SHORT CUTS IN STATE NEWS

The Latest News From All Over the State

HAPPENINGS OF THE WEEK

Federalburg.—The directors of the First National Bank of this town will erect new and modern banking institution, costing from $15,000 to $20,000, on a site purchased from Dr. Geo. F. Galloway.

Hagerstown.—One hundred and thirteen students of the Washington County High School received diplomas at the forty-fourth annual commencement exercises which were held in the Maryland Theatre here.

Bloomington.—Michael, aged 2 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Dugan, while seated in his little cart watching his mother working in the garden, was shot in the cheek. Three boys were shooting at a mark with a rifle opposite the home, and one bullet struck the child, making an ugly gash.

Grantsville.—The burial of Miss Florence Cummings, 66 years old, took place at Addison, 12 miles above here. Miss Cummings was a telegraph operator and was in the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for 40 years. She was retired a year ago on a pension. She had been employed at several points along the system and was known by a large number of railroad men.

Harvey de Grace.—Miss Mabel G. Parker, of Catkill, N. Y., and grand daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Parker, of this city, for the second time this year has been awarded a prize in an auditorial contest at Syracuse University, where Miss Parker is a junior in the department of journalism. The contest was conducted by the Phi Delta Kappa National Journalistic Fraternity on "What Syracuse University Needs Most."

Yagerstown.—Run over by a heavily loaded wagon while lying along the Sharpshooters pike, Walker Thomas suffered a compound fracture of the leg and was unconscious for more than an hour. The man had been sleeping and his body was partly covered behind a clump of bushes. The approach of a two-wheeled wagon driven by Lewis Lee, colored, failed to awaken him and he was run over before he could cry out. He was removed to the hospital by Sheriff Kline.

Lonaconing.—James Yaste, 31 years old, of this place, a conductor of the Cumberland and Western Electric Railway, was killed when his head struck a telephone pole while he was leaning out his car in front of Kelly's store at Franklin, near Westernport. He was on the road between Frostburg and Westernport, and the car was proceeding to the latter point. Yaste died a few minutes after he was carried to the office of Dr. A. M. Kalbaugh, Westernport.

Westminster.—A rally of the lodges of Knights of Pythias of Carroll county held at the Maryland National Guard armory, was attended by the Grand Lodge officers of the order. Harry Starr, of Charity Lodge this city, presided. Addresses were made by Dr. Herbert C. Blake, grand chancellor; James M. Hendricks, grand keeper of records and seal; J. Edward Richardson, grand representative; Elwood Martin, grand prelate; J. Murray Dronkers, Rens Harp, of Frederick, and others. Plans were formulated for a drive to double the membership of the order in the county by December 31 next.

Prince Frederick.—The County Commissioners of Calvert county have fixed the tax rate on each $100 of assessable property of the county as follows: For general purposes, $1.98, and for school purposes, 67 cents. Adding to this the State tax of 35 cents, makes a total of $2.33. The method of road building requiring the county to furnish one-fourth of the funds where roads are to be built in connection with State and Federal Government aid have materially increased the tax rate of the county and caused it now to reach the highest figure ever imposed upon the taxpayers.

Hagerstown.—The deserted home of George Alfred Townsend, famous as a war correspondent, newspaper man and author, at Gapland, will be turned into a summer resort. Work of remodeling the building will shortly be started. The building was acquired by James Reed, of Gapland. It was purchased from Mrs. Genevieve Boneventure, of New York, a daughter of the author. The price was $3500. Mr. Townsend purchased the ground upon which it is erected in Crampton's Gap, and for a mile south of it, in 1884, having gone there for local color for his novel "Katy, of the Catoctin." In 1885 he built six residences in a cluster, mainly stone houses. No other houses stood on the mountain for a distance of 12 miles. The elevation at Gapland is 1000 feet, with Gapland station a mile below, to the west. In 1894 Townsend built the War Correspondents' Memorial, the only one in the world, at the forks of the cross roads on the top of the mountain, one of the largest monuments upon the battlefields of the Civil War, 50 feet high and 40 feet broad.

New State Laws In Effect.

Annapolis.
Fourteen new Maryland laws went into effect June 1, the one affecting the greatest number of persons probably being the tax of one cent a gallon on gasoline, which is expected to net about $1,000,000 to make up a deficit in the maintenance fund of the State Roads Commission.

Other acts are as follows:
Senate Bill 61, providing for quadrennial registration.

Senate Bill 18, making women eligible to hold public office.

House Bill 12, increasing teachers salaries and providing an equalization fund.

Senate Bill 202, providing $1,000,000 through a loan for construction of a road in Southern Maryland.

House Bill 72, providing for establishment of a Bureau of Child Hygiene in conformity with the Federal law.

Senate Bill 70, providing for a $1,750,000 construction loan.

Senate Bill 25, creating a Bureau of Mines.

House Bill 178, increasing the tax on oysters.

Senate Bill 243, providing for the sale of the site proposed for a new Fourth Regiment Armory and using the proceeds for constructing armories in several towns.

House Bill 128, providing an additional judge for the Supreme Bench of Baltimore city.

Senate Bill 74, repealing the Pull Crew law.

An amendment to the law prohibiting advertising signs within the right of way on all public highways, placing enforcement of the law along State highways under the State Roads Commission and leaving the other provisions under the Board of Forestry also will go into effect.

To Import School Supervisors.
Following a meeting of the State Board of Education, A. S. Cook, State Superintendent of Schools, left for New York, where it is understood, he will prospect for county "superintending teachers" or "helping teachers," as provided for in the new education law passed by the last session of the General Assembly. Mr. Cook will seek to obtain the necessary personnel from the various colleges of Columbia and elsewhere, it is said.

Among other things the educational bill passed by the last session of the Legislature provided for the creation of the positions of county "superintending teachers" or "helping teachers." From the visit of Mr. Cook to New York, the inference is drawn that Maryland with its present Normal School facilities, fails to supply, at least in adequate numbers, teachers qualified to act in this supervisory capacity. The law which creates the positions of county "superintending teachers" or "helping teachers" also makes it mandatory upon the boards of county commissioners to levy funds sufficient for such teachers' salaries.

To Rush Buildings At State Normal.
Architects will be selected and plans drawn in the immediate future for new dormitories at the State normal schools at Towson, Frostburg, Salisbury and Bowie, under authority given Albert S. Cook, State Superintendent of Education, and the special committees by the State Board of Education at its annual meeting. These dormitories, which are greatly needed because of crowded conditions at these schools, will be built out of the $322,000 authorized by the last Legislature. The plans will be pushed rapidly by Mr. Cook and the committees in order to submit them to the Board of Public Works as early as possible and get the construction work started.

Wage Limit On Again.
Though a bill was passed by the last session of the Legislature and duly signed by the Governor removing the $2,000 limit from wages whose earners are entitled to the benefits of the Workmen's Compensation Act, the $2,000 limit is again effective.

The limit was taken off by a clause in an emergency bill, which became effective on the date of signature by the Governor, April 13. Immediately afterwards another bill was signed and the Governor dealing with another phase of the compensation, but also restoring the $2,000 limit. This second bill becomes effective today, along with other non-emergency measures, and, having been signed later, it is held to supersede the first bill.

Byrd Is Absolved Of Ritchie Attack.
President A. F. Woods, of the University of Maryland, wrote Governor Ritchie and acknowledged receipt of the letter the Governor wrote him complaining of the rumor of the remarks made by H. C. Byrd, Dr. Woods' assistant, at the annual banquet of the alumni of the University's schools of medicine, law, dentistry and pharmacy Wednesday night.

The Governor was informed by Dr. Woods that he was sure that Mr. Byrd intended no criticism of the Governor or of the educational commission appointed by the Governor nor long ago. In his letter to Dr. Woods the Governor let it be known that he "did not intend to permit remarks of the kind attributed to Mr. Byrd to be made by any State employee."

BOY SCOUTS

Collected by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America

BRITISH COLUMBIA HERO

Before the eyes of scores of spectators, two boy scouts of Vancouver, B. C., Alvin Neeson and Harold Davidson, recently covered themselves with glory by crawling on the treacherous rafters of Coal Harbor and rescuing three McIntyre, the fourteen-year-old son of Rev. R. J. McIntyre. The boy had been skating and was about 20 feet from shore when without warning the ice gave way, precipitating him into the water. He made a great struggle to pull himself out, but the ice was too rotten to cling to.

Many people saw the boy's plight, but none dared venture out to his rescue as the ice was so rotten it would bear no man's weight. Leaders were run out. Even this intrepid rescue party, upon reaching the boy, found the ice was breaking up in all directions. The two scouts volunteered to attempt the rescue, Davidson skating out as near as he could to the boy, while Neeson crawled out on the ladder, dropping a rope and another ladder behind him. Between the two rescuers managed to pull the boy out and under the drift of ice and lay him to the surface.

On the shore their hands on the rope and all three boys were safely just as the police arrived.

The young heroes were so tired, though they were not hurt, that they could not walk. Davidson was carried away in a stretcher, and Neeson was carried away in a stretcher.

The fact that the boy should be rescued in this manner should be a lesson to all boys who are in the habit of skating on ice.

When Boston was a little Puritan village, the favorite mode of punishment for small misdeemeanors was to place the culprit in the stocks. By a curious chance the first person to be so punished after the stocks were constructed was the carpenter who made them.

The record relates that "Edward Palmer, for his extortion, 6 s. 6 d. 1 pound, 11 shillings, 7 pence for the plank and woodwork of Boston stocks, is fined 5 pounds and censured to be set an hour in the stocks."

They dealt in strange punitive measures in those days. It was the practice, in the case of persons guilty of "voluntariness of the tongue in railing and scolding," either to gag the offender or set him more frequently in a ducking-stool to be dipped three times in some convenient pond.

Another measure was to place the offender's tongue in a white stick, which was then thrust into the fire.

How High Birds Fly.
Astronomical methods have been successfully applied to the solution of a mooted question as to the height of flights of migrating birds. Two telescopes were placed at measured distances apart (from ten to twenty-one feet), one at east and west line, and with them two observers simultaneously watched the moon.

The track of birds flying across the face of the moon were noted by each observer independently on a lunar chart, ready at his side. The tracks, being projected from separate points of observation, of course, were not identical in position and their distance apart furnished the basis for a calculation of the "parallax" of the flying birds. Two sets of observations in one case were made, in May and October. The deduced heights above the ground varied from 1,400 to 5,400 feet. The last, however, was an extreme case, most of the distances ranging from 1,500 to 2,500 or 3,000 feet.

How "Gophers" Are Cased.
The name "gopher," which is applied to quite a variety of creatures in various sections of the American continent, is a corruption of the French "gastre," meaning a honeycomb. It was applied by the early French settlers to a number of burrowing animals from their habit of honeycombing the earth.

In Canada and Illinois the name is today applied to the gray burrowing squirrel and in Wisconsin to the gray striped squirrel which, in this section, is called a chipmunk. In Missouri a gopher is a brown pouched rat. In Georgia he is a snake, and in Florida he is a turtle. Minnesota is called the "Gopher State" from the fact that the striped squirrel was formerly found there in great numbers.

How Machine Cuts Mortar.
A special machine, which is intended for cutting out the mortar between bricks, is described with illustration in a late issue of Popular Mechanics Magazine. It consists of a small wheel which is operated at 5,500 revolutions per minute by a flexible shaft from a one-fourth horsepower electric motor. A case, partly covering the wheel, extends down to form a handle, and a safety guard is provided to protect the operator's hands from flying bits of mortar. Wheels of various thicknesses are supplied so that they may be changed to fit layers of mortar of different width.

How to Solder Aluminum.
To solder aluminum, first make a soldering bit from a piece of 1/4 or 1/2 inch round or square aluminum. Next, file the parts to be soldered with a composition of 81 per cent tin, 18 per cent aluminum, and 1 per cent copper.

After the copper has fused, the aluminum should be added little by little, stirring the mixture thoroughly all the time. The tin and a small portion of tin should be added, do not overheat the composition—Popular Science Monthly.

Will Make Washington Trip.
Boy scouts of Wheeling and Mountsville council, West Virginia, are already beginning to board their earbags and spending money in anticipation of their excursion to the national capital, scheduled to take place next summer, according to the present plans of the council. It is planned to make the trip by means of auto-cars, traveling by day and making night camps along the way. This is one of the many similar education trips which are being promoted by scout leaders throughout the country, looking toward both pleasure and profit of youth.

A MAN, WOMAN AND BOY SCOUT.
The Chamber of Commerce of Martinsburg, Cal., recently put through a city cleanup, during which they urged everybody to trim shrubbery, remove vines by hand, and mend and repair old fences, burn over grass in vacant lots, etc. The city was blocked out in districts for this purpose, with a man, a woman, and a boy scout in charge of each.

Rescue With Hockey Sticks.
Scouts Ronald Bowers and Donald Clark of Allford, Conn., last winter saved their hockey sticks a small fee who had fallen through the ice. With their hockey sticks, neither boy told of the incident. The first notification their scoutmaster had that his troop had some serious trouble was when he received a letter from the parents asking him to publicly thank the boys for their splendid service in first aid.

STORED UP FOR HISTORIAN

Writer Calls Attention to Real Value of Congressional Record, Not of Common Knowledge.

The Congressional Record is the butt of the humorist of today and the storehouse of political knowledge for the historian of tomorrow. It is the target at which the humorist shoots his arrows of wit, but it contains a compendium of information which stands as a permanent contribution to political science through the ages, when those who have cast their likes and sneers have been forgotten. A mariner cast away on a desert island with nothing to read but the debates of congress could come away in a few years as well-informed as a college student on the eve of an examination. He would know something about nearly every subject that the human mind touches, including history and poetry. He would have a substantial grasp upon the development of government, economics and political philosophy, says the Washington Post.

Every man who has ever spoken on the floor of the senate or house has added something to the sum total of what the Record contains. Even the errors propagated in debate are useful; they help one to ascertain the ultimate truth. Thomas H. Reed once said that every member of the house was an expert on some one thing; that it would be discovered that there was a substantial reason explaining why every man was there. A great deal of matter gets into the Record every day which at the time may seem irrelevant. With the passing of the years importance is emphasized. In 2022 the Congressional Record of today will be an invaluable repository of facts bearing upon all phases of life as it is now lived.

Perilous.
She had studied all the modern fads, and was rather amused at the latest theory about kissing. Doctors said it was most unhygienic and dangerous. Finding herself alone with a rather silent, young man, she mistook his silence for shyness. "Do you think kissing dangerous?" she asked. "Terribly," he answered. "Why? Whatever can it produce?" "Marriage," he snapped.

Man's Hidden Fear.
The look on a man's face when a sympathetic woman says she "understands" him probably is caused by a hidden fear that maybe she does.—St. Joseph News-Tress.

