THE HORNET.

"Quis suum fando Explicit"—Virg.
Proudly o'er thy treacherous wave,
Tampico, rode the gallant bark,
When evening's dim fire glow'd,
And night closed o'er the waters dark.
And there was mirth upon her deck,
Sweet music melted with the light,
And who—oh! who could dream that wreck
Should be her destiny that night?

The long sailor talked of home,
And the hollow moaning of the main,
Awoke a wish the hour was come,
When he might spread his sails again.
Yes, as the waters dark and wild,
Went murmuring homeward from the shore,
He thought of parent, wife or child,
Whom he might fold to his arms once more.

The night gun sound'd far and long—
Muttering like thunder in the deep—
Then ceased the music and the song,
And the bold bark lay down to sleep.
Proud look'd the moon that night even,
And she led the darkness with her ray
Shall we tomorrow meet in heaven,
On pearl, robe and daisy?

'Twas midnight and the weary crew [Save those who paced the watch deck lone]
Slumber'd, (ah! will they wake anon?)
When the deep storm began to moan.
The sea-churches scarce that storm could mark,
Ere round the tempest's whirlwind dark,
T'wixt decks dashed their surges dark,
And death and horror o'er them scowled.

Oh! what, that struck the sailor loud,
What, that the deep gun poured its sound,
Like a shrill peal from the thunder cloud,
That told the crash of waters drown'd.
Fruitless that didst ride the waves
Of calm, tampering, yesterday,
The storm hath borne thee to the caves
Of the black ocean far away.

There, many a gallant seaman lies,
Who, ere the sun went down last even Turned toward the west his lingering eyes,
And thought him of his native shore.
Now o'er his corse the shrill winds wail,
And mothers' lips and friends' fair,
Have yet to learn the dismal tale
Of the wrecked bark and gallant Tar.

From the Cincinnati Mirror.

THEY ARE GONE.

In one of those oriental stories, in which amusement and instruction are agreeably blended, we are told of a prince, who covets of a lady, had the flower of his youthful sports against a neighbouring king. His object was unsuccessful; and he returned to his own dominions with secretly an attendant. A chance lady came over him, and it was discovered to all. Being asked why he was discontented, he replied, "I left you in the spring of life, my bones were budding, and my heart was white with promise. They are gone!" He then spoke of the loss of his love, and how he had been deceived by the promises of the heart. In youth, we may say of the bright dreams of childhood—They are gone! The innocent prattle that beguiled the hours—the merry pastime that wakened up the spirit's powers—the broad laugh, that bespoke the fullness of our joy—are all dwell on with a pleasant melancholy. Other pleasures wait us in youth. The pulse leaps madly, as we pursue hope o'er the fields of fancy. We lend a willing ear to the fiction of ambition, and an anxious eye to its pictures of the world. We are yet untutored of experience, and we can say of the dreams of childhood—They are gone!—without the throbs of anguish.

In maturity, we say of the hopes and the starry visions of youth. They are gone! There is bitterness here. The cloudless horizon of hope, that loomed gloriously before the mind's eye of youth, has darkened in the shadows of despair. Instead of the sunny day the easy triumph, we have known of the midnight of grief and the pangs of disappointment. The storm has beat upon us. Our visions have been darkened, our hopes wrecked, and our prospects blighted. This is dark though a profitable chapter in our lives. Hope has deserted us on the verge of despair, and it may be, the thunders of conscience have rendered our scenes with their awful visitations. But 'tis here, Experience bodiless forth its strongest lessons, and Ambition comes before us in its real character. We look upon the period of youth, its glories and their decay, when maturity has brushed away fiction from reality, and the words, They are gone! will awaken bitter feelings, despite the profit we may have garnered up in our experience.

In age, we say of the joys and the dreams of life. They are gone! We retrace our path with the philosophic calmness of a worn and weary heart, and feel but a passing regret or a momentary pleasure. We rejoice that our pilgrimage is o'er, and the shrine near at hand. We stand on a line—before us is hope, behind us is life. Of the present we note but little. Its concerns are but small. We await the unfoldings of the future with tranquility and regard the experience of the past as the child regards the lesson—it is familiar, and we are glad the task is performed. We say of the things of time, they are gone! without a smile and without a sigh.

To-morrow the procession of the bridge concludes the entertainments, and to-day, none of the Pachas were visible (except the Seraskier and Achmed Pacha, who directed operations,) in order that something may be thought of them to-morrow, when they exhibit themselves.

On the 31st ult. a very fine Egyptian frigate of 64 guns, and 460 picked men, arrived here bringing besides, a young relative of the Pasha, the Divan Efendiss of Mehemet Ali, the bearer of a complimentary letter on the occasion of the present marriage, together with splendid presents to the amount of a million of piastres, and more.—Among other articles I hear of a beautifully worked golden date-tree, the fruit being represented by brilliants and other precious jewels.

WHAT O'CLOCK IS IT?

When I was a young lad, my father one day called me to him that he might teach me how to know what a clock it was. He told me the use of the minute finger and the hour hand, and described to me the figures on the dial plate, until I was pretty perfect in my part.

No sooner was I quite master of this additional knowledge, than I set off scampering to join my companions at a game of marbles; but my father called me back again: "Stop, Humphrey," said he, "I have something more to tell you."

Back again I went, wondering what else I had got to learn, for I thought I knew all about the clock, quite as well as my father did.

"Humphrey," said he, "I have taught you to know the time of the day, I must now teach you how to find out the time of your life."

All this was strange to me, so I waited rather impatiently to hear how my father would explain it, for I wanted as ly to go to my studies.

"The Bible," said he, "describes the years of man to be three score and ten, or four score years. Now life is very uncertain, and you may not live a single day longer; but if we divide the four score years of an old man's life into twelve parts, like the dial of a clock, it will allow almost seven years for every figure. When you are seven years of age, then it is one o'clock of his life, and this is the case with you; when you arrive at fourteen years it will be two o'clock with you; and when at twenty one years it will be three o'clock, should it please God to spare your life. In this manner you may always know the time of your life, and looking at the clock may, perhaps, remind you of it. My great grandfather, according to his calculation, died at twelve o'clock; my grandfather at eleven, and my father at ten. At what hour you and I shall die Humphrey, is only known to him to whom all things are known."

Never since then have I heard the inquiry, "What o'clock is it?" nor do I think that I have even looked at the face of a clock, without being reminded of the words of my father.

I know not, my friends, what o'clock it is with you, but I know very well what time it is with myself; and that if I mean to do any thing in this world, which hitherto I have neglected, it is high time to set about it. The words of my father have given a solemnity to the dial plate of a clock, which it never would perhaps have possessed in my estimation, if those words had not been spoken. Look about you, my friends, I earnestly entreat you, now and then ask yourself what o'clock it is with you.

How to have Green Corn in the Winter.

The simple process of preparing it is this:—The Corn must be taken from the stalk when it is full in the milk, or in that state in which we generally use it—the husks stripped off, and the ears thrown into a kettle of boiling water, where it may remain half as long as you boil for present use. This will harden it so that it may be easily kept in the cob. It may then be spread in the sun till it is thoroughly dry. In preparing for the table, it may be soaked from twelve to fifteen hours, and boiled in the same water. But care must be taken not to boil it too much, as that will make it hard and diminish its sweetness.

N. B. To get the corn from the cob, every alternate row may be punched off with a sharp stick; and the remainder wing off with the hands. Conthus prepared would command almost any price in the winter.—N. Y. Com. Adr.

SAFE METHOD OF EXTERMINATING RATS.

Let those who wish to poison rats, instead of applying to the chemist intimately mix a pound of plaster of Paris (in its unslacked state) with about double the quantity of oat meal. Let them place this within reach of the rats; they will eat it greedily, and without being deterred by any bad taste. Through the humidity contained in their stomachs the plaster of Paris will set, and form an indigestible hard mass, which will, in fact, prevent upon dissection, a good cast of the rat's stomach, and speedily produce a kind of Aldermanic death, i. e. irreparable indigestion.

An Irish labourer being told that the price of bread had been lowered, exclaimed "this is the first time I ever rejoiced at the fall of my best friend."

AND
THE REV. HENRY STEBBING, M. A.

