absurdly common place."

"I do very much want to hear them."

Hearken to the Call of TILDEN, HENRY, AND REFORM!

A Grand Mass Meeting of the Democracy of Wisconsin county will be held in Salisbury, on Tuesday Sept. 19th inst., at two o'clock P. M. to ratify the nomination of Tilden and Hendricks, and also that of the Hon. Daniel M. Henry, our candidate for Congress.

The following distinguished gentlemen will be present and address the meeting on the vital issues of the day: Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, U. S. Senator from Delaware; Hon. John O'Byrne, Delaware; Hon. James U. Dennis, Delaware; Hon. Charles H. Johnson, Delaware; Hon. E. K. Wilson, Snow Hill, Md.; Hon. Daniel Fields, Caroline Co., Md.; and Hon. Phillip F. Thomas, Eastern, Md.

Every Democrat and Conservative voter in the county, and all who are weary of Grantism, and are opposed to having "the old shop under a new name," are earnestly requested to be present. Come one! come all! and let us show our neighbors that we are alive to the importance of the present campaign and are in earnest in the great and good work of reform.

Wisconsin must maintain her envied reputation as the Banner County of the Shore.

By order Devotional Com., Y. M. C. A. On Thursday night of last week, a horse belonging to Mr. L. M. Dashiell, at Tony Tank Mills, was stolen from the stables. Suspicion pointed towards Humphrey Richardson as the thief, and in this instance it proved true. The horse was traced to Snow Hill. Here Richardson had traded the horse for a mule and sold the latter animal to a negro for fifteen dollars, seventy-five cents cash, the balance on time. Richardson was then arrested and lodged in Snow Hill jail, news having been sent to the authorities that the horse was stolen. He will be kept in Snow Hill jail until our term of Court, and then he will in all probability visit Baltimore, on a free ticket, with all expenses paid.

The Removal of Bishop Stone's Remains. The Rt. Rev. Wm. M. Stone, D. D., for twenty five years Rector of the P. E. Church in the Spring Hill and Stepey Parishes, and for eight years Bishop of the same church in the Diocese of Maryland, died at his home near Salisbury Feb. 26, 1838. According to the custom which prevailed in the neighborhood, and prevails there still, he was buried in the family burying-ground in a field near the old homestead. The fate of all or nearly all such burying grounds speedily overtook this one. The land passed into the possession of strangers. The family of the deceased were scattered, no one of them remaining in the neighborhood. The resting-place of the dead was uncared for. The fence decayed and fell into ruin. The ground became overgrown with briars and bushes, and if the owner of the field had driven his plow over the spot he could hardly have been blamed. The signs of neglect would at least have been obliterated.

For many years the ground continued thus neglected and desolate, to the scandal of those who either remembered the deceased, or had heard their fathers speak of him. Often the propriety of removing his remains to a more fitting resting-place was spoken of, but from one cause or another the matter went no further. Last Spring, however, on the occasion of his official visit to the parish, the attention of Bishop Lay was called to the condition of the resting-place of his predecessor, and he, with the Rector of the parish, visited the spot. At the next meeting of the Diocesan Convention he reported the facts to that body, and while giving it as his opinion that from the lapse of time since the interment it was unavoidable to disturb the remains, he remarked on the impropriety of using private burying grounds when the church yards and public cemeteries could be used. The convention were interested in the report, but did not agree with the Bishop as to the removal, and appointed a committee, consisting of the Bishop, the Rector of the Parish, and its lay delegate, J. Aug. Parsons, Esq., to make arrangements for the removal.

In accordance with this resolution, last Friday afternoon, the committee proceeded to the spot, and in the presence of one of the surviving sons of the deceased, Dr. Thomas Stone, the grave was opened, and the scanty remains of the late Bishop and those of his wife were reverently collected, and removed to the lot selected for them in the Parsons' Cemetery. It is contemplated to erect a fitting monument over the place where they now rest, as soon as the facts of the case can be brought to the knowledge of the church in the two Dioceses into which the one over which Bishop Stone presided has been divided, and the necessary funds collected.

The head stones which marked the old graves were also removed and re-erected at the head of the new ones. The inscription on that of the Bishop, showing the estimation in which he was held by his contemporaries, is as follows: THIS STONE Marks the beloved resting place Of one who Faithful until Death Which God has prepared For those who love Him. THE RIGHT REV. WILLIAM M. STONE, D. D., Was born June 1st 1779 Was Rector Of Spring Hill and Stepey Parishes More than 25 years; BISHOP OF MARYLAND Oct. 21, 1830 And died 26 Feb. 1838 He was eminently meek and mild in face; his heart was warm and true, and he had cordial friends; OFFICE AND HONOR SOUGHT HIM IN THE RETIREMENT WHICH HE LOVED; PATIENCE AND FAITH SUSTAINED HIM IN THE TRIALS OF HIS PILGRIMAGE; AND HOPE NEVER FORSOOK HIM, UNTIL HE BEHELD HIM IN THE FRUITFUL OF THE EVERLASTING PROMISES OF THE MASTER. The Truth had as well be Told

There has been much twaddle and nonsense written and published in journals calling themselves Democratic about the manner of the management of the Ocean City Convention. The Star has indulged in a tirade of abuse of everybody who could not see the thing just as its corrupt editor saw it, and the only argument offered by the Star, as a reason why Mr. Thomas should not be rejected, is that it is a custom to return a member. That is true. It is to some extent a custom, but parties, and a constituency like men, have a right to decline to comply with the custom. Mr. Wilson declined a re-election, and the people submitted gracefully to his determination, and Mr. Thomas was put in his place. Mr. T. had but three votes in the Convention, and strange to tell, almost the same counties that put him in there, rejected him this time. There are several instances in the history of the party in this State, where persons were not returned a second time. Col. Hughes, in the 6th district was one, and Mr. Hammell, of the 6th, is another instance. But while we mention these instances, we do not attach much importance to the fact of Mr. Thomas' rejection. At least political importance, in as much as he has never been a favorite with the Eastern Shore Democracy. Well do we remember in 1867, when a large majority of the delegates from the Eastern Shore to the State Convention, desired the nomination of Hon. ISAAC D. JONES, for Attorney General, Mr. T. went simply for a Western Shore man, and refused to go into an Eastern Shore caucus, and some of the Governor's friends tell us that this is not the only time he has shown a cold disregard for the interests of this Shore. We know it to be true on some occasions, for we were present, and it is said that in the distribution of patronage, he has disregarded this district. We do not know this fact, but we do say that those who would have friends must show themselves friendly. Another charge against the Governor is, that he has disregarded his friends, not noticing their correspondence. As to this charge we have no proof. We did write to him, and he answered by sending the document we desired promptly, and upon that subject we have no complaint to make, but we do believe it was his sine of omission more than those of commission, that has defeated Mr. Thomas.

Mr. Thomas' or Mr. Fields' nomination would not secure that harmony so much needed at this time, when the party in power at Washington are doing their best to despoil the country, and destroy its cherished institutions. So far as we are concerned, we could have cheerfully supported Mr. Thomas, Mr. Fields, or any other good Democrat, who might have been nominated, but we have given, as near as we understand it, the state of the public mind in regard to the matter which has been so perverted by those who know better. And in conclusion let us say, that we believe that the Hon. D. M. HENRY will receive a much larger vote than any other candidate whose name was mentioned before the Convention assembled would have done, had he been nominated.

We take great pleasure in announcing a meeting to be held near Catch Penny, on Friday next, to take into consideration the great questions which now agitate the minds of ten gentlemen in the vicinity of Q., and in view of the vast amount of business to be disposed of, we would suggest for the organization of the meeting, the following officers: President, H. N. CRAWFORD, Secretary, L. M. BRADLEY, Vice-Presidents, J. L. GRIFITH, Geo. MEXICK, THOS. ROBERTSON, S. B. D. JONES and B. J. ROBERTSON, Committee to invite speakers, B. W. TRUITT, P. OWENS, L. I. POLLITT for PAOR SMOG COLLIER. First business in order will be the passage of a series of resolutions censuring the persons who attended the late Primary Meeting held in Q., for allowing T. J. TORPIN to go as a delegate to the County Convention, when it was known that he was in favor of the nomination of the editor of the ADVERTISER as a candidate for Congress. The next thing in order will be a resolution of thanks to the editors of the Eastern Shoreman and Eastern Star for their faithful support of the President of this meeting in giving him an opportunity to be heard in his vindication of the rights of the people. Brothers ROBERTSON and BELL will be invited to attend and take a prominent part in the meeting. Of course they will be present. The next thing in order will be the reading of ten paragraphs of the celebrated speech on the Hawaiian treaty by the President of the meeting, the balance to be read by the distinguished editors, provided a couple of brandy suashes can be had to brighten their ideas, and clear their pipes. We shall be pleased to look in upon these twelve apostles, and we flatter ourselves that we should not be an unwelcome guest to any, except our portly friend of the Star, whose equilibrium is so easily upset, it would make it unpleasant for him, in as much as he would like to indulge in a little amusement at our expense, in the way of denouncing those fellows who he says conspired against the Democratic party, in nominating the Hon. D. M. H. for Congress. All persons who feel an interest in the great cause, for the consideration of which this meeting has been called, are at liberty to attend, but will not be invited to take part in the proceedings, as it is for a specific purpose.