Fans Used in Church Services.
Fans were used in the religious services of the early Christians in the Middle Ages, to keep flies from the sacred elements. These were round, with silver bells.

Woman Wrote Famous Hymn.
One of the most famous of children's hymns, "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old," was written many years ago by a young English woman, Joanna Thompson.

April Bridal Warning.
April brides, according to popular belief, are of mercurial temperament and will make good mothers but trying wives.

Why?
Why say you don't believe in Chiropactic, and call it a "fake," when you have never taken the trouble to investigate? See your Chiropactor and you will learn something that will benefit you greatly. It is not true that Chiropactic will restore life to the dead; but it IS true that this science has restored thousands to health who were in a condition far worse than death.

PLEASED THE "MONEY BAGS"

European Capitalists Listened With Pleasure to Accounts of Rockefeller's Stupendous Wealth.

During my stay in London I accepted an invitation to have luncheon with Lord Rothschild at his office, John Hays Hammond writes in Scribner's.
It had been my custom, extending over a period of many years, to drop in informally and have luncheon with the Rothschilds once or twice during each of my frequent visits to London.
On these occasions always the most interesting topic of conversation was my estimate of the wealth of Rockefeller and other rich Americans. Lord Rothschild invariably introduced the subject and forewarned, I was ready to give him the desired thrill. He would usually start with some "pik-er," whose wealth did not amount to more than the paltry sum of $100,000,000, and then worked up by queries until he reached the American Croesus, John D. Rockefeller.
It would be an unpatriotic American who would belittled the wealth of a compatriot at a time like this, and after having modestly admitted, in reply to Lord Rothschild's question, that Rockefeller was certainly worth $500,000,000, assuming an air of ultra conservatism, I would allow him to extort what was to him a delectable fact that Rockefeller was worth at least $750,000,000, and when the money bags around the table stared at me with an expression of pleased surprise, but not of doubt, I would in subdued tone convey to them the fact that in informed financial circles of America the Rockefeller's wealth was estimated at over $1,000,000,000. The internationalism of the Rothschild family, and the utter lack of envy, is evidenced in the unmistakable pleasure which characterized the reception of this "thin" of high finance.

BIRDS STILL FAR SUPERIOR

Man's "Conquest of the Air" Seems to Be Thing of the Far Distant Future.

Aviators fly 1,200 miles with two stops for fuel, and the world applauds the deed. Other aviators actually cross the Atlantic at its narrowest point, some 1,900 miles wide—and the fact stands still unrivaled by a heavier than-air machine.

But out on the Pacific, an all-star followed in steamer for six days and seven nights without alighting. In this time, the ship traveled nearly 3,000 miles, and the bird, with the circlings, at least as far. Then, with the nearest land 1,200 miles away, the bird swallows a greasy meal of food tossed over the side, turned abruptly, and disappeared.

Human aviation is a long, long way from having achieved that measure of endurance. It will come—probably—but it is not even in sight yet. In speed, the race between man and bird is close already, and victory in the end is sure to go to the former. As for altitude, the airplane has out-climbed even the condor. But in the supreme test of endurance, of the ability to fly and fly and keep on flying, man is ridiculously inferior.

No Genius Without Pessimism.

Schopenhauer, in his doctrine of the fatality of life, emphasizes the fact that genius suffers more deeply and feels more intensely just because of its abnormally developed will and intellect, and that, therefore, genius without pessimism, is unthinkable either in the field of poetry or philosophy.

"The placing of Shakespeare and Buddha in juxtaposition is quite in line with the trend of modern thought. Buddhism, like the Tagore cult, is at present in the forefront of interest, and it is safe to say that during the entire century preceding the war there was less written and said on the subject of Buddhism than in the past year. The most widely divergent intellectual currents are being traced back to the Buddhist sources, and every new system of philosophy and all modern historical researches are built up on Buddhist foundations.—Exchange.

His Recovery Complete.

The Figaro tells of an English sailor named Mitchell who was a past master at the art of tasting whiskey. In the war he was amputated and lost his sense of smell and the use of speech.
Deprived of his calling, he became a boxer. Now, in a certain hotel in London Mitchell received a formidable blow upon his nose and another on his jaw. The next day he was knocked out. One of his attendants rushed some spirits to him. Then Mitchell miraculously recovered and declared, even before wetting his lips,
"This stuff is at least fifteen years old."

Takes Sabbatical Year.

In California county agricultural agents have the rank of assistant professors in the state university and are entitled to all the rights and privileges of the resident teaching force.
One county agent who has now served eight years in his present position, has been granted sabbatical leave, which he will spend in Europe studying rural co-operation. This is the first time in the history of the work that such recognition has been given a county agent.

MARTIN'S STRATEGY

By WINIFRED DUNBAR

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

"Martin, I'm in a sore peck of trouble!" spoke Robert Grant, leading man of Grafton.

"Sorry, Judge. Can I help you out of it in any way?" questioned Martin Baker, one of the humble ones of the village.

"I'm afraid not," replied Mr. Grant in a really worried and mournful tone of voice. "I've put my foot in it bad and deep. I'd give a lot to get back on the solid rock. I declare, it's getting on my nerves and I dread seeing my wife!"

To have the judge almost make a confession of him stunned Martin and raised his hopes vastly.

Those hopes of the ardent young man centered about the bonniest girl in Grafton—Jessie, the judge's only daughter. Martin loved her from the depths of his heart and Jessie as fervently returned the sentiment.

The sudden acquisition of quite a fortune from a relative had given the judge some new grand ideas. Martin was poor, Jessie was an heiress. The match was unequal. He cast about reverting to a more aristocratic town.
He cut quite a swath, he fancied, going with his family to a fashionable watering place.

He had just returned looking bothered and dismal.
"You see, it's all along of my wanting to get to a bigger town, Martin," somewhat sheepishly explained the judge. "When we started on our outing I gave orders to put up the old home here for sale."

"Yes, I heard of that," nodded Martin.

"It also gave my lawyer a power of attorney to act for me. Well, he has sold it."
"And I've got to talk out my misery to somebody. My wife made a terrible scene. I came on here because this Mr. Morgan was here today. I offered him back his money. I doubled it. No use. He said it was the ideal place he had been looking after for years and his wife and children were equally pleased with it. They're coming here tomorrow to look it over to plan some improvements."

"Judge," said Martin, "I see a way out of this."

"You do?" cried the judge eagerly.
"Martin," he added, "there is not much I wouldn't do for you if you help me out of this awful dilemma." and he grasped the hand of the young man feverently.

"Judge, leave it all to me," said
Martin grandly.

That afternoon Martin visited first an old colored man of numerous family at the edge of town.

"Martin," he said, "there's a plumber named Morgan who's been prospecting residents about assuming the role of a person who had been deputized to overhaul the place."

"I declare! what is that horrible odor?" exclaimed Mrs. Morgan, as she entered the house.

Martin pointed to the plumber hammering at some pipes, mumbled something about "hauling for sewer gas," and hustled outside after whispering to the plumber "to use some more of that chemical."

A series of frightful screams soon issued from the cellar. Up the stairs came flying one of the misses of the family.

"She was fairly hysterical, she nearly fainted away. Two snakes, a toad and some frogs had crossed her path in the cellar!"

Next door to the Grant place was a small house that had been vacant for years. It was temporarily occupied that day, however. In fact, the artful Martin had especially hired Mr. Ephraim Brown, whitewasher, and his numerous family to take possession of the domicile.

Mrs. Morgan, inspecting the garden, came to a halt as an open space in the shrubbery showed the dividing fence. Beyond it a great washing maneuver was being conducted. A fat man was bustling about, with one half dozen pinnacles at her heels.
Old Eph was splitting wood. On the fence sat four ebony cherubs eating bread and butter.

"For mercy's sake!" cried Mrs. Morgan—"who are they?"

"Your neighbors," responded Martin glibly—"very well behaved people, too."

"But—black!" almost shrieked the sensitive lady and collapsed to a garden seat.

That settled it. Within the hour
Mr. Morgan was down to the office of the lawyer. Willingly he canceled the contract of purchase and received back his forfeit money.

A telegram brought Mr. Grant to the village, jubilant and excited.
"You made it, didn't you?" he cried, slapping Martin on the shoulder in a truly fatherly way.

"Yes, sir," replied Martin modestly.
"Now then, what can I do for you in appreciation of your good endeavors?"

"Can't you guess?" queried Martin, looking the judge straight in the eyes.
"I think I can," was the response, with a grim smile. "My big ideas have come down a peg, Martin, and so have I. You seem to know how to manage things. All right—you shall be my business agent."

"And Jessie?"
"Oh, of course she will want to be your partner!"

The Home of the Soul

In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach, most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter.

MT. PLEASANT.

There will be Sunday School and preaching next Sunday morning at the usual hour. The preacher will be Mr. Walter A. Donoway, of Whaleyville.

We are glad to report Mr. Arthur Rayne able to be up again, after a long illness.

We are sorry to report Mrs. W.
L. Baker on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Timmons, of Whilton, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Lewis, Sunday.

Miss Rada Dennis, of Friendship, spent the week end with Miss Rada Lewis.

Miss Sallie M. Maser, of New Hope, is spending some time with her niece, Mrs. G. W. Brittingham.

Mr. Fred Hammond, of Libertytown, is spending some time with his son, C. F. Hammond.

Many of our people attended the entertainment at Powellville, last Saturday evening, which was given by the young people of Whaleyville.

Master Harry Hammond spent the week-end with his cousins, Ralph and Lewis Hammond, of Powellville.

The vases which we now use for another to produce elaborate designs.

Military Africa.

Memorial Day Address by Rev.
James A. Fassett.

Africa, the home of dark races, is the most romantic and the most tragic of continents. Before Romulus founded Rome; before Homer sang;
when Greece was in its infancy and the world quite young, hoary Memor was the chief city along the Nile, and inhabited by a mighty and militant people. It was called the queenly City of Ethiopia, for it was founded by Negroes. Egypt borrowed her light from these venerable Negroes up the Nile. Greece went to school to the Egyptians and Rome turned to Greece for the science of warfare she had borrowed from these ancient and militant peoples. Likewise, England went to Rome for centuries to learn how to establish and maintain Government.

The Negro appears as a soldier as early as 3,000 years B. C. and has maintained an enviable record until this present time. Every student of history is familiar with the part he played in ancient wars. As an American his previous soldierly history does honor to the American uniform. His record here is one of bravery, swift in execution, terrible in onslaught, tireless in energy, obedient to officers and clamorous to a fault. In the Revolution, the free Negro was in every army and in every battle until for prudential reasons he was prevented from further enlistment.

But the British offered freedom and equal pay to all Negroes who would join their army. The Colonial officers soon found their mistake, and he was reinstated in their ranks and helped them to carry their staggering cause through to Victory, and as he bore the cross of the World's Red-croix up the rugged hills of Calvary.

In the recent war when the whites and blacks were marching down the streets of New York, a commodore who has had large experiences with Negroes in fighting was asked if the blacks were good for anything in fighting. He replied, "They are as brave as any ever fired a gun."

There are no doubt hearts in the streets of New York, the Negroes fought their way to undimmed glory, and made for themselves a pride record in American history.

It was the lack of troops that gave him a place in the Revolution, but it was military achievement that gave him a place in the war of 1812.

In 1861 he offered himself and was rebuffed, and told it was a white man's war. The union armies were being repulsed and routed. Suddenly, the north saw its mistake, and the Negro was given a chance.

It was in this war that a Colonel said to a black color guard, "Protect, defend, die for, but do not surrender these colors." A gallant Negro flag sergeant replied, "I will bring these colors to you in honor, or report to God the reason why."

They were led by a black captain, Andrew Callous, into one of the bloodiest battles.

The flag was returned by dark hands stained with the blood of the brave sergeant who had reported to God.

When Roosevelt and the Rough Riders were at San Juan in 1898, they were black troops who rushed to their rescue and went over the top, saving for New York a Government and the United States a great prize. Roosevelt is reported to have said at the opening of the great world war, "Give me 50,000 Negroes, and I will conquer our enemies." The Negroes were ready, and again he was told this is a white man's war. Germany was after conquest, and sent out agents to secure the Negroes' aid. The Negro is too loyal to hoist a red flag.

When the crimson fiery tide was running hard against the allies with a mighty hurry-up call, the Negro was summoned. 1,200 Negro College men reported at once to the officers' training camp at Des Moines, Iowa. Others offered themselves until it was hard to check the tide. At the military training in Muskogee Institute, only wooden guns were supplied by the Government, while other camps had real army muskets. When the opportunity came, these men with broomstick training were the first to go over the top in No-Man's Land!

At the sight of these "black devils," as the Germans called them, the enemy fled. To the French, who fought by their side, they were known as "Hell fighters." One

Jehovah's Blessing

By REV. GEORGE E. GUILLE
Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—The Lord bless thee, and keep thee: The Lord make His face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: The Lord lift up His countenance unto thee, and give thee peace.—Numbers 6:24-26

The music of heaven rings in these words! Three measures of the divinest melody ever heard, a but from the infinite anthem to soothe the spirit with heaven's calm and turn the whole life into a long Sabbath day. Mark the elements in this benediction, as they reveal God's attitude toward His people and tell of His activities on their behalf.

1. "Jehovah bless thee." You cannot explain that word, "bless." It breathes itself into the soul like a rare perfume, but you cannot tell what it is. It conveys the weary life like a tender mother's hand and lifts it up into rest and strength. You know by sweet experience what it is, but you cannot define it. It is the heart of God disclosed. It embraces all other elements found in this benediction: the keeping, the making face, the graciousness, the uplifted countenance, the gift of peace. That is His blessing. Who that has beheld the cross—has seen the Well-Beloved hanging there, can question what that great heart holds for him? "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him freely give us all things?" Oh, let us magnify that word, "bless."

2. "Jehovah make His face shine upon thee." If His blessing reveals His heart, this discloses His nearness. Not afar off, but nigh. Do not think of Him as far away in heaven, veiled away in His own eternity, unknown and unknowable. There is no distance. "Ye who sometime were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ." In that place of nearness, His face shines. What joy to know that the face from which heaven and earth shall flee away and that is against them that do evil, is shining upon those in whose midst He dwells.

3. "Jehovah lift up His countenance upon thee." Frequently have the Lord's people been heard to say that He has hidden His face from them. It cannot be! For He who looks upon His beloved Son with unchanging delight sees you and me over in Him and cannot turn away from us. If there be hiding, it is you who are doing it, not He. The clouds that obscure the sun do not come from the sun.

