OYSTERMEN VS. SURVEY

Manokin Packing Company Are Accused of Attempting to Seize Beds near Fishing Island

The oystermen at Fishing Island, this county, last week began war on the State Shellfish Commission for an attempt to survey what for years the men declare have been natural oyster beds. The oystermen accuse the Manokin Packing Company with attempting to seize, what they term, the "natural rocks" in Manokin river. Benjamin Green, of the Shellfish Commission, says the oystermen signed away their rights to the beds because the rocks at that time seemed barren. Now the rocks are again covered with fine bivalves. Ernest Cox, manager of the Manokin Packing Company, in the meantime, has leased the beds. When, however, Engineer Earle, of the Commission, arrived to mark off the area covered in Cox's lease last week, a number of oystermen flocked about the engineer and his men, and while they said they would offer no resistance to the staking off of the leased bed, they declared they would immediately pull up the buoys. Rather than cause any trouble the engineer called off his men. Just what will be the outcome of the controversy it is hard to say.

Teachers' Institutes

M. Bates Stephens, superintendent of education, has announced schedules for teachers' institutes in several sections of the State.

While the majority of the meetings will be separate, several joint ones will be held, such as the one announced to take place at Centerville from September 2 to September 6, which will be attended by teachers from Caroline, Queen Annes and Talbot counties; at Washington on the same dates for teachers of Charles, Montgomery, St. Marys and Prince Georges counties, and at Ocean City for teachers of Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester counties which is now in session and will continue until the 5th instant.

Other institutes to be held in September are those at Annapolis for the Anne Arundel county teachers, which will be held from September 2 to September 6; Baltimore county, in Baltimore city, from September 2 to September 13; Carroll county, at Westminster, September 9 to September 13; Dorchester county, at Cambridge, September 2 to September 6; Harford county, at Belair, September 2 to September 6; Garrett county, at Oakland, September 9 to September 13.

The October institutes will be held as follows: At Prince Frederick, for Calvert county teachers, October 7 to October 11; Cumberland, for Allegany county teachers, from October 28 to November 1; at Elkton, for Cecil county teachers, October 21 to October 25; at Ellicott City, for Howard county teachers, October 21 to October 25; and at Chestertown, for Kent county teachers, October 21 to October 25.

The Washington and Frederick county institutes will not be held until January. The former will take place at Hagerstown from January 1 to January 4; the latter will be held at Frederick city on the same date.

Launch Party

Miss Elizabeth Miller, of Westover, entertained a number of her friends with a launch party last Thursday evening. The lucky ones assembled at her home about 3.00 p. m., and proceeded via "strawride" to Mr. Fred Nelson's wharf, when all embarked on his staunch gasoline boat for—at least to the guests—an unknown port. After an hour's sail the good ship was docked at Carmon Point where a cloth was spread and then the surprise of the evening was forthcoming. Ample hampers filled with "good things to eat" were produced. The hostess, having, with customary foresight, provided for all. After the "bunch" had shown its right to claim the title of "world's champion eaters," the trim ship weighed anchor for yet more pleasant climes. After cruising about in the Manokin river for sometime the good captain headed for the home port which was reached about 10.30 p. m. and all disembarked. Then the good old wagon was again pressed into service. The first scheduled stop was King's Creek where two of the jolly party were compelled to forego the pleasures of the wagon to Westover. Westover was reached about midnight without mishap. The guests then bade the hostess a hearty farewell and departed for their respective homes. Those present were: Misses Mabel Hudson, Pauline Tobey, Elsie Tobey, Bernice May Walls, Myrtle Barnes, Dorothy Bissell, Elizabeth Miller and Mollie Miller, chaperone; Messrs. George Smith, Sherwood Cox, E. Denney Long, Jr., John Tobey and J. Wel-

THE CRAB INDUSTRY

Protective Measures Are Imperative—Mr. Earle Gives Warning

If protective measures are not adopted and enforced the hard and soft shell crab, which has been abundant in the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries, will meet the fate which has overtaken the terrapin, which awaits canvasback ducks, and which at times has threatened the oyster.

This declaration was made last week by Swenson Earle, topographical engineer of the Shellfish Commission, who has made a study of the crabbing industry, and who was delegated by the late Governor Crothers to suggest remedial legislation. A bill was prepared meeting Mr. Earle's views, and was submitted to the last legislature, but it got tangled up with the opposing oyster bills, and never emerged from the pigeonhole of the Commission on Chesapeake Bay and Tributaries.

"The best evidence of the scarcity of crabs is afforded by prices at Crisfield, the main shipping point," continued Mr. Earle. "Prices for soft shell crabs have been as high as $1.25 a dozen at Crisfield during the season, though there was a decline during the last few days. Only a few years ago soft shell crabs at Crisfield sold as low as 25 and 50 cents a dozen. In the waters of Anne Arundel county only a few years ago a man could easily catch four barrels of hard crabs in one day. He is fortunate now if he can catch one barrel in one day. The time is coming when we must concentrate our efforts and co-operate with Virginia in protecting crabs."

The crab, although always looked upon as a water scavenger, has developed into one of the most important of our sea foods. This industry has made the most remarkable development in Maryland. Winthrop A. Roberts, in his report to the United States Bureau of Fisheries on the Maryland crab industry, in 1901, states: "It was in 1883 that the first shipments of crabs were made from Crisfield." These were consigned to the firm of John Martin, in Philadelphia, and were shipped on commission.

Within the last decade the industry has developed rapidly in Kent, Queen Annes, Talbot, Dorchester, Somerset and Anne Arundel counties. While Somerset and Dorchester are more largely engaged in taking the soft shell and shelling crabs with scrapes (similar to the oyster dredges) the other counties, by using the trot line and gasoline boats, have developed the taking of the hard crabs, establishing picking houses and employing hundreds of people. The new much-in-demand crab flakes are sold extensively throughout the United States. It is not uncommon to see 10 carloads of crabs being shipped from Crisfield in a single day. Crisfield as a shipping point (the most extensive in the world for crabs) shipped in 1910, estimated, 120,000,000 soft crabs.

It is believed by most watermen that the crab, like the diamond-back terrapin, which was once so numerous in this State that the slaves objected to being fed on them more often than once a week, is beyond extermination.

The blue crab is not an ocean crab, but inhabits the inland waters, Chesapeake Bay, its tributaries and the sounds. The female crab, so our best authority informs us, spawns but once in the course of her existence, and this takes place when she has reached a certain development. Watermen have no difficulty in distinguishing the male from the female. The male has a "T," shaped apron while the apron of the female is oval. The female is capable of producing 3,000,000 young, and these little ones hang on their mother until she thinks it time for them to shift for themselves, when she rubs them off on the sand. The crab at this stage is known as the sponge bearer. The General Assembly of Virginia during its last session passed a law to protect the female at this stage of propagation.

That the crab industry will be destroyed will appeal to any far-sighted Marylander when we take into consideration that the demand now, equals the supply, and the reports from the large crabhouses note a decrease in the supply. With an increase in the demand, a decrease in the supply an improved method in catching the crabs, destroying the females promiscuously (the goose that lays the golden egg) there can be but one conclusion: The extermination of the crab in our waters.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS

Adjournment is Marked by Senate's Yielding to House Over Maryland's Claims

The second session of the Sixty-second Congress, which convened the first Monday in last December, adjourned sine die at 4.30 o'clock Monday afternoon of last week. Final adjournment was brought about by the Senate yielding to the House in the filibustering struggle over the State claims of Maryland, Virginia, Oregon and Texas in the General Deficiency bill and by the Senate itself surrendering to Senator La Follett's filibuster, and passing the Penrose resolution directing a sweeping investigation into the financial transactions and correspondence between John D. Archbold, George W. Perkins and Theodore Roosevelt and members of Congress and the Senate from 1900 to the present time, and into the amounts of money expended in behalf of any candidate seeking the Presidential nomination of any party in 1912.

The General Deficiency bill, as finally accepted by Congress, does not contain the items paying the four State claims, nor does it allow an extra month's salary for the Capitol employees. The bill as passed is a complete victory for the House. The Senate yielded to every contention made by the House after the filibuster started.

The President signed the General Deficiency bill at 4.10 o'clock, making certain the payment of the $1,800,000 deficiency in army pay, the $150,000 for the Gettysburg memorial celebration next year, the $350,000 for extension of customs work and scores of other important payments that hinged on the passage of the bill. The last measure to which his pen was put was a bill disposing of lands in the Colville Indian Reservation.

The session just fizzled out in the Senate, to use the words of one observer. A comparative handful of members occupied their seats, and a call for a quorum in either the House or Senate would have forced a return of the embarrassing situation of the previous week.

A wild outburst of applause greeted Speaker Clark's announcement of adjournment as his gavel fell in the House. The floor immediately became an animated scene, members bidding each other good-bye and shaking hands. Old-time political foes buried all differences and all feuds apparently were forgotten in the general leave-taking.

Further animation and color was lent to the scene when the women flocked down from the galleries to join husbands and fathers on the floor. The corridors were crowded with tired but happy members and their families and friends, and Speaker Clark's room was crowded with friends and admirers.

Lieut. J. W. Shockley Dead

The funeral of Lieutenant Joshua W. Shockley, of the Western police district, Baltimore, who died at the Maryland General Hospital late Saturday night, the 24th ult., following an operation which was performed on him on Thursday for an ulcer of the stomach, took place Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. After a short service at his home, 1937 Harlem avenue, the remains were taken to West Baltimore Station Methodist Protestant Church, of which the Lieutenant had been a member of the board of trustees, where special funeral services were held. The services were conducted by Rev. E. C. Makosky, pastor of West Baltimore Church, assisted by Rev. F. T. Tagg, editor of the Methodist Protestant.

Lieutenant Shockley was born at Snow Hill, on March 31, 1860, and before going to Baltimore he was a policeman at Salisbury. He was appointed to the Baltimore police force on June 2, 1892, promoted to sergeant on August 16, 1898, was made round sergeant on August 16, 1901, and promoted to the lieutenantcy on October 16, 1905. He is survived by his widow (Mrs. Lonia B. Shockley) and by one son (U. Morris Shockley).

A Delightful Sail

Captain Tyler, of the police boat, "Helen Beauchamp," gave a sail last Wednesday. The guests included the following: Mr. and Mrs. Asbury Beauchamp and daughter, Margaret; Mrs. James Dougherty and son, Louis; Mrs. L. Beauchamp and son, Mrs. H. Wagner and son, Mr. and Mrs. H. Townsend, accompanied by their son, grandson and nephew; Misses Edith Dixon, Pearl Beauchamp, accompanied by Claire Francis, who is her guest from Philadelphia, and Messrs. R. Greene, C. Warwick and S. Dodson and son. Dinner was served during a delightful sail and refreshments were enjoyed before departing.

SOLID FOR WILSON

His Friends Named on Advisory Committee to Assist in Campaign

An auxiliary committee of 150 members, who are pronounced entirely satisfactory by the friends of Governor Wilson, as many of them were in the forefront of his primary contest, was elected by the Democratic State Central Committee in Baltimore last Thursday to assist in the management of the Maryland campaign.

Although some differences developed among the leaders at the conference prior to the meeting as to the course that should be pursued in selecting the committee, the spirit of conciliation prevailed in the end. State, city and county leaders, after discussing the situation, dropped their personal opinions and preferences and agreed to plans for welding the party together and bringing about harmony.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. Vandiver and the roll call by Secretary Albert J. Almoncy showed that every county was represented but Calvert. Mr. Vandiver discussed conditions in the State as well as national issues and declared that Wilson and Marshall will sweep the State.

Resolutions were passed urging the committeemen to organize Wilson and Marshall clubs in every precinct in the State. Special attention was also called to the supplemental registration in the counties and the new enrollment in Baltimore city.

Because of the illness of several committeemen from Queen Anne's county they were unable to attend, but will later select their members for the new committee.

Here are the members of the advisory committee:

Allegany county—John B. Shannon, Hugh McMullen, John Keating, Phil Smith and Jasper N. Willison.

Anne Arundel county—Isaac S. Nutwell, A. P. Revell and Thomas Beasley.

Baltimore county—Carville D. Benson, Isaac Lobe Straus, Fred Von Kapp, Edward H. Burke, Henry J. Miller, Benjamin Miller and Z. Howard.

Carroll county—George H. Wilson, H. R. Lewis and Joseph H. Carroll.

Cecil county—Guy Steele, Basil Dorsey and John B. Baker.

Cecil county—Harvey H. Mackey, Emerson R. Crothers and William M. Pogue.

Charles county—Walter J. Mitchell, Dr. P. E. Sasser and J. M. Bowling.

Dorchester county—Emerson C. Harrington, W. Laird Henry and J. W. T. Webb.

Frederick county—J. E. R. Wood, Sterling Gault, George Stevens, J. Windsor Williams and Abraham Hemp.

Garrett county—A. T. Matthews, William Miller and D. W. Dorsey.

Harford county—Charles A. Andrew, T. L. Hanway and James J. Archer.

Howard county—Arthur P. Gorman, Edward H. Hammond and Joseph L. Donovan.

Kent county—Hope H. Barroll, L. W. Wicks and James M. Wood.

Montgomery county—Arthur Peter, Robert G. Hilton and Dr. Eugene Jones.

Prince George's county—A. T. Robinson, Ogle Marbury and S. Marvin Peach.

Somerset county—Joshua W. Miles, Lewis M. Milbourne and Lorie C. Quinn.

St. Marys county—Chas. S. Grason, Benjamin Coombs and R. H. Sotheron.

Talbot county—Chas. B. Lloyd, T. Hughlett Henry and John W. Jump.

Washington county—Dr. E. M. Schindler, Albert J. Long, J. O. Snyder, H. C. Beachley and Dr. D. C. R. Miller.

Wicomico county—Joseph L. Bailey, E. Stanley Teasdin and Wm. L. Cooper.

Worcester county—Alfred F. Dennis, Oliver D. Collins and Calvin B. Taylor.

Baltimore city—George C. Morrison, B. Howell Griswold, Jr., J. Barry Mahool, James R. Wheeler, William L. Marbury, Thomas McCosker, George Stewart Brown, Albert C. Ritchie, Eugene O'Dunne, ex-Gov. Frank Brown, Dr. H. H. Siedler, Frank A. Furst, John D. Raney, J. S. C. Murphy, Chas. T. Crane, Thomas Turner, Isaac N. Frank, Peter J. Campbell, William L. Wilson, W. Cabell Bruce, William J. McCrea, John P. Whittle, John N. McNaney, George H. Numsen, James A. McQuade, A. Foley Hickey, Martin Lehmayr, George Carey Lindsay, Sylvan Hayes Lauchheimer, John V. L. Findlay and McKee Barclay.

The committee will meet in Baltimore next Friday and elect its officers. An executive committee of 11 will be selected to direct the advisory committee's work, after which permanent headquarters will be established and the campaign started.

Among the progressives, virtually all of whom were "original" Wilson men, Mr. Miles and Senator Benson are the avowed favorites for the chairmanship, albeit Mr. Benson has been averse to serving. Not only has Mr. Miles been an aggressive and fearless Wilson worker from the outset, but also he is said to be a capital executive head and a veteran of great experience in political life and thoroughly qualified for the responsibility.

NEW ROAD BUILDING

Construction And Maintenance Departments Combined—A Big Saving of State's Money

An entire reorganization of the engineering force of the State Roads Commission as outlined by Chief Engineer Shirley will take effect on a plan which, it is believed, will save the State $15,000 to $20,000 a year. The plan has been approved by Chairman Weller.

The maintenance and construction divisions of the work are to be consolidated. Heretofore there has been an engineer of construction and one of maintenance, with the result that two sets of engineer-inspectors have been traveling over the State and going over the same route. There have been 11 of these engineer-inspectors, while under the new plan the work will be done by eight men.

The State has been divided into two districts or divisions. The first division placed in charge of E. R. Ruggles, now in charge of construction, is composed of all the counties of the Eastern Shore, from Cecil to Worcester inclusive, and Calvert, Charles and St. Marys counties on the Western Shore.

The second division is composed of the remaining counties of the State and Baltimore city and this is to be in charge of B. P. Harrison, now engineer in charge of maintenance.

A third division of the engineering staff will be in charge of J. A. Mackall, and this will have charge of the survey work which will be done by three field parties.

Each of the two main districts will be divided into sub-divisions composed of three counties, except in one case there will be two, with Baltimore city added.

Each of these sub-divisions or districts will have a resident engineer, who will reside at a central point designated by the State Roads Commission. He will direct his work from there, and as an aid in getting around quickly the State will furnish him with a motorcycle. He will be in charge of both construction and maintenance, and will report to the engineer in charge of his division, who will in turn report to the chief engineer.

Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester headquarters will be at Salisbury. By having one division headquarters in Salisbury, Commissioner Walter B. Miller can keep in close touch with the work and can have supervision over the same. Mr. Miller has charge of the work on the Eastern Shore.

The Bull Moose Followers Organize at Salisbury

The Bull Moose followers, led by William H. Day, held a meeting in Salisbury last Tuesday and formed a Progressive party for Wicomico county. The meeting was opened by Mr. Day, who, in a short speech, invited all people, regardless of former political affiliations, to join the cause. Charles O. Carter, of Berlin, a likely nominee as candidate for Congress in the First district, also made an address.

The convention elected John H. Tomlinson, Thomas W. Truitt and Richard M. Johnson as the state central committeemen for the county. The following were elected district delegates to attend a meeting to be held at Easton, September 5; William M. Day, Theodore Davis, Benjamin Davis, Reuben P. Brier, Lloyd A. Richardson, Robert D. Gray, Richard M. Johnson, J. Wolford Johnson, E. H. Riley, Col. Thomas Lavery, S. R. Henry, F. E. Hayman, Thos. M. Truitt, Elijah Q. Riley, John H. Tomlinson and Garfield White. Resolutions were adopted in accordance with the spirit of the meeting.

Crops Crowd Tip-Top Notch

Grain crops far in excess of last year's yield, and nearly the largest in the history of the United States, are indicated in the report by the Department of Agriculture at Washington.

The country's corn crop, estimated at 2,811,000,000 bushels, will be the largest in the nation's history, with the exception of the years 1906 and 1910, the former being the banner year with 2,927,000,000 bushels. As for the wheat crop, estimated at 680,000,000 bushels, that will rank fifth in size during the past 20 years.

The oats crop will be the largest the country has gathered, surpassing by 21,000,000 bushels that of 1910, the previous record. In barley, too, this year will establish a new record, the estimated yield of 202,000,000 bushels, being 24,000,000 bushels greater than that of 1906, the previous best year. The yield of rye, 35,000,000 bushels, will equal that of 1910, the former record year.

Of potatoes, which will amount this year to 371,000,000 bushels, only 1909 with its 389,000,000 bushels, produced a larger yield.

WILSON TO FARMERS

Shakes Hands With Thousands and Makes Several Speeches in Pennsylvania

The struggle for "daily bread" is the one overshadowing issue in the present campaign, as it has been all down along the ages, according to Gov. Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic candidate for the Presidency.

Addressing the great "farmers' rally," he assailed the tariff at Williams Grove, Pennsylvania, last Thursday afternoon. The New Jersey Executive emphasized the fact that the petition for bread came before all spiritual requests in the Lord's Prayer.

"The farmer should have equal consideration with everyone else in political policy," declared Wilson, "but the trustees of our Government have not looked upon it so."

Wilson then defended the farmers' free list bill passed by the Democratic House, which he said, put agricultural implements on the free list because the American manufacturers sell them cheaper abroad than at home. Taking issues with President Taft for vetoing this bill, Wilson said:

"Such changes as were contained in the bill did not comport with the ideas and plans of the trustees and the President vetoed the free list. I dare say he was right from this point of view, for he represented the trustees and not the people."

The Governor intended only to make an address at the State Grangers' picnic at Williams Grove, South of Harrisburg, but was surrounded by such big crowds wherever his train stopped that he found when he crossed from Pennsylvania into New Jersey at Easton that he had made a half dozen speeches, had shaken hands with thousands of people, and had talked collectively to a multitude of people in a single day.

It was the opening of the campaign outside of New Jersey, and the day's events were plainly a surprise to the Governor. He had looked for no demonstrations, as his train plans were not decided upon until the last moment. But from early morning until midnight, the crowds gathered at the railroad stations and cheered enthusiastically.

The Governor in all rode 215 miles through Pennsylvania, and when night came he was tired and hoarse. At Lancaster, Harrisburg, Williams Grove, Reading, Allentown and Easton, great crowds jammed the railroad yards and the Governor competed in his talks with the noise of locomotives and trains.

"The railways always interfere with politics," smiled the Governor as an engine thundered by while he was talking at Reading.

E. G. Lankford Bankrupt

A dispatch to the Baltimore Sun from Fredericksburg, Virginia, says: Frank G. Lankford, of Lancaster, has filed with the United States District Court a petition of voluntary bankruptcy giving liabilities of $62,299.62 and assets of $3,720. Mr. Lankford, a farmer, is indebted to banks and persons for money advanced in exchange for stock in the Lewis-Lankford-Tull Company, incorporated at Morattico, in Lancaster county.

The notes securing these losses were indorsed jointly by Mr. Lankford, F. W. Lewis and A. E. Tull. The company is in the hands of a receiver and suit is pending for the settlement of the claims in the Circuit Court for Lancaster county, Virginia and Maryland banks are the principal creditors.

The largest single claim is held by L. E. Mumford Banking Company, of Cape Charles, Va., the notes amounting to $26,113.33. The Farmers' Bank, of Somerset county, Marion Station, Md., holds notes totaling $8,000. Among other large creditors are the A. E. Tull Oyster Company, Marion Station, Md., $10,470.76; and Estelle Smith, Heaths-ville, Va., $5,000.

More Than a Million Women Have a Vote

A preliminary statement has just been issued by Director Durand of the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce and Labor, at Washington, giving the number of women of voting age in the six States in which they have the right to vote in all elections.

The whole number of women in these six States, taken together, who were of voting age in 1910 was 1,346,925, of whom 654,784, or 48.6 per cent., were native whites of native parentage; 333,925, or 24.7 per cent., native whites of foreign or mixed parentage; 327,682, or 24.3 per cent., foreign-born whites; 13,483, or 1.3 per cent., negroes; and 17,046, or 1.3 per cent., "all other"—that is, Indians and Chinese, Japanese and other Asiatics.

California has 671,886; Colorado, 213,425; Idaho, 69,818; Washington, 271,727; Wyoming, 28,840 and Utah, 85,729.

CHAPTER XXI.

The Stairway of Silver.

The stillness of the moment that followed was tense; then thickly the young man answered something irrelevant about a clown, a bottle and a loaf; with cap drawn down and half-averted face, he lurched a little forward in the darkness, and the sentinel's weapon fell. "Oh, that's you, is it, Henri?" he said in a different tone, stepping back. "How did you leave the fellow?"

"Eating the bread and calling for more!" As he spoke, the other stopped, swaying uncertainly; above the arch, the wick, ill-trimmed, brightened and darkened to the drafts of air through break and slit of the old lamp; and briefly he awaited a favorable moment, when the flame blew out until almost extinguished; then with hand near sword-hilt, somewhat overbriskly, but in keeping with the part, he stepped toward the arch; through it, and quickly past the sentinel.

"You seem to have been feasting and drinking a little yourself, tonight, comrade!" called out the latter after him. "I noticed it when you went in, and—But aren't you taking the wrong way?" As the other, after starting toward the barracks, straightened, and then abruptly wheeled into the road, running up the Mount.

"Bah!" A moment the young man passed. "Can't a soldier, articulating with difficulty, go to see his sweetheart without—"

"Eh bien!" The sentinel shrugged his shoulders. "It isn't my business, I think, though, I know where they'll put you tomorrow, when they find out through the guard at the barracks."

To this ominous threat the other deigned no response, only, after the fashion of a man headstrong in insubriety, as well as in affairs of gallantry, continued his upward way; at first, speedily; afterward, when beyond hearing of the man below, with more stealth and as little noise as possible, until the road, taking a sudden angle, brought him abruptly to an open space at the foot of a great flight of stone stairs.

Broad, wide, broken by occasional platforms, these steps, reaching upward in gradual ascent, had designated, in days gone by, been made easy for broken-down monarchs or corpulent abbots. Also they had been planned to satisfy the discerning eye, jealous of every addition or alteration at the Mount. My lord, the ancient potentate, leisurely ascending in ecclesiastical gown, while conscious of an earthly power reaching even into England, could still fancy he was going up a Jacob's ladder into realms supernatural. Saint Louis, with gaze bent toward the aerial escalier de dentelle of the chapel to the left, might well exclaim no royal road could compare with this inspiring and holy way; nor is it difficult to understand a sudden enchantment here, or beyond, that drew to the rock on three pilgrimages that other Louis, more sinner than saint, the eleventh of his name to mount the throne of France.

But those stones, worn in the past by the footsteps of the illustrious and the lowly, were deserted now, and for the moment, only the moon, which had escaped from the cloud, exercised there the right of way; looking squarely down to efface time's marks and pave with silver from top to bottom the flight of stairs. It played, too, on facades, towers and battlements on either side, and, at the spectacle—the disk directly before him—the Black Seigneur, about to leave the dark and sheltering byway, involuntarily paused. Angels might walk unseen up and down in that effulgence, as, indeed, the old monks stoutly averred was their habit; but a mortal intrusion on the argent way could be fraught only with visibility.

To reach the point he had in mind, however, no choice remained; the steps had to be mounted, and, lowering his head and looking down, deliberately he started. As he proceeded his solitary figure seemed to become more distinct; his presence more obtrusive and his echoing footsteps to resound louder. No indication he had been seen or heard, however, reached him; to all appearances espionage of his movements was wanting, and only the saint with the sword at the top of the steeple-guardian spirit of the rock—looked down, as it holding high a gleaming warning of that unwonted intrusion.

Yet, though he knew it not, mortal eye had long been on him, peering from a window of the abbots' bridge spanning the way and joining certain long unused chambers, next to the Governor's palace, with my lady's abode. Against the somber background of that covered passage of granite, the face looking out would still have remained unseen, even had the young man, drawing near, lifted his glance. This, however, he did not do; his eyes, with the pale reflections dancing in them, had suddenly fastened themselves lower; toward another person, not far beyond the bridge; some one who had turned in from a passage on the other side of the overhead architectural link, and had just begun to come down. An old man, with flowing beard, from afar the new-comer looked not unlike one of the ancient Druids that, in days gone by, had lighted and watched the sacred fires of sacrifice in the rock. He, too, guarded his light; but one set in the tall, pewter lamp of the medieval watchman.

"Twelve o'clock and all's—" he began when his glance, sweeping down, caught sight of the ascending figure, and, pausing, he leaned on his staff with one hand and shaded his eyes with the other.

A half-savage exclamation of disappointment was suppressed on the young man's lips; had he only been able to attain that parallelogram of darkness, beneath the abbots' passage, he would have been better satisfied, his own eyes, looking ahead, seemed to say; then gleamed with a bolder light.

"A sword and blade
A drab and a jade;
—It's one to the King's men of the army!"

he began to hum softly, as with a more reckless swing, quickly he went up in the manner of a man assigned some easy errand. At the same time the patriarch slowly and rather laboriously resumed his descent, and just below the bridge, without the bar of shadow, the two came together.

"Thank you it is too late for his Excellency, the Governor, to receive a message!" at once spoke up the younger, breaking off in that dashing, but low-murmured, song of the barracks.

"That you may learn from the guard at the palace," was the deliberate answer, as, raising his lamp, the watchman held it full in his questioner's face.

"Thanks! I was going to inquire." As he answered, at the old abbot's window in the bridge above, the face, looking out, bent forward more intently; then quickly drew back. "Good night!"

But the venerable guardian of the inner precinct was not disposed thus lightly to part company. "I don't seem to know you, young man," he observed, the watery, but keen and critical eyes passing deliberately over the other's features.

"No?" Unflinching in the bright glare of the lamp, the seeming soldier smiled. "Do you, then, know all at the Mount—even the soldiers?"

"I should remember even them,"

—he the quiet reply.

"Those, too, but lately brought from St. Dalard?"

"True, true! There may be some of those—uncertainly."

"No doubt! So if you will lower your lamp, which smells rather vilely—"

"From the miscreants it has smelled out," answered the old man grimly, but obeyed; stood as if engrossed in the recollection his own response evoked; then turned; walked on, and, a few moments later, his call, suddenly remembered, rang, belated, in the drowsy air: "Twelve o'clock and all's well! A new day, and St. Aubert guard us all!"

Twelve O'Clock, and All's—

A sword and a blade;
A drab and a jade—

The words, scarcely begun, above his breath, died away on the seeming soldier's lips, as the watcher on the bridge, looking down to follow first the departing figure of the old custodian, crossed quickly to the opposite window, and, from this point of vantage, gazed up after the young man rapidly vanishing in the track of the moonlight. A moment the onlooker stood motionless; then, ere the figure, so vividly defined in shine and shimmer, had reached the top of the stairway, made an abrupt movement and swiftly left the window and the passage.

At the head of the steps, which without further incident or interruption, he reached, the Black Seigneur, stepping to the shadow of a small bush against the wall, glanced about him; with knit brows and the resolute manner of one who has come to some definite conclusion, he left the spot of observation, almost the apex of the Mount, and plunged diverging to the right. From glint and glimmer to darkness unfathomable! For some time he could only grope and feel his way, after the fashion of the blind; fortunately, however, was the path narrow; although tortuous, fairly well paved, and no serious mishap befell him, even when he walked forward regardlessly, in feverish haste, beset with the conviction that time meant all in all, and delay the closing of the toils and the failure of a desperate adventure. Several times he struck against the stones; once fell hard, but picked himself up; went on the faster, only, after what seemed an interminable period, to stop.

"Am I, can I be mistaken?"

But the single star he could see plainest from the bottom of the deep alley, and to which he looked up, answered not the fierce, half-muttered question; coldly, enigmatically it twinkled, and, half-running, he continued his way, to emerge over-suddenly into a cooler well of air, and—what was more to be welcomed!—an outlook whereof the details were in a measure dimly shadowed forth.

On one side the low wall obscured not the panorama below—a ghost-like earth fading into the mist, and nearer, the roof of the auberge des voleurs, a darkened patch on the slope of the rock; but in this direction the man hardly cast a glance. Certain buildings ahead, austere, Norman in outline, absorbed his attention to the exclusion of all else, and toward them, with steps now alert and noiseless, he stole; past a structure that seemed a small salle des gardes whose window afforded a view of four men nodding at a table within; across a space to another passage, and thence to a low door at the far corner of a little triangular spot, alongside the walk and near a great wall. At once the young man put out his hand to the door; tried it; pushed it back and entered. Before him a wide opening looked out at the sky, framing a multitude of stars, and from the bottom of this aperture ran a strand, or rope, connecting with an indistinct object—a great wheel, which stood at one side!

CHAPTER XXII.

The Whirling of the Wheel.

As old as church or cloister, the massive wheel of the Mount had, in the past, played prominent part in the affairs of succeeding communities on the rock. If, or the hempen strand it controlled, had primarily served as a link between the sequestered dwellers, and the flesh-pots and material comforts of the lower world. Through its use had my lord, the abbot, been enabled to keep full the mighty wine-bottles of his cellars; to provide good cheer for the tables of the brethren, and to brighten his cold stone interiors with the fresh greens of Flemish tapestry, or the sensuous hues of rugs and fabrics from seraglio or mosque. Times less ancient had likewise claimed its services, and even in recent years, by direction of his Excellency, the Governor, had it occasionally been used for the hoisting of goods, wares, or giant casks, overcumber-some for men or mules.

Toward this simple monkish contrivance, the summit's rough lift, or elevator, wherein serfs or henchmen had walked like squirrels in a cage to bring solace to generations of isolated dwellers, the Black Seigneur had at first stepped impetuously; then stopped, hardly breathing, to look over his shoulder at the door that had been left unfastened. An involuntary question flashing through his brain—the cause of this seeming carelessness—found almost immediate answer in his mind, and the certainty that he stood not there alone—a consciousness of some one else, near, became abruptly confirmed.

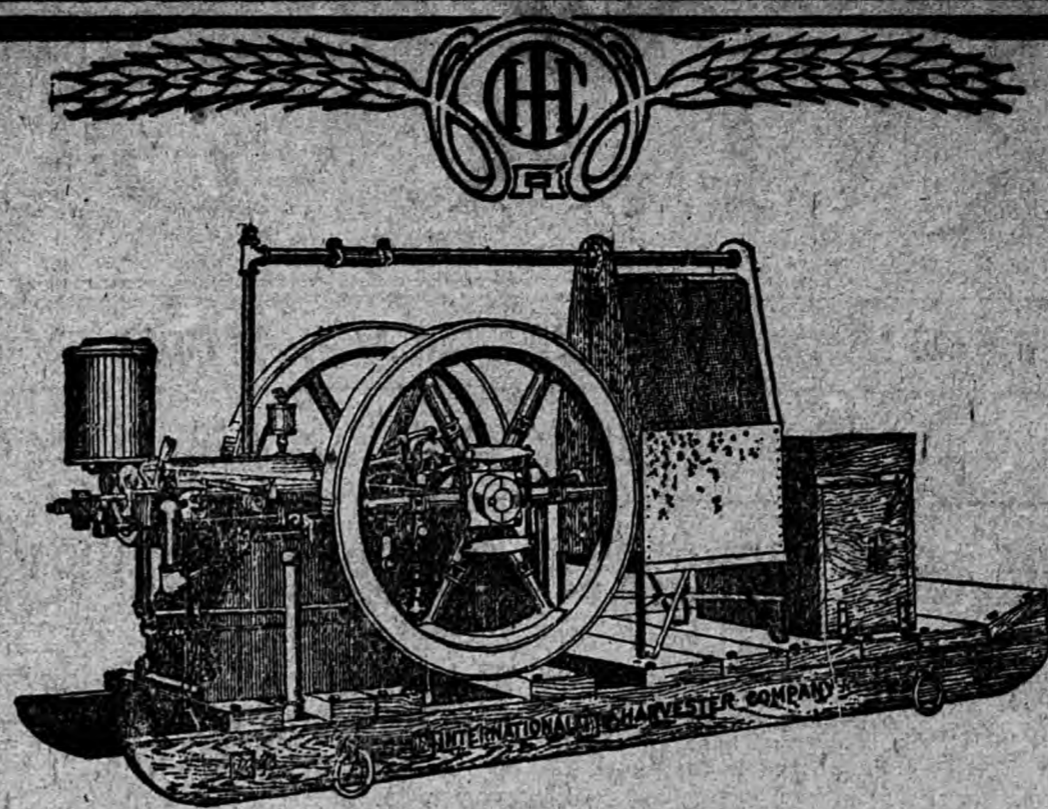

"What are you doing, soldier?" A voice, rough, snarling, drew swiftly his glance toward a presence, intuitively divined; an undersized, grotesque figure that had entered the place but a few moments before and now appeared from behind boxes and casks where he had been about to retire to his mattress in a corner.

"What do you want?" repeated this person, the anger and viciousness on his distorted features, revealed in the moonlight from the large opening, like that of some animal unwarrantedly disturbed.

"You, landlord of the thieves' inn!" And inaction giving way to movement on the intruder's part, a knife that had flashed back in the hand of the hunchback, with his query, was swiftly twisted from him and kicked aside, while a scream of mingled pain and rage became abruptly suppressed. Struggling and writhing like a wild-cat, Jacques proved no mean antagonist; with a strength incredible for one of his size, supplemented by the well-known agility of his kind, he scratched, kicked and had managed to get the other's hand in his mouth, when, making an effort to throw off that clinging burden, the Black Seigneur dashed the dwarf's head violently against the wooden support of the place. At once all belligerency left the hunchback, and, releasing his hold, he sank to the ground.

An instant the intruder regarded the inert form; then, going to the door, latched and locked it with a key he found inside. Having thus in a measure secured himself from immediate interruption without—for anyone trying the door would conclude the wheel-room vacant, or that the dwarf slept there or in the store-house beyond—the Black Seigneur walked to the aperture, and reaching up, began to pay out the rope from a pulley above. As he did so, with feet braced, he leaned over to follow in its descent a small car along the almost perpendicular planking from the mouth of the wheel-room to the rocks, several hundred feet below.

A sudden slackening of the rope—assurance that the car, at the end of the line, had reached the loading-spot below without the fortifications—and the young man straightened; in an attitude of attention, stood listening. But the stillness, impregnated only with a faint underbreath, the far-away murmur of water, or the just audible droning of insects near the trees on the rocks, continued unbroken. An impatient frown gathered on his brow; more eagerly he bent forward to gaze down, when through the air a distant sound—the low, melancholy hoot of an owl—was wafted upward.

Upon him at the aperture, this night-call, common to the Mount and its environs, acted in magical manner, and swiftly had he stepped toward the wheel, when an object, intervening, stirred; started to stagger to its feet. At once was the young man's first impelling movement arrested; but, thus forcibly drawn from his purpose, he did not long pause to contemplate; his hand, drawing the soldier's sword, held it quickly at the hunchback's throat.

"A sound, and you know what to expect!"

With the bare point at his flesh, Jacques, dully hearing, vaguely comprehending, could, indeed, guess and the fingers he had involuntarily raised to push the bright blade aside, fell, while at the same time any desire to attempt to call out, or arouse the guard, was replaced by an entirely different emotion in his aching brain. Never before had he actually felt that sharp touch—the prelude to the final thrust. At the sting of it, a tremor ran through him, while cowardice, his besetting quality, long covered by growl and egotism in his strength and hideousness to terrify, alone shone from his unprepossessing yellow features.

"You were brave enough with the soldiers at your back!" went on a determined voice whose ironical accents in no wise served to alleviate his panic. "When you had only a mountebank to deal with! But get up!" contemptuously. "And," as the hunchback obeyed, his crooked legs shaking in the support of his misshapen frame, "into the wheel with you!"

"The wheel!" stammered the dwarf.

"Why—what?"

"To take a little of your own medicine! Pardon! What a voluble fellow! In with you, or—"

With no more words the hunchback, staggering, hardly knowing what he did, entered the ancient abbot's machine for hoisting. But as he started to walk in the great wheel at the side of his captor, a picture of the past—the times he, himself, had forced prisoners to the wheel, stimulating with fear and whip—arose mockingly before him, and the incongruous present seemed, in contrast, like a black waking dream.

That it was no dream, however, and that the awakening would never occur, he well knew, and malevolently though fearfully he eyed the rope, coming in over the pulley at the aperture; to be wound around and around by a smaller wheel, attached to the larger, and—drawing up what?

An inkling of the sort of merchandise to be expected, under the circumstances, could but flash through his mind, together with a more vivid consciousness of the only course open for him—to cry out, regardless of consequences! Perhaps he might even have done so, but at that instant—as if the other had read the thought—came the cold touch of a bare blade on his neck; and with a sudden chill, the brief heroic impulse passed.

More stealthily now he began to study, his companion in the wheel, while a question, suddenly occurring, reiterated itself in his brain. This man—who was he? And what did he know of the mountebank, or his, Jacques, dealings with the clown? That his captor was no soldier of the rock, or belonged there, the hunchback felt by this time assured, and a growing suspicion of the other's identity brought home with new force to the dwarf the thankless part chance, perhaps, had assigned to him in that night's work. And at the full realization of the consequences, should his surmise prove correct—that must ultimately happen to himself in that event, when unwilling co-operation at the wheel should become known—almost had he again reached the desperate point of calling out; but at that moment a turn in the wheel brought to the level of the aperture, the car. In it, or clinging thereto, were a number of figures who, as soon as the rope stopped, sprang noiselessly to the platform.

"Seigneur, we hardly dared hope—"

"We obeyed orders, but—"

Gazing through the spokes of the wheel, and listening to their whispered exclamations, any lingering doubt as to who his captor was could no longer be entertained by the hunchback. These newcomers took no pains to conceal it; even when the dwarf's presence became known to them and unceremoniously was he dragged forth—they displayed a contemptuous disregard of him as a factor to interfere, not calculated to dull the edge of his apprehension! Too late now might he regret that pusillanimity that had caused him to draw back from an immortal role; already was the car again descending!

It came up loaded; went down once more, reappeared. On the little platform now were more than a dozen men assembled, but to Jacques this force looked multiplied. Amid the confusion of his thoughts, vaguely could he hear orders given; caught something about the need for quiet, haste, overpowering the guard; then saw the door open, and the men, like shadows, go out; leaving him alone.

No; with two black figures; ominous armed. He could see the glint of their weapons, and ventured to move his thick tongue, when, scarcely silenced, he crouched down; waited, with hands clenched, an interminable period; until faintly from afar sounded the note of a night-bird.

Roughly jerked to his feet, between them he walked to the door; heard it close; stepped out into the night. Many times had he made his way between wheel-room and guard-house, but now the route seemed strange, and, looking around near the structures at the entrance to his dungeons Jacques shook his head as if to rid his brain of some fantasy. But the scene did not change; the guard-house remained—familiar; unlike, with unknown faces peering from it, and an imperious voice issuing commands to him, once unquestioned commander here!

And comprehending what was being said, he struck his breast violently; with curses would have answered that the boys were his own; the dungeons, too, and what they held, and that he would never lead them there; never open these doors! But this grim, savage, determined hand beat down his arms, and his courage; and, with the shadow of the grave again before him, the dwarf walked on; past the stable into the guard-house, where familiar forms once had been seated, and into the passage leading to the dungeons beyond.

FLEET FOOTED CARIBOU.

They Can Trot Faster Than a Greyhound Can Run.

In Maine it is contended that the caribou can outrun any other animal. According to the testimony of one woodsman, caribou left behind a greyhound that had been matched against them.

A guide succeeded in starting the dog after some caribou—a herd of four standing like statues on the ice of one of the big ponds in the region along the west branch of the Penobscot.

Now, the caribou trots, instead of running, like most other wild animals. In the present case there had been a plentiful fall of snow, and a rain which had formed a thick crust and then another fall of snow, all of which constituted the very finest surface whereon to hold a race of this description.

When the greyhound was loosed its owner confidently expected that it would outrun the caribou. When the caribou woke up and hit their pace it was a sight to see them. They did not appear to be proceeding with much speed, but as the hound drew up on them they increased their pace. The hound was doing his very best, but made no headway against the caribou at all. The dog stuck to it with courage, but before it was half way across the pond the caribou had reached the other side and disappeared in the woods.—New York Press

PRESENT TARIFF FOSTERS FRAUD

Domestic Cotton Fabrics Sold to Americans as "Imported."

CHEATING THE CONSUMER

Less Than 2 Per Cent. Comes From Abroad, but Americans Pay Exorbitant Price for Home Goods Because of Deception and Prohibitive Tariff.

By ROBERT KENNETH MACLEA.
(Formerly consulting expert of the tariff board.)

New York.—The prohibitive tariff, revised upward by the Payne-Aldrich law, permits and fosters wholesale frauds upon the American consumer of cotton goods.

Less than 2 per cent. of the cotton fabrics consumed in the United States comes from abroad, because the protective duties have been made so high that importation is unprofitable.

Yet fully one-third of the cotton piece goods going over retail counters is sold as "IMPORTED" or under names implying a foreign origin.

This deception is generally perpetrated upon the consumer for the purpose of obtaining exorbitant prices for domestic goods.

The consumer, believing the goods are imported and knowing that the tariff adds excessively to their cost, pays 50 to 100 per cent. more than a fair price and does not suspect that he is being cheated.

Drains the Pocketbook.

Let us go straight to a specific example of the operation of this fraud. Take the tariff board's cloth sample No. 56, described as a "printed dimity." This is a medium priced cotton fabric known to almost every American housewife. What woman or girl hasn't possessed a dimity dress within the last few years? And if she went to the cotton goods counter and bought the material by the yard she no doubt saw such signs as:

IRISH DIMITY,

The World's tariff editor visited with me a department store in a New England city of 100,000 inhabitants and found recently a counter piled with these goods, placarded:

REAL IRISH DIMITY,

We procured samples of all of them. There was not one piece of imported goods in the lot. Investigation proved that the store buyer had purchased these "Irish" dimities from a Boston jobber at 10 cents a yard and that they were made in a New England mill. Here was a supposed "bargain" in a supposedly "imported" fabric, on which the retailer was taking a profit of 90 per cent!

This happens to be a fabric representing the highest efficiency in American manufacturing. It is a class of goods in which we can compete advantageously with any country in the world. The tariff board's investigations discovered on sample No. 56 an American cost of production of 7 1-3 cents a yard. In all the mills investigated the board's representatives found that the low and high costs of manufacture of this fabric did not vary half a cent a yard.

Who Gets the Profit?

The manufacturer of this American dimity, that is sold as "imported" and "Irish," does not get the excessive profit. In some instances the manufacturer does, but here he sells to the jobber at 8 cents, taking only a nominal manufacturing profit of two-thirds cent a yard. The jobber sells to the retailer at 10 cents, a 25 per cent. margin for the jobber.

In Canada, with 25 per cent. tariff, a cotton fabric costing 10 cents a yard would be sold to the consumer at 12 1-2 or sometimes at 15 cents if the pattern happened to be in special demand. In the United States, with its prohibitive tariff, the retail price is always much higher. The standard price retail is 15 cents for the fabric wholesale at 10. But when the tariff is excessive—it is 54 per cent. on this printed dimity—the dishonest retailer can "get away with" his deception and double or more than double his normal profit by selling the domestic article as "imported." The retailer knows that he could not buy a genuine imported dimity of this quality from a foreign manufacturer's agent in New York for less than 15 1-2 or 16 1-2 cents, and the trade would retail this at 25. He compares the domestic and foreign fabrics and finds the American made is equal in every respect to the fabric from abroad. So he says to himself, "Why not sell it as foreign goods at a price that will make it attractive?"

