ARREST OF DEPUTY

Marshall Sterling Charged With Violating Somerset's Crab Law.

United States Deputy Marshal Noah T. Sterling, of Orisfield, was before Magistrate William V. Sterling Wednesday charged with unlawfully taking crabs from the waters of Somerset county. The writ was sworn out by Commander Sterling, of the local police boat, and the arrest was made by Deputy Sheriff Harding P. Tall. Deputy Sterling is one of the Republican leaders of Orisfield, and, in fact, of the lower end of the county, being one of Collector A. Lincoln Dryden's most trustworthy lieutenants.

While having as his occupation this summer the catching of crabs in Somerset county, he violated the Crab law by not getting a license to crab, which is required. Commander Sterling, of the police boat, tells a thrilling and amusing story of chasing the deputy across the river several times in order to ascertain whether or not he had a license, and as the crabber took pains to keep out of reach of the police boat, Commander Sterling became sure he had no license, and preferred charges against him. At the hearing he was let off after paying the costs of the case and obtaining a crabbing license.

Magistrate Sterling also heard a few similar cases, all of which were disposed of in a similar manner. The revenue derived from the Crab License law goes to pay the interest on the $80,000 of bonds issued by the County Commissioners to build a high school in Orisfield.

GOOD FOR STANFORD

Advocate Mandatory Crawford Plan of Primaries For State. Gives His Position On Judiciary Of First District.

To the Editor of Baltimore American: After a brief absence from my home, my attention has been called, on my return to a news article in your issue of the 30th ultimo, headed "A Judge-ship for Henry Stanford," in which, among other inventions and vagaries of your informant's imagination, it is stated—

"It appears that Wisconsin people have been advised that when Judge Holland's successor is named by the Governor next year the appointment will go to Mr. Henry Stanford, of Somerset, a promise to that effect having been definitely made, it is said."

With reference to the pending judicial contest in this Circuit the same article further adds—

"The statement that Stanford has been promised Judge Holland's position accounts for the sudden dropping out of the Somerset man."

Now your valuable paper has been uniformly fair and generously complimentary to me in the past, and I am sure will give me space, in your columns, to contradict the statements above quoted, and to correct the erroneous impressions which its readers may have derived therefrom.

As a matter of fact, which should be stated as due Governor Crothers as well as myself, the Governor has never directly or indirectly promised me anything, much less a Judgeship, and furthermore, I have never directly or indirectly asked him to do so, or exchanged a word, spoken or written, with him on the subject of the existing or future selection of Judges, in this or any other Circuit.

A moment's reflection upon the fact that Governor Crothers has earnestly striven to retain his appointee, Judge Henry, as Chief Judge, whilst I, with equal earnestness, notwithstanding the Governor's appointment of Judge Henry have advocated and still am advocating the nomination of Mr. John R. Pattison, the successful opponent of Judge Henry in the recent Dorchester Primaries, should convince the most dubious of the fact that even were I so disposed I could not under the circumstances seek or likely obtain favor in this matter at the hands of the Governor, nor is it expected by me.

On the contrary, I have been more concerned in the exercise of my privilege and best judgment, with promoting the nomination by the approaching Judicial Convention in this Circuit of both Mr. Pattison as Chief Judge, and Judge Jones, as Associate, than with any aspirations of myself or any one else for preferment by way of appointment as Judge Holland's successor, when he retires in April, 1911.

Furthermore, I would state that I join with Governor Crothers and other eminent Democrats including Ex-Governor Warfield, in advocating that our next General Assembly shall provide by a suitable mandatory law or amendment to the existing law requiring that primaries shall be held by which the people may directly choose their candidates for Judges as well as for State officers; and in this connection I would respectfully suggest that inasmuch as only three or four months would intervene between the date of Judge Holland's retirement and the holding of the Primaries to name a candidate to succeed him it would meet popular approval, in my opinion, if the Governor, shall, upon Judge Holland's retirement, defer making any appointment as his successor until at least a majority of the Democrats in the Circuit in their primaries shall have expressed a preference among would-be aspirants, and I promise, if such be the case, to gracefully, if not cheerfully, acquiesce in the people's choice, so made, of a candidate of Judicial character and ability for this important place, whether such candidate resides in Somerset or Worcester County.

In other words, I advocate a fair and open field to the people to select their own candidate with the assurance that I shall rest content with their determination in this way.

Although frequently importuned by many good Democrats in every County in this Circuit to become a candidate for Associate Judge in opposition to Judge Jones, I have from the first invariably declined to do so, in public print and otherwise, and moreover I have never authorized anyone to state that I would be a candidate to succeed Judge Holland and certainly shall not be a candidate unless at the proper time I shall find a reasonable request for my nomination among members of the Bar and Democrats of the Circuit. Respectfully submitted, Henry L. D. Stanford.

THE DIRECT PLAN

Of Primaries As Seen By A Baltimore Paper.

At first glance it may appear that the lack of interest displayed in the direct primary yesterday demonstrates that it is a poor method of curbing the power of the organization; that the machine can work its will as readily in a primary as in a convention. But this is too pessimistic a view of the situation.

It is something to force the machine to put up its candidates and have them in the limelight for three weeks before they are voted for. This is a great deal better than to have the bosses get their heads together the day a convention meets and tell the delegates whom to vote for. It is only necessary to recall some of the results in this State of the convention system in the past to realize that the direct primary goes a long way toward putting power in the hands of the people.

Time and again conventions have been held in this city with the public and the delegates absolutely in the dark as to who the candidates were to be until the bosses gave the word. The delegates—selected by themselves—were nothing more than puppets and answered every jerk of the string. A direct primary in which the candidates are out in the open is a great improvement—even when the organization's slate goes through without a hitch.

For one thing, the organization is very likely to see to it that names on the slate are not notoriously vulnerable. This is not assured by any means by the convention system. In the next place, the boss is not all powerful. His influence is perceptibly weakened when, instead of giving his henchman a nomination he can only give him a chance to run for it.

Moreover, though a small vote was polled yesterday and the organization swept the platter, the race of Mr. Maloy in the Third Legislative district brought him 1288 votes to 2815 for the organization candidate in his ward. This is a small vote in a district which is strongly independent and in which a vote resides which ought to show its interest in good government by participating in the primaries; but it is a fairly formidable opposition all things considered, and clearly demonstrates that, had the organization put up a weak man against Mr. Maloy, he would have been beaten.

Of course, no election laws and no election machinery will assure the election of good men. It is an old saying that the people of every community get about as good officials and about as good government as they deserve. The direct primary at least serves the excellent purpose of taking away from us the right to complain that we cannot have good government because the organization or the bosses stand in the way.—Ed. GIRL WALKS NINE MILES.

Miss Lettie Harbaugh Tramps Over Mountain While Delirious.

While in a delirium resulting from a protracted illness Miss Lettie Harbaugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Harbaugh, an aged couple, of Waynesboro, left her home at 10 P. M., and walked nine miles across the mountain to her former home at Sabillasville. During her illness Miss Harbaugh expressed a longing to visit her old home, where she had spent her childhood. Unknown to her family, she got out of bed while delirious, dressed and started on her long tramp alone across the mountains.

When her absence was discovered the family became alarmed. Her father set out early the next morning on a search. He telephoned to many relatives living in the vicinity, and his daughter was finally located with friends at Sabillasville.

Miss Harbaugh arrived at Sabillasville about two A. M. She succeeded in arousing friends, who were amazed to see the sick girl so far from home at that hour.

Remley—Ker.

The home of Elder and Mrs. H. Claude Ker, at Middletown, N. The ceremony, which was with a ring, was performed by the bride's father in the presence of the immediate families and a few intimate friends.

The groom is a young man of sterling qualities and stands high in the estimation of those who know him. He is a pharmacist by profession.

The bride couple took the train for New York City, and sailed at noon on the steamship, Concho, for Galveston, Texas. They will reside at 21 West 11th St., New York City.

The bride has a large circle of relatives and friends in this locality who wish her much happiness.

ALONG THE BREAKERS

On Ocean City's Beach Business Men Have Their Pleasure.

Members of the South Baltimore Business Men's Association reinforced by their relatives and friends, advanced upon Ocean City, Wednesday, in a successful campaign of merry-making. It was the eighteenth annual excursion of the organization.

Mirth ran high among the excursionists from the moment they boarded the steamer, Cambridge, at Light St. wharf at seven o'clock in the morning en route to Maryland's city by the sea. Hardly had the steamer left the wharf when a large package was presented to Mr. Walter L. Deany, chairman of the excursion committee, by the other members of that committee. This package contained a miniature schooner with all sails set and the name "Basilistis" painted on her bow.

Mr. Deany addressed the committee in an expression of thanks for its foresight.

To assure the comfort and pleasure of the excursionists, Mr. Turnbull Murdoch, general passenger agent of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway, accompanied the party as far as Clabborne. At that point they boarded a special train for Ocean City. Mr. I. E. Jones, passenger agent of the railway division accompanied them to the resort.