Other countries are so rich as England in Sacred Literature. Her greatest Poets and Philosophers have shared with her Divines, in setting forth and establishing the truths of Revelation; while her Divines have been distinguished alike by the copiousness and the depth of their learning.
The soundness of character thus given to the standard Theology of England has, through a variety of circumstances, been happily prevented from degenerating into the harshness of scholasticism; and thus the whole series of our "Sacred Classics," is a well of truth and consolation, as open to the general reader as to the most learned student.
It is intended to comprise in this collection, the best works of all the most celebrated writers, whose labours have been devoted to the foundation and practical enforcement of the principles of revealed truth, whether in their application to the immortal interests of individuals, or to the order and well being of society. Treatises on the Doctrines, Morality, and Revelations of Christianity, which have received the permanent stamp of general approbation; select Sermons of the most eminent Divines; the most interesting specimens of Religious Biography; and the choicest examples of Devotional and Sacred Poetry, will succeed each other in the order which may be judged most conducive to the benefit and gratification of the reader.
To the productions of each author, or to each separate production, as the case may seem to require, will be prefixed an Introductory Essay, pointing out their characteristic excellencies; and, in some instances, comprehending a biographical sketch of the Author, with remarks on the state of religion in his times.
It is the desire of the Proprietors, in undertaking "THE SACRED CLASSICS," to present the collection to the public at such a price, that he who purchases at present the cheapest of ephemeral publications, may, for the same money, possess himself of works which cannot fail to afford him guidance and support in the highest exercises of his faculties, and under every vicissitude of life.
The work will be handsomely printed in Foolscap 8vo. on good paper, cold-pressed, neatly bound in Morocco Cloth, lettered, and published (in Volumes of about 400 pages each) on the first day of every month, at Three Shillings and Sixpence.
Extending the choicest series of works ever offered to the public.

The following names of Authors whose works are intended for publication is submitted in token of the impartiality of the selection.
Jeremy Taylor, Bates, Boyle, Baxter, Owen, Calaneo, Thomas A. Kempis, Burnet, Howe, Rogers, Wilson, Bunyan, Fenelon, Doddridge, South, Hall, Hammond, Balfour, Tillotson, Saurin, Jortin, Farinon, Hurdley, Hale, Southwell, Porteus, Locke, Lightfoot, Cave, Collierworth, Hall, Jewel, Jackson, Flavel, Cudworth, Wesley, Skelton, Watts, Lowth, Romaine, Waterland, Whichcote, Balguy, Pearson, Ken, Newton, Stanhope, Whitby, Hammond, Burkitt, Herbert, Doune, Merdoun, &c. &c.

The soundness of character thus given to the standard Theology of England has, through a variety of circumstances, been happily prevented from degenerating into the harshness of scholasticism; and thus the whole series of our "Sacred Classics," is a well of truth and consolation, as open to the general reader as to the most learned student.
It is intended to comprise in this collection, the best works of all the most celebrated writers, whose labours have been devoted to the foundation and practical enforcement of the principles of revealed truth, whether in their application to the immortal interests of individuals, or to the order and well being of society. Treatises on the Doctrines, Morality, and Revelations of Christianity, which have received the permanent stamp of general approbation; select Sermons of the most eminent Divines; the most interesting specimens of Religious Biography; and the choicest examples of Devotional and Sacred Poetry, will succeed each other in the order which may be judged most conducive to the benefit and gratification of the reader.
To the productions of each author, or to each separate production, as the case may seem to require, will be prefixed an Introductory Essay, pointing out their characteristic excellencies; and, in some instances, comprehending a biographical sketch of the Author, with remarks on the state of religion in his times.
It is the desire of the Proprietors, in undertaking "THE SACRED CLASSICS," to present the collection to the public at such a price, that he who purchases at present the cheapest of ephemeral publications, may, for the same money, possess himself of works which cannot fail to afford him guidance and support in the highest exercises of his faculties, and under every vicissitude of life.
The work will be handsomely printed in Foolscap 8vo. on good paper, cold-pressed, neatly bound in Morocco Cloth, lettered, and published (in Volumes of about 400 pages each) on the first day of every month, at Three Shillings and Sixpence.
Extending the choicest series of works ever offered to the public.

PROSPECTUS OF A NEW GAZETTEER OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

BY WILLIAM DABY, ESQ. OF MARYLAND.
AUTHOR OF A VIEW OF THE UNITED STATES, &c. &c.
AND THEODORE DWIGHT, JR. ESQ. OF NEW YORK.

The importance to the citizens of the United States, of a copious and accurate Gazetteer of our country, will not, it is believed, for a single moment be questioned. Whatever be a man's station in life, whether public or private, he frequently, almost daily, feels the convenience and necessity of such a book of reference. Of similar works, embracing the Universe, it may with truth be said of the most voluminous of them, that they are necessarily brief, and greatly deficient in reference to our own country. This is undeniable—not content to be otherwise in a work, which in the compass of 800 or 1000 pages, comprises so wide a field.

No such work, exclusively devoted to the United States, is now extant. None has ever been published—and the only one of a similar kind ever issued from the press, was a pocket volume of less than three hundred pages; not has that been reprinted in ten years. Within that period, important changes in the country, which it is the object of a Gazetteer to embrace, have taken place; new States have been formed—new counties erected—new townships and on—new villages sprung up. In a word, the civil, literary, geographical and statistical condition of the country, has materially changed; and these changes are not to be found recorded in any single volume.

This deficiency, the compilers of the proposed Gazetteer have undertaken to supply. And in presenting it to the public for their patronage, the publisher feels confident that it will be found as copious—as complete—and as accurate—as the nature of the case will admit. The names of the respectable gentlemen who have undertaken its compilation—one of whom is already well known as the author of several valuable geographical works—will, it is believed, be a sufficient guaranty of the fidelity and accuracy of the proposed volume. The labour of more than two years has already been bestowed upon it; and it is presumed that access has been had, to every publication which could in any degree enhance the value of the work. These facts, together with the high commendations bestowed upon the first edition of the work, and the rapidity of its sale—(it having been entirely disposed of within four months from the day of its publication)—induces the publisher to undertake a second and improved edition. A Map of the United States, (not contained in the former) will be added to the work; and the publisher confidently believes, that such measures have been taken to secure a careful revision of the first, as will ensure the accuracy of the forthcoming edition. With these facts in mind, he trusts that the proposed volume will be found more rich in every kind of information proper to be stored in such a work—in historical, geographical, political, literary, and statistical information—and presenting a larger amount of facts relative to our country, its institutions, and resources, than can be found in any other volume.

CONDITIONS.
The paper will be of a fine quality, and the type new and handsome.
The volume will be of a royal octavo size, and will contain 600 or more printed pages; a well executed Map of the United States, 15 by 20 inches, and neatly coloured, will also be comprised in the work. It will be well bound, in sheep, and in a neat, appropriate and substantial manner. The price to subscribers will be four dollars, payable on delivery of the work.

THE NEW-YORKER.
UNDER this title, a new Literary Journal, of the largest imperial size, was issued by the subscribers on Saturday, the 22d of March. Its leading features are as follows:
"THE NEW-YORKER" is equal in size and execution to any of the literary weeklies of this city, and at the same time afforded at a much lower rate than the cheapest of them. It will combine more completely than any of its immediate rivals the distinguishing characteristics of a literary journal with those of a regular and systematic chronicle of passing events. In short, it is designed to commend itself as a general newspaper, alike acceptable to the lover of literature, the devotee of business, and the gleaner of intelligence. It will contain—
I. LITERATURE OF THE DAY—embracing Reviews of New Publications, Original Tales, Essays, Poems, &c. with selections from the whole range of English and American periodical literature.
II. GENERAL INTELLIGENCE—comprising the current news of the day, foreign and domestic, whether civil or political—carefully avoiding, however, the least semblance of partisan bias in politics, and confined strictly to the presentation of a general and impartial account of the movements of all parties whatever, without discrimination and without the exhibition of personal preference.
Should their journal receive the approbation and the support of the public, the undersigned pledge themselves to spare neither exertions nor expense to render its literary character and general interest at least equal to those of its contemporaries; and, whatever may be the measure of their encouragement, they confidently assert that it shall be excelled by few in quantity of matter, or in the variety and originality of its contents.
III. GREELEY & CO.
The New Yorker has no connection whatever with an ephemeral affair with the same title, which was published last season but, in order to free "our good name" from all obprobrium, we hereby agree to send our paper gratuitously to all the patrons of that concern for the whole term for which they have paid the publisher thereof.

tion of Napoleon, ten feet long, retained no one. A French aeronaut traveled through the atmosphere from Paris to Bordeaux. That is perhaps the longest voyage on record.

For the information of your juvenile readers, I may state, that hydrogen gas, when mixed with about fifteen times lighter than common air. That made from iron is impure, being only six or seven times lighter, while that made by putting the metal into sulphuric acid, and adding oil of vitriol (sulphuric acid) is formed of two kinds of gas, one very heavy, called oxygen, and one very light, called hydrogen. The heavy one is called the metal and partakes of its nature, and remains in the cask; the other, being lighter, having no power to unite with the metal, the water or the acid, flies off in the form of gas, and being conveyed by tubes, the flat-bottomed balloon puffs it up and gradually rises. The balloon becomes lighter and lighter, and soon swims on it, as a light cork in water, and tries to get to the surface of the air, as a cork let go at the bottom of a vessel rises towards the top. But air differs from water, in being lighter, as we ascend, and therefore no balloon can go to the top of the air, which is probably forty miles above the earth. Even if the balloon could rise to so great a height, the person would perish, either from the cold, or the extreme thinness of the air, which could not afford him breath enough.