The extent of this deception is not realized by the majority of manufacturers, but some mills—usually those that have cried loudest and worked most insistently and quietly for excessive duties—have been and are parties to this fraud by labeling their goods or permitting them to be labeled by their selling agents "Imported." Sometimes the dishonest middleman is the one who collects the excessive profit from this deception.

Mill Man Pockets It.

In some cases the manufacturer takes the tariff favor for his own pocket. Tariff board sample No. 34 illustrates this. No. 34 is a fancy white goods used for dress wear. Its manufacturer encountered a fair demand for this material during the past season. Table No. 169 of the tariff board's report shows a manufacturing profit of 90 per cent. It costs to manufacture this cloth 12.16 cents a yard. The mill refuses to sell to any one excepting the jobber, and through this channel the cloth reaches the retailer at 22 1-2 to 25 cents a yard. The retailer charges the consumer 35 to 39 cents, according to location and local competition.

For comparison take the value of the fabric on weight. At the manufacturing cost of 12.16 cents a yard one pound of this goods is worth $1.23 as it leaves the mill. When it reaches the consumer (at 39 cents a yard) the price has been boosted to $4.20 a pound.

The manufacturing cost of this cloth in England is practically the same as here, yet the English manufacturer sells it for 15.44 cents a yard, the jobber at 17.26 cents and the retailer at 22 cents.

Bear in mind that the "difference in cost of production at home and abroad" in this class of fabric represented by sample No. 34 amounts to nothing, but the Payne-Aldrich tariff on it equals 55.89 per cent, or 8 1-2 cents per running yard.

Fancy goods of the type of sample No. 34 are products of the Lippitt-McColl class of mills. The Payne-Aldrich bill raised the duty on this cloth from 35 to 55.89 per cent. Is it any wonder that Senator Lippitt and Mr. McColl were interested in amending the Payne bill while it was in Senator Aldrich's committee when such amendments would permit them to take a manufacturer's profit of 90 per cent?—New York World.

COTTON AND WOOL RATES

Both Indefensible, and President Taft Knew It—Suppression of Facts by the Tariff Board—Statistics Employed to Mislead the Public.

By ROBERT KENNETH MACLEA.
(Formerly consulting expert of the tariff board.)

New York.—On not a single one of the ninety-five all cotton samples of fabric taken as the basis of the tariff board's investigations of the cotton schedule was there an actual reduction of the tariff by the Payne-Aldrich law.

The samples were selected with great care by the combined judgment of the board's experts, endorsed by the leading jobbers of the United States as being representative of all classes of fabric in use in this country, each sample being chosen because it was typical of the most used material of its particular weave or class. Ninety-five all cotton and five silk and cotton samples comprise the 100 that appear in the tariff board's cotton report.

Forty-seven of the ninety-five in the all cotton class pay 33.60 per cent. higher duties under the Payne-Aldrich than they did under the Dingley tariff.

Payne-Aldrich "Jokers."

Of these forty-seven classes of material on which the tariff was increased nine are the fancy weaves made in three or four New England mills commonly grouped as the "Lippitt-McColl interests." This is the clique of New England manufacturer-politicians who were permitted by Senator Nelson W. Aldrich to write the cotton schedule to suit themselves.

On the nine Lippitt-McColl fabrics the Payne-Aldrich law jacked up the average duty from 36.57 to 60.33 per cent. In other words, the promised "revision downward" on these goods was really a revision upward amounting to 64.97 per cent. of the Dingley rates.

The remaining thirty-eight classes of all cotton fabrics on which the duty was increased were not generally the product of the favored New England ring. Under the Dingley law these thirty-eight fabrics were assessed an average duty of 35.36 per cent. Under the Payne-Aldrich law they pay 44.53 per cent.—a revision upward equal to 26.07 per cent. of the former rate as compared with 64.97 per cent. increase on the manufactures of the favored few.

On just three among the 100 samples was there a decrease in duty. These were the silk and cotton fabrics (silk mills) that pay more than 100 per cent. duty. On these three samples the reduction averaged 5.66 per cent on the former duty—a reduction from 118.70 per cent. under the Dingley law to 110.44 per cent. under the Payne-Aldrich law. On one of the silk and cotton samples there was an increase amounting to 21.93 per cent. The fifth of the silk and cotton samples was left unchanged.

On the three remaining samples (completing the total of 100) no comparison is made because of apparent lack of authentic foreign prices.

Mr. Taft Was Mistaken. And still President Taft said in his speech at Boston, April 25 last.

"It (the Payne-Aldrich bill) was a vastly better bill than the Dingley bill. If I had refused to sign the Payne bill it would have maintained the Dingley bill with higher rates than the Payne bill."

When Mr. Taft made this statement he must have known that it was untrue. As for the wool schedule, he knew that the rates were not higher in the Dingley law than in the Payne-Aldrich law, for right after signing the latter bill he did not denounce its wool rates as "indefensible." And, as for the cotton rates of the Payne bill, he knew they were just as "indefensible" as the wool rates, for at the time he made this statement in Boston he had the tariff board's report on cotton before him.

It is true that the cotton report of the tariff board did not make this information available at a glance to Mr. Taft or to congress or to the public. The tariff board carefully avoided giving this information in a getatable, understandable form.

Suppressed the Answer.

"Was the tariff raised or lowered?" has been an instant question ever since the Payne-Aldrich law was enacted three years ago. The tariff board avoided answering it.

In making my official report to the board I submitted a table that did answer this question in respect to each one, excepting three, of the 100 cloth samples around which our months of investigation centered. After much sidestepping and discussion this table was expurgated and published in its emasculated form. The board's excuse was that it was not its duty to answer the question; congress could make its own computations. The official explanation for refusing to publish the table showing whether the tariff had been raised or lowered was that the market fluctuations made it of no value. This was only a quibble, because the respective tariff acts were so arranged that the increase in duty on a sliding scale kept pace with the price fluctuations.

The tariff board chose to print tables that would show only the assessment of duty under the two acts and left it to anybody who desires the information to figure out for himself the significant facts above set forth.

Benefit Only to Privilege.

From every point of view of the tariff grafter it is no doubt highly desirable that such facts, staggering as they are to the dishonest pretensions that the cotton tariff was really lowered, should be buried as deeply as possible in a mass of unexplained statistics. But it is to the advantage of every honest manufacturer and merchant who is seeking stability in business and fair opportunity to make a reasonable profit, that the truth should be made known. Just such policies of official evasion and suppression have made possible in the past the juggling of tariff legislation by and in behalf of the privileged few.

It is undisputed that the cotton schedule as written in the house ways and means committee by Representative Sereno E. Payne of New York did not provide the full measure of "revision downward" that the Republican party had promised. Still it was not until after the Payne bill went to the senate finance committee, of which Mr. Aldrich was chairman, that the "interests" got in their most deadly work. It is well known that Senator Aldrich freely consulted, if he did not actually permit, the Lippitt-McColl interests to write into the amended bill the duties affecting their own products—the fancy weaves made by only a few of the largest and richest New England mills.—New York World.

HUMAN ALBINOS.

Even Their Interior Organs, Brain Included, Lack Color.

There is no race of human albinos, and the albino appears in nearly all races. Latin albus means white in English. The word albino is applied to white plants and white animals. Specifically when we hear the word we think of white humans—men or women without color. In a full or complete albino (human) all pigment or color is absent in the skin, in the interior organs and even in the brain. White negroes and Indians exist, as well as Caucasian or "white races," some of these being quite dark.

A total albino has a white epidermis or skin and also white hair and red eyes, due to the absence of pigment in the membranes of the eye, which is for the purpose of screening light that is too bright for the retina; that is, in albinos; others can see the retina in the rear of the eye, and this appears to be red.

Albinism is not a disease, nor are the minds of albinos weaker than those of others. White blackbirds, mice, hares and birds are albinos. And then white elephants are sacred and worshipped by some races in Asia.—Exchange.

Broken Heads vs. Broken Hearts

The camp meeting season is here. It is singular, however, that with churches at almost every cross-road, the institution should survive. There was a time when the camp meeting was almost a necessity, in the absence of churches except at great distances. It was natural that the people should assemble in groves in the warm weather and worship God amid the scenes of nature.

The camp meeting, if confined to inspiring devotion and reclaiming men might continue and perhaps ought to; but when utilized mainly for social gatherings and hilarity takes the place of worship its expediency is doubtful. The improper trend of such meetings is emphasized each season among the colored population by reports of brawls, fights and sometimes murder. Only last week the newspapers contained accounts of most outrageous conduct in one of the upper counties of the Shore. Liquor, it seems, was imported, cards were played and quarrels ensued. To such an extent has the trend been wrong that it has been questioned if the law should not prevent such gatherings entirely.

It is not the purpose of this article to condemn camp meetings if properly conducted and with proper legal safeguards; it is the purpose, however, to absolutely frown upon gatherings in the name of religion that lead to riotous and other violations of the law. It is a sad reflection upon religious endeavor when broken heads rather than broken hearts are the outcome.

Good Work by the House

When the complete record of the Congress session which expired on Monday is made up and carefully studied, it will no doubt be seen that excellent service was rendered in behalf of the people by the Democratic majority of the House of Representatives. Also, that much better results would have attended the efforts of the Democratic members had it not been for the resistance of Republican members and the President, especially the latter.

The Democratic members are deserving of especial commendation for the various measures of tariff reduction which they first carefully prepared and considered, and then passed, with the cordial co-operation of some Republican members in both House and Senate, only to have them vetoed by the President. Had these bills been permitted to become effective, there is no doubt the people would have soon profited, through lower prices, by the liberal reductions in tariff taxation they aimed to bring about.

In vetoing these measures of tariff reduction, President Taft set himself in opposition to undoubted public sentiment, as evidenced by the election of a Democratic House of Representatives at the 1910 elections. And there is every reason to believe that at the election in November the people will rebuke him for his obstinate stand against their interest, by electing not only another Democratic House of Representatives, but a complete Democratic national administration. Then the country will have real tariff reform.—Wilmington Every Evening.

The prosperity of a town is not guided by the wealth of its inhabitants, but by the uniformity with which they pull together when any important undertaking is to be accomplished. A man with a thousand dollars at his command and a love for his town in his heart can do more for the upbuilding of it than the millionaire who locks up his capital and snaps his fingers at home progress.

The implicit confidence that many people have in Chamberlain's Cough, Croup and Diarrhoea Remedy is founded on their experience in the use of that remedy and their knowledge of the many remarkable cures of cold, diarrhoea and dysentery that it has effected. For sale by all dealers.

The Tariff Joke

Everybody knows what the Trusts buy with the money they corruptly transfer to Republican campaign funds and Republican lawmakers. The consideration on the part of the Republican party and its agents is a license to the crooked corporations to rob the people.

Quite a joke on the people, isn't it? But the rest of the joke is funnier still. The protected Trusts do not actually pay a penny of the corruption money. The votes are bought, both at the polls and in the halls of legislation, with money taken directly from the pockets of the people through tariff favoritism. The Elephant and the Bull Moose both favor a continuance of the licensed tariff robbery system. But the people don't. They have enough of political debauchery and excessively dear living. They are tired of stinting themselves of food and clothing to provide money for the Trusts to purchase legislation and legislators. That is why they are going to intrust the revision of the tariff to the Democratic party in November.

The partnership between half of the Republican party and one group of Trusts and between the other half and another group of Trusts is on the verge of dissolution because the people have at last discovered that they are the butt of the tariff joke.—Philadelphia Record.

Booth's Funeral Fit For a King

Twenty thousand Salvationists massed in 51 brigades, with 40 bands, and accompanied by 100,000 sympathizers, marched last Thursday through the packed ranks of spectators estimated as numbering fully 2,000,000 on the streets of London, England, to Abney Park Cemetery to lay the body of their late commander, Gen. William Booth, to rest beside his wife, who preceded him across the river by more than 20 years.

The procession formed on Victoria embankment at 11.30 a. m. On its march of five miles to the cemetery it passed Salvation Army headquarters in Queen Victoria street, where the waiting hearse joined the line. Draping the coffin was the Salvation Army's blood-and-fire flag and on it lay General Booth's uniform cap and his Bible instead of sword.

The services at the graveside began with the singing of the hymn "Oh, Death, Where Is Thy Sting? Oh, Grave Where Is Thy Victory?" by a chorus of thousands of voices. Lieutenant Coldman, from America, then offered a prayer, and Mrs. Booth Holberg sang a special hymn, "Oh, Boundless Salvation." Bramwell, Catherine and Eva Booth and several others spoke. As the coffin was being lowered into the grave the throng sang "Oh, Servant of God, Well Done."

Deeper Waterways Association

The War Department has advised Congressman S. Hampton Moore, president of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association, that it has favorably considered the request of the Association to assign one or more battleships to New London, Conn., during the Fifth Annual Convention of that body, September 4th, 5th and 6th. The Illinois and probably the Indiana will be assigned to New London.

President Taft is to attend the convention and will speak at historic old Fort Griswold, on Groton Heights, on September 6th. Accompanied by Mrs. Taft, he will arrive at New London on the Mayflower about noon, September 6th. The President's party will be met at the dock of the Hotel Griswold by a joint committee representing the city of New London and the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association and escorted to the hotel for luncheon, immediately after which the President will receive the delegates to the convention. Following the reception President Taft will motor to Fort Griswold and address the delegates to the convention, returning to the Mayflower late in the afternoon.

The Presidential salute of 21 guns will be fired from the battleships stationed in the harbor of New London, while a detail from the State Militia of Connecticut will act as an escort during the President's visit.

This is the second convention of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association that President Taft has attended, having been the guest of honor at the Second Annual Convention, held at Norfolk, Va., in November, 1909.

An article that has real merit should in time become popular. That such is the case with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been attested by many dealers. Here is one of them. H. W. Hendrickson, Ohio Falls, Ind., writes: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best for coughs, colds and croup, and is my best seller." For sale by all dealers.

Steam Roller on Color Line

Attorney General George W. Wickham and his associates in the Department of Justice last Tuesday proved themselves apt pupils of their Chief Engineer, Taft, of the steam-roller. Copying his methods they forced a peaceful solution of the troublesome question of negro membership in the American Bar Association in Convention at Milwaukee, Wis., forced both the Northern and Southern contingents to swallow a compromise that neither side approved of, and settled once for all the question of the color line in the Association.

Here is the story of the convention in brief, and the solution: Attorney General Wickham protested against the enforced resignations of Assistant Attorney General William H. Lewis, and two other negro members of the Association. When the Northerners demanded the dropping of the agitation against Lewis and the Southerners demanded their expulsion, Attorney General Wickham, representing the North in the Department of Justice, and General Bullitt, of Kentucky, and former Secretary of War Jacob Dickinson, of Tennessee, representing the South, arranged the compromise, by which Lewis and his negro associates are recognized as legally elected members of the Association, but no more negroes can be admitted without a sufficient chance for protest on the part of the association at large, thus, in effect, forever drawing the color in the association.

The Northerners did not like this grant of the demand for the color line, the South did not like the dropping of the agitation against Lewis, but the steam-roller whistle blew, the throttle was opened and the presiding officer declared the compromise adopted, and amid scenes of the wildest excitement, closely approaching riot, the convention was declared adjourned.

One Watermelon Feeds 66

Sixty-six railroad employees sat down to a banquet on one giant watermelon at Port Worth, Texas, last week, and all had their fill. The melon, one of the largest ever raised in the United States, weighed 140 pounds and came from the farm of John McKnight, a Cotton Belt conductor, who has a watermelon patch of enormous size near Tyler, Texas.

C. H. Lusk, Terminal passenger agent, refused to believe McKnight's story about the size of his watermelon, and on a bet the conductor brought one to Port Worth. The Texas melons this year are of unprecedented size.

Laura Townsend and Zedoc W. Townsend, her husband, vs. Cora Somers, John W. Hastings et al.

No. 2754, Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity.

The purpose of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain real estate, situated in Somerset county, in this State, whereof a certain Nancy Hastings died seized and possessed, and for the division of the proceeds of the sale among the parties interested in said real estate, as set forth in this cause.

The bill states that the said Nancy Hastings departed this life sometime during the year 1891, intestate, and seized and possessed of a lot or parcel of land, situated in the village of Marion, and lying and binding on the south west side of the county road leading from Marion to Tull's Corner, and adjoining the land owned or recently owned by Claude A. Messick, A. E. Tull, George Marshall and Theodore Bell, and also adjoining the Annie Colbourn place, and containing about three (3) acres, and the said Nancy Hastings left as her sole heirs at law, the following children and grand-children:

Laura Townsend, Cora Somers, John W. Hastings, Renatus A. Hastings; also the following grand-children, being children of Mary E. Holland, a deceased daughter of said Nancy Hastings, Bell Walker, Fred L. Holland, Barton D. Holland, Ira Holland, Herman Holland, Beniah Holland; also the following children of Isaac Hastings, a son of said Nancy Hastings, who died intestate during the year 1899, leaving surviving him a widow, Elizabeth Hastings, and the following children, Wilmer Hastings, Raymond Hastings, Arthur Hastings, Annie Ford, and Daisy Walker; also the following grand-children, children of Archibald M. Hastings, a deceased son, who died intestate, during the year 1886, Nancy N. Hastings, Alberta A. Hastings, Irma V. Dunn, Ellison B. Hastings; also a great grand-child, Gleason Adkins, infant son of Nadia Adkins, a daughter of the said Archibald M. Hastings, who died about January, 1904, leaving surviving her a husband, William Adkins, and the said Gleason Adkins, as her sole heirs at law.

That the said John W. Hastings, together with Ella Hastings, his wife, B. B. Walker, together with her husband, Wm. E. Walker, Fred L. Holland and Mary Holland, his wife, Barton D. Holland and Emma Holland, his wife, Herman Holland and Mabel Holland, his wife, Beniah Holland, Wilmer Hastings, together with Lillian Hastings, his wife, Renatus A. Hastings, together with his wife Annie Hastings, Raymond Hastings, Arthur Hastings, Annie Ford, together with her husband, Robert Ford, William Adkins, Elizabeth Hastings, Daisy Walker, together with her husband, Robert Walker, Nancy N. Hastings, together with her husband, John I. Hastings, all defendants in this suit, are all non-residents of the State of Maryland, that the said real estate is not susceptible of partition without material loss and injury to the parties entitled to interest therein, as above stated, and that it is necessary that the said land should be sold and the proceeds divided among the said parties, according to their respective interests.

It is thereupon this 18th day of August, 1912, ordered by the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Somerset county, once a week in each of four consecutive weeks before the 15th day of September next, give notice to the said absent or non-resident defendants, of the object and substance of this bill warning them to appear in this Court, in person, or by solicitor, on or before the 17th day of October, 1912, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

HENRY L. D. STANFORD, Judge.

True Copy. Test:
S. FRANK DASHIELL, Clerk.

County Surveyor's NOTICE

The undersigned, as County Surveyor of Somerset county, by virtue of the act of the January Session, 1910, Chapter 748, of the Laws of Maryland, hereby gives notice that he has received a Special Warrant, issued by the Honorable Commissioner of the Land Office, on the application of Henry A. Zenke, of Chicago, State of Illinois, and in his favor for the following described premises: The vacant land situated lying and being in Lawson's Election District, Somerset county, State of Maryland, on the north by the lands of Henry A. Zenke, on the east to the mainland, on the south by the boundary of Lawson's and Crisfield districts, and on the west fifteen hundred feet from the mainland. And that on or after 27th day of September, A. D. 1912, he shall proceed to lay out and survey the above described premises under said Special Warrant, for and in the name of the said Henry A. Zenke.

Why the Buick is the Best!

The government invited all the leading manufacturers of cars priced from $800 to $2000 to submit a car in competition to a committee of mechanical experts. The cars were driven to the designated place and the drivers dismissed. The examination was then made with no representative of any of the cars present. Motor for motor, shaft for shaft, bolt for bolt, the cars were compared, tested and appraised by the government experts. One by one cars were eliminated until but one remained. It was THE BUICK. Of the seventeen or eighteen cars submitted THE BUICK alone stood the rigid tests of quality and construction upon which the examination was based.

This car was at once turned over to the government for immediate service.

—The committee of the Progressive Party—Messrs. Thomas S. Hodson, John W. Nock and E. Samuel Gunby—have issued "The Moose Call," by advertisement in another column, for a mass-meeting to be held in Crisfield this (Tuesday) afternoon at 4 o'clock to select delegates to represent this county in the District Congressional Convention to be held in Easton on Thursday, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Congress for the First Congressional District and also an elector to be placed upon the Progressive ticket at the coming election in November.

—A Mass Convention of the Progressives of Worcester county was held in Snow Hill last Thursday afternoon. Representatives from the districts of the county were in attendance and enthusiastically entered into conference looking to an active and determined campaign in the county in behalf of the Progressive candidates. The convention was called to order at 2 o'clock and E. H. Wardell was made chairman, and C. O. Carter, secretary. The first business transacted was the adoption of appropriate resolutions. A mass delegation of twenty-four persons were elected to attend the District Convention to be held in Easton, Sept. 5th.

—In another column will be found an advertisement of the Maryland Agricultural College. This institution is Maryland's school of Technology and trains young men in Agricultural Science and Engineering. This is an age of specialization, and there is probably no institution of its class in the country better qualified to prepare young men for their life's work along some special line than is our State Agricultural School. The Federal appropriation brings the cost of an education at this institution within the reach of all. Our boys would do well to seriously consider the splendid opportunities offered at the Maryland Agricultural College.

—Mrs. Mary A. Wonnell died at her home in Atkinson's district, Worcester county, early Monday morning of last week, after a lingering illness, aged 87 years. Mrs. Wonnell was the widow of Mr. James Wonnell, who died many years ago. Her last illness extended over a period of 22 months. She was paralyzed nearly two years ago and had been a helpless invalid ever since. Funeral services were conducted at the home of the deceased on Tuesday afternoon after which her remains were interred in the family burying ground near Olivet Church. The services were conducted by Rev. George Hines, of Snow Hill. She is survived by four sons and two daughters—Misses Elizabeth and Mary Wonnell and Messrs. Thomas, Gordon, George and William Wonnell. Mrs. O. P. Dryden, of Princess Anne, is a niece of the deceased.

Few, if any, medicines, have met with the uniform success that has attended the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The remarkable cures of colic and diarrhoea which it has effected in almost every neighborhood have given it a wide reputation. For sale by all dealers.

The Board of Public Works made the following selection of deputy commanders of the state fishery force last Tuesday: S. Clay Camper, to command the Eliza Hayward, on duty on the Great Choptank River; Charles J. Howeth, to command the local guard boat in the vicinity of Poplar Island; Charles W. Loudon, to command the local guard boat on the Tred Avon River; Luther T. Miles, to command the Helen Baughman, on duty in the waters of Somerset county.

Who Owns The Dollar?

Last Saturday evening Mr. George W. Brown sent one dozen ears of corn and three pints of butter beans home and they were placed on the table in the outkitchen. Sunday morning Mrs. Brown found four ears of corn and about a pint of beans. She informed Mr. Brown that he had neglected sending home what she ordered. Mr. Brown told her someone had purloined the articles during the night. Sometime afterwards Mr. Brown went down to the chicken house and found a dollar bill lying at the door. The bill was neatly folded just as if it had been dropped from the pocket. Now Mr. Brown does not object to the person having the chicken, beans and corn for their Sunday dinner, but he objects to keeping the dollar, as it does not belong to him, and will return it to the owner if they call for it. The number on the bill is 263487894.

CIRCUS DAY, SEPTEMBER 13

Marks the Coming of the John H. Sparks World's Famous Shows to Princess Anne

Circus day dawns with an indefinable stir in the air that sets the small boy's heart to beating faster, and awakens pleasant memories in the minds of the gray beards who have not forgotten childhood's happy days.

The people of Princess Anne and community will undoubtedly be treated to a tremendous surprise in the above show, as report has it that it is not only tripled in size this season, but that it still retains those features that made it such a welcome visitor in past year, viz: Its freedom from all semblance of gamblers and fakirs, the high-class moral entertainment afforded and its honorable methods of doing business.

John H. Sparks and his managerial associates have not only ventured into a field of greater endeavor, but in so doing, it is said, have outdistanced tented rivals in a manner that leaves nothing to the imagination with the additional telling advantage of being tripled in size. All new in the matter of equipment and presentation, and still retaining the wonderful trained wild animal exhibition, which has done much to cause this show to become famous, it is the most remarkable amusement enterprise of its kind in the world today.

The big noon day parade, while a feature of marvelous beauty and enormous expense, is but a slight reminder of the great pomp, opulence and bewildering brilliancy to be witnessed under the mammoth tents, during the exhibitions. In other words the show is not all on the streets. Two complete performances in the afternoon and night.

If you knew of the real value of Chamberlain's Liniment for lame back, soreness of the muscles, sprains and rheumatic pains, you would never wish to be without it. For sale by all dealers.

MODELED FROM MEMORY.

Danton Was a Wonder, Though He Did Once Mix His Subjects.

Danton, the celebrated caricaturist, had a wonderful power of modeling from memory. After one long look at his subject he could go to his studio and make a bust quite perfect in its resemblance.

One day a young man came to him, saying that his sister was ill and about to die and that, although the family wished her bust modeled, they dared not excite her by mentioning it. Would he undertake to reproduce her features after seeing her once? Danton agreed, and next day the brother informed his sister that he intended to present her with some jewelry and that a young man would bring some specimens for her approval.

Danton brought in the jewelry and, going home, modeled a bust of striking resemblance. Next year an old gentleman, the father of the young woman, came to order a bust of the brother, who also had died. This, too, was a marvelous success.

The result of such planning, however, was not always as satisfactory to his patrons as in these cases. A gentleman who could not persuade his wife to sit asked Danton to enter a certain omnibus one day and fix in his memory the features of the lady opposite him.

He did so, modeled a beautiful bust and sent it home. It proved, however, to be not the mistress, but the maid, who had also taken the trip in the omnibus.

MONARCHS AND COINS.

Napoleon in a Temper and Louis Philippe on a Hunt.

The great Napoleon was not great at the whist table, and a characteristic story is told of him at St. Helena. At a private party of whist he took out four napoleons to use as markers, and one of the young ladies took up one of the coins and asked him what it was. The polite hero snatched it rather roughly from her and, pointing to the impression, exclaimed, "O'est mol."

The annoyance caused by this incident ruffled him so much that he made a misdeal. The party begged him to try again, and he did so with the same result. His countenance then displayed the rages of convulsive fury, and his anger was not appeased until the house had been searched for old cards, which could be more easily dealt. Meantime the unhappy Count Las Cases, his only attendant, was ordered to sit down at a spare table to play the cards alone until they should run smoothly.

Louis Philippe showed equal regard for the coin that bore his name. He dropped a louis on the carpet while playing whist and arrested the progress of the game to look for it, whereupon a foreign ambassador who was one of the party set fire to a billet of 1,000 francs to give light to the king under the table.

Dynamite and Tree Planting.

Possibly what at first sight appears to be the strangest application of dynamite is for the purpose of planting trees. Yet its success in this connection is said to be peculiarly remarkable. When a hole is made with a spade the surrounding soil is left in its hard condition. The result is that the roots find it difficult to start. They are cramped in the tight quarters of the hole and cannot pierce the surrounding hard wall of earth. With dynamite a large, clean hole is blasted out, and, in addition, the soil on all sides is loosened for five or six feet. When the tree is planted the young and tender roots force their way without effort through the crevices, sucking up nourishment, and commence to grow from the moment they are set without any retardation whatever.

Peas and Lentils.

The word "pea" is derived from Pisa, a Greek city of Elis, which seems to have been the center of the pea growing industry for years before the time of Christ. The antiquarians aver that the "mess potage," for which Esau sold his birthright, was a dish of peas. In those times they were called "lentils," and even at the present day the English common people of several of the English shires, notably Middlesex as well as Oxfordshire, call them "tias," dropping the "l." In the time of Mary they were called "peasens," and in the time of Charles I. "pease."

A Literary Sensation.

"What's the cause of the excitement? Look! There's a great crowd around the public library building. Something must have happened."

"Wait a minute. I know the librarian. I'll telephone over and see what's wrong."

(Business of telephoning.)

"Well, what is it?"

"Somebody has started a rumor that there is a business man inside reading a book of poems."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Unlike Fishing Lines.

"That fishing song in the new opera is clever, don't you think?" asked the critic.

"No," replied the hard luck angler; "it isn't at all natural."

"No?"

"No; the lines are too catchy."

LOOK HERE FOR IT

Many a Princess Anne Reader Will Be Interested

When people read about the cures made by a medicine endorsed from far away, it is surprising that they wonder if the statements are true? But when they read of cases right here at home, positive proof is within their reach, for close investigation is an easy matter. Read Princess Anne endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills.

John B. Fleming, Main street, Princess Anne, Md., says: "You are at liberty to continue the use of the testimonial I gave in 1907, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills for the cure I received at that time has been permanent. I often tell my friends about this remedy. For a long time I was troubled by pain and weakness in my back, brought on by disordered kidneys. The kidney secretions were also in bad shape. I had often read about Doan's Kidney Pills and finally procured a box at Omar A. Jones' drug store. The results of their use were very satisfactory."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

THE MUMMIES MOVED.

They Raised Their Heads as if to Bid Adieu to Africa.

In his book "Africa of Today" Joseph King Goodrich tells of the shipment of a number of mummies from the banks of the Nile to various museums. "They were put on board a lighter in the river," he says, "and arranged side by side. As the boat was moving away from the bank many of the mummies seemed to come back to life. Certainly they moved and the heads seemed to rise as if the bodies were turning so that their eyes might take a last look at the place where these old kings and queens had lain in peace for over two thousand years."

"The effect upon the boatmen was most panicky, and even the unsuspicious foreigner felt as if something uncanny were occurring."

"The explanation is absurdly simple. The heat of the sun had caused the expansion of certain parts, but it was never a satisfactory explanation to those Nile boatmen, who were for a long time loath to handle mummies as cargo."

Scenery in Bering Sea.

"Sailing southeasterly along the shore of that haunt of the walrus and polar bear, St. Matthew's Island, in the Bering sea," said a navigator of those waters, "one is impressed by the mingling of the grotesque and the terrible in the character of the scenery. The northwest point of the island is split up into a collection of large rocks of most fantastic shapes. Houses, spires, cathedrals and figures of men and beasts are some of the forms assumed by these volcanic fragments, which, rising black above the white, seething foam of the sea that breaks against their base, give a weird aspect to the grim and desolate region. One rock resembling a large saddle suggested to me the thought that some antediluvian giant might in his time have straddled it and perhaps fished for reptiles over the beetling cliffs which it surmounts."

Many Driven From Home

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery and cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles find quick relief and health returns. Its help in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping-cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Omar A. Jones, druggist.

STORY OF COTTON IS A THRILLER

SHOWS EVILS OF PROTECTION

Whole People Robbed by a Tariff That Rich Manufacturers May Benefit—Robert Kenneth MacLea, Consulting Expert of the Tariff Board, Shows That the American People Are Mulcted of $88,000,000 a Year.

New York.—Did you ever hear the story of cotton?

It is as thrilling as a narrative of adventure. It is as interesting as a novel—interesting particularly because it concerns the welfare of millions of people who wear cotton goods. It is interesting because it is the dress of the poor, the universal substitute for wool and silk. It is interesting, furthermore, because it is true.

The story of cotton is the story of a protective tariff for the benefit of rich manufacturers at the expense of the whole people who wear cotton goods. It has been reasonably calculated that because the cotton tariff is fixed by the Payne-Aldrich law the American people are paying $88,000,000 more every year than they should pay for their cotton goods and that a saving of this amount could be accomplished by a reasonable reduction in the present duties.

The story of cotton is told by an expert, Robert Kenneth MacLea, consulting expert of the tariff board, in a series of articles published in the New York World. Mr. MacLea's views are the views of a lifelong Republican, a friend of the protective policy of the Republican party, but at the same time an opponent of tariff graft and favoritism. To this work Mr. MacLea has brought a varied experience, covering more than twenty years, in the manufacture and marketing of textiles.

He first distinguished himself as an advocate of honest tariff legislation by finding the "jokers" of the Payne-Aldrich act, when the agents of a few New England mills were permitted to write their own rates to suit themselves. He was chairman of the tariff committee of the New York Dry Goods Merchants' association and in that capacity conducted a campaign which attracted the attention of the newly created tariff board. To accept the position of consulting expert to the board he gave up the management of the domestic business of the New York firms of R. B. MacLea & Co. and Converse & Co.

The story of cotton is a companion piece to the story of Schedule K—the woolen schedule—declared by President Taft to be infamous and indefensible.

The findings of the tariff board with regard to the woolen schedule were analyzed by Chairman Underwood of the ways and means committee and condemned as inaccurate, incomplete and worthless as an aid to legislation. When the tariff board's findings on the cotton schedule were made public the World decided to make its own investigation concerning it, and Mr. MacLea was selected for that purpose. The World had the findings of the board on manufactures of cotton dissected and translated into language of the everyday man and woman.

One hundred cloth samples purchased in representative domestic markets were made the basis of the tariff board's findings on the cost of cotton cloth produced in this country. Mr. MacLea used the same cloth samples as concrete illustrations of the workings of the tariff and from these exposed the very generally perpetrated fraud of selling American made goods as "imported" and showed why the excessive tariff permits and fosters this imposition.

Recognizing that the tariff would be a vital issue of the campaign and that controversy would center about President Taft's "nonpartisan" tariff board and its work, the World undertook the investigation of cotton and sought answers to the following questions:

Has the work of the tariff board justified the delay in reducing the tariff and giving relief from the high cost of living?

What Have the people gained in the three years under the Payne-Aldrich tariff IN RETURN FOR MORE THAN $5,000,000,000 TAXED OUT OF THEIR POCKETS AND INTO THE POCKETS OF PROTECTED PRIVILEGE?

How honestly, impartially and thoroughly did the "nonpartisan" tariff board undertake its task?

Several months before the cotton report was completed Mr. MacLea declares that he discovered sinister influences in the tariff board's working to eliminate findings most damaging to the favored few in the cotton mill industry. Such suppressed information as Mr. MacLea considers to be of vital importance to the cotton industry and the public has been presented in the World. He has also explained what the mass of figures of the cotton report signifies and presented some of the most important of the conclusions to be drawn from that report, a work which the board saw fit not to attempt. The story of cotton, as written by Mr. MacLea, and published in the World from time to time, forms one of the most interesting and important features of the present campaign.

MEETING WITH CASEY.

And a Difference of Opinion as to the Name of the Result.

Mr. Halloran surveyed the insurance agent with a dark and hostile countenance. The fact that one eye was concealed by a somewhat grimy hand-kerchief did not add to the attractiveness of his expression.

"Haven't you made up your mind yet to insure with us?" inquired the agent. "You told me I might call again in a few days."

"There was two of you at me to get an accident insurance policy," said Mr. Halloran, breathing heavily. "I told you and him both you might call in again, and he come first, day before yesterday, and I insured with his company."

"That very night I met up with Barney Casey on the way home, which was what I was expecting would happen," continued Mr. Halloran, raising himself by grasping the arms of his chair with two capable though scarred hands, "and when we'd finished with one another I was like this!"

"Yesterday morning I sent for the insurance chap, and says I to him, 'Look at me,' I says, 'and estimate the damages and pay them.'"

"He squirmed right out o' the door, saying 'twas no accident I'd had."

"Now, if meeting with Barney Casey, after keeping out o' his way for six months, is no accident, I'm done with insurance companies, and the sooner you have this house the better 'twill please me."—London Tit-Bits.

POSTED ON HORSES.

The Tribune an English Expert Paid to a Baltimore Jurist.

Once when Judge J. Upshur Dennis was abroad he visited the Duke of Westminster's estate, Eaton Hall, in Chester. He went unceremoniously enough and directly to the stables. He was told by the person who looked after those horses of august blood and breeding extraordinary that they could not be viewed except by permission in writing of the duke.

Judge Dennis had passed the duke on the road going up to London. Anyway, he had no intention of asking permission in writing. He leaned over the paddock gate and looked at the horses inside.

He saw a gray horse that attracted him, and he remarked to the keeper of the place that that particular horse (indicating) must have in him a double cross of Chanticleer, a famous race horse that lived 600 or 800 years ago.

It was indeed true, and his remark established all the freemasonry needed for a day in the stable. Judge Dennis told his guide more about the horses than the keeper of the stable archives knew himself. * * * He traced relations here and identified crosses there.

"If all the stud books in the world were destroyed," the stable steward told the visitor when the tour of the stables was completed, "you, sir, could rewrite them all from memory."—Baltimore News.

The Whitest City in the World.

There cannot possibly be a whiter city than Cadiz unless it be built of snow. The best way to approach the port is to take a trip on one of the small steamers which ply between the ports of Morocco and Spain. As you near the coast you see in front of you a white mass, which appears to be floating upon the water, just as you see. The first thought of a foreigner is that he is in sight of an iceberg. The white mass, glittering in the sun and rendered more dazzling by the blue sea and sky, looks exactly like a monster ice mountain partly melted, so that outlines of castles and hill appear upon it, but only for a second does the illusion last, for you know there are no icebergs in that part, and you are quickly informed that you are looking at Cadiz. No other town in the world presents such a magic appearance.

Adhesive Postage Stamps.

Adhesive stamps were first used experimentally by James Chalmers in Dundee, August, 1834. In 1837, Feb. 13, they were introduced into the English postal department by Rowland Hill. They were introduced in the United States in 1845, but their use was not authorized by congress until March 3, 1847. On June 1, 1856, prepayment was made compulsory in the United States. Prepayment was made compulsory in other parts of the world at various times from 1837 to 1887.

LARGEST
Carriage, Wagon and Harness Dealer
In the State of Maryland

New styles for 1912, they are exclusive, no other dealer can get them only through J. T. Taylor, Jr., as I am the general agent for the manufacturers who produce the new styles which other manufacturers copy, and are always one year behind the styles.

I Have in Stock for Your Selection
The lightest surrey made in the U. S. for one horse.
The lightest runabout with 4 styles axles.
The lightest novelty Wrenn buggy with 4 styles axles.
The lightest speed cart on the market.

All of the above goods are bought in car load lots.

My Farm Wagons cannot be equaled for ten dollars ($10.00) more. We don't only guarantee our steel axles, but we guarantee every part of the wagon. Our rims are deeper, our spokes and hubs are larger. Look them over, don't be deceived by paint and putty.

Yes, I keep the price down. I have no one to divide my profit with but my customer. I am selling more buggies, runabouts, wagons, and harness this year than ever before. I have the largest stock you ever saw.

14 Car loads of Buggies and Wagons.
One and one-half car loads of Harness.

My sales last year were over One Hundred Thousand Dollars ($100,000). I'll build you a buggy to order at the same price you pay for the ones you have forced on you by other dealers. You have been paying too much; come see for yourself.

THE TARIFF IN SUMMER DRESS FOR HOT-WEATHER READING.

17 CENTS OR 25?

15 1-5 CENTS OR 20?

A fancy wash fabric manufactured in New England for 2-3 cents a yard is sold by the manufacturer at 14 1/2 cents—a manufacturing profit of 47 1/2 per cent, less selling expenses of 5 or, at most, 6 per cent. The jobber (wholesale distributor) adds 3 1/2 cents—a profit of 22 1/2 per cent, less selling expenses. The retailer adds another 42.8 per cent, and the American housewife gets the cloth at 25 cents—cloth that in England can be bought retail for 17 cents, identical in weave and quality! WHY?

Cotton curtain scrim, found in millions of homes, is made in America at a cost that gives the manufacturer ample profit, selling it to the print works at 6 cents a yard. The print works sells to the jobber at 10 1-3 cents, although it finishes the goods at a cost of 1.37 cents. The jobber adds 20 per cent, laying down the curtain scrim to the department store at 12 1/2 cents. The retailer charges the American housewife 19 to 29 cents. More than likely he advertises it as "IMPORTED" and sells it for the top price, because the tariff is so high that the genuine imported goods cannot be sold for less. It costs just as much in England to make this curtain material, yet the English retailer sells it for 15.22 cents (7 1/2 pence) a yard, against 19 to 29 cents under the American tariff! WHY?—From N. Y. World.

Facts Suppressed and Issues Evaded by Taft Tariff Board

By ROBERT KENNETH MACLEA
Formerly Consulting Expert of the Tariff Board

Under the pressure of promise to fight chicanery and fraud in tariff legislation, I deem it a public duty not to withhold the facts in my possession relative to the investigation of the cotton manufacturing industry. Regretful that my experience with the board warrants such conclusions, I am compelled to present the following indictment:

- I. That the tariff board, in its report on manufactures of cotton (Schedule L), has suppressed findings of vital importance to the cotton industry, to the government, and to the public and to the special privileges of a few New England manufacturers who were permitted by Senator Aldrich to write the cotton schedule to suit themselves.
- II. That the tariff board has perverted other facts, thereby avoiding exposure of tariff injustices that have benefited the few at the expense of the many manufacturers.
- III. That the tariff board has not, as stated by President Taft to congress, drawn any conclusions that would be valuable in advising the congress and the people of the changes that ought to be made to make more equitable their (the wool and cotton schedule) effects. The board did not attempt to draw conclusions, or, rather, it drew conclusions, but it hid them from its "scientific" collection by arguing that such deductions as its data justified were not called for under the specifications of its employment.
- IV. That the tariff board's report was arranged so as to be incomprehensible to either legislators or laymen; that tables were deliberately disassociated or emasculated if not suppressed, and that a congressman would require the services of a statistician and a clerk six months to make head or tail of the jumble of tariff revision.
- V. That the tariff board avoided altogether investigating certain phases of tariff graft hidden in "Jokers" of the Payne-Aldrich law.
- VI. That the tariff board falsely reported that it was impossible to obtain abroad cost data on weaving necessary to enable it to make an intelligent comparison with costs at home; that the board was offered opportunities for obtaining such data, but did not use them; that such foreign data as were obtained were in some cases suppressed and in others were inadequate for honest comparison, although so utilized.
- VII. That the tariff board betrayed the confidence of American manufacturers by publishing data that should have been held for confidential information of legislators; that competitors were given thereby valuable trade secrets, while the foreign manufacturers divulged nothing of similar character or importance.
- VIII. That the tariff board's treatment of economic questions vitally affecting the relation of the tariff to the prices exacted from consumers was disingenuous and misleading.
- IX. That the tariff board has proved not to be the "nonpartisan" and scientific instrument promised by President Taft; that its members displayed inexperience in business incompetence and extravagance. I have been forced reluctantly after a year's intimate association to accept the opinion that the tariff board has been nothing more than an effective cog in a "standpat" political machine; that some of the men who most loudly for a tariff board and some of the time complacently in the knowledge that the creation of the board was a scheme to prevent genuine tariff reform as long as possible by "gumming the cards and delaying the game," a charge frequently made, but which I for a long time discounted.
- X. That such facts as the tariff board has reported sustain the charge, as to both the wool and the cotton schedules, that the consumer has been robbed outrageously as a consequence of excessive duties and that the profits have not gone into the pockets of the laborer to maintain an American standard of living.

Beyond Pleasure.

The young attorney was handling his first case before a jury and in its presentation was employing all the odd bits of information acquired during his college course that would even remotely apply to a statement of his case. The judge at last grew weary and impatient, at which the lawyer bridled and said:

"Is it the pleasure of the court that I should proceed?"

"Pleasure, sir," replied the court. "has been out of the question for a long time past, but you may proceed."

—New York Tribune.

A Blunt Critic.

A famous art expert was talking at a dinner in Philadelphia about some of Sargent's cruelly realistic portraits.

"Sargent once painted a Philadelphia woman," he said, "and when the work was finished the lady's coachman called for it. As the coachman was studying the portrait Sargent said to him:

"How do you like it?"

"The man answered thoughtfully: 'Well, sir, ye might have made it a little better lookin', mebbe; but if ye had, ye'd have spoilt it.'"

—Washington Star.

An Architectural Affection.

There is a "Mutual United Insurance" building in Philadelphia, a "Tevtonia" building in New Orleans, a "Tribune" building in Chicago, and several "clv" buildings in New York and Boston, but this fact is due rather to affected scholarship rather than to wrong font stonecutters.—Christian Science Monitor.

At Red Gulch.

"Mr. Mayor, we've got a horse thief in jail."

"Well, keep him there."

"But for how long? He's an expense to the town."

"Oh, hang the expense."

So they did.—Kansas City Journal.

Reminiscence.

The author had written one successful story, and he never grew tired talking of it.

"Don't you know," said one of his friends to another one day, "Ritter always reminds me of a pleased dog?"

"That's odd. How does he?"

"He's always wagging his tale."

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

A WELCOME

By ARTHUR WILLIAMS

During the first half of the nineteenth century the weapon in vogue in what was then "the west"—Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and Ohio—was the bowie knife. It took its name from Colonel Bowie, its inventor or at least the man who made it famous by his frequent use of it. It was twelve or fourteen inches long and was worn usually stuck in a belt at the waist, but men have been known to carry it hanging between the shoulder blades. This was probably because when its quick use was called for a man could throw his hand up to the back of his neck and pull it out in a hurry.

It was back in the thirties or the forties that a young man alighted from the stagecoach that drew up to a tavern in the town of Vincennes, Ind., now a sizable place, but then a backwoods village. He wore his hair long, and there was a German cut about his clothes.

"I wonder who that feller is?" remarked Bill Thompson, who was sitting in the open window of the bar of the tavern. "He don't look like anything I ever see in these parts afore."

"Dutchman," said Si Griggs. "Not a bit of a Dutchman! The Dutch that come out yere don't wear no sich clothes as them. If he's come out to stay I reckon he'll need a settin' down. He's rather too fine a bird for this yere wilderness."

The two men followed the stranger to the bar, and as soon as he had been provided with a room Thompson stepped up to him and said:

"Stranger, welcome to Vincennes. Do you mean to stay with us?"

"For awhile."

"Well, come in and have a drink. We always expect strangers to drink with us when they come yere. It's a reg'lar institution with us."

