THE COMING NATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

The interest of the country is now centered on National question, and the fight in the various parties for the man who is to lead the tickets are growing warm. Much less is heard in the campaign now being waged in the Democratic and Republican parties of the platform and issues of the coming fall election, than of the candidates themselves. This undoubtedly is due to a great extent to the character of the men who are asking for the nominations. These are men of great influence and power and are a platform unto themselves.

Every one is familiar, more or less, with the public issues Mr. Bryan, the leading candidate of the Democratic party stands for and if he is nominated his personality and ideas will be far more in the public mind than any platform that may be adopted by the convention that nominates him, and despite its phraseology and pledges Bryan ideas and Bryan issues will be the true issues upon which the party will go before the people in the fall election. The same is true about the leading candidate, Mr. Taft, of the Republican party, and his nomination despite what the Republican convention may say on the public question, will mean the continuation of the policies inaugurated and backed by President Roosevelt.

As far as the opponents of these gentlemen are concerned the same may be considered to be the case, for if the "Allies" succeed in preventing Mr. Taft's nomination this will mean, regardless of the man nominated a partial repudiation, at least, of some of the policies of the present administration.

It is seldom indeed that we see two great parties so submerged, so to speak, in the overpowering personality of two great minds, and this too in both cases against the will of the so-called politicians or leaders of both parties. There is no question but what the great influence these men wield in the affairs of their party and in affairs of the nation is due to their great popularity with the masses. The belief in their honesty and sincerity the people at large have of President Roosevelt and Mr. Bryan is at the bottom of their popularity. And leads to large admiration of the men regardless of party lines. Whether Mr. Taft and Mr. Bryan will be the standard bearers of their respective parties will now soon be decided.

Let the Democratic nominee be who he will—and it is pretty hard to find the man whom the majority of the people think will make the best run—it is important to the country that he should be elected. The best way to fight the trusts is to take away the great profit that is each year turned over to them by means of the high and pernicious tariff on raw materials. Let us have anti-trust laws, if necessary, let us have federal supervision, if necessary, let us have anti-trust laws, but let us have, first of all, world wide competition. The infant industries that according to the old arguments of the high tariff, justified the placing of duty on raw materials have grown up into big, bad, insolent men and need now to have the milk of high tariff taken off their daily diet.

Bids for Brick And Bitulithic Asked.

Engineer Hutton, of Wilmington who was employed by the City to superintend and look after the interest of the City in its street improvements was before the council at their meeting on Tuesday evening. The question of paving or improving Division and other streets was taken up and Mr. Hutton was authorized to ask for bids on fire brick and bitulithic for North Division Street from Church street to the B. C. & A. tracks on South Division street from Main to Upton street, and on Main Street Extended, from the pivot bridge to Fittwater street. Bids to be opened on May 19th.

A salad served at a certain supper last Sunday night consisted of little cucumber pickles, baked herring, apples and cold baked potatoes cut into slices and dressed with oil and vinegar which the powdered yolks of hard-boiled eggs had been incorporated. There was a far away flavor of poison which might have been obtained by poisoning the salad bowl with the contents of a store of garlic or by the addition of a few drops of onion juice.

Circuit Court Decides In Favor Of Mayor And Council.

The Circuit Court of Wicomico County has upheld the rights of the Mayor and City Council to levy and collect an assessment on property-holders along E. Church street for the paving of that street.

The case was one Mrs. Estelle Powell, et al., vs. the Mayor and Council of Salisbury, and was argued at the March term of Court. The opinion was given by Judge Lloyd and filed on Friday in the Clerk's office.

It was the contention of the attorney for the plaintiffs, Alonzo L. Miles, that the assessment upon the plaintiffs is unconstitutional and void, as the taking of property without due process of law. It was contended that the act was unconstitutional and void because there is no provision for an appeal from the action of the Council in levying the assessment. Accordingly, the counsel for the plaintiffs advised his clients not to pay the assessment; the city advertised the property of the plaintiffs for sale to pay the assessments; and a day or two before the sale the attorney for plaintiffs got out an injunction which prevented the sale. A motion was then made before the Circuit Court to dissolve the injunction, and at the March term of the Circuit Court the case was argued before the Court by A. L. Miles for plaintiffs, and L. Atwood Bennett and J. E. Ellegood for the defendants.

Mr. Beach Found Dead Outside Home At Delmar.

Isaiah Beach, an aged resident of Delmar was found dead in the lot adjoining the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ralph Ellis, with whom he made his home. Mr. Beach who was over 70 years of age and had been confined to the house for the past year. On Monday night after the family had retired, Mrs. Ellis heard her father knocking at the door and finding out that it was her father asked him if he wanted anything, and he replied that he did not, but wanted to know if she was asleep. As he seemed all right and went back as she supposed to his room she made no further inquiries. She afterwards heard a slight noise but as nothing further was heard she did not investigate. This was the last she heard of him and was not aware of anything being wrong, until the next morning some one noticed his form out on the lot and asked her about him. An investigation was made at once when the body was found dead and bore every evidence of life having been extinct for some time. It is supposed that he either accidentally fell out of his window after going back to his room or that he fell out while walking in his sleep. Mr. Beach was a familiar figure in lower Sussex County, Del., where he had passed the greater part of his lifetime.

Prizes For Good Roads To Talbot Farmers.

It begins to look now as if Talbot county is on a fair way to have as good roads as any county, as the Good Roads League is taking a great deal of interest in working them with the split log drag and have offered prizes of $100, $50 and $25 for the best, second and third best roads work in this manner. There are now 22 farmers working certain roads near Easton in the hope of winning one or more of these prizes.

Before the prizes are awarded the roads will be inspected by a committee composed of the members of the Good Roads League and the Board of County Commissioners.

Automobiles Exceeding Speed Limit.

The reckless driving through the streets of Salisbury by some Automobile owners has caused considerable complaint from the citizens here. It is understood that the Council will soon take up this question and that a speed limit will be decided upon to the Automobileist can live up to and at the same time be a protection to the citizens here from illegal and fast driving. After the passage of an ordinance on this subject the city should enforce it against all drivers of machines.

It is the impression of many that a fine of sufficient size to make it unlikely that the ordinance will be broken ought to be imposed. There is no doubt as to the necessity of a proper law upon this subject, and that citizens should all be protected against the speeding and reckless driving that is now indulged in by some of our owners.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Lace And Embroideries Used To Trim Linen Gowns: New Ways Of Making Foulard And Pongee Dresses: Fashions In Footwear: Parasols: Colored Linen And Pique Dresses.

The dresses prepared for the coming summer are among the loveliest models ever evolved in fashion's realm and the lingerie gowns particularly are perfect dreams of beauty. These costumes are lavishly trimmed and most remarkable combinations of lace are found upon them. On one dress is often seen Valenciennes, fillet, imitation Irish, Venise and Princess lace all united to form a single design and when embroidery is also included it is easy to see how elaborate are some of the effects.

Allover embroidery and flouncing, as well as insertion and band patterns, are also used in the construction of lingerie gowns and this affords a welcome change from the popular lace trimmed frock.

Foulard And Pongee Dresses.

That old standby foulard is as popular as ever this season and is seen in both satin and will effects and is used for both plain and elaborate gowns. It is made up into simple shirt waist dresses or handsome jumper or guimpe frocks. Fancy patterns are used a great deal on these costumes and so are bands of satin, fancy silk braids and guimpes and of course, lace and heavy lace insertions.

Pongees in natural colors and all the modish shades is made up into some beautiful costumes. A charming jumper dress of pale blue pongee in the rough weave now so fashionable had a coat to match. The princess jumper had a high girle out in one with the skirt, which together with the shoulder straps was elaborately braided in pale blue soutache. The coat was in the semi fitting Directoire style and showed an elaborate pattern of braiding all around the edge and up the side seams.

Fashions In Footwear.

Never before was Fashion so insistent in demanding that her votaries should be daintily shod in footwear that accords in tone either with the dress or its trimmings. The increasing demand for shoes made of the new Chrome tanned glazed kid which comes in several shades, is due no doubt to the fact that there is something in the tanning of the kid that makes it not only pliable and lustrous, but also impervious to moisture, so that if one is caught in a hard down pour, one's shoes are not stretched out of shape, and it is only necessary to wipe off the grime with a damp cloth and then rub them dry to restore all their color and finish.

Dainty Summer Parasols.

Tucked, parasols are very smart indeed, and the tucking is usually arranged as a border. Many effects in Copenhagen blue are seen and this shade is also very fashionable combined with other colors in parasols of tussah silk, pongee or taffeta. Some elaborate linen parasols have applique and embroidered medallions set on over cut portions of the body material creating a very pretty effect. These medallions are often trimmed with narrow Valenciennes lace which also edges the parasol.

Suits Of Linen And Pique.

Linen and pique suits in both plain and fancy styles are to be worn a great deal this summer, the larger proportion of these costumes being in the fancy lace trimmed, embroidered or soutache braided models. The fashions most favored are the jumper or princess designs with a coat of the same material. White of course is the favorite shade, but more colored linens will be worn than has been the case for years, pale pink, blue and lavender are the leading tints.

Both white and colored piques are shown trimmed with designs in soutache braiding of the same shade. There are also some smart looking white suits trimmed with thick cords covered with colored pique arranged in the form of ornaments on the front of the coat, on the sleeves and occasionally on the panels of the skirt.

The skirt buttoned up the front panel is unquestionably the most popular of the newly introduced skirt styles. This model is used for both woolen, silk and cotton gowns.

"Why isn't it? He's got to come into the Eighth to lick me, and he'll be about as strong there as a barker's influence with the Prohibition party. Besides, I like a fight. I'm the original 'Stop, look and listen' signal at Trouble station. I—"

"As a personal favor to me, alderman," wheedled Mr. Wainwright in his most persuasive manner, "won't you make a friend of Horriggan?"

"I'd gladly oblige you by making a fine, fashionable, rollickin' funeral of him, but friends—friends—"

"But if I asked him here to meet you wouldn't you try to be cordial to him?"

"I sure would—as cordial as a bankrupt to a rent collector. He'd be as pretty near as welcome as a broken egg."

"I'm sorry you look at it that way, alderman, because I've asked him to stay."

"To come here? Quit your joshin'!"

"But he doesn't know he'll meet you."

"An' he'll never find it out, for I'm on my way. I'd sooner meet a p'rade from the 'contagion hospital'."

"Of course, if you're really afraid of him—"

"Afraid of him?" snorted Phelan, coming to a full stop at the door and then retreating to the middle of the room. "That's about as afraid as I am of a man who's been in the city for twenty years."

The man who followed the announcement was one who carried in his bearing the chief reasons for his success. Tall, stout, square of jaw, square of brow, hard of mouth, he seemed to dominate his very surroundings and to exude a rough forcefulness that carried all before it. His physiognomy was essentially that of the brawn fighter as well as leader—the man that neither gives nor asks quarter. From the days when as a ferry tugger he had laid the foundations of his later fortune by "knocking down" up through his varied career as policeman, contractor, politician and boss, he had fought his way ever to the front by that same force, backed by a bulldog pluck, a genius for organization and a mentality wholly devoid of scruple and conscience.

It could not be said of Richard Horriggan that his morals were bad. He simply had no morals at all. By contact with men of higher culture than his own he had lost his early incoherence and vulgarity of speech. His domineering roughness of manner he had no wish to lose. It was by far too valuable an asset.

"Good morning, Mr. Wainwright," began Horriggan, with a breezy familiarity, as he strode into the library, quite unabashed at finding himself in the presence of the dreaded alderman. "I'm on ahead of time, ain't I?"

He stopped short, with a grunt of rage. His eyes had fallen on Phelan. Bristling like a plucky terrier at the onset of a mastiff, the alderman stood his ground, giving the boss glare for glare.

And so for a moment the enemies faced each other.

CHAPTER III.

HORRIGGAN was first to break the tense silence.

"What's this here for?" he growled, indicating Phelan with a contemptuous jerk of the head and addressing no one in particular.

"Ask your friend Wainwright," grunted Phelan, with equal roughness.

"I—you see," began Wainwright, confidentially, "I didn't like to see two such first rate chaps at odds with each other, so I wanted to bring you together here to—"

"Oh, you did, did you?" sneered Horriggan. "And what did Phelan say to that little plan?"

"I said," snapped Phelan before his boss could reply—"I said I'd see you in a first!"

"Same here, twice over!" said Horriggan.

"But," interposed Wainwright coaxingly, "is there no way?"

"No," retorted Horriggan, his deep voice rumbling far down in his throat. "There isn't. Look here, Phelan! I'm out for your scalp, and I'm going to get it!"

"Come on, look for it!" crowed Phelan, fairly hopping up and down in rage and excitement. "Come on, roun'! An' while you're huntin' my scalp don't overlook one bet. I'm after yours!"

"Mine, you little shrimp! Why?"

"Yes, yours, Horriggan, you cur. You're pretty chesty an' strong standin' on the top of the organization, but you're no bloomin' states of liberty. You can be torn down, and here's the man who's goin' to do the tearin'!"

"Alderman Jimmy Phelan of the Eighth!"

"Let it go at that for now. You'll wake up in the fall, when the election—"

"Let it go at that for keeps. I—"

"Mr. Wainwright," broke in Horriggan, "if this was the business you wanted to talk over with me about—"

"It isn't," answered the thoroughly uncomfortable alderman.

"Oh! Then we can get down to real business perhaps when this fellow's gone."

"That lets me out," observed Phelan cheerfully as he picked up his hat. "G'by, Mr. Wainwright. G'by, Mr. Gibbs. Horriggan, I'll—"

"But you'll stay to lunch, alderman, won't you?" urged Horriggan, with an effort at cordiality that deceived no one.

"No, thanks," replied Phelan. "When the curtain's down and the orchestra's gone home, I don't need no usher to poke me in the ribs to tell me the show's out. As for stayin' to break bread with Dick Horriggan, I'd sooner have a jolly little grub fest with Wiley's poison squad. Goodby, all. Horriggan, as for you, some day I'll cross two sticks of dynamite under you and you'll scatter so wide that the inquest over your political remains will have to be held in fourteen counties."

"I am so sorry, Mr. Horriggan, that this should have happened in my house," said Wainwright as the alderman stalked out, leaving the boss staring after him in dumb fury. "I meant it for the best and—"

"Mr. Wainwright," interrupted Horriggan, venting his pent-up wrath on his dismayed host, "this old world of ours is white with bones of failures, of fools, of deadbeats. In other words, of folks who 'meant it for the best.' Now let's get down to business."

"First let me introduce Mr. Gibbs. He—"

"Glad to meet him, but he'll excuse me when I say I never talk business when there's a third party around. No offense, Mr. Gibbs. Just walk out and take a look at the view, like a good boy, won't you?" Thanks."

Gibbs, at a warning look of appeal from Wainwright, checked the angry retort that sprang to his lips, turned on his heel and walked out. Horriggan.

who had observed the glance exchanged between the two men, grudgingly attempted to soften the effect of his brusqueness.

"I didn't mean to snub your friend," said he, "but Phelan riled me, and I took it out on the next man I spoke to. I want on earth set you to having Phelan here to meet me for, anyway?"

"Just as I said. I wanted to win him over to us. We will need every strong man we can get this fall. We'll—"

"You know a lot about finance, Mr. Wainwright. But you're a rank outsider in politics or you'd never have made such a break. I can't compromise with Phelan even if I wanted to. He's stood out against me, and I've got to smash him. If he could defy me and get away with it, other leaders would think they could do it, too, and in less than no time the organization would be split up into a dozen factions, and I'd be down and out. Understand, I've got to look out for discipline if I'm to hold the place I've won. When a man in the organization starts a fight against me, I must down him. There's no turning back. That's why I'm boss. Every man in the crowd knows he's got to obey me or fight me and that if it's a fight it's a battle to the death. And he's the man who does the dying, not I. Now, you understand? So we can get to business. What?"

But business seemed this morning fated to many interruptions. The latest came in the form of Judge Newman, who, bustling into the room with all his customary pompous dignity, suddenly stopped in his tracks and wilted at sight of the boss.

"Good morning, Mr. Horriggan," said the judge ingratiatingly, wringing under the boss' glare. "I hope I'm not here too late. I've just heard that Mr. Wainwright has interested for—"

"For your recommendation?" queried Horriggan, speaking as though to a disgraced servant. "If that's what you're here for you might have spared yourself the trouble. What I told you before still goes."

"But, Mr. Horriggan, consider how long I've been on the bench, and—"

"And it's time you got your nose out of the feed bag and gave some one else a chance. You see, I—"

"I'm growing old, Mr. Horriggan," pleaded the thoroughly cowed judge. "How can I go back to law practice and compete with younger men? Besides, Mrs. Newman declares—"

"I can't help that," returned Horriggan, quite unmoved. "You've had your share. We've got to look out for our own active workers—for the men we can count on to do the right thing."

"But, Mr. Horriggan," protested the judge, "I always try to do what is right."

"I said the right thing," corrected the boss. "See the difference?"

"Excuse me, Judge," intervened Wainwright. "If you'll leave this matter in my hands, I will try to convince Mr. Horriggan of your fitness. Just leave it all to me."

"Oh, thank you so much, Charles," cried the relieved judge. "I'm sure I can count on you. Mrs. Newman will be so grateful. Well, I won't detain you any longer. Goodby."

"Goodby, Judge," answered Wainwright tolerantly.

"Goodby, Mr. Horriggan," went on Judge Newman, with effusion.

A grunt from Horriggan, who had turned his broad back on the visitor, was the only reply, and the judge departed to bear the message of hope to Mrs. Newman.

"Have you any special objections to Newman?" asked Wainwright.

"No," said Horriggan, "except I think perhaps there's a man who can do better by us. You know how much it means sometimes to have the right judge handle your case."

"I think at a pinch we can manage Newman, and—"

"Oh, if it's a favor to you, all right. But it doesn't do these judiciary fellows any harm to keep them guessing awhile. It takes 'em and teaches 'em to mind—sort of keeps them in their places, you know. And now won't you tell that butter of yours not to let us be disturbed?"

Wainwright complied, and the two settled down to their deferred talk.

"How about the election this fall?" began the financier.

"We're already growing; but just between you and me, it's going to be a hot fight. The people at large seem to be a little sore on the organization. A few deals lately have been a little raw and some of the papers are kicking Good Lord! If it wasn't for the newspapers, what a clench a boss would have in running a city! It'd be like taking pennies from a baby's bank. But—"

"Then you think there is some doubt about the election?"

"I wouldn't go so far as that. It'll be a tussle, but with plenty of cash and the right man for mayor—mark me, I say—and the right man—we ought to win."

"The woods are full of 'right men,'" replied Wainwright. "The money is the thing to consider. That is why I asked you here today. This is the point I'm getting at: As soon as election is safely over the Borough Street railway will apply for a franchise for a car line from Blank Avenue to Dash street along the river front."

"I see," nodded Horriggan. "And as you own the City Surface line and as that is the Borough Street railway's worst rival, you want the Borough's franchise bill killed when it comes before the board of aldermen?"

"You're wrong. To paraphrase your own words, you know a lot about politics. I want the Borough Street railway's franchise granted, and I want the franchise to be perpetual."

"But I don't see what your driving at. If you intend to merge the Borough Street railway with your own City Surface line its charter will become void."

"I don't mean to merge them. I own both roads, and I run them separately. The— you do?"

"That's a little surprise, eh? I haven't made any parade of it. I just went quietly to work, through Gibbs, and bought up a majority of the Borough stock. Now don't you see how the granting of the franchise and the news that I control the road will work when they are made known?"

"Sure! I'll send that stock sky high. You'll scoop in a million or two. A million or two!" echoed Wainwright scornfully. "Nearer—"

"Hold on!" interrupted Horriggan. "What's that noise?"

He had jumped to his feet with an alacrity that was surprising in so large a man and was listening intently.

"That clicking?" asked Wainwright. "Oh, that's only the private wire in my office."

"Private wire? Any operator?"

"Of course. Why?"

"Suppose he should happen to be listening to us?"

"Who? Thompson? Absurd!"

"I don't know. I'd rather—"

"Nonsense. It's Thompson, my private secretary, a man who's been with me nine years. I trust him as I trust my own shadow."

"But I don't. I don't trust anybody. Send him into some other room."

"I can't. In his absence some important message might come, and if he wasn't there on the very moment to transmit it to me I might lose thousands. He's all right if ever a man was. I trust him implicitly."

"Oh, all right, then. Go on with what you were saying."

"I want the Borough Street railway franchise made perpetual. Catch my drift?"

"Sure. But the papers and the property holders will make a big kick."

"Let them. They'll soon get hoarse and have to rest their throats. As long as we get the votes what do we care if—"

"Yes, yes," agreed the boss impatiently. "That's all right, but what I want to know is, how does all this concern me?"

Horriggan threw himself back in his chair, upturned clear in one corner of his mouth, thumbs in waistcoat armbolts and eyed his host quizzically. Wainwright did not even pretend not to understand. Still, instead of giving a direct answer he went on with seeming irrelevance:

"I am a public spirited citizen. I believe civic welfare would suffer by any change in municipal administration, so to keep the present party in power I am willing to donate to it $200,000 toward election expenses."

"That sounds pretty good as far as it goes, but maybe you didn't hear something I asked you a minute ago. What I want to know is, how does all this concern me?"

"I'm coming to that. As I said, I am a public spirited citizen. I'm also a good friend—such a good friend that I'm always glad to put my friends on to anything in the market that looks particularly promising. Suppose I carry up for your account at the market price (that's 62 just now) 15,000 shares of Borough Street railway stock?"

"Well?"

"If that franchise is granted, Borough stock will go up at least 25 points within two days. That would clear up for you a profit of—let's see—about $375,000."

Horriggan had pulled a pencil from his pocket and was scribbles on the back of an envelope.

"Yes," he said at last; "that's right, $375,000. That would be my profit, while yours would run into the millions. That's not warm enough friendship for me."

"Surely, that is a generous—"

"Generous, maybe, but I'd like something munificent—say 25,000 shares at 63. Then at the 25 point, jump I'd make—I'd make—consulting his figures on the envelope—"something over $600,000. That sounds better to me. How?"

"But Mr. Horriggan—"

"You've got my terms. Take 'em or leave 'em."

"Oh, very well," conceded Wainwright, with lame graciousness. "Anything to oblige an old friend."

"Good! So we get $200,000 for election expenses, and my personal account receives 25,000 shares at 63."

"Quite so. And now—"

"And now comes the question of the right man for mayor. We—"

Again Horriggan paused, rising to his feet stealthily, like some ponderous cat, his head bent slightly, as though catching a faint or distant sound.

"What's the matter?" asked Wainwright, looking up.

"Nothing," returned Horriggan. But he did not resume his seat. Instead he walked to the door, opened it, and looked out into the hall.

His wanderings had brought him to the office door. With the last word he suddenly jerked it open.

Thompson stepped quietly over the threshold into the library, walked over to his employer, handed him a dispatch and went out again under the battery of Horriggan's glare, closing the office door after him.

"That fellow was listening to every word we said!" shouted the boss as the door shut behind Thompson.

"How foolish you are!" protested Wainwright. "He was bringing me this message. I've tried and tempted and tested Thompson in a hundred ways, and he's always rung true. I trust him utterly."

"Well, I don't trust a man living," retorted Horriggan, reluctantly convinced. "I don't sign receipts or keep accounts or write letters or have witnesses when I talk. I always make it a question of veracity between me and the other man if there's an investigation. My word's as good as any one's, and they can't prove anything against me in case of a showdown. I advise you to try the same plan. It's a good one. And in the meantime if I were you I'd keep an eye on that secretary. He'll be watching."

"Never mind about Thompson. He's all right. Let's get back to the election. Who have you in mind for mayor?"

"Well," considered Horriggan, "he's got to be some one who isn't mixed up in politics or corporations. Some one the public isn't on to. A man with no queer past."

"I advise you to consult the calendar of saints and pick out your candidate there," sneered Wainwright, who could not clearly follow his guest's reasoning.

"No, I think I can find him on earth," laughed Horriggan. "He's got to be young, clever, educated, with a good name, a good family and social standing and plenty of cash. The cash is important, so the public will understand he isn't a graft hunter. They've got to be made to think he's in the game for purity of politics and high principles and love of civic duty and all that sort of thing. At the same time he's got to be some one we can handle to suit ourselves. That's the man who'll catch 'em coming and going. We've got to find him. Any suggestions?"

"Well, how about Gibbs?"

"Won't do. Broker and money juggler. The public wouldn't stand for him."

"Young Sawyer?"

"Sawyer was born foolish, and he's been getting steadily sillier every year since, and his face shows it."

"Ten Brock, then?"

"Ten Brock is too fond of turning a cigarette into the connecting link between fire and a fool. And, besides, he wears a monocle. What'd happen if he was to flash that monocle in a Fourth ward meeting? There'd be a massacre."

"Well, who, then? Have you any one in mind?"

"Yes," assented Horriggan. "I have. Do you happen to know a young fellow who spends his summer near here—a chap named Bennett—Alwyn Bennett?"

"Certainly! I know him well. But—"

"Well, how does he strike you?"

"I'd never have thought of him in such a connection."

"Why wouldn't you? He pretty near fulfills all our qualifications. Besides, his father used to be a big man in the organization. Got some fat contracts from it in his time too."

"But young Bennett has never—"

"He's well off, well educated, clever, and all that. I ran across him last fall when he came over to help Lorimer in his fight in the Fourteenth. He made some rattling good speeches, and the boys all took a liking to him. A swell, but not a snob; good mixer, good fellow, popular, clear headed, no past—yes, he's our man. More I think it over the sorer I am."

"I shouldn't wonder if you're right. How would you like to talk it over with him now?"

"Now?"

"Yes. He's still around the place somewhere, I think."

Wainwright rang a bell, and the butler appeared.

"Find Mr. Bennett," said the financier, "and ask him if he will step here for a moment."

"Yes," went so Horriggan reflectively, rubbing his huge plump hands together. "We'll see the man for us—just in," he said, with less conviction, "if we can handle him."

The Most Common Cause Of Suffering

Rheumatism causes more pain and suffering than any other disease, for the reason that it is the most common of all ills, and it is certainly gratifying to sufferers to know that Chamberlain's Pain Balm will afford relief, and makes rest and sleep possible. In many cases the relief from pain, which is at first temporary, has become permanent, while in old people subject to chronic rheumatism, often brought on by dampness or changes in the weather, a permanent cure cannot be expected; the relief from pain which this liniment affords is alone worth many times its cost. 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale at Toulson's Drug Store.

It Reached The Spot.

Mr. E. Humphrey, who owns a large general store at Omega, O., and is president of the Adams County Telephone Co., as well as of the Home Telephone Co., of Pike County, O., says of Dr. King's New Discovery: "It saved my life once. At least I think it did. It seemed to reach the spot—the very seat of my cough—when everything else failed." Dr. King's New Discovery not only reaches the cough spot; it heals the sore spots and the weak spots in throat, lungs and chest. Sold under guarantee at Toulson's Drug Store. 50 cents and $1.00. Whooping Cough.

We found it as he said, and can recommend it to any one having children troubled with whooping cough, says Mrs. A. Goswami, of Durand, Mich. For sale at Toulson's drug store.

Sore Nipples.

Any mother who has had experience with this distressing ailment will be pleased to know that a cure has been effected by applying Chamberlain's Salve as soon as the child is done nursing. The U. S. Government in its "Pure Food Law" does not "indorse" or "guarantee" any preparation, as some manufacturers in their advertisements would make it appear. In the case of medicines the law provides that certain drugs shall be mentioned on labels, if they are ingredients of the preparations. Ely's Cream Balm, the well known family remedy for cold in the head, hay fever and nasal catarrh, doesn't contain a single injurious drug, so the makers have simply to print the fact that it complies fully with all the requirements of the law.

For stomach troubles, biliousness

WHERE DID YOU COME FROM.

Where did you come from baby dear? "Out of the everywhere into here." Where did you get those eyes so blue? "Out of the skies as I came through." What makes the light in them sparkle and spin? "Some of the starry spikes left in." Where did you get that little tear? "I found it waiting when I got here." What makes your forehead so smooth and high? "A soft hand stroked it as I went by." What makes your cheek like a warm, white rose? "I saw something better than anyone knows."

Whence that three cornered smile of bliss? "Three angels gave me at once a kiss."

Where did you get this pearly ear? "God spoke, and it came out to hear."

Where did you get those arms and hands? "Love made them herself into bonds and hands."

Feet, whence did you come, you darling things? "From the same box as the cherubs' wings."

How did they all just come to be you? "God thought about me, and so I am here."

But how did you come to us, you dear? "God thought about you, and so I am here."

BACK GIVES OUT.

Plenty of Salisbury Readers Have This Experience.

You tax the kidneys—overwork them—

They can't keep up the continual strain.

The back gives out—it aches and pains.

Don't wait longer—take Doan's Kidney Pills.

B. A. Bennett, Orisfield, Md., says:

"Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in my family and we found them to be exactly as represented. I used them for backache and a severe weakness across the small of the back brought on by inactive kidneys. A dull heavy pain and a weak, all gone feeling of depression prevailed my whole system, at times so severe as to make the least exertion not only painful but irksome, particularly mornings after long sleepless nights, when I would suffer with a lack of energy and languid, listless feelings. Doctors and medicines failed to help me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at a drug store, and I was in a miserable condition. They soon cured me of the whole trouble and not a trace of it has ever returned. I do not hesitate to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other sufferers."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster—Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

"Hold on jus' half minute. I want jus' one word with you."

"All right," replied the officer impatiently. "Be quick about it. What is it you want to say?"

"All I want t' say is jus' this; I appreciate yur invitation, but I jus' can't go."—Lippincott's.

The badge of honesty is on every wrapper of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because a full list of the ingredients composing it is printed there in plain English. Forty years of experience has proven its worth as an alternative and tonic for the cure of stomach disorders and all liver ills. It builds up the run down system as no other tonic can in which alcohol is used. The active medicinal principles of native roots such as Golden Seal and Queen's root, Stone and Mandrake root, Blood root and Black Cherry bark are extracted and preserved by the use of chemically pure, triple refined glycerine. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce at Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet which tells of well recognized medical authorities such as Drs. Bartholomew, King, Souder, Cog and Ellingwood that these roots can be depended upon for their curative action in all weak states of the stomach, accompanied by indigestion or dyspepsia as well as in all "wasting diseases" where there is loss of flesh and gradual running down of the system.

AROUND THE HORN

With "Bob" Evans, B. Lewis Lankford, Of Somerset Tells Of Trip With The Battle-Ship Fleet.

Lewis Lankford, a native of Somerset county, who was paymaster's clerk on the flag-ship Connecticut of the Atlantic battleship fleet on the voyage around to Pacific waters, has returned to his home in Princess Anne, having left the Connecticut at San Diego, Cal. He wired his resignation from the service immediately on receipt of news of the death of his father, Capt. F. Lankford, and came home at once.

Mr. Lankford has many interesting stories to tell of his experience on the cruise. When the equator was crossed on the run from Port of Spain to Rio de Janeiro Mr. Lankford said that Neptune boarded the flag-ship and inflated about 800 of the crew.

"After very comical ceremonies," said Mr. Lankford, Neptune proceeded to shave the land lubbers. The shaving was done with a wooden razor after the victim had been well lathered from a bucket of axle grease, lamp black, etc., mixed with salt water and applied with a wall brush. After the shave the "lubber" was tipped into a tank, where he was given a good bath. All other ships in the fleet had similar exercises.

Found Plenty Of Game.

"About 50 miles before reaching Rio, a squadron of the Brazilian Navy met the fleet and escorted us into the harbor. Rio is the prettiest harbor I have ever seen. It is located on an oblong bay, and surrounded by the most beautiful hills and mountains. The city has made rapid strides in improvements since I had seen it—13 years before."

At Punta Arenas Mr. Lankford said he met a gentleman from Texas—Mr. Woodward—who is managing a number of gold dredges operating in Terra del Fuego. "Mr. Woodward invited a party of us on a gunning trip to his place about 20 miles away," said Mr. Lankford. "A party of six of our ship went over to Porvenir, put up in a hotel over night, and the next day we secured horses and climbed the hills to the lakes, where we found wild geese and ducks plentiful. Our party bagged about 200."

"The Straits of Magellan, in places are narrow, and with the snow capped mountains towering over, together with the glaciers, made a beautiful sight."

While at Callao, Peru, Mr. Lankford said he was one of a party invited to see a bullfight. "About 3000 jockies and 300 officers went," he said. "Six bulls had been selected for the fracas, and they were named 'Fighting Bob Evans,' 'Admiral Thomas,' 'Admiral Sperry,' 'Admiral Bill Emory,' 'The Officers' and 'The Oref.' 'Fighting Bob' was the first bull let out, and he held up the reputation of his namesake. The first rush he made he gored the pony and put its rider to flight."

"The act that was most appreciated by the officers and crew of our fleet was the granting by the Peruvian Government of free cable messages to communicate with their families on private affairs."

Ellis—Clark.

Dr. Walter W. Ellis, a prominent and successful young physician of Delaware City, Del., and son of Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan W. Ellis, of Delmar, Del., was married at high noon, Wednesday, April 22nd, to Miss Mary Elizabeth Clark, of Wilmington, Del. The ceremony was performed in St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, Wilmington, by the Rev. Dr. Geo. O. Hall, Rector.

An elaborate musical program was rendered by the organist of the Church before the arrival of the bridal party and then rendered the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin. After the ceremony Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played.

The bride wore a handsome tailor made gown of navy blue chiffon broadcloth with white net waist, trimmed with exquisite lace, and a Copenhagen blue hat. She carried a white prayer book, from which the marriage service was read.

After receiving congratulations of relatives and friends, Dr. and Mrs. Ellis left on the 1:10 p. m. train for a brief trip to Washington and points of interest in Virginia. They will reside in Delaware City, and will be at home after May twentieth.

Dr. Ellis is well known in Salisbury and vicinity, where he has many relatives and friends.

Death of Mr. Samuel Sterling.

A telegram received here Monday afternoon announced the death at his home in Jersey City, N. J., of Mr. Samuel Sterling, who married Miss Mabel Johnson, formerly of Salisbury. Mr. Sterling was about 77 years of age and one of the best known residents of Jersey City. He was closely identified with the business interests of his city and had witnessed its growth from a comparatively small town to a large and prosperous city.

