Be Still And Know-

We must take time to be still. Have you ever grown weary with the rapid pace of civilization? Have you ever wondered why so much energy and time are spent assuming the role society demands of you? What moments are exclusively your own?

Somehow the concept of leisure time refers to recreation, sports, activities, sponsored by various organizations or en joyed in our respective social circles. No, I am speaking of moments totally devoid of social contact of any sort. Are we afraid to be alone? If so, it is possible we have never considered that a retreat from worldly obligations, pleasures, etc., is necessary to the health of body and mind and spirit

First, allow me to say that I am no advocate of solitary confinement nor of cloisters, however noble the purpose. I do not feel that man was created to set himself apart from worldly influences, but rather to discover his purpose in effecting a better world and in rising above those influences that threaten to obstruct or weaken him

A brief retreat into solitude through which one is able to "Excommunicate" temporarily the responsibilities of daily life and to re-examine his philosophy and the effect of his life upon others is not the means through which we escape life, but rathe the way in which we are restored, physically, and spiritually, to meet the greater complexities of life

Only when we are willing to become still at certain inter vals, do we experience the calm and reassurance needed to resume our individual roles in this active life. Strength comes to us in quiet moments when we pause to consider the delicate freshness of a flower or listen to a chorus of buds.

To be still is to rediscover ourselves in a more joyous acceptance of our duties and aspirations. Once again we see life in its true perspective and feel ourselves capable of meeting the challenge required of us.

Did You Know That-

A 1955 Gallup Poll showed that $\mathbf{6 1}$ percent of American adults had not read any book but the Bible the previous year

Another survey showed that half the nation's adults live within a mile of a library, but only one fifth of them make use of libraries.

Apparently not more than 5 percent of our country's high schools now employ systematic programs to encourage superior students.

About a $11 / 2$ percent increase in the operating budget is required to run an adequate gifted child program in an average high school.

About one out of four students who enter college drops out by the end of the first year, a study just completed by the U. S. Office of Education reveals. The number of students who stop their education the first year is about equal to the total who drop out during the following three years combined.

About six out of ten who enter college graduate. More than one-fifth of those who drop out were in the top 20 percent of their high school graduating class.

Although 42 percent of the male freshmen in technological institutes are graduated, only 29 percent of the men in teachers colleges complete the four-year program

Everything was going along fin until I turned around. Then, with out warning, 1 saw it! A mon-strous-looking object with four gangly legs stood there gazing at me, unflinchingly. What was it do ing out there on our lovely cam pus?

Fair Or Foul

By Bill Fair
A new season has arrived, but an old, old Nemesis-more dreadful and unappealing than the winter that just passedstill prevails.

That Nemesis has been the perennial enemy of this college as far as establishing wimning sports records in varsity athletics are concerned.

Back in the October 2 issue of State-To-Date, I predicted a winning year for State in basketball, soccer, baseball, and track. I made that forecast with the assumption that the capable ath I made that forecast with the assumption that the capable athletes enrolled in the college would be giving their efforts for letes enrolled team success.

However, as in years past, that deplorable situation of apathy, non-interest, and "I don't care" attitude still hangs over' State's varsity squads.

Without any hesitation whatsoever, I will now say that the source of the school "spirit" problem-athletically speakinglies within the so-styled "athletes." This is no name-calling column, nor is it a slander column. For that reason names will be withheld. At any rate, let their conscience be their guides.

Enrolled in this college are numerous men who could supply that needed punch to lift the sagging school spirit and ging
Frostburg varsity teams of which the students could boast.

It is true that many of this type are married men, hold jobs, and can't afford the necessary time. But, on the other hand, there are also some who face no such problems, and who have the ability, and who could furnish that proverbial "punch." The latter group apparently don't care.

How can a college have school spirit if some of its members, who could kindle that spirit, sit back and watch one effort after another end in failure?

Let's cite examples of what I mean. The appropriate place to begin is with soccer. As most of you know, a soccer team consists of eleven players. State carried about fourteen or fifteen men on the roster last season. Those of this number that did participate turned in fine performances, but what happened to those who could have played and never gave that idea a second thought? With only fifteen men, there is not much wonder that the soccer squad had a sub-par season.

Basketball is next. State did fare well in the cage sport and the season for success can be attributed to a handful of players. When the season started, the gymnasium was full of hopeful men making their bids for the squad. All that remained at the end of the season were varsity members and several others. Hair of the time enough players were not available for a scrimmage game.

It's too early to tell about baseball, as the first indications point to noticeable improvement. However, if the occasion arose, I could name numerous other students who are capable of adding lustre to the baseball team simply by their participation.

The track team is no exception. There are several men on campus who know that talent and proficiency are needed in track and field events. Surely, they don't have the interest of the team or college at heart.

A challenge is thrown out to them and they back down, refusing to accept it. It could be stubbornness, deflated egos, that don't care attitude, or other reasons.

It is too late now for drastic changes. But in the future I suggest an attack from this angle rather than harping upon the entire student body in the "school spirit" problem.

Falcons Cop Thinclads' Opener;

 Dual Meet Set Today At BeallThe debut of the Frostburg thinclads, although marred by on the Fairmont track, was not completely without promise.

The Bobcats, with a ten man squad, of which only two were returning lettermen, suffered from short-handedness. The highlights of the day were Gene Wiltison's 880 -yard run in the school record time of 2:07.2, and the college debut of Howie Gilpin, who scored two decisive wins in the 220 and 440 yard