"I don't drink anything but beer or wine."

"Beer or wine! D'y'e expect to get them soft drinks out yere? Brandy is the drink in these parts. Step up and try it."

The stranger said he had never drank liquors and didn't care to begin. Whereupon the two men undertook to force him into the customs of the country. He was very obstinate and persisted in refusing.

"Waal, stranger," said Thompson, "the custom out yere is drink or fight. Which'll you do?"

"Waal kind of fighting do you mean—boxing?"

"Boxing! D'y'e suppose we skin our delicate knuckles on one another? Not much! We use Colonel Bowie's implement."

"Didn't yer never see one?" And he pulled the article out from the back of his neck. The stranger took it and examined it, running his thumb along the sharp edge of the blade and feeling the point with the tip of his forefinger. "When you fight with this," he asked, "do you wear anything about your stomach or your chest?"

"Haw, haw!" laughed both men.

Now, they were bluffing. They had no idea of fighting the young man. They wished to initiate him into western customs.

"Yodsay I must fight or drink?" asked the youngster.

"That's our way out yere."

"With that thing?"

"Yes."

"Well," continued the stranger, "if you'll cover up your body, leaving only your legs, arms and face exposed, I think I'll fight."

"What y' givin' me?" said Thompson. "What y' goin' to do about your own body?"

"Nothing."

"If you's agoin' to fight," said Si Griggs, "come on and stop yer foothin'."

Griggs and Thompson exchanged glances, and Thompson put on more bluff than ever, leading the way to a suitable spot for the contest. Griggs gave the stranger his knife, and the other two took position. They were somewhat surprised at his readiness to fight, and Thompson, though he kept up a swagger, began to look a trifle uneasy. He was afraid he'd be obliged to hurt the youngster. He stood on the defensive, but this was because he had to. The knife in his opponent's hand was like a humming bird's wings—fluttering dangerously near Thompson's face. Presently he felt blood trickling from his nose, and, putting up his hand, found the tip end was gone.

"By gum!" he exclaimed. "This joke has gone far enough. Who be you, younker, anyway, and where did you learn to handle a bowie knife?"

"I'm Frederick Dubois, the son of Jules Dubois, one of the original French settlers of Vancouver. I've just finished at a German university, and it is there I learned to handle the small sword, which is but a trifle longer than this bowie knife. I have come out here either to sell the family property or settle here. I don't know which; but, judging by you gentlemen, you must all be fine fellows, and I think I'll remain with you."

"What—you Fred Dubois? Shaker!"

And, holding one hand to his nose, he offered the other to his conqueror.

Dubois invited his new made friends to the chateau and brought out from the cellar a bottle of wine of a very old vintage. They sniffed it, tasted it and pronounced it mighty thin stuff. Then Dubois brought out some fine old brandy. This suited them better, but they said they missed the sting to which they had been accustomed.

Suffragists in Great Turnout

Headed by Dr. Anna Howard Shaw and Jane Addams and with delegations from Cleveland, Cincinnati, Baltimore and other cities in line, the woman's suffrage parade at Columbus, Ohio, last Tuesday, held under the auspices of the Ohio Centennial Celebration, was the most imposing demonstration of the "Votes for Women" movement ever seen in the Middle West.

Twenty or more speakers from New York, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles and Denver took the place at the head of the procession and marched the entire length of the parade.

The parade was the beginning of a whirlwind campaign for woman's suffrage that will be waged in Ohio until the special election, September 3, when the constitutional amendment giving women of Ohio equal suffrage with men will be voted on.

Several State Appointments

Gov. Goldsborough has announced a batch of minor State appointments, and assistant superintendent of public buildings at Annapolis. R. Frank Smith, of Baltimore city, was named for the place of superintendent, while the assistant's office went to Edward H. Jones, of Solomons.

A number of oyster inspectors were also named by the Governor as follows: For Baltimore city duty, Joseph S. Beeks, John T. Hart and James E. Marshall, all of Baltimore; and Albert S. Wingate, of White Haven; for county duty, Thomas J. Walter, of Wicomico, at Nanticoke; William A. Dobson, of Talbot, at Oxford; George W. Letourneau, of Anne Arundel, at Annapolis, and Richard H. Hart, of Dorchester, at Cambridge.

Postoffices to Close Sundays

All first and second class postoffices will be closed on Sundays as a result of one provision of the new postal appropriation bill passed by Congress and signed by President Taft. Every important city in the United States is affected. Hereafter only special delivery letters will pass through on that day and no mail will be placed in lock boxes. The Princess Anne postoffice being a third-class office our citizens will get their Sunday mail as usual.

The Dry Land Life-Saver

A hurriedly given number, a pause, a deep bass answer, a reassuring word, and the telephone receiver is hung up. That is all—before you know it the doctor's car is "throbbing" before the door.

Yes—at such times, accidents, sudden illness, and such—the Bell Telephone's value can no longer be measured in dollars.

Take this to heart yourself. How about your home? Residence rates are low. It would be wise to call up the Business Office right now. Use any Public Telephone—the message is free.

GIRL AND CHUM DROWN

Annie Dickerson, of Salisbury, and Violet Kemp Lose Their Lives in Jones' Creek

A sad drowning accident occurred Monday afternoon of last week when Annie Dickerson, the 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Dickerson, of Salisbury, and Violet Kemp, aged 16 years, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Kemp, of near Princess Anne, lost their lives in Jones' Creek, about a quarter of a mile from the residence of Mr. Kemp.

Miss Dickerson, with her sister, Margaret, had been visiting at the home of Mr. J. Thomas Taylor, Jr., on Depot street, for a week, and Miss Kemp, accompanied by Miss Lurline Gibbons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvah N. Gibbons, and Miss Eleanor McAllen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. McAllen, drove out to the Kemp home to visit Miss Kemp. About 4 o'clock Misses Kemp, Dickerson and Gibbons went in bathing while Miss McAllen remained on the bank watching them. Shortly afterward Miss Dickerson got beyond her depth and called for help and Miss Kemp went to her rescue, but she sank before reaching her. Miss Gibbons reached the bank safely and she and Miss McAllen immediately gave the alarm.

A number of citizens of the town went to the scene and the bodies of Miss Kemp and Miss Dickerson were found about an hour after they disappeared, and near the place where they sank. Miss Dickerson's body being found by Louis Smith by diving. Miss Kemp's body was caught an hour later by a grapple, hook in the hands of Milton Hickman.

The body of Miss Kemp was taken to her home and Miss Dickerson was brought to the residence of Mr. Taylor in Princess Anne. Strenuous efforts were made to resuscitate the girls, but without avail.

The remains of Miss Dickerson were taken to Salisbury on the 7.02 train Tuesday morning, and her funeral took place Wednesday afternoon, the Rev. F. Warner conducting the services and the interment was in Parsons' cemetery.

The funeral of Miss Kemp took place from her late home Wednesday afternoon and was very largely attended. The funeral services were held in the Presbyterian Church conducted by the Rev. W. F. Freund and the interment was in the cemetery adjoining. The following young ladies, her schoolmates, were the pallbearers: Misses Edna Hickman, Joyce Widdowson, Gladith Dilly, Helen Hickman, Alice Goble and Sara Taylor. The honorary pallbearers were Misses Mary Miles Dashiell, Elizabeth Beauchamp, Hilda Carrow, Eleanor McAllen, Lurline Gibbons and Adeline Brown.

Get Your Oyster License

Capt. Luther T. Miles, the newly appointed commander of the Oyster Police Boat "Helen Baughman," in charge of the waters of Somerset county, desires all persons interested to understand that he expects the owners of the tonging vessels, who propose to engage in tonging during the coming season, to obtain their licenses before September 15th. Those who propose to engage in dredging, Captain Miles also insists, must procure their dredging license before November 1st. Mr. Miles says that he will strictly enforce the law, and desires to give notice now, in order that all persons may govern themselves accordingly. There has been some complaint of the falling off in the number of tonging licenses issued, and Mr. Miles desires to conduct himself in his new position so as to avoid this complaint, if possible. It would be well, therefore, for all persons, proposing to take oysters with tongs or dredges in Somerset county, to bear in mind this notice.

Mr. George T. Porter Badly Hurt

Mr. George T. Porter was very seriously injured at the canning house of W. F. Messick & Bro., in Allen, Monday evening of last week.

A pair of mules attached to a wagon loaded with empty tin cans was driven up to the cannery, and in pitching the cans from the wagon the mules took fright and started to run. Mr. Porter, who was standing near, attempted to grab the reins, but was knocked down, the wagon passing over his body, breaking five ribs, his collar bone and left shoulder. The injured man was hastily carried to his home near Allen and surgical aid summoned. His injuries are very serious.

—There is nothing that makes a man feel so small as to realize that he has been taken in.

RAILWAY A CERTAINTY

The Deal's Island-Snow Hill Line To Be Started By The First Of Year

The Baltimore Evening Sun of last Wednesday says:

Marking a step ahead for the future development of farming lands and paving the way for the Eastern Shore to become the home of large manufacturing, the proposed railway line from Deal's Island to Snow Hill, Md., is now assured, according to information received from a person interested in the project. The new line will be 42 miles long and work on laying the tracks will be started by the first of the year. It is understood that the bonds have been secured and that European capital is largely responsible for making the railroad a certainty.

The new road is known as the Eastern Shore Power, Light and Railway Company. A charter was granted the company by the last session of the Legislature and the right of way has been secured.

The building of the railway means that in order to keep the trade of the Eastern Shore in Baltimore connecting lines will have to be established. The future success of the road from Deal's Island to Snow Hill seems assured, as those behind the project have carefully studied out every detail from a source of revenue productiveness, and persons living in that section have purchased stock in the concern.

A feature of the railway is that sidings will be placed at every half mile and this will mean that farmers may load an entire car of produce right on their farm for shipment to other cities. From Princess Anne, through which town the road will pass, it is only a seven-hour run to Philadelphia.

The proposed line will have 150,000 square acres of farm land from which to draw. At present the output of this land averages about five acres of truck per 100 acres. With the railroad it is expected that the land will be worked upon a larger scale, and will yield on an average of 17 acres of truck to the 100 acres.

It is proposed to build canning houses adjoining the farms. Sweet potatoes, tomatoes and other products which have been allowed to rot owing to the poor market will be canned. Then these canning factories only run five months in a year, and it is proposed to utilize these same plants for the manufacture of crates, truck baskets and barrel staves from the timber which abounds in that section.

Farmers will be encouraged to keep large herds of cows that creamery products may be made in that section. The Eastern Shore is one of the best sea-food sources in the world, and the express delivery in that line bids fair to assume large proportions. Several plants are now located in that section which pack large quantities of crab meat. The oyster trade is also expected to boom.

With the opening up of the line a closer relationship will be established between the Eastern Shore and nearby cities. Resorts may be built, and the picturesque water front of the lower bay may mean the establishment of a summer place that would pay the interest. Those interested in the new railway, declare that they will show $100,000 gross receipts for the first year of operation.

Large store houses will be erected along the line, and the farmers will be able to store eggs, butter and creamery products awaiting sale in markets. Princess Anne will be the exchange station for all traffic.

The new road will be equipped with either steam engines or the McKean gas and electric cars. As a precaution for the future development of the road the rails will be bored, which will make the conversion of the line into a trolley line as well as steam road an easy matter.

Negro Kills Man; Wounds Child

In a fight at Bayview, Virginia, last Tuesday night, Gus Talley, 30 years old, shot and killed Rambo Marshall, 35 years old. After killing Marshall Talley started in search of a brother of his victim and, finding him in a field close to his home, opened fire on him. He escaped injury. Talley then turned the weapon on a horse, sending a bullet through its body. A shot intended for the brother of Marshall went through the side of a house occupied by Nick Robinson, striking a small child, seriously wounding her. All of the parties are colored. Talley escaped and has not been apprehended.

A HEROIC LIFE-SAVER

Captain W. H. Chelton Dies at His Home in Lawtonia—Had Saved 83 Lives

Captain William H. Chelton, aged 69 years, one of the best known commanders on the Chesapeake, who has saved more lives than any other man in America, died at his home at Lawtonia, near Crisfield, last Wednesday morning.

Captain Chelton was a born sailor, at the age of 15 commanded a vessel. During the last 50 years he has rescued 83 persons from drowning in the Bay and its tributaries. In January of 1902 a Congressional medal was awarded him.

Some of his most notable rescues were made when the Bay was storm-swept. In 1863 he found 14 Union soldiers, who had been doing patrol duty on the Chesapeake, clinging to the bottom of their upturned craft. It was in the middle of the night, and undaunted by the heavy gale which was blowing, he plunged overboard and helped them aboard his vessel. In the same year two men from Pungoteague, Va., were drowning, and Captain Chelton swam 100 yards to reach them, and single-handed brought them ashore, where they were revived.

John W. Crisfield, formerly of "Edge Hill," Princess Anne, after whom Crisfield was named, was rescued from drowning in Pocomoke Sound in 1871 by Captain Chelton. Seven years later, in the dead of winter, he hauled nine men from a sunken vessel in the Bay. Captain Chelton was returning to Crisfield, and his craft nearly ran the men down. When taken from the icy waters they were almost exhausted.

The captain and crew of five men of the sloop Samuel Brewster, which capsized off Hog Island, were saved by the Captain in 1887. So great was the storm at the time of the rescue that Captain Chelton had to swim several times to the distressed men with lifelines.

It was in 1890 that he made his greatest rescue. William S. Cooper, his two young sons and a baby daughter were boating off Queenstown. Suddenly their vessel capsized, 200 feet from the shore, and Cooper, grasping his baby girl, held her head out of the water with one hand and with the other clung to the overturned craft. The boys managed to secure a hold on the keel. Captain Chelton saved all three of the children by towing them ashore with one hand and swimming with the other.

In 1895 the schooner E. C. Thomas was caught and crushed in an ice flow near Point Lookout. The captain and crew of five men were saved by Captain Chelton.

During the Civil War Captain Chelton served with distinction in the navy. He was twice married and is survived by three daughters, all grown. He was a member of the Chesapeake Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and was buried last Thursday in the Crisfield cemetery with Masonic honors.

The death of Capt. William H. Chelton probably had his end hastened by a bereavement he suffered on Friday, the 30th ult., when his brother, Winfield Scott Chelton, died at Fairmount, Somerset county.

Capt. William H. Chelton had suffered several strokes of paralysis and he showed grief at the loss of his brother. Winfield Scott Chelton was a twin with Zachary Taylor Chelton, who resides at Fairmount, this county. There are two other living brothers of the deceased life-saver. They are Fleetwood Chelton, of Baltimore, and Joseph A. Chelton, of Fairmount.

The Vermont Election

The full report of the balloting in Tuesday's State election in Vermont was compiled late Wednesday without altering to any material degree the general figures as indicated by the early returns. The unofficial total vote for Governor reached 65,083, the largest in a State election in a Presidential year since 1904.

The total vote of the State for all five candidates was as follows: Allen M. Fletcher, of Cavendish, (Republican), 26,259; Harlan B. Howe, of St. Johnsbury (Democrat), 20,359; Rev. Frazer Metzger, of Randolph (Progressive), 15,800; Clement F. Smith, of Morrisville, (Prohibitionist), 1,443; Fred W. Suiter, of Barre (Socialist), 1,181.

The party majority of 26,317 four years and of 15,739 two years ago dwindled to a plurality of 5,909, the smallest margin ever given a Republican candidate in a Presidential year.

The Democrats carried two counties and 38 towns and ran up the largest total since 1880.

The fact that the Republican majority in Vermont has fallen below 25,000 is an indication, according to some political observers including Progressives and Democrats, of the defeat of the Republican national administration in November.

MORRISON CHAIRMAN

Appointed by Democratic Auxiliary Committee—Harmonious Gathering in Baltimore

George C. Morrison was elected chairman of the Democratic auxiliary campaign committee at the meeting held Friday in Baltimore, to organize that body.

The friends of Mr. Morrison believe that his selection will do much to solidify and harmonize the party. They predict that every element, including the organization forces, will work shoulder to shoulder with him and the committee.

The meeting was one of the most harmonious of the party which has been held in this State in years. All the officers, including an executive committee of eleven, were elected without a ripple of discord or opposition. While some of the pronounced Wilson men advocated the election of an original Wilson man as chairman, yet all the other officers supported the nominee in the primaries, as did eight members of the executive committee, and the organization of the committee is as satisfactory to the old Wilson forces as it is to the supporters of the other Presidential candidates.

Besides Mr. Morrison, the officers are:

Vice Chairman—Former Congressman Joshua W. Miles, of Somerset county.

Treasurer—Senator Blair Lee, of Montgomery county.

Secretary—Emerson R. Crothers, of Cecil county.

Executive Committee—Messrs. William Cabell Bruce, James A. McQuade, B. Howard Griswold, Jr., and George N. Numsen, all of Baltimore city; Walter J. Mitchell, Charles county; John B. Gray, Calvert county; Sterling Galt, Frederick county; Z. Howard Isaac, Baltimore county; Joshua W. Miles, Somerset county; J. W. D. Jump, Talbot county, and Senator Charles A. Andrew, Harford county.

The executive committee and officers met in the afternoon and immediately inaugurated plans for the campaign. They will meet again next Thursday, when headquarters will be opened.

Ruin Left in Wake of Flood

The task of clearing away wreckage caused by the storm of Sunday night and early Monday of last week has progressed fairly well at hundreds of points throughout Western and Northern Pennsylvania, West Virginia and a portion of Ohio. The list of fatalities reached 40. Whether others met death will not be known definitely before more headway is made with great piles of debris deposited by the raging water over wide stretches of territory.

The loss is conservatively placed at about $2,000,000. The principal sufferers are railroads; although upwards of three score houses were wrecked, and manufacturing plants sustained heavy damage to machinery.

Communication was re-established with Salineville, O., late Wednesday. The town was almost wiped out by the flood, causing an estimated loss of over $200,000. Scores of persons were compelled to flee from their homes, but no deaths occurred. A number of houses were washed away, electric light plants put out of commission and the water works ruined. The natural gas system was flooded, depriving the town of fuel until a supply of coal could be brought in from nearby mines. The Cleveland and Pittsburgh division of the Pennsylvania lines between Salineville and New Salisbury suffered heavily.

The Chartiers Valley from Washington to McKees Rocks, where the creek empties into the Ohio River, is one stretch of devastation. It is estimated that 10,000 acres of growing corn have been ruined, while thousands of tons of hay floated away on the muddy torrent. The damage to manufacturing plants is very heavy. In some instances it will be necessary to install new machinery, and work will not be resumed for days, perhaps weeks.

Isaac T. Whittington Loses Legs

While crossing the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk Railroad yards at Cape Charles, Va., last Friday afternoon, Isaac T. Whittington, 67 years old, tripped and fell in front of a shifting engine and both legs were run over and severed below the knee. He managed to roll his body out of danger, which probably saved his life. Mr. Whittington is a blacksmith and one of the oldest employes of the railroad, having been in the service for more than 20 years. He was removed to Norfolk for treatment, but, owing to his advanced age, his recovery is doubtful.

GRIER FOR CONGRESS

Nominated at the Progressive Convention at Easton Last Thursday

Roosevelt followers were at Easton last Thursday from every county on the Eastern Shore except Cecil, elected by the different county convention delegates to the First Congressional convention of the Bull Moose party ever held upon the Eastern Shore of Maryland. The meeting was for the purpose of nominating a candidate to represent the First Congressional District of Maryland in the next Congress to succeed Congressman J. Harry Covington, Democrat, who is the candidate for re-election.

The convention met at noon in Music Hall, and was called to order by Charles W. Hobbs, of Denton. Thomas S. Hodson, of Somerset county, was made temporary chairman, with William N. Andrews, of Dorchester, secretary. They were afterwards made the permanent officers of the convention, after naming the Committee on Credentials, Permanent Organization and Resolution.

Addresses were made by Colonel E. C. Carrington and ex-Congressman Charles Schirm, of Baltimore, and Senator Moses N. Clapp, of Minnesota. As all other candidates dropped out of the race, Robert D. Grier, of Wicomico county, was nominated by acclamation as the party's candidate for Congress, and Dr. Robert L. Hall, of Pocomoke City, presidential elector on the Roosevelt ticket. The convention was harmonious and the only mixed delegation was from Dorchester county.

After naming the members of the different county central committees, the convention adjourned.

Mr. Grier in a short speech thanked the convention for the honor and pledged himself to do all in his power to help to carry the First Congressional district for Roosevelt for President and for himself for Congress.

The following were named as the county central committee for the different counties, except Dorchester and part of Queen Anne, which will be named later: Caroline—Charles W. Hobbs, A. J. Bennett, B. F. Edgell, J. W. Carroll. Kent—Joseph W. Atwell, Sydney P. Townsend, J. M. Westcott, C. C. Brown. Worcester—Charles O. Carter, Dr. R. Lee Hall, James M. Wilson, Capt. George W. Truitt. Talbot—H. L. Holden, Jr., Robert A. Walker, Frederick R. Bartlett, Perry C. Benson. Somerset—Thomas S. Hodson, John W. Nock, Wesley Thomas, Claude Bounds. Wicomico—William M. Day, John F. Tomlinson, R. M. Johnson, Thomas P. Truitt. Queen Annes—L. A. Edmondfield. Rest to be named later.

The convention adopted a platform reaffirming the platform of the Progressive party national convention in Chicago, declaring for downward revision of the tariff and asserting that "neither of the old parties has shown a disposition to administer the affairs of the government in the interest of the common people."

Sunday School Association

The Forty-ninth Convention of the Maryland Sunday School Association will take place September 11th, 12th and 13th, in Frederick, Md. Mr. W. C. Pearce, of Chicago, Associate General Secretary of the International Sunday School Association and Mrs. Mary Foster Bryner, of Chicago, International Superintendent of Elementary Work will be the visiting specialists. There will also be a large force of State workers on the program which promises Inspirational Addresses, Instructive Conferences, Informal Discussions, Delightful Fellowship, and a new vision of Sunday School work for all. Every Sunday School in the State is invited to send any number of delegates including their pastor and superintendent.

Write Mr. C. Albert Gilson, Frederick, Md., at once, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee of your coming and state what you wish to pay for board and lodging. Prices range from $1.00 to $2.00 per day.

Mrs. Mary Gibbons Dead

Mrs. Mary Gibbons widow of the late Zadock Gibbons, of Somerset county, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Sadie Dryden, at Cape Charles, Va., on Tuesday last of consumption, aged 52 years. Mrs. Gibbons had been in poor health for some months and her death was not a surprise to her family and friends. Her remains were brought to Pocomoke City on Wednesday and taken to Emmanuel M. E. cemetery, in Somerset county, for burial. The deceased was a sister of Mrs. Sewell B. Powell, of Pocomoke City.

OYSTERMEN THREATEN

Declare They Will Shoot Dredgers on Cormal Bar Area, in Somerset County

"The first man caught dredging oysters on the Cormal bar area, controlled by Ernest Cox, is going to be shot out of his boat."

This threat, like an echo from an old-time Maryland oyster war, is being bandied about freely by oystermen of the Fishing Island section of Somerset county, and the residents are awaiting developments. About 100 men are said to have formed themselves into a kind of vigilance committee to "protect their rights" against would-be oyster planters, and these openly declare that they will not hesitate to use firearms to uphold their contentions.

Mr. Swepson Earle, hydrographic engineer of the Shellfish Commission, who has returned to Baltimore from a surveying trip on the Manokin river in the commission's power yacht Katharine, said Wednesday that the trouble over the bar began in 1908 when, upon petition from Ernest Cox, of Somerset county, and more than 30 of his neighbors, 84 acres of Cormal bar, then a part of the natural rock, was opened for lease by the Circuit Court for the county.

"We'd be glad to take a chance of swinging just to get Cox, the oystermen told me," said Mr. Earle. "Cox and some of his friends, you see, leased subsequent to 1909, the area thrown open for leasing by the court and the natural bar oystermen hold him responsible for the trouble."

"As a matter of fact, the tongs do not quite understand the situation and seem to hold the Shellfish Commission partly to blame. They forget that the commission included the disputed area in Cormal bar in the original survey of 1907, and that it was Somerset county people who induced the court to have it thrown out for leasing purposes."

"However that may be, it is understood that the lessees of the area have by no means had exclusive right to it and that hundreds of tongs have taken oysters from it at will."

"But the Campbell-Price Oyster law allows the lessee of a lot to work it with a sail-propelled dredge boat. The adjoining territory is strictly tonging bottom. So the tongs are waiting to see whether, under the new law, Cox or any of his men will attempt to dredge the disputed area. And if this attempt is made the tongs threaten openly they will 'protect' the area with their rifles—and their lives."

Outbreak of Fall Army Worm

The Fall Army Worm which has caused great destruction in crops in Southern States this summer, has appeared in several places in Maryland during the past week. It has destroyed fields of alfalfa and millet and seriously damaged late corn, spinach and other crops. It has also ruined many blue grass lawns.

At the present time it seems highly probable that there will be another generation of the worm, which will appear about the last week in September, unless a sharp cold spell intervenes, as natural parasites destroy the pupae, which are just now below the surface of the soil in infested fields.

In cases where crops have been destroyed, the denuded land should be plowed as deeply as possible at once. Such land should be kept clean by harrowing and the planting of any crop should be delayed as late as practicable.

Practical tests by this Department during the past week have proven that the poisoned cut-worm bait is the most effective remedy where practical to employ. This bait is made by mixing one-half pound paris green or 3 pounds arsenate of lead and one gallon of molasses, or 10 pounds of sugar to 50 pounds of bran or wheat middlings. These materials should be mixed together thoroughly and then dampened to make a wet mash. It should be sowed broadcast over the infested fields late in the afternoon.

In treating corn or other similar crop, the poison is best applied in dust form by mixing one part of the poison to 20 parts of flour or air-slacked lime. The migration of the worms from one field to another, or parts thereof, can be prevented by plowing deep furrows into which the worms may be trapped. All outbreak of this pest should be promptly reported to T. B. Symons, State Entomologist, College Park, Md., so that he may co-operate as far as possible in preventing further depredation by the insect.

—Some of us are so constituted that we are never happy unless we are feeling sorry for others.

At the Verge of the Aperture.

The footfall of the Black Seigneur, near the guard-house of the dungeons, was measured, yet noiseless, as he stepped on the soft earth, alongside the stone wall, now toward the passage in the direction of the wheel-room, then back into the little square. That his thoughts, however, moved not in accord with that deliberate stride, the brows impatiently knit, and the quick glances he continued to cast over his shoulder, bore testimony.

Stopping at length near the Tour Bernard, he looked fixedly down at the town, wrapped in a stillness that should have reassured him. Nevertheless he appeared not satisfied; and had stepped out into the court again, when some sound he heard, or fancied, sent him quickly to an embrasure in the wall. From this opening—formerly for cannon in defense of the fenils, and the poulain, or planking for the hoisting of goods—he leaned far out, his glance instinctively turning toward the barracks, some distance to the right and far below. As he stood thus, that which had first attracted his attention—the sound of a voice giving orders—was repeated; at the same time where had been only darkness now shone many windows, while to the left, near the entrance he had passed after leaving the stable, lights began to dance like fireflies.

At these signs of activity and the sounds breaking the general quietude, an exclamation fell from his lips; then, pausing only a moment to listen and observe, he sprang toward the guard-house. Crossing the threshold, defined by a faint glimmer from a distant corner, he made his way past several motionless forms, into a low passage beyond. Here he called out impatiently; but from those depths, leading down into the dungeons where his comrades had gone, no answer was returned. His voice, hollow, mocking, seemed stifled in a tomb; more loudly he shouted; walked farther in, when an indistinct response was followed by a pin-point of light, and, ere long, by the beaver of a little lamp, Sanchez.

"The others?" At the head of a dark stairway into which he would inadvertently have plunged, had he gone farther, the Black Seigneur confronted the man, as he approached.

"They will soon be here," said the old servant, springing up the steps and walking after his master, who had already turned back toward the guard-room. "Jacques—curse him!"—putting out his light in obedience to a gesture from the other—"fumbled with the keys; pretended he couldn't find the right ones! So it took longer to open the doors."

"The prisoners?"

"I left our men working at the last dungeon to come on ahead—to let you know you might soon expect them."

"Soon," ironically, "may be too late."

"You mean—?"

"The hue and cry is out! I have long been expecting it; I do not understand why it didn't come before; unless a mountebank, locked up, was considered safe enough for the night."

"Then some one knew—?"

"Some one?" A bitter laugh was quickly suppressed on the young man's lips. "Hark! Listen!"

"Sounds below! the soldiers!" exclaimed Sanchez, and started toward the window to look out, only to fall quickly back.

"What is it?" With his hand on the other's shoulder, the Black Seigneur whispered the question.

"A face! At the window!"

"So soon? The bounds are quicker than I thought! Or," drawing his sword, "it may be only one or two in advance. In that case—"

But no enemy, single or plural, met their view, either in front, or at the side of the guard-house; only the darkness, void, empty, and the bare rampart wall winding around the head of the Mount like a monster guardian dragon, asleep at his post.

"Here is no one!"

"No one! Yet am I sure I saw—"

"A shadow!" answered the other. "And we have nothing worse to fight!"

"Some one was there, Seigneur," stubbornly, "and fled!"

"Eh bien! He's gone!"

"He? It looked like a—"

"Back with you, quick! Is this a time for talk? Call those who can come—if they would save their necks!"

"Here they are now," exclaimed the servant, and, as he spoke, the first of their men, blowing out the light he carried, ran quickly across the guard-chamber and into the open air. Others hastily followed, until the gathering, swelled by those brought with them from the dungeons, stood expectantly before the little stone structure.

"All the prisoners are here!"

"All?"

"To the wheel-house, then!"

But as they hastened across the square and into the narrow way, the Black Seigneur again spoke to the man just ahead:

"The hunchback!"

"We left him below, locked up in the Devil's Cage!"

"The Devil's Cage! Quelle bonne plaisanterie! Although," looking back, "it may cost us dear!"

And indeed, behind the sound of pursuit came nearer; the clatter of soldiers' feet grew louder, until, reaching the little square and the guard-house, all tumult suddenly ceased. A momentary silence, strange, ominous, was broken by a din of voices, as the flaring here and there of torches threw grotesque reflections high against the grim background of black masonry.

To those now within the wheel-room, the cause of that abrupt clamor was not difficult to divine; his Excellency's soldiers had found the sentinels overpowered in the guard-house! Would the former stop to investigate; search first those subterranean passages? Already had the prisoners, the weaker of the Black Seigneur's men, filled the car, or hung clinging to the rope above; already was the wheel turning—almost before the key had turned in the lock at the entrance.

"Seigneur!"

"Sanchez?"

"When we left the wheel-room, we closed the door."

"When we got back, it—"

A footfall without interrupted, followed by the sound of a hand at the door, and other steps drawing near.

"Jacques!" An expectant voice spoke; waited; called louder. Then those outside listened; some one exclaimed, and hurried footsteps retreated toward the guard-house.

As they died away, in the wheel-room the car came up for the second time empty, and inquiringly the men there looked from one to the other; but, even in that moment of danger, not one of them moved, or made sign of impatience. Some must go; others remain, and stoically they awaited the word of their leader.

"Down with all of you! I'll let you out the line," taking a turn with the rope around a stanchion near the wall, "and then come down myself."

The command was unexpected; for the first time those that had never questioned their leader's authority, hesitated, and more sharply was the order repeated; whereupon they obeyed; all save one.

"I'll let it out myself," said Sanchez.

"Get in!"

"No!" was the obdurate reply, when the Black Seigneur made a sign; hands reached up, seized Sanchez, and a moment later the car started down.

The line strained; as it played out, now running free about the stanchion, then stopping with jerks, the man in the wheel-house almost looked to see it part. The hempen strand, however, proved sound; held its human freight; but another danger pressed near.

Scarcely had the car begun its downward journey than an attack, indications of whose approach had not been wanting, manifested itself without. Beneath a sudden, savage assault, the door shook; yet engrossed at the line, every muscle strained, the man at the stanchion heeded not. Swiftly, mechanically he worked, apparently as unconscious of the clamorous soldiers without as of a silent presence within—some one that had been concealed in the little store-room adjoining, opening into the wheel-house, and now peered out; but at once drew back, as, with a crash, the door fell in.

At first, in the comparative darkness, with only the sky at the aperture staring them in the face, the in-rushing black figures paused, uncertain; lights soon were pushed forward, however, and then could they see the great wheel going round, unwinding the rope; the man at the stanchion.

"The prisoners! He's letting them down."

"Cut the line!"

Some one with a knife, rushed forward, severed the strand; but at that moment the car touched the bottom.

LYMAN BROWN, 68 Murray St., New York, N.Y.

Then did the solitary man at the rope for the first time awaken to his own situation; with a backward sweep of the arm he struck so fiercely the foremost of those to rush at him that the fellow fell, hitting hard the stone floor. Those nearest stumbled, and drawing his sword, with a thrust of point or blow of hilt, the Black Seigneur, for a moment withstood the first confused on-coming; then extricated himself and leaped to the narrow space behind the wheel. Here was he protected behind by the wall; at one end, by the masonry jutting out, while, at the other, only one or two could attack at the same time. But in front, through the spokes of the broad wheel, they might well hope to reach him.

At once the soldiers sprang forward, when, seizing the wheel, the man behind, with a savage jerk, set it in motion. The swords thrust at him were turned aside, one or two of his assailants were caught in the ponderous mechanism, and, before those attacking him had recovered from their surprise, the blade of the Black Seigneur shot in and out; to the right, to the left. Those ahead fell back upon their comrades; two, however, were unable to withdraw, and sank to the ground before the wheel. A third, with his hand to his throat and making strange sounds, staggered back to the wall.

Momentarily disconcerted, the others hesitated. "In the fiend's name, fear ye one man?" shouted an authoritative voice.

"A devil!"

"'Tis the Black Seigneur! I had a good sight of him."

"Beat! beat!"

"Mid marsh-muck and mire—" came in mocking tones from behind the wheel.

"The mountebank!"

"Sacre tonnerre! But mountebank, or outlaw, you shall pay! This way!" And at the unprotected side of the wheel the commandant sought to bring the issue to a conclusion. One blade the Black Seigneur struck down, while his own weapon retorted with more effect, though as it did so, another soldier made a lunge, and his sword entered the shoulder of the man behind the wheel. A shout of triumph that fell from the lips of the Governor's trooper was, however, abruptly checked; lurching forward with the stroke, ere he could recover, something heavy—a brass hilt—beat like a hammer on his head and he dropped to his knees. The others pressed closer; but with the desperation of a man resolved to sell his life dearly, the Black Seigneur fought on; regardless of cut and thrust, was holding the narrow entrance, when from the rear, somewhere, came the report of a fire-arm.

"Back! Stand back!"

Those nearest the wheel, not unwilling, perhaps, to desist, drew away; other detonations followed and smoke filled the place, obscuring the gaze. In the yellow fog they waited, until first it was swept aside close to the opposite wall by a draft of air from the aperture of the adjoining store-room, and the commandant, in an effort to see, moved impatiently forward. Ere, however, he could reach the wheel, near the threshold of the store-room, he felt his arm suddenly seized.

"Look, listen!"

The warning cry—a girl's voice—rang through the wheel-room; but the commandant did not at once heed it; at that abrupt touch he had involuntarily wrested his arm away; he stared, not in the direction she who had called out pointed, but at her! The white, drawn face, the eyes dilated—

"You, my Lady! Here?" he stammered.

But she only made a wild movement; again grasped, drew him forward.

"Quick, or—" And suddenly was he brought to a realization of what she wished him to see; a figure drawing itself along, slowly, painfully, toward the verge—

"Don't you see? Rather than be taken, he's going to throw himself over!"

The excited, admonishing sound of her voice aroused the commandant. He gave a sharp order and the soldiers sprang forward; laid roughly hold of the prostrate form; drew it back. The Black Seigneur yet struggled, but not for long! A moment, and his eyes turned to the Governor's daughter.

"Ma foi! I must needs yield—to your Ladyship! Yet, what matter, since I have done what I came to do!"

His gaze, darkly glowing, seemed to envelope the shrinking figure whose cloak only partly concealed the gay,

A Distinction With a Difference

YOU may not always get what you pay for. It takes a good judge of values to do that, but if there is one sure rule in business it is—you pay for all you get. You may not be able to see the difference between engines of similar appearance at different prices, but if you buy from a reputable firm you may be sure the difference in quality is there.

I H C Oil and Gasoline Engines

cost more than some others because they are more carefully made, and more thoroughly tested. Skillful designing, better material, better workmanship, more careful assembling, and more thorough testing, tell in the long run. Given equal care an I H C engine costs less per year of service than any other engine you can buy. If an I H C engine is given all the work it will do, pumping, sawing wood, running the grindstone, feed grinder, hay press, silage cutter, repair shop machines, cream separator, churn, washing machine, etc., etc., it will pay for itself in a very short time in money and labor saved.

I H C engines are made in every style—horizontal, vertical, air and water-cooled, stationary, portable and mounted on skids, to operate on gas, gasoline, kerosene, naphtha, distillate or alcohol, in sizes from 1 to 50 H. P. Kerosene-gasoline tractors, 12, 15, 20, 25 and 45-H P.

rich gown beneath; lifted to the brilliant, startled eyes. "Your Ladyship has bright eyes, forsooth!" An ironical laugh burst from his lips. "But sharper than their swords!" He strove to speak further, when a hand holding a weapon fell heavily. At that a cry escaped the girl's lips.

"No, no; you shall not!"

The Black Seigneur lay still.

"Clie! It's fortunate we got him," replied the commandant gazed around. "It would have made a pretty tale, if—" he turned to the Governor's daughter, "I have your Ladyship to thank—" he began, and stopped.

My lady's figure had at that moment relaxed and fallen to the ground!

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Hall of the Chevalliers.

The report of the capture of the Black Seigneur spread from Mount to town; from rock to shore. Pilgrims repeated, peasants circulated it; many credited it; a few disbelieved. Like shadows had his comrades and the escaped prisoners vanished, leaving no trace, save one—an overturned car and severed rope at the foot of the poulain, without the fortifications, and flocking to that point, of greater interest now than shrine or sanctuary, the pilgrims gazed around; down the rocks; up the almost perpendicular planking to what looked like a mere pigeon-hole in the side of the cliff. Then ominous grumblings escaped them; some shook their fists at the black wall; others scoffed at distant sounds of priestly hallooings. Had the soldiers that day appeared in the town or on the beach, serious trouble would have ensued. For the time, however, they remained discreetly housed, while supplies for pilgrims' needs were, by the commandant's orders, so curtailed, many of the indigent multitude, urged by pinched stomachs, began, ere night, to wend their way from strand to shore. But as they left the vicinity of the Mount, they turned last looks of hatred toward the rock.

His Excellency, the Governor, wasted no time considering the humor of the masses; their resentment, or displeasure, signified nothing; his own complacency left little room for speculation on that score. He was undeniably satisfied; even the escape of the prisoners and the loss of the soldiers at the guard-house, or in the wheel-room, was overshadowed by the single capture. This contentment, however, he kept to himself; instigated a rigorous inquiry, and prepared to punish certain offenders. But the principal of these he could not reach; when released from the iron cage, the hunchback, knowing he would be called upon to answer for his part in the night's work, had made the best use of his short legs to place a long distance between himself and the Mount.

The sentinel that allowed the Black Seigneur to pass through the entrance near the barracks; the watchman encountered on the stairway, and the soldier that had been overpowered in the stable, his Excellency could, however, lay hands on, and promptly ordered into custody to await his official attention. For this last culprit, the commandant—mindful, perhaps, of bolstering his own position—interceded; pointing out that the man had to get the gag from his mouth and give the alarm; also, that the mountebank's appearance and acting had been calculated to deceive even one of the governor's discernment. Which remark his Excellency had received with sphinx-like, and not altogether reassuring, gravity; had reserved his verdict, and continued, after his own fashion, to collect the details of the affair.

The searching process should have led him almost at once to his daughter—a puzzling figure in the maze of events; but the Governor had exhibited no haste in approaching that important witness. Only when he had marshaled his other testimony and put it in order did the scope of his sifting extend to the girl. And then had his manner been strictly judicial; maintaining an imperturbable mask, he professed not to notice the pallor of her face, the unnatural brightness of her glance.

"When you sent for the mountebank to come to your apartments, did you know who he was?" the Governor asked.

"No."

"When did you find out?"

"When you entered the room."

"Why did you not give the alarm then?"

"Because," she hesitated; her face changed, "he would have killed you, I think—if I had!"

"Was that solicitude for me the only reason?"

"Why, what other could there be?"

"What other, truly? And after he left with the commandant—why did you not, then, inform me?"

"You remember you had something important, from the King, to consider," hastily.

"More important than this?"

"He was going to be locked up," was the best reply she could make.

"And in the morning set free!"

She did not answer.

"And yet, you gave the word that enabled us to capture him at the wheel-house! How, by the way, came you there—in the wheel-house?"

"I saw him from the abbott's bridge; heard him tell the watchman he had a message to deliver at your palace, and followed."

"Again feeling solicitude for me?"

"I did not know—he would dare much; and what does it matter now?"

almost wildly. "You have captured him, shut him up somewhere in some terrible, deep dungeon, where—"

"He is safe? True; that is the main consideration."

Thereafter had the subject of the Black Seigneur been dropped between them; the pilgrimage over, the Mount resumed its normal aspect, but only for a little while! One day about a week later, a bright cortege whose appearance was in marked contrast to that of the beggary multitude, late visitors to the rock, came riding down through the forest to the sea; at the verge of the sands, stopped for a first distant impression of the rock.

"Noble monument, I salute you!"

Smiling, debonair, the Marquis de Beauvilliers removed his hat.

"And the noble mistress thereof?"

suggested one of his train.

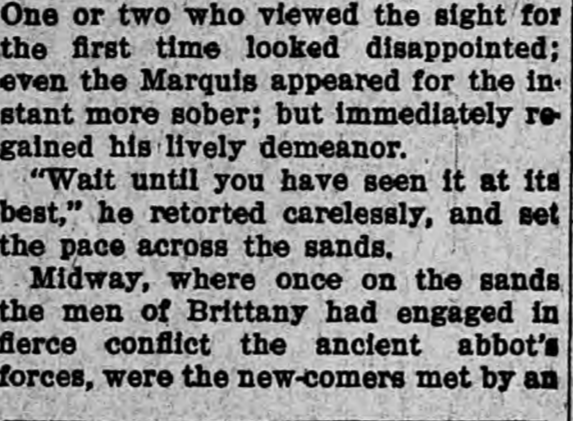

"She, of course!" he said, still surveying a scene different from that final memory he had carried away with him. Then had the rock reared itself in all the glamour of a sunny day; now was the sky overcast, while through a sullen mist the Mount loomed like a shadow itself.

"A cold place for our gay Elise!"

One or two who viewed the sight for the first time looked disappointed; even the Marquis appeared for the instant more sober; but immediately regained his lively demeanor.

"Wait until you have seen it at its best," he retorted carelessly, and set the pace across the sands.

Midway, where once on the sands the men of Brittany had engaged in fierce conflict the ancient abbott's forces, were the new-comers met by an imposing guard; escorted with due honor through the gates, and up the narrow street of the town.

As he climbed the winding highway, my lord, the Marquis, bestowed approving nod and smile this way and that; it may be that he already felt a nearer affiliation with these people; for his glance, gracious, condescending in passing, was that of a man armed with the knowledge that he, kinsman of the King, might some day be called upon to govern here. But to these advances, the townspeople responded ill, and the young noble's brow went delicately up, as if a little amused! Mon dieu! did not unfriendly eyes peer from every lurking place around the royal palaces and pleasure grounds near Paris; and had they not encountered them all the way to the sea? People were the same everywhere; must be treated like bad children, and, with relays of troops from the capital to the sea, from the strand to the Mount's high top, one could afford to smile at their petty humors. Above all, when one had more momentous matter for consideration! And my lord lifted his head higher, toward a rampart, where some one had once bid him au revoir, and where he might yet in fancy see a fluttering ribbon wave a bright adieu!

But today my lady, the Princess of the Rock, was not there; waited above, with her father, to receive him—then—in the great Hall of the Chevalliers. Until that morning she had not known of the coming of the Marquis, an impatient suitor, following the courier and the perfumed misadventure of her with the noble's near approach. Certainly had she shown surprise; but whether she was pleased or not, his Excellency could not tell.

He was still uncertain; standing, near the raised gallery, in the ancient salle des chevaliers, from time to time regarded her furtively! Often had she looked from one of the round windows, commanding a view of the shore and the sands; many times turned away. At first sight of the company on the beach, the Governor had seen the girl's face alter and noted the involuntary start she had given. Whereupon, moving toward one of the giant fire-places, had he sought for the sake of diplomacy and the end in view, to turn their conversation into a channel that should have interested her; spoke of plans to be made; preparations for festivities and merry-making commensurate with the circumstances. But to these suggestions of gaiety, the prelude to a stately ceremony, had she hardly listened; paused absently before the blazing logs; once or twice seemed about to say something and stopped.

She was silent now, a slender figure beneath that great canopy of stone designed for the shelter of a score of knights; nervously twining and intertwining her fingers, she looked out at the shadows moving between the columns, playing around the bases, or melting in the vaulting.

"They should be almost here now," observed his Excellency, again seeking to break that spell of constraint, when suddenly she stepped to him.

"Mon pere," her voice sounded strained, unnatural, "it was you who wanted this marriage?"

"Yes," he had answered in some surprise; "yes."

"And I have not opposed you—the King—"

"Opposed? Not of course not!"

"Then," more hurriedly, "must you do something in return for me! I do not want my—the wedding festivities—" marred by anything unpleasant! Promise that nothing will happen to him, the Black Seigneur, until after—"

"Impossible!" The sudden virulence her unexpected request awoke could not be concealed.

