INTERESTING HISTORY

And Description of One of Salisbury's Most Attractive Residential Sections.

(Below is given a reprint of an interesting article on the Camden Boulevard published in the Wisconsin News of last week.)

One of the most notable tendencies of modern times is the realization of the many benefits derived by living in a district removed from the bustle and noise of commerce, to where there is pure air and ample room. With the increase in prosperity and wealth there comes a desire for a home so situated as to be conducive to the requirements and culture that accompany progress. This is just as true in Salisbury as it is in every other progressive community and the Camden Boulevard Sub-division is the answer to the inquiry of the Salisbury citizens who seek the comforts and pleasures of home life, for it is a district admittedly the healthiest in this section, both on account of its pure air, its elevation and the Southwest breeze which, in Summer makes it the coolest place in the city. The growth of Salisbury from the time it was a little hamlet, nestling at the forks of the river, now the foot of Main Street, necessitated the constant taking in of new territory. A little at a time to meet the increase in population, and as it increased in importance as the metropolis of the Eastern Shore, the handsome residences were erected which now make this a city of beautiful homes. But as time went by all of the available property North of the river, suitable for this purpose, became occupied, leaving only a portion of the old "Knickerbocker District," known as Camden as the only land available for this class of residences. This district combined every desirable element of a first class residence section as well as being within convenient walking distance of the business center. It had for some time

GOVERNOR WORKING HARD

Grothers Making Splendid Record For Democratic Party Pledge Redemption.

Says The Baltimore News of Thursday.

Governor Grothers is "cussing" mad for the Straus primary election bill is up today and the county Democrats are refusing to fall in line. It made its appearance in the House early in the day, while the Blair Lee idea of the primary election was being fought over in the State Senate. Indications were very strong that Lee's idea of primaries would eventually find an ally in President Gorman of the State Senate. Governor Grothers has trimmed President Gorman in the road fight, with Senator Lee as the leader of his forces just as he will, in all probability, be able to put through the Straus public utilities bill, but with Senator Lee making a determined fight against him on the Straus primary bill his chances of winning out do not seem to be bright.

Governor On Firing Line.

Shortly after ten o'clock this morning Governor Grothers took a seat on a bench in the lobby of the State House. It was soon apparent that he had gone into the primary election fight. County men were bolting right and left. The opposition seemed to spur the Governor on to renewed efforts. He fought vigorously and vehemently. Uncomplimentary references were made to the gray matter in the heads of Democrats and Republicans alike, but he was not personal.

The Straus bill provides for State-wide compulsory primaries that include all candidates for State offices. Lee's bill also provides for State-wide compulsory primaries, but within counties. This is the essential difference in the two laws. Foes of the Straus plan claim that city Democrats will unite on city men, leaving the counties out in the cold in the selection of candidates for State offices. Governor Grothers declared it all "boosh". It seemed however, impossible for him to get the county men to line up with him with any sort of unanimity.

Saw Tide Against Them.

In the Legislature is an element of Democrats opposed to State wide primaries with the direct vote feature as compulsory. When they saw the tide was against them they were disposed to fall in line with the Lee ideas, and Governor Grothers could not dissuade them from their purpose.

While President Gorman and Senator Lee were inclined to get together, there seemed one irreconcilable difference. Mr. Gorman wishes the bill passed so that the counties in which direct primary elections have never been held shall not be compelled to have them until the people within these counties shall vote for a direct primary. They are to be given this opportunity at the first election to be held. Senator Lee will not concede this point. Consequently he and Senator Gorman are apart. Mr. Lee has prepared for President Gorman an amendment to his bill to embrace the ideas that Mr. Gorman has outlined. He has suggested that they fight it out on the floor of the Senate with the understanding that the vanquished acquiesce in the results of the majority. Mr. Gorman has not, it is said, taken kindly to this suggestion, for Senator Lee is expected to steal most of his troops, leaving him with only a corporal's guard.

Swinging The Big Stick.

It may be that the big stick the Governor is swinging may yet bring a majority of Legislators in line for the Straus bill. He is ignoring party lines. The Republicans as well as the Democrats are being invited to step up to hear what he has to say. It happens, however that the Republicans are almost unanimously opposed to direct primaries. Moreover, the stick the Governor is swinging has a tendency to keep them away from the primary bill, for he has let it be understood that he is opposed to the Digges plan of disfranchising the negro unless a direct State wide primary election law goes with it as a guarantee of a fair fight within party lines.

Dwellings Burned.

About 11 p. m. on Tuesday evening the fire bell gave the alarm of a fire in Camden. At first it was reported that the home of Congressman Jackson was ablaze. This however proved to be a mistake, as the fire was in two new houses which R. Frank Williams was having built on his property. The fire made a clean sweep and soon wiped both houses out. These houses were unoccupied and had just been completed, the loss is estimated at about $2000, partly covered by insurance. The buildings according to Mr. Williams had not been accepted by him, because he alleges one was not built according to contract and the other he had never been notified of its completion. Mr. Wm. Brewington was the contractor.

ANOTHER SUFFRAGE

Amendment Bold And Frank In Digges Bill To Prevent Negroes Voting.

After a three-hour discussion on every suggestion in regard to the elimination of the negro from local and State elections the Democrats in caucus Thursday night decided to put through the Legislature the Digges bills. The only change made in the bills as originally drafted is that in the constitutional amendment to be voted on in November, 1911, the white voters of the State are to decide whether or not negroes owning $500 worth of property and paying taxes on it for two years shall vote.

Under the Digges bills, only white men will be allowed to register and vote in the election of 1911, and thus they alone will pass upon this qualification for the negro. The property qualification was suggested by City Solicitor Edgar Allan Poe and was inserted by President Gorman of the Senate, and Messrs. W. L. Rawls and others interested in the question.

Would Repeat Wilson Law.

The Digges bills will be introduced in the House tomorrow. It is expected that they will pass each branch of the Legislature under a suspension of the rules. Under the provision of the bill the ballot law is repealed, but if the plan is held to be unconstitutional, then the present election laws, including the Wilson ballot, are to govern future elections.

The $500 property qualification for negroes provides that a negro must have owned property assessed for this amount or more for two years, must have paid taxes on it for two years prior to his application for registration and must show to the registration officials his tax receipts and a sworn statement that he owns the property. This clause is similar to the property clause which was in the Straus amendment and defeated last November. Leading Democratic members of the Legislature said Thursday night that there would positively be no more delay in the introduction of the bills. Every one is now in earnest in their support and every detail connected with the proposition has been worked out.

Republicans Plan To Fight.

While the caucus was in session a number of the Republican members gathered in the corridors of the State House and discussed the provisions of the bills. They will hold a caucus and devise plans for obstructing the bills or delaying their passage. Every parliamentary tactic possible will be used against them. It is not expected, however, that such a course will hinder the passage of the bills, as the Democrats have more than a three-fifths majority in each branch of the Legislature and can easily put them through.

New Banks For County.

Senator Price has introduced two bills in the Senate providing for the incorporation of two new banks. One of these is to be located at Hebron with a capital of $10,000, to be known as the Hebron Savings Bank. The incorporators named in the bill are as follows: Marion N. Nelson, Geo. W. Holliday, Levin B. Westberry, James A. Waller, Willie Gillis, Wm. H. Phillips, Albert W. Sisk, J. Davis Phillips, W. Frank Howard and G. O. Bonds.

The other bill provided for the incorporation of the Wisconsin Savings Bank of Salisbury, and provides for a capital of $25,000 with power to increase same to $50,000. The following are named in the bill as incorporators, Messrs. Wm. M. Cooper, Mark, Cooper, Jesse D. Price, A. M. Jackson, I. R. Jones.

STATE APPROPRIATION

As Recommended By Committee Gives $12,000 To Salisbury Institutions.

The Finance Committee of the Senate and the Ways and Means Committee of the House have agreed on the amounts to be included in the Omnibus bill.

Controlling the allotments, as the chief factor, is custom. Year after year the Legislature has appropriated money to institutions that look after the State's needy and infirm. Each session finds the Legislature face to face with demands for increased amounts. This incessant demand has had its influence steadily, but surely. State aid has been increased. Two years ago Governor Orothers struck out amounts aggregating $400,000.

Among the items included are:—

| | 1911 | 1912 |
|---|---------|---------|
| Salisbury Home for the Aged | $3,000 | $3,000 |
| Home of the Friendless Children of the Eastern Shore | 1,000 | 1,000 |

THE DICTOGRAPH COMING

Into Practical Service. To Be Used At Maryland N. G. Meet.

New interest will be injected into the military maneuvers of the Maryland National Guard this summer through the use of a novel device for determining the movement of large bodies of troops over a wide area.

The demonstration of its practicability for the purpose employed it is said by military experts, will revolutionize modern military tactics.

The device is known as a dictograph and is used throughout this country and in Europe by banking and business establishments for the purpose of facilitating communication between distant points of a building. The United States Secret Service has employed the instrument in its work for several years as has the Standard Oil and other large institutions. For some time the Governors of the States of Minnesota and Illinois have been using it in the Executive mansions at St. Paul and Springfield and say it has performed wonderful work for them.

While its application to military work is a new phase of its manifold uses, members of Major General Leonard Wood's staff at Governor's Island are convinced that the highly sensitized instrument will peculiarly lend itself to the important function to be assigned to it at the maneuvers.

The dictograph magnifies sound ten to twelve octaves and in commercial life is used by busy men to transmit their orders to subordinates in other parts of the building, while seated at their desk or while walking about their room, without being obliged to talk into a telephone transmitter, the instrument absorbing the faintest whisper made ten to twenty feet away from it.

Mill President Got Skinned.

Mr. ——— President of a cotton mill at Union, S. C.,—he don't want to see his name in print—had two offers of 500 gallons of paint; $1.30 and $1.25. Took the $1.25; and got skinned. He'd have got three quarters skinned if he'd taken the other. The $1.30 was full gallon; the $1.25 was 18 per cent short. The full measure paint was adulterated 40 per cent; the short measure paint was adulterated 45 per cent besides benzine in the oil, don't know how much.

Devotee lead and zinc wasn't sold in the town then.

It don't pay to monkey with paint. Devotee costs less than any of 'em; not by the gallon, of course; by the house and year. That's how to reckon it. Go by the name.

CHRIST'S ASCENSION FROM HADES

"He led forth a multitude of captives and gave gifts unto men" (Ephesians iv, 8).

Allentown, Pa., March 27.—As Christendom celebrates the resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ, it is appropriate that our hearts and minds should intelligently grasp the significance of the event commemorated. St. Paul laid great stress upon the resurrection of the dead, declaring that if there be no resurrection of the dead all those whom we counted as asleep would never have an awakening, and consequently would be as dead as are brute beasts. Note his emphatic statement to this effect (1 Corinthians xv, 12-18). For here as elsewhere his words contradict the thought that the saints dead were immediately to glory and the unsaintly to Purgatory or to eternal torture.

According to the Gospel of Christ, of which St. Paul declares that he was not ashamed, the dead are to be esteemed as though they were asleep—at rest from all the commotion and turmoil and strife, ignorance and superstition and sin and trouble incident to the present reign of sin and death. They have truly entered into rest, whether they were saints or sinners. When the time for their awakening shall have come in the Millennial morning of Christ's reign of righteousness, surrounding conditions will be very different from what they are today, thank God! Then Satan will be bound, the Bible assures us (Revelation xx, 1-3), and the ignorance and superstition, selfishness and crime, which have for centuries marked his reign will gradually draw to a close. For the glorious Messiah-King will not permit them. His reign, on the contrary, will be marked with the true enlightenment of all mankind; and the result will be, as foretold, namely, "Every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God" (Isaiah xlv, 23).

Gradually the world will be brought to an Edenic condition, in harmony with the Divine promise. Indeed, this work may be said to be already beginning. Already, by arduous and intelligent cultivation of fields, the earth begins to bloom and the wilderness and solitary place to be glad, as foretold by Isaiah the prophet (Isaiah xxxv, 1).

Under these blessed conditions "All that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of man and shall come forth" (John v, 28, 29)—not all at once, but "Every man in his own order" (1 Corinthians xv, 23). The saints be lievers, who alone are fully pleasing to God, will come forth in the First, or chief, or preferable, Resurrection—come forth perfect, on the spirit plane. Like unto the angels and like unto their glorified Redeemer, to be his joint-heirs in his Millennial Kingdom and its great work of re-creating, instructing and ruling and uplifting all the "groaning" families of the earth (Romans viii, 22). Thus will be fulfilled God's promise to the spiritual Seed of Abraham, "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Galatians iii, 29). Gradually, after dealing with the living nations to some extent, the sleeping world will be awakened. Every man in his own order" (1 Corinthians xv, 23).

Our Lord assures us that all except the saints few will come forth from the tomb that they may have a resurrection—a raising up out of sin and death conditions to righteousness, to the image of God that was lost by Adam; and that eventually, if willing and obedient, they will receive Christ's gift of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. But the rebellious under those favorable conditions, we are assured, will be cut off from life entirely in the Second Death (Acts iii, 19-23).

In speaking of the world's resurrection our Redeemer designates it a resurrection by judgments (Rev. Ver. John v, 28, 29). Messiah's righteous judgments will then be abroad in the world. The light of knowledge will be as clear as the noon-day sun. Every good deed and endeavor will receive its reward and every wilfully evil deed will receive chastisements, corrections, to the intent that they may learn the advantages of the way of holiness and go up thereon to life eternal, which the willing and obedient may reach by the close of the Millennial Age.

Through the prophet Daniel, the Lord declares that many of the world who now sleep in the dust of the earth shall come forth unto shame and lasting contempt. We can readily realize the shame that will be theirs when the light of full knowledge shall prevail and all of their past shall stand revealed to themselves and to others in its true colors. We can well understand that this will bring contempt to many now highly esteemed amongst men. But we can rejoice in the thought that the Millennial Kingdom then to be in power will deal graciously with all. The stripes of punishment will be tempered with mercy; and gradually by their change of character the contemptible ones will cease to be contemptible. The transforming power of grace and Truth now operating in the Church will be equally forceful then, operating upon the world of mankind. As perfection is gradually attained the shame of the imperfection will gradually abate, while all of the shameless will be destroyed in the Second Death. Thus we see the Divine Purpose of the resurrection of the dead and our glorious hope, far different from all the fears that were taught us by the misty traditions of men, from the "dark ages." And thus we see the force of the Apostle's words that if there be no resurrection of the dead our faith is vain, our faith is vain (1 Corinthians xv, 14-19).

"But Now Is Christ Risen"
The Apostle argues, "If the dead rise not, if that is an impossibility so far as the world in general is concerned, then it is an impossibility so far as Christ is concerned. And "if Christ be not risen," then all hope, all faith, is vain. And all preaching is not only foolish, but worse. (See 1 Corinthians xv, 14). "But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept." The mere awakening from sleep, as in the case of Lazarus, Dorcas and others, is her left out of the question. Nothing counted as resurrection except the full complete rising up out of death. Our Lord was the "first that about to rise from the dead" (Acts xxvi, 23), in this full sense. And he was a first fruits, or proof, that others still sleeping will come forth by Divine Power to be exercised by him in the resurrection morning—the Millennial morning. The Church will be the next in order—she is to be the Bride-Consort of the Great King and to participate with him in his glorious work of uplifting the race which fell from the Divine image into sin and death through father Adam. The redemption-price has been provided in the death of Jesus; and the time for beginning the great work of "restoration of all things" merely waits until the completion of the election of the saintly Church (Acts ii, 19-21).

Christ Arose From Hades.
Preaching on the Day of Pentecost, St. Peter declares that God raised up Christ from the dead. Then he proves that this was the Divine intention from the beginning, he quotes from the prophetic Psalm of David, "Thou shalt not leave my soul in hell." The Apostle's quotation (Acts ii, 27) is in the Greek, in which the word hades is used. His quotation is from the Hebrew, in which the word hades is the only word rendered hell throughout the entire Old Testament.

I am not stating this as something new, although I am confident that it is new to many of our hearers and to many of the eighteen millions who will read my discourse in tomorrow morning's papers. For the sake of such, I note the fact that in the morning of our Lord's resurrection, he said to Mary, "Thou art not bound to the grave, as thou art not bound to the Father and you, Father: to my God, and your God" (John xx, 17). I remind them further of the language of the so-called Apostles' Creed, which is coming more and more into vogue with all denominations and which declares, "He descended into hell and rose again the third day." In a version of this creed published by the Presbyterian Board of Publication of Philadelphia, a footnote very properly explains that the word hades here used is, in the Greek, hades, which signifies the state or condition of death.

I consider this a very important matter, which should be made widely known, because of the false conception of hell handed down to us through our creeds formulated in the "dark ages," and since a misinterpretation of hades and hades has been given to the public mind—the impression that these words signify a place of torture. All this is wholly false, as every Greek and Hebrew scholar knows, and, if cross-questioned, will admit. It is an important question to the public because this misapprehension of the meaning of the word hades is driving hundreds, yea, thousands, away from God and away from the Bible. They correctly reason that the teaching that our Creator foreknew and intended a hell of torture for his creatures is beyond conception, beyond belief, and manifestly untrue, as no holy being could be so unjust, unkind, unloving. It is false that all such should see that the fault lies with the creeds and not with the Bible—that the Bible teaches a hell, hades, into which all go, both good and bad, and from which all will be called forth in the resurrection morning by the great Redeemer.

"Leading Captivity Captive."
A better translation reads, "Our Lord ascended on high leading a multitude of captives." These words are a pen picture representing a great King as a Conqueror returning from a victory over an opponent. The victor rode in a chariot at the head of the procession, surrounded by trumpets and acclamations, and behind him followed the evidence, the proofs of his victory—either those whom he had captured and enslaved or, as in this case, those who had been captured and enslaved and whom the Conqueror had set free. The picture is graphic and wonderful, notwithstanding the fact that a considerable space has intervened between our Lord's triumphant resurrection and ascension and the evidences of his victory, which are following after him. Of the great King of Glory himself, let us remember that after he had suffered by the will of God, "the just for the unjust," that he might set mankind free from sin and death, he was "highly exalted and given a name above every name." He was made "partaker of the divine nature." He was no longer a man, for "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God" (1 Corinthians xv, 50). True, he still has as one of his many titles, The Son of man, which identifies him with our race and the work which he is in the process of accomplishing for it and which he will finish during his Millennial reign. We are reminded by the Apostle that he was put to death in the flesh and made alive in spirit—a spirit-being. He died as a man this side the veil. He arose a New Creature the other side the veil—a spirit being. He was "born in corruption, raised in incorruption; sown in dishonor, raised in glory; sown a natural body, raised a spiritual body." As the Church's Head and Fore-runner he passed beyond the veil, and now shortly, as partaker with him and as the second battalion of the glorious triumphant procession, will follow "the Church which is his Body," sharing with him in the First Resurrection, his Bride.

Next in processional order following the Bride class, the "very elect" will come the "great company" from every nation, people, kindred and tongue, the honored servants of the heavenly Bridegroom and Bride. "The virgins her companions" (Psalm xiv, 14), will follow after the Bride into the presence of the great King Jehovah. Next in processional order will come the Ancient Worthies from faithful Abel down to John the Baptist, the greatest of the prophets. But these will come forth from the tomb in human perfection and not in the spirit perfection of those preceding (Hebrews xi, 38-40; Matthew x, 11). In their human perfection similar to that of Adam before his transgression, plus their development in faith and obedience, these will constitute a firstfruits of Israel and of the world of mankind. Under their ministrations, supervised by the glorified ones beyond the veil, the work of restitution and uplifting the captives of sin and death will progress until, at the close of that thousand years of the reign of righteousness, every human being of loyal character will be completely freed from the bondage of sin and death and imperfection and, with the Ancient Worthies, will march in the grand procession into the presence of Jehovah God.

Thus the great Redeemer and Deliverer will not only present the saintly Church blameless and irreproachable before the Father in love, but likewise will liberate all who will of Adam's race, now asleep and degraded. No wonder the Scriptures declare of the end of his triumphant procession, "He shall see of the travail of his soul and he shall be satisfied" (Isaiah liii, 11).

"And Gave Gifts Unto Men."
All the blessings which, in God's providence, are not coming to the Church during this Gospel Age, and all the blessings that in the Millennial Age will flow to natural Israel, "the rebellious also," and all the blessings that will flow through Israel and the New Covenant to all the families of the earth, proceed directly or indirectly from the great victory which our Lord Jesus "achieved over sin and death."

Our text and context, as well as the Psalm from which the quotation is made, bears out this thought. It is because our Lord descended, because he left the heavenly glory, and because, in harmony with the Father's will, our Redeemer left the courts of heavenly glory and humbled himself to become a man, and then "humbled himself to death, and even to the death of the cross," that his exaltation came as a reward "of his loyalty to the Father's will."

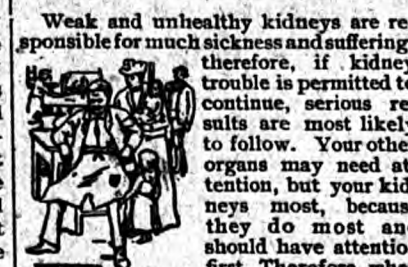

And in the Divine Plan it is because his resurrection body and glory were a reward, a blessing—his earthly body and nature and rights had not been forfeited through disobedience—that he had the latter with all its privileges to bestow upon Adam's dead and dying race. He gave the merit of that sacrifice, first imputed, on behalf of all desirous of walking in his steps of self-sacrifice even unto death, that these might be, in the Father's good pleasure, counted as his members and companions on the heavenly plane. To this end the first gifts were bestowed at Pentecost; and all of similar class throughout this age have had opportunity for participation therein. Additionally gifts of helpfulness and instruction and assistance were provided through the apostles, orators, pastors and teachers of the Church—for the qualification of these saintly footstep followers for the work of service in building up the Body of Christ, until the elect Body shall be complete (Ephesians iv, 11-13).

Soon these gifts and blessings and privileges now granted and imputed to the Church will be no longer needed by the class being prepared for the heavenly joint-heirship. Then the gift of the Millennial Kingdom, and through Israel the gift of the New Covenant (Jeremiah xxxi, 31), will be bestowed upon the blood-bought world, granting to them individually the opportunity of recovering from all their delinquency and imperfection.

Let us then hail this great Redeemer and Deliverer Lord of all! Let us bow our hearts to him now and voluntarily put on the yoke of his service and suffer with him outside the camp, that we may be accounted worthy of sharing with him in the glorious work of his Millennial Kingdom as his Bride and Joint-heir (Hebrews xiii, 11-13).

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally as just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and burning pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dizziness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. But what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary people "dyspepsia" tablets, physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Kodol is only at all druggists.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A PRESERVED MALADY.
YOU are wonderful, staying out there all night watching for—"me." He was about to say—"me."

"How could any one sleep? Neenah found this dress for me. Aren't these baggy trousers funny? She rifled the late Mr. Wyckholme's wardrobe. This costume once adorned a sultana, I'm told. I wore it tonight because I was much less conspicuous as a sultana than I might have been had I gone to the wall as a princess."

"I like you best as the princess," he said, frankly surveying her in the gray light.

"I think I like myself as the princess, too," she said naively. He sighed deeply. They were quite close to the excited group on the terrace when she said: "I am very, very happy now, after the most miserable night I have ever known. I was so troubled and afraid—"

"Just because I went away for that little while? Don't forget that I am soon to go out from you for all time. How then?"

"Ah, but then I will have Paris," she cried gaily. He was puzzled by her mood—but then, why not? What could he be expected to know of the moods of royal princesses? No more than he could know of their loves.

Lady Deppingham was got to bed at once. The princess, more thrilled by excitement than she ever had been in her life, attended her friend. In the sanctity of her chamber the exhausted young Englishwoman bared her soul to this wise, sympathetic young woman in Persian vestment.

"Genevra," she said solemnly in the end, "take warning from my example. When you once are married don't trifle with other men—not even if you should not love your husband. Sooner or later you'd get tripped up. It doesn't pay, my dear. I never rested last night how much I really care for Deppy, and I am horribly afraid that I've lost something I can never recover."

"You were not in love with Mr. Browne. That is why I can't understand you, Agnes."

"My dear, I don't understand myself. How can I expect you or my husband to understand me? How could I expect it of Bobby Browne? Genevra, you are in love—madly in love—with Flingworth Chase. Take my advice. Marry him. He's one man in a million—Genevra placed her hand over the lips of the feverish young woman.

"I will not listen to anything more about Mr. Chase," she said firmly. "I am tired—tired to death—of being told that I should marry him."

"But you love him," Lady Agnes managed to mumble despite the gentle impediment.

"I do love him—yes. I do love him!" cried the princess, casting reserve to the winds. "He knows it—every one knows it. But marry him? No—no! I shall marry Karl. My father, my mother, my grandfather, have said so, and I have said it too. That ends it, Agnes. Don't speak of it again."

She cast herself down upon the side of the bed and clutched her hands in the throes of despair and decision. After a moment Lady Agnes said dreamily: "I climbed up the ladder to make a 'ladyship' of myself by marriage, and I find I love my husband. I dare say if you should go down the ladder a few rounds, my dear, you might be as lucky. But take my advice. If you won't marry Hollingsworth Chase, don't let him come to Paris."

The Princess Genevra lifted her face instantly, a startled expression in her eyes.

"Agnes, you forget yourself!"

"My dear," murmured Lady Agnes sleepily, "forgive me, but I have such a shockingly absent mind." She was asleep a moment later.

In the meantime Bobby Browne, disdaining all commands and entreaties, refused to be put to bed until he had related the story of their capture and the subsequent events that made the night memorable. He sat with his rigid arm about his wife's shoulders. Drusilla was stroking one of his hands in a half-conscious manner, her eyes staring past his face toward the dark forest from which he had come. Mr. Britt was ordering brandy for his trembling client.

"After all," said Browne, hoarse with nervousness, "there is some good to be derived from our experiences, hard as it may be to believe. I have found out the means by which Rasula intends to destroy every living creature in the chateau." Chase threw off his spell of languidness and looked hard at the speaker.

"Rasula cooly asked me at one of our resting places if there had been any symptoms of poisoning among us. I mentioned Pong and the servants. The devil laughed gleefully in my face and told me that it was but the beginning. I tell you, Chase, we can't escape the diabolical scheme he has arranged. The water that comes to us from the springs up there in the hills is to be poisoned by those devils. I heard Rasula giving instructions to one of his henchmen. He thought I was still unconscious from a blow I received when I tried to interfere in behalf of Lady Agnes, who was being roughly dragged along the mountain road. Day and night a detachment of men are to be employed at the springs, deliberately engaged in the attempt to change the flow of pure water into a slow, subtle, deadly poison, the effect of which will not be immediately fatal, but positively so in the course of a few days. In the end we shall sick-an and die as with the scourge. They will call it the plague."

A shudder of horror swept through the crowd. Every one looked into his neighbor's face with a profound inquiring light in his eyes, seeking for the first time evidence of approaching death.

Hollingsworth Chase uttered a short, scornful laugh as he unconcernedly lifted a match to one of his precious cigarettes. The others stared at him in amazement.

"Great God, Chase," groaned Browne. "Is this a joke?"

"Yes, and it's on Rasula," said the other ironically. "You say that Rasula isn't aware of the fact that you overheard what he said to his man. Then, even now, in spite of your escape, he believes that we may go on drinking the water without in the least suspecting what it has in store for us. Good! That's why I say the joke is on him. Browne, you are a doctor, a chemist. Well, we'll distill and double and triple distill the water. That's all. A schoolboy might have thought of that. It's all right, old man. You're fagged out. Your brain isn't working well. Don't look so crestfallen. Mr. Britt, you and Mr. Saunders will give immediate instructions to no more water is to be drunk or used until Mr. Browne has had a few hours' rest. He can take an alcohol bath, and we can all drink wine. It won't hurt us. At 10 o'clock sharp Rasula will begin operating the distilling apparatus in the laboratory. By Jove, will you listen to the row my clients are making out there in the woods! They seem to be annoyed over something."

Outside the walls the islanders were shouting and calling to each other. Rifles were cracking far and near, voicing in their peculiarly spiteful way the rage that reigned supreme.

As Chase ascended the steps Bobby Browne and his wife came up beside him.

"Chase," said Browne in a low voice, his face turned away to hide the mortification that flled his soul, "you are a man! I want you to know that I thank you from the bottom of my heart."

"Never mind, old man! Say no more," interrupted Chase, suddenly embarrassed.

"I've been a fool, Chase. I don't deserve the friendship of any one—not even that of my wife. It's all over, though. You understand? I'm not a coward. I'll do anything you say, take any risk, to pay for the trouble I've caused you all. Send me out to fight!"

"Nonsense! Your wife needs you, Browne. I dare say that I wouldn't have been above the folly that got the better of you. Only—he hesitated for a minute—"only it couldn't have happened to me if I had a wife as dear and as good and as pretty as the one you have."

Browne was silent for a long time. His arm still about Drusilla's shoulder. At the end of the long hall he said, with a voice in his voice:

"Chase, you may tell your clients that, so far as I am concerned, they may have the beastly island and everything that goes with it. I'm through with it all. I shall discharge Britt and—"

"My dear boy, it's most magnanimous of you!" cried Chase merrily. "But I'm afraid you can't decide the question in such an offhand manner. Take good care of him, Mrs. Browne. Don't let him talk."

She held out her hand to him impulsively. As he gallantly lifted the cold fingers to his lips she said, without taking her eyes from his face, "Thank you, Mr. Chase. I shall never forget you."

He stood there looking after them as they went up the stairway, a puzzled expression in his face.

"I guess he'll be a good boy from now on." But he wondered what it was that he had seen or felt in her wondrous gaze.

In fifteen minutes he was sound asleep in his room, his long frame relaxed, his hands wide open in utter fatigue. He dreamed of a Henner girl with Genevra's brilliant face instead of that vague, greenish feature that haunted the vision with their subtle mysticism.

He was awakened at noon by Selim, who obeyed his instructions to the minute. The eager Arab rubbed the soreness and stiffness out of his master's body with copious applications of alcohol.

"I'm sorry you awoke me, Selim," said the master enigmatically. Selim drew back, dismayed. "You drove her away," Selim's eyes blinked with bewilderment. "I'm afraid she'll never come back."

"Excellency!" trembled on the lips of the mystified servant.

"Ah, me!" sighed the master resignedly. "She smiled so divinely. Hinner girls never smile, do they, Selim? Have you noticed that they are always pensive? Perhaps you haven't. It doesn't matter. But this one smiled. I say," coming back to earth, "have they begun to distill the water? I've got a frightful thirst."

"Yes, excellency. The Sahib Browne is at work. One of the servants became sick today. Now no one is drinking the water. Rasula is bringing in ice from the storehouses and melting it, but the supply is not large. Excellency, you will take Selim to live with you in Paris?" he said after a while wistfully. "I will be your slave."

"Paris? Who the dickens said anything about Paris?" demanded Chase, startled.

"Neenah says you will go there to live, Sahib. Does not the most glorious princess live in Paris?"

"Selim, you've been listening to gossip. It's a frightful habit to get into. Put cotton in your ears. But if I were to take you, what would become of little Neenah?"

"Oh, Neenah?" said Selim easily. "If she would be a trouble to you, excellency, I can sell her to a man I know." Chase looked blackly at the eager Arab, who quailed.

"You miserable dog!" Selim gasped. "Excellency!"

"Don't you love her?"

"Yes, yes, Sahib—yes! But if she would be a trouble to you—no!" protested the Arab anxiously. Chase laughed as he came to appreciate the sacrifice his servant would make for him.

"I'll take you with me, Selim, wherever I go—and if I go—well, my lady, we'll take Neenah along, too, to save trouble. She's not for sale, my good Selim." The husband of Neenah radiated joy.

"Then she may yet be the slave of the most glorious princess! Allah is great! The most glorious one has asked her if she will not come with her."

"Selim," commanded the master ominously, "don't repeat the gossip you pick up when I'm not around."

been realized that the growth of the best residence section would be in this direction and the most eligible property was quietly secured, with the determination that the Sub-division should have all the advantages of the city as well as those of its superior location and that it should have the "Boulevards" that have come to be considered indispensable in modern districts in other cities. The district contains about fifty acres some thirteen of which were devoted to the boulevards and broad streets, with the parkway on either side in which to grow shade trees whose luxuriance adds materially in the Summer time to the beauty of the section. The district includes all the land lying between Camden Ave., and the N. Y. P. & N. R. R. South of Tilghman Street to the city limits. Immediately following its acquisition it was platted and laid out, and named The Camden Boulevard Sub-division. Then began the construction of the Boulevards, the laying of sewers as fast as needed and the introduction of gas, electricity, city water and telephone service, so that at present every modern convenience is available. Within the past two years the bitulthic pavements and cement sidewalks have been extended to the city limits. The Camden Realty Co., acquired the ownership of a large portion of the Sub-division in 1908, leaving the remainder in the possession of Mr. Fitch, and that company is carrying out the project in accordance with the policy laid down by him, one of the main features being that only desirable residents should be invited to secure land in the section, the desirability being gauged by other than financial standards; another feature being that all residences be equipped with all proper and modern improvements. The land offered is such as to meet a wide diversity of needs, part of it being located convenient to mill and factory so that the working man as well as the business and professional man, or the man of leisure can be suited. The directors of the Company are as follows: W. J. Downing, William M. Cooper, H. B. Freeny, N. T. Fitch and Uriah W. Dickerson. All of these gentlemen are well known in Salisbury and are animated by a public spirit, which is evidenced not only in this enterprise, but in every undertaking to benefit the community. Mr. Fitch, with offices in the News Building, is in active charge of the property and cheerfully furnishes all information.

Mrs. John O. Nelson, E. Brown St., Salisbury, Md., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills helped me more than any other medicine I ever took and consequently I do not have the least hesitation in recommending them. I was subject to attacks of kidney complaint for a long time and whenever I caught cold my back became weak. If I did much stooping, there was a lameness across my loins. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly endorsed by people who had taken them, I procured a supply at White & Leonard's (Drug Store) and began their use. I now feel much better in every way and I have no further trouble from my kidneys or back."

FUND OF $15,000

For Local Option Organization in Every Precinct.

The Headquarters Committee of the Anti Saloon League of Maryland has authorized the organization of a Committee of One Hundred leading men of all parties throughout the State and appeals not only to temperance people, but all friends of good government for a fund of Fifteen Thousand Dollars in addition to the contributions received at the churches, to be used in securing a working local option organization in every precinct in the State. The Committee itself started the fund with five subscriptions of Five Hundred Dollars each.

The Committee announces that the preliminary and experimental work of the last four years has cost about $75,000, which has been paid by about five per cent of the members of the churches committed to the support of the League movement and that because of the small size of the state as compared with the strength of its liquor traffic the contributions from this source are no longer enough.

The Committee catalogues in detail the facts showing that the proposed local option bill is the most pressing political and moral issue in Maryland including the statement of Governor Crothers that it was a mistake to the last Legislature not to pass it, and declares that no state League has ever done more in the same time or with the same money or has ever come so close to victory without winning next time.

The members of the Committee are Rev. J. F. Heise, D. D., State President, and Messrs. Jonathan K. Taylor, David H. Carroll, Harry S. Delany, Daniel Baker and Charles Mr. Dorsey.

Saved From Awful Death.

How an appalling calamity in his family was prevented is told by A. D. McDonald, of Fayetteville, N. C. R. F. D. No. 8. "My sister had consumption," he writes, "she was very thin and pale, had no appetite and seemed to grow weaker every day, as all remedies failed, the Dr. King's New Discovery was tried, and so completely cured her, that she has not been troubled with a cough since. It is the best medicine I ever saw or heard of." For coughs, colds, laryngitis, asthma, croup, hemorrhage, all bronchial troubles, it has no equal, 50c. and $1 Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

Interesting Session of Maryland Association.

Professor W. J. Holloway, Superintendent of Schools for Wicomico County, and Isaac L. Price, School Commissioner, attended last week, the annual meeting of the "School Commissioners and County Superintendents Association of Maryland", held at the State Normal School Building, Baltimore, Md. It was a very profitable and largely attended meeting.

The following papers were read and discussed: First, The results of grade supervision as conducted jointly by Talbot and Caroline Counties for last School year. Second, Should assistant Teachers have the right of appeal when dismissed. Third, What can this Association do to further the purposes of the Maryland State Normal School building commission. Fourth, Better School buildings in Villages and rural communities. Fifth, Teaching Agriculture and Home Economics in rural Schools.

After thorough discussion of the above papers during the two days the Association was in session, the election of officers for the ensuing two years was taken up.

Isaac L. Price, School Commissioner from Wicomico County, was elected President of the Association, and Chairman of the Executive Committee for two years.

This was indeed quite a compliment to Mr. Price, as he had just joined the Association, and was perhaps the youngest member present, and was no doubt brought about by his very active participation in the papers before the Association.

SCHOOL COM PRICE

Elected President Of Maryland Association. Interesting Session in Baltimore.

The School Commissioners' and County Superintendents' Association of Maryland held its annual meeting in the State Normal School building in Baltimore on Thursday and Friday of last week. The papers read and discussed bore upon live educational topics that are engaging the earnest attention of school people in all parts of the country. The following topics were the subjects of papers, which were in turn discussed by various members of the Association: The results of grade supervision as conducted jointly by Talbot and Caroline counties for last school year; Our opportunities for better supervision under provisions of chap. 147, acts of 1910 (permitting the appointment by School Board of grade supervisors); Should assistants teachers have the right to appeal when dismissed? What can this association do to further the purposes of the Maryland State Normal School Building Commission? Better school buildings in villages and rural communities; Teaching agriculture and home economics in the rural schools.

A prominent part was taken in these discussions by School Commissioner Isaac L. Price and Sept. Holloway of this county. Mr. Holloway read a paper before the County Superintendents' Section on Wednesday on "Should high schools be supported wholly by state aid, and to what extent should such schools be established?" Commissioner Price, of Wicomico, was unanimously elected president of the association for the ensuing year. Resolutions, which operate as a statement of principles of the Association, favor training in citizenship, a necessary product of the public schools, thorough work in the essentials, special professional training of prospective teachers, the John Hopkins Summer School, a new Normal School located in the country, the appointment of expert supervisors in each county, and urging School Boards to visit the agricultural high school at Sparks, Baltimore county, before organizing agricultural schools or courses.

Over and above the thousands of 1911 Cadillacs already delivered, two thousand people are at this moment patiently waiting for the car of their choice. It seems to us that we may well be pardoned for pointing to the positive, unswerving character of this Cadillac demand. You will find none of these two thousand Cadillac buyers looking with envious eyes at costlier cars. You will find none of them tempted by the vacillating market of lower-priced motor cars. But you will find, in every large city in the country, scores of men who have owned higher-priced automobiles, in the past, driving 1911 Cadillacs. Between the two extremes stands the Cadillac, solid as a rock in public esteem.

THE LAST RETURN

By EFFIE STEVENS

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman.)

After two sleepless nights, during which all the latent superstition of his nature had come to the front, Harold Ashton decided that he would rid himself of his ill-omened opal at the earliest possible moment.

He had had nothing but ill-luck since he owned the thing, the crowning piece being his quarrel with his fiancée, Marion Hulbert. She had declared that the great gem in its unique setting was too showy an article of jewelry for a man of good taste to wear. He had thought differently, and the outcome had been his final dismissal.

Yet how to dispose of the ring was something of a puzzle to the unimaginative Ashton.

If he offered to give the expensive jewel to any of his acquaintances they would undoubtedly think he had taken leave of his senses.

To sell it, even for a third its actual value, would take time; and he wanted to get rid of it at once.

Ashton remembered having read of a man who destroyed his opal by the vigorous use of a hammer, but he could not bear the thought of ruining the beautiful gem.

Finally he decided that the thing to do would be to lose it. But the simple and obvious methods of ridding himself of it, by casting it from a rapidly moving train, or hurling it into the ocean from the deck of a steamboat, never so much as entered his head.

He remembered, however, that a friend had once accidentally left a diamond stud in a shirt which was sent to the laundry. The loss had been discovered at once, and his friend had gone in pursuit of the shirt, but the missing stud was never found.

"I Wanted to Give You Your Opal Ring."

So when small Micky Flannigan, his washerman's son, departed that morning with the bundle of soiled clothes and incidentally the opal ring, Ashton drew a long breath of relief.

A couple of hours later a maid appeared at the door of Ashton's room with the announcement that there was a lady down stairs who was very anxious to see him. A very stout, red faced, gay bonneted lady—his washer-lady in fact—greeted him.

"What can I do for you to day, Mrs. Flannigan?" Ashton inquired blandly, although he could come pretty near guessing the good woman's errand, since he had paid his bill only the week before.

"O! brought ye this," replied Mrs. Flannigan, handing Ashton his lost—nay, rather, his found opal. "O! I'm an honest woman, so when O! found this in the wash, O! thought O!'d better be ather bringin' it back ter ye at wance."

After thanking Mrs. Flannigan substantially for her trouble, Ashton, once more, slipped the translucent ring upon his finger.

Later in the day Ashton dropped in to his friend Jim Benton's office for a chat, and the sight of the trim looking young woman, industriously pounding away upon the typewriting machine, put a new idea into his head.

"Miss Brown," he asked, "have you time to address an envelope for me?"

"Certainly," replied Miss Brown, finishing the letter she was at work upon, and inserting an envelope in her machine.

