Poetry.

Language of the Eyes.

To find some universal language.

That all can understand.

Has long been wished by old and young.

In almost every land.

They never seem to have conferred.

Which would give us all.

A common speech, by which we speak.

The Language of the Eyes.

Why can't we people be content.

With this dumb voice alone?

Perhaps because it says what's meant.

And all that's meant is shown.

So still we suffer from the lack.

Which should give us all.

A common speech, by which we speak.

The Language of the Eyes.

How much the better should we be.

If we could speak as clearly.

In conversation's thread.

How many questions we might spare.

How many vain replies.

Would we not praise everywhere.

The Language of the Eyes?

But ah! I fear, too oft, we feel.

Shut up in hollow pride.

And what the eyes would reveal.

We would not let the world see.

We can't trust our eyes to speak.

Truth only in them lies.

And falsehood never dares to seek.

The Language of the Eyes!

We are not yet so good, alas!

As that we all can say.

As though through these windows as through glass.

We could see hearts as clearly.

And read the thoughts in all.

The world with words still lies.

But there will be one true thing left.

BISHOP POTTS.

A CHRISTMAS STORY.

BY MAX ADLER.

Bishop Potts of Salt Lake City was the husband of three wives and the happy

father of fifteen interesting children. Early in the winter the bishop determined that his little ones should have a good time on Christmas. He concluded to take a trip down to San Francisco. To see what he could find in the shape of toys

and with which to gratify and amuse them.

The good bishop packed his carpet-bag embraced Mrs. Potts one by one, and kissed

each of her affectionately, and started

upon his journey.

He was gone a little more than a week,

when he came back with a beautiful

load of toys in his valise for his darlings.

He got off the train at Salt Lake,

thinking how joyful and exhilarating it would be at home on Christmas morning

when the whole fifteen of these mouth-

organs should be in operation upon their different tunes at the same moment. But just as he entered the depot he saw a group of women standing in the ladies'

parlor, apparently waiting for him. As soon as he approached, the whole twenty

of them rushed up, threw their arms

about his neck and kissed him, exclaiming, "Welcome home, dear bishop!"

"We know it, we know it," they said, "but we were so glad to see you

again!"

"What a lovely day!" said the eldest daughter, "but we were so glad to see

Napoleon III.

Napoleon III. (Charles Louis Napoleon

Bonaparte) was born on April 20, 1808.

He was the third son of Louis Bonaparte, ex-King of Holland, his mother

being Hortense, the daughter of the Empress Josephine by her first marriage.

His birth took place at the Tuileries,

Paris, and he was named after his grandfather, the Emperor Napoleon I.

Through the Emperor and in Holland by the firing of artillery, and he was baptized by Cardinal Feltz, November 4,

1810, the Emperor and Empress Marie

Louise being his sponsors. After Napoleon's return from Elba, his young nephew, Louis Napoleon, was named after him, and was presented to the deputies of the people and the army. The splendor of this scene left a deep impression on the mind of the boy, then only seven years of age. When Napoleon emigrated him for the last time, at Malmaison, he was only a child, and he wished to follow his uncle, and was difficultly pacified by his mother. Then commenced the banishment of his family. Louis Napoleon and his mother lived first at Aachen and afterward in Switzerland. The latter State admitted

the young exile to the rights of citizenship, and permitted his service in its army. For a time he studied gunnery

at the military academy on the shore of Lake Thun; and during his stay among the Alps made frequent excursions over the mountains. He was engaged in the kind the news came of the revolution

in Paris, of July 1830, and when it was known that Louis Philippe had become

King, he and his family applied for permission to return to France, but were refused. He then wrote the new King of France, and begged to be allowed to serve as a private soldier in the French army. He was answered by the Government by a refusal. He then wrote the