A CORRESPONDENT calling himself "Democrat" writes to us, asking why we do not tell something about the Cross Street affair in South Baltimore, if we are disposed to give the general news. We say in reply, that the affair was a disgrace to those who were concerned in it, but the Democratic party are no more responsible for it, than the Republicans are for an outrage upon a school girl on Tuesday, by a negro at Indianapolis, for we are pretty certain that he was as good a Republican as those roughs in Baltimore were Democrats, to say nothing about the affair in Charleston, where the Republican negroes turned out in a mob of several hundred because some of their own color joined a Democratic club, yet we are not certain that the Republicans as a party are responsible for all this, only so far as the carpet baggers are authorized to produce as much discord as possible, in order that the elections may be interfered with, to carry the South by the bayonet. This fellow says he is a subscriber to the ADVERTISER, but thinks if both sides are not treated alike, he will drop us. We will simply say to him that we are running this machine, and if he does not like it, we will charge him nothing to stop, nor regret his departure, and as to his Democracy, it is like the story of the apples drift. He may be with the apples, but he is certainly not an apple. If he had given us his name, we would have published his card in full.

The colored Democrats of Baltimore, have issued an address to their colored friends of the South, advising them to desert the party who have deceived them long enough, and vote as they please.

Seven thousand more Democratic votes in Maine than ever was polled before. "How is this?"

TILDEN clubs are rapidly increasing in number among the colored people of the country.

Since writing our notice of the Catch Penny meeting, Mr. S. B. D. JONES, one of the ten whose names appeared in a card in the Shoreman, and copied in the Star, has called upon us to explain the reason of his name appearing there, and requesting us to say in our columns that Mr. H. N. CRAWFORD came to him with tears in his eyes, and begged him to allow his name to be written in the card, as Mr. C. said, to vindicate him in the county. Mr. J. consented, on condition that it would not be published. Mr. J. also says that Mr. L. I. POLLITT, whose name is appended, was not at the meeting, as he has been informed. Mr. J. also says, that if there was another Thomas man in Quantico district besides Mr. C., over all others, he does not know that man, and that he only gave his name to Mr. C. to gratify him, as he seemed to be in such deep trouble, and to keep from offending him, as he is a sort of a hypochondriac. We publish this entirely at the request of Mr. JONES, as we think this whole correspondence is of no value to anyone, and certainly can be of little gratification to our enemies.

OVER 2,000 Germans in Cleveland who last year voted for HAYES, are now enrolled in TILDEN clubs, and will vote the entire Democratic ticket this fall. The Cleveland Plain Dealer says there are enough changes in Cuyahoga county alone, to overbalance the majority HAYES received last fall.

Not a single Democratic vote has been cast in the town of Vergennes, Vermont, during the last ten years. On the last election, however, 77 were found in the box.

Another Question about Taxes.

Our Republican friends would make the election of President to turn upon the point whether Mr. Tilden paid as much income tax as he ought to have paid. As to the question of his veracity, it seems almost ridiculous to treat it as seriously raised. But there is a view of the subject of taxation, which seems to us quite deserving of consideration in determining which candidate for President to vote for. It is of a good deal of importance whether the people in general shall continue indefinitely subjected to the present high rate of taxation, or whether there shall be a material reduction of taxes. In fact, this we regard as the great controlling issue in the present campaign.

The extravagance engendered by the war—an evil incident to all wars—has been continued through the eight years of Gen. Grant. We apprehend it would go on without appreciable diminution under Mr. Hayes if he should be elected; whereas under Mr. Tilden we believe the current expenses of carrying on the Government, and the burden of interest on the public debt, would be so much reduced as to afford sensible relief to the masses of the people.

Mr. Tilden is a shrewd, practical financier, and he would manage our finances with great ability; and it is of such management that the country stands sorely in need at the present time.

Look over your tax bills, and if you think it would be pleasanter to have them smaller, vote for Samuel J. Tilden for President. On the other hand, if you like to be heavily taxed and prefer larger rather than smaller taxes, be true to your convictions and vote for Mr. Hayes, with the utmost confidence that under him the taxes will be kept up.

DEAL'S ISLAND, MD., Sept. 19, '76.
EDITOR ADVERTISER:—

By referring to the Baltimore American of September 13th and 16th you will see a communication from this place written by John Dix, and headed "AN OUTRAGE ON DEAL'S ISLAND." Surely it is an outrage on the people of our island and to Soncrast article for such a false and outrageous article to appear in the columns of any paper, therefore I will explain. James Jones (col) procured to the house of Mrs. James Sumners and used disreputable and bellish language and although he did not commit rape, his designs were of that nature. On the husbands return, he informed him of the fact, so he immediately left home and on Sunday, Aug. 27th, told the same to a party of men, who armed themselves and proceeded to the house of the villain and captured him. They took him before Justice Samuel Webster where a fair and impartial (not a "moek trial") was granted, and he was committed to jail. From the month of Jan. he was not struck, not knocked down, not stumped, not tied, but when grabbed had his clothes torn, and that was all. The above is about the sum and substance of the whole affair. The names of Alex Webster of Alex, and Wm. Harrison that were attached to the damaging letter as its witness were a forgery, and these gentlemen will attend to the matter shortly. Jacob W. Webster, Jacob Webster, of Jones, and Wm. D. Webster, the names that were seen in the American as being among the number, were not there, but at home and in bed. The whole affair was perpetrated to get soldiers here and to act as food for the political parties in this year's canvass. Thank God, John Dix, Sr., is well known to the people of Deal's Island, and soon he will be brought to Justice, or at least his alias will,

Mr. Editor:—A severe storm occurred in this vicinity last Sunday which did a great deal of damage. Fodder which the buyers had failed to get off the stalk is almost ruined. Orchards were stripped of fruit, and a great many of the trees torn up by the roots. A great many forest trees were also blown down. A gentleman told me to-day that he knew of a woods near him that one-third of the trees were either broken off or torn up by the roots. Several out-buildings were unroofed by the wind. Fortunately, no dwellings were injured or lives lost.

The storm that swept over here on Sunday last the 17th inst., did much damage. Boats dragged, their anchors and were carried far away. Canoes were turned up side down and many were buried in the sand. Stores were nearly a float and many goods destroyed. Water stood waist deep in places where it was never seen before from an over flow. Wood was washed away. Hogs were drowned in their pens. Chickens and other fowls were destroyed, and much injury was done throughout. The damage is estimated to be over $10,000. The like never was seen on Deal's Island before.

Letter from Christiana.

SUCCEEDING—PICNICS—EXCURSIONS—STORM.

CHRISTIANA, DEL., Sept. 19, 1876.

A Miss Cook, of our village, with convictions not altogether Shakespearian, becoming weary of this earthly life, sought a few days since to end it by swallowing an overdose of laudanum; but was defeated in her maddest purpose by the timely intervention of some powerful emetics.—She seems more reconciled to earth since, and wishes to live on.

The age of picnics has indrawn. First the colored people held one in a grove near by, at which they had music by a brass band, speechifying and feasting. Their parade through our streets was more enthusiastic than orderly. After this came one by the Sunday School of Ebenezer M. E. Church of Christiana charge, without brass band or enthusiastic parade, but with a wee wee speech by the pastor, some croqueting by the parson, his cheerful lady, and a few others, and a rousing feast on ice cream, cake, confectionery and a heap of fun. Blessings on the discoverer of this picnic way of enjoyment for big and little.

The public school of our village, in charge of Rev. R. Graham, the teacher, executed to the Centennial on Saturday last, and had a splendid time. They "did" the whole thing in a day, by marching at double quick and returned better satisfied than that Christoflan who failed to find the Centennial anywhere in the crowded ground.

Old Neptune got mad this time before the sun got astride the equator, and came near having everything his own way. Hereabouts, he tore down houses, trees and fences; shook near all the fruit off the trees; whipped our unweaned felder into shreds; and projected a general scare. In some instances it is avowed (not by preachers) that he made big stony dwellings tremble. We are heartily glad that only two "quinoctials" came during the year. I hope Neptune will be more moderate next time, and not come till his time, so we may be ready.

PRINCES ANNE, Sept. 21st, '76.

Last Sunday's storm touched up this place a little, among others. Some of the finest shade and fruit trees in town were destroyed. In one yard no less than 45 trees were blown down, in another, 25. In fact, all movable objects were dashed round lively.

Times, since the "hurry-cane," have resumed their usual quiet, and the world goes on. The event of Wednesday was the wedding of Mr. E. H. Lankford and Miss Ella Overton, who left on a trip to the city. Wm. P. Rider is leaving the Washington Hotel repainted.

The neat residence of Mr. C. C. Waller, the genial Ticket Agent at this place, is being beautified under the hands of a Salisbury Artist in house decoration.

The writer is enjoying the generous hospitality of Mr. Waller, and his disposition "to stay all summer on this line," so good is the treatment that he receives. Mrs. Wm. Waller, of your town, has been spending the past few weeks in this pleasant village, with improving health.

Some building has been done here since our last visit. "One small old store has been turned into a large new one"—an improvement.