PRINCESS ANNE, Md. Sept. 9.
A HAMMOTH TURTLE.
An uncommon turtle was taken on last Friday in the Potomac river, a few miles below its landing, by a Mr. Thomas. It is reported by gentlemen who have seen it that it weighed nearly 1500 lbs.—it measured sixteen and eight feet in length and upwards of four feet in width. It is probable the water became too fresh for his subsistence, he was making for terra firma when first discovered. We are told he is now destined for the epicures of Baltimore.

STORM AT THE SOUTH.
The following will account for the recent interruption in the regular receipt of the Southern Mail.
From the Charleston Patriot, Sept. 6.
THE MAILS.
The Northern Mail due to-day has not come to hand, that one yesterday is as far as Fayetteville. A letter from Postmaster at Fayetteville to the Post Master at Charleston, dated yesterday, says: "I waited for the Northern Mail until half past 3 o'clock, P. M. today and delivered the mails that were due to-day in Charleston. The roads from the Northern Mail route are almost impassable, so many trees have fallen across the road."
N. B. N. Mail from Charleston to-day, there are also three Western Mails due.

THE STORM.
A gentleman who arrived in town last evening by the Rail Road, states that the storm was not felt beyond 40 or 50 miles from the city. At Aiken there was neither wind nor rain. The streams are all very high, within 10 miles of the city, but were rapidly falling. The small bridges are carried away. The captain of a craft arrived last night from the coast, states that the fall of rain was very heavy there, but that the wind was not high.

GALE AT GEORGETOWN, S. C.
From a letter dated 5th inst. at Georgetown.
The Sch. Jno. Stoney, Capt. Lohr, went down with 3400 bushels of rough Rice, and will probably be lost. The brig Francis Ann, owned by Simpson Exchange, Capt. Runman, is lost. The Sch. Comet, from N. York, with about 300 bushels, Sugar, and Coffee, sunk at the wharf; no lives or houses at North Island, but fears of loss of life. North Inlet are entertained. The tide is higher than the eventful gale of 1832. Another letter of same date confirms the above account of high tide, and says that the loss of the Cotton and Rice Crop will be full one-half.

AN EXTRA OF A LETTER FROM LOUISIANA.
Sept. 9. Tremendous Fresh.
We have just been visited by the most tremendous Fresh, that ever occurred in this section of country. Much rain had fallen previous to Thursday last, but at that night it rained in torrents, without a moment's intermission, in consequence of which, the water courses rose to an unprecedented height. There is scarcely a Mill or a Bridge standing within the distance we have heard from, and the injury done to the crops and stock, is immense. The long drought had previously burnt up the high lands, and our main dependence for bread was upon the low lands. This hope is now blasted, and we fear that we shall have pinching times next summer. For several days, travelling was out of the question. Stages could neither go or come, though the drivers made various attempts to force their way.

Register.

From the Frederick Times.
We see by an advertisement in one of the papers, that Mrs. Mary Barney, daughter of one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, has opened a school in Frederick for the instruction of young ladies. It is a school that the public are so fortunate as to meet with a lady fully competent in all the various requisites necessary to educate girls. Ladies of the first distinction in Europe have not hesitated to engage in the education of females, gaining for themselves the greatest distinction. Mrs. Barney so long and advantageously known in the literary world as the author of several highly cultivated minds, all those after accomplishments which adorn the sex. Indeed the writer of this article knows of no lady in the United States more fully competent than Mrs. B. to impart to young ladies all those feminine graces which while they ornament, add to the force of education. Frederick in future will possess a school equal if not superior to any in the country. Shortly a French lady, bringing with her from one of the Atlantic cities a distinguished character as governess will assist in the duties of the institution. And we understand that it is the determination of Mrs. B. to engage the assistance of the best talents the country can afford—and we trust we hazard nothing in saying that the daughter of Judge Chase will receive from our countrymen all the kindness which the distinguished services of her family entitle her to.

FROM MAINE.
The Eastern Mail this morning furnishes us with intelligence which leaves not a doubt of the triumph of the result of the election in the State. We have a letter before us which purports to be a doubt that Jarvis, the democratic candidate for Congress in Hancock and Washington is elected. A letter from a highly intelligent person in Ellsworth, having great means of information, says, under date of the 11th inst. "We have received sufficient number of returns to satisfy us of the result of the election. We have elected our Governor, and a majority in both branches of our legislature, and shall return at least six representatives of the old democratic party to the next Congress. Kavanagh, I fear, is defeated; but the wonder is, not that he is now left out, but how he ever got in for a majority of that district has always been opposed to us."

The Portland Argus of Friday afternoon, the 12th instant, is before us, and contains fuller returns than have been before received. The following is a summary of the results: Counties. Dunlap. Sprague. Scat. York.

(com)	4,795	3,664
Cumberland, 27 do	6,040	5,483
Lincoln, 31 do	4,052	4,908
Kennebec, 29 do do	3,516	5,115
Oxford, 23 do	3,901	1,911
Pembscot, 35 do	3,910	3,684
Somerset, 23 do	2,018	2,391
Hancock, 20 do	1,427	1,479
Waldo, 25 do do	3,711	1,431
Washington, 7 do	410	610
	245	32,880
	30,134	718

By this statement it will be seen that Dunlap's ascertained majority is 245 towns over Sprague was 2,746, and over all other candidates 2,928 votes. There was no doubt that the completion of the returns would materially swell this majority. Eighty nine towns remain to be heard from.—N. Y. E. Post.

REWARD OF ENTERPRIZE.
It will be remembered that Mr. Macomber was delegated last year, by several enterprising associates, to proceed to South Africa to obtain, if possible, a collection of birds and beasts more numerous and rare than any yet exhibited in this country—and that, after some ten months toil in exploring the interior, roaming the forest and traversing wastes where the foot of civilized man had never trod, he succeeded in his wishes, and returned to this city laden with the richest spoils of southern climes. After several months occupied here in fitting out the exhibition, which consisted of upwards of one hundred animals, drawn by 75 grey horses, in about 30 carriages, and requiring about 50 men, including a splendid band of musicians, the caravan set off only two or three weeks since, and has since passed through Bristol county, and several towns in Rhode Island, attracting every where an immense number of people. It is, undoubtedly, much the most valuable zoological collection ever brought together in this country; and all classes and ages in every town and city seem fully to appreciate it. These large pavilions, containing 12,000 feet of canvas, were provided for this traveling menagerie, on the supposition that space sufficient would be thus afforded. But the proprietors were disappointed at New Bedford, last week, the crowd was so great that many were compelled to wait for admittance, and at Newport it was found utterly impossible to accommodate all, and a second exhibition was accordingly given. We rejoice in this result of honest, persevering labour—this reward of bold, untiring American enterprise.

PROPOSALS TO REPUBLISH THE LONDON, EDINBURGH, FOREIGN AND WESTMINSTER QUARTERLY REVIEWS, FOR $8 PER ANNUM.
THE above Journals are already so well known to the public, that little need be said of their respective merits. The well sustained reputation of the London Quarterly, not only as an able defender of Tory principles, and the old order of things, but as the witty and most entertaining of Reviews, will always command the attention of the literary and scientific. The Edinburgh, celebrated for the vigor, learning and acuteness which its articles display, conducted by some of the principal literary men of the modern Athens, is an equally powerful champion of the moderate Reform party. The Foreign Quarterly occupies a neutral ground in Politics, and is devoted to continental literature. The Westminster is but little known in this country. It may be considered as the advocate of the Radicals, and the mouth piece of Benthamism. It represents the principles of a party already numerous in England, and fast increasing in the United States. The numbers will be put to press immediately after they shall be received from Europe, and will contain the entire matter of the above works; making four annual volumes of upwards of six hundred pages. They will be executed in as good style, and be printed in a shape but little differing from that of the European editions. The price will be $8 per annum, payable three months after the delivery of the first number. The English copies cannot be had for less than $30. Of the three at present published, two of them alone cost $10. Any individual procuring four subscribers, and remitting $30 on the receipt of the first Number, will be allowed an additional copy. Subscriptions papers to be returned, and all communications to be addressed post paid to Theodore Foster, Albany, N. Y. Subscriptions received at this office.

