FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

From the Philadelphia Gazette, Dec. 27.

Arrived below the ship Charlotte, Captain, Capt. Connel, from Bordeaux. In addition to the following highly interesting letter, we have received French papers to the 1st of November; translations of which shall appear in our Gazette of to-morrow.

Ship Charlotte, Point of View, Dec. 20.

THE present will serve to inform you of my arrival from Bordeaux, which place I left on the 2d Nov. by special permission of his majesty the emperor, through the interference of our minister, for the purpose of bringing home the distressed families of our country, belonging to vessels condemned and sequestered; those in the latter situation, the council of prizes have sometimes since received orders to suspend the trials of—A general embargo continued on all neutrals throughout the ports of France. I have on board a number of passengers, one of which is bearer of dispatches from our ambassador at Paris to the American government.

I have herewith enclosed you a file of Bordeaux papers, but from which, believe few political truths may be gathered, according to the reports from Spain and elsewhere. Bordeaux and its vicinity was crowded with sick and wounded returning from Spain, and these troops were allowed no communication with the new reinforcements from the grand army marching that way. So unfavourable were the accounts they bring from the seat of war, it was currently reported and credited that the French had been defeated with great slaughter in a late action at Catalonia; that king Joseph maintained with great difficulty his position at Burgos and Vittoria.—The grand army was daily increasing by forced marches through Bordeaux, and about 50,000 had already passed that city, as many more by other routes.

In the bay of Biscay, I passed to leeward of a squadron of about fifty sail of men of war and transports steering towards Spain and Portugal, spoke none of them: but the next day, was boarded by a British sloop of war who treated us politely, and permitted us to proceed, without even overhauling the ship's papers, merely inquiring the news from France.

On the 23d of Oct. Napoleon delivered a speech to the legislative corps, in which he pledges himself to establish the new dynasty in Spain, and to plant his eagles on the forts of Lisbon.—In this speech he takes the following notice of the United States: "they have, says he, preferred abandoning the commerce of the ocean rather than submit to tyranny, &c."

On the same day the emperor had a grand levee, at which all the foreign ministers attended. Among the presentations we observe M. Le Chevalier de Santivanes, minister plenipotentiary to the United States from Joseph, king of Spain. This is the person erroneously stated to be ambassador from the Spanish Junta. Mr. Armstrong attended at the levee and presented to his majesty Mr. Poinsett, an American gentleman.

The emperor arrived at Bordeaux the morning of my departure, he remained there but three hours and continued his route towards Spain, his haste is said to be in consequence of meeting a courier from thence with unfavourable news. The French troops under Junot who capitulated in Portugal were daily arriving at Bordeaux and Roche-fort in English transports, and it was reported were marching into the interior of France, and not to be sent on the present campaign, for certain reasons. Previous to the separation of the emperors of France and Russia at Erfurt, each sent a courier with pacific propositions to the court of St. James's, (so says the official Gazette at Paris)—report said they were not received. Since this conference of their majesty's the rumour of war with Austria appears to have subsided.

Little may be said of the commercial state of affairs, as no change has taken place except a small depreciation in colonial produce, owing to a number of late arrivals of letters of marque.—Many others were fitting out in the different ports, which is believed would continue to reduce the markets; the absence of the American flag, for so long a time, has created a spirit of enterprise, and taught them to carry on a commerce independent of us, and they boastfully say, we shall no longer monopolize the trade of their colonies.

From the Aurora.

The Charleston Packet brings dispatches for government, which proceed this morning for Washington.

The French emperor passed through Bordeaux on the 1st of November, to command the grand army in Spain, as he signified in a speech which we have copied below.

Seventy-five vessels, bearing the American flag, had been carried into Charante, 71 of which were found to have forged papers, and to be British property; the greater number of these vessels were from Burgundy, with

ANN: OR, THE YEAR.

See spring, sweet autumn.—Hon.

JANUARY.
My face, the morning haze,
The stream from yonder hill;
The river red and busy,
As his flood the village mill.

FEBRUARY.
The looks fed and decay;
The daisy snow descends;
The red-breast chirps cherry,
The winter's tale attends.