Harper's Magazine for October, 1876.

Harper's Magazine for October is not only plentifully stored with light reading-matter, but has also all those other characteristic attractions which have given it the foremost place in periodical literature.

This Number contains the conclusion of George Eliot's "Daniel Deronda"—the greatest novel of the age. The Fourth Part of "A Woman-Hater" will awaken fresh curiosity as to the authorship of this remarkable story. Mrs. Crank's "The Laurel Bush" and Julian Hawthorne's "Gard" are continued. There are also three excellent short stories.

The illustrated papers in this Number cover a great variety of subjects. J. H. Bendle contributes a piquant and beautifully illustrated article on the mining region in Utah. A. H. Guernsey narrates the thrilling story of Benjamin Robert Hayden's career, illustrated with some of that artist's characteristic sketches. Martha J. Lamb gives a very complete and very interesting description of Newark, recounting also the history of its original settlement. Her paper is profusely illustrated. Emily V. Batty contributes a fascinating paper about old lace, beautifully illustrated, and full of the picturesque remance of her subject. Iyman Abbott, in a very entertaining illustrated article, describes the peculiar domestic customs of the East. Mrs. Mary Treat gives us another illustrated paper on the Carnivorous Plants of Florida; and James Payn contributes a gossip article concerning the late Harriet Martineau, accompanied by her portrait.

The poetry of the Number is contributed by Paul H. Hayne, Rachel Pomeroy, Helen S. Conant, and Louise Chandler Moulton. The Editor's "Easy Chair" contains a suggestive criticism of "Daniel Deronda"; an exposure of the contents of Mr. Flint's celestial mail-bags; some new suggestions concerning Jenkins—also about American inkkeepers. The other Editorial departments are up to their usual standard.

Every workingman is personally interested in the election of Governor Samuel J. Tilden. He has proven himself their true friend by reducing taxation and giving new life to trade. Had his policy, as declared in his letter of acceptance, prevailed at Washington instead of scores of thousands of idle workingmen, trade would prosper, and all who desired employment could have it.

Emil de Girardin says that each year has its task, that of 1876 being to free the eight millions of Christians now under Turkish rule. He urges several plans regarding the countries which they inhabit, one being that they should form a confederation under the title of the United States of the Danube, and that each State should assume its proportion of the present Turkish debt.

Roger Bell, a surgeon prominent in the Bravo trial, has distinguished himself in another cause. A man went to bed and his wife soon after followed him. She found him speechless, with blood flowing from his mouth, a doctor was sent for, but he did no good, and then Mr. Bell was summoned. He discovered that the man's false teeth had got in his throat, almost choking him, and with great skill he dislodged them.

During a recent visit to Cowes, the Prince of Wales called upon the men on board an Earl's yacht to race his own. Believing that the commands of royalty should be obeyed, they consented, without their master's permission, which the Prince had not sought. The Earl regarded this as an inexcusable impertinence. He met the Prince shortly afterward, and vociferously attacked him. The Prince retaliated. Voices rose higher and higher in anger until the pair had to be separated.

A Morning Reform Association has been formed in London and is rapidly gaining in numbers and popularity, under a special impetus given by the clergy. The members are asked to subscribe to a declaration that the present mode of sepulture is unsatisfactory, and that double coffins and brick graves should be discouraged as far as possible. They are also asked to put in practice, or at least recommend, the dispensing with scarfs, hat bands, mourning coaches palls, and other ostentatious adjuncts of funerals.

Mr. Ralph Scott intends to start on his serial voyage from Dover to Calais and back on Oct. 2, and expects to accomplish the feat in sixty minutes. He describes his machine as a strong-built light frame, in which a peculiar mechanical arrangement is placed, and acted upon by a spring. This spring is compressed by a screw and wheel something like the brake of a railway car, and when it is desired to set the machine in motion one end of the spring is allowed to press against the forepart of the frame, while the other part presses the mechanical arrangement.

Murder Will Out!

A few years ago "August Flower" was discovered to be a certain cure for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, a few thin Dyspeptic made known to their friends how easily and quickly they had been cured by its use. The great merits of GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER became heralded through the country by one suffering to another, until, without advertising, its sale had become immense. Druggists in EVERY TOWN in the United States are selling it. No person suffering with Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, low spirits, etc., can take three doses without relief. Go to your Druggist, Dr. L. D. Collier, and get a bottle for 75 cents and try it. Sample bottles 10 cts.

SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR,

For all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen.

After Forty Years trial it is still receiving the most unqualified testimonials of its virtues, from persons of the highest character and responsibility. Eminent physicians concur in its being the most valuable medicine in the family.

It is eminently a Family Medicine, and by being kept ready for immediate use, will save you many an hour of suffering, and many a dollar in time and money.

DOCTORS' BILLS.

Your Regulator is one of the best family medicines ever used. I have not spent a dollar for any family medicine for many years, only for your Regulator, and must say it does not fail to give relief. It has cured a man of mine worth Five Hundred dollars.

The Liver, the largest organ in the body is generally the seat of the disease, and if not regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness, and DEATH will ensue.

If you feel Full, Drowsy, Debilitated, have frequent Headache, Mouth Tastes badly, poor Appetite, and Tongue Coated, you are suffering from Liver Disease, and your Regulator will cure you, and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently.

Hon. Alex. H. Stephens.

"I occasionally use, when my condition requires it, Dr. Simmons' Liver Regulator, with good effect."—HON. ALEX. H. STEPHENS.

Governor of Alabama.

Your Regulator has been in use in my family for some time, and I am persuaded it is

AMERICAN CONGRESS. CAMPAIGN IN THE 1st CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT.

AS ARRANGED BY THE STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE MASS MEETINGS WILL BE HELD IN SEVERAL DISTRICTS, AS FOLLOWS:

CAMBRIDGE, Tuesday, Sept. 26. DENTON, Tuesday, Oct. 3. PRINCETON, Tuesday, Oct. 10. GENTLETTOWN, Tuesday, Oct. 17. SALISBURY, Saturday, Oct. 21. CHESTER, Saturday, Oct. 28.

Hon. Daniel M. Henry, our candidate for Congress, Hon. R. B. Carmichael, and Hon. J. U. Dennis, electors for President, and other distinguished speakers, will be present.

Mr. Thomas J. Turpin has our thanks for papers and other favors.

Dr. Bell killed fifty two water rails of the high water of last Monday.

Sea fish are biting nicely at Humphreys mill.

Wood duck shooting has begun, but as yet, luck is bad.

Mr. A. F. Parsons will open his billiard room next month.

The market is full of sweet potatoes at reasonable prices.

Many persons are laying in their winter supply of coal.

A walking manager—a man leading a tame bear—is now the delight of the urubins of this town.

The bricklayers will not begin work on the jail until the arrival of another cargo of bricks.

The frame of a house, which Mr. William Aikman was building was blown down on Friday afternoon.

Nearly all of our people who can raise the needful will Centennialize next month.

BOARD.—I have three nice rooms to let, with board, at reduced prices, if applied for soon. Mrs. Charlotte Gunby.

The storm of last Sunday played sad havoc with the fodder crop, and it is feared that in some places the supply will be scarce.

FOR SALE.—One Alderney cow. Any one desiring an excellent milch cow, can find one by enquiring at this office.

Those who have not been registered, will have an opportunity to do so on Monday and Tuesday, the 2nd and 3rd days of October.

Are you bilious? Do you feel drowsy? Have you the "blues"? Take a dose of Dr. Bull's Vegetable Pills.

It's the hottest stuff that I ever put in my mouth. It is the way a Salisbury man expressed himself when he drank alcohol for apple brandy.

We have received from Rev. Mr. Ames his Fraternal Address delivered before the Pittsburgh Conference, which will appear next week.

HARD TIMES WILL FOLLOW.—At 40 Main St., C. M. Brownington, has open his Winter stock of boots, shoes and hats. Winter boots down to $2.50 per pair. Call and see him.

In our remarks on Hon. D. M. Henry last week were made to say by uncorrected type that Mr. Henry was 55 years of age while he is 53; also that he was beaten for Congress by Col. J. S. Cottman in 1857 where it was 1851.

During the storm on Sunday the barn of J. C. Phillips' farm was blown down. Three oxen which were in the barn escaped injury. But an old hen in her flight was waylaid and killed by the falling timber.

We were visited last Sunday night by the highest tide we have had here in the last age, at least no one recollects when it was so high. It was five feet above a common high tide. Much property was carried away by the tide.

W. A. & S. A. Graham are selling unaltered bosom shirt of good Wamunutta maulin, and fine Irish Linen for $1.00, also a better quality shirt for $1.25. Under shirts from 40 cents to $2.00. Call and see them at 47 Main St.

Mr. John C. Hughes has our thanks for a basket of the largest apples yet brought to our sanctum. It is a great kindness on the part of our friends of the farming community to think of us thus, and pour into our empty fruit basket such delicious favors. Let the cry be, still they come.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY.—The Democracy of Wicomico county will hold a Grand Mass Meeting in Salisbury on Saturday, the 31st day of October next.

commencing by a Horseback Parade, through the streets at 1 o'clock, P. M., followed by speaking at 2 o'clock, a torchlight procession at 7 o'clock, followed by speaking at 8 o'clock P. M. The people are respectfully invited to attend. By order of the State Central Committee.