4. "The Lord be gracious unto thee." This attitude explains all else. His grace is His kindness to the undeserving. Grace is not a frame of mind or a state of soul, but the attitude of God. "By grace we are saved" and over and over again, because we are so slow to believe it and because He desires we should do so, comes the salutation: "Grace be unto you."

But not only in His attitude but in His activities on our behalf do we see how His heart is occupied for us.

1. Jehovah keep thee. This is our assurance and our security that He who is gracious keeps us for His own. "Kept by the power of God." "Jehovah is thy keeper," says the Psalmist, and they are safe indeed whom He keeps. But not alone as His own possession. He will keep that life in all its daily affairs as though you were His only child and His solitary care. "Jehovah keep thee." That implies what Scripture elsewhere emphasizes and what every hour of your experience has proved: that you cannot keep yourself. "I am not being put to shame," says the apostle, "for I have committed unto Him." Not my soul only, but my daily life. O soul, if He is not keeping thee, thou art lost. Put to shame, every manifestation of the flesh puts you to shame. Every impatient word, every unworthy deed puts you to shame. He can keep you and He will if you but give Him a chance. Turn that life over to Him and see what He can make out of it, see how He can keep it in holy triumph and joy.

2. The last element—last sweet, lingering strain of the anthem—is peace. "Jehovah give thee peace." In all the wide universe, in all the tongues that men have spoken, there is no greater word. First salutation of the risen Christ, "Peace be unto you," last thing in His valedictory: "Peace I leave with you." "He is our peace." O soul, anxious, careworn, tossed and driven, fold this blessing of God to thy poor heart. His own peace is for your present possession. He desires you to have it.

Have you seen the full significance of this blessing? The divine name occurs three times, and three is the number of the God-head, sum of all divine fullness. The connection of the three Persons with the three parts of the blessing can be easily traced. All that God is is thus engaged for us: Father, Son and Holy Spirit occupied with us and for us, and all that we may be blessed. Oh, who would live an unblest life? Who would be so miserable? Give me this blessing of God and I am rich indeed. My heaven has begun with its holiness and its joy!

Three Valuable Friends.

Three men are my friends. He that loves me, he that hates me, he that is indifferent to me. Who loves me, teaches me tenderness. Who hates me, teaches me caution. Who is indifferent to me, teaches me self-reliance.—Psalms.

Excellent Parallel.

Our body is a well-set clock, which keeps good time; but if it is to be too much or indifferently tampered with, the alarm runs out before the hour.—Bishop Hall.

LESSON FOR JUNE 11

JEREMIAH CAST INTO PRISON

LESSON TEXT—Jeremiah 38:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be not afraid of their faces: for I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the Lord.—Jer. 1:8.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Gen. 28:12-13; Jer. 20:1-13; Luke 1:13-15; Acts 12:1-11; 17:1-34.

PRIMER TOPIC—How God Cared for Jeremiah.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jeremiah's Bold Truth-telling.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Faithful in the Face of Danger.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From Jeremiah's Character.

1. Jeremiah Predicts the Capture of Jerusalem (vv. 1-13).
1. To Whom—The People (v. 1). Jeremiah had been taken out of the prison by the king (37:17), and ordered confined to the court of the prison (37:21). The people seem to have had free access to him in the court (32:12). From this place of limited confinement Jeremiah announced to the people their approaching captivity.

2. Counsel Given (vv. 2, 3). (1) All that remaineth in the city shall die by the sword, famine and pestilence. (2) He that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live. "He shall have his life for a prey" doubtless means that he shall escape with his life, though losing all else.

II. Jeremiah Accused by the Princes (vv. 4, 5).
1. "He weakeneth the hands of the men and all the people" (v. 4). From a human standpoint what they said was true, but since Jeremiah was but the interpreter of God to the nation they ought to have heeded his advice to surrender.

2. "This man seeketh not the welfare of this people, but the harm" (v. 4). This charge was utterly false. Jeremiah was the best friend of the people, for he faithfully proclaimed to them God's judgment upon them for their sins and advised them how to make the best of their unfortunate situation.

3. The King's Cowardly Act (v. 5). Jeremiah is abandoned by his supposedly friend. The very one whom Jeremiah was trying to help deserted him. The king was afraid of the Chaldeans, the princes, Jeremiah and God.

III. Jeremiah Cast into the Dungeon (v. 6).
This was not a regular prison, but a cistern which had doubtless been emptied of its water during the siege, leaving only "mire." Into this mire he sank. The purpose was to let Jeremiah die there. There was no possible way to escape. In the dungeon Jeremiah was left alone with God (Psalm 60). Jeremiah was the bravest of God's servants.

IV. Jeremiah Rescued From the Dungeon (vv. 7-13).
1. By Whom—Thoughtless as an African servant (vv. 7-9). The Jewish prophet whom his own countrymen tried to destroy is saved by a Gentile, which may be thought of as foreshadowing the Gentiles' attitude toward the Jews. Ebed-nego, a Chaldean, had a colored skin he was the whitest man in Jerusalem. He was not only sympathetic, but courageous. He went to the king and boldly declared that the princes had done evil in imprisoning Jeremiah.

2. The Method (vv. 10-13). The king yielded to his request and furnished a guard to prevent interference with the work of rescue. He let down soft rope and worn-out garments by rope and instructed Jeremiah to put them under his arms and under the ropes so as to prevent injury to him as he was lifted up. They lifted him out of the dungeon and he was permitted the freedom of the court of the prison.

Why did Jeremiah have such a hard time? Why do the purest and best men and women have to suffer? Why are God's prophets unpopular? Jeremiah, the prophet who declared God's power to deliver, goes to prison and suffers. "Why do the righteous suffer?" is an age-old question.

1. The power of God is more strikingly shown in deliverance than in keeping from trials. This was so in the case of the Hebrews in the fiery furnace and Daniel in the den of lions.

2. Great gain accrues to the sufferers; e. g. the Hebrews in the fiery furnace were not only kept from being burned, but had walking with them the Son of God; Job through his trials was enabled to see himself.

3. Suffering turns out to the furtherance of God's cause; e. g. Job becomes the priest through whose intercession his friends are pardoned; Paul's sufferings furthered the preaching of the gospel; John through banishment on the Isle of Patmos was given the vision of the Revelation.

Zion.
But Judah shall dwell for ever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation. For I will cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed: for the Lord dwelleth in Zion.—Joel 3:20 and 21.

Be Honest.
Recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men.—Romans 12.

The Perfect Man.
If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man.—James 3:2.

Life's Misfit.
Many a man who might have been a good butler has failed in life, owing to his unwillingness to rear side whisks.

A Chipped Frame.
If a corner is clipped off of a glit-edge frame camouflage it with chewing gum. Glid with gold paint.

Daily Thought.
The company of just and righteous men is better than wealth and a rich estate.—Euripides.

God Send Us Men!

God, send us men whose aim (will be, Not to defend some ancient creed, But to live out the laws of Right In every thought and word and deed.

God, send us men alert and quick His lofty precepts to translate, Until the laws of Right become The laws and habits of the state.

God, send us men of steadfast will, Patient, courageous, strong and true; With vision clear and mind equipped His will to learn, His work to do.

God, send us men with hearts ablaze, All truth to love, all wrong to hate; These are the patriots nations need, These are the bulwarks of the state.

—F. J. Gillman.

Recommends Chamberlain's Tablets

"Chamberlain's Tablets have been used by my husband and myself off and on for the past five years. When my husband goes away from home he always takes a bottle of them along with him. Whenever I have that heavy feeling after eating, or feel dull and played out, I take one or two of Chamberlain's Tablets and they fix me up fine," writes Mrs. Newton Vreeland, Minn., N. Y. Take these tablets when troubled with constipation or indigestion and they will do you good.

The Christian Gentleman.

Christianity changes character, and always changes it for the better. The religion of Christ not only gives a sinner to feel that his sins are all forgiven, but it imparts new life to the soul and renews it in the moral image of God. And by this divine work he becomes a new creature. The following delineation of a Christian gentleman, by an unknown author, is not too strong nor too high:

"He is above a mean thing. He cannot stoop to fraud. He invades no secret in the keeping of another. He betrays no secret confided to his keeping. He never struts in borrowed plumage. He never takes selfish advantages of mistakes. He uses no ignoble weapons in controversy. He never stands in the dark. He is not one thing to a man's face and another behind his back. If, by accident, he comes in possession of his neighbor's counsel he passes upon them an act of instant oblivion. He bears sealed packages without tampering with the wax. He never is resentful for his eyes are closed to him. He invades no privacy of others, however the society sleeps. Bolts and bars, locks and keys, hedges and pickets, bands and securities, notices to trespassers, are none of them for him. He may be trusted alone, out of sight, near thinnest partition—anywhere. He buys no office, he sells none, he intrigues for none. He would rather fail of his rights than win them through dishonor. He will eat honest bread. He trembles on no sensitive feeling. He insults no man. If he has a rebuke for another he is straightforward, open, manly; he cannot descend to scurrility. In short, whatever he judges honorable he practices toward every man."—Charles Smith, in The Home Department Lesson Quarterly.

Why Suffer from Rheumatism.

Do you know that nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment? The pain may be relieved by applying Chamberlain's Liniment, which makes sleep and rest possible, and that certainly means a great deal to any one afflicted with rheumatism.

PAINT INCREASES VALUE.

The most dilapidated weather-beaten structure in this town, or elsewhere, can be improved, by the mere application of one or more coats of paint.

Not only will the appearance be improved, but, for every dollar so invested, we dare say, you could add five dollars to the selling price of the property. This applies to the interior as well as exterior.

Aside from the increased values for selling purposes, paint is without an equal for preservation.

To make sure your paint is properly applied, consult

LONG, silken, vigorous hair is the birthright of every woman. Worry, poor health, strenuous living, neglect, etc., soon cause hair to weaken and fall out. The scalp must be kept free from infection, the hair roots must be nourished. Discriminating men and women make it a practice to use regularly to keep the scalp healthy and promote the growth of the hair. They find this splendid preparation very helpful in treating dandruff, falling hair, and other scalp diseases. Washing the hair with Rawleigh's Liquid Shampoo or Shampoo Jelly avoids the dangers of ordinary soap which in time weakens and destroys the hair roots. Proper use of Rawleigh's Shampoo and Hair Tonic will aid wonderfully in preserving and beautifying the hair.

Rawleigh's Hair Tonic

Long life tells the whole story

A QUALITY suit of clothes lasts longer. A well-built pair of shoes lasts longer. A good automobile lasts longer.

The same standards apply to a battery. Any expert will tell you that long life is the only practical proof a motorist has of quality. A long life battery has to be well-built, has to be made of fine materials, has to give economical performance—else it cannot be long-lived.

Longest Life by Owners' Records

4 years and 1 month was the average service record established by all the Gould entries in the recent National Gould Endurance Contest.

Do you wonder that such a service record is causing common-sense motorists to insist on Gould? Drop in and let us show you a new Gould Dreadnaught Battery.

DULCIE PROPOSES

By AGNES GRAHAM BROGAN

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

The man and the girl sat on the bank of a stream that, loosed from winter bondage, went leaping across its shining stones. In a blossoming tree above the two, robins twittered joyously.

The man stretched long and lank, at the girl's side, but tired-old lines about his mouth, but his eyes were as ineffably young as his rare smile. "John Prim," said the girl, "I love you."

The man looked perplexed, unbelieving; then frowned.

"Love is no subject for joke, Dulcie," he reproved.

The girl smiled a bar of a gay little song. "I don't joke, when I say that I love you, John," she returned seriously.

"Such a declaration, should come from me, and not the woman," he suggested.

"But you won't make it," she answered him, and laughed.

"I brought you here," John Prim said, "to tell you that I am going away. It may be for a year, perhaps longer. The business needs a foreign representative, and I have signed to go."

Dulcie nodded cheerfully. "So I heard," she said, "that is why I decided to propose today. And if you refuse to marry me, John, a year will be a long time to go following you around Europe."

Her blue eyes plaintively viewed the apple tree. John, have you any idea why Aunt Dulcine left her money to me, upon condition that I should not marry a Prim?

"There was," John replied, "an old love affair between your departed aunt, and my father. She refused to marry him, I believe, because she was rich, and he poor, and then with the inconsistency of woman, never forgave him, when later he did marry my mother. The present will, however, was probably drawn with a fact in mind of my general unsuitability. Why a possible thought of marriage between you and I should have occurred to her, I cannot understand."

"Dulcie hummed another note of her song."

"I told Aunt that I intended to marry you, John," she said, "I always have."

"My dear, my dear," sighed the man, "look at my hair, it is growing white."

"I have looked," remarked the girl, "I like it that way, movie-actorish."

"And even if I loved you," he went on, "do you think I would allow you to make so great a sacrifice?"

"You do love me," Dulcie said confidently, "I tested you John, before I decided to propose; you are jealous."

"One may be jealous, and still not love," he defended.

"And," she continued calmly, "you mislead me terribly, when I was away."

"How could you know?" he questioned miserably.

There was no sympathy in Dulcie's merry glance.

"I saw the glad look in your eyes the day I came back," she told him.

"I am a failure," the man said sadly. "I have no right to hope for or expect happiness. I have failed in everything. My mother with her savings sent me abroad to study art, to realize for her the dreams of a lifetime. And I came back with only my pitiful shavings."

"Where you to blame," cried Dulcie, "because your mother had set her heart upon making an artist out of a business man?"

"A business man?" contemptuously repeated John Prim, his voice broke. "When I came home to ruin the business under my supervision, that my father had built through years?"

"You know very well," Dulcie returned, "that was ruined your father's business, and you had no power to prevent it. You shall not wrong my future husband, John, and as for that matter, I, too, am a failure. I failed mother in refusing to marry the pop-eyed young Van Huxton, of her choice; and I failed Dad at the start, in not being the son of his desire."

"Now," the gay note of her laughter rippled, "I have failed Aunt Dulcine, handing over her fortune to a graceless nephew."

John Prim jumped to his feet.

"Dulcie," he cried, "surely you have not been so rash as to waive claim to that legacy."

"Surely I have," answered Dulcie pleasantly, "its condition is impossible. And though we may have failed others, John, we have not failed the test of love. For here we are quarreling as to which shall make the greater sacrifice for the other. And as love is the greatest thing in the world—"

Close in his eager arms, her pleadings ended. And after a time, when John raised the girl's radiant face to his own, the tired lines about his mouth vanished in the ineffable youth of his smile.

Dulcie hummed a bar of her spring song; then, "Mr. and Mrs. John Prim," she said, "what a time you did give me, proposing."

THE KITCHEN CABINET

"My candle burnt at both ends; it will not last the night. But, oh, my feet, and oh, my friends—it gives a lovely light."