Ashton walked over to her side and told her the address in a low tone. After thanking Miss Brown, Ashton hurried from the office, with the envelope safe in his pocket, and back to the seclusion of his own room where he gave himself up to the pleasant task of packing the opal up, preparatory to losing it once more.

He did the thing up in a small box, upon which he pasted the address which he cut from the envelope.

"I'll have to guess at the postage," he remarked, as he stuck several stamps upon the little package. "It would never do for me to go to the post office and have the thing weighed; that is, not if I want to lose it."

When Ashton had shoved his box through the slit labeled "parcels" at the post office, he felt more like himself than he had done for some time.

"There," he thought complacently, "I've disposed of that opal for all time now, and I don't believe even a twin brother to Sherlock Holmes could restore it to me. They will get it at Packard's jewelry store either to-night or to-morrow morning, and I suppose they will try to find out where it came from, but they won't be able to do so. They can sell it if they want to, for all I care."

The next morning, drawn by that irresistible influence which is supposed to draw murderers to the scenes of their former crimes, often to their own undoing, Ashton was sauntering past Packard's jewelry store, when one of the clerks hailed him with: "Mr. Packard wishes to see you a moment."

With sinking heart, Ashton meekly followed the clerk into the store.

Mr. Packard looked at Ashton sharply through his spectacles, as he inquired: "This is your ring, isn't it?"

Ashton's face grew very red under the keen scrutiny of the old man.

"Yes," he stammered, pretending to examine the too familiar ring which Mr. Packard held out to him. "I—lost it."

"Huh!" ejaculated the jeweler.

"Looks more like theft. It came to us by mail. I knew in a minute it was yours, for we never made another one like it," and he pointed to the peculiar setting.

Ashton groaned inwardly at the poor memory which had caused him to forget that he had had the ring made to order from a special design of his own, at this very place.

Outwardly, however, he made the best of the matter, and took possession of the property which refused to be lost.

He resolved to make just one more attempt to dispose of the opal. If that proved as great a failure as his previous efforts had been, he would keep the ring come what might.

At two o'clock that afternoon he made his way to the Shirley theater where there was to be a popular priced matinee for children. As he had expected there was a large crowd collected before the entrance. Into this seething, pushing mass of humanity Ashton forced his way by slow degrees.

It seemed an ideal place to lose anything, whether one wanted to or not.

When he could advance no farther, Ashton slipped the ring from his finger, and without so much as glancing at those about him, slyly let it fall; then he backed out of the crowd as rapidly as he could, and hurried from the scene.

Early that evening, as he was smoking a lonely pipe, and congratulating himself upon the fact of his having at last lost his unlucky opal, the door was flung open and Ted, the curly headed young brother of Marion Hulbert, entered.

"Door was open down stairs so I just came right up," said Ted nonchalantly. "Got a note from sis, and, making a sudden dive into the depths of his trousers pocket, he drew forth a crumpled note, which he tossed to Ashton.

Ashton opened it with trembling fingers and read:

"Please come to me this evening. I wish to restore to you something of value which you have lost. Marion."

He got rid of Ted in short order, and then struggled into evening clothes. "Poor little girl," he thought miserably, as he hastened his preparations, "she's had as hard a time of it as I have had, and now she's given in and sent for me to tell me that she wishes to make up and restore herself to me. It's tough for her to have to own up that she's been in the wrong, so I'll make things as easy for her as I can, by acting as if nothing had come between us."

So, when he entered the Hulberts' parlor, Ashton, not noticing or heeding Marion's embarrassed demeanor, sprang forward and clasped her unsuspecting form in his arms. The quarrel was speedily a thing of the past.

It was not until a triumphant Ashton was bidding a blushing Marion good-night, that that young person remembered to say: "There, I came near forgetting to give you your lost property."

"I supposed that you had already returned it," Ashton replied with a meaning smile.

"Of course not," Marion pouted. "I wanted to give you your opal ring."

"Where on earth did you get it?" demanded the amazed Ashton.

"I took my small niece to the theater and when I reached home I found it caught in the plastic of my skirt. I recognized it as yours and sent for you. Of course I saw you near me at the entrance though you didn't condescend to notice me."

Now his opal is Ashton's most treasured piece of jewelry, and when anyone says anything about an opal's bringing bad luck to the wearer he is firm stoutly that his has brought him the best possible luck a man could have; but he has never thought it necessary to explain to his wife just how he happened to lose the opal that day at the theater entrance when she found it.

Americans, as Usual, to the Fore. In order to raise the $50,000 kronas still necessary for the Johann Strauss memorial, to be erected in Vienna, a series of performances will be given at the Theater an der Wien, where nearly all the world's great operas were performed for the first time.

Members of the operatic companies and the various musical organizations of that city have volunteered their services, and the best seats for the first performance, which will be "The Gypsy Baron," have already been subscribed for. In commenting on the assured success a Vienna paper says that visiting Americans have been the most liberal subscribers.

CLAMP BRACKET TO BUILDING

Fastened to Structure Is Found More Convenient Than Hooks as Can Be Raised or Lowered.

Two clamps six inches long may be used to fasten a bracket to the joist of a building and will be found more convenient than hooks since it can be lowered or raised to suit the workmen by simply loosening the clamps and moving the bracket as desired.

The clamps used in the accompanying illustration are similar to those which fasten a cutter to the beam of a plow and are fastened in the same manner.

Brackets can be made out of two planks three or four feet in length, nailed together at right angles and braced by a third board as shown.

The bracket is then fastened to the building by boring holes for the clamps and fastening the clamps around the joist.

FOLLY IN FRETTING

SENSITIVE GIRL CAUSES OWN UNHAPPINESS.

Her Wounds Are Self-Inflicted and Vanish When She Has Brought Herself to Take Healthy View of Life.

She has a hard time, goodness knows, even among her family and friends, for her feelings are always being hurt by some of them. But when she goes into the business world it will seem to fairly bristle with thorns, so many will be the slights she will apparently receive.

Most of the wounds of the sensitive girl are self-inflicted, only, unfortunately, she doesn't know it. When she gains this knowledge her suffering and her tears will soon cease.

It is wisdom that is slow in coming, for you can't make the sensitive girl believe that the slights directed her way are not intended. She is so sure in her mind that her grievance is just that argument is hopeless.

Indeed, argument is hopeless most of the time with the sensitive girl. If you number such a one among your friends or in your family, try to change her way of looking at the world, instead of arguing with her that her grievances are groundless.

Try to get her to see that the world is too big and people too busy to be occupied in thinking up ways to hurt her feelings, and that in the main people are too kind to do such things anyway. The idea that people are continually shooting arrows her way comes frequently from an overdeveloped ego. She believes other people are thinking as much about herself as she is, and their words and actions she misconstrues as directed to herself, when the probability is they never had her in mind at all nor thought of such a construction being put upon their conduct.

This is particularly true in business. Business people are entirely too rushed to mince words or to consider how people may take what they say. The sensitive girl is extremely foolish to think every unkind word, every slur about poorly done work or slowness is directed at her. Rest assured if her work doesn't suit, she will hear directly from her employer. He won't beat around the bush about it. And she needn't torture herself with the thought that he is whipping her over somebody else's shoulders.

Common sense and a philosophical spirit are good cures for sensitiveness. But these are the very qualifications the sensitive girl is apt to lack. The best thing to help her is to mix with the world and with people, to get a big, broad view of life where in she will see how extremely small she and her affairs are. This will gradually give her a saner and more rational viewpoint and her extreme sensitiveness will disappear. She will become much happier, much more companionable. The sensitive girl should endeavor to get this view of life, for she is making herself wretched over things which in the main do not exist, for most of the slights and wounds to her feelings are imaginary, not real. And it is a pity to spoil life with imaginary ills.

Nightgaps.

The arrival of the nightcap in all its old-time freshness and with an added glory of lace, rosettes above each string should give a flutter of pure delight to the woman of the wavy hair. The bought wave is not inclined to stand too much reckless sleeping and a nightmare or two means death to a half-worn wave. Having paid out her good money for curls, or, worse, having charged these perishable beautifiers, Miss Vanity will have the nightcap with rejoicing; and, whether or not the cap will be usurped by the most modern of maidens as a curl protector, its revival means one more little garment for grandmas. Fine handkerchief linen and French hand embroidery is the best recipe we know and the Normandy cap the most charming pattern.

Buckle of Gold Braid. A beautiful buckle of any desired shape may be made by plaiting three strands of the narrowest gold braid together and wiring on the back. Nothing could be nicer as a finish for an empire belt, for the ready-made buckle of metal not only lacks the lace in the gown, but swells all the beauties in its midst.

Stubbins the Genius

BY ELLIOTT FLOWER

(Copyright by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

Stubbins always insisted that he was a genius, and no one ever challenged the assertion more than once. The reason for this was that Stubbins was a long-winded controversialist. When any statement he made was disputed, he immediately undertook the task of proving by argument that he was right, and he never stopped talking so long as any voice was raised in opposition to his contention. So when Stubbins said he had invented a compressed food that would beat anything of that nature on the market no one dared even to express a doubt.

"Other people," said Stubbins, "have tried to secure this result by taking the extract of some particularly strengthening article of diet, and thus they lose much that is nutritious. I have reached success by compression. Absolutely nothing is lost, and yet a man can carry rations for two weeks in his pocket. A single pill is enough to satisfy any one, for, once in the stomach, the ingredients are released by the gastric juice and become a hearty meal."

We pretended to believe every word of this, but all of us were quite content that Stubbins should experiment on himself. He was going with us for a little excursion into the woods, and he tried to induce us to leave the customary supply of provisions behind and rely entirely on his pills, but we refused.

"I'll Explode, I Know I Will."

"No doubt it is quite as you say," we told him, "but it is better that you should have the glory of first demonstrating the value of this compressed food."

He ridiculed our preparations for the trip, asserting that we were making a lot of unnecessary trouble for ourselves, and triumphantly displayed a little tin box, which he said contained enough food to keep him well and strong for a month. At our first noonday meal in the woods he simply took a pill, and then settled himself under the spreading branches of a big tree and smoked complacently. Later, however, when I happened to be riding beside him, he remarked doubtfully: "Do you know, I think I made a miscalculation with some of those pills. The one I took doesn't seem to have the effect I anticipated."

"Perhaps the gastric juices have not had time to get in their work on it yet," I suggested.

"Possibly," he replied, "but I think I will take another, just for luck."

In the course of that afternoon I saw him take no less than four, and when we made camp and put out our evening repast there again seemed to be a wistful, envious look in his eyes. Nevertheless, he declined to eat with us, contenting himself with two pills then and two or three more just before we turned in.

I was tired and went to sleep immediately, but about midnight I was awakened by a terrible groaning. It proved to be Stubbins.

"For heaven's sake, do something for me!" he cried plaintively. "I'm getting ready to burst."

"What's the matter?" I asked.

"Those pills, I guess," he moaned. "They're working like a meal of dried apples with a pint of water on top. I'll explode, I know I will!"

In truth, he was in a serious predicament. He had sought repose a small, slight specimen of humanity, and now he was rapidly assuming the proportions of Dickens' fat boy. I hastily awoke the others, and we held a council of war.

"What shall we do?" asked Duvall, and no one could answer.

"Whatever it is," Stubbins said faintly between groans, "it's got to be done in a hurry. At the rate things are going I figure that only the pills I took at noon and in the early afternoon had been released so far, and I have had eight or nine full meals since then. I'll be bigger than a house before morning."

"Something must be done to keep the swelling down," asserted Duvall, and this had such a professional ring to it that we called him "Doctor" ever afterwards.

nicely where it would do the most good, and we drew it good and tight. "It isn't pleasant," sighed Stubbins, "but it relieves the strain on me. Do—do you think it will hold?"

We insisted that there could be no doubt of it.

"If it breaks or the buckle pulls out," he said, "some of you people will get hurt sure, for I'll just naturally blow up like a boiler or an over-charged balloon."

Stubbins always was a thoughtful fellow, and this warning led us to put on another surcingle as a sort of safety catch. Then we had trouble trying to decide what to do with him. He couldn't very well ride and he couldn't walk, and there was no telling when he would get down to normal proportions again. Duvall solved the problem, however. He remembered seeing a house about a mile back on the road, and there we succeeded in borrowing a wagon. We rolled Stubbins up in a blanket, put him in the wagon, and started back home. Once during the journey we had a scare, but otherwise it was uneventful. Duvall was driving when Stubbins suddenly cried, "Look out, boys, the surcingle is slipping!" whereupon Duvall made a wild jump, struck the side of a hill, and rolled to the bottom. Elwood and I dropped behind our horses. One learns to be cautious and quick in the vicinity of explosives. But, fortunately, this proved to be a false alarm, and we finally delivered Stubbins at his home in fairly good condition, considering the circumstances. His wife came to the door, and Duvall tried to break the news to her gently.

"Now, don't faint!" he said. "There's nothing seriously wrong."

"What have you in that wagon?" she demanded, trying to push by him.

"Why—why, nothing but a package of compressed food," he answered hastily.

At this Stubbins raised himself up a little and cried: "Well, it's all right, anyway. I've proved that."

Stubbins certainly is an enthusiast in everything he undertakes, but he couldn't get us to experiment with his invention. We left him to waste away for a week or two, and made our hunting trip without him or his pills.

WAS WELL THEY DIDN'T MEET
Friends Knew That Southern Colonel and Five-Cent Mint Julep Was Poor Combination.

The southern colonel had been in New York long enough to become acquainted with a large area of the city, and the other day, his last before his departure for his home, he sat with some friends in the cafe of his hotel, telling, a little boastfully it may be said, that he knew his way around as well as a native. The glasses in front of the party were tall and frost-covered, and small green leaves decorated them pleasingly.

"Yes, suh," said the colonel, "I have seen what yuh call 'little old New York,' suh, and it's a grand place."

"Have you seen the Bowery?" some one asked.

"I have, suh, and it's a fraud, suh. It does not live up to its reputation. I saw nothing remarkable on the Bowery, suh."

"Then you didn't see a Bowery saloon's big sign, 'Mint Julep, Five Cents,'" said the man who had asked the question. "And I am glad you did not, else you probably would have gone in and shot the barkeeper for insulting your favorite drink."

"I did not see the sign, suh, nor do I see why I should have shot the barkeeper," replied the colonel, warmly. "Of course, that is no price for a mint julep, suh, but I can't see the insult. Maybe, suh, that barkeeper is a philanthropist. Maybe he thinks as I do that mint juleps ought to be free all for asking, but being a business man and compelled to avoid losing money, he puts a price on his juleps, when, if he could, he would rather give them away free, suh. I'm sorry I did not see that sign, suh. I would have had one of those juleps, suh."

"Then you certainly would have shot the barkeeper," was the chorus, as the gentlemen present turned their attention to the tall glasses.—N. Y. Press.

Ask National Target Range.
Army officers are suggesting a national target range which will be sufficient for all kinds of practice for the army, navy and marine corps, from pistol shooting to field artillery.

It is proposed to acquire by purchase fifteen or twenty thousand acres of land in Virginia near Washington. This could be so arranged that all of the target practice in this part of the country as well as competition shooting could be held here. A proposal that the government purchase Camp Perry, the Ohio target range, is not well received. Camp Perry is not adapted to mixed firing under actual campaign conditions. An appropriation from congress may be asked to buy the Virginia tract.

What If the World Stopped?
Suppose that some mysterious power, entirely mental or spiritual in its nature, and of a high order of intellect, a mentality or soul absolutely acquainted with the human mind even down to minute details, should desire to make an announcement, a statement to mankind in general, how would it proceed to attract attention? I have thought of a few ways or methods which could attract the attention of man. Thus, suppose that at exact noon in the observatory in Washington or Greenwich, all the telegraphic instruments on earth should instantly refuse to work. Let every wire on land and in cables beneath the sea cease to act. Let every key come to rest and every sounder be silent. Imagine this silence to continue five minutes. The attention of all telegraph people would be attracted and then that of newspaper men. Let ten minutes pass, and business men would hear of the phenomenon. Let the trouble continue during an hour, then everybody living in cities might hear that the telegraphs were lifeless. In one year, perhaps, half of the human race would hear of the phenomenon.—Illustrated.

A Railroad Ghost Explained

"It wasn't my fault, so every one said, that Hipe Conklin missed his footin' when he was tryin' to board my engine after he had flagged me on the midnight express 'n' fell under the wheels, losin' his life," said the fat engineer; "but I blamed myself considerable nevertheless, 'n' took it some to heart. It's customary when you're flagged to just slow down 'n' let the flagman make the tank step to get on the engine 'n' tell you what's doin' on ahead. This night when Hipe swung me up because his last freight train was stalled a couple of miles down the line I eased her up 'n' was scarcely makin' more'n seven or eight mile an hour when the tank step came along to Hipe, but some way or 'nother he missed 'n' went under, bein' killed before I could stop."

"I took a week or so off before I went back on my run again, but I made up my mind that railroadin' at its best was a serious business 'n' it was up to me to get down to cases 'n' go back to work or move on down to the poorhouse."

"Natchery my first trip after the accident I was quite squeamish comin' down along by Nicholson's curve, where Hipe had met his death. Just as we commenced to take the curve I gritted my teeth 'n' got myself on edge. As the train commenced to straighten out on the main line after comin' aroun' the curve I saw a white light swingin' horizontally across the track, which of course is a signal to stop, 'n' stop I did. After we had come to a standstill, however, we could find no white light nor anybody aroun' who might have been swingin' it."

"It's mighty peculiar, mighty peculiar," I says, climbin' back.

"Of course the boys all thought I was seasin' things, but I declared up 'n' down that I had seen a white light bein' swung across the tracks 'n' I wouldn't have it any other way. Incidentally such an occurrence didn't go very far toward smoothin' out my pent up feelin'."

"I wasn't the only man who had seen the light at that, for it soon got passed aroun' up in the stove committee 'n' elsewhere at meetin's of the railroad men, 'n' other boys allowed that they'd seen the same thing."

"My next trip down there on the midnight express I just called to my fireman as I came in the vicinity of Nicholson's curve 'n' made him keep his peepers peeled just to see what he could see. As we come aroun' the curve the little white light was on the job all right."

"Did you see it, Murr?" I hollers to my fireman.

"I certainly did," he says, his teeth a-chatterin'. "You goin' to stop?"

"Stop nuthin'," I answers, for I was gettin' my nerve back now. "If that's Hipe Conklin's ghost he wants to read up on the rules. It ain't good form to flag a train with a white light."

"I jerked the throttle open 'n' we was away from there full tilt, but I wasn't scared a bit."

"We were not through with the spookin' of Nicholson's curve, however, for the next time I was comin' east with that midnight express I got a whistle signal from the conductor to stop and no monkey business about it. So I set up the brakes 'n' we stopped. One of the journals on the sleepers was gittin' agitated 'n' the conductor had signaled me to stop till they could soothe it."

"Well, of course I was just tickled to death to stop right there in the community of interest of that will o' the wisp light. We came to a standstill just as I was on a direct line with it. There it was all right, swingin' slowly 'n' steadily. Now that I could get a good sight on it while the engine was standin' still I saw that it was considerable to the right of the tracks 'n' some distance away 'n' only the speed of the train comin' aroun' there made it appear to swing directly across the track."

"Knowin' that we would probably lay to some minutes while the crew were pacifyin' the anarchistic box I just stopped down off the engine 'n' went to a little clump of trees at the side of the track 'n' peered through. An' what d'ye think it was? Why, there on a factory in a village a couple of miles to the right of the track they had erected one of them big clocks for advertisin' purposes. The long pendulum was fitted with an electric light 'n' as the pendulum went from right to left, left to right, the light would swing. Comin' around the curve you could get a glimpse of this swingin' light through a clearin' in the trees, but after the train got straightened up again you'd lose sight of it."

"As I said before, I'm no believer in ghosts, but I was mighty glad to know that it was only a clock pendulum 'n' not Hipe Conklin's ghost that had been a-hecklin' me. If I hadn't got nervous 'n' ran so far by I would have found it out the first night 'n' saved myself a lot of frettin'."

JAMES CANNON, SR. DEAD

Formerly An Influential Citizen Of Salisbury. Many Friends Here.

Mr. Harry Dennis received a telegram this week announcing the death of Mr. James Cannon Sr., at Blackstone Seminary, Virginia, early Thursday morning.

Mr. Cannon was for many years one of the leading men of Salisbury and very prominent in its business, social and religious circles. He was engaged in the general mercantile business for a number of years and was one of the leading merchants of this city. He afterwards engaged in the shoe business and continued in this line, at the stand now occupied by White & Leonard as a drug store, until he severed his business relations here. For a number of years he was President of the School Board of the county. Mr. Cannon had many warm friends here. For the past ten years, he has made his home with his son, James Cannon Jr., at Blackstone Seminary of which his son is President. Funeral services were held at Blackstone today at 10 a. m. Interment will be made at Hollywood Cemetery, Richmond, this afternoon. He is survived by one son Mr. James Cannon Jr. Deceased was 78 years of age.

DEATH OF MRS. SHOWELL

In Salisbury—Body Taken To Berlin For Interment.

Mrs. Annie B. Showell, widow of the late Lemuel Showell, died Monday night at the Home for the Aged in this city. Mrs. Showell had been an inmate of the home for several months. Her remains were taken to Berlin Wednesday morning for interment beside her husband.

Mrs. Showell was born February 26, 1844, and was a daughter of the late Curtis W. Jacobs, of Worcester County. She was a member of one of the most prominent of the old Maryland families and her husband, the late Lemuel Showell was at one time reckoned as the wealthiest citizen of this section of the country. He was President of the Wicomico & Pocomoke Railroad Company and heavily interested in land and vessel property. Mrs. Showell's family were also wealthy people before the war, her father being a big land owner.

Mrs. Showell is survived by one daughter, Miss Nadine Showell, of Ocean City, a grandson, T. Howard Dalt, of Baltimore, and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. P. L. Cannon, of Bridgeville, Del.; Mrs. James B. Bishop, Showell, Md.; Mrs. Thos. Powell, Norfolk, Va.; Mr. Edward Jacobs and Yancy Jacobs, of Berlin.

Improve The Town Property.

We are interested in the prosperity of our town. We can contribute to it materially, and give it a far more prosperous look at the same time.

Perhaps the public property needs a good coat of paint.

Devoe will supply that coat with two thirds of the number of gallons required of any other. Devoe will last twice as long as any other. Devoe is all paint and full measure. Devoe is the strongest paint known. Devoe will take care of the property in the long run, for half the money required by any other.

The reason is stated above: Devoe is all paint, and full measure the strongest paint known.

E. D. Jewell, Corry, Pa., painted his house five years ago with a mixed paint; took fourteen gallons. Last spring he repainted with Devoe; bought fourteen gallons and had four left. Saved $15 to $20 as painting costs two or three times as much as the paint.

WORK OF LEGISLATURE

Many Good Bills Passed—Party Pledges Redeemed.

The session of the 1910 Legislature came to an end on Monday night, and while the Senate lived up to its reputation for dignity and solemnity in the closing hour of the session, the House gave full reign to fun and gaiety, and the session came to an end in an uproar of mirth and good fellowship.

The session just closed has been a remarkable one from many standpoints, and its acts in many of the bills passed will go down as epochs in the history of the State. Despite the hard and desperate fight made by the public service corporations of the State, many bills regulating them demanded by the public were passed, although in several cases the legislature kept the public on the uneasy seat clear up to the last few hours of the session.

The primary bill passed, while a disappointment as far as Wicomico County is concerned, yet is a big step in the right direction—and if several of the counties had not been excepted and given a referendum would for the main part fulfilled the pledges of the party in this respect. Other pledges were redeemed and apparently in spirit as well as in form.

Governor Crothers in commenting upon the work of the Legislature has the following to say:

"While the session of the Legislature began with an exhibition of extravagance in the appointment of employees, which made a bad impression and caused much apprehension of its further conduct, it closes the session after having enacted more good, wholesome laws than any other Legislature that I have ever known."

Products Of The Session.

"It might seem strange for me to say this without enumerating some of the work of the session. Among the important measures enacted, the following may be mentioned:

"The Public Service bill.
"The bills for the State care of the insane with an appropriation of $800,000 for buildings and a building and care for the colored insane.

"The Lunacy bill, making most excellent provision for the supervision of asylums by the Lunacy Commission.
"The Pure Food Law, second to no similar law in the country.

"A Vast Step Forward."

"A primary election law, which, while it does not go as far as I wished, still is a vast step forward. Under it the primaries will be conducted by the sworn officials of the State and their integrity and honesty will be guarded by law and enforced by penalties. The law will apply to the city of Baltimore and sixteen counties. While the State officials will not be nominated by direct vote, still the names of its candidates will be on the ballots and to that extent the people can control.

"A new assessment law for all the counties, except two, which have just completed a reassessment.

"A banking law long demanded by the banks as well as by the people for their protection. This law will subject banks to a scrutiny, will safeguard deposits and will put State banks on as high a plane as national banks.

"The automobile law not only provides for the safety of travelers on the roads, but imposes a license tax which will yield a large sum for the maintenance of the State highways.

Harmony On Road Work.

"The work of road making by the State Roads Commission and that by the Geological Survey under the Shoe-maker law has been consolidated. This will work for harmony and for more economical administration. There were also many local laws enacted at the session making improvement in road building in the counties and appropriating funds for the good work.

"A large sum was appropriated by the Legislature to make a great highway from Baltimore to Annapolis. This is an improvement I have had greatly at heart. It will not only be an advantage to Baltimore, but to Annapolis, and to the country lying between the cities, which will be built up and improved.

Repeal of Gas Monopoly.

"The repeal of the gas monopoly was one of the notable and remarkable achievements of the session and a triumph of the people.

"The Western Maryland Railroad bill, enabling the company to extend its line to a connection with Pittsburgh, will give impetus to the city of Baltimore and to other parts of the State.

"Beside these State-wide measures, there was much legislation of peculiar value to Baltimore city.

Digges Bill Honest, He Says.

"The Digges bill, which presents the question of negro franchise squarely and honestly to the white people of the State, it will not be complicated as the election with any question about foreigners or illiterate whites. Under this law there will be no excitement. It is an orderly and legal method of settling the Wiltshire Amendment.

Resolutions For A National Health Bureau.

Resolved, That the resolutions favoring the immediate establishment of a National Health Bureau adopted by the National Grange and approved by the State Grange, are hereby endorsed and

Resolved, That we desire the necessary legislation providing for the establishment of a National Health Bureau be enacted at this session of Congress, and that our Congressmen and U. S. Senators should use all their influence to that end, and

Resolved That copies of these resolutions duly signed and sealed with the seal of the Grange, be sent to our Congressmen and the U. S. Senators for this State, and to the local newspapers for publication.
W. F. Morris, Secretary.

ment. The State officials who will be elected under the Digges law will hold their respective offices until their successors qualify and the State government will go on in an orderly and legal manner, even if the Supreme Court should decide the law to be invalid. The State will bow in quiet submission to the decision of the court, and, if that decision is adverse to the State, we will be just where we are now and no worse off. There is no occasion for excitement. The negroes will vote this fall and at every Congressional election, and I believe they will be satisfied here as they have been elsewhere, and that the law will result to their advantage as well as to the advantage of the white population.

"I am unable yet to speak definitely about the appropriation bills, but they look smaller than those of the last session.

"The enactment of the public service bill will require the veto of many bills affecting corporations."

GOSSIP OF THE SUN

On The First Judicial Circuit Judgeship.

Now that the session of the Legislature of 1910 is over, there is a revival of interest in appointments at the disposal of the Governor. Among those will be the selection of judges to succeed Judges D. G. Wright, of Baltimore, and Charles F. Holland, of Wicomico county.

The following statement was made by a leader of the bar in the first judicial circuit:

"It is thought that Governor Crothers will probably fill the vacancies soon after the adjournment of the Legislature, perhaps some time this or early next week. The vacancy in the first circuit created by the retirement of Judge Holland is one which it is thought important to be filled promptly, because the spring terms of the courts—which are jury terms—are likely to keep the judges in this circuit busy for next two months. The Court of Appeals is now in session and will likely be in session until June, and Chief Judge Patterson, of the First circuit, is in attendance upon that court. Judge Jones is therefore called upon to act alone in the Wicomico court, now in session, and the Somerset court will convene next week. The spring terms of the Dorchester and the Worcester courts are also yet to be held. Because of this situation in the First circuit, it is thought the judges and lawyers in that circuit will urge the Governor to fill the vacancy at once.

"Recently the friends of Mr. Henry L. D. Stanford, of the Somerset bar, are manifesting great confidence that the Governor will name Mr. Stanford.

At the time of the passage of the so-called retiring Judge Holland about three weeks ago, it was thought that the indications were that there was some kind of an alliance or understanding between the political elements in Dorchester and Wicomico counties in favor of the candidacy of Mr. E. Stanley Toadvin, and that Worcester influences would be neutral. This does not now seem to be the situation. Many members of the bar in Dorchester and Worcester counties have endorsed Mr. Stanford and letters, telegrams and petitions are on file at the Executive offices showing this.

"The Senator and members of the House from Dorchester county, as well as members of the House from Worcester county, have petitioned the Governor to appoint Mr. Stanford. Petitions and letters from the business men in the towns of Worcester county would also seem to indicate a sentiment in that county in favor of Mr. Stanford.

"In Wicomico county the bar endorsement is divided between Mr. James E. Ellegood and Mr. Toadvin, while the political forces are said to be behind the candidacy of the latter. Mr. Toadvin was Land Commissioner during the terms of Governors Smith and Warfield, while Mr. Stanford is chiefly known to the people of the State through his record in the Legislature of 1908."

MRS. SMITH IS DEAD

Senator Smith's Wife Dies At Home Of Colonel And Mrs. Foster In Baltimore.

Mrs. Mary Frances Smith, wife of United States Senator John Walter Smith, died shortly before eight o'clock Tuesday night of heart trouble at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Colonel and Mrs. Arthur D. Foster, at Roland Park. Death had been expected for several days, and at her bedside when she came was Senator Smith, Colonel and Mrs. Foster, with other members of the household.

Mrs. Smith had been in ill health for more than a year, but up until ten days ago had maintained her interest in political and national events. A complication of diseases induced the heart trouble from which she died.

Dr. J. M. T. Finney, Julius Froendwald, Charles E. Simon and T. Frederick Liess, who were in attendance, used every medical measure to prolong life.

Up until the last moment of her life Mrs. Smith manifested devotion for her two grandchildren John Walter Smith Foster and Arthur D. Foster, Jr., of whom she was extremely fond.

Mrs. Smith had closed her Snow Hill home last Christmas and was living with her son-in-law and daughter for the winter while Senator Smith was busy at Washington.

Mrs. Smith's life has been one of singular devotion to her husband, and during the forty years in which he rose from the proprietor of a small store in Snow Hill to United States Senator and one of the wealthiest men in the State she has been at his side.

Before her marriage she was Mary Frances Richardson. Born in Snow Hill, she was left an orphan when a small child and was reared by an older stepbrother. Mr. George S. Richardson, of Snow Hill. She went to school first in Reading, Pa., and later was graduated from a girls' seminary in Norrisstown, Pa.

During her childhood she was a playmate of the then boy—John Walter Smith—and from the days of their kills and knee dresses they were fond of each other. While each was being educated this friendship gradually ripened, and they were married at Snow Hill.

Only a few years before Senator Smith had embarked on a commercial career with a general store. After his marriage he began to deal in lumber and grain. From the start he has attributed much of his success to his wife. Highly educated, she mastered the intricacies of business so that she might be a better companion for her husband, and when he entered politics she likewise became familiar with public affairs. Her friends describe her as being domestic in her tastes, and while she was a charming hostess she cared little for society. Two children were born to them—Miss Charlotte Whittington Smith, who died in 1896, and Mrs. Arthur D. Foster, who was before her marriage, Miss Georgia Richardson Smith.

When Colonel Smith became Governor in 1901 Mrs. Smith discharged the delicate social functions of the Governor's mansion with a charm that won her many friends and admirers. During the four years of her husband's term she kept herself intimately informed as to legislation and other problems which confronted him and was his advisor and confidant.

At Snow Hill, where she lived with Senator Smith for the major portion of each year, she was regarded by the town folk as a patron of all that was uplifting and helpful, and white and black as well, knew the kindly offices which "Miss Mary," as they called her, dispensed so quietly.

A staunch Presbyterian, she was a member and supporter of the Makemie Presbyterian Church at Snow Hill. During her stay in Baltimore she attended the Northminster Church.

Since her daughter's marriage she spent a portion of each year with Colonel and Mrs. Foster at their home in Roland Park, and Colonel and Mrs. Foster, with the two grandchildren, usually spent a part of the summer at Snow Hill. At times during the year the two families spent a few weeks at Atlantic City.

The funeral took place from her late home in Snow Hill Thursday afternoon.

Report of Grand Jury March Term Court.

The Grand Jury completed its deliberation Saturday afternoon and was discharged by the Court. The Jury examined a large number of witnesses and found 15 true bills, covering various offenses. In a lengthy report to the Court the Jury referred to the reckless driving of automobiles in the following language:

"The Grand Jury deplore the conditions existing in our city and county occasioned by fast and reckless driving of automobiles, and insist upon our officials, both in the county and incorporated towns, to use every effort in keeping within the legal speed limits the running of same. We believe the law regulating the speed limit is being daily violated and the safety of the lives of our citizens is endangered thereby. We recommend that this matter be taken up at once by our officials and the law regulating same be strictly enforced, and if advisable, to enact an ordinance giving the informer the fine, or part thereof."

John J. Phillips, Charles W. Hason and Thomas A. Melson, the committee appointed to visit the County Home, near Quantico, made the following report: "On Thursday, March 31, we visited the Home and found it in a cleanly condition and well kept, but in need of some repairs. There were five inmates—two white and three colored—all of whom seem to be taken care of well. In care of the keeper we found one pair of mules, one horse, six cows, six pigs, one brood sow and eight pigs, one male, and all stock well taken care of. We also found 15 acres in growing wheat, corn and fodder and a good quantity of other supplies."

The entire jury inspected the Court House and Jail Friday afternoon, and made the following report: "There are ten prisoners in the jail, nine colored and one white. The cells are all in good condition except the water pipes in the closets, and these need immediate attention. We also found that the floors in the halls and kitchen need repairing; also new washboards in the same places are badly needed. We recommend the erection of a suitable building for the occupancy of the sheriff or his deputy as soon as practicable. We inspected the Court House and found it in good condition, except that the ceiling of the lower hall and the ceilings of the judges' and grand jury rooms need painting."

PEOPLE'S PULPIT...

Sermon by CHARLES T.
RUSSELL,
Pastor Brooklyn
Tabernacle.

THE NECESSITY FOR THE MILLENNIUM.

"Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heavens must retain until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."—Acts iii, 19-21.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 3.—Pastor C. T. Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle preached here twice today to splendid audiences. One of his discourses was entitled, "The Overthrow of Satan's Empire." The other, which we report was on the necessity for the Millennium from the text above quoted. Pastor Russell said:

Respecting two matters there can be no question:—
(1) That the early Church thoroughly believed in a Millennial Kingdom, hoped for it, prayed for it—"Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."
(2) It is equally certain that today the doctrine of the Millennium is taboos as "out of date"—out of harmony with the views of the Higher Critics and Evolutionists, who are filling practically all the chairs in our colleges and the majority of the pulpits of Christendom.

What has led to this radical change on the part of the religious wise men of all denominations? Have they taken a step in advance or are they departing from the path—the teachings of the inspired Word of God? That they have left the Word of God, that they profess far more wisdom and ability than the writers of the Bible and a higher intellectual inspiration than they, is indisputable. The question, for us, is: Will Christians in considerable numbers follow these leaders away from God, away from all Divine revelation? We put our trust in literary princes who claim the right to instruct the world, not by Divine appointment or authority, but by virtue of their large amount of self-esteem?

The present day concept of the Church of Christ is that God planted it amongst men as a leaven in a batch of dough with the intent that it should propagate itself until the entire mass would be leavened. But the Bible apostle concept of the Church's message is the very reverse of this—that it is planted in the world, not with a view to converting the world, but on the contrary to keep itself separate from the world and to draw to itself "As many as the Lord your God shall call" of the pure in heart—to sacrifice earthly interests for Divine interests, unto death, and later, by the First Resurrection, to enter into the heavenly glory of the Redeemer as his "Bride," his "Wife," his "Joint-Heir" in the Kingdom glory and the Kingdom work. And the work of that Kingdom is set forth to be the "blessing of all the families of the earth."

The two views are so radically opposite that none should confuse them in their minds. If one is right, the other is wrong. If one is Scriptural, the other is unscriptural. In the above item Dr. Brown admits that the Scriptural view entertained by the early Church contemplated the Church in suffering and in a temporary or tabernacle condition in the present life and promised a share with Christ in his reign in power and great glory, as God's Kingdom during the Millennium. The safe, proper, the right course is to go back and take up afresh the doctrine of the Millennium—the doctrine that the faithful of the Church now being tried and tested will constitute the glorious Kingdom of God's dear Son after their change from earthly to spirit conditions in the "First Resurrection" (1 Corinthians xv, 42-44).

The Laymen's Movement.
God bless the Christian Endeavor and Epworth League and Students' Missionary League and the Laymen's Movement, all intent on "Storming the world for Jesus." We bear their witness that they have a zeal for God which we greatly admire and would encourage. But their zeal is "not according to knowledge," and is therefore considerably misdirected. To any one of logical mind, who will reason from statistics, the thought of converting the world by singing a few rousing hymns or holding a few enthusiastic meetings for the collection of money! money! money! would be childish. We do not despise childishness. We have all had our share. But we all should say with the Apostle: "When I was a child, I spake as a child and understood as a child; but when I became a man I put away childish things" (1 Corinthians xiii, 11). "Christian people have been fooling themselves long enough." Yes, it is as absolutely irrational to think of converting the world, as it is unscriptural to believe that God ever gave us that impossible commission. The United States census reports show that there are twice as many heathen today as there were a century ago. The word heathen carries to many a very wrong impression. Many noble-hearted Christians have gone as missionaries to the heathen wholly unprepared for what they met—intelligent reasoning ability, etc. They found that the heathen were full of questions, logical questions, too, which they as Christians had never thought of, and which they were wholly unprepared to answer. Comparatively few of the missionaries are able to hold their own in argument with intelligent people in India, China, and Japan. There is no danger of their converting those people. There is more danger of their losing their own faith in the Bible, because of their misapprehension of some of its teachings—respecting the mission of the Church, the hope of the Church and the hope of the world.

Missionaries are thus handicapped. Full of commendable zeal they leave our shores to tell the heathen that their forefathers have gone to eternal torment and that they are going there.

too, unless they accept Christ. It is a rude awakening to be asked where hell is? and why God should have condemned them and their forefathers to such a horrible eternity? and how this could be true and yet he be a God of pity, compassion, Love? The heathen ask: Why the different denominations—the different theories of the terms of salvation—by Water, by Election, by Free Grace, by joining the Church, etc. The missionary, wholly unable to answer the adult native, gathers children about him, starts a school and does all he is able perhaps, to justify his presence in a foreign land—helping the sick and doing many other acts of kindness which are very commendable, whether from a religious or humanitarian standpoint.

Preach the Gospel to All Nations.
Our Lord's instruction was that his people should preach the Gospel in all the world for a witness—not to convert all the world, but for a "witness" to all the world. "The mission of the Gospel is to select the Kingdom class, a 'little flock.' The first opportunity to become members of this Royal Priesthood was offered to the Jews and, after the gathering of a remnant from them, and after their national rejection, the message was to go to the whole world irrespective of national lines, boundaries or language—anybody, everybody having the 'hearing ear,' was to be instructed respecting Christ and the opportunity of becoming his disciples by a full consecration of mind and body, time and talent, even unto death. These were to be promised the reward of a share in the First Resurrection, to be members of the Millennial Kingdom of Messiah, will bless all the remaining families of mankind—all the non-elect.

We are not complaining about the failure to convert the heathen! We are not faulting the missionaries! We are taking the Bible stand that all of God's purposes are being accomplished; that God's Word is accomplishing "that whereof it was sent" (Isaiah li, 11); that it was not sent to convert the world, but to gather an "elect" sample or "first-fruits" from all nations (Revelation xiv, 4). Let conflicting influences continue in heathendom, as well as in Christendom. But let all Christians, missionaries and others, know assuredly that their labor is not in vain if they are seeking for the Lord's jewels to the best of their ability. I am in touch continually with laborers in India and Africa and well know that the pure Gospel of Christ is now greatly affecting their teeming millions. But the Gospel of the Kingdom is seeking out, blessing, sanctifying, happying, encouraging some, here and there; some, who have ears of faith to hear, eyes of faith to see, and obedient hearts to obey the "call" to suffer with Christ and by and by to reign with him for the effectual blessing of all the families of the earth, by uplifting the willing out of their present conditions of sin and degradation and death.

The Millennium a Necessity.
We have shown the value and necessity for the doctrine of the Millennium—that all Christians who would hold fast to their Bibles as a faith-anchor and who would make progress in their study of the Word and be co-laborers with God in the gathering of "the elect" need to see that the elect only are now called to be heirs of the Kingdom for which we pray. "Thy Kingdom come." They need to see that that Kingdom is God's provision for the future blessing of the non-elect. They need to see that the Bible does not teach, as many of them would have it, that the saints are called of God to sit in the heavenly balcony and look over at the non-elect in eternal anguish, and hear their cries.