"Very well!" Before the anger in his gaze, her own eyes flashed like steel. "In that case, you can send the Marquis back! For I will not see him—today, tomorrow or any other time again!"

Long he looked at her; the white face; the tightly compressed lips; the eyes that would not flinch! They reminded him of another—were of the same hue—so like, and yet so different! Unlike, in bespeaking a will he could not break! What he said, matters not; his face wore an ashy shade. She did not answer in words; but he felt, with strange bitterness, a revulsion; she seemed almost suddenly to have become hostile to him.

Gay voices sounded without; nearer; she walked to a door opposite the entrance their visitors were approaching. An instant, and she would have passed out, when the Governor spoke.

But the Marquis, stepping quickly in a few moments later, noted nothing amiss between them. "Your Excellency!" With filial respect he greeted the Governor. "My Lady!" Gaily, approvingly, his eye passed over her; then in that hall dedicated to chivalry, a graceful figure, he sank to his knee; raised a small cold hand, and pressed it to his lips.

Electricity For Every Home

Thomas A. Edison sees no reason why an isolated country home should not be as completely equipped with electrical contrivances as a Manhattan apartment. To prove his point he has leased a house near his home in Llewellyn Park, N. Y., and has installed a generating plant, with all the devices for lighting, heating and cooking designed to ease the burden of the housekeeper.

Electric heaters and irons, motors to run the washing machine and glowing bulbs in every room receive their current from a battery stored by a gasoline engine generator.

The inventor does not pretend to generate electricity more cheaply in such small units than can a public utility company, but he desires that he has assembled a plant that would provide the current for an isolated house at a reasonable cost.

The model house is in charge of Mr. Edison's son, Charles, and his nephew, Charles A. Poyer.

An article that has real merit should in time become popular. That such is the case with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been attested by many dealers. Here is one of them. E. W. Hendrickson, Ohio Falls, Ind., writes:

Downie & Wheeler Circus

The streets of Easton on Saturday, notwithstanding the downpour of rain, were crowded with people coming from all parts of Talbot and adjoining counties to see the large Downie & Wheeler circus, which arrived here early in the morning on their own special train of cars, and were jostling each other about for good positions to witness the magnificent parade, as advertised by them, and which in magnitude and splendor even surpassed their advertisement, and it was the universal comment that it was one of the finest and most interesting circus parades ever seen in Easton, as it took quite a long time for it to pass a given point. There were a number of open cages of wild animals, several good clowns, who made lots of fun for the large crowd of spectators, which were lined along the sidewalks of the different streets which the parade traveled and two or three good bands of music, which greatly aided in enlivening the occasion. In fact, there was everything that went to make the parade a success and pleasure to the vast throng that witnessed it. They gave two performances, one in the afternoon and one in the evening, both of which drew fine audiences, and it was the universal opinion that it was the best circus that has been seen in Easton for a number of years. The performances consisted of bareback riding, daring trapeze performances, trick bicycle and unicycle riding, dog and pony acts, and in fact, everything that went to make up a first-class circus. One of the striking features of the show was the courteous manner in which the proprietors and their employees looked after the comfort and welfare of their patrons, and the absence of all kinds of swindlers and gamblers which usually follow up a circus, although not connected with it in any capacity.—Easton Herald. This show will exhibit at Princess Anne on September 20th.

Warnings From a Treacherous Stream

The sad accident that cast a gloom over this community last week, when two young ladies met an untimely death in the treacherous waters of the Manokin river, should serve as a warning to over-confident parents and imprudent children. Only a few months ago a bright boy was drowned in the same stream near the same spot. These sad events should be kept in mind when children importune their parents to permit rambles along the shores of this stream, bathing in its waters or launch parties without experienced men in charge.

The Manokin is apparently an innocent stream of water. In fact it is full of dangerous places where one may suddenly step from a foot or two of water into much greater depths. To an expert swimmer such changes, whilst abrupt, are no special peril; but to novices it is a peril that points to certain death unless immediate help be at hand. The more reason, therefore, that children should not be permitted to go unaccompanied on excursions that invite disaster. Far better to seek their pleasure elsewhere; or if the river is overtempting and parents desire to save themselves anxiety or anguish, they should see to it that every safeguard is assured before giving their consent to excursions upon its waters or along its shores.

The Bull Moose Congressional Nomination

The Roosevelt followers of the First Congressional District have met in convention and nominated Robt. D. Grier, of Salisbury, as an opponent of J. Harry Covington, the Democratic incumbent and candidate for re-election. The Bull Moose people are a determined set of fellows, and are not willing to hide their light under a bushel. In this respect they resemble their leader, the renowned lion hunter.

If the Bull Moose party expects to deflect Democrats from their allegiance to Congressman Covington or if it expects to secure for Mr. Grier the regular Republican vote, conditions point to sure disappointment. Mr. Grier will be held up as a Republican and as such his old party men will be asked to support him. The change from Republicanism to Rooseveltism, however, makes too great a chasm to be thus easily crossed. This being the case it is hard to see just what the Bull Moose candidate has in expectation. The inference is that the new Congressional nomination is intended to operate more as a lever to help elect Roosevelt than a real contention for a Congressional position.

So far as the Democrats of the First District are concerned, the Bull Moose nomination is no alarming information. The fact that Mr. Covington has already served the district in Congress most satisfactorily and successfully for several terms is sufficient to hold his party people. To many the Bull Moose nomination will take the form of a big piece of bluff and that bluff will be called when November comes.

That Philadelphia women are eating carrots to improve their complexion is the sort of news one has to go away from home to get. If those of them who aspire to red hair should take a carrot diet it would not be quite so singular, but the passion for carrotty locks is not widespread; it is a distinctly artificial taste. Still, carrots will probably do no harm, and eating them is safer than the use of many of the cosmetics. —Philadelphia Record.

Notice to Democrats

Registration days this year will be as follows:
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 8th.
On these two days transfers from one district to another will be given and registered voters will be placed on the books. This is not a new registration, but every Democrat who has moved from his last residence since last registration day into another district, must get a transfer from his old voting district and register in his present district where he is now living. This must be attended to on one of the above dates or your name may be erased from the voting lists. Every young Democrat who has become of age since last election should register on one of the above days in October.

Why Wilson is Needed

There is one argument for the election of Woodrow Wilson as President which should appeal with especial force to every independently inclined voter. With the next House of Representatives practically certain to be overwhelmingly Democratic, and with the Senate either Democratic or safely controlled by a Democratic-Progressive combination of members, it is in the highest degree desirable, in order to secure a harmonious government capable of carrying out definite policies of reform, that there should be in the White House a President in sympathy with the two branches of Congress. It is obvious that if Roosevelt should, by some sudden aberration of the American people, again be made President, he could accomplish little with a House and Senate hostile to him. Such a condition of affairs existed in the last year or two of his second term, when he had largely alienated many of his own party, and the result was a period barren of fruitful legislation.

With Woodrow Wilson in the White House and a Congress in hearty sympathy there would be present all the elements for successful co-operation which have been lacking in the existing relations between President Taft and the House and Senate. A clean-cut policy of legislation could be outlined and carried through, and the Democratic party could be held to a rigid responsibility for its acts. If these should prove bad for the country, there would be no trouble about placing the blame directly where it belongs and in fitting deserved punishment. If the Democracy makes good, the voters will know to whom to give credit. The present situation, with a President of one political faith and Congress of another, should not be perpetuated. A vote for Woodrow Wilson will be a vote for a symmetrical government, of one political faith, which can be held to a strict accountability. With a Democratic Congress assured through Republican division, absolutely nothing of permanent value could be accomplished through the election of Taft or Roosevelt as President. It would simply be continuing the present unsatisfactory deadlock. —Philadelphia Record.

A Wave of Storms

Such destructive storms as the one that plowed its way across the panhandle of West Virginia, carrying in its wake the total of hundreds of thousands of dollars loss, with washouts and impediment of railroad traffic, are forces to be reckoned with as beyond the control of man. The loss of life occasioned by the storm and similar ones in Michigan and Minnesota and the havoc played by lightning, as well as the powers of the overflowing waters and deluging cloudbursts, was the work of a little time.

The season seems to be fruitful of devastating storms and in the Far Northwest the falls of snow indicate that the turn of the summer into winter may be early and usher in a season of fierceness that will be comparable to the weather of last winter. It is not to be supposed, however, that the fact of destructive storms and the early fall of snow in some of the Northwestern states is an indication of unusual weather conditions. The mildness of the summer is not to be taken as a forerunner of a severe winter, even though prognostications are being made of this kind. In view of the tremendous force of the storm in West Virginia Maryland is a subject of additional congratulation that it so seldom is visited by record-breaking hurricanes and devastating floods. —Baltimore American.

Vermont as an Indicator

So far as the Vermont election is to be accorded its traditional significance as a barometer of political conditions throughout the United States, it may be said to indicate that the Democratic party is standing solidly while the Republican party is broken up, the Progressive bolt at the heels of Mr. Roosevelt being ineffective to elect its own candidates, but sufficient to accomplish the defeat of regular Republicans. If the conditions which are thus demonstrated in Vermont are paralleled elsewhere in the nation, it is obvious that the result will be the election of Governor Wilson through the electoral votes of States which nominally are Republican and which will fail to show a Democratic majority in the popular vote.

The Vermont vote is illuminating chiefly in the demonstration of the hope and possibilities of the Progressive party movement. It has made little or no inroads on the Democratic vote. Its strength has been drawn almost entirely from the Republican vote of former years, and in spite of the personal appeals of Mr. Roosevelt, a well organized campaign, an anti-reciprocity sentiment that has been capitalized to its fullest extent against President Taft, and personal weakness on the part of the regular Republican candidate for Governor, the Progressive vote still appears to be a poor third in the gubernatorial contest and to have made little or no impression in the legislative districts.

If the motive of the Progressives is chiefly that of revenge, or of desire to rebuke the party organization by accomplishing the defeat of its candidates, the Vermont election is sufficient warrant for satisfaction and confidence as to the national result. But if with Progressive voters, whose affiliation has been with the Republican party and who still believe in the principles of that party on matters of vital national policy as contrasted with Democratic principles, there is an honest purpose to achieve results in legislation to bring about better politics, to move forward without abandoning established principles, the Vermont returns suggest the serious question whether they are going about their task in the right way. Vermont demonstrates that the contest still is between Republican and Democratic parties; that either President Taft or Governor Wilson will be the next President, and that approval will be given to the policies which one or the other represents. The Progressive party may elect Governor Wilson. It cannot elect Mr. Roosevelt—if Vermont is a criterion. —Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

Crothers Estate Divided

The will of the late Governor Crothers has been adjusted and his estate distributed among his nephews, State Senator Omar D. Crothers and Emerson R. Crothers, the sole beneficiaries. The estate is valued at about $50,000, of which $30,000 was in life insurance. Years before he was nominated the former Governor carried on his life $15,000 in insurance. Shortly after his inauguration he took out an additional $10,000 policy and a little later his two nephews had issued a $5,000 policy on his life. The remainder of his estate, which consisted of stock in several banks and five mortgages, amounted to about $20,000. There was an indebtedness of $10,000 against the estate.

Order of Publication.

Laura Townsend and Zedee W. Townsend, her husband, vs. Cora Somers, John W. Hastings et al.

No. 2754, Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity.

The purpose of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain real estate, situate in Somerset county, in this State, whereof a certain Nancy Hastings, deceased, and her heirs, and for the division of the proceeds of the sale among the parties interested in said real estate, as set forth in this cause.

The bill states that the said Nancy Hastings departed this life during the year 1891, intestate, and seized and possessed of a lot or parcel of land, situate in the village of Marion, and lying and binding on the southwest side of the county road leading from Marion to a well known corner, adjoining the land owned or recently owned by Clara A. Messick, A. E. Tull, George Marshall and Theodore Bell, and also adjoining the Annie Colburn place, and containing about three (3) acres, and the said Nancy Hastings left as her sole heirs at law, the following children and grand-children:

Laura Townsend, Cora Somers, John W. Hastings, Renatus A. Hastings; also the following grand-children, being children of Mary E. Hastings, his wife, Bell Walker, daughter of said Nancy Hastings, Bell Walker, Fred L. Holland, Barton D. Holland, Ira Holland, Herman Holland, Beulah Holland; also the following children of Isaac Hastings, a son of the said Nancy Hastings, who died intestate during the year 1899, leaving surviving him a widow, Elizabeth Hastings, and the following children, Wilmer Hastings, Raymond Hastings, Arthur Hastings, Annie Ford, and Daisy Waller; also the following grand-children, children of Archibald M. Hastings, a deceased son, who died intestate, during the year 1886, Nancy N. Hastings, Alberta A. Hastings, Irma V. Dunn, Ellison B. Hastings; also a great grand-child, Gleason Adkins, infant, in possession of said Adkins, a daughter of the said Archibald M. Hastings, who died about January, 1904, leaving surviving her a husband, William Adkins, and the said Gleason Adkins, as her sole heirs at law.

That the said John W. Hastings, together with Ella Hastings, his wife, Bell Walker, together with her husband, Wm. E. Walker, Fred L. Holland and Emma Holland, his wife, Herman Holland and Mabel Holland, his wife, both Hastings, Wilmer Hastings, together with Lillian Hastings, his wife, Renatus A. Hastings, together with his wife Annie Hastings, Raymond Hastings, Arthur Hastings, Annie Ford, together with her husband, Robert Ford, William Adkins, Elizabeth Hastings, Daisy Waller, together with her husband, Robert Waller, together with her husband, John L. Hastings, all defendants in this suit, are all non-residents of the State of Maryland, that the said real estate is not susceptible of partition, without material loss and injury to the parties entitled to interest therein, as above stated, and that it is necessary that the said land should be sold and the proceeds divided among the said parties, according to their respective interests.

It is thereupon, this 15th day of August, 1912, ordered by the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Somerset county, once a week in each of four consecutive weeks before the 15th day of September next, give notice to the said absent or non-resident defendants, of the object and substance of this bill warning them to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 7th day of October, 1912, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

—Under authority by the postoffice appropriation bill, Postmaster General Hitchcock increased the salaries of rural letter carriers on standard routes from $1,000 to $1,100 a year, thus affecting 30,000 men, with proportionate increase to carriers on shorter routes. The order will become effective September 30th. This will mean an increased disbursement of $4,000,000 a year. It is the second salary advance of rural carriers made in the last four years. At the close of the last fiscal year on June 30th there were 43,031 rural mail carriers, the aggregate pay being $40,655,740.

To Our Friends and Neighbors

We thank you from the depths of our hearts for your sympathy and aid rendered us in the death of our loving daughter, Violet. May God's blessings rest upon you and His kingdom be your kingdom of joy and happiness.

MR. AND MRS. GEO. W. KEMP.

Few, if any, medicines, have met with the uniform success that has attended the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The remarkable cures of colic and diarrhoea which it has effected in almost every neighborhood have given it a wide reputation. For sale by all dealers.

Trained Animals of the Sparks Shows

The management of the Sparks Shows have made it a study for years to give a circus program replete in all particulars, and knowing full well the importance of some high-class animal acts on the program, have this year imported from Germany several acts that can not fail to create a sensation. The Germans have made animal training a fine art, and some of the most notable animal acts in this country are but copies of the wonderful acts as they are produced across the water.

The acts imported from Germany this season include a spectacular equine drill and pyramid performance by a group of Arabian stallions that is said to be the most beautiful piece of horse training ever attempted. The herd of performing elephants under the direction of their German trainer, Paul Jacoby, will produce groupings, pyramids and maneuvers heretofore thought impossible. A group of forest bred African lions will also hold an important place on this interesting program on account of the wonderful control their trainer, Mr. Fritz Brunner, has over these really ferocious man-killing beasts.

The extensive menagerie carried by the show also affords unusual interest to those who are fond of studying animal life. In it are presented many new specimens hitherto unknown to the zoos of America.

Besides the trained animals some of the world's greatest gymnasts, aerialists, acrobats and equestrians have a place on the bill, and after the grand opening spectacle, which is brilliant in its coloring and massive in effect, the program will go forward with all such vim and vigor, the acts will all be of such a high order and classified to such a nicety, that the most critical audience can not help but be pleased. The Sparks Shows will give two complete exhibitions in Princess Anne on Friday Sept 13th.

The implicit confidence that many people have in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is founded on their experience in the use of that remedy and their knowledge of that remedy and their knowledge of the many remarkable cures of colic, diarrhoea and dysentery that it has effected. For sale by all dealers.

SLIDING DOWN A ROPE.

It is Both Easy and Safe When Done in Sailor Style.

Sliding down a rope is not so simple as it seems. Few know how to do it properly. If you try to descend by letting the rope slide through your hands the friction will burn the palms so that you will have to let go after a few feet. If you try to lower your weight from one hand hold to another you are sure to become tired and will be forced to drop. You cannot slide with the rope between your knees, for the swaying of your body will jerk the rope out of the clutch of your knees, and then you are likely to fall.

The easiest and safest method you can employ is that used by firemen and sailors. Standing upright, throw out your right leg and give it a turn around the rope. Next put the rope in the crook of your right elbow and clasp it tightly, not in your hand, but in your arm.

In that way you can slide to safety without the slightest trouble. The rope does not touch any part of the body that is not protected by clothing, and your speed can be regulated by either straightening or cramping your leg. Once learned this method of sliding down a rope may prove in an emergency the means of saving your life or the lives of other persons.—Youth's Companion.

ALPINE LIFE LINES.

The Ropes Are Selected For Strength, Flexibility and Lightness.

The ropes used by Alpine climbers is of special manufacture, combining as far as possible the differing qualities of strength, flexibility and lightness.

Three qualities are in general use, being made from sisal, Italian and Manila hems respectively, and occasionally, when cost is not a consideration, of silk. The latter, though very light and strong, is not so durable as the others. That which finds most favor among British mountaineers is known as Buckingham's Alpine rope. It is made of the best Manila hemp.

In the year 1864, Mr. McLeish recalls, a committee of the Alpine club made tests upon a number of ropes suitable for mountaineering. Of the two that were approved one was made of Italian hemp and the other of Manila. They both had a breaking strain of two tons and sustained the weight of a twelve stone man after falling from a height of ten feet.

Nonmountaineers have sometimes considered this insufficient, but it is highly problematical whether the human anatomy could survive the sudden compression of a thin rope arising from any greater fall.—Fry's Magazine.

Help With a String to It.

In an office, on upper Wall street, where they make a specialty of the "coppers," a cousin of the head of the firm, after several bad "breaks," found his balance reduced to a very low figure. The Wall street man felt bad about it and offered to take the account in hand himself, the relative naturally agreeing. The first transaction was the short sale of a lot of Reading. Before 3 o'clock that day the stock had jumped up six points and the account was wiped out.

It reminds one of what happened on an East river ferryboat the other day when a passenger fell overboard. The man was strong and well able to swim—that is, he was well able to swim until a well meaning but excited deck hand threw a twenty pound life belt down on the top of his head.—Puck.

Tailors as Literary Men.

One does not look for literary men among tailors, but none the less the trade can claim some illustrious names. John Stow, the antiquary and author of the "Survey of London," for instance, began life as a tailor, and another famous tailoring antiquary was John Speed, one of England's early map makers and member of the Society of Antiquaries. And then there was Robert Hill, "the learned tailor" of Birmingham, who contrived to teach himself Greek and Hebrew and became famous as a writer of theological treatises. And George Meredith was born over a tailor's shop.—London Globe.

Placing Himself.

A man who was much in need of sleep rolled out of bed during the night. The jar did not awake him thoroughly, and his hand wandered in exploration. It encountered the mesh of some protruding springs and a sturdy front corner post. "In jail at last," he murmured as he went off into another deep sleep.

The Baseball Courtship.

"How do I stand with you, little girl?" Inquired the ardent fan. "You have a percentage of about .786 just now," answered the lady fan, "and lead the league." "I'm glad to hear that. I was afraid I was in the second division."—Kansas City Journal.

Man Worships Something.

Man always worships something. Always he sees the infinite shadowed forth in something finite, and, indeed, can and must so see it in any finite thing, once tempt him well to fix his eyes thereon.—Carlyle.

Cause and Effect.

Finding a Treasure

It Puts a Gentleman Into a Muddle

By ARTHUR LANGLEY

Wilkins was bored.

Throwing down a newspaper on the table of the reading room of his club, he arose from his chair, strolled out to the cigar stand, lit a cigarette, smoked for a few minutes, threw away the stump, walked to the club entrance and stood with his hands in his pockets, wondering what next he should do to kill time.

"Cab!"
A vehicle was wheeled from the line of cabs standing before the club to the curb opposite him, and he entered it, telling the jehu to drive him to the theater, where he intended to buy tickets for that evening's performance.

On the seat beside him lay a lady's hand bag. Wilkins took it up, looked at it, opened it and examined the contents with a view to discovering to whom it belonged. He found them as diversified as those in a boy's pocket, but there was only one article that gave him any hope of identifying the owner of the property, a brown paper parcel five or six inches long, two inches broad and an inch thick. Finding no address or other mark on it, he concluded it to be a shopping purchase and put it back in the bag. But, desiring to exhaust every means of finding a clue to the ownership, he took it out again and unrolled it. He found bills to the amount of $20,000.

His ennuil left him instantly. Not that he felt elated at making an accession to his fortune, for he had no idea of keeping his find, but that it was evident the money had been left inadvertently in the carriage by a woman and there would be something for him to do to trace her and return the money.

Moreover, there was a daintiness about the bag and its contents that caused him to fancy the owner was young. Then, again, a middle aged woman would not likely be so careless as to leave a small fortune in a cab, and an old one would be no more likely to be riding about with so much in her possession. At any rate, Wilkins would have it that the lady was young, and, having gone thus far, he fancied she must be attractive. She had doubtless been the last person to occupy the cab before him, and the driver could tell him about her. Wilkins put the bag and contents under his coat and when he left the cab asked the driver for information concerning his last fare.

Wilkins was informed that she was a young lady who had been taken in before a dry goods store and had been driven to a bank. She had come out of the bank and re-entered the carriage, ordering him to drive to another store, where she alighted, seeming to be ill. She had staggered into the store and disappeared. He had waited some time for her, but as she didn't reappear he gave up waiting for her and drove away.

On thinking the matter over Wilkins did not believe there would be much hunting involved in the case. The loss would be advertised, and all he needed to do was to watch the personal columns in the newspapers. This he did for a week, but not seeing the notice he expected he concluded that either the young lady had taken other means to recover her loss or had been ill or possibly might have died. He inquired at police headquarters if any such loss had been reported, but gained no clue in this way. He did not care to make known his find, for he knew that if he did there would be many claimants, and it would be difficult to head off some of the more ingenious ones.

The matter dragged along till Wilkins began to be troubled at holding so large an amount of some other person's money. Then one day he confided the matter to his friend Brodwell. Brodwell said that he had seen an advertisement of a large amount of money having been left in a cab, but just when he had seen the notice he couldn't remember, nor could he recollect the newspaper in which it had appeared.

Wilkins made a search through the newspapers issued since he had found the money, but they were so voluminous that he failed to find what he looked for. This was discouraging. He began to fear that his keeping the money would get him into trouble. Probably the matter had been put into the hands of detectives who might be on his track. He was inclined to turn the matter over to the police, but feared his reasons for keeping it secret would not be accepted. At any rate, he might suffer in the opinion of the public, who would know all about the affair.

Being an imaginative man, he permitted himself to brood over the situation. Instead of a romance he had caught a tartar. He began to wish the money was in the bottom of the sea. Indeed, he thought of putting it there. The bills were a burden to him. He didn't like to put them in the bank, for the deposit of such a sum might excite a suspicion that would lead to the fact getting out that he had a large sum in his possession which did not belong to him. That discovery might lead to very unpleasant consequences. He kept the money in his safe deposit box.

But even in so secret a place he did not feel easy. He was haunted by all sorts of fears. Supposing he should lose the key to her box and were arrested for keeping money that did not belong to him. In that case he would not be able to make restitution. One day on taking a cab at his club he noticed that his driver was the man in whose vehicle he had made the find. Wilkins hastened to ask him if he had heard of or seen the young lady who had gone into a store and had not returned. He said that he had. She had caused inquiries to be made for him and finally found him. She had fainted in the store and remained unconscious for some time. He had been closely questioned by a man in her interest and was quite sure he had been shadowed by a detective. Asked whom he had driven next after the young lady, he could not remember.

Wilkins was all in a flutter at this information. He realized that he must take some action in the matter, but feared anything he might do would rebound to his injury. When a man is rattled he usually goes wrong. Wilkins asked the cabman to give him the young lady's address, and when the man said he hadn't it Wilkins told him not to say anything about him in the matter for the present and handed him a ten dollar bill.

Wilkins as soon as he had taken this step saw that he had put himself in the position of having bribed the coachman to conceal his identity. He could not sleep at nights for thinking of what a frightful thing it would be should he be pounced upon by a detective and forced to confess that he had been keeping a large sum of money that did not belong to him. It was evident the loser of the money believed that it had fallen into the hands of some one who was intending to keep it and was taking measures to find that person.

All this was more than Wilkins had bargained for. He grew thin and haggard and began to fear that his appearance alone would incriminate him. What he desired was to know the address of the young lady that he might return the money anonymously, or if he could discover that she was of a kindly, sympathetic disposition he might go to her, confess that he had her money and beg her to believe his story and not expose him to an unmerciful world.

One day the coachman involved in the matter called for him at the club and said he had something to communicate. Wilkins went out with him to the sidewalk, where no one would hear what was said, and the cabman began: "I've seen the young lady again, sir, and she says the day I drove her she drew a large sum from the bank, and, being sick, when she got out of my cab left the money inside. She says the next fare I got must 'a' found it and is keepin' what don't belong to him. She's offered me $1,000 reward if I'll get her money for her."

Here was an additional complication. If Wilkins returned the money, ignoring the cabman, the fellow might make it hot for him. Wilkins by this time was in a condition of mind to see a term in the penitentiary staring him in the face. Instead of pulling himself together, returning the money openly and trusting to his ability to come out of the affair unscathed, he asked the man for the lady's address, promising to see that he got something by way of reward. But the cabman by this time had come to believe there was a good deal in it and declined to give the address unless Wilkins would pay him out of the funds the reward the young lady had offered. When Wilkins demurred at this, the fellow threatened to report him as the man who was holding the money.

So Wilkins took the address, gave the man a thousand dollars and, taking the bag containing the bills just as he had found them, called on the young lady. Handing them to her, he waited till her delight had somewhat subsided, then gave her a graphic account of his finding the bag, his waiting to see her advertisement, his missing it when it appeared and, lastly, his having been drawn into the position of retaining funds that did not belong to him.

"I weighed," he said dolefully in conclusion, "when I found your bag 170 pounds. Look at me now. I can barely pull down 140."

"You poor man!" exclaimed the girl repressing a smile.

Wilkins said nothing about the thousand dollars hush money he had paid the cabman. That was his own secret and he did not propose to divulge.

"Of course," said the girl, "you are entitled to a reward, and I beg of you after all the trouble and worry you have had in the matter to accept at least the amount I offered the cabman. I assure you I would feel so much more comfortable at your receiving something."

A gentleman, a member of a swell club, to receive a reward for returning money found! Not he.

"Since the cabman," she went on, "has been instrumental in the return of my property I shall pay him the reward I offered him."

Wilkins, seeing that he must tell the rest of the story or the cabman would receive double pay, made a confidante of his hostess and a clean breast.

There was something so delightfully human in this end to the matter that she was touched beyond measure. She could not induce Wilkins to permit her to reimburse him, but in time he discovered that she had given him her heart, and it was not long before her hand and her fortune went with it.

"You never can tell," says Wilkins, "when you're getting a bargain. The thousand dollars I paid that cabman brought me two treasures—the one a wife, the other her estate."

Leaps Into Progressive Ranks
Ohio has taken front rank among progressive States of the Union. With the exception of woman suffrage and possibly one or two minor amendments the entire work of the constitutional convention appears to have been ratified by the people in Tuesday's special election.

With only about 50 per cent. of the vote of the State polled, indications are that the initiative and referendum, home rule for cities, minimum wage scale, judicial reform, State-wide primaries, taxation reform, good roads and liquor license were adopted by pluralities ranging from 10,000 to 60,000.

Woman suffrage was defeated by about 50,000. It is believed that the amendment providing State-wide primaries will have the largest plurality, with minimum wage second, home rule third, liquor license fourth and then the initiative and referendum. Special privilege made its hardest fight against the initiative and referendum and home rule. Tons of literature was directed against both.

Uniform Divorce Law Ready
The National Convention of Uniform Law Commissioners, of Milwaukee, Wis., has decided on this paragraph in the divorce laws of all the States, a paragraph which, it is believed, will prevent future remarriages of divorcees and under the conditions which surrounded the Astor case:

"Be it enacted that if any person or persons being residents of this State shall go into another State or country with intent to evade or violate any of the laws of this State forbidding or declaring void certain marriages within this State, and shall then remarry, and shall return and reside in this State, such marriage shall be null and void for all purposes in this State, with the same effect as though such marriage had been entered into in this State."

The Astor case figured prominently in the discussion. It was pointed out that the New York law was so worded that it could not touch marriages contracted outside of the State in violation of its provisions even though the contracting parties returned to New York to live.

Small Town Advertising
An unusual feature of the meeting of the Western Iowa Editorial Association at Council Bluffs recently was an address on the subject of advertising from a viewpoint of the retail merchant by David Oransky, a well-known merchant and advertiser of Atlantic, Ia. Mr. Oransky spoke on "Retail Advertising from the Viewpoint of the Merchant," and he declared that the merchant should advertise the quality and adaptability of his goods rather than depend on advertising prices. He spoke in part as follows:

"It is a sad but true fact that country merchants as a rule are not extensive advertisers. I am convinced that they should advertise regularly and persistently. I believe so, not only because some people who are supposed to know say so, but also because my actual experience in connection with retail advertising in a small town has demonstrated to me the far-reaching benefits, both direct and indirect, to be derived from persistent advertising."

Methodism in This Country

Whether the first center of Methodism in America was in Maryland or in New York is a question that is now being discussed by commissions of the three branches of the Methodist faith, so that the final verdict as to the place and the date may be reached in time for the sesquicentennial of Methodism. The Maryland Methodists would like to have a clear and undisputed title given to the old stone chapel in Carroll county. Some Methodist ministers of Baltimore still doubt that Maryland was the original home of the church in this country, and think that the John Street Meeting House, in New York, will get the final verdict.

According to the New International Encyclopedia, edited by three editors of which Daniel Colt Gilman, LL. D., president of Johns Hopkins University from 1876 to 1901, was one, the first Methodist Society in the New World was recruited from the German refugees to Ireland, driven out of the Palatinate by Louis XVI., and arrived in New York in the year 1766. Among this colony were two Irishmen who, it is said, planted Methodism in America. Both were local preachers and both were filled with Wesley's zeal.

One worked in the city and the other in the country. One kept records of his work, the other did not. Philip Embury was a palestinian Irishman; that is, stock came from that part of Germany once known as the Palatinate. He began work in New York. He was helped by Barbara Heck and others, and the Methodist church that he built, called in that day a Wesley Chapel, was on the site of the present John Street Methodist Church.

The other Irishman was Robert Strawbridge. He came from Ireland to Maryland. Whether he began to preach immediately upon his arrival or waited awhile before so doing, is not definitely known. If it was known the exact date for the forthcoming Methodist celebration would be more easily fixed. He kept no records that have come down to the present time, and the building which he had to do with has long since disappeared. He was assisted in his work by Robert Williams.

For 40 years a debate as to dates has been going on among Methodists as to which of these Irish Methodist preachers first began work. The commission will have to make some decision, first as to dates and second as to celebration. A local preacher is trying at this time to ascertain which of these two Irish Methodists first began the work. Whatever the outcome of the controversy over men and dates, it is settled that within the next two or three years, when Methodism will have been established in America a century and a half, Methodists are to have a celebration and offering worthy of the occasion. Delegates of the Methodist faith will come from all over the world. Whether the celebration takes place in New York or in Baltimore depends upon the decision of the commission.

The first Methodist college in the United States was erected at Abingdon, Md. Francis Asbury, the first bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States, was instrumental in the founding of the college in this State. The plans for the forming of this college were drawn up in June, 1780. Nothing came of this matter until four years later, when Coke and Asbury met for the first time at Barratt's Chapel, in Delaware, and opened the plans for the organization of the school. The Christmas conference in the December of the year 1784 authorized the plans for a college to be established at Abingdon, Md., and to bear the name Okebury, in honor of the two superintendents.

To Teach Love of Farm

Many grain merchants and local transportation officials gathered in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce, Baltimore, on Saturday afternoon the 31st ult., to hear Dr. O. H. Benson, of the Agricultural Department, Washington, tell the advantages to follow keeping boys and girls on the farm.

Dr. Benson is a special agent of the department of the formation of boys' and girls' agricultural clubs throughout the country. He made it clear that the future productiveness of the farms depended on the interest of the present young generation in farm work.

He suggested that the work in Maryland be started in Baltimore county, which is rich enough and, he thought, progressive enough to give early encouragement to beginners in experimental farming. Moreover, he thought the industrial school at Sparks Station, on the Northern Central, would be a good basis for such helpful work as may be needed at the start.

The meeting was called at the instance of the crop improvement committee of the Chamber of Commerce, of which J. Collin Vincent is chairman. The scheme was indorsed by H. S. Lippincott, agricultural agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in a brief address. Letters indorsing it were read from President E. Stanley Gray, of the Board of Trade; George H. Campbell, assistant to President Willard, of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad; and Austin Gallagher, industrial agent of the Western Maryland Railway.

Traffic Manager Herbert Sheridan, of the Chamber of Commerce, says immediate steps will be taken to put the views of Dr. Benson into effect in Maryland.

DAM TO WIPE OUT TOWN A BUMPER CROP YEAR FUND TO HELP WILSON TICKET ALL TAFT MEN DEMOCRATS NEW HOME NOGI AND WIFE SUICIDES

Another Plant to Breast Susquehanna River for Production of Electric Power

In the little town of Conowingo, Md., on the Cecil county shore of the Susquehanna River all the residents have been notified to vacate their dwellings.

This is the first step in the construction of a second dam across the Susquehanna River and a plan to generate electricity by the Susquehanna Power Company.

All the houses and land in Conowingo are owned by the power company, which acquired the property by first purchase and under condemnation proceedings, a right granted by an act of the Legislature of 1900. It is only a question of time before the village will rest at the bottom of a huge dammed lake that will convert the now noisy cataracts into a quiet, deep pond.

The construction will cost $10,000,000, if the cost of the McCall's Ferry dam and plant a few miles above the new enterprise be accepted as an indicator.

The new dam will be erected just below the new bridge which crosses the Susquehanna River at Conowingo and which is owned by the State, having been purchased for about $30,000 by the State Roads Commission during the administration of the late Governor Crothers.

There is no lack of water power in the Susquehanna River. It is said the waters have 10,000,000-horse power daily. The capacity of the McCall's Ferry plant is 100,000 horse power.

Guernsey—Long Wedding

The wedding of Miss E. Myra Long, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Long, of Westover, and Mr. Clarence E. Guernsey, of Portland, Oregon, which took place at the bride's home on Wednesday last, was one of unusual beauty and brilliancy. About 75 guests were present including relatives and friends from Baltimore, Wilmington, Cambridge and adjacent towns.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. F. Freund, pastor of Manokin Presbyterian Church, Princess Anne—of which the bride is a member—under an arch of golden rods and ferns in the spacious library, decorated for the occasion with golden rods and ferns. Yellow being the color scheme.

The gown worn by the bride was white crepe meteor trimmed with Irish point lace and chiffon; her veil of flimsy tulle was fastened with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The attendants were her two sisters, Misses Lillian and Mary Long, who wore gowns of white silk marquisette over yellow satin and carried bouquets of yellow dahlias.

After the ceremony the bridal party retired to the dining room where refreshments were served. At 12.30 amid the congratulations of friends and showers of rice Mr. and Mrs. Guernsey were whisked away in an auto to board the north bound train for New York City, Niagara Falls and other places of interest en route to Portland, Oregon, their future home, expecting to arrive there October 1st.

Death of Miss Sallie B. U. Handy

Miss Sallie B. U. Handy, daughter of the late Wm. W. and Sallie B. Handy, died on Tuesday night last at a private sanatorium near Baltimore, aged 66 years. Miss Handy was well known in Princess Anne, which was her native home, and was a woman of most estimable qualities. Her health began to fail about seventeen years ago, since which time her residence had been at Catonsville. She was a sister of John H. Handy, Esq., of Snow Hill, and of the late Rev. Wm. C. Handy, of Princess Anne.

Miss Handy's remains were brought to Princess Anne on Wednesday evening and the funeral took place on Thursday morning at Manokin Presbyterian Church, of which she had long been a member. Rev. W. F. Freund conducting the services. Interment was in the adjoining cemetery. The pallbearers were, H. Fillmore Lankford, Robert F. Duer, S. Frank Dashiell, Henry J. Waters, W. O. Lankford and Bruce Handy.

Those present from a distance were: John H. Handy, Esq., of Snow Hill, Md.; Messrs. Robert B. Handy and Bruce Handy, of Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. L. Irving Handy, of Smyrna, Del.; Judge Joseph B. Handy, of New York; Miss Annie E. Upshur, of Nassawadox, Virginia.

The closed season for straw hats will soon be here and anyone seen on a public street with a "last straw of summer" on his head will be fair prey for the small boy and his brickbats.

Corn, Wheat, Oats and Hay in Flourishing Condition—At Head Fat Years

Bumper crops of corn, white potatoes, spring wheat, oats, barley, rye and buckwheat were forecasted by the Crop Reporting Board of the Department of Agriculture, at Washington, in its September report.

Corn probably will reach 2,995,000,000 bushels, exceeding the record crop of 1906 by about 68,000,000 bushels, the crop of last year by 464,000,000 bushels and the crop of 1910 by 109,000,000 bushels.

The potato yield this year, it is estimated, will be 398,000,000 bushels, overstepping the bumper crop of 1909 by about 9,000,000 bushels, the short crop of last year by about 105,000,000 bushels and the crop of 1910 by about 49,000,000 bushels.

The spring wheat crop probably will be 300,000,000 bushels, or 8,000,000 bushels over the record of 1908, 109,000,000 bushels over last year's crop and 99,000,000 bushels over the 1910 crop.

The harvest of oats, according to the report, will be 1,290,000,000 bushels, exceeding the record crop of 1910 by 104,000,000 bushels and last year's crop by 368,000,000 bushels.

The crop of rye will be, it is believed, about 3,000 bushels greater than the record crop of 1910, buckwheat about 400,000 bushels higher than the record crop of 1910, and flax will almost reach the record crop of 1902.

Secretary MacVeagh has under consideration suggestions that the Treasury Department distribute some of its surplus funds among the national banks, to be available for the movement of crops during the next few weeks.

New Party Born in Maine

Maine emerged from the State election of Monday of last week in which the Republicans were victorious, to find herself facing another political contest with five parties instead of four in the race for the six Presidential electoral votes.

The Progressive party, whose leaders had joined with the Republicans in Monday's election, came into being Tuesday, after the announcement of the election of William T. Haines, for Governor, three out of four Representatives to Congress and a majority in the Legislature which will choose a United States Senator. Former Congressman Edwin C. Burleigh received the Republican preferential vote for Senator at the recent primaries.

Interest Tuesday centered in the action of the Progressive leaders. The Republicans and Democrats have all ready nominated their presidential electors. The Progressives, Prohibitionists and Socialists, not being recognized officially, will make their nomination of electors by petition. These papers began to be circulated last week.

Halbert P. Gardner, in announcing the position of the Progressives Tuesday said:

The Progressive party, as a party, does not take credit for the result of yesterday's election, although the element in the Republican party for Mr. Haines. It did this in order to carry out the agreement made with the Republican leaders and also because the Progressives had taken part in the Republican primaries and felt bound to abide by the verdict then rendered.

The Progressive party of Maine came into existence for the first time Tuesday morning. From now on it will seek election for Roosevelt presidential electors in Maine.

Chairman John P. S. Wilson, of the Democratic State Committee, declared that the results Monday were encouraging. He said that the split in the Republican party meant the election in November of the Democratic presidential electors.

Rev. Elderdice For Congress

The Prohibitionists of the First Congressional District of Maryland, held their convention at Hurlock, Md., last Wednesday, and nominated Rev. Chas. M. Elderdice, of Federalburg, as their candidate for Congress.

The convention met in Harper's Hall and opened with prayer by John H. Dulany, of Fruitland. Robert T. Taylor was elected chairman and M. D. Nutter secretary.

A campaign committee consisting of John H. Dulany, George P. Bell and Linwood Clark was appointed to assist the candidate in the management of the campaign.

Mr. Elderdice was the candidate two years ago and at that time increased the vote from 888 to 1,440. He is pastor of Federalburg Methodist Protestant Church, which has made substantial progress under his pastorate.

Advisers Name Special Committee to Invite Governor—Senator Lee For Treasurer

Plans for raising the Democratic campaign fund for the State fight and also some money for the National Committee to be used in other and doubtful States were devised Thursday at a meeting of the executive branch of the auxiliary committee at headquarters in the Royal Arcanum building, Baltimore.

In accordance with the wishes of Governor Wilson, the fund in Maryland will be raised solely by popular subscription. Although Democrats will be urged to make small contributions, ranging from $1 to $5, yet larger contributions, will be sought, especially for the State fight.

The committee also decided that if possible the campaign would be formally launched in Maryland with a mass meeting at which Governor Wilson, would be the principal speaker. It is believed that a visit from him early in the fight would stir the voters, and as a result it would be easier to collect the funds.

A special committee, consisting of Messrs. William Cabell Bruce, Joshua W. Miles and Senator Blair Lee, was appointed by chairman George C. Morrison to call on the nominee and ask him to come to Baltimore in the latter part of this month.

For the purpose of collecting funds for the State campaign a finance committee, consisting of Senator Lee (chairman) and Messrs. Miles, Bruce, George N. Numsen and Sterling Galt, was appointed. This committee will meet on Thursday and devise plans. The probabilities are that one or more sub-collectors will be named for each county and for each ward in Baltimore city.

In order to raise funds for the national campaign a committee, consisting of Messrs. Miles, Galt, Walter J. Mitchell, B. Howell Griswold, Jr., and Z. Howard Isaac, was appointed. Following the example of Mr. Miles in Somerset county, this committee will make a special appeal for five-dollar contributions for the national campaign.

Chairman Murray Vandiver, of the State Central Committee, attended the meeting and said that in his judgment the Maryland campaign would cost between $25,000 and $30,000. This money will be used for mass meetings in the city and counties, paying the expenses of the speakers and for the distribution of literature. General Vandiver also explained that the State committee would lose much of its usual revenue this year from State officeholders. In the past, he said, between $4,000 and $5,000 has been raised from them for each State campaign. This year so many of the offices are held by Republicans that he does not expect over $800 from that source.

While Mr. Vandiver is in favor of the Maryland Democracy aiding the national fight as much as possible, he believes the committee should see that the campaign in Maryland is financed before any money is sent away. He pointed out that in the past the State has forwarded money to the National Committee, but has never received one cent back when the National Committee distributed the funds.

To the gratification of the committee, Senator Lee announced that he would accept the treasurership. Under the Corrupt Practices act the committee fixed Senator Lee's bond at $10,000.

It was decided that while the committee would proceed with the collection of funds they would only be distributed through its orders. As the committee now has no funds, it was decided to begin collecting immediately. Appeals will be sent broadcast over the State.

Woman's Wilson League

Any woman who favors the election of Woodrow Wilson shall be eligible for membership. It is desired that we reach a membership of many thousand. Send names to the office of the Woman's Wilson League, 1211 and 1212 Fidelity Building, Baltimore, which will be open daily from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

No membership fees, but voluntary contributions are desired. Amounts less than $1.00 may be sent in stamps, acknowledgements will be made. The name of the giver must be sent with the money, the law distinctly forbids amounts credited to "cash" or "friend." The names will not be made public.

Send names for membership to Miss Clara White, 1211 Fidelity Building, Baltimore. Contributions to the Chairwoman of the Finance Committee, Mrs. Thomas W. Marshall, 1605 East Baltimore street, or Miss A. Page Reid, 13 West Eager street, Baltimore.

The hero finds it mighty hard work to stay on the job.

Bull Moose Adherents Removed as Candidates for Electors By the Republicans

By one short, double-action resolution the regular Republican party of Maryland at a reassembled State convention in Baltimore last Tuesday removed six Roosevelt adherents from the ticket as Presidential electoral candidates and filled their places with six men avowedly loyal to Taft and Sherman. The new ticket reads as follows:

At large, G. Spearman Lancaster, Charles county, vice Col. Joseph R. Baldwin, "removed."

I. Henry Ford, Cecil, vice F. Snowden Hill, resigned.

First District—William H. Kemp, on original ticket.

Second District—Frank E. Baker, vice David M. Newbold, Jr., "removed."

Third District—John Kronmiller, vice Henry P. Hoffman, resigned.

Fourth District—Clinton O. Richardson, vice Charles H. Torsch, resigned.

Fifth District—Richard N. Ryon, vice William Allen, "removed."

Sixth District—Abraham E. Albert, on original ticket.

Without going into detail, the resolution simply read that "the Presidential electors nominated by this convention in session May 14," at which eight electors were chosen, "be and the same is hereby reconsidered and revoked," and that the new list "be nominated by the convention as Presidential electors for the State representing the Republican national party."

Besides revising the electoral ticket, the convention indorsed the renomination and candidacies of President Taft and Vice-President Sherman and heartily approved the administration of Governor Goldsborough.

Explorer Stefansson Home Again

Vilhjalmar Stefansson, after spending more than four years in Arctic exploration, returned to Seattle, Wash., last week by steamer from Nome, Alaska, and told of his probable discovery of the descendants of the Scandinavian colonists of Greenland, who were last heard of in 1412, who, when trade with Greenland was resumed in the seventeenth century, had disappeared.