He was a strong adherent of the Methodist Episcopal Church and was one of the leaders of the church to which he belonged. He was a sincere Christian man and passed away in the full confidence of a blessed future reward. Mr. Sterling had visited Salisbury as the guest of his brother in law, Mr. E. L. Brewington and made many warm friends here.

EASY TO MIX THIS.

Prepare It At Home By Shaking Ingredients Well In A Bottle.

What will appear very interesting to many people here is the article taken from a New York daily paper, giving a simple prescription, as formulated by a noted authority, who claims that he has found a positive remedy to cure almost any case of backache or kidney or bladder derangement. In the following simple prescription, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease.

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

A well known druggist here at home when asked regarding this prescription stated that the ingredients are all harmless, and can be obtained at a small cost from any good prescription pharmacy, or the mixture would be put up if asked to do so. He further stated that while this prescription is often prescribed in rheumatic affections with splendid results, he could see no reason why it would not be a splendid remedy for kidney and urinary troubles and backache, as it has a peculiar action upon the kidney structure, cleansing these most important organs and helping them to sift and filter from the blood the foul acids and waste matter which cause sickness and suffering. Those of our readers who suffer can make no mistake in giving it a trial.

Dr. Walter W. Ellis, a prominent and successful young physician of Delaware City, Del., and son of Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan W. Ellis, of Delmar, Del., was married at high noon, Wednesday, April 22nd, to Miss Mary Elizabeth Clark, of Wilmington, Del. The ceremony was performed in St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, Wilmington, by the Rev. Dr. Geo. O. Hall, Rector.

An elaborate musical program was rendered by the organist of the Church before the arrival of the bridal party and then rendered the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin. After the ceremony Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played.

The bride wore a handsome tailor made gown of navy blue chiffon broadcloth with white net waist, trimmed with exquisite lace, and a Copenhagen blue hat. She carried a white prayer book, from which the marriage service was read.

After receiving congratulations of relatives and friends, Dr. and Mrs. Ellis left on the 1:10 p. m. train for a brief trip to Washington and points of interest in Virginia. They will reside in Delaware City, and will be at home after May twentieth.

Dr. Ellis is well known in Salisbury and vicinity, where he has many relatives and friends.

Death of Mr. Samuel Sterling. A telegram received here Monday afternoon announced the death at his home in Jersey City, N. J., of Mr. Samuel Sterling, who married Miss Mabel Johnson, formerly of Salisbury. Mr. Sterling was about 77 years of age and one of the best known residents of Jersey City. He was closely identified with the business interests of his city and had witnessed its growth from a comparatively small town to a large and prosperous city.

He was a strong adherent of the Methodist Episcopal Church and was one of the leaders of the church to which he belonged. He was a sincere Christian man and passed away in the full confidence of a blessed future reward. Mr. Sterling had visited Salisbury as the guest of his brother in law, Mr. E. L. Brewington and made many warm friends here.

RESULTS OF ELECTION

For Mayor And Councilmen. Regularly Nominated Democratic Ticket Wins. Members Of New Council.

The City election on Tuesday for the purpose of electing a Mayor and five Councilmen resulted in the election of the men regularly nominated at the Democratic Primaries with substantial majorities for all the nominees. Messrs. J. Winfield Cookran and Clarence M. Brewington names were placed by friends in the field for councilmen at the polls, and an independent fight made for their election. There was but one regularly nominated ticket by any of the parties—that of the democrats. Some of the printed tickets contained the names of the five regularly nominated men and that of Mr. Cookran and Mr. Brewington so that voters could mark out the names they wanted to vote for, another of the printed ballots contained the names of three of these men and those of Cookran and Brewington.

There was no opposition to Mayor Harper. The vote on the Councilman ticket showed that considerable cutting was done. The total vote of each candidate was as follows:

Charles E. Harper	558
Frederick L. Smith	485
Harry Dennis	450
Charles E. Bennett	498
William E. Sheppard	444
Herbert H. Hitch	375
J. Winfield Cookran	173
Clarence M. Brewington	183

Messrs. Harper, Smith, Dennis, Bennett, Sheppard and Hitch having received the highest number of votes were returned elected. The judges of election were Sidney L. Trader, Harry Hooks and Ernest Ellis.

Three of the Councilmen elected—Smith, Dennis and Hitch—are members of the present board. The other two have never served in the Council.

PRIZE FIGHTING

Not Looked Upon With Favor Here. Differs From Many Art Of Self Defence.

While every man admires the manly art of self defense and likes to see a man who knows how to use his fists when occasion may call for the use of these natural weapons and while all acknowledge that he only way to learn how to make the best use of the weapons nature has placed in our hands for our own protection and assistance, is by use and experience, yet the exhibitions being given in Salisbury by hired "fighters" recently, will not appeal to the majority of the public as either necessary, amusing or morally elevating.

There is no more harm in a boxing match between men of the right character for fun than there is in any other kind of innocent amusement, but when it comes down to the point of putting two men against each other who are only doing it for the money there is in it for them, then it fails to be an amusement but becomes a brutal show of men standing up to get punched for a few miserable dollars. The moral influences surrounding a spectacle of this kind are certainly not elevating ones, and may even be dangerous to the minds of the very young who attend these shows. It was a disgusting spectacle to see some of the young boys of our city on the morning following the last evening bout here following in the trail of a colored fighter looking on him with the eyes of hero worship and doubtless judging from their actions, wishing they were as great as he was.

To have our boys and young men trained in the scientific use of their fists is all right and will do them good, neither will a friendly boxing contest where the participants are in it for fun and amusement, but Salisbury is too small a place for the demoralizing influences of a "Prize Fighter's" ring.

The original purposes of these so called "contests" was, as given out, to stimulate public interest in boxing, but the result is that public interest in "Prize fighting" is being stimulated, and that stimulation is not to the best interest for the morals of our community.

WORLD'S METHODIST

Heads in General Conference in Baltimore. Their Position On Amusements, Divorces, Social Changes, Etc.

Bishop Henry W. Warren opened the twenty fifth quadrennial General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church on Wednesday morning in Baltimore. There were present at the roll call 717 delegates out of a total of 787 present and alternates were elected for the absentees.

This great Congress of Methodism represents over 8,000,000 members of that church. By recommending to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church which is meeting at the Lyric, that amusements be combated by spiritual rather than legislative means, and that the words "Dancing, playing at games of chance, attending theatres, horse races, cruises, dancing parties or dancing schools" be stricken out of Paragraph 248 of the Book of Discipline, the board of bishops caused a sensation Thursday morn. The recommendation was greeted with great applause and caused one of the two great outbreaks of the day.

The first and greatest was caused by the appeal of the bishops for the delegates to pledge "everlasting enmity to the liquor traffic." Both the appeal and the recommendation were contained in the quadrennial report of the board to the Conference which was read by Bishop D. A. Goodsell of Boston.

The bishops made it plain that they do not approve of these amusements, but believe that the number and kind of amusements have grown so great that the question should be left to the conscience of the people themselves, and that the opposition of the Church to amusements is regarded as unwholesome may best be stated in the terms of general principles.

In announcing the position of the Board on the question of amusements, Bishop Goodsell said: "We have nothing to recall in the deliverance of our Church upon this subject, yet we feel it our bounden duty to say that, in our judgement, the testimony of our Church against questionable amusements will be stronger and the appeal to the conscience by our ministers to our people more easily and forcibly made if we combat this evil by spiritual rather than by legislative methods." It was this announcement that caused the outbreak of cheering and enthusiasm.

In their address the Bishops said: Amusements Antagonistic To Piety.

"We are moved by a profound conviction of duty in again calling your attention to the subject of popular amusements in relation to the spirit and conduct of spiritual life. We regret that the general prevalence of harmful amusements does not diminish. We still firmly hold that they are antagonistic to vital piety, promotive of worldliness, and especially pernicious to youth."

"We have nothing to recall in the deliverance of our Church upon this subject, yet we feel it our bounden duty to say that, in our judgement, the testimony of our Church against questionable amusements will be stronger and the appeal to the conscience by our ministers to our people more easily and forcibly made if we combat this evil by spiritual rather than by legislative methods. Hence the General Conference of 1904 adopted the following declaration, which is now an integral portion of our discipline:

"Improper amusements and excessive indulgence in innocent amusements are serious barriers to the beginning of the religious life and fruitful causes of spiritual decline. Some amusements in common use are positively demoralizing and furnish the first easy steps to the total loss of character. We, therefore, look with deep concern on the great increase of amusements and on the general prevalence of harmful amusements and lift up a solemn note of warning and entreaty, particularly against theatre-going, dancing and such games of chance as are frequently associated with gambling; all of which have been found to be antagonistic to vital piety, promotive of worldliness, and especially pernicious to youth. We affectionately admonish all our people to make their amusements the subject of careful thought and frequent prayer to study the subject of amusements in the light of their tendencies, and to be scrupulously careful in this matter to see that no injurious example. We adjure them to remember that the question for a Christian must often be, not whether a certain course of action is positively immoral, but whether it will dull the spiritual life and be an unwise example. We join upon all our bishops, presiding elders and pastors to call attention to this subject with solemn urgency in our annual and quarterly conferences and in all our pulpits, and on our editors, Sunday school officers, Board of Christian Education and class leaders to aid in abating the evils we deplore. We deem it our bounden duty to summon the whole Church to apply a thoughtful and instructed conscience to the choice of amusements, and not to leave them to accident or taste or passion; and we affectionately advise and beseech every member of the Church absolutely to avoid 'the taking such diversions as cannot be used in the names of the Lord Jesus.'"

The Recommendation.

"In view of these strong utterances now embodied in our discipline we recommend, not that Paragraph 248 be stricken out, but that it be amended by striking out the confessedly partial list of worldly amusements found therein, beginning with the last word in the eighth line, and ending with the word 'other' in the eleventh line. (The words referred to are: 'Dancing, playing at games of chance, attending theatres, horse races, cruises, dancing parties and dancing schools') which were inserted in 1872, leading up to the ground for church trial in case such trial becomes necessary, that portion of the paragraph reading: 'Taking such amusements as are obviously of misleading or questionable moral tendency or disobedience to the order and discipline of the Church,' and especially our original rule—'to taking such diversions as cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus.' Grave injustice will be done if this recommendation is interpreted by the regular press or any in the Church as an abandonment of our early opposition to worldly amusements. Indeed, it is a return to the principles and to the exact words furnished by John Wesley, a return to the historic method by which the Methodism combated worldly amusements for more than a hundred years, and to our unflinching testimony that it is the privilege of all Christians to be so absorbed and satisfied in communion with God and the service of men and the blessings which our Heavenly Father has provided that the appetite for worldly amusements may entirely disappear."

Talk of Social Changes.

In the course of a discussion of civil righteousness the address says: "We see clearly that within the next generation there are to be great social changes. The influence of wealth on political life and measures is to grow less, whether it be in the hands of individuals or corporations. The working men are to have more power, the idlers less."

"With a restless and iconoclastic future before us, we must both lead and restrain by religious forces. The social philosopher and the sociologist can detect injustices and wrongs, but he can never create the desire to remedy the wrongs which are the issue of greed."

Divorces.

"The consecutive polygamy permitted by the divorce laws of some of our States is a disgrace to our country. It continues to undermine family life and to break up into helpless and warring factions that which God means shall be a unit. We greatly rejoice that the conscience of the nation is being quickened on this subject, and that the demand for uniform divorce laws increases."

Polygamy Still Exists.

As to Mormonism the bishops declare: "We believe, from the best evidence we can obtain, that the polygamous practices of the past are still found in the States and Territories occupied by representatives of the Mormon body. In several States they have such political strength and furnish such sympathetic juries that laws against these polygamous practices cannot be executed. We believe that, as in divorce, these must be brought within the scope of national legislation before the veil can be reached with sufficient vigor to punish them as they deserve. We trust, therefore, you will consider whether it is not wise for you to advocate some Constitutional amendment which will make polygamy and polygamous practices a crime against the United States."

Dog His Partner.

In compliance with the law requiring all business firms to file with clerk of county in which business is done a sworn list of partners there was filed in Newark, N. J., a certificate showing that Frank Michael Weller and his fox terrier Tassels compose the real estate and insurance firm of F. M. Weller & Co. They do business at 819 Bank Street, Newark, and Tassels travels between his partner's home and their office in a black leather bag with air holes. His partner does the carrying.

When the certificate reached the courthouse for filing the clerks failed to find any law preventing a dog being the partner of a man in a business concern and they issued a certificate which now hangs on the wall of the Bank Street office showing that the firm has complied with the law.

Practically every post card issued of this town is from negatives by Hiltens. This is surely sufficient proof of the merit of his selections. See some of the pretty homes and views which as yet have not appeared on cards in Ulman Sons' window display, May 11th to 14th, inclusive.

A FAIR IMMIGRANT

Captures Delaware Millionaire. Landed Poor And Friendless, But Good-Looking.

Landed in this country a poor and friendless immigrant: voted the most beautiful woman in Sussex county, Del., within a few days after her arrival; introduced into society and married into a station of wealth and influence within a period of six weeks—such is in short the remarkable and unprecedented course of events in the life of Christina Nelson, a Danish immigrant of 20 years, who has just become the bride of Dr. Robert Hopkins of Newton, Del., millionaire land owner, founder of the Hopkins Hospital there and one of the foremost medical practitioners in the State.

The story of the courtship of only two weeks and the chapters leading up to the betrothal smacked of romance, and Sussex county has not yet begun to recover from the sensation. Added to the features of the story is the fact that until a short time before the wedding the bride had been employed as a housemaid in the home of former State Treasurer Charles H. Atkins. Speaking proverbially, "her face was her fortune." When Miss Nelson, only six weeks ago, bade adieu to Danish soil, an honest and beautiful face was her only asset. It was with fear and uncertainty that she set foot on American shores, for in all this country there was none to whom she could turn. Her simple honesty soon won her a position in the Atkins home. Not until three weeks ago, however, did Dr. Hopkins first look into her comely young face and from that time on Miss Nelson was destined to figure in one of the most striking romances ever known in this section.

Few knew of the impending marriage until Saturday, when the ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Charles Wiley of the Methodist Church. Mr. Atkins gave the bride away and the wedding was an auspicious one. The entire Atkins family were present.

Since her entry into Milton the beauty of Mrs. Hopkins had caused her to be the cynosure of all eyes. She was freely talked about and it soon became common talk that she was without doubt the most beautiful girl in Sussex county.

After a wedding trip to Washington and other points of interest, Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins will make their home in Newton. Dr. Hopkins is 30 years the senior of his bride.

Wonders Continue.

That he has already perfected an invention by which he can set type in an ordinary linotype machine in Paris by wireless waves thrown from London is the surprising statement made by Hans Knudsen, the Danish inventor, famous for his achievements with liquid air, after giving the first public demonstration of long distance wireless photography.

"I shall publicly demonstrate my new wireless typesetting invention within a few weeks," said Mr. Knudsen. "I have already had the first machine constructed, and it proved successful, setting 8,000 words an hour at a distance just as if the operator were working the machine."

"The time is not far distant when, with my invention, the London correspondents of the New York newspapers will be able to send their news straight to the printing press through the Marconi operator."

AT OCEAN CITY

As A Temperance Resort. Should Be A Pleasant Place This Summer. Items Of Maryland's Resort.

The new Company which has bought out the interest of the former Baltimoreans who owned the Atlantic Hotel and their large interests at Ocean City have been making an attempt to get local inventors interested. The plan adopted has been that of selling lots with the hope that the purchasers would either build themselves a cottage or put up one for rent thus increasing the number of cottagers.

It is claimed that Ocean City is now a much better place for a family to spend summer than it was while liquor was being sold. There is no question but what the large excursions which the railroads were in the habit of taking over each week during the season was often composed of men who only made the trip to have what they termed a good time, and resulted in much drunkenness on these days—much so in fact that the lower end of the beach was practically tabooed on the days of the large excursions on this account.

Now that intoxicants are no longer sold on the beach it is believed that this objectionable feature of the resort has been done away with and that now it will prove to be the ideal spot for a family to spend the summer. There is but little question but what Ocean City is blessed with one of the best beaches on the Atlantic coast, where the bathing is fine and the climate as near ideal as can be found along the seashore.

For a family wanting an outing for pleasure and health no better spot can be imagined. The wide stretch of beach gives in addition an ideal playground for the children. And those who have frequented the resort claim that the children go over weak and run down, but after spending the summer out in the open air they leave brown, healthy, and strong.

That cottages are in demand is shown by personal items from The Baltimore News of Monday as follows:

At Ocean City For Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wheeler, Jr., have taken a cottage at Ocean City, Md., for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip L. Poe will spend the summer at Ocean City, Md., where they have taken a cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin D. Nelson and Mr. and Mrs. William F. Goldsborough have taken a cottage at Ocean City, Md., where they will spend a summer. Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. Goldsborough are sisters.

There are in operation at Ocean City this season 10 large pound nets, three more than last season. The catch of fish is getting larger daily. Ten carloads were shipped by express to Philadelphia and New York Monday night of last week. Buyers from the cities are paying high prices for trout, prices for choice fish ranging from $14 to $18 per barrel.

The directors of the Shepexent Bay, Salt Water Inlet Co., have called for $1 per cent of the subscriptions to their capital stock, in order to commence the construction of the dyke across the bay. Four per cent has already been paid into the treasury, so this will make 25 per cent of the whole subscription. The balance will be called for in 25 per cent amounts as it is needed for material and labor.

—Mr. G. A. M. Wilson, of the Palm Garden, was in Baltimore, on business Wednesday and Thursday.

Nature's Forgiveness.

(Anonymous.)

Grass is the forgiveness of Nature—her constant benediction. Fields trampled with battle, saturated with blood, torn with the ruts of cannon, grow green again with grass, and the carnage is forgotten. Streets abandoned by traffic become grass grown like rural lanes, and are obliterated. Forests decay, harvests perish, flowers vanish, but grass is immortal. It leaguers by the sullen hosts of winter. It withdraws into the impregnable fortress of its subterranean vitality, and emerges upon the first solicitation of spring. Sown by the winds, by wandering birds, propagated by the subtle horticulture of the elements which are its ministers and servants, it softens the rude outline of the world. Its tenacious fibers hold the earth in its place, and prevent its soluble components from washing into the wasting sea. It invades the solitude of deserts, climbs the inaccessible slopes and forbidding pinacles of mountains, modifies climates and determines the history, character and destiny of nations.

Unobtrusive and patient, it has immortal vigor and aggression. Banished from the thoroughfare and the field, it hides its time to return, and when vigilance is relaxed, or the dynasty has perished, it silently resumes the throne from which it has been expelled, but which it never abdicates.

It bears no blazonry of bloom to charm the senses with fragrance or splendor, but its homely hue is more ennobling than the lily or the rose. It yields no fruit to earth or air, and yet should its harvest fail for a single year, famine would depopulate the world.

Letter to Harry Workman, Salisbury, Md.

Dear Sir: The wear of paint goes by gallons; the less-gallons paint wears longest. The reason, of course, is its strength. It takes less gallons, because it is strong; it wears a long time, because it is strong. It is all paint and the strongest paint.

There is a best paint among all paint. No two are alike, of course, no two cover alike or wear alike. One is thin, another is thick; one has too much lead, another too much zinc, another is right. The right is Devos, so far as is yet known. Perhaps somebody else will find out a better paint than Devos; then Devos will become a more-gallons paint, a costlier paint, a weaker paint, a less-durable paint, a less-economical paint, a timid paint.

Bigger changes than that have come over the world. Devos has the lead; why shouldn't we lose it to somebody else? Yours truly,

F. W. DEVOS & CO.

—Rev. Dr. R. S. MacArthur, of Calvary Baptist church, said at a dinner in New York, apropos of international marriages:

"Some of these marriages are from every point of view desirable. Some again are—but a dialogue will illustrate my meaning.

"'Oh Helen,' cried a girl worth $18,000,000, 'do you think the duke is sincere?'

"'Sincere' was the reply. 'Why, of course he's sincere. He hasn't got a dollar to his name.'

"Dr. MacArthur paused.

"'Or this,' he added.

"'A young marquis rushed upon his American fiancée and shouted hysterically:

"'Crush, heartless girl! You swore you loved me, and how I discover that your father is a bankrupt.'

—It is said that bees must take the nectar from 62,000 clover blossoms to make one pound of honey. This means that they must make 2,750,000 trips from the hive to the flowers. And when the price of honey is taken into consideration it will readily be seen that the price of bee labor is so cheap.

—Those who have suffered the tortures of sea-sickness will welcome the following simple remedy. Take with you a small quantity of dried salt herring, chew and swallow the jalisco. This seems to be an infallible remedy for I have known a number to try it; all of them pronounce it excellent.—The May Designer.

"PEACEFUL INDUSTRIES"

War Slays Its Thousands,
Peace Ten Thousands.

COAL MINE DISASTERS

The Country Has Been Particularly Shocked by Them Recently—Few Happened Within a Period of a Few Weeks, in Which 700 Lives Were Lost.

War slays its thousands and peace its ten thousands. For the year 1906 the Interstate Commerce Commission reported the number of railway accidents in the United States as 108,324—a total greater than all the casualties of the Boer War, which lasted three years. The records of the Public Service Commission show that 155 people were killed by street cars, elevated, steam and subway trains in New York City in the three months ending November 30th, 1907, and that 500 more were seriously injured. These figures have attracted much attention but they do not prove that the railroads are sinners above all the industrial agencies of the country; on the contrary, there are many more accidents in factories and in the building trades than on the railroads, but their vast total is not appreciated because it is the duty of the statistician to report them accurately. Only one State, New York, has made any serious attempt to the loss of life by industrial accidents. On the basis of a report of the commissioner of labor, made a number of years ago, it is computed that the industrial accident rate in the factories of New York State reaches the appalling figures of 44 to 1,000, and that more than 232,000 factory employees are killed or injured every year in the United States. Mining and railway accidents bring the total of slaughter, mutilation, and other injuries up to more than 524,000 cases annually—a record which makes that of any twelvemonth in the history of war pale into insignificance. The entire losses, in killed and wounded in the Russo-Japanese War were 33,786.

The country has been particularly shocked of late by the succession of coal mine disasters—four within a period of a few weeks—in which about seven hundred lives were lost; and the recent explosion of this dreadful death-toll lends special interest to the report on coal-mine accidents which has just been issued by the United States Geological Survey. This states that in the year 1906 nearly seven thousand men were killed or injured in the coal mines of the United States, and that the number of mine explosions has been steadily increasing. This increase is said to be due in part to the lack of properly enforceable safety regulations, which are insisted upon in France, where the accidental death-rate among coal-miners, is less than one to every thousand employed; the American ratio is 3 1-2 to 1,000, being three and one-half times that of Belgium and higher than that of either Prussia or Great Britain. One of the devices employed in German mines for the rescue of miners caught in suffocating gases consists of an air-tight mask fitting over eyes, nose and mouth and connected by tubes with reservoirs of oxygen.

The amelioration of the horrors of peace should be regarded as equally important with the amelioration of the horrors of war. Some foreign philanthropists view it this light, and not only have they induced employers and the governments of their respective countries to take action resulting in the installation of protective devices of many sorts, but they have established several museums in which the most improved of these devices are kept on exhibition for the benefit of employers and work people. A similar work has been undertaken in this country by the American Museum of Safety Devices and Industrial Hygiene, which maintains a permanent exhibit at No. 331 West Thirty-ninth Street, New York, where the management is demonstrating to employers the economy—to say nothing of the higher considerations—of insuring the safety of their work-people.

Production of Gold.
The production of gold in the United States during 1906 was $94,378,800, as against $88,180,700 of 1905, a gain in 1906 of $6,198,100. The principal gain was in Alaska which amounted to $6,439,500. Nevada's gain in gold was $3,919,500; Oregon's, $75,200; Arizona's, $55,800. The greatest loss in gold production by any State was in Colorado, where there was a decrease of $2,766,700.

SIMPLE HOME RECIPES.

Mix This Simple, Helpful Recipe At Home, And Try It Anyway.

Get from any prescription pharmacy the following:
Fluid Extract Dandelion, one half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.

Shake well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful dose after each meal and at bedtime.

The above is considered by an eminent authority, who writes in a New York daily paper, as the finest prescription ever written to relieve Backache, Kidney Trouble, Weak Bladder and all forms of Urinary difficulties. This mixture acts promptly on the eliminative tissues of the kidneys, enabling them to filter and strain the uric acid and other waste matter from the blood which causes Rheumatism.

Some persons who suffer with the affections may not feel inclined to place much confidence in this simple mixture, yet those who have tried it say the results are simply surprising, the relief being effected without the slightest injury to the stomach or other organs.

Mix some and give it a trial. It certainly comes highly recommended. It is the prescription of an eminent authority, whose entire reputation, it is said, was established by it.

A druggist here at home when asked stated that he could either supply the ingredients or mix the prescription for our readers, also recommends it as harmless.

PRONOUNCED HIS CASE INCURABLE

Whole Body Raw with Eczema—Life was Intolerable—Was Even Incased in Plaster—Discharged from Hospitals as Hopeless.

SUFFERED 14 YEARS CURED BY CUTICURA

"From the age of three months until fifteen years old, my son Owen's life was made intolerable by eczema in its worst form. He was in a constant state of suffering, and his mother was in a constant state of grief. He was not allowed to go out of doors, and he was not allowed to play with his friends. He was not allowed to eat anything that was not prepared by his mother. He was not allowed to wear anything that was not made by his mother. He was not allowed to do anything that was not approved by his mother. He was not allowed to be anything but a sick child."

him to a doctor and tried half a dozen other treatments, all with the same result: no improvement at all. The disease gradually spread until nearly every part of his body was quite raw. We had to strap him down in bed, for he used to tear himself desperately in his sleep. The agony he went through is quite beyond words. No one thought we would see him again. The regimental doctor, a very clever man, pronounced the case hopeless; at least, he said the only hope was that he might, if he lived long enough, get well to some extent. We had him in hospitals four times and he was pronounced one of the worst cases of the worst, ever admitted. From each he was discharged as incurable; in fact he got worse under the successive treatments. At one hospital they incised him in plaster, and this seemed to aggravate the soreness terribly. He looked so badly that no one liked to go near him and his life was a torture to some extent. We kept trying remedy after remedy, but we had got almost past hoping for a cure. Six months ago we purchased a set of Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent Pills and persevered with them. The result was truly marvelous and today he is perfectly cured, his skin not having a blemish on it anywhere. Mrs. Lily Hedge, 51 Vaughan Road, Oldham Road, Lane, Camblewell Green, Eng. Order of Publication.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree of divorce, a vinculo matrimonii for Alice M. Hancock, of Wicomico County, Maryland, from her husband, Thomas A. Hancock, whose place of residence is to your oratrix unknown.

"The bill states that on or about the 30th day of July, 1900, the said Alice M. Hancock was married to her said husband and resided in Wicomico County, Maryland as husband and wife, until March 1903, when he abandoned and deserted her, and since said desertion has had no permanent place of residence; that though her conduct toward him was kind, affectionate and above reproach, yet he abandoned and deserted her, deliberately and finally, and that said separation has continued uninterrupted for a period of more than three years, and is beyond any reasonable hope of reconciliation; and prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, custody of the child and such other and further relief as her case may require.

It is thereupon this 1st day of May, 1908, ordered by the Circuit Court for Wicomico County, Maryland, in equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in a newspaper published in Wicomico County, Maryland, once in each of four successive weeks before the 1st day of June 1908, cause notice to be said defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear, either in person or by solicitor, in this Court on or before the 15th day of June next, to show cause, if any there be, why a decree should not be passed as prayed.

to refer to that born to weak, nervous, ailing women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John Ryfe one of the Editorial Staff of the BOZEMAN TRIBUNE, reviews says: "Uniform root (Helonius Dicoth) which one of the chief ingredients of the 'Favorite Prescription'."

"A remedy which invariably acts as a stimulant to the entire reproductive system." Dr. Ryfe says: "In medicine we have a medication which more fully answers the above purpose than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of disease peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is met which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Ryfe further says: "The following are among the leading diseases for which Helonius Uniform root is peculiar in the back, with leucorrhoea; the (weak) condition of the reproductive system of women, system degenerated and irascibility, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant menstruation, in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (bleeding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; memory and intellect increased or absent monthly periods (trunc or accompanying irregular condition of the reproductive organs) and uterine (in the lower part) habit; dragging pains in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

"More or less of the above symptoms are met in the female system. Helonius Uniform root (the 'Favorite Prescription'), only Dr. the leading ingredient of the 'Favorite Prescription', and the medical properties of which it most faithfully represents."

"Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of the 'Favorite Prescription', Dr. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says: "The medicinal properties of the root of the Golden Seal are in the region of the womb. In all external conditions of the reproductive system, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Hartlow, M. D., of the University of Michigan, says of Golden Seal root: "In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is an invigorant as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. M. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal: "Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (bleeding) and congestive dysmenorrhea (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and the diseases for which they are recommended.

Food Value of Alcohol.

A food is a substance which enters the system of the body, and is a substance which can be digested, absorbed, and assimilated into body. The food is reduced to a fluid in the digestive process, and at that state it is carried off by the blood, and becomes a part of the medium with which the cell is surrounded. The cell selects from the medium materials which it needs. These materials form part of protoplasm of the cell, and of the structure of the cell, and utilized; but must first be reduced to liquid form, and it must enter into the structure of the cell before it can be utilized and assimilated. In the process of tissue activity, we have first building up of tissues, and then tearing down of the tissues—Anabolism and katabolism. Anabolism is building up. It is like building a house, being used by the spirit, and breaking down. Here is a cell as been built up. Energy is stored here. Energy cannot be obtained except by the liberation of the energy which has been utilized in building up of the cell. Here the power built of stones; by and by the power falls. The energy which is stored on those stones in building up is now released and expended in power. Now suppose there are a number of stones on the ground, which are not built into the tower, where any energy manifested by the stones in the falling down of the tower. No. Just so, in order to be a source of energy to the body, alcohol must enter into the very structure of the body.

"Upon the view that food serves as material for the bodily processes, and upon the foundation of the transformation of energy, it is purely a logical deduction to make some deduction from the fact that alcohol must serve the function of a food since it burns in the human bodies. This deduction stands or falls with the assumption that food materials simply burn in the body, proof of which has not been advanced.

"The experiments with alcohol to prove that katabolic change of food does not take place. That alcohol is a narcotic poison and can destroy all the living protoplasm in the body is a well known fact. It has been accepted, purely dogmatically, that alcohol, which is a poison at the same time a nutritive substance, a tonic, we see a paradox which no one would think of making about any other poison. On the other hand, no substance which is nutritive destroys protoplasm. The experiment can decide the question. Chauveau had a dog work upon a specified diet; the animal was compelled every day a certain amount of work, and in so doing gained weight. The dog's food was altered so that, while all else remained the same, a certain amount of alcohol was replaced by a quantity of alcohol, which, upon the assumption of the katabolic change of food, was equal to the carbohydrate omitted.

If, then, the alcohol acted as food, there would be no loss of reference noted. However, the experiment upon not only did work every day, which is to be the account of the narcotic effect of the alcohol, but it grew thin, with less work accomplished at the same food, still greater additional body weight must have taken place. The experiment, therefore, is that alcohol as poison: not as food, but only injure protoplasm and destroy it in the process.

It fulfills none of its promises. It leaves hunger because it destroys appetite, and the power to eat food; but it does not nourish the body. It destroys pain by paralyzing the nerves, but it does not remove the cause of the pain. It makes poor man feel for a brief time that he is boundless wealth; it leaves him poorer than before. A man is cold, it gives him a sense of warmth; but the next day he is colder than before. The man who imagines he is strong, while he is really weaker than before. As alcohol is not a food.

Drink Sends Them to the Mad House.

In his annual report, Superintendent Dr. Eymann, of the Ohio Hospital at Massillon, says: "It follows inebriety. Each address tends to confirm in our frequent experience, and the fact is surely the forerunner of insanity. Alcohol is the product of disorganization, the disorganization of man food, so its effect upon man augurs dissolution, wreck, degeneration and decay. Heredity, drink are two overwhelming factors in the production of insanity. Frequently hereditary insanity traces directly to dissipation of the ancestor."

About Enough Said.

Dr. Torrey, the evangelist, speaking one day in London, a bibulous fellow arose and announced, waveringly, that he believed everything in the Bible. "don't see how anybody can do water," he declared; "can you Dr. Torrey?" The preacher grimly at the man for a moment, then answered: "The man can on water better than I can."

A dissipated man is a fool core; he is a body-and-soul thrift.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncom-

born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches ad-passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. That unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made mis-and both need the same great remedy.

THE DIFFERENCE

By Adela Louise Kimball

"Yes, it made a difference, Lesley Carthwright, looked first at the gray-haired man on one corner of the mansion on at the little brown cottage on the other.

"He knew such a very little about her, just that she was beautiful, that he loved her and the name and address which she had inscribed on the card, Althea Holbrook, corner Washington and Canton streets, Mayberry.

"There were two obviously two contrasting ones with its great towers, stone conservatories, the other was a little broken down place with a rumbling woodwork.

"A guilty flush came to his face as he looked out of sight behind the hedge, for she stood in the doorway of the little brown house. A door with a white apron covered the soft shadows of her dress and a white cap peeped over the golden brown glory of her hair.

"His head bent under the weight of the blow. He dared not face the man, must marry money. He told himself, but—it was no use. He turned away, slowly, and without one backward glance.

"But the girl in gray had seen him and although her face turned away, a little scornful smile played at her lips, for she perceived that the man which is so hard to understand, a woman's intuition.

Three months passed, wrote the haunted months to Carthwright. The leaves were beginning to fall and she went to Mayberry again. She had no intention of marrying, but perhaps he had been cherishing an ideal perhaps if he saw her again it might be easier to tell her.

Then he caught a glimpse of the brown eyes laughing into his and a wealth of gold-brown hair. Althea Holbrook, asked by him on the back.

"A fine brook, that, sir," said the younger.

"Who is the lady?"

"That is Althea Holbrook, old millionaire Holbrook's daughter. She has just bought the old Corey mansion; you know the place sir?"

"I know the place," said Carthwright quietly. "Who lives in the little brown house opposite?"