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

A good dish of beans may be prepared in a short time if the following is used:

Baked Beans.—Wash and soak a pound of lima beans over night. In the morning put them in plenty of water and simmer until tender; then drain and put into a bean pot or baking dish with salt, pepper, and one-fourth of a pound of bacon which has been put through the meat grinder, a tablespoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of molasses and one tablespoonful of grated onion. Add enough water to come to the top of the beans and bake until a golden brown.

Raisin Bread.—Take one cupful of cornmeal, graham flour and rye flour, two and one-half cupfuls of milk, one-half cupful of molasses, one cupful of seedless raisins, one teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of soda. Mix and beat well. Break a yolk with butter, oil, two-thirds full and steam three and one-half hours. Then place in a hot oven for fifteen minutes to dry off, removing the cover of the mold.

Lemon Butter for Tarts.—Put over one cupful of water in a saucepan; when boiling hot add one tablespoonful of flour mixed with a little cold water to pour, cook until smooth, then boil ten minutes. Add an egg which has been beaten with one-half cupful of sugar and a little salt. Bring to the boiling point, add the rim from a lemon finely grated and three tablespoonfuls of juice. Remove at once from the heat and beat two minutes. When cold it is ready to fill tart shells.

Mixed Lamb Sandwiches.—Take two cupfuls of lean cooked lamb, chopped, add two tablespoonfuls of capers ground with the meat, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of paprika, one-half teaspoonful of dry mustard and one teaspoonful of salt. Mix well and spread on slices of bran or whole wheat bread which has been buttered.

Frosting.—Take three cupfuls of confectioner's sugar, one whole egg, three tablespoonfuls of cream. Add the sugar to the other ingredients a little at a time. Spread on the cookies when nearly cold.

THE LITTLE GIRL

By HELEN WAITE MUNRO

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

Nurse Crane was really responsible for it all. When she saw wealthy Charles Ladd's room full of overflowing with beautiful flowers, she suggested that he send a few to "the little girl across the hall who had none."

Disappointed Charles Ladd gladly agreed upon the suggestion, without knowing that the "little girl" was little only in Nurse Crane's eyes—had, in fact, reached the mature age of nineteen.

"Who was lovely enough to send me these?" Lois Wilson queried as she snatched the roses eagerly and cuddled them against her cheek.

"Oh, a little boy across the hall, who had more than he wanted," Nurse Crane carelessly said, and immediately went away and forgot all about it.

Lois sent a note of thanks the very next day. She printed it, to make sure "the little boy" could read it—rather crooked printing at that—apparently so, of course, he printed his reply, and the childlike correspondence was doubled until his broken leg had mended enough to allow him to go to the piazza, the very same day that she took her first trip there.

It was Nurse Crane, as it happened, who introduced the two, and her surprise at the misunderstanding was equal to theirs at finding each other again.

"Shall I play marbles with you, or will you play dolls with me?" Lois asked after the first astonished question and answer were over.

"After as long as we play together together, I don't quarrel," he responded, deciding that the hospital was not quite the dreary place he had, up to now, considered it.

The morning passed quickly, with much of confidence and friendly conversation. Following until the two felt like very old acquaintances. Then came a heavy shower, pouring rain, made the piazza impossible. Lois in her room gave up to the queer bodily aches and pains that had been growing more and more troublesome through the night, and to the queerer humors which had been developing for several days.

Mr. Gordon looked grave when he found her so.

Meanwhile, Charles was having troubles of his own. For several days he had been annoyed by a very uncomfortable little conscience. Now he began to realize clearly the fact that he, an honorable, upright young man, engaged with all due formality to Miss Sylvia Preston and receiving daily dainty notes from her in her distant home, was falling deeply in love with Miss Wilson.

When at last that long, dreary day had worn to a close and Charles was trying to forget his perplexities and settle down for the night, his attention was attracted to a subdued commotion across the hall. At last a low moan reached him. He rang his bell furiously and a nurse responded. His anxious inquiries drew forth little information, however.

He lay back on his pillow, great beads of perspiration standing on his forehead. "Lois—Lois," he whispered, and knew that in losing her he had lost his mate—the one woman designed for him.

It was thus that Nurse Crane found him when she made her morning rounds. She looked keenly at his white, set face, smiled a wise little smile and said softly:

"I wouldn't worry. She is better, you know."

"She! Do you mean Lois?" Charles sat straight up, regardless of the injured leg.

"Why, yes," Nurse Crane looked puzzled. "Didn't you know she was taken worse yesterday and they had to operate in the night? She has been very low, but her condition is quite satisfactory now," she went on, noticing the anguished bewilderment in his eyes, "and if all goes well she will soon be back in her old room."

"Did you care so much?" she said. "More than all the world," he whispered, and closed his eyes as she tipped from the room.

The days went by with Lois gaining slowly.

On the day he was first to visit Lois he waited impatiently for the appointed time, firm in this determination. Main time broke the tediousness of his waiting. There was the usual violet envelope—the note was short—this time—his face altered strangely as he read. Sylvia, his old pal, had found the same wonderful experience that had come to him. She felt she must tell him and break the engagement before his homecoming. Her heart ached for him, but frankness was the only way.

The clock struck three. Without waiting for the nurse, he made his way with surprising quickness across the narrow hall and through the half-open door. Lois was lying, frail and sweet, looking deep into the heart of one of his roses as though to read some wordless message there.

His eyes gave the message the rose had failed to convey, and here answered the light in his. His hands clasped hers tightly and—

A gasp from the doorway. Nurse Crane stood there, on her face a mixture of bewilderment and surprised satisfaction.

"I suppose I am responsible for this," she said, after a moment. Then, bending closer the elderly face on which no romance had ever left its imprint, she added softly:

"Bless you, my children! How fast you have both grown up!"

HAD NEW TELEGRAPHIC IDEA

German System of Communication in Warfare Was Something of an Innovation Then.

During the war the scientific world was much interested by the report that the German army was using a method of communication known as "telegraphy through the ground."

Subsequent investigation by the interested nations appeared to show that the method was a compromise between wireless and one-wire telegraphy.

The two communication stations were not connected by wire. A wire was placed along the fighting front with both ends extending into the ground, and current from a battery, or a kind of apparatus, was conveyed along it. Instead of parallel to the wire, and some distance in and out of it was a similar wire, in which current was induced by the first, thus permitting the sending of signals.

The method is thus broadly similar to wireless, except that the ground forms the medium, instead of the air. One would imagine, however, that although the method has the advantage that there are no intervening wires to be cut, it would be a very simple system to tap.

New York's Sanitary District's.

New York has four square miles of sanitary districts with over 250,000 population per square mile. The New York city 1920 census committee, Dr. Walter Lindley, executive secretary, has issued the following statement:

"The permanent map for the taking and tabulating of the population of New York on which the census of 1920 was enumerated has 3,427 sanitary district areas. Sixty-six of these in 1910 whose acreage totaled 2,896 then had a population of 1,298,637, an average of 453 persons per acre. If the whole area of New York in 1910 had been populated as densely as these 2,896 acres the equivalent of the whole population of the United States, and then some,

as in 1910, could have been packed within the limits of Greater New York."

This number of persons per acre in congested districts is now reduced to 302, the statement adds.

Of Archeological Interest.

An interesting sequel has occurred to the fire which recently gutted All Saints' church, Petham, near Canterbury, says London Answers. During the examination of the walls with a view to reconstruction there were discovered beneath a layer of plaster paintings of two consecration crosses in colors, finely preserved, probably of the Thirteenth century. It is anticipated that from these it will be possible to determine the approximate date of the consecration of the church.

Arrangements have been made for the careful removal of all the plaster and other interesting and, from an archeological point of view, valuable discoveries are expected.

Greatest Collection of Americana.

A wonderful new library is about being built in connection with the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and when it is finished it will house the greatest collection of Americana in the world. The collection and library are the gift of William C. Clements, a member of the board of regents of the university. The best part of his life and a great part of his fortune was spent in the collection of rare books of American history. The volumes alone are said to be valued at $300,000.

Nearly Accurate.

The standard kilogram weights from which all other weights in the United States derive their calibration have just been checked by the bureau of standards and found to be accurate to within two one hundred millionth of their mass.

Necessity for Saving.

Any man who cannot save money is bound to be dependent on relatives or charity when he attains old age and is unable to earn a salary.

Must First Believe.

Belief is power. Only insofar as a man believes strongly, mightily, can he act cheerfully or do anything that is worth the doing.—F. W. Robertson.

Don't Risk Neglect.

Don't neglect a constant back-ache, sharp, darting pains, or urinary disorders. The danger of dropsy or Bright's disease is too serious to ignore. Use Doan's Kidney Pills as have your neighbors. Ask your neighbor! A Berlin case.

Mrs. W. J. Massey, William St., says: "I have been taking Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for about four years and don't know how I could have made out without them. They certainly are the grandest medicine I ever used. For years complaints of the kidneys have caused me much suffering. Rheumatic pains in my lower limbs and shoulders was one of the worst features, although by spells I have had many other symptoms, directly traceable to the effects of kidney trouble. Backaches and disorders of my kidneys have proven of great annoyance at different times. During the four years I have used Doan's Kidney Pills, however, they have kept my kidneys in splendid condition and have never failed to cure me of these attacks." (Statement given March 8, 1912.)

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Massey had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Odd English Currency.

During the civil war in England some quaint pieces of money were struck. Charles I. minted most of the plate that was given to him by the Cavaliers, in order to pay his troops. Proper machinery not being available, coins were struck in the most rough and ready way. They were of all shapes and sizes, and made of any metal from gold to pewter. In those troubled times many towns issued their own money in the form of tokens, which were usually oval or oblong in shape and made of base metals.

It Takes Leather To Stand Weather Summer Or Winter

"Leather-Built Shoes
for Mine
every Time"

"THE shoes I used to buy were good for just about one season, but this 'Atlantic' shoe, made by Friedman-Shelby in St. Louis, fits better and wears longer than any I have ever tried, and it has real class. This 'Atlantic' shoe is one member of the Friedman-Shelby 'All-Leather' line—a line made in the twenty-five large specialty factories of the International Shoe Company in St. Louis. The 'Pacific' shoe for women is of equal character and style and both brands are worn by men and women in every part of the country."

Try the Friedman-Shelby All-Leather Shoe

"Cut open any Friedman-Shelby shoe and you will see that it is made of good leather through and through, in the hidden parts as well as in those exposed to the eye. Insist on seeing the trade-mark shown herewith."

Don't think that just because summer has arrived you don't need to be particular about your shoes.

It is essential that a shoe subjected to extreme heat not only on the hot pavements and sand but internally from perspiration should be built entirely of leather.

For summer wear for men we suggest a shoe of kangaroo which bears the service of calf, the comfort of kid and the polish of patent leather.

15 of the 85 patients at the orthopedic clinic at Peninsula General Hospital, Monday, were from Worcester County. All were examined and from 80 to 85 per cent can be cured or benefited by their treatment.

Monday, June 19th, will probably afford the only opportunity you will ever have to witness "Flashes of Action." Don't stay away and allow your friends to tell you on the following day about the treat you missed.—Adv.

Off For Homewood.

Professor Eugene Pruitt left Thursday morning for the State Athletic Meet at Homewood, with the 21 boys and 8 girls from Buckingham School who were the winners in the athletic contests at the county.

Berlin is looming up as an aspirant for State Honors, not only coming out first in the county contest, but in the Eastern Shore Meet at Chestertown, helped Worcester County take second place, and as a school was second only in the number of points gained by Eastern and Federalburg, who outnumbered Berlin in entries. We expect to hear good reports from the State Meet.

St. Martin's Notes.

The ladies of St. Martin's M. E. Church are to hold a lawn party on the Church yard Saturday night, June 10th. The public is cordially invited, and a good time is assured.

The Third Quarterly Conference will be held Saturday, June 10th, at 2.30 p. m. All the churches on the charge are expected to have a representative.

Telephone News.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company has completed the distribution of the spring issue of its directory, which comprises thousands of books of this issue.

Each directory contains a list of the subscribers on twelve exchanges of the Company in Wicomico, Dorchester, Somerset and Worcester Counties.

H. W. Carly, Manager for the Company, calls special attention to the pages in the front part of the directory which furnish full information about the different classes of calls and reduced evening and night rates. The Telephone Company further urges the necessity of calling by number. The limits of memory and any change in operating force make it impossible to render good service if connections are asked for by name.

Immense Strawberry Crop.

In this, the fifth week of the harvest, there were shipped Tuesday 199 cars, and Wednesday the cars reached the 200 mark. Of course, this is including the entire belt. Marion has dropped from a 55 car average to 25, but the prices are still holding up. During the month of May there were pulled away from Marion a few more than 500 cars, and a conservative estimate of the value is $1,500 a car. Earlier in the season the estimate was made that the crop would yield $750,000 to Marion. This has been accomplished and when the final accounting is completed it is probable the million dollar mark will have been passed in Somerset County.

Through the balance of the section at least $500,000 has been collected.

Some almost incredible stories are told about this Aladdin wealth. Three "one horse shays" have each carried into the Marion auction block more than 1,400 crates of the finest berries, that brought to the owners more than 8,000 good American dollars. These are the exceptional cases; but the chap who did not bank his $800 or $1,000 from his acre was the exception.—The Wicomico Countian.

Get-Together Meeting
At Ironshire a Success.

The get-together meeting and festival, which was held Saturday evening at Ironshire of the Ironshire Church was an unusual success. The proceeds, which amounted to over $50, will be used on the repairs of the church. The crowd was not so large as usual, due to the stormy weather, but everybody had lots of fun and plenty to eat. An interesting program was rendered by our young people, who were full of life and pep, and that is what we need today to make things go. An address was made by the pastor, Mr. Godwin, which was just to the point and thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present; also, a talk was given by Miss Eloise Kelly, on "What Can Our Boys and Girls of Today Do to Help the Sunday School?" and just as interesting a talk by Miss Warren and Miss Bradford, on "The Welfare of Our Sunday School and What to Do to Make it a Success."

Now we have a wide-awake minister, full of life and ambition and willing and ready to do his part to build up our Sunday School and Church, by giving us service every Sunday. By his great energy and faithfulness he has already doubled his congregation, so it is our duty to stand by him, and help him to make this year our banner year.

PAINT INCREASES VALUE.

The most dilapidated weather-beaten structure in this town, or elsewhere, can be improved, by the mere application of one or more coats of paint.

Not only will the appearance be improved, but, for every dollar so invested, we dare say, you could add five dollars to the selling price of the property. This applies to the interior as well as exterior.

Aside from the increased values for selling purposes, paint is without an equal for preservation.

Long life tells the whole story

A QUALITY suit of clothes lasts longer. A well-built pair of shoes lasts longer. A good automobile lasts longer.

