JACKSON FOR CONGRESS.

Eastern Shore Republican Leader
Again the Nominee of His Party —Nomination Accepted in A Strong Speech.

Hon. William H. Jackson, of this city, was nominated for the Sixtieth Congress of the United States by the Republican Congressional Convention, of the First District of Maryland, held in the parlors of the Atlantic Hotel at Ocean City last Wednesday.

The Convention, which was one of the most enthusiastic held in recent years, was called to order by Mr. Adial P. Barnes, Chairman of the Worcester County State Central Committee and Mr. Phillips Lee Goldsborough was made the temporary presiding officer and Mr. A. Lincoln Dryden, of Somerset, was made secretary.

Upon taking the chair, Mr. Goldsborough declared in ringing tones that the watchword of the coming campaign would be "Vindication," and the intense enthusiasm at once shown by the delegates proved conclusively that he had struck a popular chord. Upon the conclusion of his remarks, Committees on Credentials and Resolutions were named and at once retired for the purpose of formulating their report. The Committee on Credentials reported no contests, that all the delegates present were entitled to seats and recommended that the temporary officers be made permanent which was accordingly done. The Committee on Resolutions which was composed of Messrs. Joseph I. France, of Cecil, George E. Lane, of Queen Anne's, F. A. Wall, of Kent, Albert G. Towers, of Caroline, Reuben Gee, of Talbot, Thomas E. Kerr, of Dorchester, William M. Day, of Wicomico, John B. Robbins, of Somerset and George E. Scott, of Worcester, submitted the following resolutions, which were adopted unanimously:

The Resolutions.

We heartily indorse the administration of Theodore Roosevelt, believing that his policies, supported and made effective through the efforts of Republican statesmen, have given the American people unparalleled prosperity.

We pledge our unwavering support to the great Republican policy of protection, recognizing that our unprecedented prosperity has been made possible only through the tireless energy of a Republican Congress, and that if the business interests require changes in the tariff schedules a Republican President and Congress can alone be relied upon to make such changes. Experience has taught the American people that Democratic tariff tinkering has always resulted in disaster and has been a prolific breeder of panics.

The people of Maryland are to be congratulated upon the overwhelming defeat of the "Poe Amendment," thereby emphasizing the desire of all good citizens for the enactment of an election law which will guarantee to every man entitled to vote the right to have that vote honestly counted. We condemn any system which fails to give to the citizens of this State the simplest method possible of voting, consistent with the secrecy and purity of the ballot.

We demand the renomination of Hon. William H. Jackson as a vindication of the rights of the people so shamefully tampered with at the last election.

We believe that the Hon. W. H. Jackson was elected to a seat in the Fifty-ninth Congress, but through trick ballots and every contemptible device known to designing politicians he was defrauded thereof.

The highest recommendation of the Hon. W. H. Jackson to the voters of this district is his well known friendship for the laboring man and his uniform willingness and ability to advance and promote the best interests of his constituents.

We appeal to the voters of the First Congressional district to uphold the policies and aims of the present Administration by the election of Hon. William H. Jackson as a contribution to a Republican Congressional majority, which shall be in sympathy and accord with that Administration, and which shall enable that Administration to bring to a successful issue the policies already inaugurated.

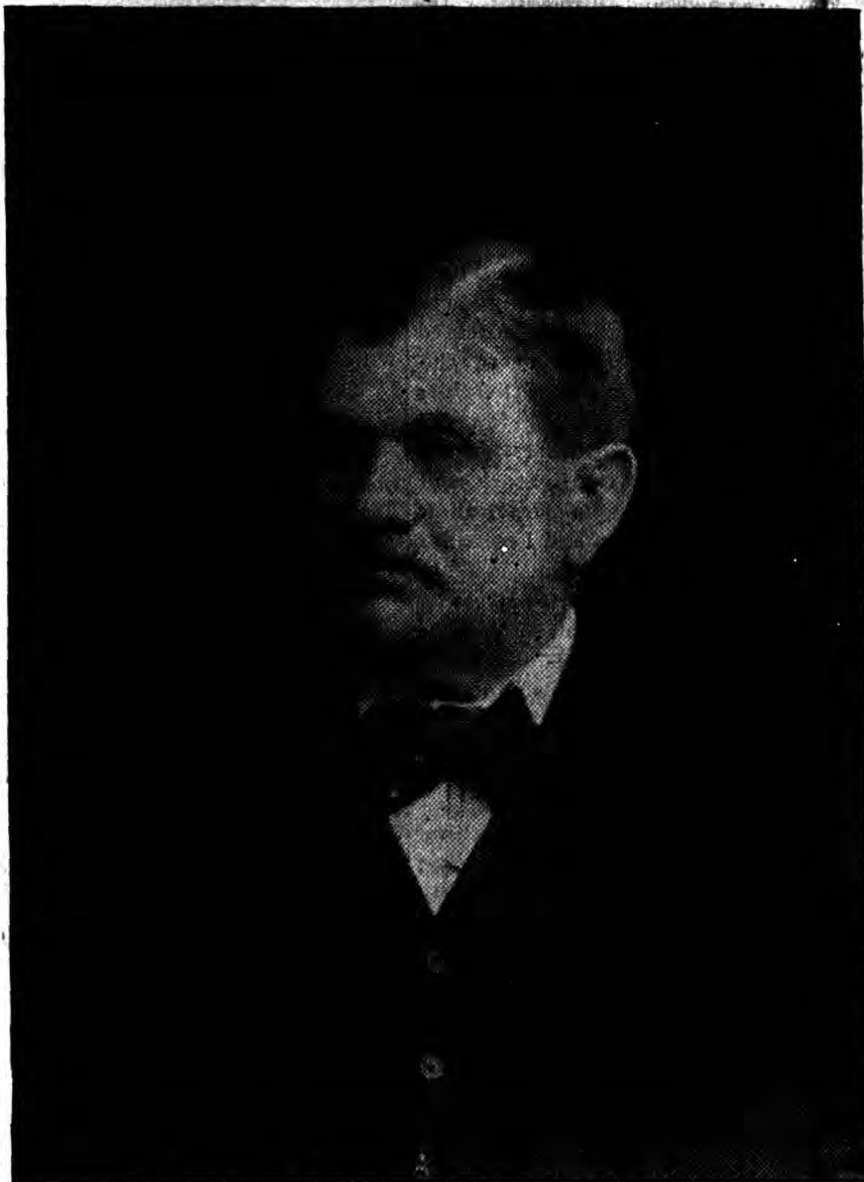

Mr. Jackson Nominated.

Nominations were then declared in order for Congress and as the counties were called, each yielded to Wicomico, and as Mr. Jackson's home county was called, Mr. Elmer H. Walton took the platform and placed him in nomination in a speech which was liberally applauded throughout. Upon the conclusion of Mr. Walton's speech, which is published in full on the second page of this issue, the nomination was seconded by Senator Henry M. McCullough, of Cecil, and by Mr. Dryden, of Somerset, in ringing speeches, and at the latter's suggestion the convention nominated Mr. Jackson by acclamation and by a rising vote.

Having completed its work, the chairman was authorized to name a notification committee, and announced the following: Wilbur F. Ellison, of Kent; Josiah Kerr, of Dorchester; A. G. Towers, of Caroline; W. C. Orrell, of Queen Anne; R. Robert Walker, of Talbot; W. B. Miller, of Wicomico; Dr. S. S. Quinn, of Worcester; A. R. Crockett, of Somerset; and Dr. Joseph R. France, of Cecil.

After electing Ex-Senator Henry M. McCullough a member of the board of appeals and providing or filling the vacancy in case of the death for resignation of the candidate, the convention adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

Shortly after the convention, Mr. Jackson was waited upon in his room at the Atlantic

HON. WILLIAM H. JACKSON.
Re-nominated for Congress Wednesday at Ocean City by the First Congressional Republican Convention.

Notification And Acceptance.

It is not without decided reluctance that I have finally determined to accept the nomination for the Sixtieth Congress of the United States, which has been tendered to me by the convention which you represent.

In the election two years ago it was generally believed that I was elected, but the open and notorious frauds perpetrated in a number of precincts throughout the district and the unfair working of the Wilson Ballot Law combined to have my opponent returned elected on the face of the returns. Under these circumstances, and in view of his renomination by the Democratic party, and backed by the numerous requests from all parts of the district and the compliment of a unanimous nomination today, I feel that as a vindication of my party and myself, I cannot refuse to accept the nomination tendered me. Indeed, under the peculiar circumstances attending the matter, it seems that simple justice to the Republican party and to myself demands that I again be the standard-bearer, and it would be cowardly to permit my personal inclinations to influence my action and refuse the nomination which has been tendered me.

I am deeply sensible of the high honor that has been paid me by a unanimous nomination for the fourth consecutive time for this high office, and I can assure you, and through you, the people of the First Congressional district of Maryland, that I thoroughly appreciate it, and, if elected, I will give the most faithful, zealous and conscientious service in the discharge of my official duties of which I am capable. During my two terms in Congress, I tried to represent fairly and honestly the entire people of the district, with the thought ever before me that I was responsible to those who had placed me in official position, and in the thousand and one duties pertaining to the office, I tried to act for the best interests of the people, irrespective of party.

So far as my policies are concerned, I am a Republican, and, if elected, I will support the policies and principles of that party.

In conclusion, I accept this nomination at the hands of the convention which you represent, with the assurance of my deep appreciation of the honor which has been conferred upon me, and if I am elected, I will enter upon the discharge of the duties devolving upon me with an eye single to the best interests and welfare of the people of this district.

Want Railroad Across Main Street.

A petition asking for permission to run a spur track across Main street near the Pivot Bridge between the office of the W. B. Tighman Company and the store of the Turner Brothers Company was presented to the City Council Monday night by Messrs. Glen Perdue and William B. Tighman, Jr. A paper giving the sanction of its signers to the proposition was also filed. It is understood that quite a little opposition to the proposed track has arisen and that a number of those who have signed the paper have regretted their action. The Council held the matter under consideration, meanwhile it is stated that a number of citizens will appear before the Council Monday and make objection to the granting of such a franchise. The paper presented is as follows:

"We, the undersigned, express our willingness for the City Council to allow the B. C. & A. R. Co. to continue a spur track, to be placed along the river front, necessarily having to cross Main street near Pivot bridge: "W. A. Staton, William J. Downing, J. E. Bounds, D. A. SPEECH OF ELMER H. WALTON.

Address Delivered At Ocean City On Wednesday Re-Nominating Hon. Wm. H. Jackson For Congress.

For the fourth consecutive time in the history of Wisconsin, the representatives of that county are present today for the purpose of presenting the name of one, who on two former occasions has been elected to represent the First Congressional District of Maryland in the Congress of the United States, and but for an iniquitous ballot law, would today be a member of the Fifty-Ninth Congress. It is with pleasure, therefore, that Wisconsin is again for the purpose of presenting the name of her favorite son for this nomination with the belief that not only will he be duly nominated, but that he will be triumphantly elected as the representative from this district in the election this fall.

With two exceptions, he is the first Republican who has been elected to Congress from the Eastern Shore since the war. In one of those exceptions, the Republican was elected in that overwhelming tidal wave when President McKinley swept the country, and in the other instance he was elected on the same ticket with the man we are about to nominate to day, in 1900, to fill out the unexpired term of a Democratic Ex Governor of this State who was in Congress just long enough to straddle the gold question, and who slipped out of the chamber just in time to evade a vote on one of the most important bills which has come before Congress in the last half a century.

During those terms to which I have referred he worked and toiled for the district, with the fact ever conscientiously before him that he was responsible to the entire people of the district, and in all his official acts he showed that he had the welfare of the people of his district constantly and continually before him, and the interminable net work of rural routes all over this district today attest his loyal service in behalf of the people. No representative in Congress ever more fully and absolutely held inviolate at all times the interest of all his constituents, no matter who they were, than the representative of the First Congressional District of Maryland in the two Congresses referred to, and just at a time when he was beginning to be familiar with the Congressional duties devolving upon him; just at a time when he was beginning to be more decided to use the people of this district; just at a time when his influence was beginning to be more keenly felt in the various departments of the National Government; just at this inopportune time, the nefarious Wilson Ballot Law enacted by a Democratic General Assembly of Maryland, and signed by a Democratic Governor of that State, intervened to thwart the will of the people, and keep out of the Fifty-Ninth Congress one whose fidelity to conscientious and faithful service in the Fifty-Seventh and Fifty-Eighth Congresses of the United States had won for him the respect and esteem of the people of his district. That he was just as fairly and squarely elected in the fall of 1904, as he was in 1900 and 1902, is the earnest and conscientious belief of a large portion of thoughtful people of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, and all who are familiar with the workings of the present election law, sympathetic with that view so far as the election of 1904 is concerned. If there is any basic principle well recognized and strictly adhered under our present form of government, it is the one that we shall choose our own rulers and representatives in the various official stations of life, regardless of technical laws and nefarious trick ballot schemes, and it is a recognized and universally conceded fact that the election in this district that year was not a fair one and the result did not represent the will of the people of the district.

His record in the Fifty-Seventh and Fifty-Eighth Congresses is before us, and while there are others who have made, and can make a more brilliant showing on the floor of the house from a spectacular standpoint, still what was needed and what has given him his standing and hold upon the people are his earnest, conscientious efforts in behalf of the people who elected him, and in behalf of all who believe in the maintenance of the fundamental, underlying principles of our government at all hazards. His election this fall by a decisive majority will be the vindication demanded by his friends, and the undeniable proof of the fact that the people demand his return to Washington and the overwhelming proof as well that a free and intelligent people will not tolerate the perpetration of a fraud upon the ballot box, that fountain head of the American governmental system. From all over the district has come the universal demand from the leaders of cordial and hearty co-operations throughout the length and breadth of the district. So far as he is personally concerned it is with decided reluctance that he has permitted his name to go before this convention, and it is only because of the abiding conviction that it is the desire of the leaders and the wish of his numerous friends throughout the First Congressional District of Maryland that he accept the nomination, and as a matter of vindication, that he has finally consented to yield his own inclinations to the demands of a united party.

But having once yielded, once having given his assent, he will enter this campaign with all the earnestness and zeal of which he is capable, with the determination that the District will be redeemed; that the Eastern Shore of Maryland will again be found in the Republican column, and that a sweeping victory will attend the united efforts of a determined party this fall.

So far as his life is concerned, it is an open book. He was born on a poor Wisconsin farm, and spent the early years of his life in the delving toil and work and struggle that formed the bedrock foundation of his later splendid and magnificent career. His rise from poverty to wealth was no accident nor was it a chance turn in the wheel of fortune, but was the legitimate and necessary and logical result of the indefatigable toil and ceaseless struggle that marked the early years of his life. In his peculiarly successful career he has dealt with giants in the business and commercial world and not with pigmies, and his unusual prosperity has been due to those indomitable traits of character, will power and strength, which he has combined in a wonderful manner to bring about uniformly successful results, and his achievements have been due to the untiring efforts of heart and mind which have been his foremost and most decided characteristics. And then, when affluence came and friends multiplied, and he found himself in a different atmosphere, he did not forget the friends of his childhood days nor the men by whose side he had struggled in the uphill fight of his early life. No friend ever turned to him in the blinding darkness of poverty and want, of distress or trouble, and had turned to him a deaf ear to an honest plea. There isn't a truer, stronger, sturdier friend that ever breathed than he, and it is singularly true that the right hand has never known the extent of the doings of the left. Beneath his rougher exterior there is a rugged honesty and a whole souled big heartedness that fairly dominates and saturates the man.

During the two terms he was in Congress some of the greatest schemes of national import were carried to a successful termination, and throughout he supported by vote and earnest effort and influence the schemes and policies that are now making this one of the greatest nations on the face of the earth. This country is now and will be for years among the leading nations of the world and the edicts of this country can make the very heroes of Europe tremble, and monarchs fear and start. There is at present a demand that those who represent the people in the halls of Congress and in high official station shall measure up to the highest possible standard of efficiency and usefulness. Not that they shall merely be polished speakers and finished orators, but that they shall have some conception of the requirements of the country and the necessary policies to properly meet those demands and carry them to a successful termination, and that they shall understand the nature of our government, and are willing to use their votes and influence for the perpetration of those policies which have brought this country into the foremost ranks of the powers of the world. What is needed today in the legislative and executive departments of our government is a thorough business training and the exercise of the same common sense and business ability which is made use of every day by the successful men of affairs in this country.

A man who can build up the mammoth business this man has during his life is needed in the Congress of the United States, and if he could weave into that body the same business ability, tact and enterprise he has shown in his own, there would soon be a marked improvement and sharp contrast shown in the business workings of that body.

You have heard the story of Robert Bruce, the Norman Knight and Scotland's King, who won fame for himself and honor for his race upon the bloody field of Bannockburn. In the sunset of life, bowed with years and weighted with responsibilities, he remembered the vow of his youth to be buried in holy ground at Jerusalem. Calling around him a few of his faithful knights and retainers, they started forth upon their last pilgrimage toward Jerusalem. But, weakened by years, the old king died upon the journey. His last request to his followers was that his heart should be buried by the side of the Sepulchre at Jerusalem. His companions opened the dead king's breast and took therefrom his heart, and placing it upon a golden casket, continued their journey toward Jerusalem. Upon the sands of the desert, they were suddenly overtaken by a vast throng of Saracens. As the heathen flaunted their banners in the faces of the Christians, they made ready for their last and final charge. As they rallied their broken ranks, around the tottering standard of their dead king, the oldest knight among them held the golden casket high above his head and flung it far out into the ranks of the enemy and shouted, 'Sons of Scotland, follow the heart of Bruce,' and thus the killed chivalry of Scotland followed the heart of Bruce to the death.

Let those, my friends, turn back who may let us, today, the representatives of the Republican Party—magnificent in leadership, glorious in the superb record of the past and confident in the matchless destiny before her, go forward in this contest with an abiding conviction that right will prevail, and that election frauds and those who perpetrate and uphold them will be buried under the indignant votes of an outraged people.

We believe that victory is already assured. The hand-writing is on the wall, and with a united party and a determined and vigilant effort, success must be ours, and we will swing this old First District of Maryland, this "Gibraltar of Democracy," if you please—into the Republican column this fall just as assuredly and as certainly as the sun will rise and set on the 6th of next November.

I take pleasure in nominating for the Sixtieth Congress of the United States, the Honorable William H. Jackson, of Wisconsin.

Boiler Explodes And Injures Many.
The boiler in the canning factory of Noah Webster, at Secretary, Dorchester county, exploded with terrific force at 10 o'clock Thursday morning and a number of employees were badly scalded and otherwise injured. Telephone messages were received at 10 o'clock asking that every available physician at the hospital be sent to the scene of the accident, and a number of members of the staff left on a launch at once.

The boiler was of the old upright class and had been giving trouble since Tuesday. When the explosion occurred the boiler went straight up through the roof and came down 200 feet away, falling on the kitchen of Winle Webster and demolishing it.

THE NEW 1000-MILE TICKET.

On Sale At Pennsylvania Railroad Offices And Affords A Most Accommodating Form Of Travel.

The general Passenger Department of the Pennsylvania Railroad has supplied the ticket offices of the System with full stocks of the Mileage Books, recently adopted and they will be sold to travellers on and after September 1. These books contain coupons entitling the holder to travel one thousand miles over any of the lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad System east of Pittsburgh, Erie and Buffalo, inclusive, and the Cumberland Valley Railroad, and are sold at a flat rate of $30. They are valid for use for one year from date of purchase as stamped on the cover. The introduction of this ticket supplies every demand which could exist for a ticket, unhampered by conditions and unrestricted as to personal use, and gives to the frequent traveler over the Pennsylvania System the benefit of a two-cent a mile rate.

The advantages of the ticket are obvious and manifold. It may be purchased with the same ease as a card ticket or any other ticket not requiring signature or witness. The name of the holder does not appear upon it and it is good for the transportation of any one who presents it, and as many others accompanying him as the mileage limit will include. Any member of a firm or an employee, any official or employee of a corporation, any member of a family or a guest may use the ticket just as if any one of these persons had been the original purchaser. As a matter of fact, the holder of the ticket enjoys all of its privileges to the fullest extent of its transportation value. The ticket will be accepted for transportation on any part of the Pennsylvania Railroad System east of Pittsburgh, including the Cumberland Valley Railroad, for distances exceeding two miles, except in certain specified portions of the territory within the city limits of the larger terminals. It is valid for passage on all passenger trains, including the limited trains, when accompanied by the necessary extra fare and Pullman charges, with the one exception of the Pennsylvania Special, the eighteen-hour train between New York and Chicago, on which no reduced rate ticket of any kind is valid. The popular features of the new ticket commend it to the consideration of those who travel often. Anyone may buy it, anyone may use it; no identification of the holder is required and the price is the flat rate of two cents per mile.

—Horses on the farms near Vienna, Dorchester county, are dying rapidly of a disease known as "blind staggers," or some similar ailment which manifests itself by the horses' tongues and heads swelling, and which often results fatally in a very few hours. That the malady is not necessarily due to the excessively wet weather that has for some time prevailed here is shown by the fact that in the fall of 1897, when there was a drought, a good many horses died in this county from the same or similar disease.

A Citizen of Salisbury Supplies The Information.

Over half the complaints of mankind originate with the kidneys. A slight touch of backache at first. Twinges and shooting pains in the loins follow. The long looked for result seems unattainable. If you suffer, do you want relief? Follow the plan adopted by this Salisbury citizen.

CAMP LIFE FOR CLERKS.

Method of Spending Vacations Urged By Chicago Employer—Says Summer Resorts Ruin Men.

In the final week of summer vacations for Chicago workers a local manufacturer and employer proposes to introduce an innovation in the matter of vacation granting, says the Chicago News. He plans to induce his young men clerks to "pass up" the summer hotel during their fortnight of pleasure and to devote themselves to roughing it in camp life. He declares that the "sporty" life at the typical resort unfits men for strenuous work when they return and that outdoor living and vigorous exercise would have an opposite effect.

"The regulation summer hotel or resort 'cottage' life is ruinous to young men," was the statement recently made by the man whose huge chimneys strain the spirit of the smoke ordinance. "My young men clerks, as likely a bunch of chaps as can be gathered anywhere, are addicted to the annual habit. They return to work at the end of their two weeks with an indifference to the firm's welfare that jostles my nerves."

"The cogs in the office machine that ran faultlessly through the winter and spring suddenly become in need of oil in the shape of harsh call downs. Letter files get out of whack, card index systems go wrong, and the complaint desk man gets lines under his eyes. The blame I place on the summer hotel system."

"As a matter of saving dollars and cents I contemplate starting a sort of miniature summer resort bureau through which I hope to encourage my young men to get out into the wilderness just as I do. I'd like to see them hacking kindling for a campfire and tramping with heavy packs through regions which the foot of the steam roller never has penetrated. As a matter of inducement I may hold out half rate railway fares and loans from my personal stock of fishing tackle and camp equipment."

"Over at the factory the men, with few exceptions, pass their vacations in this way. Some of them attend the encampments of the local national guard regiments, as does one of my office men. In their term of soldiering they get a week's vacation at practically no cost, and the discipline and exercise are valuable to both them and me. But the office men, as a rule, flock to the dancing pavilions, the summer hotel porches. I'm going to wean them away from it."

"When the young fellows return from the usual sort of vacation they imagine this latest time of their lives has done them good. The oriental complexion from finger tips to elbow and forehead to necktie line they take to be an indication of a section hand state of health, but they overlook the plainly apparent loss of useful weight. Lots of times they show up blinking and gasping Monday morning after a wild Sunday night ride on a lake boat which adds the finishing touch to a fortnight of sleeplessness, idleness and hilarity. Then they try to sleep it off during working hours. Even if they have the will to work they can't get back into shape for days."

"It's not only the physical but the moral effect of these 'Willie boy' vacations against which I file a protest. A young fellow of steady going nature often loses this quality after contact with the flighty, over-dressed youths whose fathers are paying their board bills. I never allowed my son to start that way. That artificial, 'near country' life is one of the few places where the gladdish kiddus shines, and the working youth is apt to be awed by his clothes, his chatter, his extravagant habits and his attraction for the summer girl. He's a mighty poor model to set up before a young man with his future in his own hands."

"If the chap on vacation succeeds in equaling his model, he meets another evil in female adulation. Hero worship by the women and girls at summer resorts is a settled state of affairs. Two weeks of that sort of thing ought to make even the most level headed young fellow useless for honest labor."

"Yes; I have placed high hopes on the results of my experiment in shipping the boys to the deep woods, far from girlish giggles and necktie safety pins."

Lighting the New York Terminal. The Nerst Lamp company of Pittsburgh has closed the largest single contract for illumination ever made. It is for the New York terminal station of the Pennsylvania railroad. It calls for lamps in number equaling 1,000,000 candlepower. The Nerst lamp differs radically from either the arc or incandescent electric light, but its chief characteristic is that it more nearly resembles sunlight than any other artificial light known. It is the invention of Dr. Walter Nerst of Gottingen, Germany.

Students Must Be Swimmers. When Amherst recently dedicated its $50,000 Pratt natatorium, it adopted a rule that all students must qualify in swimming, says the New York American. Amherst is the first college to do this, and it is expected that her example will move other institutions to follow. An investigation recently made discloses that no more than one-fourth of the students in colleges can swim.

CANES FOR FAIR SEX.

Several New York Women Adopt The Fashion Of Carrying Sticks —The Reason.

In a jewelry store in Columbus avenue, New York, this advertisement is shown in display type, half a foot long: "Ladies' canes, 50 cents to $15."

"Do many women carry them?" repeated the dealer when questioned about the fad by a reporter of the New York Sun. "Yes, a good many. The fashion has not taken such a hold upon the women here as was expected, but a few New York women who wish to be thought strictly up to date are beginning to adopt it. The cane habit is generally considered a British importation."

"I don't believe that it originated in vanity or a desire for notoriety. To my mind it is the outcome of a principle of human nature. It is impossible to experience a more distressing, one sided feeling than to go along the street with nothing in the hands."

"There are many times when one doesn't want to carry an umbrella, the folly of carrying a pocketbook in the hand on all occasions has frequently been pointed out, a newspaper becomes soiled and shabby, while neither a letter nor a handkerchief gives a feeling of security as though properly balanced. And right there the utility of the cane becomes apparent, for what else is so appropriate?"

The Harvest Maids. [Four society girls of Wallawalla, Wash., are helping their father harvest his wheat.—Press Dispatch.]

You can talk about your bridge whist girls. And those who love pink teas. Or the girls who drive their motor boats Right through the foaming seas. But give to me the western maids. Pure grit from head to foot. Who say forth in summer time To help dad harvest wheat.

Oh, the girls of Wallawalla! Who wouldn't follow, follow. When they don the jeans and jumpers and start out to work, bigosh! The boys flock from the city To view these girls so pretty When they wallow in the wimpling wheat at Wallawalla, Wash.

They cannot drive the horses straight. And they fear to swing the scythes. But they look well in the scenery. And they carol songlets blithe. They're advertised from east to west. And they've every chance to wed. For o'er such pretty harvest maids Mere man will lose his head.

Oh, the girls of Wallawalla. Their hearts are hollow, hollow. If they do not wed some fellow who is too loveless to josh! The fence is lined with suitors—All enthusiastic rooters For each goddess of the harvest fields at Wallawalla, Wash. —Denver Republican.

Blowing the Nose.

Medical experts are calling the attention of the public to the importance of performing the nose blowing operation in a scientific and hygienic manner. First one nostril and then the other should be blown without undue violence. Doctors state that the two nasal passages should never be closed at the same time. If they are obstructed, as in the case of a cold, the back of the throat is filled with compressed air, and this, together with the discharge and the microbes which it contains, may be driven through the eustachian tube into the middle ear and lead to serious results. A great authority on the subject used to forbid his patients to blow their noses when suffering from a cold. The course is hardly one which will commend itself to those in the habit of catching colds. The best advice would seem to be that when it is necessary to blow the nose the blowing should be done gently.—London Mail.

Too Lively.

He was a solemn Scotchman, with an equally solemn and somewhat downtrodden wife. The fact that they were receiving an excellent price for their "second pair front" from an American lodger did not blind them to her failings.

"Dear me, Mr. Macleod," said the lodger, one Sunday afternoon, when an errand took her to the parlor, where the family sat, "I should think you and your wife would be stiff sitting indoors this hot day with the windows shut. If you'd just open one and get some fresh air, I'm sure it would do Mrs. Macleod good; she looks pale."

Mr. Macleod looked at her with his usual stern and unbending gaze. "We can have fresh air any day," he said calmly. "We've no need to have it rushing about the house on the Sabbath."

Two Epitaphs.

An epitaph from a cemetery in Bridgeton, Me.: She was—words are too feeble to tell what. Think what a wife should be: She was all that.

This from Bar Harbor, Me.: I reach my arms out fondly. But they clasp the open air. There is nothing of my darling But the shoes he used to wear.

The Good and Beautiful.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 1, 1906.

Republican Ticket.

For 60th Congress of the United States:
HON. WILLIAM H. JACKSON,
of Wicomico County

William H. Jackson.

The fourth consecutive nomination of Hon. William H. Jackson for a seat in the Congress of the United States by the Republicans of the First Congressional District of Maryland, was a deserved tribute to the innate character of the man, as well as an endorsement of his record in the Fifty-seventh and Fifty-eighth Congresses of which he was a member. While the action of the convention which was held at Ocean City last Wednesday has been foreshadowed for some time, still there has been considerable speculation as to whether or not Mr. Jackson would accept the nomination, but his strong speech of acceptance to the Committee of Notification, delivered immediately after the convention, finally set at rest all questions along this line. Indeed, under the circumstances, Mr. Jackson felt that he could not afford to take any other course and the fact that he has subordinated his own inclinations and personal wishes to the request of his party, can but raise him in the estimation of the people, regardless of politics, throughout the District. It is a well known fact that from a purely personal standpoint, Mr. Jackson did not desire to enter another campaign, but in view of the uncertainty surrounding the last election and the subsequent contest which is still pending before one of the Committees of the House, Mr. Jackson felt that simple justice demanded that he accept the offered place, and bear the burden of another Congressional fight.

The Republicans of the First Congressional District are singularly fortunate in having a man of Mr. Jackson's breadth of character and business qualifications upon whom they can rely, and the fact that he has again consented to lead the party has given him a stronger hold upon his followers in the District, and added prestige throughout the State.

He has shown that he is no "quitter" but is ready and willing to answer the emphatic call of his party, even though some one else may today be occupying the seat in the Fifty Ninth Congress, to which, in the opinion of a large number of people, he is justly entitled. But for the exceptionally unfair working of the Wilson Ballot Law, and the frauds perpetrated in a number of precincts in the District, it is generally believed that he would have been elected by a decisive majority two years ago, and the vindication of his own rights and the rights of those who cast their ballots for him two years ago is demanded throughout the District.

So far as Mr. Jackson is personally concerned, he needs no encomium from our pen and no words of laudation at our hands. His life and record speak for themselves and are his highest recommendations and the weightiest considerations in his favor. From an humble beginning on an obscure farm, he has risen to his commanding position in this community by a remarkable exercise of indomitable energy and business judgment, and throughout his life he has maintained a uniformly successful career. He has been thrown in contact with some of the greatest financiers of this country in recent years in connection with the mammoth business he has built up, and never once has he lost that self possession, that keen appreciation of the needs of the occasion, and that complete mastery of the situation which has enabled him to successfully cope with every emergency.

That there is a constant and growing demand in the Congress of the United States for men of such business ability and training as Mr. Jackson has shown throughout his life, is a universal conceded fact. The business of the House of Representatives is carried on,—not amid the spectacular scenes on the floor of the House, under the limelight of an entertained public, but behind the closed doors of the Committee Rooms where the proposed measures and policies of the country are quietly and dispassionately discussed from a purely business standpoint. It is here that in a remarkable manner, business training and sound judgment can make itself felt, and it is here that the real business of the legislative branches of our government is carried on.

The Improved Telephone Service

The exceptionally prompt manner in which the Diamond State Telephone Company has taken up the question of complaints by reason of the recent exposures of the unsatisfactory service, in this city, is highly gratifying to the numerous patrons of this exchange, and the Company is to be congratulated upon once more showing in a critical moment that they were interested in the welfare of the people of this community.

The arrival of Mr. W. Branch Wainwright, the District Manager, in Salisbury during the past week, has somewhat clarified the recent telephonic disturbances, and his decidedly business like manner in investigating the trouble in the present service has given the people added confidence in the ability and willingness of the general officials of the company to improve the service. The circular which Mr. Wainwright immediately sent to all the patrons of this office shows conclusively that he is going to do everything in his power to obtain the very best possible results, and he should have the earnest and active cooperation of every subscriber of this exchange. Do not fail to let him know the troubles you have had, and are having! It is absolutely impossible to expect him to rectify difficulties of which he is totally ignorant. He is here for the purpose of personally investigating the difficulties which have recently been encountered by the patrons here.

Now is the time to make your objection, and let your troubles be known! Do not wait until he is gone and then complain about the service. Now is the time to act while the company is willing and the people are anxious!

Editorial Jottings.

THE "American rainy season" continues, and the umbrella has developed into a daily necessity.

call during the week. Brother Williams is the editor of the Cecil Whig, one of the bright, new papers of the State, and we are always glad to have our friends of the "quill" drop into our sanctum.

Pat Crowe, notorious as a child abductor, now makes the announcement he has turned over a few new leaves and is going in to the newspaper business. If Crowe shows one-half of the enterprise and indomitable pluck in his new venture that he exhibited in eluding the police, the success of his undertaking is a foregone conclusion.

THE MAYOR AND COUNCIL should look carefully into the matter of the proposed railroad crossing at the foot of Main street before taking official action. While we believe that the manufacturing and large business interests of our town should have every possible consideration, still the crossing just at the point contemplated would be an exceptionally dangerous one and would have a decided tendency to congest traffic at an extremely busy point.

THROUGH the courtesy of the Maryland Commission to the World's Fair at St. Louis, we are in receipt of a most excellent work entitled "Maryland at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition." It is splendidly written, contains a large number of half-tones, and is filled with exceptionally valuable information concerning the State and its products. It will prove a valuable addition to our library and we thoroughly appreciate the courtesy extended.

THE moonlight excursion to Ocean City next Tuesday, under the auspices of the Board of Lady Managers of the Peninsula General Hospital, is in the interest of a most excellent cause and should be liberally patronized. This Board, which has charge of the furnishing of linen, night robes and other articles of this character, has, we are informed, nothing to do with the general fund of the institution, but is dependent entirely upon its own resources. In view of this fact, there should be the largest possible cooperation on the part of the public. Don't forget the date, and by your presence help the ladies to have the biggest excursion of the year.

SALISBURY.

A town so full of city airs
And ways of enterprise.
The country visitor just stares
Around him with surprise.

—Bentztown Bard in the Baltimore Sun.

We imagine that the poetic fancy of the Bentztown Bard would receive an awful shock, and the welcome "visitor" would "stare around him" in holy horror as well as mute surprise, if they could behold the streets of Salisbury in their present deplorable condition. Public health demands that something be done, and at least, it seems, the mud and slime might be scrapped off the principal streets, if nothing further could be accomplished. This could be done with an ordinary road scraper such as we now have, at very small expense, and would very decidedly relieve the situation until the authorities could begin the actual work of paving.

THE COUNTY CONVENTION.

Enthusiastic Meeting Held Tuesday in Court House To Elect Delegates To Ocean City.

The Wicomico County Republican Convention was held Tuesday at 12 o'clock in the Court House of this city, and, after passing appropriate resolutions, a monster delegation of 45 members was elected to represent this county at the Congressional Convention, which was held at Ocean City Wednesday.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. John H. Tomlinson, member of the State Central Committee, and Capt. L. A. Parsons was chosen chairman. Mr. William B. Tilghman, Jr., was elected secretary. The committee on credentials was dispensed with, and the following were named as the committee on resolutions: Messrs. Peter A. Graham, A. L. Wingate, E. H. Riley, W. J. White, J. W. Kelley, Otho Bounds, Nehemiah Fooks, Henry D. Spence, T. Asbury Melson, James S. Chatham and Peter S. Richardson. One member from each district was chosen for this committee, but because of the inclement weather, some of the border districts did not send delegates and were not represented on this committee. The resolutions adopted were as follows:

The Republican Party of Wicomico County and State of Maryland, in convention assembled, does hereby reaffirm its allegiance to the policies and declarations announced in National Platform of 1904 and the State Platform of 1903.

We hereby endorse the splendidly patriotic and peculiarly progressive administration of President Roosevelt, and declare that his fearlessness in the discharge of the duties of his high position has given this country a new impetus in the business world and added prestige abroad.

