BIDS FOR PAVING

Streets of City, Bithulthic and Brick in Question.

At a special meeting of the City Council Wednesday afternoon there was a heated discussion among the representatives of street paving companies as to the merits of brick and bithulthic pavements. The discussion was the result of the meeting held Monday night, at which the bids of three companies were opened by the council. These bids are complete, including grading, paving, underdrain, manholes, curbing, etc. The bids were as follows:

B. F. Sweeten & Sons, for first class brick block, laid in sand joints, $47,546.83; laid in grout, as the present pavements $48,333.17; laid with asphalt filler, to kill the rumble, $49,375.37.

Standard Bithulthic Company, of Wilmington, Del.—Laid with 5-inch base 2-inch top bithulthic, $54,174.85.

Atlantic Bithulthic Company, of Richmond, Va.—Same pavement, $57,517.44.

These figures show that the bithulthic pavements will cost about $6,000 more than the brick pavements or about $4,500 more than the best brick pavement laid with asphalt filler, which is said to do away with the rumbling sound and make almost as noiseless a pavement as the bithulthic.

The majority of the property owners on the streets to be paved are in favor of bithulthic, but this comparatively new paving material is not favorably considered by Chief Engineer Heston, of Wilmington, who has been employed by the council to supervise the work. It is claimed by the property owners that bithulthic is more noiseless than brick, and for this reason would be more desirable for a residence street. Mr. Heston claims, however, that the paving has not proven satisfactory as yet, as it is only in its experimental stage, and strongly recommends brick pavement with asphalt joints.

On account of the disagreement among the property owners the matter has not been decided, and will come up for final discussion at the council meeting Monday night.

Last winter several blocks of brick pavement were laid here by Sweeten & Sons, and it has not proven altogether satisfactory.

COL. CITIZENS OBJECT.

Delegation Before Council, E. Church Street

Paving. Council Will Proceed To Collect Bills.

Solomon T. Houston headed a delegation of colored property owners who live on East Church Street who appeared before the City Council at a special meeting held Friday evening of last week; the delegation was asked to appear and hear the amounts of their assessments for improvements made on the street and to enter any objections they might have. Houston speaking in behalf of the colored people said they did not object to the improvements but said they were for the most part not able to pay their assessments, citing the fact that many of them were in the Building and Loan Associations to pay for improvements made in their properties in the last few years, and these new assessments made for street paving would be very burdensome to the owners.

President Folk, in speaking for the Council said that while he appreciated the position of the property owners the Council had not proceeded in the matter until after a law had been passed by the Legislature giving them the proper authority and after a town meeting held a year ago instructed them to go ahead, and that they were now proceeding along the lines suggested at that meeting.

While the Council recognized that the assessments would fall heavily on some, they were powerless to help them only so far as being lenient as possible in giving them extended time to pay for the improvements.

The sum to be paid by the colored property holders on E. Church Street for improvements, amounts to about $3,600.00 and runs from $65 to $135 per property and the payments will be extremely hard for some of the colored people to meet.

LAUNCHING NEW BOAT.

Many Members of St. Peter's Join in Party, Goes Under Name of "Carl."

The gasoline yacht built by the Rev. David Howard was launched from the yard of F. A. Grier and Son Tuesday of this week. The occasion brought many members and friends of St. Peter's congregation to witness the event. After the little craft had taken her initial "dip" a handsome set of flags was presented Mr. Howard by the ladies of the congregation and choir. Rev. Mr. Howard, who was evidently much touched by this evidence of esteem responded in a few well chosen words which admirably expressed his appreciation.

Miss Marguerite Grier had the honor of being selected to christen the boat which she did in a very graceful and pretty manner, using a bottle of water for this purpose. She gave the little craft the name of "Carl" in honor of the adopted son of the Rev. Mr. Howard.

The boat is quite a little beauty and does much credit to her builder for her many evidences of mechanical skill finished, workmanship and artistic design. She was built by the Rev. Mr. Howard during the past winter at his leisure moments and will be used by him for fishing and other little pleasure excursions down the river. The machinery was installed by F. A. Grier and Son and was up to their usual standard of excellence.

After the launching, members of the "Choir" were taken for a boat ride down the river by Mr. Calvin Grier in a gasoline boat owned by F. A. Grier and Son, who extended this and many other courtesies to make the occasion enjoyable during the ride. Bananas and other fruits were served to those aboard, as was also to those who remained ashore after which cigars were passed to the gentlemen present. Everybody voted the affair most enjoyable, the Rev. David Howard a genial host, with best wishes for the "Carl."

COURT TO RAILROADS.

Important Decision Should Be Source of

Less High-Waywardness On Part Of Railway Magnates.

One more step of large importance, has been taken in the movement to bring American railroads into subjection to law and into the line of their duty as servants of the people. The Supreme Court of the United States on Monday last formally declared that "the primal duty of a carrier is to furnish adequate facilities to the public," and "that duty may well be compelled, although by doing so, as an incident, some pecuniary loss from rendering such service may result."

Let it be observed that the court by no means decides as some of its critics will probably urge, that a railroad must be forced to conduct its general business that it will lose money. This would be absurd and fatal.

The case in point was this: A North Carolina railroad refused to run a train to connect with a train upon another road, so that persons could, by making the junction, travel to the state capital. The plea was that the running of the train would not pay. The state Railroad Commission determined that, whether the train paid or not, public convenience required that it should run.

The case was appealed to the Supreme Court of North Carolina, and, despite the familiar contention that there was a proposition to take private property without consideration, the court decided against the railroad company.

Then appeal was made to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the decision again was adverse to the railroad company. It was presented by Justice White, who used these memorable words:

The mere incurring of a loss from the performance of such a duty does not in and of itself necessarily give rise to the conclusion of unreasonableness, as would be the case were the whole scheme of dates was unreasonable.

As the duty to furnish necessary facilities is co-terminous with the powers of the corporation, the obligation to discharge that duty must be considered in connection with the nature and productiveness of the corporate business as a whole, the character of the service required and the public need for its performance.

In other words, if the business of a railroad, as a totality, produces profit, the fact that one small item of service produces no profit does not remove the obligation to perform such service. One of the purposes of the creation of a railroad is, of course, to make money for the stockholders. But another and quite equally important purpose is to supply to the public facilities for travel.

It is important to observe that this is now the law of the land. The decision was uttered upon a case in North Carolina; but it reaches into other states and into Pennsylvania.

Involved in the decision is the fact that a railroad is not at all as has been frequently urged, mere private property. "May we not do what we will with our own?" asks the railroad officer. No, you may not, in such a matter as this, because, in a large and true sense, the railroad is not your own. The public act which created it, the public permission given to it to have existence represent a public right of control which does not go with private, individual ownership.

Moreover, the vital, necessary function of the road as a common carrier imposes obligations with respect to the service of the public.

The right of eminent domain belongs to the sovereign authority, namely, the people. Given to the railroad company, it is a precious possession, and the giver is warranted in taking care that the receiver of it shall not abuse it.

Is it fair, for example, that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, after selling private property so that it might build its low grade freight line from Lancaster eastward should refuse to carry passengers on that line or to put in sidings for the use of business men?

Some years ago the Reading Railway stopped running passenger trains on the Plymouth branch from the North Penn to the Schuylkill Valley. The plea was that the trains did not pay; but the local court compelled the resumption of the train service.

Recently the Reading Railway Company discontinued its Germantown Junction station, apparently, because the public used it to connect with the New York trains of the Pennsylvania Railroad at North Philadelphia. The purpose was to force people to go to New York over the Reading line. It would be quite interesting to have the North Carolina decision applied to this particular case.

But there are only specimen instances of railroad arrogance. All over the state the companies refuse to make convenient connections with the trains of other companies.

It is to enforce just this kind of reform in the public interest that a railroad commission is needed. The people of North Carolina, who have been balked and harassed by the railroad in question, would have suffered without remedy, but for the existence of a sympathetic railroad commission.

No private person with such a grievance would have carried the matter up through the courts. That necessary function could be performed only by a public body actually representing, and actually capable of contending for, the rights of the people.

This experience may serve to strengthen the demand that the Legislature at Harrisburg shall give such a commission to this state. The people with almost perfect unanimity desire it. It is opposed by the railroads, and solely because they well know that, when the commission shall be created, their lawlessness and contempt for the public rights will be peremptorily restrained.

The North Carolina decision is the latest demonstration that the rule of law for American railroads has at last begun. It clinches and fixes all that has hitherto been done to make the railroad corporation the subordinate, rather than the superior, of the public. Not one step backward along that course will ever be taken. The American people intend to rule this land, absolutely and without rivals.

R. R. TO BE REASSESSED

N. Y. P. & N. E. R. R. Will Be Reassessed,

Addition Made To The Trackage And Equipment To Be Added.

The New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad Company has been notified by the commissioners of Wilkes county to the effect that all of the company's property located in this county will be reassessed for the purpose of taxation during the month of May. This property has not been assessed since 1896, and as the company has probably doubled its mileage within the county limits since that time in the way of double tracks and siding, the assessable basis of the company has been largely increased. The commissioners hold that the company's property and trackage is not assessed at enough per mile, and that the rolling stock, a portion of which is allowed to the assessments of this county, will also be considered in the reassessment.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood. It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys; but now modern science proves that early all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin by the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help the other organs to health. A trial convinces anyone.

You are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It finds the highest of its wonderful cures in the most distressing cases, and is sold in its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle free of charge, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

POULTRY

SITE FOR A POULTRY HOUSE.

Should be located to afford a Southern Exposure.

It must be located upon slightly elevated ground to afford perfect drainage. The building itself must be spacious, affording plenty of room on the floor for each individual fowl.

It should be located to afford a southern exposure, so that during the winter months plenty of warm sunlight can be reflected into the building. The structure itself should be so designed to eliminate as much exposure to cold winds as possible so that the temperature can be maintained as even as practicable.

The plans herewith show one of the poultry houses I have had in use for a number of years, says a poultry raiser, in Prairie Farmer. It was one of the first buildings I constructed.

Comfortable Hen House.

ed and I have been so well pleased with this design that I have constructed others on the same principle. One of the great features in favor of this plan of a poultry house is that it affords a large amount of floor space at reasonable cost, and at the same time supplies all the requirements necessary for the comfort of the fowls.

The building herewith shown is 18x30, with 7-foot posts in front, and 3-foot posts in the rear. Before the construction of the building was begun, a foundation was laid by excavating a small trench 18 inches wide and 20 inches deep. This trench was filled with small cobble stone for the foundation for the building. Upon this foundation a concrete wall was constructed 10 inches high and 8 inches wide.

The main frame work was constructed of 2x4 material with the exception of the sills which were of 3x8 stuff. For siding, matched pine was used of excellent quality as it was desirable to make the building warm as possible. The roofing is shingles laid five inches to the weather. Two large windows were put in on the south side to give plenty of sunlight. The inside of the building was sealed with matched material with felt paper between. This building is so well constructed that the weather must get pretty low in order to freeze water during the night.

Fig. 3 shows the ground plan. The west end is taken up with roosts which are partitioned off from the rest of the building. The roosts are constructed about 3 feet up from the floor. Along the south side under the windows is a dusting place where the sunlight falls directly upon the floor. Nests are provided to accommodate about 100 fowls. F is a drinking fountain. B is a feed bin where sufficient feed is kept at hand to eliminate labor in caring for the fowls.

To Prevent Poultry Mites.

For mites put inside of hen house with Portland cement and skim milk. All all crevices in wall and ceiling. The worst places may be daubed full of pine or gas tar. Destroy their breeding and hiding retreats. Fill a groove on upper side of perch with coal oil just before fowls go to roost. If perches are removable pour oil over them and touch a match. Spray during the day with some preparation like kerosene or a good proprietary lice killer. Cleanse the floor often and saturate that also.—Exchange.

Spraying Fruit Trees.

All fruit trees should be sprayed without regard to whether they have been attacked by insects or disease or escaped, as it is less labor to prevent attacks than to remedy the evil after it appears. It costs more to repair damage than to ward off danger. In some states, such as California, spraying the trees and vines is enforced by law. If the grower neglects his duty he is considered as one maintaining a public nuisance, and some official is ordered to spray the orchard, and add the cost to the tax bill of the negligent owner.

Furnish an Exercise Yard.

Attached to the cow house should be an exercise yard for daily use of cows during the stabling season. Roomy, open sheds should form a part of this inclosure, and the whole may well be roofed over, if arranged for the free circulation of air and for admitting sunshine to a large share of it, while excluding wind and storm.

Concentrates Sun's Rays.

There is an apparatus which concentrates the rays of the sun from more than 6,000 small mirrors on a spot about seven inches in diameter. The heat generated is about 7,000 degrees Fahrenheit. Iron can be melted in less than a minute and dry clay fused in about three minutes by this machine. Magnesia, one of the hardest things to melt, requiring a heat of about 6,400 degrees Fahrenheit, could be melted in twenty minutes.

DYING A LILLIES

W. E. F. STEEL, 614 Main Street.

When Steel, of the R. A. M. C., came in from making the post mortem examination. The air was hot, and the punkah seemed blowing hotter, but no one had called for a drink. The silence was hard to break.

The Colonel did not look down from the ceiling, and the Second in Command did not look up from the floor, when Steel entered, and the Adjutant and I did not say anything. "What did he die of?" the Adjutant asked at length; and the Colonel looked down quickly, and the Second in Command looked up. Warren, of the Artillery, had been late for his wedding with Miss Craven that morning, and when they went to look for him they found him dead in his bungalow, staring hard at nothing, as if he saw death come. It was the Second in Command who went in first. They had always been friends. You could count Warren's friends on the fingers of one hand.

"What did Warren die of?" Steel drew with his finger on the table, as if he were pointing to a chart. "That is what I want you fellows to tell me."

The Colonel leaned forward. "A doctor never knows, of course," he said, with some undercurrent of meaning that I could not follow; "but it's his business to pretend that he does."

His eyes and Steel's met. The Colonel has strong eyes, but Steel's are stronger. "If the doctor won't pretend," he retorted, "there's an inquest."

"Good heavens, man!" the Second in Command jerked out, "you're not going to have any foolery of that sort?"

Steel drew another temperature chart—fever, with the line running up high and coming to a sudden stop. We knew it.

"You needn't call it an inquest unless you like," he offered; "but I'm going to settle this by myself. Shall we do it here and now?"

The Colonel glanced at him under his thick eyebrows and nodded, and the Second in Command nodded, and I nodded, and the Adjutant nodded. "But I don't know what it's all about," he protested.

"Neither," I said, "do I."

"I think," said Steel, "the Colonel and the Second could guess. Perhaps you'll put the case, Colonel?"

"It's no use putting guesses," the Colonel objected, "and I've no wish to put any case at all. You've asked for it. Go on."

"Very well," Steel lit a cigarette, took a few slow draws, and threw it impatiently away. "I don't want to put the case either, but—this is: Warren was to have married Miss Craven this morning. If she didn't mind, there was no reason why he shouldn't. Steel shrugged his shoulders ever so slightly, and the Second in Command drew himself up rigidly.

"He was my friend," he remarked, with the ring of combat in his voice. He knew that we didn't like Warren.

"I was merely disposing of the theory of suicide," Steel explained. "I know he was your friend, and I'm sorry. A quarter of an hour after he was due at the church, he is found dead, apparently of heart failure. He did die of heart failure. Most people do; but we only call it that when we can't find any reason why the heart failed. The symptoms allow me to put it down to that. They also allow me to put it down to another cause—only one. That cause is the inhaling of a certain drug. It isn't known to European medical science, and I'm not going to make it known. They know it well enough in India—Warren came from India; so did Miss Craven."

"I object to that remark," I interposed. "Miss Craven is a friend of mine, and very nearly the closest girl at the station; and she was engaged to him. There's no need to drag her in."

"That," said the Colonel, "is the question, I take it?" He looked at Steel; and Steel nodded.

"The whole question," he said, shutting his mouth with a snap. "Surely," the Second in Command began, "is there any need to go on with this? He—was my friend; and he was engaged to her, and—Suppose she broke it off, or anything, and that upset him. He'd rather use logic things alone. What's the good of going into it, Steel?"

Steel set his lips and contrasted his forehead once or twice, and tapped slowly with his finger on the table. "If it were just a case of breaking it off—and she didn't care for him—I'd leave it alone, right enough. Look here! I found Warren's little dog curled up behind the curtains, stone dead. Heart failure, too. Funny little beast he was. Remember how he used to howl when Warren fussed over her? There was just a faint scent about the room when I noticed carefully like the odor of lilies when they're going off a bit. That's the way the stuff smells—at first. No one has ever told how it smells at the time."

The Colonel lit a cigarette. His gray hand shook a trifle. The Second shifted his head again. The Adjutant and I stared at one another.

"You're nothing to connect her with it," he said hotly. "I don't believe it."

"No," said Steel slowly. "I've nothing to connect her with it, except that I don't think she wanted to marry him. Anyhow, she didn't care for him, and—very likely there isn't anything in it, but—I noticed a curious look on the Colonel's face when he told her; and a curious look on her face when she looked at him. Can you tell us, Sir?"

The Colonel turned the chessroot round in his fingers and inspected it as if it were a doubtful recruit on parade.

"There's nothing in it," he said; "it's a woman, and so—"

"There's nothing in it," he said; "it's a woman, and so—"

The Second was a little in his chair. "It was my—friend," he growled, and then he surveyed a little more; and the Colonel caught him by the arm.

"Poor old chap!" he said gently. Steel drew a temperature chart upon the table—an incommensurable chart, with lines running wiggly-waggly, up and down, up and down. "I need not trouble you any more, gentlemen," said a professional voice. "I had myself able to certify to death from heart failure."

He wrote the same certificate for Sylvia Craven; but when he spoke to us he called it a broken heart, and he put a heap of white flowers on her grave. It was his solitary outbreak of sentiment, he apologized.—The Sketch.

Voracity of Black Bass.

The black bass is like "a roaring lion going about seeking whom he may devour," says a writer in Field and Stream. "I have seen a good-sized specimen go into a school of minnows and eat and stuff until he could not get any more into his capacious insides, then go off by himself, throw up what he had eaten and begin over; again, after which he would keep killing the poor, innocent minnows apparently for the mere pleasure of killing. Very young bass will attack minute water plants and get away with every one in sight, adopting the same method as their elders. To illustrate the extent of the cannibalism of the black bass, here is an experience of a superintendent of one of the fish hatcheries in Pennsylvania:

"The superintendent made an actual count of 20,000 young bass about an inch long and placed them in a fry pond by themselves. He gave them food six times a day, and, according to his statement, each fish ate on an average three times its own weight of prepared food every twenty-four hours. They were placed in a pond on July 1, and on October 1, when they were taken out, there were only 11,000, and the record showed that less than 200 died from sickness. It is reasonable to suppose, therefore, that, in addition to the food given them by the superintendent, there were about 9,000 bass devoured by their stronger and more fortunate companions."

What Becomes of Old Shoes.

What becomes of all the old shoes is a question quite as puzzling as where all the pins go. Old shoes, however, really have an important place in the trade world and serve numerous useful purposes, says the Chicago Tribune.

They are all cut in small pieces and put to soak for a couple of days in chloride of sulphur, which makes the leather hard and brittle.

It is then washed off with tepid water, dried and ground to a fine powder, which is mixed with an adhesive substance, such as glue or shellac, or a thick solution of gum. The material is then put into moulds to form combs, buttons and a variety of useful things that are supposed to be made of rubber.

Old leather is used to make prussic potash. It is put into a large iron pot and heated with pearl ash and old iron books. The soluble portions are dissolved out, the salt that results is added to one of iron, and Prussian blue, used either for dyeing purposes or as a pigment, is made.

By another process of reducing the leather to powder it is converted again into an artificial leather which is used in making the cheaper grade of shoes.

Origin of a Modern Phrase.

"Hi! Hi! Hurrah!" is a modern phrase. The "Hi!" and the "Hurrah!" do not seem to have come together before the nineteenth century. In the eighteenth century "Hi!" amounted to just "Hi!" or "Hullo!" while "Hurrah" was then usually "Hussa!" It is like the Cossack shout "Ora!" but it is supposed to have been a German cry of the chase, adapted by the German soldiers to war, and borrowed from them by the English, perhaps first of all at the time of the thirty years' war. "Hurra!" is said to have been the battle cry of the Prussians in the war of liberation (1813-1815). Still the curious fact that seventeenth and eighteenth century writers call "Hussa!" a sailors' shout lends support to the conjecture that it may really have been the shouting cry, "Hussa!"

Editors in Poland.

Some Polish editors have a hard time. In a parting word to his readers the retiring proprietor of the Polish paper Gornostalax says that during the five years of the paper's existence the responsible editors have spent four and a half years in prison, while $3,750 has been paid in fines.

Yield from Irish Bogs.

It is estimated by experts that Irish bogs are capable of turning out $0,000,000 tons of fuel a year for a thousand years, and if this were sold it would bring in $60,000,000 annually.

Cards.

Cards were first invented in 1390, for the amusement of Charles VI, King of France. As stamping had not then been discovered, the cards had their designs painted upon them by hand, and thus were expensive.

PROF. GOSLEE'S RESIGNATION.

The resignation of F. Grant Goslee, professor of Mathematics in the Wicomico High School, will be resented by all interested in educational work. Prof. Goslee is well thought of by all who know him. His scholarship is unquestioned, and his ability to impart this knowledge is the equal of anyone's in the County. A good sign of whether a teacher is doing his duty or not is usually found in the regard and respect the pupils have for him. It is not perhaps too much to say that Mr. Goslee enjoyed the regard and respect of his pupils in an unusual degree and earned it by his fairness, honesty and thoroughness as a teacher.

It is generally understood that Mr. Goslee's resignation was not voluntary, but was placed in the hands of the School Board on the intimation that same would be acceptable. On what grounds his resignation was desired is not apparent, and the reasons—according to rumor—given are so foolish and ridiculous that it is almost impossible to believe that sensible men would consider them for a moment, and if there is nothing more behind them, then a great injustice has been done both Mr. Goslee and the patrons of the school. All of our citizens are interested in our public schools, and it is due to them that the true facts of Mr. Goslee's resignation should be given to the public, and let them judge whether or not he has had fair play.

OF INTEREST TO SALISBURIANS.

The Schooner Thomas B. Taylor, to Carry Passengers to the Jamestown Exposition.

We are informed by Mr. Glen Perdue, owner and manager of the schooner Thomas B. Taylor, that the work of fitting the Taylor up to carry passengers to the Jamestown Exposition, will soon begin. A wings will be put up the "Hold" converted into staterooms, toilet rooms put in and in fact, everything done to insure comfort and convenience of passengers. The Taylor is a nice roomy vessel and under the capable management of Capt. Vaughn. Persons wishing to visit the exposition and take their families or to make up a party of friends should find this arrangement both pleasant and economical.

The vessel will be fitted up to accommodate about forty persons on each trip and expects to make several trips during the season.

Schedule of trips and rate of fare will be announced later.

Bishop Rebuked The Hatless.

Wilmington, Del., April 29.—Following a wedding at Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church Saturday evening, after the wedding party had left the church, Bishop Coleman, one of the officiating clergymen, noticed a number of ladies there without hats, which is customary at most church weddings here, and he took occasion to inform those present that it was against the rules of the Episcopal Church for ladies to appear in the church without hats or some other covering for their heads.

"I will excuse you this time," the bishop said, "but don't do it again."

The hotel congestion at Norfolk was foreshadowed Thursday when 800 people on the ferry from Cape Charles tried to storm the breakfast room, with accommodations for 40. There was a delegation of National Guardsmen who escorted a personage of some prominence from a small New England State. The National Guardsman gained possession of the breakfast room on the ferry and stationed one man at the door to call off the names of the elect, while the common herd waited hungry.

"This way, Major," said the factotum. "You're next, Colonel," and so it went until a frowny person from somewhere south of Houston street strode up to the door.

"Hav, I'm a brigadier general traveling incognito, and I eat!" said the frowny one. He ate.

It has been decided by the Board of Trustees of the M. P. Church to purchase a pipe organ. A building to accommodate it will be built in a few days, and the organ is expected the first of June. Collectors have been requested to visit the congregation and solicit contributions for the organ.

The pastor wishes those waiting to be called first, say "yes" second, "no" third, give liberally. A larger organ to date organ has been purchased, and we hope to have it in time for this year.

BALTIMORE EXPOSITION

In 1914. Ten Million Dollar Fair To Celebrate Centennial of The Star Spangled Banner.

Baltimore has caught the exposition fever. It is the only one of the big cities that has never had an international exhibition, and it proposes to celebrate the climax of the War of 1812 and the birth of "The Star Spangled Banner" by an exposition on its water-front in 1914. The suggestion is made by the Baltimore American in which "The Star Spangled Banner" was published from Key's manuscript. Gen. Felix Agnes, the editor and publisher of the American, has enlisted the interest of the city and State in the proposition. The City Council of Baltimore has taken steps towards organization and Governor Warfield has promised his co-operation. General Agnes calls it "The Banner Exposition of the Banner Century." The following is from the announcement of the enterprise:

"The year 1814 was momentous in American history. The war that began in 1812 reached its climax. If the British had succeeded in capturing Baltimore there is no telling how far the struggle would have gone, or what the result might have been in America. But our people, with a gallantry, that history has not sufficiently recognized, repulsed the enemy, and out of that splendid victory came 'The Star Spangled Banner,' the lyric that will be sung as long as America endures.

So, the 100th anniversary of the birth year of 'The Star Spangled Banner' will give to us for celebration and display the century which has contributed more of human advancement than all that went before. Practically every invention, every step of industry, every big fact in transportation and communication will come within this 100 years. The year itself will afford some striking anniversaries; for instance, it was in 1814 that Fulton made the beginning of steam in the Navy, and a score of events of like interest can be found.

The whole matter opens a prospect practically without limit, and gives us an anniversary occasion unsurpassed by any which has been celebrated in previous expositions.

By 1914 we shall, in all human probability, have in operation the canal connecting the Chesapeake and Delaware Bays. Our Chesapeake commerce, now the largest of any body of water in America, and far exceeding our total foreign trade, will be vastly increased. "There can be no question whatever as to Maryland's right to appropriate this great anniversary. In the War of 1812 Maryland supplied not only her quota of troops, but more than the Government could accept. Not only did she offer troops, but gave abundantly in money, so that President Madison said: 'The claims of Maryland for her expenditure during the war stand upon higher ground than those of any other State in the Union.'

RESIGNATION OF MR. GOSLEE

Causes Much Comment By Patrons Of The School.

Nothing has happened in Salisbury for quite a while which has occasioned so much comment as the resignation of Mr. F. G. Goslee, who for a period of several years has been teacher of Mathematics in Wicomico High School. Mr. Goslee had by close application and strict adherence to what he conceived to be his duty as a public educator—which standard he set very high—endeared himself both to the pupils and parents who were patrons of this School and there is no doubt that nine tenths of the people of this community will say that a mistake was made somewhere, when Mr. Goslee was allowed to go, especially on such flimsy grounds as is currently reported. While authoritative information is hard to obtain in this case, the really reasons for Mr. Goslee's resignation are pretty generally known and are not of such character as to reflect much credit in certain quarters. It will be rather a hard proposition for the responsible parties to explain to the public whose business it is to know, why they should be deprived of one of the best teachers this County has ever had.

The reasons which are generally reported to have led to Mr. Goslee's resignation is that he refused to be dictated to as to the manner in which he should conduct that part of the work which came under his immediate supervision or within the four walls of his room whereby a large part of the practical work would be thrown aside to make room for non-essentials. Not even the President of the School Board nor the principal of the School was aware that Mr. Goslee had resigned until a few days before it was to take effect, although the resignation had been on file for the period required by law which is 30 days. Neither had the Board been called together to take cognizance of a matter of such vital importance as that of losing one of its most valuable and important teachers, but the vacancy seems to have been filled without consulting anyone.

DEATH PREFERRED

To Service In Navy. Herndon E. Mills Shoots Himself. Had Deserted From U. S. Navy. Fear of Arrest Suspected To Be Cause of Rash Act.

Herndon E. Mills, a young farmer, 25 years old living near Quantico, shot himself through the head last Sunday evening while on a visit to his sister, who lives at Westport. Mr. Mills who was accompanied by his wife, seemed in unusual good spirits on this day, but a desire to get off by himself was noticed by his relatives but they had no suspicion that he intended to harm himself. He was missed only for a short time late in the afternoon and when found he was dead with a bullet hole in his right temple. Young Mills enlisted in the U. S. Navy about two years ago, for a period of 4 years, and was placed aboard the Battleship Denver, from which he deserted last June. Warrants were out for his arrest and this is supposed to have been the cause of his committing such a rash act. Mr. Mills was very much dissatisfied with his service in the Navy and was often heard to remark that he had rather die than to be taken back. The deceased leaves a widow who was a Miss Bricker, of Harleburg, Pa., for whom much sympathy is expressed.