Miss Agnes D. Waller will open a school, on Monday, the 2nd of October, in the school house on Broad street, near the M. E. Church, South. Price of tuition per quarter, $3.50 for the ordinary English branches. The higher branches, including Algebra, Geometry and Latin, $5.00.

Miss Agnes is a graduate of the High School in this place and a young lady of fine scholastic attainments, and will, we have no doubt, make a popular and efficient educator.—[E.]

Though Mr. James Cannon has increased the size of his already large store, yet he has filled it to its utmost capacity with a cheaper stock than ever. He has also fitted up a room in the rear of the store, and filled it almost to the ceiling with boots of all prices and styles.

Impd. O. R. M.—The members of Pocomoke Tribe, No. 63, will have a celebration on Tuesday, October 3rd, 1876. They will meet at their Wigwam at one o'clock, P. M., form in procession and march out to the Fair Grounds, where addresses will be delivered by able speakers of the Order. Several sister Tribes have been invited and are expected to be present.

The storm of last Sunday was the most terrific ever known to the oldest inhabitants. The tide rose five feet higher than at common high water, and about sixteen inches higher than it has been for twenty years.

Great damage was done to property on the coast, and also on the Chesapeake and its tributaries. A large schooner was lost on Synepuxent beach, laden with railroad ties. It is thought that the crew were drowned, as none of them made their appearance about the wreck.

"We call the attention to the advertisement of Simmons' Liver Regulator, which appears in the paper to-day. This standard remedy does not deserve to be classed with the many 'patent' nostrums so liberally advertised throughout the country. It is one of the very best preparations of its kind in use; and is recommended by the regular practitioners of medicine. It has a large sale in this town, and can be found in all our drug stores, a bottle or package should be found in every family, as its judicious use is almost certain to prevent a Bilious attack, if taken when the symptoms first show themselves."

SUICIDE IN DORCHESTER.—On Monday morning last James W. Straughn, a member of the firm of Straughn, Bros., Cambridge, Md., committed suicide in that town by cutting his throat. He arose as usual, and after eating his breakfast went to a barber-shop and was shaved. After returning to his store he procured a stool-knife, and repairing to his room upstairs, deliberately drew the deadly blade from out to cut. His brother, hearing a fall, hastened up to his room and found him weltering in his blood. His death was almost instantaneous. No cause is assigned for the rash act, except temporary aberration of the mind. He was about forty years old, and a member of the order of Knights of Pythias.

A PLEASANT DUTY.—To inform our readers that a first class photographic artist in the person of Mr. C. H. Hopkins is in our midst with his Photograph Gallery, and ably assisted by Mr. D. Stansbury Sprague, a young gentleman of considerable ability, will locate amongst us for a short time only. He refers to come of the most prominent citizens of our State; amongst others, Chief Justice Bartol, Judges Miller and Stewart, of the Court of Appeals; Hon. L. Woodford, State Comptroller; Dr. Wm. R. Heywood, James S. Franklin, Clerk Court of Appeals and Judge Wm. H. Tuck. The papers of his own city, as well as many other journals of the State, speak so highly of his production that we feel sure of his ability to please our citizens, and we advise them not to neglect such an opportunity to secure for themselves the advantages he offers.

According to appointment, the Republican Convention to nominate a candidate to represent their party in Congress from the first Congressional District of Maryland convened in the Court House on Tuesday last. It was called to order at 3 o'clock P. M., Capt. Ruth of Kent County, elected President, and L. A. Parsons, of Wicomico, Secretary. On motion of W. Perkins, the roll of counties was called, and credentials of delegates examined. All the counties were represented except Caroline.—A committee of one from each county was appointed to consider the question of nominating a gentleman for Congress. The committee retired, and after a long consultation returned the report that, in their opinion, it was unwise to nominate at present. On motion the Convention adjourned to meet at the same place on Wednesday, October 4th.

We would like to know why it is that the management of the P. W. & B. R. Co., cannot be improved in one particular, and that is this: Passenger trains leave Crisfield at 9 o'clock, A. M., arriving at Wilmington about 4 o'clock, P. M. The passengers all fatigued by a long ride, now, instead of leaving all way passengers in a car behind to go on with an accommodation train which leaves immediately, allowing the Delaware train to go right through to Philadelphia, as it ought to do, stopping nowhere except Chester for water, but instead of this the tired passengers must sit there and be dragged along, and halted at every cross roads between Wilmington and Philadelphia, as if there was no other local train to accommodate those points. We have often heard passengers complain of this, and have been requested to say something about it. We believe if the matter is properly brought to the attention of Mr. Kenney and others, a better arrangement will be made. There is a crying necessity for improvement in this particular, and it is time it was commenced. Forty-five minutes would be an abundance of time to make the run in, while it now takes one hour and a half. We hope to see some improvement at all events. We shall look after our friends at this end of the line next week.

THE CAMPAIGN OPENED.—The meeting held here on Tuesday last, was a decided success. Owing to the severe storm on Sunday last, many farmers were detained at home, repairing fences, cutting away trees, picking up scattered fodder, fruit, &c. Yet, the meeting was quite a large one. The Delmar Brass band came down in their wagon, and drove in town discoursing some beautiful music, and at half past one o'clock drove up in front of the Old Hotel, where the new Tilden & Hendricks flag was thrown to the breeze for the first time on the hickory pole 97 feet high, which was raised last week. At about 2 1/2 o'clock the Salisbury Brass Band joined the Delmar band, and drew a large crowd in front of the stand erected in front of the Old Hotel, when on motion of J. Augustus Parsons, Joseph Bratton, Esq. of Barron Creek, was called to the chair. Mr. Bratton introduced Mr. Myers of Delaware, who made an effective speech, portraying the sins of the Republican party in forcible language. At the close of his speech, the band played a beautiful piece of music, when Hon. Daniel M. Henry, candidate for Congress for the first district was introduced, and made an excellent speech. Mr. Henry's appearance inspired the audience with enthusiasm, such as few men in the district could do, in as much as he is the nominee of the great Democratic party of the district, and not of a faction or fractional part of it. Not having been a candidate before the nomination, he can be truly said, that the office sought him, and not the man the office, consequently, every man can unite upon him as the honored standard bearer of the Democracy of the district. At five o'clock the meeting adjourned to meet at the Court House at 7 o'clock, where it convened in the evening, and was addressed by Hon. Daniel Fields, of Caroline County, for an hour and a half in a well timed and effective speech. At the conclusion of Mr. Fields' remarks, Mr. Henry was again called, and spoke for forty minutes in one of his moods, far exceeding the afternoon speech, at the conclusion of which, the meeting at 10 1/2 o'clock adjourned. The people are well pleased with the nomination of Mr. Henry, and he will receive a cordial support by the people of Wicomico, as well as the other counties in the district. The meeting was a success, although it was hastily gotten up by the club without the aid or concurrence of the Central Committee, merely as a meeting in connection with the pole raising.

THE EQUINOCTIAL STORM AND ITS RAVAGES.—On Saturday night the regular fall storm set in. The wind blew moderately from the North East, and the rain fell in torrents. The country people had gathered their fodder, but a great portion of it was not stacked, but only set up in shecks about the fields. The rain has damaged it seriously, and it is feared that a great deal of it will not be worth anything.

By Sunday morning the wind, still from the North East, had increased to a gale, and the rain was now driven about in fitful gusts. It was seemingly not raining enough to keep people at home. It was however just about hard enough to prevent them from attending divine services, and as a consequence the churches on Sunday were but thinly attended.

After dinner the gale increased in severity and began its work of destruction. Fences, trees, and chimneys were blown down, but with all the damage no person was injured. Below we give details as have come to our notice.

On Main Street the trees in front of Mr. G. R. Rider's store were much broken. A poplar tree in front of Mr. Bristly's stove store was also cracked and bent down. Dawson's awning was torn into shreds. The two large silver poplars in front of Trader's shoe store were started and now lean entirely across the street and will probably have to be removed. A maple tree in front of the Advertiser office was broken squarely off, about four feet from the ground. A large tree in Mr. W. Waller's yard was also blown down, as well as one near Holland and Cooper's office. In Mr. S. McAllister's yard, two trees blew down and fell directly on his house, doing no serious damage. The beautiful willow tree near the Laundry was completely wrecked.

On Division street several trees were blown down in Senator Humphrey's yard. The immense sycamore in John Harrison's yard was blown directly on his house. Those near Mrs. Nichol's house were near their branches. At Mr. E. L. Wailes' three trees were blown down. A poplar in front of Captain L. A. Parson's was blown nearly down. For sometime it was supposed that the Tilden and Hendricks' flag pole, which was only raised on Friday, would be blown down. A few gentlemen however seeing the danger, tied it to the old Hotel firmly, and led a guy line from the topmost to a post in the proper direction, and thus saved it. One of the large willows in the rear of the Court House was broken in twain, and the mulberry tree on the North West corner of same lot was blown down. A large tree in Mr. W. S. Gordy's yard fell directly across the road and tore down a large part of his front fence.—At Mr. R. E. Powell's, a huge mulberry were uprooted, and at Mrs. A. E. J. Bell's two were blown down. A large locust in the M. E. Church yard was blown directly across the street, as also a large tree in Mr. L. Nock's yard. Mrs. B. Wilson also had some trees blown down, and her house presents a bald appearance. The old locust which stood in the far corner of Mr. Theodore Parson's front yard, also fell a victim to the blast, and in falling it demolished a fine maple for Mr. W. Birkhead. A beautiful flower tree in Mrs. Dr. Todd's yard was fearfully broken up. The immense cedar which stood in Mr. L. Malone's lane also came down. One of the trees in the front yard of Mr. Eckerson's was uprooted.