We desire to hereby enter our emphatic endorsement of the course of the Honorable William H. Jackson in the Fifty-Seventh and Fifty-Eighth Congresses of the United States, and favor his nomination for the Sixtieth Congress by the Ocean City Convention of the First Congressional District. But for an iniquitous ballot law placed on the statute books by the Democratic Party and glaring and notorious frauds perpetrated under it, we believe that he would today have been a member of the Fifty-Ninth Congress, and his nomination and election this fall is the vindication demanded by his friends throughout the entire District. His conscientious fidelity to the people of this District during his career in Congress was such as to command the respect and esteem of the entire people, and we believe that his return to public life is demanded by the business interests throughout the district.

During the session of the committee on resolutions, Mr. Walter B. Miller, upon invitation, addressed the convention. As always, Mr. Miller received the most careful consideration of his hearers and was rewarded with a round of applause at the close of his remarks.

When it came time to elect the delegates to the Ocean City Convention it was first thought to send the ordinary delegation of 16 members, but later it was decided that each district could name as many delegates as it chose, and as a consequence, 45 delegates were elected to swell the number of guests at the Jackson love feast the following day. The delegation named was as follows:

Barren Creek—Dr. John L. Elderlice, W. S. Walker, Thomas W. English.
Quantico—W. F. Disharoon, J. O. Wilson.
Tyaskin—W. A. Connelly, Frank Langrall, A. L. Wingate.

Pittsburg—John E. Jackson, Joseph L. Truitt, Dr. Lemuel H. Collins.

Parsons—L. A. Parsons, William M. Day, E. S. Atkins, W. J. White, F. A. Grier, John P. Owens, John H. Tomlinson, Frank Johnson.

Trappe—H. J. Bounds, W. W. Chatham, W. A. White.

Nutters—J. H. Hayman, O. F. Layfield, Salisbury—Elmer H. Walton, A. J. Benjamin, B. S. Pusey, Henry D. Spence, W. B. Miller.

Sharpstown—W. H. Knowles, W. D. Gravenor, O. M. Bennett.

Delmar—B. W. Parker, D. H. Foskey.

Nanticoke—E. S. S. Turner, Thomas J. Walter, Frank Travers.

Camden—W. B. Tilghman, Jr., James A. Bradley, M. A. Humphreys.

Willard—Ernest F. Mitchell, Curtis F. Dennis, Lorah Richardson.

Just before the adjournment, the delegates and their friends were invited to dinner at the Peninsula Hotel by Postmaster M. A. Humphreys.

County Primaries Held Saturday.

Republican primaries were held Saturday in all the districts of Wicomico county and delegates were elected to the County Convention, which met in Salisbury Tuesday. There were no contests, and everything points to a successful campaign this fall. The following were the delegates elected to the County Convention from each district:

No. 1, Barren Creek—L. A. Wilson, Thomas J. English and Peter Graham.

No. 2, Quantico—Ira Disharoon, B. H. Pusey and James O. Wilson.

No. 3, Tyaskin—Charles H. Larnore, Samuel J. Conway, A. L. Wingate, F. A. Insley, W. A. Conway and B. W. H. S. Lunkford.

No. 4, Pittsburg—E. H. Riley, Jonathan Parker and Ernest Brittingham.

No. 5, Parsons—William J. White, J. H. Tomlinson, W. B. McConkey, L. A. Parsons, C. E. Booth and Augustus Roberts.

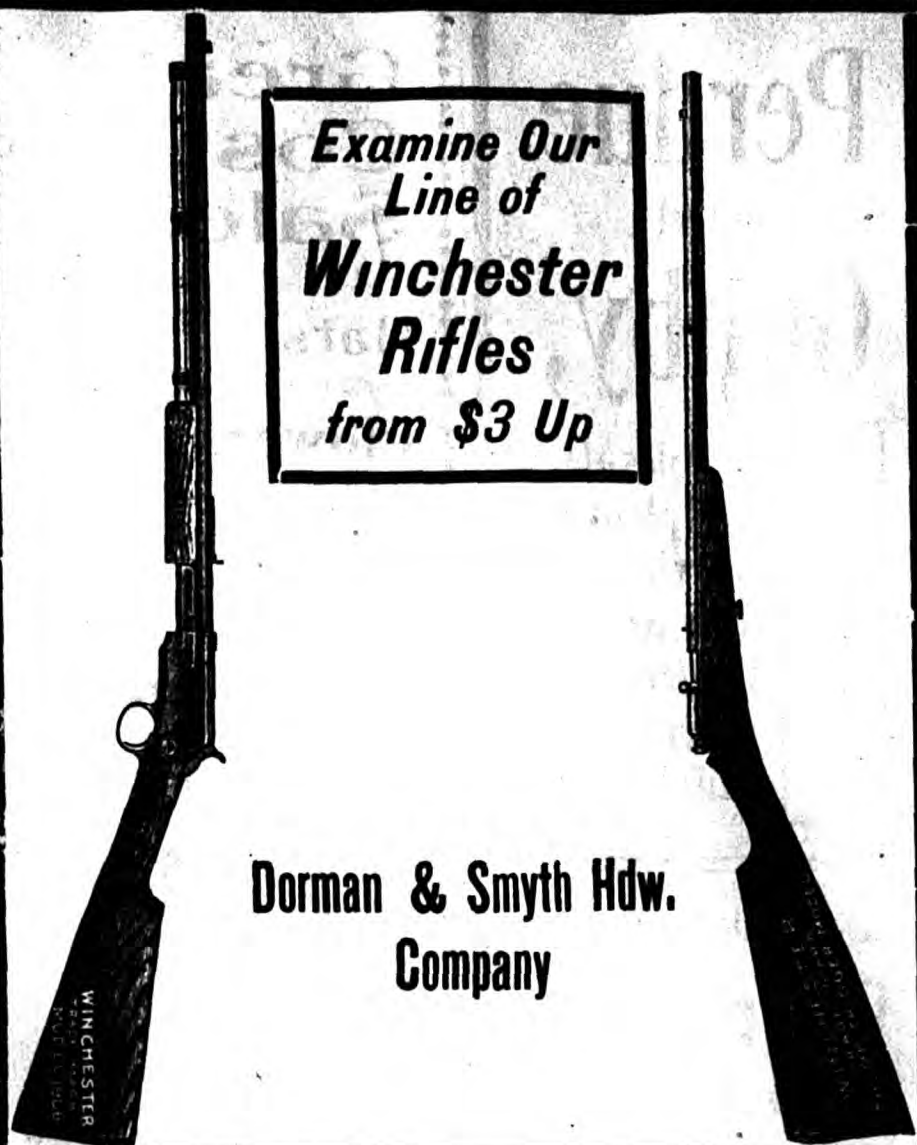

The following proxies were submitted to the convention: John P. Owens for W. H. McConkey, F. A. Grier for Charles E. Booth, Frank Johnson for Augustus Roberts.

Manager Uman will have his electric fans in operation and everyone will keep cool and pleasant. Prices for the occasion will be 25, 35 and 50 cents. Seats are now on sale at the box office.

—Workmen of the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad Company are busily engaged erecting safety gates at the East Church street crossing and also at the Division Street crossing in South Salisbury. There are four gates at each crossing, two on each side, each one of which is fifteen feet in length, and they are expected to be in operation in a day or two.

—The great Bryan reception was held in New York this week. A number of Marylanders participated. The welcome given to Mr. Bryan was such as has never been accorded to an American citizen on his return from a trip abroad. Just at this time this magnetic orator is the idol and is sitting plump on the throne of the Democratic party, but it is hard to predict what changes may take place in the coming two years.

—Augustus and Herman Gullett, two white boys of Tyaskin District, were brought to Salisbury Monday by Constable Denson and placed in jail to await the action of the September Grand Jury on the charge of criminal assault upon two colored girls. The Epworth League services will be resumed tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock.

—"The Lights of Gotham," a play of New York life, was presented in Uman's Opera House last night to a fair sized audience. This play has been before the public for four years and always wins the approval of its hearers. The management of the theatre has provided four large electric fans, and with their use a steady stream of cool air flowed through the building and everyone was comfortable.

—About 300 teachers of Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset counties are at Ocean City attending the two week's session of the Tri-County Institute. The badges of the teachers show the counties represented, red ribbon being used for Somerset, white for Wicomico and blue for Worcester. The superintendent for Somerset, William H. DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Miss Ethel B. Campbell Dies Suddenly of Heart Trouble While Attending Teachers' Institute At Ocean City.

Miss Ethel B. Campbell, of Pittsville, died suddenly at Ocean City Tuesday of heart trouble in one of Rayne's bath-houses, just as she was preparing to take a shower bath. Miss Campbell and Miss Myra Bennett of Mardela Springs, had just returned from the ocean when the fatal attack occurred. Dr. Baggett was hastily sent for, but the unfortunate girl died in a few minutes after his arrival.

The news travelled quickly and caused great distress among the teachers. Superintendent Bounds, McMaster and Dashiell decided, out of respect to Miss Campbell, who was in attendance upon the Tri-County Institute, to dispense with the afternoon session, and later appropriate resolutions were passed upon her death.

Miss Campbell was the one of the youngest teachers at Ocean City, being only 19 years of age. She was the daughter of Mr. Covington Campbell of Pittsville and had recently been appointed by Superintendent H. Crawford Bounds instructed at Johnson's School in this county.

The remains were taken to her home in Pittsville on Thursday, accompanied by an escort of teachers from the Institute, and the funeral took place that afternoon from the Methodist Episcopal Church, which was entirely too small to accommodate the throng. Rev. Frank E. Faulkner, pastor of the church officiated, assisted by Rev. George A. Morris, pastor of the Pittsville Methodist Protestant Church. The pallbearers were Messrs. Thomas Truitt, John Melson, Lloyd Dennis, Lloyd Melson, William Brittingham and Lehman Tingle. Interment was in the Pittsville Methodist Protestant Cemetery.

Miss Alice Phillips.

Miss Alice Phillips, daughter of Mr. J. Asbury Phillips, died Thursday night about 10 o'clock of Bright's disease. Miss Phillips, who was 42 years of age, is survived by a father, one brother, Mr. Alfred Phillips, of Philadelphia, and two sisters, Mrs. Frank Scheller and Miss Annie Phillips.

Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Wicomico Presbyterian Church by Rev. S. W. Reigart and Rev. Frank E. Williams, of Elkton. The pallbearers will be Mr. Somers Gunby and the following uncles: Messrs. Lemuel Phillips, Jacob Phillips, George W. Phillips, Edwin Parsons and Elijah Parsons. Interment will be at Parsons Cemetery.

Mrs. Elijah P. Carey.

Mrs. Elijah P. Carey, 38 years old, died early Monday morning at her home near town, of heart and liver trouble. She is survived by the following brothers and sister: Alfred P., William J., Theodore F. and Elijah Tordvine, of Nutters district, and Mrs. D. C. Holloway, of Salisbury. Her husband and the following children also remain: Ralph, Oscar and Ethel Carey.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at the home by Rev. W. S. Phillips, pastor of the Salisbury Methodist Protestant church, of which the deceased was a member, and music was rendered by Mrs. Margaret P. Trussell, Mrs. James Lank, Miss Edna Adkins, and Mr. Arley Carey. The pallbearers were three of the brothers of Mrs. Carey and Messrs. Stephen McGrath, Elijah McGrath and Arley W. Carey. Interment was at Parsons Cemetery. Messrs. D. C. Holloway & Co. were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Zadok K. Evans.

Mrs. Zadok K. Evans, about 27 years old, died Thursday night about 9 o'clock at the Peninsula General Hospital, of this city, of typhoid fever. Mrs. Evans who was the daughter of ex-County Commissioner James H. Farlow, was taken sick at her home on East Church street, and was subsequently removed to the hospital. The deceased is survived by a husband and one child.

The funeral services will be held this afternoon at 1 o'clock at the home on East Church street. Rev. W. S. Phillips, pastor of the Salisbury Methodist Protestant Church, of which denomination Mrs. Evans was a member, will preach the sermon. Interment will be made in Parsons Cemetery. Mr. George C. Hill will have charge of the funeral.

—Rev. Robert C. Granberry, who has returned from his vacation, will preach Sunday morning and evening in the Division Street Baptist Church.

On the Turn of a Hair

By GRACE MACGOWAN COOKE

Copyright, 1906, by Ruby Douglas

"Suffering Moses! Hochaska, it's heads I win, tails you lose, playin' poker with you these days. I rung in five jacks on you that hand an' you never turned a hair. What's up?"

The cowboy pushed back and regarded his silent companion quizzically.

The Indian glanced over his shoulder, laid a fine, slender hand upon the table and, leaning forward, whispered: "Burnt Bear runs his spotted pony in the races next week."

The cowboy nodded, stooping to tighten a spur leather.

"Keep your long green, pard," he said, with bent head. "I was just a-foolin' them last three games. Well? The old chief runs his spotted pony in the races—and the gal is up here turnin' Hochaska's heart to water—is that the how of it?"

Again the Indian looked over his shoulder before he nodded.

"He has her up at the agency," he burst out fiercely. "You know Mallock! It was Mallock before. What chance has a decent Indian girl as pretty as Ally with a father like she's got—and that beast around?"

"Hochaska," began the cowboy, "you're a fool—hold on! Don't you get gay, now! They whooped you off to the effete east and pumped good learnin' into you till you've got books whipped to a standstill and you can doctor a sick horse to beat any man between the Pecos and the Mississippi—but common sense you're short on."

"The reason's plain 'nough, pardner. The old man's out after the coin. You've got to bid up. You're sure a good looker and you're a plumb gentleman. Hochaska—jest the son-in-law I'd make a grab at if I was a Sioux chief with a pretty daughter to marry off."

"I have offered him all I have—and a mortgage on my future. Nothing will do."

"Somebody else is biddin' higher," reiterated the cowboy. "Or he thinks they will."

"Ally would come to me," said the Indian desperately. "It is not as it was before. Mallock's wife was living then. He may hold out hopes of a marriage to Burnt Bear."

The cowboy was up and ready to depart now. "If that there spotted pony should go lame, Chaska," he remarked, "they hain't a man but you that could doctor it—and the race comin' on next week. If such should happen I reckon you could name my price."

An eager fire leaped into the Indian's somber eyes. "I could," he answered. "But no such thing will happen. Burnt Bear sleeps with the pony's stake rope to his wrist."

"Don't you be too sure," remonstrated the cowboy. "I've got money up on that cayuse, an' I'm mighty uneasy that he's about to get some sort o' complaint in his right hind foot. The old man knows I'm bettin' heavy on his hawsedesh an' him an' me is great pals—we're thicker'n thieves. So long, Chaska."

He stepped to the front of the blacksmith shop, swung into the saddle and disappeared.

All day long the young Indian served his customers and attended to his usual duties with an air of preoccupation. He guessed what simple trick his cow puncher friend had in mind. If the game went through successfully, would the father pay the price?

Crowds were gathering for next week's races and business was brisk, for this scientific blacksmith and veterinarian of their own race who had learned his trade among the white men was a prime favorite.

The forge fire had died down to a smoldering red eye and the young blacksmith sat half asleep before his door when a stealthy sound from the steep slope behind his cabin roused him. It differed not at all from a hundred other small night sounds which had preceded it, yet he was suddenly broad awake and listening. It came again. He sprang to his feet. Once more—and he was walking rapidly toward the precipitous path which led up to his spring.

Within ten paces of the bushes which concealed it he halted. Out of those bushes soundlessly moved the shadowy form of a man leading a pony.

"How do?" said the newcomer, and Hochaska recognized the voice of Burnt Bear.

In the tongue which was common to them both the old chief stated, with the frankness of despair, that the spotted pony had gone suddenly lame.

"I have watched him as though he were my child," he declared. "And now tonight I find his right hind foot is lame. Have you a quick cure? I care not if in the end it kills the pony, so that he be not lame when the race is run, for if he does not win this race I, Burnt Bear, must walk back to our people stripped and destitute."

The young smith drew up and folded his arms. He saw that something melodramatic was expected of him. He was to play the big medicine man. If Billy had only done his part and not overdone it and this lameness were not actual he could carry out the trick.

"I have," he said. "I have a bottle of medicine so strong and valuable that I have never used it upon the ponies of these common Indians nor even on the horses of the white men. Whatever lamed your spotted pony, this medicine will cure him. But I must have my price."

"Cure first, pay after," said the old Indian sententiously.

The lover gathered courage from the fact that the price itself was not mentioned. He held out his hand for the bottle, and Burnt Bear permitted him to lead the pony down to the forge fire.

It well suited the young blacksmith to halt in the darkness, run to the shop for a harmless bottle of volatile oils which would smell loud and look well. Then, stooping, he took the slim pastern in his hands. The foot was hot and throbbing. Those deft digits, warned where to seek, cleverly interrogated the hair about the smallest portion of the joint. Ah, it was there! He snapped it. The relieved pony put down a grateful nose toward his shoulder. Then with skilled movements Hochaska rubbed and kneaded the member to hasten the impeded circulation.

For an hour he worked thus; the dramatic values must be preserved. Occasionally he walked the pony about, and its owner could see the lameness decreasing. At the end of that time he straightened up and said:

"Burnt Bear, your horse is sound. Shall I name my price?"

The old man grunted, felt the foot, saw that the fever was all out of it, then, taking the bridle rein into his hand, led the pony back and forth till he was certain there was no limping in that gait. "It is magic indeed!" he declared, with proud generosity, then turned, peered over his shoulder into the darkness of the trail and lifted his hand sharply.

From where she had stood an hour or more, motionless as the stems of the young birch trees about her, there slipped silently forward and approached him a slim, light footed Indian girl. Impassively he motioned toward Hochaska, and she fled to her lover.

But following her, so that one might almost have thought it her shadow, the form of a man entered the circle of light.

"This is the way you keep your bargains, you old renegade, is it?" Mallock snarled, pointing to where the lovers stood hand in hand.

"I make a new bargain," returned Burnt Bear imperturbably. "I make any bargain when my pony goes lame."

Mallock's loosely hanging hands clinched themselves into fists. Rage seemed to overpower caution. "Nine Spot lame? Who lamed him?" Looking about and receiving no answer, he went on in a louder, more confident tone: "Who lamed Nine Spot?" he inquired hotly. "I'm here to prove that Hochaska slipped in and lamed the beast to get even with you about Ally, and now you give him your daughter to cure it. Burnt Bear, you're nine sorts of a fool!"

It is not courteous or even safe to tell a Sioux chief that he is as much as one sort of plain, unqualified fool. Burnt Bear started for Mallock, and the Englishman began to explain how he had seen Hochaska tying a horse-hair around Nine Spot's pastern to produce the lameness.

Burnt Bear halted uncertainly. It was apparent that he had been tricked by some one, and when he felt sure of the culprit there would be a reckoning.

Matters hung thus in the balance for a moment. Hochaska tightened his arm about the girl and decided to assume the responsibility of anything Billy had done, but to keep Altamaha now he had her.

"Hold on, hold on, my noble red man!" cried a cheerful voice, and a rider galloped up to the smithy.

"It's all right to eat Mallock, Burnt Bear," the cowboy explained as he leaped from saddle, "but you want to know just what you're eatin' 'im for."

The Englishman drew back. "Don't go," urged Billy, laying a restraining hand upon his arm. "We can't spare you."

He turned to the three Indians, who stood regarding the white man curiously.

"Burnt Bear," he began, "you know what I've bet on Nine Spot. I've been watchin' that cayuse most as close as you have, Tonight, before you got around to him, I was up on the knob where he grazes. You thought it was light enough so you could see the hawse from where you was down at the camp—settlin' by the door of your wicky-up. But there was a great big snake in the grass that you couldn't see, worming itself along to Nine Spot's heels, and I thinks to myself, 'Does the feller want to have his brains kicked out?' Then as I watches 'im he nooses up a long, stout hawse-hair, so fast, and slips it about the pony's hock."

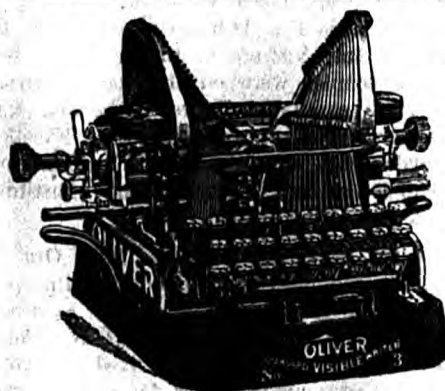

"Let go of me," growled Mallock under his breath.

"An' that there snake in the grass warn't Hochaska," explained Billy genially. He suppressed the further information that there was a rubber band in his own pocket prepared to do a like service at the time he discovered Mallock playing the trick ahead of him.

"Here's your pony lamer, Burnt Bear—take him." And with a sudden unexpected jerk the cowboy flung Mallock almost into Burnt Bear's arms.

"Bless you, my children," he concluded, turning to Hochaska and the girl. "I'll skip down to Casey's and take some good bets on the pony. Mallock has done spread the news that Nine Spot's gone dead lame, and we stand to make good money if it don't get out too soon 'that Hochaska has cured him."

She was an unusually bright girl, and her death was a sad stroke upon the bereaved parents.

Typhoid Fever Epidemic.

This town is threatened with an epidemic of typhoid fever. At first it was very mild, but it has assumed a malignant form and as a result three deaths occurred last week. There are now about 20 cases. The town is in fair sanitary condition and there are few open wells in town, the water supply coming almost entirely from driven pumps, and the people are at a loss to find a cause. Dr. C. R. Truitt, of Salisbury, county health officer, was here Monday and made a thorough canvass of the town.

Amy W. Ellis.

Mrs. Amy W. Ellis died at Sharptown on Saturday last of typhoid fever, at the age of twenty-three years. She was sick several weeks, but not seriously until a few days before her death. She was the oldest child of the late Captain William G. Ellis and leaves a mother, Mrs. Julia R. Ellis, two sisters, Lillian and Bessie, and one brother, Ernest.

Her remains are interred on Sunday afternoon, in the Methodist Protestant Cemetery, after funeral services in the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which she was a member for several years. She was a Sunday School teacher for quite a while. The services were conducted by Rev. A. W. Matther, of Leesons, Va., and Rev. J. H. Wilson, her pastor. Rev. One of the best games of ball this season was played on our grounds Saturday between Mt. Vernon's old nine and White Haven. Ten innings were necessary to decide the game, the score being 1 to 0 in favor of Mt. Vernon. The White Haven boys want to know what is the trouble with Hebron and Delmar? They each owe games.

The young ladies of White Haven entertained in honor of Misses Rebecca and Ella McLain Tuesday evening. Those present were: Misses R. Gladys Wingate, Jetty and Daisy Robertson, Ellen Windsor, Minnie Robertson, Clara and Madge Culver, Edith Ross, Hattie Dashiell, Annie and Jennie White, Polly Denon, Messrs. Rufus Jones, Ogle Bloodworth, William Catlin, Jr., Willie Larmore, Jr., Frank Thrift, Paul Bloodworth and William White, all of White Haven. One of the most delightful events of the season was a party given this week by Mrs. Will Robertson in honor of her niece, Miss Mary Larmore, of Dover, Del. Poor School Facilities.

On the account of the poor school service at this place quite a number of the young folks will be forced to leave here in order to finish their education. White Haveners are entitled to a graded school, which has been promised only to be ignored. It is strange that the school board manifests such little interest here. They seem to have no care for the children's success. Other places with less children than here have graded schools. Besides, the present school room is in a deplorable condition. There is not a black board in the building, the benches are in bad shape and, in fact, the whole thing is simply a wreck and unsafe for children during heavy winds. The following will attend school at the different places: Miss R. Gladys Wingate, St. Mary's Seminary, at St. Mary's City; Misses Rebecca and Ella McLain, Baltimore; Mr. William Larmore, Jr., Ogle Bloodworth and Pollie Denon, Eastern Shore College, Salisbury; Miss Clara Culver and Rufus Jones, Washington, D. C. For the benefit of the remaining ones it is to be sincerely hoped that another year will have a better building, also a graded school. We will have nearly seventy scholars after the ones above leaving, and our school room is inadequate and one teacher is not sufficient to properly attend to this number.

Maryland too Warm for Him.

John H. Hastings, otherwise known as John Teny, was before Justice Williams this week on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. The charge was preferred by Mrs. Lida Niblet, who keeps a boarding house on what is known as German's Brick row, where Teny "spent most of his time and usually made trouble when around." After the Bailiff had landed his prisoner at the office of the Justice, he returned to the house to summon two other witnesses. Before he returned, however, Teny complained of being too warm, and went outside to air himself. When last seen he was airing himself down Elizabeth street as fast as his legs would carry him, and did not finish airing until he landed himself on the Delaware side of the line. Sentence, therefore, was deferred.

Cooper. The footway, if built, will make the bridge about five or six feet wider and will leave its present limits for the exclusive use of horses and vehicles. Messrs. Eliza Parsons, W. A. Dennis and J. R. Farlow were appointed a commission on a tax ditch in Pittsburgh district, known as "Beaver Hole Ditch."

PETITION FOR TRACK REFUSED.

Council Monday Night Decides Not To Grant Privilege Of Crossing Main Street With Railroad Switch.

The City Council Monday night refused to grant the petition of Mr. Glen. Perdue and others to allow a spur track from the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway to be run across the lower part of Main street just East of the Pivot bridge and between the office of the W.B. Tilghman Company and the store of Turner Brothers.

A number of gentlemen were present both in favor, and against the proposition, and the arguments at times were strong and vigorous. Among those for the proposition were Messrs. Walter B. Miller, Winfield Windsor, William Mitchell and George W. Bell. They pointed out the danger to persons and vehicles passing along this section of the city and mentioned in particular the peril of women and children passing to and from California.

The counsel for the petitioners, Mr. Joseph L. Bailey, and Mr. Perdue spoke in favor of the granting of the franchise. Mr. Perdue said that the track was needed to save the expense of hauling to the warehouses of the Farmers & Planters Company and other business houses on the south side of Main street at that point. He offered, in order to meet the objection of some, to eliminate the engine and draw the cars across the street by horses and to place a flagman at the crossing to warn teams and pedestrians whenever cars were being hauled across the street.

The Paving Of East Church Street.

The paving of East Church street was also considered by the Council, and a large delegation of the colored residents of this section were present, with Mr. James E. Ellegood as counsel, to state their side in the matter. Mr. Ellegood said that his clients were not opposing the improvement of East Church street, but, on the contrary, they favored it, though they did not think that they should be assessed for the improvement in proportion to the more valuable property on Main and Division streets. The matter will be taken up again at a later meeting of the Council.

Mr. Price's Novel Scheme.

A decidedly perplexing question came before the Council during the evening, and after tangleing up in royal fashion the city fathers and holding up business for a while, was finally referred to the law department of the city for solution, and at last accounts the genial City Solicitor was wrestling with the weighty problem. It seems that some time ago Mr. R. McKenney Price applied to the Council for the purpose of laying water pipes across Broad street to connect the new dwellings of Mr. William C. Powell with the windmill of Mr. U. C. Phillips, which has just been erected at his new residence, adjoining the Presbyterian Church.

The Salisbury Water Company very strenuously objects to the granting of permits to private individuals for the purpose of supplying water in this way, and has a standing objection registered with the Council. Consequently, the permit was promptly refused; but Mr. Price was not to be outdone! Such a little thing as the lack of a permit did not have the ghost of a show with the ingenuity and skill which he soon displayed, and in a short while, he was master of the situation, while Salisbury was a poorer but decidedly wiser city.

From the residence of Mr. Phillips, Mr. Price projected the water pipes for a distance of nearly one hundred feet and drove them clear under Broad street over to the cellar of Mr. Powell's dwellings where he promptly connected them with the pipes in those houses, — city ordinances and permits to the contrary notwithstanding.

But this wasn't the end of it! The Water Company heard of this new method of laying pipes, and very promptly had Mr. Price before the Council for an explanation. Mr. Price didn't see that he had violated any ordinance, and says he has not touched Broad street, and that very evident and palpable fact is what is troubling the city officials. The legal minds of the City are very much divided on the proposition and the ultimate result of Mr. Price's novel scheme is very much in doubt.

Street Paving To Begin Next Week.

Six car loads of material for the street paving and, the tools and machinery, arrived at Fulton station this week and are being unloaded. Three cars of this is terra cotta piping, one car cement and two cars tools and machinery. Among the machinery are a steam roller and a large plow drawn by the roller. Mr. F. B. Sweeten, of the firm of B. F. Sweeten & Son, of Camden, who are to do the work, was in town two or three days, but left Thursday. His foreman, Mr. W. I. Michelson, however, is here and will have charge of the work. A car of crushed stone is expected within the next day or so, and then the actual work of paving the streets will begin. It is hoped that this long hoped for movement may take place Monday.

A large force of workmen will be employed, and the work will be hastened just as fast as the arrival of the material will permit. Preference will be given to home labor. In fact, it is hoped that the entire force of workmen may be recruited from Salisbury and vicinity. The work will be under the supervision of Civil Engineer Hatton, and it is likely that the lower part of the town will be begun on first. All of the sewerage and curbing work will be done before the middle of the streets are touched. The company is under a contract to complete the work in 60 working days, except in case of strikes or bad weather, and unless this is done, they forfeit a neat sum.

ENTHUSIASM FOR JUBILEE.

The Greater Baltimore Pageant In The Minds Of All, And Much Poetry Results—Salisburyans To Attend.

Enthusiasm over the approaching Greater Baltimore Jubilee has reached such a stage that the poets who a week ago were dealing in Baltimore's glories in daintily worded verse now find themselves inspired to more demonstrative effusions. One has come forward with a ringing poem which he has set to the music of "There'll be a hot time in the old town tonight." Still another, Mr. Fred. Evans, the bard of the Baltimore County Sentinel, lifts his voice in "The Greater Baltimore Jubilee Yell," which has all the fire and thrill of a college cry. It runs thus: Rah! Rah! Rah!

For the Baltimore Jubilee!

Highlandtown and Canton folks

Will all go up to see.

We're coming, Greater Baltimore,

'Bout 20,000 strong,

To whoop it up and do our share

To push the thing along.

Rah! Rah! Rah!

It is just this same enthusiastic spirit that is indicated in this verse that is evidenced from every section of the State and there is every indication that there will be an enormous crowd of visitors in Baltimore during the week of Jubilee. Final arrangements have been completed for all the various details of features which have been put on the Jubilee program and the prospect is bright for a greater and grander series of spectacles than has ever been presented by Baltimore before in its history. This means a great deal to those whose memories retain vivid recollections of the splendors of the Orioles, the sesqui-centennial and other magnificent pageants which have delighted wondering hosts as they passed through the streets of the Maryland metropolis. The industrial parade of Wednesday, September 13th, will certainly eclipse all previous efforts at the spectacular with its 30,000 gaily costumed marchers and the 200 or more beautiful floats that will be in line. The other parades of the week will be equally attractive and will in themselves draw thousands of spectators to the city.

Many persons from Salisbury will take advantage of the low rate on the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway and will spend the week in Baltimore. It is not known at this time whether or not Company 1, of the First Maryland Volunteers, will participate in the parade, but Lieut. H. Winter Owens, who is now in command, is making full preparations in case orders to this effect shall be received.

B. C. & A. Ry. Held For Grand Jury.

The suit of George R. Percy, member of the last Maryland Legislature, against the Baltimore, Chesapeake & Atlantic Railway for failure to enforce the "Jim Crow" law passed by the Maryland Assembly of 1904, was given a preliminary hearing Monday before Justice Turpin, who held the Railway Company for action of the Grand Jury. The writ was sworn out last July 5, charging the company and Conductor Frank Bowen with failure to observe the law on the early morning express from Ocean City to Baltimore, in that there were neither separate cars nor compartments for the colored people.

The charge was dismissed Monday against the conductor, as the Justice thought that the railroad company only, was responsible, since the conductor could not separate the colored people from the white unless cars or compartments for each were furnished.

This case will be the first to test the constitutionality of the "Jim Crow" law and will be viewed with much interest. State's Attorney Joseph L. Bailey appeared for Mr. Percy, while Mr. Robert T. Graham, of Baltimore, represented the defendants.

Calhoun—Rounds.

Miss Rosa Catherine Rounds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Purcell Rounds, and Mr. William Calhoun, Jr., of Philadelphia, were married Thursday at noon at the home of the bride's parents, 1305 North Division street, Rev. T. E. Martindale, D. D., pastor of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, performing the ceremony. The bride was tastefully attired in a white gown of French mousseline, with trimmings of lace, and carried a handsome bouquet of bride's roses. Miss Clara C. Walton played the wedding march. The parlor was beautifully decorated with pot flowers in honor of the occasion. After the marriage, a wedding breakfast was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Calhoun left on the 2 o'clock express for a trip in New England, expecting a visit Boston, Newport, Portland and other prominent cities. The bride's traveling gown was of dark blue Panama cloth, with hat and gloves to match. They will be at home to their friends after October 1, at 715 14th avenue, Prospect Park, Philadelphia.

Wicomico Prohibition Convention.

The Wicomico County Prohibition Convention was held Tuesday at Salisbury in the Court House at 10:30 a. m., and the following delegates were elected to the State and Congressional Convention, which is to meet Wednesday at Laurel, Md.: Z. W. Richardson, Rev. Z. H. Webster, James T. Malone, U. C. Phillips, E. G. Walston, Benjamin F. Davis, Howard Fooks, S. T. Brown, G. W. Messick, Rev. B. G. Parker, J. R. Robertson, W. H. Darby, T. A. Melson, R. S. Wimbrow, A. R. Connelly. There were no resolutions passed. John H. Dulany, of Fruitland, county chairman, called the meeting to order, and was made chairman, John G. Sheppard, of Pittsville, being made secretary.

INDIANS OF EASTERN SHORE

Their Grants Of Land And Burying Grounds—Their Villages, Arts, And Languages.

Few people now living upon the Eastern Shore of Maryland, enjoying, in season, the delicious peach, the crimson strawberry, the toothsome fish, and the luscious oyster, realize that not many years ago a vast number of unsophisticated Indians were living in the same section. The traditional history of these men of the forest is not told around the hearthstone as it formerly was, and our boys and girls know but little of their dwelling places, customs and characters.

These Indians were living in the same sections and subsisting almost entirely upon the natural products of water, field and forest. As evidence of their existence in large numbers too, may be found sites of villages, burying grounds and war forts. Apparently many districts then contained as many Red Men as they now contain whites, but were not so well distributed. With them, it was not as producing as it is now, but as consuming. The numerous rivers and streams on the Eastern Shore that point, like so many fingers, toward the Bay, were dotted near their shores from source to mouth with Indian clearings which were mere garden spots as compared with the vast fields and farms of the present.

There were at one time as many as seventeen distinct tribes located on the Eastern Shore and these were divided and sub-divided into groups, families and bands. Two tribes, the Accoanacks and the Accoanocks, were located on what is now known as the Eastern Shore of Virginia.

The Arocees, Sarapanahs, Nause and Nanticookes Indians are supposed by some to be bands of the Nanticookes. The Nause were located on the North side of the Nanticooke river, near its mouth and the Nanticookes were located farther up the river, both in Dorchester county. The location of the Arocees and Sarapanahs is uncertain.

The Abanabees, Buzsarnaps and Tequassinoes supposed to be bands of the Choptank Indians were in 1669 located with the Choptank, on the South side of the Choptank river, near Secretary creek, in Dorchester county. The home of these Indians was defined by an act of the General Assembly of Maryland in 1723, fixed the boundary of their home between the Choptank river and located by Col. Thomas Smithson and Lieut. Col. Thomas Ennals.

The Connoys, or Canai, were located on the Manokin river in Somerset county. They were close affiliated with the Nanticookes and may have been a part of that tribe. Kuskamwacks, a band of the Nanticookes, were located on the same river. The Nanticookes were the most numerous on the Eastern Shore located in Somerset, Wicomico and Dorchester counties.

The State of Maryland by act of General Assembly in 1704 and re-affirmed by act in 1723, fixed the boundary of their home between Choptank creek and the northwest fork of the Nanticooke river, Dorchester county. But owing to the encroachments of the whites, a new dwelling place was given them on Broad creek, then in Somerset county, containing three thousand acres of land.

The Ozenees were located on the South side of Chester river. The Susquehannas, another large and powerful tribe, occupied the country near the head of the Chesapeake bay and mouth of Susquehanna, Elk and Northeast rivers. The Tockwaghs or Tockwoghies were located on the Sassafras river. The Wicomicoes resided on the Wicomico river.

While the relation between the Indians and the whites were friendly on the Eastern Shore, the Red Man was watched with a suspicious eye. The Nanticookes were very fierce. On several occasions the homes of the whites were burned by the Indians and settlers were murdered. The Governor adopted energetic measures to stop these outrages and a system of signals was established for protection.