More Pay for Rural Carriers.

Washington, April 29.—The basis of distributing the $6,000,000 increase in the salaries of rural free delivery carriers provided for by the last Congress has nearly been completed by Fourth Assistant Postmaster General DeGraw, and will result in individual increases of from 9 to 14 per cent. The increases are based on the number of miles traveled by rural carriers, those traversing 24 or more miles receiving the maximum salary of $900 a year.

Dover, April 29.—Miss Laura Jester, graduate of the Wilmington Conference Academy, and daughter of Rev. B. F. An old soldier writes about ARIOSIA Coffee: "Your coffee is the best and richest coffee I ever drank since I left the service, from '61 until I received your coffee yesterday." A soldier knows coffee by the taste, and the way it makes him feel, and would sooner go without his bread than without his coffee. Arbuckle's ARIOSIA was the first roasted, packaged coffee, packaged for protection of consumers, roasted and the pores of each berry sealed with a coating of fresh eggs and pure sugar, to hold the goodness in and make the coffee settle clear and quickly. Better than "fresh roast." Warning a little develops the flavor and makes the grinding easy. Our enormous coffee business, exceeding the next four largest firms in the world together, reduces our average cost per pound, and enables us to give you better coffee for your money than you can buy in any other way. There are more packages of ARIOSIA sold in the United States than all the other Coffee packages combined.

Miranda Wood's Romance

By Ethel Bret Harte.

The hot summer sun, which had been scorching and lashing into white heat the little New England village of Northfield all day, was now settling red behind a cluster of firs upon the far off flanks of the Berkshire hills, sinking slowly, drowsily to rest in vivid haze, as though worn out with its own fierce intensity.

One cottage, standing apart from this cluster of dwellings, alone seemed desolate, this sense of loneliness being to-night intensified by the almost tragically forlorn figure of a tall, gaunt woman sitting rigidly upon the doorstep, her thin hands clasped tightly about her knees.

But to-night, musing on her doorstep, Miranda felt strangely troubled and perplexed in mind, for a conversation she had overheard on her return from work that evening kept repeating itself to her brain with startling frequency and distinctness.

It had so happened that while passing along the village street she had encountered Deacon Scoville, who, in shirt sleeves and carpet slippers, a corn-cob pipe contentedly tucked away in the corner of his mouth, was chatting lazily over his garden gate with Pete Farman, this latter gentleman being entirely absorbed in the engrossing though somewhat strenuous occupation of cleaning his nails with a large jack-knife.

As Miranda approached the Deacon had hailed her with a cheery "Good evening, Miranda. Powerful hot, ain't it?" while Pete, looking up grudgingly from his rugged toilet, had remarked with quiet insolence, "Most hot enough to roast faters on your tin roof, ain't it, eh?"

The Deacon's remarks Miranda had acknowledged with a sharp bow of assent, while her eyes had swept scornfully the impudent, grinning face of Pete Farman. The next instant she had turned the corner of the wood sharply and was lost to view behind the tall lilac hedge which formed an almost impenetrable wall at the side of the Deacon's garden.

Here she stopped, ostensibly to settle her bonnet with an angry jerk, but in reality to recover her breath and composure, which seemed to be slipping from her in gusts of fury. As she was about to start on again, the wind, swaying the lilac tops hither and thither, brought the voices of the two men she had just quitted clearly and distinctly to her ears, nothing her as though spell-bound in curious though horrified fascination.

"Hurrah!" laughed Pete Farman: "There goes the gal what's never been kissed; don't wonder, it 'ed take a powerful nerve. Gul, what a face! Looks like she'd been reared on persimmons. Euf!"

Then the Deacon's voice drawled softly: "I don't believe that yarn 'bout her never havin' been kissed. Miranda's most powerful homely, but she's got a good heart all the same, and that's bound to have fetched some fellow, loatheless long enough to give her a kiss."

"No! I ain't never been kissed." But already the feeling of anger and resentment which had at first been paramount was giving place to one of singular softness as she thought again of the Deacon's words. So "she had a good heart," she had almost forgotten she had one, and placed her hand hurriedly to her left side to make sure that it was really there.

To-night some stronger will than hers seemed swaying the current of her thoughts; some power at once alluring and suggestive with which Reason battled fruitlessly; some wine which seemed to lull her senses into blissful confusion and to which she finally gave herself up with childlike abandon.

"I wonder what it's like," she murmured, while again that vague softness enveloped her as in a cloak. "I wonder," she repeated—but here the trees began to dance in lazy rhythm before her eyes as, lulled by the drone of insects in the grass, she fell asleep.

In an instant the men were in hot pursuit, stumbling over each other in their eagerness to be in at the death. Miranda watched them out of sight, a scornful smile on her thin lips; then suddenly, as though realizing for the first time the enormity of the situation, she walked quickly to a chair, into which she sank, and, throwing her apron over her head, sat rigid and silent for a quarter of an hour.

Who was trying to think it all out? She was, to begin with, and what she had done. So lost was she in her own dreams and calculations she had quite forgotten the man in the jam cupboard until she felt her apron gently pulled from her face, and, looking up, she beheld the man much like she had saved and for whom she had felt the first love.

thing that sounded strangely like an oath, as he dragged her unresistingly on her feet.

"Come quickly now! They're after me and they'll kill me if they get me—don't you understand?"

Miranda, however, now fully awake, tore her hands from his grasp, and drawing herself up to her full height, stood a stiff and forbidding sentinel in her doorway.

This, then, was a man, and evidently a bad one.

"Get out of my house, murderer," she cried, in a sharp voice. Then, waving his impatient denial aside with a warning hand, she continued: "If they're after yer to kill yer, yer done somethin' yer hadn't oughter, and I for one won't stand in the way of seein' justice done."

Then, seizing a broom which lay against the door, and using it rather as a weapon of extermination than of defence, she lunged heavily toward him.

Hysterically dodging this furious onslaught of bristles, the desperate man fell on his knees before her, and raising his eyes, which Miranda noticed for the first time were soft and brown beneath their fringe of black lashes, to her face, whispered between hope and fear: "Surely there is at least one spark of womanly pity in your heart."

Miranda started, clutching blindly, wildly at the door for support, as the Deacon's words flashed like lightning through her brain: "She's got a good heart, and that's bound to fetch some man." The hot blood mounted to her face, and she clapped her hands over her ears to keep out the voice, fearing lest the man at her feet should hear it also.

The almost breathless silence which had followed his eloquent pleading was now broken by the sound of voices along the road, and one could discern dimly in the direction of the village a small black stream of figures running in ragged form, now stopping apparently to peer into ditches, and then hurrying on with renewed vigor. Each moment they became more distinct, and Miranda fancied she could distinguish the voices of the Deacon and Pete Farman among the rest.

Swift as a hare she flew to the door, beckoning the man to follow her, then throwing wide the cupboard door, in a voice scarcely less tense than his had been, "Get in there, quick!"

The man sprang forward like some liberated animal—and the next moment the door closed upon him.

But none too soon, for already a party of excited men, headed by Pete Farman, had turned in at her garden gate.

"Yer ain't seen nothing of a man running for his life, have ye?" gasped Pete, his gooseberry eyes nearly bulging from their sockets. A likely young fellow with long black whiskers.

"Someone's broke in up to Farmer Cuddyback's and stole all Mary and Hank's wedding silver," panted the Deacon.

"Serves them right for having been such gul darned fools as to get married," was Miranda's cool and tart reply.

But she was feeling very nervous despite this bravado, and when Pete Farman advanced dangerously near the fateful cupboard she cried in a somewhat choked voice: "I'll thank you, Pete Farman, to take your muddy boots off my clean paint; this ain't no cow shed."

Pete, momentarily awed, withdrew to the door, but from this safe retreat, his courage returning, he growled suspiciously: "Oh, that's all very fine talk, but I seed him turn in here, and it is my paint dooly, Miss Miranda Wood, to search this 'ere house."

"Search, then, till you're blue in the face, for all I care," replied Miranda, in a voice she fondly believed to be indifferent, but which, though bravely commenced, wavered perceptibly toward the close of the sentence.

"Well, then, we may as well be gone here," said the relentless Pete, walking toward the cupboard as he spoke. Like a flash Miranda was before him. Throwing herself defiantly against the door, she cried in a voice terrible to hear: "I'm blest if you do! There's all my winter preserves in that, and I'm not going to let any darned man set his foot in there till they've jellied."

Miranda was plain at all times, but now her face distorted with rage, was fearful to behold, and the men fell back a pace. For one moment she stood like a tigress at bay; the next, recognising her half won battle, she assumed her old, dry manner, and, pointing with a long, bony finger down the road, said, sarcastically: "And now, when you gentlemen have done insulting a poor, helpless woman in her own house, perhaps you might see if you could catch that man what's runnin' close to the stone wall yonder."

In an instant the men were in hot pursuit, stumbling over each other in their eagerness to be in at the death. Miranda watched them out of sight, a scornful smile on her thin lips; then suddenly, as though realizing for the first time the enormity of the situation, she walked quickly to a chair, into which she sank, and, throwing her apron over her head, sat rigid and silent for a quarter of an hour.

Who was trying to think it all out? She was, to begin with, and what she had done. So lost was she in her own dreams and calculations she had quite forgotten the man in the jam cupboard until she felt her apron gently pulled from her face, and, looking up, she beheld the man much like she had saved and for whom she had felt the first love.

What she was trying to think it all out? She was, to begin with, and what she had done. whom she had told the first lie in her spotless life.

What a change had come over that face! All the terror had gone from those luminous eyes, and in its stead was a soft tenderness.

"O, bless you for what you have done to-night!" he murmured in a deep, rich voice, "God bless you!"

Then for one blissful moment Miranda felt his arms about her shoulders, as, bending his head to hers, he kissed her.

III

The sun was high in the heavens and the fire quite cold on the hearth when Miranda finally stirred in her chair.

What had come over her? Had she dreamed it all? No, she had not slept; she had been conscious of every tick of the great clock above the mantel, and, besides, there was the cupboard gaping wide, displaying neat rows of jam pots upon its shelves. No, she had not dreamed; she had simply lived, and it seemed to her, for the first time in her life. A man had kissed her and asked God to bless her, and she had saved his life. Ah, it was all such a beautiful romance Miranda laughed happily as she pictured herself as heroine.

Singing, she went about her work, absently preparing her meager breakfast, which she scarcely touched. After giving a few almost coquettish touches to her toilet she looked lingeringly about the room in loving remembrance ere she turned the key in the door and went out.

The village street was almost deserted. Miranda noticed gratefully, for though she longed to hear the result of last night's robbery she yet feared to do so, and by the time she had reached the substantial Giles abode her heart was beating high to suffocation, and her hands trembled so she could scarcely lift the latch of the garden gate.

Had he really managed to escape or was he now languishing in some dreary prison? Her heart sickened at the thought.

At the door she was met by Mary Giles, who, eager to tell the news, did not notice Miranda's flushed face and trembling hands.

Here she learned that the "ruffian" (Miranda's hero) had got "clean away," and, with this blissful intelligence the happy, albeit guilty, Miranda set to work with a light heart. She listened to their story of the robbery with that superior judgment of one who knows, feeling herself a clever actress indeed.

She hummed to herself as she worked, slashing rather recklessly into the material Mary Giles had given her for the new bodice. This unwonted brightness puzzled the good people for whom she worked not a little, but when she actually cut two sleeves for one arm their wonder turned to alarm.

"Lands sake, Miranda Wood!" cried Mary Giles despairingly, as she gazed at her ruined bodice, "be you clean crazy? Lured, o'ed think you was in love!"

Miranda started guiltily, cutting a horrid gash in the fated bodice as she did so. In tragic silence the two women looked down at the wreck before them; then Miranda said in hard, wooden tones: "How much did it cost?"

"It cost me seventy-five cents at Martin's sale, and you couldn't get it less than a dollar 'other times," replied the now almost hysterical Mary Giles in bitter reproach.

Slowly drawing her purse from her pocket, Miranda counted out four twenty-five cent pieces and laid them in a neat pile upon the table. Then before the astonished Mary Giles could recover her breath she had fled.

She hurried along the road her head bent guiltily, scarcely heeding where she was going until, coming in contact with some huge bulk which seemed to her confused senses like a great feather bed, she looked up to find herself face to face with Mrs. Scoville, who, fat and excited, was fanning herself wildly with a newspaper at Miranda's own name.

"Land's sake, M's Scoville!" she cried in alarm, "whatever is the matter of yer? Looks like yer was wasp to have a stroke!"

"I've had one eready," exclaimed the Deacon's wife theatrically. "A most shocking thing I call it—most indecent. Here," she added, thrusting the newspaper under Miranda's nose as she followed her, panting, into the kitchen, "read that for yourself."

As Miranda read a faint, sick dizziness crept over her, the ground seemed to sway beneath her feet, and, sinking into a chair, she muttered forlornly to herself, "So it was all a lie after all. It was a traitor's kiss."

What she read was as follows:—

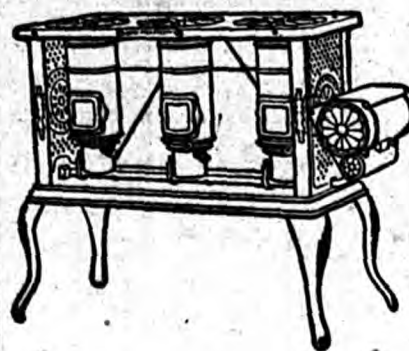

A Clever Criminal Caught at Last.

A paltry robbery of wedding silver at the house of a farmer named Cuddyback, residing in the village known as Scoville's Glen, was the means of running to earth one of the greatest and at the same time cleverest criminals of modern times.

The prisoner, caught while trying to escape by jumping into a slowly moving freight train three miles below the scene of the robbery, gave his name as Farman, but was found to be a woman in male attire, and had subsequently been identified as Marie Renne, author of the great diamond robbery at the Hotel in Dresden, in which a well known prince travelling incognito was killed, and instigator and prime mover in many subsequent robberies. Until now she had managed to evade the vigilance of the police through her many clever disguises, the last mentioned being perhaps the most complete.

A WORKING MODEL ENGINE.

An Ontario Watchmaker Has Made One Weighing Only Four Grains.

A watchmaker of Ontario has made a remarkable working model of an engine, says the London Globe. It weighs only four grains, and is made of gold and steel. It would take 120 of these almost microscopic engines to weigh an ounce, while 1,920 would be required to weigh a pound, and 3,840,000 to weigh a ton. The speed and horse power of this little model have been estimated by Professor Chant, of the University of Toronto. It makes 6,000 revolutions per minute, and its working power is one 480,000th of a horse power. The bore of its cylinder is three-hundredths of an inch in diameter, and the length of its stroke one 32d of an inch. Truly a wonderful little engine.

Height of Manhattan Island.

There is a general impression that Manhattan Island is comparatively level, while it is far from it. From the Battery water level you must climb 77 feet to reach the Grand Circle at Central Park; 23 feet more to get to the highest point in Mount Morris Park, 12 feet more to reach water level in Central Park reservoir; 20 feet more to get to the top of Morongo Park; another 48 feet to stand at Broadway and One Hundred and Seventy-fifth street, and yet another 50 feet to get to Washington Bridge road and One Hundred and Eighty-fourth street, when you are 250 feet above the water of the bay.

Roumania's Population.

Roumania is inhabited by a bewildering variety of races, but whether of Greek, Slav or Teutonic lineage, the modern Roumanian makes it a point of honor to claim descent from the colonists whom Trajan planted in the conquered province of Dacia, A. D. 107. Calling themselves Romuni and their language Roumule, the proud citizens seldom draw out a legal document without some allusion to their founder, whom they style "the divine Trajan." The Roumanian language reflects the composition of the race, and the only faintly suggests the language which Trajan spoke.

Timbuctoo's Big Game.

Timbuctoo used to be a region of which most Europeans had heard little and knew less. But that hazy time is past now. Timbuctoo is being proclaimed to the world as a small party of sportsmen bagged five elephants in the Gouna district. It is declared that in more than one district of eighteen miles square more than two hundred head of elephant may be found. Altogether, it is claimed for this part of French Africa that it is a splendid region for big game and that the attention of sportsmen should be directed to it.—London Globe.

Egypt's Landholders.

There are an enormous number of small landholders in Egypt, 5,000,000 acres being cultivated by over 1,000,000 landowners, of whom 6,000 are Europeans, owning on an average, a little over 100 acres. Nine hundred and forty peasants hold under five acres each, or 23 per cent. of the whole cultivated land; while 12,000 men of means have holdings above fifty acres, their total being over 2,500,000 acres, or 44 per cent. of the whole; proprietors of between five and twenty acres having 21 per cent.—Exchange.

VARIOUS USES OF CORN

Sixty Years Ago Considered Good Only for Coarse Food.

FINE PRODUCT OF TODAY

In Spanish-American War Corn Stalks Were Considered Good for Nothing Between Plates of War. Values of Pad-greed Grain—In Paper Making.

Sixty years ago, corn was considered suitable only for coarse food, the nourishment of animals, and the manufacture of whisky. Now, however, multitudes of by-products had their bases in this, our national grain. Thirty years ago there was practically no glucose manufactured in America, but since Indian corn came to the front in this field we are enabled to export a goodly quantity of this product, while foreign glucose made from rice, wheat, potato, and sago starches cannot compete with that of our own manufacture.

But after a time chemists discovered that this little grain contained an oil which was worth more than the other constituents—that in proportion to its weight it was the most valuable portion of the grain. It is now subjected to high pressure, and a rich golden oil is extracted, and then purified by distillation it is so sweet that it may be acceptably used for salads. It should be sold for this purpose under its own name, though too often it is not. It will stand longer than most vegetable oils without becoming rancid, and is now manufactured in the United States in goodly quantities. Last year we exported 3,222,875 gallons.

Corn oil, vulcanized, forms the basis for a substitute for rubber, a substitute which, being compounded with sixty per cent of commercial rubber, is used in the manufacture of rubber boots, tires, blankets, linoleum, and other similar articles. A large percentage of the crude oil is used by soapmakers, and the residue makes a valuable food for cattle. Of the corn oil, cake, and meal we exported last year 14,014,885 pounds.

In Spanish war times it was found that the pith of the American corn-stalk made the best possible material for packing between the plates of warships. It not only presented a barrier difficult of penetration by the enemy's guns, but when an aperture was actually made, the absorbent qualities of the pith came into full play in the water to which it was now exposed, and it would often swell sufficiently to close the hole temporarily.

Another use for this pith has now been found in the manufacture of high-grade paper. Abundant experiments have demonstrated its value for this purpose, and a large plant will soon be built for its manufacture. Machinery will go into the field, and the leaves, husk the ears, and band the stalks into bundles. These will then be sent to the depleting plant where, after passing through several processes, the pith will be rolled into sheets and converted into paper, while the outside fiber will be used for making box-board. The cost of manufacturing paper from corn-stalks will be about twenty-five dollars a ton, which is about one-third the cost of making it from rags or pulp.

The principle underlying the scientific method is the choosing of the finest seed from a given race. This is planted in an isolated location, and the corn highly cultivated and carefully harvested. Again the following year the process is repeated, this time by planting only the middle kernels of the most perfect ears selected from the preceding crop.

Another wonderful record has been attained in the production of the improved seed. In order to test this matter, three hundred acres were planted in Southern Illinois with pedigree seed. The average yield of the other fields on the same farm was about thirty bushels to the acre, while the yield from the improved seed was over sixty bushels, bringing the wise farmer a net profit of four thousand dollars from the choice of seed alone, the cultivation, condition of soil, etc., being about the same in all the fields.

New Toilet Dangers.
A large number of deaths and cases of blindness have been caused of late in the United States by the consumption and employment of wood alcohol. This alcohol is now used very extensively, and statistics show that it has actually caused some two hundred deaths. Not only is the consumption thus fatal, but the fumes which arise from it are dangerous and may produce blindness. As wood alcohol enters very largely into the cheaper liniments, hair tonics, cosmetics, perfumes, etc., it will be seen how great is the danger.

Statues of Egypt.
A scientist has discovered four hundred and fifty statues of all sizes at Karnak, Egypt. They are of granite, limestone, basalt, breccia, petrified wood, ivory, bronze, etc. Among other finds are ten sphinxes of granite, alabaster and limestone, images of sacred animals, vases, altars, obelisks, jewelry, and portrait statues. They were found in a sort of ditch, and throw new light on the twenty-second dynasty.

Strikes Without Killing.
A bullet that hits the mark but does not kill has just been invented by Dr. Delillers of Paris. The details of its construction are not mentioned, but it is said to be hollow, and can be used several times. In a test for duel practice pistols were used with steel guards resembling a sword-hilt, because, although the bullets do not penetrate the clothing it will wound naked flesh. Both men wore goggles. Out of 272 shots 203 struck some part of the bodies of the duellists.

FORESTRY TAUGHT AT OXFORD.

English University's Course a Preparation for Work in India. With a view of qualifying candidates for the Indian Forestry Service the University of Oxford has established a three-year course in forestry, two years of which must be spent at the University and one year on the Continent in practical work. The Indian Forestry Service offers exceptional opportunities for young men, inasmuch as the appointments are by competitive civil service examination and the salaries paid range from $1,500 to $10,000 a year, and furthermore a pension of $2,500 per annum may be obtained after twenty-two years of service, regardless of age.

In a Day's Hunt.

A remarkable hunt which took place in the northern part of Coahuila is reported from Monclova, in that State. A party, of which about seventy-five were hunters, went on a deer hunt through the mountains, being out eight days. The seventy-five hunters killed 800 deer, an average of 100 a day, or more than one deer a man a day.—Mexican Herald.

Developing Natural Forces.

The Kjellin electric furnace for the production of steel is about to be utilized on a large scale in Sweden, states the London Times. This is to be done in connection with the development of the immense water power of Trahalla near the extensive ore deposits in Nordland.

Tuberculosis in London.

Notwithstanding its fogs, London has a lower mortality from tuberculosis than other European capitals. In 1904 it was only 186 per 100,000 inhabitants, as against 257.5 in Berlin, 254 in Milan, 256 in Madrid, 314 in Vienna, 383 in Paris, 387 in Moscow.

An Inhabited Crater.

About 20,000 people live in the crater of an extinct volcano in Japan. They dwell contentedly in this pit-like town, surrounded by a vertical wall 80 feet high, rarely making a journey into the outer world, and practically forming a little community by themselves.

Courting in Spain.

In front of the apartment houses in Spanish cities it is no unusual thing to see three men standing side by side in the street, looking up and pouring out impassioned protestations each to a girl on a different floor.

A Poor Crowd.

Two hundred sailors of the Boston, on shore leave in San Francisco, found the bay too rough to get to the ship in their boats and could not raise $5 among them with which to hire a tug, so they had to stay ashore all night.

Japan's Sardine Commerce.

Large sardine canneries have been started at Nagasaki, Japan, with a view to exporting the fish to Europe. The flavor, however, is not good, and the prices are too high as yet to compete with the Mediterranean product.

Bacteria in Beer.

A German biological periodical publishes the result of investigations which indicate that among the bacteria found in bottled beer there is one which seems to occur nowhere else. It has been named Pseudomonas crevalleae.

Recovering Stolen Property.

Railroad detectives at Chickasha, searching for lost tools taken by shopmen, found that one employee had hauled away a locomotive cab and stashed it to his house for use as a kitchen.

Alcohol from Sweet Potatoes.

Sweet potatoes are principally used in the Azores to make alcohol, the yield being 10 to 11 per cent. The present price is about 13 cents (United States currency per liter (1.0567-quarts)).

Wedding Gifts of To-Day.

Whereas ten years ago silver was the leading item among a bride's gifts, cheap jewelry of a showy though quite up to date class is now given by even the richest of our relations and friends.

To Relieve Deafness.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the London Mail says that ear drums made of thin leaves of silver are being used in the Russian military hospitals for diseases of the ear to replace defective organs.

Large Cheese Consumption.

About 650 tons of Dutch cheese are consumed annually in Barcelona and the provinces of Catalonia and Valencia. Every Thursday evening a carload of about 500 cases leaves Amsterdam for Barcelona.

Destroying Bacteria in Meat.

It has been established that ordinary cooking does not kill bacilli, or deprive them of their infective character, if they are situated in the deeper portions of the meat, or in the inner layers of a butcher's "roll."

Bees Shipped by Post.

No live creatures except bees will be carried by post between Great Britain and Nicaragua, according to a parcel post agreement just concluded between the two countries.

Oldest Bank Notes.

The oldest banknotes in the world are the "flying money," or convenient money, first issued in China in 2697 B. C. One writer tells that the ancient Chinese bank notes were in many respects similar to those of the present day, bearing the name of the note, the signature of the official who issued it, and its value, in both figures and words. On the top of these curious notes was the following philosophic injunction: "Produce all you can; spend with economy."

DAIRY AND CREAMERY COVERED BARNYARDS.

Acts as a Labor Saver and the Cows Are Made Comfortable.

From experience gained by practical dairymen who have been in the habit of allowing their cows the freedom of a closed shed or covered barn yard and using the stable only at milking time. It has been found that the cows kept much cleaner than when stabled and that the milking stable is in a more sanitary condition, making it easier to produce clean milk.

By this method there is less difficulty in providing cows with an abundance of fresh air, and they are more vigorous and healthy and have better appetites than when kept in the stable. Since they can move about and get exercise they will not suffer in cold weather if the temperature is somewhat lower than in the ordinary labor. Labor is saved, as the shed can be bedded much more easily and quickly than can stalls there is little stable cleaning to be done, and the manure is hauled directly from the shed to the field at any time most convenient and when least damage is done the land by trampling. Another advantage is the saving of fertility much more completely.

Some Facts About the Dairy.

In an address by Prof. Hills of the Vermont Station he said that we should be open-minded about a good many dairy topics and accept what proves to be wise. Later developments he says show that the German standard, which requires approximately two and one-half pounds of protein per cow, per day, is subject to considerable modification. He had seen good results from cows capable of producing 250 pounds of butter or more a year, on a ration containing one and one-half pounds of digestible protein. Protein occupies too prominent a place in the German standard.

He has found that very heavy feeding does not give good financial returns. A cow with all the clover hay she will eat, a good ration of silage and six pounds of grain gives better returns than one with eight to twelve pounds of grain. The grain fed in excess of eight pounds does not return proportionate results.

Beets Tops in Dairy Ration.

Beet tops are no doubt a valuable addition to a dairy ration. The freshness and juicy nature keeps the appetite keen. They act as a regulator, preventing the constipating effect of dry foods. They thereby seem to aid digestion and assimilation and they certainly stimulate the milk flow. It is their succulent nature rather than the nutrients they contain that gives value to beet tops. Sugar beets have been found to possess a feeding value equal to corn silage for dairy cows and since the leaves appear to be more than half as nutritious as the root of beet adhering to them the value of this by-product is certainly not to be ignored in beet growing communities. An acre of good beets will yield from fifteen to twenty tons to the acre.—Field and Farm.

Detecting Renovated Butter.

Analytical chemists find it difficult to detect renovated butter by the tests which are entirely satisfactory in testing oleo, but photography surmounts this difficulty. Pure freshly-made butter contains only shapeless or uncrystallized fat, but any heating process such as is followed in renovation and running in of milk, immediately generates fat crystals. In oleo the crystals of meat fat are added to the cottonseed oil. Light passed through pure unrenovated butter appears dull and translucent, but when there are crystals in it bright and dark spots appear making a peculiarly shaded picture. By this process devoted butter can be detected readily enough to convince anyone of ordinary observation.—Indiana Farmer.

Dairy Notes.

A cow that fattens readily as a rule is beef bred rather than of the milk strain. When a man gets a good dairy bull there are always a lot of neighbors who say: "It's too much money." "There's no steak on his hind quarters." "He's too thin." There is just where they know nothing about dairy breeds. It is not "steak" that is wanted.

If the heifer calf shows incipient horns, use a stick of caustic potash and water on them and kill the horns, then they won't grow. When drying cows off give them dry food and milk occasionally only, making intervals between milkings longer and longer. Feed no slops.

Regular Milking Hours.

The importance of regular milking hours equally in every twenty-four, is emphasized by a successful dairymen. He found that although it would not pay the farmers to milk three times a day, the milk should be drawn every twelve hours for best results. The longer milk remains in the udder the less butter fat it will contain when drawn, so when the milking time is let run over time a few hours considerable is lost in quality; and this is not made up at the next milking, so that there is no way of regaining it.—Indiana Farmer.

EAST CHURCH STREET

Improvement Cement Sidewalks Put In, Several New Ones Underway.

