NOTICE.
WAS committed to my custody as a Runaway on the 15th March inst. a Negro who calls himself
HENRY JOHNSON,
Said fellow is five feet eight inches tall, dark complexion, appears to be about twenty-two years of age; clothing a roundabout grey cloth, and pantaloons of the same black cap, old shoes and stockings, and a Stone Cutter by trade. The owner of said fellow is hereby notified to come forward, prove property, and take him home, or he will otherwise be discharged agreeable to law.
R. WELCH, of Ben. Shiff, A. A. County.

PROSPECTUS.
The Subscriber proposes to publish, in Upper Maryland, Prince George's county, a weekly journal, to be called
THE BULLETIN.
In undertaking to supply this acknowledged desideratum to the populous and intelligent district in which the subscriber has the honor to reside, his hope of ultimate success is not its origin in sanguineousness of sentiment, but proceeds from the eminent advantages of its location. Published in the heart of a large and wealthy county, situated at a distance from the State and National capitals, facilities of an early communication of whatever may interest its patrons, particularly afforded to the Editor; and he may not hope to present to his readers much foreign information through the columns of his journal, not derivable from the journals, it is still certain that intelligence of a local nature, interesting to all, and important to many, and otherwise unobtainable, will by this means be communicated. It will also offer to those whose means are inadequate to the expense of the larger journals, at least a synoptical view of all the important information they contain; and he trusts that those of literary taste may somewhere find in its columns, articles not unworthy of the employment of their leisure. As in every publication which is to find success in popular support, must first be secured before public patronage can be expected, the Editor would here mark the outline of his design, with the full knowledge that he will constitute an ordeal, by which, to prove both its merit and the fidelity of its execution.

The Editor proposes to adapt his paper to the wants of those whom he immediately surrounds, and among whom he must naturally find the majority of his patrons: he knows that he is intelligent and inquiring.—The many department, shall, therefore, be as carefully regarded, and the most approved and foreign periodicals resorted to for the latest intelligence. He knows them to be patriotic, and that they feel a deep interest in the welfare of our common country. To give this sentiment to the extent of his abilities, his columns shall afford whatever intelligence or political character may be calculated to interest them. No man, with the faculty of thought, is at this crisis neutral in regard to the party distinctions now prevailing in our country, and the Editor does not wish to be accused of indifference.—They are the measures of the present administration. But having neither the temper nor the motive of a partisan, his comments on party movements shall be characterized by candor of argument, not violence or abuse. It is never has been his practice, so shall he never become his habit to deal in political abuse or party violence. He will cheerfully and candidly of his columns to communicate all parties—reserving to himself the privilege of rejecting such as are objectionable to him, or to tempt into exercise whatever may surround him, and with such assistance as he may deem proper to render to his patrons, he will endeavor to repay it, as he wishes not to be denied to his editorial labors.

The Bulletin will be published on Thursday each week. Terms of subscription $3 per annum. Specimens of the Bulletin will be sent to all who apply for them. The Bulletin will be published on Thursday each week. Terms of subscription $3 per annum. Specimens of the Bulletin will be sent to all who apply for them.

POETRY.

THE EVENING STAR.
An Ode by RICHARD NIMAN, Mariner,
A Lunatic in the Hospital of Philadelphia.

Oh Vernal lovely Evening Star!
Diffusing precious light afar,
How much superior is thy flame
To her's from whom thou talkest thy name,
She leadeth hapless man astray,
Thou lightest wanderer on thy way.
The mantle of the dark was spread,
The tempest roared around my head
As wearied, pensive and alone,
Through dreary wilds I journey'd on Implored for some gentle ray
To light a wanderer on his way.
When soon, with gladness and surprise
I saw thee in the western skies,
Choosing the dimmest gloom of night
With grateful, friendly, moderate light Complete as all the glare of day
To light a wanderer on his way.
Oh! thus, should anxious cares infuse,
Or jarring passions rend the breast,
And in dark tempests struggling roll,
May Reason open on the soul,
And with serene and sober ray
Conduct the wanderer on his way.
Let others toil for wealth or fame,
Or call ambition but a name,
Yet follow, what delusion yields
Unmindful of yon starry fields
The idler fancies such display
Misleads the wanderer from his way.
To them their pleasures I resign,
The Evening Star of Reason's mine:
With this no other light we need.
This best, man's destined path shall lead
To that cold tomb of kindred clay
Where ends the wanderer's earthly way.

*Had the Author not been deprived of Reason he would have felt that "the wanderer" needs the light of the Gospel.

From the Albany Argus.
THEY NEVER WILL BLOOM AGAIN.

They never will bloom again—
Youth's bright and glowing hours,
When Passion led his train Through Mirth's frolicsome bowers.
In autumn's blight or winter's night
They never will bloom again
They never may return—
Youth's warm alluring dreams;
Their lights no longer burn,
Quenched are their morning beams,
Their sheen hath fled—their promise dead,
They never may return!
They can deceive no more—
The loves of early youth;
Their melody is o'er,
And stilled the lips of truth.
The heart is cold, the form is old,
They can deceive no more;
They never shall decay—
The hopes that Heaven inspires;
All others may betray,
But these eternal fires
Live through all time, in every clime,
They never shall decay.

TOO SOON.

Too soon! too soon! how often that word
Comes o'er the spirit like a spell:
Awakening every mournful chord
That in the human heart may dwell!
Of hopes that perished in their noon—
Of youth decayed—too soon, too soon!
Too soon, too soon—it is a sound
To dim the sight with many a tear:
As bitterly we gaze around,
And find how few we love are here;
Ah! when shall we again commune
With those we lost too soon—too soon!
Too soon, too soon—how wild that tone
Bursts on our dearest hours of bliss,
And leaves us silent and alone,
To muse on such a theme as this:
No frown upon the quiet moon,
Whose parting light comes all too soon!
Too soon, too soon—if e'er were thine
The joys, the fears, the hopes of love;
If thou hast knelt before the shrine
Of beauty in some starlight grove;
Whose lips, young roses breathed of June,
Thou'rt weep those words—too soon, too soon!
Too soon is stamped on every leaf,
In characters of dim decay;
Too soon is writ in tears of grief!
On all things fading fast away!
Oh! there one terrestrial boon,
Our hearts lose not—too soon, too soon.

CHARM OF THE RATTLESNAKE.
An extract from Jemasse's, a Romance of South Carolina, by the author of Guy Rivers, &c.

"He does not come—he does not come," she murmured, as she stood contemplating the thick copse spreading before her, and forming the barrier which terminated the beautiful range of oaks which constituted the grove. How beautiful was the green and garniture of that little copse of wood. The leaves were thick, and the grass around lay folded over and over in bunches with here and there a wild flower gleaming from its green and making of it a beautiful carpet of the richest and most various texture.
A small tree rose from the centre of a clump around which a wild grape gadded luxuriantly;
and with an incoherent sense of what she saw,
she lingered before the little cluster, seeming to survey that which she had no thought for at the moment. Things grew indistinct to her wandering eye; the thought was turned inward; and the musing spirit denying the governing sense to the external objects and conductors, they failed daily to appreciate the forms that floated, and glided before them.
In this way, the leaf detached made no impression upon the sight that was bent upon it;
she saw not the bird, though it whirled, untrou-bled by a fear, in wanton circles round her head;
and the blacksnake with the rapidity of an arrow darted over her path without arousing a single terror in the form that otherwise would have shivered at its appearance. And yet, though thus indistinct were all things around her to the musing mind of the maiden, her eye was singularly impressed with one object, peering out at intervals, from the little bush beneath it. She saw, or thought she saw, at moments, through the bright green of the leaves, a star-like glance, a small bright ray, subtle, share, beautiful; an eye of the leaf itself darting the most searching looks into her own. Now the leaves shook and the vines waved elastically and in beautiful forms before her, but the star-like eye was there, bright and gorgeous, and still glancing up to her own. How beautiful how strange, did it appear to the maiden.

She watched it still with a dreaming sense,
but with a spirit strangely attracted by its beauty—with a feeling in which awe and admiration were equally commingled. She could have bent forward to pluck the gem-like thing from the bosom of the leaf in which it seemed to grow, and from which it gleamed so brilliantly; but once, as she approached, she heard a shrill scream from the tree above her; such a scream as the mock bird makes, when, angrily, it raises its dusky crest, and flaps its wings furiously against its slender sides. Such a scream seemed like a warning, and though yet unawakened to full consciousness, it repelled her approach. More than once in her survey of this strange object, had she heard that shrill note; and still had it carried to her ear the same note of warning, and to her mind the same vague consciousness of an evil presence. But the star-like eye was yet upon her own; a small, bright eye, quick like that of a bird, now steady in its place and she servant seemingly only of hers, now darting forward with all the clustering leaves above her, and shooting up towards her, as if wooing her to seize.

At another moment, rivetted to the vine which lay around it, it would whirl round and round, dazzlingly bright and beautiful, even as a torn playing boy; but in all this time, the glance was never taken from her own; there it grew, fixed;
a very principle of light; and such a light, a subtle, burning, piercing, fascinating light, such as gathers in vapour above the old grave, and binds us as we look—shooting, darting directly into her own, dazzling her gaze, defencing its sense of discrimination; and confusion strangely that of perception. She felt dizzy, for, as she looked, a cloud of colours, bright, gay, various colours, floated and hung so much like drapery around the single object that had so secured her attention and spell bound her feet.—
Her limbs felt momentarily more and more insecure; her blood grew cold, and she seemed to feel the gradual freeze of vein by vein, throughout her person.

At that moment a rustling was heard in the branches of a tree beside her, and the bird, which had repeatedly uttered a single cry, as it were of warning above her, flew away from his station with a scream more piercing than ever.—
This movement had the effect, for which it seemed really intended, of bringing back to her a portion of that consciousness she seemed so totally to have been deprived of before. She strove to move from before the beautiful and terrible presence, but for a while she strove in vain. The rich, star-like glance still rivetted her own, and the subtle fascination still kept her bound. The mental energies, however, with the moment of their greatest trial now gathered suddenly to her aid, and with a desperate effort, but with a feeling still of most annoying uncertainty and dread, she succeeded partially in the attempt, and leaned backward against the neighbouring tree, feeble, tottering, and depending upon it for that support which her own limbs almost entirely denied her. With her movement, however, came the full development of the powerful spell and dreadful mystery before her.

As her feet receded, though but a single pace, to the tree against which she now rested; the audibly articulated ring, like that of a watch when wound up with the verge broken, announced the nature of that splendid yet dangerous presence; in the form of the monstrous rattlesnake, now, but a few feet before her lying coiled at the bottom of a beautiful shrub, with which, to her dramatic eye, many of its own glorious hues had been associated. She was conscious enough to discriminate and to perceive, but terror had denied her the strength necessary to fly from her dreadful enemy. There still the eye glared beautifully bright and piercing upon her own; and, seemingly in a spirit of sport, he slowly wound himself from his coil, then immediately, the next moment, again gathered himself into its muscular masses; the rattle still slightly ringing at intervals, & giving that paralyzing sound, which, once heard, remembered forever.

The reptile all this while appeared to be conscious of,
and to sport with, while seeking to excite her terrors.
Now with its flat head, distended mouth, curving neck, would it dart forward its long form towards her, its fatal teeth, unfolding on either side of its jaws, seeming to threaten her with instantaneous death, while its powerful eye shot forth glances of that fatal power of fascination, malignantly bright, which, by paralyzing with a novel form of terror and of beauty, may readily account for the spell it possesses of binding the feet of the timid, and denying to fear even the privilege of flight. Then,
the next moment, recovering quickly, it would resume its folds, and with arching neck, which now, glittered like a bar of brazen copper, and fixed eye, continue, calmly as it were, to contemplate the victim of its seducing venom, the pendulous rattle still ringing the death note as if to prepare the conscious mind for the fate which is at hand. His various folds were now complete —the coil forming a series of knots; the muscles now, and then rising rigidly into a hill, now corded down by the pressure of another of its folds into a valley. These suddenly unclasp, in the general effort to strike its enemy, give it that degree of impetus which enables it to make its stroke as fatal, at the full extent of its own length, as when, suddenly invaded, its head is simply elevated and the blow given.

The glance of Boss Mathews at this moment upon her enemy, assured her that the sport of the deadly reptile was about to cease. She could not now mistake the fearful expression of its eye. She strove to scream, but her voice died away in her throat. Her lips were sealed, she sought to fly, but her limbs were palsied, she had nothing left of life but its consciousness & in despair of escape, forced from her by the accumulated agony, she sunk down upon the grass before her enemy; her eyes however still upon, and still looking upon, those which he directed for ever upon them. She saw him approach —now advancing, now receding—now swelling in every part with something of anger, while his neck was arched beautifully like that of a wild horse under the curb: until at length, tired as it were of play, like the cat with its victim, she saw the neck growing larger and becoming completely bronzed when about to strike, the huge jaws unclosing almost directly above her, the long unbalanced fang charged with venom, protruding from the cat verminous mouth—and she saw no more! Inseparably came to her aid, and she lay almost lifeless under the very folds of the monster.

In that moment the cope parted, and an arrow, piercing him through and through the neck, bore his head forward to the ground alongside of the maiden, while his spinal extremities, now unfolding in his own agony were actually, in part, resting upon her person.
The arrow came from the fugitive Occaneechee, who had formerly reached the spot, in season, on his way to the black house. He rushed from the cope, as the snake lay with a sick, fearfully approached him where he lay waiting upon the grass. Seeing him advancing, the courageous reptile made an effort to regain its coil, and was shaking the fearful rattle violently at every evolution which he took for that purpose; but the arrow caught him passing through his neck, opposed an insuperable obstacle to the endeavor; and finding it hopeless, he turned round, and striking his hands, so that they were riveted in the wound they made, into a susceptible part of his own body, he threw himself over upon his back with a single convulsion, and a moment after lay dead upon the person of the maiden.

From the London Herald. ADVENTURES OF A FEMALE SAILOR.

The following adventures of a young female,
the subject of the present article, are so truly genuine, and so extraordinarily marvellous, that we cannot refrain from recommending the perusal of them to the attention of our readers.
An incorrect statement of the facts appeared in the papers during the early part of the week, but the annexed account being publicly adduced before the Lord Mayor, leaves no doubt as to its authenticity. His Lordship, having read the statement, directed M'Lean, the inspector of the city police, to make inquiry into the circumstances, in order that, if the girl required assistance, it might be rendered to her without subjecting her to annoyance. M'Lean thought that the best thing he could do, after having heard the story of the girl from her own lips, was to bring her to the Mansion-house, and introduce her to his Lordship. He accordingly appeared before the Lord Mayor, accompanied by the girl, the captain of the vessel in which she came to London, and several gentlemen who felt an interest in the remarkable details of the fact.

Captain M'Entire, of the Sarah from Belfast stated that he met the girl, whose name is Anne Jane Thornton, at St. Andrew's in North America. She was dressed in sailor's clothes, and had all the appearance of having been brought up to that employment. He engaged her at nine dollars a month, to act as cook and steward, and considered that she was what she seemed to be until a few days before the arrival of the vessel in the port of London. It appeared that some of the crew had suspected her before she was seen washing in her berth, from the circumstances of her having repeatedly refused to drink grog.

The Lord Mayor.—It has been reported that she was ill treated by her captain and the crew.
—I wish particularly to be informed upon the point.

Captain M'Entire said that he would call upon the girl to say whether he had not uniformly treated her with kindness, and whether, when her sex was discovered, the degree of kindness and care was not increased.

The girl declared that Captain M'Entire had acted towards her with humanity; and had desired her to complain to him if any of the crew treated her harshly.—She had been, in the course of the voyage, struck by some of the sailors, because she could not work as hard as they did—a thing she found it difficult to do in a gale of wind; but she did not tell the captain, as she determined to endure as much as possible without grumbling.

The Lord Mayor.—It is impossible that this mere girl—for she cannot be more than sixteen or seventeen years of age—performed the duties of a seaman!

Captain M'Entire.—It is, my lord. She performed them to admiration. She would run up to hand the topgallant-sail in any sort of weather, and we had a severe passage. Poor girl, she had a hard time of it. She suffered greatly from the wet; but she bore it excellently, and was a capital seaman.

The Lord Mayor.—Is the account of the romantic pursuit of a person she was said to be attached to, correct? It is true that she went to America after the captain who was said to be her sweetheart?

M'Lean said that the account she had given to him corresponded with that which appeared before the public, but she would herself mention the particulars.

Capt. M'Entire stated that he had no doubt of the correctness of her statement. She was not at all given to loquacity; on the contrary, she did the duty of a seaman without a murmur, and had infinitely better use of her hands than of her tongue.