Next let us note that the Millennium itself is an absolute necessity for the world, according to the statistics of the world-wise. Many college professors and D. D.'s are inclined to speak glibly of the Second Coming of Christ being far in the future—"fifty thousand years yet," say some. But evidently these learned gentlemen have not used their educational advantages in connection with such statements. Any school boy can figure up what the population of the earth would be one thousand years from now, taking the present population as per the census at sixteen hundred millions and the ratio of increase as shown by the census reports at 8 per cent in ten years. The total would show 3,375,325,000,000 population for the year 2900 A. D.—more than 2,000 for each person now living.

What would humanity do if the earth were crowded to that extent? Where would the necessary food, fuel and clothing be found? Computing all the tillable portion of the earth at twenty-five million square miles or sixteen billion acres would give but one acre for the support of two hundred and ten people, or less than five square yards each. At the close of a second such period, 3900 A. D., at the same rate, there would be ten persons for each square foot of standing-room. In other words they would stand fifteen deep on each other's heads. What shall we think of the wisdom that tells us that the Millennium is fifty thousand years off? The answer is found in Isaiah's prophecy (xxix, 14).

Are we asked how the Millennium is at once introduced would avert the difficulties of the first statement, two hundred and ten people for each acre of the habitable earth? We reply that the Scriptures clearly intimate that the rapid increase of our race is associated with man's fallen condition; as our Creator declared to another Eve after her disobedience, "I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception" (Genesis iii, 16).

thy conception" (Genesis iii, 16).

The Earth Shall Yield Her Increase.
The Scriptures also intimate that with the return of humanity towards perfection the average increase will be less, and that eventually the human family will come to the condition where there will be neither marriage nor giving in marriage, and where sex conditions will be lost in a uniform standard of humanity embodying the qualities at present displayed in the two sexes. Further, God's promise for the Millennium is that under his blessing the earth will yield her increase and the waste places be reclaimed, and the breaking forth in deserts, springs, rivers, etc. Furthermore, recognizing the Divine power in connection with the matter we can readily see how vast continents can be raised in the Atlantic and in the Pacific Ocean. But, aside from these miracles which properly enough could accompany the Millennial Kingdom of Christ, what can the world who ignore the Bible expect? In other words what shall they expect things to be as they were from the beginning of the world? (1 Peter iii, 4).

Some may inquire, What about the resurrection of the millions who have died? We reply that the world has been only gradually working up to its present dense population. The people living in the world for the past six thousand years, according to what we believe are trustworthy evidences, would number altogether about twenty thousand millions. But more than twice that number could be buried in the State of Texas in separate graves, and more than eight times that number could find standing room in Texas, as a school-boy with his pencil could readily demonstrate.

But we need not look a thousand years ahead. The world will find itself in great trouble very shortly unless the Millennium be ushered in. Already there is a shortage of timber. What will be the condition of things one hundred years from now? Already our capitalists are buying up the coal deposits on speculation, realizing that its rapid consumption is making it more valuable every year. Already geologists are calculating the number of tons of coal not yet mined and telling us that with the present average of increase in the consumption of coal the entire supply of the world will be exhausted in less than two hundred years. What will be the price of coal as the vanishing point is neared? and how will mankind do without it, and without wood for fuel unless the Millennium come promptly with its miraculous provisions—the taking of fuel from our atmosphere, and from water, by methods which will, no doubt, be simple, when mankind come to understand them fully, but which at present are so expensive as to be of little service.

Other scientific men have been studying the increase of insanity and telling us that progress in this direction is terrific. Some have estimated that in less than two hundred years the entire world, at the present rate, will be insane. How opportune it would be for the Millennial Kingdom of the great Life-Giver to be ushered in with its uplifting influences, mental, moral and physical!

Least but not least the combination of wisdom and selfishness in our day, known as Unions and Trusts, is so influential that prices in every commodity are rising. Yet the trusts are not quite ripe yet. Their managers have not fully learned their power. Gradually the upper and the nether millions will apparently be drawn closer together, while necessity will force the masses through the hopper. How great would those "giants" become within another century or so, if the Millennium be not ushered in in the interim to "lift the poor and needy out of the dunhills"—using the scriptural figure of the work of the Kingdom: (Psalm cxlvi, 7).

My friends, let us stick to the Bible and its Millennial theory. So doing we will be guided by the wisdom from on high and enabled to pray with the spirit and the understanding also. "Thy Kingdom come; they will be done on earth as it is done in heaven," and to labor intelligently as co-workers with God. Let us prepare as pupils in the School of Christ for the great work whereunto God has called us by the Gospel Message.

"Even so. Come, Lord Jesus: Come quickly!"

"Thy Kingdom come, and thy will be done on earth, even as in heaven."

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How To Find Out.
Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a brick dust sediment, or settling, stringy or milky appearance often indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back are also symptoms that tell you the kidneys and bladder are out of order and need attention.

What To Do.
There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills almost every wish in correcting rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. Corrects inability to hold water and exciding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper and remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

LEGISLATIVE RESULTS, ANNAPOLIS 1910.

The Democratic party of Maryland has no reason to be ashamed of the vote of its representatives at Annapolis, when the legislation is examined as a whole; on the other hand it can point to many of the bills passed with pride and say to the people of the State that party pledges have been redeemed.

Of the important bills passed, the one which will probably have the greatest effect on the general policy of the State, is the Public Utilities Bill. This bill will mean a new era in corporate management of our public service corporations and if the right men are appointed as members of the Board, created, it will mean a square deal for the people as well as for the corporations, and it is to be hoped that it will take these corporations entirely out of politics.

There is but little question but that the public service corporations of the country, have been the chief corrupters of Legislatures and politics in general. Neither is there much doubt but what, at times, they have been driven to bribery and politics by the holdup methods of legislators who threatened to pass bills inimicable to their interests unless they came down with the coin. This bill is believed to settle this matter, and if it works out as expected, will protect the people on the one side and the corporations on the other.

The Pure Food Bill, another of the Democratic platform pledges, was passed almost without opposition, and will be a great protection to the people against unscrupulous manufacturers and dealers, preventing as it does the sale of impure and adulterated goods.

The increased representation for Baltimore City was settled by a compromise measure, introduced by Senator Price, of this County, and while not going as far as the City wanted, meets the approval of the State at large, and we believe the thinking people of Baltimore City are glad at the present time that the representation of that city is not going to be materially increased until they awake to the necessity of sending better men to represent them than they did this year or in the past. On several bills wanted by Baltimore City the counties had to come to their rescue or the legislation would never have been passed. The press of Baltimore City has recognized this fact and have given the county members full credit for their honest, ability and patriotism.

The Direct Primary Bill, promised by the Democrats, was partially redeemed by the passage of what is known as the Senator Lee compromise. While not going as far as the advocates of direct voting desire, yet it is a big step in the right direction, and had it not been for the exempting of several counties from its provisions, would in the main have contested the people of the State.

It is interesting to note in this connection that when the bill was brought out in the House the Strauss Bill was defeated by sixteen Democrats uniting with the Republicans, showing conclusively that the sentiment among the Democrats in that body to be in favor of a thoroughgoing primary bill. As Wicomico is one of the counties to be exempted under the bill—the question of its adoption or rejection being left to the voters at the next general primary election—the bill is a disappointment as far as it applies to local conditions.

On the whole, however, the members of the Legislature are to be congratulated on the results of the Legislature, and the Democratic party can take the next general election with confidence, and point to the record generally with pride.

DIRECT PRIMARIES IN WICOMICO.

It is to be regretted that Wicomico is one of the Counties excepted under the Law Direct Primary Bill, as we believe that the system of making nominations under this plan met with the approval of a majority of the Democratic voters of the County.

While not questioning, either the wisdom or the judgment of those responsible for the matter, being left open until a vote is taken on the question, we differ with them as to the necessity of such action. When this question was agitated prior to the last primary election the State Central Committee announced—semi-officially—that it would leave the matter to the voters and give them whatever they wanted. After hearing the recommendations of all and testing public sentiment on the question, the committee decided that the party wanted direct primaries, and held the primary election under this plan. That they were correct in their opinion of the party's wishes in the matter was proven to the satisfaction of all, by the tremendous interest taken in the nominations by the voters—over 2000 Democrats participating in the selection of candidates. We believe in the face of these facts that the referendum was not wanted or needed here.

It is understood that the bill provides that at the next general primary election, the voters of both parties will vote on whether or not they want direct primaries in this county. And further provides that if either party should vote in favor of the law then it is to be recognized as the adoption of the law as far as county is concerned regardless of what the other party may decide.

If this is correct then the Democratic voters will have the right to decide for themselves whether or not they want the ticket nominated under the Direct plan or go back to the old discredited convention system.

This provision will be much preferable to what was at first understood to be the meaning of the bill, as it was thought that the question was to be settled by all the voters regardless of party. In such a case the Democratic party would be at the mercy of the Republicans, for it would take but a small per cent of Democrats to unite with the Republicans and carry it either way. As the Republicans all over the State have uniformly opposed the Direct plan, it is presumed that they would take the same attitude here, and although eighty per cent of the Democrats were in favor of direct nominations, the other twenty combining with the Republicans could control the election—a situation that would be far from pleasing to most of the Democrats who would strenuously oppose the principle that the Republicans should dictate as to how nominations were to be made here.

WICOMICO'S REPRESENTATIVES AT ANNAPOLIS.

In the Senate, Senator Price of this county was the acknowledged leader of his party, and on his shoulders was largely placed the burden of fighting the party's battles, a position that he filled with laborious study and work. His Baltimore City Representation bill was acknowledged as probably the best possible solution of a hard and knotty question. A hard worker, a good fighter and pleasing personality, Senator Price made himself one of the most influential men of the Senate.

In the House Wicomico's delegation was always found on the right side and their record is one that the citizens of this county regardless of party lines can look upon with pleasure and point out with pride.

Though not orators, they got in much work that told in favor of the bills favored by the best people of the State. The following record on some of the important bills will show that they can face their constituents at home with confidence, and with the assurance that their course at Annapolis meets with almost universal commendation.

Gas Repeal Bill—All voted in favor.

Public Utilities Bill—All voted in favor.

Pure Food Bill—All voted in favor.

Local Option Bill—All voted in favor.

Direct Primary Bill—All voted in favor.

This is a record, gentlemen, that you may well feel proud of.

Chaperon."

"The Chaperon," given by the Ladies' Tennis Club of Cambridge at the Auditorium was a great success socially, financially and every other way, and all who took part in the play acquitted themselves with credit. Considerable credit is surely due the stage manager, Miss Margaret Small, and the Citizens Band for the exquisite music tendered by them during the evening. Long before the hour appointed for the curtain to rise nearly every seat in the spacious hall was taken, and it is estimated that there were nearly six hundred persons present. All the parts were well taken.

The affair was undoubtedly the social event of the season and was highly appreciated by all who attended—Cambridge Banner.

NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC

Trend Indicates Party Victory—Bright Prospects At Next Presidential Election.

In an address at Elizabeth, N. J., on Tuesday, Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, spoke hopefully—almost confidently, indeed—of the probability that the people will soon transfer the control of the national Government from the Republican party to the Democratic party. There are evidences everywhere of a reaction against Republican policies. There is a perceptible drift toward the Democratic party. Everything depends, of course, upon the wisdom which the Democratic party displays—upon the men and the measures with which it goes before the country. And therefore, as Dr. Wilson well says, the Democratic program should be one of popular politics, of common sense, of responsible leadership.

It need be said that the Democratic party could always be relied upon to blunder when its prospects were most encouraging, and thus, by playing into the hands of its opponents, make its own defeat inevitable. But the lines upon which the Democratic campaign can be conducted with reasonable prospects of success in the Congressional elections this year and in the Presidential election in 1912 have been so clearly defined by the people themselves that a blunder now would be worse than a crime. It would be inexcusable folly and stupidity, in the political sense, for the Democratic party to give its opponents any issue by which they could divert the attention of the voters from the evils and excesses of Oligarchy and Aldrichism, from the tariff record of the Taft administration and from the open association of the Republican Party with the trusts.

It is upon the lines which the people themselves have laid down that the Democratic party ought to ask for restoration to power. In Massachusetts a Republican district with a majority of 14,000 has recently elected a Democrat to Congress, thus demonstrating that there is a revolt in the East against an oppressive tariff, against monopoly and against all other Republican policies which are held responsible for the advance in the cost of living. There is dissatisfaction everywhere with the extravagance of Republican administration, with its surrender to privileged interests, with its willingness to allow the people to be plundered by predatory monopolies. It is on these issues that the people are determined and eager to make the fight against the Republican party. No other issues are needed. The Democratic party must fight on these lines, if it is to make war effectively upon the Republican party.

Therefore, common sense and responsible leadership which President Wilson declares to be essential to Democratic success ought to be invoked in every State to save the Democracy from the error of giving the Republican party any issue which it may use to its advantage at a time when it is in desperate plight.

TAXI-NURSE NEWEST

Thing in New York—Care for Children While Mothers Shop.

Service of the most highly specialized kind is nothing new in New York. Indeed, with special valets for pet dogs and cats, whose only duty is to look after the comfort of their four footed charges, governesses for pet monkeys and instructors to teach parrots foreign languages, the limit would seem to have been reached. That it was not is evidenced by the arrival of the two newest services up to date—the taxi governess and the doorman nurse.

Contrary to their titles, the governess does not look after taxicabs nor the doorman take care of a door. The field of usefulness for the former is confined to caring for children taken by their mothers in taxicabs on shopping or calling tours. Lacking a nurse of her own the mother who wishes to give her youngster a ride without the bother of taking him into the stores or the risk of leaving him alone in the vehicle calls in the taxi nurse. Her duty it is at so much an hour to look after the youngster during the expedition.

The doorman nurse is a less expensive luxury of the same kind. Children may be left in his charge at the doors of the large stores, hotels or apartment houses by the mothers who cannot afford a taxi governess to look after them while she is inside.

Of the two the taxi governess has considerable advantages aside from higher pay over the doorman nurse. Her charges rarely number more than two at a time, while she may run as high as a score of restless youngsters.

LEGISLATIVE RESULTS, ANNAPOLIS 1910.

The Democratic party of Maryland has no reason to be ashamed of the vote of its representatives at Annapolis, when the legislation is examined as a whole; on the other hand it can point to many of the bills passed with pride and say to the people of the State that party pledges have been redeemed.

Of the important bills passed, the one which will probably have the greatest effect on the general policy of the State, is the Public Utilities Bill. This bill will mean a new era in corporate management of our public service corporations and if the right men are appointed as members of the Board, created, it will mean a square deal for the people as well as for the corporations, and it is to be hoped that it will take these corporations entirely out of politics.

There is but little question but that the public service corporations of the country, have been the chief corrupters of Legislatures and politics in general. Neither is there much doubt but what, at times, they have been driven to bribery and politics by the holdup methods of legislators who threatened to pass bills inimical to their interests unless they came down with the coin. This bill is believed to settle this matter, and if it works out as expected, will protect the people on the one side and the corporations on the other.

The Pure Food Bill, another of the Democratic platform pledges, was passed almost without opposition, and will be a great protection to the people against unscrupulous manufacturers and dealers, preventing as it does the sale of impure and adulterated goods.

The increased representation for Baltimore City was settled by a compromise measure, introduced by Senator Price, of this County, and while not going as far as the City wanted, meets the approval of the State at large, and we believe the thinking people of Baltimore City are glad at the present time that the representation of that city is not going to be materially increased until they awake to the necessity of sending better men to represent them than they did this year or in the past. On several bills wanted by Baltimore City the counties had to come to their rescue or the legislation would never have been passed. The press of Baltimore City has recognized this fact and have given the county members full credit for their honest, ability and patriotism.

The Direct Primary Bill, promised by the Democrats, was partially redeemed by the passage of what is known as the Senator Lee compromise. While not going as far as the advocates of direct voting desire, yet it is a big step in the right direction, and had it not been for the exempting of several counties from its provisions, would in the main have contented the people of the State.

It is interesting to note in this connection that when the bill was brought out in the House the Strause Bill was defeated by strenuous Democrats uniting with the Republicans, showing conclusively that the sentiment among the Democrats in that body to be in favor of a thoroughgoing primary bill. As Wicomico is one of the counties to be exempted under the bill—the question of its adoption or rejection being left to the voters at the next general primary election—the bill is a disappointment as far as it applies to local conditions.

On the whole, however, the members of the Legislature are to be congratulated on the results of the Legislative session, and the Democratic party can leave the next general election with confidence, and point to the record generally with pride.

DIRECT PRIMARIES IN WICOMICO.

It is to be regretted that Wicomico is one of the Counties excepted under the Lee Direct Primary Bill, as we believe that the system of making nominations under this plan met with the approval of a majority of the Democratic voters of the County.

It is not questioning, either the wisdom or the judgment of those responsible for the matter, being left open until a vote is taken on the question, we differ with them as to the necessity of such action. When this question was agitated prior to the last primary election the State Central Committee announced—semi-officially—that it would leave the matter to the voters and give them whatever they wanted. After hearing the recommendations of all and testing public sentiment on the question, the committee decided that the party wanted direct primaries, and held the primary election under this plan. That they were correct in their opinion of the party's wishes in the matter was proven to the satisfaction of all, by the tremendous interest taken in the nominations by the voters—over 2000 Democrats participating in the selection of candidates. We believe in the face of these facts that the referendum was not wanted or needed here.

It is understood that the bill provides that at the next general primary election, the voters of both parties will vote on whether or not they want direct primaries in this county. And further provides that if either party should vote in favor of the law then it is to be recognized as the adoption of the law as far as county is concerned regardless of what the other party may decide.

If this is correct then the Democratic voters will have the right to decide for themselves whether or not they want the ticket nominated under the Direct plan or go back to the old discredited convention system.

This provision will be much preferable to what was at first understood to be the meaning of the bill, as it was thought that the question was to be settled by all the voters regardless of party. In such a case the Democratic party would be at the mercy of the Republicans, for it would take but a small per cent of Democrats to unite with the Republicans and carry it either way. As the Republicans all over the State have uniformly opposed the Direct plan, it is presumed that they would take the same attitude here, and although eighty per cent of the Democrats were in favor of direct nominations, the other twenty combining with the Republicans could control the election—a situation that would be far from pleasing to most of the Democrats who would strenuously oppose the principle that the Republicans should dictate as to how nominations were to be made here.

WICOMICO'S REPRESENTATIVES AT ANNAPOLIS.

In the Senate, Senator Price of this county was the acknowledged leader of his party, and on his shoulders was largely placed the burden of fighting the party's battles, a position that he filled with laborious study and work. His Baltimore City Representation bill was acknowledged as probably the best possible solution of a hard and knotty question. A hard worker, a good fighter and pleasing personality, Senator Price soon made himself one of the most influential men of the Senate.

In the House Wicomico's delegation was always found on the right side and their record is one that the citizens of this county regardless of party lines can look upon with pleasure and point out with pride.

Though not orators, they got in much work that told in favor of the bills favored by the best people of the state. The following record on some of the important bills will show that they can face their constituents at home with confidence, and with the assurance that their course at Annapolis meets with almost universal commendation.

Gas Repeal Bill—All voted in favor.

Public Utilities Bill—All voted in favor.

Pure Food Bill—All voted in favor.

Local Option Bill—All voted in favor.

Direct Primary Bill—All voted in favor.

Cambridge Ladies Give "The Chaperon."

"The Chaperon," given by the Ladies' Tennis Club of Cambridge at the Auditorium was a great success socially, financially and every other way, and all who took part in the play acquitted themselves with credit. Considerable credit is surely due the stage manager, Miss Margaret Small, and the Citizens Band for the exquisite music tendered by them during the evening. Long before the hour appointed for the curtain to rise nearly every seat in the spacious hall was taken, and it is estimated that there were nearly six hundred persons present. All the parts were well taken.

The affair was undoubtedly the social event of the season and was highly appreciated by all who attended. Cambridge Banner.

NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC

Trend Indicates Party Victory—Bright Prospects At Next Presidential Election.

In an address at Elizabeth, N. J., on Tuesday, Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, spoke hopefully—almost confidently, indeed—of the probability that the people will soon transfer the control of the national Government from the Republican party to the Democratic party. There are evidences everywhere of a reaction against Republican policies. There is a perceptible drift toward the Democratic party. Everything depends, of course, upon the wisdom which the Democratic party displays—upon the men and the measures with which it goes before the country. And therefore, as Dr. Wilson well says, the Democratic program should be one of popular politics, of common counsel, of responsible leadership.

It need be said that the Democratic party could always be relied upon to blunder when its prospects were most encouraging, and thus, by playing into the hands of its opponents, make its own defeat inevitable. But the lines upon which the Democratic campaign can be conducted with reasonable prospects of success in the Congressional elections this year and in the Presidential election in 1912 have been so clearly defined by the people themselves that a blunder now would be worse than a crime. It would be inexcusable folly and stupidity, in the political sense, for the Democratic party to give its opponents any issue by which they could divert the attention of the voters from the evils and excesses of Cannonism and Aldrichism, from the tariff record of the Taft administration and from the open association of the Republican Party with the trusts.

It is upon the lines which the people themselves have laid down that the Democratic party ought to ask for restoration to power. In Massachusetts a Republican district with a majority of 14,000 has recently elected a Democrat to Congress, thus demonstrating that there is a revolt in the East against an oppressive tariff, against monopoly and against all other Republican policies which are held responsible for the advance in the cost of living. There is dissatisfaction everywhere with the extravagance of Republican administration, with its surrender to privileged interests, with its willingness to allow the people to be plundered by predatory monopolies. It is on these issues that the people are determined and eager to make the fight against the Republican party. No other issues are needed. The Democratic party must fight on these lines, if it is to make war effectively upon the Republican party.

Therefore, common counsel and responsible leadership which President Wilson declares to be essential to Democratic success ought to be invoked in every State to save the Democracy from the crash folly of giving the Republican party any issue which it may use to its advantage at a time when it is in desperate plight.

TAXI-NURSE NEWEST

Thing in New York—Care for Children While Mothers Shop.

Service of the most highly specialized kind is nothing new in New York. Indeed, with special valets for pet dogs and cats, whose only duty is to look after the comfort of their four footed charges, governesses for pet monkeys and instructors to teach parrots foreign languages, the limit would seem to have been reached. That it was not is evidenced by the arrival of the two newest services up to date—the taxi governess and the doorman nurse.

Contrary to their titles, the governess does not look after taxicabs nor the doorman take care of a door. The field of usefulness for the former is confined to caring for children taken by their mothers in taxicabs on shopping or calling tours. Lacking a nurse of her own the mother who wishes to give her youngster a ride without the bother of taking him into the stores or the risk of leaving him alone in the vehicle calls in the taxi nurse. Her duty it is at so much an hour to look after the youngster during the expedition.

The doorman nurse is a less expensive luxury of the same kind. Children may be left in his charge at the door of the large stores, hotels or apartment houses by the mothers who cannot afford a taxi governess to look after them while she is inside.

Of the two the taxi governess has considerable advantage aside from higher pay over the doorman nurse. Her charges rarely number more than two at a time, while he may run as high as a score of restless youngsters.

COMMENTS BY THE SUN

After Adjournment Of Legislature On Some Of The Eastern Shore Members.

A member upon whose shoulders an immense amount of important work has fallen is Senator Jesse D. Price, of Wicomico. As Democratic and majority floor leader Mr. Price has had to keep a watchful eye upon all legislation. In addition, his duties as chairman of the Finance Committee have entailed an extraordinary burden upon him. There has been no harder working member of the Legislature than he.

Senator Price has not always agreed with the views of those who placed a different interpretation upon party pledges than he. He frankly acknowledged that party promises should be kept, but had his own ideas regarding the methods of keeping them. Mr. Price for instance, did not agree with those who favored giving Baltimore city 52 members of the House of Delegates, and he succeeded in having the number reduced to 35 or 11 more than the present number. He thought the existing primary election laws a sufficient fulfillment of the party pledges of 1907, and believed that a public utilities bill somewhat different from the one drafted by Attorney General Straus should be passed. When the time for final action came, however, Mr. Price bowed gracefully to the will of the majority and refrained from making the fight that might have been formidable because of his official position and well known battling ability.

Queen Anne's Modest Worker.

One of the ablest and most painstaking members of the Senate doesn't get before the public eye as much as he deserves, and chiefly because of his modesty. This is Senator, J. Frank Harper of Queen Anne's county. The State and his county owe very much more to Senator Harper than they are likely to pay soon.

From the beginning of the session Mr. Harper has battled almost alone for economy in the conduct of legislative affairs. He insisted at the beginning that the Legislature should take a positive position upon this subject, and offered a measure limiting the number of employees and permitting an up to date method of money saving by having bills printed instead of being engrossed up to their third reading. The deficiency bill, appropriating $50,000 additional for the expenses of the Legislature, which it was found necessary to pass a couple of weeks or so ago, was a direct substantiation of the fears expressed by Mr. Harper.

Senator Harper was chairman of the Committee of Education and to his credit must go the value of the several educational bills passed at this session, one of them providing an improved high school system. He has been one of the most attentive and earnest workers on the Committee on Judicial Proceedings, Printing, Engrossed Bills and Fish and Game.

"Watchdog of the Treasury."

Except in debates on oyster questions involving his beloved county of Dorchester or in a convoluted plea for economy Mr. Haselton A. Joyce, Jr., was seldom heard on the floor despite which fact he was regarded as one of the most able, honest and influential men in the chamber. As chairman of the Committee on Claims Mr. Joyce was the "watchdog of the Treasury," and never was guardian more faithful and true to his trust. True, in the closing hours they "put it over" him somewhat by substituting orders for unfavorable reports, and so unopposed a generous stream of cash, but Mr. Joyce had done his duty, and the fault was not his or his committee's. No member closed the session higher in the esteem of his colleagues and the people than Mr. Joyce of Dorchester.

A Host in Himself.

Quiet unassuming and retiring, Mr. Elsha E. Twilley, of Wicomico, was at the same time one of the most influential members of the House, doing good, hard work by stealth and basking to find it fame. No harder or more productive work was done for the Public Utilities bill than that accomplished by Mr. Twilley, while in the gas fight he was a host in himself, strengthening the wavering and convincing the uncertain. Mr. Twilley must be added to the list of fine programs for which the Eastern Shore is famous.

Eastern Shore Fame Upheld.

Mr. Harshel Ford, of Somerset, and Mr. William F. King, of Worcester, must be mentioned as two of the most substantial men of the chamber. No more honest and sincere members were found on the roll call each enjoyed the unbounded respect and confidence of his colleagues and each was tireless in well doing. Mr. Ford was chairman of the Committee on Engrossed Bills and Mr. King on the Committee on Education, while Mr. King also was one of the strongest members of the Committee on Ways and Means and was a leader of those who forged the Public Utilities bill from Mr. Benson's sketches.

Eat What

You want of the food you need
Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it. How you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly. When this stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do it is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

CHAPTER XXX.

THE TWO WOMEN.

TWO days and nights crept slowly into the past, and now the white people of the chateau had come to the eve of their last day's stay on the island of Japet. The probationary period would expire with the sun on the following day, the anniversary of the death of Taswell Skaggs. The six months set aside by the testator as sufficient for all the requirements of Cupid were to come to an inglorious end at 7 o'clock on March 29. According to the will, if Agnes Ruthven and Robert Browne were married to each other before the close of that day all of their rights in the estate were lost to them.

Tomorrow would be the last day of residence required. But, slack, was it to be the last that they were to spend in the world forsaken land?

No later than that morning a steamer—a small Dutch freighter—had come to a stop off the harbor, but it turned tail and fled within an hour. No one came ashore. The malevolent tug went out and turned back the landing party which was ready to leave the ship's side. The watchers in the chateau knew what it was that the tug's captain shouted through his trumpet at a safe distance from the steamer. The black and yellow flags at the end of the company's pier lent color to a gruesome story. The hopeless look deepened in the eyes of the watchers. Hollingsworth Chase alone maintained a stubborn air of confidence and unconcern.

"Don't be downhearted, Bowles," he said to the mooping British agent. "You'll soon be managing the bank again and patronizing the American bar with the same old regularity."

There had been several vicious assaults upon the gates by the infuriated islanders during the day following the rescue of the heirs. Some powerful influence suddenly exerted itself to restore them to a state of calmness. They withdrew to the town, apparently defeated. The cause was obvious—Rasula had convinced them that death already was lifting his hand to blot out the lives of those who opposed them.

Bobby Browne was accomplishing wonders in the laboratory. He seldom was seen outside the distilling room. His assiduity was marked, if not commented upon. Hour after hour he stood watch over the water that went up in vapor and returned to the crystal liquid that was more precious than rubies and sapphires.

Drusilla kept close to his side during these operations. She seemed afraid or ashamed to join the others. She avoided Lady Deppingham as completely as possible. Her effort to be friendly when they were thrown together was almost pitiable.

As for Lady Agnes, she seemed stricken by an unconquerable lassitude. The spirits that had controlled her voice, her look, her movements, were sadly missing. More than once Geneva had caught her watching Deppingham with eyes that spoke volumes, though they were mute and wistful.

From time to time the sentinels brought to Lord Deppingham and Chase missives that had been tossed over the walls by the emissaries of Rasula. They were written by the leader himself and in every instance expressed deepest sympathy for the plague ridden chateau.

"There's a paucity of real news in these gentle messages," that annoyed me," Chase said after reading aloud the last of the epistles to the princess and the Deppinghams. "I rejoice in my heart that he isn't aware of the true state of affairs. He doesn't appreciate the real calamity that confronts us. The plague? Poison? Mere piffle. If he only knew that I am now smoking my last—the last—cigarette on the place!"

"I believe you would die more certainly from lack of cigarettes than from an overabundance of poison," said Geneva. She was thinking of the stock she had hoarded up for him in her dressing table drawer, under lock and key.

"I say, Chase, can't you just see Rasula's face when he learns that we've been drinking the water all along and haven't passed away?" cried Deppingham.

"And to think, Mr. Chase, we once called you 'the enemy,'" said Lady Agnes in a low, dreamy voice.

"I appear to have outlived my usefulness in that respect," he said. He tossed the stub of his cigarette over the balcony rail. "Goodbye!" he said, with melancholy emphasis. Then he bent an inquiring look upon the face of the princess.

"Yes," she said, as if he had asked the question aloud. "You shall have three a day, that's all."

"You'll leave the entire fortune to me when you sail away, I trust," he said. The Deppinghams were puzzled. "But you also will be sailing away," she argued.

"I? You forget that I have had no orders to return. Sir John expects me to stay. At least, so I've heard in a roundabout way."

"You don't mean to say, Chase, that you'll stay on this damned island, if the chances come to get away?" demanded Lord Deppingham earnestly. The two women were looking at him in amazement.

"Why not? I'm an ally, not a deserter."

"You are a madman!" cried Lady Agnes. "Stay here? The world will kill you in a jiffy! Absurd!"

"Not after they've had another good long look at my warships, Lady Deppingham," he replied, with a smug reassuring smile. "I think I'll take a stroll along the wall before turning in."

He arose and leisurely started to go indoors. The princess called to him, and he paused.

"Wait," she said, coming up to him. They walked down the hallway together. "I will run upstairs and unlock the treasure chest. I do not trust even my maid. You shall have two tonight. No more."

"You've really saved them for me," he queried, a note of eagerness in his voice. "all these days?"

"I have been your miser," she said lightly and then ran up the stairs.

He looked after her until she disappeared at the top with a quick, sideways glance over her shoulder. An expression of utter dejection came into his face. A haggard look replaced the buoyant smile.

"I cannot bear the thought of leaving you behind."

"God, how I love her—how I love her!" he groaned, half aloud.

She was coming down the stairs now, eager, flushed, more abashed than she would have had him know. Without a word she placed the two cigarettes in his outstretched palm. Her eyes were shining.

In silence he clasped her hand and led her unresisting through the window and out upon the broad gallery. She was returning the fervid pressure of his fingers, warm and electric. They crossed slowly to the rail. Two chairs stood close together. They sat down side by side. The power of speech seemed to have left them altogether.

He laid the two cigarettes on the broad stone rail. She followed the movement with perturbed eyes and then leaned forward and placed her elbows on the rail.

"If the ship should come tomorrow you would go out of my life—you would go away and leave me here," he began hoarsely.

"No, no!" she cried, turning upon him suddenly. "You could not stay here. You shall not!"

"But, dearest love, I am bound to stay. I cannot go. And God help me, I want to stay. If I could go into your world and take you into myself forever—if you will tell me now that some day you may forget your world and come to live in mine—then, ah, then, it would be different! But without you I have no choice of abiding place—here as well as anywhere."

She put her hands over her eyes. "I cannot bear the thought of leaving you behind—of leaving you here to die at the hands of those beasts down there. Hollingsworth, I implore you—come! If the opportunity comes—and it will, I know—you will leave the island with the rest of us!"

"Not unless I am commanded to do so by the man who sent me here to serve these beasts, as you call them."

He leaned over and took her hand in his. "You do love me?"

"You know I do—yes, yes!" she cried from her heart, keeping her face resolutely turned away from him. "I am sick with love for you. Why should I deny the thing that speaks so loudly for itself—my heart? Listen! Can you not hear it beating? It is hurting me—yes, it is hurting me!"

He trembled at this exhibition of released, unchecked passion, and yet he did not clasp her in his arms.

"Will you come into my world, Geneva?" he whispered. "All my life would be spent in guarding the love you would give to me—all my life given to making you love me more and more until there will be no other world for you to think of."

"I wish that I had not been born," she sobbed. "I cannot, dearest, I cannot change the laws of fate. I am fated—I am doomed to live forever in the dreary world of my fathers. But how can I give you love? How can I give you your love? How can I cast you out of my life?"

"You do not love Prince Karl?" "How can you ask?" she cried fiercely. "Am I not loving you with all my heart and soul?"

"And you would leave me behind if the ship should come?" he persisted, with cruel insistence. "You will go back and marry that—him? Loving me, you will marry him?" Her head dropped upon her arm. He turned cold as death. "God help and God pity you, my love, I never knew before what your little world means to you. I give you up to it. I crawl back into the one you look down upon with scorn. I shall not again ask you to descend to the world where love is."

Her hand lay limp in his. They stared bleakly out into the night, and no word was spoken.

The minutes became an hour, and yet they sat there with set faces, bursting hearts, unseeing eyes.

"If I have to die tomorrow," Saunders, the bridegroom, was saying, with real feeling in his voice. "I should say with all my heart that my life has been less than a week long. The rest of it was nothing. I never was happy before, and happiness is everything."

ONE WEAK SPOT.

Most Salisbury People Have A Weak Part And Too Often It's The Back.

Everyone has a weak spot. Too often it's a bad back. Twinges follow every sudden twist. Dull aches keep up, day and night. Tell you the kidneys need help. For backache is really kidney ache. A kidney cure is what you need. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys.

Cure backache. Salisbury people recommend the remedy.

Mrs. John O. Nelson, R. Brown St., Salisbury, Md., says "Doan's Kidney Pills helped me more than any other medicine I ever took and consequently I do not have the least hesitation in recommending them. I was subject to attacks of kidney complaint for a long time and whenever I caught cold my back became weak. If I did much stooping, there was a lameness across my loins. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly endorsed by people who had taken them, I procured a supply at White & Leonard's Drug Store and began their use. I now feel much better in every way and I have no further trouble from my kidneys or back."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Spiritism Said To Be Demonism.

A most interesting little brochure has recently come off the press, setting forth with Bible proofs that the communications received by and through Spiritist Mediums is of Demon origin. The writer traces his subject through the Scriptures from the time when certain of the holy angels became disobedient. He proves from the Scriptures that these fallen spirits deal in personating the human dead, with whose past history, spirits, though invisible, are thoroughly acquainted. He shows that they also frequently personate the Creator and the Redeemer, commanding their deceived ones to pray, do penance, etc. This, however, is merely to lead them on and to bring them more thoroughly under demonic control. Sometimes by breaking down the natural barrier, the human will, they obsess their victim and rule him more or less to his ruin—frequently sending such to the mad-houses. Numerous illustrations, Scriptural and otherwise, are given. The price of the little book is but ten cents; it should be in the hands of all interested in Spiritism or who have friends interested therein. Enclose five-cent stamps to the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Saved From The Grave.

I had about given up hope after nearly four years of suffering from a severe lung trouble," writes Mrs. M. L. Dix, of Clarksville, Tenn. "Often the pain in my chest would be almost unbearable and I could not do any work, but Dr. King's New Discovery has made me feel like a new person. Its best medicine made for the throat and lungs. I have asthma, coughs, colds, hay fever, grippe, pneumonia, bronchitis and hemorrhages. I have been coughing and whooping cough yield quickly to this wonderful medicine. Try it for $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists."

Difficult Scriptures On Hell.

A little book selling at only ten cents, postpaid, is having a very wide circulation—running up into the millions. It contains some very startling information respecting the meaning of the word Hell. It claims to demonstrate, both from the Hebrew and the Greek of our Bible, that Hell is NOT a place of eternal torment, but merely another name for the Tomb; the Grave, the State of Death. It affects to show that man was not redeemed from a far-off place of eternal torture, but quotes the Scriptures, proving that he was Redeemed from the Grave at the cost of his Redeemer's life, and that the Scriptures hope, both for the Church and the World, is a resurrection hope based upon the death and resurrection of Jesus. The book is certainly worth the reading. The information it furnishes is certainly valuable, far beyond its trifling cost. Order it at once from the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Demon Of The Air.

Is the germ of La Grippe, that breathes in, brings suffering to thousands. Its after effects are weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters, the splendid tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore health and good spirits after an attack of Grip. It suffering try them. Only 50c. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by all druggists.

The Care of the Blood for purification, finds voice in pimples, boils, scaly complexion, a jaundiced look, moth patches and blotches on the skin—all signs of liver trouble. But Dr. King's New Life Pills make fresh red blood; give clear skin, rosy cheeks, and complexion health. Try them. 50c at all druggists.

Heavy, impure blood makes a muddy, plainly complexion, headaches, nausea, indigestion. Thin blood makes you weak, pale, sickly. Burdock Blood Bitters makes the blood rich, red, pure—restores perfect health.

MODES IN NEW YORK

Short Skirts For Dress As Well As Utility Wear—Peasant Waists And Cross Draperies—Pierines And Capes In Draped Styles—Sleeve Wrinkles—Footwear

While the greatest variety of styles are being worn there are a few dominant types, that, as usual stand out prominently from the melange that are worth special notice by clever women who like to make the most of their dress allowance.

Skirts Short And Straight.

Skirts are shorter than for years even for dressy toilets if they are intended for street wear, and though many pleated and "Peasant" models—faded into the waist, and often faded into a band of silk or satin at the bottom of the skirt, are worn, as well as draped styles of many varieties, the lines on the whole are kept straight and the close fitting appearance of the preceding seasons remains a characteristic of the fashionable outline.

Mixed Materials.

A mixture of materials in the occasion is the rule rather than the exception, and trimmings of satin and changeable silks, and foulards are used on nine out of ten dressy suits and gowns. Cloths, voiles, marquisettes and poplins are all so trimmed and very attractive results are to be had in this way at a minimum of expense, while such modes afford unusual opportunities for gowns that need to be remodeled.

Silk And Wool Poplins.

Silk and wool poplins are among the leading fabrics for handsome gowns, worn at Spring weddings and other fashionable functions. The "Colemans," "Vournesens" and others of similar Irish names, come in nearly a hundred different shades, in all the fashionable colorings. They have a beautifully lustrous silk surface, and a soft wool filling, which gives them their unequalled clinging and draping qualities, so desirable for present modes, and at the same time prevents the wrinkling, so distressingly apparent in many draped styles. Coleman is double fold and sells for $1.75 per yard and Vournesens single width with more silk in the weave at $1.35.

Fashionable Sleeves.

Sleeves are of all lengths, but for handsome dresses and waists are apt to end well above the elbows with a lower cuff of lace reaching half way to the wrist, or quite there if the longer length is liked. Tailored waists of linen or cotton shirtings are about the only sort where the long sleeve is the rule, but even in these the three-quarter length is often preferred, and finished with a neck back ruffled cuff, and a collarless neck with the same ruffle now called the "Chantecleer" or "Pierrot."

Collarless Waists.

Collarless waists, coats and blouses are the rule, though these are only becoming when the neck is fresh and young, and most women are having or making a number of small gamps with a high collar, to be worn with such low cut garments. These gamps are made of nets, all over embroideries, or fancy collars, and are very simple in style. The main thing is to have them all cut and finished so that they launder easily. Waists of colored linen, silk and figured cottons are all made attractive with washable accessories. Gamps, side ruffles, and turned down collars, "Pierrots," "Grannies" and "Peter Pans" which are small sailor collars. Colored hems and em-broideries are much used.

Accessories.

With the prevailing short skirts footwear is prominent and the selection of these important accessories should be carefully made. A vamp that is as long as the shape of the foot allows and a rather low heel is the correct style for street wear, high heels and short vamps are suited only to indoor use, or evening wear. Bright colored hose with black and white shoes promises to be very much worn. It is pretty to have the hose match the silk petticoats.

Lucy Carter.

Green—Hurley.

Mr. Harry S. Green, of Sherwood, Md., and Miss Julia A. Hurley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Hurley, of Pocomoke City, Md., were quietly married at 12.30 Monday afternoon at the Baptist parsonage, at Pocomoke, by Rev. J. W. Handley.

