Ruggers Jolt Juniata

By Kevin Brooks

Not rain, nor sweat, nor mud could stop the Frostburg Rugby Club last Saturday against an out - talented Juniata squad. From, the first kick of the game, Frostburg took complete control to crush Juniata 38-3. The first try of the game came when half of the scrum and Mark "Animal" Miller scooped from 2 yards out. Soon after, Sean Western "slushed for 10 quick yards for the goal and Walt Winn put up the points after for an amazingly fast 10-0 score, within 15 minutes of play. Tom Shumway had his turn to score, when he scooped up a loose ball sprinted in for the try. Walt Winn made the boot after for a strong 16-0 lead. The Club didn't let up there, for soon after, Gene Pollard dove over from a yard out, after the team swiftly brought the ball down the hill. Jeff Kabel had a good day as he had two attempts with a great deal of extra effort. Tom Blasa also added a try on this field day as he bulled his way over the goal line. To put the icing on the (his birthday) cake. Bill Sexton applied the final try of this blow-out. With a few minutes remaining Juniata scored a penalty kick to make the final 38-3.

Frostburg State College: "Teacher's College" or "Business School"?

By: Leslie Noble

In the past, Frostburg State College has always been labeled as a "teacher's college", but with the present increase in business administration majors and the decrease in teacher education majors, such a label may no longer be considered valid. Due to the present state of the job market and the starting salary levels offered for these jobs, there has been a general trend away from entering education occupations and toward entering business fields.

General statistics from the 1977 and 1978 Fact Books (compiled by Tom Edwards) reflect a drastic change over the past 15 years and even more recently, within the past 5 years. For example, in 1965, 86.9% of the students enrolled at Frostburg were majoring in teacher education and 13.1% were majoring in Arts and Sciences. These statistics reversed in 1977 when 66.1% of the students majored in Arts and Sciences and 33.9% of the students majored in education. More recently, over the past 5 years, from 1973 to 1978 there has been a 40% decrease in education majors while the number of economics and business majors has increased by 1,268%. According to the current statistics, there are 363 students majoring in education (this includes Elementary, Early Childhood, Art, and Music) and 561 students majoring in business (this includes Economics, Business Administration, and Certificate Programs). In comparison to national figures, the increase in business majors is much more rapid at Frostburg, while the decrease in education majors is proportional to the rest of the country.

In view of the present economic situation, the reasons for these sharp changes are quite obvious. Many people are already aware of the fact that the present job market is unfavorable for educational positions. In the latest job-placement survey, out of 123 respondents (Frostburg graduates from 1977-1978), 85 persons were employed full time. However, of this 85, 35 persons were employed in non-educational positions. Judging from these statistics and other facts, it appears that there are still a small number of teaching positions open. The only real change has occurred in secondary education. There are a large supply of positions for those specializing in English, Math, and Science. In contrast to these statistics, job prospects for business majors are quite favorable. According to a survey conducted on last year's Frostburg graduates, out of 33 respondents, only 2 were unemployed in business administration. Similarly, in the area of Accounting, out of 30 respondents, only 2 were unemployed. Aside from the differences in the number of jobs available, there are also major deviations in salary levels. According to the same survey, 50 people received a yearly salary of $9-11 thousand in the field of education, while 45 people earned below $7 thousand and only one person earned more than $13 thousand. In sharp contrast with these statistics, 8 persons earned $9-11 thousand in business; 8 more earned over $13 thousand, while only 2 earned below $7 thousand. Similarly, in Accounting, 9 people earned $9-11 thousand a year, 6 people earned above $13 thousand and only 1 earned a salary below $7 thousand.