"Old Jane Walsh, a pensioner. We have all said it ought to be torn down long ago, but Miss Walsh wouldn't have it. Now, that's a woman for you; no stuck-up about her. You wouldn't believe but since old Jane has been so she has gone over there every morning and cleaned house for her. She says she likes it."

Lesley Carthwright waited to see no more; his heart was pumping hot blood through his veins. He strode up the street. It made a difference, such an overwhelming difference.

It was one of Fate's tricks that she should again be standing in the doorway of the brown house, her arms up the ground by the little gate. Her arms were flicked automatically and her cheeks alight with a light color of her. She was dressed in green velvet as she stood, peeping out from behind the leaves, her eyes shining with light and happiness made a picture he never forgot.

"Althea," he cried.

Mr. Carthwright," she said so coolly. But the next moment she was laughing brightly and motioned him to follow her into the house.

"So you found the courage to see me this time," she said.

He colored and could not meet her eyes.

"Are not these leaves beautiful?" she said. "You will not mind keeping right on working, will you?"

"May I help you?" said Carthwright awkwardly.

"Oh, no! I could not let you work. It is just a whim mine. Somehow this little place seems more like home to me than any place in the whole world. Its old crumbling walls, its great pride in it, too. I suppose would shock you if I said I like clean things, to sweep and dust. I like keeping this little place my recreation. She came on, trying to put him at her ease but his eyes wandered restlessly about the room, trying to meet her own.

"I want to do all the domestic myself," she went on, "for I'm to be married here to-morrow."

"Althea!" Carthwright jumped to his feet and strode over to where she stood in the centre of the room. The leaves fell to the ground and he looked up at him with her eyes little frightened. "Althea," he said and you have forgotten?"

"I have forgotten—nothing."

Her tone was bitter, and he edged away a shawl.

"But tell me, tell me this, Althea," he said huskily. "If I had come to you—then—would it have been different?"

Her eyes grew a little sad. "I can tell," she said. "I am afraid that it might."

"Althea, Althea!"

"Yes, you see I am beginning to love dear old Jack so very much. And her face grew bright once more with a great happiness.

Just Making a Speech Won't Win Honors at Yale Hereafter.

Hereafter persons who come to Yale to deliver commencement addresses must not expect honorary degrees to go with the invitations. The new rules, which have been two years in building and which have been made public, state that no honorary degree can be given to a person in the same year in which he makes one of the regular graduation addresses.

In former years when a public man received an invitation to deliver a commencement address in the law or medical school or in one of the other departments he was quite likely to receive with it a notification that an honorary degree had been conferred on him.

There has also been a curtailment in the selection of candidates for the honorary degree of doctor of laws and in the future the title will not be given promiscuously, but only in recognition of distinguished public service. It has been the custom at Yale to confer honorary degrees only at commencement and then only to those who would attend the exercises at which the honors were given.

By the new rules, with the approval of a majority of the faculty members of the committee on honorary degrees, foreigners of marked distinction visiting the university can receive a degree from the corporation between commencements. The limitation on the number of honorary degrees each year will in general include not more than two doctors of divinity, one doctor of science and four doctors of law, of whom at least one doctor of divinity one doctor of science and two doctors of laws are required to be Yale men.

Honorary degrees will be conferred by advice of a committee made up of the president, six members of the corporation and five representatives of the faculties, the latter nominated by the university council under rules of its own.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant, efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians con- sanction for family use because its com- ponent parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remain- able success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

MR. GORMAN STARTS OUT UNDER UNFA-VORABLE AUSPICES.

The candidacy of young Mr. Gorman for the United States Senate, to succeed Mr. Rayner, which was announced at a banquet in Howard county the other day, may be of serious import to the State of Maryland, and more especially to the Democratic party. The whole tone and spirit of the occasion when the announcement of Mr. Gorman's candidacy was made was that of Bourbonism and reaction—marking back to the old times when Maryland was a pocket borough. The manifest intent of Mr. Gorman's Senatorial Primary law, which he declared at his banquet to be a fulfillment in spirit and deed of the promises made to the people in that regard by the Democratic party, is to reduce the State again to a condition of political servitude. From this state of servitude, or peonage, Maryland escaped in 1896 by a revolution, in which a far abler and more experienced bearer of the name went down in defeat. It is now for the leaders of the Democratic party to consider the possibility that this movement for Mr. Gorman, founded on a Senatorial primary law devised for his benefit, may precipitate another revolution.

All through the speeches at the banquet there were veiled, but entirely evident, sneers at Governor Warfield, the leading citizen of the county in which the banquet was held. This spirit, these sneers, bode no good for the Democratic party. Some of the men who made these things at Mr. Warfield are members of the machine—segments of the old "ring." It may be asked why Governor Warfield is so particularly obnoxious to these people. Not because of any failure to measure up to the requirements of his office, for no fault has been found in him in that regard. His administration was clean, able and without reproach. No fault can be found in him as to his party loyalty, for in the last campaign he was one of the ablest and most effective of the campaigners. It was his very excellence and virtues which caused the enmity of the Democratic machine. He refused utterly to surrender his independence, he refused utterly to obey orders from the machine. That is his offense. The question is whether such a course will be regarded by the people as an offense.

It may be that the candidacy of Mr. Gorman at the Senatorial primaries next year will raise the direct issue at the election which takes place the same day, whether there shall be reaction or progress in political methods in this State—whether there shall be boss rule or popular rule, and it is a further question whether, in the event of a verdict for popular rule, the Democratic party may not be deposed.

The Senatorial Primary law which was enacted at the last session, and which Mr. Gorman introduced, is a violation of the party promise, and the men who devised it had the candidacy of Mr. Gorman in full view when it was devised. It is so devised and planned that the primaries will be absolutely in the control of the State machine—or, more accurately speaking, the machine of the county politicians. It is so devised that a minority can easily control and prevail over the majority. That being the case, and the voters at the polls realizing that the primaries are to be controlled in the interest of Mr. Gorman, is there not danger that they may provide against the success of the scheme by the election of a Republican Legislature? That is a question for careful consideration.

Mr. Gorman is wealthy and has many personal friends. What is more advantageous to him, he has the favor of the machine. He, of course, has the right to aspire to the United States Senate, and the people have the right to weigh and estimate his qualifications for the office. It must be frankly said that the career and work of Mr. Gorman of the three sessions of the General Assembly where he has figured were not such as to justify at this time his election to the higher and more important office of United States Senator. Would it not be in better taste for Mr. Gorman to run for a seat in the House of Representatives first. And afterward, if the people find him qualified, they may send him to the United States Senate. In the upper house of Congress the State of Maryland is on exhibition among the States of the Union. It should be the pride of every Marylander that the State should be represented by its ablest, best equipped and most eminent statesmen—men of the ability and statesmanship of William Pinkney Whyte and Isidor Rayner. Mr. Whyte is dead. Mr. Rayner is still in the Senate where he has taken a leading and a distinguished part—upholding the honor of his State and justifying the pride of his fellow citizen. The question is whether the people are willing to see a cunningly devised primary law used to depose such a man who is serving the State, his country and his party with distinction, brilliant ability and profound learning, to make way for young Mr. Gorman.—Balt. Sun.

GREAT SOURCE OF POLITICAL DISHONESTY

The trial before Mayor Mahool of Baltimore of Street Commissioner Wickam and Marine, which has resulted in their dismissal, has revealed a system of graft in Baltimore that was unsuspected by the general public.

The bringing in of the name of Harry Welles Rusk, chairman of the democratic city committee, who by his own testimony acted as a go-between in passing money to the Street Commissioner from the representative of a paving Company, has likely caused considerable surprise.

Mayor Mahool action in bringing the men to a trial and his quick action in dismissing the men so charged will meet with the approval of all believers in the principle that our public officials should be men who are above suspicion. The revelation in Baltimore should bring more forcibly to the minds of our commonwealth the necessity of putting only the best men in office, and the participation of a political leader in the affair should also give us an object lesson as to the danger of entrusting men of doubtful character with high political power or rank that makes it easy for them to corrupt public officials for either their private gain or as an aid in keeping their hold on the politics of the state.

It is an old and true saying that "a stream never rises above its source," and it is useless to expect honesty and integrity out of any man who obtains and holds his office by virtue of unfair, dishonorable means—or of a man who makes a practice of corrupting the voters of the state year after year at the polls. The man who will hire another to kill is a murderer in his heart, and if he was not afraid of the results would do that which he hired others to do, and the man who deliberately debauches our electorate year by year, will not be proof against the temptation of being corrupted himself if the price is all right.

The place to begin reform in our government, to have honest servants, who are above any price, is at the ballot box.

A man makes his first essay in the political world by buying voters because he has been taught and believes it is necessary in order to win; knows and feels all the time that such is wrong, but let him continue in the field long enough and that which was at first abhorrent to him and done only as a case of necessity, becomes a matter of indifference and it is only a small step to make from this, the buying of others to the selling of himself. There may of course be exceptions as there are to any rule in life, but the tendency is certainly strongly that way, and many a legislator has re-indebted himself at Annapolis for the money he was compelled to spend to get there.

This and the custom of putting a man under the certain obligations to a man or men in order to get a nomination are two of the greatest evils in American politics of today. Our leaders have to have the money under the old system of buying enough votes to carry the election and it is not often that they are in a position to put it up themselves. What is the result—the going to some individual to put it up for them, and paying him back afterwards by office or preference of some kind or going to a corporation and getting it and paying it back in legislation or special favors. Many a legislator has been sold by his home leaders without his knowledge in order to pay a political debt made by them or to line their individual pockets with money paid by those who are willing to corrupt to obtain what they want.

The greater a man, the higher his power, the more influence he will exert, either for good or bad, and when men of doubtful character and principles get in charge of a political party their chances for graft are almost innumerable. The corporations have long ago recognized this fact and prefer to deal with the city or county boss who can bring sufficient pressure to bear upon the legislator to influence his vote, than to attempt to corrupt the member himself. It is hoped that the corrupt practice bill passed by the past legislature will put a stop to the wholesale corruption that has in the past been such a disgrace to our community, and it will be a long step forward to tearing out corruption and graft in our party leaders and public officials.

The most doubtful compliment that can be paid any man is the argument sometimes heard by those who favor some parties for preference—the statement that he can raise a larger campaign fund for corrupt purposes than any one else—especially when it is a recognized fact that it must come from other sources than his own—it may naturally be expected that he who receives, must pay back.

Choose Vacation Companions With Care.

Let me warn those who are planning for a Summer's recreation to choose their vacation friends with care, says Christine Terhune Herriek in the June Delinestor.

For example, I know a girl who had planned to go to a quiet country place with a casual friend. It was a girl whom she had not known intimately, but they had been thrown together more or less, and when the proposition was made by one of them that they should go together on their vacation both thought it would be a good thing. But it wasn't. They did not know each other well enough to risk it, and when they were thrown closely together each was disappointed in the other, and they did not have enough adaptability to bit it off well on some subjects because they failed to agree on others. That vacation was a failure to both.

Another mistake sometimes made is in going to the wrong sort of place. Make up your mind from the first what you want to do when you go away, then select your place.

The girl who is tired out with hard work should not choose a gay resort where there will be much dressing and constant excitement of one kind or another. She needs a country place or a quiet seaside spot, where she can lie in a hammock or on the sand and look at green trees or blue waves. On the other hand, the home girl who has constant round of monotonous duties will be helped by a taste of liveliness in her outing and will be better for meeting new people.

Slight encounters you on every side, disappointments will meet you, faults will swarm in the places and persons you encounter, and if you get any good out of your vacation, you will do it, so to speak, in spite of yourself. But bring enthusiasm and a determination to enjoy and it must be a very desperate condition of things which will make the holiday a failure.

The "Wonder Stove Lid"

Is a patented stove lid which can be put on any range or cook stove, instead of one of the ordinary lids, and by its use the amount of coal or wood consumed is reduced from one-third to two-thirds. You can get more heat from less fuel, your range will last longer, you will have no ashes to sift—all coal being reduced to a powder. Several pleased users state that it does more work than we claim for it, and that householders would not be without it if they only knew what a convenience and money-saver it is.

AGENTS can make money selling this Lid, because it is sold strictly on its merits. It must do as we say or we take no money for it.

—A big euchre party was held at the Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore Thursday night under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, at which over 500 players participated.

—Rev. G. Parker will continue his series of sermons on the "Future of the Church." The next will be on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Branch Street Baptist Church. The special subject will be "The Four Judgments."

—Special services will be held on the Wednesday evenings in May at the Division Street Baptist Church. The Life of Christ will be taken up systematically and the important events illustrated. The nine periods will be studied in their order and practical lessons drawn. Next Wednesday the period of preparation, from his birth to his baptism, will be considered. All are cordially invited.

—On October 9, Philadelphia will have a superb historical pageant as the crowning procession of a week of parades to commemorate the two hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the government of the city by William Penn. No fewer than 40 large floats will form the pageant, and with these there will be at least 5000 different characters, all faithfully continued to fit the various epochs that are to be reproduced. These full costumes are to be depicted, starting with the beginning of the Seventeenth Century with the Indians, the Swedes and the Dutch, who occupied the present site of Philadelphia prior to the arrival of Penn in 1682.

—Relationship of that Other Life and between this Life and that Other will be the subject of the Rev. Mr. Beale's sermon in the Wilcomoo Presbyterian church tomorrow evening. This is the last sermon of a series of sermons on "The Other Life."

—A delightful social was held in Hich's Hall Tuesday evening by the Mission School of the Division Street Baptist Church. About ninety were present. Mr. Gamby Thomas and Mr. Handy, cornets, and Miss Belle Smith, organ, furnished music. The "old time games" were played and refreshments were served to all.

—Bookville, Md., Masons will build a temple to cost about $15,000. To raise funds for this purpose the Rockville Masonic Association has been organized to hold a fair at the Fair Ground here June 2, 3, 4 and 5. The various committees are hard at work with the arrangements, and there is said to be every indication that the fair will be the biggest of its kind ever held in Montgomery County. Already 5000 admission tickets have been disposed of.

—Division Street Baptist Church, Rev. Kingman A. Handy, pastor, Sunday Services, 11 and 8:00. Morning topic, "A Great Little Word"; Evening, "A Question of Values, my Soul." Bible School, G. H. Weisbach, Director, 9:45. Lesson, "The Mission of the Holy Spirit," John 16: 4-15. Mission School, James Price, Supr., 2:30. —The general opinion of fruit growers in this part of the state is that peaches have withstood the frost to such an extent that there are yet enough healthy fruit on the trees to make a full crop. Some varieties are apparently not injured at all, and all varieties in most orchards bore a full crop of blossoms, ten times as many as should mature in the fruit. Kieffer pears were also very full bloom and it is probable that the trees will be loaded with fruit. Apples are just in bloom and are uninjured. The early strawberry crop was cut to some extent.

—The Young Men's Culture of the Division Street Baptist Church will conduct a series of popular educational entertainments. The first will be a presentation of "Hamlet," by Prof. Sydney S. Handy, of Eastern, together with the Ladies' Lyric Sextette, of Salisbury. It will be held in the Assembly Hall of the Eastern Shore College, Friday evening, May 16th, at eight o'clock. This program should prove especially attractive owing to its educational and entertaining value. The admission price will be only 15 cents that all may attend. Reserved seats at Toulson's Drug Store, 25 cents.

—As a further vindication of the dry people, Mr. Orlando Harrison was re-elected Mayor of Berlin for the fifth consecutive term. The fact that there was no opposing candidate attests his business like administration of the affairs of the office as well as his personal popularity. He makes the statement, "If people would eat more fruit they would not have the desire for intoxicating liquors, and cites the fact that at fruit growers and Nurseriesmen's Conventions but a small percentage of the men will be found to patronize the bars."

—On Sunday night week the 18th anniversary of the Epworth League will be held taking the place of the Regular services.

—There will be a meeting of the Board of Lady Managers of the Home for the Aged at the City Hall Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

FERTILIZERS FOR ALL CROPS

For STRAWBERRIES—A fertilizer that is said to prevent frosts from injuring blossoms to a great extent; also make nice berries and make the size hold up well in case of long drouths. I have experimented on this particular kind for the past six years.

WHITE POTATOES—A fertilizer that will make a good crop (season permitting) without being too expensive.

CORN Fertilizer, for best results, must contain ingredients that will not burn the crop under the worst weather conditions.

TOMATO and CANTALOUPE Fertilizer is another study of mine. To get best results with smallest outlay consistent with what is expected out of the crop, the plants must grow fast from the start and have a fertilizer that contains all necessary elements.

Any kind of goods mixed to order on short notice. It is to my best interest to study the needs of the farmer in this line.

The Man of The Hour

"I think we can," answered Wainwright, a fragment of his conversation with Gibbs flashing across his memory. "You see, I have fairly good reasons for believing he's in love with my niece, Miss Dallas Wainwright."

"Oh, that's a cinch!" chuckled Horri-gan. "He's!"

"Mr. Bennett is playing tennis," reported the butler, coming to the door. "He will be here at once."

"Now," resumed Horri-gan, "the only thing that remains is to find out if he'll consent, and then—"

"You wanted me, Mr. Wainwright?" asked Bennett, stepping through the long window from the veranda. "Oh, good morning, Mr. Horri-gan," he added on seeing the second occupant of the room.

The young man was careless and careless, his slink shirt being turned in at the neck. In one hand he swung a tennis racket. With the other he mopped his flushed face, for the day was hot and the game had been swift.

"Yes," answered Wainwright. "I'm sorry to interrupt your tennis set, but we want to see you on a rather important matter. We're been talking about you."

"Thanks," said Bennett, with a puzzled smile from one to the other of the two older men. "What about?"

"Want to be mayor?" queried Horri-gan abruptly.

"What's the answer?" countered the perplexed youth.

"It isn't a joke," intervened Wainwright. "Mr. Horri-gan is in earnest."

"In earnest? I hope the heat hasn't gone to his head."

"You don't understand," put in Horri-gan. "I control the party's nomination. The nomination for mayor is yours if you'll like it."

"Not—not really?" gasped Alwyn aghast.

"Yes, really. We—"

"But, with a whole organization full of good material, why do you come to me?"

"Because you're the man we want."

"As an answer that's excellent, but as an explanation it's mystifying."

"I'll tell you. We're looking forward to a risky fight and—"

"And since you see no chance of winning you pick me out as the victim instead of some organization man? Good idea as far as you're concerned, but I beg to decline, without thanks."

"No, no!" corrected Wainwright. "Mr. Horri-gan thinks that you have a strong chance of winning."

"That's right," corroborated the boss. "I'll be a hard fight, but with the right man we'll win, and we believe you're the right man. Even if you lose, you'll show the world what you're made of. Folks admire a fighter. They haven't much use for an idler."

The coarsely spoken words brought back with a rush Dallas Wainwright's plea and his own yearning to do something to make her proud of him—to win her by great deeds—to prove his love worth her acceptance. Was this the chance—the chance he had so eagerly longed for? It seemed providential. His face alight with the joy of battle and the hope of his heart's reward, Bennett turned upon the waiting boss.

"I accept."

"Good!" yelled Horri-gan, slapping him resoundingly on the back. "Good boy! Now, we'll—"

"But remember one thing, Mr. Horri-gan," interrupted Bennett, "and his careless boyhood seemed to have fallen away from him."

"What clever men you must be at that club! Are you going to the administration hall next week?"

"Are you?"

"Because that's the answer. I've never been to an administration hall, but if you're there I guess I'll—"

"Don't be silly. The administration hall is a very great function indeed. I've been asking questions about it. Not only every one connected with the administration goes, but all sorts of capitalists and other people like that. I've heard that some of the 'biggest financial deals' are arranged during that ball. Isn't it queer?"

"Not especially. There's a deal. I'm thinking of putting through myself that night if I don't get a good chance earlier—a deal that means a lot to me."

"Then why wait till the ball? Why not?"

"I'd do it now, only Bennett might come in before."

"What a worker Mr. Bennett is!" broke in Cynthia, turning very pink and hastening to change the subject.

"In the old days we thought he was the soul of laziness, but now he's working here night and day. He's not only the youngest mayor this city ever had, but I think he's the busiest too."

"He?"

"The enigma of the new mayor was out about that dignitary's appearance from the center room. As Alwyn paused to hang up his coat and hat and pull off his gloves Cynthia bent once more over her work, while Perry straightened up and tried to look as though he really had business of pressing importance with his honor."

The months had brought changes to Bennett. There were more lines on his face, and his eyes were tired. A few silver strands, too, had crept into the darker hair on his temples. There was little now about him to suggest the idler.

"Well, old man," he exclaimed on seeing Perry. "What's the excuse this time?"

"The what?" asked the youth un-savily.

"The excuse. You come here, when I'm likely to be out—about five times a week, and always with a perfectly made excuse for your intrusion. I tolerate you for the originality of those excuses. What is today's?"

"I have no need of an excuse," replied Perry, with an air of hurt dignity. "I am the bearer of a most important message to you."

"From whom?"

"From—from—Dallas is home; landed this morning."

A light came into the mayor's tired eyes at the news.

"And the message?" he asked eagerly.

"That's the message. She's home."

"She sent you to tell me that?"

"No; not exactly that," evaded Perry, wriggling uncomfortably.

"Well, what was her message then?"

"She—she didn't send any."

"Then who sent the message that she has come home?"

"Well, the fact is I sent it myself. That's why I brought it."

"Oh, you poor idiot!" laughed Bennett. "The same old excuse in a new shape! Well, now you're here, you can stay just five minutes. I'm too busy to play with little boys today."

"Little boys! I'll be twenty-two next spring. I—"

"Any messages while I was out, Miss Garrison?"

"Yes, one," answered Cynthia. "Your mother telephoned that she would be here at half past two. She said she had a surprise for you."

"A surprise?" repeated Perry, feeling he was being excluded from the talk. "I'd go easy on that surprise if I were you, Alwyn. I've had surprises over the telephone myself, and they're punk. Once a girl—"

"Alderman Phelan would like to speak to your honor," said Ingram, the old doorkeeper, popping out of the anteroom.

"Show him in," answered Bennett.

"Now, then, Perry—"

"Were you about to ask me to stay awhile longer?" asked the boy. "Because I'm sorry, but I can't. Goodbye. Good afternoon, Miss Garrison. Glad you liked the photo. So long. Maybe I'll bring another message from Dallas tomorrow."

"What can Phelan want of me, I wonder?" mused Bennett, half aloud. "He and I scarcely— Good afternoon, alderman! I think this is the first time you've honored me with a visit."

"Then be lenient with a first offense, your honor," suggested Phelan, shaking hands with the mayor and nodding pleasantly to Cynthia as she passed out to her own office.

"Something important, I suppose," hazarded Bennett.

"Maybe it is important, and maybe it isn't," returned Phelan. "It all depends on whether that was a true story in the Chronicle today about your vetoing the Borough Street railway bill. If you've really vetoed that bill all I'll have to do is say, 'Sorry I can't stay longer,' and get out."

"No," said Bennett, "that announcement wasn't authorized. I haven't vetoed the Borough Street railway bill. In fact, I haven't made public any decision on it. Why?"

"I'm glad to hear it, and that being the case, I'll invite myself to a seat and stay awhile. Say, your honor, on the level, that Borough bill was the rawest thing that ever came across. Gee, but they did their work with a meat ax!"

"Then you weren't one of the aldermen who voted for it?"

"No! Nothin' doing. I don't belong to Dick Horri-gan's solid thirteen. He can't buy and sell me at his own terms like he does them thirteen geezers."

"And yet, alderman, from your reputation—"

"From my reputation I'm a crook, hey? Well, there's crooks and crooks. And I'm one of the other kind, if I'm crooked at all, which I deny most enthusiastically. At least I follow no Horri-gan whistle."

"Then why are you here in regard to the Borough bill?"

"Perhaps it's on the theory of 'set a thief to catch a thief.'"

"Well," laughed Bennett, amused in spite of himself by the alderman's frankness, "at least you call a spade a spade."

"I sure don't refer to it vague, but as a 'utensil.' You don't need any foot-note explanations one syllable when Jimmy Phelan's talking. Every move a picture. If I hadn't been through the game from shuffle to cash in, would I be wise to what the Horri-gan crowd is framing up on you now? Say, I've done some raw work in my time, but this Borough business is the coarsest yet. They must think you're the original Mr. Good Thing."

"You speak as if I were to be made responsible for—"

"And ain't you?" cried Phelan. "Sure you are. When the people get wise to what they're up against and commence to do their screaming will they remember that so-and-so framed the bill and that such and such aldermen voted for it? Not them. What the public will remember is that you signed it. It'll go screeching down the corridors of time as the infamous Borough franchise bill that Bennett signed. Catch the idea?"

"Yes," said Bennett grimly. "I understand. But what I don't see is why you should have taken the trouble to come here and warn me of this. You've never shown any special readiness to me hitherto."

"That's right. But I've shown bunches of unfriendliness for Chesty Dick Horri-gan. And Horri-gan's the man who's running the Borough bill through. Lord, what bill! It's so crooked that if it was laid out like a street the man who tried to walk along it would meet himself coming back. Why, your honor, I—"

"Mr. Wainwright, your honor," said Ingram at the door. "says he won't detain you long."

"Let him in if you like," suggested Phelan. "I can wait. Shall I go into the other?"

"No. Wait here if you choose. His business isn't likely to be private."

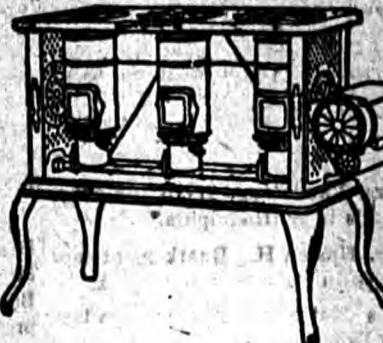

"I'm sorry to break in on your rush hours," said Wainwright as he advanced to greet the mayor. "I won't keep you long. Good afternoon, alderman."

"Howdy," returned Phelan, walking over to the far end of the office, where, by falling into deep and admiring study of a particularly atrocious portrait of some earlier mayor, he denoted that he was temporarily out of the conversation.

"I'll come to the point at once, Mr. Bennett," began Wainwright. "I called to see you about the Borough Street railway bill."

Are You Nervous?

Nervousness and sleeplessness are usually due to the fact that the nerves are not fed on properly nourishing food; they are starved nerves. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes pure, rich blood, and thereby the nerves are properly nourished and all the organs of the body are run as smoothly as machinery which runs in oil. In this way you feel clean, strong and vigorous, and you are good for a whole lot of physical or mental work. Best of all the strength and increase in vitality and health are lasting.

The trouble with most tonics and medicines which have a large booming sale for a short time, is that they are largely composed of alcohol holding the drugs in solution. This alcohol shrinks up the red blood corpuscles, and in the long run greatly injures the system. One may feel exhilarated and better for the time being, yet in the end weakened and with vitality decreased. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery contains no alcohol. Every bottle of it bears upon its wrapper the Badge of Honesty, in a full list of all its several ingredients. For the druggist to offer you something he claims is "just as good" is to insult your intelligence.

—As an illustration of woman's wit, Hon. Depew, who is still Senator from New York, cites the following, says an Exchange:

A man once found that his wife had caught a few puff-balls of false hair. This annoyed him. So one day he hid in the hall outside of her room, and when the lady was adjusting the hair, he darted in upon her.

"Mary," he said, reproachfully, "why do you put the hair of another woman upon your head?"

"John," returned Mary, with a glance at her husband's shoes, "why do you put the skin of another cat upon your feet?"

QUANTICO.

The cool, damp weather has caused strawberries to ripen very slowly, yet, there have been a few for sale in town.

Mr. John Holloway, Jr., of near here met with a very painful accident one day this week by getting his thumb caught in a corn sheller and was torn so badly that amputation was necessary.

There will be service this Sabbath evening at M. E. Church, by Rev. Mr. Gray. Theme, "The Bird Anthem." All are requested to attend as you will hear something entirely new. Service will begin at 8.00 o'clock.

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. Church met at the parsonage, Tuesday evening. After the usual order of business, the Rev. Mr. Gray exhibited something that was never seen before and will never be seen again and for a while curiosity was soaring high after. The thing in question was exhibited. All were satisfied that it would never be seen again.

Don't fail to be present Sunday night to hear The Bird Anthem. A cordial welcome awaits you.

Death of W. H. Brittingham.

Mr. William Henry Brittingham died at his home near Zion April 27, 1908, aged 55 years, 7 months, 30 days. His remains were interred in Parsons Cemetery at Salisbury on Wednesday afternoon after funeral services at Zion.

For several months he had patiently borne his affliction while the Death Angel waited to sever the cord.

Death held no terrors for him for his life was an example of uprightness and honesty. He was truly loved by all who knew him and he leaves hosts of friends to mourn his loss.

No higher words of praise could be added than to say "It is not death to live in the hearts of those we leave behind." His bereaved widow dedicates these lines to his memory.

Dearest husband how I miss you
You have left a vacant chair,
And the loneliness it brings,
Is hard, so very hard, to bear.

You have helped me bear the burdens,
As we trod life's weary way,
And your patience never faltered
In the trials day by day.

How my heart is torn and bleeding,
Earthly pleasures seem all vain,
But I hope we'll meet in heaven
"Never more to part again."

May the dear Lord who has taken
You, and left me all alone,
Keep me ever in thy footsteps,
Till the summons say "Come home."

Fare thee well but not forever,
How I grieve my aching heart,
Just to know that you have left me,
Till Death shall no more us part.

New Hair Grows At Age Of 114.

Mr. Samuel Salyers, of Dooley, Wise county, Ky., claims the distinction of having the oldest citizen in the State.

Mr. Salyers is 114 and has been a justice of the peace in that county for 50 years. Reports say he has been himself regularly without the use of a mirror, rides horseback with as much ease and enjoyment as any one and reads without the aid of glasses. For 70 years has been clothed with gray, and for a number of years totally white, until a short time ago when his hair began coming out and a coal black crop is now coming. He is also cutting a third set of teeth. Mr. Salyers has been married twice, and his eldest son, Logan, who lives at Whitesburg, Ky., is 88 years old and has, within the last few years led a third bride to the altar and has a child not more than two years old.

The Fruit Prospects.

The general opinion of fruit growers in this part of the state is that peaches have withstood the frost to such an extent that there are yet enough healthy fruits on the trees to make a full crop. Some varieties are apparently not injured at all, and all varieties in most orchards bore a full crop of blossoms, ten times as many as should mature in the fruit. Kiefer pears were also very full bloom and it is probable that the trees will be loaded with fruit. Apples are just in bloom and are uninjured. The early strawberry crop was out to some extent. Upon the whole there is still a prospect for a generous fruit crop in this county.

"So this is a first class hotel?" drawled Uncle Hiram. Hardsaple, as he carefully bug his weather stained hat on the corner of a radiator.
"Yes, sir," replied the polite waiter with a low bow.
"Got any out-look sugar?"
"There is a bowl full at your elbow, sir."
"Got a lead pencil?"
"Here is one, sir. Do you wish to mark off on the menu cards?"
"Oh no, sonny. I just want to mark points on these blocks of sugar, so we can have a sociable game of dominoes when Mandy comes in. I calculate it will be some time before dinner is served." —Chicago News

CIRCUS BROKEN UP

At Seaford. Ends In Fight Between Showmen And Mob. Snakes Thrown In.

The performance of the Queen and Orson's circus at Seaford Tuesday night, ended in a general fight between the showmen and a mob of drunken white men and negroes. Several of the showmen were badly beaten, and the head of one white man, Charlie Jones, of Seaford, was cut open by a blackjack.

The trouble started when Jones, it is alleged, demanded money from Miss Levers, the bareback rider, for whiskey, which she had asked him to buy for her and which she refused to pay for. She was thrown from her horse in the excitement and trampled on. The mob ran into the ring and the showmen fled. The snake charmer threw his snakes in the face of the crowd and jumped in front of a train. Two men pulled him back just in time to save him from death.

The Town Council was in session at the time and the showmen made a rush for the Council room, asking for protection. The streets were patrolled until after midnight by the mob, and not until early this morning was order restored.

TUESDAY'S PROCEEDINGS

Of The County Commissioners. Bridge Over Phillips Dam In Bad Condition.

Ex-Sheriff G. W. Fooks was before the Board and asked for improvement to a section of the Snow Hill road near the corner house. Matter was referred to Commissioner Johnson.

Mr. Clark, the road engineer, reported that the bridge over Mary Gorden mill dam was in a very bad condition, and recommended that it be replaced by a brick culvert, which he estimated would cost $50. He also reported that the bridge over Phillips dam was in bad condition. He estimated that a brick culvert could be constructed there for $175. The engineer's report was accepted and work put in charge of supervisor Oliphant.

A large delegation of citizens from Parsonsburg was before the Board asking for a larger and better school building. As taxpayers, they expressed themselves as willing to bear an increased tax rate in order to have better school facilities. The Board assured the delegation that they would be as liberal as possible in their appropriation for schools this year.

IF YOU WANT THE BEST LIGHT TRY A TUNGSTEN GLOBE.

ELECTRIC LIGHT METERS

are being installed in the commercial houses just as rapidly as we can get them in and we ask our patrons to be a little patient and we will get around to them in a short time. The customers who have the meters are much pleased with them. They are at liberty to use any kind of lamp and with the new Tungsten and Tantalum lamps are getting the best results.

NO DISCOUNT ON METER BILLS.

We have fixed the rate for meters at 10c per K. W. hour and under this arrangement all bills for lights on the meter system are NET. We ask our customers to continue to remit regularly as heretofore. Users of light under the old flat rate are still entitled to the usual discount.

METERS FOR RESIDENCE LIGHTING.

will be installed just as fast as our force of men can get them in. All customers using as much as 50 candle power will be placed on meters as rapidly as they can be installed. As the meters are put in we would advise the use of either the Tantalum or Tungsten lamps as they draw only about half as much current as the old style lamps and therefore will be far less expensive.

THE MINIMUM RATE FOR METERS.

Commercial houses, $2.50 per month. Residence, $1.50 per month. The rate for both kinds of lighting will be 10 cents per K. W. hour. With a little care in turning off the lights not needed, your bill will be less under the meter than under the old flat rate.

Our Superintendent will give prompt attention to any complaints as to our service. We have a "trouble" man always on hand to help you out of any difficulty. Call up the Main Street office and your wants will be attended to.

CONGRESSIONAL TIMBER

Candidates A Plenty Over The First District. Talk Of Interest Via Political Circles.