This description of the female sailor seemed to be accurate. Her hands appeared as if they were covered with thick brown leather gloves, and it was by repeated questioning, the Lord Mayor got from her the facts of which the following is the substance:

Anne Jane Thornton stated that she is in the seventeenth year of her age; her father, who is now a widower, took her and the rest of his family from Gloucestershire, where she was born, to Donegal, when she was six years old.
He was the owner of stores in that part of Ireland, and in good circumstances, and was always affectionate to her. She regretted that she had quitted her home, for her departure, of which she had given no previous notice to her father, must have caused him many a sorrowful hour.
When she was only thirteen years old, she met Captain Alexander Burke, whose father resided in New York, and was the owner of vessels there; and before she was fifteen they became strongly attached to each other. Soon after Alexander Burke was obliged to go to New York, and she took the resolution to follow him.
She quitted her father's house, accompanied by a maid servant and a boy, and having procured a cabin boy's dress, she exerted herself to obtain a passage to America. She succeeded in her object. The servant maid and boy took leave of her immediately upon her embarking, the latter being charged with a message to her father, informing him of her intention. By degrees she became reconciled to the labours of her new employment, but she beheld with joy the shores of New York, where she thought her labours would terminate. The moment she landed she went off in the cabin boy's dress, to the house of Captain Burke's father, and said that she had worked under the captain's orders and wished to be engaged by him again. It was by the father of the young man that she was informed of the event which placed the eternal barrier between them, and she retired from the house disconsolate. America was, however, no place to look for sympathies. In the belief that the sea, which no doubt her affection for Burke recommended to her, was a more probable mode of existence than she could adopt in the dress of her sex, she applied and obtained a situation as cook and steward in the Adelaide, and subsequently in the Rover, in which latter vessel she sailed to St. Andrew's where she fell in with Capt. M'Entire. The Captain of the Rover had engaged to take her to Belfast, but he received an order from the owners to sail for the West Indies; and as she was resolved to return to her father as soon as possible, she refused to accompany him.—For 31 months she had been engaged in these remarkable adventures, and participated in the most severe toils of the crews, of which she formed part.

The Lord Mayor.—Are you not weary of so harrassing a life?

The girl.—Yes, I am anxious to get home. I hope and believe my father will forgive me for the sorrow I have caused him. I have had my own sorrows too.

Captain M'Entire.—I am anxious to pay her the wages I owe her, and I never had any idea of giving her less than I agreed to pay.

The Lord Mayor.—How did it happen that you fancied the sailor's dress, well knowing that by assuming the appearance of one, you pledged yourself to perform such terrible duties.

The girl.—I couldn't think of any other way, and I did the duties as well as I could—I underwent a good deal. I travelled from East Port, in North America, to St. Andrew's by myself, a distance of 70 miles, through the woods. I walked all the way.

The Lord Mayor.—And without sustaining any injury?

The girl.—I received none. I knew the sailor's clothes would carry me through safe, and at St. Andrew's I met Captain M'Entire.

Captain M'Entire.—It was but a few days ago I learned that we had a girl on board. I was the last person in the vessel who was informed of the fact, and I could scarcely credit the mate when he told me of it. I can bear testimony to the extraordinary propriety of her conduct, and I ask her again whether I have not acted properly towards her, and particularly from the moment
I became acquainted with the secret which she was so anxious not to have disclosed.

The girl said that she was in gratitude bound to acknowledge the kindness and humanity of the captain, who instantly paid her all that was due to her.

The Lord Mayor.—I shall give directions that you be taken care of until I hear from your father, to whom I shall write to-night. You have done him great wrong by abandoning him under any pretence, but you have suffered bitterly for your disobedience, and I trust that you will, by your future attention and care, prove to him that your filial affection is as strong as your courage in such circumstances of danger and toil as you have

EDITED BY

THE REV. RICH'D. COTTEMOLE, B. D.

AND

THE REV. HENRY STEBBING, M. A. NO other country is so rich as England in Sacred Literature. Her greatest Poets and Philosophers have shared with her Divines, in setting forth and establishing the truths of Revelation; while her Divines have been distinguished alike by the copiousness and the depth of their learning.

The soundness of character thus given to the standard Theology of England has, through a variety of circumstances, been happily prevented from degenerating into the harshness of scholasticism; and thus the whole series of our 'Sacred Classics,' is a well of truth and consolation, as open to the general reader as to the most learned student.

It is intended to comprise in this collection, the best works of all the most celebrated writers, whose labours have been devoted to the elucidation and practical enforcement of the principles of revealed truth, whether in their application to the immortal interests of individuals, or to the order and well-being of society. Treatises on the Doctrines, Morality, and Evidences of Christianity, which have received the permanent stamp of general approbation; select Sermons of the most eminent Divines; the most interesting specimens of Religious Biography; and the choicest examples of Devotional and Sacred Poetry, will succeed each other in the order which may be judged most conducive to the benefit and gratification of the reader.

To the productions of each author, or to each separate production, as the case may seem to require, will be prefixed an Introductory Essay, pointing out their characteristic excellencies; and, in some instances, comprehending a biographical sketch of the Author, with remarks on the state of religion in his times.

It is the desire of the Proprietors, in undertaking 'THE CABINET LIBRARY OF DIVINITY,' to present the collection to the public at such a price, that he who purchases at present the cheapest of ephemeral publications, may, for the same money, possess himself of works which cannot fail to afford him guidance and support in the highest exercises of his faculties, and under every vicissitude of life.

The work will be handsomely printed in Foolscap 8vo. on good paper, cold-pressed, neatly bound in Morocco Cloth, lettered; and published (in Volumes of about 400 pages each) on the first day of every month.

Price, Three Shillings and Sixpence: Forming the cheapest series of works ever offered to the public.

The following names of Authors whose works are intended for publication, is submitted in evidence of the impartiality of the selection:

GREAT NATIONAL WORK.

AMERICAN MAGAZINE Of Useful and entertaining Knowledge. To be illustrated with numerous Engravings By the Boston Bewick Company.

THE success which has attended the publication of the best Magazines from the English Press, has led to preparation for issuing a periodical more particularly adapted to the wants and tastes of the American public. While it will be the object of the proprietors to make the work strictly what its title indicates, it will, nevertheless, contain all articles of interest to its patrons which appear in foreign Magazines.

Extensive preparations have been entered into, both with artists and authors, to furnish from all parts of the Union, drawings and illustrations of every subject of interest, which the publishers confidently believe will enable them to issue a work honourable to its title, and acceptable to the American People.

The first number of the American Magazine, illustrated with upwards of twenty splendid engravings, will appear on or before the first of September, and be continued monthly, containing between forty and fifty imperial octavo pages, and be furnished at the low price of two dollars per annum. It will comprise—

Portraits and Biographical Sketches of distinguished Americans; Views of Public Buildings, Monuments and Improvements; Landscape Scenery; the boundless variety and beauty of which, in this country, will form an unceasing source of instruction and gratification; Engravings and descriptions of the character, habits &c. of Beasts, Birds, Fishes and Insects, together with every subject connected with the Geography, History, Natural and Artificial resources of the country, illustrated in a familiar and popular manner.

FREEMAN HUNT, Agent of the Boston Bewick Company 47 Court st. Boston, July 17.

Editors throughout the United States who will give the above Prospectus a few insertions in their respective papers, shall be entitled to one year's subscription to the same.

WALDIE'S

CIRCULATING LIBRARY.

BUBBLES FROM THE BRUNNENS OF NASSAU,

A description of the fashionable watering places in Germany, by an old man, will form the commencement of the fourth volume of Waldie's Library.

This will be followed, at an early day, by the Memoirs of Henry Massera de la Tuile, who was confined for thirty five years in the different State Prisons in France, now first translated into English.

The works published in the current volume, now on the point of completion, are the following:—

Krutzner, or the German's Tale, a novel, by the author of Canterbury Tales. Memoirs of Sir James Campbell, of Ardinglass; written by himself: a very piquant book, containing anecdotes of most of the distinguished individuals of the last sixty years. Good Sir Walter; a tale by the author of Family Portraits.

The Broken Heart; a dramatic sketch, from the Italian.

Rome in the Nineteenth Century; in a series of letters written during a residence in that city, by a Lady.

The Deaf and Dumb Pages; a Tale. Anecdotes of the Court of Louis the XIV. by the Duke of St. Simon.

The Black Watch; an Historical Novel, by the author of the Donnie's Legacy; &c. &c. One of the best novels, say the London Magazines, of the present day.

Tudor's new book of Travels in Mexico and Cuba.

Allan Cunningham's Biographical and Critical History of Literature for the last fifty years.

Helen, a Novel, by Maria Edgeworth. Journal of a West India Proprietor, kept during a residence in the Island of Jamaica, by the late Matthew G. Lewis, Esq. M. P. author of the Monk, &c.

The Curate's Tale, or Practical Joking; from a new work entitled Nights of the Round Table.

The Three Westminster boys, or Cowper, Lord Chancellor Thurlow, and Warren Hastings, contrasted; from the same.

A Narrative of the Shipwreck of the Antelope at Pelew, in 1783, and a brief but accurate account of Prince Le Bo.

All the above cost in the "Library" but $2.50!!!

Office No. 207 Chesnut street, below 7th. Subscriptions to Waldie's Select Circulating Library which is published every week, at $5 per annum, thankfully received by

FOR A QUARTERLY REVIEW, FOR A PER ANNUM.

THE above Journal is already so well known to the public, that little need be said of their respective merits.

The well sustained reputation of the London QUARTERLY, not only as an able defender of Tory principles, and the old order of things, but as the wittiest and most entertaining of Reviews, will always command the attention of the literary and scientific.

The EDINBURGH, celebrated for the vigor, learning and acuteness which its articles display, conducted by some of the principal literary men of the modern Athens, is an equally powerful champion of the moderate Reform party.

The FOREIGN QUARTERLY occupies a neutral ground in Politics, and is devoted to continental literature.

The WESTMINSTER is but little known in this country. It may be considered as the advocate of the Radicals, and the mouth piece of Benthamism. It represents the principles of a party already numerous in England, and fast increasing in the United States.

The numbers will be put to press immediately after they shall be received from Europe, and will contain the entire matter of the above works; making four annual volumes of upwards of six hundred pages.

They will be executed in a good style, and be printed in a shape but little differing from that of the European editions.

The price will be $8 per annum, payable three months after the delivery of the first number. The English copies cannot be had for less than $30. Of the three at present republished, two of them alone cost $10.

Any individual procuring our subscribers, and remitting $10 on the receipt of the first Number, will be allowed an additional copy.

Subscription papers to be returned, and all communications to be addressed, post paid, to Theodore Foster, Albany, N. Y.

COMPANION TO WALDIE'S LIBRARY.

The cheapest reprint from English Periodicals ever offered to the public.

BEFORE the Select Circulating Library had been long in existence, it was discovered that there was still something wanting—that many occurrences in the literary world must pass unknown, as regarded our agency without an extension of the plan. To establish a fuller medium of communication and supply the desideratum, the Journal of Belles Lettres was added; which we have reason to believe has afforded general satisfaction. The very liberal patronage extended to the Library induced the proprietor to give that gratuitously as an evidence of his acknowledgments.

More extended experience has shown other desiderata which the "Companion" is intended to supply. While reading for the "Library" a large mass of material accumulates on the hands of the editor, of an interesting, entertaining, and instructive description, such as would properly come under the designation of Magaziniana, interspersed with the Reviews from the English Quarterlies. To publish every thing of this nature which we deem desirable would encroach too much on the columns of the "Library" designed for books, and yet to pass them by is constantly a subject of regret.

To concentrate, therefore, the publication of Books entire, Reviews, lists of new works, the choicest contributions to Magazines, &c. &c. &c. the "Companion to Waldie's Library" will be offered to the patronage of the present subscribers and the public at large. It is believed that with the "Library," the "Journal," and the "Companion," such an acquaintance with the literature of the age may be cultivated as to leave little further to be desired. Being all published from the same office, more facility offers for subscribing, and having fewer people to deal with, mistakes are less liable to occur, and more readily corrected when they do. The short interval of two weeks between the publication of each number, it is thought too, will be an advantage over monthlies and quarterlies.

The following plan is respectfully submitted.

1. The "COMPANION" will contain the earliest possible reprints of the best matter from the British periodicals.

2. It will be issued every fortnight, and the form will be the same as that of the Library—each number containing sixteen pages—thus, every six months, giving thirteen numbers, which can be bound with the Library at little or no more expense, and making a better sized volume; and to those who do not take the Library itself, a volume every year, of 416 quarto pages of the size of the present.

3. The price will be three dollars for a subscriber—five dollars for two—clubs five and upwards will be supplied at two dollars each.

4. As the work will not be commenced, unless a sufficient patronage be obtained, no payment is required at present, only the name, sent free of postage. Those wishing to support the publication will be pleased therefore to announce their intention as early as possible, as it is intended to commence the work on the first of January next. On the issuing of the second number payment will be expected, as its appearance will evince a sufficiency of patronage.

The proprietor of the "Select Circulating Library," fully aware from experience of the advantages to the public of the rapid diffusion of cheap and select literature, has been induced to add the important features to the work, and of course leaves it optional with the present subscribers and others to take it or not.

It is confidently believed, that, with the attention on the part of the Editor, who has already at hand the material for such a work, all the really valuable matter of the English literary and amusing publications may be comprised in this form at a rate of subscription and postage, so trifling as scarcely to be felt. It will form the cheapest reprint of reviews and magazines ever attempted in any country; a comparison with others is unnecessary here to enter upon, the "Library" itself being the best test by which to judge of the difference between an octavo and a quarto page. It will be the study of the Editor to embody a record of the day, adapted to the wants of this country, which can have no competitor for value or cheapness; how far he is likely to do this he must leave at present to the decision of his readers.

Clubs of five individuals, who subscribe to the "Library" and "Companion" both, will obtain the two for six dollars, the postage (a very important consideration) to the most distant post office, on the two, will be one dollar and ninety-five cents, divided into seventy-eight payments, and half that sum for 100 miles or a less distance from Philadelphia, while the same matter, in the usual American reprints of reviews and magazines in octavo form would be eighteen dollars, and the postage as three to one. We make this assertion advisedly.

Subscriptions to the "Companion," will be taken either with or without the "Library."

The proprietor trusts that his punctuality and exactness in executing his part of the contract in the publication of the "Library," will be considered a sufficient guarantee of the completion of his proposed undertaking.

PROSPECTUS.
The undersigned proposes to publish, in the City of Annapolis, Prince George's County, a weekly journal, to be called
THE BULLETIN.
The object of the publication is to supply the want of a paper to the populous and intelligent district in which the subscriber has the honor to reside, his hope of ultimate success is not in vain, as the publication is the result of his own efforts, and the changes in the appearance of the work will be as follows:

1. It will be regularly and promptly published.
2. Will be uniformly and handsomely printed.
3. On better paper.
4. Will be considerably enlarged.

As the sale of the work has increased, Mr. Littell has always been desirous of devoting the enlarged profits to its improvement—and although he does not wish the appearance of the next volume to be considered as entirely carrying out his plan, he trusts that the subscribers will be convinced, upon comparing it with any other work, that it is richly worth the price asked for it.

We shall not have satisfied our own wish, in respect to this work, until it shall be so far enlarged and improved as to make it clear to every purchaser that he will receive all that is desirable in an American reader from all the Foreign Periodicals. That we can do so in a single work, by making it contain four or five times as much matter as an ordinary periodical, we have no doubt.

A great part of most of the Reviews and Magazines is composed of inferior articles, and we confidently appeal to those readers of the Museum who have been in the habit of looking over the British Journals, whether we have not already, in a very great degree, succeeded in copying all that was worth preservation.

As the work will now be considerably enlarged, we shall be able more fully to accomplish this object.
In order that he may, by frequent journeys from home, be the earlier able to finish all other business, and devote himself exclusively to the Museum, Mr. Littell has made arrangements with the Editor of Wallie's Library to edit this work after December, 1834. However deficient the proprietor may be in other qualifications, he has always felt so zealous an affection for the Museum that he would not be willing to commit it, even for a time, to the care of another, were he not confident that the facilities, the experience and the ability of the new Editor, will render it more worthy of the patronage of the public than it has heretofore been. No change takes place in the Proprietorship.
Philadelphia, April 9.

Specimen Numbers may be seen at the Office of the Md. Gazette.

LITTELL'S MUSEUM OF FOREIGN LITERATURE, SCIENCE AND ART.

Patent.—Six Dollars a year, in advance—seven dollars and a half, if not in advance.
Postage.—Five sheets, under 100 miles 71 cents; over 100 miles, 121 cents.
This work will be sent to any Post Office in the United States, carefully wrapped up, upon receipt of five dollars in part payment. A few complete sets are for sale.

ENLARGED SERIES OF THE MUSEUM.

MR. LITTELL has much pleasure in announcing to the patrons of the Museum, that he has made arrangements for the future publication of the work in a style much superior to the present—and nearly approaching what he has always desired that it should appear in. The circulation of the work is now so large, as to make it important to the proprietor that he should be able to give his whole attention to it. This has hitherto been prevented by the care and labor attendant upon a multifarious and widely extended business. With the view of completing more quickly the publication of Lady's Portraits and Memoirs of Illustrious and Noble Characters, (a splendid work now in hand)—of effecting a settlement of accounts extending over the whole of the United States—and of making arrangements in all parts of the country for the vigorous prosecution of the publication of the Museum, he has made a contract with Mr. Adam Waldie of this city to print the work, attend to its distribution, and manage all the financial concerns appertaining to it after the present year.

Mr. Waldie is a practical printer, not surpassed in taste by any other in the country; and as he is advantageously and generally known as the publisher of the Select Circulating Library, it is supposed that he will have it in his power greatly to promote the sale of the Museum. He has contracted to issue it promptly, and thus will be corrected the greatest fault which has heretofore attended its management. The changes in the appearance of the work will be as follows:

1. It will be regularly and promptly published.
2. Will be uniformly and handsomely printed.
3. On better paper.
4. Will be considerably enlarged.

As the sale of the work has increased, Mr. Littell has always been desirous of devoting the enlarged profits to its improvement—and although he does not wish the appearance of the next volume to be considered as entirely carrying out his plan, he trusts that the subscribers will be convinced, upon comparing it with any other work, that it is richly worth the price asked for it.