The population of these several tribes and bands was not definitely known; at best it was only an estimate. Captain John Smith, the first explorer of the Eastern Shore, in his expedition of 1608, estimated that there were at that period several thousands of them. Bozeman speaks of the Choptank Indians including the Abanabees, Hutsawaps and the Tequassinoes as being "remarkable for their strength and numbers."

Prof. Dinwiddie, a few years ago, located many of the Indian villages and burying grounds on the Eastern Shore, among them were two large village sites on the Manokin river, and many others on the Nanticooke and Wicomico rivers. Perhaps, the most important was near the Nanticooke, on the Dorchester side, just below Sharptown, near the ancient Indian village of Red Banks. Near this spot exists a hillock of about four acres, entirely surrounded by wooded fringe, which answers perfectly to the description given by Bozeman, of the great burial grounds of the Nanticookes. Extensive excavations have disclosed the fact, that the earth there has been re-disturbed to a depth of several hundred feet and contains quantities of bark and charcoal.

The facts point to the conclusion that this had actually been the burial ground of these ancient people. But their bones have all been carried by their offspring in their many wanderings. It was well known that they were in the habit of carrying their dead with them in their migrations. Rev. Dr. Pyrlans mentions the fact that the Nanticookes made periodical visits between the years 1750 and 1760 from their home in Wyoming, Pa., to their ancient burial grounds on the Eastern Shore, for the purpose of carrying the bones

BRYAN'S TRIP ABROAD.

Story Of The Lively Pace Set By The Nebraskan—Kept His Party On The Move.

When the Bryan party got to Gibraltar late on Saturday night, Aug. 18, everybody in it was weary. For weeks Mr. Bryan had led a lively chase over Great Britain and Europe, writes the New York Herald correspondent who accompanied Mr. Bryan on his trip. It had reached as far north as the land of the mid-night sun, and as far south as the sides of old Vesuvius, down in the ankle of Italy, the foot of the continent. It had covered all of England, urban and rural; most of Scotland, including Edinburgh on the one side and Ayr, the home of Burns, on the other, and all of Ireland, from Belfast to Cork and back, including a little journey to the new country home of Richard Croker, just out of Dublin.

In London, as all the world knows, Mr. Bryan was the recipient of such unusual attention from every class, from King Edward to the most liberal of Liberals, that he was well worn when he took ship at Harwich for the continent. Then he resumed his high speed traveling. After a morning at The Hague Mr. Bryan told his friends he and they would spend the afternoon in Amsterdam.

But The Hague was so beautiful! Surely it was worth a day or so. Mr. Bryan admitted the beauty, but an imperative engagement with a distinguished member of the upper house of parliament of Holland made it necessary for him to take train for Amsterdam after a four hour automobile race from The Hague to Scheveningen and from there to Delft and back to The Hague. This part of the trip made that lovely section of Holland appear as a mere pastel. Promptly at 5 o'clock, however, Mr. Bryan and his friends were in the Amsterdam residence of Mr. Rauchen, one of the bulwarks of the Dutch government.

Here it appeared that there would be a bit of rest, but Mr. Bryan had planned it otherwise. He had another equally important engagement in Cologne in the morning. This meant an 8 o'clock departure from Amsterdam, with a very annoying examination of baggage in Entenueer soon after midnight. Then, in a very inferior train, the party proceeded to Cologne, arriving there at the witching hour of 4 o'clock in the morning. It happened that the only steel construction building in course of erection in Cologne was located in the same block with the Dom hotel. The energetic German ironworkers had their compressed air hammers at work at 6 in the morning, the result being that the American party was practically without sleep when it set out to keep its engagements.

The trip from Harwich to Cologne is a fair example of the speed with which Mr. Bryan raced over Europe. To go from Milan to Venice in one evening and catch the through train the next afternoon for Naples was nothing, unless it happened that the through train had neither sleeping nor dining cars; then it was a serious matter.

In Naples, against the advice of friends, Mr. Bryan insisted upon visiting Vesuvius. He went to Torre Annunziata over a road covered with a foot of powdered lava, the most penetrating dust imaginable. Then, in a donkey cart, he drove up the side of the mountain to Bosco Trecese, a village which was entirely engulfed by the lava streams now hardened into masses of stone almost as unyielding as granite. With his own hands, while other members of the party perspired in the awful heat, he took a sledge hammer and broke quantities of the solidified lava from the stream that ran through somebody's courtyard, now untenanted.

Rome came next. Mr. Bryan had passed through the Eternal City the night before, and it appeared for an hour that he would return to Milan without revisiting the scenes of former greatness. Mr. Bryan knew his Rome from other visits, but he concluded upon leaving Naples to stop again. Friends suspected that he would not pass the most interesting city in southern Europe, and they were at the station at midnight to greet him. Carriages rushed the party to the new Excelsior hotel, where Mr. Bryan was received with extraordinary consideration.

From Rome Mr. Bryan returned to Milan, saw the burned exposition and from there proceeded to the Chateau Trevano, the home of Chevalier Lombard, a distinguished Franco-Italian living on the southern side of the Alps. He spent some time as the guest of Robert Hunter in Zurich.

Mr. Bryan then visited and passed through the St. Gotthard tunnel, returning from Italy, he also visited the Shonpion, which pierces the Alps from L'Isle to Brigue. From Geneva he went to Paris, and then followed the jump from Paris to Gibraltar, through Spain. When he had passed through Irun, at the frontier, the emptiness of Madrid and the stifling, dust laden heat of Cordova and Badajilla, to say nothing of Granada, he was half ill by the time he got to Algeiras and crossed to Gibraltar.

Captain Dannemann had reserved the cabin de luxe on the Princess Irene for Mr. Bryan, and to the right and left of the commander the American party was seated for its meals. The cabin de luxe was very useful, for in it Mr. Bryan found time and place to take his ease and prepare his speech. The real incident of the homeward bound journey took place soon after the start. Most of the ship's company had returned for a storm. Colonel Wainmore of Mr. Bryan's staff had all but prayed for one.

The trouble began early one morning. Chairs toppled over, and eggs rolled the length of the breakfast saloon. At noon the trouble came. Soup ran wild, and the vegetables mixed themselves into succotash. The entire noon bill of fare became hash.

By 2 o'clock the tables were deserted. Several loose jointed ports had lost their bearings, and a dozen state-rooms were flooded. Doors were barred and rugs placed about the cracks to keep the water out. Awnings went by the board, and the men gathered in the smoking room.

Captain Dannemann, however, knew his business. He set the head of his ship in the face of the eighty mile an hour breeze and fought it out. The Irene listed until chairs were not good to sit on, but by 5 o'clock skies were brighter, and a few folks came on deck to watch the mountain seas.

Mr. Bryan presided at a concert held one evening aboard the ship at which a number of celebrated musical artists among the passengers performed. He delivered a graceful and pleasing little speech which he began with a humorous story at the expense of a lawyer who had introduced him and had been somewhat extravagant with his flattery, and Mr. Bryan was reminded of an occasion in his younger days when he was to deliver a political speech somewhere in Indiana.

"The chairman, a good natured Irishman," said Mr. Bryan, "came to me and asked me how I wanted to be introduced. I asked him to refer to me as 'Mr. Bryan, a lawyer of Jacksonville.' I had just been admitted to the bar and wanted the fact known. The chairman came to me half a dozen times to be sure he had it right and finally introduced me, saying, 'Mr. O'Brien will now speak.'"

Among those who went down New York bay to welcome Mr. Bryan was Mayor J. C. Dahlgren of Omaha. Spying Mayor Dahlgren standing in the bow of the foremost tug, Mr. Bryan laughed heartily, shook his head at the coil of rope which the "cowboy" mayor held in his hand and said:

"I guess you're going to get me Jim."

"You're right, we're, Will. We've come a long way, and we won't leave without you."

"You won't have to," replied Mr. Bryan.

As he stepped aboard the second tug Mayor Dahlgren stood in the bow of the Julia C. and made ready to toss his rope about the head of Mr. Bryan. A moment later the rope coil whirled through the air over the heads of a score of men and landed plump about the neck of Mr. Bryan, who stopped short and gazed with surprise at Dahlgren.

"You've caught me sure, Jim," he said.

Club to Revive Toys of Antiquity.

In Paris a new and ultra-exclusive club has been started, having for its object the revival of ancient games and toys. Each member is pledged to collect toys which belonged to the children of antiquity and to do his utmost to find out about and make known to the world of today the games in which the youngsters of thousands of years ago indulged. Among the charter members are the Duchess d'Uzes, the dowager; Princess Faugny-Luchinge, who was Miss Terry; Countess Edmond de Pourtales, Countess de Semismons, M. Henri Housaye, the historian; M. Jules Claretie, the essayist and manager of the Comedie Francaise; Baron Albert Lombroso and Baron Henry Merling.

Squaw to Lead Dress Reform.

If the squaw who holds first place in the heart of Dick Washakie, chief of the Shoshone tribe, has her way, the Indians who yield allegiance to her husband will be the pioneers in a radical reform in dress and customs, says a Lauder (Wyo.) dispatch to the New York Tribune. Mrs. Washakie wears the costume and follows the customs of her ancestors, but says that her people would be better off if they adopted the garb and manners of the whites. She is so well liked that it is believed she will succeed in her reform plans.

Obedient, but Indignant.

"Norah," said the literary woman, "I wish you would go down to the library and bring me 'Flavius Josephus.'"

The new girl left the room to execute the commission.

Presently a terrible noise was heard on the stairway, and Norah pushed the door open with her foot a moment later, dragging in by the collar a large and reluctant Newfoundland dog.

"Here he is, Mrs. Dimms," she said, "but ye oughtn't to have sent me for 'im. It's a man's job. The baste tried to bite me, an' I had to fight 'im iv'ry fut o' the way."—Chicago Tribune.

The Little Ones.

Many wrinkles are smoothed away by the soft fingers of little children. The music of their flutelle voices calms the most turbulent mood and banishes the darkest frown. The power of the little ones consists in their innocence. They bear in their hands that ill the magic might of which gates of brass cannot resist.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 8, 1906.

Republican Ticket.

For 60th Congress of the United States:
HON. WILLIAM H. JACKSON,
of Wicomico County

Mr. Smith, Mr. Jackson And
The Wicomico News.

The Wicomico News on Thursday in an editorial upon the issues involved in this campaign made this peculiarly significant statement: "The campaign will be fought on party lines. It is not a question as between one man or the other. It is a question of party principles—what each man stands for." Good! Let us take the Wicomico News on its own theory, and glance at the candidates from its own standpoint.

Since 1899, when he first ran for office on a Republican ticket, Mr.
Jackson has uniformly and rigidly supported the republican candidates and advocated republican principles. Not once has he gone back on his party or failed it in a single emergency. We are, therefore, more than delighted to admit the correctness of the statement of the News when our esteemed contemporary says, with refreshing frankness and unequivocation,
"The republican nominee stands for Republican principles."

But let us slip over into the Democratic camp for a few minutes and analyze the candidate of the Democratic Party, and measure him by the standard proposed by the News. If it is a matter of party principles, as claimed by our friends, let us see how Mr. Smith stood last year upon the "Poe Amendment,"—the greatest party measure which has been advocated by the Democratic Party since the Civil War. Surely, surely, his attitude on this great question, when it comes to party principles and party regularity must indeed be a supreme test, and how he meets it, let us see!

In the Caroline County Convention which Mr. Smith absolutely controlled and thoroughly dominated, he deliberately refused to allow the "Poe Amendment" to be endorsed, and that particular plank of the Caroline County platform is decidedly conspicuous by its emphatic absence. Mr.
Smith took this decided stand when he must have known that at least ninety per cent of the Democratic voters of the Eastern Shore were in favor of the amendment, and when it was a universally recognized fact the Democratic party in this Congressional District was practically a unit in supporting the amendment. And then, as if to emphasize his animosity to the proposed measure and his antagonism to his own party throughout the District, he had Governor Warfield and his Administration strongly endorsed when it was a notorious fact that the Governor was bitterly opposed to the proposed amendment, and openly hostile to it.

Mark you! We are not objecting to Mr. Smith's attitude last year on this great question. We were overwhelmingly delighted when he assumed his anomalous position and joined hands with the Republicans in the overwhelming defeat of that iniquitous measure. But the News says it is a matter of "party principle," and is "not a question as between one man or the other." Pray tell what principle? Democratic? Oh, surely not! For the very last time Mr. Smith had an opportunity to show where he stood on Democratic principles he abandoned his party, —when goodness knows it needed him—and helped to strike the fatal blow at an amendment to the constitution of this State for which the greatest leaders of the Democratic Party had toiled and worked incessantly for years. Republican?

Surely the News did not mean to intimate that Mr. Smith also stood for Republican principles. Then where, oh, where does he stand?
Truly and verily the least that can be said of Mr. Smith's position upon the great public questions of the day is that it is "subject to change without notice," and dependent upon the whims and caprices of a personal preference.

If Mr. Smith will desert his party in the greatest crisis of its history in recent years, and that to, since he was elected to Congress, what assurance is there that he will feel himself bound to observe the principles of that party as laid down by the News, or hold inviolate the great, fundamental and underlying doctrines of the Democratic Party!

What a spectacle for the gods!
In 1905, the Wicomico News with unparalleled vociferousness, advocating the adoption of the "Poe Amendment," and the Honorable
Thomas A. Smith, the recognized Democratic leader of the Eastern Shore,—by virtue of his official position—joining hands with the Republicans in sending this same amendment to a merciless defeat; and in 1906, the same News supporting the same Smith upon the sole and only plea of "party principle!" "O consistency! consistency! Thou art"—everlastingly and eternally—"a jewel!"

We know where Mr. Jackson stands,—the News says so!— but where, oh where, under the canopy of heaven, does Mr. Smith stand?

The Gans-Nelson Fight.

For those who admire iron nerve, pluck and dogged determination, the fight between Joe Gans and "Battling" Nelson last Monday would certainly serve to satisfy them in a most complete and thorough manner.

In the thirty-second round,
Gans' hand was broken, and yet with an endurance almost unparalleled and an apparent indifference to intense pain and suffering, he continued the fight for ten more rounds until awarded the decision on a foul by Nelson, and in one or two instances actually used the broken member. The fight was one of the bloodiest on record, and Nelson's face was almost unrecognizable at the close of the fierce struggle. The whole affair was exceptionally brutal, and a sad commentary upon the boasted civilization of the Twentieth Century.

Editorial Jottings.

And now for the Baltimore Jubilee!

The "rainy season" has finally given way to delightful weather, and the glorious days of the past week have been almost perfect.

The safety gates at the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk Railroad are a decided improvement in every way, and have given us quite a "city air."

Hon. Frank C. Wachter returned to Baltimore during the past week from his European tour and received a royal reception, at the hands of his friends. Mr. Wachter is deservedly popular, and there is genuine regret expressed at his determination not to accept the Congressional nomination this Fall.

How about the gas plant? The time is getting decidedly short and very little has as yet been accomplished. The company is under contract with the City to have the plant in operation by the first of January and the people are extremely anxious to see something substantial done.

Vermont did not! Once more has the old Green Mountain commonwealth set a glorious pace for the other States of the Union, and the spirit of "victory" is in the air.
Notwithstanding the union of all opposition forces and parties, the Republicans swept everything before them,—a forerunner of the magnificent tidal wave which shall sweep this country on the 6th of next November.

The reception tendered Hon.
William J. Bryan in Madison Square Garden was a remarkable tribute paid to a great American.
Whether we agree with Mr. Bryan or not in his political theories and policies, we can but admire the innate character of the man, the sterling Americanism he has always shown, and his unquestioned honesty of motive which has given him his exceptionally unique position in this country.

Lively things are doing now in the street line, and the arrival of five car loads of material and appliances on Monday last would seem to indicate that the dream of years will soon be realized, and before long the horrors of mud holes upon our principal thoroughfares will be compelled to give way to the onward march of progress and improvement. The first stroke will mark the beginning of the end of the long struggle, and we fancy that for once a striking exception will be found to the old adage that "Anticipation is greater than Realization."

West—Walston.

The marriage of Miss Edith Walston, the daughter of Mr. E. Q. Walston, to Mr. John G. West, was solemnized Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock at the home of the bride. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. A.
Morris in the presence of a number of relatives and friends. The house was beautifully decorated in honor of the occasion. In the parlor a large floral bell was suspended from an arch of ferns and golden rods, under which the bride couple stood during the ceremony.
Lohengrin's wedding march was rendered by Mrs. Elijah Tighman. The ushers were Messrs. Woodland and Frank Parker. Miss Emma Parker was maid of honor, and Miss Lillian Parker, flower girl.

The bride wore a handsome traveling suit of Navy blue silk voile over taffeta and carried roses. The maid of honor wore white silk mull and also carried roses. The flower girl wore white Paris muslin and carried a basket of pink and white asters.

An elaborate wedding breakfast followed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. West were driven to Salisbury. The train for the North, while away they will visit Niagara Falls and places of interest in Canada.

The Great Council Of Red Men.

The Great Council of the Red Men of the United States will kindle its great sun council fire at Niagara Falls Monday. The sessions will be held in the National Food Co.'s Auditorium. The representatives from Maryland are, P. G. S. William H. Lewis, of Hagerstown, Dr. L. L. Dirickson, Jr., of Berlin, Nelson C. Killam, of Baltimore, John T.
Ewell, of Baltimore, Kirby I. Rinker, of Brunswick, William T. Vinsinger, of Elkton, and Miller F. Magraw, of Elkton.

A number of persons from Salisbury will take in the trip, among whom are the following: Mr. and Mrs. B. Frank Kennerly, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Twilley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Luman, Mr. E. J. C. Parsons, Mr.
E. S. Truitt, Miss Ruth Kennerly, Miss Nancy Jump, Miss Mary Lowe, Miss Edna Parsons. These left Salisbury Thursday afternoon. Mr. Truitt will spend some time at Buffalo.

It is understood that the Great Council will be invited to meet in Baltimore in 1908, and should the invitation be accepted, an effort will then be made to elect a Great Junior Sagamore from Maryland.

—Messrs J. A. Jones & Co., dealers in real estate, this week sold the 10 ac-farm near Salisbury owned by Mr. John McLain to Mr. Michael Shultz, of Al-of Allen, also purchased the house and lot of Mr. Claude Serman, near the High School building in South Salisbury, for $1200.

Bell, sustained a painful, though possibly not serious, accident Thursday afternoon at the farm of Dr. Bell, about three miles down the Wicomico river. Mrs. Griffith, who is an excellent rider, mounted a six-year-old colt on the farm that was wild and untrained, and the animal at once became frightened and reared up in the air, losing its balance and falling backwards to the ground. Mrs. Griffith was unable to clear herself in the fall, but was thrown to the ground, and received the weight of the horse on her body. Her back was badly hurt, and she had to be brought to Salisbury to the home of Dr. Bell in a dearborn. She is now under the care of Dr. L. W. Morris.

—Gordon & Bennet's production "The Warning Bell," played in the Salisbury Opera House Wednesday night to a large and fairly appreciative audience. The play tells the story of the quaint people of the New England coast, "The Cape Codders," in an interesting manner. The characters were well taken and some deserve special mention, among them being Mr. Phil Jean Bernard, as the Jew. Mr. Bernard, who by the way is a native of Baltimore, sings well, and by his fine character impersonations, made a hit with the audience.

—The schooner R. T. Rudlett, Capt. J. W. Fountain, was caught in a gale off Cape Hatteras last week and had a highly exciting time, losing all her masts and rigging. Capt. Patterson, of the British steamer Saltwell, which arrived in Norfolk Saturday, reported having sighted the schooner Friday 20 miles north of the cape. She was then making north under a jury rig. Assistance was offered, but this was refused by Capt. Fountain. The Rudlett, which is partly owned by Salisbury capital, was towed into Norfolk Monday. The Rudlett sailed from Norfolk last week with a cargo of coal for Jacksonville, where she was to load a cargo of shingles on return for Salisbury. Mr. V. Perry, of Salisbury, one of the owners, has been in Norfolk this week and is expected home today.

FASHION FORECAST.

MODES THAT WILL BE SMART IN THE FALL.

Prophecies are rife concerning dress modes and fancies for early fall wear. It is claimed that there is to be a direct departure from empire and princess models in favor of second empire styles. These gowns with their full skirts shifted high into the waistband and adorned with frills and furbelows galore will be a strange revival.

But this rumor need not worry us much, for the change, if change there be, will not be so radical that the intelligently purchased spring wardrobe will be de mode in the autumn. A pleasing color scheme, however, that is promised much favor in the fall is the use of two fabrics in a costume of the same shade, but of different textures—for instance, a frock of some dull finished material trimmed with lustrous effects, possibly ribbon.

The color tone in a combination of this kind is very chic and smart. Little taffeta coats built on empire, pony and Eton lines and tailored as trimly as a cloth coat will be the modish separate wrap in the fall, as they have been all summer. When made of black taffeta they can be worn with any colored skirt. And they are particularly nice with the fashionable plaid mixtures. The dressier of these silk coats are extremely fetching carried over in shirred effects with an inner covering. One would hardly call it a lining of delicate mull embroideries or all over laces designed to protect the dainty lingerie blouses underneath. Tiny round pockets of embroidery placed upon the inside of the coat hold the wearer's favorite perfume hidden within a silken sachet.

Smart belts gives a touch to a costume that nothing else does by way of trimming, and the latest band to encircle the hourglass waist of the moment is of softest glove kid. It fastens in the back with a monogram buckle, the initials interwoven and set in a circle much as one's monogram appears on stationery.

Fashions this season concern far more than the hat, the gown and wrap. Never before has the matter of modes taken such hold of each and every garment of the feminine wardrobe—shaping and fashioning it, if possible, more carefully than the outer garment. Great progress has been made in the fashioning of underwear. Two and three pieces are now skillfully combined into a one piece garment, every scrap of superfluous material being eliminated. Consequently our waists are no longer wound as many times as the coils of a dynamo with bands of cotton wrappings, but are round and trim, with never more than one muslin thickness over the corset. Even petticoats are often of the knitted variety, with flounces of embroidered lawn that button on to the knee-length knit top. Altogether the improvements in sartorial things keep pace with other wonderful discoveries.

The costume illustrated has a dainty coat carried out in lace and silk, and the waist pictured is a lace affair evolved from all over valenciennes.

HOW TO PACK.

Household Goods Require Special Treatment When Moved.

"A few women know how to pack dishes, pictures or even ordinary pieces of furniture for moving," said an experienced storage and warehouse packer, "that it is a marvel that anything reaches its destination safely."

"A mistake almost every woman makes, on a very serious one, too, is to place breakable pieces, such as mirrors, in dressers or chiffoniers. By doing this the men moving them cannot see what is underneath the sheeting or burlap or in the drawers and so are not particularly careful, as they would be could they see that there was glass under the coverings. A hole large enough to make the fact apparent should always be left, and I think if this rule is followed with other fragile things few of them will be damaged in moving."

"Fine pieces of cut glass and expensive chinaware need especial care and cannot be too carefully padded and packed. I would advise that each vase, cup, goblet, etc., be lined inside and out with tissue paper, to preserve the surfaces from possible scratches. Then each one should be filled with excelsior and a padding of it wound round the outside. Brown paper should in turn be folded over the packing and the whole tied securely in place with stout cord. Another layer of excelsior placed over the piece before it is put in a barrel should make it practically safe from injury."

Put Heavy Pieces at Bottom.
"In putting china and glass in a barrel the heaviest ones should go on the bottom. Of course they are all to be placed in layers with plenty of excelsior between. Less delicate china need not be so carefully placed. The cups, vegetable dishes, etc., should be stuffed with paper and excelsior and put in the center of the barrel, while the plates, saucers, etc., and flat pieces should be bound with excelsior. Two or three of the former, with sufficient paper and padding between, can be bound together to economize space.

"Small pictures cover carefully with cheesecloth, bind in excelsior and pack in a box, while large ones, with heavy frames, crate, after protecting the canvas with tissue paper or soft cloth. But crating does not mean just putting them in the box, for first the frames must be fastened with cleats to the boards so that they will not only be stationary, but the decorative edges of the gold frames will not touch the protecting box and be marred."

"In the same way chairs—gold and gilt ones—should be carefully wrapped in tissue paper bound with excelsior and then fastened with a board to keep them from touching the sides of the crate. The essential thing in packing, after the padding is done, is to make sure that the feet are a sufficient distance from the bottom of the boards, so that they will not be jarred in moving."

"Heavy sideboards, dressers, etc., should be boxed, and the same care should be taken with them to protect the corners, or feet if there are any, from possible breakage in moving the boxes about. As with the smaller pieces, I think it is best to put padding of excelsior, wrapped about with soft brown paper, so that it will not scratch the wood, between the edges and the box."

To Economize Space.
"To economize on space pillows, bedding and napery can be put in the drawers of these big pieces of furniture and help to hold them securely in place, though of course they as well as the doors should all be locked before packing is commenced."

"With curtains, rugs and carpets, I would roll them, putting pads of paper between the folds to keep the materials from creasing. Then they should be done up in burlap for shipment."

"In moving from one part of the city to the other this same method should be followed, except with the heavy pieces, and they can, as a rule, be put in the van without any packing after being covered with burlap."

Jane's Caution.
"Jane is so suspicious."
"What has Jane done now?"
"She thinks the postmaster invariably reads all her letters, so she puts 'Personal' and 'Private' on each one of them."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Conclusive Evidence.
"My husband says he is not afraid of horses," said the visitor.
"How fortunate!" answered young Mrs. Torkins.
"That shows that he doesn't play them."

How to Be Popular.
The secret of getting along with everybody and having a good time wherever you go is to like people and to take an interest in their lives. It does not matter whether it is a princess or a serving maid, a statesman or a farmer whom you are thrown with for a few minutes or a few hours, and out the main interest of the life you have met and talk about that and you will interest yourself and your hearer too. This human nature lover is a separate and distinct individual from the man who calls himself a student of human nature. This student looks at his neighbors usually through a quizzing glass and continually takes inventory of their vices, defects and weaknesses. The other person comes to his or her fellows with love in the heart and in her mind the one thought, "We are brothers and sisters, what can I do for you?" She cares only and looks only for the grand human sentiments in the heart of each man or woman she meets. And somehow she finds them. Be the quantity great or infinitesimally small, she calls it out. She has friends everywhere. People love her, believe and confide in her. Why? Because she loves, believes in and takes an interest in everybody.

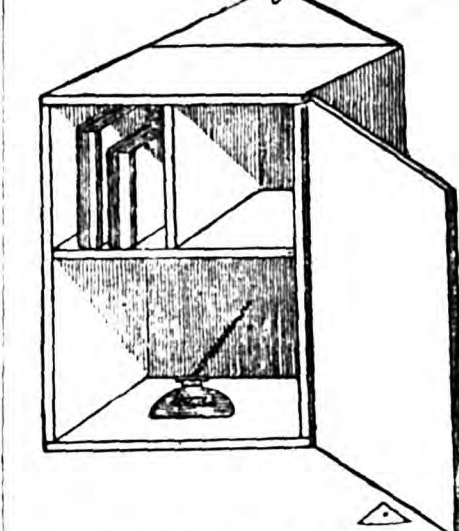

For the Dressmaker.
To strengthen shirt buttonholes stitch them around with cotton after they are finished. They will then last much longer and will not tear away from the material.

In sewing a piece of material on the bias to a straight piece the former is apt to become stretched. To avoid this the bias should be placed underneath, and it will then be sewn in evenly.

It is often difficult to prevent the pile of velvet from being crushed in stitching it, and a good plan is to place a piece of the same material face downward on it. The fingers, resting on this, will not flatten the pile.

When altering a blouse it is a mistake to move the shoulder seam to the front. A better plan is to let it drop backward instead of forward.

A Homemade Cabinet.
A cabinet for the keeping of household books, accounts, etc., will prove a boon to all who love a tidy and well appointed house. It is of simple construction—an old box serves the purpose admirably. A shelf should be inserted as shown, and a hinged door might be affixed. At the top, which is pointed, a hole should be bored for the reception of a strong nail wherewith to hang up the cabinet.

FATE and a FOOZLER

By MARGARET MUZZEY

Copyright, 1906, by Ruby Douglas

All during July, Whitney progressed in Mildred Mason's favor with the approval of her small brother, Tom, a consideration by no means to be despised, when the curate of St. Jude's appeared on the scene and spoiled it all. The first intimation of change in the usual order of events came when Mildred refused to play golf on Sunday.

"When a person can play all the week," she said, "I think he ought to make a difference on Sunday."

"But it is my only opportunity to play with you, and I spend my week ends here for that sole purpose," pleaded Whitney. "I cannot understand this sudden access of conscience."

Mildred looked offended, and Whitney was about to apologize when Tom slipped a hand through his arm.

"Come and go around with me, Mr. Whitney. Mildred is a little morbid just now, but it won't last," and as they went away together Tom explained. "It is that curate chap—he came out here last Monday and spent the week—all the women are crazy about him. Heaven knows what there is about a collar that buttons behind, but girls always go down before it like ninepins."

"Was he—was he especially attentive to any one?" Whitney's voice shook.

"Sure—stuck to Milly like a barnacle to a limpopo. I thought when she saw him play golf she'd break away. It's enough to make angels bawl."

"Did you say she was pleased with—?"

"I don't drive six feet—made eleven strokes and six fozzles to the first green, then—"

"But do you think she enjoyed?"

"Then put it out in five. What do you think of that?"

"It was a hideously execrable, revolting spectacle! Did Miss Mildred appear interested?"

"He drove four balls into the brook and instead of cussing like a gentleman he said, 'Dear me, what an exasperating game!'"

It was no use trying to get any satisfaction from Tom. He talked of nothing but the curate's fozzles and fallures, and the only information Whitney obtained was that the parson intended to be at Windcliff every week during the remainder of the summer.

The next Saturday Whitney found Mildred more than ever ensnared by the curate. She not only refused to play golf Sunday, but read a book called "Narrow Paths" all the evening. Tom walked to the station with Mr. Whitney Monday morning and asked if there was anything he could do for him.

"Get rid of the fozzling parson," said Tom. "He uses his iron like a grave-digger, and he has lost three of my new handmade pneumatics."

"I wish he was a missionary," sighed Whitney.

"In the cannibal islands," added Tom.

The following Friday Whitney received a postal card with these words: "Plot thickens. Take a vacation. Tom."

Whitney, pale, stricken, went to Windcliff on the next train. He found Tom on the ninth green about to try a difficult stroke, and, laying hands suddenly upon him, asked breathlessly: "What did you mean by that postal card?"

"Lucky you didn't grab till I had made that put. I might have jiu-jitsu-ed you," said Tom. "Let's see," counting on his fingers, "four to the brook, one on to the green; that is five."

"Answer my question," Whitney shook him roughly.

"Two puts in seven. Oh, that was just a threat. Thought you better be on the spot. Here comes the fozzling fascinator now."

After introducing the curate, Tom inquired anxiously:

"How is your head today, Mr. Seton?"

"All right when I am up and about thank you," turning to Whitney. "I have suffered from the most peculiar symptoms lately. When I lie down at night I have a rumbling sound in my head that prevents my sleeping."

"How do you account for it?" asked Whitney.

"It's the bogosity dampness," Tom remarked. "A man here last summer began with exactly your symptoms and his doctor told him if he didn't go away from the lake quick he would be a raving maniac."

The curate turned pale.

"Dear me, I should hate to leave this delightful place, but I cannot run such a risk as that."

By August so many boarders arrived that the landlady turned the boys and bachelors into the "Anne," a small cottage divided into bedrooms by thin wooden partitions, and the curate, Mr. Whitney and Tom were relegated to these quarters, Tom's room being between the other two.

Whitney passed the time playing golf with Tom, who was singularly unlike himself. Instead of being indelible and bubbling over with spirits, he was languid and dull. He said the bare possibility of having a fozzler enter his family reduced his nervous system to a pulp.

"What on earth did you bring me here for?" asked Whitney. "I can't see anything of your sister without that everlasting parson."

"She will be tired of his symptoms before long," said Tom.

"She appears to be in love with him and his symptoms."

"She has some notion about a life of usefulness as a parson's wife. She'll drop it once he has gone."

"Catch him going," Whitney groaned.

"I have hopes," said Tom.

That night Whitney lay awake with an aching tooth. He heard the curate's bed creak as the poor fellow tossed restlessly. "Roller skating in his head," thought Whitney. Then he heard Seton pacing back and forth. Presently he appeared to try sleeping again and gave forth a gentle snore. Suddenly he sprang out of bed, threw open his door, rushed madly through the hall and down the stairs. Whitney, alarmed, chased after him. Reaching the garden, he was horrified to see Seton making a full tilt straight for the lake. Whitney picked up an apple and threw it, hitting Seton in the small of the back. He stopped and turned slowly around. His pursuer was upon him in an instant and, grappling the astonished cleric, threw and held him down.

"Help! Murder!" he yelled.

"Shut up," said Whitney. "I've saved your life."

"Why, it is Mr. Whitney. What do you mean?"

A young surgeon camping near the shore heard the cries and, seizing his emergency outfit, ran to the spot.

"What's the row?" he asked.

"It is the curate; he was just going to drown himself."

"Dear me," said Seton. "I was just going to take a plunge."

"At this hour?" sneered Whitney.

"You doubt my word?"

The curate's blood was up; he fought and struggled vigorously. It took both men to handle him, but they got him down again. Whitney sat on him; the doctor took out his chloroform can, saturated a handkerchief and held it over Seton's face until he was unconscious.

As they lifted him to carry him in something dropped. It was a bath towel. The curate had knotted it around his waist.

"Thunder and guns!" exclaimed Whitney. "Do you suppose he really was only going in swimming?"

"Looks confoundingly like it," said the doctor grimly.

As they passed Tom's door he looked out, and, seeing their burden, his eyes widened with horror.

"I told him he'd be drowned going in by those rocks after dark," said Tom. "He's been there every night lately."

"He is not dead, his head struck a tin can," said the doctor.

"Will it be safe for us to leave him alone?" asked Whitney.

"Safer for us; he has not had dope enough to hold him long."

The curate left on an early train next morning before anybody was about.

Tom took Whitney into the room vacated by Seton, turned back the head of the mattress and from a slit in the ticking extracted a small box containing a spool of thread, the end of which passed through a hole in the box, then through a crack in the partition into Tom's room. The "rumbling" was produced by pulling the thread so that it unwound rapidly.

"It was like putting an incubator baby in the refrigerator," said Tom, "but fozzling disgraces a club. The sure way to stop it is to remove the cause."

How Table Olives Are Prepared.

Our consul at Seville reports that to prepare olives in the most palatable manner they must be gathered unripe after the first autumn showers. Properly assorted according to size and quality, they are first washed in fresh water to remove particles of earth and leaves which usually cling to the fruit. Later they are allowed to soak in a solution of soda and potash, concentrated to between two degrees and six degrees of the Baume aerometer. If the solution be very concentrated eight to ten hours of soaking suffice; if diluted, the operation may continue for three or four days. After the solution has penetrated very nearly to the stone of the fruit, fresh water is substituted and renewed every two hours until it remains clean—a sign that the fruit has lost the caustic flavor which the solution had imparted to it. Next the fruit is picked according to processes varying in conformity to the custom of each locality. Some use brine, others admit fennel and thyme, while not infrequently also salt and vinegar are employed. In this way whole olives are pickled. Whenever it is desired, on the other hand, that the fruit should imbibe a stronger savor of the pickle into which it is steeped incisions penetrating to the stone are made.—United States Consular Reports.

Animals Clever With Their Feet.

Gaunts are the most sure footed of our native animals. They can walk up right where the average human being would not crawl. Horses are the daintiest treads, however, though they cannot climb. No horse will step on a man if it can possibly help it. It is a standing rule in cavalry regiments that if a trooper is dismounted he must remain perfectly still, when the whole column passes over him without injuring him. Camels are careless, on the other hand, and the man who came out unharmed from under the feet of a camel corps was not born to be run over by any beast or vehicle.

An Unreasonable Request.

Mrs. C. was ordering the day's lunch over the telephone.

Brains were on her menu and she had tried a number of butchers without success.

"Is that 200?" anxiously

"Yes."

"Have you any brains?"

"What?"

"Have you any brains today?"

"No, no, no," came the testy reply.

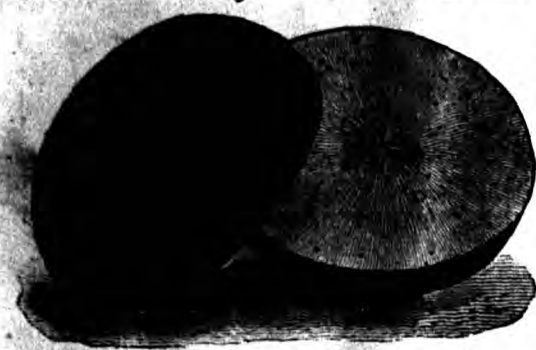

"Madam, you have made a mistake. This is Dr. Smith's telephone."—Lippincott's Magazine

Judge W. R. Martin Dead.

