THE TRIER CONCERT

And Opera Quintette, Urban's Opera House, Friday, March 10th.

The Young Men's Club of the M. P. Church are indeed fortunate in booking the above attraction if we can but believe the reports that have gone before. This quintette consists of five sisters. One of them is a reader, most of whose selections are humorous; the other four will give musical selections consisting of solos, duets and quartettes, also selections from the Operas. The fact that the company are also booked at Pocomoke and Show Hill reduces the cost of the production to a minimum, and the prices of seats will only be 35 and 50 cents. This Young Men's Club has brought good entertainments here in the past, and we are sure that this will be no exception to the rule.

Reception Monday Evening.

A delightful reception was given on Monday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Ray Disharoon, at their home on Smith Street, in honor of their fourth wedding anniversary at which about fifty guests were present. A musical program was rendered by an orchestra and selections were sung by Misses Irma Tindie, Sallie Elliott, and Mesars. Raymond Wimbrow, Geo. Richardson, and Percy Dashiell. Miss Nancy White recited. The house was beautifully decorated with palms and potted plants. Mr. and Mrs. Disharoon were assisted in entertaining by Mr. and Mrs. George Turner, Misses Irma Tindie, Blanche Dayton and Sallie Elliott. Refreshments were served at 10.30. Many pretty and useful presents were received.

Improving Drug Store.

Contractor John W. Windsor began work Tuesday on extensive improvements to John M. Toulson's drug store. The front is being changed so as to afford entrances to the second and third floors and also the basement. The two upper floors will be fitted up as business offices and the basement will be finished so it can be utilized for some purpose not yet decided upon.

BURNS PROVE FATAL.

J. Roy Johnson Loses Life. Result Of A Gasoline Explosion.

J. Roy Johnson, one of Wicomico's most popular men lost his life this week as a result of burns sustained late Saturday afternoon in a gasoline explosion. Mr. Johnson had been at work on the new road being built between this city and Delmar and was fixing everything before leaving for home after the day's work. Just how the accident occurred can only be surmised as the unfortunate victim was alone at the time. According to two of his co-workers he had rolled the engine to one side of the road and thrown water on the damped fire. At this point these parties left him and the last seen of Johnson before the accident by them, was his approach to the gasoline tank with a bucket in hand. Whether the explosion was caused by too near approach on his part to the smoldering fire or from a lighted pipe, or the heat of the machinery which he was in the habit of cleaning with gasoline will never be known. The men who were with him up to the point of his drawing the gasoline had only proceeded some three hundred or more yards when they were attracted by the cries of an old colored woman who had seen the blaze.

The flames from the exploded gasoline instantaneously enveloped him and without assistance he was entirely at the mercy of the fierce flames. He made desperate efforts to pull off his burning clothing. Seeing that his efforts were of no avail, he ran to an open field, where the ground was moist and endeavored to extinguish the flames by rolling over in the soft earth. His frantic cries finally attracted the attention of some workmen, who hastened to his aid, but the clothing had burned almost entirely from the man's body from his head to his feet. He was hastily wrapped in sheets and blankets procured from nearby farm houses and was rushed to the Peninsula General Hospital in Mr. Bayninger's automobile, which happened to be passing at the time. It was evident to the doctors who dressed the wounds that the young man was in a most critical condition and little hope was entertained for his recovery. He passed away at 7 o'clock Sunday morning.

Deceased was a son of the late John D. and Lizzie White Johnson and was 29 years of age on February 15. He was born in Salisbury and spent his entire life here. For several years he had been connected with the county's road in contracting work and was a valuable man in his position. Four years ago he married Mrs. Guthrie, widow of Benjamin Guthrie, who survives, with one sister Miss Alice Johnson of New York City.

Roy was one of the most popular young men in Salisbury. He was kind and obliging with a cheerful disposition which won many friends, whose friendship he retained. There is universal sorrow at his untimely demise.

Mr. Johnson was a Democrat and an active worker in his party. He was a member of several fraternal organizations in this city, among them the Red Men, who officiated at the funeral.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at his late home on Newton Street, conducted by Rev. W. T. M. Beale and Rev. T. E. Martindale D. D. Interment was in Parsons Cemetery. Beautiful floral tributes were sent by relatives and friends.

Outbuildings Burned.

Sunday last fire broke out in the stables on the George Hitch farm and destroyed all the outbuildings. The origin of the fire seems to be a mystery, but it is supposed to have happened by some one smoking around the buildings. Mr. John Bailey, of Quantico, lost a horse in the burning of the stables. It seems he had hired a team to a young man who drove to the home of Mr. Pollitt, who lived on the farm, and by there exchanged the horse for one of Mr. Pollitt's and when the fire broke out the horse was burned with the stables. The loss is considerable, as much corn and fodder, farming implements, wagons, etc. were consumed. It is not known if there was any insurance on the property.

CAROLINE FARMERS BANK

On Potatoes. Believe The Crop Will Be A Profitable One This Year.

Caroline farmers are looking forward to a profitable potato season, and in anticipation of good prices, a heavy acreage will be planted. Last year many of them took up potato culture as a promising development in local agriculture, and although prices were disappointing, owing to an overstocked market, reports from other potato producing regions to the effect that the acreage there will be curtailed have encouraged local growers to believe that the coming season will be a money making one.

Heretofore the planting of this crop in this locality, for disposal in the city markets, has been largely experimental; but it has been found that in many places the soil is peculiarly adapted to good yields, and that the crop can be put in the ground, cultivated and harvested by the use of machinery, with the minimum of hired labor—which is an acute question on the Eastern Shore, as well as in other Maryland farming regions. As a general thing it is claimed that an acre will grow 60 barrels of potatoes at a cost of one dollar a barrel for raising and marketing, and the average selling price for a term of years has been $3, thus affording a clear profit of $50 an acre. The potato crop, too, allows the land to be given over to other profitable uses. Several hundred acres were granted last year west of the Choptank river, in the neighborhood of Greensboro and Ridgely, and potato growing this year will be engaged in, in that region on a larger scale. A produce exchange has been organized at Denton, and a number of farmers on that side of the river will engage extensively in truck farming.

School Board Proceedings At Friday's Meet.

Commissioner Jones reported that the committee appointed at the last meeting had visited Hebron and investigated the needs of the school at that place. The committee recommended that one room and a tower entrance for cloak room be added to the present building and a cement walk laid in front of the school lot and to the front door of the school. Also that the Board give fifteen feet for a part of a street on the west side, and all that part of the lot lying on the west side of the ditch which drains the property, provided the owners thereof will give the board enough land to extend the school lot fifty feet to the north. The report was approved. Further action was deferred until funds are in sight.

At the request of the High School Teachers' Association permission was granted the teachers of the Wicomico High School to attend the meeting of the Association in Baltimore on March 10th.

The Board agreed to furnish the material for an addition to Parker's School for manual training, library and cloak room, provided the patrons will do the work or pay for the necessary labor.

A committee of two trustees, of Sharpsburg colored school came before the Board to ask for a new four-room house, the patrons offering to furnish free the framing and shingles, sheathing and stage boards, and to receive the old school house in exchange. They also agreed to furnish free an additional acre of land. The matter was held under advisement.

The remainder of the session was devoted to a discussion of building plans and the Board's finances.

Death Of Mrs. S. E. Davis.

After a lingering illness of several months, Mrs. Sarah Ellen Davis, widow of the late Edward E. Davis, died on Monday last at the home of her daughter, in North Carolina at the advanced age of nearly 89 years. Since her husband's death, four years ago, Mrs. Davis had been spending the winter months with her children in the South, and would return each spring to her much-loved home in Salisbury, just opposite the Home for the Aged where she has lived for more than fifty years.

The deceased had from childhood been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and her life was in full accord with her profession. She is survived by two sons (Messrs. Charles E. Davis, of Pocomoke, Va., and Joseph E. Davis, of this city) and one daughter (Mrs. Theodora W. Tilghman, of Wilson, N. C.).

Funeral services were held at her late home on Thursday afternoon, Dr. T. E. Martindale officiating, and interment was made in Parsons Cemetery.

JOHN HITCH DISAPPEARS

Leaves Wife On Street—A Prosperous Nutter's District Farmer.

This community was startled on Saturday night by Mrs. Hitch, wife of a prominent farmer living within two miles of Fruitland, appeal to our authorities to find her husband, Mr. John Hitch, who had left her in front of the 5 and 10 cent store, promising to return within a few minutes. Rumors of all kinds were afloat, and it was feared that he had met foul play, but while nothing has been heard of him since his sudden disappearance on Saturday evening, the full play theory is not generally believed in.

It is reported that there had been a misunderstanding with his family and his sudden departure was not entirely unlooked for. According to the reports, Mr. Hitch had told his wife that he was going to leave and that it would not be any use to look for him as he would never be found.

Mrs. Hitch came to town with him on Saturday evening, and being suspicious of his actions, she followed him on his rounds in South Salisbury, where he went early in the evening to collect his rents. He is said to have drawn a considerable sum of money out of the bank before his disappearance.

Mr. Hitch's family consists of his wife and two children, one a boy about sixteen years of age and the other a girl fourteen years old—just the age of her mother when she was married to Mr. Hitch.

Mr. Hitch was a thrifty, hard-working farmer, who, by his economy and thrift had accumulated some ten to fifteen thousand dollars, chiefly invested in farms and dwelling houses in South Salisbury.

FLIGHT ACROSS SEA.

Twenty Would Have Airmen Make Trip Over The Atlantic In Relays.

Flying from New York to England will be a fact next summer if W. Irving Trowbly, a wealthy engineer, carries out plans he has announced at his laboratory, 130 East Forty-first Street, New York. For several months he has been working on a monoplane of his own design.

One of these aeroplanes is nearly ready. A 75-horse power motor was installed in it. In a few weeks it will be shipped to Belmont Park, where daily flights will be made until the time for starting across the ocean comes. Mr. Trowbly plans to have three or four aviators make the flight in relays.

Platforms, according to Mr. Trowbly, will be built on the decks of three or four steamers, on which the landings and starts will be made in midocean. Each aeroplane will be provided with pontoons, so that it will be able to alight in the sea if it will maintain aloft until assistance comes.

"It is no idle dream," said Mr. Trowbly. "Flight across the ocean, as I have suggested, can readily be accomplished. Men have flown for eight hours steadily at approximately fifty miles an hour. I am sure that by using three or four aviators, with the same number of machines, the American continent can be joined by air line with Europe. I have serious intentions of carrying out this project."

THE HARRY DENNIS

Shoe Company—New Firm Incorporated Papers Now Being Prepared.

Papers are in the course of preparation for the incorporation of the shoe business now carried on by Mr. Harry Dennis. It is understood that the new company is to have an authorized capital stock of $15,000, $5,000 of which is to be paid up. Mr. Dennis will take a large block of the stock, the remainder of which has been subscribed for by a number of our business men.

It is stated that the new company will be in active operation in a few days. The directors will be Messrs. Harry Dennis, W. B. Tilghman, Jr., J. H. L. Pries, W. A. Crow and Vandalia Perry.

Concert And Opera Company On March 10th.

For the third time the Young Men's Club of the M. P. Church, are about to come before the public with an entertainment. Salisbury people remember with a great deal of pleasure the one of two years ago, a male quartette and humorist; also the lecture by ex-Governor Glenn last winter.

This time the young men have booked "Trier Concerts and Opera Quintette." This company consists of five sisters, really-truly a star; two pairs of twins and only thirty-five months between the oldest and the youngest. The entertainment will consist of quartettes, duets, solos, vocal solos and readings. The price of seats will be 50 and 75 cents. We are sure the concert will be a good one and we predict a packed house on March 10th.

HOW I WAS CURED OF SCROFULA

"I was in a very bad condition with scrofulous swellings round my neck. It started with a bunch on the side of my neck and it kept growing until the whole side of my face was swollen."

"I had tried everything in the shape of medicines for five years. I had gone under an operation in one of the hospitals in Boston and had them cut out. I had thirty little tubular glands taken from back of my ear down my shoulder. After the cuts healed over they started to come again and worse than before."

"After suffering so much I thought I would try Pinkham's Blood Purifier and before I had taken two bottles there was a great change in the swellings. I continued its use and to-day I am a well woman. Every word of this is true."

"I cannot speak too highly in praise of Pinkham's Blood Purifier."

—Mrs. W. H. HAYNES, 38 Adams Avenue, Everett, Mass.

The tendency to Scrofula seems to be hereditary and it is hard to overcome. It may lie dormant for years, and then break out anew from time to time.

The only known remedy for Scrofula is to keep the blood pure and rich by the use of a good blood purifier. It may require long treatment, but Mrs. Haynes found that Pinkham's Blood Purifier cured her of this dreadful disease, after all other means had failed.

Pinkham's Blood Purifier is equally as good for all diseases emanating from impure, impoverished blood, and is the best Spring medicine known. People will find the Blood Purifier just as reliable a remedy as the women of the world have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Unequalled—satisfying and dependable.

CHAPTER III

A FAIR GALLUP OF MEMORIES

A churlish fate decreed it that that Blount was not to have Gentry for a traveling companion beyond Chicago. On the second day of westward faring the railroad man, whose business followed him wherever he went, had instructions to meet Mr. Hardwick McViekar, his vice president, in the Illinois metropolis, and on the morning of the following day Blount continued his journey alone.

Twenty-four hours later the ex-patriated wanderer had crossed the Missouri river, at Omaha, and had entered upon scenes which ought to have been familiar—should have been and were not, so many and great were the changes wrought during his fourteen years of absence. In the smoking car he fell into talk with a prosperous looking man whose thin, hawklike face was so out of keeping with the air of prosperity—a lone passenger who had boarded the train at Omaha.

At first their conversation was baldly desultory. The hawk faced one, it seemed, was a mine owner whose property, vaguely located somewhere "in the mountains," was involved in litigation. It was the reference to the litigation which first drew Blount beyond the commonplace, the awakened interest being wholly professional.

Oddly enough, since he had never expected to see it, he had specialized somewhat in mining law, and before many miles had been clicked off under the drumming trucks of the Pullman he found himself giving opinions and laying down plans of procedure for the man who, investing in mines, had apparently purchased more trouble than profits.

Into the cleft thus opened by the ax of business the hawk faced man inserted a wedge of cautious inquiry. In addition to his mining properties, he had been making investments in timberlands—had investments, he feared, since the government had lately taken such a decided stand against the cutting of timber in the new forest reserves.

Again Blount was good naturedly helpful. One of his classmates in the law school had been preparing himself to enter the legal branch of the forest service, and Blount had acquired at second hand a working knowledge of the forestry situation in the west and of the legal status of the western timber lands. Moreover, he had very clear and decided opinions upon the question of the conservation of the nation's timber resources, and he was frank enough to express them emphatically.

If he had been less unsuspicious he might have remarked the quickened attention of the prosperous looking person who seemed so willing to take advice from a chance acquaintance.

"If you were a government man yourself you could hardly put the case stronger," was the smiling commentary of this person, who was as yet nameless to Blount.

"How do you know I am not a government man?" said the expatriate, willing enough to play the game as the cards should fall.

"Because you are not traveling on government transportation," was the shrewd reply.

"You can't tell anything by that," Blount said, laughing. "A good many are away to the right he heard the sound of galloping hoofs. Though the moon was nearly at its full and the treeless landscape was bare of any kind of cover, he could not see the horseman who was evidently passing him and going in the same direction.

At first he thought it was some one who was making a detour to avoid him. Then he smiled at the absurdity of the thought and concluded that he himself was of the trail.

This conclusion was confirmed a little later when two other travelers, announcing themselves to the car as the first one had done and also, like the first, invisible to the sharpest eye sweep of the brown plain, passed him at speed.

After that he had the solitude and immensity to himself, and it was not until the broad green had been crossed and the broncho was picking its way among the hogback hills of the west, ergo range that the boyish thing he had been led to look shape as a venture which might have discomforting consequences, for after the broncho had wandered through many canyons and had climbed a good half score of the hogback hills the young man from the east reluctantly admitted that the boyhood memories were altogether at fault in the deceptive moonlight. He was very thoroughly and painstakingly lost.

WORLD BETTER. Although I believe that the millennium is far away, I also believe that the world was never better than it is today and that it is growing better every day. The public conscience, which is keener and more active than ever before, is responsible for the growth in civic righteousness, and good government depends on the activity and aggressiveness of the average citizen.—Joseph W. Paine.

At the dining car, which was served while the Pullman of the main range, were still in the crimson air, gold of the sunset. Blount missed his luncheon.

Now that he recalled it he remembered that he had seen nothing of the hawk faced man since the early afternoon. But the absence of companionship was a relief rather than a deprivation.

Almost without knowing it he found himself hastening through his dinner so that he might return to the Pullman window. When at length he had the longed for sight of a bunch of cattle, with the solitary herd hanging by the leg in the saddle to watch the passing train, the call of the west was once more trumpeting in his ears.

At a small timber shipping station well within the mountains where the logs were shot down to the mills in a trough-like water chute from the wooded heights twenty miles distant there was a longer stop than usual, and Blount got off to make inquiries.

There was a freight wreck at some point a few miles farther west, and the train would probably be delayed for some time.

By this time Blount was on well remembered ground. Forty miles away in a direction somewhat east of north lay the Blount home domain, where he had spent his happy boyhood. An hour's gallop to the westward the level rays of the setting sun would be playing upon the little station of Painted Hat, which had been the shipping point for the home ranch.

And halfway between Painted Hat and the Circle Bar lay the home corral of one Debbely, a hermit of the mountains and the boy Evan's earliest schoolmaster in the great book of nature.

Since Blount could not go on by train, what to prevent the taking of an immediate and delightful plunge into the land of heart stirring recollections?

Arranging with the Pullman conductor to have his hand baggage left in Gentry's office at the capital, Blount crossed quickly to a livery stable opposite the station, bargained for a saddle horse, borrowed a poncho and a pair of leggings and presently, with the squeak of the saddle leather making sweet music in his ears, had broken violently for the moment at least, with all the civilized traditions.

He would go to see Debbely; drop in upon the old ranchman without warning and thus get his first taste of the homeland unmixed with any of the disappointing changes which were doubtless awaiting him at the real journey's end.

Now, it chanced that the livery stable was an adjunct to the single hotel in the small sawmill town, and as Blount swung up into the saddle he was a little surprised to see his companion of the Pullman smoking compartment standing on the porch of the hotel in earnest talk with three others who from their appearance might have figured either as "timber jacks" or cowboys.

Blount was on the point of speaking when he rode past the porch on his way to the northward trail pointed out by the liveryman, but a curious feeling restrained him.

He was almost sure that the prosperous looking gentleman with the bird of prey eyes was making him the subject of his earnest talk with the three men of doubtful occupation.

Quite naturally this impression deepened into a conviction when he looked back from the road crossing of the railroad track and saw that all four of the men on the porch were watching him.

After leaving the railroad, Blount found himself crossing the broad mesa, with the eastern mountains near at hand, and the Lost river range struck out sharply in its sky line against the sunset horizon.

On this mesa the trail disappeared entirely, but so long as he was sure of the general direction of it, he went and gave the tireless little broncho a loose rein. Debbely's ranch lay among the foothills of the distant western range, and he was quite sure that he could ride straight to it in the dark if need be.

It was some little time after he had left the shoulders of the eastern range behind that a curious thing happened.

Far away to the right he heard the sound of galloping hoofs. Though the moon was nearly at its full and the treeless landscape was bare of any kind of cover, he could not see the horseman who was evidently passing him and going in the same direction.

At first he thought it was some one who was making a detour to avoid him. Then he smiled at the absurdity of the thought and concluded that he himself was of the trail.

This conclusion was confirmed a little later when two other travelers, announcing themselves to the car as the first one had done and also, like the first, invisible to the sharpest eye sweep of the brown plain, passed him at speed.

After that he had the solitude and immensity to himself, and it was not until the broad green had been crossed and the broncho was picking its way among the hogback hills of the west, ergo range that the boyish thing he had been led to look shape as a venture which might have discomforting consequences, for after the broncho had wandered through many canyons and had climbed a good half score of the hogback hills the young man from the east reluctantly admitted that the boyhood memories were altogether at fault in the deceptive moonlight. It was precisely at this point, as Blount remembered afterward, that the forestry subject was dropped. Later on, after the talk had drifted back to mining and from mining to politics, the hawk faced man announced his intention of going back to his section in the body of the car to take a nap.

A little further along toward evening the great range which had been visible for hours in the west began to define itself in pink and high, bald shoulders of violet swept mesas, and Blount was glad to find some strips of

OTTUMWA WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrible. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to you for my cure."—Mrs. HARRIET E. WATKINS, 38 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Consider This Advice. No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous medicine, made only from roots and herbs, has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtues of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, confidential, and always helpful.

POVERTY TO BE OBSOLETE

Says Dr. Hollander. Charitable Methods Now in Vogue Lessening Causes Of Destitution.

Dr. Jacob H. Hollander, professor of economics of the Johns Hopkins University, predicted that a day will come when poverty will be as obsolete as slavery. In an address at the annual meeting of the Hebrew Benevolent Society at the Jewish Charities Building, this opinion, he said, he based upon his historical studies and his personal investigation of charitable methods in vogue today. He insisted that the modern world is wrong in believing that poverty is inevitable, just as the ancient world has been proved wrong in believing that slavery was inevitable.

Getting At Causes.

The effort now being made to get at the causes of poverty, he said, is in the right direction and will lead to a solution of the whole problem. So deeply was the impression made by his prediction that he was asked after the meeting if he had been misunderstood. "No," he replied, "I believe that the modern world will see the end of poverty."

Scope Of The World Widened.

There was disappointment when Prof. Jacob H. Hollander of Johns Hopkins University announced that he would retire as president after two years' service. He pointed out that the scope of the organization had greatly increased in that time and that the point of view of charitable work had changed, and now the aim was to get at the causes of destitution and to work out general remedies as well as specific prevention of individual cases. The society, he said, is on a firm financial basis; the endowment fund amounted to about $100,000. The need, he pointed out, was for more funds for emergency use than for endowment.

"We have grown to look on poverty as a permanent condition," he said, "but there was a time when poverty was regarded as a necessary condition. Even Plato, in his vision of an ideal commonwealth included slavery. I believe some day the future generations will look back on the poverty of our day in the same astonishment we feel in contemplating slavery. The philosophy of history points in this direction."

New York's Great Pennsylvania Station.

One of the greatest works of modern times was the construction of the concrete lined steel tubes under the Hudson and East Rivers, the tunnelling of Manhattan Island, and the erection of the magnificent Pennsylvania Station at Seventh Avenue and Thirty-second Street, New York, bringing the through trains of the Pennsylvania Railroad into the heart of New York City.

An illustrated booklet describing this great work, and telling what it means to the New York passenger, has been issued by the Pennsylvania Railroad and will be sent postpaid to any address by George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa., on receipt of a two cent stamp. Send for it.

A NEW ERA.

To pass judgement on current events is easy enough, but to early weigh them and give to each its due place in history is entirely a different matter. To some it seems that we are entering into a new political era, where the right is bound to win and the wrong to be driven out of public life. Others see but little if any improvement and only regard the various uprising of the people against corrupt rule as sporadic efforts, sure to fade when the edge is worn off their first virtuous indignation, and that then the old gang will come back into its own again more hungry than ever for the rich picking from the public's crib.

Some even argue that it is but poor policy to turn out a gang no matter how corrupt it may be, giving as their reason that these men have been enriched at the public's expense and that it would be poor policy to turn over the machinery to a new gang which would have to be supplied from the beginning with the good things of life. The signs of the times must, however, be misleading; indeed if a new and better era in politics and government is not at hand.

Political bores are having the fight of their lives from one end of the country to the other. Many of them have been howled over and many more are apparently upon the brink of disaster. Not in those places where the new influences have supplanted those of the past can we see as yet any sign of reaction, but rather that of progress stimulated by success.

No responsible man of any party will deny that in the past decade or so our government has been mainly in the hands of our large special interests, who have so manipulated it that they enjoyed special privileges. Today it looks as though they would have to surrender many of these special privileges which they have enjoyed in the past and run their business upon a fair and square basis without asking or receiving anything more than a square deal from our government.

One of the most convincing evidences of this will be found in the recent decision of the Interstate Commerce Court, refusing to allow the freight rates asked for by the Railroads. Not so much in the mere fact of the denial of the raise as in the reasons given for the refusal. The Commission made it plain that the burden of proof that a higher rate was needed in order to meet legitimate expenses and pay to the stockholders a reasonable return upon their investment, rested upon the railroad; and that first they must show that the road was economically and properly run, and that the question of return on the stock could not be gone into without evidence of its real value was produced. The inference would seem to be that the public could not be expected to pay dividends on the water poured in most of our corporations by unscrupulous and unprincipled promoters.

This is taking a big step forward, and while it may work a hardship on many an innocent stockholder, is the only right and fair way to view our water bloated corporations; and the answer we get down to a fair basis by placing an actual valuation according to their real and intrinsic worth before us we will be.

Let the water be squeezed out of our railroads, telephone companies and all other semi-public corporations and then allow a fair return on the real value.

And let us not forget to profit by the lessons of the past, and from now on that no unscrupulous and unprincipled promoter or stock jobber add water to any of our corporations now formed or to be hereafter organized. Let us not be discouraged by temporary rebuffs and setbacks; the change can not be brought about in a moment's notice, nor can the leaders of the better methods in our politics hope to win every battle, but by keeping the fight warm the efforts of our reactionary opponents will be less and less availing and though our large vested interests will not surrender until they have to, the battle will finally be won, and history will credit this as a new era where higher ideals and nobler thoughts supplanted the notions of our public men.

Deaf and Dumb —and Blind

By Paul Calvin Anderson

Copyright, 1926, by Associated Literary Press

When the tide is out, at Palm Beach hundreds of hotel guests walk
up and down the hard, wet sands.
Others speed up and down in their autos. Others still, sit on hired chairs and gaze out seaward and imagine they can hear the songs of mermaids.

On a certain day in the present twentieth century Philip Gillett was among those who walked. He was a young man at the beach with his mother and sister, and his occupation
when at home in New York was preparing himself for architecture. He did that mostly by looking at one of two skyscrapers a day from the outside and spending $500 per week allowed by his father. It was his father who had insisted that the young man take up architecture. There never had been an architect in the Gillett family, and he wanted one.

He had a minor house, and he wanted a henry built, and he wanted to point to it after it was finished and say "A Gillett did that!"

On this particular day Philip Gillett
had toothache and he set out to walk
it off. His sister had told him to hold a wad of cotton saturated with peppermint essence in his mouth, and to keep his mouth shut. He thought a good deal of his sister, and he was obeying her.

Toothache affects a person peculiarly—particularly a man. It gives him what is known as a grouch. He wants to stand on the beach and see a dentist drown in the sea. He isn't to blame, but everybody else is. And what made young Mr. Gillett grouchy still was the fact that he had to chew
cotton and keep his mouth shut. It was not dignified. It was taking andus advantage of a fellow.

Among those who motored that day
were Miss Edna Blair and Miss Kitty Waldron, girl chumps. They were in

Resorted to More Peppermint.

Miss Kitty's auto, and she was running it herself. After getting out of the crowd, and heading up the shore,
they saw a young man half a mile ahead of them. He was scuffling along on the hard track and was in their path. The honk! honk! was sounded,
they saw a young man half a mile
ahead of them. He was scuffling along
on the hard track and was in their path. The honk! honk! was sounded,

he paid no attention. He wanted
tooth smashed out.

The automobile passed him within two feet and in spite of himself he gave a jump and swallowed the peppermint-soaked wad of cotton. He then had to produce more cotton and
more peppermint for his aching tooth.
Mr. Gillett's walk had extended two miles when he sat down on a hum-mock and resorted to more peppermint. His sister was right; it began to have a soothing effect! He began to feel glad that he was alive and away from the snow heaps of New York city. Just then he caught sight of the auto returning. As it drew near, he saw that Miss Edna Blair
was piously good looking and that Miss Kitty Waldron was more so. The auto was aiming to pass him within a few feet, but that was all right. He reasoned that the girls desired a nearer view of the young man, whom they had so frightened, and he was right
about it. They didn't seem to see him, of course, but that was false
pretense.

And after that fate stepped in. The auto was exactly opposite Philip to an inch, and exactly six feet and one inch and a half away, when a front tire exploded with a bang. Two young ladies screamed. The auto ran wild until half buried in the sand.
The young man was blown over on his back by the concussion and swallowed his wad of cotton for the second time in an hour.

He would have been less than human if he hadn't arisen with a face
as red as paint and cross all the way through. He grabbed for his hat and might have gone running over the sand dunes had not a sweet and plaintive voice reached his ears.

"Oh, sir, please do help us! We have burst a tire!"
Yes, he would help. As a gentleman he must do so; but he made up his mind to do no more. That is, he wouldn't speak a word to those girls.
They had fed him on cotton, so to speak, and he would have his revenge.
He advanced and raised his hat. Then
he inspected the tire.

"I hope you were not hit by one of the flying pieces," said Miss Kitty in her most ingratiating manner.

No reply.
"Will we have to walk back to the hotel?"

No answer.
"You see we have a spare tire
here."

No answer.

Mr. Gillett owned an auto himself.
In fact, his mother and sister were down the beach in it at that very moment. He knew all about tires.
He took the jack from his place, and without motioning the girls to descend he went at it and had the tire replaced inside of 15 minutes. He might have done it in ten except for overhearing such observations as:
"Say, Edna, he must be deaf."

"Yes, deaf as an old tin can."

"And he hasn't spoken a word. Do you think he's also dumb?"

"He looks it."

"Poor young man! It's just awful!
He's got considerable style about him."

"Oh, I don't know. Wantn't it funny to see him go over on his back?
If his hat hadn't blown off he'd have swallowed it!"

"Hush, you bad girl! I'll tell you what he is. He's a professor in some deaf and dumb school. And he owns an auto, too. See how handy he is.
I wish we hadn't frightened him so."

"If we had scared him worse, he might have got his voice and hearing back. Think what it would be to marry a deaf and dumb man! Are you going to thank him?"

"Not in words, but I'll just look
my thanks."

As Mr. Gillett finished and stood back and raised his hat the thanks
were duly looked and the auto whizzed along. He followed at a slow pace. The toothache was all gone, but he had been humiliated. He had been made to jump aside like a tan-garoo; he had been blown flat on his back; he had been made to swallow wads of cotton; he had almost
been called names to his very face.
No wonder he wouldn't speak to his sister for an hour after getting back to the hotel, and that his mother laid her maternal hand on his locks and
said:

"Philip, I hope you won't go into a decline, as your grandfather did at this very place."

There is fate and there is revenge.
Fate had come—revenge had to wait
a day or two. Then the sister came running to Philip.

"Oh, Phil!" she exclaimed: "I've
met just the nicest girl you ever saw!
She's stopping at the Royal. I've invited her to take a spin in the auto, and you are to be chauffeur. I want you to meet her."

As the aching tooth had gone out of business and the world looked rosy again, Philip consented, though entirely to please the sister. They differed on the girl question.

It was only when they had rolled around to the hotel and picked up their passenger that Mr. Philip Gillett would have swallowed a whole roll of cotton bawling and it been handy. She was the girl of the other auto—the girl who had looked her
thanks—Miss Kitty Waldron!

Mr. Gillett tried to say things, and Miss Waldron did likewise, and the sister sat there and wondered if both of them had toothache. And when they got back at last and Mr. Gillett assisted Miss Waldron up the steps of the veranda, she turned to him to say:

"Sir, have you any explanations to make?"

"I have, and will call this evening
to make them."

The explanations must have proven satisfactory, as an auto ride became a thing of daily occurrence thereafter, and the season had not yet closed
when Miss Gillett put her arms around her brother's neck and murmured:

"Oh, Phil, I'm so glad—so glad! I just hoped you two would take each other, and now you have!"

A spanking chair.

Although the spanking post is a thing of the past, the principle is revised and modern form and judiciously applied is expected to work wonders in enforcing good behavior upon some of the worst offenders brought before the juvenile court.

A "spanking chair" has been set up
in the basement of the juvenile home at Columbus, O., and Edna Blair was the first to occupy it. He promised to be good for all time when he had been given a good "dressing," and he was instructed to relate his experience to other lads who have an inclination to be very, very naughty.

The juvenile court paddle consists of a long leather strap, wide and heavy, and it is bound with felt so that the edges will not cut or bruise
the flesh. The paddle swings right, but leaves no marks, and is much more humane than a switch or a slip-
per—and more effective.

The Thoughts of Youth.

A small boy was hoeing corn in a sterile field by the roadside, when a passerby stopped and said:

"Pears to me your corn is rather small."

"Certainly," said the boy, "it's dwarf corn."

"But it looks yellor."

"Certainly," he planted the yellor kind."

"But it looks as if you wouldn't get more than half a crop."

"Of course not, we planted it on halves," everybody's Magazine.

Train Calculation.

INDUSTRY & MECHANICS
LAWN OR WEED MOWER.
Convenient Machine Which Can Be
Made Out of Old Field Mower.

Anyone having an old field mower
and a few metal-working tools can make a good lawn and weed mower.
The following parts of the old machine will be needed: The driving wheels and shaft, a portion of the cutter-bar,

Made from an Old Field Mower.

including knives and fingers, bolts,
nuts, and any other part which can be used, says Popular Mechanics, depending on the make of the old machine.
Procure a strip of sheet steel, Fig.
1, 6 inches wide, about 1-32 inches thick, and long enough to go around
the circumference of the driving wheels. Cut this along the wave line AB and rivet the two pieces to the two driving wheels as shown at AA, Fig. 2. These should be riveted to the wheels in a position such that the crest on one side will be opposite the trough on the other.

The frame B is made of wood, also the handle, C. The piece D can be made of either wood or iron, and is fitted with a roller at each end to reduce the friction against the cams, AA. Two wheels, EE, about six inches in diameter and three-inch face, are fastened to the front of the machine in order to prevent the cutters from striking the ground.

The driving wheel must be in the

RUNS BIG SAWMILL.
The Biggest Belt in the World Made

It was made in Chicago and runs a saw mill at Tacoma, Wash. It is 114 feet long, seven feet wide, three-fourths inch thick, weighs 2,300 pounds, and 235 steers contributed the centers of their hides to make it. Notwithstanding its size and weight, and the tremendous strains to which it is subjected,

TO DIG INTO A LIVE VOLCANO.

And Build a Breakwater With the Foaming Molten Lava at Hawaii.

Volcanoes have ever been considered sources of tremendous destructive force, uncontrollable in their action and of no useful purpose to man.
The unusual and daring proposition
is now made to make at least one active volcano perform constructive
work of positive commercial value.
The idea seems to have been adapted
from the familiar one of drawing molten iron from a furnace and conducting it along the earthen floor
through shallow open trenches into molded spaces, where it cools and
becomes the pig iron of trade.

Hilo is the important seaport on the east coast of the Island of Hawaii,
in the Sandwich Islands group. Its harbor facilities are insufficient to meet the demands of present day commerce, and in order to provide suitable shelter, great breakwaters must be constructed at large cost. Congress has been petitioned to make the necessary appropriation, but so far

has not advanced beyond an order
for a preliminary survey. The people of Hilo evidently realize that Congress is a long way off and unless action is secured soon, propose to tap
an active volcano on the island and make it furnish the material and do
the work of construction at the same time. If the plan works a great seawall will have been built, of greater extent and weight than any ever before constructed by human skill.

The idea is to construct a big trench from Mount Kilauea to the shore and then tunnel into the pit of one of the craters and release the molten lava. Just as a furnaceman opens a cupola when making pig iron,
One difference will be that when the founder uses a long iron rod to poke
a hole, the volcano is to be opened by letting off a big charge of high explosives.

Notwithstanding the somewhat fishy
nature of the story, it is stated "engineers who have been considering
the scheme are strongly inclined to the opinion that it is not impracticable." One thing is certain, Popular Mechanics says, there will be plenty of Yankee engineers who will not hesitate to undertake so difficult and dangerous a venture, if the necessary funds are provided.

Limit of Human Strength.

Experiments upon a number of men
have shown that a man five feet high
and weighing 150 pounds will lift on an average 150 pounds through a vertical distance of eight inches, or 217
pounds through a height of 12 inches.
Others 6 feet high and weighing 183 pounds could lift the 150 pounds to a height of thirteen inches, or 217 pounds to a height of six inches. Other men six feet three inches high and weighing 188 pounds could lift 156
pounds to a height of sixteen inches,
or 217 pounds to a height of nine inches. By a gross variety of experiments it was shown that the average human strength is equivalent to raising thirty pounds through a distance of two and one-half feet in one second.

Harnessing Waters in India.
Engineers are harnessing many of
the waters of the world to the use of man. A great project is under way to catch the floods which rush down
the western Ghats, near Bombay, and
to use the water-power in cotton mills
and other factories. The valleys are
of rocky formation, and with dams at
the lower end can be made into tight reservoirs. Three valleys will be closed in by dams respectively half a mile, a mile, and a mile and a half long.

What Niagara Falls Costs.
To an electrical engineer the beauty of the falls is somewhat dimmed as he reflects that the 3,500,000 horsepower is worth more than $100,000, 000 a year.

READ THIS.

The following is an extract from a letter just received from our Flour Mill in Ohio:

"The more we learn what other mills are doing in the way of grades, the more we are convinced that you are about the only dealer in your territory who is selling a strictly high-grade fancy Patent, and this is undoubtedly the reason why you are able to do as large a volume of business as you are doing.
It is really surprising the quantity of flour you have sold since harvest, in the face of the extremely low prices made by your local mills, and by other mills from the West, which you compete. But, as stated above, we think the only reason for it is your grade of flour, which is in a class by itself, and is considered worth more than others."

"It pays to sell goods that give satisfaction."

WHY JESUS REFUSED TO PRAY

ELECTION AND NON-ELECTION
VIEWED FROM A NEW STANDPOINT

Pastor Russell on God's Times and Seasons

For those whom Thou hast given me (John xvii, 9). He said:

When, years ago, I believed that an eternity of torture awaited all who do not accept God's "call" of the present time, I had great difficulty with this text. I asked, is it possible that our Redeemer was selectively unjust in his dealings with our race? Can it be true that the Heavenly Father merely calls and draws a predestinated few to himself and to everlasting bliss? Can it be true, as our catechisms recite, that God and Jesus "passed by" the great mass of mankind without drawing them, without calling them, without giving them the hearing ear, without opening the eyes of their understanding? Can it be that all these blind and deaf, unsought, undrawn, uncalled and unprayed for by the Savior are going down to eternal torment? My heart answered, No! But my brain was confused by the errors, the misinterpretations of the Bible, which I had received.

John Wesley's "Free Grace." Trained in the Doctrine of Election and Predestination I, like hosts of others, felt somehow that Brother Wesley's teaching of Free Grace was more noble, more God-like, than Brother Calvin's teaching respecting Election and Predestination.

Nevertheless, when I reasoned on the subject I said, Can I think of the omniscient God preparing a great place of sufficient size to hold the entire human family and outfit with every devilish appliance for their torture, and yet being ignorant of the conditions under which they would be born? Can I think that he did not know that we would be born in sin and shapen in iniquity? Can I think that he did not know of the present reign of Satan, Sin and Death and that it would last for six thousand years and injuriously affect our entire race?