Upon their arrival at Ocean City the excursionists were met by Mayor Lee Carey and several members of the City Council of that city, who extended the keys of the town to the visitors. Headquarters of the party were established for the day at the Atlantic Hotel. After a hearty dinner at the hotel the amusements arranged by the committee were begun.

The first was a sausage-eating contest between Mr. Webster I. Blane and Michael Healy, in which Mr. Blane gave up in disgust before he had consumed a single sausage. Then followed several numbers of fancy dancing by Mr. E. H. Hall, who was desirous of displaying a pair of white and blue striped socks which he wore for the occasion.

Just then someone cried out that Mr. George B. "Skinner," president of the Association, had caught a king fish which he was having some difficulty in landing. The vaudeville performance was deserted and everyone hurried to the pier, where Mr. Skinner was struggling with the fish. He finally landed the fish and there was an outburst of applause.

The remaining hours of the afternoon were spent by the excursionists in strolling the boardwalk, buying souvenirs and renewing old acquaintances.

When the time arrived for the departure of the train for the return trip it was with deep regret that the excursionists boarded it. Fully half of them remained over for another day at the resort.

First Prize, a $400 Kimball Piano, was awarded to Mr. John L. Morris, Jr., R. F. D. No. 4, Salisbury, Md., whose list contained 1423 sentences. The Second Prize was awarded to Mr. Harry L. Harcum; the Third Prize to Mr. Dallas B. Hearn and the Fourth Prize to Mrs. E. H. Walton, all of whom are residents of Salisbury.

The Judges were Messrs. Samuel A. Graham, Jos. L. Bailey and H. L. Brington, of this city.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY

Designed To Give Clearer Knowledge Scriptural Unity.

Paul's Instructions to the Thessalonians.—I Thessalonians V, 9-24.

Place.—Corinth.

Time.—A. D. 53.

Three weeks ago we studied Paul's visit to and founding the church in the city of Thessalonica. The teachers of our Sunday Schools might profitably turn back to that event and briefly review "the stirring events which accompanied the first efforts of the Apostle and his co-laborers to found the church in Thessalonica, before seeking to teach the lesson of tomorrow.

The International Committee has arranged the lessons of this year that the teachers and scholars of the Sunday Schools of the world may study the history of the planting of the church in the "Act" and the training of the church in the "Epistles" at the same time, and thus give us a better and clearer knowledge of the unity of the New Testament scriptures.

This epistle to the Thessalonians is probably the earliest piece of Christian writing in existence. It is certainly the first epistle of the Apostle Paul to the church which he founded, and was written during the time the Apostle's ministry in Corinth and was written from that city. The occasion of the writing of this letter was the return of Timothy, whom Paul had sent back to Thessalonica, that he might hear whether they stand fast in their Christian calling. On his return from this mission Timothy joined Paul at Corinth with a report cheering on the whole, yet not without its grave side, concerning the believers at Thessalonica; and the first Epistle is the apostolic message in these circumstances. For this reason the Epistle is largely local and personal, but the section from which the lesson is taken is of universal application as it contains admonitions and rules of life for the Church of all ages.

St. Paul begins with an exhortation to a dutiful conduct toward the ministers of the church. He would have the members of the church to treat those who are appointed for the government of the church with respect and esteem. The ministers appointed are to be unwearied in laboring, faithful in admonition and ever mindful of the fact that they labor "in the Lord," and not in any personal superiority whatever. The faithful minister of Jesus Christ who labors for the salvation of sinners, in the edification of Christians and the regeneration of society are to be known, loved, esteemed by the church and community in which he labors, and is to be supported by the prayers and voluntary contributions of the church to which he ministers. He is one who labors not for the "meat that perisheth" but as one who must give an account.

"This is not a cause of small import. The pastor's care demands: But what might fill an angel's heart and filled a Saviour's hands."

But what is the work of the minister? It is to "admonish," that is to reprove, rebuke, warn men. Parity of doctrine is essential to the health of the church but righteousness of life comes even before that. It is also to "comfort the feeble minded," that is to "encourage the faint hearted," to comfort in affliction, to strengthen in temptation, to stimulate when weary and tired with the struggle of life, "to support the weak," that is to hold up those who are weak in the faith. There are those in every congregation whose hold on Christ is very slight and it is the duty of the minister and leaders of the church to take hold on them and support them until such time as they are able to stand alone. Sometimes the weakness of faith is due to ignorance because they know little about the gospel, sometime it is due to unsteadiness of character because of a life of evil habit behind them. These all are to be helped held up, encouraged, supported. The minister as others must be patient with the weaknesses and sins of men and not look for perfection among the members of the Church. He must see that "none render evil for evil," but follow "that which is good." The old law of "an eye for an eye" is abrogated in the gospel of Christ. No man calling himself a Christian can retaliate but through Christ, he must do good unto all men, and especially to those who are of the household of faith.

The Old Testament, with its religion of law, permitted a man to revenge a wrong but the New Testament, with its religion of grace and truth, says "vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord," also "resist not evil, but whoever will smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also."

Now some one will say this is a hard gospel but the church and the world should learn that all the victories that have been won over the evil of the world and all the progress humanity has made in religion, morality and civilization have been gained by the practical application of the "passive virtues" to the issues of life. You can't "fight the devil with fire," he's immense. Humanity's martyrs not its generals have always been the instruments of progress.

We have then in this lesson the reciprocal duties of the minister and the members of the church. One renders to the other, respect, honor and love, the other is charged with the grave duty and thankless task of re-proving men of their faults, warning them of their danger, and disciplining them for their sins.

We turn next to what has been called "The standing orders of the Gospel," or the three rules of Christian conduct. "Rejoice always," Christianity is good news, glad tidings to make us rejoice always, not only when we have youth, health, comfort, but when "in age and feebleness extreme," in sorrow, in sickness, in affliction we are to rejoice because Christ is our eternal hope. This is not impracticable to one who looks to Christ as the spring of their hopes. "Pray without ceasing." This does not mean that we are always to be at our devotions and on our knees. The Christian who never prays except when on his knees, has not yet learned to love to pray. These words rather mean that we are to live in an atmosphere charged with the spirit of prayer; to recognize God as immanent in the world and in our life and "in everything give thanks." We waste no time when we pray without ceasing but we fill all.

With a few other exhortations of high spiritual attainments, but who is sufficient for these things? No man can, unaided by the Divine Spirit; hence the Apostle adds that wonderful benediction "The God of peace sanctify you holy and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved, blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Faithful is he who calleth you, who also will do it." In other words if a man will so join himself to God as to pray without ceasing and in everything give thanks, God, by his spirit will so purify his soul as to enable him to live the blameless life and in the end to give him a peaceful death and take him to himself in glory for ever more.

For Benefit of Women who Suffer from Female Ills

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. My pains all left me, I grew stronger, and within three months I was a perfectly well woman."

"I want this letter made public to show that benefit women may derive from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOHN G. MOIDAN, 2115 Second St., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Thousands of uncollected and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs. Women who suffer from those distressing and peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. For 20 years she has been helping sick women in this way, free of charge. Don't hesitate—write at once.

WARFIELD'S SPEECH.

The well advertised speech of Ex-Gov. Warfield is in many ways a disappointment to his many friends and well wishers in this State. His remarks in regard to the way politics are run in the State will meet a hearty echo all over the State, but his injection of personalities seems to be uncalculated and gives color to his address that will go far towards nullifying any good which he might have otherwise accomplished. In regard to the make-up of the State Central Committee, all those who have examined into the question will see that, as Mr. Warfield states, they are for the most part composed of office-holders or those who have a direct personal interest which makes them want to keep in control of the party machinery or to be in a position to have some hold on the men who fill the offices in order that they may advance their own personal interests. The main duty of the State Central Committee should be to look after the election of the men who are nominated, and not to influence or dictate who those men should be. The same condition pointed out by Mr. Warfield in the counties spoken of apply more or less to all sections of the State. He is entirely right in advocating a change which would put this power in the hands of men who have not an axe to grind. As to the passage of a law making direct primaries compulsory and uniform throughout the State this is in line with the wishes of the people and should be given proper consideration by the coming Legislature. The people want direct primaries and they want them so arranged that fraud, unfair treatment, or manipulation will be impossible. Let the people nominate the ticket they have to vote for, and let the primaries be held in such a way that every man will have an equal chance, and leave the voters to elect the ticket so nominated. But if an attempt is made by the organizations all over the State to so manipulate the vote as to give no one a chance unless he happens to be the man personally wished for by any certain clique within the party ranks, then dissensions will break out in the party. The Primary law should as far as possible provide against anything which will give the organization an advantage. The question of reform in legislative expenses is also one of the questions the people of the State are very much interested in. The past sessions of the Legislature have been a disgrace to the State in respect to the way which they have squandered the public money by overloading the State with unnecessary employees. Let the State law-makers run the business at Annapolis in a business-like manner and not try to pay political debts at the expense of the State. If Gov. Warfield had dealt in generalities and left personal matters out of his speech it would on the whole have been acceptable to the people of the State who are interested in good, clean government, but whether or not Sen. Smith gave $20,000 for Baltimore City's support or whether he gave nothing at all as it appears at present in a statement that will do no good and is likely to make many believe that Mr. Warfield is actuated by jealousy or personal feelings in his attack upon the organization. Neither can we see at the present time any good to be derived by the Democratic party by raising this issue at the present time. The party has a hard fight before it to carry the State this year and must not be distracted by such a side issue.