E. Church Street is being much improved this week by the putting down of several new cement sidewalks. W. O. Gullett started the movement which has been continued by others and promises to extend the entire street. Jas. Johnson, col., has already begun one on front of his property. Mr. W. A. Crew, who is doing the work, has contracted with the trustees of the O. S. Baptist Church to put down a cement pavement on the long space of street which runs by their property.

All these will be made to conform to the grade established for new pavements. The property owners on this street are to be commended for making these improvements, for while they not only add greatly to the value of their own property they are of decided value to the entire community, as this is one of the most used streets in Salisbury.

—Never yet has Norfolk of old the port of naval rendezvous witnessed so imposing an assemblage of war craft as now lies in the harbor between Old Point Comfort and the Exposition Grounds. Though but the advance guard of the great gathering of fleets that will be here during the Exposition, the fleet is impressive, not only for its numbers and power, but by reason of the fact that it is wholly American. Sixteen first class battleships strung along a line extending three miles, with a number of secondary craft make up this stupendous array of the nation's ocean power, presenting a spectacle to stir the soul of patriotism. Other ships are daily lengthening this majestic line, and never before have Americans been privileged to witness the power of the nation in such compact concourse.
This fleet constitutes the greatest assemblage of American war ships

'Deed It's The Truth

When you come right down to solid facts there's but one store in Salisbury where you can get the right kind of clothing at the right kind of price.
There's no use talking, there's but one store in Salisbury that sells the best clothing made, that store is Lacy Thoro-ughgood's store, where more business is done in one day than in any other store in Salisbury does in three days. When you were a youngster and people told you that you were growing, didn't it make you feel good? That's the way with Lacy Thoroughgood. Four years ago Lacy Thoroughgood opened his second store in Salisbury which is an exclusive Hat and Gents Furnishing Goods store and today Thoroughgood has two of the best stores ever opened in a city the size of Salisbury—the best town on earth. Sometimes you'll see a newspaper story to the effect that somebody is selling just as high grade clothing and hats as Thoroughgood—well you know they ain't and nobody really believes them when they say they are. Tell you what I'm doing, I'm just cleaning up the town, I can't help it, people want my goods and I'm going to let them have them. 'DEED

PROF. GOSLEE'S RESIGNATION.
The resignation of F. Grant Goslee, professor of Mathematics in the Wicomico High School, will be received by all interested in educational work. Prof. Goslee is well thought of by all who know him. His scholarship is unquestioned, and his ability to impart this knowledge is the equal of anyone's in the County. A good sign of whether a teacher is doing his duty or not is usually found in the regard and respect the pupils have for him. It is not perhaps too much to say that Mr. Goslee enjoyed the regard and respect of his pupils in an unusual degree—and earned it by his fairness, honesty and thoroughness as a teacher.
It is generally understood that Mr. Goslee's resignation was not voluntary, but was placed in the hands of the School Board on the intimation that same would be acceptable. On what grounds his resignation was desired is not apparent, and the reasons—according to rumor—given are so foolish and ridiculous that it is almost impossible to believe that sensible men would consider them for a moment, and if there is nothing more behind them, then a great injustice has been done both Mr. Goslee and the patrons of the school. All of our citizens are interested in our public schools, and it is due to them that the true facts of Mr. Goslee's resignation should be given to the public, and let them judge whether or not he has had fair play.

OF INTEREST TO SALISBURIANS.
The Schooner Thomas B. Taylor, To Carry Passengers To The Jamestown Exposition.

We are informed by Mr. Glen Perdue, owner and manager of the schooner Thomas B. Taylor, that the work of fitting the Taylor up to carry passengers to the Jamestown Exposition, will soon begin. A wings will be put up the "Hold" converted into staterooms, toilet rooms put in and in fact, everything done to insure comfort and convenience of passengers. The Taylor is a nice roomy vessel and under the capable management of Capt. Vaughn. Persons wishing to visit the exposition and take their families or to make up a party of friends should find this arrangement both pleasant and economical.
The vessel will be fitted up to accommodate about forty persons on each trip and expects to make several trips during the season.
Schedule of trips and rate of fare will be announced later.

Bishop Rebuked The Hatless.
Wilmington, Del., April 29.—Following a wedding at Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church Saturday evening, after the wedding party had left the church, Bishop Coleman, one of the officiating clergymen, noticed a number of ladies there without hats, which is customary at most church weddings here, and he took occasion to inform those present that it was against the rules of the Episcopal Church for ladies to appear in the church without hats or some other covering for their heads.
"I will excuse you this time," the Bishop said, "but don't do it again."

The hotel congestion at Norfolk was foreboded Thursday when 800 people on the ferry from Cape Charles tried to storm the breakfast room, with accommodations for 40. There was a delegation of National Guardsmen who escorted a party of some 100 persons from a small New England State. The National Guardsmen gained possession of the breakfast room on the ferry and stationed one man at the door to call off the names of the aloft, while the common herd waited hungrily.
"This way, Major," said the factotum. "You're next, Colonel," and so it went until a frowny person from somewhere south of Houston street strode up to the door.
"Say, I'm a breadier general traveling incognito, and I eat!" said the man in blue.
It has been decided by the Board of Trustees of the M. F. Church to purchase a pipe organ. A building to accommodate it will be built in a few days, and the organ is expected the first of June. Collectors have been organized to visit the congregation and solicit contributions for the organ.
The pastor wishes those waiting for mail from any "new" second-class newspaper to be given liberally. A larger number of such organs have been ordered and we hope to have them in time for the present season.

BALTIMORE EXPOSITION

In 1914, Ten Million Dollar Fair To Celebrate Centennial of The Star Spangled Banner.

Baltimore has caught the exposition fever. It is the only one of the big cities that has never had an international exhibition, and it proposes to celebrate the climax of the War of 1812 and the birth of "The Star Spangled Banner" by an exposition on its water-front in 1914. The suggestion is made by the Baltimore American in which "The Star Spangled Banner" was published from Key's manuscript. Gen. Felix Agnes, the editor and publisher of the American, has enlisted the interest of the city and State in the proposition. The City Council of Baltimore has taken steps towards organization and Governor Warfield has promised his co-operation. General Agnes calls it The Banner Exposition of the Banner Century. The following is from the announcement of the enterprise:

"The year 1814 was momentous in American history. The war that began in 1812 reached its climax. If the British had succeeded in capturing Baltimore there is no telling how far the struggle would have gone, or what the result might have been in America. But our people, with a gallantry that history has not sufficiently recognized, repulsed the enemy, and out of that splendid victory came 'The Star Spangled Banner,' the lyric that will be sung as long as America endures.

So, the 100th anniversary of the birth year of 'The Star Spangled Banner' will give to us for celebration and display the century which has contributed more of human advancement than all that went before. Practically every invention, every step of industry, every big fact in transportation and communication will come within this 100 years. The year itself will afford some striking anniversaries; for instance, it was in 1814 that Fulton made the beginning of steam in the Navy, and a score of events of like interest can be found. The whole matter opens a prospect practically without limit, and gives us an anniversary occasion unsurpassed by any which has been celebrated in previous expositions.
By 1914 we shall, in all human probability, have in operation the canal connecting the Chesapeake and Delaware Bays. Our Chesapeake commerce, now the largest of any body of water in America, and far exceeding our total foreign trade, will be vastly increased. 'There can be no question whatever as to Maryland's right to appropriate this great anniversary. In the War of 1812 Maryland supplied not only her quota of troops, but more than the Government could accept. Not only did she offer troops, but gave abundantly in money, so that President Madison said: 'The claims of Maryland for her expenditure during the war stand upon higher ground than those of any other State in the Union.'

RESIGNATION OF MR. GOSLEE
Causes Much Comment By Patrons Of The School.
Nothing has happened in Salisbury for quite a while which has occasioned so much comment as the resignation of Mr. F. G. Goslee, who for a period of several years has been teacher of Mathematics in Wicomico High School. Mr. Goslee had by close application and strict adherence to what he conceived to be his duty as a public educator—which standard he set very high—endeared himself both to the pupils and parents who were patrons of this School and there is no doubt that nine tenths of the people of this community will say that a mistake was made somewhere, when Mr. Goslee was allowed to go, especially on such flimsy grounds as are currently reported. While authoritative information is hard to obtain in this case, the really reasons for Mr. Goslee's resignation are pretty generally known and are not of such character as to reflect much credit in certain quarters. It will be rather a hard proposition for the responsible parties to explain to the public whose business it is to know, why they should be deprived of one of the best teachers this County has ever had.

The reasons which are generally reported to have led to Mr. Goslee's resignation is that he refused to be dictated to as to the manner in which he should conduct that part of the work which came under his immediate supervision or within the four walls of his room whereby a large part of the practical work would be thrown aside to make room for non-essentials. Not even the President of the School Board nor the principal of the School was aware that Mr. Goslee had resigned until a few days before it was to take effect, although the resignation had been on file for the period required by law which is 30 days. Neither had the Board been called together to take cognizance of a matter of such vital importance as that of losing one of its most valuable and important teachers, but the vacancy seems to have been filled without consulting anyone.

The Baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of the Delmar, Del., High School was delivered by the Rev. W. H. Higgins in the Protestant Episcopal church Sunday afternoon. A large congregation was present. The pastor took his text from Malachi 1-4. "If I be a father where is mine honor?" "The fatherhood of God was the subject discussed. From the sacred writing, the discourse was an interesting one and that part addressed specially to the class was replete with words of wisdom and instruction.

To Service In Navy. Herndon E. Mills Shoots Himself. Had Deserted From U. S. Navy. Fear of Arrest Supposed To Be Cause of Rash Act.
Herndon E. Mills, a young farmer 25 years old living near Quantico, shot himself through the head last Sunday evening while on a visit to his sister, who lives at Wetipquin. Mr. Mills who was accompanied by his wife, seemed in unusual good spirits on this day, but a desire to get off by himself was noticed by his relatives but they had no suspicion that he intended to harm himself. He was missed only for a short time late in the afternoon and when found he was dead with a bullet hole in his right temple. Young Mills enlisted in the U. S. Navy about two years ago, for a period of 4 years, and was placed aboard the Battleship Denver, from which he deserted last June. Warrants were out for his arrest and it is supposed to have been the cause of his committing such a rash act. Mr. Mills was very much dissatisfied with his service in the Navy and was often heard to remark that he had rather die than to be taken back. The deceased leaves a widow who was a Miss Bricker, of Harriehburg, Pa., for whom much sympathy is expressed.

An old soldier writes about ARIOSA Coffee: "Your coffee is the best and richest coffee I ever drank since I left the service, from '61 until I received your coffee yesterday." A soldier knows coffee by the taste, and the way it makes him feel, and would sooner go without his bread than without his coffee. Arbuckles' ARIOSA was the first roasted, packaged coffee, packaged for protection of consumers, roasted and the pores of each berry sealed with a coating of fresh eggs and pure sugar, to hold the goodness in and make the coffee settle clear and quickly. Better than "fresh roast." Warming a little develops the flavor and makes the grinding easy. Our enormous coffee business, exceeding the next four largest firms in the world together, reduces our average cost per pound, and enables us to give you better coffee for your money than you can buy in any other way. There are more packages of ARIOSA sold in the United States than all the other Coffee packages combined.

Improvement. Cement Sidewalks Put In Several New Ones Underway.

E. Church Street is being much improved this week by the putting down of several new cement sidewalks. W. C. Gullett started the movement which has been continued by others and promises to extend the entire street. Jas. Johnson, col., has already begun one on front of his property. Mr. W. A. Crew, who is doing the work, has contracted with the trustees of the O. S. Baptist Church to put down a cement pavement on the long space of street which runs by their property.

All these will be made to conform to the grade established for new pavements. The property owners on this street are to be commended for making these improvements, for while they not only add greatly to the value of their own property they are of decided value to the entire community, as this is one of the most used streets in Salisbury.

—Never yet has Norfolk of old the port of naval rendezvous witnessed so imposing an assemblage of war craft as now lies in the harbor between Old Point Comfort and the Exposition Grounds. Though but the advance guard of the great gathering of fleets that will be here during the Exposition, the fleet is impressive, not only for its numbers and power, but by reason of the fact that it is wholly American. Sixteen first class battle ships strung along a line extending three miles, with a number of secondary craft make up this stupendous array of the nation's ocean power, presenting a spectacle to stir the soul of patriotism. Other ships are daily lengthening this majestic line, and never before have Americans been privileged to witness the power of the nation in such compact concourse. This fleet constitutes the greatest assemblage of American war ships ever held.

That our American forests abound in medicinal plants is a fact which is abundantly attested by scores of our most eminent medical writers and teachers. Even the untutored Indians have discovered the usefulness of many native plants before the advent of the white race. This information, however, has been largely lost, and it is only in the last few years that the most valuable American medicinal plants have been brought to the attention of the world.

Dr. Pierce believes that our American forests are the most valuable medicinal plants in the world. He has spent years of his life in the study of these plants, and he has discovered many of their medicinal properties. He has found that many of these plants are of great value in the treatment of various diseases, and he has prepared a series of medicines from them. These medicines are of great value in the treatment of various diseases, and they are of great value in the treatment of various diseases.

Not less marvelous in the unparalleled cures it is constantly making of woman's many peculiar ailments, rheumatism and other diseases, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as is amply attested by thousands of testimonials contributed by grateful patients who have been cured by it of various ailments, including irregularities, prolapsus, and other diseases of the female system.

Both the above mentioned medicines are made up of the purest extracts of medicinal plants. The processes employed in their manufacture are of the most scientific character, and they are of the most reliable character. They are of the most reliable character, and they are of the most reliable character.

What Does It Mean

to let Dividends "accumulate" on a Life Insurance Policy?

In many companies it means nothing more than an agreement on the part of the policy-holder, to do without dividends for fifteen or twenty years, and then take what ever dividend the company will be willing to give.

Dividends are declared every year in the Mutual Benefit, and the policy-holders use them either to help pay premiums or to buy increased insurance. The policies of the

SATURDAY NIGHT TALKS

By E. E. Davidson, Bishop of the Diocese of Maryland.

CORNERING WHEAT IN EGYPT

May 5, '07—[Gen. 41:38-49.]

There is a mistaken notion abroad that piety and power are incompatible. The young man who is pure must be a milkop, early piety means early death. Knowing ones assert that the good ones aren't smart, and the smart ones aren't good.

Consequently, all powers of wild oats are preferred to the sowers of wild oats in many circles, and vice is crowned with laurel, while virtue is sent to jail.

But the history of Joseph upsets that misconception. He was no "milkop." He did not die young. He was not a feeble, flabby, uninteresting, incapable, do-nothing. With a soulless character against which no word can be spoken, he was one of the most "adroit politicians" in the best sense of that term that the world has ever seen. He became the head and front of one of the most learned, powerful and prosperous kingdoms of antiquity. At seventeen years of age he went out from his father's house, to spend the next thirteen years as a slave in Egypt or a prisoner in that country, but at the end of that time, before he was thirty years old he put on royal purple, rode in regal chariot, and was everywhere acknowledged as a great, powerful, ambitious, far-seeing man, who had risen by his own wit and worth to the premiership, a ruler in his own right. He wore his honors as to the manner born. He was as stately as any Pharaoh of them all. When was there such another monopolist, with income taxes so enormous. His word was law, and his law was final. When, in the history of the world, did vice have a career like that. He "cornered" grain in Egypt for seven years, but he saved a nation in a time of famine and kept them alive for seven years, when they would otherwise have perished like senseless sheep. Joseph's far-sighted sagacity put in operation today in Oriental lands, where the people live from hand to mouth, regardless of the future, would put an end to the awful famines that beset those lands. Until this people, dreaming Israelite had arrived Egypt the granary of the world, had stumbled on, heedless of the first principles of political economy, gorged with food at one season, starving by the thousands at another, without intelligence enough to save a grain for future use. But when this boy, who had been the dreamer by the water courses of Canaan, put his hand on the helm of government a new order of things was introduced, and when famine swooped down upon the known world, and the nations cried aloud for food, the storehouses of Egypt, bursting with yellow grain, presented a treasured illustration of the far-sightedness of this original monopolist. This Sir Galahad of old Egypt was a statesman of a most magnificent pattern.

But it took him a long time to get there. There was a dreary interval of thirteen years before the dream of his childhood was fulfilled. One would think that his heart would have broken, but he held himself firmly, and in servitude and prison, never lost his inspiring vision, but made them his opportunity for development. It takes time for some dreams to come true. Joseph at seventeen was not capable of realizing his vision. Some men can be made fit for some dreams in two days. But dreams like that of Joseph require time. It took thirteen years on the practical thirteen years discipline of thirteen years, weaning from old affections and associations to manufacture the ruler of a nation, and the teacher of kings. You can afford to wait, if you wait for great things. They who are destined to wear royal attire must expect royal training and discipline.

As we look at it, it seems a dreary waste of time and good material. We think Joseph could have stepped into his high position before he did. But we do not see the whole case, the temptations which beset it, the difficulties that surround it, the collateral bearings and issues. To be the feeder of nations, the benefactor of millions, the savior of peoples, requires characteristics of a peculiar sort, and he who holds that place must be of clean hands and a pure heart together with a clear head. And those advantages are not developed in a hot-house, and brought to maturity in an hour. So every year that went by brought its measure of self-reliance, and tenderness and refinement, and manliness, and capacity until the clock of destiny struck.

Evidently we must make a distinction in monopolies. Joseph was a monopolist of national proportions. He engineered a corner in wheat that impoverished nobody, froze out nobody, absorbed nobody, put nobody out of business, crushed out no opposition, nor enriched himself at the expense of the people. The whole land was enriched by the silver and gold of surrounding peoples when the caravan streamed into Egypt to buy the corn of which they had abundance. And it came about because a little Jewish lad thirty years before had opened his eyes in the tents of Jacob. Among the statesmen and political economists of the age Joseph stands well up toward the head.

Alcohol from Sweet Potatoes. Sweet potatoes are principally used in the Azores to make alcohol, the yield being 10 to 11 per cent. The present price is about 13 cents (United States currency per liter (1.0567 quart).

CLAY PIPE FOR MADSTONE

It Will Be the Work Just as Well, Says a Physician.

Physicians are often asked whether there really is any virtue in what are called madstones. One of them declares that he would be of more value if their limitations were understood.

"There is a great variety of stones or substances which may be designated as madstones," he says. "I have seen many of them, so called, and no two were of exactly the same composition, geologically considered."

"Madstones act on the same principle that a blotting paper does when absorbing ink, and there is nothing that makes a better one than blotting paper. A madstone, however, procurable for one cent at nearly any store, will absorb its poison, cannot be collected by any madstone, and will retain its reputation. The action can be clearly demonstrated by placing a common dry red brick in contact with the margin of a puddle of water and noticing what capillary attraction will accomplish."

"Therefore, to be efficient, the only necessity is for the stone to be porous and have a strong adhesive and absorbent qualities. Nothing mysterious about it."

"I have seen several that appear to be concretions, either vesicular, renal or biliary, and were found in the bladder, kidney or liver of some animal—those taken from the deer, supposed to be the best."

"When a person is bitten by a reptile or a dog supposed to be mad and the porous stone applied to the wound the blotting paper action begins and the blood, saliva from the mouth of the animal, and whatever poison these fluids contain will naturally, by capillary attraction, be absorbed by and into the substance applied, no matter what name you may give it."

"The saying that if a stone sticks the wound is poisonous and if it does not take hold there is no venom present is untrue. If the stone is clean and dry is well where when moisture is within reach until it be comes saturated."

"For instance, a new red brick will absorb one pint of water. After the venom has been taken into the circulation the madstone is worthless, but, as the victim is usually filled with whiskey or alcohol at the same time the stone is being used, the spirits may counteract the effect of the poison."

"I know of a stone which has a wide reputation and makes a good living for the family owning it. They never let it go out of their sight and, when the victim cannot be taken to the stone, one member of the family can be hired to take the stone to the victim. In addition to traveling expenses they charge $5 each hour that the stone sticks."

"This stone is busy a large part of the time. Not long since, the stone held to a man's leg for over 100 hours, yet the man died. His life could have been saved if dependence had not been placed entirely in the stone."

Fortune Telling in Olden Days. Nowadays girls go to fortune tellers with strange names shiny, fascinating eyes and weird studios. They want a peep into the future. In grandmother's day the mystery of to-morrow was read in much more simple ways. One popular way was to learn which of two sweethearts was to be the final choice was to plant three ears of corn, some rapid growing plant, one named for the girl and the other two for each of her two favorite beaux. The one that grew nearest to her was destined to be her husband. Another way was to lay three twigs on a bench or shelf. If two of them, one named for the girl and one for one of the beaux blew off, it meant that the two would marry and go away. If only one twig, that of one of the beaux blew away, it meant that the two remained married. If all three twigs blew off the bench the occurrence was interpreted to indicate that the girl would remain an old maid. If the two beaux twigs were blown away and she remained on the bench, it meant that she would marry, but not one of those two.

In winter when there were no buds and all the ground was white with snow the girls used to be so anxious to know their fortunes that they would creep down in the big cellar and hide three onions on a shelf. They named each onion, and the one that sprouted first was the man they were to marry.

Properties of Gold. Pure gold is unaffected by the atmosphere either at ordinary temperatures or when the metal is heated. It is also proof against the action of common acids when used singly.

Moreover, it confers its properties more or less upon copper and silver when these metals are alloyed with it. Thus, for example, twelve karat gold will withstand the action of nitric acid and the atmosphere at ordinary temperature, but some of the copper will be oxidized during annealing. Nine parts of gold may be alloyed with ten parts of platinum in an ordinary crucible and fire, but such an alloy will not be uniform; a larger proportion of platinum will free itself from the solidification and a homogeneous alloy of the two metals cannot be obtained.

CURES AFTER THE DOCTORS HAVE FAILED

RHEUMACIDE has cured thousands of cases of Rheumatism after all the doctors and all other means had failed. Rheumacide cured John F. Eline and others, of Baltimore, after the famous specialists of Johns Hopkins Hospital, the greatest hospital in the world, had failed. Rheumacide cured Austin Perelle, of Salem, Va., and D. H. Olmstead, the Norfolk, Va., contractor, after they had spent large sums on other remedies and the doctors had given up hope. Rheumacide cured Mrs. Mary Welborn, of High Point, N. C., of rheumatism she had endured for 20 years. Rheumacide cured W. C. Hughes, of Atkins, Va., after the most famous New York specialists failed. There is a reason why it cures: Rheumacide is the latest discovery of medical science, and while powerful enough to sweep all germs and poisons out of the blood, it operates by purely natural methods, does not injure the most delicate stomach, and builds up the entire system.

Almost a Miracle in This Case.

Dillon, S. C., Aug. 12. Bobbitt Chemical Company: Gentlemen: I have been suffering from Rheumatism in a very bad form (inflammatory). In a month after the disease started I had to give up my work and go to bed. It continued to grow worse until my arms and hands were badly drawn and I could not use them. My legs were drawn back till my feet touched my hips. I was as helpless as a baby for nearly 3 months. The muscles of my arms and legs were hard and shrunken up. I suffered deathly agonies. I was treated by six different physicians in McClellan, Dillon and Marion, but none of them could do me any good. Until Dr. J. Ewing of Dillon came to me. He told me to try your RHEUMACIDE. He got me one bottle of the medicine and I began to take it, and before the first bottle was used up I began to get better. I used 5 1/2 bottles and was completely cured. That was 2 years ago and my health has been excellent ever since. Have had no symptoms of rheumatism. Will say further that I began to walk in about six days after I began to take RHEUMACIDE with the first bottle. I had been in bed for three months after I began to take it. I could walk as good as anybody, and went back to work again. Yours truly, JAMES WILKES.

WORK OF PEDIGREED SEEDS.

Remarkable Results Achieved by Modern Agricultural Experts.

The achievements of the plant breeders in the development of pedigree seeds are quite wonderful considering the difficulty of fixing permanently characteristics resulting from hybridization.

For instance, when species of rye with different types of heads are crossed it is found that the female parent was neither alone nor most prominent when exerting its influence on the product and its progeny.

In about one-half of the plants of the first generation of rye crosses the type of head and form of seed of the male parent was prevalent, while in the other half the same characters of the female parent predominated.

In the second generation the individuals split up into groups showing type of either one parent or the other or both together.

One-fourth of the number of individuals showed the spike characters of the female parent, one-fourth those of the male parent and one-half intermediate forms.

Irritating Americanism. One of the most irritating of Americanisms is the use of "limb" for "branch." "Limb" for "leg" has always been accepted as an Americanism, but what is the matter with "branch"? Careful anglophile writers are beginning now to reintroduce this latter word, but "limb" has hitherto been the trans-Atlantic word with all authors. It is also old English and was not introduced into the vernacular until the middle of the 17th century, but is it? The joke of the verse is at least 1,300 years old, but how old is the English version?

A Clever Swindle. In the island of Malta two ignorant women nicknamed "The Fly" and "The Magpie," respectively, invited a decade ago, investments at some 600 per cent. per annum interest. It was computed that as much as $1,000,000 was lodged with them and they stowed the money away in petroleum, tin, soap boxes and flower pots and diminished it by the interest, which was met for some time. The swindle was never thoroughly cleared up.

Devotee of the Camera. Few people are aware that the King is a devotee of the camera, and that he seldom goes abroad without taking it and making a number of exposures. His Majesty's camera is such a tiny affair that few people have ever noticed it. It is almost too small for practical purposes, but the picture taken by it are always carefully enlarged to a uniform size, and are then nearly as good as if taken direct by a big camera.

Against Use of Absinthe. Switzerland is making a campaign against the use of absinthe, the intention being to drive the liquor of that character from Swiss territory. The secretary of the campaign committee said a short time ago that 80,202 signatures had already been obtained for the petition asking for a stringent federal law to the above effect, and now there are probably more than 100,000 signers.

Instructive Postal Cards. The postal cards that have been distributed by the German meteorological bureau have proved successful as aides to science. On these cards information of interest is sent from all points of Germany to the meteorological bureaus of Aix-la-Chapelle, Berlin, Hamburg, Goettingen, Magdeburg, etc. The cards are exempt from postage.

Refusing Fleet Workmen. The agent of a Canadian railway arrived in St. Petersburg seeking laborers who were wanted to construct a new transcontinental line. He did not get them, the authorities being of the opinion that it was not desirable that Russian workmen should be brought into close contact with American workmen.

THE CHEAPNESS AND EXCELLENCE of the modern watch are due to American invention and skill. Watches were first made early in the sixteenth century, but it was a century later before the coiled spring was introduced and the "pocket" watch was made. It was long considered a special mark of gentility to carry a watch.

Sentencing a Child. The Swiss press is agitated and indignant over the sentencing of a three-year old child to three and one-half months' imprisonment for theft. In passing a toy store the little fellow helped himself to two or three articles which were on exhibition outside the shop.

Latest in Skates. The latest idea in skates has the quality of folding into compact shape, so that it is possible to put them in a wallet, and thus a pair of them may be carried in the pocket of a coat or tucked away in the interior of a lady's muff.

WILE AND WIT WIN A WIFE.

"And so you want me to consent to your making Helen your wife." The speaker was Henry Norcross, one of the millionaire manipulators of finance in New York, and the scene was in his private office. The only other person present was Carl Loraine, for some years the confidential secretary of Mr. Norcross and now a tutor for the hand of his employer's only daughter.

"No, Carl, I do not think I can give my consent," continued the broker. "But sit down and we will talk it over. Now why should I give my daughter to you?"

The question was unexpected and was capable of but one answer.

"Well, sir, I love Helen and she says she returns my affection, but will only marry with her father's consent."

"Good girl," chuckled the old man. "I think," continued Carl, "that my habits are good, and the belief of my father is in my favor, and I am certain that I have endeavored to be faithful to my duties."

After a moment's pause, Mr. Norcross said: "Carl, I am going to explain more fully how I feel about this matter. When I was your age I had no more money than you have, and I lacked the education that has been given you. As you say, you are a husband and of good habits, but I am not more than that for my daughter. I have money enough, and when I will all go to Helen. For Helen is a husband I want a man who will be able to handle this property wisely. I have made my money by wits, while you are to-day no better off than you were three years ago, except from the meager amount you have saved from the liberal salary I pay you. I have seen this feeling growing between you and Helen, and I have hoped to see you wake up. I cannot consent to an engagement, but I will make an agreement with you. If within the next three months you succeed in making a thousand dollars by the shrewd use of your wits, I will consent to your marriage to Helen."

Noting the young man's look of discouragement at this, the old man continued: "Do you remember how last week I made $8,000 from my brother by learning that he had sold short on C. and Q., then buying up all I could find on the market and selling to him at a large advance? He is my brother, and if he was in trouble he would turn to me, but for a business transaction I will catch him if I can. Keep your eyes open and your wits on the alert, and I sincerely wish you success."