While in Baltimore this week Gen. Joseph Bruff Seth, president of the State Senate, said that his political ambition at this time was to secure the Democratic nomination for Congress on the Eastern Shore and then to be elected. While in the city he met United States Senator John Walter Smith, with whom he had a lengthy talk, and who assured him that he will be hands off in the primaries in the several counties, at which delegates will be elected to the county conventions, which in turn will choose delegates to the congressional convention to assemble at Ocean City on July 28.

General Seth fully realizes that to secure a standing in the nominating convention he must be backed by Talbot, his home county. And there is the rub. In Talbot there are two candidates, who were in the field before General Seth came forward—State's Attorney J. Harry Covington and former Comptroller and former Clerk of the Court of Appeals J. Frank Turner. Indeed, so confident is Mr. Turner's faith in himself that he declined an appointment by Governor Crothers to the commission to codify the criminal laws of the state, a position which carried with it a salary of $2,000.

A Triangular Fight.

It looks, therefore, as though there will be a triangular fight in Talbot county for the control of the delegation, and there will be warm times when the fight takes place, in the summer, possibly repetition of the fight of 1906, when General Seth was a candidate for the nomination for state Senate. He was backed by the friends of the late E. E. Jackson, former governor. The friends of former Governor John Walter Smith backed Mr. William Collins, who had creditably represented the county in the House of Delegates during several sessions. General Seth was the winner at the primary, and at the general election he defeated Senator Robert B. Dixon, who was the Republican candidate by a small margin.

Until his talk with Senator Smith General Seth had an idea that the state leaders were behind the candidacy of State's Attorney Covington, of his county. Senator Smith diagnosed General Seth's mind of such an idea. General Seth will probably make no reply to the letter of former Governor Warfield in the early part of the last General Assembly.

Former Congressman Thomas A. Smith, who was appointed land commissioner by Governor Crothers, has said that the appointment has not eliminated him as a candidate for congressional honors.

Dorchester A Pivot Point.

Mr. Emerson C. Harrington, of Dorchester, ought not to be lost sight of as a possible winner of the Democratic nomination for Congress on the Eastern Shore. He hails from a county whose vote the Democratic organization needs in bringing about the nomination of Chief Judge W. Laird Henry and of Associate Judge Hobble D. Jones, of Worcester, both of whom are recent appointees of Governor Crothers to fill vacancies caused by the legislative retirement of Judges Page and Lloyd. Dorchester has five votes in the congressional and in the judicial convention, the latter being composed of Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester, in addition to Dorchester. It is obvious, therefore, that if Dorchester combines with Wicomico or Somerset in the judicial convention it can control the situation. Much of the other counties of the circuit has only four votes. There has been persistent talk that Mr. John B. Patterson, of the Cambridge bar, will contest with Judge Henry for the control of the county delegation to the judicial convention. If this expected contest takes place Mr. Patterson will be backed by former Senator William E. Applegarth and other Democratic forces in the counties.

Mr. Henry and Mr. Harrington, who have theretofore been regarded as the exponents of the political ideas of Senator Smith in Dorchester, are not at present upon pleasant political terms. Mr. Harrington is, however, nominated for Congress the whole situation in Dorchester may be changed.

NATIONAL POLITICS

Taft By The Republicans—Bryan By The Democrats Forecasted In The Present Situation. Bryan Strong In Wicomico.

The past few weeks have been very active ones for politicians figuring on National issues and politics. Judge Taft's managers, of whom it is acknowledged President Roosevelt is the head, and leader have shown their talk of Taft's nomination on the first ballot was not without foundation, and it now looks as though enough votes will be pledged to him to secure the nomination beyond the question of a doubt. Last week's show up on instructed delegates gave him 452 of whom 387 were instructed, 86 pledged by resolutions of indorsement and 20 pledged by personal declarations.

Taft Almost Certain.

"The seventy delegates thus far elected this week, with the forty-six to be chosen by North Dakota, Montana, Washington, Oregon and California, will swell the total number of Taft delegates to 568. To this number should be added two delegates each from three districts in Ohio, two in Texas, one in Louisiana and one in North Carolina that will hold their conventions before the close of the week, bringing the total number of Taft delegates up to 583.

"This means that Taft will have pledged to him in the convention more than the required majority of 491."

It looks as though an attempt was being made to harmonize the different factions of the Republican party so that it can go into the coming Presidential campaign with an apparently united front at least. Although strong efforts are being made in this direction it looks like it will be an almost impossible task to get Roosevelt and his opponents under the same cover—even long enough for a campaign. Since Senator Foraker of Ohio however has agreed to the dropping of his famous Brownsville issue until the December session anything done by the opposition would not surprise the people, for it is acknowledged that Sen. Foraker is the bitterest enemy the President has in his party, and one that hitherto did not seek to know how to quit.

Unfavorable Conditions For Republicans.

The Republican party never had to go into a Presidential campaign under the same condition that it will have to face this year. The McKinley cry of fall dinner pails will not answer. The financial storm which swept this country last fall will compel the party to go into the fight with a business depression all over the country, and it is recognized that a situation of this kind breeds an unrest and dissatisfaction that is likely to be shown at the polls next November. This together with the recent exposure of the great amount of money used in previous campaigns to corrupt the voters, and shown in a number of cases to have come from corporations, under at least doubtful circumstances, will make the raising of a large campaign fund less easy of accomplishment than has been the case in previous campaigns.

Mr. Bryan For The Democracy.

On the Democratic side every thing points to the nomination of Mr. Bryan; despite the hard efforts being made in some quarters to defeat him, he seems to be holding his own and even steadily gaining all the time. It looks now as though he will have in the convention the required two-thirds delegates to assure of the nomination. Of the one thing he is sure of and that is a majority of the delegates at the convention. It is held by many that the old rule of requiring a Presidential nomination to be made by two-thirds vote instead of a simple majority is absurd and undemocratic and that this rule should be done away with. Mr. Bryan's friends however are claiming that he will have enough delegates pledged to him to assure of the nomination on the first ballot, and that even if he were so inclined it will not be necessary to change the ruling. Gov. Johnson of Minnesota seems to be the only man in the field with any support besides Mr. Bryan, and it is believed that his friends are working for unpledged delegations, so as to swing their strength to him at the opportune time. Mr. Bryan's friends are fighting this and are insisting that the delegates are pledged to vote for him, and on the grounds that the people at home would so vote if the question was fairly and squarely put before them, and therefore the sending of an unpledged delegation would be putting in the hands of the managers the power to thwart the will of the people after reaching St. Louis.

Bryan Strong In Wicomico.

Here in Wicomico County the friends of Mr. Bryan are well organized under the leadership of Mr. Geo. W. Bell, and will ask the convention here to send instructed delegates to the state convention in Baltimore. Mr. W. Jeff Stetson, who was delegate to the last convention which nominated Mr. Bryan before, is an active supporter of Mr. Bryan. It is claimed that the majority of the Democratic

SCHOOL MATTERS

Disposed Of By The Board On Tuesday. Had A Busy Day.

In addition to appointing all the district trustees for the county, the approving of teachers' vouchers for April salary, the Board received several delegations who presented requests for new school buildings and repairs to old buildings.

The first delegation which called was from Tysack district, and was composed of Messrs. Wade H. Bodsworth, B. H. Lankford, Callis, Towdine and others, who came with the request for a new school building at Deep Branch. A school was formerly in operation at this point, but was closed for lack of average high attendance. The committee presented an attendance sufficient to meet all the legal requirements in the future if the Board would erect a new building and re-open the school.

Mr. Albert Walker came before the Board in the interest of the patron of English's School, in Barren Creek District, who are asking for a new building. Mr. Walker said the patrons desired a different location from the present school site—about 300 yards further north.

Miss Kate Holliday, teacher of Green Hill School, presented her resignation to the Board Friday and it was accepted. The vacancy in the board of trustees of Jones' School, occasioned by the death of Jason P. Tilghman, was filled by the appointment of Mr. Alfred Smith. The other two trustees, G. S. Parsons and B. E. Jones, were before the Board with the request for a new school building.

The School Board applied next Friday as the date to visit the Delmar High School and look into the matter of providing more room for the pupils. The school is over-crowded at present, and the Board has had in mind for some time the enlarging of the Delmar School building.

The Board organized on Friday, as required by law, re-electing Mr. Charles E. Williams president; and Mr. H. Crawford Bonds, secretary, treasurer and county superintendent.

Death Of A Veteran Of The Civil War.

Mr. John B. Perkins, a veteran of the Civil War, died at his residence near Kingston, Somerset County, Md., on the 12th inst. aged 75 years. He leaves a widow and nine children. Relatives in this county.

Members of this county are for Mr. Bryan and that to properly represent the democracy of this county at the State Convention the delegates should be so instructed.

Automobile Ordinance.

The city Council has passed an ordinance regulating the speed of automobiles within the city limits. There has been considerable criticism of the excessive speed of automobiles within the city and to meet the demand of the public and insure safety as far as possible to pedestrians the council took up this matter. The ordinance limits the speed of automobiles to twenty miles an hour on all streets and provides for a six mile limit in turning corners. A fine of $5 is placed for the first offence and $10 for the second and every subsequent offence one half of the fine to go to the informant. It is believed that this ordinance will have the effect of stopping reckless and fast driving on our streets. The narrow escape of several parties from fast driving on our streets is sufficient evidence of the necessity of some check being put to this practice, and it is understood that the authorities are determined to enforce this ordinance to the letter.

MEMORY OF MAKEMIE.

Over 2000 Presbyterians Journey to Accompany to View Unveiling of Monument to American Founder.

On the banks of Hoidens creek, in Accomac county, Virginia, Thursday afternoon, in the presence of a representative gathering of more than 3,000 persons from various parts of the United States and in memoriam of the two hundredth anniversary of his death was unveiled a monument erected by the Presbyterian Historical Society of Philadelphia to Francis Makemie, the founder of Presbyterianism in the country. The handsome granite monument, life size figure of a minister in his Geneva gown, with his right hand uplifted, pronouncing a benediction and holding a Bible in his left hand, standing on a pedestal 25 feet high, is on the plantation owned by the family of Naomi Anderson, wife of the Francis Makemie.

A special train of Pullman cars was run over the Peninsula railroad and the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk railroad to Bloomsburg, Va., the nearest point on the railroad to Makemie Park, which contains the site of the Makemie Home and the family cemetery where Francis Makemie, his wife and his parents, his children and other kindred were buried. The exercises were opened by an invocation by Rev. Joseph B. North, of Makemie Memorial Church, of Snow Hill, Md. This was followed by an introductory statement by Dr. Henry C. McCook, president of the Presbyterian Historical Society of Philadelphia. The reading of a commemorative poem prepared for the occasion by Dr. Henry Van Dyke, of Princeton University, and entitled "Francis Makemie, Presbyterian of America, 1682 to 1708," followed. Addresses were also made by Rev. L. P. Bowen, of Marshall, Mo.; E. C. Baker, of Pocomoke City; and Mr. John B. McMaster, of Jersey City, N. J. Mr. John McIlhenny, representing the Scotch-Irish Society of Pennsylvania, delivered the keys and custody of the cemetery and monument, which were accepted by Dr. Frank Fletcher, of Jenkins Bridge, Va. The monument, which was draped with a United States flag in which was attached four ropes, was unveiled by Rev. John A. McKamy, associate editor of the Westminster Tocsen, at Nashville, Tenn., the four ropes being pulled by the present pastors of the first four Presbyterian Churches established by Makemie in this country—Revs Lewis B. Watson, of Princess Anne; J. N. McDowell, of Pocomoke City, Md.; J. B. North, of Snow Hill, and W. T. M. Beale, of Salisbury, Md.

The inscription on the monument is as follows:

ERECTED IN GRATITUDE TO GOD And in Grateful Remembrance of His Servant and Minister, FRANCIS MAKEMIE.

Who was born in Ramelton, County Donegal, Ireland, A. D. 1658; was educated at Glasgow University, Scotland, and came as an ordained evangelist to the American Colonies A. D. 1682, at the request of Col. William Stevens, of Rehoboth, Maryland. A devoted and able preacher of our Lord's Gospel, he labored faithfully and successfully for 25 years in Maryland, Virginia, the Barbadoes and elsewhere. A Christian gentleman, an enterprising man of affairs, a public spirited citizen, a distinguished advocate of religious liberty, for which he suffered under the Governor of New York. He is especially remembered as the chief founder of organized Presbyterianism in America, A. D. 1706, and as the first moderator of the General Assembly.

He died at his home, whose site is near by in Accomac county, Virginia, in the summer of 1708, and was buried in the family cemetery located on this spot, now recovered from long desecration and dedicated with this monument to his memory, A. D. 1908, by the American Presbyterian Society seated at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

—The Misses Ullman gave a bowling party on Friday evening in honor of their guest, Miss Rosa Scheulitz, of Pittsburg, Pa. Those in the party were Misses May Collins, Rosa Scheulitz, Mamie Phipps, Bessie Simmons, Sarah Ullman, Helen Ullman, Sadie Ullman, Messrs. Leon Ullman, J. W. Cookran, Frank Ullman.

E. W. TRUITT, MANUFACTURER OF FERTILIZERS FOR ALL CROPS

For STRAWBERRIES—A fertilizer that is said to prevent frosts from injuring blossoms to a great extent; also make nice berries and make the size hold up well in case of long drouths. I have experimented on this particular kind for the past six years.

WHITE POTATOES—A fertilizer that will make a good crop (second permitting) without being too expensive.

CORN Fertilizer, for best results, must contain ingredients that will not burn the crop under the worst weather conditions.

TOMATO and CANTALOUPE Fertilizer is another study of mine. To get best results with smallest outlay consistent with what is expected out of the crop, the plants must grow fast from the start and have a fertilizer that contains all necessary elements.

Any kind of goods mixed to order on short notice. It is to my best interest to study the needs of the farmer in this line.

The financier passed out. Thompson was following when Phelan, who had never once removed his eyes from the secretary, stepped in front of him. "Well, young man," said he. "Well, sir," said Thompson in mild surprise. "You remember me?" "I don't think so, sir."

"Hub! That's queer! I'm Alderman Phelan of the Eighth."

"I've read about you, of course, sir, but—"

"But you don't know me? Never met me before?"

"I'm sorry, sir, but I can't recall it. I did. Good day, sir."

The secretary hurried out after his employer. Phelan, with a puzzled shake of the head, seemed trying to solve some elusive problem. But Bennett, who had not noted the brief scene between Thompson and the alderman, broke in on the latter's musings with the remark:

"You appeared to be amazed at Mr. Wainwright's attitude toward the Borough Street railway franchise."

"Amazed is a mild, gentle word for my feeling," declared the alderman.

"To hear that old flat head prattling about widows and orphans and fair play—why, say, your honor, I know Charles Wainwright from way back, and I tell you he has the same affection for the money of widows and orphans that a tomcat has for a canary."

As for fair play, he wouldn't recognize it if he was to hear it through a megaphone. He's up to something! I don't know just what. But I'll—"

"Come, come!" remonstrated Bennett good humoredly. "I'm sure you do Wainwright an injustice. He—"

"He's a fine old bird! Do you chance to remember the Garrison case nine years back? President Garrison of the Israel Putnam Trust company?"

"Who shot himself after being ruined by a financier who was his dearest friend? Yes. What has that to do with—"

"With Wainwright? Oh, nothing much. Only Wainwright happened to be the financier."

"No! You must be mistaken."

"Am I? I ought to know something about it. I was the chief of police at the time and handled the case. It was I who suppressed Wainwright's name. For a small consideration!"

"Wainwright?" gasped Bennett. "Of all men! But—"

"So you see why I copped the 'mercy' and 'fair-play' cards when he dealt 'em just now," purred Phelan. "There's something big behind this talk of his in favor of the Borough bill. Wasn't it at his house last summer that Horrigan offered you the nomination? That's the story, and—"

"Yes. On the 25th of July. He—"

"The 25th of July, hey? That was the day he had me out there. The day I met that fellow Gibbs. By the way, your honor, the papers say it's Gibbs' firm that's buying all that Borough stock. They've been buying it up on the quiet for months. I begin to see a lot of funny little lights that make this thing clearer. Gibbs is buying Borough stock. He's Wainwright's chum. Horrigan and Wainwright frame up your nomination; then the minute you come into power this Borough franchise bill is flashed on you by Horrigan, and Wainwright begs you to sign it. Take my tip—Wainwright owns the Borough road as well as the City Surface, and Horrigan's getting a fat wad of stock for arranging the franchise. Oh, they're got your honor all tied up in ribbons, like you was a meanie bookie. You and me ought to get together and fight this thing out side by side, and when once I get the Indian sign on Dick Horrigan—"

"But I've no personal quarrel with Horrigan. He—"

"You've got the same quarrel with him that the pigeon has with the muskrat. If you don't use your wings you'll be swallowed. Let me put you on to a few of the little jokers in that bill of his. You see—"

"I see more about that bill than you think," interposed Bennett. "I've worked over it night after night, with my lawyer. Don't you get the idea I've been—"

"How can you, Bennett? Gibbs was saying, 'And Mr. Phelan, too, isn't it? Alderman, I'm glad to see you again. You remember me? Scott Gibbs? I met—'"

"Yes," said Phelan. "I remember you, all right. You was up to Wainwright's last summer—that day me an' Horrigan sent the dove of peace screeching up a tree. I didn't know you visited the city hall too."

"I don't as a rule," answered Gibbs. "I came here with Mrs. Bennett and Miss Wainwright. I wanted a glimpse of the man who can make one pen stroke that will send Borough Street railway stock up to 100 or down to 10."

"Do you mean," broke in Dallas, "that Mr. Bennett can really have such an effect on the stock market?"

"That and more," Gibbs assured him. "Why, the mere rumor that he meant to veto the Borough's franchise bill has sent the stock tumbling eight points since the market opened today."

"What power for one man!" exclaimed the girl, turning to Bennett in surprise. "And are you going to veto it?"

"Office secrets," approved Alwyn justly. "Hands off!"

"Veto it?" echoed Gibbs, with a laugh. "Of course he isn't. It would be too hard upon his friends—unfair and unkind, to say the least."

"But why?" queried Dallas, forestalling Alwyn, who was about to speak.

"Because," cut in Gibbs before Bennett could interfere, "the man who is backing the Borough bill are the men who made him mayor. It wouldn't be square for him to turn his new power against the very men who gave him

He held out his hand, and Bennett gripped it cordially.

"I'm glad we had this talk, alderman," said he. "We're fighting from different points of view, but our main object is the same. I think we can pull together on this matter."

"We sure can," agreed Phelan. "An' as for Horrigan, when I'm done with him he'll be rolled up in a nice bundle, an' I'll print on it in big letters, 'Use all the books you like.'"

"Mr. Bennett, sir," said Ingram. "I thought you was single!" exclaimed Phelan.

"It's my mother. Show her in."

From the musty antechamber came the rustle of feminine attire, and Mrs. Bennett came in. Devoted as he was to his mother, Alwyn now had no eyes for her, for ever her shoulder he had caught a glimpse of another face.

CHAPTER V.
"DALLAS!" cried Bennett, oblivious of everything except that the girl he had so long wooed and who had inspired him to all he had achieved—that she was standing before him.
It was Dallas herself who brought him to a sense of the other's presence, for as he sprang forward to meet her and eagerly grasped both her outstretched hands the girl bowed in mock reverence and answered his ardor with a demure:
"Good afternoon, your honor!"
"Don't be so formal in front of me. It's so good to see you again that I—"
"I sent word that I had a surprise for you, Alwyn," interrupted his mother. "I knew it would please you. But with a glance at the alderman, 'you're busy? Perhaps we—'"
"Not at all, mother. May I present Alderman Phelan? Miss Wainwright, this is—"
"Alderman Phelan of the Eighth," amended the politician, thoroughly ill at ease in the presence of the visitors. "I must be going now, your honor. I—"
But Dallas had come forward with a smile that melted the speaker's embarrassment in an instant.
"The Alderman Phelan who gives turkeys to all those poor people at Christmas?" she asked in genuine interest. "I've often read about—"
"The same, ma'am, at your service," assented the delighted Phelan. "I'll 'em with turkey an' coal in winter an' I take their wives an' kids on outings in summer. Ever been to one of the James Q. Phelan outings, miss?"
"No," replied Dallas, with a perfectly grave face. "I'm sorry to say I haven't. Tell me about them, won't you?"
"They've got to be seen to be understood. A thousand poor tired wives an' white faced, spindly kids turned out into the country for the only glimpse of green grass an' shady trees they ever get all year. A thousand mothers an' children out in a cool grove with nothing to do but roll around the soft grass an' play an' eat all the fancy grub they can hold. Maybe, miss, it wouldn't mean a lot to you, but if you'd been workin' an' livin' an' sleepin' an' starvin' for twelve months in a stuffy, dark, smelly back tenement room, tollin' like a slave to keep food an' clothes betwixt the kids an' starvation, an' was barely able to keep body an' soul together—well, maybe then you'd understand what them outings an' turkey tests an' loads of coal means to the poor, and they won't turn down Jimmy Phelan at Horrigan's orders."

"I had a surprise for you, Alwyn," interrupted his mother.

"I do understand," cried Dallas, her big eyes bright with tears. "I understand, and, in behalf of all women and children, I thank you with my whole heart!"

"You're all right, miss," muttered the delighted alderman, Phelan, at once at a loss for words. "You're—your all right! I'll leave it to his honor!"

"Indeed she is!" broke in a suave voice at whose sound the little spell of sentiment was broken and which caused Phelan and Bennett to turn in annoyance toward the door.

Scott Gibbs, bland, well groomed, quite ignoring the other men's lack of welcome, stood bowing on the threshold.

"Oh, I forgot to tell you, Alwyn," whispered Mrs. Bennett in a hurried aside to her son as the latter summoned up sufficient civility to greet the newcomer. "I forgot to tell you. Mr. Gibbs was calling on Dallas when I stopped for her, and he asked leave to come along. I'm sorry, but—"

"How can you, Bennett? Gibbs was saying, 'And Mr. Phelan, too, isn't it? Alderman, I'm glad to see you again. You remember me? Scott Gibbs? I met—'"

"Yes," said Phelan. "I remember you, all right. You was up to Wainwright's last summer—that day me an' Horrigan sent the dove of peace screeching up a tree. I didn't know you visited the city hall too."

"I don't as a rule," answered Gibbs. "I came here with Mrs. Bennett and Miss Wainwright. I wanted a glimpse of the man who can make one pen stroke that will send Borough Street railway stock up to 100 or down to 10."

"Do you mean," broke in Dallas, "that Mr. Bennett can really have such an effect on the stock market?"

"That and more," Gibbs assured her. "Why, the mere rumor that he meant to veto the Borough's franchise bill has sent the stock tumbling eight points since the market opened today."

"What power for one man!" exclaimed the girl, turning to Bennett in surprise. "And are you going to veto it?"

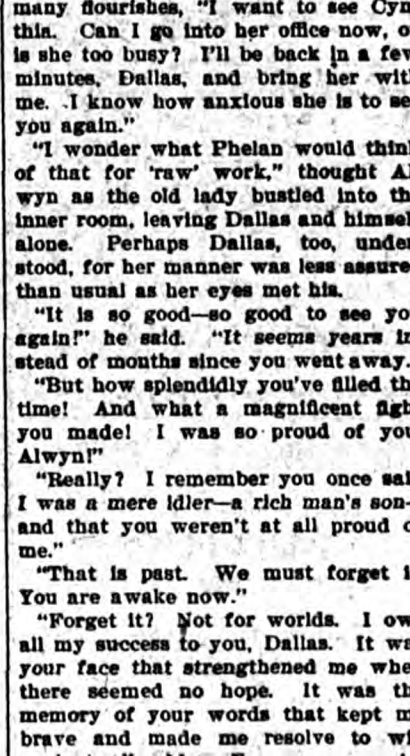

"Office secrets," approved Alwyn justly. "Hands off!"

"Veto it?" echoed Gibbs, with a laugh. "Of course he isn't. It would be too hard upon his friends—unfair and unkind, to say the least."

"But why?" queried Dallas, forestalling Alwyn, who was about to speak.

"Because," cut in Gibbs before Bennett could interfere, "the man who is backing the Borough bill are the men who made him mayor. It wouldn't be square for him to turn his new power against the very men who gave him that power. Now, would it?"

"By the men who are backing the bill?" whom "o you mean?" asked Bennett.
"Oh, I just spoke in generalities. As a matter of fact, the break in the price today was lucky for those who wanted to buy."
"An' your firm's doin' most of the buyin'?" inquired Phelan.
"We have a great deal of the stock, I admit," said Gibbs; "so you see, Bennett, you can make me or break me. I place myself in your hands."
"I see you are taking a most unfair advantage of me, Mr. Gibbs," retorted Alwyn, with some heat. "You have no right to thrust this information on me and to appeal—"
"But I was only—"
"You were trying to influence my action toward the Borough bill. You cannot do it!"
"Why, I didn't think you'd be angry at—"
"I'm not. Let's drop the subject, please."
"I only answered Miss Wainwright's questions. I—"
"We'll leave Miss Wainwright's name out of the matter, please," replied Bennett.
"Certainly, if you like," assented Gibbs, with a shrug of his broad shoulders. "I am afraid my time is up. Good day, Bennett. I'm sorry you mis-constructed—"
"I didn't. Good day."
"I'll be on my way, too," announced Phelan, breaking the awkward pause that followed Gibbs' exit. "Ladies, I'm proud to have met you. If either of you knows a poor woman needin' a turkey or a family wantin' an outing, just drop me a line, an' I'll see they get it. An' they needn't come from my ward neither."
"That's bad politics, alderman!" laughed Bennett.
"It's good humanity, though. There's two things I love to do—first, to down the man who's no home, an' second, to give good times to folks who's strangers to fun. Goodby, your honor. I'll be in again now I've found my way. Ladies!"
"Alwyn," said Mrs. Bennett as the alderman bowed himself out with many flourishes, "I want to see Cynthia. Can I go into her office now, or is she too busy? I'll be back in a few minutes. Dallas, and bring her with me. I know how anxious she is to see you again."
"I wonder what Phelan would think of that for 'raw' work," thought Alwyn as the old lady bustled into the inner room, leaving Dallas and himself alone. Perhaps Dallas, too, understood, for her manner was less assured than usual as her eyes met his.
"It is so good—so good to see you again!" he said. "It seems years instead of months since you went away."
"But how splendidly you've filled the time! And what a magnificent fight you made! I was so proud of you, Alwyn!"
"Really? I remember you once said I was a mere ladder—a rich man's son—and that you weren't at all proud of me."
"That is past. We must forget it. You are awake now."
"Forget it? Not for worlds. I owe all my success to you, Dallas. It was your face that strengthened me when there seemed no hope. It was the memory of your words that kept me brave and made me resolve to win against all odds. You were my inspiration, the light in my darkness. At each step I thought 'Dallas would be glad' or 'Dallas would not approve of this.' And I steered my course accordingly to victory."
"No, no!" murmured the girl. "It was your own courage, your strength!"
"Not mine. It was your faith in me. You know, I think no man ever accomplishes anything by himself. There is always a woman, I think, behind every great achievement. The world at large does not see her—does not know of her existence—but she's in the heart of the man who is making the fight. He battles in her name as did the knights of old, and the triumph is hers, not his. Whether his reward is the crown of love or the crown of thorns, she is the inspiration."
"Then if I had a share in your success I am very happy, Alwyn, for your name is in every mouth. You are the man of the hour, even as you were in the olden days on the football field. Oh, I am proud of you—very, very proud! There is a glorious future before you."
"That all rests in your dear hands," cried Alwyn.
"Future or present, Dallas, it's all the same. If only you—"
"Mr. Bennett," roared a deep voice as the door from the outer office was banged open and Horrigan, red faced and angry, burst in. "I understand that you've—Oh, I didn't know you had a lady calling on you. She broke off—"
"Well, I have," retorted Bennett, furious at the untimely intrusion. "Ingram should have told you that at the door."
"I don't stop to hear what folks tell me at the door. I'll wait outside till you're alone."
"Don't trouble to wait. Goodby."
"You can bet I'll trouble to wait," snarled Horrigan. "There's something you and I have got to settle today. Understand? I'll be outside. Don't keep me waiting long!"

THE SUMMER VACATION GUIDE.

The summer vacation is the bright spot in the dull routine of the year's work. It breaks the monotony of the daily round, and cheers and invigorates for the strenuous life ahead.

America abounds with delightful summer resorts in valley, on mountain and beside the sea. The Atlantic coast line from Labrador to Cape Hatteras contains the greatest number of resorts devoted entirely to the pursuit of pleasure and health in the world.

One may purchase from Pennsylvania Railroad Ticket Agents excursion tickets to over eight hundred of these resorts, covering all of the desirable places, from the rock-bound bays of Newfoundland to the gentle sandy slopes of the Virginia beaches from the White Mountains of New Hampshire to the Cumberland Mountains of Tennessee; in the Wilds of Canada, along the shores of the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes.

The famous seacoast resorts of New Jersey—Atlantic City, Cape May, Wildwood, Ocean City, Sea Isle City, Asbury Park, Long Branch, Spring Lake, Seaside Park, Beach Haven, and others, so well known that description is superfluous—are among the most popular and the most easily accessible resorts in the country.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Summer Excursion Book, to be obtained of Ticket Agents at 10 cents a copy, or of the General Passenger Agent, Philadelphia, by mail post paid for 25 cents, describes them all and gives the rates and stop-over privileges allowed on tickets.

We Call Attention.

We call the attention of the magistrate and other persons in the county who make a practice of drawing legal papers to the following law which was passed at the recent session of the Legislature. It will be seen at a glance that this section makes it illegal for persons other than members of the bar to charge for legal advice or for the drawing of legal papers.

Section 1. No person shall practice the profession or perform the services of attorneys at law within this State without being admitted to the bar as hereinafter directed; and any person who shall give any legal advice, represent any person in the trial of any case at law or in equity, or prepare any written instrument affecting the title to real estate, for pay or reward, shall be deemed an attorney at law for the purpose of this article.

The Most Common Cause Of Suffering
Rheumatism causes more pain and suffering than any other disease, for the reason that it is the most common of all ills, and it is certainly gratifying to sufferers to know that Chamberlain's Pain Balm will afford relief, and makes rest and sleep possible. In many cases the relief from pain, which is at first temporary, has become permanent, while in old people subject to chronic rheumatism, often brought on by dampness or changes in the weather, a permanent cure cannot be expected; the relief from pain which this liniment affords is alone worth many times its cost. 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale at Toulson's Drug Store.

It Reached The Spot.

Mr. E. Humphrey, who owns a large general store at Omega, O., and is president of the Adams County Telephone Co., as well as of the Home Telephone Co., of Pike County, O., says of Dr. King's New Discovery: "I saved my life once. At least I think it did. It seemed to reach the spot—the very seat of my cough—when everything else failed." Dr. King's New Discovery not only reaches the cough spot; it heals the sore spots and the weak spots in throat, lungs and chest. Sold under guarantee at Toulson's Drug Store. 50 cents and $1.00. —What a great city New York is—What a population is constantly on the move there—was illustrated Saturday in the tally kept of the number of persons that passed through the doors of the Waldorf on that day. That even the proprietors were astonished when the count proved that over 18,000 went in through the eight entrances can be readily believed.

Origin Of The Potato Bug.

The original potato bug lived somewhere in the Highlands of Central America. From him descended the great grandfather of the insect in question—the striped black and white creature which still inhabits the coast of the Caribbean Sea. This insect never saw a potato plant; it lived on the wild sand bar. This plant is distantly related to our cultivated potato; but until comparatively lately—as such terms are understood in discussion of evolution—no "potato bug" has been anything but a sand bar bug.

When the Spaniards invaded Mexico, in 1519, they introduced horses, and as the conquerors went north the sand bar plants multiplied in regions where they had never been seen before, and the sand bar beetle followed them. From these migratory beetles descended the present Colorado beetle, which was first recognized as a new species in the seventeenth or eighteenth century, but even up to 1833 it still lived on the wild sand bar, and was not abundant or troublesome. With the western movement of civilization, however, the sand bar beetle and Irish potatoes were brought in contact, and it was not long before the beetle decided in favor of the potato stalks as against the fare furnished by the sand bar. He began to be a potato bug, and so rapidly did he thrive upon his new nourishment that inside of forty years he was known and exterminated everywhere in the United States.—Leslie's Weekly.

BACK GIVES OUT.

Plenty Of Salisbury Readers Have This Experience.

You tax the kidneys—overwork them—They can't keep up the continual strain.

The back gives out—it aches and pains.

Don't wait longer—take Doan's Kidney Pills.

B. A. Bennett, Crisfield, Md., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in my family and we found them to be exactly as represented. I used them for backache and a severe weakness across the small of the back brought on by inactive kidneys. A dull heavy pain and a weak, all gone feeling of depression preceded my whole system, at times so severe as to make the least exertion not only painful but irksome, particularly mornings after long sleepless night, when I would suffer with a lack of energy and languid, listless feelings. Doctors and medicines failed to help me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills as a drug store, and I was in a miserable condition. They soon cured me of the whole trouble and not a trace of it has ever returned. I do not hesitate to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other sufferers."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster—Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

BOSSSES MUST YIELD

Says Mr. Bell. Record of The Peerless Leader in Maryland's Vote.

Maryland should send a Bryan delegation to Denver, for the record shows that when Bryan runs, the voting population of the State is increased. In 1890 when Gov. John Walter Smith, walloped Gov. Lloyd Lowndes, both parties had more money than they could use. Exerting every energy they succeeded in that year in registering 286,084 white and 55,035 colored persons, 341,119 voting at that election.

In 1900 Bryan ran, then the republicans had more money than they could use, the democrats not enough to run a legitimate campaign, the Democratic leaders in the State, with one exception, putting their hands in their pockets and keeping them there, or drawing them out empty. In that year 286,105 white and 57,284 colored, registered, 343,389 voting at the election. In 1904 Parker was nominated, and although both sides were well supplied with the most powerful argument, money, and used every energy, the registration fell 5342 short of that of 1900, the whites losing 1087, the colored 4355. The registration, if the increase shown in Maryland by the Twelfth Census had been maintained should have been a little over 300,000 instead of 288,047.