TORTURED BY CZAR'S JAILERS

Facts Have Leaked Out and the Case is About to Be Laid Before the Duma.

St. Petersburg, Russia.—A terrible story of the torturing of a Moscow barrister named Jdanoff in the Central Prison, at Orel, has just come to light, and the case will be placed before the Duma.

The unfortunate man, who is a political prisoner, roused the anger of the prison authorities by complaining of the treatment of prisoners, and was summoned before the Governor, who spoke to him very roughly.

He was then conducted back to his cell, and three jailers immediately appeared and ordered him to strip naked. He refused to submit to this indignity and they threw themselves upon him, tore off his clothes and threw him on the floor. One sat on him, occasionally amusing himself by giving him a savage kick with his heavily-booted feet, while the other two flogged him with Cossack nagas, short leather whips tipped with stinks of heavy lead.

The prisoners in adjacent cells could hear the victim's shrieks and the torturers' cries: "You'll not complain against! Keep it up, comrades! Out into him! Let him know who is master!" They heard the shrieks grow more feeble and at last only a low moan.

Then the terrified listeners caught the words: "Stop, we've finished him." There was silence, and then came the words: "He's dead; the devil take him."

Soon the Assistant Governor, a smart young man in an officer's uniform, arrived to see if the torturers had done their work properly. When he saw the prisoner lying apparently dead he began to swear at the jailers for killing him "without orders." Seeing that the tortured man still breathed he ordered him sent to the hospital.

When he was sufficiently recovered he was sent back to his cell, where he was beaten almost every day. The jailers were often heard to taunt him and to say: "You won't live long."

News filters slowly from a Russian prison to the outer world. Only now have these horrors come to light, although they took place last September.

Persons who are thought to require special discipline are sent to the Orel Central prison from other convict prisons, in order to be "corrected" or, as the prisoners themselves say, to be murdered.

M. Pavloff made representations to the authorities as to the existing state of affairs when he left the prison to go into exile in Siberia. He was told that an inquiry would be made. The promise has not been kept.

Hawkins Breaks 396 Out Of 400 Clay Targets.

J. Mowell Hawkins, of Baltimore, won high average in the second day's shooting at the annual tournament of the Rod and Gun Club, Sunbury, Pa., making the same score he did yesterday—198 out of 200 targets and breaking 140 without a miss.

The two days shooting established a new record for Pennsylvania and the East, the score being 396 out of 400 clay targets, with straight runs of 125, 127 and 140.

A Few Reasons Why

Acadia Butter Is Best

BECAUSE it is an absolutely pure Butter.
BECAUSE it is made from the pure, sweet milk of the best herds of dairy cattle in the State.
BECAUSE it is worked dry and contains not over four per cent moisture. (Most Butter will show from 15 to 20 per cent moisture.)
BECAUSE it is sold only in hermetically sealed packages, thus retaining the natural flavor.
BECAUSE in all the years it has been on the market we have never had a single complaint regarding its quality.
BECAUSE of a dozen other reasons which every person who knows good butter is sure to appreciate.

This Coming Fall

A CHANCE TO BUY AND WEAR THE BEST CLOTHES IN THE WORLD

THEY'RE THE KIND OF CLOTHES WELL DRESSED MEN ARE ALWAYS GLAD TO BUY

Hart Schaffner & Marx Clothes

are to be the feature of our line the coming season; and we want every man of you to know it early, and keep it in mind for the time when you next think of buying clothes.

We are making a specialty of these goods because we want you to get the greatest possible value for your money. You want value; that's the only real way to economize in clothes; and value means the sort of quality Hart Schaffner & Marx put into their goods. They're all-wool, in every thread of the fabrics; they represent the products of the best weavers in the world, and they offer a greater variety for your selection than you'll find in any half dozen other makes put together.

But all-wool, vitally important as it is to your interests as a wearer, is not the only thing we know about Hart Schaffner & Marx quality. These clothes are designed right; the whole question of fit depends on that; and it's important to you to know that you can be correctly fitted without trouble here. They're correct in style, of course; and perfectly tailored; these makers know their business well enough not to spoil good all-wool fabrics, fine linings and trimmings by designing and tailoring that are wrong. Hart Schaffner & Marx are the best clothes makers in the world; and every dollar of value they put into the goods is there for you to get out in the wear.

There's a lot of inferior, cotton-mixed clothing in the market; pretty poor stuff, some of it. It looks pretty good; enough so to enable dealers to charge a good price for it; it isn't as a rule worth what it costs.

Eat What

You want of the food you need Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it. If you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength. You must digest, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly. When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you. This offer applies to the large bottle only and not one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you. It would bankrupt us. The dollar bottle contains 25 times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is made at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

DO SALOONS MAKE BUSINESS?

The average bar in a town will take in about $4,500 a year. This amount is money drawn away from legitimate channels of trade. That which is spent for liquor cannot buy boots, shoes, clothing, provisions nor the comforts of life.

Yet, the barroom does make business. A certain justice of the peace in New York State said, "Nineteen out of twenty cases brought before me are the result of liquor." See how this makes business for the police officer, and prosecuting lawyer, the defendant's lawyer, the judge, the jailor, guards at the penitentiaries, anylums, coroners, undertakers, etc. The county has to bear the most of this expense. Let us apply the same reasoning to importing to the town disease germs.

Let us vote for the selling of diphtheria and scarlet fever germs, small pox and typhoid bacteria, small pox and typhoid bacteria, and see how it would increase business. There would be business for more doctors, nurses, druggists, undertakers, hears-drivers, hack-drivers, dealers in mourning goods dressmakers and milliners, liverymen, casket manufacturers, grave diggers, and as all these would have to live, it would help the grocer, butcher, baker, and all other trades. Yes, it would make business. Would it be real prosperity? Would you vote for the saloon to help pay your tax? Use a little sense when you deal with the business proposition of the liquor traffic.—The American Issue.

Boosevelt on Temperance.

"It is of incalculable consequence to the man himself that he should be sober and temperate, and it is of even more consequence to his wife and children, for it is a hard and cruel fate that in this life of ours the sins of the man are often visited most heavily upon those whose welfare should be his one special care. For the drunkard, for the man who loses his job because he cannot control or will not control his desire for the liquor and for vicious pleasures, we have a feeling of anger and contempt, and each of us needs to keep steadily before his eyes the fact that he is wholly unfit to take part in the work of governing others unless he can first govern himself. He must stand up manfully for his own rights, he must respect the rights of others, he must obey the law, and he must try to live up to those rules of righteousness which are above and behind all laws."

The Medical Profession and Alcohol.
A veritable revolution has occurred in medical science within a generation. In an important paper read before the Central Texas Medical Association in 1908, Dr. R. B. Turner states these facts: "Thirty years ago the dominant principle of the practice of medicine was stimulation. Alcohol was supposed to arouse and support vital forces in disease; hence its universality in the therapeutics of that age."

In contrast with this there is now a strong element in the medical profession who have almost wholly discarded the use of alcohol, except in extraordinary cases; national temperance medical associations in both England and America have been organized, led by many of the most distinguished physicians and surgeons now living; several leading hospitals have successfully banished alcoholic remedies from their medical commissary; and now investigations carried on by many of the great insurance companies are emphasizing the startling conclusion of actuarial data that a class, living from 20 to 60 per cent. longer than moderate drinkers.

Jurisprudence Hitting Hard.
No phase of this "net" progress is so notable as the increasingly rapid succession of judicial decisions unfavorable and distinctly hostile to every pretension of the licensed liquor traffic. The epoch-making decisions of Judges Artman and Christian, declaring saloon-licenses fundamentally illegal and unconstitutional, are not based, as might be supposed, on the theoretical logic of the Temperance reformer, but are at every point anchored securely upon the highest judicial conclusions of the State and Federal Supreme Courts themselves without an attempt at original sentimental argument.

CACTUS STILL MINUS THORNS.

Burbank's Experiment Will Make the Plant Useful as Fodder.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Official reports on the first summer's field cultivation of the Burbank thornless cactus were made public. The average results are pronounced successful.