Judge William R. Martin, of the Second Judicial Circuit of Maryland, died Wednesday morning at the summer home of Mr. Preston B. Spring, of East Hampton, Long Island. Death was due to paralysis. The body will be removed to Easton, where funeral will be held today at noon.

Judge Martin was one of the most prominent figures on the Eastern Shore. Until 1897, when he was elected to the bench, he had enjoyed an extensive law practice. The term for which he was elected to the bench would not have expired until 1912. The Judge was 52 years old. His home was at Easton.

Judge Martin was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Martin of Snow Hill, where he was born. After studying law he went to Talbot county, where he taught school for a while before commencing the practice of his profession. He soon formed a partnership with a Mr. Powell under the firm name of Powell & Martin.

Judge Martin and Mr. Powell were together for several years, but finally separated and the Judge formed a partnership with Mr. George W. Wilson. He was a member of this firm when elected Associate Judge in the Second Judicial Circuit. Since then, Mr. Wilson has formed a partnership with Gen. Joseph B. Seth, President of the State Senate, under the firm name of Seth & Wilson.

The death of Judge Martin creates the second vacancy on the bench of the Second Judicial Circuit this year. Until the last few months the Judges of the circuit had been Chief Judge James Alfred Pearce, the late Judge Brown and the late Judge Martin.

Upon the death of Judge Brown last winter, Governor Warfield appointed Judge Austin E. Crothers of Cecil county to succeed him. There will be several names presented to the Governor for consideration in the selection of Judge Martin's successor. Among those mentioned are, Mr. William H. Deweese, of Denton, Attorneys Covington, Adkins, and Gen. Joseph B. Seth, all of the Eastern Shore, and Mr. Levin Wickes, of Chestertown.

The Rural Routes And The Roads In Nuttins And Trappe Districts.

(Communicated.)

The following is a clipping from the Baltimore American of August 27th and should be a warning to all patrons of rural routes in this county, particularly to the patrons in Trappe and Nuttins districts, as the roads in the two mentioned districts are reported to be in the worst possible condition and in several places are almost impassable. The roads in Nuttins district, the writer can state positively, have had scarcely anything done to them in five or six years, and if the following rule was enforced at present in Wicomico county, our roads certainly would not stand the test; and a neighborhood that loses the rural delivery must itself bear the discredit for so unpleasant and humiliating an event. Shall we mend our roads? Shall we hold our mail routes? Or shall we plunge through mud and mud to town after our mail?

It is announced that the Government will look more carefully to the enforcement of its rule regarding the roads over which rural free delivery is established. The present requirement is: "Roads traversed shall be kept in good condition and unobstructed by gates; there must be no unbridged creeks or streams not fordable at any season of the year." In many cases the residents along proposed routes have made improvements that enable them to obtain rural delivery service, but sometimes the efforts to keep up the roads are relaxed. But the Government has decided that unless the roads traveled by the carrier are properly maintained the service will be withdrawn. The Postoffice Department now calls on the carriers for reports on the roads and will stop the service where the highways in question are bad.

The 38,973 rural delivery carriers now employed cover 893,393 miles daily, and it is unreasonable to expect them to contend with neglected roads, or to work for communities lacking the enterprise to keep its common highways in decent shape. Wherever a route is discontinued the inhabitants themselves will be to blame for it, for if alive to their own interests and their duty to the public they would give their roads vigorous and constant attention. The idea that a route once authorized is necessarily permanent is a mistake. Advice on the best road methods is supplied by the Agricultural Department, and a neighborhood that loses the rural delivery must itself bear the discredit for so unpleasant and humiliating an event.

The White Haven Schools.

(Communicated.)

We think our present school board should profit somewhat from the plan suggested by Prof. Dick J. Crosby, of the Southern Maryland counties, in his lecture of September 5 relating to education in rural schools by the consolidation of small schools, which will result in a saving by the maintenance of few schoolrooms and improvement in the work of the teachers, from the fact that their duties will be limited to two grades.

The addition of a higher grade for the more advanced pupils is badly needed here and would bring new life to our little town. We would not then be compelled to send our children from home at such an age when they most need the care and attention of their parents, as some have been compelled to do.

Would that the school board could see the need of the mothers' care for our boys and girls. If they would stop and consider for a moment, I think they would give White Haven what she rightly and justly deserves—a high or graded school.

White Haven Reader.
The plan of consolidating the smaller schools in the rural districts, as advocated by the White Haven reader, is precisely the scheme that County Superintendent Bounds has been experimenting with in the last year or two.

Cambridge Man Gets Plum.

Mr. William T. Johnson, of Cambridge, has been appointed by Capt. T. C. B. There were over one hundred applicants for the position, but Mr. Johnson got the plum. He is said to understand something about bivalves and will be made deputy to the commander.

SCHOOL WORK BEGINS.

Jingle Of Bells Monday Morning Summons Boys And Girls Throughout The County To Their Winter's Task.

The jingle, jingle of the brazen bells in the schoolhouses of Wicomico county rang out promptly at 9 o'clock last Monday morning, and as each peal floated forth on the balmy air, this signal for the beginning of the winter's grind set the blood of the teachers and their pupils beating faster. This was music to some, but to others it was as mournful as a death knell. The eyes of all, however, will soon be focused on the spring examinations and the trials they bring.

The indications are that the schools will be well filled both in Salisbury and in the county. The enrollment Monday was up to the average, notwithstanding the late summer and the necessary duties upon the farm. To accommodate the children of the farmers, in some places the teachers are holding only one session a day at present.

The enrollment in the various grades of the Wicomico High School was as follows: 11th grade, 16; 10th grade, 18; 9th grade, 44; 8th grade, 25; 7th grade, 50; 6th grade, 45; 5th grade, (boys) 82, a total of 280. The enrollment in the Intermediate Department was 200.

The standard of teaching in the schools of Wicomico county is rising, and one of the greatest helps in this direction is the annual session of two weeks of the Tri-County Institute. The outing at the seashore, coming as it does just before the opening of the public schools, stores up energy and enthusiasm for the teachers, and in this way is of unmeasured importance.

More than 325 teachers were in attendance at the lectures, and the great interest manifested at all the sessions gave evidence that the meetings were a success, and indicates that the annual meeting at Ocean City of the teachers of the three counties will be indefinitely continued.

The teaching corps of the city schools is as follows: Wicomico High School—J. Walter Huffington, principal; F. Grant Goole, N. Price Turner, Misses Lizzie Hammond, Stella W. Dorman, Leulah White, Kate Van Cleave, Christine A. Richards. Salisbury Primary—Misses Ada Louise Scott, L. Cora Gillis, Mary Cooper Smith, Margaret Anderson, Elizabeth W. Woodcock, Mildred Dougherty. Salisbury Intermediate—Misses Ida M. Ward, Alice Treadwell, M. Grace Darby, C. Nettie Holloway.

Miss Richards and Miss Van Cleave will spend only two days each week in the High School building. This time will be devoted to physical culture, music, drawing and manual training.

Mr. Price An Adept.

Relative to an article in this paper last week in relation to Mr. R. McKenny Price's novel scheme of driving pipes, it seems that Mr. Price is quite an adept at this kind of work. On Thursday he made a connection with the water main on Main street for the Todd building, next to the Opera House. He made no trench whatever, but in the center of the street simply made a hole about two feet in diameter, just about large enough to admit a man. From this point he drove the pipes under the side of the street and under the pavement to the desired point on the Todd lot. Recently Mr. Price in the same way drove pipes for a distance of 450 feet through the ground without disturbing in any way the surface of the earth.

Speaking during the week of the connection made between the house of Mr. U. C. Phillips, on the north side of Broad street and the house of Mr. William Powell on the south side, an account of which was given in last week's Courier, Mr. Price stated that Mr. Phillips was the one who applied to the City Council for a permit which was refused, but that Mr. Phillips told him that he understood from them that there would be no objection to his making the connection between the houses, if he could do so without breaking the street, and to this Mr. Price replied that he could do so without any trouble, and demonstrated very successfully that fact. He stated that he would not have made the connection even in this way had there been any objection on the part of the Mayor and the Council.

Burglars In Salisbury.

Burglars have been operating extensively in Salisbury during the last two or three weeks. Among the recent places burglarized are the grocery store of Mr. Byard Baker, who was relieved of about $15 in cash. The office of the Crystal Ice Company was entered and $40 was stolen. The freight house at the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad and the stores of Mr. William Farlow and L. C. Parsons were also entered and robbed.

The work of the robbers was continued early Tuesday morning and the grocery store of Mr. Charles E. Bennett was broken open and about $25 taken. This was the first occasion in some time that Mr. Bennett had left money in the store over night. The same night a sealed car with a consignment of cakes and crackers for the wholesale house of Turner Brothers Company was entered and provision for an extended siege was made. After securing their rations, the enterprising gang of law-breakers proceeded to the large store of the Salisbury Hardware Company and secured four revolvers and $5 in cash. Then they lit out, and that is about the last that has been heard from them.

SALISBURY PLEASSED.

Contractors Begin Work On Streets And Lay Part Of Sewer On Main Street—Commissioner Ser-man's Joke.

"There's somethin' doin'" at the lower end of Main street this week that gladdens the eye of many residents of Salisbury. The street paving contractors have had a force of men at work and the large sewer in the middle of the street leading to the river has been laid from the Pivot Bridge to Dock street. No matter if the streets are torn up and auto-mobiling and driving there is unpleasant, everybody is thinking of those 60 working days, except strikes and weather, and of the joy and pride that will be theirs at the expiration of that time.

Street Commissioner Serman, who is taking just about as much interest in the work as any other, is nothing if not facetious. Many persons inquired of him Monday morning if the street paving had begun, and because he did not like to reply in the negative, he went to the City Hall, and securing two of the vitrified bricks that have been on exhibition there, carried them to the corner of Main and Division streets and gravely deposited them in the street, one on one side and the other on the other side. Thereafter, when inquiry was made of the Commissioner as to whether the paving had begun, Mr. Serman emphatically answered in the affirmative.

The property owners along Main, Dock and Division streets have been notified by Mr. Henry J. Byrd, the clerk to the City Council, that an ordinance has been passed by the Council making a charge of $50 to all persons securing a permit after either of these streets shall have been paved, for the purpose of tapping the water mains, and suggesting that all who are not now connected with the water mains to make their connections within the next week. Notice was also given that such connections shall be made with one and one-half inch galvanized iron pipe or one inch lead pipe, and that all buildings which are now connected with smaller pipe than this must at once be replaced with pipe of the right size.

Entertainment For C. E. Delegates.

To the Citizens of Salisbury—The Christian Endeavor Societies of the Presbyterian and Methodist Protestant Churches of Salisbury have invited the Endeavorers of Maryland to hold their Biennial State Convention in our city, October 16, 17 and 18. The invitation, heartily endorsed by the Mayor and Council, was promptly accepted.

As may be known, this convention is inter-denominational in character, composed of 425 Societies, representing all the evangelical denominations of our State, and we are expecting a large number of delegates. The State Union officers are working earnestly, sending to the Societies throughout the State monthly bulletins, containing general information pertaining to the convention, and interesting and descriptive accounts of Salisbury, together with several cuts of most attractive views of the town.

This convention has been held outside Baltimore but twice before, and this is the first time it has ever met on the Eastern Shore, and we are extremely anxious that we should do full credit to our portion of the State. These two churches are doing all in their power to provide entertainment, but from previous experiences in taking care of large gatherings in our midst, and prompted by the many cordial proffers of aid from our brethren of other denominations, we are constrained as well as compelled to ask the hearty and sympathetic support of all denominations of the city, as well as the citizens, to be shown, not only in the entertainment of the delegates, but to enter fully into and enthusiastically into the spirit of the occasion, so that this convention will be not only a source of wide religious influence but also a just cause for pride to every citizen.

Now, this is our special request: Will all who have not been personally solicited, but who will entertain one or more of these delegates, please notify any of the undersigned committee, or phone 64, as soon as possible, so that we may know upon what to rely.

High Water Trousers.

If you are a man and possess a well-rounded ankle, put yourself on the back, if you are, or accomplish that feat, for you are it, or according to the latest rumor current in one of the foreign fashion sheets for next fall, you will be it. If you haven't got an ankle, get busy and by whatever means known to science, get your ankle—in fact both ankles—modeled into good form.

Trousers this fall are to be worn short. Not entirely short, but shorter—say two inches shorter—than worn at present, so that at last gentle man may blushing raise the barriers of discretion, and coyly give 'the naughty world a peep at his ankles.

Local tailors who were seen on the subject did not think that Salisbury men who have an exceptional reputation for modesty, could take up the rumored innovation, and indeed some of the better-known tailors scouted the idea entirely. However, as the fall fashion plates, which most of them followed, have not yet appeared, they will have to wait before they can be positive.

THE CAUSE OF PROSPERITY.

An Interesting Letter From A Resident Of Fruitland Upon Matters Of Vital Importance To The Country.

(Communicated.)

This thing of everybody being so busy that they have not time to do anything else but work at their jobs naturally leads one to ask some questions. Why is this condition of affairs true today, and who made it so? To give a true answer, a man has got to plunge into political matters. Mr. Democrat, did you ever stop and read the reading on this sign-board? Did you ever turn the stream of your howler and let your thinker think a few thoughts about this important question? Did you ever get off to one side of the road and listen to the music of prosperity as it fills the air with melodies? I only ask the Democrats this question as I take it for granted that every Republican who reads this lecture is able to see the point I am aiming at. Who makes prosperity, anyway? Why is it that everybody who wants to work today has got work to do, and at good wages? Why is it that prices of most all farm products are good? Why is it that the railroads are crowded with traffic? Why is it that the Government is not issuing bonds to pay running expenses? Why is it that we have no Coxey armies marching on to Washington, demanding work to keep from starvation? Why is it that the farmers are not being sold out of house and home? Because they have got money to pay their taxes. Why is it that corn is not selling for 25 cents a bushel? Why is it that gold bugs have not got a mortgage on everybody in the community?

There are two reasons why all these things are thus. One that the Republican party is in power in the Nation. The other is that the Democrats simply told falsehoods about what the Republicans would do if they got control of the government. This may sound a wee bit abrupt to some Democrats, but it is the truth. The Democratic party is like a joint-snake—every time that you hit it with an issue it flies to pieces. It gives its leaders more trouble trying to keep the old thing together than Job had with his boils. It has always got something the matter with itself, and is trying to take medicine to get better. But medicine has a remarkably strange effect on Democracy. Remedies that it takes to cure one disease causes another to break out worse than ever.

The dose of Tariff Reform cordial that Dr. Cleveland gave the party a few years ago not only gave the Democrats the yellow jaundice, but the whole country as well; and if it had not been for William McKinley, we would have all been dead with starvation and the dry shrivels. The dose of Free Silver that the party took at Chicago in '96 revived one wing of Democracy, but it paralyzed the other wing like a snap of thunder would a lobster.

One of the greatest troubles with Democracy is that they talk too much. Their own leaders begin to see this now, but they can't call back what they have said and some of them are mad as thunder. They remind me of Dal Sander's parrot. Dal had a parrot, two dogs and a poor fence around his yard. When the dogs would get in, he would kick the dogs on them and holla, "Take 'em, Tige! Ketch 'em, Tige! Take 'em out, Tige!" The dogs a-barking, the hogs a-squealing and Dal a-hollering was a picnic for the parrot, and it finally got to imitating the whole thing. One day the parrot and Tige happened to be shut up in a room together. The parrot concluded it would have a little fun on its own account, so it jumped on the back of a chair and screeched, "Sic 'em, Tige! Take 'em out! Take 'em out!" The dog jumped up, looked around, and seeing nothing but the parrot, supposed that was the thing to take out, and jumped on it. He whirled it around and pulled out its tail feathers, while the parrot yelled for dear life. Dal heard the noise and ran and took the parrot away from the dog, and said to the parrot, "Why, what's the matter, Pol?" "Oh, damn it, I talked too much," answered the parrot. Fruitland, Md.

To Test Mortgage Tax Law.

The County Commissioners Tuesday instructed their attorney to institute suit against Mr. Walter B. Miller for taxes due on mortgages. This is a friendly suit. Mr. Miller agreeing to it, in order to test the constitutionality of the mortgage tax law. Mr. Miller is perhaps the largest holder of mortgages in Wicomico county, and for several years paid the tax on them. Other holders of mortgages having refused to pay the tax, Mr. Miller has done likewise, but is willing to pay the tax provided the other holders of mortgages do the same. The Board of Commissioners is anxious to know its power to enforce the collection of the mortgage tax.

A large delegation of citizens from the Riverside road was before the board urging that action be taken on the proposed new bridge over Tony Tank creek. The Board promised to have a survey made and to ascertain from the Government if a stationary bridge could be built over said creek. It was ordered that P. S. Shockey make a survey and submit plans and specifications at once.

The Commissioners on Beaver Hole Tax Ditch resigned, and the following were appointed: James H. West, B. D. Farlow and Wm. A. Dennis.

Commissioner Cooper reported having investigated the matter of building a bracket footway on the north side of the pivot bridge, and was of the opinion from the best information he could get, that it was impracticable to build such footway.

THE FIRST LOSS is the best loss—that's the principle we both work on. If we carried our summer shoes over to next summer we'd probably have to sell them at a loss then. How much better is it to take our loss now to get the money out of the shoes and invest it in new footwear to keep our stock clean and fresh. We believe we are on the right track, so here we go. Commencing at once we will offer a uniform discount of twenty-five per cent.

CHICAGO'S BRAIN KITCHEN.

Literary Dietaries And Thought Gems Furnished Tired Club Women.

A "Brain Kitchen" which has undertaken to supply literary dietaries and thought gems to tired club women on the a la carte plan opened its doors for inspection in Chicago recently, says a Chicago dispatch to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"We have undertaken to furnish the club women with papers on all subjects," said the chief chef. "We are filling a long felt want. The club woman should not sacrifice her home for the club. We make it possible for her to fulfill both obligations."

"Do you suppose any of the club women will have the nerve to buy their speeches and palm them off as their own?" she was asked.

"Do I?" demanded the chief chef, speaking below her breath, so as not to disturb the throbbing brains. "Why do you suppose I am here?"

The chief chef then explained that she would make a specialty of short orders, served out of stock at a moment's notice to club women who are "up against it." Written to order essays will cost more.

"You needn't laugh," the chief chef snapped. "We supply men as well as club women, and, in fact, we have a large number of men customers."

On the west wall of the little room stands a huge cabinet filled with carefully typewritten manuscripts, arranged alphabetically according to the subject matter.

"Travelogues," with stereopticon views of the countries "written up," bring the highest prices. They may be bought for from $10 to $100, according to the prominence of the country traveled. A "travelogue" on England can be purchased for $10. As familiarity with the Straits Settlements is not so general, a "travelogue" on this region costs $100.

The same principle is carried out throughout the graded list of prices. A Charles Dickens essay brings $5, while the "Servant Girl Problem" is catalogued for $20.

"We are the greatest help to the club women in the work of arranging their yearly programmes," said the woman in charge. "Our trade is not as good in Chicago as it is in the rural districts. We do an extensive mail order business."

Letter to S. Lowenthal, Salisbury, Md.

Des: Sir: Now, may be, you can't get the goods; if you can, your fortune is made.

Cotton cloth—they call it muslin in some parts—at about the usual price per yard, but wider, twice as wide as some, and better, wears better, keeps white and whole a surprising time in all sorts of wear.

You could sell that cloth for hundreds of miles; there'd be no limit.

A yard goes further; one buys less yards. Wears longer; one buys less often. It always looks right till well worn-out. No one customer buys so much of it, but think of the number of customers!

May be you can't get it in cloth; but you can in paint; Devoe. Devoe is as it were wider; a gallon goes further; you buy less gallons; you pay for less gallons; you pay for painting less gallons—as if one paid less for making a garment of that wide cloth—and it keeps its fresh look and sheds water till you have forgotten how old it is.

It isn't true in cloth, but it is in paint; the less you pay, the better it is; for the goodness of paint is reckoned by gallons; less gallons more goodness. Goodness in paint is strength. The stronger a paint, the less gallons it takes for a job and the longer it wears.

Yours truly

F. W. DEVOE & CO., New York.

TO IDENTIFY SOLDIERS.

Finger Print System Adopted By The United States Army—Will Keep Out Undesirable Men.

Finger prints of every recruit in the United States army are to be taken, with photographs, at the different army posts and recruiting stations in the United States, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines. During the time there are no rookie subjects to work on, the same are to be taken of all enlisted men of the army.

The war department but recently adopted the finger print method for preventing undesirable men enlisting in the service, says the New York World. At Washington a central station for the reception of all finger prints taken in every penal institution in the United States using this identification system is to be opened and the finger prints of all men serving in the army are to be compared with these. In this manner criminals will be kept out of the service. It is also to be used in preventing men who have been dishonorably discharged from the army re-enlisting under assumed names.

Noncommissioned officers of the signal corps are to have charge of the work of obtaining photos and finger prints at the larger recruiting stations, such as Jefferson Barracks, Columbus, O., and Fort Wood, N. Y. At all small military posts and all small recruiting stations the hospital corps will have charge, but at the larger posts experts in the art of photography are to have charge.

The photographic work will consist in taking two portraits of the recruit, one a front and the other a profile, both to be on the same plate. Photos will be made on developing paper, the negative and one print sent to the military secretary in Washington, who will have full charge of the identification work of the army, the other to be retained by the commanding officers where the photos are taken or sent along with the recruit to their station.

Major Russell of the signal corps, who is now in Washington in charge of the preliminary arrangements, has succeeded in inventing a camera for the photographic work that makes it very simple indeed, in that it needs no focusing, no adjustment, has no stops, and the photographs are made by flashlight to insure uniformity throughout.

The flashlight apparatus was also invented by Major Russell. The process of photographing is to be very simple, and those who can read a pamphlet and follow directions can secure the same results as though they had years of practice and study. Film packs are to be used instead of plates.

The finger prints to be taken at the same time as the photo is will consist simply in taking the impressions of the fingers on carbon paper. The fingers of the right hand only will have their tips impressed by placing the five on carbon paper, and then this is to be placed upon specially prepared white paper to secure the desired results. These prints are to be sent to Washington and there classified and placed on file.

The finger print system has been adopted, even to the extent that the imprint will be taken, when possible, of soldiers found dead on the battlefield. With this imprint incised in a vital and buried with the soldier, it is thought that in future wars there need be no "unknown dead," for the identity of the soldier can be traced by the finger print when all other evidence is gone.

Millions Paid In Earthquake Claims.

Thirty-five insurance companies out of the 120 involved in the San Francisco disaster have paid in the aggregate $55,108,883.22, according to their office records to date. Some of the larger concerns have made heavy payments. The Royal of Liverpool is credited with $3,804,000.41, the Hartford with $3,018,705, the New York Underwriters with $3,498,787; the Aetna of Hartford is down for $3,126,502 and the Liverpool and London and Globe for $3,721,238. Six companies have paid upward of two millions apiece, while an equal number have exceeded one million.

TOUR OF "FRISCO KID"

Remarkable Journey Abroad Made By Yankee Bootblack—Polishing Shoes Of Royalty.

Fred Rack, the "Frisco Kid," or the globe trotting bootblack, is in London after an extensive tour on the continent, says a London cable to the Chicago Inter Ocean. He is imbued with the idea of getting as many crowned heads on his bootblack list as possible, and in a year since last July has added a good number of celebrities to those he had already secured.

On arriving in England in July, 1905, he tried to secure King Edward, but just missed him and has come over now to have a second attempt. After his first failure in this respect the "Kid" made for the continent, living on his earnings meanwhile and sometimes taking the collection of coins off his box to get himself out of a financial difficulty.

Once in Paris, he made straight for President Loubet and after a little trouble gained an entry to the Elysee, where he had an interesting experience. He blacked the president's boots and then became a popular hero. He was made the subject of a "revue" in one of the halls, and then he went to Brussels, and he would have been honored by King Leopold's patronage had it not been for a royal bereavement which prevented him from gaining admission to the palace.

When royalty cannot be approached the "Kid" makes for the highest in the land, and was successful in Germany. The emperor was busy with the Algeiras conference and could not be troubled, but the crown prince obliged the youth, as also did the British ambassador.

From Berlin he strayed to Monte Carlo, where he shined the Prince of Monaco's boots as clear as a Mediterranean sky, and the king of Sweden gave the "Kid" a handsome gift for his work. They stopped at the same hotel and are said to have arranged a meeting in Sweden later on, when the little bootblack was to have the certificate that he blacked the boots, stamped with a big red seal. The Grand Duke Boris also obliged as a patron.

Then on to Italy. He saw the pope, but his holiness wears white shoes, with gold embroidery, and neither blacking nor cream was useful, so he had to be content with looking at the shoes. In Italy a number of princes and princesses were swept into his net, and in Switzerland the president fell a victim to the boy of polish.

"Now I am back in London," he explained recently. "I am going to set up at any street corner. Meanwhile I shall try to get every one of note, even the king and your lord mayor."

"What am I doing this for? See here! I'm going to write a book on my travels, and as I am only sixteen I want to see as much of the world as I can before I go back to Frisco to open a big bootblack palace."

"Then I shall have all these sealed documents mounted and shall hope to do a good business."

The boy has been all over southern Europe and is now proposing to travel Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Russia and hopes to go south to Palestine, Egypt, then take in India, China, Japan, the colonies and home.

"You want a capital of nerve for this job," he said. "It isn't all smooth sailing. I have been hard up often."

Rack's present address, however, is the Savoy hotel, and as he accustoms himself to the best places in Europe it does not come amiss.

HERE'S WHAT'S WANTED.

A Citizen of Salisbury Supplies The Information.

Over half the complaints of mankind originate with the kidneys. A slight touch of backache at first. Twinges and shooting pains in the loins follow.

They must be checked, they lead to graver complications. The sufferer seeks relief. Plasters are tried, and liniments for the back.

So called Kidney cures which do not cure. The long looked for result seems unattainable.

If you suffer, do you want relief? Follow the plan adopted by this Salisbury citizen.

J. T. Hayman, bookkeeper, residing at the corner of Chestnut and Park Streets, says: "Having been affected for sometime with an aching in the small of my back and other troubles which indicated disordered kidneys I tried a box of Doan's Kidney Pills from White & Leonard's Drug Store and finding that they gave me great relief, I continued taking them and I consider my condition much improved."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Latest Luck Charm.

Woman's newest find is united with one of the world's oldest superstitions. Luck charms are many and various, but the latest is the "Ankh," an ancient Egyptian hieroglyphic emblem of long life and one of the oldest emblems of good wishes. It is traceable to Egyptian women, who wore it to protect themselves from baneful influences, says a cable to the Washington Post. It was found in most of the sculptures and frescoes of Egypt, and puzzled Napoleon and engineers and savants, who vainly tried to decipher it. The mystery was solved in 1822.

Kissing Atomizer Coming.

The carbolic atomizer of the twentieth century girl was pictured recently by Dr. Rurick N. Roark, president of the Eastern Kentucky Normal school, in his address on "Habits" before the teachers' institute. Granting the alarming prevalence of kissing and the growing public knowledge as to death dealing microbes, Dr. Roark predicted that the cautious damsel will make a frantic dive for her atomizer, and then after the antiseptic performance the osculatory process will proceed as in former days.

A lazy liver leads to chronic dyspepsia and constipation—weakens the whole system. Doan's Regulets (25 cents per box) correct the liver, tone the stomach, cure constipation.

To feel strong, have good appetite and digestion, sleep soundly and enjoy life, use Burdock Blood Bitters, the great system tonic and builder.

Hotel Furnishes Your Valet.

Shortly any man of moderate means may come to New York city and stop at a new top notch hotel and have his own valet. On Forty-second street there is a new hostelry that in several respects will be an innovation to the traveling public. Japanese servants will be employed almost exclusively. Japs will perform the functions of chambermaids and each will have from three to five rooms to look after. The Jap will be required to render free valet service to all the men in the rooms assigned to him. A part of his duty will be to press clothing, shave the guests and everything that is expected from a trained valet. It is said that the management will place restrictions on tipping.

The Building & Loan Department, with its paid-up capital stock of $14,500.00, makes loans secured by mortgages, to be paid back in weekly installments of $5, $10, $20, $50, $100 or $200 per week, to suit borrower; and has been doing a popular and successful business since 1887.

The Banking Department was added in 1902 under authority granted by the General Assembly of Maryland of that year, to act as agent for the Association's capital stock for banking purposes, receive money on deposits, make loans on commercial paper, enter into such business transactions as conservative banks ordinarily do, and earnestly solicit the patronage of its friends and the general public. ALCOHOL'S NEW FIELD.

Its Use As A Fuel When Tax Is Removed—Experiments By The Government.

With the beginning of the new year the way will be paved for the use of alcohol as a fuel for small engines, and, while experts do not predict a startling revolution which will sweep the gasoline and kerosene engines into mechanical limbo, they do assert that the alcohol engine will find a large field all its own for usefulness. The only "hurdling" in the proposition is what restriction the internal revenue officials will place on its manufacture, says the New York Tribune. Congress has removed the tax on the manufacture of denatured alcohol, which is grain alcohol, such as is used for whiskey, but poisoned chemically to destroy the possibilities for use in beverages or medicinally. The restrictions as to its manufacture have been left to the discretion of the revenue officials, and they have men abroad now investigating its manufacture there. As, both France and Germany have fostered the use of alcohol engines and the United States government is inclined to do the same, it is not thought likely that oppressive restrictions will be made here. If they are, would be users of the fuel will be as badly off as they are now, while there is a tax on it, which is to be removed on Jan. 1.

"Alcohol engines will not displace gasoline engines," said Dr. Charles E. Lucke of Columbia university, who is experimenting with the fuel on behalf of the United States government. "They will occupy a field of their own, and their chief value will be in isolated localities, where the high price of gasoline, due to the expense of transportation, has made its cost prohibitive."

"In the irrigated districts, for instance, the rancher can pump his water by an alcohol engine, making the fuel from grain on his own place, thus making corn grow more corn."

"It would also have value in isolated regions as a motive power for automobiles, power boats and similar uses. We are experimenting, first, to find the amount of alcohol required for a given engine compared with the amount of gasoline. This comparison of consumption and the comparison of price will give the man interested a basis for determining whether or not he should buy an alcohol engine. The price of gasoline is different in different parts of the country owing to the cost of transportation. Secondly, we are to determine whether there is any more trouble in handling alcohol as a fuel than in handling gasoline. I have obtained as high as 10 per cent more power with alcohol than with gasoline, but with much larger consumption. In engines built properly for the alcohol the consumption should be the same, but in gasoline engines I have had to use three times as much alcohol as I would gasoline. We are also making abstracts of work already done in regard to alcohol engines. At the Paris exposition of 1900, for instance, prize competitions for these engines were held. The making of engines designed especially for alcohol as fuel will probably go slowly, only the more enthusiastic manufacturers building them at first.

"In addition to grain, alcohol can be made cheaply from other substances, such as corn cobs and sugar cane. In Cuba they make a large amount of alcohol from sugar cane and molasses and use it for engines. Sugar beets obtain such a good price on the market for sugar purposes that I hardly think they will be used, while potatoes contain such a high percentage of water that they do not commend themselves for the purpose. Officials of the bureau of forestry are investigating the value of wood alcohol for fuel purposes."

The denatured alcohol act will remove an internal revenue tax of $2.05 a gallon on alcohol of this nature, which will bring it in price within range of competition with gasoline. Just what it will cost to make it has not been determined. Some eleven chemicals are being tested to determine the best for the process of poisoning. The investigations being carried on regarding its manufacture as well as its use for engines will be compiled late in the fall for free distribution, and by the time the law goes into effect it is expected that this treatise on the subject will be in the hands of the public.

Katydid the Latest Pets. It looks as though Poms and Angoras must hide their diminished heads, and even the Newport monkey has received a black eye, for the latest pet is a katydid, says the New York Press. Katydid are being brought from the country as souvenir pets, being consigned to pasteboard houses. It is now a question of how long these little green insects will survive in their new quarters away from autumn's ripening vegetation. Will they have the heart to chirp as cheerily as in the shadow of some old stone wall?

Railway to Have Instruction School.

The Santa Fe railway will open a school for instruction in telegraphy and station agents' duties at the Topeka Business college. The main telegraph line of the road will be connected with the school so that students will have an opportunity to hear actual railroad messages. The school will replace the present system of apprenticeship under which an apprentice worked for three years under an operator or agent.

LAWS FOR THE HUNTER.

Changes in Statutes For The Protection Of Game—Few Have Been Made This Year.

With the coming of the first touch of cool weather there is a general overhauling of gun rooms. Sportsmen who have stayed in their offices all through the hot months begin to think of the birds and the elusive, gun shy deer that are becoming more and more difficult to kill every year, writes the Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post. In a large part of the United States Sept. 1 marks the opening of the hunting season. In the south the season begins later, and here and there the embargo on certain game is lifted a little earlier.

Every year marks an advance in game protection in practically all of the states. There have been very few changes this year. Most of the game laws that were in effect in the United States and Canada last season remain in force, as only fourteen states and eight Canadian provinces held legislative sessions this year. Four of these—Ohio, British Columbia, New Brunswick and Ontario—leave their game laws unchanged, and the others passed a few statutes.

Of the states Mississippi was the only one to make any noteworthy changes. The legislature decided to abandon its old system of separate county laws and adopt a general game law with provisions uniform throughout the entire state. In taking this action Mississippi followed the example recently set by Virginia and Tennessee. This new law is thoroughly modern and framed on the lines of the best game laws now in operation. It provides for the appointment of a game warden, establishes a twenty dollar nonresident license fee and prohibits all sale and export of game.

By prohibiting all sale of protected game Mississippi has taken an advanced position. The only other states whose sale laws are as sweeping are Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, Texas, Montana and Arizona. The Massachusetts legislature enacted some important amendments to its sale laws. One prohibits the sale of imported quail except in November and December. Another cuts off the sale of imported ducks in the close season, and a third prohibits all sale of prairie chickens and sharp tailed grouse. These laws will abolish the market for game illegally shipped from several western states. The establishment of a game warden service in Mississippi leaves Alabama, Arkansas and Texas the only states in the Union unprotected with such special police protection.

The practice of charging nonresident hunters a license is spreading throughout the United States. It was not so long ago that a man might hunt anywhere without paying a fee for the privilege, but the increasing number of hunters each season has made it necessary for the states to adopt some plan to obtain a revenue for the maintenance of the protection service that many of them have put into operation. Few changes have been made in the laws relating to licenses and shooting seasons this year. Besides the new twenty dollar licenses in Mississippi, South Carolina established a twenty-five dollar nonresident county license, and a few minor changes were made by Maryland in the license requirements in Prince George and Somerset counties.

Seasons for the following game have been changed: Deer in New York, snipe, cranes and waterfowl in Louisiana, wood ducks and pheasants in Massachusetts and upland game in South Carolina. In addition to these changes, Virginia removed all protection from robin snipe, surf birds, certain plover and curlew, and Maryland altered several seasons in Allegany, Anne Arundel, Cecil, Garrett, Harford, Prince George and Somerset counties and on the Patuxent river.

A large number of bills relating to game and game protection were considered by congress last winter, and four, all relating to game preserves, were passed. These authorized the lease of 3,500 acres in South Dakota for buffalo pasture, established a game refuge in the Grand canyon forest preserve in Arizona, prohibited hunting in the District of Columbia except in the eastern branch and the west side of the Potomac and prohibited trespass on bird reservations.

Outing Modes.

For canoeing and camping jaunts another original idea in waists is being shown in knitted form by smart sporting outfitters. It is meant to cover all the requirements of the flannel shirt and fill its place and represents the evolution of the clumsy looking, old time sweater into some resemblance of an article belonging to a feminine wardrobe. It is at its best made of gray yarn. The sweater has accomplished the feat of providing plenty of fullness at the bust and equips it with a sailor collar and shield all of one piece with the sweater. It closes in practical fashion in front and has a peplum knit to fit the hips smoothly and not roll up in unbecoming bunches, a fault common to the sweater proper. It is possible to wear this knit waist belted beneath the skirt if the owner so elect. The sleeves are long and cuffed, but can be rolled as high as the wearer wishes without discomfort.

The Wicomico News And The Smith Editorial.