Stefansson and his companion, Dr. R. M. Anderson, of Forest City, Iowa, made a valuable zoological and ethnological collection, which is now on the steam whaler Belvedere with Dr. Anderson and will arrive in San Francisco the first week in November on the way to the American Museum of Natural History, New York. Stefansson left for New York Tuesday night.

Stefansson and Anderson went to the Arctic in 1908 by way of Winnipeg, Edmonton and down the Mackenzie river to its mouth. They were bound for Coronation Gulf, a region marked on Canadian maps as uninhabited, and which they had been warned to avoid. Stefansson spent the first winter at the mouth of Colville river, Alaska; the second at Cape Parry, the third on Coronation Gulf and Victoria Land and the fourth at Cape Parry.

The feature of the collection, from a popular standpoint, are the skins, skulls and leg bones of 19 barren ground grizzly bears ready for mounting. Only one barren ground grizzly is in any museum. It is supposed that bears of two species are in the collection.

Dr. Anderson found pottery farther east than ever before known and also grass baskets.

Of the so-called white Eskimos of Coronation gulf Stefansson said: "They were taller than the Greenland Eskimos, but not so tall as the Alaska Eskimos. They spoke Eskimo, though I thought I detected some Norse words, and they lived in the typical Eskimo way. I visited 13 groups of these people, who number probably 2,000, and saw 1,000 of them. Ten of these groups or tribes had never come into contact with the whites and had not even a tradition of them. Two tribes had traditions of the Sir John Franklin expedition. An old man in one tribe had seen Richardson in 1848, and an old man in another tribe had seen Collinson in 1853.

For a New Trolley Line

Last Thursday Former Congressman Joshua W. Miles filed with the Public Service Commission, Baltimore, a petition for authority to sell stocks and bonds for the construction of the proposed trolley line from Deal's Island to Snow Hill. The bonds and stocks are each for $1,000,000. It is said that the California Trust Company is behind the project and the outlook for the construction of the road is encouraging.

State Central Committee Forsakes Old Quarters Which It Has Occupied for 12 Years

Gen. Murray Vandiver, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, Tuesday bade an affectionate goodbye to the suite of rooms on the second floor of the Eutaw House which had been headquarters for twelve years and took up his new abode in the Royal Arcanum Building on Saratoga street opposite the Hotel Rennett, Baltimore.

With Gen. Vandiver from the Eutaw House to the Royal Arcanum Building went his records, his ponderous scrapbooks and portraits of distinguished Democratic State leaders which so narrowly escaped destruction when the Eutaw House was partly ablaze early in June last. The portraits include those of the late Arthur P. Gorman, I. Freeman Rasin, L. Victor Baughman, Barnes Compton, Austin L. Crothers, John P. Poe, W. F. Porter, and William Pinkney White. Among the portraits of the living are those of Senator John Walter Smith, former Governor Edwin Warfield, A. P. Gorman and Isaac Lobe Straus.

The headquarters to which Gen. Vandiver bade adieu, has been his working office since 1900, when the state committee followed the late J. P. Shannon from the Carrollton hotel to the Eutaw House as manager. The same rooms assigned to the committee were occupied in 1899 by the Republican State Central Committee of which Gen. Thomas J. Shryock was chairman. The first campaign conducted by Gen. Vandiver in the Eutaw House was that of 1900 when Bryan was the Democratic candidate for President. During the past 12 years every State and National Committee has been directed from the old quarters. During several local campaigns the city committee has occupied rooms in the hotel.

Death Sentence For Floyd and Claude Allen

Death in the electric chair at the State prison in Richmond, on November 22, was the sentence imposed last Wednesday on Floyd and Claude Allen, by Judge W. R. Staples, at Wytheville, Va., who has presided over the trials of the members of the Allen clan for shooting up the courthouse at Hillsville, in Carroll county, on March 14th last. The sentence will be carried out unless the Supreme Court grants them new trials. The condemned men received their sentences with the same stoicism which has characterized their conduct from the time of their arrest.

Floyd, the leader of the Allen gang, which shot up the Hillsville Court on March 14, when five persons, including Judge Thornton L. Massie, Commonwealth's Attorney William Foster, and Sheriff Lew Webb, lost their lives in a fusillade of bullets, was the first member of the clan to be tried. He was convicted of killing Commonwealth's Attorney Foster. Claude Allen was convicted of killing Sheriff Webb. Before his conviction on that charge he was convicted of second degree murder in connection with the death of Prosecutor Foster.

Sentence on both convicted slayers was suspended to allow them to testify in behalf of Friel and Victor Allen. Both testified for Victor on Tuesday and were sentenced Wednesday morning.

An Army of Clowns Will Be Here

The Downie & Wheeler's World's Best Shows Combined present along with their comedy department this year numerous prominent jesters, commonly called "clowns," Frank Belmont and Al F. Wheeler, Jr., are the principal jesters and associated with them are 30 Kings of the Clowning World. Along with these funny chaps, others also assist with comical antics. When intermingling with citizens on the streets none of them would be suspected of wearing the loose robes of a fool, but when they are in the ring with their make-up on, they laugh and the crowd laughs with them. A jolly lot, who will certainly help to unload, at least temporarily, the cares from the minds of thousands of people.

Clowning is an art of itself, the best clowns are born, not made. The fun department of the Downie & Wheeler's Combined Shows is fully up to the standard of its other departments; in fact, many people will testify to the statement that the clowns with this show are worth the price of admission, their work is appreciated, as the present strenuous life of most people causes them to relish a little pure nonsense now and then. Everything in all departments of the Downie & Wheeler's Circus this year is positively new, refreshing and up-to-date. Artists, performers, producers of novelties from everywhere on the face of the globe, forming the most wonderful, diversified and pleasing show the world has ever seen. The big show will exhibit in Princess Anne next Friday, Sept. 20th.

Double Tragedy at Mikado's Funeral—Grief Over Monarch's Death Leads to Harikari

Gen. Count Maresuke Nogi, supreme military counselor of the empire of Japan, and his wife, the Countess Nogi, committed suicide Wednesday in accordance with the ancient Japanese custom as a final tribute to their departed Emperor and friend, Mutsuhito.

The death by their own hands of the famous General and his wife was as dramatic as it was sad. The General cut his throat with a short sword and the Countess committed harikari.

Following the Samurai custom the couple had carefully prepared their plans for killing themselves and timed them so that they would be coincident with the departure forever from Tokio of the dead Emperor.

General Nogi and the Countess had attended the funeral services of Mutsuhito at the palace at Tokio, last Tuesday and it was expected that they would proceed to Aoyama Wednesday night with the cortege. Instead, however, at the conclusion of the ceremony at the palace they withdrew to their modest home in Akasaka, a suburb of Tokio, and there began their final preparations for death.

First the General wrote a letter to his new Emperor, Yoshihito, which later was found beside his body. Then he draped in mourning a portrait on the wall of the late Emperor and afterward he and his wife dressed themselves in full Japanese costume and drank a farewell cup of sake from cups which had been presented to the General by Mutsuhito.

Darkness had fallen and General Nogi and the Countess sat and awaited the signal they had agreed upon to announce their leave-taking. This was the booming of a single gun in the palace grounds at Tokio, which was to let the people know that the body of the Emperor was starting on the funeral car for its last resting place.

As the boom of the gun resounded through the clear still night General Nogi arose and grasping in his hand a short sword plunged it into his throat, while the Countess stabbed herself through the body.

A student who resided in the Nogi home heard the fall of the bodies and rushed into the room. Laying upon the floor were the hero of Port Arthur and his wife. Both still were breathing, but their spasmodic gasps showed plainly that death was near. The student hurried for aid, but when he returned with it both the General and the Countess were dead.

The tragedy created a profound sensation and expressions of sorrow were heard on every hand. Especially grief-stricken was Prince Arthur, of Connaught, the special envoy to the funeral of Mutsuhito of Great Britain. Prince Arthur was to have gone with General Nogi Saturday to the former capital of the Shogunate, Kamakura.

Delaware Progressive Ticket

The Delaware Progressives in State convention at Dover, Delaware, last Wednesday nominated a full State ticket independent of any candidates already nominated in that State by either of the old parties and made declarations to stand by such ticket until election day. A Bull Moose likeness was adopted as an emblem. The ticket as nominated was as follows:

Presidential Electors—New Castle county, Francis I. duPont; Kent county, Samuel H. Derby; Sussex county, George W. Stradley.

Congressman—Louis A. Drexler, Sussex county.

Governor—George B. Hynson, Kent county; Lieutenant Governor, George W. Tebo, Kent county.

State Insurance Commissioner—Arthur A. Wilmont, New Castle county.

Attorney General—Robert G. Houston, New Castle county.

State Auditor—J. P. Wilson, New Castle county.

Boy Burns in Barn

While the live stock was being saved, little Frederick, the four-year-old son of Nutter Parker, of near Delmar, was burned to death Saturday afternoon in his father's barn. It was not until the barn was completely destroyed and a fireman had stumbled across the body of the little fellow, that his parents were aware of his fate. They supposed that he was out with some playmate. It is supposed that the little fellow was amusing himself by striking matches in the hay mow which became ignited, quickly enveloping him in flames.

The chronic kicker is more apt to get exercise than results.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Under World.
A coterie of brilliant folk soon followed in the wake of my lord, the Marquis' retinue; holy-day banners were succeeded by holiday ribbons; the misere of the multitude by paeans of merriment. Hymen, to Hymen! In assuming the leading role to which circumstances now assigned her, the Governor's daughter brought to the task less energy than she had displayed on that other occasion when visitors had sojourned at the rock. Her manner was changed—first, lukewarm; then, almost indifferent; until, at length, one day she fairly waived the responsibility of planning amusements; laid before them the question: What, now, would they like to do?

"Devise a play," said one.
"With shepherds and shepherdesses!"
The Marquis, however, qualified the suggestion. "A masque! that is very good; but, for this morning—I have been talking with the commandant—and have another proposal—"

"Which is?"
"To visit the dungeons."
"The dungeons?" My lady's face changed.
"And incidentally inspect their latest guest! Some of you heard of him when we were here before—Le Seigneur Noir—the Black Seigneur!"

"Le Seigneur Noir!" They clapped their hands. "Yes, let us see him! Nothing could be better. What do you say, Elise?"

She started to speak, but for the instant her lips could frame no answer; with a faint, strained smile, confronted him, when some one anticipated her reply.
"Did she not leave it to us? It is we who decide."

And a merry party they swept along, bearing her with them; up the broad stairway, cold, gray in the morn; beneath the abbey's bridge—black, spying span!—to the church, and thence to the isolated space before the guard-house to the dungeons. Here, at the sound of their voices, a man, carrying a bunch of keys—but outwardly the antithesis to the hunchback—peered from the entrance.

"Unless I am mistaken, the new jailer!" With a wave of his hand, the Marquis indicated this person. "The commandant was telling me his Excellency had engaged one—from Bièvre, or Fort l'Évêque, I believe?"
"Bièvre, my lord!" said the man gravely. "And before that, the Bastille."

"Ah!" laughed the nobleman. "That pretty place some of the foolish people are grumbling about! As if we could do without prisons any more than without palaces! But we have come, my good fellow, to inspect this lower world of yours!"

The man's glance passed over the paper the Marquis handed him; then silently he moved aside, and unlocked the iron doors.
"Are you not coming?" At the threshold the Marquis looked back. When first they had approached the guard-house, involuntarily had the Governor's daughter drawn aside to the ramparts; now, with face half-averted, stood gazing off.

"Coming?" Surprised, the Marquis noted her expression; the fixed brightness of her eyes and her parted lips. "Oh, yes!" And turning abruptly, she hastened past him.

Would they have to be locked in?—the half-apprehensive query of one of the ladies caused the jailer at first to hesitate and then to answer in the negative. He would leave the doors from the outer room open, and himself await there the visitors' return. With which reassuring promise, he distributed lights; called a guard—man, familiar with the intricate underground passages, and consigned them to his care.

One of the gay procession, the Lady Elise stepped slowly forward; the guide proved a talkative fellow, and seemed anxious to answer their many inquiries concerning the place. "The salle de la question? Yes, it existed; but the ancient torture devices for the 'interrogatory ordinary' and the 'interrogatory extraordinary' were no longer pressed into service; the King had ordered them relegated to the shelves of the museum. The cabans, or black holes? Louis XI built them; the carceres duri and vade in pace, however, dated from Saint Maurinus, fourth abbot of the Mount."
"And the Black Seigneur? How have you accommodated him?"

"In the petit exil; just to the left! We are going there now."

"I am going back!" A hand touched the arm of the Marquis, last of the file of visitors, and, lifting his candle, he held it so that the yellow glimmer played on the face of the Governor's daughter. Her eyes looked deeper; full of dread, as if the very spirit of the subterranean abode had seized her. He started.

"Surely you, Elise, are not afraid?"
"I prefer the sunlight," she said hurriedly in a low tone. "It—it is not cheerful down here! No; do not call the guide—or let the others know. I'll return alone, and—wait for you at the guard-house."

He, nevertheless, insisted upon accompanying her; but, indicating the not distant door through which they had come, she professed to make light of objections, and when he still clung to the point, replied with a flash of spirit, sudden and passionate. It compelled his acquiescence; left him surprised for a second time that day; a little hurt, too, perhaps, for heretofore had their intimacy been maintained on a strictly ethical and charming plane. But he had no time for analysis; the others were drawing away to the left, into a side passage; and, with a last backward glance toward the retreating figure, the Marquis reluctantly followed the majority.

Despite, however, her avowed repugnance for that under-world, my lady showed now no haste to quit it; for scarcely had the others vanished than she stopped; began slowly to retrace her way in the direction they had taken. When the narrow route to the petit exil connected with the main aisle, a sudden draft of air extinguished her light; yet still she went on, led by the voices, and a glimmer afar, until reaching a room, low, massive, as if hewn from the solid rock, again she paused. Drawing behind a heavy square pillar, she gazed at the lords and ladies assembled in the forbidding place; listened to a voice that ran on, as if discoursing about some anomalous thing. Again was she cognizant of their questions; a jest from my lord, the Marquis; she saw that several stole forward; peered, and started back, half afraid.

But, at length, they asked about the oubliettes, and, chatting gaily, left their garments almost touched the Governor's daughter; lights played about the gigantic pillars, and like will-o'-the-wisps whisked away. Now, staring straight ahead toward the chamber they had vacated, my lady's attention became fixed by a single dot of yellow—a candle placed in a niche by the jailer's assistant. It seemed to fascinate; to draw her forward; across the portals—into the room itself!

How long she stood there in the faint suggestion of light, she did not realize; nor when she approached the iron-barred aperture, and what she first said! Something eager, solicitous, with odd silences between the words, until the impression of a motionless form, and two steady, cynical eyes fastened on her, brought her to an abrupt pause. It was some time before she continued, more coherently, an explanation about her apprehension on account of her father, which had entirely left her when she peered through the window of the guard-house.

"You thought me, then, but a common assassin?" a satirical voice interposed.

"My father hates you, and you—"

"My Lady has, perhaps, a standard of her own for judging!"

Unmindful of ironical incredulity, she related how she had been forced to take refuge in the wheel-house; how, when Sanchez had seen her, alarmed she had fled blindly down the passage; waited, then hearing them all coming, at a loss what else to do, had opened the wheel-house door; run into the store-room! What she had seen from there, disconnectedly, also she referred to; his rescue of the others; his remaining behind to bear the brunt—as brave an act as she knew of! Her tone became tremulous.

"Who betrayed me?" His voice, bold and scoffing, interrupted.
She answered. It was like speaking to some one in a tomb. "The soldier you bound gave the alarm."

From behind the bars came a mocking laugh.
"You don't believe me?" She caught her breath.
"Believe? Of course."
"You don't!" she said, and clung tighter to the iron grating. "And I can't make you!"
"Why should your Ladyship want to? What does it matter?"
"But it does matter!" wildly. "When your servant accused me that day in the cloister I did not answer nor deny; but now—"

"Your Ladyship would deny?"
"That I betrayed you at Casque? Here? Yes, yes!"
"Or at the wheel-house when you called to warn the soldiers?"
"You were about to—throw yourself over!" she faltered.

"And your Ladyship was apprehensive lest the Black Seigneur should escape?"
"Escape?" she cried. "It was death."
"And the alternative? My lady preferred to see the outlaw taken—die like a felon on the gallows!"
"No; no! It was not that."

"What then?" His eyes gleamed bright; her own turned; shrank from them. A moment she strove to answer; could not. Within the black recess a faint light from the flickering candle played up and down. So complete the stillness, so dead the very air, the throbbings of her pulses filled the girl with a suffocating sense of her own vitality.

"I spoke to my father to try to get your cell changed," she at last found herself irreverently saying; "but could do nothing."
"I thank your Ladyship! But your Ladyship's friends will be far away. Your Ladyship may miss something amusing!"

"I did not bring them—did not want them to come!"
"No?"

Her figure straightened.
"Perhaps, even, they are not aware you are here?"

"They are not, unless—"
"Elise!" From afar a loud call interrupted; reverberating down the main passage, was caught up here and there. "Elise! Elise!" The whole under-world echoed to the name.

"I promised to meet them at the guard-house," she explained hurriedly. And hardly knowing what she did, put out her hand, through the bars, toward him. In the darkness a hand seized hers; she felt herself drawn; held against the bars. They bruised her shoulder; hurt her face. The chill of the iron sent a shudder through her; though the pain she did not feel; she was cognizant only of a closer view of a figure; the chains from him to the wall; the bare, damp floor—then, of a voice low, tense, that now was speaking:

"Your Ladyship, indeed, found means to punish a presumptuous fellow, who dared displease her. But ma foi! she should have confined her punishment to the offender. Those stripes inflicted on him, my old servant! Think you I knew not it was my Lady's answer to the outlaw, who had the temerity to speak words that offended—"

"You dream that! You imagine that!"
The warmth of his hand seemed to burn hers; her fingers, so closely imprisoned, to throb with the fierce beating of his pulses.

"I do not want you to think—I can't let you think," she began.

"Elise!" The searchers were drawing nearer.

She would have stepped back, but the fingers tightened on her hand.
"They will be here in a moment—"

Still he did not relinquish his hold; the dark face was next to hers; the piercing, relentless eyes stared the agitated brown ones. The latter cleared; met his fully an instant. "Believe!" that imploring wild glance seemed to say. Did his waver for a moment; the harshness and mockery softened on his face?

"Elise!" From but a short distance came the voice of the Marquis. A moment the Black Seigneur's hand gripped my lady's harder with a strength he was unaware of. A slight cry fell from her lips, and at once, almost roughly, he threw her hand from him.

"Bah!" again he laughed mockingly. "Go to your lover."

Released thus abruptly she wavered, straightened, but continued to stand before the dungeon as if incapable of further motion.

"Elise! Are you there?"
"There!" Caverns and caves called out.

"There!" gibed voices amid a labyrinth of pillars, and mechanically she caught up the candle; fled.

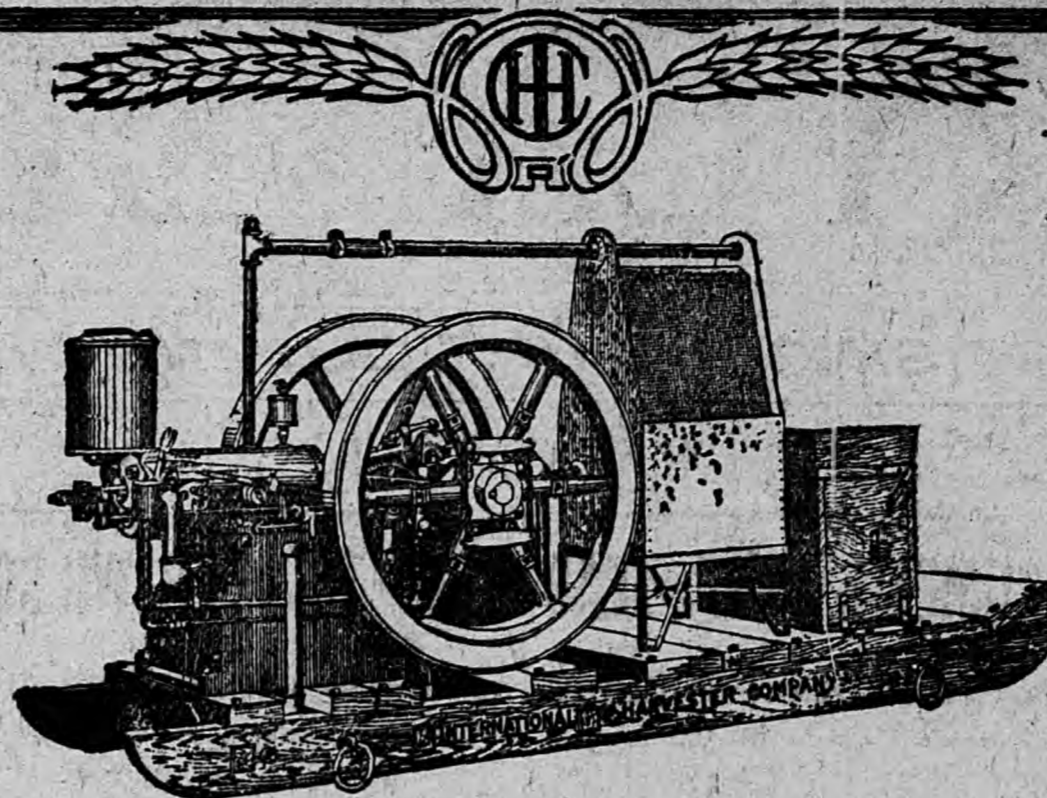

"Here she is!" Coming toward her quickly out of the darkness, the Marquis uttered a glad exclamation. "We have been looking for you everywhere. Did I not say you should not have attempted to return alone? Mon dieu! you must have been lost!"

CHAPTER XXVI.

A New Arrival.
Thrice had the old nurse, Marie, assisting her mistress that night for the banquet, sighed; a number of times striven to hold my lady's eye and attention, but in vain. Only when the adorning process was nearly completed and the nurse knelt with a white slipper, did she, by a distinctly detaining pressure, succeed in arresting, momentarily, the other's bright strained glance.

"Is anything the matter?" My lady's absent tone did not invite confidences.
"My Lady—" the woman hesitated; yet seemed anxious to speak. "I—my Lady," she began again; with sign of encouragement from the Governor's daughter, would have gone on; but the latter, after waiting a moment, abruptly withdrew the stolen look.

"The banquet! It is past the hour!" An instant she stood, not seeing the other or the expression of disappointment on the woman's countenance; then quickly walked to the door. Nor, as the Governor's daughter moved down the long corridor, with crimson lips set hard, was she cognizant of another face that looked out from one of the many passages of the palace after her—the face of a younger woman whose dark, spying eyes glowed and whose hands closed at sight of the vanishing figure!

The sound of gay voices, however, as she neared the banquet hall, perforce recalled my lady to a sense of her surroundings; at the same time a figure in full court dress stepped from the widely opened doors. An adequate degree of expectancy on his handsome countenance, my lord, the Marquis, who had been waiting, lover-fashion, for the first glimpse of his mistress that evening, now gallantly tendered his greetings.

Seldom, perhaps, had the ancient banquet hall presented a more festive appearance. Fruits and flowers made bright the tables; banners medieval, trophies of many victories, trailed from the ceiling; a hundred lights were reflected from ornaments of crystal and dishes of gold. On every hand an almost barbaric profusion impressed the guests with the opulence of the Mount; that few could sit in more state than this pale lord of the North, or few queens preside over a scene of greater splendor than their fair hostess, his daughter!

With feverish semblance of spirit, she took her place; beneath the keen eyes of his Excellency responded to sallies of wit, and only when between courses the music played, did her manner relax. Then, leaning on her elbow, with cheeks aflame and downcast eyes, she professed to listen to dainty strains—the sighing of the old troubadours, as imitated by a group of performers in costume on a balcony at one end of the hall.

"Charming!" The voice was the Marquis'; she looked at him, though her eyes conveyed but a shadowy impression. "You have quite recovered from your trip to the dungeons?"

"Quite!" With a sudden lift of the head.

"The dungeons?" His Excellency's gaze was on them. "I understand," looking at Elise, "you had a slight adventure?"

The glow on her cheek faded. "Yes," she seemed to speak with difficulty. "It was too stupid!"

"To get lost? Say, rather, it was venturesome to have attempted to return alone."

"Just what I said to the Lady Elise!" broke in the Marquis. "And to have left us at a most interesting moment!"

"Interesting?" The Governor's steel-gray eyes regarded the speaker inquiringly.

"We were about to visit the Black Seigneur!"

"Ah!" A look flashed from his Excellency to his daughter; her glance failed to meet it.

Yet paler, she turned over-shoulder to the Marquis. "What is that air they are playing now?" His response she heard not, was only conscious that across the board, the eyes of her father still scrutinized; studied!

At length, however, the evening wore away; a signal from his Excellency, and of one accord they rose and crossed to the star-illuminated cloister adjoining. There at the entrance, my lady, who toward the last had listened with an air of distraction, hardly concealed, to her noble suitor's graceful speeches, held back, and, as the others went in, quickly effected her escape and hastened to her own apartments.

"At last!" She threw back her arms; breathed deeper. Ah, mon pere, you are hard-unyielding as the iron doors and bars of your dungeons! She pressed her hand to her forehead. "And I can do nothing—noting!" she repeated; stood for a moment motionless and then mechanically moved toward the bell-rope at the other end of the chamber. But the hand she started to raise was arrested; through the slightly opened door to the adjoining apartment, she heard voices; words that caused her involuntarily to listen.

"I have made up my mind to tell her ladyship, Nanette!" The old nurse was speaking, in tones that betrayed excitement and anxiety. "It is, to say the least, embarrassing for me—your coming here! Yes, the daughter of Pierre Laroche, who emigrated to the English Isles! Who has always shown disloyalty for the monarchy at home!" My lady, surprised, drew nearer; caught the answer, which came in tones deep and strong.

"At least, aunt, you are frank!" "I must be! Under ordinary circumstances, I should be glad; of course, the child of my dead sister ought to be welcome."

"So I thought," dryly, "when I stopped off a few days ago to see you, on my way to Paris."

"If you had let me know, it is I who would have gone somewhere, near by, to have seen you!" was the troubled reply. "His Excellency—what would he say if he knew? Pierre Laroche, who has been called friend of privy-counsellors, perhaps even of the Black Seigneur, himself! I should have gone to his Excellency at once and asked if he objected, only you begged me not, and—"

"Were you so anxious to be rid of me?" quickly.

"I shouldn't speak as I do now, perhaps, only—"

"Only?"

"Your conduct, since you have been here—"

"What do you mean?" The other's tone had a sudden defiant ring.

"It is not seemly for a girl of your age and condition to be out alone so late, nights!"

"I just went down into the town to get something," was the careless response, "and the sands looked so attractive—"

"That's no excuse! And now," the old nurse's voice showed a trace of embarrassment, "we've had our visit, and you had better carry out your plan of going to Paris."

"You want me to leave here—at once?" The girl drew her breath sharply.

"Perhaps it would be as well."

"You treat me as if I were a spy!" angrily.

"I don't wish to do that," returned the woman in a constrained tone. "But now, after so many years of service with her ladyship! And her mother, the former lady of the Mount! If I should incur the Governor's displeasure—" the words died away. "If I can be of any help to you, if you need assistance—money—"

"Money!" Nanette's derisive laugh rang out; was suddenly hushed by the tinkling of a bell!

"Her ladyship!"

For a few moments the Governor's daughter, now standing in the center of her apartment, heard no sound from the other room; then a timid footstep approaching the door was followed by an indecisive rap.

"Your ladyship rang?" inquired Marie, turning a half-guilty glance on her mistress.

"Yes! Did I hear voices, as I came in?"

"Did your ladyship? I mean I was going to speak to your ladyship. It's my niece!" suddenly. "On her way to Paris!"

"Your niece!" The Governor's daughter looked at the other. "And you—are pleased?"

"Your ladyship—" The woman flushed.

"Of course, though, you must believe she is out there? Show her in!" quickly.

"But—"

"At once!"

"Very well, my lady!" Marie's manner, however, was depressed as, stepping to the threshold, reluctantly she beckoned.

Erect, with mien almost antagonistic, Nanette entered and stood before the Lady Elise. The latter did not at once speak; for a few moments the observant brown eyes passed in quick scrutiny over her visitor; noting the aggressive brows; the broad, strong face; the self-assertive pose of the well-developed figure. A woman to do—to dare!—What?

"You wished to see me?" Nanette first spoke. Marie lifted an expostulatory hand. What bad manners, thus to dare! But my lady did not seem to notice. "You are from one of the islands?" she began.

"Yes."

"Say, my lady!" broke in the old nurse. "I trust your ladyship will pardon—"

"Never mind, Marie!" with a quick gesture. "Your aunt tells me you are on your way to Paris!"

"Yes—my lady!" with the slightest hesitation before the last two words. "To seek a situation as lady's maid!"

"When are you leaving?"

"Tomorrow morning, your ladyship!" interposed Marie quickly.

"So soon?" My lady continued to address the girl. "You have had experience?"

"No, my lady!"

"Then how can you secure what you wish?"

"How? At least, I can try!"

"To be sure! You can try." My lady's eyes fell; she seemed to be thinking. "Still, it may be difficult; Paris is far away. And if you should fall, her fingers tapped nervously on the chair, "we are very busy at the Mount just now," she added suddenly, directing her glance full upon the other, "and there may be something here—"

"Here! Your ladyship will keep me here!"

Marie made a movement as if to speak, but her niece intercepted her. "I will do my best, my lady!"

"Very well! Then shall you have a trial?"

"Your ladyship!" interposed Marie.

The Governor's daughter got up quickly. "I am very tired, Marie, and wish now to be alone! You need not remain—I shall not want you again tonight."

The old nurse murmured a dejected response; turned away.

"I thank your ladyship. The girl's last look was one of indubitable satisfaction as she followed her aunt from the room."

A Blow From a Lion's Paw.

A man entered a London theater in the early morning and found to his horror that four lions, which were housed there, had broken from their cage. One gave him a blow with its paw, then took him in its mouth. The blow from a lion's paw is said to be, after the stroke of a whale's tail and the kick of a giraffe, the strongest thing in nature, so that the victim was dead when the keeper went to the rescue. Only one lion had concerned itself with the man and was now sitting over him as a dog sits over a bone. Two of the lions were playing on the stage with a "property" garland, and the fourth was seated in the royal box, placidly surveying the gambols on the stage and the terrible banquet in the auditorium. The murderer relinquished its prey immediately its master appeared, and all four bolted for their den like children detected in some misconduct.—St. James' Gazette.

An Uncrowned King of France.

The president of the French chamber enjoys an almost regal state. Every time he goes to his official palace in the Quai d'Orsay he is greeted by beating drums. Whenever there is a ministerial crisis he must be summoned by the president of the republic to give his advice. He receives what is an extraordinary salary for a French official—100,000 francs per annum. The appointment dates from the days of the convention. On Sept. 21, 1792, was held the debate by which the appointment was created. The first president was Petion, a violent Girondist. His six secretaries were also Girondists. It was symptomatic of the times that eight months later the seven were condemned to the guillotine by the deputies who elected them.

Presence of Mind.

Thus she reproached him: "Alfred, this is the first time you have come to see me for more than a month!"

Thus he explained: "Kitty, I've decided that when a young fellow can't keep from thinking of a girl every moment of his life it's time for him to quit seeing her."

"Kiss me, Alfred, dear." He hesitated a moment—and was lost.—Chicago Tribune.

An article that has real merit should in time become popular. That such is the case with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been attested by many dealers. Here is one of them. H. W. Hendrickson, Ohio Falls, Ind., writes: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best for coughs, colds and croup, and is my best seller." For sale by all dealers.

TAMED THE BULLY

Dramatic Incident of Pioneer Days in Tennessee.

A STAGECOACH ADVENTURE.

The Thrilling Scene When the Terribly Calm Stranger Cowed the Insulting Desperado, as It Was Described by Henry Clay, Who Witnessed It.

Upon a certain occasion in his early manhood Henry Clay was traveling in a public stagecoach in Tennessee. His fellow passengers were a young lady and her husband—the latter evidently an invalid—and a man in the front corner so muffled up in a fur lined cloak that his features were concealed. He appeared to be rather under than over the medium size and was evidently enjoying a refreshing slumber.

By and by a big, brown faced, brawny Kentuckian got into this coach, smoking a rank, coarse grained cigar. He gazed around fiercely, as though he would impress upon the minds of his new companions that he would chew up and swallow any one who dared to interfere with him. In short, he was half horse and half alligator, with a goodly sprinkling of panther and grizzly bear thrown in. He puffed forth huge volumes of smoke without the least concern for the comfort of his companions.

Presently the lady, who seemed to be growing sick, whispered to her husband, and the husband, in the politest manner possible, asked the stranger if he would not throw away his cigar, as the smoke greatly discommodated his wife. With an impudent, swaggering stare the fellow replied, interlarding his speech with several oaths:

"I reckon I've paid for my place. I'll smoke as much as I please, and I'd like to see some one try to stop me."

He looked dangerous as he glared around, and it was very evident that he was used to quarreling and strife, and, furthermore, a struggle with him might have been a deadly one. The young man who had spoken to him shrunk back and was silent. The lady lowered the sash by her side for a breath of fresh air.

Mr. Clay felt every gallant instinct of his soul aroused. He considered for a moment whether he should interfere and found himself reluctant to draw upon his own head the brutal violence of the gigantic ruffian. In that then lawless country he knew that his life might be sacrificed unavenged. He knew himself to be physically unequal to the contest, and he thought, after all, it was not his duty to risk his life in some quixotic manner.

Clay was setting back with pity for the insulted and disgust for the insulters when suddenly, but very quietly, the cloaked figure in the corner assumed an upright position, parting the burled mantle without a particle of excitement, thereby revealing the small, well knit, muscular frame of a man plainly dressed in a closely buttoned frock coat, with a face rather pale and a pair of bright eyes that gleamed like polished steel, and those strange eyes quickly attracted the attention of the ferocious Kentuckian.

With a terrible calmness this man passed his hand under his collar at the back of his neck and deliberately drew forth a long, glittering and ugly looking knife from a sheath in that singular place.

"Stranger," he said, "my name is Colonel James Bowie, well known in Texas and Arkansas. If you do not put that cigar out of the window in less than fifteen seconds I'll put this knife through your heart as sure as death!"

Clay said he would never forget the expression of the colonel's eyes at that moment. They told, as unmistakably as signs can tell, that the threat would certainly be fulfilled, and this conviction evidently impressed itself upon the mind of the offender.

During a very few seconds his eyes met those of Bowie. With all his brute strength he was the weaker man, and he quailed. With a muttered curse he threw his cigar away, upon which, Bowie coolly returned the knife to its sheath and, without another look or word, refolded his cloak about him and lay back as before.

At the next stopping place the Kentuckian got out and took a seat with the driver.—New York Telegram.

The Proper Retort.

At a dinner a married man praised the beauty of the Atlantic City girls. Then, with a foolish chuckle, he added:

"I had an awful bunch of them after me when I was down there on my vacation."

The lady beside him looked at him coldly and retorted:

"Dear me! They must have been an awful bunch."—Exchange.

The Better Name.

"So you are thinking of calling your baby boy Peter. I wouldn't; I'd call him Paul."

"Why so?"

"He would have a better chance in life. It's Peter, you know, who is always robbed to pay Paul."—Boston Transcript.

Proof Positive.

Crawford—Do you think he's benched? Crabshaw—He never mentioned it, but I've noticed that the portraits over his mantelpiece are those of his wife's folks.—Judge.

Legalized Monopoly

Governor Wilson cannot make too strong or too frequently the point that the Roosevelt program of trust control means legalized monopoly.

If competition is a thing of the past, if the economists are wrong in saying that combination and increased size promote efficiency only up to a certain point, if present conditions are so bad that we must give up a system whereby men are granted great rewards for great deeds, then it might be worth while to consider the Roosevelt proposal.

But, in that case, why not go straight to socialism? The argument for it is quite as strong as the argument for Roosevelt's halfway measure.—Baltimore Sun.

Health Comes First

Old fashioned folk are wont to complain sometimes that the public schools nowadays are given over to fads. In their youth, they say, fewer frills and more "practical" subjects were taught. Whatever the justice of their complaint, the superiority of the modern school system in at least one particular must be recognized; the attention it devotes to the health of the pupils. This is a "fad" with which little fault can be found. It finds expression not only in physical culture drills, the correction of defects discovered through systematic inspection and educational talks such as are to be given the public school children of Philadelphia this year under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, but in the sanitary construction and equipment of school buildings, providing devices for the protection of the children's health then were undreamed of by our forefathers.

Addressing the teachers preliminary to the opening of the schools the other day, Pittsburgh's superintendent declared that the motto for the coming year was to be "Health comes first." It is a pretty good motto for schools everywhere. It suggests a far more sensible method of promoting efficiency in scholarship than the "forcing" process. There is no more encouraging sign of the times than this widespread recognition of the fact that the efficient brain must rest upon a capable, vigorous physical foundation.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Maine Goes Republican

The voters of Maine gave encouragement to President Taft and his supporters, at Monday's State election, by returning to the Republican fold. In place of the Democratic plurality of about 8,000 at the 1910 election, there is a Republican plurality of between 3,000 and 4,000. Instead of two Republicans and two Democrats elected to Congress, as in 1910, there are now three Republicans and one Democrat. And the next Legislature is Republican and will elect a Republican to the United States Senate.

While this result is substantial gain for the Republicans, it is in no sense indicative of the result in November. At Monday's election Republicans and Progressives were united in support of straight Republican State and Congress tickets. At the November election they will be divided, the Republican supporting Taft and the Progressives Roosevelt. This should give the electoral vote of the State to Wilson and Marshall.

Still, the moral effects of Monday's verdict in Maine are with the Republicans. The Republican vote increased and secured a substantial victory. The Democratic vote fell off perceptibly, in the face of a Presidential contest and showed a loss of ground. Thus Maine, although far from likely to vote for either Taft or Roosevelt in November, has given the first check to the Democratic tide which seemed to be rolling over the entire country, with the promise of making almost every State Democratic.

Perhaps this reverse in Maine may have due effect upon the managers of the Democratic campaign. It is a gentle hint that "rainbow chasing" will be no more effective this year than it proved to be in the past four national campaigns.—Wilmington Evening.

The things that are killed by ridicule deserve to die.

Notice to Democrats

Registration days this year will be as follows:
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 1st,
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 8th.
On these two days transfers from one district to another will be given and registered voters will be placed on the books. This is not a new registration, but every Democrat who has moved from his last residence since last registration day into another district, must get a transfer from his old voting district and register in his present district where he is now living. This must be attended to on one of the above dates or your name may be erased from the voting lists. Every young Democrat who has become of age since last election should register on one of the above days in October.

New Motor For Sick

There is now in commission at Johns Hopkins Hospital what is said to be the finest ambulance in the South. It is a big limousine automobile car, which looks not at all like an ambulance, but like the touring car of a gentleman a little more than well-to-do. No one who happened to see it standing at a door would think it an ambulance.

It has side doors like the familiar touring car, a top of familiar shape. The rear looks like the usual solid back of a car, but two doors open to make it possible to place the patient in that way. The interior has on one side a couch set in springs, so that there is no jarring to the sufferer, and on the other side three seats for attending physician and friends of the patient. The couch does not require its occupant to ever lie flat on his back, but its head can be elevated, so that the patient can recline. The whole couch fits its grooves and slides in and out of place, legs with wheels on them making it possible to drive up to a hospital door and wheel the patient out, instead of carrying him as is done now.

Partners in Town Business

A village, a town, a city, is a partnership. All of us here are in business together. Ownership of property is individual. But our prosperity in a whole is closely bound up in each other's interests.

If you have a house to rent, goods to sell, labor to sell, your success in getting a good price for such service depends on the prosperity of your neighbors. If they are doing well, they will pay fair prices, and as times go, these prices tend to rise!

On the other hand, if your neighbors are not succeeding, they will haggle for the last cent for your house, your goods, your labor. The prices for these services will tend to fall.

When you buy goods away from home, you work to reduce the prosperity of your neighbors. Thereby they become less able to do any thing to help you, and you have failed to build up business ties with them so that they feel no personal interest in you.

When you by goods at home, you increase the prosperity of your neighbors. They are not merely better able thereby to help you along in return, but you have created business friendships that make them want to help you. Buying at home pays!

Two New Steamers For The Bay

Two new freight and passenger steamships for the Chesapeake Steamship Company will be built by the Maryland Steel Company at the cost of $850,000. They are to be completed, one in 13 and the other in 14 months, after the giving of the contract, and are to be placed in service between Baltimore, West Point and Richmond, making a daily boat each way instead of tri-weekly as at present.

The contract was announced Tuesday just 17 months after the steamship City of Norfolk and City of Baltimore were placed in service between Baltimore and Norfolk.

The new steamers, which will be named the City of Annapolis and the City of Richmond, will have the same modern equipment and facilities of the two boats now in service, but will be smaller. Each will have a carrying capacity of 600 tons of freight and 400 passengers. They will be 277 feet and 3 inches over all, with the beam 53 feet. Triple-expansion engines will be installed, capable of developing 16 knots an hour. The ships will be constructed under the supervision of Lloyd's Register of Shipping on the Isherwood system of longitudinal construction.

Running water in every stateroom, shower baths, telephones, wireless telegraphy and four steam elevators for handling the cargo are among a few of the modern features of these steamships.

Death Roll May Reach 40,000

Immense loss of life is reported in mail advices received from Wen Chow, in the province of Che Kiang, China. Chinese estimates give the death toll between 30,000 and 40,000 as the result of a typhoon combined with torrential rains and high tides which occurred August 29. Great floods followed and the upper Wen Chow River overflowed a vast area. The town of Tising Tien, 40 miles northwest of Wen Chow, was overwhelmed and 10,000 of the inhabitants were drowned. Various other towns and villages were destroyed and the prefecture at Chuchow, an important missionary station, was washed away.

The typhoon of August 29 swept over several provinces on the eastern coast of China, including Chekiang and Fukien. Previous telegraphic advices reported great loss of life and damage to property around Foochow, the sea at the mouth of the Min river being strewn with hundreds of bodies. The Province of Che Kiang, which has a population of about 12,000,000 consists in part of flat lowlands, and is considered one of the most fertile provinces of China. In consequence of the floods the inhabitants will be in danger of famine. Last year the flood caused by the overflow of the Yang Tse River, which was the most extensive in memory, caused the death by drowning of 100,000 persons and left millions to face starvation.

The Men Who Succeed

As heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success, to-day, demands health. To ail is to fail. It's utterly folly for a man to endure a weak, run-down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas. B. Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders, and deranged bowels, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well." Try them. Only 50 cents at Omar A. Jones' drug store.

Will Distribute Buttons

Plans for "The World in Baltimore," to be held in the Lyric and specially built exposition hall adjoining from October 25 to November 30, are still under way, and rehearsals are expected to begin in the near future. The committee has recently received a consignment of 50,000 special buttons or pins bearing the official device of the exposition. These are being distributed with the special purpose of arousing the interest of children in the affair.

The device upon the button is that of an old man in a white robe represented as leaning upon a cane and supposed to be a native of one of the Oriental countries. He is standing close to a cross, upon the horizontal of which there is a view of the harbor of a city in the Far East. The background of the button is a golden brown and the lettering is in white.

Several thousand have already been put into the hands of the Baltimore children.

Attorney.

Order Nisi.

In the matter of the tax sale of real estate in Tangier Election District of Somerset county, assessed to Joshua J. Whitelock's heirs, made and reported by James E. Dashiell, Collector of State and County taxes for the Second Collection District of Somerset county for the year 1909. James H. Phoebus, purchaser, ex parte.

In the Circuit Court for Somerset County. No. 2762 Chancery.

Whereas a certain James E. Dashiell, collector of State and County taxes for the Second Collection District of Somerset county, in the State of Maryland, for the year 1909, has reported to the Circuit Court for Somerset County, a sale made by him to James H. Phoebus of all that lot or parcel of land lying and being in Tangier Election District of said county, in the State of Maryland, containing two acres of land, more or less, with the improvements thereon, situate on the road leading to the old M. E. Church, and opposite said church, belonging to the heirs at law of Joshua J. Whitelock, deceased, and assessed to Joshua J. Whitelock's heirs on the assessment books of said Election District for the year 1909 and in arrears, together with all the proceedings had in relation thereto; and whereas upon examination it appears to the said Court that the said proceedings are regular, and that the provisions of the law in relation thereto have been complied with.

Now it is therefore ordered, by the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, this 11th day of September in the year 1912, that notice be given by the publication of this order once a week for three successive weeks in the MARYLANDER AND HERALD, a weekly newspaper published in Somerset county, before the 11th day of October next, warning all persons interested in the said real estate to be and appear in this Court on or before the 8th day of October next, to show cause, if any they have, why said sale should not be ratified and confirmed.

The report states the amount of sales to be $6.23.

Mr. O. S. Lloyd, formerly of Princess Anne, but now residing in Salisbury, is located temporarily at Lyndonville, N. Y., where he expects to spend four or five weeks together with his family. Mr. Lloyd is engaged in the fruit business and represents a well-known Boston firm. He writes that he has contracted for over 50,000 baskets of peaches and a car famine, appears to be imminent. In the meantime the fruit is being put in storages which are rapidly filling. If the car famine materializes a serious situation will result. The crop of peaches in the State of New York is estimated at over 5000 car loads.

—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lano returned last Thursday from an extended visit to their old home, at Findlay, Ohio. Mr. Lano states that he had ample opportunity to take note of political sentiment and that the trend is decidedly to Woodrow Wilson. Ohio, he says, is adverse both to Taft and Roosevelt. In his opinion Wilson will carry the State of Ohio beyond the shadow of a doubt and the general belief is that he will be the next President.