The report says that the fears that the thornless varieties would revert to the old habit of growing thorns have been dispelled. The use of the plant as a fodder for cattle seems to have been established.

ANTS SEND FALSE ALARMS

Kept Closing the Circuit with Their Bodies and Rout Out the Firemen.

Summit, N. J.—There is a red ant colony in this city that has been sending in false alarms over the fire alarm telegraph system and getting the firemen out of bed two and three times at night right along. City Electrician Walter E. Shapter stood watching their escapades the other night while the firemen were jumping in and out of bed as the whistle blew, and stopped for nearly an hour.

Shapter had been searching for the cause of the pranks of the fire alarm and had no success. But finally he opened up box 38, at Waldrone avenue and Whittridge place, which is in the locality where the trouble seemed to exist, and there the whole secret was revealed to him.

"There must have been about a thousand ants in that little box," said Shapter. "They almost filled it. Most of them were scurrying around seemingly with no object, but when I looked closer I found they were carrying the dead away. Forming long lines, they would run up to the bottom of the box where there was a heap of dead ants, each one would pick up one of them and struggle out of a crevice down the pole to the ground. At first I could not imagine what had killed them, but as I watched I saw the whole thing."

"While one detachment of the army was carrying away the dead another detachment was lining up for another sacrifice. First a group would form on the metal plate at the bottom of the box. Others would take positions ahead of them, and as the line stretched out I saw they were heading for an exposed part of the circuit just above. As soon as the line was completed and the last little red ant took his position, tall in the grip of his follower and fore feet at the exposed part, the circuit would be shorted and the whole of it would be going through their little bodies. There was a flash and a port of a clock. The whistle blew in the distance and there was a heap of dead ants at the bottom of the box on which the carriers at once began to busy themselves."

"Fascinated, I watched it for nearly an hour and I couldn't tell you how many ants I saw go to their death. I marvelled at it and tried to guess what their object was. I'm sorry the men were bothered by the whistle, but I am glad I saw that wonderful sight."

RATTLES YIELDS TO RATS.

Snake Killed by Two Rodents Intended for His Breakfast.

Dalton, Ga.—Two big gray rats fought a battle with a rattlesnake here and the rats won. The snake was purchased by a grocery firm for a window display. Early in the morning two big rats were obtained as food for the snake.

When the rats were placed in the cage with the snake it made no effort to molest them. A crowd gathered to witness the snake and the rats, but it was over an hour before the rattler moved to attack.

The rats showed flight from the start. While the snake was after one the other would be plunging its teeth into the snake's body. After an hour the snake succumbed. One rat was nearly dead, while the other apparently was unharmed.

As a tribute to its valor, the unhurt rat was released. The rattler measured seven feet in length.

Painted Husband's Nose.

Indianapolis, Ind.—In the trial of a divorce suit Mrs. Dora Rost, who was the defendant, testified that for years she had been compelled to paint her husband's nose before he went to work. The presiding judge was greatly surprised, and asked the witness to explain. "Mr. Rost drank so hard that his nose got red, and I was afraid he would lose his position because his employers would know he was drinking," said the woman.

"Occultism" is a Mystery. London.—Something really mysterious, something to arouse the curiosity and the interest of everybody, is being exhibited at the Coliseum. It is a full-sized figure of an old gentleman, and is called "Occultism." You can take his head from his body and remove his legs, and you see nothing beyond a few springs, and yet this model when put together will give long verbal answers to questions, and will move his head and his legs.

Good Dry Mash.

A mixture of bran, shorts, and corn meal in equal parts kept in the kitchen makes the preparation of a mash for laying hens easy. While the mash is cooking throw all table waste, vegetable and apple parings into a kettle and boil till done, season as for the table with salt and pepper, and chicken with the mixed meals. There are no meat scraps and a teaspoonful of beef scraps for each hen every other day.

INDIAN'S FEAT ON TRAIL.

Bloodhounds Batted, His Fellows and Captures Bandits.

Muskege, Okla.—Willie Bryant, a full-blooded Cherokee boy, nineteen years old, taking a trail that bloodhounds refused to follow, led the way for fifty miles through rough timbered country and with a posse surrounded and captured the two remaining robbers who made a futile attempt to hold up a train at Bragg, resulting in a fight in which one officer was killed and one of the robbers badly wounded.

The feat of Bryant is considered remarkable. He has inherited all of the instincts of his forefathers in the craft of the trail. Sheriff Ramsay took bloodhounds in an auto to the scene of the hold-up before the trail was six hours old, but the dogs refused to follow it. Then Deputy Sheriff Clark put young Bryant at the head of the posse. The Indians was given his head. The course is in the foothills of the Ozark Mountains and very difficult to travel. This distance was covered unerringly and swiftly by the Cherokee. Though the task of keeping the trail was difficult, the members of the posse found the greatest trouble in keeping in sight of Bryant. When Proctor was reached the posse men were utterly exhausted.

SHAVES IN LION'S CAGE.

Local Barber Shows His Great Nerve at a Tent Show.

Chillicothe, Mo.—Rather than take a dare Charles Goodner, twenty-four years of age, a hairy barber of Chillicothe, accepted a challenge issued by Capt. Cardova, a lion tamer with the Parker shows, giving a carnival here; and entering the steel arena, gave the captain a shave with a big lion perched on either side.

The tent where the feat was performed was jammed with those who were curious to see whether the captain's deed would be taken up. Goodner entered the cage, calmly lathered and shaved the captain and then shouted "next."

OVERTAXED.

Hundreds of Salisbury Readers Know What It Means.

The kidneys are overtaxed; Have too much to do. They tell about it in many aches and pains—

Backache, sideache, headache. Early symptoms of kidney ills.

A Salisbury citizen tells here the way to keep the kidneys well.

William H. Nicholson, 400 Locust Street, Salisbury, Md., says: "I was troubled the greater part of last summer by my back and kidneys. I was in pain all the time and I could not sit down or stand still without having a severe backache. In the morning when I got up I was lame and stiff and it really seemed as though I would be unable to endure the misery much longer. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended in the newspapers, I obtained a supply at White & Leonard's drug store. I used two boxes and since then I have not been bothered by my back or kidneys. I willingly give my testimonial in favor of this excellent remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

"Bob" Meldrum to Clean Out Wyoming Cattle Rustlers.

"Bob" Meldrum, a typical gun-fighter of frontier days, has been given the job of "cleaning out" the cattle rustlers who have been making life miserable for the cattlemen in one of their last western strongholds—the Little Snake river country, on the Colorado-Wyoming line, near Utah.

Putting one man against a band of outlaws who would just as soon kill a human being as a steer, does not look like the accepted idea of "fair play," but those who know "Bob" Meldrum have no fears as to the outcome. The cattlemen of the Little Snake river country are backing the shrewd, keen-eyed deputy sheriff against all the "bad men" who infest that part of the country.

For years the country adjoining the Little Snake river has been the haunt of characters more or less undesirable. It is a wild and unbroken country, remote from railroads. On the vast ranges run countless thousands of cattle and sheep. There have been bloody conflicts between the cattle and sheep men, but finally their differences were adjusted through the recognition of a "dead line."

The sheep are kept north of the Colorado-Wyoming line, and the cattle range south of that line, except when being driven to the railroad for shipping purposes.

Before this "dead line" was established clashes were frequent between herders and cowboys, and many partisans of the sheep and cattle herds lost their lives in duels with rifles. Cattle rustling used to be a flourishing industry in this locality also, and some of the old log cabins along the Little Snake river have been the gathering places of bands of desperate outlaws, ready for any mischief, from cattle rustling to robbing trains.

"Bob" Meldrum made his reputation as deputy at Baggs, where he broke up the rustler army and drove the last one out of the country.

Curiosities of Longevity. One of the most curious instances of longevity is found in Miss Louisa Courtenay's "Notes of an Octogenarian," says the Denver News Times. A witness in a will case in which Belenden-Ker, the great English conveyancer, was engaged, was asked if he had any brothers or sisters. He replied that he had one brother who died 150 years ago. The Court expressed incredulity and documentary evidence was produced in support of the statement.

This showed that the witness' father, who married first at the age of sixteen, had a son who died in infancy. The father married again at the age of seventy-five, and had a son who lived to appear in the witness box at the age of ninety-four, and made the above startling statement.

Friedrich Thell, a peasant of Rauda, in Saxony, whose leisure hours have been devoted to the study of Greek, Latin, Hebrew, Sanskrit, Arabic and Gaelic, is seventy-five years old. He is beginning to study the English language. Thell is in correspondence with some of the leading philologists of the day.

A Tale of a Tape Measure. The explorers were sitting one on each side of the President when Dr. Stein produced from his waistcoat pocket a small spring tape measure in a tiny aluminum drum. "It was very curious thing," said Dr. Stein, "but in 1906, when I was in Eastern Tibet, I picked up this measure at the foot of an old ruin. I have carried it ever since and use it constantly." Dr. Sven Hedin took the measure in his hand. "This is mine," he said at once. "I lost it in Tibet in 1901," and he named the spot where he believed he had dropped it, with the number of miles it was distant from a certain great lake. This proved to be the spot where it was found.