THE Commissioners of Primary Schools will meet, as usual, on the second day of the October Term of A. A. County Court. It is important that the commissioners in their annual report to the Legislature, should give a full and satisfactory statement of the condition of the schools, and of the operation of the Primary School system in this county; and to enable them to do this, it is necessary that the Trustees of the several districts should make full and uniform reports of the condition of their schools. In order that such satisfactory information may be obtained, printed reports are provided, which the trustees, who are not already supplied, may procure on application to the secretary. The trustees are requested to return these reports to the subscriber, as early a day, after the 1st of October, as practicable. Much unnecessary trouble and delay may thus be avoided. No other country is so rich as England in Sacred Literature. Her greatest Poets and Philosophers have shared with her Divines, in setting forth and establishing the truths of Revelation, while her Divines have been distinguished alike by the copiousness and the depth of their learning.
The soundness of character thus given to the standard Theology of England has, through a variety of circumstances, been happily prevented from degenerating into the harshness of scholasticism; and thus the whole periodical of Sacred Classics, is a well of truth and consolation, open to the general reader as to the most learned student.
It is now, in the price of this collection, the best work of the kind ever published, which is devoted to the instruction and practical enforcement of the principles of revealed truth, whether in their application to the individual interests of individuals, or to the moral and well being of nations. It is a work of the highest importance, and one which will be read with interest and pleasure by all who are desirous of a well being of nations. No other country is so rich as England in Sacred Literature. Her greatest Poets and Philosophers have shared with her Divines, in setting forth and establishing the truths of Revelation, while her Divines have been distinguished alike by the copiousness and the depth of their learning.
The soundness of character thus given to the standard Theology of England has, through a variety of circumstances, been happily prevented from degenerating into the harshness of scholasticism; and thus the whole periodical of Sacred Classics, is a well of truth and consolation, open to the general reader as to the most learned student.
It is now, in the price of this collection, the best work of the kind ever published, which is devoted to the instruction and practical enforcement of the principles of revealed truth, whether in their application to the individual interests of individuals, or to the moral and well being of nations. It is a work of the highest importance, and one which will be read with interest and pleasure by all who are desirous of a well being of nations.
The work will be handsomely printed in Foolscap 8vo. on good paper, cloth pressed, neatly bound in Morocco Cloth, lettered, and published (in Volumes of about 400 pages each) on the first day of every month.
Price, Three Shillings and Sixpence.
Possessing the cheapest series of works ever offered to the public.
The following names of Authors whose works are intended for publication, is submitted in evidence of the impartiality of the selection.

MR. & MRS. HAMMOND'S BOARDING SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES.
THIS Institution is situated in the healthful and pleasant part of the corner of Saratoga and Cecil streets.
After having conducted an extensive School for young ladies, for several years in North Carolina, and Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. Hammond removed to this city in 1831, and opened a Seminary for young ladies, on a scientific plan, which has received an unprecedented patronage.
Mr. & Mrs. H. have liberally procured a school with every apparatus necessary to illustrate their instruction. Their physical apparatus is equal to any other found in private Seminaries in the country, and their chemical is sufficiently extensive to illustrate any subject treated upon in the books of the school. Their Cabinet of minerals, though small yet contains upwards of 200 specimens. Their Seminary is also furnished with an Armillary Sphere, Cary's, Wilson, and Gardner's Globes, several Pianos, and Harp. Mr. & Mrs. H. beg leave to remark, that the instruments they possess, are the best they could procure in this country or in England.
The Library contains upwards of 1500 volumes of the best authors, as connected with the studies pursued in the school, to which the young ladies have general access.
In all the departments the most competent teachers have been engaged, whose instructions are given under the immediate eye of the principals.
The course of instruction in this institution, is carried on in a regular and continued system of academic studies embracing all the scientific and ornamental branches necessary to a complete course of female education.
Parents and guardians who wish for more particular information, can obtain a prospectus of the seminary by applying to the editors, Baltimore Aug 21.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The following beautiful little piece, is from the pen of Mr. Lyte a review of whose poetry may be found in the last number of the Quarterly. In the words of the reviewer, "Mr. Lyte is certainly not the first who has stopped to pluck a flower, and desired to blossom on." We question, however, whether any of his predecessors have made poetical use of the petition.

Oh, spare my flower, my gentle flower,
The slender creature of a day!
Let it bloom out its little hour,
And pass away.

Too soon its fleeting charms must die
To yield, unnoticed, overthrown,
To the harsher and its destiny—
Too late to turn.

The breeze will rustle this way to morning,
And sigh to find its playmate gone;
The bee will come its sweets to borrow,
And meet with none.

Oh spare my flower! Thou know'st not what Thy unobscured hand would tear;
A thousand charms thou dost not know,
Yet treasure there.

Not Solomon, in all his state,
Was clad like Nature's simple child;
Nor could the world combined create,
One flower worth.

Spoke this humble monument
Of an Almight's power and skill,
And let it in its shrine present
Its homage still.

He made it when no voice was in vain,
He stretches it who watches there;
And he can breathe in its life
Who bade it be.

THE BEHEAVED SISTER.

BY G. D. PIERCE.

In the spring of 1824 I contracted an acquaintance in a city of the South, with a gentleman who had removed from England to a country, with two small children, the only of ten, and the other a girl of nine years of age—These children were the most beautiful I ever saw. Their extreme beauty, their deep and artless affection, and their frequent bursts of childish and innocent mirth made them as dear to me as if I had been the father of their infancy. They were happy in each other, and in the whole world of good nature around them. I had known family but a few months, when my friend was compelled to make a sudden and unexpected voyage to South America. His feelings were embittered by the thought of leaving his motherless children behind him, and I was on the point of embarking for Liverpool, I promised to take them to their relative.

My departure was delayed two weeks. During that period, I lived under the same roof with the little ones that had been consigned to my charge. For a few days they were petted, and made frequent inquiries for their father, but their sorrows were easily soothed, and regret for his absence changed to a pleasant anticipation of his return. The ordinary sorrows of childhood are but as a feather on the eagle's plume, which vanishes at the moment when the proud bird springs into the air, to win the first beautiful day of the morning.

The day of our departure at last arrived, and we set out on a quiet afternoon of summer. It was a scene of beauty, and my heart was as wild and joyous as the young bird in springtime. It seemed as if a man's retreating had stopped at the shore, that was retreating behind us, and left the world of waters to give back the face of the upper sky, as purely and peacefully as the first holy Sabbath of creation. The distant hills bent their pale blue tops to the waters, and as the great Sun, like the eye of his Creator, sank in the west, sunbeams of gold, and crimson, and purple, came floating over the waves, like a fairy land. My young companion gazed on these scenes steadily and silently, and when the last tints of the dim were melting into shadow, they to kiss each other's hands, and a few natural tears shed forth as an adieu to the land they had left.

Soon after sunset, I persuaded my little friends to let me lead them to the cabin, and returned to look out again upon the Ocean. In about half an hour, as I was standing and apart, I felt my hand gently pressed, and on turning round saw that my girl had stolen alone to my side. In a few moments, the evening star began to twinkle from the edging of a violet cloud. At last it gleamed faintly, and at intervals, but it came brightly out, and shone like a thing upon the brow of the evening. The girl gazed upon it, and hailed it as a face, which told that a thought of rapine was at her heart. She inquired with simplicity and eagerness, whether, in the far distance, we were going, that same bright face would be visible, and seemed to regard it as another friend, that was to be with her in her long and lonely journey.

The first week of our voyage was unattended by any important incident. The sea was at times, wild and stormy, but again it would sink to repose, and spread itself out in beauty to the verge of the distant horizon. On the eighth day, the boy arose pale and dejected, and complained of indisposition. On the following morning, he was confined by a fever, to his bed, and much doubt was expressed as to his fate by the physician of the vessel. I can never forget the visible agony, the look of utter woe that appeared upon the face of the little girl, when the conviction of her brother's danger, came slowly home upon her thoughts. She wept not—she complained not—but, hour after hour, she sat by the bed of the young sufferer—an image of grief and beautiful affection. The boy became daily more feeble and emaciated. He could not return the long and burning glances of his sister, and at last, a faint heaving of his breast and the tender eloquence of his half closed eye, and a flash at intervals, upon his wasted cheek like the first violet tint of a morning cloud, were all that told that he had not yet passed the first dark day of nothingness.