MARCH.
The winds and rocks the cottage,
The roof and wets the path;
The cooks the farty potage,
The cake upon the hearth.

APRIL.
The intermits with ardour;
The fly swiftly o'er the fields;
The revive the drooping verdure,
The sunny upland yields.

MAY.
The beams the eye of morning;
The horn every hedge adorning,
The flowers—but spare the neth.

JUNE.
The boys in the brook disporting,
The sultry hour of play;
The nymphs and swains are courting,
The new made hay.

JULY.
The with each a guardian lover,
The vivid lightning flies,
The to the nearest cover,
The hands before their eyes.

AUGUST.
The reapers, gleaming, bring,
The on the busy grain;
The the gate the 'quize reclining,
The eyes each ruddy lair.

SEPTEMBER.
The a found like distant thunder,
The, may thy malice fail;
The from all thy love afunder,
The birds around us wait.

OCTOBER.
The Pomona pours her treasure,
The autumnal fire the ground;
The crowns the market measure,
The mill runs briskly round.

NOVEMBER.
The giddy rates of Comus
The hunter's dear delight;
The year is sitting from us,
The day and dear the night.

DECEMBER.
The more wood, and set the glasses;
The, my friends, our Christmas cheer;
The—a catch—and kiss the infant—
The Christmas comes but once a year.

EPIGRAM.

YS Splish to his cook, "you son of a punk,
It comes it I see you this every day drunk!
Gicians, they say, once a month do allow,
For his health, to get drunk—as a law,
That's right," quoth the cook, "but the day
They don't say,
For fear I should miss it, I'm drunk every Day."

MR. URBAN,
The following is copied from the original letter of Dr. Young to me, which is deposited among the papers belonging to the Society for promoting Natural History, of which I was then one of the four presidents. Dr. Young, when he gave me this written vocation, referred me by word of mouth, to lieut. gen. Robert Melville for farther information with respect to the person who was frozen stiff, and recovered after life was seemingly extinct; and I took the earliest opportunity to talk with the general on the subject. He remembered, he said, to have heard of the thing; but it did not concur with his own personal knowledge, though he always believed that the relation was true.

Yours, &c.

J. C.

April 10, 1786.

"While in North-America, I think it was about the year 1757 or 58, I came to the knowledge of a very odd phenomenon, which was not generally known to naturalists. The fact is as follows, viz: If fish are taken alive out from below the ice, in lakes or rivers, during an intense frost, and thrown upon the ice, or among the snow, so as to freeze immediately, although they are never again living in fresh water, yet they may be kept alive again, at winter only a short time, in which they will perform all their natural motions, and as perfectly as before they were frozen. The supposition is that they are not dead, but the functions of life are only suspended. And this is done by putting them into cold water. When I was told the fact, at Albany, originally a Dutch settlement, I was rather incredulous, and inquired among the Dutch people separately, and found they all agreed in the same story; after which I could no longer doubt of its truth. However, it was not long before I had ocular demonstration of it. Some of the Mohawk Indians brought some fish to Albany, to sell, that were caught in the Oneida lake (I think they were trout); the woman of the house where I was quartered bought a bunch of them, and hung them up in the inside of the chimney, the chimneys being very wide in that country, as they burn wood. By and bye I observed those fish that were next the fire began to move stiff, then those in the middle of the bunch, and those on the outside last of all. The Indians were 3 or 4 days on their journey before they arrived at Albany. The Dutch people say, you may keep fish frozen, and seemingly dead, not only days but even weeks; nay some have gone so far as to say months; and when you want to bring them alive, put them into cold water or into an air where it barely thaws; for if they are put into warm water, or brought into too hot an air, they will putrify. In North-America, where I was during the war before last, the soldiers very often got what they called frost bit; our method was, to prevent the bad consequences of it, to rub them over with snow, or to put the part into cold water, and bring the patient into a warm air by slow degrees. This is likewise practised in Russia and other Northern European countries. I have heard of a person who was frozen stiff that by the above treatment was recovered, after life was seemingly extinct. This I do not relate as having seen, but I have been long of opinion, that some of the people who perish annually in the snow in this country might be recovered again, if proper methods were taken for that purpose. The experiment, with respect to the fish, might be tried in this country during the severe frost. Let it be observed, that if any person has a mind to try it, the fish ought to be immediately frozen, either by laying it on the ice in the shade, or putting it into the snow; for if the air be temperate, and the fish absolutely dies before it freezes, the experiment will not succeed. I have been told by a gentleman from Switzerland, that it is a custom in that country, in carrying fish from one pond or lake to another, to put them into a tub of water, and when the water is all frozen, then they transport them in the greatest safety, without being beaten or bruised against one another, or against the side of the vessel.