Deep Breathing Beneficial. The simplest way to get warm after exposure to cold is to take a long breath with the mouth firmly shut. Repeat this several times until you begin to feel the heat returning. It requires a very short time to do this.

The long breath quickens the pulse, and thus causes the blood to circulate faster. The blood flows into all parts of the veins and arteries, and gives out a great deal of heat.

It is stated that this method of deep breathing prevents colds and a great many other ailments if begun in time.

Congo Free State. The Congo Free State in mid-Africa has 900,000 square miles of territory. At present its imports amount to only about $4,000,000 a year, consisting mainly of cotton-wool, goods, liquors and beer, canned meats, vegetables and other food products, steamers and boats, machinery, clothing, arms and ammunition, hardware and metals. The chief products of the country are rubber, ivory, gum copal, palm kernels and palm oil.

Women as Well as Men are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonials received from sufferers who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

LITTLE LOST BIRD WEDS WHITE MAN

Remnant of Indian Babe Found at Mother's Breast on Wounded Knee Battlefield

ADOPTED BY GEN. L. W. COLBY

Elitka Lanum Writes to "Her Snow Man Papa" Telling of Her Marriage at Portland, Oregon, to Albert Chailvat—May Teach Her Red Relatives.

Beatrice, Neb.—Elitka Lanum, "the Lost Bird," the little Indian maid found by General L. W. Colby, covered with snow, at the breast of her dead mother, in the battlefield of wounded knee, and by the General raised up as his own daughter, with every advantage money could buy, has just been married to a white man, Albert Chailvat of Portland, Ore., where Lost Bird has resided with Mrs. Colby for several years. A letter from Elitka Lanum to her "Snow Man Papa," as she learned to call General Colby, who lives in Beatrice, gives the details of the wedding and tells how happy she is with her "White Man Husband."

What the little girl's real name is was never discovered. The snow at whose dead breast the little papoose lay moaning with hunger and cold as General Colby rode by the morning after the battle was buried in the long grave with 500 other Indians. The father, too, must have been killed in the battle. None claimed the little baby, and none could identify her.
General Colby took her home with him and gave her the name of Elitka Lanum, meaning "Little Lost Bird," and "Little Lost Bird" she has been ever since.

The Wounded Knee battle was fought in 1890—the last day of the year. On the one side were the soldiers. On the other, 5,000 Sioux. It was the last real Indian uprising and battle—so much of a battle, in fact, that in the two hours of its duration, nearly 500 Indians and 60 soldiers were killed.

That night the winds came down from the north and the snows followed in their wake. The next morning the battlefield lay covered with a white blanket and each mound, like a fold in the covering denoted where a dead man lay. General Colby rode over the field, arranging for the burial of the dead.

He passed one mound, and drew up his horse to listen again for a sound which he had heard; a sound not often heard on a battlefield. It was the low wail of a child. And it came from a snow mound directly before him. The officer dismounted and made his way to the heap; he brushed aside with his fist the snow. Within, hidden in a heap, was the body of a squaw. The marks of the Gatling gun showed how death had come to her. In her stiff arms was a small bundle, an Indian blanket. And from a fold in the blanket could be seen the wondering face of a child—a little Indian girl.

Colby climbed on his horse and, with the child in his arms, made his way back to headquarters. Inquiry among the Indian prisoners failed to elicit any information as to her identity and when the campaign was over and the Indians had returned to their villages General Colby came back to his home in Beatrice and brought with him the Little Lost Bird, whom he and his wife adopted as their own child.

The little girl grew up a white girl in everything but color. She attended the white schools, and when General Colby was stationed in Washington the adopted daughter attended the most exclusive and fashionable schools in the city. In time she became a "miss." And then General Colby and his wife became estranged.
Mrs. Colby went to Fort Larned, to live, and took Little Bird with her.
Finally a divorce was secured, and the Indian maiden continued with her
"Foliate Mama," as she called Mrs.
Colby. Occasionally Lost Bird came to Beatrice to visit her "Snow Man Papa," whom she loved very dearly.
Some weeks ago invitations were received by friends here to the wedding of Elitka Lanum and Albert Chailvat at Portland.

While Lost Bird cannot prove her identity, it is believed that she is the daughter of White Cloud, a famous Sioux chief. Her only means of identification is the Indian blanket in which she was wrapped when found by General Colby, and this cover has been identified. However, the girl is known to be a member of the Sioux tribe, and as such is entitled to 320 acres of land on the Sioux reservation and a share of the tribal funds of the Sioux, as well as all the rights and privileges of the tribe.

General Colby says it is the intention of Lost Bird to visit the Indian reservation to see her people, and, having received all the benefits of education and culture that money could purchase, it is one of the probabilities that Lost Bird may take up her residence among the Sioux for the purpose of teaching her red relatives some of the arts of Christianity and civilization that have been taught her by her "Snow Man Papa" and "Foliate Mama."

NEGROES IN TROUBLE

Two Sent To House Of Correction. One Misuses Team; Another Held For Stealing.

Two colored men answering to the name of Frank and Chas. Johnson, who have been loitering in the woods near Salisbury for the past few months and sleeping in the woods at night, broke into Mr. Henry Selby's house and beat his wife and himself on July the 17th.

They have been watched for some time by the police as dangerous characters.

Deputy Sheriff Waller and Chief of Police Disharoon gave chase after them last Monday, but were bested in the race by the negroes, who hid themselves shortly after entering the woods.

On Tuesday the officers went out to look for them again and succeeded in capturing them. It is evident that the negroes had been stealing food from the nearby neighbors as they did not work any. They were committed to the House of Correction for six months under the vagrant law by Justice of Peace Trader.

John Long, colored, was arrested Monday for misuse of a team hired of Lowe and Kent last Sunday.

It seems that Long, after taking five people to White Haven Camp meeting, used the horse and carriage for carrying passengers to and from the wharf. He was charged $5 extra and all costs when brought before Justice of Peace Wm. A. Trader.

Sheriff W. W. Larmore and Mr. Ernest F. Oliphant captured a colored man by the name of Thos. Willburn, who says he came from Cuba and was on a trip through the South from Wilmington, and brought him to Salisbury before Justice of Peace Trader for stealing Mr. Oliphant's clothes.
Willburn it would appear received a right royal reception on his first advent into Maryland by being looked up on his arrival here and evidence being found sufficient to hold him for the Grand Jury.

Letter To J. T. Ellett,
Salisbury, Md.

Dear Sir: Clear pine and pine full of knots are two different things; they are both called pine. Clear pine and paint adulterated with whitening, china-clay, ground stone, barytes, benzine and water, are different things; they are both called "paint."

It takes less labor to work clear pine than pine knots, and costs less money.
It takes less labor to paint clear paint than half-whitening or half china clay or half ground stone or half barytes. These mixtures make more gallons, not more paint. There's no more milk in two quarts of milk and water than in one quart of milk. If you paint two gallons for one you pay double for labor; and labor costs more than paint.

You know how it is with clear lumber and knots. It's the same with all paint and half-paint.

A day's work is a gallon of paint or half-paint.

Apply it to business. Suppose you have two houses, same size; paint one Devco, the other the other prominent paints in your town.

It takes ten gallons Devco, $1.75 a gallon, $17.50 for paint; $8 a gallon for labor, $80 for labor; whole job, $97.50.

It takes 15 gallons of that other paint, same price, $22.50 for paint; $8 a gallon for labor, $45 for labor; whole job, $67.50.

And which wears best, clear pine or pine knots? Devco wears better than weak paint.

What warrant is there for saying that paint is weak? It takes more gallons.

Yours truly,
F. W. DEVCO & Co.
L. W. Gunby Co., sell our paint.

GRABBED GIRL AT

Betterton. A Desperate Attempt To Carry Off Thirteen Year Old Girl.

A desperate negro seized Emily Wiessner, a 13 year old girl, while she was walking with her mother and Mrs. William Saville at Betterton, Kent County Wednesday evening and tried to carry her off.

The women screamed frantically for help and their cries reached men along the boardwalk and at the cottages and they came running. The negro, after a struggle with the girl, who fought valiantly, ran off as the men came up. The alleged assailant was captured later and was identified by the girl, her mother and Mrs. Saville.

Robert A. Moore, the town constable, took the negro in charge and for a while it looked as if he stood a good chance of being the star performer at a lynching party. Persons in the mob began shouting for a rope and other threatening cries were heard.

But Constable Moore got away with his prisoner and landed him safe in jail at Chestertown. The negro said his name was Joseph Jones and he denied the charge brought against him.
But it was said that one of the girl's shoes, lost in the struggle with Jones, was found in his possession.