The rejoinder of The Wicomico News to our last week's editorial in relation to Mr. Smith's attitude upon the "Poe Amendment" is exceptionally characteristic of that journal, and fails to answer every material allegation charged. When The News made its sweeping declaration and "News-coin-ed" and patented statement, about "little-minded politics," we would have recognized the source from which the editorial emanated, had we been in the jungles of Africa or the wilds of the Orient, for if there is anything upon which The News is thoroughly versed it is upon that specimen of political warfare. The reply of The News is what is technically called in law a "plea by way of confession and avoidance." In other words, they admit the truth of the allegation, but seek to avoid the responsibility of the act. Not once was there a denial entered, nor could there be, of a single statement made. On the other hand, its attempt to divert public attention from the real gist of our editorial reminds us of the story told of the North American red men when they prepared to make an onslaught on the citadels of civilization. Their universal tactics were to send a detachment of savages into the brush on the opposite side of the village from which the attack was intended to be made; their business was to beat tom-toms on the other side of the town in order to attract attention to that point while the painted hordes of savages swarmed over the unprotected palisade on the other. Since those days many changes have occurred in the outer garb and visible characteristics of the human race but many of the original traits are only too apparent yet to the careful observer. In these latter days, when some modern politician comes forth from his "medicine lodge" intent on repudiating the platform of his party and violating the traditions of his tribe, it becomes necessary to do a little artistic "tom-tom work," and throw dust in the eyes of the innocently unsuspecting victims of his peculiar method of attack.

And then our friends become beautifully ironical, and referring to the editor of THE COURIER, exclaim, with tender solicitude, "Does he not know that Messrs. Smith and Jackson are candidates for the House of Representatives in Congress where the 'Poe Amendment' would be as pertinent as the Russian or Persian constitution." We are deeply thankful to our esteemed contemporary for enlightening us upon such a weighty question. We really had believed that Mr. Smith and Mr. Jackson were running for the Governorship of the State of California, to the Legislature of which State would be sent Russian and Persian Delegates, and the timely correction of our misapprehension upon the vital issues of this campaign, is a matter of profound congratulation.

But the really striking and highly edifying portion of The News editorial, however, is the statement that the "Poe Amendment" was only a "party-measure" and had nothing to do with "party principle." We would have been delighted to have had a refined and learned exposition of the vital difference between a "party principle" and a "party measure," and extremely regret that The News failed to enlighten its readers in so essential a particular. But admitting that there is a distinction, even though it be without a difference, pray tell when did The News become the censor and interpreter of the will and wish of the great Democratic party, and does an issue evolve itself into a "Democratic measure" or a "Democratic principle" only after the thunderous and ponderous voice of The News has so proclaimed it. It is generally conceded that a party platform embodies the principles of that party, and is the official and final pronouncement of the party, from which there is no appeal. The "Poe Amendment," as our friends are quite well aware, was about all there was to the Democratic State platform of 1905, and was the one and single issue upon which the campaign was fought. This then, became the one, great overshadowing and only issue, "measure," and "principle" involved in that memorable struggle, and in the language of our last week's editorial we again exclaim: "If Mr. Smith will desert his party in the greatest crisis of its history in recent years, and that too, since he was elected to Congress, what assurance is there that he will feel himself bound to observe the principles of that party as laid down by The News, or hold inviolate the great, fundamental and underlying doctrines of the Democratic Party."

This was the entire gist of the "outburst" last week which The News very purposely and deliberately avoided and evaded, and upon this phase of the controversy, our friends are as silent as the grave. We did not for a moment criticize Mr. Smith for aiding in the defeat of the "Poe Amendment," and on the other hand, expressed our extreme gratification at the assistance rendered by him in sending that Amendment to a merciless defeat. But we do say, and most emphatically too, that any man who will repudiate the State platform of his party one year, and aid in the crushing defeat of the only "measure" advocated by it, will repudiate the National platform of his party the following year, just as readily and as quickly as he did the State platform the year before, if he wishes to do so, and the public has no assurance as to what course he will pursue.

The Overthrow of Addicks.

The complete overthrow of J. Edward Addicks by the Republicans of Delaware is exceptionally gratifying, while at the same time it is decidedly pathetic. Whether we agree with Mr. Addicks or not, and the political methods which he has pursued in the last twelve or fifteen years, his crushing and stinging defeat after his long and earnest struggle must strike a vibrant and sympathetic chord in the hearts and natures of nearly all. When we remember that his ambition to reach the United States Senatorship has been the burning, dominating, controlling and overpowering factor of his life for years, we can understand something of the bitterness of an overwhelming defeat such as he has just sustained. But when that result is mingled with the treachery of friends upon whom he had a right to rely, the bitterness of his defeat becomes all the more intense and the keenness of his disappointment all the more severe. He has laid his every plan for years, and formed his every combination with a eye single to the one uppermost aim and burning ambition of his life, and he has sacrificed his time, his talents, his riches,—practically his all,—upon the altar of a boundless ambition, and now to be crushed by his enemies and outcast by his friends is the pathetic end of the long struggle. Our very existence is ordinarily a kaleidoscopic drama of pain and pleasure. The blinding, blistering disappointments of life follow fast in the wake of existing pleasures, while sunshine and shadow play with alternating currents upon the chords of our being. But with Addicks, there has hardly been a rift in the constantly darkening skies of his political ambition, and today, with depleted fortune and crushed hopes,—the very friends he has elevated to place and power turning upon him,—he is thrust aside, a veritable political outcast and nondescript. It is little wonder that the crushed worm will turn, and the ultimate lengths to which he will eventually go in his effort to wreck vengeance upon the traitorous friends who are responsible for his downfall can only be a matter of conjecture and doubt.

But let us turn from the purely personal side of the question to the broader consideration of the subject as it affects the public. Too much praise and credit cannot be given the comparatively few, constant regular Republicans who have stood like a wall of adamant against the encroachments of Addicks and his methods, and these are the ones who are entitled to full credit for his final overthrow, and not the men who have accepted honor and power and emoluments at his hands, and then in the supreme moment, when friends were needed, turned a deaf ear to his cry for help. There is nothing more detestable than base ingratitude, and for a man to accept political honors at the hands of another, and then in a moment of supreme trial, turn the dagger of treachery in the heart of his benefactor and friend is an act of colossal contemptibility. The very men who now turn upon him were as fully aware of his character and his unfitness for the United States Senatorship at the time he first sought it, as now, and had they then stood firmly against him and refused to temporize with him, the conditions of the last decade, which have brought Delaware into the limelight of an unsavory prominence, would never have occurred.

Notwithstanding the fact that the legislature of Delaware has been Republican almost uniformly during the last fifteen years, there has never been a time when Addicks could secure the constitutional majority necessary to an election, and there have always been those who have refused to bow the knee to Baal, and have placed the welfare of their State and the honor of their party above personal and sordid considerations, and have been actuated by lofty motives and unselfish purposes.

Too much credit and praise cannot be given these men, and it is singularly fortunate that in nearly every crisis of this character there are to be found men of sterling worth and fixed integrity, and the situation in Delaware has proven no exception to the rule.

—Mrs. T. H. Mitchell expects to spend part of next week in Baltimore and Westminster.

The affair was to show visitors and old residents the rapid strides in progress the city has made since the big fire two years ago. Great throngs of people from all points witnessed the processions each day, quite a number from Salisbury attending the jollification.

—Registration days this year will be Tuesday, October 2, and Tuesday, October 9, from 8 a. m. to 7 p. m. Revision day will be Tuesday, October 16. Every person who has changed his residence since last election day must go in person to his old voting precinct and get a transfer certificate and take it in person to his present voting precinct and get registered, otherwise his name will be stricken from the books and he will lose his vote.

—Mrs. Mary H. Bailey, 58 years old, wife of Mr. Silas Bailey, died at her home in South Salisbury Monday evening about 6 o'clock. She is survived by her husband and a number of children. Funeral services were held Wednesday at the home by Rev. T. E. Martindale, D. D., pastor of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, assisted by Rev. T. N. Potts, D. D., Pastor of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Interment was at Parsons Cemetery. Mr. George C. Hill, undertaker, had charge of the arrangements.

—Messrs. R. E. Powell & Co. have awarded the contract for installing a steam heating plant in their department store to Biddle Bros., who were the lowest bidders. The plant will be located in the rear of the store on West Church street. An excavation 20x26 feet will be made under the pavement. Contractor Lee Johnson will do the brickwork. He went to Baltimore Monday and gave the contract for the iron girders.

—A receipt was filed in the Orphans Court Tuesday by Mrs. Mary P. Johnson and Clarence P. Johnson, her husband, showing that the sum of $1,100 had been paid to her by James D. Coulbourn and Augustus P. Coulbourn, her brothers, administrators of the late Wm. H. Coulbourn. This sum was offered Mrs. Johnson by her brothers to remedy the irregularity made by the will of Wm. H. Coulbourn, in which she was bequeathed but one hundred dollars.

—Dr. Charles R. Truitt, Health Officer for Wicomico county, is issuing certificates to children affected by the new Child Labor law, which took effect on Saturday. All children between 12 and 16 years of age, employed in any factory, store or at any gainful occupation, must obtain a certificate that they can read and write and are physically fitted to work. Children under 12 years and all under 16 years, who cannot read and write are forbidden such employment.

—The Thursday Dancing Club held a dance Tuesday evening in the Masonic Temple in honor of the visitors in town. It was very well attended, about eighty people being present. Refreshments were served during the intermission, and the music was particularly fine. Among the visitors present were Miss Edie Moore, of Bridgeton, N. J.; Miss Eva Mahew, of Camden, N. J.; Miss Frances Glover, of Philadelphia; Miss Helen Dirickson, of Berlin, Md.; Mrs. Henry E. Duckstein, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Henry Rowe, of Norfolk, Va.

—The directors of the Peoples Bank, of Somerset county, have decided to erect a new building to take the place of their present structure. The new edifice will occupy the site of the old building, with the addition of the lot on which the office of Mr. H. P. Dashiell stands, on Prince William street. The new building will be 30 by 60 feet, one story high. The base will be of granite and the front will be of dark iron, finished in pressed bricks with trimmings of Indiana limestone. A cellar will contain the heating apparatus. All modern improvements for a first-class banking house will adorn the structure. The cost will be about $8,000.

—Mrs. Sarah E. Johnson, aged 66, widow of the late Purnell Johnson, died Saturday night at her home on Newton street. She was the daughter of the late Ansellus and Margaret Humphreys. The deceased was for many years closely identified with the Methodist Episcopal denomination. She is survived by one brother, Mr. Charles Humphreys, of near Quantico, and the following children: Mr. Allison Johnson, Miss Margaret Purnell Johnson, and Mrs. E. J. Pusey, all of Salisbury. Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock in the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church by the pastor, Rev. T. E. Martindale, D. D. Interment was at Parsons Cemetery.

—R. Frank Williams, real estate broker, sold yesterday the Affria Fooks farm, located in South Salisbury, to Mr. William S. Powell. This is one of the finest suburban properties around Salisbury. It contains 10 acres of land that is well set in shade and fruit trees, and is improved with a handsome residence and outbuildings. The consideration was $4500. Mr. Powell expects to occupy the property about the first of November. Mr. Williams also closed a deal for Mrs. Mary D. Powell's house and lot, located on East Locust street. This property was purchased by Mr. Henry J. Gregory, of New York State. The price paid was $1700.

—Mr. Spencer McCallister, aged 78 years, died at his home in Vienna Wednesday afternoon of old age. He had been an invalid for the past six months. Mr. McCallister, who was a merchant of Vienna, was formerly of Salisbury, where for sometime he was engaged in the grocery business. He was a charter member of the lodge of Odd Fellows of Mardela Springs. He is survived by a widow and eight children—Mrs. Frank Hearn, of Laurel, Del.; Mrs. Samuel Twale, Mrs. Roland Cain and Mr. James McAllister, of Philadelphia; Mrs. James Elliott, Miss Helen and Mr. Norman McAllister, of Vienna. Funeral services were held yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock in the Vienna Methodist Episcopal Church, after which the body was taken by Mr. George C. Hill, undertaker, to Mardela Springs for burial.

To Burn Pauper Dead.

Despite the unpopularity of municipal crematories in cities where they have been tried, the national capital is to have a place for burning the bodies of the pauper dead of the District of Columbia, says a Washington dispatch to the New York Tribune. The District commissioners are now having plans prepared for a suitable building and plant on the grounds of the Washington asylum, and within a year's time the crematory will be in operation, taking the place largely of the usual potter's field, where the bodies that come into the custody of the District government are now buried.

Put Bloom on Million Acres.

Papers have been filed with the state engineer of Colorado for the redemption of nearly a million acres of arid land, the largest irrigation proposition ever undertaken by private capital. Frank J. MacArthur, a civil engineer, is drafting plans for a reservoir to cover twenty-four square miles, have an average depth of thirty-five feet and use the entire surplus water of the Platte river. It has been estimated that 38,115,000,000 cubic feet of water was wasted yearly from the Platte river. The estimated cost will be about $4,000,000.

The Hats That Made $3 Famous

The makers of the Hawes $3 Hats were the earliest to appreciate the wide business opportunities that were open to the manufacturer who could take advantage of the large savings that come from modern methods of making and marketing hats, and they were the first to enter the "$3 field" with a $3 hat—with a $3 hat that is guaranteed to give better all-around hat satisfaction than comes with hats offered at nearly twice the $3 price.

The Hawes $3 Hats are made in largest quantities and in greatest varieties of styles, shapes and colors in one of the largest, best equipped and best organized hatting plants in the country, and they are sold direct from the factory through agencies everywhere to a larger number of discriminating wearers than is given to any hat offered at an equal or higher price. Journalist And Statesman.

Many men have made journalistic ability a stepping stone to great honors, but few more successfully than the Hon. Charles Emory Smith, editor of the Philadelphia Press. He had the "ink in his blood" before he graduated at Union College in 1861, and in 1865, when only twenty-three years of age, was editor of the Albany Express. Doubtless he would have held a similar position at an earlier age had he not devoted himself during the war to the raising and organizing of Union volunteer regiments. He remained with the Express for five years and then controlled the Albany Journal till 1880, when he went to Philadelphia to conduct the Press of that city. There he found fuller scope for his energy and mental power and became recognized as a man of great natural gift, political sagacity and stern integrity. President Harrison sent him to St. Petersburg in 1880 as U. S. Ambassador, and eight years later he was appointed Postmaster General by Mr. McKinley, an office which he occupied till 1902. Thus as statesman, diplomatist, journalist and business man, has he distinguished himself, and four seats of learning have recognized his qualities by conferring upon him the honorary degree of L. L. D., in 1880, Lafayette, 1900, Knox, 1900, and Wesleyan, 1901. A record such as this, stamps Charles Emory Smith as one of the most remarkable men in the United States. It must be a great satisfaction to the long suffering people who are insured in the New York Life or Mutual Life Companies that Mr. Smith is one of that body of illustrious citizens known as the International Policyholders' Committee who are striving to "right the wrong."

THE OLD CORN MILL.

An Attractive And Picturesque Survival Of The Days That Are No More.

One of the most quaint, soothing and pleasant of the reminiscences of the old South will take practical form at the Jamestown Exposition in the old fashioned water mill that grinds the corn from the meal of which delicious corn cakes are made on the spot.

The mill will be an exact reproduction of the alluring old time overshot water wheel mill, with its cool dam and picturesque and pleasant surroundings so dear to the heart of childhood and not without great attraction for children of an older growth. The old corn mill at the Exposition will present to the visitor a very natural and attractive appearance. Weather-worn and covered with cool looking moss, it will be a suitable setting for the great wheel with its green dripping blades. Within the mill the visitor will see the corn ground in the old primitive way and the sweet and fragrant meal resulting is ready for consumption. Passing into a homelike apartment adjoining the mill, the visitor will be invited to sit down and partake of old fashioned southern corn cakes.

A wholesome looking black "Mammy" of the quaint and goodly type that existed "befo' de wah," in spotless apron and cap will cook and serve the appetizing cakes with pure country butter and maple syrup to make the combination perfect.

This delightful old mill with its pleasant surroundings and the fond memories it will recall, is sure to prove to be one of the most popular of the simple features of the Exposition, where there will be many such old time attractions to recall to the visitor the sweet reminiscences of the days that are no more.

School Matters At Powellville.

(Communicated)

School opened Monday with only a fair attendance, owing to the people being so busy. The grounds and the school building were in a deplorable condition, which is probably due to the fact that the trustees were too busy to look after them, or because they were not enough interested in school work. In fact, quite a number of our Democratic friends are finding considerable fault with their friends at the county seat, because our schools are in such poor condition; but some of them tell them to live on promises till the tidal wave comes and it will all be over.

At the Poor-house Door

By NANCY HAZLIP

Copyright, 1906, by Ruby Douglas

"I don't see why you would name a girl child Jessica—you might 'a' known she'd grow up so prim and high headed and hateful no man in his senses 'd ever want to marry her, and, land knows, women that don't marry have a hard time," Grandma Cole said to her son's meek widow.

Mrs. Cole answered a little tremulously. "But, mother, they do want to marry her. Jessy might 'a' had four proposals last year, if only she'd 'a' gone and let the men speak out."

"And who were the men, I'd like to know?" Grandma puffed, her throat swelling visibly. "Widderwens with nine children, or else one foot in the grave, or cranky old bachelors, or maybe even preachers. Besides, how can you know even a preacher wants to marry you unless he ups and says so? I never did hold with this way of makin' out every man that want to a house or even rode past it in a notion of goin' there courtin'."

She paused in breathless triumph. If Mrs. Lem Cole had been wise she would have held her peace. Grandma bore contrivance very ill indeed, and to prove her in the wrong was to risk everything. Mrs. Lem knew that very well, but a goaded woman is often a desperate one. Therefore she burst out: "Well! Three of the men—and they weren't widowers nor preachers, but real good chances—asked me to ask Jessy if she'd listen to 'em. And the other one—"

"There wasn't any other one. Maria, I don't believe one word you're sayin'." Grandma broke out furiously. "Four proposals indeed! Why, Ann 'Liza didn't have but three in the whole of last year and the beaus around her all the time like bees around a honey pot."

"The other one was Jimmy Wakefield. And he wouldn't be stopped. Just up and asked Jessy like a man," Mrs. Lem said, not meekly, but with such red spots in her cheeks she looked almost as young as her daughter.

"Get out of here, you!" Grandma panted. "Jimmy Wakefield, indeed! Why he's never had a notion to anybody but Ann 'Liza. And she's goin' to take him, too, when she gets good and ready. Don't you dare talk of him wantin' that sick of a Jessy. If I thought there was any truth in what you've said I'd send you straight out of the house."

"Then we'll go without waiting to be sent," Jessy burst out from the doorway. She had been standing just outside, feeling somehow that her dear patient mother might need her help and countenance. "I don't like to tell, to say such things," she went on, "but mammy told the truth, nothing but the truth. And she shan't stay here to be insulted. Unless you ask her pardon we'll go away."

"Where? To the county poorhouse? I don't know any other chance for ye," Grandma said, white faced, her eyes flashing.

She was an imperious old lady, nobly partial to her namesake and favorite grandchild, Ann Eliza Wakefield, partly because Ann Eliza was pretty and taking and impetuous, partly also because she had money enough of her own to be entirely independent.

Grandfather Cole had left everything to his wife. She held on to it with a grip of iron. All her five children had prospered except luckless Lemuel. He had left wife and daughter little except his ill luck. It had followed them so throughout the three years since his death they had at last been forced to accept the shelter Grandma had grudgingly offered.

"Teach school! You know I won't have that," grandma had said to Jessy's plan. "No, missy, I'll marry you off in a year. Then you can take your mother home with you. Remember beggars mustn't be choosers. You ain't quite a beggar. You'll get something when I die, of course. But I ain't going to see my husband's money wasted as long as I can help it, even if I had any to spare, which I haven't. It costs such a lot to do things. Why, just even half livin' nearly bankrupts me. Ann 'Liza has to have things. She's got a delicate appetite, and so notionate. She can afford to be, because she can keep on havin' what she wants when she comes to spendin' her own money. You've got no money to spend, so you'd better learn economy every way."

Jessy had been for going away then, but her mother's timorous fears had prevailed on her to stay. Jessy was not strictly pretty. Her eyes were too serious, her lips too severe. She had a good chin, fine and clean cut, and a lovely neck below it. Her hair was flaxen, her eyes a water blue.

Ann Eliza had black eyes and hair and very high color. Grandma thought her the prettiest creature in the world. She likewise thought Jessica hardly passable. But now as she faced her grandchild she saw a Jessica new and strange, one whose cheeks were damask roses.

The change startled her. She turned half about, saying in a grumbling voice: "Maria, you oughtn't to provoke me so. Go out in the garden. I'm comin' pretty shortly. And you, Jessy, tell the boy to bring round the buggy. I want you and Ann 'Liza to drive over to the store for me."

"I'm sorry, but I can't go," Jessy said, holding tight to her mother's hand. "I shall be busy—packing up and finding out how we can best get away."

"Oh, shut up! Stop your foolish talk!" grandma commanded fretfully.

Ann Eliza came in from the garden, both her hands full of dewy roses. "Here! Take these and fix the parlor vases," she commanded Jessica.

Jessy shook her head and turned toward the door. Grandma had weakened sensibly; she was on the point of mumbling out an apology. But as Ann Eliza cried pettishly, "I wish you'd look at that; I told you what would come of setting beggars on horseback!" her anger flamed up hotter than ever.

"You do as you're told," she cried, catching Jessica by the shoulders and trying to shake her. "You say you want to work for a livin'; prove it by waitin' on your betters."

Jessy set her teeth hard, broke from the quavery hold and rushed away. At the steps she stopped, snuffed bitterly and shook the dust from her feet. Over her shoulder she called clearly, "Mother, meet me at the big gate in an hour; by then I shall know exactly what we can do."

Ten minutes later she stood in the Wakefield yard facing Jimmy, with her heart beating so it half suffocated her. She had so dreaded to tell what must be told—to ask the help that was imperative. It was not much, only to carry her mother and their scant belongings to the poorhouse. Any shelter would be better than the Cole roof. There was nobody else she could ask. Jimmy was the only friend within walking distance—moreover, the single person to whom she could bring herself to make such appeal. She was, in a way, bound to make it. She had promised, when she denied him that dearer promise, to call on him if she found herself in need of him. Now she was blessing him silently that he had not asked anything; had listened only to what she cared to tell and said afterward, with a little soothing touch on her hand: "You did right to come to me, Jessy. Of course I'll take you anywhere you may want to go."

"You must only send us. Black Billy can take us in the wagon. Grandma will be so angry if she knows you helped us escape," Jessica had answered, but at that Jimmy only smiled.

Very shortly he made her sit down on the bench under the big elm and went away whistling, to reappear, all in a whiff, driving a spanking pair, which drew a double seated vehicle spick and span.

"I think we'd better make the trip a quick one," was all he said in answer to Jessy's expostulation.

Almost before she knew it she was sitting beside him, bowling along the turnpike at the team's best pace. As quickly her mother was gathered up, and the hand luggage properly bestowed, Jimmy amazed Jessy by bidding her sit behind, adding, "I want to talk to mammy—and these horses don't let me turn my head for any considerable time."

Jessy began to feel desperately lonely—she could not even divert herself by watching the dapple of the flying spokes as the wheels spun round. Jimmy was driving very fast, and keeping to the turnpike. It must be he meant to take them through town—that, no doubt, accounted for his choice of a rig. She knew he hated a shabby outfit—especially upon Saturdays and court days. It might be he had business that could not wait—but somehow she felt that he was unkind to think of anything but her extremity. Then she sank into a sort of daze, wondering dully how it would seem to find herself a pauper, duly committed. She had not thought of that before—of course there were legal forms before they could claim the last refuge of the destitute, and would not the authorities get back at grandma? She had a dim idea that well to do folk had to answer for their near kin.

No doubt that was what Jimmy was speaking about—he was talking low and eagerly to mamma. Yes, he was turning the horses toward the courthouse square. In a wink they drew up there, and Jimmy, springing down, held out his arms to her. "You know there are arrangements—will you trust me to make them?" he asked very low.

Jessy could only bow her head; speech was beyond her. Jimmy looked at her, his eyes tender, yet mischievous. "I want to commit you for life to a poorhouse of which I am keeper," he whispered. "Mamma is willing. What do you say?"

"Nothing," Jessica said, but as she said it she laid her hand in Jimmy's strong clasp, and dropped her long lashed lids to veil a rush of happy tears.

The Streets of Peru.

The streets of Peru, especially on gala days or when they wear the special dress of some celebration, are said to be among the most picturesque in the world. In their narrow proportions they resemble somewhat the streets of China, and the variety and contrast of the colors used in decoration may be compared with the Chinese. There is, however, a distinct Latin character to the decoration, which lends them an atmosphere entirely their own.

Love Plants of West Indies. "Did you ever hear of the bird plant?" asked a sea captain who was showing several visitors over his craft the other day. "I have several in the cabin."

He showed three small leaves attached to the ceiling by strings. They were without any soil or foundation, but were green, and from each there sprouted a dozen or more little leaves, greener and fresher than the main leaf itself.

"During our last cruise in the West Indies," the captain continued, "I visited a deserted English fortress, which was grown over with shrubbery. A native plucked several leaves from a vine and told me to hang them somewhere and write the name of my best girl on them. 'If they die,' he said, 'she does not love you. If they sprout, she does.' I put my wife's name on one and my two daughters' names on the others. You see, although they have been without nourishment for three months, all three are sprouting well and my family's affections seem assured."—Philadelphia Record.

Colors.

White is the emblem of light, religious purity, innocence, faith, joy and life. In the judge it indicates integrity; in the sick, humility; in the woman, chastity. Red, the ruby, signifies fire, divine love and royalty. White and red roses express love and wisdom. Blue, or the sapphire, expresses heaven, the firmament, truth from a celestial origin, constancy and fidelity. Yellow or gold is the symbol of the sun, of marriage and faithfulness. Green, the emerald, is the color of spring, of hope—particularly of the hope of immortality and of victory, as the color of the laurel and palm. Violet, the amethyst, signifies love and truth or passion and suffering. Purple and scarlet signify things good and true from a celestial origin. Black corresponds to despair, darkness, earthliness, mourning, negation, wickedness and death.

A Rhapody on a Mutton Chop.

When a primitive man wants breakfast he takes a sheep, kneels upon it, holds it between his legs and cuts its throat. He skins it, and, taking a slice out of it, fries it on the coals for breakfast. We also demand not less imperatively cutlets for our breakfast. We procure an individual some way off to kill the beast and another out of our sight to cook it. We have a paper frill put around the bone to disguise it, and set a pot of flowers straight before us to look at while we eat it; but, to the sheep—the sheep—it can make little difference which way it is eaten. We still do our unclean work, but we do it by proxy. And it may be questioned whether what we gain in refinement we have not lost in sincerity.—Fortnightly Review.

The Mineral Jade.

Most people have probably seen jade ornaments without having a very clear idea of the material of which such things are composed. Jade is an exceedingly tough but beautiful mineral, much of which is found in China. It is of five colors, the most highly prized jade being the white, yellow and green varieties. The rarest of all is red jade, but this is so scarce that it has no place in market valuations. The mineral is frequently found in the beds of streams, and in searching for it Mohammedans are generally employed, as it is believed that people of this faith are sensitive to its presence, and, like the dowagers or water finders, are affected with shuddering fits when passing over a place where jade is to be found.

The Number Forty.

Why this fatalistic forty? The superstition about St. Swithin extends not only to forty days of rain, but to forty days of drought, according as July 15 is wet or dry. Moses was forty days on the mount. Elijah was forty days fed by ravens. It rained forty days to make the flood, and the waters that covered the earth were forty days in subsiding. The ancient period of embalming was forty days. Nineveh had forty days to repent. Jesus Christ fasted forty days. He was seen forty days after his resurrection. A quarantine extends forty days. The privilege of sanctuary was for forty days. In the tale of All Baba there are forty thieves. Tiberius said that a man is either a fool or his own physician at forty. When a man wants a short nap he takes forty winks. A knight enjoined forty days of service from his tenant. In old English law the limit for the payment of a fine for manslaughter was forty days. Members of parliament were protected from arrest forty days after the prorogation of the house of commons and another forty days before the house was convened. We usually speak of a buxom widow as fair, fat and forty. A man is in his prime at forty, etc.—New York Press.

This is Different.

"Love makes the world go round." The world seems to go round, but love makes your head swim. That's the explanation.

How to Be Beautiful.

"What do you do to keep so beautiful?" they asked the butterfly. "I? I do nothing," she replied.

A deep, genuine sincerity is the first characteristic of all men in any way heroic.—Carlyle.

Quite a number of our oystermen have been fitting up for oystering. As the season opens to-day, many will not leave until Monday. It is understood that there is an amount of small oysters on the rocks and it is to be hoped that the inspectors will enforce the cull law. Leather Motor Coats.

For bringing the smart Parisienne into vogue, the leather motor coat is being introduced. It hangs straight back and front. The leather is light and as soft as a glove. It can be dyed any color, from "gamboge" or scarlet, to the lightest or the deepest green. The buttons should be in leather, circled with gold. The hood can be worn as a head covering when one is traveling. It is not unlike Dante's hood and wraps the neck very prettily by means of a crosspiece and buttonhole cleverly adapted. It is most becoming to the face.

NEW ICE PLANT.

Outgrowing Their Present Capacity In One Year, The Maryland Ice Co. Will Build a New 50-Ton Establishment.

Finding that the capacity of their present 25-ton plant has been outgrown in less than one year by the demand of their customers, the Maryland Ice Company this week decided to erect an entire new ice plant having a 50 ton daily capacity. The establishment will be located somewhere in South Salisbury convenient to Jackson Brothers Company's mill, the fuel supply, and the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad. It is expected the new concern will be in operation by April 1.

The present plant situated at the junction of the two railroads coming into Salisbury, will be continued, and with the combined operation of the two plants and of the plant of the Salisbury Ice Plant, which the company may take charge of, they will have a daily capacity of about 90 tons of ice.

Another storage house will be erected and then the company will have a storage capacity of about 5,000 tons. It also is the intention to have at least four refrigerating cars to enable deliveries of ice to be made at any point on the Peninsula with the least possible loss by melting. Before loading the cars they will be connected with the ammonia pipes of the plant and thoroughly cooled.

The ice will be manufactured in the new plant by what is known as the "plate method," instead of what is known as the "can method" which is in operation at all of the other plants on the peninsula south of Wilmington. Ice made by this method is said to keep better, to be purer and to be better in ever respect for family purposes. In the "can method" each block of ice is frozen in a separate can, but in the "plate method" the ice is formed in huge blocks and saved or cut with steam pipes into chunks of 300 or 250 pounds.

With the "plate method," which is practical only in large plants, and the increased fuel facilities, the officers of the company expect to be able to place ice in any of the towns on the Eastern Shore as cheaply as the coal plants can manufacture the product with coal as the fuel.

The capital stock of the company, which is incorporated under the laws of Delaware, will be increased from $20,000 to about $75,000. The officers and stockholders will remain about the same as at present. The officers are: Messrs. William H. Jackson, president; William P. Jackson, vice-president; Elmer C. Williams, secretary and treasurer, and John H. Tomlinson, general manager.

Held On Serious Charge.

Charged with assaulting Thomas Horsey, colored, Saturday night with intent to kill, Asbury Brewington, colored, lies languishing in the Salisbury jail until it shall be determined by Justice W. A. Trader just what is the right thing to be done with him.

As is so often the case, a woman is at the bottom of the whole matter. It is stated that Brewington and the wife of Horsey drove to Delmar last Saturday, and that when they returned both were about drunk. Horsey missed his wife, and heard that she had left with Brewington. He waited until the two returned, and then calling his wife into their home, he charged her with running off with the other man and began to beat her. The woman called to Brewington for assistance, and the latter came, and it is alleged, fired his pistol at Horsey, the bullet taking effect just over Horsey's left eye. The leaden pellet glanced and made nothing more than a flesh wound. Horsey was arrested and confined in jail.

Chief of Police Woodland Disharoon and Deputy Sheriff J. Frank Waller received some interesting information Monday and the following morning about 4 o'clock they went to the home of Horsey. There they found that the woman had packed all of her clothes and the clothes of Brewington in a trunk, and was preparing to rid Salisbury of her presence. She was expecting that Brewington would be let off with a fine and that he would follow her as soon as he could secure his release. Justice Trader gave him a hearing Wednesday, however, and after weighing the testimony, committed him back to jail until the negro's sentence should be determined.

Luncheon to Republican Editors.

The luncheon promises to be the most important yet held. Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte, Gen. Felix Agnus, Mayor Timmons, Congressman Mudd, Pearce and Wachter and Messrs. William H. Jackson, Robert Garrett, P. L. Goldsborough, S. A. Williams, Collector Stone, Gen. James A. Gary and other leading men have been invited to meet the county editors. Speeches are expected to be made by Mr. Bonaparte, General Agnus and Messrs. Mudd, Wachter and Pearce.

CAPT. VEASEY'S "HOUSE PARTY"

Steamer Virginia Runs Aground Monday Night And Delays Passengers 32 Hours In Reaching Baltimore.

The Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway steamer Virginia, of the Wicomico river line, which left Salisbury Monday afternoon for Baltimore, ran aground on a high tide about 12.30 o'clock Tuesday morning while trying to pass through the narrow and shallow channel of Hooper's Straits in a dense fog.

By the time the boat had stopped at all the wharves along the Wicomico, she had an unusually large number of passengers, many of these being young people on their way to school or college. For more than 24 hours these passengers were forced to endure a lonely wait until help could be called from Baltimore.

Meanwhile every effort was made to back the steamer off, but she stuck fast. The steamer Tangier was sent to the assistance of the Virginia, and she reached the latter about 8 o'clock Wednesday morning. The Tangier struggled and tussled with the unfortunate steamer, but to no avail. Taking the passengers of the Virginia, she left for Baltimore, arriving there about 2.30 o'clock, or about 32 hours later than the Virginia was due in Baltimore.

While the passengers were necessarily put to some annoyance through the delay, at no time was there any danger, and the passengers, seeing what was before them, took the matter philosophically and made the best of it. There were plenty of eatables and state rooms and the people were well taken care of by Capt. William F. Veasey and his crew. The whole crowd resolved themselves into what they called "Capt. Veasey's House-party," and for the remainder of the time were as one large family.

But little alarm was felt in Baltimore by the officers of the Company when the Virginia did not arrive at her accustomed time, as Capt. Veasey is regarded as a very able skipper, and in the absence of any communication they took it for granted that nothing serious had happened.

The Tred Avon was sent out early Wednesday afternoon, heavily loaded with freight, for points along the Virginia's route, and the Maggie was sent with a large passenger list and heavy freights at 5 o'clock. Freight had become badly congested during the trip of the Virginia, and the two boats were dispatched to relieve the congestion and to furnish the down-the-bay crabbers facilities to get their heavy catches of crabs to market. The Maggie reached Salisbury Thursday afternoon.

The ocean-going tug Columbia was dispatched to Hooper's Island Wednesday afternoon to the relief of the Virginia and succeeded in pulling the steamer off on the high tide.

The Virginia proceeded to Baltimore and made her regular trip to Salisbury Friday morning. She was undamaged.

Death Of Mrs. William J. Ennis.

Mrs. Mary A. Ennis, nee Fleming, wife of Mr. William J. Ennis, died at her home on William street Thursday morning about 9.30 o'clock of acute rheumatism, after a long and painful illness. Mrs. Ennis, who was the daughter of the late Mr. Isaac H. Fleming, was 46 years of age, and was born in Worcester county. For many years she had been a member of the Wicomico Presbyterian Church, of this city.

She is survived by a husband and one daughter, Mrs. J. Ryland Taylor. The following brothers and sisters also survive: Mrs. George McDaniel, Mrs. Purnell Ellis, Mrs. L. T. Lankford and Mr. Archibald Fleming, of Salisbury, and Frank Fleming, of Princess Anne.

Funeral services will be held at the home on William street this afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. W. S. Phillips, pastor of the Salisbury Methodist Protestant Church, assisted by Rev. W. S. Reigart, D. D., pastor emeritus of the Wicomico Presbyterian Church. The following will be pallbearers: Messrs. J. McKenney Price, Affria Fooks, E. J. C. Parsons, George W. Messick, Milton H. Pope and Alexander Alkman. Interment will be at Parsons Cemetery.

Mrs. Sallie Carroll Dead.

Mrs. Sallie Heath White Carroll, widow of Dr. Charles A. Carroll, of Baltimore, died Monday at Atlantic City, where she had been staying only a short time. Mrs. Carroll was a member of a prominent Maryland family and had traveled extensively in this country and abroad. She is survived by a daughter, Miss Sally Heath White Carroll, of Baltimore, and one son, Mr. Henry D. Carroll, who lives in New Orleans.