Brother Wesley's theory of God's Love and good intentions—of his endeavor to save everybody—seems inconsistent when contrasted with his teaching that only a scanty few reach eternal bliss and that the thousands of millions must spend eternity in torture. Thus I was once confused, as millions are confused today, as to the Divine Character as exemplified in the Divine plan of the ages. So far as I can see, Brother Calvin had a wise and powerful God such as I could admire and reverence. If he had only been kind and loving instead of diabolical. And Brother Wesley had a kind and loving God such as I could admire and worship. If he had only had the wisdom and power of Calvin's theory.

So long as we have such confusion in our minds faith and hope and love and trust shake upon the foundations of our reason. We recognize that we know nothing of the future of ourselves; that we are wholly dependent upon Divine Revelation. But we cannot expect that our Creator would give us a Revelation which to our unaided minds would appear Satanic instead of Divine. We must remember that our Creator invites us to reason, saying, "Come, let us reason together; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow." Surely a right understanding of the Divine Revelation, the Bible, should be a reasonable one to a sane mind. The Word of the Lord: Hearken to the Word of the Lord: Their fear toward me is not of me, but is taught by the precepts of men! (Isaiah xix, 13.)

Hearken again: As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my methods higher than your methods and my plans higher than your plans (Isaiah lv, 9). And so we find, my dear friends—God's Word is true. His Character is glorious. Only the mist and smoke of the "dark ages" have confused things for us and mystified matters and darkened the eyes of our understanding.

Predestination of the Bible. Now as the six thousand years have passed and we have entered upon the Sabbath Seventh Thousand we are beginning to realize that it marks a New Dispensation—that the night is passed; that the dawn is upon us. The wonderful inventions of our day show earthly things are in full harmony with the clear light now shining upon God's Word, making its dark places bright and its rough places smooth and enabling us to remove the stumbling-stones from the "pathway of the just, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

Now we can see why Jesus did not pray for the world. It was because the world was not in any danger of a fiery hell. More than that, it was because God's time for dealing with the world had not yet come. The world, however, is to be dealt with by the great Redeemer. After He shall have set up His Kingdom in power and great glory; after He shall have bound Satan for a thousand years that he might deceive the people no more, the glorious Savior, Messiah, will cause a general enlightenment of mankind and a full opportunity for all, rich and poor, great and small, to rise up from dust and ashes and the grave to the full perfection of human nature.

The Sun of Righteousness will arise with healing in his beams, blessing mankind, healing their diseases, mental, moral and physical, and causing the knowledge of the Lord to fill the whole earth. No longer will any be in any of his neighbors—nor will any be "knowing" Him, from the least to the greatest. And only the wilfully wicked and disobedient will be cut off from life in the Second Death—not torture; but, as St. Paul declares, "They shall be punished with everlasting destruction."

We see, then, that our Lord's reason for not praying for the world was that He knew the Father's Plan that the world was not to be dealt with during this Age, but during the next, the Kingdom Age. The Master prayed for His own, for the class which He has been selecting during the past nineteen hundred years. These are variously called "the elect," the "disciples," "His followers," "members of His Body," a "Royal Priesthood," the "Bride," "the Lamb's Wife," the "little flock," to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the Kingdom.

Elect to Bless Non-elect.

Seeing, then, that there is a difference between God's provision for the world, to be dispensed in the next Age, and His provision for the Church to be given now, we ask, What is the difference between them? The answer is that the world's salvation is to be to human nature and an earthly Paradise world-wide; while the elect class is a special one called of God, chosen in Christ and faithful in adversity, and by the Lord's grace, is to have a heavenly nature, like unto that of the angels, but superior. There is a "high calling," a "high calling." "They are to be like their Lord and Redeemer and Head and Bridegroom, Jesus, in His glorified state. 'Far above angels and principalities and powers, and every name that is named.'"

Is this an arbitrary election? Does God arbitrarily draw and call one above another? Yes. He thus selected the Jewish nation to be His peculiar nation—not, however, to the detriment or injury of other nations. He thus called Isaac instead of Ishmael, and Jacob instead of Esau to be the progenitors of His chosen nation Israel, whom He foreknew as a people and predestinated to a certain service. But this selection worked no injury to either Ishmael or Esau. Similarly during this Gospel Age God chooses from the world a certain class, and grants them the hearing ear and the seeing eye, and He passes by others and gives them not this special favor. This, however, is not to be to the disadvantage of the others—non-elect, uncalled, uncalled.

According to His Purpose.

St. Paul speaks of the Church as "called according to His purpose." He even tells us what the purpose is, namely, that in the Age to come He might show forth the exceeding riches of His grace in His loving kindness toward us in Christ Jesus (Ephesians ii, 7). Toward this specially called class God will to all eternity manifest special favor. But we are not to suppose that there is no reason for this selection and favor. There is a reason. It is because of certain intrinsic qualities or characteristics possessed by this class which God is now selecting. They will all be "saints." They will all love the Lord more than they love houses or lands, parents or children, self or any creature. They will all possess the fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit.

Indeed, this is God's particular predestination. St. Paul tells us that He foreknew that He would provide His only-begotten Son to be the Savior of mankind, and the Head over the Church, and He foreknew that He would have a Church, a Royal Priesthood under the great High Priest, as members of His Body. God foreknew also the kind of a Message He would send, forth and that it would be attractive only to a certain class possessed of a love for righteousness. These ones would hear His call. Those only would have the eyes of their understanding specially opened, because these alone would accept of His assurances and make a full consecration to His service. Such He would begot of His Holy Spirit, and such, in due time, would be born of the Spirit in the resurrection and enter into the fellowship and companionship and kindly joys of their Master.

It is this special class that the Apostle declares, "Whom God did foreknow, these He also did predestinate to be conformed to the likeness (image) of His Son" (Romans viii, 29). That is to say, God's predestination was not only that He would have a Church, but, additionally, that the terms or conditions of fellowship in that church should be that each one would become Christ-like. Surely this is a good predestination, with which no one could find fault. Whether we shall gain a place with the "elect" on the heavenly plane, or a place with the non-elect world in restitution to earthly nature, we cannot do otherwise than recognize the justice of God in so deciding, that none but the saintly corpse of their Lord, could be members of the elect Church and joint heirs with Him in His Kingdom.

"True and righteous are Thy ways, Lord God Almighty!" "Who shall not come and worship before Thee, when Thy righteous acts are made manifest?" Truly it is written of this great King of glory, Head and Members, Bridegroom and Bride, "Unto Him every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God."

"Ask of Me and I Will Give."

Although our Lord did not pray for the world, He will yet pray for them, and His prayer will be answered. The promise reads, "Ask of Me and I will give Thee the heathen for an inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession" (Psalm ii, 8). Jesus did not make this request on the night of His crucifixion because it was not the Father's time to answer that prayer. Appropriately He waited, and while gathering the "elect" from every nation, people, kindred and tongue, the Scriptures declare that He is seated at the Father's right hand of glory, expecting or waiting for the time to come when the Kingdom under the whole heavens shall be delivered to Him by the Father. This will be done at the end of this Gospel Age, when the saintly Body of Christ shall have been completed. Then "He shall take unto himself His great power and reign."

A great time of trouble will follow. The plowmen of sorrow will reap the harvest of mankind for the great blessing which Messiah will then be ready to bestow, because that will be the due time. St. Paul tells us that Messiah's reign will be a victorious one: "He must reign until He shall have put all enemies under His feet (in full subjection); the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. Then, after a thousand years, after having accomplished the purpose of the Father in the uplifting of all the willing and obedient of mankind to earthly perfection, the great Prophet, Priest, Mediator and King of Glory will at the end of the thousand years' reign deliver up the Kingdom even to God the Father, that God may be all in all (I Corinthians xv, 28).

While Satan will be bound at the beginning of Messiah's reign and every form of wickedness will be rooted out, nevertheless the raising of mankind up out of sin and degradation to perfection will be a gradual work. As the regenerating influences operate in mankind, they will become more and more alive, less and less dead—until at the end of the Messianic reign Adam's death will be no more; it shall have been fully destroyed by raising of mankind completely out of it; the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death—Adam's death.

The Second Death will never be destroyed, but will be everlasting. It is not an enemy to God and His righteousness, but a valuable servant to destroy everything wilfully and intelligently out of accord with the Divine Government—righteousness.

I Pray For Them.

All who are seeking to walk in the footsteps of Jesus; all who have taken up their cross to follow Him, may well rejoice in that feature of His prayer which says, I pray for those whom Thou hast given Me that they may all be one, as Thou, Father, and I are one, that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me (John xvii, 20, 21). The oneness of God's people is not represented in the various sects and parties of the present time. It is represented in the fact that all the consecrated followers of the Redeemer are individually united to Him as the Head and united to each other as members of His Body. "Thy will be done, as in Heaven, so on earth," by the power of the First Resurrection, all these shall be perfected on the spirit plane and constitute the Kingdom for which we pray, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven." As a result of that Kingdom's coming the world will all be brought to the point of believing in Jesus and will all have the opportunity of obtaining through Him the gift of God, eternal life.

Our Lord's solicitude was not merely for the Apostles and earliest members of the Church whom the Father gave Him in the special sense, as His personal companions and helpers in the founding of the Church; He prayed on, saying, Neither pray I for these alone, but for all those also who shall believe on Me through their Word. The Master's words outlined to us the Divine Program. And Jesus himself began to declare the Gospel and brought life and immortality to light. He commissioned His twelve Apostles, St. Paul, taking the place of Judas, to speak in His Name and as His special mouthpieces. Whatever they would declare to be binding on earth would be binding in the sight of God in Heaven. Whatever they would loose and declare to be non-essential on earth, we may know would be so by Divine decree (Matthew xvi, 19).

In a word, Jesus, the Apostles and the Prophets alone are to be considered the special guides and standard-bearers for the Church. We are to believe on Him through their word and not through the word of counsels or synods or presbyteries. Each individual of the Church has his personal responsibility. This is in harmony with our Lord's declaration, "My sheep know My Voice and they follow Me; a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from a stranger." It behooves us today to harken back to the words of Jesus, as He personally uttered them and as He personally sent them to us through His chosen twelve.

Soon the Master's prayer for His disciples will have fulfillment. They will be one with Him beyond the veil, shapers of His glory and Kingdom. Then will come the time when the world will believe. The knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth and all the blinding and stumbling influences of the present will be at an end. The Savior will not need to pray for the world then, but instead will exercise His power on their behalf, overthrowing evil and uplifting every good principle and all who love righteousness, and destroying those who would corrupt the earth.

Do You Get Up With a Lamé Back?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root fulfills almost every wish in overcoming rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., 481 North 3rd Street, Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Our Jewelry values are ones that you pay for the goods—in short, there's what may be called "George Washington values," for they're honest ones.

We invite thorough price comparison and investigation—well knowing that our Jewelry and Silver stocks are superb, being selected and priced with that care made necessary by the fact that our future business and reputation is based on them.

Don't hesitate to step in and see what we have, whether you intend to buy or not.

DUTY TO GOD, OUR MASTER

By Rev. Dr. HUGH T. KERR, Pastor, Salisbury Avenue Presbyterian Church, Chicago.

The amazing thing about the man who has known God best is the bold and outspoken and all but irreverent way in which they speak about God. Abraham, who was called the friend of God, was ready to contest the decision of the Almighty, saying, "Nay, this be far from thee, Lord." Job, like whom there was none among the Lord's servants, challenged the Lord to a verbal debate. "Oh, that I knew where I might find him, that I might come even to his seat." Luther stormed the very citadel of heaven with his demands on God: "My God, my God, dost thou not hear? My God, art thou dead?"

But bold as were these men, Jesus is bolder. He refrains not from representing God as like unto an unjust judge and like unto a selfish neighbor and here as a possessor and as a master of slaves. Into his face the hardworking and patient slaves of the kingdom look with the humble confession upon their lips, "After all we have done we are unprofitable slaves."

Our souls rebel. We do not like the relationship. We would be more independent, more free. Perhaps this rebellion is not from the fact that this passage is a neglected passage. Even that prince of Bible expositors, Marcus Dods, passes it by in his study of the parabolic teaching of Jesus. We shun the spirit of the slave. We abhor servitude in any form. We sing and shout with Scotland's poet:

Who will be a traitor knave,
Who can sit a coward's grave,
Who see base as be a slave,
Let him turn and flee.

But for answer Jesus replies even so, but the religion of the gospel of God is just like slavery. Slavery was the one system which the world of that day knew. We have cast it off, under the influence of Jesus, as an idolatry. Nevertheless Jesus used that now hateful system to illustrate his gospel. We are slaves. God is our Master. We owe nothing, have nothing, possess nothing, claim nothing. We have been bought upon the world's market. "We are not our own; we are bought with a price." The world is familiar, but the fact they represent is unappreciated.

The slave who has worked all day at his tasking work comes in at the gathering of darkness to resume his work and to take up new duties. The Master does not bid him out, but expects him to serve on until all the duties are concluded. The ending of one service is the beginning of another. So is it in the Christian life. There is no coward wanted, and no coddling is given for service. It is a call to the heroic. There is no limit to the hours of service; no pause before life is done. There is no overpay and no overtime. Like the physician that is over on call, who returns from one sickbed only to be called in his weariness and fatigue to another, his duty is never done.

A Christian's duty is as pervasive as the air that he breathes. Business men return from their business tired and jaded with the day's work to have the duties of the church drag them out again. Men who have served through the years cannot be relieved from duty. There is no retired list among the slaves of the kingdom of God. People of meager ability can claim to have no discharge from obligation.

One duty runs on through all the hours of waking and greets us with every dawn. Under that same tyranny of duty Jesus lived. His meat and his drink was to do the Father's will and to finish his work. Like Thoreau, who to whom the most important work that lay before him in the field of art was the one he was about to begin, so duty ever calls to mightier deeds.

But duty when it is submitted into devotion only intensifies the obligation. Duty gives us the nurse. Devotion gives us the mother, with her aching heart and her sleepless nights and her inward cry of pain. Let us remember that though God has lifted the burden of the slave's relation, the slave himself refuses to lift the burden and pledge service through life and death, through sorrow and through staining.

The love of Christ constraineth us to labor more abundantly. The man who thinks that grace has freed him from obligation to work out his salvation has misused the path and done despite to the spirit of grace that has offered him redemption. Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound? Yes, if we are prepared to accept the sacrifice of Jesus without any sacrifice on our own part. Rather this is our attitude:

Oh, to grace how great a debtor
Daily I'm constrained to be!
Let thy love, Lord, like a fetter,
Bind my wandering heart to thee.
Do not keep back part of the price,
Give God all, and the service you render
Will be to his own blessed reward.
It was so to Paul and to Livingston and to Bunyan and to all who have opened their lives to an "unreserved consecration of time and talent."

I passed down the shore of the lake not long ago, and the little children that played at my feet gathered the shells and the stones and filled my hands full. Did I need them? No; they were but so much rubbish. Did I need them? Yes, for it was an expression of their joy and love and service. Let God have our best and let our service be the sacrifice of loving and grateful hearts.

The Agricultural Multiplication Table.

"How many acres of land have you?"
"One hundred."
"Then you have bought some more; you only had twenty."
"So, I haven't bought any; I haven't had any given to me. I haven't rented any. Still I claim that I have one hundred acres."
"How do you make that out?"
"Just this way: I bought twenty acres and thoroughly underdrained it, using four, six and eight inch tile, then I plowed it deep, utilizing every foot of ground twice the depth of former cultivation, making on an average, one acre equal to two. That gave me forty acres."
"Just so."
"If then fertilized the land so that one acre produced as much as three did before. That made me twenty acres more, making the total sixty acres."
"I see."
"Then I practiced persistent cultivation, while I can prove, will double the yield of any acre. Twenty acres more, you see, which makes me eighty."
"Yes, and now for the other twenty."
"The other twenty I got by only using the best of seed and by putting brains and system into my work. And to prove that my farm contains one hundred acres, I am willing to compare results with the average hundred acres anywhere. Things equal to the same thing are equal to each other, you know."

How Good News Spreads.

"I am 70 years old and travel most of the time," writes B. F. Tolson, of Elizabethtown, Ky. "Everywhere I go I recommend Electric Bitters, because I am a very excellent health and vitality to them. They effect a cure every time." They never fail to tone the stomach, regulate the kidneys and bowels, stimulate the liver, invigorate the nerves and purify the blood. They work wonders for weak, run-down men and women, restoring strength, vigor and health that's a daily joy. Try them. Only 50c. Satisfaction is positively guaranteed by all druggists.

COMING NATURE TREAT.

John T. Withers Will Lecture Here On Trees and Their Care.

Mr. John T. Withers, of Jersey City, N. J., a landscape architect, forester and tree surgeon of national repute, will give an illustrated lecture in the assembly room of the Wilkesboro High School, Monday evening, March 6th. Mr. Withers has recently returned from a trip around the world, during which he made a large and rare pictorial collection of trees, which he will use to illustrate his lecture.

Mr. Withers came to the States in 1898 from Wales. For several years he was engaged by prominent Boston firms and supervised work for them in various parts of the country.

He has lectured to large audiences in numerous places with marked success. His talk here is particularly timely, as Arbor Day will soon be here and will be better enjoyed after hearing something of the life story of trees, its artistic and utilitarian value, and the part certain trees have played in history.

Maryland Day, too, is almost here, and how much better can we show our admiration for our noble-hearted ancestors who came over in "The Ark" and "The Dove" to our virgin shores, than by planting a tree along our winding roads?

The proceeds of the lecture will be used to buy pictures and books for the children of the third grade, Central Primary Building, Miss Wilese Woodcock, teacher.

The public will find the lecture both interesting and instructive, and the pictures beautiful and entertaining. It is hoped that a large audience will attend.

A Successful Musicales.

All who attended the Musicales at the Baptist Church Tuesday night pronounced it a splendid success. Every number on the program was well rendered. All who took part were Salisbury people. The program consisted of vocal and instrumental solos, duets, and orchestra selections. A duet by two boys, accompanied by a girl's chorus was well received. Mr. J. G. Hopkins, organist of the Baptist Church, arranged the program and directed the music. The success of the entertainment was largely due to his untiring efforts. All who took part in the program are to be congratulated. The proceeds, about $60, go to the Building Fund of the Division Street Baptist Church.

The ladies of Green Hill M. P. Church will hold an Oyster Supper on Friday evening, March 10th. This night should be enjoyed. It will be held at the Green Hill M. P. Church. All are cordially invited.

The Buyer who knows the Difference in Automobiles will own a

Our first object in advertising is to teach the buyers the real value of a car. If buyers knew the value of a car, we would have three times as many cars.

Cadillac is the only automobile that no car at all can compare with. In the first place, a Cadillac is a masterpiece of engineering. It is a machine assembled with the same care and skill that a watch is assembled. It is a machine that will give the same quality of performance for years to come. It is a machine that will stand up to the most severe tests. It is a machine that will give you the most complete satisfaction.

It is the Cadillac fact, which so strongly impresses itself on the mind, and so soundly convinces that the Cadillac is the only automobile that no car at all can compare with.

And facilities, thirty. No one, who is not a Cadillac owner, can appreciate the difference in automobiles. The Cadillac is the only automobile that no car at all can compare with.

Cadillac Thirty is an automobile that no car at all can compare with. It is a machine assembled with the same care and skill that a watch is assembled. It is a machine that will give the same quality of performance for years to come. It is a machine that will stand up to the most severe tests. It is a machine that will give you the most complete satisfaction.

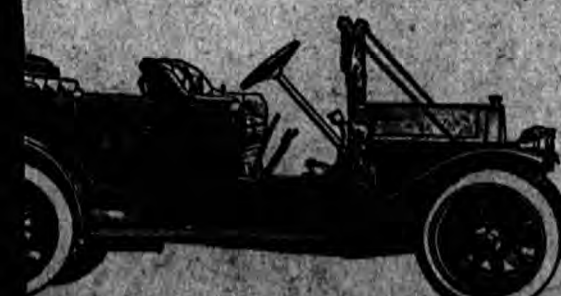

And comparison with other factories and their methods will reveal the fact that no car at all can compare with the Cadillac. What this means to an owner can be easily determined by asking Cadillac owners what kind of service they get and what their upkeep amounts to, and then comparing notes with owners of other makes. You'll find that no car will stand comparison with the Cadillac on these two vital points.

Cadillac Design

Then the design of the Cadillac affords advantages which no other car offers. No motor will compare with the cooling qualities of the Cadillac, yet less water is used than in any other car of equal power. What car of equal size will travel 17 to 25 miles on a gallon of gasoline? What other car will run 100 miles on a pint of oil? The Cadillac is doing this every day.

Cadillac Dependability

If you were an expert mechanic and had plenty of time to devote to your car, you could get good service from most any well-known machine. But only a few are expert mechanics. When you buy a car, you want steady, uninterrupted service. You will get this in a Cadillac, whether you are mechanically inclined or not. And you will get it at lower upkeep expense than with any other car. Truly, the buyer who knows the difference in automobiles will own a Cadillac Thirty.

Deaf and Dumb —and Blind.

By Paul Calvin Anderson

Copyright, 1920, by Associated Literary Press

When the tide is out, at Palm
Beach hundreds of hotel guests walk
up and down the hard, wet sands.
Others speed up and down in their autos. Others, still, sit on hired chairs
and gaze out seaward and imagine
they can hear the songs of mer-
maids.

On a certain day in the present
twentieth century Philip Gillett was
young man at the beach with his mother and sister, and his occupation
when at home in New York was preparing himself for architecture. He did that mostly by looking at one or two skyscrapers a day from the outside and spending $500 per week allowed by his father. It was his father who had insisted that the young man take up architecture. There never had been an architect in the Gillett family, and he wanted now.
He had a manor house, and he wanted a henney built, and he wanted to point to it after it was finished and
say: "A Gillett did that!"

On this particular day Philip Gillett
had toothache and he set out to walk
it off. His sister had told him to hold
a wad of cotton saturated with peppermint essence to his mouth, and to keep his mouth shut. He thought a good deal of his sister, and he was obeying her.

Toothache affects a person peculiarly—particularly a man. It gives him what is known as a grouch. He wants to stand on the beach and see
a dentist drown in the sea. He isn't
to blame, but everybody else is. And what made young Mr. Gillett crosser
still was the fact that he had to chew
cotton and keep his mouth shut. It was not dignified. It was taking undue advantage of follow.

Among those who motored that day
were Miss Edna Blair and Miss Kitty Waldron, girl chums. They were in

Resorted to More Peppermint.

Miss Kitty's auto, and she was running it herself. After getting out of
the crowd, and heading up the shore,
they saw a young man half a mile
on the hard track and was in their path. The honk! honk! was sounded, but he paid no attention. He wanted
tooth smashed out.

The automobile passed him within
two feet and in spite of himself he
gave a jump and swallowed the peppermint-soaked wad of cotton. He then had to produce more cotton and
more peppermint for his aching tooth.

Mr. Gillett's walk had extended two miles when he sat down on a hum-mock and resorted to more peppermint. His sister was right; it began to have a soothing effect! He began to feel glad that he was alive and that the snow heeps of New York city. Just then he caught sight of the auto returning. As it drew near, he saw that Miss Edna Blair
was piously good looking and that Miss Kitty Waldron was more so. The auto was aiming to pass him within a few feet, but that was all right. He reasoned that the girls desired a nearer view of the young man, whom they
about it. They didn't seem to see him, of course, but that was false
pretense.

And after that false step in. The auto was exactly opposite Philip to
an inch, and exactly six feet and one inch and a half away, when a front
tire exploded with a bang. Two young ladies screamed. The auto ran
wild until half buried in the sand.
The young man was blown over on
his back by the concussion and swallowed his wad of cotton for the second time in an hour.

He would have been less than human if he hadn't arisen with a face
as red as paint and arose all the way through. He grabbed for his hat and
might have gone running over the sand dunes had not a sweet and plati-tine voice reached his ears!

"Oh, sir, please do help us! We have burst a tire!"
Yes, he would help. As a gentle-
his mind to do no more. That is, he wouldn't speak a word to those girls.
They had fed him on cotton, so to speak, and he would have his revenge.
He advanced and raised his hat. Then
he inspected the tire.

"I hope you were not hit by one of the flying pieces," said Miss Kitty in
her most ingratiating manner.
No reply.

"Will we have to walk back to the hotel?"
No answer.

here."
No answer.

Mr. Gillett owned an auto himself.
In fact, his mother and sister were
down the beach in it at that very
moment. He knew all about tires.
He took the jack from his place, and without mooting the girls to respond he went at it and had the tire replaced inside of 15 minutes. He might have done it in ten except for overhearing such observations as:
"Say, Edna, he must be deaf."
"Yes, deaf as an old tin can."
"And he hasn't spoken a word. Do
you think he's also dumb?"
"He looks it."

"Poor young man! It's just awful!
He's got considerable style about him."

"Oh, I don't know. Wasn't it funny to see him go over on his back?
If his hat hadn't blown off he'd have
swallowed it!"

"Hush, you bad girl! I'll tell you what he is. He's a professor in some deaf and dumb school. And he owns
an auto, too. See how handy he is.
I wish we hadn't frightened him so."

"If we had scared him worse, he might have got his voice and hearing
back. Think what it would be to marry a deaf and dumb man! Are you going to thank him?"

"Not in words, but I'll just look
my thanks."

As Mr. Gillett finished and stood
back and raised his hat the thanks
were duly looked and the auto
whizzed along. He followed at a slow pace. The toothache was all gone,
but he had been humiliated. He had been made to jump aside like a kangaroo; he had been blown flat on
his back; he had been made to swallow wads of cotton; he had almost
been called names to his very face.
No wonder he wouldn't speak to his
sister for an hour after getting back
to the hotel, and that his mother laid
her maternal hand on his locks and
said:

"Philip, I hope you won't go into a decline, as your grandfather did at
this very place."

There is fate and there is revenge.
Fate had come—revenge had to wait
a day or two. Then the sister came running to Philip.

"Oh, Phil!" she exclaimed; "I've
met just the nicest girl you ever saw!
She's stopping at the Royal. I've invited her to take a spin in the auto, and you are to be chauffeur. I want you to meet her."

As the aching tooth had gone out of business and the world looked rosy
again, Philip consented, though entirely to please the sister. They differed on the girl question.

It was only when they had rolled
around to the hotel and picked up
their passenger that Mr. Philip Gillett would have swallowed a whole roll of cotton batting had it been handy. She was the girl of the other auto—the girl who had looked her
thanks—Miss Kitty Waldron!

Mr. Gillett tried to say things, and Miss Waldron did likewise, and the
sister sat there and wondered if both
of them had toothache. And when they got back at last and Mr. Gillett assisted Miss Waldron up the steps
of the veranda, she turned to him to
say:

"Sir, have you any explanations to
make?"
"I have, and will call this evening
to make them."

The explanations must have proven satisfactory, as an auto ride became
a thing of daily occurrence thereafter, and the season had not yet closed
when Miss Gillett put her arms
around her brother's neck and mur-
mured:

"Oh, Phil, I'm so glad—so glad! I
just hoped you two would take each

A Spanking Chair.

Although the whipping post is a thing of the past, the principle in resisted and modern form and judiciously applied is expected to work wonders in enforcing good behavior upon
some of the worst offenders brought
before the juvenile court.

A "spanking chair" has been set up
at Columbus, O., and Eliza Searis was the first to occupy it. He promised to be good for all time when he had been given a good "dressing," and he was instructed to relate his experience to other lads who have an ineluct-able tendency to be very, very naughty.

The juvenile court, paddle consists
of a long leather strap, wide and
heavy, and it is bound with felt so
that the edges will not cut or bruise
the flesh. The paddle "stings right,"
but leaves no marks, and is much more humane than a switch or a slip-
per—and more effective.

The Thoughts of Youth.

A small boy was hoeing corn in a sterile field by the roadside, when a
passerby stopped and said:

small."

"Certainly," said the boy, "it's dwarf corn."

"That looks yaller."

"Certainly," we planted the yaller
kind."

"But it looks as if you wouldn't get
more than half a crop."

"Of course not, we planted it on halves."—Everybody's Magazine.

LAWN OR WEED MOWER.
Convenient Machine Which Can Be
Made Out of Old Field Mower.

Anyone having an old field mower

including knives and fingers, bolts,
nuts, and any other part which can be used, says Popular Mechanics, depending on the make of the old machine.

Procure a strip of sheet steel, Fig.
1, 4 inches wide, about 1-3/4 inches
thick, and long enough to go around
the circumference of the driving

right position and then made fast to the shaft in order to have the cams work properly and it will be necessary to use two collars, FF, to prevent lateral movement of the shaft. When the machine is pushed along the cams operate the cam bar, which oscillates the lever, G, and thus works the knives.

TO DIG INTO A LIVE VOLCANO.

And Build a Breakwater With the Fuming Molten Lava at Hawaii.

Volcanoes have ever been considered sources of tremendous destructive force, uncontrollable in their action and of no useful purpose to man.
The unusual and daring proposition
is now made to make at least one
active volcano perform constructive
work of positive commercial value.
The idea seems to have been adapted
from the familiar one of drawing
molten iron from a furnace and conducting it along the earthen floor
through shallow open trenches into molded spaces, where it cools and
becomes the pig iron of trade.

Hilo is the important seaport on the
east coast of the island of Hawaii,
in the Sandwich Islands group. Its harbor facilities are insufficient to meet the demands of present day commerce, and in order to provide suitable shelter, great breakwaters must
be constructed at large cost. Congress has been petitioned to make the necessary appropriation, but so far

has not advanced beyond an order
for a preliminary survey. The people of Hilo evidently realize that Congress is a long way off and, unless action is secured soon, propose to tap
an active volcano on the island and
make it furnish the material and do
the work of construction at the same time. If the plan works a great sea
wall will have been built, of greater extent and weight than any ever before constructed by human skill.

The idea is to construct a big
trench from Mount Kilauea to the shore and then tunnel into the pit of
one of the craters and release the molten lava. Just as a furnaceman
opens a cupola when making pig iron.
One difference will be that, when the
founder uses a long iron rod to poke
a hole, the volcano is to be opened
by letting off a big charge of high explosives.

Notwithstanding the somewhat fishy
nature of the story, it is stated, "engineers who have been considering
the scheme are strongly inclined to
the opinion that it is not impracticable." One thing is certain, Popular Mechanics says, there will be plenty of Yankee engineers who will
not hesitate to undertake so difficult
and dangerous a venture, if the necessary funds are provided.

Limit of Human Strength.

Experiments upon a number of men
have shown that a man five feet high
and weighing 156 pounds will lift on an average 156 pounds through a vertical distance of eight inches, or 217
pounds through a height of 12 inches.
Others 6 ft. high and weighing 183
pounds could lift the 156 pounds to a height of thirteen inches, or 217 pounds to a height of six inches. Other men six feet three inches high and weighing 188 pounds could lift 156
pounds to a height of sixteen inches,
or 217 pounds to a height of nine inches. By a great variety of experiments it was shown that the average
human strength is equivalent to raising thirty pounds through a distance
of two and one-half feet in one second.

Harnessing Waters in India.

Engineers are harnessing many of
the waters of the world to the use
of man. A great project is under way
to catch the floods which rush down
the western Ghats, near Bombay, and
to use the water-power in cotton mills
and other factories. The valleys are
of rocky formation, and with dams at
the lower end can be made into tight
reservoirs. Three valleys will be closed in by dams respectively half a mile, a mile, and a mile and a half long.

READ THIS.

The following is an extract from a letter just received from our
Flour Mill in Ohio:—

"The more we learn what other mills are doing in the way of grade, the more we are convinced that you are about the only dealer in your territory
who is selling a strictly high-grade fancy Patent, and this is undoubtedly the reason why you are able to do as large a volume of business as you are doing.
It is really surprising the quantity of flour you have sold since harvest, in the face of the extremely low prices made by your local mills, and by other mills from the West, which you compete with. Thus, as stated above, we think the only reason for it is your grade of flour, which is in a class by itself, and is considered worth more than others."

A Pardon

By HARRY VON AMER

"You, boy! Come out of that and help bring on the wood!" So called the mate of a steamboat on the Mississippi to a pale-faced boy lying in his bunk. It was at night, and the weather was stormy.

"I can't, I'm sick."

"You hadn't got to work yet, partner, on this raw boat sojourn there. Get up, I say, and carry your load."

The boy made a feeble attempt to rise, but failed. The mate seized a stick of wood and held it over the invalid.

"You get up or I'll beat you!" Then, gave the boy additional strength, and he managed to pull himself out and stagger over the gang plank to a wood pile which the deck hands were transferring to the boat.

He worked as best he could till the task was finished, then crawled back to his bunk and fell fainting in it.

This boy, Robert Stewart, was so poor that in order to get from New Orleans to St. Louis, he was obliged to work his passage on a steamboat. The mate was a powerful man, and the boy, who was ill with a fever, was completely at his mercy. "What made the act still more brutal was that there were plenty of deck hands to do the work without calling on a sick boy. There was something deadish in the mate's nature that led him to this act of cruelty."

Years passed meanwhile. That sick boy was moving in one direction, while the mate who had transmitted fever him and had nearly cost him his life was moving in another. The one was rising, the other sinking. Schooled in adversity, Robert Stewart possessed that within him which enabled him to triumph over obstacles, the hardships he had endured furnishing a spur to send him onward and upward. Successful in his own affairs, the people trusted him with theirs. In time his name became known to every one in Missouri. His rise to be governor.

One day a man was brought to the governor from the penitentiary as an applicant for pardon. He was a large, powerful fellow, and the moment the governor looked at him he started. Then he scrutinized the criminal long and closely. Without speaking he turned to his desk, picked up the paper on which the man's pardon had been made out and wrote his name at the bottom of it. Before handing it to the convict he said to him:

"I fear it will be useless, perhaps wrong, for me to grant you this pardon."

The man stood stolidly waiting to know the governor's reason.

"You will commit some other crime and be sent to the penitentiary again."

"No, governor, I promise you that I will not."

The governor looked doubtful. He was apparently turning something over in his mind. Finally he said:

"You will go back on to the river as mate on a steamer, I suppose."

"Yes, governor; I'll go back to work at any position I can get."

"Well," the governor continued, "before I pardon you I wish you to make me a promise."

The man looked interested and waited. The chief magistrate was in no hurry. The man of business awaiting his attention was forgotten in this pardon case. There must be something in it to move him so strangely. For a few minutes there was a faraway look in his eyes. He seemed to be picturing something. That it was a painful scene was evident from his expression. Then he turned to the criminal and said impressively:

"I wish you to pledge your word that when you go back to the river as mate on a steamboat you will never drive a sick boy from his bunk to load your boat on a stormy night."

The criminal looked at the governor in a vain attempt to understand why he imposed upon him such a singular condition. Then he made the required promise, asking at the same time for an explanation. Finally the governor gave it:

"One night many years ago you were mate of a steamboat running between New Orleans and St. Louis. On that boat was a boy sick with a fever. One night when the wind blew cold and the rain came down in torrents you drove that boy out of his bunk and forced him to carry wood."

"Now, there are two reasons why I now wish you to do that again. The first is that I desire any boy you might so treat to escape your cruelty. Another time it might cost him his life. The second is that he might become governor of his state and you might commit another crime and come before him with an application for pardon."

The man stood looking at the governor, a faint glimmer of memory struggling in his brain. But with a life of so many brutal acts behind him it was hard for him to remember one which at the time he had considered of so little importance.

The governor handed him his pardon.

"I was that boy," he said. "That document is my revenge. But another time the governor's revenge might be of a different kind. The penitentiary is today in the chair, the electric alone, and another day you might see it to refuse clemency. Go! Try to earn an honest living without brutality."

The criminal slunk away, but whether or not the lesson had any effect on him there is no available record.

How it Happened.

"How's this?" remarked the tall old boy with the newspaper. "He's where an educated monkey ran a sewing machine."

"Aw, that's nothing," sneered the short office boy. "Yesterday I saw a mouse run a typewriter."

"Come on! What are you driving me? Where did this happen?"

"Right in the old man's office. The mouse came from under the desk and ran over the typewriter, and the old man's running yet?"

SPARROW NEST OF IDOLTRY.

Greenbacks Worth $15. Reported from House of Monks.

William McGrath of Belleville, N. J., walked into his bedroom several days ago and saw a sparrow fly from the top of a clothes closet out through an open window.

There was a green piece of paper in the bird's bill, and McGrath, at once thought of a roll of money he had left in the closet. He found that many of the bills had been stripped from the roll.

He decided to watch and see if the bird came back. The window was left open, and the other day McGrath saw a sparrow fly into the room. He waited a few minutes and it came out again and went to a house about a block away, flying in the eyes.

McGrath obtained a ladder and got permission from the occupant of the house to climb up to the eaves, and was rewarded by finding a nest made of greenbacks and straw. There were $5, $10 and $1 bills there, aggregating about $15, but in pieces.

McGrath is now trying to place the bills together.—N. Y. World.

SIGN OF SERVITUDE.

In Persia women are held in little esteem and it has been said with some truth that to wear her dress is to be a slave.

FESTIVAL OF THE WELLS.

Custom of Unknown Origin Observed Each Year in England.

The annual custom of decorating the wells of the village of Tinsington, in the heart of the peak of Derbyshire, which for centuries has taken place on Ascension day, was duly observed.

Many visitors, joined with the villagers in the thanksgiving service held in the church. There a procession was formed, and each of the five decorated wells was visited, palms and Ascensiontide hymns being sung.

Upon the stone, frontage of the wells a wooden structure covered with a layer of clay had been placed, and flowers had been wrought into exquisite mosaics, with scriptural passages interwoven.

The origin of the celebration is involved in obscurity, but the uninterrupted continuity of the observance in recent years may be due to the circumstance that during a terrible drought in Derbyshire the Tinsington wells did not fail.—London Standard.

Dachshund Proved Innocence.

A black and tan dachshund gave evidence in a law court in New York recently. He belongs to Mrs. Fanny Henning, whose neighbors complain that he howls all night long. In support of their contention they exhibited photographs of the dog with his mouth wide open, taken from windows overlooking the Henning's back yard.

One witness swore that the dog barked 234 times in seven minutes, so the judge suggested calling the dog. In he came, leisurely, walked to the witness chair, and climbed into the seat, yawning lazily and blinking in the sunlight. The court uahers tickled him in the ribs, rubbed his head roughly, patted him, and even pulled his ears. He appeared to be so well bred that no such as a whimper was heard. The judge said that the neighbors had evidently been disturbed by another dog.

HOW BIRDS FLY.

The long feathers of a bird's wing are fastened to the bone. It is this which gives the wing the strength and surface wherewith to beat the air.

Robin's Strange Nesting Place.

At the Crown, Crickwood, England, the public house at which all the motor omnibuses from the Elephant and Castle and Victoria and the horse buses from Charing Cross to Crickwood stop, a robin built in a gas lamp.

The nesting place is within the reach of anyone standing on the ground. At one corner of the lamp a very small piece of the glass is broken, and through the hole the robin gained access to its new home. A family of four young robins has been reared and can be seen in the corner of the lamp.

The Way It Looked to Him.

"Are you guilty or not, guilty?" asked the judge of the defendant in a case of assault and battery.

"I think I must be guilty, your honor," answered the defendant.

"You think so?" asked the judge.

"Don't you know?"

"Well, your honor," answered the prisoner, "it's like this: The plaintiff and I were the only ones in the room, and the last thing I know was that I was standing up and he was doubled up under the table. So I guess you'd better call it assault."

FEEDING BEES FOR WINTER.

Enough Stores Should Be Provided to Carry Them Through Until the Spring.

Bees should go into winter with at least twenty-five pounds of stores. If wintered out of doors, to insure their having sufficient to carry them through the winter and spring until the new crop begins to come in. If they fail to store that amount in the brood nest they should be fed until they have it.