The same standards apply to a battery. Any expert will tell you that long life is the only practical proof a motorist has of quality. A long life battery has to be well-built, has to be made of fine materials, has to give economical performance—else it cannot be long-lived.

LESSON FOR JUNE 11

JEREMIAH CAST INTO PRISON

LESSON TEXT—Jeremiah 38:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be not afraid of their faces: for I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the Lord—Jer. 1:8.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Gen. 39:1-23; Jer. 20:1-18; Luke 2:18-20; Acts 13:1-11; 15:19-24.
PRIMARY TOPIC—How God Cared for Jeremiah.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jeremiah's Bold Truth-telling.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Faithful in the Face of Danger.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From Jeremiah's Character.

1. Jeremiah Predicts the Capture of Jerusalem (vv. 1-3).

1. To Whom—the People (v. 1). Jeremiah had been taken out of the prison by the king (37:17), and ordered confined to the court of the prison (37:21). The people seem to have had free access to him in the court (32:12). From this place of limited confinement Jeremiah announced to the people their approaching captivity.

2. Counsel Given (vv. 2, 3). (1) All that remaineth in the city shall die by the sword, famine and pestilence. (2) He that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live. "He shall have his life for a prey," doubtless means that he shall escape with his life, though losing all else.

11. Jeremiah Accused by the Princes (vv. 4, 5).

1. "He weakeneth the hands of the men and all the people" (v. 4). From a human standpoint what they said was true, but since Jeremiah was but the instrument of God to the nation they ought to have heeded his advice to surrender.

2. "This man seeketh not the welfare of this people, but the hurt" (v. 4). This charge was utterly false. Jeremiah was the best friend of the people, for he faithfully proclaimed to them God's judgment upon them for their sins and advised them how to make the best of their unfortunate situation.

3. The King's Cowardly Act (v. 5). Jeremiah is abandoned by his cowardly friend. The very one whom Jeremiah was trying to help deserted him. The king was afraid of the Chaldeans, the princes, Jeremiah and God.

11. Jeremiah Cast into the Dungeon (v. 6).

This was not a regular prison, but a cistern which had doubtless been emptied of its water during the siege, leaving only "mire" into this mire Jeremiah was cast. The purpose was to let Jeremiah die there. There was no possible way to escape. The king's servants (Jer. 38:7) were not to be trusted.

1. By Whom—Ebed-melech, an Egyptian servant (vv. 7-9). The Jewish prophet whom his own countrymen had tried to destroy in 597 B.C. Gadiah, which may be thought of as fore-shadowing the Gentiles' attitude toward Christ. Though Ebed-melech had a colored skin he was the whitest man in Jerusalem. He was not only sympathetic, but courageous. He went to the king and boldly declared that the princes had done evil in imprisoning Jeremiah (vv. 7-10).

2. The Method (vv. 10-13). The king yielded to his request and furnished a guard to prevent interference with the work of rescue. He let down soft rags and worn-out garments by ropes and instructed Jeremiah to put them under his arms and under the ropes so as to prevent injury to him as he was lifted up. They lifted him out of the cistern and he was permitted the freedom of the court of the prison.

Why did Jeremiah have such a hard time? Why do the purest and best men and women have to suffer? Why are God's prophets unpopular? Jeremiah, the prophet who declared God's power to deliver, goes to prison and suffers. "Why do the righteous suffer" is an age-old question.

1. The power of God is more strikingly shown in deliverance than in keeping from trials. This was so in the case of the Hebrews in the fiery furnace and Daniel in the den of lions.

2. Great gain accrues to the sufferer; e.g. the Hebrews in the fiery furnace were not only kept from being burned, but had walking with them the Son of God; Job through his trials was turned out to the furtherance of God's cause; e.g. Job becomes the priest through whose intercession his friends are pardoned; Paul's sufferings furthered the preaching of the gospel; John through banishment on the Isle of Patmos was given the vision of the Revelation.

Zion.
But Judah shall dwell for ever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation. For I will cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed: for the Lord dwelleth in Zion.—Joel 3:20 and 21.

Be Honest.
Recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men.—Romans 17.

The Perfect Man.
If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man.—James 3:2.

Life's Misfits.
Many a man who might have been a good butler has failed in life, owing to his unwillingness to rear side whisks.

A Chipped Frame.
If a corner is clipped off of a gilt-edge frame camouflage it with chewing gum. Gild with gold paint.

Daily Thought.
The company of just and righteous men is better than wealth and a rich estate.—Euripides.

Jehovah's Blessing

By REV. GEORGE E. GUILLE
Extension Department, Moody
Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT: The Lord bless thee, and keep thee: The Lord make His face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: The Lord lift up His countenance upon thee, and give thee peace.—Numbers 6:24-26.

The music of heaven rings in these words! Three measures of the divine melody ever heard, a bar from the infinite anthem to soothe the spirit with heaven's calm and turn the whole life into a long Sabbath day.

Mark the elements in this benediction, as they reveal God's attitude toward His people and tell of His activities on their behalf.

1. "Jehovah bless thee." You cannot explain that word, "bless." It breathes itself into the soul like a rare perfume, but you cannot tell what it is. It touches the weary life like a tender mother's hand and lifts it up into rest and strength. You know by sweet experience what it is, but you cannot define it. It is the heart of God disclosed. It embraces all other elements found in this benediction: the keeping, the shining face, graciousness, the uplifted countenance, the gift of peace. That is His blessing. Who that has beheld the cross—has seen the Well-Beloved hanging there, can question what that great heart holds for him? "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him freely give us all things?" Oh, let us magnify that word, "bless."

2. "Jehovah make His face shine upon thee." If His blessing reveals His heart, this discovers His nearness. Not afar off, but nigh. Do not think of Him as far away in heaven, veiled away in His own eternity, unknown and unknowable. There is no distance. "Ye who sometime were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ." In that place of nearness, His face shines. What joy to know that the face from which heaven and earth shall flee away and that is against them that do evil, is shining upon those in whose midst He dwells.

3. "Jehovah lift up His countenance upon thee." Frequently have the Lord's people been heard to say that He has hidden His face from them. It cannot be! For He who looks upon His beloved Son with unchanging delight sees you and me ever in Him and cannot turn away from us. If there be hiding, it is you who are doing it, not He. The clouds that obscure the sun do not come from the sun. This attitude explains all else. His grace is His kindness to the soul. Serving Grace is not a frame of mind or a state of soul, but the attitude of God. "By grace are ye saved" and over and over again, because we are always to believe it and become its reality, we should do so, comes the salutation: "Grace be unto you."

But not only in His attitude but in His activities on our behalf do we see how all His heart is occupied for us.

1. Jehovah keep thee. This is our assurance and our security that He who is gracious keeps us for His own. "Kept by the power of God." "Jehovah is thy keeper," says the Psalmist, and they are safe indeed whom He keeps. But not alone as His own possession. He will keep that life in all its daily affairs as though you were His only child and His solitary care. "Jehovah keep thee." That implies what Scripture elsewhere emphasizes and what every hour of your experience has proved: that you cannot keep yourself. "I am not being put to shame," says the apostle, "for I have committed unto him." O soul, if He is not keeping thee, thou art being put to shame. Every manifestation of the flesh puts you to shame. Every impatient word, every unworthy deed puts you to shame. He can keep you and He will if you but give Him a chance. Turn that life over to Him and see what He can make out of it, see how He can keep it in holy triumph and joy.

2. The last element—last sweet, lingering strain of the anthem—peace. "Jehovah give thee peace." In all the world universe, in all the tongues that men have spoken, there is no greater word. First salutation of the risen Christ, "Peace be unto you," last thing in His valedictory: "Peace I leave with you." "He is our peace." O soul, anxious, care-worn, tossed and driven, fold this blessing of God to thy poor heart. His own peace is for your present possession. He desires you to have it.

Have you seen the full significance of this blessing? The divine name occurs three times, and three is the number of the God-head, sum of all divine fullness. The connection of the three Persons with the three parts of the blessing can be easily traced. All that God is is thus engaged for us: Father, Son and Holy Spirit occupied with us and for us, and all that we may be blessed. Oh, who would live an unblest life? Who would be so miserable? Give me this blessing of God and I am rich indeed. My heaven has begun with its holiness and its joy!

DULCIE PROPOSES

By AGNES GRAHAM BROGAN

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

The man and the girl sat on the bank of a stream that, leaping from winter bondage, went leaping across its shining stones. In a blossoming tree above the two, robins twittered joyously.

The man stretched long and lank, at the girl's side, had tired-old lines about his mouth, but his eyes were as brightly young as his rare smile.

"John Prim," said the girl, "I love you."

The man looked perplexed, unbelieving; then frowned.

"Love is no subject for joke, Dulcie," he replied.

The girl trifled a bar of a gay little song.

"I do not joke, when I say that I love you, John," she returned seriously.

"Such a declaration, should come from me, and not the woman," she suggested.

"But you won't make it," she answered him, and laughed.

"I brought you here," John Prim said, "to tell you that I am going away, it may be for a year, perhaps longer. The business needs a foreign representative, and I have signed to go."

Dulcie nodded cheerfully.

"So I heard," she said, "that is why I decided to propose today. And if you refuse to marry me, John, a year will be a long time to go following you around Europe."

between you and I should have occurred to her, I cannot understand."

"Dulcie hummed another note of her song."

"I told Aunt that I intended to marry you, John," she said, "I always have."

"My dear, my dear," sighed the man, "look at my hair, it is growing white."

"I have looked," remarked the girl, "I like it that way, movie-actress."

"And even if I loved you," he went on, "do you think I would allow you to make so great a sacrifice?"

"You do love me," Dulcie said comfortably. "I tested you John, before I decided to propose; you are jealous—"

"One may be jealous, and still not love," he defended.

"And?" she continued calmly, "you missed me terribly, when I was away."

"How could you know?" he questioned miserably.

"There was no sympathy in Dulcie's merry glance."

"I saw the glad look in your eyes the day I came back," she told him.

"I am a failure," the man said sadly. "I have no right to hope for or expect happiness. I have failed in everything. My mother with her savings sent me abroad to study art, to realize for her the dreams of a lifetime. And I came back with only my pitiful daubings—"

"Were you to blame," cried Dulcie, "because your mother had set her heart upon making an artist out of a business man?"

Close in his eager arms, her pleadings ended. And after a time, when John raised the girl's radiant face to his own, the tired lines about his mouth vanished in the ineffable youth of his smile.

Dulcie hummed a bar of her spring song; then, "My, my, John Prim," she said, "what a time you did give me, proposing."

THE KITCHEN CABINET

"My candle burns at both ends; it will not last the night; but, oh, my friends—give a lovely light."

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

A good dish of beans may be prepared in a short time if the following is used:

Baked Beans.—Wash and soak a pound of lima beans over night. In the morning put them on in plenty of water and simmer until tender; then drain and put into a bean pot or baking dish, with salt, pepper, and one-fourth of a pound of bacon, which has been put through the meat grinder, a tablespoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of molasses and one tablespoonful of grated onion. Add enough water to come to the top of the beans and bake until a golden brown.

Raisin Brown Bread.—Take one cupful of cornmeal, graham flour and rye flour, two and one-half cupfuls of milk, one-half cupful of molasses, one cupful of seedless raisins, one teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of soda. Mix and beat well. Brush a mold with butter, fill it two-thirds full and steam three and one-half hours. Then place in a hot oven for fifteen minutes to dry off, removing the cover of the mold.

Lemon Butter for Tarts.—Put over one cupful of water in a saucepan, when boiling hot add one tablespoonful of flour mixed with a little cold water to pour, cook until smooth, then boil ten minutes. Add an egg which has been beaten with one-half cupful of sugar and a little salt. Bring to the boiling point, add the rind from a lemon finely grated and three tablespoonfuls of juice. Remove at once from the heat and beat two minutes. When cold it is ready to fill tart shells.

Mince.—Lamb Sandwiches.—Take two cupfuls of lean cooked lamb, chopped, add two tablespoonfuls of capers ground with the meat, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of paprika, one-half teaspoonful of dry mustard and one teaspoonful of salt. Mix well and spread on slices of bread or whole wheat bread which has been buttered.

Frosting.—Take three cupfuls of confectioner's sugar, one whole egg, three tablespoonfuls of cream. Add the sugar to the other ingredients a little at a time. Spread on the cookies when nearly cold.

THE LITTLE GIRL

By HELEN WAITE MUNRO

Copyright, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Nurse Crane was really responsible for it all. When she saw wealthy Charles Ladd's room full of overflowing with beautiful flowers, she suggested that he send a few to "the little girl across the hall," who had none.

Big-hearted Charles Ladd gladly acted upon the suggestion, without knowing that the "little girl" was little only in Nurse Crane's eyes—had, in fact, reached the mature age of nineteen.

"Who was lovely enough to send matched the roses eagerly and cuddled them against her cheek."

"Oh, a little boy across the hall, who had more than he wanted," Nurse Crane carelessly said, and immediately went away and forgot all about it.

Lois sent a note of thanks the very next day. She printed it, to make sure the "little boy" could read it—rather than printing at that—appendix. So, of course, he printed his reply, and the childlike correspondence flourished until his broken leg had mended enough to allow him to go to the piazza, the very same day that she took her first trip there.

It was Nurse Crane, as it happened, who introduced the two, and her surprise at the misunderstanding was equal to theirs at finding each other grown up.

"Shall I play marbles with you, or will you play dolls with me?" Lois asked after the first astonished questions and answers were over.

"Either, as long as we play together nicely and don't quarrel," he responded, deciding that the hospital was not quite the dreary place he had, up to now, considered it.

The morning passed quickly, with conversation and the day, and the two felt like very old acquaintances. Then came a day when heavy, pouring rain made the piazza impossible. Lois in her room gave up to the queer bodily aches, and pains that had been growing more and more troublesome through the night, and to the queer heart-ache which had been developing for several days.

Dr. Gordon looked grave when he found her so.

Meanwhile, Charles was having troubles of his own. For several days he had been annoyed by a very uncomfortable little conscience. Now he began to realize clearly the fact that he, an honorable, upright young man, engaged with all due formality to Miss Sylvia Preston and receiving daily dainty notes from her in her distant home, was falling deeply in love with Miss Wilson.

When at last that long, dreary day had worn to a close and Charles was trying to forget his perplexities and settle down for the night, his attention was attracted to a subdued commotion across the hall. At last a low moan reached him. He rang his bell furiously and a nurse responded. His anxious inquiries drew forth little information, however.

He lay back on his pillow, great beads of perspiration standing on his forehead. "Lois—Lois," he whispered, and knew that in losing her he had lost his mate—the one woman designed for him.