PROSPECTUS OF THE EXTRA GLOBE.

The undersigned propose to issue the first number of a new series of the EXTRA GLOBE, on Monday, the 25th of May next, and to publish it weekly for six months, making twenty-six numbers; the last to contain an Index to the whole. It will be printed upon fine double-royal paper, made up in quarto form, like the Extra and Congressional Globe published by us last year. The 26 numbers will make 416 quarto royal pages.

It will contain the principal original articles of the Daily and Semi-Weekly Globes, notices of the public meetings, the elections, and public proceedings in every state in the Union, in relation to the canvass for the next Presidency—a contest which the indications of the present year will go far to decide.

The first number will contain the Proceedings of the Democratic National Convention, to be held at Baltimore on the 20th of next month. An excellent Reporter has already been engaged to report the Proceedings of the Convention, and the Speeches which may be made on the occasion.

We request the favour of those friends to whom this Prospectus may be sent, to circulate it, for the purpose of obtaining subscribers. A copy of the work will be sent to the newspapers that copy this Prospectus.

Subscribers should forward their names in time to reach us before the 25th May. If they do not, we may not be able to furnish them with all the numbers; because the work is set at so low a price, that we cannot afford to reprint any number that may be exhausted.

TERMS:
One Dollar per copy, in advance.
Eleven copies will be furnished for Ten Dollars; twenty-two copies for Twenty Dollars, and so on in proportion.

The price of this paper is so low, that we cannot afford to open accounts with those who subscribe for it. Therefore, no attention will be paid to any order, unless the money accompanies it.

POETRY.

From Palmer's American Daily Advertiser.

GENTILITY—WHAT IS IT?
Similarity of condition or state depends very little on similarity of external condition of circumstance, and they who refuse to seek sympathy out of a circle so drawn, and take note of no distinctions but such as accident arbitrarily forms, are the vilest of slaves or the wildest of errorists. A gentleman is one whose spirit is imbued with, and whose life is characterized by humanity and kindness toward all who wear the human form. This contradistinguishes him from the rude, sour, selfish, dogmatic and furious fool who indiscriminately rends and tears to pieces all that differs from himself. An ancient has described him by a line—"nil me humanum alienum puto"—"I think nothing foreign to myself which is human." He is yet more perfectly described in this passage of scripture—"Diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord"—for the service of the Lord implies freedom from error and vice. Here is our fair correspondent's notion of a Lady.

THE LADY.
Lady—from two Saxon words, leaf signifying a leaf, and dean, a deity.

This title originated in the ancient custom among charitable ladies of noble birth, dispensing leaves of bread at their estate gates every morning, to the poor of their neighborhood.

Water the maiden's raven hair—
And let not golden curls be rare,
And point her stately neck of snow
To diamond and the ruby glow.

And gently robes her form unfold,
Studded with clasp of pearls and gold,
White beauty like a diadem,
Lends brilliancy to pearl and gem.

There, at the father's side to wait,
Where beguiling age and childhood wait,
Each born to teach our maiden stands,
Dispensing bread with liberal hands.

Is it because her face is fair,
Or that she dwells in lofty hall,
That they the night a lady call?

O no, for these she may not claim
The honours that attend her name,
This gentle heart, and this pure soul,
Which in her deeds of love are known.

The maiden who, midst pomp and state,
Still makes the wanderers at the gate
With melting heart and generous hand,
They call the LADY of the land.

The Rev. W. Bowles, whose literary controversy with Lord Byron is well remembered, has not thought it beneath him to devote a portion of his poetical talents to the understanding of children. The following is from a little book of moral and religious verses he has devoted to them:

STAR-LIGHT FROST.
The stars are shining over head,
In the clear frosty night,
So will they shine when we are dead,
As countess and as knight.

For let of the time, and small the space,
That 'tween the present have,
Ere they conclude their various race,
In silence and the grave.

INCIDENTS.

A WHITE SLAVE.
A most extraordinary and outrageous case of usurped authority over a fellow creature was developed at the upper police office on Saturday. Mr. James McEnally, of Fourth street, applied to Mr. Palmer the magistrate to send a little girl about fourteen years of age to the House of Refuge, as he said she was so badly disposed that it was impossible to get any good of her. Mr. Palmer consented to take the girl and send her to the House of Refuge or the Almshouse, and Mr. McEnally brought her to the police office.

When he was leaving the office, he stretched out his hand to shake hands with her, but instead of putting out her hand to meet his, she shrunk back from him as if his attempting to touch her had terrified her. Mr. McEnally then left the office. Mr. Palmer had observed the occurrence, and perceiving that the girl was from some cause or other in a state of extreme terror, he addressed her in a soothing manner, and endeavored to encourage her by saying that she should be taken good care of, and made comfortable. Whilst he was speaking to her he took her by the hand. On doing so he perceived that it was black and bruised from some hurt. Mr. Palmer asked her what happened to her hand, and she replied in the most piteous manner, "Oh! sir, my master has beat me, and my back is very sore." Mr. Palmer then examined her person, and found that from the small of her back down to the calf of her leg was covered with black marks, bruises and cuts, some of which were festering.

On making this discovery Mr. Palmer made inquiries into the matter, and from what has yet been developed it appears that a Mr. R. formerly of this city, obtained possession of the girl, but by what means is as yet unknown, when she was only a few years old, and reared her and treated her completely as a slave. A few months back Mr. R. left this city and went to reside in New Jersey, and when going there, hired out the girl to McEnally, in the same way that a slave owner would hire out a slave, at twenty shillings a month, the money to be paid to R. and the girl to get nothing but food and raiment. The unfortunate little girl possesses an extremely agreeable and rather pretty countenance—and evinces too much simplicity in the history she gives of herself, to leave any ground for doubt of its being true. She is altogether ignorant of her name and parentage, and only remembers that she once lived in the country. When she came in possession of Mr. R. he named her Philadelpia, which, when speaking to her, he generally abbreviated to the word Philly, and this is the only name she recollects to have been called by.

By her own account she has been always treated as a complete slave, and since she has been with her last master, with the exception of food, of which she says she got sufficient, she has been treated worse than most slaves have been treated in this country during the last half century. She was obliged to sleep on the garret floor without any thing but one blanket for a bed and covering, and as to her apparel, she says it was never better than what she now wears, and her outer garment is seemingly composed of a piece of an old sack. There was a gentleman of strong nerves, and by no means given to the "melting mood" present when she was examined at the Police Office, and so much was he affected by her story and the horrible appearance which her person presented, that he wept like a child. As soon as Mr. Palmer examined her and heard her story he immediately had McEnally brought to the police, and bound over to answer whatever charges might be brought against him for ill-treating her.—Jeir. Cour.

AUNT NABBY'S STEWED GOOSE.

It was my aunt Nabby's birth day, and she was bent upon having a stewed goose; stewed in onions, and with cabbage and salt pork to match. "Pollioh," said she to, "what we got a goose 'bout the farm?" "No," said I, "we got the old gander at Christmas, and he was the last of the Patriarchs." Aunt Nabby went down to Sue, who was getting breakfast. Susanna, said she, the boy tells how we've got a goose in creation; now what shall we do? "Go without," replied Susanna, with that amiable tone which so ecutes that important trust.

The Tories were pouring in torrents of ad. marked her, and which my father said had worn off her teeth to the gums. But Aunt Nabby was bent upon a goose, and when such a stiff and strait person gets bent upon any thing you may consider the matter settled; and I saw that a goose of some kind would be had at some rate or other.

"Here you critter," cried aunt Nabby to the little black specimen of the human family, which was digging potatoes in the garden, there, I want you to go along to the neighbors, and borrow a goose." Cato laid down his hoe, got over the fence, and I shovelled off on his broad pedestal to get a goose. The first house Cato came to was that of Sam Soap, the tailor, commonly called Soft Soap. Into the shop went the Yankee negro, and making a leg to Mr. Soap, who sat like a Hindoo idol, busily employed in patching an old blue coat with still older brown rags, and humming most mournfully the air of "Ye banks and braes of Bonny Doon"—giving it a nasal twang that came direct from Jedidiah Soap, who was a member of the Long Parliament.—"Soap," says Cato, "you haant got no goose nor nothin, haant ye, for aunt Nabby?"

IN CHANCERY.
27th April, 1835.
Margaretta Waesche, George F. R. Waesche, Elizabeth W. Waesche, Frederick R. Waesche and Emelia Waesche, infants, by their next friend the said Margaretta, vs.
Thomas Maund, and Metta Henrietta, his wife.
THE object of the bill filed in this court is to obtain a decree to confirm certain leasings and contracts of leasing, heretofore reported, and all future leasings or contracts of lease, under a decree of this court, and that the same may stand confirmed and avail effectually against the defendants hereinafter mentioned.
The bill states, that the complainants heretofore exhibited their petition in this court reciting that by the will of Metta Repold, the complainant, Margaretta was made devisee for life, with remainder to her children, of that part of said Metta's real estate described in her said will as that not otherwise or before in her said will disposed of, whereunto it might be situated, and that the said real estate, so devised and limited, consisted in large pieces of land and situate in the city of Baltimore, which were laid out into lots might be, in such lots, leased for terms of years renewable for ever, in a manner highly advantageous to all interested in said ground, and to wit: That by an act of assembly passed on December session 1831, the same was confirmed upon the application of the complainants, to decree that said ground should be leased out on terms for years, renewable for ever, yielding such rents, and subject to such covenants and conditions, and in that behalf this court might approve and finally ratify and confirm.
That this court did decree the leasing of said piece of ground as aforesaid, as authorized by the said act of assembly, and by the decree aforesaid appointed Charles F. May and George F. R. Waesche, trustees, to lease as aforesaid the said ground. That said trustees, after giving bond, proceeded to contract for leasing aforesaid, and duly reported the several leasings or contracts therefore to this court, which thus far embrace a large part of said ground, and which have all or nearly all been finally ratified and confirmed by this court. That the leasings or contracts of lease made under said decree by said trustees, are advantageous for all the devisees of said ground, and that it is highly and beneficial for all that they should have effect and be valid and confirmed as to all the devisees; and that as to all said devisees would be advantageous and beneficial the said decree should be executed in respect to the portion of said ground not yet leased, contracted to be leased under said decree. That the children of said Margaretta are the complainants George and Frederick, and Elizabeth and Amelia, and that the only child of said Margaretta is Metta Henrietta Maund, wife of Thomas Maund.—That the children of said Margaretta Waesche are only heirs at law of Metta Repold.—That as much as said Metta Henrietta Maund as child of said Margaretta Waesche, is interested in the limitation aforesaid of said piece of ground under said Metta Repold's will and inasmuch as, which complainants state, the said Metta Henrietta and her husband Thomas Maund, were not made parties to the proceeding in the matter of said petition, the complainants to preclude all difficulties which might hereafter arise from omission to make them parties as aforesaid are desirous that the said leasings or contracts of leasing reported thus far, and all future leasings or contracts of leasings under said decree, may by a decree of this court be confirmed and avail effectually against Metta Henrietta and Thomas Maund, as well and conclusively as if they had been parties to said proceeding, and to said decree, and although it is expedient for the interest of said Thomas and Metta Henrietta, as just and equitable course on their part complainants to remove all possible difficulties aforesaid by a confirmation in the premises by their own act, without recourse to the adjudication to that effect of this court, yet said Metta Henrietta and Thomas have so acted. The bill also states, that the Thomas Maund, and Metta Henrietta wife, reside out of the state of Maryland.
It is thereupon ordered, that the complainants by causing a copy of this order to be inserted once in each of three successive weeks in some newspaper before the 30th day of May next, give notice to the said absent defendants of the substance and object of bill, that they may be warned to appear in this court in person or by a solicitor, or before the 28th day of September next show cause, if any they have, why a decree should not be passed as prayed.

PROSPECTUS.
The Subscriber proposes to publish, in Upper Marlboro', Prince George's county, Maryland, a weekly journal, to be called

THE BULLETIN.
In undertaking to supply this acknowledged desideratum to the populous and intelligent district in which the subscriber has the pleasure to reside, his hope of ultimate success is not its origin in sanguineousness of imagination, but proceeds from the eminent advantages of its location. Published in the prospects of a large and wealthy county, situated equidistant from the State and National capitals, facilities of an early communication of whatever may interest its patrons, particularly afforded to the Editors; and though he may not hope to present to his friends much foreign information through the columns of his journal, it is still certain that intelligence of a local nature, interesting to all, and important to many, and otherwise unobtainable, will by this means be communicated. It will also afford to those whose means are inadequate to the expense of the larger journals, at least a synoptical view of all the important information they contain; and he trusts that those of literary taste may sometimes find in its columns, articles not unworthy of the employment of their leisure. As the plan of every publication which is to find success in popular support, must first be approved before public patronage can be expected, the Editor would here mark the outline of his design, with the full knowledge that it will constitute an ordeal, by which, to determine both its merit and the fidelity of its execution.

The Editor proposes to adapt his paper to the needs of those by whom he is immediately surrounded, and among whom he most naturally had a majority of his patrons: he knows them to be intelligent and inquiring. The literary department, shall, therefore, be as judiciously regarded, and the most approved domestic and foreign periodicals resorted to for select letters notices. He knows them to be patriotic, and that they feel a deep interest in the welfare of our common country. To supply this sentiment to the extent of his ability, his columns shall afford whatever intelligence of a political character may be calculated to interest them. No man, with the faculty of thought, is at this crisis neutral in reference to the party distinctions now prevailing in this country, and the Editor does not wish to be chargeable with political partiality—they are the measures of the present emergency. But having neither the temerity nor the motive of a partisan, his comments on party movements shall be characterized by candor of argument, not violence or abuse, and as it never has been his practice, or shall become his habit to deal in political invective or party virulence. He will cheerfully lend the aid of his columns to communication from all parties—reserving to himself the privilege of rejecting such as are objectionable on personal allusion or indecorous language. In addition to the advantages of a purely political and literary selections, he trusts that he may surround him, and with such a liberal and interesting. He asks the patronage of his friends, longer than he can merit and repay it, as he wishes not to be denied to his editorial labors.

The Bulletin will be published on Thursdays each week. Terms of subscription $3 per annum in advance.

LITTELL'S MUSEUM OF FOREIGN LITERATURE, SCIENCE AND ART.

Patron.—Six Dollars a year, in advance—seven dollars and a half, if not in advance. Postage.—Five sheets, under 100 miles 75 cents; over 100 miles, 125 cents. This work will be sent to any Post Office in the United States, carefully wrapped up, upon receipt of five dollars in part payment. A few complete sets are for sale.

ENLARGED SERIES OF THE MUSEUM.

M. R. LITTELL has much pleasure in announcing to the patrons of the Museum, that he has made arrangements for the future publication of the work in a style much superior to the present—and nearly approaching what he has always desired that it should appear in. The circulation of the work is now so large, as to make it important to the proprietor that he should be able to give his whole attention to it. This has hitherto been prevented by the care and labour attendant upon a multifarious and widely extended business. With the view of completing more quickly the publication of Lodge's Portraits and Memoirs of Illustrious and Noble Characters, (a splendid work now in hand)—of effecting a settlement of accounts extending over the whole of the United States—and of making arrangements in all parts of the country for the vigorous prosecution of the publication of the Museum, he has made a contract with Mr. Adam Waldie of this city to print the work, attend to its distribution, and manage all the financial concerns appertaining to it after the present year.

Mr. Waldie is a practical printer, not surpassed in taste by any other in the country; and as he is advantageously and generally known as the publisher of the Select Circulating Library, it is supposed that he will have it in his power greatly to promote the sale of the Museum. He has contracted to issue it promptly, and thus will be corrected the greatest fault which has hitherto attended its management. The changes in the appearance of the work will be as follows:

1. It will be regularly and promptly published.
2. Will be uniformly and handsomely printed.
3. On better paper.
4. Will be considerably enlarged.

As the sale of the work has increased, Mr. Littell has always been desirous of devoting the enlarged profits to its improvement—and although he does not wish the appearance of the next volume to be considered as entirely carrying out his plan, he trusts that the subscribers will be convinced, upon comparing it with any other work, that it is richly worth the price asked for it.

We shall not have satisfied our own wish, in respect to this work, until it shall be so far enlarged and improved as to make it clear to every purchaser that he will herein receive all that is desirable to an American reader from all the Foreign Periodicals. That we can do so in a single work, by making it contain four or five times as much matter as an ordinary periodical, we have no doubt. A great part of most of the Reviews and Magazines is composed of inferior articles, and we confidently appeal to those readers of the Museum who have been in the habit of looking over the British Journals, whether we have not already, in a very great degree, succeeded in copying all that was worth preservation.

As the work will now be considerably enlarged, we shall be able more fully to accomplish this object.

In order that he may, by frequent journeys from home, be the earlier able to finish all other business, and devote himself exclusively to the Museum, Mr. Littell has made arrangements with the Editor of Waldie's Library to edit this work after December, 1834. However deficient the proprietor may be in other qualifications, he has always felt so zealous an affection for the Museum that he would not be willing to commit it, even for a time, to the care of another, were he not confident that the facilities, the experience and the ability of the new Editor, will render it more worthy of the patronage of the public than it has heretofore been. No change takes place in the Proprietorship.

PROSPECTUS OF THE EXTRA GLOBE.