Ten weeks of the three months had gone by and the one thousand dollars seemed as far away as ever. Mr. Norcross was in his office, preparing to attend an important meeting of the S. and M. railroad. He had stepped into a brick vault that had been built in the rear of his office to store a bundle of papers that would give him control of the railroad and permit him to dictate its policy to his own advantage, of course.

Just as he stepped inside the vault, a gust of wind swung the door to and the spring lock held it fast. A small barred window prevented any possibility of suffocation, and in a half laughing tone the broker called for Carl to open the door.

"I am afraid I have forgotten the combination," he said. "What the old man said was to the point, but I forgot. When he quitted off a trifle, the young man said: 'I think a check for a thousand might set my wits to working.'"

Again the violent window flew, and the little window, until the young man reminded Mr. Norcross that the door would be locked in twenty minutes. After a pause, a question floated through the window. "Shall I put the game of 'Loo' on that check?"

"If you please," was the polite reply. The check fluttered out through the window and in a moment the door was opened.

Furious at the trick, Mr. Norcross stepped long enough to say, "That was rascally, not the exercise of your wits."

"One moment," replied the young man. "Speaking of wits, you forget that a key is hanging in my hand, and it is to be used in just such an emergency as this. I presume your wits failed to work promptly this time."

As the humor of the situation dawned on the frate broker, he smiled grimly, and in spite of his great haste, he paused long enough to say, "You'll do. I think you will and Helen at home this evening."

Hypothesis of Telepathy.
Four hypothesis for telepathy have been suggested. That telepathic communications may be due: first, to some kind of vibration, electric or otherwise, emitted by one brain and impinging on the other; second, by direct action of the mind on another's brain in such way as to evoke the desired thought; third, by insight of the receiving mind into the brain when the thought arrives (clairvoyance); or, fourth, by some direct and incomprehensible communion of mind with mind.

Many a man has failed while waiting for experience to teach him how to advertise judiciously. Moral: Experts may come high, but we must have 'em.

Regular Milking Hours.
The importance of regular milking hours equally in every twenty-four, is emphasized by a successful dairyman. He found that although it would not pay the farmers to milk three times a day, the milk should be drawn every twelve hours for best results. The longer milk remains in the udder the less butter fat it will contain when drawn, so when the milking time is let run over time a few hours considerable is lost in quality and this is not made up at the next milking, so that there is no

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Salisbury Citizen Can Afford To Ignore.

Danger Signal No. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick.

Danger Signal No. 2, comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the coming of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's Salisbury proof.

E. Sampson Truitt, farmer and owner of fertilizer factory, residing on East Church street, testimony says, "My first experience with kidney complaint was felt a year ago last February. It commenced with pains in my left side and worked around to the small of my back. The pain was so severe for a day or so and after that trouble from the kidney secretions existed for which I used many well known remedies. It is true I received some relief but the last of them I used Doan's Kidney Pills which I procured. They checked the trouble to a great extent. I believe them to be all that is claimed for them."

—Californians have solved the problem of the alchemists and are making gold out of sea water, says The Technical World Magazine. The Golden State has taken golden treasure out of her mountains, has made her valleys yield millions of dollars worth of golden fruits has amassed treasure in exchange for her sunshine, and now turns to the great sea Pacific and ransacks its coifers.

There is no rush of prospectors to the new field, however, as the gold is coming out of the sea in the form of salts of potassium, magnesium and bromide, which would elude the pan and the rocker of the prospector.

Of several "diggings" of this nature, one at least is active and prosperous and one is approaching activity. The San Pedro Salt Company, which recently entered into the field, has succeeded in manufacturing a quantity and quality of salt which has found a ready market and has already assumed a place among the exports of the port of San Pedro. The fact that San Pedro is a lively and thriving port, with almost no outgoing cargoes, makes the development of this trade both easy and important.

Since the first of last year the coasting schooners returning to the northern coast have taken away over a thousand tons of this sea salt.

Letter To W. H. McConkey.
Salisbury, Md.

Dear Sir:—If we sell Devco to paint your town, your road won't have so much freight to handle.

It takes ten gallons to paint a fair size house and that house won't want painting again for 5 or 10 years. That's true in a way; but people, you know rather like fresh paint, and they paint for nothing but looks sometimes.

That house would take 15 or 18 gallons of almost any other paint than Devco, and would have to be painted again in half that time. Ten years is a very long time for a paint to wear; and five is not short.

Which makes the most freight, a 10 or 20 gallon paint? 5 or 10 year paint? But the 10 gallon paint is the 10 year paint; and the 20 gallon paint is the five year paint. Which makes the most freight?

Ask your paint dealer which he'd rather sell, and which he could sell most of. Ask your painter which he'd rather paint; whether good or bad paint is good for his business; which is good paint, the 10 or 15 gallon paint; which pays most freight and which pays the most wages. Which will you buy yourself, the 10 gallon 10 year, or 20 gallon 5 year paint?

Yours truly,
F. W. Devco & Co.

P. S. The L. W. Gunby Co., sells our paint.

HIS DAY OF REST.

From the Chicago Record-Herald.

He never had time to rest and he never had time to play. When a man should be at his best, he was old and wrinkled and gray: He never had time to care how others were getting along.

He never had time to share the joy of the singer's song.

He labored early and late, rudely pushing ahead. Pleasure, he thought, could wait; he would seek it some day, he said. Deaf to the cries of those who struggled in vain below, He heaped new woes on their woes, permitting his greed to grow.

He never had time to pause for the purpose of giving praise: He craved an public applause he hunted for peaceful ways; He never had time to waste on the song that the lover sings. He never had time to taste the sweetness that kindness brings.

He hurried early and late, roughly pushing ahead: Pleasure, he thought, could wait; he would seek it some day, he said; Old and wrinkled and gray when a man should be at his best, He died on the dismal day when he meant to begin his rest.

"SPRING CLEANING" NEEDED.
The Body Requires It Just As Much As The House Does.

"You look sick this morning." "Yes, I woke up with a dull headache, a coated tongue and that dark brown taste in the mouth."

"Didn't you have pains in the joints and muscles?" "Yes, as my old negro mammy used to say, 'I have misery in my joints.'"

"Better get a bottle of Rheumacide and take it, old man."

"What does Rheumacide do?" "Why Rheumacide is the most powerful and effective blood purifier in the world. It sweeps all the germs and poisons out of the blood and makes you well all over."

"Ever try it yourself?" "Sure, I take a couple of bottles of it before spring begins. Give my blood a spring cleaning. And Rheumacide puts me in such fine shape that I never have that tired feeling."

"Well, I'm going to try this Rheumacide you say is the best over there."

"That's right. All the druggists sell it. Better get a bottle today. You start to get well with the first dose."

The proprietors say that Rheumacide gets at the joints from the inside and makes you well all over. And that's the truth, old man."

—New London, Conn., April, 2.—Local United States Steamboat Inspectors Withney and Steward today made public their finding in the steamer Larchmont disaster on the night of February 11, when upward of 100 lives were lost in the sinking of the steamer after collision with the schooner Harry Knowlton in Block Island Sound. The responsibility for the collision is laid upon John L. Anson, pilot of the Larchmont, who was drowned. Captain George W. McVey is practically exonerated. The schooner is declared to have been sailing in full compliance with the navigating rules.

"Doan's Ointment cured me of eczema that had annoyed me a long time. The cure was permanent."—Hon. S. W. Matthews, Commissioner Labor Statistics, Augusta, Me.

"I never saw a garment too fine for a man or maid, there never was a chair too good for a cobbler or a cooper or a king to sit in; never a house too fine to shelter the human head. Elegance fits man. But do we not value these tools a little more than they are worth, and sometimes mortgage a house for the mahogany we bring into it? I had rather eat my dinner off the head of a barrel, or dress after the fashion of John the Baptist in the wilderness, or sit on a block all my life, than consume all myself before I got to a home, and take so much pains with the outside that the inside was as hollow as an empty nut. Beauty is a great thing, but beauty of garment, house and furniture are tawdry ornaments compared with domestic love. All the elegance in the world will not make a home, and I would give more for a pool of real hearty love than for whole shiploads of furniture and all the gorgeousness the world can gather."—O. W. Holmes.

A Display of $5.00 Hats At Hochschild, Kohn & Co's That Excite Admiration.

Baltimore women are in a quiver of delighted excitement over the wonderful display of trimmed hats at $5.00 being made by Hochschild, Kohn & Co., detailed reference to which is made in another part of this paper. Hochschild, Kohn & Co., have ways had a reputation for elegant coming millinery—and have always made a specialty of $5.00 hats. But not until this season, however, have they made any effort to improve the women who live in Baltimore—and who come to the city to shop—with the extent of their millinery facilities and the magnitude of their trade in $5.00 hats.

The collection includes a thousand hats—and, incredible as it may seem, no two of them are alike. It will be well worth a trip to Baltimore just to see the display. It will be a matter of economy, too, to get a hat, for there is a clear saving of $2.50 to $5.00 on every one of them, as compared with usual prices in other stores.

SUDDEN DEATH NEAR ATHOL.

Frank Daugherty Found Dead in Boat.

Mr. Frank Daugherty, a farmer living near Athol in Barren Creek district, was found dead in his boat early Thursday morning of this week. Mr. Daugherty left home Wednesday morning to attend some turtle hooks he had set on the marshes near his home, telling his wife he would be back in a short time. Mrs. Daugherty waited until night and her husband had not returned a searching party was organized, composed of Messrs John Wright, Willie Green, Wade Eversman and others, who with boats took up the search in the darkness for the missing man. After an all night search they succeeded in finding the dead body early Thursday morning, near the mouth of Barren Creek lying in his boat. The body was slightly over the side of the boat which was aground which indicated that the stricken man was trying to get ashore. Death was supposed to be due to heart failure.

The deceased was much respected in his community and bore an excellent reputation. He was 55 years old and leaves a wife and seven children. His remains were interred in Mardela M. P. Churchyard Friday morning at 10.30, Rev. A. A. Harriman officiating.

Miranda Wood's Romance

By Ethel Bret Harte.

I
The hot summer sun, which had been scorching and lashing into white heat the little New England village of Northfield all day, was now setting red behind a cluster of firs upon the far off flanks of the Berkshire hills, sinking slowly, drowsily to rest in vivid haze, as though worn out with its own fierce intensity.

One cottage, standing apart from this cluster of dwellings, alone seemed desolate, this sense of loneliness being to-night intensified by the almost tragically forlorn figure of a tall, gaunt woman sitting rigidly upon the doorstep, her thin hands clasped tightly about her knees.

But to-night, musing on her doorstep, Miranda felt strangely troubled and perplexed in mind, for a conversation she had overheard on her return from work that evening kept repeating itself to her brain with startling frequency and distinctness. It had so happened that while passing along the village street she had encountered Deacon Scoville, who, in shirt sleeves and carpet slippers, a corn-cob pipe contentedly tucked away in the corner of his mouth, was chatting lastly over his garden gate with Pete Farman, this latter gentleman being entirely absorbed in the engrossing though somewhat strenuous occupation of cleaning his nails with a large jack-knife.

As Miranda approached the Deacon had hailed her with a cheery "Good evening, Mirandale. Powerful hot, ain't it?" while Pete, looking up grudgingly from his rugged toilet, had remarked with quiet insolence, "Most hot enough to roast taters on your tin roof, ain't it, eh?"

The Deacon's remarks Miranda had acknowledged with a sharp bow of assent, while her eyes had swept scornfully the impudent, grinning face of Pete Farman. The next instant she had turned the corner of the wood sharply and was lost to view behind the tall lilac hedge which formed an almost impenetrable wall at the side of the Deacon's garden.

Here she stopped, ostensibly to settle her bonnet with an angry jerk, but in reality to recover her breath and composure, which seemed to be slipping from her in gusts of fury. As she was about to start on again, the wind, swaying the lilac tops hither and thither, brought the voices of the two men she had just quitted clearly and distinctly to her ears, nothing her as though bound in curious though horrified fascination.

"Hurray!" laughed Pete Farman; "there goes the gal what's never been kissed; don't wonder, it 'ed take a powerful nerver. Gul, what a face! Looks like she'd been reared on persimmons. Euf!"

Then the Deacon's voice drawled softly:—"I don't believe that yarn 'bout her never havin' been kissed. Miranda's most powerful homely, but she's got a good heart all the same, and that's bound to have fetched some feller, leastwise long enough to give her a kiss."

So now Miranda was turning the details of this conversation over in her mind with Puritanlike precision and candor. She had never had any sympathy or even patience with love and regarded all those suffering from this strange malady as but creatures of unsound mind, to be treated accordingly with contempt and scorn.

It had also been Miranda's habit to catch herself, to turn her emotions to the pitiless light of her almost morbid conscience, and she now insisted emphatically, albeit a trifle mournfully:—"No; I ain't never been kissed."

But already the feeling of anger and resentment which had at first been paramount was giving place to one of singular softness as she thought again of the Deacon's words. So "she had a good heart," she had almost forgotten she had one and placed her hand hurriedly to her left side to make sure that it was really there.

To-night some stronger will than hers seemed swaying the current of her thoughts; some power at once alluring and suggestive with which Reason battled fruitlessly; some wine which seemed to lull her senses into blissful confusion and to which she finally gave herself up with childlike abandon.

"I wonder what it's like," she murmured, while again that vague softness enveloped her as in a cloak. "I wonder," she repeated—then here the trees began to dance in lazy rhythm before her eyes as, lured by the drone of insects in the grass, she fell asleep.

II
"Hide me quick, for God's sake!" cried a hoarse voice in Miranda's ear, while a rough hand upon her shoulder shook her violently from her slumbers. Still stupefied with sleep, she gazed confusedly into the strange bearded face thrust close to hers.

The moonlight now bathing the garden in soft radiance, cloaking each familiar object with ethereal mystery and falling full upon the white face and already dramatically crouched figure of the man, seemed to add to the scene an almost limelight artificiality, a suggestion at once theatrical and thrilling.

"Hide me quick, for God's sake!" he repeated, seizing her roughly by the hands, with the exclamation of impatience, accompanied by something that sounded strangely like an oath, as he dragged her unresistingly on her feet.

"Come quickly now! They're after me and they'll kill me if they get me—don't you understand?"

Miranda, however, now fully awake, tore her hands from his grasp, and drawing herself up to her full height, stood a stiff and forbidding sentinel in her doorway.

This, then, was a man, and evidently a bad one.

"Get out of my house, murderer," she cried, in a sharp voice. Then, waving his impatient denial aside with a warning hand, she continued:—"If they're after you to kill you, yer done somethin' yer hadn't ought to, and I for one won't stand in the way of seein' justice done."

Then, seizing a broom which lay against the door, and using it rather as a weapon of extermination than of defence, she lunged heavily toward him.

Dexterously dodging this furious onslaught of bristles, the desperate man fell on his knees before her, and raising his eyes, which Miranda noticed for the first time were soft and brown beneath their fringe of black lashes, to her face, whispered between hope and fear:—"Surely there is at least one spark of womanly pity in your heart."

Miranda started, clutching blindly, wildly at the door for support, as the Deacon's words flashed like lightning through her brain:—"She's got a good heart, and that's bound to fetch some man." The hot blood mounted to her face, and she clasped her hands over her ears to keep out the voice, fearing lest the man at her feet should hear it also.

The almost breathless silence which had followed his eloquent pleading was now broken by the sound of voices along the road, and one could discern dimly in the direction of the village a small black stream of figures running in ragged form, now stopping apparently to peer into ditches, and then hurrying on with renewed vigor. Each moment they became more distinct, and Miranda fancied she could distinguish the voices of the Deacon and Pete Farman among the rest.

Swift as a hare she flew to the door, beckoning the man to follow her, then throwing wide the cupboard door, in a voice scarcely less tense than his had been, "Get in there, quick!"

The man sprang forward like some liberated animal—and the next moment the door closed upon him.

But none too soon, for already a party of excited men, headed by Pete Farman, had turned in at her garden gate.

"Yer ain't seen nothing of a man running for his life, have ye?" gasped Pete, his gooseberry eyes nearly bulging from their sockets—"A likely young feller with long black whiskers."

"Someone's broke in up to Farmer Cuddyback's and stole all Mary and Hank's wedding silver," panted the Deacon.

"Serves them right for havin' been such gul darned fools as to get married," was Miranda's cool and tart reply.

But she was feeling very nervous despite this bravado, and when Pete Farman advanced dangerously near the tattered cupboard she cried in a somewhat choked voice:—"I'll thank you, Pete Farman, to take your muddy boots off my clean paint; this ain't no cow shed."

Pete, momentarily awed, withdrew to the door, but from this safe retreat, his courage returning, he growled suspiciously:—"Oh, that's all very fine talk, but I seed him turn in here, and it is my painful dooty, Miss Miranda Wood, to search this 'ere house."

"Search, then, till you're blue in the face, for all I care," replied Miranda, in a voice she fondly believed to be indifferent, but which, though bravely commenced, wavered perceptibly toward the close of the sentence.

"Well, then, we may as well begin here," said the relentless Pete, walking toward the cupboard as he spoke. Like a flash Miranda was before him. Throwing herself defiantly against the door, she cried in a voice terrible to hear:—"I'm blest if you do! There's all my winter preserves in that, and I'm not got to let any darned man set his foot in there till they're jelled."

Miranda was plain at all times, but now her face distorted with rage, was fearful to behold, and the men fell back a pace. For one moment she stood like a tigress at bay; the next, recognizing her half won battle, she assumed her old, dry manner, and, pointing with a long, bony finger down the road, said, sarcastically:—"And, now, when you gentlemen have done insulting a poor, helpless woman in her own house, perhaps you might see if you could catch that man what's runnin' close to the stone wall yonder."

In an instant the men were in hot pursuit, stumbling over each other in their eagerness to be in at the death. Miranda watched them out of sight, a scornful smile on her thin lips; then suddenly, as though realizing for the first time the enormity of the situation, she walked quickly to a chair, into which she sank, and, throwing her apron over her head, sat rigid and silent for a quarter of an hour.

She was trying to think it all out; who she was, to begin with, and what she had done. So lost was she in her own dreams and calculations she had quite forgotten the man in the jam cupboard until she felt her apron gently pulled from her face, and, looking up, she beheld the man whose life she had saved and for whom she had told the first lie in her spotless life.

What a change had come over that face! All the terror had gone from those luminous eyes, and in its stead was a soft tenderness.

"God bless you for what you have done to-night!" he murmured in a deep, rich voice, "God bless you!" Then for one blissful moment Miranda felt his arms about her shoulders, as, bending his head to hers, he kissed her.

III

The sun was high in the heavens and the fire quite cold on the hearth when Miranda finally stirred in her chair.

What had come over her? Had she dreamed it all? No, she had not; she had been conscious of every tick of the great clock above the mantel, and, besides, there was the cupboard gaping wide, displaying neat rows of jam pots upon its shelves. No, she had not dreamed; she had simply lived, and, it seemed to her, for the first time in her life. A man had kissed her and asked God to bless her, and she had saved his life. Ah, it was all such a beautiful romance Miranda laughed happily as she pictured herself as heroine.

Singing, she went about her work, absently preparing her meager breakfast, which she scarcely touched. After giving a few almost coquettish touches to her toilet she looked lingeringly about the room in loving remembrance ere she turned the key in the door and went out.

The village street was almost deserted. Miranda noticed gratefully, for though she longed to hear the result of last night's robbery she yet feared to do so, and by the time she had reached the substantial Giles abode her heart was beating high to suffocation, and her hands trembled so she could scarcely lift the latch of the garden gate.

Had he really managed to escape or was he now languishing in some dreary prison? Her heart sickened at the thought.

At the door she was met by Mary Giles, who, eager to tell the news, did not notice Miranda's flushed face and trembling hands.

Here she learned that the "ruffian" (Miranda's hero) had got "clean away," and, with this blissful intelligence the happy, albeit guilty, Miranda set to work with a light heart. She listened to their story of the robbery with that superior judgment of one who knows, feeling herself a clever actress indeed.

She hummed to herself as she worked, slashing rather recklessly into the material Mary Giles had given her for the new bodice. This unwonted brightness puzzled the good people for whom she worked not a little, but when she actually cut two sleeves for one arm their wonder turned to alarm.

"Land's sake, Miranda Wood!" cried Mary Giles despairingly, as she gazed at her ruined bodice, "be you clean crazy? Lord, one'd think you was in love!"

Miranda started guiltily, cutting a horrid gash in the faded bodice as she did so. In tragic silence the two women looked down at the wreck before them; then Miranda said in hard, wooden tones:—"How much did it cost?"

"It cost me seventy-five cents at Martin's sale, and you couldn't git it less than a dollar 't'other times," replied the now almost hysterical Mary Giles in bitter reproach.

Slowly drawing her purse from her pocket, Miranda counted out four twenty-five cent pieces and laid them in a neat pile upon the table. Then, before the astonished Mary Giles could recover her breath she had fled.

She hurried along the road her head bent guiltily, scarcely heeding where she was going until, coming in contact with some huge bulk which seemed to her confused senses like a great feather bed, she looked up to find herself face to face with Mrs. Scoville, who, fat and excited, was fanning herself wildly with a newspaper at Miranda's own gate.

"Land's sake, M's Scoville!" she cried in alarm, whatever it was the matter of you! Look! yer was was gold! I've had a stroke!"

"I've had one erready," exclaimed the Deacon's wife theatrically. "A most shocking thing I call it—most indecent. Here," she added, thrusting the newspaper under Miranda's nose as she followed her, panting, into the kitchen, "read that for yourself."

As Miranda read a faint, sick dizziness crept over her, the ground seemed to sway beneath her feet, and, sinking into a chair, she muttered forlornly to herself "So it was all it's after all. It was a traitor's kiss."

What she read was as follows:—"A Clever Criminal Caught at Last."

"A paltry robbery of wedding silver at the house of a farmer named Cuddyback, residing in the village known as Scoville's Glen, was the means of running to earth one of the greatest and at the same time cleverest criminals of modern times."

"The prisoner, caught while trying to escape by jumping into a slowly moving freight train three miles below the scene of the robbery, gave his name as Parson, but was found to be a woman in male attire, and has subsequently been identified as Marie Rennie, author of the great diamond robbery at the Hotel Dresden, in Dresden, in which a well known place travelling incognito was killed, and instigator and prime mover in many subsequent robberies. Until now she had managed to evade the vigilance of the police through her many clever disguises, the last mentioned being perhaps the most complete."

A WORKING MODEL ENGINE.

An Ontario Watchmaker Has Made One Weighing Only Four Grains.

A watchmaker of Ontario has made a remarkable working model of an engine, says the London Globe. It weighs only four grains, and is made of gold and steel. It would take 120 of these almost microscopic engines to weigh an ounce, while 1,920 would be required to weigh a pound, and 3,840,000 to weigh a ton. The speed and horse power of this little model have been estimated by Professor Chant, of the University of Toronto. It makes 6,000 revolutions per minute, and its working power is one 480,000th of a horse power. The bore of its cylinder is three-hundredths of an inch in diameter, and the length of its stroke one 32d of an inch. Truly a wonderful little engine.

Height of Manhattan Island.
There is a general impression that Manhattan Island is comparatively level, while it is far from it. From the Battery water level you must climb 77 feet to reach the Grand Circle at Central Park; 23 feet more to get to the highest point in Mount Morris Park, 12 feet more to reach water level in Central Park reservoir; 20 feet more to get to the top of Morningside Park; another 68 feet to stand at Broadway and One Hundred and Seventy-fifth street, and yet another 50 feet to get to Washington Bridge road and One Hundred and Eighty-fourth street, when you are 250 feet above the water of the bay.

Roumania's Population.
Roumania is inhabited by a bewildering variety of races, but whether of Greek, Slav or Teutonic lineage, the modern Roumanian makes it a point of honor to claim descent from the colonists whom Trajan planted in the conquered province of Dacia, A. D. 107. Calling themselves Roumuni and their language Roumune, the proud citizens seldom draw out a legal document without some allusion to their founder, whom they style "the divine Trajan." The Roumanian language reflects the composition of the race, and now only faintly suggests the language which Trajan spoke.

Timbuctoo's Big Game.
Timbuctoo used to be a region of which most Europeans had heard little and knew less. But that happy time is past now. Timbuctoo is being proclaimed to the world as a Nimrod's paradise. Quite recently a small party of sportsmen bagged five elephants in the Gounne district. It is declared that in more than one district of eighteen miles square more than two hundred head of elephant may be found. Altogether, it is claimed for this part of French Africa that it is a splendid region for big game and that the attention of sportsmen should be directed to it.—London Globe.

Egypt's Landholders.
There are an enormous number of small landholders in Egypt, 5,000,000 acres being cultivated by over 1,000,000 landowners, of whom 5,000 are Europeans, owning on an average a little over 100 acres. Nine hundred and forty peasants hold under five acres each, or 23 per cent. of the whole cultivated land; while 12,000 men of means have holdings above fifty acres, their total being over 2,250,000 acres, or 44 per cent. of the whole; proprietors of between five and twenty acres having 21 per cent.—Exchange.

WILLIAMS—GORDY.

Married At The Home Of The Bride's Parents.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn S. Gordy, on Isabelle Street, was the scene of a very pretty but quiet wedding Wednesday of this week at 12:30 o'clock, when Mr. J. Walter Williams and Miss Ruth Marie Gordy were united in holy wedlock. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. S. W. Reigart, D. D. According to the beautiful and impressive service of the Presbyterian Church. There were no attendants, and only the immediate families of the contracting parties were present.

The bride, attired in a very becoming traveling suit of Bahja tan silk with hat and gloves to match, entered the parlor leaning on the arm of the groom, where the ceremony was performed which made them man and wife.

After receiving the congratulations of relatives and friends Mr. and Mrs. Williams were driven to the depot and left on the north-bound express for a tour to Baltimore, Washington, Jamestown and points further south. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn S. Gordy, of Salisbury, and was well known in the social circles of the town. The groom is a son of School Commissioner Charles E. Williams and resides with his parents near Salisbury. He is connected with his father who is quite extensively engaged in the milling and lumber business. The Advertiser extends its congratulations to the happy couple.

MORE TALK ABOUT GAS.

Mayor Calls Special Meeting To Discuss Famous Question. Previous Charter In The Way.

Mayor Harper called a special meeting of the City Council Monday evening of this week, to take up the gas situation as it now exists in this city, and as usual with these meetings there was a great deal of natural "gas" gotten off, but none for practical purposes. Mr. Adam A. Ambols, an engineer and contractor of Washington and New York was before the Council and evidently meant and was prepared to do business, but found the conditions to be such that nothing could be done, owing to the existence of a previous charter which had been granted by a former board of Councilmen, composed in part of the present members. The frequency in which this matter is agitated, and the interest manifested by the public demands that such uncalculated and unbusiness like methods be speedily removed by our present Council. If the parties who hold the present franchise from the city are either unable or unwilling to go ahead and perform their obligations according to that contract. They should at once be made to pay whatever forfeiture they assumed for this non performance and the city be placed where it can not only talk but do business with some other parties, taking good care that the interest of the people are well safeguarded. And unless this is done the suspicion will begin to grow that parties outside of the City Council and inimical to the interest of the people of Salisbury are manipulating matters in such a way as to prevent the coming to Salisbury of anything in the way of light or heat that would effect a certain stock, a part of which is held here. To say the least it looks strange on the surface that every time anyone comes here and shows a disposition to invest their money with us, provided they can be safe guarded in their investment, local people invariably come forward and complicate the situation. There is no doubt at all that the complication in which the city is now placed was caused by local interest and is being sustained by them at this time.

OTHER REMARKABLE CURES.

Mr. Jacob L. Davis, Galena, Stone county, Mo., writes: "I have been in bad health for thirty-seven years, and after taking twelve bottles of your Peru-na I am cured." Mr. A. E. Kidd, well-known architect, 547 Jefferson Ave., Chicago, Ill., writes: "I have had catarrh over half of my life. I tried nearly every catarrh remedy advertised, beside a great many physicians' treatments, all of which failed. I had heard and read of Peru-na and decided to try it. I have taken seven bottles of it and weigh 175 pounds."

A SINCERE RECOMMENDATION.

Mr. D. C. Prosser, R. F. D. No. 2, Shelby, Oceana Co., Mich., writes: "Two years ago I was badly afflicted with catarrh of the stomach. I had had a run of typhoid fever, was very depleted. I could find nothing I could eat without causing distress and sour stomach. Finally I came to the conclusion that I had catarrh of the stomach and seeing Peru-na advertised, began to take it. It helped me soon, and after taking three or four bottles I was entirely cured of stomach trouble, and can now eat anything."