The twelfth evening of our absence from land was the most beautiful I had ever known, and I persuaded the girl to go for a short time upon deck, that her own feverish brow might be fanned by the twilight breeze. The sun had gone down in glory, and the traces of his blood-red setting were still visible upon the western waters. Slowly but brilliantly the many stars were gathering themselves together above, and another sky swelled out in softened beauty beneath, and the foam upon the crests of the waves was lighted up like wreaths of snow. There was music in every wave, and its wild, sweet tones came floating down from the fluttering pennons above us, like the sound of a gentle wind amid a cypress grove. But neither music nor beauty had a spell for the heart of my little friend. I talked to her of the glories of the sky and sea—I pointed her to the star on which she had always loved to look—but her only answer was a sigh—and I returned with her to the bedside of her brother. I perceived instantly that he was dying. There was no visible struggle, but a film was creeping over his eye, and the hectic flush of his cheek was fast deepening into purple. I knew not whether at first his sister perceived the change in his appearance. She took her seat at his side, pressed his pale lips to her own, and then as usual, let her melancholy eyes rest fixedly upon his countenance. Suddenly his looks brightened for a moment, and he spoke his sister's name. She replied with a passionate carress, and looked up to my face as if to implore encouragement. I knew that her hopes were not a mockery. A moment more, and a convulsive quiver passed over the lips of the dying boy—a slight shudder ran through his frame—and all was still. The girl knew, as intuitively, that her brother was dead. She sat in breathless silence, but I saw that the waters of bitterness were gathering fearfully at their fountain. At last, she raised her hands with a sudden effort, and pressing them upon her forehead, wept with the uncontrollable agony of despair.

On the next day, the corpse of the dead boy was to be committed to the ocean. The little girl knew, that it must be so, but so strange to drive the thought away, as if it had been an angel and terrible vision. When the appointed hour was at hand, she came and begged me with a tone that seemed less like a human voice than the low cadence of a disembodied spirit, to go and look upon her brother, and see if he were indeed dead. I could not resist her entreaties, but went with her to gaze upon the sleeping dust, to which all the tenderness of her life seemed bound. She paused by the bedside, and I almost deemed that her very existence would pass off to that light and fixed gaze. She moved not, and I sat till the form she loved was taken away to be let down into the ocean. Then indeed she arose, and followed her lifeless brother with a calmness that might have been from Heaven. The body sunk slowly and solemnly beneath the waves—a few long, bright, ringlets streamed out upon the waters—a single white and beautiful glimpse came dimly up through the lancing billows, and all that had once been joy and beauty, vanished forever.

During the short residue of our voyage, the bereaved sister seemed fading as calmly and beautifully as a cloud in the summer zenith. Her heart had lost its communion with nature, and she would look down into the sea and murmur incoherently of its cold and solitary depths, call her brother's name, and then weep herself into calmness. Soon afterwards I left her with her friends, I know not whether she is still a blossom of the earth, or whether she has long since gone to be nurtured in a happier realm. But I love the memory of that beautiful and stricken one. Her loveliness, her innocence, and her deep and holy feelings, still come back to me in their glory and quietude, like a rainbow on a summer cloud that has showered and passed off forever.

A DUEL AT ST. DOMINGO.

Translated from Le Courier des Etats Unis, for the N. Y. Times.
Some years previous to the negro insurrection at St. Domingo, aided and seconded by England, in hatred for the success which France had supplied N. England with, during the war of independence, the fine French Colony was at its summit of grandeur and prosperity. Culture and industry had amassed for it more gold than its mines could furnish to the avaricious Spaniards; this metal was in active circulation, and with it advanced luxury and superfluities of pleasures. Beneath the burning sky of the tropic, passions naturally warm became inflamed and ungovernable, when wealth, which alone is able to generate them, comes and offers new incentives.

At the period of which I have to speak, 1788, the passion which predominated amongst the rich inhabitants of St. Domingo, was that of gaming. But those games where calculation or address equalized the chances of fortune could not suffice them for their love of play; there must needs be some of those games where chance would govern every combination of the mind, at those games where heaps of gold would mount upon the table, where a throw of the die would stagger a fortune, or in like manner accumulate an enormous sum. It was at dice in fact that the gamblers sought for feeling capable for stimulating their dull senses, and it was not unusual to see a whole plantation, a cargo of negroes, cast as a stake upon the fatal board. They would throw upon the table some dozen dice, mix them, and the player would pick up at hazard with his dice box three, by which he would learn his fate.

Well, then, in 1788, (trusting to my memory) there served in the capacity of captain, in the regiment of Port-au-Prince, the son of a rich sugar merchant belonging to the colony. Captain Severy numbered twenty-five or six years, and in addition to being placed at the head of a large fortune, had by inclination, embraced the military profession. None could rival his address at small sword, none surpass his dexterity at his pistol; at once, brave even to rashness, he did not disdain his fatal skill, and in general could make good sport of those who dared to measure with him he was boasting even to insolence, had scarcely among his numerous duels received any scratches, and had already left a long track of blood in society. Still he possessed good qualities. Severy was more devoted than beloved; for his frankness, his sense of right, could not restrain his fatal penchant for duelling. It is necessary to add, that he was a gambler.

One evening in a play-house, a place of resort for the gamblers of Port-au-Prince, the inmates were amusing themselves at gourdailler till the society was sufficiently numerous to animate the play. In these gaming receptacles they style gourdailler, simply playing gourda, (dabars) which was in their slang phrase, throwing snow balls till the party arrived. An officer of the French marine, captain of a frigate, who had been residing for some time in their colony, entered at this moment into the gaming room. In passing a table where they were playing, he gave a look and perceived some pieces of money before the players.

"You makes up the game?" cried a voice.
"I," replied the captain, (whose name has escaped me). He then came and carelessly threw a dice, then turned away to a side-board to finish his glass of lemonade; meanwhile, the gamblers continued the play.

"Commandant you have won," exclaimed Severy, who was one of the players; pick up the stakes?" and he pushed towards his fortunate adversary several heaps of gold.

At the sight of this immense sum, the French officer, who fancied to have risked a few dollars, recoiled in amazement, then pushing back the tray of gold which was presented to him, he should believe myself wanting in delicacy, were I to appropriate that sum as having lawfully gained it. "Is not right to tell you, gentlemen, that in making up the game, I thought to have risked but the moderate sum which I had perceived upon the table. I neither wish, nor ought to regard that gold as my own."

"Take it, sir," says Capt. Severy. "You have as much right to it as you would have had to pay it, had you lost."

"You deceive your self, if you imagine that I should not have believed my honor stained in refusing to accept a cent which I had not contracted, and consequently I should stain it by appropriating a sum I had not gained."

"You would have paid, Mr. Commandant," returned Severy, elevating his voice and laying stress upon the words: "You would have paid." "Is it who tell you?"

There was in the language, and still more in the Captain's tone, an idea of provocation which did not escape the marine officer. He likewise retorted in a bitter tone, and it was soon too late, when the friends of the two gamblers were willing to intercede, to prevent an awkward result. Each of the parties considered himself so grossly insulted that any medium to their respective wrongs became impossible, and a duel inevitable.

"Sir," says Severy to his opponent, "not wishing to have over you the advantage which every body knows my address at the sword and pistol would give me, I ought to offer you more equal terms. Let a loaded pistol be brought here immediately, a throw of the die shall decide which of us shall blow out the brains of the other."

"Agreed."

A thrill of horror pervaded them all; some took themselves off, trembling, not wishing to be witnesses of the bloody drama which was in preparation; others, animated with the feeling of brutal curiosity, formed a close circle around the gamblers, who, seated in face of each other, and separated by a table four feet wide, were watching the preliminaries of the duel. Meantime a third person loaded the fatal weapon in presence of Severy and the French officer, a deadly silence reigned throughout the assembly, and the calm was unbroken save by some words devoid of spleen exchanged between the adversaries, who alone appeared to have retained their sang froid during this tragical moment.

As soon as the pistol was ready the parties took it, and examined if all was right, then laying it down upon the table, where two hands full of dice were scattered, each took up three with his dice-box. It was decided that the French officer should have the first throw. He then shakes with a firm hand the box which might render or deprive him of the speech of life; he throws the dice, which the eager looks of the dumb circle closely follow.

"Eleven!"
"Is good play, Commandant," spoke Severy, suspending his throw of the dice; the chances are for you. Hear me: if the hazard favours you, as it seems to promise, no pity nor mercy for me, for here I declare, upon my honour, you need not expect it from me, should I have a finer play than you. I hold him a coward, the one of us two, who shall spare the other."

"Play, sir, I don't stand in need of your impertinent advice to inform me what I have to do."

Severy, with an ironical smile on his lips, tosses the three ivory cubes, which, after describing three slightly diverging rays, stop, and show fifteen at pair-royal.

Immediately the circle widens, quitting the side of the French officer, who finding himself alone in the front of his enemy, in a measure favoured, rises and assumes the firm attitude of a brave man.

"Your life is my property, sir," says Severy, throwing down the dice box, and seizing the pistol; "recommend your soul to God."

"Well, sir, fire, then," replies the commandant, laying his hand upon his heart—"fire! an honest man is at all times ready to die!"