Naturally, the increase in business majors has had a drastic effect on the department itself. Due to the rapid increase of business students, the department has experienced a shortage of staff members. The department requested new positions but was turned down. Consequently, they are solving the problem with a number of substitute methods. First, they are issuing contractual positions. These positions may be held for one year only, involve no fringe benefits and are not long term, although they may be renewed. In addition, the college has hired a number of part-time people from neighboring towns. These positions are currently held by accountants, lawyers, real estate agents, insurance salesmen and other people working in the business field. As a third substitute measure, the full-time professors are teaching average loads of five classes instead of the usual four classes. According to Dr. Parks, head of the Business Department, this deficiency in staff members has resulted in a poor student-faculty ratio. He claims that eight more full-time positions are needed for the college to return to a normal size staff. Unlike the Business department, the Education department has experienced very few changes in staff. As a matter of fact, they have reallocated one position to another department. Over the past couple of years, only one or two part-time positions have been added to help with student teaching supervision.

This past and current rise in business majors and decrease in education majors may continue as long as the job situation remains the same. For the present, it appears like there will be little change until the teaching field opens up. Tom Edwards, author of the Fact Book (from which most of these statistics were obtained) predicts that the business field will continue to grow. He believes that the private sector of hiring is increasing sharply, while government hiring is tapering off. In regards to teaching prospects, education has already experienced a dramatized movement in the field and is beginning to stabilize. When it does, it will be at a plateau where there are still slightly more applicants than jobs available.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

One thing has greatly disturbed me this spring semester as I have returned to campus is the ongoing State-To-Date abusive attacks on the Student Government Association. The reason this especially disturbs me is that I feel for a rare occurrence that the anonymous abuse is unjustified. As a member of the past three Student Government Association executive administrations and as an observer of the previous two, I feel this administration is by far, better serving the student body in many areas.

The Calendar Committee was effective in reform as was the Food Service Committee (ARA did not place a bid for next year and the prospects for the new company look good) and several other public service related activities. The Sounding Board has put out two white papers to inform the students of campus problems and situations such as maintenance and housing.

Never before has the student government been more active in countless areas of major and minor concerns since I've been here. As a member or "insider" I feel very qualified to say so, humbly as possible. This article is not meant to be a pat on the back, but rather a plea for a change of campus attitudes.

Why must we, led by our paper, be so critical of each other? Why can't the paper work with the student government to promote a positive attitude of the good things that are happening on campus?

Why is it that a student on the paper's photography staff must always unconstructively

The Struggle For The Liberal Arts

When I resigned as advisor to State-To-Date a couple of years ago, I quit because I found our college newspaper's policy of running ads for plagiarized term papers so reprehensible and disgusting that I could not tolerate or professionally ally myself any longer with its staff. Presently, State-To-Date looks far more professional itself, though I'm sure that, like any respectable campus publication, it requires much oft-times thankless work from just a handful of students dedicated to the task. Nevertheless, when I did resign (after my denunciation of the plagiarism ads went unheeded) I did so autocratically and immediately because I did not deem the issue worthy of democratic discussion.

Now, once again, over a matter of our campus publications, I find myself facing the exit door. I do not leave joyfully but embittered and this time it is criticize the actions of the Student Government Association in a nebulous column?

"IF" he has anything constructive to say, let him speak. However a scoffer is a worthless cynic that does more harm than good in any case.

"IF" he had any guts he would bear the responsibility of placing his name on his work.

"IF" he is lacking the guts to place his name on his attacks he obviously cannot defend or justify his atrocities.

Let's can the negative attitude and work to better inform the general public of the students' problems as they arise, not tear down verbally an organization trying to better student life.

Dear Mr. "IF",

"IF" you and other students would come to the Food Service Committee Meetings, you could find out "what you are eating" and we could make changes in the menu that is served. Unvoiced Complaints get about as much done as your column.

Sincerely yours,

P.S. "Mr. IF" --We know that you were at the last S.G.A. meeting, so you should know when the committee meets.