It is always best to feed early in the fall, if possible, during warm weather, so that they can arrange their stores as they want them and cap or seal up some of the stores, as there is some danger of stinging in the combs if not sealed.

If you have, for instance, eight quarts of honey, of good quality, they should weigh twenty-four pounds and would be perfectly safe fed to use, but if you wish to keep the honey to use you can feed a mixture of best quality granulated cane sugar and water, two parts sugar to one of water, by measure. Put the sugar and water together and stir over the fire until thoroughly dissolved, add about 5 per cent of honey, and you have about the safest bee stores that can be obtained. Feed while warm. If you prefer to feed the honey you will need to dilute it with from one-fourth to one-third its bulk of water to get it in condition so that the bees can take it up readily. This should also be fed warm. There are several good bee feeders on the market, but their use is really the best and simplest way to feed bees, but in the absence of any such thing a very good way to feed is to take a shallow pan that will not inside of a super, put in some sirup and spread a piece of cheesecloth over all loosely, so that it can sag to the bottom of the pan as the bees take up the feed. They can also be fed in pans by filling the pan with sirup, putting the grass into the sirup. The point is to get something that the bees can crawl on and keep out of the feed, as they will otherwise crowd over each other and drown by the quart.

The way to use this feeder is to take off the hive cover or quilt, get on an empty super and set the pan directly on top of the frames. It is also well to draw a little of the feed down the edge of the cloth to get them started to the feed. Feeding must be done when it is warm enough for the bees to leave the cluster in large numbers, preferably toward night, when they are flying freely. Another good way to feed is to put the sirup into glass fruit cans, put a small square of cheesecloth over the top, tie on tight or screw the ring over it and invert over the frames as many cans as are needed. The bees will take up the feed as fast as it will go through the cloth. Whichever way you use, be sure to put the cover on the hive as tight that it is absolutely impossible for a bee to get around the top or you will have a case of robbing that will not be pleasant. It is also well to close the entrance to the hive nearly up. This is also to prevent robbing. Either of these plans will work all right, so any one can have his choice. Oatmeal and brown sugar are also good with a little butter or cream for breakfast, but not for a winter feed for bees. Brown sugar may be fed in summer, while bees are flying freely, for brood raising or stimulation, but contains too much foreign substance for wintering, and will cause distention or dysentery.

DEVICE ON SPOUT.

Will Prevent Leaves and Other Foreign Substances From Clogging Water Pipes.

This is an excellent device for preventing any leaves, twigs and other trash from entering the down spout of a leader from the roof of houses and barns.

The strainer is composed of mesh fabric or wire screen, and it is equally effective whether the down spout connects with the gutter through at one end or at a point intermediate of the end, as all refuse may be carried by the force of the water over the end of the trough, therefore rendering the latter self-cleaning.

Saves the Wood.

You can find many chunks of wood about the farm. Save them all for the stove. Big knots can be used in the "chunk" stove, and how they will make it laugh on a cold stormy day in winter. Even pieces that are a little decayed will burn nicely if they are well dried. Save them all.

Selection of Queens.

By selection and restriction in the matter of queens we can improve our bees just as we can other stock, and there is always present in every apiary some choice queen far ahead of the others which will give us most excellent queens for requeening.

How Idea of Farming.

Husband—Well, I want out to see that little country place we saw advertised and I've made up my mind to buy it.

Wife—Oh, then, we'll move away from the bustling city for good?

Husband—Yes, it's a fine place, but there's only one corner of ground, and half of that is covered by a pond of water.

Wife—But that will be nice. We can raise some fish and watermelons in it.

Two Different Scenes.

"Oh, dear," sighed the pretty husband, "I'm so terribly miserable!"

"Why are you miserable?" queried the maid who was both honest and penitent.

"I'm afraid some one will marry me for my money," answered the pretty husband.

"And I," rejoined the poor girl, "am miserable because I'm afraid no one will marry me because I haven't any money."

AN IMPECUNIOUS SHOPPER.

I am a shopper, so of course I love a bargain. I go to the daily sale, or what there is to sell. And if I had the money I should have to buy it. Or what I didn't need, yes, I should like as not!

I've been shopping No. 4, a dozen in a box, and have with plumes a-waving off and forth, fully frocked. Some pairs of dainty boots, also a "Marked down from six to four."

And gloves and gloves and gloves and gloves—oh, my! and made gloves!

But, oh, I cannot spare the cash, because we have to eat, and I cannot find a market that has bargain sales of meat.

"A tender sirloin, part price off," "Van cutlets, strictly cold," "Roasts warranted at cost" and "Hams marked smartly down to half."

"Bargains in meat!" Oh, much I'd like to see a truthful ad. Like that, I'd go to market then, serene and blithe and glad.

But where, ah, where, is such a thing? Nowhere! So I repeat: I can't have dainty clothes because my family has to eat!

Geese Palaver For the Gender.

Interested Father—Why can't you and Bess get along any better? Your mother and I have lived together for fifty years.

Smooth Son—I know dad, but I never could fool Bess as you do mother.

Painless Payments. Robble often heard his father complain of customers who were slow pay. "It is just like pulling teeth to get money out of them," the father would say. And Robble, who had watched the work of the dentist next door, pitied the poor creditors greatly.

One day a timely customer came in to pay a bill, and the boy gazed sympathetically at the unwilling payer as he slowly and carefully unfolded each separate banknote and laid it gingerly on the counter. Suddenly an idea came into Robble's head, and he turned excitedly to his father.

"Why don't you give him gas, papa?" he cried. "Then it won't hurt him so much."—Success Magazine.

Force of Habit. "Seeing that you divorced him, would it not be more proper to refer to him as your former husband rather than as your late husband?"

"I suppose it would, but I got so used to having to refer to him as my late husband while we were married that I don't seem to be able to break myself of the habit."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Same Way. Mrs. Kicker—If you are going to another one of those banquets I don't suppose you will know the number of the house when you get back.

Mr. Kicker—Oh, yes, I will. I screwed it from the door and am taking it with me.—Kansas City Journal.

Texas Court Braves No Delay. Prosecuting Attorney—Your honor, the bull pup has gone and chewed up the court Bible.

Judge—Well, make the witness kiss the bull pup, then. We can't adjourn court for a week just to hunt up a new Bible.—San Antonio Express.

Misleading Pronunciation. "Who is that young man standing there by that horseless machine—the what d'you call it?"

"That's the shover."

"The shover? By gosh! Can he pass such a heavy thing as that?"—Baltimore American.

Natural Uprising. "Do you believe any one can bring about the levitation of tables by means of spirits?"

"Certainly, if they get to falling too heavily under them and try too hard to get up."—Baltimore American.

A Manometer. "Miss Blackleigh is very fond of winter sports."

"Well, I would scarcely call Tommy Bingle a winter sport even if he does wear a red necktie and a green hat."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sometimes Happens. "Your mother looks much younger than she must be."

"Yes. That's the reason she kept on in kid's clothes till I was much older than I ought to have been."—Cleveland Leader.

That Would Do It. Howell—Not a very brilliant fellow. Powell—No. If I were going to knock his brains out I shouldn't need any club bigger than a toothpick.—New York Press.

No Organ Recitals. "Going up to hear that lecture on appendicitis today?"

"Now, I'm tired of these organ recitals."—Cornell Widow.

When a Lad Went A-Weeling. "I promise, Midge, I'll never leave you. What's your bet, I'll not desert you." Just then he was in the doorway when a second later the lad had flown.

ROYAL Baking Powder Economy

The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.

Royal Baking Powder is made from pure grape cream of tartar, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is more economical at its price than any other leavening agent, because of the superlative quality and absolute wholesomeness of the food it makes.

Mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous to use in food. In England, France, Germany and some sections of the United States their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a dangerous mineral acid, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.

The label of alum baking powders must show the ingredients.

DUPONT'S PROPOSED

Road—Various Public Bodies. Commend Donor's Generosity—Will Bring Good Results.

The proposition of Gen. T. Coleman Dupont, millionaire president of the Dupont Powder Company, to build a boulevard the entire length of Delaware, 108 miles, at a cost of $3,000,000 and present it to the State, was approved Tuesday by the State Board of Agriculture, the New Castle Levy Court, the County Commissioners and other important bodies. The resolution of the Board of Agriculture, adopted at its meeting in Dover, is as follows:

"We fully endorse the offer of Gen. T. Coleman Dupont to build a State highway, and we believe it to be the most unselfish proposition ever made in this or any other country. We see in his statement or offer no suggestion or inference that it would benefit him in any way directly; the conditions on which the road is to be built, the location, etc., would benefit all classes. The State Board also sees in this offer that good roads building must result on all other roads in the State."

The Levy Court resolution heartily commends Dupont "for his generous offer" and urges the Legislature to pass such legislation as may be necessary to carry his plans into effect. The Wilmington Young Men's Republican Club adopted a similar resolution of approval.

General Dupont will meet the General Assembly in joint session at Dover and discuss his proposal. The Legislature will give him the necessary authority by amending the general incorporation laws to permit the incorporation of a boulevard company.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

Proceedings Of The Board At Last Tuesday's Session.

Mr. Frank Powell asked the Board to re-appoint for the purpose of continuing the organization, the present officers of tax ditch in Parsons Ditch petitioned for by H. F. Powell, E. E. Gordy and others. The Board re-appointed Messrs. Joseph E. Adkins and H. F. Powell, managers, and J. Milton Parker, treasurer.

Commissioner Mesick was authorized to purchase 4000 bushels of oyster shells to extend the work on the Wicomico Road.

Two committees appeared from the Mayor of Delmar asking the Commissioners to loan a road grader and the advice of Engineer Clark to assist in fixing up the grade of Life Street in Delmar. The request was granted. The expenses to be paid by the Mayor and Council of Delmar.

W. H. Knowles and W. J. Knowles of Shertown, were granted permission to straighten a piece of road through their property near Brown's store, all expenses to be paid by the petitioners.

President Cooper and Engineer Clark submitted correspondence they had with Roads Commissioners relative to work on the roads and especially as to the rebuilding of the shell roads which will be part of the State roads.

President Cooper and Engineer Clark made a strong recommendation that the present shell roads be repaired and not torn up at this time as many of them would last for several years, but that the Commission authorize the work pushed on the new roads to be constructed. This correspondence was brought about by the fact that the State Commission had about determined to tear up and rebuild the shell road leading from Salisbury to Spring Hill which is a part of the State road highway. Messrs. Cooper and Clark were unwilling to see this road disturbed at this time preferring that the State should proceed to build the two other State roads in the county first.

Engineer Clark reported that he had examined the piece of road from Burnt Mills petitioned for by Mr. Farlow and that he recommended that the road should be built not to cost more than $125.00.

The Board adjourned to meet on the 31st.

Figgis Farm to Aumon Bower, of Pennsylvania. They have several other deals which they think they will close in a few days.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, It has pleased the Great Spirit in his allwise providence to remove from our Hunting Grounds, the spirit of our beloved brother, J. Roy Johnson, to the Happy Hunting Grounds above, we are again reminded of the universal dominion of the King of Terrors and that all alike must needs become his victims. While bowing in humble submission to the will of the Great Spirit our hearts are saddened in the reflection on the loss affecting our beloved order in this afflicted dispensation. Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the members of Mosaic Tribe No. 104, mourn the loss of our beloved brother and give expression to our high appreciation of the character, ability, loyalty and devotion to the service of our beloved Order. And that we shall always cherish his memory as a true and faithful defender of the principles of Freedom, Friendship and Charity.

Resolved, That we express our heartfelt sympathy to the family of our deceased brother, and commend them to the care and guidance of Him who alone can comfort the sorrowing.

Resolved, That these be published in the Pathfinder and the city papers and a copy be sent the family of the deceased brother, and these be spread on our records.

Party Saved Embarrassment.

"It would have in addition been a tremendously expensive proposition and, to my mind, a useless one. I think the notion of the House Democrats in defeating this bill is the last hour of the session was a noteworthy achievement, which has saved our party embarrassment in dealing with this question. There will be no real trouble for the men charged with the framing of the tariff bill to get information and data upon which to work and they will have the satisfaction of knowing that data to be absolutely reliable. They would not and could not have that feeling if it were supplied them from Republican sources."

Not Certain Reciprocity Will Pass.

Concerning the Canadian reciprocity agreement, Senator Smith is not certain that it will pass at the extra session. It will, he says, probably get through the House, but will encounter strong and determined opposition in the Senate, where there are a number of Republican Senators violently hostile to it.

"I myself," he said, "while prepared to vote for the agreement because it was a step in the right direction, felt that it was unfair and unjust in many respects, but particularly in its discrimination against the agricultural interests. The farmer appeared to have been largely left out of consideration in the framing of the agreement, and his protest appeared to be a perfectly justifiable and natural one. If without impairing the validity of the agreement, it is possible to amend it so as to wipe out this discrimination and relieve some of the unfairness therein, I hope it will be done."

Senator John Walter Smith, of Maryland, believes that in the extra session of Congress, to begin on April 4th, the Democratic party will make a record that will go a long way toward insuring Democratic success in 1912.

"Things never looked brighter for the Democracy," he said, "and I believe there will be harmony and cooperation among the Democrats in the House and in the Senate during the extraordinary session not only in passing legislation demanded by the people and fulfillment of Democratic campaign promises but in avoiding political mistakes."

Senator Smith is in accord with the present plans of the House Democrats to leaders to take up at the extra session the revision of some of the more important of the Payne-Aldrich schedules, particularly those woolen and cotton schedules, which are conceded by President Taft, who approved the bill containing them, to be utterly indefensible.

Expected of Democracy.

"There is no question," he said, "that the country will expect the Democratic party, now that it has control of one branch of Congress, to present measures affording relief from the burdens placed upon it by the high protection policy of the Republicans. I want to see the entire tariff pruned down to a revenue basis at the earliest possible moment, but whether it would be wise to attempt at the special session a general revision of all the schedules is a serious question. It would seem to me to be good judgment not to attempt too much at this extra session—to do what we can do safely and intelligently in the way of taking off the duty from the necessities of life, but to avoid, if possible, immature and ill-considered legislation on this vital subject."

Full Facts, Then Revision.

"We ought to have the fullest information and all the facts we can get before effecting the general revision of all the schedules and it will not do to rush ahead in tearing the tariff to pieces without knowing what we are about. The tariff board proposed by President Taft and killed on the final day of the session would not have helped us."

"In my judgment it would have been a handicap and an embarrassment to our party in framing genuine tariff for revenue bill. It would have been a Republican board and committed to the policy of protection, wholly out of harmony with Democratic ideas. In the nature of things, the Democrats could not have relied upon either the data or the conclusion of a board such as this, all of whose members were to be named by a Republican President, three of them to be of his party and two of ours."

"The chances all favored the selection for minority members of this board of un-Democratic Democrats and our people felt that the efforts of the board would be directed toward gathering information and data to sustain the policy of protection."

Party Saved Embarrassment.

"It would have in addition been a tremendously expensive proposition and, to my mind, a useless one. I think the notion of the House Democrats in defeating this bill is the last hour of the session was a noteworthy achievement, which has saved our party embarrassment in dealing with this question. There will be no real trouble for the men charged with the framing of the tariff bill to get information and data upon which to work and they will have the satisfaction of knowing that data to be absolutely reliable. They would not and could not have that feeling if it were supplied them from Republican sources."

Not Certain Reciprocity Will Pass.

Concerning the Canadian reciprocity agreement, Senator Smith is not certain that it will pass at the extra session. It will, he says, probably get through the House, but will encounter strong and determined opposition in the Senate, where there are a number of Republican Senators violently hostile to it.

should be conducted on lines that invite confidence and inspire more and better business relations between each other. We try not to sell for today alone, but encourage a good foundation for further business transactions. Our old customers are among our best references. Ask those we have sold to if they are satisfied and then give us an opportunity to show you what we have for sale and satisfy you. Our property is so located, in such sizes and varying soils as to have some suited to everyone. Come to see us. Descriptive Bulletin and partial list of farms will be mailed for those asking. MAN'S DEVELOPMENT

Editorial Suggestions For The Progress And Advancement Of A Community.

Charles H. LaFevre, Esq., Mayor of the public spirited attorney, who is endeavoring to organize a Citizens Board of Trade has received a letter from Chas. R. Kingston, Division Freight Agent of the P. B. and W. R. R., offering to co-operate with us and all towns of the State in the matter of town development. Mr. Kingston quotes Woodworth Olm, Editor of the "Town Development," of Chicago, in some timely truths. In a recent address before the Chamber of Commerce, Lancaster, Pa., (the subject of which was "What the Chamber of Commerce Can Do.") Mr. Olm said in substance: "To successfully promote and solve the problem of local development, each of you must consider it as you do your individual business. What would it profit a manufacturer to erect a modern plant, equipped with the best up-to-date machinery and producing the best of a needed product, if he stored it in his warehouse and let it go at that?"

"The community has something to sell; vacant building lots for houses, stores, warehouses or industrial plants or similar plants for rent or sale; merchants and manufacturers to be patronized and professional citizens to consult and a destiny to determine. The shelves of the local warehouse are filled with the commodity called local advantages. Is this stock covered with the dust of years or hidden by a curtain of cobwebs and have its owners forgotten their warehouse and its available contents?"

"In these modern days of keen competition the hands of the big front door of that warehouse must be polished and the dust and cobwebs banished and the world advised of the quality, nature and utility of these wares by advertising and exhibiting them as we do in private business. For what is true of it is equally and in greater degree true of the community's interest for without active co-operation neither can thrive and hence the campaign of local promotion and development is no longer optional. There are three essentials to activity. First, to interest; second, to convince; third, to force action. Every citizen worthy the name is interested and it is comparatively easy to convince him of the necessity for action if supremacy is to be won, but the difficulty is reached in forcing action. You can hold meetings, talk things over, and agree upon what should be done, but the fighting volunteers are usually few and the majority are prone to shift the burden of work and worry on other shoulders, forgetting that united action is essential and every man's shoulder must be put to the wheel to insure success."

"Carefully assemble and compare your local advantages. Eliminate the disadvantages as far as practicable. Consider your resources, bear in mind present development, determine the character of development needed and for which your locality is best adapted, and then spread the news and tell the world about it. A city set on a hill cannot be hid, and your community must not hide its light under a bushel. When in a contemplative mood, we are prone to reflect upon 'piping times of peace' but if you imagine that these are days of peace, it is because you cannot or will not hear the roar of battle. The battle is on, one of the greatest conflicts in American history—that at which some, uplifting, good natured conflict between American Communities for supremacy. It is no ordinary battle, this conflict between American Communities, for although contending with one another we are at the same time fighting a common enemy, it is legion with spies and pickets everywhere. It has three closely allied generals, Apathy, Lethargy and Inaction. They are deeply and strongly entrenched they think, but those trenches are only the rats that so often retard, but must never be allowed to halt the march of progress. Under the leadership of Enthusiasm, Energy and Optimism the enemy can be routed and the opposition conquered and when the smoke of battle clears away you will find that you have achieved success and front rank among progressive American Communities."

"The destiny is in your hands. The responsibility is yours and the challenge cannot be evaded. Will you meet it and succeed or sink from it to obscurity and fall?"—Swirna Times

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

New Tailored Hats; Straw Hats; New Dresses and Trimmings; Dress Materials.

After all the season's rush and the wear and tear that is entailed on one's winter hat, the daily freshness of summer hats and fabrics seems particularly enticing. Straw hats and for coats are so often damaged, together with the temptation is irresistible, once the hat is home, to wear it to a tea or matinee even though the chilliness of the air makes for the only comfortable wrap.

Smart Simplicity And Floral Models.

The simple smart-looking hat, that depends for its effect on the shape, straw and color more than on any trimming, and the various floral toques and small hats are the first to be worn on the street, since these types go best with tailormade and the between season clothes that have their outing at this time of year if ever. The vivid colors of the millinery displays would show that the coming fashions are to be brightly tinted and marked by sharp color contrasts in trimmings and accessories. Many of the black and white combinations would be quite ordinary in effect were it not for the dash of "Royal Blue," "Pat Green," "Helen Pink," or "Anubergine" the new mahogany red that is having such a run in Paris just now. Hats made up in tones of one color with perhaps a black bow or quill to give ogle, or those that combine several soft reds with brown, or the last time with gray and peacock blue or the deep purple hat that is very taking with the new nautical stripe sailor suits are all distinctive types of present modes. To have the color of the hat or its trimmings repeated in the accessories of the costume is still a favorite fad with Knickerbocker girls. Leather bags and pocket books, belts and nosegay worn with the low shoe that is done at the first opportunity where it is not worn through the winter, all carry out the contrasting or matching color scheme.

New Dress Materials.

The counters of all the smart shops are irresistibly attractive with their fascinating display of new materials and among the daintiest and most practical for present modes are the lovely shantung poplins that rival silk in their lustrous surface but have unusual wear resisting and draping qualities owing to their wool filling, which makes them very pliable and prevents them from being injured by dampness or mending as so many other delicate fabrics have a way of doing.

The New Cottons.

Among the new cottons marquette is easily first favorite both for waists and dresses. The cotton crepes are also leaders. Heavy embroideries done in mercerized cotton, and beaded patterns in jet and various colored beads are used extensively for these. A beaded cotton would have seemed absurd a few seasons back, but now beads are sewed as industrially on wash fabrics as on silk or chiffon. The fact that handsome cotton dresses and waists go to the cleaner instead of the laundress makes this trimming possible. Lace motifs are fetchingly introduced among the embroideries, and the white lingerie scarfs, that have come into play this winter promise to be increasingly worn with the new light dresses. Clumps of heavy French knots that imitate beads are a feature of the new trimmings for waists and dresses.

Stripes Modish.

Stripes are high style in all materials, and the latest hose for wear with low ties and pumps show a great variety of striped effects in contrasting colors.

Falls Dying In Pulpit.

"When I saw him I fell at his feet as one dead." Revelations, I. 17, was the text from which Rev. Andrew Mowatt was to preach a sermon on "A Vision of Christ" at the Episcopate Protestant Church, Montreal, Sunday, when he was fatally stricken with heart failure.

The choir was singing the hymn just preceding the sermon when members of the congregation noticed that their pastor was in distress. Several helped to carry him to the vestry, where he passed away without regaining consciousness.

Dr. Mowatt was 72 years old and on account of his ill health had handed in his resignation two months ago, but agreed to continue in the pastorate pending the appointment of a successor.

Now The "Harem" Skirt.

Beside this "harem" the hobble is said to be a dream of grace and loveliness. The hobble was designed on the lines of the knitting needle and was especially adapted to those ladies who are no faster than a match. But the stout lady now comes into her own. From what we are told of it the "harem skirt" will please those plump mortals—say, those from 300 pounds upward. All the horrible details have not yet been brought out, but they do say that this novelty from darkest Turkey looks like a pair of "mother hoods" sewn in repose.

The Buyer who knows the Difference in Auto- mobiles will own a

Our first object in advertising the Cadillac Thirty is to teach the buyer the real essentials of an automobile and to help him become competent to judge the merits of a car. If buyers knew the vast difference in automobiles, we would have three purchasers for every Cadillac we could secure.

Cadillac is Manufactured

There is abundant evidence to prove that no car at $2,500 or under will compare favorably with the Cadillac Thirty. In the first place a dependable, lasting automobile must be a manufactured car. It is foolhardy to claim that a machine assembled from parts secured here and there will give the same quality of service as a car the parts of which are made under one roof, with a thorough knowledge of the relation of each part to every other. The high standard of accuracy required in an automobile cannot be attained in an assembled car. Neither can the parts be made standard, so that the owner can rely on repair parts fitting properly. The buyer who knows automobiles will demand a great deal of the factory behind the car he is considering. And he ought to. It's the best insurance he can secure against high upkeep and trouble.

Cadillac Factory

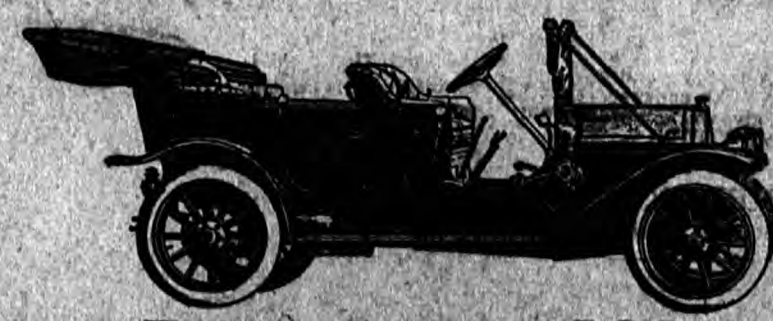

It is the Cadillac factory, its methods and facilities, which so strongly commend the Cadillac Thirty. No one, he be mechanic or not, can visit the plant and not be soundly convinced that the Cadillac is an excellent car.

Cadillac Design

Then the design of the Cadillac affords advantages which no other car offers. No motor will compare with the cooling qualities of the Cadillac, yet less water is used than in any other car of equal power. What car of equal size will travel 17 to 23 miles on a gallon of gasoline? What other car will run 100 miles on a pint of oil? The Cadillac is doing this every day.

Cadillac Dependability

If you were an expert mechanic and had plenty of time to devote to your car, you could get good service from most any well-known machine. But only a few are expert mechanics. When you buy a car you want steady, uninterrupted service. You will get this in a Cadillac, whether you are mechanically inclined or not. And you will get it at lower upkeep expense than with any other car. Truly, the buyer who knows the difference in automobiles will own a Cadillac Thirty.

Splendid for the Blood

"Being all run down last spring I was advised to take Pinkham's Blood Purifier. I tried one bottle, and got such relief that by the time I had taken three bottles I felt like a new person. After taking the medicine I gained twenty pounds in three months."—AARON WINSLOW, 60 Washington Street, Lynn, Mass.

At this season of the year almost every one needs a reliable blood purifier or spring medicine. This is indicated by that tired, "dragged-out" feeling—humors and eruptions which appear on the face and body,—and unless the blood is purified and enriched more serious consequences are liable to follow.

Pinkham's Blood Purifier

The best spring and blood medicine, is prepared by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, of Lynn, Mass. You know this Company. You know that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard medicine for women; your common-sense tells that the company which owns so successful and valuable a medicine as that could never afford to risk its reputation by putting on the market any other medicine not of the same high degree of excellence. When you buy medicine prepared by this company you get the best, and Pinkham's Blood Purifier is The Best.

CHAPTER IV
THE HIGHLANDERS.

WHEN the three men who had pulled him from his horse and bound him had withdrawn to the farther side of the campfire to wrangle noisily over what should be done with him, Blount found it difficult to realize that they were actually discussing, as one of the expedients, the propriety of knocking him on the head and flinging his body into the canyon.

The difficulty lay in the crude incredulity of things. Five minutes earlier he had been riding peacefully on the trail, wondering how badly he was lost and how much farther it was to Doubleday's. Then, at a sudden turn in the canyon bridge path, he had come upon a campfire and had found himself looking into the muzzle of a leveled Winchester.

From that to the unhorning and the blinding was but a rough and tumble half minute, since he was unarmed and the surprise had been complete, but the incredulities remained.

That some ridiculous episode on the level of a LEVEE MULEZ had been made, seemed to be the only possible explanation. But when he remembered the three invisible horsemen who had passed him on the broad mesa he was not so sure about the mistake.

Most naturally his thoughts went back to the little episode on the hotel porch. The passing glance he had given to the three men with whom his smoking room companion had been talking did not enable him to identify them with the three who were calmly discussing his fate at the nearby fire, but the conclusion was fairly obvious none the less.

Thus far he had been either too busy or too bewildered to think of asking questions, but when the more murderous of the expedients seemed actually about to prevail he thought it was time to try to find out why he was to be killed.

"I don't want to seem to interfere with any arrangements you gentlemen are making," he called across to the group at the fire, "but if you will kindly tell me why you think it necessary to murder me I should be immensely obliged."

"You know mighty good and well why there's one too many of you on Lost river just at this stage of the game," said the hard faced brigand who had held the Winchester while his two accomplices had unhorsed and bound the victim.

"But I don't," insisted Blount good naturedly. "So far as I know, there is only one of me—on Lost river or anywhere else."

"That'll do for you. It ain't your put in, nobow," was the gruff decision of the court.

But Blount was too good a lawyer to be silenced that easily.

"Perhaps you might not especially regret killing the wrong man, but in the present case I am very sure I should. Who do you think I am?"

"The boss knows who you are, and that's enough for us," said the spokesman of the three highlanders.

"The boss?" questioned Blount.

"Yass: I said the boss. Now hold your jaw."

Blount caught at the word. In a flash the conversation with Gantry flicked into his mind.

"There is only one boss in this state," he said coolly, "and I am very sure he has not given you orders to kill me."

"What's that?" demanded the spokesman.

Blount repeated his bit of information, adding, "Perhaps you'd better ring for a better connection and ask your boss if he wants you to kill the son of his boss."

At this the tall man came and stood over his prisoner.

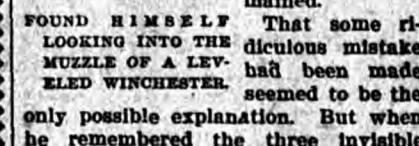

"Say, comrade, it ain't my night for kidding, and it had'n't ort to be yours," he remarked grimly. "The boss didn't say you was to be rubbed out—they never do. But I reckon it would save a heap o' trouble if you was rubbed out. You don't git over into them woods on Upper Lost creek with no papers to serve on anybody. See?"

A great light dawned upon Blount, and with it came the discomforting idea of a conviction overtaken. As a theorist he had always scoffed at the idea that corporations, which are creatures of the law, could afford to be open lawbreakers. But here was a very striking refutation of the charitable assumption.

His smoking room companion of the Pullman car was doubtless one of the timber planters who had been cutting on the public domain. To such a man an agent of the national forest service was an enemy to be disposed of as expeditiously as possible, and Blount saw that he had only himself to blame, since he had allowed the man to believe that he was a government employee.

Having the clue to the mystery, however, his course was a little easier to steer.

"My name is Blount, and I am the son of ex-Senator David Blount of this state," he announced. "Now, what are you going to do with me?"

FOUND HIMSELF. That some ridiculous episode on the level of a LEVEE MULEZ had been made, seemed to be the only possible explanation.

A great light dawned upon Blount, and with it came the discomforting idea of a conviction overtaken. As a theorist he had always scoffed at the idea that corporations, which are creatures of the law, could afford to be open lawbreakers. But here was a very striking refutation of the charitable assumption.

His smoking room companion of the Pullman car was doubtless one of the timber planters who had been cutting on the public domain. To such a man an agent of the national forest service was an enemy to be disposed of as expeditiously as possible, and Blount saw that he had only himself to blame, since he had allowed the man to believe that he was a government employee.

Having the clue to the mystery, however, his course was a little easier to steer.

"My name is Blount, and I am the son of ex-Senator David Blount of this state," he announced. "Now, what are you going to do with me?"

"What's that you say?" grated the outlaw.

"You heard what I said. Go ahead and have me hanged for it if you are willing to stand for it afterward."

The hard faced man turned on his heel without replying and went back to the other two at the fire. Blount caught only a word now and again of the low toned, wrangling argument that followed. But from the overheard word or two he gathered that there were still some feelings toward the sound old maxim which declares that "Dead men tell no tales."

When the decision was reached he was left to guess what it was. Without any explanation the thought was taken from his wrists and ankles, and he was helped upon his horse. When his captors were also mounted the new status was defined by the hard faced man in curt phrase.

"You go along quiet with us, and don't you make no bad breaks. I more'n half believe you been lyin' to me, but I'm goin' to give you a chance to prove up. If you don't prove up you pass out, that's all. Now git in line and hike out, and if you're tempted to make a break jest recollect that a chunk o' lead out of a Winchester kin travel a heap faster than your legs."

For the first few miles the trail was no difficult that speed was one of the question, but later in crossing a high lying valley the horses were pushed, and ten or twelve miles were covered at a gallop.

When the canyon trail came out upon broad uplands and became a country road, with ranches on either hand, watered by irrigation canals into which the mountain torrent was diverted, there were no familiar landmarks to tell Blount whether his captors were leading him.

As he was able to determine by holding his watch face up to the moonlight, it was nearly midnight when the silent cavalcade of four turned aside from the main road into an avenue of huge cottonwood trees.

At its head the avenue became a circular driveway, and facing the driveway was a stately house, with a massive Georgian facade and colonnade porch, flung its black shadow across the white gravel of the carriage approach.

There were lights in one wing of the house, and another appeared behind the twilight in the entrance hall when the leader of the three highlanders had tramped up the steps and touched the bell push.

Blount had a fleeting glimpse of a black head with a crown of snowy cardcase, found it and bunched to introduce himself by name. She took the bit of pasteboard, and since she scarcely glanced at the engraved line on it he found himself wholly unable to interpret the smile she gave him in return.

"The card is hardly necessary," she said, and then, to his complete bewilderment, "You're very like your father, Mr. Blount."

"You know my father?" he exclaimed. She laughed softly. "Every one knows the senator. And I can assure you that his son is very welcome under this roof. 'Uncle Barnabas'—to the ancient serving man, who was still hovering in the background—"have Mr. Blount's horse put up and the blue room made ready."

THAT AWFUL BACKACHE

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand light clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have the backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

GREATER SALISBURY.

Mayor Bonds in a special message to the City Council this week, calls the attention of the Council to the crowded condition of the business section of this city, and the necessity of more room for the increasing number of business houses. If, we are to have the major portion of our business transacted in the same general section of our city—as seems to be the general rule in other towns and cities. Today our main business section is limited to Main, Dock and a portion of Division Streets. This place is practically filled up and a new enterprise opening up in Salisbury would find it very hard to get a location in what today is known as the business section. It is very evident to all that if we are to grow, our present business section must be enlarged. This may come as the natural displacement of some portion now used as a residential section, for business purposes; or, as Mayor Bonds suggests, be met by the continuation of Main Street through to what was formerly the Humphreys Mill Pond and thence on through to the railroad.

This property is now being put in shape for building purposes and will soon be put on the market, and doubtless plans are now in the course of preparation as to the laying out of the property in streets.

The continuation of Main Street through to the Railroad would open up a street along which our business could expand as progress demands.

Whether this is the proper time to consider the opening of this Street or not it will be a wise course to pursue to have the recently improved property so laid out that there will be no obstruction in the way if the future growth of this city demands this improvement. At least, the message is one that not only should be carefully considered by our Council, but our live progressive citizens, as well, who have the future progress of the city at heart, should carefully ponder over the question and examine the bearings on the future of our city.

Salisbury made wonderful progress during the last decade, and if she desires to keep up the pace, must not be content to sit idly by letting things drift, trusting to luck and a kind of fatalism to see her through. It is time our active, wide-awake, progressive citizens should turn their hand to the task of guiding her course and help to shape her destiny. Never in her history have the prospects for continued growth, increased prosperity and enduring advancement been so bright.

New enterprises have settled in our midst, many others are ready to come, if the advantages which our city has to offer is brought before the proper parties in a strong, forcible and convincing manner. In this move for progress every citizen has his part to play and none should shrink from doing his duty.

In another section of this week's issue we publish an article on this subject that is well worth the reading, and shows further that other towns are getting wide awake and we must do likewise unless we wish to be outdistanced by others in the race. If we allow ourselves to dream while others work many new enterprises which ought to come here, will go to some other place, who although without many of our natural advantages will land the prize because they went after it in a vigorous, whole-hearted way.

If Salisbury is to advance let us see that the needle of her compass points true to the Star of Progress all the time and not allow it to be deflected by the various reactionary forces that always strive to clog the wheels of progress, whether these be guided by selfishness, timidity, conservatism, or by a mere antagonistic to all changes whether they be for better or worse.

Mrs. Joanna Davis.

Mrs. Joanna Davis, wife of Levin J. Davis, died suddenly of heart disease Sunday morning, aged 41 years, at her home on Waller Street. Deceased is survived by a husband and two children. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. W. Hardesty Wednesday afternoon. Interment was in the family burying ground on the Adams Avenue farm in Parsons District.

LOSS $500 A MINUTE

By Fire—Everyone Taxed $3 A Year, Mr. Wentworth Tells Creditors.

"Every man, woman and child in America is taxed $3 annually to pay for the country's fire."

This significant statement was made by Mr. Franklin H. Wentworth, of Boston, in an address before the Credit Men's Association of Salisbury at a dinner given at the Eatwell House. The occasion was one of the monthly meetings held by the association, and there were present about 75 representatives of the prominent wholesale firms of Baltimore.

Mr. Wentworth is secretary of the National Fire Protective Association, the only organization of its kind in the United States, and his address consisted of an elaborate consideration of "The Significance of the Fire Wastage."

Far Less in Europe.

The average per capita loss in Europe, based upon statistics gathered in six countries, he said, was 38 cents. This vast difference between this and any other nation as regards the prevalence of fires he blamed solely upon the carelessness of the American people and the fact that they assume no personal responsibility for the loss occasioned by conflagrations.

"If we Americans wake up in the middle of the night and can't find a match," he exclaimed, "we feel personally abused. In Europe, if one wants a match he must go to the places where matches are kept."

To this fact he traced much of the loss of life and property by means of fire to which this nation is perennially subjected. But the chief cause of the alarming fire tax in America, he said, which averages $250,000,000 a year, was on account of the many wooden buildings which are found in towns and cities and which constitute virtual invitations for the spread of conflagrations.

Calls for Carelessness.

"Five hundred dollars a minute," he declared, "it costs America to indulge in her present rate of carelessness and in ten minutes this amount reaches enough to purchase a handsome home. New York spends $5,000,000 a year in fire protection."

"In France one is held responsible for the loss if a fire starts in his residence and burns down the home of a neighbor. Here we are fire anarchists. We assume no responsibility beyond condoling with our neighbor over his loss if we burn the roof over his head."

"There is abroad in America a general impression that the people do not have to pay this tremendous fire tax and that it falls solely upon the insurance companies. It is paid for in every article we buy, and is one of the causes of the high cost of living. 'The cost of his policy is added to the cost of the articles not out by the manufacturer, and we pay for his risk without knowing it.'"

National Secretary Speaks.

Mr. Charles E. Meek, national secretary of the organization of which the Credit Men's Association is a branch in a brief address pointed out the close relation between the credit of a merchant and the adequacy of his insurance against fire, and said that if the rate of fires in this country were diminished rates of insurance would likewise fall.

Canada Bars Negroes.

The action of the Canadian immigration officials in stopping a party of American negroes at Winnipeg, and turning them back on the ground that they were undesirable citizens attracted attention at Washington. The question had not been raised before because climatic conditions in Canada have dissuaded negroes from migrating to that country in great numbers. The negro population of the Northern States has been growing rapidly, and now that the black race is on the verge of flowing across the border into Canadian provinces, it is said that the Dominion officials intend to exclude blacks as well as Orientals whenever it can be held that they are undesirable.

Drama's Fate With Women

At the request of the department of dramatics at Harvard University, a prominent New York theatrical manager has had accurate account kept at the door of five large playhouses in a week to prove his contention that the predominance of women attending the theatre really places the fate of American drama in the hands of their sex.

The general proportion of women at the nightly performances of five plays during the week was between sixty eight and sixty nine per cent according to the count. Every type of attraction, save musical comedy, was included. Even a farce designed to appeal particularly to men showed a percentage of sixty five in the attendance of women.

Strike At Chestertown.

Chestertown carpenters, numbering about thirty, went on a strike Wednesday setting for nine hours work and ten hours pay. One of the contractors acceded to their demands, but he does most of his work by day wage.