It was thus that Nurse Crane found him when she made her morning rounds. She looked keenly at his white, set face, smiled a wise little smile and said softly:

"I wouldn't worry. She is better, you know."

"She? Do you mean Lois?" Charles sat straight up, regardless of the injured leg.

"Why, yes," Nurse Crane looked puzzled. "Didn't you know she was taken away yesterday and they had to operate in the night? She has been very low, but her condition is quite satisfactory now," she went on, noticing the anguished bewilderment in his eyes, "and if all goes well she will soon be back in her old room."

"Did you care so much?" she said. "More than all the world," he whispered, and closed his eyes as she tipped from the room.

The days went by with Lois gaining slowly.

On the day he was first to visit Lois he waited impatiently for the appointed time, firm in this determination. Mail time broke the tediousness of his waiting. There was the usual violet-scented envelope—the note was short as he read. Sylvia, his old pal, had found the same wonderful experience that had come to him. She felt she must tell him and break the engagement before his homecoming. Her heart ached for him, but frankness was the only way.

The clock struck three. Without waiting for the nurse, he made his way with surprising quickness across the narrow hall and through the half-open door. Lois was lying, frail and sweet, looking deep into the heart of one of his roses as though to read some wordless message there.

His eyes gave the message the rose had failed to convey, and here on avered the light in his. His hands clasped hers tightly and—

A gasp from the doorway. Nurse Crane stood there, on her face a mixture of bewilderment and surprised satisfaction.

"I suppose I am responsible for this," she said, after a moment. Then, bending closer the elderly face on which no romance had ever left its imprint, she added softly:

"Bless you, my children! How fast you have both grown up!"

HAD NEW TELEGRAPHIC IDEA

German System of Communication in Warfare Was Something of an Innovation Then.

The two communication stations were not connected by wire. A wire was placed along the fighting front with both ends extending into the ground, and current from a battery or cell or kindred apparatus was conveyed along it. Installed parallel to the wire, and some distance in advance of it, was a similar wire, in which current was induced by the first, thus permitting the sending of signals.

The method is thus broadly similar to wireless, except that the ground forms the medium, instead of the air. One would imagine, however, that although the method has the advantage that there are no intervening wires to be cut, it would be a very simple system to tap.

New York's Sanitary Districts.

New York has four square miles of sanitary districts with over 250,000 population per square mile. The New York city 1920 census committee, Dr. Walter Laidlow, executive secretary has issued the following statement:

"The permanent map for the taking and tabulating of the population of New York on which the census of 1920 was conducted has 3,427 sanitary district areas, sixty-six of these in 1910 those average totaled 2,806 then had a population of 1,298,657, an average of 453 persons per acre. If the whole area of New York in 1910 had been populated as densely as these 2,806 areas the equivalent of the whole population of the United States, and then some.

as in 1910, could have been packed within the limits of Greater New York."

This number of persons per acre in congested districts is now reduced to 302, the statement adds.

Of Archeological Interest.

An interesting sequel has occurred to the fire which recently gutted All Saints' church, Petham, near Canterbury, says London Answers. During the examination of the walls with a view to reconstruction there were discovered beneath a layer of plaster paintings of two consecration crosses in colors, finely preserved, probably of the Thirteenth century. It is anticipated that from these it will be possible to determine the approximate date of the consecration of the church.

Arrangements have been made for the careful removal of all the plaster and other interesting and, from an archeological point of view, valuable discoveries are expected.

Greatest Collection of Americana.

A wonderful new library is about being built in connection with the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and when it is finished it will house the greatest collection of Americana in the world. The collection and library are the gift of William C. Clements, a member of the board of regents of the university. The best part of his life and a great part of his fortune was spent in the collection of rare books of American history. The volumes alone are said to be valued at $300,000.

Nearly Accurate.

The standard kilogram weights from which all other weights in the United States derive their calibration have just been checked by the bureau of standards and found to be accurate to within two one hundred millionths of their mass.

Necessity for Saving.

Must First Believe.

Belief is power. Only insofar as a man believes strongly, mightily, can he act cheerfully or do anything that is worth the doing.—F. W. Robertson.

Don't Risk Neglect.

Don't neglect a constant backache, sharp, darting pains, or urinary disorders. The danger of Dropsy or Bright's disease is too serious to ignore. Use Doan's Kidney Pills as have your neighbors. Ask your neighbor! A Berlin case.

Mrs. W. J. Massey, William St., says: "I have been taking Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for about four years and don't know how I could have made out without them. They certainly are the greatest medicine I ever used. For years complaints of the kidneys have caused me much suffering. Rheumatic pains in my lower limbs and shoulders was one of the worst features, although by spells I have had many other symptoms, directly traceable to the effects of kidney trouble. Backaches and disorders of my kidneys have proven of great annoyance at different times. During the four years I have used Doan's Kidney Pills, however, they have kept my kidneys in splendid condition and have never failed to cure me of these attacks." (Statement given March 8, 1912.)

On January 14, 1921, Mrs. Massey said: "I always have the highest praise for Doan's Kidney Pills. They have done me good when I have had to use them. I seldom have a backache now and give the credit to Doan's."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Massey had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mrs. Buffalo, N. Y.

Odd English Currency.

During the civil war in England some quaint pieces of money were struck. Charles I minted most of the plate that was given to him by the Cavaliers, in order to pay his troops. Proper machinery not being available, coins were struck in the most rough-and-ready way. They were of all shapes and sizes, and made of any metal from gold to pewter. In those troubled times many towns issued their own money in the form of tokens, which were usually oval or oblong in shape and made of base metals.

It Takes Leather To Stand Weather Summer Or Winter

"Leather-Built Shoes

"THE shoes I used to buy were good for just about one season, but this 'Atlantic' shoe, made by Friedman-Shelby in St. Louis, fits better and wears longer than any I have ever tried, and it has real class. This 'Atlantic' shoe is one member of the Friedman-Shelby All-Leather Line—a line made in the twenty-five large specialty factories of the International Shoe Company in St. Louis. The 'Pacific' Shoe for women is of equal character and style and both brands are worn by men and women in every part of the country."

Try the Friedman-Shelby All-Leather Shoe.

"Cut open any Friedman-Shelby shoe and you will see that it is made of good leather through and through, in the hidden parts as well as in those exposed to the eye."

Don't think that just because summer has arrived you don't need to be particular about your shoes.

It is essential that a shoe subjected to extreme heat not only on the hot pavements and sand but internally from perspiration should be built entirely of leather.

For summer wear for men we suggest a shoe of kangaroo which bears the service of calf, the comfort of kid and the polish of patent leather.

Immense Strawberry Crop.

In this, the fifth week of the harvest, there were shipped Tuesday 199 cars, and Wednesday the cars reached the 200 mark. Of course, this is including the entire belt. Marion has dropped from a 55-car average to 25, but the prices are still holding up. During the month of May there were pulled away from Marion a few more than 500 cars, and a conservative estimate of the value is $1,500 a car. Earlier in the season the estimate was made that the crop would yield $750,000 to Marion. This has been accomplished and when the final accounting is completed it is probable the million dollar mark will have been passed in Somerset County.

Through the balance of the section at least $500,000 has been collected.

Some almost incredible stories are told about this Aladdin wealth. Three "one horse plays" have each carried into the Marion auction block more than 1,400 crates of the finest berries, that brought to the owners more than 8,000 good American dollars. These are the exceptional cases; but the chap who did not bank his $800 or $1,000 from his acre was the exception.—The Wicomico Countian.

Get-Together Meeting At Ironshire a Success.

The get-together meeting and festival, which was held Saturday evening on the lawn of Ironshire Church, was an unusual success. The proceeds, which amounted to over $50, will be used on the repairs of the church. The crowd was not so large as usual, due to the stormy weather, but everybody had lots of fun and plenty to eat. An interesting program was rendered by our young people, who are full of life and pep, and that is what we need today to make things go. An address was made by the pastor, Mr. Godwin, which was just to the point and thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present; also, a talk was given by Miss Eloise Kelly, on "What Can Our Boys and Girls of Today Do to Help the Sunday School?" and just as interesting a talk by Miss Warren and Miss Bradford, on "The Welfare of Our Sunday School and What to Do to Make it a Success."

Now we have a wide-awake minister, full of life and ambition and willing and ready to do his part to build up our Sunday School and Church, by giving us service every Sunday. By his great energy and faithfulness he has already doubled his congregation, so it is our duty to stand by him, and help him to make this year our banner year. Contributed.

Club Girls' Outing.

The 4H Club Girls of Worcester County had their second annual camp outing at Ocean City from June 6th to 9th. Twelve girls were brought by their parents and friends to the beach on Tuesday afternoon, that they might enjoy this happy occasion. A six o'clock picnic lunch on the sand was a very delightful hour for all.

The absence of other girls who were entitled to attend the camp because of their excellent work through the year, brought many expressions of regret from those in attendance. Through letters received by the club leader from those who found at the last moment that they could not attend, because of their urgent needs at home, the 4H club spirit of courage and unselfishness was shown.

At 7:15 each evening the club girls and beach visitors gathered for Vesper services. These were conducted by Blanche Reid, Frances Hancock and Gladys Bull. Talks were made to the girls by Revs. McGuire, Smith and Burk, each giving to the girls visions of their future. The high ideals and beautiful life that were laid before them will have lasting impressions. After these services till 9:30, the evenings were spent in inspirational club songs and games for mental training. Those receiving prizes for the best memory tests were, Elizabeth Laws and Sarah Lynch of Ocean City, and Frances Hancock, of Girdlestone.

Miss Adice S. Jones, State Girls' Club Agent, gave athletic exercises, impressing upon the girls the necessity of such to make a healthy body. Her instructions in hat making were very interesting, and each girl took home with her a hat made by her own hands.

Mrs. Bell, District Agent, gave a talk on health. The girls were weighed and measured, and those who were found above and below normal were taught what was necessary to bring themselves to normal.

She also taught them how to raise poultry for profit, giving them a demonstration in culling their poultry flock.

Miss Venia M. Keller, State Home Demonstration Agent, gave the girls an inspirational talk on Thursday evening.

This Friday afternoon in the State school building, an exhibit of club work will be made, and a program including a Pageant, "The Spirit of the Home," will be presented by the club girls and their club friends among the Ocean City girls.

In high appreciation of these three days of inspiration and happiness, the club girls and their county leader, Miss Walter, extend to Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Collins and the members of the County Women's Club their sincere gratitude for shelter at Tourist Inn and the aid in financing the camp.

Eastern Shore League
Opens Base Ball Season

Organized base ball began on the Eastern Shore last Friday with great crowds and enthusiasm. At Cambridge the home team defeated Laurel 2 to 0. At Salisbury the game was won by Crisfield 14 to 4, and Parkesley, at Pocomoke, won the first game 6 to 4. In the return games, Saturday, Laurel won from Cambridge 4 to 3; Crisfield from Salisbury 4 to 3, and Parkesley again defeated Pocomoke 8 to 7.

The Home of the Soul

In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach, most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter.

WHITE BEARS ON MT. RAINIER

Exploring Party Finds Strange Animals and Other Matters of More Than Passing Interest.

The Landry-Bergues party attempting a midwinter ascent of Mount Rainier, made some scientific discoveries while encamped at an altitude of 9,000 feet awaiting improved weather conditions. First, several members of the exploring party discovered that an almost pure white bear of medium size inhabits the big mountain and its environs.

The bear, which appears to be identical in shape and movement to the common black bear of the forests, apparently lives in ice caves and snow fissures.

Another find is the frost flower. This wonderful plant is found only where snow is eternal. Bursting from the frozen snow it grows the first day to the height of three feet, flowers the third day and the fourth day resolves into mysterious seed pods, then as suddenly dissolves itself. The stem, leaves and flowers are white. The stalk is one inch in diameter, the leaves—three in number—in the broadest part are one inch and a half in width, covered with unblemished cones of snow. The flower fully expanded is star-shaped. Efforts are to be made to gather seed of this snow plant for propagation in artificially cooled botanical gardens in Washington.

The spiral snowdrifts are another curiosity never before seen. At the 9,000-foot height snow drifts in a circular manner, causing it to pile up in spiral or spring-like columns 10 to 20 feet thick. At the top a weird little curlicue of fresh snow tips the frosty drift, making of it a vegetable white toadstool—Longmire, Wash. correspondence in New York Sun.

AFRICAN TRIALS BY ORDEAL

As in the Middle Ages, the Accused Has Little Chance of Proving His Innocence.

In one part of Africa a native who has fallen foul of the law can only prove himself innocent by swimming through a pool infested with crocodiles. If he gets through safely—almost an impossible feat—he is a free man.

Not so dangerous, but exceedingly unpleasant, is the "ordeal by pepper." The accused is given a pipe—says Dugald Campbell, in his book entitled "The Heart of Bantu"—and this is filled to the top of the bowl with a mixture of tobacco, red pepper, and one or two lesser ingredients. The offender has to smoke this peppery mixture until all the tobacco is smoked to dust. Should he be forced to spit, he is considered guilty.

Mr. Campbell's book is full of interest. He tells us that dolls, in Bantu land, are made from cornucopia. Clay is used for the heads, and beads for the eyes and teeth.

Should a child die, the doll is handed to a sister, but if there is no sister, the doll is buried with all ceremony in a grave beside that of the dead child.

"Honi Soit"

He gazed at her faultless, sun-kissed feet, then his eye traveled upward a little—there was a bit too much shapely sliten leg visible, he leaned forward and pulled down her flimsy negligee. Not that he minded, himself, but he thought of the others who might see her.

She did not rebuke him; she even continued to smile as he put his hand on her bare shoulder and intimately adjusted the ribbon strap.

Then he stepped back, and, head on side, looked at her with satisfaction, and crossing the big show window, he called into the depths of the store: "Say, there, I've finished dressing the window with the exhibit of ladies' underwear and negligees. Do you want to have a look at it before we put the shades?"—Judge.

Compact Lantern.

Measuring but six by five and one-half inches, an electric lamp has been placed on the market and is available for general use. The case is made of heavy metal thoroughly nickel-plated. A standard low-voltage tungsten lamp is used, well protected by a wire guard. A ball serves as a handle, and the hook on it permits it to be hung on a rod, nail or hook. The ball can be rotated so that the lantern may be turned to any angle desired and carried upward, downward or sideways.

With the dry battery used in this lamp it will give about 20 hours' continuous service and about 40 hours' intermittent service—Washington Star.

He Had Got Rid of It.

Barney Barnard is responsible for the story of the Gentle who bought a packet of cigarettes from Mr. Isaac Isaacstein, his regular tobaccoist. "Isaac," said the customer, after the purchase had been completed, "you gave me a bad quarter in my change the other night." "Impossible," answered Isaac. "I never took or gave a bad coin away in my life. With my 40 years' experience in handling money, I can tell by the touch at once; physical instinct, my boy. I suppose you managed to get rid of it?" "Yes," was the reply. "I have just paid it to you for these cigarettes."

