

DR. NORMAN C. CRAWFORD, JR. NAMED PRESIDENT OF SALISBURY STATE COLLEGE

Dr. Norman C. Crawford, Jr., President

Fifth President For Salisbury State

On July 1, 1970, Dr. Norman C. Crawford, Jr. became the fifth president of Salisbury State College, succeeding Dr. Walter D. Smith who resigned last year to assume the presidency of Francis Marion College in Florence, South Carolina.

Dr. Crawford a native of Newark, New Jersey, majored in General Science Education at Rutgers where he participated in several varsity sports, was president of his fraternity and co-captain of the track team. After four years in the Navy as Navigator/Communications officer of a destroyer and serving on the faculty of the Officer Candidate School in Newport, Rhode Island, Dr. Crawford returned to Rutgers as Assistant Registrar of the evening adult division. He later served as Director of Financial Aid and earned his Master's degree in Guidance and Personnel. From 1957 to 1962 he was Scholarship Director of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation in Evanston, Illinois and worked toward his Ph. D. in Higher Education Administration at Northwestern University. His research proving that financial need prevented many talented students from going on to college was instrumental in the development of new federal programs to provide financial assistance to college students, and he subsequently joined the U. S. Office of Education staff. In November of 1962 Dr. Crawford left Washington to become Assistant to the Provost and Director of Summer Sessions at the University of Delaware. After one year away from the University to serve as Acting Director of Examinations for the College Entrance Examination Board in New York City, Dr. Crawford returned to Delaware as Special Lecturer in Education and taught graduate courses in Guidance and Educational Measurements for two years. Last year he was Assistant Dean of the College of Arts and Science and devoted most of his time to academic counseling and working with student groups.

Still an ardent sport enthusiast, Dr. Crawford claims he attended every football, basketball, and baseball game at Delaware last year. For recreation he golfs and bowls (he once had a 289 game and 735 3-game series), and says he might be talked into playing softball and volleyball again.

President Crawford's Open Letter To S.S.C. Students

Dear Students:

To those of you returning to the campus, welcome back. To those, like myself, here for the first time, welcome.

One of my first impressions of Salisbury State College when I visited here late last spring was the apparent warm respect which existed between faculty, administrators and students in the College. Faculty with whom I talked really seemed to care about students and the few students I met seemed to feel that the College cared about them as individuals. While this condition would appear to be an important, and even essential, characteristic for any college, it is extremely rare in higher education today. To my mind, this personalized relationship between students, faculty and administration on the Salisbury campus is our unique strength; one which must be preserved jealously as the College grows. How do we accomplish this?

First, we must try to expand our student body and faculty by the addition of individuals who will value this personalized relationship. With prospective students we must try to represent honestly our College's strengths and weaknesses so that those who choose to enroll here will do so with realistic expectations. No institution of higher education is without its inadequacies and none can be all things to all people. As we add faculty and administrators to serve enlarged student enrollment we must make every effort to attract competent educators who consider it a privilege to work with young people. We will not encourage those who appear overly impressed by their own importance.

Finally, we must all acknowledge that the true worth of an individual is not measured by his formal education alone. Integrity, humility, loyalty, and concern for others are human values without which the developed intellect is of little social consequence. If we, in our dealings with each other on campus this year, continue to communicate our respect for these personal qualities, we

FROM THE EDITORS

As associate editor, I would like to take this opportunity to extend a very warm welcome to all of the "newcomers" who will find themselves on S.S.C. grounds this fall. First, a "hello" to the college's new administrators and faculty members, and a wish that they may not only find this campus an enjoyable and worthwhile place to work, but also find an interested student body who will be willing to offer advice, comments and support.

Also, I would like to welcome our new members of the student body, and hope that the new freshman class and transfer students will lend their new ideas and opinions to both the classes and the activities for the benefit of all. But the most important thing for you to remember is that this college will be for you whatever you make it to be.

T.K.