The only attendants were Messrs. Stanley Parks, Goldie Hurley and Miss Ethel Hurley, brother and sister of the bride. The bride was becomingly attired in a steel broadcloth traveling suit with hat and gloves to match. Mr. and Mrs. Green left on the one o'clock express for their home at Sherwood where the groom is employed in the mill business. He is the oldest son of Mr. James Green, a farmer of near Melfels Springs. The bride is well known to the residents of Pocomoke having taught in the public school near there for quite a while. The writer wishes them many happy years of married life.

A MIGHTY PURCHASE!!

THE entire stock of the Surprise Store was purchased by us through the trustees of the United States Court of Bankruptcy by auction. After the Court had confirmed the sale, we immediately took inventory of stock and we find that we were fortunate enough in buying that stock for a great deal less than half of the manufacturers cost of production, and we could realize a substantial profit if we would put the entire stock on sale in our wholesale auction rooms in Philadelphia and New York.

The court granted 30 days time to the purchaser to remain on the Surprise Store premises. So we will comply with the right of the court and the wishes of the people of Salisbury and vicinity to give them the first preference and opportunity to purchase this valuable new up-to-date stock of Ladies', Misses', Men's, Boys' and Children's wearing apparel from 25 to 33 per cent less than the manufacturers cost of production.

The Sale will start Saturday, April 9th, at 8 a. m., and continue for 30 days only.

COME NOW & PROVIDE FOR THE FUTURE

Remember, This sale will positively not last longer than 30 days. Anyone who wishes to participate in this money saving opportunity and get the variety in styles and fits must come as early as possible, as we will only sell the goods now in the premises.

Look for our broad sheet announcement which will be distributed to every house this week. If any one will fail to receive one write for one.

IMPETUOUS BETTY

"News!" cried Betty, waving a telegram in the air. "A couple of Rob's college friends will be here to dinner. Thoughtful of him to let us know. It's a wonder he didn't let them pounce on us unannounced. Hum—Gerald Stanton and Rob Newman. Never saw them, have you?"

The girl addressed folded up her sewing and rose. They were sitting under the apple trees at their aunt's country house, where they were spending a few weeks.

"Do you realize that we have the meal to get, as aunt is away?" she asked, calmly. "It is now 11." "Heavens, so we have!" Betty jumped up and pushed back her tangled hair. "Puzzle—find the chaperone!" she cried, and disappeared in the direction of the kitchen on a run. "Don't tell me," she exclaimed, as she entered, rising from the floor harlequin, which she had pounced head first, "don't tell me Rob isn't thoughtful. A whole hour and a dinner to prepare for two unknown men. How much four do I want for those biscuits?"

A few moments later the chug-chug of the expected auto sounded down the road. A roadster slowed down before the gate and one of the occupants appeared in the doorway. Betty met him, a smudge of flour on either cheek, sleeves rolled up to dimpled elbows. "Just come in and make yourself at home," she said. "I'm awfully glad to see you—to see you both. Excuse my cousin and myself, won't you? We're scarcely presentable; we just got the telegram—and two hungry men to feed, you know!" She made a charming little gesture, and her eyes pleaded with him, running over with mirth and excitement.

He looked rather bewildered—hesitated. "Thank you," he said. "Sit on the lawn, it's cooler," she suggested. "Well, be out soon."

They were. One could scarcely tell how they worked the miracle, but the dinner was ready, the table invitingly set; and themselves gowned in little muslins and very presentable.

Betty pounced on the spokesman of the party, who was what she termed "tall, dark and interesting," leaving the other man to her gentler cousin.

"You must be Gerald Stanton," she said. "Don't contradict me. I've always wanted to know him. I've heard my brother speak of him so much."

The fellow laughed as though hugely enjoying himself. He did not contradict her.

Her eyes challenged him merrily, for her pretty white hands flew about in gestures like little white butterflies.

They talked merrily of football—of college. Once she questioned him about Rob and he threw back his head and laughed as though he had pronounced a joke. He was charming when he laughed, at least Betty pronounced him so.

Anne, nearby with the other man, was also enjoying herself. Once she started up as if to speak to the others, but fell back at a pleading gesture from her companion, and entered a conversation, which evidently afforded them both much quiet amusement.

Later they went in to dinner; and it was a merry party that sat down.

"I'm sorry that aunt isn't here," said Betty with a smile that didn't give up time to provide a chaperone.

A knock sounded at the door. "Providence has supplied one," she announced, solemnly, rising.

"Heavens! It's another man," as she caught sight of him through the hall.

"Do we want any sewing machines, Anne?"

He was a very presentable youth. A long dust-coat enveloped him; his hat swung easily in his hand.

"Is Mrs. Newton in?" he asked. "I'm sorry, but my aunt is away," replied Betty.

The man hesitated. I am Rob Newman," he said. "I thought Rob—was you not his sister?"

Betty leaned against the door. Out in the street was another machine. Her eyes were glued on it and its remaining occupant.

"Yes, she said faintly. "I—Rob Herrick is my brother."

The others had flocked out from the dining room.

"I hope," Anne was saying severely in her quiet voice. "I hope this will teach you a lesson, Betty. You never did get things straight."

"Forgive me," begged the supposed Gerald Stanton, coming to her side. "I just couldn't resist."

"You knew, Anne?" gasped Betty, turning to her cousin. She hesitated, and the dimples came out in her cheeks. "Why didn't you denounce them for impostors?" she said. "They might have gotten off with the silver."

Adding: "Do you know who they are?" "No," replied Anne, "but I thought he—they looked honest"—she broke off, blushing furiously.

"She took us on faith," said the man at her side.

Betty collected herself, and turned to the bewildered fellow in the doorway. "Do get Mr. Stanton and come in," she said. "And you," turning to the others, "you may introduce yourselves and we will all have dinner."

Conversation heard on a train for Monte Carlo. Two travelers, unknown to each other, chatting familiarly—

"On your way to Monte Carlo, sir, that delightful and exclusive home for gamblers?"

"That is exactly where I am going." "And you will play just a little, I suppose?"

"I do nothing else, sir; it is my business."

"Gracious! You don't mean to say you make a business of it?"

"Yes, sir; twice a day regularly, and I never by any chance lose."

"In that case, perhaps, you will explain your system to me?"

"Certainly, with pleasure. I play the violin!"

MARKED DOWN TO $3.95.

It pleased Miss Flagg to hear tongues wag about her new fall bonnet. But she was mad to find it had the price tag still upon it.

Inconsistent.

She says she loves my children. But she must deal in chaff. For she's invited them to go And hear her phonograph.

Full Supply.

"Yes," said the budding young author, "I shall leave for the south tomorrow."

"What are you going to do down south?" asked the publisher.

"Why I am going to write a war story and I want to study up southern grit."

The publisher placed his hand on the young author's shoulder.

"My dear young man," he said, slowly, "you don't have to go down south to study up southern grit."

"Not?"

"Of course not. Just buy a box of southern berries and you will find all the grit you are looking for."

Pat's Eye Opened.

An Irishman, more patriotic than clever, enlisted in a Dragoon regiment with the intention of becoming a gallant soldier. The fencing instructor had experienced rather a difficult job in the matter of explaining to him the various ways of using the sword.

"Now," he said, "how would you use the sword if your opponent feinted?"

"Bedad," said Pat, with gleaming eyes, "I'd tickle him with the point to see if he was shamming!"

Through the Screen.

"Land, pa," whispered little Zuke, "guess I saw 'em! Why, the hired man just kissed sis through the screen door."

"Wall, now, they better watch out," drawled the old farmer; "every day you read about germs lurking in kisses, be goosh."

"Yes, pa, but not when you kiss through a screen door."

"What's the difference?"

"Why then the kiss is strained."

A BEGINNER.

Old Bodger (savagely, after the thirty-fourth attempt to "drive")—I wonder which is the right club to brain the caddy with?

Glorious Weather.

A sudden shower struck the town—Good gracious, they are hurrying And hoister of blue and brown Showed where the maids were scurrying.

Salesmanship.

"Drummers used to sell goods by telling funny stories. But everything is strictly businesslike these days."

"Yes," remarked the traveling salesman, "we listen to 'em now."

The Female Instinct.

"Remember, Ethel, you are a little girl and you shouldn't try to do all the talking."

"When will I be old enough, mamma?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Doesn't Suit Her.

"He is a self-made man, I am told." "Quite true, but his mother-in-law insists on making some alterations."

RUN TO FULLNESS

DOMINATING FEATURE OF FALL SLEEVES AND SKIRTS.

Long Princess Lines Are to Continue Popular—Consolation for Women to Whom They Are Not Especially Adapted.

In the newest fall models, one notices immediately that the sleeves and skirts seem to have more fullness. The skirt yoke also seems an important feature, together with the long princess lines.

Some of these styles are bizarre and trying—a stout woman in one of these one-piece, close fitting frocks makes herself ugly in the extreme, and she should never adopt such a style.

The corsage and skirt have come back to the consolation of those women who cannot wear these princess lines, and many waists and separate skirts are seen. The new skirts present so many arrangements of fullness that almost every figure may be suited.

For those women who do not look good in the long, close fitting gown, attractive models are shown with drapery on both bodice and skirt, relieving these long lines.

For the slender woman the yokes and corsets frocks are chic and attractive if well made and cleverly adapted to the individual figure.

An inch or two in the depth or height of a corset or yoke may make all the difference between a becoming frock and one that is unbecoming, and such points should be carefully considered. A contrast of material in such models is out of the question for some figures while very satisfactory for others.

The model gown shown here to-day is made up of plum colored cloth with trimmings of buttons. The skirt shows one of the new styles and the bodice with its Irish collar, is also a new touch this fall.

The hats are practical models with trimmings of large quills which may be seen each season with perhaps a little difference in shape.

The neckwear is made up of sheer lawn and lace, with here and there a touch of hand embroidery. The Dutch collars of lace will be as popular this winter as they have been during the summer, and many girls will wear the neck low with no chemise.

Comfort Protectors.

Take a piece of cheesecloth four inches longer than a bed quilt is wide, split it exactly in the center, hem-stitch both pieces (making the hem two inches wide) on all but the selvedge edges, and you have two pretty comfort protectors costing about six cents each. A monogram or a pretty linen lace edge adds to the dainty effect. Baste the selvedge edge along the under side of the top of the comfort, draw it smoothly down over the right side and tack at the corners and lower edge of the hem. It is easily removed and laundered and saves the comfort much wear and washing. These are quickly made and will sell at a church fair for several times the cost of the material. A bride-to-be would like them, or you might make some for the housewife's Christmas box.—Woman's Home Companion.

The Jersey Dress.

The Jersey dress has been met with, but it has not been carefully introduced. Its credentials have not come with it and it is misunderstood. It is hardly to be regarded as a coming fashion—it is here. Whether or not it will be found a favorite and encouraged for any length of time, its place is within the present fashion period and its time is now. It is not put forth as a dressy garment, but as a fairly low-priced and convenient one for the lower of the class, or fitted princess, and for the buyer of things new. Its happiest expression is a beaded, glittering surface and a well-tailored neck.

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her

Knoxville, Iowa.—"I suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more and was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and am glad to say that your medicines and kind letters of directions have done more for me than anything else and I had the best physicians here. I can do my work and rest well at night. I believe there is nothing like the Pinkham remedies."

Mrs. CLARA FRANKS, R. F. D., No. 3, Knoxville, Iowa.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills, and suffering women owe it to themselves to at least give this medicine a trial. Proof is abundant that it has cured thousands of others, and why should it not cure you?

If you want special advice write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it is free and always helpful.

M. P. CONFERENCE

Concluded Sessions in Baltimore Tuesday Evening. Full List of Appointments.

The eighty second session of the Maryland Annual Conference, Methodist Protestant Church, convened in Broadway Church, Baltimore, Tuesday evening of last week and continued for a week. By a unanimous vote Rev. Dr. J. M. Sheridan was re-elected president of the conference for the ensuing year and Rev. W. S. Phillips was again chosen secretary.

Rev. Dr. Sheridan has been president of the conference for the past three years and his re-election shows that the conference will not return to the three year limit for its presidents during the term of Dr. Sheridan.

The roll call showed a large attendance of both ministers and lay delegates. The president submitted his yearly report to the Conference. It showed a substantial advance along all lines of Christian activity. He deplored the death of two ministers during the year—Revs. John B. Jones and B. P. Traill—and two widows of ministers—Mrs. Tamsen H. Reese and Mrs. Rebecca Ellegood. The report also announced the withdrawal of Rev. C. E. Redeker from the ministry under charges and the permission to withdraw from the Conference granted to Rev. B. W. Elliott.

The report showed that the past year had been one of unusual activity in church and parsonage building and the paying of debts. Five new churches were built during the year—at Harmony, Rehoboth, Fairview Heights, Lynchburg, Va. Eastw Church and Wilton Heights. New enterprises are planned for the coming summer. The total amount expended for churches and parsonages during the past year was reported to have been $95,857.

There has been a substantial increase in salaries paid the ministers. Reports from 27 churches show an advance in salaries of $3,506 over last year, and 20 churches report advances for the coming year. The president reported that during the year there had been 2144 conversions within the bounds of the Conference, and that 2,809 had united with the churches. He also called attention to the evangelistic campaign which is contemplated for the ensuing year, through which it is hoped to secure 25,000 conversions. He also referred to the work of the Theological Seminary at Westminster and urged support for it on the ministers. He urged that the Christian Endeavor movement be encouraged and that special attention be paid to the Sunday School.

The Conference condemned the recent session of the Legislature for not

WANTS BRIBERY BARED

Governor Hughes, in Special Message, Demands Investigation.

Declaring that the revelations in the recent Allida-Conger bribery inquiry and the facts brought out in the insurance investigation by Superintendent of Insurance Hotchkiss "have caused every honest citizen to tingle with shame and indignation and have made irresistible the demand that every proper means should be employed to purge and to purify," Governor Hughes sent a special message to the New York Legislature recommending "an immediate, impartial, thorough and unparrying investigation into legislative practices and procedure and into the use of corrupt or improper means for the promotion or defeat of legislation."

Accompanying the message was a preliminary report of Superintendent Hotchkiss, which outlined the facts unearthed at the fire insurance investigation in New York and set forth the difficulties encountered in following up the various leads uncovered.

The superintendent says that obstacles apparently insuperable have developed in the course of the inquiry. There, in his judgement, warrant further investigation, but he has no power to pursue them and therefore has laid the facts thus far disclosed before the Governor for action.

What The Governor Says.

The Governor says in part:—"It is the high privilege of the Legislature in the discharge of its obligations to itself and to the people of the State to follow the salutary action already taken in its upper branch by appropriate steps for the exposure and destruction of combinations and conspiracies against the just use of the law-making power and by providing suitable protection against the recurrence of such abuses. This is a promising opportunity to pursue the opening trails of corruption, to reveal illicit methods and agencies, to uncover the pernicious influences which have dishonored the State and thus to aid in securing the wholesome exercise of its beneficent authority."

"Important as will be the wholesome and corrective influence of publicity with respect to these matters, the purpose and result of the inquiry extend beyond the bounds of mere disclosure. No subject deserves more thorough consideration to the end that the opportunities of those who are willing to buy legislative favor or to use representative powers for personal profit should be limited to the utmost degree."

"I, therefore, recommend an immediate, impartial, thorough and unparrying investigation into legislative practices and procedure and into the use of corrupt or improper means for the promotion or defeat of legislation, such inquiry not to be limited to, but suitably embrace, the matters adduced in the recent proceeding by the Senate and those presented by the report herewith submitted to the Superintendent of Insurance, in order that, so far as evidence may be obtainable, the actual facts may be known, and there may be a full understanding of the methods and agencies employed in connection with legislative proposals, and that well considered recommendations for appropriate remedies may be made."

Insurance Companies Liberal.

Superintendent Hotchkiss, in his report, says that the result of the investigation thus far warrants the statement that legislative expenditures in New York by insurance companies were particularly conspicuous in the years 1901, 1903, 1904, 1905 and 1909, and notably significant in two or three of these years.

"These disbursements," he said, "were made by individual companies in connection with legislation affecting such companies, by syndicates of companies apparently willing to do this work for all, and by the New York Board of Fire Underwriters, a corporation supported by annual assessments on practically all of the companies doing business in New York, such assessments being based on premium income, and whose committee on laws and legislation is, by its laws, charged with the responsibility of watching over legislative affairs."

"The aggregate of disbursements, as the record now stands, such disbursements being largely from the treasuries of fire insurance companies approximate and probably exceeds $150,000."

Superintendent Sums Up.

Superintendent Hotchkiss, summarizing, says:—"In short, while absolute proof showing the transit of money from the bank accounts of an insurance company into the hands of the bank account of a legislator is lacking, the record of the investigation, as thus far made up, warrants the statement that during the last decade, particularly in the first five years of such decade, a system of bull-killing and law-getting has existed which is a reproach to the people of the State. That such system existed prior to 1900 is also apparent from the facts developed on the investigation."

USING VETO LARGELY

On Bills Passed Hurdled By The Legislature

Comment is being made on the action of Governor Crothers on the full exercise of his power of veto, for never before in the history of Maryland has a chief of this State wielded this power to the same extent as has Governor Crothers. One sixth of all the bills passed by the Legislature failed to receive his approval and $300,000 was cut out of the general appropriation bill.

Introduced in the Legislature were about 1400 bills. All but 763 of the number were disapproved by the lawmakers, and of these 763 Governor Crothers vetoed 14.

His exercise of the power vested in him was approved by some and disapproved by others. In some quarters it was declared that so much power was dangerous in the hands of any one man. It is not claimed however, that the Governor used his pen to the detriment of the State. It is generally believed that the bills disapproved by him are better off the statute books, although complaints are heard here and there of the fate meted out to some particular measure.

Legislature's Own Fault.

The Governor's opportunity to veto is due solely to the management of the legislative session. If bills are presented to him while the General Assembly is in session, he must in case he disapproves them return them to the lawmakers with the reason that prompted this action. This Legislature held back all its work until the last two weeks. It then began to rush through. As a result of this mismanagement the engrossing force could do no more than handle the routine work necessary to keep the Legislature going. If had no time to prepare the bills for the Governor. Consequently nine tenths of all the bills passed did not reach the Governor until the Legislature had adjourned. Under the Constitution he has six days in which to decide what he proposes to do with them. The Legislature had adjourned. It was not possible for the members to override his judgement in case they disapproved his action.

Moreover, it was the delay of the General Assembly indisposing of this work that gave the Governor the club with which he forced through the primary election bill, the public utilities bill and secured amendments to the road law whereby the work is concentrated under one board. Law makers had measures that were important to their constituents in the counties, although of no general concern to all the people of the State. This was the lever used by Governor Crothers. He advised them to fall in line with him. They trembled for the fate of local bills.

In exercising the veto Governor Crothers made it plain that he did not propose to deprive the Public Utilities Commission of the task that faces it. All the legislation dealing with corporations was vetoed where the Public Utilities Commission has, under the new law, the power to inquire into and remedy the wrongs complained of.

The Best-Wearing and the Most Comfortable Dollar Corset is the "HOUSEWIFE"

The Housewife is a two-in-one corset—equally good for work and for dress purposes

TIME was, when a woman was forced to wear her old corsets when she did housework—her new corsets were too stiff and uncomfortable, or they "cut" under the arms.

Then we introduced the "HOUSEWIFE" Corset—and now thousands of women are wearing it.

It is comfortable from the first minute—you can wear it at home and do your work in absolute ease—and its lines are so graceful that you can wear your best gown over it and look better than you ever looked before.

The "HOUSEWIFE" Corset is made of light, firm white batiste, cut low under the arms for comfort, and double-boned for durability.

It will outwear two pairs of the ordinary dollar corsets.

All sizes from 18 to 30—at $1.00 a pair.

CHARLES T.
RUSSELL
Pastor Brooklyn
Tabernacle.

MOUNTAINS SWEEP INTO THE SEA

"We Will Not Fear Though the Mountains Be Carried Into the Midst of the Sea" (Psalm xli, 2).

April 10.—Pastor Russell, accompanied by Dr. Jones, who will serve him as stenographer, and by a representative of this Journal, sailed from New York April 5th for Jerusalem—via Paris, Berne, Naples, Alexandria, Cairo and the Pyramids, Jaffa, to Jerusalem and vicinity. His return will be via Rome, Vienna, Warsaw, Berlin, Elberfeld and London. Meetings have been arranged for enroute. His longest stay will be in Great Britain, where about twenty appointments in the principal cities await him. He will be speaking practically every day. His Sunday discourses will be especially reported in these columns. Special interest will center in the discourses at Jerusalem and Rome. The many readers of his sermons will follow the Pastor in his journey with great interest. He is scheduled to be back in Brooklyn June 5th, when his topic will be "Jerusalem." In anticipation of a large audience on that occasion Brooklyn's largest Auditorium, the Academy of Music, has been secured. His sermons now reach six million families weekly, and assuredly many of these wish him God-speed.

On the Atlantic April Tenth.

I have chosen for my text a sea topic, a symbolical prophecy which, I believe, is rapidly nearing fulfillment. All Bible students recognize the fact that many of the Psalms are Messianic; that is to say, they apply to the time of the inauguration of Messiah's Millennial Kingdom. Some of them detail the peace and joy and blessings which will then prevail among men, when the great leveling processes of that time will raise all the worthy poor and degraded and will humble all the proud, establishing the new order of things in a new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" (II Peter iii, 13). Others of the Psalms describe in highly figurative terms the work of the Millennial Age. For instance, we read:

"Gird thy sword upon thy thigh, O most Mighty, with thy glory and thy majesty. And in thy majesty ride prosperously, because of truth and meekness and righteousness; and thy right hand shall teach thee terrible things. Thine arrows are sharp in the heart of the King's enemies; whereby the people fall under thee" (Psalm xiv, 3-5). Here the great Redeemer is pictured as the glorious conquering King of the Millennial Age, and his victory over every opposing influence is emphasized—"Unto him every knee shall bow and every tongue confess" (Isaiah xli, 23). His right hand that will teach terrible things is the symbol of the Divine power which will be exercised at the inauguration of the Kingdom. The sharp arrows which will pierce the enemies to the heart and cause them symbolically to fall before him shall represent his messages of Truth and Grace which will conquer as they do not now, except in the hearts of the few. A sample of those now slain after this manner by the Word of Truth is furnished us in the account of St. Peter's sermon on the Day of Pentecost. He preached the Truth plainly, thrusting in the "Sword of the Spirit" up to the hilt. He told his hearers how they and their rulers had crucified the Prince of Life. They were "cut to the heart," and it was the greatest blessing that could have possibly come to them (Acts ii, 23). Similarly during the Millennium, the "arrows" of Truth will smite down opposition; and mankind, cut to the heart with proper appreciation of their own sinfulness and God's mercy, will fall before the great King, accepting mercy upon his gracious terms—the surrender.

The Psalm of which our text is a part is one of the Messianic Psalms. Prophetically and symbolically it tells about the trouble incident to the passing away of the present order of sin and selfishness and the inauguration of the new order of righteousness and love under the great Mediatorial Kingdom of Christ. Whether the events which the Scriptures predict shall come in our day or not, we hold that they will come and be in full comportment with these prophetic pictures. They were surely written for our instruction (I Timothy iii, 16). And as Bible students we do well to take heed to every item of the Divine revelation, that thus we may keep ourselves in touch with the Indivisible One and in sympathy with all the features of his great and wonderful Program. Let us note the particulars of the Psalm in detail.

The Refuge of His Saints.

"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble" (Psalm xli, 1). How beautiful! How comforting! How strengthening! Those who have entered into covenant relationship with God through Christ, through faith and consecration, and who are abiding in his love, may feel serene in any trouble—in every trouble—not merely in the final trouble, with which sin and sorrow will be brought to an end. Not merely when Satan shall be bound with God be the deliverer of all circumstances. "The Lord God which passeth all understanding, will keep the hearts and minds of the faithful.

ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." And again, God declares his name to be Love and says, "Their fear toward me is taught by the precepts of men"—not by his Word (Isaiah xli, 13). He would have us trust him as a great, loving, generous Father, saying, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord compassioneth those who reverence him" (Psalm ciii, 13). As love, more love, perfect love, comes into our hearts, it more and more casts out the fear which the adversary would instill and which has burned into men's minds and consciences the "doctrines of devils," to which the Apostle refers (I Timothy iv, 1).

"Fear not their fear, neither be afraid," says the Lord to those who are his people. "Let the peace of God which passeth all understanding rule in your hearts!" Be faithful! Be trustful! Accept the assurance that "All things shall work together for good to those who love God—to the called ones according to his purpose" (Romans viii, 28). This class will not fear when the earth shall be removed and when the mountains shall be carried into the midst of the sea. They might indeed be astonished and in trepidation if these were literal mountains; but they are symbolical. The people of the Lord, under his instruction, will not be in darkness that that day shall make them as a thief, although it will come as a thief and as a snare upon the whole world (Luke xxi, 35). In the symbolism of the Bible the term earth is used to represent the social structure, as the mountains which constitute the backbone of the earth symbolize the kingdoms of the world supported by the social order. As the earth represents the fixity of the social order, the sea represents the restless, turbulent, dissatisfied classes which lash against the earth and continually seek to swallow it up. The removal of the earth symbolizes the disturbance of the social order. The swallowing up of the mountains in the sea represents the overthrowing of some of the great kingdoms of the earth by the uprising of the people in anarchistic rebellion against social order.

"The Powers That Be Ordained of God."

The fact that the Scriptures prophetically describe the overthrowing of the social order and the great governments of the earth must not be understood to signify that the Bible counsels revolution or anarchy. On the contrary, all of God's people through out the Scriptures are counseled to live peacefully with all men, so far as possible. They are counseled not to use carnal weapons, not to take to the sword for the settlement of disputes, but rather to suffer injury. They are counseled that God is the great Over Lord, and that although he is not now ruling directly amongst men he is fully the Master of the situation in that he could at any time overthrow all opposition. He does not acknowledge that his will is now done in the earth, but tells us that it will be done by and by and encourages us to pray and to hope and to wait for it. He tells us that Satan is now the "Prince of this world" by virtue of the fact that he deceives the minds and hearts of the majority. God would have his people understand something of his great Program, but he would keep this hidden from all others; hence the impossibility of explaining spiritual things to a carnal mind (I Corinthians ii, 14). "None of the wicked shall understand" (Daniel xii, 10).

The great Creator has contented himself with such a supervision of human affairs as leaves much responsibility to human hands. He never interferes to raise up or to cast down on occasions when the interest of his Cause and Program may demand. For instance, the case of the Pharaoh, raised to the throne of Egypt, in Moses' day. God there raised to the Throne a man of great determination, and hindered from reaching the throne other men not so favorable to the carrying out of the Divine Purposes. Thus, without interfering with the free moral agency of the free man, God used the earth of man to praise him and the remainder he restrained him. God previously raised Joseph to the Governorship of Egypt for his own purposes.

The Prophet describes the tumult of that day of overwhelming trouble when God's Kingdom will be established, saying of the sea that it will swallow up the mountains. "The waters roar and are troubled; the mountains shake with the swelling thereof" (Psalm xli, 3). It is probably true that such socialistic and anarchistic roarings have many times in the past caused the kingdoms of earth and their rulers to tremble. But some day, according to the Scriptures, the final catastrophe will occur. How near that day may be who can tell? Quite a good many earnest Bible students concur in the thought that such a climax is indicated in the prophecies, for the year 1915. But be the date as it may, the fact remains. The prophecies are examining in nearly three thousand years old, but it is as good, as sure, and as meaningful today as ever it was.

We are not of those who would harass the minds of our fellows with fear. Rather we would point them to the fact that behind this cloud of trouble there is a glorious silver lining of Millennial joy and blessing for all the families of the earth. Rather we would encourage all who have the hearing ear to zeal and faithfulness in their consecration, that they may "make their calling and their election sure" to a share in the Kingdom glories and "escape those things coming upon the earth" (Luke xxi, 36). In a word, the Gospel of Christ is not a message of damnation and fear and torture, but, as the angels declared, "Good tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people" (Luke ii, 10).

Deliverance of the Church Pictured.

In the fourth and fifth verses following our text the Church is symbolically pictured as the City of Kingdom of God, his dwelling-place. And the stream of Truth is represented as a river making the City clean and fresh and glad. The proclamation is made, "God is in the midst of her! She shall not be moved! God shall help her early in the morning"—early in the Millennial morning. The Church is to be "a first-fruits unto God." Her salvation as the Bride of Christ will be accomplished early in this Millennial morning. Oh, how glad will be all those accounted worthy of a place in that elect Church—"the Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven." "She shall not be moved." Is in agreement with the first verse in assuring us that God's people will be preserved from fear and doubt and misunderstanding of the events of that "time of trouble" and that their faith will enable them to triumph at a time when others will be in great distress and perplexity (Luke xxi, 26).

The Gentiles Raged.

Beginning with the 6th verse the Prophet gives a brief synoptical picture of the time of trouble and its consummation and the inauguration of universal peace. "The heathen (Gentile peoples) raged!" These words describe the tumult which will prevail amongst humanity in the great time of trouble before the climax is reached. "Raging," angry voices arise from public meetings, and in the more private meetings of the lodges of Labor and Capital, and through the columns of the Press to the extent permitted. The same is true in other nations. In Great Britain, in the United States and in France there is a fear of tumult through public Press "raging," and everything possible is done to restrain it. Whoever sees that anarchy is the most dreadful terror confronting Civilization must realize the wisdom of reasonable restraints upon his own tongue and upon the tongues of others. Nevertheless the Scriptures show us that all effort to suppress the tumult and the angry voices of men selfishly "raging" out against each other will fail.

The prophetic picture continues—"God uttered his voice; the earth melted." The unfaithfulness of humanity, the clamor of greed, both rich and poor, will be answered by the Almighty. "Giver of every good and perfect gift." He will "utter his voice," or, as another prophet declares, "He will speak to the people in his anger," for their correction, for their reproof. The result will be that the symbolical earth (society) will melt—the social structure of civilization will disintegrate. Another Scripture declares that that disintegration will be so great that "every man's hand will be against his neighbor."

But the Prophet hastens to assure us that in the midst of all this tumult the Lord will be with his consecrated people. We read, "The Lord of hosts is with us. The God of Jacob is our refuge." This promise applies primarily to the consecrated Church of Christ—Spiritual Israel. But it also secondarily applies to fleshly Israel, the Jewish nation, which will participate in this time of trouble, but be saved out of it, as the Scriptures declare (Jeremiah xxx, 7). In this time of trouble the Lord's jewels, his saints, will be gathered to their heavenly home, after which Divine favor will begin to return to Israel (Romans xi, 25-30).

The Psalm closes with a picture of the desolate ion which will prevail throughout the world as a result of human selfishness and blindness. Capital and Labor will rise up to a terrible cataclysm of anarchy, awful for rich and poor alike. Only God's saints will then have peace, and that because of their knowledge of the great outcome, because of their faith in God and their willingness to accept whatever his providence should send. Mark the grand symbolic apostrophe with which the Psalm closes! May its lessons draw us nearer to the Fountain of Grace and give us rest, peace and joy through obedience of heart to him, "He (Immanuel) maketh wars to cease unto the ends of the earth; he breaketh the bow in sunder; he burneth the chariot in fire. Be still and know that I am God. I will be exalted among the heathen (Gentiles); I will be exalted in the earth."

Women as Well as Men are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased. Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose. Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root. Send for it at once, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Do not make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

GOVERNOR USES THE VETO.

Probably there were never as many bills vetoed in this State as have been vetoed this year by Governor Crothers. Altogether about 1500 bills were introduced in this Legislature; of these more than half were killed by the members or allowed to sleep in the committee rooms after their introduction; of the number passed—something over 700—162 or more than one fifth were vetoed by the Governor. Most of the bills vetoed were measures dealing with special legislation, and it is hoped that the action of the Governor will have the effect of keeping such bills out of the Legislature hereafter.

The appropriation bills met with a general reduction all along the line, a total of $800,000 being cut off by the Governor. Wicomico met a reduction in the appropriation given to the Home for the Aged—that institution being given $2500 for the two years instead of $5000 as the bill provided. The Hospital's appropriation of $10,000 each year stands as does the appropriation for the Pine Bluff Sanitarium of $3000 for the two years.

Perhaps the happiest section of the County over the acts of the Legislature was Sharptown. The appropriation of $25,000 for a bridge over the river at that point is something that they Governor Crothers announced intention of having the constitutional-ity of the fifteenth amendment tested before the passage of any laws contrary to its provision, is much more in accord with the customs and feelings of the law abiding citizens of this country than would have been the other course.

As it did not need the Governor's signature to make it a law, The Constitutional Amendment passed at the same time as the Digges Bill and intended to be a part of the same general policy, will have to be submitted to the voters for their consideration. This Amendment draws the lines almost as close as the Digges Bill as it provides no colored man can vote unless he is the owner of $500 worth of real estate.

Governor Crothers plan, however, is to have the Fifteenth Amendment passed upon before the general election when this Amendment is to be passed upon. If this decision should upset the Fifteenth Amendment then the people of this State can support the disfranchising clause consistently, and on the other hand if it should be upheld it does not make any difference anyway, as it would not stand if passed by the voters.

Governor Crothers is to be congratulated on the broad-minded way he has handled this question, putting good citizenship above party feeling, and party feeling at that which met a responsive chord in his own breast; for the Governor is well known to be a sincere believer in the disfranchisement of the negro.

VETO OF DIGGES BILL.

A large number of the white citizens of this State are sincere in their belief that the elimination of the negro from the politics of the State would work not only to the benefit of the State but in the long run would be better for the negroes themselves. This is true, it is also true that the negroes are to be done so according to the recognized law of the land. One of the greatest safeguards of the American people is their deep implanted respect for the law and the recognized authorities; and anything that has the appearance of flying in the face of these is sure to be frowned upon by the people.

The so called Digges Bill passed by the last Legislature, provided for a new registration in which the negro was refused the right to register this of course carried with it the loss of franchise for that race. The object aimed at undoubtedly met with the approval of the majority of the Democratic party, and if it had not been regarded as flying in the face of the United States Constitution would have been enthusiastically received by the voters; but being regarded in the light of a defiance to the highest authority of this country, its veto by the Governor meets with general approval—even by those who were its chief advocates before and during its passage. no longer allowed to have any influence in the political councils of the party, or in shaping the affairs of the nation.

The effect of a good square, thorough investigation by the legislatures of the different States, which would not only expose present bribery but delve in the past history of gone-by legislatures would have a good effect on all future members of our law-making bodies

BRIBERY IN NEW YORK.

The entire country approves of the action of Gov. Hughes, of New York in insisting upon the charges of blackmail and bribery on the part of the members of the Senate and Legislature in that State. Enough has come out to show the need of such an investigation and the people of that State are demanding the names of the guilty parties. Charges of bribery on the part of our law makers are entirely too common in this country, and from appearances there is just cause for the belief of the people in the power of money to influence legislation. The course of New York's Governor could well be followed in other sections with good results. It matters little when the offence was committed, the men corrupted should be exposed and have long wanted and worked for.

Things seem to have been coming Sharptown's way recently, for the State Road passes through this town and will be of great value in building it up and now they are to have a bridge across the river getting rid of the slow and antiquated ferry systems. Sharptown is a hustling place and believes in going after what she wants.

Proceedings of County Commissioners.

The County Commissioners were in session Tuesday and transacted the following business.

Objection having been made to the final ratification of the report of B. S. Morris, E. W. Parsons and G. E. Jackson on tax ditch petitioned for by J. Frank Powell and others, the clerk was directed to notify petitioners of such objection, and that the report would be taken up on May 30 for action.

A. W. Hearn, J. E. Ellegood, J. W. Freese and others filed a petition for a new county road to begin at a point on the road leading from the Connolly mill to Mr. Ellegood's farm, just West of the railroad, and extend South paralleling the said road through the lands of the petitioners to the Middle Neck road between Parsons Cemetery and the Middle Neck crossing. Laid over for future action.

Messrs. Cooper and Clark were directed to have the county jail connected with the city sewer.

In compliance with the new assessment law, the board divided the county into two assessment districts as follows: No. 1, composed of Sharptown, Barren Creek, Quantico, Tyeckin, Nanticoke, Trappe and Salisbury Districts; No. 2, composed of Willards, Pittsburg, Dennis, Nanters, Delmar, Parsons and Camden Districts. The Governor will appoint two general assessors for each assessment district, and the board will appoint one local assessor for each of the fourteen election districts.

City Council In Session.

The City Council was in session Monday evening and transacted the following business:

The City Council instructed the clerk to give notice to the property owners on Naylor Street who have not already put down cement sidewalks to do so at once.

Applications for building permits were granted as follows: L. A. Parsons, dwelling on Water Street; G. E. Collier, dwelling on North Division Street; D. B. Potter, garage on East Camden Street.

Mr. S. Q. Johnson was before the Council and asked that a street crossing be placed on the E. C. & A. track at the Northwest end of Bush Street. Councilman Sheppard was authorized to confer with Superintendent Polk in regard to the matter.

New Fire Alarm System For Salisbury.

The Mayor and City Council have arranged with the Diamond State Telephone Company to install a fire alarm system in Salisbury. The town will be districted and charts made of same. The big bell in the Court House tower will be connected up with the City Hall by an electrical device and all alarms will be turned in from the City Hall by means of electric buttons.

When a fire breaks out in any section of the city, a call should be sent in to Central at the Telephone exchange, stating in what Division the fire is, then Central will turn the call in to the City Hall where the proper button will be pressed and the alarm bell will sound a certain number of taps which will designate exactly in what section of the City the fire is. This system will be a great benefit in the quick location of fires and when the system is installed it is hoped that the citizens of Salisbury will study the charts and be perfectly familiar with the system.

Gets Long Forgotten Cash.

When Mrs. Hearn, of Ocean City, Md., came to Georgetown and was asked by a lawyer if her father's estate ever had been settled she went to the Court House to ascertain and was pleasantly surprised to learn that $1100 had been lying in the care of the Sussex County Orphans Court for more than 30 years.

When her father, William Harper, died, many years ago, he left considerable property, all of which was sold and the money paid over to the heirs except the price of one piece of land, which was held in trust. The heirs supposed that the estate had been settled and forgot all about it until yesterday, when a lawyer who had found the account while searching records made the discovery. Mrs. Hearn proved her claim and returned to her home $1100 richer by her trip here.

New Fish Hatchery Station.

Commissioner Samuel J. Twilley has just completed the building of a new Fish Hatching Station for Salisbury. The new building is located on the property of the Salisbury Light, Heat and Power Company, below the dam. The building of this house was made necessary by the fact that the old station was located below Lake Humphreys and when the dam blew out it rendered this station useless.

Active operations will be begun hatching shad at the Salisbury Station just as soon as the run of ripe shad will permit. It is intended to make a stronger effort to produce young shad at this station this year than ever before. Many millions of young shad will be hatched in the next thirty days from this station.

according to the recognized law of the land. One of the greatest safeguards of the American people is their deep implanted respect for the law and the recognized authorities; and anything that has the appearance of flying in the face of these is sure to be frowned upon by the people.

The so called Digges Bill passed by the last Legislature, provided for a new registration in which the negro was refused the right to register this of course carried with it the loss of franchise for that race. The object aimed at undoubtedly met with the approval of the majority of the Democratic party, and if it had not been regarded as flying in the face of the United States Constitution would have been enthusiastically received by the voters; but being regarded in the light of a defiance to the highest authority of this country, its veto by the Governor meets with general approval—even by those who were its chief advocates before and during its passage, no longer allowed to have any influence in the political councils of their party, or in shaping the affairs of the nation.

The effect of a good square, thorough investigation by the legislatures of the different States, which would not only expose present bribery but delve in the past history of gone-by legislatures would have a good effect on all future members of our law-making bodies.

BRIbery IN NEW YORK.

The entire country approves of the action of Gov. Hughes, of New York in insisting upon the charges of blackmail and bribery on the part of the members of the Senate and Legislature in that State. Enough has come out to show the need of such an investigation and the people of that State are demanding the names of the guilty parties. Charges of bribery on the part of our law-makers are entirely too common in this country, and from appearances there is just cause for the belief of the people in the power of money to influence legislation. The course of New York's Governor could well be followed in other sections with good results. It matters little when the offence was committed, the men corrupted should be exposed and have long wanted and worked for.

Things seem to have been coming Sharptown's way recently, for the State Road passes through this town and will be of great value in building it up and now they are to have a bridge across the river getting rid of the slow and antiquated ferry systems. Sharptown is a hustling place and believes in going after what she wants.

Proceedings of County Commissioners.

The County Commissioners were in session Tuesday and transacted the following business.

Objection having been made to the final ratification of the report of E. S. Morris, E. W. Parsons and G. E. Jackson on tax ditch petitioned for by J. Frank Powell and others, the clerk was directed to notify petitioners of such objection, and that the report would be taken up on May 30 for action.

A. W. Hearn, J. E. Ellegood, J. W. Freeman and others filed a petition for a new county road to begin at a point on the road leading from the Connelly mill to Mr. Ellegood's farm, just West of the railroad, and extend South paralleling the said road through the lands of the petitioners to the Middle Neck road between Parsons Cemetery and the Middle Neck crossing. Laid over for future action.

Messrs. Conper and Clark were directed to have the county jail connected with the city sewer.