At the Park, the gale evidently had a high old time. Sturdy oaks and hickories which had withstood the winds of centuries were twisted and torn out of shape.

We now come to Church street. Mr. G. R. Rider lost two trees, one of which fell on Mr. R. H. Adkins' fence damaging it somewhat, and completely closing up the front entrance for the time being. A big mulberry in the Old School Baptist meeting house yard was blown directly across the street as also one in the yard of Mr. James E. Cathell, and one in Mrs. Polly Lednum's yard.

In Camden two trees were blown down at Mrs. Ellegood's, two at Captain Adams', one at Mrs. Warren's, one at Mr. C. P. Holland's, and several at Mr. A. W. Woodcock's, one at Col. S. A. Graham's and one at Mrs. Humphrey's.

During the storm, a large flock of sea gulls and strikers were driven by the force of the wind from their usual haunts and made their appearance in Humphrey's pond. As these birds are seldom seen in this vicinity, many wandered to the lake side to admire their graceful aerial evolutions.—Salisbury Sentinel.

Secrecy of Money! There is no doubt but the present situation of all kinds of business in this country is fearfully depressed, and it behooves every family to look carefully to their expenses. Winter is coming on when children are liable to Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. Coughs and Colds will prevail everywhere, and Consumption with other Throat and Lung diseases will carry off many. Doctor Bills are expensive, and we would advise our people to use BOSCHER'S GERMAN SYRUP. It never has failed. One bottle at 75 cents will keep your whole family well during the winter. Two doses will relieve any case. Sold in all towns in the United States, and by your druggist, Dr. L. D. Collier, 14 Main St., Salisbury, Md.

Consumption Cured! An old physician, retired from active practice, having long experience in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple Vegetable Cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a Positive and Radical Cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper.

Wood and Lemuel Malone, I have seized upon and taken in execution, all the right, title and interest of the said Alfred J. Wood, of and to

One House and Lot opposite to Joseph W. Percival, also one lot of land lying between the houses of Charles Bennett, purchased of said executors, also

One Steam Mill and fixtures, now on the lands of Parnell Toadvino, near the "Waite Farm," as the property of the said Alfred J. Wood, and I hereby give notice, that on SATURDAY, September 30th, at the Court House door in the town of Salisbury, at the hour of two o'clock, P. M., I shall proceed to sell the above described property so seized and taken in execution to the highest bidder for cash, to satisfy said writs, costs and charges.

LEVIN R. DORMAN, Sheriff. Sept. 9-1876.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA For Purifying the Blood. This compound of the most valuable and rarest of Sarsaparilla, Dock, Sill, Ingla, and Mandrake with the Iodides of Potash and Iron, makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and distressing. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system, that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determiner signs of these humors in the system, and unless removed, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear such as Eruptions of the Liver, Rheumatism, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptions Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Scaly Pimples, Pimples, Boils, Blisters, Bells, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Uterus and Stomach, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Stiffness of Joints, Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhoea arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure health returns.

We incidentally hinted last week that we should attend to the railroads in this section this week, but our engagements have been such, as to preclude us from giving the subject that degree of attention which it merits.

That great improvement could be made in the passenger traffic, there is not the slightest doubt, without increasing very serious additional expense. A railroad with one passenger train a day is a one horse concern, especially at this advanced stage of the world's history. So small indeed, that we would suppose one man could be President, Treasurer, Superintendent, Road Master, and occasionally conductor on the train, in case of emergency. We would not impose upon him the task of telegraph operator, although it would be perfectly safe for him to do so, as there is no danger of meeting any trains, but show as the trains are, it costs as much to bring a box of goods from Delmar to Salisbury, six miles, as it does to bring it from Wilmington or Philadelphia to Delmar, a distance of a hundred miles, so we are told, or in other words, it costs a merchant in Salisbury just double as much to bring his goods from the city by rail, as it costs a merchant at Delmar, only six miles distant, to bring his goods from the city, and as this is the case, we believe it is as well to let our people know it, in order that they may learn to appreciate their advantages.

And yet we understand that the management of the E. S. R. R. Co. say that they do not discriminate against Salisbury. We have only to say that five years of the present management, will cost the people of Salisbury, in money and lost time, far more than it will cost to build a road to Delmar, and if no arrangement can be made by which increased facilities can be had without an additional road being built, we shall at an early day propose the commencement of such a work as a matter of necessity and self-defense for the people of Wicomico County, for we can never sell a farm to any stranger, so long as it takes him three days to go to market, and return, and be in the city during the business hours of a single day.

The Condition in Louisiana—The Whites Appealing for Justice.

Mr. J. W. Patton, the president of Louisiana Democratic conservative State central committee, has just issued four documents in the interest of justice, peace, order and the supremacy of law. The first is addressed to the Democratic conservative people of Louisiana, and referring to the present policy of the Republican party to harass and intimidate Democratic voters by arresting and imprisoning them on frivolous and groundless charges, and goading them to acts of resistance and violence, warns and implores them "to be patient under provocation and law-abiding under all circumstances," and appealing them to resort to such remedy as the law affords for every injury.

The second document is addressed to Hon. E. C. Billings, judge of the United States District Court of Louisiana, in which it is stated that information has been received that many of the most prominent and respectable citizens of Louisiana are about to be arrested for alleged offenses under the statutes of the United States, but really for the purpose of intimidating quiet and innocent parties. Judge Billings, who is absent from the State, is appealed to return, as his absence is regarded as tantamount to a suspension of a writ of habeas corpus in a time of profound peace.

The third is addressed to the Hon. W. B. Woods, judge of the Circuit Court of the United States of Louisiana, in which the contemplated arrests are alluded to, and an appeal is made for the appointment of the United States commissioners in the several parishes, in order that the parties arrested may not be taken hundreds of miles, at great expense to the government, to the injury of the material interest of the State, at the time when the crops must be saved, and thus frequently inflicting suffering, indignity and pecuniary loss on the innocent.

The fourth paper is addressed to Attorney General Taft, and states that information has been received that, under instructions from his department, the United States marshals and deputy marshals are about to inaugurate a series of arrests for alleged offenses against the election laws of the United States.

Mr. Patton requests for the better protection of the citizens in their right to speedy examination and ball that the United States marshals and deputy marshals be instructed by Mr. Taft's department to take the accused persons when arrested before the nearest or most convenient United States commissioner for preliminary examination.

Any one after reading the above might well ask is Louisiana in the heart of Siberia, or is it a penal province of an arbitrary government? But, whilst the war against the rights and liberties of the white people of Louisiana is being inaugurated, it is gratifying to see that some of the leading republicans of that State, while supporting Hayes and Wheeler, are openly taking ground and will oppose with all their might the Republican State ticket headed by Marshal Packard. Thus Mr. Jasper Blackburn, editor of a republican journal in Northern Louisiana, and hitherto a zealous State Republican, has declared against the State ticket in very forcible language. Mr. Blackburn was even during the war a Union man, and has until very lately been in accord with Kellogg and Packard.

Mr. Robert Ray is another Republican, long prominent and influential in Louisiana politics, who now repudiates the State ticket. He says the make up of the State ticket is of such a character that if elected it would not bring what the people of this State so much need—peace and reform. In addition to this, ex-Gov. Warmoth, Gen. George A. Sheridan, Pinchback and Judge Sloanaker, whilst taking part in the canvass in Northern States in favor of the republican president ticket, openly desire the defeat of the Packard State ticket as the only way to bring peace and order to the State and secure it decently honest government.

Charity Entertainment.
LECTURE ON EQUATORIAL AFRICA BY COL. C. C. LONG, OF THE EGYPTIAN ARMY.

An entertainment in aid of the Savannah (Ga.) sufferers by fever and for the benefit of the French Benevolent Society of Baltimore was given last night at the Academy of Music and was largely attended. Mlle. Anna de Beloeche, the Russian prima donna, sang, and was most enthusiastically applauded. Messrs. Robin, of Paris, and Oudin, of New York, also sang. Mr. Maurice Strakoski presided at the piano. The orchestral music was by Wernig's Fifth Regiment Band. In all respect the musical part of the entertainment was superb, the whole being voluntary in the cause of charity.

The feature of the evening was a lecture by Colonel C. C. Long, Bey, a native of Somerset county, Md., and for seven years in the army of Egypt, and an explorer of Equatorial Africa, who in 1874 discovered Lake Ibrahim, one of the sources of the Nile. The lecturer was introduced by General Felix Agnus, of the French Benevolent Society. He wore his order for distinguished services conferred by the Khedive, and spoke at a table covered with a magnificent leopard's skin presented to the lecturer by M'Tse, one of the native kings in Central Africa.