Maryland has either retrograded in population, since 1900, or the registry lists were padded, to make the State certain against Bryan or his nomination so as to stir up the people, as to awaken them to their duty of voting as that of no other man does. If the last is the true reason of the increase of voters in 1900, then say, it is a good thing, for it builds up patriotism for the man who is entitled to, and has the right and power to vote, and does not do so is utterly devoid of patriotism, and a small potato, and undesirable as a citizen of our grand Country.

The man who received in 1900, in Maryland 123,138, unpurchased and unpurchasable votes; more votes than any man has ever received in the State, throwing out those that were bought; the man, for whom a large majority of said voters now stand, should have Maryland's delegation, and will have it, if the people say so, for the bosses must yield to the people.

Geo. W. Bell.

A PLEASING REPORT

Presented By Auditors of Wicomico B. & L. Association At 14th Annual Meeting.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the stockholders of the Wicomico Building & Loan Association was held Monday evening, when a statement showing the operations of the association for the fiscal year ending April 30, 1908, was presented. The report showed a prosperous year's business, enabling the directors to declare a dividend of 6 per cent. clear of taxes, amounting to $6,584.00, and carry forward a balance to the undivided profits account, swelling this account to $8,070.75. This was a very gratifying report to the stockholders, and the directors were congratulated on their successful management of the Association's affairs.

The statement presented by Auditors Price and Disharoon showed that the Association has loaned on mortgages the sum of $102,747.93, and on temporary loans, $4,980.00. A gratifying part of the report to the stockholder was the real estate item, which showed that the association has only $535.00 in real estate. The common stock of the Association is $108,000.00 and the preferred stock $40,000.00.

After the reading of the Auditors' and the secretary's reports, dividend checks were handed out to the stockholders present. Then followed the election of a board of directors for the ensuing year. The old board was re-elected by a unanimous vote, as follows: Thomas Perry, J. Cleveland White, Charles R. Disharoon, Jesse D. Price, A. A. Gillis, H. B. Freeny and W. M. Cooper. This closed the stockholders' meeting, and the meeting adjourned.

The newly elected officers organized at once by re-electing the old officers: President, Thomas Perry; Secretary, W. M. Cooper; Treasurer, J. Cleveland White, Auditors, Chas. R. Disharoon and J. D. Price; Examiners, A. A. Gillis and H. B. Freeny.

—Quite a pleasant dance was given by the young men at Hebron Thursday evening. A number of Salisbury attended. Among those present were: Misses Lettie Leatherbury, Louise Perry, Willie Lowe, Elizabeth Simons, Winnie Trader, Elizabeth Trader, Mary Collier, Rebecca Smith, Laura Elliott, Messrs. Houston H. Barker, Mark Cooper, John M. Toulson, Claude P. Hearne, J. W. Corkran, Laird Todd, Frank Adkins, Herman Hodson, Geo. Dorman, Marcellus W. Bonds.

DROWNED OFF TYASKIN.

Young Baltimorean Loses His Life While Visiting In This County.

William Walton Wimmer, 30 years old, only son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Wimmer of 107 North Fulton avenue, Baltimore, was drowned Tuesday afternoon while sailing off Tyaskin Wicomico county. From reports received it is supposed that young Wimmer was knocked senseless by a sudden swing of the boom as a gust of wind struck the boat, upsetting it. The only other occupant of the boat as far as is known was a colored boy, who, it is said, was saved.

Mr. Wimmer was staying with I. C. Jones, of Tyaskin, a large strawberry shipper, most of whose shipments are handled by his father's firm, Wimmer & Co., commission merchants. The first intimation of the accident was a telegram received late Tuesday afternoon after the body had been recovered. The body was carried to Baltimore early Thursday morning by boat. Besides his mother and father, young Wimmer is survived by two sisters—Mrs. Ulysses S. Wright and Miss Grace Wimmer.

HAD SPLENDID YEAR

Chesapeake And Ohio Did Well In Spite Of The Panic.

According to information received at Newport News the fiscal year ending July 1st, will be the banner year in the history of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway. In spite of the unfavorable financial conditions throughout the country, the Chesapeake and Ohio has been doing an enormous coastwise business and the import and export business has held up fairly well.

In connection with this information comes the news that the company has ordered its contractors to resume the work of double tracking the road in West Virginia. This work was stopped several months ago during the worst of the financial depression. It is understood that the double tracking work between Newport News and Richmond will also be resumed in the near future.

RABIES CLAIM VICTIM

Dr. Marsh Faced Death Manfully. Bitten By Pet Dog And Waited Too Long.

Fulfilling the terms of the death sentence pronounced upon him last Sunday, when he was told he must die before Thursday noon, Dr. William H. Marsh, of New York, succumbed to hydrophobia Thursday afternoon. His last hours were eased and he was rendered unconscious by opiates administered by his physician while his family hoped against hope that unerring science might for once be in error.

Not for a moment had Dr. Marsh, however, deluded himself with false hopes. With the death warrant of the physicians of the Pasteur Institute still ringing in his ears, he made his will, called his family and business associates into council and gave them explicit directions for the conduct of his business and personal affairs after he should have gone from them, then calmly lay down to die, as he had lived, like a man.

"You will die before Thursday noon. No human power can save you." That was the dictum of Dr. William L. Wheeler, of the Pasteur Institute, delivered last Monday.

Waited Too Long.

"You waited too long," the surgeons said to him. "Our treatment cannot save you. You have hydrophobia."

There was not a falter in his voice nor a change in his face as he heard them. The muscles about his mouth kept twitching and jumping, and his jawbones clinched spasmodically, but these things have been happening ever since the disease first manifested itself, three days ago.

"How much time do you give me?" he asked.

"Not long," said the physician. "Probably not more than four or five days."

Retraining with his physician, Dr. H. M. Oulinas, to his home, in Ocean Avenue, Brooklyn, Dr. Marsh began at once to make plans for the future of those near and dear to him. Himself a graduate in medicine, he knew science had said its last word.

"I am not afraid to die; the past hides nothing that should make me ashamed to face the future," he said to his friends who called when the word went forth that one about to die was waiting for the end. His only fear was that the frightful convulsions of the final stage of rabies might prove too harrowing for his family to witness, the terrifying cries too heart-rending for them to bear. So he asked Dr. Oulinas to keep close when the period of delirium began and to be liberal with chloroform, opium or whatever might aid to stifle and soothe. Faithful to his trust, Dr. Oulinas hardly left the bedside of his patient and friend until the end. From early Tuesday afternoon until he died, Dr. Marsh was in a state of almost complete unconsciousness, induced by sedatives. Death came gently and peacefully.

Arranges His Affairs.

None of those who sat in conference with Dr. Marsh until nearly midnight Monday would speak of the occurrences in detail. It was in the library of his home that he gathered them together—his wife, his sons and daughters, his son-in-law and his lawyer. There was the will to be drawn up, and that done and the distribution of his personal property arranged for, he turned his attention to the future of his children.

Still in full possession of his faculties, the only symptoms of his fatal disease being the convulsive contractions of the throat that seized him from time to time, Dr. Marsh directed and the rest consented that his second son, Ramsey, who has been associated with him in business, should undertake the management of the company as its head. It is safe to say, that of all the occupants of the house Dr. Marsh himself was the only one who slept that night.

Bitten By Pet Dog.

Six weeks ago a pet dog owned by Mr. Marsh's daughter was bitten by a mad dog. A veterinary treated the pet, and Mr. Marsh bandaged its wounds daily.

The dog, in gratitude, asked his master's hand, and it was in this way that Mr. Marsh got the poison in his system. The pet died in a fit ten days ago.

CHEAP TRAVELING.

Connecticut Man Journeys From New Orleans, 1600 Miles, To Waterbury For One Cent.

William Spallone has just reached Waterbury, Conn., having completed the journey there from New Orleans at the expense of one cent.

Spallone started for Waterbury on the front end of a "blind" baggage car, securing freight trains as too slow, and completed his 1600-mile trip in this fashion. When he felt hungry he dropped off long enough to secure a few square meals.

"It was easy until I struck Albany," he said. "There I had to get with the party to cross a rail bridge."

UNION OF METHODISTS

Advocated At General Conferences Now Being Held In Baltimore and Pittsburgh.

The question of the union of the Methodist churches has been brought very prominently to the front recently. It is believed that the action of the Methodist Episcopal General Conference which is holding its session in Baltimore, in asking the Methodist Protestant Church to come back, was a big step in that direction. The Methodist Protestant General Conference which is meeting in Pittsburgh has taken up the question. The following report from Pittsburgh shows the question is being seriously considered.

"In the absence of President Lewis from Wednesday evening's session of the Methodist Protestant General Conference, Rev. A. L. Reynolds, of Ohio, presided for a time, and then Rev. Dr. Swift, of Pittsburgh, was called to the chair. Dr. Lewis' absence was due to the fact that the Church Union Committee, of which he is chairman, held a meeting in the morning and submitted its report, which was made the special order for tonight. In a few preliminary remarks Dr. Lewis said, 'God has led us out into views we never dreamed of. To do all asked of us, we thought impractical, but if there comes to pass all that is contemplated, our church will have her just share.'"

The report reciprocates the warm fraternal meetings of the Congressional United Brethren and Methodist Episcopal Churches, and sets forth that the proposition for union from the Methodist Episcopal Church suggests a possible vision for church union hitherto not dreamed of by Methodist Protestants. It declares that "if it is God's will that the Methodist Protestant Church shall be the leader in bringing about such a union of Methodist churches there shall be but one great Methodism in America, needing no other name than the Methodist Church of America, we are willing to go forward, appreciating the difficulties in the way of such a consummation, as far as God may lead us in that direction." The report recommends the appointment of a commission of nine persons by the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church to confer with a similar commission from the Methodist Episcopal church, the Methodist Episcopal Church South and the United Brethren Church regarding such a union. Rev. Dr. F. T. Little, of Maryland, is secretary of the Church Union Committee.

In the report of the Committee on Temperance, of which Rev. J. W. Kirk, of Baltimore, is a member, the church places herself on record as opposing all forms of intemperance and urges the disuse of tobacco.

THE SCHOOL BOARD

In Session Friday. Resignations, Scholarships, Examinations.

At the session of the School Board Friday the following resignations were handed in and accepted: Miss Ruth Powell, of Oakland School, Miss Margarette Laws, of Riley's School. The examinations for teachers and for scholarships will be held June 9, 10 and 11.

The following scholarships are to be disposed of:

For female—Western Maryland College.

For male—Charlotte Hall.

Male or female—Maryland Institute.

Male or female—State Normal School.

The board signed the diplomas for the graduates of the Wicomico High School, which will be delivered at the Commencement exercises Wednesday night.

The School Board visited the Manual Training exhibit at the High School.

Commencement exercises were held at the following schools: Powellville and Tyaskin. These are two room schools and the pupils are asked to complete ninth grade work before certificates are delivered.

The exercises at Powellville were very interesting. A class of eight young ladies, a very good showing for a school of this size, being awarded certificates.

An interesting fact about one of the Tyaskin boys was brought up which showed he had not missed a rail call in five years. Needless to say a very unusual occurrence.

HELP THE FIREMEN

Indispensable To Our City. Patronize Their Bazaar June 1 and 2.

The Firemen will give a bazaar at the Skating Rink on Monday and Tuesday June 1st and 2nd, the proceeds to go towards defraying their expense to the annual convention to be held at Frostburg, Md., on June 10, 11, and 12th. The fire department of Salisbury is a volunteer association and serves without remuneration of any kind. They have in the past saved a great deal of property and are a protection. It would be impossible to get along without it. It is certainly as little as the citizens of the town can do to show their appreciation of the services of these men to help them whenever they may need assistance.

It is hoped to carry to the convention nearly the entire department.

The delegates elected to the convention from the home department are William Killam, A. M. Jackson, Burton Cannon, Wm. W. White and Wood Richardson.

—Rev. Kingman A. Handy is preaching a series of sermons on the subject, "Where The Churches Came From And What The World Owe Them."

The first of the series was given last Sunday—"The Churches of the New Testament." Next Sunday the subject will be "Departures from the Ideal—Canaan and Babel." A history of the denominations, Presbyterian, Methodist, Episcopal, Catholic and others will follow. Their weakness and what they have contributed to the world will be presented.

Maryland Crab License.

All persons intending to engage in the crabbing business should take out license before proceeding to engage in such work. The new "Crab License Law," is now in force. It provides that every person, engaging in the business of taking crabs for sale, except boys under ten years of age, shall be required to license, and that for each license issued the sum of $1.50 for license and 50 cents for Clerk's fees shall be paid. According to the law the license for Tangier, Dames Quarter and Deal's Island districts will be used for the benefit of the Deal's Island High School, and the money received from Lawsons, Asbury and Orfield districts will be used for the benefit of the High School at Orfield. Money received for licenses in other districts will be used for the benefit of public schools in those districts.

It should be borne in mind that a failure to license will subject a person neglecting to license to a fine of not less than $25. Crabbers should accordingly take no risks but promptly take out license, otherwise they will subject themselves to this penalty of the law.—Times, Orfield, Md.

BABY GIRL CRIED AND SCRATCHED

All the Time—Torturing Eczema Covered Her Body—Could Not Sleep—Doctor Said Sores Would Last for Years—Skin Now Clear.

CURED IN THREE MONTHS BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I take great pleasure in telling you what a great help it was for me to use Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for my baby niece. She was suffering from that terrible torture, eczema. It was all over her body but the worst was on her face and hands. Her hands were so bad that she could not hold anything. She cried and scratched all the time and could not sleep night or day from the scratching. I had her under the doctor's care for a year and a half and he seemed to do her no good. I took her to the best doctor in the city and he said that she would have the sores until she was six years old. But I had depended on the doctor my baby would have lost her mind and died from the want of aid.

"I used all the remedies that everybody told me about and I tortured the child almost to death. Then I saw in the paper how Cuticura was the cure for irritating skin. I bathed her with warm water and Cuticura Soap and used the Cuticura Ointment. She was cured in three months. Now her skin is as clear and smooth as it could be. I shall recommend the use of Cuticura wherever I see the skin in bad condition." Alice L. Dowell, 4769 Easton Ave., St. Louis, Mo., May 2 and 20, 1907.

MANUFACTURER OF

FERTILIZERS FOR ALL CROPS

For STRAWBERRIES—A fertilizer that is said to prevent frosts from injuring blossoms to a great extent; also make nice berries and make the size hold up well in case of long drouths. I have experimented on this particular kind for the past six years.

WHITE POTATOES—A fertilizer that will make a good crop (season permitting) without being too expensive.

CORN Fertilizer, for best results, must contain ingredients that will not burn the crop under the worst weather conditions.

TOMATO and CANTALOUPE Fertilizer is another study of mine. To get best results with smallest outlay consistent with what is expected out of the crop, the plants must grow fast from the start and have a fertilizer that contains all necessary elements.

Any kind of goods mixed to order on short notice. It is to my best interest to study the needs of the farmer in this line.

The New Mayor
Based on G. H. Broadhurst's Successful Play
OF
ALBERT
PAYSON
TERHUNECOPYRIGHT, 1907 BY GEORGE H. BROADHURST

With all the advantages of youth, education and good looks and no vocation other than the enjoyment of wealth, the hero of our present story chose rather to sacrifice his ease and comfort on the altar of his duty as a citizen. His city called him to save her from spoliation and corruption, and he responded to the call. To lure him from the path of right came the seductions of love and the claims of a revered parent's memory, allied with the mighty forces at the command of political and financial malefactors. The firmness with which "the man of the hour," singled out for the highest post in a great municipality by those who saw in him only a weakling and a tool, resisted the very forces that had elevated him for their own purposes to official power will be an inspiration to the reader, as it has been an uplifting force in the minds of thousands who have witnessed its theatrical representation.

CHAPTER VI.

"What a strange man!" exclaimed Dallas Walworth in wonder, as the anteroom door slammed behind the boss. "And what utterly abominable manners! Who is he, Alwyn?"

"Richard Horrigan, the—"

"The boss, yes. He has a pleasing way of stamping into this office unasked, as if he owned it and as if I were his clerk. But today's behavior was the worst yet. It's got to stop."

"But don't do up any anything reckless, Alwyn. Remember how strong he is!"

"There's no danger of his letting me forget his power," said Bennett, with a bitter smile. "He—"

"But you'll be careful, won't you? Please do, for my sake. And you mustn't keep him waiting. If there's a way out through Cynthia's office we'll go by that. Goodby, I'll explain to your mother. No; you must let us go now. Office business must come first. Won't you call this evening? I'll be home and alone."

Despite Bennett's remonstrances she was firm, and it was in no pleasant frame of mind that the mayor threw himself into a seat when he was left alone in the room. That the talk with Dallas, which had promised so much for him, should be thus rudely interrupted, that—Horrigan sung open the door and stamped in. The boss' anger had by no means subsided in the few moments of delay, but had, rather, grown until it vibrated in his every word and gesture. He wasted no time in formalities, but came to the point with all the leadership and tact of a pile-driver.

"Look here, Bennett," he rumbled, menace underlying tone and look, "I'm told Phelps' been here this afternoon. What did he want?"

"To see me," answered Bennett calmly, the effort at self control visible only in the whitening of the knuckles that gripped the desk edge.

"What did he want to see you about?"

"A business matter."

"What business matter?"

"Mine."

"Tours, eh?" sneered Horrigan. "Well, young man, I want you to understand here and now that no one can be chimney with Jim Phelps and be my man at the same time. Got that through your head?"

"Yes," assented Bennett; "I think I have. And while we're speaking plainly I want you to understand here and now that no one can bully me, either here or elsewhere, and that I'm no man's man. Have you got that through your head?"

Horrigan stared in savage amazement. He doubted if his ears had not played him false. Bennett had always treated the boss with uniform courtesy, and Horrigan belonged to the too numerous class who do not understand until too late the difference between gentle breeding and weak cowardice. That a man should speak to him courteously and not interlard his talk with oaths, obscenity or rough talk seemed to Horrigan, as it does to many another boor, an evidence of timidity and lack of virility. A Damascus blade is a far more harmless looking weapon than a bludgeon, yet it is capable when the necessity arises of far deadlier work.

It is only the man whose gentleness has no granite strength as its foundation, who deserves the newly popular term of "mollified."

Had Horrigan's large experience with men been extended to embrace this fact he would probably never have picked out Alwyn Bennett in the first place as candidate for mayor, nor deemed the younger man a fit tool for the organization's crooked work. The French saying of "the soft touch" which means a man who can be easily won over, thought like a devil on a cushion.

and went to death on the scaffold with a smile and a jest on their lips, while man and woman in the same circumstances broke down and screamed for mercy. However, Horrigan chanced to be more familiar with the history of the organization than with that of France; hence, deeming Bennett's reply a mere sporadic flash of defiance from a properly cowed spirit, he resolved to crush the rebellion at a blow.

"Don't give me any insolence!" he roared. "I won't stand for it, and—"

"Moreover," quietly continued Bennett, as though the boss had not spoken, "I shall be very much obliged if in future you will knock at my door instead of bursting in on me. This is my private office, not yours."

"Do you mean to—"

"I've explained as clearly as I can just what I mean. If you don't understand, I can't supply you with intelligence."

"Bennett," said the boss, his burning rage stilled down to a white heat, far more dangerous, but less incoherent, "you and me are talking too much and saying too little. We've got to come to a showdown. You're a clever boy and you made a rattling good fight, and you're on the right side of the public and of the press too. We're the best material we've got, and if you try and do the right thing there's no limit to what you can rise to—but only if you do the right thing."

"The right thing," echoed Bennett. "What do you mean by the right thing?"

"I mean you've got to do the right thing by the men who put you where you are today."

"That's fair. But who put me where I am today?"

"I did—I, Dick Horrigan. Who ever heard of you till I took you up? No body. If I didn't make you mayor, who did, I'd like to know?"

"The voters." The people of this city."

"The voters," scoffed Horrigan. "The deuce they did! Who had you nominated?"

"You did. But it was the public who elected me, and I'm going to obey your orders in one thing, I'm going to do the right thing by the men who put me where I am today. I'm going to pay the voters for their trust in me by giving them a fair and square administration. In the case of this Borough Street railway franchise bill, for instance, tapping the document lying before him on his desk, "before I sign that bill I intend to make sure it's for the good of the people, that it is for the good of the city, not merely for the good of Richard Horrigan and a clique of his friends and hangers. No, don't swear. I'll do you no good. I'm firm on this matter. If you're discontented with me it's your own fault. I warned you months ago that if I was elected I should keep my oath of office. As for this Borough bill—"

"As for this Borough bill," broke in Horrigan savagely, "you'll sign it. If you don't—"

"Well?" queried Bennett, as the boss paused, choked by his own fury. "If I don't sign it—what then?"

"If you don't, your political career is ended from this time on. See? It's ended. Smashed flat. You think of yourself as a fine, promising young man who's on the road to the governorship and maybe to the White House. Well, you aren't. You're what Dick Horrigan made you, and your future will be what Dick Horrigan chooses to make it. I lifted you up, and I can tear you down just as easy. And what's more, by—, I'll do it if you don't sign the Borough bill. I'm a man of my word, and before ever you were nominated I pledged my word to have that bill put through. The bill paid your election expenses, didn't it?"

"I paid my own election expenses. You know that."

"Your personal expenses, perhaps. But who paid for parades, halls, banners, fireworks, speakers, advertisements, workers and watchers and all the other million things that elected you? The men behind that Borough bill paid them. And they did it on the understanding you'd sign the bill."

"In other words," sneered Bennett, "you made a bargain for me. Well, I can't keep it."

"Oh, I'll keep it all right. You'll sign that bill or you'll—"

"Mr. Horrigan," exclaimed Bennett, controlling his temper with more and more difficulty, "you said something just now about our coming to a showdown. That's the time for it. I want you to remember hereafter that I wear no man's collar—yours or any one else's—and that you can't deliver any goods you've bargained for in my name. If I sign that bill it won't be under your orders, but because I think it right."

"Oh," laughed Horrigan, who thought he began to see the drift of the other's mind, "I don't hold out for that. I don't care why you sign it as long as you do sign it."

"What do you think about the bill yourself?" inquired Alwyn. "Do you consider it honest?"

"What do I care? It's got to be signed, and—"

"I care. And I think the bill is fraudulent."

"Getting tender in the conscience, aren't you? Well?"

"If you put it that way, yes. I think this Borough bill is crooked from first to last. But—"

"What's the matter with it, Al?"

"Let me explain," pursued Alwyn. "This bill gives the Borough Street Railway company the right to use whatever motive power they choose to. It gives them the right to charge five cent fares without any transfers. In one paragraph there's a clause permitting them to build a subway if they want one. By another paragraph's consent they can build a conduit and lay it out for the purpose of laying wires. By another they can do as an press business. But all these provisions are as nothing compared to the above and below ground to the Borough company forever and ever—not for a term of years, but until the end of the world. It delivers that route to the company not only for our time, but for always, and binds us and our descendants to its terms. That is the chief outrage of the whole thing. To think that the—"

"Oh, we've got a howling reformer in the mayor's seat, have we?" scoffed Horrigan. "If I'd known that—"

"The people have got a man who is trying to protect their rights and property. Here's a letter I received today. You'll recognize the name of the capitalist who wrote it. You know he is honest as well as wise. This is his proposition: He will pay $2,000,000 for that same franchise, give the city 10 percent of the gross receipts and turn over the whole plant to it at the end of fifty years. What do you think of that?"

"It's a fake."

"It is a bona fide offer. He volunteers to deposit $1,000,000 to bind the bargain. Now, what I want to ask you, Mr. Horrigan, is this: If the franchise is worth $2,000,000, why are you and your faction in the board of aldermen so anxious to give it away for nothing?"

"Look here!" blustered the boss. "I—"

"I am looking," returned Bennett. "I've been looking deeper into it than you realize. I asked you a question just now. I'll answer it myself in one word—'Graft!' That is why you want to give away a franchise that is worth $2,000,000."

"Graft!" snorted Horrigan contemptuously. "The same old reformer howl! What's your idea of graft anyway?"

"Graft is unearned increment. Money to which the recipient has no legal or moral right. That is—"

"So! Then show me the man who ain't a grafter! A lawyer shows his client how to evade the law, and he takes a fee for doing it. What's that but graft? A magazine takes pay for printing an advertisement its editors know is a fake. What's that? Graft! When a congressman votes for an appropriation because another congressman has agreed to vote for one of his, what's that? Graft! When a five thousand a year senator retires at the end of ten years with a million, what's that? Graft! A police captain on $2,750 a year buys yachts and country estates. Graft! How about the rail road president who gets stock free in a corporation that ships over his road, or the insurance man or banker who gives or takes fat loans on fancy securities and clears 1,000 per cent? Grafters, all of 'em! Grafter! Every one grafts who can or who isn't too stupid. Show me a man who doesn't graft and I'll show you a fool. Present company not excepted."

"That's where you're wrong," returned Alwyn, ignoring the slur and speaking with a judicial quiet oddly at contrast with the boss' vehemence. "The man who said 'Honesty is the best policy' knew what he was talking about. It pays best not only hereafter, but here as well. Why did Missouri choose Folk for governor? Because in spite of his faults he was honest. Why was La Follette sent to the senate from Wisconsin? Because, faults and all, he was honest. Why did the people of this country make Roosevelt their president? Were they blind to his faults and follies? No, but they knew he was honest! I am honest. This bill isn't. That's why I won't sign it."

"You won't, eh?" roared Horrigan. "Then veto it! Veto it! Veto it! I'll not only speak your politics, Alwyn, but I'll put the bill over your veto. That'll show you pretty well how you and me stand as to power in the city. I'll make you the laughingstock of the administration by taking the whole thing out of your hands and putting it in mine of yours."

"I doubt it," answered Bennett, peering, but meeting coolly the fiery wrath in Horrigan's little red eye. "I intend to fight your Borough bill in the aldermanic chamber and outside that council. To pass a bill over my veto you'll have to get a two-thirds majority. That means fourteen votes. You have only your 'solid thirteen.' And I'll make it my business, to see you don't get a fourteenth vote."

"I'll look out for that, all right, all right."

"One thing more, Mr. Horrigan. I have reason to believe there is bribery in this matter. I'll ferret out the name of every man who gives or takes a bribe in connection with the Borough franchise bill, and I'll send every one of them to jail—not only the aldermen, but the capitalists who are behind the measure. Register and thief shall go to jail together."

"Is that so?" chuckled Horrigan. "Then, Mr. Reformer, let me tell you who is really behind this whole affair, the man you'll have to jail first of all. Mr. Charles Walworth, uncle of the girl you're trying to marry."

He leaned back to note the effect of his revelation, but Bennett's face moved no muscle, gave no hint of what lay beneath.

"Beside," went on Horrigan, eager to press his advantage, "every cent

THE SUMMER VACATION GUIDE.

The summer vacation is the bright spot in the dull routine of the year's work. It breaks the monotony of the daily round, and cheers and invigorates for the strenuous life ahead.

America abounds with delightful summer resorts in valley, on mountain and beside the sea. The Atlantic coast line from Labrador to Cape Hatteras contains the greatest number of resorts devoted entirely to the pursuit of pleasure and health in the world.

One may purchase from Pennsylvania Railroad Ticket Agents excursion tickets to over eight hundred of these resorts, covering all of the desirable places, from the rock-bound bays of Newfoundland to the gentle sandy slopes of the Virginia beaches from the White Mountains of New Hampshire to the Cumberland Mountains of Tennessee; in the Wilds of Canada, along the shores of the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes.

The famous seacoast resorts of New Jersey—Atlantic City, Cape May, Wildwood, Ocean City, Sea Isle City, Asbury Park, Long Branch, Spring Lake, Seaside Park, Beach Haven, and others, so well known that description is superfluous—are among the most popular and the most easily accessible resorts in the country.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Summer Excursion Book, to be obtained of Ticket Agents at 10 cents a copy, or of the General Passenger Agent, Philadelphia, by mail post paid for 25 cents, describes them all and gives the rates and stop-over privileges allowed on tickets.

He that is broken, mend him;
He that is failing, befriended him;
He that is down, defend him;
Near is the Giver when thou dost lend,
When thou befriendest, near is the Friend.

Lonely and distant, be near them;
Lost in the darkness, hear them—

The Most Common Cause Of Suffering

Rheumatism causes more pain and suffering than any other disease, for the reason that it is the most common of all ills, and it is certainly gratifying to sufferers to know that Chamberlain's Pain Balm will afford relief, and makes rest and sleep possible. In many cases the relief from pain, which is at first temporary, has become permanent, while in old people subject to chronic rheumatism, often brought on by dampness or changes in the weather, a permanent cure cannot be expected; the relief from pain which this liniment affords is alone worth many times its cost. 35 and 50 cent sizes for sale at Toulson's drug Store.

The earliest marine engines weighed about 1,000 pounds per one horse power. Recent improvements in the motors for flying machines have resulted in a motor that weighs only three pounds per one horse power. A little motor and propeller is now advertised weighing only 40 pounds, which can be screwed on to the back of a canoe or skiff, propelling it six miles an hour and can be unscrewed in a minute and carried home out of harm's way.—Ex.

It Reached The Spot.

Mr. E. Humphrey, who owns a large general store at Omega, O., and is president of the Adams County Telephone Co., as well as of the Home Telephone Co., of Pike County, O., says of Dr. King's New Discovery: "It saved my life once." At least I think it did. It seemed to reach the spot—the very seat of my cough—when everything else failed. Dr. King's New Discovery not only reaches the cough spot; it heals the sore spots and the weak spots in throat, lungs and chest. Sold under guarantee at Toulson's Drug Store, 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

At a dinner in New York, Dr. Charles F. Aked, of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church illustrated with a story the harm of church controversies. "There was an Argyllshire elder," said Dr. Aked, "whom I asked one day in London how his kirk was getting along. 'Awel,' said he, 'we had 400 members. Then we had a division and there were only 300 left. Then came a disruption and only ten remained. Then we had a heresy trial and now there's only me and my brother Dugald left, and I have great doubts of Dugald's orthodoxy.'"

Sore Nipples.

Any mother who has had experience with this distressing ailment will be pleased to know that a cure has been effected by applying Chamberlain's Salve as soon as the child is done nursing. Wipe it off with a soft cloth before allowing the babe to nurse. Many trained nurses use this salve with best results. For sale at Toulson's Drug Store.

Soblik, of France, has perfected what appears to be a successful pneumatic typewriter. There has long been a demand for a machine that is operated by mechanical power. Absence of noise, visible writing, and automatic duplication may all be secured at a cost of one cent a day for motive power.

When a boy turns his bulging pocket inside out we marvel at the quantity and variety of articles he has stowed away. Odd lengths of string, marbles, a horse-chestnut, a top, brass nails, hickory nuts, an apple and many more articles are garnered by this "snapper up of unconsidered trifles." We think the collection must be hard on a boy's pocket. And it is. But do we ever think of the variety and miscellany of the substance we put into the pocket of our stomach? There's the apple and the nuts and things besides quite as indigestible as brass nails and with no more food value than so many marbles. And yet we wonder that the stomach "gives out." When the stomach breaks down under the strain of careless eating and irregular meals it can be perfectly and permanently restored to health and strength by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The action of this medicine on the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition is so marked, that relief from disease is at once experienced and the headaches, liver "troubles," kidney disorders, skin eruptions and other symptoms of a diseased stomach are quickly cured. Dr. Pierce's medicines are purely vegetable—no alcohol or habit-forming drugs enter into their composition.

The cat's dislike for water is explained by the fact that its fur is devoid of oil and when wet it does not dry quickly.

Booths itching skin. Heals cuts or burns without a scar. Cures piles, eczema, salt rheum, any itching. Don't's Ointment. Your druggist sells it.

The Unhappiness Of Impatience.

(Orville Dewey).

No man is more constantly unhappy, or makes others more so, than the impatient man. He is out of harmony with things; and all things fight and worry and wound him. He feels himself dishonored, too, by his impatience, and he does lose, so far as he indulges it, the true dignity of life. He is not cast, indeed, like the victim of sensual vice into the slough of dishonor; his garment perhaps is not soiled, but it is burned through, in a thousand spots by the ever-topping little sparks of petulance; and it is in tatters and disorder with the ever-crossing furries of angry passion; and he seems to himself and to others as one who scrambles through life rather than as one who walks in the calm and dignified robe of conscious self-possession. Constant fretting and fault finding and breaking out into sarcasm and anger may bereave a house of all honor, peace and comfort, almost as effectually as gluttony and drunkenness. Or suppose that the fretful temper be hidden and smothered in the heart, then it wastes and consumes the springs of the innermost life.

BACK GIVES OUT.

Plenty Of Salisbury Readers Have This Experience.

You tax the kidneys—overwork them—

They can't keep up the continual strain.

The back gives out—it aches and pains.

Don't wait longer—take Doan's Kidney Pills.

B. A. Bennett, Crisfield, Md., says:

"Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in my family and we found them to be exactly as represented. I used them for backache and a severe weakness across the small of the back brought on by inactive kidneys. A dull heavy pain and a weak, all gone feeling of depression prevailed my whole system, at times so severe as to make the least exertion not only painful but irksome, particularly mornings after long sleepless night, when I would suffer with a lack of energy and languid, listless feelings. Doctors and medicines failed to help me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at a drug store, and I was in a miserable condition. They soon cured me of the whole trouble and a trace of it has never returned. I do not hesitate to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other sufferers."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

The decrease in shipbuilding in the United Kingdom is the greatest, according to the London Financial Times, in a quarter of a century. The tonnage now under construction is 101,000 less than at the end of last quarter, and 459,000 less than that of twelve months ago.

Whooping Cough.

"In February our daughter had the whooping cough. Mr. Lane, of Harland, recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and said it gave his customers the best of satisfaction. We found it as he said, and can recommend it to any one having children troubled with whooping cough, says Mrs. A. Goss, of Darand, Mich. For sale at Toulson's drug store.

"Two 35c boxes cured me of an annoying case of itching piles, which had troubled me for years and that yielded to no other treatment." Sold under guarantee at Toulson's Drug Store.

"I suffered habitually from constipation. Doan's Regulator relieved and strengthened the bowels, so that they have been regular ever since."—A. E. Davis, grocer, Sulphur Springs, Tex.

DEATH OF CAPT. VEASAY

Was A Prominent Steamboat Captain—Twenty-six Years On Wicomico River Route.