In compliance with the new assessment law, the board divided the county into two assessment districts as follows: No. 1, composed of Sharptown, Barren Creek, Quantico, Tyaskin, Nanticoke, Trappe and Salisbury Districts; No. 2, composed of Willards, Pittsburg, Dennis, Nutters, Delmar, Parsons and Camden Districts. The Governor will appoint two general assessors for each assessment district, and the board will appoint one local assessor for each of the fourteen election districts.

City Council In Session.

The City Council was in session Monday evening and transacted the following business:

The City Council instructed the clerk to give notice to the property owners on Naylor Street who have not already put down cement sidewalks to do so at once.

Applications for building permits were granted as follows: L. A. Parsons, dwelling on Water Street; G. R. Collier, dwelling on North Division Street; D. B. Potter, garage on East Camden Street.

Mr. S. Q. Johnson was before the Council and asked that a street crossing be placed on the B. O. & A. track at the Northwest end of Bush Street. Councilman Sheppard was authorized to confer with Superintendent Polk in regard to the matter.

New Fire Alarm System For Salisbury.

The Mayor and City Council have arranged with the Diamond State Telephone Company to install a fire alarm system in Salisbury. The town will be districted and charts made of same. The big bell in the Court House tower will be connected up with the City Hall by an electrical device and all alarms will be turned in from the City Hall by means of electric buttons.

When a fire breaks out in any section of the city, a call should be sent in to Central at the Telephone exchange, stating in what Division the fire is, then Central will turn the call in to the City Hall where the proper button will be pressed and the alarm bell will sound a certain number of taps which will designate exactly in what section of the City the fire is. This system will be a great benefit in the quick location of fires and when the system is installed it is hoped that the citizens of Salisbury will study the charts and be perfectly familiar with the system.

Gets Long Forgotten Cash.

When Mrs. Hearn, of Ocean City, Md., came to Georgetown and was asked by a lawyer if her father's estate ever had been settled she went to the Court House to ascertain and was pleasantly surprised to learn that $1100 had been lying in the care of the Sussex County Orphans Court for more than 30 years.

When her father, William Harper, died, many years ago, he left considerable property, all of which was sold and the money paid over to the heirs except the price of one piece of land, which was held in trust. The heirs supposed that the estate had been settled and forgot all about it until yesterday, when a lawyer who had found the account while searching records made the discovery. Mrs. Hearn proved her claim and returned to her home $1100 richer by her trip here.

New Fish Hatchery Station.

Commissioner Samuel J. Twilley has just completed the building of a new Fish Hatching Station for Salisbury. The new building is located on the property of the Salisbury Light, Heat and Power Company, below the dam. The building of this house was made necessary by the fact that the old station was located below Lake Humphreys and when the dam blew out it rendered this station useless.

Active operations will be begun hatching shad at the Salisbury Station just as soon as the run of ripe shad will permit. It is intended to make a stronger effort to produce young shad at this station this year than ever before. Many millions of young shad will be hatched in the next thirty days from this station.

CHAPTER XXXI.

THE SHIPS THAT PASS.

THE next morning was rainy. A quick, violent storm had rushed up from the sea during the night.

Chase, after a sleepless night, came down and, without waiting for his breakfast, hurried out upon the gallery overlooking the harbor. Geneva was there before him, pale, watery-eyed, standing in the shelter of a huge pilaster.

"Hollingsworth," she said drearily, "do you believe he will come today?" "He?" he asked, puzzled.

"My uncle. The yacht was to call for me not later than today."

"I remember," he said slowly. "It may come, Geneva. The day is young."

She clasped his hand convulsively, a desperate revolt in her soul.

"I almost hope that it may not come for me," she said, her voice shaking with suppressed emotion. "It will not come. I feel it in my heart. We shall die here together, Hollingsworth. Ah, in that way I may escape the other life. No, no! What am I saying? Of course I want to leave this dreadful island—this dreadful, beautiful, hateful, happy island. Am I not too silly?"

She was speaking rapidly, almost hysterically, a nervous, flickering smile on her face.

"Dear one," he said gently, "the yacht will come. If it should not come today my cruises will forestall its mission. As sure as there is a sea those cruises will come." She looked into his eyes intently, as if afraid of something there. "Oh, I'm not mad!" she laughed. "You brought a cruiser to me one day. I'll bring one to you in return. We'll be quits."

"Quits?" she murmured, hurt by the word.

"Forgive me," he said humbly.

"Hollingsworth," she said after a long, tense scrutiny of the sea, "how long will you remain on this island?"

"Perhaps until I die—if death should come soon. If not, then God knows how long."

"Listen to me," she said intensely. "For my sake you will not stay long. You will come away before they find you. You will Promise me. You will come to Paris? Some day, dear heart? Promise!"

"To Paris?" he said, shaking his head sadly. "No, dearest one. Not now. Listen: I have in my bag upstairs an offer from a great American corporation. My headquarters would be in Paris. My duties would begin as soon as my contract with Sir John Brodney expires. The position is a lucrative one; it presents unlimited opportunities. I am a comparatively poor man. The letter was forwarded to me by Sir John. I have a year in which to decide."

"And you—you will decline?" she asked.

"Yes. I shall go back to America, where there are no princesses of royal blood. Paris is no place for the disappointed, castoff lover. I can't go there. I love you too madly. I'd go on loving you, and you, good as you are, would go on loving me. There is no telling what would come of it. It will be hard for me to stay away from Paris—desperately hard. Sometimes I feel that I will not be strong enough to do it, Geneva."

"But Paris is huge, Hollingsworth," she argued insistently, an eager, impelling light in her eyes. "We would be as far apart as if the ocean were between us."

"Ah, but would we?" he demanded.

"It is almost unheard of for an American to gain entrance to our—our set in which—well, you understand," she said, blushing painfully in the consciousness that she was touching his pride. He smiled sadly.

"My dear, you will do me the honor to remember that I am not trying to get into your set. I am trying to induce you to come into mine. You won't be tempted, so that's the end of it. Beasty day, isn't it?" He uttered the trite commonplace with the other thought that that of the weather had been in his mind. "By the way," he resumed, with a most genial smile, "for some queer, unmasculine reason I took it into my head last night to worry about the bride's trousseau. How are you going to manage it if you are unable to leave the island until—well, say June?"

She returned his smile with one as sweetly detached as his had been, catching his spirit. "So good of you to worry," she said, a defiant red in her cheeks. "You forget that I have a post-pone trousseau at home. A few stitches here and there, an alteration or two, some smart summer goods and hats—Oh, it will be so simple! What is it? What do you see?"

He was looking eagerly, intently toward the long, low headland beyond the town of Ararat.

"The smoke! See? Close inshore too! By heaven, Geneva, there's a steamer off there. She's a small one or she wouldn't run in so close. It—it may be the yacht! Wait! We'll soon see. She'll pass the point in a few minutes."

Already the citizens of the town were rubbing to the pier. Even before the vessel turned the point the watchers at the chateau witnessed a most amazing performance on the dock. Half a hundred natives dropped down as if stricken, scattering themselves along the narrow pier.

The people were simulating death! They were posing as the victims of the plague that infested the land! As he was explaining the ruse to his mystified companion the nose of the vessel came out from behind the tree-covered point.

An instant later they were sending wild cries of joy through the chateau, and people were rushing toward them from all quarters.

The trim white thing that glided across the harbor, graceful as a bird, was the marquis' yacht!

It is needless to describe the joyous gale that swept the chateau into a maelstrom of emotions.

They saw the tug put out to meet the small boat; they witnessed the same old maneuvers; they sustained a chill of surprise and despair when the bright white and blue boat from the yacht came to a stop at the command from the tug.

There was an hour of parleying. The beleaguered ones signaled with despairing energy. The flag, limp in the damp air above the chateau, shot up and down in pitiful eagerness.

But the small boat edged away from close proximity to the tug and the nearby dock. They spoke each other at long and ever widening range. At last the yacht's boat turned and fled toward the trim white hull.

Almost before the startled, dazed people on the balcony could grasp the full and horrible truth the yacht had lifted anchor and was slowly headed out to sea.

Chase looked grimly about him into the questioning, stricken faces of his companions. He drew his hand across his moist forehead.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said seriously and without the faintest intent to jest, "we are supposed to be dead!"

There was a single shriek from the bride of Thomas Saunders. No sound left the dry lips of the other watchers who stood as if petrified and kept their eyes glued upon the disappearing yacht.

"They have left me here to die!" came from the stiffened lips of the Princess Geneva. "They have deserted me! God in heaven!"

"Look!" cried Chase, pointing to the dock. Half a dozen glasses were turned in that direction.

The dying and the dead were leaping about in the wildest exhibition of gleeful triumph.

The yacht slipped into the unreachably horizon, the feathery cloud from its stack lying over against the leaden sky, shaped like a finger that pointed mockingly the way to safety.

White faced and despairing, the watchers turned away and dragged themselves into the splendid halls of the building they had now come to regard as their tomb.

All day long the islanders rejoiced. Their shouts could be plainly heard by the besieged. Their rifles cracked sarcastic greetings from the forest. Bullets whistled gay accompaniments to the ceaseless song: "Allah is great! Allah is good!"

No man in the despoiled house of Taswell Skaggs slept that night. The guard was doubled at all points open to attack. At 2 in the morning Deppingham, Browne and Chase came up from the walls for coffee and an hour's rest. They were wet and cold. They had heard Basula's minions shouting derisively all night long: "Where is the warship? Where is the warship?"

"It will come. I am positive," said Chase, insistent in spite of his dejection. They drank their coffee in silence. He knew that the others, including the native who served them, were regarding him with the pity that one extends to the vainglorious braggart who goes down with flying colors.

He went out upon the west gallery and, utterly fagged, threw himself into an unexposed chair and stared through tired eyes into the inscrutable night that hid the sea from view—the faithless, moaning, jeering sea!

When he aroused himself with a start the gray, drizzly dawn was upon him. He had slept.

The next instant he was on his feet, clutching the stone balustrade with a grip of iron, his eyes starting from his head. A shout arose to his lips, but he lacked the power to give it voice. A quaint smile grew in his face. His eyes were bright and full of triumph. After a full minute of preparation he made his way toward the breakfast room outwardly as calm as a May morning.

Browne and Deppingham were asleep in the chairs. He shook them vigorously. As they awoke he said in the coolest, most matter of fact way: "There's an American cruiser outside the harbor. Get up!"

Same Effect. "Cyril," said his mother as they sat down to the breakfast table, "did you wash your face this morning?"

"Well, no, mamma," said he slowly, evidently casting in his mind for an excuse, "but," he added reassuringly, "I cried a little before I came down stairs!"—Delineator.

Spiritism Said To Be Demonism.

A most interesting little brochure has recently come off the press, setting forth with Bible proofs that the communications received by and through Spiritist Mediums is of Demon origin. The writer traces the subject through the Scriptures from the time when certain of the holy angels became disobedient. He proves from the Scriptures that these fallen spirits deal in personating the human dead, with whose past history, spirits, though invisible, are thoroughly acquainted. He shows that they also frequently personate the Creator and the Redeemer, commanding their deceived ones to pray, do penance, etc. This, however, is merely to lead them on and to bring them more thoroughly under demoniacal control. Sometimes by breaking down the natural barrier, the human will, they obsess their victim and rule him more or less to his ruin—frequently sending such to the mad-house. Numerous illustrations, Scriptural and otherwise, are given. The price of the little book is but ten cents; it should be in the hands of all interested in Spiritism or who have friends interested therein. Enclose five two-cent stamps to the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Saved From The Grave.

"I had about given up hope after nearly four years of suffering from a severe lung trouble," writes Mrs. M. L. Dix, of Clarksville, Tenn. Difficult Scriptures On Hell.

A little book selling at only ten cents, postpaid, is having a very wide circulation—running up into the millions. It contains some very startling information respecting the meaning of the word Hell. It claims to demonstrate, both from the Hebrew and the Greek of our Bible, that Hell is NOT a place of eternal torment, but merely another name for the Tomb, the Grave, the State of Death. It affects to show that man was not redeemed from a far-off place of eternal torture, but quotes the Scriptures, proving that he was Redeemed from the Grave at the cost of his Redeemer's life, and that the Scriptural hope, both for the Church and the World, is a resurrection hope based upon the death and resurrection of Jesus. The book is certainly worth the reading. The information it furnishes is certainly valuable, far beyond its trifling cost. Order it at once from the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

is the germ of La Grippe, that breathes in, brings suffering to thousands. Its after effects are weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters, the splendid tonic, blood purifier and regulator of Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore health and good spirits after an attack of Grip. If suffering try them. Only 50c. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by all druggists.

The Care of the Blood, for purification, finds voice in pimples, boils, sallow complexion, a jaundiced look, moth patches and blotches on the skin—all signs of liver trouble. But Dr. King's New Life Pills make rich red blood; give clear skin, rosy cheeks, fine complexion health. Try them. 25c at all druggists.

Heavy, impure blood makes a muddy, pimply complexion, headaches, nausea, indigestion. Thin blood makes you weak, pale, sickly. Burdock Blood Bitters makes the blood rich, red, pure—restores perfect health.

Senate May Add More Money To The Rivers And Harbors Bill.

The indications are that Maryland's interests in the river and harbors bill will not only be protected, but that they will be given even greater consideration by the Senate than by the House, where the bill originated. There are now pending before the Senate Committee on Commerce a number of amendments which will increase the total of Maryland's appropriation by about $50,000. The improvements for which increased appropriations are now being asked are of the Rockhall, Queenstown, Olabonne and Cambridge harbors. The House allowed $60,000 for this work, but Senator Smith has now asked that it be made $80,000 instead. Then, again the improvement of the north west fork of Nantuxee river at Federalburg provided for by the House at a cost of $10,000 is now asked for with an additional $6000 appropriation.

Two minor amendments are also pending. One of these provide for the removal of the bar at the mouth of Slaughter creek and the other for the deepening of Manchester harbor. The bill will be reported to the Senate the latter part of this week or the first of next.

During Change of Life,
says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. CHAS. BARCLAY, R. F. D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for women's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

Relics of The Iron Age.

A full description has just been published by the authorities of the Copenhagen Museum of Antiquities of some finds in three graves dating from the Iron Age, discovered at Juellinge in the island of Lolland, in Southern Denmark. One of the three female skeletons found had been buried together with a wealth of jewelry, a pearl necklace various gold and silver ornaments of unique workmanship, silver buckles and hairpins—the latter with finely worked golden heads and a gold finger ring. This grave with all its contents has now been placed in the Copenhagen Museum, together with some Roman glass, bronze, household utensils with the name of the Roman maker and a small box of toilet requisites also found with the body.—The Athenaeum.

The U. S. Government in its "Pure Food Law" does not "indorse" or guarantee any preparation, as some manufacturers in their advertisements would make it appear. In the case of medicines the law provides that certain drugs shall be mentioned on the labels if they are ingredients of the preparation. Ely's Cream Balm, the well known family remedy for cold in the head, hay fever and nasal catarrh, doesn't contain a single injurious drug, so the makers have simply to print the fact that it complies fully with all the requirements of the law.

Scrub oranges and lemons with a little brush and cold water before using them for marmalade or their peel for flavoring purposes. Not only do these fruits often pass through many dirty hands before they reach the consumer, but they are often covered with black specks which are really a form of insect life.

Worse Than Bullets.

Bullets have often caused less suffering to soldiers than the eczema L. W. Harrison, Burlington, Me., got in the army, and suffered with forty years. Stops itching instantly. Oozes, piles, eczema, salt rheum, tetter, itch, hives, herpes, sunburn—Doan's Ointment. At any drug store.

For a mild, easy action of the bowels, a single dose of Doan's Regulax is enough. Treatment cures habitual constipation. 25 cents box. Ask your druggist for them.

BANKRUPT SALE

The Surprise Store stock which was purchased by us from the trustees of the United States Court of Bankruptcy was put on sale Saturday, April 9th. As soon as the door was spread open to the people at 8 a. m., thousands upon thousands of people crowded the store from basement to roof. Anyone who did not visit Salisbury before would really think that the entire population of the peninsula congregated in the Surprise Store premises. In spite of all preparations and arrangements with plain large figures on each and every counter and table and having engaged an array of help, it was impossible to handle the enormous mass of people. We appeal to the intelligence and the wide awake judgement of the people of the peninsula not to delay their shopping for Saturday only, but come during the week and we promise you more attention and convenience.

We will not mention any special article or prices in our announcements. Ask your friends who have already visited the store the saving and values they have received at the Bankrupt Sale.

Come as early as possible as this sale will only last for 30 days, which began Saturday, April 9th.

THE RETAIL BUSINESS

Men—Preparations For Active Work Going On.

President Hitch and Messrs. H. Frank Kennerly, Houston Ruark, Bernard Ulman and Charles E. Wilkins, the Executive Committee of the Retail Merchants' Association met last Tuesday night at the office of Attorney Lilly and after the transaction of routine matters President Hitch issued a call for a general meeting of the Association next Tuesday night, April 16th, at the City Hall.

The Association has experienced a steady growth since its inauguration and fifty firms are now enrolled on the membership books. Within the next few weeks it is expected every retail merchant in Salisbury will be enrolled. Those in charge of perfecting the plans for the operation of the Association have given the matter deep thought, and it is believed the system adopted will thoroughly and effectively protect the retailer in every line of trade.

The purpose of the meeting next Tuesday night, it was announced by President Hitch, is to afford those who have not kept in close touch with the movement an opportunity to learn more about its plans and purposes, and a large attendance is expected. President Hitch requested the newspapers to state that it is the desire of the officials that every retail merchant in Salisbury be present at this meeting.

CENSUS WORK BEGUN

Large Army in Field—Public Should Help.

Yesterday the work of taking the census was commenced all over the country. Capt. Isaac H. White, and his assistants, have been busy for some time, telling the men what to do and how to do it, in this district. It is important that the data gathered should be accurate and complete, and the enumerators should be received in the proper spirit by the people and aided in every way possible in their work. Salisbury is anxious to make a good showing in population and so is the county, and everything should be done to help the enumerators out in their big undertaking. The efficiently shown by those in charge of the work up to the present is the best guarantee that the work will be completed in the same thorough systematic manner.

The enumerators have been told that the government does not wish to offend any one in securing the census. Courtesy towards all will be expected of those engaged to do the work and insistence on sobriety has been emphasized.

The questions to be asked are simple. The first two of the thirty-two refer to the location of the resident's house. The others are as follows:

- 3—Name of person.
- 4—Relation of this person to the head of the family.
- 5—Sex.
- 6—Color or race.
- 7—Age at last birthday.
- 8—Whether single, married, widowed or divorced.
- 9—Number of years of present marriage.
- 10—Number of children born.
- 11—Number of children now alive.
- 12—Place of birth of this person.
- 13—Place of birth of father of this person.
- 14—Place of birth of mother of this person.
- 15—If born abroad, year of immigration to the United States.
- 16—Whether naturalized or alien.
- 17—Whether able to speak English; or, if not, what language.
- 18—Trade or profession of the person, as spinner, salesman, laborer, etc.
- 19—General nature of industry, business or establishment in which this person works, as cotton mill, dry goods, store, farm, etc.
- 20—Whether an employer, employee or working on own account.
- 21—If employee, whether out of work or not, April 15.
- 22—If employee, number of weeks out of work during the year 1909.
- 23—Whether able to read.

- 28—Whether a farm or a house.
- 29—Number of farm schedule.
- 30—Whether a survivor of the Union or Confederate army or navy.
- 31—Whether blind (both eyes).
- 32—Whether deaf and dumb.

The Reporter Who Made a Story

By CAPTAIN LLOYD BUCHANAN

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

Timothy O'Hara, assistant to the war correspondent of the New York Morning Post, sat flat down on the hill-top and chuckled. For two whole weeks his famous chief had been tossing about on a cot in the field hospital of the Black Hussars. The world was agog for any word of the floundering army and a scoop would make one famous down all Newspaper row. Yet here had the pugnacious Britishers squatted panting in place since the day Macrae went down with the fever. Not a thing had happened in the fortnight beyond sniping on the outpost until that morning, when a tremendous cannonade had been opened on the enemy's position. The Boers were replying with cheerful fury. There was a general idea that the English were going to commence their advance. Timothy viewed with joy the self-raised vision of the excited office when his cable would arrive and even the city editor would stop work—and of the flaring headlines later, the leaded columns, the Post boys shrieking and the country's hearts beating beside their rolls and coffee over his "broken battalions" and "bloody heroes" staggering into the captured trenches. He had had no opportunity to use these pet phrases since sailing from New York. Entered on this dream of death and glory three peaceful men, khaki-clad and riding on spiritless horses. Timothy rose as he saw them. They were his rivals. On the left was Marklin, who made his name as a cub at Sedan.

"Hullo, Irish!" cried this great one from afar. "Got the makings?" Timothy duly searched his breeches pockets and procured a pouch, which he waved in answer. Marklin swung his charger towards the hill-top.

"It's too bad," he said cheerfully, as he rolled the cigarette.

"What?" asked Timothy. "Buller's not going to go ahead, after all. His chief of staff just told us that positively no movement will be made at present. The old elephant's found a discarded idea and wants to bite the edges off it before he sticks his bloody head into the laws of the grateful Dutch again. We are on our way now to file a 'Tremendous Bombardment' and then spend a peaceful evening at the mess of Her Majesty's Own First Remarkable Unit Foot. Come on and join us."

Timothy Thundered After Him.

A loud snarl over Timothy's heart. "Hell!" he said. "I thought I'd have a story at last."

"Never mind, young 'un," said the dean of the corps kindly. "It'll come. You'd better make merry with us tonight at the Remarkables."

The three rode amiably away. Timothy turned from the hill-top, cursing, and started for camp. There he rode up his servant to get his horse, and, swinging into the saddle, he trotted towards headquarters to look up final confirmation of Marklin's report.

As he was passing down the lines he saw an officer spurring towards the front. It was young Capt. Sheridan-Bedford, of the commanding general's staff. Timothy waved his hand. Sheridan-Bedford pulled up.

"All quiet?" asked Timothy, with the polite assurance of a man who had halved his last drink of whisky on a wet night with the man he addressed.

"Never ask an aide anything you want to find out," replied the other, with a wink. "I'm off to the Red brigade myself. The field telegraph to our right is out of shape." And he touched his horse's flanks and swung away again at a gallop.

Timothy sat for a moment revolving the reply in his head; then he wheeled sharply about. The captain was vanishing in a cloud of dust down the road. Timothy thundered after him.

For a space the two wound their way through the busy streets of the camp. The air was heavy with the smoke of the kitchens and alive with the rumble of wheels and the indescribable hum of thousands of unconnected tongues. Up and down the road passed columns of unkempt troops and wagons loaded with supplies. Now and then an ambulance rattled feverishly towards the front, or came steadily back from the trenches, bearing white-faced men roughly bandaged, or shapless covered bundles spotted with blood, about which the files clustered greedily. Then the captain turned to the right and put off across the open reaches of country behind the rise where the reserve of the firing line was fringed. Here the fields were stripped for action, cut only by trenches or the wheels of guns, and torn by bursting shell. Two miles the horses went parallel to the front; then they headed to the left again and cantered up the deserted slope.

It is the hand of God that puts a degree too much elevation in a smoking bore and that cuts a shrapnel fuse a second too long. But it was pity and not profanity that was in Timothy's curse when he raised his eyes painfully after the shrieking terror had passed, and saw Sheridan-Bedford stretched silent on the ground ahead. In a moment he was out of the saddle and his hand was at his companion's heart. A fragment of the shell had torn his breast and the blood was rushing out in dark spurts.

"You can't—help it," gasped the dying man. "I'm done. But—I say—take this—message. The Boer—center—has pushed—too far ahead. The—left of it's—exposed. The Red—brigade—to charge. Understand?"

"Yes," said Timothy, and as he spoke a smile of thanks flitted over the face before him, and then, with a shudder, fled, and the English soldier had passed in the old English way he had learned at his public school, playing the game for the game's sake to the end.

The little New York reporter viewed him for a moment in silence. Then he pulled out his handkerchief and spread it over the dead face.

"He was a good sport," he said solemnly. And this, by the strange chance of war, was the requiem of the Hon. Philip Fitz Herbert Howard Sheridan-Bedford, captain in her majesty's army, beside the blers of whose people archbishops of Canterbury had prayed and royal knees had bowed in sorrow.

Nor was it a lengthy service. Timothy shook himself together with a sigh and turned back for his horse. He had his foot already in the stirrup when a thought struck him and he stepped down again.

"By gad, that fat-head of a general won't believe me!" he said. "He's not going to take any orders from a Yankee civilian."

The Red Brigadier had a reputation for three things: propriety, a brain the size of a dried pea, and a courage as great as a furious bull's. He was newly come and his brigade, fat and fresh from England, was near weeping for a fight; but he would die in his tracks before taking orders from a war correspondent. The warm Irish heart in Timothy's breast swelled with sorrow at the thought. To his credit, the swelling was due no more to grief at his own loss of a tremendous story than to the thought of the wasted life before him, poured out in vain if the message failed.

And then there flashed on him a great idea. At first he repelled it with shame. But desire is a sweet master of logic and after a minute's swift weighing of chances he succumbed.

"I may hang for it," he remarked judicially, "but it's the one chance. The brigadier didn't know Bedford from a rabbit. And he'd want it, too," he added apologetically, stooping over and raising the handkerchief from the sashy face before him.

The Red Brigadier sat beneath his bomb-proof, in no amiable frame of mind. He was sick of lying helpless under a sight of screaming shrapnel, and seeing his men dropping away by ones and twos on stretchers to the rear. He wanted action. He wanted—

"Capt. Sheridan-Bedford, with orders from the commanding general, sir."

Capt. Sheridan-Bedford stood before him, a pale, hatchet-faced youngster in a badly fitting uniform, wet and torn about the chest.

"Well?" demanded the general sharply.

"Gen. Buller says, sir, that the Boers have advanced their center too far. The flank is exposed. Your brigade is to charge."

"When?" demanded the Red Brigadier.

"You may charge when ready, sir," replied Capt. Sheridan-Bedford, his lips falling naturally into an oft-repeated saying of his people.

"Haven't you any further orders?"

"The general said to—use your best judgment, sir."

The brigadier rose, and, muttering to himself something about young idiots appointed by influence, made for the door.

Five hours later the British war office was thrilling with the bleak official report of the brilliant sacrifice of the Red Brigade and the consequent crumpling and ignominious flight of the Boer center. Weeping mothers were praying throughout England that their sons might be among the few who had been spared. Three ragged correspondents, headed by Marklin, were storming about headquarters, searching vainly for particulars. Timothy O'Hara, in an undershirt and the breeches of a British staff captain, was feeding the middle of his first great brilliant scoop into the wire at Kraggedoor, trembling to know that the beginning was already ticking delighted wonder into the heart of the managing editor of the New York Morning Post. And out on the field, with the handkerchief blown from his face and his sightless eyes fixed on the stars, lay the body of Capt. Sheridan-Bedford, stripped of his uniform even to his boots, and wrapped in a horse blanket, through which the blood from his breast had soaked in a stiff, damp stain.

A Storekeeper Says:

"A lady came into my store lately and said:

"I have been using a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove all winter in my apartment. I want one now for my summer home. I think these oil stoves are wonderful. If only women knew what a comfort they are, they would all have one. I spoke about my stove to a lot of my friends, and they were astonished. They thought that there was small smoke from an oil stove, and that it heated a room just like any other stove. I told them of my experience, and one after another they got one, and now, not one of them would give hers up for five times its cost."

The lady who said this had thought an oil stove was all right for quickly heating milk for a baby, or boiling a kettle of water, or to make coffee quickly in the morning, but she never dreamed of using it for difficult or heavy cooking. Now—she knows.

Do you really appreciate what a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove means to you? No more coal to carry, no more coming to the dinner table so tired out that you can't eat. Just light a Perfection Stove and immediately the heat from an intense blue flame shoots up to the bottom of pot, kettle or oven. But the room isn't heated. There is no smoke, no smell, no outside heat, no draft in the kitchen where one of these stoves is used.

New Perfection WICK BLUE FLAME Oil Cook-stove

It has a Cabinet Top with a shelf for keeping plates and food hot. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM.

It is An Internal Disease And Requires An Internal Remedy.

The cause of Rheumatism and kindred diseases is an excess of uric acid in the blood. To cure this terrible disease this acid must be expelled from the system and this can be accomplished by the use of an internal remedy. Rheumatism is an internal disease and requires an internal remedy. Rubbing with ointment and Liniment will not cure, affords only temporary relief at best, causes you to delay the proper treatment, allows the malady to become chronic, and you will never get well. Rheumatism attacks the joints of the arms and legs, the neck, the back, the chest, the stomach, regulates the bowels and kidneys, and makes you feel all over aches and pains. This epidemic disease is sold by druggists and dealers everywhere at 50c and $1 a bottle. In tablet form it is sold in packages. Get a bottle of this medicine. Free if you write to: Robert J. MALTBY'S FIRE DRILL

When the Maltbys took their cottage at the seashore they naturally took their two servants with them.
The servants had the two rooms on the top floor. To reach them you had to go up a long, narrow pair of stairs.

Maltby was methodical, humanitarian and cautious.

The first night he woke up about midnight and got thinking about fire.

"Suppose," said Maltby to himself,
"there should be a fire, how would we get the girls out in time?"

He woke up his wife and told her about it.

"Nonsense!" said Mrs. Maltby, sleepily.

"But it's a serious thing," said Maltby. "It's just this lack of precaution, this want of intelligence beforehand, this is responsible for great loss of life. Isn't that so?"

"Very likely," drowsed Mrs. Maltby.
"How would we get them down?"

How would we make them move quickly enough?"

"Go to sleep!"

"Do you smell smoke?" said Maltby, hoping to wake her up.

Mrs. Maltby vouchsafed no answer.
Maltby thought on.

The more he thought of it the more serious the problem was. Two human lives in constant danger! It was terrible. And he would be responsible!

So long as he lived it would always haunt him. No! As a matter of ordinary precaution he must do something.

Suddenly there came, out of the intense darkness a brilliant idea. He would have a fire drill. They always had it in schools. If it worked once, that would settle the whole matter.

If it didn't work, then every one would blame him for making the discovery.

He got up stealthily and put on his bathrobe. He got his watch, in order to take the time. And then, watch in hand, and stole upstairs.

"Ready," he said to himself in front of the girls' door. "Go!"

He pounded on the door and at the same time shouted "Fire!" Silence.

He repeated the experiment. There was a slight noise inside.

Once more he shouted fire.

He was answered by a loud shriek.

In about a second and a half two white-robed figures bounded out of the door, shrieking at the top of their voices. Maltby followed them downstairs. At the door he took the time.

"One minute and a half!" he shouted. "Great! I had no idea that it could be done in that time. Girls, you did fine."

In the meantime the girls, half hysterical, had hidden themselves behind the kitchen closet.

"You said the house was on fire," said Bridget. "Sure there's nothing
the matter that I can see out of it."

"O'm that scared," trembled Della.
Maltby explained. He was not seeing how quick they could get out. He ordered them back to bed.

In the meantime, Mrs. Maltby, aroused by the noise, and finding her husband absent, descended the stairs.

"What is the matter?" he exclaimed.

"Nothing!" replied Maltby. "Just a fire drill, that's all. As long as you yourself care nothing for human life, why I must. I had fire drill!"

Mrs. Maltby wrung her hands.

"Where are the girls?" she asked.

"Come back, of course, to sleep quietly and peacefully the rest of the night.
Very intelligent girls, those."

"Don't you believe it!"

Even as she spoke, two figures once more descended the stairs. Each had a bundle.

"What's this?" asked Maltby.

Bridget spoke.

"We leave here on the first train in the morning."

"But, girls, don't you understand. I was merely taking an ordinary precaution. I was looking out for you. I wanted to prove that you could get out in time."

Mrs. Maltby grabbed him by the arm and pushed him through the door gently but firmly. There was a fire in her eyes that he recognized meant business, even in the dim light.

"Go upstairs and leave me here!"
she said. Maltby went.

It was perhaps half an hour later that his wife returned. She was calm, but frigid.

"You are a very intelligent person, aren't you?" she said.

"I think I am," said Maltby, weakly.

"You understand, of course, that if these girls don't stay we shall have to give up this place and go back home, and that it will only cost you $500 for rent, besides the inconvenience and loss of health."

"Are they going to stay?" asked Maltby, breathlessly. He was beginning to get interested in the possibilities. He hadn't viewed the situation in that light before.

"On one condition, and that is that we occupy their rooms, and they have these."

Of course, there was nothing else to do but comply with two girls in such a hysterical condition."

Maltby held up his hands.

"But I won't sleep a wink all summer!" he exclaimed.

"Of course you won't," replied Mrs.
Maltby. "But I know that your superior mind has already considered that contingency. Besides, think of what a comforting thought it would be to know that you can slide down the banisters in a minute and a half after Bridget has called 'Fire!'—Life."

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR

The easiest thing to see is why a woman thinks she has pretty ankles.

There's nobody who wouldn't rather be a live liar than a dead truth-teller.

If a man happens to know who wrote "Yankee Doodle" he thinks he's musical.

The reason a girl won't let a man kiss her is she knows he will do it anyhow.

stands it.

The reason girls always follow their

CHEERFUL COMMENT.

How are we going to discover the

Keep your airship far away from the

CHEESE MAKING ON THE FARM

Need Not Be Hindered Because of Boughten Press—Home-Made One Answers All Purposes.

Cheese making on the farm need not be hindered because of the lack of a boughten press. A home-made press will answer the purpose very well.
The accompanying drawing illustrates one which is recommended in Farmers' Bulletin No. 166. It is described as follows: "The lever should be about twelve feet long; a broken wagon tongue answers the purpose very well.

Set a strong box, on which the mold may be placed, about three feet from a wall, post or tree; on the latter nail a slat and under it put one end of the lever. Put a circular board about six inches in diameter upon the mold and on this rest the stick of lever. A pall containing a few cobbles will answer for the weight. Do not apply full pressure at first, but let the weight hang about half way between the mold and the outer end of the stick. Let the cheese remain a few hours in the press; then take out and dress."

MANY CAUSES OF BAD BUTTER

Directions, If Carefully Carried Out, Will Make the Best Kind of Milk Product.

The cause of poor butter on the farm may be traced either to a single poor condition or perhaps several of them. By carefully carrying out the following conditions first class butter should be produced: The cream should be kept in as nearly sweet condition as possible until enough has been gathered for a churning. This should then be soured or ripened. To keep the cream sweet, when gathering enough for a churning, keep the can containing it surrounded with cold water, or perhaps better, hang it in the well. To ripen, place it where it will become somewhat warmer, at a temperature of 75 to 80 degrees, until it is sour enough, then cool down to a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees, which is right for churning. Let it stand in this temperature for an hour or so before churning, if possible. This will cause the butter to come in a better condition.

aim is to produce clean, wholesome milk. It is a wonder that the open milk pail has been used by the better dairymen as long as it has. There are many types of covered milk pails now on the market. Those with the fewest seams and removable tops are the most in favor with dairymen who have had experience in the use of covered pails. The introduction of the covered pail is certainly a sensible reform.

HOW TO KEEP MILK PROPERLY

State Dairy Bureau of Massachusetts Gives Nine Rules for its Use and Care.

The state dairy bureau of Massachusetts at a recent meeting held in Boston gives the following rules for the care of milk:

1. Take in milk and cream as soon as possible after being milked or left at your door and place in the refrigerator.

2. Keep milk and cream cold until ready for use. The bottom of the refrigerator is colder than the top container.

3. If ice cannot be had wrap the bottle in a wet cloth and stand it in a dish of water by an open window out of the sun; evaporation of water will cool the milk.

4. Keep milk or cream covered until wanted, and in the bottle in which it is delivered; in open bowls or pith-ers they will absorb odors from food and collect flies and dust.

5. Pour from the bottle only what milk or cream is needed for immediate use.

6. Milk or cream that has become warm should never be poured back into the bottle of cold milk.

7. Utensils used for milk should be cleansed with cold water and then with boiling water, thoroughly drained and allowed to become cold before being filled with milk.

8. Wash and return all milk or cream bottles daily.

9. Have a separate quart of milk for the baby; what he does not use others may have.

Wrap Fruit in Tissue Paper.

Pears and apples will keep better and retain more of their plumpness and flavor if wrapped separately in tissue paper and stored in a cool place.

HORSE JUMPS IN RIVER

Maddened By Motor Cycle—Narrow Escape Of Driver.

Mr. Anziah P. Disharoon, who lives near Fritland, started to town on Tuesday driving a fine three year old colt. On reaching Tony Tank he was passed by a motor cycle. His horse was frightened at the time, but later the cycle passed him a second time close to the residence of Dr. L. D. Collier, in Camden. This time the horse became unmanageable and rushed through Camden at a breakneck speed. On reaching the turn passing over Camden Bridge the horse, which was being driven to a buggy, failed to make the turn, running into the telephone pole at that point. Mr. Disharoon was thrown out against the fence, which probably saved his life, as the horse continued on over the bridge rail into the river. It is believed that the horse broke his neck in the fall as he was apparently lifeless when seen in the river.

The breakdown of the motor cycle after it passed him first thus allowing him to get ahead of it again was an unfortunate occurrence for Mr. Disharoon. The colt was valued at $200.

GENERAL HOUSECLEANING

Everything To Be Cleaned—Mayor Harper Issues Call.

The disease which every year attacks the feminine members of the household is not to be allowed to vent its full strength on the ladies and stop there this year; for if Mayor Harper has his way, and the citizens of the town are patriotic enough to obey his summons, the masculine members will be kept busy as well. This city cleaning process has been tried by a number of places and is reported to be a great success—every man trying to outdo his neighbor in the clean and spotless condition of his premises.

Mayor Harper's proclamation is as follows:—

To The Citizens of Salisbury:

"Now that Spring has arrived, it behooves every citizen of Salisbury to have their yards and lots thoroughly cleaned up and to use paint and lime freely, and to gather up all rubbish that has accumulated during the Winter months. We have arranged for the City carts to aid in this work and to start in next Monday. The first three days will be devoted to this work—Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. In all that section of the city lying on the West side of Division Street and on the East Side of river to the city limits, clean up and pile the rubbish in the gutters Monday next before one o'clock P. M.

On Tuesday, all that section lying on East Side of Division Street and to Humphreys Lake to the city limits, before one o'clock.

On Wednesday, all that section including Camden, South Salisbury and California, before one o'clock. The City carts will start in on Monday at one o'clock and clean the streets of all the refuse placed there from the yards and lots.

It is the intention of the Council after this cleaning up to make an inspection of all premises and those who have not cleaned up will be required to do so by the State Board of Health. Let us make this the banner year for cleanliness and healthfulness in Salisbury. Anyone who places refuse in the gutters before or after the time specified will be dealt with according to the Ordinances of the City. It is hoped that all the people of Salisbury will aid in this very important work. CHARLES E. HARPER, Mayor.

—At Methodist Protestant Church the pastor, Rev. W. R. Graham, D. D., will preach on Sunday at 11.00 a. m. and 7.30 p. m., Sabbath School, 9.30 a. m. Junior meeting in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. Christian Endeavor service 6.45 p. m. Mid week service Wednesday evening in the lecture room at 7.30 o'clock.

NEW CASTLE PRESBYTERY

Many Important Matters—Mr. Gunby Elected Commissioner.

Rev. Alexander Allison Jr. of West Church, Wilmington, the largest pastorate in New Castle Presbytery, was the first choice for Commissioner to General Assembly from this presbytery assembled in White Clay Church Wednesday afternoon. Rev. T. Chalmers Potter of Pocomoke Church, Glassboro, will be his colleague, while the elders were L. W. Gunby, of Salisbury, Md., who has promised $100 to every new Presbyterian Church that would be organized on the peninsula, and Dr. David Stewart, of New Castle. The alternates are Revs. Lewis W. Watson, of Princess Anne, Md., John C. Lane, Wilmington, Elders Francis T. Vincent of Wilmington, A. B. McVeigh of Zion, Md. General Assembly convenes in Atlantic City on May 19th for 10 days.

There probably never was a stated meeting of New Castle Presbytery, in which decisions of such prominence and of such importance to the laity came up for consideration as at the 80th stated convention of that body which closed in White Clay Creek Church Wednesday.

Dr. T. W. M. Beale of Salisbury was placed on the following committees: Leave of Absence; Young People Society and the Brotherhood; Evangelism; Languages.

Mr. L. W. Gunby on Sustenance and Home Missions; Dr. S. W. Reigart, Art, Science and Philosophy.

The appointment of Dr. J. S. Gillilan as pastor at large, the ratification of General Assembly overtures, designed to bring about a more serious realization of the duty of membership, the appointment of presbyterial representatives on the boards of directors of the Anti Saloon League of Delaware and Maryland and the grouping of weak churches under one pastor comprise action of such character as will influence the future of the presbytery.

The budget pan of finance for church expenses and benevolences also received the approval of presbytery though no action was taken. In a brief address in which he displayed considerable powers as a humorist, Rev. A. F. McDarragh, special representative on finance from General Assembly explained the duplex envelope system, already in use in West Church, this city, by which each member pledges a certain weekly sum for church support and for benevolences. The old fashioned religion is good enough, Mr. McDarragh said, but it needs a new financial system.

The entertainment and the cordiality accorded the visitors by the White Clay Creek people was such as to make the occasion memorable. Not only did the Ladies Improvement Society, of which Mrs. Alfred Walker is president, entertain ministers and elders in their homes, but they served delicious luncheons and suppers in the church. The men of the church in-cluding the pastor, Rev. J. K. Lowden, Herbert Walker, Frank Ball, James Pennington, Alfred Walker, William F. Beach and Harvey Walker, made traveling back and forth very delightful, as they gave their guests an opportunity to enjoy the country in their drives between church and station or trolley.