The largest contractors state that it is impossible for them to pay more than at present—twenty-two and one-half cents and thirty cents an hour and steady work. There is considerable work there now, new buildings going up all about and more planned.

WOLVES EAT WEDDING

Party—Russians Sacrifice Women And Children to the Ravenous Beasts

118 Devoured.

One hundred and eighteen members of a wedding party of one hundred and twenty, including the bride and bridegroom, were devoured by wolves while traveling by sledges from Ostipoff to Tashkend, in Asiatic Russia, a distance of twenty miles.

Tuesday's Zaitou, a newspaper, declared that the two survivors reached Tashkend in a half crazed condition, after having at the last stages of the journey thrown the bride and bridegroom to the ravenous pack of wolves. These four occupied the same sledge. The survivors demanded that the husband abandon his wife, to lighten the sledge, but he refused. In their rage the survivors threw both the husband and his wife from the sledge, thus appeasing the hunger of the wolves until the sledge reached the edge of Tashkend.

The women and children of the party were the first to be thrown to the wolves, according to these survivors. They say the party started from Ostipoff in thirty two-horse sledges, and a few miles out, hundreds of hungry wolves attacked them. The men shot many of the maddened animals, but could not check their pursuit. Then it was that the men in the party began sacrificing the women and children.

The wolves were so numerous and ravenous that even when a horse was pulled down it checked the pack for only a few seconds.

This Saturday the sale will be held at the home of Mrs. F. J. Barclay.

—"Walls of Jericho" will be the subject of Dr. Graham's sermon in the Methodist Protestant Church Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The pastor will also preach on "Despondency" in the morning at 11 o'clock.

—Baptist Church at 9:30; Class Meeting at 3; Christian Endeavor service at 6:30; Mid-week service in the lecture room Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

—Division Street Baptist Church, Chas. T. Hewitt, pastor. On Sunday morning Mr. Hewitt is preaching a series of sermons on "Baptist Principles." Preaching by the pastor at 7:30. The sermon theme will be "Saving America."

—Mr. O. M. Austin and brother will open the Hotel at Mardela about the first of April, and run it as a road house. The Hotel and lawn will be lighted by electricity. The electric plant is being installed by F. A. Grier and Sons. An eight h. p. Foss Engine will be used.

—At a meeting of the directors of the Talbot County Fair Association Tuesday, it was decided to accept the dates assigned them by the Maryland and Virginia Racing Circuit for the holding of this year's four days' fair and race meet, which will be Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 22nd, 23rd, 24th and 25th.

—The members and friends of the M. P. Church will hold a St. Patrick's Masquerade Social at Gillis and Dashiell's Hall, Quantico, on Saturday, March 18th. Paper costumes will be used and all are cordially invited. Refreshments served free. Adults, 15c. Children under ten years, 10c. Proceeds for painting of M. P. Parsonage. Should the weather be inclement, it will be held the following Monday.

—At the Women's Christian Temperance Union meeting last Friday a loyal temperance legion was organized. Miss Alice Willes was elected Superintendent; Misses Nina Yonables, Edith Welsbach and Mrs. James Lank, together with some ladies not yet selected from the members of the M. E. Church, South, will act as assistants to the Superintendent. This is a good work and the legion should receive the hearty cooperation of those in sympathy with temperance work.

Auto Hearse Coach The Latest.

The latest thing in automobiles is a complete hearse and funeral coach. Such a machine is now being constructed by Felton and Walker, of Philadelphia, for the Lawncroft Cemetery Company, of Wilmington, Del. This firm is building the body, which is of limousine type, and the Packard Automobile Company will furnish the remainder of the car. The engine will be seventy-five horse power, and will cost the cemetery company $7,500. The car will be 16 feet, 8 inches long, 8 feet wide, and 6 feet 4 inches high. In front will be the hearse and apartment for the pallbearers, and in the rear the coach for the mourners, seating twenty or more people.

Hiring of Teams Abused.

According to rumor some of our men have been hiring teams for driving around town or for a short drive outside and then use it for a longer drive.

On complaint of Tindle and Spence, liveries of this place, two young men, were before Justice Trader this week under the charge of hiring a team for driving around town and then using it for a Berlin trip. They agreed to pay the usual hire for a team going this distance and the costs of the case. It is reported that two others on the same day, hired a double team, to drive to Mount Herman and continued on to Berlin.

Crows Open College.

A Northville woman who drove to New Milford Monday says she saw a flock of crows formed in a circle and facing the center, where one crow stood.

This crow would bend over and touch his bill to the ground. Then in the circle would imitate him. Then he would flap his wings and caw, and his audience would do the same. Once he nearly stood on his bill and the whole circle promptly tried to do likewise.

Farmers think the instructor came to Northville to give local crows lessons on how to get newly sown corn out of the ground. So the farmers will place scarecrows equipped with bells about their fields this spring.

The U. S. Government in its "Pure Food Law" does not "insure" or "guarantee" any preparation, as some manufacturers in their advertisements would make it appear. In the case of medicine the law provides that certain drugs shall be mentioned on the labels, if they are ingredients of the preparation. Ely's Cream Balm, the well known family remedy for cold in the head, hay fever and nasal catarrh, doesn't contain a single injurious drug, so the makers have simply to print the fact that it complies fully with the requirements of the law.

More than Merely Guaranteed Hose

There are a great many long wear, but they do so at the expense of appearance.

You surely do not want this kind. For a sock that does not even fit well or look well is worse than none.

Everwear Hose are the guaranteed kind. Each pair of six must wear six months or new hose will be given free. But they are more than merely "guaranteed" hose.

Everwear does not sacrifice ease or style for durability. The heel and toe are given extra strength but not extra thickness. These parts are the same ply as the balance of the hose—the weave is merely made very much closer at these points, but not thicker.

This is done by the exclusive Everwear process. That is why you cannot get the Everwear quality in any other hosiery.

We have them in all popular shades. Ask for "An Everwear Year." Its free.

Short Crop of Cow Peas Prices Are Going Up!

The enormous demand for Cow Peas last year carried the price very high, and as the crop is very short and the acreage is rapidly extending, there are many indications which point to much higher prices as the sowing season approaches.

Whip-poor-will Cow Peas. The Whip-poor-will are generally preferred in the Central and Southern States. They are bush form, early maturing and especially desirable for Peas.

New Era Cow Peas. New Era are a little earlier and make more vine than the Whip-poor-will.

Wonderfuls, Clays and Mixed Cow Peas. For Hay, the Wonderfuls or the Mixed Cow Peas are more productive. They should be planted with an occasional grain of Corn, Sorghum Seed, Kaffir Corn, etc., which will prevent the vines from getting damaged by coming in contact with the ground.

Black Cow Peas. Black Cow Peas are a little earlier in maturing than Clays; they make a good growth of vine, are a exceptionally good for medium or poor land, and will stand almost any amount of wet weather without injury.

REMEMBER: Bolgiano's Cow Peas are unquestionably the best. If your Local Merchant will not supply Bolgiano's Cow Peas, write us direct and we will tell you where you can get them.

FREE. Send us 5 cents in stamps to pay postage and mention this paper, and we will send you free a 5c package of "My Maryland" Tomato Seed, also our 1911 Catalogue of Seeds and our 1911 Poultry Supply Catalogue.

A SINNER

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD, YET ONLY A CHILD,
ELECTROCUTED
Might Have Lived a Thousand Years

Brooklyn, March 5.—Pastor Russell preached this afternoon in Brooklyn's largest auditorium, and in the evening held a Question Meeting. Both services were crowded and at both eager and deep interest was manifested. The text of the afternoon service was, "THENCEFORTH THERE SHALL BE NO MORE DEATH UNTO AN INFANT OF DAYS, NOR OF AN OLD MAN WHO HATH NOT FILLED HIS DAYS. FOR THE DYING ONE SHALL BE BUT THE CHILD AT AN HUNDRED YEARS OLD—A SINNER AT A HUNDRED YEARS OLD, HE SHALL BE ASSAILED—CUT OFF FROM LIFE (ISAIAH LXV. 20). The speaker said:

Our text is a part of the Divine prophecy of the blessings which will come to Israel and to the whole world during Messiah's glorious reign of a thousand years—beginning with the close of this Gospel Era. Succeeding verses tell that in that glorious Epoch lordliness will be a thing of the past. "They shall build houses and inhabit them; they shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them; they shall not build and another inhabit; they shall not plant and another eat." Additionally we read, "They shall not labor in vain nor bring forth for trouble." Further we read that then the "Wolf and the lamb shall feed together and the lion shall eat fodder like the bullock."

No Spiritual Snuff, Oxen, Wolves, Etc. No end of confusion has been created by the interpretation of the reward of the Church in heaven. Nothing in the Scriptures warrants us in thinking that there will be spiritual, heavenly sheep and oxen, wolves and lions, vines and houses, planting and building. Those who reject the clear Bible teaching respecting a Messianic reign of righteousness cannot understand the Bible at all. Not a single passage of the Old Testament tells of heavenly hopes or promises. Only a few of them teach heavenly things at all, and then indirectly. As, for instance, in the types of the High Priest, glorious and beautiful, symbolize, we believe, the heavenly reign of righteousness. The stars which during the period of His reign. Similarly God's promise to Abraham declares that His Seed, His posterity, shall be as the stars of heaven and as the sands of the seashore. Nothing in this statement would necessarily teach a heavenly state or condition. Only by the aid of the New Testament and the Holy Scriptures' illumination can we see that two Seeds of Abraham are distinctly referred to, the stars indirectly implying the Spiritual Seed, while the sands of the seashore refer to Abraham's Natural Seed. As it is written, "I have constituted Thee a father of many nations"—like unto God.

So the Spiritual Seed of Abraham is now being developed. With its completion this Age will end, and the Natural Seed of Abraham will return to special favor and become the leading nation of the world under the guidance and direction of the spiritual and invisible, yet All-Powerful, Kingdom of Messiah.

The blessing through natural Israel will gradually extend to every nation. In that the door will be opened by which all nations may come into and become a part of Abraham's Seed, and thus into harmony with Messiah's Kingdom. Whoever refuses this great privilege and blessing of Messiah's Kingdom will be destroyed from amongst the people in the Second Death.

Hundred-Year Old Children. Centenarians of the present time are few, and they by no means are the children. Usually they are wrinkled and haggard. We are to remember, however, the Bible record that several of the earlier members of Adam's race lived nine hundred years, or rather, they were more than nine hundred years in coming fully under the sentence against sinners—"By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world, and death as a result of sin; and thus death passed upon all men, because all have sinned (Romans v. 12). Gradually, and especially since the flood, when a great change took place in our cosmogony, human longevity has decreased, while mental, moral and physical ailments have increased. Several of Adam's children did not have their first born child until after they were a century old. In confirmation of this, and correspondingly in contradiction of the Evolution theory, we find that the Ancients were strong in their manhood, as well as physically; for they intermarried brothers with sisters and cousins without in jury, whereas today the mental weakness of the race is such that one out of every one hundred and fifty adults is in an insane asylum, and the marriage of brothers and sisters is prohibited, and even the marriage of second cousins is disapproved and held responsible for increasing weak-mindedness.

We see, then, that our text, describing Messiah's Kingdom, merely recovers mankind from the effects of the fall so that it shall then be as it was in Adam's day—that full human righteousness, maturity, will be reached in a century and that a man dying then would be dying in childhood as compared with the remainder of the race. The further manhood is that, man will die even at a hundred years of age, except with sinners who refusing to submit themselves to the regulations of Messiah's Kingdom, will then be cut off from life as unworthy of any further favor at the hands of the great Redeemer—Messiah—all of whose dealings will represent Divine Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power.

Man's Years as a Tree's. The Scriptures tell us that under Messiah's Kingdom the days of a man shall be as the days of a tree. And it is believed that some people live to be at least a thousand years old. This is God's provision for every man—every member of the human family—after He shall have accomplished the work of this Gospel Age, the selection of the Spiritual Seed of Abraham, typified by the priests and Levites. "The Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven."

Messiah's Kingdom is to dominate the earth for a thousand years, with a view to blessing Adam and all of his posterity—with a view to uplifting them from sin and degradation and death. The uplifting influences will begin at once, following the great time of trouble with which the Kingdom will be inaugurated. The judgments of the Lord will be abroad in the earth and the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness. None shall longer need say to his neighbor or his brother, "Know thou the Lord; for all shall know Him, from the least unto the greatest of them," for "the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the whole earth" (Jer. xxxi. 34; Isaiah xl. 5).

Whoever, then, by obedience to the laws of the Kingdom will avail himself of the blessed privileges of Restoration (Acts ii. 19-21), will not only be helped upward out of mental, moral and physical imperfection, step by step toward perfection, but, so long as he progresses, he may live—clear down to the end of that blessed thousand years. If we had never seen trees; if our own experiences had been with vegetation such as perishes within a year, we might have been dying in believing that we should last as long as having seen trees centuries old. Such a statement would seem as unreasonable to us as to tell us that humanity could live for a thousand years or forever.

Have we not indeed seen children old and wrinkled looking, yet only in their teens? And have we not seen others cheerful, fresh and comparatively young-looking at sixty and seventy?

All Unrighteousness is Sin. At the present time God "winks" at much of the wrong-doing that there is in the world. He does not interfere with it. But of course, if any transgression carries with it naturally more or less of a depraving influence on the transgressor's mind and body. The conscience is the most tender and the most important element of our human nature. Whoever violates it, whoever injures it, much or little, will proportionately be disadvantaged in the future and will have all the more difficulty in rising up gradually out of his degradation and weakness, even with all the helps that will then be available. Thus will be fulfilled the Scriptural declaration, "Whoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." With all mankind redeemed there will be nothing whatever of the past chargeable against any on the books of Divine Justice. The great "High Priest" by his better sacrifices, will have made full satisfaction to the demands of justice, but the weaknesses, mental, moral, and physical, resulting from more or less willful and deliberate sin, must still be reckoned on, and thus every idle word and every idle thought, every idle and vicious action of the present time, by making its mark upon the characters of men, is providing for corresponding difficulties on their part in that glorious day of their opportunity.

The suggestion of our text is that the great Messiah will not temporize, with the entire period of His reign, with those who show a proper appreciation of opportunities when fully brought in contact with them and clearly understanding the terms of Divine grace. But one hundred years is quite a considerable period of probation and surely every reasonable mind will concede that so long a delay in meeting out the full penalty of sin, Second Death, manifests the extreme limit of reasonable mercy.

The Church's Triumph Shorter. The Church, whose trial is in progress during this Gospel Age, receives substantially a much shorter period of probation than our text declares will be granted to mankind in the future. God's saintly people are expected to develop character and to approve themselves to God as "overcomers" within a very brief space of life. And not only so, but they are required to "walk by faith and not by sight." They merely have God's Word as respects His Justice and Love and glorious plans, while, in the next Age, the world will have the actuality instead of the promise—the world will walk by sight. "The glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all flesh shall see it together" (Isaiah xl. 5).

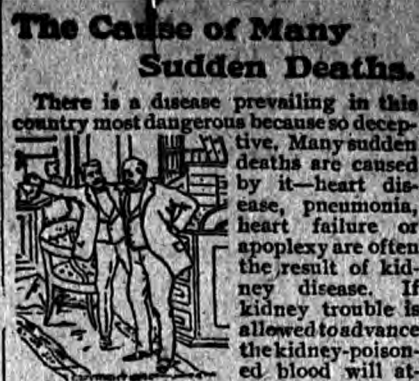

The world during Messiah's reign will be privileged to walk in a highway of holiness, from which all the stumbling stones will have been gathered out. But the overcomers of the Church are required to walk in the narrow way, steep, narrow, rugged, and beset with snares of the Adversary. "For we are not ignorant of his snares" (II Corinthians ii. 11).

We are not to forget, however, that these differences between the Church and the world are fully offset by the differences of reward. The overcomers of the Church are to be rewarded with glory, honor, immortality, "the divine nature," and be joint-heirs in the Kingdom as members of the great Messiah. The world is to have no such change of nature from human to spirit, but is to have the earthly nature restored or perfected in them, if obedient, and to enjoy the earthly Eden. Truly God's ways are equal. True and righteous are Thy ways, Lord God Almighty! (Revelation xv. 3, 4).

Humanity's Final Test. The Church's test takes place in the present life. And in each member thereof the matter of worthiness or unworthiness of eternal life on the spirit plane for all time is determined at death. Not so with humanity in general. As we have just seen, some may live for only a hundred years and then be cut off in the Second Death, because of unworthiness of further opportunity. Others, by availing themselves of the privileges and rendering obedience to the laws of the Kingdom, may live to the very close of the thousand years, and be found unworthy of eternal life. Still others may so fully appreciate Divine Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power and may become so obedient thereto that God will be pleased to grant them eternal life. Their days, their lives, will be far more than the days of a tree.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths. There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or proplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and better health in that organ is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root if you do you will be disappointed.

The scintillating, splendid beauty of our Cut Glass will delight and gratify the most critical and exacting purchasers. Important Notice

To Eastern Shore Farmers.

I am now able to offer to this trade the best Agricultural Lime manufactured. Works at Martinsburg and Bakerton, W. Va. This lime is made by the Standard Lime and Stone Co., whose main office is in Buckeystown, Md. Guaranteed analysis, 98.5% Carburate Lime.

I am selling this same lime at price others are asking for Kiln-burnt lime. Where quality is considered, the Standard Lime is much cheaper.

I take this occasion to thank the large number of farmers who have used the Standard Lime for the favor with which they have received it, and to assure them and others that in the future, as in the past, I will furnish them with lime so clean, pure and strong that it must continue to merit the name Standard. For further information, write or phone me.

LARGEST

CARRIAGE, WAGON & HARNESS DEALER

In the State of Maryland

...1911...

TAYLOR'S Horse and Carriage Bazaar has been crowded all this month with buyers. Never before were there so many strangers in our town buying horses, mules, wagons, buggies and harness; in fact it is hard to get waited on. Out-of-town customers are waiting to make arrangements ahead.

If anyone thinks the above statement is not correct and will come here, they will say they never saw anything like it.

I have 50 Horses and Mules, and most anyone can get suited, as our prices keep the crowd coming, and our reliability keeps them satisfied. Our guarantee is as good as any BAZ.

I have more Horse Collars and Harness than any five stores on the Eastern Shore. Every customer is an advertisement for me. Seeing is believing; come see for yourself.

LAME EVERY MORNING

A Bad Back is Always Worse in The Morning. Salisbury People Are Finding Relief.

A back that aches all day and causes discomfort at night is usually worse in the morning. Unless you feel as if you hadn't slept at all.

Don't miss a half hour and you cure the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills help sick kidneys—make you feel better, work better, rest better and sleep better. Permanent cures in Salisbury prove the merit of Doan's.

Mrs. Anna Foster, of Salisbury, Md., says: "I willingly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, although my experience with them has not been very extensive. I felt languid and when I awoke in the morning, my back was very lame. The kidney troubles passed too frequently and there was a sediment in them, proving that my kidneys were out of order. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me at once and after taking the contents of one box, I felt better in every way."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Saved A Soldier's Life.

Facing death from shot and shell in the civil war was more agreeable to J. A. Foster, of Kempton, Pa., than facing it from what doctors said was consumption. "I contracted a stubborn cough," he writes, "that developed a cough, that stuck to me in spite of all remedies for years. My weight ran down to 120 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. I now weigh 175 pounds." For Coughs, Colds, La Grippe, Asthma, Hemorrhages, Hoarseness, Croup, Whooping Cough and lung trouble, it's an unfailing remedy. 50c and $1.00 Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by All Druggists.

A healthy man is a king in his own right; an unhealthy man is an unhappy slave. Dr. King's New Discovery builds up sound blood—keeps you well.

"Suffered day and night the torment of itching skin. Nothing helped me until I used Doan's Ointment. It cured me permanently."—Hon. John R. Garrett, Mayor, Girard, Ala.

THE CARMEN OF PARIS

Hailing One in the Same as a Declaration of War.

THEY ARE INSOLENT ROGUES

Snore and Cautious Advice Are Showed Upon Those Who Engage Them. On War or Fatal Days the Cabbies Spurn Those Who Want to Ride.

Among Anglo-Saxons there is a general and instinctive desire to do business on the basis of an entire cordiality. In Paris the hailing of a cabman is looked on by both parties to the transaction as an implied declaration of war. The cabman takes your measure, and you take his number if you are wise. At once he will give you a reason to remark that he has a rooted and premeditated objection to drive you where you wish to go. Perhaps he prefers the opera quarter because it is central, or should the weather be fine his heart is probably set upon driving in the Bois, while you may have business at the bourse. He explains his views on the subject selfishly and coolly.

A foreigner alighted recently from the Calais train at the Northern railway station in Paris and ordered a typical Parisian cabman, bloated, pale and abstinent soaked, to drive him to the Rue Blomet, which is a street in the relatively distant Vaugirard quarter. "Peut on habiter la Rue Blomet?" ("Is it possible to inhabit the Rue Blomet?") exclaimed the ragged ruffian in an epigrammatic note of disdain which would have done honor to Ben Brummont.

But it is when the Paris cabman has once started on his "course," a war-path in the strict sense of the term, that he proves to what a limitless extent he is the enemy of mankind. His hatred of the "bourgeois" the "man in the street," in spite of and indeed because of his being a potential client, is expressed at every yard. He constantly tries to run him down, which makes strangers to Paris accuse the Paris cabman of driving badly, while in point of fact he is not driving at all, but playing with malicious skill a game of his own which suggests cannon billiards in the hands of a world's champion.

But it is not with the public alone that he is at war. On all other cabmen whose path he crosses, on omnibus drivers, motorcar men, bicyclists, private coachmen, costermongers with barrows and (not to omit) the police he heaped deadly insults, the least of which are "Ours!" ("Beast!" and "Fou!" ("Fool!" or "Foolish!" the latter containing a subtle double meaning, intelligible only to those who have Paris "argot" or slang at their finger tips and tongue to explain.

The cabman's wild career through the streets, the constant weaving and swerving, the hissing of his madcap hurlements and collisions, the frenzied gesticulations which he exchanges with his "fare," the panic-stricken flight of the agonized women whose lives he has endangered, the ugly rushes which the public occasionally makes at him with a view to lynching him, the sprawling and falling of his madmen, hysterical, stary, tame, contribute as much as anything to the spasmodic intensity, the electric blue fire diabolie, which are characteristic of the general movement of Paris.

All that can be said in mitigation of the Paris cabman's method is that "he has them in the blood." Every Parisian (and the cabman is no exception) has the soul of a dictator and the spirit of an artist. To exercise autocratic power and, failing this, to enjoy the maximum of personal freedom from all restraint, moral or social, is the goal at which he is ever aiming, openly or secretly.

Watch a Paris cabman, for instance, on a wet day or on some festival occasion such as the New Year, when there is a big demand for his services. With what haughty disdain does he drive along the streets, deaf to every appeal, refusing every fare, rejoicing in the discomfort and inconvenience he is causing, triumphant in the thought that at last he has "the bourgeois" at his feet, that the clientele which he detests and which detests him is now a humiliated, benumbed or bedraggled mob of supplicants waiting on his will, whom he can engage to boiling point with his sneers and his silence or lash with his sarcasms as cruelly as he beats his horse.

Cheerfully does he sacrifice half a day's earnings to the enjoyment of this exquisite revenge, for at least he can say to his hungry wife and children when he gets home, "I had reason." They may not have dined, but he has lived.

It is because the Parisian recognizes in himself a certain community of sentiment with the cabman in this attitude toward life that he tolerates him, though he does not forgive him. —Harper's Weekly.

Her Only Course.

Lady Anne Lindsay, the author of the old poem "And Robin Gray," was not only a delightful conversationalist, but she was a great story teller.

This gift made her not only a welcome guest abroad, but a valuable member of the home circle. For it is related in "A Group of Scottish Women" that at a dinner party which she was giving to some friends an old man servant caused some amusement by saying in a perfectly audible undertone:

"My lady, you must tell another story. The second course won't be ready for five minutes."

Has Walked 22,000 Miles in 36 Years.

When Prof. J. O. Kilgus, principal of the school at Monterey, completes the school term of 1910-11, he will have walked a distance of 22,000 miles between his home in Waynesboro and the school. Professor Kilgus has been teaching at Monterey for six years. He rides on the trolley as far as Romonville everyday and walks to and from the school, a distance of four and a half miles each way.

During the thirty-six years he has been teaching school Professor Kilgus estimates that he has walked 22,000 miles, a distance almost equal to the circumference of the earth. He has walked on an average of four miles every school day, and in all his experience as a teacher he never lost a day at school on account of illness until recently, when he was ill for a week with la grippe.

The Agricultural Multiplication Table.

"One hundred."

"Then you have bought some more; you only had twenty."

"No, I haven't bought any; I haven't had any given to me; I haven't rented any. Still I claim that I have one hundred acres."

"How do you make that out?"

"Just this way: I bought twenty acres and thoroughly underdrained it, raised four, six and eight inch sils, then I plowed it deep, utilizing every foot of ground twice the depth of former cultivation, making on an average, one acre equal to two. That gave me forty acres."

"Just so."

"I then fertilized the land so that one acre produced as much as three did before. That made me twenty acres more, making the total sixty acres."

"I see."

"Then I practiced persistent cultivation, which, I can prove, will double the yield of any acre. Twenty acres more, you see, which makes me eighty."

"Yes, and now for the other twenty."

"The other twenty I got by only using the best of seed and by putting brains and system into my work. And to prove that my farm contains one hundred acres, I am willing to compare results with the average hundred acres anywhere. Things equal to the same thing are equal to each other, you know."

Now Good News Spreads.

"I am 70 years old and travel most of the time," writes B. F. Tolson, of Elizabethtown, Ky. "Everywhere I go I recommend Electric Bitters, because I owe my excellent health and vitality to them. A SINNER ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD, YET ONLY A CHILD, ELECTROCUTED Might Have Lived a Thousand Years

Brooklyn, March 5.—Pastor Russell preached this afternoon in Brooklyn's largest Auditorium and in the evening held a Question Meeting. Both services were crowded and at both eager and deep interest was manifested. The text of the afternoon service was, "THENCEFORTH THERE SHALL BE NO MORE [DEATH OF] AN INFANT OF DAYS, NOR OF AN OLD MAN WHO HATH NOT FILLED HIS DAYS. FOR THE DYING ONE SHALL BE BUT THE CHILD AT AN HUNDRED YEARS OLD; A SINNER AT A HUNDRED YEARS OLD, HE SHALL BE ACCUSED"—CUT OFF FROM LIFE (ISAIAH LXV. 20). The speaker said:—

Our text is a part of the Divine prophecy of the blessings which will come to Israel and to the whole world during Messiah's glorious reign of a thousand years—beginning with the close of this Gospel Era. Succeeding verses tell that in that glorious Epoch landlording will be a thing of the past. "They shall build houses and inhabit them; they shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them; they shall not build and another inhabit; they shall not plant and another eat." Additionally we read, "They shall not labor in vain nor bring forth for trouble." Further we read that then the "Wolf and the lamb shall feed together and the lion shall eat fodder like the bullock."

No Spiritual Sheep, Oxen, Wolves, Etc. No end of confusion has been created by the intent of well-meaning people to apply these prophecies as the reward of the Church in heaven. Nothing in the Scriptures warrants us in thinking that there will be spiritual, heavenly sheep and oxen, wolves and lions, vines and houses, planting and building. Those who reject the clear Bible teaching respecting a Messianic reign of righteousness cannot understand the Bible at all. Nor a single passage of the Old Testament tells of heavenly hopes or promises. Only a few of them teach heavenly things at all, and then indirectly. As, for instance, in the types of the Old Testament the garments of the High Priest, glorious and beautiful, symbolize, we believe, the heavenly grandeur, honors and glories of Messiah during the period of His reign. Similarly God's promise to Abraham declares that His Seed, His posterity, shall be as the stars of heaven and as the sands of the seashore. Nothing in this statement would necessarily teach a heavenly state or condition. Only by the aid of the New Testament and the Holy Scriptures' illumination can we see that two Seeds of Abraham are distinctly referred to, the stars indirectly implying the Spiritual Seed, while the sands of the seashore refer to Abraham's Natural Seed. As it is written, "I have constituted Thee a father of many nations"—like unto God.

So the Spiritual Seed of Abraham is now being developed. With its completion this Age will end, and the Natural Seed of Abraham will return to special favor and become the leading nation of the world under the guidance and direction of the spiritual and invisible, yet All-Powerful, Kingdom of Messiah.

The blessing, through natural Israel, will gradually extend to every nation, in that the door will be opened by which all nations may come into and become a part of Abraham's Seed, and thus into harmony with Messiah's Kingdom. Whosoever refuses this great privilege and blessing of Messiah's Kingdom will be destroyed from amongst the people in the Second Death.

Hundred-Year Old Children. Centenarians of the present time are few, and they by no means are like children. Usually they are wrinkled and haggard. We are to remember, however, the Bible record that several of the earlier members of Adam's race lived nine hundred years, or rather, they were more than nine hundred years in coming fully under the sentence against sinners—"By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world, and death as a result of sin; and thus death passed upon all men, because all are sinners." (Rom. 5:12). Gradually, and especially since the flood, when a great change took place in our cosmogony, human longevity has decreased, while mental, moral and physical ailments have increased. Several of Adam's children did not have their first born child until after they were a century old. In confirmation of this, and correspondingly in contradiction of the Evolution theory, we find that the Ancients were stronger than we, mentally, as well as physically; for they intermarried brothers with sisters and cousins without in jury, whereas today the mental weakness of the race is such that one out of every one hundred and fifty adults is in an insane asylum, and the marriage of brothers and sisters is prohibited, and even the marriage of second cousins is disapproved and held responsible for increasing weak-mindedness.

are, except minor sinners who, refusing to submit themselves to the regulations of Messiah's Kingdom, will then be cut off from life as unworthy of any further favor at the hands of the great Redeemer—Messiah—all of whose dealings will represent Divine Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power.

Man's Years as a Tree's. The Scriptures tell us that under Messiah's Kingdom the days of a man shall be as the days of a tree. And it is believed that some trees live to be at least a thousand years old. This is God's provision for every man—every member of the human family—after He shall have accomplished the work of this Gospel Age, the selection of the Spiritual Seed of Abraham, typified by the priests and Levites, "The Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven."

Messiah's Kingdom is to dominate the earth for a thousand years, with a view to blessing Adam and all of his posterity—with a view to uplifting them from sin and degradation and death. The uplifting influences will begin at once, following the great time of trouble with which the Kingdom will be inaugurated. The judgments of the Lord will be abroad in the earth and the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness. None shall see trouble say to his neighbor and his brother, "Know thou the Lord; for all shall know Him, from the least unto the greatest of them," for "the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the whole earth" (Jer. xxxi. 34; Isaiah xl. 5).

Whoever, then, by obedience to the laws of the Kingdom will avail himself of the blessed privileges of Restoration (Acts iii. 19-21), will not only be helped upward out of mental, moral and physical imperfection, step by step toward perfection, but, so long as he progresses, he may live—clear down to the end of that blessed thousand years. If we had never seen trees; if our own experiences had been with vegetation such as perishes within a year, we might have difficulty in believing some one who would tell us of having seen trees grow old. Such a statement would seem as unreasonable to us as to tell us that humanity could live for a thousand years or forever.

Have we not indeed seen children old and wrinkled looking, yet only in their teens? And have we not seen others cheerful, fresh and comparatively young-looking at sixty and seventy?

All Unrighteousness is Sin.

At the present time God "winks" at much of the wrong-doing that there is in the world. He does not interfere with it. But of course every transgressor carries with it a naturally more or less of a depraving influence on the transgressor's mind and body. The conscience is the most tender and the most important element of our human nature. Whoever violates it, whoever injures it, much or little, will proportionately be disadvantaged in the future and will have all the more difficulty in rising up gradually out of its degradation and weakness.

With all the help that will then be available. This will be fulfilled in the Scriptural declaration, "Whosoever a man soweth, that also shall he reap." With all mankind redeemed there will be nothing whatever of the past, chargeable against any on the books of Divine Justice. The great "High Priest," by his better sacrifices, will have made full satisfaction to the demands of Justice, but the weaknesses, mental, moral and physical, resulting from more or less sin will not disappear, must still be reckoned on, and thus every idle word and every idle thought, every idle and vicious action of the present time, by making its mark upon the characters of men, is providing for corresponding difficulties on their part in that glorious day of their opportunity.

The suggestion of our text is that the great Messiah will not temporize, for the entire period of His reign, we are to remember, will be a period of probation, then our text declares that He will be granted to mankind in the future. God's saintly people are expected to develop character and to approve themselves to God as "overcomers" within a very brief space of life. And not only so, but they are required to "walk by faith and not by sight." They merely have God's Word as respects His Justice and Love and glorious plans, while, in the next Age, the world will have the actuality instead of the promise—the world will walk by sight. "The glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all flesh shall see it together" (Isaiah xl. 5).

The Church's Triumph Shorter. The Church, whose trial is in progress during this Gospel Age, receives individually a much shorter period of probation than our text declares will be granted to mankind in the future. God's saintly people are expected to develop character and to approve themselves to God as "overcomers" within a very brief space of life. And not only so, but they are required to "walk by faith and not by sight." They merely have God's Word as respects His Justice and Love and glorious plans, while, in the next Age, the world will have the actuality instead of the promise—the world will walk by sight. "The glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all flesh shall see it together" (Isaiah xl. 5).

The world during Messiah's reign will be privileged to walk in a high way, a way of holiness, a way of the stumbling stones will have been gathered out. But the overcomers of the Church are required to walk in the narrow way, steep, narrow, rugged, and beset with snares of the Adversary. "For we are not ignorant of his snares" (II Corinthians ii. 11). We are not to forget, however, that these differences between the Church and the world are fully offset by the differences of reward. The overcomers of the Church are to be rewarded with glory, honor, immortality, "the divine nature," and be joint-heirs in the Kingdom as members of the great Messiah. The world is to have no such change of nature from human to spirit, but is to have the earthly nature restored or perfected in them, if obedient, and to enjoy the earthly Eden. Truly God's ways are equal. True and righteous are Thy ways, Lord God Almighty! (Revelation vii. 12).

Humanity's Final Test. The Church's test takes place in the present life. And in each member thereof the matter of worthiness or unworthiness of eternal life on the spirit plans for all time is determined at death. Not so with humanity in general. As we have just seen, some may live for only a hundred years and then be cut off in the Second Death, because found unworthy of further opportunity.

Others, by availing themselves of the privileges and rendering obedience to the laws of the Kingdom, may live to the very close of the thousand years, and be found worthy of eternal life. Still others may not fully appreciate Divine Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power and may become so obedient thereto that God will be pleased to grant them eternal life. Their days, their lives, will be far more than the days of a tree.

The world of mankind, at the conclusion of Messiah's reign of righteousness, will have attained again to the perfection originally enjoyed by father Adam. Like him they will be in Eden, which then will be world-wide. Those perfect human beings will be required to stand a test—to demonstrate, to prove their absolute loyalty to God and his righteous laws, as Adam was tried, tested, proven in Eden. As Adam was promised eternal life if his test proved him loyal to his Maker, so his restored race will have before them the offer of eternal life if they shall manifest their obedience satisfactorily.

Satan Loosed From Prison. We are not informed of the particulars of the test that will then be applied to mankind. We merely have the figurative declaration that Satan, sin and everything which Satan represents will be loosed for a little season at the close of Messiah's reign (Revelation xx. 7-10). The world, full of perfect humanity, as the sand of the seashore, will all be subjected to the test. But how many, or what proportion of the whole, will prove loyal, and what proportion disloyal, we are not informed.

All that we know on the subject, and all that is necessary for us to know, is that the trial will be thorough and just and that all found faithful will have eternal life, and all found unfaithful will be sent as followers of Satan and, with him, will be destroyed in the Second Death. The test which God will apply will be so searching, so thorough, that although his creatures will still be free moral agents, he is able to guarantee that thenceforth "there shall be no more sighing, no more crying, no more dying, because all the former things of sin and death shall have passed away."

The Reward, Life—The Punishment, Death.

Not a word is said about the hundred-year old sinners—being sent to eternal torment, just as there is not a word said in the Bible to the effect that Adam or his children were condemned to eternal torments. The sentence upon Adam, which his race shares by heredity, was a death sentence. This just but awful penalty has wrought havoc with our race—sorrow, pain, dying, death. God's mercy will be shown in the redemption of Adam and his race through His Son, who died, the just for the unjust. The death of Jesus is the price which will eventually secure the release of Adam and all of his posterity from the death sentence and give to them resurrection privileges provided through Messiah's Kingdom reign.

But every one who has been enlightened, and brought to a clear knowledge of God and to the opportunities provided for his salvation from sin and death, is more responsible for the manner in which he accepts or refuses "the gift of God, eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." As the wilful, intelligent sinner in the Church now is sentenced to the Second Death (Hebrews vi. 6; 12-13), so, our text tells us, it will be with the masses of mankind during the Messianic reign. If they wilfully reject reconciliation to God, they will die the Second Death. God has provided a redemption and recovery from the first death, but assures us that the Second Death will be an eternal one.

Electrocution.

Instant death from electric shock will be the method of executing the penalty of wilful sinners during the next Age, and not hanging nor decapitation. Thus it was that in olden times two of Aaron's sons, having violated their relationship with God and having disobeyed Him, were smitten to death. Fire from the Lord smote them—an electric flash. We may be sure that torture will not be needlessly inflicted on such. They will lose everything, but will not be tortured. Stripes or punishments, chastisements, are sometimes used of the Lord, but always in a reformatory manner—"He chasteneth every son whom He loveth." He chastens none other—none for whom chastening would accomplish no blessing. Such will be smitten down in the Second Death.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.
There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell and bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and better health in that organ is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

JOHN NELSON, The Painter.
RECORD 101.

Was it Brown?

By Nellie Cravey Gilmore

(Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press)

As long as she lived Sylvia would never forget that rainy walk home from the hospital in the stinging, pouring rain; the savage pleasure she experienced in the cruel way it whipped her hot cheeks and half froze the angry blood curdling fiercely through her rebellious little body.

She had been a fool to go there, of course. And she faced the verdict of her own common sense with the keenest sense of humiliation she had ever known. To be refused admittance to the room where her lover presumably lay dying because she could not give an affirmative answer to the attendant's inquiry as to whether she were "anything to the patient," was bitter enough of itself, but to come face to face with Chalmers' mother and Al-line Bester, about to enter where she had been denied, and to be met by a haughty stare of surprise from each, made her young blood boil.

As a matter of fact they were everything to each other. Both she and Chalmers knew that far better than any spoken word or circle of gold could signify, but no formal engagement existed between them, and she could not be the first to proclaim their love.

They told her in the hospital that if he lived through the night the chances were he would recover. The following day a paragraph in the paper stated that young Chalmers was pronounced comparatively out of danger. A succeeding item hinted at his approaching betrothal to Al-line Bester. And within a week the young girlback was on the rapid road to recovery.

The day before Chalmers was discharged from the hospital Sylvia, her mother and father called for Japan.

"Listen dear," he began excitedly. Nine weeks later Sylvia sat reading with overbright, indignant eyes the following letter from her lover.

"Boston, Mass., December 3.
"Dear Little Girl—Why did you run away without one word of farewell? Is it possible that, after everything, you can still be in the dark about how I feel toward you? Have I been mistaken in assuming that you felt the same?"