Capt. Wm. F. Veasay died Tuesday shortly before noon at his home on West Chestnut Street, after an illness of about five months of Bright's disease and other complications. He was compelled to retire from active service on the 8th of last December, and since that time has been confined to his home.

Capt. Veasay was one of the best known figures in shipping circles on Chesapeake Bay. Born in Pocomoke City, Md., November 2, 1836, he early took up a seafaring life, trading on the bay in a schooner. Later he went to sea and for several years traded to foreign countries. For 45 years he was in active service, the greater part of which he was in command of a steamboat. He commanded the steamer Sea away back in war times, running between Crisfield and Norfolk. Later he had charge of the Maggie between Crisfield and Baltimore. When the Wicomico River route was opened 36 years ago, Capt. Veasay was placed in charge of the steamer Kent, and subsequently managed the steamers Tivoli, Enoch Pratt and Virginia. He was one of the most popular steamboat commanders plying the Chesapeake, and one of the most competent. His death is regretted by a host of people who travelled on the Wicomico River route.

Capt. Veasay is survived by a widow and four children, viz: Mrs. Harry E. Parkhurst, of Baltimore; Mrs. Wm. H. Thomas, of Buckeystown, Md.; Miss Louise Veasay and Mr. Harlan Veasay, of this city. One brother, Mr. Thomas S. Veasay, and a half sister, Mrs. Alderman, both of Pocomoke City, also survive.

Funeral services took place Friday morning at ten o'clock, in the Wicomico Presbyterian Church. Many requests from Catarrh sufferers who use atomizers have caused us to put up Liquid Cream Balm, a new and convenient form of Ely's Cream Balm, the only remedy for Catarrh which can always be depended upon. In power to allay inflammation, to cleanse the clogged air-passages, to promote free, natural breathing, the two forms of Cream Balm are alike. Liquid Cream Balm is sold by all druggists for 75 cents, including spraying tube. Mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

BERRY SITUATION

Rather Flat. Fruit Came On Plentifully And Ripened Fast. Low Prices.

Strawberries commenced to go down the latter part of last week and the decline continued until the price of berries was so low in the cities that a number of growers have stopped picking and shipping.

In Pittsville, which is the center of the largest growers of this fruit the situation is reported as bad, with plenty of berries on hand. The majority of the largest berry growers in this section had just about completed shipments and this would naturally have been the heaviest week of the season. The drop in price has been attributed to several causes: first, the condition of labor in the cities is such that they are unable to buy berries in the large quantities and fancy prices as in the past when factories were running and they were in a prosperous condition; again, it is said that the extreme hot weather of the past few days has brought the crop on with a rush, and has as well injured the quality of the berries; then the large acreage has undoubtedly been a factor in the berry situation.

Those who were fortunate to have those varieties which ripened early enough to get into the market last week made a fairly good thing out of them, and as quite a number were shipped during this period the situation is much better than it might have been.

On Thursday morning Salisbury was the witness of an unusual scene, when its streets were crowded with pickers who had been imported into this section by one of the growers, Mr. John W. Jones, of near Pocomoke, who had a large acreage in strawberries, and had advertised for pickers. On their arrival at his farm, the price was such as not to justify picking and they were discharged without work, and then went to Pittsville and spent the night when the authorities sent them over to Salisbury. As they were without means or food, assistance had to be extended and passage was provided on a sail boat for their return to Baltimore.

Notice.

There will be services (D. V.) in Spring Hill Parish, on Sunday next, May 31st, as follows: Spring Hill Church, 10.30 a. m. Quantico, 8 p. m. Franklin B. Adkins, Rector.

DANGEROUS RUNAWAYS

Should Be Provided Against, If Possible. A Danger To Be Avoided, If Possible.

Main Street was the scene of an exciting runaway Friday morning. The team of Mr. Krause, the baker, was left unhitched standing in front of Dorman & Smyth's Hardware Store with the large delivery wagon, when for some reason the horse took fright and started up Main Street in a dead run, scattering teams and passengers as he went by. The horse ran into the team of Mr. Mitchell Collins which was hitched along the street striking the right hind wheel, breaking it and also breaking some of the gear under the carriage. The next team struck was that of Miss Alice Hitch who was standing in front of R. E. Powell & Co., breaking off both shafts. Miss Hitch who was near succeeded in catching and holding the horse. The runaway team then continued its mad course up the street until it came to the corner of Main and Division where it attempting to make the curve on the slippery bricks it fell with such force as to throw it upon the opposite sidewalk. The habit of leaving teams unhitched upon our streets is a dangerous one, and should be stopped. Several other teams had a narrow escape.

Death Of Mr. Hall At Home Of His Daughter, Mrs. Theo. Toadvine.

Wicomico lost one of her oldest and most respected citizens in the death of Mr. Phillip W. Hall which occurred Monday evening of this week.

Mr. Hall, the oldest son of a second union of Dr. L. A. Hall, of Delaware, was born August 28th, 1825. In early life he made school teaching a profession, but after his marriage with Miss Mary McGregor, he moved to Maryland where he engaged in farming. For the past few months he has made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Theodore Toadvine. He was a member of the U. S. Baptist Church.

Four daughters, Mrs. Christine Parker, Mrs. Sarah E. Taylor, Mrs. Mary Leates and Mrs. Annie Toadvine, eight grand children and one great grand child mourn their loss. Funeral services were conducted by Elder A. B. Francis and the interment was at the old homestead, "Pear Lawn."

—Mrs. Emily Lankford, of Clara, has been the guest of Mrs. Laura Darnby for a few weeks.

THE STREET PAVING

Of Salisbury Should Receive Deliberate And Thorough Consideration. Bid Too High.

There is no question but what the bids recently received by the council for the paving of the streets as per their advertisement were a disappointment to many here on account of the price bid. When the reduced freight rate, the fall in price in stone, and the decrease of the price of labor is considered the bid for Bitulithic at $2.50 per cubic yard cannot be considered as enough reduction over the old bid of $2.65 which was rejected by the previous council. It is said that over 90 per cent of the substance used in Bitulithic pavement is composed of stone leaving only a small per cent for their special process. This process is controlled by a syndicate and if this kind of pavement is desired there is but one thing to do and that is to pay their prices, which seems to be based only on what their competitors bid for other material judged to be nearest to it in durability and desirability.

While almost all recognize the merits of a pavement of Bitulithic or brick it has been a grave question in the minds of many whether or not a town of the size and resources of Salisbury can afford a pavement of this class especially in face of the last bid. Everybody has to regulate their expenditures by their incomes and what is true of the individual is also true of our municipality.

A bonded indebtedness of $50,000 is to be placed against this city, and this will mean that the limit of indebtedness for improvements has been reached for some time—in other words but little more money outside the regular income can be appropriated for improvements—streets or otherwise, and for this indebtedness we are going to improve only a very limited part of our streets when compared with the total mileage of the city in streets. It is true enough that the streets to be improved are the ones the most used in town, but then the expense of buying shells and other improvements for the rest of the town can not for a moment be supposed to stop. The other parts of the town are helping to pay the taxes and are helping to bear the burden of the bond issues, and are entitled to have their streets looked after, it will mean the checking of shell buying only on the streets improved by bricks or macadam as the case may be, which is a very limited distance as compared with the total.

While we have the highest opinion as to the importance of our city and confidence in its continued growth, we are still fully aware that we are not living in New York City and also that the traffic along our streets as compared with the traffic on larger places is much smaller. The kind of pavement that it is necessary both from a standpoint of economy as well as that of usefulness for our larger cities might not be necessary for a city the size of Salisbury, and those pavements, the use of which would be folly for Baltimore or New York City, yet might fully meet our requirements. In other words has the use of Macadam put down in the proper way received the attention and consideration at the hands of our Council to which it is entitled?

The question as to the desirability of the two kinds of pavements, Bitulithic and macadam, at the same price is not the only question involved but the question of income enters in as well. When the two are compared as to durability and general desirability there can be no doubt as to the choice and almost every one would take the bitulithic, but when we consider the difference in cost between the two and the extent of our means it causes grave doubts to enter into our minds as to whether or not we can afford a pavement that costs $2.50 per cubic yard. The advertiser does not wish to be understood as opposing street improvements, neither is it proposing the use of bitulithic or pavements of a similar class but simply wishes to call attention to the very small proportion of our street we will be able to pave with material as expensive as this. The editors are owners of property on one of the streets proposed to be improved and will state that as far as the personal cost to them—either in the way of assessment when the street is built or in taxes afterwards, they would prefer the bitulithic, but when the matter comes up for the best interest of the city grave doubts as to the wisdom of paving with bitulithic—especially at the price bid, arises.

We believe the council should slow and give the matter careful deliberation before awarding the contract at the bid offered.

That no mistake was made in paving the streets now paved or those proposed to be paved over Division streets extended, leading over Hungreys' dam or that of Main Street from Dock with a good substantial brick will be acknowledged by all, but the question of our purely residential streets is a different one.

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES

Had Busy Commencement Week From Monday To Thursday. Large Interest Shown In The Exercises.

This week has been the week of weeks to the graduates of the Salisbury High School. The goal for which they have been striving for years has finally been reached, and they are now turned out into the world to find ambitions and to perform other duties. A matter of congratulation to the class graduated this year is that all have succeeded in winning the coveted diploma and none left at the last minute to mourn and throw a damper on their associates and fellow class mates. The graduates and all those who took a part in the various exercises of commencement week are to be congratulated on the way they took their part, and they finally leave the school with the best wishes of those who have been associated with them in the school room during the past years, with the best wishes of their teachers who have faithfully tried to train their minds and better their morals, and with the good will of the community at large.

Who does not like and love the young graduate, whose soaring ambitions know no limit, to whom life is as yet a beautiful dream where disappointments, vexations and despair has never yet crept in, to whom the world is a battlefield—true enough—but a battlefield upon which they already do see themselves as conquerors and leaders? Each commencement year recalls to those who have been on life's firing line the bright dreams of the past, too seldom, 'tis true, ever, even in part, realized, yet we are none the worse for having had them and their remembrance keeps us in close touch with those to whom they are not dreams of the past but bright realities, which await but time alone to demonstrate to the cynical world their truth. It may be true as said that "the fairest dreams and the deepest longing never yet added an inch to the stature of a human soul," but they are pleasant and are essential to the things which do count "trying, striving and acting" for they give the impulse in the right direction and without dreaming and longing the "trying, striving and acting" would never come. The graduates of this year are as follows:

Misses Ruth Bennett, Mildred Collier, Mattie Oliver, Grace Harrington, Edna Morris, Inez Morris, Edna Parsons, Edna Peters, Pearl Phillips, Pearl Quillen, Amy Robertson, Laura Ruark, Edith Short, Isabelle Turpin, Emma Ward, Maudie Graham and Mr. John Morris.

The Baccalaureate sermon was preached in the Asbury M. E. Church, Sunday evening, by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Martindale, and was an eloquent discourse. A splendid musical program was rendered by the choir.

Class Day Exercises.

Monday evening the Class Day Exercises were held in the Uman Opera House, which was crowded to its full capacity. The program was as follows: Roll Call, Grace Harrington, Sec.; President's Address, Edith Short; Mook Salutation, Edna Morris; Suspense After Final Tests, Ruth Bennett; History, Isabelle Turpin; Piano Duet, Edith Short, Laura Ruark; Distribution of Presents, Mildred Collier; Recitation, "Lemon," Mattie Oliver; Observation of Members of Lower Grades, Inez Morris; Farewell to Books, Pearl Quillen; Passing Mantle to Class 1909, Emma Ward; Response, Hilda Aworth; '09; Good Will Song, Tenth Grade; Prophecy, Edna Parsons, Edna Peters, Maudie Graham; Farewell Song, Eleventh Grade.

Declamation-Recitation Contest.

Tuesday evening the Declamation-Recitation contest took place in the Assembly Hall, of the High School. The contestants for best recitation were Misses Katharine Toadvine, '10; Dorothy Mitchell, '10; Nancy White, '11; and Louise Gullett, '10; for the best declamation: Messrs. Fulton Allen, '10; Ralph Dykes, '11; Edward Johnson, '11; Everett Melson, '11; and Elmer Daehliel, '11.

Final Commencement Exercises.

Wednesday evening the final Commencement exercises were held in the Uman Opera House. Again the capacity of the house was taxed to accommodate the great crowd. The stage was beautifully decorated with flowers and potted plants, and the class colors were prominent in the decoration of the stage and around the galleries. Musical selections were rendered by an orchestra. The Salutatory was delivered by Miss Amy Robertson; the valedictory by Miss Amy Robertson; an essay was read by Miss Laura Ruark. The address to the graduates was delivered by Mr. Rufus E. Wood, of Sparrows Point, Md. County Superintendent Bennett conferred the diplomas.

The honors of class go to first and second in rank. Miss Amy Robertson

PRIZE FIGHTING

Or Box Bouts To Be Discontinued In Salisbury. Rounds On Wednesday Night.

Salisbury witnessed another disgraceful sight when John Smith of Baltimore and Kid Clark of the same city met in the ring Wednesday evening in the so called boxing contest under the auspices of the Star Boxing Club of this city.

This contest could not certainly be called an innocent amusement in which the participants were merely showing the scientific side of boxing. It resulted in the third round in the knocking out of Kid Clark by a hard blow delivered on the face and discussion of it nearly precipitated a riot afterward by the followers of the principals. It is believed that the arrest of Mr. Smith, the father of the successful boxer by Policeman Woodland Disharoon at an opportune moment alone prevented serious trouble. Mr. Smith was taken before City Justice Treadwell and fined.

It is understood that notice has been served upon the managers of the Boxing club that they will be held responsible for any future scenes such as occurred Wednesday evening. It is to be hoped that this will put a stop to boxing contests or prize-fighting in Salisbury. After the disgraceful scenes of Wednesday night and the brutal exhibition of this "Boxing" contest, it is hard to see how the respectable citizens of our town will any longer stand for sport of this kind. Prof. Richardson who has had charge of these contests is considered a clean gentlemanly fellow and it is understood that he regrets and deplores the occurrences of the evening as much as anyone and it is hoped that he will see that sport of this kind is not suited to the majority of Salisbury people.

WICOMICO DEMOCRACY

And Today's Primaries. WM The Voters Speak For Themselves.

It was a glorious day for the Democracy of Wicomico, when at the election of 1900, William Jennings Bryan received the largest vote ever given to any man, except one, Governor Smith in 1896, his vote exceeding Bryan's by nineteen votes.

Bryan's vote was the attribute of the man and not purchaser, the people believed in him, in his form of character, in his honesty of purpose, and voted as they believed.

Do you want to vote for him again, if so, you have that right. It is true that if the newspapers are right there is no need of any primaries or convention in Maryland, for a few men in Baltimore have assumed the power of the convention and said who shall go to Denver, and how. "On what flesh have our Oceans fed that they have grown so great." The Democrats of some parts of Maryland may be in leading strings and wear a collar, but those of Wicomico think and act for themselves.

They may be for or against the nomination of Bryan, as they think best, but it is certain that whichever way they may be, they are opposed to one or two men setting themselves up as, and holding themselves out as the democratic party. They hold their vote as their own and acknowledge the right of no man to speak for them believing they have the right to speak for themselves.

Wicomico's primaries will be held today, the 30th, at the usual place in each district, at two o'clock P. M. There you will have the chance to speak, will you speak for yourselves, or let your self constituted owners speak for you? GEO. W. BELL.

was first, so delivered the valedictory. Mr. John Morris ranks second, but on account of illness was unable to deliver the salutatory, so the class chose Miss Pearl Phillips to deliver it. Miss Laura Ruark, essayist, was selected by the Faculty.

Junior-Senior Reception.

The reception by the Junior-Senior Classes was given in the Assembly Hall of the High School Thursday evening. Provisions were made for entertainment of 200 at the reception. Miss Mary Butcher, '09 and Mr. Walter Allen, '09 had general supervision of the affair. The reception committee were the Faculty, the Misses Mildred Collier, Inez Morris and Emma Ward from Senior Class; the Misses Marian Evans, Dicie Hunt, Maudie Hastings, and Mr. Ralph Dickey from Junior Class.

Never Without Pe-ru-na in My House

So Writes Mr. C. G. Convers, Hot Springs, Arkansas.

There Are a Multitude of People in the United States Who Have Been Restored to Health By the Use of Pe-ru-na.

There are a multitude of people in the United States who have been restored to health by the use of Pe-ru-na. There is no use trying to deny this fact. As a rule, doctors dislike to admit it. There is now and then a courageous doctor who does admit it, however. In such cases Pe-ru-na is prescribed by the doctor himself. Even though the doctor suffers pecuniary loss by such a transaction his patient is benefited, which ought to be the doctor's chief concern.

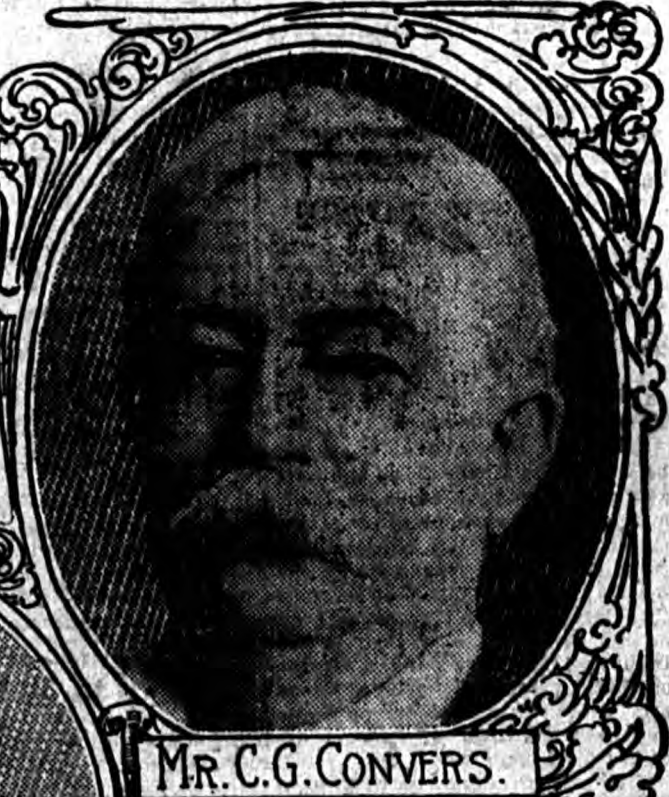

We do not claim that doctors generally prescribe Pe-ru-na. But we do claim whenever Pe-ru-na is intelligently prescribed it rarely disappoints either the doctor or patient.

MR. JAMES P. DRACKEN.

Best Catarrh and Indigestion.
Mr. James P. Dracken, 616 Tenth Ave., New York City, N. Y., has occupied the office of Water Inspector of New York City for the past fifteen years. He carries on an extensive plumbing business at 610 10th Ave. He is Post Deputy of Grand Knights of Betsala Oella Council Knights of Columbus, N. Y. He writes as follows:
"For nearly a dozen years catarrh has bothered me in one form or another. I was troubled with nasal catarrh that had affected my stomach, which troubled me most in the morning. My appetite was poor, and I did not seem to relish my food. Indigestion bothered me at times, also. I was advised to take Pe-ru-na, and I took it as prescribed for a month when my cure was almost complete. Today there is not a trace of catarrh in my system, and I can say without hesitation that Pe-ru-na cured me."

Kidney Disease.
Mr. Samuel A. Paxson, 1118 Troost Ave., Kansas City, Mo., member I. O. O. F. and National Amenity Association, writes:
"I am a well man today, thanks to your splendid medicine, Pe-ru-na. I was troubled with catarrh and kidney disease of long standing when I first began using Pe-ru-na. I soon found I was getting better, and continued taking it for four months. It cleaned out the system, leaving me well and strong and feeling better than I have in years."

MR. C. G. CONVERS.

Colds and Stomach Trouble.
Mr. C. G. Convers, Pres. Cold Storage Ice and Coal Co., Hot Springs, Ark., writes:
"I had been troubled with a very serious case of catarrh for a number of years. Having tried many prescriptions by good physicians, I found myself no better.
"On the advice of a friend who had used Pe-ru-na with good results I purchased a bottle. The results were so good that I continued using it. Have, perhaps, in the last three years used a dozen bottles, which have kept me from the trying troubles of catarrh. I am never without a bottle of Pe-ru-na in my house.
"One always gets relief from colds and indigestion if you have Pe-ru-na."

Internal Catarrh.

Mr. Michael Rooney, 24 Fifth St., Watervliet, N. Y., writes:
"I had known of Pe-ru-na years ago I should have been saved much suffering. Under carelessness and exposure in my younger years my system got into a very bad condition before I was aware of it.
"My doctor thought that I had catarrh of the bladder and daily prescribed for me, but nothing did me any good.
"My friends advised me to try Pe-ru-na, for which I am very thankful, as it has cured me in two months, and I am in perfect health."

Catarrh of the Head and Stomach.

Mr. Frank Richter, of 50 East 2nd St., Winona, Minn., writes:
"I take pleasure in recommending Pe-ru-na for catarrh of the stomach. Pe-ru-na cured me, and I know it will cure any one else who suffers from this disease. My catarrh was principally located in my head and stomach. I tried many remedies without success. I read of Pe-ru-na in the papers, and I've been cured."

The Naked Diver and His Three Minute Plunge Replaced by the Diving Suit Man, Who Spends Hours on the Sea's Bottom—Fishing in Australian Waters.

The era of naked divers exposed to peril from sharks has passed away. Modern progress equips the diver with a suit of india rubber, copper breastplate, with leaden weights back and front; helmet, glass pannelled and with telephonic attachments; air pipe life lines and a submarine searchlight. Thus equipped the pearl diver may spend six or eight hours at the bottom of the sea, whereas in olden times three minutes made a record.

Although pearls are found in nearly all molluscs and even in univalves, like the Australian halloia, a kind of barnacle, true pearls are produced only by the pearl oyster or mother of pearl shell. The latter is really sea diver's bread and butter. The shells are as big as dinner plates and weigh two pounds when cleaned. They fetch from $500 to $750 a ton.

The ancient fisheries, were chiefly in the Indian Ocean and Persian Gulf, but nowadays the best pearls come from Ceylon and from Australian waters, especially Torres Straits. Pearl fishing in Ceylon is a Government monopoly. In March the fleet starts for the pearling grounds, each vessel with twenty or thirty divers and their assistants. But you will find the headquarters of pearling in the desolate country extending from Exmouth Gulf to King Sound, in Western Australia.

Chinese and Malays as well as tribes of native black fellows are there today, but the old nude divers, the reign of terror and piracy when a large haul was made—these and similar conditions have passed away, giving place to fleets of luggers carrying modern diving outfits and representing the person of the master pearler. Here is 600 miles of coast line, with perhaps 5,000 hardy adventurers engaged in the pearl trade.

There are some thousands of Japanese, Malaysians, Malays and men of other races acting chiefly as crews for the vessels. The vessels are schooner rigged and from seven to fourteen tons burden. Each carries a master diver and a crew of four, one of whom is the diver's assistant and works the air pump.

The shells are found on ledges about ninety feet down in the sea, but they are far more plentiful at greater depths. Fortune awaits the inventor of a diving apparatus which will enable the diver to work in comfort a hundred fathoms down.

A good day's work is anything more than 200 pairs of shells. The business is absolutely speculative. One diver may gather ton after ton of shells without securing anything of greater value than a few seed pearls, while another may take a fortune out of a day's gathering.

The most famous pearl discovered in Australia of late years is known as the Southern Cross. It consists of a cluster of nine pearls in the shape of a cross. This freak of nature was picked up at low water on the Laclede Island by a beachcomber named Clark, who after burying it for some time for superstitious reasons sold it for $60; later it fetched $60,000.

The worst enemy the Australian pearl divers have are the storms that visit the coast. As to sharks they rarely attack a diver in modern dress, and he can always frighten them off when they persist in following him by letting a few air bubbles out of his dress. Other enemies are the sea snakes, the smaller octopus, the stingray and the blowfish.

After a day's take of shell has been conveyed ashore the shell openers get to work at once. The pay of the men is $30 a month, plus 10 per cent on the value of the pearls found. Some idea of the magnitude of the industry may be obtained on learning that last year 520 luggers paid an annual $5 license to engage in the trade and they took many thousands of tons of shell; while as to the pearls themselves, the customs duties in the pearl town of Broome exceeded $5,000 a month.

The treasury authorities of western Australia estimate they receive at least $100,000 a year in dues from the pearlers. Hardly a month passes without the discovery of "handprints of the ocean" having a market value of from $5,000 to $15,000 each. A beautiful pink pear shaped specimen weighing 308 grains was found last season and sold for $30,000.

Before setting pearls are classified according to size on a setting board, and the delicate work of drilling a hole in an old fashioned hand apparatus. However no matter how valuable a set of pearls may be they are invariably strung on fine silk thread.

Prince Adelbert.

Prince Adelbert, the sailor son of Emperor William of Germany, is 24 years old, still heart true and regarded by many as occupying a particularly warm place in the affections of his parents, perhaps because his service at sea has taken him so much away from them. He has been all over the world, and everywhere has made friends. His disposition is of the sunniest character, and, somewhat at variance, he is just the lad to all the role of hero in a romance.

Heathen Temple in New York.

A Temple of Confucius is to be erected in New York city if the Chinese residents succeed in raising the large amount of money needed.

Minister Wu Ting Fang spoke at the first meeting held for the purpose. He spoke in Chinese to a large audience of his countrymen. Later he said in English: "We want our people to cleave to Confucianism in the United States and we want to establish a Confucian church in this city. Confucianism is deeply rooted in China. But don't be afraid; we are a negative people and will not try to convert you." He added, rather bitterly, "We preach our golden rule instead of forcing it on one; we don't send battalions to force it on you."

Confucianism is a very ancient religion or more properly a system of conduct, founded on the sayings of Confucius, a Chinese sage who lived about 550 years ago. It is the prevailing religion of China, or takes the place of religion.

Big Run of Fish.

Old and experienced fishermen say that such a day's fishing as Wednesday, May 20th, was never before known on the Chesapeake. Nearly every steamer in the fleet loaded and possibly all would have loaded had not some meet with accidents to their nets. Two or three fishermen encircled such masses of fish that they could not be raised and suffered heavy losses to nets besides losing any quantity of fish. Bellows and Squires' boats caught nearly 300,000,000—Virginia Citizens.

ITCHING ECZEMA
FIFTY-FIVE YEARS

Suffered Torments from Birth — Boils Formed as Big as Walnuts — In Frightful Condition and Could Hardly Work — Tried All Kinds of Remedies to No Avail — At Last

WHOLLY CURED IN 8 MONTHS BY CUTICURA

"I had an itching, tormenting eczema ever since I came into the world, and I am now a man fifty-five years old. I tried all kinds of medicines I heard of, but found no relief. I was truly in a frightful condition. At last my blood was so bad that I broke out all over with red and white boils, which kept growing until they were as big as walnuts, causing great pain and misery. I thought they would take the skin off my whole body, but I kept on scratching as well as I could. I was so run down that I could hardly do my work. Mr. Nelson R. Burnett recommended the use of Cuticura Remedies, telling me he was confident they would benefit me, and in time, cure me. I used the Cuticura Soap, Ointment, Resolvent, and Pills for about eight months, and I can truthfully say I am cured. I cordially recommend Cuticura Remedies to all who are afflicted the same as I was, believing that, if they will use them according to directions, they will find them as good as a new skin. For one doubting the truth of the above can write to Mr. Burnett, who will cheerfully vouch for my statements."

"Rale Bondwell, R. D. 3, Cedar Corners, Tipton, Ia., Aug. 17, 1907."

"I cheerfully endorse the above testimonial. It is the truth. I know Mr. Bondwell and know the condition he was in. He never tired of praising the Cuticura Remedies."

"Nelson R. Burnett, Tipton, Ia."

Gentle anointings with Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, preceded by warm baths with Cuticura Soap, followed in the severer forms, with mild doses of Cuticura Resolvent Pills, afford instant relief, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure of torturing, disgusting, itching, burning, and scaly humors, eczema, rashes, and inflammations, from infancy to old age.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree of divorce, Vincello, matrimonial, from Alice M. Hancock, of Worcester County, Maryland, from her husband, Thomas A. Hancock, whose place of residence is to your orator's knowledge. The bill states that on or about the 20th day of July, 1900, the said Alice M. Hancock was married to her said husband and resided in Worcester County, Maryland as husband and wife, until March 1902, when he abandoned and deserted her, and since said desertion has had no permanent place of residence; that though her conduct toward him was kind, affectionate and above reproach, yet he abandoned and deserted her, deliberately and finally, and that said separation has continued uninterrupted for a period of more than three years, and is beyond any reasonable hope of reconciliation; and prays for a divorce, a permanent matrimonial custody of the child and such other and further relief as her case may require. It is thereupon this 1st day of May, 1908, ordered by the Circuit Court for Worcester County, Maryland, in equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in a newspaper published in Worcester County, Maryland, once in each of four successive weeks before the 1st day of June 1908 give notice to the said defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear, either in person or by solicitor, in said Court on or before the 1st day of June next, to show cause why there be, why a decree should not be passed as prayed. Filed May 1, 1908. OMAR F. HOLLAND, Clerk.

OPPOSITION TO PLEDGED DELEGATES.

The way in which some of the politicians of the county are fighting the nomination of Mr. Bryan for President, does not appeal to the American sense of fair play. The fight that has been made against him seems to be one of negative qualities only, and their efforts seem to be bent upon securing an unpledged delegation to the National Convention.

It is their claim that they are not opposed to Mr. Bryan but think it better to send a delegation with hands untied so when they arrive on the scene they will be in a position to decide what is best for the party.

This stand is all right in theory and if they were as unbiased as they claim to be would undoubtedly be the best plan to conduct our nominations—unless of course the communities which the delegates represent are not overwhelmingly in favor of some special candidate. But this claim of impartiality and desiring only to do what they consider to be for the best interest of their party does not fool many this year. The truth is the people who are fighting against a pledged delegation are at heart opposed to Mr. Bryan and they are asking for an unpledged delegation because they are well aware that the sentiment at home would compel an endorsement of him if instructed to all.

The fight against Mr. Bryan may therefore be called a gum shoe method of beating him, and the people can rest assured that the unpledged delegates to the St. Louis convention will not lose any chance of combining on some other man if there seems the least chance of nominating any one else. The majority ought to rule in our party affairs as well as in affairs of the nation, and in that case there would be but little doubt of Mr. Bryan's nomination.

It now looks as though the will of the majority will be carried out and Mr. Bryan nominated on the first ballot—but if any section of the county is in favor of Mr. Bryan the safest way is to instruct the home delegates for him, and not leave it in the hands of those who are opposing instruction—that is if they desire their wishes carried out at St. Louis.

WANTS CHIEF JUDGESHIP

Pattison, Of Dorchester, So Reported By Baltimore American, To Contest Home County Primaries.

"What is your immediate ambition in life?" This question was asked John R. Pattison, one of the leaders of the Dorchester county bar Wednesday, in the Democratic primaries in the county on Saturday last M. Pattison and his friends had everything their own way.

"I want the Democratic nomination for the chief judgeship of the First circuit," said Mr. Pattison. "Then you are a rival of Judge W. Laird Henry, of Dorchester who has been appointed chief judge of the circuit by Governor Crothers."

"I do not say that I am a rival of Judge Henry or of any other candidate who may be brought forward," said Mr. Pattison. "I have been put forward by my Democratic friends in Dorchester as a candidate for nomination for chief judgeship of the First circuit, and for that nomination I am willing to stand. I am willing to submit my candidacy next year, when a chief judge is to be elected to the Democratic of Dorchester county. I am willing to adopt the Crawford county system of direct voting in order that the people may determine whom they may prefer for judge."

No Combinations.

"In view of the fact that Dorchester county has five votes in the coming judicial convention, while Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester, the other three counties of the circuit, have only four votes each, it is apparent that Dorchester by combination with Wicomico or Somerset could control the judicial convention.

"Of course, such a result is possible. I am not, however, making combinations with other counties of the circuit. I do not believe in the interference of politics and political combinations in honest efforts to secure a party nomination for the judgeship."

"Suppose the Democratic nomination for Congress in the First district should be bestowed upon you. Would you be willing to accept this nomination and step aside as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for chief judge of the circuit, thus paving the way for the nomination of Judge W. Laird Henry, who has already been named by Governor Crothers?"

"No," said Mr. Pattison. "I have no ambition to go to Congress. My ambition is to be judge."

Covington For Congress.

Mr. Pattison was speaking by the book, for it is generally understood on the Eastern Shore that J. Harry Covington, of Talbot County, will be nominated for Congress by Eastern Shore Democrats at the district convention which will meet at Ocean City on July 23. Mr. Covington was the winner in the Democratic primaries in Talbot county last Saturday. He beat a combination headed by former State Comptroller J. Frank Turner and Joseph B. Seth, president of the state Senate. Mr. Covington had a conference at Easton last night with Governor Crothers. Mr. Turner and General Seth are not in an amicable frame of mind after their overthrow in Talbot. The suggestion has been made that Mr. Pattison, of Dorchester, be nominated for Congress in the First district, thus ridding the field of a formidable competitor of Judge Henry for the chief judgeship.

"But," said Mr. Pattison, "I am not a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress. I am a candidate for the Democratic nomination for chief judge of the First circuit."

"Then you will not be switched by the offer of the Democratic nomination for Congress?"

"No. I do not want to go to Congress. I want to be a judge—a position for which my friends have put me forward."

Thus there is a closely defined fight in Dorchester, a contest for the control of the county delegation to the Democratic political convention which will be held a year hence, and which will be composed of delegates from Dorchester, Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset counties. If Mr. Pattison wins in the judicial primaries in his county in a contest against Judge Henry, he will come pretty near landing the nomination for chief judge.

These primaries are more than a year in the future, and to an outsider it looks as though Judge Henry ought in the meantime to win his way in the county.

Although considered an independent in politics, Democrats of Talbot county found it advisable to support Judge Adkins for nomination for Judge after he had been appointed to a vacancy by Governor Warfield. The Democratic organization of the county declared that it would line up against Judge Adkins, and would support J. Henry Covington for the nomination. When the crucial moment arrived, however, Talbot supported Judge Adkins.

History may repeat itself in Dorchester county next year.