The deceased was 57 years of age, and was the daughter of the late William Leonard White, of Somerset county, who was the youngest brother of the late Mrs. Adeline White, of Salisbury. Mrs. Frank M. Dick, of Salisbury, is a half-sister.

The body was brought to Salisbury last evening on the 7 o'clock express and taken to the home of Mrs. Carroll's cousin, Mrs. William A. Brewington, Isabella street. Funeral services will be held this morning at 9 o'clock in the St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church by the rector, Rev. David Howard. The pallbearers will be Messrs. Thomas W. Seabreeze, J. T. Parsons, G. W. White, William A. Traylor, William M. Cooper and Dr. E. W. Humphreys. Interment will be at Parsons Cemetery.

JACKSON MEETS ADVISERS.

Republican Candidate For Congress From This District Much Pleased With The Outlook—Is Promised Hearty Support.

Upon invitation of Internal Revenue Collector Goldsborough, who acted in accordance with the wishes of ex-Congressman William H. Jackson, the members of the Republican Campaign Committee in the First district met yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Remont to map out plans for the campaign on the Eastern Shore.

The committee met there because Mr. Jackson will be obliged to return tomorrow to Atlantic City, from whence he came and where Mrs. Jackson is quite ill. She has been at the seaside since last July suffering from nervous prostration. It was proposed to remove her to her home in Salisbury, but owing to her weakened condition it was not thought advisable to risk the journey. Mr. Jackson has been at her bedside most of the time, and consequently had neither the opportunity nor the inclination to look after campaign matters.

He has entrusted the management of affairs entirely to the committee named by the convention, and it was to agree upon a plan of procedure that the committee met there yesterday. It was thought best that there should be no further delay. Mr. Jackson attended the conference, which was devoted almost entirely to detail work.

Those present were: Ex-Congressman William H. Jackson, Collector Phillips Lee Goldsborough, of Dorchester.

Mr. Walter B. Miller, of Wicomico. Mr. Allan G. Towers, of Caroline. Mr. S. P. Townsend, of Kent. Mr. R. R. Walker, of Talbot. Mr. C. C. Mumford, of Worcester. Ex-Senator H. M. McCullough, of Cecil. Ex-Senator A. L. Dryden, of Somerset. Mr. G. Hayden, of Queen Anne.

Each member of the committee was asked to make a report of the conditions in his county and the statements made were more than encouraging. Everywhere the Republicans are united, as they have not been in years, and all are eager for the fray. Herebefore there have been factional differences in some of the counties which interfered materially with the campaign managers. This time the ship is on the other foot. The Republicans are together and the Democrats divided.

In Somerset particularly the outlook has never been so favorable for Republicans as now. The Drydens, the Lankfords, the Dennises and all the other followings are pulling together, and as the ticket is an easy one to vote the county will undoubtedly give one of its old-time Republican majorities.

The representative for the Wilson Law counties have already begun to instruct their voters. Sample ballots with names arranged in every conceivable manner have been printed and schools organized.

It was also decided to block every district in every county with the view of getting out the registered vote. This important work was suggested by Mr. Goldsborough, who tried it when he was chairman of the state committee and achieved excellent results.

No meetings have as yet been arranged for. There will be some in counties where they are most needed, but there will be no lack of aggressive campaign work. Every member of the committee is a leader in his county, and there is a friendly rivalry among them as to who can bring out the greatest percentage of the Republican vote. There is not a laggard in the committee. All are hustlers, especially where they are aroused.

Mr. Jackson believes his election is assured. "Owing to the illness of my wife, I have been unable to pay any attention to the campaign," said he, "but my cause is in good hands and I am not apprehensive of the result." Mr. Jackson is in better health than he has been for some time. The committee will meet again at a later date. It is probable that headquarters will be established either in this city or on the Eastern Shore. If Mr. Jackson is obliged to remain at Atlantic City, Baltimore would furnish the most convenient location.—Friday's Baltimore American.

Salisburyman Captain Of College Football Team.

A special dispatch to the Baltimore News Monday from Rehoboth, Del., says:

The football squad of Western Maryland College is here again, training preparatory to the opening of its season on September 22, when the Westminster boys will meet Gettysburg College at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania.

The squad numbers 19 men, and has been working since September 7. On September 11 it was joined by Dr. M. Morris Whitehurst and Ex-Capt. Walter M. Higgins, who assisted Dr. Whitehurst in coaching. Captain Higgins was the best quarter-back Western Maryland ever developed, and was considered in the selection of the All-Southern football team. He graduated in June. The team loses eight of last year's team, leaving Adkins, Gilson and Sellman of the old squad. The most serious loss, and least expected, was the resignation of J. W. Stayton of Yonkers, N. Y., who was this year's captain. Captain Stayton, who had just finished the sophomore year at Western Maryland, will enter Columbia University, New York, as a junior. Captain Stayton was the best tackle that Western Maryland ever turned out, and was to be counted on as a nucleus in himself on which to build up this year's team. His withdrawal leaves the team in a serious plight. Captain Stayton came to Rehoboth to assist in coaching the team and to give a farewell banquet to the squad and the newly elected captain, Harry C. Adkins, of Salisbury, Md., who played a star game at full-back last year.

Philadelphia Decides His Touring Car Is Too Big.

Mechanics at a big garage in Portland were dazed recently when a young man, accompanied by a chauffeur, drove into the building in a $3,500 touring car and calmly announced that he had decided to cut the car in halves and turn it into a runabout, says a Portland dispatch to the Philadelphia Press. He gave his name as J. E. Caldwell, Philadelphia, and the chauffeur confided to the workmen that his employer had a mint of money.

"I am tired of this big heavy two seater rig," said Caldwell. "There's only two in any way, and we don't need such a big car. We have come all the way from Philadelphia in this, but I guess I'd rather go back in a runabout."

The mechanics went to work, and Mr. Caldwell stayed with them all night, directing their operations. The tourneau was sawed off completely and nothing left but the front seat and the trucks and propelling apparatus. Then an ordinary pine box was placed on the trucks, making the machine look like a tallies rooster.

Letter to Harry Fooks, Salisbury, Md.

Dear Sir: If you could get the exclusive sale of a sweeter sugar for five miles round—1½ as sweet as a pound of usual sugar, and cost no more—your jump at it, wouldn't you?

There wouldn't be 100 lbs of any other sugar sold in a year in your town; you'd gobble the trade; and it wouldn't hurt your whole business.

Devoe is like that among paints; it is twice as sweet as some; it is sweeter than any; not one exception; one gallon is two or one-and-a-half or one-and-three-quarters.

Better than that; paint has to be painted; that costs $2 to $4 a gallon. A gallon saved is $2 to $4 saved in labor, besides in paint.

Even that isn't all. A gallon Devoe put-on wears as long as two gallons put-on at a cost of $2 to $4 a gallon and two gallons more put-on at $2 to $4 a gallon. Count all that. The paint that wears double costs less by 3 gallons of paint and 3 gallons of painting; that's about $15 a gallon for those superfluous gallons.

That's as good as a double sweet sugar, isn't it.

Yours truly

Addicks Appointed Associate Judge.

Governor Warfield Thursday afternoon appointed William H. Adkins, of Eastern, as associate judge of the Second Judicial circuit to succeed the late William R. Martin. The Governor decided to make this appointment only after the most careful consultation and correspondence with the leading men of the county and circuit and after having postponed it for some time in order to allow every phase of the matter to be put before him. The support of Mr. Adkins for the vacant judgeship was general, and was from members of the bar as well as prominent citizens. There was some opposition, however, and many of the regular Democrats of the county were lined up behind J. H. Covington. The whole objection to Mr. Adkins was based on his supposed independence in politics.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedial. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Socialism And "The One Woman."

The Right Reverend Bishop McPaul, of Trenton, N. J., speaking before the fifth annual convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies recently, in mentioning the stand taken against Socialism by Thomas Dixon, Jr., in his new play "The One Woman" said: "The man who begins to delve into the tenets of Socialism becomes exceeding broad not only along political lines but moral lines as well. He invariably mistakes liberty for license. He invariably mistakes the liberalist and the libertine go hand in hand, but it is amazing the number of men who discover they are mistaken after they take up with Socialism."

"Thomas Dixon's play may be called radical, but he is presenting a play with a great moral lesson. He may have used the tricks of the dramatist in painting his picture large, but lawyers always paint their side large, and my friend Dixon was once a lawyer."

"The One Woman" will be presented in Ulman's Open House Saturday night September 29. Prices will be as follows: Rows A to K inclusive $1.00. Rows L to P inclusive 75 cents. Q to W inclusive 50c. Balcony 25 cents. Seats will be on sale at box office on Wednesday, September 26.

HERE'S WHAT'S WANTED.

A Citizen of Salisbury Supplies The Information.

Over half the complaints of mankind originate with the kidneys. A slight touch of backache at first. Twinges and shooting pains in the loins follow.

They must be checked, they lead to graver complications.

The sufferer seeks relief.

Plasters are tried, and liniments for the back.

So called Kidney cures which do not cure.

The long looked-for result seems unattainable.

If you suffer, do you want relief?

Follow the plan adopted by this Salisbury citizen.

J. T. Hayman, bookkeeper, residing at the corner of Chestnut and Park Streets, says: "Having been affected for sometime with an aching in the small of my back and other troubles which indicated disordered kidneys I tried a box of Doan's Kidney Pills from White & Leonard's Drug Store and finding that they gave me great relief, I continued taking them and I consider my condition much improved."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

The Right Man For The Place.

When he stepped ashore after his long and brilliant tour abroad with his bride, Congressman Nicholas Longworth little dreamed that a new and important honor was to be bestowed upon him. After the princely receptions that he and Mrs. Longworth had received in foreign capitals his mind was turned upon the coming campaign in his native state, Ohio, and upon his part as a committee man in the big fight being made by the International Policyholders' Committee for clean management in the New York and Mutual Life Insurance Companies. He had no idea, however, that the Committee, which is made up of governors of states, Supreme Judges, high ecclesiastics, business men and powerful representatives of great labor bodies, was to make him the secretary of its campaign. The responsibility entailed in this office is alone great enough for many men of no common ability, but the Committee, after careful consideration of all possible candidates, selected Nicholas Longworth as just the man for the place. His previous record in state and national politics and in the public affairs of his city, coupled with his strong popularity were the points that won for him this, his latest honor—an honor of no little importance when it is considered that the interests of 1,450,000 policyholders throughout the world are at stake. The routine details of the secretary's office will be attended to by a careful assistant, but all weighty matters will be settled by Congressman Longworth himself. That he will be one of the busiest men in the country this fall goes without saying. He has added new enthusiasm and optimism to the movement, which has already been remarkably successful despite the bitterest opposition from the corruptionist forces in the camps of the New York and Mutual Companies.

When Bernhardt Was Fooled.

Sarah Bernhardt once fell victim to a sudden attack of homesickness while she was traveling in eastern Europe. She announced that she was going back to Paris immediately. Bucharest was the next city on the route and Bernhardt's impresario at once sent the following telegram to his advance agent, who was then in the Roumanian capital: "Wire me immediately as follows: 'Nobility and leaders society preparing magnificent reception. Minister of fine arts will be represented station. Torchlight procession, massed bands. Wire exact hour arrival.'" This telegram was duly sent and the impresario showed it to the actress, who forgot her homesickness in view of the magnificent reception awaiting her. When they arrived there were sixty solemn gentlemen in evening dress, with many decorations, on the platform, there were torches, flags and flowers, massed bands played the "Marseillaise" and the triumphal procession started for the hotel. "Are you not coming with us?" said the impresario to his advance agent, who showed signs of remaining at the station instead of going to the hotel. "No," he said. "I must look after the nobility and leaders of society. I am afraid they will bolt with their dress clothes." But the actress, so the story goes, never guessed that the sixty great men at the station were super hired by the advance agent at 34 cents a head.

Life Saving at Fires.

If lives are in danger at a fire it is a universal rule that life saving takes precedence over fire fighting. If fire escapes are lacking or seriously obstructed all hands devote their entire energies to the work of rescuing by raising ladders, by forcing a passage through smoke filled hallways or by other emergency means. Life nets are spread and held ready for those who have not the nerve to wait for their rescuers. Life saving consumes valuable time which could be applied to advantage in fighting the flames, and the probable necessity for expending this time, governed as it is by many considerations, plays an important part in studies of underwriters. Occasionally pomper ladders or window scaling ladders are used in emergencies for making rescues. These furnish thrilling incidents for the newspapers, but are less efficient, slower and a great deal more dangerous both to the firemen and the rescued than the plain or extension ladders.—Insurance Engineering.

He Obeyed Orders.

Sir Henry Roscoe tells this of the scientist Faraday and his assistant, Sergeant Anderson: "Anderson was the sole assistant to Faraday and of course was utterly uneducated in scientific matters, but he could obey orders, which is not always a characteristic of an educated man. One day Anderson was told by Faraday to keep stirring a pot containing some chemicals over a fire until he returned. Faraday being in the habit of going upstairs to tea in his rooms and coming down directly afterward to work in the laboratory during the evening. For some reason he was prevented from coming down again and forgot that he had told Anderson to watch the pot. On coming down the next morning he found Anderson still stirring the pot, having been at it the whole night and thus carrying out the order which was given him."

Vulgarity No Irish Trait.

There are certain nations that have the quality of vulgarity strongly in the blood, and indeed it seems to testify to a strong and full blooded vitality, a desire for self assertion, and thus we may expect to find vulgarity dogging like a shadow the footsteps of strong, capable and pushing nationalities. But there are certain nations that have been accused of many faults that yet have never been accused of being vulgar. The Irish are a case in point. They have been accused of levity, of undue conviviality, of frivolity, of a tendency to romance, of untrustworthiness, of irresponsibility, but they have never been accused of vulgarity. There lies deep in the Celtic temperament a rich vein of emotion, a strong relish for the melancholy side of life. It is on this that their incomparable sense of humor is based, and it may be said that no one who feels at home with melancholy, who luxuriates in the strange contrast between the possibilities and the performances of humanity, is in any danger of vulgarity, for one of the essential components of vulgarity is a complacent self satisfaction, and if a man is apt to dwell regretfully on what might have been rather than cheerfully upon what is there is but little room for complacency.—A. C. Benson in Atlantic.

Peril of Erring Soldiers.

"Strange as it may seem," said a former colonel of a Manhattan regiment, "members of state military organizations will continue to violate duty calls while knowing full well that by so doing in certain instances they render themselves marked men for life. The fact is probably not generally known among citizens that a dishonorably discharged militiaman is forever barred from holding public office, whether this applies to the municipality, the commonwealth or the federal government. I know of some cases where men with dishonorably discharges have fallen to speedy ruin upon full realization of the serious consequences attaching to conduct unbecoming a soldier."—New York Press.

NOTES OF THE RAILWAYS.

The Latest Innovation Of The Canadian Pacific—Quick Lunch Service En Route

The latest innovation of the Canadian Pacific for the convenience of travelers on its lines is a quick lunch car, and it is said to be proving immensely popular. The new car is a regulation seventy-two foot diner, but instead of being equipped with tables and seats for thirty-six people it is furnished with a lunch counter which will afford accommodation for fifty or more people at one time, just as in the best equipped quick lunch counters on city business streets.

The car is a marvel of economy in space and will be used chiefly for pilgrimages and long distance excursion trains, which carry more people than could possibly find accommodation in the one or two dining cars that are carried by a big train.

The new lunch car is equipped with cold storage and a big cooking range of the familiar grill room hooded type, and behind the counter there is plenty of room for the cooks and attendants. Moreover, the car has a cellar—an unusual equipment for a railroad train. The cellar is only two or three feet deep, but it is well refrigerated, and has accommodation for a quantity of provisions, enough for a two or three days' run. The interior of the counter is fitted up with cold storage facilities for carrying milk and other perishable foods. The water and other coarse supplies are carried in tanks on the roof. An excellent cheap quick lunch is furnished, a la carte, and wherever the car has been used it has been freely patronized.

A smokeless train shed has been invented by Lincoln Bush, chief engineer for the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road. As well as relieving the passengers from the discomfort of breathing the noxious gases, with which the average train shed is filled, it serves the purpose of protecting the ironwork of the structure from disintegration and decay through the attacks made upon it by these same gases. The device has been utilized in the construction of the Lackawanna's new train shed at Hoboken. The shed is an extensive one. It has fourteen tracks under cover and embraces four acres of ground. The shed is much lighter than the average, being a series of arches supported by rows of cast iron columns. To get rid of the smoke and gas Engineer Bush has arranged that exactly over the center of each track there is a concrete smoke duct the whole length of the shed, the walls of which are carried down so that the tops of most of the stacks enter the duct. This is simply a long parallel slot in the roof two and one-half feet wide.

An invention has just been patented in England which, by use of the telephone, promises to avert railway accidents that arise from the inability of the engine driver to see the signals along the line. He will be apprised of danger by audible signals in the engine itself, and these warnings will be given automatically.

The inventor, Frederick Hall of Eastbourne, an electrical engineer as well as an artist whose pictures have often been exhibited in the academy, explains the system in this manner:

Every signal box and engine would be fitted with an ordinary telephonic instrument. The engine would have two wires reaching down to the line. That in the box would be connected with wires to a section of the line which would be electrified whenever the signals were set against the train, but not when the line was clear, the electrification being carried out automatically.

E. T. Dumas of Toledo has invented what is called the twentieth century railroad crossing, and it will be tested by the Toledo terminal within a short time. Mr. Dumas claims for his invention the following points:

Eliminates bumping in crossing an other railroad; does not touch tracks of intersecting railroad; elevating can be put in curves at crossings; no guard rails used, as in the old style of crossings, as bumping is eliminated; it lengthens the life of the crossing; no bolts to work loose; no wear or tear on rolling stock and a number of other improvements over the present crossings. In appearance the new crossing is practically the same as the ones now in use, but there is a vast difference in the class of material used, and the new one is said to be more secure. Pennsylvania railroad officials will witness the test.

The Perverse Golf Ball.

A collector of evidence on the subject maintains learnedly that the golf ball is the most perverse of human institutions. Here is a list of strange lies noted by a follower of the ancient game: In another player's pocket, where it had dropped after traveling 200 yards; in a cow's mouth; on the roof of a clubhouse; behind the glass protecting a painting hanging on a cottage wall; in a clump of daisies, which it so resembled that it was not found for an hour. When it fell in the cow's mouth the frightened animal galloped 276 yards nearer the hole and then restored the ball to its owner. He promptly claimed to have driven it 307 yards and the right to play it from where it lay.

NEW WHITE HOUSE.

President Roosevelt Will Return To A Remodeled Executive Mansion.

President Roosevelt and his family will return to a practically new White House, congress having provided ample means for putting the executive mansion in first class condition, says a Washington dispatch to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Since the president left Washington in July it has been in charge of painters, plasterers, plumbers and other workmen. A new roof has been put on the colonnade by which guests enter the White House from the east.

Colonel Brownell, superintendent of public buildings and grounds, said:

"While outward improvements have been made, the east room and blue, green and red parlors have not been neglected. It was deemed essential in treating the appointments and decorations of these rooms, which are shown to the public, that care should be taken to prevent hostile criticism by visitors. Unlike any other official or private residence in this country, these rooms cannot be shut up to prevent the entrance of air and sunshine. They must always be open and ready for inspection by critical housekeepers of this country and abroad. If such critics found carpets and draperies faded or worn they would not hesitate to condemn the apparent niggardliness."

"People who come to the White House are unanimous in the opinion that there is nothing too good for the president of the United States and his family, and they insist that congress should take the same view of it and make adequate appropriations. Constant care and vigilance is necessary to keep the interior of the mansion looking fresh and up to date in all its appointments."

MARKING FAMOUS TRAIL.

Penny Contributions to Perpetuate Old Santa Fe Route.

School children everywhere will be interested in the announcement that a collection of almost half a million pennies has been made from the school children of the state of Kansas, to be used for the marking of the famous Santa Fe trail. The idea was originated only recently, but already 360,106 children have responded with contributions of from 1 to 5 cents, and the pennies are still pouring in, says the Washington Star.

It is the intention of those in charge of the project to expend the fund in the purchase of posts which will be erected at intervals along the route once traversed by so many thousands of pioneers, before the days of the railroad. The posts will be set as close together as the amount collected will allow, and it is expected that the work will be completed before the end of the summer.

The Santa Fe trail, reaching from Kansas City to Santa Fe, is about 800 miles in length, almost every mile of which was once the scene of some fierce struggle engaged in by the early western settlers with the hostile bands of Indians who half a century ago roamed the plains, wreaking vengeance on the white man who kept driving them farther and farther west. It is a landmark in American history, and the proposition to perpetuate it through the medium of penny contributions was hailed with delight by the school children.

A CHICKEN FEED SQUAD.

Experiments by Government to Make Hens Lay More Eggs.

The hen must perform more work. This is the determination of the agricultural department. Robert R. Slocum, a poultry expert, has been employed to devise means by which chicken raising can be rendered more profitable.

Mr. Slocum will operate at the station near Baltimore, where experiments in hog feeding have been carried on for some time, says a Washington special to the New York World. He will have three pens constructed, accommodating twenty-five hens each. The fowls in one pen will be fed on whole grain and cracked corn, with wet mash. Those in another will be fed the same, except that they will have a dry mash. The chickens in the third pen will be fed from self feeding hoppers and will have food available at all times, so that they can eat as much as they want.

The effect on egg production and fattening will be recorded, and chickens will be bred for three generations, so as to note the effect on their vitality.

Mustache the Correct Thing Now.

The tiny mustache is in again. The smooth faced man has had his day, and the chap with the drooping mustache must chop the droop off and curl up the ends if he wants to be considered smart, says the New York American. Women have ever favored smooth faced men, who themselves are strong promoters of the new fad. A hirsute disguise may prevent their being taken for flunkies, an annoyance to which they constantly are subjected. Especially is this true when they are in evening clothes. Though the work of raising a mustache may be irksome, it is not so hard mentally as the sacrificing of the beard of a lifetime.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 22, 1906.

Republican Ticket.

For 60th Congress of the United States:
HON. WILLIAM H. JACKSON,
of Wicomico County.

Mr. Smith and the Democratic Platform.

It is a peculiarly significant fact that in the platform adopted by the Democratic Convention at Ocean City in July last, no mention was made whatever of the late United States Senator Arthur P. Gorman. Whether we admire Mr. Gorman's political methods or not, it is a universally recognized fact that Senator Gorman was the greatest Democratic leader in Maryland in the last fifty years, and the question naturally arises who is responsible for such a glaring and palpable oversight and omission as the one to which we have referred.

Since the Civil War, Senator Gorman's unquestioned leadership in the Democratic Party has been thorough and absolute, and he completely dominated every act of the organization for years. Even during the time when the fiercest attacks were being made upon him, his followers still clung to him with peculiar tenacity, and during the entire time, he held full control of his own party. With the return of the Democrats to power after the administration of Governor Lowndes he was at once reelected to the United States Senate, and at the time of his death which occurred almost on the very eve of the meeting of the Congressional Convention referred to, he was the acknowledged leader of the Democratic Party in this State. Who then is responsible for an omission of this character? There must have been some wonderfully potent reason for action of this kind, and we fancy it does not take the keen observer very long to detect the causes.

Hon. Thomas A. Smith was nominated at that time for the Sixtieth Congress of the United States and it had been an open secret for many months that there would be no opposition whatever to his renomination, and he and his friends were in absolute control of that convention. As its nominee, he had the right to dictate the platform upon which he was to make his own campaign, and the platform, as a matter of necessity, must have been either inspired or endorsed by him, and the question immediately arises at whose request, this slap at the dead chieftain was made. To those who are familiar with the inner workings of that convention, it does not take long to ascertain the real causes back of the convention's action. The controlling, dominating and towering figure of that gathering was the Honorable John Walter Smith, of Worcester, and his recent attitude toward Mr. Gorman is only too well known by the people of this State.

But, it has repeatedly been asked by the people of the Estern Shore,—how is that he had such weighty influence with the Congressman from Caroline, that he allowed him in the face of all precedents to strike a blow at the memory of the dead Senator. The action of that convention is the action of Hon. Thomas A. Smith, and he must take the responsibility for its work. Surely it can hardly be possible that he is so thoroughly under the control and domination of Governor Smith as to allow the Worcester Countian to wreak his personal vengeance upon the memory of democracy's greatest champion in recent years! But if this is the explanation, the people would like to know it, and if not, then pray tell, what reason was there for the peculiar and unheard-of action of that convention?

Editorial Jottings.

All you have to do is to say: "Have you seen it?"—and we know you are referring to the new pavement.

Virginia and Maryland joined hands Wednesday in an interesting and enthusiastic event, when ground was broken for the Maryland Building at the Jamestown Exposition. The Governors of both States were present, Governor Warfield receiving quite an ovation when he entered the grounds.

Do not fail to register if you are entitled to do so, and be sure your name is on the books. The registration days this year are Tuesdays, October 2 and 9, and the matter will have to be attended to on one of these days. Be sure to do it the first day and then it will be done. Something might prevent you on the second, and then it would be too late. All persons having moved from one district to another must get a transfer certificate and be properly registered in their new District.

The movement to continue the closing of the stores at 7 o'clock until the first of December is a most excellent one, and it is to be hoped that all the stores will agree to it. There is no reason why the continuation of this custom up to the first of December should result in any loss whatever to the merchants, and the people of Salisbury would, we believe, soon accustom themselves to the change. It would give all concerned decidedly more time, and we believe would be beneficial in a number of ways.

Nutters is all right! One of her thrifty sons recently made a valuable capture in the shape of an "eagle"—and for several days very carefully guarded his treasure until he could communicate with the proper parties in the city. He was promptly assured that a snug little sum awaited the arrival of the bird, and with feverish haste he prepared it for shipment, and at once forwarded, with visions of an incoming flood of money. But shades of the mighty Thalia, how soon did the Utopian dream vanish! The "eagle" was a fish-hawk.

It seems too bad that all the street excavations for Salisbury could not have been made at the same time. For the third time in about as many months, the same streets have been torn up,—this time we are glad to say for the purpose of putting in the sewer to carry off the water from the streets that are to be paved. A large amount of time and labor could have been saved had all this work been done at the same time, and the trenches made large enough to accommodate the water, gas and sewer pipes which have recently been put in. It is, of course, we will admit, the same old story,—it is easy enough for us to see how it ought to have been done after it is all over.

If the young ladies of town desire to know their fate, they should consult a certain bachelor of town who has, we have been informed by the proverbial bird, made a list of all the members of the fair sex who are bordering on "old maidhood". The list contains the names of just one hundred "eligibles", but horror of horrors, we are informed that the bachelor actually says that practically none of them has the "ghost of a show." He has very evidently given the matter very profound thought, and is an unquestioned authority on the subject. The publication of the list, with the annotations of the author as to the personal qualifications and characteristics of the ladies in question, would make highly interesting reading matter, and would, we apprehend, be greatly in demand by a certain class of the public.

Completing Plans For Big Gathering.

Maryland's Fifteenth Convention of the Christian Endeavor Union, which will be held at Salisbury, October 16th to 18th, inclusive, is expected to be "the best yet." No pains or expense are being spared to make this convention not only a great rejuvenating force to work throughout the whole State, but a veritable "Season of Refreshing" to everyone in attendance.

Rev. W. S. Phillips, pastor of the Salisbury Methodist Protestant Church, was in Baltimore this week in consultation with the officers of the Union, and the plans for the success of the Convention were about completed.

The first session of the Convention proper will be held on Tuesday morning, October 16th, beginning at quarter before nine o'clock, but this will be preceded by a sunrise prayer meeting at half past six o'clock the same morning.

The other two days of the Convention will also be ushered in with a prayer meeting at the same hour.

Mayor Harper will deliver the address of welcome at the Tuesday morning session, and "Six Subjects of Vital Interest" will be discussed by W. H. G. Belt, W. C. Perkins, Rev. G. W. Miller, D. D., C. E. Ecker and R. A. Harris. Rev. D. L. Greenfield, D. D., of Chertown, Md., will deliver the address on the Convention theme.

Tuesday afternoon will be given over to helpful conferences on Missionary work, county unions, temperance, good citizenship and personal work, preceded with what is planned to be a practical presentation of each subject in addresses by: Amos R. Wells, of Boston, W. M. Robinson, Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Ph. D., and Rev. Edgar T. Read. Tuesday evening there will be two great simultaneous meetings. The program will include addresses by Rev. D. M. Buchanan, of Baltimore, Mr. Amos R. Wells, of Boston, on "Wanted Leaders" and Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Ph. D., of Washington, D. C., on "That Boy and Girl of Yours."

Wednesday will begin with the early morning service before breakfast, the Convention re-convening at eight forty-five in the Methodist Protestant Church, with an address and conference on Junior work at the Presbyterian Church, beginning at half past ten.

Amos R. Wells, of Boston, will be the speaker and conduct the conference at this meeting. The features of Endeavor work discussed at the Methodist Protestant Church should prove of practical benefit. This will be a meeting "For Inspiration" with addresses by B. A. Abbott, Mr. James O. Moul and others.

The session at the Church in the afternoon will include an address by Mr. W. O. Atwood on "The Quarter Century Memorial," and will adjourn in time for the Junior rally at half past three in the Opera House. The Juniors of Salisbury and vicinity are now in training for this service, and Amos R. Wells will give an illustrated object talk on "Cameras and Heads" that will prove helpful to all.

Simultaneous meetings in the Church and Opera House have been arranged again for the evening, with addresses by Rev. Geo. F. Pentecost, D. D., of Northfield, Mass., Rev. Jas. I. Vance, D. D., of Newark, N. J., Rev. Kerr Boyce Tupper, D. D., of New York and others.

On Thursday, October 18, the sunrise meeting at 6.30 opens the day. The closing session will begin at 8.45, and Rev. Jas. I. Vance, D. D., will sum up the work and inspiration of these days in an address on "Our High Calling."

The reports of committees, election and installation of officers, awarding of banners, etc., will bring the convention to a close about 12 o'clock.

After the Convention arrangements have been made at the nominal charge of 25 cents for the round trip, to take the entire party on Thursday afternoon to Ocean City, where "The grand combination of the bracing salt air from the Atlantic Ocean, with the breezes from the Pine Forests of Worcester county, give the atmosphere—dry, electrical, ozonized—that which revives, recuperates, strengthens and invigorates." Returning to Salisbury a Camp Fire Meeting has been arranged for Thursday night. This meeting will be strictly informal, with no set program, but consisting of bright music, impromptu talks, and a general good social time.

The departure from Salisbury will be made Friday morning at the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway at 7.45 o'clock.

A rehearsal of all music of the Convention will be given in the Opera House Friday preceding the week of the Convention. To help defray the expenses of the Convention, a charge of 25 cents will be made to the rehearsal.

Mr. Carey has been in failing health for more than a year from a complication of diseases. He is survived by four children—Mrs. Daniel B. Maddox, Mrs. Arch. W. Dennis, Messrs. Samuel C. and Elijah W. Carey. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at his late home; the interment was in Parsons Cemetery.

—Miss Nellie N. Leatherbury, of Salisbury, and Mr. William Hopkins, of Baltimore, were married Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. L. T. McLain, 2802 St. Paul street, Baltimore. Rev. Mr. Dean, an Episcopal clergyman, officiated. The ceremony was witnessed by a few relatives of the contracting parties, among them Miss Hopkins, of Harford county, sister of the groom; Mrs. McLain, Mrs. J. H. Dashiell, Misses Rebecca and Ella McLain, of Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. Otis S. Lloyd, of Salisbury.

—After having been tied up at Milas, on the Wicomico River, for nearly 12 hours during a furious gale, the steamer Enoch Pratt, of the Wicomico River route of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railroad company, arrived at her pier in Baltimore at 8 o'clock Saturday night, 14 hours late. The boat had six ladies, five men and much freight on board. Officers of the steamer said upon their arrival, that a furious windstorm struck them about 5 o'clock Friday afternoon, and that the passengers were given the shaking up of their lives. After making a number of the river stops, it was thought advisable to tie up and await an abatement of the storm. The passengers were made entirely comfortable during the storm and endorsed the action of the steamer's officers in not leaving harbor in the face of the gale, which was one of the most severe of the season down the Bay.

Lacy Thoroughgood's Fall Clothes For Men Are Ready. Hundreds of New Fall Suits. Hundreds of New Fall Overcoats. Hundreds of New Fall Raincoats.

Lacy Thoroughgood's Fall Clothes for men and young men are ready. To every man who wants thoroughly stylish, good-fitting, good wearing clothes this announcement means much. Thoroughgood's two stores in Salisbury are just running over with new fall goods to wear, and as a result Thoroughgood has clothes that in style, in fit, in workmanship and wearability are not surpassed by any produced in America. Thoroughgood challenges contradiction of this statement. To any one who questions it we have but to show our goods to prove our point. We know that the work put into our clothes is the kind that counts. We know the clothes will wear well, and that the fit will last as long as the goods. We are so sure that every garment we sell is what it should be, that we guarantee it for satisfactory service and stand ready to make right any defect that comes to light. But in addition to the style and fit and wear to our garments, the advantage of lower prices than those of any other store. We buy every dollar's worth of goods for spot cash, which means ten per cent lower prices to you and us. Now do a little hard thinking when you get ready to buy your new Fall Suit or Overcoat or Raincoat.

THE FAIR DEALING CLOTHIER

—In the presence of Governor Warfield, of Maryland, Governor Swanson, of Virginia, a distinguished gathering of official representatives, men and women of the two sister Commonwealths, officers of the United States Army and Navy and a large concourse of residents of the surrounding country, the cornerstones of the Maryland and Virginia buildings at the Jamestown Exposition were laid Wednesday. It was a tri-State and quadruple celebration, as ground was broken for the Missouri building and the headquarters of the Travelers Protective Association.

—"The Triumph of Betty" which played in Uiman's Opera House last Friday night was the best show that has played in Salisbury this season. Every character was well taken, and Miss Nellie Callahan, as Betty, was particularly interesting. Unfortunately, there was only a small audience present. It is said that one cause of this was that the posters on the bill boards tickled the fancy of the play-loving Salisburyans so little that they at once judged that the show was no good. In other words, a show that wants a good house in Salisbury should take the cue and advertise heavy—advertise heavy with pictures, no matter whether they have anything to do with the play, but just be sure that there are plenty of pictures.

—The Wicomico High School year book, "The Tatler," for 1906 has just been issued from the press of The Courier, and is a neat specimen of the printer's art. The work is handsomely bound and contains a large number of half tone photographs and pen drawings. There are nearly 140 pages in the book, a small part of which are advertisements. The book was delayed in getting out, owing to the late date at which the copy was received by the printers. The school is not entirely to blame for this delay, as they were hindered considerably in preparing copy and getting the cuts made by unavoidable circumstances. "The Tatler" sells for $1.25, and is a handsome souvenir of the class of 1906. This is the third volume to be issued by the graduating class of this school.

—In speaking of the Great Council of the Red Men of the United States which met at Niagara Falls last week, the Niagara Falls Gazette has the following to say of the Maryland delegation: Among the various state delegations in attendance at the Red Men's convention, Maryland doubtless has the largest and jolliest of them all, there being 29 in the party at the Temperance House, including Great Representatives, Past Great Representatives, Past Great Sachems, and their ladies. Prominent among the Maryland delegation is Past Great Sachem R. K. Stephenson, who is chaperoning the party and seeing that they have a good time. As a mark of respect and appreciation for his efforts, the members of the Maryland delegation, Past Grand Sachem M. F. Magrow, on behalf of the delegation, on Wednesday presented Mr. Stephenson at the Temperance House with a handsome scarf pin.

—Mr. L. J. Sweet, factory representative of the Bennett Piano Co., Warren, Pa., is in Salisbury to dispose of three New High Grade Pianos, which in order to close them out quickly, will be sold at factory prices—small payment down or cash. These pianos sell at retail throughout the United States for $365, $425 and $500. For 14 days only will the factory prices of $218, $297 and $368 stand. A strong guarantee will be given with each instrument. This is an opportunity for anyone to get a strictly high grade piano at a low price. For information write to L. J. Sweet, P. O. Box 385, Salisbury, Md.

—St. Paul's Episcopal Church was burned in the terrible fire that visited Berlin, along with the Presbyterian Church, the Methodist parsonage, a large factory and numerous homes. The Presbyterians have finished a very handsome church, the Methodists have a modern parsonage and St. Paul's church is nearing completion. The cost was more than the architect contemplated and Mr. A. Wyatt, the builder, failed in his contract. The Vestry out of their hearts, released his home, in Ocean City, consequently have had to raise more money than they anticipated. Hon. William H. Jackson, of Salisbury, recently gave $300 to assist in rebuilding St. Paul's Church.—Berlin Herald —Thursday was the Hebrews' New Year's Day and the stores in Salisbury owned by that sect were closed all day in honor of the occasion. The day was observed as a holiday by all Jewish circles, both reformed and orthodox. It is one of the most important Jewish ecclesiastical festivals, and the rites and ceremonies as followed out in the synagogues in the cities are historically the most correct of any known. The music used was put in written form way back in the Middle Ages. The day began at sundown Wednesday and ended at sundown Thursday. The beginning of the new year was announced in all of the Jewish synagogues in the cities by the blowing of the ram's horn at 6.08 o'clock Wednesday evening.