"My last conscious thought before that frightful accident was of you, my first on reawakening to the rational world was of you. My very first set on being released from the cradle of nurses and doctors was to hasten to Williams, only to find you thousands of miles away—and not one word or line of explanation!"

"The governor and my master were so cut up about the accident that I have concluded to retire from the girlhood for the present. Thus you see, everything considered, I return to college a very dejected and gloomy soul. Will you not drop me a line from the far off orient that life may seem something less than a blank, dear, and the world a habitable place instead of one vast,aching wilderness?"

"As always,"
Sylvia read the letter several times with a variety of emotions. Then she crumpled it and tossed it into the trash basket. Afterward, she went over to her writing desk and penned a cheery little note in reply that effectively shut off any possible excuse for further correspondence. When the letter was mailed, the little resolute line of her lips relaxed into quivering and she broke into a storm of tears.

Early in the following autumn the Marburys returned to America. It was on a glorious November morning that Sylvia came in, flushed from a downtown expedition, and hurried straight to the little white sitting room in their new apartment at a fashionable New York hotel.

Without stopping to remove her hat, she turned her back upon the door, emptying the contents of a small, ornate bag. There were several new postcards, half a dozen newspaper clippings, a few half-dozens of Brown. She opened her scrapbook and pasted them all in with painstaking figures. Never had there been a man like Brown on the Yale gridiron. Every day added fresh laurels to his already brilliant record. He was worshiped by his classmates, idolized by his team and adored by the girls. From the week of her shattered hopes, Sylvia had risen to join in the universal hero worship. On her mental was a panel, of the invincible

Brown, in her bureau drawers were innumerable letters and mementoes. She carried his picture in a tiny locket about her neck, and on her desk was a porcelain painting of him.

She glanced absently at the dozen different caricatures each newspaper and proudly named as the "really true likeness" of the mighty one. Then, with a queer little jump in her heart, she opened the secret compartment of her desk and drew forth an old photograph of Billy Chalmers. She looked into the handsome, serious eyes long and earnestly; a little sob caught in her throat. How she had loved him! Could it be really true, she asked herself, that he had changed so much—and cared for that other girl?—and even enough to marry her, as reports said?

A sharp rap on her door interrupted the painful train of thought, and Sylvia rose and turned the knob, schooling her face into unconcern. It was a special, in Billy's own handwriting, and she tore open the envelope with trembling cheeks.

"Dear Sylvia," it ran. "May I call at four on a matter of importance? Am sailing at daybreak for Germany to take up the study of medicine in Berlin. Please do not refuse me—Billy." For an instant Sylvia stood holding the sheet between trembling, dry fingers. Should she see him? All the fierce resentment and wounded pride of the past year surged up in her defense; with a swift impulse she seized a pen and dashed down a single word and signed it "Sylvia."

The succeeding hours were the longest Sylvia had ever spent in her life, but Chalmers arrived promptly. She greeted him with her most formal little manner, effectively screening wild inward tumults from his eager penetrating glance.

Every attempt he made to lead the conversation into personal channels was balked by her, and finally Chalmers broke out abruptly:

"Look here, Sylvia, the last time I saw you it was an understood thing between us that as soon as we both graduated we'd be—"

"Have you forgotten—Al-line?" she interrupted, coldly.

"That affair has all my mother's doing. Only recently I learned of the report in the paper which you must have seen. I went at once to Miss Bester and told her the true situation. She is to be married in April to another man. We shook hands and parted friends. On my word of honor, that is the sum and substance of the whole thing. By George, Sylvia, who is that fellow?" Chalmers had caught sight of the panel on the mantelpiece, and the color flooded his face.

Sylvia blushed, too, and said, truthfully: "Isn't he a wonder?"

"To judge by the goodness of the press—he is," was the half-disguised reply.

"You know him well, of course," she queried, frowning for time.

"Oh, after a fashion. Do you?" He gave her a quick, keen look.

"Only in this legendary sort of way," and she indicated the pile of clippings on her desk, her eyes traveling nervously from one wall to another where were displayed the more or less ludicrous prints. "I suppose he's a perfect idol of the girls, isn't he?" she asked, demurely.

Chalmers grunted. "I happen to know that he doesn't owe a finger but one in the world—and she won't look at him."

"Oh," exclaimed Sylvia, "what is stupid she must be!"

Chalmers rose and paced the length of the room, then back again. He stopped in front of Sylvia's chair; his voice had changed when he spoke.

"Is it possible, Sylvia, that this fellow has supplanted me in your estimation—has taken the old, dear place?"

Sylvia laughed contemptuously. "I—you see," she said. "I had to have something to keep up my interest—somebody. It's a sort of mad, you know."

"But if he should come here today, and ask you to be his wife, would you listen to him?"

"I suppose I should," was the very subdued response.

Chalmers bit his lip. Suddenly he sat down on the arm of her chair and deliberately drew her head against him.

"Listen, dear," he began earnestly. "I want to tell you a few things about—Brown. He had a serious accident last year during one of the big games, and his people didn't want him to play football any more. He didn't make any rash promises, but rather than have them worry, he took an assumed name."

FORESTRY IN SWITZERLAND

FOREST INJURED BY SNOW

SWITZERLAND recognized the benefits of forest protection and development 600 years ago when the forest ordinance of Bern was issued. The Sihlwald of Zurich, one of the most perfectly managed and most profitable forests in the world, has been handled under a working plan since 1680. The little Alpine republic still reports progress in forest work, and the American consul writing for St. Gall says:

"The government of Switzerland has so carefully regulated the timber output that it has never been permitted to exceed the natural growth. The thick growth of timber on the mountain sides, purposely allowed to become dense, has perceptibly lessened the danger and frequency of avalanches and landslides, which in former times were so frightfully destructive. To control the spring floods in the rivers and streams, massive dams, fortified by thickly planted trees, have been erected at exposed places. In the extraordinary attention paid to its timber lands, the government has taken into account also the necessity for sheltering and pasturing cattle, the maintenance of the soil, the roads and the natural springs, climate, and the control of mountain streams.

"The actual forest area of Switzerland comprises 2,405,598 acres, 21.48 per cent. of the entire surface of the country, 77,004 of which belong to the state and 2,328,594 to the cantons, communes, municipalities and private corporations. Seven hundred and eighty-one acres of the state forest are set aside as a nursery. From this nursery in 1908 over 22,000,000 young trees were taken and transplanted in the various forests.

"Swiss forests are classed as 'protected' and 'non-protected.' The former are those which are situated on mountain slopes where the imminence of washouts, stone and ice chutes, landslides and avalanches calls for the constant exercise of extraordinary care and attention. The 'non-protected' are those on comparatively level ground requiring only ordinary attention to keep them in good condition. Because of the character of the country, the great majority of the forests are 'protected.'

"The law provides that the forest area shall not be diminished and that all forests shall be maintained in a fairly dense condition. Even in private forests close cutting or clearing up is strictly forbidden, especially in exposed places, without the consent of the federal authorities, and then only in small areas and when prompt reforestation is guaranteed. Trees for cutting are carefully selected by forestry experts.

"Through the forests there are excellent roads made largely by the cantonal authorities. The year 1908 was marked by such activity in road construction that the state, which bears a proportion of the expense, paid to the cantons the sum of $48,000.00 on their account alone.

"Bryce is the most important tree in the Swiss forests, and then in order of their importance come the white fir, beech, larch, pine, cypress and a few other varieties.

"The principal revenue derived from the Swiss forests is from the lumber output, there being no manufactures of resin, turpentine and similar by-products. To offset the cutting, there were planted in 1908, 23,098,226 trees, of which 18,031,590 were conifer and 5,066,636 deciduous, and no less than seven tons of seed were sown.

"Statistics of the receipts and expenditures of all forestry work in the country are not available, but a couple of cases may be cited which show gratifying returns. The total receipts from the sale of wood in 1908 from 2,421 acres of state forests in the canton of St. Gall are given as $24,457.37 and the expenditures at $7,104.81, leaving a clear profit of $17,352.56. In the forests of the town of Winterthur, amounting to 2,833 acres, the receipts were $51,174.63, and the

READ THIS.

The following is an extract from a letter just received from our Flour Mill in Ohio:—

"The more we learn what other mills are doing in the way of grades, the more we are convinced that you are about the only dealer in your territory who is selling a strictly high-grade fancy Patent, and this is undoubtedly the reason why you are able to do as large a volume of business as you are doing. It is really surprising the quantity of flour you have sold since harvest, in the face of the extremely low prices made by your local mills, and by other mills from the West, with which you compete. But, as stated above, we think the only reason for it is your grade of flour, which is in a class by itself, and is considered worth more than others."

CAUTION OF THE MINT.

Dust, Ashes and Tools Are All Sold For the Precious Metals Which They Contain.

It has been ascertained that no miner guards his treasure more religiously than Uncle Sam watches over the precious metals that pass through his mints. Then, too, the precautions against waste are almost innumerable. Every evening in each of the mints of the United States the floors of the melting rooms are swept cleaner than a New England housewife's kitchen. The dust is carefully put aside, and about once in two months the sweepings from every fire is transferred to the same precious dust heap. This is then burned, and from its ashes the government derives no inconsiderable income. The earthenware crucibles used in melting are employed no more than three times. They are crushed beneath heavy rollers, and in their porous sides are found flakes of the precious metal.

In the melting room when the casters raise their ladles from the melting pots a shower of sparks fly from the molten surface of the metal. For the most part they are bits of incandescent carbon, but clinging to the carbon is often a minute particle of metal. Last such particles should escape, the ashes and clinkers below the furnaces are gathered up at night. This debris is ground into powder by means of a steam crusher and then is sold to a smelter, like ordinary ore, at a price warranted by the assay.

The ladies that stir the precious metal, the big iron rods, the strainers and the dippers, all are tested in a most curious fashion. After considerable use they become covered with a thin layer of oxidized silver, closely resembling a brown rust. The implement is then laid in baths of a solution of sulphuric acid, which eats away the rust and steel and leaves the silver untouched.

Gradually the ladle, or whatever the implement is, will disappear, and in its place remains a hollow silver counterpart of the original, delicate as spun glass. These fragile casts reproduce the ladle with perfect accuracy to all its details, although their surfaces are perforated with innumerable little holes. Scarcely have they been molded, however, before they are cast into a crucible to become in time dollars, quarters and dimes.

In one corner of the melting room there is a large tank into which newly cast silver bars are dropped and left to cool. Infinitesimal flakes of silver scale off and rise to the surface of the water, which acquires the metallic luster of a stagnant pool. Here is silver that must not be lost, so beneath the pipe through which the tank is emptied is banked a thick layer of mud. As the water filters through it the mud retains the precious residue. Four times a year this mud is removed, and each experiment discloses the fact that some $50 has been saved.—Baltimore American.

His Test.

The three-year-old son of a Methodist minister was with his mother at a gathering of ladies. At the proper time he was given a cookie. He ate it in short order and asked for another. The hostess said:

"I'll give you another if you will sing for us."

"Can't sing," was his reply, "but I know something I can say."

"That will do all right," the lady answered, expecting to hear "Twinkle, twinkle, little star," or some other nursery classic.

But the little fellow drew himself up in real Sunday school fashion and said his piece:

"God loveth a cheerful giver."

The lady gave him the cookie, and the whole company seemed to be very cheerful about it.—Harper's Magazine.

A Water Telescope.

Norwegian fishermen use a water telescope to ascertain the position of the herring shoals. This is the way to make the water telescope:

Procure a tube made of tin and funnel shaped about three and a half feet long and ten inches in diameter at the largest end. It should be wide enough at the top to take in the observer's eye, and the inside should be painted black. At the bottom, or wide end, a clear, thick piece of glass must be inserted, with a little lead in the form of a ring to weight the tube. When the instrument is immersed in clear water it is astonishing how many fatheads down the observer can see.

SHORT JACKETS.

Bid Fair to Be Leaders Among Early Spring Fads.

Odd Little Garments Add Much to a Smart Toilet—Fur a Much Used Trimming For Gowns and Mantles.

From now on look out for the arrival of the little jacket in endless shapes and developments. Winter is hardly the time to bring it in to prominence and varied styles, but now that spring clothes may be looked for to crop out here and there, the little jacket is sure to occupy a very important place, if not the center of the stage.

The jacket shown in the drawing is one of the early manifestations. Here it is of black velvet, a sleeveless affair with girldie of the same material and a wide band of fur to shorten the waist line. This band has a jaunty finish of tails and a fur covered ornament. The neck is plain, a mere crossover, which, with its hard outline, brings out the daintiness of the lace yoke underneath. The band of the skirt and the sleeves are of lace over gold tissue. The fur band at the hem of the skirt is too familiar these days to need comment. Street gowns, dinner toilets, dance frocks sometimes and even matinees all receive such treatment.

The long, all enveloping mantles are the most conspicuous things in any group of persons gowned or wrapped for evening. Some of the mantles are rich in the extreme. They are made of all fur, of velvet trimmed with fur, of costly brocades, of sheer stuffs with smug interlinings, of satins, silks and cloths. But one and all owe much of their effect to fur trimmings. These all enveloping mantles have all but taken the place of the tailor made coat and skirt suit this season, for they appear over gowns and mornings and afternoons as well as evenings.

A new fancy in the linings of long coats is the use of a pale color in the upper part and a dark one at the bottom. The fad is certainly practical, for the long coats are subjected to soil from the pavements as much as a skirt and the dark lining at the bottom saves some of the murky appearance that is sure to appear in a light lining with a few times' wearing.

In the extreme furs that have been coming out for southern use—ermine is an ideal fur for sunny lands—some are made up in styles and muffs with the little skins arranged to form a number of Vandyke points in the center, while the outer edges are bordered with another fur. Some such sets have linings of seal and feelings of seal and may be worn either side out. Fur is used in an endless number of ways by the milliner. A big picture hat covered smoothly with white kid and lined with brown velvet has a gold cord around the crown at the bottom, and around the high crown at the top there is a whole sable skirt, the head at one side of the front and the tail and paws falling off at the other side of the front.

Coats and hats are the first interest of every one as a new season approaches, and this time the interest is unusually keen because there is a general feeling that a definite change of the styles is at hand.

The best argument against excess of physical training is the fact that few great athletes attain to great age. There is no need for any one being excessively thin. Proper exercise, nourishing food and abundance of sleep will build up the emaciated body and develop arms that were thin, legs that were spindled and chests that were flat.

The Way It Looked to Him.

"Are you guilty or not, guilty?" asked the judge of the defendant in a case of assault and battery. "I think I must be guilty, your honor," answered the defendant. "You think so?" said the judge. "Don't you know?" "Well, your honor," answered the prisoner, "I'm like this: The plaintiff and I were the only ones in the room, and the first thing I knew was that I was standing up, and he was leaning over me, and he said, 'You've got to be a better man than I am.'"

THE BIRTHDAYS.

WE are a numerous family. Of relatives we have a host. My wife has forty-six, of whom she knows the names of three and about a few, I must admit, not quite as many, though, as she. But when you sum them up it's plain we are a numerous family. As relatives they are all right—first class relations, I would say. And some of them live in town, and some there are five miles away. But every week—and here is where I find it hard to practice thrift—I have to dig into my jeans and buy some one a birthday gift.

It's either Cousin Frank or Belle or Auntie Kate or Sister May. Or some one else, it matters not; we love them all, which is the way. To treat relations. One should not neglect them or view them with scorn. And, loving them, it's proper to remember just when they were born. But every week it seems to me, since time is sure and passing swift, I have to dig into my jeans and buy some one a birthday gift.

If I should die a poor old man, without a nickel in the bank. If as a king of high finance in future years I fail to rank. And if when I am old and gray I still must toil for meager pay. Don't come to me with good advice and tell me what you used to say. Reminding me of what I had. Remember I was warned from thrift. For every week I have to pay the price of some one's birthday gift.

His Voice. It was at a summer hotel, and the baby, being warm and fretful, cried. "Tut, tut! We can't disturb our neighbors this way," the food father said, taking the child in his arms. "Let me sing to him, if he won't go to sleep." He sang, and straightway came a knock at the door and these words: "There's a sick lady next door, and if it's all the same to you, would you mind letting the baby cry instead of singing to it?"—Lippincott's.

Wife—Say, that will be nice. We can raise pond lilies and watermelons in it.

A WINTER ROMANCE.

By M. QUAD
(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

Jed Smith was a farmer's son twenty years old. He was uneducated, uncouth and awkward, but he had romance in his soul. He fell in love with the new schoolma'am at once, and as he was the biggest of the boys and could lick any one of them he felt that he had the best chance. He was going to marry Miss Seymour or know the reason why. When he began to betray signs of his love his father took him out to the barn and turned on him to say:

"Now, Jed Smith, don't you go and make no ding dang fool of yourself."

It was plain, sensible talk, but Jed wouldn't take it that way. He was a poor reader, but he had digested so many love novels that he wasn't going to let go without a try for it. He had drawn the schoolma'am on his hand, and he had skated with her, they had slid down hill together, he had brought her the biggest apples of any one, but there was really nothing in these things to arouse her romance, and he realized that romance must come in some long nights and losing hours of sleep he got his plan. The schoolma'am must be abducted and he must rescue her. At first the trouble seemed to be to find the abductor, but Jed Smith had a way with him. Having got the next biggest boy in the district out to the barn with him, he unfolded his plan and added:

"Jim, you've got to bear the schoolma'am away, and I've got to rescue her. You've got to turn your coat wrong side out and wear a mask and speak in a hoarse voice. In rescuing her I've got to give you a mighty good licking, but as I am going to give you 50 cents you mustn't mind that."

"I'd do anything," he said, "to abduct a schoolma'am, and he didn't want to be licked. He came in in time, however. Fifty cents in cash was not to be sneezed at, and he would be licked if he refused to enter into the plot. It took some little time to perfect the details, but at last everything was ready. Jed's old father saw fresh signs, and he took him to task again.

"Jed," he said, "if you are going to make a fool of yourself in any way, then look out for me!"

In winter, especially on a gloomy day, it begins to get dark soon after 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The schoolma'am had often to stay after school had been dismissed to look over the work for the next day. She had only half a mile to go when ready. Sometimes two or three pupils stayed and walked along with her; sometimes she was alone. Luck aided the conspirators. It was young Jim Andrews who was to do the abducting part. His father's barn was near the schoolhouse, and he could both watch and have a horse ready harnessed. Jed Smith was to be waiting up the road.

One afternoon the signal was given, and the plan was set on foot. The teacher had remained until almost 8. She was just donning cloak and hat when a masked villain appeared before her and announced in an awful voice:

"Come with me! If you scream or struggle it means death!"

Miss Seymour was properly shocked. She had never seen a masked villain before. No man, holding a pench alone in his mouth, to make his voice terrible, had ever thus addressed her. She thought she recognized the figure, and there was a something about the terrible voice that sounded familiar, but she grew faint, her knees weakened, and she was about to sit down when the villain seized her with a grip of steel and bore her out to his sleigh. She screamed and struggled, but she had to go. Jed Smith had said that it would be all the better for the plot if she screamed and struggled. More credit would be due him for rescuing her.

What neither of the plotters had counted on was that some one might come driving along the highway at the critical moment. Some one did come. He was a man without romance in his soul. He was driving a fast horse to the city, and when the masked man, wearing the schoolma'am into his sleigh, and started off at a gallop the stranger followed on and cracked his whip and shouted to let the girl know that help was at hand. She heard him, and so did Jim and his horse. In fact, the horse ran away, and just as he reached the point where the rescuer stood waiting he slid into a drift and things were upset. Jed jumped forward, but he had scarcely roared out, "Die, villain!" when he was knocked silly by the stranger. Then the struggling Jim caught it. The schoolma'am was pulled out of the robes and blankets and stood one side, and then her rescuer went in to have some fun with abductor and rescuer.

He stood them on their heads in the drift, he jammed them about, he walloped them up and down, and when they shouted for mercy he walloped the harder. Then, when tired out, he lifted the girl into his cutter and drove her home. It did not break up the school; it simply broke up the romance of the thing. When Farmer Smith had got through using the girl on the battered Jed he threw it aside and said:

"You was after romance, and I'll give you nuff of it. There's 200 bushels of corn to be husked and shelled, and it's going to be your work from now on to next Fourth of July. Rescuing a gal! Why, darn you, you don't know nuff to rescue an old cabbage head!"

Two Different Cases. "Oh, dear," sighed the pretty lady, "I'm so awfully miserable!"

"Why are you miserable?" queried the maid who was with her kindly and patiently.

"I'm afraid some one will marry me for my money!" answered the pretty lady.

"And I," rejoined the poor girl, "am miserable because I'm afraid no one will marry me because I haven't any money."

COURT ATTENDANTS BUSY

The Spring Term Ends [The Public Green Cases Disposed Of To Date.]

The scenes of activity about the Court House this week are due to the Spring session of the Circuit Court which has been in progress since Monday. It is not known yet how long the term will be but it is hoped to conclude before the end of March.

List Of Jurors.

The petit jury is composed of the following gentlemen: Isaac James Wright, Thos. J. Byrd, Watson D. Mitchell, Noah H. White, Lafayette Furber, John R. Dorman G. Ernest Hoeflin, Creston A. Pollitt, Wm. T. Leonard, Jerry Morris, Walter J. Dryden, Elisha M. Elliott, Hanson P. Gordy, Aubrey Q. Hammond, A. W. Hopkins, Louis C. Bonds, James E. Lowe, Walter B. Miller, Joseph Hastings, Ware C. Walker, Edward S. B. Turner, Sanford A. Toodyne, Sidney L. Trader, J. Cleveland White.

The Grand Jury is composed of Benjamin F. Mease, foreman, D. M. Knowles, A. Jackson Bennett, James M. Jones, George W. Graham, John T. Dashiell, Howard Waller, James W. Parker, John O. Freedy, Isaac S. Williams, John W. Twilley, I. Joseph Hearn, Joe H. Hayman, Zedoo H. Ennis, Lafayette Mills, John W. Walker, Uriah Gravenor, Geo. T. Harrington, Thomas E. Mease, L. Samuel Perdue, John G. Truitt and James W. Ennis.

Judge Toadvin's Charge.

"Mr. Foreman and Gentlemen of the Grand Jury: As is required by custom and the law of the first Judicial Circuit of Maryland and the counties outside of Baltimore city, grand jury is summoned in session twice a year; that is, a new grand jury. The grand jury is not, as it was formerly, discharged finally, but you are, after you conclude your labors at the end of the session still liable to be called together to meet in emergency or necessity that may arise where it is necessary that justice should be administered for any serious violations of the law.

"You have a foreman who has been selected by the Court as required by law. When you retire to your rooms you will select your clerk. The clerk's duties will be to keep the minutes of all the proceedings during the session of the grand jury, but as you are required by your oath to keep secret, these proceedings of the clerk and of the grand jury are to be absolutely kept with the strictest secrecy the same as you keep your own mouths shut in regard to what occurs in the grand jury room. Upon the foreman and the clerk depends largely the expeditious performance of our duties and the consequent saving to the taxpayers of the county in the length of your service.

"You will have the opportunity of first examining the charges that are pending on recognizances or bail from the justices of the peace throughout the county. These cases and the prisoners that are confined in jail will be your duty, and properly to take up first and dispose of them; either find a bill or ignore one so that the parties accused may have a speedy and early trial as guaranteed under the Constitution of Maryland.

It has been the policy of the legislative power of the state in recent years to confer additional and larger powers upon the justices of the peace. Justices of the peace under the act of 1908 and other acts in 1884 have been conferred with larger jurisdiction over all cases of misdemeanors; to face all misdemeanors and crimes except such as are felonies or where the punishment is confinement in the Maryland Penitentiary. Therefore, it is advisable to call your attention, gentlemen of the jury to this:

"That when small petty cases come before you, you can of course, consider them, but it is not your duty to hunt unnecessarily petty cases that should have come up before justices of the peace. You will find, as doubtless other grand juries have already found, that it has been the practice of some people to try to indict their neighbors and fellow citizens through hatred, malice, or ill will without any just cause. Such attempts as these should be discouraged by the grand jury. If the citizens of the county have any charges to bring of violations of law, either felonies or misdemeanors, or any other offenses against the public health, decency or order, they have an opportunity to do so before a justice of the peace or magistrate and they can complain before him. Then it may come before you, gentlemen of the jury, or this Court on appeal. I call your attention to this because I know it is to be that much of the grand jury's time was occupied in investigating these small petty cases that should not receive your attention.

"In your investigation the witnesses before you will be examined, or ordered examined by our foreman, or by our advisor, the State Attorney.

A LAYMEN'S CONVENTION

Proposed For Salisbury Early In May. A Meeting Tuesday Evening Here To Further It.

Next Tuesday evening, March 21st at 7:30 o'clock in the lecture room of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, there will be a meeting of the pastors of the local churches in Salisbury and chosen representative laymen to meet Mr. David H. Brown, the executive secretary of the Maryland Campaign of the Laymen's Missionary Movement for the purpose of discussing plans and the practicability of holding a Laymen's Convention in Salisbury the early part of May.

Mr. Brown is sent here in the interest of the Baltimore Co-operating Committee who have been holding conventions throughout the western part of Maryland during the last year, and have been arousing much interest wherever they have been held, among the laymen of the committee.

These laymen's conventions during the last two years have been held in all the large cities in the United States, and are now reaching out into the smaller towns in order to reach many of the churches that have not been reached.

The ideal and purpose of the Laymen's movement is to evangelize the world in this generation. It recognizes the fact that the church has been in the 'retail business' long enough. It is a challenge for something larger and more far-reaching. Its broad statesmanship will appeal to men. Its purpose is to do the largest thing of which anyone has any conception, to devise a comprehensive plan—in conjunction with Board Secretaries—looking toward the evangelization of the world in this generation. It is to ask the men of this generation not to pass, their own work on to future generations, but to do it themselves now. If Salisbury has one of these conventions much more information, etc., will be given during the coming weeks.

Rev. Yotaka Unakucki from Japan a most remarkably forceful and interesting speaker is expected to be present Tuesday evening and address the men present.

Changes In Anti-Saloon League.

The Anti Saloon League of Maryland announces the appointment of Rev. Cyrus P. Keen as Superintendent of the Eastern Shore District, with headquarters at Salisbury, to succeed Rev. John M. Arters who wishes to return to the pastorate at the present session of the Wilmington Conference.

The change is a merited promotion for Mr. Keen who is a member of the same Conference and for the past two years has been in charge of the Western District with headquarters at Hagerstown. The League's plans for the Hagerstown office will not be announced before about April 1st.

DEMOCRACY AT HAND.

For First Time In Fifteen Years It Controls Congress.

The "golden opportunity," for which they have longed and fought is now presented to the Democratic leaders in Congress and their real measure in constructive statesmanship is about to be taken. For the first time in 15 years their party is in complete control of the tariff framing, revenue originating branch of Congress. It is also longer in the upper branch than it has been in the same period—stronger not only in the quantity but in the quality of its representatives.

With the extra session that starts on April 4, some six or seven real Democrats—put on Senatorial rosters that formerly cloaked the now sadly shrunken figures of as many standpat Republicans.

People's Cause Stronger.

There is no question that the cause of the people is stronger in the Senate today than it was last Saturday. There is a slim but not solid Republican majority of eight in the Senate and a Republican President in the White House, but to political analysts here these two facts constitute an advantage rather than a handicap and really strengthen the strategic position of the Democracy. It will enable that party to put through the House straight, clean out, simple measures for the relief of the people and demanded by the people. Should the Republican Senate permit these measures to go through and a Republican President approve them, the credit would still belong to the Democracy, nor could they be robbed of it.

Situation In Democratic Hands.

Should the Republican Senate defeat these measures or the Republican President veto them, an issue would at once be created upon which the Democrats could well afford to go to the country confident of the favorable verdict.

It would seem as if the situation were in their own hands and that the pathway to success were so clearly indicated and well defined that it would be difficult to stray therefrom. The danger to the Democracy lies in factionalism. There is no disguising the fact that in the House as well as in the Senate there are Democratic divisions—not so far apart, perhaps, not so bitter toward each other or irreconcilable, but clearly marked, notwithstanding.

In the Senate, for instance, there is one element among the Democrats who look to Senator Bailey for leadership and another and quite different element who are really led—so far as they are led as all—by Senator Stone of Missouri. In the House following are most of the progressive Senators and all of the Bryan brand of statesmen.

With the new Senate there enters another formidable Democratic figure, whose ability record and achievements will unquestionably give him an influence among his colleagues and qualify him for leadership honors. This is John Sharp Williams, who succeeds the venerable Senator Money and who for years led the Democrats of the House in a way that made him a national reputation, which two years of retirement has by no means diminished.

Difference Inevitable.

That upon the vital matters with which the extra session will deal there will arise sharp differences of opinion among the Democratic Senatorial factions is inevitable. The real trouble with the Democrats—if trouble comes—will be in the Senate. On the House side, while there is an element led by Representative Fitzgerald that is not in accord with the Clark-Underwood-James organization, it is not disposed to throw any obstacle in the way of Democratic harmony. There will be, of course, considerable squabbling following the announcement of the House committee and the distribution of the House patronage, but it is not anticipated that this friction will be either lasting or serious. Mr. Fitzgerald is a hard headed level headed man with pretty good political judgment and one of the best parliamentarians in the House—the best on the Democratic side.

On the tariff there are no irreconcilable differences between the House factions, and the plan of passing through the House the Canadian reciprocity agreement, attaching to it a bill revising downward the woolen schedule, it is believed, will be unopposedly supported by the Democrats. What the Senate Democrats will do with this measure when it comes to it is impossible to forecast. Senator Bailey is openly opposed to the reciprocity agreement, on the ground that it is shamelessly sacrifices the American

MRS. CORNELIA LAWS.

Sudden Death Sunday, Following Severe Grippe. Held In High Esteem By Many Friends.

Relatives and friends of Mrs. Wm. Levi Laws were much shocked to learn of her sudden death on Sunday. It was not known that she was seriously ill and her death was unexpected and looked for by even those around her.

She had suffered with a severe case of grippe for about six days previous and heart failure quickly followed. Mrs. Laws was a lady of many fine and admirable traits of character, sincere, sympathetic and helpful. She lived a life of good deeds and kind thoughts to many neighbors and friends, endeavoring herself by an unselfish disposition and generous contribution to aid the suffering, and help to those in need. Her home hospitality was always in evidence and "Do come to see us," were ready words of invitation which she so frequently extended to her friends, followed by a glad hand and a hearty voice of welcome when they came to see her. Her place will be hard to fill, but the good of her helpful, sunny life should be an inspiration to those who had the privilege of knowing her and viewing her noble character.

She leaves a husband, Wm. Levi Laws, who survives her at the age of 58, and two children, Victor H. Laws and Mrs. Blane O. Williams, both of Salisbury; four stepchildren, Wm. R. of Wango, James H. of Salisbury, E. Edwin, of Wango, and L. Lee, of Salisbury. Besides these there are three children who have come before; Herman, at the age of 21, Allen, aged 21, and Capt. Albert, U. S. A., aged 23.

The deceased was before marriage, Cornelia Dixon, a daughter of Wesley and Martha Berge Dixon, residents of Worcester, county at Newburg, Groves, not far from the Williams boundary; born October 15, 1841, died March 13, 1911, making nearly three score and ten years. On October 13, 1867 she was united in marriage to Wm. Levi Laws, since which time they have lived as the old homestead near Wango, up to the first of January of this year when they moved to Salisbury, where they lived happily at their new home on Newlin Street. She was a member of Indiantown O. S. Baptist Church, having been baptized in October, 1872, and was widely and favorably known throughout the Eastern Shore as a devoted and successful member of the church and a large number of members. She was devoted to her church and its teachings, much of which she had imparted in her life and radiated to others.

The funeral services were held at the O. S. Meeting House Tuesday morning, Elders Foulson and Frances officiating. The burial took place at the family burying ground near Wango. The pallbearers were J. M. Adkins, Jacob M. Adkins, E. M. Bushard, John H. Telford, S. H. Shockley and M. M. Brittingham.

Mr. G. M. Maddox, Forest Warden for Wicomico County calls attention to the Maryland Forest Laws as amended April 1910, which impose a fine of $1,000 or imprisonment for one year, or both, for carelessly, or willfully, setting a fire to any woods or brush; also payment of all damages caused by a fire allowed to escape to the injury of neighboring lands.

Section 5.—Any person violating the forest laws is subject to arrest by a forest warden.

Section 6.—Any forest warden may summon male inhabitants of the county, between the ages of 18 and 60 years to assist in extinguishing forest fires; refusal to serve is punishable by a fine of $10.

Section 7.—It shall be the duty of any person who discovers a forest or brush fire not under control of some person, to extinguish it or to report it immediately to the local forest warden, and failure to do so shall be punishable by a fine of $10.

farther to promote the interests of the American manufacturer. He further disapproves the measure on the broad, general ground of opposition to all trade agreements between nations, so calculated to inevitably provoke the hostility of other countries.

What Is Expected.

The passage of the reciprocity agreement between which public sentiment has crystallized, and the further passage of separate bills granting two or three of the more glaringly outrageous of the Payne Aldrich schedule, it is claimed, is all that can be expected of the party at this special session—forced on by the President solely for the purpose of ratifying the Canadian reciprocity agreement. It would be, they argue, the part of wisdom for the Democrats to confine themselves to this program and then adjourn with the announcement that the work of revising the tariff will be completed at the regular session. To do more than this, it is held, would be a mistake and he stood upon the whole tariff stand at this time neither safe nor a sensible thing to do.

BLOUSES IN FAVOR.

Form an Important Part of the Afternoon Costume.Many of Them Are Vailed and Harmonize With the Coat and Skirt With Which They Are Worn.

One does not hear very much about shirt waists nowadays, though those practical garments still have their uses, but the blouse is a very important item in the fashionable wardrobe despite the vogue of the one piece trouting frock.

Under a fur coat or a separate coat the one piece frock is charming and satisfactory, but there are many days in New York's changeable weather

when a fur coat is too warm for comfort, and the coat and skirt suit is as desirable as it ever was. This winter it is even more popular than ever, for the vogue of the velvet coat and skirt makes such a costume suitable for occasions when one might not consider the less dressy cloth tailored costume appropriate.

Many of the smartest tailored models in velvet are of the three piece type, a misnomer since the model is usually a one piece frock with coat.
To avoid uncomfortable warmth all the upper part of the bodice is made of chiffon lace or other sheer stuff.

More thoroughly practical is a real three piece model with coat, skirt and separate blouse, for with such an arrangement the degree of elaborateness in the costume may be adjusted to a sliding scale.

As a rule, however, the blouse of today is not what people once understood by a separate blouse. It must match the costume or at least harmonize with it so admirably that it seems an integral part of it. All of which does not mean that the suit material or trimming must enter into the composition of the blouse, though this arrangement is popular, and where the three pieces are turned out by one maker one is likely to find this note.

The designers have taken up this problem of the chic blouse so earnestly that it is now possible to obtain ready made things of the kind in almost any modish color and in all degrees of elegance, and of course these models, while harmonizing with the coat and skirt, do not repeat their materials.

Chiffon is the most important of the blouse materials, with marquisette and nets, charmeuse, meteor and the various exquisite supple silken stuffs helping in the good work.

There are many good blouse models in combinations of satin and chiffon,
the satin being of the very supple, light crape kind. A good blouse of this class is illustrated here and may easily be copied.

In this as in almost all the season's blouses the sleeve and body or yoke are cut together.

Occasionally one sees a hemstitched sailor collar or soft version of chiffon in brilliant color upon a dark chiffon or crappe blouse, and hemstitched bands, or rather, bands of contrasting color, may be the only trimmings upon a dark or neutral toned blouse.

The collarless neck is seen in these models as in many other blouse models, but when this is not desired a high collar of the material may be used, or a transparent collar of plain white chiffon or net is in order. One good black model has the satin running to the base of the throat, where it is finished by a turndown collar three inches wide at back and sides and running to rather deep points in front.

For youthful or very slender wearers
the blouses with bangs are becoming, and some of these are exceedingly good looking. In line they remind one of the once popular jersey, but resemblance ceases there, for these new models are of silk, almost entirely covered by fine embroidery design of cord and braid and silk.

Accidents will happen, but the last regulated facilities keep Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil for such emergencies. It subdues the pain and heals the hurt.

FROSTED COMBS.

Very Dangerous to Fowls and Should Be Guarded Against by All Possible Means.

Nothing shows neglect so plainly as frosting combs, and yet one may accidentally freeze even when the fowls are carefully housed, although as a rule it happens at night. If fowls are given a scratching shed there is but little danger during the day. With hens it is almost disastrous, as it means no more eggs for three weeks or longer, and that means much when eggs are high. Prevent it if you can, but should a case happen take the fowl in hand at once and the chances are that you can cure it. Do not take the fowl near a fire, but rub her comb or wattles with snow, or in the absence of snow use cold water, after which rub well with vasoline, and by degrees both will regain their normal condition. Should they not it may be necessary to cut the comb and wattles off, but do this as a last resort. Aside from disfiguring the fowl, the operation is painful and scarcely better in the end than allowing them to turn black and fall off. Guard against it and, if possible, see that no combs are frozen, as it is the worst accident that could befall the fowls.

USES OF KEROSENE.

They Are Many and Varied, and It Should Be Found on Every Poultry Farm.

Kerosene is invaluable around a poultry farm. It is a simple remedy for many troubles. Put on the rooster frequently it will keep the lice in check. Dilute it with sweet oil, about one-third sweet oil and two-thirds kerosene, and inject in nostrils, roof of mouth and corners of eyes if your fowls have colds. Sealy legs are cured with it if properly applied, and an internal dose will help in many cases.
An easy way to apply kerosene to legs and feet of fowls is to destroy the insects that cause the excrescences which often appear on the legs is to fill an empty can two-thirds full of water and one-third of kerosene and dip the feet and legs of the affected fowls therein. Two or three treatments will prove effective.

COLLAPSIBLE POULTRY COOP

May Be Removed When Not in Use and Stored in Very Small Space.

The ordinary poultry coop has the disadvantage that it occupies too much space during the season when it is not in use. As a consequence such coops are either destroyed and new ones made each year or they become an eyesore about the place. The drawing herewith illustrates a poultry coop that may be folded up at the close of the season and stored flat in a very compact form.

The coop consists of six parts, two sides, back, front and a two piece top which is hinged. Any one handy with tools can make this coop. The advantage in having a hinged top is that chicks may be easily removed by lifting one side of the roof. When set up a couple of wire nails are slipped through the screw eyes, which are respectively at the right and left of the coop.

Small Sheep Flock Best.
Large bands of sheep do not thrive so well under farming conditions as smaller ones, and are moreover especially apt to injure the land, for they not only crop the growing plants too closely, but by bunching tend to puddle the ground.

Dogs Versus Sheep.
If there were fewer dogs there would be more sheep, and as soon as farmers make up their minds to have more sheep and fewer dogs they will bring that healthy condition to pass.

POULTRY
NOTES

If you have hens with little chicks do not put them in a coop with the chicks, but keep them in a separate place. The chicks will kill the hen's keys. A hen with turkeys will likewise kill the chickens.

Of first importance is to keep young stock growing vigorously. Too many poultry raisers compel their young stock to shift too much for itself during the middle and last summer months.

Do not try to winter more than you can care for well. It has been proved by repeated experience that a few hens kept well will do much better than a large number poorly housed and fed.

Carbolic acid with kerosene or lime or any of the prepared dips for killing lice and mites will aid in the destruction of the pests, and a little of the acid in the fowls' drinking water will ward off disease.