FOR BETTER ROADS

On The Eastern Shore. A Route Down The Peninsula Selected. From Cecil To Worcester, Will Cost Over A Million.

Governor Crothers and members of the State Road Commission visited the Eastern Shore on a trip of inspection, this week, of the highways. This trip began at Elkton on Monday, and extended from Elkton to Chester, to Centerville, to Denton, to Easton, and thence by the state steamer, to Cambridge, where this week's itinerary ended. After a brief trip through Western and Upper Southern Maryland the Governor and the Roads Commission will visit in the Lower Eastern Shore, and will complete the selection of highways to be improved, the main arteries to extend from Conowingo, Cecil county, to Crisfield, Somerset county, and to Pocomoke City, Worcester county.

Route Decided Upon.

Here is the route to be improved at a cost of about $1,500,000 and to extend from the upper part of the peninsula to the Nantuxco River.

Beginning at Conowingo, Cecil county, and extending through Rising Sun, Blue Ball, Cherry Hill to Elkton. From Elkton to Chesapeake City to Cecilton to Fredericktown.

From Georgetown, Kent county to Galena, to Kennedyville, to Chester, to Fairlee, toward Rock Hall via Sandy Bottom.

Also from Chestertown via Church Hill to Centerville, to Wye Mills, on the Talbot county line.

From Centerville to the Caroline county line via Ruthsburg.

From Wye Mills to Easton, to Trappe, via Stamptown.

From Easton to Royal Oak toward St. Michaels.

Also from Easton to Dover Bridge.

From the Queen Anne county line—that is, the end of the Ruthsburg road—by way of Greensboro, to Denton, to American Corner, to Federalsburg.

From Dover Bridge to Dorchester county line via Preston.

From Federalsburg via Harlock to East New Market, to Vienna.

From Vienna the line, it is said, will proceed eastward through Mardela Springs to Salisbury.

Thus, one third of the public roads of the state to be improved have been selected.

Program For Two Weeks.

The following is the itinerary of Governor Crothers and of the Roads Commission for the next two weeks, as far as agreed upon.

Tuesday, June 2—Begin at Rockville for a tour of Montgomery county.

Wednesday, June 3—Meeting at Oakland, Garrett county, at 8.30 a. m.; at Cumberland in the evening.

Thursday, June 4—Hagerstown.

Friday, June 5—Frederick.

The visit to Frederick will complete the Western Maryland tour.

On June 12 a meeting will be held at Annapolis, and on the 15th of June a tour of the lower Eastern Shore will begin at Snow Hill. Visits will be paid to Berlin, Salisbury, Princess Anne, Crisfield and Pocomoke City.

Upon their return to Annapolis Governor Crothers and the members of the Good Roads Commission expressed themselves as greatly satisfied with their trip down the Peninsula—a trip which, they said, will mark a epoch in Maryland history, since it will mean the beginning of a system of public road improvement which will require the expenditure of more than a million and a quarter of dollars, and which will bring the whole Eastern Shore into quick communication with Baltimore by the improved roads.

Governor Crothers and his companions were especially gratified at the absence of politics at the several meetings. Republicans and Democrats vied with each other in their efforts to secure the building of good roads, which will benefit the greatest number of persons.

The meetings began at Easton where the visitors were somewhat handicapped by the fact that the county court was in session. The court attracted many farmers and others who would have attended the meeting in the Opera House. That meeting was, however, a notable one.

Governor Crothers made a preliminary statement. He said:

Value Of Good Road.

The legislature has provided a bond issue of $5,000,000, $1,000,000 of which goes to Baltimore. Even if Baltimore did not get a dollar the city would be benefited. However, this is not a question of cities and counties.

"We have selected a roads commission which will look to the good of the whole state and which will arise above local considerations and influences. Our main object is to improve the great natural highways. We do not want the farmers to be shut in six or seven months of each year because of bad roads. We want the farmers to carry on their work all the year around. They can do this only by all the year around employment.

"Good roads build up the community. They attract the attention of good citizens and of capital from other states. They help the public schools. They help the physician hurrying to a sick bed. Good roads may mean the saving of a life. They help the commercial travelers from the cities. They help those who seek pleasure and health on our highways. It is time the work has begun, and let us begin the work at once!" Applause.

The summer resident looked curiously at Perry Jones, the sexton of the Lanebury meeting homes, as she finished her survey of the little church. "You say it seats 306 people," she said, raising her longnet to gaze at him. "What a curious number."

"I don't see why 'tis," replied Mr. Jones. Remotement at her tone was coupled with irritation at her calm survey of him through her impermanent eyeglasses as he stared at her. "Strikes me its a very sensible number. Three hundred is the body of the church, four in the choir, one on the organ bench and a camp stool for Miss Commis. Perhaps down your way you'd think he ought to stand all the time, being only a boy, but folks see things different in the country."—Youth's Companion.

has bought the large brick warehouse on Main street formerly used as a harness store, and will cover the entire lot, 50x210 feet, with a two-story brick and iron building. I am selling two carloads of Buggies, Wagons and Runabouts each week. Think for yourself what a saving this means to you! I have kept the prices down for seven years and increased the quality all the time. There has been NO advance in the price of Buggies, as I buy large each year, and the manufacturers are figuring their prices down to get my business.

I SELL OVER FIFTY DOCTORS WRENN BUGGIES.

One doctor telephoned and asked me if I would let the prodigal son return. He said: "I bought a buggy from another place last year and am not satisfied. I want another Wrenn like the last one you sold me." We have very few sons to stay away, but they are just like the doctor—they come back and are always walking advertisements for us.

The Printer's Mistake

"It's no use, Edna, the Lord never meant me to be happy in this world. I'll have to take what I can get and be thankful."

The two girls were directly opposite types. Eleanor was tall, graceful, high strung, nervous, full of life and energy. Her most attractive features were her eyes, dark and deep set, with a longing, unsatisfied expression. Edna was of a type, much less interesting, cold, phlegmatic and clear sighted, a much smaller woman, too, with colorless gray eyes.

On the bed lay lingerie of the most alluring kind, the sort of things that women can appreciate. Pile upon pile of lacy stuffs were scattered about the room. Surrounded by these pretty things that women love sat Eleanor Godfrey, who to-morrow would be the bride of Tom Grant.

"There's one thing I can never regret," she said. "I told Tom everything before he took me. It was brutally frank, I admit, to tell your future husband that the best love of your life had been given to another."

"Poor boy!" murmured Edna.

"Poor boy, indeed. Don't I have to live with him? Don't I have to see him waste his life? And is it nothing that I have to, eke out an existence, crushing down my sighs, forcing back my tears?"

Walking across the room to where Edna sat, she put her hands upon a pair of very unsympathetic shoulders.

"How can you judge? You do not know the case. Now, listen. Every breath I breathe, every prayer I utter, every breath of my aching heart is for Jack Winston. I've loved him ever since I was a little girl, but you see I could not very well marry him because he never asked me."

"Then, too, Jack is poor, and all my life I've been longing for things that Tom Grant's money will buy for me. I don't deceive him. I said I didn't love him; but he, still knowing this, wants to marry me, and I accepted. Now judge me if you will."

Edna straightened up a bit and the lines about her mouth seemed to grow deeper in an instant.

"One question, please, before I render the verdict. You take upon your soul the wrecking of this man's existence. You will risk the honor from the flower of his life and leave him nothing but the stem. This is easier for you than being an old maid. Then, too, supposing that Tom was in love with some other girl."

"I plead guilty to the charge, Judge, and accept the sentence of the court. Your logic is getting stale; so let's go to bed that I may get my beauty sleep and make a handsome bride. Think of it, dear girl, to-morrow at this hour my visiting cards will read, 'Mrs. Thomas Kemp Grant.'"

The next morning was colorless, the air heavy; in fact, just the sort of a day to make a bride look out of the window and wonder if she really were superstitious.

It was nine o'clock, and Tom was whistling one minute, and singing the next. He walked into the bedroom where his friend and best man lay peacefully sleeping.

"Get up you lazy vagabond, we can't keep the bride waiting for you. That's her privilege."

The best man rubbed his eyes, groined a bit, and finally crawled out.

Tom was practically ready. After working about an hour on it, he managed to arrange his white puff tie to his entire satisfaction. He had buttoned and unbuttoned his waistcoat until his thumbs were blistered. He had pulled it down in front and buckled it at the back until the seams threatened to give way.

By eleven the men were already on their way to the house. As they neared it Tom became more and more nervous. There seemed to be a weight on his heart that he could not lift. At that moment the best man was hanging out of the cab window cursing the driving for the snail-like pace they were pursuing.

"I say, caddy, this is a wedding that we are going to, not a funeral. I'll give you an extra dollar if you hurry."

"An extra dollar, is it? You talk like a politician. Well, sir, you might corrupt me, but the horse can't be bribed; at weddings or funerals, his gait is always the same. Rest easy while you can, sir—the lady will drive you fast enough, once she gets the reins."

The best man was about to rail at the Irish as a nation, when Tom said: "If anything should happen—"

"Jumping Tom! Tom, brace up! You look as if you had carriage of the dead. Pull yourself together."

"You? Any girl who had such a deep looking object as you on her side (list would be ostracized by society, and one who would marry you would be declared mentally incompetent."

"All right. I'll pull up, but I've a terrifying idea that something is going wrong. Jack, old man, I can't do it. I'm in love with Edna Cross and not with Eleanor. I've just begun to realize it."

"You old poacher, then why did you ask Eleanor to marry you, when you knew that I have loved her all my life, and have been trying to forget her for months. Night after night I went over and sat with Edna, trying to make myself think I was forgetting Eleanor."

"And every night," said Tom, "I went to see Eleanor because you were over at Edna's and I had no right to trespass on your preserves. A nice mess we've made of it. What are we going to do?"

"Do? Why that's easy enough," assured Jack. "I'm going to be the bridegroom and you can just shift back into my boots as the best man. We'll blame the whole thing on the printer. Trust me, old man, I said I'd see you through this ordeal and I'm going to keep my word."

As the cab finally reached the house the men stepped out and were ushered into the room where the minister was waiting for them. No word of explanation was uttered, and the men took their places by the minister, who was to pronounce them man and wife.

The wedding march was played, and as Eleanor in her gorgeous robe, came forth to meet the man of her choice, Jack Winston stepped forward and offered her his arm.

"The best man was hanging out of the cab window—less, but too happy to resent, and before the gaping crowd the minister tied the knot and made them one 'till death do them part.'"

Then Jack began his explanations: "Simplest thing in the world," he said. "You see, Tom ordered the invitations, and, of course, the printer took it for granted that it was his wedding—merely a typographical error, nothing more."

Eleanor's mother stepped in at this moment, and with a haughty manner inquired:

"Then, may I ask why Tom gave the bachelor dinner—why Tom bought the ring?"

"Yes, mother," said Jack, with a proprietary manner, "you see, I was broke at the time, and Tom, as you all know, is just loaded with money, so I gave him carte blanche to go ahead as if it was his own wedding, and I'd pay him back in good time. You see, I only came into my inheritance yesterday, and that would have been too late to order invitations, give dinners, etc. Any way, how could you ever think that Tom was going to marry Eleanor? Why, he's engaged to marry Edna, and if you don't believe me, ask them for yourself. I tell you it was a typographical error, nothing more."

The color that suffused Edna's face and the smile that glorified Jack's verified the statement, and the guests were in a flutter of pleasurable excitement, while in the corner Jack was shaking Tom by the hand and saying:

"Didn't I tell you I'd see you through it, old man?"

Royal Remains on View.
For centuries past deceased English royalties have not been exhibited in public as they used to be in days when it was deemed advisable to place a sovereign body on view, so that people could see that death had actually taken place. The sight satisfied a good many folk and also furnished security to the successor that the predecessor had already departed. More than once the body of a king who had died under suspicious circumstances was laid out in some great church, as St. Paul's Cathedral at Westminster Abbey, with the face exposed or bare from the waist upward, to allay any doubts which might have arisen as to the cause of death. Once entombed though, the royal corpse was left in peace, save when the necessity of removal or some accidental disturbance allowed a privileged few to look at it.—Modern Society.

Cactus Leaves and Mosquitoes.
Cactus leaves may be used instead of oil for the extermination of mosquitoes, writes Consul Bishop of Palermo, Italy. They are now being used in Africa for the purpose. The leaves are pounded into a thin but sticky paste and this is spread upon the surface of the stagnant pools. It acts as oil does by forming a layer through which the mosquito larva cannot pass to obtain air, and asphyxiation results.

Luminous Owls.
That owls were seen who threw out a bright yellow light is now proved. Nevertheless, we do not believe that a capacity to show a light is generally possessed by an owl. If the phenomenon is ever scientifically explained we believe that it will appear that the light is an accompaniment of some peculiar disease.—Outlook.

Eighty Five Years Old Sen. Davis of West Virginia Has Reached That Age

Called "The Grand Old Man" of West Virginia by the People of the Mountain State—Has Knocked Dr. Osler's Chloroform Theory Galley-West.

Henry Gassaway Davis is proudly and affectionately called "The Grand Old Man" of West Virginia by the folk of the Mountain State. He is known personally to hundreds of them, and known of by every one of them.

In West Virginia they call him "Uncle Henry Gassaway," never taking the trouble to add the superfluity of his last name. "There is only one 'Uncle Henry Gassaway,'" so there is no use of going to the trouble of adding on the Davis, West Virginians are always interested in what their "Uncle Henry Gassaway" is saying and doing.

Senator Davis is 85 years of age, and has had more to do with knocking Dr. Osler's chloroform theory galley-west than any other specimen of robustness of age extent. He was born in Maryland, November 16, 1823, and the traditions of that good old State are still near and dear to him. He likes his chicken "a Maryland," and terrapin tickles his palate more pleasingly than any other article of gastronomic indulgence. Davis was born of poor parents, and school advantages were denied him, so he had to go to work very early in life. He worked in a store as a boy, then became an employee of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad as a brakeman. He worked at this for several years, and then was promoted to a conductor. He later on quit the railroad and embarked in the mercantile business with his brother, Thomas B. at Piedmont, W. Va. It was there that he laid the foundation of his great fortune, which is believed to amount to $30,000,000.

Senator Davis had early taken an interest in politics, and was elected a member of the House of Delegates in 1865. In 1867 he became a State Senator, and in 1871, he was elected a United States Senator. He was re-elected in 1877, which term he served out, but declined to stand as a candidate for a third term. His last official connection was a delegate to the Panama Congress. In 1894 he was nominated for Vice President on the ticket with Parker. He was very desirous of getting a good big vote in his State, and really hoped to carry it. But West Virginia gave the biggest Republican majority that year in its history. Roosevelt carrying the State by over thirty-one thousand.

"Uncle Henry Gassaway" has a palatial mansion, "Graceland," at Elkins. It tops one of the three stately hills which stand side by side, and on the other two hills are two other multi-millionaire palaces, one occupied by Senator Elkins and the other by Richard C. Kereens of Missouri. The Elkins residence looks for all the world like a feudal castle.

He is a powerfully built man, over 6 feet, walks with a sprightly, elastic step, and has solved the problem of never getting old, in the sense that most of 85 do.

Long Distance Balloon Record.
Many notable trips have been made in balloons. In 1849 Mr. Wise started from St. Louis and came down in Henderson county, New York, having made about eight hundred miles.

This stood as the world's long distance record until the Paris Exposition of 1900, when the Count de Zeppelin sailed over into Russia. His distance was about twelve hundred miles and he was in the air over thirty-six hours.

The present record for time was established by two German aeronauts. They succeeded in remaining in the air over fifty-one hours.

When the German Emperor attends a musical comedy he often composes two or three original jokes, which are handed from the royal box to the leading comedian for interpolation.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

On Alcohol Production.
In the early part of the last century, the problems of transportation constituted a powerful incentive to the production of spirits in Sweden. A principal article of production in the rural districts was potatoes. To ship the surplus crop of tubers two or three hundred miles overland by teams was manifestly impracticable. So the farmers adopted the general policy of distilling their surplus potatoes and shipping the "brandy" to the centers of population for sale. This policy grew until in 1831, there were more than 170,000 stills in rural Sweden. The introduction of railways throughout rural Sweden had much to do with settling this economic problem, though by no means were they the sole influence in the reform.

In the mountainous regions of the South, there exists a breed of men called "moonshiners." They are not inherently "bad men." Many of them are men of standing in their communities, workers in the mountain churches and who have the confidence of the communities in which they live.

The fact that they live far removed from railways or other means of transportation has much to do with their being "moonshiners." They cannot find a market for their surplus corn, owing to the natural difficulties of getting it to the market. So they have fallen into the practice of distilling their little surplus and sending the whisky to the market.

In the Southern States, the refuse of the sugar factories is now pure waste.

In seasons of unusual crops in potatoes, the price often drops far below the cost of production and often they are not dug at all. There is partial or total loss of the crop.

In the far West, the interior grades of corn find no market and total loss is only averted by using it to feed stock. In the true belt, the "culls" and "seconds" and "seconds" are marketed at a loss because there is no avenue open to consume such products on a remunerative basis. This portion of the fruit crop is more or less an economic loss.

The removal of the tax from alcohol, after it has been chemically treated under Government supervision so as to make it undrinkable, will solve this problem of waste of these products of the farm by providing an outlet for them for a useful purpose and at a reasonable price. The refuse of the farm at once becomes a valuable asset instead of a troublesome waste. Instead of shipping his surplus corn to the far markets and sending afar for his light and fuel, the farmer can market a considerable proportion of his surplus near to home, where it will be made up into alcohol for light and fuel for his own use.

It will result in a heavy increase in the production of alcohol, of course. This, under the old conditions, would be a cause for alarm. But science has provided methods for the treating of alcohol in such a manner that none but the most confirmed dipsomaniac can drink it or does drink it. This fact is not a theory, because, after sixty years trial with tax free alcohol treated in this way for industrial purposes, the temperance leaders of England unanimously declare that the policy has not been prejudicial to temperance interests in any way whatever. Such distinguished authorities as Lady Henry Somerset, Dr. Dawson Burns, Joseph Mallins, after a lifetime of actual observation, scout at the idea of this offensive tax free denatured alcohol being prejudicial to the temperance cause.

In France, Germany and Switzerland, where the largest use has been made of the tax free denatured alcohol legislation, the temperance leaders are even more enthusiastic over the results than in Britain. The continental temperance men are not only friendly, but to a man are earnest advocates of this legislation on account of the good results for temperance. It was this very law passed in Germany in 1888, that opened the door to advanced temperance legislation in the Fatherland. It did this by stripping the drink traffic of the industrial support and compelling it to stand alone, on its merits, and it had no merits. It removed the opposition of the powerful Agrarians, who were afraid that restriction on the liquor traffic would interfere with potato market, the source of much of the distilled spirits of that country.

In England, where there has been a boom in the use of industrial alcohol, there has been an accompanying radical decrease in the consumption of beverage spirits. This tendency has been continuous for half a dozen years. In Norway, where the statistics are closely and critically kept, the same tendency appears.

Society's Gain.
It has been demonstrated by statistics that the average gain to society for every wage-earner is $300 per annum. This average—less than a dollar a day—is produced by the lowered earning capacity of the beered, tobacco-poisoned, workman, demoralized by the fellowship of whisky.

If alcohol and beer will cut off the finger ends of bartenders and cut on their shoes, what will it do to a drinker's stomach.—California Searchlight.

OPPOSITION TO PLEDGED DELEGATES.

The way in which some of the politicians of the country are fighting the nomination of Mr. Bryan for the Democratic nomination for President, does not appeal to the American sense of fair play. The fight that has been made against him seems to be one of negative qualities only, and their efforts seem to be bent upon securing an unpledged delegation to the National Convention.

It is their claim that they are not opposed to Mr. Bryan but think it better to send a delegation with hands untied so when they arrive on the scene they will be in a position to decide what is best for the party.

This stand is all right in theory and if they were as unbiased as they claim to be would undoubtedly be the best plan to conduct our nominations—unless of course the communities which the delegates represent are not overwhelmingly in favor of some special candidate. But this claim of impartiality and desiring only to do what they consider to be for the best interest of their party does not fool many this year. The truth is the people who are fighting against a pledged delegation are at heart opposed to Mr. Bryan and they are asking for an unpledged delegation because they are well aware that the sentiment at home would compel an endorsement of him if instructed at all.

The fight against Mr. Bryan may therefore be called a gum shoe method of beating him, and the people can rest assured that the unpledged delegates to the St. Louis convention will not lose any chance of combining on some other man if there seems the least chance of nominating any one else. The majority ought to rule in our party affairs as well as in affairs of the nation, and in that case there would be but little doubt of Mr. Bryan's nomination.

It now looks as though the will of the majority will be carried out and Mr. Bryan nominated on the first ballot—but if any section of the country is in favor of Mr. Bryan the safest way is to instruct the home delegates for him, and not leave it in the hands of those who are opposing instruction—that is if they desire their wishes carried out at St. Louis.

WANTS CHIEF JUDGESHIP

Pattison, Of Dorchester, So Reported By Baltimore American, To Contest Home County Primaries.

"What is your immediate ambition in life?"

This question was asked John R. Pattison, one of the leaders of the Dorchester county bar Wednesday, in the Democratic primaries in the county on Saturday last. Mr. Pattison and his friends had everything their own way.

"I want the Democratic nomination for the chief judgeship of the First circuit," said Mr. Pattison.

"Then you are a rival of Judge W. Laird Henry, of Dorchester who has been appointed chief judge of the circuit by Governor Crothers." "I do not say that I am a rival of Judge Henry or of any other candidate who may be brought forward," said Mr. Pattison. "I have been put forward by my Democratic friends in Dorchester as a candidate for nomination for chief judgeship of the First circuit, and for that nomination I am willing to stand. I am willing to submit my candidacy next year, when a chief judge is to be elected to the Democrats of Dorchester county. I am willing to adopt the Crawford county system of direct voting in order that the people may determine whom they may prefer for judge."

No Combinations.
"In view of the fact that Dorchester county has five votes in the coming judicial convention, while Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester, the other three counties of the circuit, have only four votes each, it is apparent that Dorchester by combination with Wicomico or Somerset could control the judicial convention."

"Of course, such a result is possible. I am not, however, making combinations with other counties of the circuit. I do not believe in the interjection of politics and political combinations in honest efforts to secure a party nomination for the judgeship."

"Suppose the Democratic nomination for Congress in the First district should be bestowed upon you. Would you be willing to accept this nomination and step aside as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for chief judge of the circuit, thus paving the way for the nomination of Judge W. Laird Henry, who has already been named by Governor Crothers?" "No," said Mr. Pattison. "I have no ambition to go to Congress. My ambition is to be judge."

Covington For Congress.

Mr. Pattison was speaking by the book for it is generally understood on the Eastern Shore that J. Harry Covington, of Talbot County, will be nominated for Congress by Eastern Shore Democrats at the district convention which will meet at Ocean City on July 23. Mr. Covington was the winner in the Democratic primaries in Talbot county last Saturday. He beat a combination headed by former State Comptroller J. Frank Turner and Joseph B. Seth, president of the state Senate. Mr. Covington had a conference at Easton last night with Governor Crothers. Mr. Turner and General Seth are not in an amicable frame of mind after their overthrow in Talbot. The suggestion has been made that Mr. Pattison, of Dorchester, be nominated for Congress in the First district, thus ridding the field of a formidable competitor of Judge Henry for nomination for Chief Judge in the First circuit.

"But," said Mr. Pattison, "I am not a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress. I am a candidate for the Democratic nomination for chief judge of the First circuit."

"Then you will not be switched by the offer of the Democratic nomination for Congress?" "No. I do not want to go to Congress. I want to be a judge—a position for which my friends have put me forward."

Thus there is a closely defined fight in Dorchester, a contest for the control of the county delegation to the Democratic political convention which will be held a year hence, and which will be composed of delegates from Dorchester, Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset counties. If Mr. Pattison wins in the judicial primaries in his county in a contest against Judge Henry, he will come pretty near landing the nomination for chief judge.

These primaries are more than a year in the future, and to an outsider it looks as though Judge Henry ought in the meantime to win his way in the county.

Although considered an independent in politics, Democrats of Talbot county found it advisable to support Judge Adkins for nomination for Judge after he had been appointed to a vacancy by Governor Warfield. The Democratic organization of the county declared that it would line up against Judge Adkins, and would support J. Henry Covington for the nomination. When the critical moment arrived, however, Talbot supported Judge Adkins. History may repeat itself in Dorchester county next year.

FOR BETTER ROADS

On The Eastern Shore. A Route Down The Peninsula Selected. From Cecil To Worcester, Will Cost Over A Million.

Governor Crothers and members of the State Road Commission visited the Eastern Shore on a trip of inspection, this week, of the highways. This trip began at Elkton on Monday, and extended from Elkton to Chester, to Centerville, to Denton, to Easton, and thence by the state steamer, to Cambridge, where this week's itinerary ended. After a brief trip through Western and Upper Southern Maryland the Governor and the Roads Commission will visit in the Lower Eastern Shore, and will complete the selection of highways to be improved, the main arteries to extend from Conowingo, Cecil county, to Crisfield, Somerset county, and to Pocomoke City, Worcester county.

Route Decided Upon.

Here is the route to be improved at a cost of about $1,500,000 and to extend from the upper part of the peninsula to the Nantuxco River.

Beginning at Conowingo, Cecil county, and extending through Rising Sun, Blue Ball, Cherry Hill to Elkton, from Elkton to Chesapeake City to Cecilton to Fredericktown.

From Georgetown, Kent county to Galena, to Kennedyville, to Chester, to Fairlee, toward Rock Hall via Sandy Bottom.

Also from Chestertown via Church Hill to Centerville, to Wye Mills, on the Talbot county line.

From Centerville to the Caroline county line via Ruthsburg.

From Wye Mills to Easton, to Trappe, via Stampstown.

From Easton to Royal Oak toward St. Michaels.

Also from Easton to Dover Bridge.

From the Queen Anne county line—that is, the end of the Ruthsburg road—by way of Greensboro, to Denton, to American Corner, to Federalsburg.

From Dover Bridge to Dorchester county line via Preston.

From Federalsburg via Harlock to East New Market, to Mount Holly to Cambridge, to Church Creek toward Bishop Head.

From the Caroline county line near Preston the road will proceed to Harlock, to East New Market, to Vienna.

From Vienna the line, it is said, will proceed eastward through Mardela Springs to Salisbury.

Thus, one third of the public roads of the state to be improved have been selected.

Program For Two Weeks.

The following is the itinerary of Governor Crothers and of the Roads Commission for the next two weeks, as far as agreed upon.

Tuesday, June 2—Begin at Rockville for a tour of Montgomery county.

Wednesday, June 3—Meeting at Oakland, Garrett county, at 8.30 a. m.; at Cumberland in the evening.

Thursday, June 4—Hagerstown.

Friday, June 5—Frederick.

The visit to Frederick will complete the Western Maryland tour.

On June 12 a meeting will be held at Annapolis, and on the 15th of June a tour of the lower Eastern Shore will begin at Snow Hill. Visits will be paid to Berlin, Salisbury, Princess Anne, Crisfield and Pocomoke City.

Upon their return to Annapolis Governor Crothers and the members of the Good Roads Commission expressed themselves as greatly satisfied with their trip down the Peninsula—a trip which, they said, will mark an epoch in Maryland history, since it will mean the beginning of a system of public road improvement which will require the expenditure of more than a million and a quarter of dollars, and which will bring the whole Eastern Shore into quick communication with Baltimore by the improved roads.

Governor Crothers and his companions were especially gratified at the absence of politics at the several meetings. Republicans and Democrats vied with each other in their efforts to secure the building of good roads, which will benefit the greatest number of persons.

The meetings began at Easton where the visitors were somewhat handicapped by the fact that the county court was in session. The court attracted many farmers and others who would have attended the meeting in the Opera House. That meeting was, however, a notable one.

Governor Crothers made a preliminary statement. He said:

Value Of Good Road.

The legislature has provided a bond issue of $5,000,000, $1,000,000 of which goes to Baltimore. Even if Baltimore did not get a dollar the city would be benefited. However, this is not a question of cities and counties.

"We have selected a roads commission which will look to the good of the whole state and which will arise above local considerations and influences. Our main object is to improve the great natural highways. We do not want the farmers to be shut in six or seven months of each year because of bad roads. We want the farmers to carry on their work all the year around. They can do this only by all the year around employment."

"Good roads build up the community. They attract the attention of good citizens and of capital from other states. They help the public schools. They help the physician hurrying to a sick bed. Good roads may mean the saving of a life. They help the commercial travelers from the cities. They help those who seek pleasure and health on our highways. It is time the work has begun, and let us begin the work at once!" Applause.

—The summer resident looked curiously at Perry Jones, the sexton of the Lanebury meeting house, as she finished her survey of the little church. "You say it seats 306 people," she said, raising her lorgnette to gaze at him. "What a curious number."

"I don't see why 'tis," replied Mr. Jones. Remotement at her tone was coupled with irritation at her calm survey of him through her impertinent eyeglasses as he stared at her. "Strikes me its a very sensible number. Three hundred is the body of the church, four in the choir, one on the organ bench and a camp stool for Miss Cummins to play. Perhaps down your way you'd think he ought to stand all the time, being only a boy, but folks see things different in the country."—Youth's Companion.

The New Mayor Based on G. H. Broadhurst's Successful Play THE MAN THE HOUR

BY ALBERT PAYSON TERNUNE

With all the advantages of youth, education and good looks and no vocation other than the enjoyment of wealth, the hero of our present story chose rather to sacrifice his ease and comfort on the altar of his duty as a citizen. His city called him to save her from spoliation and corruption, and he responded to the call. To lure him from the path of right came the seductions of love and the claims of a revered parent's memory, allied with the mighty forces at the command of political and financial malefactors. The firmness with which "the man of the hour," singled out for the highest post in a great municipality by those who saw in him only a weakling and a tool, resisted the very forces that had elevated him for their own purposes to official power will be an inspiration to the reader, as it has been an uplifting force in the minds of thousands who have witnessed its theatrical representation.

CHAPTER VII.
"THE boss is turned down!" This startling news flew lightning fast to every quarter of the organization and in its wake spread a trail of incredulous amazement. Every member, from the oldest to the youngest, knew why Horrihan had made Bennett mayor. That the latter should turn against his benefactor seemed not only black ingratitude, but something akin to insanity, for it apparently spelled political suicide for the young man.

While neither of the disputants had repeated the details of the quarrel, yet those details with many another were already passing from mouth to mouth in the mysterious fashion whereby the closest kept secrets are divulged and enlarged on. In the financial world, too, the veto came as a bombshell. Borough Street railway stock fell with a thud that shook more than one colossal fortune. Bennett—central point of the whole upheaval—was the calmest man of all who were involved. He had chosen his course, and he was following it with a dogged, quiet far more dangerous than any loud-mouthed bluster. He had laid out a campaign, and that campaign he rigidly followed.

His first step was to send for Perry Wainwright early in the morning following the clash with Horrihan and under strict pledge of secrecy to explain the whole complicated affair to that very bewildered young man.
"You're all right, Alwyn. You're all the gooder," crowed Perry in genuine admiration. "But why didn't you backheel Horrihan and throw him down?"
"I didn't," said Bennett dryly. "I think I'm still doing it. That's why I sent for you today."
"Want me to lick him for you?" asked Perry in delight. "He's a bit over my weight, but I wouldn't mind pasting him."
"No," interrupted Bennett, amused at the lad's vehemence. "I want you to play the melodramatic brother and protect your sister."
"Easy," asserted Perry, all the lightness gone out of his manner and his young frame stiffening ominously. "G'wan mean to say the girl is framing up any game on Dallas?"
"Sit down," ordered Alwyn, "and try to use that little human intelligence you may have. I've got to have your help, and what use are you when all you can think of is getting thrashed by somebody? Sit down now and listen to me."
Perry meekly obeyed the new note of command in his friend's voice, and Bennett resumed:
"Your uncle has tried to hamper me by putting all your fortune and Dallas into Borough Street railway stock. The news of my veto will reach the exchange almost at once. That will cause a slump in Borough stock. If Horrihan fails to carry the bill through over my head—and he will fail if I can possibly block him—that will mean the practical collapse of the stock. It will mean that you and Dallas will be almost penniless."
"Well," suggested Perry cheerfully, "then you can marry Dallas, and little brother Perry can come and live with you. Don't worry, old chap. I'm—"
"Shut up, you young idiot, and sit down and listen! Here's a check; also a note of introduction to my broker. He's a close-mouthed fellow, and he'll keep the secret. I want you to sell Borough stock short to the amount of—"
"To speculate? Gee! I never thought!"
"I don't believe in speculation as a rule, but this time it's the only way out. Sell short. Then if the bill is dropped you and Dallas will be as well off as you are now, and after selling the stock short I'll advance you—"
"If the bill is passed over my head, the stock will boom, and you'll both be richer than ever. Understand the idea? I think I've arranged it so you and she won't lose a dollar in either case."

"Alwyn," cried Perry, the full idea at last penetrating his youthful brain, "you're the whitest ever. The—"
"Hold on! I do this on one condition."

"Oh!"
"On condition you promise solemnly that neither Dallas nor any one else shall know my share in it."

"But—"
"Promise!"
"Oh, well, all right, then. But Dallas ought to—"
"No, she oughtn't. Now clear out. I'm busy. Don't waste any time going to my broker. I'm holding back the official announcement of the veto as long as I can. But—"

"I'm on. So long, old chap. Enter Perry the Lamb into Bennett and Bullville! Let Horrihan & Co. indulge in a timely tremble!"
Scarce had Perry departed on his mission when Phelan was announced. "Your honor," he shouted as he first caught a glimpse of Bennett. "You're all aces! Nothing to it. Friend Horrihan's bit'n' holes in the ceiling. He's—oh, you needn't look so mum. I'm wise. I haven't spent ten years and close on a million bucks in scrapin' together a private secret service system for nothing. You've signed the bill? squeals Horrihan. "No, you big stiff! says you, 'I've vetoed it. Now go chase yourself before I knock you from under your hat!' says you. Them was the very words, so I'm told."

"I congratulate you on your secret service men," laughed Bennett. "They seem to have a wonderful faculty for quelling one's remarks literally, but—"
"But did I come here to lodge out hot air to you?" supplemented Phelan. "No, I didn't. I come to tip you off to a meeting that's held last night at Wainwright's house—him an' Horrihan an' Gibbs an' some others, includin' Ken Williams, who's Horrihan's mouthpiece an' handy man in the board of aldermen. Didn't happen to hear of that meetin', did you?"