He had not time to finish. The ball of Severy had shattered his skull, and dispersed his brains amongst the curious gazers, frozen with horror.

After this shocking duel, where, in general opinion, all blame was attached to Severy, that officer, already dreaded by his companions, impressed them still more with a strong feeling of repugnance. Absolutely avoided by every one of good repute, he returned to his fellow citizens, hate for hate—disdain for disdain; and when the insurrection broke out at St. Domingo, he joined the enemies' ranks, when he fought in command under orders of the English general Maitland. There he showed proofs, more than once, not only of extreme bravery, but of great skill in strategy. It was to him that the insurgents owe nearly all their success up to the last engagement near Fouron, where he was killed by a ball in his side, at the moment when victory had declared for him.

J. G. W.

From the New England Galaxy.

AN EVERY DAY INCIDENT.

It has been observed, and with a great deal of truth, that the realities of life far exceed the romance, and that every day, and hour almost, are crowded with incidents in real life of a nature calculated to create in the beholder a more intense and thrilling interest, than any thing to be found in pages of the most high wrought fiction. An occurrence happened not long since, to which I was an eye witness, that will forcibly illustrate the above remarks. The poet wrote truth, as well as poetry, who produced the splendid ode, containing the lines,

"Man's inhumanity to man Makes countless thousands mourn."

But to my story, I will tell it as I can, although I am aware that I cannot make your readers feel, while reading my faint description, all that I felt, while the incidents of my narrative were fresh before me.

A few weeks ago, while passing along a street in one of the most refined cities of New England, my eyes were suddenly arrested by a view of the dark and massy walls of a building—to be found in all refined cities—where living bodies are entombed for the doubtful crime of being poor. I stopped, and gazed at it listlessly for a moment, and was just on the point of resuming my walk, when my attention was arrested by the sound of a voice. "Can I see my husband, Mr. —?" was asked in a low tone and tremulous accent. I turned round, and saw a young and very pretty and greatly distressed woman standing at the door of the jail office, addressing a person, evidently the turnkey, who stood before her. "Can I see Mr. —?" "No ma'am, you can't!" was the gruff reply of the surly deputy. The female dropped her head, pressed her hand upon her bosom, that throbbed quick and violently, as a sigh stifled to a low breathing, came from her lips—and then looked up again.—She turned a dark eye, swimming in tears, full upon the turnkey. She hesitated a moment. The struggle between pride and grief and duty was evidently going on—putting every nerve and muscle in her beautifully turned neck and lovely countenance into full play, and giving to her features that varied, yet eloquent expression, that few except the most unfeeling can resist. "Is—he well, sir?" she at last faltered out apparently with much difficulty. "I don't know," was the unfeeling answer. She dropped her head again—but for a moment only—and that pang was stifled. She raised it once more, and looked imploringly upon the brutal being before her. "Oh, sir!" she exclaimed in a tone of subdued agony—"oh, sir, let me speak to him—if it is but the word only; let me but see him,—let me look at him—if it is but for a moment, and through the grates—I have travelled all the way from —" (a distance of 54 miles) on purpose to see him—do, sir, for the love—" "I tell you, you shan't, and so you might as well shut up your clam shell at once!" was the oblique reply of the turnkey to this feeling request. The quick accelerated motion of my pulse, and the hot blood that rushed through my veins and mounted to my temples, convinced me that it was dangerous to stop long within the sphere of insulted beauty; and I thought it prudent to depart, before my feelings mastered my discretion, and prompted me to commit some foolish, Quixotic act, the probable issue on which was immediately before me just over the wall. I walked on a few steps, and then looked back. The sufferer had crossed to the opposite side of the street, and stood on the walk, looking earnestly at the prison that hid all she loved on earth. I passed on a little further, and looked back once more. There she was still on the spot—gazing as if her eyes would pierce the dark, frowning walls before her. I dared not look longer, but hurried on, in rather a melancholy state of mind. Presently I fell to musing, and a succession of thoughts tinged with light and shade, and connected with what I had just witnessed, passed through my brain. First of all, I thought of the deep, enduring and unchanging love of woman,—such love as this poor, desolate being had shown, in travelling so far, alone and unprotected, to administer consolation to an imprisoned husband, and pour into his bosom the balm of affection. A gleam of sunshine flashed across my mind at the thought and it seemed to me that the map of life dark and comfortless as it is generally drawn, is yet chequered here and there, in the very midst of its most dreary wastes, with green and flowery spots that whisper to the bruised heart of a better world. A dark and melancholy idea succeeded. I thought of the husband, pining his heart away in the solitude of a prison; of the beloved and loving wife, begging with heart-rending look and tone, that she might speak to that dear husband, if it was but one word—that she might see him, if it was but for a moment—and begging, but to be cruelly, insultingly denied!—and my eyes, unconsciously were clouded with tears. I brushed them hastily away, set my teeth firmly together, and endeavoured to forget the subject. It was in vain. The incarcerated husband—the worse than widowed wife—the brutal turnkey—still kept possession of my thoughts, until I am afraid I began to grow almost wicked, and even to doubt the utility of the vast efforts that are so actively made, to civilize nations eight or ten thousand miles from us, while we have so many brutes at home, that we are obliged to go among them to select beings—I will not call them men—to fill some of most important public stations.

YORICK.

A country editor, whose business had expanded into more ramifications than he could find time for, thus gives notice of a curtailment of his operations.

"Peculiar circumstances render it necessary for us (we, the Editor,) to curtail our business. We have relinquished the pedagogical profession, giving up teaching bar at-faded ferrying, forgotten the art of cleaning clocks, and sundry and divers et ceteras; and have resolved unanimously in committee of one, to confine ourselves exclusively to editing, setting up, and working off the 'Mercury,' practising law, physic, and surgery, executing deeds, conveyances, &c. and cutting profiles. We hope by this arrangement to have an occasional leisure hour."

THE BLIND MAN'S BIBLE.

We have before us, in a goodly 2nd quarto volume, the Gospel of St. Mark, printed or rather embossed for the use of the blind. This is the first book that has been prepared in this country, on this plan. It is the handy work of Mr. Snider, the gentleman who acts as secretary of the institution, and is a beautiful illustration, if not fulfilment, of the prophecy, "the blind shall see." This admirable specimen of the art of embossing letters, is worthy the attention of the curious.

NOT SO BAD.

There is in Camden 2nd a school-house, on the window sill of which is painted (it having originally been a grocery store) "Powder and Shot." "What the deuce have powder and shot to do with education?" asked a gentleman of a friend as they were passing.

"A great deal replied the wag, 'is it not the schoolmaster's calling to teach the young idea how to shoot?'"

The London Morning Chronicle announces
the authority of a letter from Madrid, the Spanish Cabinet had claimed the influence of France, and that the French
was actually passing the Pyrenees.
Ben says: "We are certain the French will answer as its honour demands, and that it will have the cordial support of England. It is no time for hesitation in spite of the machinations of Holy Allied Austria, Russia nor Prussia, yet acknowledged the young Queen of Spain, and there is no doubt but Don Carlos has investigated by these powers to make a division in the west of Europe, while they are engaged all things to suit themselves in the understanding that Don Carlos shall be acknowledged legitimate king,
as soon as Russia shall have finished the Ottoman empire. But it cannot be England and France will be the dupes of the despots."
The Globe says: "The Speech of the King
France, and the treaty of the quadruple alliance, leave no doubt that effective means will be taken, should they become necessary, to put down an insurrection, which, without least chance of ultimate success, would engage the Peninsula again into scenes of misery and confusion."