I had not intended having anything to say about my reasons for resigning from the Wilcomico High School as they were already known to the School Board and Superintendent Bonds, but to correct certain misrepresentations and false statements which have reached me from reliable persons during the current week I wish to make the following statement:

Prop Operators, Rate To Be Increased At most Doubled in Some Instances.

It is definitely stated that a new schedule of freight rates will go in to effect on and after June 1st. Under the new rate the charges on this class of freight will be increased on an average of from 40 to 80 per cent from Cape Charles to New Church inclusive the freight will be raised from 60 to 80 cents and from New Church to Salisbury there will be an increase of from 40 cents. This rate it is said by persons who are interested in this character of timber, practically prohibits them from further operations, which it will no doubt do.

Look Out For New Counterfeit $10.00 Bank Note.

The Secret Service Bureau announces the discovery of a new counterfeit $10.00 National Bank note, which is described as follows:

"On the First National Bank of the City of New York, Check letter M; J. W. Lyons, Register of the Treasury; Ellis H. Roberts, Treasurer of the United States; Charter number 20; Treasury number K 54995; Bank number 292280; portrait of McKinley.

This counterfeit is apparently a lithographic production. The paper is composed of three sheets, two of very light tissue and one piece. A few silk threads have been distributed between the sheets. The portrait is very poorly executed and should be the means of readily detecting the note. The counterfeit is nearly a quarter of an inch smaller than the genuine. The number, red letter and seal on the face of notes are light pink instead of dark red and carmine. The back of the note is more deceptive than the face, but is a lighter shade of green than the genuine.

STATEMENT FROM MR. F. GRANT GOSLEE

Regarding Resignation From The Wilcomico High School Which Was Filed Several Weeks Ago.

Editors Advertiser:

I had not intended having anything to say about my reasons for resigning from the Wilcomico High School as they were already known to the School Board and Superintendent Bonds, but to correct certain misrepresentations and false statements which have reached me from reliable persons during the current week I wish to make the following statement:

In a conference with Superintendent Bonds on March 30th, 1907, relative to some measures which for the sake of uniformity in the different classrooms, he wished to have introduced,

I asked if I might do as I had always done, that is, without in any way having anything to do with the general policy of the school, unless asked and, I may say, even urged for an opinion, that in such subjects as were assigned to me in my own room I might do that work in my individual way. He said, "No, if at any time you can't do anything and everything the Principal asks you to do, it is your duty to step down and out." Knowing I could not do that, I, on that day, wrote my resignation to the School Board and handed it to Mr. Bonds.

PAVING QUESTION AGAIN.

Council Concludes To Take More Time. Many Differences of Opinion. Another Meeting Friday Night.

Monday evening of this week the City Council was again called together to take up the question of paving the streets of Salisbury. The Brick and Bitulithic people both had representatives present to lay before the Council the merits of their respective materials. There is still much difference of opinion as to the merits of these different materials. Most of the property owners living on the streets which it is proposed to pave seem to favor the Bitulithic, provided the price does not too far exceed that of brick which was used in the last contract.

In view of the many differences of opinion manifested by those present and the seemingly excessive rates asked by those who have put in bids, the Council decided to defer any definite action at this time claiming that the bids of both the Brick and Bitulithic people were entirely too high. The present attitude of the Council is to reject all bids and ask for new ones.

It would seem that the Council is acting wisely in going slow along this line as a mistake made at this time in the proper selection of material to be used is of far reaching consequences, and might entail in the near future other large expenditures for which the city is not prepared and time spent now in giving the matter proper consideration would be well spent, and no doubt will receive the commendation of the entire public. In looking over the available statistics compiled along this line by engineers who have used the various materials used for street paving, and should be competent to give an opinion, it will be noticed that Bitulithic is not classed very high as a paving proposition, where long last enters into consideration. On the other hand it is highly recommended for streets in residential section and when the traffic is not heavy, one of its main features being that it is almost noiseless. While from the same sources mentioned above brick is classed very high as a paving material on all streets, requiring heavy traffic and, if by any means, the noise could in a measure be eliminated would no doubt make an ideal pavement. Another pavement which is highly endorsed by engineers and municipalities wherever used is macadam, which if properly laid and properly cared for makes a good pavement, is easily maintained and is cheap as to first cost. The use of gravel, instead of broken stone is recommended and that the work should be done by the city appears desirable.

What the future of Salisbury's streets will be it is difficult to predict. That there should be some form of paving on all our principal streets is not open to argument. That the laying of expensive pavements would not be a wise thing to do is equally manifest.

CALLS HIS CURE A PERFECT MIRACLE

Suffered Tortures With Terrible, Dry Eruptions Since Reaching Manhood—Doctors All Failed—Became too Disfigured to Leave House—Now Well and Says:

CUTICURA REMEDIES WORTH WEIGHT IN GOLD

"I cannot help expressing to you my most sincere thanks for the 'blessed' which I have derived from the use of Cuticura Remedies. They represent a perfect miracle and each set is worth its weight in gold to suffering humanity. Ever since the time I grew into manhood I have been suffering from a dry eruption which at times appeared very extensively, and at other times, but to a limited degree, on my body. I consulted a number of medical men without result, and last January I was affected with a terrible eruption on my hands, scalp, and face, which was so bad that I could not even leave the house, so I finally resorted to Cuticura.

"In the morning after breakfast I took a tablespoonful of Cuticura Resolvent, the same after dinner and supper. Three times a day I washed myself with Cuticura Soap, and three times a week I took a hot bath with Cuticura Soap and applied Cuticura Ointment to the parts that were painful. So far my Cuticura Remedies represent an outlay of only a few dollars and I am completely restored to health, while formerly I had spent dollars upon dollars on doctors, remedies, and ointments without getting cured. Needless to say, I am quite ready to spend my last cent for Cuticura Remedies. Henry E. Karpovich, 433 Eagle Ave., New York, N. Y., Feb. 16 and Mar. 15, 1906."

A FRIGHT WITH PIMPLESCuticura Soon Makes Skin Clear.

"My face, a few months ago, was certainly a fright with pimples. I heard about Cuticura Remedies, and got Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. In a short while my face was well and skin white and clear. I advise any one whose skin is full of pimples and blackheads to use Cuticura Remedies. Ruth Tedderich, 408 W. 3rd St., Falls, Ill., Sept. 22, 1906."

Flattery For Husbands.

A Denver woman who was suing her husband for divorce the other day had a beautiful time telling the judge how fickle her husband was.

"The last woman who flatters him has him," said the Denver woman. And the judge looked volumes of sympathy.

I wonder why. If I had a husband who was as easily managed as that I wouldn't get a divorce from him while there was a breath of life left in my body.

"The last woman who flatters him has him."

Ah! indeed my dear madam. Then, why don't you see to it that you were the last one every time?

I'd be the first woman and the middle-time woman and the last woman, and I would think of more sweet things to say than any other human being could ever dream of, and I'd say them every time I got a chance.

If my husband liked flattery I'd see to it that he got plenty of it, and got it right at home in his own doorway.

A woman who is married to a man has nine points in the game in her favor all the time. The man can't get away from her, in the first place she's got him right here under her thumb to experiment on; and the other woman who is trying to get him has to wait around corners and stand in windy hallways and compromise herself in a dozen ways to get an opportunity that the man's wife has made to order for her a dozen times a day.

I know a woman who was ill, and she went to a hospital. While she was there her husband's mother and her husband's sister did their very best to alienate the husband from his wife. When the wife first began to understand the situation she was very unhappy about it, but she as a sensible woman, so she didn't say a word, says Winifred Black in Exchange.

She didn't sulk, and she didn't cry, and she didn't even hint a single mean thing about her amiable relatives-in-law.

She simply laid herself out to be agreeable to her husband.

She let him see how delighted she was when he came five minutes earlier, and how happy the very least little bit of attention from him made her.

She flattered him and made much of him until he was more in love with her than he was when he asked her to marry him, and when she went out of the hospital her mother-in-law and sister-in-law greeted her with strange, puzzled faces which were worth a dozen quarrels to her quiet little consciousness of human triumph.

Now, if that woman had been like the woman who got the divorce in Denver because her husband was easily flattered, she would have cried and made scenes every time her husband was a minute late at the hospital, and she would have played right into the hands of the people who were trying to make trouble for her.

As it is she is the head of happy, contented, prosperous and friendly family, and she has no one to thank for her own good fortune but her own good sense.

Flattery is a foolish little sugar cake, to be sure, but there isn't a bit of harm in it, not a single bit, and the woman who won't flatter her own husband once in a while will find out to her cost that there are lots of other women in the world who are not so stiff-necked as she is—Sel.

Wireless Weak At Dawn And Eve.

From the New York Tribune.

Wireless telegraph tests are to be made for the next thirty days by the officers in charge of the various stations established by the Navy Department to determine, if possible, the cause of the many failures to receive and to send messages at sunrise and sunset. Repeated tests have shown this to be the case.

Just why the power of the wireless apparatus and the sound waves should be at the lowest ebb at sunset, or at sunrise, operators say may not be difficult to ascertain, for it has long been known that messages can be sent by the system at night 48 per cent. better than in the daytime, especially when the sun is shining. There is what is termed frictional dissipation of energy in transmission by day. It is also known that foggy weather is more favorable for sending and receiving wireless messages than clear weather.

Out Of Stock.

It takes a great deal to shatter the composure of a head waiter and to reduce him to the level of an ordinary, apologetic mortal, but the feat was accomplished in Washington, says the Post, and in a very simple way. A lawyer went to supper at a certain cafe after the theatre and ordered a cup of coffee.

"Please bring it in a cup with the handle on the left side," he said, confidently to the waiter. "I'm left handed, and I don't like any other kind of cup."

"Yes sir," stammered the waiter; "I will sir."

He was seen to hasten a way and confer with the head waiter. Then the head waiter bore down on the party.

"What sort of a cup was that you wanted, sir?" he said.

The head waiter disappeared, to return a little later obviously perturbed.

"The cup you—" he began.

"What?" exclaimed the lawyer.

"Do you mean to tell me that in a first class cafe like this you haven't such a thing as a cup with a handle on the left side? As a matter of fact, you must have plenty of them."

"Well," said the head waiter, "we usually have, but I'm sorry, sir, de last we had was broke this morning."

The Awakening of Charley.

By Josephine Wentworth.

When Charley sauntered into the yard and dropped down beside Jane on the old bench under the elm, he had in his mind just what he was going to say—he had been rehearsing it all day—but when he was beside the little girl he had loved since childhood, looking into her big, innocent blue eyes, he suddenly became speechless so far as proposing went.

Jane was in her usual mood; quiet and comely, telling him the happenings of the day. But Charley had something else on his mind, something that he wanted to say, and most of her news fell on deaf ears. Jane noticed his abstraction and, thinking that he was not interested, became silent.

For a long time neither spoke, then:
"Did you know that Ned Burley's cousin Violet, from Chicago, was coming to spend the summer with them?" she asked.

"No."

"Ned says she is a dream."

"Struck up, I'll bet."

"He says that she will have all the fellows in town in love with her before she has been here two days."

"I know one she'll not have," Charley declared.

That night, after he had gone, she stood before her mirror, critically studying the reflection therein. Jane was not what one would term pretty. Her features were regular, but her face was covered with a mass of tiny freckles.

Ned's boast that all the boys would be at her heels had not been in vain, and much to Jane's discomfort. Charley was one of the foremost. To him Violet was a revelation, her red lips, bewitching dimples and dancing eyes played havoc with his heart. He wondered what on earth he could ever have seen in that freckle-faced, red-haired Jane.

Charley continued to call on Jane same as ever, but there was a difference in his attitude toward her. He looked upon her now as simply a friend of childhood and she accepted the changed condition of affairs with a fortitude that was pathetic. Charley's eyes had been blinded by the flashing charms of the frivolous Violet.

So passed the summer, and when fall came Violet began talking of returning to the city, and Charley awoke to the fact that for him life would become an empty void after she had gone. Then he asked her to marry him.

She threw him a saucy look, lowered her eyes demurely and said she would consider it. Charley had never made a study of human nature, and so foolishly went about in a dream of ecstasy.

When the day for her departure arrived he had not received his answer, and she promised to write to him as soon as she had spoken to her mother on the subject.

During the following week Jane saw nothing of him, as his time was all taken up in dreaming of the future, and in going to and from his house to the post office.

Finally he was rewarded by receiving a dainty missive postmarked Chicago. He did not open it till he was safe from observation, then he tore it open with a wildly beating heart. A moment later he was staring at the sheet in amazement—it was not his letter at all, but was written to a girl in New York.

Violet had written two letters and had put them in the wrong envelopes. He glanced over the pages until he came to the last paragraph, then his face paled and an angry frown settled on his brow. He read it over twice.

"And Mianie," it read, "you ought to have seen what proposed to me. I use to amuse myself in picking hayseed out of his hair, and he had such lovely hair, too. And just think, it was the only 'pop' I got all summer; not much like the experience we had at the seashore a year ago. Well, I've written him a nice little letter of regret in which I told him that 'my ma won't let me.' It may make him up."

It did make him up. It showed him a type with which he was wholly unfamiliar, and taught him a lesson that he would remember the rest of his life. And while he was thinking of what he had just read there came intruding into his mind a pair of big innocent blue eyes, and he imagined that he saw a look of sadness in their depths. Then he tore the letter into fragments and ground it into the earth with his heel.

When he sauntered into the yard, Jane was sitting on the old bench under the elm. When he dropped down beside her he had no idea what he was going to say, or how he was going to explain his conduct of the past few weeks; in fact he had expected that she might ignore him, as he deserved.

But she didn't.
And just how it happened he hardly knew; but he suddenly realized that she was in his arms, and he was calling her his little wife and smothering her with kisses.

A Bold Step.

To overcome the well-grounded and reasonable objections of the more intelligent to the use of secret medicinal compounds, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., some time ago, decided to make a bold departure from the usual course pursued by the makers of put-up medicines for domestic use, and so has published broadcast and openly to the whole world, a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines. Thus he has taken his numerous patrons and patients into his full confidence. Thus too he has removed his medicines from among secret nostrums of doubtful merit, and made them remedies of known composition.

By this bold step Dr. Pierce has shown that his formulas are of such accuracy that he is not afraid to subject them to the fullest scrutiny.

Not only does the wrapper of every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous medicine for weak stomach, liver or biliousness, contain a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into its composition, but a small book has been compiled from numerous standard medical works of all the different schools of practice, containing very numerous extracts from the writings of leading practitioners of medicine, each and every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's medicines. One of these little books will be mailed free to any one sending address on postal card or by letter, and enclosing a small fee of five cents, and requesting the same. From this little book it will be learned that Dr. Pierce's medicine contains no alcohol, narcotics, mineral agents or other poisonous or injurious agents and that they are made from native medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable ingredients contained in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for women are of the most valuable native medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable ingredients contained in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for women are of the most valuable native medicinal roots of great value.

Editorially the Sun of Baltimore says:

"The outcome of this election is not the result of a partisan campaign, nor of any appeal to passion or prejudice. The appeals from the platform were to the patriotism and civic pride of the electorate. It was a campaign of argument upon business propositions. Party lines were to some extent broken. Many Republicans, doubtless, voted the Democratic ticket and many Democrats seem to have voted the Republican ticket, and if the Democratic nominations had been less excellent Mr. Timanus would probably have received a great many more Democratic votes.

So far as the effect of his election upon the State election next fall is concerned, yesterday's election may be regarded as encouraging, if the Democratic party puts its best foot forward.

The independent vote that came back to the party will remain with the party only so long as the conditions satisfy them. Victory in the future will also be dependent upon united action. If the party is to be divided into factions by the selfishness and ambition of individuals and officeholders, defeat will surely follow. The time is past when one victory can establish a party in power. At each election in this State it comes up for trial and if it is found wanting it will be rejected.

COMING MEETING OF LAKE MONROE CONFERENCE ON INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION.

Barely has a great reform shown more striking evidences of progress than has the peace and arbitration movement during the past few years. Since the first Hague Conference in 1899 an ever-changing series of events has been tending in the direction of better international relations. Set back against a great war, we find a successful Hague Court settling four cases involving fourteen nations; a new work of arbitration treaties, forty-four in number, limited in scope but nevertheless strong guarantors of peace; an arising world sentiment which did not a little to terminate the Russo-Japanese war; and the development of an international respect and good which has well expressed itself through such agencies as the Alaska Boundary Tribunal, the North Sea Commission and the Algiers Conference. Arbitration has become a world subject, engrossing alike to cabinets and peace societies, executives and private citizens.

At this moment the great nations are witnessing impressive demonstration of interest in the second Hague Conference which meets June 15th. In our own country, a great National Arbitration and Peace Congress recently drew together in New York thousands of Americans and secured official recognition from city, state and national officials. It is, indeed, encouraging that the second Hague Conference should have such a great and wide-spread interest.

The reasons for this general interest will hardly be found in anything new that has been said of the horrors of war, the burden of militarism or the expense of great armaments. The explanation is rather that the nations are finding new ways to adjust many controversies without bloodshed or dishonor, and that the people are coming to realize that any present hope of doing away with war lies not in removing its causes but in finding new means of dealing with those causes; not by unqualifiedly condemning war, but by codifying international law, allaying international distrust and extending and making more judicial the application of arbitration through the Hague Court and like agencies. In the general acceptance of this principle, the movement against war has found a basis for sure, even if slow, progress.

BIG MEETING HERE.

Daughters of Liberty of The State of Maryland Hold Their Twelfth Annual Session in Salisbury.

The 12th Annual Session of the Daughters of Liberty of the State of Maryland, met in the Red Men's Hall here May 9th, at 10 a. m., Hon. L. Atwood Bennett, on behalf of Hon. Chas. E. Harper, Mayor of the city, in a very cordial address, extended the hospitality of the city to the State body. This address of welcome was responded to by Mr. J. E. State Councilor, Mrs. M. W. West, of Baltimore city. When the body met in general session with John H. Owens, of Havre de Grace, State Councilor, there were 130 members present from different parts of the State.

Betsy Ross Council No. 17 of Salisbury, Md., tendered the members of the State body a banquet in the Masonic Temple Thursday evening. Hon. E. H. Walton delivered a very interesting address which was followed by a very attractive program, after which the visitors were invited to the banquet tables, which were beautifully decorated and bountifully supplied with all the good things which delight the inner man, (and woman as well) that the ladies of the Eastern Shore are noted for, and which it is needless to say the members from the Western Shore did ample justice to, and will always remember the kindness shown them by the people of Salisbury on this occasion.

After the banquet Mrs. M. P. Trussell gave an organ recital which was highly appreciated by every one present. The consensus of opinion being that it is seldom persons anywhere, have an opportunity of hearing finer musical renditions. This was followed by a recitation delivered by Miss Jesse Rae Taylor, who has become quite popular as an entertainer. Her subject was "Good Management," which she handled in a style and manner well calculated to win the approval of her audience which she not only deserved but unqualifiedly gained.

The entertainment committee were from Salisbury's local Chapter Betsy Ross Council No. 17 and was composed of the following members, Mrs. Ross Smith, Mrs. Anna Lucas, Mrs. Cora Farlow, Mr. John Brittingham, and Mr. Thos. Parkes.

Session was called to order in the Red Men's Hall Friday morning at 9.30 when the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: Councilor, Daisy McDonald, Frederick City.

Assistant Councilor, Florence Boswell, Elliootts City.

Vice Councilor, W. Secor, Dickeyville.

Assistant Vice Councilor, May Campbell, Port Deposit.

Assistant Secretary, Jennie Craig, Perryville.

Treasurer Amy Sapp, Baltimore.

Assistant Treasurer, Cora Farlow, Salisbury.

Guide, Laura Dawant, Baltimore.

Inst. Guard, C. O. Chandler, Cumberland.

Outside Guard, Ella Diffenburgh, Levelburg.

National Representative, Nancie Willett, Baltimore.

Chaplain H. Mead, Baltimore.

Place of meeting in 1908, Baltimore.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to the members of the local Council, to the local press and to the citizens of Salisbury for the general hospitality. The State Council adjourned at 12.00 o'clock and spent the afternoon in visiting the different industries of the city.

We Trust Doctors

If you are suffering from impure blood, thin blood, debility, nervousness, exhaustion, you should begin at once with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the Sarsaparilla you have known all your life. Your doctor knows it, too. Ask him about it.

Unless there is daily action of the bowels, poisonous products are absorbed, causing heart ache, biliousness, nausea, dyspepsia, and thus preventing the Sarsaparilla from doing its best work. Ayer's Pills are liver pills. Act gently, all vegetables.

Made by J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Also manufacturers of HAIR VIGOR, ANKER-PAIN EXPELLER, CURET PECTORAL.

We have no secrets. We publish the formulas of all our medicines.

Permanent Naval Display at James' Town Exposition.

While not on so tremendous a scale as in the opening weeks the naval display at Jamestown will nevertheless be maintained in an adequate manner throughout the entire period of the Exposition.

The United States government has assigned three ships to duty right off the great pier during the seven months and these will be constantly open to the inspection of visitors. Considering that the most popular exhibit at the World's Fair at Chicago was an imitation battleship built on piles in the lake 'the reality of the Jamestown squadron will be of the greatest interest to strangers from the interior.

MARDELA.

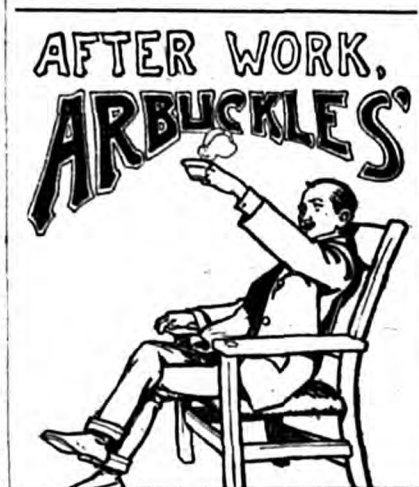

Rev. Franklin B. Adkins, grand chaplain of Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of Maryland, visited the Good Will lodge at Mardela Springs last Friday night and gave them a talk on the principles of Odd Fellowship. They appreciate his visit very much and hope that they will have more of the Grand Officers to visit them this year. Mr. Adkins while here stopped at the Mardela Springs Hotel.

Mr. George W. Deakne, of Wilmington, Del., was registered at the Mardela Springs Hotel several days this week, drinking of the mineral water for his health.

Miss Hettie Bonds, spent last week with friends at Bivalve.

Mr. Hillary Lloyd, of Philadelphia spent a few days of this week with his parents here.

The Wicomico Building and Loan Association will hold their annual meeting of Stockholders Monday evening, May 20 at 8.15 o'clock at which time the annual report will be presented, followed by an election of directors for the ensuing year. This will be the thirteenth annual meeting of the stockholders of this institution.

MARYLAND FARMS.

Fifteen farms at a sacrifice. Buildings on all. Plenty of wood and timber to support them. Good water, fine climate, two railroads, good schools and churches. Near the ocean, abundance of water products. Ideal for horticulture. Harrison's trees are a sample of what they will produce. Climate modified by ocean and bay. Come and look, is all we ask. Farms of 150 to 1,000 acres. Six thousand acres at an average of $10 to $25 per acre. The Eastern Shore of Maryland, because of its position, is becoming the garden of the Northern and Eastern cities; so these prices are only temporary.

Why go to the wilds and spend your life making a farm and a home, when for less money, in a better climate and nearer the markets, you can immediately have what you want? Yours truly,

ROBT. J. SHOWELL, Berlin, Worcester Co., Md.

'Deed It's The Truth

When you come right down to solid facts there's a but one store in Salisbury where you can get the right kind of clothing at the right kind of price. There's no use talking, there's but one store in Salisbury that sells the best clothing made, that store is Lacy Thoroughgood's store, where more business is done in one day than any other store in Salisbury does in three days. When you were a youngster and people told you that you were growing, didn't it make you feel good? That's the way with Lacy Thoroughgood. Four years ago Lacy Thoroughgood opened his second store in Salisbury which is an exclusive Hat and Gents Furnishing Goods store and today Thoroughgood has two of the best stores ever opened in a city the size of Salisbury—the best town on earth. Sometimes you'll see a newspaper story to the effect that somebody is selling just as high grade clothing and hats as Thoroughgood—well you know they ain't and nobody really believes them when they say they are. Tell you what I'm doing, I'm just cleaning up the town, I can't help it, people want my goods and I'm going to let them have them. 'DEED IT'S THE TRUTH.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

Fill a bottle or common glass with water and let it stand twenty-four hours: a sediment or something indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fails every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention this paper and don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

What Does It Mean

to let Dividends "accumulate" on a Life Insurance Policy? In many companies it means nothing more than an agreement on the part of the policy-holder, to do without dividends for fifteen or twenty years, and then take the ever dividend the company will be willing to give. Dividends are declared every year in the Mutual Benefit, and the policyholders use them either to help pay premiums or to buy increased insurance. The policies of the contain special and peculiar advantages which are not combined in the policies of any other company. Examine these advantages before placing your insurance. You owe it to your family to have the best.

FORGET IT.

May 18, '07. (Gen. 45:1-16. 50:18-21).

It is a well-worn and much accepted maxim that "Revenge is sweet." Robert Burns poetically wrote of one who "Nursed his wrath to keep it warm," and even Moses in the formulation of Levitical jurisprudence made the law of justice read "An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." There was no such thing as forgiveness known to the early twilight of the world, and it was not until 4000 years after that One was heard to enunciate the sublime doctrine, Forgive and Forget. How then shall we account for the conduct of Joseph when at length he had his peripatetic brothers in power? See what he might have done! He might have said, "You scoundrels! I have you at last! For 20 years I have waited for this day. You put me in a pit once. I will put you in the deepest Egyptian dungeon; you sold me once into slavery; I will make you the slave of slaves; you taunted me with being a dreamer once, I will teach you that I am wide awake, at present; you shall never escape my vengeance again." That would have been the speech of his day and time. That would have been considered by all his contemporaries the language of elementary justice. Not vengeance but alphabetical justice—justice at its lowest point. "Good enough for them," would have been the universal verdict. It would have been considered a simple case of reaping what they had sown.

But this is precisely what Joseph did not do. When his brothers were at his mercy, and he had but to nod to the attendants, and they would have been rushed to prison, and to doom, his great heart broke in the anguish of love and tenderness and longing. He who could endure uncomplainingly 13 years of cruelty and suffering, burst into a flood of tears as he found himself alone in the presence of his brothers, and he poured out upon them recognition, reassurance, inquiry, comfort and love. Incoherently, impetuously, Never was there such tact—he sent every Egyptian out of the room when he made himself known to his brethren. Never was there such forgiveness—he gave his brothers no chances to petition for it, he takes the words out of their mouth, he forgives them so completely that they appear never to have sinned, for he declares his conviction that it was not they that sent him hither, but God. If there ever was a white lie there was one. For it was a statement that deceived no one, and it consoled the remorseful and strengthened the fainting heart. Their sin and shame is for a moment removed by the ruler of Egypt, only to be buried out of sight and sound forever. Joseph forgave and forgot magnificently.

How many people are there to-day up to that standard? In the harsh experiences of life how often the milk of human kindness turns sour. Here is a man who was exiled from home, ill-treated by relatives and friends, thrown into pain, sorrow, false accusation, imprisonment, depolation, and that when he was only a boy in years, who yet comes out of the process tender as a woman, sensitive as a flower, responsive as the strings of an instrument to the touch of human fingers. When we get slighted, neglected, insulted, we grow peevish, censorious, distrustful, offended. We announce that we cannot get over it. We snub those who snub us, we cut those who cut us, we glare at those who glare at us. Not satisfied with mere justice, we like just a little revenge. We perhaps would not inflict it ourselves, but if our enemy should somehow or other get tripped up and fall part way into a pit, far enough, so that he would be frightened half to death, and be obliged to call on us to help him out, our sympathy would not be aroused to any great extent. We bury the hatchet, but we leave the handle out in anticipation of the time when we shall need it again.

What a picture this story presents of reconciliation! It is a beautiful picture of brethren long alienated coming together again. Joseph shows the grandeur of his character in finding an excuse for all the injury done him, and sets an example worthy of all imitation for the warring, scratching, back-biting, scheming, gloating, criticizing, snapping, [prejudicing, undermining sons of men. The great temporary whitewashing, overlooking, patching, glossing over, of the wrong doing. Joseph went right to the base of things and tore it out root and branch. In the expressive language of the street he said, "Forget it!" He went further. He brought the whole family down to Egypt, where in the fat fields of Goshen they could bask in the warm radiance of his prosperity. He was not ashamed of his old father, but introduced him proudly to the Egyptian court. He did not blot out the faults of his brothers, but buried it in a bottomless tomb, and through all the subsequent years he bestowed upon his own flesh and blood his choicest blessings, and left instructions that when the family returned to their own land, they should bear his body with them.