Attention To All Students Interested In Taking Psychology Courses

If you want to take any junior or senior level psychology courses, this information is important to you. All majors and minors, and anyone taking junior or senior-level psychology courses (with a very few exceptions) must first complete Research Methods I (Psychology 201). In order to take Research Methods I, you must first pass the Research Methods I Placement Test or take Math 105 or it's equivalent as determined by the Head of the Mathematics Department. Math 105 or it's equivalent must be passed with a grade of "C" or better. You can take the Placement Test only once each semester. If you elect to take the test and fail, you will be required to complete a remedial program in mathematics under the direction of the Head of the Mathematics Department before being permitted to take the test again. The program he selects will depend on how badly you fail the test. The program he selects could include you taking an entire semester course in mathematics. Therefore, you should prepare yourself and pass the test. Merely taking it in hopes of passing it could result in slowing your progress by a whole semester unless you intended to take Math 105 or it's equivalent in the first place. The date for the Spring semester's Placement Test is Thursday, April 26 at 4:00 p.m. in room 102 of Garret Hall. Make-up testing will be allowed only for the most extreme reasons and these must be verified officially. Since the make-up is scheduled for the day before registration, it is in your best interest to take the regular exam on schedule even if it means a serious inconvenience to you. If you take the make-up and fail it, you will be automatically withdrawn from Research Methods I and will not be allowed a retest until the following semester. The make-up is scheduled for June 14, 4:00 for summer transfer students and for August 27, 4:00 p.m. for transfer students and for students with officially verified excuses. All make-up exams will be held in Garret Hall 102. To help you prepare for the test, you should review mathematics from basic arithmetic through high school algebra, including elementary concepts of geometry (e.g., determination of area, circumference, volume, etc.)

As a check on your preparation for the Placement Test, we will have a practice test which will cover materials similar to the actual test. Anyone can take the practice test. Feedback concerning how much review you need will be provided immediately after the practice test is completed. The practice test is scheduled for Thursday, March 29 at 4:00 p.m. in Garret Hall 102. No make-ups will be allowed for the practice test. If you have any questions, contact Dr. A.M. Crall, Garret Hall 110, phone 689-4194.

Prince George's County Board of Education will be on campus to administer testing to students interested in teaching in Prince George's County. This test must be taken before an interview can be scheduled. Tests will be given Thursday, April 5 at 7:00 pm in Tawes Hall room 229 and on Friday, April 6 at 9:00 am in the Library room 210. Please sign up for tests in the Career Planning and Placement Office.

What Type Are You?

There are three types of people in the universe. The first type are persons who are interested in experiencing life more fully. The second type would like to experience life more fully but are afraid and unsure of how to proceed. The third type of persons are those who do not want to change or experience anything new. If you belong to this third group, read no further since this announcement will not interest you. For the others of you, the Counseling Center is happy to announce that it is sponsoring an Encounter Group on March 30, 31 and April 1 at Camp Living Waters in Pennsylvania. The cost of the weekend is only $20.00. All you need to bring is a sleeping bag or linens. We supply a warm place to sleep and plenty of home-cooked food.

We leave from the Counseling Center at 7:00 pm on Friday, March 30, and return by 5:00 pm on Sunday, April 1.

The focus of the weekend will be to create an atmosphere of openness, trust and honesty, where participants can interact, share and grow. The weekend has been planned to provide many enjoyable experiences which facilitate personal development and create lasting friendships.

For more information, come in and talk to either Spencer Deakin, Pat Deasy, Mary Aleta Williams, or Terry Norris at the Counseling Center or give us a call at ext. 4234 for an appointment. Space limitations and time make it necessary to limit the number of participants so get in touch now if you are planning to attend. A minimum of 15 individuals must be committed to attending the weekend group by March 16 or we will be forced to cancel.

way for two hours outside the BAC meeting room waiting for our "case" to be "tried." I felt more like a criminal or a thief out to hustle BAC's money once we got inside their meeting room.