Rev. W. T. M. Beale, in his resolutions of thanks to White Clay people, included all the kindness and attentions extended and they passed with a rising vote.

Rev. S. Beattie Wylie of New Castle and Elder Daniel S. Corbit of Odessa were appointed to represent presbytery on the board of directors of the Delaware Anti Saloon League, and Rev. W. T. M. Beale of Salisbury for the Maryland board.

These appointments were made upon the request of Rev. J. M. Arters, superintendent of the Anti Saloon League. Mr. Arters, in a brief address, stated that 32 Presbyterian churches had unofficially cooperated with the league and had contributed a total of $822.10 to the cause.

Mr. Arters presented the situation in rural New Castle, where he said there are 78 churches of all faiths against 33 saloons. He wants united action of the part of the churches, as he said nothing would please the liquor people so much as divided action on their part.

Success in this campaign he pointed out, would mean an early march on Wilmington's 100 saloons, while failure would give impetus for re-submission in Kent and Sussex.

Commissioners applauded Mr. Arters speech and unanimously passed the resolutions ordered by Rev. T. Chalmers Potter at the close of his report on temperance, the resolutions embracing cooperation with the Anti Saloon League and the appointment of a committee on temperance in each church.

MAYOR HARPER REFUSES

Third Term—Has Well Served City—Many Improvements Completed.

Much to the surprise of many of his friends, Mayor Harper in a communication this week, declines to stand for re-nomination. Mr. Harper has served as Mayor for three terms, and has given the office his close attention. During his administration our streets have been paved and many other notable improvements made. He has always stood for progress in city affairs, and has been very faithful in attending to the duties of his office.

We give his communication to the public:—

The time for the Democratic City Primaries being near, I feel called upon to explain my position relative to the Mayoralty of Salisbury. I have been honored by our citizens by being elected Mayor of Salisbury for the last three terms, and during which time I have striven to make Salisbury the greatest town of its size in the State, and I feel that I have contributed my share of active service to that end. While I appreciate the expressions of approval on the part of so many of our citizens, yet, I feel that I should be relieved of the burdens and responsibilities naturally attendant to the office of Mayor. I retire from active service in municipal affairs, yet I shall retain the same interest as heretofore in the advancement of our City's interest, and will give to my successor, whoever he may be, my hearty support and counsel whenever needed.

During my incumbency in the office of Mayor my sole object has been to make Salisbury the commercial metropolis of the Eastern Shore, as well as a beautiful and desirable place of abode. If my aspirations in this direction have in a small measure met with success, I am amply repaid for all my efforts. I retire from the official duties of Mayor feeling that I have discharged my duty to Salisbury and her citizens.

I would not omit to express my high appreciation of the honor conferred upon me, and the expression of confidence on the part of the citizens of Salisbury in electing me to the position of Mayor for three successive terms, and also express my appreciation for your indulgence and assistance in discharging the duties of the office. It bespeak for my successor a keen interest in the continuation of improvements that have been inaugurated under my administration, and also the hearty support of our citizens. Expressing a continuation of my deep interest in our city's welfare, I am, Sincerely, CHAS. E. HARPER, Mayor.

Messrs. Leachman Edelin, Gratton, W. Va., had been selling paint which they thought well of; and this had occurred.

They had sold a customer 18 gallons of it to paint his house. A few years later, they sold the same man Devco lead and zinc the same number of gallons to paint the same house. He had 7 gallons left.

The point of the tale is: 11 gallons Devco paints an 18 gallon house.

Of course, that isn't all. Why does 11 gallons of Devco go as far as 18 gallons of other paint? Because it is all paint, all true, no sham, and full measure.

But that isn't all. Devco lasts long er. No; you haven't got to wait ten years to find that out. Ten thousand people know it. They think a heap of Devco. There's no difficulty in showing our townspeople what to expect of Devco. $10 will paint a $15 house; and the paint'll last twice as long. L. W. Gunby Co.

—According to the Statistical Reports rendered at the last meeting of the Presbytery of New Castle the Wicomico Presbyterian Church of this city is the largest Presbyterian Church within the bounds of the Presbytery outside the city of Wilmington.

ATTRACTING ATTENTION.

Halley's Comet And The Dates Visible—Rare Visitor.

Halley's Comet, according to the statements of astronomers, will be visible to the naked eye April 20, 28, May 2, 6, 10, 13, 14, 16, 18, 30, between the hours of 2.44 and 3.41 A. M. It is claimed that exceptionally clear atmospheric conditions must prevail else the comet cannot be seen, and that such conditions seldom exist in a city, but may be found in rural districts.

The comet will be visible until about May 30. On May 20, it is expected, the comet will be at its brightest. From that day it will steadily decrease in brightness until it vanishes.

On May 20 the comet will first become visible after sunset. From then until May 30 the time of its visibility will increase each day. The increase will run from about one hour on May 20 to about four hours on May 30. There are a few people now living in Salisbury who remember seeing the Halley comet in 1835, seventy five years ago, among them being Wm. Kelly, who is still active and works every day. He remarked the other day that there was much more excitement then than there is now among the people as to the fate of this old earth if it came in collision with the Comet. The earth escaped destruction then, and Uncle Bill says she is safe now.

Facts About Halley's Comet.

At the end of February, Prof. Barnard, of Yerkes Observatory, estimated the tail to be 14,000,000 miles long. During the months of February and March the Earth and the Comet were racing on practically parallel orbits, 170,000,000 miles apart on opposite sides of the sun.

The comet first crossed the Earth's orbit about March 10 at a point where the Earth will arrive at the middle of next October, but far above where the Earth will be, so to speak, some 10,000,000 miles above the plane of the ecliptic. In April the Comet emerged from behind the sun, and became visible to the naked eye in the Eastern sky before sunrise.

On April 20, when the comet will swing around the sun, it will be 57,000,000 miles away from the sun. Its velocity will be 36 miles a second. The Earth travels at about 19 miles a second. As it rushes on Halley's Comet will pass between the Earth and sun close to its ascending node. On May 18 the Earth will be about 18,000,000 miles away from the nucleus or head, as against 5,000,000 in 1835. Moreover on May 18 the Earth will be enveloped in the Comet's tail for a few hours. A few days later the Comet will be visible in the Western sky after sunset with a 15 deg. or 20 deg. splendor. After that it will speed away from the solar system. The last glimpse of it with the naked eye will be obtained probably at the end of June. It will not reappear for 75 years.

THE ROAD TO HEALTH.

You are not well! Always waiting; you have been to all kinds of physicians and have taken all kinds of medicines, but it does you no good. Naturally you are discouraged; do not give it up; as the inestimable blessing of health is within your own system and do not listen to others but take your own counsel and come to consult with Dr. DeMorian. His office is over the Thoroughgood Co.'s Store and if he will tell you that he will help you, you might depend on it. He does not take a case if he thinks he can't help it, no matter what the disease are and how long standing; he does not use the knife nor drug whatever, only scientific manual manipulation and by this system he restores the human body to its normal condition and that means health. Ladies and children treated at their homes. Consultation free. Charges for treatment very reasonable. Over the Thoroughgood Co. Store.—Adv.

ANNAPOLIS AFTERMATH

Local Observer Reviews Recent Legislation, Etc.

Messrs. Editors:—The Legislature has adjourned and we have welcomed them back home (thanks to the 90-day limit) one to his shop and another to his merchandise. The report that the members from this county would be questioned upon their return was groundless and those that "hissed" should be made to know their place, and, they will when the State Central Committee gets through with them.

That Committee has given warning time and again that they don't want any insurgents in the Camp, and if you are going to "insurge" go over to the other side of the avenue, brother, and take your fill. But, to return to the Legislature: there were introduced upward of 1400 bills. Now some will argue it out by the rule of three, that if there were 1400 bills introduced in 90 days, there could have been 5,600 in 360 days, and still some others who don't keep up on "ward politics" will think we were dreadfully short on laws; in fact, had no law at all, and that it would be better for Legislature to continue in session until they get done. No doubt all those who had good fat jobs at the Capitol think the same thing, but don't grieve those people by telling them of their "fat jobs" of $5 per diem, when they could have made ten times as much at home. Besides isn't it just as hard work to make a bad law as a good one? How do they make bad laws out of good ones? Of those 1400 bills some seven or eight hundred passed, but when the Governor got to that pile of bills he made them look like "thirty cents."

You may make over the annals of State Legislatures of Maryland and you find no such pile or chips—about 100—as our present Chief Executive has hewn off.

Between you and me, I don't think the State knows which to be the proudest of—our Governor for his work or the grand and glorious old Baltimore Sun, that stood by a sentinel, like the geese at the Roman Capitol and gave the alarm every time just as it was needed. At last the session wound up by passing a secession measure. One morning last week the State woke up, feeling a little drowsy, and when she went to pull one of her stockings, poor thing, she felt something in the toe and pulled it out—it was that $300,000 the Governor had saved that day he was hewing. W. O. Mitchell.

BABY CARRIAGE IS VERY OLD

Perambulator Built More Than a Century Ago Resembles the "One Horse Shay."

A baby carriage, which has the reputation of being the oldest in the country, is in the possession of a Bay state man.

Known to be over a hundred years old and the property of one family for over half a century, this ancient perambulator belongs at present to S. B. Budington of Leyden.

This great-grandfather of all the baby vehicles and perambulators in the country is in itself no perambulator at all says the Boston Post. It is a true "baby carriage." Not only in shape, but in construction, it resembles Oliver Wendell Holmes' "One Horse Shay." It is, in fact, built in every smallest detail after the model of the two-wheeled chaises such as were used by the elite of a century ago.

According to Mr. Budington, the small sons and daughters of whose family have for the last fifty years been hauled about in the old carriage, no one knows the exact history of the carriage. The address of its first owner has been lost in the mists of antiquity. The only identification is the name of its maker, "Charles Field," and the date, "1805."

It is supposed to have come originally from some southern plantation in Virginia and to have been brought north only a few years previous to the outbreak of the civil war.

Mr. Budington, then a young man in his twenties, got possession of it in 1858. Shortly afterward he went west, journeying across the country to Illinois, where he settled in Cass county.

The carriage, then regarded as an heirloom, was taken along.

When Mr. Budington with his family returned east in 1864 he brought the carriage back with him to Leyden, where he settled with his family and where he has lived since.

Thieves' Treasure Chest.

People passing along the quays of Dublin some time ago to their work had their curiosity excited by the spectacle of two men solemnly gazing through field or opera glasses into the river Liffey from Butte bridge, near the custom house. A crowd naturally gathered, and when the news was passed round that the watchers were detectives there were many bantering remarks as to a new clew to the lost crown jewels. Neither of the men with the glasses took any notice, nor moved their gaze from the surface of the river. The tide was going out, and the sloping river bed could be seen more clearly through the shallowing water. At length one of the detectives uttered an exclamation, pointing out something in the river to his companion, and shut up his glasses with a snap. A few minutes later the couple were being rowed out on the stream in a boat, and soon, out of the muddy depths of the Liffey, a large box, the object of their search, was fished up. It was taken to a police station, and on examination was found to contain a large quantity of silver, which, from time to time during the past few months had disappeared from various residences in the south of the city. During the day many owners of the missing property called at the office and were gladdened by the sight of household goods which they had never hoped to see again.—Weekly Telegraph.

Use Light to Deceive Birds.

At the London zoo there has just been completed an arrangement of electric lamps which is to be used for nothing but the deception of the birds in the birdhouse. A switch outside the building controls the lights, and every morning before daylight the keeper turns on the current. As soon as the birds see the light they think the morning has dawned, and they immediately begin to eat. In this way they are induced to breakfast two hours earlier than they would ordinarily. The same idea has for some time been put to practical use in fattening quail for the market in London. These birds take their feed only during the early morning hours, so they are kept in an underground chamber, where it is dark except when the electric lights are on. Each time the lights are turned on the birds, thinking day is at hand, begin to feed, and as soon as they are turned out, they contentedly seek their roosts. In this way the quail can be deceived into eating a score of times a day, so that they become fat very rapidly.

Fire in a Girl's Hat.

A fire on the roof-garden of the hut of a pretty girl traveler at the union station, Atlanta, Ga., the other afternoon called out two fire companies, a hose cart, a score of willing amateur firemen, delayed a fast train, and destroyed about thirty dollars' worth of property. The young woman, on her way to New York, rushed into the station for something to eat. In paying her check she swung the hat too near the cigar-lighter. In an instant the orchard which adorned her hat was a mass of flames. A dark-skinned waiter turned on a fire alarm and every male guest tried to rescue the affair.

The train was held until the victim recovered from an attack of hysterics, when she graciously permitted it to proceed.

An Easy Prescription.

Once a well-known citizen of Chelsea named Carr tried to call Dr. Bean to a sick member of his family in the middle of the night. Mrs. Bean answered the night bell and called down the tube: "Who it is?" "I'm Mr. Carr." "Well, take the next one," quoth the lady, "they run every few minutes."—Boston Globe.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT...

OUT OF THE BELLY OF HELL CRIED I

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL, Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

"I cried by reason of mine affliction unto the Lord, and he heard me; out of the belly of hell cried I" (Jonah ii. 2.)

On the Mediterranean Sea, April 17. We are not far from the place where poor Jonah long ago had his sad experience in his attempt to run away from the Divine commission to the Ninevites. We are nearing Jaffa, the port from which he sailed, then called Joppa. Some, intent on disproving as much as possible of the Bible, have attempted to make light of Jonah's experiences, claiming that there was no fish in the world of such capacity as could swallow a man entirely. We are to remember, however, that the Scriptures do not say that it was an ordinary whale that swallowed Jonah, but rather they specifically declare that God "specially prepared" a great fish for the occasion. Nor is this all. We have our Lord's own testimony to the truthfulness of the matter, and whoever denies either his truthfulness or his intelligence is thereby denying also his Messiahship and repudiating him as a Savior, because neither a falsifier nor a dupe could possibly be recognized as the great Redeemer and Savior, the Sent of God, the Messiah.

Additionally our Lord informs us that the Jonah incident was in the nature of a type, especially designed of God to foreshadow the fact that Jesus himself would be dead for parts of three days and arise from the dead on the third day, even as Jonah was buried alive for parts of three days and arose from the dead on the third day. There is nothing difficult about the narrative to one who has proper faith in God. To those who have no faith, nothing connected with Divine revelation is reasonable, commendable or satisfactory. Let us maintain our stand with those who hold fast to, and hold forth for others, the Word of Life.

The Belly of Hell Described.
But what have "the belly of hell" and the poor soul crying from it to do with the story of Jonah? And how does the story associate itself with our journey today over the Mediterranean? Deep? Jonah was the man who was in the belly of hell and whose cry was to the Lord from there constitutes our text. When a boy I heard this text, and my imagination conjured up what hell would be like, and especially what the belly of hell, or what I supposed the middle part of it, would be like. I had the opportunity of looking into blast furnaces through what is called the glory-hole or peep-hole. There I noted that the center of the fire was at white heat. I tried to imagine people in such a condition in the very middle or belly of hell. I could not imagine how they could survive such an experience a single moment, let alone for all eternity. I sought theological expositions of the matter and learned that some theologians of the hoary past, admitting the destructive effect of fire, claimed that God would specially vitalize all the poor creatures consigned to this torment, so that they would never die, but would keep on suffering forever and forever and forever, untellable tortures. I found that other theologians explained that those consigned to such a fiery ordeal would gradually become adapted to it and assume an asbestos-like shell which would measurably protect them from the fire. But these theologians went on to explain that, wishing them to suffer horrible tortures, God would scale off the asbestos shell, causing them to suffer still more excruciatingly every time the operation was performed. As a child I tried to imagine that this was the just desert of sinners, and that the Heavenly Father was really kind and loving—that he did not give them worse, though I could not think of anything worse that they could suffer.

"When I was a child, I spake as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things" (I Corinthians xiii. 11). I asked for the proof that anybody could endure such sufferings and yet live. I asked for the proof that our God is as unsympathetic as any devil could be. My mind rejected the irrational whole proposition. I said: The God whom I shall worship must be a greater being than myself—greater than any human being, not only in power to execute his will, but also in wisdom to make a wise arrangement for his creatures, and also perfect in justice to do to them as he would have them do to him, if he were the creature and they the God. He must also be perfect in love, the noblest feature of any character. I said to myself: Such must be the God who has produced in humanity certain degrees of these various qualities and he could not give to man what he does not himself possess, nor can we suppose that he would create man with more justice, wisdom, love and power than he himself possesses. To that great God I bowed my heart and mind and every power that I possess. To him I said: bow, and give thanks that by his grace I have come to see his character, his Plan and his Word more clearly than in the past. I thank him that now I can see in what way ultimately Jesus will be the "Light of the world"—not merely the Light of the Church (John viii. 12).

In abandoning the doctrine of eternal torment my disposition was to abandon the Bible also, because I believed that the Bible was the foundation of the irrational things which had pictured God to my mind as a demon of the worst imaginable type. But, thank God, dear friends, the Lord dearly opportunities and privileges, but it is an evil one in the sense of being a time of great trial and testing of faith to Christendom.

Thinking minds are rejecting the doctrine of eternal torment and generally at the same time rejecting the Bible and denying that it is the inspired Word of God. These dear friends are stumbling into infidelity and think that Higher Criticism and Darwin's Evolution theory are new light. What they need is to see that the true light is in the Bible and that, wearing our grandfathers' spectacles, we inherited the Word of God and wrested it to our own injury and to the loss of our peace of mind and fellowship with the Father and with the Son and with the Holy Spirit.

The Key to the Scriptures.
Whoever gets the proper understanding of our text has in his possession the Key to the Bible. If he will use it, passage after passage will open for him and the whole Word of God becomes a new and glorious revelation of Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power Divine. Jonah was in the fish's belly—he was buried alive. It is this that is referred to in our text. The words hell-belly signify grave-belly or belly-grave. The context shows all this, telling us additionally that sea-weeds were wrapped about the Prophet's head and that God heard his prayer and delivered him from the hell-belly, or belly-grave, on the third day by causing the fish to vomit him up. If you have a reference Bible note that in the margin there is a reference to the words of our text, saying, "Hebrew, the grave." Ah! says one, The translators merely made a mistake and translated it hell when they should have translated it grave. Yes, I answer, and they made the same mistake in every case in which they used the same word hell throughout the Old Testament. As it is, hell is translated grave more times than it is translated hell in our Common Version; but it should be translated grave every time. There we have the Key to the Bible. The text of the Bible, the penalty for sin, is death, the grave, the tomb. It is not an everlasting hell, for special Scriptures declare that hell (hell) shall be destroyed. "I will ransom them from the power of the grave (hell); I will redeem them from death; O death, where is thy sting? O grave (hell), where is thy victory?" (I Corinthians xv. 55).

We see, dear friends, what our dear Redeemer suffered on our behalf to release us from the penalty for sin. He did not go to eternal torment for our sins. He did go into hell, into hades, into the grave. "Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures" (I Corinthians xv. 3). Thus God has provided for the resurrection of the dead—all mankind, "both of the just and of the unjust." The just are the Church, the saints. The unjust include all others. The blood of Jesus will avail for the release of every member of the race from the great penalty of death. Now it operates under a special call to the saints few who are invited to become joint-heirs with the Redeemer in his great Kingdom which shortly is to bless all the families of the earth—not only those then living, but also all who have gone down to the tomb. The general resurrection will not be an instantaneous one, as in the case of the saints. It will be a gradual one in two senses.

(1) All will not come forth at once, but, as the Apostle declares, "Every man in his own order," company or band (I Corinthians xv. 23).

(2) It will be gradual in the sense that the awakening from the tomb will be but the beginning of the resurrection of the world. During the thousand years of Christ's reign all who will give heed to his instructions and assistance may rise gradually—up, up, up—and by the close of the Millennium they will reach the full perfection and image of God lost by Father Adam through disobedience. The unwilling, those rebellious after the light has fully come upon them, will be destroyed in the Second Death, from which there will be no recovery. They will perish as the brute beasts.

So, then, let us learn a lesson from Jonah's words, not forgetting the other lesson mentioned by our Lord when he declares that Jonah's experiences in the grave—the belly of the fish, and his release therefrom—foreshadowed his own experiences in the tomb and his resurrection in power and great glory on the third day.

Do You Get Up With a Lame Back?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root fulfills almost every wish in overcoming rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It holds water and sifting pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.

When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Home at Swamp-Root, Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Executive Committee.

SALISBURY'S POSTOFFICE.

The term of the present Postmaster here, Mr. M. A. Humphreys, expires next month. Mr. Humphreys, it is understood, will be a candidate to succeed himself, and, as far as we have heard will have no opposition.

Salisbury's postoffice has been well and ably conducted by the present postmaster and his corp of able assistants. The convenience of the public has been considered in every way possible, and the character of the service has been of the highest. During Mr. Humphreys' tenure we have heard no complaint of the way the office has been managed, but on the contrary believe that the public is very well satisfied with the management.

THE NEW ASSESSORS.

Now that the assessors have all been appointed, the real work of making the assessment will soon begin. The gentlemen who have this work in charge have one of the most important undertakings in the County; as upon their faithfulness and judgement will depend the success or failure of this important work.

Some seem to have the opinion that the main idea and purpose of an assessment is and should be the placing of more property on the tax books of the county and state. While perhaps it is important from a financial standpoint that the revenues of both state and county be increased this is far from the true basic idea of a right kind of an assessment.

The main purpose of our assessors should be to see that the property is fairly and equitably valued. It matters not if $10,000,000 be added to the taxable basis of this county, the assessment is a miserable failure unless every man is given, as far as possible, a fair and square deal. Ignorance, carelessness or favoritism may make this assessment, like some of its predecessors, a farce.

We do not believe that there will be much kick from our property owners if all are treated alike, but glaring inequalities will make it very unpopular indeed.

The assessors, should and doubtless will, forget they live in any one section or that they have any friends to oblige, but should fearlessly and impartially value the property all over the county. They have the full responsibility now, and we trust will not be wanting, either in knowledge, diligence or impartiality.

MAYOR HARPER'S RETIREMENT.

Mayor Harper has announced that he will not be a candidate for re-election this spring, and it is fitting that he should be given the recognition and credit becoming to a man who has faithfully tried to fulfill the duties of his office. It is no discredit to any preceding Mayor to say of Mayor Harper that Salisbury never had a Mayor who was more interested in his work, or who tried harder to live up to the requirements of his office.

There have been times when we did not agree with some of the measures proposed, and we have frankly so stated. We always expect to do so, but we have never been a time when we have not been able to express our interest or his has made rapid strides towards success and general prosperity; its streets have been improved; its public service corporations have been kept in bounds; a franchise has been granted to a gas company—greatly improving the quality and lessening the cost of light. These are only a few of the things brought about during his administration. Whenever there has been trouble the Mayor has been one of the first on the ground and has given his individual attention to almost everything pertaining to city affairs. Salisbury is getting to be an important place and it is necessary that we should have broad minded men at the head of our affairs—men who can see beyond the petty side of opposition and look into the future which seems so promising at the present time: who can tell the difference between a judicial expenditure of public money for needed improvement and a lavish use of it for purposes which will do little if any good towards our real advancement.

The income of our city is now some thing over $30,000 per year and it does look as though this sum judiciously and carefully handled is ample to pay our fixed charges as well as provide for some needed improvements as they come up.

It is understood that our councilmen whose terms expire are willing to accept the office again, and as their work has been very satisfactorily done they should be returned by the voters, and as far as we have heard, they will have no opposition at all.

We have heard of but one active candidate for the Mayoralty—a man with considerable practical experience in business, broad-minded and conservative and it is honored with the office will give the city a good business administration. A man who is thoroughly imbued with the idea that Salisbury has a great future before her and will do all in his power to help her in her progress towards greater prosperity. A good business man who does not believe in throwing money away, but broad-minded enough to recognize that money properly expended in needed improvements is the best kind of economy.

Window Smash Robbery On Main Street.

Some time after one o'clock Saturday morning one of the large plate glass windows in G. W. Phipps' jewelry store on Main Street was smashed and a valuable gold watch stolen. The watch had just arrived Saturday morning from the manufacturers, and being a new and attractive pattern, was at once placed in the show window. The thief was evidently after this watch, as nothing else was stolen, although the window contained many valuable articles of jewelry, including a tray of rings. The robbery occurred after one o'clock, as Night Officer Crouch says he passed the window at 1.15 A. M., and noticed the watch in the window. It is supposed the thief watched the officer until he was well up on Main Street and then smashed the window. This same window was robbed two years ago in the same manner, the thief carrying away six watches. There was never any clue to the robbers.

TO PROTECT BIRDS

Many States Fighting To Prevent Their Slaughter For Plumage.

The fight to stop the slaughter of birds for use as trimmings on hats is gaining strength, judging from the manner in which the legislatures of a number of states are passing bills favoring the protection of birds.

By a vote almost unanimous the New York assembly passed a measure by which the sale of plumage will be forbidden even though the birds were not killed in the state.

The New Jersey legislative body, which has been considering an anti-bird slaughter bill for some time, will again renew the fight and in all probability vote favorably on a measure whereby our feathered neighbors may fly at ease and not be shot down to adorn the top of some twentieth century creation.

MARK TWAIN DEAD

One Of America's Most Prominent Men. A Noted Humorist.

In the death of Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) which occurred on Thursday evening of this week, America loses a foremost scholar, humorist and philosopher. Born in 1835 Mr. Clemens led an active and varied life, from the printer boy to one of the best known and loved authors of the world. Some of his best known writings are: "The Innocents Abroad" (1880), "The Prince and the Pauper" (1880), "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" (1885), "Articles on Christian Science" (1903), and "The $30,000 Bequest" (1906).

Wit, Wisdom And Pathos From Writings Of Mark Twain.

Adam was but human—this explains it all. He did not want the apple for the apple's sake; he wanted it only because it was forbidden. The mistake was in not forbidding the serpent; then he would have eaten the serpent.—Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

All say "How hard it is that we have to die." A strange complaint to come from the mouths of people who have had to live.—Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

If you pick up a starving dog and make him prosperous, he will not bite you. This is the principal difference between a dog and a man.—Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

Training is everything. The peach was once a bitter almond. Cauliflower is nothing but cabbage with a college education.—Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

Pretty soon I wanted to smoke and asked the widow to let me. But she wouldn't. She said it was a mean practice and wasn't clean and I must try to not do it anymore. That is just the way with some people. They get down on a thing when they don't know nothing about it. Here she was bothering about Moses, which was no kin to her, and no use to anybody—being gone, you see—yet finding a power of fault with me for doing a thing that had some good in it. And she took snuff, too; of course that was all right, being cause she done it herself.—Huckleberry Finn.

It is my prayer, it is my longing, that we may pass from this life together—a longing which shall never perish from the earth, but shall have place in the heart of every wife that loves—until the end of time, and it shall be called by my name.

But one of the most saddest, it is my prayer that it shall be I; for he is strong, I am weak; I am not so necessary to him as he is to me; life without him would not be life. How could I endure it? This prayer is also, immortal and will not cease from being offered up while my race continues. I am the first wife and in the last wife shall be repeated.

At Eve's grave—Adam:—"Wherever she was, there was Eden."

Eve's Diary.

The tomb of Adam! How touching it was, there in a land of strangers, far away from home and friends and all who cared for me, thus to discover the grave of a blood relation. True, a distant one, but still a relation. The unerring instinct of nature thrilled its recognition. The fountain of my filial affection was stirred to its profoundest depths and I gave way to tumultuous emotion. I leaped upon a pillar and burst into tears. I deemed it no shame to have wept over the grave of my poor dead relative. Let him who would sneer at my emotion close this volume here, for he will find little to his taste in my journeyings through the Holy Land. Noble old man! He did not live to see me; he did not live to see his child. And I—I—alas did not live to see him weighed down by sorrow and disappointment. He died before I was born—six thousand brief summers before I was born. But let us try to bear it with fortitude. Let us trust that he is better off where he is. Let us take comfort in the thought that his loss is our eternal gain.—The Innocents Abroad.

Eat What

You want of the food you need
Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it. Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly. When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you.

It would bankrupt us. The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

CHAPTER XXXII.

IN THE SAME GRAVE WITH SEAGOS.

DOWN in the village of Ararat there were signs of a vast commotion. Early risers from house to house, shouting the news, outside the harbor lay the low, hazy looking ship. Its guns were pointed directly at the helpless town. Its decks were swarming with white clothed men.

The plague was forgotten. The strategy that had driven off the ships of peace was lost in the face of this ugly creature of war. Rasula's reign of strategy was ended.

"They will not fire! They dare not!" he was shrieking as he dashed back and forth along the dock. "It is chance! They do not come for Chasé! Believe in me! The tug! The tug! They must not land!"

The crash of the long untried six pounder at the chateau, followed almost immediately by a great roar from one of the cruiser's guns, brought the panic to a crisis.

The islanders scattered like chaff before the wind, looking wild eyed over their shoulders in dread of the pursuing cannon ball, dodging in and out among the houses and off into the foothills.

Rasula, undaunted, but crazed with disappointment, stuck to his colors on the deserted dock. He cursed and raved and begged. In time two or three of the more canny, realizing that safety lay in an early peace offering, ventured out beside him. Others followed their example, and still others slunk trembling to the fore, their voices ready to protest innocence and friendship and loyalty.

They had heard of the merciless American gunner, and they knew in their souls that he could shoot the island into atoms before nightfall.

The native lawyer harangued them and cursed them and at last brought them to understand in a feeble way that no harm could come to them if they faced the situation boldly. The Americans would not land on British soil; it would precipitate war with England. They would not dare to attempt a bombardment; Chasé was a liar, a mountebank, a dog! After shouting himself hoarse in his frenzy of despair he finally subsided in forcing the men to get up steam in the company's tug.

All this time the officers of the American warship were dividing their attention between land and sea. Another vessel was coming up out of the misty horizon. The men on board knew it to be a British man-of-war! Suddenly a party of white men approached the startled Rasula. A hundred eager hands were extended, a hundred voices cried out for mercy, a hundred Mohammedans beat their heads in abject submission.

Hollingsworth Chase, Lord Deppingham and a familiar figure in an ill fitting red jacket and forage cap strode firmly, defiantly between the rows of humble Japatties. Close behind them came a tall, resolute grenadier of the Rapp-Thorberg army.

"Make way there! Make way!" Mr. Bowles was crying, brandishing the antique broadsword that had come down to Wreckholme from the dark ages. "Stand aside for the British government! Make way for the American!"

Rasula's jaw hung limp in the face of this amazing exhibition of courage on the part of the enemy. He was glaring insanely at the calm, triumphant face of the man from Brodney's, who was now advancing upon him with the assurance of a conqueror.

"You see, Rasula, I have called for the cruiser, and it has come at my bidding." Turning to the crowd that surged up from behind him, he cried, "It rests with you. I give the word that ship will blow you from the face of the earth. I am your friend, people. I would do you no harm, but good. You have been misled by Rasula. Rasula, you are not a fool. You can save yourself even now. I am here as the servant of these people, not as their master. I intend to remain here until I am called back by the man who sent me to you. You have."

Rasula uttered a shriek of rage. He had been crouching back among his cohorts, panting with fury. Now he sprang forward, murder in his eyes. His arm was raised, and a great pistol was leveled at the breast of the man who faced him so coolly, so confidently. Deppingham shouted and took a step forward to divert the aim of the frenzied lawyer.

A revolver cracked behind the tall American, and Rasula stopped in his tracks. There was a great hole in his forehead. His eyes were bursting. He sank to the ground dead.

The soldier from Rapp-Thorberg, a smoking pistol in his hand, the other raised to his helmet, stepped to the side of Hollingsworth Chase.

"By order of her serene highness, sir," he said quietly.

"Good God!" gasped Chase, passing his hand across his brow. Deppingham, representing a shudder, addressed the stunned natives:

"Take the body away. May that be the end of all assassins!"

The King's Own came alongside the American vessel in less than an hour. Accompanied by the British agent, Mr. Bowles, Chase and Deppingham left the dock in the company's tug and steamed out toward the two monsters. The American had made no move to stand on shore.

Standing on the forward deck of the swift little tug, Chase unconsciously accounted for the timely arrival of the two cruisers.

"Three weeks ago I sent out letters by the mail steamer, to be delivered to the English or American commanders, wherever they might be found. Undoubtedly they were met with in the same port. That is why I was so positive that help would come sooner or later. I knew that if I brought the cruisers my power over these people would never be disturbed again."

"My word!" exclaimed the admiring Bowles.

"Chase, you may be a theoretic, but you are the most dependable chap the world has ever known," said Deppingham, and he meant it.

The warships remained off the harbor all that day. The British captain consented to leave a small detachment of marines in the town to protect Chase and the bank. To a man the islanders pledged fealty to the cause of peace and justice. They shouted the names of Chase and Allen in the same breath and demanded of the latter that he preserve the former's beard for all eternity.

The King's Own was to convey the liberated heirs to Aden, whither the cruiser was bound. At that port, a P. and O. steamer would pick them up. One white man elected to stay on the island with Hollingsworth Chase, who steadfastly refused to desert his post until Sir John Brodney indicated that his mission was completed. That one man was the wearer of the red jacket, the bearer of the king's commission in Japan, the undaunted Mr. Bowles.

The Princess Geneva, the wistful light deepening hourly in her blue gray eyes, avoided being alone with the man whom she was leaving behind. She had made up her mind to accept the fate inevitable. He had reconciled himself to the ending of an impossible dream. There was nothing more to say except farewell.

The last day dawned. The sun smiled down upon them. The soft breeze of the sea whispered the curse of destiny into their ears. It crooned the song of heritage; it called her back to the fastnesses where love may not venture in.

The chateau was in a state of upheaval. The crusade was beginning. The princess waited until the last moment. She went to him. He was standing apart from the rest, coldly indifferent to the pangs he was suffering.

"I shall love you always," she said simply, giving him her hand—"always, Hollingsworth." Her eyes were wide and hopeful; her lips were white.

He bowed his head. "May God give you all the happiness that I wish for you," he said. "The end."

She looked steadily into his eyes for a long time, searching his soul for the hope that never dies. Then she gently withdrew her hands and stood away from him, humbled in her own soul.

"Yes," she whispered. "Goodbye." He straightened his shoulders and drew a deep breath through compressed nostrils. "Goodbye! God bless you!" was all that he said.

She left him standing there. The wall between them was too high, too impregnable, for even love to storm.

Lady Deppingham came to him there a moment later. "I am sorry," she said tenderly. "Is there no hope?"

"There is no hope for her!" he said bitterly. "She was condemned too long ago."

On the pier they said goodbye to him. He was laughing as gayly and as blithely as if the world held no sorrows in all its mighty grasp.

"I'll look you up in London," he said to the Deppinghams. "Remember, the real trial is yet to come. Goodbye, Brownie. Goodbye, all. You may come again another day."

The launch slipped away from the pier. He and Bowles stood there, side by side, pale faced, but smiling, waving their handkerchiefs. He felt that Geneva was still looking into his eyes even when the launch crept up under the walls of the distant ship.

Slowly the great vessel got under way. The American cruiser was already low on the horizon. There was a single shot from the King's Own, a reverberating farewell. Hollingsworth Chase turned away at last. There were tears in his eyes, and there were tears in those of Mr. Bowles.

There was a single shot from the King's Own.

"Bowles," said he, "it's a beastly shame they didn't think to say goodbye to old man Skaggs. He's in the same grave with us."

This Unromantic Age. "It's only to look," said Miss Miami Brown sadly, "like dar war no no romance dose days."

"What's de trouble?" asked Ernesta Plinkly.

"I takes notice dat when you asks a gemman to a Christmas dinner he doesn't play no interest in whether dey's wine to be mistletoe in de parlor, but keeps hant' aroun' to in out how 'bout de turkey an' axin' on de dinner table."

ONE WEAK SPOT.

Most Salisbury People Have A Weak Part And Too Often It's The Back.

Everyone has a weak spot. Too often it's a bad back. Twinges follow every sudden twist. Dull aching keep up, day and night. Tell you the kidneys need help—For backache is really kidney ache. A kidney cure is what you need. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys.

One backache, Salisbury people recommend the remedy.

Mrs. John O. Nelson, E. Brown St., Salisbury, Md., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills helped me more than any other medicine I ever took and consequently I do not have the least hesitation in recommending them. I was subject to attacks of kidney complaint for a long time and whenever I caught cold my back became weak. If I did much stooping, there was a lameness across my loins. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly endorsed by people who had taken them, I procured a supply at White & Leonard's Drug Store and began their use. I now feel much better in every way and I have no further trouble from my kidneys or back."

Spiritism Said To Be Demonism.

A most interesting little brochure has recently come off the press, setting forth with Bible proofs that the communications received by and through Spiritist Mediums is of Demon origin. The writer traces his subject through the Scriptures from the time when certain of the holy angels became disobedient. He proves from the Scriptures that these fallen spirits deal in personating the human dead, with whose past history, spirits, though invisible, are thoroughly acquainted. He shows that they also frequently personate the Creator and the Redeemer, commanding their deceived ones to pray, do penance, etc. This, however, is merely to lead them on and to bring them more thoroughly under demoniacal control. Sometimes by breaking down the natural barrier, the human will, they obsess their victim and rule him more or less to his ruin—frequently sending such to the mad-house. Numerous illustrations, Scriptural and otherwise, are given. The price of the little book is but ten cents; it should be in the hands of all interested in Spiritism or who have friends interested therein. Enclose five two-cent stamps to the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Saved From The Grave.

I had 'about given up hope after nearly four years of suffering from a severe lung trouble," writes Mrs. M. L. Dix, of Clarksville, Tenn. "Often the pain in my chest would be almost unbearable, and I could not do any work, but Dr. King's New Discovery has made me feel like a new person. Its best medicine made for the throat and lungs. 'Obstinate coughs, stubborn colds, hay fever, lagrippe, asthma, croup, bronchitis and hemorrhages, hoarseness' and whooping cough yield quickly to this wonderful medicine. Try it 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

Difficult Scriptures On Hell.

A little book selling at only ten cents, postpaid, is having a very wide circulation—running up into the millions. It contains some very startling information respecting the meaning of the word Hell. It claims to demonstrate, both from the Hebrew and the Greek of our Bible, that Hell is NOT a place of eternal torment, but merely another name for the Tomb, the Grave, the State of Death. It affects to show that man was not redeemed from a far-off place of eternal torture, but quotes the Scriptures, proving that he was Redeemed from the Grave at the cost of his Redeemer's life, and that the Scriptural hope, both for the Church and the World, is a resurrection hope based upon the death and resurrection of Jesus. The book is certainly worth the reading. The information it furnishes is certainly valuable, far beyond its trifling cost. Order it at once from the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

LADIES HAVE STRANGE PETS

English Leaders of Fashion Exhibit Fondness for Peculiar Dumb Companions.

Some pretty rough things have been said about the affections of English aristocracy from time to time, but the recent accounts of their household pets are about as incomprehensible as any of their other follies. The greyhound and the long silky-eared spaniel are a thing of the past. The duchess of Marlborough is said to have a special fondness for serpents. She spends days also in the park at Stenham with the gazelles, which in her society seem to forget their traditional shyness. Her other pets are grotesque looking pelicans, which may be seen about the shores of the ponds. Lady Warwick, the titled Socialist leader, especially loves white animals, and in her grounds at Warwick are white peacocks, all kinds of white birds, even a white elephant. Her special treasure is a white parrot which is said to be more than a century old.

Lady Cadogan has a famous collection of snakes. She is able to drape some of them about her in such a way that they serve as jewelry. Among her pets are two trained lizards. Lady Cottenham nurses with great care her dormice, and Lady Churchill is said to be happiest when her crocodile is near her. Lady Hope's pet is an ape from Senegal, while Mrs. Rose Hubbard, one of the most popular of the women in Mrs. Keppel's set, raises geese. Miss Rosa Boughton, one of the most liked of the unmarried girls in London society, insists upon taking to all the houses that will allow her a hyena that she brought from Constantinople and has tamed.

Still Engaged in Relief Work.
Lieutenant Commander Belknap, the American naval attaché in Berlin, is still engaged in superintending the relief work on account of the earthquake at Reggio, Italy, carried on by the United States government.

Consistent.
"Uncle Joe Cannon says he is only the servant of the house of representatives."
"Well, he lords it over them as if he were their cook."

AFTER SUFFERING FOR YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Park Rapids, Minn.—"I was sick for years while passing through the change of life and was hardly able to be around. After taking six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I gained 20 pounds, am now able to do my own work and feel well."—Mrs. Ed. LA DOW, Park Rapids, Minn.

THE PEOPLE'S FIRE

Insurance Company of Baltimore, Md.
Price & Fulton, Local Representatives.

At a meeting of the stockholders of
the Maryland Fire Insurance Company, in Easton, Md., on the 18th inst., the deal which has been in process of evolution for some time, whereby a merger of two fire companies into one large company, was consummated.

The new company will be known as The People's Fire Insurance Company, of Baltimore, Md., formed out of the Maryland Fire Insurance Company, of Easton, Md., and The People's Fire Insurance Company, of Frederick, Md., with E. M. Colbents, president, and E. G. Cover, vice president. With seven directors from the Eastern Shore, who are—E. G. Cover,
Wm. Reedy, F. G. Wrightson, M. E.
Nichols, of Easton, Z. H. Brinsfield, of Dorchester, W. F. Allen, of Salisbury, and Orlando Harrison, of Berlin.