Here is a case cured by RHEUMACIDE after noted New York specialists had failed. Mr. W. R. Hughes writes from a case of rheumatism and greatly improved his general health. I was a total wreck, having had rheumatism for twenty years. I spent several weeks and much money trying specialists in New York, but RHEUMACIDE is the only cure I have found. FORTUNE MADE IN ACTING

Stage Stars Who Leave As Much As $100,000 Few.

INVEST IN REAL ESTATE

Henry Irving's Money Came Largely From Sale of Collections—Extraordinary While Traveling—Few Own Houses—Unsuccessful Productions Swallow Profits.

The fact that few actors and managers leave behind them any fortune appears to be just as true in other countries as it is here, says the New York Sun. A statistician has recently figured out some interesting details as to the estates left by distinguished players and managers in England. Henry Irving left only $100,000, and much of that was realized from the sale of his pictures and other works of art. The fact that Ellen Terry and a benefit shows how much she has saved from half a century of work. Unlike Sir Henry she never had any share of losses to bear.

Wilson Barrett, who had known many ups and downs in his career, found great prosperity in "The Sign of the Cross," during the latter years of his life, but none of the plays that he attempted after that time ever made any money for him. Probably the $50,000 that he left behind him came altogether from the royalties that he received from that play. It has been acted in this country for six years.

Some of the American fortunes have turned out just as small. It was thought always that the late Fanny Davenport was a rich woman. She had acted for years with great success and been a great popular favorite. Yet she left practically nothing. That was in a measure due to the failure of several productions made just before her death.

Henry E. Abbey died a poor man, although he had handled millions. Maurice Grau, on the other hand, retired from business worth $400,000, part of which was made from successful speculation. The rest of his fortune was earned during the last ten years of his managerial career. Joseph Murphy made a fortune out of his Irish plays, especially "The Kerry Gow," and kept the money. Some of his colleagues say he still has the first dollar he earned in the business. He invested it all in real estate in different cities and today has more money than any of his predecessors.

Maggie Mitchell owns a large block of real estate on the upper West side, New York City, and has built several apartment houses there which represent a very comfortable fortune. Richard Mansfield is one of the richest actors in service and will be well able to retire when he wants to at the end of the three years his press agent has allotted to him. He plays long seasons, always draws large audiences and has inexpensive companies. Joseph Jefferson, who did business on the same scale during the later years of his career, left more than half a million.

No woman ever had a greater vogue here than Helena Modjeska, who has been in financial troubles during the last few years. Most of her money disappeared through her Western ranch and her family. She always supported practically in the West a small colony of Poles who lived on her ranch. That has now been sold for $30,000. She earned $25,000 from her tour in 1905 and will keep acting for several years to come, so she will probably be able to retire in comfort.

"It is always a little difficult to tell just how actors do spend their money," said a manager, "for very few of them live in luxury. They may have a house and a valet, but with expenditures of this kind they stop. They rarely keep yachts or horses and few of them make the least pretense of keeping up an establishment.

"One way they use up money is, of course, through a certain kind of ostentation in which they live on their travels. They take suites in small hotels, have their meals served upstairs when they are, if possible, a little bit worse than they are downstairs and they give suppers to the members of their companies and in other ways that do not show but cost a great deal they let their money slip away.

"I know one star who travels now in the most extravagant way and I suppose she enjoys it. She takes a motor, two maids, a valet and always has a large suite of rooms in which there is a supper almost every night. Of course that may be fun, but it is using up every cent she earns. Yet that woman has a very modest home in the country where she spends her summers and no home at all in New York."

"Standard" Marine Engine

Was the first gasoline engine to cross the Atlantic under its own power and did it in mid-winter.

Was the first to be installed in a coasting schooner. The four-master "Northland" has a 500 H. P. "STANDARD" and has doubled her number of trips made when under sail alone.

Has been adopted by U. S. Government for the boats of the Life Saving Service, by the Russian Government for their submarine and other torpedo boats, and the Government of Santo Domingo for their coast guard vessels.

In every direction and in all kinds of service "STANDARD" has been a leader and has established a record of performances and achievements which others are struggling to follow.

"STANDARD" costs no more than any other high-grade engine, and is guaranteed to develop 25 per cent more power than catalogue rating.

He Revised His List.

There is a little Irish tailor in Harlem who prides himself on a reputation for courage. The reputation, however, says the New York Times, was won and is maintained much like that of the tailor in the old story who "killed nine at one blow." Fortunately, this knight of the scissors has discretion.

One morning Mrs. Murphy, a customer, entered the shop, and finding the tailor busy with pencil and paper, asked him what he was doing.

"I'm making a list giving the men on this block who I can lick," said he, pompously.

"Have you Murphy's name down?" asked she.

"Murphy heads the list," was his reply.

Mrs. Murphy hurried home with the news, and Mr. Murphy came down to the shop with fire in his eye.

"Ma woman tells me," he roared, "that you're after making a list of the men you can lick and that you've got me down at the head of it. Is it true?"

"Sure, and it's true. What of it?"

"Why, you good for nothing little grasshopper, I could wipe you out with my little finger. I could wipe the floor with you with both me hands tied."

"Are you sure about that?" asked the tailor anxiously.

"Sure? Sure, I'm sure about it."

"Well," sighed the tailor, regretfully, "then I'll have to scratch you on the list."

Danger Signal No. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick.

Danger Signal No. 2, comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the coming of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's Salisbury proof.

E. Sampson Truitt, farmer and owner of fertilizer factory, residing on East Church street, extension says, "My first experience with kidney complaint was felt a year ago last February. It commenced with pains in my left side and worked around to the small of my back. The pain was so severe for a day or so and after that trouble from the kidney secretions existed for which I used many well known remedies. It is true I received some relief but the last of them I used Doan's Kidney Pills which I procured. They checked the trouble to a great extent. I believe them to be all that is claimed for them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster Milburn Co., New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name Doan's and take no other.

The Postmaster General has issued an order or notice that all rural mail carriers have the right of way on all the country roads, and that all other carriages or conveyances must surrender that right of way to the rural carriers. That was the rule when the mails were carried in four horse stagecoaches, and every one had to get out of the way when the mail coaches came long. It is a very serious matter for anyone to obstruct the rapid transportation of the United States Mails. Get out of the road when the rural free delivery carrier comes along with Uncle Sam's mail!

Dear Sir: The cheekiest fraud in all paint is pastepaint. Here's one.

Lawyer Arley B. Magee, Dover, Del., painted his house four years ago with pastepaint at a cost of $44 for paint and $61 for labor; total $105. The house got shabby in two years; then he painted Devco at very different cost; $18 for paint and $80 for labor total $98. Paste paint $105; Devco $98.

It is like fattening hogs on milk & 4-water. Paste paint is 4-4 whitewash. Yours truly,

F. W. DEVCO & Co.
L. W. Gunby Co., sells our paint.

Do the right thing if you have Nasal Catarrh. Get Ely's Cream Balm at once. Don't touch the nostril powder and snuffs, for they contain cocaine. Ely's Cream Balm releases the secretions that inflame the nasal passages and the throat, whereas common "remedies" made with mercury merely drive them out and leave you no better than you were. In a word, Ely's Cream Balm is a real cure, not a delusion. All druggists, 50 cents, or mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

Regulates the bowels, promotes easy natural movements, cures constipation—Doan's Regulets. Ask your druggist for them. 25 cents a box.

Baby won't suffer five minutes with cramp if you apply Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil at once. It acts like magic.

VIRGINIA'S OPEN HAND.

Virginia's heart is happy and her hand is open wide. Her lips are shouting welcome to the rolling human tide. Her sweethearts eyes are dancing and her cavaliers are fine. To bow the whole world welcome to her figure and her vine!

Virginia's lachrymating dances "on the outside, and her smile is sweet for all who travel to her gates or leap her stile: She's ever in her glory when she bids the stranger "come"—

The fiddlestrings are dancing and the sweet old waltzes hum!

Virginia's hands are open to the throngs that crowd toward To dream beside her waters and in spot the Jamestown show! Her old heart beats as ever and her old pride sings the song Of warm wide worlds of welcome to the onward moving throng!

"SPRING CLEANING" NEEDED.

The Body Requires It Just As Much As The House Does.

"You look sick this morning."

"Didn't you have pains in the joints and muscles?"

"Yes. As my old negro mammy used to say, 'I have misery in my joints.'"

"Better get a bottle of Rheumacide and take it, old man."

"What does Rheumacide do?"

"Why Rheumacide is the most powerful and effective blood purifier in the world. It sweeps all the germs and poisons out of the blood and makes you well all over."

"Ever try it yourself?"

"Sure, I take a couple of bottles of it before spring begins. Give my blood a spring cleaning. And Rheumacide puts me in such fine shape that I never have that tired feeling."

"Well, I'm going to try this Rheumacide you say is the best ever!"

"That's right. All the druggists sell it. Better get a bottle today. You start to get well with the first dose."

The proprietors say that Rheumacide gets at the joints from the inside and makes you well all over. And that's the truth, old man."

—All women must wear hats when attending services or ceremonies in Episcopal churches of this diocese, according to the dictum of Bishop Leighton Coleman. Noticing several bareheaded women at a wedding in Calvary church here the Bishop spoke to them at the conclusion of the ceremony, saying: "It is against the rules of the Episcopal church for women to appear in church without hats or some other covering for their heads. I will excuse you this time, but do not do it again."

Are You Nervous?

Nervousness and sleeplessness are usually due to the fact that the nerves are not fed on properly nourishing blood; they are starved nerves. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes pure, rich blood, and thereby the nerves are properly nourished and all the organs of the body are run as smoothly as machinery which runs in oil. In this way you feel clean, strong and strenuous—you are toned up and invigorated, and you are good for a whole lot of physical or mental work. Best of all, the strength and increase in vitality and health are lasting.

The trouble with most medicines and tonics which have a large boom sale for a short time is that they are largely composed of alcohol holding the drugs in solution. This alcohol soaks up the red blood corpuscles, and in the long run greatly injures the system. One may feel exhilarated a better for the time being, yet in the end weakened and with vitality decreased. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery contains no alcohol. Every bottle of it bears up on its wrapper The Badge of Honesty, in a full list of all its several ingredients. For the druggists to offer you something he claims is "just as good" is to insult your intelligence.

Impure blood runs you down—makes you an easy victim for organic diseases. Burdock Blood Bitters purifies the blood—cures the cause—builds you up.

"Doan's Ointment cured me of eczema that had annoyed me a long time. The cure was permanent."

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Bridal Gowns and Graduating Dresses. Spider Silk; Dotted Muslin And Foulards.

The season of marrying and giving in marriage that was launched at Easter is still in full swing, and following the girl brides, girl graduates will be the next to the fore.

To Study Fashions.

Nowhere is there a better opportunity to study fashionable attire than at a church wedding, which brings out every variety of new costumes, from the elaborate elegance of the bride party to the smart new tailored suits of girl friends from out of town.

Satin And Chiffon.

Satin and Chiffon have vied with one another for first place in the favor of spring brides. Early in the season satin ruled, but later gowns have more often been of chiffon and lace made up with clinging satin linings. Where the gown is of satin, skirts are quite plain or have what little trimming is used on the front breadth. The lighter materials are made with all sorts of modish garnitures customary where airy fabrics are employed.

Point Lace Veils.

Bridal veils of point lace or bridal veils of simple unembroidered tulle have had equal endorsement from fashionable sources. Veils have been of any length that suits the wearer from those that barely reach the waist to those that fall to the end of the train.

Tulle Gowns and Trimmings.

Gowns of Tulle have been smartly worn both by brides and bridesmaids. No material is quite as becoming as this airy fabric, and it is quite simple in effect or the reverse according to its trimmings.

White and Silver.

White and silver was the robe worn by a bride a few days since, the dress of tulle, the embroideries of silver thread and silver beads. The veil was point lace, a long scarf shaped piece that extended from the stately dark head of the girl bride nearly to the end of her skirt. Contrary to the custom this spring this bride wore a great quantity of magnificent jewelry, including a diamond collar, a long rope of matched pearls and a coiffure ornament in diamonds.

Spider Cloth.

It's a long way from satin at many dollars a yard to spider cloth at fifty cents, but the latter in all white would make up charmingly for a pretty unpretentious bridal gown that could be worn for any festive occasion afterward, or be equally suitable in white or pink pretty printings that come in all sorts of delicate colors, for girlish frocks for graduation wear or for summer dances.

Foulards Very Fashionable

Foulards are once more very fashionable, and no gown a woman can possess last better or is suitable for so many different uses. Lord and Taylor is making a great showing of especially exclusive patterns in foulards. Coin spots of various sizes, some larger than dimes, some in clusters of line effects constitute some of the most attractive of these patterns.

Bordered Goods.

Goods with printed or woven borders are in great demand by fashionable dressmakers who are making them up in many odd ways, utilizing the borders for lengthwise trimmings quite as often as for regulation hem effects.

New Silk Gloves.

Very attractive is the showing of new silk gloves of the long wristed sort, made especially pretty by all sorts of charming designs of embroideries on the arms.

New Parasols.

The latest thing in parasols displayed in the 5th Avenue window of a well known but exclusive shop, is a line of coaching parasols in all the modish single colors, from mauve to magenta, the handles straight and umbrella like but made of ivory carved and set with gold and semi precious stones.

QUALITY WILL TELL

SPECIAL CITY COUNCIL

Meeting Thursday Night Decided To Reject Street Bids. Careful Consideration Being Given.

A meeting of the City Council was called by Mayor Harper Thursday night of this week to again discuss the street paving proposition which has become a question of much interest to the people of this city owing to the diverse opinions and large expenditure involved. Only three members of the Council, Messrs. Twilley, Brewington and Smith were present at this meeting, Mr. Polk being out of the city, and Mr. Hitch absent on account of previous engagement. Nothing new developed at this meeting except that the Council practically decided to reject all bids and to advertise for new ones. This was brought about by the Mayor's statement that there might be some question as to the legality of accepting any of the bids now before them, owing to the fact that each bid had been submitted and opened by the Council. This view was concurred in by all the members of the Council who seem to be particularly anxious that everything shall be done to safeguard the interest of the people and at the same time give them what they want, and there seems to be no doubt that if it is made clear to the Council that the sentiment of the taxpayers and the people owning property along the streets to be paved desire any particular form of pavement this is the one that will be adopted even though the cost be greater than others. The Council will meet again Monday evening of next week at which time the matter will be taken up again for final action.

ABOUT THE SCHOOL QUESTION AND MR. GOSLEE'S RESIGNATION.

The Public Wants The Plain Unvarnished Facts On The Question—The Patrons Of The Wicomico High School Are Aroused Over The Alleged Mis-Treatment Of Professor Goslee And Want Justice Done—High Interest Felt, And A Desire For Changed Conditions Expressed All Over The County.

From The School Board. Mr. Williams Makes Statement—Others Keep Quiet.

In answer to a request for a statement from the members of the Wicomico School Board regarding Mr. F. Grant Goslee's resignation, Messrs. Brewington and Cooper said they had none to make. Mr. Cooper however, stating that his relations with Mr. Goslee were always very cordial.

Mr. Charles E. Williams Responds.

Mr. Chas. E. Williams, President of the School Board, gave out the following statement:
"I will state that I know very little about it. My first information that Mr. Goslee had resigned came to me from Mr. Goslee, himself, on Thursday before his resignation was to take effect on Monday. At a conference held in Mr. Brewington's office on the Monday that the resignation was to go into effect I advocated the retention of Mr. Goslee for the remainder of the school year, and then we could take the summer to think over the matter."

Opportunity Given School Board For Statement.

The following letter was delivered to Mr. Bounds by one of the Editors of this paper on Thursday of last week. We have as yet received no reply to same:

Salisbury, Md., May 9, 1907.
H. Crawford Bounds, Esq.,
Sec'y and Treas.
Board of School Commissioners,
Wicomico County, Md.

Dear Sir.—We printed in our News columns of our last week's issue, an account of the resignation of Prof. Goslee, together with the manner that the said resignation was accepted, criticised the action of whoever was responsible for this.

This is a matter of public interest and we wish to be fair to yourself, the School Board and Prof. Goslee, and in order that all the facts leading up to Prof. Goslee's resignation, the method of its acceptance, and the manner in which his successor was appointed, may be brought out and fairly placed before the public, we offer you the columns of the Advertiser, and we will be glad to publish a statement signed by you bearing on any of these matters.

Very respectfully,
White & White,
Publishers Salisbury Advertiser.

Neither Satisfied Nor Pacified.

Some weeks ago, when I first learned through our County paper that Mr. F. Grant Goslee had resigned his position as teacher of Mathematics in the Wicomico High School, I was exceedingly sorry to learn that we had lost so valuable a teacher. His resignation, coming as it did, so near the close of the school year, and almost at the beginning of examinations, I felt that there must be some cause for his leaving the school so unexpectedly. While in this frame of mind and before I had learned any of the particulars, I made this statement during a discussion of the matter in Twilley and Hearn's barber shop: "Somebody has done a great wrong—Mr. Goslee, if he has resigned on the eve of examinations without a just cause, or the party who is responsible for his resignation." I at this time, knew nothing of the reason for his resignation, but Mr. Brewington, of the School Board, engaged me in conversation, and explained I suppose to his satisfaction, the "Why's" and "Wherefores," dwelling especially on Mr. Goslee's "Stubbornness," as he called it, and disclaiming any blame to Supt. Bounds. Not being familiar with the facts at the time, I did not argue the matter with Mr. Brewington, but I did listen attentively to what he had to say. I understand that Mr. Brewington has made the statement that he has satisfied me. I want to say right here that I am not satisfied, and I believe that I voice the sentiment of every parent (with possibly one or two exceptions), who have girls and boys attending the Wicomico High School, and every girl and boy who LEARNED Mathematics under Mr. Goslee's instruction, when I say that I am highly indignant at Mr. Goslee's treatment from Mr. Bounds. It is a deplorable fact that Wicomico has for a School Superintendent, (in many respects the most important in the gift of the people) a man who has shown by his actions that he will not hesitate to deprive our boys and girls of one of the best teachers in the State, simply to enforce some silly little hobby. I have it from reliable authority that Mr. Goslee has lived up to every school law required of him by the State Board of Education and I KNOW that he teaches in a way our children can understand. Is this a misdemeanor for which he should be asked to resign? Or, which his resignation should be accepted?

I have been plain in this letter, but there is no public question of more importance to us than our Public Schools, and I do not believe that any MAN, or set of men, should be allowed to stand in the way of the best interests of our schools. The schools are for your children and mine, and IT IS our business to know what is being done. It is our duty to see that wrongs are corrected, and if we stand together and demand it, a great deal can be accomplished. I hold Mr. Bounds to account for Mr. Goslee's resignation. I hold the School Board to account for allowing Mr. Bounds to bring about Mr. Goslee's resignation. Mr. Bounds has made a blunder too big to be overlooked, and the School Board has stood by without raising a restraining hand. Fellow citizens, it is up to us now. I feel that we can better afford to lose Mr. Bounds as Superintendent of our schools, than we can Mr. Goslee as teacher of Mathematics in the Wicomico High School.

Strong Protest From Mr. Thos. Perry.
Editor Advertiser:—
I feel that the patrons of the High School should protest against the manner in which Mr. Goslee was forced out of the school as a teacher. As a patron I protest both against the method, and the result. Mr. Goslee's work in the school has, I believe, been satisfactory to all patrons, and if the patrons are not to be consulted who are?

I understand the Superintendent has been asked to state publicly his side of the case, but so far he has declined to make any statement. Mr. Goslee, I notice, has given his version of the matter. I, as a patron, am most interested in the loss of Mr. Goslee's services, for I consider him one of the best teachers the county has ever employed, and I want to add here, that I am fully convinced that there is no now, nor has there been at any time any friction between Mr. Goslee and the principal of the school. Nor do I think any other patron believes any such tale. I believe that Mr. Huffington and Mr. Goslee were working harmoniously. It was not Mr. Huffington, who asked for Mr. Goslee's resignation.

I, for one, protest against the gun-shoe method of procedure to obtain Mr. Goslee's removal. I understand the report is being circulated that Mr. Goslee in a fit of pique handed in his resignation, not expecting it to be accepted. On this point Mr. Goslee is very clear. He states that he was ready and willing at all times to comply with the law, to the letter, and to have the authorities say exactly what he should teach and what should be expected as the result of his work, but it seems that there were some minor details as to how he should proceed to do this work, and by the way, so trivial that one would scarcely look for an issue to be raised on them—some method of procedure which was established by a resolution passed at a principal's meeting, the suggestion of the Superintendent. This in the opinion of the Superintendent was made law, and must be followed, and Mr. Goslee was told that if he could not adopt it, trivial as it seemed, his resignation would be acceptable—Now what I want to know is, has the Superintendent or the School Board the authority to ask for resignations? and when asked for, who has the power to accept them? Has there been any regular meeting of the Board since this resignation was asked for? If so, when was it and what was the official action taken? Was the matter not of sufficient importance to call a meeting of the Board to take action in the matter? Has the teacher who succeeded him ever been legally appointed?

This is not the first time that gun-shoe methods of this kind have been applied, and we think it about time that the patrons should have some voice in the case. It seems to me that it is the duty of the Board at its next meeting to take this matter up and if they find that the patrons want Mr. Goslee, and there is no doubt in my mind but that they do, he should be re-instated.

I do not believe in attempting to conduct public business in the dark. If you work for the public let the public know what you are doing. Why was Mr. Goslee's resignation kept such a secret? Did even the principal, who is so adroitly made to appear between him and the Superintendent know of the resignation till a day or two before Mr. Goslee vacated?

Thos. Perry.

MR. ELIJAH FREENY DEAD

One Of Wicomico's Oldest And Most Respected Citizens. Prominent In Church And Charitable Work. Identified With The Development Of Delmar.

Mr. Elijah Freeny, one of the oldest and most prominent residents of Delmar District, died at his home, Edge View Farm, at 6.15 o'clock Tuesday morning. Mr. Freeny sustained injury by a fall several months ago from which he never fully recovered, and his health had gradually failed since that time.

Mr. Freeny was born August 17, 1833, and was the son of John Freeny, who was born in 1775 and died in 1861. Mr. Freeny was married in 1861 to Miss Maria Ellen Fooks, who died November 2, 1905. Of this union there survives the following children: Miss Rosa L. Freeny, Miss Matilda M. Freeny, Mrs. Harry E. Hickey, Messrs. J. Wm. Freeny, Henry B. Freeny and Edwin E. Freeny.

Mr. Freeny was a gentleman of the old school and was noted for his hospitality, kindly disposition and as being ever ready to extend a helping hand to those less fortunate than himself. At one time he was quite active in the politics of this County and prominently identified therewith, being elected a member of the third Board of County Commissioners organized for Wicomico County. This Board which was elected in 1871 was composed of only three members all of which are now dead. At their first meeting which was held December 12, 1871, they proceeded to elect Mr. Freeny as President which office he filled for two years with much credit to himself and benefit to this County. He was also a large land owner in and near Delmar and had much to do with the development of the town of Delmar. He was president of the Edge View Realty Company, which was organized and incorporated last January with a capital stock of $30,000. The organization of this company will obviate the necessity of an administration on the estate, as all of his financial interests were transferred to the company. The will which he had made, was destroyed when this company was formed.

Deceased had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for more than sixty years and took an active interest in all church and charitable work. The funeral services were held at his late home Thursday afternoon conducted by the Rev. Z. H. Webster. The pall bearers were his sons, Messrs. J. William, Henry B. Edwin E. Freeny and Messrs. Harry E. Hickey, Oscar Freeny and J. G. W. Perdue. Interment was made beside his wife in the old Freeny burying ground on the home farm.

QUEEN OF ACTRESSES PRAISES PE-RU-NA.

MISS JULIA MARLOWE.

"I Am Glad To Write My Endorsement Of The Great Remedy Pe-ru-na. I Do So Most Heartily."
Julia Marlowe.

ANY remedy that benefits digestion strengthens the nerves. The nerve centers require nutrition. If the digestion is impaired, the nerve centers become anemic, and indigestion is the result.

Pe-ru-na is not a nerve nor a stimulant. It benefits the nerves by benefiting digestion. Pe-ru-na tones the stomach of catarrhal congestions and normal digestion is the result.

In other words, Pe-ru-na goes to the bottom of the whole difficulty, when the disagreeable symptoms disappear. Mrs. J. C. Jamison, 61 Marchant street, Watonsville, Cal., writes:

"I was troubled with my stomach for six years. I tried many kinds of medicine, also was treated by three doctors. They said that I had nervous dyspepsia. I was put on a liquid diet for three months.

"I improved under the treatment, but as soon as I stopped taking the medicine, I got bad again. I took the medicine for two years, then I got sick again and gave up all hopes of getting cured. I saw a testimonial of a man whose case was similar to mine being cured by Pe-ru-na, so I thought I would give it a trial.

"I procured a bottle at once and commenced taking it. I have taken several bottles and am entirely cured.

"I have gained in strength and feel like a different person. I believe Pe-ru-na is all that is claimed for it."

Nervines, such as cool tar preparations, are doing a great deal of harm. Sleep medicines and headache powders are all alike—hurt the stomach, and should not be used. The nerves would be all right, if the digestion were good. Pe-ru-na corrects the digestion.

IN THE VALLEY OF DECISION.

By Miss Ella Kenney.

High up in her room among the stars sits a girl, whose face and figure are thrown into strong relief against a background of scarlet and gold. She sits at the open window, and the soft mellow rays of the setting sun cast gentle shadows that seem to accentuate her isolation. In her face is expressed the remoteness of the spirit that will ever see visions and dream dreams, while in her dream, in sweet accord all those qualities, those subtle elusive elements of perfection that we esteem but can never wholly fathom.

As she raises her eyes her glance takes in the room—the open fire, the easy chair, the table on which rests a bundle of manuscripts, and a soft smile creeps over her countenance. "Children of the Mist," she murmurs, and lays caressing fingers on the neat pile of papers. Her fancy wanders in and out through the vista of departed years, she sees herself a young and happy girl embarking on the sea of literature. A brief and hardworking period of novitiate found her at the height of fame. Her books became a household possession and her presence was sought at many a gathering, not only for her fame as a writer, but because her sweet, sympathetic nature drew humanity toward her, and her charity and sweet helpfulness cheered many an unsuccessful follower.

One window of her room looked out on many a roof garden, but one little opening that caught the first sweet flush of dawn and the last lingering set of sun. She loved the wide glory of the purple sky, its loneliness and its mystery. A sleeping princess, waiting for her prince," she designated herself. This little world had at times a fairy brightness that contrasted with its occasional loneliness and the dark hour when frost and snow shut out her view of sun and moon and stars. It made out of her life one part of her existence. The other part of her consciousness belonged to the world outside, to the ostentation and vanities that characterized her fellow-men. She found that standing on the outskirts of the dim multitudes she could view here, as well as in her high window, rising ecstasies, fleeing eclipses and intermittent silences.

The view fascinated her, and when a last the prince came, her whole heart had leaped responsive to the great happiness she was carried along in the whirl, utterly swept off her feet, robbed of all volition. There seemed no leisure hours to spend at her high window, and she felt blinded and deafened by the clamor of her heart. But at last there came a quiet moment when, seated in her nook among the stars, her thoughts resolved themselves from chaos and she could survey calmly and logically her position. As she glanced at the solitary he had placed upon her finger she seemed to see in its plect a chain that bound her in rivets of steel.

"My wife," he would say in one of their plans for the future, "must not be a public woman! The life of a woman in the public eye is utterly distasteful to me." That she should give up her writing was the sum of his desires. At first in the poignancy of her grief she had tried to eliminate him from her life, but the long stretches of loneliness and the instant crisis of her heart rendered futile all attempts at separation, and she realized with a pang that she had come to a parting of the ways.

Now once more seated at her high window in the clouds, her hands carelessly, lingeringly laid upon her manuscripts, she feels that something she had begun to live for has gone for nothing; something sweet, ardent and keen must come to an end.

She crosses the room to the open fireplace, where the flinty dart of flame cast fantastic shadows on wall and floor, and kneeling, she lifts the dying embers into a bright glow. Then gently, tenderly, she places the neat parcel on the coals. "Children of the Mist," she whispers, "farewell." As the papers catch the glow they quicken into flame, then die out; a coal becoming detached from its security falls with a sibilant, hissing noise and in the rosy glow is reflected a subtle change in the face of the kneeling girl—the old look of surprise in the brown eyes has gone; the old air of enchantment has departed; she seems to have gained in equanimity; she had lived through something.

The sleeping princess had come into her kingdom.

Steam Plant Accidents.
During the 12 months ending June 30, 1905, 14 persons were killed and 40 injured from British steam plant accidents; in the United States 332 persons were killed and 535 injured. Telling a Horse's Age.