—Mr. and Mrs. Woodland C. Disharoon gave a party Monday evening in honor of the eighteenth birthday of their daughter, Miss Gertrude. Those present were: Misses Mamie, Maude and Eva Figgs, Eva Richardson, Margaret and Emma Ingersoll, Ola Holloway, Cecile Sturgis, May Hawkins, Vivian Robertson, Burith Horsemann, Emma Scott, Levinia Heath; Messrs. John Richardson, Herman Hastings, John Parker, Henry Gregory, William Sullivan, Harold Hawkins, Barton Mumford, Harold Ingersoll, Howard Dryden, James Sturgis, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Livingston. At ten o'clock refreshments were served, consisting of ices and bon bons.

Vulgarity and the Sexes. Vulgarity is certainly commoner among men than among women, and, indeed, when a woman is vulgar she is apt to display the quality in high perfection. The reason why it is rare among women is that the emotional nature is stronger among women than among men, and thus where men are ambitious, fond of displaying power, anxious to carry out designs, desirous of recognition, women are sympathetic, tender, affectionate, subtle; they value relations with others more than performances, they encourage and console, because they are interested in the person who desires sympathy more than in the aims which he nourishes. If one's main interest in life is in the personalities that surround one, one is not likely to be tempted by vulgarity, because the essence, again, of vulgarity is that it tends to affix an altogether fictitious value to material things. A man who pursues wealth, comfort, power, position, is always in danger of vulgarity.—A. C. Benson in Atlantic.

Calling Cards For Children. Calling cards for children of two or three years are now used. They are small and are lettered exactly the same as their mother's. Those for little girls are an inch and a half in width and two inches and a quarter in length, while for a small boy they should be only one and a quarter inches in width and two and a quarter inches long.

A Punktown Hostelry And the Honest Man

WHEN the stranger with grassy tresses in his tresses was shown the last room back on the second floor of the Punktown hostelry and saw what sort of a stall he was to be bedded down in for the night, he backed vigorously and said in the most offensive manner he could summon:

"Look at that chair! Liable to fall down even if I hang my shirt on it. The easel pitcher is fatally cracked, and the bowl has a scallion as big as a summer squash. The carpet is full of holes and dirty, and so much quicksilver has been rubbed off the back of the looking glass that I look as if I had the smallpox. The cover on the washstand has been on there for two long, hard, busy, dirty years, and the bed looks like a swagback horse with a thin blanket over it. If I were to try to sleep on that bed I would arise in the morning looking like a waffle. The wall paper is off in large patches—in fact, it is off in a bunch. The ceiling is cracked, and a yard or so of plastering is liable to fall and smother me in the landslide at any moment. That table is really only a one night stand, and you couldn't write on it if you had two men standing and holding it."

By this time the porter was very tired and angry, so he cried out in his vexation:

"That's right—kick, kick! But I'll bet a big dollar you're not used to any better than this at home."

"Young man," said the stranger in Punktown, "your bet is begging for takers. Your proposition is too much of a pinch to bet on. Things at home are as bad as this, if not worse. But what does a man go away from home for if not for a change of scene? I hoped I would find something comfortable and clean and perhaps even elegant at a hotel."

Moved to tears of compassion by reason of the man's honesty, the porter surreptitiously escorted him to Parlor A, where things were much better, because the wash pitcher had a shallow crack in it, and there was an upholstered chair—Strickland W. Gillilan in Judge.

King's Duty and King's English. Exhibited in the window of a watchmaker's shop in Manchester is a faded letter of Nelson's. It tells an old, old story, reminding us of the time when, to defend the shores of their native land, Englishmen had to beg and implore for the bare material means to do it. It was so in the days of the armada and in Nelson's day. It has been so in our own. The letter reads:

"My Dear Sir—If you will order the Agamemnon to be supplied with 200 fathoms of three inch rope and 100 fathoms of two inch rope purchases will be rove to drag the guns. We have not a fathom of rope in the ship. If you could spare us two threefold blocks and two twofold blocks I am to be much obliged. Yours most faithfully, HORATIO NELSON."

Evidently in his care of the king's ship the national hero was at the time somewhat careless of the king's English.—London Chronicle.

No Hindrance. "Why do you always persist in saying you will not be a candidate for office?"

"Because," answered Senator Sorghum, "it sounds properly modest and does not in the least interfere with my chances in case a nomination wants to come my way."—Washington Star.

Ambition.

When Margaret Green was about seven— Her plans and her specifications Of the man who should share all her joy and her care

Were accurate, nice calculations. Miss Margaret said, "The man that I wed Must be tall and aesthetic and curving. The popular rage on the matinee stage. With a name like Montgomery Irving."

When Margaret grew to about twenty— A sweet, sentimental-like siren— She yearned for the fame of an author whose name

Was Tennyson Keats Shelley—Byron. In a year or so more—she was then twenty-four—

It was Margaret's dearest ambition To marry a Pole with less money than soul— Bassclefsky, the famous musician.

Ten years—how they fly!—went glimmering by. And Margaret came to be thirty. She still was a miss in her singular bias. But no longer coquettish and flirty. Three more years of her life, and Margaret's a wife.

After all of her plannin' and guessin', Nor does she regret that the name on the sign Of the store says "Schmidt, Delicatessen."—Franklin P. Adams in Woman's Home Companion.

A Clock Run by Man Power. He was a fine old man who had been to South America, but who was devoting his old age to acting as the works of the clock in the piazza in Capri. It was he who rang those many, many bells we heard and puzzled over. Some forty rapid, high pitched bells at 12:42, seven bells of deeper tone at 3:06, and so on.

Adelaide had asked Archangel, the old man's son, to explain these seeming irregularities and had learned that the bells were only intended to approximate the hour; that his father was old and occasionally forgot and rang too little or too much; also that he was but a man and that hunger sometimes came gnawing at his vitals at, say, 11:45, whereupon he rang for 12 o'clock and wandered home to his spaghetti.

His appetite also accounted for occasional delays in the bell for 1 o'clock. Suppose Archangel's mother was late in the cooking of the midday meal, could his father return to the piazza without his luncheon? And what does a quarter of an hour matter after all? In Capri it is truly dolce far niente.—Scribner's.

Ingersoll on Napoleon. A little while ago I stood by the grave of the great Napoleon—a magnificent tomb of gilt and gold. I saw him take an empire by the force of his genius. I saw him upon the frightful field of Waterloo, when chance and fate combined to wreck the fortunes of the former king, and I saw him at St. Helena with his hands crossed behind him gazing out at the sad and solemn sea. I thought of the orphans and widows he had made, of the tears that had been shed for his glory, and of the only woman who had ever loved him pushed from his heart by the cruel hand of ambition, and I said I would rather have been a French peasant and worn wooden shoes. I would rather have been a poor peasant with my loving wife by my side, knitting as the day died out in the skies, with my children upon my knees and their arms about me. I would rather have been that man and gone down to the tongueless silence of the dreamless dust than to have been that impartial impersonation of force and murder known as Napoleon the Great.—Woman's Home Companion.

Monkey as Nurse. "Monkeys make poor nurses," said a zoo keeper. "When they live near a stream of water and one of the colony falls sick they invariably toss him overboard. They don't want him around. His sighs and groans annoy them so. 'Pest! Off the dock!'"

"Here in captivity I have to remove at once a sick monkey from his comrades' reach. Otherwise they would soon kill him. When they can, well monkeys take a strange joy in tormenting an invalid. They bite the end of his tail, they drag him about, and they pinch him. Finally, when he dies, as many as can find room sit on his body, close together, very solemn, as though engaged in some religious rite."

Fixed Bayonets. It is said that during the siege of Ladysmith in the Boer war the assault column of British, advancing in thick darkness, climbed up an almost precipitous wall. Once or twice they were faintly challenged. At last a Boer recognized them and shouted to the sentry to fire on the "verdonderde rooienks!" As the crest was gained the fire broke out. A few of the attackers began to reply, but they were stopped, and the voice of the commanding officer was heard to give the order, "Fix bayonets!" That there were no bayonets did not matter. The men, taking up the cry, rushed on the Boer gunners, who fled at the thought of the cold steel.

No Guarantee. A sporting paper recommends a certain way of avoiding the bites of a dog, however savage. All one has to do is to stand perfectly still and hold one's hand out. The dog, says the writer, will take the hand in his mouth, but will not bite it. But what guarantee have we that the dog knows this?—London Globe.

"For Sale Cheap"

By C. H. SUTCLIFFE
Copyright, 1906, by C. H. Sutcliffe

"Why don't you fellows," wrote Burt Henderson to young Weaver and Knowlton of Columbia college, "hire an auto some Saturday and come down here to see me? The old folks will make you welcome, and my sister Annette, of whom you have heard me speak, is home now. Arrange to stay over Sunday with us. We'll have a bully time."

Young Henderson was still living with his parents at their country house on Long Island and had been chummy with the two men during his days in college. The invitation was alluring. Each of the sophs had taken lessons in running an auto, the Long Island roads were known to be good, and at the end of the run was a handsome girl, as they knew by a photograph they had seen.

It was a rare chance to get out of town and do a lot of other things besides, and on a certain Saturday morning of a certain June an auto might have been seen speeding two rather hilarious young men up the island roads. The garage man had been particular when they went to hire the machine. They confessed to being timid about speed, but felt perfectly confident on all other points, and after displaying their knowledge in a practical way he had placed them in charge.

The destination was thirty miles from Brooklyn, but at a steady jog this might have been covered by noon had not something happened to prevent.

As they were passing through Jamaica, the journey only just begun, a handsome young lady emerged from a house, stepped into a steam runabout and, acting as her own chauffeur, started off at a fast clip.

"By George, but did you ever see anything to compare with her?" gasped young Weaver, who was noted as impressionable.

"Handsomest girl I ever saw," was the reply.

"Did you notice that look she threw at me?"

"It was meant for me."

"You go on! Say, I'd give all I expect to get from my grandmother's estate to know that girl. What eyes! What hair! As her eyes looked into mine for an instant I—"

"She was looking into mine, and there was a roguish, defiant look in them as if she dared us to follow her."

"By George, but come to think of it, we ought to follow her anyhow. No woman has any business driving a machine. Suppose a tire comes off or anything breaks. She may meet a train at a crossing, run into a ditch or have something else happen. If we are on hand we can assist!"

More speed was put on to decrease the distance and the young lady looked back as she heard the chugging of the big machine.

"She's surely flirting with me!" gurgled young Weaver as he clasped his hands.

"You dolt!" replied young Knowlton. "She doesn't know that you are on earth. Isn't she skimming along pretty fast?"

"Seems to me she's let out a link. This is faster than we ever drove before, but we've got to take chances or lose that girl."

The girl in the runabout had several ideas on the subject in hand. One was that the two young men behind her were new to the sport. Another was that they had left the direct road in order to follow her. The third was that she would be revenged on them. She rattled along at a high speed for a mile and could see without turning her head too much that the big machine was wobbling badly and being driven by a trembling hand. On coming to where the highway separated to unite a quarter of a mile farther on, she chose the roughest way. The lightweight runabout seemed to sail over the humps and ruts and washouts, while the larger machine had to slow down and bump its way along.

"If we lose her I'll commit suicide," said young Weaver as he hung on for dear life and grew paler every minute.

"Don't you fear that I will lose her," grimly replied Knowlton. "This is rather bumpy, but I'll stand ten miles of it for another look from those blue eyes."

"Her black eyes, you mean?"

"I mean blue. If I ever take you out into the country again may I be hanged!"

"Ditto. Because a handsome girl takes it into her head to flirt with me a bit!"

But the rest was lost in the bumping. The girl could have dropped them on that bit of road, but she made no effort. When they debouched into the main road she was in sight and jogging along at an easy pace. She had led them seven or eight miles out of their road before they realized it. Each was wishing the other would throw out a hint about abandoning the chase when the runabout turned it to a highway that was not macadamized. It was heavy with sand, and the auto groaned and complained as it made the steep hills.

"If she wasn't the best looking girl I ever saw," began Knowlton.

"If she hadn't dared us to follow her!" replied Weaver.

Then there was a scream ahead of them, and a tire was seen to leave one of the wheels of the runabout and the machine to come to a standstill.

"Ye gods, but what luck for me!" whispered Weaver.

"Say, now, if you don't let me do all the talking I'll break your neck!" replied Knowlton.

When the auto came up, the girl was down on her feet inspecting damages. It was easy to see that the machine must be got home by some motive power beyond its own. There were too many stony spots on the highway to run it on the rim of the damaged wheel. Mr. Knowlton at once introduced himself and companion and tendered their services.

They found the young lady even better looking than they had given her credit for. She was not at all embarrassed over the meeting. She was chatty and vivacious, and in five minutes' talk she made them realize that she knew twice as much about an auto as they did. One thing the boys forgot until afterward. They gave their names to her, but she did not reciprocate. It was decided that the damaged machine must be drawn to the side of the road and sent for later on, while the auto was to convey the girl to her home, a distance of fourteen or fifteen miles. Why she had gone out of her way she didn't explain, and the boys didn't ask.

"As I am used to autos I shall ask the privilege of acting as chauffeur," announced the young lady as she was ready to get in.

This seemed like a reflection on the abilities of the young men, and they were hesitating over it when Miss Blank took the matter in hand. There was room for one of them beside her, and both jumped for the place at once. There was a struggle, but shame soon came to both and they humbly climbed into the rear seat and glared at each other and mentally threatened murder at the first opportunity. They soon discovered that the young lady was no vain boaster. She turned the machine about with a whizz and started off at a speed that had not continued for five minutes when young Knowlton felt compelled to lean forward and say:

"This is certainly exhilarating, but do you think it altogether safe?"

"This isn't twenty miles an hour," was the reply as the machine sailed around a curve on three wheels.

Three minutes later Mr. Weaver, whose face was growing as white as chalk and his teeth clicking together, managed to make the young lady understand that he was troubled with palpitation of the heart at times.

"Best remedy for it in the world," she replied as the machine struck a road as level and hard as a floor, and she increased the speed.

The young men instinctively clasped hands and said farewell to each other. They didn't dare reach over and twist the wheel out of the driver's hands, and yet they realized that a calamity must soon happen. A word from her might have prevented what followed, but she was intent on the road ahead.

Of a sudden, as they came upon a long strip of hazel bushes, both stood up and jumped for it and landed among the bushes with a crash.

The auto did not stop. If the girl missed them she was not concerned. They picked themselves up after a while and limped out to the road in time to make inquiries of a passing team. They walked two miles and then hired a farmer to drive them six more, always inquiring for an auto driven by a girl. At length, as they drew near a manor house embosomed in a grove, young Weaver exclaimed:

"Say, now, it's dollars to cents that this is the house we were bound for—the Henderson place!"

"And if that isn't the young lady we have been chasing may I never eat again!" replied Knowlton as he nodded at a girl on the veranda.

In front of the house was an auto tied to the fence with a rope. It was their auto. Hanging in a conspicuous place was a sign reading, "For Sale Cheap." The young men did not stop to ask any questions. If their friend Burt was home they did not want to see him. If his sister Annette was home they did not want to see her. All they wanted was to get back to New York by the shortest route.

Why Thunder Sours Milk.

To many persons the curdling of milk in a thunderstorm is a mysterious and unintelligible phenomenon. Yet the whole process really is simple and natural. Milk, like most other substances, contains millions of bacteria.

The milk bacteria that in a day or two under natural conditions would cause the fluid to sour are peculiarly susceptible to electricity. Electricity insinuates and invigorates them, affecting them as alcohol, cocaine or strong tea affects men. Under the current's influence they fail to work with amazing energy, and instead of taking a couple of days to sour the milk they accomplish the task completely in a half hour. With an electric battery it is easy on the same principle to sour the freshest milk.

A Timely Hint.

One housekeeper has won a name for herself by canning pineapple and sweet apples together. The pineapples were canned early in the season and added to a very rich syrup with halves or quarters of sweet apples cooked tender. They are a great improvement over quinces and sweet apples.

Your Heart

May Be Weak. One Person in Four Has a Weak Heart.

One of the surest signs of a weak heart is shortness of breath after exercise. Your heart is not able to pump the blood fast enough to your lungs.

Some of the other symptoms of Heart Trouble are: Fainting or Weak Spells; Dry Cough; Swelling of Feet and Ankles; Cold Feet or Hands.

No one can afford to allow a weak heart to go without medicine, because weak heart means poor circulation, and poor circulation means weak lungs, stomach, liver, kidneys, etc.

If, therefore, you suspect heart trouble, begin taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. The Heart Cure will do you good, as it is a splendid tonic for the blood and nerves, and will revitalize your entire system.

Finally, remember, Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold under a guarantee that the first bottle will do you good.

If it doesn't—your money back.

"I was afflicted with heart trouble for three years. I would be apparently all right, and without a moment's warning would fall as though shot. The attacks were frequent, and a terrible dread possessed me, as I never knew when or where, nor under what conditions I would be attacked, and whether I would survive them. I consulted and was treated by some of the most eminent physicians of the state. Not finding relief from this source, began taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and began to improve at once. I used ten bottles, which entirely cured me, as I have not had an attack for five years."—MRS. JOHN DRESBACK, Lehigh, Pa.

A family name, Hill, who recently moved into town, are objects of much sympathy. Five of the family are stricken with typhoid fever.

Sensations in Delmar are on the increase. The Delmar "News" Man with his truck rake is still at work. This time he made a stir amongst the women. It is enough to make one think that we live in Heathendom, as we are told in the News columns that there is not enough religion in Delmar to white wash a chicken coop.

This section, and the farmers have had a much larger yield than was anticipated. Packers paid from 10 to 17 cents per basket during the season.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lankford entertained a number of their friends Sunday evening at their home. The occasion was in honor of their daughter, Miss Viola, who left Monday to attend school at St. Mary's.

The largest yield of tomatoes reported this season was grown by Prof. Levin F. Hoolbrook, near Royal Oaks, Md. who claims to have something less than an acre of land in cultivation and has picked nearly 500 % baskets from the same. If any one can beat this or do as well, Prof. Hoolbrook would like to hear from them.

Judge Ira E. Davis and wife, who were to have left last week for Hammond, La., did not go until today of this week. The Judge wishes to thank all those he met for their kindness and the social manner in which he was received while on his sojourn here.

He expects to visit White Haven again next spring. He was a very congenial gentleman, and all regret to have him leave. He was a man of wide experience and was willing always to help those in financial need. He will be much missed through this section.

A surprise party was given Mrs. Anna White, of Clara, last Saturday night in honor of her son, Mr. George White. A wagon load of ladies and gentlemen left this place. One gentleman had the misfortune to fall out the wagon, and was very much disfigured when he arrived at the party, having his shoulder partly dislocated, his nose skinned about five inches, also one eye blackened and the condition of his wearing apparel much begrimed. Otherwise all reported a very pleasant time.

Roy Bradley, who has lately been at the Peninsula General Hospital, Salisbury, is now visiting his aunt, Mrs. C. H. Cooper.

Court Convenes Next Week.

The Circuit Court for Wicomico County will convene Monday morning at 10 o'clock, and it is probable that Judge Charles F. Holland will be the only judge upon the bench. Chief Judge Page has been quite unwell for sometime, and is not expected here at all, though Judge Lloyd will probably join Judge Holland later in the week.

The docket shows nineteen appearances, eight appeals, forty-one trials, eight recognizances, thirteen criminal appearances, and five criminal continuances.

The usual number of removed cases have made their appearance upon the docket, both Somerset and Worcester counties furnishing quite a number. Among the important cases from Worcester to be tried is one brought by Miss Catharine Disharoon against the New York Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad Company for damages by reason of the death of her father, who was killed at the Pocomoke City draw bridge. Mr. Disharoon was employed by the company as bridge tender, and it is alleged that he had set his signals against the train, which were disregarded, and in saving the train from plunging through the draw, he was killed.

Another Worcester case, is the suit of John R. Gibbons against the firm of Scarborough, Onley and Company, of Girdlestone, who it is alleged, was dismissed from the employ of the company in April 1905, contrary to his alleged contract with them.

In another removed case from the same county, Lillian J. Johnson and Olive C. Johnson, infant children of the late Wilmer M. Johnson, who was well known in Salisbury, have filed a caveat to the will and are attempting to secure what otherwise would have been their portion of his estate.

There are practically no cases of importance from Wicomico county, except the trials of the five men who are now in jail on the charge of burglary in connection with the safe-cracking at the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway station a few months ago, in case they should be indicted by the Grand Jury. Nearly the entire time of the coming term of Court will be occupied by cases coming from other counties of the Circuit.

Fatally Wounded in Fight On Train.

William Williams, colored, of Crisfield, died in the Peninsula General Hospital last Saturday night about 10 o'clock as the result of a pistol shot wound received in a fight Friday night, between Berlin and Salisbury, while returning from Ocean City to Crisfield on a negro excursion.

According to reports, the excursion was about the most disorderly ever run to Ocean City. There were about 15 car loads of the passengers, and the negroes were acting so disorderly that the train officials did not take much notice of the shooting. The train continued to Salisbury and was almost to Princess Anne when the conductor was told of the serious condition of the wounded man.

Williams was taken off the train at Princess Anne and placed under the care of Dr. Lankford, of that place. The physician ordered him to be brought to the Peninsula General Hospital, and this was done on the next north bound express. An operation was performed by Drs. J. McF. Dick and Lankford, and it was found that the negro's entrails had been pierced in 13 places by the bullet. The wounds were stitched up the best that could be done, but the man died about 24 hours later. Before he died, Williams stated to Coroner William A. Trader that someone on the train tried to rob him and that when he hit the robber, the robber shot him. He said he did not know the name of the man that shot him.

A jury of inquest was summoned Sunday morning. After taking some testimony, the jury adjourned till Tuesday evening, when it rendered the verdict that Williams came to his death by a shot from a pistol in the hands of some unknown person.

Another negro by the name of Underwood, who lives in Salisbury, received severe scalp wounds in a fight on the train, and was treated at the Hospital.

Steamboat Officers Threaten To Strike Monday If Wages Are Not Raised. Would Viciously Affect Wicomico River Line.

Unless some satisfactory agreement is reached within the next few days between the managements of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company, the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Railway Company, the New York and Baltimore Transportation Company and the Philadelphia and Baltimore Steamboat Company (the Ericsson Line) and many of the captains and other officers of the big transportation lines who have demanded an increase in their wages, one of the most serious terrors of shipping ever known in Baltimore is threatened. Seventy masters and lower officers of the lines named, it was stated, tendered the resignations on Friday last, to take effect on Monday next, October 1, and it is said that other masters of vessels are ready to throw their fortunes with the men who have virtually issued their ultimatum to the big lines which control 90 per cent. of the shipping along the Light street piers.

Business men who have heard of the threatened embargo on local transportation along the Light street piers state that such a condition would be far-reaching and must of necessity be attended with the most disastrous results. Though the captains who have made the demands for an increase of their wages refuse to be quoted, officials of Rescue Mission, No. 14, the local branch of the American Association of Masters and Pilots of Steam Vessels, stated that the men have issued what was virtually their ultimatum, and will insist upon their demands being accepted.

Should the demands of the men be refused on Monday next their resignations it is stated, will become effective.

The wages asked for are: On Chester River and Choptank routes, masters, $100; first officers, $60, and second officers, $45 per month. Choptank River routes, masters, $115; first officers, $70, and second officers, $50 per month. For routes below Cove Point, masters, $125; first officers, $80, and second officers, $60 per month, and for licensed quartermasters $35 per month.

About 35 steamers would be affected by the threatened tieup and a paralysis along the Light street wharves second only to the great ice embargo of two winters ago.

The lines which would be affected are the Claiborne, or railway division, of the Baltimore Chesapeake and Atlantic; the Piantanika River route, the Choptank River route, the Wicomico route, the Nantuxet, the Pocomoke, the Potomac and the Chester Rivers.

The Jackson House in Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh W. Jackson will occupy for the fall and winter the residence of Mr. Jackson's father, Ex-Governor E. E. Jackson, at the south-west corner of Cathedral and Richmond streets, opposite Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal Church. Ex-Governor and Mrs. Jackson will spend the winter at the Belvedere, and will then make a trip south. There are few more desirable houses in Baltimore than the Jackson mansion and no more interesting sites in the social history of the city. The old Kensington house formerly stood there, and it was in this house that Madame Elizabeth Patterson Bonaparte, grandmother of the present Secretary of the Navy, lived for a number of years and died. A decade or more ago the property was acquired by Mr. A. C. Meyer, who made a fortune from a patent medicine. Mr. Meyer had the house remodelled—in fact, practically rebuilt—under the direction of Messrs. Charles E. Cassell & Son, the architects. For a while the Meyers lived there, and then former Governor Jackson purchased the house, which has a pretty yard on the Richmond street side running to the rear. Governor Jackson spent several seasons there, but last winter the house remained closed, as the former Governor said the duties of house keeping were too severe for Mrs. Jackson, especially as the Oaks, the family home in Salisbury, is kept open all the year. From time to time reports are circulated of certain interests being after the property, with the idea of erecting a fine apartment-house on it. It would be an ideal location for such a purpose, but so far Ex-Governor Jackson has declined to sell. Mr. Hugh Jackson, who is associated with his father in his large lumber transactions in the South, is connected with the Baltimore office of the firm—Our Own People And Some Others in Wednesday's Baltimore News.

A Literal Kentuckian.

Two Northerners, traveling in the mountains of Kentucky, had gone for hours and hours without seeing a sign of life. At last they came to a cabin in a clearing. The hogs lay in their dirt holes, the thin claybank mule grazed round and round in a circle to save the trouble of walking, and one lank man, whose clothes were the color of the claybank mule, leaned against a tree and let time roll by.

"How do you do?" said one of the Northerners.

"Howdy?"

"Pleasant country?"

The native shifted his quid and grunted.

"Lived here all your life?"

The native spat pensively in the dust.

"Not yet," he said languidly.—"Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree," in Every body's Magazine for October.

SAFECRACKERS ON TRIAL.

Court Busy With Cases of Men Charged With Blowing Open Safe At Station of B. & A. Ry. Last May

The trial of four of the alleged safe-crackers who have been confined in the Salisbury jail for about four months, charged with blowing open the safe at the station in Salisbury of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company last May 17, began yesterday morning before Judges Holland and Lloyd and will not likely be completed before today at noon, as the State has a large array of witnesses. The men, whose names are Frank Smith, alias "Specs"; Robert Taylor, alias John Pennell; Frank Matthews and James Hawkins, were indicted and arraigned before the Court and pleaded not guilty Tuesday. James Avery, the fifth prisoner, who was captured in a serious condition with a piece of steel in his back that fitted exactly to the broken door of the safe and had to be taken to the Peninsula General Hospital, pleaded guilty. The trial is attracting much attention and at each session the Court House is filled with hearers.

An effort was made by the lawyers of the defense to have the case removed to another county, but the Court thought that a fair and impartial trial could be secured in Wicomico. A movement to quash the indictment was also made, but this was overruled and the prosecuting attorney was ordered to go ahead with the trial. Mr. Joseph L. Bailey is conducting the prosecution for the State; Messrs. Ellegood, Freney & Walles are appearing for Smith and Taylor, and Messrs. John H. Handy and Elmer H. Walton are defending Matthews and Hawkins.

The defense exercised great care in choosing the jury, and 27 persons were challenged and 4 excused because of disqualification before the jury was finally empaneled. As a result this body of men who are to decide the fate of the prisoners are men of more than ordinary intelligence. They are as follows:

Messrs. Samuel H. Carey, foreman, Asbury Q. Hamblin, Jesse A. Simms, George H. Larnore, Stephen P. Ellis, Daniel E. Parker, Dewitt J. Pryor, Louis C. Bounds, Arthur R. Leonard, Uriah W. Dickerson, John Lawrence and Burton Bailey.

To Advertise For Bids On New Roads.

The County Commissioners Tuesday authorized County Treasurer Jesse D. Price to advertise for bids for building two miles of new road on the Snow Hill road. The bids call for estimates on shell and lime stone. The road is to be built 12 feet wide with the material selected, with a shoulder of sand 4 feet on either side, making the road 20 feet wide. The shoulder to be shelled.

Commissioner Cooper and Treasurer Price were appointed a committee to have plans prepared for changes in the County Commissioners' office, so as to provide larger quarters for the tax collecting department and more privacy for the Commissioners while in session.

Messrs. W. A. Davis and B. D. Farlow having refused to serve as commissioners on the Beaver Hole tax ditch, Messrs. Ernest Mitchell and Sampson E. Truitt were appointed on the commission.

The attorney for the Board was instructed to sue on the bond of ex-sheriff Jesse H. Brattan to recover money coming into his hands from Frank J. Kennerly, ex-tax collector.

The report of the commission on Green Branch tax ditch was ratified, there being no objections filed.

John W. Lawrence was ordered to repair the wharf and house at Upper Ferry.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedial. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

"That Conwell Boy" Made Good.

"Now you just watch that Conwell boy," the boy in question being a long-legged lanky chap in overalls, gingham shirt and straw hat. He worked early and late on the "Eagle Nest" farm, Hampshire Co., Mass., but scarcely ever was too tired to take up his evening studies. It was his fidelity to his hard, uncomplaining task, together with his unswerving purpose to gain an education, that caused all the local "wise ones" to predict, that he would some day make his mark, and to-day the figure of Rev. Dr. Russell H. Conwell, of the Baptist Church, is proof of their wisdom. He is one of the Lincoln type of self-made men. In nearly ever pursuit that he has taken up he has been successful, but most conspicuously so in his work in the Baptist body. He was an intimate associate of such men as Gough, Beecher, Holmes, Longfellow, Motley, Emerson, Wendell, Phillips, Grant, Garfield, and Sherman. This man is at present using his influence to help the policyholders win control of their interest in the Mutual and New York Life Insurance Companies. Dr. Conwell was so pressed with work that when the policyholders first called upon him to act as a champion in the big fight against the corrupting in control of the two companies he flatly refused, but it being made plain to him that he was just the man to help win against the grafters, he agreed to join the International Committee. As a speaker, Dr. Conwell ranks among the most eloquent, and he holds a record, it is said, of having addressed more people than any other living man. In 1882 he accepted the call to the Grace Baptist Church of Philadelphia, which today is the largest Baptist place of worship in the country.

Letter to James E. Lowe, Salisbury, Md.

Dear Sir: There's twice as much horse in one horse—it may be a mare—as there is in two or three others together.

So with paints too. If a painter can do your job with 10 gallons Devco for $50; it'll take 12, 15 or 20 of other paints; and the cost of a job is about $5 a gallon, whatever the paint may be.

There are paints adulterated three-quarters—only one quart of paint in a gallon—he's got to paint four gallons of rubbish to get one gallon of paint. The worst horse you've got is as good as that paint, and he'll go as far.

The less-gallons paint is the paint, as the most-horse horse is the horse.

Yours truly

F. W. DEVCO & CO., New York.

Turtle in the Mail Bag.

A large snapping turtle arrived in a mail bag in the postoffice in Middletown, N. Y., says the New York Sun. A large number of mail bags had been emptied. When the clerk reached for a bundle a head popped out and snapped for his hand. The clerk was badly frightened. Kicking away the pile of mail, he uncovered the turtle. It weighed about fifteen pounds and was very ferocious, snapping at everything in sight. It had the run of the postoffice for a few minutes until a negro porter turned it on its back and got a rope around it. There was nothing to indicate where it had come from, and the clerk did not know which bag it had been in.

HERE'S WHAT'S WANTED.

So called Kidney cures which do not cure.

MEMORIAL FOR FRISCO.

Monument to Be Erected as a Reminder of the Disaster.

"San Francisco Weeping at the Golden Gate" is the magnificent memorial monument to be erected by the coast city in Golden Gate park as a reminder of the great disaster.

The symbolic figure is that of a young girl just blooming into the full beauty of her womanhood, says the New York World. Weeping, she leans in the lassitude of despair against a closed Gothic door.

The figure will be carried out in a slightly tinted marble, the door in golden bronze, while the framework and the steps approaching it will be of stone.

The sculptor is Kuhnle Beveridge, and for her model of San Francisco she utilized her young sister, the Baroness Ray von Wrede. It has met with high praise from the committee, and undoubtedly will be one of the most beautiful, if saddest, in significance of the rebuilt city's glories.

A Lighthouse For the Plains.

For the first time perhaps in its history, Pike's Peak was transformed a few nights ago into a lighthouse of the plains, and practically every night during the remainder of the season the dazzling rays from the 200,000 candle power searchlight will pierce the horizon with bars of light, says the Colorado Springs Telegraph. Owing to the fact that the machinery is not yet properly adjusted, the full current was not turned on the first night, but when it is turned on the rays may easily be seen in Denver and Pueblo, the Cripple Creek district and as far east as the Kansas line. The searchlight produces some weird and wonderful effects when the white light plays like sheets of summer lightning upon banks of cumulous clouds, and occasionally bursts through like some stray beam from another world. The light is in charge of H. H. Buckwalter of Denver.

ONE GERM BEET SEED.

Scientists Solve Problem of Economical Beet Culture.

Professor W. W. Tracy of the department of agriculture has just returned from the far west, where he has been looking after the experiments with test seeds on which the department has been working for years.

As a result of these operations it was announced by Charles F. Saylor, special agent of this work, that a one germ seed has been developed which will solve the problem, says a Washington dispatch to the Omaha World-Herald. This is one of the most remarkable processes in plant development the department scientists have ever undertaken.

A beet seed is, in fact, not a seed, but a cluster of seeds in a small husk. Planted, each germ inside the husk starts a little plant. The small cluster thus crowds each other, and it is necessary to pull by hand all but one in order that it may have room to develop a beet fit for sugar. Abroad, where labor is cheap, this is done by hand; in this country no one will do such work. Farmers want to cultivate their farms from a spring sated cultivator drawn by four horses. So the beet sugar industry has grown slowly because there was nobody to pull the superfluous beets. Secretary Wilson set his scientists to work to develop a beet seed with only a single germ in it. This, Professor Tracy says, they have done.

Last year's seeds contained 33 1-3 per cent of one germ seed. The experiments began four years ago. In three years more of evolution, says the scientist, they will have a seed with uniformly a single germ. Then it can be planted by machinery at proper intervals. No pulling of extra plants will be necessary, cultivating and digging can be done by hand, and the American beets will easily supply all the country's sugar.

TRAIN FOR BIG CAKE.

Chicago Caterers Serve Wedding Feast on Mackinac Island.

Chicago sent a special train, making an almost record breaking run of over 400 miles, to carry a wedding cake to Mackinac, the Chicago summer settlement, in time for the wedding of Vincent J. Walsh and Miss Julia Camilla Cudahy, says a Chicago dispatch to the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune. The "wedding cake special" flew through the northern woods at top speed, while inside the special car, guarding his cakes, was the patissier.

Awaiting him was the manager of the catering company which prepared a wedding feast in Chicago and served it on Mackinac Island as easily and with as little fuss as if the wedding guests had been seated in the dining room of a restaurant.

It required a steamboat, a car loaded with silver and cut glass and the "wedding cake special" to serve the wedding breakfast. The nineteen waiters, cooks, managers and the patissier—who accompanied the feast returned to Chicago triumphant and ready to cater to weddings at summer cottages in New Hampshire or the Rockies.

The necessity for the "wedding cake special" grew out of the fact that Miss Cudahy of Chicago was to be married to Mr. Walsh of Chicago at The Pines, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Cudahy at Mackinac. It was to be a morning ceremony, and a wedding breakfast was to follow. Mackinac bakeries are not equal to the demands of such an occasion.

New Use For Electricity.

The latest and it will be thought by many, one of the best uses to which electricity has been put is the destruction of the mosquito. Maurice Chauvin of Paris is the man who has thought of electrocuting this most obnoxious disturber of summer peace, says the Reader. He has devised and patented an apparatus with a cylindrical lantern with two rings suspended one above the other and joined by parallel and vertical chains. These are connected with the source of electricity, which may be provided by a small accumulator in such a fashion that each of these little chains is always alive. In the center is some sort of a lamp that attracts those ardent lovers of luminosity, the mosquitoes and gnats. They touch the chains, and that instant is fatal to them. They are neatly "short circuited," and they buzz no more. They even forget what they meant by all their buzzing or what occult reason they had for seeking the luminary. They are dead and done for. This apparatus can be placed in a room, and the proper owner of the chamber is insured a comfortable night.