Jones will be kept in jail at Chestertown until the October term of the Kent county court, when he will be brought up for trial.

Tobias Jarvey's Day of Rest

By E. LAWRENCE PERRY

The Count Tobie Francois Xavier de la Jarvey sat pondering in his scantily furnished room on the top floor of an old brick gabled building in the heart of what was once Greenwich village. From his chair at the dusty window giving on Commerce street he had noted the home-coming of more than one wage-earner, laden with bundles and fairly beaming with the spirit of the season.

In the doorway of the house just below he had seen a young woman and her two children fairly maul an elderly couple—grandparents, of course—pulling them up the steps despite their complacent protestations. And he knew that the peculiar flat bundle which grandma carried so gingerly contained one or more pumpkin pies, and that the stout genial grand-sire's pockets were laden with all sorts of home-made goodies.

The count sighed. He walked to a bureau and took from the upper drawer a fragrant old briarwood and a pouch of tobacco. He lighted the pipe and returned to the window, where he stood looking down the side walk, puffing thoughtfully. There was food for thought, for below him he could see the rhomboidal form of Mrs. Amariylla James, industriously plying her broom to the lower step. Mrs. James was a good soul; the count had gained that knowledge from many a sidewalk conversation. And then, too, when he had mending to do, which variably detected before the fact had the quick eye of Mrs. James had occurred to him, she was ever ready with her needle, which, indeed, to the count's deep annoyance, was becoming more and more indispensable to his sartorial welfare.

Twice in the months he had known Mrs. James had he permitted himself the luxury of a visit in her comfortable apartments on the first floor, and each time upon making his departure the impression was strong that he had achieved a strategic retreat. There were clear suspicions as to the nature that he had made his escape, and indeed, upon receipt of his trousers the last time Mrs. James had patched them, she had indited a note so strong in veiled suggestion that the count was moved to reply in a manner which he trusted would achieve the result of protecting him from such epistolary attentions or intentions in the future, while at the same time retaining the services of her needle.

"Remember the aloofness of rank," he wrote. "Consider that the lilies of France are at heights remote. Look ahead, not upward, and behold, it is the arrow that pierces the bleeding heart, not a needle."

All of which we dare say may have been read by Mrs. James, according as she felt. Be that as it may, the Count Tobie de la Jarvey, which the Count Tobie de la Jarvey, was strongly moved by the holiday spirit, and when he weighed Mrs. James's invitation to "break bread" with her the following day, against the prospect of dining alone, and sparing perfume, at a Bleeker street table d'hôte, the balance inclined strongly in favor of the hospital board of Amariylla James, casting dice with fate though it might be.

As he stood immersed in thought there came a ray of assurance. "After all," he murmured, "one has but to be a man, to arm himself with man's strength. It is but to know when to retreat that is the secret of all great soldiers' successes. Then! There was, she said, to be turkey, and of the sauce cranberry—and—and that the madame is talented as a cook there is little to doubt. Make non! Am I a fly to enter a web? Eh, bien, if a fly am I it is of strength wings. So I go. . . . Non; not of your life upon, as the saying is, I dine at M. Gatin's."

Gatin's Bleeker street table d'hôte at one o'clock the next afternoon was blue with tobacco smoke, and a cello and violin struggled bravely with a chanson de vin. There was laughter, and the popping of corks, and bursts of song. . . . But the count's favorite seat was vacant.

He was not there, in short, and in seeking him it is pleasant to turn from this scene of Gallic revelry to the simpler, quieter precincts where love, perchance, sits dreaming over a needle, where the silence is unbroken save by the soporific wheeze of the tea-kettle, or the purring of a cat and the steady monotony of a rocking-chair's creak. The cat, in deed, purried in comfort and contentment, Amariylla James purred in comfort and contentment. She was sewing with placid mien. She was sewing in the frayed ends of "Tobie Jarvey's" coat-sleeves—she murmured the name repeatedly to herself—pinning in the end of the sleeves with pieces of alafia.

Nearly in an armchair sat the count himself, smoking and gazing vacantly into the stove. He was comfortable, too—and contented. His pipe was drawing well, and the savory odor of turkey and cranberries and potatoes and turnips and pumpkin pie blended in one great, grand, suggestive of gastronomic felicity. . . . come, doubly impressive, inasmuch as the count had not dined over well to several days.

To replace the coat in process of construction, Mrs. James had loaned him a garment from the wardrobe—the late lamented John James—who had married her just in time to the stove upon her the benefits of a pea sion which a grateful government had awarded in recognition of rheumatism incurred many years after the inter-ference unpleasantness had ceased. Then, too, as the good woman enjoyed as a seamstress not a little vogue among those of the neighborhood who went in for such luxuries as dress-makers, she considered herself eminently eligible for the hand of the most exalted noble in France. She had read of such things. Romance, which is to say novels of tender import, was a weakness—and she wrote poetry. It may be gathered that her warrior husband, honest, plodding John James, had quite failed of filling a generous emotional void.

The olfactory hints of the dinner all prepared and ready for serving tempted the count's quivering nostrils until nothing but his innate gastronomic presentiment suggesting that the hour for dinner was waning. He became restive. Nevertheless it would all come in good time, and he had planned his campaign; he would eat, and then under plea of the five o'clock engagement, he would make his adieu. But the hostess still sat placid, sewing.

Finally the count shifted his feet. "It will be time for the serving of dinner before the serving of the vintages has been ruined by delays, which I mean to say—ahem—is that my appreciation of your cuisine engages but impatiently in the combat, my dear madame, with the patience of your hospitality."

Mrs. James thrust her needle in the emery bag, and gazed at him, a blush mantling her expansive cheeks from out of which, as though seeking escape, rose the nub end of a short nose.

"How well, how very well that coat of poor John's fits you. To—Mr. Tobias."

"Jarvis—Jarvis, my dear madame," corrected the old gentleman. You forget I fear that it is not Tobias, but Jarvis, M. Jarvis."

"M. Jarvis," said Mrs. James. "Dear me! I was thinking that that coat fitted you as well as it fitted poor John. It were as the mantle of Elijah had descended upon your shoulders. Do you know, Mr. Jarvis, I think it fits you even better than it did John. Poor John, he looked so distinguished in it! And you! Tob—"

The count moved uneasily. The deft grace with which she had evaded consideration of the tardy dinner, and skipped to more personal matters, frightened him. He half rose in his chair.

"Is it that the garment overcomes you with afflicted emotions? I am most sorry. I shall take it off, maybe," he said moving as though to carry out his suggestion.

"No, no. Set down; remain seated. Count Tobie—Tobias, I mean. I have felt so happy to see you setting there—just like John. You would seem to fill his place so admirably." Mrs. James had ceased plying her needle and was looking at the count over her eyeglasses.

When a fish is jerked out of the water in a net and landed on the ground it flounders about wildly and blindly in an instinctive search for its natural element. The count's plight may be likened to the piscatorial dilemma above described. He was versed in the subtler ways of life. He could turn the edge of an innuendo with graceful nonchalance and he could launch one with equal inaudience. The batting of an eye the shrug of a shoulder sometimes meant whole sentences, whole stories. But the blunt, direct ways of the American diplomacy as exemplified by Mrs. James left the count no tactical loophole. Then, too, he had ever before him the blended aroma of that waiting feast.

He exclaimed at length, "I fill M. Jar—I seem to fill M. James's place. It is quite impossible madame. Much as I love—"

"Ah, Tobias," interrupted Mrs. James with rising infection, "you was sayin'—"

"What, indeed," replied Jarvis, "other than that I love to feel, madame, that I suggest to you reverend memories—make them real—non; that is as one might say unreal, and—and—"

"Have you ever felt that you have wasted the best years of your life without the companionship of some true and loving helpmeet? You should have made some woman happy long ago Tob—Mr. Jarvis—I mean."

"I had a friend who was married," said the count gravely, as though the fact were of moment sufficiently unusual to warrant puckering up the lips and raising of the eyebrows.

"Married!" exclaimed Mrs. James, excited and pleased, and eager to assist the count in what seemed to be a somewhat difficult lead to a vital question.

"Yes," continued Jarvis, "he had a life. She was the Duchess de la Pointe-Martel, a very nice woman. But she had the one fault—she talked too much—"

"You certainly, she talked too much," said Mrs. James breathlessly. "Well, well, then what happened?"

"Nothing. Oh nothing at all, I am assured. Silence. The 'tothsome' odors were growing as palpable as the waiting dinner itself. They assailed Jarvis as with bludgeons.

"International marriages are so romantic," observed Mrs. James contemplatively.

"And so profitable sometimes," rejoined Jarvis, with a sigh.

"Now, Tobias Jarvis, such thoughts are unworthy of you," and Mrs. James confessed to a tear. "I hope that you wasn't thinkin' of any little money that I—"

away from him, and he thought of retreat. Retreat? But no, that was impossible; for his stomach now felt as empty as a gourd. He sat there blinking, wordless, helpless.