The age of a horse cannot always be told by looking at its teeth. After the eighth year the horse gets no more new teeth, so that this method is useless for a horse more than eight years old. As soon as the set of teeth is complete, however, a wrinkle begins to appear on the edge of the lower eyelid, and another wrinkle is added each year, so that to get the age of a horse more than eight years old you must count the teeth plus the wrinkles.

THE SCHOOL QUESTION.

We publish in this issue a letter, we wrote to Superintendent Bounds offering to him the columns of The Advertiser if he desired to make a statement as to the reasons for Prof. Goslee's resignation, also the manner and method same was accepted and his successor appointed. We have not as yet received any reply to this letter, and are forced to the conclusion that Mr. Bounds does not think the matter is of sufficient importance to waste any of his valuable time on it.

If this is the reason for his silence, and he thinks that it is none of the Public's business what he does with his schools, then he has got too big for his position.

Perhaps, however, he has other reasons for his silence—but we are frank to say that we can not see any objections to his placing his position fairly and frankly before the public, unless he knows he is in the wrong and an open discussion of the matter would not reflect any credit on himself.

According to the best information we have been able to get in this matter it appears to us that Mr. Bounds made the situation that compelled the resignation of Prof. Goslee, and having brought about his resignation proceeded to accept same, and appoint his successor. We base these conclusions on the following facts:

First, Prof. Huntington did not know of his resignation until the Friday before it was to go into effect and even then was not acquainted with the reasons. Prof. Huntington made this statement to one of the Editors of this paper, on the Monday that the resignation was to go into effect.

Pres. Williams of the School Board has stated that he was not aware of the resignation until the Thursday before it was to go into effect, and then only through Prof. Goslee himself. As the principal of the school was not acquainted with the fact that Prof. Goslee had resigned and even at that late date was ignorant of the reason for same there could not have been any friction between Prof. Goslee and himself. As the School Board was not aware of his resignation until a few days before it went into effect, and then not officially they could not have accepted, and could not have appointed his successor.

We also publish letters from two patrons of the schools, both of whose children received instructions in Mathematics under Prof. Goslee. We believe that they express the sentiments of almost every parent who has had children in Prof. Goslee's room, and certainly the sentiments of the pupils themselves.

THE PEOPLE WANT GAS—THEY WANT IT RIGHT.

The City Council states that it will be in a position to give out a Gas Franchise at the regular meeting next Monday night. It is to be hoped that there will be bona fide bidders for this franchise at this meeting as the people of Salisbury are out-spokenly in favor of having gas. The experience of the past ought to make the City Council careful as to what kind of a franchise is given and to the parties to whom they give it.

"It will be a great mistake for the Gas franchise to get in the same hands that the electric light is in as this will kill competition and put the people entirely at the mercy of these people. Again, whoever asks for a franchise should be required to put up enough money to guarantee a plant being put in, or a bond that will be collectable in case of a failure to comply with their agreement to put in a plant in a given time. Also the franchise should be made plainly to read that it will be forfeited for good and over in case that the plant is not completed in a given time, and this time should only be made such as they can reasonably expect to put in a first class plant.

The experience of the past when a franchise was granted with no provision of forfeiture in case it was not complied with, should be a sufficient warning to our Council never again to be fooled in this way. Of course everything else being equal, home people should be given the preference but not unless in every respect, they offer equally as good a contract as outside parties. Protect the great interest of people first and then outside parties.

CORRUPT SAN FRANCISCO

Ruef—A City Politician—Pleads Guilty And Prepares To Make Confessions In Repentance.

Abraham Ruef, San Francisco's corrupt political boss, in making his plea of guilty, ignored the advice of his counsel, who just before the dramatic scene left the courthouse. Ruef addressed the Court, saying that he began his career in politics with high ideals, but that conditions had broken him down. He now desires only an opportunity to make reparation. He pleaded guilty, he said, in order to end the great strain that his family and himself had been undergoing.

Bore An Honored Name.

Ruef, who evidently was laboring under great emotion, said: "This trial has become a threatening danger to my health, both mental and physical. I am unable to bear the strain any longer. The strain on those nearest and dearest to me is undermining them. They are on the verge of collapse. Their lives hang in the balance and I must take some action."

"It is true that, in order to hold together the political machinery which I had built up with great difficulty, I did lower the high political ideal that I had hitherto upheld. Last night I reached the conclusion that there might still be an opportunity to make some effort to restore myself in the public favor and be a power for good. I will do all that still lies in my power to help overthrow the system which has made possible the terrible corruption of public officials. To do this I will work even as the humblest citizen. My future career will be one of integrity. I hope that I can still accomplish some good."

Enters Plea Of Guilty.

"I am making the greatest sacrifice that can befall a human being of my disposition—namely, to acknowledge my faults and mistakes to restore myself in public favor. Duty calls me wherever the path may lead, but I want the whole world to know that I am not guilty of the charge made against me in this instance; nevertheless, on account of the reasons stated, I withdraw my plea of not guilty and enter a plea of guilty."

As Ruef resumed his seat he was trembling like a leaf, his face the color of parchment. Tears coursed down his cheeks. A crowd gathered about him, but the bailiff brushed them away.

Why He Changed Plea.

In an interview later Ruef said: "I changed my plea to guilty, but pledge my solemn word that I am innocent. I have been guilty of conspiring at the corruption of municipal officials by corporations, but in these French restaurant cases I am not guilty. Never would I have been convicted on this charge. I pleaded guilty to save the lives of those who are near and dearest to me on earth. If my father, my mother and my sister had been compelled to endure the strain of my trial, lasting at least two months, and possibly longer, it would have cost their lives."

Ruef's eyes were filled with tears when he said this. He went on: "No one knows what they have suffered in these last few months, and would not tell if I could. Why, night after night, my father and my sister have come up here into my room and sat for an hour, saying nothing, seeing nothing. I could not stand it any longer."

"Last night I gathered my family about me in this prison house of mine and prepared them for the act I had determined upon. That would mean one day of sorrow. To go on would have meant months of agony and—death."

"I don't know what my sentence will be. For myself, I do not greatly care. I say now that no man possesses physical nerve more than I do. I could face a crowd of 5000 men, of 10,000 men, every one with a rope in his hand and calling for my life. I could face them calmly and meet my end without flinching. But the suffering of those I love I could endure no longer."

"I say I do not know what my sentence will be. If it be five years in prison, I can meet it when it comes. I have made no confession. I know much. Some things I shall tell; some things I shall not tell. When over an innocent man has been forced into corruption against his will, that man I shall protect. Whenever a man, be he high or low, has entered into corruption with his eyes open, that man I shall expose."

Fruit and Other Crops Reported Much Injured.
Reports from throughout Delaware are that great damage was done to the fruit crop and to growing crops generally by heavy frosts early Sunday morning. Such a frost is unprecedented in this state in May. Peaches, cherries and pears suffered severely, the frost being so pronounced that it was scraped off the grass with a knife. It is believed the peach yield in Delaware will be seriously curtailed. The frost, following continued cold and wet weather did more damage than would otherwise have been the case.

Vegetation generally around Middle town was seriously injured. Many growers in that section took the precaution to cover their plants and thus saved them, but with large trunks this was impossible. Whole fields of tomato plants will have to be replanted the frost having killed those set out.

Complies with all requirements of the National Pure Food Law, Guarantee No. 2041, filed at Washington.

Handsome Soda Fountain Installed At The Palm Garden.

Mr. Wilson, of the Palm Garden, received this week a handsome new soda fountain. The fountain is a Twentieth Century Sanitary, weighing complete over 18000 pounds, is of the pump system and has capacity for sixteen syrups. It was manufactured by the L. A. Baker Co., of Chicago, who are the largest manufacturers of soda fountains in the world. Owing to the fact that the fountain arrived from Chicago six days ahead of time arrangements for its installation were not quite ready. Mr. Wilson announces that he will endeavor to be open and in full swing by Wednesday of next week. G. Jennings Hall, of Baltimore, has been engaged as dispenser for balance of this season. Mr. Jennings comes to Salisbury with the reputation of being one of the best soda water dispensers in Baltimore city and was secured by Mr. Wilson at large expense. The Palm Garden under the very capable management of Mr. Wilson and wife, has grown to be one of the established institutions of the city and is coming to be recognized as one of the finest refreshment places anywhere on the Shore.

Girl Guides Penny Train.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 14.—Believing the Pennsylvania Railroad owed her a livelihood after the death of her father in its service, Miss Nellie Conner, of Sellings Grove, near here, called upon it for instruction in some trade.

By order of A. J. Cassatt, late president of the company, she was placed in a block office at South Danville. There she mastered the keys and switching levers. Then she was assigned to Shindel, Snyder county, where 44 freight and 4 express trains pass daily. Her superiors on the division say she is slated for promotion.

Miss Conner graduated several years ago from the Sunbury High School at the head of her class and has always manifested an interest in railway affairs.

It is said she aims to become private secretary to the president of the road.

Shelve Fruit Cars Again This Year.

Dover, Del.—Cars for the transportation of peaches from lower Delaware will be shelved again this year, the delegation of fruit growers that waited on officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company having answered the latter from the original determination not to shelve cars.

The committee had two interviews with R. M. Patterson, superintendent of freight transportation of the Pennsylvania Railroad and other officials of the road.

At the last interview Superintendent Patterson announced that the railroad company had decided positively and finally to abolish the shelving of cars for the shipment of fruit, but that in view of the representations made by the committee the company would continue the shelving of cars so far as it lawfully might do during the present season of 1907.

Mr. Patterson emphasized the fact that no suspension of the order of April 6 could be looked for after the present year, and requested the committee to impress this upon Delaware fruit growers.

Judge Gray for President.

Pottsville, May 12.—A league of clubs to forward the nomination of Judge George Gray, of Delaware, for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency, is to be organized immediately by prominent labor leaders and mine workers. A meeting with this object in view will be held in Pottsville next Saturday.

The uptown station at Pine Street, of the N. Y. P. and N. B. R. is in a filthy condition. It is not only a congesting place for loafers but is in a condition to breed all kinds of diseases. It is bad enough for men to have to endure these things but when it comes to the ladies of this town, the railroad company is imposing entirely too much on good nature. Some day our citizens will rise in their right and the slaughter will begin at the right place.—Orisfield Times.

'Deed It's The Truth

When you come right down to solid facts there's but one store in Salisbury where you can get the right kind of clothing at the right kind of price. There's no use talking, there's but one store in Salisbury that sells the best clothing made, that store is Lacy Thoroughgood's store, where more business is done in one day than any other store in Salisbury does in three days. When you were a younger and people told you that you were growing, didn't it make you feel good? That's the way with Lacy Thoroughgood. Four years ago Lacy Thoroughgood opened his second store in Salisbury which is an exclusive Hat and Gents Furnishing Goods store and today Thoroughgood has two of the best stores ever opened in a city the size of Salisbury—the best town on earth. Sometimes you'll see a newspaper story to the effect that somebody is selling just as high grade clothing and hats as Thoroughgood—well you know they ain't and nobody really believes them when they say they are. Tell you what I'm doing, I'm just cleaning up the town, I can't help it, people want my goods and I'm going to let them have them. 'DEED IT'S THE TRUTH.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition, beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased. Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose. Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

What Does It Mean

to let Dividends "accumulate" on a Life Insurance Policy? In many companies it means nothing more than an agreement on the part of the policyholder, to do without dividends for fifteen or twenty years, and then take whatever dividend the company will be willing to give. Dividends are declared every year in the Mutual Benefit, and the policyholders use them either to help pay premiums or to buy increased insurance. The policies of the contain special and peculiar advantages which are not combined in the policies of any other company. Examine these advantages before placing your insurance. You owe it to your family to have the best.

Mutual Benefit Life Ins. Co.

A NATION IN CHAINS.

May 19, '07—(Exodus 1:1-14).

The propensity of man to enslave his brother has been universally observed. Notwithstanding the trite saying, that, "all men are created free and equal," human slavery has been practiced in some form by practically all nations. Though all men claim a common origin, the family tie has been loosely held or utterly repudiated, and strong men have enslaved weak men, white men have riveted fetters upon black men, aristocrats have trodden upon plebeians. The Scriptures have been brought into the court of public opinion and made to testify that God made some people to serve, and others to be served. It has been argued that the Creator intended some nations to be "hewers of wood and drawers of water," and that to attempt to escape from that condition is to fly in the face of providence and scout the will of the Almighty. Doctors of divinity have been known to preach learnedly that "slavery was a divine institution," and "men stealers" have been protected and encouraged by law.

Yet where on earth is there a sadder spectacle than a captive man or nation. What value is there in health if its possessor has to rise to his work at the sound of a horn, and be driven to it with the crack of a whip? If a man has no right to his wife or his children, if he must see them set up at auction and sold to the highest bidder, if he must hear his own mother cry for mercy, and see her struck down by the slave drivers whip, what wonder that men and nations have risen in rebellion at the spectacle and made the altars of liberty red with blood, preferring death to bondage.

This was at one time the condition of the Israelites in Egypt. Going into that land, few in number, one of their own nation the prime minister of the country, settling down in the fat pasture land of Goshen, they had multiplied with such rapidity that within 300 years they numbered probably 2,000,000 souls. Then, little by little, the Egyptians encroached upon their liberties, until in the end they were weak, dispirited, overwhelmed, a down-trodden race of slaves. They were held in the grip of Egyptian bondage, and were the scullions, the scavengers, the brickmakers and stone-cutters of that realm.

Egypt was a place famous throughout the world for its palaces, its pyramids, its mausoleums, its rock-hewn temples. But what was all that to a nation of slaves. The mortar of their mighty pyramids was mixed with the blood of young men and maidens, old men and matrons. In every zephyr they heard the sobs of the captive. Doubtless the Egyptians were enamored of their country. They were prosperous beyond the dreams of avarice. They had a multitude of servants to do their bidding, to fan them when they slept, to dress and feed them when they woke. There was not an Egyptian heart that was not light; there was not a Hebrew heart that was not heavy. Such was the condition of a whole nation for 250 years. Gradually the oppression was made more and more unendurable, until at length the infamous scheme was put in operation to limit the population of the slaves by strangling every male child at its birth. It was the crowning act of perjury on the part of the slaveholders, "the cry of the children" moved the powers of the universe. And yet there is a bondage more humiliating, more miserable, more cursed than that of the Israelites. Many a man whose skin happens to be white is a bigger, blacker, baser slave than any negro who has tolled in the cotton fields of the South, or the silene pits of Egypt. And many a nation, boasting of its history and glorious achievements, proud of its position among the tribes of men, will be remembered in the archives of the future as a nation of slaves. Slaves of gold, slaves of lust, slaves of drunkenness, slaves of public opinion, how many such nations there are to-day on this planet. The generations of the future will look back and wonder why with all our boasted civilization, we allowed some of the 19th century crimes against womanhood, against childhood, against employees against foreigners, against the black man, the brown man, the yellow man to exist. What will they say of our labor laws, of our liquor laws, of our divorce laws, of our tax laws, of our school laws, of our suffrage laws, of our immigration laws, of our railroad laws, of our interstate commerce laws, of our tariff laws? What will they think of our Sunday, of our pestiferous criminal code, of our trials, of our newspapers, of our Congress? Who among the men whom we call great will they crown with honor, and who among our leaders will they hurl into the dust? Israel's bondage did not long continue. They marched out of it at length never to return. The political economist and moral reformer would almost be willing now to depart in peace, if his eyes could see upon the "far horizon" the dawning light of full and complete emancipation for America.

Quincy, Mass., July 14, 1906.
Dear Sirs: I was laid up last November with Rheumatism in my feet and ankles, but after taking four bottles of Rheumacide I have not been bothered since. I tried every old kind of liniment and was under two doctors, and all I tried had the same result, until I got Rheumacide. Now, I am pleased to say it has not been necessary for me to take any medicine for Rheumatism since. February 1st, Everybody that I recommended it to has had the same results.

THE HORSE FOR SERVICE.

Points to be Considered in Testing Good Working Qualities.

A bulletin by the Canadian Agricultural Station says that the short ribbed horse is never in proportion to be a good horse, that such a horse has not the stomach to contain succulent food to serve him from one meal to another.

A light-colored horse seldom weighs well, and weight in a draft horse, if he comes from bone, sinew and muscle, goes a very long way to determine his commercial value.

When a horse is well coupled together on top and has a short back, he must have the length below from the point of the shoulder to the back of the thigh. When so built he will stand the strain of drawing heavy loads much better than he is as a long, loose back.

The front feet and hocks are the parts of either a draft horse or a driving horse that comes directly in contact with the hard work, and unless they are sound and good a horse's usefulness will be very much impaired and his commercial value very much lessened.

Before using the stallion, get the groom to lead him away from you. Stand square behind him and see that he picks up his feet and places them on the ground properly, traveling in both trot and walk clear and can, not striking the ground first with the toe and then bringing down the heel.

The feet should be large and waxy in appearance. The sole of the hoof should be concave, the frog spongy, plump and elastic, because it acts as a buffer to take the concussion from acting too severely on the foot, pastern and fetlock. See that both side and dam have sound feet, free from flatness, brittleness and are not contracted. There should be no "gumminess" about the hocks of the draft horse, as it indicates coarseness. They should be wide, especially from a side view.

A stallion whose feet are contracted and brittle and whose hocks are puffy and fleshy-looking should be avoided as such hocks are generally associated with a coarseness throughout his whole conformation and a general lack of quality.

Racks for Hauling Hogs.

A writer in Indiana Farmer sends an illustration of his method of constructing a wagon rack for hauling hogs. The general idea of the plan is brought out in the accompanying illustration. Perhaps the most interesting feature is the drop and shown, which is hinged to the bottom of the rack and then let down forms a walk for the hogs over which they may be driven either in or out of the rack. When brought up and hooked it forms a complete end board for the rack.

How Horses Are Doped.

We hear a good deal about doped horses on a race track. No one is likely to be caught in the act of doping a race horse, because the dose given is so small it can be administered with little danger of detection long before the race. If a horse is to race at 3 o'clock a two-grain powder is given on the tongue in a darkened stall at 1 o'clock. The drug takes effect in about thirty minutes and the animal breaks out into a sweat. It is rubbed down, cooled out and done up as if it had come in from morning work. Every effort is made to keep the horse quiet until post time, but it very often breaks out again and is again cooled out. The doped horse never takes any warning-up work and this fact affords the best means for finding him out. The animal is moved slowly to the starting post, great care being taken to prevent it from becoming excited until the flag is dropped. Then a kick and dig to the work and in an instant the full force of the dope is felt.

The Stock to Keep.

The farmer reduces the value of his own labor by keeping inferior stock, or failing to secure large yields of stock, as the higher the prices and the greater the production, the better the remuneration for the labor bestowed. There are periods when the farmer cannot perform work in the fields, for which reason he should aim to get his crop under shelter as soon as possible, in order to do some kind of work which can be performed inside the barn.

Feeding Corn to Sheep.

In arranging yards for feeding 200 can be put in lot but 300 is still better. Always keep salt before the sheep. In feeding corn they should be started slowly and the ration increased gradually until they eat about a pound and a half a day.

Dragging Down Pains

are a symptom of the most serious trouble which can attack a woman, viz: falling of the womb. With this, generally, comes irregular and painful periods, weakening drains, backache, headache, nervousness, dizziness, irritability, tired feeling, etc. The cure is that wonderful, curative, vegetable extract, which cures such a marvelous, strengthening influence, on all female organs. Cardui relieves pain and regulates the menses. It is a sure and permanent cure for all female complaints. At all druggists and dealers in $1.00 bottles.

WINE OF Cardui

The Female Regulator

"I SUFFERED AWFUL PAIN in my womb and ovaries," writes Mrs. Naomi Baker, of Webster Grove, Mo., "also in my right and left sides, and my menses were very painful and irregular. Since taking Cardui I feel like a new woman and do not suffer as I did. It is the best medicine I ever took."

How Turtles Are Caught.

Turtles are always captured at night and usually on moonlight ones. This is the time they go on the shore to lay their eggs. They select a smooth, sandy beach, dig holes in the sand, deposit their eggs there and leave them to be hatched by the heat of the sand. When the turtles are on shore for this purpose the hunters come upon them and they are easily overtaken, for turtles are slow movers. The hunters have not very strenuous undertaking. All that is necessary to be done is to turn the turtles on their backs and leave them until the next day, when they are removed.

Another more curious way of catching turtles, according to the Washington Star, is by fishing by the remora, a fish found in tropical waters. The popular name of this fish and the one by which the children of these countries call them is the sucking fish. This name is given to them on account of a dish on their heads, by which they can attach themselves to any surface, like the side of a shark, a ship or the shell of a turtle. This disk is like the soft leather "suckers" that are popular with schoolboys, when this fish has once attached himself to any thing you can pull him to pieces rather than force him to release his hold.

Turtle hunters go in boats and carry several of these remoras in tubs. When they see a turtle and get near him the sucker is sent after him. He is held by the ring on his tail, which in turn is attached by a stout cord. Soon the fish is securely fastened to the shell on the turtle and turtle and fish are hauled into the boat together. Once in the air the remora loosens his hold and it dropped back into the tub to rest until another turtle is sighted.

"SPRING CLEANING" NEEDED.

The Body Requires It Just As Much As The House Does.

"You look sick this morning."

"Yes, I woke up with a dull headache, a coated tongue and that dark brown taste in the mouth."

"Didn't you have pains in the joints and muscles?"

"Yes. As my old negro mammy used to say, 'I have misery in my joints.'"

"Better get a bottle of Rheumacide and take it, old man."

"What does Rheumacide do?"

"Why Rheumacide is the most powerful and effective blood purifier in the world. It sweeps all the germs and poisons out of the blood and makes you well all over."

"Ever try it yourself?"

"Sure, I take a couple of bottles of it before spring begins. Give my blood a spring cleaning. And Rheumacide puts me in such fine shape that I never have that tired feeling."

"Well, I'm going to try this Rheumacide you say is the best ever?"

"That's right. All the druggists sell it. Better get a bottle today. You start to get well with the first dose. The proprietors say that Rheumacide gets at the joints from the inside and makes you well all over. And that's the truth, old man."

—Billy Jones, the mate. —"Cheer up, Cap'n Flint. Mebbe business'll pick up soon."

Cap't. Flint, the pirate. —"Shiver my timbers, Billy, you know I've always been a straightfor'ard, honest robber, but you may lay it to it that somethin' don't happen soon I'll go ashore an' git a job as a head water. I will, by thunder." —Sal.

The mother who would be horrified at the thought of letting her daughter wander away to a strange country without guide or counsel, yet permits her to enter that unknown land of womanhood without counsel or caution. Then, in utter ignorance, the maiden must meet physical problems whose solution will affect her whole future life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has been well named a "God-send to women." It corrects irregularities and imparts such vigorous vitality to the delicate womanly organs as fits them for their important functions. Many a nervous, hysterical, peevish girl has been changed to a happy young woman after the use of "Favorite Prescription" has established the sound health of the organ peculiarly feminine.

Not a patent medicine but the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce, a Specialist in the diseases of women. Of known composition, without alcohol or other dangerous stimulants, the active medicinal principles of Golden Seal and Lady's Slipper root, of Black Cohosh root, Unicorn root and Blue Cohosh root are extracted from each by the use of chemically pure, triple refined glycerine.

It is gratifying to learn that the project to start a free library in Salisbury is meeting with so much favor and likely to be a success. Wednesday evening of this week, Mrs. Trussell gave a very enjoyable concert in the Masonic Temple in aid of the enterprise. Wednesday of next week, Mr. Potter will give one half the proceeds of his moving picture show to the library fund and in appreciation of his generosity the show should be liberally patronized on this and other occasions.

BITHULITHIC PAVEMENT

Wanted. Taxpayers Willing To Assume The Increased Cost. Revised Bids Submitted. Former Bids Slightly Lowered.

At a meeting of the City Council last Friday evening quite a number of prominent citizens appeared to discuss further the street paving question. Hon. Wm. H. Jackson and Postmaster M. A. Humphreys and others were present in the interest of the tax payers of Camden.

Messrs. W. E. Miller, John D. Williams, Dean W. Perdue, Samuel A. Graham, with several others were there from N. Division street. A general discussion of the subject developed the fact that a majority of the tax payers on these streets were in favor of the use of bitulithic instead of brick, even when it was shown that the cost of the bitulithic would be at least ten per cent more than the brick; one large tax payer going so far as to say that he would resist to the extent of going into Court the use of any material other than bitulithic.

Lesters were read from prominent citizens of other places where bitulithic had been used, which refused the statement that has been urged against bitulithic to the effect that it imparted a fine black dust which is injurious to health and furniture. After thoroughly discussing the question with the Council it was left with them for final action. The Warren Brothers Co., through their representative Mr. Horn presented a revised proposition from his company. And stated that it was impossible to make the price of bitulithic less than $2.55 per square yard but that his company would agree to deduct from their bid $1000 on the sewerage to be done under the streets.

Sweeten and Co., who were the bidders on the brick pavement also agree to reduce their bid $1500 on certain parts of the work with the price of brick pavements to remain at $2.80 per square yard. After being revised he figures now before the Council are as follows: For bitulithic, $53,174.95; for brick, $48,876.87, a difference for $4,298.08 in favor of brick. Another delegation of property owners on Main Street, extended, consisting of Messrs. D. S. Wroten, Phillip Bros. Perdue and Gunby, and others appeared before the Council and objected to the paving of this street with brick. These gentlemen said they preferred shells to brick on account of the expense but if the Council determined to improve this street, they preferred paying the extra cost of ten per cent and have the bitulithic.

READY IN JUNE.

So Says President Tucker Of Jamestown Exposition In Answer To Contrary Statements.

Long before Baltimore Day—June 27—the Jamestown Exposition will be completed, according to Mr. H. S. George Tucker, president, who has written a letter to this effect to Mr. Thomas G. Boggs, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, of Baltimore. Mr. Boggs had written Mr. Tucker calling his attention to statements made by a contractor who has been working on the Exposition grounds that the fair would not be ready next month, in spite of the additional money secured by its directors. Mr. Tucker's answer was received today. It is as follows:

My Dear Mr. Boggs: In reply to your letter, I can say that I think the Exposition will be entirely completed between the 1st and 10th of June. The newspaper reports that have gone out have done injustice to the Exposition. The Government pier, which is the greatest piece of work here, the work being done by the Government, is incomplete, but they are making great progress on it, and already we are using it for practical purposes, though it is not a source of ornament as yet to the grounds.

The delay in Congress in making our appropriations has delayed our finishing the exposition. We have now about completed the loan which will be sufficient in our judgment to finish it, and you can rely upon it that on the 27th of June, and long before that, it will be finally finished. There is ample here now to engross the attention of anybody, as well as their interests, for several days.

Hoping that you will let these facts be known and not abate your interests in Baltimore Day, to which we are looking forward with much pleasure, I am very truly yours,

H. St. G. Tucker.

WHEAT TAKES JUMP.

December Goes To $1.02 And July To 99¢ In Chicago Pit.

Chicago, May 16.—The wheat market experienced another sensational upturn near the end of the session on the Board of Trade today.

July jumped from the lowest price of the day, 92½¢, to 99½¢, and closed 5¢, over yesterday's final figures, at 98½¢. December rose to $1.02, and closed with a net advance of 5¢, at $1.01. September options were also in the "dollar wheat" class for a time at $1.00½, but the loss was 99½¢. The closing figures on December are only 2¢, under the high point of the season reached a few days ago.

The volume of business in the wheat pit was immense, a few of the leading firms alone taking on between five and eight millions of bushels.

INLET AGAIN TALKED OF.

Meeting At Ocean City To Discuss Project.

The matter of cutting an inlet from the Ocean to Synepuxent Bay was again taken up for discussion Thursday last week, when about 100 people met the Government engineer. At this meeting it was shown that 175,000 barrels of oysters were carried each year from the lower part of the Sound, by the Pennsylvania railroad Company. This is only about one fourth of the area that could be made equally as productive by the building of this inlet which is a strong argument in its favor. The proper place for the inlet, it was agreed, would be a point about three miles south of Ocean City, known as Coffin's Point. It will be necessary to secure the services of engineers to make a survey of the Bay and lands that may be affected before any further steps can be taken.

Opinions were much varied as to the cost of building the inlet. Some of the people who are supposed to be well informed think it can be done as low as $25,000. Others however seem to think it will cost from $50,000 to $100,000.

Nuptials.

According to matrimonial rites Mr. James Evans, of Whaleyville, was united in wedlock to Miss Della Lewis, of Parsonsburg on Sunday, May 12th, at eight o'clock p. m. by the Rev. J. W. Gray at Eden M. E. Church Willards. Miss Jennie Mitchell, the bridesmaid, and Mr. Larry Shockley, the groomsmen, entered the church to the strain of the wedding march rendered by Miss Vesta Ennis; following the bride, accompanied by her maid of honor, Miss Ella Shockley, of Salisbury, and the groom attended by Mr. O. Kennedy Lewis who acted as best man. The prayer offered by the pastor in which the bride and groom bowed before the altar made it an attractive and solemn scene to the audience.