Keen Sense of Humor.

"There is nothing like a sense of humor," said a naval officer, according to the Philadelphia Bulletin. "In a woman, in a soldier, in a sailor, in a clerk, a sense of humor is a help and a blessing through life. At the same time even a sense of humor may exist in excess. I, for my part, shouldn't care to have so great a sense of humor as a British soldier I once heard about. This soldier was ordered to be flogged. During the flogging he laughed continuously. The lash was laid on all the harder, but under the rain of blows the soldier laughed.

"What are you laughing at?" the sergeant finally asked.

"Why," the soldier chuckled, "I'm the wrong man."

A Story Of The Late Edward Rosewater, Of Nebraska, Editor And Founder Of The Omaha Bee.

The late Edward Rosewater, founder and editor of the Omaha Bee, was at various times member of the Nebraska legislature, member of the Republican national committee and member of the United States mint commission, and this summer he represented this country at the universal postal congress held in Rome and returned to this country on June 23 on the French liner La Provence.

Mr. Rosewater was also the original promoter of the Transmississippi exposition held in Omaha in 1898. He was defeated for the United States senate at the recent Republican state convention at Lincoln by Morris Brown, to whom he pledged his loyal support.

Mr. Rosewater was a man of unique personality. He was small in stature and spoke in a low voice, but he was a politician of most pronounced fighting abilities. He had, too, met many of the famous men of the world.

At a hotel in Washington one night a few years ago he was speaking of Andrew Carnegie. "Carnegie and I," said Mr. Rosewater, "were fellow telegraph operators nearly four decades ago. He was stationed out west, and I was in Washington. We got acquainted as operators do over the wires at night and would call each other by our first names when we spoke through the medium of our instruments, and for nearly forty years we have been promoting ourselves the pleasure of meeting."

"I drifted out to Nebraska, and Carnegie's history you know. Naturally I was more anxious to meet him than he could possibly be to meet me, and a few days ago I called upon him."

"I assured him when he greeted me that I sought none of his money for library or other purposes. Carnegie looked at me searchingly. You can see that I am a small man. I am five feet four inches in height. He is no taller and is even slighter in build than I."

"Suddenly he extended his hand again and exclaimed with unmistakable sincerity of feeling:

"I am glad indeed to meet you, Mr. Rosewater. I am glad to associate with a man who is no bigger than I am."

Must Screen Finger Bowls.

Because she had not screened a finger bowl with the regulation eighteen mesh wire, Mrs. R. L. Arnold, a well known New Orleans water color artist, will have to answer in the recorder's court for alleged violation of the now celebrated eastern screening law, says a New Orleans dispatch to the New York Herald. Inspector A. G. Young, acting for the board of health of New Orleans, made the affidavit, and an hour later Mrs. Arnold herself appeared in court with the finger bowl. She uses the receptacle to wash her paint brushes, and it is nearly always full of water. The inspector stated that he visited the artist's house, and upon examination he found that the bowl was unscreened and contained several "wiggletails," or baby mosquitoes. Judge Marmouget indulged in a hearty laugh over the affidavit, but nevertheless Mrs. Arnold must answer the charge.

Finds Rubber In Roots of Plant.

Professor H. M. Hall of the botany department of the University of California, who recently returned from a three months' tour through the deserts of Arizona, Nevada and southern California, has discovered a species of plant life known as rabbit brush which is capable of producing rubber in paying quantities. The rubber exists in the lower portion of the plant stems and is especially abundant in the roots. It is probable that a rubber extracting company will soon be formed in the southern portion of the state, as several prominent business men are already interested in the discovery.

The Motor Eye.

The motor eye is the latest development that the medical profession has to deal with. It appears that those who are continually rushing through the country on a motor car cause the eye to take a too rapid impression of the things it encounters and that this affects the mechanism of the eye. Nature did not prepare us for the conditions of modern times, and while it is adapting itself to them many unforeseen circumstances must occur.

Russia's "Butcher Bill."

The Reich of St. Petersburg has compiled the following ten days' "butcher's bill" in Russia, not including the Caucasus and Finland: Between Aug. 10 and Aug. 20, policemen, gendarmes and soldiers killed while on police duty 101, wounded 72, private persons killed or wounded 201, crown spirit shops looted 34, carried off from private individuals and firms by robbers 316,031 rubles, from government institutions 150,062 rubles, armed assaults over 150. The list is far from complete, as it only includes crimes reported by the telegraph agency.

Will Deliver His Own Benediction.

The Rev. Daniel Bassett Leach of Bone Gap, Ill., has requested that the concluding ceremony of his funeral shall be the rendering on a phonograph of a benediction composed by himself. Mr. Leach has been a Methodist clergyman for more than seventy years, or since he was eighteen years of age, and has been noted for the length of his prayers.

DEVICES FOR SAFETY.

Exposition Will Be Held Next January In New York City To Exhibit Life Savers.

The American Institute of Social Service will hold next January in New York city an exposition of devices for safeguarding the lives and limbs of working men and women and for preventing accidents under the ordinary conditions of life and labor to which the general public is exposed.

This will be the first exposition of the kind in this country, says the Chicago Evening Post. As far back as 1880 there was a German exposition for the prevention of accidents. In 1893 an exposition of this nature was held in Amsterdam, and since then there have been several similar ones in continental Europe and Canada.

As an outgrowth of these national movements there have been organized several museums of security, one at Vienna in 1890, one at Amsterdam in 1893, one at Munich in 1900, one at Berlin in 1901 and one at Paris in 1905, and Russia recently established a museum on a large scale at Moscow. That these expositions and museums have been of real value to their respective countries is evidenced by a comparative study of the number of accidents in Europe and in America, which shows that for the same number of men employed in a given trade America has from two to nine times as many accidents as European countries.

Bridge With Glass Floor.

The state of Colorado will possess within a short time the highest bridge in the world, over the deepest chasm in the Rocky mountains. The proposed highest bridge in the world is being constructed over the far famed Royal gorge of the Arkansas river. The bridge will be 2,550 feet above the railroad track, 22 feet wide and 230 feet long and constructed of flat steel and steel cable, such as is utilized in suspension bridge construction. The floor of the bridge will be of plate glass, one and a half inches thick, set in steel framework, through which objects below can be easily discerned. It is expected, by most visitors without experiencing dizziness.

Farm For "Down and Outers."

A farm for poor old bums, or men that are down and out, will be established at Winona Lake, Ind., in the near future as a memorial to the late Samuel H. Hadley, friend of "drunks" and for twenty years head of the Jerry McAuley mission of New York city, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"Pop" Hadley for years had spent part of each summer at Winona Lake. The first donation for the farm was made by Charles H. Madison, head of a rescue mission in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. It was Hadley, he said, who rescued him. A home will be built on the farm for Mrs. Hadley.

Home Again.

The glad hand and the thrice glad heart. Now greet us on the street. 'Tis "How d' do?" and "Where've you been?"

With all we chance to meet. For cheeks of red and cheeks of brown Are all a coming back to town.

A lighter step in every gait. A light heart beats within; With sharper wit and trimmer hand Each will his task begin.

For faces red and faces brown Are all a-rushing back to town.

From sandy beach and mountain side, Where nature has been storing Her gifts of life and health and hope.

The human stream is pouring, And sunburnt cheeks and arms of brown Are all seen coming back to town.

The lean are stout, the tired are gay, And each one wears a smile, For good it is to run away.

And take a rest awhile, And bring back cheeks of red and brown To carry with you round the town. —Boston Globe.

Monks as Chauffeurs.

The Grand St. Bernard monks made their first trip recently from Martigny to the St. Bernard hospice with their new motor transport car, which has been specially constructed to carry heavy weights on steep gradients. The car, which is of forty horsepower, is fitted with special tire coverings to grip the snow and ice, says the Brooklyn Eagle. Six monks from the hospice recently went to Milan to learn the art of driving a motor car, and are now expert chauffeurs.

Two monks, wearing the usual habit and cowl, drove the heavy car loaded with provisions and fire wood up the mountain road to the hospice without the slightest difficulty. Next season the monks will start a motor car service for tourists from Martigny to the hospice.

The Hospitality of Salisbury.

Salisbury has never had a more excellent opportunity to prove that her splendid reputation for hospitality is well founded than now. Within a few weeks, the Maryland Christian Endeavor Union will convene in this town under the auspices of the two local societies, one of which is connected with the Presbyterian Church and the other with the Methodist Protestant, and will be one of the largest gatherings ever entertained by our people. In fact, it is now expected that four or five hundred delegates will be in attendance upon the sessions of the Union, and it is the first time in the history of the organization that any town of the Eastern Shore has been willing to attempt to entertain it. It is, therefore, earnestly to be hoped that the committee which is now making arrangements for the proper entertainment of this large number of visitors will receive the enthusiastic support of the people of the city, regardless of denominational lines. It would be practically impossible for our friends of the two churches we have named to entertain all who will be here on this occasion, and certain it is that those of the other denominations would not want them to do it if they could. If there ever was a time when the fraternal feelings which should exist between the various branches of the Christian Church should manifest itself, it is at a time of this character, and we confidently believe that the members and friends of every other church in Salisbury will put forth every possible effort to make the convention the most successful of the kind which has ever been held. There should be the largest possible cooperation on the part of everybody in town. Do not wait for the Committee to wait upon you! Drop a line to Mr. Walter C. Humphreys or some other member of the committee, stating just how many you are willing to entertain. The work of a committee which has charge of a convention of this kind is exceptionally heavy, and they must bear largely the responsibility of success or failure. So far as the coming convention is concerned, if determined effort and indefatigable work on the part of the committee alone would accomplish it, its success would be more than assured now, but in addition to this there must be on the part of all the people of the town a united and determined effort, as we believe there will be, to make this gathering long to be remembered by the people of Salisbury. There will be immense advantages accruing to the town in every way and there will go out from the sessions of a convention of this character a spiritual uplift which will be felt for many years in this community.

Editorial Jottings.

Don't forget registration day, next Tuesday, the 2nd of October. If you are not now registered, be sure and have your name placed on the books at that time. There will be but one other opportunity, which will be the following Tuesday, the 9th.

And so Wicomico has another candidate for Congress, the Prohibitionists having nominated Mr. John H. Dulany, of Fruitland. Now this is getting interesting, but pshaw, Mr. Jackson once before had a Wicomico opponent, and—well you know the rest!

Revolutionary activities along the line of bomb throwing still continue in Russia, and the entire Empire is on the verge of a volcano. While American sympathies seem to be largely with the revolutionists, still very few have any patience with the methods which are being employed. That those who are engaged in this peculiarly underhand method of attack have very serious grievances against the present government, is universally conceded, but this does not furnish any ground for cold blooded murder and assassination. With proper leadership, and fair and open methods, there is no reason why the present movement should not be entirely successful.

Armed intervention on the part of the United States in the revolutionary troubles in Cuba, if those troubles continue, is but the logical and necessary outcome of the situation, and the only course to pursue in view of the conditions which brought Cuba into existence as a separate and distinct Government. Had it not been for the United States at that time, Cuba would never have received the inestimable benefits of an independent form of government, and having made that independence possible, it is only natural and right that this country should take the necessary steps to secure the continuation of the blessings which have come to the island since the oppressions of Spain became a matter of history.

How quickly are the mighty fallen! Hon. William J. Bryan has been busily engaged since his Madison Square Garden speech in attempting to explain his government ownership theory, and he seems to be making a bad matter worse. Mr. Bryan is getting precious little comfort from his own party, and nearly all the great Democratic papers have attacked him very sharply for his socialistic utterances, and the cold shoulder has been turned to the great Nebraskan. Its the same old story! Talked too much! Its a mighty difficult proposition to please 80,000,000 people or any considerable fraction thereof, and when he commenced to make his own theories and construct a full sized platform for his party, without their consent, and against their will and wish, the time to call a halt quickly came. And now possibly Mr. Bryan will be good!

London seems to be taking very seriously the proposed phonetic changes in our language recently ordered by President Roosevelt and the idea that the United States should design to make changes in the English language is apparently a severe blow to Great Britain's pride, and decidedly caustic remarks have been made by a number of prominent Englishmen. Goodness know England need not get on its "dignity" about a little thing like a change in the language. We might, with becoming modesty and proper deference, suggest that if England should glance at the pages of history, as far back as 1776 or even 1812, she might ascertain the fact that this was not the first time the United States had made some slight changes in England's way of thinking. At any rate, when this country wants to do something, it does not have to consult our aristocratic English cousins.

Trolley Company Awards Contract.

The Kent Traction Company, of Kent county has awarded the contract to D. E. Baxter & Co., of New York, for the construction of the trolley line between Tolchester and Chestertown, touching Fairlee and Georgetown. This portion of the line will cost about $200,000, and it is expected to have it in operation before Christmas. This line when completed will afford quick transportation between the Eastern Shore peninsula and Baltimore and will furnish the farmers and truckers of Kent county a market for their perishable products the same day they are shipped.

This line is a cross-country line, and the mileage will be short, a will the time in making the run.

Suitable freight cars will be operated by the company and anything that a steam railroad can carry will be transported by electricity instead. The road will be built of 70-pound rails with an overhead trolley on arms. The passenger cars will be of the semi-converter type, as are used on the streets of Baltimore. The freight cars will have the same sort of truck, with a box body. The power house will be at Fairlee and will be of sufficient horsepower to operate the entire system.

The Company expects to make satisfactory arrangements with steamboat lines by which shippers can be given through rates from the primary points of the products to Baltimore. Negotiations to this end are also in progress. The line will, it is expected, have connecting water lines both at Tolchester and at Rock Hall.

Secures Information On Murder Of "Billy" Williams.

It was reported yesterday that the Grand Jury this week secured important information that may lead to the arrest of Napoleon Gordon, colored, of Virginia, for the murder of "Billy" Williams about two weeks ago on an excursion returning from Ocean City to Crisfield.

At the sessions of the Coroner's Jury held shortly after the murder, it was impossible to secure definite information regarding the shooting and the jury was forced to adjourn without finding anyone on which to place the blame. The excursion was a most disgraceful affair and more closely resembled tales of Jesse James and his band of marauders than anything else.

George Ade Won Oats Contest. George Ade has demonstrated that he can raise oats. Ade has a fine farm in Newton county, his old home, and this season interested himself in oat growing, joining in a contest with neighboring farmers to see which could get the largest yield, says a Richmond (Ind.) dispatch. Ade claimed to know something about oats, but his neighbors were inclined to believe they would clean him up. Ade's crop was the last to be thrashed, and it was found that he had the best yield in Newton county.

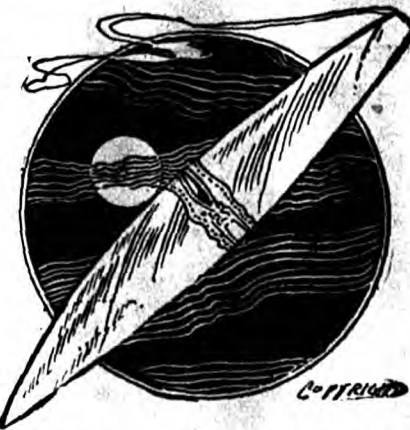

Girl Is a Living Statue. By a peculiar mania Miss Annie Fuzee of Toledo has changed into a living statue, and her case is the strangest in the records of the probate court, says a special dispatch to the New York Herald. She refuses to move a muscle of her body, but stands, sits or lies as she is placed. She will not move her head or her eyes, but sits all day in one position, staring fixedly at whatever is before her. She refuses to eat food of any kind.

Mrs. Cleveland's Great Climax. Mrs. Grover Cleveland arrived in Bretton Woods, N. H., recently and made the ascent of Mount Washington, taking the rough nine mile tramp over the Crawford bridge path. Mrs. Cleveland was looking decidedly well. She arrived at the summit in time for luncheon, and had one of the season's clearest days for the view.

An Arab Fishing Yarn. A fishing yarn from Algiers: "Some Arabs were fishing from a boat with lines off the coast when a dolphin seventeen feet long, eleven feet in circumference and weighing four tons swallowed one of the baited hooks and dashed off at a tremendous speed. The fishermen paid out as much line as possible and then made it fast. This brought the dolphin up sharply, but the strain snapped the line. The monster then attacked the boat and captured it, flinging the fishermen into the water. Other Arabs ashore waited till the dolphin was clear of the men and then killed it with rifles."

The Logical Question. A little Philadelphia boy was taken by his father for his first visit to the zoo. Stopping before an inclosure, he asked, "Papa, what animal is that?" Reading the sign tacked up to one side, his father responded, "That, my son, is a prong horned antelope." "Kin he blow his horns?" was the question that promptly followed.

Dashiell and Levin Venables, another colored man, had accompanied Messrs. F. A. Grier and John P. Owens on the trip. The boat was coming up the river at a fast clip and when it reached a point between Quantico wharf and Upper Ferry, Dashiell, who was lying on the house, attempted to step down to the deck, but in doing so missed his footing and slipped overboard. Before the boat could be slowed down and turned around she had gone several hundred feet, and when brought back to the spot where the man fell overboard, nothing was seen of the body. Mr. Grier did everything in his power to save the drowning man, and searched for an hour for the body, but it could not be found. The drowned man was an employee of L. E. Williams & Co., and leaves a widow, but no children. The body was found Wednesday morning floating in the water just off of Truitt's wharf, about three miles this side of White Haven. Mr. D. C. Holloway, of the undertaking firm of D. C. Holloway & Co., with others went down in a gasoline boat the same afternoon and took charge of the remains.

Lacy Thoroughgood's Policy Is To Keep The Very Latest And Newest Styles In Men's Clothes, And Especially In Clothes For Young Men.

There is a tendency towards fine clothes. Men dress better than they did a few years ago. They find it pays to spend $2.50 or $5.00 more for a suit that is exactly right, than it does to save that $2.50 or 5.00 and take less good tailoring, less good clothes, less well-cut clothes. At the prices most people want to pay—say $12.50, $15.00, $16.50, $18.50 and $20.00 Lacy Thoroughgood has an enormous variety of suits in all kinds of good fabrics and cuts. On all of this season's leading models, the difference between the highest and the lowest priced is in one item—quality of cloth and linings. If you are critically stylish, good-fitting, long-wearing garments at right prices, call at Lacy Thoroughgood's. If you are ready to buy your fall clothes, come to Lacy Thoroughgood. Men's fall over-coats are ready.

—The author of the farce comedy, "The Other Fellow," which will appear in Uman's Grand Opera House Friday night, had but one object in view when writing same. That was laughter, and he has been more than successful in the result, as he has succeeded in finding a laugh in almost every line. The plot of "The Other Fellow" is a very slender one, but it serves its purpose by causing many funny complications which are taken advantage of by a clever company of comedians, vocalists and dancers. The comedy is full of musical numbers and medleys. During the action of the play many pleasing specialties are introduced by members of the company. Seats are now on sale at the box office. Prices 25, 35 and 50 cents.

Forests' Unnatural Death.

The life of nearly all forests is cut short by fire or by the hand of the lumberman. When a spruce forest is entirely destroyed by fire young spruces do not at once spring up and cover the burned area. The seed bearing cones have been burned, and the spores and seeds of other plants which are readily carried by the wind find their way in first. The task of preparing for the forest is begun again, but this time it is to be a shorter one. The first year after the fire mosses and often tiny flowering plants appear. These are replaced by the droweed and other flowers whose seeds are provided with hairs so that they reach such places quickly. These are soon joined by raspberries, roses and other bushes. Among these the young seedlings of aspens appear in a very few years. The forest grows rapidly and in a score of years again a low sunny forest. An aspen forest makes a brilliant contrast with the dark green forests of spruce.—St. Nicholas.

The First Bathing Machine.

There does not seem to be much doubt that the first bathing machine was seen at Margate and that it was the invention of a worthy Quaker named Beale, who placed his hopeful invention on the Margate beach in 1750. "The public are obliged to Benjamin Beale, one of the people called Quakers, for the invention," writes the author of "A Short Description of the Isle of Thanet," published in 1796. But it was the old story, the public became grateful after the inventor had been ruined by his enterprise. His successors had reaped the harvest. Old Benjamin Beale's widow could remember in her last days the first family that ever resorted to Margate for the purpose of bathing being carried into the sea in a covered cart. In 1803 Beale's machines were one of the institutions of Margate. It was alarmingly claimed for them that "they may be driven to any depth into the sea by careful guides."—T. P.'s London Week.

The Hottest Street in the World.

West street in New York presents a network of piers and docks for its whole length. Most of the great steamship and railway transportation companies have their pier terminals there, and other steamship companies have built their terminals on the New Jersey shore opposite, so that all transatlantic and a large share of the continental travelers must cross West street in coming to or leaving the city. When one considers the great number of short trip travelers, including commuters, who daily make their way in and out of the metropolis across this busy thoroughfare a faint idea of its importance may be gained. Manhattan Island has thirty-two miles of water front.—John P. Fritts in Leslie's Weekly.

This Was In 1824.

English opinion of the United States in 1824, from the standpoint of the fashionable London set, is shown in the extract from the correspondent of John Whishaw:

"You must have read some time since in the papers of a few young 'fashionables,' Mr. Stanley (Lord Derby's grandson), Messrs. Wortley and Denison, ministerial members, and Labouchere, a nephew of Mr. Baring, having sailed for New York with the intention of making a tour of the United States. The scheme was thought very wild and much disapproved by the west end of the town, and disappointment and disgust were universally predicted."

Superstitions of Fishermen.

English herring fishermen are, many of them, remarkably superstitious. For instance, on some fishing boats whistling is forbidden, and neither milk nor burned bread is allowed on board. Furthermore, not even the name of that unlucky animal, the hare, may be mentioned, and a common method of punishing an enemy is to throw a dead hare into his boat. Some of the fishermen believe in luck attending an old numbered crew, but the good fortune may be neutralized should one of the number have red hair.—London Standard.

The Pendulum.

Hours are being stolen from most of the great men of former days. Galileo was said to have discovered the law of isochronism of the pendulum while pursuing his studies at Pisa in 1581. Now we learn that the pendulum was used as a correct measure of time among the Arabs as far back as the year 1000.

Great Combination.

Suitor I cannot boast of wealth, but I have brains. The members of my literary club will tell you that you'd have the smartest debater in town for a grandlaw. Father and I can assure you my dear fellow, that you'll have the greatest lecturer in the town for a mother-in-law.

Mistaken.

Jones, St. Nick, says that it is the hills that make the boys go brown. So they do. Jones and here I've lived all these years and here it was the hills.—New York Times.

Sunless Home-moon.

He and Mrs. Adam and Eve lost paradise for things! She captivously. But we found it, didn't we, darling?—Pack.

An Ancient Irish Workhouse.

In the records of St. Thomas's Hospital, London, is an entry of the year 1570 to the effect that "in consideration of the hot type of the year the poor be allowed every one a day three pints of beer for two months," a quart at dinner and a pint at supper, and at the end of two months return to "three odd ordinary allowance, wyeche is one quart." The food at this ancient workhouse was to be dealt with as liberally as the drink. The almoner and steward were to "bye no byffe but of the best, without bones and in speciall without the marybon, and none other to be bought."

Professional Dignity.

"What wages do you expect?" asked Mrs. Randolph of Aunt Phronie, who had come to hire as cook.

"Well, Ah tell you. Ef Ah cooks an' waits on de table, too, Ah 'spects $2 every week Ah lives, bout of yo' all has family ranch at de table an' Ah jos' hab ter cook, den Ah charges or dollar an' fo' bits."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The British Toastmaster.

The British banquet differs from the American only in that the chairman presides, but does not keep order or announce the toasts. That is attended to by a professional toastmaster, who is a large person with a volcanic voice. While the guests are assembling he stands at the doorway and announces the names of the arrivals, who are then greeted by the chairman and passed into the push. When the guests are seated he takes up his station behind the chair of the presiding officer and commands order in these terms: "My lords and gentlemen, I pray you silence. We will now listen to the toast to his imperial majesty the German emperor, responded to by his excellency the lord chancellor." For the rest the speeches drawl and drag, as in New York, with now and then a sparkle of wit or a flash of mental energy, usually from some unexpected quarter. The turtle soup is no better than ours. The toastmaster gets $10 for a night's work.—New York World.

Protection For Swimmers.

"Cotton in the ears," said a physician, "should be used by all those who swim out beyond their depth. You know how often good swimmers of that type drown, don't you? Their drowning is imputed to cramp, but you will never find one of the drowned with his ears stuffed with cotton. Why? I'll tell you why. Because it isn't cramp that causes these drownings. It is a perforation of the eardrum, followed by unconsciousness, due to the pressure of the water. Cramp isn't after all, the deadly thing it is made out to be. If you get a cramp in your leg while swimming it is easy enough to roll over on your back and float. The cramp won't kill you. But a perforation of the eardrum is different. It takes away your senses and down you go like a log. So always, if you are going to do much swimming, stuff cotton in your ears."—New York Press.

How to Remove a Corn: Try It.

Expose the corn and pass the finger tips of your right hand over it slowly and caressingly. At the same time send a vibration from the brain to the corn. If it is a soft corn 413 vibrations per second will suffice; if a hard corn, put on a forced draft. Repeat slowly, "I am now sending a current of thought force into my corn and so separating, detaching, disintegrating, rendering, splitting, sundering, splintering, shattering, disintegrating, whitening, dispersing, disparting, eliding, divorcing, pulverizing, shoving, shoving and dissecting it that presently it will pass away. Repeat it three times; then, with rising inflection, say, 'Avant, avant, avant!' Finish by repeating the password: 'The universe is mine. I am it.' The corn will at first look extremely surprised, then wilt and fade beautifully from sight.—New Thought.

A Nice Distinction.

A well known Atlanta has a wife with a sharp tongue. Jones had come home about 2 in the morning rather the worse off for a few highballs. As soon as he opened the door his wife, who was waiting for him in the accustomed place at the top of the stairs, where she could watch his uncertain ascent, started upbraiding him for his conduct. Jones went to bed and when he was almost asleep could hear her still scolding him unmercifully. He dropped off to sleep and awoke after a couple of hours, only to hear his wife remark, "I hope all the women don't have to put up with such conduct as this." "Annie," said Jones, "are you talking again or yet?"—Kansas City Star.

Claims Eggs.

The claims eggs are carried by the mother on her zills. When there are fish in the water with them the mother claims discharge the eggs which soon hatch, but if there are no fish they carry the eggs until they decay. The reason of this strange behavior is this: When the eggs are set free in the water they soon hatch and the little ones swim about until they find some fish to which to attach themselves. They live for a time on the mucus of the fish and then drop off, sink to the bottom and form burrows for themselves. This curious semiparasitic life is no doubt a reversion to the habit of some ancient ancestor.

One Man's Wisdom.

Green, who was it that said, "Let me make the songs of a nation and I care not who makes its laws?" Brown: "I don't know the man's name, but he was a wise guy, all right. Green: Because why? Brown: Because it is possible to evade the laws, but one can't get away from the songs, especially when they become popular."—Chicago News.

JUST take a glass
And mingle in't
A young and tender Sprig o' mint,
Some pineapple,
A cherry red
And just a little Twisted shred
Of orange peel;
Of ice about
As much as you
Would gather out
In one fistful
From where 'tis packed;
Now fruit and mint
And ice that's cracked
Are in the glass;
To help the cause
Put in a couple
Of long straws,
And while the ice
Steams up and melts
You've got to put in Something else—
I don't know—what
That—is, do you?
Or else I guess
Perhaps you dot
But put it in,
Shake it a lot,
Then taste and tell Us what you've got.

A Foregone Conclusion.
"Ta, what is a foregone conclusion?"
"Something that you know will happen before it does. For instance, it's a foregone conclusion that if your mother should come into this room now and see me with my feet cocked up and my cigar going nicely, as you see me, she would immediately think of something that—Ah, there she comes! Listen!"

Knew From Experience.

"I say," said a friend the other day, "you are an old hand at it. I have only just got married, and don't understand much about the business, but has a married man any rights left when he once assumes the hymeneal responsibilities?"

"Rights? Yes, lots! He's a right to pay all the bills, to—"
"Stop. I mean this. Let me give you an instance. Every box and drawer and portmanteau and, in fact, every available receptacle of every description is stuffed full of my wife's property and when I want to put away a few cuffs and collars"—

"Hold hard! I know what you mean. Listen, young man. If your bedroom were 200 yards long and lined from the floor to the ceiling with drawers and you wanted a place to stow away a couple of collars, you couldn't find a nook that wasn't full of hairpins, tufts of frizzes, pads, scent boxes, old gloves, powder puffs, rings and things. So just accept the inevitable. Wrap your personal property in an old newspaper or some brown paper and hide the parcel under the bed."

The inquirer smiled loudly and ironically and passed on a wiser if not a better man.

Eskimo Throwing Sticks.

A "throwing stick," "throwing board" or "spear thrower," as it is sometimes called, is a contrivance for casting a javelin or harpoon, which is employed by various savage races, such as the Australians, some South American tribes and especially by the Eskimos, among whom its use is almost universal. Roughly speaking, it is a narrow grooved board a foot or so long, with one end cut into a handle and the other provided with a stud or spur for the butt of the spear to rest against. It is used thus: Grasping the handle as he would a sword, the man fits the shaft of the spear into the groove, with the butt resting against the stud, steadying the spear with the finger. Then, extending his arm and bending back his hand till the spear lies horizontal, he aims at the mark and propels the weapon by a quick forward jerk of the stick. In this way I have seen Eskimo boys casting their forked javelins at wounded waterfowl.

When Buchanan Was King.

George Buchanan was a scholar, historian, controversialist and the best Latin poet of his age. Buchanan was tutor to Mary, queen of Scots, and to her son James, afterward James I. of England. One day he caused himself to be made king of Scotland, and this was the way of it: Having observed in James a tendency to too ready acquiescence, he drew up a paper for the royal pupil to sign. James did so at once without having read it. The document happened to be a transfer of the royal authority to Buchanan for fifteen days, and no sooner had the poet got it into his possession than he began to play the monarch, even before the king himself. James thought the man a lunatic until the instrument was produced by which he had signed away his sovereignty. This incident was used by the worthy preceptor to illustrate the day's lesson on the responsibilities of monarchs.

A Story of Ole Bull.

A curious tale of Ole Bull is told in a book on violins and violinists. It seems that in 1831, being then twenty-one years of age, the famous violinist wandered to Paris. The cholera was raging and Malibran singing. He went to hear her, and his landlord decamped with his possessions, including his violin. He was speedily reduced to extremity. During the last dinner that he was able to pay for he made the acquaintance of a remarkable man. To this stranger Ole Bull confided his miseries. At the conclusion the stranger said abruptly, "Well, I will do something for you if you have courage and 5 francs." "I have both," said Bull. "Then go to Frascati's tonight at 10 o'clock, pass through the first room, go into the second, where they play rouge et noir, and when a new tallie begins put your 5 francs on rouge and leave it there." Bull did as directed, and when his 5 francs had become 400 he took them up after an episode with a woman who attempted to take them. Red continued to win, and had he left his money longer he would have won an independent sum. The stranger, who was present as his elbow, was Vidocq, the French detective, already a European celebrity.

Turkey's Way of Raising Revenue.

The land in all Turkey and her dependencies belongs to the reigning sultan and is only occupied at his will. It is divided among those who wish to cultivate it at a nominal rental of one-fifth of the produce, which goes directly to the crown. Three-fifths more are taken from the lessee on other pretexts, all for the maintenance of the government, the pasha in each district having the authority to lease the ground and collect the taxes, which may be in kind or money. If crops are short, they take four-fifths of all the man has in animals and even in household utensils, sometimes all his possessions, to make up the deficiency which Providence has withheld. Everything that can produce, be it a tree, beast, fowl, worm or the labor of a man and his family, is subject to the four-fifths tax. Those who toil at any labor or trade other than agriculture are taxed also pro rata according to their wages and must pay or go to prison.—Pearson's Weekly.

Fatally Injured in Turpentine Explosion.

Sunday was a sad day in this town, owing to the funeral of Alonzo Wheatley, a young man of much promise and one who stood high in the community. He died in the City Hospital in Baltimore on Friday from injuries received on Thursday, by an explosion of turpentine. He and the mate went down below in the five masted schooner, Maid Palmer, to burn out a chain. Wheatley carried a bucket of turpentine and a lighted torch. The turpentine exploded and set Wheatley's clothing on fire, and he was so badly burned that he died next day.

His remains were brought here on Saturday night and interred in the Taylor Cemetery, after funeral services in the Methodist Protestant Church by Rev. E. P. Perry, of Mardela, assisted by Rev. H. W. D. Johnson and L. T. Cooper. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Red Men of this town and was buried with the honors of the orders. He was thirty-three years old, leaves a widow, one small child, a brother, Warren, of Wilmington, and a sister, Mrs. Lurinda Stanton, of Delmar, and many other relatives.

Little Mary was two years old, and was a bright, interesting little girl, and will be sadly missed in the home she has left, but may the sorrowing parents realize that, though they no longer hear the patter of the baby's feet, and the sweet baby prattle, they have the assurance that the bud that was lent to brighten their home for a season, now blooms in the garden of Paradise, and in that great cloister's stillness and seclusion.

BUTTERFLIES WORN.

Their Wings Now Used to Ornament Brooches and Lockets.

An interesting form of insect jewelry is made from the wings of butterflies. These most delicate and perishable of lovely things are so treated, says the Washington Post, that they retain their charm of color and design for a long time, though perhaps not permanently.

Most of the butterflies used for the purpose are the brilliant creatures of large size that abound in Central and South America. Much of this jewelry is manufactured in a suburb of Boston. The gaudy wings of the butterflies are cut into circles, oval and other forms with sharp and delicate instruments that do not damage their beauty. The material is handled with the utmost care, but there is a considerable percentage of loss in the work.

In order to give something like permanency to the brilliant bits they are inclosed between pieces of fine glass, such as was used in making the old fashioned hair breastpins used as memorials. The tiny glass cases are framed in gold and in some instances incrustated with diamonds.

Some of the wings are made into lockets, others into pins, brooches and fobs. Few persons seeing these things for the first time would guess the material of which they are made.

They are golden, blue, purple, mottled brown and red. Many of them change and shimmer like opals. Some look like bits of the richest blue sky fleeced with white cloudlets.

COUNT'S NOVEL MANSION.

Cool Retreat Built by Frenchman Under the River Seine.

Society in Paris has just awakened to the fact that one of its leaders has completed a magnificent and costly mansion under the river Seine, where one can enjoy the most delicious coolness during torrid days, says a cable to the Chicago Record-Herald. Count Victor de Larnau is the proprietor of the novel mansion, which he had built secretly between Melun and Sens in order to surprise his friends.

Recently he sent out invitations and automobiles to convey his guests to the strange habitation and on arrival every one was surprised to find a most luxurious abode under the water. The entrance is through a grotto on the river embankment and adorned with many statues. An elevator takes the guests below the level of the river and then an entrance is made to a magnificent reception room in the center of which a marble fountain adds to the coolness of the surroundings.

A complete dining room, library, bedroom and kitchen constitute the other apartments of the novel house. The count is besieged with requests for invitations to visit his abode under water.

Result of Wearing High Collars.

That high collars tend to produce nervous headaches among both men and women is the most recent discovery of a well known Viennese physician. Quite accidentally the doctor's attention was directed to the very high and very tight style of collar worn by a patient who was always complaining of headaches and giddiness. The collar was laid aside, thus removing the compression of the neck, and the patient's headaches and giddiness disappeared. Struck by this result the doctor paid particular attention to the kind of collars worn by his "headache patients," and in very many instances the change to lower and easier fitting collars brought immediate relief. In the case of women wearing high stiff neckbands it was found that doing away with these had a similarly beneficial result. The doctor declares that nobody with a tendency to headache should wear high collars.

Didn't Belong to Colorado.

In the early days of Leadville there was a singular character living by the name of Major Martin McGinnis. The major was the important man of the camp, and when any distinguished parties came to the city they were received by Major Martin McGinnis and presented with the freedom of the camp on a gold plate. The French government sent three mining engineers over to examine and to report upon the mineral deposits of this locality. They were received by Major Martin McGinnis, who put them in carriages and took them around the camp. As they were going up California gulch the Frenchmen suddenly jumped out of the carriage and commenced to hammer and chisel upon a large black boulder that lay alongside the road. The major watched them gesticulating to one another, and he finally said to the interpreter: "What do they mean? What are they talking about?" The interpreter said, "They say that rock don't belong here." The major said: "The devil it don't. You say to those foreigners that I won't stand for them coming over here and running down our country. Tell them that they can find anything anywhere in Colorado."

The Frenchmen were right, however, for this black rock was a meteor and had fallen from the skies.—Leadville Herald-Democrat.