Mrs. James smiled, and drew from her reticule a roll of paper tied with pink ribbons, flashing upon the count a coy glance.

"If I thought you could appreciate this poem, Mr. Jarvis!"

The count, feeling that the coup d'état was at hand and yet grasping at straws, hastened to reassure her.

"Well," she said, with muchunction, "of course you know printemps is French for Springtime." Whereupon the count having nodded agreement within her interpretation she began:

My heart 'tis light with joy bedight,
At Printemps in Paris.

"Ah, Springtime in Paris," observed the count. "But you were never there?"

"No, this is a poem of fancy. A poetess does not need to be in a place to write about it."

"Most certainly not," agreed Jarvis. "I should say not at all. Ah, Springtime in the Bois. It is beautiful! Is that all?"

"Ah, no, there are more. I read." And she read while the count twisted his legs in the rungs of his chair.

Love changeth not, but stays in one spot,
At Printemps in Paris.

The count groaned inwardly, but raised his eyebrows as though in artistic appreciation.

But, ah, my dove, declare your love
At Printemps in Paris.

Mrs. James glanced at Jarvis, and then glanced at the roll and pursed her lips. Warmer verses were coming. Yes, but not if the count could help it. He arose hastily. Retreat was the all-absorbing consideration.

The dinner and its odors had become merely as prison bars when compared to the thoughts of liberty. Liberty, the free air of the sidewalk. His mind worked under high pressure.

"Tush," he exclaimed, peering into his pipe bowl. "My tobacco has vanished into smoke. I must go to my room for more. If you'll be so good as to excuse me—"

"Set right still, Mr. Jarvis. Don't stir. I shall get you some of John's tobacco. I've saved it for many years. Set right still," and the good woman bustled in her cupboard, returning with a great buckskin pouch, which she handed to him lingeringly.

The count at loss for further expedient arose with a faint bow, accepted the proffered tobacco, and after filling his pipe, struck a match. It did not draw, and the glimmering of a new hope smote the Frenchman's dulled senses. Mrs. James, however, anticipated him.

"Oh, of course, you poor man, the pipe does not work. John's pipe—" and once more she turned to the cupboard. "John always—" But Jarvis never heard the last sentence. The instant her back was turned he threw his hunger and his gallantry to the winds, and stood not upon the order of his going. Like a frightened crane he flapped to the door, and in a second was out in the hall. Then out to the sidewalk he flew like one possessed, and never stopped until he gained the corner.

Need it be said that the count's frightened glance behind was entirely unnecessary? If so, justice has not been done Amariylla James. The thought of pursuit never occurred to her. With a grunt of rage and compressed lips she sat down and penned the following note, pinned it to the coat, and then marched upstairs and flung the garment against the count's door:

"The last straw has been broken. Out of my sight forever."

The Storm Cured Her.

For twenty-two years a woman of Utica, N. Y., had been paralyzed, unable to leave her room. One night, when she happened to be alone in the house, a fierce storm broke. The poor woman was terrified by the thunder and the blinding glare of the lightning. With an effort of which no one had believed her capable she struggled from her bed and to the house of a neighbor. Barely had she reached safety when the place she had just left was struck by lightning. The room in which she had lived so long was rent in two and everything in it was burned or smashed. Power of locomotion had been restored to the cripple just in time to save her life.

Isle of Man Oath.

The judicial oath in the Isle of Man is so quaint as to deserve printing. It runs thus: "By this book and the holy contents thereof, and by the wonderful works that God hath miraculously wrought in heaven above and in the earth beneath in six days and seven nights, I do swear that I will, without respect of favor or friendship, love or gain, consanguinity or affinity, envy or malice, execute the laws of this Isle justly between our sovereign lord the King and his subjects within this Isle, betwixt party and party, as indifferently as the herring's backbone doth lie in the midst of the fish."

Settled.

An old woman, on being examined before a magistrate as to her place of legal settlement, was asked what reason she had for supposing her husband had a legal settlement in that town.

The old lady said:

"He was born and married there, and they buried him there, and if that isn't settling there, what is?"

Are Doctors Any Good?

Foolish question! Yet some people act as if a medicine could take the place of a doctor! The best medicine in the world cannot do this. Have a family doctor, consult him frequently, trust him fully. If we did not believe doctors endorsed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for coughs and colds, we would not offer it to you. Ask your doctor. No alcohol in this or any medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Be careful of cheap imitations. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the only one that will cure Croup, Whooping Cough, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, and all the ailments of the Throat, Lungs and Air Passages. It is a sure and safe remedy for all the above complaints, and is sold everywhere.

MADAME DEAN'S FRENCH FEMALE PILLS

How did that fascinating witch of all time, Mary Stuart, really look? Andrew Lang thinks he knows. In the London Academy he says: "Mary was a tall, lithe beauty, with a bright, pallor of complexion, very delicate, thin arched eyebrows, wide apart, a lofty brow, bright russet hair, red basal eyes, long and narrow, with heavy white eyelids, a subtle mouth with delicate curves, a beautiful chin, and a rather long, straight nose."

THE DOGS OF CONSTANTINOPLE

As Nearly Thick as the Mosquitoes in Harlem or Staten Island

AT LEAST 225,000 IN CITY

Vilest of Cowards, Living Upon Garbage Thrown Into Streets—Cats Live on Terms of Perfect Amity with the Dogs.

In the dog-infested cities of the Orient, hydrophobia is seldom heard of. The dogs of Constantinople are nearly as thick as mosquitoes in Harlem or Staten Island. In certain quarters of the Turkish capital they lie so thick upon the sidewalks that the people are obliged to take to the middle of the street or carry stout sticks to drive them away. A traveler says: "These brutes are four-stroke-proof gentlemen—one stroke on the head to awaken them, another on the legs to let them feel they are awake, a third on the face to make them get up, and a fourth behind to help them to run away."

There are at least 225,000 dogs in Constantinople, which has a population of 1,150,000. They are the vilest of cowards, and are the scavengers of the city, living upon the garbage which is thrown into the streets, upon one another, upon cats and rats and dead Turks in the burial grounds. They live in clans. Each clan has its territory, and woe to the unfortunate that strays out of its territory. He is instantly devoured. Cats the number of which no one pretends to estimate live on terms of perfect amity with the dogs of their district, even sleeping in the street with them; but the feline so imprudent as to venture along the ground outside of its own quarter is suddenly food for the canines of the territory intruded upon. But cats are wise; they stroll miles and miles over the roofs, entering such houses as they find accessible in their ramble and help themselves to the good cheer of the lairds.

No name blow has any effect upon a pack of Turkish dogs when a stranger is once surrounded. Nothing will scatter them but a howl of pain from one of the leaders of the clan or a cry from a native—"Hulst! hulst! hulst!" The stranger soon learns to deliver death-dealing blows without mercy when the dogs attack him, and to let them severely alone when they do not annoy him. A burly Englishman made a resolution that whenever a dog came to him to strike the next one he came to and to this plan stuck so closely that the dogs soon ceased to give him annoyance and the Turks dubbed him "the dog-bastinating ghaur."

Constantinople is nearly surrounded by burial grounds. The custom is to inter in a coffin and batten it down with boards, but the body is not more than from 8 to 12 inches beneath the surface, and easily gotten at by the dogs, which, on account of the sloping ground of most of the cemeteries, can easily enter the coffin without disturbing much of the surface of the grave and find not only savory food in the dead Musulman's tomb but also cheap and comfortable lodging if the weather be severe.

It is said that scores of people are bitten daily by the dogs of Constantinople, but that a case of hydrophobia was never known there. Three centuries ago Nassuf Pasha, Grand Vizier to Achmet III., transported all the dogs to Asia, and would have had them destroyed there, but the Sultan, on consulting the Mufti, was told that every dog had a soul, and consequently forbade such wholesale destruction. After the slaughter of the Janissaries, Mahoud intended to get rid of them, for he caused an immense number of sausages (1) to be made, and having poisoned them gave the dogs a feast. Many thousands were thus killed in one day; but the people murmured so much that he was afraid to begin a second day's work. He therefore ordered them to be expelled to Asia, but the order was very indifferently executed, and in a short time the dogs were as numerous as during the time of the Janissaries.

His Respect for the Court. Thad Stevens was trying a case before a certain court in the wilds of Pennsylvania. The court had been unfair with his client, and he didn't like the rulings of the presiding Judge. Another time the Judge ruled against him; it was the last straw. He got up and began tying his papers into a neat bundle as though about to quit the court room.

"Do I understand, Mr. Stevens," thundered the Judge, "that you wish to show your contempt for this court?"

"On the other hand," replied Stevens, "I am trying to conceal it."