Health Maxims From Benedictines.

In the early Middle Ages the Benedictine monks had their own school of public health and hygiene. Dr. John Rührich of the Maryland College of Physicians and Surgeons, tells about it in a review of a new translation of the regimen of Salerno. Salerno, Dr. Rührich points out, was the place where the Benedictine medical school was located. It was a sort of offshoot of the great Benedictine monastery at Monte Cassino, halfway between Rome and Naples.

Harvey—McCabe.

A wedding of interest to many in this county was that of Miss Gertrude McCabe, of Selbyville, and William Minton Harvey, son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Harvey, of Chester, Pa., which took place Wednesday, June 14th, at 1 p. m., at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William R. McCabe. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. T. F. Beauchamp, pastor of the Methodist Church. Mrs. Edith Whaley played the wedding march. Miss Elizabeth McCabe, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and the best man was Elwood Harvey, a younger brother of the groom.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white crepe satin with a veil and orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and white centaureas. The maid of honor wore a peach georgette gown and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The decorations were pink roses, white lilies and ferns.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey will reside at Chester, Pa. The wedding was attended by many relatives and near friends of the bride and groom, who wish for the marital bark a safe and happy voyage through life.

From present indications, it is not likely that Congress will adjourn before sometime in August. The tariff debate drags on, owing to the fact that different sections of the country are insistent upon their demands for legislation favorable to their business interests. Senators have been at their desks for weeks and until Friday night they have been in continuous session from 11 o'clock in the morning until 10:30 at night.

Ralph Richard Elliott, of near Salisbury, a high school graduate this spring, was drowned Sunday while trying to swim with a company of friends in Leonard's Mill Pond, on the Delmar Road.

Why Suffer from Rheumatism.

Do you know that nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment? The pain may be relieved by a simple massage and rest, and that certainly means a great deal to any one afflicted with rheumatism.

WILL CLOSE HISTORIC ALLEY

London Pathway Which Figures in Pepper's Diary Gives Way to March of Improvements.

Pope's Head alley, a turning off Cornhill, a picture of which appeared in the Times on April 11, will shortly disappear. Lloyd's Bank is going to rebuild its premises at the end of Lombard street, between that street and Cornhill, and to make this possible Pope's Head alley will have to be closed and another thoroughfare constructed in its place, says the London Times.

The alley, which dates back to the days of Henry VI, and is named after a noted tavern, is mentioned several times in the "Diary of Samuel Pepys." In his time the footway was famous for its cutters. Pepys reports that he went to Pope's Head and "bought an agate huffed knife, which cost me 5s." Another day some one took him into the tavern and gave him wine, when they discussed affairs of state. "So home," writes Pepys again, "on my way calling at Pope's Head alley and there bought me a pair of scissors and a brass square."

In 1645 it is recorded, wine was being sold at the tavern in a penny a pint. It was at the Pope's Head tavern that Quin killed Bowen, a fellow actor, in a duel. The first print sellers in London are said to have opened their shops in the alley.

Deposition of Metals.

It is reported that there has been devised abroad a new process for spraying metals onto surfaces of any kind. The metal to be sprayed forms one of the electrodes of an arc, and a blast of gas impinges on this electrode, directed, however, in such a manner as not to play on the arc and extinguish it.

The gas used for the blast is of a non-oxidizing nature, and its effect is to carry away fine particles of metal, which can thus be deposited on any kind of surface, forming a very thin skin.

When polyphase currents are used, the electrodes may either be convergent or so placed as to cross the streams of gas.

In one form of the apparatus the arc is started by means of the instantaneous discharge from an auxiliary high-tension circuit—Exchange.

The Limits of Elsewhere.

A. W. G. writes that when in Florida she tried to buy a Chicago paper and offered the boy 3 cents. When he refused that sum she pointed to the printed statement on the front page: "Price 2 cents in city and suburbs; elsewhere 3 cents." "Oh," replied the boy, "you're a thousand miles from elsewhere."

BUSINESS LOCATED AT FLOYD ST.

BERLIN, MD.

Wor. Co. Woman's Club.

The Woman's Club of Worcester County spent a very delightful day at Ocean City on June 9th. More than thirty members met in the school building, with the president, Mrs. R. B. [?], in the Chair. At the close of an interesting business session, a charming paper, "Maid and Song and Story," was read by Miss Clara Dickson.

Mrs. L. L. Dickinson, who has passed her 90th birthday, was present, and was made an honorary member. The meeting adjourned for its summer recess, but the members dispersed, only to meet a few minutes later at the O. D. Colling cottage, the vacation home of "Miss Walter's Club Girls." There, a table of generous proportions awaited the opening of the box lunches, which made a tempting display, and a social hour was pleasantly spent.

At three o'clock, Miss Walter, the popular Demonstration Agent, invited the members to a pageant—it was well acted and admirably portrayed the noble purpose of the "4H Club," whose aim it is to "educate the heart, the head, the hands and the health." Mrs. Robins was asked to address the young members of this "4H Club," and in a few happy remarks commended them for their splendid work—work which bodes well for the Woman's Club of the future and for our dear old county and state.

The Woman's Club will meet in October—the exact date will be announced later.

Demas, the Deserter
By REV. J. R. SCHAFER
Director of Evening Classes, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world.—II Tim. 4:10

This is the shortest biography in the annals of men—yet the tragedy of a lifetime is pictured in these few words: Demas the deserter. What an exclamation! How base and vile. Of all men, he is the most despicable.

Centuries ago the war of Christendom had just begun. Travelling worldwide, the great general of the cause recruited patriots to its standard in city, village and hamlet. He came into Colosse one day and gathered a crowd in the market place. He told the story of the awful conflict raging—he called for volunteers—and a fine specimen of Greek youth, educated in the subtleties of philosophy, cultured in the fine arts of his renowned land, initiated into all its secrets of pleasure and enchantment, stepped out of the throng. He had been thrilled by the recital of brave deeds, crimsoned by sacrifice and suffering. The appeal of the heroic fired his soul; a burning desire was kindled to follow this great leader. He enlisted beneath the banner of the cross. He swore allegiance to the Christ of Calvary. He left home and kindred. He became a staff-officer to the great general of the Christian forces. For several years he shares the honors of war, the spoils of victory, until one day in a fierce conflict with the enemy the great Commander is taken prisoner and cast into a dungeon in Rome to await execution. This was too much for the gallant young captain. Disappointed, disconsolate, he deserted.

General Paul writes a letter to Colonel Timothy of his staff and tells him the sad news. What a tragedy! He has fought side by side with the greatest and grandest of soldiers, he has shared the triumphs of the cross from Antioch to Rome; then he deserted. He is left alone, forsaking the Christ for whom he had sacrificed all. He has forsaken the heart of the apostle in Christ. It seems we can hear the sob of his sorrow in these words: How can we account for this desertion?

I. Demas Was Never a True Soldier. A true soldier fights until peace is proclaimed or death rewards his faithfulness. He may lose courage at times when hard pressed, may doubt and falter; may even be defeated in battle, but he can never, never desert. Desertion is the proof of an ungodly motive, the result of an attachment to the world. No wonder the Apostle John has explained this experience. When referring to the multitude of disciples who deserted Jesus, he says: "If they had been of us, they would not have gone out from us."

Demas is always present in history of the church. Thousands under the spell of battle-songs and enthusiastic appeals have professed allegiance to Christ. They have put on the uniform, taken their place in the ranks, perfected the drills, gone into battle, but when real testing came, they were reported missing.

II. Demas Reveals the Deception of the Human Heart. It is possible to so closely resemble a Christian that only God can tell the difference. Wheat and tares look exactly alike until harvest. Soldiers wear the same uniform, fight under the same banner, follow the same commander until the crisis comes, then one sticks, the other deserts. Satan's campaign is one of deception. He seeks to deceive men and women with the form of godliness, lifeless and useless. The more nearly the counterfeit resembles the genuine, the greater the deception. Hundreds of unconverted people have been deceived. A profession, a uniform, a dress parade, a battle have been the boast of discipleship, but their name is Demas, for when wounds, bloodshed and sacrifice came, they deserted.

III. Demas Shows the Subtle Attraction of the World. Who can deny the fascination, the bewitchery of this world? Its sights charm like the mirage, its sounds enchant like siren voices, its fleeting treasures create a riot of passion, its pomp and pride intoxicate the soul. Demas loved the world; it was fatal. He never really opened his heart to the love of eternal things. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. Friendship with the world is enmity to God. To set the affection on things on the earth, is to deny heaven its rightful obligation. To follow the world's maxims and principles is to discount the Word of God and the guidance of His Spirit. To live for a good time in a doomed world whose sinners are going the downward path to hell, is for Nero to fiddle while Rome burns, for the captain to dance while the Titanic sinks. God has called us not only to salvation, but out of the world. "Come ye out from among them and be ye separate."

Angels Unaware. Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unaware.—Hebrews 13:2.

Ravages of the Bookworm. In the earliest writings we find mention of the ravages of the bookworm. Erenus, who lived about 450 B. C., is the earliest author known to write of its ravages. Horace, Ovid, Pliny, Martial and Lucian also wrote of him.

"The Angelus" Sold for $100. "The Angelus" was painted by Jean Francois Millet, a French landscape painter, in 1859. It was sold by him for 500 francs (about $100). In 1890 the painting was purchased for $150,000 and placed in the Louvre.

LESSON FOR JUNE 18

THE DOWNFALL OF JUDAH

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 24:1-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—He that is not deceived, God is not mocked; who so soweth, shall also reap.—Gal. 6:7.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Deut. 28:1-29; II Chron. 36:1-21; Jer. 22:1-23; Jer. 38:1-2; Jer. 52:1-30.
PRIMARY TOPIC—God Punishing Disobedient People.
UNIT TOPIC—The Capture of Jerusalem.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Nation That Despises God.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Results of National Disobedience to God.

Zedekiah was made king of Judah by the king of Babylon (24:17), but in spite of this kindness and the word of the Lord spoken to him by Jeremiah (Jer. 38:17, 18; cf. Jer. 52:3), he rebelled against the king of Babylon. He relied upon the help of Egypt, but all that Egypt could do was to cause temporary interruption of the siege of Jerusalem.

1. The Siege of Jerusalem (vv. 1-5).
1. Time of (vv. 1, 2). It began on the tenth day of the tenth month of the ninth year of Zedekiah's reign and lasted about eighteen months. The tenth month according to the Jewish calendar corresponds to our December-January, as their calendar year began about the middle of March. The reason the exact time is given is that this was to be an event of great importance to the Jews in their exile.

2. The Method (v. 1). Nebuchadnezzar came in person with a large army and camped against Jerusalem and built forts against it round about. It is thought that siege walls were built around the city, shutting it in. Or the tops of these walls were built from which missiles of destruction could be hurled by their engines of war against the city. With the city shut in its fall was only a question of time.

3. The Famine (v. 3). It is estimated that one-third of the people of Jerusalem died of starvation.

II. Zedekiah's Flight and Fate (vv. 4-7).
1. "The City was Broken Up" (v. 4). The Chaldeans had succeeded in making an opening in the wall so large that they could make their way into the city in spite of all that the Hebrews could do. Resistance was carried on to the bitter end.

2. Zedekiah's Flight (v. 5). The king with his men of war fled by night and hid in the plain of Jericho. He was captured by the Chaldeans and taken to the king of Babylon at Riblah (v. 6). Riblah was a town north of Damascus. It was the king's headquarters from which he directed his armies against Tyre and Jerusalem. Before Nebuchadnezzar, Zedekiah was tried as a criminal. (5) His fate (v. 7). His sons were slain in his sight; his eyes were put out; he was bound with fetters of brass; and they carried him to Babylon where he remained prisoner until the day of his death (Jer. 52:11).

III. Jerusalem Destroyed (vv. 10-12).
The dismantling of the city was delayed a month, perhaps awaiting instructions from Nebuchadnezzar, who was at Riblah.

1. They Burnt the House of the Lord (v. 9). This was the sacred temple built by Solomon with additions and modifications. Before burning it they plundered it of all its sacred contents.
2. Burnt the King's House (v. 9). This was doubtless the palace built by Solomon.

3. Burnt All the Houses of Jerusalem (v. 9). The implication is that the common houses were left for the people (v. 12).

4. They Broke Down the Walls of Jerusalem. The aim was to render the walls useless as a means of defense.

IV. The Disposition of the People (vv. 11, 12).

1. Carried Them into Captivity (v. 11). The people who were left in the city and those who had deserted to the Babylonians were carried to Babylon; all such as would be of use in Babylon.

2. The Poor of the Land Were Left (v. 12). The people who would not likely make any trouble were left as vine-dressers and husbandmen. Doubtless they were looking forward to colonization by foreign peoples. The object in leaving these people was that the country might be ready for their coming. Over these people Gedaliah was appointed as governor, with headquarters at Mizpah.

To the Thief. Let him that stole, steal no more; but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth.—Ephesians 4:28.

The Greatness of God's Mercy. Remember me, O my God, and spare me according to the greatness of thy mercy.—Nehemiah 13:22.

No Peace for Them. There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked.—Isaiah 48:22.

Eagle on His Native Heath. High above the ground the eagle floats on his red-brown wings, while the white-barred feathers of his tail are spread out fanwise as a rudder to steer his course. His piercing eye is searching the heath far below. Suddenly he swoops. Next moment he is rising again swiftly and strongly with a mountain hare held fast in his talons. The great wings beat the air now with long, powerful strokes, carrying him rapidly towards the hungry family that is waiting for him in the eyrie.—Exchange.

A Prayer.

Grant me the grace to wait,
Nor call it soon or late,
If in Thy time.

May that seem best to me,
Withheld or given by Thee,
Since Thou art love.

Grant me the joy and calm,
The strength, the peace, the balm
Thy presence brings.

And grant, I pray, a song,
Gladsome and clear and strong,
To cheer the way.

—Julia R. Kellogg, in "The Christian Advocate."

It is of little avail for the messenger, sent by an authority and on an errand not his own, to question the value of his mission. He did not plan it, he is only an agent, his requisite is faithfulness. It is much the same in regard to that repeated question, "Is life worth living?" Life on earth is not something that we chose for ourselves because we thought it would be a good thing, and that we can push aside if we change our views. We are here by no choice of our own, and there is some purpose in our coming quite apart from our having a good or ill time. Our part is not to discuss whether living is worth while or not, but to find our work and do it. Whoever does that is not troubled by the other question—Selected.

PAINT INCREASES VALUE.