LONDON, August 19.
PROVOCATION OF PARLIAMENT.
His Majesty went to the House of Lords yesterday, and prorogued the Parliament in the evening Speech:
My Lords and Gentlemen,
The numerous and important questions
which have in the present, as in the two preceding years, been submitted to your committees, have imposed upon you the necessity of extraordinary exertions; and it is with a sense of the care and labour which have been bestowed upon the public business,
that I lengthen this protracted session,
I release you from your attendance.
I continue to receive from all Foreign Ministers assurances of their friendly disposition.
The negotiations, on account of which the differences in London upon the affairs of Low Countries were suspended, have not been brought to a close; and I have still lament the continued postponement of settlement between Holland and Belgium.
On the other hand I have derived the most satisfactory and lively satisfaction from the termination of the civil war which had so long troubled the kingdom of Portugal, and I rejoice to think that the Treaty which the States
General in Spain and Portugal induced me to conclude with the King of the French, the King of Spain, and the Regent of Spain, which has already been signed, and which
you contributed materially to produce,
is a happy result.
Events have since occurred in Spain to disturb for a time, the hopes of tranquillity
that country, which the pacification of Portugal had inspired.
To these events, so important to Great Britain, I shall give my most serious attention, in concert with France and other powers who participate in the Treaty of the 22 nd, and the good understanding which prevails between me and my allies, encourageing to expect that our united endeavours will attain with success.
The peace of Turkey remains undisturbed,
and I trust that no event will happen in that country to interrupt the tranquillity of Europe.
I have not failed to observe with approbation that you have directed your attention to the domestic questions which more immediately affect the general welfare of the community, and I have had much satisfaction in recommending your wise and benevolent intentions by giving my assent to the Act of the Parliament and better administration of the business relating to the poor in England and Wales. It will be my duty to provide that the authority necessarily invested in a commissioner nominated by the Crown, be exercised with temperance and caution; and I entertain a confident expectation that its prudent and judicious application, as well as the distinct enforcement of the other provisions of the Act, will, by degrees, remedy the evils which at present prevail, and what they elicit
the character, will increase the comforts,
and improve the condition of my people.
The amendment of the law is one of your most important duties, and I rejoice perceive that it has occupied so much of your attention. The establishment of a Central Court for the trial of offences in the metropolis and its neighbourhood, will, I trust, improve the administration of justice
within the populous sphere of its jurisdiction,
and afford a useful example to every other
part of the kingdom.
To the important subjects of our Jurisprudence and of our Municipal Corporations,
your attention will naturally be directed early in the next Session. You may always rest assured of my disposition to co-operate with you in such useful reformations.
Gentlemen of the House of Commons,
I thank you for the readiness with which you have granted the supplies. The estimates before you are somewhat lower than those of former years, although they included several extraordinary charges, which will not recur. The same course of economy will be steadily pursued. The continued increase of the revenue, notwithstanding the loss of so many taxes, affords the surest proof that the resources of the Country are impaired, and justifies the expectation that perseverance in judicious and well considered measures will still further promote the industry and augment the wealth of my people.

My Lords and Gentlemen,
It gives me great gratification to believe that in returning to your several countries, you will find a prevalence of general tranquillity and of active industry amongst all classes of society. I humbly hope that Divine Providence will vouchsafe a continuance and increase of these blessings, and, in any circumstances which may arise, I shall rely with confidence upon your zeal and fidelity. And I rest satisfied that you will inculcate and encourage that obedience to the laws, and that observance of the duties of religion and morality, which are the only secure foundations of the power and happiness of empires.
The Lord Chancellor then declared the Parliament prorogued to the 25th of September next.

SPAIN.
The spirited Address reported to the Spanish Chamber of Deputies in reply to the speech of the Queen, was taken up for consideration on the 4th. The question that the proposed address be put to the vote entire was carried in the affirmative by 48 to 36. The approbation of the address as a whole was next carried by 49 to 37. It was then ordered that it should be considered paragraph by paragraph, in the next sitting.
On the 5th it was accordingly taken up by paragraphs, some of which gave rise to a good deal of discussion. The first seven paragraphs were agreed to, with some slight amendments; but before getting through with the whole, the hour of adjournment arrived,
and the Chamber adjourned accordingly.
Official intelligence was received by the government at Paris, on the 9th ultimo, from the frontier, that Gen. Rodil had entered Estremoz, (the court town of Don Carlos, and which he made his principal headquarters
since his return,) at the head of 7,000 men.
Don Carlos, who was obliged to make a precipitate flight, took the route towards Lissa.
Emigrants have commenced in considerable numbers. The wife and children of Zumalacarraguey have arrived at Amboia, in the French territory. (St. Péc is situated on the river St. Jean de Léz, half way from Bayonne to Elisondo. Amboia is the last French village in the same direction. Leizaola, or Leiza, whither Don Carlos fled, is seven or eight leagues (hours' march) west of Elisondo, four west of St. Estaban on the Bidasoa, and some leagues from the frontier of France.)
Paris, Aug. 11.
A despatch dated Amboia, Aug. 8, states
that Elisondo, Utrache, and the whole line
have been evacuated by the Carlists. Rodil has left a corps of troops at Elisondo, and he has himself proceeded to Utrache against Zumalacarraguey. Brigadier Figueroa has pursued the Guipuzcoans as far as Atama. Zumalacarraguey is preparing to follow his movement.
According to the Indicateur de Bordeaux
of the 9th, a paper which is in the hands supplying copious information relative to the state of the civil war on the other side of the Pyrenees, speaks of the cause and progress of Don Carlos as utterly destroyed. It expresses that Zomalacarraguey had retreated to the mountains, and no longer ventured around the Don Carlos keeps close to the French frontier, and was seen on the 6th at Lanz
ten minutes' walk from the neutral ground,
and so many precautions are taken to make it impossible that the insurgents should return from any quarter, that they are totally deprived of the means of carrying on the war,
or keeping two days in the field.
The French Minister of War has ordered that all the corps forming the divisions of the Pyrenees should be included in an exceptional measure, which suspends the usual half yearly furloughs.

PARIS, Aug. 13.
A telegraphic despatch, dated Saint Jean de Léz, the 10th inst. transmitted yesterday
the following intelligence to the Government:
On the 9th inst. El Pastor was at Azpeyti, still in pursuit of the main force of the insurgents, who were hemmed in by his advanced guard. In their flight they took the direction of Atama and El Pastor announced his intention to put himself at the head of his advanced guard to act against the rebels in case of resistance on their part. The Government has just received fresh information respecting the last operations of Gen. Rodil;
a principal object of his rapid march upon Elisondo, was to clear the Valley of Bastan.
On this account, while his advanced guard entered Elisondo, he sent a strong column to Saint Estaban.
By the firmness and rapidity of this movement Don Carlos and Zomalacarraguey were compelled to fly. They succeeded in escaping by Leiza, where Zomalacarraguey divided his columns and sent away the Guipuzcoans into their province. The insurgent General taken in the rear by the movements of Rodil,
and pressed towards his right by the victorious march of El Pastor, who had reached Az-peyti, and was pushing forward to Atama, hastened to the other side of the Amescua
to concentrate his scattered forces at Beunza.
Rodil now took possession of the most important holds in the Valley of Bastan, and turned round in pursuit of Zomalacarraguey.
On the 10th his right wing was at Lecumber
ry, and his left at Belatta, opposite Beunza.
A letter of the 8th inst. says—Don Carlos was at a small village called Uroz, near the frontier.
Saint Jean de Léz, Aug. 5.—All vessels
belonging to the ports of Fontarabie, Lesaca and Pasaia, are to be taken to St. Sebastian, and in case of endeavouring to escape are to be burnt. It is supposed that this measure has been taken to prevent the embarkation of Don Carlos, if he should attempt to escape.
French and English ships continue to arrive at San Sebastian, for the purpose of cruising along the coast of Biscay; and on the French coast the authorities are taking the most active measures to prevent all communication with the insurgents.
At San Sebastian, however, there had been a plan of insurrection set on foot by the monks, not in favour of the Constitution of the Cortes, as at Madrid, but in favour of Don Carlos. Several persons accused of being concerned in this plot, were arrested, and are to be tried by a military commission.

August 4.—Official advices received by the Spanish Consul, and which, by different routes, have also reached D. Joaquin Maria de Ferrer. Delegates to the Cortes for Guipuzcoa, bring intelligence of the defeat of the principal corps of the faction of Navarre.
In further confirmation of this fact, the government of the town of San Sebastian communicates the following:
At this moment, nine o'clock, P. M. I have received a message from the Commandant General of this province, Don Gaspar
de Jauregui, in the following terms:
The principal corps of the insurgents was defeated yesterday, 1st inst. near Iurgoyen,
and the troops of the Queen are pursuing them
in all directions.

DRAWING ANNOUNCED.
VALUABLE REAL AND PERSON-AL PROPERTY,
SOON TO BE DISTRIBUTED IN SHARES,
IN pursuance of the provisions of an act of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed at the December session, 1833, to authorize ANDREW McLAUGHLIN to distribute his estate BY LOT.
This property is among the most valuable in Maryland, situated in the prosperous, healthful, and romantic village of Edwinton's Mills, ten miles from the city of Baltimore, upon the Western Turnpike, and 13 miles upon the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road, where all the cars, to and from the west, stop to breakfast and dine.
A sufficient number of Tickets have been sold to warrant the assurance to the public,
that it will positively be drawn WEN-DELPH DE KOBBER Sumner the brand of the tickets be sold before, it will be drawn sooner.
It consists of the large and extensive improvements long known as the PATAP-CO HOTEL.
With all the new improvements, and a highly ornamental Garden, a beautiful Gothic Cottage, and other dwellings. Twenty valuable building Lots, with numerous other shares
of personal property, consisting of Plate, Carriages, Horses, Piano Fortes, Books, Rich
Furniture, and Old Wines, all valued at $38,
450, and divided into FOUR HUNDRED SHARES, subject to no discount.
It is to be drawn upon the plan of the old Maryland Lottery, viz. The numbers will all be put upon one wheel, and the prizes, more or fewer, and all drawn in one day, under the superintendence of the Trustees, according to the Act of the Legislature. They will certify the same when drawn.
The property has been valued by three Commissioners appointed by the Treasurer of Maryland, that no speculations should be indulged in and bonds with approved security given to the State for double the amount, that the law may be faithfully complied with. It is simply a distribution of property at its value, to reimburse the expenditure. It is well worth risking TEN DOLLARS for such a Capital as this small scheme presents; it is larger than a modest Capital, with twelve times the number of Tickets to contend with, and no 15 per cent off.
Many of the small shares will be paid
in cash if required.