—The September Term of the Circuit Court for Wicomico County convened in Salisbury, on Monday morning of last week with Judge Stanford presiding. On Tuesday Judges Pattison and Jones took their seats on the bench. The docket is the largest for several years, there being 119 cases on the Trial Docket, 69 of which are marked for trial at this term, there are on the docket 52 appearances, 17 appeals, 18 recognizances, 1 criminal continuance.

—An ideal circus day greeted the John H. Sparks Shows on its arrival last Friday, the weather that was entirely to the liking of not only the devotees of the sawdust ring, but to every attendee of the big show. Manager Charles Sparks has been coming down the Eastern Shore, off and on, for years, but the performance he has provided this season is the best seen here. It was a first-class, up-to-date performance, the employees orderly and polite, and not an objectionable feature was noticeable around the show.

—The dyspeptic rejoices that we won't need any cooks in heaven.

—Miss Alice Young, who has been sick with typhoid fever for the past two months, is able to be out of her room.

—Mr. William H. Peterson, of Princess Anne, is spending some time visiting friends in Edison, Ohio.

—Miss Dorothy Davis, of Dubuque, Ill., is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Oliver T. Beauchamp, Prince William street.

—Miss Gertrude Flurer left yesterday for Westminster, Md., where she will enter as a student at Western Maryland College.

—Mr. James B. Sterling left last Tuesday for Dover, Del., where he will attend school this winter at the Wilmington Conference Academy.

—The latest amendment to the automobile law is the prohibiting of the use of muffler cut outs during any hour of the day or night. Automobilists should take due notice and govern themselves accordingly.

—Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Porter, daughter and sons, Miss Josephine, Mr. Stanley and Master Richard, of Loretto, and Mr. Edward Bounds, of Allen, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Holland, at Upper Fairmount, on Sunday the 8th inst.

—Mr. P. Mark Smith, assistant postmaster of Princess Anne, accompanied his daughter, Alice, to Wilmington, Del., Friday, where she is attending school, and extended his trip to Philadelphia. Miss Smith has been awarded the first scholarship at the Urslein Convent, Wilmington.

—Mr. H. B. Scarborough, former principal of the Marion High School, has resigned his position and accepted one at much better salary in New York State. He is succeeded by Mr. Raymond Staley, of Hagerstown, Md. Mr. Staley is a graduate of St. John's College, Annapolis.

—The largest and possibly the oldest pine in Somerset county has been cut down. It measured 72 feet from the ground to its first limbs. It was a line tree between Messrs. Davis and Bowland, near Kingston. Its smallest part at the top measured 24 feet in circumference. It is supposed to be 200 years old.

—Mrs. Jennie O. Turpin died Tuesday in Baltimore, aged 49 years. She was a former resident of Salisbury, having taught in the public schools there for about sixteen years. She also was a teacher in Somerset county for several years. She is survived by one son, D. F. Turpin, of Baltimore; and two sisters, Mrs. W. S. Tilghman, of East New Market, and Mrs. S. P. Downing, of Salisbury.

Direct to Eastern Shore

Washington will be put in more direct communication with Eastern Shore of Maryland by a traffic agreement between the electric line to Annapolis, the Eastern Shore Development Steamship Company, from Annapolis to Claiborne, Md., and the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway, from Claiborne to points on the Eastern Shore.

Announcement of the agreement has not been officially made, but it is expected by October 1.

At present the Washington passenger traffic to the Eastern Shore goes via Baltimore. Heretofore through tickets from Washington have not been sold. Under the new arrangement they will be put on sale and Washington passengers will not be compelled to buy tickets at Claiborne and recheck their baggage at that place for Eastern Shore points.

The journal of the forty-fourth convention of the Diocese of Easton has been issued by Dean Rich, secretary of the convention, and there is much general interest in its 150 pages, especially the statistical portions.

There are thirty-six parishes in the diocese, not including Trinity Cathedral, which, being the Bishop's church, is not governed by parish canons, but by the convention. There are 2,180 separate families represented in the parish registers and nearly 8,000 baptized members and 8,695 parishioners.

There are 2,300 Sunday School members, and the number confirmed during the past year was 114.

In the matter of contributions there ports show $2,133.57 for general missions $321.29 for general clergy relief, $350.34 for diocesan clergy relief, and for diocesan missions, $1,395.49. For all diocesan purpose $6,069.78 was given.

The value of all parochial property is $470,575.76, while the various funds held in the name of the diocese will make this total about $600,000.

During the year the total amount contributed for parish purposes was $242,397.67, of which $10,674.24 was for repairs and improvements. Salaries paid were about $20,000, and for current expenses, $7,502. For charities $316.15; Sunday School expenses, $840 and other parish objects, $1,821.

Few, if any, medicines, have met with the uniform success that has attended the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The remarkable cures of colic and diarrhoea which it has effected in almost every neighborhood have given it a wide reputation. For sale by all dealers.

New Bank at Elkton

Elkton, Maryland, will shortly have a new bank, making the third one in the town and the eighth one in the county. The new institution will be known as the Elkton Banking and Trust Company, the charter for which was granted by the legislature four years ago. It will have a capital stock of $50,000. It is understood that John M. Tucker, former chairman of the Maryland Good Roads Commission, will be made president of the new bank. Emerson R. Crothers, private secretary to the late Governor Austin L. Crothers, is also interested in the bank.

No man can be perfectly happy without a certain amount of self conceit.

Running up and down stairs, sweeping and bending over making beds will not make a woman healthy or beautiful. She must get out of doors, walk a mile or two every day and take Chamberlain's Tablets to improve her digestion and regulate her bowels. For sale by all dealers.

Dr. C. W. PURNELL, OPTOMETRIST.

of Cambridge, will be at O. A. Jones' Drug Store on Monday afternoon, Sept. 16th, 1912.

Glasses prescribed and furnished when necessary.

OLYMPIAN GAMES

The Famous Contests in the Days of Ancient Greece.

MORE IMPORTANT THAN WAR.

Battles Might Be Forgotten, but Time Was Reckoned and Events Dated From the Years of the Olympiads.

According to tradition, the oldest of all Olympic games were established by Zeus in honor of his success over Chronos in his struggle for the sovereignty of heaven. The more general belief among Greek writers, though, was that these famous games were instituted by the Idaeus Hercules, the eldest of the five brothers to whom Rhea confided Zeus after his birth. These games were held every fifth year, because, according to this story, the brothers were five in number. The games were therefore four years apart.

The first of the games, according to this tradition, was simply a foot race, in which Hercules and his four brothers were the only contestants. This straightaway foot race continued to be the only Olympic game till the fourteenth Olympiad, when a second contest, the double course, was introduced—i. e., to the end of the course and back again. In the eighteenth Olympiad they added wrestling and the pentathlon. Twenty-five years later boxing was made a part of the exercise, and four horse races, the pentathlon and riding races were introduced.

The pentathlon was a fivefold contest in leaping, throwing the discus or quoit, wrestling and hurling the javelin. All contestants were admitted first to the leaping contest, and those who crossed a certain space were allowed to hurl the javelin. The four most successful in this took part in a foot race. The last man in the race dropped out, and the best three threw the quoit. Again the least successful retired, and the better wrestler of the remaining two won the prize.

The pentathlon was a rough and tumble fight. Almost any method of throttling an opponent and compelling him to acknowledge himself vanquished was permitted. Wrestling, boxing, hugging, choking and even the deliberate breaking of bones were allowed.

The prizes in the Olympian contests were merely wreaths from the wild olive trees abundant in the locality, and the games all took place on one day until the twenty-seventh Olympiad, when the Greeks, desiring to do greater honor to the gods for their defeat of the Persians, extended the games to five days.

All Greece regarded the month during which the games were held as a holiday. Business of every kind was at a standstill, and even hostile armies disbanded and attended the games as friendly rivals. The importance of the games may be gathered from the fact that the Greeks reckoned their time according to the games, just as all people have reckoned it from the events which seemed to them the most important.

The Christians refer all time to the beginning of the Christian era, so the Mohammedans to the flight of their prophet and Romans to the year of the founding of their city. But the Greek historians need to speak like this: "This battle was fought in the fourth year of that Olympiad in which Eurypylus, the Athenian, won the prize in the course." While a war might be forgotten, an Olympiad would never be.

Those who were victors were accorded the most extravagant honors. Their enthusiastic countrymen would escort them home with unbounded delight, and they were given the highest seats of honor at every public festivity. Poets of the highest merit sang their praises. The cities in which they resided erected statues to their honor. It is not surprising that, when victory meant so much, dishonorable means were sometimes employed to secure it. Every attempt, however, was made to prevent foul play, and as unfairness was regarded as sacrilege, the games being religious ceremonies, the guilty ones were not only condemned by all those whose praise they sought, but they were subjected besides to heavy penalties in money and often scourged as well.

It does not seem, however, that deliberate wounding of an adversary in a contest was much deprecated, since Pausanias mentions one man who though an inferior wrestler, won several contests by breaking the fingers of his antagonist, but he who killed his opponent lost the prize, and the dead body was crowned victor.

The cause of the decay of the game was that the glory and the substantial rewards which followed victory finally became too great. At last there became classes of men who did nothing else but prepare for the games, and contending became a profession. Kings and nobles then withdrew, and their example was followed by the better class of Greek youth, with the result that the games were finally neglected until, when they were prohibited by an edict by the Emperor Theodosius, in A. D. 394, few people objected to their loss.

Long before this the games had become notorious for their brutality, and foreigners were allowed to compete. Bribery was frequent, and the Roman Emperor Nero on one occasion was permitted to take every prize offered.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SO DECEPTIVE

Many Princess Anne Fail to Realize the Seriousness.

Backache is so deceptive. It comes and goes—keeps you guessing. Learn the cause—then cure it. Possibly it's weak kidneys. That's why Doan's Kidney Pills are so effective.

We present the following case as proof: Harry D. Ford, Upper Fairmount, Md., says: "I am just as willing to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills today as I was in 1909. The cure I received at that time has been lasting and you may continue the use of my former testimonials. I had severe pain through my back and it could not have been worse had someone thrust a knife into me. For a whole week I was unable to get about the house. Having heard about Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box and began using them as directed. I felt better shortly after beginning their use and continued their use until I was cured."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

MAN VERSUS NATURE.

Marvels That Are Wrought Through Synthetic Chemistry.

Nature, we may reflect, has a hard time in competition with the chemist. Her slow, laborious processes are one by one being superseded.

Her most delicate perfumes, which she dishes to us in drops, are made by the gallon in the laboratory. The infinite delicacy of her hints we stimulate from a material so unromantic as coal tar. We squeeze a cellulose product through a tiny hole, and we have the silk of the silk worm. We transform trees into paper and educate the world. We imitate the precious stones which Nature has produced by gigantic forces in upheaval, and the only difference, as was stated in our courts recently, is that the artificial product is more perfect than the real. Now the chemist takes starch, an unromantic material enough, and makes of it that rubber on which the wheels of the world go round.

In the course of his experiments man discovers a cheap method of making acetone, an essential of our modern high explosives. Somehow or other all man's experiments lead ultimately to the explosive, which again shows how we reverse processes, for, while Nature begins all her work with an explosion, man works up to the explosion as the highest expression of his conquest.—Westminster Gazette.

BEHEADING IN SIAM.

First the Victim Is Fed, Then Tired Into Giving the Signal.

An execution in Siam is an extraordinary business, according to a correspondent of the Chronicle Medicale. The doomed man, awakened at dawn, is led in chains to the temple, where candles are lit around him. He is exhorted to think of nothing to disassociate his mind from mundane affairs and is given the best meal of his life, the menu being carefully chosen according to the social status of the criminal.

There are two executioners. One is hidden in some brushwood, while the other, dressed in vivid red, conducts the criminal to the place of sacrifice, bidding him be seated on banana leaves "in order to be entirely separated from earth."

The condemned man is then put into position, awaiting the ax. Earth is put in his ears. For two hours or more nothing happens. Siamese law demands that the criminal shall bow his head voluntarily to the ax. This he does finally from sheer exhaustion, and immediately headman No. 2 rushes from his hiding place and does the deed. The executioners are then sprayed with holy water and otherwise purified from contact with the victim's soul.—Paris Cor. New York World.

Measuring Nature.

Nature is not benevolent. Nature is just, gives pound for pound, measure for measure, makes no exceptions, never tempers her decrees with mercy or winks at any infringement of her laws. And in the end is not this best? Could the universe be run as a charity or a benevolent institution or as a poorhouse of the most approved pattern? Without this merciless justice this inextinguishable law, where would we have brought up long ago? It is a hard gospel, but rocks are hard, too, yet they form the foundations of the hills. Man introduces benevolence, mercy, altruism, into the world, and he pays the price in his added burdens, and he reaps his reward in the vast social and civic organizations that were impossible without these things.—John Burroughs in Century.

Many Driven From Home

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery and cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles find quick relief and health returns. It helps in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping-cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Omar A. Jones, Druggist.

MONSTER WHALES.

A Dozen Men Might Stand Upright in the Blue's Big Mouth.

Specimens of the blue or sulphur bottom whale weighing seventy-five tons and measuring eighty-seven feet have been known. The mouth is sufficiently large to permit ten or twelve men to stand upright in it, but the throat measures only about nine inches in diameter.

The "finback," closely related to the blue whale, has been called the "gray-hound of the sea," for its long, slender body is built on the lines of a racing yacht, and the animal can equal the speed of the fastest steamship.

The "humpback" is the most interesting of our large whales, because of the fact that its habits are more easily studied than are those of other members of the family.

But most extraordinary of all is the square nosed sperm whale. Instead of having plates of baleen, this whale carries a row of twenty to twenty-five heavy teeth on each side of the lower jaw. These fit into sockets in the roof of the mouth and assist in holding the giant squid and cuttlefish on which the enormous animal feeds. The squid seldom gets away from the warm currents; hence the sperm usually remains in the tropics and in the Gulf of Japan streams.—London Family Herald.

VALUE OF A PASSPORT.

The Odd Experience of a Stranded Tourist in Paris.

"Until you go broke in a foreign country you never can realize just what a useful thing a passport is," said the returned traveler. "It not only enables you to get into a country; it also helps you to get out, sometimes in a most unexpected way. Everybody abroad thinks well of a passport, but nobody sets quite so high a value on it as a pawnbroker."

"Owing to a delayed remittance I had occasion to visit one of those men in Paris. The article I offered for security was worth many times the loan requested, but he refused an advance on account of unsatisfactory references. My temporary address in Paris and my permanent address in Washington were not sufficient guarantee of my honesty."

"Just as the case assumed a desperate complexion the broker suggested a solution of the difficulty."

"Have you a passport?" he asked. "I had, at the hotel."

"Fetch it," he said. "If that looks all right, I'll let you have the money."

"Up to that time my passport had been a useless piece of luggage; then I blessed the foresight that had hidden me secure it."—Washington Star.

His Conquest.

He was a simon pure, edition de luxe lady killer. The girl in the seat opposite him was easy to look at. Further, she looked demure and shy and impressionable. It wasn't long before he had things going right—he thought. He had raised the window for her and readjusted the blind; he had fished her bag from under the seat, where the porter had shoved it; he had placed her pillow in a better position for her; he had handed her a magazine; he had looked after her comfort in every way he possibly could, and she had been very sweet about it besides. He thought he was coming along splendidly. She started to get off the train before he expected her to leave, but he carried her luggage to the platform for her. Then she turned and handed him a nickel with a sweet smile and the remark, "I think it is so nice of the railway company to furnish an assistant porter."—Argonaut.

How the Katydid Sings.

Everybody is familiar with the rasping notes known as the katydid's "song." It is the male only that is capable of emitting the well known sounds, and he does it in a most peculiar manner. His "vocal organs" are at the base of his wings and consist of two flat excrescences of thin, dry membrane. It is the rubbing of these two membranous plates together which produces the "song." If your shoulder blades were so loosely put together that one could be slipped under the other and the underside of one and the upper side of the other were so rough that the operation of slipping them past each other would cause a rasping sound you could imitate the katydid's musical efforts very nicely.

Setting Her Right.

A newly married woman made a pie for dinner. "I am afraid," the bride said, "that I left something out, and that it's not very good."

The husband tried it and said: "There is nothing you could leave out that would make a pie taste like that. It's something you've put in."—Argonaut.

Matthew Arnold.

"Matthew Arnold had a curious way of telling little stories against himself," writes Sir H. W. Lucy in the Cornhill.

"Talking about Mrs. Arnold, he said: 'Ah, you should know my wife! She has all my charm of manner and none of my intellect.'"

Badly Smitten.

"I wish there were ten days in the week," sighed Gladys.

"Why?" asked Grace.

"Jack could call off ten then."—London Answers.

When our hatred is too bitter it places us below those whom we hate—La Rochefoucauld.

Southern Commercial Congress

The Department of Agriculture has just finished installing an exhibit in the permanent exposition of the Southern Commercial Congress, in the Southern Building, in Washington, D. C. One whole side of the immense exhibit hall of the Congress is taken up by the exhibit, which was set up under the direction of Prof. F. L. Scribner, special agent of the Department of Agriculture. Professor Scribner had charge of exhibits for the Department of Agriculture at the exhibitions at Jamestown, Seattle, Buenos Aires and Turin, Italy.

In the Southern Commercial Congress exhibit are displays from the Forest Service, the Bureau of Plant Industry, the Bureau of Soils, the Office of Public Roads, and the Bureau of Entomology, the whole making an instructive and interesting sight. Some of the exhibits were shown at the Turin exposition. Among the most interesting displays is a miniature good road system, showing the construction of the best highways, and a model farm, constructed to scale. The exposition hall of the Congress is being rapidly filled with exhibits of the sixteen Southern States. Exhibits have been received from the following states, viz: Maryland, Texas, Virginia, North Carolina, and Mississippi. Exhibits are now being prepared for shipment by the following states, viz: Florida, South Carolina, Tennessee, Arkansas and Kentucky.

One of the most attractive exhibits in the hall was installed by the Southern Railway, interpreting the resources of the territory traversed by the line. The booth is constructed of sixteen varieties of Tennessee marble.

Steps are being rapidly taken by the Latin American countries for the installation of their chief exports. The interest of the countries of Latin America is associated with their direct relation to the next annual convention of the Congress to be held in Mobile, Ala., at the time of the opening of the Panama Canal.

The implicit confidence that many people have in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is founded on their experience in the use of that remedy and their knowledge of the many remarkable cures of colic, diarrhoea and dysentery that it has effected. For sale by all dealers.

The Clergyman Is Right

A clergyman in Indiana is credited with the following with reference to the country publisher: "What am I doing for it? Kicking because it is not blowing my tin horn! But how much of myself am I lending to the paper by speaking a good word for it whenever I have a chance? Really, how much of my personal influence can its editor depend on? Much, or is it little? If I grow a big cabbage I want him to publish it, but I read it after item about other people's cabbage, and I never drop him a word about them. Now, as he is not almighty enough to be in all places at the same time, why not help him by making news for his paper. It is a rather mean thing to take everything and give nothing back but fault-finding. If we never feed the cow, how can we expect any milk, and can we blame Bossy if she kicks the milker and the bucket? Where can the preacher find a more willing agent than the newspaper? It gives him free advertising for his sermons, lectures, etc. And how many times its puff has inflated the cash balance of the church social. And the editor has to pay for his ice cream and cake besides. Job had boils to contend with, but the country editor has to satisfy men and women afflicted with an elongated dose of twisted conceit. Job prayed that his enemy might write a book, but if I could pray for the affliction of a man whom I did not like I would pray that he might be the editor of a country newspaper."

Printing Blanks For Newspaper Owners

Work is being rushed at the Government printing office at Washington, on the blank forms which are to be sent to newspapers and other periodicals through the country within the next week for the filing of sworn circulation statements with local postmasters and the Postoffice Department.

The statement will also include the names of the publishers and owners and stockholders. It must be printed and filed twice annually.

A feature of the new law which is expected to cause some protest is that "all reading matter," editorial or otherwise, for which compensation is received, must be marked "advertisement," spelled out in full. A heavy fine is provided for noncompliance. It was said at the Postoffice Department that the new law will be vigorously enforced.

What We Never Forget

according to science, are the things associated with our early home life, such as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, that mother or grandmother used to cure our burns, boils, scalds, sores, skin eruption, cuts, sprains or bruises. Forty years of cures prove its merit. Unrivalled for piles, corns or cold-sores. Only 25 cents at Omar A. Jones' drug store.

Origin of Geysers

Geysers are found in only three places in the world, according to a publication entitled "Geysers" just issued by the Department of the Interior. These three regions are Iceland, where geysers were first discovered, New Zealand, and the Yellowstone National Park, in which these natural steam engines are more numerous and of greater beauty than in the two other areas mentioned. In the Yellowstone the geysers are found in detached geyser basins, or fire holes, as they were called by the first explorers, and the groups possess individual peculiarities which give character and interest to each locality. The most noted of these "basins" is however, that known as the Upper Geyser Basin of the Firehole River, one of the headwaters of the great Missouri. The whole floor of the valley is fairly riddled with springs of boiling water, whose exquisite beauty is indescribable. Light clouds of fleecy vapor curl upward from waters of the purest azure of the clearest of emerald, and, encircling rims of white marble-like silica, form fit setting for such great geysers. A large party of the valley floor is covered with the white deposit of silica known as siliceous sinter, deposited by the overflowing hot waters. The weird whiteness of these areas, the gaunt white trunks of pine trees killed by the hot waters, the myriad pools of steaming crystal, and the white clouds floating off from the chimney-like geyser cones, form a scene never to be forgotten by those fortunate enough to behold it.

The intermittent spouting of geysers was long a riddle to scientific men. The theory, which bears the name of the illustrious chemist, Bunsen, is now generally accepted. This theory is based on the well-known fact that the boiling point of water with the pressure, and is therefore higher at the bottom of a tube of water than at the surface. In a long and narrow or an irregular tube ebullition in the lower part is only possible at a much higher temperature than at the top, owing to the weight of water column above it. If by the continued heating the lower layer of water attains the temperature at which it can boil, steam is formed, whose expansive force lifts the superincumbent column of water, causing a slight overflow at the top, which shortens the column, so that steam is formed at a higher point and a further lifting and relief of pressure ensues, followed by an eruption.

This publication which may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., for 10 cents, contains photographs of the principal geysers and diagrams illustrating the forces that cause them. It is written in nontechnical language so that it may be readily understood by the reader without scientific training.

If you knew of the real value of Chamberlain's Liniment for lame back, soreness of the muscles, sprains and rheumatic pains, you would never wish to be without it. For sale by all dealers.

Nearly Drowned Off Maine

Mrs. A. Elzey Waters and Miss Mary M. Livingston recently had a narrow escape from drowning at Ogunqui, on the coast of Maine, where they have been spending the summer. Mrs. Waters has recovered but Miss Livingston is still suffering from the shock, and their return to Baltimore may be delayed a week.

With some friends they were bathing in the surf. They ventured out too far and were caught in an undertow, which was rapidly carrying them to sea when help came. Mrs. Waters was the better swimmer of the two and she greatly aided her companion. This made her own position dangerous, and she was nearly on the point of collapse, while Miss Livingston was quite helpless, when rescued. Mrs. Waters' young son, Arnold, rushed for assistance when the swimmers cried for help. Mr. Duncan Langdon, of Brown University, heeded the boy's cries. Seizing a life-preserver, he rapidly swam to the ladies and brought them safely ashore.

The doctors had to work over Miss Livingston some time before she could be revived. She is a sister-in-law of Rev. Dr. Hobart Smith, of Garrison Church, in the Green Spring Valley, Baltimore county. Mrs. Waters is a sister-in-law of Mr. Henry J. Waters, of Princess Anne.

Randolph-Macon College

The session of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Lynchburg, Va., opened Wednesday. There were students from 33 states of the Union, the District of Columbia and two foreign countries. The list shows that the 33 States were represented by 498 students with one from China, three from Brazil and three from the District of Columbia.

It keeps some people busy trying to find the mistakes of their friends.

MORRISON A SUICIDE

Bank President Worried Over Use of His Name With Havre de Grace Track

George C. Morrison, prominent in financial and business circles and a leading Democrat, committed suicide early last Tuesday morning in a private room at the Baltimore Athletic Club.

Death was caused by illuminating gas, but around his neck and secured by strips of adhesive plaster was fastened a loaded revolver with the muzzle pointed directly at the middle of the throat.

In the room were found several letters. One was addressed to his wife and others to personal friends. There was also a letter to the public which made it plain that Mr. Morrison had worried over the connection of his name with the scandal growing out of the licensing of the race track at Havre de Grace, and that this had caused him to end his life.

He declared in effect that he was influenced only by a desire to serve certain friends in Harford who had a county fair property there and wished to hold race meetings in connection with the fair. He thought that under the bill it would be impossible to operate "outlaw" racing and he believed the construction of any new tracks under it extremely unlikely. In all his life, he said, he had never been offered graft as such and he had never made a dollar out of sport of any kind.

In conclusion he said: I am answerable only to my God. He knows whether it is just for the self sacrificing work of years to be set at naught by the onslaughts of a yellow newspaper, against which there is no defense.

The only mistake that I made was in allowing a corporation that I controlled to clear the stock that "Tim" O'Leary wished to distribute from that received in payment for his property, among those likely to be useful to him. I can only say that this seemed useful to me at the time as giving me knowledge of the affiliations of the track which I would not otherwise have had probably.

Mr. Morrison was president of the Title, Guarantee & Trust Co., vice-president of the Baltimore Trust Company, a director in the National Bank of Commerce, of Baltimore, and connected with many other business institutions. He was also prominent in Democratic circles.

A year ago, after he had won his way to prominence in the public life of the city, he was strongly mentioned for the Democratic nomination for Mayor of Baltimore, but stood aside in favor of another. In September of this year he was chosen chairman of the Democratic State auxiliary committee and at the time of his election made a vigorous speech outlining plans for the campaign. His selection was looked upon as a compromise between the original Wilson men and the former supporters of Champ Clark.

He had shown great activity in the preliminaries in what he promised would be an active campaign in the city and State for the election of Governor Wilson as President.

On April 23, 1909, Morrison surprised his friends by marrying the bride being Miss Nellie V. Harrison, who had been a telephone operator in the Equitable Building. The marriage took place at the home of Rev. E. L. Watson. None of Morrison's closest friends had the faintest idea that he was to be married until he called two or three of them up by telephone in the morning and asked them to appear dressed as became bridal attendants. He long had been known as a confirmed bachelor, and his courtship was brief.

Shot Tower for Oil Depot

The shot tower property, in Baltimore, which for a number of years has been used as a wholesale whiskey warehouse, has been leased for a term of years by the Union Oil Company for use as a storage depot. It will be equipped with an elevator and otherwise renovated and remodeled for modern commercial utility. The old structure is one of the best-known landmarks in Baltimore and was built in 1828 for the manufacture of shot and pipe. Its cornerstone was laid by Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. The tower has a height of 234 feet.

Hicks' Forecast for October

A regular storm period is central on the 4th and 5th, near the center of a Mercury period. A regular storm period reaches into the 1st and 2d. These disturbances will pass over central to eastern sections but a falling barometer, with cloudiness and rain will prevail generally on and touching the 4th and 5th.

A regular storm period, central on the 9th, covers the 7th to 12th. Earth, Mercury and "Volcan" will unite in this period, with Moon at perigee on the 7th, on the equator on the 8th, and new, at a total eclipse node, on the 10th. Great atmospheric disturbances are probable at this period.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 14th, 15th and 16th. The Moon is at greatest south declination on the 16th, hence the atmospheric tides will flow from northerly directions, bringing boreal storms of cold rain, merging into sleet and snow over vast areas. The quadrature of Uranus and Neptune with Sun and Earth on the 19th and the 23d, will intensify conditions at this time, prolonging the tendency to seismic perturbations.

A regular storm period is central on the 21st, extending from the 18th to the 24th. During this period the Moon is in apogee on the 19th, and on the celestial equator on the 23d. Look for the decided fall of the barometer, approaching from western extremes, as early as the 20th, and during the 21st, 22d and 23d storm conditions will increase, causing rain, wind and thunder storms to pass progressively from west to east across the country.

But the indications for the present October are that milder weather will prevail, as a rule, forcing the severe storms and inclement weather, ordinarily due in October, later in November.

An Old Copy of Somerset Herald

Mr. James E. Sudler, of Fairmount, has handed us a copy of the "Somerset Herald," found among the effects of his brother, the late John S. Sudler. The paper, which was published in Princess Anne, bears date April 13th, 1841. The paper is ruled in black because of the death of William Henry Harrison, President of the United States, which is announced in that issue. In form the paper is five column folio and the price of subscription is advertised at $2.00 a year in advance.

Among items of interest is the announcement of the passage of a bill for a new assessment for the State, a petition to the Legislature for the prohibition of the sale of liquor in the town of Salisbury, announcements of candidates for Congress and a number of business advertisements. The name of the Editor is not given but that he was a busy man is evident from a notice that the plant of the Herald was for sale, as the Editor's attention could not be fully given to it.

The Wall Street Journal, in imitation of Professor Irving Fisher's use of mathematical symbols in economics, solves the political problem by the following equation:

G O P
= W W
T R
The MARYLANDER AND HERALD $1 year

THE DRINKING CUP

Law Was Passed by General Assembly Prohibiting Their Use Under Certain Conditions

Dr. Marshall L. Price, secretary of the State Board of Health, announces the following regulations governing the drinking cup, a law prohibiting its promiscuous use in public places having been passed by the last legislature. The law is defined as follows:

The term "common drinking cup" shall be construed to mean any glass, cup, dipper or other vessel, receptacle or container exposed on railroad trains or boats, or in other public places within this state, for the drinking of water or other fluids in such a manner as to allow such receptacle, or container to be used consecutively without previous washing, cleansing or disinfection.

The term "public places" shall be construed to mean courthouses, hotels, churches, public highways, grand jury rooms, railroad stations, railway cars or other common carriers, barber shops, canneries, machine shops and other manufacturing establishments, stores, libraries, sanatoriums, hospitals, theaters, moving-picture places, dance-halls, clubs, public baths, baseball grounds, race tracks, public places of amusement, all public and private schools, jails, asylums, public buildings, public institutions and all other places visited by many persons and usually accessible to the neighboring public.

The use of common drinking cups as defined in these regulations is hereby prohibited upon all railroad trains carrying passengers and all boats carrying passengers while within this state.

No person shall apply his or her lips to the spigot or other outlet of any water cooler, bucket, tank or vessel in which water or other fluids are used for drinking purposes or are contained, nor shall any person apply his or her lips to such tank, bucket or other vessel for the purpose of drinking the contents of the same.

Any person, persons, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of these regulations or of chapter 156 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1912, will be subjected to penalties provided by sections 2 of said act.

The regulations having been passed by the State Board of Health at its regular monthly meeting, August 1, 1912, and having been duly promulgated, have the force of law.

Grier Tours Eastern Shore

Robert D. Grier, of Salisbury, the Progressive candidate for Congress in the First Maryland district, went to Denton, Caroline county, Monday evening of last week on his first visit to that county since his nomination.

Mr. Grier, accompanied by William M. Day, of Salisbury, and Charles O. Carter, of Berlin, is making an auto trip through the Eastern Shore and is taking steps to effect an organization. The party left Salisbury Monday morning and stopped at Federalsburg and other points.

At the Brick Hotel last Monday Mr. Grier met a number of voters. Tuesday morning the party left for Cambridge; Wednesday they were at Easton. From there they visited Centerville and Chestertown. Mr. Grier says he has received many assurances of support throughout the district from voters in both the old parties.

Purdum-Darling

Miss Evelyn S. Darling, daughter of Mrs. Anna Darling, of Hamilton, Baltimore county, was married Tuesday morning at 7.30 o'clock to Dr. Bradley K. Purdum, Assistant State Superintendent of Education. The ceremony was performed at the home of St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church. Immediately after the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served and Mr. and Mrs. Purdum left for a honeymoon trip to Buffalo, Canada and New York. Upon their return they will live at the home of the bride.

Handicraft of Eighth Century

The oldest museum in the world is described in a bulletin lately issued by the French-Japanese society. It is at Nara, a city which was once the capital of Japan. The museum was founded 1156 years ago. It has never had any additions. All toy articles shown are at least 1156 years old. The most beautiful examples of human handicraft are exhibited in furniture and decorations.

Lighting Demolishes a Church

A severe storm accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain passed over the Eastern Shore of Virginia last Wednesday evening and did much damage. The Methodist Episcopal Church at Belle Haven, Va., was struck by lightning and entirely demolished. The church was to cost $8,000 when fully completed.

FUNDS FOR STATE FIRST

Balance to National Committee, Decides Democratic Committee Last Week

Appeals to Democrats and Wilson supporters for contributions to the campaign were issued last Thursday by the executive branch of the Democratic auxiliary committee at its meeting at headquarters in Baltimore.

Senator Blair Lee, treasurer of the committee will send broadcast over the State within the next few days hundreds of letters asking for contributions.

As far as possible, the committee is anxious to avoid any confusion in the collection of expenditure of funds. There are in Maryland several duly appointed treasurers and political agents all of whom have the power to collect money. Some represent the State Central Committee and its component parts, while others represent the National Committee.

While the executive committee is desirous to assist the National Committee, it believes that State and local necessities should be provided for before any money is sent outside of the State. In addition to being treasurer of the executive committee, Senator Lee has also been appointed a State treasurer by the National Committee. Mr. Frank A. Furst holds a similar appointment.

The plan adopted by the committee is for all the treasurers as well as for the general public to send money to Senator Lee. Just before the close of the campaign the committee will meet and, in conference with the party leaders, decide on the sum of money that will be necessary to pay all obligations in Maryland.

If there should be a balance, and the committee believes that there will be a substantial one, this can be sent to the National Committee. Mr. Talbott made it plain that while he would collect all the money possible, yet he would turn it over to Senator Lee, to be expended as deemed best by the committee. Special efforts will be made to collect as many $5 contributions as possible, while larger individual contributions will also be sought.

Former Congressman Joshua W. Miles, vice-chairman of the committee, presided. There was no discussion over the selection of a new chairman to succeed the late George C. Morrison. The probabilities are that the entire auxiliary committee will reassemble in Baltimore this week and Mr. Miles will be elected chairman and a city man chosen as vice-chairman.

The members of the committee present besides Mr. Miles were Senator Lee and Messrs. B. Howell Griswold, Jr., Z. Howard Isaac, Sterling Galt, George N. Numsen, William Cabell Bruce and Walter J. Mitchell, Congressman Talbott. Chairman Murray Vandiver, of the State Central Committee; Congressman J. Harry Covington and Mr. Guy W. Steele, of Carroll county, were also present.

Mr. H. H. Buck, of Montgomery county, was elected assistant secretary of the committee.

The executive committee will meet again this (Tuesday) afternoon. Its chief work for the first few weeks will be collecting funds.

Old Mansion Looks Like New

Under the personal supervision of Governor and Mrs. Goldsborough, the Government House at Annapolis has been improved during the summer and the Governor expects to reoccupy it again with his family this week.

The Governor has taken special interest in the work. It is the first time that any extensive improvements have been made to the mansion since it was occupied by Governor Warfield.

The entire house has been repainted on the inside. On the exterior the woodwork has been painted and the bricks painted up. Old furniture still serviceable has been re-covered. Better heating and ventilating facilities have been installed.

New Colonial mahogany furniture has been placed in the state dining room. The table will seat 30 people and was designed after an old pattern seen in the Memorial Hall of the Daughters of the Revolution, in Washington, by Mrs. Goldsborough. The room is finished in blue tapestry and will be lighted from the ceiling, the old domes having been taken out. The main drawing room is finished in gold tapestry, the furniture toning in color. The small reception room is treated in light purple and red. All wood is finished in mahogany.

For some years it has been realized that the house needed a general overhauling and many improvements and the last Legislature made an appropriation of $10,000.

RACE TRACK GAMBLING

Grand Jury Condemns Conduct of Affairs at Havre de Grace Course

Characterizing the directorate of the race track at Havre de Grace as "a clean collar on a dirty shirt," and asserting that the track is maintained for gambling in its most damaging and dangerous form, the Grand Jury for Harford County, last Tuesday afternoon gave its report to the Court at Belair.

The report followed two days of testimony taking in which directors of the track—which is run under the name of the Harford Agricultural and Breeding Association—and many others were called to tell just how the new track is conducted and the manner in which it was promoted.

The Grand Jury recommended that detectives be employed by the county to keep their eyes on the course and to see that the laws are strictly enforced. In its report the Grand Jury says:

That the entire management and conduct of the racing, pool selling and other business of this association appears to be in the hands of one Edward Burke, of New York, a man who has made horse racing his vocation for fifteen years, and who was first secured for this position by one Timothy O'Leary, of Philadelphia, and the New York Jockey Club.

Further, the jury admits its helplessness in the matter and recommends that the only thing to be done is to have the act repealed at the next Legislature. As the General Assembly does not meet until 1914 the track will be in operation for another year, and nothing is likely to be done in the meantime.

Members of the Harford County Racing Commission declare that George C. Morrison's suicide will have no effect upon the racing at Havre de Grace. They are maintaining an attitude of defiance and say the public disapproval of the track will not interfere with its dates or its future.

Roosevelt Electors in Maryland

The Committee of Seven of the Maryland Roosevelt committee who met in Baltimore last Thursday announced the complete list of eight Roosevelt electors whose names will appear on the ballot in the November election. The list follows:

William Allen, Baltimore city; Col. Joseph R. Baldwin, Harford county; Dr. R. Lee Hall, Worcester county; F. Snowden Hill, Prince George county; David M. Newbold, Jr., Baltimore county; George Dobbin Penniman, Baltimore county; Charles H. Torsch, Baltimore city; N. Winslow Williams, Baltimore city.

The two selected to represent the Democrats who are supporting Roosevelt are N. Winslow Williams, who was Secretary of State in the Democratic administration of the late Governor Crothers, and George Dobbin Penniman, counsel for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and heretofore prominent in the affairs of the Democratic party.

The same day Attorney General Edgar Allan Poe gave out a ruling on the State registration law which is distinct, favorable to the Progressive party. Under this ruling voters in the various counties of the State, as well as the city, may change their affiliation and go on the books as Progressives in the supplemental registration to be held in the counties next month. He will send his opinion to the Election Supervisors in all of the counties.

Elderdice Challenges Covington

Rev. Charles M. Elderdice, Prohibition candidate for Congress from the First Congressional district has sent the following letter to Hon. J. Harry Covington.

"Having been honored the second time with the Prohibition nomination for Congress: I take pleasure in inviting you as the Democratic nominee, to engage with me in a series of three joint discussions upon the leading issues of the campaign as dealt with by our respective parties. I suggest that one such discussion be held in Easton, one in Federalsburg, and the other in some town to be settled upon by us. I further suggest that the expenses of these meetings be equally divided between our campaign committees. If satisfactory to you let the subject of debate be: Resolved, That the platform of the Prohibition party offers a better remedy for present conditions than that of the Democratic party."

"I sincerely trust that you will see your way clear to accept this invitation. I assure you that I have no other motive than an honest desire to publicly discuss the issues of the day with you, and am sure that it is unnecessary to state that the discussion will be confined to these issues and will not become personal in the slightest degree."

—It's no fun for a woman to tell a secret if she thinks you are going to keep it.

CHAPTER XXVII.

A Stroll on the Strand.
"You are in a hurry, Monsieur Beppo?" arms akimbo, Nanette, standing in an embrasure of the rampart, called out to the Governor's man as he passed by.
"Ah, Mistress Nanette," Beppo stopped readily enough, "I didn't see you at first."
"Because you have more important matters to think of," she laughed, showing her strong white teeth.
The fat old man looked pleased; a few days before, Nanette had flashed a radiant smile at him from her casement, and, ever since, he had been inclined to regard her with favor.
"Not more important, but duties that must be attended to! The wedding hour draws near." The island girl half turned her head; a shadow seemed to pass over the bold, sun-burned features. "And her ladyship gives tomorrow a riding party for her guests—a last celebration before she is led to the altar. I am on my way now to arrange about the escort."
"A riding party?" Nanette spoke quickly. "You mean on horseback?"
"How else?" said Beppo. "It is a pastime her ladyship has always been very fond of, even as a child. In those days," not without an accent of self-importance, "it was my privilege."
"Do they ride far?" interrupted Nanette with ill-suppressed eagerness.
"To the old Monastery St. Raphael; an imposing ruin of tenth century architecture, my dear," he added pompously.
"And where is it?"
"Off the Paris highway, some ten miles from the Mount."
"Ten miles? And the country is beautiful? Not open; sandy, like the shore?"
"It partakes of a rugged grandeur." "With forests around?" quickly.
"Yes," indulgently. "You like forests, Mistress Nanette?"
"When they are thick and wild—" "Then would you like these?"
The girl asked no further questions; yet still Beppo lingered, his glance seeming loath to withdraw from this exuberant specimen of vigorous young womanhood. "Which way were you going, good Mistress Nanette?" he asked finally. "On second thoughts, I have a little time to spare and will walk along."
Nanette looked down from the rampart toward the sands and the shore, did not answer, and, more insinuatingly, Beppo repeated his proposal. Nanette started.
"La, Monsieur Beppo! I—I'm afraid it wouldn't do. There's my aunt," tossing her head, "that careful of me! Won't even let me go walking on the beach alone! Do you ever go walking on the beach, Monsieur Beppo?" she inquired suddenly, regarding him with an eloquent look.
"It has not been my custom," he murmured. "But," the fishy eyes growing brighter, "with you—if I might accompany you—"
"Oh, I didn't mean that! Oh, no! Of course not! And I couldn't think of it. My aunt—"
But when a few moments later, she turned, to walk quickly away, the round and shining face of Beppo, watching her disappear, wore not the look of a man who had allowed himself to be rebuffed.
Out of his sight, Nanette's expression changed to one of somber thoughtfulness; it lingered as she entered the palace, with free swing, mounted the steps to her mistress's apartments; was still there, when she took a bit of embroidery from a table and seated herself at the window of an antechamber, bent over her task. Soon, however, she stopped, to sweep abruptly cloth and colored silks from

"Yes; it is our only chance." In her eyes a steady glow replaced the varying lights, and, getting up with a sudden air of determination, Nanette crossed the room to where, near the door, stood a small desk. Glancing quickly around, she seated herself and, reaching for paper and pen, wrote carefully and somewhat laboriously a few words. She had finished and was contemplating the result of her eager efforts when a hand at the door caused her to dash down the pen and spring to her feet. As her aunt entered, Nanette took a few steps forward, and, bending to pick up her work from the floor, turned partly away and thrust the paper into the bosom of her gown.

"I came to tell you supper is ready," said Marie quietly.
At the table with her aunt the girl's manner was subdued and deferential; she observed the nicest proprieties, and bestowed on the other's slightest word a meed of attention calculated to soften the old woman's attitude and suspicions. And possibly succeeded; or, it may be, Marie's own conscience had begun to reproach her; for a number of days had passed and nothing had as yet occurred to justify the early apprehensions she had entertained. Under the circumstances the meal was a little prolonged; the first shafts of twilight had entered the courtyard and had begun to steal into the narrow chamber with darkening effect, ere of an accord the two women pushed back their chairs.
"It gets dark early," said the girl, "or time has passed quicker than I thought. Perhaps it was what you were telling me of the former lady of the Mount. She must have been very beautiful!"
"She was," answered the woman; "and as good as beautiful!"
"Heigh-ho!" Nanette sighed; through the window watched the shadows that like dark, trailing figures seemed creeping up the ancient wall to caress and linger on green leaves of vines, bright flowers and other living things. "But I suppose she had everything she wanted." The girl stirred restlessly. "What sort of a man is Monsieur Beppo, aunt?"
"Beppo?" Recalled as from a long train of recollections, the woman did not seem to notice the abruptness of the inquiry. "Oh, he is an old and faithful servant. For almost as many years as I have been here," with an accent of pride, "has he served at the Mount!"
"And his moral character, aunt?" demurely.
"Monsieur Beppo has a reputation for piety, no doubt deserved!" returned the woman, with an accent of surprise. "At any rate, he seldom misses a mass. But why do you ask?"
"Because I met him today and he invited me to walk with him this evening."
"He did?" Marie's mouth grew firmer. "And you?"
"I didn't exactly know how to refuse! He looked so old and respectable! I thought, too, you wouldn't mind and—I'm glad you think so well of him, aunt."
In the gathering gloom the listener's face seemed suddenly to grow graver; her eyes, which had returned to the girl's, expressed once more doubt and misgiving. With her glance lifted upward, however, Nanette did not seem to notice this quick change. A star-faint forerunner of a multitude of waiting orbs—peeping timidly down from above the gray, gauzy mass of stone, alone absorbed the girl's gaze and attention.
"Where were you thinking of going?" after a silence of some length the older woman asked.
"I don't recall that Monsieur Beppo mentioned," was the low-murmured response. "But, of course, aunt, if you object—"
"I do not know that I do," said the other slowly. "Only," as if the thought had suddenly come to her, "what were you writing at her ladyship's desk, when I went to call you?"
"Writing?" Nanette regarded her blankly. "I don't understand you, aunt."
"Weren't you writing something that you hid in your dress when I came?"
"Not!" The girl looked full at the other; denied point-blank the accusation. "Now that you speak of it, I believe I did step to the desk," she answered glibly, "to look at some ornament; but as for writing, or darning, I should not have presumed."
A low discreet rap at the door interrupted, and, with a whispered "There he is now!" Nanette cut short further argument by rising.
"She is not telling the truth!" For some time the woman stood looking down in gloomy thought after the two had gone. "What does it mean?" Moving to a peg, she took down a shawl. "What can it mean?" she asked herself again, and, wrapping the garment about her head and shoulders, left the room.
Half an hour later, at Beppo's side, on the beach, Nanette measured her steps to his; listened to the old man's platitudes, and even turned a not unwilling ear to sundry hints and innuendoes of a tenderer nature. The girl was in her most complaisant mood, and, in his role of discreet gallant to young and blooming womanhood, the fat factotum strove to make the most of the opportunity. He sighed; bethought him of a sentimental tale, and carped of the beauty of the moon, then gliding the edge of the Mount's high towers! She answered; looked; but soon her eloquent glance swerved to the sands, dotted by desultory seekers of cockles, or belated stragglers from the shore, and fastened itself on a jutting point of the Mount.
Near it, before a large rock of peculiar shape, a man was engaged in that common nocturnal labor of the locality, digging! As the couple drew near, quickly he raised his gaze; almost at once let it fall; engrossed in his work, continued to toss the sand and stood over it searchingly. But when they had gone by, once more he straightened, and, at the same time, the girl looked back. Stalwart, black-bearded, a sailor by his dress, the fellow made a sign, and, apparently any doubt as to who he was vanished from

A Distinction With a Difference

YOU may not always get what you pay for. It takes a good judge of values to do that, but if there is one sure rule in business it is—you pay for all you get. You may not be able to see the difference between engines of similar appearance at different prices, but if you buy from a reputable firm you may be sure the difference in quality is there.