The most dilapidated weather-beaten structure in this town, or elsewhere, can be improved, by the mere application of one or more coats of paint.

Not only will the appearance be improved, but, for every dollar so invested, we dare say, you could add five dollars to the selling price of the property. This applies to the interior as well as exterior.

Aside from the increased values for selling purposes paint is without an equal for preservation.

A Talent For Hardship.

Two ladies were conversing over the telephone, exchanging some ordinary directions required. "Mrs. L's receipt"—began one, following with instructions for the separate and elaborate processes by which some dainty was to be compounded.

"Oh," replied the other voice, with a laugh, "I got the same result with half that work! If there is a hard way to do anything, you can always trust Mrs. L. to find it!"

Doing easy things in a hard way is not confined to cookery, and many persons seem to have great talent in that direction. The duties that come into daily life, the interruptions that break daily plans, even the fulfilling of obligations that have been voluntarily assumed may become hard by the mere manner of handling them. There are conscientious parents, daughters, sisters, teachers, who find a hard way of filling those positions instead of the compensating and enjoyable way to which they are entitled. There are students who view every lesson as a mountain for weary climbing instead of a new height for wider outlook, and we all know people who make their pleasures so toilful with unnecessary preparation and after fatigue that they do not deserve to be called enjoyment.

But worst of all, and perhaps most common, is the mistake of making a hardship of the religion that should be joy and strength. To be bound by the letter of the Commandments instead of giving loving service; to feel "seasons of prayer" a duty, but often an inconvenience, instead of knowing the swift, natural turning of the soul to its Father in every moment of joy or need; to feel the haunting necessity of "preparing to meet the Lord" in every event of the day—this is indeed to make poverty out of offered riches, and to turn to hardship life's choicest blessing.—Forward.

Recommends Chamberlain's Tablets
"Chamberlain's Tablets have been used by my husband and myself off and on for the past five years. When my husband goes away from home he always takes a bottle of them along with him. Whenever I have that heavy feeling after eating, or feel dull and played out, I take one or two of Chamberlain's Tablets and they fix me up fine," writes Mrs. Newton (Freeland, Minn., N. Y.). Take these tablets when troubled with constipation or indigestion and they will do you good.

BOBBY'S "GIRL"

By MALCOLM BROWN

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

The little, fashionably dressed woman with the long, straight, blonde hair and the long line of push-buttons and letter-boxes on either side of the door before she found the name. At last, with a little reckless gesture, she pressed the button. The bell door clicked, and she began the long tramp upstairs. When she came to an apartment house one always finds the person sought for on the top floor.

At the head of the fifth flight a door clicked open. Mrs. Van Leyden found herself looking into the face of a young, dark-haired woman.

"Miss Farrell?" she asked.

"Come in," replied the other shortly. She led her into a gaudily furnished room, in the middle of which, upon a hard, straight, velvet-covered chair, sat a fat woman in middle life, evidently Miss Farrell's mother, for, except for the added years and embonpoint, the features were almost identical. Mrs. Van Leyden looked at the daughter and at the mother and shuddered involuntarily.

"Mamma!" said Miss Farrell.

"Oh, all right," said the stout woman, and, taking the paper which she had been reading, withdrew into an inner room.

"What can I do for you, Mrs. Van Leyden," said the visitor.

A light of understanding came into Miss Farrell's eyes.

"Not Bobby Van Leyden's mother?" she asked, apparently much amused.

"Robert Van Leyden is my son," answered the other quietly.

"Then I guess I know what you've come for," retorted Miss Farrell. "Sit down, won't you? Well, stand if you prefer. You have heard that Bobby's married on me and want to stop it before it gets to the wedding bells? Well, don't trouble about that."

"I have no fear of that," said the visitor.

"Some people," said Miss Farrell, "think that if a woman is on the stage she doesn't amount to much. And that's where they guess wrong. Why, if my Joe even heard of Bobby's notes he'd wring his neck."

"You are married, aren't you?" asked the visitor, more gently.

"To the best man in the world," answered Miss Farrell, twirling a salt-sauce upon her finger. "And for Joe's sake—and perhaps for Bobby's girl, though she'd be well rid of him, in my opinion—I'll do what I can."

"That's good of you."

"Will your husband take you to the Imperial tomorrow night at eleven if you ask him?" inquired the actress.

"Of course he would. But what are you going to do?"

"Fix Master Bobby. Will you be there?"

"I will," answered Mrs. Van Leyden.

It was in a frenzy of fear and a far from that Mrs. Van Leyden took her place opposite her husband at the Imperial supper table the next evening.

Suddenly she started. Bobby was coming in!

But was this Bobby, who took a seat at the supper table—this immaculately attired young man who sat down at the farthest table, half hidden under the palms? And this hang-dog look in his eyes—she had never seen that before. And the woman with him!

A stout, middle-aged woman of forty-five or so, with a huge red hat from which depended five pink ostrich plumes, a yellow evening gown trimmed with violet bows, a pair of short, black gloves, a rapid smile, and—no umbrella!

It was Miss Farrell's mother.

"Say, Madge, I don't know what your game was, but it was the dullest evening I ever spent," complained Mrs. Farrell as she got home, weary and cross, at one o'clock. "I fooled that young fellow all right—anybody could fool him. He thought I was you all along. But what's the game?"

"Oh, just part of the week's work, ma," answered her daughter wearily.

Intelligent Help.

Entering her sitting room one evening recently a suburban resident beheld one of her window curtains ablaze from having come in contact with the gas jet. She called to the cook to bring a dishpan of water in a hurry, but that lady did not arrive on the scene until after the man of the house had rushed in, torn down the curtain and stamped out the flame.

"Why didn't you hurry?" they asked the cook, reproachfully. "Hurry," she repeated, "Wasn't I hurryin' as fast as I could? I had hot water in the dishpan to throw out and get some cold water. You didn't want me to come in and throw hot water on the fire and make it worse, did you?"

The Spanish Main.

The Spanish Main is the name applied to the waters along the coast of South America, formerly so called because frequented by Spanish vessels and somewhat under the jurisdiction of Spain. The name was popularly given by English voyagers during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries to the north coast of South America between the Orinoco river and the Gulf of Venezuela.

EMILY

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

Copyright, 1922, by H. Louis Raybold.

"Heavens above, how sick I get of this ride!" and Emily Richmond frowned in disgust as the crowded trolley car lurched along the rails. "Week in, week out, morning and night—hanging on a strap or wedged in between others as weary as myself of the daily, deadly round of monotony!"

Then her brown eyes widened and the frown lifted as the car came to an abrupt halt at the drawbridge and Emily caught a glimpse of breakwater and sea and sails on a far horizon. It was always that way on the ride to and from the office where Emily earned good money as a skilled typist.

That momentary sight of the sea, caught at white, wadded sails, lived in Emily's city-rusted heart.

And this morning when she was on her way to give a decided "No" to Peter William's proposal that she share his salary as assistant manager of Horton & Hastings, the company whose employees they both were, the distant blue waters particularly appealed. Oh, to get away from it all! To sail and sail and sail—

Deep down somewhere in Emily's heart a tiny voice whispered: "Why not?"

The bumping of the trolley car over the bridge roused Emily to more than mere dillying with the interesting proposition. "I'll do it," she all but cried aloud. "I'll do it very thing!"

That was how it happened that on that particular morning the office of Horton & Hastings was minus its star typist. Nor did any of the puzzled force picture Emily as she actually was—hurryin' first of all to the bank and then to the station; sending a telephone message or two; buying a ticket to the neighboring big city; and finally settling back in the train with a current magazine, a box of chocolates and a shrug of unconcerned shoulders. Peter felt sure she was ill, and kept impatient, tabs on the clock until the noon hour arrived and he could telephone in privacy to Emily's boarding house.

Then when he did he turned white. "Miss Richmond," said Emily's landlady acidly, "had sent an expressman for her trunk, with never a word at the breakfast table about her plans!"

Life for Emily had become interesting at last. A modest room in a moderately priced hotel; breakfast as late as she pleased, and a varied menu to choose from; sight-seeing, town, through the shops; matinees and concerts galore.

Then, oddly enough, so new and so bright a thing as a new dress brought the best of her to her feet, to

Emily. Shut indoors through a thrifty desire to spare a new suit she had recklessly lavished half a month's salary on, she read steadily for several hours. Then impulsively she threw the book across the bed.

Love—love—love! Was there nothing else to write about? Wasn't there anything else worth while in the world?

An hour later, and Emily, driven by sheer boredom out into the storm, took refuge from the penetrating chill of sleepy rain in a huge moving picture palace. Settling down in the all but absolute darkness, she gave herself up to watching, at first half-heartedly, then with more interest the picture on the screen. Strange to say, there was just a reminder of Peter in the starward hero. Absurd though it was, under the circumstances Emily's heart beat a trifle faster.

The story progressed, the plot thickened and resolved, and at last the heroine melted into the Peter-like hero's arms. Emily heaved a tiny sigh. At that moment, out of the darkness at her side, a masculine hand took hold of her arm.

Like a flash Emily leaped to her feet, squeezed past the unparadoxically impudent person at her side with never a glance, and rushed out in the rain. Then she drew a long breath. She had heard of strangers attempting such familiarities, but had never supposed such things could happen to her. If Peter could have been there! But then it was only to lone women, that a thing of that sort occurred. Suddenly Emily's eyes filled. That was what she was—a lone woman in a strange city.

And there came to Emily a longing for the dingy old office, with Jim the office boy lounging outside the rail, and Peter working away at his desk over in the corner, and her typewriter before her. Work and companionship—why, they were worth more than shopping tours and loneliness, moving pictures and unprotectedness!

"I—I say, Emily, I didn't mean when I touched you in there—"

"Peter!" Emily could not believe her ears nor yet her eyes, although surely this man at her side was the man she hadn't wanted to marry.

"Yes, dear," said Peter shamefacedly. "Here I am. I hunted up the expressman who took your trunk and traced you to the city and found your name on the hotel register. And oh, perhaps I was unpardonably curious, but when you realize it was because I love you, Emily! Today I followed you into the theater and after a while got a seat at your side, although I kept my head turned so you would not recognize me. Then at the end of the show I was too much for me. Oh Emily, what are you coming back to us?"

Emily slipped her arm through Peter's. "When is the next train, dear?" she asked, huskily.

Don't Risk Neglect.

Don't neglect a constant backache, sharp, darting pains, or urinary disorders. The danger of dropsy or Bright's disease is too serious to ignore. Use Doan's Kidney Pills as have your neighbors. Ask your neighbor! A Berlin case.

Mrs. W. J. Massey, William St., says: "I have been taking Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for about four years and don't know how I could have made out without them. They certainly are the grandest medicine I ever used. For years complaints of the kidneys have caused me much suffering. Rheumatic pains in my lower limbs and shoulders was one of the worst features, although by spells I have had many other symptoms, directly traceable to the effects of kidney trouble. Backaches and disorders of my kidneys have proven of great annoyance at different times. During the four years I have used Doan's Kidney Pills, however, they have kept my kidneys in splendid condition and have never failed to cure me of these attacks." (Statement given March 8, 1912.)

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Massey had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

The French Revolution.

The French Revolution commenced July 14, 1789, with the destruction of the Bastille, and lasted until July 27, 1794, when the national convention deposed Robespierre and put an end to the Reign of Terror. In November of the same year the Directory was established. It remained in power until overthrown by Napoleon, November 9, 1799.

Drawing an Audience.

Professor Letterkink—"I'm delighted to see so large a gathering in the house. I never spoke to an audience of more than 40 before. Your townsmen are interested in science!" The Local Editor—"Not much. But my compositor, in setting up the ad of your lecture on the 'Cosmic Forces,' left the 's' out of 'Cosmic.'"

Dentists, Eastern Shore Of Maryland, Organize.

On Tuesday evening, June 6th, preceded by a dinner served at the Lantern Tea Room, Salisbury, Md., the ethical dentists engaged in active practice on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, south of Cecil County, held their first meeting. It has been felt for some time that this section is greatly in need of an organization of this character.

Dr. Charles F. Smith, of Salisbury, realizing this, took the initiative sometime ago, approaching many of his brother practitioners who might be interested in this movement, and after much zealous work, with the co-operation of the other Salisbury dentists, succeeded in bringing about this first assembly.

The response made by the dental profession in this territory was even greater than was anticipated, as was evidenced by the large attendance.

The existence of such a society will enable our dentists, through closer contact, and the interchange of ideas with neighboring practitioners, to acquaint themselves with the latest advances in dental science, and thus be equipped to render service of the highest possible quality to their patrons on the Eastern Shore.

The following men were elected to office to serve for a period of one year:

Dr. Roy A. Buhrman, Salisbury, President; Dr. E. A. Coble, Easton, 1st Vice-President; Dr. C. L. Selover, Cambridge, 2nd Vice-President; Dr. R. O. Higgins, Salisbury, Secretary; Dr. F. F. Todd, Crisfield, Treasurer; Dr. O. H. Mason, Berlin, Sergeant-at-Arms.

The next meeting will be held at Easton, Tuesday, July 11th, at 4 p. m., to be followed by a dinner at six o'clock.

The Marylander and Herald again announces a change of management, beginning next week, when James E. Byrd, of Salisbury, proprietor of the Delmarvia Composition Company, will assume control and move his linotype equipment to Princess Anne his former home. The former editor, Walter J. Brewington, returned to Salisbury last week to accept the position of business manager of the Wicomico Countian.

Mrs. I. H. Jones Celebrates
Her Sixty-Six Birthday
Last Sunday.

Mrs. Jones began to show her happiness Sunday morning when her children and grandchildren commenced to assemble, bringing with them beautiful presents and lots of good things to eat, making the dinner which followed a very elaborate one, and one thoroughly enjoyed by all present. The birthday cake was made by Miss Willie Whittington, the oldest grandchild.

The house was beautifully decorated with roses, water lilies and potted plants, which were also carried by her children and grandchildren, knowing her extreme fondness for flowers.

Those present were her seven children: Mrs. Wilmer Whittington, Mrs. Charles Tyre, Mrs. Calvin Smack, Mrs. Rodney Bouda, Edward, Paul and Norman Jones, with their husbands and wives; all of her twenty-two grandchildren except Miss Abbie Whittington, who is in training for a nurse at Washington; one grandson-in-law and one great-grandson, little Lawrence Smack, Jr.

Late in the afternoon, after refreshments, consisting of lemonade, cake, ice cream and candy, all returned home reporting a big time and wishing her many more bright and happy birthdays.

Mrs. Mary Snyder Shippen, of Salisbury, was instantly killed last Saturday evening about seven o'clock, when she attempted to cross the railroad track just ahead of a train, which she had evidently failed to see in time. The train men were exonerated from blame by the coroner's jury.