Over a dozen students were assembled to make us justify (for the N-th time) the validity of our magazine, which they apparently considered corrupted by faculty submissions. They accused us of not having raised some of our own money for the publication by throwing a dance or giving a bake sale or holding a blowout or some such fund-raising activity. More than thirty minutes later they postponed our request for allocations until we could resubmit a budget and (what in the next two weeks?) come back with a lowered budget and some matching funds of our own.

the Student Association's Budget Allocation Committee, rather than the student staff of the publication, whose actions and niggardly attitudes I find reprehensible and disgusting.

Arts and Letters has been published for only three semesters on this campus, yet I believe anyone with a modicum of aesthetic taste would readily agree that, overall, Arts and Letters is the best literary magazine Frostburg State has produced in its history. True, we've had special assistance in creating this by generous faculty and student submissions which, mutually supportive, helped to achieve a product that could rival any literary magazine published in this state.

However, in seeking appropriations for its fourth issue this spring, I and other dedicated Arts and Letters staff members found ourselves sitting on the floor in the Lane Center hall-

Dear Uncle Frosty

Dear Uncle Frosty

Uncle Frosty will answer any career related questions from the college community. Not all questions can be printed due to space limitations and good taste. Uncle Frosty will send a personal response to readers whose letters are not answered publicly. Send your queries to Uncle Frosty, c/o Counseling Service, Gunter Hall, 113.

Dear Uncle Frosty,

I am so average that it hurts. My college record is ordinary and undistinguished. I also score in the middle on standardized tests. How will I be able to stand out from being so mediocre?

Mr. All-College Average

Dear ACA:

Stop judging your self-worth through external criteria such as grades or test scores. You are unique. You don't have to always compare yourself with test freaks or grade hogs.

It is frequently difficult to know your skills. It's often easier to recognize the skills you don't possess. Look at the activities you do well to discover your skills. For example, chess requires analytical problem solving, and working with children requires interpersonal abilities.

The Frostburg State College counseling staff can assist you in your own skill assessment. Why not talk with one of them? Nobody is average in everything! You don't have to feel like one brick in a large brick wall.

With the Voyager I snapshots of Jupiter being featured prominently in the media, you might want to spot the giant planet yourself in the evening sky. From 8 to 10 p.m., look high in the south for a brilliant starlike object that doesn't twinkle. Above and to the right are two bright stars that seem to point towards Jupiter. Despite its distance of 433 million miles, Jupiter shines brightly because of its great size and milky white clouds that cover its disk.

"If Black Holes - Why Not White Holes," a planetarium program exploring Einstein's Theory of Relativity, will be shown this Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., the eve of Einstein's 100th birthday. The Frostburg State College Planetarium welcomes the general public to each of its showings, which are free of charge.

The Week of March 19 - 25.

This Wed., March 21, is the first day of spring or vernal equinox. The first moment of spring occurs at 12:22 a.m. when the sun shines straight down on the equator crossing the island of Sumatra in the Indian Ocean. The sun shines straight down on the equator only twice a year - on the first day of spring and on the first day of fall. On those dates, the sun rises due east and sets due west, splitting our day into 12 hours of light and 12 hours of darkness.

Due to the spring break, the Frostburg State College Planetarium is closed this week.

New Library Smoking Policy

The Library has announced a new policy: No Smoking on Floor 4. This decision is in response to fifteen comments in the Suggestion Book against smoking in the Library. Only one statement supported smoking in the Library.

Signs have been placed on the entrance doors to Floor 4 and on each study carrel. All ash trays and sand urns have been removed from Floor 4. The housekeepers have been asked to remove any ash trays which reappear on Floor 4.

This solution will provide a non-smokers' floor for those who have indicated that they want a no-smoking area. The rule will apply to the Reserve Room, Special Collections Room, Super Quiet Spot, book-stacks and lounge area on Floor 4. Smoking will be permitted on Floor 5 and in the lounge areas of Floor 2 only. The success of this policy will depend upon the full cooperation of all students who use the Library. Please advise the reference librarian on duty whenever violations of this policy occur.

