Title of Thesis / Dissertation

Publishing Your Thesis or Dissertation:

ProQuest Theses and Dissertations Database & ScholarWorks@UMBC

Congratulations on finishing your doctoral dissertation or master's thesis. As a condition of graduation, your work must be published. You fulfill that condition by submitting your document in PDF form to the University for approval, archiving, and publication through the Graduate School and ProQuest's UMI Dissertation Publishing program. ProQuest will keep a copy of your work in its commercial electronic database, ProQuest Theses and Dissertations Database and the Library will keep a copy in ScholarWorks@UMBC, available at <https://mdsoar.org/handle/11603/63>. ScholarWorks@UMBC is an open-access repository through which others will be able to access your work at no charge. The submittal process is described in detail at <http://gradschool.umbc.edu/graduation/dissertations/submit/>.

What is ProQuest?

ProQuest is a private company that maintains, through an arrangement with the Library of Congress, the bibliographic record for over 2 million master's theses and doctoral dissertations dating back to 1861. Those works are stored in the ProQuest Theses and Dissertations Database, a commercial full-text research database to which many university libraries subscribe. Nearly 700 institutions submit titles to the database.

In signing the submission contract with ProQuest, you authorize ProQuest to host your work and offer it for sale through its database and other online outlets, such as Amazon.com. You are entitled to receive an annual royalty payment of 10% of all income ProQuest receives from the sale of your work, payable in each year that the accrued royalties reach $10.00. Institutions that have "open access" subscriptions to ProQuest's Digital Dissertation have free access to the full electronic text of all documents in the database.

Additionally, for a fee, ProQuest will register copyright in your work with the Copyright Office of the Library of Congress. Note that as the author you hold copyright in your work regardless of whether it is registered. Registration may be useful in deterring persons from infringing your copyright and will allow you to seek monetary damages in a copyright infringement law suit.

What are the benefits of having my work available through ProQuest and ScholarWorks@UMBC?

- Your research can be found, read, and used by a global audience, including scholarly colleagues and potential publishers and employers.
- Your research can be found by most popular search engines, such as Google or Yahoo, as well as through special repository search engines.
- Increased accessibility to your research increases the chances of it being cited in other scholarly work. Access to your work is maintained with a permanent URL, to which you can refer and link from your CV, email messages, or web pages.

As the owner of copyright in your work, you have the exclusive right to reproduce, distribute, make derivative works based on, publicly perform and display your work, and to authorize others to exercise some or all of those rights. The agreement you execute to submit your work to ProQuest and ScholarWorks@UMBC is your authorization to allow them to exercise some of your rights under copyright. When you submit your work to the Graduate School you will choose what level of access to allow to your work via the ProQuest Theses and Dissertations Database and ScholarWorks@UMBC.

What are my choices regarding publishing?

A. Traditional Publishing

Your work will appear in the following ProQuest products: ProQuest Dissertations and Theses, Udini, and Dissertation Express. Your work will not appear in major search engine (Google, Yahoo, etc.) results. You will be eligible to receive royalties, and ProQuest will not charge you a fee.

B. Open Access Publishing Plus

ProQuest (in addition to UMBC) will make your work freely available on the web. Your work will appear twice in major search engine (Google, Yahoo, etc.) results. You will not be eligible to receive royalties and ProQuest will charge you $95.

What are my choices regarding access?

A. Make your work available via ProQuest and ScholarWorks@UMBC as soon as it is received

The abstract and full text of your work will be present in the ProQuest Theses and Dissertations Database for purchase, and will be freely available and searchable online via ScholarWorks@UMBC.

B. Restrict online publication of your work for either 1 or 6 years

You may place an embargo (a restriction) on electronic access to your work through the ProQuest Theses and Dissertations Database and ScholarWorks@UMBC for legitimate reasons. Patents or future publication, for example, might be jeopardized by providing unrestricted access (see below). Should you elect to restrict access to your work, your name, the title of your work, a description of your research, your advisor's name, and the abstract will be available via ProQuest and ScholarWorks@UMBC, but the full text version will not be available for viewing or download until the selected embargo period has passed.

C. Restrict online publication of your work indefinitely

You may place an indefinite embargo on your work. If you choose this option, your name, the title of your work, a description of your research, your advisor's name, and the abstract will be available via ProQuest and ScholarWorks@UMBC, but the full text version will not be available for viewing or download. This option requires the written approval of the Dean of the Graduate School. You may request the restriction be lifted at any time.

These choices only affect the electronic distribution of your thesis or dissertation document

Publication and Patent Issues

Patenting:

Under U.S. patent laws, public dissemination of patentable information, such as through publication or a seminar, affects the deadline for filing for patent protection in the U.S. and may eliminate your ability to acquire foreign patent rights. As a result, if you intend to seek patent protection for material covered in your thesis or dissertation, you may wish to request a delay in publication through ProQuest and ScholarWorks@UMBC. A one-year embargo is usually sufficient for patent purposes.

The Office of Technology Development (<http://www.umbc.edu/otd/>) may be able to help you with the patent process if you and the University jointly own the intellectual property rights in a patentable invention or if you as the sole owner of those rights assign them to the University. Consult UMBC's Policy on Intellectual Property, Sections VI and VII, at <http://umbc.edu/policies/pdfs/iv-3.20.01%20intellectual%20property%20policy.pdf>.

Publishing:

Professional journals have policies regarding the publication of articles that were previously published and revised versions of previously published articles. You should consult the author guidelines on publisher web sites to whom you are likely to submit your work before you complete the Thesis and Dissertation Electronic Publication Form. A one-year embargo on electronic publication is sufficient to comply with most publishers' policies regarding pre- posting of material.

If you intend to publish your research as a monograph, the process will be more complicated and longer than the process for publishing a professional article based on your thesis or dissertation. Again, you should consult publishers' policies and guidelines to determine if they affect publication of your thesis or dissertation in ProQuest and ScholarWorks@UMBC. A six-year embargo on electronic distribution should provide adequate time for prior monograph publication.

If you have any questions concerning the availability of your work on the ProQuest Theses and Dissertations Database or ScholarWorks@UMBC, please contact Michelle Flinchbaugh, Digital Scholarship Services, flinchba@umbc.edu.