IHC Oil and Gasoline Engines

cost more than some others because they are more carefully made, and more thoroughly tested. Skillful designing, better material, better workmanship, more careful assembling, and more thorough testing, tell in the long run. Given equal care an IHC engine costs less per year of service than any other engine you can buy. If an IHC engine is given all the work it will do, pumping, sawing, wood, running the grindstone, feed grinder, hay press, silage cutter, repair shop, machines, cream separator, churn, washing machine, etc., etc., it will pay for itself in a very short time in money and labor saved.
IHC engines are made in every style—horizontal, vertical, air and water-cooled, stationary, portable and mounted on skids, to operate on gas, gasoline, kerosene, naphtha, distillate or alcohol, in sizes from 1 to 50 H. P. Kerosene-gasoline tractors, 12, 15, 20, 25 and 45 H. P.

Nanette's mind; for from the fingers of the free hand she held behind her, something fluttered to the beach.

Leaning to his implement, the man regarded the paper, but not until the girl's low laugh was heard, as she and Master Beppo vanished in the darkness, did he step forward and secure it.

"So! That was it!" Breathless, indignant, Marie, standing in the black shade of one of the Mount's projections, watched the fellow read and regard carefully the message in his hand; then tearing it, crumple the bits and thrust them toward his pocket as he walked off. "Brazen hussy! But her ladyship shall know; and if she doesn't pack you off, bag and baggage—Eh? What is that?" And springing forward, the woman pounced upon something that lay on the sand.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Hesitation of the Marquis.

The day of my lady's riding party dawned; in the east a tender flame burned, and, vanishing, left the heavens an unbroken blue. Shoreward the mists rolled up, until only in the neighborhood of the forts did the white, soft vapor linger. On the Mount itself sunshine held sway; it radiated from the fortifications, "cutrass of the rock," and gleamed on the church, "tiara of its majesty." It warmed a cold palace of marble; looked in at its windows, and threw bold shafts to lighten dark nooks and corners.

But my lady, mistress of the Mount, seemed not to feel its beneficent touch; standing in the full glow and looking from her casement she shivered a little. Already was she dressed, and her habit of dark green, fitting close, served to accentuate the whiteness of her cheek which general absence of color, in turn, made the more manifest certain dark lines beneath the restless, bright eyes.

"Your Ladyship!" After knocking in vain, Marie had entered the room and set down the small tray she carried. "There is something your Ladyship ought to know!" with an air of excitement.

The Governor's daughter half turned. "What now, Marie?" she said sharply.

"It's about Nanette!" My lady made a quick movement of annoyance, impatience. "I did not tell your Ladyship, but I was averse to having her remain here. Your Ladyship does not understand, of course, and—"

"I do understand," said my lady unexpectedly. "And—you need not explain. I overheard you talking with her that night of the banquet!"

"Your Ladyship!" started.

"And I heard you speak of her father, Pierre Laroche, friend of the Black Seigneur."

"And engaged her—after that!"

"Why not? I could watch—and I have! But you were wrong, Marie."

My lady's manner was feverish. "Your suspicions were ridiculous. There has been nothing—nothing! And day after tomorrow is the wedding celebration, and the next day, he, the Black Seigneur—"

She broke off abruptly.

Had Marie been less wrought up, less excited, less concerned with the information she had to impart, she could not have failed to notice the odd break in her young mistress's voice; something unusual, almost akin to despair, in her manner. As it was, that which weighed on the old nurse's mind precluded close observation of the other.

"But something has happened, my Lady!" the woman half stammered.

"Comment!" The girl turned to her sharply. "What? Explain, Marie!"

Disconnectedly, the woman launched into a narration of the events of the night before; my lady listened closely, with an interest and excitement she strove to conceal, half turning so that the other saw no longer her face.

"And here," ended Marie, extending a crumpled fragment of paper, "is a piece of the note she dropped on the beach. The man tore it up, but in thrusting the bits of paper into his pocket this fell out, and, after he walked away, I picked it up myself from the sand. I can't read, as your Ladyship knows, and there isn't much on it—only a word or two! But it may tell something."

My lady's face was now composed; the hand she extended, steady; for several moments she regarded the fragment.

"What does it say?" asked the woman anxiously. "Is it—important?"

Her mistress did not at once answer; twisting the bit of paper in her fingers, stood as if in thought, and the old nurse repeated her question.

"This note might have been intended for some admirer!" said, at length, the Governor's daughter slowly.

"He looked more like an old privateersman!" murmured the woman.

"And there may be some plot—some plan!"

"Privateersman!" The girl's manner underwent a change; she shrugged her shoulders. "What could they hope to do at the Mount! You are imaginative, Marie!" lightly. "Nanette is good-looking, and what little is here would seem to signify a rendezvous. There may be no great harm in that."

"I am sorry, my Lady, to seem to think ill of my own kin," muttered the woman dejectedly, "but—"

"Think no more of it! You have done your duty. Now leave the matter to me, and—thank you, Marie!"

When, however, the old nurse had gone, all pretense of lightness faded from the face of the Governor's daughter, and, opening the bit of paper, once more she scrutinized it swiftly, intently.

"Tomorrow—Monastery St. Rann—"

she read. "Yes; it must mean St. Rannulph—where we are going. And where Beppo knew we were going! Beppo, she went down on the beach with!"

ment, striving to make out a word that had been blotted and was almost illegible. She frowned as she endeavored to decipher it. "Lady E." She gave an exclamation. "That refers, of course, to—But why?" She kept asking herself the question. "Why?" she repeated, when suddenly the brown eyes widened—changed; a new light shone in their depths. "It must be they intend to—what else?"

The sound of horns—signal for the party to gather—broke upon the air, and, nervously crushing in her palm the piece of the message, she stepped to the table, to the untasted breakfast. Like one in a dream, who yet feels the need for haste, she poured out the coffee; with unsteady hand raised the cup and drank; started to serve herself again; as if forgetful of the impulse, paused.

"And I?" she said with deeper breath. "To ride to the ambush they have so cleverly planned? Allow myself to be taken prisoner by these desperate men? No; no; I could not! And yet—" A trampling of horses' hoofs in the court below interrupted. "They are ready to start!" Uncertainly she lifted her head; looked around her; then mechanically stepped forward and left the room.

A scene of animation greeted her in the court, alive with lords and ladies, for the most part already in the saddle and waiting.

"Hall to Diana, who will lead us in the forests!"

"Fair nymph, let us away!" and the Marquis extended his hand.

With a seemingly merry nod she acknowledged their greetings; put out a foot, and lightly sprang to her place on the back of the nervous thoroughbred. But ere giving the signal to start, the girl's glance swung around to a window opposite, where stood an austere figure, imperturbably looking down to watch them ride off.

"Au revoir, mon pere!" Her voice rose with an odd, unusual thrill. "Au revoir!" she repeated, when a mistiness in her eyes suddenly blurred sight of him, and she tightened the reins. Yet hesitating to go, her gaze cleared, and, swerving, was abruptly arrested by another and more interested spectator who, partly concealed by flowers and plants, peered with anxious expectancy from her own balcony.

As Nanette's eyes met those of the Governor's daughter, they wavered half guiltily; suddenly became steady, held by something—a flash of impelling intelligence in the other's gaze. A moment or two, my lady continued to regard the girl; then touching her horse, wheeled sharply, and set a pace downward not easy to follow.

At the base of the Mount they were met by a numerous guard bright in holiday trappings, and, under the care of the commandant, with flourish of horse, the party swept gaily from stables to shore.

"A gallant company, Monsieur le Commandant!" observed the Marquis to the officer in charge, as they reached the green line at the yellow basin's edge. "Now if we were to meet an enemy—"

"He would find us prepared, my Lord!" the officer declared.

"True!" And the nobleman complacently touched the jeweled hilt of his own blade, accompanying the action with a tender glance at the Lady Elise.

She, however, a little ahead, appeared not to hear; spoke suddenly to her horse, and, as they swung from the sward, started at a brisk gallop down the road. Laughing, the others came after, lords and ladies first; behind, with tumult and clatter, the commandant and his men. As they advanced, on either side the way thick trunks of moss-grown monarchs uplifted their gnarled and hoary branches, to meet overhead; through leafy interstices bright flashes of sunlight shot downward, danced on fine garments and accoutrements, and then whisked elusively away. In dim recesses finches and sparrows sang; beyond, murmured streams and rivulets, while at the feet of the riders, gay restless flowers nodded, as if in accompaniment to the glad music of the morn.

"Small wonder his Excellency should have desired to add this fair principality to his own!" muttered the Marquis, looking around. "Of the seven forests of Brittany, none will compare with this, the Desaurac woods. What think you, Elise?" spurring his horse near his betrothed's. "Are you not taken by its beauties?"

She looked at him with a start; since leaving the sands she had not spoken, and now, tugging at the reins, only said abruptly: "My saddle! I believe it is loose."

"Loose!" repeated the nobleman. "Careless lackey! Let us see!" And grasping the bridle of her horse, pulled in his own, and drew both animals to a standstill at the side of the road.

As he dismounted to examine straps and fastenings, the others dashed up; my lady lightly motioned them on. "We'll soon overtake you! Don't wait!" Unquestioning, they obeyed; though the commandant, to whom a few moments later she delivered a similar injunction, brought his men to a halt and proffered his services. Whereupon the Marquis repeated the girl's words more sharply; reddening, the officer wheeled and started to ride on.

"I can't find anything wrong here!" Fuzzled, the Marquis straightened.

But her eyes were directed ahead and she pointed with her whip to a break in the woody barrier to the right—a path that, springing from the roadside, seemed to plunge into the very heart of the labyrinth.

"Look! the short cut!—that would bring us half an hour before them to the ruins! Let us take it!"

A light seemed suddenly to break on her companion, and he sprang airily to his saddle. "As my Lady wills!" gallantly.

"Then call to the commandant, and tell him we'll meet them there.

The Marquis obeyed, and, without awaiting answer, or demur from the officer in charge of the guard, the girl flicked her horse and sent him over a low bush into the narrow way.

Fairly in the path, she rode fast, and pressing hard behind, my lord soon found reason for doubt as to the advisability of that route, and a suspicion of regret at his own assent to the departure from the main thoroughfare. As their surroundings grew wilder and the slender green figure fitted more and more recklessly before him, he even ventured to voice his misgivings—advice greater care. A shake of the fair head was all he received for answer and, regardless of the increasing roughness of the way, she continued to sweep on, now uphill, then down, avoiding by a quick turn one obstacle here, leaping another there! From a black ambush, a branch like the arm of a Titan reached out to seize, but adroitly she swayed from its grasp and only the twigs and leaves touched lightly the bent figure.

My lord, however, they struck sharply, and at the sudden smart and a quick realization of falling behind, frowningly he drove his horse harder. The tete-a-tete he had naturally expected from her request to pursue the lonelier way promised now not to materialize; the idea that she was feeling, he pursuing, possessed him. The forest, a tangle of shrubs and strange creepers, was the scene of the idyl; she, a sprite of the greenwood, danced flitously through the maze. At length when my lord had begun to grow weary of vainly endeavoring to overtake her, fate favored his efforts; brought to a standstill, at the edge of a torrent, the object of his pursuit.

"Are you mad, Elise?" A shadow on his brow, the Marquis rode down.

She made no reply; regarded only the water.

"I hope it is not in your mind to attempt to cross," he went on, a shade of petulance in his accents.

She urged her horse forward; it stopped.

"Elise! I beg of you! It is dangerous; better go back, and around!"

But the girl set her red lips, raised her whip, and brought it down hard. The animal sprang into the foam; breasting the current, it slipped once or twice, recovered, and, after an effort, managed to reach the bank opposite.

My Lord—less blithely than he had first embarked on the adventure—followed; the cold waters surged around, and he almost expected to be swept away. At length, however, chilled by the icy touch of the torrent and somewhat more out of humor, he found himself on the other side. Near the top of the bank, where the Governor's daughter had now the grace to await him, he rejoined her, disapproval on his face, reproach in his eyes. Yet still did the girl remain unconscious of her lover's wounded sensibilities; her own eyes, like stars beneath the furry of hair, were turned, not to the young man, but away, toward a gaunt-looking ruin that had suddenly uplifted itself, as if by magic, through a rift in the forest. But a few hundred yards distant, the black crumbling walls bristled with rough, jagged edges—big, broken teeth that snarled at the rim of the ever-young wood. The very brightness of the day, seemed only to emphasize the ominous aspect of the place; to reveal more plainly the solitary character of its wildness.

"The monastery, I suppose?" following the direction of her gaze, the Marquis, after a pause, grudgingly vouchsafed.

"Yes," said the girl in a low tone; "yes!"

"Shall we go on?"

Her eyes, passing over a tangle of shrubs, bushes and thick, natural screens, slowly settled on a spot, not far away, where a wild bird, about to alight, fed off with a scream.

"Shall we go on?"

With a start the girl turned; the clear-cut features were very grave; in her gaze shone sudden compunction. She raised her hand. "My veil!" she said quickly. "I—dropped it. Do you mind? You—you will find it on this side of the stream—a little way down."

"Mind?" He regarded her doubtfully a moment; then moved by the irresistible appeal in her eyes, rather abruptly he wheeled, and as he did so, she gathered up the reins. Ere proceeding farther upon this errand of gallantry, my lord looked around.

"You seem to set great store on this veil," he observed suspiciously. "And I believe you were about to ride off!" he added, noting her expression, when, before she had time for pretext or answer, a heavy body stirred in the bushes, near at hand, and a gruff voice called out.

"Stand where you are!"

The nobleman's face changed; his gaze, as if fascinated, now rested on a score of rough figures who, following the order, so unexpected and startling, sprang simultaneously from neighboring thickets or covert, and advanced to surround them. Held by their grim aspect—the desperate determined visages; the black, threatening looks—in the surprise of the moment, too late, my lord's hand sought the sword at his side. Roughly plucked from his horse, he found himself flung to the sward; unconsciously pinioned, and heard the voice of my lady raised in his behalf.

The Proposed Deal's Island and Snow Hill Railway

By a notice in another column it will be observed that application has been made to the Public Service Commission by the Eastern Shore Power, Light and Railway Company for permission and authority to issue its shares of capital stock to the amount of $1,000,000 and also bonds to the same amount. The petition is set for hearing on October 7th. It is understood that the Railway Company has received the certificate from a reliable company agreeing to guarantee the bonds and that further procedure now depends upon the result of the hearing above mentioned.

It now begins to look as if the proposed railway were something more than mere preliminaries and its promoters are greatly encouraged as to the realization of their plans. Usually such projects are looked upon as mere pipe dreams and the public do not evince sufficient interest, in the belief that they are but dreams. The men who are promoting the present scheme deserve all the encouragement possible from the general public and especially the people of the two counties directly interested. The way to make things go is to push them and if there is no push nothing but failure can be expected.

The importance of a railway line from Deal's Island to some point on the Sinexupent Bay, traversing fruitful and important territory, has been emphasized in articles in both the city and county papers. The advantages to accrue are too obvious to be detailed again at this time. What is needed now is local interest, push and energy. An important project like this should not be permitted to fail and it certainly now has the appearance of success.

Catching The Wilson Spirit

Governor Woodrow Wilson has proved himself a most capable and indefatigable campaigner and more than this he is instilling into the crowds who hear him the spirit of hope and confidence. Last week he made notable speeches at St. Paul and Minneapolis, greeted great crowds at Chicago and then proceeded to Michigan and addressed immense audiences at Detroit and other cities. It is evident that his western tour is growing to be a record-breaking affair and that its results will be far from discouraging to him and his party.

The Wilson spirit possesses a catching quality and if the feeling shown at the great mass meetings already held is a criterion, there can be no doubt of the Governor's success in reaching the Presidency. There is something strikingly plain and commanding in Governor Wilson's campaigning and his versatility is highly complimented. His attitude in discussing the tremendous subjects of the campaign is well emphasized in his remarks relative to rear platform speeches. "The rear platform," he said at Kalamazoo, "is not the Democratic platform this time. We are at the front and not in the back."

This remark has the right ring and the efforts of the Democratic candidate to set the people of the United States straight upon the subject of the Government's entanglement with special interests and relief through the agency of the Democratic party, are meeting with a hearty response all over the country. The people are surely catching the Wilson spirit and that spirit will be a strong lever in relieving the country of its unhappy plight resulting from a high tariff and devouring business trusts.

A man can be almost anything he has a mind to be—in his mind.

What a Sad Event Suggests

The suicide of Mr. George C. Morrison, the recently elected chairman of the Democratic auxiliary committee, prompted by public allusions to him in connection with the Harford county Racing Bill, is a sad ending of a useful career.

If accounts be true, Mr. Morrison was a man upright in conduct and averse to improprieties of any sort. That his name should have been made public in connection with those responsible for improper racing legislation, is a matter of great regret and reflects no credit upon those whose scrutiny of legislation should have been of a closer sort.

Mr. Morrison was a man of great sensitiveness and it is thought that the mere idea of having his name coupled with the gambling schemes of Harford Grace was more than he could bear. The more reason, therefore, why greater caution should have been exercised in bringing him into notoriety. Those who did so can get poor consolation from their opinion that he was over-sensitive and little sympathy from those who held him in high esteem.

The whole subject leads back to the matter of hasty legislation at Annapolis and the too scant inquiry into the merits of hastily prepared bills. Too much rush at the close of the session and too little attention to bills as they pass and after they have been passed, are matters that are thus sadly emphasized.

The Democratic Remedy

The complaint of all the discontented Republicans is that a small number of persons of large wealth and extensive corporation connections have been exercising an unwholesome degree of influence over the Government. If the extremists overstate this the general fact is indisputable; large moneyed interests have had more influence upon the Government than was good for the country.

But the man who has stated the facts in this matter most accurately and with the fullest comprehension of the evil and the remedy is not Theodore Roosevelt, but Woodrow Wilson. Mr. Taft does not see much of anything the matter. Mr. Roosevelt says everything is the matter, but he has no time to explain any remedies that he would employ except himself. Just put him in power and give him a free hand, and it will be good for what ails the country. He will find remedies as he goes along.

The one candidate who has described what the trouble is and thereby indicated the remedy is Governor Wilson. The trouble has been that we have been legislating for the people piece-meal. The Republican party assumes that if it can enrich some manufacturers with the tariff, and some others with public lands or some other governmental privilege, the advantage will diffuse itself through the community and everybody will be happy.

These governmental favors do not equitably diffuse themselves, and that is the present trouble. The Republicans have thought it unnecessary to ask of proposed legislation, will it benefit most of the people? They have been content to ask will it benefit anybody? Governor Wilson shows that it may benefit some people and not benefit any considerable number, and that the remedy is to keep all the people in mind all the time, and take no action that is not for the general welfare. That is intelligible and it is common sense, and it is altogether more practical than anything Mr. Roosevelt has said, while Mr. Taft's own party is turning away from him because, with the best of intentions, he has never been able to see what was the matter or how to cure it. Governor Wilson is the one man who has shown an understanding of the very general discontent.—Philadelphia Record.

"The only way to be absolutely sure of protection is to know how to protect yourself," is the sentiment of what is said to be the first woman's gun club organized in the United States. Milford, Ohio, is the home of the new club. The organizers plan to not only gain plenty of healthful recreation, but to familiarize themselves with the use of a gun that they may be better equipped to defend themselves and their homes, should such necessity arise. Just now target shooting is most in vogue at club meetings, but later in the fall the women will don khaki suits and gaiters, shoulder their Remingtons, and go forth on hunting expeditions just like men folk.

Notice to Democrats

Registration days this year will be as follows:

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 8th.
On these two days transfers from one district to another will be given and registered voters will be placed on the books. This is not a new registration, but every Democrat who has moved from his last residence since last registration day into another district, must get a transfer from his old voting district and register in his present district where he is now living. This must be attended to on one of the above dates or your name may be erased from the voting lists. Every young Democrat who has become of age since last election should register on one of the above days in October.

Order Nisi.

In the matter of the tax sale of real estate in Tangier Election District of Somerset County, assessed to John H. Jones, made and reported by James E. Dashiell, collector of State and County taxes for the year 1909, has reported to the Circuit Court for Somerset County, a sale made by him to Robert F. Maddox, of all that lot or parcel of land, lying and being in Tangier Election District, of said county, in the State of Maryland, containing 2 1/2 acres of land, more or less, with the improvements thereon, adjoining the lands of Woodland Disharoon and James Teagle, conveyed to John H. Jones by A. C. Disharoon and Henry C. Disharoon et al. by deeds recorded respectively in Liber O. T. B., No. 23, folio 426, etc., and O. T. B., No. 35, folio 272, and assessed to John H. Jones on the assessment books of said Election District for the years 1908 and 1909, and sold for the payment of taxes due and in arrears, together with all the proceedings had in relation thereto; and whereas upon examination it appears to the said Court, that the said proceedings are regular, and that the provisions of the law in relation thereto have been complied with.

Now it is therefore ordered, by the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, this 20th day of September, 1912, that notice be given by the publication of this order once a week for three successive weeks in the MARYLANDER AND HERALD, a weekly newspaper published in Somerset county, before the 21st day of October next, warning all persons interested in the said real estate to be and appear in this Court on or before the 31st day of October next, to show cause, if any they have, why said sale should not be ratified and confirmed. The report states the amount of sales to be $15.40.

Meese—Mooseettes

At least the bull moose chase is enriching our political vocabulary. Six months ago there was no plural for moose, unless it was mooses, which would be fearfully in violation of the law of euphony. But as the word nearest in form to moose is goose, naturally the great public which meets every language emergency as it arises quickly decided that the plural of moose shall be meese. For instance, it is perfectly proper to refer to Teddy Roosevelt as a "bull moose," but when speaking of that aggregation which will "follow," wherever Teddy leads, they should always be referred to as "bull meese."

But there is another word—a beautiful, mellifluous, melodious, tynanum tickling word—which the exigencies of bull moose politics have brought into use. Do you know what a moosette is? No? Why, a moosette is a suffragist, or a suffragette who has tossed her headgear into the ring and has, in short, joined the bull meese movement. And so now, we have not only the plural of moose, which is meese, but the feminine of moose, which is moosette. So our elastic American language extends and expands itself.

As to whether the slow-flooding English will put meese and moosette in their dictionaries, we care not. We are making over the old language of Spenser and Shakespeare to suit our own convenience. We shall probably not have much use either for meese or moosettes when this campaign is over, but during the next sixty days the two linguistic creations are destined to figure largely in our current literature.—Baltimore American.

Time to Select Seed Corn

There is no fall work that is of more importance than that of picking seed corn. It would be better to stop some of the other work for a day and to get the necessary supply of next year's seed.

The selection of choice seed from the home fields is the best method of making the most rapid progress in corn growing.

Here is where the boys who belong to the corn clubs can help.

They will know that maturity is indicated by brown, dry silks, the husks of the ear turning yellow and by the tendency of the ear to hang downward. Ears on long shanks should be avoided.

Select the ears from vigorous appearing, upright, well rooted stalks. These stalks should have many broad leaves which indicate a good big food factory, therefore a strong grain.

Do not select seed ears that grow too close to the ground, or those that are high on the stalk.

The place of the ear on the stalk, the form of the ear and the strength of the plant are characteristics that are handed down from the plant through the grain, to the next crop.

Good characters to look for and select, are the upright, stalky, well rooted leafy plant, ears that are mature, well filled about midway of the stalks. These characters can be noted only when seed selection is made from the standing stalks. Don't delay. Corn selected early from the field and properly stored is reasonably sure to grow and give a perfect stand next year.

If father does not believe in seed selection, let the boy get permission to do it, and at the same time get father to agree that he have the use of an acre of ground next year, and then if he again selects the best, and continues for a year or two, we shall see the production of this state double on the same acreage, as it takes no more time or labor to cultivate a good stand than a poor one.

What We Never Forget

According to science, are the things associated with our early home life, such as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, that mother or grandmother used to cure our burns, boils, scalds, sores, skin eruptions, cuts, aprains or bruises. Forty years of cures prove its merit. Unrivaled for piles, corns or cold-sores. Only 25 cents at Omar A. Jones' drug store.

A Mountaineer's Mule

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.

"One day as I was sittin' on my doah-step," began the old possum hunter, when asked for a story, "a stranger came along the road leadin' a mule. It was a No'th Caroleeny mule, and he looked like a likly beast. I was a wonderin' why the man was leadin' the mule instead of ridin' him when he stopped and said:

"I'm on my way to the Tennessee river to jump in and perish, and I'll sell you this mule powerful cheap if you want him."

"What do you want to perish for?" I asked.

"Bekase I'm alone in the world and too good for it. I can't stand the wickedness around me, and I would go hence and have a harp and golden wings. This mule is the last thing I've got to get rid of, and if you fancy him he's yours for $20."

"I was in want of a mule jest then," said Zeb, "and after lookin' him over I put down the money."

"It didn't take me long to diskliver that that mule was ornery. All mules are pizen mean, but this one was a champion. If I tried to put a saddle on him he'd lay down in his tracks, and if I hitched him to a cart nothin' on airth could make him pull a pound. He'd bite and he'd kick, and he went around lookin' for a fuss. In a week I found he was no airthly good. I clubbed him till I was tired, but I couldn't pound no sense into him. One day I got so mad that I was gwine to shoot him, but the old woman mixed in and said:

"I was jest a tinkin', Zeb. Do you remember that cantankerous b'ar that was around yere last fell?"

"Of co'se."

"He'll likely come back ag'in this fall. Better leave him to the mule if he comes."

"I give up tryin' to do anything with the mule, but he growed meaner and meaner all the time, and he wasn't happy unless he was kickin' his heels ag'in the cabin doahs."

"It got so the old woman didn't step out, and I had to carry a club to keep him off. I'd had him six weeks and had wanted to shoot him every day, when one night that b'ar showed up. He come down off the mountain feelin' mo' cantankerous than ever, and that ornery mule was waitin' for somethin' to come along and begin a row. They got at it in no time."

"Me and the old woman got up and looked out, and the two critters was thoroughly enjoyin' themselves. They was kickin', bitin', clawin', growlin' and squealin', and it was better than a circus to watch 'em."

"It was the same thing over the next night and every night for a week or mo'. A b'ar ought to lick a mule easy 'nuff, specially when he's a cantankerous b'ar, but in this case he'd got hold of a mule so mean and obstinate that he wouldn't hev turned tail for all the b'ars in Tennessee. He was as upsy as a cat, and the way he bit and kicked warmed up my heart. He got a good many scratches in them conflicts, but he wouldn't run away or give in. One night, after we had seen him roll that b'ar over a dozen times without hurtin' him, the old woman said to me:

"Zeb, it ain't exactly a fair fight. The mule hain't got no shoes on, and his kicks don't hurt. Better gin him a decent show."

"It struck me that way, and the next day I takes the critter up to the blacksmith shop at the Cove and has sharp shoes put on his feet. He seemed to know what they were for, and he didn't like it 'tall. He was ugly all the way home, and when night come he stood in the yard with his head down and 'peared to be thinkin'."

"The b'ar come down about 8 o'clock. Mebbe he was madder than usual, fur he pitched right in at once. Me and the old woman both noticed that he didn't use his heels 'tall, but jest bit and pawed, and we wondered at it. However, after fightin' about half an hour the b'ar cornered him, and he had to turn and let fly, and he killed that varmint as dead as a doah nail with one kick. The sharp calks of one of the shoes pierced the b'ar's skull, and over he went and never got up ag'in."

"I was mighty tickled over it and went out to praise the mule. He was standin' clus to the b'ar, and he never moved a foot for five minutes, jest stood and looked at me through the darkness in a sort of accusin' way and then fetched a gasp and fell down dead."

"He's bin wounded in his vitals," said the old woman as she come out, with a lantern.

"But he hadn't. He had some scratches and a bite or two, but nothin' to worry about. No, sah. What ailed that mule was madness and contrariness."

"He'd sot out to lick that b'ar without any hind shoes on and reckonin' to fight fair and hev sumthin' to brag about, and he was mad and contrary 'bout my mule in. When he found he'd killed the b'ar he swelled up till his heart busted, and he fell over dead, and I jest believe he was glad to go. That was nothin' mo' left on airth for him to fight, and why should he tarry longer? As to the b'ar, I reckon it was the same with him. Leastwise he lay thar, with a smile on his face, jest like a man who has tried his best in a fight and got whooped. As for the feller who sold me the mule, I never did see him ag'in, and I s'pose he went to heaven accordin' to his program."

SO DECEPTIVE

Many Princess Anne Fall to Realize the Seriousness.

Backache is so deceptive. It comes and goes—keeps you guessing. Learn the cause—then cure it. Possibly it's weak kidneys. That's why Doan's Kidney Pills are so effective.

We present the following case as proof:

Harry D. Ford, Upper Fairmount, Md., says: "I am just as willing to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills today as I was in 1909. The cure I received at that time has been lasting and you may continue the use of my former testimonials. I had severe pain through my back and it could not have been worse had someone thrust a knife into me. For a whole week I was unable to get about the house. Having heard about Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box and began using them as directed. I felt better shortly after beginning their use and continued their use until I was cured."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Lighting the House of Commons.

The house is very often spared of the gas bill, remarks the Manchester Guardian. On a quiet afternoon the debate will go on in the fading light of day till members can hardly see one another's faces, and then the clerk of the house suddenly realizes that he cannot see the paper under his nose. He looks up and finds the house wrapped in shadows. He touches a bell, a servant comes in and receives the directions for the lights. The light is turned on in the attic above the glass panels with the rendering of the red rose. It arrives in the house like a shower of rain on a summer night. First a faint tentative stirring, a softening, a sponge in the face, then after that the deluge, and the room below is drenched in a mellow downpour. The dark spaces beneath the galleries drink it up like a thirsty land. The whole scene is refreshed. Strangers in the house look up into the roof and then they sit up and begin a more intelligent reading of the men and things below.

Dropping the English "H."

In the days when packet ships ran between New York and London a youthful passenger asked the English mate of the Christiansa what there was in the leather tubing around the gunwales of the lifeboats.

"Hair, sir," he answered.

"Is there anything peculiarly buoyant about hair?" asked the American youth.

"If you don't know that you don't know much," replied the mate, with a look of contempt as he moved to another part of the ship.

The youth was humiliated and a few days later asked the captain why hair was so buoyant in water. That authority replied that he didn't know that it was and inquired why the youth thought it was so.

"Why, sir, your mate told me that there was hair in the tubes of the lifeboats to make them float when capsized."

"Ah!" answered the captain, laughing. "He's a Cockney; he means air."

Where the Gray Hairs Came From.

The attitude of the commanding generals of the north and the south toward each other, after the final surrender, writes Mr. Thomas Nelson Page in his book on General Lee, is one that the world regarded with astonishment, and the Americans may forever look back upon with pride. In illustration, Mr. Page offers an engaging anecdote from Long's memoir of Lee.

It appears that on the afternoon of the day of the surrender at Appomattox, Meade paid a friendly visit to Lee at his headquarters. In the course of the conversation Lee turned to Meade, who had been associated with him as his officer of engineers in the "old army," and said, pleasantly:

"Meade, years are telling on you. Your hair is getting quite gray."

"Ah, General Lee," was Meade's prompt reply, "that is not the work of years. You are responsible for my gray hairs."

Antiquity of Gloves.

How early did mankind think of the convenience of the fingerless glove? Little was said of gloves in ancient times, but in most cases it is obvious that they had fingers. Those worn by the secretary of the younger Pliny, used when he visited Vesuvius, so that he might keep on jotting down notes in spite of the cold, must have been fingered, no less than those of the glutton in Anthenaeus, who wore gloves at table so that he might handle the meat while hot and get in advance of his bare handed fellow diners.

Many Driven From Home.

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery and cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles find quick relief and health returns. Its help in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping-cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Omar A. Jones, droggist.

JAVA'S ISLAND OF FIRE.

It Is Really a Lake of Boiling, Bubbling Mud and Slime.

The greatest natural wonder in Java, if not in the entire world, is the justly celebrated "Gheko Kamdka Gumko," or "Home of the Hot Devils," known to the world as the Island of Fire. This geological singularity is really a lake of boiling mud situated at about the center of the plains of Grobogan and is called an island because the great emerald sea of vegetation which surrounds it gives it that appearance.

The "island" is about two miles in circumference and is situated at a distance of almost exactly fifty miles from Solo. Near the center of this geological freak immense columns of soft, hot mud may be seen continually rising and falling like great timbers thrust through the boiling substratum by giant hands and then again quickly withdrawn. Besides the phenomenon of the boiling mud columns there are scores of gigantic bubbles of hot slime that fill up like huge balloons and keep up a series of constant explosions, the intensity of the detonations varying with the size of the bubble.

In time past, so the Javanese authorities say, there was a tall spirelike column of baked mud on the west edge of the lake, which constantly belched a pure stream of cold water, but this has long been obliterated, and everything is now a seething mass of bubbling mud and slime.

THE HISTORY OF ZINC.

Introduced into Europe From India Under Several Names.

Zinc was introduced into Europe in the seventeenth or eighteenth century by men from India. It was known then as calame, splauter or tuttanegro and was the same metal which the famous alchemist, Andreas Lebarius, described in 1606 and which he declared consisted of silver, cadmia, mercury and arsenic.

Late in the sixteenth century keen competition was going on between the Portuguese and the Dutch in the Indian seas, and a Portuguese ship having been captured by the Dutch, her cargo of calame or "Indian tin" found its way into Europe. Nobody at that time knew what it was, and it was a piece of this cargo that became the subject of analysis by Lebarius.

Zinc, it seems, was first produced in India, but soon became an important industry in China. The first Chinese book which mentions zinc, calling it yauzen, according to the Engineering and Mining Journal, is the Tienkongkaou, or Technical Encyclopedia. China was the sole producer of zinc until the middle of the eighteenth century, discharging a minute quantity of that metal which was occasionally obtained as a byproduct in the lead furnaces of Golar in the Harz mountains—New York Post.

Strangers in Fex.

"The people of Fex are charming," declares J. F. Legard in the Pall Mall Magazine. "During one's walks or rides through the town it is quite the exception to be spat at, as is often the case in other ultra-Mohammedan towns, and the crowd is, on the whole, merely smiling and inquisitive, like a crowd in Naples or any other south Italian town. Now and then some fanatic—generally an epileptic—will try to raise a disturbance and will be gently removed by his friends—the Moors are kindness itself in the face of poverty or affliction—but, except for these and a few casual curses from the old and soured, the Christian dog may pursue his way in comparative peace, provided he does not attempt to enter a mosque or pass the barriers erected in front of those streets leading up to the tomb of Moula Idris, the founder and patron saint of Fex."

Mistakes of Authors.

The author of "Don Quixote" makes the party at the Crescent tavern eat two suppers in one evening. Scott in one chapter of "Ivanhoe" gives the Christian name of Malvoisin as Richard, subsequently altering it to Phillip. Pope makes a weasel eat corn. Kingsley makes John Brumlecombe read the prayer for "all sorts and conditions of men," though in the time of Elizabeth the prayer book did not contain it. Sir Archibald Allison speaks of "Sir Peregrine Pickle" when he means Sir Peregrine Maitland, and the same author translated "droit de timbre" as timber duty, "a howler," which is only equaled by Victor Hugo's translation of "Firth of Forth," "premier de quatre."

Lions as Watchdogs.

A Rhodesian farmer is reported to have trained two African lions to protect his premises. They act as night patrols, and are keenly on the alert to every sound. For a considerable time he had employed dogs, but they were invariably poisoned. He tried the experiment with lions as the result of his knowledge that the "king of the forest" will not touch poisoned food—London Globe.

Threats.

I consider it a mark of great prudence in a man to abstain from threats or any contemptuous expressions, for neither of these weaken the enemy, but threats make him more cautious and the other excites his hatred and a desire to revenge himself—Machiavelli.

The Right Thing.

"What did you do with your book whose leaf you found loosened?"

"Put it through a legal process."

"What do you mean?"

"Had it bound over to keep the mca."—Baltimore American.

THE CANDLE BUOY

A Friend of the Mississippi Pilots
In the Old Days.

QUEER LITTLE LIGHTSHIPS.

They were floated and anchored in the Channel of the River on Dark Nights and Showed the Navigator on Down Trips Where Reefs Were Not.

In the old steamboat days on the Mississippi, before the government had undertaken the duty of marking and lighting the "crossings" where the channel swings over from one bank to the other, the river pilots had to devise their own means of finding their way through these difficult and dangerous places.

In the daytime it was not hard to do, and on moonlight nights the landmarks, which every pilot knew by heart, could be seen plainly enough to make the crossing possible. But there were many nights so dark or foggy that the shore marks were not visible; then the reefs had to be "candle."

Candleing was resorted to only on the down trip. Going up the river the pilot might "feel" of the reef with his boat, and if he did not find the best water the first time he could back off and try again a little to one side or the other, wherever the soundings showed the deepest water to be.

In going down the river, however, that was impossible. The pilot had to find the channel the first time, for if the boat struck the current would drive her hard on the reef or else swing her broadside on the bar and in ten minutes land her in the very midst of it with tons of drifting sand.

To guard against such a disaster when nearing Pig's Eye, Beef Slough or Trempealeau bars—or any one of a dozen bars of equal difficulty—on a dark or hazy night the pilot stopped the boat at the head of the reef. With two men to row, a mate or watchman to steer, a "cub" pilot to manipulate the "candle buoys" and an older pilot to take soundings, the yawl was lowered and permitted to drop down the channel below the steamboat.

After the pilot had determined the best course by taking soundings the "cub," under his direction, anchored two, three or even four of the candle buoys, one after the other, in the center of the channel, and then the men let the yawl drop down below the reef, where it lay a little outside the channel. Then one of the men swung a lantern—a signal at which the pilot on watch came ahead, steering for the tiny lighthouses and running over them, one by one, until the reef was passed.

The candle buoy was made of a piece of two inch light pine plank, beveled for four inches at the "bow" in order to prevent its "diving" as the current pressed against it. A tin "scone" with three legs, three or four inches long, was tacked down to the plank. Half of a common candle was placed in each scone, and after being lighted an oiled paper chimney, with a base corresponding to that of the candle stick, was placed over the light to protect it from the wind. The outer ends of the tin "legs" of the scone were turned back over the base of the paper chimney to hold it in place, and the buoy was ready for launching.

A hole was bored about six inches from the end of the plank. Through the hole a small cord some ten or twelve feet in length was rove and knotted, and to this cord a lump of coal weighing perhaps ten pounds was tied. This served as an anchor to hold the buoy in its place in the center of the channel.

Such was the procedure fifty years ago or more. Since the government boats began patrolling the river and establishing permanent lights at all bad crossings it is seldom necessary for the pilots to go out in a sounding boat, although it is not an unheard of proceeding even now.

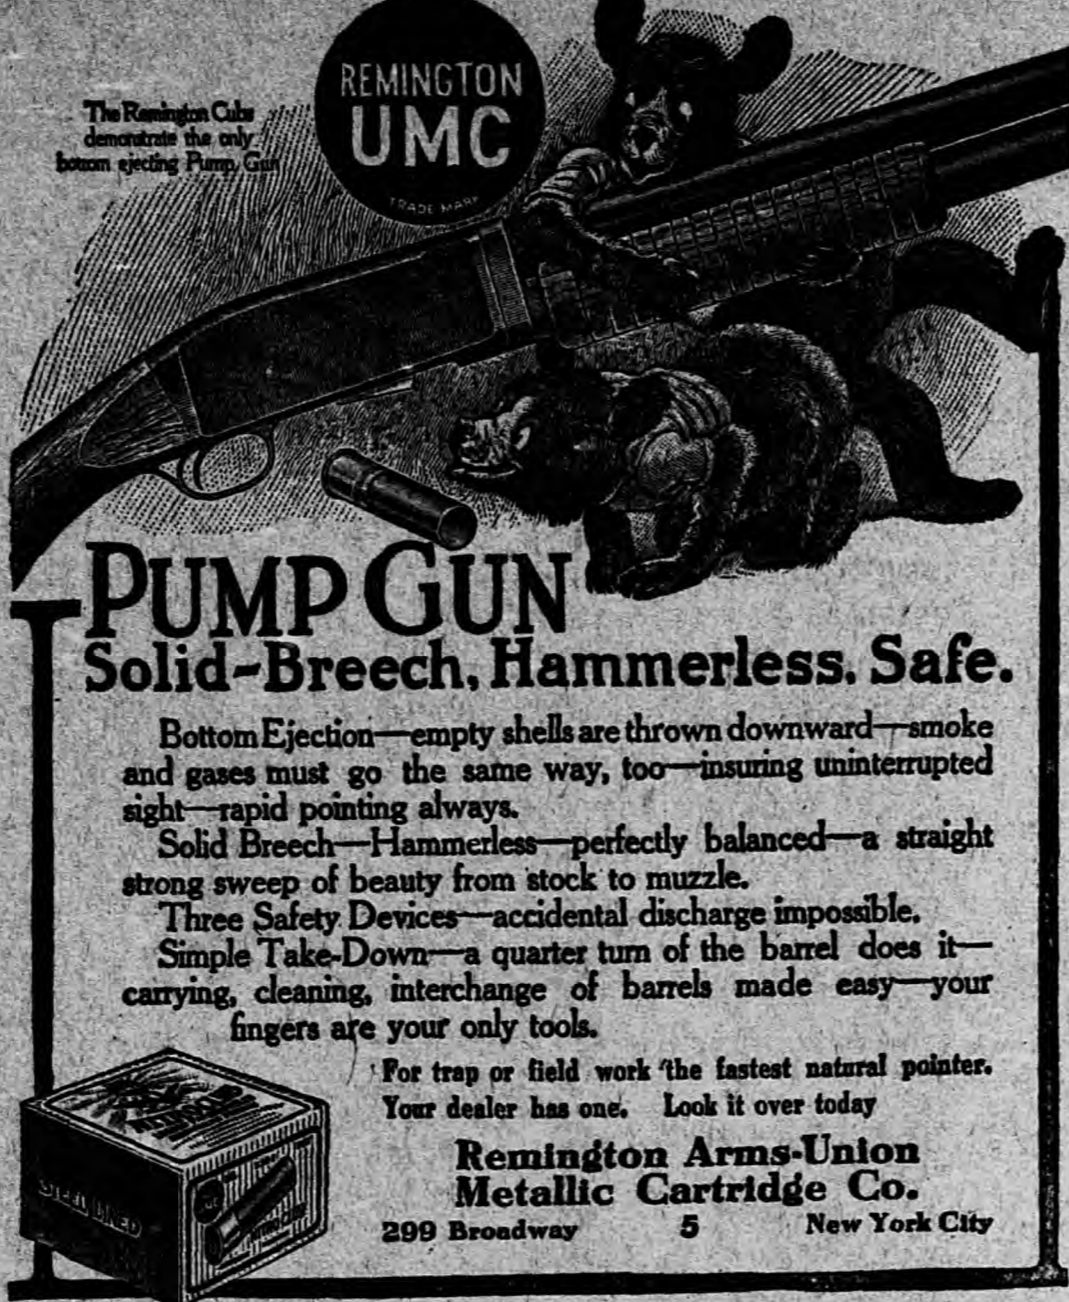

But the candle buoy is a thing of the past. Probably there are scores of present day pilots who never even heard of the makeshift little lightships that their puzzled predecessors were wont to launch amid the darkness and doubt of former years.—Youth's Companion.

A Title as Long as a Preface.
Many old pamphlets are distinguished by titles as long as prefaces. The author of one, published in 1646, evidently did not share in the modern editor's enthusiasm for short title headings, for this is the name under which his publication was ushered into the world: "Scotland's public Acknowledgement of Gods Just Judgment upon their Nation for their Frequent Breach of Faith, Leagues, and Solemn Oathes made to their Neighbours of England in former ages, to gratify their Treacherous Confederates of France."—London Globe.

Rome's Triumphant Crown.
The triumphal crown of Rome was made of laurel leaves and was given to the general who achieved a great victory over an enemy. He entered the city not by a gate, but over a portion of the wall which was thrown down to afford a passage. At his funeral his laurel crown was placed in his bier and buried with the body.

Bored.
We often boast that we are never bored, but yet we are so convinced that we do not perceive how often we bore others.—La Rochefoucauld.

Great thoughts reduced to practice become great acts.—Hasselt.

J. T. TAYLOR, Jr.

LARGEST Carriage, Wagon and Harness Dealer
In the State of Maryland

New styles for 1912, they are exclusive, no other dealer can get them only through J. T. Taylor, Jr., as I am the general agent for the manufacturers who produce the new styles which other manufacturers copy, and are always one year behind the styles.