Col. Long spoke for over an hour. He gave some description of the Egyptian cities of Alexandria and Dairon, their surroundings and population. The climate of Cairo is subject to little variation. The winter months from December to February correspond in temperature to that of May in Maryland, while the other months of the year are marked with intense heat, though the nights are cool. The present Khedive of Egypt is 48 years of age and was educated in France, and was called by the lecturer "the regenerator of fallen Egypt." There is a net work of railroads to the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, connecting its seaport and provincial towns with the metropolis.

The expedition of Sir Samuel Baker he said had failed to extend the territory of Egypt to the sources of the Nile, but this was effected by an expedition of which Col. Gordon was given command. By request of Col. Gordon Col. Long was named chief of staff, and started for Gondo Kora over 3,500 miles from Cairo. The route by the White Nile is dangerous to health from the fetid marshes, rank with poisonous odor, and perilous on account of the crocodile and hippopotami which infest it, while the shores are infested with lions, leopards and other wild animals. The inhabitants along the White Nile live in idleness; they besmear themselves with muck mixed with ashes. The cow with them supplies the place of every other deity.

At Gondo Kora a great sheik of the Bari is described as a tall, finely-built man, in a state of "paris naturalis," a national distinction of all the tribes from Khartoum to Uganda. Upon their shoulders they carry a bit of the stool, their bodies painted with grease and oxide of iron. The ladies wear a girle of strips of leather finely fringed, while from behind the correct thing is to have a long, bushy tail falling nearly to the ankles, and their hair carefully plucked from their heads. Col. Long visited M'Tse, the king of Uganda. He was welcomed by 4,000 warriors on the frontier of the country, headed by a flag, and music on horns made of elephant's tusks. The natives never having seen a horse before were frightened at the sight of man and horse, supposing both to be one.

M'Tse received his guest surrounded by his harem and troops. The troops were dressed in red and black flannel with a tunic of red flannel with black stripes, and fringed with monkey skins, and red cloth turbans. The king was much interested in his appearance with enthusiasm. M'Tse was described as a man of majestic mien, thirty-five years of age, over 6 feet high, with a bright copper color. He was dressed in a long cloak of blue cloth trimmed with gold, and a white turban on his head. He wore a belt of gold, from which hung a Turkish cimeter, and his feet were covered with sandals. His harem contained one hundred very pretty women, clothed in tasteful garments common to both sexes in Uganda, consisting of a cloth sewn together from fragments made of the bark of a tree. They surrounded Col. Long, examined his uniform, pulled his hair and lifted his fez from his head, laughed and giggled with delight.

During his interview with M'Tse the lecturer saw the King order the slaughter of thirty human victims in honor of his visit, and the order was complied with in his presence. The Ugand are copper colored, and have little of the characteristic formation of nose and mouth of the negro. The country is picturesque, interspersed with pestiferous marshes, from which the deadliest odors arise. The banana is the principal food, though the country produces Indian corn, sweet potatoes and sugar cane.

Furnished by M'Tse with an escort, Col. Long visited Lake Victoria, one of the sources of the Nile. The waters of its tributaries are transparent and icy cold. The depth of the lake is from 30 to 40 feet, and it is 18 to 20 miles wide. On his expedition to Lake Victoria Col. Long discovered another lake which forms one of the sources of the Nile, which he named Lake Ibrahim. This lake lies between Lakes Victoria and Albert. Lake Ibrahim is the great vegetable nursery of the White Nile; its banks abound with beautiful flowers. It is fed by almost perpetual rains.

Col. Long was attacked on Lake Ibrahim by a large body of savages, but succeeded in driving them off with his improved fire-arms, killing 82 of their number.

After returning to Gondo Kora, and reporting to Gordon Pasha, by whom he was cordially received, he was personally complimented by the Khedive, and ordered on a second expedition to the Mahaka Niam country in January, 1875, with 250 Arab soldiers, 150 miles southwest of the White Nile. The Niam-Niams are a robust, warlike race, but received the expedition with friendship. The inhabitants are cannibalistic by reason of the absence of cattle. The winged ant supplies in a great measure the absence of meat.

Having permanently established the government of the Khedive he caused the soldiers to take the Niam-Niam maidens for wives. The marriage was contracted by the aspirant, who presents the father of the maiden a huge knife curiously wrought, bound with copper wire. The bride's trousseau—her sole article of dress—fine copper or brass coils that encircle her neck, arms and ankles, or rings that hang from nose, lips and ears, the head dress being the most important part of the toilet. The women are of copper color, exquisitely beautiful hands and feet, short in stature, and well rounded limbs and quite pretty.

In conclusion, he said "Central Africa is no paradise, but a plague spot, and the negro, the product of the pestilential region, is a miserable wretch, devoid of all innate idea of a Deity, that enthusiastic travellers have heretofore endowed him with."

Political.

The election in Delaware for county assessor, road commissioners and inspectors for the general election will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 3d.

Pools on the Indiana election were sold in New York on Saturday. Williams, Democrat, bringing $500, and Harrison, Republican, $490.

Col. F. A. Conkling, brother of Senator Conkling, goes to Ohio to take the stump for Tilden. Men are getting awfully tangled up politically these times.

The Nashville (Tenn.) Democrat has nominated for State Senator Col. Frank P. Cahill, a Northern man and ex-Federal officer. His opponent in the convention was an ex-Confederate.

An Indiana correspondent writes enthusiastically of a Republican meeting at Shelbyville, in that State, but adds: "Whether it or all of the many gons before it will do any good or not only election day can tell."

Gov. Chamberlain again denies that he has called for troops to maintain the peace in South Carolina. He says he "has never visited Washington except upon the special request of the authorities at Washington." Ah!

Mr. Thompson, editor of the Columbia (S. C.) Herald, has resigned because he was required to place the name of R. B. Elliott, Republican candidate for attorney general, at the head of his paper.

A correspondent of the New York Herald has interviewed Senator Thurman on the prospects of the canvass. The Senator said: "If the election were to take place to-day Ohio would go Democratic. People are of that state of mind now that such would be the result. This is my opinion; only remember, I shall be able to tell better a week or two hence, after I have gone about among the people."

A North Carolina correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, republican, says: "Notwithstanding the gallant fight which Judge Settle, the republican candidate for Governor of this State, is making, and the almost universal esteem in which he is held here, I see no probability of his election, or, at least, but a very small probability. He will run ahead of his ticket, but about 12,000 behind an election. I look for Vance to carry the State from 10,000 to 15,000, and Tilden probably 20,000."

The New York World of Tuesday says: "A well-known character in the third Assembly district of this city by the name of Tom Gary has been canvassing for men for two or three days to go to Indiana to vote early and often for the Republican ticket, and informs his men that they will be met there by others from Philadelphia and Baltimore on the same mission. One gang of Gary's men left last night, and others are expected to follow to-day."

The Canvass in Indiana.—The Cleveland (Ohio) Plaindealer publishes a letter from A. C. Babcock, chairman of the Republican State central committee of Illinois, addressed to Colonel Ingersoll, the noted Republican orator, in which he says: "From all I can learn from Indiana the chances to-day are decidedly against us. I deem it of the utmost importance that you devote to them at least thirteen speeches, one for each district. If we gain Indiana our labor is virtually ended. The Democracy will conclude that defeat in November is inevitable. I fear you are inclined to appropriate too much time to Ohio."

The Faithful Blaine Obeys Orders.—Ex-Speaker Blaine was announced for a political speech in Philadelphia on Saturday evening, but instead of putting in an appearance sent a letter, in which he says: "Dispatches from Mr. Wilcox, chairman of the Republican State committee of Ohio, advise me that, on the request of Governor Hayes and Governor Hartranft, I am released from my Philadelphia engagement for Saturday, and am commanded to go to Ohio. I obey instructions, and go gladly where it is thought I may be most useful." It is very accommodating in the ex-Speaker to allow himself to be transferred to the field where it is hoped "he can do the most good."

Judge Black to Gen. Garfield About Dead Issues.

Gen. Garfield, of Ohio, recently forwarded to Judge Jeremiah S. Black of Pennsylvania, a copy of his speech delivered in Congress last session, reviewing the political issues of the last hundred years in this country, with applications more or less pertinent to the pending presidential canvass. Judge Black acknowledges Gen. Garfield's courtesy in an open letter, which excoiates the latter's argument unmercifully. The judge is perfectly at home on the slavery question disinterestedly by Garfield, and does not hesitate to devote a few octavo pages to fixing upon New England the responsibility for the introduction of negroes into this country. He goes further, and endeavors to show that Massachusetts condemned Indians as well as Africans to slavery.