The Maryland Fire Insurance Company was organized one year ago, the stock being sold by E. G. Cover and D'Arcy Brinsfield, was placed in the hands of some of the most successful and prominent business men on the Eastern Shore, which accounts largely for the success of the new company, which it has proven to be.

The new deal is considered by those who are in a position to know, a very wise one from every standpoint, the stockholders being profited as well as the insuring public given an opportunity to buy insurance from a home company the strength and management of which cannot be questioned, and a company that is destined to become one of the large institutions of our State. Messrs. F. L. Price and E. C.
Fulton are local agents.

ASSESSORS APPOINTED

For The New Listing Of Property In Wicomico County.

The four assessors at large have been named by Governor Crothers. These will have, in large part charge of the new assessment to be made in the County and will be aided in their work by a local assessor in each district, who also have been appointed by the County Commissioners.
The local assessors are to receive $3 per day but under the law they may act as clerks to the general board of assessors and thus receive a compensation which will bring up their pay to $5 per day for the actual number of days they work.
Under the law a person is required to list everything he possesses, whether it is taxable or not. For instance, a man may own Bank stock or stock in corporations formed under the laws of Maryland, where the tax is paid by the Corporation and here the individual stock is not taxable to the person holding same—nonwithstanding this fact he must list the stock just the same. The same thing holds good in Bonds. A man may own Bonds in corporations outside the State and the Bonds may even be held in Trust or Safe Deposit boxes out of the State, but he is forced under the law to list these bonds of his schedule. The same thing also holds good regarding stocks and bonds which do not now pay a dividend. They must be listed and if exemption from taxation is claimed by the owner he must note same on his schedule and give his reasons for same.
The County has been divided into two general assessment districts, known as District No. 1, and District No. 2. District No. 1 is composed of Salisbury, Quantico, Barren Creek, Sharptown, Tyaskin, Nanticoke and Delmar. For District No. 2, Messrs. Isaac S. Bennett and Willie Gillis have been named as general assessors.
Camden, Trappe, Nutters, Parsons, Pittsburg Dennis and Willard compose assessable District No. 2, and Messrs. Elmer E. Bradley and George Waller Phillips have been named as the general assessors for this District. The general assessors will assess the property in their respective Districts in harmony with the local assessors to be appointed by the county Commissioners.
The local assessors named are as follows:
Barren Creek—W. E. Elliott.
Quantico—G. M. Messick.
Tyaskin—Dashiell Hopkins.
Pittsburg—Ella E. Parsons.
Parsons—J. Milton Parker.
Dennis—Marcellus Dennis.
Trappe—Harry T. Messick.
Nutters—George W. Cansey.
Salisbury—Appointment deferred.
Sharptown—James F. Marlin.
Delmar—J. W. Freney.
Nanticoke—John S. Robertson.
Camden—Chas. E. Duffy.

A Romance of Progress

By ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE
SAMUEL JOHNSON—Crank and Dictionary Maker

In the worst rainstorm of the season, one day in the middle of the eighteenth century, a man stood on a street corner of Lichfield, England. He was unprotected from the weather by so much as a great coat and waited meekly, receiving the deluge of rain and jeers of passersby. He was a giant in size and strength, enormously fat and clad in shabby, soiled garb. His swollen, red face was blotched, scarred and distorted with scrofula and twitched uncontrollably, his great head rolled from side to side and he muttered constantly to himself. This strange figure was Dr. Samuel Johnson, greatest man of his day, and revolutionizer of the English language. His vigil in the rainstorm was but one of a thousand eccentricities. As a lad he had refused to go on an errand for his father one rainy day. Now 30 years later it had occurred to him to take this queer way of atoning for his boyish disobedience.

Johnson was the son of an old bookseller. He spent his boyhood reading ravenously every one of his father's books he could lay hands on. He had the rare faculty of remembering everything he read. At 19, though miserably poor, he went to Oxford. There his ragged clothes, dirty linen and physical oddities made him a general laughing stock. Then his father lost what scant means he had had. For lack of funds Samuel was forced to leave college without graduation. He spent the next few years as schoolmaster, book writer, translator and at any other work he could pick up.

But his eccentricity, strange appearance and overstrung nerves proved a great drawback. His wagging head, facial grimaces, slovenly, dirty, Eccentricity and uncouth ways made a bad impression. If he were asked to a literary reception he was quite likely to create a diversion by snatching off a lady's slipper or clawing her false hair, or by suddenly shouting a line from the Lord's Prayer. At the few dinners he was invited to the half-starved genius ate ravenously, tearing his food like a wild beast and growling over it.

The English tongue and English literature were growing. Certain etymologies and lexicons were in use, but the language had no dictionary worthy of the name. Several booksellers combined and hired Johnson to compile, in two volumes, a complete dictionary of the English language. For this mammoth work he was allowed seven years' times and $4,500. He was obliged to employ a small army of lesser writers to help him, and this quickly ate up his profits. He had no rich patron, as had most writers of the time, for he could not truckle to the great. He worked on in poverty. His wife died, leaving him alone in the world. These were the darkest years of Johnson's life. His mother, whom he had supported out of his lean purse, also died, and to pay her funeral expenses he wrote his great philosophical novel "Rasselas."

Then, in 1755, appeared his great dictionary. It was not only the first real English dictionary ever published, but the clearness, scope and beautiful language of its definitions formed a new literary era and caused a revolution in literature. Now that he was successful, the world flocked to do him homage. A coterie of writers, actors and statesmen formed about him. He was their oracle and idol. With pompous superiority he tyrannized over them, spoiled by prosperity, made them listen in respectful silence to his endless orations. At the Chevalier Chesson and other places of the kind he was wont to hold a species of semi-regal court, with himself as undisputed king and despot. He grew indolent, shunned work of all sorts and lived on his past record. In earlier years he had rallied at the custom of pension giving, styling it "pay given to a state hiring to betray his country." But when the new monarch, George III, offered him a pension of $1,500 a year Johnson promptly accepted.

At about this time he met James Boswell, a young Scotch lawyer. Johnson hated Scotland, but took a fancy to Boswell, saying in explanation: "Much may be done with a Scotchman if he is caught young." Boswell religiously took down all Johnson's epigrams and later published his recollections of the great lexicographer in one of the most fascinating biographies ever written. Johnson dined his house with beggars and decayed gentlemen, whom he supported and who quarrelled among themselves and bullied their benefactor as he bullied the world. But at length these mendicants died, as did many of Johnson's closest friends. Alone in the world, embittered, and suffering from a combination of fatal maladies, the man who had revolutionized the English language, and who feared death with a terror almost childlike in its unreasonableness, died on December 13, 1794, leaving an unparalleled record of long and successful battle against circumstances, and standing out forever as the oddest, most picturesque figure in the world of letters.

HATS THAT CAN BE WASHED

Desirable for Children and Also Their Elders—Description of Pretty Model.

A hat that can go into the wash-tub each week is essential for a child and desirable for grown-ups. A rather new model, that can be easily copied, has two parts that are detachable and held together by buttons and straps. For the brim make a circle of heavy linen as large as you desire your hat to be. The proper size is easily gauged by measuring with a flat, round straw hat that is becoming. Work the edge of circle with an irregular scallop, heavily padded and buttonholed in white or a color.

The brim can be worked with as simple or as elaborate a design as is liked. A number of graduated satin stitch dots or eyelets are effective, or there can be a number of detached leaf sprays radiating from the crown of the hat and spreading toward the outer edge. These can be outlined and filled in with a darning stitch if time presses.

An inner circle is cut out the size of crown of hat. Or it can be made slightly smaller and the edges slit at intervals to permit it to be basted smoothly to a frame if one be used.

For the crown cut a smaller circle, the size to smoothly cover frame if one is used or big enough to give an easy, shapely top when parts are joined. This circle is cut with eight straps an inch wide and from two to two and a half inches long, according to height desired for crown. Between each strap the edge of circle is cut into a pointed scallop.

The outer edge of circle and straps is then buttonholed in a narrow edge about a quarter of an inch deep. In the end of each strap is put a lengthwise buttonhole and corresponding buttons are put on the brim. Should the crown be used over a gauze frame the brim is first basted to it and the buttons put on frame, or both top and brim can be buttoned to it.

The only trimming for this hat is a broad, soft ribbon drawn under the straps which hold the crown in place. For a little child this is pretty, fastened at each side with fluffy rosettes; for an older person the ribbon can be tied either at back or front in a big Alsatian bow.

When a frame is not used a certain stiffness can be given to crown by running strip of buckram or canvas under the straps before the ribbon is slipped through. If preferred, the pointed scallops between straps can be made longer than the usual scallop, so that they fall loosely over ribbon when the hat is joined.

OF LACE AND MATERIAL

For a bodice in which the same material as skirt is wished to be introduced, this is a good idea, as there is not too much material about it; it is finely tucked for the vest, also for the sleeve bands, but is plain for the sleeves. Piece lace with a scalloped edge is used for the over-bodice, also for the epaulettes. A binding of velvet gives a firmness in the center of front, straps of velvet are taken across, and caught down by buttons.

Materials required: One yard 48 inches wide, two and one-half yards piece lace, one and one-fourth yard velvet, two buttons.

Petticoats for Evening Wear.

The question of petticoats for evening wear is easily settled this year. A satin skirt of such ancient cut that it can no longer do duty even if covered with an overdress of lace or net represents the ideal material for an up-to-date evening petticoat. If mounted on taffetas the gores must be unpicked, and the separate lengths of satin sponged with pure alcohol if soiled and the seams ironed out and a good paper pattern of one of the new fitted undershirts procured, so that the remodeled garment will lie perfectly flat over the hips and betray no fullness anywhere.

Many Kinds of Cuffs.

The choice of a cuff is as broad as the choice of a collar. The cheaper variety of shirt-waists have the straight stiffened cuff, cut like the one on a man's shirt, and held together with link buttons.

It is far prettier, however, to avoid this sign of a cheap waist and put on narrow turnover cuffs or wrinkle the sleeves over the wrist and finish with a tiny edge of lace; then fasten with lace buttons.

Keeping Table Linen.

In keeping the table linen that is not in daily use many a housekeeper is annoyed to find it has yellowed badly and must be washed before it can go on the table again.

This can be overcome, if after being laundered, the cloths and napkins are carefully wrapped in deep blue paper or in a sheet that has been heavily bleached.

Earthquake At Snow Hill.

Worcester county was visited by an earthquake shortly after six o'clock last Saturday morning. The houses in Snow Hill were shaken, windows rattled, and for a time there was general tumult. There were three separate shocks, coming at intervals of one minute, and all were felt by persons in every section of the county. Last Wednesday there was a slight earthquake felt in this place and the shock today has caused everybody to become alarmed. Many believed Halley's Comet had come in contact with the earth and that the end of the world was at hand. Others thought the firing of the guns at Old Point caused the trembling of the earth, but the consensus of opinion is that it was a minor earthquake.

CORNER STONE

Unearthed. Wicomico Presbyterian Church. Interesting Relics Found Including Copy Of The Salisbury ADVERTISER.

An incident of very great interest took place at the Wicomico Presbyterian Church on Wednesday morning of this week when representatives of the session and the Church committee met to unearth the Corner Stone of the old church.

In the hollow of the stone a tin box was found, rusted but intact, containing a bible, a Confession of Faith of the Presbyterian Church, a list of the ministers of the General Assembly for the year 1888, a copy of the SALISBURY ADVERTISER, giving an account of the erecting of the building a list of the members of the Church at the time and a list of contributors with the amount contributed opposite each name. Only one coin was found, a penny of the year 1868. The church was erected in 1869, during the ministry of the Rev. Dr. Waite, whose pastorate was a long and very successful one, he being a man of great influence in the community.

After the contents of the box had been inspected by those present, they were carefully replaced and entrusted to the care of the Clerk of the Session. Rev. Mr. Beale, the present pastor of the Church, then led in a fervent prayer thanking Almighty God for his just blessings and bestowings Him for his continued presence and benediction.

The old corner stone will likely be placed in the wall where the addition begins and new corner stone be laid in the front of the new tower. The work of enlarging the church is being done by contractor Thomas M. Slemmons under the personal supervision of Owen and Sisco, architects of Baltimore City and will cost about $9,000. The work is to be completed by September the first.

MR. TOADVIN NAMED

Judge. Judgeship Goes To Wicomico After A Strenuous Contest For The Vacancy.

Governor Crothers ended the suspense in legal circles as to who would be appointed to fill the vacancy on the bench made by the retirement of Judge Holland by the last legislature, by the appointment of Hon. E. Stanley Toadvin, of Salisbury.

While the Governor declined to give his reasons for making the appointment, it is believed that as Judge Holland was from Wicomico County, it was only right to give her the judgeship for the unexpired term. Mr. Toadvin will serve until November, 1911, when his successor will be elected.

Immediately after it was known that Judge Holland was to be retired several friends of various members of the bar in Wicomico and Somerset County got active and strongly urged the appointment of their choice upon the Governor.

In Somerset County, the many friends of Hon. H. L. D. Stanford put his name before the Governor asking that he be appointed. Mr. Stanford, it is understood, had strong endorsements both in Worcester and Dorchester. In Wicomico, in addition to Mr. Toadvin, Hon. James E. Ellegood was strongly endorsed by his friends here, who felt it would be a graceful compliment to appoint him to fill the unexpired term, and that his appointment would not interfere with the ambitions of others in the primaries or election later as his age would disqualify him for service longer than the appointive term. The name of State's Attorney Joseph L. Bailey was heard also in connection with this appointment.

Hon. E. Stanley Toadvin, the appointee, was born December 3, 1848, in this city, in a house which stood where the present Peninsula Hotel now stands, and which was destroyed in the fire of 1860. He is the surviving son of the late Parnell Toadvin and Amanda Parsons Toadvin. After the fire the Toadvin home was established at "Lemon Hill," which was afterwards the home of Judge Toadvin for many years.

Mr. Toadvin received his early education at the old Salisbury Academy and afterwards entered Princeton University in 1865, graduating in 1869 with the degree of A. B. and A. M. He then went to the University of Virginia for two years taking a special course in State and International Law, Literature and History. On leaving the University he came to Salisbury and studied law under the late Judge Thos. A. Spence for one year when he was admitted to the Bar in 1873.

In 1877 Mr. Toadvin was appointed State's Attorney for Wicomico County to fill out the unexpired term of Hon. James E. Ellegood and was elected for four years in 1879. After his term expired he practiced law in Salisbury and in 1887 was nominated and elected State Senator for Wicomico County. He served with marked distinction in the Senate and was re-nominated and elected in 1891 in the great fusion fight, defeating the late Col. William J. Leonard by the largest majority of any candidate on the ticket. This was a memorable campaign and the one in which Mr. James T. Truitt was first elected.

After the Democratic party regained control of the Party in 1900, Gov. Smith appointed him as Land Commissioner, an office he filled with credit to himself and the State. He was reappointed to this office by Governor Warfield. Mr. Toadvin is a lawyer of acknowledged ability, and is well qualified to fill the position to which he has been appointed.

The family of Mr. Toadvin consists of his wife, who was Miss Kate H. Tilghman, daughter of the late William B. Tilghman, and one daughter, Miss Katharine Toadvin, who is at present attending school at Oregon. They reside on Newton Street in this city.

COLORED GIRL SHOT

Attending Birthday Party, At Ben Leatherbury's (Colored) Restaurant.

Lula West, a colored girl, was shot while attending a birthday party given by Ben Leatherbury, colored, at his restaurant in the I. S. Brewing building at the foot of Church Street. It is stated that all present were drinking, more or less, and a controversy took place between Ben and his wife about something that happened some time back, when Lula West joined with some remark. Then it is alleged, that Ben asked her what she had to do with it and if she did not stop interfering in his affairs he would hurt her, then drawing his pistol out he shot at her. The bullet passed through her thigh. She was taken to the Hospital and no serious results are apprehended from the wound. Sheriff J. Clayton Kelley was called upon about three A. M. to apprehend the alleged offender, but found that he had skipped to Delaware.

THE CITY PRIMARIES

Mr. Kennerly For Mayor.—Retiring Council Re-nominated.

The Democrats held their primaries to nominate a Mayor and three city councilmen on Monday evening. The primaries passed off as was expected, harmoniously and without contest. The Mayor serves two years and two of the council three, the other one year, length of terms to be decided by lot after the election.

The meeting was presided over by Hon. Chas. B. Disharoon, Messrs A. M. Jackson and E. Homer White acting as secretaries. Mayor Harper who has given much of his time in serving the city during his past three terms service as Mayor placed Mr. B. Frank Kennerly in nomination in an able speech; this nomination was seconded by Mr. L. Atwood Bennett.

B. FRANK KENNERLY

Nominated at the Democratic Primaries for Mayor of Salisbury.

The progress of the city during his administration was dwelt on by the Mayor, and its future prospects for growth and prosperity were pointed out. In speaking of Mr. Kennerly, the nominee, Mayor Harper spoke of his ability and stated that in his opinion he was well able to fill the place acceptably to the people.

Hon. Elieha E. Twilley then put the names of Frederick Smith, Harry Dennis and Charles E. Bennett before the meeting, which was seconded by Mr. Harper and, nominated without dissent.

These three gentlemen had served as Councilmen for the past two years, and for their progressiveness and thorough business administration were persuaded to serve again.

The entire ticket nominated may be termed a progressive ticket. The city executive committee elected were J. C. White, E. E. Twilley, Chas. E. Harper, Thomas Perry and Geo. E. Mitchell.

Mr. Kennerly, the nominee for Mayor, age 46 years, was born at Vienna, Dorchester County, Md., and since his maturity entered the mercantile field. He is the head of many business houses in Salisbury, some of which are, president of the Kennerly & Mitchell's, Clothing; president of the Kennerly-Shockley Co., Inc.; director of the People's National Bank, of Salisbury; director of the Salisbury Heat, Light and Power Co.; director of the Salisbury Realty Company, and many of the business enterprises in the city and county.

An unhappy marriage rarely has the effect of deterring either participant from another venture. Mrs. Ruth Bryan Leavitt, who separated from her husband three years ago and got a divorce from him more than a year ago, is to marry an officer in the British army. The one comprehensive reply to all the malicious and cynical things said about marriage is the universality of remarriage.

DEMOCRATS EXPECT

To Carry Maryland. Covington, Talbott And Gill Predict Solid Delegation In Congress.

Maryland Democrats in Congress are feeling good over the outlook for the fall elections. They declare that their party will sweep the State and would not be surprised to see a solid Democratic delegation of Marylanders in the Sixty second Congress.

The present Democratic Representatives say that the protest against the tariff and the oppressive prices which they claim this law is responsible for is just as strong in Maryland as it was in Massachusetts and New York, where Democrats were elected to Congress from old time Republican strongholds.

The Maryland Congressmen say further that the next House will be Democratic without doubt, and that they will use this argument effectively in their campaigns. They will represent that a Democratic Congressman next year will be a factor.

Covington Confident.

Representative Covington says the people of the Eastern Shore are disgusted with the present conditions brought about by the tariff and the trusts. He says that his district will pile up a bigger majority than two years ago, when it rose up to protest against the "pork-barrel" methods of former Representative Jackson.

Congressman J. Fred. O. Talbott feels no uneasiness whatever over the outcome in his district. He says that the Democratic organization there is just as live and effective as ever and that it will do its full duty. He says national issues will be injected into the next campaign as they have seldom been in the course of his political life.

People Thinking, Says Gill.

Something of the same idea was expressed by Congressman John Gill, Jr., who may or may not be a candidate for reelection. He says he cannot recall an "off year" Congressional election that has been so influenced by national questions as the coming election will be. He says that most elections of this character were made upon purely local issues.

"The cost of living, however," said Mr. Gill, "which has been rising higher and higher, has brought home to every man and woman the necessity of political thinking and the fact will be a tremendous factor in the coming campaign."

Representatives Kronmiller and Pearre are not alarmed, however. Both of these Republicans propose to stand for re-election squarely upon their records.

Citizens Ticket Named.

It is reported that a number who were dissatisfied with the nominations made by the Democrats on Monday night, held a meeting on Thursday evening and decided to put a citizens ticket in the field.

Previous to this it was understood that some of these gentlemen had been quietly sounding around for an available man to run for Mayor. Mr. Joe D. Williams was one of the men approached, but refused to have anything to do with it.

The nominees finally selected upon were Mr. W. F. Bonds for Mayor, Messrs. Winile Corkran, W. T. Banks for Council, while it is rumored that Mr. Frederick Smith, one of the Democratic nominees for Council, was to be endorsed.

COUNTING THE PEOPLE

Of The United States. The Completeness And Magnitude Of The Work.

The taking of the census of the United States, which was begun last Friday, is an enormous task. It is estimated that we have a population of about ninety millions, but we cannot be sure of that until the figures are added up. In 1910, the total white population in the original area of the United States numbered 810 persons. The twelfth census, taken in 1900, recorded a population of 76,908,387. The people are now standing up to be counted again, but it will be some time before we can say just how many of us there are; and it's going to cost a lot of money to get this information. The census of 1900 cost Uncle Sam about $18,000,000. Since then his land ed possessions have increased and his family has gained about 15,000,000 members. It is claimed that the American census is the largest, costliest and most accurate taken in the world. The enumeration must be finished within two weeks in the cities that had 5,000 population or over at the last census, and within thirty days in all other areas. To perform this task promptly the United States will employ the services of 75,000 men.

The farmers of this country are expected to make a fine showing in the coming census. About 45,000 of the enumerators will carry agricultural schedules as well as those on population. It is estimated that there are 7,000,000 separate farms in America. In 1910 there were many millions of dollars more of fixed capital invested in agriculture than there were in manufacturing, and the farmers have been getting better off all the time.

The cost of the present census will be about $19,000,000, if the rate of increase hitherto prevailing is maintained. But it is believed that improved economical methods introduced by Director Dorrant, will keep the expense at a rate much lower than that of any previous census. Much saving has been effected by the introduction of semi-automatic electrical card-punching, tabulating and sorting machines. The permanent force of the census bureau includes 700 clerks. When the new figures and facts are sifted out and analyzed much valued information is expected to be obtained, not only with respect to the States, but also concerning our non-contiguous possessions. The work on the whole is of the utmost importance and will afford us data for the solution of national problems that we cannot do without if we are to make intelligent progress.

A CORNER IN ANCESTORS

By FRANCIS GOWLES

Livingston Family

(Copyright by McGraw-Hill Syndicate)

The great family of Livingston is supposed to have been founded by a Hungarian nobleman named Livingston, who accompanied Margaret Atheling to Scotland in 1067 when she came there to marry the king, Malcolm Canmore. Livingston decided to remain in Scotland and he was given a grant of land in West Lothian, which was called Livingston, or the home of Livingston. He had a son named Thurgatus, who in turn had two sons, William Alexander and Alexander. It was the latter, Alexander, who was the first to take the name of Livingston as a surname, according to a custom of his forefathers calling himself by the name of his estate.

Alexander's son William was the ancestor of the lords of Livingston, the fifth of whom was the direct ancestor of one Robert, who established the family in America about 1675.

This Robert's father was John Livingston, an energetic preacher of the Reformed church in Scotland. Under Charles II. he was banished for non-conformity and took refuge in Holland, where he died at Rotterdam in 1673. Robert received his training and education in Holland and he learned to speak French and Dutch as well as English.

Of all the men who came to this country at this or any other time, Robert Livingston seems to have been one of the luckiest and best fitted by temperament and training to cope with the hardships of the new world. Poor enough he was, with nothing but his hands and brains to depend upon for his future advancement, he immediately found a place in the life of the new world. In less than a year he was appointed clerk of the records in the village of Albany, where he settled, and within a few years he had allied himself with several of the leading families of the colony by his marriage with Aida Schuyler.

She was the widow of Dominie Nicholas Van Rensselaer, the daughter of Col. Pieter Schuyler of Albany, and she had a niece named Margaret Schuyler. When, a little later, Robert sent to Edinburgh for his nephew and namesake, known as Robert Livingston, Jr., to come and assist him in his growing business, a second Schuyler-Livingston marriage occurred—between Margaret and Robert, Jr.—and thus the two families were doubly allied.

LIVINGSTON

It is said that Robert could "turn his coat easier than any other man living." And although he was thoroughly truthful in all his political dealings, he always made the best of any chances he saw to gain an honest penny. But his usual good fortune failed him on one occasion, when he tried to suppress the pirates who had for years infested the coasts of the English colonies.

When in 1695 he was in London he conceived a plan whereby he could suppress these marauders and at the same time gain a reward for his pains. His plan was to employ armed ships to cruise the Indian seas in search of plunder-laden pirate ships. Livingston had a brave and adventurous friend who happened to be in London at the time and the company decided to put this man in charge of the first patrol ship. This choice was disastrous. For the brave friend, who was no other than Capt. Kidd himself, was unable to capture the pirates and therefore turned pirate himself.

Robert Livingston had five sons and four daughters and three of the sons, Philip, Robert and Gilbert, really founded the family here. There were later many famous Livingstons who played their part in the country's development.

The arms of the lords of Livingston are blazoned: Quarterly 1st and 4th argent, three cinquefoils gules within the royal treasure, fretty counterparty vert, 2d and 3d sable a bend between six billets or.

The motto is "Si je puis" and the crest is a demi-Hercules grasping about the head and middle, holding in dexter hand club erect, and in sinister a serpent. All proper.

An Easy Prescription

Once a well-known citizen of Chelsea named Carr tried to call Dr. Bear to a sick member of his family in the middle of the night. Mrs. Bear answered the night bell and called down the tube: "Who is it?" "I'm Mr. Carr." "Well, take the next one," quoth the lady, "they run every few minutes."—Boston Globe.

Scotland's population is estimated at close to 4,500,000.

The Upper Room at Jerusalem

"He Will Show You a Large
Upper Room; There Make Ready
For Us" (Mark xiv, 15)

Jerusalem, April 24.—My friends, we meet today for the worship of God in traditionally one of the most renowned meeting places in the whole earth. Tradition has it that this is the same "upper room" which was owned by one friendly to our Lord and his disciples and who granted it as their meeting place on several occasions most intimately associated with the inauguration of Christianity. Tradition also has it that this is the room mentioned by St. Mark in our text, where the disciples with the Lord partook of the last Jewish Passover Supper, after which Jesus instituted the Eucharist or Lord's Supper as an antitypical memorial, taking the place of the Passover Lamb—the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world" (John 1, 29); "Christ our Passover is slain, therefore let us keep the feast" (1 Corinthians v, 7, 8).

Tradition assures us that this is the same room mentioned in the Book of Acts (i, 13) as the place where the Apostles resided and assembled for worship during the ten days following the Lord's ascension—the same "upper room," therefore, in which was manifested the acceptance of all the consecrated followers of Jesus into Covenant relationship with God as "members of the Body of Christ, which is the Church." Of course, our permission to use this room for a public service today was obtained only by prearrangement with those having it in charge. True, traditions are not always reliable. Surely, in almost every other part of the world it would be absurd to think of the preservation of the identity of a house like this for more than eighteen centuries. But here we have most peculiar conditions. The inhabitants of this land seem to have been content to leave things just as they found them from generation to generation, merely making such slight repairs as were from time to time found necessary. Here visitors come, look and depart, filled with a sacred awe, and have done so for centuries, and the inhabitants, each intent upon his own business, have ignored this in a manner hardly imaginable by Europeans. It is possible therefore that tradition in this case and in other instances hereabouts, has located correctly, just as in Rome the prison in which Paul was confined is indicated by tradition with apparent accuracy.

Christ Our Passover.

We are favored not only in respect to the use of the room, but additionally in respect to the time of our visit and our use of it. This, according to Jewish reckoning, is the first day of Passover Week—it began last evening at 6 o'clock. The three hours preceding that marked the time of our Lord's death and the beginning of Joseph of Arimathea for the privilege of burying his body in his new tomb and the hasty taking of our Lord from the cross and getting him only partially embalmed and the tomb closed and sealed before 6 o'clock—this day being among the Jews, as the Apostle declared, an "high day," a Sabbath day of special sacredness as the beginning of the Passover Feast Week.

As we look back to that memorable occasion we can sympathize with the Apostles and early believers in the blighting of all of their hopes by the apparent failure of Jesus to make good his claim of Messiahship. We can imagine better than we can describe their dejection, their disappointment. On the next day, corresponding to to-morrow, the two with whom Jesus met on the way to Emmaus said sadly, "We had trusted that it had been he who should have redeemed Israel" (Luke xxiv, 21).

They had hoped that his miracles, corroborating his teaching, when he "spoke as never man spake," were evidences that he was the Messiah. They had built their hopes, as Jews, that now finally God's promises to their nation would be fulfilled—that Israel should be exalted in the earth in name and fame and power and authority to bless and to instruct "all the families of the earth." They had hoped that Messiah would be the great King under whose beneficent reign, as the great Mediator between God and men, the long-promised blessing would come to the earth. They had hoped also for a personal share with him in the glories of his Kingdom, according to his own words—"Ye shall sit with me on twelve thrones, judging (ruling) the twelve tribes of Israel" (Matthew xix, 28). His death as a malefactor, as a blasphemer against God, seemed to cast a shadow over every hope and to leave them not only desolate in heart themselves, but despaired by their neighbors, as devoted fanatics. This is the anniversary, dear friends, of a day that was very sad to our brethren of 1871 years ago.

"Messiah and All the Prophets"

How different is our attitude of mind that we are able to see, to praise God and to rejoice that Jesus died; that he suffered, "the just for the unjust," that his death might constitute the Ransom-Price for Adam and all his race. This light upon the suffering of Christ began to shine into the hearts of the Apostles on the day of our Lord's resurrection, corresponding to to-morrow. The oil for that light lay hidden in the words of Moses and all the Prophets of Israel. But it was necessary that our Lord, having risen from the dead first, should trim the lamp of Divine Truth that the light might shine out to all of his people, all of his "members," all of the "Royal Priesthood," all who are in the consecrated condition of heart, symbolically represented by the "holiness" of Israel's Tabernacle.

Mark how gently and how wisely the Lord permitted the light to shine in gradually upon his faithful few. The eyes of their understanding were not to be blinded by an instantaneous flash. Gradually, as they were able, to bear it, the good tidings of his resurrection from the dead to glory, honor and immortality on the divine plane must be made known to them. The first intimations were from the women of the company who had gone with spices, after the "high day," on the morning of the third day to complete the work of embalming the Lord. They reported first, that he was gone from the sepulchre, and secondly, that they had seen some angels who told them that he was risen from the dead. And later Mary had reported that she had seen the Lord and clasped him by the feet and that he had said to her, "I am not yet ascended to my Father; but go to my brethren and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God" (John xx, 17). Jesus said to tell the disciples that he would meet them in Galilee, as he had said to them before. These bewildering experiences were merely leading gradually on, preparing the disciples for the fuller knowledge of the facts.

It was the same day (corresponding to to-morrow afternoon) that the Lord overtook two of the sorrowing disciples as they walked into the country to spend the night. Here again he would not shock them and overpower them by a vision of his glorious presence such as smote down Saul of Tarsus on his way to Damascus, "shining above the brightness of the sun at noon-day;" as the contrary he assumed a body of flesh and traveler's clothing and talked sympathetically with the two sorrowing ones. After bearing their woes and sorrows he must have astonished them with his knowledge of the Scriptures, as well as by his sympathy, saying to them, "O foolish and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken!" (Luke xxiv, 25). They had been willing to believe something of what the Prophets had spoken—the glorious things, the baptizing things pertaining to Messiah's Millennial glory. But they had been slow to believe the prophets' other testimonies to the effect that the Redeemer must be "slain as a Lamb to the slaughter," must be the sin-offering, must be despised and rejected of men, must be lifted up on the cross as the antitype of the "brazen serpent," and must be raised from the dead by the power of the Father to the glory, honor and immortality of his great station as Prophet, Priest, Mediator, King, the antitype of Melchizedek, for the fulfillment to Israel and the world of all of God's great promises.

Then said Jesus, in view of these expectations, "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into his glory?" What else should be expected? Did he not foretell his own death? And did he not foretell his own resurrection? And were you not too confused to understand his teachings to the full? Did not your minds run more to the coming glory than to what he said to you respecting the necessity that you should "watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation" and lose all your part and hope under these trying conditions? A little later, in the same day, he appeared in the "upper room," traditionally this very room—the doors being shut for fear of the Jews—where, we may be sure, because the poor disciples felt that the envy and hatred which had led to the crucifixion of the Master might easily be transferred now to the "because of their sympathy with him and their relationship to his work." Our Jesus materialized in their presence and spoke a few words. He told them that he was really present with them and that it was not a merely phantom which they saw. And then he ate with them, honeycomb and fish, as evidencing the fact that they were not being addressed by an illusion, but by a corporeal being, while they still wondered with astonishment, he proved to them that their risen Lord was no longer merely a man, but that he had experienced a change in his resurrection, so that now he was a spirit being and could go and come like the wind—appearing in a body of flesh when his purposes so demanded. He gave proof of this by vanishing out of their sight, dissolving the body of flesh and bones and the clothing as easily as he had created them and by the same Divine power.

The Pentecostal Blessing. The glorified, resurrected Jesus remained with the infant Church, for forty days, watching over their interests. On four or five occasions he appeared to them again in different forms and for the further inculcation of the great lesson that he was risen and changed, henceforth a spirit being. Then he ascended up on high to appear in the presence of God on behalf of his faithful ones first, as later on he will appear in the interest of the world. The Father's recognition of the merit of his sacrifice, applied "on our behalf," was manifested by the impetration of the holy Spirit on Pentecost day. Traditionally this same wonderful "upper room" witnessed that outpouring of Divine blessing and favor, which came only upon consecrated believers and has come upon the same class, and upon none other, from that day unto this—begetting them individually by the holy Spirit to the divine nature with its promises of glory, honor and immortality to the faithful, in association with the Lord Jesus in his Millennial Kingdom.

That blessing was a partial fulfillment of the Lord's word through the Prophet Joel, namely that of that portion which says, "In those days will I pour out of my Spirit upon my servants and upon my handmaids" (Joel ii, 28). We are glad, dear friends, that what occurred at that first Pentecost and what has continued all through this Gospel Age, of Pentecostal blessing upon each individual member of the Body of Christ, is merely a foretaste of God's great favor towards Adam's race. As St. James declares (i, 18) the Church is merely "a kind of first-fruits unto God of his creatures." True, the first-fruits in this case is the very choicest—our Lord, the glorious Head and High Priest, and his salutary followers the antitypical under-priests of the Royal Priesthood. But a great blessing is yet to come, for there shall come a still greater outpouring of God's Spirit as mentioned in the same prophecy in the words, "After those days, saith the Lord, I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall seek for me, and your young men shall see actually what your ancients dreamed of."

This will have its fulfillment during the Millennial Age, not that the world in general will be begotten of the holy Spirit to a spirit nature like unto the angels and like unto Christ, as in our case, but the Lord has promised to take away the stony heart and to give a heart of flesh to all the willing and obedient of mankind during that Millennial Day. In such, a right spirit shall be renewed as they become obedient to the gracious arrangements of Messiah's universal Empire and that right spirit in man, that right disposition, will be the holy Spirit—God's Spirit or disposition. It was given to man originally when he was created perfect, upright, in the image and likeness of God. It was lost by sin and displaced by a spirit of selfishness and sometimes by a spirit of devilishness. It will be the great work of that thousand years of Messiah's Kingdom to lift mankind out of sin and selfishness and death and to restore the willing and obedient to all that was lost in Adam and redeemed by the merit of the sacrifice at Calvary. With the close of the Millennial Kingdom, God shows us that all who will not have attained to the possession of his holy Spirit will be destroyed in the Second Death. Then there shall be no more sighing, nor crying, nor dying, no more sin, no more sorrow, for all the former things of sin and death shall have passed away. It will be Christ on the throne who will make all things new.

Supper in the Upper Room.

In closing we ask that in connection with what we have just said respecting this "Upper Room" and the blessings here conferred, you do not forget the special privilege which some twenty or thirty of us enjoyed in this same room on Friday evening last. We remind you afresh that that evening, after six o'clock, corresponding to the night in which our Lord with his disciples first celebrated the memorial of his own death with the loaf and with the cup, traditionally in this same "Upper Room." Incidentally we remark that the early Christian Church used this same Jewish reckoning in the annual celebration of our Lord's death and resurrection, but that, later on, the method of calculating the date was slightly modified, so that this year, Good Friday and Easter, according to the revised Episcopal Calendar, occurred nearly a month ago—March 25-27. I feel sure that as long as I live I shall not forget the blessed experiences of Friday evening and its memorial celebration, in this "Upper Room," of the great event which means so much to the Church and to the world—which symbolizes the precious sacrifice of Christ and also, as the Apostle explains, symbolizes the participation of all the faithful members of Christ in his sacrifice—in the broken loaf and in the cup of which we partake antitypically. May we, dear friends, prove so faithful to our consecration Vows that we will be included by our glorious Lord amongst those who shall be counted worthy to share also his cup of joy and glory—participation in his Millennial Kingdom and his glorious work of blessing all the families of the earth!

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. It is called Dropsy. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidneys, clogged with blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, nervousness, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and better health in that organ is obtained quicker by a proper treatment of the kidneys. Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold urine and scaling pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free of charge. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name Swamp-Root, and get it at a dealer selling something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

WICOMICO GETS JUDGE.

That Wicomico will not lose the Judgeship, made by the retirement of Judge Holland, is a matter of considerable gratification to the citizens of this County. Salisbury is one of the most important places on the Shore, where a great deal of legal business is attended to, and the loss of a resident judge would be felt. As the railroad accommodations from other places to and from Salisbury are good, it will not be near the inconvenience to reach here from these points as it would be for Salisburyans to reach them. Governor Crothers in giving to Wicomico what she lost by the retirement of Judge Holland has acted in the right spirit, especially in view of the fact that we have here as good judicial timber as exists in any section of the First Judicial District.

Judge Towbin, the new incumbent, is recognized all over the State as a good, capable and efficient lawyer; personally popular wherever known. He still doubtless measures up to the high responsibilities of his place, dealing out justice honestly, impartially and intelligently.

THE CITY NOMINATIONS.

The Democratic party of our city is to be congratulated upon the nominations for Mayor and City Council, made on Monday evening. Mr. Kennedy, the candidate for Mayor, is one of our most progressive and successful business men. He thoroughly believes in the future of our city and will do all in his power while Mayor to help it along. A thorough business man who has made his own way, he knows the value of money and will not be a party to useless and needless expenditures, but is not of that class, who think all money spent with an eye to the future is a waste; but on the contrary is a broad-minded business man who fully realizes that money properly applied for necessary improvements means progress and is the best kind of economy.

The nominees for City Council, Messrs. Dennis, Smith and Bennett, have earned their nominations by the character of the service they have already rendered the City; and it must be and should be a source of considerable pleasure and gratification to these gentlemen to know that the public appreciates their sacrifice, and has shown it by unanimously re-nominating them as councilmen.

THE BOSSES DEATH KNELL IS RINGING.

Events all over this country tend to show that the old time Boss is fast losing his hold upon the Government; state after state is turning against those who have for years held them in political bondage.

And strange to say they are not placing the power in the hands of anyone as a successor, as has been the case in history, when one political dynasty fell only to give way at once to another with the same feudal ideas. Today the people are keeping the power in their own hands, following leaders it is true, but these leaders are leaders in fact as well as in name, and their success and power lies only in their appeal to the people on the side of right and reform in government. They would be shorn of their strength as once were they to attempt to use this delegated power and prestige for their selfish ends, or to build up and entrench a machine of his own. These new leaders owe their strength and prestige to their influence over the people and not to machine politicians and as long as they do not abuse this confidence, will be a power in the country.

Campan with all his power has not been able to stem the tide, and together with Aldrich, Hale, Barrows and others of the same stamp will soon be compelled to seek the quiet of private life. Almost without exception the very of Rome rule in any disputed country or state has resulted in the defeat of machine politics and corrupt methods. Let us hope the tide will continue to rise, until machine politics is a thing of the past, and the methods of better methods and high ideals, small men ambitions.

of political fame realize that the people are the ones to be served instead of professional politicians; until men realize that to be leaders they must point the way to higher plains of civic duty: until only men who regard "Public Office" as a "Public Trust" can hope for preferment: until this country of ours will again be a true Democracy, the present feudal system done away with and in its place have a government by the people and run in the interest of the people instead of at present in the interest to a large extent of the favored few.

Read the signs of times, Gentlemen, and those of you who hope for political honors, first learn that you must depend upon the people whose confidence you must have, before you can hope to rise and whose confidence you must hold by your zeal in their service, if you desire to remain in Public life.

WORLD WIDE MOVEMENT

To Teach Value Of Oral Hygiene And Instruction For Better Teeth.

Supported by the National Department of Public Health, the dentists of Maryland inaugurated in Baltimore Thursday night what has become a world wide movement—the teaching to all classes the value of moral hygiene—and a fight to lessen the ninety per cent of diseased mouths, caused by bad teeth, among the school children of the State. The meeting was held in the Central Y. M. C. A. Building, and a Representative of the Department of Public Health, as well as members of the Washington Dental Society were present.

Representatives of all charitable institutions in the city attended to tell of the conditions among the people with whom they come in contact. Superintendent of the Public Instruction Van Sickle was one of the principal speakers, and urged the establishment of more infirmaries for school children, whom it is claimed are fast contracting diseases through bad teeth.