I Have in Stock for Your Selection

The lightest surrey made in the U. S. for one horse.
The lightest runabout with 4 styles axles.
The lightest novelty Wrenn buggy with 4 styles axles.
The lightest speed cart on the market.

All of the above goods are bought in car load lots.

My Farm Wagons cannot be equaled for ten dollars ($10.00) more. We don't only guarantee our steel axles, but we guarantee every part of the wagon. Our rims are deeper, our spokes and hubs are larger. Look them over, don't be deceived by paint and putty.

Yes, I keep the price down. I have no one to divide my profit with but my customer. I am selling more buggies, runabouts, wagons, and harness this year than ever before. I have the largest stock you ever saw.

14 Car loads of Buggies and Wagons. One and one-half car loads of Harness.

My sales last year were over One Hundred Thousand Dollars ($100,000). I'll build you a buggy to order at the same price you pay for the ones you have forced on you by other dealers. You have been paying too much; come see for yourself.

Removing a Minute.
The mayor of an Australian mining town, who was a noted boxer, had been absent for some months, and just before his return to his mayoral duties his colleagues passed a vote of censure on him. At the next meeting of the town council the mayor was present and found the minutes of the previous conference to contain this:
"A vote of censure was passed on the mayor for outstaying his leave, and it was resolved to ask for an explanation."

"Who proposed this vote of censure?" inquired the mayor.
"I did," said a councillor.
"You did, did you?" said the mayor, stepping from his presidential chair. "Then take that!" and he struck him violently in the face. "Who seconded the resolution?" he asked quietly. There was no answer. "Who seconded this resolution?" he asked again. Still there was no answer. "Then," said the mayor, taking up his pen, "as there was no seconder, it's out of order. Strike it off the minutes!"

Satisfying Honor in India.
They had a peculiar way of going into bankruptcy among the Marawars in India, now unhappily giving way to the less picturesque method of the white man. When a man could not pay his bills he would summon his creditors. They were ushered into a room in which the thakur, or household god, was enshrined, but covered up with a cloth and with the face turned to the wall in order that it might not witness the scene that was to follow. The insolvent would then, in garb of mourning, lie on the floor, presenting his back to his creditors, who, on a given signal, would fall on him with shoes and slippers and belabor him till their wrath was exhausted. The beating finished, honor was declared to be satisfied all around.

The Criterion of Danger.
The Duke of Wellington once drove Sir George Warrender from Windsor in his carriage. The duke drove so furiously that Sir George, dreading every moment that a terrible collision would occur, begged him not to drive so fast.
"Pooh, pooh!" said his grace. "Where there is no fear there is no danger."
"My dear duke," replied Sir George, "if fear is the criterion of danger for heaven's sake stop and let me get out for I was never in such a funk in my life."—London Mail.

Not Afraid.

Are You Happy?

If you are it is safe to say that you enjoy good health, as it is impossible to be happy unless you are well. Noted physicians will tell you that bad stomachs and torpid livers are the cause of 95 per cent of all diseases. For the past 42 years SEVEN BARKS has proved to be the unequalled remedy for all STOMACH, LIVER and KIDNEY troubles, and the greatest tonic and blood purifier known. It makes your digestion what it should be and keeps your entire system in good condition. Price of SEVEN BARKS is but 50 cents a bottle at all druggists. Money refunded if not satisfied. Electing a Queen Cow!
In the Rhone valley, Switzerland, an extraordinary ceremony is carried out every July. This is the choosing of a queen cow by the cows themselves. A large number of cows, over 200 at times, are assembled in a field to choose their queen. The queen cow is the one which is strong enough to fight all the other cows off the pasture and remain in possession of it herself. The owners of the cows are not allowed to encourage their beasts in any way. The honor of owning a queen cow is keenly coveted by the local herdsmen, and they do everything they can in order to turn their animal out a winner. In their eagerness to bring their beasts fit and well on the day of battle many of the herdsmen feed them a week or a fortnight beforehand on bread and wine. The cows descend from a fighting race and are always eager to have a scrap. The "election" of the queen cow often lasts the greater part of the day and is watched by crowds, who come to the scene from miles round.

The Sad Case of Jane Hobbs.
Not so long ago a Lau-shire road breaker sold his wife to another man and thought the transaction was perfectly legal because he had placed a halter round her neck, the end of which he put in the hand of the purchaser after the money had been paid. This belief arises from the custom of olden days, when wives were actually led into the market place with halters round their necks and sold to the best purchaser. It was this custom which led to the humorous ditty which runs:
"A jolly shoemaker, John Hobbs, he married Jane Carter; no damsel was smarter, but she was a tartar, Jane Hobbs. So he tied a rope to her, Jane Hobbs, and like a lamb to the slaughter to Smithfield he brought her; but nobody bought her, Jane Hobbs. 'Oh, who wants a wife?' cried Hobbs; but somehow they tell us those wife trading fellows were all of them sellers, like Hobbs."—London Spectator.

Auction Bidding by Electricity.
Dutch market gardeners do not take their produce to the "middleman," but make him come to them and purchase it. They have co-operative auction marts, and the produce is sold by auction run by electricity, at which quality is guaranteed by the Growers' Co-operative society. At the auction not a word is said beyond the announcement of the quantity in the lot for sale. There is an electric push below each merchant's seat communicating with a clock face with numbers on it. The pointer on the dial face is set going. When it reaches the figure some merchant is willing to pay he touches his push, the pointer stops, and without any possibility of mistake and without any one except the clerks knowing the buyer's name, the goods change hands.

A Patient Man.
The endurance of the music lover who sits out one of Wagner's long "Ring" operas has often been commented upon, but perhaps not more forcibly than in London. Well up above the stage was a burly figure in homespun, evidently a Scottish farmer who had come to London to see the sights and hear the sounds. After sitting through three long acts he murmured audibly, "Twas a patient mon that wrote all this!"

Impertinent.
Originally the word "impertinent" signified merely "not belonging to." When Wycliffe said that there were many men in this world who were "impertinent to earthly lords" he did not mean that they were "cheeky," but merely that they had no masters. Then, as used by Shakespeare, "impertinent" came to mean "irrelevant." Just 200 years ago it was defined as signifying "absurd, silly, idle."

The Wrong Ones.
"My, but Sophronia and her family are lazy people!"
"Are they?"
"Why, I went there the other day, and, I give you my word, there was nothing working in the house but the preserves."—Baltimore American.

Aviation Foiled.
"The last time I saw you you were expecting a legacy and planning on doing some high flying."
"Yes, but my heirship was not successful."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Appropriate Advice.
"I'd like to get into some occupation with snap about it."
"Then why not peddle rat traps?"

An article that has real merit should in time become popular. That such is the case with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been attested by many dealers. Here is one of them. H. W. Hendrickson, Ohio Falls, Ind., writes: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best for coughs, colds and croup, and is my best seller." For sale by all dealers.

ARIZONA BRONCHOS.

Like the Little Girl With a Curl in the Center of Her Forehead.

When the Arizona broncho wishes to be safe for you and for himself he is the safest thing in the world, and when he wishes to be unsafe life is a merry chance.

I went up and down trails in Arizona which were almost perpendicular and rough and stone strewn too. But there was little danger, for the broncho has, not the "ten pound," but the "thousand pound" look. His nose is to the ground, his eyes fastened on the trail, his footstep the most beautifully careful thing the mind can conceive. One foot placed before the other eases and preserves the balance, adjusts the weight for another, and all this wonderful machinery of equisole, stability and safety you feel working under you like a delicate machine.

Yet this sage pioneer of the trail, with his meticulous care of you and himself, was just a wild range pony, hunted down by the range rider, driven, goaded or duped into a corral, broken, saddled, bridled and ridden all in one hour; wrenched out of his wildness, having his heart broken and made into a slave while you would eat your breakfast.

He is not a beauty; he is just a mongrel. But his legs and his feet are made of iron and steel, and the work he does over awful trails, in a rough and ragged country, strewn with stones and flints and boulders and lava and scrub, week after week, month after month and year after year, would spoil the legs of a thoroughbred in three days.—Gilbert Parker in August Metropolitan.

A FORTUNATE BLUNDER.

The Result of Putting a Couple of Wires in Wrong Terminals.

A large number of the world's greatest inventions have been the result of some accidental union of forces, the nature of which the person who started them neither understood nor suspected. The working of dynamos at long distances apart when properly connected was discovered by accident.

A scientific journal says: "Soon after the opening of the Vienna exposition, in 1873, a careless workman picked up the ends of a couple of wires which he found trailing along the ground. He fastened them in the terminals of a dynamo, to which he thought they belonged, while they were really attached to another dynamo that was running in another part of the grounds."

"The dynamo to which he fastened the wires was not running, but as soon as the wires were placed in its terminals it revolved as if a steam engine was driving it. The workman was amazed. The engineers and electricians were astonished by the discovery that a dynamo electric machine (turned by steam power) would turn another similar machine a long distance away if properly connected to it by electric wires. Thus originated one of the most revolutionary applications of electricity."

The fact that power can be transmitted for miles by electric wires is one of the most important factors in modern civil engineering achievements.

Foiled.
The lovers whispered together before the doors of her father's hangar, planning the last details of their elopement.

"Hurry, dearest," he urged. "We will wheel out your runabout monoplane and together we'll fly away on the wings of the night, nevermore to be separated!"

"Wait," she exclaimed. "I have a better plan. We will run it out and hide in the old stable; then we will walk to the trolley and papa will never suspect us."

They were hardly half a mile on their way down the road when from overhead came the roar of the triple propellers of the racing monoplane as papa dashed out into the darkness in hot pursuit.—Puck.

Solid Gold.
For many years the term "solid gold" has been a commercial misnomer. Some of the ancient Roman jewelry as well as that of the renaissance period was indeed made of pure gold, worked up by hand with the crudest of tools, but since the old day there has been a constantly increasing employment of alloys, for the reason that jewelers found that the harder the gold was rendered by good alloys the greater its wearing qualities and the more secure, therefore, was the setting of the gems it contained.—Argonaut.

The Hard Part First.
"I hear you've got a government job now," one man said to another. The other answered gayly: "That's what." The first man gave an envious sigh and asked: "Is it hard work?" "Not after you get it," was the reply.

Her Possessions.
"I have two lovely little puppies," said Mrs. Tawkey. "I have met your husband," replied the man. "Who is the other one?"—Exchange.

Final Decision.
"I see that Counsellor Dedbrooke is courting a rich old widow." "He seems to be up against a court of last resort."—Boston Record.

The Men Who Succeed

As heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success, to-day, demands health. To all is to fail. It is utter folly for a man to endure a weak, run-down, half-alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas. B. Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders, and deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well." Try them. Only 50 cents at Omar A. ### Thoughtful People in Every Walk of Life are Turning to Habits of Thrift

People of wealth are seldom spendthrifts. They have long since learned the value of money.

The spendthrift is nearly always some one who cannot afford the luxuries he seeks.

The thrifty person adjusts his living and earnings in order that a part of each month's wages may be set aside for future use.

And a Savings Account with the Bank of Somerset is the most convenient method of which we know, to do this. Any small amount will start your account.

The new toe shapes seem to be ideal for the sake of good looks and lengthy service. The lasts appear to strike a "happy medium," so to speak, between the wide and the narrow.

The heels and toes, too, are neither high nor low, as heretofore; though we are showing a straight laced English model with extremely low heels and toes—this for the less conservative young man.

The leathers represented in button and laced styles are Gun Metal, Pat. Golt and Tan Galt at $3.50 and $4

A MOTHER'S RUSE

By HELOISE BRAYTON

"Amy," said Mrs. Stringfellow to her daughter, "Walter Barnard has been paying attention to you now for six months. If you were engaged I presume that you would tell me. But I wish to know surely whether you are or are not."

"I am not," replied Amy dolefully. "That evidently means that Walter hasn't spoken."

"I think he will, mamma."

"Not without being brought to the point."

"Mamma, you wouldn't wish me to tell him that I am expecting him to propose to me, would you?"

"Certainly not. That would not be the part of a girl. But a girl has her privileges, and one of them is to indicate to a young man paying her attention that she wishes him to discontinue doing so."

"But I don't."

The mother bit her lip, but said nothing more. Nevertheless she determined that since her daughter had not the spunk to bring her lover to a proposal she would make the attempt herself. To interfere in such a matter is always a great risk, and the lady realized that by doing so she might make a breach between herself and her daughter that might never be healed. But Mrs. Stringfellow was naturally diplomatic and determined that she would pursue a little game of her own which might mean a great deal or might mean nothing.

Not long after this little dialogue Mrs. Stringfellow arranged that Amy should go away on a visit. Amy objected, not being willing to leave Walter even for a day, though she did not see him often than once a week. But the mother prevailed, and Amy departed with fear and trembling that the man she wanted would during her absence fall into the toils of some other girl.

One day during Amy's absence Walter Barnard called upon her mother to pay his respects and ask how her daughter was enjoying herself. He was ushered into the library, where he usually visited with Amy. On the table lay a bill from a prominent dry goods store. It was so plainly exposed that the caller could not help seeing it, but he did not make himself acquainted with its contents till an unrolled package on a chair attracted his attention. It was white and of a delicate fabric. Near it was a box, in which some white gauzy substance so loosely rested that a part hung over the side. There was still another box with the cover on.

Barnard while waiting for Mrs. Stringfellow had nothing to occupy him, so his mind became fixed on these articles. He examined the fabric, and it seemed to him that there was about enough of it to make a dress. Then it occurred to him that the gauzy stuff might be intended for a bride's veil. Having gone thus far in his surmises, he was naturally curious to know what was in the covered box. He lifted the cover and saw that it was filled with orange blossoms.

Evidently some one was about to be married.

But who? There was only one single woman in the house, and that was Amy.

A terrible thought entered the young man's brain. Could it be possible that while he had been putting off his proposal some other man had come in and occupied the vacant place ahead of him? His heart seemed to stop beating. Perspiration stood out on his forehead.

He paced the floor till Mrs. Stringfellow came down. When she saw the dry goods she looked displeased, called a maid and directed her in a sharp tone to take them upstairs. Then she turned her attention to her visitor.

Barnard was too disconcerted to talk connectedly. He jumped from the warm weather to the news from abroad and from the news from abroad to the last bit of social gossip. Then he asked if Miss Stringfellow was enjoying her visit and was informed that she was having a delightful time. He asked when the young lady would return, and his hostess informed him that certain events that had happened since her departure would necessarily alter the time of her homecoming, but did not say whether it would be hastened or delayed.

Two or three times Barnard was on the verge of asking whether Amy was about to be married, but every time he balked. Once he got his question partly out, but Mrs. Stringfellow looked at him so coldly that he turned the question into something else. Finally he arose to go, stumbled against a chair's back or against an open door, dropped his hat and stepped on it, finally getting out in great confusion.

That night he slept only a few hours and in the morning took an early train for the place where Amy Stringfellow was visiting. She was much surprised at seeing him and waited for him to declare the object of his coming.

"Are you going to be married?" he asked in a tone to warrant that if she were he was ready to kill the groom.

"No. Why do you ask?"

There was an embarrassed silence for a few moments, when he spoke again.

"Well, then, I wish to put in my claim for you. I don't want any more scares like this."

When Amy returned to her home her mother confessed her ruse. Had it failed she could not have been convicted of it.

FLOWERS AS FOOD.

In India the Natives Eat Bassia Tree Blossoms Uncooked.

In these days one would hardly call a dinner of rosebuds a feast, not should we be inclined to accept an invitation to dine on the blossoms of the pumpkin vine. Yet some Indians, like the old Aztecs, used to esteem these flowers, when properly prepared, a great dainty.

So, in the same way, do natives of many parts of India depend for food upon the blossoms of the bassia tree. They do not need even to cook the flowers, but make a good meal of them raw. These blossoms are described as sweet and sticky in odor and taste. They are sometimes dried in the sun, when they are kept and sold in bazaars as a regular article of diet.

The trees are so highly esteemed that the threat of cutting down their bassia trees will generally bring an unruly tribe to terms. This is perhaps not to be wondered at when it is considered that a single tree will yield from 200 to 400 pounds of flowers. The Parsees cook the flowers and also make sweetmeats of them.

"Nobody would be inclined to deny that smoked fish and smoked meat are agreeable varieties in our bill of fare, but few, perhaps, would feel ready to plead guilty to a taste for smoked flowers. And yet, when we give to the clove its well earned place among flavorings we are making use of a smoked flower bud. The buds grow on a small evergreen and are plucked from the ends of the branches before they expand. Then they are dried in the sun and smoked over a wood fire to give them the brown color.—Philadelphia Press.

The Word Coconut.

It really should be "coco-nut," but custom compels the inclusion of that superfluous "a." The term coco or cocoa by which the nuts are known is said by several authorities to be of Portuguese origin, and the derivation is quite out of the ordinary. According to Bauhin, coco or coquen is derived from the three holes at the end of the nut, giving it the resemblance of a species of monkey. Another writer, Piso, would have us believe the name is due to the sound emitted when air is blown into one of the holes of the nut, it being likened unto the voice of an ape. The Portuguese for monkey is macaco or maeoco. Perhaps the best explanation offered is that "coco" means a grin or grimace, for the three eyes of the nut certainly convey the impression of a hideous laugh. For the unnecessary "a" the blame has been laid on the head of a careless proofreader, who allowed the name in its present form to creep into Johnson's dictionary, although the learned doctor had used the correct spelling.—London Telegraph

Good Discipline.

"Our American militia is the best in the world," said the president of the Descendants of the Signers.

"How strict it is! During the annual encampment of our Virginia militia a private was riding one hot day on a trolley car with his uniform coat unbuttoned. This caused a sergeant on the smokers' seat behind to say: "Button up that coat! Haven't you got any sense of military decency at all?"

"But here a gentleman on the left interfered, saying to the sergeant: "How dare you give commands with a cigar in your mouth? I'm Major Fitzhugh Calhoun."

"At this point an elderly gentleman, with a white military mustache leaned over and murmured in the major's ear: "Colonel Brewster Fairfax is sorry to remind you, sir, that to scold a sergeant in the presence of a private is a military offense hard to overlook."—Washington Star.

Hens That Swim.

School Inspector (to the infant class)—Can a hen swim?

"Yes," says Maggie, with a significant nod of the head.

"What! Do you say a hen can swim?"

"Yes," with repeated nod.

The infant mistress is appealed to regarding the instruction imparted to the class.

"Maggie," says the infant mistress, "surely you are not thinking. Do you say a hen can swim?"

With persistent nod Maggie says "Yes."

Head master enters the room. Inspector calls his attention to Maggie's repeated answer.

Head Master (to Maggie)—Do you mean to say a hen can swim?

"Yes," says Maggie.

"Did you ever see a hen swim?"

"Yes; a water hen."

Inspector confesses he has still something to learn.—London Answers.

Turkey as "the Sick Man."

Now a collector of old prints comes forward with the proof that the expression, "the sick man of Europe," so persistently applied for years to Turkey, really dates back to the seventeenth century, when John Sobieski drove back the Turks from the gates of Vienna. He shows an old engraving with the Turk on his sickbed in the center and the doctors representing all the nations of Europe gathered about him. As has been the case ever since, they cannot agree as to the treatment. All want to make an end of the Turk, but the Spaniard wishes to apply a bomb, the Pole wishes to give him steel, the Prussian would stifle him with his cloak, etc. Change the names and costumes of the doctors and this cartoon of nearly three centuries ago would answer for any of the numerous congresses that have since then attempted to settle the vexing eastern question.—Argonaut.

Our Limitations.

There are noises louder than thunder which we cannot hear, the roar that lies on the other side of silence, writes Frank Harris in "Unpath'd Waters."

We men are poor, restless prisoners, hemmed in by our senses as by the walls of a cell, hearing only a part of nature's orchestra and that part imperfectly, seeing only a thousandth part of the color marvels about us and seeing that infinitesimal part incorrectly and partially.

THE WONDERFUL ALADDIN Lamp

Wonderful because it produces a luxurious, soft, white light, excelled only by sunlight. Burns ordinary kerosene or coal oil, the cheapest of all illuminating fuels.

Burns Less Oil than Any Other Lamp of Equal Candle Power

Aladdin Lamps are most durable in construction—easiest to take care of—simplest in operation. The light is brighter and easier on the eyes than gas or electricity.

Occultists declare the Aladdin Gives The Best Artificial Light Known. Users declare it is not only the best light, but the best lamp known. The Aladdin is superior by test and best There is No Equal.

By comparison. It appeals to those who want superlative excellence for its own sake—appeals to those who consider economy a first essential. Oilless, noiseless, simple, safe and clean—The Ideal Lamp for the multitude. Don't be bamboozled by an imitation. There is only one Aladdin. Insist on having it. The name is on every burner.

For County Surveyor:
GORDON T. WHELTON,
of Crisfield.

Election Tuesday, November 4th, 1913.

A short term of court is always welcome. The September term lasted but a week and the grand jury attained the best record ever made in the county, its session having lasted but two days. It is a gratification to have court officials who make work move and the effective pushing of that work, so as to spare the people both time and money, forms an excellent object lesson.

The State of Maryland has lost a fine citizen in the death of Dr. Joshua W. Herring. Dr. Herring was a man of excellent attainments, broad views and a deep-rooted sense of honor. In business, politics and church he took a prominent position. It is this class of men that the State can ill afford to lose. Death is no respecter of persons and its toll is taken from all classes. It takes time, however, to get accustomed to the changes which the great destroyer works and to the successions which its ravages involve.

Those who are interested in books and are in sympathy with the work of supplying good literature, will be gratified to know that the Princess Anne Library is about to have a permanent home. The new location is on Church street and the building is the old station, donated by the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk Railroad Company, which was moved last week to its new site. A library is a fine thing for a town and it is to be hoped that the enterprise which has proved so successful for several years past will now receive additional impetus.

Support The Democratic Ticket

The candidates named for the Democratic ticket at the recent primaries are all men of high standing in the county and deserve the support of the entire party. The war of words waged prior to the primary election is now a thing of the past and there is no just reason why the slightest touch of feeling should remain. The only thought should be to defeat Republican aspiration to again control the county.

We know of no good reason why the administration of Somerset county, which has continued with such success for a dozen years, should revert to a party whose alignment is an unsatisfactory representation of the people's property interests and whose record by no means measured up to the present standard.

That the affairs of Somerset county have been managed with care and economy, has been set forth in various statements to the public and these statements will appear again at intervals as the occasion requires. The election of a Republican commissioner or treasurer, would mean a repudiation of this record and a serious reflection upon the men who have cared for the county's interests. It is the duty, therefore, of every Democrat to do his part in putting in office the class of men who are to continue the record already established.

The great matter now before the Democrats of Somerset county is that of reconciliation and good feeling. "In union there is strength." A united party and co-operative work ought to be the slogan from now to election day.

Does the Majority Rule?

According to the returns of the division assessors, 873,639 citizens of Philadelphia are qualified to vote. Of this number only 249,163, or about two-thirds, registered, and so made themselves eligible to cast ballots at the November election, while less than two-fifths actually turned out at the polls at the primary election last week. In other words, 124,276 electors were not enough interested in the course of public affairs to take the small trouble of seeing that they were properly enrolled, while of the number who did so, about 100,000 took no part in choosing candidates from among whom twelve judges of the local courts, four important county officers, an almost entirely new membership of Councils and a large number of subordinate officials must be elected.

This is the answer to those supporters of the direct primary who cannot understand why the scheme is not working out satisfactorily in practice when it figured out so nicely in theory. If every citizen was impelled by his sense of responsibility to the community to fulfill his duty on registration and election days, it would be possible to obtain a clear expression of popular opinion such as would make effective the ideal doctrine of majority rule; but as it is, much of the ruling nowadays is unquestionably done by a comparatively small minority, and the more complicated and intricate the act of voting is made by the elaboration of new-fangled laws, which are difficult to understand and more difficult to observe, the smaller the minority will become. A return to simpler methods would seem to be the only remedy, and the time is surely coming when the making of such a suggestion will not incur the foolish cry of "reactionary!"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

How's This?

We offer one Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by him.

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE, Toledo, O. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists. Take Hall's Family Pill for constipation.

Maryland is a Democratic State when the people who are natural Democrats vote the ticket. It only goes to the Republican column when the people have lost faith in the leaders and the party managers. The people are generally so disgusted after two years of Republican rule that they are willing to come back to the Democrats anyway, but there is surely no reason why any man of Democratic tendency should fail to vote his party ticket this year when the party stands on such a wide-open, progressive and honest platform as that enacted in Baltimore.

Diarrhoea Quickly Cured

"I was taken with diarrhoea and Mr. Yorks, the merchant here, persuaded me to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy. After taking one dose of it I was cured. It also cured others that I gave it to," writes M. E. Gebhart, Oriskany, Pa. That is not at all unusual. An ordinary attack of diarrhoea can almost invariably be cured by one or two doses of this remedy. For sale by all dealers. [Advertisement]

FOR SALE OR EXCHANGE

THE JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY

State Scholarships in Engineering Courses

Applications for scholarships in the Department of Engineering, established in the Johns Hopkins University under the provisions of the Laws of Maryland, Chapter 90, 1912, should now be made.

Entrance examinations for all students will be held in McCoy Hall, The Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, on September 30th to October 2d, 1913, beginning at 9 a. m.

If there is more than one applicant for a particular scholarship a competitive examination will be held at the University immediately following the examination for entrance.

In addition to certain collegiate scholarships, the Act provides for 6 scholarships at large and 102 scholarships, each for one year, to be apportioned among the counties and legislative districts of Baltimore city, the same number of awards so far as possible to be made each year. The undergraduate courses in Engineering will extend through four years, and it has been determined to offer 35 of the scholarships in the year 1913-1914. Allegany, Baltimore, Frederick and Washington Counties and the four Legislative Districts of Baltimore city will each be entitled to two scholarships, and each of the other counties to one scholarship in October, 1913. The six scholarships at large may also be awarded at that time.

Applicants for scholarships should address the Registrar, The Johns Hopkins University for the blank forms of application and for further information as to the examinations and the award of scholarships.

Registration Notice!

The Board of Supervisors of Elections for Somerset County, hereby give notice, as required by law, that the duly appointed Boards of Registry for the several districts and precincts of said county will proceed to make an intermediate registration of all qualified voters, on Tuesday, September 30, 1913,

—AND—
Tuesday, October 7th, 1913,

AND WILL SIT FOR THE PURPOSE OF REVISION ONLY ON

Tuesday, October 14th, 1913, between the hours of 8 o'clock

a. m. and 7 o'clock p. m.

On Revision Day no new names can be added to the list of qualified voters.

The said Boards of Registry will sit in their respective districts and precincts, at the usual places for holding registration and election in said districts and precincts.

Local and Miscellaneous

Miss Annie Morris has returned home after spending several weeks in Portsmouth, Va.

Liberal sample of Wells' Famous Backache Remedy. See advertisement in this paper.

Mrs. J. Thomas Taylor has returned from Charles Town, W. Va., where she entered Miss Sarah Taylor as a student at Powhatan College.

Mr. G. Elmer Brown, son of Mr. G. W. Brown, left yesterday (Monday) for Washington, D. C., where he has accepted a position as bookkeeper in The Home Savings Bank of that city.

"My Old Kentucky Home" Company gave a very creditable performance before a large audience Thursday night, at the auditorium, of the play "The Ragged Hero," or "Jerry, the Tramp."

Our reading space has been greatly reduced this week by a large run of advertising, which shows the light in which the MARYLANDER AND HERALD is regarded as an advertising medium. It is needless to say this patronage is duly appreciated.

The old railroad station, donated by the N. Y., P. & N. Railroad Company to the Princess Anne Public Library, was moved last week to the site on Church street, opposite the Episcopal Church. The building will be completely renovated and the Library will be moved to it as soon as possible.

With Wyoming Bill's Historical Wild West exhibition this season and which is billed to appear in Princess Anne, Tuesday, October 7th, are a number of famous Indian chiefs—among whom will be found Bear Wolf, Spike Head, Big Little Horse, Thunder Cloud, Yellow Feather and others. They are accompanied by their squaws and papposes.

The Shoreland Club will enter upon its eighth year on October 30th, when the first meeting of 1913-14 will be held. Mrs. Charles W. Fitzgerald will be the hostess on this occasion. The officers of the club are as follows: President, Mrs. J. Douglas Wallop; vice-president, Mrs. John B. Roberts; secretary, Mrs. Earle B. Polk. Program committee, Mrs. H. Fillmore Lankford, Mrs. William H. Dashiell, Mrs. John B. Roberts, Mrs. J. Douglas Wallop. The subjects to be discussed during the year will bear upon Russian history.

Dependancy

Is often caused by indigestion and constipation, and quickly disappears when Chamberlain's Tablets are taken. For sale by all dealers.

No man is so impervious to superstition as to want 13 wives.

There is a big minstrel show coming, watch for the date. Now on trail.

Strange as it may seem, high living has put many a man on his uppers.

It is a mistake to suppose that the man who is on the fence is always well balanced.

Miss Gertrude Friedlin, of Portsmouth, Va., is visiting her aunt, Mrs. John W. Morris.

Unfortunately the fool who rocks the boat lives to apply the same tactics to an alrship.

The woman who fishes for compliments may hate to bait a hook, and yet she fishes with baited breath.

Mr. Harry A. Heath and son, Vernon, spent part of last week with the former's uncle, Mr. T. H. Heath, on Beckford avenue.

Miss Aline Wallop left yesterday (Monday) for Baltimore, where she will continue her work at the Maryland Institute of Art and Design.

The Bull Moose controlled the new People's party mass-meeting at Snow Hill last Thursday. Charles O. Carter of Berlin, presided and Dr. Robert Lee Hall, of Pocomoke City, was secretary.

Both are ardent Progressives. No ticket was nominated, but a committee was named to select candidates.

The new station of the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk Railroad Company at Princess Anne is a model of excellence and a credit to the company and to the town. It is supplied with all modern conveniences that add to the comfort of both officials and the traveling public. The building has been in use about two weeks.

For the first time in fifteen years the Republicans of Queen Anne county have placed a local ticket in the field, as follows: Register of Wills, Charles F. Rich; Sheriff, William Lynch; Surveyor, John C. Turder; County Commissioners, W. B. Sparks, David Wallace and Thomas Smith; House of Delegates, Harry P. Skipper and T. A. Edenfield.

The recently elected Democratic Central Committee for Somerset County held its first meeting at Princess Anne last Tuesday. Wm. E. Dougherty, of Crisfield, was elected chairman; George W. Brown, of Princess Anne, treasurer, and Harding P. Tull, of Marion, secretary. A joint meeting of the committee and candidates will be held in Princess Anne next Thursday.

Every Democrat who is not already registered should attend to that duty today (Tuesday) September 30th. If not convenient to do so today he will be afforded another opportunity on Tuesday, October 7th. This will be your last opportunity. Get registered and vote the Democratic ticket. Vote for Blair Lee, Emerson C. Harrington, Caleb Magruder and for the County Democratic ticket.

The Civic Club is to be credited with much of the good work for a cleaner and more sanitary Princess Anne. Our town boasts of its clean streets and its improved sanitary conditions. The club is now about to direct its attention to still other matters, including more effective public school conditions. The club deserves the co-operation of the general public in such matters. It already has that of the Town Commissioners.

According to the report of State Bank Commissioner J. Dukes Downes, the Bank of Somerset, of Princess Anne, is one of 33 banks and trust companies out of 114 in Maryland that was entitled to be placed on the roll of honor. This is quite an honor, as to secure this, a bank must show a surplus and undivided profit in excess of its capital stock. The Bank of Somerset shows a surplus and undivided profit of $94,441.27, and is number 15 on the list.

Alleged to be short in his accounts with the County Commissioners of Queen Anne county, Louis H. Perkins, of Centerville, aged 63 years, a former county treasurer, superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School, steward of the church and one of the county's most highly esteemed residents, committed suicide Wednesday by swallowing an ounce of carbolic acid and drowning. Discovered in the act of seeking death, desperate efforts were made to save his life, but without avail.

Distribution of $50,000,000 by the Treasury Department among the banks of the South and West to facilitate the movement of crops has been half completed. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Williams announced last Friday. A total of $24,159,000 has already been divided among 22 states. Part of the money has been distributed as follows: Illinois, $3,500,000; Louisiana, $3,075,000; Maryland, $2,700,000; Tennessee, $2,045,000; Missouri, $1,750,000, and Georgia, $1,622,000.

Caught a Bad Cold

"Last winter my son caught a very bad cold and the way he coughed was something dreadful," writes Mrs. Sarah E. Duncan, of Tipton, Iowa. "We thought sure he was going into consumption. We bought just one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that one bottle stopped his cough and cured his cold completely." For sale by all dealers.

Mrs. H. J. White and daughters, Elizabeth, Sydney and Virginia Belle, of Pocomoke City, spent the week-end at "Pine Grove," with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Turpin.

Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Cogley and daughter, Mary, of Fairmount; Miss Ethelinde Lawson, Mrs. Cora Turpin Brooke and granddaughter, Gladys Lawson, are the guests of Senator and Mrs. Lewis M. Milbourne.

Paint Better

Better isn't enough; paint best. A man bought "cheap" paint; saved 20c or 30c or 40c or 50c a gallon, didn't he?

Yes, and bought 40 or 50 or 60 or 80 per cent. more gallons; how much did he make on his paint?

And he paid for painting those gallons—a fair day's work is a gallon—how much did he make on the labor part of his job?

He lost a quarter or third of his money. How long will it last? not his money, the paint?

Perhaps half as long as Devoe. How long will his money last, if he buys other stuff as he bought that paint? Better buy the best paint; it makes the least bill and least often.

DEVOE.

C. H. HAYMAN sells it.

Dr. C. W. PURNELL,

OPTOMETRIST,
of Cambridge, will be at O. A. Jones' Drug Store on Monday afternoon, Sept. 29th, 1913. Glasses prescribed and furnished when necessary.

BARGAINING AS A FINE ART.

Pellets and Loquacious, the Oriental Shopkeeper Will Haggle Over the Price of an Article From Dawn Until Dark—A Sample Transaction.

He is the selfsame fellow still, the Cairo merchant, as in the days of Haroun-el-Raschid. He squats in cross-legged contentment as of yore, amenable only to the loquacious system of bargaining dear to the heart of the oriental. The western tourist, foolishly regarding time as of value, will lose all equanimity long before he has completed the smallest transaction. If his knowledge of the east and his patience suffice and he begins negotiations early enough in the day not to be driven forth as the merchant sets up his shutters at nightfall he may obtain the article he seeks at a just and equitable price. If he gains possession of it in less than the accustomed time he will certainly have paid more than its market value.

Vagabundo, the western traveler experienced in the ways of the east, catches sight during a stroll through the bazaars of an Arabic blade that takes his fancy. It hangs high at the top of the open booth, on the raised floor of which serenely squats the proprietor, with folded legs. Vagabundo, as from the merest curiosity, pauses to run his eye over the countless articles, suggests with a half stifled yawn that the scimitar looks like what might be a convincing weapon in the hands of an enemy, ventures to hope that the merchant is enjoying fine weather and strolls leisurely on. The shopkeeper continues to puff drowsily at his water bottle until the westerner is all but out of earshot. Then he appears suddenly to awake and drones out a languid invitation to return. Vagabundo pays no heed to the summons, for some moments, gazes absently upon the wares displayed in another booth, then wanders slowly back. The merchant hopes that the traveler is enjoying the best of health, invites him to squat in the bit of space not already occupied by himself or his wares, offers a cigarette and falls to discussing the state of the cotton crop in the delta. By the time the second cigarette is lighted he turns the conversation deftly to the scimitar and remarks that though it is hung among his wares rather for ornament than for sale it is possible he may some day tire of beholding it and part with it for—perhaps 1,000 piasters. Vagabundo, puffing reminiscently for a time, recalls having heard a friend express a desire to obtain such a weapon for, say, 75 piasters or so and wonders, after all, why that friend should care for so useless an article. The shopkeeper regrets that the two prices named do not more nearly coincide, trusts that the inundations will not be so late this year as last and reaches again for the tube of his narghile. Vagabundo expresses his delight that the khedive has recovered from his recent attack, thanks the merchant for his disinterested hospitality and saunters away.

The shortest instant before he is finally lost from view in the surging stream of bazaar loungers he is called back to learn that the merchant is of the opinion that the new land tax will work more effectively than the old, that the scimitar is probably worth only 750 piasters and that some of the eucalyptus trees in the Esbekieh gardens are to be removed. With all due respect to Cromer Pasha Vagabundo doubts the practicability of his latest scheme of taxation and hopes that his friend may somewhere run across such a scimitar at 100 piasters. Thus the transaction continues; a third, a fourth, even a fifth time Vagabundo returns. By the sixth visit he has dropped the fiction of a friend and openly offers 225 piasters for the blade, and the shopkeeper arouses himself sufficiently to take the weapon down for inspection and expresses a willingness to part with it for 275.

Over newly rolled cigarettes the negotiation proceeds, now touching upon the prevalence of ophthalmia, anon skirting the matter of scimitars, their manufacture and price. Speaking of scimitars, the merchant suggests that for the one in hand he would be satisfied perhaps at 250 piasters. Vagabundo lays that sum—which both recognized from the beginning as the just price—on the mat between them, grasps his newly acquired property and, amid protestations of lifelong friendship from the merchant, takes his departure.

Manchester business men and Chicago captains of industry, scornful of such childish methods, have dived into the maelstrom of the bazaars of Cairo with the avowed intention of "doing business" after the manner of today and the west; but all in vain. The Cairo shopkeeper will bury in his transactions for no mortal man. Let the pulsating westerner press his mercenary suit too forcibly and he discovers to his surprise, and perhaps even to his dismay, that the merchant of the east displays his wares and squats by day among them merely as a recreation and amusement and that the notion of selling anything is farthest from his thoughts—Harry A. Frank in Century.

Red Hair and Temper.
"All mankind," said Major Hurst, a well known English student of eugenics, "may be divided into those who are red haired and those who are not red haired. It is a fundamental difference." In almost every case of a red haired child the major has succeeded in discovering a red haired ancestor, and he thinks that practically the whole of the red haired population springs from a single red haired man far back in the past. Here are some of his conclusions:

In order for red to appear it must be in the ancestry on both sides.

A red father and a dark mother, or vice versa, hardly ever have a red child.

Two reds always have red offspring. But it is exceedingly rare to find two reds marry, as they seem to have a mutual antipathy.

It is a popular fallacy that red haired persons have any distinctive temperament. They are no more hot tempered than other people.

A Story of Talleyrand.
During the troublous days of the French revolution, when aristocratic heads were dropping in the basket in the name of liberty, fraternity and equality, Talleyrand lived and prospered by virtue of a marvelous ability to tell just the psychological moment to jump off one band wagon and aboard another.

The name of this French diplomat has been kept alive more than have those of most of his contemporaries by a vast number of anecdotes in which he figures. It was Talleyrand whom Mme. De Stael, homely but brilliant, tried to corner by asking him if she and the beautiful Mme. Recamier were to fall into the water, which one he would rescue. And Talleyrand smiled in his most insinuating manner and replied:

"Ah, madame, but you swim so well, you know."

ECHOES FROM WESTOVER

Westover Happenings Always Interest Our Readers

After reading of so many people in our town who have been cured by Doan's Kidney Pills, the question naturally arises: "Is this medicine equally successful in our neighboring towns?" The generous statement of this Westover resident leaves no room for doubt on this point.

Irving O. Dryden, K. F. D. mail carrier, Westover, Md., says: "My kidneys acted irregularly and my back was weak and painful. I could not stoop for any length of time and was unable to remain in one position long without having dull pains across my back. As soon as I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills I found relief and I continued until I was cured. I have so much confidence in this remedy that I advise all kidney sufferers to give it a trial."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

A Wafer.
"What," asked the teacher, "is the meaning of the word 'wafer'?"

"A wafer," replied Maurice, aged nine, "is a kid without any father or mother."—Chicago News.

Mother of Eighteen Children
"I am the mother of eighteen children and have the praise of doing more work than any young woman in my town," writes Mrs. C. J. Martin, Boone Mill, Va. "I suffered for five years with stomach trouble and could not eat as much as a biscuit without suffering. I have taken three bottles of Chamberlain's Tablets and am now a well woman and weigh 168 pounds. I can eat anything I want to, and as much as I want and feel better than I have at any time in ten years. I refer to any one in Boone Mill or vicinity and they will vouch for what I say." Chamberlain's Tablets are for sale by all dealers.

USES OF CRIMSON CLOVER.

Value and Limitations of Plant as Described in Government Bulletin.

Probably the most important characteristic of crimson clover is its ability to grow and make its crop during the season when the land is not occupied by the ordinary summer grown crops. In sections where it succeeds, crimson clover can be sown following a grain crop or in an intertilled crop in late summer and will mature a hay crop the following spring in time to plow the land for spring seeded crops, such as corn or cotton. It may even be held for seed as far north as central Delaware and the stubble be plowed under in time for seeding the quick maturing strains of corn. It may be turned under for soil improvement when only six inches high if it is desired to fit the land for early spring seeded crops.

Even if only the stubble be turned under the effect upon the succeeding crop will be marked, especially if the soil be deficient in nitrogenous fertilizers. The plowing under the entire plant, however, will more rapidly correct any deficiency of nitrates or humus in the soil. It is one of the best cover crops for use in orchards and, in fact, under any conditions where the soil is likely to wash during the winter months.

The many uses to which this crop may be put merit a careful study of the best methods of establishing a stand of crimson clover upon a farm.

Crimson clover is frequently called "scarlet clover" and, somewhat less commonly, "German clover," "Italian clover," "French clover," "incarnate clover," "annual clover," etc.

Crimson clover cannot ordinarily survive the severe winters of the northern states. In the northern sections where a fall seeded legume is desired it is suggested that hairy vetch seeded with rye be used instead.

Crimson clover is a "winter annual"—that is, it ordinarily makes its early growth in the autumn, passes the winter in a somewhat dormant but green state, makes a very early spring growth and matures its seed and dies before summer. It makes little or no growth in very hot weather and therefore should not be sown in the spring, except in the extreme north, where it may make a satisfactory growth by autumn, so that a hay crop may be taken from it at that time.

FARMER-BUSINESS MAN.

Farm and Fireside says: "Many farmers are a great success at growing crops, but they fall down miserably when it comes to getting the money out of those crops. What we need at the present time more than any other one thing is better business talent on the part of our farmers."

The Farming That Pays.
The only permanent agriculture is that which is based on stock raising and permanent agriculture means profitable agriculture.

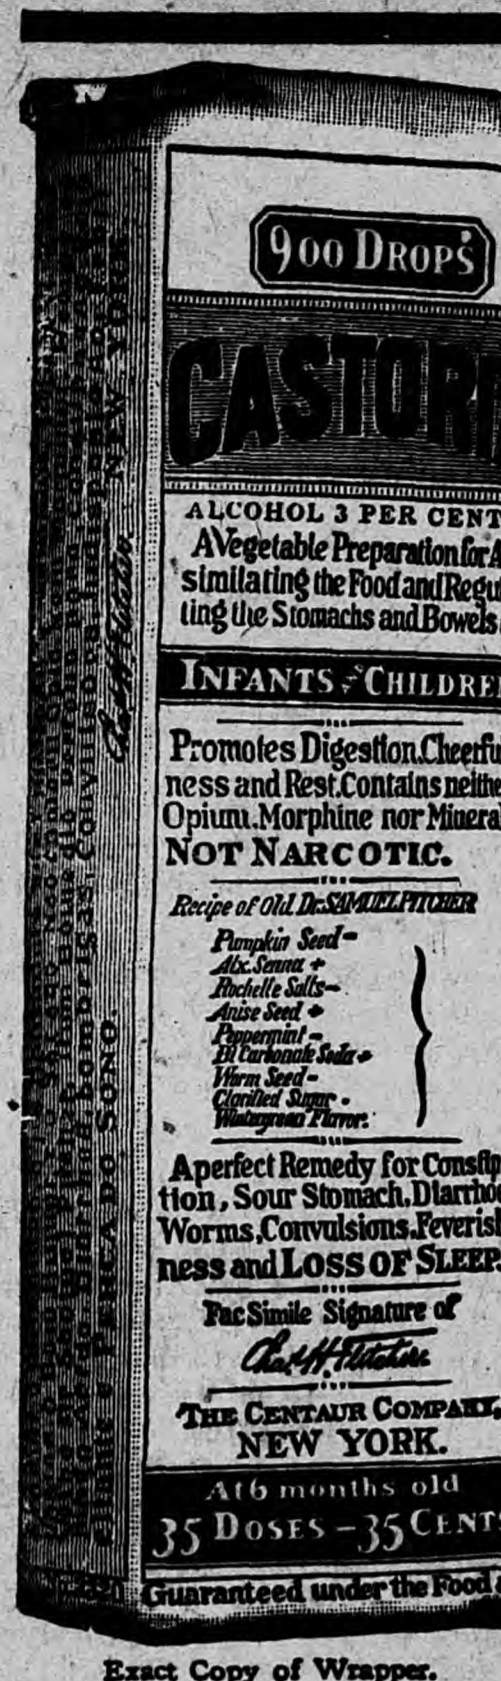

Plowed Up Everywhere.

Have your horse's teeth attended to by a veterinarian at least once a year. Spread the grain out thin in a large, shallow feed box to prevent the horse from eating too fast.

A black soil owes its color to the presence of organic matter. This means that the soil is well supplied with nitrogen. In some black soils, however, there is an excess of noxious salts, as in the case of "black alkali" soils.

In carrying a dead hog or sheep take a horseshoe in each hand, let the person on the opposite side put his hands underneath the animal and also take hold of the shoes. This way does not cramp the fingers like taking hold of hands.

Burlap bought for 4 cents a pound is a good thing for heading barrels. Take the wooden hoop off the barrel, but not the wire hoop immediately below it. Spread the burlap over the top, pound the wooden hoop on, nail it and trim the burlap off within three or four inches of the edge.