The undersigned propose to issue the first number of a new series of the EXTRA GLOBE, on Monday, the 25th of May next, and to publish it weekly for six months, making twenty six numbers; the last to contain an Index to the whole. It will be printed upon fine double royal paper, made up in quarto form, like the Extra and Congressional Globe published by us last year. The 26 numbers will make 416 quarto royal pages.

It will contain the principal original articles of the Daily and Semi-Weekly Globes, notices of the public meetings, the elections, and public proceedings in every state in the Union, in relation to the canvass for the next Presidency—a contest which the indications of the present year will go far to decide. The first number will contain the Proceedings of the Democratic National Convention, to be held at Baltimore on the 20th of next month. An excellent Reporter has already been engaged to report the Proceedings of the Convention, and the Speeches which may be made on the occasion.

We request the favour of those friends to whom this Prospectus may be sent, to circulate it, for the purpose of obtaining subscribers. A copy of the work will be sent to the newspapers that copy this Prospectus.

Subscribers should forward their names in time to reach us before the 25th May. If they do not, we may not be able to furnish them with all the numbers; because the work is put at so low a price, that we cannot afford to reprint any number that may be exhausted.

TERMS:
One Dollar per copy, in advance. Eleven copies will be furnished for Ten Dollars; twenty-two copies for Twenty Dollars, and so on in proportion.

The price of this paper is so low, that we cannot afford to open accounts with those who subscribe for it. Therefore, no attention will be paid to any order, unless the money accompanies it.

POETRY.

Selected for the Mirror.
(Published by arrangement.)
The following beautiful lines are extracted from the Poem for 1835, written by Mrs. G. M. M., of Charleston, S. C.

THE CHILDREN'S CHOICE.

JOHN.
I mean to be a soldier,
With uniform quite new,
I wish they'd let me have a drum,
And be a Captain too,
I would go amid the battle,
With my broadsword in my hand,
And hear the cannon rattle,
And the music also grand.

MOTHER.
My soul! my soul! what if that sword
Should strike a noble heart,
And bid some loving father,
From his little ones depart?
What comfort would your waving plumes
And brilliant dress bestow,
When you thought upon his widow's tears,
And her orphan's cry of woe?

WILLIAM.
I mean to be a President,
And rule each rising State,
And hold my power over a week,
For in the day and night,
I'll be a King, except a crown,
For I'll be a King, except a crown,
And I'll be a King, except a crown,
And I'll be a King, except a crown.

MOTHER.
My son! my son! what if that State
Should turn upon the sword,
That ever pierces the good man's heart,
And rob him of his lot,
If great and gay as he appear
As trifling as the rest,
For he knows how little they are worth,
How faithless is their trust.

LOUISA.
I mean to be a cottage girl,
And sit behind a mill,
And mend and sew my pitcher there,
With purest water all,
And I'll train a lovely woodbine,
Around my cottage door,
And welcome to my winter hearth
The wandering and the poor.

MOTHER.
Louise, dear, a humble mind
Is beautiful to see—
And you shall never hear a word
To check that mind from free;
But, ah! remember, pride may dwell
Beneath the woodbine's shade,
And discontent, a silent guest,
The cottage hearth invade.

CAROLINE.
I will be gay and courtly,
And dance away the hours,
Merrily and sport and jest shall dwell
Beneath my fairy bow,
No heart shall ache with sadness
Within my laughing hall,
But it is love and gladness Reaches to my call.

MOTHER.
Oh! my child! say to me, my soul
To what your playful straits,
I cannot bear to chill your youth
With longer of pain,
Yet I must say what God bestows,
And let his own fair flowers,
Lead up to heaven in a smile,
And gently rest in slumbers.

MICHAEL IN SEARCH OF HIS WIFE.
Oh! love is the seed of immortal life.

MOTHER. Michael Brien and Corny McCarty presided at a meeting of the magistrates, beginning at ten o'clock, and ending at twelve. The meeting was held in the hall of the prison, and was attended by a large number of the public.

And please your honours, said Mr. Callaghan, Michael Brien and Corny McCarty, who were taken by the Spanish Pirates, and carried to the point of the pirates' dagger, where the corpse was lying; they lifted the dead to an erect position, and enfolded the neck of our man in the full supple arms of the Spaniard, lashed the hands of the dead men together, with horrible, affrighting, and frantic joy, they then tied the hands of the corpse around the back of the Spaniard, and snatching the living victim with their swords, shouting a maddening yell, they conveyed the unwilling cooper to the gangway; and calling out, "Atos, amigos, nabo," pushed him towards the ship; his foot caught against a coil of rope, which in the scuffle had been kicked to that situation, the balance was lost, and the living and the dead fell headforemost into the ocean. Not a cloud darkened the sun when such ruffian murder was committed; no thunder roared to manifest God's awful displeasure at this infernal deed; but a shout of joy followed the consummation of the act, and a hellish laugh was the burial service of the dead.

I looked up at Waters; his blanched face, his pale lips, his trembling figure, indicated his worst apprehensions; he did not dare articulate a word, but kept his trembling finger on his mouth, to warn me of my danger and the necessity of silence. It was now a dead calm; and the sun went down in all its glory, as if it smiled upon the deed; there was scarcely a cloud to darken the heavens; and already in the east the stars had begun to shine; above us all was still and hushed, all nature seemed to smile; below the drunken ricks of the murderous pirates broke the silence of the evening, and the inefficient struggle of some of our men, as they resisted the endeavours of the Spaniards to force them on deck, was the prelude to other deeds of murder.

Two more victims were brought up and lashed together; these were tied back to back; one seemed anxious to close his capers and jump overboard; the other, still inside the taty-kittle, though Corny Keogh, his wife's sister's second cousin, larrup'd the top of it with a mallow he had to make him say, and himself watching him with the blow-bellis at the bottom; but he wouldn't be any at all for us, please your honours, like a world's rogue as he is! Thinn the neighbours cum'd in to keep the peace, and dived a bit of pace there was in it, but a great scrimmage; and at last Mykle twisted his fytures out of the taty-kittle, and tuck the blow-bellis clane away from himself; an' by the powers! he gives me a mighty swate clout on the head wid' em. Oh! but me own place spim'd round me like a windymill wid' the stunnin' of the clout I got from him!

'Then the fact is, he broke your head!' said the impatient magistrate.

'Not altogether, your honour,' replied Mr. Callaghan McCarty, 'or meself wouldn't be here speaking may be; but he left his mark upon me.' This 'mark,' a lump about the size of a half a cricket ball, on the very top of his head, he pointed out to his worship's notice; and then he concluded his case by stating, that, before the deed time to return the compliment, the watchman came in and broke up the scrimmage, by driving Mykle and the neighbours home to bed; and therefore he and Mykle next morning, 'cool and comfortable,' and agreed to 'take the law upon each other,'—in furtherance of which agreement they had now waited upon his lordship.

It was now Mykle's turn to spake. Poor Mykle seemed to have come off second best in the scrimmage; for, over and above the waltzing inflicted upon his wrong end, his whole countenance was so bruised and swollen that it looked more like a ripe melon than any thing else. 'And bad luck to yur blow-bellis, and yur taty-kittle,' he began, at the same time looking anything but cool and comfortable towards Mr. Callaghan McCarty, 'bad luck to yur blow-bellis and yur taty-kittle, for its meself won't be able to sit in pace this fortnight by reason of the waltzing I got from ye on my side; but I never even botch'd of ye than just a great blaggard! Your worships, the old woman's a bad old woman, and dhrinks more than she earns, though she takes a bushel o' fruit into the streets every day, and brings none o' it back to spake off; and its because I loves the old cratur above all the world that I larrup her now and then, and can't bear to see the mother of thirteen children taking a dhrup in a gin-shop, when she's got a husband at home in her own place; so if I didn't love her, I wouldn't be after larrupping her at all, but let her rool about in the kennel like a dhrunken baste instead; an' what for is it that 'Carty' looks her up from me! Sure I'd all the right in the world to go in after her, and I did; and I was smashed all to pieces among 'm with bellines taty-kittles, please your worships, as your worships may please; for Corny Keogh clouted the old woman's head with a stone, and she clouted my shoulders; and when—

'I will hear no more of this stupid nonsense!' said the magistrate; 'go along about your business, and if you dare to break the peace again I will hold the whole gang of you to bail.'

'Th. it's just what we want!' cried Mr. Callaghan McCarty. 'Indeed and it is, your worships! cried Mr. Mykle Brien, but the officers show'd them the door, and the devil a bit of law' they got to bless themselves with.

clinging to the remnant of a miserable existence, or fearful from his numerous crimes to meet his fate, he strenuously opposed the efforts of his comrades. The Spaniards laughed at the struggle, and as either party came near, wounded them with their swords, and good- ed them towards the gangway, at last he that was most resolute gave a sudden plunge, and both were in the water. Then it was that the diabolical feelings of the pirates were most excited; both endeavored to swim, and for a few minutes they succeeded; but as they near- ed the ship, the rope which an apparently friendly hand had offered to their succor was withdrawn, or only the wet end allowed to touch their hands, when it was jerked from their hold, and they were again left to the grave—into which they ultimately descended, after a more than human exertion to cling to the faithless succor.

The next that was brought on deck was Captain Smith. His son leaped up immediately and clung to him with all the strong hold of affection. The Captain knew his end was come and looked at the Captain of the Felucca who had nearly fallen under his arm, and who was now unconcernedly smoking a cigar, appealing for pity in regard to his son, as for himself he seemed quite prepared to meet his fate, and approached the gangway with a fearless unconcern. The youth riveted his arms round his father's neck, and cried out with all the excited feelings of a boy who could not reconcile himself to inevitable death. "Oh, save me! father!" cried the poor half-distracted creature, "save me from these men! what are the fellows going to do with us?" At this moment some of the pirates tore young Smith from his father, and walked him to the Captain of the Felucca, who running his quick eye over the pale face of the youngster, shook his head, puffed out a long line of the smoke, and giving a glance at one of his men, the youngster was released and again ran into his father's arms. Smith made no resistance as the pirates laid his son to him, his afflicted boy screamed most dreadfully, imploring his father to save him for his mother's sake; he sud- denly to kneel down, and hold his head, which were let- ters, in manner of supplication. The father in return, a tear, but looked on and uttered no word, and yet he seemed to linger on the deck, as one who would wil- lingly have lived, if only for his son's sake. The fel- low being completed, the pirates were anxious to finish their work of destruction, and "Vive le mort!" and gave the victim a push to wards that fatal gangway.

Oh, father! father! stop, stop—only for one minute— father! only for one minute—Oh, look at me! I will not be drowned! Oh, my poor mother! Oh, save me, save me! This seemed to disconcert the Captain, for he stopped and seemed almost inaccessible to the pain he must have experienced from the application of a sword; he looked down upon his son's face, and I thought I saw, indistinctly as I could see, a tear fall. The son looked imploringly upon the countenance of his father; his eyes seemed to read a hope of escape even when it was most useless and most unpromising. All how long we cling to hope even when our rainbow has lost its brightest col- ours! how fondly we cling to the last link, although the eye may see it gradually fading from the view! and for- tunately, even at death's galling door, we imagine an escape, and hope glimmers even in the darkest adversity.

The Captain having bent his head towards, and kiss- ed the forehead of his son, who was set, among with the worst anticipation, lifted him from the deck, and walk- ing him steadily to the gangway jumped into the water, and sank to rise no more; but as he fell, we heard a loud scream which the sea of eternity rushed for ever.

ADMINISTRATION CONVENTION.

The friends of the Administration of the Gen- eral Government in the cities of Baltimore and Annapolis, and Anne-Arundel county, will soon be called upon to select two candidates to re- present them in the next Congress. It is there- fore proposed to hold a Convention of Delegates at Waterloo Tavern, A. A. county, on Saturday the 30th day of May, at 11 o'clock, to nominate two suitable and proper persons as Candidates to represent this new double district. Its friends in Anne-Arundel county when they shall meet to appoint their delegates to the National and State Conventions, are therefore requested to select five other Delegates to attend the pro- posed District Convention. The friends of the Administration in the cities of Baltimore and Annapolis, will hold their meetings at such time as may best suit their convenience, provided their Delegates are chosen in time to meet the Delegates from this county at Waterloo on the 30th of May. All the friends of the cause will cheerfully unite in forwarding the objects of this Convention.

THE FOURTH DISTRICT.

April 30, 1835.

The Baltimore Republican will publish this notice until the day of meeting.

JACKSON REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

The Jackson Republicans in these Election Districts in A. A. County which have not ap- pointed Delegates to the District Convention to be held at Waterloo on the 30th instant, are re- quested to meet in their respective Districts on Saturday, the 23d instant, at 2 o'clock, for that purpose. Delegates have already been appointed in the city of Annapolis, and some of the Districts in the county, and it is hoped that the other Districts will on the day above named fol- low their example. Our friends in the city of Baltimore will not fail to appoint their Dele- gates in due time to meet us on the day appoint- ed. Every District in the County should have a full delegation in a Convention of so much interest to the Jackson Republicans of this new Congressional District.

THE FOURTH DISTRICT.

At a respectable meeting of the friends of the National Administration in the Third Elec- tion District of A. A. County on Monday 18th of May at the store of Joseph M. Tate, JOHN RIDOUT was called to the Chair, and WILLIAM S. WOODSON appointed Secretary. The object of the meeting being stated, on motion of Philip P. Putnam, Esq. the following committee was appointed by the Chair to draft resolutions, viz. Grafton B. Davall, Philip Putnam, William W. Seel, Richard Gardner, Dr. Z. Morriken, and Joseph M. Tate, who having retired a short time, returned and offered the following, which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this meeting fully concur in the expediency and propriety of the proposed National Convention to be held in Baltimore on the 20th instant, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the Presidency and Vice Presi- dency, believing it the only means by which the party can be united, and the measures of An- drew Jackson be perpetuated; Therefore

Resolved, That this meeting appoint Grafton B. Davall, Philip Putnam, and Dr. Z. Morriken, to represent this District in the Convention to nominate candidates for President and Vice President of the United States.

Resolved further, That the same Delegates be appointed to represent this District in the pro- posed State Convention to assemble in Balti- more immediately after the adjournment of the National Convention.

Resolved, That we will meet our friends at Waterloo on the 30th inst. for the purpose of selecting two suitable and proper persons to re- present this district in the next Congress of the United States, and that Messrs. William S. Woodson, William W. Seelers, Samuel Thomas, William B. Chairs, and Philip Putnam, be a committee for that purpose.

Resolved, That the said committee be empow- ered to fill their vacancies should any occur.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meet- ing be signed by the Chairman and Secretary, and published in the Gazette at Annapolis, and Baltimore Republican.

JOHN RIDOUT, of H. Chairman.

WILLIAM S. WOODSON, Sec'y.

A Naval Court Martial has been ordered to convene at Baltimore, on Monday, the 22d day of June next, for the trial of Captain George C. Read, and will be composed of CUMBERLAND, Md. May 12.

SALES OF LAND.—Two farms, lying with- in eight and ten miles from Cumberland, we learn, were recently sold to capitalists at great- ly advanced prices. They both contain large quantities of Coal. One was taken at $12,000 and the other at $8,000. We have not heard the number of acres, but the prospects of the early completion of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, and the consequent increased demand for coal, are said to be the inducements of the pur- chasers. And since the above was written, a con- siderable portion of town property has been sold to one man, amounting to about $9,000. The near approach of the Canal is said to be the in- ducement to purchase.

FATAL NAP.

Several persons, a few minutes ago, took lodg- ings in the loft of a barn, in the north part of this city, and during the night one of the com- pany, in his sleep fell to the floor below, and li- terally broke his neck! The individual was an Englishman, but we have not been able to learn his name.

FATAL JUGGLING.—A juggler, by the name of Wheeler alias Curtis, a few days since, while in the exercise of his vocation, running a sword down his throat, perforated some vital part, which caused his instant death.

Buffalo Whig.

BALLOONING.

A gentleman of our acquaintance, (says the New York Gazette) has received a letter from a friend in the city of Mexico, which mentions that Mr. Eugene Robinson, the Aeronaut, had made an ascension there which was successful in every respect, it having yielded him a clear profit of twelve thousand six hundred dollars. He was making preparations for another ascent, from the proceeds of which it was calculated he would make twenty thousand dollars. This is ballooning to some purpose.

The Sag-Harbour Coroner states, that a whale drifted on shore at East Hampton on the 5th instant, forty feet in length, without any marks of a wound upon it.

From the London Morning Herald, of March 30.

Further accounts have been received concern- ing the death of Mr. Douglas, botanist, lately killed at Owyhee by a wild bull in a pit; but they do not materially add to our previous in- formation. It appears that he was warned of the traps for wild cattle, and they were even pointed out to him; but it is presumed that he af- terwards went to examine them more closely, and in this investigation fell in. His body was found above 20 yards behind. His body, when recovered, was examined, and the surgical report has been sent home. He was crushed and mangled to pieces; and when first seen was al- most buried in the earth, under the feet of the infuriated animal.

Mr. Douglas was one of the most accomplish- ed botanists of the present day, and explored the banks of Columbia river, and indeed, nearly the whole of the great West, the result of which was a vast access of rare and beautiful Ameri- can plants to the collections of Great Britain.

ALMOST A CATASTROPHE.

The servants in one of our hotels, says the Boston Transcript, were roused the other night by the violent ringing of a chamber bell. On going to the apartment they found the occupant, a transient boarder in the house, half suffocated, and almost dead with alarm and the want of fresh air. It appeared that his chamber was lit with gas, and on retiring to bed, wishing to ex- tinguish the light, instead of shutting off the gas by closing the valve, he blew the flame out, leav- ing the gas to flow into the room. He then laid down, and being much fatigued, fell immedi- ately asleep. That he escaped suffocation is al- most miraculous.