Trade Winds. The trade winds are caused by the difference of temperature between the poles and the equator. As the heated air at the equator rises, the cooler air from the north and south poles flows in to take its place, and these atmospheric currents flowing from the north and south poles toward the equator constitute what are called the trade winds. The trades are of varying force, their strength depending entirely upon the difference in temperature between the equator and the poles. The greater the difference the stronger the wind.

How Mary Stuart Looked. How did that fascinating witch of all time, Mary Stuart, really look? Andrew Lang thinks he knows. In the London Academy he says: "Mary was a tall, lithe beauty, with a bright, pallor of complexion, very delicate, thin arched eyebrows, wide apart, a lofty brow, bright russet hair, red basal eyes, long and narrow, with heavy white eyelids, a subtle mouth with delicate curves, a beautiful chin, and a rather long, straight nose."

MAKES HARDEST LABOR EASY.

Benefits of a Non-Jarring Attachment for Tools.

Even the hardest kind of labor can be made easy, and less exacting on the worker, as evidenced by the non-jarring attachment for tools shown here. Naturally, when tools are struck by a heavy hammer or mallet, the Hands Protected from Jarring. Hands of the operator holding the tool are jarred to an extent depending upon the force of the blow. That this jarring can be eliminated is shown by this attachment. It can be applied to a variety of mechanical tools, such as nail punches, rock drills, etc. The attachment consists of a sleeve which fits over a handle having a reduced diameter, around which a coil spring is placed. This spring is stiff enough to hold the tool firmly for use, so that the point can be placed exactly on the desired spot, but is sufficiently elastic to relieve the hand of any shock when the blow is struck. The coil spring also enables the tool to be pressed firmly against the material, so that the operator may be sure that it is in the right position, and yet when the blow is delivered, the shock is taken up by the spring and not felt by the hand or arm, affording a grateful relief to the nerves.

A New Paris Game.

Juvenile Parisians have a new game to take the place of the diabolo. It is called the "Looping Bird," and is a little aeroplane shaped up by the aid of a hook and a pair of diabolo sticks. The Tulleries Gardens are much frequented by players of the "Looping Bird." But more ambitious models of aeroplanes, than the bird are now sold from $1.50 to $10. One of the latter is a very good imitation of the Farman machine, and is propelled by twisted India rubber strings. On being wound up the little aeroplane, which is provided with wheels, runs along the ground for twenty feet and then rises to from five to six feet and flies through the air for some twenty yards or so. A cute little toy for good children, though no doubt some bad ones are not deprived of it by their indulgent French parents.

SHOE PROTECTOR.

Prevents Injury to Shoes of Miners and Others Using Shovels.

It is well known that the ordinary shoe is not of sufficient strength to warrant use by miners, laborers on railways and other places where shovels and spades are employed. An Arkansas man, therefore, designed the shoe protector shown here for the purpose of protecting the shoe, especially at the shank and instep. As shown in the accompanying illustration, the protector consists of a metal plate, which fits beneath the shank of the shoe. A piece of leather or other flexible material extends from the metal plate around the heel, with the other end over the instep, both connecting by buckles and straps to a piece of leather extending from the opposite side of the metal plate. It will be obvious that a shoe provided with this protection braces the shank and ankle of the foot of the wearer. Moreover, a shoe can be readily pushed into the ground without injury to the shoe. The protector is quickly attached to or detached from the shoe.

Good Food Too Pleasant.

In 1851 there was in Huntsville a man who pulled teeth for twenty-five cents and a photographer who made daguerotypes at $1.50 each, says the Macon Republican. The first was called "doctor" and the second "professor." They moved in the highest circles, as being the representatives of the sciences, and after a while deer, birds and all manner of game in the woods and fine fish in the streams, so cheap that the poorest laborers were stocked with it, the grocers did a big business in mackerel, herring and sardines. The latter were real delicacies because the better food was so plentiful the pioneers got tired of it.

BEE AND BEE KEEPING

MAKE ONE FOR YOURSELF.

The Value of a Swarm-Catching Cage in a Honey-Yard.

As it is getting toward the season of the year when the bee-keepers will seek to make certain appliances for next season's use, I take pleasure in showing a useful device which almost any one can make, says E. R. Root, in Bee Culture. It is neither more nor less than a wire-cloth cage of sufficient size to slip over the largest hive in the yard. Wire cloth or mosquito netting is nailed onto a light framework of the construction shown.

It sometimes happens that a colony is suddenly attacked by robbers. A cage like this can be set down over the hive, trap all the robbers and prevent any more from getting in at the entrance. The inmates of the hive will, if outside, cluster around the outside of the cage. It may be left over the colony until night, when the robbers may be destroyed or taken to an outyard; for to let these bees loose back into the same yard will only invite trouble for the next day.

A Useful Appliance for the Bee-Yard.

But we have used the cage to very good advantage in catching swarms just coming out. One or two of them are kept handy in the yard; and if a swarm is seen coming out, one of these cages is slipped immediately over the hive from which it is coming. Even if some of the bees have gone out they will soon come back and cluster around outside while the rest of their companions are clustered inside.

In the drawing here shown it will be observed that the swarm is clustered on top of the cage. As soon as they are all out, the cage and all is picked up at the intersection of the cross-pieces at the top, set over the hive ready to receive them, when the cage is given a jounce on the ground. A little later on it is given another bump until the bees have entered their new home.

Of course, this method of catching a swarm just as it is coming out is not new; but sometimes old things need to be resurrected until prospective users begin to see their value. This cage is one of the new old devices that should be made up for next season's use.

It may not be necessary to have such a cage where comb and extracted honey are produced; but if one is rearing queens he must not harbor in the yard any bees that have acquired the robbing habit, as they will be a continual annoyance to the apiarist and to the working colonies throughout the entire season.

Ants in Hives.

A good way to catch the ants in hives is to soak a sponge in honey (dilute the honey with water, as then it will better enter the pores of the sponge) and put it where they can get at it. When the sponge is full of ants throw it into boiling water, and repeat.

The best way to keep ants from troubling is to find and destroy them in their nests. This work must be done at dusk in the evening, to get all of the inmates of a nest. Pouring boiling water over the nest will kill a great many, but it hardly will get them all. The most effective way is by using the drug bisulphide of carbon. Make three or four holes in the nest with a thin stick, then pour in the liquid. The holes must be quickly closed with earth, to prevent the drug from evaporating and reducing its effectiveness. About an ounce will be enough for a nest. The carbon changes to a gas that penetrates all parts of the nest, and is deadly to all animal life.

Be very careful when using the drug not to have fire of any kind near. The carbon is volatile, and the resulting gas will explode with great violence, the same as does gasoline. Don't let any one with a lighted pipe or cigar approach when using it. As there is not much call for it, the bisulphide of carbon is not always carried by druggists. Then kerosene or gasoline can be used in the same way, but about four or five times as much must be used for a nest.

Honey Sells on Its Looks.

A very few broken combs, if cared, will make a dainty mass, as the honey will cover much of the comb bottom and drip through, thus disgusting all who may in any way handle the honey. Bear in mind that comb honey sells from its looks more than anything else, and the nicer the appearance the better price it will bring.

The honey should be piled a few inches off the floor, and a little out from the wall, otherwise the heat from the bottom and side of the room will accumulate moisture, from want of circulation of air. Honey that is sealed will stand much more dampness and non-circulation than will that which is unsealed.

Slightly Mixed.

Ernest had been absent for several days. His teacher asked the class if any one could tell why Ernest did not come to school. One little hand went up and its owner said: "Please, teacher, he's sick; he's not the chicken coops."

Another girl was absent. "Can any one tell me why Marie is away?" asked this same teacher. Paley piped out the reason: "Marie's got an illustrated tooth."

FORTY PLAYGROUNDS BY THE SEA

This is seashore time.

The dog days call to the worker in home, office, and mill and the answer brings up thoughts of the many resorts beside the sea where comfort, recreation, and pleasure alike await the coming of the holiday-maker.

Along the shores of New Jersey from Cape May to Sandy Hook lie forty beaches, each offering delights for outings long or short and each easily accessible by the splendid train service of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Atlantic City, with its myriad attractions for young and old, needs no introduction, for its charms are known from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Cape May, for a century the summering place of satisfied thousands of seekers after cool breezes, fine bathing, and the refined amusements of the seaside, is more attractive than ever in its new life.

Ocean City, Wildwood, Sea Isle City, with their smaller neighbors, Anglesea, Holly Beach, Wildwood Crest, Avalon, and Stone Harbor, afford summer pleasure to thousands.

To the north lie Beach Haven, Seaside Park, Island Heights and the other resorts about Barnegat Bay, where the lover of fishing and sailing finds the choicest sport.

Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, Spring Lake, Long Branch, Sea Girt, Point Pleasant, Allenhurst, Elberon, and Belmar on the Upper Coast where the country meets the sea right on the beach, appeal with mighty force to the vacationist.