Dr. Richard Brady of Annapolis; Dr. A. McIntosh, who represents the Department of Public Health; Dr. Howard Kelley and Dr. Smith were among the physicians who spoke. George Ehlers of the Public Athletic League, J. W. MacGraddier and several women told of conditions among the poorer classes.

Dr. Smith, who is the chairman of the committee received a communication from Dr. Emil of Cleveland representing the National Dental Association in which it stated that that Association will heartily support the movement in Maryland.

As a part of the campaign the dentists have arranged to hold a mass meeting in McCoy Hall on June 10, and Dr. Smith has received the assurance of Senator Owen of Oklahoma, that he will attend.

DROVE CAR IN RIVER

Miss Marjorie Bartlett Was Showing Lieut. Stirling "How."

Miss Marjorie Bartlett, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Frank W. Bartlett, of the navy, and a prominent member of the younger social set of Annapolis, got an unexpected ducking in the waters of Severn river as the result of an automobile ride with Lieut. W. F. Stirling, of the Navy Department.

Lieutenant Stirling recently purchased the machine and invited Miss Bartlett as his guest to take a trial spin and give it a "bumping down." Miss Bartlett is quite an adept in running machines, as her parents own an automobile, which she frequently drives. The auto had been going along pretty well just prior to the accident, which occurred at the point of the driveway along the lagoon or basin for harboring small boats within the secondary inclosure. Miss Bartlett herself was at the wheel at the time, and suddenly the steering gear became jammed. The auto, thus rendered uncontrollable, plunged over the four foot cement sea wall, throwing Lieutenant Stirling and Miss Bartlett into about fifteen feet of water. Seeing the impending danger, both occupants jumped clear of the machine before it took its headlong plunge. They were rescued with some little difficulty, but were none the worse except for a cold bath.

Derrieks were employed to raise the machine.

Trustees Glad They Paid More.

The Trustees of Fair Ground, Cocklehill, N. Y., were glad to pay 15 cents a gallon more for Devco; and no wonder. Two other paint agents said it would take 100 gallons of their paint to cover the buildings.

The Devco agent put it at 125 or less. It took 115.

Devco saved them 35 gallons of paint and painting (worth $4 to $5 a gallon, as the painting costs two or three times as much as the paint) less 15 cents a gallon on 115 gallons. Say $140.

That's how to count the cost of paint. The cost of putting it on is $3 or $4 a gallon. You see what that means. Go by Devco.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have suffered with indigestion, have been cured by it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia, heartburn, and they have not been able to cure it.

Use Kodol and prevent having dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally as just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience nervousness of stomach, belching of gas and unwholesome food, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), dizziness, headache, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. But what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary people "dyspepsia" is a physical ailment, and is not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Peppin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all. Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always carry a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Our Guarantee
We guarantee that if you take a bottle of Kodol, and do not feel better, we will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the doctor's fee. We will then pay the doctor's fee. We will then pay the doctor's fee.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of B. O. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

The Man From Brodney's

By GEORGE BARR
WUTCHEON

Copyright, 1908, by Dodd, Mead & Co.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

A TOAST TO THE PAST.
THE middle of June found the Deppings leaving London once more, but this time not on a voyage into the mysterious south seas. They no longer were interested in the vagaries of Taswell Skaggs' will.

The estate was settled—closed! Two months have passed since the Deppings departed from Japan. For good and all. Many events have come to pass since that memorable day, not the least of which was the exchanging of $500,000, less attorneys' and executors' fees. Lady Deppingham and Robert Browne divided that amount of money and passed into legal history as the "late claimants to the estate of Taswell Skaggs."

It was Sir John Brodney's enterprise. He saw the way out of the difficulty, and he acted as pathfinder to the other and less perceiving counselors, all of whom had looked forward to an endless controversy.

The business of the Japan company and all that it entailed was transferred by agreement to a syndicate. Never before was there such a stupendous deal in futures.

The grandchildren of the testators were ready to accept the best settlement that could be obtained. There was a rather forlorn hope to begin with. When it was proposed that Agnes Deppingham and Robert Browne should accept $250,000 apiece in lieu of all claims, moral or legal, against the estate, they leaped at the chance.

They had seen but little of each other since landing in England, except as they were thrown together at the conferences. Lady Agnes went in for every diversion imaginable. For a wonder, she dragged Deppingham with her on all occasions. It was a most unexpected transformation. Their friends were puzzled. The rumor went about town that she was in love with her husband.

As for Bobby Browne, he was devoted to himself to Drusilla. They sailed for New York within three days after the settlement was effected, ignoring the enticements of a London season. The Browns were rich. He could now become a fashionable specialist. They were worth nearly a million and a quarter in American dollars. They now had nothing in common with Taswell Skaggs. Skaggs is not a pretty name.

Mr. Britt afterward spent three weeks of incessant travel on the continent and an additional seven days at sea. In Baden-Baden he happened upon Lord and Lady Deppingham. It will be recalled that in Japan they had always professed an unshy aversion for Mr. Britt. It is cause for wonder, then, that they declined his invitation to dine in Baden-Baden? He was proposed to invite their entire party, which included a few dukes and duchesses who were leisurely on their way to attend the long talked of nuptials in Thorberg at the end of June.

In Vienna the Deppings were joined by the Duchess of N., the Marchioness of B. and other fashionable. In a week all of them would be in the castle at Thorberg for the ceremony that now occupied the attention of social and royal Europe. "And to think," said the duchess, "she might have died happily on that miserable island. I am sure we did all we could to bring it about by steaming away from the place with the plague chasing us. Dear me, how diabolically those wretches lied to the marquise! They said that every one in the chateau was dead, Lady Deppingham, and buried, if I am not mistaken. It would be much better for poor Geneva if she were to be buried instead of married next week," lamented the duchess.

"Other women have married princes and got on very well," said Prince Lichtenstein.

"Oh, come now, prince," put in Lord Deppingham; "you know the sort of chap Brabets is. There are princes and princes, by Jove."

"He's positively vile!" exclaimed the duchess, who would not mince words.

"She's entering upon a hell of a life," meant a life of hell," exclaimed the duke, banging the table with his fist. "That fellow Brabets is the rottenest thing in Europe. He's gone from bad to worse so swiftly that public opinion is still months behind him."

"Nice way to talk of the groom," said the host genially. "I quite agree with you, however. I cannot understand the grand duke permitting it to go on unless, of course, it's too late to interfere."

"Poor dear! She'll never know what it is to be loved and cherished," said the marchioness dolefully.

Lord and Lady Deppingham glanced at each other. They were thinking of the man, who stood on the dock at Ararat when the King's Own sailed away.

"The grand duke is probably saying the very thing to himself that Brabets's associates are saying in public," ventured a young Austrian count.

"What is that, pray?"

"That the prince won't live more than six months. He's a physical wreck today and a nervous one too. Take my word for it, he will be a creeping, imbecile thing inside of half a year—lame, idiotic and all that. It's coming positively with a sharp crash."

"I've heard he has tried to kill that woman in Paris half a dozen times," remarked one of the women, taking it as a matter of course that every one knew who she meant by "that woman."

"She was really responsible for the postponement of the wedding in December, I'm told. Of course I don't know that it is true," said the marchioness, wisely qualifying her gossip. "My brother, the grand duke, does not confide in me."

"Well, my heart bleeds for her," said Deppingham.

"She's going into it with her eyes open," said the prince. "It isn't as if she hadn't been told. She could see for herself. She knows there's the other woman in Paris and—Oh, well, why should we make a funeral of it? Let's do our best to be revelers, not mourners. She'll live to fall in love with some other man. They always do. Every woman has to live at least once in her life—if she lives long enough. Come, come! Let us forget the future of the Princess Geneva and drink to her present!"

"And to her past, if you don't mind, prince!" amended Lord Deppingham, looking into his wife's somber eyes.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE TITILE CLEAR.

TWO men and a woman stood in the evening glow looking over the tranquil sea that crept over the foot of the cliff. It was September. Five months had passed since the King's Own steamed away from the harbor of Ararat. The new dispensation was in full effect. During the long, sickening weeks that preceded the coming of the syndicate Hollingsworth Chase toiled faithfully, resolutely, for the restoration of order and system among the demoralized people of Japan.

With the transfer of the company's business his work was finished. Two young men from Sir John's were now settled in Ararat as legal advisers to the islanders, Chase having declined to serve longer in that capacity.

He was now waiting for the steamer which was to take him to Cape Town on his way to England—and home.

The chateau was closed and in the hands of a small army of caretakers. The three widows of Jacob von Blitz were now married to separate and distinct husbands, all of whom retained their places as heads of departments at the chateau, proving that courtship had not been confined to the white people during the closing days of the siege.

The head of the bank was Oscar Arnheim. Mr. Bowles having been deposed because his methods were even more obsolete than his coat of armor.

Sellm disposed of his lawful interest in the corporation to Ben All, the new cad, and was waiting to accompany his master to America. It may be well to add that the deal did not include the transfer of Neneah. She was not for sale, said Sellm to Ben All.

It was of Mr. Bowles that the three persons were talking as they stood in the evening glow.

"Yes, Sellm," said the tall man in fannels, "he's a sort of old dog Tray, ever faithful, but not the right kind. You don't happen to know anything of old dog Tray, do you? No? I thought not. Nor you, Neneah? Well, he was—"

"Was he the one who was poisoned at the chateau, excellency?" asked Neneah timidly.

"No, my dear," he replied soberly. "If I remember my history, he died in the seventeenth century or thereabouts. It's really of no consequence, however. Any good, faithful dog will serve my purpose. What I want to impress upon you is this—it is most difficult for a faithful old dog to survive a change of masters. It isn't human nature—or dog nature, either. I'm glad that you are convinced, Neneah. But please don't tell Sahib Bowles that he is a dog."

"Oh, no, excellency!" she cried earnestly.

"She is very close mouthed, sahib," said Sellm, with conviction. "We'll take Bowles to England with us next week," went on Chase dreamily. "We'll leave Japan to take care of itself."

He lighted a fresh cigarette, tenderly fingering it before applying the match. "I'll smoke one of hers tonight, Sellm. See! I keep them apart from the others in this little gold case. I smoke them only when I am thinking. Now, run in. I want to be alone."

They left him, and he threw himself upon the green sod, his back to a tree, his face toward the distant chateau. Hours afterward the faithful Sellm came out to tell him that it was bedtime. He found his master still sitting there, looking across the moonlit flat in the direction of a place in the hills where once he had dwelt in marble halls.

"Sellm," he said, arising and laying his hand upon his servant's shoulder, his voice unsteady with finality, "I have decided, after all, to go to Paris. We will live there, Sellm. Do you understand?" with strange fierceness, a great exultation mastering him. "We are to live in Paris!"

To himself at that night he was saying: "I must see her again! I shall see her!"

A thousand times he had read and reread the letter that Lady Deppingham had written to him just before the ceremony in the cathedral at Thorberg. He knew every word that it contained. He could read it in the dark. She had said that Geneva was going into a hell that no hereafter could surpass in horrors! And that was ages ago, it seemed to him. Geneva had been a wife for nearly three months—the wife of a man she loathed. She was calling in her heart for him to come to her. She was suffering in that unexpressed hell. All this he had come to feel with a shudder over in his unexpressed loneliness.

He would go to her. There could be no wrong in loving her, in being near her, in standing by her in those hours of desperation.

A copy of a London newspaper struck away in the recesses of his trunk, dated June 20, had come to him by post. It contained the telegraphic details of the brilliant wedding in Thorberg. Every royal family in Europe was represented. The list of noble names seemed endless to him, the flower of the world's aristocracy. How he hated them!

"I've heard he has tried to kill that woman in Paris half a dozen times," remarked one of the women, taking it as a matter of course that every one knew who she meant by "that woman."

"She was really responsible for the postponement of the wedding in December, I'm told. Of course I don't know that it is true," said the marchioness, wisely qualifying her gossip. "My brother, the grand duke, does not confide in me."

"Well, my heart bleeds for her," said Deppingham.

"She's going into it with her eyes open," said the prince. "It isn't as if she hadn't been told. She could see for herself. She knows there's the other woman in Paris and—Oh, well, why should we make a funeral of it? Let's do our best to be revelers, not mourners. She'll live to fall in love with some other man. They always do. Every woman has to live at least once in her life—if she lives long enough. Come, come! Let us forget the future of the Princess Geneva and drink to her present!"

"And to her past, if you don't mind, prince!" amended Lord Deppingham, looking into his wife's somber eyes.

ONE WEAK SPOT.

Most Salisbury People Have A Weak Part And Too Often It's The Back.

Everyone has a weak spot. Too often it's a bad back. Twinges follow every sudden twist, Dull aching keep up, day and night. Tell you the kidneys need help—For backache is really kidney ache. A kidney cure is what you need. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys.

Cure backache. Salisbury people recommend the remedy.

Mrs. John C. Nelson, E. Brown St., Salisbury, Md., says "Doan's Kidney Pills helped me more than any other medicine I ever took and consequently I do not have the least hesitation in recommending them. I was subject to attacks of kidney complaint for a long time and whenever I caught cold my back became weak. If I did much stooping, there was a lameness across my loins. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly endorsed by people who had taken them, I procured a supply at White & Leonard's Drug Store and began their use. I now feel much better in every way and I have no further trouble from my kidneys or back."

For sale by all dealers. Price 60 cents. Foster Millburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Spiritism Said To Be Demonism.

A most interesting little brochure has recently come off the press, setting forth with Bible proofs that the communications received by and through Spiritist Mediums is of Demon origin. The writer traces his subject through the Scriptures from the time when certain of the holy angels became disobedient. He proves from the Scriptures that these fallen spirits deal in personating the human dead, with whose past history, spirits, though invisible, are thoroughly acquainted. He shows that they also frequently personate the Creator and the Redeemer, commanding their deceived ones to pray, do penance, etc. This, however, is merely to lead them on and to bring them more thoroughly under demonic control. Sometimes by breaking down the natural barrier, the human will, they obsess their victim and rule him more or less to his ruin—frequently sending such to the mad-house. Numerous illustrations, Scriptural and otherwise, are given. The price of the little book is but ten cents; it should be in the hands of all interested in Spiritism or who have friends interested therein. Enclose five two-cent stamps to the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Saved From The Grave.

"I had about given up hope after nearly four years of suffering from a severe lung trouble," writes Mrs. M. L. Dix, of Clarksville, Tenn. "Often the pain in my chest would be almost unbearable and I could not do any work, but Dr. King's New Discovery has made me feel like a new person. Its best medicine made for the throat and lungs. 'Obstinate coughs, asthmatic colds, hay fever, influenza, asthma, croup, bronchitis and hemorrhages, hoarseness and whooping cough yield quickly to this wonderful medicine. Try it 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists."

Difficult Scriptures On Hell.

A little book selling at only ten cents, postpaid, is having a very wide circulation—running up into the millions. It contains some very startling information respecting the meaning of the word Hell. It claims to demonstrate, both from the Hebrew and the Greek of our Bible, that Hell is NOT a place of eternal torment, but merely another name for the Tomb, the Grave, the State of Death. It affects to show that man was not redeemed from a far-off place of eternal torture, but quotes the Scriptures, proving that he was Redeemed from the Grave at the cost of his Redeemer's life, and that the Scriptural hope, both for the Church and the World, is a resurrection hope based upon the death and resurrection of Jesus. The book is certainly worth the reading. The information it furnishes is certainly valuable, far beyond its trifling cost. Order it at once from the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Demon Of The Air.

is the germ of La Grippe, that breathes in, brings suffering to thousands. Its after effects are weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys. The greatest need then is Electro Bitters, the splendid tonic, blood purifier and regulator of Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore health and good spirits after an attack of Grip. If suffering try them, Only 50c. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by all druggists.

The Care of the Blood for purification, finds voice in plumes, boils, scallow complexion, a jaundiced look, moth patches and blotches on the skin—all signs of liver trouble. But Dr. King's New Life Pills make rich red blood; give clear skin, rosy cheeks, fine complexion health. Try them. 50c at all druggists.

Heavy, impure blood makes a muddy, pimply complexion, headache, nausea, indigestion. This blood makes you weak, pale, sickly. Burdock Blood Bitters makes the blood rich, red, pure—restores perfect health.

CRISFIELD IS READY

For The Soft Crabs—A Very Large Industry—Profitable Season Forecasted.

Crisfield is preparing for the opening of the city's greatest sea food industry. When the delicious soft crabs begin to make their appearance at Crisfield, its inhabitants will be ready to greet them.
Crisfield is the crab center of the world, this market furnishing over 95 per cent of the soft crabs used in the United States. About the first of April a large number of Crisfield shippers opened their headquarters at Morehead City, Maryland and other points in North Carolina and the South, when the soft crab business opened in those sections. From these points the trade is furnished until the opening of the season in Crisfield, which occurs about May 5. However, it is expected that some shippers from this city will be made during the coming week as Crisfield "buy boats" will purchase the catch from the Bappahannock. That section will continue to furnish the market until the season is fairly under way at Crisfield.
Since the close of the oyster season some weeks ago Crisfield packers have been repairing their crab farms, building new floats and making other regular arrangements for the crab season. The box factories in and around Crisfield are running on full time with an increased force, making up thousands of shipping boxes, which will be used in the mammoth industry this year.
The thousands of catchers throughout the county have been equally busy getting ready. Boats are being painted, built and rebuilt, nets and other apparatus are being bought and put in place.
Those who are in touch with the situation say that the prospects for a very profitable season are most encouraging. It was pointed out that the last winter was not severe enough to kill any damaging amount of crabs.

SMOKES 110 MINUTES

1 Cigar. Record Breaker For Long Smoke Says "Don't Hurry."

Henry Schmitt, of Brooklyn, made a new long smoking record at Philadelphia Tuesday night, when he kept an ordinary cigar lighted for one hour and fifty minutes, ten minutes and thirty seconds longer than the record recently made by Abraham Fugle, of Phoenixville, Pa. He argues for the long smoke as the only truly enjoyable way. Mark Twain smoked 90 cigars a day. Under the Schmitt scheme he would not have smoked more than eight, smoking practically continuously for a waking day of 16 hours.
"It is all in knowing how to smoke a cigar," he said. "Very few men can smoke a cigar without getting a headache. The secret is in the way you smoke. Many men blame the brand of the cigar. It is all in the way you smoke. When the fault lies in the way you smoke, the cigar of medium size will usually smoke to burn for at least an hour without any effort being made to prolong it."

DISHES THAT ARE POPULAR IN THE EAST.

Chop Suey Has Become a Favorite in This Country—Needs Some Care
in Its Preparation—Japanese Rice.

Chop Suey.—Chop suey, which is one of the national dishes in China, is fast becoming a favorite food here, and while many of its ingredients are puzzling to the uninitiated, once mastered, this dish can be manufactured easily in any home kitchen. When made with young and tender pork as a foundation the dish is known on the Chinese bills of fare as "fine chop," made with chicken it is called "guy chop suey," and when with chicken and mushrooms, it has the title of "mo goo chop suey."

With each of these is served the Chinese condiment, brown and pungent, known as see yu, or see gow. It corresponds to our Worcestershire, and can be purchased from any Chinese dealer, as can the bean sprouts or water chestnuts that go with the dish. If it cannot be obtained, an excellent imitation may be made by mixing equal parts of Worcestershire sauce and Porto Rican molasses. Peanut oil is usually utilized in the making of chop suey, but olive oil can be substituted with good results. If you cannot obtain bean sprouts, wrap some rice in a wet towel a few days before the dish is to be prepared. If the towel is kept moist a sufficient quantity of rice sprouts may be obtained that will answer the same purpose.

To prepare chop suey with mushrooms for five persons, take one pound of the white meat of cold chicken or of young pig, and cut into slices about an inch long, half an inch wide and a quarter of an inch thick. Add two chickens' livers, gizzards and hearts, also sliced; two stalks of celery and a half ounce green ginger root. Put four ounces olive oil into a frying pan over the fire, and when hot add the meat, celery and ginger.

As soon as lightly colored, add two tablespoonsful vinegar, half a cup boiling water, a teaspoonful Worcestershire sauce, a half teaspoonful salt, red and black pepper, cinnamon and cloves to taste.

When the pork and giblets are nearly tender, add a small can mushrooms, a half cup bean sprouts (which you can get at any of the Chinese grocers), French green peas, string beans chopped fine or asparagus tips. If you use the bean sprouts they must not cook too long, as they are better when not more than half done. Drain off the superfluous liquor, add a teaspoonful of the brown sea yu sauce, and serve with bowls of boiled rice and unlimited tea.

Japanese Rice.—A Japanese cook, famous for the light, snowy appearance of his rice, washes the uncooked grains through several waters until not a trace of milkiness is seen in the water. To two cupsful of the rice he allows a quart of boiling water, cooking slowly for an hour without stirring. From time to time he shakes the kettle, tipping it from side to side. When the water is all absorbed he lets it stand on the back of the stove to steam and plump.—Elma Paddock Telford.

Culinary Hints.

Croustons for soup are most easily made by cutting stale bread about half an inch thick, buttering it thickly on both sides, cutting in half squares and baking in the oven until brown.

In preparing ingredients for chili sauce or other pickles if they are put up separately through the meat chopper, using the coarser teeth, much time is saved.

The secret of appetizing drinks is to have freshly boiled water for hot beverages and water that is freshly drawn for cold drinks.

A ham cooks most evenly on a gas stove, as the heat is more easily regulated. Never use a fork to a ham while cooking.

When making soups or sauces if a little flour is added to the milk it will prevent curdling.

Celery Sauce.

Prepare a smooth white sauce by blending over the fire two tablespoonfuls of butter and flour, then reducing with a pint of warm milk. Add a dozen stalks of celery that have been minced fine and cooked tender in just enough water to cover. Cook two minutes, season with salt and pepper and serve with boiled fowl.

French Mustard (Creole Style).

Work together three tablespoonfuls mustard and one cupful of sugar, add one egg and beat until smooth. Add little by little a cupful of vinegar, set over the fire and cook three or four minutes, stirring all the time. When cold add a tablespoonful of olive oil and beat all well together.

Scotch Shortcake.

Scotch shortcake is nothing more than real good pie crust, rolled out and spread with butter, sugar and a little cinnamon, folded over, and the butter, sugar and cinnamon repeated on top. Bake in a hot oven 10 or 15 minutes.

Spanish Rice.

Fry one or two onions until brown, add one pound round steak (put through grinder), stir in cupful (or more) of stewed tomatoes and an equal quantity of cold boiled rice; season with salt and pepper, stir until well mixed and cook.

VACATION DONE.

Home they're coming, thick and fast.
Vacation time is over;
Fun and frolic now is past.
Vacation time is over;
Good-bye 'tis to summer play.
To gay night and lazy day;
Now the piper is to pay,
Vacation time is over.

Mill and factory, office, store,
Vacation time is over,
Show, as in the workers' pour,
Vacation time is over;
Schoolroom doors are open, too,
School supplies are right on view,
Schoolboys, time of study rue,
Vacation time is over.

Over all the big broad land,
Vacation time is over,
Is the great home-coming band.
Vacation time is over;
As all bid their play good-bye,
Rises to the autumn sky
One stupendous, long-drawn sigh,
Vacation time is over!

Bright Boy.

The pretty Sunday school teacher, had been telling the class about the great Sahara desert.

"And, boys," she said in conclusion, "the camel can go eight days without water."

"That's nothing," spoke up Jimmy on the end seat. "I know some horses that go all the summer without water and carry people on their backs every day."

"Gracious, Jimmy! You mustn't exaggerate in Sunday school."
"I'm not exaggerating, ma'am. They are the flying horses on the summer park merry-go-round."

Best Fireside Brightener.

A lady going into the kitchen one morning was surprised to find her servant, a raw Irish girl, giving the range a final rub with part of the Weekly Mercury of that particular week.

"Norah!" she angrily exclaimed, "how dare you use that paper for such a purpose before anybody has had a chance to read it?"

"Shure, mum," answered Norah. "OI heard ye say that it was the best fireside brightener ye'd come across, so OI thought OI'd give it a trial, mum!"

A BORN DIPLOMAT.

Waggles—Please, ma'am, would you mind givin' me a few pennies 't git somethin' to eat?

Mrs. Wriak—No, I won't. You are the ugliest specimen of humanity I ever saw.

Waggles—I ain't so orful homely, ma'am. It's only in de presence uv such uncommon beauty dat I make sich a bad show.

Out of Fashion.

Boys of to-day are lucky boys.
I want to say to you;
Dads don't speak with a bootjack now
The way dads used to do.

Singing Lessons.

Mrs. Bilkins—Do you think it is worth while for my daughter to go on taking singing lessons? She has been at it for five years and cannot sing yet.

Prof. von Note—Did you expect her to learn to sing? She will never sing in sea side world.

"Then, why didn't you say so long ago?"

"I thought you merely wanted to strengthen her lungs."—Weekly Telegraph.

Ready with a Sneeze.

"I wonder why it is," remarked the fluffy-haired girl who writes type between her tri-daily stunts at the board, "that as a rule men laugh and women weep at weddings?"

"The fact that they are not the principals in the affair probably has something to do with it," answered the pessimistic old bachelor at the pedal extremity of the mahogany.

Much the Same.

"No," said the first dear girl, "I've no use for those summer young men. They remind me of Dresden china dolls."

"Because they are so beautiful?" queried dear girl No. 2.

"No," answered No. 1. "They get broke so easily."

Professional Influence.

"Well says she never knows how her fiancé will be from one day to another. Sometimes he is very warm in pressing his suit, and then he is quite cold."

"Tell Nell not to worry. You know, he is a weather expert."

Of Course Not.

"I see where a writer says: 'Good-bye to the fairy tale.'"

"Are all the married men dead?"

Hardest Ever.

"What is the kindest problem?"

"How to land one."

Cook in Comfort

You no longer need wear yourself out with the weakening heat of an intensely hot kitchen. You can cook in comfort.

Here is a stove that gives no outside heat. All its heat is concentrated at the burners. An intense blue flame (hotter than either white or red) is thrown upwards but not around. All the heat is utilized in cooking—none in outside heating.

New Perfection
Oil Cook-stove

entirely removes the discomfort of cooking. Apply a match and immediately the stove is ready. Instantly an intense heat is projected upwards against the pot, pan, kettle or boiler, and yet there is no surrounding heat—no smell—no smoke.

Standard Oil Company
(Incorporated)

Why? Because The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is scientifically and practically perfect. You cannot use too much wick—it is automatically controlled. You get the maximum heat—no smoke. The burner is simple. One wick with a cloth cleans it—consequently there is no smell.

The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is wonderful for year-round use, but especially in summer. Its heat operates upward to pan, pot, or kettle, but not beyond or around. It is useless for heating a room.

It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot. It has long turquoise-blue enamel chimneys. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM.

Is An Internal Disease And Requires An Internal Remedy.

The cause of Rheumatism and kindred diseases is an excess of uric acid in the blood.
This terrible disease this acid must be eliminated and the system so regulated that no more will be formed in excessive quantities. Rheumatism is an internal disease and requires an internal remedy. Rubbing with oil and liniment will not cure, affords only temporary relief at best, causes you to delay proper treatment, allows the malarial deposit to hold on you. Liniments may ease you, but they will not cure your Rheumatism. The pain will change its site or be returned as at last discovered a perfect and cure which is called "Rheumadine."
It is a powerful cure; we believe it will eliminate the malarial deposit, get at the cause, sweep the poisons out of the system, break up the malarial deposit, and make you well all "Rheumadine" strikes the root of the disease and removes its cause. This operates as a powerful cure. Get a bottle of "Rheumadine" at a drug store. In tables of Rheumatism, see if you write to Robert Clayton Kelly, Baltimore, Md. Trial bottle free

IN THE FOOTSTEPS OF KATY

By Eleanor H. Porter

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

Only Alma had lived—Alma, the last born. The other five, one after another, had slipped from loving clinging arms into the great Silence, leaving worse than a silence behind them; and neither Nathan Kelsey nor his wife, Mary, could have told you which hurt the most—the saying of a last good-by to a stalwart, grown lad of 20, or the folding of tiny, waxen hands over a heart that had not counted a year of beating. Yet both had fallen to their lot.

As for Alma—Alma carried in her dainty self all the love, hopes, tenderness, ambition, and prayers that otherwise would have been bestowed upon six. And Alma was coming home.

"Mary," said Nathan one June evening, as he and his wife sat on the back porch, "I saw Jim Hopkins terday. Katy's got home."

"Him?" the low rocker swayed gently to and fro. "Katy's been ter college, same as Alma, ye know."

"Yes; an'—an' that's what Jim was takin' 'bout. He was feelin' bad—powerful bad."

"Bad!" the rocker stopped abruptly. "Why, Nathan?"

"Yes; he—there was a pause, then the words came with the rush of desperation. "He said home wa'n't like home no more. That Katy was a good girl, an' they was proud of her; but she was terrible uppity." Jim had ter rig up nights now ter eat super-put on his coat an' a b'lied collar; an'
he says he's got so he don't dat ter open his head. They're all so, too—Mie Hopkins, an' Sue, an' Aunt Jane
—don't none of 'em dat ter speak."

"Why, Nathan!—why not?"

"Cause of—Katy. Jim says there don't nothin' they say suit Katy—'bout his wordin', I mean. She changes it an' tells 'em what they'd order said."

"Why, the saucy little baggage!"
the rocker resumed its swaying, and Mary Kelsey's foot came down on the porch floor with decided, rhythmic pats.

The man stirred restlessly.

"But she ain't saucy, Mary," he demurred. "Jim says Katy's that sweet an' pleasant about it that ye can't do nothin'." She tells 'em she's kerrectin' 'em for their own good, an'
that they need culturin'. An' Jim says she spends all o' meal-time tellin'
'bout the things on the table—salt, an' where folks git it, an' pepper, an' tumblers, an' how folks make 'em. He says at first 'twas kind o' nice an' he liked ter hear it; but now, seems as if he hain't got no appetite left ev'ry time he sets down ter the table.
He don't relish eatin' such big words an' queer names."

"An' that ain't all," resumed Nathan, after a pause for breath. "Jim can't go hoan' nor diggin' but she'll folter him an' tell 'bout the bugs an'
worms he turns up—how many legs they've got, an' all that. An' the moon ain't jest a moon no more, an'
the stars ain't stars. They're sp'eres an' planets with heatheathen names an' rings an' orbits. Jim feels bad—powerful bad—'bout it, an' he says he can't see no way out of it. He knows they hain't had much schoolin', any of 'em, only Katy, an' he says that sometimes he 'most wishes that—that she hadn't, neither."

Nathan Kelsey's voice had sunk almost to a whisper, and with the last word his eyes sent a furtive glance toward the stoop-shouldered little figure in the low rocker. The chair was motionless now, and its occupant sat picking at a loose thread in the gingham apron.

"I—I wouldn't 'a' spoke of it," stammered the man, with painful hesitation. "Only—well, ye see, I—you—"
he stopped helplessly.

"I know," faltered the little woman. "You was thinkin' of—Alma."

"She wouldn't do it—Alma wouldn't!" retorted the man, sharply, almost before his wife had ceased speaking.

"No, no, of course not; but—Nathan, ye don't think Alma'd ever be-shamed of us, do ye?"

"Course not!" asserted Nathan, but his voice shook. "Don't ye worry, Mary," he comforted. "Alma ain't a goin' ter do no kerrectin' of us."

"Nathan, I—I think that's 'co-rect-in'," suggested the woman, a little breathlessly.

The man turned and gazed at his wife without speaking. Then his jaw fell.

"Well, by sugar, Mary! You ain't a goin' ter begin it; be ye?" he demanded.

"Why, no, 'course not!" she laughed confusedly. "Come, it's time ter shut up the house."

The date of Alma's expected arrival was yet a week ahead. As the days passed, there came a curious restlessness to the movements of both Nathan and his wife. It was on the last night of that week of waiting that Mrs. Kelsey spoke.

"Nathan," she began, with forced courage, "I've been over to Mie Hopkins's—an' asked her what special things twas that Katy set such store
by. I thought maybe if we knew 'em beforehand, an' could do 'em, an'—"

"That's jest what I asked Jim terday, Mary," cut in Nathan, excitedly.

"Nathan, ye didn't, now! Oh, I'm so glad! An' we'll do 'em, won't we?
—jest to please her?"

"Course we will!"

"You see it's four years since she was here. Nathan, what with her teachin' summers."

"Sugar, now! Is it? It hain't seemed so long."

"Nathan," interposed Mrs. Kelsey, anxiously, "I think that 'twas ain't
—I mean aren't right. I—I—" orter say, "I haven't seemed so long."

The man frowned, and made an impatient gesture.

"Yes, yes, I know," soothed his wife; "but—well, we might jest as well begin now an' git used to it. It Mie Hopkins said that them two words 'hain't an' 'ain't' was what Katy hated most of anythin'."

"Yes; Jim mentions 'em, too," ac-knowledgeed Nathan gloomily. "But he said that even them wa'n't half so bad as his riggin' up nights. He said that Katy said that after the 'toll of the day' they must 'don fresh garments an' come ter the evenin' meal with minds an' bodies refreshed."

"Yes; an', Nathan, ain't my black silk—"

"Ahem! I'm a-thinkin' it wa'n't me that said 'ain't' that time," interposed Nathan, dryly.

"What? Nathan!—did I? O, dear, what will Alma say?"

"It don't make no difference what Alma says, Mary. Don't ye fret," returned the man with sudden sharpness, as he rose to his feet. "I guess Alma'll have ter take us 'bout as we be—'bout as we be."

Yet it was Nathan who asked, just as his wife was dropping off to sleep that night:

"Mary, is it three o' them collars
I've got, or four?—b'lied ones, I mean."

At five o'clock the next afternoon
Mrs. Kelsey put on the treasured black silk dress, sacred for a dozen years to church, weddings, and funerals. Nathan, warm and uncomfortable in his Sunday suit and stiff collar, had long since driven to the station for Alma. The house, brushed and scrubbed into a state of spotless order, was thrown wide open to welcome the returning daughter. At a quarter before six she came.

"Mother, you darling!" cried a voice, and Mrs. Kelsey found herself in the clasp of strong arms, and gasping at a flushed, eager face. "Don't you look good! And doesn't everything look good!" flattered the girl.

"Does it—I mean, do it?" quavered the little woman, excitedly. "Oh, Alma, I am glad ter see ye!"

Behind Alma's back Nathan flicked a bit of dust from his coat. The next instant he raised a furtive hand and gave his collar and neckband a savage pull.

At the supper-table that night ten minutes of eager questioning on the part of Alma had gone by before Mrs.
Kelsey realized that thus far their conversation had been of nothing more important than Nathan's rheumatism, her own health, and the welfare of Rover, Tabby, and the mare Topsy. Commensurate with the happiness that had been hers during those ten minutes came now her remorse. She hastened to make amends.

"There, there, Alma, I beg your pardon, I'm sure. I hain't—er—I haven't meant ter keep ye talkin' on such tri-flin' things, dear. Now talk ter us yer self. Tell us about things—anythin', —anythin' on the table or in the room," she said feverishly.

For a moment the merry-faced girl stared in frank amazement at her mother; then she laughed gleefully.

"On the table? In the room?" she an-retorted. "Well, it's the dearest room ever, and looks so good to me! As for the table—the rolls are feathers, the coffee is nectar, and the strawberries—well, the strawberries are just strawberries—they couldn't be nicer."

"Oh, Alma, but I didn't mean—"

"Tut, tut, tut!" interrupted Alma, laughingly. "Just as if the cook didn't like her handwork praised! Why, when I draw a picture—oh, and I haven't told you!" she broke off excitedly. The next instant she was on her feet. "Alma Mead Kelsey, illustrator; at your service," she announced, with a low bow. Then she dropped into her seat again and went on speaking.

"You see, I've been doing this sort of thing for some time," she explained,
"and have had some success in selling.
My teacher has always encouraged me, and, acting on his advice, I stayed over in New York a week with a friend and took some of my work to the big publishing houses. That's why I didn't get here as soon as Kate Hopkins did.
I hated to put off my coming; but now I'm so glad I did. Only think!
I sold every single thing, and I have orders and orders ahead."

"Well, by sugar!" ejaculated the man at the head of the table.

"Oh-h-h!" breathed the little woman opposite. "Oh, Alma, I'm so glad!"

In spite of Mrs. Kelsey's protests that night after supper, Alma tripped about the kitchen and pantry wiping the dishes and putting them away.

A week passed.

The days were spent by Alma in roaming the woods and fields, pencil and paper in hand; they were spent by her mother in the hot kitchen over a hotter stove. To Alma's protests and pleadings Mrs. Kelsey was deaf.
Alma's place was not there, her work was not house-work, declared Alma's mother.

On Mrs. Kelsey the strain was beginning to tell. It was not the work alone—though that was no light matter, owing to her anxiety that Alma's pleasure and comfort should find nothing wanting—it was more than the work.

Every night at six the anxious little woman rushed from her bedchamber and chicken-broiling and almost sick with fatigue, got out the black silk gown and the white lace collar and put them on with trembling hands.

Thus robed in state she descended to the supper-table, there to confront her husband still more miserable in the stiff collar and black coat.

Nor yet was this all. Neither the work nor the black silk dress contained for Mrs. Kelsey quite the possibilities of soul torture that were to be found in the words that fell from her lips. As the days passed, the task the little woman had set for herself became more and more hopeless, until she scarcely could bring herself to speak at all, so stumbling and halting were her sentences.

At the end of the eighth day came the culmination of it all. Alma, her nose sniffing the air, ran into the kitchen that night to find no one in the room, and the biscuits burning in the oven. She removed the biscuits, threw away the doors and windows, then hurried upstairs to her mother's room.

"Why, mother!"

Mrs. Kelsey stood before the glass, a deep flush on her cheeks and tears rolling down her face. Two trembling hands struggled with the lace at her throat until the sharp point of a pin found her thumb and left a tiny crimson stain on the spotless-ness of the collar. It was then that Mrs. Kelsey covered her face with her hands and sank into the low chair
by the bed.

"Why, mother!" cried Alma again, hurrying across the room and dropping on her knees at her mother's side.

"I can't, Alma, I can't!" moaned the woman. "I've tried an' tried; but I've got ter give up, I've got ter give up."

"Can't what, dearie?—give up what?" demanded Alma.

Mrs. Kelsey shook her head. Then she dropped her hands and looked fearfully into her daughter's face.

"An' ye father, too, Alma—he's tired, an' he can't," she choked.

"Tired what? What do you mean?"
With her eyes on Alma's troubled, amazed face, Mrs. Kelsey made one last effort to gain her lost position.
She raised shaking hands to her throat and fumbled for the pin and the collar.

"There, there, dear, don't ye fret," she stammered. "I didn't think what I was sayin'. It ain't nothin'—I mean it aren't nothin'—it ain't nothin'—oh-oh! she sobbed; "There, ye see, Alma, I can't, ye see, Alma, I can't, I can't.
It ain't no more use ter try! Down went the gray head on Alma's strong young shoulder.

"There, there, dear, cry away," comforted Alma, with loving pat. "It will do you good; then we'll hear what this is all about, from the very beginning."

And Mrs. Kelsey told her—and from the very beginning. When the telling was over, and the little woman, a bit breathless and frightened, sat waiting what Alma would say, there came a long silence.

Alma's lips were close shut. Alma was not quite sure, if she opened them, whether there would come a laugh or a sob. The laugh was uppermost and almost parted the firm-set lips, when a glance at the quivering face of the little woman in the big chair turned the laugh into a half-stifled sob. Then Alma spoke.

"Mother, listen, dear. Do you think a silk dress or a stiff collar can make you and father any dearer to me? Do you think an 'ain't' of a 'hain't' can make me love either of you any less? Do you suppose I expect you, after 10 years' service for-getters to be as careful in your ways and words as if you had spent those 50 years in training yourself instead of in training air children? Why, mother, dear, do you suppose that I don't know that for 20 of those years
you have had no thoughts, no prayer, save for me?—that I have been the very apple of your eye? Well, it's my turn, now, and you are the apple of my eye—you and father. Why, dearie, you have no idea of the plans
I have for you. There's a good strong woman comin' out o' the work for the kitchen work. Oh, it's all right," assured Alma, quickly, in response to the look on her mother's face. "Why,
I'm rich! Only think of those orders!
And then you shall dress in silk or velvet, or calico—anything you like, so long as it doesn't scratch nor prick," she added merrily, bending forward and fastening the lace collar. "And you shall—"

"Ma-ry!" It was Nathan at the foot of the back stairway.

"Yes, Nathan."

"Ain't it 'most supper time?"

"Bless my soul!" cried Mrs. Kelsey, springing to her feet.

"An' Ma-ry—"

"Yes."

"Hain't I got a collar—a b'lied one,
on the bureau up there?"

"No," called Alma, snatching up the collar and throwing it on to the bed.

"There isn't a sign of one there. Suppose you let it go to-night, dad?"

"Well, if you don't mind!"

A very audible sigh of relief floated up the back stairway.

Chinese Smuggled into Australia.

Australia is perturbed by the discoveries of Mr. Bachelier, the commonwealth minister for external affairs, who has been inquiring into the illegal influx of Chinese. There is a wealthy organization in China with agencies in all the principal Australian ports and with the connivance of ships' officers the systematic smuggling of Chinese into Australia has been carried on for a long time