The bride and her attendants were dressed in white with embroidery and lace trimmings and wore Lilly of the Valley. The groom with his attendants wore the conventional black with white silk ties.

After the ceremony the wedded couple left for the home of the groom's parents, near Whaleyville here they will together share, after God's ordinance, the bliss and comforts of a married life. They have our congratulations.

—Miss Jesse Rae Taylor will give an evening of impersonations at the Masonic Temple on Tuesday evening, May 14th.

For the Children

To succeed these days you must have plenty of grit, courage, strength. How is it with the children? Are they thin, pale, delicate? Do not forget Ayer's Sarsaparilla. You know it makes the blood pure and rich, and builds up the general health in every way.

The children cannot possibly have good health unless the blood is in proper condition. One-rect any constitution by giving small laxative doses of Ayer's Pills. All vegetable, sugar-coated.

MR. BOUNDS MAKES STATEMENT

Regarding School Matters. Tells Of The Process Of The Board In Making Appointments, Etc.
Relates Part Of Conversation Leading Up To The Resignation.

Office of The Board of School Commissioners, Wicomico County, Md.:
Salisbury, Md., May 23, 1907.
Messrs. White & Realize, Editors.
Dear Sirs: I realize I'm in no position to dictate where my article shall appear in your paper but I hope you may be able to give it the same prominence you gave the attack upon me, both as to heading and location. I shall, of course, expect you to print the article without change of any kind whatever.

Respectfully yours,
H. Crawford Bounds.

Editors Salisbury Advertiser.

You have seen fit in the columns of your esteemed paper to make an attack on me both as an official and as an individual. We all know it's an easy thing to say personal things. Even very small people can do that sort of thing. I very much prefer to believe "There is so much good in the worst of us, and so much bad in the best of us, it hardly behooves any of us to talk about the rest of us;" so I shall maintain a dignified silence so far as your personal attacks are concerned.

In connection with a recent resignation of one of our High School assistants, you charge me with the exercise of undue authority as an official and with unjust treatment of one of our force of teachers. That's the indictment, as I understand it, and you have made a vigorous and labored plea to the jury.

While I have not seen what Mr. Goslee had to say in the columns of your esteemed paper, I want to say that to the extent he went in his statement I shall expect there will be no material difference in our statements. One Saturday morning some weeks ago Mr. Goslee came into my office and said: "I am in trouble, didn't sleep any last night, and I want your advice." I requested him not to make it too hard and asked: "What is it?" He said, and I am quoting from memory: "If certain things were required of you as an assistant over there, (meaning the High School) which you could not conscientiously do or did not believe in, what would you do?" I replied: "Since the principal is looked upon as the head of the school and is held responsible for its conduct and welfare, I should either obey the principal or step down and out." Mr. Goslee then said: "That's exactly what I wanted you to say."

"I can't do what they're asking me to do over there so I'll follow your advice, I'll step down and out." There was then some ten or fifteen minutes discussion, entirely good humored, I may say, of his proposed step. I tried to convince him of the foolishness of his stand. He admitted himself the position he took was possibly an outgrowth of a case of "EXAGGERATED EGO" (his exact words) but that he could not change. I told him I thought it was a case of "brainstorm" and said to him these words: "In the step you contemplate taking you are not doing your duty to yourself, you are not doing your duty to the school, you are not doing your duty to us, and, if you'll understand me, you are not doing your duty to your family." I hope it was understood in the family reference that I had in mind the fact that his three children are in training for school room work and that I questioned the correctness of the example he was setting. He urged that he knew his duty, and that while the principal and the other teachers might argue upon anything they choose concerning the conduct of the other rooms in the building, his (Mr. Goslee's) room must not be interfered with in any way. In speaking of his resignation he said these words: "NOW, MR. BOUNDS I WANT YOU TO PROMISE ME THIS, THAT YOU WILL SAY NOTHING ABOUT THIS TO ANYBODY UNTIL I GET OUT OF THE WAY, FOR I DON'T WANT THOSE PUPILS OVER THERE TO KNOW OF MY STUBBORNNESS." He also said repeatedly: "I don't want you people to think I'm trying to get you in a hole by getting out at this particular time for I don't mean to inconvenience you." He handed me his resignation, remarking that it was to take effect at our earliest convenience, but certainly at the end of thirty days, the legal notice.

According to my memory that is the very substance without any shading or intentional omission, of the Saturday morning's interview. Do you find in it any undue exercise of my official authority, or any "official pressure" so to speak? "Obey your principal or step down and out" was not spoken impetuously. Mr. Goslee asked for my advice and he got it. I say to you, Sirs, I would give the same advice today, and to any assistant in the county, and if asked to do so, to any one occupying a subordinate position of whatever kind. Co-operation beats calculus; harmony beats history.

Now then as to my conduct after the resignation was in. "A policy" of our Board, and one common throughout the State, a ruling I may say, in force for several years past, is that each commissioner is assigned certain sections of the county whose every school interest, whether repairs, buildings, trustees, assistants, teachers, or whatever it may be, is referred to the commissioner in charge for his attention. The Commissioner sends and the Board confirms. This particular resignation coming under Commissioner Brewington's jurisdiction was referred to him. He asked: "What's the matter? Mr. Goslee got another position?" I then gave him all in my possession of the Saturday morning occurrence as given above. Mr. Brewington said: "If that's his position I don't see anything to do but look up another teacher, do you?" And I was asked to secure a successor.

A while after when visiting schools I met another member of the Board, mentioned to him Mr. Goslee's resignation, and the steps Mr. Brewington had taken in the matter. He assured me that he regarded the matter as being entirely in the hands of the local commissioner and that whatever was done would meet with his approval. The third member of the Board was not seen at all by me and, as he well knows and acknowledges, and as the public will understand, no discourtesy to him nor any sort of usurpation of authority was intended in not seeing him. Just as has been done in similar cases heretofore, the Board has since in regular session approved the action taken by Mr. Brewington in the interim of meetings. Commissioner Brewington's action in this one particular case, even though another member had not been seen at all on the subject, had not only the ruling of the Board but a number of precedents to justify it. I leave it with an unprejudiced jury to say whether I am chargeable with an excessive use of authority in my handling of the resignation after it was placed in my hands. I trust, Sirs, you will not be unduly exercised when I disclose to you the fact that I have in cases requiring immediate action filled vacancies without even consulting a single member of the Board. Now a word with reference to the unjust treatment part of your diatribe. I have always thought so highly of Mr. Goslee's innate integrity I still want to hold to the opinion that he himself, if given a chance, will deny any and all insinuations of unjust treatment of him by this Board or any member of it. We first found him, seven years ago doing good work in a district school and getting a salary of $235 a year. The first thing we did for him, and it took effect the next year, was to increase his salary. After two years of successful teaching under our superintendency Mr. Goslee next finds us making a plea with the trustees of Hebron to make him their principal. Against some opposition at first he went to Hebron at a very substantial increase in salary over that of former years. After a year's principalship at Hebron Mr. Goslee will next recall the receipt of a telegram offering him an assistant's place in the High School here. I might add parenthetically that two members of the Board favored my brother for the place, BUT AT MY REQUEST MR. GOSLEE WAS APPOINTED. With a little jog of the memory Mr. Goslee will also recall the fact that he never considered this recognition of him on the part of our Board and the Board's position in the matter as being of sufficient importance to justify an acknowledgment from him in the form of either an acceptance or a refusal, even after I had approached him in person on the question and, too, after Mr. J. Walter Huffman had driven to Mr. Goslee's home and urged a reply. He was considering also, he told me, the offer of some Western position. Next, he will remember receiving notice the following summer of his reappointment as assistant teacher in our High School at an increased salary, and also the vacation following a similar notice, made out on exactly the same blanks as all other assistant's notices were made, and in which is a request to acknowledge receipt: but among the forty two assistants and principals in the county who received their appointment from the Board, Mr. Goslee has been the only one who didn't deem the Board's appointment and request for acknowledgment as being of sufficient importance, or as deserving the business courtesy, for him to say that he might be expected to report for duty at the opening of school. Mr. Goslee is the only man among our corps of teachers who has been regularly excused with pay on election day to look after the duties assigned him by his political party. I will leave it with Mr. Goslee to disclose, if he chooses, some other courtesies too delicate to be referred to here. Unjust treatment at OUR hands!

I don't claim never to have erred, and as a public official I expect criticism; but I have a right to expect to be dealt with by "men with power" above dull brutes and "with common honesty. Does a fair-minded, self-respecting juror condemn a man on hearsay or even truth, if you will, gleaned from one side of the case only? Does common honesty justify such a course? Javelina hurled so unjustly prove only boomerangs to fly right back into the faces of those who hurl them. The public is not slow to discriminate between the emanations of personal spleen and of honest convictions.

Respectfully,
H. Crawford Bounds.

A Correction.

Salisbury, Md., May 23, 1907.

Editors Salisbury Advertiser:
In your issue of May 18th, you state that Mr. Brewington had been asked for a statement concerning Mr. Goslee's resignation, but had declined to make one.

Inasmuch as no member of your staff ever requested a statement from me, you will do me the justice to make the proper correction.
Very truly,
H. L. Brewington.

A Correction Corrected.

May 24, 1907.
During a conversation held with Mr. Brewington, who came to our office and called me out on the Saturday morning that our first article on Prof. Goslee's resignation came out, I told Mr. Brewington that we wanted the facts and would be glad to publish a statement from either Mr. Bounds or himself. To refresh Mr. Brewington's mind on this point this offer was made to him after he had expressed regret that we had not seen him before publishing the article and ascertained the true facts.

Perhaps we should have called upon him at a later date and made another request, but if we have done any injustice to Mr. Brewington we are willing to make any reparation in our power and since he has taken exception to our article interpreting his neglect to make a statement as a refusal to do so, we take it for granted that he wishes to make one. We hereby extend to him the use of the columns of this paper to put his position in the matter of Prof. Goslee's resignation before the public in a signed communication.

ELECTRIC LIGHT CHANGES

Control Of Company Passes Into Home Hands. Local Capitalists Purchase.

For some time past the rumor has been circulating that the Salisbury Light Heat and Power Co. was about to change hands and become the property of citizens of this city. This rumor was verified Tuesday of this week when the control of the stock which has been held by Mr. Louis Dalmas, of Philadelphia, for the past six years, passed into the hands of a home organization composed of the following gentlemen: Messrs. W. J. Downing, U. W. Dickerson, Wm. M. Cooper, George T. Houston, R. D. Grier, Chas. R. Disharoon, Dr. S. A. Graham, Ralph Rhodes and M. V. Brewington. This valuable property was first established by Messrs. R. M. and W. T. Johnson in about 1894 and was successfully operated by them until the year 1900 when a company headed by Mr. Louis Dalmas, of Philadelphia purchased this property for the sum of $42,000. The company under the control of Mr. Dalmas and the immediate management of Mr. Ralph Rhodes began almost immediately the improvement of the property and the extension of its service. The improvements mentioned consisted of considerably raising the dam whereby the water power was much increased. The plant has been entirely rebuilt and new machinery installed of the most approved and up to date kind. The Company while it has not at all times given entire satisfaction, its service for the most part, has been generally good, the greatest cause of complaint being caused by their seeming arbitrariness in not complying more promptly with the very general request of giving their patrons earlier service on extremely dark days. This action on the part of the Company has often brought some very strong and well merited denunciations and it is to be hoped that the new company which now has control will take cognizance of the matter and inaugurate a more liberal policy which will do away with this or any other defect. The Company as now constituted, is composed of some of our best and most Wicomico River Will Have More Launches, This Summer.

The coming season promises to be one of unusual interest to persons interested in water sport as evidenced by the activity of those who are fortunate enough to own and operate gasoline yachts. The Ocasta owned by Dr. Bell has just received a thorough overhauling and is now ready for the summer cruising. The "Holland" also has been thoroughly renovated and made to look as new as ever and the Judge will soon begin to use her for pleasure trips down the river. The Salisbury Marine Railway Co., will soon be ready to float the gasoline launch which they are building for Mr. Anstey. The model of this craft is something unique, but it is claimed by the designer and builder that she will develop great speed, more than 20 miles an hour is expected of her. The finishing touches are also being put on a large gasoline launch, built for Captain Wm. K. Leatherbury, of Salisbury by the Salisbury Marine Railway Company. The boat, which is of a very pretty model is 36 feet long, with beam of seven feet, and is equipped with a 15 horse Buffalo engine, and is expected to develop a speed of 12 miles an hour. The cabin is roomy and is fitted up for comfort.

Josh Billings On Hens.

The best time to set a hen is when the hen is ready. I want tell you what the best breed is but the shanghai is the meanest. It costs ex much to board one as it does a stage horse and you might as well undertake to fat a fanning mill running oats thru it. There ain't no profit in keeping hens for his eggs, if he takes less than one a day. Hens are long lived if they don't contract the throat disease; there is a great many goes to pot every year by this mellowing disease. I want tell you how to pick out a good hen, but as a general thing the long-eared ones, I know, are the least apt to sketrol up the garden. Eggs packed in equal parts of lime water, with the other and down, will keep from thirty to forty years, if they are not disturbed. Fresh beef stake is good for hens; I suppose 4 or 5 pounds a day would be a wal a hen would need at fast along. I shall be happy to advise you at any time on the hen question and take pay for advice in eggs.

War On Postal Rates.

Plans for the inauguration of a national campaign to effect a reduction of the present two cent rate for first class postage to one cent were discussed at the meeting of the executive committee of the National Hardware Association in Philadelphia. It was pointed out that the cost of collecting, sending and delivering a letter averages about three quarters of a cent and that the Government is unreasonable in charging two cents for this service.

After a lengthy discussion of the subject it was decided to begin a vigorous campaign in behalf of a one cent postal rate, and every prominent manufacturing and business association in the country will be asked to join in a petition to Congress for the reduction.

CURED IN 3 WEEKS BY CUTICURA COSTING $1.50

The trouble ran along, taking the doctor's blood remedies and rubbing on salve, but it did not seem to get any better. It stayed that way for about six months; then I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies, and in about a week I noticed a big difference, and in three weeks it was well entirely and I have not had the trouble any more, and as this was seven years ago, I consider myself cured. I used one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, one box of Cuticura Ointment, and two cakes of Cuticura Soap. I think it is a splendid medicine, and I recommend it whenever I can. About Special Delivery Letters.

People who send special delivery letters are liable to notice something about an order from the Post Office Department that ordinary stamps are sufficient and mail their letters without the distinctive stamp. They should read more carefully and learn that the new law does not go into operation till July 1. As soon as Congress passed the law allowing ordinary stamps to be used in paying the fees for special delivery, people began to act as if it had gone into immediate operation, to the considerable annoyance of themselves and their friends and the postal officials. The law has not yet gone into effect, but it will in six weeks.

WOMEN SUFFER

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have immediate assistance.

How many women do you know who are perfectly well and strong? The cause may be easily traced to some feminine derangement which manifests itself in depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere or do anything, backache, dragging sensations, flatulency, nervousness, and sleeplessness.

These symptoms are but warnings that there is danger ahead, and unless heeded, a life of suffering or a serious operation is the inevitable result. The best remedy for all these symptoms is

Jim's Mother

By Irene Lewis.

"You can wait here," the head nurse had said, as she showed me into the visitors' room. "I can't give you any definite report before 2 o'clock or later, but you'd better be ready to come up any time."

That was all I could get her to tell me, except that the case was difficult. They had telegraphed me to be on hand, for things were likely to take a bad turn almost any moment.

I sat down automatically on a settle that rested against the wall nearest the door. I supposed I was alone until I looked around. Then I noticed that there was some one in the opposite corner—an old lady, a little over 60 I should say, with snowy white hair, a pair of sharp black eyes and a face full of fine wrinkles. She was sitting in an arm chair, and her shoulders and head were bent forward.

Suddenly there were footsteps in the hallway outside. They seemed to be coming near. Our eyes met then for the first time with a shock that was almost physical. But the steps passed by and the room was quiet again. I got up from the settle and crossed the room to where the old lady sat. I felt as though I must speak, for the silence was growing unbearable. "I wish I could do something for you," I said in a mechanical manner.

"You're very kind, ma'am," she said, "but there's nothin' can be done at such a time."

Somewhere in the distance we heard a muffled scream. "That ain't him," she remarked. "He wouldn't make a noise like that even if they killed him."

"Your son," I asked. "Yes," she answered proudly, "my boy, Jim." "Appendicitis?" She nodded her head. "Jim ain't never been sick before in his life. He's always been well and strong."

"How old is he?" "Twenty-four the 10th of next month. He's an awful good boy, ma'am, and smart, too."

"Look-a-here, ma'am—" It was the old lady's voice that recalled me. "I never asked you who you was waitin' for. Who is it of yours?"

"My husband," I replied.

"Pendicite?"

"Yes. It came on suddenly while he was traveling."

"Is he as young as you be?"

"Just 26."

"You been married long?"

"Almost two years."

"Oh, well, you've lots of time ahead of ye yet," she observed maternally.

"Have you been here long?" I asked.

"Ever since 4 o'clock this afternoon," she replied. "Seven hours! Yes, and it seems like so many years."

Just then we heard the sound of footsteps in the corridor again. I clutched the edge of the settle and tried to prepare myself for the blow that might come. An instant later the door opened and the nurse stepped in. She went over to the old lady. "Mrs. Warren," she said quickly, "I have very bad news for you. Your son—"

"He's dead then?"

"It happened very suddenly. In a little while I will come back for you and take you to the room if you care to go."

I can remember each of those words as if it were yesterday. She turned away and hurried out of the room and we were left alone again—Jim's mother and I. She had crumpled over into her chair, and her face seemed for a moment to have lost all expression. I went to her and took one of her hands in both of mine and held it for a long time.

"He's dead, ma'am," she said, "my boy, my Jim."

"Can't I do anything for you?" I asked aimlessly. I thought I heard steps again in the distance, and my heart seemed to stand still.

"No, thank ye, ma'am," she replied in the tone of one long schooled to conceal her feelings. The door opened and the nurse came in again. She stepped up to me and said, "The critical time has passed and your husband is doing very well. If you will call at 4 o'clock to-morrow you may have a chance to see him for a moment." Then she turned to Jim's mother. "Shall we go up now?" she asked gently.

I sank into a chair, overcome by the message I had received. Nothing looked real that I saw about me. I seemed to be amid the painted details of a picture. I saw the old lady looking at me intently as if she wanted to speak to me again. Probably the nurse noticed it, too, for she stepped out and waited for her in the hall. Then Jim's mother came up to me and put her hand on my shoulder. "You didn't need him like I needed my boy," she said, in the same matter-of-fact tone, "but I s'pose things was to turn out that way." She started to go, hesitated, and then came back. "But I don't blame you, ma'am," she added, "and even if I do wish it could have been the other, that's only because I can't help it, ye see, bein' as I was Jim's mother."

Then Jim's mother came up to me and put her hand on my shoulder. "You didn't need him like I needed my boy," she said, in the same matter-of-fact tone, "but I s'pose things was to turn out that way." She started to go, hesitated, and then came back. "But I don't blame you, ma'am," she added, "and even if I do wish it could have been the other, that's only because I can't help it, ye see, bein' as I was Jim's mother."

I sank into a chair, overcome by the message I had received. Nothing looked real that I saw about me. I seemed to be amid the painted details of a picture. I saw the old lady looking at me intently as if she wanted to speak to me again. Probably the nurse noticed it, too, for she stepped out and waited for her in the hall. "The Blood Is The Life"

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has eliminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also affected, the mind and judgment are clouded, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. Pure, impure blood can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures and purifies the blood, thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives, and other manifestations of impure blood.

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by enclosing fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine of known composition, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

Telling a Horse's Age.
The age of a horse cannot always be told by looking at its teeth. After the eighth year the horse gets no more new teeth, so that this method is useless for a horse more than eight years old. As soon as the set of teeth is complete, however, a wrinkle begins to appear on the edge of the lower eyelid, and another wrinkle is added each year, so that to get the age of a horse more than eight years old you must count the teeth plus the wrinkles.

Do You Suppose Lacy Thoroughgood Is Going To Sell His Competitors Where He Buys His Goods?

Where do you buy your beautiful neckwear? Who makes your hats? Where do you get your shirts? Do you have all your clothing made to order that you sell? Are all your hosiery and underwear imported? Who makes of collars and cuffs do you handle? These are the questions that are asked of Thoroughgood every day. Now Lacy Thoroughgood will tell you. Why, Thoroughgood owns a necktie factory, two hat factories, a large shirt factory, a big clothing factory, a hosiery and underwear mill, and has lately bought out a collar and cuff factory. Do you suppose Lacy Thoroughgood is going to tell them anything about his business? It took twenty years of hard work to find the kind or hats, the kind of clothing, collars, cuffs, hosiery and underwear that Thoroughgood offers for sale in his two stores, and it took nearly twenty years to make enough money to buy and pay spot cash, which means 30 to 40 per cent saving for me and then for you. Now having shown you that Lacy Thoroughgood is able to sell goods cheap, he will now proceed to do so. Have you got $12.50 for a $15.00 suit? Have you got $1.50 for a $2.00 hat? Have you got anything to buy to wear? Do you know that Thoroughgood has two handsome stores in Salisbury? Say, just drop in for a suit, hat, shirt, collars, cuffs, suspenders, hosiery, underwear, neckwear, or anything to wear.

HOME GAS COMPANY

Home Gas Franchise. Their Provisions Satisfactory in Main. Directorate The Hitch.

Monday night of this week the City Hall was the scene of quite a large and interested gathering. Mr. Jas. H. Ellegood and Mr. Gray, of the Salisbury Gas Company who were present in the interest of their Company both made statements declaring they were willing to retire from the field provided they were assured of an equitable agreement with a new Company to take over the pipe already laid by Mr. Miller for them. The Home Gas Company, a newly incorporated concern through their attorney, E. Stanley Toadvin then asked for a franchise to erect a gas plant. The incorporation papers showed that a company had been formed with a capital stock of $50,000, composed of the following home people as incorporators and directors: William P. Jackson, Charles R. Disharoon, Wm. H. Jackson, Geo. W. Bell, B. Frank Kemmerly, John H. Tomlinson, Dr. J. McFadden Dick, D. J. Wheaton and M. V. Brewington. The franchise as presented had already been passed upon by City Attorney, L. A. Bennett, as to the legal parts, and in the main seems to meet the conditions required and carries a bond of $5000, which is forfeited by the company should they fail to comply with any of the conditions.

Mr. Wm. P. Jackson in an address to the Council made a very comprehensive statement of the purpose and aims of the Home Company which seemed to meet the approbation of everyone present. The only "hitch" which developed at the meeting was in regard to having members of the directorate of the newly formed Electric Light Co., admitted on the board of directors for the gas Company. This matter was discussed at some length and was finally left to the Council. But there is no doubt that the sense of a majority of those present and the people generally believe that it will be to the best interest of the public that very strict and decided measures be adopted which would effectively prohibit any "Community of interest" with these two public properties.

Proceedings along this line will be closely watched and should it develop that any manipulation of this kind has been attempted, those responsible will be held accountable.

In Spring-Time Many People Need a Good Tonic.

Mrs. R. Boyer Writes From 1421 Sherman Ave., Evanston, Ill., Concerning Pe-ru-na. Read Her Letter Below:

"If any one has reason to praise Peruna, it is surely myself.
"Last spring I became run down from the serious effects of lingering cold and several complications united in pulling me down.
"I could neither eat nor sleep well, and lost flesh and spirit.
"I finally tried Peruna and it did wonders for me.
"In two weeks I was like another person and in a month I felt better than I ever had before.
"I thank Peruna for new life and strength."

Aids Digestion, Promotes Sleep.

Mr. E. Arnold, Westbury, N. Y., writes: "I wish to say a good word for your valuable remedy, Peruna. I have taken many kinds of medicine during my life, but find that Peruna stands ahead of all. It aids digestion, promotes sleep, cleanses the system, strengthens the throat and vocal organs. I have used it for catarrh and to break up colds which is the best of all. It has cured a severe cold once which ended in pleurisy and left me weak, and every change of weather would bring a return of old pains. Peruna now vanquishes all pain. I cannot praise it enough. I tell all my friends that it is the best medicine used for the ill of life. If any word of mine will lead others to try it, you are at liberty to use my testimonial in any form."

Gave New Life and Force.

Mr. B. F. Sellers, 224 Olive street, St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"Any man in my profession often has

Pe-ru-na, a Standard Tonic the World Over.

From the bracing rigors of winter to the balmy warmth of spring-time is a climatic change that affects every one more or less. A great multitude of people, however, are so affected by the change as to require medical assistance.

If such people neglect to take a good tonic that will safely tide them over the trying weather of early spring, the system is weakened, the blood over loaded with effete materials of the winter season and the victim is rendered an easy prey to acute ailments.

It has been the universal experience of mankind that a spring tonic of some sort is necessary. All kinds of remedies, herbal and mineral, have been used. There is usually great uncertainty as to the operation of the average spring tonic.

Peruna, on the other hand, has been in use for so many years and in such a variety of climates and by such a multitude of people that its beneficial operation for spring ailments has become a practical certainty. Peruna can be relied upon as a spring tonic. It cleanses the blood by correcting the digestion, which is the source of good blood.

Mr. L. D. Townsend, suite 2, 3 and 4, Century Bldg., St. Joseph, Mich., writes: "I am grateful for what Peruna has done for my family.
"Six months ago my wife's health was very much run down, lacking vigor and suffering with pains in her head and back.
"A friend advised her to try Peruna, which she did with most satisfactory results. In a few weeks she was completely restored to her usual vigor, and is now happy, well and strong, thanks to Peruna.
"I have tried Peruna myself when tired and overworked and in every instance I have felt better within a day or two."

Headache and Backache.

Mrs. Nannie Hall, 12 Herbert street, Atlanta, Ga., writes:

"I write to tell you how much good your Peruna has done for me. I was so sick and nervous that I was almost dead. I could not eat nor sleep nor work any at all, but was in bed nearly all the time, and was almost a skeleton I was so poor. Now I can eat anything I want and it doesn't hurt me, and I can sleep all night long and get up and work all day. I don't have any nervous-

Mrs. Ella Malmgren, 77 Cleveland street, West Manchester, N. H., writes: "Every spring and fall, for eleven years, I have been troubled with catarrh in my throat and nose and hoarseness.
"I am pleased to state that at last I found a medicine, Peruna, from which I received great benefit, and I will hereafter use and recommend it.
"I always keep it in my house in case of sickness.
"I recommend your medicine to all my friends and every sufferer as an excellent medicine."

Catarrh of the Head.

Mr. O. Hallock, Antwerp, O., writes:

"My daughter Alice, after taking three bottles of your Peruna is entirely cured of catarrh of the head of two years standing. We have used Peruna as a general tonic, as well as for catarrh, and are well pleased with it and recommend it to anybody who has catarrh. Anybody willing any information can write to me."

Mr. C. A. Landgrave, Box 25, Coalburg, Ohio, Gives His Experience With Peruna. Read His Letter Below:

"I had been a slight sufferer for a number of years, but paid little attention to it until the spring of this year when my suffering became very severe.
"I had pain in the head, back, liver, chest and other parts of my body, besides indigestion which caused me much trouble.
"I tried medical aid, but to no purpose. I wrote to Dr. Hartman for advice, telling him of my various ailments and he informed me that I had systemic catarrh.
"After using the first bottle of Peruna, I felt relief. I continued to use it until I had taken four bottles, when I felt entirely cured. I recommend Peruna to others."

Doctors Called It Consumption.

Miss Ella L. Matthews, Box 111, Hill City, Tenn., writes:

"I find much pleasure in writing you to let you know that I have been taking your wonderful tonic, Peruna. From experience I have decided that there could be no greater medicine in the world than Peruna.

"Several physicians had pronounced my disease as consumption. I had been a sufferer for several years, and was growing weaker all the while, until I could hardly walk across my room.

"I was so fortunate as to get a Peruna book, and after reading it carefully I decided Peruna was the remedy for me, so I began taking it. To-day my health is better than it has been since I had the measles ten years ago. I cannot express half the praise which is due to Dr. Hartman for his great and wonderful remedy and his advice regarding health. I do not think I would be living this day had it not been for Peruna."

That isn't all you save either. You know people who have drank Arbuckles' ARIOSA all their lives. Look at them. They like it and they haven't had to quit drinking it.

Don't let any man sell you something instead, which may ruin your stomach and nerves.