"No, I am unfortunate in having no secret service corps."
"Never mind," returned Phelan, on whom the satire of the reply was quite lost. "You can get the benefit of mine. Now, at this meetin' they did a lot of jabberin' an' they cussed you up hill an' down dale. Says Horrihan, 'If that young cub—'
"Thanks," interposed Alwyn, "but I don't care to hear what was said about me. I—"
"All right, then, but there's something you do want to hear. They got busy at last an' framed up a new workin' for the Borough bill that'll maybe throw dust in your eyes if you ain't put on it in advance. They've got out the subway paragraph an' the express business clause, an' they allow transfers at all cross lines. That's the way they'll put the bill up to the aldermen next time. A nice, harmless looking document it'll be, an' perhaps the board'll swallow it!"
"But do the alterations in the bill also eliminate the 'perpetual franchise' clause?"
"Ah, there's the point! They don't. All the other things you kicked against have been wiped out, but the 'perpetual franchise' clause stands."
"And the $2,000,000 cash offer stands, too," added Bennett. "It still will to see why I should present Mr. Wainwright's company with a franchise for which another man is willing to pay the city $2,000,000, and I shall fight the bill to the very end."
"Good boy, your honor! An' Jimmy Phelan's with you. We'll make Horrihan look like—"
"He needs fourteen votes to carry the bill past my veto. He has his thirteen aldermen, under Williams' lead. But only those thirteen voted for the bill in its original state. Unless Horrihan and Williams can find a fourteenth alderman to—"
"Unless one of the men who voted against it before can be brought to vote for it next time Horrihan loses," answered Phelan. "Hell, make it his business to buy a fourteenth man, an' I'll make it my business to find out who he tries to get an' to help you—"
"Keep that same fourteenth man straight. That's how it adds up so far. Well, I'll be loagin'. I'll keep you posted. An' remember, we'll make Horrihan give a livin' picture imitation of a man without a scale before we're through with him."
Little of Phelan's exultation was revealed in the next moment as he said: "If the bill is passed over my head, clear, before him, and that duty he would follow. But he alone realized the cost. He had so counted on the promised talk with Dallas Wainwright the preceding evening. On the hopes of that interview he had staked his all. In it he was to have received the half pledged reward for his months of toil and achievement.

Yet in view of his present relations toward Wainwright he could not, of course, visit the financier's home. The doors of the house that contained the woman he loved had been barred to him. And Dallas—what must she have thought of his failure to call?

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Wanted Something More to Straighten Him Up.

A sickly looking man came into the office of a village physician and said that he wasn't feeling very smart and wanted something to "straighten him out." After he had described his symptoms which did not indicate anything at all serious, the physician asked him if he had been taking anything for his troubles.

"Well, no; at least none to speak of," was the reply. "I heard that the extract of dandelion was good for troubles like mine, so I took three pills of that, but it didn't seem to do much good. Then I got me two bottles of Smith's Healing Compound and a box of Green's Sure Cure Pills and took 'em, and I kinder think they helped me some."

"Did you take anything else?" asked the physician.
"Yes; my wife fixed me up a mess of poke-berry and calumnes and mullein and rue and boneset and tansy, and a few other yarks, and I took that for a while, until one of my neighbors sent me over something he'd bought the receipt of from a grey woman. Then I didn't feel so well, so I changed off to some stuff I bought of a peddler, and a little quinine twice a day. I ain't taking anything now but a little of elixir of a hundred roots and some bitters. I ain't gaining very fast, so I thought I'd come in and see if you thought I needed anything else."—Judge's Library.

A Sage Contribution.
One day recently there entered the office of a Philadelphia real estate man a tattered and forlorn girl of 14 or thereabout, who slipped up to his desk with a memorandum book in her hand.

Ordinarily the Philadelphia is the politest of persons, but this day he was so busy that he knew not which way to turn. So, with a swift glance from the corner of his eye, he said rather sharply, "Well, what do you want?"

"Mister, please buy a chance on our go-cart," pleaded the girl hesitantly.
"Your go-cart?" repeated the real estate man, who is a bachelor. "What on earth can I do with a go-cart, even if I should get it?"

"Oh, you won't get it, breathless," came from the girl. "Please buy a chance?" Philadelphia Ledger.
Did Not Believe in Signs.
Bob Fitzsimmons, the famous pugilist, in the course of one of the lessons in physical culture that he has been giving to the police of Plainfield, N. J., paused and said:
"I don't take much stock in feints and tricks. I like best, open straight-forward work, both in boxing and in wrestling. With tricks, as a rule, one only gives oneself away. It is like the case of the beggar."

"A beggar, you must know, sat on a cold and windy corner with a sign on his breast: 'Dead and Dumb.'"
"Two men passed, and one, a kind-hearted chap, stopped and looked at the beggar, and said:
"I'd like to give this man something, but how am I to know that he is dead and dumb?"
"Read the sign, sir," the beggar whispered cautiously.

HAVE A CARE.

"Mother may I go out to swim?"
"Yes, my darling daughter, but first bang up your bickory limb; it might be bowed by water."

Good Hiddens.
"What was you said Higgins to Higgins?"
"Well," answered Farmer Corns, "he would-inest-on wearin' a high hat an' Primm Albert coat an' walkin' an' he was 'naturally and free of' 'em!" he said around."—Washington Star.

A Great Marine Collection.

New Haven, Conn.—Prof. A. E. Verrill, of Yale University, has sold to the university his great collection of marine invertebrates, fishes and bottom samples acquired during his work for the United States Fish Commission in the sixteen years from 1873 to 1887. The collection is the duplicate of the one secured at the same time and since transferred to the National Museum of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington. The duplicate collections are said to be the finest of the kind in the world, and were obtained at a cost estimated at several hundred thousand dollars. They include nearly all the known specimens as well as undescribed ones of marine invertebrates found between Labrador to the West Indies taken from all depths down to 2,600 fathoms, and include more than 800,000 specimens in each collecting representing some 6,000 species. More than $25,000 has been spent for the work on the collection apart from the cost of the collection itself. Prof. Verrill's collection is in excellent condition and thoroughly labeled and catalogued. Their collection will be placed permanently in Peabody Museum, where a small part of it has been on exhibition. The curator of the museum estimates that a similar collection cannot be made for a cost of less than $500,000. Prof. Verrill received the collection from the commission in place of all other compensation. The price paid for the collection by Yale is not given out.

The Most Common Cause of Suffering

Rheumatism causes more pain and suffering than any other disease, for the reason that it is the most common of all ills, and it is certainly gratifying to sufferers to know that Chamberlain's Pain Balm will afford relief, and makes rest and sleep possible. In many cases the relief from pain, which is at first temporary, has become permanent, while in old people subject to chronic rheumatism, often brought on by dampness or changes in the weather, a permanent cure cannot be expected; the relief from pain which this liniment affords is alone worth many times its cost. 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale at Toulson's drug store.

The receipt use of a street car as a hearse in carrying to the cemetery the body of a conductor in the employ of the Milwaukee company causes the Journal of that city to suggest that it is time for American cities to adopt the custom so common in Mexico of using the cars regularly for this purpose. "Archbishop Messmer, of the Catholic Church, has frequently spoken in favor of the change as one means of bringing down the cost of funerals. In some of the Latin countries special funeral cars are used, with a place for the casket and ample room for the mourners and friends. The expense is much less than when carriages are used. This is an important consideration, for the cost of funerals among the poor of this country is approaching a scandal."—Kansas Journal.

It Reached The Spot.

Mr. E. Humphrey, who owns a large general store at Omega, O., and is president of the Adams County Telephone Co., as well as of the Home Telephone Co., of Pike County, O., says of Dr. King's New Discovery: "It saved my life once. At least I think it did. It seemed to reach the spot—the very seat of my cough—when everything else failed." Dr. King's New Discovery not only reaches the cough spot; it heals the sore spots and the weak spots in throat, lungs and chest. Sold under guarantee at Toulson's Drug Store, 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

A Newspaper Boat.

Capt. George W. Johnson, who left St. Augustine, Fla., on May 6th, in his newspaper boat, in which he will make a trip to New York, arrived in Norfolk accompanied by his wife and Manager, John Manoe.

Owing to illness, Captain Johnson was compelled to come to Norfolk from Savannah by rail, his tiny boat being shipped to this city by freight. The remainder of the trip, however, will be made by Captain Johnson, in his boat.

Owing to the license tax required for a week's exhibition, Captain Johnson said last night that he was unprepared to state whether or not he would show his boat in Norfolk, but definite conclusion will be reached today.

The tiny boat in which Captain Johnson expects to row to New York is composed of four hundred newspapers from all parts of the United States and foreign countries, over 8000 pages of these papers being used in the construction.

There are twenty nine layers of newspapers in the hull and eighteen on the decks, cemented together with two gallons of shellac cementing. It is twenty feet long, twenty inches beam and six inches deep.

Form Norfolk Captain Johnson will row his boat up the Chesapeake Bay to Annapolis, Baltimore to Elk River, where the canal will be taken to the Delaware River, and from there will proceed to Philadelphia, Camden, Trenton, New Brunswick, Princeton, Perth Amboy, Elizabeth, Bayonne and up the Hudson to New York.

B. A. Bennett, Oriskany, Md., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in my family and we found them to be exactly as represented. I used them for backache and a severe weakness across the small of the back brought on by inactive kidneys. A dull heavy pain and a weak, all gone feeling of depression prevailed my whole system, at times so severe as to make the least exertion not only painful but irksome, particularly mornings after long sleepless night, when I would suffer with a lack of energy and languid, listless feelings. Doctors and medicines failed to help me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at a drug store, and I was in a miserable condition. They soon cured me of the whole trouble and not a trace of it has ever returned. I do not hesitate to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other sufferers."

PLATO AND CHRIST.

May 31, '08.—(John 20:1-13.)

The Vision of Er forms the conclusion of the last book of Plato's "Republic."

It is well worth the study of any one who hopes or believes.

In it Plato imagines one Er, a Pamphylian hero of about his own time, who was slain in battle. Ten days afterward when they would bury the dead they found his body still undecayed. He was put on the funeral pyre, but before the torch was applied he revived and told the vision he had seen while the soul was out of the body.

He had seen the souls of men taken before a judgment seat, carrying on their foreheads the records of their deeds, and sent away to bliss or woe according as the record ran. After centuries of life in another world the souls of men again were taken before the three fates, and were allowed to choose their lot for a new incarnation on earth.

Such was the vision of Er, as told by the wisest of the Greek philosophers. Plato had gathered all the arguments he could invent to support what all men craved, but they were not enough. He wanted a revelation from the outer world, but he could not find it; so he put what he dreamed of or could best conceive, into this fable of a resurrection—a man who had died and who had returned to human life.

Such was the best lesson, the true lesson of the wise philosophers before Jesus Christ. But what Plato only dreamed and wished, the Christian faith has—not a dream, not a fable, but a fact, a history. The resurrection of Jesus Christ is the best attested fact in human history.

We read the blessed and shadowy vision of Er with interest; we thrill and exult in the glorious reality of the 15th chapter of 1st Corinthians.

The one is Paganism groping after the light; the other is Christianity in the blaze of noonday. The one is the seed; the other is the fruit. The one is the dream; the other is the awakening. The one is vision; the other is reality.

In a Scottish valley beside a little brook, where there was no kindling soil, a Highlander once planted a tree. Of course, it wilted and drooped. But suddenly to the surprise of everyone, it took a new start in life and bore rich fruit. What was the source of its new life? That was the query put by all who knew it. An examination revealed the secret. With a marvelous vegetable instinct it had sent out a shoot which ran along and over a narrow sheep bridge and rooted itself in the rich loam on the other side of the brook. From this rich loam it drew its new life, which manifested itself in bud and blossom and luscious fruit.

And so it is that the Resurrection bridges the River of Death that flows between earth and heaven; and the souls of men who see and know this send out the shoot of faith, and this shoot, running over the bridge of resurrection, roots itself in the realities of the other side, and draws eternal strength from the fullness there.

Nature itself is full of the symbolism of this great truth. Look at the day buried in the darkness of night, rising again in the morning. I have stood on a lofty mountain top and seen the sun rise. On the top of the mountain was a crown of flashing gold, while all beneath was rolling, writhing, colorless cloud and fog. But after a while the crown of light shot from beneath, began to make the gloom of the valley strike tent.

The mist went scurrying up and down like cavalry in wild retreat. The fog was lifted and rent and whirled. Redder and redder grew the eastern banners of flame. Leap the cohorts of life filled the sky. Darkness recoiled sulkily into the valleys and the sunlight captured one after another of the distant crests. The mountains, in encircling amphitheatres, tier over tier, peeped behind by higher peaks, seemed assembled in silent surrender to the King of Day. And he crowned them with glory as a reward. The whole valley became one grand illumination. The green fields looked up. The river unrolled itself, and there were little white flocks of villages lying amidst the rich pastures and golden grainfields stretched out.

So in Plato's day there hung over all the graves, and sepulchres, and mausoleums of the ages, fogs and darkness unfilled by a single ray—darkness that no human lamp could penetrate. But when from above the fan of righteousness came, the dense fogs of doubt were cleared away, and now all the valleys of the dead are bathed in the full light of the morning of the resurrection. And the fogs can never capture and hold the world in their cold embrace again the light now shines.

The martyr's ashes, watched.

Shall gathered 'be at last.

And from that scattered dust.

Around us and abroad.

Shall spring a plenteous seed

Of witnesses for God.

The Printer's Mistake

"It's no use, Edna, the Lord never meant me to be happy in this world. I'll have to take what I can get and be thankful."

The two girls were directly opposite types. Eleanor was tall, graceful, high strung, nervous, full of life and energy. Her most attractive features were her eyes, dark and deep set, with a longing, unsatisfied expression. Edna was of a type, much less interesting, cold, phlegmatic and clear sighted, a much smaller woman, too, with colorless gray eyes.

On the bed lay lingerie of the most alluring kind, the sort of things that women can appreciate. Pile upon pile of lacy stuffs were scattered about the room. Surrounded by these pretty things that women love, sat Eleanor Godfrey, who to-morrow would be the bride of Tom Grant.

"There's one thing I can never regret," she said. "I told Tom everything before he took me. It was brutally frank, I admit, to tell your future husband that the best love of your life had been given to another."

"Poor boy!" murmured Edna.

"Poor boy, indeed. Don't I have to live with him? Don't I have to see him waste his life? And is it nothing that I have to, eke out an existence, crushing down my sighs, forcing back my tears?"

Walking across the room to where Edna sat, she put her hand on his shoulder.

"How can you judge?" she asked. "You do not know the case. Now, listen. Every breath I breathe, every prayer I utter, every breath of my aching heart is for Jack Winston. I've loved him ever since I was a little girl, but you see I could not very well marry him because he never asked me."

"Then, too, Jack is so poor, and all my life I've been longing for things that Tom Grant's money will buy for me. I don't deceive him. I said I didn't love him; but he, still knowing this, wants to marry me, and I accepted. Now judge me if you will."

Edna straightened up a bit and the lines about her mouth seemed to grow deeper in an instant.

"One question, please, before I render the verdict. You take upon your soul the wrecking of this man's existence. You will 'kick the honey' from the dower of his life and leave him nothing but the stem. Is it easier for you than being an old maid. Then, too, supposing that Tom was in love with some other girl."

"I plead guilty to the charge, judge, and accept the sentence of the court. Your logic is getting stale; so let's go to bed that I may get my beauty sleep and make a handsome bride. Think of it, dear girl, to-morrow at this hour my visiting cards will read, 'Mrs. Thomas Kemp Grant.'"

The next morning was colorless, the air heavy; in fact, just the sort of a day to make a bride look out of the window and wonder if she really were superstitious.

It was nine o'clock, and Tom was whistling one minute, and singing the next. He walked into the bedroom where his friend and best man lay peacefully sleeping.

"Get up you lazy vagabond, we can't keep the bride waiting you know. That's her privilege."

The best man rubbed his eyes, growled a bit, and finally crawled out.

Tom was practically ready. After working about an hour on it, he managed to arrange his white puff tie to his entire satisfaction. He had buttoned and unbuttoned his waistcoat until his thumbs were blistered. He had pulled it down in front and buckled it at the back until the seams threatened to give way.

By eleven the men were already on their way to the house. As they neared it Tom became more and more nervous. There seemed to be a weight on his heart that he could not lift. At that moment the best man was hanging out of the cab window cursing the driver for the snail-like pace they were pursuing.

"I say, caddy, this wedding that we are going to, not a funeral. I'll give you an extra dollar if you hurry."

"An extra dollar, is it? You talk like a politician. Well, sir, you might corrupt me, but the horse can't be bribed; at weddings or funerals, his gait is always the same. Rest easy while you can, sir—the lady will drive you fast enough, once she gets the reins."

The best man was about to rail at the Irish as a nation, when Tom said: "If anything should happen"—"Jumping Jupiter, Tom, brace up! You look as if you had curvature of the spine. Pull yourself together."

and you? Any girl who had such a thing looking object as you on her side (that would be ostracized by society, and one who would marry you would be declared mentally incompetent."

"All right. I'll pull up, but I've a terrifying idea that something is going wrong. Jack, old man, I can't do it. I'm in love with Edna Cross and not with Eleanor. I've just begun to realize it."

You old poacher, then why did you ask Eleanor to marry you, when you knew that I have loved her all my life, and have been trying to forget her for months. Night after night I went over and sat with Edna, trying to make myself think I was forgetting Eleanor."

"And every night," said Tom, "I went to see Eleanor because you were over at Edna's and I had no right to trespass on your preserves. A nice mess we've made of it. What are we going to do?"

"Do? Why that's easy enough," assured Jack. "I'm going to be the bridegroom and you can just shift back into my boots as the best man. We'll blame the whole thing on the printer. Trust me, old man, I said I'd see you through this ordeal and I'm going to keep my word."

As the cab finally reached the house the men stepped out and were ushered into the room where the minister was waiting for them. No word of explanation was uttered, and the men took their places by the minister, who was to pronounce them man and wife.

The wedding march was played, and as Eleanor in her gorgeous robe, came forth to meet the man of her choice, Jack Winston stepped forward and offered her his arm.

"The best man was hanging out of the cab window—less, but too happy to resent, and before the knotting crowd the minister tied the garter and made them one 'till death do them part.'"

Then Jack began his explanations: "Simplest thing in the world," he said. "You see, Tom ordered the invitations, and, of course, the printer took it for granted that it was his wedding—merely a typographical error, nothing more."

Eleanor's mother stepped in at this moment, and with a haughty manner inquired:

"Then, may I ask why Tom gave the bachelor dinner—why Tom bought the ring?"

"Yes, mother," said Jack, with a proprietary manner, "you see, I was broke at the time, and Tom, as you all know, is just loaded with money, so I gave him carte blanche to go ahead as if it was his own wedding, and I'd pay him back in good time. You see, I only came into my inheritance yesterday, and that would have been too late to order invitations, give dinners, etc. Any way, how could you ever think that Tom was going to marry Eleanor? Why, he's engaged to marry Edna, and if you don't believe me, ask them for yourself. I tell you it was a typographical error, nothing more."

The color that suffused Edna's face and the smile that glorified about her eyes, the statement, and the gait were in a flutter of pleasurable excitement, while in the corner Jack was shaking Tom by the hand and saying:

"Didn't I tell you I'd see you through it, old man."

Royal Remains on View.

For centuries past deceased English royalties have not been exhibited in public as they used to be in days when it was deemed advisable to place the sovereign upon view, so that people could see that death had actually taken place. The death satisfied a good many folk and also furnished security to the successor that the predecessor had already departed. More than once the body of a king who had died under suspicious circumstances was laid out in some great church, such as St. Paul's Cathedral or Westminster Abbey, and the face exposed or bare from the waist upward, to allay any doubts which might have arisen as to the cause of death. Once left in peace, save when the necessity of removal or some accidental disturbance allowed a privileged few to look at it.—Modern Society.

Cactus Leaves and Mosquitoes.

Cactus leaves may be used instead of oil for the extermination of mosquitoes, writes General Bishop of Palermo, Italy. They are now being used in Africa for the purpose. The leaves are pounded into a thin but sticky paste and this is spread upon the surface of the stagnant pools. It acts as oil does by forming a layer through which the mosquito larva cannot pass to obtain air, and asphyxiation results.

Luminous Owls.

That owls were seen who threw out a bright yellow light is now proved. Nevertheless, we do not believe that a capacity to show a light is generally possessed by an owl. If the phenomenon is ever scientifically explained we believe that it will appear that the light is an accompaniment of some peculiar disease.—Outlook.

He likes his chicken 'a Maryland, and terrapin tickles his palate more pleasingly than any other article. He has a generous indulgence. Davis was born of poor parents, and school advantages were denied him, so he had to go to work very early in life. He worked in a store as a boy, then became an employee of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad as a brakeman. He worked at this for several years, and then was promoted to a conductor. He later on quit the railroad and embarked in the mercantile business with his brother, Thomas B., at Piedmont, W. Va. It was there that he laid the foundation of his great fortune, which is believed to amount to $30,000,000.

Senator Davis had early taken an interest in politics, and was elected a member of the House of Delegates in 1865. In 1867 he became a State Senator, and in 1871, he was elected a United States Senator. He was re-elected in 1877, which term he served out, but declined to stand as a candidate for a third term. His last official connection was a delegate to the Panama Congress. In 1894 he was nominated for Vice President on the ticket with Parker. He was very desirous of getting a good big vote in his State, and really hoped to carry it. But West Virginia gave the biggest Republican majority that year in its history, Roosevelt carrying the State by over thirty-one thousand.

"Uncle Henry Gassaway" has a palatial mansion, "Graeoland," at Elkins. It tops one of the three stately hills which stand side by side, and on the other two hills are two other multi-millionaire palaces, one occupied by Senator Elkins and the other by Richard C. Kerens of Missouri. The Elkins residence looks for all the world like a feudal castle.

He is a powerfully built man, over 6 feet, walks with a sprightly, elastic step, and has solved the problem of never getting old, in the sense that most of 85 do.

Long Distance Balloon Record.

Many notable trips have been made in balloons. In 1849 Mr. Wise started from St. Louis and came down in Henderson county, New York, having made about eight hundred miles.

This stood as the world's long distance record until the Paris Exposition of 1900, when the Count de la Vaulx sailed over into Russia. His distance was about twelve hundred miles and he was in the air over thirty-six hours.

The present record for time was established by two German aeronauts. They succeeded in remaining in the air over fifty-one hours.

When the German Emperor attends a musical comedy he often composes two or three original jokes, which are handed from the royal box to the leading comedian for interpolation.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

On Alcohol Production.

In the early part of the last century, the problems of transportation constituted a powerful incentive to the production of spirits in Sweden. A principal article of production in the rural districts was potatoes. To ship the surplus crop of tubers two or three hundred miles overland by teams was manifestly impracticable. So the farmers adopted the general policy of distilling their surplus potatoes and shipping the "brandy" to the centers of population for sale. This policy grew until in 1831, there were more than 170,000 stills in rural Sweden. The introduction of railways throughout rural Sweden had much to do with settling this economic problem, though by no means were they the sole influence in the reform.

In the mountainous regions of the South, there exists a breed of men called "moonshiners." They are not inherently "bad men." Many of them are men of standing in their communities, workers in the mountain churches and who have the confidence of the communities in which they live.

The fact that they live far removed from railways or other means of transportation has much to do with their being "moonshiners." They cannot find a market for their surplus corn, owing to the natural difficulties of getting it to the market. So they have fallen into the practice of distilling their little surplus and sending the whisky to the market.

In the Southern States, the refuse of the sugar factories is now pure waste.

In seasons of unusual crops in potatoes, the price often drops far below the cost of production and often they are not dug at all. There is partial or total loss of the crop.

In the far West, the inferior grades of corn find no market and total loss is only averted by using it to feed stock. In the fruit belt, the "culls" and "drops" and "seconds" are marketed at a loss because there is no avenue open to consume such products on a remunerative basis. This portion of the fruit crop is more or less an economic loss.

The removal of the tax from alcohol, after it has been chemically treated under Government supervision so as to make it undrinkable, will solve this problem of waste of these products of the farm by providing an outlet for them for a useful purpose and at a reasonable price. The refuse of the farm at once becomes a valuable asset instead of a troublesome waste. Instead of shipping his surplus corn to the far markets and sending afar for his light and fuel, the farmer can market a considerable proportion of his surplus near to home, where it will be made up into alcohol for light and fuel for his own use.

It will result in a heavy increase in the production of alcohol, of course. This, under the old conditions, would be a cause for alarm. But science has provided methods for the treating of alcohol in such a manner that none but the most confirmed dipsomaniac can drink it or does drink it. This fact is not a theory, because, after sixty years trial with tax free alcohol treated in this way for industrial purposes, the temperance leaders of England unanimously declare that the policy has not been prejudicial to temperance interests in any way whatever. Such distinguished authorities as Lady Henry Somerset, Dr. Dawson Burns, Joseph Malins, after a lifetime of actual observation, scout at the idea of this offensive tax free denatured alcohol being prejudicial to the temperance cause.

In France, Germany and Switzerland, where the largest use has been made of the tax free denatured alcohol legislation, the temperance leaders are even more enthusiastic over the results than in Britain. The continental temperance men are not only friendly, but to a man are earnest advocates of this legislation on account of the good results for temperance. It was this very law passed in Germany in 1883, that opened the door to advanced temperance legislation in the United States. It did this by stripping the drink traffic of the industrial support and compelling it to stand alone, on its merits, and it had no merits. It removed the opposition of the powerful Agrarians, who were afraid that restriction on the liquor traffic would interfere with potato market, the source of much of the distilled spirits of that country.

In England, where there has been a boom in the use of industrial alcohol, there has been an accompanying radical decrease in the consumption of beverage spirits. This tendency has been continuous for half a dozen years. In Norway, where the statistics are closely and critically kept, the same tendency appears.

Society's Gain.

It has been demonstrated by statistics that the average gain to society for every wage-earner is $300 per annum. This average—less than a dollar a day—is produced by the lowered earning capacity of the beered, tobacco-poisoned, workman, demoralized by the fellowship of whisky.

If alcohol and beer will eat out the finger ends of bartenders and waiters, their shoes, what will it do to a drinker's stomach. California Searchlight.

Commercial Houses, $2.50 per month. Residences, $1.50 per month. The rate for both kinds of lighting will be 10 cents per K. W. hour. With a little care in turning off the lights not needed, your bill will be less under the meter than under the old flat rate.

A NEW TORPEDO BOAT

Hudson Maxim Describes his latest invention

BEWILDERING SPEED

Torpedoes of Such Explosive Power as to insure Instant Destruction of Any War Vessel Struck—Boat
Can Make Sixty Miles an Hour Submerged.

An efficient navy is to-day a wall of national security. Just as in old times was the great city wall. If our naval wall were to be breached by an enemy then our coast cities would be at its mercy, and could be pillaged under cover of the guns of its fleet and in spite of our insubstantial coast defenses, says Hudson Maxim in the New York World. While we might doubtless be able to repel an invasion of the interior, still we cannot afford to take any chances of such a national disaster, even as a remote possibility, the cost of which would be more than the building of a dozen fleets as large as that now in Pacific waters.

which will have a speed greater than that of any battleship or cruiser, and which will be able to defy the shot and shell of quick-firing guns in making a run of attack.

Torpedoes will be carried in the torpedo boat with a half a ton of high explosive in the warhead, so that to be struck by one of them, will insure the instant destruction of any war vessel—and there is no war vessel in existence that could avoid being struck by one of these torpedoes.

A torpedo boat built according to my invention will be about sixty-four feet long, and will be driven by gasoline engines upon the surface of the water, under normal conditions; but when going into action the boat will be submerged until only the top of the conning tower and the top of the dorsal fin will be seen above the surface of the water.

In the prow of the boat will be carried two large torpedoes, each containing half a ton of high explosive.

Motorite is the fuel, consisting of 70 per cent. nitroglycerine and 30 per cent. gun cotton. For use it is made in long solid bars, forced and sealed into long steel tubes. This fuel is self-combustive, and does not require atmospheric air to burn it; consequently, it may be burned in a confined space. The heat of the burning motorite is used to evaporate water, and the steam and products of combustion are mingled to drive turbines for the boat's propulsion.

It will, of course, require an enormous amount of power to propel this torpedo-boat at an express train speed when submerged, but with motorite we have all the power that may be needed even to attain a speed as great as sixty miles an hour.

As only the top of the conning tower will appear above the surface of the water, this will be a very difficult object to hit, even with the quick-firing guns of the battleship, and the exposed part of the conning tower will be protected by armor plate of a thickness great enough to resist the projectiles of quick-firing guns, and any projectile striking the superstructure will do no real damage to the boat itself.

When the torpedo boat is launched, the reaction or recoil will serve to retard the torpedo-boat and to aid in stopping it. After launching the torpedo the engines will reverse and the boat will withdraw stern-foremost. At this juncture there will be no fear of the enemy's guns, for the survivors will be busy with their prayers.

Let me repeat, it will be absolutely impossible to prevent this torpedo-boat from reaching and torpedoing any battleship in the world, and with but small danger on its part of being destroyed.

At least a hundred of these torpedo boats could be built at the cost of a single battleship, and a hundred of them would be more than a match for an equal number of battleships.

Work of Sand Dunes.

It is stated that, along the Lincolnshire Coast the sand dunes which fringe the shore are moving steadily inland. This, says the London Globe, is due to the wind from the sea blowing the sand from the back of the dunes over to the front. At Mablethorpe it is said that two acres of the property of individual have thus been buried in sand. And at Anderby what used to be a field behind the dunes, is now a sandy waste 40 yards in front.

Jack Sportright—(watching Reggy preparing for the week-end shoot)—Say old man, where's your gun? There's nothing in this case. Reggy—"Aw, that's a doozed clever little scheme of mine, don't you know? It is too heavy to carry with a horrid gun in it you know, so I just left the gun out."

NOT SO UNUSUAL.

"Did you see about that cabman the other day who got mad and knocked down a fare?" "Yes, but that's nothing; the car conductors do it often without getting mad."

ALL GONE.

Stranger—"Is your father at home?" Peter—"No sir." Stranger—"Is your mother at home?" Peter—"No sir." Stranger—"Is there anybody here?" Peter—"No, sir, we are all away." Peter—"This is the day the man calls for the rent."

ONE THING HE KNEW.

"What's the horse power of your auto?" "I don't know, but I know it takes three horses to get it home when it breaks down."

Value of Bokhara Clover.

Bokhara clover is not cultivated to any extent in this country as yet, though it deserves to be. As a bee-plant, few flowers excel it. It is a very good plant for renewing the fertility of worn-out misused farming land for it will grow where other clovers refuse to grow at all. It is good for planting along railway cuts and embankments to prevent washing of the soil. It contains a large amount of coumarin as a substitute for vanilla.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood. It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work. If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You must have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

THE DEVOTION OF DICK

By Emma T. Cone

Although Dick never admitted it, it was quite obvious that he was jealous of young Anson, the next-door neighbor, who called on Miss Edith two or three evenings in the week. Edith herself had never shown any preference, however, between the two; in fact, she had almost ceased to call on either of them. Dick was not a very good looking man, but he was a very good natured one, and he was a very good friend to Miss Edith. He was a very good friend to Miss Edith, and he was a very good friend to Miss Edith.

Young Anson was a newcomer at least, he had been in Wilton but a few months, but since the first day he saw Edith he had been in love with her, a fact which he made no attempt to conceal, and which Dick silently resented; for had he not lived in the same house with her since that night he had been found, a tiny bit of a thing, half frozen of the front steps, and taken in and adopted by the family? Had they not loved each other before the other appeared on the scene? Had he not once jumped in the pond and saved her from drowning? Was she not his by right of discovery? Dick thought so.

True, he had never declared his love in words, but his devotion and his pleading eyes must have spoken more eloquently than any spoken words could have done, and from the first he had claimed her for his own, and no one to say him nay till Anson had appeared on the scene. At first he and Anson had been good friends, but when the latter began showing a preference for Edith's society a coldness crept in between the two, and though he showed his dislike in many ways, he was as silent on the point as he had been on the subject of love.

He was still devoted to Edith, however, and spent every moment possible with her, but the sight of the other would bring a scowl to his face and he would sink away, leaving a clear field for his rival, Anson, of course, noted all this, and one day mentioned the subject to Edith, who only laughed and answered that it was only one of Dick's freaks and he would probably soon get over it.

Time passed, however, and instead of her prediction falling true, Dick grew more sulky than ever; that is, when Anson was about, which was much more than he used to be, for he now not only came four or five evenings in the week, but took her out driving on Sunday, or sometimes boating on the pond.

Dick was with her when Anson was not, but the rest of the time he passed no one knew where. He hurt him, too, to think that she was so heartless, for she was apparently utterly oblivious to his suffering, spending much time at the piano singing songs and this also grated on his nerves to the extent of sometimes driving him from the house.

One evening when Anson was there Dick went out and wandered down to the pond where the tiny waves gleamed like rippling silver in the moonlight. He was seriously contemplating running away, for it seemed to him that the whole family was taking an unusual interest in his rival, but while looking in the water and thinking over the situation he was startled by footsteps approaching. Looking round he saw two figures coming nearer, a man and a woman, the man's arm about her waist and her head resting lightly against his shoulder. Dick drew back in the shadow and waited.

They stopped near and began talking but he could not understand what they were saying. As they turned, however, he saw the man take her in his arms and kiss her again and again.

Dick could hardly restrain himself from dashing out and tearing his rival to pieces; his devotion to Edith only prevented. One point was settled though, he would run away, he would not stay there and eat his heart out with jealousy. He waited till he heard Anson go home, and then went up and sat down on the steps to form his plans for the future.

Something had also happened to Edith that night that sent her thoughts flying into the future, and she came out on the steps to think and found Dick there. Dropping down behind him she threw one arm about his neck and held up a hand on which sparkled a tiny diamond.

"See, Dick," she whispered, "that is my engagement ring. I am going to be married next month."

Dick gazed at her a moment, then turned away his head, but did not speak. He couldn't, for you see, Dick was only a big St. Bernard dog.