Finally, near the close of Feb., I found myself again seated in the hallway of the Lane Center waiting another hour and feeling like Giorano Bruno in a prolonged trial at the merciless hands of the god-damned Inquisition. At last admitted, the Arts and Letters staff now faced just a hard-core half-dozen or so students who all but accused us of trying to grab-off "easy money," and who took a new assault in disparaging our lack of inventiveness for not compromising the aesthetic quality of our publication by running pizza-parlour ads or maybe even some Price Beer Distributor ads in our magazine (What, next to Miriam Bloom's beautiful art reproductions and her discussion of serenity and Japanese pottery?). Because of our failure to provide matching funds or to compromise our publication to the dense and tasteless ignorance of our BAC "judges," Arts and Letters was again and finally denied funding.

Now that I've sat in the Lane Center hallway for enough hours -- while on two occasions members of The Rotary Club gingerly wove their way to meetings through the huddled masses at the feet of BAC's doorway -- I have a better understanding of the criticism "student-as-nigger." But no professor or student should be obliged to play the "nigger" role, not even for an outstanding literary publication at Frostburg State College. Therefore, unless the S.A. will freely and generously provide sufficient automatic funding for a high-quality literary magazine, which can stimulate this college's aesthetic and intellectual life by mutually-supportive creative exchanges between faculty and students, then Arts and Letters will surely fail in its struggle for high quality and I will surely resign from working freely with a campus publication (once again). As advisor to the literary magazine at The University of Rhode Island I was never asked to go begging for funds semester after semester: the student association cared enough for the college image and the quality of its liberal education so that automatic funding was generously provided. U.R.I., then, was no larger than F.S.C. now. Why should we settle for a second-rate image here?

The liberal arts, if they are to survive here in fact and not in name only, require for their real nourishment and life a freedom and generosity of spirit, a sensitive and liberal awareness of aesthetic value, and a relish for intellectual and artistic pursuits for their own sake, as opposed to a mere career-orientated or major job-finding effort. The liberal arts, if they are to thrive here and we are not to become just Western Maryland's Voc-Tech, require, in short, a vision which rises above the mire of die-hard budget considerations like a pure lotus flower blooming in a muddy place, and such vision I find wholly lacking not only in the members of the BAC but in the very direction of this college generally. Without such liberal attitudes and free spirit, those who strive to bring the best quality education to Frostburg, not in name only but in fact, are sentenced to bitterness and defeat.

Greek News:

SORORITY JOINT RUSH

The Joint Rush Committee made up of Theta Delta Pi, Lambda Phi Delta, and Alpha Xi Delta, has decided to dissolve. Each sorority will now establish its own method of rushing and obtaining pledge classes. We feel that this decision will better our relationship with other Greeks and the college community. Each sorority has something unique that distinguished it from the other sororities. We hope that this decision will prove beneficial to all those involved and wish lots of luck to all Greeks and their organizations.

THETA DELTA PI

Along with all of the Greeks, we would like to introduce our Spring 1979 Pledge Class - the Lemon Ups. They are Kim Bell, Maria Bruzzese, Brenda Daugherty, Denice Drenik, and Joyce McVicker. Although they have only been pledging for 4 weeks, they have learned so much and are really going strong. Aside from being dressed as Super Theta's, they have worked on a community project collecting for the Heart Fund. We are really proud of these 5 girls and are looking forward to them being our sisters in Theta Delta Pi.

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS INTERESTED IN JOINING THE FAMILY PLANNING PROGRAM ON CAMPUS:

Monday, March 5th and 12th are the last chances for you to enroll in the Family Planning Program before it ends for this year. Please stop by the Brady Health Center at 6,7 or 8:00 p.m. After this time to join a Family Planning Program and to ultimately receive services on campus, you will have to go through the process of contacting your local County Public Health Department Family Planning Program.