Consider the average reader of the average newspaper. Then consider the reader of a college newspaper. The great difference between these two is the same contrast that should be seen between the newspapers. The college student has a demanding and challenging mind and expect a student editorial staff to be just as demanding and to feed his challenging mind with the highest quality articles that it can possibly produce. This is by no means an unreasonable expectation. If in this next year the HOLLY LEAF can offer the students such a service; if the HOLLY LEAF can urge a small minority to consider an idea in a different manner, than what they usually would do, it will have been a successful project to write the newspaper.

A summer newspaper (this edition was written in August) is identical and representative of a summer college. It barely exists because there are no students. This is the explanation for the administration and faculty edition of the HOLLY LEAF. However, it is another college year and students are on the campus again, and as editor, I dedicate each forthcoming issue to the students, of S.S.C.

NCATE Accreditation For Salisbury State

It was announced recently that the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) has granted full accreditation for Salisbury State College. NCATE has the exclusive responsibility to set forth the standards for national accreditation of college and university programs for the preparation of teachers at the elementary and secondary levels. NCATE accreditation validates the quality of preparation programs for preparing teachers and signifies that persons recommended by these institutions can be expected to perform satisfactorily in typical teaching positions throughout the United States.

Colleges and Universities, to be eligible for NCATE evaluation must offer programs for the preparation of teachers, be accredited by the appropriate regional association and be approved by the appropriate state department of education at the levels and in the categories for which NCATE Accreditation is sought.

In the notification by NCATE, Mr. Rolf W. Larson, Director, pointed out that during the course of evaluation, first by a visiting team, second by a panel of evaluators and finally by the Council itself, Salisbury State College had evidenced steady progress in strengthening its teacher education program and he expressed the pleasure of the Council in the evidence of growth and vitality of Salisbury State College which were evident in the recent study. Salisbury State College will be evaluated again by the NCATE Council during the 1974-75 academic year.

Community Support Saves Salisbury State

On June 5, 1970, Robert Heller Associates, Inc., Management Consultants, Cleveland, Ohio, submitted a report and their recommendations to the Maryland Council for Higher Education concerning Maryland's system. Included in this report was a recommendation that Salisbury State College be phased out as a 4-year institution of higher learning and that a Community College replace it to serve the lower Eastern shore.

Prior to the release of this "Heller Report" to the Maryland Council for Higher Education the Greater Salisbury Committee had secured in May a copy of the report. Under the direction of Mr. C. Daniel Byrd, President Petroleum Division Dresser Industries, the Greater Salisbury Committee prepared rebuttal information to the Heller Report, and on June 5 when the report was presented to the Council for Higher Education, Mr. Byrd presented the rebuttal to the Council. As a result of this rebuttal by the Greater Salisbury Committee the Maryland Council for Higher Education appointed an Ad Hoc Committee to examine the recommendations concerning Salisbury State College. Subsequently organizations and individuals of Salisbury, Wicomico County and the Eastern Shore submitted objections to the Heller Report concerning the proposal to phase out Salisbury State to the Governor, Legislature and the Council for Higher Education.

As a result on July 23, Mr. William Chaffinch, Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee to study the Heller Report as it pertained to Salisbury State College, announced that his committee had decided to set aside the recommendations that Salisbury State be closed and a 2-year Community College opened in its place.

The individuals who spearheaded the attack to counter the Heller Report and ultimately scuttle the Heller recommendations were:

Mr. C. Daniel Byrd; Mr. Robert Cook, Executive Director Greater Salisbury Committee; Mr. Avery W. Hall, Chairman

Board of Visitors, Salisbury State College; Senator Mary L. Nock; Mr. E. Dale Adkins, Salisbury Attorney and Member of Greater Salisbury Committee; and Mr. Frank Morris, Governors Commission for Higher Education.

The Salisbury newspapers served as registrars of complaints as did the WBOC Radio Station which prepared editorials daily in opposition to the recommendations of the Heller Report.

Both Dr. Smith, before he left, and Dr. Crawford, the moment he arrived, gave every assistance in supplying information to the citizen/groups preparing rebuttal to the Heller Report and both Presidents attended the many meetings held in Baltimore concerning this matter.