Allow the poultry to have the run of the barn, stables and other buildings during the day, but have grain and other feeds covered so they will not damage them. Do not allow them to roost in the barn, but provide a good house for them.

The Buyer who knows the Difference in Automobiles will own a

Our first object in advertising the Cadillac Thirty, is to teach the buyers the real essentials of an automobile and to help them become competent to judge the merits of a car. If buyers knew the vast difference in automobiles, we would have three purchasers for every Cadillac
we could secure.

Cadillac is Manufactured

There is abundant evidence to prove that no car at $2,500 or under will compare favorably with the Cadillac Thirty. In the first place a dependable, lasting automobile must be a manufactured car. It is foolhardy to claim that a machine assembled from parts secured here and there will give the same quality of service as a car the parts of which are made under one roof, with a thorough knowledge of the relation of each part to every other. The high standard of accuracy required in an automobile cannot be attained in an assembled car. Neither can the parts be made standard, so that the owner can rely on repair parts fitting properly. The buyer who knows automobiles will demand a great deal of the factory behind the car he is considering. And he ought to. It's the best insurance he can secure against high upkeep and trouble.

Cadillac Factory

It is the Cadillac factory, its methods and facilities, which so strongly commend the Cadillac Thirty. No one, be he mechanic or not, can visit this plant and not be suddenly convinced that the Cadillac is an excellent car.

And comparison with other factories and their methods will reveal the fact that no car at double the price is made as carefully and as accurately as the Cadillac. What this means to an owner can be easily determined by asking Cadillac owners what kind of service they get and what their upkeep amounts to, and then comparing notes with owners of other makes. You'll find that no car will stand comparison with the Cadillac on these two vital points.

Cadillac Design

Then the design of the Cadillac affords advantages which no other car offers. No motor will compare with the cooling qualities of the Cadillac, yet less water is used than in any other car of equal power. What car of equal size will travel 17 to 28 miles on a gallon of gasoline?
What other car will run 100 miles on a pint of oil? The Cadillac is doing this every day.

Cadillac Dependability

If you were an expert mechanic and had plenty of time to devote to your car, you could get good service from most any well-known machine. But only a few are expert mechanics. When you buy a car you want steady, uninterrupted service. You will get this in a Cadillac,

HOW I Was Cured of Malaria

"I was for over five years troubled with Malarial Fever. It would almost always come on in the Spring and would bother me for the remainder of the summer. I tried different medicines, but they did not seem to help me. I also had the doctor call on me for some time but the next year I would be troubled just the same and I would have to be at home for several weeks. I would be in bed one day and have chills and a heavy fever, and the next day I would be up about the house, and this is the way I would be for several weeks each summer.

"I finally decided to try some good blood medicine, so I began taking Pinkham's Blood Purifier, and found it did me lots of good. I began taking it early in the spring and continued taking it all through the summer. I found, after taking a few bottles, that my body was covered with pimples, and it seemed to drive all the humor out of my blood. After that I felt much better, and now I am just as healthy as ever. I was, and I am never troubled with Malarial Fever."—GEO. P. STRONG, 35 Greenland Street, Lynn, Mass. Thousands of people believe in

Malaria is caused by a parasite which gets into the blood, and unless the blood is in a healthy condition and has normal resisting properties, they attack and destroy the red corpuscles, and so seriously impair the general health.

Chills and fever are the most marked symptoms of Malaria, which can be cured by purifying and enriching the blood. Mr. Strong found that Pinkham's Blood Purifier cured him after all other means had failed, and what it did for Mr. Strong it will do for other sufferers.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Blount followed the hostess, who was still unamused to him, obediently when she led the way to the lighted library in the wing of the great house.

"Uncle Barnabas will come for you presently," she explained. "In the meantime let me make you a cup of tea. I am sure you must be needing it if you have ridden far. Take the easy chair, and we can talk while the kettle is boiling. Are you new to the west, Mr. Blount? Or is this only a return to your own? The senator is always talking about you, but he is so proud of you that he forgets to tell us anything interesting things that we want to know."

The serving man took his own time about coming back for the guest, so long a time that Blount forgot that it was past midnight, that he was a guest in a strange house and that he did not yet know the name of his entertainer.

For all this forgetfulness the little lady with the dark brown eyes was directly responsible. Almost before he knew it Blount found himself chatting companionably with her, and finding her charmingly responsive in whatever she said. The white-haired old butler came at last to show him the way to his luxurious lodgings on the second floor of the mansion.

With a touch of hospitality which carried Blount back to his own winter in the south, the hostess went with him as far as the stair foot, and her "Good night" was still ringing musically in his ears when the old negro lighted the acetylene in the guest room, put another stick of wood on the small fire that was crackling and snapping cheerfully on the hearth and bobbed and bowed his way to the door.

Blount saw his last chance for better information vanishing for the night and once more broke with the traditions.

"Uncle Barnabas, suppose you tell me where I am before you go," he suggested. "Where house is this?"

The old man stopped on the threshold, checking gleefully. "A-sin't you know dat, sah? A-sin't Miss Honoria does tell you dat? You at Wat'race Hall, Mahabeh Majah's country house. Yes, sah, dat's what you is—kee, hee!"

"And who is 'Master Major'?" pressed Blount, whose bewilderment grew with every fresh attempt to dispel it.

"A-sin't she tell you dat? Kee, hee! Everybody knows Mahabeh Majah; yes, sah. But Miss Honoria ain't tell you ole Barnabas ain't gwine to. No, sah, Ah'll bring you all's coffee in de morning, yes, sah. Good night, sah. Kee, hee!"

And the door closed, silently upon the wrinkled old face and the bobbing head.

Having nothing else to do, Blount went to bed, but sleep came reluctantly.

Whether had a curiously tricky tale told him? Where was Wat'race Hall, and who was Mahabeh Majah? Who was the winsome little lady who looked as if she might be twenty and who had all the wit and wisdom of the ages at her tongue's end?

These and kindred speculations kept him awake for a long hour after the door had closed behind the ancient negro, and he was just dropping off into his first loss of consciousness when the familiar purring of a motorcar aroused him again.

There was a window at his bed's head, and he reached over and drew the curtain.

The view gave upon the avenue of cottonwoods and the circular carriage approach.

A touring car, with its powerful headlights paling the white radiance of the moon, was drawn up at the steps, and he had a fleeting glimpse of a big man, swathed from head to heel in a dust coat, descending from the tonneau.

"I suppose that is Mahabeh Majah," he mused sleepily. "That's why the little lady was sitting up so late and why she had the tea things out. She was waiting for him." Then to the thronging queries, threatening to return and keep him awake, "Scott! Go away! Call it a pipe dream and let me go to sleep!"

CHAPTER V.

WHEN EVAN BLOUNT opened his eyes on the morning following the night of singular adventures the sun was shining brightly in at the bed's head window, a cheerful fire was crackling on the hearth, and his father, a little heavier, a little grayer, but with the same rugged face and kindly eyes, was standing at his bedside.

"Evan, boy!" and "Father!" were the only words of greeting, but the mighty hand grip that went with them was for Evan a renewal of his boyhood and a sufficient promise for the future.

Followed instantly a rush of mingled emotions; of astonishment that he had recognized so familiar a landmark in the midland faring through the hills or on the approach to the home of his childhood; of something like a keen regret that he had given place so thoroughly and completely to the new; of something bordering on chagrin that he had been surprised into accepting the hospitable advances of a woman whom he had been intending to avoid and from whom he had cherished a deep and bitter hatred.

But at that gripping moment there was a sense of a nice weighing of emotions. He was in the father's house, the homecoming, some phases of which he had vaguely dreamed, was a fact accomplished, and the new life—new life that was to be his—without Patricia—was fairly before him. There were arrears to be brought up.

"Did the little—er—did Miss Blount tell you that I was here?"

"She did, but she couldn't tell me much more. How on top of earth did you happen to blow in at midnight with Jack Barto for your herd leader?"

"It's a fairy tale, and you won't believe it—of a Blount! The laughing reply. 'I left Boston Monday and should have reached the capital last night. But my train was laid out behind a freight wreck at Aretas just before dark, and I left it and took to the hills—horseback. Don't ask me why. The smell of the sagebrush was in my nostrils, and I had to do it. I knew where I was, and I thought I could ride to Debbloby's, so I hired the horse and pitched out. I think I kept the general direction all right, but I got lost among the Lost river bog-backs, but after that I was pretty successfully lost."

"And Barto found you?" queried the senator.

"Who is this ubiquitous Barto who goes around playing the holdup one minute and the good angel the next?"

"He is a sort of general utility man for Hathaway, the head pusher of the Twin Buttes Lumber company. He is supposed to be a timber cruiser and sees the general direction all right, but much at his trade. Down in the lower wards of New York they'd call him a heeler maybe. But you don't mean to tell me that Jack Barto robbed you, son?"

"No; he was merely discussing with his two fellow holdups the advisability of knocking me on the head and dropping me into Lost River canyon; that was all. Of course I knew they had fallen upon the wrong man, and after awhile I succeeded in making Barto accept that hypothesis. At least he accepted it sufficiently to bring me here for identification. Since he wouldn't talk and I didn't recognize the trail or the place I hadn't the slightest notion of my whereabouts—not the least in the world."

The big man was leaning against the foot rail of the bed and frowning thoughtfully. "Talked about dropping you into Lost river, did they? H'm! We'll have to look into that a little, I guess. Who set them on, son? Got any idea of that?"

"No; he was a very good idea—a man who came across in the Pullman with me from Omaha; tall and rather slim and with a hatchet face and owl-like eyes. I didn't learn his name, but he said he was interested in mines and timber."

"That was Hathaway himself," was the instant decision. "His company has been cutting timber in the Lost river reserve, and he probably thought you were chasing him. You didn't know Honoria?"

"No; I wasn't expecting—I may remember that I never met her," he remembered the young man, who had risen to his elbow among the pillows.

The father walked away to the window and stood looking out upon the distant mountains for a full minute before he turned to say gently: "We may as well run the boundary lines on this one time as another, son. You don't like Honoria. You've made up your mind not to like her. I'm not going to make it hard for either of you if I can help it. This is her home, but it is also yours, my boy. Do you reckon you count?"

Even Blount made haste to stop the half pathetic appeal.

"Don't let that trouble you," he interrupted. "I—Mrs. Blount is a very different person from the woman I have been imagining, and if she were not I think we are both sufficiently civilized not to quarrel." Then: "Have you breakfasted yet—you and Mrs. Blount? But of course you have long ago."

"Breakfasted? Without you? Not much, son, and that reminds me I was to come up and see if you were awake, and if you were I was to send Barnabas up with your coffee."

"You may tell Barnabas that I haven't acquired the coffee in bed habit yet," laughed the lady, sitting up. "You may make my apologies to Mrs. Blount and tell her I'll be down ' pronto. There doesn't that sound as if I were getting behind to the good old sagebrush idiom? Great land! I haven't heard anybody say ' pronto' since I was knee high to a hoptoad!"

In all his forecastings Evan Blount had never pictured a homecoming like this. In each succeeding hour of the day the edges of the chasm of the years deepened closer together, and when he finally put him on a horse and rode with him to a corner of the vast home farm, a corner fenced off by sentinel cottonwoods and watered by the small irrigation ditch of his boyhood recollections, rode with him through the screening cottonwoods and showed him, lying beyond them, the old ranch building of the Circle Bar, untouched and undisturbed, his heart was full, and a sudden mist came before his eyes to dim the picture.

"I've kept it just as I used to be, Evan," his father said gently. "I thought maybe you'd come back some day and be sure enough disappointed if it were gone."

The younger man slipped from his saddle and went to look in at the open door of the old ranch house. Everything was precisely as he remembered it—simple, old-fashioned, of furniture, the crossed quilts over the high wooden mantel, his mother's rocking chair—that was the final touch. He sat down on the worn door log and put his face in his hands, for now the gaping chasm of the years was quite closed, and he was a boy again.

—At Bethesda Methodist Protestant Church the pastor, Rev. Dr. Graham, will preach on Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Sabbath School 9:30 a. m.; Class meeting 3 p. m.; Christian Endeavor service 6:30 p. m. Mid week service in the lecture room Wednesday evening 7:30 o'clock.

—The ladies of Division Street Baptist Church will serve a supper in "Social Hall" of the church on Saturday evening, March 25th, from 5 to 9:30 p. m. A musical program will be rendered. Admission 25 cents, supper included.

—The housewife cake and candy sale being held each Saturday afternoon of March by the members of the C. E. Society of the Wicomico Presbyterian Church will be held this Saturday at the home of Mrs. W. S. Sheppard on Main Street.

—Reports from Mrs. Lowenthal are to the effect that she is improving nicely from her recent operation at the Woman's Hospital Baltimore, and expects to be able to return home in about ten days.

—Mr. Wm. B. Tilghman, Jr. is suffering from a case of scarlet fever contracted, it is supposed during a recent trip to New York. He has been isolated in his home. Dr. Truitt, health officer, says this is the only case of scarlet fever reported in Wicomico county.

—Rev. B. G. Parker will on Sunday the 19th, begin his series of meetings at Branch Hill Baptist Church. Rev. A. J. Fristoe D. D., the State Evangelist will preach at 3 and 7:30 p. m. Dr. Fristoe is one of our finest preachers and has had great success in Evangelistic work.

—Messrs. George and Howard Patrick have purchased of Mr. A. L. Hardester the Main Street Clothing business known as the "IT" Store. These young men have been managing the business for several years for Mr. Hardester and now as the business has passed into their control will be in better position to please their many friends and customers than ever before.

—The directors of the Bank of Fruitland last week elected Mr. George R. Hill cashier, and he expects to enter upon his duties about April 15. Mr. Hill has for the past two years been assistant to Secretary T. H. Williams of the Salisbury Building Loan and Banking Association. He has thus considerable experience in the banking business, and will enter the Bank of Fruitland well equipped for his duties.

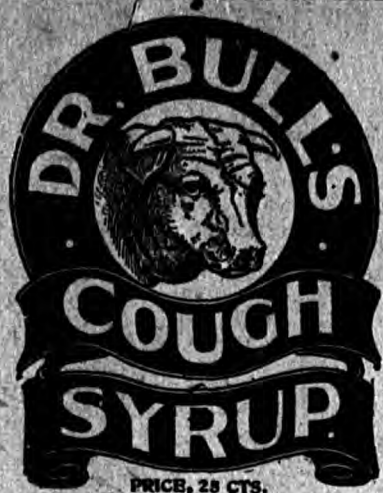

—Rev. W. H. Edwards has disposed of his property on Camden Avenue to Mr. Louis J. Costa, General Manager of the Salisbury Marine Construction Company. This property fronts on Camden Avenue 130 feet and has a depth of 300 feet. The price paid was $5,300.00. Mr. Costa, we understand, will make extensive improvements to the property in the near future. The negotiations were made through the real estate broker, S. P. Woodcock.

—A very aged Englishman many years ago gave this advice to his daughter in a letter as to what a lady's dressing table should contain; "the best beautifier a young lady can use is good humor. The best renovator is temperance; the best lip salve is truth; the best rouge is modesty; the best eyewater is the fear of sympathy; the best gargle of the voice is cheerfulness; the best wash for soothing wrinkles is contentment; the best care for drowsiness is attention; the best mirror is reflection, and the whitest powder is innocence."

—The disappearance of the large copper cent and the nickel cent from circulation has brought about a curious condition in the United States Treasury. None of these pieces have been coined for years, but enough of them were returned to the Treasury each year to give the Government a good profit in recoining them into smaller copper cents and into nickel five cent pieces. Officials of the Treasury Department have informed Congress that these pieces practically have gone out of existence. In order to keep up the supply of new cents and nickels Congress will have to appropriate money to pay the expense of coining.

—Miss Annie Waller of Salisbury who is spending sometime with her aunt, Mrs. Jesse H. Goslee, near Upper Ferry, had quite an exciting experience a few days ago with a big hen hawk. Miss Waller heard a hen making a great noise about 40 yards from the house and went to investigate. She found that the hawk had scooped down upon the hen in a briar patch but missed its prey and fell upon its back. Miss Waller called loudly for help and her aunt responded. With sticks in hand they made an onslaught upon the hawk and succeeded in killing it after quite a fight with the infuriated bird. The hawk measured fifty inches from tip to tip of wings.

—The pastor of the Division Street Baptist Church will preach both Sunday morning and Sunday evening in his own pulpit; if a m., the third in the series in "Baptist Principles," 7:30 p. m., "The Lost Sheep, and the Ninety and Nine. Additional song books have been purchased and an effort will be made to give every person in the congregation access to a book.

Short Crop of Cow Peas Prices Are Going Up!

The enormous demand for Cow Peas last year carried the price very high, and as the crop is very short and the acreage is rapidly extending there are many indications which point to much higher prices as the sowing season approaches.

Whip-poor-will Cow Peas. The Whip-poor-will are generally preferred in the Central and Southern States. They are bush form, early maturing and especially desirable for feed.

New Era Cow Peas. New Era are a little earlier and make more vine than the Whip-poor-will.

Wonderfuls, Clays and Mixed Cow Peas. For Hay, the Wonderfuls or the Clays are more productive. They should be planted with an occasional grain of Corn, Sorghum Seed, Kaffir Corn, etc., which will prevent the vines from getting damaged by coming in contact with the ground.

Black Cow Peas. Black Cow Peas are a little earlier in maturing than Clays; they make a good growth of vine, are exceptionally good for medium or poor land, and will stand almost any amount of wet weather without injury.

MORE DEAD FLIES IN THE PRECIOUS OINTMENT

Pastor Russell Points Out More Deceptive Additions to the Word of God Contained in Our Common Version Bibles. But Shown to Be False Because Not Found in the Oldest Greek MS.—One of These "Flies" Has Moulded Accepted Theology—Dead
Flies Cause the Apothecary's Ointment to Stink (Ecclesiastes x, 1).

Not long ago I pointed out that the last twelve verses of St. Mark's Gospel in our Common Version are a spurious addition recognized by all scholars. Because these verses are not to be found in any of the oldest Greek MSS. and were evidently added to the Word of God in the seventh century or later. Moreover, we gave proof of the untruthfulness of this addition. It is true that whoever believes the Gospel of Christ may handle serpents with impunity and may drink deadly poison without harm! Surely not. It is nothing short of a sin for those who know better to acknowledge these verses and to use them to bolster up theories of Divine Healing. It is as much a crime to add to the Word of God as to take away from it.

Today I invite attention to some other dead flies, some other additions to the Word of God, which have had much to do with twisting the theology once delivered to the saints. Take, for instance, the closing words of the Lord's Prayer:

"Thine is the Kingdom and Power and Glory."

These words, uttered by our Lord, should be found in the old Greek MSS. But they are not found therein. They are, therefore, to be rejected as additions made by people centuries after Matthew's Gospel was written. These words were introduced when the faith of the Church respecting the Kingdom of Messiah was changed or changing from what it was originally. All through the New Testament the Second Coming of Christ in power and glory to establish His Kingdom and to glorify the Church, His Bride, is set for the end of this Gospel Age. But as the time grew long a change of sentiment came into the Church. It became popular and rich. Its bishops were respected. Finally the theory prevailed that God did not intend to delay the establishment of the Kingdom until the Second Coming of Christ, but did intend to establish it in the hands of the Church during this Age and to use the Church for the conquering of the world and the fulfilling of all the promises of the past.

In line with this the most prominent bishop of the time was recognized as Divinely appointed to represent Christ in the world and to reign over the nations in His stead and to bring about the Millennium, etc. This was the Bishop of Rome, who subsequently was styled the Pope and who claimed and was accorded the honorable title, "Vice-gerent of the Son of God." It is said that the equivalent of this title to this day is worn by the Pope on his tiara or three-crowned hat—Vicarius Dei Fili.

Thus the change came in the general sentiment of the "Christian world." Messiah's Kingdom was no longer to be looked for as coming, but was to be recognized as here. The Pope, as Messiah's reigning representative, was to be acknowledged. All Kingdoms that were to honor and obey Messiah were commanded to honor and obey the Pope. The various prophecies which tell of Messiah's Kingdom glory were applied to the Pope, and are still so applied.

As Messiah was to ride forth conquering the world and "wound the heads over many peoples," so the Pope in succession sought to, to fulfill these prophecies. As the inauguration of Messiah's Kingdom is promised to be in the midst of a time of great trouble, it was not thought improper that Papacy should cause great trouble in the world in its endeavor to establish itself as the Kingdom of Messiah. As whoever would not receive Messiah was to be "destroyed from amongst the people," it was not considered wrong to destroy those who rejected and opposed the Papal Kingdom and to give them to the burning flame.

"Thy Kingdom Come on Earth." The Lord's prayer was already in the Scriptures, and was known to many. It could not be eliminated. But some zealous person, fully believing that God's Kingdom had come, felt justified in inserting the prayer to correspond to what he supposed were the facts. Hence the prayer which begins, "Thy Kingdom come," is made to end by saying, "Thy Kingdom has come in its glory and power."

If Papacy is the Kingdom of Messiah, it is certainly not what the Jews expected. It is certainly not what the masses of mankind had any reason to expect, although it is so accepted by the majority of Christendom.

Although our protesting forefathers broke away from the Pope and denounced him as Anti-Christ and declared that he falsely sat in the place of Christ without authority, they nevertheless were imbued with the same error. They did not think to go back to the message of the Scriptures and to look for the Son of God to set up His Kingdom at His Second Advent and then to bless Israel and the world through His glorified Church. Instead they held to the Papal theory that God's Kingdom was set up and was conquering the world, and that thus the Messiah reign mentioned in the prophecy is being fulfilled. They held that Christ himself is the invisible King but that the Pope is not authorized to represent him. Hence this spurious addition to the Word of God is acceptable to Protestants as to Catholics; indeed more so, if we may judge by the fact that the Catholic Bible omits the spurious words, while the Protestant Bible quotes them.

We here remark that according to Protestant theory, Messiah's Kingdom is represented in the civilized nations of the world, especially of Europe. These all claim to reign "by the grace of God," in which case, of course, were between the various parts of Messiah's Kingdom. And present military preparations on land and sea portend a most sanguinary conflict between these "kingdoms of this world," which think themselves and are called by Christendom "kingdoms of God."

How glad we are to see the Truth on this subject; that the Kingdom of God's dear Son has not yet been set up, in any sense of the word—that it is still future. It cannot be set up until this Gospel Age ends and "the elect" saintly few of every nation—Jew and Gentile—shall be changed from earthly to heavenly nature by the First Resurrection, which will qualify them to be "kings and priests unto God and unto Christ and to reign with Him a thousand years" (Revelation xi, 6).

It is well that all Bible students should mark this "fly" and extract it from the Precious Ointment, and not how much sweeter and fresher the Lord's prayer is to them forever.

"Oh, What a Whopper!" Thomas Paine was an enemy to the Bible and to the Christian religion, but largely so, we believe, on account of his poor understanding of it. And his misunderstanding of the Bible was largely due to the false doctrines handed down from the "Dark Ages" purporting to be biblical. Who can not sympathize with the great infidel, Thomas Paine, who, when reading the last verse of St. John's Gospel, exclaimed, "What a whopper!" It would be strange if he had not, for the things which Jesus did, which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written" (John xxi, 25).

Surely any one of reasoning mind should see the absurdity of such a statement. Surely all Christian ministers should have informed the Lord's sheep under their care respecting what is and what is not the Word of God. The Bible, as it was recognized by the Apostolic Church and written down in the original Greek manuscripts. Why any Christian minister should assail me because I endeavor to do for the people what he has neglected to do cannot understand. I must leave it to the Lord to judge between us. I am informed that hundreds of ministers went to the Editors of the papers which publish my sermons weekly and endeavor to have them discontinued their publication.

But the Editors perceive that their readers are no longer under the bondage of the "Dark Ages," but have begun to think for themselves, and that many of them are hungering and thirsting for the Truth respecting the Bible—the Christian's spiritual food and drink. To the claim that many read my sermons instead of going to the Bible, I should know all about them. I am preaching to the non-church-going ten millions who are in the majority and that it behooves the ministers to provide for their people the spiritual food for which they are famishing, if they would not lose them all.

Another Big Fly. To the credit of such men as Luther, Calvin, Knox, Zwingli, Wesley and others living prior to our day we must explain that they had no opportunity for knowing of the spurious passages of the Scriptures. They, therefore, have no responsibility such as do devils upon ministers of our day who should know all about these matters. We cannot on this occasion make further investigation, take out more of these dead flies; but, the Lord willing, at some future time I John v, 7, 8 will have our attention. It is worthy of it. It has caused the Ointment to stink and has confused the minds of many of God's dear saints by the way in which the error in this case has been interwoven with the Truth.

My heart should be distinctly in mind that what I am here presenting is not at all in line with the presentations of the Higher Critics. Their method is to read through the Scriptures and judge of them by their own keen intellectual powers, and thus to discriminate between which were written by the Prophets credited, and which were additions. Their Higher Criticism claims a keener sense of mental discrimination than ordinary mortals enjoy, by which they know these things whether others can see it or not.

I resent Higher Criticism and accept the Word of God in full. I reject nothing because of my own or other men's surmises, but merely by the facts. If the oldest Greek MSS. do not contain certain passages of Scripture, how could they get into later MSS. except as spurious additions?

Nor should I be considered as fault-finding with our Common Version of the Bible. While it is not without its faults, it has so many excellent qualities and beautiful translations that I prefer it to any other and generally use it. But I must not, I cannot, approve those portions of it which all orthodox scholars admit to be spurious. We must not hide the Word of God deceptively. If we do we must expect darkness instead of light, confusion instead of harmony.

Our Bible's Ter-Centenary. Just three centuries ago our English Common Version Bible was published. This year its Ter-Centenary is celebrated. It is a grand book. It has done a grand work. The fact that it is not perfect must not condemn a work possessed of so many glorious qualities. It was the result of seven years' labor on the part of forty-seven persons, and the Clergy of the University of Cambridge, England, for its preparation. They labored to some disadvantage by reason of the command given them to follow an earlier translation styled, The Bishop's Bible, and to alter it as little as the original would allow. They were also instructed that if the Tyndale, Coverdale, Matthew, Cranmer or Whitechurch translations and the Geneva Bible agreed better with the text, theirs should be accepted as instead of the Bishop's. The translation was, perhaps, the best that could be made at the time.

Published by kindly authority, it is now venerated by English and American Protestants as though it had come direct from the finger of God. This is a mistake. We are to worship God and to reverence His Word and to search carefully as possible to have the precious Ointment provided by the spirit of the Truth free from all dead flies—free from all human additions and misstatements and superstitions of the "Dark Ages."

The basis for our Common Version was the Latin Vulgate, which was diligently revised and compared with the Greek MSS. of the time. But there were few Greek MSS. known at that time, whereas at the present time there are over 700. Three of these are quite ancient.

(1) The Sinaitic MS., found in a convent on Mt. Sinai as recently as 1859. This is acknowledged to be the oldest Greek MS. known in the world. Its date is estimated to be about the year 801 A. D. This MS. is now in the possession of the Russian government at St. Petersburg.

(2) The Vatican MS., 1208, is credited with being next in age. It was found amongst old MSS. in the Vatican Library and is still there and catalogued. The date of its writing is estimated to be about the year 350 A. D.

(3) The third of these oldest known Greek MSS. of the New Testament is styled the Alexandrian, because it was found in Alexandria in Egypt. It is now in the British Museum, where any visitor can behold it in a glass case. It is supposed to have been written about A. D. 450. The readings of all three of these Greek MSS. can be secured and the variations between their readings and our Common Version are so simply arranged as to leave no excuse for ignorance on the part of Bible students. Our Common Version with notations of these MSS. can be obtained through any bookseller.

A Responsible and Sacred Trust. Prof. Tischendorf, writing respecting this ancient Greek MSS., says:—"To treat such ancient authorities with neglect would be either unwarrantable arrogance or culpable negligence. Indeed, it would be a misunderstanding of Providence if, after all these documents had been preserved through all the dangers of fourteen or fifteen centuries and delivered safe into our hands, we were not ready to receive them with thankfulness as most valuable instruments for the elucidation of Truth."

The Truth in the Love of It. The Lord speaks of some who receive not the Truth in the love of it, and calls that they ultimately will be ensnared by the adversary. Evidently heart-honesty is one of the most precious elements in the Divine light. It is not sufficient that we should be Christians in name merely and with form and ceremony. It would not be sufficient in the Lord's sight that we should worship sect or party or even the Bible. It is the Divine Truth that we must reverence next to the Divine person.

It is not sufficient to have Bibles on our center tables merely, nor sufficient to carry them under our arms. We must "eat" the Word of God—that is to say, we must, as spiritual children of God, feed upon His message. And this truly implies careful discrimination to discern between God's inspired Revelation and all human additions and admixtures. There is, therefore, a difference between reverencing and loving the Word of God and reverencing and loving a particular translation, errors and all.

"Thy Word is Truth." Our Master's prayer for all of His true disciples, or footstep followers, was and still is, "Sanctify them through Thy Truth; Thy Word is Truth." Whoever would have the sanctifying influence of the Divine Word should so far as possible rid himself of every unsanctifying admixture of human tradition and interpolation. The true sanctification or setting apart of the heart to know and to do the Lord's will could not be content to accept with the sanctifying Truth defiling errors, chaff and nonsense.

If thousands are turning away from the Bible there is a reason. It is not the pure Truth that drives them away, but the foreign admixture and the spurious misinterpretations handed down to us by our well-meaning but deluded ancestors of several centuries ago. It is high time for all to manifest to God their love of the Truth by spending some of their time in studying it—in learning its precious lessons and in telling forth its "good tidings of great joy to all people."

"Thy one thing now to read the Bible through." Another thing to read, to learn and do: "Thy one thing now to read it with delight. And quite another thing to read it right. Some read to prove a pre-adopted creed. They understand but little what they read."

And every passage in the Book they bend to make it suit that all-important end. Some people read, as I have often thought, "To teach the Book, instead of to be taught."

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for much sickness and suffering; therefore, if kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results are most likely to follow. Your other organs may need attention, but your kidneys most, because they do most and should have attention first. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty. If you are sick or "fed badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. A trial will convince you of its great merit. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest because its remarkable health restoring properties have been proven in thousands of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer, B. Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

The scintillating, splendid beauty of our Cut Glass will delight and gratify the most critical and exacting purchasers.

Every article of cut glass shown here is genuine hand-cut—and there are no seconds, and none of those frauds of pressed glass with a little superficial cutting. We know that if you will inspect our stocks of cut glass you will be delighted and pleased with its perfect purity and beauty, and the reasonable prices. Your inspection cordially invited.

Ratification Notice.

The County Commissioners of Wicomico County hereby give notice that the report of George E. Jackson, L. B. Brittingham and S. E. Truitt, Commissioners to lay out a new County Road from St. John's Church to the Potomac River at Barbours's Cross, has been filed in their office and will be taken up for ratification on Tuesday, March 20th, 1911. Objections to the ratification must be made before noon on above date. If the County Commissioners' meeting is postponed from this date, the report will be taken up at the next regular meeting of the Board.
By order of the Board,
THOMAS PERRY, Clerk.

SAYS POLITICS' MUD

Is Not For Women. Thinks Suffragists Do Not Know What They Ask. Rousing Opposition.

If the women who are urging votes for women knew what it meant to go through a political campaign they would not be so anxious for the suffrage according to Everett P. Wheeler of New York, who was one of the speakers at the meeting held in Oiler Hall at the Medical and Chiropractic Society, Baltimore, Monday night by the Maryland Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage. The other speakers were Justice Henry Billings Brown, of Washington and William L. Marbury, of Baltimore.

Mr. Marbury before introducing the out of town speakers made a brief opening address, expressing himself as absolutely, totally and irrevocably opposed to woman suffrage. "I leave to your judgement, ladies and gentlemen," he said in closing "if Leander would have sworn the Hesperus for a suffragette."

The arguments against granting the elective franchise to women were cogently set forth by Justice Brown. "The fact is," he remarked, "that from time immemorial the power to govern has devolved upon the male population and neither man nor woman had a natural right to vote."

He pointed out that anyone who wished to change laws must shoulder the burden of proof. Next, he then added, happily it is the duty of men to govern the people and that of women to govern men.

Mr. Wheeler opened his address by presenting the dominant arguments against woman suffrage and made an appeal for the mothers of the country. He said in part: "There are at the present time 20,000,000 women in the United States who either are now mothers or in the ordinary course of society and life will become such. The great majority of them keep no servants. Besides the burden of motherhood they have the care of their household, the provision of food for their husband and children, the countless requirements that each day the household brings with it. Yet, what the suffragists propose is to impose upon these mothers the burden of the vote, to subject them to the entanglements of political committees, to be called out to meetings during the campaign; and to leave everything else in order to cast a vote on election day. You, good ladies who advocate this consider and refrain, you know not what to do; you know not what is meant by a political campaign."

ALARMING NIGHT STORM

Of Mid-Southern Violence Gave This City And Southeastern Section A Severe Pounding. Heavy Damage To Glass.

A violent rain and hail storm prevailed over this section Monday morning early and did quite a little damage in its limited course. Salisbury seemed to be almost the centre of the storm. The hail stones came from aloft with a most alarming patter in the deep of night vivid with the keen lightning flashes and the heavy thunder.

Various reports put the hail stones from small marbles to hen egg sizes, and early risers of Monday morning found large quantities on the ground as large as hickory nuts. The bulk of the damage in this section was suffered by Mr. W. F. Allen, who estimates his loss at close to $1000. He had about three fourths of his hot bed glass panes, numbering $2,000 broken by the severe hail. This destruction may be further increased by damage to his young plants, from the fall and following freeze, as between two and three hundred thousand cabbage plants kept tender by their enclosure were left exposed by the breakage.

Sunday night's storm recalled to many the disastrous blizzard of March 11-12, 1888, when a furious storm swept over the east following a day of warmth and sunshine as on last Sunday.

In 1888 we had one of the deepest snows ever experienced in this section of the country. Traffic was blocked for several days, and there was much suffering among people and animals. Public roads throughout Wicomico county were closed to travel for nearly ten days.

With Mr. A. T. Dashiell, Salisbury, local agent for

ARMOUR'S HIGH GRADE ANIMAL MATTER FERTILIZERS.

The agricultural value, or the results produced in the field, is what you are mainly interested. Investigate the record of the Armour Brands and you will be convinced that you can't afford to plant without them.

The Armour Brands are manufactured under the direct supervision of an experienced chemist, (who is thoroughly posted as to the plant food requirements of the different crops,) and are manufactured from a combination of the best fertilizer materials, such as Nitrate of Soda, Bone Meal Dried Blood, Animal Tankage and Acid Phosphate, and high grade Potash Salts, thus giving a plant food that will insure a steady feeding of your crops from the beginning through to maturity.

Ask your neighbor about Armour's—he knows. Place your order at once. Don't let anyone try to convince you something else is just as good.

Virginia's Vegetable Garden

By Temple Bailey

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

Virginia came in, all grubby from digging in her vegetable garden.

"I don't see," her aunt said, "why you like to dig in the dirt."

Virginia flushed. "If you would let me have flowers—" she began.

"I never could fuss with flowers,"

Miss Cornelia grumbled. "They ain't useful, and I believe in people being useful and things being useful."

Virginia did not argue the question.
In fact Virginia did not argue anything. She was still a fair, shrinking child, in spite of her twenty-one years.

She had come to live with her aunt when she was a little girl, and it had not taken her long to find out that argument with that strong, stern personality was like beating her head against a stone wall.

The one compensation for the lack of sympathy which she found in her home was the beauty of the country surrounding it. Virginia's childhood had been spent in the city and her aunt's rambling white house, with the orchard to the right of it, and with the garden to the left of it, and the stretch of wooded land behind it, filled her soul with delight. It was in the spring that she liked it best.

Miss Cornelia's ideas as to the duties of young women were old-fashioned. She liked to see Virginia performing domestic tasks in the kitchen or in the living-room, where they sewed together.

But Virginia loved the out of doors.
She had begged the privilege of taking care of the vegetable garden when she found that she could not have flowers. Of late, too, there had been a deeper reason for Virginia's love for the out-of-door work. Across the fence was another garden, and in this garden some one worked whose whistle was as clear as the call of the blackbird on the fence. Now and then the whistle would stop and a voice would give a cheery greeting to Virginia.

Virginia always sent back timid answers. Miss Cornelia had no use for the neighbors on the other side of the fence. She called them shiftless and refused to recognize that the son of the family was different from the others. She would not admit that his industry was redeeming the scrubby farm that his father had let run to waste. Indeed, Mark Graham's garden promised to be superior to Virginia's. Virginia had spoken of it that morning in a shy conversation over the fence.

"I don't see how you make your lettuce and radishes grow so fast," she had murmured. "Mine are just beginning to show above the ground, and yours will be ready to eat before many days."

"Well, a man knows more about such things," Mark had said, with a glance at the slender hands on the fence rail. "It doesn't seem as if a woman ought to dig."

"Oh, I'd do it if I didn't. Aunt Cornellia would keep me sewing in the house, and I love to be out of doors."

"It's a shame," Mark muttered,
"that you cannot do as you please. If I—"

He stopped suddenly.

Virginia knew what he wanted to say to her. She knew that he loved her, and she knew, too, that he would never tell her as long as he was a poor and struggling farmer.

She knew that even if he did ask her Miss Cornelia would never consent to their marriage.

She sighed and he saw her shadowed eyes.

"I wish I could tell you all that is in my heart, Virginia," Mark said.

Virginia smiled bravely and said,
"But you mustn't, Mark," and then she had run away from him into the house.

Miss Cornelia had seen the two by the fence and had resolved to keep Virginia, if possible, out of the garden. Miss Cornelia had her own ideas about matrimony for her niece. The young doctor in town who called now and then, and whose admiration of Virginia was obvious, had money, position and a good practice. Therefore, Miss Cornelia argued, if Virginia married, why not marry the doctor?

Virginia liked the doctor, but when she rode with him or walked with him or talked with him on the wide front porch there came to her no such moments of ecstasy as she felt in these brief meetings with Mark at the division line of the two gardens.

Somewhere in her mind Mark seemed associated with the woods, the blue sky and the sunshine. She knew if she married the doctor she would have to live in town, shut up in the big house that had come to him from his grandfather.

On the other hand,
however, if she married the doctor he would give her the pretty things her soul craved, for even as Virginia loved the pink and white of the orchard and the blue of the sky, so she loved the daintiness of silken gowns and the sparkle of jewels.

Therefore that night when the doctor asked her to marry him, Virginia put him off with a timid half-promise.

"I must think about it," she said, and went to bed to lie awake and wonder if she could live the rest of her life in the dim old house in town, with a man she did not love.

In the morning she went out early to work in the garden. She could hear Mark's whistle, but even when he called "Good morning," she did not go to the fence. Her broad hat hid her burning cheeks and her hands trembled as she dug around her radishes.

Presently Mark came closer and called, "Come here, Virginia."

There was a masterful note in the voice which she had never heard before. She rose and went to him.

"Virginia," he said, abruptly, "they say in the village that you are going to marry the doctor."

Virginia's face flamed. "But I am not," she cried, and in a moment she was transformed. Like a flash it had come to her what it would mean to put Mark out of her life; what it would mean to have the spring and summer come without these moments of happy meeting.

"I am not, Mark," she said again.

"Why, you—" Then her voice died away. She could not tell him what she thought of him. That was the man's part. Mark looked down at her.

"I know what you want to say, Virginia," he told her, gently, "and I wish you would say it. It seems as if I had no right to ask you to love me and to marry me. But you won't be happy with the doctor—you won't be happy with anybody but me, Virginia."