From the Fredericksburg Arena.

Sentence of Death was, on Friday last, pro- nounced by Judge Lomax, on Thomas Jones, in Western District court, for the murder of his wife, on the 25th of last month. The sub- stance of the sentence, is published at the ear- nest solicitation of many who heard it pronoun- ced, and who suggested that the publication might greatly promote the cause of Temper- ance.

SENTENCE OF DEATH.

THOMAS JONES.

You have been convicted of the murder of your wife, by excessive beating. This is re- garded as one of the most heinous offences which can be committed, and the law denounces against it its severest sentence. That sen- tence it is now my painful duty, as the minister of the law, to pronounce. But before I discharge it, I cannot refrain from making some obser- vations suggested by your situation—not made, I assure you, in any spirit of reproach, but of deepest commiseration and concern for your unhappy fate; and they are made with a hope that they may not be wholly unprofitable to yourself or to others.

It has, no doubt, occurred to you, at all the bitterness of grief, that the last month has been most eventful in your destinies. One month ago you were in possession of most of those means, which, when rightly improved, give as- surance, in your humble sphere of life, of use- fulness, respectability and happiness. Your hum- ble home might have been consecrated to con- jugal affection, to domestic peace and felicity.— But your own hand converted it into the char- nel house of your wife—and you fled in guilt and horror from its blood-dimmed walls; and you left her covered with bruises, speechless, senseless, and wallowing in her gore. Your home, with all the comforts which you might have there secured, has been exchanged for the gloom of a Jail; and you must have been more than man—more than fiend—if its solitude has not been embittered by agonies of remorse and horror unutterable. You have passed through all the agonizing hopes and fears of an ignomi- nious trial—and a just and lawful conviction places you now upon the brink of an abyss, in- describably awful and tremendous. Before the hand of Spring shall drop a blade of verdure upon the fresh grave of your murdered wife, your body too will have been deposited in the silent earth.

What demon was it, that entered into your dwelling, fury spreading around him, and blast- ing with such terrific ruin and desolation its wretched inmates? Your defence sought to mi- tigate, and even to excuse, your crime, upon the plea of insanity, produced by the intemperate use of ardent spirits. And it was vainly hoped, that the guilt of this murder would be overlook- ed by the law, in its benignity to mental infir- mity. It was indeed most clear and indisputa- ble, upon your trial, that drunkenness, inflaming the constitutional malignancy of your passions, instigated the enactment of this shocking trage- dy; and that, without the drunkenness, this crime would never have been perpetrated. But it was also most clear, that it was a drunken- ness, which did not incapacitate you to perpe- trate the murder by wilful, deliberate and pre- meditated killing. Drink then is the proven and acknowledged cause of the perpetration of this most cruel and inhuman murder. It was but this day week, that in the adjoining county of this circuit, an unhappy wretch was condemned to die for an offence originating in drink—and now it is again exhibited as the abominable cause of the most atrocious crime that can shock the heart of man.

Has there been amongst the crowd which has gathered in this hall, pending this trial, one in- dividual not habituated to the strictest sobriety, and who has been deaf to the suggestion, which your case must have whispered to him in its progress, that his condition might be soon like yours; and was his conscience not startled with terror and dismay at his own perilous state? If he hugs himself in the false security, that he has the power to stop short of that inordinate excess, which inflames the passions to outrage against the law, and infuriates the husband to raise his hand against the partner of his bosom, you can no doubt, tell him that there was a time, when you also confidently relied upon the same delu- sive security. Let him call up from the grave the dead who have heretofore expiated upon the gallows, the crimes provoked by their in- temperance—or let him summon, from the peni- tentiaries, the ghastly crowd whom similar of- fences have there impured—all of them, with united testimony, will proclaim that the securi- ty is most false—most illusory. This security is the grand mystery in the devotions, which are paid to the God of Intemperance, who, term after term, is casting his victims to be crushed in the path of Justice as it rolls its stated course through its judicial circuits. Oh! that the re- cord of this conviction could go forth through- out the land, to alarm the merriment of every inebriated wretch; and that, like the hand writ- ing upon the wall which dismayed the Chaldean monarch, in his festive abominations, it would appal him with the view of his danger, and show him what momentous interests are hazarded up- on the enjoyments of a moment, whose highest voluptuousness is a degradation lower than that of the beasts.—Does the heart aspire to honour, to fortune, to health, to virtue, to Heaven? This record tells him that infamy and indigence and disgrace and vice and Hell, are mantling in the cup of intoxication. Jealousy and hate and every inebriating passion is effervescing in the inebriating draught. Blasphemy and murder and every crime is spectred in its sparkling bub- bles. It tells him that the hand, which is reck- lessly bearing to the lips the maddening beverage, may, he knows not how soon, be imbued in the blood of a heart, whose constant throb was con- jugal affection for her murderer—and whose virtues had once inspired him with all the rap- turous devotion of love. Harder than the net- her mill stone must be the heart, if your fate does not engrave upon it, in characters never to be obliterated, whilst it beats with life, most awful and fearful admonitions to sobriety and abstinence.

I avail myself of this solemn occasion, when perhaps for the last time in this world, we stand together in the presence of that Holy God be- fore whose majesty the prisoner and his earthly judge are both defiled with the blackest guilt; and I would earnestly address you upon a sub- ject of the deepest interest to all men at all times; but to you in your present condition it is a subject, pressing with most important exi- gency upon your most profound consideration. You are very shortly to appear before the bar of your God, to render an account of the deeds of your life. Has your life been spent in a manner, which will be acceptable to a God who is all holiness? Need I ask this question after the disclosures in your recent trial? But upon the account which you render depends eternal happiness or eternal misery. The hands of your life are few and will soon run out—of your past days how will you make up your reckoning? Where are the merits of your life, which you will sum up as the offset to your crimes; and what statement will you make, of a balance in your favour, to be flung down upon the Justice seat of Heaven, entitling you to forgiveness, as the exacted recompense to the creature, bought by occasional obedience, to pay for a life of ha- bitual hostility and rebellion against the su- preme, universal law of his creator. And dur- ing the remnant of your days, that short and fleeting interval yet allowed you by the law to live, in the confinement of the Jail—what are the good works, which you can perform, to buy off the forgiveness of your sins? Oh! it is bla- phemy for man, sinful in his best estate, to hope by his own righteousness (whose utmost attain- ments can never equal the duty he owes to the transcendent duty of his creator), to cancel all his violation of God's holy Law. There is no hope for the sinner, but in the righteousness of the Saviour, and upon the terms which he has offered in the Gospel. Salvation has been pur- chased by his blood, and it has been offered to all mankind—even to the vilest sinner—upon terms so moderate, that none, it might be sup- posed, would be foolish enough to reject them. Repentance and faith are all that he demands as the price of forgiveness for the past, and et- ernal happiness for the future—and is the in- gratitude of the sinner so perverse, that he will not repent of his guilt, and that he will not trust in the son of God, who died to redeem him, and is risen from the dead to make propi- tiation for him. Your few remaining days, continued in impenitence and rebellion, can do but little to a life that has been spent in sin. But if they are fully improved in communion with God and the Saviour, they will assuredly expand into a spiritual immortality of Heaven- ly joy.

Go then, I beseech you, go immediately to the Saviour—to him who is the way and the truth and the life. He will cure your passions by hope—he can make your ignorance in this world, the passport to everlasting glory in the next—no crime is so great as to exclude the humble penitent from the forgiveness of Heaven—and no period is too short for the vi- sitations of divine mercy.

It only remains for me now to perform the painful duty which is enjoined upon me by the law, as its minister.—&c. &c.

FIRE.

A fire broke out yesterday forenoon about 11 o'clock in the old Jacob Tidd distillery, in Dielt House square now occupied by A. H. Bowman, the interior of which together with most of the stock, was either consumed or otherwise destroyed. The wind at the time was high and water scarce, it having to be brought a considerable distance; and but for the unremitted exertions of one of our excellent fire department, which is ever on the alert, de- vastation must have been very extensive. The building destroyed was surrounded nearly on all sides by a row of a similar description, few people being aware of such a nest of tinder boxes was in existence in a city. We never saw such a strange mixture of England run and glassware, old sheds and empty bar- rels. We understand that Mr. Bowman's stock, in- sured at the Merchants' office for $6000, and the judg- ment of the loss to be much more considerable. An- other adjoining distillery, occupied by Wm. French, much injured—stock insured we understand, at the Neptune office. One half of the building destroyed insured for $2000—the other half not insured at all.

A melancholy accident remains to be recorded, on the opposite side of the way, in another building oc- cupied by Bernard and Trull, as a distillery, a very ex- tensive wall was nearly completed, having already re- gressed into the bowels of the earth about sixty feet, the time of the alarm, there were 8 men at the lathe, viz:—seven Irishmen, and Mr. Bowman's brother-in-law, an American. The tub was down suddenly, fell, and those stationed above at the window, all Irishmen, alarmed, may entirely bewildered, by the sudden beat- out of the flames, shouted to those below at the top of their lungs—fire! fire! jump in, save yourselves, for God's sake make haste.—If those above were not alarmed, the feelings of those below may be imagin- ed; never can be described, suffice it to say, notwithstanding the remembrance of Mr. Bowman, who be- came to hold back, and go up two at a time, they all once sprang at the tub, and as many as could get some clung to the rope, and others hung on the side and called out to those about to hoist away. This done, and no accident occurred till they were within 20 ft. of the surface, where three of them fell, all alarm or exhaustion, and Mr. James Burns stood upon a rock, was immediately killed.—The other were very much injured, but to what extent we have been unable to ascertain.

Mr. Bowman is entitled to a great deal of credit for his presence of mind, and luckily escaped unscathed. Had the Irishmen possessed a particle of the same pre- sence of mind, not the least injury would have ensued, as well was in a different building, and there was in fact real danger whatever.—Post. Summary of Foreign Intelligence.

It is said that Sir Walter Scott, baronet, the 5th Hussars, son and heir of the renowned man of that name is an ignorant, economical, boast of never having read his father's works. The following stanza is ironically ascribed to him:

TEMPORA MUTANTUR.
The times are changed—we modern humans,
Deplying cannon-shot or sabre scars,
Go to a bull, all azogranzo and luss,
Because a bull has never come to us.

Lord Haddington, the new Viceroy of land, on his way to Dublin observing the stones marked G. P. O., asked the meaning it, when a wag told him it was "God preserve O'Connell," which much startled his lordship.

The number of private bills already pre- pared to the House of Commons, is 169, chiefly respecting roads, railways, harbours, canals, light companies, water works, markets, &c.

The number of acres held in Ireland by Irish Protestant Church exceed the number persons professing that creed.

In England 26 prelates administer to six millions out of a population of eleven millions.

In Ireland 18 prelates administer to a half a million, out of a population exceeding ten millions, of which six millions are Roman Catholics.

In England several Bishops receive £2,000 or 3,000 a year.

In Ireland none receive less than £4,000 some 15,000.

The total quantity of profitable land in Ire- land, to the uses and globs in Ireland, is about 6,000 acres, valued at so many pounds sterling come, and more than sufficient to support all church establishments, while the wastes are valuable sources for the poor. Yet in addi- tion to the above lands the English government has the hardihood to wish to saddle the people of Ireland, who are thirteen-fourteenths of the Catholics, with an additional burden of 20,000 in tithe!

IN CHANCERY.
27th April, 1855.
Margaretta Waesche, George F. R. Waes-che, Elizabeth W. Waesche, Frederick R.
Waesche and Emelia Waesche, infants, by their next friend the said Margaretta,
vs.
Thomas Maund, and Metta Henrietta, his wife.
THE object of the bill filed in this cause, is to obtain a decree to confirm certain leasings and contracts of leasing, heretofore reported, and all future leasings or contracts

The bill states that the complainants heretofore exhibited their petition in this court reciting that by the will of Metta Repold, the complainant, Margaretta was made devisee for life, with remainder to her children, of that part of said Metta's real estate described in her said will as that not otherwise or before in her said will disposed of, wheresoever it might be situate, and that the said real estate, so devised and limited, consisted in a large piece of ground situate in the city of Baltimore, which when laid out into lots might be, in such lots, leased for terms of years, renewable for ever, in a manner highly advantageous to all interested in said ground under said devise. That by an act of assembly passed at December session, 1863 this

That this court did decree the leasing of said piece of ground as aforesaid, as authorised by the said act of assembly, and by the decree aforesaid appointed Charles F. Mayer and George F. R. Wancher, trustees, to lease as aforesaid the said ground. That said trustees, after giving bond, proceeded to contract for leasing aforesaid, and duly reported their several leaseings or contracts thereof to this court, which thus far embrace a large part of said ground, and which have all or nearly all been finally ratified and confirmed by this court. That the leaseings or contracts of lease-made under said decree by said trustees, are advantageous to all the devisees of said ground; and that it is highly expedient and beneficial for all that they should have effect, and be valid and confirmed as to all the devisees; and that as to all said devisees it would be advantageous and beneficial that said decree should be executed in respect to the portion of said ground not yet leased or contracted to be leased under said decree: That the children of said Margareta are the complainants George and Frederick, and Elizabeth and Amelia, and that the only other child of said Margareta is Metta Henrietta Maund, wife of Thomas Maund.—That the children of said Margareta Wsche are that only heir at law of Metta Repsch.—That inasmuch as said Metta Henrietta Maund, as child of said Margareta Wsche, is interested in the limitation aforesaid of said piece of ground under said Metta Repsch's will,

and inasmuch as, which complainants in the said state, the said Metta Henrietta and her husband Thomas Mauney, were not made parties to the proceeding in the matter of said petition, the complainants to preclude all difficulties which might hereafter arise from this omission to make them parties, as aforesaid, are desirous that the said leaseings or contracts of leasing reported thus far and all for leaseings or contracts of leaseings unknown to said decree, may by a decree of this court be confirmed and avail effectually against the said Metta Henrietta and Thomas Mauney, and they and conclusively as if they had been parties to said proceeding, and to said decree, and although it is expedient for the interest of said Thomas and Metta Henrietta, and for just and equitable course on their part, that complainants to remove all possible difficulties as aforesaid by a confirmation in the premises.

by their own act, without recourse to the judication to that effect of this court, yet said Metta Henrietta and Thomas have so acted. The bill also states, that the Thomas Maund; and Metta Henrietta wife, reside out of the state of Maryland.
It is thereupon ordered, that the complaiants by causing a copy of this order to be serted once in each of three successive weeks in some newspaper before the 30th day of May next, give notice to the said absent defendants of the substance and object of this bill, that they may be warned to appear in person or by a solicitor, on or before the 28th day of September next show cause, if any they have why a decree should not be passed as prayed.

THE SACRED CLASSICS,

OR, CABINET LIBRARY OF DIVINITY. With an original Introductory Essay to each Author.

EDITED BY THE REV. RICH'D. COTTEMOLE, B. D. AND

THE REV. HENRY STEBBING, M. A. Our country is so rich in England in Sacred Literature. Her greatest Poets and Philosophers have shared with her Divines, in setting forth and establishing the truths of Revelation; while her Divines have been distinguished alike by the compass and the depth of their learning.

The success of choice of thus given to the standard Theology of England has, from a variety of circumstances, been happily preserved from degenerating into the harshness of exegesis; and thus the whole series of our "Sacred Classics," is a well of truth and consolation, as open to the general reader as to the most learned scholar.

It is intended to comprise in this collection, the best works of all the most celebrated writers, whose labours have been devoted to the elucidation and practical enforcement of the principles of revealed truth, whether in their application to the immortal interests of individuals, or to the order and well being of society. Treatises on the Doctrines, Morality, and Evidence of Christianity, which have received the permanent stamp of general approbation; select Sermons of the most eminent Divines; the most interesting specimens of Religious Biography; and the choicest examples of Devotional and Sacred Poetry, will succeed each other in the order which may be judged most conducive to the benefit and gratification of the reader.

To the productions of each author, or to each separate production, as the case may seem to require, will be prefixed an Introduction or Essay, pointing out their characteristic excellencies; and, in some instances, comprehending a biographical sketch of the Author, with remarks on the state of religion in his times.

It is the desire of the Proprietors, in undertaking "THE CABINET LIBRARY OF DIVINITY," to present the collection to the public at such a price, that he who purchases at present the cheapest of ephemeral publications, may, for the same money, possess himself of works which cannot fail to afford him guidance and support in the highest exercises of his faculties, and under every vicissitude of life.

The work will be handsomely printed in Foolscap 8vo. on good paper, coll. pressed, neatly bound in Morocco Cloth, lettered, and published in Volumes of about 300 pages each on the first day of every month.

GREAT NATIONAL WORK.

AMERICAN MAGAZINE Of Useful and entertaining Knowledge. To be illustrated with numerous Engravings By the Boston Herald Company.

THE success which has attended the publication of the best Magazines from the English Press, has led to preparation for issuing a periodical more particularly adapted to the wants and tastes of the American public. While it will be the object of the proprietors to make the work strictly what its title indicates, it will, nevertheless, contain articles of interest to its patrons which appear in foreign Magazines.

Extensive preparations have been entered into, both with artists and authors, to furnish from all parts of the Union, drawings and illustrations of every subject of interest, which the publishers confidently believe will enable them to issue a work honorable to its title, and acceptable to the American People.