Coming down, however, to modern times Judge Black waxed warmer and strikes heavy blows. The republican party, he claims, has dishonestly used the power it usurped during and immediately after the war. This, it is urged, is the most corrupt government this side of Constantinople. "You may take the rottenest monarchy in Europe, go over its history for a hundred years and produce the worst act you can find of fraudulent spoliation upon its people, and if I do not show something worse committed here under the auspices of the party now in power, I will give up the case." He does not wonder that Gen. Garfield's assertion that the republican party will persist in its own madness was received with laughter from the republican side of the House, for it is well known that dishonesty is protected, encouraged and rewarded by the highest authorities in this government. The Southern policy of the administration, the political enslavement of Louisiana, and the Credit Mobilier and whiskey ring frauds, are cited as cases in point. Those things are not to be defended by waving the bloody shirt. After an elaboration of these points and a good tempered but stinging review of Gen. Garfield's own share in the bad record of the post-bellum republican party, Judge

Black asks and answers his own questions in these words:

"I cannot describe to you how unpleasant is the sensation produced by your professions of a desire for peace. Why do you not give us peace if you are willing we shall have it? You need but to cease hostilities and the general tranquility will be restored. You refuse to do that, because peace would endanger your party ascendancy. To maintain your plunderers in power you have uniformly resorted to the chronic condition of the country—wherever you could you have displaced liberty, fraternity and equality, and given nothing instead but infantry, artillery and cavalry. You are at this moment openly engaged in preparing your battalions for armed intervention in the struggle of the people with the carpet-bagger. What makes this worse is your closing declaration that you will take no step backward. There is to be no repentance, no change of policy, and consequently no peaceful or honest government. 'Onward' you say is the word. 'Onward'—to what? To more war, more plunder, more oppression, more universal bankruptcy, heavier taxes, and still worse frauds on the public treasury!" —Baltimore Sun.

[COMMUNICATED.]
WETPQUIN NECK, MD.,
Sept. 20th, 1876.

Mr. Editor.—Please give space to a few lines concerning the doings of this section of Wicomico County.

The 18th inst., the Sabbath, will long be remembered by all who live, by the destruction of trees, fencing, houses and vessels of all descriptions. The colored people's church here had a large oak fall on it, which did considerable damage, but with all no lives lost.

I would here say to the people of this county that we are under many disadvantages on account of having no bridge across Wetpquin Creek. Our voting place of Tyasick District is cut into nearly equal sections by said creek, and no public ferry across and our voting place is at Nanticoke Point, and we, therefore, are put to a great inconvenience for the want of a bridge. Therefore I call the attention of the Commissioners and all others interested, that we want a bridge over Wetpquin Creek.

Our melon season is past; our corn crop generally good; the health of our people excellent, &c., &c.

Yours, &c.,
I. J. C.

COAL LESS THAN COST.—The Engineering and Mining Journal thinks the coal companies are losing money largely, saying: "At present the rates generally received for coal by the companies average from $3.25 to $3.50 per ton at tidewater, while, from the best information we can get, the bare cost of placing in these, not including interest or royalty, ranges from $3.50 to $4. If a large amount of coal is to be sold at auction each month it will be very safe to calculate an average loss of fully 75 cents per ton. To provide for this, should the present state of things continue long, in addition to large interest accounts and guarantee dividends on leased railroads, will try our strongest companies, if it does not ruin them. Our figures of cost of placing coal at tidewater may by some persons be considered to high, but we do not speak without some knowledge of the details of business."

Murder Will Out!
A few years ago "August Flower" was discovered to be a certain cure for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, a few thin Dyspeptics made known to their friends how easily and quickly they had been cured by its use. The great merits of GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER became heralded through the country by one sufferer to another, until, without advertising, its sale has become immense. Druggists in EVERY TOWN in the United States are selling it. No person suffering with Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Constipation, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, low spirits, etc., can take three doses without relief. Go to your Druggist, Dr. L. D. Collier, and get a bottle for 75 cents and try it. Sample bottles 10 cts.

"Doctron, it feels like a ball of fire!" So speaks oftentimes the sufferer from Dyspepsia. After eating, it seems as if there was a veritable ball of fire running up and down through his stomach. If he eats much he feels it; if he don't eat much he feels it. It destroys his enjoyment of life. If the doctor be really devious of curing his patient he should not experiment with the sufferer, he should recommend him to use PERUVIAN SYRUP, whose merits have been tested so long, and always satisfactorily. Balls of fire in the stomach and PERUVIAN SYRUP can't dwell together. Send to your druggist, he keeps it always ready, and try it. It will work like a charm.

CAMPAIGN IN THE 1st CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT.

AS ARRANGED BY THE STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE MASS MEETINGS WILL BE HELD IN THIS DISTRICT, AS FOLLOWS:

- CAMBRIDGE, Tuesday, Sept. 26. DENTON, Tuesday, Oct. 3. PRINCESS ANNE, Tuesday, Oct. 10. CENTREVILLE, Tuesday, Oct. 17. SALISBURY, Saturday, Oct. 21. CHESTERTOWN, Saturday, Oct. 28.

Hon. Daniel M. Henry, our candidate for Congress, Hon. R. B. Carmichael, and Hon. Jas. U. Dennis, electors for President, and other distinguished speakers, will be present.

Oysters are unusually scarce in this market.

Salisbury is the cheapest and best stove market on the Shore.

Mr. A. Stevens has put another story on his residence.

Cheese, Butter and country Lard for sale by J. P. Owens.

The water was up to the footway across Wicomico Falls on Sunday night.

Cranberry picking season is near at hand.

A superior lot of Cracker Meal just received at J. P. Owens.

We learn that Rev. N. M. Brown and family will board with Mrs. S. E. Brewington next year.

Furbush's testimony is as good as a comic drama. It kept the Court and spectators in good humor all the time he was on the stand.

John P. Owens receives fresh Sausage every day, made expressly for his customers.

The town has been crowded with people attending Court this week, but the storekeepers say that very little money is being spent.

Messrs. Tracy & Dougherty have dissolved partnership, and now the former gentleman is sole proprietor of the Atlantic Hotel, at Ocean City.

J. S. Farlow has given up the Laundry building and now Mitchell and Perry will finish up the Centennial cases.

Mr. W. S. Parsons captured two full grown mud shad, in his cranberry bog on Thursday morning. How they got there, is the question that bothers the fishermen.

Pest uncanvassed Hams and Tender Round dried Beef at J. P. Owens Family supply store.

PULPIT AND FAMILY BIBLES—All persons desirous of purchasing Bibles, can be supplied at city prices, by calling upon Mrs. M. E. Furner, Salisbury, Md.

If you are troubled with Dyspepsia, pain in the region of the heart, Liver or Kidneys, or any other painful symptoms, do not wait to confirm the disease, but break it up at once by using Dr. Bull's Vegetable Pills—You will thank us for advice.

Mr. Josephus Humphreys, after spending several years in this place, has tired of city life and avows his determination to return to the "old farm." We think if all the farmers would stick to their farms that hard times would be almost unknown.

J. P. Owens will receive in a few days a fresh lot of choice New York Family Buckwheat flour.

THE DAMAGES IN DORCHESTER—It is supposed that Dorchester county has been damaged at least $100,000 by the storm on the 17th inst. Among other mishaps, the tide swept over the larger part of Lake's and Strait's districts, drowning numbers of cattle, and otherwise damaging the country.

In another column may be found the advertisement of Messrs. Rogers, Post & Co., No. 184 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore, where our people can find such a varied assortment of Clothing, that the most fastidious can not complain, but can find something to suit, both as to price and quality. Call and see them, as you can do no better elsewhere.

Mr. James Cannon has a very large stock of Boots, Shoes and Clothing, and is selling at prices which will suit any man's pocket. All he asks is, that you will price his goods before buying. You will be satisfied that he is selling them for less than they can be bought elsewhere.

The Agricultural & Mechanical Association's Fair for Wicomico Co., will be held on the Fair Grounds, near the town, on the 11th, 12th, and 13th days of October. See catalogue which has been distributed extensively, giving full particulars. It is hoped, and believed that a full attendance will be had provided the weather will be favorable.

Call at J. P. Owens and try his "Little Jennie" Cigar. Can't be beat. Everybody smokes them.

The "Boys in Blue" have made their appearance, we mean the artists in the blue tent in the old hotel yard. Go and have your picture taken by Messrs. Hopkins & Sprague, as they will certainly give you a pretty picture, if your face is pretty, but if it is not, you had better get some one to sit for you who is handsome, and then you will get a pretty picture still. Call and see them, as they are only here for a short time.

JAPANESE PEAS.—Andrew J. Crawford, Esq., left at our office a branch of the Japanese pea. The stalk had on it some hundred or more pods, and each pod contains two peas, but the great value of the pea seems to be its use for fodder, as it has such luxuriant growth, in addition to its producing more than two hundred fold, or about a hundred bushels to the acre of peas, the vine would amount to a vast deal of hay. Mr. Crawford has about an acre of this pea in full growth.

All kinds of Canned Goods, Confectionery, Toys and Fancy Goods for sale by J. P. Owens.

Our town has been visited this week by several persons of distinction. Their Honors, Judges Stewart, Franklin and Irving, Hon. John W. Crisfield, Hon. Charles F. Goldsborough, Col. Henry Page, Hon. R. F. Brattan, John H. Handy and Daniel M. Henry, Jr., Esqrs., with many others. Hon. Isaac D. Jones was detained from his attendance on our court, in his concluding argument on the boundary question before the commission now in session at Philadelphia. Mr. Jones has been untiring in his efforts on that important question, and among the able counsel engaged, the bulk of the heavy work has fallen upon his shoulders, but that responsible task could not have fallen in a safer place for the best interest of the State of Maryland, and we hope that the next Legislature will properly recognize his labors, and reward him in proportion to his merits.