It was the serene assertion of the man who knew that he had met his mate. Virginia knew, too, that there was nothing of conceit, nothing to offend, in his sense of security. She was his, as he was hers, and no one should separate them.

Miss Cornelia, unconscious of the awakening of the young people, came down the path and across the garden to play the part of cruel fate. She had ruled Virginia in everything for years and she meant to rule her still.

"Virginia, go back to the house. I won't have you idling in the vegetable garden," she said.

"Aunt Cornelia, I am going to marry Mark," Virginia returned, calmly.

It was useless after that for Miss Cornelia to protest, to bluster, to plead; Virginia had made up her mind.

She loved the out of doors and she loved Mark. She said it over and over again. "And I am to have a flower garden, Aunt Cornelia," was the answer she would make to the old lady's arguments when they had left Mark and were in the house once more.

"But you will never be happy,"
Aunt Cornelia's tone was tragic.

Virginia pondered for a moment,
then she said, "Are you happy, Aunt Cornelia?"

Miss Cornelia stared. She had not thought of it that way.

"When I am with Mark," Virginia said, "I see beauty in everything. It was he who first made me see the wonderful things in my vegetable garden. When you wouldn't let me grow flowers he found me crying in the orchard under the apple tree, and he showed me the beauty of useful things. Out of the little things of life he gets so much that is interesting and wonderful, and you never showed me any beauty, Aunt Cornelia."

The old woman knew that it was true. Things had been commonplace to her always. To Virginia life would never be commonplace if she married Mark. She rose and went to the window.

"Well, I suppose you will do as you like, Virginia," she said, drearily.

Virginia came and stood beside her.
"Can't it be as you like, too?" Suddenly her arms went around the old lady's neck, her fair head lay on the spare old bosom, the young eyes looked into hers with love in them.

And at that look Miss Cornelia melted. But she was not one to show her feelings, and although her arm tightened about the slender form she said, grimly, "Well, I guess you will have to do as you like, Virginia, and when you and Mark come to live with me in this big old house we will plant flowers in the front garden."

Intemperance in France.
The Minister of Justice in France has just recently issued some significant statistics. Out of 100 persons convicted of murder, 53 were confirmed drunkards; out of 100 persons convicted of arson, 57 were confirmed drunkards; out of 100 persons convicted of begging and vagabondage, 70 were confirmed drunkards; of 100 persons convicted of assault, 90 were confirmed drunkards; of 500 persons convicted of all offenses, 323 were drunkards, or two-thirds of these convicted for various assaults were drunkards.

France is the country whose light shines have been held up as "promise of temperance," yet figures such as these furnished by the minister of justice show markedly the dire evils of existing intemperance.

CHILDREN OF BENGUET TRIBES

PRACTISING WITH BOW AND ARROW

I MUST write of some of the characteristics and peculiar customs of the natives in certain parts of the islands of the Philippines. In the mountains of the Benguet province at Benguet, the summer capital, is the home of the Igorrotes.
They remind one in their appearance of the lower caste of negro to be found in the swamp districts of Louisiana or the mountain districts of North Carolina and Tennessee, writes J.
Hamilton Lewis, in Chicago Evening Post.

Of medium height, black and dark brown color, with short, matted black hair, half-fattened nose, stocky of figure and erect of stature, such are the outlines of these natives. The men wear little crowns for hats, composed of anything that dangles, and all the tassels that can sway in the breeze. This adornment is set on the back of the head, as a fes is worn by the Turk.
A sort of gay fabric, as gaudy as can be obtained, comes only to the middle, and there is met with the belt that is the only remaining garment. This is tight-fitting and held only by a string.

In these mountains the cold becomes great at times. Frost and particles of snow are often seen, and at night it is always cold, yet these men never wear covering and sleep in huts and tents, as did the primitive American Indians. They go barefoot, save that of late a form of sandal is assumed for perfect dress. This covers only the toes and is worn with no sock.

Often one may see anachronisms of civilization in these Igorrotes; flat-headed, their ears pierced through or the lower part pulled down and stretched so large as to wear a spoon
—the usual spoon on which thread is wound—in their ears as adornments, and their teeth blackened. To this is added a shirt of blue army cloth with brass buttons, like a soldier's jacket;

a hat or derby of straw, depending on what has been needed the wearers; a waist in the shape of an American bayonet, for which they have exchanged their head ax, an instrument they carry to cleave off heads of people they meet and dislike, or use in assaults in war.

With this military accoutrement they are adorned above the waist; below, as was Adam, if we trust the description of the Bible; "naked to his enemies," in the language of Cardinal Wolsey. This Igorrote is a sight for the gods—of photography.

The women reverse the process. A skirt adorns or founders about their legs. This is made of a material looking like jute bagging. Sometimes there is a sandal on the foot, at the waist a flowing cloth, fluttering at the ends, of most flaming color when obtainable.
From the waist up "abreast the tides of wild naked to the breeze," in a Waik Whiteman spectacle. There is not a cloth or covering until the head is reached. Then possibly a shawl or wrap which is a lately assumed display of fashion upon occasions.

Sunday is their market day. So Commissioner Worcester, the most learned man in the east on the natives, provided a building for them.
To this they come on Sundays, quiet, unperturbed, with no curiosity as to the foreigner. They affect the superiority of attitude characteristic of the Indian; that is, to overlook super-ciliously the fact that a white person is about, so insignificant to them are such unimportant intrusions.

At the market are brought all the dogs to be had. For dogs are the chief object of trade. As it is cattle at our stockyards, or chickens in our market, or turkeys in Spain, so it is dogs in the Igorrote country. The dog is the animal of food. He is to the Igorrote as the pig to the Chinaman. But mark —it is the fat pig which the Chinese seeks, and the fat rat. The Igorrote must have only a thin, poor, wasted dog. The thinner, the poorer, the more emaciated the animal is, the more in demand and the higher in price is it.

Thus, as geese are fattened in the Italian Tyrol and in France to prepare the pate de foie gras, so in the Igorrote country the dog is fattened to the point of starvation so as to keep it thin, poor and with bones barely covered. This is to make the animal to give the most service as a chewing out. The unto dry or strong beef in America.

So hundreds and hundreds of dogs of every stripe and color, kind and breed, packed together as may be seen

Congratulations

For a great many years the ladies of Salisbury and vicinity have borne the reputation of being the finest cooks in the country. Especially has this fame gone abroad in the matter of making bread and pastry. The purpose of this article is not to claim any of the credit due the ladies, but everybody grants that in order to have good results in cooking, the ingredients must be good.
We claim that our Flour stands almost alone in the matter of quality. Most of the bread made here is made from our flour, and naturally we say to those few who don't use our goods—if you want the best bread use

TWIN SPIRITS

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

He was a genius—a genius of the brush. When at his easel he was completely absorbed. At such time no one could secure his attention. His lunch-box was brought in every day and set down beside him; but, although the servant was instructed to call his attention to it, he seldom knew that it was there. Often, after he had finished his work for the day he would feel faint for want of food. Then he would arise to get some and frequently knocked over the stool on which his lunch had been placed and broke the dishes.

She was a poetess. She had had a lover; but, finding that she didn't feel those heavenly thrills of which she had written of people in such condition, she had broken off her engagement with him. She had seen the artist's pictures and was sure she loved the man who painted them. She burned to know him and asked every friend she possessed to introduce her. But none of them was acquainted with him.

But her yearning for him would not let her. She resolved to visit him in his studio. A friend to whom she had given her confidence advised her to "brush up a bit," leave off her black alpaca and put on silk. But the recommendation did not impress her. Love was a matter of the soul; it had nothing to do with clothes, whereupon her friend admonished her to wear something pretty all the same.

She went to his studio, climbed several flights of stairs—she was delicate, and the effort made her heart throb violently—and tapped softly at the door. There was no response. No sound came from within. She tried the doorknob, turning it gently, then pushed the door slightly ajar. He was there. He sat at his easel before a canvas on which were a divine face and figure. The latch slipped back, making a sound. She started, thinking it would betray her. No; he went on painting. What a noble brow! His tumbled hair—it was thin—caressed the crown of his august head.

What should she do? Should she break the spell under which he worked by speaking? No; there was a chair near by. She would go and sit upon it till he came to himself or from himself. So she went softly to the chair, keeping her eyes upon him the while, and sat down.

Alas, she sat upon a palette—a palette on which were soft paints of many bright colors!

She looked at him, yearning for him. Presently he looked aside from his work and straight at her. Through his eyes looked a great spirit. But they did not see her; they were as those of a somnambulist. He turned his gaze back to his easel.

For another half hour he worked. She would no longer drag him down from his ideal flight than she pulled down herself when a poem was welling up in her own heart.

Presently she arose to go. She had seen him. Her soul had caressed his. It was enough.

But unfortunately something fell on the floor.

"Where have you been?" he asked. "I've been waiting for you. I must put in the eyes." Then, without waiting, he went on: "A little closer, please. There, face the light."

At the same time he turned and looked into her eyes. He thought she was his model. But she did not know it. She thought that his lofty intellect had stalked over the gap of a want of acquaintance.

Thus he began to paint, putting her own dark, poetic eyes into the head on the canvas, turning often to look into those of flesh and blood. In her poetic imagination she fancied that he was taking, spiritually, her eyes from her body and placing them in the head of an angel.

At last the work was finished. He stood aloof at a short distance from it, viewed it critically, made a few touches, threw down his brush, put his hand in his pocket, fished out a plug of black tobacco and bit off a quid.

As her romance, pierced to the heart, died within her she gave a little cry. He turned and looked at her through eyes from which the light of Genius Oozed and saw her as who was a lean, homely old maid with handsome eyes.

"Who in thunder are you?" he blurted.

Poor woman! Had the romance remained it would have been quite embarrassing enough, but it had vanished with the appearance of the tobacco.

What to say she did not know. There was but one thing for her to do—leave the studio. She slunk toward the door. He followed her with his eyes.

"Stop!" he said suddenly, making a few quick strides toward her. Was he going to break even the fragments of the life she had raised and how? He seized her skirt—that part of it which hung in a rear—and, spreading it out, exclaimed:

"Great Scott!"

"What is it?" she asked; not being able to see behind her.

"You've been sitting on my palette!" he said, surveying the wreck of her dress ruefully. The dress was a confusion of vermilion, prussian blue, chrome yellow, violet and other colors.

"Then, telling her to wait, he rushed for turpentine and other articles and in a quarter of an hour had got off the most of the paint. As she passed out he said:

"Thank you for the use of your eyes."

WORK OF ELECTRIC CRANE

Immense Weights and Red-Hot Metal Are Easily Handled.

For lifting heavy masses of metal, magnets actuated by electricity are now used.

The picture shows a steam crane, traveling upon rails, that is working a large electro-magnet. A pile of iron "pigs" has been unloaded from a ship on to a quay, and the electro-magnet, with the electric current switched on, is let down upon the pile. The "pigs" of iron then, six to ten at a time, adhere to the electro-magnet, just like a needle does to a child's toy horse.

shoe magnet. Away goes the crane with them, lowers them into railway trucks, and the current being switched off, the "pigs" remain where deposited.

Weights of, say, 10,000 lbs. are thus easily carried, and a great advantage of the electro-magnet crane is that it will readily pick up and carry red-hot metal, such as castings, etc., thereby avoiding much inconvenience and danger to workmen.

FLOWERS THAT CHANGE COLOR.

Some Go Through as Many as Three Variations in a Day.

"This bed of flowers was blue this morning, and now it is pink. That one was white, and it is now rose. The one by the hedge was yellow yesterday, and today it is purple."

The gardener chuckled delightedly. "I call 'em my fairy flower beds," he said. "You see, they change color. It's a grand idea, isn't it? It gives a garden such variety."

"But I didn't know that any flowers changed their color."

"Oh, yes. That bed you first mentioned is the mutable phlox. At sunrise it is blue, and in the afternoon it is pink."

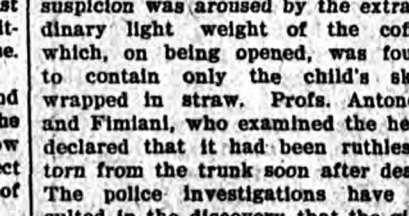

"The one to the right is hibiscus—hibiscus mutabilis. It goes through three changes in the day, from white in the morning to rose at noon and to red at sunset."

"The bed by the hedge is the lantana. The lantana is yellow one day, orange the next and red the third. Its changes are slow."

"There's other flowers, too, that change. There's the cheiranthus chameleone, that shifts from white to yellow and from yellow to red. There's the gladiolus versicolor, that's brown in the morning and blue in the evening. There's the coleus scandens, that moves slowly from greenish white to a deep violet."

Outrage Due to Superstition. One of the cemeteries near Naples has been the scene of a crime that shows a curious recrudescence of medieval superstition. A little girl was buried there in July, 1905, and 12 months later it was arranged to transfer the remains to a niche in the little mortuary chapel. At the exhumation suspicion was aroused by the extraordinary light weight of the coffin, which, on being opened, was found to contain only the child's skull wrapped in straw. Prof. Antonelli and Fimiani, who examined the head, declared that it had been ruthlessly torn from the trunk soon after death. The police investigations have resulted in the discovery that the girl's body was disinterred and the bones pulverized for the rites of necromancy and witchcraft which are still so much in vogue among superstitious peasantry of that region.

FIRE DRILL.

The chark or fire drill consisted merely of a piece of soft, dry wood with a hole drilled in its center, into which a rod of hardwood, ash or oak, was placed, and caused to revolve with rapidity, either by the hands or by a cord passed round it and pulled or slackened at each end alternately.

Dog Calls Workers to Dinner. Our collie dog shows a great deal of intelligence. He sits in the kitchen and watches me prepare the dinner for the farm hands. When I take the fork and try the potatoes and see if they are done, he knows that it is time that the men were called, and he immediately gets up, goes to the back porch, takes the rope in his mouth, and rings the bell for them to come in.—Chicago Tribune.

Jackdaw's Theft. Following the loss of numerous wooden labels attached to the plants in the city park the Tarro Corporation issued numerous solemn warnings to children, says the London Daily News.

At a chapel near at hand, however, a large pile of the missing labels has just been found under a hole in the roof, having been carried there by a jackdaw.

Why He Didn't. Two gamblers, shooting in Spot land, sat down to lunch. On taking a bottle of whisky out, one of them noticed that the cork had been tampered with, and, knowing the character of their game, at once accused him of having been at the lunch basket.

"I fear that you have been drinking the whisky, Sandy."

"No, no, no, I am not, for the cork wouldn't come out!"

POULTRY

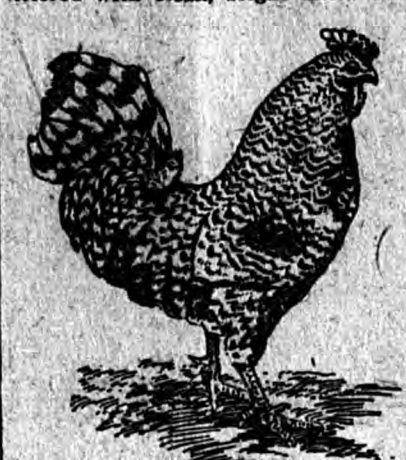

SELECTING GOOD FLOCK.

Health of Birds is the First Consideration if They Are to Be Profitable.

A chicken's comb is the index of its health, and when you are picking out your winter layers take this point into consideration. The fowls must be of laying stock to start with if you are going to supply marketable eggs during the winter, when prices are at the top mark.

Your laying stock must be healthy and alert, quick moving, with every indication of health. They must be kept in quarters where they are not exposed to raw winds and sudden changes in temperature.

Give them animal food, with plenty of grain to keep them busy during the day. The scratching shed should be littered with clean, bright straw and American Dominique Cock.

The grain dashed into this so that they will have to scratch for their provisions.

If such fowls are given good, fresh air regularly and plenty of sunlight when a sunshiny day comes along—and there are a good many of them if you will use them—then the eggs will be forthcoming. Don't give the chickens unusual foods in the scraps you throw them. Such things as lemon rinds, mixtures with onions or similar flavors in them may give a taint to an egg that would otherwise be strictly first grade.

Let it be known that you are producing first class eggs and you will have no trouble in getting a little better price. This advanced sum will come after you have made a reputation and not before.

Above all, never market an egg that there is any doubt about. If you want to be known as a good producer of fresh eggs never sell any other kind. It pays in the long run. No dealer of any kind succeeds who sells goods for anything else than what they are. This one point if overlooked will defeat any plans of selling eggs at fancy prices during the winter months.

The most important thing is the stock to start with, for with the best planned and located chicken house it is impossible to have eggs to sell in the winter months, when prices are high, unless you get birds of laying stock, for the same rules of heredity that govern in raising beef cattle and dairy cattle apply to chickens.

If you want winter layers get eggs from a strong laying strain and then give the fowls attention.

BIG WINTER EGG YIELD.

Can Be Obtained by Proper Handling of Poultry During Fall.

The demand for strictly fresh eggs during the late fall and winter months far exceeds the supply, and prices rule very high during that period. The breed of hens and the system of managing them that will produce a good egg yield at this time of the year are being much sought after. This can be accomplished by starting in the fall with a good laying strain of fowls and managing them in a systematic way, giving them summer conditions in feeding throughout the winter. Selecting the layers for winter, it is a well known fact that the laying qualities of any breed of fowls can be much improved by breeding from the best layers. In selecting your flocks for winter laying get a good breed to lay strains of whichever breed you choose. Select the early hatched pullets and year old hens that molt early, so their new feathers will get ripened up by November, when they will be ready for business during the winter. This is the foundation of your winter egg production.

Hardy Stock For Breeders. Hardy parents beget hardy offspring. If we neglect in this particular which succeeding generations will be more delicate. No fowl should be used in the breeding pen that has had a case of serious illness.

No matter how sure we may feel that full health has been restored, there is still some taint of disease remaining in the fowl which will be inherited by the young. Inbreeding has caused more weakened constitutions than anything else we know of.

Kill the Weeds. Kill the weeds in the corn and potato. Weeds take up moisture the crops need and prevent the circulation of air, thus encouraging the spread of plant diseases. They shade the ground and keep the soil from absorbing heat—an important factor in corn growth.

Life and Death. Hope, with narrow forehead; Love, with narrow eyes; Youth, that looks before her; Age, that looks behind her; Joy, with brow like summer's; Care, with watery eyes; Misery, with sad and sunken eyes; At life's end, William Watson.

A WOMAN'S BUSY MINUTE.

Only a Glimpse of Another Woman, but That Was Enough.

"Will you please tell us how the lady was dressed?" said the attorney for the defense to a woman who was testifying in a police court proceeding.

"Well, of course I didn't see her for longer than a minute as she got up and walked out of the street car we were both riding in, but she had on a wide gray fur hat turned up at one side and fastened with a rhinestone buckle, and she had a long white feather and a gray bird's wing on the hat and a narrow band of gold galloon around it and two large scarlet red velvet roses, and she had the hat fastened on with three haps, one of them with a red glass stone set around with California brilliants, and another was in the shape of a four leaved clover, and the third was a big gilt ball, and the hat dropped away over on the right side, and she had a black veil with white dots on it, and it was fastened with a gold arrow run through a rhinestone buckle at the back of the hat. Then she had on a tailored suit of mauve cloth, with the jacket and front width of the dress all braided in silk braid the same shade of the dress, and the other widths of the dress had three bias folds laid on one right above the other and the six buttons covered with goods like the dress, and the jacket had a bias fold all around it and fourteen buttons down the front and three on the pockets, and it had a wide rolling collar lined with satin a shade or two lighter than the dress, and there was a narrow silk cord of white silk edging the collar and coming all down the front of the jacket, which was a little more than half fitting, and it sagged just a trifle on the left side and—"

"You say that you saw the lady but a moment?"

"Yes, just for a moment as she was leaving the car, but I noticed that she had on a gray squirrel skin mink and tipper and—"

"That will do, madam. Next witness please come forward."—Puck.

Working the Boy. Jerome S. McWade, the Deluth connoisseur, said of the management of children in a recent Sunday school address:

"Diplomacy succeeds best with the little ones. A lad of nine came, all pulling and rosy, in out of the cold the other night."

"I'm tired. I've saved enough wood for this evening, ain't I? I'm awful tired."

"Tired?" cried the father, looking up from his paper with an air of surprise and disappointment. "Why, I bet your mother a quarter you'd have the whole pile done before supper."

"Did you?" asked the boy, taking up his hat and mittens again. "Well, you'll win your money if the saw holds out. Nobody ever bet on me and lost."

"And he rushed back to his hard task again, his eyes flaming with enthusiasm."—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

As He Ground. Tennyson had just begun to write "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

Half a league, half a league, Half a league onward— Then he stopped.

"Sounds a good deal like 'Off agin', on agin', gone agin', Flanagan!" he said, knitting his brows.

But he went ahead with it, and the jungle made a decided hit.—Chicago Tribune.

The Reformer Speaks. Hank Stubbs—I never could see any sense in that expression "Six of one and half a dozen of the other."

Big Miller—How would you have it? Hank Stubbs—Why, "Six of each," of course.—Boston Herald.

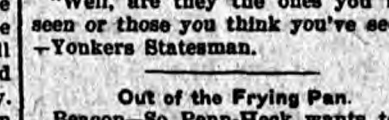

An Impertinent Question. She—What are you to lecture about, professor? He—I'm going to talk about snakes.

"Well, are they the ones you have seen or those you think you've seen?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Out of the Frying Pan. Beacon—So Penn-Beck wants to go to congress, does he?

Hill—Said he'd be willing to go most anywhere to get away from home awhile.—Boston Herald.

Her Bright Smile.

He—She was very happy when I last saw her.

Esmeralda—Ah, you were leaving.

The Rest Acknowledged. "My life," sighed the insurance agent, "is full of wormwood and gall."

"Is that so?" asked the victim. "Funny I overlooked the wormwood!"—Cleveland Leader.

An Appeal to Reason. "You seem to have got your boys interested in mythology lately."

"Yes, I explained to them that Hercules held a championship."—Washington Herald.

NEW MINISTERIAL FIELDS

For Many, While Some Will Continue Their Present Pastorate Labors. Doings in Wilmington Conference.

The forty-third annual session of the Wilmington Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church came to a close at Asbury Church, Wilmington, Monday, to meet next year in St. Paul's new $80,000 church at Wilmington. Dr. T. E. Martindale, of Salisbury, Md., was in the chair in the absence of Bishop Neely who was having a closing conference with his cabinet. The fund of $1,800 adopted at the morning session for the repairs to the Conference Academy, at Dover, was raised on a motion to $3,000. Rev. H. G. Budd, son of the late Squire H. G. Budd, a former Smyrna boy, has been elected principal of the Academy to succeed Principal Cross. Rev. Budd caused a spirited discussion by announcing that he proposed issuing a Conference newspaper to advertise the academy. As the history of the Peninsula Methodist recently discontinued was a failure, opposition arose to Mr. Budd's plan and finally ended by the withdrawal of the newspaper project and the adoption of The Baltimore Methodist as the official organ of Wilmington Conference. The conference inaugurated a plan to raise an endowment fund of $100,000 for the maintenance of historic Barrett's Chapel.

Conference Sticks to Boarding System

At the Saturday morning session there was a discussion over the question of entertaining members of Conference. The plan suggested by the district superintendents by which the churches pay the board of the ministers during the Conference session was adopted after an amendment that it be adopted for this year. The present Entertainment Committee was continued to report at the next session. Harry B. Stewart, Daniel Wilson, Ernest A. Gillespie, Silas H.

DOINGS AT COURT.

Continued From Last Week. Cases Disposed Of, Etc.

Friday the case of William C. Brewington, builder, Atlas Insurance Company vs. R. Frank Williams and Mrs. Ella C. Williams was taken up and continued on Friday when it was carried over until Monday. This case involves a monetary consideration of about $3,000. Brewington erected two houses in Camden to coast about the sun named above. When completed and tendered to Williams he refused to accept them because he claimed they were not built according to contract. Brewington then insured the buildings for $3,000 pending a settlement with Williams and in the meantime fire destroyed the houses. The insurance companies settled with the contractor and took an assignment of his claim bringing suit against Williams for the contract price of the buildings. This case occupied all of Monday and Tuesday going to the jury in the afternoon. After being out about four hours the jury brought in a verdict for Mr. Williams the defendant.

Geo. W. Lilly represented the Insurance Companies and L. Atwood Bennett and Miles & Stanford the defendants.

Grand Jury Reports.

The Grand Jury completed its deliberations on Saturday afternoon finding 30 true bills. James M. Jones, Andrew B. Armstrong and George W. Graham visited the Alma House and reported as follows: "We found on the premises 1 pair of mules, 1 horse, 6 head of cattle, 6 hogs, all in fine condition. We found some of the outbuildings very much in need of repair. We recommended a suitable building for farming machinery. We found in the home 6 inmates, 3 white males, one colored male and 2 colored females all well kept and cared for. Their quarters were clean and well kept. The home is also badly in need of repairs and we would recommend the erection of a new building."

Andrew B. Armstrong, J. Joseph Hearn, H. H. Ennis, G. W. Graham and James W. Parker composed a committee which inspected the county jail. Their report reads: "We find that the jail needs a few repairs to the lower floor, otherwise it is in good condition. We found 7 inmates, 2 white and 5 colored."

Cases Disposed Of.

No. 1. Criminal Presentments; State vs. Jno. Walker, indicted for carrying concealed weapons. Plead guilty, sentenced two years in House of Correction.
No. 38. Trials. Mary A. Taylor vs. Jacob E. Taylor, where wife sued husband for money claimed to have been loaned. Jury trial, verdict for plaintiff for $187.50.
No. 4. Criminal Presentments; State vs. Chas. O. Hudson, indicted for larceny. Plead guilty.
No. 2. Criminal Presentments; State vs. Ernest Dixon. Jury trial, charged with assault and battery with attempt to kill. Acquitted.
No. 3. Criminal Presentments; State vs. Wm. Pitts. Indicted for larceny. Jury trial. Acquitted.
No. 8. Trials; Peter S. Richardson vs. Robert Bishop. Discontinued.
No. 1. Trials; Emma J. Johnson vs. Emory W. and Kate B. Shockley, before court. Verdict for plaintiff as against Emory Shockley for the sum of $100.
No. 44. Trials; Samuel P. Woodcock trading as S. P. Woodcock & Co. vs. Joseph A. Neville. Tried before Court.
The Jones Will Case from Sharptown was removed to Worcester County.
The Pettis Jury was discharged Thursday night.

Mr. Elihu Hastings.

Mr. Elihu Hastings died early Friday morning after a short illness of pneumonia. He was born in Delaware in March 1839 and was seventy-two years old at the time of his death. At the age of fifty he sold his farm in Delaware and bought a part of the Wallace land, about five miles from Salisbury, where he resided at the time of his death. He is survived by one son, Quincy E. Hastings, and many warm friends to mourn their loss.

Funeral services were held at his late home Sunday afternoon at two o'clock, conducted by Elder A. B. Francis. Interment was in Hastings Cemetery.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Handy Outler, W. W. Hearn, O. C. Tomlinson, J. J. Culver, Levin Hastings and D. S. Culver.

WONDERFUL ROAD PROGress Under Way All Over The Union. Some Of The Good Results.

Those doubting Thomases who could not make themselves believe that the movement for good roads, which is noticeable throughout this country, would reap results, are now confronted with the alternative of admitting they were poor guessers, or still holding out against a fact that is apparent to anyone endowed with reason, for the movement which first started at a snail's pace, is spreading with the speed of an adobe forest fire.

As an indication of the growth of the reform, friends of the movement point in high relief to the fact that 31 states have taken the question seriously enough to put up large sums for improved highways and the majority of the rest are considering the proposition. Along with the work in that direction that is being done in Maryland and which promises to better the state agriculturally and commercially to an extent which will total into the millions each year, Nebraska, Iowa, Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, and Washington are making rapid strides.

New York has issued $50,000,000 bonds for a system of State highways and a movement is now on for another issue of $40,000,000. Governor Tamm, of Pennsylvania, in a recent speech advocated bonding that state for $50,000,000, and a shout of approval went up from those who use the roads or who know what good roads mean for a state and its people. Members of the Grand Army of the Republic, with true patriotic spirit, caught the idea, and worked hard for the passing of a bill which would result in the construction of a Lincoln Memorial Highway from Washington to Gettysburg. California is spending $18,000,000 on good roads and many other western states are doing as well or better.

The famous old Apollon Way, which was built in the days of Rome's grandeur, promises to be eclipsed by thousands of highways scattered throughout the United States.

"What advantages would good roads be to a farmer? queries many an agriculturist, who fears that better roads would mean financial burden to him. Experts who have studied the question, in answer, deluge the doubting questioners with arguments that seldom fail to result in conversions. They explain that good roads through the country mean the elimination of the possibility of false conditions arising which result in financial panics. After all, the wealth of the country is in the soil. Good roads make possible the close linking of the sources of wealth to the markets where the wealth is converted into cash or its equivalent.

It is feared by the United States Government that the country loses $500,000,000 annually because of its poor roads and highways. Realizing this fact, the American Association for Highway Improvement is conducting a nation-wide campaign in the hope of building up a sentiment which will better present conditions and the Maryland Good Road Federation, working with and along the same lines as the national organization, is meeting with unprecedented success. The Maryland farmers are coming to realize that good roads would make it possible for teams to haul more than double present loads with less work for horses; that he could reach markets regardless of weather at times when he could sell his goods at the best prices. He is beginning to see what good roads mean to him. Those who have taken the trouble to investigate the class of men who are spending their time and money to procure for Maryland roads that will be a credit and a source of profit to the State, have learned that these men are booming the "better roads for Maryland" idea, from purely selfish motives. One class of course, is boasting because they know it will make the State better off financially with the result that the citizens will be winners thereby. Another class is boasting because it wants to see the death of horse-killing mud, automobile stalling ruts and profanity producing paddles of water. Still another class is boasting because it wants to see the solution of the city and country problem, well knowing that, with better roads and attendant better access through the country—which would aid the country in its school, religious and social work. The terrifying exodus from the fields to the factories would cease and thus giving both farmer and city chap a better chance to earn good living honestly than either today.

MEXICAN CRISIS IS NOW

In Diaz's Hands. Sharp Division Between Him And Minister Limantour Frankly Admitted.

The Mexican revolutionary crisis is now in the hands of the Government and people of Mexico. The Diaz government is going to have a free hand to save itself. Its chance of doing so appears distinctly less than heretofore.

There is now frank admission of sharp division between Diaz and his great and powerful Minister of Finance, Limantour.

Japan has promised the United States to withdraw from Mexico, to cease complicating the situation there, to discontinue any intrigue it may have undertaken with the Mexican Government and strictly to keep its hands off. This being assured the United States is to relax the right of its military espionage along the border, and to give the warring elements in Mexico time and opportunity to settle their own troubles.

Limantour's Strong Hand.

A fortnight ago it was pointed out that the aims and purposes of Jose Yves Limantour, Minister of Finance, must necessarily bring him into consideration as the alternative if Diaz is to fail and the conservative interests are to keep control in Mexico. This view is completely borne out by a remarkable statement which Limantour has issued at Mexico. If Limantour did not have a backing abroad and a strength at home which combine to place him beyond the power of reprisals of Diaz he would not dare issue such a pronouncement as he has now given the public.

In this statement Limantour said in effect:

That while he has been in Europe and the United States, conferring with the great financial interests involved in Mexico the situation has become very much worse than before; that today it is worse than he had dreamed of finding it on his return; that the Diaz Government has not formulated plans for coping with conditions, while considering reforms which it hopes will appeal to the people, is must go ahead with vicious military measures to suppress disorder.

Will Encourage Insurrections.

But more significant than these confessions is the statement attributed to Mr. Limantour, that he is himself to make a thorough investigation in the effort to learn just how widespread and deep seated is the disaffection what measures are needed to meet it, and what reforms will placate it.

Mr. Limantour's entire statement bears on its face the evidence that it is a message to his friends abroad—to the financiers of London, Paris and New York to whom he has recently given assurances. But it is much more than this. It is certain to be highly encouraging to the insurrection and to be construed by them as evidence that the Diaz administration is going to pieces.

All this can be regarded as nothing less than the evidence that Limantour is determined to reform the Diaz regime or to smash it. If, after issuing this statement, he can still stay in the Cabinet it will be taken as proof that he has secured dominance, that Diaz is in his hand and that Limantour is to be the real power behind the throne, and to direct efforts to restore peace through sweeping reforms and tremendous concessions to the Mexicans.

He says he has thus far been unsuccessful, but his concession of the weakness of the Government, of his own sharp disagreement with the policy it has been pursuing, and of these efforts to establish relations with Madero can be subject to only one interpretation; That Limantour thinks himself strong enough to throw overboard the old Diaz policy to deal directly with the insurrection leaders and to give them, if they will unite with them, the reforms they want.—By Jackson O. Welliver, in Thursday's Baltimore Sun.

The State Planning Bridge Across The Nanticoke.

Application has been made to Secretary of War for permission on behalf of the Maryland State Roads Commission to construct a bridge across Nanticoke river at Sharptown, public hearing for consideration of this question and plans will be held before Col. John L. Casey, Corps of Engineers U. S. A., on April 11 in the Quantico house.

As all papers will be laid before the Secretary of War for his decision, statements should be presented in writing, but oral statements will also be considered.

92nd Anniversary.

Mr. Joe Leonard, who resides near Salisbury on the road leading to Parsburg celebrated his 92nd birthday on Tuesday of this week. Mr. Leonard is enjoying remarkable health for his age. He has resided on his present farm for a period of 45 years.

A Helpless Invalid

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

A woman who is sick and suffering, and won't at least try a medicine which has the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is, it would almost seem, to blame for her own wretchedness. Read what this woman says:

Richmond, Mo. — "When my second daughter was eighteen months old I was pronounced a helpless invalid by specialists. I had a consultation of doctors and they said I had a severe case of ulceration. I was in bed for ten weeks, had sinking spells, and was pronounced to be in a dangerous condition. My father insisted that we try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and brought me six bottles. I soon began to improve, and before it had all been taken I was as well and strong as ever—my friends hardly recognized me so great was the change." — Mrs. Woodson Branstetter, Richmond, Mo.

There are literally hundreds of thousands of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read what another woman says:—

Jonesboro, Texas. — "I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for myself and daughter, and consider it unequalled for all female diseases. I would not be without it for anything. I wish every mother in America could be persuaded to use it as there would be less suffering among our sex then. I am always glad to speak a word of praise for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and you are at liberty to use this testimonial." — Mrs. James T. Lawrence, Jonesboro, Texas.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, it is not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering from the same trouble?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for her advice—it is free and always helpful.

Keene and Tighman Smith were admitted to elders' orders, having passed the necessary examination, and John W. Sutton, Leonard White, James T. Price and Joseph A. Buckson who were reported as having passed examinations in the studies of the fourth year, were advanced. At his own request, Charles E. Wood was changed from supernumerary to supernumerated relation. A supernumerated minister, Rev. James Egan, caused laughter by suggesting that the name "Williamington" be changed to "Delmarvia" Conference in order to get away from connection with that run place.

ORIGIN OF Pinkham's Blood Purifier

Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., succeeded in producing, from the roots and herbs of the fields, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the most successful medicine for women's ailments the world has ever known. After she had put this on the market, women began to write her about their health, because they felt a natural delicacy about consulting any man physician regarding these ailments for which the Vegetable Compound is intended.

She soon found that her correspondents often had complications caused by impure, impoverished blood, and she recognized the necessity of having a reliable blood purifier which she could recommend with confidence.

The Best Spring Medicine

Then, as now, there were many blood purifiers and spring medicines on the market, and after looking into them, she found nothing so good as the old home medicine made from roots and herbs, which she had been accustomed to use in her own family, so she had this made up on a large scale, and furnished it to the stores. It has been very little advertised, but has attained a large sale solely on its merits, and is really a wonderful blood purifier and spring medicine.

It is a good, old-fashioned household remedy made from roots and herbs, which has been used from generation to generation for purifying the blood, removing humors, and eruptions, and for that all "played out" feeling.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

Later in the day there were ambling gallops along the country roads, and the father explained how the transformation from cattle raising to agriculture and fruit growing had come about; how the great irrigation dam in Quaternary canyon had put a thousand square miles of the fertile mesa under cultivation; how with the pouring of the new population had come new blood, new methods, good roads, the telephone, the rural mail route and other civilizing agencies.

"I've lost my birthright," he said. "We're the megalosaurus lizards whose bones we used to find sticking in the gully banks on Table Mesa. By the way, that reminds me. Are there any of these giant fossils left? I was telling Professor Anners about them the other day, and he was immensely interested."

"We're all fossils, we older folks of the cattle raising times," laughed the man whom Richard Gantry had called the "super governor." "But there are some of the bones left too, I guess, and if the professor is a friend of yours we'll get him a state permit to dig all he wants to."

"Yes, Professor Anners is a friend of mine," was the younger man's half absent admission, "as much of a friend as his daughter would ever allow him to be."

The qualifying clause was not thrown away by the senator. "What has the daughter got against you, son?" he asked mildly.

"Nothing very serious," laughed Patricia's lover. "But I think she is jealous of any one who tries to share her father with her. Next to her career."

"That's Boston, isn't it?" interrupted the ex-cattle king. Then he added, "I'm right glad it hasn't come in your way to the yourself up to one of those 'queers.' Evan, my boy."

"The young man felt better after he had told his father his love story. It was highly necessary that he should tell some one, and whom better?"

David Blount listened with the far-away look in his eyes that the son had more than once marked as the greatest of the changes chargeable to the aging years.

"Think a heap of her, do you, son?" he said when the ambling saddle animals had covered another half mile of the homeward journey.

"So much that it went near to spoiling me when she finally made me realize that I couldn't hold my own against the 'career,' he made an answer. Then he added: "I want work, father. That is what I am out here for; the hardest kind of work and plenty of it; something that I can put my heart into. Can you find it for me?"

There was the wisdom of the centuries in the gentle smile provoked by this unassuming lover's appeal.

"I wouldn't take it too hard if I were you, son," said the wise man. "And as for the work, I guess we can satisfy you if your appetite isn't too big. How would a state office do?"

"Politics?" queried Blount, bringing his horse down to the walk for which his father had set the example. "I've thought a good bit about that, though I haven't had any special training that way. The schools of today are turning out business lawyers—men who know the law and are trained particularly in its application to the great business undertakings. That used to be my ambition—to be a business adviser and perhaps after while to climb to the top of the ladder and be somebody's corporation counsel."

"But now you have changed?"

"I don't know that I have. But there are other fields that are also attractive. No man can study the politics of America today without seeing the need for good men—men who will administer the affairs of the state or the nation without fear or favor; men who will live to the line under any and all conditions."

A quaint smile was playing under the drooping mustache of the Hon. Senator Sagebrush.

"I reckon we do need a few men like that. Evan—'em might had. Think you could fill the bill if you had a right good chance?"

The potential power of political chips smiled.

"I'm not likely to get the chance very soon," he returned. "Just at present I am still a legal resident of the good old commonwealth of Massachusetts, and a member of its bar, eligible to office there and nowhere else."

"You'd be a citizen of this state by the time you could get elected to an office in it," suggested the senator. "I know—the required term of residence here is ridiculously short. But you forget that I am an unknown in the sagebrush hills as you are well known. I couldn't get a nomination for the office of poundkeeper."