The first number of the American Magazine, illustrated with upwards of twenty splendid engravings, will appear on or before the first of September, and be continued monthly, containing between forty and fifty imperial octavo pages, and be furnished at a low price of two dollars per annum. It will comprise—

Portraits and Biographical Sketches of distinguished Americans; Views of Public Buildings, Monuments and Improvements; Landscapes; Scenery; the boundless variety and beauty of which, in this country, will form an increasing source of instruction and gratification; Engravings and descriptions of the character, habits &c. of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, Insects, together with every subject connected with the Geography, History, Natural and Artificial resources of the country, illustrated in a familiar and popular manner.

Editors throughout the United States who will give the above Prospectus a few insertions in their respective papers, shall be entitled to one year's subscription to the same.

WALDIE'S CIRCULATING LIBRARY.

BUBBLES FROM THE BRUNNENS OF NASSAU,

A description of the fashionable watering places in Germany, by a good man, will form the commencement of the fourth volume of Waldie's Library.

This will be followed, at an early day, by the Memoirs of Henry Maders de Laudy, who was confined for thirty five years in the different State Prisons in France, now first translated into English.

The works published in the current volume, on the point of completion, are the following:

Königsmeyer, or the German's Tale, a novel by the author of Canterbury Tales.

Memoirs of Sir James Campbell, of Ardkinglass, written by himself: a very piquant book, containing anecdotes of most of the distinguished individuals of the last sixty years.

Good Sir Walter: a tale by the author of Family Portraits.

The Broken Heart; a dramatic sketch, from the Italian.

Rome in the Nineteenth Century: a series of letters written during a residence in that city, by a Lady.

The Deaf and Dumb Page; a Tale.

Anecdotes of the Court of Louis the XIV.; by the Duke of St. Simon.

The Black Watch; an Historical Novel, by the author of the Double Legacy &c. &c. One of the best novels, say the London Magazines, of the present day.

Tudor's new book of Travels in Mexico and Cuba.

Allan Cunningham's Biographical and Critical History of Literature for the last fifty years.

Helena, a Novel, by Maria Edgeworth.

Journal of a West India Proprietor, kept during a residence in the Island of Jamaica, by the late Matthew G. Lewis, Esq. M. P. author of the Monk, &c.

The Curate's Tale, or Practical Joking; from a new work entitled Nights of the Round Table.

PROPOSALS

TO REVISE THE LONDON, EDINBURGH, FOREIGN AND WESTMINSTER QUARTERLY REVIEWS, FOR A PER ANNUM.

THE above Journals are already so well known to the public, that little need be said of their respective merits.

The well sustained reputation of the London Quarterly, not only as an able defender of Tory principles, and the old order of things, but as the witty and most entertaining of Reviews, will always command the attention of the literary and scientific.

The Edinburgh, celebrated for the vigor, learning and acuteness which its articles display, conducted by some of the principal literary men of the modern Athens, is an equally powerful champion of the moderate Reform party.

The FOREIGN QUARTERLY occupies a neutral ground in Politics, and is devoted to continental literature.

The WESTMINSTER is but little known in this country. It may be considered as the advocate of the Radicals, and the mouth piece of Benthamism. It represents the principles of a party already numerous in England, and fast increasing in the United States.

The numbers will be put to press immediately after they shall be received from Europe; and will contain the entire matter of the above works; making four annual volumes of upwards of six hundred pages.

They will be executed in as good style, and be printed in a shape but little differing from that of the European editions.

The price will be $8 per annum, payable three months after the delivery of the first number. The English copies cannot be purchased for less than $30. Of the three at present published, two of them alone cost $10.

Any individual procuring four subscribers, and remitting $30 on the receipt of the first Number, will be allowed an additional copy.

Subscription papers to be returned, and all communications to be addressed, post paid, to Theodore Foster, Albany, N. Y. Oct. 16.

Subscriptions received at this office.

COMPANION TO WALDIE'S LIBRARY.

The cheapest reprint from English Periodicals ever offered to the public.

BEFORE the Select Circulating Library had been long in existence, it was discovered that there was still something wanting—that many occurrences in the literary world most persons unknown, as regarded our agency, without an extension of the plan. To establish a fuller medium of communication and supply the desideratum, the Journal of Better Letters was added; which we have reason to believe has afforded general satisfaction. The very liberal patronage extended to the Library induced the proprietors to give that gratuitously as an evidence of their acknowledgments.

More extended experience has shown other desiderata which the "Companion" is intended to supply. While reading for the "Library" a large mass of material accumulates on the hands of the editor, of an interesting, entertaining, and instructive description, such as would properly come under the denomination of Magaziniana, interspersed with the Reviews from the English Quarters. To publish every thing of this nature which we deem desirable would encroach too much on the columns of the "Library" designed for books, and yet to pass them by is constantly a subject of regret. To concentrate, therefore, the publication of Books entire, Reviews, lists of new works, the choicest contributions to Magazines, &c. &c. the "Companion to Waldie's Library" will be offered to the patronage of the present subscribers and the public at large. It is hoped that with the "Library," the "Journal," and the "Companion," such an acquaintance with the literature of the age may be cultivated as to leave little further to be desired. Being all published from the same office, more facility offers for subscribing, and having fewer people to deal with, mistakes are less liable to occur, and more readily corrected when they do. The short interval of two weeks between the publication of each number, it is thought too, will be an advantage over monthlies and quarters.

The following plan is respectfully submitted.

1. The "COMPANION" will contain the earliest possible reprints of the best matter in the British periodicals.

2. It will be issued every fortnight, and the form will be the same as that of the Library—each number containing sixteen pages—thus, every six months, giving thirteen numbers, which can be bound with the Library at little or no more expense, and making a better sized volume; and to those who do not take the Library itself, a volume every year, of 416 quarto pages of the size of the present.

3. The price will be three dollars for a subscriber—five dollars for two—and clubs five and upwards will be supplied at two dollars each.

4. As the work will not be commenced, unless a sufficient patronage be obtained, no payment is required at present, only the name, sent free of postage. Those wishing to support the publication will be pleased therefore to announce their intention as early as possible, as it is intended to commence the work on the 1st of January next. On the issuing of the second number payment will be expected, as its appearance will evince a sufficiency of patronage.

THE PROPRIETOR OF THE "SELECT CIRCULATING LIBRARY"

fully aware from experience of the advantages to the public of the rapid diffusion of cheap and select literature, has been induced to add the important feature to the work, and of course leaves it optional with the present subscribers and others to take it or not.

It is confidently believed, that, with the attention on the part of the Editor, who has already at hand the material for such a work, all the really valuable matter of the English literary and amusing publications may be comprised in this form at a rate of subscription and postage, so trifling as scarcely to be felt. It will form the cheapest reprint of reviews and magazines ever attempted in any country; a comparison with others it was useless here to enter upon, the "Library" itself being the best test by which to judge of the difference between an octavo and a quarto page. It will be the study of the Editor to embody a record of the day, adapted to the wants of this country, which can have no competitor for value or cheapness; how far he is likely to do this he must leave at present to the decision of his readers.

Clubs of five individuals, who subscribe to the "Library" and "Companion" both, will obtain the two for six dollars, the postage (a very important consideration) to the most distant post office, on the two, will be one dollar and ninety five cents, divided into seventy eight payments, and half that sum for 100 miles or a less distance from Philadelphia, while the same matter, in the usual American reprints of reviews and magazines, in octavo form would be eighteen dollars, and the postage as three to one. We make this assertion advisedly.

Subscribers to the "Companion" will be taken either with or without the "Library."

The proprietor trusts that his punctuality and exactness in executing his part of the contract in the publication of the "Library," will be considered a sufficient guarantee of the completion of his proposed undertaking.

PROSPECTUS.
The Subscriber proposes to publish, in Upper Marlboro', Prince George's county, Maryland, a weekly journal, to be called
THE BULLETIN.

In undertaking to supply this acknowledged desideratum to the populous and intelligent district in which the subscriber has the pleasure to reside, his hope of ultimate success is not its origin in sanguineousness of sentiment, but proceeds from the eminent advantages of its location. Published in the metropolis of a large and wealthy county, situated equidistant from the State and National capitals, facilities of an early communication of whatever may interest its patrons, are particularly afforded to the Editor; and though he may not hope to present to his readers much foreign information through the medium of his columns, it is still certain that intelligence of a local nature, interesting to all, and important to many, and otherwise unobtainable, will by this means be communicated. It will also offer to those whose means are inadequate to the expense of the larger journals, at least a synoptical view of all the important information they contain; and he trusts that those of literary taste may sometimes find in its columns, articles not unworthy of the employment of their leisure. As the plan of every publication which is to find success in popular support, must first be approved before public patronage can be expected, the Editor would here mark the outline of his design, with the full knowledge that it will constitute an ordeal, by which, to determine both its merit and the fidelity of its execution.

The Editor proposes to adapt his paper to the wants of those by whom he is immediately surrounded, and among whom he must naturally find a majority of his patrons: he knows them to be intelligent and inquiring.—The Literary department, shall, therefore, be as judiciously regarded, and the most approved domestic and foreign periodicals resorted to for the belles lettres. He knows them to be patriotic, and that they feel a deep interest in the welfare of our common country. To gratify this sentiment to the extent of his ability, his columns shall afford whatever intelligence of a political character may be calculated to interest them. No man, with the faintest thought, is at this crisis neutral in regard to the party distinctions now prevailing in this country, and the Editor does not wish to be less so. His political sentiments—they are in opposition to the measures of the present administration. But having neither the temper nor the motive of a partisan, his comments upon party moves shall be characterized by candour of argument, not violence or abuse, and if never has been his practice, so shall it never become his habit to deal in political calumny or party virulence. He will cheerfully lead the aid of his columns to communicate from all parties—reserving to himself the privilege of rejecting such as are objectionable for personal allusion or indecorous language. In addition to the advantages of appropriate political and literary selections, he is desirous to tempt into exercise whatever talent may surround him, and with such purposeful and interesting. He asks for the patronage of his friends longer than for the picture of his enemies. He wishes to be denied to his editorial labors. The Bulletin will be published on Thursdays each week. Terms of subscription $3 per annum.

ENLARGED SERIES OF THE MUSEUM.

MR. LITTELL has much pleasure in announcing to the patrons of the Museum, that he has made arrangements for the future publication of the work in a style much superior to the present—and nearly approaching what he has always desired that it should appear in. The circulation of the work is now so large, as to make it important to the proprietor that he should be able to give his whole attention to it. This has hitherto been prevented by the care and labour attendant upon a multifarious and widely extended business. With the view of completing more quickly the publication of Lodge's Portraits and Memoirs of Illustrious and Noble Characters, (a splendid work now in hand)—of effecting a settlement of accounts extending over the whole of the United States—and of making arrangements in all parts of the country for the vigorous prosecution of the publication of the Museum, he has made a contract with Mr. Adams Waldie of this city to print the work, attend to its distribution, and manage all the financial concerns appertaining to it after the present year.

Mr. Waldie is a practical printer, not surpassed in taste by any other in the country; and as he is advantageously and generally known as the publisher of the Select Circulating Library, it is supposed that he will have it in his power greatly to promote the sale of the Museum. He has contracted to issue it promptly, and thus will be corrected the greatest fault which has heretofore attended its management. The changes in the appearance of the work will be as follows:

1. It will be regularly and promptly published.
2. Will be uniformly and handsomely printed.
3. On better paper.
4. Will be considerably enlarged.

As the sale of the work has increased, Mr. Littell has always been desirous of devoting the enlarged profits to its improvement—and although he does not wish the appearance of the next volume to be considered as entirely carrying out his plan, he trusts that the subscribers will be convinced, upon comparing it with any other work, that it is richly worth the price asked for it.

We shall not have satisfied our own wishes in respect to this work, until it shall be so far enlarged and improved, as to make it clear to every purchaser, that he will hereafter receive all that is desirable in an American reader from all the foreign periodicals. That we can do so, is a matter which we are making it our business to settle, by making it contain more of the best foreign matter as an original contribution, than any other work. A great part of most of the Reviews and Magazines is composed of extracts from articles, and we cheerfully open our columns to the looking over of the Editor, and whether we have not also received a very great degree, succeeded in copying what was worth preservation.

As the work will now be considerably enlarged, we shall be able more fully to accomplish its object. In order that he may, by frequent journeys from home, be the earlier able to finish all other business, and devote himself exclusively to the Museum, Mr. Littell has made arrangements with the Editor of Waldie's Library to edit this work after December, 1834. However deficient the proprietor may be in other qualifications, he has always felt so zealous an affection for the Museum that he would not be willing to commit it, even for a time, to the care of another, were he not confident that the facilities, the experience and the ability of the new Editor, will render it more worthy of the patronage of the public than it has heretofore been. No change takes place in the Proprietorship.

POETRY.

(From the Boston Traveller.)
EVENING MELODIES.

BY O. W. W.
No. 3.
We will not part—Time never flies
Upon a wing so light,
As when the smile of brilliant eyes
Is beaming on the night.
Then go not yet,
The stars are wet,
And o'er our path are smiling
While every heart,
Seems loath to part,
From pleasures so beguiling.
We may not part—our lips again
Shall breathe their songs once more,
And music wake, with heavenly strain,
The tones we loved of yore—
The stars of night
Are shining bright,
To every heart appealing,
While, like a spell,
The vaper bell
Upon the air is stealing.
We must not part—such dreams as those,
Too exquisitely gay,
For us to enter their brief career,
Or easily turn away.
Tears, now we part,
Each with a full heart,
Once more, with thrill and feeling,
And glow with light,
Here is Good Night,
From every lip is stealing.

INCIDENTAL.

A BEE HUNT.
BY WASHINGTON IRVING.

The beautiful forest in which we were encamped, abounded in bee trees; that is to say, trees in the cavity of which wild bees, and established their nests. It is surprising in what countless swarms the bees have over-spread the far west, within but a moderate number of years. The Indians consider them the harbinger of the white man, as the buffalo is of the red man; and say that, in proportion as the bee advances, the Indian and buffalo retire. We are not accustomed to associate the hum of the bee with the farm house and flower garden, and to consider these industrious little animals associated with the busy haunts of man, and I am not that the wild bee is seldom to be met with at any great distance from the frontier. They have been the heralds of civilization, steadily preceding it as it advanced from the Atlantic borders, and some ancient settlers of the west pretend to give the very year when the honey bee first crossed the Mississippi. The Indians with surprise found the maddening hum of the bees, and the bees, in turn, found the honey, and the bees, in turn, found the honey, and the bees, in turn, found the honey.

At present, however, we were in myriads, in the most remote and forest that start and enter of the prairie, and extend along the alluvial banks of the rivers. It seemed to me as if it were a beautiful region, never literally to the eye, of the land of promise, a land flowing with milk and honey; for the rich pasture of the prairie is calculated to sustain herds of cattle as countless as the sands upon the sea shore, while the flowers with which they are encumbered, render them a very paradise for the most rascally bee.

We had not been long in the camp when a party set out in quest of a bee tree; and being curious to witness the sport, I gladly accepted an invitation to accompany them. The party was headed by a veteran bee-hunter, a tall, lank fellow in home spun garb that hung loosely about his limbs, and a straw hat shaped not unlike a beehive; a comrad, equally uncouth in garb, without a hat, straddled along at his heels, with a long rifle at his shoulder. To these succeeded half a dozen others, some with axes and some with rifles, for no one strays far from the camp without his fire-arms, so as to be ready either for wild deer or wild Indian.

After proceeding some distance we came to an open glade on the skirts of the forest. Here our leader halted, and then advanced quietly to a low bush, on the top of which I perceived a piece of honeycomb. This I found was the bait or lure for the wild bee. Several were humming about it, and diving into its cells. When they had laden themselves with honey they would rise into the air, and dart off in a straight line, almost with the velocity of a bullet. The hunters watched attentively the course which they took, and then set off in the same direction, stumbling along over twisted roots and fallen trees, with their eyes turned to the sky. In this way they traced the honey laden bees to their hive, in the hollow trunk of a blighted oak, where, after buzzing about for a moment, they entered a hole about sixty feet from the ground.

Two of the bee-hunters now plied their axes vigorously at the foot of the tree, to level it with the ground. The mere spectators and amateurs, in the meantime, drew off to a cautious distance, to be out of the way of the falling of the tree and the vengeance of its inmates. The jarring blows of the axe seemed to have no effect in alarming or disturbing this most industrious community. They continued to ply at their usual occupation, some arriving full freighted in port, others sallying forth on new expeditions. Like so many merchantmen in a money-making metropolis, little suspicious of impending bankruptcy and downfall. Even a loud crack which announced the disruption of the trunk, failed to divert their attention from the intense pursuit of gain; at length down came the tree with a tremendous crash bursting open from end to end, and displaying all the hoarded treasures of the commonwealth.

One of the hunters immediately ran up with a wisp of lighted hay as a defence against the bees. The latter, however, made no attack and sought no revenge; they seemed stupefied by the catastrophe and unsuspecting of its cause, and remained crawling and buzzing about the ruin without offering us any molestation. Every one of the party now fell to with spoon and hunting knife, to scoop out the flakes of honeycomb with which the hollow trunk was stored. Some of them were of old date and a deep brown colour; others were beautifully white, and the honey in their cells was almost limpid. Such of the combs as were entire were placed in camp kettles to be conveyed to the encampment; those which had been shattered in the fall were devoured upon the spot. Every stark bee-hunter was to be seen with a rich morsel in his hand dripping about his fingers, and disappearing as rapidly as a cream-tart before the holiday appetite of a school boy.