The September Term of the Circuit Court for Wicomico County convened on Monday, the 22nd inst. Present, their Honors, Judges Franklin and Irving; S. P. Toadvine, Clerk; L. B. Dorman, Sheriff; H. E. Ellegood, State's Attorney; H. J. Brewington, Crier; J. D. Truitt and Wm. J. Humphreys, Bailiffs. Judge Irving delivered the charge to the Grand Jury after they were sworn by the clerk. Captain John Turner, of Tyaskin, was appointed foreman of the Grand Jury. The dockets were called, and there being no case ready, the court adjourned to Tuesday morning, at 10 o'clock. Chief Justice Stewart arrived in the afternoon.

TUESDAY MORNING. Court met at 10 o'clock. Their Honors were all present, and after some preliminary business, the following case was taken up: No. 1, Appeals, Daniel H. Parsons, vs. John H. Parsons, Administrator of Jas. S. Parsons. This was an appeal from Justice Fooks' judgment, reversed with costs. Also, Nos. 2 and 3, Appeals, same parties, and appeals dismissed without prejudice, the court holding that the Justice could not divide a sum so as to bring it within his jurisdiction. Tarr for appellant, and Graham for appellee.

No. 8, Appeals, was then taken up. Drs. Quinn and Turpin vs. G. R. J. Collier, appeal from the judgment of Justice Fooks. Judgment reversed and judgment de novo for $20, and costs. Page and Malone for appellant, and Graham for appellee. This was a case to recover a medical bill. Next case was No. 10, Appeals.—John M. Jones and Isaac S. Williams, vs. Jesse Figgis and Wm. S. Lewis, Appeal from Justice Powell. Judgment affirmed and each party pay his own costs. Crisfield for appellant, Graham for appellee. Court adjourned till Wednesday morning 9 o'clock.

WEDNESDAY MORNING. Court called at 9 o'clock. No. 29, Trials, was called and compromised. Case of Lavenia Bennett, vs. John H. Smith. Judgment by confession for $1,000 and costs. Crisfield and Graham for Plaintiff, Goldsborough, Holland & Cooper for Defendant. No. 45, Trials, was also compromised. Wm E. Bennett, vs. J. H. Smith. Judgment by confession for the evidence, and misundrestood the nature of the suit, and returned a verdict of $39 for the Plaintiff and costs. This sum being below the jurisdiction of the court, no judgment could be rendered on the verdict. A motion for a new trial was made by the Plaintiff's counsel. Motion overruled.

No. 24, Trials, was then taken up. Dr. F. A. Turpin, vs. Francis H. Evans, an action to recover a medical account. Tried by Jury. The Jury brought in a verdict contrary to the evidence, and misunderstood the nature of the suit, and returned a verdict of $39 for the Plaintiff and costs. This sum being below the jurisdiction of the court, no judgment could be rendered on the verdict. A motion for a new trial was made by the Plaintiff's counsel. Motion overruled.

No. 32, Trials.—L. A. Parsons, vs. Brewington & Ellegood. In this case the court decided that the cause of action was not fully shown, and the case was dismissed without impairing certain rights of property in the Plaintiff, to certain articles heretofore claimed by him to be bargained and sold to the Defendants. Graham for Plaintiff, and Ellegood for Defendant. Court adjourned to Thursday morning, 9 o'clock.

THURSDAY MORNING. Court called at 9 o'clock. No. 2, Criminal Appearance.—State of Md. vs. John H. Webb. Not guilty.—Ellegood for State, Graham for Trav. orser.

Rev. W. R. Graham has been fully vindicated of the charges made against his character some months ago by John Bonds, in the Circuit Court for Wicomico County. W. A. & S. A. Graham are selling unlaundried bosom shirt of good Wamsutta maulin, and fine Irish Linen for $1.00, also a better quality shirt for $1.25. Under shirts from 40 cents to $2.00. Call and see them at 47 Main St.

Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, Criminal Continuances.—State vs. Sundry parties in Caroline county, removed to this county, for violation of the local Option Law. These cases were all stated on motion of the State's Attorney. Ellegood for State.

No. 21, Trials. James H. Furbush vs. John W. Jones. This was an action of damages for Trespass vi et armis. Crisfield and Page for plaintiff, Graham and Handy for defendant. Judgment for defendant.

Rev. W. R. Graham has been fully vindicated of the charges made against his character some months ago by John Bonds, in the Circuit Court for Wicomico County.

W. A. & S. A. Graham are selling unlaundried bosom shirt of good Wamsutta maulin, and fine Irish Linen for $1.00, also a better quality shirt for $1.25. Under shirts from 40 cents to $2.00. Call and see them at 47 Main St.

Yielding to the solicitations of his many patients and friends, Dr. Darnon will again visit Salisbury and vicinity. This is his eighteenth visit, which proves conclusively his popularity, and that he gives entire satisfaction. He will arrive in Salisbury at Friday noon, Sept. 22nd, and will remain until Monday noon, Sept. 25th. Call at Tracy's Hotel.

If you want cheap Harness, go to Gordy Bros. Full suits from $11 to $17.

Mrs. A. E. Williams & Co., Milliners, at No. 50 Main, street, are constantly receiving new novelties in their line. Call and see their superior stock of bonnets, hats and notions. They always give satisfaction. Being near the close of the season, they are selling very low. Eggs taken at market prices for work and goods.

It costs nothing to see it. The latest novelty, the Oriental Tooth Pick and Finger-nail Cleaner. If you wish to preserve your teeth, call and get one at A. W. Woodcock's Practical Watch-maker, No. 36 Main St.

Just received another lot of the celebrated Chewing Tobacco, direct from Danville, Va. This Tobacco is superior to any other in the market, and full ten per cent cheaper. Try it.

HUMPHREYS & TILGHMAN.

We call the attention to the advertisement of Simmons' Liver Regulator, which appears in to-day's issue. This standard remedy does not deserve to be classed with the many "patent" nostrums so liberally advertised throughout the country. It is one of the very best preparations of its kind in use; and is recommended by the regular practitioners of medicine. It has a large sale in this town, and can be found in all our drug stores, in bottle or package should be found in every family, as its judicious use is almost certain to prevent a Bilious attack, if taken when the symptoms first show themselves.

Security of Money!

There is no doubt but the present situation of all kinds of business and industry is fearfully depressed, and it behooves every family to look carefully to their expenses. Winter is coming on when children are liable to Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. Coughs and Colds will prevail everywhere, and Consumption will carry off many. These diseases should not be neglected. Doctor Bills are expensive, and we would advise our people to use ROSCHER'S GERMAN SYRUP. It never has failed. One bottle at 75 cents will keep your whole family well during the winter. Two doses will relieve any case. Sold in all towns in the United States, and by your druggist, Dr. L. D. Collier, 14 Main St., Salisbury, Md.

Consumption Cured!

An old physician, retired from active practice, having placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple Vegetable Remedy, for the speedy and permanent Cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a Positive and Radical Cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper.

SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, For all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Intestines. After Forty Years trial it is still receiving the most unqualified testimonials of its virtues, from the highest character and responsibility. Eminent physicians commend it as the most. It is eminently a Family Medicine, and by being kept ready for immediate resort, will save many an hour of suffering, and many a dollar in time and

DOCTORS' BILLS.

Your Regulator is one of the best family medicines ever used. I have not spent a dollar for my family for medicine in five years, only for your Regulator, and must say it does me well. You can also recommend it in Colic for Stock, it having cured a fine male of mine worth five hundred dollars.

Hon. Alex. H. Stephens.

"I occasionally use, when my condition requires it, Dr. Simmons' Liver Regulator, with good effect."—Hon. ALEX. H. STEPHENS, Governor of Alabama.

"Your Regulator has been in use in my family for some time, and I am persuaded it is a valuable addition to the medical sciences."—Gov. J. GILL SHORTESS, Ala.

"I have used the Regulator in my family for the past seventeen years, can safely recommend it to the world as the best medicine I have ever used for that class of diseases."—Rev. W. EASTMAN, Treasurer, Baltimore Episcopal Methodist.

This medicine is acknowledged to have no equal as a Liver medicine; containing those Southern Roots and Herbs which an all-wise Providence has placed in countries where Liver Diseases most prevail.

"I have given your medicine a thorough trial, and in no case has it failed to give full satisfaction."—ELLEN MEACHAM, Chattanooga, Fla.

"From actual experience in the use of this medicine in my practice, I have been enabled to give up the use of all other purgative medicines."—Dr. J. W. MASON, M. E. Florida Conference.

"I have used Dr. Simmons' Liver Regulator in my family for Dyspepsia and Sick Headache, and regard it as the best remedy. It has not failed to give relief in any instance."—Rev. W. EASTMAN, Treasurer, Baltimore Episcopal Methodist.

"Simmons' Liver Regulator is certainly a specific for that class of complaints which it claims to cure."—Rev. DAVID WILSON, Secretary.