Sir, I am your obedient humble servant,
(Signed) GEORGE YOUNG.
Read, April 11, 1786.
Addressed to the Rev. Dr. Calder.

The following article from the Post-Man, of December 22—24, 1784, is a proper addition on the subject:
"Whereas many people have been hurt in their limbs by excessive cold weather, especially in the country, some having lost their feet, &c. and that by ill management; for it is customary to get near the fire, and bathe in warm water, either of which may occasion a mortification of the parts:—Therefore this advertisement is given in charity to any who may be in danger of the like misfortune, which may be prevented by the following method, viz. When the feet, &c. are extremely numbed with cold, not to come near the fire, or bathe them in warm water, but bathe in cold water, rubbing the parts with snow, either of which will preserve them. This is spoken from experience, and may be depended upon; and, because poor people seldom converse with news-papers, it is desired that those who read this will make it known."

SELECTED.

ONE TO CHILDHOOD.

From Allen, Esquire, of Providence.

CHILDHOOD! how sweet is thy day,

How full thou art of pleasure and fair!

Thou art, whatever men say,

Thou art, but love and care.

Childhood! with often amuse

Thou art, no lesson can bring;

Thou art, who sports in the dew,

Thou art, all his lifetime a Spring.

Thou art, pretty misfortunes may frown

Thou art, on the head of the boy,

Thou art, that rolls gracefully down,

Thou art, by the smile of his joy.

Manhood! thou'lt wider thy range,

Thou art, for pleasure which fancy bestows,

Thou art, only obtain, in exchange,

Thou art, the heart-breaking perfume of woe.

Thou art, visions of transport, away!

Thou art, preference no more I can bear;

Thou art, when it pants for the day,

Thou art, all peeps thro' the bars of my care.

Thou art, ambition will rule,

Thou art, heart's tranquil moments devour;

Thou art, her rays round the head of the fool,

Thou art, give him the sceptre of power.

Thou art, his treasure pale Avarice walks,

Thou art, and anxiously guards it alone;

Thou art, flower enjoyment he baulks,

Thou art, all turns the warm heart to a stone.

Thou art, repent Love may bequeath

Thou art, duty's flow'rs, that enapture the eyes;

Thou art, thy love, youth, for beneath,

Thou art, the serpent of Jealousy lies.

Thou art, Friendship displays all her charms,

Thou art, and green-like, lulls thee to rest;

Thou art, still, in the grasp of her arms,

Thou art, her dagger is felt at the breast.

Thou art, a world is all sorrow and strife,

Thou art, and he, who should vainly presume

Thou art, remote from the troubles of life,

Thou art, shall seek his repose in the tomb.

Thou art, would I presumptuous complain?

Thou art, the Father of Mercy and love

Thou art, would'st us to sorrow and pain,

Thou art, not to wean us for blessings above.

EXTRACTS.

COMPATENCY.

THE desires of man increase with his attainments. Every man who reads this will be struck by the truth of the remark; he will recollect a point, which in prospect he considered a summit of his wishes; but that point reached, and he still looks farther, to some higher hill before him that is to bound his view. Where necessity, with luxury begins, we no longer are supplied with every thing that nature requires, than we sit down to contrive artificial wants and appetites; and, like the grave, will never say, "It is enough."

REMY.

WHEN an offer was made to Themistocles to teach him the art of memory, he answered that he would rather wish for the art of forgetfulness. In misery and distress it is no comfort to the mind to reflect on former days, when the contrast rising to the present brightens the sense of the present emendations, and renders them less tolerable. It will be more useful to shrink from recollection, and to look forward to prospects that brighten; for there is no state of distress in which he who holds the destiny of man, not elevate and restore him.