Nor was it the bee-hunters that profited by the downfall of this industrious community, as if the bees would carry through the similitude of their habits with those of laborious and gainful man, I beheld numbers from rival hives, arriving on the eager wing, to enrich themselves with the ruins of their neighbors. These bodied themselves as eagerly and cheerfully as so many wreckers on an Indianman that has been driven on shore; plunging into the cells of the broken honey combs, banqueting greedily on the spoil, and then winging their way full freighted to their homes. As to the poor proprietors of the ruin, they seemed to have no heart to do any thing, not even to taste the nectar that flowed around them; but crawled backward and forward in vacant desolation, as I have seen a poor fellow with his hands in his breeches pockets, whistling vacantly and despondingly about the ruins of his house that had been burnt.

It is difficult to describe the bewilderment and confusion of the bees of the bankrupt hive who had been absent at the time of the catastrophe, and who arrived from time to time, with full cargoes from abroad. At first they wheeled about in the air, in the place where the full tree had once reared its head, astonished at finding it all a vacuum. At length, as if comprehending their disaster, they settled down in clusters on a dry branch of a neighbouring tree, from whence they seemed to contemplate the prostrate ruin, and to buzz forth doleful lamentations over the downfall of their republic. It was a scene on which the melancholy Jaques might have moralized by the hour.

We now abandoned the place, leaving much honey in the hollow of the tree. It will all be cleared off by vanguard, said one of the rangers. "What vermin?" asked I. "Oh, bears, and skunks, and raccoons, and possums. The bears are the knowingest vermin, for finding out a beehive in the world. They'll gnaw for days together at the trunk till they make a hole big enough to get in their paws, and then they'll haul out honey, bees and all."

THRILLING SPECTACLE.

The 60th anniversary of the memorable battle of Lexington, the beginning of the American Revolution, was celebrated at Danvers, Massachusetts, as well as at Lexington, by a public procession, attended by a brilliant escort, an address, and the laying of the corner stone of a Monument to be erected by the enterprising citizens of Danvers, in memory of the seven citizens of that town, who fell at the battle of Lexington. At the place where the Monument is to be erected, the assembled people were addressed by Gen. Gideon Foster, the surviving commander of the Danvers company who repaired to Lexington on the morning of the battle, and fought bravely the glorious fight of their country. What an interesting spectacle it must have been to witness that venerable man, whose locks are whitened with the frosts of eighty-two winters, coming from amidst the sires, the patriots of the Revolution, that worthy race of men who have now almost passed from among us, and addressing his children and the children of his compatriots in arms, in the following eloquent strains:

Friends and Fellow-Citizens:
On the ever memorable 19th day of April, 1775, now 60 years past, it was my fortune to meet in this place, with numbers of my fellow-citizens, to defend the rights and liberties of my country. The alarm of war was sounded.—The enemy was then amongst us. The first blood of Americans was then shed. On the plain of Lexington the roar of arms was then sounding,—the strife of war was then raging.

On that morning, more than one hundred of my townsmen hastened to the field of battle,—unused to the art of war—unskilled in the arts of slaying their fellow men—their hearts were flowing with zeal in their country's cause, and ready to offer their lives on the altar of their liberties. Seven of those who thus started in the prime of life and vigor of manhood, ere that day's sun descended in the west were numbered with the dead. Many others have marks of the well directed fire of the enemy.

To perpetuate the memory of those who then offered their lives for their country's good—to perpetuate the principles with which they were actuated, is the purpose of this day's meeting.—Is the monument, the foundation of which is now being laid. May this purpose be accomplished—may these principles be remembered, and made the rule of action, in all coming times—and may the names which are here recorded, endure until the granite of our own hills shall be crumbled in the dust.

I was then 26 years of age. About ten days before, I had been chosen to command a company of minute men, who were at all times to be in readiness at a moment's warning. They were so ready. They all assembled, on the very spot where we this day assembled—they all went; and in about four hours from the time of meeting, they travelled on foot (full half the way upon the run), sixteen miles, and saluted the enemy. This they did most effectively—as the records of that day most clearly prove. I discharged my musket at the enemy a number of times, (I think eleven), with two balls each time, and with well directed aim. My comrade, (Mr. Cleaves, of Beverly), who was then standing by my side, had his finger and thumb cut away by a shot from the enemy.

Whether my shot took effect, I cannot say; but this I can say, if they did not, it was not for want of determined purpose, in him who sent them. Of those under my immediate command, there is no one left alive. Three of them were slain on that day. I am proud to tell their story. I, a tottering old man, through the goodness of God, am now permitted to see here. I am permitted to see the day's ascending sun, and to witness these interesting occurrences. I can truly say, it is one of the happiest days, and most pleasing events, of my life. A few days more at most, and perhaps very few, and I shall be numbered with the dead.

But while I am permitted to see the Patriots of '76, and to see the day's ascending sun, and to witness these interesting occurrences, I can truly say, it is one of the happiest days, and most pleasing events, of my life. A few days more at most, and perhaps very few, and I shall be numbered with the dead.

All true friends of the cause will cheerfully unite in forwarding the objects of this Convention.

THE FOURTH DISTRICT.

April 30, 1835.
The Baltimore Republican will publish this notice until the day of meeting.

On Monday last, a Schooner, on her return from Baltimore, had a respectable crew of about twenty men, and a cargo of goods, and was struck by a flow of water, and was driven away the floating of the main boom, and was being at the time, thrown overboard, a young lady, who, but for the gallant exertions of the gentlemen, sons of Col. Wallace, must inevitably have been consigned to a watery grave. The vessel at the time, was sailing at the rate of five miles the hour, and had got one hundred yards ahead, when she could be brought up to the wind. The gentlemen immediately abandoned the vessel, and, after a short time, were rescued, and landed on the shore, and they were rescued from their perilous situation by a small boat launched from the schooner.

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The Convention which assembled in Baltimore on the 20th instant, for the purpose of nominating Candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States, adjourned on Friday last, having completed the duties assigned them. We regret our circumscribed limits preclude the insertion of their proceedings in detail. We give below those of the last day's meeting.

FRIDAY, MAY 22.

The Convention assembled at 9 o'clock. Prayer by the Rev. Mr. Clark. Some discussion here took place, upon a suggestion by Mr. Daniel, of Virginia.

The Convention took a recess until 12 o'clock. At the time appointed the Convention again met.

Mr. Osgood, of Mass. moved that the second resolution reported by the committee to report the names of delegates to the convention, be not taken up, which was carried, and the resolution adopted.

At the request of Mr. Strange, it was moved that the resolution providing that a majority be not taken to constitute a choice, be reconsidered, which was carried.

The previous question was called for by Mr. Lindley. The Indiana delegation demanded that the vote be taken by states according to their number of votes. It was decided that the main question be put.

The main question was carried in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Ranney, it was resolved that the convention proceed to vote for President.

Two sets of votes were given by Pennsylvania, both for Martin Van Buren.

On counting the ballots, the vote was as follows:

Resolved, That the vote of Pennsylvania be considered as presented by the united delegation.

6 o'clock, P. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

A resolution was offered by the Delegates from Michigan, expressive of their approbation of the nominations, with a request that it be entered upon the journal, which was agreed to.

The states of Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Maryland and Georgia, all acceded to the nomination of Richard M. Johnson for the Presidency, and pledged themselves to use their Vice best endeavours to secure the election of the ticket by the people.

The Convention at 9 o'clock adjourned sine die.

It is stated that peaches of quite a large size are now on the trees in a hot house of T. H. Perkins in Brooklyn, Massachusetts, and that he will have ripe grapes in about six weeks. Mr. Perkins' grapes are heated on the hot water system with small pipes.

A NEW COUNTERFEIT NOTE.

The Cumberland-Civilian of the 12th inst. says: We were shown, a few days since, a new specimen of Bank Note Counterfeiting. It purported to be a twenty dollar note upon the Farmer Bank of Maryland, but a little inspection will detect it to be an altered twenty dollar note on the Bank of Maryland, signed J. B. Morris, Prest. R. Wilson, Cashier. It is dated Sept. 30th, 1832—payable to M. Johnson. Persons familiar with the notes of the Bank of Maryland, may easily detect the counterfeit.

Wm. Gwyn, Esq. has resumed the editorial department of the Baltimore Gazette.

From the Baltimore Gazette of May 23.

It was announced yesterday, that, from necessity, the Gazette, after a lapse of about ten months, was again under the direction of its former proprietor and editor. The distressing cause of that necessity was well understood throughout the city before the Gazette was published—and our indulgent patrons will excuse us the painful task of detailing the supposed or reported circumstances, until the accusation legally made shall be legally decided on. Independent of all claims which the unhappy man justly has on us, from our intimate knowledge of his amiable and excellent qualities from his infancy up to the day of the accusation, and from the high estimation in which he has uniformly been held by the respectable citizens of Baltimore—we can see neither reason nor excuse for departing, in his case, from the rule of law—as just as it is humane—that every man is to be presumed innocent, until the unanimous verdict of an impartial jury shall pronounce him guilty.

We state then, simply, the fact, that Mr. Jones, the late editor of this Gazette, was yesterday brought before Judge Glenn, on a charge of having purloined a number of letters from the Post Office in this city—the charge being made on oath. He was not offered, he was committed for trial. He was not examined before Judge Glenn—of course he did not make any confession or admission to him relating to the charge.

We defer saying any thing about editorial arrangements until next week.

LARGE SUBSCRIPTION.

The New York Journal of Commerce says:—We understand that at the business meeting of the Anti-Slavery Society, held in that city a few days since, the enormous sum of fourteen thousand dollars was subscribed in aid of the Society's funds. One gentleman gave $3,000, two others $1,200 each, and so on downward, according to the several abilities or zeal of the gentlemen present. We cannot but admire this princely liberality, prompted as it is no doubt, in many cases, by the best of motives, and intended for the best good of the race, both white and coloured.

A Bird Born.

ESCAPE OF A PRISONER.

The New York Journal of Commerce, says: Thomas Rurd, who was some days back arrested in Philadelphia on a requisition from the governor of this State, charged with robbing a land office, and passed through this city in custody on his way to Waterford, made his escape on board the steamboat between this and Westchester. He got off during the night, and must have leaped overboard, though in irons, as between the time he was last seen on board and when he was missed, the boat had not stopped at any landing place.

GREAT FIRE IN BOSTON.

The Boston papers give the particulars of the most extensive conflagration which has occurred in that city for many years.

On Monday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, the flames were seen bursting from the carpenter's shop of Smith and Stetson, in Blackstone street. It was occasioned by the oversetting of a spirit lamp, employed in heating a pot of glue, which instantaneously communicated the flames to every part of the shop.

The wind blew very strong from the north-west, and every thing being very dry, it spread with irresistible fury along Blackstone, and up Cross street. In a short time nearly all the buildings on the east side of Blackstone street, on both sides of Pond street, and on the west side of Salem street, were in a blaze from Cross street to Pond street.

These limits embrace a very large enclosure, comprising some thirty buildings. Some of them were large new brick buildings, and others were old wooden structures. They consisted of taverns, private dwelling houses, stables, mechanics shops, stores and warehouses. Among others, was the Massachusetts Hotel, on Pond street, occupied by Mr. Harris, a large brick building, and owned by Judge Wern, was nearly destroyed inside, and the Mechanic's Inn, corner of Blackstone and Cross streets.

The tendency of the flames was towards Salem and Hanover streets, and such was the violence of the wind, that for more than two hours it was feared that no human efforts could prevent them extending across Salem and Hanover streets. Had they passed either of those streets, they would have communicated to extensive groups of large wooden buildings, on the one hand east of Salem street and between Cross and Hanover sts. and on the other hand between Cross and Center sts. beyond Hanover street, it would have been next to an impossibility to prevent their extending as far as the new ranges of buildings on Commercial street.

It is variously estimated that from 25 to 40 buildings were destroyed, or essentially injured. Many of them were occupied by small poor families, including many indigent females, widows and orphans. It is probable that nearly a hundred of these little domestic circles have been entirely burnt out, and as many more families were suddenly driven from their homes and compelled to remove their furniture by the eminent peril.

At one time it appeared inevitable, that the large range of buildings on Blackstone street, extending to Hanover street, would yield to the raging element. To arrest the flames in this direction, a large wooden building was nearly torn down, and then it was so flooded with water, as to stop the progress of the fire. Thus was the large crockery ware store, occupied by Mr. Edward Chamberlain, saved, and the extension of the fire to Hanover street prevented.

On Salem street corner of Pond street, the flames were arrested in a large brick store, occupied by Mr. A. L. Chamberlain, but not until nearly all the inside of the building was consumed.

The following are among the buildings burnt, and the sufferers by the fire. Smith & Stetson, lost from $2000 to 3000, insured $1000. Mr. Baldwin, carpenter, lost his shop and materials. Loss $2000. No insurance, and nothing saved. Mr. Simon's stable burnt; loss $500; Mr. Abbott Capen's shop and materials; total loss. Unoccupied circular building owned by Mr. Smith, was somewhat injured. Also painter's shop of Charles Henderson, considerably injured. House on corner of Cross and Blackstone street, about half destroyed and owned by Mr. Smith.

A stable belonging to Mr. Davis, another to Mr. Harris, and another to Mr. Winthrop, totally destroyed—no horses destroyed. Patent window frame and sawing machine of Mr. Thomas Boyd, totally destroyed. Stillman White's blacksmith shop destroyed. Dr. Samuel Thompson's apothecary shop and house. Mr. Chamberlain's grocery. Report for the New York Courier and Enquirer.

Police Office—Monday.—Sterling again.—As every fact connected with the past proceedings and history of this wretch is important we lay before our readers the following additional particulars relative to him.

Information was received at the police office yesterday from Boston that this wretch was living at the head of Rose street in that city between three and four years since, and that he had then an amiable wife and two children by her, that he used to beat her so cruelly as to endanger life, and ultimately compelled her to leave him and go by water in a small schooner (that was not seaworthy) to his native place, Mount Desert, in the state of Maine; that the schooner became water logged, and all the persons that were in her perished; that the vessel was afterwards boarded at sea, and a large quantity of clothing, &c. was taken out of her and carried to Cape Cod; that Sterling went there, laid claim to all the property, seized every thing that he could lay his hands on, and then commenced suits against every person whom he supposed was in possession of any of the things taken out of the vessel; but that when the causes came on for trial, Sterling (whose character had then become known) absconded, with what goods he had got. The letter added that he married very soon after the above affair, a handsome girl with a portion of several hundred dollars, whom he so beat and abused a few months after marriage, that she determined to leave him. His wife's sister is still living at Port Hill. This scoundrel's real name we understand is Charles M. Sterling, he is a native of Mount Desert, Maine, which place he was compelled to leave in consequence of his infamous and fraudulent conduct.

The history of this man is almost without a parallel in the criminal annals of our city; every day, and almost every hour develops some new scene of atrocity and cold blooded brutality towards females, and we give early publicity to his proceedings in order that further particulars relative to him, may be forwarded to our police department before his trial, by those who may be in possession of them. The full number of his wives, doubtless, has not yet come to the knowledge of the Police. We therefore state that he has been much at sea—has lived at Boston, Baltimore, Bergen, Ramapaw, Mount Desert, Port Hill, Nyack, and other places, and has passed himself off at different times for a sea captain, a West India trader, a South Sea whaler, a merchant, a doctor, and a Lawyer.

We also learn that there is a young lady now living in New Jersey, about two miles from Bergen, whom he seduced under a promise of marriage within a few days of his marriage with Mrs. Rose of Ramapaw, and who had a child by him that is now nearly eighteen months old. There is also, we are told, another female victim to his villainy living at or near Nyack, where he passed himself off as a doctor.

He had also, we are informed by one of the officers, just returned from a tour of inquiry in that neighbourhood, sent a considerable part of his property up to that vicinity, with a view it is supposed of inducing another lady to whom he had paid some attention, to throw herself into his vampire-like grasp.

ALL SORTS OF WEATHER.

From the Quebec Mercury of the 18th inst, we learn that the snow had been falling steadily during the whole morning. In the country round, it lay to the depth of several inches. In the afternoon it changed to sleet, and the weather was of course doubly uncomfortable. Saturday was a pleasant day with us. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday were exceedingly warm here—to such a degree that we yesterday morning exchanged winter garments for summer—and before night had to change them back again! To-day is one of genial temperature, and glorious sunshine. What it may be before this paper goes to press, we will not venture to predict.

We saw one of the police men going up Chesnut street yesterday, with something under his arm which we thought at first was a dead monkey; but on coming closer, we perceived that it was one of the smallest pieces of humanity that we ever saw in trowsers—a little thing, with a cap, weighing, clothes, cap, body and all, about 25 or 40 pounds—and the little fellow was drunk. Where he ever got liquor in a sufficiently small quantity to intoxicate him, we know not; it must have been a homeopathic dose; but it had been effective, and the poor little one lay across the officer's waist, as a small wet pocket-handkerchief. What the Mayor would do with it, we can't imagine.—Phil. U. S. Gaz.

LATEST FROM LIBERIA.

From the Liberia Herald of March 30th. CAPE PALMAR.—By the arrival of the Brig Elizabeth, we are gratified to learn, that the settlers at Cape Palmas is unusually good, as they are progressing rapidly in agriculture, the object, its patrons had in view, in the settlement colony. Dr. Hall's health is as usual. The B. Wilson & lady, suffered severely from the effects fever; but they are now convalescent, and bid fair able shortly, to commence their pious and b operations.