David Blount was chuckling softly. "Sounds right funny to hear you talk that way now," he commented. "Mighty near everybody will tell you that the slate hangs up behind the door at Wartrace, and I don't know but some people would say that old Sagebrush Dave himself does most of the writing on it. Anyhow, there's one place on it that is still needing a name, and I guess yours would fit it as well as any body's."

The young man, who was so lately out of the well considering east.

"Heavens!" he ejaculated. "You're not considering me as a possibility on the state ticket before I've been twenty-four hours on the ground, are you?"

"No, not exactly as a possibility, son. We'll call it a sure thing if you want to. In this way: We're needing a political housecleaning pretty bad this year. We have good enough laws, I guess, but they're winked at any day in the week when somebody comes along with a barrel. The fight is up between the people of this state and the corporations. It was up two years ago, and the people got the laws all right, but forgot to elect men who would carry them out. It is time I think the voters have got their knives sharpened. We've been a little slow catching step, but the marching orders have gone out. We're going to clean house this fall."

"Not if the slate hangs behind your door or any man's door, father," was the theorist's grave reminder. "Reform doesn't come in by that road."

"Hold on, son; steady go easy's the word. Reform comes in by any old trail it can find mostly and thanks its lucky stars if it doesn't run up against any bridges gone or any mudholes too deep to ford. We've got a good man for governor—got any too broad, maybe, but good—church good; he's a minister of the gospel and the president of a church university. No man has ever said he'd take a bribe, but he isn't heavy enough to sit on the lid and hold it down. Alced Gordon, the man who is going to succeed him next fall, is all the things that the present governor isn't, so that is fixed."

"How fixed?" queried the young man, who, though he was not from Missouri, was beginning to fear that he would constantly have to be "shown."

"In the same way that everything has to be fixed, if we're going to get results," was the calm reply. "After the governor the man upon whom the most depends is the attorney general. The present incumbent, Dortscher, is one of the candidates, but we've crossed his name off. The next man we considered was Jim Rankin. In some ways he's fit; he's a hard fighter, and the man doesn't live who can bluff him. But he's poor, and he wants to be rich, and I guess that lets him out."

All this was directly subversive of Evan Blount's ideas of the conduct of affairs political in a free country, but he was willing to hear more. "Well?" he said.

"What we want this time is one of your 'new to the line' men, son. Reckon you'd like to try it?"

The young man who was less than a week away from the atmosphere of the law school and its theories was fairly aghast. That his father should be coolly proposing him for a high office in the state to which he was as new as the newest emigrant seemed hardly incredible. But when the incredulity began to subside the despotism of a machine which could propose and carry out such unheard of things loomed malignant.

"I'm afraid we are a good many miles apart, father," he said, unconsciously using one of his father's favorite speech forms, when the proposal had been given time to sink in. "America is supposed to be a free country with a representative government. Do you mean to say that you and a few of your friends can set aside the will of the people so far that you can nominate and elect anybody you please to any office in the state?"

The farseeing eyes were twinkling again. "Oh, I don't know about that being so far apart," was the deprecating protest. "You're just a little bit long on theory, that's all, son. When it comes down to the real thing somebody has to head the stampede and turn it, and if we don't do it the other bunch will."

"What other bunch?"

"In this case it's the corporations—the timber people, the traction companies and, most of all, the railroads. Gantry seems to think that the railroads are persecuted, or his railroad at least."

The senator pulled his horse down to a still slower walk. "Where did you see Dick Gantry?" he demanded. Evan told of the meeting on the veranda of the club, adding the further fact of the college friendship.

"Just happened so, am I?" queried the senator, "that getting together last Saturday night?"

"Why, yes; I suppose so. Dick knew I was in Boston, and he said he had thought to look me up."

"I reckon he did," was the quiet comment; "yes, I reckon he did. And he filled you up chock full of Harvard McVicker's notions, of course. I guess that's about what he was told to do. But we won't fall apart on that, son. Tomorrow we'll go down to the city, and you can look the ground over for yourself. I want you to draw your own conclusions and then come and tell me what you'd like to do. Shall we leave it that way?"

Blount acquiesced, quite without prejudice to a man conviction that his opinion when formed was going to be based on the merits of the case, upon a fair and judicial summing up of the pros and cons.

He felt that it would be striking at the very root of the tree of good government to allow himself to be the candidate of the machine. But, on the other hand, he saw instantly what a power a fearless public prosecutor could be in a misguided commonwealth where the lack was not of good laws, but of men strong enough and courageous enough to administer them.

He would see. If the good to be accomplished was great enough to overbalance the evil—it was a temptation to compromise, a sharp temptation, and he found himself longing for Patricia, for her clear slighted comment, which, he felt sure, would go straight to the heart of the tangle.

It was that thought of Patricia and his need for her that made him distrust and absconded at the Wartrace Hall dinner table that evening, and the father, looking on, suspected that Evan's insincerity was an expression of his prejudice against the woman who had taken his mother's place, and when the son, pleading weariness, retreated early to his room the suspicion was confirmed.

"You'll have to be patient with the boy, little woman," said the master of Wartrace when Evan had disappeared. "I shouldn't wonder if Boston had put some right conclusions into his head. The little lady looked up from her embroidery frame with a whimsical smile wreathing itself at the corners of the sensitive mouth. "He is a dear boy," she said, "and he is trying awfully hard to hate me. But I shan't let him, David."

FUTURE NOMINATIONS.

The Democrats of this county who believe that it is better to make our nominations hereafter under the Crawford County plan for Direct nomination, should not lose sight of the fact that a vote on this question must be taken at the coming Primary Election. Wicomico was one of the counties excepted from the provisions of the general primary law, it being provided that at the first general primary election held after the passage of the act a vote must be taken to determine whether or not our future nominations are to be made by the direct plan or whether they are again to be made by the discredited convention system.

As we understand the law a majority vote by either party will bring this county under the provisions of the general state primary law.

It is time that some attention be given this matter, otherwise the plan may fall through by ignorance or neglect.

WILSON SCORES AGAIN.

Gov. Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey, who early in the legislative session succeeded in persuading the legislative members of his party that the only right and proper course for them to follow in the election of a United States Senator was to accept the anti-election pledge of their party at its face value and elect as he held they were in honor bound to elect—Mr. Wilson, has scored again in the passage in the House of Delegates, of the General Election Bill.

According to the statement of those who have made a study of this bill, it is a measure that really carries out what it is intended to do—that it is places fairly and squarely the power of governing the state in the hands of the people itself, not in regard to the making of the nominations by the people themselves directly, but it places the management of the various parties in the hands of the voters who are to elect all committees and officers.

It is so often the case after a party has won an election that it at once commences to dodge and evade the promises made to the people during the campaign, that it is really refreshing and encouraging to come across a man who insists that promises made to the people are made to be fulfilled and that furthermore they mean exactly the same thing after an election that they were made to mean before.

All are too familiar with the way parties and politicians attempt to fool the people by passing a bill heralded all over the land as a fulfillment of their pre-election pledge, but which in fact has had all of its "teeth," quietly and scientifically pulled, and in many a case is so craftily written that it will hinder or retard that which it is supposed to help and assist.

The most notable of recent failures of parties to carry out their promises is the case of the Republican party in regard to its tariff reform pledge, which instead of fulfilling has made worse than it was before. The Democratic party in this State cannot be wholly excused on this score, as it is certainly subject to criticism in the way it has carried out its promise of giving to the people the right and power to make their own nominations. Although it made the promise in a direct and unqualified platform pledge the promise has never yet been fully carried out.

The law today, after two trials, is so filled with inconsistencies and the vote is so little safeguarded that the supporters of Direct primaries would refuse to recognize it at all if it were not for the fact that had and ineffective as it is, it is yet better than making the nomination by the old convention controlled system. As the law stands today, it is well recognized that a strong and well entrenched organization with its army of workers has by far the better chance of winning a primary fight.

The fear of disastrous defeat at the polls however will make an organization chary of its support and good men will stand a better chance of organization support under the Direct plan than under the convention.

"The scholar in politics" as Woodrow Wilson has been designated, is fast proving that he is not the mere theorist, dreamer and idealist that many of his enemies contemptuously styled him, when he first ran abroad at their plans. He is fast showing that he is practical as well as theoretician, that he goes through as well as dreams about them, that his high ideals are a help instead of a hindrance to a work. If not the standard bearer of his party in the next Presidential campaign, his party may, in the hands of one of the leading statesmen, do worse.

Sudden Death Of Mr. Thos. C. Morris.

Friends and relatives were shocked to learn of the sudden death of Mr. Thomas C. Morris on Friday evening about seven o'clock at his home in this city. He had been failing in health for several months, yet he seemed better apparently and had returned to his post of duty at the L. W. Gunby Co., hardware store. On Wednesday he complained of feeling worse and remained at home the two days following and after eating a light supper Friday evening he returned to his arm chair when death overtook him and his life went out without a struggle. Mr. Morris is the last member of a well known family of nineteen of Nutters District. He was a son of the late Jas. and Sally Morris and was born December 26, 1858, being 73 years of age, and was reared on a farm near Fruitland.

For several years Mr. Morris lived on a farm near Salisbury. After leaving the farm he came to Salisbury and formed a partnership with Mr. Benjamin H. Parker, under the name of Parker and Morris, and for several years they conducted a grocery business on South Division Street. His first wife was Miss Lizzie Fooks and by this union two sons survive, H. Louis Morris of Chester, Pa., and Preston Morris of this city. His second wife was Miss Eliza C. Williams, daughter of the late Luther Williams, there being five children by this union, Mrs. Wm. J. Thomas, of Chester, Pa.; L. Merrill; Usher W., Robert E. and Miss Alice C. Morris, all of this city. Deceased was an elder of the Wicomico Presbyterian Church, having served for nearly half a century filling the place of his father in his declining years.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at three o'clock at the Presbyterian Church and interment made in the churchyard. His obedient and gentle disposition had won for him a host of friends who feel his loss with deep regret and extend their sympathy to the bereaved family.

New York's Great Pennsylvania Station.

One of the greatest works of modern times was the construction of the concrete lined steel tubes under the Hudson and East Rivers, the tunneling of Manhattan Island, and the erection of the magnificent Pennsylvania Station at Seventh Avenue and Thirty second Street, New York, bringing the through trains of the Pennsylvania Railroad into the heart of New York City.

An illustrated booklet describing this great work and telling what it means to the New York passenger has been issued by the Pennsylvania Railroad and will be sent postpaid to any address by George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa., on receipt of a two cent stamp. Send for it.

—Cadillac is Winner in Two Gruelling Contests.

Competing against cars of their own and greater power, Cadillac cars have recently won honor for themselves in a reliability run and in a road race.

Acting as pacemaker throughout, and as pilot car more than half the time a Cadillac driven by George DeWitt won the only perfect score in the recent Houston, Texas, five day reliability run. The route covered 800 miles, and lay from Houston to Brenham, Austin, San Antonio, Beville, Corpus Christi, Corpus, Victoria and back to Houston. Many of the cars came to grief in the sands of the Texas roads. The Cadillac maintained a schedule of 30 miles an hour. This run, by the way, was the first reliability contest held in Texas under the sanction and rules of the American Automobile Association. The winning Cadillac was a 1911 touring car, carried the referee and one other passenger in addition to the driver, and complete touring equipment.

Another Cadillac ran a remarkable race in the Bakersfield-Fresno and return road race in California. The distance around the circuit was approximately 250 miles which the Cadillac completed in seven hours, ten minutes and one and one half seconds; or at an average speed of 32 miles per hour. The car met with one accident, when it went into a shallow ditch. It was back on the road again in four minutes, and completed the race more than an hour before the second car reached the finish line.

Short Crop of Cow Peas Prices Are Going Up!

The enormous demand for Cow Peas last year carried the price very high, and as the crop is very short and the acreage is rapidly extending, there are many indications which point to much higher prices as the sowing season approaches.

Whip-poor-will Cow Peas. The Whip-poor-wills are generally preferred in the Central and Southern States. They are bush form, early maturing and especially desirable for Peas.

New Era Cow Peas. New Eras are a little earlier and make more vines than the Whip-poor-wills.

Wonderfuls, Clays and Mixed Cow Peas. Mixed Cow Peas are more productive. For Hay, the Wonderfuls or the Clays are better. Wonderfuls are more productive than Clays. They are bush form, early maturing and especially desirable for Peas.

Black Cow Peas. Black Cow Peas are a little earlier in maturing than Clays; they make a good growth of vines, are exceptionally good for medium or poor land, and will stand almost any amount of wet weather without injury. We can also supply Shiny Peas, Red Bippers, Blackeye Peas and Soja Beans.

REMEMBER—Boligiano's Cow Peas are unquestionably the best. If your Local Merchant will not supply Boligiano's Cow Peas, write us direct and we will tell you where you can get them.

FREE—Send us 5 cents in stamps to pay postage and mention this paper, and we will send you free a package of "My Maryland" Tomato Seed, also our 1911 Catalogue of Seeds and our 1911 Poultry Supply Catalogue.

TWO DISTINCT SALVATIONS ALL IN ONE OR THE OTHER

Every Human Being is to Have a Full, Fair, Intelligent Opportunity For Eternal Life.

A SECOND CHANCE FOR FATHER ADAM ONLY

London, March 19.—Pastor Russell preached today at the London Tabernacle to an overflowing house. His text was taken from Hebrews II, 3: "So great salvation, which began to be spoken by our Lord and was confirmed unto us, those who heard Him." The speaker said:—
In the past many of us misunderstood these words—"So great salvation"—and have thought them to apply merely to an "elect" few of the saints of our great Redeemer. Surely it should not be thought strange if a closer examination of God's Word would demonstrate to us that as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are His ways and plans higher than ours (Isaiah IV, 9). It should not surprise us to find that our forefathers were generally in considerable darkness in respect to "the length and breadth and height and depth of the love of God, which passeth all understanding" (Ephesians III, 18, 19). It should not surprise us to find that our Saviour will yet see the fruitage of the travail of His soul and be satisfied (Isaiah LIII, 11), and that this satisfaction will result from the salvation of more than the "little flock," who walk in His steps and who, like Him, "present their bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable to God," in the service of Truth and righteousness.

There are several ways of treating this thought, that more than an "elect" few are eventually to reach eternal life through the Redeemer of mankind. One way, which many adopt, is to claim that our Lord and the Apostles did not really mean to say that all high standard of sainthood as their words imply, and then to conclude that the unsalvaged will gain eternal life as well as the saintly—all except the degenerately wicked. This view of matters, which is the common one, is undoubtedly prompted by sympathy for friends, relatives, neighbors and the heathen; but it is wholly contrary to God's Word.

Another view still held by some is that everybody but the saintly will suffer eternal misery and hopelessly. The third theory which I desire to present here is the one I believe to be in accord with every text of Scripture, and in accord with Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power Divine, and in accord with sanctified common sense. I have time for only an outline of this Plan, which is the most comprehensive, as follows:

The Saintly New Creation.
Salvation in no sense began before the Redeemer's birth, forty-one hundred and twenty-eight years after the fall of our first parents. In all that long period nobody was saved. The Apostle declares in our text that salvation began to be preached by Jesus. Again we read that Jesus brought life and immortality to light through His Gospel (I Timothy I, 10). So, then, life and immortality and the Gospel Message began to be preached by our Lord and was not preached before His day. Indeed we can see that if there is "none other Name given under heaven or amongst men whereby we must be saved," than the name of Jesus, then it could not have been preached; nothing could be preached previously except the Divine declaration that God purposed in due time to redeem mankind from sin and death through a Saviour and a Great One—One able to save unto the uttermost all that would come unto the Father through Him.

This reasoning is surely true to the facts. Search all through the Old Testament and there is found no promise of eternal life set forth except by the Law given to the one little nation of Israel. That Law declared that he that doeth these things shall live by his obedience thereto (Romans II, 13), and the Apostle assures us that Jews died because none of them kept the Law—because no imperfect human being could possibly meet the requirements of God's perfect Law. "By the deeds of the Law shall no flesh be justified in His sight" (Romans III, 20). The Apostle, further explaining the matter, says, "Wherefore, then, serveth the Law?" He replies to his question, "It was added because of transgression until the promised Seed should come" (Galatians III, 19).

The Promised Seed.
The Apostle's words direct our thoughts back to Eden, where God declared that the Seed of the woman would at some future time bruise the Serpent's head. But that Seed did not exist for over four thousand years after, and has not yet crushed the Serpent's head—destroyed sin and the works of Satan.

The Apostle's words again remind us of God's promise to Abraham, "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Genesis XXII, 18). Abraham was not thus blessed, nor were any others thus blessed; however faithful they were. All the blessing was to come through Abraham's Seed, and could not be dispensed before His coming. Hence, the Apostle, referring to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the faithful of past time, declared, "All these died in faith, not having received the promise" (Hebrews XI, 13)—the blessing—reconciliation to God and eternal life.

And when Jesus came He did not attempt to bless the world, but on the contrary, in His prayer, declared, "I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given Me" (John XVII, 9)—the saintly, the "very elect" (Matthew XXIV, 24). These He called, these He taught—"Israelites indeed." These He directed to give the same message to others, not for the conversion of the world, but for the setting, instruction and edification of "the Church, which is the Body of Christ." The message to those from first to last was that they were called to suffer with Him, that they might also reign with Him.

"The Church Which is the Body of Christ."
In the past many of us have overlooked the fact that the Church are, figuratively, "the Body of Christ"—to be hereafter, as the Apostle declares, "the Church which is His Body." And again, we are members in particular of the Body of Christ, which is the Church (I Corinthians XII, 27). In a word, then, the entire Christ includes the members of the Body with the glorious Head of the Body. And this glorious Christ, which will be completed by the close of this Gospel Age, will as a whole be the promised Seed of Abraham.

From this viewpoint we can see why God's long-promised blessing has not yet reached the world, but from this viewpoint we can see that He is merely selecting or electing the Church, the Seed of Abraham. The promise to Abraham is, "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed," and, as we have seen, the Seed of Abraham is "Jesus the Head and the Church His Body." In a word, our previous view of the Divine Plan was too narrow. We saw the election of the Church, but did not see God's gracious purposes for "all the families of the earth." The Church, as the Scriptures declare, is merely a "first-fruit" unto God of His creatures and is not, by any means, the entire harvest. Let us here remember St. Paul's explanation of this matter. He declares, "We, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of the promise" (Galatians IV, 28)—the heirs of the promise—through us all the families of the earth are to be blessed.

No Second Chance In This.
It might indeed be said in one sense of the word that since father Adam was on the tree in Eden with a choice of eternal life before him or a penalty of death, and that since he lost his chance of eternal life by disobedience, therefore any chance of eternal life coming to him or to any member of his race would, of necessity, be a second chance. This is undoubtedly true. From this standpoint every member of the human family must eventually have a second chance for eternal life, because it was for this very purpose that our Redeemer left the heavenly glory, was made flesh, dwelt amongst us and "died, the just for the unjust." Whoever enjoys this second chance must expect no more, because "Christ dieth no more." But, as we have already seen, nobody had a second chance for eternal life prior to the coming of our Redeemer into the world. "He brought life and immortality to light." He died, the just for the unjust, to make reconciliation for iniquity—and this message of so great salvation began to be spoken by our Lord.

The comparatively few who have heard the Gospel since Jesus' day—"Good tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people," these, the comparatively few, who have heard of "the only Name given under heaven or amongst men whereby we must be saved"—are the only ones who in any sense of the word have had their second chance. Indeed we might, Scripturally, limit the matter much further and say that the Gospel has been hidden from the majority of those who heard it; their mental eyes and ears being deaf and blind, they did not comprehend the message, and therefore could not reject it.

The "great calling" and "so great salvation," which so few have really heard and seen is referred to by our great Redeemer saying, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see, and your ears, for they hear." "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, neither can he know them; because they are spiritually discerned." But God hath revealed them unto us by His spirit" (I Corinthians II, 14). In other words, only the Spirit-begotten ones now, on earth, for the everlasting or death ever-lasting. And only the faithful forefathers will gain the glory, honor, immortality and joint-heirship with Him in His Kingdom. These are the "elect," the "very elect." These are such as make their calling and election sure by so running as to obtain this great prize of membership in the Body of Christ.

These elect ones experience a change of nature, and in the future, will be human beings, but partakers of the divine nature (II Peter I, 4). They will be induced into the perfection of the divine nature in the First Resurrection, the chief resurrection, in which they will be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, because flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God (I Corinthians XV, 50-52).

Human Salvation Is Restitution.
We all gazed at the thought that the heathen and everybody except saints would be assigned to a eternity of torture, yet we all recognized that heaven is not a place of development but a condition of perfection. We were perplexed, mystified. We did not follow our Bibles with sufficient care. Many of us twisted the Scriptures, wrestled them from their plain, obvious import, and always to our own injury. Some went in the direction of Universalism; others half-way, and still others abandoned the Holy Book. Now we see where we erred.

God has two salvations; one for the Church and a totally different one for the world. The salvation for the Church is to heavenly nature, spirit bodies, and joint-heirship with the Master in His Kingdom, which flesh and blood cannot inherit, as we have already seen. The other salvation, for mankind, is an earthly one called in the Scriptures, "Restitution." Man was not an angel originally, not a spirit being; but, as the Scriptures declare, "The first man was of the earth earthy."

It was that earthly man, perfect, in the image of his Creator, for whose happiness Eden was specially prepared. By obedience to God he might have continued to enjoy his Eden home everlasting. By disobedience he lost his fellowship with God, then his Eden home, and after nine hundred and thirty years of toiling with thorns and thistles in sweat of face, the death penalty upon him reached completion—he died. Adam's race, sharing his weakness by laws of heredity, have also shared death with him.

"World Through Him Might Be Saved."
The Scriptures tell us that God's real purpose in sending Jesus into the world was that the "world might through Him be saved"—not the salvation of the Church; that was an incidental feature. The Church is selected that as the Bride or Queen during the Messianic Kingdom she may be associated with her Lord, the King, as the Seed of Abraham in the blessing, the saving, of Adam and his family, or so many of them as shall be willing, from sin and death conditions. We remember the Master's words to the effect that "He came to seek and to save (recover) that which was lost."

We have just seen that it was a human life, human perfection and an earthly home that were lost. It is these, then, that Jesus proposes in due time to recover for Adam and his family. The Messianic reign of Jesus and his Body—the Anointed, the Christ, the Messiah—will be for the purpose of blessing Adam and all of his race with glorious opportunities of an earthly salvation. The uplifting, restoring influences of Messiah's Kingdom will affect not only Adam and his race, but also the earth itself. Gradually Paradise Lost, as a little garden of Eden, will become Paradise Regained as the world beautified. Then the wilderness shall blossom as rose and the solitary place shall be glad.

At our Lord's First Advent the "acceptable time" began—the time when God, having accepted the sacrifice of Christ Jesus, became willing through Him to accept the sacrifices of all who desire to become His disciples—to take up their cross and follow Him through evil report and good report even unto death. The entire Gospel Age anticipates Israel's Day of Atonement, and the sacrifices of our Lord and the Church, His Body, are the "better sacrifices," foreshadowed by the bullock and the goat offered typically by the Jews. This is the acceptable year of the Lord which Jesus declared (Isaiah LXI, 2; Luke IV, 19). God's faithful people of this acceptable day are glad to be invited to "present their bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable unto God" (Romans XII, 1). In the end of this acceptable day will come the end of all opportunity to thus sacrifice the human nature and become joint-heirs with Christ and partakers of the heavenly nature.

Then will be introduced a new period styled, in the Scriptures, "Times (or years) of Restitution." The acceptable day for the Church's sacrifice has lasted for nearly nineteen centuries. And we know how long the "Times of Restitution" will last—nearly a thousand years. St. Peter tells us just when these "Restitution Times" will begin. They did not begin in his day. They have not begun yet. They will begin as a result of the Second advent of Jesus, the Messiah, and the establishment of His Kingdom and righteousness. "Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord and He shall send Jesus Christ, as before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must retain until the Times of Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began. For Moses verily said unto the fathers, A Prophet as like unto me (of whom I am but a type or figure) shall the Lord your God raise up unto you from amongst your brethren. Him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever He shall speak unto you. And it shall come to pass that the soul that will not obey that Prophet shall be destroyed from amongst the people" (Acts III, 19-23)—in the Second Death.

This great Prophet has been in process of raising up for over nearly nineteen centuries. And while the last member of His Body shall have passed beyond the veil, He will stand forth in the glories of His Kingdom to rule, judge, instruct, restore and bless all the families of the earth with opportunity for restoration to all that was lost in Eden and redeemed at Calvary. These "Restitution Times" are beautifully referred to in a poem known to many of our readers, written by one who was particularly identified with the Christian Standard office brethren:

A thousand years, earth's coming story,
The glad day no longer foretold;
The bright morn of Zion's glory
Prophets foretold in times of old.

I wish to announce to the public that I am prepared to take care of the dead and conduct funerals with the latest and most up-to-date equipment. I will be glad at all times to render my services, and my charges shall be the lowest.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

Now To Find Out.
Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a brick dust sediment, or settling, stringy or milky appearance often indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back and bladder are out of order and need attention.

What To Do.
There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, kills almost every wish in correcting kidney trouble; pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. Corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bed effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.
You may have a sample bottle sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper and remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

The scintillating, splendid beauty of our Cut Glass will delight and gratify the most critical and exacting purchasers.

Every article of cut glass shown here is genuine hand-cut—there are no seconds, and none of those frauds of pressed glass with a little superficial cutting.
We know that if you will inspect our stocks of cut glass you will be delighted and pleased with its perfect purity and beauty, and the reasonable prices. Your inspection cordially invited.

Ratification Notice.

The County Commissioners of Wicomico County hereby give notice that the report of George E. Jackson, L. B. Bellingham and S. E. Truitt, Commissioners to lay out a new County Road from St. John's Church to the Potomac River at Barbours Crossing, has been filed to their office and will be taken up for ratification on Tuesday, March 28th, 1911. Objections to the ratification must be made before noon on above date. If the County Commissioners meeting is postponed from this date, the report will be taken up at the next regular meeting of the Board.
By order of the Board,
THOMAS FERRY, Clerk.

READ THE ADVERTISEMENTS

ments If You Wish To Keep Up-to-Date And Profit Commercially.

Now that the season for the spring outfitting, housecleaning, etc., is fast approaching, the thoughts of the thrifty ones naturally turn to the most advantageous places to purchase their necessities. A review of the prices should be made and amounts allotted to each demand, and it is naturally the desire of everyone to purchase as much and of as good quality as can be had for the amount at hand.

A careful perusal of the advertisements of the local merchants contained in this paper is sure to be of much value in determining what to purchase and where to purchase. Nearly all the leading stores now have received their spring stocks of goods and have the same on display, as reflected in our advertising columns, in which you will find ads from practically all the leading houses in the city in all the different lines, setting forth the advantages of their goods, their assortment, prices, etc. The integrity and fair dealing of these merchants is beyond question, and no matter from which line the shopper buys, he is sure to receive fair and courteous treatment.

WHAT?

PLACE YOUR ORDER FOR SPRING FERTILIZER.

WHERE?

With Mr. A. T. Dashiell, Salisbury, local agent for

ARMOUR'S HIGH GRADE ANIMAL MATTER FERTILIZERS.

The agricultural value, or the results produced in the field, is what you are mainly interested. Investigate the record of the Armour Brands and you will be convinced that you can't afford to plant without them.

The Armour Brands are manufactured under the direct supervision of an experienced chemist, (who is thoroughly posted as to the plant food requirements of the different crops,) and are manufactured from a combination of the best fertilizer materials, such as Nitrate of Soda, Bone Meal Dried Blood, Animal Tankage and Acid Phosphate, and high grade Potash Salts, thus giving a plant food that will insure a steady feeding of your crops from the beginning through to maturity.

Ask your neighbor about Armour's—he knows. Place your order at once. Don't let anyone try to convince you something else is just as good.

LOW BRIMMED HATS

They Are Not Suitable to All Types.

New Late Winter Models Show Large Quantities of Feathers—Most Popular Shapes Are Gold and Yellow.

Women have often been accused of men of making themselves look ridiculous with their clothes, but this is the first time they have laid themselves open to the charge of hiding their light under a bushel, or concealing their charms to the extent of making themselves unrecognizable. Yet some of the winter hats are more like extinguishers than anything else. Often it is impossible to tell who's who under the hat.

Besides the fact that you can't recognize the person beneath without bending down and peering under the brim, the capotes are made of the crassest combinations of material. A hat seen in a shop window recently had a foundation which was an old brocade sate cover veiled with chiffon in a Parisian design. The inevitable fur edging was present, of course, and this was further graced by a square piece of gold embroidery at the side. At the edge of the square of embroidery was sewed a gold tassel, and the heterogeneous combination was not only pronounced exceedingly smart, but was very expensive. It found a buyer at once, and many like unto it from other pieces of the sofa cushion sold like hot cakes.

Odds and ends of cretonne pieced out or with the flowers of the cretonne applique on a velvet foundation have also turned up as hats this season, and the very latest idea is flowers made of little pieces of fur sewed or glued upon felt foundations.

It seems that the milliners have had rather an easy time of it this year, for we have never come to a time in the history of fashions when so much individuality was allowed and so little was displayed. Most of the women one sees on Fifth Avenue or in the tea rooms at 6 o'clock might be twins except for disparity of age and size.

But the black velvet suit and the close fitting hat, fur edged and coming down well over the face, have become almost uniform, these suits and hats having been turned out by the million by calculating merchants for an unthinking public.

The prevailing fashions of today are made for the so called new type of American girl, who is smaller than the Gibson girl of ten years ago and who in appearance suggests Slavonic ancestry more than Anglo-Saxon. She is supremely well suited to the Russian and Japanese effects in dress which are now so apparent. The moujik cap and the Cossack bonnet, bag out all the interesting beauty of her face and seem to belong to her. The barbaric colors and embroideries are hers by right of inheritance, and she should continue to wear them. The Celtic type looks out of its element peering from a sinister frame of fur. It takes larger and more flowing styles to set off the beauty of the Anglo-Saxon type.

The new hats for late winter show quantities of these charming feathers on the wide shaped black velvet hats. The most popular shades are gold and yellow. The French ostrich plume or short ostrich feather is also expected to be very popular and to replace the willow.

Mary Dean

Using Old Wool.

Don't you who crochet and knit have old lengths of wool or various colors left over, so small you can do nothing with them? Of course you do, especially now that the Christmas deluge has just subsided. Well, here is a way to get rid of them and to make things worth while in the bargain.

The pieces whether haphazard, but keeping the same weight together. Take long needlefuls and work in the shell stitch such articles as bug-me-tights, tea cozies, cushion covers, bed throws, etc., according to the weight and amount of wool you have.

A word as to the various varieties of crocheting and knitting wool might not come amiss. Shetland sephyr, Shetland wool and ice wool are of about the same weight; so are cashmere yarn, Spanish worsted and Dresden Saxony, and German towed sephyr. Shetland does and knitting worsted. With this as your guide you can utilize your old wool if you make only children's reins with it.

The Eternal Feminine.
"Give me a kiss for a garden.
"But the knight to his lady fair,
"Give me a kiss for a garden.
"And a trace of thy golden hair.
"For I go to a far off country
"At the head of my merry men,
"And those that return to those that go
"Are only as one to ten."
"And she gave him a kiss for a garden
"And a trace of her golden hair,
"And answered a while—then married,
"In the manner of many a fair.
—Walter R. Field, in New York Times.

EPIGRAMS OF THE SHOP.

Weekly Bulletin issued by a Cynical Manager, Who Thinks He's Funny.
The office manager of a wholesale house, who has something like 900 men under his supervision, each week issues a set of business epigrams to his assistants and department heads. This is what he said last week:

"In hiring a man ask him if he ever worked for any of our competitors. If he has, he's a fool. You can get out of him in a week all he knows about the other fellow and fire him in two weeks if he isn't any good."

"Don't let past performances weigh too heavy in judging an applicant. Look at his eyes and chin. There's more to be learned in two minutes in a man's face than in ten years of his past record."

"If you think that one of your men has outwitted his business with us, ask him if he can get another job. If he says 'Sure' and means it, keep him with you. His absence, probably in your fault, not his. Stir him up."

"Don't for a minute let your men see that you know there is anything more important in the world than getting out the day's work. I knew a man once who disorganized a whole department by talking ancient history during luncheon."

"Don't overlook your office boys. The man who owns this business was once one himself."

"Remember, the growth of this firm and the increase of competition demand that this week's work be just a little better than last."

"Think it over now."—Chicago Tribune.

A Practical Prayer.
"And now, Lord, give us a prayer," continued Brother Page during a recent prayer meeting in Ebenezer chapel. "We would mo' especially as these folks—Well, bless us to goodness, if dat ain't Brodder Dickey Wagstaff come back and uh-uh-uh right dar on de left hand side. Saw him slip uh-twist him round de do'—Lewie, and keep him from walkin' out here! I kin get to him and ax him how 'bout dem dar two dollars he borrowed of me 'most a year ago and den went away and isn't paid back (well plumb yit! Amen!)"—Puck.

Modern Millionaire.
Price $111—I want to marry your daughter.

Grindin' Head—Impossible, my son. My daughter's his expensive tastes.

Price $111—But I can gratify them. I have a chicken farm that yields more than three dozen eggs a day.

Grindin' Head—Take her, my boy. I had no idea you were a millionaire.—Chicago Commercial Tribune.

Holiday Visitors.
An appalling case of deafness was that of an old lady who lived just across the street from the navy yard. On Washington's birthday they fired a salute of twenty-one guns. The old lady was observed to start and listen as the last gun was fired; then, addressing her cap and something her dress, she exclaimed, "Come in!"—Success Magazine.

Ignorance.
Mrs. Wayback—And are the city people as smart as they say, Ezra?

Mr. Wayback—(after returning from the city)—Well, I should say not. Talk about ignorance. They're even not to have signs in their windows telling them which way is up and which is down.—Brooklyn Life.

And He Was One.
He had a title. He was old. He was shattered. She was well.

"Aw—my dear Miss Catcher—aw—do you love old ruin?"

"Your grace? Why—yes! But, oh, this is so sudden!"—Browning's Magazine.

Sad His Lot.
Howell—Rowell is not very happy in his family relations.

Powell—I should say not. His motto is, "I hate my wife, but oh, my mother-in-law!"—New York Press.

Ambiguity.
"How is your friend Lamouise?"

"He is at last delivered from his sufferings."

"Does that mean that he is dead or his wife?"—Bon Vivant.

He Knew Her.
Young Wife—Thank heaven, that horrid servant has gone for good.

Wise Husband—But she doesn't do it.

The Same.
Homely—I believe in being good natured. I even quarrel with a laugh.

Sprightly—Never saw you do that, but I have seen you provoke a smile.—Boston Herald.

Not Their Style.
First Chauffeur—War is absurdly sentimental.

Second Chauffeur—Yes; they actually go back and bury the dead.—New York Times.

The Natural Order of Things.
"Football!" growled the angry father.

"Ugh!"

"But surely," said his friend, "your son won high honors at his college."

"He did," grimly assented the father.

"First, he was a quarterback."

"Yes."

"Then a halfback."

"Yes."

"Then a fullback."

"Yes."

"And now—What is he now?"

"Now," roared the father, "he is a backback!"

HIS CONTRIBUTION

By MARTHA HOTCHKISS

Mr. Keating was a young man who had a natural gift as a financial operator. Only twenty-six years old, he had carried through several deals in stocks. He had met Miss Ethel Lamb, who was quite willing to marry him. Not that he had asked her, for he had not; he wished to get himself in better financial shape before doing so.

"Mr. Keating," she said to him one evening, "I am so anxious to make a little money. I want it for a certain purpose. It's something I can't tell you about. You see, there are several of us interested in it, and I would not be justified in telling their secret."

"Certainly not. Some social move, I suppose?"

"No, it's not social."

"Oh, you are going in for some of these fads the rich women are taking up—woman voting, helping women operators who strike or something of that kind?"

"Nothing of the sort. I see you have got a wrong impression entirely, so I'll have to tell you."

"And she did. They were going to endow a colored church."

"That's a laudable object, and I'd be very mean not to help you. Would a hundred dollars do?"

"We wish to make ten thousand. Now, it seems to me that if you would give us a—what do you call it?"

"A tip?"

"Yes; a tip when some stock you are going to make money in is going up, so that we can buy some of it. We can make all we want."

"In one fell swoop?"

"Yes, that's it. Without having to beg it in little lots, get up fairs and all that sort of thing."

"Very well. I'm thinking of a little scheme now. If it comes to anything I'll let you know."

Not long after that Mr. Keating called on Miss Lamb and asked if he could speak to her without being overheard. She shut all the doors, and he said to her in a low tone:

"If I give you a tip will you be sure not to tell any one?"

"Certainly."

"Well, buy Jimberlaw Lead. You'll make your $10,000. But if you should lose it, that's your loss, isn't it?"

Miss Ethel Lamb thanked her informant, though she said it wouldn't be quite fair for him to stand any loss. Still, since there wouldn't be any loss there wouldn't be anything for him to stand.

The next day she went to a friend who was a stockbroker and told him that she had received a tip on Jimberlaw Lead and asked him to buy some of the stock for her. She had no money to put up for a margin, but he told her that if she would convince him that the tip was reliable he would buy some stock for her without any margin.

Miss Lamb remembered her promise, but considering the cause she was working for warranted her breaking it. She concluded to tell him provided he would promise solemnly not to tell a single person. He promised, and she told him that the tip had come from Mr. Keating.

He opened his eyes, but said nothing, and the next morning she received a notice of the purchase of 500 shares of Jimberlaw Lead. As soon as she had left the office the broker told his partner that Keating had tipped a lady (he the broker) happened to know Keating was attentive to that there was to be a movement in Jimberlaw Lead. This was done in the private office, where no one except the members of the firm could hear.

A number of customers doing business with the firm were quietly advised to buy a little of the stock without having been given the source from which the information about it came. But the clerks, seeing large orders for the shares going into the exchange, took flimsy and confidentially told the clerks of other offices.

Very soon the price of Jimberlaw Lead began to rise, at first slowly, but in time rapidly. Then it began to jump. One morning Miss Lamb was informed by her broker that she had a profit of $3,000. Would she sell?

She said she would like first to ask her tipster. She telephoned Keating for information, who told her to hold on and she would surely make her $10,000. This information she communicated to her brokers, and it radiated in many directions.

There were large sales of Jimberlaw Lead for a few days, the stock gaining and losing in price alternately; then it began to go down. Suddenly a large lot was dropped on the market, and Miss Lamb's profit was wiped out. From that time forward it sank slowly until she had lost some $3,000.

She went for Mr. Keating.

"What shall I do?" she moaned.

"I've lost money I can't pay."

"Didn't I tell you I would stand your loss?"

"Yes, but I don't like to have you do that. Besides, the church!"

"I'll take care of the church."

This somewhat reassured her.

"I am abundantly able to give $10,000 to your church project since I have sold out shares that have been on my hands for two years at a handsome profit. You enabled me to do so."

"How?"

"By confiding my secret to another."

"You wrecked me!"

"I forgive you on one condition—that you help me to spend the profits on my wife."

French Beef stew.

Two and one-half pounds beef cut from the round; one-fourth pound salt pork and one can tomatoes. Out steak and cut into small thick pieces. Cook slowly. When about half done, add onions and tomatoes. Season with one tablespoonful sugar (if tomatoes are quite acid). One teaspoonful salt and one-half teaspoonful each of cloves, cinnamon and red pepper. Before placing in fire, shake with one tablespoonful of flour rubbed smooth with water. Serve on thick slices of well-buttered toast.