SCHEME:
1 Share, consisting of the PATAP-CO HOTEL, with the new addition upon the Rail Road, the large Stone Stable, Carriage House, Ice House, and the splendid Garden, forms the grand capital prize, valued at $38,500
1 Share, a new and convenient three story dwelling, under rent
of $222, 3,000
1 Share, Angelo Cottage, a beautiful Gothic building, situated upon a ledge of rocks, commanding a delightful view of the village and factories; 2,650
4 Shares, valuable building Lots,
at $800 each, 3,200
6 do. valuable Building Lots, at $750 each, 4,500
10 do. valuable Building Lots, at $200 each, 2,000
377 do. of Personal Property, ranging in value from $250 down to $10, 6,600
400 Shares, all free from discount, 858 400

Those who wish Tickets are advised to make early application. The scheme is quite small, containing but 5843 tickets, and this will be the only distribution offered.
The price of a share is but $10, which may draw property now worth $36,500, increasing every day in value, free from discount, and with an unquestionable title.
A. McLaughlin invites all his friends, far and near, to venture a small amount in the distribution of his property, which is a solicitous case, and includes all his estate. Do no wait, delays are dangerous. He is anxious to close the scheme and return to Baltimore.

PROPOSALS TO REPUBLISH THE
LONDON, EDINBURGH, FOREIGN AND WESTMINSTER
QUARTERLY REVIEWS,
FOR 98 PER ANNUM.
THE above Journals are already so well known to the public, that little need be said of their respective merits.
The well sustained reputation of the London Quarterly, not only as an able defender
of Tory principles, and the old order of things, but as the witliest and most entertaining of Reviews, will always command the attention of the literary and scientific.
The Edinburgh, celebrated for the vigor,
learning and acuteness which its articles display, conducted by some of the principal literary men of the modern Athens, is an equally powerful champion of the moderate Reform party.
The FOREIGN QUARTERLY occupies a neutral ground in Politics, and is devoted to continental literature.
The WESTMINSTER is but little known in this country. It may be considered as the advocate of the Radicals, and the mouth piece of Benthamism. It represents the principles of a party already numerous in England, and fast increasing in the United States.
The numbers will be put to press immediately after they shall be received from Europe,
and will contain the entire matter of the above
works; making four annual volumes of upwards
of six hundred pages.
They will be executed in as good style, and be printed in a shape but little differing from that of the European editions.
The price will be 98 per annum, payable three months after the delivery of the first number. The English copies cannot be had for less than $30. Of the three at present republished, two of them alone cost $10.
Any individual procuring four subscribers,
and remitting $30 on the receipt of the first Number, will be allowed an additional copy.
Subscriber papers to be returned, and
all communications to be addressed post paid,
to Theodore Foster, Albany, N. Y.

NOTICE.
THE Commissioners of Primary Schools will meet, as usual, on the second day of the October Term of A. A. County Court. It is important that the Commissioners in their annual report to the Legislature, should give a full and satisfactory statement of the condition of the Schools, and of the operation of the Primary School system in this county; and to enable them to do this, it is necessary that the Trustees of the several districts should make full and uniform reports of the condition of their schools. In order that such satisfactory information may be obtained, proper reports are provided, which the trustees, who are not already supplied, may procure on application to the Secretary. The trustees are requested to return these reports to the Secretary, at an early day. After the 1st October, as practicable. Much unnecessary trouble and delay may thus be avoided. If sent by mail the postage must be paid.

OR, CABINET LIBRARY OF DIVINITY:

With an original introductory Essay to each Author.

EDITED BY

THE REV. RICHARD COTTERMOLE, B. D.

AND

THE REV. HENRY STEBBING, M. A.

Other countries are so far from England in Sacred Literature. Her greatest Poets and Philosophers have shared with her Divines, in setting forth and establishing the truths of Revelation; while her Divines have been distinguished alike by the copiousness and the depth of their learning.

The soundness of character thus given to the standard Theology of England has, through a variety of circumstances, been happily prevented from degenerating into the harshness of scholasticism; and thus the whole moral and philosophical character of the nation, as well as the general reader as to the most learned student.

It is in order to complete this collection, the best works of all the most celebrated writers, whose names have been devoted to the elucidation and practical enforcement of the principles of revealed truth, whether in their application to the immortal interests of individuals, or to the order and well being of a country.

Treatises on the Doctrine of Morality, and Exhibitions of Christianity, which have received the permanent stamp of general approbation; select Sermons of the most eminent Divines; the most interesting specimens of Religious Biography; and the choicest examples of Devotional and Sacred Poetry, will succeed each other in the order, which may be judged most conducive to the benefit and gratification of the reader.

To the productions of each author, or to each separate production, as the case may seem to require, will be prefixed an introductory Essay, pointing out their characteristic excellencies; and, in some instances, comprising a biographical sketch of the Author, with remarks on the state of religion in his times.

It is the desire of the Proprietors, in undertaking this Collection, to publish at such a price, that he who purchases at present the cheapest of ephemeral publications, may, by the same money, possess himself of works which cannot fail to afford him guidance and support in the highest exercises of his faculties, and under every vicissitude of life.

The work will be handsomely printed in Folsio 8vo. on good paper, cloth-bound, neatly bound in Morocco Cloth, lettered, and published in Volumes of about 400 pages each, on the first day of every month. Price, Three Shillings and Sixpence.

Containing the cheapest series of works ever offered to the public.

The following names of Authors whose works are intended for publication, is submitted in evidence of the impartiality of the selection.

Jeremy Taylor, Bates, Boyle, Baxter, Owen, Calverton, Thomas A. Kempis, Burnet, Howe, Butler, Wilson, Bunyan, Fennel, Doddridge, South, Bull, Hammond, Barrow, Filthorn, Sherlock, Jortin, Farinon, Horsley, Hale, Stillingfleet, Porteus, Locke, Leighton, Cave, Chillingworth, Hall, Jewel, Jackson, Flavel, Charnock, Wesley, Skelton, Watts, Lowth, Romaine, Waterland, Whitehead, Balguy, Parson, Ken, Newton, Stanhope, Whitby, Hammond, Burkitt, Herbert, Doune, Merrick, &c. &c.

Vol. I. (to be published on the 1st of January) will contain

THE LIBERTY OF PROPHECYING, by Jeremy Taylor—with an Introductory Essay, by the Rev. Richard Cottermole, B. D.

Vol. II. (to be published on the 1st of February) will contain

MR. & MRS. HAMILTON'S BOARDING SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES.

THIS Institution is situated in the most healthy and pleasant part of the city, corner of Saratoga and Courtland sts. Baltimore.

After having conducted an extensive Boarding School for young ladies, for several years in North Carolina, and Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton removed to this city in 1831, and opened a Seminary for young ladies, upon a scientific plan, which has received an almost unprecedented patronage.

Mr. & Mrs. H. have liberally provided the school with every apparatus necessary to illustrate their instruction. Their philosophical apparatus is equal to any other that can be found in private Seminaries in this country, and their chemical is sufficiently extensive to illustrate any subject treated upon in the books of the school. Their Cabinet of minerals though small yet contains upwards of 700 specimens. Their Seminary is also furnished with an Armillary Sphere, Cary's, Williams and Gardiner's Globes, several Pianos and a Harp. Mr. & Mrs. H. beg leave to remark, that the instruments they possess, are the best they could procure in this country or in England.

The Library contains upwards of 1200 volumes of the best authors, as connected with the studies pursued in the school, to which the young ladies have general access.

In all the departments the most competent teachers have been engaged, whose instructions are given under the immediate eye of the principals.

The course of instruction in this institution, is carried on in a regular and continued system of academic studies embracing all the scientific and ornamental branches necessary to a complete course of female education.

Parents and guardians who wish for more particular information, can obtain a prospectus of the seminary by applying to the rectors, Baltimore Aug. 21.