Grand Bassa.—By the arrival of the schooner buetco, from Grand Bassa, we rejoice to learn the tinned health of the older colonies at Edina, and neral recovery & convalescence of the late out of Bassa Cove. With peculiar pleasure we hear Mr. Hankinson and Lady are quite restored from severe effects of the fever, and wish they may n gain experience its return. We congratulate our friends, that they can make the advantage of the tion so evident as to envelope away several of others. For surely if Bassa possesses a more pro soil than the regions adjoining the St. Paul's blessed indeed! The latter yields a crop worth the acre.

Public Spirit at Caldwell.—On Saturday the instant, the inhabitants of Caldwell, with a spirit is truly laudable, (and of which we of Monrovia too much destitute,) turned out and cut down the weeds, and high grass in the town, and a d of nearly three quarters of a mile. These weeds so deleterious to the health, and destruct every thing like beauty or regularity, and so indicative of the absence of industry, have long d that settlement.

...and by extracts from London journals. M. Berryer spoke for three hours, and according to the testimony borne by the journals of all parties, was listened to with unremitting attention by every member present.

His speech will be found among the extracts from the French papers, where also we give the report of the early part of Thursday's sitting. By the latter it appears that M. Berryer had found it necessary to employ the powers of his eloquence as soon as possible after M. Berryer, in order to weaken, if he could, the impression which that gentleman's speech seems to have made on the Chamber.

The anxiety thus displayed by the Minister was natural enough under the circumstances; but it will appear still more so, when it is remembered that it was in a great measure owing to a similar speech from M. Berryer that the Chamber was last year, induced to vote against the grant. M. Berryer, was then the only organ of the legitimist party in the Chamber, is now the leader of the extreme right, which, through the great exertions, used by the party at the last elections, has been reinforced by some 15 or 16 members. These members are all of them decidedly opposed to the proposed grant in favour of the American claimants.

JUST BUT HEAVY RETRIBUTION.—African have appeared in the papers, from time to time, of an atrocious murder committed by two negroes, in the neighbourhood of M. Berryer, on the persons of two children, a boy and a girl, nine and the latter twelve years of age, whose fate was some time since reported in mystery. The negroes were charged with their own confession, of having murdered these unfortunate, with circumstances of peculiar horror. The result is thus announced in a statement published in the Mobile papers, and authenticated by the signature of the Grand Jury of the county.—N. Y. Com. Adv.

As the court pronounced this only sentence, the law—the another flame burst forth. The laws of the country had never been so much violated as in this case. Crimes could be perpetrated with such peculiar circumstances of barbarity, and had therefore provided no adequate punishment. Their lives were justly forfeited to the laws of the country, by the peculiar circumstances described, that the ordinary punishment should be inflicted on them—they were seized, taken to the place where they had perpetrated the act, and then to death.

ACCIDENTS.—A man named James Leonard, belonging to the schooner, one of the Boston packets, while assisting yesterday, in hoisting a millstone from the hull, was killed, in consequence of the rigging of the vessel giving way, and the stone falling on his head. He was a native of London, but has resided for some time in Boston, where he has a wife and two children.

On Monday last a man was run over by a railroad car and had one of his legs so severely fractured, that it was found necessary to amputate it.—Balt. Rep.

FOREIGN.

LATER FROM EUROPE.—The pocket ship Canada, Capt. Britton, arrived on Saturday evening, having left Paris, which on the 20th ult. The Editors of the N. Y. Mercantile Advertiser and New York Advertiser, have received London papers to Sunday morning the 19th.

The debate on the American Indemnity Bill, will go on in the French Chamber at the latest date from Paris, but was apparently brought nearly to a close. It is stated that the speech of M. Berryer on the 13th produced a great deal of sensation, and caused several members who were previously decidedly in favour of the bill, to waver in their opinions. It was calculated previous to this speech, that the majority in favour of the bill was 55 to 60; that unless the Ministers were able to counteract the statements in the speech, this majority would be diminished—and that much depended on the number in which M. Thiers, (who was left speaking) acquitted himself.

One of the passengers in the Canada, furnished our news collector that the bill had passed the Chamber—but his information is not confirmed by the other passengers; nor by the papers. It is possible however that such intelligence may have reached London, subsequent to the date of the papers, and in time for him to have heard it.

The new British Ministry has been organized with Lord Melbourne at the head.

The papers announce the death of Baron Haussmann.

Private Correspondence.

Paris, Thursday afternoon.

The speech of M. Berryer in yesterday's sitting of the Chamber has produced a very disagreeable impression in the Ministerial circles, and has been entertained this morning whether the amendment of M. Bignon will be ultimately adopted. The American papers which ought to have sailed to day from Paris, have been detained to wait the issue; and Mr. Bignon is in readiness to leave Paris and embark on board the Constitution, should any decision be adopted by the Chamber incompatible with the full execution of the treaty, or derogatory to the honour of his Government.

An editorial article in the same paper.

The French papers of Thursday, which we have received by express, are nearly filled with reports of a speech delivered on the previous day in the Chamber of Deputies, by M. Berryer, in support of the American claimants.

ROYAL MUSE OF CLUBS, AND

WALDIE'S LIBRARY, PORTFOLIO AND MUSEUM.

AS the publications now issued from the office of the Select Circulating Library are of a highly popular cast, and of such interest to be appreciated by the community, and to circulate every where, by concert with the proprietor of the Museum, that work, the Portfolio and Library, are offered to those who take the three on the following conditions, viz:

The Museum, Portfolio and Library, if paid for in advance, and addressed to the same individual, whether in town or country, will be supplied for $1.00 enabling every individual to benefit by the clubbing system, without the necessity of applying to others. Those who have made a payment for the current year to either of the works, of whatever amount, will be privileged to avail themselves of this arrangement, by paying the balance—thus

1. Those who have paid or now pay $1 for the Library, shall receive the Museum and Portfolio, the price of which separate is $9. on the payment of $7.

2. Those who have paid or now pay $6 for the Museum, shall receive the Library and Portfolio, the price of which separate is $8, on the payment of $5.

3. Those who have paid or now pay $12 for the Portfolio, shall receive the Library and Museum, on paying such sum as will be equal to $12 on the whole.

4. The Circulating Library and Museum, will be sent to the same address on the payment of $10.

REMARKS.—The three works, thus issued together, comprise a greater amount of the current literature of the age, than is issued in a periodical form from any other office in the United States, and will, the proprietor believes, with the addition of a good newspaper, supply to families all the advantages which could be furnished in a most extensive reading room in one of our Atlantic cities. In the Library the newest and best books are regularly published; in the Museum and Portfolio it has been found by experience that every thing we could wish to copy from the entire British literary periodicals, omitting mostly the political articles, can be rapidly issued. These publications embrace so much that is desirable to be known, and are so generally perused in the best circles in America, that to be without either is to drop a link in the literary chain. They are all under the control of one mind, and therefore the reader will very rarely indeed be compelled to pay for the same matter twice, as they are independent of each other, complete in themselves, and free in general from any repetitions of the same articles.

These views the proprietor respectfully throws out for the consideration of the friends of sound and wholesome literature.

EDITED BY

THE REV. RICHARD COTTERMOLE, B. D.

AND

THE REV. HENRY STEBBING, M. A.

Of this country is so rich in England and Sacred Literature. The great diversity of Philosophical views shared by the various writers, in setting forth and explaining the truths of Revelation, whether Divine or Human, has been distinguished by the various opinions and the depth of their reasoning.

The sources of the sacred Scriptures, the history of the Church, the various systems of divinity, from the earliest times to the present, have been the subject of the most able and profound writers, whose labors have been directed to the elucidation and practical application of the principles of revealed truth, whether in its application to the individual soul, or to the whole of human society. Treatises on the Doctrine, Ministry, and Ordinances of Christianity, which have received the permanent stamp of general approbation; select Sermons of the most eminent Divines; the most interesting specimens of Religious Biography; and the most striking examples of Devotional and Sacred Poetry, will be presented in a manner which will be judged most conducive to the benefit and gratification of the reader.

To the productions of each author, or of each separate production, as the case may be, a separate preface will be prefixed, in which the Editor, pointing out the merits and excellencies; and, in some instances, also, pointing out the errors and defects of the work, will make remarks on the state of the science at the time.

It is the desire of the Proprietors, in undertaking this Cabinet Library of Divinity, to present the collection of the most valuable works, that the whole purchase, at present, the cheapest of ephemeral publications, may, for the same money, possess himself of works which cannot fail to afford him guidance and support in the highest exercises of his faculties, and under every vicissitude of life.

The work will be handsomely printed in Foulscup & Co. on good paper, call pressed, neatly bound in Morocco Cloth, Gilt Edges, and published (in Volumes of 100 pages each) on the first day of every month.

GREAT NATIONAL WORK.

AMERICAN MAGAZINE

Of Useful and entertaining Knowledge. To be published with numerous Engravings by the Boston Brick Company.

THE success which has attended the publication of the best Magazines from the English Press, has led to preparation for issuing a periodical more particularly adapted to the wants and tastes of the American public. While it will be the object of the Proprietors to make the work strictly what its title indicates, it will, nevertheless, contain all articles of interest to its patrons which appear in Foreign Magazines.

Extensive preparations have been entered into, both with artists and authors, to furnish the first number of the Magazine, which will contain all parts of the Union, drawings and illustrations of every subject of interest, which the publishers confidently believe will enable them to issue a work honorable to its title, and acceptable to the American People.

The first number of the American Magazine, illustrated with upwards of twenty splendid engravings, will appear on or before the first of September, and be continued monthly, containing between forty and fifty superb octavo pages, and be furnished at the low price of two dollars per annum. It will comprise—

Portraits and Biographical Sketches of distinguished Americans; Views of Public Buildings, Monuments and Improvements; Landscape Scenery; the boundless variety and beauty of which in this country, will form an unending source of instruction and gratification; Engravings and descriptions of the character, habits, &c. of Beasts, Birds, Fishes and Insects, together with every subject connected with the Geography, History, Natural and Artificial Resources of the country, illustrated by a familiar and popular language.

FREEMAN BUNT, Agent

of the Boston Brick Company 47 Court St. Boston, July 17.

Editors throughout the United States are well aware that the respective Proprietors of the various Magazines, in their respective papers, shall be entitled to receive a copy of the same.

WALDIE'S

CIRCULATING LIBRARY.

BUBBLES FROM THE BRUNNENS OF NASSAU.

A description of the fashionable watering places in Germany, by an old man, will form the commencement of the fourth volume of Waldie's Library.

This will be followed, at a yearly day, by the works of Henry Masters de la Tuile, who resided in France for thirty years in the different parts of the Kingdom, now first translated into English.

The works published in the current volume, on the point of completion, are the following:—

Emtznier, of the German's Tale, a novel, by the author of Canterbury Tales.

A memoir of Sir James Campbell, of Ardlough, written by himself; a very quaint work, containing anecdotes of most of the distinguished individuals of the last sixty years.

Good Sir Walter's tale by the author of Family Portraits.

The Broken Heart; a dramatic sketch, from the Italian.

Rome in the Nineteenth Century; in a series of letters written during a residence in that city, by a Lady.

The Dead and Dumb Page; a Tale.

Annals of the Court of Louis the XIV.; by the Duke of St. Simon.

The Black Watch; an Historical Novel, by the author of the Don Quixote's Legacy; &c. &c. One of the best novels, say the London Magazines, of the present day.

Palmer's new book of Travels in Mexico and Cuba.

Allen Cunningham's Biographical and Critical History of Literature for the last fifty years.

Helen, a Novel, by Maria Edgeworth.

Journal of a West India Proprietor, kept during a residence in the Island of Jamaica, by the late Matthew G. Lewis, Esq. M. P. author of the Monk, &c.

The Curate's Tale, or Practical Joking; from a new work entitled Nights of the Round Table.

The Three Westminster boys, or Cowper, Lord Chancellor Thurlow, and Warren Hastings, contrasted; from the same.

A Narrative of the Shipwreck of the Antelope at Pelew, in 1783, and a brief but accurate account of Prince Le Boo.

All the above cost in the "Library" but 82 50!!!

TO PUBLISH THE LONDON, EDINBURGH, FOREIGN AND WESTMINSTER

QUARTERLY REVIEWS,

FOR 98 PER ANNUM.

THE above Journals are already so well known to the public, that little need be said of their respective merits.

The well sustained reputation of the London Quarterly, not only as an able defender of Tory principles, and the old order of things, but as the wittiest and most entertaining of Reviews, will always command the attention of the literary and scientific.

The Edinburgh, celebrated for the vigor, learning and acuteness which its articles display, conducted by some of the principal literary men of the modern Athens, is an equally powerful champion of the moderate Reform party.

The Foreign Quarterly occupies a neutral ground in Politics, and is devoted to contemporary Literature.

The Westminster is but little known in this country. It may be considered as the advocate of the Radicals, and the mouth piece of Benthamism. It represents the principles of a party already numerous in England, and fast increasing in the United States.

The numbers will be put to press immediately after they shall be received from Europe; and will contain the entire number of the above works, making four annual volumes of upwards of six hundred pages.

They will be executed in as good style, and be printed in a shape but little differing from that of the European editions.

The price will be $8 per annum, payable three months after the delivery of the first number. The English copies cannot be had for less than $50. Of the three at present republished, two of them alone cost $10.

Any individual procuring four subscribers, and remitting $30 on the receipt of the first Number, will be allowed an additional copy.

Subscriptions papers to be returned, and all communications to be addressed, post paid, to Theodore Foster, Albany, N. Y.

COMPANION TO WALDIE'S LIBRARY.

The cheapest reprint from English Periodicals ever offered to the public.

BEFORE the Select Circulating Library had been long in existence, it was discovered that there was still something wanting—that many occurrences in the literary world must pass unknown, as regarded our agency, without an extension of the plan.

To establish a fuller medium of communication and supply the desideratum, the Journal of Belles Lettres was added; which we have reason to believe has afforded general satisfaction. The very liberal patronage extended to the Library induced the proprietor to give that gratuitously as an evidence of his acknowledgments.

More extended experience has shown other desiderata which the "Companion" is intended to supply.

While reading for the "Library" a large mass of material accumulates on the hands of the editor, of an interesting, entertaining, and instructive description, such as would properly come under the designation of Magaziniana, interspersed with the Reviews from the English Quarterlies. To publish every thing of this nature which we deem desirable would encroach too much on the columns of the "Library" designed for books, and yet to pass them by is constantly a subject of regret.

To concentrate, therefore, the publication of Books entire, Reviews, lists of new works, the choicest contributions to Magazines, &c. &c. &c. the "Companion to Waldie's Library" will be offered to the patronage of the present subscribers and the public at large. It is believed that with the "Library," the "Journal," and the "Companion," such an acquaintance with the literature of the age may be cultivated as to leave little further to be desired. Being all published from the same office, more facility offers for subscribing, and having fewer people to deal with, mistakes are less liable to occur, and more readily corrected when they do. The short interval of two weeks between the publication of each number, it is thought too, will be an advantage over monthlies and quarterlies.

The following plan is respectfully submitted.

1. The "COMPANION" will contain the earliest possible reprints of the best matter in the British periodicals.

2. It will be issued every fortnight, and the form will be the same as that of the Library—each number containing sixteen pages—thus, every six months, giving thirteen numbers, which can be bound with the Library at little or no more expense, and making a better sized volume; and to those who do not take the Library itself, a volume every year, of 416 quarto pages of the size of the present.

3. The price will be three dollars for a subscriber—five dollars for two—and clubs five and upwards will be supplied at two dollars each.

4. As the work will not be commenced, unless a sufficient patronage be obtained, no payment is required at present, only the name, sent free of postage. Those wishing to support the publication will be pleased therefore to announce their intention as early as possible, as it is intended to commence the work on the first of January next. On the issuing of the second number payment will be expected, as its appearance will convince a sufficiency of patronage.

The proprietor of the "Select Circulating Library," fully aware from experience of the advantages to the public of the rapid diffusion of cheap and select literature, has been induced to add the important feature to the work, and of course leaves it optional with the present subscribers and others to take it or not.

It is confidently believed, that, with the attention on the part of the Editor, who has already at hand the material for such a work, all the really valuable matter of the English literary and amusing publications may be comprised in this form at a rate of subscription and postage, so trifling as scarcely to be felt. It will form the cheapest reprint of reviews and magazines ever attempted in any country; a comparison with others it were needless here to enter upon, the "Library" itself being the best test by which to judge of the difference between an octavo and a quarto page. It will be the study of the Editor to embody a record of the day, adapted to the wants of this country, which can have no competitor for value or cheapness; how far he is likely to do this he must leave at present to the decision of his readers.

Clubs of five individuals, who subscribe to the "Library" and "Companion" both, will obtain the two for six dollars, the postage (a very important consideration) to the most distant post office, on the two, will be one dollar and ninety five cents, divided into seventy eight payments, and half that sum for 100 miles or a less distance from Philadelphia, while the same matter, in the usual American reprints of reviews and magazines in octavo form would be eighteen dollars, and the postage at three to one. We make this assertion advisedly.

Subscriptions to the "Companion" will be taken either with or without the "Library."

The proprietor trusts that his punctuality and exactness in executing his part of the contract in the publication of the "Library," will be considered a sufficient guarantee of the completion of his proposed undertaking.
